John D. Rockefeller has released his general education board from any obligation to hold any of his gifts of money in perpetuity. Now the board has the right not only to distribute the income but the principal. John D. has given to the board $126,788,094 of which the entire income has been distributed, and $42,132,442 of the principal. Capital funds held by the board at the end of the fiscal year were $84,655, 52. "Lest we forget" there is money in oil.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., says money has value only as it is converted into useful service. This may be true but why should six or a dozen men control the vast fortunes of the world and give their own definition of what constitutes "useful service." Regardless of this J. D. R. is on the right road. "Millions for education and scientific research" is the slogan of the father and the son appears to be walking in the beaten path.

Production of petroleum in the United States in 1921, as indicated by reports from producing companies to the United States geological survey, amounted to 469,639,000 barrels. This total may be increased somewhat, the survey said today, by reports on the quantity consumed on the leases for fuel. Stocks of crude oil increased 60,599,000 barrels in the year, the report said. California and Oklahoma produced a record output of approximately 114 million barrels each last year, and Texas more than 100 million barrels. Texas took first rank among producing states in December, 1921, largely as a result of developments at Mexia. Petroleum continues the greatest of all the games and Titans are playing it.

New York is the financial city of the world. According to a census taken by the Industrial Bureau, with the help of the American Legion, there are more than 200,000 unemployed in that city of whom about 75,000 are former soldiers. Now a committee of prominent citizens will ask the government and state of New York to provide jobs for the unemployed. Henry Ford has promised to employ all the idle men of the land if the Government will accept his Muscle Shoals proposal. Of course he may fall down on his proposition but Henry has the money and money is said to make the world go round.

Estimates that the oil fields of the United States will be exhausted in twenty years does not mean that the country's petroleum resources will end in that period, says the National Bank of Commerce of New York City in its current magazine. If an annual rate of production of 450,000 barrels, a figure nearly reached in 1920 and probably exceeded last year, were to be maintained in the United States until the wells were exhausted, the known supply would run out in about twenty years, Commerce Monthly says. These fields, however, are likely to show long periods of declining production before they are completely exhausted. It is impossible to estimate when the United States will have used up its petroleum resources, but a period of constantly decreasing production, with occasional increases as new wells are opened up and new methods of recovery are in-

INVESTIGATIONS TO BE CUT DOWN SAYS ATTORNEY GENERAL

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—Federal investigations are going to be cut down, Attorney General Daugherty said today. "The country cannot live on investigations," he said.

Asserting that many investigations were started through spite work or because of competition and by individuals desirous of using the government, he declared all requests for investigations for any personal ends would be denied.

VARIANCE OF WHEAT GRADES CAUSE PROTEST

Local Grain Men Suggest Conference Government Inspectors to Secure Uniformity of Grading.

Unless Corrected, Situation Confronting Dealers Certain to Also Affect Grain Raisers Next Year.

Protesting against disagreement between various government agencies for the grading of grain, which has resulted in practical chaos in the grain trade of the Southwest this season through a dealer's not knowing when a car leaves for a port or terminal what it will be graded there, and which they declare will next season undoubtedly adversely affect the wheat raiser unless corrective steps are made, local grain men plan a trip to Washington to lay the situation before Secretary of Agriculture Wallace for corrective action.

This corrective action will consist in the early meeting at a central point in the Southwest, probably Fort Worth of all the government graders in the Southwest and ir other sections of the country in order that their grading can again become uniform.

Grading Machinery.

The machinery for establishing a government grade, originally instituted several years as a protection for farmers, dealers and foreign buyers, worked uniformly until recently, according to J. C. Mytinger who was asked to outline the situation complained of. Recently, however, a divergence of grading became apparent at the port of Galveston, and rapidly spread throughout the Southwest, until no two grades were alike now in many cases.

In the case of wheat, which is complained of, it is first graded by a government inspector and grader at each important market point—for instance there is one at Wichita Falls. In case a car of grain is shipped to Galveston for export, it is graded by another inspector there. In case the two disagree, or the shipper is not satisfied with either grade, he can appeal the case to a district supervisor. In case he is still not satisfied he can take an appeal to the board of review, situated in Chicago, and which is the court of last resort.

On appeals taken from grain shipments from Wichita Falls alone, there are instances where each of these four agencies have placed a different grade on a shipment of wheat; frequently three grades were made by different agencies. Another instance of the divergence was cited in a car of wheat which was bought at Kansas City and which was graded by both inspector and district supervisor at that point as No. 2. The same car

PRESIDENT HAS OBJECTION TO DEBT MEASURE

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—Objection by the administration to the allied debt refunding bill as amended by the senate was encountered by the house ways and means committee when it took up the measure in executive session.

Chairman Fordney said action would be deferred until he could confer with President Harding, probably tomorrow.

Secretary Mellon said he would rather have had a bill without the 25-year maturity and 4 1-2 per cent minimum interest rate limitation but it would be feasible to go ahead with refunding negotiations and if these limitations proved insurmountable in some cases additional authority could then be asked of congress.

It was understood that the president objected to these limitations as written in the senate following agreement on them by the republican majority. It was said that the committee's attention had been called to the fact that in the case of some of the debtor nations, particularly smaller and newly formed ones, it might be necessary to defer maturity for 50 years, instead of 25 years and that where the loans were to extend over such a long period it might be desirable to fix the interest rate as low as 4 per cent.

DECREASE OF HALF MILLION IN PUBLIC DEBT LAST MONTH

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—The public debt decreased approximately half a billion dollars in January, according to figures announced today by the treasury, which showed the public debt on January 31 to be $23,389,544,236 as compared with $23,438,984,351 on December 31.

Decreases in both expenditures and receipts of the government during January as compared with December were reported by the treasury.

During January the total ordinary expenditures aggregated $231,000,000 as compared with $330,000,000 during December, while ordinary receipts for the month aggregated $191,000,000 as against $740,000,000 in December, when about $324,000,000 of income and profits taxes were collected.

SENATE HEARS ECHO OF FIGHT ON NEWBERRY

Senators Reed and Spencer, Both of Missouri, Indulge in Heated Debate on Issues of Case.

Reed Expresses Willingness to Reply to Anyone Wishing to Hold "Post Mortem Examination."

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—The issues involved in the Newberry case were echoed in the senate today as the two Missouri senators, Mr. Spencer, republican leader in the fight which declared Senator Newberry entitled to his seat and Mr. Reed, who bitterly attacked the Michigan senator, met in debate.

Senator Spencer, speaking in reply to his colleague's recent address declared with reference to that speech that "villification is not evidence and vituperation cannot be substituted for facts in the senate of the United States." He accused his colleague of "glaring misstatement of facts whenever he left for the moment the realm of vituperation fancy" and in support of the vote to declare Mr. Newberry seated over the protest of his democratic opponent, Henry Ford, quoted a letter written by the late Theodore Roosevelt, in October, 1918, as saying the Detroit manufacturer "would be signally out of place in the American senate so long as that body is dominated by men who zealously believe in the American ideal and faithful endeavor of service to the American people."

Senator Reed briefly replied, explaining that he was preparing to leave the capital on business but on his return would reply to anyone who wished to hold what he described as "a post mortem examination."

Mr. Reed said that in the controversy he intended to keep close to the written confession by the majority "republican party" in the resolution which the senate adopted declaring Senator Newberry entitled to the seat but condemning excessive campaign expenditures.

FORD'S OFFER TURNED OVER TO COMMITTEE

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—Prompt action marked the reception by congress today of the Ford proposal for lease and purchase of the Muscle Shoals, Alabama, nitrate and water power projects as referred to the house by Secretary Weeks for its decision and afterwards for consideration by senate.

Speaker Gillett sent the offer immediately upon its receipt to the house military affairs committee while members of the interstate commerce committee indicated they might seek a change of reference to their body.

Chairman Kahn of the military committee contended, however, that the report had properly been referred to hos committee and pointed out that its members already had conducted hearings on the Muscle Shoals question, were entirely familiar with the projects involved, the ground occupied and several personally had inspected the site and works. For that reason, Mr. Kahn said his committee could act quickly and if hearings were held they would not be protracted. With the exception of Secretary Weeks and probably Mr. Ford himself, who might be called to testify, few other witnesses were understood to be under consideration in that connection.

Evidences of equally rapid action by the house itself after the committee's report with reference to recommendations that the proposal be rejected or accepted, is made to the body, were somewhat more dimmed. A keen interest has been manifested by a large number of house members and indications were that they would discuss the question at some length before a final vote could be reached.

POSTPONEMENT OF GENOA CONFERENCE THOUGHT PROBABLE

By Associated Press.

PARIS, Feb. 2.—Postponement of the international economic conference at Genoa is regarded in official circles in Paris this evening as the probable outcome of today's resignation of the Italian cabinet. Officials believed that the time required for the creation of a new ministry certainly would prevent the opening of the conference on March 8, as had been tentatively scheduled.

Many details for convening the meeting, it was pointed out, have not been worked out. One of the most difficult questions connected with preliminary arrangements is that of accommodation for the various delegations.

Lincoln, Self-Styled International Spy, Who Again Is Facing Deportation

Ignatius T. T. Lincoln, self-styled international spy, who kept Department of Justice agents busy during the war, arrested in New York City charged with having entered this country surreptiously, faces deportation as an undesirable alien. He arrived here in November under an assumed name, using a false passport in effecting his departure from an Italian port. Lincoln who boasts of having been a spy for Great Britain and a spy for Germany, was deported from the United States in 1915 and served three years in a British prison. Born in Hungary of Jewish parents Lincoln denounced that faith and has been a Presbyterian clergyman, and Anglican curate and a divinity student in Germany.

M'ADOO DENIES FEDERAL RULE 'RUINED' ROADS

No Great Industry Was Ever More Generously Treated by the Government, Says Former Director.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—The charge of certain railroad executives that the government "ruined" the road executives that the government road is groundless, Wm. G. McAdoo, former secretary of the treasury and war-time director-general of railroads told the senate interstate commerce committee today in concluding his testimony in its inquiry into the transportation situation.

Summarizing his testimony, Mr. Mc Adoo asserted that he had shown that "the appalling transportation crises," at the time federal control was inaugurated "forced, as a vital military and economic necessity, the taking over of the railroads," that "federal control * * * * alone could save the situation and did save it," and that "congestion was broken, railroad lines were co-ordained and operated as an effective national machine and the required amount of transportation to meet military needs * * * * was supplied."

No great industry was "ever more generously treated by the government," said the former director, declaring that during federal control it had assumed all risks of operation, protected bond and stockholders during the war, transformed the properties from "a menace to public safety" in January, 1918, as stated by the interstate commerce commission, into "an efficient machine," had "stabilized" railroad labor and during the period of control had guaranteed the roads an annual rental of $906,000,000 or $175,000,000 more than Chairman Cummins of the committee had said they were entitled to receive. In addition, he said, the carriers were given a basis for rate making which assured them, with a return of normal business conditions, an annual income of $1,134,000,000 or $200,000,000 more than the government rental, and were guaranteed against losses for six months after return of the properties to private control.

DAMAGE ACTION OF OIL FIRM HINGES ON BOUNDARY CASE

By Associated Press.

TOPEKA, Kan., Feb. 2.—A suit for $525,000 damages hinging upon the Red river boundary dispute involving Texas and Oklahoma interests was filed in the United States district court here today by the Burk Divide Oil company, a Delaware corporation against Frank Brown, of Mission Hills, Kansas.

In the petition filed today by the Burk company, it claims to have holdings in the Judsonian placer mining claim in Tillman county, Okla. over which the litigation between the states arose. It is further charged that Brown was a stockholder in a Texas oil company which confiscated the Burk holdings after the company had been driven off by Texas rangers.

The petition also charges that the Texas company disposed of approximately 150,000 barrels of oil between February 2, 1920 and April 4, 1920. The Texas company has since disposed of its holdings, it is said.

CLARA HAMON MOVIE SHOWS TWICE AT BURK

Local Club Women Report Assurance of Local Theater Men That Picture Will Not Be Shown Here.

Definite assurances that local motion picture theaters will not exhibit the motion picture purporting to show the life of Clara Smith Hamon, now showing in this part of Texas, have been obtained from the theater proprietors by club women, according to statements made Thursday. One local theater owner, it is asserted, told club women that he had turned down a handsome bonus offer to show the picture.

The picture showed in Burkburnett Wednesday night and again Thursday night, attracting large crowds, according to reports from that place. The only other place in the county where it has shown in the county is at Newtown according to reports.

The picture was shown recently at Cisco. There, according to the messages received by local club women, the show was billed only a day in advance of showing, too short a time to enable them, they said, to resort to injunction or other means proposed to prevent its showing. The picture showed under their protest, they said.

Action to prevent the showing of the picture here was taken by the public affairs committee of the civic league, which called on public officials and the moving picture proprietors, and which resulted in the assurances reported above, at the request of Mrs. Walter S. Robertson, recently appointed president of the district federation of women's clubs. Mrs. Robertson was informed by Cisco women of the showing there. She has written a letter to every local federation in this district, according to a statement Thursday asking that the club women of the state go on record against the showing of the picture anywhere in Texas. Assurances have been obtained, the letter says, that the picture is detrimental to the morals of the younger people and to the public in general.

NINE CONVICT MINERS KILLED BY EXPLOSION

By Associated Press.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 2.—Nine convicts were killed from a local explosion in the Belle Ellen coal mines in Bibb county late today, according to reports received here by C. H. Nesbitt, state mine inspector.

Mr. Nesbitt said he had only received meagre reports of the accident but that the superintendent of the mines told him the explosion was local, that all the bodies had been recovered and that the mine was clear.

PNEUMONIA TAKES HEAVY TOLL OF LIVES IN NEW YORK CITY

MOTIVE SOUGHT FOR KILLING OF FILM DIRECTOR

William Desmond Taylor, Prominent in Movie World, Found Dead With Bullet Wound in Back.

Police Work on Theory That Taylor Was Shot for Revenge, After Dismissing Robbery Theory.

By Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 2.—Among the latest persons known to have seen William Desmond Taylor, motion picture director alive, was Mabel Normand, film comedienne, it was announced tonight by police detectives who are investigating the finding of Taylor's body with a bullet wound in the breast at his apartment here today.

Miss Normand was questioned by the police, who said she unhesitatingly told of the visit. She had stopped at Mr. Taylor's apartment to return a borrowed book, she said, and talked with him about recent robberies of his home. She said Taylor accompanied her to her automobile when she left and her chauffeur corroborated her statements, according to the police.

By Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 2.—Belief that William Desmond Taylor, motion picture director found dead at his home here this morning, was shot for revenge, was expressed late today by police investigators, after more than a score of Taylor's acquaintances, had been questioned, and attempts made to check up the movements of several others with whom Taylor was said to have had differences.

Most of the early efforts of the investigators were directed to an attempt to locate a former servant of Taylor's against whom the motion picture man had lodged a complaint with police. Taylor declared the man had stolen some of his belongings and forged his name to a check; that he believed a burglary of his apart-

JURY HAS NOT YET AGREED IN ARBUCKLE CASE

By Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 2.—The jury in the second trial of a manslaughter charge against Roscoe C. (Fatty) Arbuckle still was debating for a decision late today, 24 hours after retiring. Court room speculation said the alignment stood 7 to 5 for acquittal and another prevalent guess was 8 to 4 in favor of the defendant. In the absence of any inkling of information from the well guarded jury room these guesses had no more weight than the merest speculation.

Milton T. Cohn, a member of the defense counsel staff, said the defense would insist on a third trial in the event of a disagreement. The district attorney would make no comment.

The jury was heard from but once during the morning and afternoon. This was when it asked for the complete transcript of the trial on the ground that the jurors wished to refresh their memory in certain points. The request was complied with without the appearance of the jury in court. It indicated a long session according to the court officers and counsel familiar with such requests. When the jury was taken to dinner at 6 p. m. there was no indication of a verdict.

At 9:30 o'clock the jury was locked up for the night on account of a slight attack of illness suffered by Juror Lee Dolson. The jury has been out nearly thirty hours. It will return to court at 9 o'clock tomorrow.

GRAND JURY NOT TO MAKE REPORT SOON

"No final report before Monday and perhaps not then," was the message of W. W. Gardner, foreman of the grand jury of the 30th district court Thursday. The grand jury which has been in session since January 2, were at work all day Thursday not stopping until 5:30 p. m.

MEMORIAL ON SITE OF KNICKERBOCKER THEATER PROPOSED

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—Proposals that the site of the Knickerbocker theater never again be used for commercial purposes but transformed into a park in which would be erected a memorial to the ninety-five persons who lost their lives in the collapse of the theater are under consideration by the house District of Columbia committee.

The committee, it was said today, had received several such proposals. Congress could either purchase the site if the present owners should decide to sell it, or acquire it through condemnation proceedings.

IF THAT GROUND HOG CHOSE RIGHT TIME—ALL'S WELL

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—Whether the flowers will bloom in the spring early or late in New York tonight remains a disputed question, although ground hog day has come and gone.

It all depends upon what time the quadrupled prognosticator took his stroll. If he emerged from his hole early in the day he did not see his shadow. If he waited until noon, he did, and returned to his hole to await fulfillment of the prophesy of a spring deferred.

MELLON TELLS PLAN TO RAISE BONUS REVENUE

Funds Must Be Derived by Means of Internal Taxes Declares Secretary of the Treasury.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—Funds to finance a soldier's bonus must be raised by means of internal taxes, as it would be impracticable to depend on proceeds from the refunded foreign debt for this purpose, Secretary Mellon today told the house ways and means committee.

Reiterating his objections to the enactment of bonus legislation at this time, the treasury secretary said that in levying taxes congress would have to tap mostly new sources as the levies now in effect were abnormally high for peace times. He opposed a general sales tax, re-enactment of the excess profits tax, or an increase in any existing taxes except possibly those on cigarettes, tobaccos and documents.

New sources of revenue suggested by the secretary included three cent first class postage to raise $70,000,000; an increase in second class postage rates to produce $30,000,000; a two cent tax on bank checks to yeild $30,000,000 and a license tax of fifty cents per horsepower on automobiles, to produce $100,000,000. Mr. Mellon estimated that increased documentary stamp taxes produce $40,000,000 and that an additional $25,000,000 could be had from an increase on fifty cents per 1,000 on cigarettes and two cents a pound on tobacco.

Figuring that the bonus would cost $425,000,000 a year for the first two years the secretary said congress could pick out other sources of taxes where the burden would fall with the least hardship in order to make up the deficit of $125,000,000, as between the yield from his specific suggestions and the bonus cost. In this connection he called attention to suggested consumption taxes on tea, coffee, sugar and other articles and a tax on gasoline, but these he did not approve.

ROME CABINET AND PREMIER RESIGN OFFICE

ROME, Feb. 2.—The cabinet of Premier Bonomi, which took office early last July in succession to the Giolitte ministry, presented its resignation to the chamber of deputies this afternoon. The cabinet decided to resign when at a cabinet council this morning it developed that important groups in the chamber upon which the government had counted for support had passed over to the opposition because of objection to various of the government's policies.

Premier Bonomi's reading of his resignation was received by the chamber in absolute silence. In the final event the government discovered itself abandoned by all the party groups. Even the Catholics, who had been supporting the ministry throughout the crisis of the last few days, were alienated because of the failure of the cabinet to have a eulogy of the late Pope Benedict read from the tribune by President De Nicola of the chamber as had been promised.

The president called the chamber to order promptly at 3:15 o'clock and read the minutes of the last session. Premier Bonomi rising immediately afterward read the short stereotyped declaration of resignation "owing to the government finding itself no longer possessed of the confidence of chamber it has decided to withdraw."

Several of the Catholic deputies shouted "what becomes of the eulogy of the pope which you promised?"

Premier Bonomi did not reply, continuing to read the resignation.

Speculation as to the successor of Bonomi in the premiership has brought forward the names of former Premier Orlando, Giolotti and Mitti and President De Nicola of the chamber of deputies.

CURTAIN RISES ON FINALE OF WORLD DRAMA

Washington Conference Is Expected to Adjourn Sine Die Following Plenary Session Saturday.

Further Concessions Made by Japan in Response to Twenty-One Well-Known Demands of China.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—Japan met China part was today on the latter's request for abandonment of the celebrated "twenty-one demands" program of 1915.

Taking the center of the stage as the final scene of the arms conference began, the Japanese announced that their government was ready to give up entirely group five of the "demands", which China has held was calculated to rob her of her sovereignty, and to make further concessions regarding economic privileges and political and military preferences in Manchuria, and Mongolia.

Tomorrow China is to reply in a statement that is expected to bring the Far Eastern negotiations to an end, and on Saturday the Washington conference probably will adjourn sine die after a plenary session for formal adoption of the Far Eastern treaties.

Consideration of the "twenty-one demands" the last topic remaining on the Far East agenda of the conference, began in the Far Eastern committee after hope of an adjustment of the Chinese eastern railway situation had been abandoned and a resolution adopted merely declaring that arrangements for "better protection" of the road should be worked out in the near future through the regular diplomatic channels. The powers other than China appended a joint declaration of China's responsibility for fulfillment of her obligations to foreign stockholders of the road.

Three concessions were announced by Baron Shidehara, one relating to group five and the others to the situation in Manchuria and Mongolia. Japan was ready, he said, to withdraw the reservation attached to the Chinese-Japanese treaty of 1915, under which she retained the right to press further in the future the unaccepted group five. One of the other concessions will open up south Manchuria and eastern inner Mongolia to the international consortium and the other asserts that Japan has no intention of insisting that Japanese advisers be employed in these territories in political, financial, military or police matters.

STATE TO MOVE FOR REHEARING IN SNOW CASE

A motion for a rehearsing before the court of criminal appeals at Austin will be made by the state in the case of H. C. "Doc" Snow within the fifteen-day limit prescribed by law, according to information Thursday from District Attorney H. R. Wilson. Mr. Wilson said he would prepare the brief to be submitted to an assistant in the attorney general's office for filing before the higher court.

The twenty-year sentence of Snow for the murder of Marvin S. Caple in a local district court was reversed by the higher court in an announcement made Wednesday. From District Attorney Wilson announcement it is believed that the state will make a strong effort to have the conviction of Snow affirmed.

Snow still has the charge of having murdered William Toney pending against him. Mr. Wilson said that he had made no decision as yet as to whether the latter murder charge would be tried in the event the reversal of the Caples' case was finally secured.

25 KNOWN TO HAVE PERISHED IN MINE BLAST

By Associated Press.

GATES, Pa., Feb. 2.—Twenty-five miners are known to have been killed in the explosion at the Gates mines of the H. C. Frick Coal and Coke company here early today, it was reported by coal company officials tonight and there is a possibility that the number of dead may reach twenty-six. Thirty men were working in the section where the explosion occurred, four of whom escaped. The name of the miner unaccounted for is not known.

Sixteen of the dead were taken to a mortuary at Masontown tonight. Six bodies remained at the bottom of the shaft awaiting the recovery of the three or four men who remained buried under debris. Efforts were being pushed under the direction of Pittsburgh officials of the coal company to obtain these bodies tonight.

was transhipped from Wichita Falls, graded No. 3, was graded No. 4 at Galveston, No. 3 by the district supervisor at Galveston and which on appeal to the Chicago board of review was restored to its original No. 2 grade.

So Far By Dealers.

"The result has been so far, felt only by the grain dealer, who, not knowing what grade will be placed on his wheat when he ships to a terminal market, is naturally somewhat up in the air," said Mr. Mytinger. "This condition, if not corrected, will affect the farmer next season, for the grain dealer, being at sea on the grade which will be placed on shipments, will be equally at sea when buying from the farmer and on the grade to pay him for.

"The variance is only in the Southwestern grain trading. The remedy we propose is simple. The grading is done on carefully fixed standards. The differences between the various graders lies in the difference of application of the grading factors. This could be corrected at a general conference of all graders and all district supervisors in the Southwest, attended by representatives of the Chicago board of review, and if possible by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. This conference would, we suggest, be open to the grain trade and to the grain raisers.

Frank Kell and Mr. Mytinger are the local grain men planning to take the matter up personally with the secretary of agriculture while in the east in the next few days.

debt proceeds, Mr. Mellon said the time that such returns would be had was problematical and in any event the ultimate cost would be greater than if direct taxes were paid. He explained that if the interest were used the government would have to extend its domestic debt refunding operations that much longer at a cost to the tax payers, while if the foreign bonds were sold, in the United States the government would have to guarantee the interest and the principal and even then the securities probably could not be sold at par.

To a suggestion that the treasury issue certificates of indebtedness to raise the $850,000 000 for the first two years and retire them out of interest from the foreign debt, Mr. Mellon said this would hinder the domestic debt refunding operations. The amount to be refunded, he asserted, was so large that no additional securities should be thrown on the market during the operations. He also stressed that the government was facing a deficit of $300,000,000 in 1923 which must be made up.

Asked by Representative Garner, democrat, Texas, as to the imposition of a tax on light wines and beers as a means of raising bonus funds, Mr. Mellon declared that with the "high tension" in the country on the prohibition question this was not feasible.

Chairman Fordney suggested that there was a constitutional inhibition on congress in permitting the sale of beer and wine.

Brigadier General Lord, budget officer for the war department told the committee that the department had estimated that if all the soldiers took cash, the bonus cost to the treasury would be $1,082,400,000, but he expressed the belief this total was too low.

U. S. Delegates Signed Treaties Without Titles

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—When the American delegates to the arms conference came to describe themselves for the purpose of the list of plenipotentiaries that always precedes the official text of treaties, they set before the world a new example of democracy.

Titles and official designations of many sorts glitter opposite the names of the representatives of other governments who are parties to the treaties negotiated here, but under the head of the American delegates in the new naval and submarine treaties appears simply this:

"For the president of the United States of America,

"Charles Evans Hughes,

"Henry Cabot Lodge,

"Oscar W. Underwood,

"Elihu Root,

"Citizens of the United States."

Compared to this every other delegate listed carries some sort of a handle, long or short, to his name. The longest is that of the head of the Japanese, who is described thus:

For his majesty, the emperor of Japan,

"Baron Tomesaburo Kato, minister for the navy; Junii, a member of the first class of the Imperial Order of the Grand Cordon of the Rising Sun, with the Paulownia Flower."

700 ARE INITIATED INTO KU KLUX KLAN CHAPTER AT AUSTIN

By Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, Feb. 2.—More than 700 candidates were initiated here tonight into Capital City chapter, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan at a ceremonial held north of the city. About 1,500 persons attended the initiation, including the candidates.

In addition to the usual initiatory ceremonies, several addresses were made, according to newspaper men allowed to be present, pointing out alleged immoral conditions existing in Austin and denouncing anti-American tendencies.

Reporter's Ruse To Enter Rome Conclave Fails

By Associated Press.

ROME, Feb. 2.—Major excommunication and instant dismissal from the vatican household is the penalty which will be inflicted upon any person in attendance at the conclave if found guilty of imparting information concerning its deliberations or votes to persons outside before the result is officially announced. Cardinal Gasparri, the camerlengo, served notice to this effect today to all concerned.

The cardinal's instructions came after the reported discovery that one newspaper correspondent had practically completed arrangements to don a waiter's uniform and for a large monetary consideration had induced a designated waiter to allow the journalist to enter the conclave in his stead. The correspondent is said to have first opened negotiations with a barber, but this plan was abandoned, it was reported, because his unskilled tonsorial efforts might prove dangerous for the cardinals.

Cardinal Gasparri's arrangements to prevent a leakage of news are most severe. He is determined to avoid a recurrence of circumstances that attended the conclave of 1903 which elected Pius X, when the exact number of votes of each ballot was immediately known outside the vatican. Austria's vote against Cardinal Ramolla, who was a candidate at that time, also was printed the same evening it occured.

ments some time later was committed by the same person. Robbery, however, appeared not to have been the motive for shooting Taylor. Nothing was missing from his apartment.

A neighbor told the police of seeing a man near the apartment last night, shortly after which a shot was heard. A woman, who called upon the director early in the evening said that when she left, Taylor walked with her to the car, then returned to his apartment. His only servant left at the same time. The servant returned about 8 o'clock this morning and found Taylor lying dead on the floor of his living room, shot through the back. A pile of checks lay on an open desk in the living room.

The servant said both, front and rear doors of the apartment were locked when he arrived.

The woman who visited Taylor last evening, a motion picture actress, was questioned by detectives who said her story was corroborated in every respect by statements of others, including her chauffeur. She said she stopped at Taylor's apartment to return a borrowed book and talked with him half an hour. She said Taylor talked about the man he alleged had robbed him—and expressed apprehension that he would make another raid upon his home. Taylor, the actress said, told her he proposed to prosecute the man if he was apprehended.

The actress also said Taylor had told her he might call at her home, several blocks away later in the evening and that he would telephone if he could do so. There was no telephone message, she said.

Another development late today was the statement by the wife of a motion picture actor living in the same group of apartments about the court, that she saw a man at Taylor's door about 9 o'clock last night. She said he appeared to have the door partly open. She described the man as short and stockily built, and wearing a checked cap. This description does not tally with that of the former servant on whom the police first sought to check up.

tion, and in the same breath seek to justify the beneficiary who was "condemned" Senator Reed stated unless he was "a man of perve that would do credit to a first-class orthodox devil."

Michigan had not "ratified" or "confirmed the crime" he continued, analyzing the vote to show that Senator Newberry received a majority of 4,000, whereas the other candidates on the ticket received majorities of 150,000.

"Such an election is not a ratification but a condemnation," Senator Reed asserted. "If the election was considered a ratification then the senate adopted a resolution which was an act of infamy, because you condemn that which you say had been through the fire of purification."

Senator Reed said there was only one course open for Senator Newberry and that was to refuse to accept the result. Mr. Newberry should have "repudiated" the election, he said, adding that when he repudiated the acts of his friends in the expenditure of money he would also repudiate the benefits of their acts.

"A man might just as well say that he was the receiver of stolen goods," he continued, "but he did not know they were stolen when he accepted them, but that although they were stolen he would keep them."

ROTARIANS HEAR PROTEST ON WHAT IS TERMED MISDIRECTED DONATIONS FOR NEEDY CASES

A moving sketch of a family consisting of a mother and several children on the North Side in such want that their only food consisted of a few cooked beans which was placed on an old newspaper in the floor, where the children took them one by one with their hands, was related at the Rotary luncheon Thursday. The relation came in the course of a protest, made by several local speakers, against what was described as well meaning but mis-directed charity and as an instance of the kind of need which is relieved by the organized charitable organizations to whom funds were recently subscribed by the entire citizenship of Wichita Falls.

This case was contrasted by a speaker with another case which recently came to wide public notice and which resulted in a number of various gifts both through and outside the regular channels, called misdirected because all applied in one spot, whereas the speakers contended that if the same money were placed in the organized channels it would have resulted in some good to a greater number.

In the other case, one speaker said that he was informed before the public was well aware of the family's plight that Salvation Army officials, one of the local agencies, advised him that they were completely outfitted in good and warm clothing. Later, he said, he found that several people, acting independently, had left orders at local stores for additional complete outfits, part of which could have been applied in other places, he declared. Many other donations in money for various purposes, some of which he contended was above the point of absolute necessity, were made—quite a large sum of money, in addition to many other gifts. In addition to this, the family had several hundred dollars as the result of an insurance policy.

"I don't mean to in any way say that the case was not worthy," one of the speakers said, "because it was. But the public, on hearing of this particular need became hysterical and placed all their donations in this single spot, when it could have been spread out to the benefit of the greater number.

"The inclination to give and relieve want is commendable on the part of the people of Wichita Falls, but misdirected. The organized agencies had acted even before the public in this case as they do in others, and in many others that the public know nothing about. The funds placed in the hands of the various organizations are expected to last a year. If they are insufficient, additional help should be applied through these organizations, where it will be expended in the best way. The margin between actual necessity and what was given in the case I mentioned should have been spread to other needy cases.

"There are not a great many needy cases here, but there are some. And the local situation has been affected somewhat by the number of people coming in who expected to get work on the irrigation project which was delayed. The established agencies are, however, doing a good work among these people and finding more people who need help each day. The money will go further and do more good if placed through them. The needy cases should be called to their attention." This was the substance of a statement in the same connection made by another Wichitan actively interested in such work following the discussion at the meeting.

GROUND HOG DOES NOT SEE SHADOW— IF EARLY RISER

The ground hog, unless he was a late riser, failed to see his shadow yesterday, and will not need to look forward to six weeks more bad weather, if the old superstition holds good as regards this year. For the sky was overcast Thursday until nearly noon. During the afternoon Sol began to beam in a half hearted sort of way and the weather reached that stage where it was confortable to go without an overcoat.

WIDE RANGE COTTON SEED PRODUCTS TOLD

George Daschner Tells Rotarians How Everything From Gunpowder to Ginger Bread Is Made.

From cellulose, the basis of guncotton and smokeless powder to material for weather proof roofing; from glycerine, used in the making of nitroglycerine to phonograph records; from highly scented toilet soaps to celluloid containers; and from cowless butter and hogless lard to meal and flour for human food; these are the range of the uses to which by products from the cotton seed mills, usually regarded as fit only for planting cotton and cow food. George Deschner, manager of the Wichita Falls Cotton Oil mill told members of the Rotary club in the current talk of the vocational series Thursday.

Mr. Daschner sketched the history of the cotton seed industry from its crude beginning before the Civil war, when great secrecy surrounded the operations of the few mills, in which only the most ignorant of the negro labor was employed, to the present day when the investment in Texas alone represents many millions of dollars and from which many millions of dollars go back to the farmer for cotton seed, at one time practically a waste product.

Ford's Autos.

In speaking of the list of uses to which by-products would be put, Mr. Daschner referred to a recent interview by Roger Babson with Henry Ford, in which it was reported that the manufacturer was considering making automobile bodies from cotton, declaring the conviction that auto bodies would then come under the classification of by-products of cotton seed.

"For he will undoubtedly use linters for his cotton," the speaker said, "that is the cheapest grade."

"Knot Hole Gang."

The club definitely committed itself to the building of the "Knot Hole Gang" grand stand which it has discussed on previous occasions, and which will be a reward to the boys of the city, through free admittance to the Texas league games, for good conduct in and out of school and for proficiency in their school work.

Bit of History.

The singing of the Texas University song, "The Eyes of Texas Are Upon You," which produced a shout for Orville Bullington to lead the song, resulted in his giving a history of its origin—during the time when he was attending the university. It was written by a college was following a very stiff lecture to the students by the then president of the university as the result of a depredation on the town which entailed quite a little damage—the president in his reproof using that phrase. This anecdote turned the mind of Louis Jacoby, crack Texas golfer, who was introduced as a guest, back to his own school days, and he remarked that he remembered the origin of the song well, being one of the crowd that the president made the remark to.

SOLEMN RITES OBSERVED BY THE CONCLAVE

By Associated Press.

ROME, Feb. 2.—Majestic stateliness attended the solemn immuring in the vatican today of the sacred college, comprising for the moment fifty-three cardinals. Every detail of the sacred rites was observed and although the time fixed for the closing in of the cardinals was 3:30 this afternoon, so long was the ceremonial that darkness had descended before the doors was finally barred and bolted and the preliminaries were completed for election of a new pontiff.

The fifty-three cardinals present in Rome are now in the vatican. Even Cardinal Marini, who is recovering from influenza, was conveyed there this morning. He remained in bed, however, resting preparatory to the work of the morrow when the first ballot will be taken.

At the huge bronze doors surveillance of those passing within was of the strictest nature. A giant German-Swiss sergeant of the guards allowed nobody to enter unless provided with a white pass, issued by Prince Chigi, marshal of the conclave. The conclave's isolation was carried out with full ceremonial. Shortly after lunch the cardinals met in the Pauline chapel, where "Veni, creator," was sung, a procession then formed, passing through the Sala Regia to the sistine chapel where the hymn was concluded. The cardinals entered the Sistine chapel, and behind closed doors took the oath of secrecy.

Prince Chigi had meanwhile left his official residence and proceeded to the Major Domo's apartment where he was admitted into the presence of the cardinals. There with his staff he took the oath to maintain secrecy and the absolute closing in of the conclave, under pain of ex-communication.

BOOTLEGGERS NOW TAKING THE "WOOD" FROM WOOD ALCOHOL

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—Bootleggers throughout the country are evolving a new industry—the rectification of denatured alcohol—prohibition officials said today, which probably will necessitate a complete revision of the government's system of distribution.

Reports have been received, it was said, that some of the government's formulae for industrial alcohol lend themselves readily to rectification so that illicit liquor dealers are obtaining the denatured spirits under government permits and by various processes rendering it more or less drinkable.

Revision of the present permit system now in vogue is understood to be under consideration with a view of checking any diversion of denatured alcohol into unlawful hands.

AGED WIFE WHO SLEW HUSBAND FOUND INSANE

Finding Made by County Court Jury Early Thursday; Will Probably Be Confined in Asylum Here.

Holding to her son standing beside the witness box, with tears streaming down her cheeks and mumbling in tones not audible except to those near her, Mrs. Mary M. Whitaker in the county court Thursday afternoon again told of the killing of her husband John A. Whitaker, Saturday morning at their home.

Mrs. Whitaker was tried on the lunacy charge filed against her Wednesday and at the conclusion the jury of six men after brief deliberation brought in a verdict adjudging her insane, recommending that she be placed in confinement. It is expected that she will be transferred from the county jail to the Northwest Texas Insane asylum at Lake Wichita, which opened with its first patients Tuesday.

In taking the witness stand, Mrs. Whitaker asked that her son stand beside her. The pathetic scene brought tears to the eyes of jury, attorneys and others in the court room. After stating that she had killed her husband because her husband objected to the prosence of the seven-months-old grandesild "which she loved so dearly" she broke down and was excused from further testimony.

The son, Thomas L. Whitaker of Marlow, Okla., whom she summoned here to announce the gruesome tragedy Sunday, testified that his mother has been confined in state asylums on two previous occasions. He also told of a letter which he had received from his father a short time before the tragedy in which the victim said that he believed that his mother was going to have another "spell."

Sheriff Fred Smith, Louis M. Jernigan, county farm superintendent and Dr. M. M. Walker all testified that in their opinion Mrs. Whitaker was insane.

INSURANCE SUIT HAS NEW ISSUE

Can an insurance association issue a policy under the terms of which the insured party must abide by the terms of a board appointed by the association and cannot question their judgment by bringing the dispute into a court of law?

This question for the first time in Texas was presented as an issue Thursday in the 78th district court before Judge Ed Napier in the case of Olan White, local truck driver against the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen to collect $1,600 insurance alleged to be due him on an insurance policy.

White, according to the testimony was injured several years ago while employed on a railroad and a member of the brotherhood by falling upon a cross tie. Evidence introduced at the trial showed that White sustained a fracture of the skull which necessitated the removal of a part of the skull. He alleges in his petition that the injury has totally disabled him and for that reason is asking the maximum amount of the insurance policy allowed in such cases.

In its submitted issues the defendant brotherhood questions the right of the plaintiff to bring the case into court for adjudication. The defendant alleges and introduced the insurance agreement showing that in case of dispute the matter rests with a board of officers of the company and their decision is to be final. The issue arises as to whether or not this part of the insurance agreement is legally binding.

Defendant's attorneys introduced authorities showing that in California and Ohio such an agreement has been held [illegible]

Public Punishment of Highwaymen in China as Crime Wave Deterren

This photograph might give a useful hint to authorities of this country on how to handle hold-up men and other criminals and discourage crime wave. It shows what China does to her criminals. These two Chinese, were caught in the act while committing a highway robbery, were sentenced to wear heavy, wooden blocks around their necks in public for six months.

be adjudicated by a court of law. According to attorneys the question has never previously arisen in a Texas court.

Another issue arising in the case and submitted to the court arises from the extent of the plaintiff's injuries. It was shown in the trial that his injury did make it impossible for him to follow the same line of employment although he has been doing other work since the injury. The court will be called upon to decide whether or not this constitutes total disability within the meaning of the insurance agreement with the brotherhood.

Evidence in the case was completed Thursday. Following argument of the case Judge Napier took the several issues under advisement.

WINS JUDGMENT ON ACCIDENT POLICY

After a five-minute deliberation a jury in the county court-at-law Thursday returned a verdict awarding William R. Alspach of this city $268.80 damages against the Commonwealth Casualty company. The suit was an outgrowth of a sick and accident policy which the plaintiff held with the defendant company.

It was shown in the testimony that the plaintiff sustained a broken ankle in May of last year and that he was unable to work for ten weeks. The judgment allowed by the jury was the amount sought by the plaintiff in his petition.

BURK OFFICER ALLOWED BOND HERE THURSDAY

Bail Set at $750 Following Shooting in Speeding Case; Wounded Girl Is Found Not Seriouly Hurt.

Theo. Cook, motorcycle officer of Burkburnett arrested Wednesday night in connection with the shooting of Mary and Lena Yeary two sisters living in that city was released here Thursday under $750 bond. A complaint charging assualt with intent to murder was filed against the officer.

According to Wayne Sommerville, assistant county attorney, Lena Yeary, who was the most seriously injured of the two sisters made a statement here Thursday in which she substantiates to a large extent Cook's account of the manner in which the shooting occured. According to officials the girl in her statement indicates that Blake Browning, driver of the automobile, was driving at a high rate of speed at the time the officer stopped the car and requested the driver to go to the police station.

The Yeary girl was brought here Thursday and the bullet which struck her in the hip ranging upward located. She was later returned to a hospital at Burkburnett to have the bullet removed. Her condition is not considered serious.

First reports regarding the shooting Wednesday night were to the effect that P. B. Browning of Burkburnett was the driver of the car when stopped by the officer. In a telephone communication Thursday night Mr. Browning said that it was his brother Blake Browning who was driving the automobile.

In his statement Wednesday night to local officers Cook said that the shot was fired when he was attempting to arrest Browning for speeding. He declared that his 45 automatic pistol was fired accidentally when Browning tried to take the gun out of his hand. P. B. Browning in his statement denied that his brother attempted to get the gun away from the officer. The two girls were with Browning in the automobile at the time the shooting occured.

Calomel Good But Treacherous

Next Dose May Salivate, Shock Liver or Attack Your Bones.

You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the next day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. No salts necessary. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and can not salivate. —Adv.

stituted, may be expected to begin within the next few years. To meet the emergency of a declining output of petroleum the United States has in reserve huge deposits of oil shale from which great quantities of petroleum products may be obtained when it becomes economical to produce them. Enormous amounts of rich oil shale are found in Northwestern Colorado, Northwestern Utah, Southeastern Wyoming and in Northern Nevada. Deposits of more limited extent and generally less rich are located in Pennsylvania, Indiana, Kentucky, Texas, Wisconsin, Michigan, West Virginia and elsewhere. Though the oil shale industry is of long standing in other parts of the world, notably Scotland, France and Australia, it has not yet passed the experimental stage in the United States. Frank Haskell, president of the Tidal Oil company, in commenting recently on the estimates of oil resources, said. "In the early days of Oklahoma's history as an oil state a certain government bureau or authority went on record, and published to the world in pamphlet form, that the state had an estimated oil area of 400 square miles, with an estimated production of 192,000,000 barrels. The state since that time has produced more than 1,162,000,000 barrels of oil, and is producing at present at the rate of more than 100,000,000 barrels annually. At the same time an equally wild guess as to the future production of Texas was made."

Japan has given up Shantung—that is, Japan has signed an agreement to give up Shantung. Shantung was a rich piece of loot awarded to Japan when the spoils of the World War were distributed in the city of Paris. France hasn't been asked to give up its share of the spoils. Great Britain hasn't been asked to restore or return its war loot. Now why should Japan have been forced to loosen its grip on Chinese territory? Regardless of all this the Harding Disarmament Conference has paved the way for an Association of Nations and the prevention of future wars.

Canada has her troubles, according to Barron's. They are the lesser problems of resumed growth, not of reconstruction. She has no war currency to deflate. Her budget practically balances. In foreign trade her cash position is stronger than a year ago. Her production increases. No other country in the world can point to the combination of all these factors in January, 1922. If the course of exchange be the true augury of 1922 eventualities, the Canadian outlook is better than a year ago. The new year opened with Montreal dollars at a 5 per cent discount. The old year began business with Montreal dollars worth eighty-five cents apiece in New York.

SAMMY JAY CALMS DOWN

Everybody on the Green Meadows and in the Green Forest who heard Sammy Jay thought he had gone crazy. He certainly acted as if he were crazy. He couldn't sit still long enough to answer questions, but flew here and flew there, and flew everywhere, all the time screaming so fast that he mixed his words all up. It was no wonder that his neighbors thought that Sammy was crazy.

But he wasn't. No, sir, he wasn't. He was just excited, terribly excited. And it was all because of what he had seen deep in the Green Forest. But his little neighbors didn't know anything about this, and so they thought that something was wrong with Sammy's head, and they said to each other: "Poor Sammy Jay. Isn't it too bad? What could have happened to make him go crazy?"

Now, all this made Sammy worse than before. You know, when you try to tell a thing and people cannot understand you, you are very apt to grow impatient. Most people are, anyway. And it was so with Sammy Jay. He tried to tell what he had seen, but was so excited that his words tumbled over each other and were so mixed up that no one could understand what he was trying to tell, and this made Sammy more excited than ever, so that his talk was more mixed up than ever. Worse still, he began to lose his temper, and he quite lost it when he happened to overhear some of his neighbors say that he certainly was crazy. For the time being he quite forgot everything else, and just told everybody what he thought of them, and what he told them wasn't at all nice.

Now, about this time along came Sammy's cousin, Blacky the Crow. He heard Sammy calling his neighbors bad names, and he heard the other little people saying that Sammy was crazy. He hunted up Unc' Billy Possum and asked him what all the fuss was about. Unc' Billy told him how Sammy Jay had come screaming about something he had seen deep in the Green Forest, and how nobody could make any sense of what he said. "He told us that it had great big claws in its mouth," said Unc' Billy, grinning at the memory. "Do you wonder, Brer Crow, that we uns think he is foolish in his haid?"

Blacky said he didn't wonder at all, and then flew away to look for Sammy Jay. He had no trouble in finding him, for he had only to listen to hear Sammy's angry voice. He flew right over to where Sammy was.

"You come over to the Lone Pine with me!" said he, sharply.

Now, if there is any one in all the Green Forest or on the Green Meadows for whom Sammy Jay has respect it is for his big cousin, Blacky the Crow. You see, smart and sly and clever as Sammy Jay is, Blacky the Crow is smarter and more sly and more clever, and Sammy knows it. So when Blacky told him to come to the Lone Pine with him, Sammy went.

"Now, Sammy, tell me all about it," said Blacky, when they were comfortably seated in the Lone Pine. So Sammy began at the beginning and told his story, and this time he told it quite straight, for every time he began to get excited Blacky would fix his sharp eyes on him in a way that made Sammy feel uncomfortable, and he would at once calm down. It was a queer story that Sammy told, and when he had finished Blacky the Crow looked as if he didn't believe a word of it. Poor Sammy saw this.

"You don't think I am crazy, too, do you, Cousin Blacky?" he asked.

"I don't know," replied Blacky. "I really don't know what to think."

HOME NURSING and HEALTH HINTS

By M. JESSIE LEITCH

JUST WEARINESS

"I'm so tired and shivery, with pains in my back and a queer, all over-ish feeling," said the tired business man, coming home from the office one evening and taking off his overshoes, heavily.

"You're catching cold," chanted the family, in chorus.

"I never 'catch cold.' It's unnecessary. Haven't had a cold for years," grumbled the man. Then he sneezed.

"You've caught cold!" announced his mother-in-law. There was triumph in her voice. Any one who said that colds were unnecessary need expect no sympathy from her. "Colds" had a way of being always with the mother-in-law, who took more patent medicines than were good for her, and had a way of answering advertisements about newly discovered medicines when her family's back was turned.

"It isn't a cold. I'm quite sure. I just feel queer," insisted the tired business man.

Gladys a Believer in Rumors.

"Probably you have a temperature," suggested his daughter, helpfully.

"There's a lot of pneumonia going around. Goodness, father, I hope you haven't got a pain in your chest, or wherever you get a pain when its pneumonia," said Gladys, who believed in rumors.

"I don't want any dinner. I guess I'll go to bed." And without even a glance at his favorite Wednesday night dinner, the T. B. M. started upstairs, even the evening paper neglected.

It was then that the mother of the family, who had been cutting Bobby's meat and mashing his potatoes and tying on a bib he always scorned, rose to the occasion.

"Don't wait dinner for me. I'm going up to take care of father," she said firmly.

And this is what she did.

Taking Care of Father.

Passing into the kitchen, she put some milk on to heat in a double boiler. Instructed Nora, the maid, to make a slice of toast, very carefully, to butter it thinly, and to cut it into tiny cubes.

"Then what will I do with it, ma'm," said Nora.

"Put the toast cubes in a big china coffee cup and set it in the warming closet. I'll do the rest."

So the motherly woman went upstairs.

She took her husband's temperature, much against his better judgment, and was relieved to find it normal.

His hands were hot and his feet, he said, felt cold.

So he was induced to take a warm bath and get into bed.

Here, with a hot-water bottle at his feet and an ice-bag on his head, the man lay, discounting all his symptoms and declaring that he felt better already.

Felt All Right by Morning.

Down in the kitchen the woman who always seemed to know what to do made a very thin cream sauce with the scalded milk, poured it over the crisp golden cubes of toast, and placed the steaming cup of cream toast on a little tray. She stole up the back stairs with it. Her husband, sniffing the toasty odor, said gratefully: "I believe it's all I wanted. Some extra rest, some cream toast, and a little friendly exile from the members of my family, who always diagnose symptoms at a glance, and wrongly."

And the understanding woman, throwing the window open wide and placing an extra blanket within reach of the temporary invalid, smiled and agreed. Nor was she surprised when next morning her husband was feeling perfectly well. Weariness is responsible for many a vague ache and pain.

The Once Over

OLD FACES MADE AS GOOD AS NEW

o o o

Her eyes are like two glowing coals,
Her cheeks are like the clover;
In fact, she'd be good looking if
Her face could be done over!

o o o

Is your face satisfactory? Not only to yourself, but to others who have to stand for it? If not, why not?

o o o

There no longer is any excuse for a woman struggling through life with a second- or third-class face. Just because a lady was out of luck when nature was distributing faces is no reason why she should stick to the one she drew.

o o o

If your face isn't all that you'd have it, turn it in and get a new one. Thanks to Plastic Surgery, the movement for the Reconstruction of Devastated Faces is going forward by leaps and bounds.

o o o

You'd be surprised to know how many prominent women have turned in their faces for alterations and repairs this season.

o o o

Off with the old face and on with the new, as the saying goes.

o o o

Plastic surgeons are springing up thicker than chiropracors (if it is possible for any one to be thicker than a chiropractor). If your face isn't all that it has been cracked up to be let a plastic surgeon crack it up along new lines.

o o o

There is nothing a plastic surgeon can't do to a face.....whether it deserves it or not. He will renovate, repair, remodel, reconstruct, alter, or launder them as desired.

o o o

Faces called for and returned! All faces lost in transit will be replaced by something just as good!

o o o

The plastic surgeon specializes in taking up the slack places, removing bagginess under the eyes, and taking the overhang away from chins. He cuts away the superfluous skin, thus allowing the face to slip back into its normal position.

o o o

Spare the knife and spoil the face is his slogan.

o o o

He makes one chin grow where two have grown before.

o o o

Of course, great judgment is required. The plastic surgeon is frequently called upon to decide whether, in justice to the patient, it wouldn't be better to remodel the face or just destroy it.

o o o

Then, too, there are some faces it is impossible to damage. Many a face would look better off than on.

o o o

But assuming a face is in fair condition, the plastic surgeon must exercise great care. It is a horrifying experience for a lady to approve plans for a new face, award the contract, undergo the reconstruction, and then find that her face is worse than it was originally. If such a thing is possible.

o o o

Another annoying experience is to visit the plastic surgeon duriug the rush hour and discover that evening that you have part of Mrs. Jones's face and she has part of yours.

The Path of Progress

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc.

(Copyright, 1921, by The Associated Newspapers.)

It is a truism which cannot too often be repeated that the path of progress is the path of effort. By no other path can one advance to any durable, outstanding success.

Many people still seem to think otherwise.

Certainly many people give themselves most earnestly to avoidance of effort. They clamor for longer playing time, for shorter working days. To this end they even band themselves together. And when at work they work listlessly.

There is nothing effortful in their working. They really busy themselves only when sharply watched. To idle seems to be almost an obsession with them.

Then, when forced to recognize that they are not progressing, they blame, not themselves, but the world in which they live. Some among them go so far as to demand a remaking of that world.

"What is needed," they affirm, "is an entire reorganization of society. We are hampered and hindered, are denied adequate opportunity, by the kind of government we now have."

No doubt the present organization of society has some imperfections. No doubt there is room for governmental improvement.

But no matter how society may be reorganized, no matter how government be improved, it will still hold true that only through effort can progress be achieved. Those indeed delude themselves who deem that prosperity will come to them of its own accord, or that they can make headway in life giving a minimum of their time to labor and a maximum to pleasure-seeking.

Wise old Samuel Smiles had the truth of the matter when, long ago, he remarked:

"They who are the most persistent and work in the truest spirit will invariably be the most successful; success treads on the heels of every right effort."

The life histories of all successful men bear out this statement. Never will you find a successful man who made avoidance of effort his rule of conduct. Never will you find one who schemed and planned—as so many unthinking people do—to shorten to the utmost his daily stint of toil.

The successful, on the contrary, have deliberately worked harder and longer than necessity required of them. They have made it a point to do this. They have even devoted much of their leisure to work, nor accounted it a grievance to do so.

And only those who imitate them in this respect can ever hope to emerge from the ruck of mediocrity, with its attendant evils of chronic dissatisfaction and poverty or semi-poverty.

Most decidedly they cannot emerge from it by making the gaining of ease one of their chief ends of life. Ease, to be sure, may be gained by men, but effort must come first—and vigorous, productive effort.

This, I repeat, will always be the case, however ingeniously society may be reshaped with a view to securing an effortless yet comfortable existence.

THE FUTURE OF STATES

By DR. FRANK CRANE

(Copyright, 1921, by Frank Crane.)

One is often tempted to inquire what will be the final outcome of nationalisms.

When the Irish insisted that the consent of the governed as the basis for freedom implied the independence of Ireland, Lloyd George replied that such a proposition, while it was the foundation of the British Constitution, could not be carried to such an extreme, as it would bring the world back to barbarism.

The same issue occurred in a measure in our Civil War, when the South insisted upon its inalienable right to separate from the Union. This right the North successfully resisted.

We cannot carry our ideas on this question to any severely logical conclusion. For while we all believe in independence, we would not tolerate that Rhode Island or Illinois should declare its independence from the United States.

The close of the Great War marked the birth of a number of new states and the breaking up of the old empires of Germany and Austria to some extent.

How far will this sort of thing go? The probability is that the desire for independence will be automatically checked by the advantages of co-operation. While the public opinion of the world is against the formation of any more great empires by military force, and is in favor of the right of the small homogeneous groups of people to govern themselves, at the same time, the advantages of belonging to a large nation are considerable.

A curious incident took place in the Philippine Islands, when the Chief Tulawi told the Wood-Forbes Mission that the people of the island of Jolo wanted to belon gto the United States. A great demonstration occurred on this occasion and hundreds of native boats, gaily decorated with American flags, met the Mission steamer. The only banner in the parade, escorting the Mission to the meeting, was inscribed, "We wish to become American territory. No independence. We want an American governor for this province."

Hugh Price Hughes, in a memorable address, pointed out that the Fiji Island were not conquered by Great Britain, but voluntarily sought admission into the Empire because of the protection and advantages it would give them.

There is no doubt that Canada, Australia and New Zealand are kept in the British Empire, not by force of arms, but because they desire to be members of the great British family.

Perhaps, in time, if we can get rid of armaments and militarism, this natural law of the manifest advantages of co-operation will bring about the true and permanent League of Nations, and that world state which every thinker realizes is so desirable.

SALVAGE

Mildred was a very happy young bride, for there was, first of all, her new husband—not that she had ever had any others, but, as she termed it, he was her "nice, new, shiny husband." And there was the new flat. It was a lovely place when everything was taken into consideration. Of course, it was not quite as new as it might have been, and there were stoves to be taken care of and ashes to be carried out, and it was a long way to the stores and to the city, but she had her husband, who was so willing to help with the dishes and to run down to the store for groceries and to carry out ashes and carry in coal. Then there was the furniture, particularly the bedroom set, which was of beautiful mahogany. It was her pride and joy. The rest of the furniture didn't matter. What difference was it to any one if the parlor chairs were of different colors? Or why should it matter if the dining room table didn't match the chairs? She still had her bedroom set. Not that it has anything to do with this story.

And there were still other reasons why she should be happy, for how many brides get to enjoy two honeymoons? There had been one long honeymoon just before Herbert enlisted, and, of course, there had been a long, lonesome period of anxious worry while he was away, but there had been another honeymoon upon his return that outshone the first one by far.

First of all they found a flat. Then came a happy time of planning, shopping, and spending until it was furnished. And there were many belated presents from understanding friends who gave practical things for the flat. When it was all done and Herbert had gone back to work there was very little money in the domestic treasury, but it did not matter, for they were very happy.

But as the days turned into weeks and the weeks into months there came a little speck of unhappiness on the horizon, for a peculiar characteristic cropped out in her husband. It was something she could not understand.

It was "all on account of the war," that had taken away her loved one and returned him a changed man. When Herbert came back he told her very little of the actual fighting, though he had seen much of it. He did tell about camp life, marching bands, soldier songs, soldier slang and other features of military life, but very little about the actual fighting. One feature he particularly enjoyed telling was the salvaging done by the soldiers.

He told of the regular salvaging branch of the various armies, which recovered and remade millions of dollars' worth of valuable materials; then that the soldiers themselves did occasional "salvaging," "borrowing" or any other form of mild stealing which is required by the seantiness of soldier equipment. Of course, it was all more or less playful, and, as he very carefully explained, was not stealing—merely "salvaging," experiences.

This was not, however, what made her unhappy. The real difficulty was that Herbert continued his salvaging habits in domestic life. It all came about very abruptly one night when he disappeared from the flat without saying a word, only to return in fifteen or twenty minutes with an old battered dishpan. He held it up proudly as he came into the parlor and explained that he had seen it in a back yard a few blocks down the street. He didn't like to stop and pick it up in daylight, so he went back at night.

"I'll just take a hammer and smooth out those dents," he explained, "and it will be almost good as new." After considerable pounding he had restored it fairly well, but Mildred was not entirely pleased with the pan and did not like to use it, even after it had been scalded and scrubbed, for, as she explained to her neighbor, Mrs. Orville: "Who knows where it has been or what it has been used for?

Mildred kept the old pan in the kitchen for fear of hurting Herbert's feelings, but she did not use it, even though she needed a larger dishpan.

From time to time there were other salvaging operations. A week or so after the dishpan incident Herbert came into the kitchen one evening, after a mysterious absence, with an old washboard. Now, Mildred already had a good washboard, and told Herbert so, but he had been unable to resist his salvaging propensities. Of course the zinc was broken in one place, but Herbert got busy with a hammer and some small tacks. After a little pounding he declared it to be "almost as good as new." Mildred left the old board in the basement next day and said nothing more about it.

Salvaging became more regular after that, and Mildred became unhappy. She actually dreaded to see Herbert leave the house, and sometimes felt as though she would scream when he dragged in some battered, old, cast-away, which he made "almost good as new," littering her kitchen floor in the process.

Finally she confided in Mrs. Orville, the neighbor across the hall. Now, Mrs. Orville was middle aged and had seen much of the world. After hearing Mildred's troubles, she smiled and patted her little hands, then made some suggestions, to which Mildred listened attentively and left, feeling better than she had in weeks. But there was still a battered old chair that Herbert dragged in one evening to be made over. It occupied a prominent place in the kitchen, where it disfigured the room—was an eyesore, in fact. Mildred resisted with difficulty the temptation to throw it out. And she really felt guilty about a clothesline that he had "salvaged" from a backyard one night, but the kindly advice of Mrs. Orville cheered her greatly.

Several days went by before Herbert went out on another salvaging expedition. This time he returned with a battered old coal scuttle which he displayed joyfully, announcing that it would be "almost as good as new" with a little fixing. Mildred did not become tearful, nor did she feel like screaming. Instead she smiled and said: "That's splendid. We have two coal scuttles already, but I suppose we can save it until we need another one. And I was going to tell you the good news. I did some salvaging myself. See. Here's a necktie I found. It isn't very pretty now, and I'll have to brush off the ashes, and clean it and press it, but it will be "almost as good as new when it's done."

Herbert seemed surprised and somewhat dubious, but he said nothing as she set about making over the tie, which was an old one of Mr. Orville's which she had covered with ashes herself. When she had brushed, cleaned, and pressed the old tie it was a sickly looking thing at best, but she presented it boldly and demanded praise. Next morning she made Herbert take off the nice new tie he had on and substituted the salvaged one. It made her feel bad afterward, but she pressed her lips together and determined to see it through.

There was no more salvaging for more than a week, but when Herbert did disappear mysteriously one night Mildred was waiting for him with an old pair of shoes she had picked up in an alley. Herbert entered the parlor and held up a battered prize, then Mildred produced her shoes, saying: "I beat you to it again. Here's an old pair of shoes for you. I think they are just about your size, and after they are cleaned and shined I know the shoemaker can patch them so they'll be 'almost good as new.'"

After that there was no more salvaging, so Mildred and Herbert lived happily until their first quarrel.

Watching the Parade

By JOHN PILGRIM

By JOHN PILGRIM.

The new discovery will never do me any good—in all likelihood. The truth is that I do not learn very easily. Precept goes in one ear and flies out the other; observation finds me blind, and the only way in which I ever make an advance in knowledge is to have a hard fact kicked into me by the iron heel of experience. Still—I may remember my recent discovery, though I have very slight hope. It might be summarized in this way:

"It's easier to do a thing than it is to worry about doing it."

I am the world's champion procrastinator. I never—literally never—do anything until something comes up from behind and pushes me. I remind myself of the old sheep which in John Burroughs's biography is described as furnishing the foot power for the old-fashioned churn. The old sheep hung back so on the runway that they finally set sharp spikes just where he could neatly back into them when he attempted to put off the churning. Whereupon, with a pained "a-a-a" he would be on his vigorous way.

That's me. I'm that procrastinating sheep, with this difference. The sheep had no known conscience, whereas I am the most conscientious person in the world. If he succeeded in stopping the churn he felt that he was just that much ahead, until the spikes hit him. But if I had been that sheep I would have worried. Holy mackerel, how I would have worried! I would have lain awake in the black night and kept my wife awake by my groaning, and told my friends what tremendous tasks were heavy, heavy hanging over my head and made myself a nuisance all around.

I might, of course, have flown at the job and finished it. But I never have. My conscience has operated like the sharp spikes set in the rear of the Burroughs sheep. Neither one of us tooled our particular churn along until our particular spike prodded us. Which gets me back to my discovery.

I have written four letters explaining why it has been impossible for me to do a certain task. I have had four if not five telephone talks about it. I have successfully dodged two luncheon engagements at which it and my dilatoriness were—I knew—to be the piece de resistance.

This morning I did the whole thing—the whole dern thing—in half an hour.

I'd hate to tell you just what a procrastinating fool I seem to myself to be.

Rippling Rhymes

By WALT MASON

THE GOOD TURN.

One day I saw a ditcher, who feebly plied his spade; I took him out a pitcher of kickless lemonade. His name was Peter Leary—and that's his handle yet—and he was hot and weary, and longed for something wet. "That drink was most delightful" the steaming Peter cried; "my thirst was something frightful, and burned up my inside." Long years have passed since Peter poured down that lemonade, and watched me calmly teeter back to my fig-tree's shade. The other day while driving my corrugated car, it sunk, despite my striving, in mud as thick as tar. There I was mired completely, in glue-like gumbo stuck, and I orated sweetly about the dad-blamed luck. Then came a whiskered granger who drove two sorrel mares; "Wilt pull me out, O stranger?" I cried, between my swears. He pulled me from the wallow—his team was strong and smart; I knew what was to follow—a bill to break the heart. For I've had farmers haul me from mudholes now and then, and always they'd appall me, by their demands for yen. He said, "You make me weary! No money shall be paid! For I'm the Peter Leary who drank your lemonade!" I've often helped a fellow who groaned beneath his pack, and ne'er found one so yellow he wouldn't pay me back.—(Copyright, 1922, George Matthew Adams.)

BRIDGE FOR VISITOR SOON TO LEAVE.

Entertaining a few friends informally at bridge Wednesday afternoon, Mrs. S. H. Burnside complimented her daughter, Mrs. W. L. Bartley, who has been spending the winter in this city, and who has most pleasantly rejoined the circle of girlhood friendships. There were three tables of players for this occasion. Mrs. C. Y. Tully scored high, the favor being a set of hand-painted numbers for bridge tables, and the low score prize, a dainty sewing set, also hand-painted, went to Mrs. M. Staniforth.

A tempting luncheon plate was served to Mesdames John O'Donohoe, M. Staniforth, Mark Moore, C. W. Gilliland, Dudley Golding, Leonard French, John W. Naylor, F. D. Woodruff, George Woodruff, J. C. Gardner, John Gould, C. Y. Tully and M. A. Beckman.

Captain and Mrs. Bartley and two baby daughters, Mary Patricia and Alice Burnside, will leave the first of the coming week for Washington, D. C., the captain's assignment taking him to Camp Meade. This new post will be a very pleasant arrangement for the family since Mrs. Bartley's only sister, Mrs. Vernon Lowrey, formerly Miss Margaret Burnside, is also in Washington, where Mr. Lowrey is in the office of his father, one of the Mississippi congressmen.

During their two months stay in Wichita Falls, the former home of both Captain and Mrs. Bartley, they have been at home at 1515 Taylor and Mrs. Burnside has also been with them. On their departure Mrs. Burnside will again make her home at Kemp Kort.

An urgent invitation is extended all carpenters not at present engaged in the work, to swell the force today and get a good dinner as a small expression of the appreciation of the Civic league women for their valuable assistance.

Fashions for Americans

Simplicity is the rule in the designing of most of the late winter and very early spring frocks. This is especially true of those for evening wear. While the straight line, chemise type of dress continues to be a great favorite, there are also many that feature a waist line. The very low waist line is most frequently seen, but the frock that is gathered or belted in at or near the normal waist line is not at all unusual. The one shown in today's sketch is of this type. Pure white satin of a very soft weave was the material selected for the gown, which is sleeveless and moderately low in the neck. The waist is very simple and the skirt is gathered in, showing a natural fulness, not the hooped effect so much exploited early in the winter season. The frock is trimmed simply with a pretty motif of embroidery done in crystal beads, giving a semblance of a wide girdle.

To declare a straight line the only thing favored by Dame Fashion, to declare that only a low waist line is correct, or to insist that the normal waist line is the latest and best, would be incorrect, because fashions are so varied that it is practically impossible to lay one's finger on one style line, color or fabric and announce it as predominant. This is quite as matters should be, because the individual woman must be served and clothed becomingly, and as long as there are different types of women, different figures, and different ages to be catered to, there must be a variety of styles.

Interesting trimming novelties are noted, especially on evening frocks, one lovely model recently seen having a double belt or girdle fashioned of very tiny shells set close together. The effect was charming. Braided girdles of heavy silk braid are frequently used, the little frock shown in the sketch being tied about the waist with such a girdle, with the crystal embroidery on either side. Gold or silver cloth or metal braid is similarly used with good effect. Flower girdles are also popular and effective finishes for dainty evening and dance frocks.

Dame Fashion offers so many suggestions that may be individualized by a little bit of thought that there seems no reason why every woman should not be well and charmingly costumed. The selection of the right accessories is no small matter, even so trifling a thing as a hair ornament being able to make or mar an entire outfit.

WOMAN-I-TORIALS

Club Trinity.

1. Cultivate the get-together spirit. 2. Have a definite aim. 3. Put everybody to work.

Woman is the patient sex—too patient! We put up with inconveniences and old-fashioned methods and wait until some inventor man comes along and designs a machine to help us over our worst difficulties.

We are needing him now. There is no job more detested among womankind than dishwashing. If men had to do, they would doubtless have pressed the button and done it by "juice" long ago.

We have the successful sewing machine, washing machine and vacuum cleaner, but who will invent a truly practical dishwashing machine—one which will not require impossible volumnes of hot water and take as much work to operate and care for it as to do the work by hand?

Boy, page Mr. Inventor—or, a Mrs. Inventress would do.

Women In Industry.

The U. S. Women's Bureau, of which Miss Mary Anderson is the chief, reports that more than twelve million women are engaged in industry in the United States. A study of their conditions and needs is being made by the bureau and women everywhere are awakening to a keen interest in the subject. It is regretable that women are dividing into two distinct groups, each working to extend legislation which is antagonistic. One group would annul all distinctions between the sexes in industry giving to each equal wage, hours, conditions, etc. The other group would build up protectional laws to safeguard women in many respects. The former group claims that this causes discrimination, and hinders woman's advancement. Miss Anderson urges all women to study the situation and arrive at a settlement of this conflict of opinion as it handicaps efforts being made to help women and leads to confusion.

Attractive Garments Seen in New York

The Woman Citizen

With New Eyes.

This is the time of year when the feminine population is liable to live cooped up indoors. Here is motive to walk abroad, taking in the air and the sights: Visit your city, with eyes newly alive to civic conditions, new ideals of civic art, new standards for orderly streets. Go about over your city from corner to corner seeing what it is like.

If organized groups will do this, comparing what they see, much will be learned about city betterment. The first step in reform is a survey of conditions. Women are born inspectors. We are used to nosing about the corners of our households. Let us know our city home and be prepared in the spring to enter heartily into the campaign for city beautifying. To this end let us snoop everywhere and take notes.

Compulsory Physical Education.

Virginia leads in requiring physical education in the public schools. There is a state supervisor who directs the work. Teachers are required to have had a satisfactory course in physical education. The state will pay to the local physical teacher not to exceed half his salary, the local board pays the other half. If it be true, as Hoover says, that adequately caring for children of today would advance us three generations in civilization, it seems that Virginia is going after this work about right. Missouri, Kentucky, Mississippi, and Georgia are following Virginia's lead.

Why Are Some Women Popular, happy, beloved and successful, while others drag out a negative existence of no use to themselves or anyone else? Except in a few cases the answer is to be found in a state of freedom from the troubles known as "female." The well woman radiates cheerfulness and serenity, while the ailing one repels because of her lack of these qualities. It is not necessary, however, to harbor aches and pains, and the "blues" that make one a detriment to society. The use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought relief to such women, and given them a new lease on life.—Adv.

THE PROP

CHAPTER LXVIII.

The conversation Ruth had had with Mr. Carr seemed to bring them closer together than ever. He had been immensely flattered by what Mr. Lang—confessing failure to impress Ruth—had told him, flattered because of his perspicacity in seeing far enough ahead to allow Ruth the opportunity to demonstrate her ideas, and because Mr. Lang knew it. Big men are not above their foibles any more than ordinary ones. That he had hesitated, had been influenced by Robert Turnbull, Henry Carr would not now admit—even to himself.

He had for some time taken great interest in Ruth's work, but had seldom visited her department in working hours. Now he took to dropping in, quietly and unobtrusively listening to Ruth suggest some investment to a wealthy client, invariably influencing her to buy just the sort of bond she recommended. He observed her when she talked saving to some poor office girl with a small salary; he listened when she talked salesmanship to the girls, explaining each salient point so carefully that a tyro could grasp her meaning; he watched her method of management. He noted there was no time during business hours in her department for anything but business.

"No wonder she succeeds," he said to himself. "She imbues every one under her with her own enthusiasm, her own ideas. Her entire staff act in harmony, like the strings of some musical instrument. Her secret is her personality and her unusual executive ability. I wouldn't have believed it of a woman a few years ago; now I am prepared to believe anything of them," and his chuckle was so audible his private secretary wondered what had happened to so amuse his chief.

Ruth Browning was now a recognized factor in his entire organization as well as in her own departments, which had been evolved from her own ideas.

In speaking to Robert Turnbull of this, Mr. Carr was surprised by the coolness with which his unusual praise of an employee was received. The president of the firm was not given to praise of any one. In fact, he scarcely ever mentioned them, except as an entirety. And considering Mr. Turnbull's former enthusiasm for Ruth, he was at a loss to understand his indifference.

"There are other things better than business success for women," Turnbull replied, in response to something his superior had said.

"Just what, for instance?"

"Oh, a home—and——"

"A husband? So that's the way the land lays, is it? You think Miss Browning would make a better wife than an executive. Well, I do not agree with you, and what's more, Turnbull, I hope she doesn't, either. You have managed to get along for years without a wife, and I hope if you have designs upon Miss Browning you will be compelled to finish out your days without one."

"Thank you; but if I can prevail upon her to accept me, I shall not consider you, or the business, in which you will grant I am as much interested as yourself."

"She has refused you?"

"Twice."

"And you still have 'opes'?"

"I shall have as long as she is single."

"All I can say, Turnbull, is that I hope you will fail. Miss Browning has given all that is fine in her to the making of a business woman. She told me at one of our conferences that it had been her ambition from a child. She is not domestic, not cut out for the hum-drum life of a home, even with you. She would not be happy—not for long. I know I am right."

"Time will tell," Turnbull answered, dryly. "There is no danger that she will change her mind for the present, however, so you can be assured of the success of her department for a while longer. Although she has one or two girls—or women, rather—whom she has trained so perfectly that they might almost fill her place."

"Almost—yes. But it is just that one word that makes the difference in the success of any undertaking. Many men as well as women are almost good enough. Few quite fill the bill. I don't blame you, Turnbull. Were I single I would perhaps try to cut you out. Yet I still say I hope you lose."

"As I said, time will tell."

Other matters were then discussed, but Mr. Carr did not forget what Turnbull had said, and watched Ruth keenly for a time, to see if he could detect anything in her manner to cause him to think she would give up all she had so struggled to attain for a life of domesticity.

He could discern nothing.

"I knew I was right," he told himself, figuratively patting himself on the back because of his intuition.

"Yes, I still have hopes," Turnbull had muttered when alone, "faint ones at times, but I'll not give up."

MORE FOR LESS

Satisfaction and the Family Money.

Instinctively we delight to get something for nothing. We accomplish it when we attain more happiness at less expense. This is possible in almost every home by skillful management.

Bookkeeping and budget-making are two first essentials. We must know where the money goes and how much it takes to buy necessities. The bookkeeping is easy to begin now. A year's record of accounts will enable you to adapt your budget to your own family's peculiar needs, the following average budget for a family of four will serve as a guide, and it also should be begun at once:

Rent, 20 per cent; light, heat, etc., 5 per cent; food, 35 per cent; clothes, 15 per cent; education and amusement, 10 per cent; miscellaneous, 5 per cent; savings, 10 per cent.

A practical way of handling the funds is to place each in a separate, labelled envelope every pay day. At the end of each period, place what may be left in any envelope in the miscellaneous one. This is to cover any over draft from any fund, or to allot to savings.

If one fund is chronically short, consider which other fund may be reduced to cover the discrepancy. Talk the matter over freely in the family, as this will insure cooperation, without which the plan will be a failure, and will bring out helpful suggestions, and make each more cheerful in enduring necessary sacrifices. It is the right of the family as a whole to decide what shall be the family standards, and which items they shall value most.

The following suggestions may help curb expenses:

1. In rent, demand cleanliness, air, light and wholesome surroundings but not aristocracy nor nearness to the business quarter.
2. Watch the use of light and heat. Regulate carefully stoves or furnace.
3. Use staple foods and in season. By skillful cooking and variety in serving, the inexpensive standbys may be made to satisfy the palate as well as provide ample nourishment.
4. Plan menus ahead, cooking several dishes at one time. Make or buy a fireless or steam pressure cooker. Study cookery and dietetics.
5. Supply at least a pint of milk for each child and half pint for each adult daily. Butter and sugar are needed by the children. Home-made candies are cheaper. Fresh vegetable and fruits must be a part of each day's menu, but economy may be used in their selection; cabbage and carrots instead of head lettuce; home canned fruits and vegetables will help out; when storage is possible buy in bulk apples, oranges, etc., or unite with neighbors.
6. Cereals, hominy, dry beans, peas, rice, marcaroni, butter-milk, and potatoes are high in nourishment and low in cost.
7. Work up left-overs attractively and use cheaper cuts of meat, which latter are as nourishing as expensive cuts and may be made delicious with careful cooking. Never waste anything.
8. Make over clothes within reason. The combination of fabrics, now the fashion, is favorable. Home sewing is usually a saving.
9. Buy supplies with the idea of service and durability, avoiding fancy and temporary styles.
10. If the housework is too much for the housewife, cut out frills and consider how the others may save work or help without harming their best interests.
11. Put savings into a savings account where they will not be easily accessible to spend and where they will draw interest. Invest wisely when possible.
12. Remember "low living an high thinking" is a virtue.

The Spanish Spark That Started a Beauty War

She's a Mysterious Senorita from Seville, Flaunted as "the World's Most Beautiful Woman," and London Wants to Know Why Britain's Prettiest Are Snubbed!

Trini, Spanish Dancer, Whom English Arbiters Have Appraised the Most Beautiful Woman in the World.

At Right—Karsavina, Russian Dancer Whose Success in London Attracted Others There.

Germaine Mitty and Tillio, French Dancers Who Startled and Charmed London.

Mlle. Kousnezoff, Noted Russian Beauty, a Formidable Leader in the "Foreign Invasion" of London.

Gladys Cooper, an Example of the English Type from Whom Londoners Have Turned to Worship Foreign Beauties.

AN English theatrical manager suddenly tells the world that he has found the most beautiful woman alive. There is a visible stirring and swelling in those places where London beauty is assembled and worshipped. There is an air of excitement among the professional charmers. As they rush in and out of dressing rooms or put their pretty heads together over tea cups, one can hear them making sounds of indignation. For there has been no outburst of British pride over this London manager's discovery. Even if she had been one of their own number, this would have been unlikely. But she wasn't even British. The "most beautiful woman alive" is a Spaniard.

Trini is her name and Seville her home. Her first appearance following this sweeping pronouncement by C. B. Cochran, the London manager in question, started a blaze of enthusiasm among the play-going public that is still burning—that is spreading, in fact, over all England. She has been described as having black, flaming eyes, skin of the tint and texture that wine seems to have when it stands in a crystal tumbler, shoulders and arms faintly voluptuous without suggesting rotundity.

A Beauty of Mystery

Trini is, further than that, a person of mystery. She volunteers no information about herself or her family connections. Somehow, though, the information has got around that Trini is a member of an old Castilian family who exacted a promise from her that she would not reveal the family name when she went on the stage.

Altogether several circumstances have conspired to make her the particular delight of London. British artists are therefore very bitter. They make hostile gestures in the direction of the "foreigner."

But Trini has drawn the wrath of these London artists not only because of her own popularity, but because she has seemed to create a demand for foreign beauties that is having its effect in every theatre in London. It would be more accurate, perhaps, to say that Trini's spectacular appearance was really the high point of a movement that has been under way for a considerable time. There had been an appreciable influx of artists from the United States and the continent even before Trini was heard of; complaints of discrimination against home-grown talent in favor of American ballet girls had even found their way into the newspapers.

But Trini symbolizes to the domestic British beauty, the whole hated foreign invasion—an invasion that is seriously threatening her pride, and what is worse, her pocketbook. What was a mere muttering before Trini's arrival, has welled into a deep chorus of protest. The managers, they say, are catering to a false taste by going far afield to pick their headliners. Artists are not picked according to their qualifications, they charge, but according to their geography and their names. As for "the most beautiful woman alive," she is "cowlike" and "coffee-colored," to hear the English artists tell it. So runs the war among the beauties.

Agnes Souret, France's "Most Beautiful" Entry in the Beauty War.

The London performers refer to Albert de Courville and C. B. Cochran as pernicious cases in point, of the London manager who is discriminating unfairly in favor of American and Continental performers. These two men are slowly stifling the theatrical profession as an English product by making its existence of all English artists extremely precarious, it is declared.

Mr. de Courville's answer to these charges has only added bitterness to the attacks on him. The reason he does not employ English beauties, according to his statement, is because he can't find them.

"I had the greatest difficulty," he said, "in getting together a beauty chorus of thirty. The difficulty was not experienced because the girls themselves were lacking. More than five thousand applied for places in my revue. They simply were not pretty. I naturally concluded that British girls must be rather plain."

Mr. Cochran makes a similar reply. He brought Trini to London because she was the most beautiful woman he had ever seen and not because she is a Spaniard. He says he would have been equally enthusiastic if he had found her in Surrey or Kent. Mr. Cochran can further prove that he is thoroughly impartial in his search for beauty by citing the cases of numerous British girls he has brought up from obscurity. Mr. Cochran, in fact, is known as the Florenz Ziegfeld of Europe. He is continuously on the hunt for new beauties, new talents, new artists. In that search he wanders through all of the back-alley theatres, dance halls and cabarets of London and the provinces as well as on the continent.

"Art can't be British," he has been quoted as saying. "It must be universal. And the nationality of a girl usually has very little to do with her success."

Those who support Mr. Cochran's position give the example of Karsavina. Karsavina's artistry breaks down all barriers of language and nationality. If England could produce a like dancer, she would be hailed with fully as much acclaim. They also point to Mlle. Kousnezoff, another Russian artist who combines genius as a singer and dancer with physical beauty.

Mlle. Kousnezoff incidentally had social advantages that are not often granted to struggling singers. Her father was the well known Russian court painter, Nicholas Kousnezoff. Through her father's acquaintance with celebrated men of old Russia, she met the great Russian composers and artists and thus was stimulated to begin an artistic career for herself.

Leaders in the "Invasion"

Mlle. Kousnezoff has a perfectly featured face of a dark, Slavonic type, a really dazzling smile and an exquisitely molded figure. She has a many-sided genius, being a dancer as well as a singer. This winter she will combine the practical with the artistic by managing the theatre at which she appears in Paris. During her recent London engagement she received the highest pay ever given a dancer on the London stage.

London has also been hospitable to many French artists. Germaine Mitty, now at the Pavilion, and Agnes Souret, heralded as the most beautiful girl in France, were among the favorites of this season.

In all of these cases, managers affirm that it was capacity and not nationality which led to their engagements. That the managerial judgment was commercially sound, at least, was proved by the popularity of these foreigners with London audiences.

E. O. Hoppe, the London artist who has just returned from the United States, makes his contribution to the controversy by suggesting that the reason why foreign artists succeed where British artists have failed, may be because they are international types. The British are rather proud of being distinctive in their appearance, habits of thought and manners, and something of this insularity, Mr. Hoppe believes, may have crept into their art. They should strive, therefore, to make their appearance and their appeal take on a universal quality.

"America," he says, "has produced what you might call an international beauty in Geraldine Farrar. That is to say, she is recognized as a most beautiful woman in every country in which she has appeared. Now this is unusual, because beauty very often is a matter of individual taste. To have recognition from people of various temperaments and tastes is to receive a high tribute and stamps one as international. These types, so far, are rare. Beauty in its accepted highest form today is as much a matter of spirit and soul lighting the eyes, as it is a question of coloring and features.

"Miss Farrar is a traveled woman. She has sympathy and understanding; she has a fine mentality and there is soul in her artistic achievements. She has been tremendously admired in every country where she appeared. There are many beautiful women in the world. But most of them find that their beauty is a matter of geography."

Mr. Hoppe, incidentally, is an ardent admirer of the American girl, though he thinks she sometimes is too imitative.

"There is one point of criticism I must make of American girls, charming though they be," he declares, "and that is their too lavish use of cosmetics. I believe many mar what might otherwise be considered beauty by extravagant use of paint and powder.

Internationalizing Beauty

"I also believe that America would produce more recognized beauties if the girls were a bit more independent in type. I think the artists, to a certain degree, are responsible for this. For instance, some years ago when a noted artist made his name famous for depicting the willowy, tall, graceful girl, his type had such a vogue that every girl tried to be tall and willowy. When another celebrated American artist developed the more recent type of the bobbed hair, cigarette-smoking girl, he had a big following who bobbed their hair, took to smoking and impersonating the jolly, but rather wholesome type, of what might be called 'The New Freedom Girl.'"

The same imitative tendency was observable in the English girl, declares Mr. Hoppe. She ran to type and of late the type hadn't been very chic. Hence the gusto with which continentals and Americans had been received by cosmopolitan London audiences.

Perhaps the English girls will follow Mr. Hoppe's tip and internationalize themselves. Meanwhile, unless some sort of protective tariff wall is thrown up around them, their craft will die out, they claim.

SUGAR.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—The raw sugar market was easier for Cubas with prices 1-16 lower to the basis of 2 1-16c cost and freight, equal to 3.67 for centrifugal, while Porto Ricos were unchanged to 3.61. There were sales of 6,000 bags of Porto Ricos to a local refiner at 3.61; 19,000 bags of Cubas to operators, second half February shipment at 2 3-32c cost and freight, and later 27,000 bags of Cubas to operators and refiners, afloat and first half February shipment at 2 1-16c cost and freight.

Raw sugar futures were more active and prices were easier, under scattered liquidation and hedge selling, owing to the more liberal offerings in the spot market. Final prices were 1 to 4 points net lower.

March closed 2.21; May 2.29; July 2.58; September 2.71. In refined the demand continues of only moderate proportions and prices are unchanged at 5.00 to 5.10 for fine granulated.

Refined price futures were nominal and without transactions. Closing prices were 10 points higher to 5 net lower with March at 5.55; May 5.60; July 5.65.

CHICAGO PRODUCE.

CHICAGO, Feb. 2.—Butter unchanged. Eggs higher, receipts 8,758 cases; firsts 39c. Poultry unchanged.

Stocks

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—Trading on the stock exchange today was more active and varied than at any previous period of the week. The tone was firm to strong throughout, but operations again ran largely to groups of closely held specialties.

Shares which for years figured prominently in the general, notably high grade dividend paying transportations and industrials, fluctuated narrowly and were relegated to comparative obscurity.

Rails had a brief upward spurt during the mid-session, but the demand fell off in the profit-taking of the final hour.

Conspicuous features at gross gains of 2 to over 10 points included oils, secondary steels and equipments, leathers, tobaccos, chemicals and several of the inactive textiles. There also was a sprinkling of higher prices among food specialties, shippings, metals and local tractions.

Net gains of 1 to 5 points embraced crucible and United States steels, General Asphalt, Mexican Petroleum, Baldwin Locomotive, Studebaker, General Electric, Electric storage battery, Davison chemical, United Fruit and Retail Stores.

Woolworth gained 6 1-4 and Cluett Peabody 7 points. Sales amounted to 765,000 shares.

Although the demand for call money was light, the opening rate of 5 1-2 per cent on the stock exchange held until shortly before the close, when private offerings caused a drop to 5 pr cent. There was little demand for time funds, but a 5 per cent rate prevailed for all accommodations except high grade mercantile paper.

Foreign exchanges were unusually confusing, aside from the London rate, which attained the new high of 4.29 3-4 for demand bills. The Paris rate eased slightly and the lire reacted 5 points, presumably in connection with the resignation of the Italian cabinet.

Strength of sterling exchange was reflected in the higher prices for British bonds, especially United Kingdom and Canadian external loans. Liberty bonds were firm but the feature of the domestic group was the activity and higher range of local tractions, based on their improved financial condition. Total sales, par value, aggregated $14,350,000.

Grain

CHICAGO, Feb. 2.—Prices jumped in the wheat market today to the highest point since October 4 last. It was contended that United States hard winter wheat is at present the cheapest wheat in the world. The market closed strong at 1½ to 4c net gain, with May $1.23⅛ to 1.23¾, and July 1.07¼ to 1.07⅜. Corn finished ⅜@½ to ⅜ up, oats ascended ¼ to ⅜, and provisions 17 to 37c.

More attention to world supply and demand conditions was given by wheat traders today than has been the case for a long while. The immediate reason was a big bulge in prices at Liverpool which resulted in dissipating belief that export business from the United States was over for the season. A general rush to buy took place as soon as the market opened. And at no time thereafter were offerings plentiful enough to equal the demand. Excessively cold weather and high winds in the dry area of the domestic winter crop belt tended further to lift wheat values, and so likewise did word that between 400,000 and 500,000 bushels of rye had been purchased for export. In addition Argentine exports of wheat were estimated at nearly quadruple what they were a year ago. Soaring of prices here continued throughout the season, and the close was at the topmost level reached.

Corn and oats were rather neglected, and they failed to keep up with the pace set in the wheat market. Nevertheless, both the feed grains reflected to some extent the results of the increase in demand for breadstuffs.

Higher quotations on hogs helped to lift the price of provisions.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—Further wage reductions in some New England cotton mills caused hesitation among cotton goods buyers today. This was increased by the unsettlement in raw cotton. Yarns were quiet with a softening tendency. Burlaps continued quiet and unchanged. Mens wear worsteds for fall are being bought conservatively.

Cotton

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—The cotton market lost a good part of yesterday's rally during today's early trading, but after selling off to 16.15 for May, rallied to 16.57 compared with 16.59 at the close yesterday. Most other months sold above yesterday's final figures in the late trading and the close was very steady, net 3 points higher to 7 points lower.

The opening was barely steady at a decline of 5 to 19 points in response to weak Liverpool cables, an unfavorable view of European political news and reports that the rally in raw cotton had failed to stimulate demand for cotton goods. Houses with Liverpool connections were sellers here again on the differences, while there was some scattered Southern selling and liquidation by recent buyers for a reaction. Increasing apprehensions that labor troubles in New England might lead to temporary curtailment of consumption also were an unsettling influence and before the end of the morning active months sold 29 to 44 points net lower, with March touching 16.45 and July 15.75.

Offerings then became lighter and the market firmed up during the afternoon on renewed covering accompanied by reports of a slightly better spot demand in the south with a firmer basis at some interior eastern belt points. March again showed relative strength, selling up to 16.90, or 5 points net higher and into new high ground for the movement, while July sold at 16.22 making a net advance of 2 points. The close was a shade off from the best under realizing. Reports received here from New England indicated that additional mills were announcing reductions of 20 per cent in wages and some of them increased working hours, leading to apprehension that the strikes reported in Rhode Island would spread to other sections. Private cables reported liquidation and hedge selling in Liverpool with very few buyers on the early decline but one of the cables said an important factor had been rumors of financial troubles in London which were later denied on good authority.

Exports today were 33,774 bales making 3,448,491 so far this season. Port receipts 10,191 bales. U. S. port stocks 1,138,101.

NEW ORLEANS MARKET.

NEW ORLEANS, La. Feb. 2.—A lower Liverpool than due cut the cotton market down on the opening today and the decline persisted until prices were 37 to 43 points under the close of yesterday. Around the middle of the morning the market took on a much better feeling, mainly on short covering and in the afternoon it rose strongly on spot accounts and reports from New England to offices here that one of the largest mill concerns in that section had cut wages twenty per cent and increased the number of working hours per week and that 25 other New England mills had also announced wage cuts and longer running time. Heavier buying resulted and prices were sent to levels unchanged to four points up, compared with the close yesterday, March rising to 15.79 as compared with 15.32 as the low of the morning. On the close prices were 2 to 7 points lower on the day, March closing at 15.72.

The selling pressure of the early hours was increased by unloading of long contracts taken on during the last couple of sessions and by cable messages saying that the Italian cabinet had resigned. The effect of such features was offset to a large extent by spot house accounts of more inquiry from both foreign and domestic spinners, the sale by a local exporter of 500 bales to Holland and the report that in the late trading of yesterday one local concern alone had fixed prices of 7,000 bales of cotton for German spinners.

COTTONSEED OIL.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—Cottonseed oil advanced 7 to 9 points early in response to higher crude and lard, but prices reacted later under hedge selling by refiners and realizing by timid longs. Closing bids were 1 to 5 points net lower; sales 29,200 barrels. Price crude 8.05 bid; prime summer yellow spot 9.30; March 9.46; May 9.66; July 9.69, all bid.

NEW ENGLAND COTTON MILLS LOWER WAGES

By Associated Press.

BOSTON, Feb. 2.—Cotton manufacturers employing approximately 50,000 operatives in New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Maine, today notified their employes of wage cuts averaging 20 per cent, effective February 13. New Hampshire plants also gave notice of an increase from 48 to 54 hours a week.

The announcements brought northern New England manufacturers into line with those of Rhode Island and Connecticut, which recently put lower wage schedules into effect.

Several strikes have followed reductions in the latter states.

The important centers of Fall River, New Bedford and Lawrence, were not affected by the day's announcements, and only two of the mills at Lowell had announced the cut today.

The principal centers involved in today's readjustments were Manchester, N. H., with virtually all the rest of the cotton mills in that state following the lead of the Amoskeag and Stark mills and Lewiston, Maine. Some 17,000 workers are employed in the two mills and the Lewiston plants employ 16,000 men.

PLAY IS BEGUN IN TEXAS OPEN GOLF TOURNEY

By Associated Press.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Feb. 2.—Leo Diegel, New Orleans professional, paired with J. L. Bowler of San Antonio, today won the amateur professional medal play, the first event of the Texas open championship tournament over the Brackenridge municipal links here. Bob McDonald, Chicago and F. J. Jordan, San Antonio, were second.

Diegel and Bowler turned in a best ball score of 68 on a course with a par of 71. McDonald turned a score of 69, which also proved to be the best ball score of his team.

Tom Lally, San Antonio country club, paired with Commodore Bryan Heard of Houston, finished third with a best ball score of 70. Fifty-four amateur professional teams entered the event.

Diegel won first prize of $100 while his teammate will be awarded a gold medal. McDonald won $75 and his partner a silver medal while Lally got $50 and Commodore Heard a bronze medal.

COACH ROCKNE DROPS LIBEL ACTION PLANS

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Feb. 2.—Charges published in some newspapers that Grocer Hoover, a football coach of the Taylorville, Illinois eleven had insinuated that Knute Rockne, Notre Dame athletic director knew that some of his players were in the game against Carlinville resulted today in a flash of fire with legal action, but tonight the matter had been settled to the satisfaction of both mentors.

Mr. Hoover in a statement to newspapers this afternoon denied that he had made the statements published under his name concerning Mr. Rockne and also called the Notre Dame coach by telephone to make the same explanation. Mr. Rockne then announced that he, of course, accepted Mr. Hoover's explanation and had dropped all plans for a libel suit which previously he had announced he would file against the Taylorville coach.

Lloyd George Teaching Briand Game That Cost Pupil French Premiership

The French press attributes the recent political upheaval in France to former Premier Brand's game of golf with Premier Lloyd George. The Paris papers have made bitter comment on what they term the laxity of the Briand Cabinet at the Cannes conference and the lightness with which the ministers treated the serious world problems discussed there. They say the French public demands that grave questions be treated seriously and not discussed on the golf course in the hearing of a caddy. The photograph shows Premier Lloyd George at Cannes demonstrating to M. Briand how he makes his drive.

JUDGE DECIDES LUMBER HAS NO PLACE IN COURT

A court room is no place to pile lumber regardless of its importance in the trial of a case, according to Judge P. A. Martin of the Eighty-ninth district court. Judge Martin ordered several pieces of lumber removed from the courtroom Thursday during the trial of the case of the Industrial Lumber company against the North Side Lumber company of this city.

The suit involved the quality of lumber sold by the plaintiff to the defendant and the latter's attorneys had several large specimens of the lumber in the court room before the opening of court. Judge Martin objected to the size and quantity of the exhibits and attorneys had the lumber removed.

The suit was for $1,500 alleged to be due the plaintiff company from the defendant for the carload of lumber. The jury rendered a verdict for the defendant, finding that the grade of lumber was not of the quality ordered.

RED AND BLACK FIVE TAKES ON DEVOL HI TODAY

Coach Tate's Red and Black high school exponents of the art of tossing the round ball through the black ring have booked a battle with the Devol high school basketeers for tomorrow afternoon at 3:00 o'clock in the American Legion hall—and all signs point to a hotly contested struggle.

Little is known here regarding the Oklahoma high school quintet, but the fact is recognized that the Devol school has a number of fine athletes and in all probability possesses a fast, rugged team of cagers. The local high school football eleven smacked Devol high for a victory last fall, and the Oklahoma boys will fight hard tomorrow to obtain revenge for that defeat.

The seed, endurance and skill of the Red and Black five is already too well known to local fans to require comment. Those who trek to the game Saturday afternoon may be certain in advance of witnessing some pretty playing.

Capt. "Cherry" Johnson also has arranged a return game with Electra high school here on Monday night at the Legion hall at 8:00 o'clock. The Red and Black five defeated Electra not long ago 30 to 10 at Electra, and expects to take the visitors to a second cleaning Monday. Electra has improved considerably since then, and with Herschel Johnson in the line-up will probably put up a much stiffer struggle.

TONIGHT'S CAGE LEAGUE GAMES SHOW PROMISE

The people of this city who have been waiting for something real in the basketball line will have the opportunity tonight of witnessing a pair of games that are expected to be among the most closely played contests of the season. The University five with their slate clean will try to keep the Legionnaires from writing a defeat on it. The Viner brothers, Tate, Benrod, Burnett, Bowden, and the two Harpers that make up the Varsity team have been practicing faithfully this week, for they realize that the service men headed by "Smiler" Ferguson, will make them go the limit if they should emerge victorious.

The fracas between the High school lads and the Elks club will also be as interesting in proportion, for the only defeat of the Hi five was administered by the University cagers. If Capt. Johnson and his teammates are in their usual form they should have another one in the "won" column, unless the Antlers show some of the better effects of hard, consistent practice.

President Lemen stated that extra seats to accomodate a banner crowd, have been prepared and the roof was being rearranged so that the roof will not interfere to the extent that it has with the goal shooting. With part of the roof out there will likely be many spectacular shots made, as there are many basketeers in the two line-ups who make a majority of their long tries count when they have clear space.

LOBSTER HAUL BIG, BUT PRICE FAILS TO DROP

(By International News Service)

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Feb. 2.—By the right of the law of "supply and demand" lobsters should be cheap seafood, emphatically asserts an official statement from the California game and fish commission.

War on lobster profiteers has been proclaimed, declares the announcement, pointing out that there is no reason why lobsters should be retailed by restaurants at from 60c to $2 a portion. The present season along the Pacific Coast, it is declared is the largest in years.

Despite the great influx of shell fish, the Commission asserts, the price to the consumer has not dropped a single penny.

SOFT DRINK PROFIT IS HIGH

BOSTON, Feb. 2.—That a 400 per cent profit is being reaped by some local dispensers of soft drinks on one popular concoction was revealed by a Boston newspaper that has just completed an investigation. While many soft drink dispensers returned to the old five-cent scale when the revenue tax was removed, many are sticking to war-time prices. One drink, composed of syrup and carbonated water costing under 2 cents a glass, is being sold in many establishments for 10 cents.

TO COMPLAIN OF PAY PAID ON PROJECT

Complaint that sub-contractors on the irrigation project are not paying wages sufficient for a day laborer with a family to keep them alive and that in consequence the major part of the employment so far has gone to Mexicans and negroes will figure in a mass meeting called for day laborers on the North Side at the dance hall near the bridge at 7:00 o'clock tonight, according to O. B. Kelly, 405 Front street, who issued the call as chairman.

Kelly said that the prevailing pay was $1.75 per day and board, which with the deduction for board for Sundays and days the men do not work is insufficient for a family. He urges all laboring men on the North Side, whether employed or not, to attend the meeting. There is considerable sickness in this section, he says, and this will be considered.

Irrigation officials, asked regarding the reported wage prevailing, were unable to state positively what wages were being paid on the work, the work having been let to a general contractor and by him to sub-contractors.

They said that although the matter was beyond their control and beyond the control of the general contractor in all probability, they would investigate. The contracts were let at such a figure as to enable the contractor to pay a decent wage, which the board considers around $2.50 per day and board, according to one official.

LITTLE CHANGE IS REPORTED IN MONTH'S TRADE

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—Business and financial conditions throughout the country during January were without striking departure from the general situation existing in December, according to monthly review issued tonight by the federal reserve board. Season slackening in various lines of industries has taken place during the month, but such recessions have not gone beyond the proportions to be expected at this time of year. Productive activity in a number of lines has been unusually well sustained, it was added. Some improvement in the iron and steel trade was noted by the board and in other manufacturing lines a similar tendency, but in cotton and woolen textiles no material change was believed to have taken place. Little recovery in the depression in the silk industry is yet to be seen, the board stated.

Little change in crop conditions can be expected during the winter, it was asserted, but prices on staple farm products have about held their own with interest in the agricultural situation now centering on preparations for the new season.

Wholesale trade lines have shown great variation but in the retail trade the buying demand in the manufacturing districts in the east and north still shows improvement while demand in the agricultural regions of the west and south indicates a sharp decrease as compared with the corresponding period of a year ago. The general price level the board added, has shown but little change.

Commercial demand for credit during the month, the board reported, has tended downward while market quotations for money have eased. Foreign exchange quotations fluctuated within a narrower range than during December, while export trade has shown a tendency toward a small volume of business.

DEAF MUTES WEAR BANDS TO ESCAPE AUTO PERIL

LONDON, Feb. 2.—A novel method to ensure safety for the deaf in the streets has been found by the Berne (Switzerland) Association for the Deaf, which has distributed among its members a kind of cockade as large as a two-inch circle. It is yellow, with black spots, and can be worn on the arm or breast.

The association has notified the police and motorists of the meaning of the badge and asked for consideration to the wearers. The system will shortly be extended to all Swiss towns.
