Paper: Government 'pushed world too far'

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The country's leading business newspaper said today new U.S. economic sanctions showed that the white-minority government had "pushed the world too far."

In the controversy over economic sanctions, the main black guerrilla group fighting the government announced a meeting with white businessmen to discuss South Africa's future.

In another development today, there was a report that eight members of the West German Greens Party occupied the West German Embassy in Pretoria, demanding an international economic boycott of South Africa.

The South African Press Association said the eight planned to stay in the embassy 48 hours. They said the Germans demanded that South Africa lift the state of emergency imposed July 21 on 36 regions to end persistent black riots against white rule.

SAPA said it received its information from an unidentified embassy spokesman. Reporters were not allowed to enter the embassy, and an unidentified man who appeared at the entrance said he could not answer questions.

Police reported today that rioting against apartheid, the legal system of racial segregation, had decreased.

Police in Cape Town said attackers twice threw gasoline bombs at the Hlengisa elementary school in the black township of Nyanga, with no casualties and limited damage in the pre-dawn assault.

Residents of Soweto, outside Johannesburg, said students by the hundreds roamed through the streets, pelting cars and police and army vehicles with stones. There were no reports of casualties.

President Reagan announced limited economic sanctions against South Africa on Monday. They include bans on most loans to the government, export of computers that could be used to enforce apartheid, and sale of most nuclear technology. He also was considering banning the import of South Africa's Krugerrand gold coin.

Business Day, the nation's leading business newspaper, described the sanctions as a warning shot across the government's bows. Addressing President P.W. Botha, the paper said: "Your government has pushed the world too far."

"The most powerful leader in the Western world is giving South Africa a clear and unequivocal political message: Reform must continue at a pace acceptable to the Western allies whether Pretoria likes it or not," said the Johannesburg daily that is taking an increasingly hard stand against the governing National Party.

Congress ready to move ahead with trade bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate sponsors of legislation to aid import-battered U.S. industries say they're ready to join forces and move ahead with their bills this month despite new Reagan administration initiatives on trade.

"I am very pessimistic that we're going to work anything out with the administration," Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo., said following a meeting late Monday among Senate leaders and President Reagan's trade representative, Clayton K. Yeutter.

Danforth disclosed that he and other Senate backers of trade legislation may attach a veto-threatened textile import quota bill onto needed legislation to raise the nation's debt limit.

That measure, requested by the Reagan administration, must pass by the end of the month or the government will lose its borrowing authority.

However, Senate leaders said they still anticipated a presidential veto, even if the textile protection bill and related measures are attached to the "must pass" debt limit bill.

The development came as administratiton officials reported they were considering a variety of additional trade measures — including loan subsidies for certain U.S. products — that go behond the steps announced by President Reagan in his Saturday radio address.

Yeutter, who had predicted a veto if Congress enacts the bill to impose quotas on textile imports, told reporters the administration was well aware of the mounting protectionist sentiment among lawmakers.

"It is apparent there is a great deal of concern on trade all over the country. That's not something we have to come to Capitol Hill to learn," he said after Monday's meeting with Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., Danforth and other senators active in trade issues.

"Clearly, trade is a very high priority issue — both with members of Congress and with the administration," he said.

Administration officials, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said presidential advisers are preparing a new package of trade measures for action within the next few weeks.

Among the proposals is a request to Congress for $300 million for the Export Import Bank — a program Reagan sought to scuttle earlier this year — to help provide low cost loans to U.S. manufacturers who are having difficulty marketing their products abroad, the officials said.

Midlanders seek investigation into appraisal district

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midlander Midge Erskine says she doesn't "question the need to raise taxes. What I'm questioning is the need to raise taxes at all if our taxes were equal and according to the law."

What disturbs Mrs. Erskine, however, is the often sight unseen values placed on land by the Midland County Appraisal District.

So she's taking her case to the Texas Attorney General's office.

Mrs. Erskine, along with about 20 other Midlanders, have asked Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman to request the attorney general investigate the Midland County Appraisal District and its procedures for assessing values on Midland County lands.

"People in $50,000 houses are being taxed at a much higher rate than people in $250,000 houses. That's morally wrong, plus its illegal under State law," Mrs. Erskine told Midland County Commissioners Monday during a public hearing to set the county tax rate at 19.96 cents per $100 of assessed value.

The hike represents a 7.9 percent increase over the 1984 effective tax rate.

Mrs. Erskine presented evidence she claimed to have collected from Midland County Appraisal District files which show "discrepencies" in assessed land values. The most obvious appear north of Midland in the Saddle Club Estates area, she said.

Data indicated land values in Saddle Club Estates are assessed at $1.50 per square foot while property in the less exclusive Saddle Club Lakes, Saddle Club North and Saddle Club South are assessed at $6, $4 and $2.25 respectively.

In addition, Mrs. Erskine charged the tax assessors office "accepted" assessments of lands owned by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation following the take-over of the now defunct First National Bank of Midland.

"They (Midland County Appraisal District) had eight appraisers who appraised their (FDIC) lands and the tax appraisers office accepted those appraisals," Mrs. Erskine said. "Under our law, the value is supposed to be based on fair market value. They should have changed the neighborhood tax value" as well.

Fitz-Gerald to preside over new court-at-law

By JULIE HILLRICHS

Fitz-Gerald

Midland County commissioners Monday named former Midland Municipal Court Judge James "Jim" Fitz-Gerald III judge of the newly created Second Midland County Court-at-Law.

The 53-year-old Fitz-Gerald, notified of his appointment shortly before noon Monday, said he was "more than pleased" by the appointment and is ready to start trying cases "one at a time."

Fitz-Gerald served as municipal court judge from 1979 until 1984, when he resigned his $45,864-a-year post in the wake of a Midland City Council mandate on court re-organization. He succeeded Bill Ahders, who resigned the job which he had held since 1968 to also become judge of Midland County.

The announcement of Fitz-Gerald's selection was made public following a unamimous vote of the Midland County Commissioner's Court and ended weeks of speculation. Also considered a potential candidate for the new judicial post was Leslie C. Acker, former Midland City and County Attorney.

Fitz-Gerald said he chose to apply for the position because "I enjoy judging most of the time."

TDC head orders lockdown in face of 'gang war'

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — More than 6,000 Texas prison inmates were confined to their cells today in an emergency lockdown prompted by escalating prison gang violence that left four inmates slain within a 24-hour period.

"We're at war," Texas Prison Director O.L. McCotter said Monday.

"Gang activity is at an alarming level. Our major concern is that it appears to be open warfare."

The four slayings pushed the total number of homicides in the nation's second-largest corrections system to 26, one more than last year's record of 25.

As of Monday, eight inmates had been killed in as many days.

"It's very tense," prison spokesman Phil Guthrie said Monday. "Any time you have a potential gang war going on, nobody plays by normal rules. We're sitting on a time bomb."

They say most of the recent violence stems from a war between two Hispanic gangs known as the Texas Syndicate and the Texas Mafia.

"Essentially what you have is two rival gangs struggling for supremacy and power over their peers," Guthrie said. "We have information that the two gangs are putting on a big recruiting drive."

The killings, he said, "are part of a code to demonstrate loyalty to the gang. Part of the initiation rite is that you beat someone or stab someone."

Prison officials estimate that about 750 of the the system's 37,000 inmates are active gang members. According to prison officials, from six to eight gangs are known to be active behind prison walls.

McCotter's lockdown order affected inmates in maximum, medium and close custody at 13 units around the state.

"We've got to put a stop to this now," McCotter said. "And I'll lock down every unit if I have to."

The units under lockdown orders are Darrington, Coffield, Eastham, Ferguson, Wynne, Ellis II, Huntsville, Clemens, Retrieve, Ramsey I, Ramsey II, Ellis I and Beto I.

■ Alfred Hughes selected as chairman of TDC board — Page 7A

The latest gang slaying Monday took the life of Leonel Perez, 31, serving an 8-year sentence for burglary.

Perez was stabbed 15 times, apparently with a 10-inch metal rod sharpened to a point that Brown said was found near his body. A 31-year-old Hispanic is suspected of the attack, Brown said.

On Sunday evening, three inmates were stabbed to death during an exercise period at the Darrington Unit, south of Houston.

The victims included Lloyd Jacquez, 24, serving a seven-year sentence for three burglary convictions; Jose Arturo Garcia, 24, serving a 12-year sentence for aggravated robbery; and Albert Carrillo Jr., 28, who was serving a 12-year sentence for burglary.

Two inmates were in custody for the stabbings. An 8-inch long flat piece of metal and a boning knife were found at the scene, Brown said.

Officials declined to give the gang affiliations of individual victims and attackers.

McCotter said that besides the lockdown, he had ordered known gang leaders segregated from population, accelerated reclassification of known gang members so they could be moved to higher-security cells, obtained a court order to restrict inmate-to-inmate mail exchange, and activated a special task force so local, state and federal authorities could share information.

He also said the Legislature would be asked to make the killing of an inmate a crime punishable by the death penalty.

"We very badly need that capability," McCotter said.

In addition, Al Hughes, who was elected chairman of the prison board Monday, said TDC officials ordered strict security measures over the Labor Day weekend because they feared a system-wide takeover by inmates.

Information about a potential Labor Day uprising was gleaned from informants and by screening mail between inmates, he said.

The takeover attempts never materialized.

Despite the rash of gang violence, Guthrie said Monday that prison officials were encouraged that the stabbing rate of 36 per month a year ago was now down to 24.

"On balance, overall, violence is lower," he said.

In addition, recent shakedowns of cells turned up fewer weapons, he said.

South Africa artful at dodging imposed sanctions

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — President Reagan's package of limited sanctions against South Africa falls on a country long accustomed to dodging the brickbats of a disapproving international community.

Despite a voluntary arms embargo approved 22 years ago by the United Nations and later made mandatory, South Africa has emerged as an arms exporter that touts its hardware, in particular the G-6 mobile cannon, at international arms fairs.

In response to an international oil embargo, started in 1977 by the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, South Africa has beefed up production of its oil-from-coal industry, Sasol.

South Africa, which has no natural oil resources, is secretive about its sources of oil. But three of Sasol's giant plants produce about 65,000 barrels a day, according to estimates by the Petroleum Economist magazine.

That is 20 percent to 25 percent of South Africa's estimated daily needs. The rest comes from clandestine imports, with huge stockpiles stored in unused mines.

South Africans often boast about how they can go it alone.

Robert Scott, head of the state's Energy Planning Department, announced in June that South Africa would be virtually independent of foreign oil supplies within the next five years.

He said, without giving details, that three new methods of producing synthetic gasoline were being developed, involving the conversion of natural gas, liquefication of coal and the distillation of oil from shale.

Defense Minister Magnus Malan had a similar message on arms, declaring this month that South Africa was 95 percent self-sufficient in military production. He maintained the other 5 percent was mere "tools and technical assistance," adding, "Within the foreseeable future even these will not be required."

But South Africa retreads aging British Chieftain tanks and restores French Mirage fighters. It buys used arms from Israel and dated electronic systems from Taiwan.

Allegations of arms smuggling emerge periodically. Earlier this year the government refused to send back to trial in Britain four South Africans.

The four said they were buyers for a South African electronics company, and they were.

But only after they were home did the government say their employer was owned by a communications company, which was a subsidiary of Armscor, the government armaments corporation.

In addition to evading sanctions itself, South Africa has also helped others do so.

South Africa gave oil to former white-ruled Rhodesia, now independent Zimbabwe, and provided export documents for Rhodesia's tobacco, all while the renegade British colony was the object of punitive sanctions in other parts of the world.

Rhodesia's tobacco reached some of its ardent foes, including India.

Rhodesia reported a 7 percent annual growth rate 10 years after the United Nations imposed sanctions in retaliation for the government's unilateral declaration of independence from Britain to avoid black rule.

The package of sanctions announced Monday by Reagan, including an import ban on Krugerrand gold coins, a ban on the export of computers for agenies that enforce apartheid, some bank loans and nuclear technology, were not as severe as the measures against Rhodesia.

But it was another blow for a government trying to fend off the international community. South Africa is already badly hit by the refusal of foreign bankers to renew loans because of worry that money is not safe in a country wracked by black rioting against apartheid, the government's racial discrimination policies.

The South African military is unlikely to run out of computers — it's a competitive market. But officials fear sanctions are snowballing.

Commented Foreign Minister R.F. Botha last week: "The world is closing in on us."

SANCTIONS

Business Day is regarded as South Africa's most influential English-language newspaper.

The paper appealed to the Botha government to heed the international demand to end apartheid.

Confirming reports that have surfaced in the past few days, the African National Congress guerrilla group said it planned a meeting with white South African businessmen.

"The businessmen have made contacts to meet us. We have agreed. They are coming," said Tom Sebina, a spokesman for the banned ANC in Lusaka, Zambia. He did not say when the talks would be held, but he said Lusaka was the likely location.

The executives, frustrated by the government's handling of the economy and a year of anti-apartheid rioting that has cost more than 650 lives, most of them black, say they have a right to talk about the region's future with blacks of all views.

But Botha says it would be "disloyal" for businessmen to talk to the ANC, which has waged a war of sabotage inside South Africa since the early 1960s.

Financial analysts in South Africa said Monday that most of the U.S. sanctions would have little practical effect on the economy. However, government officials were clearly worried they would fuel the international movement to use sanctions to force an end to apartheid.

The Star, Johannesburg's afternoon newspaper, said today in a page-one headline that Reagan's sanctions gave South Africa "breathing space." The Star editorialized that the sanctions are a "symbolic gesture," though it added the U.S. move could trigger sanctions from other nations.

The United States is one of South Africa's leading trading partners.

The Beeld, a pro-government Afrikaans-language daily that often reflects the thinking of Botha's party, said the U.S. sanctions were "basically more symbolic than hurtful...and more or less normal trade can go on."

Murphy Morobe, spokesman for the country's largest multiracial group opposed to apartheid, the United Democratic Front, called Reagan's moves "hollow" and "an imperialistic ploy."

Bishop Desmond Tutu, winner of the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize and black Anglican bishop of Johannesburg, said Reagan's measures were an attempt to circumvent stronger legislation.

"If he (Reagan) was my president ... I would be very ashamed of him," Tutu told The Associated Press. "If he is supporting a racist policy, doesn't it make him a racist?"

Leader orders probe into coup attempt

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanonda today announced a civilian-military investigation of the coup attempt against him and said he would insist on fair treatment of the suspects.

He said he was not certain of the guilt of former Prime Minister Kriangsak Chomanad, who at one point was accused of leading the insurrection Monday. Kriangsak is leader of one of the party's in Prem's coalition government.

Military sources said Kriangsak and two other suspected coup leaders — former Armed Forces Commander Gen. Serm Nanakorn and former Deputy Army Commander Yod Thephadsadin — would be taken to southern Thailand for an audience with King Bhumipol Adulyadej.

The monarchy is the country's unifying symbol and has figured prominently in other changes of government power in Thailand.

In Prem's first meeting with reporters since Monday's failed takeover bid, in which four people — including two American newsmen — were killed and 59 others injured, the 65-year-old leader said his government, "tried to use the softest measures to try to save lives and property...We gave even those who were misled a chance to correct themselves."

Government forces "avoided using harsh means so as to maintain national unity," Prem said.

Prem cut short a visit to Indonesia to return hours after the coup was suppressed Monday and made an emotional plea for unity. The country's other most powerful figure, Armed Forces Commander Gen. Arthit Kamlang-ek, rushed back from a European tour and arrived in Bangkok early today.

Prem also said today he thought the state of emergency declared in response to the coup attempt should be extended for a few more days. The emergency empowers authorities to detain suspects without arrest warrants.

Businesses were open and traffic choked Bangkok's streets today despite the emergency.

Prem said a joint civilian-military committee has been established to investigate the rebellion. He said he has directed authorities to give fair and just treatment to those suspected of involvement.

In Monday's short-lived insurrection by former military officers claiming economic failure of the government, rebel-manned tanks stormed the army radio station, triggering a 20-minute gunbattle with government forces. The rebels began surrendering about five hours later under a government ultimatum.

NBC News' Bangkok bureau chief, Neil Davis, and his soundman, Bill Latch, were among those killed in fighting between government troops and the rebels.

Also killed were a soldier and a civilian.

Military sources, speaking on condition they not be identified, said today that the government was told of the planned coup more than six hours before the radio station was seized.

Prem said he was not certain if Kriangsak, current leader of the National Democracy Party, was one of the coup leaders. Kriangsak's party is one of four in the governing coalition.

"I have only heard that he was inside the Supreme Command (which the rebels made their base) together with the others, but the committee will have to investigate this later on," he said.

The deputy defense minister, Paniang Kantarap, told reporters that two coup leaders flew to Singapore late Monday. He identified them as Col. Manoon Rubkachorn, a former battalion commander involved in an abortive 1981 coup, and his brother, Manat Rubkachorn, head of the air force's security force.

Singapore Foreign Ministry officials refused today to confirm the report.

The finance minister, Sommai Hoontrakul, said today that rebel complaints about Thailand's economic problems were "partially true, that I admit."

He said there were no quick solutions in sight to Thailand's budget deficit, growing foreign debts and slipping agricultural prices.

"The government realizes this country faces economic problems and we are trying to solve them," said Deputy Minister Veera Musikapong said.

But, he added, "The government doesn't seem to be moving fast enough to suit some people."

Veera also said coups fail to resolve anything since they change only the leadership and not basic economic conditions.

Prem has provided Thailand's 46 million people with unprecedented political stability after 19 coups and attempted coups in the last 53 years. He was first elected in 1980, then re-elected with a four-party coalition government in April 1983.

Congressmen want to halt test of weapon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon is scheduled to begin final testing of an anti-satellite weapon on Friday, but two Democratic congessmen plan to ask a federal court to halt the demonstration shot, sources say.

The Air Force weapon, which will be fired from beneath a high-flying F-15 jet fighter, will track down and destroy a seven-year-old scientific satellite over the Pacific Ocean, according to Capitol Hill and other sources who discussed the program Monday only on condition they not be identified.

But Reps. George Brown, D-Calif., and Joseph Moakley, D-Mass., planned to join with the Union of Concerned Scientists today in a lawsuit in U.S. District Court, seeking an injunction blocking the test.

TRADE

Under the proposal, the government would subsidize the difference between the going bank loan rate and the lower interest rates available to foreign competitors in their own countries.

Also under consideration, the sources said, are more aggressive use of an existing export subsidy program designed to make U.S. farm products more competitive with subsidized European Community products, and a call for an international meeting of industrialized nations to discuss monetary exchange rate problems.

The administration is determined to show a high level of activity on trade in the coming days to try to head off congressional passage of protectionist legislation, the sources said.

In his radio address last Saturday, Reagan announced he was taking actions against Japan, South Korea, Brazil and the European Economic Community — also known as the Common Market — in an effort to try to open markets in those nations to selected U.S. products now subject to restraints.

Dole said Reagan's actions were "not enough" to defuse the anger in Congress on trade, although he added: "The positive part is that the president has recognized that trade is a visible matter of concern."

"The administration has to do more than its done so far. I think they understand that," said Dole spokesman Walter Riker.

Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, sponsor of a bill to impose quotas on imported shoes — in response to the president's refusal late last month to take action on the shoe issue — said he is prepared to combine his legislation with the textile protection bill sponsored by Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C.

Both Cohen and Thurmond attended Monday's meeting with Yeutter.

UTPB classes delayed because of bomb threat

From Staff Reports

Classes at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin were delayed about two hours Monday after Odessa police reported a bomb threat shortly after 8 a.m.

An estimated 100 students and professors were evacuated from the university when a person, who identified herself as a white Anglo female, telephoned Odessa police and demanded the university lower its tuition by 9:30 a.m. or the bomb would explode at 9:45 a.m., UTPB President Dr. Duane Leach reported.

Students were allowed to return to class about 10 a.m. after police searched the buildings and found no explosive device.

Ellen Sawyer, executive director of university relations, said the woman also called representatives of the local media and asked that they report the incident while police were sweeping the buildings.

Ms. Sawyer said university officials are obligated to take seriously any threat against the school.

"Safety, of course, is the uppermost in our minds. We wouldn't want to endanger anybody," she said.

She added, "we will prosecute to the fullest extent of the law if we ever find the perpetrator of this kind of activity. We do not take it lightly. It's very disruptive."

Ms. Sawyer was unable to estimate the number of threats against the university in its 12-year history. However, she said "It's not a typical kind of thing to have happen. Fortunately."

TAXES

Mrs. Erskine added, other Midlanders "went in with receipts on land that they just purchased where they bought it at $20,000 and the tax was assessed at $40,000.

"Under the law, it's supposed to be assessed at fair market value, so the assessement office should have then changed it to $20,000. They did not do this," she charged. "If the land values show the discrepancies that they show, then your wild imagination probably will not be great enough to show what it is on the buildings."

But chief appraiser Roland Wilkinson defended his staff, noting that appraisals may vary depending on the "existing sales of comparable property, the size of the lot, construction costs" and other variables.

Wilkinson said the formula for determining property values is derived by adding the total value of the land and all structures located on it, less any depreciation.

Therefore, "the value of a home built in 1952 with metal or asbestos siding obviously would be different than an all-brick home built in 1982," Wilkinson said.

He added, "I'm not going to say that there are not going to be some inequities in the assessment of property in Midland County, but I do believe in the integrity of this staff. They're the most hardworking, honest people I've ever been associated with."

Commissioner C. Wallace "Wally" Craig, a former member of the Midland County Appraisal District Board of Directors, said "I'm not going to sit here and say that there are not some discrepancies. I couldn't agree more. There does need to be some changes, but I honestly believe they are making an effort to do it."

Mrs. Erskine disagreed. "If we had legal, proper assessed values on the property here in Midland, you'd have more money than you need for this year's budget," she said. "These things need to be changed. It'll give us such a big tax base if we would properly tax."

But commissioner Win Brown called the county's proposed 1986 budget of $14.3 million the "tightest its ever been in the 15 years I've been on the court.

"The county is in a crunch," he said. "We're proposing to raise the tax a little bit, but really not enough. We've gone back to our various departments and have asked them to trim their budgets one more time."

According to commissioner Durward Wright, the "largest single" budgetary increase came in the way of "unexpected expenses" incurred from transferring prisoners to other West Texas county jails. The overcrowdedness of the Midland County Jail and the maximum quota of 85 inmates, set by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards, led to the transfer which became effective April 23.

"All of this is mandated by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards," Wright said. "We're sort of caught between a rock and a hard spot and there's no place to go."

Earlier this year, Midland County voters rejected a $9.9 million bond issue to build an $8.4 million jail apart from the courthouse. Instead they authorized a $3 million bond issue, which includes about $2.4 million to renovate the existing jail, located on the fifth floor of the courthouse.

In an attempt to keep the tax-rate increase below 8 percent and provide a 3 percent pay raise to the county's workforce, commissioners authorized County Auditor Floyd Jarnagin to shave 2 percent off nonsalary line items in each of its 25 departmental budgets. The savings totaled about $6.76 million.

The commissioners also budgeted $6.56 million in salaries, $6.76 million for other expenses and nearly $1 million for the debt service.

Final adoption of the 1986 budget will follow a hearing tentatively set for Sept. 20.

Midland County taxpayers who wish to contest the current market values of their proerty may visit with Wilkinson or his appraisers in Suite 160 at Dellwood Mall or may call 699-4991.

Otherwise, they may make appointments with the Midland County Appraisal Review Board which has the sole authority to change the appraised values up to the time they approve the tax rolls, Craig said.

JUDGE

He added, he expects to formally take charge of his newly appointed position by Oct. 1. A formal swearing in ceremony has not been set.

The new county court-at-law was mandated by the 1985 Texas Legislature to accommodate increases in the county's case load. It is scheduled to be operative by Jan. 1, 1986.

Fitz-Gerald will share duties with Ahders and County Court-At-Law Judge Willie Dubose.

GRAPEVINE (AP) — The chairman of a House oversight panel says $3 billion that could enable airports to better detect hazardous weather is languishing in a federal airport trust fund.

Rep. Norman Mineta, D-Calif., said Monday that the government should stop "dragging its feet," and proceed with plans to deploy advanced weather radar systems.

The congressman, who heads the House Public Works and Transportation Subcommittee, was at the Dallas-Fort International Airport on Monday to tour the crash site of Delta Air Lines Flight 191.

"I'm trying to say 'don't keep holding back these funds,'" Mineta said. "Let's deploy what we've got right now because we've got the money to do it."

Despite his enthusiasm for more advanced radar systems, Mineta said he did no know if the equipment could have prevented the Aug. 2 Delta crash, which killed 135 people.

Mineta made the trip at the request of House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Fort Worth and Rep. Martin Frost, D-Dallas. Mineta will chair an Oct. 2 hearing that will include discussions on wind shear detection.

A wind shear is a violent change in wind speed and direction. The Delta L-1011 flew through a thunderstorm shortly before it crashed and federal investigators have said wind shear may have slammed it into the ground.

The National Transportation Safety Board and the FAA have not made an official ruling on the cause of the crash.

Mineta said there is about $3 billion in uncommitted funds in a national airport trust fund that derives its money from taxes levied on airline passengers.

Mineta accused the Office of Management and Budget of "dragging its feet" in recommending funding for advanced radar detection equipment at airports, and he questioned the Reagan administration's commitment to airline safety

Wright said there appears to be "a disturbing tendency to compromise safety for the sake of saving money." Wright said not using the trust fund money to improve airline safety "is callous disregard for the public's rights."

Jury selection to begin in trial of nursing home

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Jury selection began today in the trial of a nursing home and five employees accused of murdering an elderly patient by neglect.

Autumn Hills Convalescent Center Inc. and the five current and former workers pleaded innocent Monday to murder charges in the 1978 death of Elnora Breed, 87.

She died at the Autumn Hills center in Texas City after living there 47 days.

Attorneys say jury selection is expected to last several days, and the complexity of the case promises a months-long trial.

Defense lawyer Mike Ramsey said the unusually large pool of 200 prospective jurors was needed because of extensive publicity about the case — attention which prompted the trial to be moved to San Antonio.

The trial's predicted length also makes it difficult to find jurors, he said.

"When you talk to some poor devil about missing four, five or six months of work, it's hard to find a juror who can do that," he said.

Special grand jury indictments allege that two patients died because the defendants failed to report abuse and neglect of 61 other patients.

The indictments say the defendants failed to provide adequate care, nutrition, medication, bathing facilities and other services for the patients.

The indictments also accuse the company and workers of falsifying records, failing to adequately evaluate and supervise registered nurses and of failing to take appropriate action when they knew patients were not getting needed care.

The defendants are charged in the deaths of Mrs. Breed and Edna Mae Witt, 78, who also died in 1978. Prosecutors have not made a decision on whether to try the latter case pending the current trial's outcome.

Pleading innocent at Monday's formal arraignment were Autumn Hills president Robert Gay, 58; Ron Pohlmeyer, 41; Mattie Locke, 42, a nursing consultant; Virginia Wilson, 62, former administrator of the nursing home; and Cassandra Canlas, 31, former director of nursing services at the nursing home.

Defense attorneys maintain their clients are innocent, and have blasted the indictments' allegations as "absurd" and "incomprehensible."

In a key pretrial ruling Monday, State District Judge Don Morgan rejected a defense motion asking that reference to 61 patients who allegedly died or suffered neglect at the nursing home be stricken from the indictment.

The indictment claims the 61 cases were never reported to state authorities as required by law.

Defense attorney Ramsey said mention of the names to jurors will be "highly prejudicial and inflammatory." There is no evidence, he said, that if the cases had been reported Mrs. Breed would have lived.

But special prosecutor Jim Vollers said he believes a jury can be persuaded Mrs. Breed could have been saved.

The court proceedings are being held at the TraveLodge Hotel across the street from the Bexar County Courthouse. County commissioners designated three banquet rooms at the hotel as a district courtroom for the trial because there is no room at the courthouse.

Bus driver, passenger remain hospitalized

DENISON (AP) — The driver and a passenger of a Greyhound bus that rammed the back of a tractor-trailer rig and ran into a ditch remained hospitalized Monday night.

The accident occurred about 6 a.m. Monday near the Oklahoma border on U.S. Highway 75, said Steve Shatley, Department of Public Safety investigator.

The bus driver, Jeanette Nadine Bruno, 41, of Owasso, Okla., was pinned in the wreckage for nearly two hours before rescuers could free her, Shatley said.

She was in serious condition Monday night in the Texoma Medical Center intensive care unit in Denison, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Maria Rendon, 64, a passenger from Illinois, was reported in fair condition.

Fourteen other passengers and the truck driver were treated for minor injuries and released, hospital officials said.

The 28 passengers aboard the chartered bus were headed for San Antonio and Laredo after leaving Chicago at noon Sunday. The group was en route to visit relatives in South Texas, the DPS said.

Authorities said the bus hit the back of an 18-wheeler that had just pulled out of a truck stop. The bus went out of control and ran off the road into a shallow ditch.

Could American eagle gold coin outshine Krugerrand?

South African gold Krugerrand

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has ordered a study to determine if the government should do something it hasn't done in more than 50 years — mint a general purpose gold coin for sale to the public.

No final decision has been made, but supporters of the U.S. gold coin say there is a potential market for more than 2 million of the coins annually.

The president on Monday, as part of a set of sanctions against the government of South Africa, announced he was taking steps to ban further imports of that country's popular Krugerrand gold coin.

To placate U.S. gold investors, he directed Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III to report within 60 days on the "feasibility of minting an American gold coin" as an alternative to the Krugerrand.

The United States has not had a gold coin in general circulation since 1933, the year the country went off the gold standard, revoking the past practice of promising to redeem paper money in gold.

It wasn't until 1974 that Americans were even allowed to once again own gold.

Officials at the Treasury Department said Tuesday that no decisions had been made on what type of coin to recommend that Congress approve. However, there has been support in both the Senate and House for a proposal that would call for minting an American Eagle gold coin.

The coin gets its name from the fact that it would have the Seal of the United States with the eagle on one side and the image of Liberty taken from the popular 1908 $20 gold coin on the other side.

The House, as part of its package of sanctions against South Africa, passed legislation directing the Treasury Department to begin minting the Eagle gold coins on Oct. 1, 1986.

The legislation, which the Senate has not acted on, called for the gold coins to be classified as bullion coins, meaning their worth would be determined by the going price for the amount of gold they contained.

While the coins would be minted in denominations of $50, $25, $10 and $5, the price the government received for the coins would be much higher.

The $50 gold coin would contain one ounce of gold; the $25 coin would have one-half ounce; the $10, one-fourth ounce and the $5 would contain one-tenth of an ounce of gold.

At the going rate of gold on Monday, that would mean that the $50 gold piece would sell for more than $320.

Under the House bill, all U.S. gold coins would contain 92 percent pure gold with the rest made up of other alloys, generally copper. The coins would be the same size and weight as the Krugerrands.

The U.S. Mint already has had two limited forays into minting gold coins. Under authority of a 1982 law, it minted and sold 570,000 commemorative Olympic gold coins. The $50 coins, which contained about one-half ounce of gold, were sold for $352 each to help raise money for the Olympic Games.

A $5 gold piece is being minted and will go on sales this fall for $175 to help raise money to refurbish the Statue of Liberty. Officials say they expect to sell another 500,000 of these coins.

Rep. Frank Annunzio, chairman of the House Consumer Affairs and Coinage Subcommittee, said sales of the proposed American Eagle coins could easily top 2 million ounces annually, since Americans have been buying between 3 million and 4 million ounces of the Krugerrand, the Canadian Maple Leaf and the Mexican gold peso since 1979.

"It is not at all unreasonable to expect that a U.S. gold coin would easily displace half of the domestic market. Americans would rather buy a U.S. gold coin rather than a foreign coin," he said.

Black leaders push boycott to 'take profit out of apartheid'

WASHINGTON (AP) — American black leaders campaigning to force changes in South Africa's apartheid system say President Reagan's economic sanctions are far too weak to affect the ruling white minority in Pretoria.

Reagan's sanctions, proposed Monday, are just a start, the black leaders said while calling for a total U.S. economic boycott on South Africa.

"Take the profit out of apartheid," said the Rev. Jesse Jackson, a civil rights activist and unsuccessful Democratic presidential candidate in 1984. He told reporters Reagan's actions were too weak to have any effect on apartheid, the system of social and economic separatism imposed on the nation's 24 million blacks.

Jackson said he would try to organize dock workers at U.S. ports to stop loading or unloading ships carrying South African products.

"We feel he is taking a modest sanctions bill and turning it into a meaningless executive order," said Jean Sindab, director of the Washington Office on Africa, which has lobbied for years for firmer U.S. action against South Africa. The organization is supported by trade unions and churches.

She said an anti-apartheid measure that has passed the House — although not nearly strong enough — was better than the steps taken by Reagan.

The president's executive order will ban computer exports to South African military and law enforcement agencies; halt most exports of nuclear technology; prohibit loans to the South African government, except for those going to programs helping blacks; and move toward banning the importation of the Krugerrand, the South African gold coin.

To have any impact on white South Africans, Ms. Sindab said there should be "total, comprehensive economic sanctions" against South Africa.

"Nothing in, nothing out," added Jackson, who called trade "the jugular vein of apartheid."

Roger Wilkins, a scholar at the liberal Institute for Policy Studies and a founder of the "Free South Africa" movement, said "very strong sanctions" combined with aggressive diplomacy is the recipe the United States should follow.

The "Free South Africa" movement, founded late last year, has held protests five days a week outside the South African Embassy in Washington for more than nine months. It has organized other demonstrations around the country.

The sanctions, Wilkins said, should include "both carrots and sticks." For the short term, Wilkins suggested a total ban on all U.S. loans to the South African government and a boycott of Krugerrand sales. Reagan made his Kruggerand proposal subject to approval of an international trade alliance.

If the South Africans failed to take steps to dismantle apartheid, the United States could step up the pressure until a full-scale economic boycott was in effect, said Wilkins.

On the diplomatic front, Wilkins said the United States should be in "constant touch" with groups representing blacks and other mixed race peoples in South Africa.

The two most prominent groups, the Zambia-based African National Congress, and the United Democratic Front, have been banned by the South African government, and their leaders, Nelson Mandela and Allan Boesak, imprisoned there.

The U.S. goal, Wilkins said, should be to move into a "moral posture that would permit us to be an honest broker" in constitutional negotiations between all peoples of all races in South Africa.

Jackson also complained that Reagan has not developed a "meaningful dialogue" with black leaders in the United States who have long viewed South Africa as an important issue.

There is "fundamentally an apartheid attitude" from the White House toward black leaders, he said.

Rise in imports threatens apparel/textile industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — The world textile and apparel market is controlled more by foreign governments than by manufacturing efficiency and productivity, according to a new study commissioned by an American textile coalition.

The study, conducted by the Washington law firm of former deputy U.S. Trade Representative Alan Wolff, contends that the world market has been distorted in recent years by foreign governments acting in behalf of their domestic textile and apparel industries.

As a result, the study claims that the long-term viability of the U.S. textile and apparel industry is being threatened, even though American manufacturers are at least as productive and efficient as their foreign counterparts.

The study, which Wolff released Monday, was commissioned by the Fiber, Fabric and Apparel Coalition for Trade, a labor-industry group lobbying for the Textile and Apparel Trade Trade Enforcement Act, a bill by Rep. Ed Jenkins, D-Ga., to curb the growth of textile and apparel imports.

"The fact is that global textile and apparel trade is tightly managed by virtually all foreign governments," Wolff said. He argued that the realities of the world market make the current U.S. policy debate of free trade versus protectionism obsolete.

Wolff said the surge in imports since 1980 has been a leading factor in the closing of some 250 American textile and apparel plants and the loss of 400,000 jobs in the industry.

"If the United States fails to address this problem, it will, in effect, have chosen to allow the future of its textile and apparel industries to be determined by the decisions of foreign governments," the study said.

In recent years, according to the study, governments in many developing countries have assisted their textile and apparel industries as part of an export strategy that also includes severe limits on textile and apparel imports.

At the same time, demand for textile and apparel products has been declining in the industrialized nations, resulting in a "massive global capacity surplus."

European countries and Japan responded to such market changes by limiting or reducing imports from developing countries, the study said, leaving the United States with its less restrictive import policies to absorb 60 percent of the textile and apparel exports from developing countries.

As a result, the study said that from 1980 to 1984, the per capita value of textile materials imported from developing countries increased from $5.09 to $10.11 in the United States, while decreasing from $11.82 to $8.30 in the European Economic Community. Japan experienced a slight increase from $6.34 to $7.13.

Similarily, the study said the per capita value of clothing imports from developing countries from 1980 to 1984 increased from $25.56 to $56.63 in the U.S., while declining from $22.38 to $18.47 in Europe. Japan has an increase from $7.28 to $10.39.

The study discounted the impact of the strong dollar on the surge in imports, arguing that U.S. imports of textiles and apparel from developing countries increased by 60 percent in 1984, while imports of all other manufactured products from those countries increased by only 20 percent.

"From a policy perspective, the current import surge is significant because the U.S. textile industry is at least as productive and efficient, if not more so, than those of the EEC or Japan," the study said.

Danish leader sour on U.S. protectionism

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prime Minister Poul Schluter of Denmark is appealing to President Reagan to resist the protectionist fever spreading through Congress and maintain his position in favor of free trade.

As Reagan's lieutenants search for ways to seize the trade initiative to forestall growing pressure from Capitol Hill, trade is likely to be one of the prime topics Schluter discusses with the president during their Oval Office talks.

Schluter arrived in the nation's capital Monday for a two-day series of meetings with the president, various Cabinet secretaries and the House and Senate foreign affairs committees. He flew a commerical airliner from Denmark to New York, where he was picked up by an aircraft from the U.S. presidential fleet.

Though Schluter and Reagan normally see eye to eye on trade, Danish officials fear the tough congressional pressure will shake the presidential resolve, and point to his radio address on Saturday as evidence.

In that speech, Reagan said he would take actions against Japan, South Korea, Brazil and the Common Market to try to open markets in those nations to selected U.S. products now subject to restraints.

"The speech has only accentuated the problem," said Jorgen V. Larsen, press officer at the Danish Embassy, about Reagan's radio address.

"Denmark has for generations been a staunch supporter of free trade, so we look with much concern at recent developments (toward protectionism)," he added.

Larsen said Denmark wanted Reagan to "stick to his principles of free trade because we are convinced free trade has always in the long run proven to be mutually advantageous to Europe and the United States."

While Reagan has always said he would resist protectionism, he is facing a growing rebellion in Congress from independent-minded Republicans as well as Democrats on a host of issues, including trade.

As a result, the administration is considering asking Congress for $300 million to help subsidize exports by U.S. manufacturers, according to U.S. officials.

The proposed request for additional funds for the Export Import Bank, a program the president originally sought to scuttle, is part of a package of additional trade measures being assembled by top Reagan advisers, said administration officials who spoke on condition of anonymity.

There are nearly 300 trade bills pending in Congress.

British Commonwealth applauds sanctions

Associated Press

The British Commonwealth cheered President Reagan's order that economic sanctions be imposed against South Africa as "a major leap forward" in the campaign against apartheid, but the Soviet Union mocked it as "cosmetic."

Reactions to Reagan's announcement Monday varied in other countries. Britain, one of the main opponents of sanctions, said it still considered them counterproductive.

In South Africa, black Anglican Bishop Desmond Tutu, winner of the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize, said Reagan only imposed the limited measures to cut off stiffer legislation planned by Congress.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, said Reagan "today announced the introduction of so-called 'economic sanctions' against the apartheid regime in South Africa. The proclaimed measures are purely of a cosmetic nature and can be simply ignored by Pretoria."

Reagan announced that he will ban the import of South African gold coins, and prohibit most loans to the South African government, exports of computers that could be used to enforce apartheid, and the sale of most nuclear technology.

In London, Sir Shridath Ramphal, secretary-general of the British Commonwealth, said the 49 countries in the group "generally will welcome President Reagan's acceptance of the principle of economic sanctions against South Africa."

"The measures themselves are a small step, but in taking them the U.S. administration will help the world to make a major leap forward toward justice and human dignity in southern Africa," he said.

South Africa left the Commonwealth in 1961 when it became clear it was about to be expelled for its failure to grant equal rights to the majority black population.

But a spokesman for Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain, speaking on condition of anonymity, said, "There's no doubting our revulsion at the policy of apartheid," but "we judge sanctions as likely to be counterproductive."

The announcement of U.S. sanctions prompted opposition parties to fiercely criticize Mrs. Thatcher's Conservatives.

Denis Healey, foreign affairs spokesman for the Labor Party, said Britain had been "completely isolated in the Commonwealth" in opposing sanctions and now was "practically isolated inside NATO, too."

The leader of the Britain's centrist Social Democratic Party, David Owen, speaking at the party's annual conference in Torquay, said:

"Mrs. Thatcher, by clinging like a limpet to President Reagan, by behaving as if we are the 51st state, has led us to one of the most humiliating foreign policy rebuffs" since World War II.

"Mrs. Thatcher is a puppet whose strings have been ruthlessly cut even by President Reagan," he said.

Britain's foreign secretary, Sir Geoffrey Howe, said on arriving in Luxembourg for a meeting of the European Common Market that the ministers would "study carefully" the U.S. sanctions.

"We share the U.S. aim of wanting to avoid measures that are destructive to the South African economy," he said. "We therefore remain opposed to mandatory economic sanctions."

Canada's foreign affairs minister, Joe Clark, said he approved of the U.S. sanctions and that they were "by and large" the same as those Canada imposed in July.

Clark told the House of Commons in Ottawa that Canada is prepared to resort to the "full disruption of economic and diplomatic relations" to end apartheid in South Africa if other measures fail.

In the Netherlands, Finance Ministry spokesman Jaap Weeda said the government Monday reduced the limit that it would insure business contracts with South Africa.

Weeda said the government cut its credit reinsurance maximum from the equivalent of $151.5 million to $60.6 million. Dutch firms doing business abroad commonly insure their contracts with the Dutch Credit Corporation, which in turn is reinsured for its risk by the government.

EEC not likely to impose South Africa sanctions

WORLD

"If the EEC fails to take effective measures against South Africa it will have chosen to come to the aid of the apartheid regime at its time of greatest need."
— Coaltion of anti-apartheid groups

LUXEMBOURG (AP) — Foreign Ministers from Europen Common Market countries met today to discuss South Africa's racial crisis, but it appeared unlikely they would impose stiff economic sanctions against the white-minority government.

A Belgian official said as the meeting got under way that his government wanted the Common Market to make clear its strong opposition to South Africa's policy of forced racial separation, known as apartheid.

But he stressed that the Belgium government believed full-scale economic sanctions, such as cutting off trade with South Africa, "would be politically, economically and socially counter-productive." The official spoke on condition that he not be identified.

On Monday, President Reagan announced a package of limited economic sanctions by the United States, including the banning of most loans to the South African government and limiting trade in computers and nuclear technology.

Peter Barry, the Irish foreign minister, said as he entered the Common Market meeting that Ireland was "very disturbed at the situation that has developed there." But he did not indicate he favored economic sanctions.

It appeared more likely that the ministers would adopt a series of mostly symbolic actions such as withdrawing military attaches from South Africa.

Britain told its Common Market partners Monday that it would oppose any sanctions against South Africa, reflecting the continuing deep divisions among Western nations about the value of economic sanctions.

Some European nations, as well as Canada and Australia, have already imposed sanctions. Three Common Market foreign ministers visited South Africa 10 days ago to prepare a report for today's meeting.

Sir Geoffrey Howe, the British foreign secretary told reporters Monday: "We share the U.S. aim of wanting to avoid measures that are destructive to the South African economy" and that Britain therefore opposed to mandatory sanctions.

Pressure is building in Europe, however, for the Common Market to take a tougher stance.

In Brussels, a coalition of 13 anti-apartheid groups from eight Common Market nations urged the foreign ministers to adopt strong measures.

"If the EEC fails to take effective measures against South Africa it will have chosen to come to the aid of the apartheid regime at its time of greatest need," the coalition said in a statement released in Brussels.

Spain and Portugal will join in the session because they become Common Market members next January.

Britain and West Germany have said they believe economic sanctions would not be productive. British investments in South Africa are estimated at $14.5 billion, fully one-third of the foreign stake there, while West Germany is the No. 2 exporter to South Africa, behind the United States.

Among the 12 nations represented in Luxembourg, France is the most vocal in support of joint sanctions against Pretoria. Last July 24 Paris announced it was withdrawing its ambassador from South Africa and banning all new commercial investment there.

However, France did not suspend its growing trade with South Africa.

The Common Market ministers failed to agree on joint sanctions against Pretoria during an informal meeting in Helsinki in late July. It was at that meeting that the fact-finding mission was set up.

The ministers also agreed in Helsinki to withdraw their nations' ambassadors from South Africa for consultations on the state of emergency and the growing racial violence.

Despite the Common Market governments' strong objections to apartheid, their commercial relations with South Africa have made them wary of imposing sanctions.

'Beach marks' found on wall of airplane

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese investigators have discovered traces of metal fatigue in a pressure wall on the Japan Air Lines jumbo jet that crashed last month, killing 520 people, a Japanese newspaper said today.

A rupture in the wall, called the aft pressure bulkhead, has been cited as a possible cause of the crash, history's worst single-plane disaster.

The national newspaper Asahi Shimbun reported that Transport Ministry investigators found "beach marks" — traces of metal fatigue — from a microscopic "replica," molded from the bulkhead plate.

"Fatigue" refers to the progressive deterioration of metals caused by a repetition of low intensity stress. Such pressure could result in a sudden crack, through which pressurized air could rush into the non-pressurized tail section, bursting through the vertical fin, ripping the rudders and damaging the hydraulic systems.

Investigators, unable to easily transport wreckage from the crash site, have molded the model and subjected it to detailed laboratory study.

In a separate article, the Mainichi Shimbun, another nationwide newspaper, reported that Boeing Corp. did not fix five dented surfaces on the bulkhead plate after a landing mishap in 1978, and only conducted "patchwork" repairs on the plate, made of aluminum alloy.

The reports in the Asahi and Mainichi followed an announcement by Boeing over the weekend that it had made faulty repairs to the crashed aircraft after the 1978 mishap, when the aircraft's rear section scraped the runway on landing. When Boeing technicians replaced about half of the bulkhead plate, one of three rows, or about 17 percent, of the rivets were not inserted properly, Boeing said.

Transport Ministry officials refused to comment on the reports, saying they would announce the results of metal fatigue tests and further analysis of voice and flight recorders by the end of this week in a second interim report.

It was not possible to get immediate reaction from Boeing, which is based in Seattle, Wash.

The crashed plane was a Boeing 747SR, a special 747 version flown only by Japanese airlines.

JAL announced Monday that it has grounded all four of its SR's to conduct a detailed, two-month inspection of the pressure cabin walls, including the pressure bulkheads.

At the crash site atop 5,408-foot Mount Osutaka, 70 miles northwest of Tokyo, a second team of six U.S. investigators from the National Transport Safety Board, the Federal Aviation Administration and Boeing arrived today to examine the bulkhead, Gumma Prefectural (state) police said.

The team, led by Mike Marx of the National Transport Safety Board, replaced a nine-member team that left Japan on Sept. 2.

At Fujioka city, near the crash site, police officers helping with the identification of bodies discovered a flight attendant's notebook in which were written instructions of what to announce after a forced landing.

Written in Japanese and English, Yumiko Tsushima's notes read: "Keep calm. Take off your seat belts. Don't take baggage with you. Check usable doors and fires outside the aircraft. Take off your high-heeled shoes. Jump and sit (inside the emergency chute). Get away from the plane. Please lend a hand to the aged and handicapped.

Message of hope

The mail brings an envelope bearing the acronym of a new "worthwhile" organization and a subliminal message of hope.

The new organization is known as BRADD which stands for Beverage Retailers Against Driving Drunk. First reaction to BRADD surely must be "It's about time" and, without a doubt, it is.

With concern appropriately heightened for the number of Americans seriously injured or killed each year in alcohol-related automobile crashes, there has been a growing emphasis on greater penalties for those motorists convicted of driving while intoxicated and for a serious reduction in the number of individuals who will take a chance of having too many drinks and then getting behind the wheel of a vehicle.

That's all well and good. It's a good bet that the heightened consciousness of the dangers of mixing alcoholic beverages and driving will bring about at least a measurable amount of social pressure that probably will result in fewer accidents which involve drunken drivers. But stopping at that point would be a little optimistic.

From the television, radio, newspaper and periodical ads to the television programs and movies Americans — young and old alike — view, the message is transmitted over and over again that alcoholic beverages are chic and that unless a person consumes them he will not find personal happiness, social acceptance or the mate of his dreams. Over a period of years that message has become ingrained into the American lifestyle. Some people apparently believe it.

Only now, there is a recognized need for a change because the tragic statistics have made it more than obvious that Americans don't always consume their alcoholic beverages wisely. Bringing about a change that will transmit the message that drinking alcoholic beverages is okay — but only at certain times and in certain places, with responsibility — won't be easy.

That's why it's encouraging to see the formation of an organization such as BRADD, whose founding members included S&A Restaurant Corp., the National Association of Convenience Stores, W.R. Grace Restaurant Group, Sigel Liquor Stores, General Mills Restaurant Group, Inc., Majestic Liquor Stores, Inc., National Convenience Stores Inc., Miller Brewing Co., The Southland Corp., VICORP Specialty Restaurants, Inc., Howard Johnson Co., and Chili's, Inc.

This is the day of public responsibility for one's actions. In that light, it's refreshing to see this new organization founded by companies with vested interests. We wish them enormous success — for society's own good.

No ordinary donkey

Sonette the donkey will soon have a mate.

The rare French ass was last year's cause celebre. No sooner had the 5-month-old animal debarked on the Los Angeles docks than federal officials ordered her destroyed and returned to France because she failed equine disease tests.

Veterinarian owners Sharon and Jack Vanderlip fought to save Sonette — in French, "Little Bell" — arguing that exotic breeds do not respond to run-of-the-mill tests.

She was quarantined and brought to the San Diego Zoo, where 11th-hour testing saved her life.

After USDA officials gave her a clean bill of health, champagne was uncorked in the zoo hospital. The floppy-eared donkey greeted the news with indifference, chomping carrots for the cameras.

Now the Vanderlips plan to fly to France in November to pick up a male Poitou donkey to join Sonette at their Olivenhain ranch.

Just a yearling, she will have to wait a few years to become a maman.

Since her reprieve, shaggy Sonette has been invited to march in parades, to visit the Johnny Carson show and to lend her name to a plastic toy.

After November, as she makes her celebrity rounds, at least she'll have a stable mate at home.

Vive la romance!

No winning number

As August's record $41 million jackpot in New York illustrated, state-run lotteries are the fastest-growing form of gambling in the United States. According to the trade magazine Gaming & Wagering Business, lotteries last year had total revenues of $4.1 billion, with total wagering up 37 percent over 1983. That put lotteries in third place among all commercial gambling endeavors, with 22 percent of an $18.8 billion U.S. market. Casinos, with $5 billion in 1984 revenues, came in second. Bets may now be placed on which kind of gambling finishes first.

No, not horse racing. The sport of kings finished well back in the pack with revenues of just under $2 billion. Bingo and charitable gambling were even farther behind.

The winner, and still grand champion, with $5.2 billion in revenues and almost 28 percent of the market — illegal betting. Those who picked it may collect their winning from their friendly neighborhood bookie or numbers runner. For even where legal gambling thrives — some say especially there — so too do practitioners of the illegal forms.

The myth — one that has helped persuade many states to adopt lotteries — is that legal gambling allows taxpayers to profit from and government to police an activity that occurs anyway. But even the officials who run state lotteries concede that their games do little to discourage illegal gambling or the unsavory elements that control it.

In Maryland, for example, the state lottery director says his games have cut into the illegal numbers game by "no more than 20 percent." Indeed, many illegal games there now rely on the state lottery's winning numbers to determine their own winners.

The reasons illegal gambling continues to grow in the face of legal competition are that it often pays a higher and more immediate return to winners and doesn't require the reporting of big payoffs to the tax collector. Some students of the issue also contend that many illegal gamblers are people who were introduced to betting by legal games. That's just one more negative aspect of the lottery story which tends to get drowned out by the hoopla over big jackpot payoffs.

Defectors' warnings worth notice

It's funny, considering the liberal criticism of Ronald Reagan for the military buildup, but every Soviet defector when he comes over to the side of freedom says exactly what Reagan and the rest of us hawks have always said: be strong.

Charley Reese

Arkady Shevchenko is the highest ranking Soviet official ever to defect. He was Under Secretary General of the United Nations when he defected in 1978. He had risen high in the Soviet bureaucracy and had close professional relationships with Soviet leaders Brezhnev, Andropov and Gromyko. He believes his wife was murdered after his defection. She was taken back to the Soviet Union by the KGB which later reported she had committed suicide. Shevchenko himself has been sentenced to death in absentia but declined the U.S. offer of a new identity and goes around the country trying to wake Americans up. His book is a best seller.

I ran across an interview with him conducted by "Southern Partisan" magazine and just a few of his comments will show you how closely his views parallel those of American conservatives.

Shevchenko said in reply to the question, what is the best way for the American government to prevent nuclear war:

"Be extremely strong. That is what they understand. That is why they are not now willing to launch any kind of first strike against the United States, because of American strength. Presently, their global strategy is to reach their objectives without nuclear war ... But for almost a decade the United States has neglected its nuclear potential. In my view, this neglect could eventually lead to the rethinking of the whole Soviet strategy."

One of the liberal themes is that the Soviet Union has no plan for global conquest.

Shevchenko says, "Yes, they do. This has been a big misunderstanding in the West, especially among the people who have been dealing with the Soviet Union. The Soviets have never abandoned the final global aim of victory in the competition between two systems. This is their ultimate goal, to win the competition, to enforce their system on the people of the world."

How about an arms control treaty, another fixation of liberals?

Shevchenko says, "Whatever they agree to, if they agree to control of freeze weapons, they will be lying, trying to deceive the whole world in agreeing to a freeze."

Shevchenko also says that the KGB has penetrated every aspect of American society — government, business, and the mass media. He warns Americans to avoid the World Council of Churches.

I suppose American liberals will call Shevchenko a rightwing nut who sees a Communist under every bed. It has always amused me how Americans disdain the words of Soviet insiders like Shevchenko, Andre Sakharov, and Alexander Solzhenitsyn. Only an English speaking American liberal who has never been to the Soviet Union would be so arrogant as to claim to know more about the Soviet Union than its own citizens.

Lev Navrosov, another Soviet dissident now in America, is not nearly so polite as Shevchenko. Navrosov says that American experts on the Soviet Union are parroting Soviet propaganda that people in the Soviet Union stop believing at about the age of 11. Being a foreigner, he didn't realize that most American liberals have the mentality of a 10-year-old.

'Medicare millionaires' on rise

WASHINGTON — For an elderly person whose vision is failing because of cataracts, the restoration of sight is a jewel beyond price. But that doesn't excuse eye doctors who have become "Medicare millionaires" by getting fat off their patients and the federal government performing cataract operations.

Jack Anderson

These greedy few have taken advantage of archaic Medicare reimbursement methods to submit unconscionable overcharges for the surgical implantation of intra-ocular lenses that correct cataracts. And because of current reimbursement practices, the Department of Health and Human Services has no choice but to pay.

In a recent review of 38 ophthalmologists in six states — California, Texas, Florida, New York, Pennsylvania and Washington — the HHS inspector general found that 10 had become millionaires through the cataract operations.

Nationwide, the lens-implant operation is the most common major surgical procedure reimbursed by Medicare. It is estimated that at least a million Americans will undergo the procedure this year alone, at a cost to Medicare of about $3 billion.

In fact, the internal inspector general report, obtained by our associate Tony Capaccio, predicts: "Unchecked, cataract surgeries will increase to 2 million procedures and cost the taxpayer nearly $6 billion (in) 1990."

The wild card that allows eye surgeons to rake in the big bucks is the recent technological improvements that have made the implant operation as simple as it is effective. It is now a 30-minute outpatient procedure; when it was first developed in the late 1970s, it required three to six days in the hospital.

But the Medicare reimbursement rates were set when the operation was still experimental and could be performed by only a handful of surgeons. And as long as the rates are still in effect, some ophthalmologists will continue to charge the legal limit and become what the inspector general report calls "Medicare millionaires."

"A surgeon may now perform as many as 10 to 15 operations in a day," the inspector general notes. "Neither the medical profession nor Medicare has acknowledged these technological advances and efficiencies by reducing the charges or payments associated with cataract surgery."

That's not all. "Medicare is paying over $500 million each year in unnecessary costs, including discounts such as rebates and kickbacks (from lens manufacturers) that are not being passed on to the government," the report points out. It concludes that "overcharging for the lenses and inflating the costs of surgery ... are almost universal."

One of the 10 millionaires reviewed by the inspector general was a Florida eye surgeon whose clinic performed more than 5,000 implant operations last year, for which he was reimbursed $6.4 million by Medicare.

A Texas surgeon got $1.3 million from Medicare for implants last year, according to the inspector general's office. He received 1,600 free lenses from a manufacturer in exchange for the use of his name in its advertisements. He then submitted claims for reimbursement of $80,000 for the lenses. Medicare paid $64,000 of this, and the surgeon's patients were billed for the rest.

For several years, the American Intra-Ocular Implant Society has urged its members to reflect all discounts, rebates and bonuses from manufacturers when they submit reimbursement claims to Medicare. But the inspector general's auditors concluded that this advice is being largely ignored.

The lucrative business of lens implants has made older Americans "the target of an advertising blitz by hospitals and physicians," the inspector general reported, adding: "This is the first time a Medicare procedure has been so aggressively marketed by so many different components of the health care community."

EXECUTIVE MEMO: Civil libertarians fear the Reagan administration will begin to dismantle affirmative-action programs in the federal government. They note that Education Secretary William Bennett did just that when he headed the National Endowment for the Humanities. Even more unnerving was the appointment of James C. Miller to take over the Office of Management and Budget. As chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, Miller refused to comply with affirmative-action goals and timetables. Critics are afraid that as budget boss Miller will be able to rewrite affirmative-action policies for all 110 federal agencies.

MINI-EDITORIAL: We are great advocates of the notion that government ought to leave the private sector alone, but it may be time the drug industry was given a dose of discipline. Last July, Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., chairman of the health and environment subcommittee, lamented soaring prescription prices and accused the industry of gouging "the sick, the poor and the elderly." Recently, Eli Lilly & Company pleaded guilty to failing to inform the government that 28 deaths overseas had been linked to its arthritis drug Oraflex. The $3-billion-a-year firm was fined a piddling $25,000. We think it's time for tougher laws and tighter regulation of the pharmaceutical companies.

Fall offensive turning defensive

WASHINGTON — Transformation of a fall offensive promised last month in Santa Barbara into the fall defensive that actually emerged last week in Washington poses a test with far-ranging consequences for President Reagan and White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Returning lawmakers, particularly in the Republican-controlled Senate, are in a contemptuous mood about Ronald Reagan that faintly evokes the bad old days of Jimmy Carter. The consensus on Capitol Hill, widely shared in his own administration, is that the president can only save himself by abandoning his inmost convictions. Many of the same voices call for the head of his sometimes imperious chief of staff.

That formula suggests abject surrender to Majority Leader Robert J. Dole and other Senate Republican leaders by offering at least some trade protection, soft-pedaling tax reform, approving South African sanctions and at least talking about the budget deficit. Surely no fall offensive, that is not even defensive. It is downright defeatist.

Surrender on such a plane to the Washington establishment by a president who won an historic landslide last November does not seem ridiculous considering public postures of Republican senators. Minnesota's Rudy Boschwitz goes on national television to pledge non-cooperation with the president. Missouri's John Danforth pleads a family party for failing to appear with Reagan on a Labor Day visit to his state. North Carolina's Jesse Helms tells reporters he finds no support for tax reform.

The profusion of such incidents, crowned by Dole's pledge to pass import protection whether the president wants it or not, has destabilized Washington. Choosing an easy target for a cheap shot, Republican insiders blame this state of affairs on Don Regan, spurred by their belief that Nancy Reagan thinks less of him than of his predecessor, James A. Baker III.

True, Regan is a political novice with a king-sized ego who has blundered plenty since replacing Baker early this year. The drumbeat of gripes about Regan inside the White House can be traced to his failure to establish personal rapport with important staffers. Indeed, the mere idea of a "fall offensive," made at a partially-televised staff meeting in California, revealed a mood that was defensive from the outset.

But Regan's real fault, if his critics were open about it, is refusing to coerce the president into the embrace of Washington's bipartisan consensus. Whereas Jim Baker worked smoothly with then-Majority Leader Howard Baker, Regan never has gotten along well with Dole. Although they did meet privately for lunch Friday, nobody expected anything approaching agreement on a legislative agenda.

Regan is blamed for that. He was also criticized for his stance at Friday morning's senior White House staff meeting. When it was suggested that fallback positions ought to be prepared for possible failure of tax reform — the second term's principal Reagan initiative — he responded angrily that he had far from abandoned hope for it.

That unBaker-like attitude has endeared Don Regan to knowledgable Reaganites who also find his door more open to them than was Baker's. Yet Reaganite admirers wish the chief of staff would press his boss to take hard ideological positions, which Regan is not doing. What he is doing is being staunch about carrying out whatever the man in the Oval Office wants.

That leaves Ronald Reagan, rebuked here more than ever before as a president neither caring nor knowing what is going on, as the key player on Washington's autumn stage. By all accounts, he has emerged from his cancer recuperation physically and intellectually refreshed. Hard positions on South Africa and shoes are clearly his own.

He is out of step with both Republicans and Democrats in Congress, whose positions on taxes, protectionism, farm subsidies, voting rights and South Africa seem virtually identical and strikingly similar to Walter F. Mondale's campaign themes. Some presidential advisers are not joking when they say there is one big political party on Capitol Hill that seems to want to get as far away from the president as possible.

But the shunned president has a 65 percent popularity rating and presides over an economy where unemployment is falling and inflation is holding firm with prospects for economic growth ahead. The test for the second term is whether Reagan, using Regan's help and the formidable powers of his own will, holds firm and abandons the mindset of a fall defensive.

Austin man elected TDC board chairman

Alfred Hughes

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Alfred Hughes, an Austin businessman with little expertise in running a prison system, has been elected chairman of the Texas Board of Corrections.

Hughes was unanimously elected Monday by the prison board to succeed Robert Gunn, who quit last month after complaining about political interference from Gov. Mark White.

Hughes, 44, was appointed to the board by White in February.

"I don't have a lot of expertise," he acknowledged. "My strongest point is in regard to construction — getting the job done quickly and economically.

"This will challenge all of my abilities," he said.

The Texas Department of Corrections, the nation's second largest prison system, is embarking on a crash building program to comply with federal court limits on population during a time of explosive growth.

"My biggest challenge is to get the facilities up and on line" so an inmate classification program can be completed and the more violent inmates can be put in the most secure institutions, Hughes said.

"We need some cells for the real hard-core cases," he said.

Gunn, a 60-year-old Republican, was appointed by former Gov. William Clements. Gunn has said he plans to campaign for one of White's political rivals, Rep. Tom Loeffler, a candidate for the 1986 GOP gubernatorial nomination.

"Bob did a super job," Hughes said, adding that Gunn would leave a lasting impression on the prison system. "I couldn't say enough about him."

Saying Gunn had tried to do too many things himself, the new chairman said he would delegate more duties to other board members.

"We'll have a very active board," he said. "The only thing this board needs is to be given more opportunities."

Hughes, who attended the University of Texas but did not graduate, said he owns 21 companies, including Professional Health Facilities Inc., which operates health care clinics.

He also is chairman of Hughes Corp., a real estate and investment firm, and director of InterFirst Bank of Austin as well as a past director of the Austin Jaycees.

He said he favors building detention centers similar to halfway houses in the Dallas-Fort Worth area for inmates whose prison terms were short.

Detention centers could free about 600 cells for the most violent prison inmates, he said.

Hughes said he suggested the Dallas-Fort Worth area because about 40 percent of the state's prison inmates come from there.

Austin Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, right, and Dallas Rep. Paul Ragsdale speak out on teen pregnancies at an Austin press conference Monday. They said community leaders must show young blacks that sex is not the only "free entertainment" available

Blacks speak out on teen pregnancies

AUSTIN (AP) — A black women's organization and two lawmakers hope that adult "role models" will be able to persuade teen-agers that sex is not the only "free entertainment" available.

They suggested teens try sports instead.

The National Council of Negro Women is counting on its new program — which matches black teens with adult counselors — to cut the pregnancy rate among teens.

Austin State Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, an honorary co-chairwoman of the program, said sports could be offered as an alternative to sex.

Teen pregnancy is a problem throughout society, not just in the black community, she said at a Monday news conference.

"There are a couple of reasons why people do this. Once I heard young people say, 'Well it's the only free entertainment.' It may be, but it isn't something like you go to a movie and when you leave the movie you're through. This has a tremendous impact," said Mrs. Delco, a member of the Legislative Black Caucus.

"It's not really free. You take a chance. It's like Russian roulette. You take a chance every time you have that free entertainment of producing a child that could alter your life for the rest of your life," she said.

The challenge is to show young people the "alternatives to sex as entertainment," said Mrs. Delco, mentioning basketball, football and women's sports as possibilities.

"For years for young people, sports have been a healthy, acceptable alternative. We have kind of let that go down in favor of TV," she said. "We need to find some other physically attractive and physically absorbing activities."

Dallas Rep. Paul Ragsdale, honorary co-chairman of the project, offered statistics showing that almost one of four black females become pregnant before age 18. Among 18- and 19-year-olds, the pregnancy rate for blacks is five times the rate for whites, according to the statistics.

Among younger teen-agers, the black pregnancy rate is eight times that of whites, he said.

"We are here today to address a problem that has grown to epidemic proportions in black communities across the United States and Texas," said Ragsdale, chairman of the Black Legislative Caucus.

Sierra Club straddles fence on water plan

AUSTIN (AP) — A key environmental group, the Sierra Club, plans to straddle the fence in the Nov. 5 election fight over ratification of the proposed $1.4 billion statewide water plan.

Comparing the plan to half a glass of water, club chairman Howard Saxion said the group couldn't decide whether to consider the glass half full or half empty.

"There's some good things in it and some bad things in it," Saxion said Monday. "We leave it to the voters to decide whether the water in the glass should be accepted, added to or poured out."

The Sierra Club, Texas' largest environmental group, also hammered Gov. Mark White over what it said was his failure to provide leadership on water problems.

"What appalled us somewhat was that at the outset of the legislative session, the governor said, 'A water package is my No. 1 priority,' and left it at that. If he had taken a more active role throughout this, we might have come out with a better package," said Ken Kramer, Sierra Club lobbyist.

White, who was attending a Southern Governors Association meeting in Miami, didn't respond directly to the criticism.

In a statement issued by aides, White said, "I am pleased the Sierra Club has identified elements of the proposed Texas water plan that it can support."

The water plan is made up of two proposed constitutional amendments. One would authorize $980 million in bonds for water development projects and extend $250 million in state credit to guarantee local government projects. The second would authorize $200 million in bonds for loans to farmers buying water-saving irrigation equipment.

Some of the plan's backers have feared strong environmentalist opposition to the long-negotiated proposal. Three earlier plans failed when put to voters. But the Sierra Club's neutrality left only the Audubon Society and the Texas Committee on Natural Resources opposing the plan.

Saxion said the Sierra Club found positive and negative aspects of the proposal and distributed a listing of 11 "good" points and 12 "bad" points.

Among the positives, he said, are extra financial aid for building wastewater treatment facilities, official encouragement of conservation practices, guaranteed public access to new reservoirs and more public education about groundwater problems.

Among the negatives, Saxion said, are provisions allowing lawmakers to approve water projects without voter approval, lack of enforcement for groundwater management, lack of conservation-oriented water rates and no assurance that state water agencies will use their new conservation authority.

"This package will do very little to meet what we consider to be some key, critical water issues in the state of Texas," Saxion said.

"Even if they vote for this package in November, they're not solving all the state's water problems by any stretch of the imagination. This is only a start, at best," Kramer added.

The Sierra Club officials also criticized House leaders, especially Speaker Gib Lewis, for what they charged was a failure to give proper attention to water problems.

"The speaker would not even allow healthy discussion of (an alternative) version on the floor of the House, censoring a Sierra Club critique of the package and pressuring legislators to keep them from offering strengthening amendments. The House deliberations on the water package were a sorry spectacle," Saxion said.

However, Saxion added, he doubts whether the 1987 Legislature could come up with any stronger plan.

Convicted killer 'tired of playing' state's game

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Convicted killer Charles Francis Rumbaugh, who spent most of his life in reform schools, mental institutions and jails, says he's served a life sentence waiting for the state to kill him.

"It's all a game I'm tired of playing," said Rumbaugh, 28, who is to be executed before sunrise Wednesday for the 1975 robbery-murder of an Amarillo jeweler Michael Fiorello. "Time has to run out sometime."

Rumbaugh, who ordered his attorneys to halt any attempts to block his death date, was to be taken early Wednesday to a holding cell a few steps from Texas' death chamber. He is scheduled to die by poison injection shortly after midnight.

If the court-ordered punishment is carried out, Rumbaugh will be the 10th prisoner executed since the state resumed the death penalty in December 1982.

"I believe in reincarnation," Rumbaugh said in a recent interview. "Whatever I did in my previous life must have been pretty bad to deserve this. Maybe when I come back next time, I'll have learned something."

Rumbaugh's trouble with the law began at age 6, when he and an older brother skipped school and broke into an old building in their hometown of San Angelo.

"I was an accident waiting to happen," said Rumbaugh, who worked as a shoeshine boy in nightclubs and bars to help his financially strapped family. "I got in so much trouble as a kid that all the juvenile officers knew me by my nickname — Chuckie."

At age 12, Rumbaugh pulled off his first armed robbery, using a tire tool to rob a San Angelo gas station and making his getwaway on a stolen bicycle. He later admitted to dozens of heists in Texas and Arkansas.

"I just gravitated to armed robbery," he recalled.

Eventually Rumbaugh was declared a juvenile deliquent and sent to reform schools and mental institutions, where he says his spirit hardened.

Then, on April 4, 1975, while he was visiting a sister in Amarillo, he walked into Fiorello's jewelry store, pulled a gun and demanded money.

But Fiorello tried to grab a small pistol he kept handy after a string of holdups in the neighborhood. The 58-year-old businessman died in a struggle for the pistol, which Rumbaugh took with him when he left.

"It was a situation of kill or be killed," the inmate said. "I can still hear him lying there and saying, 'Help me, please help me.'

STATE IN BRIEF

THC: Policies needed to preserve Indian sites

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Historical Commission urged all museums Monday to adopt policies that discourage "curiosity seekers" and "relic collectors" from digging at Indian burial grounds.

Questions about the display of ancient human remains were raised in February 1983 when state officials planned to display the so-called "Leanderthal Lady," bones recovered from a 9,000-year-old burial site in Williamson County.

The display was canceled after complaints from Indian groups and others who said it was disrepectful.

In a Monday release, the commission said specific guidelines concerning remains are needed to combat pilfering of important burial grounds.

The policy against accepting remains found by non-scientific digs is needed, according the commission.

Highway contract to be let

AUSTIN (AP) — A contract for construction of the final stretch of Interstate 27 in West Texas will be awarded Tuesday, the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation announced Monday.

The eight miles of highway is expected to cost about $32 million. The two-year project will close the gap in the interstate between Lubbock and Amarillo.

The new stretch of the highway will be built from north of Tulia to south of FM 1881.

Texas farm banks solvent

AUSTIN (AP) — The Farm Credit Banks of Texas are doing well despite credit problems elsewhere in the country, president James A. Rogers says.

Rogers said the banks — the Federal Land Bank of Texas, the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Texas and the Texas Bank for Cooperatives — project that earnings for 1985 will total $26.1 million.

For the Texas Farm Credit District as a whole, which also includes the 44 Federal Land Bank Associations and 28 Production Credit Associations, net earnings projected for 1985 total $38.5 million.

'Tejas' food to be shipped

AUSTIN (AP) — Wheat and powdered milk donated for African famine relief by Project Tejas is scheduled to be loaded aboard a ship towards the end of this week, the Texas Department of Agriculture says.

Project Tejas, organized by 23 Texas farm and ranch organizations, raised nearly $700,000. The food is scheduled to arrive in Ethiopia in mid-October, officials said Monday.

In West Texas, partly cloudy and cooler with widely scattered thundestorms through Wednesday. Lows tonight 60s most areas except low 70s southeast. Highs Wednesday 80s most sections to upper 90s valleys of Big Bend.

In North Texas, scattered thunderstorms moving into central sections tonight. Scattered thunderstorms will cover most of the area on Wednesday. Mostly cloudy to partly cloudy with highs in the 90s and lows in the 70s.

In South Texas, mostly cloudy north and partly cloudy south through Wednesday. Scattered thunderstorms north, with widely scattered thunderstorms elsewhere through Wednesday. Some thunderstorms possibly heavy in southeast. Highs through Wednesday in the upper 80s southeast to the 90s elsewhere. Lows tonight in the 70s.

Fall-like conditions in forecast

Fall-like conditions are expected to reach the Permian Basin area by Wednesday as a chance of thunderstorms will bring cooler temperatures to the area, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Partly cloudy skies and a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms are in the forecast through Wednesday with a low near 70 tonight warming to a high in the 80s Wednesday. Tonight's southerly winds at five to 15 mph will increase to less than 20 mph Wednesday, becoming gusty in the afternoon.

Monday's high of 95 was six degrees below the record set in 1984. This morning's low was four degrees above the 1935 record of 51.

STATE

A weak upper-level disturbance prompted thundershowers across wide areas of Texas early today and forecasters predicted more precipitation later.

The National Weather Service reported moist tropical air brought rainfall over scattered sections of the upper Gulf coast and Hill Country. Precipitation in parts of the Central Panhandle resulted from a low-pressure trough over eastern New Mexico.

Heavy fog reduced visibilities to one-quarter mile at Lufkin. Low clouds dotted the south including most coastal sections.

Winds were south at 5 to 15 mph, except for calm conditions in the east and southwest. Early-morning temperatures were in the 60s and 70s. Extremes were 62 degrees at Marfa and 83 degrees at the Corpus Christi Naval Air Station.

Widely scattered thunderstorms over western, southern and eastern sections. Otherwise, partly cloudy skies should be the rule with highs in the 80s and 90s and lows in the 60s and 70s.

NATION

Winter hit California high country today and Hurricane Rick churned the Hawaiian surf while rain dotted much of the nation.

Rain was scattered from the Lower Ohio Valley to Michigan, across New England and through the eastern Dakotas. Scattered thunderstorms rumbled across the Plains.

The mountains of northern California were having winter-like conditions. A snow-prompted travelers' advisory was posted for the Sierra Nevada from Kings Canyon northward because of a storm that dumped as much as 6 inches of snow at higher elevations.

IRVING— The bookmakers who reluctantly labeled Dallas a one-point favorite, couldn't have been more off target if they had picked the Washington Redskins to win.

Dallas' 44-14 rout of the Redskins may not have been the shot heard round the world, but as coach Tom Landry put it after the game, "This is a game the rest of the NFC East will have to match."

While the Dallas defense turned it into a last-half runaway with five interceptions and a fubmle recovery, all of which led to points, it was the offense that took the fight and swaggering bravado out of the Redskins, first with a 98-yard drive in which quarterback Danny White five times found receivers on third-and-long. Then a 55-yard touchdown pass to slowpoke receiver Mike Renfro with six seconds left in the half may have broke the Redskins' back.

THE BOMB to Renfro came after Washington had countered that long drive with a TD of its own to narrow the Cowboys' lead to 10-7.

"It's called 84-takeoff," said Renfro. "I go down field 10 yards and break three toward the sidelines. That's supposed to bait the cornerman and take him toward the sidelines with me."

Barry Wilburn went for it, hook, line and sinker and Renfro took White's perfect lead in full stride well behind two hoodwinked defenders.

"I'm not real fast, so we try to trick the defense a lot. If we can trick them once a, game," said Renfro, "I'll be happy."

White labeled the play a master stroke by Landry, "The right play against the right defense."

White called the long drive in the second quarter a "real confidence-builder."

"AND I think the field goal in the third quarter was a big play. That's where we really gained confidence. Everybody remembered last year when we let them back in the game after taking the lead."

Verbose Joe Theismann, who was serenaded after his last interception by the crowd, never had a birthday like this one. Come to think of it, Joe never had a day like this, period.

Every member of Dallas' secondary contributed his best wishes to the favorite enemy quarterback. Six interceptions, only one for naught, and two returned for touchdowns. Victor Scott brought one Theismann pass back 26 yards for a fourth period score that made it 37-7 and Dennis Thurman applied the final indignity, a 21-yard interception return with 2:50 remaining.

AFTER THE game, Thurman was shouting, "Where's Skip Bayliss? Where is that guy?"

The Dallas writer, it seems, had come down pretty hard on the Cowboys' secondary, labeling it too slow to cope with Washington's offense. "I'm going to write for the Washington Post," Thurman threatened after Bayliss failed to show.

The win gave Dallas a 4-0-1 record against Washington in season's openers and was the largest margin of victory since the 34-0 romp Dec. 6, 1970.

Renfro's five receptions for 99 yards represented his best day as a Cowboy. Septien, who kicked field goals of 53, 39 and 43 yards, plus five PATs, raised his career total to 787 points, 20th all-time in the NFL.

And over in Washington's dressing room called it, "Just a heckuva' job by Dallas."

FOR THEISMANN, "It was a bad experience. You have to give credit to the Cowboys."

On the Renfro touchdown, Wilburn conceded, "it was the biggest mistake I could've made, jumping out like that."

The first half began as a study in frustration, first the Cowboys settled for a Septien field goal when Dexter Manley, the hyperactive 252-pounder from Oklahoma State, nailed White for an eight-yard loss after Dallas had marched from its 20 to first down on the Washington 28.

Reggie speaks his piece on drugs in sports...

By SCOTT OSTLER
Los Angeles Times

Reggie Jackson was hopping mad. This was back in spring training at Palm Springs. He was storming around the Angel clubhouse, waving a newspaper.

It was a sports section, which featured a story on Hollywood Henderson and his drug-related problems.

"Every day we come to the ballpark, pick up the paper and see Quintin Dailey, John Lucas, Joe Pepitone, Denny McLain, Hollywood Henderson, on the front of the sports page. What do you have to do to get your name in the paper? Be a negative for society, a detriment to the community?"

I started to give him a lecture on the definition of news, of the social value of presenting negative stories because by informing, we may help other people avoid the pitfalls of life. Reggie cut me off.

"Yes, it's newsworthy, but I don't think it deserves a big splash. And I guess I got resentful when I read about a guy telling me how he's reformed now, how he lost it, how he almost died. I mean, come on. You had the same chance we all had. We've all had our chances to buy drugs, squander our money, hang out till 5 in the morning."

SO WHAT do you want in the paper, Reggie, nothing but nice stories?

"Why not write about a Rod Carew or a Bob Boone, a success story, rather than dwelling on people that have been failures with handling their lives and handling success? It's not that I think athletes need to be patted on the back, because we get enough of that, enough being pampered. But it sure would be beneficial to the youths, to young athletes."

Jackson continued: "They need to hear they should stay away from drugs, because it's not good for your health, it's not good for you financially, it's not good for you mentally, it's not good for your family, it's not good for you socially, it does nothing for you intellectually, and there are no vitamins in it.

"Kids need to hear that from an idol. Here's Hollywood Henderson saying he had looked for a high, was trying to recapture a wonderful feeling. Well how about the feeling of winning a game, the feeling of being around a friend, the feeling of love with your parent?

"Talk to the people that never got involved with drugs and find out why they didn't. I really don't care to listen to a rehabilitated drug person. That may be wrong, it may be prejudice, it may be harsh. But I really don't care to listen to them.

"I SAW '60 Minutes' the other night, a former ballplayer was on talking about his drug problem. I mean, stay quiet. Stay hidden. Don't keep bringing up how you're such a reformed citizen. I've had bad press and I've had rifts with people. I'm not gonna keep bringing it up. I want to let it quietly go away. Maybe people will forget about it.

"I cannot say that I've never tried drugs. But I sure learned at a young age that it is not the damn thing to do. I can say that I've never even seen cocaine. I cannot say I've never seen marijuana, that would be a lie. I haven't seen a lot of it, but I've sure seen it. I know I've never seen cocaine, I've never seen a Quaalude or any other kind of speed.

"I would say in all honesty I have been curious, but not curious enough to take that step. I've seen what it's done to a Hollywood Henderson, to a Maury Wills, to a Steve Howe, who had a chance to be one of the finest relievers ever."

Someone mentioned Vida Blue, a pal of Jackson's.

"I think Vida's a good man," he said. "I think he can come back. I don't think Vida's a con man. I think that a lot of people who do drugs are conning themselves and conning the world. And don't con me when you come back, telling me you've been to a rehab center for 15 minutes and now you're fine.

"You don't say you're on drugs, drive through Wickenburg (a rehabilitation center), have lunch and then show up in spring training and everything's fine. It just doesn't happen that way.

"AND YOU know, I don't know what the hell's wrong with our court system. Baseball player gets stopped for speeding, drunk driving, cocaine, marijuana. He gets off. No! I'm 25 years old and making 500 grand a year, I get five charges against me, I get off. And I'm a two-time, three-time offender? No! And I'm still getting paid, $75,000 a month. Now, are you gonna tell me that I'm wrong? I can't be wrong. I got off, didn't I?

"How about a little punishment? How about a little reminder? If I'm out a month's salary, it's gonna cost me 200 grand. I'm gonna think about it next time, aren't I?

"You know, in the business world, I work for Nabisco, Panasonic, TRW, ABC. In every one of my contracts, there's a morals clause. It's standard. You know, anything demeaning to the character, the image of the company.

"One of these days, I'm probably gonna wind up in someone's baseball front office. OK, I bust you two or three times with drugs, I send you to a rehab center, I hold press conferences for you, I take peoples' time. I sit down and converse with you. Try. I send you to a psychiatrist, I send you to a doctor. I pay for your medical bills. And I pay you $500,000 a year. Gee, do you think once in a while I can test you, to make sure you're clean?

"NOW YOU want to sue me for your personal rights. Don't I have rights? I'm paying you half a million a year, ain't I? So yeah, I do believe in testing. I think if you're gonna test a guy like Rod Carew or Brian Downing, a model citizen, no, you shouldn't do that. But if I give you reasonable cause, I don't think there's anything wrong with it. When you've shown me that you've lied to me, deceived me, don't I have a right to test you?

"Another thing that bothers me, as a black man, I'm very hurt that most of the people I read about involved with drugs are black. I am deeply hurt by that. I don't say that you owe me anything, but you owe God a fair shake. You're not giving it to Him. At least be discreet. If you want to go do something with three women at one time, go to Indio, go to Needles. Don't do it at Carlos and Charlie's (a night spot) on Sunset Boulevard. Have a little discretion.

PITTSBURGH — Dale Berra said he shared cocaine with at least four teammates while playing for the Pittsburgh Pirates and was once warned by Manager Chuck Tanner not to talk to a man now accused of selling the drug to major-league players.

Berra, a New York Yankees infielder and son of Hall of Famer Yogi Berra, admitted Monday in federal court that he "had a (cocaine) problem" last year with the Pirates. But he said he hasn't used the drug since last October.

Berra's testimony was to continue today in the cocaine distribution trial of Curtis Strong, 38, a former Philadelphia Phillies clubhouse cook. Strong is charged with dealing cocaine 16 times from 1980 to 1984 when the Pirates played home games.

Other players who could be called as witnesses today were Jeff Leonard of the San Francisco Giants, Lee Lacy of the Baltimore Orioles and Dave Parker of the Cincinnati Reds. Berra testified that he'd used cocaine with both Parker and Lacy.

Berra said he used the powdered narcotic with Pirates pitcher Rod Scurry and former Pittsburgh outfielder John Milner. Seventeen current or former players have been implicated in using cocaine since last Thursday, when Kansas City Royals outfielder Lonnie Smith became the first player to testify.

BERRA, 27, said his father "stands behind me" although he doesn't condone the use of cocaine.

New York Yankees Manager Billy Martin, when asked to comment on Berra's testimony, said he had been aware of the problems in Pittsburgh.

"I was the one who told his dad about it," Martin said. "Not so much about Dale but what was going on in Pittsburgh. But it's history as far as I'm concerned."

BERRA TESTIFIED that he first tried cocaine at a New Year's Eve party in New Jersey on Dec. 31, 1978, after several years of turning down opportunities to use the drug. "I said, 'What the heck, let me try it,' " he said.

His next use of cocaine came in July 1979, he said, after he was optioned to the Pirates' Portland, Ore., farm team. A clubhouse boy sold him a gram of cocaine for $90, and he shared it with Scurry, Berra said.

Injured McCamey a dangerous animal

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Area Football

The most surprising result in the first weekend of area high school football play came from south on Farm Road 349, where the McCamey Badgers traveled to face the Iraan Braves.

An experienced Badgers' team was expecting to make a run at a return trip to the playoffs in District 8-2A, Iraan, a Class A school, seemed to be merely a stumbling block on McCamey's climb back up the ladder. After all, coach Buster Leaf's squad, which made it all the way to the state semifianals in his first season, 1983, had two fine scrimmages under its belt, not having allowed a touchdown against 3A opponents Coahoma and Ozona.

But stumble the Badgers did, by a whopping 37-7 final score. One need look no further than the game's injury list to discern some of the causes for the McCamey collapse.

The Badgers lost three starters, one for the season, in the Iraan contest, including a pair of senior All-District performers in Nandy Zarate and Adam Arana. Tight end Joey Deleon, a junior, broke his leg and is out for the season.

But with the score still a tightly contested 10-7 in the first half, McCamey's Leaf saw his little world fall apart in front of his eyes. Zarate, all-district linebacker as a junior and also this season's starting quarterback, and Arana, all-district at safety and a starter at tailback, went down in rapid succession.

Zarate suffered a shoulder separation and his return is about four weeks off, while Arana was saddled by a slight concussion and could return this week when McCamey will try to regroup when it hosts Marfa.

"When they went down, we not only lost two of our on-the-field leaders, we lost two of our better football players as well," Leaf said. "We never could recover after that."

Not only do Zarate and Arana handle many of the ballhandling chores on offense and anchor the defense, but Zarate is the Badger punter and kicker.

When that senior pair went down, the heart and soul of Leaf's football team went with it.

Although junior Rob Adams did a commendable job in Zarate's stead at QB racking up nearly as much yardage as the Braves (284 for McCamey to 306 for the Braves), he did not run the offense with the poise and skill of the senior and failed to get into the end zone another time.

Now, with Zarate out at least until the district opener Oct. 11 with Reagan County, Adams will be called on to run the whole show. Look for Leaf to alter his option offense and go more to a straight ahead passing style to utilize Adams' throwing ability.

While injuries may have dictated the pace of last Friday's game, don't expect the McCamey season to be lost. The Badgers are an experienced bunch and could regroup in a hurry. And if Zarate can make it back in time for the district season, Leaf may still have a district contender on his hands.

"We'll get by, it's just that losing is bad enough, you just hate to see kids get hurt like that, that's all," Leaf said. "We're going to change our philosophy a little bit, but the guys who were backing up are just going to have to step in and do the job. Distric games are the ones that really count, we'll be ready by then."

AREA RUMBLINGS: A mix-up with officials in Levelland delayed the start of the opener for Lamesa for more than an hour-and-a-half last Friday, but when the dust cleared around midnight, the Tornadoes came away with a 22-13 victory, not a 7-0 loss as the wire services reported.

Halfback Kenneth Williams led the ground attack for coach Clyde Noonkester's club with 96 yards but fullback Gregg Hogg added 75 and quarterback Keith Bryant chipped in 72 as the Tornadoes formidable front line continues to do the job. Williams, District 2-4A's leading ground gainer, had runs of 68 and 40-yards called back because of penalties. Lamesa moved the ball so well on the ground, Bryant went to the air just four times the entire ballgame...

While Reagan County was storming to it's lopsided win over Robert Lee Friday, the Owls racked up some impressive offensive numbers, including both starting running backs going over the century mark. Fullback Tim Tatum just nosed over 100 yards, while tailback James West, a sophomore, picked up 130 yards and caught a TD pass.

Sophomore receiver Scott Lipsey caught three touchdown passes as quarterback Bobby Gunnells went 10 for 17 through the air but threw three intercepts...

The Owls face a stiffer test this weekend when they host the Golden Cranes of Crane, an upset winner over District 2-4A's Fort Stockton in a defensive battle. The Cranes held Fort Stockton to just 16 snaps in the second half of play with a ball contrlo offense.

In the first half, it was a different story as Crane's Kenny Walker (11 tackles and four blocked passes) and Ricky DeGraffenried (16 tackles) were able to hold the line...

After three strong quarters of football, Rankin tired in the fourth quarter and saw a 12-0 deficit turn into a 26-0 rout. Coach Dwayne Turner would like to see improvement in his kick coverage which repeatedly gave Eldorado favorable field position.

Rose feeling heat of the moment as record hit nears

Associated Press

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Rose predicts he will set baseball's hit record today, not with a small step but with a great leap into history.

The Cincinnati Reds' player-manager resisted the temptation to take an unscheduled swing at his 4,192nd career hit Monday night, keeping himself on the bench during a 2-1 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Instead, Rose chose to take his cut at topping Ty Cobb tonight before an expected sell-out crowd of more than 52,000 in Riverfront Stadium. He wants to end the season-long drama with a flourish.

"Yeah, I think I'm going get a couple of hits tomorrow night," Rose said after Monday's game. "I'm not going to try for a full house again Wednesday night."

The crowd of 29,289 Monday night didn't want him to wait that long.

Even before the game, fans were chanting, "Pete, Pete," in efforts to change his mind about sitting down against San Diego left-hander Dave Dravecky. They failed.

Later, when right-hander Lance McCullers started warming up in the Padres' bullpen, the fans stood and implored Rose to reconsider. By the time Rose came out of the dugout in the sixth inning over a disputed call at first base, the crowd was in a frenzy.

"I wanted to protect my coach, plus I wanted to make an appearance," Rose admitted.

When several pinch-hitting opportunities arose in the late innings, Rose considered taking up his familiar black bat but decided against it. Dave Concepcion cracked a two-out single in the ninth to win the game and extend Rose's personal drama one more day.

Low-key during his chase of Cobb this season, Rose said he's feeling the importance of the moment now.

"It started up again tonight, just like yesterday," Rose said, referring to his two-hit day on Sunday before a supportive crowd at Wrigley Field in Chicago. "When the crowd gets into it like tonight, it relaxes you but it really turns you on."

NL Roundup

It also makes it difficult not to oblige them, he added.

"I looked down, and I was sweating," Rose said. "My arms were all wet. Every time they'd start cheering, I went down to get a drink of water. I didn't want to hear that. By the seventh inning, I was bloated."

But just as he played himself unexpectedly Sunday and got the record-tying hit when the Cubs changed starters, Rose wasn't above letting game conditions put him in the batter's box Monday.

Dave Parker was on second base with the score tied 1-1, two out and Concepcion coming to bat in the ninth. If the Padres had decided to walk Concepcion, Rose might have put himself in for catcher Bo Diaz.

"I was debating whether to hit for Bo," Rose said. "I was thinking they might put Davey on base. But now we'll never know, will we?"

The Reds announced that tonight's game is sold out. Rose plans to start against right-hander LaMarr Hoyt, who won the Cy Young Award with the Chicago White Sox in 1983. Hoyt is known for his control, which Rose figures will be to his advantage.

"I'll be sky-high. I'll be about 6-foot-6 tomorrow night. I'll be this far off the turf," Rose said, holding his hand several feet off the ground.

Although he has snuggled up to Cobb at 4,191, Rose said his next hit will be the one that's important.

"I've got a chance to be No. 1," Rose said. "I'm not overly impressed with being tied."

Cubs 3, Cardinals 1

St. Louis lost its third straight game and dropped into a first place tie with the New York Mets heading into a three-game showdown series that begins tonight at Shea Stadium.

The Cubs scored twice in the first, once in the second, then held on.

Bob Dernier's leadoff walk and stolen base followed by Gary Matthews' single, Ryne Sandberg's groundout and Keith Moreland's single made it 2-0 against Kurt Kepshire, 10-9.

Vince Coleman beat out an infield single leading off the bottom of the first, was balked to second, stole third — his 92nd steal of the season — and scored on Tommy Herr's grounder.

Herr, who has hit only four home runs all season, now has 91 RBIs — third best in the NL. The last major-leaguer to drive in 100 runs and hit less than 10 home runs was Detroit Tigers third baseman George Kell, who drove in 101 and hit eight home runs in 1950.

The Cubs made it 3-1 in the second when Leon Durham singled, Jody Davis walked and Shawon Dunston singled.

Ray Fontenot, 6-8, Jay Baller and Ron Meridith combined on a seven-hitter for Chicago. Meridith got the last out and his first save.

Dodgers 9, Braves 7

Mike Marshall, who had hit a two-run homer in the fifth inning, capped a five-run eighth with a two-run single. Steve Sax singled in a run and Franklin Stubbs singled in two before Marshall's hit.

Earlier, Marshall homered for the third consecutive game and broke a 1-1 tie. A homer by Glenn Hubbard and a four-run rally in the seventh put Atlanta up 6-3, but the Dodgers rallied against Zane Smith and loser Bruce Sutter, 7-7. Brian Holton, in his major-league debut, got credit for the victory even though the only batter he faced, Terry Harper, got a two-run single that put the Braves ahead in the seventh inning.

Harper was then thrown out stealing to end the inning. The Dodgers' uprising in the eighth gave Holton the win.

"I never dreamed it would be like that," Holton said. "I had something like a two-hit shutout in mind."

Dennis Powell finished for his first save though he wild-pitched a run home in the ninth.

Astros 4, Giants 2

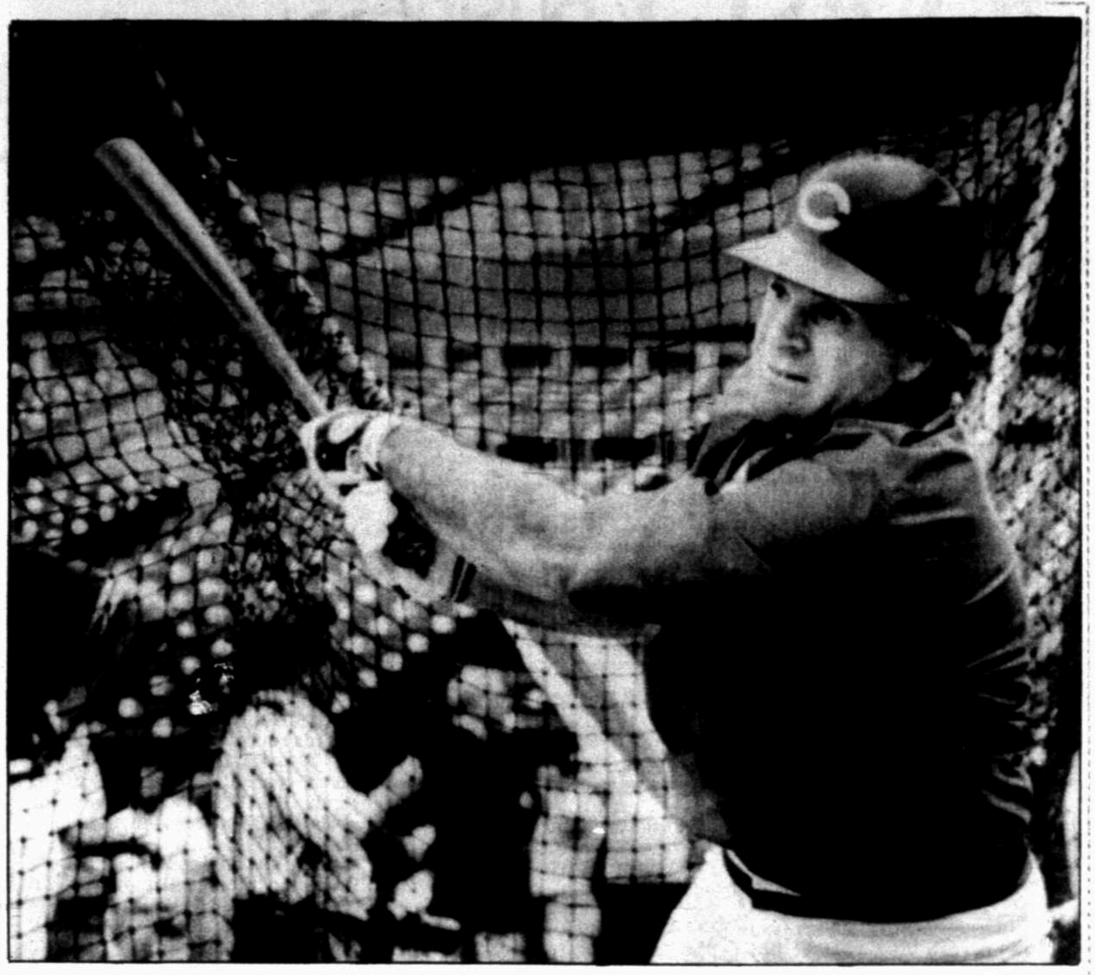

Mike Scott combined with two relievers on a seven-hitter for his career-high 16th win. He doubled in a run as well. Scott, 16-7, gave up five hits in seven innings and won for the fifth time in his last six games. Frank DiPino and Dave Smith finished, Smith getting one out for his 22nd save.

Scott's win total is the best in his career by six. "This year I came to spring training worried about making the team," Scott said.

"I threw good two years ago but this is by far the most consistent I've ever been. Plus I've been healthy all year and it's been a lot more fun."

Phil Garner had a double and two singles for Houston, scored once and drove in a run as the Astros won for the 10th time in 12 games.

Losing pitcher Atlee Hammaker, 4-11 and 0-4 against Houston this season, gave up all four runs in 4 1-3 innings.

The only swings Pete Rose took Monday on his way to breaking Ty Cobb's 57-year-old all-time hits record were in the batting cage. Rose, now tied for the record at 4,191, will play tonight.

Top woman racquetballer to do clinic

From Staff Reports

Lynn Adams, the No. 1 ranked women's racquetball pro, will put on a clinic and exhibition Saturday at the Courthouse and Spa.

Adams earned her ranking in 1982 and was a top performer last season when she won three Womens Professional Racquetball Association tournaments and finished second in four others. In the seven tournaments — all that Adams entered — she won 24-of-28 matches (.860 winning percentage).

Adams followed with a strong '84-85 campaign. In addition to winning WPRA tour events in Auburn, Mass., Essex, Va., and Oklahoma City, Adams captured the prestigious Grand Slam of Racquetball with championships in the WPRA Nationals in Fort Worth, the DP Nationals in Boston and her first-ever Ektelon National Championship, held annually in Anaheim.

In addition to her success as a singles player this season, Adams also teamed up with Terri Gilreath for a third consecutive WPRA National Doubles Championship.

Her accomplishments on the court are even greater when you consider the painful arthritis afflicition Adams has had to overcome. Because of her arthritic problems, Adams is a spokesperson for the National Arthritis foundation.

The Coors Light Clinic at Courthouse and Spa will be held at 2 p.m. with a $20 fee. The clinic is limited to 20 people. The exhibition is scheduled for 4 p.m.. Adams will play Peggy Stedding, a former national champion, in the exhibition.

Angels creep closer with win over KC

Associated Press

The California Angels, facing an important series against the hot Kansas City Royals, got off to the right start.

"Whether it's the first of seven games or the first of three, you can't over-emphasize the value of winning the first one," California Manager Gene Mauch said after a 7-1 triumph Monday night that ended the Royals' eight-game winning streak.

The Angels crept within one-half game of Kansas City in the American League West by taking the opener of the three-game set in Anaheim. California had led the division for more than two months before the Royals moved into first place during the weekend.

John Candelaria, 5-1 since he was traded by Pittsburgh to California, gave up just a second-inning double to Hal McRae and a home run in the eighth to Darryl Motley, who has homered in three straight games.

Ruppert Jones and ex-Midland Angel Daryl Sconiers connected for home runs and Craig Gerber had three hits and drove in three runs as California roughed up Bret Saberhagen, 17-6. The right-hander had won seven straight decisions and had not lost since July 18.

AL Roundup

Blue Jays 5, Tigers 3

Home runs by Cecil Fielder, George Bell and Garth Iorg helped Jimmy Key and Toronto beat visiting Detroit.

The Blue Jays remained 1½ games ahead of New York in the AL East. Toronto plays four games in New York starting Thursday night.

Fielder's solo homer broke a 1-1 tie in the second. Bell and Iorg both homered in the eighth, with Bell breaking an 0-for-16 slump with his 28th homer and Iorg adding a two-run shot that made it 5-1.

Key, 12-6, had allowed seven hits going into the ninth, but departed after Lance Parrish singled with one out and Chet Lemon followed with a home run. Reliever Tom Henke got the final two outs for his 10th save.

Yankees 9, Brewers 4

Mike Pagliarulo and Don Mattingly both had four hits and each singled in runs during a five-run 10th inning that led New York to its 10th straight victory.

The Yankees raked Milwaukee relievers Ray Searage, 1-4, and Bob Gibson during their big inning. Pagliarulo singled home the first two runs, Bobby Meacham's squeeze bunt produced another, Ken Griffey hit a sacrifice fly and Mattingly capped the uprising with a run-scoring single that raised his major-league-leading RBI total to 120.

Reliever Dave Righetti, 12-7, got the victory.

Twins 5, White Sox 0

Gary Gaetti hit two homers and drove in three runs while John Butcher blanked host Chicago on four hits.

Gaetti hit a two-run shot in the fourth inning and connected for his 15th homer in the fifth.

Butcher, 10-12, pitched his second shutout of the season. He struck out four, walked none and retired the last 12 batters.

Floyd Bannister, 6-13, took the loss, ending a four-game winning streak for the White Sox.

Rangers 3, A's 1

Wayne Tolleson tripled and doubled and scored both times on singles by Don Slaught to help Texas break a six-game losing streak. The loss was the sixth straight for Oakland.

Tolleson doubled in the eighth and scored on Slaught's single, giving the Rangers a 2-1 lead. George Wright added an RBI single later in the inning.

Winner Jeff Russell and Greg Harris, who got his ninth save, combined on a five-hitter.

Young slugger Jose Canseco of the A's hit his first major-league home run.

Mariners 8, Indians 7

Gorman Thomas, who had earlier set a Seattle single-season record with his 30th home run this year, grounded a ball to left field that went for a bases-loaded forceout that scored Spike Owen from third base with one out in the 12th inning.

The Mariners, who got seven hits — all for extra bases — loaded the bases in the 12th on three walks. Thomas then hit a ball that drove in the winning run while left fielder Joe Carter threw to second base for a forceout on Alvin Davis.

Thomas drove in four runs, two with his homer. He also tripled and had a sacrifice fly.

Bo Jackson runs Auburn to No. 1 spot

Associated Press

On the strength of Bo Jackson's 290-yard, four-touchdown rushing performance in a 49-7 opening-game rout of Southwestern Louisiana, the Auburn Tigers have supplanted idle Oklahoma by just two points as the No. 1 team in this week's Associated Press college football poll.

There was considerable shuffling from last week's rankings but the only team to drop out of the Top Twenty was No. 12 Washington, which lost its opener to Oklahoma State 31-17. The Huskies were replaced by Alabama, which made the rankings — the Crimson Tide is No. 20 — for the first time since the second week of the 1984 season.

Florida and Southern California climbed into the first four as a result of impressive opening-game victories, while Florida State, Oklahoma State and UCLA moved up from the Second Ten to the Top Ten. They replaced Maryland, defending national champ Brigham Young — which had its 25-game winning streak snapped by UCLA 27-24 — and Nebraska.

College Poll

AUBURN, WHICH was No. 2 in the first two 1985 polls, received 16 first-place votes to Oklahoma's 28 from a nationwide panel of 60 sports writers and sportscasters. But the Tigers, who totaled 1,118 of a possible 1,200 points, received 25 second-place votes and were not rated lower than seventh on any ballot while two voters placed Oklahoma in the Second Ten, nullifying the Sooners' edge in first-place votes. Oklahoma, which received 1,116 points, does not open its season until Sept. 28.

Florida, a 35-23 winner over Miami, jumped from fifth to third with three first-place votes and 974 points. The Gators replaced Southern Methodist, which had to come from behind to defeat Texas-El Paso 35-23 and slipped to sixth.

Southern Cal rose from sixth to fourth with six first-place ballots and 970 points on the strength of a 20-10 triumph over Illinois, which had been No. 11 but fell to 19th. Iowa, which has not yet played a game, slipped from fourth to fifth with five first-place votes and 911 points. Sixth-place SMU received the other two first-place ballots and 908 points.

Florida State vaulted from 17th to seventh with 755 points by upsetting No. 10 Nebraska 17-13 and Oklahoma State went from 16th to eighth with 741 points by defeating Washington 31-17.

OHIO STATE, which gets underway this weekend, remained in ninth place with 686 points while UCLA shot from 20th to 10th with 612 points by beating BYU and dropping the Cougars from eighth to 16th. Maryland, which had been No. 7, lost to Penn State 20-18 and skidded to 17th. The victory boosted the Nittany Lions from 19th to 11th.

Rounding out the Second Ten are LSU, Notre Dame, Arkansas, South Carolina, BYU, Maryland, Nebraska, Illinois and Alabama.

Last week's Second Ten consisted of Illinois, Washington, LSU, Notre Dame, Arkansas, Oklahoma State, Florida State, South Carolina, Penn State and UCLA.

Alabama did not play last weekend but defeated Georgia 20-16 in its opener.

DRUGS

When the Pirates were playing in the Roberto Clemente Memorial Series in Puerto Rico the following February, Berra said he asked Parker — then the right fielder for the world champion Pirates — whether he used cocaine.

"He didn't answer me at the time ... later, he called me in (his hotel room) and said, 'Does this answer you?' He had cocaine in a folder. We used it," Berra said.

The first time he met Strong was in a Philadelphia hotel suite in 1982 when Berra said he, Parker, Milner and Lacy joined former Pirates slugger Willie Stargell and several coaches to eat some food supplied by Stargell.

Berra said Milner, Parker and Lacy later joined him in an adjoining room, where he purchased a gram of cocaine from Strong for $100. "He also had more on him," Berra said.

Berra testified that from 1980 to 1982 he bought cocaine from Jeffrey Mosco, 30, of Pittsburgh, Shelby Greer, 29, of Philadelphia, and Dale Shiffman, 33, of Pittsburgh, and that he was supplied the drug by Kevin Koch, the former team mascot known as the Pirate Parrot.

The government recently said that Koch, who resigned from the Pirates this summer, was monitored electronically when he arranged to buy cocaine from Shiffman last November. Koch would have been called as a witness if Shiffman's case had gone to trial, the government said.

Earlier Monday, an obviously nervous Cabell testified he used cocaine as many as 100 times from 1978 to 1984 and that he usually performed well after using the drug.

Unlike Berra, Cabell would not point the finger at any alleged cocaine dealer, other than the accused Strong, although he said he used cocaine many other times without obtaining it from Strong.

The defense tried to portray Cabell as a highly paid player who testified against Strong only because he is fearful of losing his job and his lifestyle if he doesn't cooperate with federal prosecutors.

Cabell also refused to name any other major league players as cocaine users other than those he identified last Friday: Parker, former Houston Astros pitcher J.R. Richard, Leonard, and California Angels pitcher Al Holland.

Cabell said he used cocaine "on and off," generally after night games, as he moved from the Astros to the Giants to the Detroit Tigers and back to the Astros from 1978 to 1984.

JACKSON

"I'm no angel. I'm not asking anybody to be a saint. But I am hurt by the black guys. That hurts me more because I feel that the privilege of making the kind of money blacks have the opportunity to make in sports is a greater privilege because on the outside world, the percentage of us making this kind of money and bettering our families is just not there. So we need to take greater heed of our opportunity in sports.

"As for all the publicity, I realize newspapers are doing their job in exposing these players and letting the public know what's really going on, but the public's also got to be reminded that it is a minority of players doing these things. I go out in public now and introduce myself as a professional athlete, I feel like I have to prove that I'm not a drug addict.

"I'm sure there are great stories about drugs, like the story of Bernard King, a guy who really has turned around. That's a good story. But like I said before just because you stop at the drug center in Orange County and have lunch, I don't want to read 6,000 words on how you reformed. Please."

Officer testifies Springs tried bribery

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas police officer testified that former Dallas Cowboys running back Ron Springs tried to bribe his way out of being arrested after he assaulted her and a colleague at a topless bar.

Cpl. Vanessa Pitz testified outside the presence of the jury Monday in the first day of Springs' trial on charges of aggravated assault on a police officer.

State District Judge Michael Keasler said he would rule later on whether the jury will be allowed to hear testimony about the alleged bribe.

Ms. Pitz said that Springs kept asking her if "there wasn't some other way" to dispose of his case other than an arrest. She also said Springs told her and Cpl. James Hughes they "were going to be sorry we ever arrested him."

Springs, 28, was indicted in February on third-degree felony charges of aggravated assault on a police officer. The charges stem from his Jan. 18 arrest at the Million Dollar Saloon, a Dallas strip bar.

IF CONVICTED, he faces up to 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Ms. Pitz said Springs asked how much money she and Hughes made and then told them how much he made.

"It was quite a bit more than I make," Ms. Pitz said.

She also said that when Springs was asked for his identification, he replied by saying, "Don't you know who I am? I'm Ron Springs."

She said she didn't recognize the name since she isn't a football fan.

Springs denied the bribe allegation after the trial recessed for the day.

"I didn't talk to the police officers," Springs said. "Except I asked one time would they ease the pressure on the handcuffs."

Attorneys picked through prospective jurors for four hours Monday, questioning them about their loyalty to the Dallas Cowboys.

ONE WOMAN was rejected after asking Springs, a six-year veteran who was cut from the team last week, for his autograph. The final panel includes nine women and three men.

During jury selection, defense attorney Richard Corbitt, listed 19 Cowboys who may testify in Springs' behalf. The trial is expected to end Thursday.

Ms. Pitz said Springs, who outweighs her by about 100 pounds, hit her in the face, kicked her in the shin, "body slammed" her against a bar and threw her over some bar stools when she tried to handcuff him.

She told the jury she "latched" onto Springs' neck as the ballplayer held Hughes in a headlock. She said Springs then began kicking her.

"I DID not let go and he began running forward toward the rail," she said. "I thought he was going to throw myself and Officer Hughes to the ground floor."

Ms. Pitz testified that police were summoned to the Million Dollar Saloon by its manager, Ray Barnes, who said Springs was drunk and had assaulted him.

She said Springs refused to leave when police told him to go.

"Hughes and I told him, and we told him several times, just to go with his friends. He would not be arrested, but he would have to leave," Ms. Pitz said.

Sun Belt to keep expanding

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's population increase will continue to concentrate on the Sun Belt, with just five states accounting for more than half of all growth by the year 2000, a private economic research group says.

But while growth will remain focused on the South and the West, the National Planning Association also had good news for some Midwestern and Eastern states that have lost people in recent years.

Only West Virginia, the District of Columbia and New York state are expected to see population declines by 2000, the research group said. That contrasts with 1983 Census Bureau projections that anticipated declines in nine states and the District.

The Planning Association, an independent Washington-based research group, said California will add 6,668,000 people between 1980 and 2000 to lead all states.

The group said the combination of California, Florida, Texas, Arizona and North Carolina will account for 21,800,000 added people by 2000, or 54 percent of the nation's total additions.

And add Georgia, Washington, Colorado, Virginia and Tennessee to that list and the total is 27,518,000, or 68 percent of the expected national growth.

Even though growth continues to concentrate in the South and West, the report anticipated improvements in other areas, too.

For example, in the Northeast, the planning association projected that Massachusetts would be the biggest gainer, adding 560,000 people, while Michigan was expected to lead the Midwest, adding 549,000.

In its most recent projections, issued two years ago, the Census Bureau had anticipated that Massachusetts would lose 246,600 people between 1980 and 2000, and Michigan would drop 50,700.

Planning association spomesnan Carlton M. Strong said that while his group uses many of the same base figures as the Census experts, it places more emphasis on economic changes.

That likely explains the differences between Census and National Planning Association projections, he said. In addition, the private group has had the benefit of two more years of economic information to factor into its figures.

The Census Bureau projections were based on changes in birth and death rates and migration patterns, projected from the experience of the 1970s, according to its 1983 study.

Most of the differences in population growth among the states can be attributed to the migration of people responding to job opportunities, Strong said.

However, this varies considerably by age group, with the result that the population of people aged 65 and over is expected to grow more sharply in Arizona and Florida and to a much lesser extent in Illinois and New York.

The planning association anticipates that Florida will be second in growth by 2000, adding 5,767,000 people by then. Census experts had placed it first, anticipating growth of 7,698,000 by 2000.

Friends testify Smith injected them, Belushi, with 'speedballs'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cathy Evelyn Smith cruised Hollywood with John Belushi during his final drug-filled days, injecting the comedian and his friends with powerful narcotics from a hypodermic needle she carried in her purse, witnesses testified.

Nelson Lyon, who wrote scripts for the "Saturday Night Live" comedy television show on which Belushi starred, testified Monday that the comedian's last hours began with a "boys' night out" wiwh celebrity pals and ended after a cocaine-snorting session with comedian Robin Williams.

Lyon and Belushi friend Leslie Marks-Moritz, testifying at the start of a preliminary hearing to determine whether Ms. Smith should be held for trial, said they willingly shared drugs with Belushi in March 1982, stretching out their arms for Ms. Smith's repeated injections.

Lyon said he and Belushi were given powerful "speedballs," a mixture of heroin and cocaine.

"It was beyond the euphoria of cocaine," Lyon said of the double-barreled injection.

Belushi, star of the movies "Animal House" and "The Blues Brothers" as well as "Saturday Night Live," was 33 when he died March 5, 1982, of an overdose of heroin-cocaine mixtures at a Sunset Strip bungalow.

Ms. Smith, 38, a former backup singer with Gordon Lightfoot and Hoyt Axton, is charged with second-degree murder and 13 counts of furnishing and administering drugs to Belushi.

Mrs. Moritz, 28, who said she was injected only with cocaine while Belushi apparently received "speedballs," said Ms. Smith warned her the shots could be lethal.

"She told me...if she didn't do it right she could kill me," said Mrs. Moritz.

> "What happened was John Belushi said, 'Have I got a surprise for you. Roll up your sleeve.' I rolled up my sleeve, and Catherine Smith injected me with a substance produced from two glycerine bags."

> —Nelson Lyon, former "Saturday Night Live" writer

Lyon, 47, told of a three-day drug binge that began March 2, 1982, when Belushi and Ms. Smith arrived at Lyon's apartment with drugs and a hypodermic needle.

"What happened was John Belushi said, 'Have I got a surprise for you. Roll up your sleeve.' I rolled up my sleeve, and Catherine Smith injected me with a substance produced from two glycerine bags," he said.

Before that day, Lyon said he had frequently snorted cocaine but never was injected with any illegal drug.

Lyon testified that Belushi was repeatedly injected along with him and that Ms. Smith administered all the injections with equipment from her purse.

Two days later, on March 4, Belushi appeared again with Ms. Smith and there were more injections before the comedian announced it was time to have dinner with his friend, actor Robert De Niro, Lyon testified.

"John declared it boys' night out — that it was a bunch of guys getting together," Lyon said. Although other women were excluded, Ms. Smith was allowed to go along, he said.

They stopped at a private club on the Sunset Strip where Belushi met De Niro and actor Harry Dean Stanton but left them and went to a lavatory where Ms. Smith injected Belushi and Lyon again, Lyon said.

"After that last injection, I felt intensely numb, intensely stoned and it was a very upsetting numbness.

Lyon said he vomited before he left the club and on the way back to Belushi's bungalow, Belushi stopped the car, got out and threw up.

Back at the bungalow, De Niro visited briefly but had nothing to do with drugs, Lyon said, adding that comedian Robin Williams then arrived and joined in snorting cocaine.

Lyon said he left Belushi about 3:30 a.m.

"John was just lying on the bed exhausted," he recalled. "Cathy Smith was sitting on the bed."

Lyon said he found out the next afternoon that Belushi had died of a drug overdose. Ms. Smith called him hours later and denied injecting Belushi with drugs after Lyon left the bungalow, he said.

The prosecution claims Ms. Smith gave Belushi another dose that killed him early March 5.

During cross-examination, defense attorney Howard Weitzman, who maintains that Belushi was responsible for his own death, focused on the comedian's drug problem and his ability to charm his friends into doing what he wanted. Lyon acknowledged that he took drugs to please Belushi.

Book banning fought

CHICAGO (AP) — Not long ago, an official of the American Library Association got a call from a woman saying John Steinbeck's "The Grapes of Wrath" should be pulled from a school library's shelves.

She considered it too depressing for students.

Another woman complained that J.D. Salinger's "Catcher in the Rye" had 785 profanities in it and was not suitable for young readers.

"When a book has 222 'hells,' 27 'Christ's sakes' and seven 'hornys,' then it should not be in our public schools," the woman said.

Another complaint concerned a book titled "Making It With Mademoiselle."

The man "was sure it was very titillating stuff," said Judith Krug, who heads the association's Office for Intellectual Freedom. As it turned out, the book was a collection of sewing patterns compiled by Mademoiselle magazine.

These examples are among those being raised during "Banned Books Week '85" this week at libraries and bookstores across the country. The week marks the effort to battle increasing censorship attempts in the United States, according to the Chicago-based association.

"We are celebrating the freedom to read. The librarians, booksellers, publishers and authors have banded together...to bring to the attention of the public that the right to read is a very precious freedom," Mrs. Krug said.

Ramirez 'not Stalker'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A talkative Richard Ramirez joked about how people are frightened of him, but insisted he is innocent of the "Night Stalker" slayings, said the Texas attorney sent by Ramirez's family to assist him.

Although Ramirez maintained his innocence to El Paso attorney Manuel Barraza late Monday at Los Angeles County Jail, he did not register it formally in court hours earlier.

Municipal Court Judge Elva Soper delayed taking a plea to murder and other counts from the 25-year-old Ramirez until Sept. 27 after his local attorney, Deputy Public Defender Allen Adashek, said he needed more time to prepare.

"There's so much material involved in this case, it's going to take a great deal of time to prepare," Adashek told reporters afterward, adding that intense publicity may make it difficult for Ramirez to get a fair trial in Los Angeles.

Brink's guard robbed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Brink's Inc. guard transporting cash from a shopping mall to his armored car was held up in broad daylight by a bandit who grabbed the loot and fled, investigators said.

"He took a Brink's driver between the bank and the truck as he was coming down the escalator," police Sgt. Jim Grayson said. "He disarmed the guard and took the money bag. There was no gunfire."

The bandit, armed with a .38-caliber handgun, escaped with a canvas bag containing an undisclosed amount of cash, police said.

Officials initially said $100,000 was taken, but investigators later refused to confirm the amount of the loss.

The robbery occurred at 1:45 p.m. Monday at an exit to the Beverly Center, an eight-story, 175-store complex.

Atlantis starts countdown

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Technicians began a two-day countdown today for a test-firing of Atlantis' three main engines to qualify them for the maiden flight of the nation's fourth space shuttle.

The engines are to be ignited for 19 seconds at 11 a.m. EDT Thursday while the $1.2 billion shuttle is bolted firmly on the launch pad. The powerplants, which generate total thrust of 1.1 million pounds, have been fired separately in test stands, but never as a unit.

Each new shuttle undergoes the launch pad test-firing to verify the engines and other systems are operating. Columbia and Discovery passed their tests with no problems, but the ignition of Challenger's engines in a 1983 test uncovered a hydrogen leak that delayed its first flight more than two months.

If Thursday's firing is a success, Atlantis will make its flight debut on Oct. 3, carrying a crew of five and a classified Defense Department payload which reliable sources have identified as two military communications satellites.

Women survive at sea

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — Two American women and their Indonesian guides survived 21 days adrift in the Indian Ocean by eating toothpaste and rainwater, one woman's relatives reported.

The Indonesian government considered Judith Gale Schwartz and Rickey Berkowitz, both 27, and their guides lost and probably dead after their small motorboat became disabled Aug. 17 and drifted out to sea. Search parties were suspended last week.

Schwartz's mother, Ruth, who had flown to Indonesia, returned to California on Saturday after authorities said they had "exhausted all possibilities."

But late Sunday night the family received a call that the four were alive, having swum ashore after a storm wrecked their boat.

Scientists pledge to boycott Star Wars

BOSTON (AP) — Petitions are circulating on at least 37 campuses as hundreds of university scientists critical of President Reagan's proposed "Star Wars" anti-missile system band together in a nationwide research boycott to try to defeat the plan.

"For a long time there has been an incorrect belief that you could separate science and politics," said David Wright, a physicist and one of the effort's organizers. "What we're trying to tell people is that the reality of the situation is that they can no longer ignore the political implications of their research."

Congress has tentatively set aside $2.7 billion next year for research on the Strategic Defense Initiative, the formal name of the Star Wars plan. The project proposes to create an enormous shield of lasers and other weapons that could deflect Soviet missiles in an attack. Reagan has proposed a five-year budget of $26 billion for the program.

The petitions ask physicists, chemists and engineers to pledge not to apply for federal grants to work on the project.

"Our major emphasis is not to make a political statement but to point out that the bulk of the scientists who would be working on it think it is technically unfeasible and at the level of science fiction," said John Kogut, a physics professor at the University of Illinois in Urbana.

The movement began early this summer when similar petitions appeared coincidentally on the Urbana campus and at Cornell University. Researchers have since coordinated their efforts and spread the word to campuses throughout the country, said Sanford Gottlieb, executive director of United Campuses to Prevent Nuclear War, which is helping to coordinate the petition drive.

As of two weeks ago, 360 professors, graduate students and researchers had signed the pledge at Cornell alone. Gottlieb estimated the number of signers nationwide at "in the hundreds at least, and maybe the thousands."

"As far as we know, this is the first time on a national basis that any group of scientists and engineers has refused to work on a particular weapons system," he said.

Several prominent scientists from Cornell and Massachusetts Institute of Technology have scheduled a news conference Thursday in Boston to urge their colleagues to join the protest.

"It technically and strategically can't happen, but in its name, lots of destructive things will happen. It's a national trap," said Philip Morrison, an MIT physicist who worked on the Manhattan Project that developed the atomic bomb during World War II.

The petition states that scientists "pledge neither to accept Strategic Defense Initiative support or work on projects funded by SDI, and encourage others to join in this refusal."

Retirees' health insurance ailing, debt-ridden

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 9 million retired American workers depend on private health plans that are mired in a $200 billion debt, and the companies providing those benefits want the government to throw them a rope.

Representatives of RCA Corp., United Technologies Corp. and the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. told a Senate Finance subcommittee Monday that without help, they cannot continue such programs because of escalating health costs and a 1984 change in the federal tax code.

"We believe the degree of uncertainty in the health care environment makes it impractical to reach any confident conclusion regarding extending or improving coverage for retirees," United Technologies employee benefits director Carl Lindquist told the panel.

"To provide coverage now to retirees who have no company-paid coverage would be equivalent to signing a blank check," he said.

The crisis developed in the 1970s when companies which had been providing health care benefits to retirees for years were stung by startling increases in medical costs and an upswing in the number of retiring employees.

To meet higher expenses, companies stopped financing health care benefits from general revenues and instead created tax-exempt Voluntary Employee Benefit Associations to administer the costly programs.

But federal auditors were alarmed when companies started pre-paying for retirement health care plans to take advantage of tax-deductible contributions to the benefit associations.

"It was developing into an abused tax shelter," said a staffer for a House Republican who spoke on condition he remain anonymous. "Some companies were hiding behind their health care plans to cheat the (federal) treasury of tax revenue."

Congress responded with a provision of the 1984 Deficit Reduction Act, limiting the maximum contribution an employer can deduct for a retirement health plan and taxing money set aside to pre-pay health programs.

The law, which takes effect Dec. 31, has discouraged employers from creating or expanding retirement health programs. Several companies were further buffeted this year in two court decisions that said employers cannot cancel promised benefit plans for workers or raise coverage costs for those already retired.

"Employers are stuck. They have promised nearly $200 billion in health benefits for workers in retirement which they have not yet begun to fund," said Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., chairman of the subcommittee on savings, pensions and investment policy, which is studying the issue.

"That debt is a source of insecurity not only to the retirees who need those benefits, but to the employers who must pay for them," the senator said.

Heinz, who also heads the Senate Committee on Aging, is considering introducing a bill that would either reverse the changes in the Deficit Reduction Act or create new incentives for companjes to provide retirement health insurance.

But the Reagan administration, which is trying to overhaul the federal income tax system and hold off mounting budget deficits, is opposed to the idea of restoring any tax breaks to companies that lost them last year.

Vita Ostrander, president of the American Association of Retired Persons, said senior citizens have become more dependent on supplemental plans because Medicare now pays for only about 45 percent of health costs.

TREASURY BILLS

Yields rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yields on short-term Treasury securities rose in Monday auctions, posting the second consecutive weekly increases.

The Treasury Department sold $7.2 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 7.22 percent, up from last week's 7.12 percent. Another $7.2 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 7.39 percent, up from 7.3 percent last week.

The rates were the highest since Aug. 5, when three-month bills sold for 7.3 percent and six-month bills averaged 7.52 percent.

The new Treasury bill discount rates understate the actual return to investors — 7.46 percent for three-month bills and 7.78 percent for six-month bills.

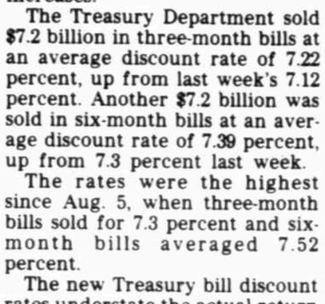

MONEY

Dollar mixed

LONDON (AP) — The dollar turned in a mixed performance against major currencies in early European trading today. Gold prices were lower.

In London, the dollar rose against the pound sterling, trading at $1.3062 to the pound, compared with $1.30625 late Monday.

Gold bullion prices were slightly lower as markets took no significant reaction to the possibility of an import ban on South African krugerrand gold coins, as announced by President Reagan on Monday.

In London, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended gold price of $320 per troy ounce, down from $320.50 bid late Monday.

In Zurich, Europe s biggest gold market, gold was selling at a bid $319.50 an ounce, down from $320 late Monday.

Earlier in Hong Kong, gold dropped the equivalent of 43 cents to close at $320.82 compared with $321.25 late Monday.

Texas, Japanese pact to boost trade investments

AUSTIN (AP) — New agreements between Texas and a pair of Japanese banks should boost trade and investments between the state and that Asian nation, officials say.

Dan S. Petty, chairman of the Texas Economic Development Commission, said the agency is "very optimistic that our cooperation with the Japanese banks will open many new avenues of trade and dialogue."

The commission, the state's primary economic development agency, Monday entered into the pacts with the Sanwa Bank and the Mitsubishi Bank. The agreements are similar to one already established between the commission and the Long-Term Credit Bank of Japan.

Petty, of Dallas, said there appears to be plenty of opportunity for business dealings between Texas and Japan.

"Texas offers the single best climate for Japanese investment and manufacturing in the United States. We look to Japan as an ideal market," he said.

Commission spokesman Jim Ferris said the agreements call on the economic development commission and the Japanese banks to exchange information on economic conditions and to meet periodically to discuss investment and trade possibilites.

"There are a number of things that make fast-growing Texas a good place for Japanese investment," Ferris said.

"The state's decided bent toward high-technology. Another is the real estate situation here," he said. "There are a lot of possibilities of things that can be done here."

Ferris said the agreements work both ways.

"It also can be an avenue that can be very helpful for a Texas businessman who wants to export his products or services to Japan," he said.

"This will give them three good places to go to get information about not just what the economic conditions are in Japan but also information about export licensing, permits, that sort of thing. These people (with the banks) are are very experienced," Ferris said.

Ferris said the agreement with the Long-Term Credit Bank was signed in February. He said a similar agreement with a fourfth Japanese bank is expected in the near future.

Midland Southwest reduces losses

From Staff Reports

Midland Southwest Corp. has reduced their losses for the second quarter of 1985 by $2,188,000, reporting a loss of $675,000 for the quarter. Losses for the second quarter of 1984 were $2,863,000.

Recently announced earnings show the company had a net loss of $3,077,000 for the first six months of 1985, ended June 30. This compares to a loss of $6,202,000 for the same period a year ago, a 50 percent reduction.

Midland Southwest had an operating cash flow of $599,000 for the first six months of 1985, compared to a loss of $7,000 in 1984. The contract drilling segment led the way in the corporation's improved financial status, reporting income of $8,000 for the second quarter, as opposed to a loss of $631,000 in 1984.

G. Arthur Donnelly III, chairman and president of the corporation, attributed the improvement in the contract drilling segment to improved operating efficiency, higher rig utilization and a change in the method of depreciation from straight line to units of production. This change in depreciation reduced net depreciation by $1,335,000.

He also attributed the financial improvement to a $1,104,000 reduction in interest for the first six months of 1985, compared to the same period in 1984. This was due to reduction in outstanding debt and a lowering of market interest rates by 3.5 points. Interest expense for the second quarter was down $680,000 over the second quarter of 1984.

Also, Equipment Inc. improved its gross profit margin $102,000from 1984 to 1985, a 47 percent increase.

Group says Reagan plan may hurt low-income taxpayers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Analysts have found a world of provisions in President Reagan's tax overhaul plan to disagree about, but they have been virtually unanimous in praising the measure's benefits for the poor.

But now, a research organization headed by an author of President Reagan's 1981 tax cuts concludes that many low-income taxpayers would suffer if Reagan's overhaul plan becomes law.

The Institute for Research on the Economics of Taxation, headed by Norman Ture, a former undersecretary of the treasury, noted Reagan often points out that a four-member family with $12,000 income would pay no tax under the plan. However, a single person with the same amount of income who was unemployed part of the year would face a stiff tax increase, the study found.

The institute calculated that a single earner with $7,800 in wages and $1,950 in unemployment benefits would pay 27 percent more tax under the president's proposal. A couple with $12,300 in wages and average itemized deductions would face a 28 percent boost in taxes — even with the higher personal exemptions included in Reagan's plan.

Many low-income elderly people would be worse off because the expanded elderly-disabled credit that Reagan recommends would be offset by the loss of the extra exemption now allowed people 65 or older, the institute said.

Too, the study concluded, repeal of the deduction for state and local taxes paid would be detrimental to many low-income itemizers — not just to the higher-income groups that the president says would be affected. "Among the low-income itemizers, it largely offsets the effect of the higher personal exemption," wrote economist John B. Egger.

Some of the tax issues that seem most important to members of Congress are of little or no interest to the public at large. An example: the tax credit allowed for business spending for increased research and experimentation. The 25 percent credit is due to expire at the end of the year, but a year-long campaign by high-technology businesses has resulted in more than half the members of the House signing a bill to make the credit permanent.

The Reagan administration also supports the credit, which would cost almost $7 billion in lost taxes from 1986 through 1990. Backers say that loss would be made up several times over because the credit improves U.S. companies' ability to compete with foreigners.

The battle for continuing the credit is being helped by the record U.S. trade deficit.

After his conviction of marijuana-sale charges was reversed, Greg C. Yocum of Tucson, Ariz., began working as an informant for narcotics agents but still had to square accounts with the IRS. He did not dispute the IRS finding that he failed to report more than $117,000 income from smuggling but denied that the underpayment of tax was due to fraud, which calls for a 50 percent penalty.

In Tax Court, Yocum said his drug addiction — which cost him up to $500 a day — left him mentally incapable of having fraudulent intent. "I really don't recall signing the tax forms, making them out, meeting with anybody," he testified.

Judge to rule this week on white oil arguments

AUSTIN (AP) — State District Judge Harley Clark says he will "walk around and think" for a few days before ruling on a Railroad Commission order that "white oil" operators claim could shut down their wells.

Nine lawyers in final arguments Monday gave Clark plenty to think about, and he told them it had been an "interesting case."

Clark is expected to rule on the case this week.

Ivan Hafley, representing 10 white oil operators in the 1.5 million-acre Panhandle Field, said Texas law does not say that oil has to be black, or even a liquid from start to finish of production.

The commission in a May order adopted a staff conclusion that oil has to be liquid in the reservoir, liquid in the wellbore and liquid at the surface.

This would be contrary to what white oil operators produce by chilling vapors to as low as minus-20 degrees, a water-white liquid they call oil.

Major companies claim this practice is draining gas reserves that belong to them. There have been estimates that oil and gas reserves in the field are worth $27 billion, which explains why the controversy has gone on for four years.

Hafley's clients were joined by four others with Panhandle Field interests in suing after the commission order was adopted to retest wells that use refrigeration, or LTX, units to chill vapors to liquid.

The white liquid is used by the operators to meet oil-gas ratios required by the commission, and some acknowledge that their wells would not be classified as oil wells without use of the liquid. An oil well must produce one or more barrels of oil per 100,000 cubic feet of gas.

The classification is important for several reasons, including that an oil well can be drilled on 10 acres, a gas well on 640 acres. Also, more gas can legally be produced from an oil well, and that gas gets first sales priority in times of surplus. Then, too, operators might own only oil rights and could not produce gas unless it accompanied oil production.

Milk, sugar subsidies add $7 billion to grocery bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm subsidies for milk, peanuts and sugar add an extra $7 billion to Americans' grocery bills each year and push the cost of foods containing those products to 25 cents of every food dollar, a consumer group study shows.

Farm pice supports add 60 cents to the price of a five-pound bag of sugar, 15 cents to a half gallon of ice cream and 45 cents to a three-pound jar of peanut butter, Ellen Haas, director of Public Voice for Food and Health Policy, said Monday.

"American consumers are financing the sugar and peanut commodity programs with their grocery money, and they are getting absolutely no return," Haas said in a statement. "On top of that, they are paying for the dairy program twice — with grocery money and again with tax money."

Overall, dairy supports cost consumers $4 billion annually, she said — $2 billion in higher grocery prices and $2 billion in taxes. Sugar supports add $3 billion to the cost of sugar-containing foods, and peanuts cost at least $250 million more than they would without price supports, she said.

Public Voice announced the figures at a news conference as the House and Senate agriculture committees put the final touches on new farm legislation to replace the law that expires at the end of this month.

"Consumers favor paying their fair share to maintain a healthy, well-balanced farm economy," Haas said. But, she added, "These three commodity programs take unfair advantage of us, especially in the supermarket. That is our bottom line."

She said several members of Congress will attempt to amend the legislation to what her group considers a more pro-consumer form when the farm bills reach the full House and Senate later this month.

Dairy interests are seeking renewal of a program that would pay farmers not to produce milk and would key milk price supports to the farmer's cost of production. Haas said a straight cut in price supports would be more advantageous to grocery shoppers.

OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

New Mexico play still surprising

From Staff Reports

More than 30 years later, the Lovington Strawn play in Lea County, New Mexico is still producing surprises, rewards and disappointments for the players that keep coming and going.

An area with intense well control, prospects are for the most part geologically generated with some seismic assistance. Porosity and the strength of the feature generally determine the success of the prospect, according to Mike McCullough, district exploration manager for Pennzoil, but Amerind Oil Co. lists permeability as the biggest factor in well success.

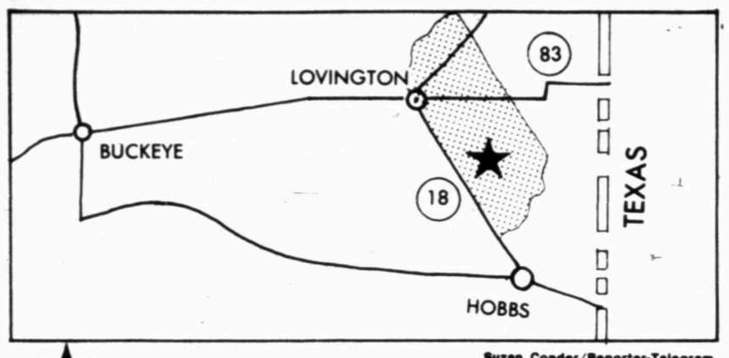

Last week Pennzoil reported the completion of its No.1 Viersen six miles southeast of Lovington for 1,056 bopd and 754 Mcfd gas from selected perforations in the Strawn at 11,000 ft. No offset well has been started in conjunction, but Pennzoil does plan a drilling program to develop the discovery.

"We consider it a significant discovery," said McCullough, "but it is typical for the play area. One well to the north of this discovery has produced over 1 million barrels and is still producing." He said that Pennzoil would be happy to get five wells on the new feature.

Amerind calls the play highly erratic, full of surprises and hard to predict. "A good feature will cover the better part of a section and wells will potential for 300-425 barrels," according to a spokesman for the firm. Amerind has drilled seven producers and only one dry hole in the play area which is relatively free of drilling problems.

Players in the trend have been as erratic as the play itself, working the trend for a period, racking up some successes and failures, then leaving it to try something else before coming back to the trend. It's hot and cold transitions has made it susceptible to the entry of newcomers from time to time as lease acreage becomes available. Oldtimers, like Pennzoil, have been plugging away at the trend for more than 20 years. Current players in the trend are: Yates Petroleum, Harvey Yates, Mesa, Inexco, Amerind and Pennzoil.

Fields that have been discovered and developed in the play area in the past ten years include: Humble City, Humble City South, Lovington East, North Lovington, and the Casey.

Bone Spring discovery flows 241 barrels oil

HARVEY E. YATES has completed an undesignated Bone Spring discovery, just north of the Shugart field and west of the Mesquite field in Eddy County, New Mexico.

The No. 2 Hondo "4" Federal potentialed to flow 241 barrels of 38 gravity crude, 223 Mcfd and 25 barrels of water on a 24/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 140 psi. Gas-oil ratio is 925:1.

The well is flowing through Bone Spring perforations 8,248 to 8,391 ft., which Yates treated with 130,000 gallons and 31,000 lbs. sand.

Scheduled as a 9,900 ft. test, the well reached total depth of 8,856 ft. and plugged back to 8,653 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 8,855 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 3,272.2 ft., include the Rustler at 660 ft., Yates at 2,075, Queen at 3,160, Grayburg at 3,650, San Andres at 4,010, and Bone Spring at 5,204 ft. Pay was topped at 8,248 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from south and east lines of Section 4, T18s, R31e.

Hodel bargains to limit offshore oil drilling in California

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary Donald Hodel is returning to the bargaining table with members of the California congressional delegation in an attempt to modify their tentative agreement to limit offshore oil drilling in that state.

Hodel said during a tour of California last week that it appeared the negotiators had selected "the wrong 150 tracts" to open for offshore drilling when the agreement was announced July 16.

He complained that "these tracts have very little potential" for yielding petroleum resources, and said later that "it's clear this (agreement) is not in the national interest."

Interior Department spokesman David Prosperi sidestepped reporters' questions Monday whether the deal was dead. But an environmentalist leader, Karl Wendelowski, executive director of Friends of the Earth, said the agreement seems to be unraveling.

Under the agreement, 150 nine-square-mile tracts would be offered for oil and gas exploration off the California coast in exchange for extending until the year 2000 a congressional moratorium on exploratory drilling of the state's remaining 6,310 undeveloped offshore tracts.

The Los Angeles Times, quoting Hodel aides who it did not identify, said today that Hodel has drawn up a new list of 150 potential tracts that includes only 14 of the tracts originally included in his compromise with California's Congressional delegation.

Wendelowski, who conferred with Hodel on Monday along with Louise Dunlap, president of the Environmental Policy Institute, said the interior secretary left him with the impression that he would inform the California legislators today that "the whole situation was deteriorating."

Wendelowski said Hodel "seems to be backing away from even describing the agreement as an agreement," and that "the agreement everyone assumed was negotiated in good faith wasn't."

Prosperi told reporters that Hodel "wants to continue negotiations as the best way to resolve the issue of offshore drilling in California," recognizing that the 150 tracts involved in the July 16 agreement constituted "the best political agreement he could get."

Hodel asked for today's meeting in a letter to all 45 House members from California plus the state's two senators.

Barry Toiv, a spokesman for Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., the delegation's chief negotiator, said last week that "minor changes will be considered" in the July 16 agreement but that "major changes will not be."

The current moratorium banning new oil and gas exploration in offshore California tracts expires Sept. 30. Congress has prohibited exploratory drilling off most of the California coast for the past four years for fear of environmental damage.

UTPB to offer production class this fall

University of Texas at the Permian Basin will offer a course in the "Elements of Petroleum Production" during the Fall Semester of 1985. The course is intended to provide the non-engineer with a good over view of the requirements necessary to produce and evaluate oil and gas leases.

Instructor for the course will be Richard A. Burns, Unocal's Central Region Manager of Planning and Valuation. Burns has 15 years experience in production and reservoir engineering. His most recent experience is oriented toward producing property acquisition. His educational background includes a degree in petroleum engineering from the University of Oklahoma and a Master of business administration from the University of Wyoming. He is a registered professional engineer in Louisiana, Oklahoma, Utah and Wyoming.

The course will draw from the background and experience of Burns while incorporating a text in basic petroleum production.

Those wishing to attend the course should contact the office of admission at the University of Texas, Permian Basin in Odessa. Registration for the course is still being accepted by the University.

Texas Air deal with Icahn seen

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The Texas Air Corp. has agreed to withdraw from its merger pact with Trans World Airlines, sources close to the two airlines said on Monday. The agreement, if signed, would pave the way for Carl C. Icahn, the New York financier who has acquired 52 percent of TWA's shares, to officially take control of the nation's fourth-largest airline.

The agreement, reportedly reached over the weekend, would end the months-long battle for TWA between Icahn and Frank Lorenzo, the chairman of Texas Air whose control of the carrier seemed all but certain two months ago. An investment group headed by Icahn had secured a majority of TWA's stock, but the airline's previous agreement to be acquired by Texas Air remained a stumbling block for Icahn.

Although a definitive agreement has not yet been signed, those close to the negotiations have predicted that it would be done soon, possibly on Tuesday. Analysts, remained cautious, however, citing two other occasions when Lorenzo failed to sign the papers after Texas Air had reached similar accords with Icahn.

"This means the battle is coming to an end, but until you have a signed contract it hasn't ended, and it's simply not a fait accompli," said Robert J. Joedicke, an airline analyst with Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. "But the longer it drags on, the more it hurts the company. It's hard to get executives to do their work and to have the staff not be confused when things are in turmoil."

In the other two instances, a number of issues apparently held up Lorenzo's signature, most notably the question of whether Texas Air would be required to pay to TWA a profit of about $2 million that Texas Air made on shares purchased at a time when the carrier and Icahn had agreed to refrain from acquiring additional stock. Sources close to the most recent negotiations, however, said that issue was not a major problem.

Meanwhile, TWA's board of directors, in a telephone conference on Monday to discuss the terms of the reported Icahn-Lorenzo accord, agreed to proceed with it.

Icahn is offering $24 a share for all the TWA stock he does not already own. Texas Air had offered $26 a share. TWA's stock was down 12.5 cents on Monday on the New York Stock Exchange, closing at $22.125.

Texas Air's deal to acquire TWA was thwarted by agreements worked out between Icahn and the pilots' and machinists' unions, under which the unions granted major concessions in wages and benefits.

Mayor's aide charged with embezzlement

DETROIT (AP) — A former United Auto Workers union official who now is a top aide to Detroit's mayor has been indicted on federal embezzlement charges related to his union job.

Robert "Buddy" Battle, an executive assistant to Mayor Coleman A. Young, was named Monday in a 10-count indictment that stemmed from a two-year investigation of allegations he embezzled money from union funds that were used to finance convention activities. They also contained money raised to help families of victims of the Atlanta child murders five years ago.

The indictment came a day before today's mayoral primary election in which Young is seeking nomination to run for a fourth four-year term, but U.S. Attorney Joel Shere said at a news conference that the timing was "totally coincidental."

"This indictment has nothing to do with politics," Shere said.

The indictment accused Battle, 68, of depositing about $40,000 of union money into his personal money-market account in March 1983, and of improperly using smaller amounts for club memberships, cash and a car.

The money was embezzled from two funds set up by Battle when he was director of the UAW's Detroit-area Region 1A, according to the indictment.

AGA study shows need for changes in industry

WASHINGTON — A study analyzing high cost natural gas pipeline-/producer contracts underscores the need for changes in the proposed new regulations affecting the natural gas industry by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC), the American Gas Association has announced.

More than 85 percent of the contracts governing sales of high cost gas, representing 15 percent of total gas purchases, will be in effect after 1990. A study by Foster Assoicates, Inc., for A.G.A. states the average price of this high cost gas is $4.49/mmbtu as contrasted with an overall average price for all pipeline purchased gas of $2.64/mmbtu.

The study also points out that 69 percent of the gas currently being purchased under contracts signed prior to 1982 had no market-out or economic-out protection. Market-out clauses did not become prevelant in gas purchase contracts prior to that year. Starting in 1982, these market responsive clauses have been in 80 percent of new contracts, the study points out.

"The study's results emphasize that without proper regulatory actions by FERC, these contracts for high cost gas are certainly above today's market clearing levels and will remain in effect without individual contract renegotiation between producers and pipelines," A.G.A. President George H. Lawrence said. "However, the FERC Notice of Proposed Rulemaking of May 30 seems to assume that the contracts will end soon by their own terms.

"The avowed purpose of the May 30 proposed rule is to make the natural gas industry more responsive to a competitive market, but it fails to respond adequately to the problem of high cost gas. This study shows the long-term nature of these contracts and their potentially disruptive impact on all segments of the gas industry — producers/sellers who need increased demand, and pipelines-distributors/buyers who need to be competitive in the marketplace," Lawrence said.

"The study results, that show these higher price contracts are longer-term in duration, highlight the importance of private contract renegotiation. As A.G.A. testified last month, such renegotiation would be facilitated by the creation of a seperate category where all market responsive new gas could be segregated out and sold.

"FERC should modify its block pricing and take-or-pay relief provisions to encourage these renegotiations at a minimum cost to consumers," the A.G.A. president said.

WHITE OIL—

P.M. Schenkkan, representing Anadarko Production and Pan Eastern Exploration companies, said the white oil argument could ruin the commission's well classification and proration systems.

Conceivably, Schenkkan said, operators all over Texas could convert any gas well to an oil well with an LTX unit.

He said 12 judges already had ruled that chilled vapors could not be counted as oil. He named six judges, three Railroad Commission hearing examiners and the three commissioners themselves.

Hafley said the commission "sat back and watched" for eight years while white oil operators spent "hundreds of millions of dollars" on LTX units, and to prohibit use of the units now "would be so fundamentally unfair as to be unconscionable and should not be condoned by a court of equity."

He said vapors chilled to a liquid form by the LTX units were merely underground liquids that had vaporized as pressure dropped because of oil and gas production.

Bill Boyd of McKinney, on Hafley's side as the lawyer for four Panhandle Field interest owners, said white oil operators had "not been hiding, not covering up and believed (what they were doing) was lawful.

"At a very minimum, what the Railroad Commission did was acquiesce in what it knew had been going on for eight years," he said.

Schenkkan said Hafley's argument is "once an oil well, always an oil well," or "once an oil well, you ought to be allowed to count anything you can count" to keep it an oil well.

John Soule, lawyer for Diamond Shamrock Exploration Co., said operators had risked using LTX units because gas production from white oil wells can bring in $350,000 net profit a year after the well pays for itself the first year.

The legal match had Hafley and Boyd squared off against two assistant attorneys general representing the commission and seven company lawyers.

Whatever Judge Clark's decision, the case is almost certain to be appealed to the 3rd Court of Appeals in Austin.

Group seeks second look at Ford case

WASHINGTON (AP) — An auto safety group concerned about an alleged defect in millions of 1966-1980 Ford Motor Co. cars is asking the federal courts to force the government to take another look at "park-to-reverse" accidents involving Ford automatic transmissions.

The Center for Auto Safety filed suit Monday, asking that the Department of Transportation be forced to re-open its investigation of 1966 to mid-1980 Ford, Mercury and Lincoln cars whose automatic transmissions allegedly are defective. The case was closed in 1980.

The auto safety group claims the vehicles "are equipped with automatic transmissions which can fail to engage or hold in park and then shift into reverse gear, thereby resulting in sudden and unexpected vehicle movements."

Ford spokesman Robert Waite said "there can be no basis for the center's suit because there is no mechanical defect in Ford automatic transmissions."

PUBLIC NOTICE

BRIEF EXPLANATORY STATEMENTS OF PROPOSED

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

GENERAL ELECTION

NOVEMBER 5, 1985

PROPOSITION NO. 1 ON THE BALLOT

Sections 1 and 2 of House Joint Resolution 6 propose a constitutional amendment that would authorize the Texas Water Development Board to issue an additional $980 million of Texas Water Development bonds.

The additional bonds to be issued will be dedicated for deposit in the Texas Water Development Fund, with $190 million of those bond proceeds to be used for water supply loans and facilities acquisition and with $400 million of those bond proceeds to be used for state participation in the acquisition and development of facilities for storage, transmission, transportation, and treatment of water and wastewater. Of the remaining bonds authorized, $190 million will be dedicated for use in water quality enhancement projects, and $200 million will be dedicated exclusively for flood control projects.

The amendment would also allow the legislature to provide for the creation, administration, and implementation of a bond insurance program to which the state pledges up to $250 million of its general credit to insure payment of the principal of and interest on bonds or other obligations issued by political subdivisions of the state for water conservation, water development, water quality enhancement, flood control, drainage, recharge, chloride control or desalinization. Unless authorized to continue by a two-thirds vote of the members of each house of the Legislature, the bond insurance program will expire on the sixth anniversary of the date on which this section becomes a part of the constitution. Bond insurance issued before expiration of the program will not be affected by such expiration.

The amendment would authorize the legislature to create and appropriate money to special funds in the state treasury to make grants, loans, and other financial assistance available to governmental entities for certain enumerated water planning purposes. Also, the legislature would be permitted to extend the benefits of constitutionally approved water projects to nonprofit water supply corporations.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment to authorize the issuance of an additional $980 million of Texas Water Development Bonds, to create special water funds for water conservation, water development, water quality enhancement, flood control, drainage, subsidence control, recharge, chloride control, agricultural soil and water conservation, and desalinization, to authorize a bond insurance program, and to clarify the purposes for which Texas Water Development Bonds may be issued."

PROPOSITION NO. 2 ON THE BALLOT

Section 3 of House Joint Resolution 6 proposes a constitutional amendment that would allow the Texas Water Development Board to issue and sell Texas agricultural water conservation bonds in an amount not to exceed $200 million, if authorized to do so by a two-thirds vote of the members of each house of the legislature. The Texas agricultural water conservation bonds would be general obligations of the State of Texas, and would be paid from the first money coming into the state treasury in each fiscal year. The amendment would allow Texas agricultural water conservation bonds to be issued and sold only for four years after the date on which this Act becomes a part of the constitution.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

PROPOSITION NO. 3 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 54 proposes a constitutional amendment that would permit the legislature to authorize a city or town to spend public funds and levy assessments for the relocation or replacement of water laterals on private property if such relocation or replacement is done in conjunction with or immediately following the relocation or replacement of water mains serving the property. Any legislative enactment permitting the expenditure of funds for such purposes would authorize the city or town to fix a lien on the property, with the owners' consent, for the cost of relocating or replacing the water laterals, and would provide that such cost shall be assessed against the property, with repayment by the property owner to be amortized over a period not to exceed five years at the rate of interest set by law. Such liens could not be enforced until after five years from the date the liens were affixed.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment to authorize the legislature to enact laws permitting a city or town to spend public funds and levy assessments for the relocation or replacement of water laterals on private property."

PROPOSITION NO. 4 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 21 proposes a constitutional amendment that would authorize the use of the proceeds from the sale of permanent school fund land to acquire other land for the permanent school fund. Currently, the constitution requires that proceeds from the sale of such land be invested in certain bonds and other securities.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment authorizing proceeds from the sale of land dedicated to the permanent school fund to be used to acquire other land for that fund."

PROPOSITION NO. 5 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 89 proposes a constitutional amendment that would enable the legislature to regulate the provision of health care by hospital districts by determining the services the district must provide, by setting requirements a resident must meet in order to qualify for services, and by determining any other relevant provisions necessary for providing health care to residents.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment to authorize the legislature to regulate the provision of health care by hospital districts."

PROPOSITION NO. 6 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 6 proposes a constitutional amendment that would enable the State of Texas to enter into an agreement with another state to confine inmates from the state of Texas in penal or correctional facilities of the other state.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment to permit state prisoners to be placed in penal facilities of another state pursuant to an interstate agreement."

PROPOSITION NO. 7 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 27 proposes a constitutional amendment that would authorize the commissioners court of Chambers County to divide Chambers County into not less than two and not more than six justice precincts. Under current constitutional law, Chambers County may be divided into not less than two and not more than five justice precincts.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment authorizing Chambers County to be divided into two to six precincts."

PROPOSITION NO. 8 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 9 proposes a constitutional amendment that would grant an additional $500 million in bonding authority to the Veterans' Land Board for the veterans' housing assistance program. Under the current constitution, the Veterans' Land Board is authorized by Article III, Section 49-b-1 to issue and sell not more than $800 million in bonds, $500 million of which may be used for the Veterans' Housing Assistance Fund. This amendment would increase that authorization to permit the issuance and sale of up to $1.3 billion in bonds, $1 billion of which would be used for the Veterans' Housing Assistance Fund. In addition, the amendment would remove the current definition of "veteran" from the constitution and permit the legislature to redefine "veteran" as the changing times and circumstances require.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment providing $500 million in additional bonding authority for the veterans' housing assistance program and changing the definition of those veterans eligible to participate in the veterans' land program and the veterans' housing program by authorizing the legislature by law to define an eligible veteran for the purposes of those programs."

PROPOSITION NO. 9 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 72 proposes a constitutional amendment that would permit the legislature either to enact a statute or to attach a rider to the General Appropriations Act to require prior approval of the expenditure or emergency transfer of any funds appropriated by the legislature to state governmental agencies.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment to protect public funds by authorizing prior approval of expenditure or emergency transfer of state appropriations."

PROPOSITION NO. 10 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 19 proposes a constitutional amendment that would authorize the legislature to provide for the issuance of general obligation bonds, the proceeds of which would be deposited in a fund to be known as the farm and ranch finance program fund. The fund would be administered by the Veterans' Land Board and would be used to make loans and provide other financial assistance for the purchase of farm and ranch land. The amount of bonds outstanding at any one time would be limited to $500 million. The principal and interest that becomes due on such bonds in each fiscal year would be paid from amounts remaining in the interest and sinking fund at the close of the prior fiscal year, with the balance due to be appropriated from treasury revenues in the fiscal year when such amounts become due.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment authorizing the issuance of general obligation bonds to provide financing assistance for the purchase of farm and ranch land."

PROPOSITION NO. 11 ON THE BALLOT

FDIC won't sue itself to recover damages

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. has decided not to sue itself in trying to recover approximately $2.1 million in damages arising from the alleged mismanagement of the First National Bank of Midland's Savings and Retirement Plan.

FDIC became receiver of the defunct bank on Oct. 14, 1983, when the 93-year-old independent bank was declared insolvent by the U.S. Comptroller of the Currency and was closed. Since then, the FDIC has liquidated the plan's assets and converted them to cash.

And, according to a petition filed in federal court in Midland, the FDIC has distributed $6,478,353.06 to 937 plan participants.

Since the FDIC says "several conflicts of interest" would arise were it to file a suit against itself as trustee and administrator of the FNB's Savings and Retirement Plan, FDIC is asking U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton to:

— Approve FDIC's resignation as trustee and administrator of the plan.

— Appoint a successor trustee and administrator to protect the interests of the plan's participants.

— Maintain jurisdiction over the plan and successor trustee and administrator appointed by the court while the successors prosecute the breach-of-duty claims.

"The most apparent of these (conflicts of interest) was the fact that the FDIC would be the plaintiff in such a suit, while it would also be a defendant in its capacity as receiver (of the bank)," FDIC says in its petition.

While it was liquidating the bank's Savings and Retirement Plan, the FDIC says it "conducted a thorough investigation of the bank's administration of the plan and trust for a four-year period preceding the bank's insolvency" in October 1983.

"This consisted of reviewing the propriety and prudence of the various investments that were made by the bank of the plan's assets, as well as determining whether the bank properly diversified the plan's assets," according to the FDIC petition.

In that regard, FDIC has concluded that "in a number of instances, either the bank or its officers or directors breached their fiduciary duty to properly administer the plans and its assets."

In addition, FDIC has filed an insurance claim on behalf of the plan.

An insurance company had issued the bank an error-and-omission policy which "insured the bank's trust department against claims for damages arising from the bank's trust department activities.

"This notice of claims," says the FDIC, "discusses seven specific areas in which the bank and its officers and directors are alleged to have breached their fiduciary duty in administering the plan."

FDIC says that the alleged breaches total $2.1 million in damages.

After the Oct. 14, 1983, failure of the bank, RepublicBank First National Midland purchased approximately $301.5 million of the bank's assets and assumed approximately $598 million of the bank's deposits and liabilities.

However, under the Purchase and Assumption Agreement between FDIC and RepublicBank, RepublicBank declined to assume sponsorship or trusteeship of the bank's Savings and Retirement Plan. As a result, FDIC began to terminate the plan and in doing so uncovered the alleged breaches.

One-time computer failure now teaches 'computer camps'

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Eighteen years ago Jack Broom didn't graduate from college because of a computer class.

Today, 41-year-old Broom is founder of a Dallas-based business that teaches corporate employees how to use their company's computers.

Broom and his colleague, Linda Sullivan, are in Midland this week to conduct two 3-day computer "camps" for 20 Exxon executives.

"It took 15 years, a lot of psychotheraphy and a lobotomy," Broom says before he touched a computer again, after failing from Williams College in Massachusetts for turning in a computer paper late.

In 1982 Broom began to offer computer training with his four-member company, Broom Inc., because he says all types of corporations buy computers, but their employees don't know how to use them.

"People have been promised the world by computers and a lot of it hasn't been delivered. And it hasn't been delivered because people aren't using them and don't know what to do with them," Broom says.

"They're saying there's going to be a computer on your desk Thursday and Friday you better be smart about it."

Broom's teaching programs average around $800 per person for students who travel to Dallas. He said the trainers try to emphasize the fun found in computers by labeling the courses, "computer camps."

"I remember hearing that kids who go to camps learn skills without thinking of it as being taught. Even though they are learning, they don't think of it as school. We try to create an environment where people don't think, 'Damn, I'm being sent to computer school;' instead they say, 'I get to go to computer camp,'" he says.

Due to his early failure with computers and the confusing language of some computer programs, Broom says he can sympathize with many employees who fear using one.

"The system is stupid. It's been created by people who went to MIT for three years. Their language doesn't mean the same to people who are trying to use it for 30 minutes. Words mean different things. I wouldn't be surprised people get confused," he says.

Broom says he tries to overcome his students' fear of computers by joking about computers and by having both the teachers and students monitor each others' screens to analyze mistakes and find out why they occurred.

"Hard-bitten oil guys" to 45-year-old white male executives who don't know how to type, are the range of students Broom sees during his computer camps, which he has conducted nationwide for such corporations as Citicorp and Continental Bank.

"All these people are pretty highly schooled, but some of them have had nothing to do with computers," he says.

Broom says his company's training is unique because the teachers do not have a traditional background in computer training. His company tries to give corporations a handle on their computer hardware by "trying to impose what they want to do on the computer, as opposed to the computer imposing on them."

Midlanders must 'wait awhile' for Yugos

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Midlanders looking for the Yugo, the low-priced Yugoslavian compact automobile that was recenty introduced to the American market, will have to "wait awhile," before the car is available locally, said a Houston car dealer.

"We're the first franchiser in Texas for Yugo of America and we won't even be getting our first shipment for a few weeks," said Rolfe Seigert of Jay Marks Volkswagen.

According to Seigert, the import, which has a base price of $3,990, can be ordered by phone, although "there has already been a large response" to the Texas debut.

The front-wheel-drive car attracted national attention in recent months both from its unusually low price tag and its unlikely Eastern European roots.

"We have franchises all over the East Coast and some in the Midwest," said Jonas Halprein, a Yugo of America spokesman. "It is literally moving across the country."

According to Halprein, the Houston franchise was "only recently appointed" but should be quickly followed in the future by other Yugo dealerships.

Seigert, however, had other ideas.

"We would like to be the only dealership for as long as possible," he said. "Of course, we know that we can't be the only one forever, but we can hope."

Seigert stated that Midlanders interested in the economy car could place a phone order but that a $500 deposit is required when ordering. The inexpensive automobile, however, cannot be purchased for the base price, he added.

"There is $95 for advertising and $305 for destination charges added on, and it's an extra $790 (approximately) for air conditioning, if desired," said Seigert. The total price for the air conditioned-model comes to more than $5,000.

Seigert also said that, although he is expecting his first shipment, the available colors are still not known. The Yugo has a 1.1 four-cylinder overhead cam engine, four-wheel independent suspension and two-door design.

While Seigert touts the Yugo as "a finely crafted automobile that has proven itself on the highways of Europe for years," at least one local foreign automobile dealer sees no threat from the Yugoslavian invasion into the Texas market.

"We can't compete price-wise with the Yugo," said David Lewis of Dotson Datsun. "Our nearest car sells for $6,790, but our car will outlast it."

According to Lewis, the Yugo, is being openly marketed as a "throw-away car."

"It's only designed to run about 60,000 to 70,000 miles," he said. "You pay for what you get."

Lewis also stated that Yugo wasn't designed to be rebuilt or repaired and the company didn't even have a network system for repairs.

Seigert, however, insists that the Texas franchise will offer full service and parts for Yugo owners.

He also added that it "would be quite some time" before a Yugo dealership is available in the Midland area.

Ector County OKs tax rate, exemptions

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County Commissioners Monday approved a tax rate of 33 cents per $100 of assessed valuation and a 1985-86 budget of slightly more than $25.4 million.

The tax rate will produce slightly more than $17.8 million in tax revenues with the remaining nearly $7.6 million to come from federal revenue sharing and various county revenue-producing activities and fees.

Commissioners also approved a $25,000 senior citizen or over-65 exemption and a 10 percent homestead exemption, but declined to approve extension of discounts allowed during the first three months taxes are due if the county tax notices are mailed late.

In other action, commissioners rejected a request from the City of Odessa to double the amount the county pays the city for fire protection and ambulance service beyond the city limits.

The city had requested a payment of slightly more than $650,000 for those services, but commissioners decided to offer a counter proposal of only $330,000.

Commissioners also considered proposed contracts from the Texas Tech Health Sciences Center and County Attorney Gary Garrison concerning the sale of county animal shelter animals for research purposes.

The court voted to accept the contract submitted by Garrison, changing only the wording of the section concerning the price to be paid for animals.

Garrison's proposed contract had called for a payment of $7.50 per animal sold for research purposes under certain conditions. Commissioners raised the amount to $15 and the wording to read that the public should pay no more to purchase animals from the shelter than the amount paid by Texas Tech.

Commissioners also heard a report from animal shelter director Melinda Tindle concerning the methods used to dispose of animals not adopted or sold for research purposes.

A euthanasia chamber, utilizing carbon monoxide, and chemical injection are the two methods used, she said.

The carbon monoxide method took about 20 minutes to kill the animals, Ms. Willis said, while the chemical injection method took only about a minute. She said she preferred the latter method but lacked the funds and personnel required to use it exclusively.

Judge Jan Fisher questioned whether she had contacted the city council to see if the city might increase its support of the shelter. Ms. Willis said she had not appeared before the council to seek a funding increase and Ms. Fisher ordered her to do so.

Ector County officials at odds over auditor

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County's four district judges and county commissioners court members appear headed for a confrontation concerning efforts to move the internal auditor from control of the county auditor to that of the commissioners court.

The transfer of the internal auditor was approved by commissioners over the objections of 70th District Court Judge Gene Ater, who pointed out that state statutes set forth the scope and duties of the county auditor who is appointed by the district judges and under their direct control.

Commissioners ignored Ater's advice and voted to accept the recommendation of Elms, Faris & Co., an outside audit firm that has done the county's annual audit in past years, "that since the Internal Auditor is responsible for examining the County Auditor's office, that the Internal Auditor be reportable to the Fiscal Services Director in order to avoid any possible conflict of interest."

In a memorandum to commissioners court members, Fiscal Services Director Tom Pace said, "A budget amendment is necessary" to accomplish the transfer of the internal auditor.

Ater protested the transfer of funds from the auditor's budget, saying it would prohibit the auditor from performing his statutorial duties and noted it is the specific responsibility of the county auditor under state statute to do all internal audits.

Under state statutes (Vernon's Annotated Texas Civil Statutes, Articles 1645 through 1675), state district judges (or judge) in Texas counties are given total authority to hire, fire and set the salary of the county auditor. The salary of a county auditor, under state statute, can be no more than that of the county tax assessor-collector, though the salary can be less at the discretion of the judges.

According to the state statutes, county commissioners have no say in the selection of the county's auditor except as the district judges (or judge) may allow. The county auditor's term of office is two years, at the discretion of the judges.

Dyess officials asked to aid hungry

ABILENE (AP) — Officials of Dyess Air Force Base have been asked by the Abilene Feed the Hungry campaign to help deliver part of a food donation worth more than $1 million to Ethiopia.

A Fort Worth agency which collected the food in Oakland, Calif., has no way to transport it overseas, Tim McClarty, spokesman for the group, said on Monday.

McClarty said officials for the Fort Worth's "Hope for Africa" ministries called him when they heard about Abilene's Feed the Hungry campaign and asked for help in transporting food.

Residents were earlier asked by Abilene Feed the Hungry campaign officials to fast on Aug. 29 and donate the money they saved by not buying food.

Officials said part of the money would go to the Abilene Meals on Wheels program and part would go to USA for Africa.

McClarty said the group has collected slightly less than $5,000 locally but the large food donation put the group over its goal of $1 million.

He said among the donated food is 30,000 pounds of perishable baby food that the group's organizers are trying to get Dyess personnel to help airlift.

Detective fulfills dream as 'super crime fighter'

By JENNY NARKIEWICZ

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — As a child, Ron Robertson wanted to be a "super crime fighter like Superman." In a sense, the 37-year-old Port Arthur police detective is fulfilling that childhood wish.

"I've got enough gumption to try this," Robertson says of his alter-ego, a character called McGruff, the Crime Dog. "And, the kids think of him as super crime-fighting hero."

Robertson, a seven-year veteran of the department, has spent the last year and a half in the juvenile division. While many of his cases deal with children who are in trouble with the law, some deal with child abuse — physical, sexual and psychological.

"I love children," he says. "I have a 9-year-old daughter and I know how special children are."

It's only been within the last 18 months that child abuse has come into focus, he says. About the same time, he saw a nationally-released poster of the life-sized dog who wants to "take a bite out of crime."

Robertson, along with Rosemary Hanicak, a Port Arthur Health Department employee, founded the Child Abuse Task Force last summer. The task force is open to interested any agency or individual.

"I knew the Beaumont police had McGruff puppets," he says. "But I don't think anyone had the costume. I'm a past member of the Evening Sertoma Club and I went to the members and asked them to buy the costume."

Robertson says the $320 investment was worthwhile. "We've probably gotten $3 million worth of value out of it," he says. "Because of the attention McGruff has received and because of our television spots, in the last month, four cases of abuse were turned in because the kids saw McGruff. The kids brought the abuse to the attention of another person. There's no telling how many others have been helped because of McGruff."

Because of that, he says, "It's worth all the sweat in the world."

"When I first put on the costume, I took a lot of teasing," he says. "But the officers here realize it's a good technique in keeping a child's limited attention span interested. And, the teasing is worth it because I know McGruff is getting through to the kids."

And, Robertson wonders how many people have stopped abusing children because of McGruff. McGruff's programs deal with all aspects of personal safety, including drug and alcohol abuse, and not just child abuse.

Robertson's office is decorated with bright, colorful posters and several pieces of children's artwork. It also serves as a videotaping room where Robertson interviews young victims of abuse.

"There's a lot of new techniques available in dealing with child abuse," Robertson says. "And, there's a lot of good, qualified officers in the Golden Triangle who successfully use the techniques in interviewing children. I'm just part of that team."

Normally, Robertson can leave his cases in the office at the end of a day. But occasionally, one will come along that will bother him for weeks.

"One case involved a precious 4-year-old girl who was completely sexually abused," he says. "She was very believable and told us what happened using our anatomically-correct dolls. At the time of indictment a year ago, it was our youngest child abuse case."

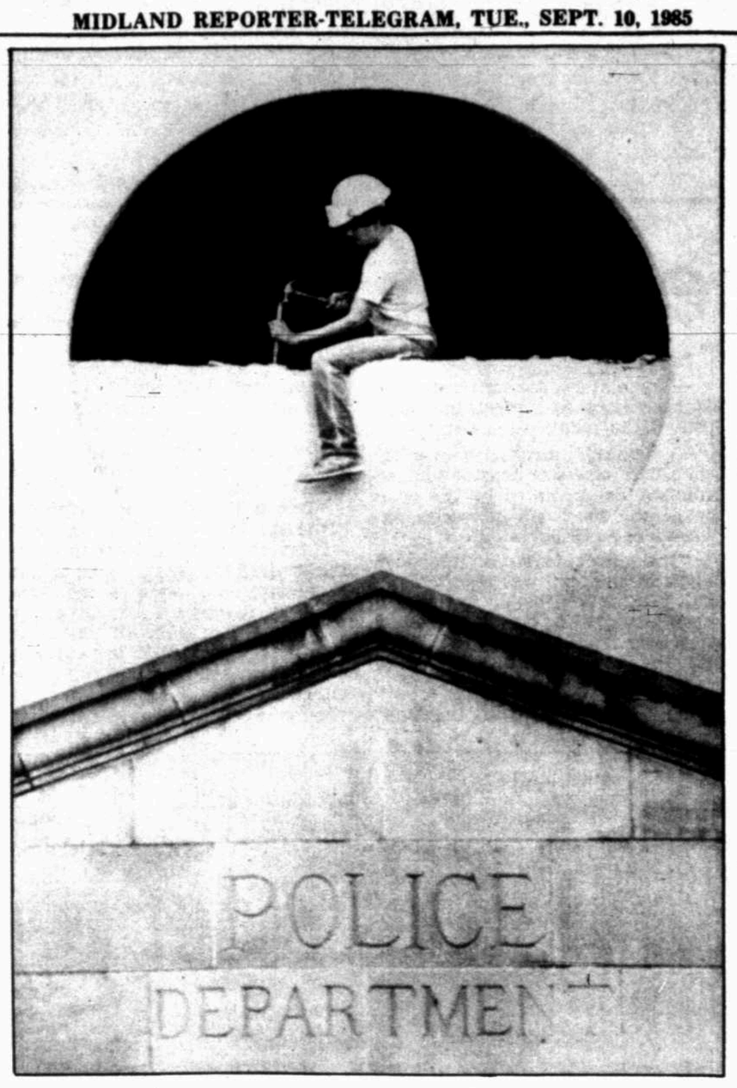

The case against the child's common-law father is pending in state court. Many seasoned officers say they don't know how Robertson can handle such cases. Some officers say it takes a special kind of detective to deal with children and many say Robertson falls in that category.

"I'm just doing my job," Robertson says. "Just like everyone else in the department. We all have our jobs and this one's mine."

McGruff, Robertson says, crosses generation gaps and relates "to little people." "He can gain a child's trust and he also promotes and image of help being available," Robertson says. "And, I'm still amazed at the reaction McGruff receives."

Personally, Robertson hopes his involvement with child abuse will bring more public awareness "to the taboo once not spoken of."

"And I hope it will lead to better assistance with other agencies involved in abuse cases," he says, "along with better investigating and prosecution with concern for truth in each case in determining whether the accusation is founded.

Texas leads nation in stolen explosives

AUSTIN (AP) — More explosives were stolen in incidents in Texas last year — 3,571 pounds in 21 thefts — than any other state, according to a still unpublished report by the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

When Dallas police and federal agents raided a Rockwall residence and a Dallas business April 27, 1984, they confiscated stolen military explosives ranging from hand grenades to detonators to practice mines.

The raid, which led to the arrests of eight people, was described by federal agents as one of the largest single seizures of stolen explosives in U.S. history and the largest recovery ever of stolen military munitions.

The agents said the raid helped expose a growing, often deadly trade in black market explosives in Texas. They said the trade can be as profitable as it is perilous.

"It's something we've been in a running gun battle with for years," said Jack Killorin, ATF chief of public affairs.

Smokeless powder, black powder and other blasting agents found in the Dallas armory were among the 980 pounds recovered in Texas last year, said Steve Sheid, an explosives specialist with the federal agency in Washington.

In part because of the Dallas seizure, the state also led the nation last year in the amount of stolen explosives recovered by officials, according to the new ATF report, which the Austin American-Statesman said is expected to be issued in late September.

The crime might be on the upswing in the state, but it is not new, officials said. Only Kentucky recorded more explosive thefts than Texas in 1983, when 16 incidents were investigated by local, state, and federal authorities, according to ATF figures.

Armed with stolen explosives and illegal fireworks, criminals are using bombs for a variety of motives — vandalism, revenge, protests, extortion, insurance fraud and murder, investigators said.

There were 37 bombings in Texas last year, according to the federal report.

Bombings across the nation in 1984 killed nine people, injured 166 and inflicted $7.1 million in damage. The most popular bombs are pipes or bottles filled with flammable liquids, smokeless powder or black powder, officials said.

"It's up to the imagination of the person making the bomb, and depending on their intelligence they can make simple ones or very complicated ones," Sheid said.

Thieves in Texas have turned their attention to rock quarries and to the oil and gas industry, both of which are major users of explosives.

"First of all, we have a large geographical area in Texas, and we also have a lot of legitimate businesses that require explosives," said Richard Garner, a special agent of the agency in Dallas.

Regulated storage facilities for oil and gas and other industries are the most frequent targets for explosives thieves in Texas, Garner said.

Phil Chojnacki, an assistant special agent for the ATF bureau in Houston, said eight explosive thefts were recorded in the Houston district between October and March. The enforcement office in Houston oversees the southern half of Texas and southern New Mexico.

"I would suspect, as a generalization, that the vast majority of those thefts are from legal users," Chojnacki said.

Bentsen: Trade deficit finally in spotlight

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen says that until recently, talk about the U.S. trade deficit has fallen on deaf ears in Washington.

Bentsen started talking about the issue six years ago when he was chairman of the Joint Economic Committee.

But since Democrats credited the issue with their narrow win last month in a hard-fought special congressional election targeted by the GOP, trade is in the political wind.

Now Bentsen's name is on the premier trade measure pending before Congress.

"I took a group, a task force of senators, and held hearings in South Korea and Taiwan and the Philippines, Hong Kong and began to see what what happening to the sale of American products abroad and what was developing in the way of manufactured products there," Bentsen recalled.

"I had as witnesses just sales representatives of U.S. companies, and I had them all day long every day, to the extent that when I got back, one of the other members said, 'I don't think I'll ever take another trip with you.'"

"Ever since that trip, trade has been his top priority," said press secretary Jack DeVore.

Bentsen's bill, sponsored on the House side by Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., and Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., would impose an across-the-board 25 percent tariff on goods from countries whose exports exceed imports by 55 percent.

Bentsen says if the bill does what it is supposed to — force U.S. trading partners to buy more U.S. goods — no tariff will ever be imposed.

Trade, translated by the Democrats into jobs, was a surprise hot topic in the 1st Congressional District of Texas this summer.

The seat opened up when the Democratic incumbent, Sam Hall, was appointed to a federal judgeship. His nomination came from Republican Texas Sen. Phil Gramm, who then endorsed a GOP candidate to replace him.

Edd Hargett spent over $1 million on the race, twice as much as Jim Chapman, the Democrat he faced in an Aug. 3 runoff. But Chapman eked out a win.

"I think the trade issue was a vital factor in this election," said House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Fort Worth, as he celebrated Chapman's arrival in Congress last week.

Group to ask UT regents to cut South African ties

AUSTIN (AP) — The University of Texas Board of Regents will hear from a UT student group urging the system to divest $716.4 million in shares of American companies operating in South Africa, a regents spokesman says.

Arthur Dilly, secretary for the regents, said the UT system officials would hear from the Steve Biko Committee at the board's Oct. 10 meeting in Arlington.

The committee is asking regents to remove UT investments from companies operating in South Africa to protest that nation's system of racial segregation, apartheid.

"We have a request from a student group to appear before the regents, and the chairman acquiesced and let them speak," Dilly said.

Darrick Eugene, chairman of the Steve Biko Committee, said he received a letter from Dilly on Monday granting the committee's request.

He also said the committee would ask an extension of the 15-minute time limit to 30 minutes.

Eugene said he is trying to bring in Edward Swann, a certified financial analyst, to speak to the regents. Swann spoke at a UT system Land and Investment Committee meeting last year and recommended alternatives to the present investment portfolio of system funds.

The land and investment committee decided last November to leave the system's money in companies doing business in South Africa.

Texans' personal income increasing at slower rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texans increased their incomes in 1984 at a slower rate than their fellow Americans in other states, probably due to a downturn in the oil industry and a population increase, according to figures released Monday by the U.S. Department of Commerce.

The state dropped two notches in the national rankings for per capita personal income, going from 19th place in 1983 to 21st in 1984, according to the department's Bureau of Economic Analysis.

The BEA said the average Texan made $12,572 last year, $217 below the national average.

The state's per capita income increased 8.5 percent from 1983 to 1984, but at a slower rate than the national increase of 9.4 percent.

Nationally, 1984 state per capita income ranged from $17,487 in Alaska to $8,777 in Mississippi, the report said.

In agency's southwest region, which includes Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and Oklahoma, said the BEA, "the increase in total personal income was well below the national average. Increases in earnings were small in both durbles and nondurables manufacturing, construction and mining."

The region's population increased 1.3 percent, "well above the 0.9 percent increase in the nation," said the BEA.

Texas' population increased 1.3 percent.

While the state's population of about 16 million was 6.8 percent of the nation's populace, Texas personal income was $201 billion, 6.7 percent of the national figure.

The state was third in total income behind California, with $371 billion and New York, with $254 billion.

UTPB names energy expert to head technology center

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — University of Texas of the Permian Basin officials have announced the appointment of a 50-year-old energy research expert as director of the newly formed Center for Energy, Technology and Economic Diversification.

Troyt B. York, who has been with the Special Projects Staff: Office of Oil, Gas, Shale and Coal Liquids, U.S. Department of Energy in Washington, D.C., since 1981, will take over his new position Sept. 16.

The announcement of York's appointment follows the presentation Sept. 3 of a check representing the first month's support of a $500,000, five-year commitment recently made by the Odessa Industrial Development Corp to UTPB for the research center. The check was presented to UTPB president Dr. Duane Leach during an OIDC-sponsored luncheon at Mission Dorado Country Club.

York previously served as director of DOE natural gas programs. He was also a founding director of the Institute of Energy Resource Management with Eastern Illinois University and a director of program development for the Bureau of Land Management.

A graduate of Eastern Illinois University, where he earned his bachelor degree in 1961, York brings 24 years of diverse experience in energy research, management and resource development to his new position.

Veterans housing statute to be discussed Oct. 21

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A public hearing has been set for Oct. 21 in Midland to detail a proposed constitutional amendment that would provide $500 million in continued bonding authority for the Texas Veterans Housing Assistance Program.

The hearing is one of 23 to be held across the state in September and October, and a spokeswoman for the General Land Office said Land Commissioner Gary Mauro, who helped to initiate the veterans' program, is expected to attend most of the hearings.

The constitutional amendment will appear on a statewide ballot Nov. 5 as Proposition 8.

Under the veteran's program, long-term, low-interest loans of $20,000 are made to eligible Texas veterans. A total of $500 million in general obligation bonds will be sold to fund the housing program if the proposition is approved by voters in Novemeber.

More than 22,000 loans have been made to veterans since the program was begun two years ago.

"Without Proposition 8's additional $500 million bonding authority, the continuity of the program will be threatened," Mauro said, adding that continued home loan funding will stimulate the construction of 25,000 new homes and create an additional 45,000 jobs in the state.

The Midland hearing is set from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m. at the conference room of the Midland/Odessa Regional Airport.

AUDITOR

In the case of a commissioners court attempting to establish its own audit functions, appeals courts have held county commissioners courts cannot establish audit procedures exclusive of the county's appointed auditor.

One Ector County district judge said he interpreted Monday's commissioners court action transferring control of the internal auditor as an effort to usurp the authority of the judge's appointed auditor in contravention of state statutes.

The judge also said current auditor Dan Ramiez has been notified that when his two-year term ends Sept. 30 his appointment will not be renewed and that a new auditor will be appointed by the county's four district judges. The term of the new auditor will begin Oct. 1.

You can stop smoking with the Stop Smoking Clinic program

—Cigarette smoking is the most widespread example of drug dependence in the U.S., causing more illness and death than herion and alcohol...

—Perhaps 10 percent of all Americans now living may die prematurely of heart disease attributable to cigarette smoking...

—This year, for the first time, more American women will die from lung cancer than from breast cancer...

—For women under 50 smoking increases the risk of suffering a heart attack more than any other risk factor...

—Upper-respiratory diseases in children occur more frequently in homes where parents smoke...

—People who kick the habit even after decades of addiction can significantly reduce the risk of fatal heart disease.

Things like this have been said time and time again, and statistics show that 85 percent of all smokers want to quit. Yet many Americans continue to smoke. Why?

Fran Nobles of the Stop Smoking Clinic in Mission Square believes they just don't know how to quit.

Smokers are both physically and psychologically addicted to tobacco. Though the physical addiction can be broken in a matter of days, many smokers forget about dealing with the psychological dependency. That's why some people report that they gain weight, stutter or become very nervous after quitting.

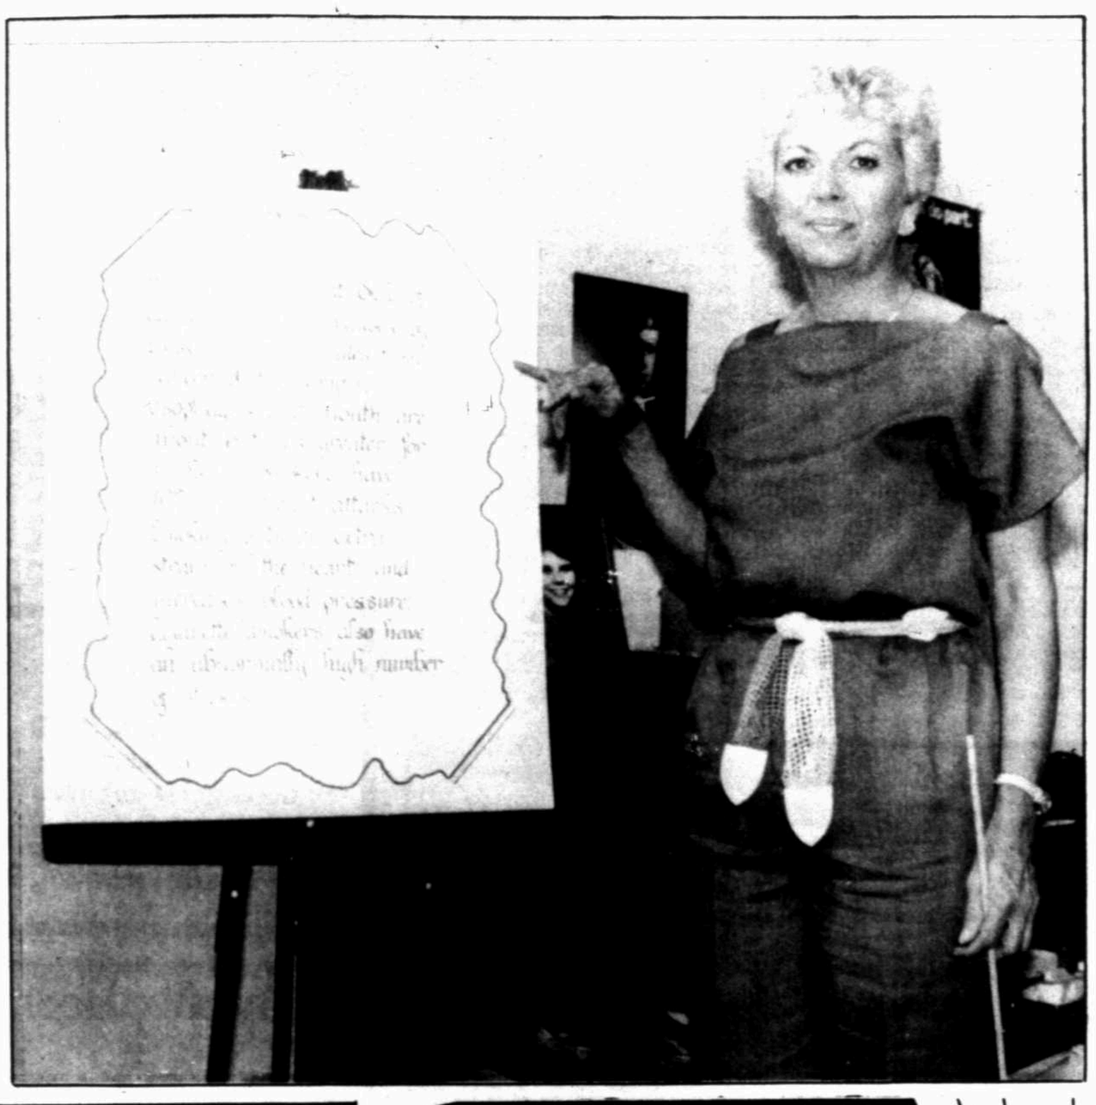

Ms. Nobles, a former smoker, points out that the Stop Smoking Association's program is different in that it deals with the psychological needs of clients along with the individuals' physical needs. The program centers around a guaranteed, aversion-type therapy which does not use drugs or hypnosis.

The key to this FIVE DAY program is the focus on breaking the psychological need, so that a person won't substitute food or anything else for the tobacco.

Because the habit is established by association of pleasure or reward, the habit must be broken in the subconscious. The Stop Smoking Clinic deals with this association so that their clients don't experience the severe withdrawal often caused by quitting "cold turkey." People that go through this program report that they are able to quit without gaining weight.

> The key to this FIVE DAY program is the focus on breaking the psychological need, so that a person won't substitute food or anything else for the tobacco.
> Stop Smoking Clinic

The program is guaranteed if it is followed for five days, so there is nothing to lose. To sign up just call Fran Nobles at 682-7333. There are family and office discounts though the program will be individualized.

Fran Nobles credits the success of the Stop Smoking Clinic to the program's dual focus. The five day program is guaranteed. Call 682-8333 to find out how you can quit without gaining weight.

Workshop instructor Ginny West demonstrates the incredible Mammy lock as Sewing Machine Supply owner Catherine Claggett watches. This machine is now being offered free with the purchase of a top of the line New Home Sewing Machine at Sewing Machine Supply in the Village Shopping Center.

Moreover, this is the 125th birthday of New Home sewing machines, so Sewing Machine Supply has a wide selection. "We have machines from simple straight stitch and zigzag up to programmable machines that write, repeat buttonholes and more," says Mrs. Claggett. They start as low as $169.95.

Also popular is the Husqvarna Viking 980 which has a sewing guide and automatic tension so that stitches look professional at all times. This machine sews sheer fabrics to thick leathers.

Another Viking machine which features stretch stitches is available at $499.

Overlocks can help you finish your garments like a pro. Right now, you can get a New Home Mammy lock with 25 year warranty, regularly $519.95, for just $399.95. A Singer overlock is available at the same price at Sewing Machine Supply. In addition, a four thread-two needle overlock, regularly $479.95, is available for just $299.95.

Bill's Fencecraft and Fireplace Center specializes in fireplace equipment. Grates for any size fireplace, firescreens, fireplace tools, log sets and wood racks are just a few of the things that Bill has to offer at the corner of Loop 250 and Princeton.

Bill's Fencecraft and Fireplace Center: offering fireplace equipment since '77

Bill's Fencecraft and Fireplace, corner of Loop 250 and Princeton, has been in the fireplace screen and accessory business since 1977. This is perhaps the only company which specializes in meeting the fireplace service and accessory needs of Midlanders.

Bill's, one of the largest fireplace accessory dealers in the Permian Basin, is the headquarters for all your fireplace needs. Grates, tool sets, tongs, wood racks, ash buckets, popcorn poppers and more are always in stock. Special items such as mantels and log sets are on display so you can make a custom selection.

Owner Bill Rodriguez says, "We can accomodate just about any fireplace with a firescreen (even zero clearance fireplaces such as Majestic, Heatilator, Superior, True Heat and other brands). The fireplace business is unusual. No two fireplaces are alike; therefore, we special order each screen. Yet, we normally get 24 hour delivery on firescreens and accessories."

Bill's Fencecraft and Fireplace displays a wide variety of firescreens. Bill points out that when you make an investment in a firescreen you need to consider quality as well as beauty. He is particularly proud of the Portland, Thermo-Rite, and Pacific firescreens which he offers to his customers. Bill says they can even build firescreens for rock fireplaces.

This shop has a wide selection of folding screens which are exceptionally popular with decorators. Bill announces that the newest style available is free standing glass screens. These high quality, tempered glass screens can be enhanced with etching. Family initials, flowers, doves-your imagination is the limit. Bill points out that these guaranteed units allow the full benefit of a clear few of the fire along with the protection of a screen.

Bill or his assistant Tom Bloemendaal will come measure your fireplace for a screen and then guaranteed the work and size.

Before you build a fire in your fireplace this winter you need to check for routine maintenance needs, to insure safety. If your log lighter is clogged with ashes or otherwise worn, call Bill to have it cleaned or replaced. These professionals can also repair cracks and damper handles. They can even install rain caps and clean your chimney.

If you've just been dreaming of having a fireplace. Now is the time to call Tom or Bill and find out how reasonable it can be to have a zero clearance fireplace installed. Do-it-yourselfers can install a fireplace in one to two weekends. Or, let the professionals do it. Bill says an economical model by Majestic can usually be installed for approximately $1200 (finish work such as brick not included). A fireplace is an investment, which usually adds $3,000-5,000 to the value of your home.

For those who like a fire without the hassle of firewood and ashes, Bill offers Peterson log sets, on of the best lines made. You'll have to see the displays at Loop 250 and Princeton, to believe how real these sets appear.

If you already have a log set which is not functioning properly, Bill's Fencecraft and Fireplace can service it. Amber glo and volcanic rock are in stock.

Call Bill or Tom at 697-4712 or 697-2652 for all your fireplace needs.

B and J shampoos upholstery and carpet of every kind, everywhere

Betty and Jerry Massey shampoo upholstery and carpets of every kind, everywhere- your home, your automobile, your store, restaurant or office.

You can remove loose dust by vacuuming and brushing your carpet and furniture, but to remove the soil you must have it shampooed. It revives the colors, and makes your home more sanitary and more attractive.

Remember, "steam" is just a lot of water. "Rotary brushes" just take dirt for a joy ride. "Hand application" only does superficial cleaning. Only the Von Schrader Carpet Extractor shampoos deeply with a dry foam and then gets rid of the foam along with the dirt in one operation.

B and J Carpet and Upholstery Cleaners

The Masseys recognize that carpet and upholstery is an investment which should be treated with care. Thus they did a lot of research before they purchased their Von Schrader equipment, which replaces antiquated and wet shampooing systems.

The Massey's concluded that the Von Schrader Carpet Extractor method is the only safe way to clean carpets. You'll understand why.

Ever see a man on hands and knees sponging a carpet? Such old-fashioned procedures will brighten the surface but can't remove the dirt deep in the pile. Result: embedded dirt works up quickly to the surfact to resoil the carpet.

In the "steam" method, the "steam" is only hot water that is sprayed into the carpet. And in most cases, little more than half of the dirt bearing water is extracted from the carpet. The remainder is left and can result in soggy carpet, browning, mildew, shrinkage, or damaged backing, padding and floors. Drying time can run up to 24 hours - a long time for any carpet area to be unusable.

Equally inefficient are rotary brush cleaners. The brushes simply scrub into the surface of the carpet, leaving deep down dirt untouched or even carried deeper into the pile. Then separate vacuuming is required to remove the soil and water.

Only the Von Schrader Carpet Extractor applies a dirt emulsifying dry foam, brushes it thoroughly into the carpet and removes both foam and dirt immediately before it can sink back down into the carpet. This simultaneous operation is an important benefit.

With this revolutionary method, a cylindrical brush shampoos down to the base of the carpet, then a powerful suction lifts out dirt laden foam in seconds.

For carpet and upholstery, the odorless detergent used is beneficial to fabrics. No dirt-attracting soaps or toxic dry cleaning fluids are used by B and J. Because no liquid touches the fabric, just a soft, gently dry foam, that separates the dirt from the fabric, cleaned furnishings are ready to use the same day.

Even your carpet is ready for use in an hour or so. And there is no danger of shrinkage, dry-rot, browning or mildew. Restaurants and other businesses appreciate the speedy drying, because it means that if the carpet is cleaned in the evening, it will be dry and ready for business the next morning.

That's right, stores and offices with upholstered furniture and carpet who let B and J come in after they close for the day, will find it ready to use the next morning and looking more beautiful than ever.

If you call (915) 697-0444, the experts at B and J will be glad to examine your furniture or carpet and give you an estimate at no obligation. People in surrounding towns are invited to call COLLECT.

For upholstery jobs, the Masseys will take a Von Schrader Upholstery Extractor to your place and quickly get the job done with no mess or odor. The Von Schrader Company pioneered on-location upholstery cleaning nearly 50 years ago.

The delicate but thorough action of this cleaning process cannot be equaled or duplicated by other processes.

Just call 697-0444 in Midland (out-of-towners please call collect) and ask Jerry, Betty or Jim for a free demonstration. Area apartment managers have also discoverd what a difference B and J makes and at such reasonable prices!

Wouldn't you like for your carpet to look like the cleaned portion of the carpet shown? You'll be amazed at the way the Von Schrader method can revive the beauty of your carpet and upholstery. Regular cleaning protects these investments. B and J offers a 10 percent senior citizen discount and has special prices for commercial jobs. Call 697-0444 in Midland for a demonstration.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Self-discipline is the key to greater career success. Handle delicate situations with sensitivity and there is no limit to how much you can accomplish. Others look to you for guidance when the going gets tough. Trust your instincts. Your keen business sense keeps you ahead of the competition. The financial outlook is especially bright next month and again in February. Be careful not to put all of your eggs in one basket. A variety of investments is safest. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: former Florida Governor Reubin Askew, the Philippines' Ferdinand Marcos, Alabama football legend Bear Bryant, singer Lola Falana, football's Tom Landry.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Welcome new responsibilities. A relative or higher-up's actions reassure you that you are on the right track. Travel brings good luck. Give romantic partner a chance to prove his/her love.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do what you can to help a family member keep an important resolution. A new financial partner should open previously closed doors. Show confidence in your ideas. Others want to be convinced.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be prepared for the unexpected and you will have nothing to worry about. Offering new services puts you ahead of the competition. Go out of your way to make a new romance work.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your instincts are correct. No one can touch you so long as you do what is right. Have the courage to stand up for your beliefs. Love sustains you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Good fortune stares you in the face. Seize an unusual opportunity to impress those who really count. Keep your emotions under control and limit spending. Romance picks up steam this evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A profound emotional experience makes you stronger and more confident. Keep your spirits high if faced with a heavy workload. Success will be even sweeter than you imagine.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You can't get ahead by ducking the spotlight. Place yourself where your talents are sure to be noticed. Time proves you were right about a certain person. Romance soars to new heights.

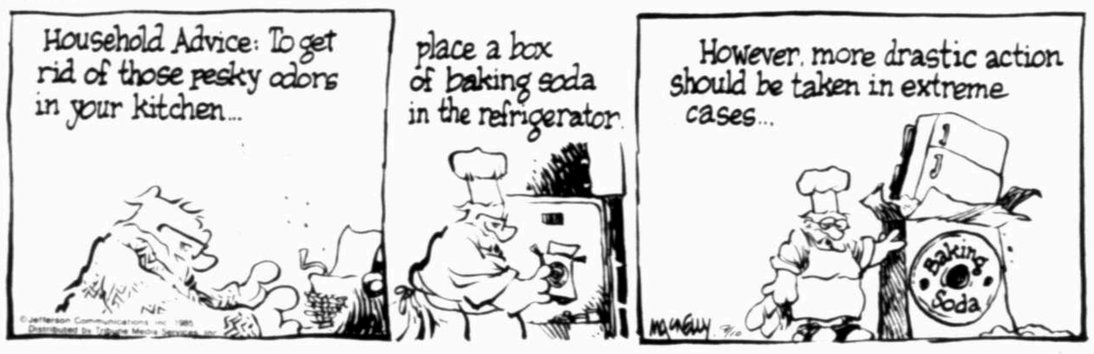

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Forget the numbers being thrown at you and do what a long-time aide advises. Promises may not be kept. You must work hard to remain on top. Diversity brings success.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Know when a promise is being broken and take appropriate measures. You emerge from a trying experience in good shape. Making a hard decision gives you new self-respect.

Tiny Belgium is not rated as one of the great powers in bridge. As a matter of fact, in the last European Championship they finished 20th in a field of 22. However, one of their players, Zvi Engel, attracted much attention after this fine display of dummy technique.

South's hand was a whisker weak for his two-no-trump opening bid. North used the Stayman Convention to check for a 4-4 heart fit, then settled in the no trump game when his partner denied a four-card major suit.

Against three no trump West attacked with his fourth-best club which ran around to Engel's eight. He went after diamonds, leading the queen from hand. When that won, declarer continued with a diamond to the jack and a diamond back, on which East signaled with a high spade.

West won the ten of diamonds, cashed the ace and then shifted to the queen of spades. Declarer allowed this to win, but won the ace when the suit was continued. The audience expected South to go after hearts for his ninth trick, and had already consigned him to down one. Declarer did indeed cash the ace-queen of hearts, but he now had an inferential count of the hand. West's carding suggested that he was 2-2-4-5. To test this, declarer now led the jack of clubs!

West won the queen, and East could afford to let go another spade. But when West perforce continued with a club to Engel's ace, East was squeezed in the major suits. Declarer had to score his ninth trick in whichever major suit East elected to sluff.

Karate kata kicks into beauty pageant

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Miss Michigan will walk across a bed of broken glass and Miss South Carolina will clog to "Are You From Dixie?" to spice up the talent performances in this year's Miss America Pageant.

Other unusual talent selections include a comic monologue by Miss Alaska, the presentation of an original commentary on the impact of advertising by Miss District of Columbia and a performance by Miss Nebraska on a golden flute commissioned by flutist James Galway.

Their performances during three days of preliminaries starting Wednesday will be sandwiched between familiar fare of singers, piano players, and dancers that have embedded the pageant in Americana. The pageant is Saturday.

"It will help me stand out," said Alecia Rae Masalkoski, 23, of Muskegon, Mich., a karate black belt whose sister, brother, mother and father hold the same rank in the sport.

But she said she didn't fear the challenge of trying to persuade the judges to select the first Miss America who can break 4 inches of cement with her foot.

"I think the Miss America Pageant is ready to change," said Miss Masalkoski, who will perform karate kata — a sort of "martial ballet" — between walking over broken soda bottles and her demonstration of strength on the cement. "In the '80s, women can be strong and capable of defending themselves and be feminine at the same time."

TWIN FALLS, Idaho (AP) — Eleven years and one day after Robert "Evel" Knievel tried to jump a motorcycle across the Snake River, the stuntman was honored with a granite monument commemorating the death-defying leap.

Evel Kneivel

"I came here today seeking no publicity of any kind, but just to remember this event," Knievel told about 50 people who braved somber skies and whipping winds for the Monday ceremony.

The stunt, in which Knievel nose-dived into the chasm on his rocket-powered Sky-Cycle, spurred a multimillion-dollar tourist industry, said Michael Dolton, Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce executive vice president.

The 5½-foot granite rectangle donated by a local cemetery has been placed two miles downstream from Knievel's jump.

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Phil Donahue is moving his talk show to the West Coast for a week, allowing Californians their first chance at call-in participation in the show.

Viewers will be able phone in to "Donahue" during its broadcast from KNBC studios Sept. 16-20, said station spokeswoman Saundra Willis. "Donahue," which moved to New York from Chicago in January, is seen in California on a tape-delay basis.

• • •

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rock Hudson's autobiography will not detail the private lives of other celebrities, a publicist for the AIDS-stricken actor says.

"Basically, it is a career book," spokesman Dale Olson said Monday. "But it is just not his style to name names. He would never divulge information about other people."

Hudson, 59, is writing "My Style" with Sara Davidson, Olson said. Proceeds will be donated to the Rock Hudson AIDS Research Foundation, a New York-based organization to find a cure for the deadly disease.

Hudson, who was released from UCLA Medical Center Aug. 24, has been recovering in his Beverly Hills mansion.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Entertainer Wayne Newton made slightly more than $3.5 million when he auctioned off 30 Arabian horses at a Strip hotel, his spokesman said.

Wayne Newton

Newton, who has been raising Arabians since 1969, owns 350 horses at his ranch 50 miles northeast of Las Vegas, said spokesman Alan Margulies. The top horse in Saturday's sale, WN Antigua, was purchased for $1.2 million.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Comedian Bob Newhart, an Emmy nominee who has been hospitalized a week for a nosebleed, is expected to attend the Emmy Awards ceremony later this month, an MTM Productions spokesman said.

The star of the television series "Newhart" will be released from St. John's Medical Center "any day now," hospital spokeswoman Mary Miller said Monday. Newhart was admitted Sept. 3 with a nosebleed, she said.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Ex-political prisoners will have right to vote

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — The government will restore the right to vote for former political prisoners who were convicted of participating in a 1965 coup attempt, said a presidential decree that was published today.

Before they may vote, the former prisoners will be required to prove they have served their prison terms, and that they have not been involved in other criminal, the document said.

Hari Sugiman, the director-general for social and political affairs, told Parliament earlier this year that almost 1.5 million Indonesians were listed as ex-communists who had been involved in the coup.

The last political prisoners who were detained without trial following the coup attempt were released in 1979, but they were prohibited from becoming executives of mass organizations or participating in political activities.

Pollution meeting convenes

GENOA, Italy (AP) — Delegates from 17 countries have opened a conference on how to save the Mediterranean Sea from pollution.

The meeting, which opened Monday, was called 10 years after Mediterranean countries signed an agreement in Barcelona, Spain, setting up a plan to safeguard the ecology of the Mediterranean.

Sewage discharge, factory wastes, litter from tourists and leaks from oil barges have alarmed ecologists concerned about the health of the Mediterranean, the world's largest inland sea.

This summer in Italy, which has 4,800 miles of Mediterranean coastline, some local governments issued warnings against bathing along many beaches where tourism is a major industry.

However, a report from a U.N. agency to be presented to the meeting indicates the danger of mercury poisoning to fish no longer is critical.

China motor rally set

PEKING (AP) — A motor sport association says 38 vehicles will participate in China's first motor rally in almost 80 years.

Among the drivers in the four-day race from Hong Kong to Peking will be two former world champions, Hannu Mikkola of Finland and Bjorn Waldegard of Sweden, the Chinese Motor Sport Association said Monday.

The race will begun Sunday in Hong Kong and wind through six Chinese provinces on its way to the capital.

China's official Xinhua News Agency said the first motor rally in China took place in 1907, when five cars set off from Peking and made it to Paris two months later.

There have been no such event since the communist takeover in 1949, although state-run Chinese television news frequently shows international grand prix racing.

Austrian beer impounded

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Authorities have impounded beer from a lower Austria brewer that contained a poisonous chemical used to disinfect beer and grape juice tanks, the Health Ministry said.

The chemical, brom-acetic acid, can cause serious liver and kidney problems and is strictly forbidden as an additive to beer, the ministry said Monday.

Earlier this year wines from Austria and other countries were found to contained diethylene glycol, a chemical that can cause serious health problems.

Georg Lindner, a senior official of the Health Ministry, said the beer was impounded last Friday, and that the ministry would not divulge the name of the brewer because all bottled beer had been seized.

Lindner said tests were made of most Austrian breweries, but no other such cases have turned up.

De La Madrid to visit UN

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Miguel de la Madrid plans to travel later this month to the United Nations and to Japan next month, the presidential press office announced.

In his request to Congress, the president said his trip to the United Nations should result in "political and economic benefit for Mexico." As a formality, de la Madrid must ask the Congress for permission to travel outside the country.

The president said would leave Sept. 24 for the United Nations and would go to Japan on Oct. 6.

The request also said the president's trip to Japan would be an effort to establish new forms of bilateral cooperation and discuss new projects for the two nations.

Japan is Mexico's third largest trading partner and second major source of financing. Japan ranks third in foreign investments in Mexico and also is the nation's third largest petroleum customer.

Birmingham youths riot when officers try to arrest black

BIRMINGHAM, England (AP) — Hundreds of youths poured into the streets of an rundown immigrant district, attacking police and firemen, burning buildings and looting into the early morning hours today. At least 30 people were hurt.

West Midlands police Chief Geoffrey Dear told reporters that more than 50 buildings had been burned out, many of them shops owned by Indians and Pakistanis. He said most of the rioters were member of the black immigrant community from the Caribbean.

Dear estimated that damage was in the millions of dollars and said 25 people had been arrested.

Twenty police officers and six firemen were hurt by rioters who threw gasoline bombs, bricks and bottles, he said. A bus driver and two other people also were hurt, but none of the injuries was serious, Dear said.

At daybreak today roads were littered with broken glass, bricks, and debris. Clothes, vegetables and other looted goods from smashed and burned stores were strewn across sidewalks.

Police moved about, still carrying their riot shields and wearing visored helmets.

Ray Newill, assistant police spokesman, said the violence began Monday afternoon when a police officer stopped a black motorist to question him about the tax sticker on his windshield.

As he tried to arrest him, the officer was surrounded by about a hundred black youths, and a second officer arriving on the scene was knocked off his motorcycel, Newill said. As more police arrived, the violence spread, the spokesman said.

Harold Reed, a black lawyer who works with Birmingham's Caribbean community, blamed the riot on neglect by politicians.

"This area has no investment, has been under-developed and consistently destabilized by the policies of successive governments, whether Labor or Conservative. This is just the beginning," Reed said.

A firefighter sprays his hose on a burning building in the Handsworth district of Birmingham, England, Monday night, where a mob of youths attacked police officers and firefighters with gasoline bombs, stones and bottles.

More than a dozen vehicles were hijacked and turned into blazing barricades to try to stop police from getting into the area. Some officers were ambushed with gasoline bombs thrown from rooftops, Dear said.

Eyewitnesses said gangs of black and white youths carried goods away from smashed shops in trolleys and cars. Some residents fled their homes.

Graham Meldrum, Birmingham's deputy chief fire officer, said firefighters were called to a blazing bingo hall, but gang members attacked them with bricks.

More fires broke out and firefighters had to retreat, at one stage summoning police protection, he said.

"It wasn't a premeditated riot," said Dear. "They looted a shop or two, found it was easy, set fire to it, enjoyed what they were doing in a dreadfully perverse way, started setting up barricades — and by their standards I'm sure they had a fine old time. But at what a terrible cost to the people who lived in the area."

Radio reporter Howard Bennett said: "Within seconds of arriving at the scene, the windows of my own car were smashed and the tires slashed. After I got a boot in the back, someone shouted, 'Run for your life, mate' — and I did."

Zulquarnan Sikandar, a storekeeper, said a mob set fire to his delivery truck and then attacked and robbed him.

Official Soviet poet criticizes Stalin, bureaucratic thinking

MOSCOW (AP) — One of the Soviet Union's leading official poets criticized bureaucratic thinking and indirectly attacked Josef Stalin in a poem published by the Communist Party newspaper Pravda.

The poem by Yevgeny Yevtushenko provided a literary outline of Kremlin thinking under Communist Party leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who has called on artists and writers to join his drive for modernization and discipline. Pravda published it Monday.

Gorbachev has promised to revitalize the centralized economy by rooting out incompetent officials.

Yevtushenko, criticized by the Communist Party as one of the Soviet Union's self-styled "angry young men" of the 1960s, is now an officially approved artist. The poem took up one of his favorite themes — mindless bureaucrats afraid of taking initiative.

Yevtushenko said petty officials are "what-if-it-doesn't-work-out-right-ists" and their attitude is "what-if-it-doesn't-work-out-right-ism."

He described the philosophy that he says hampers the development of the Soviet Union:

"Quacks gripped the surgeon's knife
When he cut on a heart
To save a man's life...
Because it might not work out right.
And they mumbled about airplanes
And electric light...
Because it might not work out right."

Yevtushenko said, "The years were sucked out of us" while experts proved the truth of new ideas.

He leveled indirect criticism at Josef Stalin by mocking some of his policies. Referring to agriculture, Yevtushenko wrote:

"And so the soil became a widow
Deprived of the planter's care
And buckwheat was pining
And clover sadly lying.
Lysenkoism cut down the ears of rye."

The last line refers to Trofim Lysenko, a geneticist favored by Stalin who set back Soviet agriculture by forbidding research into cross-pollination and other modern techniques.

Another section of the poem referred to the Soviet Union's slow acceptance of computer sciences in the 1950s and 1960s. Yevtushenko wrote:

"A 'what-if-it-doesn't-work-out-right-ist'
Wearing a tight jacket
And protecting his countrymen
From an alleged foreign menace,
Saw in all cybernetics
Obscurity and mysticism
And stole computers from our children."

A central focus of Gorbachev's modernization drive is an effort to educate young people in computer sciences and to computerize Soviet industry, where the abacus is more prevalant than the personal computer.

Stalin also was attacked in a reference to a long-suppressed satire by early 20th-century author Mikhail Bulgakov.

"Because it might not work out right
"We read 'Master and Margarita' 20 years late."

Although he dealt with a delicate point, censorship, Yevtushenko used an issue settled long ago and didn't mention current Soviet authors banned by authorities.

Yevtushenko has long been the subject of debate in the Soviet Union and abroad.

In the 1960s, as a leading anti-establishment artist, he came under frequent attack in the Soviet press. But Yevtushenko, a committed socialist, was not a dissident and never sought to emigrate. Over the years, his fortunes improved until he was accepted into the Soviet literary establishment.

Concurrently, his popularity in the West declined and he frequently denied charges that he "sold out" to authorities. Yevtushenko made a tour of the United States last spring.

Menswear designer Barnes introduces women's line

By JULIE VARGO-TURI
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

DALLAS — Add another name to the ever-growing list of menswear designers launching lines for the ladies. Award-winning menswear maverick Jhane Barnes wants her slice of the lucrative women's wear market, too.

Though a noted menswear specialist, Barnes is no stranger to the whims of women's wear. "I've always done women's wear, however, they were just smaller-sized versions of my menswear," says the 31-year-old designer, who won her first Coty Award in 1980.

Last spring she officially launched her first ready-to-wear collection for the ladies. "The line sports a mid-to-upper price tag," she says of her 40-piece collection. "Blouses retail from $100, jackets from $200 to $350, pants and skirts from $95 to $160, and knits from $95 to $250.

For Barnes, the creative process starts at her computerized loom. There, using natural fibers such as silk, mohair, alpaca and angora, the designer weaves the multitextural fabrics that have become her signature. This fall, she weaves with knitting yarns to combine the stability of a woven with a knit's stretchy softness.

AS IN MENSWEAR, Barnes bases her women's line on the architectural simplicity of her silhouettes and striking color combinations. Fall's palette boasts dawn and dusk tones. Soft neutrals such as pearly gray, lavender, cream, coral and soft blue mix with what Barnes tags the clear deeps — raspberry, teal, brown and inky black.

LAT Photos

Left, Jhane Barnes' super kid mohair knit tunic has a luxurious ample proportion over a short, straight wool-silk skirt. Right, a cactus knit of angora and wool is softly tailored in a slim two-piece tunic dress.

Barnes admits that some of her menswear silhouettes have worked their way over into her womens' collection. "Usually the only familiarity between my collections lies in the fabrics," she says. "A lot of times, I am the only one who notices the similarities.

"Because I am a menswear designer, I am under scrutiny," she adds. "I can't have any crossover between my menswear and the women's line. I don't design overly frilly dresses so I have to be extra careful so the critics don't draw similarities.

"Menswear is a challenge," continues Barnes. "When they accept something, it's a real thrill. With women's wear, there are so many choices that I find it's hard to limit myself."

FALL's OFFERINGS boasts thoughtful, body-conscious engineering. Barnes focuses on clever combinations of fashion and comfort. Her split-level, asymmetric jacket in copper and sand tones is actually two attached jackets.

"The jackets are connected to each other only at the lapel," says Barnes. "This allows for complete movement and full fit." Toss the jacket over a lean, calf-grazing skirt in the same textured, pussywillow-woven fabric for a day at the office. When buttoned, the under-jacket hugs the hips for a feminine silhouette.

Barnes favors large-over-small proportions. She splatters a voluminous tunic of luxe angora and wool with black desert graphics of a cactus, then slips it over a slim, straight-shooting skirt in the same soft knit. Her generously cut wrap-jacket sports padded shoulders and roomy dolman sleeves. She belts it snug at the hip, topping a knee-grazing skirt in matching navy shot with purple, raspberry and pale blue.

FOLLOWING TRENDS doesn't interest Barnes, who bases her collection on the way today's woman lives. "For fall, I tried to take the comfort of an oversized silhouette and make it feminine," says the designer, who cuts the hips and waist snug and arms and chest loose to accentuate the female form while allowing room to move.

She prides herself on the collection's flexibility. "I don't do flashy evening gowns or strict office suits," says the designer. "Most of my clothes can be worn through the day and with a few accessories, move right into evening."

While stores define Barnes' male customer as a creative, non-conforming fellow, the designer isn't quite sure who her female customer is yet. "I picture her as someone who is very busy and has to look good," says Barnes. "I like to think she doesn't view clothing as the most important thing in her life. I know I hate to think about what I should wear each day."

Fifteen years ago, Jhane Barnes might have giggled at the idea of designing clothes as a profession. "In high school, I studied astronomy and music," says Barnes, who grew up in Maryland. "The only course I liked in home-ec was clothing."

HER CAREER ASPIRATIONS changed when Barnes designed uniforms for the school band. "My teachers told me I was better in clothing than I was in music or astronomy," she says. "I only wanted to be the best, so I went to F.I.T."

In 1977 Barnes participated in the Fashion Institute of Technology's senior student fashion show. "I got immediate response for my menswear from the New York fashion press and designers who attended," says Barnes. "That's when I knew menswear needed a lift."

Not one to search out fame, Barnes rates customer response as the most satisfying part of her work. "My customers make this business human," says Barnes. "Sometimes fashion seems unrewarding to me. I can't figure out what I'm giving the world. Then I'll get a letter from somebody who wore one of my suits to an interview and are sure they got the job because of it. Those things really make me feel good."

DEAR ABBY

Gift-hungry grad voted most offensive

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Reading your column daily has taught me a lot about the brashness of some people, but nothing I had read prepared me for the following: A woman I'm not well acquainted with (we chat when we see each other at the grocery store, which is seldom) appeared at my door last May.

I had buried my mother the previous day and was feeling very tired, so I was still in bed at noon. When I went to the door, this woman chided me for still being in my bathrobe. I explained the situation, thinking she would apologize for intruding and leave. Instead, she went on to tell me in great detail about her own mother's death, which had occurred years ago. Then she thrust an invitation to her daughter's high school graduation in my hand and left. (I didn't even know this woman had a daughter.)

It's now September. Yesterday my phone rang and the caller identified herself as so-and-so's daughter. I had no idea who she was talking about until she explained that her mother had given me an invitation to her graduation. She said that since she had not received a graduation gift from me, she figured I had probably put money in an envelope and had forgotten to mail it.

I told her as tactfully as I could that I had done neither. Then she said, "That's all right, just put some money in an envelope and I'll come right over and get it because I'm going shopping today and wanted to buy a few things."

I was so angry I told her I was in no position to give her any money, then I hung up.

Abby, is there a classification for people like this? If so, what is it? Also, how would you have handled the situation? — FLABBERGASTED

DEAR FLABBERGASTED: Such people can be classified as ignorant, nervy, grasping and totally lacking in judgment and sensitivity. But before you judge, please consider that both the girl and her mother could be mentally deficient. And I would have handled the situation just as you did.

DEAR ABBY: I have a very perplexing problem. How should in-laws be addressed? I've been married to their daughter for four months, and so far I have avoided calling them anything.

During the two and a half years I courted "Barbara," I've called her parents Mr. and Mrs. Jones (not their real names), but after the wedding, it didn't seem right, so I asked them what they wanted me to call them, and they said, "Call us anything you feel comfortable with." Well, to be honest, I feel comfortable calling them Mr. and Mrs. Jones because it shows respect, and I've never called them anything else.

Barbara has no trouble calling my parents "Mom and Dad," which is what she calls her parents, but I'd feel awkward calling anyone except my own parents by those names. Using their first names seems disrespectful.

What do other newlyweds do? I am open to suggestions. — TONGUE-TIED

DEAR TONGUE-TIED: Some in-laws are called "Mother Betty" and "Father Paul," or Mom and Dad Jones. Or just plain Mama and Papa, or whatever one's spouse calls them. It may be a bit awkward at first, but it gets easier with time. Most in-laws don't care what their kids call them, as long as they call them.

DEAR ABBY: Concerning "Kicking Myself," who wants to know how to answer people who ask questions like, "Is that dress new?" and, "How much did you pay for it?":

I had a nosy person ask me once, "How much is your car payment?" I answered with, "Why? Are you offering to make the next payment?"

That shut him up fast. — NOT TALKING IN ARIZONA

CONFIDENTIAL TO MISERABLE IN ST. LOUIS: Start talking. Heed the wise words of Thomas Mann: "Speech is civilization itself. The word, even the most contradictory word, preserves contact. It is silence which isolates."

(Problems? Write to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. All correspondence is confidential.)

'Effortless' look sweeps resort wear showings

By BERNADINE MORRIS
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Smooth, clean designs, clear colors and an easy, effortless look: this is the quintessence of American sportswear. In collection after collection as the resort showings unfold, there are beautifully tailored jackets, often in linen, paired with skirts or pants, and, occasionally, dresses. Collarless necklines and padded shoulders contribute to the sleek outlines. Skirts so far are mainly short, clearing the knees by a good margin.

Touches of print enliven the look and provide variety to the basic outfits: a white linen suit is brightened by a flower-printed crepe blouse, a plain cotton jacket accompanies a printed skirt. But there are pitfalls to prints; they can become garish.

Mary Ann Restivo avoids the problems in a neatly conceived collection that includes clothes for the woman in the southern states as well as for the winter vacationer who heads for the sun. The extra reward is that the clothes will work equally well next summer.

While it is off the main track of resort clothes, a long black halter-neck evening dress with a crossed, softly draped halter neckline is one of the most attractive low-key styles to cross a runway. It is the kind of classic that can be worn anywhere in the world in almost any climate. It is the highlight of a group of black jersey separates that include, for less formal evenings, tapered pants and bras.

But the tailored clothes are equally well done and there are more of them, starting with checked jackets worn with navy shirts and white pants and continuing with a series of dresses and cardigans in banana-colored silk.

Blassport opens with pristine white linen clothes, including a collarless coat and above-the-knee skirts. Touches of color are added in printed silk blouses or skirts and there is a series of flower prints in arresting orange and purple combinations. The casual look is interpreted for evening in gold lame shirts with white crepe pants. The best style in this series is a one-button white crepe suit with a lame T-shirt.

The American sportswear look is seen through a European prism in the Karl Lagerfeld collection, which focuses on extended, softly padded shoulders on jackets worn with short, curvy skirts.

One February morning 100 years ago, a 29-year-old man named Peter Skousen left his home in Snowflake, Ariz., and headed for Mexico. With him were his two wives, Annice, 28, and Mary, 21, their seven children, and all the plows, shovels, beds, chairs, flour and chickens they could fit into a horse-drawn wagon.

The Skousens, like other Mormon polygamists, knew Congress had passed two laws making a crime of what they believed to be a religious duty. So in 1885, the Skousens joined 32 other polygamist families and fled the United States.

It took them nearly a month to reach Mexico, but eventually, they reached the mile-high valleys and plateaus of the Sierra Madres, about 200 miles south of El Paso, Texas, where they built a town. Skousen, who was my grandfather's oldest brother, was later joined by relatives including my grandfather, who grew up there.

Later, about 6,000 Mormons, mostly monogamous, were "called" by the church to join the expatriates, colonize the area and convert the Mexicans.

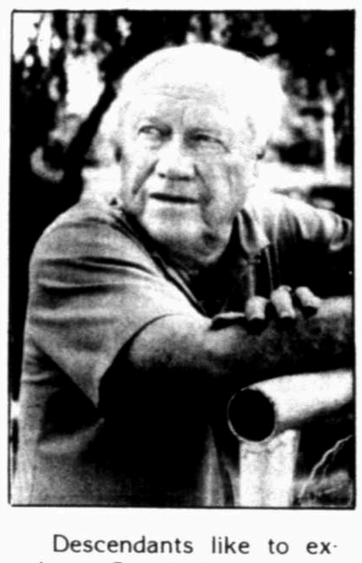

Last month, 2,000 descendants of these pioneers gathered for six days in Colonia Juarez and Colonia Dublan, the last of what were once seven Mormon colonies in the state of Chihuahua, to celebrate the colonies' 100th anniversary. Greeting them were about 500 more descendants and relatives of the settlers who still live there, raising apples, peaches, pears, cattle and children.

Some, returning to their homeland, were nostalgic for the rugged, close-knit community life they had left. Others had come out of curiosity to see for themselves the setting of family legends.

Many were unable to view their ancestors' homes. Entire colonies were destroyed in the 1910 Mexican Revolution or by fire, or abandoned because they were too isolated. But they could still find remnants of the past, crystallized in an oasis of 19th-century America that has become lush and prosperous in time.

Colonia Dublan has merged with Nuevo Casas Grandes, a Mexican town of 30,000 that has since developed in the plateau. But Colonia Juarez is tucked into an isolated hillside valley 16 miles away, beyond old Casas Grandes.

With its neat orchards, shady rivers and tall trees gracing one-and two-story red brick homes, Colonia Juarez appears to be an island town, plucked out of Southern Utah and plunked down into a land of peeling paint, swaying buses and semi-finished construction.

The colonists had been planning centennial festivities for four years, said La-Von Whetten, a Colonia Juarez native and a member of the centennial committee. For their visitors, they staged a parade with family floats, a rodeo, a dance, a tour of the fruit-packing plant, barbecues and a historical pageant with one performance in English and another in Spanish. They also held two talent shows that included the singing of an original centennial hymn.

For a week, our main identities came from the names of the first colonists: Romney, Turley, Pratt, Call, Hatch, Whetten, Walser, Farnsworth. Who are you? I'm a Skousen. Who did your grandfather marry? What was his brother's name? We're cousins then!

Descendants like to exchange Pancho Villa stories, dating from the 1910 Mexican Revolution which caused three-quarters of the Mormons to return to the United States in what they call "the exodus."

Bertha Shupe, 83, a resident of Colonia Juarez, and her sister, Blanche Peterson, 80, both former schoolteachers in the colonies, also remember life in a polygamist family. Their grandfather had four wives and their father had two. They called their father's other wife Aunt Martha. While some polygamist famlies lived under the same roof, their mother and Aunt Martha had separate homes. Their mother had 13 children; Aunt Martha had nine.

While some women grumbled at "plural marriage," Aunt Martha and their mother were fond of each other, said Ms. Peterson. "We grew up as one family," she said. "We were not allowed to call our brothers and sisters half-brothers or half-sisters. We are still one family."

When Aunt Martha died in childbirth in 1925, Ms. Peterson said she was deeply saddened. Her own mother took in the children, which meant she had eight children under the age of 6.

The colonists seem neither proud nor ashamed of their polygamist heritage. While they now believe polygamy is morally wrong, they also believe their polygamist relatives were morally right, most of them sincerely following what their religious leaders at the time called a religious principle.

Only 5 percent of the Mormons ever practiced polygamy, which was regarded as a divine revelation from the Mormon prophet Joseph Smith in the 1840s, a church spokesman in Salt Lake City said. But in 1890, to satisfy a condition for Utah statehood, the church renounced polygamy. In 1893 President Benjamin Harrison issued a proclamation of amnesty for all polygamists who had entered into the relationship before 1891.

All the polygamists in the Mormon Mexican colonies have died, except for a roundly scorned fundamtalist family known as the LeBarons who live an isolated existence 55 miles to the south, Dr. Leroy Hatch, 74, a native of the colonies, said.

Today's colonists say that they are mainstream Mormons — paying 10 percent of their gross income to the church, fasting one day a month and giving what they would have paid for food to charity. They believe in having as many children as possible as part of the "eternal plan." They advocate traditional Mormon values of hard work, optimism, education and honesty.

Like Mormons in Salt Lake City, their lives center around the church, family and school. They shun coffee, tobacco and alcohol and promote chastity before marriage and faithfulness afterward. In recent years, three men known to have committed adultery have been excommunicated, said Fred Hatch, 44, a grower from Colonia Juarez and former bishop.

The majority of the Anglo Mormons consider themselves Mexicans now. Eighty-five percent are Mexican citizens, subject to taxes and military service, according to Dr. Hatch. But the colonists basically govern themselves. Their own "sheriff" registers births and deaths and settles disputes among church members. They tax themselves for civic, farm and educational improvements.

Most of the girls grow up and leave for good. "There's really nothing for us to do," said Marci Bowman, 23, who was born in Colonia Dublan but now lives in Phoenix, Ariz., where she teaches. "Everybody's in agriculture here. You can't buy land here. No one wants to sell."

Since growers must inherit their farms and their land is limited, many men who would like to return cannot, said Kent Romney, plant manager of the fruit growers cooperative.

When fruit was a buyer's market, 100 growers mortgaged their homes to create the co-op and a modern state-of-the-art packing plant. As a result, profits have increased 200 percent and the growers, who average the price of their fruit, now market $10 million worth of fruit annually to Mexico's largest cities, according to Romney. The cooperative is the largest in Mexico, provides the main source of income in the Nuevo Casas Grande area and has strong government support, he said.
