Shultz is prepared for shuttle diplomacy

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz and the U.S. ambassadors to five Middle East nations gathered in Cairo today at the start of Shultz' mission to arrange a withdrawal of Israeli, Syrian and Palestinian forces from Lebanon.

"We know that we cannot substitute for the commitment and the effort of the people of the Middle East," Shultz said after his arrival at 1:30 p.m. (6:30 a.m. EDT). "We will complement it and we will play a full part, as full partners, in this great enterprise for peace."

Reagan's special Mideast envoy, Philip C. Habib, also was in Cairo to meet with Shultz and the U.S. ambassadors to Israel, Syria, Jordan, Lebanon and Algeria.

Shultz was scheduled to meet with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak on Tuesday and on Wednesday with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, who sent troops into Lebanon on June 6, 1982, to rout the PLO.

In his airplane en route to Egypt, Shultz was optimistic — saying a withdrawal agreement "is a very doable thing" — and vowed to stay in the Mideast as long as there is a chance of carrying out his mission.

Shultz said he is prepared to shuttle back and forth between Israel and Lebanon if that would help produce an agreement on troop withdrawal.He plans to go to Beirut on Thursday.

"I am prepared to work at it as long as it seems that there is a chance to accomplish something," Shultz told reporters during the seven-hour flight from Washington to Britain, where his plane refueled before continuing to Cairo.

Shultz said he will raise the possibility of an expanded U.S. role in Lebanon in discussions with Lebanese and Israeli officials.

He said he also may discuss President Reagan's faltering Mideast peace initiative, but stressed his top priority is to get Israel, Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization to agree to withdraw their forces from Lebanon.

He said he may visit Syria and also has been invited to talk with King Hussein of Jordan and King Fahd of Saudi Arabia, if time permits. Syria maintains an estimated 38,000 troops in Lebanon, ostensibly as a peacekeeping force.

Officials traveling with Shultz expect him to go to all three countries.

Shultz said Israel's security demands remain a major obstacle to a withdrawal agreement. He indicated he will reaffirm with Israel a U.S. commitment to help guarantee protection against future terrorist attacks from Lebanon following an Israeli withdrawal.

"We are part of this negotiating process, and we want to see it succeed, and we certainly are prepared to stay with it after an agreement and a leaving of the forces from Lebanon takes place," Shultz said.

"Just what role the United States might play is going to be part of this discussion," he added.

Administration officials have said previously that the United States might double its troop contribution to the multi-national peace-keeping force as part of a withdrawal agreement.

Shultz said he is bringing some "ideas" on how to resolve the dispute between Israel and Lebanon over a future security role for Israeli-backed militia leader Maj. Saad Haddad, whom the Lebanese government mistrusts.

He declined to say what he has in mind, but noted: "I'm not coming here with a preconceived American plan to try to sell to people."

Shultz also disclosed that Reagan had told Hussein he would not be expected to begin peace negotiations with Israel until there was some kind of freeze on Israeli settlement construction in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

But he said Reagan has told Hussein it would be easier to obtain a settlement freeze from Israel "if the key Arab leader has committed himself to sit down and talk."

Hussein's refusal to enter negotiations with Israel has been a major setback to the Reagan peace plan, which proposed an autonomous Palestinian government on the West Bank, in close association with Jordan.

If Shultz concludes from his first stops that he won't be able to resolve the withdrawal issue, his trip may last only a week. But if there is a prospect of success, he may remain two weeks or even longer, U.S. officials said.

Shultz was known to be reluctant to go on the trip, but was pressed into it by White House officials, in part as a response to the bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Beirut last Monday. It is his first trip to the Middle East since he became secretary of state nine months ago.

Ouch!

Solidarity leader Lech Walesa winces as he gets shots Monday during a physical examination prior to returning to work at the Lenin shipyard in Gdansk. No date has been set, but Walesa thinks he will be back to work in a day or two.

Walesa expected back

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa took a physical examination today at the Gdansk shipyard, where he helped lead the 1980 strike which created the Solidarity trade union, and said he would be back at work in a day or two.

"I was welcomed warmly, as I always am," Walesa said after the examination, which lasted less than an hour. "They took my blood, checked my ears."

The 39-year-old labor leader said the government may have decided to give him his old job back in order to keep track of him and curb his contacts with the labor underground.

However, Walesa's return to the shipyard puts him in direct contact with the 17,000 yard workers who are his loyal followers and who have been involved in labor unrest for more than a decade.

Earlier, Walesa said "100 others will rise up" to take the place of Jozef Pinior, a key underground Solidarity leader arrested Sunday in an apparent attempt by authorities to undercut the union's call for anti-government demonstrations on May Day.

Pinior, one of five fugitive Solidarity leaders who met with Walesa on earlier this month, was taken into police custody in his home town of Wroclaw, according to a dispatch by the official Polish news agency PAP.

A few days after meeting with Walesa, the five members of Solidarity's fugitive "temporary coordinating commission" issued a call for protest marches to counter officially sponsored demonstrations on May 1, the international workers' observance that is a major holiday in the Soviet bloc.

At the shipyard, the physical exam and a refresher course in worker safety later today were preparations for Walesa to return to his job as an electrician. He was detained after the imposition of martial law Dec. 13, 1981, and released last November. He asked in January to return to work, and permission was granted on Friday.

He said: "It's impossible to say when I will be able to start actually working, but I do hope that it will be tomorrow or day after tomorrow."

About 6,000 Solidarity supporters gathered Sunday night at St. Stanislaw Kostka's church in Warsaw for a Mass. Similar pro-Solidarity services have been held on the last Sunday of nearly every month since the declaration of martial law.

Solidarity was suspended with the martial law declaration and outlawed last October.

Pickup pieced together

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Investigators are trying to trace the ownership of a black pickup truck which they believe was used in the suicide bombing of the U.S. Embassy, sources close to the investigation said today.

The sources said Lebanese military investigators have been piecing together the remains of the truck and are trying to determine its make, manufacture date and engine number.

Two Lebanese who witnessed last Monday's bombing said earlier they saw a lone terrorist wearing a black leather jacket drive a black pickup past a security barricade into the embassy's driveway and then die in the fiery blast.

The witnesses were questioned again today by Lebanese military magistrate Assad Diab, who was assigned by the government to oversee the investigation. The two unidentified witnesses said they believed the pick-up was a General Motors Corp. model, Diab's office said.

The office also said police were checking the fingerprints on an arm recovered from the sea in front of the embassy building to find out whether it belonged to a criminal on police records who might have been the suicide bomber.

> "There are more bodies buried in the rubble because there is still a stench of decomposed corpses. We are trying to reach into the kitchen in the basement. We think the bodies are there."

The U.S. Embassy count lists a total of 49 people, including 17 Americans, killed on the embassy premises by the blast. Lebanese police have placed the death toll inside and around the building at 60.

Embassy spokesman John Reid said 24 Lebanese were confirmed killed in the blast and eight were missing and presumed dead in the rubble.

"There are more bodies buried in the rubble because there is still a stench of decomposed corpses," a Lebanese Red Cross worker on the scene said today. "We are trying to reach into the kitchen in the basement. We think the bodies are there."

He said searchers recovered the bodies of three Lebanese from the rubble on Sunday. But the search paused today while workers installed metal pillars to shore up the devastated building.

Sources familiar with the investigation said two air shafts on the front of the embassy's central wing took away much of the force of the blast. Otherwise more of the building could have collapsed, they said.

The front section of the central wing of the three-winged building broke off and collapsed to the ground. The back of the central wing, as well as the east and west wings, remained but the front walls of ground-floor offices were blown in and collapsed.

Cabin intruder worries more about 'hosts' than self

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — An 81-year-old woman, lost for six days in a remote area and barely strong enough to open a can of juice she found in a chilly, deserted cabin, scribbled a note apologizing to her unknown hosts.

"I'm so sorry I had to break into your home. It prolonged my life," wrote Alice Cannon before her rescue.

"My husband is dead, lying somewhere by some big rocks, not far away...Please call our children. They will be so worried. Thank you. Our children will remember you."

Mrs. Cannon, who burst into tears when she was found Thursday huddled next to a stove in the cabin, was in satisfactory condition today after surgery Sunday to remove the frostbitten toes of her right foot and about half her left foot, said her son, John N. Cannon of Provo.

It will be a week or two before she leaves the hospital and she will not be able to attend the funeral today for her husband, John Bennion Cannon, 85, he said.

Tom Torres, the searcher who found Mrs. Cannon, said she already had accepted that her feet might have to be amputated.

"I never ran into anyone like her," he said Sunday night.

The Cannons, of Salt Lake City, had gone on a drive to St. George, stopping to visit friends and relatives along the way, and on April 14 they took a sidetrip into Dixie National Forest.

"Mr. Cannon wanted to visit some gravesites of ancestors — they had ancestors all over," Torres said. "He wanted to reminisce."

Their car became stuck on a muddy road to Pine Valley, about 25 miles northwest of St. George in southwestern Utah.

"They left the car immediately," about 2 p.m., and "walked and chatted and got farther and farther away," John Cannon said.

"My father felt very compelled to go on," he said. They walked all night, and Mrs. Cannon's feet became frostbitten, the son said.

The next day they came to a turnoff and walked a short distance before becoming tired. They took shelter among some rocks, about six miles from their car, making a bed of pine boughs and sleeping there Friday night, April 15.

The next day was warm and Mrs. Cannon's husband walked on alone, finding a cabin a quarter mile away before returning to his wife.

"He was just worn out — he had two artificial hips, which made walking awkward. He sat down and never got up again," the son said.

"Saturday night he had a dream that this was the place he was to die, and they talked about it," he said.

The next day — Sunday April 17 — it turned very cold. Cannon told his wife about the cabin and said, "I haven't the strength to take you there," the son said.

Torres said Mrs. Cannon told him her husband said, "It's my time to leave the Earth. You'll be OK, Alice."

In the morning Mrs. Cannon could not awaken her husband. Dr. Marcus Kuypers, deputy medical examiner, said Cannon died of heart disease aggravated by hypothermia.

Historians have doubts about Hitler diaries

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — The British historian Hugh Trevor-Roper today backed off his endorsement of the authenticity of the purported Hitler diaries and said he had new doubts about how the papers were acquired.

Trevor-Roper and an American World War II expert, Gerhard L. Weinberg, said the documents needed further study before determining whether they were genuine writings of Adolf Hitler.

The historians' announcement came at a press conference at which Stern magazine had expected them to back the magazine's claim to have found Hitler's diaries.

In opening the two-hour conference, Stern Editor-in-Chief Peter Koch called the find "the journalist scoop of the post-war period." Koch said the magazine would give the documents to the government when it finishes publishing a series of excerpts.

Stern started the series today with a 12-page story outlining the discovery of what it said were 60 volumes of hand-written diaries kept by Hitler between 1932-1945. The story also repeated excerpts published in London during the weekend.

Trevor-Roper, who had vouched for the documents' authenticity in a Times of London article Saturday, and Weinberg took a cautious view today.

Trevor-Roper, who holds the title Lord Dacre, said, "A final judgment (of authenticity) cannot be given until the whole text of the documents can be examined."

He said he had thought one man could prove the papers were the same materials reportedly found in a wrecked airplane carrying documents taken from Hitler's Berlin bunker 10 days before he committed suicide in 1945 as Soviet troops advanced on his last stronghold.

"I am now told that this is not so, and that I must have misunderstood," Trevor-Roper said.

"There can be such a thing as a perfect forgery, so I defer to experts on that," he added.

Weinberg, a professor at the University of North Carolina and author of two books about Hitler, said: "I don't consider (the documents) a forgery, but there are further tests that are necessary. It seems to me essential that scholars familiar with the period have an opportunity to examine a transcript of the whole text."

Both historians said they were shown some of the papers during separate recent trips to Zurich.

Commenting on the magazine's assertion that four handwriting analysts had authenticated the writing as Hitler's, Weinberg said the experts had seen only some examples from papers reportedly found with the diaries.

"A substantial series of excerpts must be checked by handwriting experts" in order to authenticate the entire set of documents, he said.

The Sunday Times of London published excerpts from the purported diaries, but Trevor-Roper, an unpaid director of Times Newspapers Ltd., said the Times would not publish any more portions until the documents are authenticated.

Another historian, David Irving, told NBC-TV after being barred from speaking at the news conference that he has "serious doubts" about the diaries, contending Stern had failed to conduct dating tests on the ink on the pages.

"I had similar documents put in my hands last November, a very large collection — 800 pages — from exactly the same source," he said. "I've got some of them here and there's no doubt in my mind the ones I have are fake. The whole thing stinks."

Stern editor Koch showed about 100 foreign and West German journalists a film outlining the way the magazine says reporter Gerd Heidemann tracked the documents to a small East German town outside of Dresden.

Austrian chancellor resigns post

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Chancellor Bruno Kreisky, the dean of West European leaders, kept an election campaign promise and announced his resignation after conservatives ended his Socialist Party's 11-year majority in Parliament.

The 72-year-old Kreisky, leader of this neutral country since 1970, has held office longer than any current leader of a European democracy. He was seeking his fourth outright majority in Sunday's elections.

Instead, according to computer analyses of the unofficial election results, the Socialists lost five of their 95 parliamentary seats in the 183-member National Council while the conservative People's Party increased their representation from 77 to 81.

With neither major party gaining an absolute majority, there will be attempts now to form a coalition government, probably involving the small Freedom Party which appeared to have won the remaining 12 seats.

"The cause of this defeat probably has to be found with myself," a downcast Kreisky said on national television. The chancellor had backed Socialist plans to increase taxes on workers' vacation and Christmas bonuses and to impose a new tax on interest for savings accounts over $6,000.

His attempt to win another four-year term also had raised questions about his health. The chancellor suffers from kidney and eye trouble.

"I think the voters for the Greens and the Alternatives came to a large extent from the Socialist Party and I can easily imagine that one person or the other did not go to the polls," Kreisky said.

The Greens and the Alternative List, both populist left-wing parties campaigning on environmental issues, failed to win any parliamentary seats. But they undoubtedly drew votes away from the Socialists.

Unofficial totals as announced by the central election office, not including 80,000 absentee ballots, were:

Socialist Party — 2,270,977 for 47.8 percent, a loss of 3.23 percent.

People's Party — 2,052,714 for 43.21 percent, a gain of 1.31 percent.

Freedom Party — 236,320 for 4.97 percent, a loss of 1.09 percent.

Greens — 89,694, or 1.89 percent.

Alternative List — 60,150, or 1.27 percent.

Communist Party — 31,408, or 0.66 percent.

Others accounted for about 0.2 percent of valid ballots.

Kreisky said he planned to step down as chancellor after negotiations leading to a new government, but he planned to remain as party leader. He had vowed to resign the chancellorship rather than enter into a coalition.

"For us, this was a referendum against the sole rule of one party and for another political style, for more cooperation and economic recovery," said People's Party leader Alois Mock, 49.

Even though they lost ground in the national vote, the "liberals" stood to gain one seat for a total of 12 in Parliament because of a quirk in election laws. Votes and parliamentary seats are counted by province rather than by the nation as a whole, a factor that worked this year in favor of the party, led by 38-year-old Norbert Steger.

Dozens of young sympathizers tried to shake Chancellor Bruno Kreisky's hand Sunday as he stepped out of the ballot station where he had just cast his vote in General elections. Kreisky is trying to get a fourth consecutive absolute majority for his Socialist Party.

Kreisky had repeatedly refused to discuss a "Grand Coalition" of socialists and conservatives, but as the election drew near, he had declined to rule out cooperation with the Freedom Party.

The chancellor, a charismatic figure, was credited with keeping unemployment between 2 and 5.5 percent during his 13 years in office and in making Austria a peaceful country without social unrest and street violence.

He was a controversial figure internationally, however, because though a Jew, he supported the Palestine Liberation Organization and welcomed both PLO chief Yasser Arafat and the radical Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy to Vienna.

Foreign policy was not a campaign issue in this election.

Report issued on prison situation

WASHINGTON (AP) — More states are turning to early release or probation to cope with prison overcrowding as the U.S. inmate population swelled by a record number again in 1982.

The number of state and federal inmates increased by 42,915 in 1982 to reach an all-time high of 412,303, according a report released Sunday by the Justice Department's Bureau of Justice Statistics.

The department said new prison construction undertaken by most states and the federal government has not be able to keep pace with prison populations that grew partly because of mandatory minimum sentences and restricted parole.

As a result, 31 states are under court order to reduce overcrowding and nine others are fighting court battles over the issue.

The department noted some new remedies emerging or being expanded at the state level.

Michigan and Iowa adopted emergency release laws in 1981, followed by Connecticut, Georgia, Ohio and Oklahoma in 1982. Generally, these laws allow certain non-violent criminals to be released early if the state prison system exceeds its capacity for a specified period.

Georgia, New York, Ohio and Texas adopted programs for intensely supervised probation for certain convicts, usually first-time, non-violent offenders, who formerly were sent to prison. In general, these offenders are required to check daily with probation officers and meet with them at least once a week.

The 1982 inmate increase was the largest in absolute numbers since counting began in 1925, the department said. It resulted in an 11.6 percent rise, second only to the 12.2 percent surge in 1981.

The number of federal inmates reached 29,673 by the end of 1982, up 5.5 percent, a slower rate of increase than the year before when the number rose 15.5 percent. State prisons held 382,630 inmates at year's end, up 12.1 percent.

With federal prisons nearly 24 percent over capacity, the Reagan administration is seeking $94 million from Congress — the largest single-year request for new prisons in U.S. history. Over three years, the federal government hopes to add 3,320 prison beds.

Citing the tide of new prisoners, Attorney General William French Smith said last month he is studying ways to punish non-violent criminals without sending them to prison.

Smith said the $10,000-a-year cost of maintaining an inmate is too high a price to pay in such cases. Instead, federal officials are looking at alternatives like restitution to victims and community service.

At the state level, inmates have been housed two and three to a cell or in tents, sheds and military stockades.

The number of state prisoners housed in local jails to relieve overcrowded prisons rose by 20 percent during 1982, to 8,217. The department said this practice "has increasingly caused tensions between state and local authorities."

The department predicted continued pressure on prisons through 1990, because the most prison-prone population group is 20-to-29-year-old males and the largest single-year age group in the U.S. population was 22-year-olds in 1982.

The department said state officials most often cited tougher laws for the increase. While the most reliable figures from the Justice Department show only a small rise in crime since the mid-1970s, during the past several years 37 states have passed mandatory or determinate sentencing laws which require a fixed prison term, usually longer than under previous laws, before parole can be granted.

Other states have added extra prison time for repeat offenders and those who used a gun. Ten states have eliminated parole entirely.

Only three states reported a prisoner decline in 1982: West Virginia, down by 4 percent; Kentucky, 3 percent, and Michigan, 3 percent.

West Virginia attributed the decline to court-ordered releases and greater use of parole. Michigan said its drop resulted from its emergency release law. Kentucky's decrease reflected a state decision to stop counting state inmates held in local jails.

The largest numerical increases occured in the five largest state prison systems: California, up by 5,257; Texas, 4,780; Florida, 4,241; Ohio, 2,349, and New York, 2,311.

The number of women in prison grew by 2,193, to 17,649. As in eight of the last 10 years, the 14 percent increase was larger than that for men, but nevertheless the female portion of the total prison population has remained at about 4 percent since 1975.

Nationally, the rate of imprisonment hit 170 for every 100,000 U.S. residents. Nevada had the highest rate, 301 per 100,000, and North Dakota the lowest, 47. The District of Columbia, with a rate of 531, is not counted in the state rankings because it is a wholly urban area.

Servicemen's widows 'want to close the door'

DUBLIN, Ga. (AP) — Although Dianne Johnson was traveling to Washington for ceremonies honoring the servicemen who died three years ago today in the aborted Iranian hostage rescue mission, she says she understands why other widows stayed behind.

Mrs. Johnson's husband, Marine Staff Sgt. Dewey L. Johnson, was one of the eight U.S. servicemen killed when a helicopter and a C-130 transport plane crashed in Iran's Great Salt Desert on April 25, 1980. They were part of the secret mission to try to rescue 52 Americans held hostage after the takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

"You want to close the door and go on, but ceremonies make you look back whether you want to or not," said Mrs. Johnson, 32, who was taking her two children, Lee Ann, 11, and Wesley, 5, to the ceremonies at Arlington National Cemetery today.

Some of the other widows refused to go, Mrs. Johnson said before leaving on the trip. "I talked to one and she said she just doesn't want to open the door again. She wants to begin a new life."

Mrs. Johnson says she has made progress since the initial shock of her husband's death. For the first 2½ years, she struggled with the belief that she did not know the truth about the crash.

"I don't think about it anymore," she said. "It would drive me crazy. I'm not going to get any answers.

"I picture mass confusion on the desert that night. The Marine Corps and the Air Force always have had too many chiefs and not enough Indians."

She feels that her husband's death served no purpose — "none whatsoever," she said.

"I don't know if it's part of the grief cycle, but I've grown a lot in the past year. I don't have the doubts I once had. Now I make my own decisions."

After her husband had been dead two years, Mrs. Johnson stopped wearing her wedding rings.

"I thought it would bother me to take them off, but it didn't," she said. "When I felt it was time, taking them off seemed natural."

"I don't see any point in making plans anymore. I just take it one day at the time."

Cabin intruder worries more about hosts

Although Mrs. Cannon's feet were swollen and she couldn't wear her shoes, she stumbled on, "from one sagebrush to another" for nine hours to reach the cabin, her son said.

She broke a window with a log, but it was too small for her to get in. She went to the door, piled up logs, broke a window in the door and "tumbled in onto a chair and the floor," her son said.

She made a fire in the stove with newspaper, but never was able to ignite a log, Cannon said.

The first night she slept on the couch. The next night, "she finally got into the bed and tried to get warm." During the four days, she ate cans of soup, fruit and juice, Torres said.

The Cannons had been reported missing by relatives, and their car was found Wednesday night. At daybreak Thursday, Torres found the cabin with Mrs. Cannon huddled inside.

"She asked me who I was," Torres recounted. "I told her we had been looking for her. She put her hand to her mouth and started crying," he said.

"There was a lump in my throat. I just held her for a minute and let her cry. She was sure her life was over — she already had written a note to the people, thanking them."

"She was a whole lot more concerned about the people who owned the cabin and her family than about herself," he said. Even when speaking of her husband's death, "she was pretty brave through the whole thing."

"She doesn't think of it as courage — she just worries about others," Cannon said. "I guess that's the way to be courageous — to be concerned about others."

Lottery winner says he finds life 'rather boring'

WARREN, Pa. (AP) — A man who quit his $10,000-a-year job as a liquor clerk when he became the Pennsylvania lottery's first millionaire says he still washes his own dishes, mows his lawn and finds life "rather boring."

"After 11 years, nobody cares," said Harry Ward Casey, 61, reflecting on his moment of victory April 27, 1972, when he won $50,000 a year for 20 years.

"It's a dull life I lived before. It's a dull life I live now. I don't find it exciting. It hasn't changed me," he said in a recent interview.

But Casey is quick to point out that he's appreciative of his windfall.

"It was a godsend. My wife was terminally ill, and she died (of cancer) eight months later. It did allow me to spend some time with her that I wouldn't have been able to spend," said Casey, who since has remarried.

Although his current life is "rather boring," he says, "I have no regrets. It's marvelous for a 50-cent investment. But it's not all that marvelous. It doesn't solve all your problems."

Casey, who is reluctant to grant interviews, was the first of 86 people to hit the millionaire jackpot in the Pennsylvania Lottery. Thirty-three won prizes of $50,000 a year for 20 years, 25 won $1,000 a week for life with a minimum of $1 million and 28 Lotto winners have won a minimum of $1.03 million.

The largest state prize, $5,553,038.40, was won Dec. 27 by Pascal T. Cervi, 77, of Hopewell Township near Pittsburgh. Cervi's first installment on a 20-year jackpot was $264,430.40.

"People are making big money these days. Ballplayers make a million dollars in a year," said Casey.

"I feel like a Model T compared to the prizes they're winning today. I'm an antique. Now they have those big luxury models."

Casey did take a Florida trip with his dying wife soon after he hit the jackpot.

76-year-old woman: They can't let me starve

LUSK, Wyo. (AP) — A 76-year-old woman who lives alone on a farm and says she must use a car to buy groceries has gone to jail after refusing to sign a ticket for driving without a license, police say.

But Sadie Hanson said that license or no license, the state cannot refuse her permission to drive six miles into town to get food. She said such a right is guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution.

"I have to or I starve," she said.

Authorities suspended her driver's license several months ago because she refused to wear glasses and has a heart condition. Her arrest Friday night for driving without a license was the fifth on that charge since her suspension.

Historians doubt Hitler diaries

Koch declined to say who gave the documents to the magazine, or how much the publication paid for them.

Trevor-Roper said that because Stern will not reveal its sources, "We have to rely absolutely on Mr. Heidemann. But it is always possible for a single person to be deceived."

He added he "regretted that the normal method of historical verification has, perhaps necessarily, been sacrificed to journalistic requirements."

Trevor-Roper, author of a 1947 book "The Last Days of Hitler," wrote in Saturday's edition of the Times of London that he had reviewed the diaries and believed they were genuine.

On Sunday, he told reporters in London that there was always the "possibility that the diaries were forged," but said their quantity and range means "it would have been a very difficult operation."

Some other experts have suggested the diaries are part of an elaborate fraud.Two of Hitler's aides were quoted Sunday in a Hamburg weekly as saying the notebooks — said to have been hidden by a German army officer in his hayloft for 35 years — are fakes.

In the selections published by Stern today and by the Sunday Times, Hitler speaks contemptuously about Nazi propaganda chief Joseph Goebbels, SS commander Heinrich Himmler and other Third Reich figures. In one section published by the Times, the diary suggests that Europe's Jews "should be sent to sea and the boats sunk."

Hitler's campaign to exterminate the Jews led to the death of 6 million in World War II concentration camps.

It was spring cleaning day for the alligators at the Houston Zoo recently. The scaly creatures didn't seem to care all that much as a team of zoo personnel drained their pond and moved in with shovels and brooms to clean out a year's worth of alligator muck. Poll reveals Houstonians back gun registration

HOUSTON (AP) — Three out every five Houston residents favor requiring a police permit to purchase firearms, while 75 percent support arms limitation talks with the Soviet Union, according to a poll directed by a University of Houston professor.

The poll, designed by UH political scientist Richard Hofstetter, found 60 percent in favor of requiring a permit to buy a gun.

Hofstetter said about 75 percent of those questioned support arms limitations talks with Soviet leaders, but an overwhelming percentage opposes unilateral reduction of nuclear arms.

The poll was directed in the fall of 1982 by Hofstetter, chairman of the department of political science at UH. Interviewers working under Hofstetter questioned 239 adults by telephone.

Of those questioned, nearly 30 percent said they carry guns in their cars at least occasionally. One in four reported having been threatened by someone with a gun at some time, and 14 percent report being shot at some time in their lives.

The households of nearly 70 percent of those polled contain at least one firearm, the study showed. And 44 percent say they have guns for personal protection. Slightly less than 60 percent report having at least one rifle.

Survey results also found that 86 percent of the Houstonians questioned were concerned about illegal immigration to the United States, but just 35 percent say illegal immigrants have a negative effect on their lives.

A majority of those polled, 65 percent, said illegal immigrants from Mexico have positive effects on the city.

The survey found that 83 percent of Houstonians approve requiring school teachers to take examinations to test their competency in the subject matter they are assigned to teach.

More than 57 percent asserted that U.S. national security requires equal nuclear strength with the Soviet Union.

Balloon launch set for today

PALESTINE (AP) — Scientists hope four giant helium balloons to be launched here will give researchers extensive data about the Earth's damaged ozone layer.

The launch, scheduled for today, required perfect weather conditions because even mild atmospheric disturbances could thrown the balloons off course.

Each of the 800-foot-high, 450-foot-wide balloons will carry two tons of scientific instruments in its gondola.

The equipment will measure the ozone in the stratosphere as well as dozens of other chemical compounds that could be depleting the levels of the vital gas.

The experiment has drawn scientists from around the world to the National Scientific Balloon Facility in East Texas.

"The instruments aboard the balloons make up all the available technology on (atmospheric research) on ozone," said Dr. Wes Huntress, atmospheric science program manager for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif.

"Normally the instruments are sent up individually, but it turns out that approach into researching the ozone layers isn't sufficient," he said. "By taking a number of tests at the same time, we can learn a lot more about the ozone, as well as the accuracy of our instruments."

Ozone protects the Earth from the sun's ultraviolet radiation. Some chemicals — notably fluorocarbons used as refrigerants and propellants in some aerosol cans — can deplete or alter the distribution of ozone.

The tests are part of an international scientific inquiry into the causes and extent of ozone damage in the stratosphere. The first part of the inquiry — the Balloon Intercomparison Campaign — began last September.

Glenn 'gets a kick' out of MX opposition

HOUSTON (AP) - Ohio Sen. John Glenn, a Democratic presidential candidate and an American space hero, says he "gets a kick" out of current opposition to the MX missile system.

"I led a fight on the Senate floor against the MX three yeras ago and lost that fight," Glenn said during a campaign and fund-raising stop here this weekend.

Glenn, a 23-year Marine Corps veteran, trained as an astronaut at Houston's Johnson Space Center.

He said his military background gave him the experience to make such tough decisions about the military and military spending.

Glenn, who announced as a Democratic candidate for president last Thursday, said the MX system would cost about $34.3 billion over several years and should be canceled.

The senator also criticized the Rapid Deployment Force.

"This RDF's putting supply lines in front of the tropps and expected the stuff to be there when the war starts," Glenn said after arriving here Saturday for two fund-raising events.

Glenn likened the 1984 presidential race as a choice between the future and the past.

"We have the president harkening back to days of yore, if you will, in a number of different areas," Glenn said. Glenn said the Reagan administration has a "flip-flop" foreign policy and added that the way to peace in the Middle East was through the Camp David accords.

The senator said the Reagan administration at first ignored them in favor of a policy that emphasized the danger of the Soviet Union in the area.

Although the present administration has returned to the Camp David accords, Glenn said, it wasted more than a year in the search for Middle East peace.

Highway sniper remains at large

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A sniper who fired on five vehicles, including one driven by a suburban police chief, remained at large today.

No injuries were reported, but Leon Valley Police Chief Bill Stannard said he was lucky he wasn't hit after the gunfire on Interstate Highway 410 early Saturday.

Shots were fired from a green, late-model pickup at four other vehicles along I-410 about the same time as the Stannard incident, police said.

Stannard, 36, said he was on his way home from a friend's house at 2 a.m. when he saw the speeding pickup in his rearview mirror. The truck pulled up next to him and a blast of gunfire from a high-powered weapon shattered the windshield of his truck, Stannard said.

"I was lucky it shattered on the passenger side," he said.

THE BETTER HALF

"The interior decorator was here. She recommended slipcovers for the sofa, the recliner and you!"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, April 26, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Naturalist-artist John James Audubon, philosopher David Hume, playwright Anita Loos and seismologist Charles Richter were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: Carol Burnett, former New York Giants pitcher Sal Maglie, writer Bernard Malamud and Kansas City Royals centerfielder Amos Otis. In the coming months you solve a financial dilemma by cleverly repackaging an old idea. A certain amount of risk-taking is favored. You have admirers in high places who will help you out now and then. Show your appreciation in tangible ways. A tendency to brood over past grievances could threaten a marriage. Dwell only on the positive!

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Unearth a new talent within your work force and business will bloom. You are immensely popular with those on the way up. Romance bursts into full flower.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Family members contribute to your success. An opportunity arises just as you are about to throw in the towel. Secure financing from those who have admired your integrity and ability.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Focus on your objectives. A highly charged situation needs to be handled carefully. Tend to a child's needs. Avoid impulsive actions or answers.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Reduce the tension in your life. A banker is in a helpful mood. Ask his/her advice on developing a plan that will resolve your financial difficulties. Athletic endeavors improve morale.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Complications result from a secret pact you have made with another. It may be time to bring everything out in the open. Steer clear of an overbearing individual.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Romance is interfering with your job performance. Travel gives you the edge over a competitor. Forget those who have slighted you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): There are many benefits to talking things out with the boss. You get a rare opportunity to help a good friend stay out of trouble.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Act decisively and others will follow where you lead. Re-evaluate partnership. Although technological changes are upsetting, the results they bring will be pleasing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You get a second chance at a promotion. Someone at a distance could provide a new outlet for your talents or merchandise. Make a greater effort to understand mate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Follow your intuition and you make all the right moves today. Friends help you make a charity event a big success. Stop taking on so many extra projects at work.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A shy colleague can be a valuable ally. Set a good example for a child or new employee. Avoid inflaming those who might have answers to your money problems.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A change of environment makes you happier and more productive. The boss comes around to your way of thinking. A pleasant interlude could be interrupted by a last-minute business trip.

Dancer refuses to dance

NEW YORK (AP) — Peter Martins choreographed both "The Magic Flute" and "Stravinsky Piano Ballets," programs scheduled for broadcast as part of public TV's "Dance in America" series, but will not dance to any extent in either show.

"I prefer not to dance my own choreography," says Martins, who took over from George Balanchine in March as a director, with Jerome Robbins, of the New York City Ballet. "I don't like it. It's perverse to me, doesn't fit.

"I danced the boy in the premiere of 'The Magic Flute' only because everybody else was sick or injured," says Martins, who will appear briefly as the old hermit in television production of the ballet, to be broadcast Monday night.

The New York City Ballet will perform "The Magic Flute," as well as the Stravinsky program scheduled for broadcast in the fall. Heather Watts and Ib Andersen are the featured dancers in "The Magic Flute."

The New York City Ballet audience has, for some time, considered the tall, blond Martins the star of the company, though performance programs list the dancers in alphabetical order.

Balanchine became ill last fall, and Martins and Jerome Robbins were running the company even before the announcement, on March 16, that the 36-year-old dancer would take charge, in association with Robbins.

His cameo appearance in the TV performance of "The Magic Flute" is the result, producer Judy Kinberg says, of a tight budget for the show.

The plot of Martins' "Magic Flute," danced to music by Ricardo Drigo, does not follow the same story line as Mozart's opera. The ballet is done in 19th-century style.

A village girl and boy are in love, but her parents want her to marry a rich man. An old hermit gives the boy a magic flute, and when he plays it, everybody has to dance. The ending is the wedding of the young couple, with the whole village dancing happily.

Asked what plans he has for the New York City Ballet, Martins says, "I have lots of ideas. I got one lesson from Balanchine, never discuss your ballets with anybody until you put them on the stage. If you tell what you plan to do, by the time you get around to it, five people will have done it."

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AJ853 ♡K95 ◇73 ♣KQ9
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 NT	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—You have a five-card major suit, but there is no need to advertise that fact. Partner has already told you that he has a balanced hand, and yours is balanced, too. Make the value bid of three no trump — three spades tells partner you have a six-card suit and an unbalanced hand.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKQ ♡AKJ105 ◇J87 ♣92
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ◇	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	5 ◇	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—You have a very good hand, yet you can do no more than bid five hearts. If you trust partner's cue-bids, your side may not have a club control. Partner had two opportunities to cue-bid clubs, but bypassed both. If he does have a club control, he is free to bid over five hearts.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KQ5 ♡82 ◇AQJ98 ♣763
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
2 NT	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—This is a matter of simple arithmetic. Even if partner has 20 points, your side has only 32 HCP. Not even your fifth diamond is enough for you to presume that your combined holding will stretch to slam. Bid three no trump.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K93 ♡Q875 ◇AKJ6 ♣72
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	Dble	Pass	2 ♠
Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—If you bid again because you thought that partner's jump was forcing, we suggest you read again the chapter on takeout doubles in your bridge book. Partner's jump is invitational, and you have a dead minimum takeout double. To make matters worse, you have only three spades and partner may have only a four-card suit. Pass.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠4 ♡AQ106 ◇KQ98 ♣KQJ5
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	Dble	Pass	1 NT
Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Partner's one no trump response to your takeout double shows a fair hand, so you want to get to game. The question is where to play the hand, in a suit or in no trump? If you cue-bid two spades now, you might receive an answer to that question while at the same time you advise partner of your strong hand.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q1065 ♡93 ◇8542 ♣AK6
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	1 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—In support of spades, your hand revalues to 11 points. Therefore, you are too strong for a simple raise to two spades. Jump to three spades — that is not forcing, only invitational. If partner has full values, he will carry on to game.

Fighting in school

Midland Independent School District trustees are responding appropriately to an unprovoked land grab by neighboring Ector County Independent School District. One of the Ector County district's recent policies was the cause of the unhappy situation in the first place.

The situation arose because a number of people living in Midland County outside Odessa want their children to attend the Ector County school district instead of Midland's public schools. They live closer to Odessa and their children do not have to commute so far by bus to attend Odessa schools.

But when ECISD trustees voted a year ago to charge tuition of $1,260 for each out-of-district student, the people concerned rebelled. They wanted their cake, but they wanted to eat it too.

It's difficult to sympathize with the landowners. They knew when they moved to that location their children would be legally required to attend Midland schools or attend another school system as out-of-district students. It's a tough situation, but one they created themselves.

The crux of the matter is that by annexing the 2,000-acre area now in the Midland district, the Ector County school board will be depriving the Midland district of $17 million in appraised property revenues immediately and possibly "hundreds of millions of dollars" when the land is developed, according to Midland school board president Parker Humes.

What that means, in effect, is the Odessa school board is attempting to reduce the quality of education now being provided by the Midland school system because tax revenues are transformed into quality education by the district.

Since the hubbub began with the Midland County residents, the Ector County school board has rescinded its tuition order, which makes us wonder if the tuition policy was ever really an issue or if the board simply wanted to extend its tax base into Midland County.

That's a prime lesson in dirty politics that the Midland Board should stay after school to fight.

Threat from UNESCO

For 10 years many members of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization have been attempting to create what they call a "new world information order." It is a movement that should be resisted by everyone who believes in a free press.

The UNESCO members in question have been critical of the four major international news agencies. They are the Associated Press, United Press International, Reuter's of England and the French agency, Agence France-Presse. Most professional journalists agree that all four do an excellent job of reporting the truth, and nothing but.

The UNESCO rebels, however, believe governments, especially in Third World nations, should have a say in what kind of news is gathered and disseminated. Just the other day in Paris they issued another document emphasizing their desire to limit the freedom of the news agencies and give more authority to governments.

That would be censorship, pure and simple. UNESCO has been embarrassed by the word "censorship," and in a previous report has said it is against any such deplorable activity. Despite such deploring, the campaign for more management of news by governments continues. The Paris report calls for "codes of conduct" for journalists, a term that seems innocuous enough until you read the small print. The small print tells us that such "codes" will be determined, not by professional journalists, but by politicians.

The Paris document will be presented to all of UNESCO's members later this year. It should be analyzed carefully, and every word that impinges on a free press should be deleted.

Shielding shady MDs

Just because doctors wear white coats and are engaged in the noble work of healing doesn't mean that doctors, in their business practices, should be above laws that apply to other Americans.

Unfortunately, the American Medical Association didn't get that message last year when Congress wisely killed a proposal that would have exempted doctors and other professionals from the jurisdiction of the Federal Trade Commission.

James Sammons, the AMA's executive vice president, vowed recently to continue to fight for the exemption. "We will be back in the next Congress," he stated.

The good doctors should drop this fight, for it's a losing battle in many ways. First, consumers would lose because doctors and other professionals would be allowed to fix prices and engage in fraud and deceptive practices without fear of FTC prosecution. Over the years, the FTC has stopped some doctors from engaging in unfair business practices and thus helped keep down medical costs.

Secondly, doctors only tarnish their image by attempting to operate their businesses outside of the authority of the FTC. What makes doctors and other professionals so special? Certainly, recent convictions in cases of Medicaid fraud have shown that the medical profession has its share of rotten apples. No, we don't mean to imply that many doctors are crooks. No doubt the overwhelming majority of doctors conduct their business affairs honestly and in accordance with FTC regulations. But that is all the more reason not to shield the shady practitioners.

Finally, it's quite possible that ultimately the AMA will not prevail. FTC chairman James Miller noted that the battle would be hard-fought, but added that the FTC was unanimously opposed to the exemption and that he, himself, was "optimistic that reason will prevail" again in Congress.

Because he has never been considered a consumer zealot, Miller should have a lot of credibility on this matter. Still, his sensible position will need active support of consumers to offset the influence of an expensive AMA lobbying effort. So, if you think that doctors and other professionals should not be beyond the reach of the FTC, let your elected officials know.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Mideast terrorist writing in blood

WASHINGTON — Following last week's bombing of the American embassy in Beirut, U.S. intelligence agencies are taking a closer look at the terrorists in the Middle East. In a highly competitive field, one man has emerged as the most bloodthirsty, irresponsible Arab terrorist in the world.

Jack Anderson

He is Abu Nidal, and he has written his record in blood. His fanatical group's latest victim was Dr. Issam Sartawi, a U.S.-trained cardiologist who was the Palestine Liberation Organization's Western European representative.

The "crime" for which Sartawi was murdered in Portugal was being a moderate, the highest-ranking PLO leader to advocate recognition of Israel. That was enough to mark him for assassination by Nidal's gunmen.

Nidal's single-minded aim is the destruction of Israel. Like the Serbian "Black Hand" terrorists who touched off World War I with the assassination of Austrian Archduke Franz Ferdinand at Sarajevo, Nidal's killers don't care how many people die as they pursue their goal. In fact, Nidal also ignited a war.

Here is Nidal's sorry record, as revealed by secret State Department documents and interviews with intelligence sources by my associate Dale Van Atta:

— After defecting from the PLO's mainstream organization, Fatah, in 1974, Nidal tried to assassinate Yasser Arafat and was sentenced to death by Fatah's military court.

— Nidel took refuge in Baghdad, and with the Iraqi government's help, sent Palestinian death squads against Arab opponents in the Middle East and Europe. In 1978, his gunmen — numbering fewer than 100 — assassinated at least eight PLO representatives.

— In 1980, Iraqi President Saddam Hussein kicked Nidal out. The Syrians accepted him, even though he had seized a Damascus hotel and murdered four hostages just four years earlier.

— In May 1981, Nidal claimed credit for the murder of Heinz Nittel, chairman of the Austro-Israel Society and a personal friend of Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky.

— In August 1981, Nidal's thugs attacked a synagogue in Vienna, killing two persons with Polish WZ-63 machine pistols.

— On June 3, 1982, Nidal's group seriously wounded Israel's ambassador in London, Shlomo Argov, using the same Polish weapons. The assassination attempt was the immediate cause for Israel's invasion of Lebanon three days later.

— In August 1982, Nidal's group used machine pistols and grenades in an attack on the defenseless patrons of a well-known Jewish restrautant in Paris. Six persons were killed, including two Americans.

In the wake of the Israeli invasion of Lebanon, one secret State Department report speculated that if Arafat were toppled from his shaky control of the PLO, "the Palestinian movement will probably disintegrate into radical splinter groups, which, in combination with other revolutionary forces in the region, would pose a grave threat to the moderate Arab governments."

The report added mysteriously: "Israel seems determined to vent this threat ... and can be expected to greatly expand its covert cooperations with revolutionary movements."

Asked what this meant, two well-placed intelligence sources explained that it was in Israel's interest to "divide and conquer" — to disrupt the PLO by setting one faction against another. The sources said Israel had secretly provided funds to Abu Nidal's group.

No credible source, incidentally, suggested that Israeli leaders knowingly supported the assassination attempt on their own ambassador to provide a pretext for the Lebanon invasion. Several sources pointed out that intelligence agencies — including the CIA and the KGB — have been known to provide money to groups over which they have no significant control.

LIGHT READING: Anyone who remembers those wartime letters in which everything between "Dear Mom" and "Your loving son" was blacked out by the censor can appreciate the National Wildlife Federation's feelings when it finally got a document from the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission under the Freedom of Information Act.

What the environmental group wanted was the agency's so-called "Red Book," which lists the applications for hydroelectric power project licenses — a good clue to the locations of dams that might damage the environment. The commission said much of the book dealt with internal policy matters and couldn't be released.

So the federation asked for the factual content, which by law must be given out. After the usual delays, the federation received precisely four pages of material: a copy of the title page, the one-page table of contents (indicating that there were 57 pages of text), two paragraphs of the book's one-page forward, and a page with the heading "Hydropower Licensing." The federation has appealed.

REALLY UNDERGROUND: More than 1,000 Solidarity activists are estimated to be at large in Poland despite the best efforts of the military regime's secret police to ferret them out. This includes five or more of the outlawed union movement's top leaders, whose faces are well known to the police. How have they managed to remain hidden? U.S. intelligence sources say they have undoubtedly changed not only their identities but their appearances as well, by dying their hair and altering their facial features to be completely unrecognizable.

INSIDE REPORT:

Beirut blast wiped out CIA post

WASHINGTON — Although the Central Intelligence Agency is not talking about it, the April 18 bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Beirut wiped out almost the entire CIA station at one of the world's most vital points for collection of intelligence.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Precise names and numbers of CIA dead were not disclosed, beyond the death of the agency's authoritative Mideast analyst, the highly-esteemed Robert C. Ames. Word of the CIA wipeout was made available from Pentagon insiders who learned the facts from the embassy's defense attaches.

Ames, 49, had become indispensable to Ronald Reagan's Mideast peace plan, regularly briefing the president in the Oval Office on past history and future probabilities in the Arab-Israeli struggle. He had arrived in Beirut only the evening before the explosion. He apparently was visiting the office of the local CIA station chief when the bomb went off. It probably never will be known whether the attackers were targeting Ames and his fellow CIA men, but that possibility cannot be completely ruled out.

JOHN GLENN'S MUSCLE

After we reported a less-than-solid phalanx of support for Sen. John Glenn's presidential bid in his home state of Ohio, he pounced with uncharacteristic speed and muscle to pick up two important stragglers.

Glenn paid a personal visit to Rep. Ed Feighan of Cleveland, who had told us he could not come out against Walter F. Mondale and would surely endorse nobody for the next several months. Glenn forcefully told Feighan he needed his endorsement immediately in answer to our column, not six months from now. The clincher that brought the congressman to submission was his reminder of support for Feighan's campaign for mayor in Cleveland in 1977.

After our column appeared, Glenn also contacted and won endorsement from State Attorney General Tony Celebrezze, who told us a few days earlier he had no intention of endorsing anybody. Mondale operatives claim they earlier had a commitment from Celebrezze to back the former vice president. His switch leaves Sen. Howard Metzenbaum as the biggest Ohio fish not in Glenn's net.

NON-'GRAYBEARD' KEMP

Rep. Jack Kemp, increasingly at odds with Reagan administration economics policy the past year, has been quietly eased out of the panel of outside economic advisers to the president.

Kemp has not attended the last three sessions of the panel (nicknamed "The Graybeards"), including the April 21 meeting. Kemp, whose tax-cut bill was the cornerstone of Reagan's economic recovery program, was the only congressional member of the advisory board. But after his hard-fought opposition to the president's 1982 tax increase, it was mutually agreed he would no longer attend.

A footnote: At the April 21 session, monetarist Milton Friedman and supply-sider Arthur Laffer joined forces in urging Reagan to resist further tax increases. The president agreed and there was no dissent, even though his aides at that moment were pressing Congress to pass a $50 billion tax increase for Fiscal Year 1986.

BILL CASEY'S ADVICE

CIA Director William J. Casey is secretly but forcefully urging President Reagan to go public on Soviet violations of the SALT nuclear treaties and other U.S.-Soviet arms control agreements.

Casey, who packs a wallop in Ronald Reagan's White House despite official silence on almost all political questions, has made his position on this issue known to the president. Even if allegations of Soviet cheating cannot be proved beyond the slightest doubt, the CIA chief believes the recent proliferation of major incidents that smack of outright treaty violations require public airing by the U.S. That includes Soviet testing of two apparently different new missiles in the past six months.

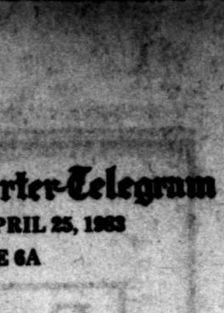

Casey is joined in that position by national security adviser William P. Clark, but is opposed by the State Department and other national security officials who fear presidential embarrassment if the charges cannot be proved. Casey's stance could well decide the president's mind.

CHARLEY REESE

Covert acts no place for U.S. agents

We ought to eliminate any and all covert actions by our intelligence agencies, not because the practice is immoral, but because we are not very good at it.

Charley Reese

There is a big fuss now about whether we're supporting those Nicaraguans who are trying to overthrow the Sandinist government. I suppose we are, but, you see, we've already botched it. Nobody in Washington can keep a secret.

A covert action like fomenting a revolution or assassinating an unfriendly government leader has a practical value. Take Nicaragua, for example. The Marxist dopes who are running the country are definitely hostile to us, not to mention being ungrateful.

They are ingrates because they'd all be dead meat and Anastasio Somoza would still be running the show if Jimmy Carter and his band of idiots hadn't pulled the carpet out from under him. Carter delivered Nicaragua to the Sandinistas by cutting off Somoza's money, arms, ammunition and finally forcing him into exile. But that bunch of idiots down there still want to turn Nicaragua into a Soviet military base and spend all day chanting anti-American slogans instead of minding their own business.

Well, when you get a bad government like that, you've got two choices: covert action or war. Now if President Reagan went to the Congress and asked them to declare war on Nicaragua, they probably would refuse. The Congress, in recent decades, has turned yellow as a whole.

So the president has sent the CIA down there to do in Nicaragua what the Soviets are doing in El Salvador. Trouble is the Soviets are better at that kind of stuff than we are. One, they are not scrupulous about the kind of men they arm or how many people those men kill. Two, they have a complete package which comes with arms, training, and an ideology. Three, they have a worldwide network of agents who know how to work the media and support the guerillas with propaganda Fourth, they don't have anybody back home second-guessing them. Five, they fight to win.

Now, we can supply guns and training, but we have no packaged ideology. We can teach them military tactics but we have no political program for them to advocate. We don't have a propaganda net to support them. We have plenty of dissenters and Monday morning quarterbacks. The Soviet KGB doesn't have to expose our covert actions; the American press and television networks do it for them. Worst of all, we have no clear idea of what it is we really want to do.

If the Sandinistas would simply say publicly, whether they mean it or not, they are no longer going to supply guerillas in other countries and cool their anti-American rhetoric, we'd stop trying to overthrow them instantly. Like so many times in the past, we'd leave the Nicaraguan rebels who have trusted us, high and dry for the sake of political expedience.

This is a terrible injustice. It is immoral. Those men in the jungle down there are killing and dying. To them, it is not a game of trying to pressure the Sandinistas. To them, it is a question of winning and living or losing and dying. So it is terribly unfair of us to push them into a fight and then a few months later say, "Sorry, fellows, but the boss in Washington has changed his mind and we're taking your guns and money and going home."

What President Reagan ought to do is be honest and put the burden on the American people and the Congress. He ought to lay it all out. "Look, folks, Nicaragua is a threat to us and here are the reasons I think so. I believe we ought to declare war and take the Sandinistas out. It will be a short war, but there will be some casualties and a lot of bad press. But in the long run, it will be beneficial not only to us but also to the people of Central America."

Then, if the American people and the Congress say no, he should just reply, "Okay, just remember I told you so," and do nothing. Perhaps, after all of Central America went communist and Mexico was burning and there were 20 million refugees fleeing across our borders, the Congress would change its mind about doing something to preserve the country.

But let's get out of the covert business which we botch every time and play the game out in the open and with total honesty. Tell the American people the truth. Then, if they don't want to do what they have to do to survive, well they won't be the first democratic people to commit national suicide.

John Louis Evans' attorney and sister made a direct appeal to Gov. Wallace Thursday asking for a stay of execution. The Governor would not intervene. Evans was granted a temporary stay by U.S. District Judge Emmett Cox of Mobile but it was overturned by the U.S. Supreme Court and Evans was executed in the electric chair Friday night.

Evans records message to family before death

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Less than a week before he was executed, convicted killer John Louis Evans III videotaped a message telling children, "Don't follow me," a prison spokesman said today.

Evans made the tape last week at the request of prison chaplain the Rev. Martin Webber, state prison spokesman Ron Tate said. One of the condemned man's stipulations was that it not be used until after his death, Tate said.

Evans, 33, died Friday night in Alabama's yellow-painted electric chair after the U.S. Supreme Court set aside a stay ordered by a federal judge.

"In recent months or years, he supposedly became a Christian," Tate said of Evans.

Mayor expected to win in recall election

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Some opponents of Mayor Dianne Feinstein joined her supporters in predicting she'll "win big" Tuesday in a mayoral recall challenge mounted by a coalition of fringe groups.

With more than 2,000 volunteers working for her, a $450,000 war chest and a vote-by-mail campaign aimed at tens of thousands of voters, including every registered Republican, the Democratic mayor's polls predicted she'll take 75 percent of the ballots cast.

Elected city officials, Republican groups, political clubs for homosexuals, Chinese-Americans and Irish-Americans were among groups that have lined up behind Ms. Feinstein, as well as people who simply feel the recall process has been misused.

But the White Panthers, the group that started the nine-month drama because it was upset at the mayor's stand against handguns, has refused to concede. "As far as we're concerned, the election hasn't happened yet," said Panther spokesman Thomas W. Stevens.

"She's going to win big," predicted Dave Brigode, head of a pro-recall group, Citizens for a New Mayor, who termed the recall election the "best shot the common people have had in a long time" to oppose gun control.

The only ballot question is: "Shall Dianne Feinstein be recalled (removed) from the office of mayor?"

It was the White Panthers' belief in the right to bear arms that prompted its 20 members to draw up recall petitions last summer when Ms. Feinstein signed a citywide ban on handguns.

She has traced her anti-handgun stance to the assassinations of John F. and Robert F. Kennedy, Martin Luther King Jr., and her predecessor as mayor, George Moscone.

Moscone and supervisor Harvey Milk were gunned down in city hall by ex-supervisor Dan White in 1978. Ms. Feinstein, then a supervisor, took over as mayor and was re-elected in 1979.

During the Panthers' signature drive, the handgun ban was overturned as unconstitutional. But by then the momentum for a recall was being fueled by other groups.

"In a city like San Francisco, you can get enough signatures to fly a purple balloon," said David Smith, of the Haight-Ashbury Free Clinic near the Panthers' headquarters. "All you need ... is the energy."

The Libertarian Party wanted the mayor's ouster because she "believes in government control over individual rights;" the San Francisco Tenants Union, because of her "pro-landlord policies;" the Haight-Ashbury Neighborhood Council, because they see her support of downtown growth as a threat to neighborhoods.

Two gay political clubs wanted her recalled because she vetoed a domestic partnership bill that would have given benefits to unmarried couples and the Victorian Alliance campaigned against her because members feel she has not acted to preserve historic buildings.

13-month-old baby improves after liver transplants

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A 13-month-old boy who received two liver transplants in less than 10 days was "alert and active," improving enough to hold his mother's hand, doctors said.

Brandon Hall, the youngest patient ever to undergo two liver transplant operations, "continues to show signs of improvement and doctors remain optimistic at this point," a statement from Le Bonheur Children's Medical Center said Sunday.

The boy had been receiving antibiotics for a stubborn lung infection, but physicians withdrew the drugs Sunday as his lungs cleared up.

Doctors said Brandon's vital signs were stable, although he remained in critical condition early today.

"He's been alert and active ... kicking his legs, moving his arms and holding on to his mom's hand," said hospital spokesman Scott Kent.

Doctors said initial test results on the function of the new liver were encouraging. More tests were planned today, as residents of Brandon's home town in Walnut, Miss., continued fund-raising efforts for the surgery that have raised more than $90,000.

Brandon received Friday the liver of a 5-month-old Bowling Green, Ky., girl whose father has been charged with murder. The organ replaced a liver taken from the body of a Richmond, Va., girl who died of injuries from a traffic accident. A series of complications marred the first transplant, including two heart stoppages and problems with blood circulation in the new organ.

Brandon was born with biliary atresia, which means his liver did not have bile ducts needed to drain away poisons filtered from the blood. Few victims live more than two or three years, and a transplant is their only hope for life.

Another youngster with the defect, 17-month-old Jamie Fisk, underwent a similar transplant last fall after her father made an emotional plea to a doctors' group, seeking their help in finding a donor.

The Bridgeport, Mass., youngster has been admitted to University of Minnesota Hospitals in Minneapolis with a 104-degree fever. But hospital spokesman Ralph Heussner said medication controlled Jamie's temperature on Sunday and she was able to play outdoors in 69-degree sunshine.

The fever apparently was unrelated to the transplant last November, and the girl's liver was functioning normally, Heussner said.

Brandon underwent his first transplant only hours after he and his mother, Billie Hall, went before a congressional subcommittee to seek federal aid for the high cost of transplants. Mrs. Hall is unemployed and separated from her husband.

The 500 residents in their home town of Walnut, about 75 miles east of Memphis, have been raising money since last fall to make sure Brandon could have the life-saving surgery.

Libyan planes to leave arms cargo in Brazil

MANAUS, Brazil (AP) — The government says three Libyan planes detained for a week are free to leave Brazil today, but without their cargo of Nicaragua-bound weapons.

A fourth detained aircraft, a U.S.-made C-130 transport, was under repair at the air force base in Recife, a northeastern port 2,380 miles east of this city in the Amazon jungle, and apparently would not be ready to take off with the three Soviet-made Ilyushin jets.

The pilots and diplomats from the Libyan Embassy inspected the Ilyushins Sunday afternoon and returned to their hotel. It was not immediately known when the planes would depart, but they will leave behind a cargo that the Brazilian government said included weapons made in the United States and the Soviet Union.

Brazilian officials said the cargo would be returned to Libya at an unspecified future date.

Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy said the arms were destined for Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista regime, which is fighting an effort by exiled opponents to overthrow it. The Colombian government charged that the Libyan planes planned to drop off weapons to leftist guerrillas in its Amazon region.

The planes were unloaded in secret over the weekend after army troops on Friday sealed off the airport and evacuated civilians at rifle-point. The armed forces whisked the cargo away, apparently to a military air base on the other side of the city.

Brazail's military-run government did not describe the weapons or show them to the public because of what it said were security and safety reasons.

In a note released Sunday by the government news agency EBN, presidential press spokesman Carlos Atila said three of the planes were "free to take off, whenever they want, for any destination."

Flavio Sapha, Atila's assistant, told reporters in Manaus that "only the Presidential Palace in Brasilia" could say if and when the arms would be shown to the public.

He said the government "will give back, later and by another means of transport, the war material removed from the four planes."

The newspaper O Globo of Rio de Janeiro on Sunday quoted U.S. Ambassador Langhorne Anthony Motley as saying the American-made arms found on the planes were weapons left behind by retreating U.S. troops in Vietnam in the 1970s. The embassy was closed Sunday and Motley could not be reached for comment.

The independent JB radio station of Rio, citing unidentified air force officials, said the cargo included "five tons of U.S.-made aerial bombs, a disassembled Czech training plane, eight Soviet-made anti-aircraft guns and eight Soviet multiple rocket launchers."

The government ordered the cargo unloaded despite Libya's refusal to open the locked planes or to send a representative to accompany the inspection.

The 38 crewmen from the planes at Manaus stayed at a plush hotel, while the eight from the C-130 were at a hotel on a beach in Recife.

The airplanes arrived in Brazil April 16 after the government granted a Libyan request for a "technical stopover." Brazil seized the planes when it learned they were carrying weapons — not medical supplies as Libya first said.

Government officials said they did not think the incident would hurt Brazil's growing arms exports to Libya. Brazil is the Third World's largest weapons exporter, and relies on arms revenues to help pay its foreign debt of nearly $90 billion.

Snag hits meeting between Greek, U.S. officials

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The Greek government today canceled meetings between high-ranking Greek officials and Richard Burt, the U.S. assistant secretary of state for European affairs, after Burt called for increased military aid to Turkey.

Government spokesman Dimitris Maroudas said the government called off meetings between Burt, due in Athens later in the day, and Socialist Premier Andreas Papandreou and undersecretaries of foreign affairs and defense, which had been scheduled for Tuesday.

Instead, Maroudas said, Burt will be received by lower officials, including the chief of the armed forces, Adm. Theodoros Deyannis.

Burt, coming from Ankara via West Germany, was to discuss Greek-American relations and differences between Greece and Turkey over Cyprus and the Aegean.

In Ankara on Sunday, he pledged increase military aid to Turkey and said Greece was in a better position to buy military equipment than Turkey.

"The Turkish military has very significant requirements and the United States wants to assist to the best of its ability," Burt told a news conference in Ankara.

Greece, which has had uneasy relations with Turkey, says increased aid to Turkey should be matched by increased aid to Greece.

Britons protest animal research

CARSHALTON, England (AP) — Demonstrators protesting laboratory experiments on animals hurled smoke bombs and clashed with police in this town south of London.

A police spokesman said 19 protesters were arrested and several were injured in scuffles Sunday outside a biological research complex.

The disturbance broke out when 5,000 protesters reached the laboratories after a 10-mile march from London as part of a worldwide protest coordinated by animal rights groups.

Hundreds of police officers ringing the complex surged into the protesters after the smoke bombs were thrown.

Angela Walder, scientific adviser to the British Union for the Abolition of Vivisection, said the demonstrators would become increasingly militant.

"There will be no velvet gloves of middle-class campaigning while animals cry out throughout the country," she said.

Teen floats for two days

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A Vietnamese teen-ager says he spent two days clinging to a plastic water jug and praying for rescue after a huge wave sank his boat and drowned 12 companions in the South China Sea.

Phan Cong Trang, 18, was picked up off the Vietnam coast April 20 by a Norwegian freighter that brought him to Manila on Saturday.

Trang told The Associated Press he fled Vietnam's Ba Xuyen province April 12 to avoid being sent to fight in Cambodia. It was his second attempt to escape the country, he said, and he hopes to live with his sister in the United States.

Trang said he set out with relatives and neighbors hoping to cross the South China Sea in a 22-foot motor boat.

Three days later their food and fuel ran out. On April 18, "a wave as big as a house swamped and broke our boat," he said in a telephone interview Sunday, conducted with the help of an interpreter, from a refugee camp where he is staying.

"I grabbed a water container and held on to it," Trang said. "The wave covered the whole boat. I was tossed away. When I looked back the boat was gone and there was nothing around. I didn't even see their (my companions') slippers."

CONSUMER BULLETIN

Philadelphia Brand dressings from Kraft, a new line of pourable dressings for salads, are being introduced nationally. Made with Philadelphia Brand cream cheese, the line is available in four varieties -- Italian herb, toasted onion, garlic & chive, and cucumber. The dressings represent the first extension of the Philadelphia Brand name to another product category since its introduction in 1880.

KRAFT INTRODUCES PHILADELPHIA BRAND DRESSINGS

Studies show that creamy pourable dressings are a favorite of salad lovers everywhere and consumers looking for a richer, thicker product with which to top their greens can now enjoy Philadelphia Brand dressings made with cream cheese. The new dressings from Kraft come in four varieties--Italian herb, toasted onion, garlic & chive, and cucumber--and are available in supermarkets across the country. For generations, families have trusted the Philadelphia Brand name, the symbol of quality cream cheese served in more than 50 million homes every year. The rich textural characteristics associated with the original product have been transferred to the new line. The addition of Philadelphia Brand cream cheese to the dressings makes them thicker, for a lush, creamy texture that clings to salad greens and vegetables. Each new dressing variety offers a smooth, distinctive flavor all its own. The Italian herb dressing blends bits of red bell pepper, chopped parsley, and onion with the cream cheese base. The other three dressings in the line feature real toasted onion, spicy garlic and chives, or the flavor of fresh cucumber. Changing lifestyles and the new emphasis on physical fitness have led to a trend in eating "light". As a result, salads play an important role in the diet of the '80's. The demand for dressings have increased, and creamy pourable brands have been growing faster than the total pourable category. The new pourable dressing is packaged in an 8-oz. glass bottle specially designed with a wider neck to allow the thicker product to pour easily. Available in April, the four varieties will be found with other Kraft pourables on supermarket shelves. If consumers have questions or comments about Philadelphia Brand dressings, there is a toll-free number to call: 800-323-0768. Illinois residents should dial 800-942-0481.

Brett up to .471; Royals win, 7-1

By The Associated Press

Mr. Consistency is at it again.

"He doesn't surprise me," said Toronto Manager Bobby Cox of Kansas City's George Brett. "He and Cecil Cooper (of the Milwaukee Brewers) don't surprise me by anything they do."

Brett, who seriously challenged the .400 batting mark in 1980 before finishing at .390, continued to hit the ball hard, hitting a double and run-scoring single in three trips Sunday to boost his average to .471 and lead the Royals to a 7-1 victory over the Blue Jays.

Brewers 3, Rangers 1

Don Sutton allowed just four hits in eight innings to beat Texas and move into 29th place on the all-time victory list with his 261st major league triumph.The 38-year-old Sutton, 3-1, moved past Hall of Famer Ted Lyons on the victory list and passed him for 27th place in innings pitched, 4,167.2.

Angels 7, Orioles 3

Brian Downing homered to snap a 3-3 tie in the sixth inning to lead California over Baltimore.

Following Downing's second homer of the season, Juan Beniquez doubled to knock out Dennis Martinez and Rob Wilfong singled off reliever Sammy Stewart to score Beniquez for a 5-3 California lead.

White Sox 9, Indians 3

Scott Fletcher knocked in four runs and scored another as the Chicago snapped a three-game losing streak with a victory over Cleveland. Chicago right-hander Richard Dotson allowed seven hits, walked four and struck out three in seven innings before getting relief help from Kevin Hickey.

Fletcher entered the game with five hits in his last 14 at bats, then went 2-for-4, reaching base once on an error.

Red Sox 4, A's 2

Dwight Evans smashed two homers, including a game-winning, three-run blast in the eighth, to lead Boston over Oakland.

Evans opened his one-man show with a first-inning solo shot against A's starter and loser Mike Norris.After Norris departed following singles by Ed Jurak and Wade Boggs in the eighth, Evans greeted reliever Steve Baker with another homer, his third of the year.

Tigers 4, Mariners 2

Larry Herndon's RBI triple keyed a two-run, third-inning rally as Detroit beat Seattle to complete a sweep of their three-game series.

With the Mariners winning 2-1, Lance Parrish singled in the Detroit third and scored on Herndon's triple to tie the game. Seattle first baseman Pat Putnam then bobbled Johnny Grubb's grounder, allowing Herndon to score the winning run for the Tigers.

Winner Jack Morris scattered eight hits, struck out six and allowed just one walk in 7⅓ innings.

Cardinals 2, Padres 0

Dave LaPoint, the St. Louis Cardinals' second-year pitcher, set the scenario.

LaPoint teamed with Bruce Sutter Sunday to pitch a 2-0, six-hit shutout against the San Diego Padres. But LaPoint's 71-3 innings were not without incident. He yielded only four hits but walked five, benefitting from three double plays.

Expos 5, Reds 4

The Expos rallied twice, from 1-0 and 3-2 deficits, to beat Cincinnati behind three RBIs by Andre Dawson and two by Brian Little. Little's run-scoring single in the eighth inning pulled Montreal into a 3-3 tie, and Dawson followed with a homer, his fourth, for the winning runs.

Cubs 5, Giants 1

Leon Durham's two-run homer in the fourth inning snapped a 1-1 tie, and Wayne Nordhagen drove in a pair of insurance runs in the eighth with a pinch single to lead Chicago over San Francisco.

Astros 3, Phillies 2

Jose Cruz stroked a run-scoring single in the bottom of the 11th inning to beat the Phillies. Omar Moreno led off the inning with an infield hit off Ron Reed and stole second. He went to third on a fly ball, and Dickie Thon and Phil Garner were walked intentionally.

Tug McGraw relieved Reed, and Cruz singled up the middle to snap the tie.

Mike Madden pitched the 11th and got the victory, his first major league decision.

Braves 6-5, Mets 3-3

Bob Horner homered in both games to help Atlanta remain unbeaten in nine home games this season, while the Mets remained winless in eight road games.

Dale Murphy also homered in the second game.

Cubs snap string of losses, 8-3

BEAUMONT — The Midland Cubs snapped a four-game losing streak here Sunday night with an 8-3 Texas League victory over the Beaumont Gators.

Seven Midland hits in the fifth inning produced seven runs and set the pace for the victory. Rick Baker stroked a two RBI triple and Tom Lombarski, Trey Brooks and A.J. Hill each had RBI singles.

On the mound, Darryl Banks improved his record to 3-1, giving up only one hit in six innings before being relieved by Ray Soff in the eighth. Gator George Stablein, 1-3, suffered the loss.

Gaining the victory gives Midland a 1-1 split in the five-game series and pushed the Cubs out of last place in the West Division with a 7-9 record and within 2½ games of league-leading San Antonio.

Midland and Beaumont will play game three tonight at 7 p.m. The Cubs return to Midland on May 3.

In other Texas League action, Tulsa defeated Arkansas, 6-5, and El Paso embarassed San Antonio, 15-0.

Despite the victory, the Drillers remain in last place in the East Division with a 5-9 record while Arkansas fell to .500, 7-7. Shreveport leads the East at 9-6, one game ahead of Jackson, 7-6.

El Paso's victory pulls the Diablos within one-half game of San Antonio. The Dodgers have a 10-7 record to El Paso's 9-7.

Tulsa put together its streak of five back-to-back hits with two outs in the sixth off reliever Kurt Hepshire, 0-2, the losing pitcher.

The Drillers' Greg Tabor had two hits and a pair of RBIs. Fran Batista banged out two hits and scored three runs.

Tulsa was guilty of six errors and four of the five Arkansas runs were unearned.

Rebels, Bobcats within one of state playoffs

The Midland Lee Rebels and San Angelo Bobcats are only one game away from clinching the two District 4-5A state playoff berths. A win by either team or a loss by Abilene High is all that's needed.

With two games remaining on the league schedule, there is little doubt that Lee and San Angelo will be the representatives. What is in doubt, however, is which one will wind up as the 1983 4-5A champion.

The Rebels and Bobcats are tied with 9-3 records and each would like to see the other stumble Tuesday or Saturday (the final games of the regular season) to determine an outright champion.

Tuesday's schedule has Lee playing its final road game against Cooper in Abilene while San Angelo travels to Odessa High. Elsewhere around the league, Midland High hosts Abilene High at Memorial Stadium Field and Odessa Permian is in Big Spring. All games are scheduled for 4 p.m.

SHOULD LEE and San Angelo tie for top 4-5A honors, they would hold a one-game playoff to determine the champion.

Should Lee, San Angelo and Abilene High tie for top honors, a coin flip would be used to determine which team receives a bye. The team with the bye would sit back while the remaining two play and then the winner of that game will play the team with the bye to determine first and second place.

FOR MIDLAND HIGH, it has been a disappointing season. Nothing would please Coach Tim Whalen or his troops more than to finish with victories in their final two games.

Beset by injuries from the onset of league play, the Bulldogs have struggled their way to a 3-9 record — tied with Permian for last place — and a win over Abilene High would not only Lee but would also help build momentum going into Saturday's game against the Rebels.

TofC champion repeats

Wadkins out to surpass last year

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) - Lanny Wadkins set a goal for himself for the 1983 PGA Tour.

"In terms of money won ($306,827) and tournaments won (three), last year was my best season. I want to surpass what I did last year," Wadkins said.

And he's on schedule, perhaps even ahead of schedule.

Wadkins' successful title defense Sunday in the MONY-Tournament of Champions marked his second victory of the season. And the $72,000 he collected from the total purse of $400,000 made him the year's leading money-winner at $229,048.

"And that's in only 10 or 11 tournaments," Wadkins said. "I plan to play a lot, play a lot of golf tournaments and have some fun doing it."

His immediate schedule, however, has him at home in Dallas for three weeks. He'll play in the Byron Nelson Classic this week, then will take two weeks off.

"These last four weeks have been pretty good to me. That'll just make the time at home that much more pleasant," said Wadkins, who opened play in April with a victory at Greensboro, won $164,225 for the month.

The triumph Sunday came on a 280 total — the same figure he compiled in last year's victory in this gathering limited to those who had won on the Tour over the past 12 months. He finished one stroke in front of PGA titleholder Ray Floyd.

WADKINS WON with a closing round of par 72, which included bogeys on two of the last three holes.

"I didn't think par golf would win it," Wadkins said, "but that's the way things happen. That's just the pressure of Sunday golf."

Floyd had a closing 69 and got his 281 total, 7-under-par on the 6,911-yard La Costa Country Club course before Wadkins finished.

"I didn't think a round of 3-under would give me any chance to win," Floyd said.

But it did. Wadkins was coming off a couple of bogeys and was forced to make a par on the 18th hole to salvage the title. He did, 2-putting from about 40 feet for the 12th victory of his career.

Jay Haas, who holed a 6-iron shot for an eagle-2 on the first hole, was in a head-to-head confrontation with Wadkins most of the final round but fell back on a string of three consecutive bogeys coming home. He finished with a 73 and third at 282.

HAL SUTTON was next at 74-283.

Isao Aoki of Japan, Bobby Clampett and Fuzzy Zoeller followed at 284. Aoki had a 70, despite a double bogey on the 18th. Clampett shot 71 over the last 18 holes and Zoeller 70.

Jack Nicklaus, who shared the lead after the first 36 holes, played the last 36 with only two birdies. The five-time winner of this event shot a closing 73 and was at 287.

Tom Watson, holder of the U.S. and British Open titles, continued to have problems. He never got into the title hunt and finished at 72-291. It is the first time in seven seasons Watson has gone this deep into the schedule without winning.

The tournament was sponsored by Mutual of New York.

Celtics beat Hawks to gain semifinals

'Magic' assists, Jabbar puts 'em; Lakers win; 118-97

By The Associated Press

The Boston Celtics put away the Atlanta Hawks and moved on to the Eastern Division semifinals, while the powerful Philadelphia 76ers and Los Angeles Lakers got off on the right foot in their best-of-seven National Basketball Association playoff series Sunday.

Larry Bird, making plays all over the court at Boston, led the Celtics to a 98-79 triumph over the Hawks, scoring 26 points. That gave Boston a 2-1 victory in the best-of-three mini-series and sent the Celtics on to meet the Milwaukee Bucks in a best-of-seven series starting Wednesday night in Boston Garden.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 32 points and Earvin "Magic" Johnson handed out 18 assists in the Lakers' 118-97 victory over the Portland Trail Blazers in the opening game of their series, and Moses Malone, wearing elastic supports on his injured knees, scored 38 points and hauled in 17 rebounds to pace the 76ers to a 112-102 triumph over the New York Knicks in the first game of their semi-final playoff.

AT BOSTON, Bird added nine rebounds and nine assists as the Celtics, who beat Atlanta five out of six times during the regular season, dominated the game, winning a deciding game of a playoff series for the sixth time in seven series since 1981.

The game was hotly contested and both benches emptied when Boston's 6-foot-5 Danny Ainge charged head-on into Atlanta's 7-1 Tree Rollins midway through the third period with Boston leading 68-52. Ainge and Mike Glenn of the Hawks were ejected for fighting, but Rollins was not penalized.

NBA Playoffs

Boston, led by Bird, built a 21-8 lead. Atlanta ran off a 13-3 sput to make it 24-21, but the Celtics remained on top throughout the game. The Celtics led 59-45 at halftime as Kevin McHale scored 14 of his 16 points in the second quarter, and Boston built its advantage to as much as 21 points in the third period and coasted the rest of the way.

Cedric Maxwell added 19 points for the Celtics and Gerald Henderson had 12.

Rollins led the Hawks with 18 points before fouling out with just over three minutes remaining. Johnny Davis had 15 points.

IN INGLEWOOD, Calif., Abdul-Jabbar pumped in 15 points as the Lakers shot out to a 29-12 lead in the first eight minutes.The Trail Blazers never were able to get closer than four points the rest of the way.

The Trail Blazers, trailing 91-87 early in the final quarter, had a chance to cut the difference to two points. But Lafayette Lever had his fast-break lay up attempt blocked by the Lakers' Michael Cooper, and the play instead wound up with Los Angeles getting a fast-break basket by Mark Landsberger. The Lakers then pulled away.

Jamaal Wilkes added 25 points for the Lakers, while Johnson and Norm Nixon had 19 apiece.Mychal Thompson paced Portland with 22 points and Calvin Natt added 21.

MALONE, PLAYING before a partisan Philadelphia crowd, played for the first time since April 10 and dominated the middle as the 76ers took the lead late in the first period and stayed ahead the rest of the way. The 6-10 center has been hampered by tendinitis in his right knee and an inflamed left knee.

The Knicks, who advanced to the semis with a mini-series sweep over New Jersey, were handicapped when their leading scorer, Bernard King, re-injured a sore right ankle just before the end of the first half. King had 11 points before leaving the game. Center Bill Cartwright led the Knicks with 17 points.

Guard Maurice Cheeks scored 14 points, Clint Richardson had 12 and Julius Erving 11 for the 76ers, who had a bye in the mini-series round because they won their conference championship.

Philadelphia broke the game open with 13 straight points, running the score to 79-64 with 5:25 remaining in the third period.

Game 2 in the Lakers-Portland Western Division semi-final series will be Tuesday night in Inglewood, with the Knicks, who lost 5 of 6 to the 76ers in the regular season, facing the 76ers in the second game of their Eastern semi-final series Wednesday night at Philadelphia.

IN A night game, Alex English scored 42 points and Mike Evans sank two crucial baskets in overtime as the Denver Nuggets beat the Phoenix Suns 117-112 in the decisive third game of their mini-series. The Nuggets will go on to meet the San Antonio Spurs in the other Western Division semifinal, starting Tuesday in San Antonio.

Evans also sank a three-point goal with 37 seconds in regulation to tie the game at 106-106. In overtime, Evans' first basket gave the Nuggets a 111-109 edge, and he later stole the ball and made an uncontested layup for a 113-108 advantage with 2:02 to go.

Breakers hand Stars 23-16 victory

By The Associated Press

The Philadelphia Stars handed Boston two points, then the Breakers handed Philadelphia the football — and their United States Football League game.

The Stars, whose 7-1 record is the best in the league, downed 5-3 Boston 23-16 Sunday. Kelvin Bryant ran for 110 yards and a touchdown but the key play came late in the game.

Stars punter Sean Landeta ran out of his own end zone with Philadelphia ahead 20-14 for a safety. On the ensuing kickoff, however, Boston's Ira Matthews fumbled at his own 30 and John Sutton recovered for the Stars. With 1:49 left, David Trout put the game out of reach with a 42-yard field goal.

USFL Roundup

"I think the Stars made a poor decision in calling for the safety," said Breakers Coach Richard Coury. "It gave us a chance but we fumbled it away and that cost us the game."

"Our kicking coverage was excellent," noted Stars Coach Jim Mora, "and the fumble recovery was the turning point of the game."

Sutton said the Stars did everything they planned to do on Matthews' kick return.

"The biggest thing we wanted to do was make sure we made the tackle to keep them from getting good field position," said Sutton.

Boston quarterback John Walton hit 31 of 44 passes for 367 yards.

Bandits 30, Federals 23

Carl Franks' 18-yard touchdown run with 2:25 remainng lifted the Bandits to 6-2, tops in the Central Division. Washington fell to 1-7.

Jimmy Jordan threw three Tampa Bay touchdown passes to Eric Truvillion and finished with 29 completions in 45 attempts for 345 yards.It was Jordan's first start at quarterback. He replaced John Reaves, who broke his wrist last week.

Franks, a rookie from Duke, did not report to Tampa Bay until last Thursday because he is completing undergraduate requirements.

Stallions 21, Invaders 9

Reggie Collier and Cornelius Quarles ran untouched into the end zone on key runs for the Stallions. Quarterback Collier scored on a 17-yard draw play and Quarles scampered in on a 25-yard run up the middle.

Both teams now are 3-5.

Panthers 34, Express 24

Bobby Hebert connected with Anthony Carter on a 26-yard touchdown toss and then threw a yard to Mike Cobb to pace Michigan. Novo Bojovic kicked four field goals as the Panthers, 4-4, rallied in the second half. LA also is 4-4.

Wranglers 24, Gold 3

Alan Risher threw for three second-half touchdowns, hooking up with Calvin Murray for 54 yards, Jackie Flowers and Neil Balholm for four yards each. Both teams are 4-4.

Stacy defends S&H Classic title

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Hollis Stacy, settling for par-72, abandoned her aggressive style of play Sunday and glided to a successful defense of her LPGA S&H Golf Classic title.

"I felt sorry for the gallery (crowd), but I just wanted to win the tournament," said Stacy, who built her advantage to seven strokes before finishing five shots ahead of Patty Sheehan and Deedee Lasker.

"When you have a six-stroke lead, you have visions of making an 11," she added. "I was just trying to make par. And as far as creating excitement, there was none."

Stacy, who started the day with a three-shot advantage over Janet Coles, birdied three of the first four holes on the back side of the 6,023-yard Pasadena Golf Club course to boost her lead to seven shots and cruised to her 12th career triumph.

The birdies, on holes 11 through 13, came on putts of 20, 15 and 40 feet.

"I built myself a real nice cushion there, which was great," said Stacy.

Arguello stops Noel in third

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Three-time world champion Alexis Arguello knocked down Claude Noel in the first round and stopped him early in the third of their scheduled 10-round junior welterweight fight Sunday.

Noel had difficulty standing to answer the bell for the third round. After he waved his arm to show he could not continue, referee Larry Hazzard stopped the bout 37 seconds into the third round.

"I can't stand up, man," the 34-year-old Noel told his cornermen as the third round began.

Noel, once the World Boxing Association lightweight champion, tried to exchange punches with Arguello in the third round, but wasn't able to.

Arguello, 140¼, took charge from the outset, knocking down Noel, 137½, with a left hook to the head in the final minute of the first round. The 31-year-old Arguello peppered Noel's head with bursts in the second round.

Arguello said after the fight that he believed Noel injured his hip after he was knocked down in the first round.

Arguello, formerly of Managua, Nicaragua, but now residing in Kings Bay, Fla., has a 78-5 record with 63 knockouts.

Pedroza takes decision from Lockridge

SAN REMO, Italy (AP) — Rocky Lockridge's strategy of pressuring Eusebio Pedroza against the ropes worked for awhile, but the Panamanian champion found a way to squirm away each time.

Pedroza finally wore down Lockridge Sunday to successfully defend his World Boxing Association featherweight title with a unanimous decision in their 15-round bout.

The victory was Pedroza's 16th title defense, and was the second unsuccessful try against the Panamanian for Lockridge, of Paterson, N.J. Pedroza also won a decision in their 1980 bout.

Pedroza, 30, won on all three scorecards, 147-142, 147-146 and 146-145.

Dreams of a quick fix fail to materialize

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Only dreamers expected that 10 years after the oil embargo America would "fill'em up" with gasoline derived from coal, gas, tar sands orshal.

Sure, there were some believers who felt that a rapidly growing synthetic fuel industry would become a quick fix for U.S. dependence on imported oil, especially after President Carter proposed in 1979 the largest "massive peacetime commitment of funds and resources in our nation's history" for the program.

Armed with billions of dollars worth of government subsidies provided by the Synthetic Fuels Corp., America's industrial giants were expected to invest their own funds in building a synthetic fuel industry which would significantly relieve this nation's dependence on outside sources of oil.

But the dreams never materialized. Instead, squeezed between a lingering oil glut, falling oil prices and the uncertainty of using untried technology in building multibillion dollar plants, synfuel projects are being cancelled or deferred, one after another..

Late in April 1983, only two major privately funded plants are under construction and both are experiencing financial difficulties.

TO GET THE INDUSTRY into the marketplace, the corporation, which has not spent a dime on developing energy resources since it was founded, plans to offer its entire $15 billion kitty to a half dozen oil shale and coal gasification projects in the next nine months.

Edward E. Noble, the SFC's chairman who as the head of Reagan's energy transition task foce recommended that the agency be shut down, is offering not only loan guarantees for up to 75 percent of the investment, but also price supports that promise a company more than double the current market price of oil or gas for the first 30 million barrels each plant produces.

"I think that now, when we don't have a crisis, the lead time is so great that we must go ahead to show the rest of the world that we can exploit oil shale, tar sands and coal which account for 90 percent of this nation's energy reserves," Noble said in a recent interview.

The projects Noble expects to attract will be far smaller than the large commercial plants Congress envisioned. If all are operating as planned by 1991, officials say that even then they will produce only about 170,000 barrels of fuel a day mandated by the 1979 Energy Security Act for 1987, and 2 million barrels by 1992.

Energy for the U.S.

A Reporter-Telegram series

Instead of attempting to operate huge 50,000-barrel-a-day synthetic fuels plants, the SFC is trying to attract firms that will build a 10,000-barrel-a-day oil shale plant by 1990 and similar-sized coal gasification plant by 1991.

THOUGH OIL prices are now down to $28 per barrel, the corporation is offering price supports that will guarantee up to $67 per barrel to companies willing to build oil shale plants.

The first contract that the SFC will award in about a month will go to a Norh Cara pro onrat to methanoCI Director William . Casey is one of the investors in the project.

How did the synfuels get their start? They started on a large scale in Adolf Hitler's Germany which used synfuels to power its war machinery, especially in the decling years of the war.

The U.S. Synthetic Fuels Corporation had its roots in efforts by Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., in the early 1970s to establish the Federal Oil and Gas Corporation which was to assume the financial risks associated with commercially untested sources ity demands for the next 30 years is to burn coal and build nuclear power plants, with nuclear electricity the nation's only choice for a 20-year period beginning in 1990.

Congress's Joint Economic Committee which insisted that the government should concentrate its financing for energy research on a relatively few technologies, such as "heavy" oil and unconventional gas and alcohol fuels that are likely to have the biggest payoff.

A MAJOR FORD Foundation study which concluded that "the world is not running out of energy" but predicted sharply higher costs and some rough times ahead before new sources are widely developed.

A report of a group of scientists to the Council of Environmental Quality which warned that a large synfuels program could have a disasterous impact on the environment within 50 years, causing global heating, melting of the polar icecaps and costal inundation.

The Mellon Institute's Energy Productivity Center which urged that auto industry raise fuel economy to 32 miles per gallon in 1985, 38 in 1990, 41 in 1995 and 47 in 2000 and the nation cope with its energy problems through conservation.

An analysis prepared by the Rand of energy, such as shale and the coal-based synfuels.

The next round came with Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller's plan in 1976 "to marshal industrial America behind energy self-sufficiency" by providing up to $100 billion in loans, loan guarantees, price supports and grants for major but economically risky energy projects such as synfuels, nuclear reprocessing facilities, energy parks, and solar installations.

THE MAJOR PUSH behind synfuels did not occur until Carter, trying to salvage his failing presidency, proposed the mammoth $88 billion project to be financed by a windfall profits tax on crude oil.

The debate over the nation's energy resources and the need for alternative sources produced sharply conflicting advice from major institutions involved in energy development, including:

Resources for the Future, a nonprofit research organization, which reported that nuclear power and synthetic liquid and gaseous fuels from coal would have to provide much of the nation's energy in the near future.

The National Academy of Sciences which concluded that the only choice the U.S. has to meet electric- Corporation for the Energy Department which concluded that any crash effort to build synthetic fuel plants in the U.S. would cost billions of dollars more than initial estimates.

A warning by ICF, a Washington-based independent energy consultant, that a synthetic fuels crash program would not truly test new technologies and would not be credible.

Watt accused of running fire sale

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — An eight-month investigation by the House Appropriations Committee has concluded that Interior Secretary James G. Watt is leasing government coal reserves to industry at "fire-sale" prices, allowing private interests to reap "windfall profits" at the expense of the federal treasury.

Based on Interior Department documents and interviews with agency officials, industry executives, environmentalists and economists, the 121-page report found that Watt's program of leasing billions of tons of coal in the present soft market is marked by mismanagement and is driving down the price the government can command for its resources.

The report, delivered last week to committee members, is the most extensive inquiry into Watt's controversial coal-leasing program and is expected to fuel congressional efforts to block him from holding future coal auctions. Interior Department officials declined to comment on it.

The report, a copy of which was obtained by The Washington Post, also found that:

— Confidential Interior Department data was leaked to the coal industry more than a month before auction last April of about 1 billion tons of government coal in the Powder River Basin along the Montana-Wyoming border. It was the biggest auction of coal-development rights in U.S. history.

— Senior department officials, quoted anonymously in the report, pushed to postpone the auction because of what they called the "scandalous" leak, but were overruled by then-Deputy Assistant Secretary David Russell. These officials are quoted as saying Russell was "hell bent" on holding the auction and pushed ahead with it "as if his career depended on it."

— The auction drew little competition, and the coal rights were sold to industry for $60 million less than House investigators concluded they were worth, based on findings of Interior Department appraisers and economists in the Powder River area. A senior economist who studied the coal values is quoted as saying that the goverment did not receive a fair price for its resources, as required by law.

"Such large-scale leasing under poor economic conditions distorts the market by flooding it with leased coal," the report concluded. "It temporarily reduces fair-market value and allows the industry to acquire coal at fire-sale prices."

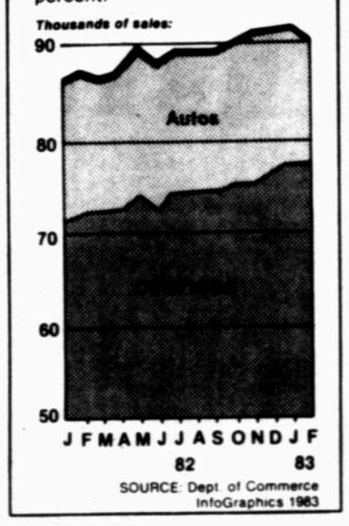

Interior Department officials have read the report but are "still analyzing it and so are not ready to respond substantively," spokesman Harmon Kallman said. It is expected to be the focus of an Appropriations Committee hearing Wednesday at which Assistant Interior Secretary Garrey Carruthers, who oversees the coal program, is to testify.

The committee report is the latest of several attacks on Watt's coal-leasing program, which is designed to lease about 6 billion tons of coal in Western states in the next two years.

Watt has defended such accelerated leasing, despite the soft market, by saying coal development is crucial to meet long-range energy needs. Russell, who helped design the coal-leasing program, told House investigators "it was his responsibility to put as much coal as he could on the market," the report said.

Retail sales inching up

Since January of 1982, U.S. retail sales have been inching up steadily but slowly. In the 14-month span ending in February '83 total sales have risen from $86.5 billion to $91.7 billion, an increase of 6 percent.

Stage set for bailout

SEATTLE (AP) — Gov. John Spellman today signed a bill that allows banks from out of state to buy Washington banks, boosting plans by the troubled Seafirst Corp. to merge with BankAmerica Corp. of California.

The $400 million merger still must be approved by Seafirst shareholders and federal regulators, but a major obstacle to the deal had been the state ban on out-of-state holding companies taking over Washington bank holding companies.

Legislators passed a measure removing the ban Sunday night and Spellman signed it into law shortly after midnight.

The proposed deal with BankAmerica was announced Saturday shortly before Seafirst released a first-quarter 1983 earnings report that showed its Seattle-First National Bank, the Northwest's largest, lost $133 million.

Under the takeover, Seattle-First National Bank would become an independent subsidiary of BankAmerica, parent company of Bank of America, which has more in deposits than any other bank in the nation.

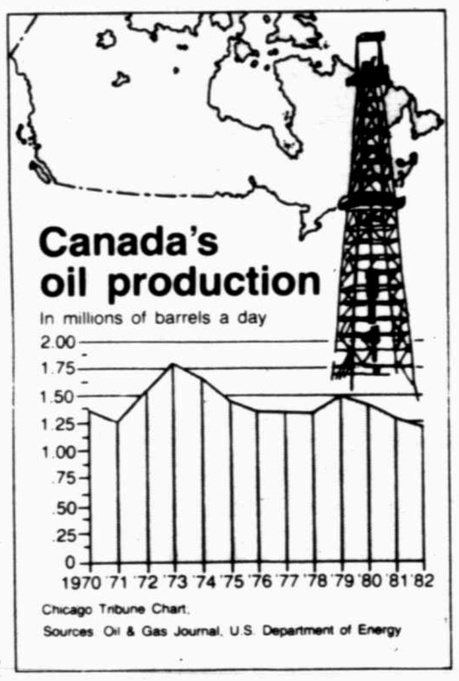

The bill canceled a measure in which outside banks were prohibited from holding more than 5 percent of Washington banks.

Rainier Bank, the state's second largest, had opposed the new bill. Rainier Bancorporation Chairman G. Robert Truex Jr. told the governor that Rainier and other local banks would bail out Seafirst rather than accept the bill.

A Seafirst shareholders' meeting to consider the merger was expected within 60 days.

"We needed to do something," Richard Cooley, president and chairman of Seafirst, the nation's 19th largest bank, said of the proposed buyout.

Revell Inc. looking for a few good boys

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — In the toy business, yesteryear's playthings may be a mainstay, but not profitable enough to ensure a manufacturer's survival or growth.

Consider model kits, and a company called Revell Inc. The two have been synonomous for 33 years. Through good times and bad, Revell has been the premiere model kit manufacturer. Recently, the industry — and therefore Revell — has languished because "the age group ... is just into other things, whether it's video, or outdoors playing soccer," says Barbara Isgur, an analyst with Paine Webber Mitchell Hutchins in New York.

Model kit sales last year dropped 30 percent to $76 million, and Isgur, for one, does not predict a quick turnaround. "The world is just sort of passing craft and hobby stuff by," she says.

"We're the No.1 model kit company in the country today, but (we) also recognize the need to diversify," says Ronald C. Kesselman, the president and chief executive hired less than a year ago to do just that for the company based in the Venice area of Los Angeles.

Rather than tackling the already congested $2 billion video game business, Revell has decided to enter the business of manufacturing "male action" or "fantasy figures," which appeal to "boys in the right age group who know Revell," says Kesselman. "It's probably the fastest growing segment of the boys' (toy) category," he says.

According to Toy Manufacturers of America Inc., "action figure" dolls generated approximately $52 million in 1982 sales, up 58 percent from the previous year. Sales of space figures, accessories and playsets totaled an estimated $120 million, down slightly from $130 million the previous year.

When pressed to explain why such sales are flourishing, Kesselman says that children need more than one type of toy to satisfy their imaginations and energies.

M1 growth slack

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's basic supply of money contracted by $3.1 billion in the second week of April, the Federal Reserve Board said. The report sent bond prices rising and interest rates falling.

"We view the number very constructively," said William V. Sullivan Jr., senior vice president at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. "It is a drop much larger than expected by 'The Street' and this, plus last week's modest gain, indicates a slack growth rate in the money supply.

"It also sets the tone for further (interest-rate) drops next week," he said.

The Fed said M1 fell to a seasonally adjusted $496.1 billion in the week ended April 13 from a revised $499.2 billion the previous week, which earlier was estimated at $499.4 billion. M1 includes cash in circulation, deposits in checking-type accounts at banking institutions and non-bank travelers checks.

Some measures of the money supply have been expanding well above the growth targets set by the Fed. That has raised fears that the central bank, which seeks to curb excess money growth because it can spur inflation, would tighten credit conditions and drive interest rates higher.

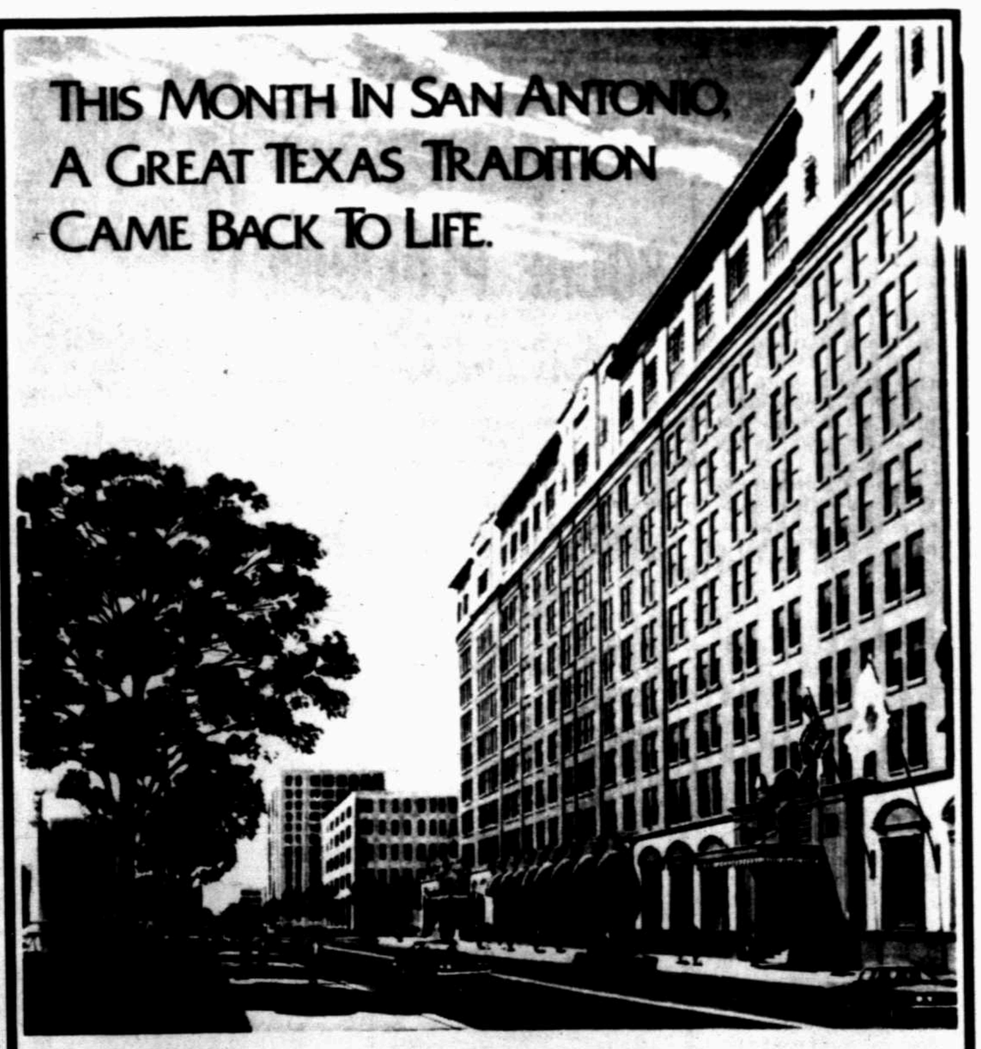

But the past two weeks' data indicates that M1 and broader measures of money have slowed in April, which seemingly would allow the Fed to avoid restricting credit, thereby allowing interest rates to fall, analysts said.

GM raising car prices

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. today will raise prices on its popular larger cars and luxury models between $85 and $242.

In a statement Friday, GM said the move, effective on cars built after Sunday unless they were ordered earlier, is equivalent to an increase of about 0.7 percent, or $79, for the average-equipped GM car.

THE GRAND ST. ANTHONY HOTEL IS NOW
A MAGNIFICENT NEW INTERCONTINENTAL HOTEL
We've restored this classic hotel. And we've spent millions bringing every facility and amenity up to the standards of a modern, international luxury hotel.
But even more important, we've painstakingly preserved the special character, the style, the hospitality and warmth that made the St. Anthony famous. After all, those are things that money can't buy.
The new Inter-Continental brings other new dimensions of hospitality to San Antonio as well. The international style of the great Inter-Continental Hotels of Paris, London, New York, Rio and more than 80 cities around the world. And the unparalleled standards of service that have made Inter-Continental the first choice of the world's most demanding travelers.
Welcome back.

"Fantasia," by the 5th grade (Murphy's class) at Sam Houston, is among art work included in the Museum of the Southwest's Student Art Show.

"Red Vase and Yellow Tulips," 1980 by Janet Fish, one of 15 "Works by Women" in the Stables Gallery.

Uninhibited imagination

Uninhibited imagination brilliantly colors the Thomas Gallery walls at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave. The occasion is the 22nd annual Student Art Festival.

Meanwhile, in the museum's newly opened Stables Gallery, 15 works by 13 women, representing the Gihon art collection "Works by Women," are on display.

The two exhibits present a visual and emotional contrast. The children's creative works show a spontaneity not found in the "Works by Women," where the creativeness often feels contrived.

Assembled by Bette C. Graham, the inventor of Liquid Paper and founder of the Gihon Foundation, "Works by Women" was intended as a "showcase" for "outstanding (American) women artists."

Artists represented include Mary Cassatt, Georgia O'Keeffe, Clyde Connell, Dorothy Hood, Helen Frankenthaler, Janet Fish, Hermine Ford, Nancy Graves, Lynda Benglis, Gael Z. Stack, Dee I. Wolff, Mary F. McCleary, and former Midlander Nancy Chambers.

Ms. Graham died before completing this project. Although it's too thin to be considered a comprehensive collection of works by female American artists, it does contain some work by noted artists.

No compendium of American art is complete without Mary Cassatt, Georgia O'Keeffe and, perhaps, Helen Frankenthaler, H.W. Janson notwithstanding. His "History of Art," (1973 edition) considered by many to be a definitive work in the field, contains no references to women artists, past or present.

The best art, irrespective of the artist's gender, transcends reality and speaks across generations.

Joan Didion gives us an example of this in a stunning ancedote in her book "The White Album":

"One of the vast O'Keeffe 'Sky Above Clouds' canvases floated over the back stairs in the Chicago Art Institute that day (in August 1973), dominating what seemed to be several stories of empty light, and my (7-year-old) daughter looked at it once, ran to the landing, and kept on looking. 'Who drew it,' she whispered after a while. I told her. 'I need to talk to her,' she said finally."

Presenting another delightful look inside the minds of children is the museum's Student Art Festival.

The festival encompasses two exhibits displayed consecutively. Art work by elementary students is on exhibit through Wednesday, work by secondary students Friday through May 16.

Sponsored by the Midland Independent School District, City Council PTA, the Junior League of Midland, Inc., and the museum, the two student art shows contain entries from all of Midland's public schools and four private schools.

DEATHS

Ethel B. Norriss

SAN ANGELO — Services for Ethel (Boone) Norriss, 86, of 4300 Bowie, grandmother of Becky Sprague of Midland, will be at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday in Harriet Cemetery with the Rev. James Miller officiating and directed by Johnson's Funeral Home.

Mrs. Norriss died Saturday night in a San Angelo hospital.

She was born May 7, 1896, in Macedonia. She moved to San Angelo in 1912. She was a librarian for 25 years with Tom Green County Library, serving as childrens' librarian for most of the years before retiring at age 78. She was a member of Park Heights Baptist Church and served as a teacher and worker.

Other survivors include a daughter, a son, two sisters, a brother, four grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

B.T. 'Tom' Webb

Services for B.T. "Tom" Webb of Midland were to be at 9:30 a.m. today in Primitive Baptist Church with burial in Fairview Cemetery directed by Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Thursday in a Big Spring hospital following a lengthy illness.

Pallbearers were to be Nelson Mahurin, Dennis Walker, Clyde Marshall, Bob Drummond, Leon Handley, Raymond Kirkpatrick and Oscar Crawford.

Mary Stanley

Mary Stanley, 79, of 1507 W. College died Saturday afternoon at Midland Memorial Hospital after a short illness.

Services will be at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday at Glass Chapel of First United Methodist Church with Dr. Charles E. Lutrick, pastor, officiating. Burial will be in Fairviw Cemetery, directed by Ellis Funeral Home.

She was born Oct. 17, 1903, in White Oaks, N.M. and was raised in Carrizozo, N.M. She was married to Ben M. Stanley May 15, 1922. They moved to Midland later that year. Mrs. Stanley was a member of First United Methodist Church in Midland. Her husband and one son, Benny Stanley, preceded her in death.

Survivors include two sons, Duffy B. Stanley of El Paso and Miles F. Stanley of Houston; a daughter, Mrs. T.J. (Joan) Brown of Midland; two brothers, David White of Ellington, Fla., and Maben White of Homeland, Calif.; 11 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

The family asks memorials be directed to a favorite charity.

Juan Gamboa

Services for Juan Hinojos Gamboa, 90, of Route 4, Box 13Y were to be at 3:30 p.m. today in Emmanuel Baptist Church with burial in Fairview Cemetery.

He died Friday in a Midland hospital after a lengthy illness.

Pallbearers were to be Isabel Bernal, Ramon Gamboa, Elfrain Gamboa, Samuel Rodriguez, Enrique Gamboa and Francisco Gamboa.

Thelma McDaniel

Services for Thelma McDaniel, 73, of 410 Hicks Ave., will be at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday in Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Roy R. Roach of Travis Baptist Church officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Mrs. McDaniel died Sunday in a Midland hospital.

She was born April 14, 1909, in Coleman. She was married to Leslie Eugene "Bill" McDaniel Oct. 30, 1927, in Novice. They moved to Fabens and lived there for many years before moving to Midland in 1949. He died Jan. 4, 1965. They operated Macks Trailer Courts until a year ago. She was a member of Travis Baptist Church.

Survivors include two brothers, Floyd Corder of San Angelo and John Corder of Lovington, N.M.; four sisters, Lora Phillips of Stinnett, "Pate" Patricia Moody of Bishop, Calif., Pauline Nelson of DeRidder, La., and Clara Proctor of San Angelo; and several nieces and nephews.

Mary Telford

Services for Mary Z. Telford, 61, of 4401 Brookdale were to be held at 1:30 p.m. today in Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with burial in Stanton.

She died in a Midland hospital Friday.

Pallbearers were to be Frank Forsyth, Joe Lofton, Troy Compton, Tipp Page, James Davis, Alton Smith, Bob Mathis and Claude Crabtree. Honorary pallbearers were to be Darrel Gallaway and Jim Gregory.

Military ready to fly into drug war

WASHINGTON (AP) — The military is preparing to commit a fleet of aircraft to help counter airborne drug smuggling across America's porous southern border, amid indications that smugglers are seeking ways to get around heavily-policed south Florida.

However, one high administration official said the planned commitment of military aircraft is far short of what is needed.

And Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., chairman of a House subcommittee that developed the plan, said he is concerned that officials might not move aggressively enough to implement it.

The problem is the hundreds, perhaps thousands, of smuggler aircraft that yearly swoop low across the border to avoid radar detection and land on isolated fields to deposit cocaine and marijuana, with south Florida the favored entry point.

Primary responsibility for countering air smuggling rests with the U.S. Customs Service. And despite beefed up anti-smuggling efforts in Florida, the Customs air fleet elsewhere along the border is ill-equipped to do the job, officials said.

"One of the weakest links that we've had (in the anti-drug effort) has been air interdiction through Customs. Generally speaking, I think it has been a stepchild, particularly when it comes to federal dollars."

A CUSTOMS spokesman said that of the 65 aircraft in the Customs fleet, only 11 were purchased specifically for the agency's use and that the rest had been mostly seized from smugglers.

William von Raab, Customs commissioner, said the planes generally did not have radar adequate for long range surveillance, and that their capability to land quickly and "bust" grounded smugglers was limited.

"One of the weakest links that we've had (in the anti-drug effort) has been air interdiction through Customs," said English. "Generally speaking, I think it has been a stepchild, particularly when it comes to federal dollars."

To help out, English's subcommittee developed a proposal under which the Department of Defense would lend Customs six Navy P-3A surveillance planes equipped with special radar, eight Army C-12A tracking aircraft and three more pursuit helicopters to augment five already on loan to the agency.

The proposal was made possible by a 1981 law that clarified circumstances under which the military could assist in anti-drug operations.

IN A LETTER in March, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger approved the proposal, subject to certain conditions. English said he hopes first of the new aircraft will begin operating in October, from the eight Customs air support branches strung across southern border.

However, English said his experence with commitments for use of military aircraft in the south Florida operation has made him cautious about whether officials will actually carry out the plan.

Sophisticated Navy radar planes that had been promised for the air interdiction effort in Florida have recently flown far less than originally planned, said English, who has asked the administration for an explanation.

"We want to make certain that we have actually seen (our plan) work with our own eyes and that we can verify that it in fact is operating as it should," he said. "Until we actually see that, I can't guarantee that it would."

HOWEVER, DANIEL J. Murphy, chief of staff to Vice President George Bush, who was recently assigned to direct the fight against drug smuggling across the borders, said a lot more than just the English proposal will be needed.

"That small number of aircraft, which I think is great for Customs, is far inadequate to do the job we're talking about," said Murphy. "And I would like to be allowed a little leeway here to negotiate this," Murphy said. "And if people (would) just get off my back, I'll probably be able to get some support from the Defense Department."

The intensified battle against drug smuggling in South Florida was launched early last year, when President Reagan appointed Bush to direct a multi-agency task force to fight rising crime in the state, particularly drug-related crime.

But because of the task force's activities, air smugglers now appear to be increasingly looking for alternate ways of getting into the country, experts say.

MURPHY SAID that "we did a fairly decent job (in South Florida) in improving things, and then the stuff started to go around south Florida."

"Now it's going into Georgia...it's building up in Houston, and Louisiana, the Carolinas...also Maine," said Murphy.

Recent Air Force surveillance of the Southwest border — Texas, New Mexico and Arizona — showed seven planes a day illegally crossing into the United States, or more than 2,400 a year, according to staff members of English's subcommittee.

The result has been concern among some congressmen and governors of other states, Murphy said.

Timber industry slowly recovers from recession

KENNARD, Texas (AP) — Signs of life in the once-slumbering timber industry have East Texans listening to the music of growling chain saws, rumbling timber trucks and whining sawmills.

In the little timber town of Kennard, west of Lufkin, Oliver Bass' sawmill is operating with a full shift for the first time in more than two years.

"I've been in this business 30 years, and my father was in it a long time before that," said Bass. "There's no question this has been the worst recession the lumber business has ever had."

Sawmills, hit by a three-year slump, are showing a modest upturn, industry observers said.

"But when you're coming out of the bottom of a well, it doesn't take a whole lot to make you feel good," said Bill Hammock of Champion International.

The activity in the timber industry is primarily the result of the swift upswing in new housing construction. Some economic forecasters last year predicted fewer than 1 million housing starts this year.

But the pace is progressing at an annual rate of more than 1.6 million starts, industry observers said.

Alert neighbors call police; Six arrested for burglary

ODESSA — Six persons were arrested here early this morning after alert neighbors called police to report a suspicious vehicle in the area.

One man was arrested after a brief foot chase in the 2200 block of East 12th Street shortly before 6 a.m., according to police, who said five other persons were later arrested in and near a pickup truck parked in the 800 block of Murphy Street.

Neighbors called police after seeing a pickup near a residence at 2219 E. 12th. Arriving officers said the door had been kicked in and a man was spotted hiding in some nearby bushes. An ensuing foot chase ended with his capture in an alley.

Police said the 22-year-old suspect was carrying a bag of assorted clothing and other items taken from the residence whose owner, Robert Brand, is out-of-town. Two watches and a set of cufflinks were found in his possession during the booking procedure.

An investigation led to the apprehension of the other five persons, including a 27-year-old man who had been talking to four occupants of the pickup. He was found to be carrying a concealed pistol.

All the burglary suspects are in their 20s. Formal charges were expected to be filed sometime today and their arrests may lead to the clearing of other recent burglary cases, police said.

Midland man elected to head regional Toastmasters district

Scott Long of Midland was elected the 1983-84 governor-elect of Toastmasters International District 44 during the district's annual spring conference Saturday in Lubbock.

Beginning in July, Long will preside over a district that includes more than 35 clubs and 700 toastmasters in the Texas Panhandle, and West and West Central Texas. He is a member of the Pop-Up Toastmasters Club of Midland.

John Slyker, also a member of Pop-Up Toastmasters Club, won the spring speech contest. Slyker will advance to the next level of competition at the regional conference in Kansas City, Mo., June 10-11.

Ray White, president of Pop-Up Toastmasters, finished second in the Tall Tales contest in Lubbock.

Yarbrough to appear in court

AUSTIN (AP) — Former Texas Supreme Court Justice Don Yarbrough was scheduled to appear in court today on a charge that he jumped bail on a perjury conviction.

Yarbrough, 41, was brought to Austin on Friday from state prison in Huntsville, where he is serving a five-year sentence.

Yarbrough was convicted in January 1978 of lying to grand jurors when he denied meeting in an Austin motel with a business associate to discuss forging a car title to be used to secure a loan.

He had resigned from the Supreme Court the previous year, after he was indicted. He served only seven months on the court.

New revolution isn't centered in Alamo

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The "high-tech revolution" holds the key to diversifying this city's economy and solving its chronic unemployment, Mayor Henry Cisneros says.

Cisneros began a campaign — after his election two years ago as the first Hispanic mayor of a major U.S. city — to develop San Antonio as a center for computer and other high-technology industries.

"We're talking about going after the leading edge of the high-tech revolution," Cisneros said.

"We're looking closely at the models of high-tech research and development in other parts of the country, particularly San Diego and North Carolina, as a means of attracting that industry to San Antonio and to Texas."

Areas in the United States that will attract high-tech jobs will be those with the educational resources already in place for advanced research in the field, he said.

"We're talking about a very rare bird, the pioneers of technology," he said. "These are industries that may never manufacture a product but are strictly research and development."

Cisneros has been named by Gov. Mark White as part of a state task force on employment, with a focus on attracting high-tech industry to Texas.

Elementary pieces were selected by the students' school principal, and the secondary selections were made by three independent jurors.

A special public reception, which includes an awards presentation, is planned for 8 p.m. May 10. Museum hours Monday through Saturday are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday 2-5 p.m. No admission is charged.

This festival's purposes include: stimulating student interest in art; offering the public a chance to enjoy student art work; and the community an opportunity to recognize outstanding student accomplishments.

Police investigate local burglaries

In weekend burglary complaints to city police, LaVelle Stuart of 2802 Cimmaron said he returned home from an out-of-town trip Saturday and found his home had been broken into. Guns and jewelry valued at $6,603 were missing. Entry was gained be breaking a window.

Angelita Armendariz of 601 E. Kansas Ave. told officers $2,825 worth of assorted items, including jewelry and a .22 caliber automatic pistol, was taken in a break-in at her residence.

Dolls have own mansion

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Kansas City's newest museum was founded recently by two women who never stopped playing with dolls.

More than 60 antique doll houses and 16 perfectly scaled miniature rooms are displayed at the Miniature Museum of Kansas City, which opened in October 1982.

The collection is housed in a gracious turn-of-the-century mansion that has been carefully refurbished to preserve its graceful staircase, ornate woodwork and sparkling leaded glass windows.

The same old-fashioned architecture is reflected in the elaborate doll houses, complete with turrets, bay windows and gingerbread. Among the exhibits are San Francisco townhouses, collections of Noah's arks, circuses and miniature farms.

An "Oriental niche" displays Oriental miniatures such as tiny fans, vases and carved ivory furniture. A "Santa Fe room" is a miniature room in the old adobe style of New Mexico, complete with beamed ceiling, tile floor and strings of tiny red peppers.

Founders Barbara Marshall and Mary Harris Francis, both grandmothers, are longtime friends who frequently travel together.

"Our homes were overflowing with toys and miniatures," says Mrs. Francis. "It seemed a shame to pack everything away when other people could be enjoying the collections. We both realized we really did need a museum."

Mrs. Francis collects doll houses and toys, objects that have been played with and show the effects of cherished use.

"I don't like newness or a perfectly matched look," she says. "I adore things that parents made for their children. Even if the dolls or furniture aren't perfect they represent warmth and caring."

Campers crowd a hot mineral pool at Fountain of Youth, Calif. in a remote desert area. Two thousand elderly people flock to the spas to escape winter's cold in other places.

Oldsters find fountain of youth

The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

FOUNTAIN OF YOUTH, Calif. — Two thousand elderly men and women camping out in trailers clustered around four outdoor hot mineral baths have been following news of this winter's blizzards with keen interest.

Nearly all have fled the cold to take refuge in the warm desert sun.

"If I had remained in Detroit and suffered through the cold and snow, I would have croaked years ago," mused Rex Lask, 83, a Fountain of Youth regular for the last 15 winters. Lask was relaxing in a hot pool with a couple of dozen other oldtimers.

"What's the average age of people camped out here?" Walter H. Schroeder, 85, a Michigan farmer, was asked. He laughed and replied, "98."

Actually it is 77.

"If you insist on writing a story, don't let people know where we are. There are too many here already," chimed in Johanna Hallstrom, 70, of Penhold, Canada.

"Penhold (in Alberta) is the birthplace of winter. We're here escaping the subzero temperatures," she said as she relaxed in one of the hot pools.

Fountain of Youth is in a remote area of desert at the foot of the Chocolate Mountains, 44 miles south of Indio.

"It takes a guide to find the place," said Rhea Green, 73, an expatriate from Cut Bank, Montana, consistently one of the coldest spots in the United States. Temperatures of 40 to 50 degrees below zero are common there.

The campers play pool by the hour in a recreation hall, pitch horseshoes and roar across open desert in dirt bikes. Women chat at the camp beauty shop, at sewing circles, in bridge groups.

After dark, Fountain of Youth bristles with bingo parties, square dances and amateur hours where the old folks swap jokes, play musical instruments, sing in harmony.

"I call this the Baden Baden of the desert," said Bruno Albrecht, 70, a recent immigrant from West Berlin.

"Every month we are a day younger than we were the previous month. We don't think of getting old. We think of getting young. That's why we call it Fountain of Youth," said masseuse Anna Lucka, 72, who formerly lived in Germantown, Wisconsin.

She specializes in Epsom-salt-and-mineral water massages.

New flu shots ready

ATLANTA (AP) — Officials of the national Center for Disease Control say next year's influenza vaccine should provide increased protection against an oncoming flu strain.

CDC researchers have found a developing trend in Europe and North America toward a strain of flu known as A-Philippines, and the CDC's Immunization Practices Advisory Committee has recommended putting protection against it in next year's flu shots.

"We try to stay a little ahead of the drift of the flu virus, which is hard to do," Karl Kappus, a CDC flu researcher, said Thursday.

The CDC recommends flu vaccine for high-risk people, including the elderly.

Kappus also said that the number of deaths attributed nationwide to flu and pneumonia was somewhat higher than scientists expected last week, marking the 14th straight week of such findings. But researchers still believe the flu season is ending, he said.

DEAR ABBY

Teen girl goes bald

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I had to write when I read the letter from the woman who's afraid to date because she has terrible hair and wears a wig. She thinks if a man finds out she's wearing a wig, it will turn him off.

Abby, I'm 17, and I've been completely bald since I was 8 and have worn a wig for two years. I have "alopecia areata," a condition many people have, although doctors still don't know what causes it.

Honestly, that lady is using her wig as an excuse not to date. I date a lot, and all the guys know about my wig. One special guy calls it "Wiggy" and treats it like a pet!

When I was younger I even thought of self-destruction, but now I see how dumb that was. Believe it or not, this condition has helped build my character and develop a sense of humor. Almost everybody has something he or she has to learn to live with, and there are plenty of people lots worse off than I am.

I want to tell that woman who wears a wig not to feel like a freak, and other people will accept her as she is.

If you print this, sign me ... WIGGY AT 17

DEAR WIGGY: What a terrific young woman you are! A dermatologist in Schenectady, N.Y., wrote to tell me about the National Alopecia Areata Foundation, a support group for people who have suffered permanent hair loss. He sent one of the organization's newsletters, which I found very informative and extremely encouraging.

For information, write to: The Alopecia Areata Foundation, P.O. Box 5027, Mill Valley, Calif. 94941. This is a non-profit organization, so please include a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAR ABBY: Please tell "Tired of Waiting" that somebody IS doing something about the frustration of long waits in doctors' offices.

Recently a group of doctors and dentists from Shawnee Mission Medical Center in Merriam, Kan., got together to form health care centers in two suburban shopping malls in the Kansas City area (a third is planned). When you arrive for your appointment, if there is going to be more than a 15-minute wait, the receptionist gives you a little beeper to carry while you browse, shop, eat, play video games or whatever. When you hear a "beep," it means the doctor will be ready to see you in 10 minutes.

The beeper can also be used by the friend or family member who brought the patient to the doctor. This frees them to come back for the patient when the visit is completed.

Doctors carry "beepers" to conserve their time. Why not patients? — BEEP BEEP

DEAR BEEP: Why not, indeed? Everything's up-to-date in Kansas City!

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for 43 years. Yesterday when I arrived home from work, I found a birthday card addressed to his former girlfriend who jilted him 45 years ago! It was marked "Return to Sender," because the girlfriend was not at the address my husband used, and there was no forwarding address. I was burned to a crisp!

How would you handle a situation like this, Abby? I have not spoken to him since.

Please answer soon, as I am terribly upset. — LOST LOVE

DEAR LOST: Your husband was probably just reminiscing about years gone by and sent the card in a playful mood. Not to worry. The card came back, which proves that he doesn't even know where she is now.

(Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Author defends convicted killer

Hearst Feature Service

The luckiest thing that ever happened to Jean Harris, the convicted killer of Scarsdale diet doctor Herman Tarnower, was having Shana Alexander take her case.

Neither woman realized this until after Harris was sentenced for 15-years-to-life in prison and after Alexander conducted hundreds of interviews to write "Very Much a Lady" (Little, Brown), in which the writer reconstructs the story.

Although Alexander's book has just gone into its second printing, she is more excited about Harris' new attorney and his plans to seek a new trial.

"Criminal attorney Michael Kennedy has filed for a new trial for Jean Harris," said Alexander, who worked for months to persuade Harris to seek new legal help and then found a lawyer who would act.

Alexander and many legal experts are convinced that the case of the Madeira school headmistress was mistried. "I look at what happened to Jean Harris, who was drugged and suicidial at the time of the 1980 slaying, and I compare her 15-year term without parole possibility to the light sentence given Dan White, who assassinated the mayor and a supervisor in San Francisco. Seen side by side, the two cases reveal the injustice of our criminal justice machine."

When she first saw Harris on TV after her arrest for murder, "I thought, she reminds me of me — the last generation of Americans brought up to believe that nice girls get married."

The empathy increased with Alexander's three years of research into the lives of the cardiologist, who cultivated rich patients and used the women he attracted as chattel, and of the headmistress of the exclusive girls' school, who was chemically enslaved — and unaware of it — to a man who was both her lover and her doctor. "This was a soap opera of two people who were great successes in professional life and whose private lives were horrors."

Alexander was appalled when Harris' attorney did not show that Tarnower had her on 10 milligrams a day of Desoxyn, the amphetamine so powerful that its label warns it may cause psychosis. She also was upset when three psychiarists standing by were not called to testify to Harris' emotionally disturbed condition.

"But Jean Harris for a long time didn't want to hurt the feelings of her attorney. He gave bad advice and she slavishly followed it. He was her new Tarnower. She didn't clearly understand the reason she was in prison for 15 years was because her case was mishandled.

"The real legal crime was that the jury wasn't given a range of verdicts. Before, during and after the trial, the district attorney said he would have been happy to get a manslaughter conviction. That would have meant a minimum sentence and Harris, no danger to society, would have been freed by this time."

The two women became friends during the post-trial appeals — the last was the Supreme Court's March refusal to overturn the sentence.

Officer reads about murder

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — An officer who shot and killed a 5-year-old boy holding a toy gun in a darkened apartment had recently read two articles about juveniles who commit murder, a prosecutor says.

A grand jury which last week declined to indict Stanton policeman Anthony Sperl was aware that an April 1982 issue of California magazine, with a cover story on "Kids Who Kill," was found in Sperl's patrol car, Orange County Deputy District Attorney John Conley said Saturday.

Sperl, 24, who shot Patrick Mason on March 3, was called to the apartment to check on a woman and child who hadn't been seen in some time. He said he saw a figure holding a gun and fired. The boy's mother, Patricia Ridge, has filed a $20 million wrongful death suit against the city of Stanton.

Gasoline prices to increase

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The average price of gasoline jumped almost 10 cents a gallon in April, with more price hikes likely this summer as vacation driving picks up, says oil industry analyst Dan Lundberg.

His nationwide survey of 17,000 service stations on Friday found that the best-selling category of gasoline — self-service regular leaded — cost an average $1.10, up 9.61 cents a gallon since March 25. The average price of regular unleaded rose to $1.17.

Lundberg said Sunday that five cents of the increase came from the nickel-a-gallon federal tax hike that took effect April 1, with the remainder due to higher pricing by oil companies. Lundberg predicted that prices will creep up an additional 5 cents a gallon as the high-demand summer driving season approaches.

Test successful after delay

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, N.M. (AP) — A Pershing 2 missile flew 75 miles in nine minutes to hit a target accurately in the ninth test-launching of the new weapon, Army officials said.

The test Sunday had been postponed two days to check the missile's hydraulic system after air was found in the same system of a similar missile in Orlando, Fla., said Maj. David Olmsted, an Army spokesman.

The United States plans to deploy 108 Pershing 2 missiles and 464 ground-launched cruise missiles with NATO forces in West Germany in December. The new Pershings, which have a range of 1,000 miles and are capable of carrying a nuclear warhead, would replace missiles with a 400-mile range.

Sex offender sued by victim

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Joseph A. "Jo-Jo" Giorgianni, a sex offender who was freed briefly from prison because of his obesity, is being named in a $10 million lawsuit by his female victim, a lawyer says.

The victim, age 14 when she was assaulted in Giorgianni's sandwich shop in 1978, "wants something ... for all the mental and physical anguish she has suffered for the last 4½ years," Petito said.

Giorgianni, convicted of carnal abuse and debauching the morals of a minor, is serving a 15-year state prison term. He was released after defense lawyers said his 565-pound weight threatened his health, but went back to prison after a public outcry.

Violence breaks out at concert

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Youth gangs probably were responsible for a burst of gunfire that scattered about 1,000 people gathered in a park for a rock-soul concert, authorities said.

About 30 police and sheriff's deputies were greeted with rocks and bottles when they arrived at the concert Saturday, but no serious injuries among officers or music fans were reported, police Sgt. Larry Swanson said Sunday.

Diaries could be fraud

NEW YORK (AP) — A skillful forger easily could make up diaries of Adolf Hitler, says writer Clifford Irving, who spent 17 months in prison for a swindle involving faked interviews with reclusive billionaire Howard Hughes.

Commenting on the discovery in Europe of purported diaries of the German dictator, Irving told Newsweek magazine in its May 2 edition that to prepare a forgery, he would get "a few lengthy samples of Hitler's handwriting — they don't have to be original, copies will do."

Irving and his ex-wife, Edith, were convicted of trying to swindle McGraw-Hill Inc. out of more than $650,000 in 1972. The writer had told the publishing house that he compiled an autobiography of Hughes as the result of 100 secret meetings. The meetings never took place, and the book was a fraud.

Mastering Hitler's handwriting, Irving said, would only take a couple of weeks and a forger easily could adapt changes in the subject's style.

Hollings: Government is needed to rebuild economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's "war on government" is the wrong approach to take in rebuilding the U.S. economy, says Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., a Democratic presidential candidate.

The United States must realize it is in "desperate circumstances right now with respect to really re-employing Americans," Hollings said Sunday on NBC's "Meet The Press," adding: "We have got a lot of rebuilding to do and the government is needed."

"Here we have an administration that conducts its affairs as a war on government — that government is an enemy," he said.

"The whole premise is if we can rid ourselves of government and let the free market forces control, we'll all prosper," the senator said.

"In this international economy in which we live, there is no such thing as private free enterprise, unfortunately," he said. "It's government-to-government enterprise.

"And we need that government ... as a catalyst, bringing together business and labor and agriculture to fashion an industrial policy ...," Hollings said.

He said the nation "must rebuild with the day care centers, elementary and secondary education, student loans, science and math teachers."

On other matters, Hollings said:

—He does not favor additional military aid to El Salvador unless it is contingent on negotiations between the U.S.-backed government and leftist guerrillas trying to overthrow it.

—He opposes U.S. support for guerrillas who are fighting against the leftist government of Nicaragua, and said the United States should long ago have developed a "sustained economic aid package" for the country.

—Israel is "getting a bum rap" in criticism for its invasion of Lebanon last summer and its continued presence in the troubled Middle East country.

Clinton built canal

The 544-mile Erie Canal, which transformed New York from a big town to a metropolis and opened the way to the West, was built by De Witt Clinton, born March 2, 1769. He was Columbia College's first graduate, New York City's mayor for 10 years, the state's governor for nine, a U.S. senator and unsuccessful candidate for president.

Shultz is prepared for shuttle diplomacy

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz and the U.S. ambassadors to five Middle East nations gathered in Cairo today at the start of Shultz' mission to arrange a withdrawal of Israeli, Syrian and Palestinian forces from Lebanon.

"We know that we cannot substitute for the commitment and the effort of the people of the Middle East," Shultz said after his arrival at 1:30 p.m. (6:30 a.m. EDT). "We will complement it and we will play a full part, as full partners, in this great enterprise for peace."

Reagan's special Mideast envoy, Philip C. Habib, also was in Cairo to meet with Shultz and the U.S. ambassadors to Israel, Syria, Jordan, Lebanon and Algeria.

Shultz was scheduled to meet with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak on Tuesday and on Wednesday with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, who sent troops into Lebanon on June 6, 1982, to rout the PLO.

In his airplane en route to Egypt, Shultz was optimistic — saying a withdrawal agreement "is a very doable thing" — and vowed to stay in the Mideast as long as there is a chance of carrying out his mission.

Shultz said he is prepared to shuttle back and forth between Israel and Lebanon if that would help produce an agreement on troop withdrawal.He plans to go to Beirut on Thursday.

"I am prepared to work at it as long as it seems that there is a chance to accomplish something," Shultz told reporters during the seven-hour flight from Washington to Britain, where his plane refueled before continuing to Cairo.

Shultz said he will raise the possibility of an expanded U.S. role in Lebanon in discussions with Lebanese and Israeli officials.

He said he also may discuss President Reagan's faltering Mideast peace initiative, but stressed his top priority is to get Israel, Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization to agree to withdraw their forces from Lebanon.

He said he may visit Syria and also has been invited to talk with King Hussein of Jordan and King Fahd of Saudi Arabia, if time permits. Syria maintains an estimated 38,000 troops in Lebanon, ostensibly as a peacekeeping force.

Officials traveling with Shultz expect him to go to all three countries.

Shultz said Israel's security demands remain a major obstacle to a withdrawal agreement. He indicated he will reaffirm with Israel a U.S. commitment to help guarantee protection against future terrorist attacks from Lebanon following an Israeli withdrawal.

"We are part of this negotiating process, and we want to see it succeed, and we certainly are prepared to stay with it after an agreement and a leaving of the forces from Lebanon takes place," Shultz said.

"Just what role the United States might play is going to be part of this discussion," he added.

Administration officials have said previously that the United States might double its troop contribution to the multi-national peace-keeping force as part of a withdrawal agreement.

Shultz said he is bringing some "ideas" on how to resolve the dispute between Israel and Lebanon over a future security role for Israeli-backed militia leader Maj. Saad Haddad, whom the Lebanese government mistrusts.

He declined to say what he has in mind, but noted: "I'm not coming here with a preconceived American plan to try to sell to people."

Shultz also disclosed that Reagan had told Hussein he would not be expected to begin peace negotiations with Israel until there was some kind of freeze on Israeli settlement construction in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

But he said Reagan has told Hussein it would be easier to obtain a settlement freeze from Israel "if the key Arab leader has committed himself to sit down and talk."

Hussein's refusal to enter negotiations with Israel has been a major setback to the Reagan peace plan, which proposed an autonomous Palestinian government on the West Bank, in close association with Jordan.

If Shultz concludes from his first stops that he won't be able to resolve the withdrawal issue, his trip may last only a week. But if there is a prospect of success, he may remain two weeks or even longer, U.S. officials said.

Shultz was known to be reluctant to go on the trip, but was pressed into it by White House officials, in part as a response to the bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Beirut last Monday. It is his first trip to the Middle East since he became secretary of state nine months ago.

Ouch!

Soldarity leader Lech Walesa winces as he gets shots Monday during a physical examination prior to returning to work at the Lenin shipyard in Gdansk. No date has been set, but Walesa thinks he will be back to work in a day or two.

Walesa expected back

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa took a physical examination today at the Gdansk shipyard, where he helped lead the 1980 strike which created the Solidarity trade union, and said he would be back at work in a day or two.

"I was welcomed warmly, as I always am," Walesa said after the examination, which lasted less than an hour. "They took my blood, checked my ears."

The 39-year-old labor leader said the government may have decided to give him his old job back in order to keep track of him and curb his contacts with the labor underground.

However, Walesa's return to the shipyard puts him in direct contact with the 17,000 yard workers who are his loyal followers and who have been involved in labor unrest for more than a decade.

Earlier, Walesa said "100 others will rise up" to take the place of Jozef Pinior, a key underground Solidarity leader arrested Sunday in an apparent attempt by authorities to undercut the union's call for anti-government demonstrations on May Day.

Pinior, one of five fugitive Solidarity leaders who met with Walesa on earlier this month, was taken into police custody in his home town of Wroclaw, according to a dispatch by the official Polish news agency PAP.

A few days after meeting with Walesa, the five members of Solidarity's fugitive "temporary coordinating commission" issued a call for protest marches to counter officially sponsored demonstrations on May 1, the international workers' observance that is a major holiday in the Soviet bloc.

At the shipyard, the physical exam and a refresher course in worker safety later today were preparations for Walesa to return to his job as an electrician. He was detained after the imposition of martial law Dec. 13, 1981, and released last November. He asked in January to return to work, and permission was granted on Friday.

He said: "It's impossible to say when I will be able to start actually working, but I do hope that it will be tomorrow or day after tomorrow."

About 6,000 Solidarity supporters gathered Sunday night at St. Stanislaw Kostka's church in Warsaw for a Mass. Similar pro-Solidarity services have been held on the last Sunday of nearly every month since the declaration of martial law.

Solidarity was suspended with the martial law declaration and outlawed last October.

Pickup pieced together

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Investigators are trying to trace the ownership of a black pickup truck which they believe was used in the suicide bombing of the U.S. Embassy, sources close to the investigation said today.

The sources said Lebanese military investigators have been piecing together the remains of the truck and are trying to determine its make, manufacture date and engine number.

Two Lebanese who witnessed last Monday's bombing said earlier they saw a lone terrorist wearing a black leather jacket drive a black pickup past a security barricade into the embassy's driveway and then die in the fiery blast.

The witnesses were questioned again today by Lebanese military magistrate Assad Diab, who was assigned by the government to oversee the investigation. The two unidentified witnesses said they believed the pick-up was a General Motors Corp. model, Diab's office said.

The office also said police were checking the fingerprints on an arm recovered from the sea in front of the embassy building to find out whether it belonged to a criminal on police records who might have been the suicide bomber.

> "There are more bodies buried in the rubble because there is still a stench of decomposed corpses. We are trying to reach into the kitchen in the basement. We think the bodies are there."

The U.S. Embassy count lists a total of 49 people, including 17 Americans, killed on the embassy premises by the blast. Lebanese police have placed the death toll inside and around the building at 60.

Embassy spokesman John Reid said 24 Lebanese were confirmed killed in the blast and eight were missing and presumed dead in the rubble.

"There are more bodies buried in the rubble because there is still a stench of decomposed corpses," a Lebanese Red Cross worker on the scene said today. "We are trying to reach into the kitchen in the basement. We think the bodies are there."

He said searchers recovered the bodies of three Lebanese from the rubble on Sunday. But the search paused today while workers installed metal pillars to shore up the devastated building.

Sources familiar with the investigation said two air shafts on the front of the embassy's central wing took away much of the force of the blast. Otherwise more of the building could have collapsed, they said.

The front section of the central wing of the three-winged building broke off and collapsed to the ground. The back of the central wing, as well as the east and west wings, remained but the front walls of ground-floor offices were blown in and collapsed.

Cabin intruder worries more about 'hosts' than self

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — An 81-year-old woman, lost for six days in a remote area and barely strong enough to open a can of juice she found in a chilly, deserted cabin, scribbled a note apologizing to her unknown hosts.

"I'm so sorry I had to break into your home. It prolonged my life," wrote Alice Cannon before her rescue.

"My husband is dead, lying somewhere by some big rocks, not far away...Please call our children. They will be so worried. Thank you. Our children will remember you."

Mrs. Cannon, who burst into tears when she was found Thursday huddled next to a stove in the cabin, was in satisfactory condition today after surgery Sunday to remove the frostbitten toes of her right foot and about half her left foot, said her son, John N. Cannon of Provo.

It will be a week or two before she leaves the hospital and she will not be able to attend the funeral today for her husband, John Bennion Cannon, 85, he said.

Tom Torres, the searcher who found Mrs. Cannon, said she already had accepted that her feet might have to be amputated.

"I never ran into anyone like her," he said Sunday night.

The Cannons, of Salt Lake City, had gone on a drive to St. George, stopping to visit friends and relatives along the way, and on April 14 they took a sidetrip into Dixie National Forest.

"Mr. Cannon wanted to visit some gravesites of ancestors — they had ancestors all over," Torres said. "He wanted to reminisce."

Their car became stuck on a muddy road to Pine Valley, about 25 miles northwest of St. George in southwestern Utah.

"They left the car immediately," about 2 p.m., and "walked and chatted and got farther and farther away," John Cannon said.

"My father felt very compelled to go on," he said. They walked all night, and Mrs. Cannon's feet became frostbitten, the son said.

The next day they came to a turnoff and walked a short distance before becoming tired. They took shelter among some rocks, about six miles from their car, making a bed of pine boughs and sleeping there Friday night, April 15.

The next day was warm and Mrs. Cannon's husband walked on alone, finding a cabin a quarter mile away before returning to his wife.

"He was just worn out — he had two artificial hips, which made walking awkward. He sat down and never got up again," the son said.

"Saturday night he had a dream that this was the place he was to die, and they talked about it," he said.

The next day — Sunday April 17 — it turned very cold. Cannon told his wife about the cabin and said, "I haven't the strength to take you there," the son said.

Torres said Mrs. Cannon told him her husband said, "It's my time to leave the Earth. You'll be OK, Alice."

In the morning Mrs. Cannon could not awaken her husband. Dr. Marcus Kuypers, deputy medical examiner, said Cannon died of heart disease aggravated by hypothermia.

Historians: More study needed on Hitler diaries

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — Two prominent historians, including one who had at first vouched for the authenticity of the purported diaries of Adolf Hitler, said today that further study was needed before they could decide if the papers are genuine.

The historians, England's Hugh Trevor-Roper and American Gerhard L. Weinberg, appeared at a news conference here at which Stern magazine said they would back its claim of having discovered Hitler's 60-volume diary.

However, the historians took a more cautious view than the magazine apparently had expected. There was no immediate comment from Stern officials on the historians' statements.

In opening the press conference, Stern Editor-in-Chief Peter Koch described the magazine's discovery of the proported Hitler diaries as "the journalistic scoop of the post-war period."

But Trevor-Roper, who holds the title Lord Dacre, said, "A final judgment cannot be given until the whole text of the documents can be examined."

Weinberg, a professor at the University of North Carolina and author of two books about Hitler, said: "I don't consider (the documents) a forgery, but there are further tests that are necessary. It seems to me essential that scholars familiar with the period have an opportunity to examine a transcript of the whole text."

Stern began publishing portions of the purported Hitler diaries today.

Trevor-Roper, author of a 1947 book "The Last Days of Hitler," wrote in Saturday's edition of the Times of London that he had reviewed the diaries and believed they were genuine.

On Sunday, he told reporters in London that there was always the "possibility that the diaries were forged," but said their quantity and range means "it would have been a very difficult operation."

Some other experts, as well as some former Hitler aides, have suggested the diaries are part of an elaborate fraud.

Two of Hitler's aides were quoted Sunday in a Hamburg weekly as saying the bound notebooks — said to have been found in a plane wreck by a German army officer and hidden in his hayloft for 35 years — are fakes.

"The discovery of Hitler's alleged diaries is one of the many fairy-tale lies that we have known since the war," said Hitler's Luftwaffe adjutant Nicolas von Below, according to Bild Am Sonntag. "We often sat until three or four at night and Hitler would then go to bed. He had no more time to write."

The Sunday Times of London published selections from the 60 diaries in which the Nazi dictator speaks contemptuously about Nazi propaganda chief Joseph Goebbels, SS commander Heinrich Himmler and other Third Reich figures. In one section, the diary suggests that Europe's Jews "should be sent to sea and the boats sunk."

Hitler's campaign to exterminate the Jews led to the death of 6 million in concentration camps during World War II.

The diaries run from 1932, when Hitler began his rise to power, to April, 1945, only days before he shot himself, Trevor-Roper said. The archive has several unpublished books, including a third volume of "Mein Kampf," 300 drawings, and Hitler's Nazi Party card, the historian said.

The Sunday Times said Stern's discovery of the diaries culminated an investigation by Hamburg journalist Gerd Heidemann that led him to the former German officer who hid the material after finding it in a plane. The plane is said to have taken Hitler's papers out of Berlin on April 21, 1945, as the Soviet army advanced on the German capital and 10 days before Hitler shot himself.

Austrian chancellor resigns post

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Chancellor Bruno Kreisky, the dean of West European leaders, kept an election campaign promise and announced his resignation after conservatives ended his Socialist Party's 11-year majority in Parliament.

The 72-year-old Kreisky, leader of this neutral country since 1970, has held office longer than any current leader of a European democracy. He was seeking his fourth outright majority in Sunday's elections.

Instead, according to computer analyses of the unofficial election results, the Socialists lost five of their 95 parliamentary seats in the 183-member National Council while the conservative People's Party increased their representation from 77 to 81.

With neither major party gaining an absolute majority, there will be attempts now to form a coalition government, probably involving the small Freedom Party which appeared to have won the remaining 12 seats.

"The cause of this defeat probably has to be found with myself," a downcast Kreisky said on national television. The chancellor had backed Socialist plans to increase taxes on workers' vacation and Christmas bonuses and to impose a new tax on interest for savings accounts over $6,000.

His attempt to win another four-year term also had raised questions about his health. The chancellor suffers from kidney and eye trouble.

"I think the voters for the Greens and the Alternatives came to a large extent from the Socialist Party and I can easily imagine that one person or the other did not go to the polls," Kreisky said.

The Greens and the Alternative List, both populist left-wing parties campaigning on environmental issues, failed to win any parliamentary seats. But they undoubtedly drew votes away from the Socialists.

Unofficial totals as announced by the central election office, not including 80,000 absentee ballots, were:

Socialist Party — 2,270,977 for 47.8 percent, a loss of 3.23 percent.

People's Party — 2,052,714 for 43.21 percent, a gain of 1.31 percent.

Freedom Party — 236,320 for 4.97 percent, a loss of 1.09 percent.

Greens — 89,694, or 1.89 percent.

Alternative List — 60,150, or 1.27 percent.

Communist Party — 31,408, or 0.66 percent.

Others accounted for about 0.2 percent of valid ballots.

Kreisky said he planned to step down as chancellor after negotiations leading to a new government, but he planned to remain as party leader. He had vowed to resign the chancellorship rather than enter into a coalition.

Dozens of young sympathizers tried to shake Chancellor Bruno Kreisky's hand Sunday as he stepped out of the ballot station where he had just cast his vote in General elections. Kreisky is trying to get a fourth consecutive absolute majority for his Socialist Party.

"For us, this was a referendum against the sole rule of one party and for another political style, for more cooperation and economic recovery," said People's Party leader Alois Mock, 49.

Even though they lost ground in the national vote, the "liberals" stood to gain one seat for a total of 12 in Parliament because of a quirk in election laws. Votes and parliamentary seats are counted by province rather than by the nation as a whole, a factor that worked this year in favor of the party, led by 38-year-old Norbert Steger.

Kreisky had repeatedly refused to discuss a "Grand Coalition" of socialists and conservatives, but as the election drew near, he had declined to rule out cooperation with the Freedom Party.

The chancellor, a charismatic figure, was credited with keeping unemployment between 2 and 5.5 percent during his 13 years in office and in making Austria a peaceful country without social unrest and street violence.

He was a controversial figure internationally, however, because though a Jew, he supported the Palestine Liberation Organization and welcomed both PLO chief Yasser Arafat and the radical Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy to Vienna.

Foreign policy was not a campaign issue in this election.

Report issued on prison situation

WASHINGTON (AP) — More states are turning to early release or probation to cope with prison overcrowding as the U.S. inmate population swelled by a record number again in 1982.

The number of state and federal inmates increased by 42,915 in 1982 to reach an all-time high of 412,303, according a report released Sunday by the Justice Department's Bureau of Justice Statistics.

The department said new prison construction undertaken by most states and the federal government has not be able to keep pace with prison populations that grew partly because of mandatory minimum sentences and restricted parole.

As a result, 31 states are under court order to reduce overcrowding and nine others are fighting court battles over the issue.

The department noted some new remedies emerging or being expanded at the state level.

Michigan and Iowa adopted emergency release laws in 1981, followed by Connecticut, Georgia, Ohio and Oklahoma in 1982. Generally, these laws allow certain non-violent criminals to be released early if the state prison system exceeds its capacity for a specified period.

Georgia, New York, Ohio and Texas adopted programs for intensely supervised probation for certain convicts, usually first-time, non-violent offenders, who formerly were sent to prison. In general, these offenders are required to check daily with probation officers and meet with them at least once a week.

The 1982 inmate increase was the largest in absolute numbers since counting began in 1925, the department said. It resulted in an 11.6 percent rise, second only to the 12.2 percent surge in 1981.

The number of federal inmates reached 29,673 by the end of 1982, up 5.5 percent, a slower rate of increase than the year before when the number rose 15.5 percent. State prisons held 382,630 inmates at year's end, up 12.1 percent.

With federal prisons nearly 24 percent over capacity, the Reagan administration is seeking $94 million from Congress — the largest single-year request for new prisons in U.S. history. Over three years, the federal government hopes to add 3,320 prison beds.

Citing the tide of new prisoners, Attorney General William French Smith said last month he is studying ways to punish non-violent criminals without sending them to prison.

Smith said the $10,000-a-year cost of maintaining an inmate is too high a price to pay in such cases. Instead, federal officials are looking at alternatives like restitution to victims and community service.

At the state level, inmates have been housed two and three to a cell or in tents, sheds and military stockades.

The number of state prisoners housed in local jails to relieve overcrowded prisons rose by 20 percent during 1982, to 8,217. The department said this practice "has increasingly caused tensions between state and local authorities."

The department predicted continued pressure on prisons through 1990, because the most prison-prone population group is 20-to-29-year-old males and the largest single-year age group in the U.S. population was 22-year-olds in 1982.

The department said state officials most often cited tougher laws for the increase. While the most reliable figures from the Justice Department show only a small rise in crime since the mid-1970s, during the past several years 37 states have passed mandatory or determinate sentencing laws which require a fixed prison term, usually longer than under previous laws, before parole can be granted.

Other states have added extra prison time for repeat offenders and those who used a gun. Ten states have eliminated parole entirely.

Only three states reported a prisoner decline in 1982: West Virginia, down by 4 percent; Kentucky, 3 percent, and Michigan, 3 percent.

West Virginia attributed the decline to court-ordered releases and greater use of parole. Michigan said its drop resulted from its emergency release law. Kentucky's decrease reflected a state decision to stop counting state inmates held in local jails.

The largest numerical increases occured in the five largest state prison systems: California, up by 5,257; Texas, 4,780; Florida, 4,241; Ohio, 2,349, and New York, 2,311.

The number of women in prison grew by 2,193, to 17,649. As in eight of the last 10 years, the 14 percent increase was larger than that for men, but nevertheless the female portion of the total prison population has remained at about 4 percent since 1975.

Nationally, the rate of imprisonment hit 170 for every 100,000 U.S. residents. Nevada had the highest rate, 301 per 100,000, and North Dakota the lowest, 47. The District of Columbia, with a rate of 531, is not counted in the state rankings because it is a wholly urban area.

Servicemen's widows 'want to close the door'

DUBLIN, Ga. (AP) — Although Dianne Johnson was traveling to Washington for ceremonies honoring the servicemen who died three years ago today in the aborted Iranian hostage rescue mission, she says she understands why other widows stayed behind.

Mrs. Johnson's husband, Marine Staff Sgt. Dewey L. Johnson, was one of the eight U.S. servicemen killed when a helicopter and a C-130 transport plane crashed in Iran's Great Salt Desert on April 25, 1980. They were part of the secret mission to try to rescue 52 Americans held hostage after the takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

"You want to close the door and go on, but ceremonies make you look back whether you want to or not," said Mrs. Johnson, 32, who was taking her two children, Lee Ann, 11, and Wesley, 5, to the ceremonies at Arlington National Cemetery today.

Some of the other widows refused to go, Mrs. Johnson said before leaving on the trip. "I talked to one and she said she just doesn't want to open the door again. She wants to begin a new life."

Mrs. Johnson says she has made progress since the initial shock of her husband's death. For the first 2½ years, she struggled with the belief that she did not know the truth about the crash.

"I don't think about it anymore," she said. "It would drive me crazy. I'm not going to get any answers.

"I picture mass confusion on the desert that night. The Marine Corps and the Air Force always have had too many chiefs and not enough Indians."

She feels that her husband's death served no purpose — "none whatsoever," she said.

"I don't know if it's part of the grief cycle, but I've grown a lot in the past year. I don't have the doubts I once had. Now I make my own decisions."

After her husband had been dead two years, Mrs. Johnson stopped wearing her wedding rings.

"I thought it would bother me to take them off, but it didn't," she said. "When I felt it was time, taking them off seemed natural."

"I don't see any point in making plans anymore. I just take it one day at the time."

Cabin intruder worries more about hosts

Although Mrs. Cannon's feet were swollen and she couldn't wear her shoes, she stumbled on, "from one sagebrush to another" for nine hours to reach the cabin, her son said.

She broke a window with a log, but it was too small for her to get in. She went to the door, piled up logs, broke a window in the door and "tumbled in onto a chair and the floor," her son said.

She made a fire in the stove with newspaper, but never was able to ignite a log, Cannon said.

The first night she slept on the couch. The next night, "she finally got into the bed and tried to get warm." During the four days, she ate cans of soup, fruit and juice, Torres said.

The Cannons had been reported missing by relatives, and their car was found Wednesday night. At daybreak Thursday, Torres found the cabin with Mrs. Cannon huddled inside.

"She asked me who I was," Torres recounted. "I told her we had been looking for her. She put her hand to her mouth and started crying," he said.

"There was a lump in my throat. I just held her for a minute and let her cry. She was sure her life was over — she already had written a note to the people, thanking them."

"She was a whole lot more concerned about the people who owned the cabin and her family than about herself," he said. Even when speaking of her husband's death, "she was pretty brave through the whole thing."

"She doesn't think of it as courage — she just worries about others," Cannon said. "I guess that's the way to be courageous — to be concerned about others."

Lottery winner says he finds life 'rather boring'

WARREN, Pa. (AP) — A man who quit his $10,000-a-year job as a liquor clerk when he became the Pennsylvania lottery's first millionaire says he still washes his own dishes, mows his lawn and finds life "rather boring."

"After 11 years, nobody cares," said Harry Ward Casey, 61, reflecting on his moment of victory April 27, 1972, when he won $50,000 a year for 20 years.

"It's a dull life I lived before. It's a dull life I live now. I don't find it exciting. It hasn't changed me," he said in a recent interview.

But Casey is quick to point out that he's appreciative of his windfall.

"It was a godsend. My wife was terminally ill, and she died (of cancer) eight months later. It did allow me to spend some time with her that I wouldn't have been able to spend," said Casey, who since has remarried.

Although his current life is "rather boring," he says, "I have no regrets. It's marvelous for a 50-cent investment. But it's not all that marvelous. It doesn't solve all your problems."

Casey, who is reluctant to grant interviews, was the first of 86 people to hit the millionaire jackpot in the Pennsylvania Lottery. Thirty-three won prizes of $50,000 a year for 20 years, 25 won $1,000 a week for life with a minimum of $1 million and 28 Lotto winners have won a minimum of $1.03 million.

The largest state prize, $5,553,038.40, was won Dec. 27 by Pascal T. Cervi, 77, of Hopewell Township near Pittsburgh. Cervi's first installment on a 20-year jackpot was $264,430.40.

"People are making big money these days. Ballplayers make a million dollars in a year," said Casey.

"I feel like a Model T compared to the prizes they're winning today. I'm an antique. Now they have those big luxury models."

Casey did take a Florida trip with his dying wife soon after he hit the jackpot.

Historians say diaries need further study

Heidemann refuses to identify the officer from whom he said he obtained the diaries.

West German historian Werner Maser said that Hitler was plagued by nerve ailments toward the end of his life and that his right arm was badly damaged by the bomb that nearly killed him in July 1944.

"He was hardly in the position to write something down with his own hand," Maser said. "He had to prop up the underarm and hold the right hand with the left to prevent excessive trembling."

The brief excerpts published Sunday contain bitter observations about Hitler's generals — "I need a new military command corps;" Goebbels — "The little Dr. Goebbels is up to his old tricks again with women;" and Himmler — "I shall show this deceitful small animal breeder."

China announces arrival of Taiwanese pilot

PEKING (AP) — China, displeased by a recent series of defections to Taiwan and the United States, is trying to compensate by publicizing the arrival of a Taiwanese army major who flew to the mainland in a military reconnaissance plane.

The rival Nationalist government in Taiwan said Sunday it doubted Peking's claims that Maj. Li Dawei, 33, had defected. Officials in Taipei said Li encountered bad weather and probably made a "forced landing" on the Chinese mainland coast.

However, China's official Xinhua news agency Sunday printed a picture of a smiling pilot standing with upraised hands in front of a small aircraft with Nationalist insignia. It said the photo showed Li acknowledging cheers after his arrival at an undisclosed location in China's Fujian Province.

If Xinhua is correct, Li would be the second pilot to defect from the Nationalist-held island in 20 months. Taiwan's Defense Agency said it expected China will exploit the incident in its propaganda war with Taiwan.

In the past, defectors from Taiwan have received hero's welcomes, cash rewards, easy jobs and speaking engagements if they extol China and condemn Taiwan.

Huang Zhicheng, who defected in his trainer jet in August 1981, was quoted by Chinese media as saying that despite his car and luxury apartment in Taipei, he had longed for the kind of political climate he has found under communism.

Today the former major is pudgy from being wined and dined, and he no longer flies. He acts as a consultant for movies about defectors and recently married an airline stewardess.

But defections by Chinese seeking refuge elsewhere have angered the Peking government, such as the decision by teen-age tennis star Hu Na to leave her teammates last year and stay in the United States.

Brett up to .471; Royals win, 7-1

By The Associated Press

Mr. Consistency is at it again.

"He doesn't surprise me," said Toronto Manager Bobby Cox of Kansas City's George Brett. "He and Cecil Cooper (of the Milwaukee Brewers) don't surprise me by anything they do."

Brett, who seriously challenged the .400 batting mark in 1980 before finishing at .390, continued to hit the ball hard, hitting a double and run-scoring single in three trips Sunday to boost his average to .471 and lead the Royals to a 7-1 victory over the Blue Jays.

Brewers 3, Rangers 1

Don Sutton allowed just four hits in eight innings to beat Texas and move into 29th place on the all-time victory list with his 261st major league triumph.The 38-year-old Sutton, 3-1, moved past Hall of Famer Ted Lyons on the victory list and passed him for 27th place in innings pitched, 4,167.2.

Angels 7, Orioles 3

Brian Downing homered to snap a 3-3 tie in the sixth inning to lead California over Baltimore.

Following Downing's second homer of the season, Juan Beniquez doubled to knock out Dennis Martinez and Rob Wilfong singled off reliever Sammy Stewart to score Beniquez for a 5-3 California lead.

White Sox 9, Indians 3

Scott Fletcher knocked in four runs and scored another as the Chicago snapped a three-game losing streak with a victory over Cleveland. Chicago right-hander Richard Dotson allowed seven hits, walked four and struck out three in seven innings before getting relief help from Kevin Hickey.

Fletcher entered the game with five hits in his last 14 at bats, then went 2-for-4, reaching base once on an error.

Red Sox 4, A's 2

Dwight Evans smashed two homers, including a game-winning, three-run blast in the eighth, to lead Boston over Oakland.

Evans opened his one-man show with a first-inning solo shot against A's starter and loser Mike Norris.After Norris departed following singles by Ed Jurak and Wade Boggs in the eighth, Evans greeted reliever Steve Baker with another homer, his third of the year.

Tigers 4, Mariners 2

Larry Herndon's RBI triple keyed a two-run, third-inning rally as Detroit beat Seattle to complete a sweep of their three-game series.

With the Mariners winning 2-1, Lance Parrish singled in the Detroit third and scored on Herndon's triple to tie the game. Seattle first baseman Pat Putnam then bobbled Johnny Grubb's grounder, allowing Herndon to score the winning run for the Tigers.

Winner Jack Morris scattered eight hits, struck out six and allowed just one walk in 7⅓ innings.

Cardinals 2, Padres 0

Dave LaPoint, the St. Louis Cardinals' second-year pitcher, set the scenario.

LaPoint teamed with Bruce Sutter Sunday to pitch a 2-0, six-hit shutout against the San Diego Padres. But LaPoint's 7⅓-3 innings were not without incident. He yielded only four hits but walked five, benefitting from three double plays.

Expos 5, Reds 4

The Expos rallied twice, from 1-0 and 3-2 deficits, to beat Cincinnati behind three RBIs by Andre Dawson and two by Brian Little. Little's run-scoring single in the eighth inning pulled Montreal into a 3-3 tie, and Dawson followed with a homer, his fourth, for the winning runs.

Cubs 5, Giants 1

Leon Durham's two-run homer in the fourth inning snapped a 1-1 tie, and Wayne Nordhagen drove in a pair of insurance runs in the eighth with a pinch single to lead Chicago over San Francisco.

Astros 3, Phillies 2

Jose Cruz stroked a run-scoring single in the bottom of the 11th inning to beat the Phillies. Omar Moreno led off the inning with an infield hit off Ron Reed and stole second. He went to third on a fly ball, and Dickie Thon and Phil Garner were walked intentionally.

Tug McGraw relieved Reed, and Cruz singled up the middle to snap the tie.

Mike Madden pitched the 11th and got the victory, his first major league decision.

Braves 6-5, Mets 3-3

Bob Horner homered in both games to help Atlanta remain unbeaten in nine home games this season, while the Mets remained winless in eight road games.

Dale Murphy also homered in the second game.

TofC champion repeats

Wadkins out to surpass last year

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) - Lanny Wadkins set a goal for himself for the 1983 PGA Tour.

"In terms of money won ($306,827) and tournaments won (three), last year was my best season. I want to surpass what I did last year," Wadkins said.

And he's on schedule, perhaps even ahead of schedule.

Wadkins' successful title defense Sunday in the MONY-Tournament of Champions marked his second victory of the season. And the $72,000 he collected from the total purse of $400,000 made him the year's leading money-winner at $229,048.

"And that's in only 10 or 11 tournaments," Wadkins said. "I plan to play a lot, play a lot of golf tournaments and have some fun doing it."

His immediate schedule, however, has him at home in Dallas for three weeks. He'll play in the Byron Nelson Classic this week, then will take two weeks off.

"These last four weeks have been pretty good to me. That'll just make the time at home that much more pleasant," said Wadkins, who opened play in April with a victory at Greensboro, won $164,225 for the month.

The triumph Sunday came on a 280 total — the same figure he compiled in last year's victory in this gathering limited to those who had won on the Tour over the past 12 months. He finished one stroke in front of PGA titleholder Ray Floyd.

WADKINS WON with a closing round of par 72, which included bogeys on two of the last three holes.

"I didn't think par golf would win it," Wadkins said, "but that's the way things happen. That's just the pressure of Sunday golf."

Floyd had a closing 69 and got his 281 total, 7-under-par on the 6,911-yard La Costa Country Club course before Wadkins finished.

"I didn't think a round of 3-under would give me any chance to win," Floyd said.

But it did. Wadkins was coming off a couple of bogeys and was forced to make a par on the 18th hole to salvage the title. He did, 2-putting from about 40 feet for the 12th victory of his career.

Jay Haas, who holed a 6-iron shot for an eagle-2 on the first hole, was in a head-to-head confrontation with Wadkins most of the final round but fell back on a string of three consecutive bogeys coming home. He finished with a 73 and third at 282.

HAL SUTTON was next at 74-283.

Isao Aoki of Japan, Bobby Clampett and Fuzzy Zoeller followed at 284. Aoki had a 70, despite a double bogey on the 18th. Clampett shot 71 over the last 18 holes and Zoeller 70.

Jack Nicklaus, who shared the lead after the first 36 holes, played the last 36 with only two birdies. The five-time winner of this event shot a closing 73 and was at 287.

Tom Watson, holder of the U.S. and British Open titles, continued to have problems. He never got into the title hunt and finished at 72-291. It is the first time in seven seasons Watson has gone this deep into the schedule without winning.

The tournament was sponsored by Mutual of New York.

Cubs snap string of losses, 8-3

BEAUMONT — The Midland Cubs snapped a four-game losing streak here Sunday night with an 8-3 Texas League victory over the Beaumont Gators.

Seven Midland hits in the fifth inning produced seven runs and set the pace for the victory. Rick Baker stroked a two RBI triple and Tom Lombarski, Trey Brooks and A.J. Hill each had RBI singles.

On the mound, Darryl Banks improved his record to 3-1, giving up only one hit in six innings before being relieved by Ray Soff in the eighth. Gator George Stablein, 1-3, suffered the loss.

Gaining the victory gives Midland a 1-1 split in the five-game series and pushed the Cubs out of last place in the West Division with a 7-9 record and within 2½ games of league-leading San Antonio.

Midland and Beaumont will play game three tonight at 7 p.m. The Cubs return to Midland on May 3.

In other Texas League action, Tulsa defeated Arkansas, 6-5, and El Paso embarassed San Antonio, 15-0.

Despite the victory, the Drillers remain in last place in the East Division with a 5-9 record while Arkansas fell to .500, 7-7. Shreveport leads the East at 9-6, one game ahead of Jackson, 7-6.

El Paso's victory pulls the Diablos within one-half game of San Antonio. The Dodgers have a 10-7 record to El Paso's 9-7.

Tulsa put together its streak of five back-to-back hits with two outs in the sixth off reliever Kurt Hepshire, 0-2, the losing pitcher.

The Drillers' Greg Tabor had two hits and a pair of RBIs. Fran Batista banged out two hits and scored three runs.

Tulsa was guilty of six errors and four of the five Arkansas runs were unearned.

Marty Leach, 1-0, picked up the win in relief.

Jim Paciorek went 4-for-5 in El Paso's romp. Stan Levi had three RBIs and a double.

The winning pitcher was Bryan Clutterbuck, 2-2, who has given up only one run in his last 17 innings. Kenny Howell, 2-2, was charged with the loss.

Rebels, Bobcats within one of state playoffs

The Midland Lee Rebels and San Angelo Bobcats are only one game away from clinching the two District 4-5A state playoff berths. A win by either team or a loss by Abilene High is all that's needed.

With two games remaining on the league schedule, there is little doubt that Lee and San Angelo will be the representatives. What is in doubt, however, is which one will wind up as the 1983 4-5A champion.

The Rebels and Bobcats are tied with 9-3 records and each would like to see the other stumble Tuesday or Saturday (the final games of the regular season) to determine an outright champion.

Tuesday's schedule has Lee playing its final road game against Cooper in Abilene while San Angelo travels to Odessa High. Elsewhere around the league, Midland High hosts Abilene High at Memorial Stadium Field and Odessa Permian is in Big Spring. All games are scheduled for 4 p.m.

SHOULD LEE and San Angelo tie for top 4-5A honors, they would hold a one-game playoff to determine the champion.

Should Lee, San Angelo and Abilene High tie for top honors, a coin flip would be used to determine which team receives a bye. The team with the bye would sit back while the remaining two play and then the winner of that game will play the team with the bye to determine first and second place.

FOR MIDLAND HIGH, it has been a disappointing season. Nothing would please Coach Tim Whalen or his troops more than to finish with victories in their final two games.

Beset by injuries from the onset of league play, the Bulldogs have struggled their way to a 3-9 record — tied with Permian for last place — and a win over Abilene High would not only Lee but would also help build momentum going into Saturday's game against the Rebels.

Celtics beat Hawks to gain semifinals

'Magic' assists, Jabbar puts 'em; Lakers win; 118-97

By The Associated Press

The Boston Celtics put away the Atlanta Hawks and moved on to the Eastern Division semifinals, while the powerful Philadelphia 76ers and Los Angeles Lakers got off on the right foot in their best-of-seven National Basketball Association playoff series Sunday.

Larry Bird, making plays all over the court at Boston, led the Celtics to a 98-79 triumph over the Hawks, scoring 26 points. That gave Boston a 2-1 victory in the best-of-three miniseries and sent the Celtics on to meet the Milwaukee Bucks in a best-of-seven series starting Wednesday night in Boston Garden.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 32 points and Earvin "Magic" Johnson handed out 18 assists in the Lakers' 118-97 victory over the Portland Trail Blazers in the opening game of their series, and Moses Malone, wearing elastic supports on his injured knees, scored 38 points and hauled in 17 rebounds to pace the 76ers to a 112-102 triumph over the New York Knicks in the first game of their semi-final playoff.

AT BOSTON, Bird added nine rebounds and nine assists as the Celtics, who beat Atlanta five out of six times during the regular season, dominated the game, winning a deciding game of a playoff series for the sixth time in seven series since 1961.

The game was hotly contested and both benches emptied when Boston's 6-foot-5 Danny Ainge charged head-on into Atlanta's 7-1 Tree Rollins midway through the third period with Boston leading 68-52. Ainge and Mike Glenn of the Hawks were ejected for fighting, but Rollins was not penalized.

NBA Playoffs

Boston, led by Bird, built a 21-8 lead. Atlanta ran off a 13-3 sput to make it 24-21, but the Celtics remained on top throughout the game. The Celtics led 59-45 at halftime as Kevin McHale scored 14 of his 16 points in the second quarter, and Boston built its advantage to as much as 21 points in the third period and coasted the rest of the way.

Cedric Maxwell added 19 points for the Celtics and Gerald Henderson had 12.

Rollins led the Hawks with 18 points before fouling out with just over three minutes remaining. Johnny Davis had 15 points.

IN INGLEWOOD, Calif., Abdul-Jabbar pumped in 15 points as the Lakers shot out to a 29-12 lead in the first eight minutes.The Trail Blazers never were able to get closer than four points the rest of the way.

The Trail Blazers, trailing 91-87 early in the final quarter, had a chance to cut the difference to two points. But Lafayette Lever had his fast-break lay up attempt blocked by the Lakers' Michael Cooper, and the play instead wound up with Los Angeles getting a fast-break basket by Mark Landsberger. The Lakers then pulled away.

Jamaal Wilkes added 25 points for the Lakers, while Johnson and Norm Nixon had 19 apiece.Mychal Thompson paced Portland with 22 points and Calvin Natt added 21.

MALONE, PLAYING before a partisan Philadelphia crowd, played for the first time since April 10 and dominated the middle as the 76ers took the lead late in the first period and stayed ahead the rest of the way. The 6-10 center has been hampered by tendinitis in his right knee and an inflamed left knee.

The Knicks, who advanced to the semis with a mini-series sweep over New Jersey, were handicapped when their leading scorer, Bernard King, re-injured a sore right ankle just before the end of the first half. King had 11 points before leaving the game. Center Bill Cartwright led the Knicks with 17 points.

Guard Maurice Cheeks scored 14 points, Clint Richardson had 12 and Julius Erving 11 for the 76ers, who had a bye in the mini-series round because they won their conference championship.

Philadelphia broke the game open with 13 straight points, running the score to 79-64 with 5:25 remaining in the third period.

Game 2 in the Lakers-Portland Western Division semi-final series will be Tuesday night in Inglewood, with the Knicks, who lost 5 of 6 to the 76ers in the regular season, facing the 76ers in the second game of their Eastern semi-final series Wednesday night at Philadelphia.

IN A night game, Alex English scored 42 points and Mike Evans sank two crucial baskets in overtime as the Denver Nuggets beat the Phoenix Suns 117-112 in the decisive third game of their mini-series. The Nuggets will go on to meet the San Antonio Spurs in the other Western Division semifinal, starting Tuesday in San Antonio.

Evans also sank a three-point goal with 37 seconds in regulation to tie the game at 106-106. In overtime, Evans' first basket gave the Nuggets a 111-109 edge, and he later stole the ball and made an uncontested layup for a 113-108 advantage with 2:02 to go.

Breakers hand Stars 23-16 victory

By The Associated Press

The Philadelphia Stars handed Boston two points, then the Breakers handed Philadelphia the football — and their United States Football League game.

The Stars, whose 7-1 record is the best in the league, downed 5-3 Boston 23-16 Sunday. Kelvin Bryant ran for 110 yards and a touchdown but the key play came late in the game.

Stars punter Sean Landeta ran out of his own end zone with Philadelphia ahead 20-14 for a safety. On the ensuing kickoff, however, Boston's Ira Matthews fumbled at his own 30 and John Sutton recovered for the Stars. With 1:49 left, David Trout put the game out of reach with a 42-yard field goal.

USFL Roundup

"I think the Stars made a poor decision in calling for the safety," said Breakers Coach Richard Coury. "It gave us a chance but we fumbled it away and that cost us the game."

"Our kicking coverage was excellent," noted Stars Coach Jim Mora, "and the fumble recovery was the turning point of the game."

Sutton said the Stars did everything they planned to do on Matthews' kick return.

"The biggest thing we wanted to do was make sure we made the tackle to keep them from getting good field position," said Sutton.

Boston quarterback John Walton hit 31 of 44 passes for 367 yards.

Monday night, New Jersey visits Chicago.

Bandits 30, Federals 23

Carl Franks' 18-yard touchdown run with 2:25 remainng lifted the Bandits to 6-2, tops in the Central Division. Washington fell to 1-7.

Jimmy Jordan threw three Tampa Bay touchdown passes to Eric Truvillion and finished with 29 completions in 45 attempts for 345 yards.It was Jordan's first start at quarterback. He replaced John Reaves, who broke his wrist last week.

Franks, a rookie from Duke, did not report to Tampa Bay until last Thursday because he is completing undergraduate requirements.

Stallions 21, Invaders 9

Reggie Collier and Cornelius Quarles ran untouched into the end zone on key runs for the Stallions. Quarterback Collier scored on a 17-yard draw play and Quarles scampered in on a 25-yard run up the middle.

Both teams now are 3-5.

Panthers 34, Express 24

Bobby Hebert connected with Anthony Carter on a 26-yard touchdown toss and then threw a yard to Mike Cobb to pace Michigan. Novo Bojovic kicked four field goals as the Panthers, 4-4, rallied in the second half. LA also is 4-4.

Wranglers 24, Gold 3

Alan Risher threw for three second-half touchdowns, hooking up with Calvin Murray for 54 yards, Jackie Flowers and Neil Balholm for four yards each. Both teams are 4-4.

Stacy defends S&H Classic title

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Hollis Stacy, settling for par-72, abandoned her aggressive style of play Sunday and glided to a successful defense of her LPGA S&H Golf Classic title.

"I felt sorry for the gallery (crowd), but I just wanted to win the tournament," said Stacy, who built her advantage to seven strokes before finishing five shots ahead of Patty Sheehan and Deedee Lasker.

"When you have a six-stroke lead, you have visions of making an 11," she added. "I was just trying to make par. And as far as creating excitement, there was none."

Stacy, who started the day with a three-shot advantage over Janet Coles, birdied three of the first four holes on the back side of the 6,023-yard Pasadena Golf Club course to boost her lead to seven shots and cruised to her 12th career triumph.

The birdies on holes 11 through 13 came on putts of 20, 15 and 40 feet.

"I built myself a real nice cushion there, which was great," said Stacy.

Arguello stops Noel in third

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Three-time world champion Alexis Arguello knocked down Claude Noel in the first round and stopped him early in the third of their scheduled 10-round junior welterweight fight Sunday.

Noel had difficulty standing to answer the bell for the third round. After he waved his arm to show he could not continue, referee Larry Hazzard stopped the bout 37 seconds into the third round.

"I can't stand up, man," the 34-year-old Noel told his cornermen as the third round began.

Noel, once the World Boxing Association lightweight champion, tried to exchange punches with Arguello in the third round, but wasn't able to.

Arguello, 140¼, took charge from the outset, knocking down Noel, 137½, with a left hook to the head in the final minute of the first round. The 31-year-old Arguello peppered Noel's head with bursts in the second round.

Arguello said after the fight that he believed Noel injured his hip after he was knocked down in the first round.

Arguello, formerly of Managua, Nicaragua, but now residing in Kings Bay, Fla., has a 78-5 record with 63 knockouts.

Pedroza takes decision from Lockridge

SAN REMO, Italy (AP) — Rocky Lockridge's strategy of pressuring Eusebio Pedroza against the ropes worked for awhile, but the Panamanian champion found a way to squirm away each time.

Pedroza finally wore down Lockridge Sunday to successfully defend his World Boxing Association featherweight title with a unanimous decision in their 15-round bout.

The victory was Pedroza's 16th title defense, and was the second unsuccessful try against the Panamanian for Lockridge, of Paterson, N.J. Pedroza also won a decision in their 1980 bout.

Pedroza, 30, won on all three scorecards, 147-142, 147-146 and 146-145.

Dreams of a quick fix fail to materalize

Energy for the U.S.

A Reporter-Telegram series

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Only dreamers expected that 10 years after the oil embargo America would "fill'em up" with gasoline derived from coal, gas, tar sands orshal.

Sure, there were some believers who felt that a rapidly growing synthetic fuel industry would become a quick fix for U.S. dependence on imported oil, especially after President Carter proposed in 1979 the largest "massive peacetime commitment of funds and resources in our nation's history" for the program.

Armed with billions of dollars worth of government subsidies provided by the Synthetic Fuels Corp., America's industrial giants were expected to invest their own funds in building a synthetic fuel industry which would significantly relieve this nation's dependence on outside sources of oil.

But the dreams never materialized. Instead, squeezed between a lingering oil glut, falling oil prices and the uncertainty of using untried technology in building multibillion dollar plants, synfuel projects are being cancelled or deferred, one after another.

Late in April 1983, only two major privately funded plants are under construction and both are experiencing financial difficulties.

TO GET THE INDUSTRY into the marketplace, the corporation, which has not spent a dime on developing energy resources since it was founded, plans to offer its entire $15 billion kitty to a half dozen oil shale and coal gasification projects in the next nine months.

Edward E. Noble, the SFC's chairman who as the head of Reagan's energy transition task foce recommended that the agency be shut down, is offering not only loan guarantees for up to 75 percent of the investment, but also price supports that promise a company more than double the current market price of oil or gas for the first 30 million barrels each plant produces.

"I think that now, when we don't have a crisis, the lead time is so great that we must go ahead to show the rest of the world that we can exploit oil shale, tar sands and coal which account for 90 percent of this nation's energy reserves," Noble said in a recent interview.

The projects Noble expects to attract will be far smaller than the large commercial plants Congress envisioned. If all are operating as planned by 1991, officials say that even then they will produce only about 170,000 barrels of fuel a day mandated by the 1979 Energy Security Act for 1987, and 2 million barrels by 1992.

Instead of attempting to operate huge 50,000-barrel-a-day synthetic fuels plants, the SFC is trying to attract firms that will build a 10,000-barrel-a-day oil shale plant by 1990 and similar-sized coal gasification plant by 1991.

THOUGH OIL prices are now down to $28 per barrel, the corporation is offering price supports that will guarantee up to $67 per barrel to companies willing to build oil shale plants.

The first contract that the SFC will award in about a month will go to a Norh Cara pro ourat to methanoCI Director William . Casey is one of the investors in the project.

How did the synfuels get their start? They started on a large scale in Adolf Hitler's Germany which used synfuels to power its war machinery, especially in the decling years of the war.

The U.S. Synthetic Fuels Corporation had its roots in efforts by Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., in the early 1970s to establish the Federal Oil and Gas Corporation which was to assume the financial risks associated with commercially untested sources ity demands for the next 30 years is to burn coal and build nuclear power plants, with nuclear electricity the nation's only choice for a 20-year period beginning in 1990.

Congress's Joint Economic Committee which insisted that the government should concentrate its financing for energy research on a relatively few technologies, such as "heavy" oil and unconventional gas and alcohol fuels that are likely to have the biggest payoff.

A MAJOR FORD Foundation study which concluded that "the world is not running out of energy" but predicted sharply higher costs and some rough times ahead before new sources are widely developed.

A report of a group of scientists to the Council of Environmental Quality which warned that a large synfuels program could have a disasterous impact on the environment within 50 years, causing global heating, melting of the polar icecaps and costal inundation.

The Mellon Institute's Energy Productivity Center which urged that auto industry raise fuel economy to 32 miles per gallon in 1985, 38 in 1990, 41 in 1995 and 47 in 2000 and the nation cope with its energy problems through conservation.

An analysis prepared by the Rand of energy, such as shale and the coal-based synfuels.

The next round came with Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller's plan in 1976 "to marshal industrial America behind energy self-sufficiency" by providing up to $100 billion in loans, loan guarantees, price supports and grants for major but economically risky energy projects such as synfuels, nuclear reprocessing facilities, energy parks, and solar installations.

THE MAJOR PUSH behind synfuels did not occur until Carter, trying to salvage his failing presidency, proposed the mammoth $88 billion project to be financed by a windfall profits tax on crude oil.

The debate over the nation's energy resources and the need for alternative sources produced sharply conflicting advice from major institutions involved in energy development, including:

Resources for the Future, a nonprofit research organization, which reported that nuclear power and synthetic liquid and gaseous fuels from coal would have to provide much of the nation's energy in the near future.

The National Academy of Sciences which concluded that the only choice the U.S. has to meet electric- Corporation for the Energy Department which concluded that any crash effort to build synthetic fuel plants in the U.S. would cost billions of dollars more than initial estimates.

A warning by ICF, a Washington-based independent energy consultant, that a synthetic fuels crash program would not truly test new technologies and would not be credible.

Watt accused of running fire sale

By The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — An eight-month investigation by the House Appropriations Committee has concluded that Interior Secretary James G. Watt is leasing government coal reserves to industry at "fire-sale" prices, allowing private interests to reap "windfall profits" at the expense of the federal treasury.

Based on Interior Department documents and interviews with agency officials, industry executives, environmentalists and economists, the 121-page report found that Watt's program of leasing billions of tons of coal in the present soft market is marked by mismanagement and is driving down the price the government can command for its resources.

The report, delivered last week to committee members, is the most extensive inquiry into Watt's controversial coal-leasing program and is expected to fuel congressional efforts to block him from holding future coal auctions. Interior Department officials declined to comment on it.

The report, a copy of which was obtained by The Washington Post, also found that:

— Confidential Interior Department data was leaked to the coal industry more than a month before auction last April of about 1 billion tons of government coal in the Powder River Basin along the Montana-Wyoming border. It was the biggest auction of coal-development rights in U.S. history.

— Senior department officials, quoted anonymously in the report, pushed to postpone the auction because of what they called the "scandalous" leak, but were overruled by then-Deputy Assistant Secretary David Russell. These officials are quoted as saying Russell was "hell bent" on holding the auction and pushed ahead with it "as if his career depended on it."

— The auction drew little competition, and the coal rights were sold to industry for $60 million less than House investigators concluded they were worth, based on findings of Interior Department appraisers and economists in the Powder River area. A senior economist who studied the coal values is quoted as saying that the goverment did not receive a fair price for its resources, as required by law.

"Such large-scale leasing under poor economic conditions distorts the market by flooding it with leased coal," the report concluded. "It temporarily reduces fair-market value and allows the industry to acquire coal at fire-sale prices."

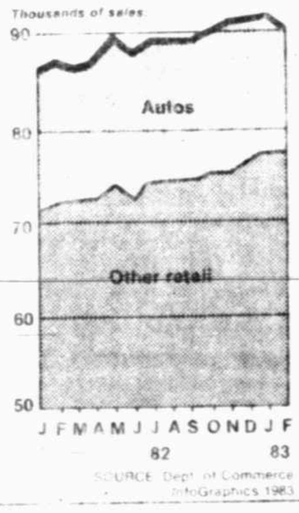

Interior Department officials have read the report but are "still analyzing it and so are not ready to respond substantively," spokesman Harmon Kallman said. It is expected to be the focus of an Appropriations Committee hearing Wednesday at which Assistant Interior Secretary Garrey Carruthers, who oversees the coal program, is to testify.

The committee report is the latest of several attacks on Watt's coal-leasing program, which is designed to lease about 6 billion tons of coal in Western states in the next two years.

Watt has defended such accelerated leasing, despite the soft market, by saying coal development is crucial to meet long-range energy needs. Russell, who helped design the coal-leasing program, told House investigators "it was his responsibility to put as much coal as he could on the market," the report said.

Retail sales inching up

Since January of 1982 U.S. retail sales have been inching up steadily but slowly. In the 14-month span ending in February, 83 total sales have risen from $86.5 billion to $91.7 billion, an increase of 6 percent.

Stage set for bailout

SEATTLE (AP) — Gov. John Spellman today signed a bill that allows banks from out of state to buy Washington banks, boosting plans by the troubled Seafirst Corp. to merge with BankAmerica Corp of California.

The $400 million merger still must be approved by Seafirst shareholders and federal regulators, but a major obstacle to the deal had been the state ban on out-of-state holding companies taking over Washington bank holding companies.

Legislators passed a measure removing the ban Sunday night and Spellman signed it into law shortly after midnight.

The proposed deal with BankAmerica was announced Saturday shortly before Seafirst released a first-quarter 1983 earnings report that showed its Seattle-First National Bank, the Northwest's largest, lost $133 million.

Under the takeover, Seattle-First National Bank would become an independent subsidiary of BankAmerica, parent company of Bank of America, which has more in deposits than any other bank in the nation.

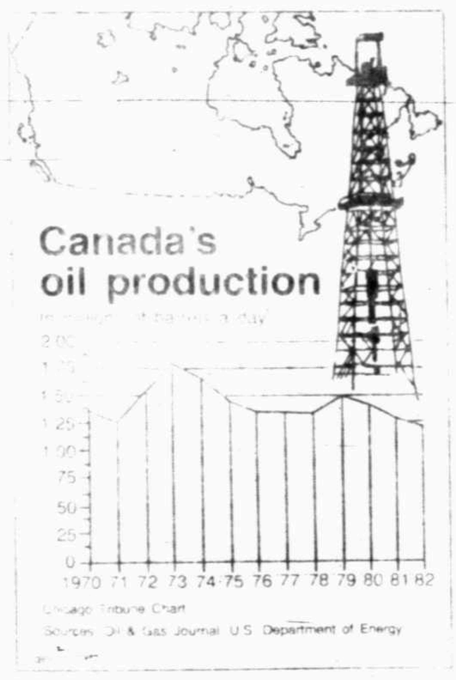

The bill canceled a measure in which outside banks were prohibited from holding more than 5 percent of Washington banks.

Rainier Bank, the state's second largest, had opposed the new bill. Rainier Bancorporation Chairman G. Robert Truex Jr. told the governor that Rainier and other local banks would bail out Seafirst rather than accept the bill.

A Seafirst shareholders' meeting to consider the merger was expected within 60 days.

"We needed to do something," Richard Cooley, president and chairman of Seafirst, the nation's 19th largest bank, said of the proposed buyout.

Revell Inc. looking for a few good boys

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — In the toy business, yesteryear's playthings may be a mainstay, but not profitable enough to ensure a manufacturer's survival or growth.

Consider model kits, and a company called Revell Inc. The two have been synonomous for 33 years. Through good times and bad, Revell has been the premiere model kit manufacturer. Recently, the industry — and therefore Revell — has languished because "the age group ... is just into other things, whether it's video, or outdoors playing soccer," says Barbara Isgur, an analyst with Paine Webber Mitchell Hutchins in New York.

Model kit sales last year dropped 30 percent to $76 million, and Isgur, for one, does not predict a quick turnaround. "The world is just sort of passing craft and hobby stuff by," she says.

"We're the No.1 model kit company in the country today, but (we) also recognize the need to diversify," says Donald C. Kesselman, the president and chief executive hired less than a year ago to do just that for the company based in Venice area of Los Angeles.

Rather than tackle the already congested $2 billion video game business, Revell has decided to enter the business of manufacturing "male action" or "fantasy figures," which appeal to "boys in the right age group who know Revell," says Kesselman. "It's probably the fastest growing segment of the boys' (toy) category," he says.

According to Toy Manufacturers of America Inc., "action figure" dolls generated approximately $52 million in 1982 sales, up 58 percent from the previous year. Sales of space figures, accessories and playsets totaled an estimated $120 million, down slightly from $130 million the previous year.

When pressed to explain why such sales are flourishing, Kesselman says that children need more than one type of toy to satisfy their imaginations and energies.

M1 growth slack

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's basic supply of money contracted by $3.1 billion in the second week of April, the Federal Reserve Board said. The report sent bond prices rising and interest rates falling.

"We view the number very constructively," said William V. Sullivan Jr., senior vice president at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. "It is a drop much larger than expected by 'The Street' and this, plus last week's modest gain, indicates a slack growth rate in the money supply.

"It also sets the tone for further (interest-rate) drops next week," he said.

The Fed said M1 fell to a seasonally adjusted $496.1 billion in the week ended April 13 from a revised $499.2 billion the previous week, which earlier was estimated at $499.4 billion. M1 includes cash in circulation, deposits in checking-type accounts at banking institutions and non-bank travelers checks.

Some measures of the money supply have been expanding well above the growth targets set by the Fed. That has raised fears that the central bank, which seeks to curb excess money growth because it can spur inflation, would tighten credit conditions and drive interest rates higher.

But the past two weeks' data indicates that M1 and broader measures of money have slowed in April, which seemingly would allow the Fed to avoid restricting credit, thereby allowing interest rates to fall, analysts said.

GM raising car prices

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. today will raise prices on its popular larger cars and luxury models between $85 and $242.

In a statement Friday, GM said the move, effective on cars built after Sunday unless they were ordered earlier, is equivalent to an increase of about 0.7 percent, or $79, for the average-equipped GM car.

THIS MONTH IN SAN ANTONIO, A GREAT TEXAS TRADITION CAME BACK TO LIFE.

THE GRAND ST. ANTHONY HOTEL IS NOW A MAGNIFICENT NEW INTERCONTINENTAL HOTEL

We've restored this classic hotel. And we've spent millions bringing every facility and amenity up to the standards of a modern, international luxury hotel.

But even more important, we've painstakingly preserved the special character, the style, the hospitality and warmth that made the St. Anthony famous. After all, those are things that money can't buy.

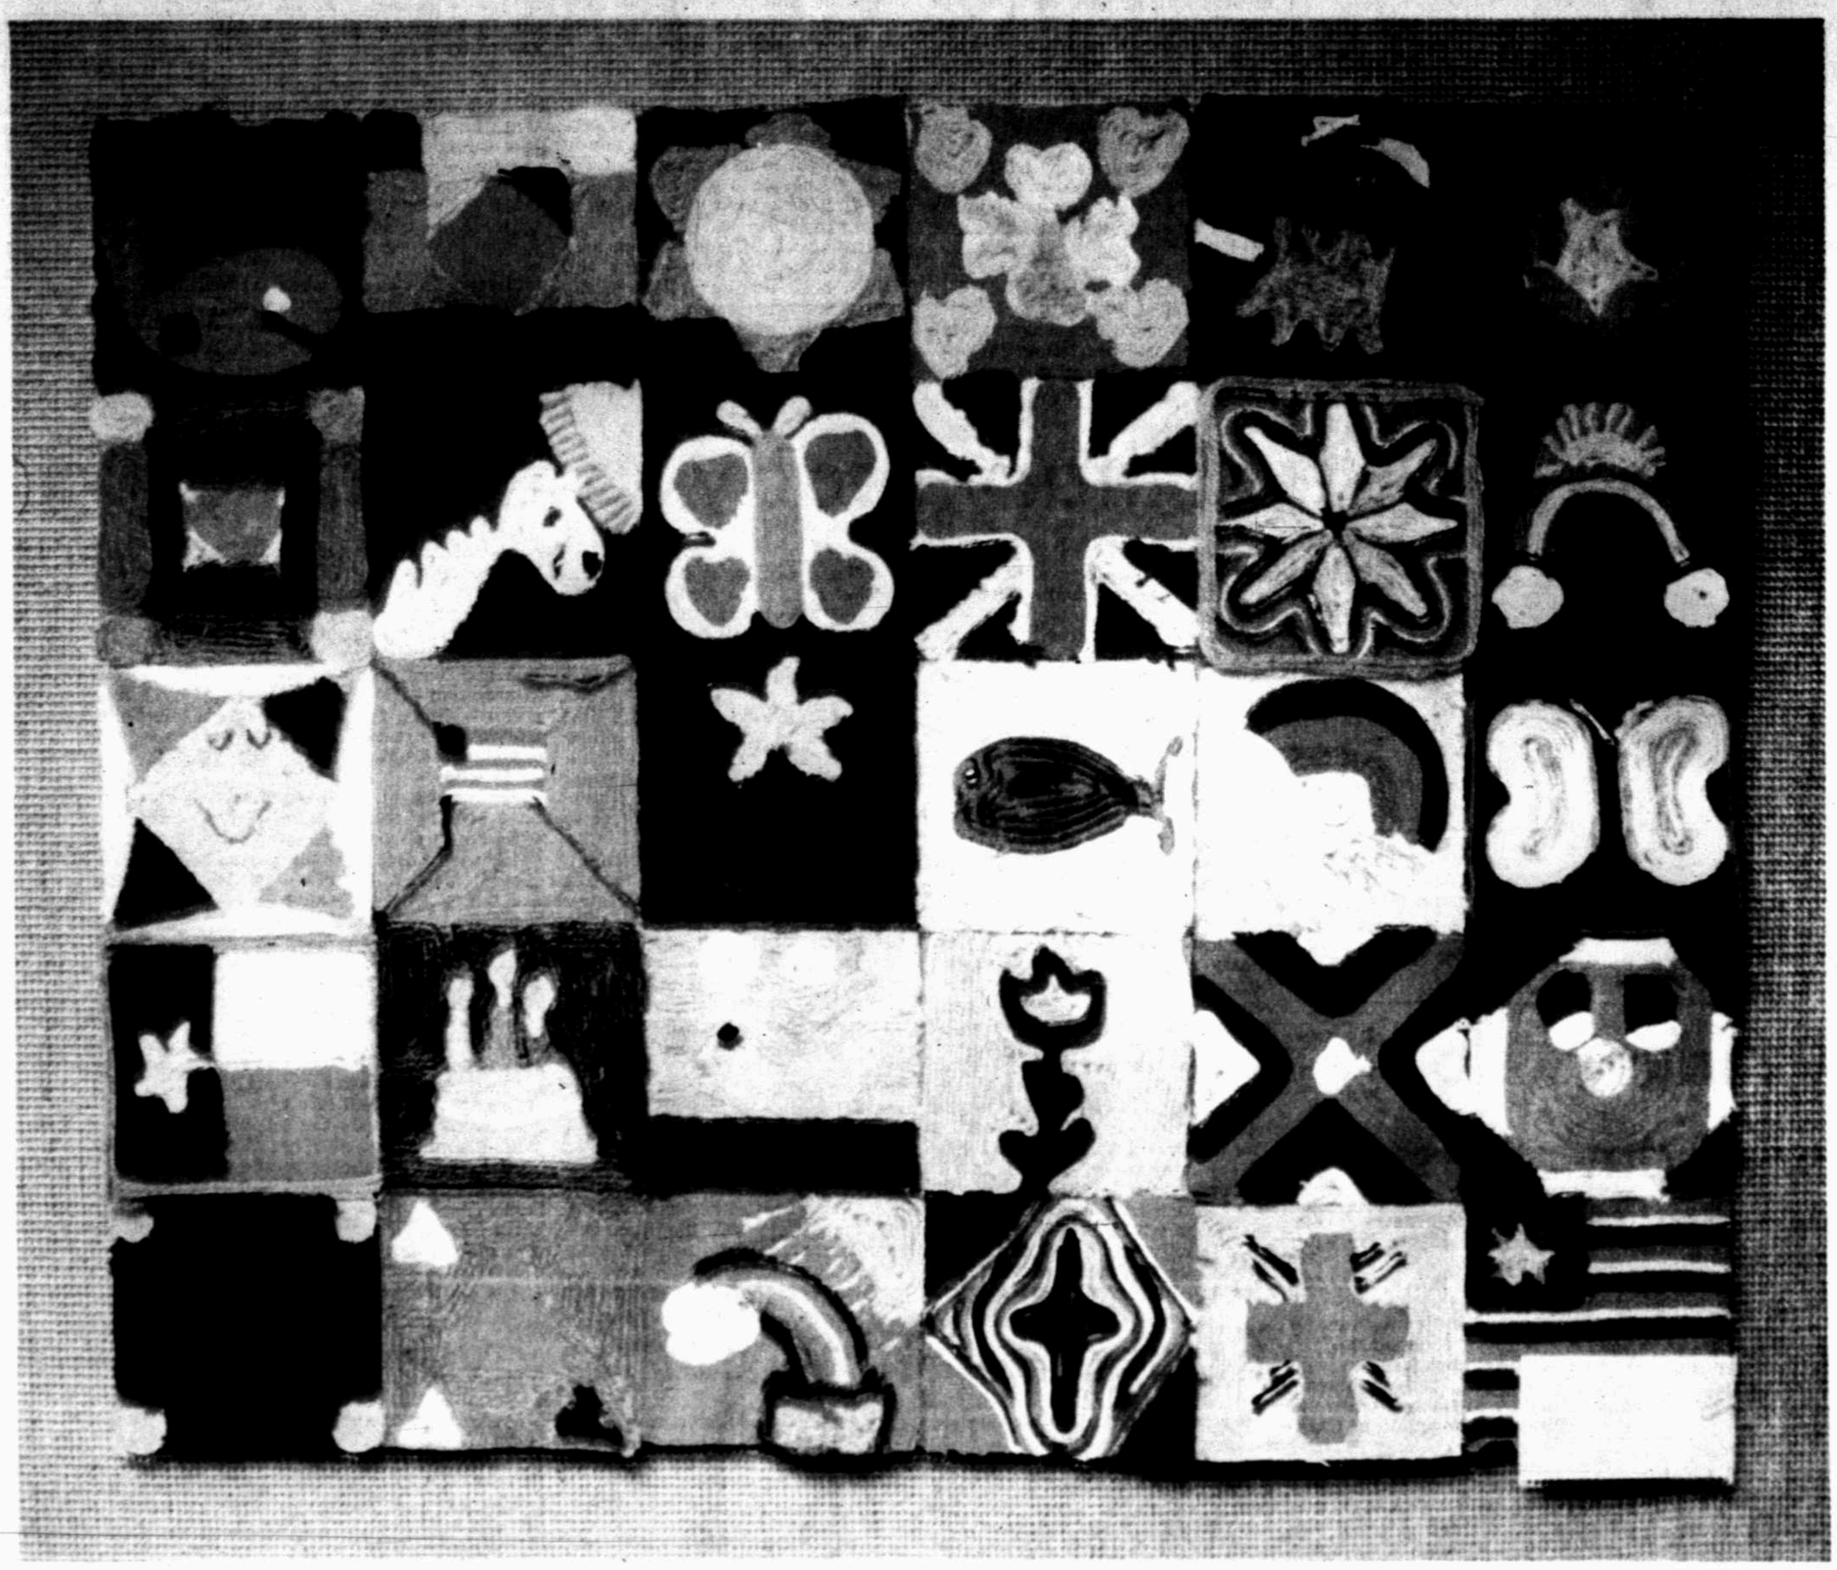

The new Inter-Continental brings other new dimensions of hospitality to San Antonio as well. The international style of the great Inter-Continental Hotels of Paris, London, New York, Rio and more than 80 cities around the world. And the unparalleled standards of service that have made Inter-Continental the first choice of the world's most demanding travelers.

Welcome back.

"Fantasia," by the 5th grade (Murphy's class) at Sam Houston, is among art work included in the Museum of the Southwest's Student Art Show.

"Red Vase and Yellow Tulips," 1980 by Janet Fish, one of 15 "Works by Women" in the Stables Gallery.

Uninhibited imagination

Uninhibited imagination brilliantly colors the Thomas Gallery walls at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave. The occasion is the 22nd annual Student Art Festival.

Meanwhile, in the museum's newly opened Stables Gallery, 15 works by 13 women, representing the Gihon art collection "Works by Women," are on display.

The two exhibits present a visual and emotional contrast. The children's creative works show a spontaneity not found in the "Works by Women," where the creativeness often feels contrived.

Assembled by Bette C. Graham, the inventor of Liquid Paper and founder of the Gihon Foundation, "Works by Women" was intended as a "showcase" for "outstanding (American) women artists."

Artists represented include Mary Cassatt, Georgia O'Keeffe, Clyde Connell, Dorothy Hood, Helen Frankenthaler, Janet Fish, Hermine Ford, Nancy Graves, Lynda Benglis, Gael Z. Stack, Dee I. Wolff, Mary F. McCleary, and former Midlander Nancy Chambers.

Ms. Graham died before completing this project. Although it's too thin to be considered a comprehensive collection of works by female American artists, it does contain some work by noted artists.

No compendium of American art is complete without Mary Cassatt, Georgia O'Keeffe and, perhaps, Helen Frankenthaler, H.W. Janson notwithstanding. His "History of Art," (1973 edition) considered by many to be a definitive work in the field, contains no references to women artists, past or present.

The best art, irrespective of the artist's gender, transcends reality and speaks across generations.

Joan Didion gives us an example of this in a stunning ancedote in her book "The White Album":

"One of the vast O'Keeffe 'Sky Above Clouds' canvases floated over the back stairs in the Chicago Art Institute that day (in August 1973), dominating what seemed to be several stories of empty light, and my (7-year-old) daughter looked at it once, ran to the landing, and kept on looking. 'Who drew it,' she whispered after a while. I told her. 'I need to talk to her,' she said finally."

Presenting another delightful look inside the minds of children is the museum's Student Art Festival.

The festival encompasses two exhibits displayed consecutively. Art work by elementary students is on exhibit through Wednesday, work by secondary students Friday through May 16.

Sponsored by the Midland Independent School District, City Council PTA, the Junior League of Midland, Inc., and the museum, the two student art shows contain entries from all of Midland's public schools and four private schools.

Strange illness paralyzes woman, forces her father to be 'realistic'

HOUSTON (AP) — Nineteen months ago, Richard Nicholas was eagerly anticipating his daughter Sara's graduation from cooking school in New Orleans, so she could pursue her dream of opening a small French restaurant.

Today, Nicholas would be happy just to hear her talk.

Just a few hours after telling her father that her studies were "going super," Ms. Nicholas was stricken with a mysterious illness that has left her almost totally paralyzed. She could move her eyes and occasionally her jaws, but nothing else.

"For months, I thought and hoped and prayed she'd recover or at least talk again,' said her father, Richard Nicholas of Houston. "But now, well, I have to be realistic. I don't think she'll ever get better."

Specialists at three hospitals have searched for clues as to what caused Ms. Nicholas' sudden paralysis.

Dr. Brian B. Bradley, who specializes in pulmonary medicine and critical care cases at Hermann Hospital, is using a working diagnosis of central pontine myelinolysis, a condition thought to have affected fewer than 200 people worldwide since it was first described by two Italian doctors in 1903.

"This disease affects the pons area of the brain, the pons being the bridge between the brain and the central nervous system which controls all the neurological signals," Bradley said.

"Her problem can be compared to a broken-down car that is obstructing all traffic to and fro on a busy bridge — in other words, everything's come to a halt, but we don't know why."

Nicholas reluctantly agreed to discuss his daughter's plight in hopes that "an electronic genious somewhere might have an idea how we can communicate better with her."

Ms. Nicholas currently "talks" by blinking her eyes at alphabet cards to spell out words.

"Imagine my elation when she was able to spell out 'I love you, Dad,'" Nicholas said. "She 'writes' notes to Dr. Bradley and the nurses and even wanted to send some Christmas messages."

DEATHS

Ethel B. Norriss

SAN ANGELO — Services for Ethel (Boone) Norriss, 86, of 4300 Bowie, grandmother of Becky Sprague of Midland, will be at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday in Harriet Cemetery with the Rev. James Miller officiating and directed by Johnson's Funeral Home.

Mrs. Norriss died Saturday night in a San Angelo hospital.

She was born May 7, 1896, in Macedonia. She moved to San Angelo in 1912. She was a librarian for 25 years with Tom Green County Library, serving as childrens' librarian for most of the years before retiring at age 78. She was a member of Park Heights Baptist Church and served as a teacher and worker.

Other survivors include a daughter, a son, two sisters, a brother, four grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

Military ready to fly into drug war

WASHINGTON (AP) — The military is preparing to commit a fleet of aircraft to help counter airborne drug smuggling across America's porous southern border, amid indications that smugglers are seeking ways to get around heavily-policed south Florida.

However, one high administration official said the planned commitment of military aircraft is far short of what is needed.

And Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., chairman of a House subcommittee that developed the plan, said he is concerned that officials might not move aggressively enough to implement it.

The problem is the hundreds, perhaps thousands, of smuggler aircraft that yearly swoop low across the border to avoid radar detection and land on isolated fields to deposit cocaine and marijuana, with south Florida the favored entry point.

Primary responsibility for countering air smuggling rests with the U.S. Customs Service. And despite beefed up anti-smuggling efforts in Florida, the Customs air fleet elsewhere along the border is ill-equipped to do the job, officials said.

A Customs spokesman said that of the 65 aircraft in the Customs fleet, only 11 were purchased specifically for the agency's use and that the rest had been mostly seized from smugglers.

William von Raab, Customs commissioner, said the planes generally did not have radar adequate for long range surveillance, and that their capability to land quickly and "bust" grounded smugglers was limited.

"One of the weakest links that we've had (in the anti-drug effort) has been air interdiction through Customs," said English. "Generally speaking, I think it has been a stepchild, particularly when it comes to federal dollars."

To help out, English's subcommittee developed a proposal under which the Department of Defense would lend Customs six Navy P-3A surveillance planes equipped with special radar, eight Army C-12A tracking aircraft and three more pursuit helicopters to augment five already on loan to the agency.

The proposal was made possible by a 1981 law that clarified circumstances under which the military could assist in anti-drug operations.

In a letter in March, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger approved the proposal, subject to certain conditions. English said he hopes first of the new aircraft will begin operating in October, from the eight Customs air support branches strung across southern border.

However, English said his experence with commitments for use of military aircraft in the south Florida operation has made him cautious about whether officials will actually carry out the plan.

Sophisticated Navy radar planes that had been promised for the air interdiction effort in Florida have recently flown far less than originally planned, said English, who has asked the administration for an explanation.

"We want to make certain that we have actually seen (our plan) work with our own eyes and that we can verify that it in fact is operating as it should," he said. "Until we actually see that, I can't guarantee that it would."

However, Daniel J. Murphy, chief of staff to Vice President George Bush, who was recently assigned to direct the fight against drug smuggling across the borders, said a lot more than just the English proposal will be needed.

"That small number of aircraft, which I think is great for Customs, is far inadequate to do the job we're talking about," said Murphy. "And I would like to be allowed a little leeway here to negotiate this," Murphy said. "And if people (would) just get off my back, I'll probably be able to get some support from the Defense Department."

The intensified battle against drug smuggling in South Florida was launched early last year, when President Reagan appointed Bush to direct a multi-agency task force to fight rising crime in the state, particularly drug-related crime.

But because of the task force's activities, air smugglers now appear to be increasingly looking for alternate ways of getting into the country, experts say.

Murphy said that "we did a fairly decent job (in South Florida) in improving things, and then the stuff started to go around south Florida."

"Now it's going into Georgia...it's building up in Houston, and Louisiana, the Carolinas...also Maine," said Murphy.

Recent Air Force surveillance of the Southwest border — Texas, New Mexico and Arizona — showed seven planes a day illegally crossing into the United States, or more than 2,400 a year, according to staff members of English's subcommittee.

The result has been concern among some congressmen and governors of other states, Murphy said.

"I just don't want us to become the place where we have aircraft landing in and around our areas that'll make that the alternative route," said Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso, a number of English's subcommittee whose district covers a large slice of Texas border.

Timber industry slowly recovers from recession

KENNARD, Texas (AP) — Signs of life in the once-slumbering timber industry have East Texans listening to the music of growling chain saws, rumbling timber trucks and whining sawmills.

In the little timber town of Kennard, west of Lufkin, Oliver Bass' sawmill is operating with a full shift for the first time in more than two years.

"I've been in this business 30 years, and my father was in it a long time before that," said Bass. "There's no question this has been the worst recession the lumber business has ever had."

Sawmills, hit by a three-year slump, are showing a modest upturn, industry observers said.

"But when you're coming out of the bottom of a well, it doesn't take a whole lot to make you feel good," said Bill Hammock of Champion International.

The activity in the timber industry is primarily the result of the swift upswing in new housing construction. Some economic forecasters last year predicted fewer than 1 million housing starts this year.

But the pace is progressing at an annual rate of more than 1.6 million starts, industry observers said.

"Things are a whole lot better now, but there's still a lot of room for improvement," Bass told The Dallas Morning News. "It's going to take the whole year just to get back on even keel."

However, a local grocery owner said that hard times are far from over in East Texas.

"It doesn't seem to be improving at all," said John Bishop, owner of Kennard Superette. "It's just not too solid in this area at the moment."

Even if the timber industry continues to improve, other problems loom ahead. A particular concern is the increasing importation of Canadian lumber.

"The Canadian government subsidizes the forest products industry there," said Bass. "The mills are automatically allotted so much timber. It's kind of tough to compete with that sort of thing."

The Texas timber industry accounts for $5.2 billion in annual sales and produces 71,000 jobs through direct employment and 106,000 jobs through secondary employment, the Texas Forest Service said.

"Our biggest problem in Texas is not goinig to be demand for products or the capacity of mills to meet it," said forest service spokesman Ed Barron. "The problem is going to be obtaining timber to fill those mills.

"There just aren't enough trees," he said. "That's our concern right now."

But, for now, increased housing demand has brought lumbering activity and, with it, higher prices. One composite index of lumber prices stood at $228 per thousand board-feet last week, compared to $173 a year earlier.

Farmers in high cotton over moist conditions

DALLAS (AP) — Cotton farmers on the Texas High Plains say their spirits have been buoyed by a moist spring and a bountiful federal farm program that could give them the good crop many need to survive.

"A lot of farmers are gung-ho about getting their crops in," said Richard Barron of Shallowater.

Not since the Depression have farmers needed to have a good year, agribusiness observers say.

"For a lot of them, it's the difference between hanging on and not hanging on," said Fred Lundgren, coordinator of a Texas Department of Agriculture family-farm advisory committee.

"This year is going to break or make a lot of people. For the small farmer, he either has to make it this year, or next year, he's going to be closed down by the bank," Barron said.

The early-spring snows have left the ground moist, and farmers hope it will dry by the second week of May, when most of them plant. But the moisture has spared many farmers the expense of pre-watering their fields.

New revolution isn't centered in Alamo

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The "high-tech revolution" holds the key to diversifying this city's economy and solving its chronic unemployment, Mayor Henry Cisneros says.

Cisneros began a campaign — after his election two years ago as the first Hispanic mayor of a major U.S. city — to develop San Antonio as a center for computer and other high-technology industries.

"We're talking about going after the leading edge of the high-tech revolution," Cisneros said.

"We're looking closely at the models of high-tech research and development in other parts of the country, particularly San Diego and North Carolina, as a means of attracting that industry to San Antonio and to Texas."

Areas in the United States that will attract high-tech jobs will be those with the educational resources already in place for advanced research in the field, he said.

"We're talking about a very rare bird, the pioneers of technology," he said. "These are industries that may never manufacture a product but are strictly research and development."

Cisneros has been named by Gov. Mark White as part of a state task force on employment, with a focus on attracting high-tech industry to Texas.

Elementary pieces were selected by the students' school principal, and the secondary selections were made by three independent jurors.

A special public reception, which includes an awards presentation, is planned for 8 p.m. May 10. Museum hours Monday through Saturday are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday 2-5 p.m. No admission is charged.

This festival's purposes include: stimulating student interest in art; offering the public a chance to enjoy student art work; and the community an opportunity to recognize outstanding student accomplishments.

Police investigate local burglaries

In weekend burglary complaints to city police, LaVelle Stuart of 2802 Cimmaron said he returned home from an out-of-town trip Saturday and found his home had been broken into. Guns and jewelry valued at $6,603 were missing. Entry was gained be breaking a window.

Angelita Armendariz of 601 E. Kansas Ave. told officers $2,825 worth of assorted items, including jewelry and a .22 caliber automatic pistol, was taken in a break-in at her residence.

Senate plans final vote on pari-mutuel betting bill

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Senate planned a final vote today on pari-mutuel betting bill that, if approved, would throw the issue of horse-race gambling to the House.

Lawmakers began the last five weeks of the 4½-month session with no sign of immediate action on the prime issues of taxation and state spending.

However, there were plenty of other controversial issues confronting senators and representatives.

First debate on the House general appropriations bill appears likely the first week in May, with Senate action shortly afterward.

The bill to legalize pari-mutuel betting at horse races after a statewide referendum and local option elections tentatively cleared the Senate 17-12 Thursday.

Yarbrough to appear in court

AUSTIN (AP) — Former Texas Supreme Court Justice Don Yarbrough was scheduled to appear in court today on a charge that he jumped bail on a perjury conviction.

Yarbrough, 41, was brought to Austin on Friday from state prison in Huntsville, where he is serving a five-year sentence.

Yarbrough was convicted in January 1978 of lying to grand jurors when he denied meeting in an Austin motel with a business associate to discuss forging a car title to be used to secure a loan.

He had resigned from the Supreme Court the previous year, after he was indicted. He served only seven months on the court.
