OPEC says oil prices may plunge in '86

GENEVA (AP) — OPEC leaders said Saturday that oil prices may plunge next year, with grave consequences for the world, unless independent oil producers cooperate with the OPEC to tighten up supplies.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has been unable to agree on a strategy for propping up prices. The plea showed that the cartel is desperate for outside help to regain some control of the oil market.

Western analysts agree that prices are likely to come down in 1986 but contend this will help, rather than hurt, the world economy by spurring growth and reducing inflation.

Oil ministers from the 13 member countries finished the first day of their year-end conference with no agreements on pricing or production. They said they would resume their talks today.

Several ministers said they did not expect any decisions at this conference but that an emergency session may be convened in February or March when an expected decline in prices would force them to act.

A seasonal rise in oil demand has kept prices fairly steady this fall despite growing disarray within OPEC.

Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the oil minister of Saudi Arabia, reiterated his prediction that oil prices could fall below $20 a barrel next year if OPEC and non-OPEC producers did not cooperate to limit supplies.

World oil prices currently average about $28 a barrel.

"If there is no cooperation with the non-OPEC producers prices will come down drastically," Yamani told reporters at the outset of Saturday's meeting.

"This is what they call a price war," he added. "We don't want a fight."

The Saudi minister, whose views usually dictate the direction of OPEC policy, said oil prices and supplies were likely to hold steady over the winter. But then prices could tumble, he said.

"One day it will be below $20 (a barrel), one day it will be up to 23 or 24," Yamani said. "It is very frightening for the consumers."

It no longer is possible for OPEC, whose share of the world oil market has shrunk from about two-thirds in 1980 to about one-third today, to single- handedly prevent a major decline in prices, he said.

"The non-OPEC producers must cooperate" in limiting supplies to consumers to dry up the oil glut, he said.

Asked why Britain, with its North Sea fields; the Soviet Union and other independent producers would be willing to restrain their sales, Yamani replied only, "They will see."

Yamani's predictions were echoed by other ministers, including Indonesia's Subroto, whose opening address to the conference was his last as chairman. He was replaced Saturday by Arturo Hernandez Grisanti, Venezuela's oil minister.

Economists: Consumer debt may be sign of recession

WASHINGTON (AP) — Packed shopping malls aside, Americans may be winding down a three-year buying spree that has left them in record debt and with a near-record lack of savings. Many economists say it could be an early sign that a new recession is on the horizon.

While business has been brisk since Thanksgiving, many retailers and economists are predicting an overall lackluster shopping season — followed by a period of retrenchment and slowing retail sales.

"Between Christmas and Easter, we may have more clerks than customers. There isn't going to be anything to pull people into the stores after Christmas, and they will be concerned about their savings level. That's when we expect to see a slowdown," said Donald Ratajczak, director of the economic forecasting project at the University of Georgia.

Like the federal government, many Americans have had little difficulty spending more than they take in but are finding it a hard habit to kick.

Consumer spending, which accounts for nearly two-thirds of the Gross National Product, has powered the current economic recovery, now entering its fourth year.

A major turnaround in retail buying habits could trigger another recession, if not in 1986, then in the following year, many economists say.

"We've just been on a national consumption binge. Everything we produce we consume. You know the day of reckoning has to come," said economist Barry Bosworth.

"It will come for the nation, too. But there's one advantage — it doesn't have to come in our lifetime," added Bosworth, who was chief economist to President Jimmy Carter and is now a resident economist at the Brookings Institution here.

Consumer installment debt, including credit cards, car loans and short-term bank loans, is running at an all-time high of 19.2 percent of disposable income, according to the Commerce Department.

Figuring in mortgage debt and other long-term loans, many American families are carrying total debt loads near 80 percent of their income.

At the same time the personal savings rate is averaging 2.7 percent, the lowest level since the end of the Korean War, according to Commerce Department calculations.

No less an economic force than Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker is concerned about the rapid expansion of both personal and business debt — claiming it threatened future growth and made "some firms and individuals" highly vulnerable to economic downturns.

In a letter to Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., Volcker blamed the current tax system, which allows deductions for interest payments, for encouraging households as well as businesses to borrow rather than save.

Willard C. Butcher, chairman of Chase Manhattan, agrees that the tax deductibility of interest is a major reason for the low savings rate in this country. "It is as easy to spend a dollar borrowed as a dollar earned," he said.

"One can build a summer home on borrowed money and get a tax savings. I have some debt that was occurred for non-productive purpose — and I see no reason why I should have a tax deduction for it," Butcher added.

Michener calls Midland 'lively place and it seems like home'

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

"Virginia is a marvelous state and California is quite exciting," but Texas, well, in the words of Pulitzer prize-winning author James Michener, "Texas has its own special quality."

So does Midland. "It's a lively place and it seems like home," said Michener.

Because of his fondness for Midland, Michener has agreed to help the city wind up its Centennial year by appearing as special guest at a dinner Tuesday night at Midland Center. It will be a question-and-answer session, according to Centennial officials.

But for Michener, it will be one of the few times he makes such appearances. And if it weren't for Midland, the people he came to know during his research here, and his love for libraries, the author known for his best-selling historical novels wouldn't be returning this week.

"Very rarely," does he make appearances at such dinners, he said in a telephone interview with the Reporter-Telegram.

But, he had planned to attend the dedication ceremony for the Centennial Branch library and a conflict in his schedule kept him away. As an alternative, he agreed to the dinner.

"I have tremendous affection for libraries. I'm married to a librarian and libraries are a big part of a writer's work," he said.

THE TIMING couldn't be better. His most recent work, "Texas," is on the best seller list and is the main topic of conversation as Midlanders pour over the 1,000-plus page book to find references to West Texas. Michener spent many days in the area

Retired Supreme Court Justice Stewart dies at the age of 70

Stewart

HANOVER, N.H. (AP) — Retired Supreme Court Justice Potter Stewart, a pivotal "swing vote" on the nation's highest court for 23 years, died Saturday in a New Hampshire hospital, five days after suffering a stroke. He was 70.

Stewart was admitted to the Dartmouth-Hitchcock Medical Center in Hanover, N.H., last Monday after suffering a stroke at the home of his daughter Harriet Verksist in Dummerston Vermont.

Stewart's wife, Mary Ann, was at his side when he died, said Toni House, a Supreme Court spokeswoman. Mrs. Stewart had been at the hospital all week, Ms. House said.

Chief Justice Warren Burger in a statement issued by the court, said Stewart's death "removes a splendid jurist from the bench. We mourn his loss."

Stewart retired from the bench July 3, 1981, citing an urge to spend more time with his grandchildren. He was succeeded by Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, the first woman named to the Supreme Court and President Reagan's only selection to date.

Although a member of the liberal court dominated by the late Chief Justice Earl Warren through the 1960s, Stewart remained the personification of a middle-of-the-road judge even though tags such as "moderate Republican" and "centrist" displeased him.

"I never thought in terms of putting a label on myself except trying to be a good lawyer," Stewart once said.

"The mark of a good judge is a judge whose opinion you can read and...have no idea if the judge was a man or woman, Republican or Democrat, a Christian or a Jew, and, if a Christian, a Protestant or a Catholic," he said. "You just know he or she was a good judge."

A man whose considerable influence on the Supreme Court came from his freedom of ideology, Stewart told reporters after he retired: "I think it's the first duty of a justice to remove from his judicial work his own moral, philosophical, political or religious beliefs and not to think of himself as being here as some great

HOUSTON (AP) — Texaco Inc. could pay a $10.53 billion jury award for interfering in a Pennzoil Co.-Getty Oil Co. merger and still have enough left to keep the company operating, Pennzoil Chairman J. Hugh Liedtke says.

"Texaco's pleadings about filing for Chapter 11 are pure baloney," Liedtke said Friday after a judge took the award under consideration.

"Texaco has $37 billion in assets. After they pay off their debts they still have $26 billion, and that's adequate to cover what they owe us," Liedtke said. "We're entitled to the judgment."

A state district court jury recommended last month that Texaco pay $7.53 in actual damages and another $3 billion as punishment for illegally enticing Getty Oil to break its 1984 merger agreement with Pennzoil.

Texaco purchased Getty for $10.1 billion, the second-largest merger in U.S. corporate history behind Chevron Corp.'s $13.3 billion purchase of Gulf Corp.

Visiting Judge Solomon Casseb Jr., who took over the case midway through the four-month trial after the presiding judge became ill, must decide whether to accept, set aside or reduce the largest civil damage award in U.S. history.

After listening to arguments from both sides, Casseb recessed the hearing until Tuesday.

According to Texaco attorneys, Pennzoil and Getty never had an ironclad deal and Texaco is being punished for taking advantage of a "good business opportunity."

"Texaco has $37 billion in assets. After they pay off their debts they still have $26 billion, and that's adequate to cover what they owe us. We're entitled to the judgment."

— J. Hugh Liedtke, Pennzoil president

"There is not a shred of evidence that Texaco was motivated by malice or ill-will or intent to harm Pennzoil or the general public," attorney Richard Keeton said.

Yet, the landmark judgment would damage the free-enterprise system, leave 55,000 Texaco employees worldwide without jobs and signal the "total destruction and obliteration" of a major U.S. company, Keeton said.

Pennzoil attorney Joe Jamail scoffed at the claims, saying "the number of jobs that might or might not be lost is not before this court."

"They're saying, 'Oh, it's so much money, it'll wreck our business.' That's not a legal argument. They have no argument except that they think it's too much money," he said.

If it fails to overturn the award, Texaco can appeal the verdict but would have to post a bond in cash or liquid assets equal to the award, plus attorneys' fees and interest.

Texaco's appeal bond would total almost $12 billion, while the White Plains, N.Y.-based company said its stock market value is $8.6 billion.

Pennzoil based its claims on the 1 billion barrels of Getty oil and gas reserves it would have gained for $2.7 billion in the merger that otherwise would cost more than $10 billion to find.

Texaco, arguing for "zero damages," insisted the maximum award should be no more than about $500 million, the difference between the $112.50 a share price Pennzoil offered for Getty stock and the $128 a share Texaco paid.

"What do they want? One billion barrels of oil for free?" Keeton asked.

But Pennzoil contends that beside stock, it would have been transformed into a major oil company.

"You're talking about a multi-billion-dollar injury," another Pennzoil attorney, John Jeffers said.

Pennzoil announced on Jan. 4, 1984, that it had reached "an agreement in principle" under which Pennzoil and Getty's major stockholders would form a partnership to take over Getty Oil.

Prison activist Ruiz sentenced to life

AUSTIN (AP) — David Ruiz, the Texas prison inmate who sparked a major reform movement in the Texas Department of Corrections, was sentenced to life in prison Saturday for armed robbery.

The jury spent only 50 minutes deliberating his punishment. Ruiz was convicted Friday after three weeks of testimony and three hours of jury deliberations.

Court officials said Ruiz, 43, would be eligible for parole in 20 years, minus any credit for good conduct given him by prison officials.

"You've got a man here who wants to rob, rob, rob and he'll do it again and again if he gets out," assistant District Attorney Terry Keel told the jury Saturday in asking for the maximum sentence.

Afterwards, Looney said he was preparing a motion for a new trial and was ready to appeal if the motion was denied.

"I think my lawyers did a good job and I want the sentence appealed," said Ruiz, who remained impassive when the jury's verdict was read.

Bentsen predicts 80 percent shortfall in windfall taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional committee predicts that the "windfall profits" tax on oil will produce a shortfall of 80 percent of the revenues the tax was expected to generate when it was passed in 1980.

The gap is the result of lower oil prices, said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, who released the figures from the Joint Committee on Taxation this weekend.

As a result of the discrepancy between the earlier estimates and the actual revenues, according to the committee, federal deficits have been underestimated by a total of $23.9 billion from 1980 to 1986.

Bentsen said that in 1980, the tax was expected to generate about $223 billion in revenues before being phased out at the end of the decade.

Instead, Bentsen said, the tax is expected to produce only about $45 billion.

"When that windfall profits tax was passed in 1980, it was estimated that the price of oil would continue to go up very substantially," Bentsen said. "Instead, since that time, it's gone down by about $8 a barrel."

The committee said Congress estimated in 1980 that the 1985 price of a barrel of crude oil would be $50.44. Instead it is currently around $28, up from a February low for this year of $23.66.

The price in 1980 was $31.98.

The committee said presidential budgets have consistently overestimated revenues from the tax, with the biggest gap occurring in 1982 when the president's budget estimated revenues of $19.9 billion but actual revenues were only $9.1 billion.

The committee said that, when enacted, the tax was expected to produce $22.2 billion during fiscal year 1985, but only generated $2.9 billion.

"What you have seen is a situation where there was a gross misstatement — or bad estimate — as to what would happen," Bentsen said.

HOUSTON (AP) — A single-engine plane carrying an estimated 500 pounds of marijuana slammed into a small cluster of trees and crashed in a field, ending a five-hour airborne chase by federal agents, U.S. Customs officials said Saturday.

The pilot, whose name was withheld, was taken to Ben Taub Hospital with head injuries, police said. Smuggling and conspiracy charges were pending.

The Cessna 200 aircraft crashed about 7:30 p.m. Friday in a field about three miles west of Houston's Hobby Airport, said Customs spokesman Charles Conroy.

"We're not sure where it originated, but we believe either Colombia or Belize," Conroy said.

Customs officials spotted the plane on radar Friday morning over the Gulf of Mexico, he said. Customs officials began using their own aircraft to track the plane after it passed over New Orleans and turned northwest, he said.

"We chased him all over the state of Texas," Conroy said.

The plane made several low passes at airports in Temple, College Station, Austin and Navasota, then flew toward Houston, he said.

Investigators were uncertain why the plane crashed, but said the pilot may have been trying to land in the field.

Since the plane did not burn on impact, investigators said it may have been low on fuel, said District Fire Chief O.J. Peake.

"He probably had the electrical system off and the prop wasn't turning because the only blade near the ground is bent," Peake said.

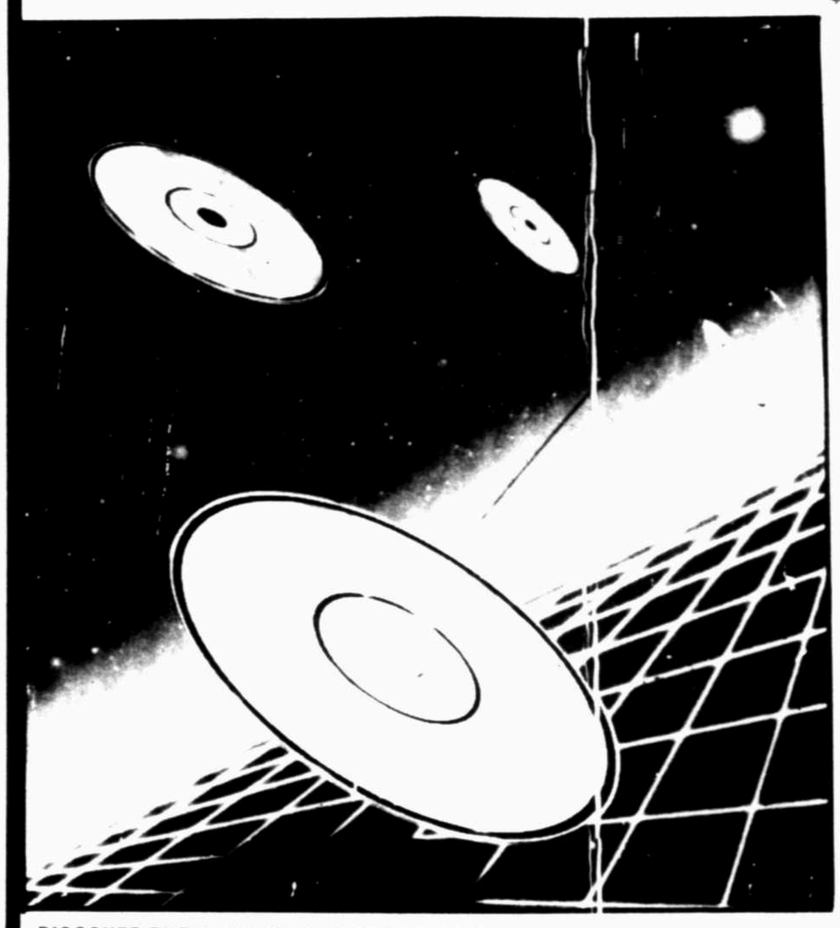

The pilot was arrested while trying to walk away from the wreckage, Conroy said.

"When I asked him if there was anybody else in the plane, he said he didn't know," said paramdeic B.E. Greenberg. "I asked him about the crash and he didn't answer. He just kept saying his head hurt."

Investigators found 12 bales of marijuana in the plane's cabin and luggage compartment. Conroy said the estimated street value of the illegal weed was $320,000.

'Convincer' has art of persuasion buckled up

AUSTIN — Starting last weekend, the cop on the corner became "the Enforcer." But my friend Rhonda's got "the Convincer."

We're talking seat belts here. Buckle-up folks. I'm sure y'all know by now. It's the law. Tickets cost $25 to $50 for any un-buckled driver or front-seat passenger. And this new law is working. Col. Jim Adams, director of the Department of Public Safety, says his troopers find about two-thirds of all Texas drivers are wearing their seat belts. During September, the first month of voluntary compliance, auto fatalities dropped 27 percent.

But back to Rhonda and her Convincer. Rhonda Cook works for the Texas Automobile Dealers Association, a group that has a distinct vested interest in making the new seat belt law work. More on that later. Rhonda travels around the state with the Convincer. She stops at college campuses and shopping mall parking lots, attracting crowds with the strange looking one-ton contraption she hauls around behind her van.

From afar, the Convincer resembles a dragster high in the back, tapering off in the front, wheels, stainless steel tubing. Up close it looks more like a portable amusement park ride. It's really a fancy, weighted sled that simulates a head-on collision with an immovable object at speeds of up to 10 mph. The Convincee climbs into the compartment and buckles up. Rhonda pulls the pin and the sled rolls down the incline and collides with a padded bumper at the bottom. She can vary the angle of descent to simulate crashes of 5, 7 or 10 mph.

The idea, of course, is to make drivers realize the force of an impact at relatively slow speeds. To demonstrate how seat belts save lives. To Convince.

Some in the audience, Rhonda says, have a warped sense of danger. "A lot of people say, 'Uh-uh, I'm not going to ride that.' Then they get in their cars and drive away at 55 mph without a seat belt." Rhonda won't let pregnant women, children or the elderly ride the Convincer. But she doesn't shoo them away either. "Watching it is just as good as riding," she says.

On a cold, dreary Austin day last week, Rhonda gave this writer — whose seat-belt habits are so ingrained he buckles up to back the car out of the garage — a chance to ride the Convincer. She cranked it up to full speed, and I climbed in. Tiny moths, the kind usually associated with roller-coaster rides, fluttered in my stomach as I pulled the seat belt and shoulder harness into place and triple-checked to make certain it was fastened securely.

She pulled the pin and I rumbled down the 12-foot track. As the sled hit the bumper, my body shot forward toward the "dashboard" then slammed back into the seats as the belts did their trick. I unbuckled and stepped out, thankful to set foot on solid ground again.

Then we stood back and watched as a 60-pound dummy the size of a small child took the same trip unbuckled and tumbled head-first against the front of the sled. The dummy's cracked skull was ample evidence that auto accidents maim, injur and kill.

Now, I've seen all the films demonstrating those facts. But nothing brings home the real benefit of seat belts like their comforting tug on your body as they work. The Convincer. Aptly named.

Like I mentioned earlier, Rhonda's bosses are quite concerned about the seat belt law. The auto dealers lobbied strongly for passage of the bill. It's part of a concerted nationwide effort to institute buckle-up laws in every state. If enough states pass the laws, then the federal government won't force the automakers to install air bags in every new car by the end of the decade. That adds cost to new cars, either boosting price or cutting profits.

And not only do the states have to pass the laws, but they have to work. Drivers have to buckle up. Hence Rhonda and her Convincer.

The Texas Legislature passed the seat belt law only this spring. But already it's under attack from both the right and the left. Conservative state Sen. Roy Blake of Nacogdoches says he'll introduce a bill in the 1987 legislative session to repeal the law. Blake calls it inappropriate state interference in personal rights and liberty.

From the opposite side of the political spectrum comes Ronnie Dugger, publisher of the liberal Texas Observer. In a recent column, Dugger called the new law unconstitutional, unfair and uncomfortable.

Reasoned logic easily refutes both of their arguments. Better yet and far more effective, Blake and Dugger ought to visit Rhonda and her Convincer.

Teen on trial for brother's murder

HENDERSON (AP) — A 16-year-old accused of fatally beating his younger step-brother with a baseball bat, then shooting his step-father and grandmother to death is scheduled for trial Monday.

Timothy Dwaine Brown of Crims Chapel will be tried for murder in the August death of 11-year-old Kevin Brown.

He also faces indictments alleging he killed his step-father, Kenneth Dalton Brown, 35, and his grandmother, Eva Juanita Ray, 59.

According to Rusk County District Attorney William Ferguson, Brown admitted the slayings during an Aug. 23 hearing at which he was certified to stand trial as an adult. However, Brown pleaded innocent to all three killings when he was arraigned on Sept.27.

Authorities say Brown, a student at Hope Christian School in Henderson, beat Kevin Brown to death with a baseball bat.

Jury asks judge to resign after he dismisses guilty verdict in murder

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A state district judge's decision to dismiss a guilty verdict a jury handed down against a woman accused of arranging the shooting of a former lover shocked jurors and prompted prosecutors to call for his resignation.

The jury had deliberated 17 hours over two days before returning its guilty verdict against Margaret Covington shortly before 6 p.m. Friday.

But Judge Mike Westergren overturned the jury's verdict and dismissed charges of burglary with intent to commit assault.

"We all are shocked that this could happen," jury foreman J.C. Sexton said Friday.

PASTORS

Wayne Stephens. "He has been with me the whole time."

Mrs. Stephens was referring to Rev. James E. Barrington of the Primitive Baptist Church, one of 18 pastors participating in MMH's Emergency Room Volunteer Chaplains Program, headed by hospital Chaplain Alan Williams.

Mrs. Stephens, still emotionally overcome by the tragedy, spoke in a faltering voice the praise of Barrington and the E.R. program.

"I WAS ALL alone," she said. "All my relatives live out of town and I didn't have anyone. This pastor was here to help. He helped me pray, and believe me, I had a lot of praying to do that night. It didn't turn out like I wanted, but I feel better." Mrs. Stephens' 11-year-old daughter, Cassandra, was not involved in the accident.

Mrs. Stephens' sister, Donna Reese, who has been visiting from San Angelo this week, spoke highly of Barrington.

"He was waiting at the door; he's been here the whole week for Joyce and he conducted the most beautiful service for Kenneth," she said. "This man made the difference."

Barrington, who has been pastor of Primitive for 25 years, stated that he almost decided not to volunteer the night of the accident.

"I was feeling real sick Saturday night and I told my wife that I wouldn't go to the E.R. on Monday," he said. "But at the last minute, I decided I would go in for awhile and if everything was quiet, I'd go back home."

"When I walked into the emergency area, the first person I met was a nurse who said, 'I'm glad you're here — we've had a terrible accident.'" The accident occurred on Interstate 20 three miles east of Midland when a pickup truck driven by Stephens, 33, was involved in a collision with a truck-tractor about 8 p.m. Monday.

THE YOUNGER Stephens was pronounced dead Tuesday morning, with Stephens still unconscious and unaware of his son's death as of press time. Stephens suffers from head injuries, broken ribs and legs and lacerations of the liver and lung, according to Mrs. Stephens.

Tragedies as in the Stephens' case, are not the norm, according to Rev. Jonathon Holmer of Hope Lutheran Church.

"Most of the cases I've been involved with have not been real traumatic," he said. "There were, of course, a few suicide attempts and instances where people were bashed up pretty seriously, but usually there were family members present that helped out.

"Overall, it's been a very warm, very positive experience."

Holmer recalled one visit to the E.R. when he was "ministered to."

"I went as a patient," he said. "I had cut my foot pretty bad back in August. The pastor who was on duty that evening and I joked around and eventually got into theological debates on the Trinity."

Even Barrington admits that the E.R. ministry has its lighter moments.

"One night I was on duty and Police Chief Wayne Gideon brought his wife. She was having minor surgery and so he wasn't overly worried about her. We wound up having a good social visit."

Barrington added, however, that when tragedy strikes, those families get top priority.

"THE SERIOUSNESS of the case dictates the needs at the time," he said. "If a woman is in a situation where she is told that her husband has a brain hemorrhage and will only live a couple of days — she needs support right at the moment she is told."

Barrington was referring to an actual case in which he was with the woman "when the bomb dropped."

"I sometimes help the nurses," said Holmer. "We don't do anything medically, but we get supplies for them, make phone calls — just help out in any way we can."

"When there is traumatic injury, then the family starts to flow in," said Barrington. "But when it's just a scrape or bruise — there's not much you can do in the way of ministering."

"I can tell when they don't want me to talk with them," said Barrington. "I just thank them and politely bow out."

Holmer added that he expected much more of the "we don't need you" attitudes, but has found that on the whole, most people have been appreciative of the service.

The Volunteers service was the brainchild of Williams, who experienced similar programs while working as the chaplain in an Edmonton, Alberta hospital.

"WHEN I FIRST came to MMH two years ago, I wanted to start this program," he said. "Before we had this, there was no one physically present in the E.R. for pastoral care, although I am always on call."

The program currently includes 18 volunteers "from all denominations" who must pass an eight-hour training course, set up as four two-hour sessions.

Holmer stated that he learned things about the emergency area that he was not familiar with, such as terminology, who is who on the medical staff and, in general, "what goes on there."

Established since June, Williams is currently working on the development of still another E.R. program for lay people.

"That was another program that I had in mind when I came to MMH," he said.

Williams is enthusiastic about the pastoral service.

"We have received just a lot of good feedback about it," he said. "Especially in the E.R. itself. When there's an emotional situation, the staff doesn't have time to deal with the family. This service frees them to do the job they're trained to do."

MICHENER

Readers won't be disappointed. Midland and West Texas play a role in his book. And maybe occasionally a local personality might be glimpsed in some of the characters he developed.

He has a quiet voice tinged with warmth and friendliness. Some Midlanders remember Michener as a gentleman with a brilliant mind that absorbs everything.

Reaction to "Texas" has been mixed, he said. "I've received 40 to 50 letters. You tend to hear from people who really like it or who don't like it at all. Some critics have not liked it and have said so."

As the author of books on countries such as Poland, and other states such as Maryland, Hawaii and Colorado, Michener said Texas brought several surprises. He was already toying with the idea of Texas as his next project when former Gov. Bill Clements invited him to write a book for the state's sesquicentennial celebration, which starts in 1986. One of Michener's ideas coincided with that of Clements', and the author agreed to do the book.

Educated in Scotland, Michener said he wasn't surprised about the Scottish-Irish influence in the state's history. But he was less informed about the Germans' contributions.

"Of every 100 Irish who came to Texas, at least 97 were Scotsmen who had moved through Ireland. They were Presbyterian settlers. Coming down through Pennsylvania, they were a sturdy lot. But Texas also got just as good a people from the Episcopalian south and the Baptists and Methodists. Texas is a rich mix."

He discovered that "Texas is a moving state, there's so much happening here." He liked it so well that he has moved to Austin permanently from Pennsyvlvania. "Texas has its own special quality," Michener said.

THERE WAS much about the state's history and its people that left a mark on him. "If one looked at the Alamo period, I was tremendously impressed by the fact that those men had been in Texas only a few weeks. They had cast their lot with a new world," Michener said.

His novels are known for their accurate historical data, and Michener spent two years researching his book about the Lone Star state. "I really did my homework. I came away with a real feeling for Midland, Odessa and Lubbock and Alpine. I've been to the little oil towns and out to Mentone. I was to a lot of sites where they were drilling."

Several West Texans helped Michener with his research and he is "very fond of quite a few Midlanders and Odessans," he said, listing John Cox, B.J. Pevehouse, Martin Allday, Bill Blakemore, the people at Odessa's Globe Theatre and "that A&M guy, Claytie (Williams), a good friend of mine."

Allday, a member of the Centennial Commission, said he arranged for Michener to interview about 15 people. "He's a superfine gentleman, a remarkable person." During the interview process, Allday said he didn't notice Michener "taking copious notes. He really did spend a lot of time in learning about Texas."

Williams spent several days at various times with Michener, teaching him about the oil business and imparting some personal knowledge of West Texas' history. "He's like a sponge, he absorbs information from everywhere. He's a keenly intelligent man and has a wonderful memory. I enjoyed being around his brain," Williams said.

The independent oilman-businessman took Michener to his offices in Denver, let him listen during exploration meetings to learn about the drilling and production end of the petroleum business and then flew him all over far West Texas in a helicopter to let Michener view the terrain.

Michener and his wife, Mari, met Williams three years ago when they attended one of his cattle sales. Clayton Williams Sr., a noted Texas historian, was still alive then and the son recalled that Michener and his father talked history. After his father died, it was Michener who suggested that an endowment in the elder Williams' name be established at Texas A&M University Press. With a total contribution of $250,000 from the two men, the endowment was set up to fund authors to write about periods of Texas history about which little is known, said Williams.

MICHENER SAID his characters are developed after doing a lot of reading, but a touch of Clayton Williams might be seen in Ransom Rusk. "If Clayton appeared at all (in "Texas") it was the financial operations of Rusk," he said.

Michener, at 78, is spending about five hours a day on another novel — Alaska, which won't be completed for two or three years, he said.

Abandoned as an infant in Pennsylvania and raised by a Quaker widow — Mabel Michener — the author learned about the work ethic at an early age. However, he didn't become a published author until the age of 40. And each book since has been a winner.

"I don't know what makes my books successful," he said. "I'm an enthusiastic worker and I enjoy every bit of it."

It's not just talent that makes an author successful, he said, but luck. "I'm damned good at what I do, but there are others who are just as good on whom good fortune has not fallen. For a few of us in the writing business, the rewards can be very substantial. The average good writer has a tough time.

Sometimes, the writer just has to keep trying. "There's hope for us late bloomers," he said with a laugh in reference to his first book being published 38 years ago. "I indicate what can happen if someone sticks to what he does best and sweats it out."

Ticket sales to the dinner ended Friday, but a few are still available by calling the Centennial office, 686-1985, before noon Monday.

DEBT

A slowdown in consumer spending already appears to be under way. The Commerce Department reported that Americans sharply reduced their spending in October from the month before — a 0.9 percent drop that was the largest month-to-month decline in 25 years.

Athough part of the decline reflected the end of the summer clearance sales on new automobiles, many economists see the drop as a harbinger of a coming slowdown in spending that will extend well into 1986.

"We think consumers have overextended themselves. Because of that debt, they are likely to back off major purchases this Christmas. It doesn't mean they aren't going to buy, it means they won't buy as much as they would have otherwise," said David Wyss of Data Resources Inc., a Lexington, Mass., economic forecasting service.

"You will see the consumer backing away from taking on new obligations. The level of debt has reached the point where it will start to scare the consumer. He'll say, 'I've got to start saving some money,'" Wyss added.

Still, retailers have not yet detected any major dropoff in sales — and say that business has been good since the Christmas shopping season began the day after Thanksgiving.

They concede that one reason for the heavy initial sales may be because this year's Christmas shopping period is shorter than usual because Thanksgiving came so late in the month.

"In essence, we outperformed the week after Thanksgiving compared to last year," said Ernest Arms, a spokesman for Sears Roebuck & Co. "We're cautiously optimstic about the balance of the Christmas season."

The caution is because "sales have been pretty flat throughout the industry," Arms said. "When consumers reach a certain point (of debt), known only to them, they will hold back."

"We've seen some modest gains this year. We expect a pretty good Christmas season but not a bang-up one," said Duncan Nuir, a spokesman for J.C. Penney Co. "Our credit card usage is up, but so is our delinquency rate — but we don't see it as a major problem," he added.

Spokesman for both retail chains said that the vast majority of purchases in their stores are put on credit cards.

Beryl Sprinkel, the Reagan administration's chief economist whose forecasts usually refect more optimism than those of private analysts, claims consumers have an uncanny ability to pay off their loans — even in periods of recession.

"The record of consumers' ability to handle debt is extremely high," Sprinkel said in an interview, claiming he doesn't anticipate any slowdown in consumer spending in 1986 despite the high level of consumer debt.

But other economists point to rising rates of mortgage foreclosures, delinquencies and personal bankruptcies — and enormous credit card debt — to suggest that U.S. consumers are already overextended.

In the first six months of 1985, consumer loan losses at major banks amounted to nearly $1 billion, double the year before, according to the American Bankers Association.

Some 3.5 percent of all personal loans are now overdue and $2 billion in debt on bank-issued credit cards is delinquent, the association said.

Personal bankruptcies in the first half of 1985 were up 6 percent.

"We feel that in the near term, consumers will retrench," said Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson Lehman Bros. "For most of this year, consumers have been relying on savings and credit to pay for their own deficit spending. The savings rate is simply going to have to come up."

But he adds that the debt picture is not as bleak as it first appears. The official government figures cloak the fact that many people have refinanced their homes at lower interest rates, that car loans are now for longer periods than in the past — leading to lower monthly payments — and that many credit card holders pay off their balances each month.

Stewart's judicial career was marked by a keen wit on the bench and a facile writing style that yielded many judicial equivalents of one-liners.

The most famous example of that style was contained in an obscenity decision. Stewart admitted being unable to come up with a working defintion of obscenity but added, "I know it when I see it."

He once described his World War II duty as a Naval Reserve officer as "floating around on a sea of 100 percent octane, bored to death 99 percent of the time and scared to death 1 percent."

He was born Jan. 23, 1915, in Jackson, Mich., but grew up in Cincinnati, in an atmosphere of law. His father, a prominent lawyer and one-time mayor of Cincinnati, once served as a member of the Ohio Supreme Court.

Stewart attended Hotchkiss School in Connecticut, then Yale and the Yale Law School.

OPEC

"The next months will be very difficult indeed," Subroto said. "With a slack world economy and production maximization on the part of producers outside OPEC we would face a situation that could generate such intense downward pressure that the price structure might not withstand.

"It is high time that the other important parties in the oil industry shoulder their part of the responsibility that is fast becoming too heavy for OPEC to carry alone."

He also called for oil-consuming nations to accept an OPEC invitation to meet to discuss price stability.

"It would be in their best interest to join hands with oil producers," Subroto said.

He predicted a "disastrous situation" throughout the world if oil prices were to fall sharply. He said Western banks and oil companies would suffer, international trade would decline and unemployment would rise.

Other OPEC ministers, including Kuwait's Ali Khalifa al-Sabah and Nigeria's Tam David-West, also have said oil prices are likely to fall substantially.

On Friday, David-West said he "can see" prices falling to $20 a barrel in the near future, although he stressed that he did not expect "any big disaster."

Thielman

AUSTIN (AP) — FBI agents in Las Vegas on Saturday arrested an Austin home builder who allegedly tried to blow up a jetliner carrying his wife and three daughters in order to collect their life insurance benefits.

Albert Lee Thielman, 34, was arrested as he approached the Muse Air ticket counter at McCarran International Airport at about 6:45 a.m. PST, said John Dalseg, the FBI agent in charge of the San Antonio office.

According to FBI officials in Las Vegas, Thielman was arrested without incident and was taken to the Clark County Jail to await arraignment.

Pat Foran, special agent in charge of the FBI's Las Vegas office, said Thielman was casually dressed and carrying a canvas gym bag. Foran refused to say if Thielman, who had been considered armed and dangerous, was carrying a weapon.

Dalseg said Thielman was arrested as a result of a tip. He and Foran declined to elaborate.

A federal arrest warrant was issued in Austin Friday for Theilman, whom authorities say is suspected of trying to kill his family to collect life insurance benefits to pay off debts from gambling, drugs and infidelity.

The bomb exploded at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport as baggage handlers prepared to unload the plane after a flight from Austin. None of the 147 passengers and seven crew members on board was injured.

Thielman, who was questioned after the explosion, had not been seen by authorities since Nov. 21, Dalseg said.

Dalseg declined to say whether Thielman, who worked for an Austin prefabricated home dealership, was under surveillance when he disappeared.

"If I knew where he was I wouldn't be here. I'd arrest him," he told a news conference Friday.

The warrant charges Thielman with placing a destructive device on an aircraft, a federal crime punishable by up to 20 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Dalseg said Thielman told investigators he had had a "lousy year," acknowledging $12,000 in credit card debts in addition to mortgage payments, bank loans and car notes.

An FBI source said Thielman had gambled heavily on sports during 1984, betting up to $2,000 a week.

Dalseg said each family member was covered by $250,000 in flight insurance on a policy written through American Express. Thielman was listed as the beneficiary. State Farm Insurance has $150,000 life insurance policies on Thielman and his wife, according to the FBI.

STATE in brief

Prairie dog war rages

AMARILLO (AP) — Builders who five weeks ago declared war on more than 500 prairie dogs occupying a construction project say the battle is still raging with no end in sight.

Attempts to poison the prairie dogs with cyanide pellets failed, and builders now are trying to drive them away by bulldozing their burrows.

"We've got the big guns, but they have got the numbers," said Davis.

When tractors and bulldozers began clearing the brush-covered site in November, prairie dogs delayed construction for two days after they gnawed through two tractor tires.

What they're doing now is digging holes through the dirt we pile and place the concrete foundations on," Davis said.

"We spend a lot of time pouring the dirt, leveling it and compacting it. After the dogs dig through it, we have to start all over."

Girl saves man's hand

BELTON (AP) — A 16-year-old girl home from school suffering flu symptoms kept a carpenter from bleeding to death after his hand was partially severed by an electric saw, the carpenter says.

Valerie Huff of Belton was watching television and doing homework when she heard Eddie Cashion, a Temple carpenter who had been working on a nearby house, banging at her door Monday.

"It scared the daylights out of me, but I went to the door and opened it," Miss Huff said.

She called an ambulance, then made a tourniquet with the bandanna, some dish towels and a pencil and she tied it around his arm.

"Everything she did seems to be the right thing," said Dr. Dennis Lynch, a plastic surgeon who reattached Cashion's hand.

No teacher tests in Houston

AUSTIN (AP) — Some 7,000 Houston educators do not have to take the state teacher competency test in March because they already have passed a similar local test, the State Board of Education decided Saturday.

But more than 200,000 educators must take the Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers on March 10. As a result of the 1984 school reform act, educators must pass the exam in order to keep their jobs.

But lawmakers said local school district tests could be substituted for the statewide exam if the State Board of Education determined the local test was as difficult as the state test.

The Texas Education Agency checked by comparing results from 672 Houston Independent School District educators who had taken samples of the state test and the district's Functional Academic Skills Test.

"Our conclusion is that the FAST is at least as difficult if not more difficult than the TECAT," State Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby told the board.

Times Herald editor quits

DALLAS — Dallas Times Herald Editor Will D. Jarrett announced Friday that he is resigning at the end of the month to launch a communications company.

"Everyone at the Times Herald thanks Will for the leadership and dedication he has demonstrated over many years," Publisher Arthur E. Wible said. "We obviously wish him well in his desire to form a new communications company."

Wible named Managing Editor Larry Tarleton acting editor effective Monday.

Ex-student held in fire

NEW CANEY (AP) — A former student has been accused of setting a Dec. 1 fire that destroyed two-thirds of New Caney High School, authorities said.

Lee Alvin Campbell, 21, of Porter, was arrested Friday morning and jailed without bond on a charge of arson, said Montgomery County Fire Marshal G.D. Mangum.

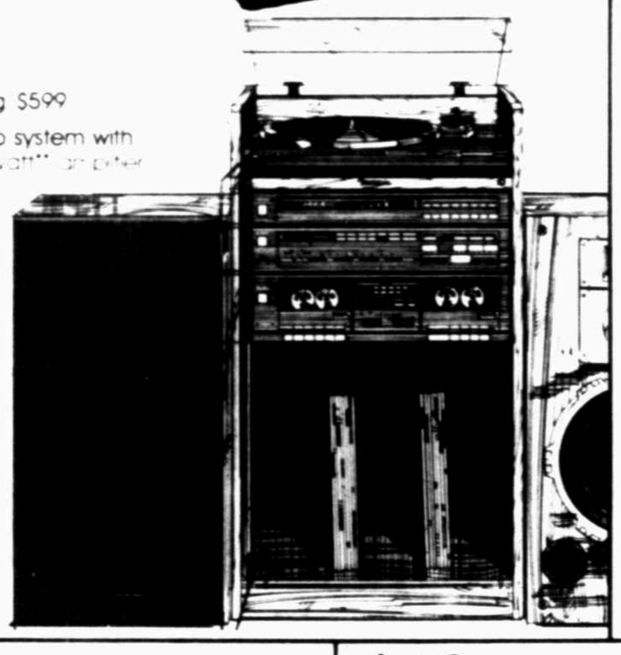

"He was talking about the school being on fire when no one else knew about it and...he actually turned in the fire alarm himself under an assumed name," Mangum said.

PASTORS

Wayne Stephens. "He has been with me the whole time."

Mrs. Stephens was referring to Rev. James E. Barrington of the Primitive Baptist Church, one of 18 pastors participating in MMH's Emergency Room Volunteer Chaplains Program, headed by hospital Chaplain Alan Williams.

Mrs. Stephens, still emotionally overcome by the tragedy, spoke in a faltering voice the praise of Barrington and the E.R. program.

"I WAS ALL alone," she said. "All my relatives live out of town and I didn't have anyone. This pastor was here to help. He helped me pray, and believe me, I had a lot of praying to do that night. It didn't turn out like I wanted, but I feel better." Mrs. Stephens' 11-year-old daughter, Cassandra, was not involved in the accident.

Mrs. Stephens' sister, Donna Reese, who has been visiting from San Angelo this week, spoke highly of Barrington.

"He was waiting at the door; he's been here the whole week for Joyce and he conducted the most beautiful service for Kenneth," she said. "This man made the difference."

Barrington, who has been pastor of Primitive for 25 years, stated that he almost decided not to volunteer the night of the accident.

"I was feeling real sick Saturday night and I told my wife that I wouldn't go to the E.R. on Monday," he said. "But at the last minute, I decided I would go in for awhile and if everything was quiet, I'd go back home."

"When I walked into the emergency area, the first person I met was a nurse who said, 'I'm glad you're here — we've had a terrible accident.'" The accident occurred on Interstate 20 three miles east of Midland when a pickup truck driven by Stephens, 33, was involved in a collision with a truck-tractor about 8 p.m. Monday.

THE YOUNGER Stephens was pronounced dead Tuesday morning, with Stephens still unconscious and unaware of his son's death as of press time. Stephens suffers from head injuries, broken ribs and legs and lacerations of the liver and lung, according to Mrs. Stephens.

Tragedies as in the Stephens' case, are not the norm, according to Rev. Jonathon Holmer of Hope Lutheran Church.

"Most of the cases I've been involved with have not been real traumatic," he said. "There were, of course, a few suicide attempts and instances where people were bashed up pretty seriously, but usually there were family members present that helped out.

"Overall, it's been a very warm, very positive experience."

Holmer recalled one visit to the E.R. when he was "ministered to."

"I went as a patient," he said. "I had cut my foot pretty bad back in August. The pastor who was on duty that evening and I joked around and eventually got into theological debates on the Trinity."

Even Barrington admits that the E.R. ministry has its lighter moments.

"One night I was on duty and Police Chief Wayne Gideon brought his wife. She was having minor surgery and so he wasn't overly worried about her. We wound up having a good social visit."

Barrington added, however, that when tragedy strikes, those families get top priority.

"THE SERIOUSNESS of the case dictates the needs at the time," he said. "If a woman is in a situation where she is told that her husband has a brain hemorrhage and will only live a couple of days — she needs support right at the moment she is told."

Barrington was referring to an actual case in which he was with the woman "when the bomb dropped."

"I sometimes help the nurses," said Holmer. "We don't do anything medically, but we get supplies for them, make phone calls — just help out in any way we can."

"When there is traumatic injury, then the family starts to flow in," said Barrington. "But when it's just a scrape or bruise — there's not much you can do in the way of ministering."

Nor does every patient want to be ministered to.

"I can tell when they don't want me to talk with them," said Barrington. "I just thank them and politely bow out."

Holmer added that he expected much more of the "we don't need you" attitudes, but has found that on the whole, most people have been appreciative of the service.

The Volunteers service was the brainchild of Williams, who experienced similar programs while working as the chaplain in an Edmonton, Alberta hospital.

"WHEN I FIRST came to MMH two years ago, I wanted to start this program," he said. "Before we had this, there was no one physically present in the E.R. for pastoral care, although I am always on call."

The program currently includes 18 volunteers "from all denominations" who must pass an eight-hour training course, set up as four two-hour sessions.

Holmer stated that he learned things about the emergency area that he was not familiar with, such as terminology, who is who on the medical staff and, in general, "what goes on there."

Established since June, Williams is currently working on the development of still another E.R. program for lay people.

"That was another program that I had in mind when I came to MMH," he said.

Williams is enthusiastic about the pastoral service.

"We have received just a lot of good feedback about it," he said. "Especially in the E.R. itself. When there's an emotional situation, the staff doesn't have time to deal with the family. This service frees them to do the job they're trained to do."

and with several Midlanders and Odessans while researching the book.

Readers won't be disappointed. Midland and West Texas play a role in his book. And maybe occasionally a local personality might be glimpsed in some of the characters he developed.

He has a quiet voice tinged with warmth and friendliness. Some Midlanders remember Michener as a gentleman with a brilliant mind that absorbs everything.

Reaction to "Texas" has been mixed, he said. "I've received 40 to 50 letters. You tend to hear from people who really like it or who don't like it at all. Some critics have not liked it and have said so."

As the author of books on countries such as Poland, and other states such as Maryland, Hawaii and Colorado, Michener said Texas brought several surprises. He was already toying with the idea of Texas as his next project when former Gov. Bill Clements invited him to write a book for the state's sesquicentennial celebration, which starts in 1986. One of Michener's ideas coincided with that of Clements', and the author agreed to do the book.

Educated in Scotland, Michener said he wasn't surprised about the Scottish-Irish influence in the state's history. But he was less informed about the Germans' contributions.

"Of every 100 Irish who came to Texas, at least 97 were Scotsmen who had moved through Ireland. They were Presbyterian settlers. Coming down through Pennsylvania, they were a sturdy lot. But Texas also got just as good a people from the Episcopalian south and the Baptists and Methodists. Texas is a rich mix."

He discovered that "Texas is a moving state, there's so much happening here." He liked it so well that he has moved to Austin permanently from Pennsylvania. "Texas has its own special quality," Michener said.

THERE WAS much about the state's history and its people that left a mark on him. "If one looked at the Alamo period, I was tremendously impressed by the fact that those men had been in Texas only a few weeks. They had cast their lot with a new world," Michener said.

His novels are known for their accurate historical data, and Michener spent two years researching his book about the Lone Star state. "I really did my homework. I came away with a real feeling for Midland, Odessa and Lubbock and Alpine. I've been to the little oil towns and out to Mentone. I was to a lot of sites where they were drilling."

Several West Texans helped Michener with his research and he is "very fond of quite a few Midlanders and Odessans," he said, listing John Cox, B.J. Pevehouse, Martin Allday, Bill Blakemore, the people at Odessa's Globe Theatre and "that A&M guy, Claytie (Williams), a good friend of mine."

Allday, a member of the Centennial Commission, said he arranged for Michener to interview about 15 people. "He's a superfine gentleman, a remarkable person." During the interview process, Allday said he didn't notice Michener "taking copious notes. He really did spend a lot of time in learning about Texas."

Williams spent several days at various times with Michener, teaching him about the oil business and imparting some personal knowledge of West Texas' history. "He's like a sponge, he absorbs information from everywhere. He's a keenly intelligent man and has a wonderful memory. I enjoyed being around his brain," Williams said.

The independent oilman-businessman took Michener to his offices in Denver, let him listen during exploration meetings to learn about the drilling and production end of the petroleum business and then flew him all over far West Texas in a helicopter to let Michener view the terrain.

Michener and his wife, Mari, met Williams three years ago when they attended one of his cattle sales. Clayton Williams Sr., a noted Texas historian, was still alive then and the son recalled that Michener and his father talked history. After his father died, it was Michener who suggested that an endowment in the elder Williams' name be established at Texas A&M University Press. With a total contribution of $250,000 from the two men, the endowment was set up to fund authors to write about periods of Texas history about which little is known, said Williams.

MICHENER SAID his characters are developed after doing a lot of reading, but a touch of Clayton Williams might be seen in Ransom Rusk. "If Clayton appeared at all (in 'Texas') it was the financial operations of Rusk," he said.

Michener, at 78, is spending about five hours a day on another novel — Alaska, which won't be completed for two or three years, he said.

Abandoned as an infant in Pennsylvania and raised by a Quaker widow — Mabel Michener — the author learned about the work ethic at an early age. However, he didn't become a published author until the age of 40. And each book since has been a winner.

"I don't know what makes my books successful," he said. "I'm an enthusiastic worker and I enjoy every bit of it.

It's not just talent that makes an author successful, he said, but luck. "I'm damned good at what I do, but there are others who are just as good on whom good fortune has not fallen. For a few of us in the writing business, the rewards can be very substantial. The average good writer has a tough time.

Sometimes, the writer just has to keep trying. "There's hope for us late bloomers," he said with a laugh in reference to his first book being published 38 years ago. "I indicate what can happen if someone sticks to what he does best and sweats it out."

Ticket sales to the dinner ended Friday, but a few are still available by calling the Centennial office, 686-1985, before noon Monday.

A slowdown in consumer spending already appears to be under way. The Commerce Department reported that Americans sharply reduced their spending in October from the month before — a 0.9 percent drop that was the largest month-to-month decline in 25 years.

Athough part of the decline reflected the end of the summer clearance sales on new automobiles, many economists see the drop as a harbinger of a coming slowdown in spending that will extend well into 1986.

"We think consumers have overextended themselves. Because of that debt, they are likely to back off major purchases this Christmas. It doesn't mean they aren't going to buy, it means they won't buy as much as they would have otherwise," said David Wyss of Data Resources Inc., a Lexington, Mass., economic forecasting service.

"You will see the consumer backing away from taking on new obligations. The level of debt has reached the point where it will start to scare the consumer. He'll say, 'I've got to start saving some money,'" Wyss added.

Still, retailers have not yet detected any major dropoff in sales — and say that business has been good since the Christmas shopping season began the day after Thanksgiving.

They concede that one reason for the heavy initial sales may be because this year's Christmas shopping period is shorter than usual because Thanksgiving came so late in the month.

"In essence, we outperformed the week after Thanksgiving compared to last year," said Ernest Arms, a spokesman for Sears Roebuck & Co. "We're cautiously optimstic about the balance of the Christmas season."

The caution is because "sales have been pretty flat throughout the industry," Arms said. "When consumers reach a certain point (of debt), known only to them, they will hold back."

"We've seen some modest gains this year. We expect a pretty good Christmas season but not a bang-up one," said Duncan Nuir, a spokesman for J.C. Penney Co. "Our credit card usage is up, but so is our delinquency rate — but we don't see it as a major problem," he added.

Spokesman for both retail chains said that the vast majority of purchases in their stores are put on credit cards.

Beryl Sprinkel, the Reagan administration's chief economist whose forecasts usually refect more optimism than those of private analysts, claims consumers have an uncanny ability to pay off their loans — even in periods of recession.

"The record of consumers' ability to handle debt is extremely high," Sprinkel said in an interview, claiming he doesn't anticipate any slowdown in consumer spending in 1986 despite the high level of consumer debt.

But other economists point to rising rates of mortgage foreclosures, delinquencies and personal bankruptcies — and enormous credit card debt — to suggest that U.S. consumers are already overextended.

In the first six months of 1985, consumer loan losses at major banks amounted to nearly $1 billion, double the year before, according to the American Bankers Association.

Some 3.5 percent of all personal loans are now overdue and $2 billion in debt on bank-issued credit cards is delinquent, the association said.

Personal bankruptcies in the first half of 1985 were up 6 percent.

"We feel that in the near term, consumers will retrench," said Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson Lehman Bros. "For most of this year, consumers have been relying on savings and credit to pay for their own deficit spending. The savings rate is simply going to have to come up."

But he adds that the debt picture is not as bleak as it first appears. The official government figures cloak the fact that many people have refinanced their homes at lower interest rates, that car loans are now for longer periods than in the past — leading to lower monthly payments — and that many credit card holders pay off their balances each month.

Stewart's judicial career was marked by a keen wit on the bench and a facile writing style that yielded many judicial equivalents of one-liners.

The most famous example of that style was contained in an obscenity decision. Stewart admitted being unable to come up with a working defintion of obscenity but added, "I know it when I see it."

He once described his World War II duty as a Naval Reserve officer as "floating around on a sea of 100 percent octane, bored to death 99 percent of the time and scared to death 1 percent."

He was born Jan. 23, 1915, in Jackson, Mich., but grew up in Cincinnati, in an atmosphere of law. His father, a prominent lawyer and one-time mayor of Cincinnati, once served as a member of the Ohio Supreme Court.

Stewart attended Hotchkiss School in Connecticut, then Yale and the Yale Law School.

"The next months will be very difficult indeed," Subroto said. "With a slack world economy and production maximization on the part of producers outside OPEC we would face a situation that could generate such intense downward pressure that the price structure might not withstand.

"It is high time that the other important parties in the oil industry shoulder their part of the responsibility that is fast becoming too heavy for OPEC to carry alone."

He also called for oil-consuming nations to accept an OPEC invitation to meet to discuss price stability.

"It would be in their best interest to join hands with oil producers," Subroto said.

He predicted a "disastrous situation" throughout the world if oil prices were to fall sharply. He said Western banks and oil companies would suffer, international trade would decline and unemployment would rise.

Other OPEC ministers, including Kuwait's Ali Khalifa al-Sabah and Nigeria's Tam David-West, also have said oil prices are likely to fall substantially.

On Friday, David-West said he "can see" prices falling to $20 a barrel in the near future, although he stressed that he did not expect "any big disaster."

Thielman

AUSTIN (AP) — FBI agents in Las Vegas on Saturday arrested an Austin home builder who allegedly tried to blow up a jetliner carrying his wife and three daughters in order to collect their life insurance benefits.

Albert Lee Thielman, 34, was arrested as he approached the Muse Air ticket counter at McCarran International Airport at about 6:45 a.m. PST, said John Dalseg, the FBI agent in charge of the San Antonio office.

According to FBI officials in Las Vegas, Thielman was arrested without incident and was taken to the Clark County Jail to await arraignment.

Pat Foran, special agent in charge of the FBI's Las Vegas office, said Thielman was casually dressed and carrying a canvas gym bag. Foran refused to say if Thielman, who had been considered armed and dangerous, was carrying a weapon.

Dalseg said Thielman was arrested as a result of a tip. He and Foran declined to elaborate.

A federal arrest warrant was issued in Austin Friday for Theilman, whom authorities say is suspected of trying to kill his family to collect life insurance benefits to pay off debts from gambling, drugs and infidelity.

The bomb exploded at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport as baggage handlers prepared to unload the plane after a flight from Austin. None of the 147 passengers and seven crew members on board was injured.

Thielman, who was questioned after the explosion, had not been seen by authorities since Nov. 21, Dalseg said.

Dalseg declined to say whether Thielman, who worked for an Austin prefabricated home dealership, was under surveillance when he disappeared.

"If I knew where he was I wouldn't be here. I'd arrest him," he told a news conference Friday.

The warrant charges Thielman with placing a destructive device on an aircraft, a federal crime punishable by up to 20 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Dalseg said Thielman told investigators he had had a "lousy year," acknowledging $12,000 in credit card debts in addition to mortgage payments, bank loans and car notes.

An FBI source said Thielman had gambled heavily on sports during 1984, betting up to $2,000 a week.

Dalseg said each family member was covered by $250,000 in flight insurance on a policy written through American Express. Thielman was listed as the beneficiary. State Farm Insurance has $150,000 life insurance policies on Thielman and his wife, according to the FBI.

STATE in brief

Prairie dog war rages

AMARILLO (AP) — Builders who five weeks ago declared war on more than 500 prairie dogs occupying a construction project say the battle is still raging with no end in sight.

Attempts to poison the prairie dogs with cyanide pellets failed, and builders now are trying to drive them away by bulldozing their burrows.

"We've got the big guns, but they have got the numbers," said Davis.

When tractors and bulldozers began clearing the brush-covered site in November, prairie dogs delayed construction for two days after they gnawed through two tractor tires.

"What they're doing now is digging holes through the dirt we pile and place the concrete foundations on," Davis said.

"We spend a lot of time pouring the dirt, leveling it and compacting it. After the dogs dig through it, we have to start all over."

BELTON (AP) — A 16-year-old girl home from school suffering flu symptoms kept a carpenter from bleeding to death after his hand was partially severed by an electric saw, the carpenter says.

Valerie Huff of Belton was watching television and doing homework when she heard Eddie Cashion, a Temple carpenter who had been working on a nearby house, banging at her door Monday.

"It scared the daylights out of me, but I went to the door and opened it," Miss Huff said.

She called an ambulance, then made a tourniquet with the bandanna, some dish towels and a pencil and she tied it around his arm.

"Everything she did seems to be the right thing," said Dr. Dennis Lynch, a plastic surgeon who reattached Cashion's hand.

No teacher tests in Houston

AUSTIN (AP) — Some 7,000 Houston educators do not have to take the state teacher competency test in March because they already have passed a similar local test, the State Board of Education decided Saturday.

But more than 200,000 educators must take the Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers on March 10. As a result of the 1984 school reform act, educators must pass the exam in order to keep their jobs.

But lawmakers said local school district tests could be substituted for the statewide exam if the State Board of Education determined the local test was as difficult as the state test.

The Texas Education Agency checked by comparing results from 672 Houston Independent School District educators who had taken samples of the state test and the district's Functional Academic Skills Test.

"Our conclusion is that the FAST is at least as difficult if not more difficult than the TECAT," State Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby told the board.

Times Herald editor quits

DALLAS — Dallas Times Herald Editor Will D. Jarrett announced Friday that he is resigning at the end of the month to launch a communications company.

"Everyone at the Times Herald thanks Will for the leadership and dedication he has demonstrated over many years," Publisher Arthur E. Wible said. "We obviously wish him well in his desire to form a new communications company."

Wible named Managing Editor Larry Tarleton acting editor effective Monday.

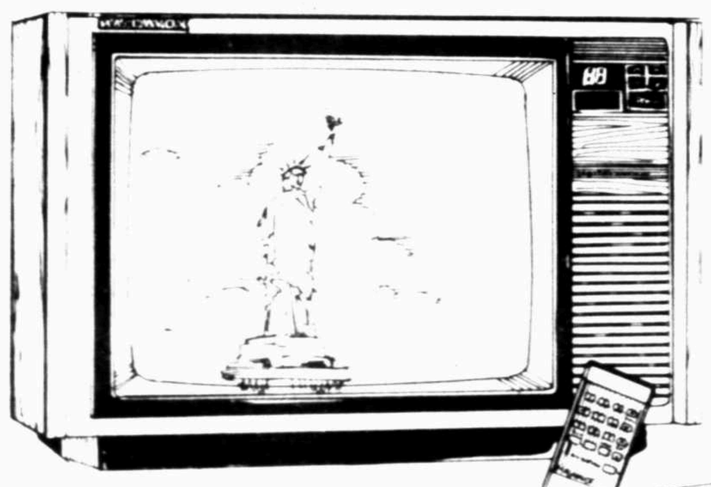

Ex-student held in fire

NEW CANEY (AP) — A former student has been accused of setting a Dec. 1 fire that destroyed two-thirds of New Caney High School, authorities said.

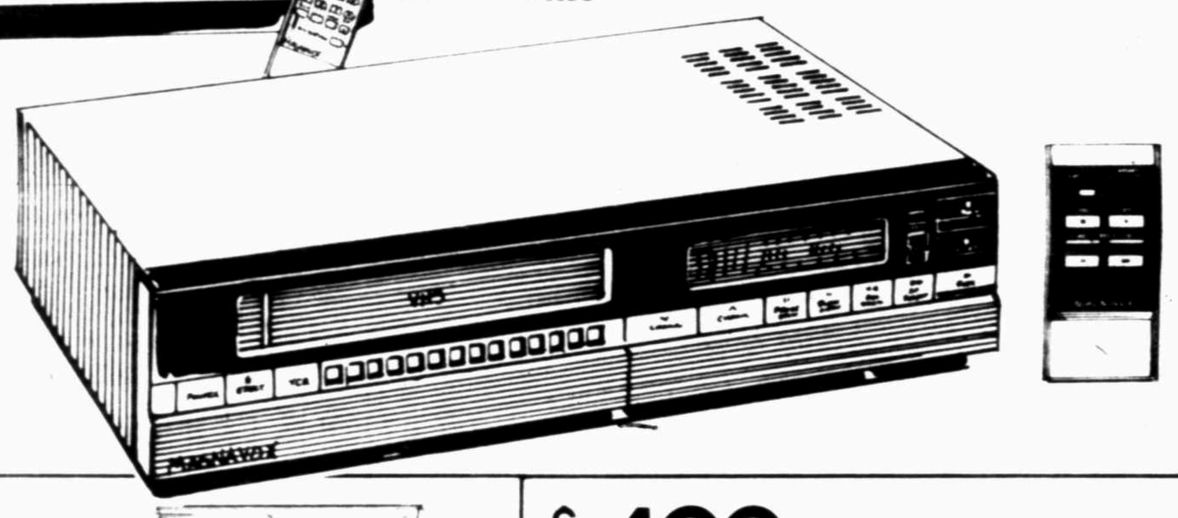

Lee Alvin Campbell, 21, of Porter, was arrested Friday morning and jailed without bond on a charge of arson, said Montgomery County Fire Marshal G.D. Mangum.

"He was talking about the school being on fire when no one else knew about it and...he actually turned in the fire alarm himself under an assumed name," Mangum said.

Congress marches closer to balanced-budget amendment

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite serious misgivings, Congress appears to have begun an unstoppable march toward enactment this week of watershed legislation to force an end to federal budget deficits by fiscal 1991.

"This was an idea that wouldn't die," Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, one of the principal Senate sponsors of the plan, said after congressional negotiators ended a two-month stalemate Friday and tentatively settled on a compromise version of the package.

Additional details will be worked out Monday and congressional leaders predict that final action by the full House and Senate could come as early as Wednesday. President Reagan has endorsed the concept of the measure.

But some legislators are unhappy about what they are about to do.

"It is absolutely irresponsible as public policy, but as a result of our public pronouncements about our new-found courage, we cannot back down," Sen. Nancy Landon Kassebaum, R-Kan., said just hours before the negotiators announced their settlement.

"After two tortuous months of a regimented forced march, we have reached the outskirts of a budgetary Moscow — and it has started to snow," she said.

In general, the plan would revise the congressional budget process and mandate automatic spending cuts if Congress and the White House fail to meet a series of statutory ceilings on budget deficits aimed at reducing the government's annual red ink from the current $200 billion to zero by fiscal 1991.

To begin on that path, the plan will require forced spending reductions of about $11.6 billion in the current fiscal year that began Oct. 1.

Supporters say the plan and its unprecedented threat of automatic spending cuts will impose necessary budget discipline on Congress and the White House. Critics say it is a dangerous public relations gimmick.

The balanced budget measure was little more than a vague idea in mid-September when Congress was grappling with legislation to raise the national debt limit — the government's borrowing authority — above the politically symbolic level of $2 trillion.

Legislators reluctant to vote for the debt limit increase without an accompanying gesture showing that they were serious about deficit reduction stampeded toward the balanced budget plan offered by Gramm and Sens. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., and Ernest Hollings, D-S.C.

The budget plan was attached as an amendment to the debt limit legislation and the specter of government default was used as a club to force action on the budget plan.

The stalemate has left government finances in turmoil and while a temporary increase in the debt limit expired Friday, Treasury Department officials said the government had enough money to avoid default into mid-week.

"This legislation, I think all of us know, was born in frustration over the deficit," said Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., one of those who negotiated the compromise.

Ironically, it will be the president and not Congress who gets the first exposure to the implications of the new budget procedures. Some in Congress have predicted those implications will force Reagan to drop his opposition to tax increases as a means of trimming deficits.

Under the budget plan, Reagan will have to send Congress a budget by next Jan. 25 that projects a deficit of no more than $144 billion for the 1987 fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, 1986. The president has said he wants no tax increases and he wants to increase military spending by 3 percent after accounting for inflation.

"I believe he'll have a difficult time producing a budget" under the new plan, said Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee. "It'll be hard and I wish him luck."

Reagan may lose bitterly fought tax 'revolution'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thanks to an unenthusiastic public and a skeptical Congress, President Reagan is perilously close to losing the tax-overhaul plan that just six months ago he hailed as the spark that would set off a second American revolution.

Without some monumental arm-twisting by the president, say leaders of Congress, the House just might reject the bill when it comes to a final vote this week. That probably would kill any chance of major tax changes before 1987.

But in his weekly radio address on Saturday, Reagan signaled a determination to continue his fight for tax changes. He urged the House to pass an amended version of his tax proposal written by Democrats on the House Ways and Means Committee.

"While the proposals before the House are far from perfect, they do represent an essential step toward a tax code that is fairer, simpler and encourages greater growth," Reagan said. "I hope the House will vote yes next week and allow the Senate to consider debate and to improve this important measure."

The House is also scheduled to vote on a substitute tax plan put together by the Republican leadership.

The congressional bills follow the broad outlines of Reagan's proposal: Either would cut taxes for most individuals, raise them for most corporations, snare some of the millionaires and giant corporations that have been able to dodge the tax collector, and sweep millions of lower-income Americans off the income-tax rolls altogether.

Delivering the Democrats' reponse to Reagan's radio address, Ways and Means Chairman Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., said the bill "carries more tax reform and more tax fairness than any bill in our history.

"What has not changed over the last eight months is the president's determination to move a reform tax bill through the House this year, nor has mine."

In his original proposal, Reagan recommended that a significant share of the total tax burden be shifted to corporations, chiefly by repealing the 10-percent investment credit and by scaling back deductions allowed for depreciation of machinery and buildings. Democrats did that and more; while Reagan's bill would cost corporations $123 billion over five years, the Democratic plan would cost them (and benefit individuals) about $140 billion.

The big increase in business taxes is the chief reason most of the 182 House Republicans are likely to vote against the Democratic bill, even though Reagan has urged passage as a first step toward tax reform with the notion that the GOP-controlled Senate can be counted on to improve it.

But almost to a man, Republican leaders are rejecting that approach. Why should a member of Congress vote for a bill that Reagan himself would veto? asked Rep. Richard Cheney, R-Wyo., a Reagan loyalist and head of the House Republican Policy Committee.

House Republican Leader Robert Michel of Illinois said "I have a personal trauma" about going against Reagan for the first time on a piece of major legislation. However, he emphasized that he will vote against the Democratic bill despite the president's pleas.

Michel's district is suffering through a recession centered on farm and import problems. He finds little political sense in voting for a tax bill that he judges would worsen his district's plight by making it more difficult for businesses to create jobs.

Many other Republicans — and many Democrats, as well — find themselves in the same dilemma. That's why Michel and other members of the GOP leadership rushed to put together a plan that would give individuals smaller tax cuts than either Reagan's or the Democrats' bill but also would be kinder to business. It would cost corporations an additional $100 billion over five years.

But since Democrats outnumber Republicans by a 253-182 margin, and since the Ways and Means Committee struggled for two months in putting together its tax plan, there is little chance the GOP version can prevail.

Once the House rejects it, Republican leaders insist, the best thing for the nation would be to kill the Democratic version and drop the whole tax-overhaul issue.

In that view, Republicans may have the support of a number of Democrats.

Many liberal Democrats oppose the whole idea of making massive changes in the tax system without doing anything to cut the federal budget deficit. Why, they ask, should Congress be rushing to pass a tax reduction for most people at a time of $200-billion-a-year deficits?

Palo Verde expects second reactor license

WINTERSBURG, Ariz. (AP) — The federal government may award an operating license soon for the Palo Verde nuclear plant's second reactor, several officials say, though the agency may not want the reactor started up until the first unit is in commercial operation.

The license would allow fuel-loading to proceed.

Federal pension tax plan exempts lawmakers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee voted to tighten taxation of pensions paid to federal workers, but quietly included a provision to exempt lawmakers and their staffs, congressional aides said Saturday.

The exemption drew fire from unions representing government workers, and two House members have said they will try to restore a pension tax deferral now enjoyed by all federal employees.

An amendment to the panel's tax reform bill would require most federal employees to pay taxes on pension benefits for the first three years after they retire.

But under the proposal, the 535 members of Congress and their staffs would continue to enjoy the tax benefit currently given federal workers, whose pensions are not taxed until they exceed the amount the workers paid into retirement funds.

The amendment was not mentioned in a Ways and Means Committee news release on the tax reform bill, nor by committee members who briefed reporters.

A spokeswoman for the American Federation of Government Employees said her organization "would not be able to support the bill in light of the treatment of federal employees who are about to retire."

Federal employees "should be afforded the same deferred compensation as members of Congress, who are trying to exempt themselves," said the spokeswoman, Loretta Ucelli.

Blair Childs, executive director of the Senior Executives Association, said he "would be amazed" if congressmen deferred taxation of their pensions. "It would be very self-serving," said Childs, whose association represents top government workers.

Reps. Steny Hoyer, D-Md., and Vic Fazio, D-Calif., are to appear before the Rules Committee on Tuesday seeking to restore the tax deferral for all newly retired government workers, said John Moag Jr., Hoyer's legislative aide.

Moag said a recent General Accounting Office study found that 93 percent of all private pension plans did not require employee contributions.

But all federal employees must contribute, with the exception of congressmen and staff members on the payroll before Jan. 1, 1984, who have a choice.

"Currently, if you pay a portion of your salary to a retirement plan, once you retire, you receive the pension tax-free for three years, because it is the amount that you contributed, and it has already been taxed," Moag said.

By eliminating the deferment, Ways and Means Committee members hoped to raise an estimated $8 billion in tax revenue over five years, to offset money lost from reducing individual tax rates.

The exemption appears on page 861 of the 1,363-page proposal, but does not mention members of Congress or their staffs.

An Analysis

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the end, even Navy officials were forced to acknowledge the irony of their action — and the message it sent.

The General Dynamics Corp., the nation's third-largest defense contractor, had been suspended from receiving any new government contracts because of a federal fraud indictment.

Yet because of the company's pivotal role in building certain weapons, a bidding deadline on a major Navy contract was likewise suspended so General Dynamics wouldn't be passed by.

"You can say this is another example of the Pentagon being in bed with its contractors," conceded one Navy official who requested anonymity. "But we got caught in a box; there's really much more to it."

Critics are willing to acknowledge there's more to it — that there are conflicting policy concerns reflected by the affair.

But the case, they add, still demonstrates graphically that if a defense contractor can grow big enough, it can insulate itself to a large degree against the slings and arrows of a Pentagon crackdown on fraud and mispricing.

The Navy believes it was boxed in by a new emphasis placed on competition among defense contractors.

Historically, none of the services have done a very good job in forcing competition in the actual production of weapons; companies compete for the initial contract, then the winning firm settles down for what it hopes will be a long run of his manufacturing line.

The Pentagon has been trying to change that and in fact, has enjoyed some success. The Air Force, for example, has benefited from annual competitions between General Electric and the Pratt & Whitney Division of United Technologies to supply jet engines.

The Navy has a similar success story. Unfortunately in this case, it involves General Dynamics. The St. Louis-based firm is one of only two companies that competes each year for the right to build nuclear-powered attack submarines. The other is the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., a division of Tenneco located in Newport News, Va.

Bids from the two companies for the next batch of subs were supposed to be due last Friday.

Hence the dilemma — General Dynamics had to be suspended from receiving new contracts after its indictment, because Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger's "get-tough" policy on contractors demands it. But if General Dynamics is suspended, and only Newport News allowed to bid on the submarines, the Navy is back to a sole-source buy and possibly, higher prices.

Navy Secretary John F. Lehman's decision — postpone the deadline for bids, and see if General Dynamics can get its house in order in a reasonable period of time.

The decision "suggests that the suspension is a little less toothy than previously thought," observes Wolfgang H. Demisch, the defense analyst for the First Boston Corp.

That, say the critics, is an understatement.

"What the Navy did here is an absolute joke," says Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., the chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, which has played a role in disclosing questionable contract practices at General Dynamics.

"It makes a joke of the entire suspension process. Our testimony has shown that not one of these suspensions has cost these contractors one cent. We're not going to see any real change come about in the defense procurement process until the contractors who flaunt the law suffer real economic pain."

"I completely fail to see any merit in that," counters Sen. John H. Chafee, R-N.H., whose state includes thousands of General Dynamics employees.

"I completely fail to understand or see any merit in the idea that they should be punished even if it costs (taxpayers) more. To punish General Dynamics by not permitting a division that had nothing to do with these transgressions to submit a bid is ridiculous."

Chafee's reference to divisions of General Dynamics spotlights another problem. The fraud indictment returned on Dec. 2 involved alleged mischarging on an Army contract that was handled by General Dynamics' Pomona, Calif., division.

The unit that makes submarines is the Electric Boat division. Should the entire company be suspended for misdeeds within one division? When can you draw a line?

Blacks, whites battle hatred in Philadelphia

By GEORGE ESPER
AP Special Correspondent

PHILADELPHIA — In the Elmwood neighborhood, one corner tavern displays over its bar the Southwest Shuffleboard League runner-up trophy and photos of Sinatra and Presley. Before answering the telephone, the bartender asks a patron playing shuffleboard, "Fred, you here?"

Elmwood is a place where teenagers play football in the street, where the kids go to the grocery for Big Foot red candy and Rocky IV bubble gum, where parents work at the Scott Paper Co. and the Franklin Mint. It is also a place where blacks are called "colored" and are decidedly not welcomed by many of the white residents.

A black couple, Marietta Bloxom, a 25-year-old department store supervisor, and Charles Williams, a 23-year-old worker at a fast-food hamburger chain, found this out the hard way when they moved to Elmwood from an apartment in a black neighborhood Oct. 31.

So, too, did Gerald and Carol Fox, a black man and a white woman who moved in 2½ weeks later and three blocks away.

Ms. Bloxom said she was unprepared for the hostility that greeted them: windows shattered by BBs, bottles tossed at the house, finally a demonstration by 400 whites outside the house Nov. 20.

AT THE FOX house, where 200 whites milled about and chanted the following night, vandals had by then already axed kitchen cabinets, destroyed a lamp, a clock radio and the water and oil heaters, and left behind a broken bottle stuffed with a rag soaked in gasoline. The night of the demonstration, reporters watched deli workers pass out free coffee to protesters.

Ms. Bloxom and Williams are now living with relatives and packing up to leave Elmwood, but the Foxes say they are staying.

The tension has eased somewhat in the intense attention given the protests, and both families have received letters and good-luck charms from people expressing sorrow and wishing them well. Mrs. Fox said she'd received more than $600 in cash donations, a food basket, homemade candy, flowers and Christmas cards.

"I think those people who protested should be ashamed of themselves," said one letter to Mrs. Fox, signed only "a friendly neighbor." "They are supposed to live in the 'City of Brotherly Love.' I saw people I used to respect, but I don't no more."

Philadelphia is a patchwork of neighborhoods, many of them with staunch racial or ethnic identities. A visitor could spend at least a month sampling the different foods and cultures. But the strong identities sometimes lead to isolation from the city as a whole.

"THERE IS A housing pattern that exists in Philadelphia in which you will find many black people live in north and west Philadelphia and certain areas of Germantown and Mount Airy," said Leah Gaskin White, executive director of the Philadelphia Commission on Human Relations.

"You'll find on the other hand many white families live in south Philadelphia and the northeast and certain parts of Kensington," said Mrs. White, who is black. "But...we see in northeast Philadelphia, which has been traditionally a predominantly white area, black families moving into that area without protests."

Mrs. White said some people live their whole lives in one neighborhood.

"And that is their entire experience," she said. "They are limited, therefore, in their ability to understand what the majority of people understand...that people of different races and other groups live together very well throughout the city without any difficulty."

Elmwood, a tidy neighborhood of two-story brick rowhouses is the kind of parochial community that tends to be isolated, Mrs. White said.

"It's a neighborhood that people describe as a neighborhood of neglect," she said. "It's in the fringe part of the city so that in recent years there's been a decline in industry and other business activity in the area. Members of the community feel neglected in terms of economic development and services."

SOCIAL PROBLEMS EXIST for blacks and whites alike in southwest Philadelphia, said the Rev. William Yeats, who is white and chairman of Southwest Task Force Inc., an agency established five years ago to promote racial harmony. The southwest Philadelphia area, characterized by Yeats as a sub-city of 80,000 people, is about 53 percent black.

Yeats said these problems include high unemployment, a large number of single parent families and inadequate health services. Many residents, he said, depend on government checks.

"The economic status of the black and white communities is similar," he said. "All of those conditions build a framework in which people feel anxious about what little treasure they have in this world and what they think they're going to do to protect it."

That is largely why whites felt threatened last month when the Williams-Bloxom couple and the Foxes bought their houses, each for about $20,000, from the Veterans Administration after the previous owners defaulted on GI loans.

When Williams and Ms. Bloxom moved in, Yeats said, some whites called the task force to report that real estate brokers were contacting them about selling their houses.

Yeats said the protests were spawned at what was to have been a small meeting of perhaps a dozen neighbors to decide what to do; 500 people showed up, and emotions took over.

Mrs. White said the Commission on Human Relations had found no evidence of blockbusting, the practice of encouraging homeowners to sell their homes quickly, often at a loss, by suggesting that purchases by minority groups will bring values down.

But the suspicion remains. Last week, when Ms. Bloxom left her house and crossed the street to a waiting car, she and an elderly neighbor, a white woman, avoided each other's eyes. Moments later, the white woman explained how neighbors feared other blacks would move in and run down the neighborhood.

Slurred bi-racial couple bolstered by letter

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Gerald and Carol Fox and their 10-year-old daughter spent the evening of Nov. 21 listening to chants and shouted slurs from 200 whites outside their new home, all because Fox is black and his wife is white.

Despite the protest and earlier vandalism at their house, the Foxes want to stay. Lately, their determination has been bolstered by letters of support, offering prayers and comfort.

One letter, signed "A Friendly Neighbor," said:

"I think those people who protested should be ashamed of themselves. They are supposed to live in the 'City of Brotherly Love'....I passed by the protest and...saw people I used to respect, but I don't no more."

The U-haul dealer who supplied the Foxes' moving truck wrote this:

"I remember you as very fine, very nice people and it was a pleasure serving you. I'm deeply grieved that a situation like yours can happen in Philadelphia, and to such wonderful people. I feel that although your new neighbors are obviously rather petty people, if you persevere, you can win them over. If you ever need a break from Johannesburg, feel free to visit me."

A 16-year-old high school senior said she was writing because she "felt terrible that your lives are being troubled by the ridiculous behavior of other people."

The girl continued: "I admire you for deciding to stay in your home and not be driven out....The nation's adults tell us that we (teen-agers) will be running this country someday soon, and that we should follow the instruction and example of our 'wise, experienced' elders.

Bonner reunites with family in U.S.

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) — Yelena Bonner arrived here Saturday to a joyous greeting from family and friends and said she was "very concerned and anxious" about her husband, Nobel Peace Prize-winning dissident Andrei Sakharov, whom she left behind in the Soviet Union.

Mrs. Bonner, who was permitted to visit the United States to get treatment for a heart condition, kept a promise to Soviet authorities and refused to comment on a report that a checkup of her husband revealed "no negative dynamics."

"We are very, very happy our mother is here with us," said her daughter, Tatiana Yankelevich, 35, who had not seen her mother in more than six years.

Mrs. Bonner walked smiling off the plane at Boston's Logan International Airport with her arms around her grandchildren, Anna Yankelevich, 10, and her brother, Matvei, 12, who presented her with a bouquet of flowers.

"I am very concerned and anxious for my husband," Mrs. Bonner told reporters after she arrived. "This is all I can tell you.

"It is difficult for me to talk about your questions. You all know that I gave a promise not to hold any press conferences and I cannot give any interviews. I want to thank you for such a warm and human welcome."

Mrs. Bonner gave the promise to Soviet authorities in return for a three-month visa allowing her to get medical treatment in the West.

Mrs. Bonner's son, Alexei Semyonov, 29, who accompanied his mother to Boston from Rome, said she planned to call her husband Monday or Tuesday in Gorky, the Soviet city where he is in internal exile.

"If she cannot reach her husband in Gorky, she feels her trip will be pointless," he said. "She will be worried too much to have the operation."

He said his mother planned to meet Monday with a doctor but would not identify the physician or say where the meeting would occur.

Before speaking to reporters, Mrs. Bonner sprayed her mouth with what Semyonov said was nitrogylcerin for her heart condition. She held her daughter's hand and kept a hand around her 85-year-old mother, Ruth Bonner, who lives with the Yankeleviches in suburban Newton.

"I am very happy now to see my entire family," Mrs. Bonner said to the reporters. "Your help enabled me to be here."

Semyonov said of his mother's condition, "Right now, she is looking much much better than she did the first day in Italy."

He said Mrs. Bonner came to the United States for medical treatment because "the doctors treating them in the Soviet Union were under the orders of the KGB....She cannot trust the doctors who perform only what the KGB tells them."

Mrs. Bonner left Italy on Saturday morning after a visit which began Monday when she flew to Rome from Moscow. Her Italian sojourn included eye examinations for glaucoma and cataracts, a papal audience and a visit with Prime Minister Bettino Craxi.

"I am grateful to Italy and the Italians for the warmth and sympathy I felt during my stay here," she told reporters as she left Italy. She held what Italian reporters said was a new purse given to her by Craxi.

In Moscow, an article Saturday by the Soviet news agency Tass denied what it called "blasphemous political speculation" about the health of the 64-year-old Sakharov.

Court rules fetus lost in accident not human being

WEST ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Jannet and Chris Johnson say the fetus they lost in an auto accident was a human being and they'll work for changes in Minnesota law to acknowledge that.

Mrs. Johnson was on her way to pick up her husband at work on Nov. 8, 1984, when a car collided with hers. Within 24 hours, the fetus had stopped moving and doctors couldn't hear a heartbeat.

Denver sings for flood relief

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — West Virginia's Flood Relief Telethon, a five-hour broadcast on every TV station in the state aimed at raising $1 million, got a big boost when John Denver agreed to a live performance Saturday night of "Country Roads," an unofficial state anthem.

Every major river in the eastern half of the state flooded Nov. 4-5, killing at least 39 people, and officials estimated damage at more than $500 million. More than 8,000 families were left homeless and major roads and bridges were washed away.

Denver's hit recording of "Country Roads" in the early 1970s struck an emotional chord in the Mountain State, and the hit song's line "Almost heaven, West Virginia," became a state slogan that symbolized its wooded hills and sheltering valleys. It's still on many jukeboxes around the state.

Denver was the last major performer to confirm an appearance on the Saturday fund-raising show, agreeing to fly to Charleston after a Washington concert to help the flood relief effort. The performance also will mark a reunion of Denver with the song's co-authors, Bill Danoff and Taffy Nivert.

Stars who previously committed were folk singer Tom Chapin; Larry Groce of West Virginia Public Radio's "Mountain Stage" program; blues singer Richie Havens; country artist and Cross Lanes native Kathy Mattea; Poco; and actors Chris Sarandon, formerly of Beckley, and David Selby, formerly of Morgantown.

"We've got on such a short notice a great lineup of artists. There is a wide range of talent that will draw a wide range audience," said show promoter Andy Ridenour of West Virginia Public Radio.

That broad-based appeal justifies a $1 million goal, Ridenour said.

"With 14 TV and about 50 radio stations, we expect to reach a potential audience of 1 million people," Ridenour said. "We think that $1 million is the goal we have to work for; but we think we can get it."

Before noon, more than $800 had been raised from people who wanted to get their pledges in early, Ridenour said.

"Our first call came from Prosperity, W.Va. I took the call. It was from a family that was not going to be able to watch the telethon," Ridenour said.

Some of the 300 crew members got additional calls from Florida, Virginia and other parts of West Virginia and "called in the National Guard" to staff the phones until all operators could arrive, Ridenour said. The National Guard had volunteers at the Cultural Center to help with the show.

It wasn't Denver's first appearance in the state. "Country Roads" is so popular here that he was brought in for a free concert on the Capitol steps shortly after it climbed the charts, and in 1980 he was brought in to sing it for the dedication of West Virginia University's new stadium in Morgantown.

NATION IN BRIEF

Pearl Harbor commemorated

HONOLULU (AP) — Forty-four years after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, America remains determined that it "will not again be caught unready," a Navy admiral said Saturday at a ceremony marking the anniversary.

Two hundred people gathered at the USS Arizona memorial park in remembrance of the day that President Franklin Roosevelt said would "live in infamy." Following the attack, the United States formally entered World War II, declaring war on Japan and its ally Germany.

The Dec. 7, 1941, submarine and bomber assault killed more than 2,300 U.S. servicemen and 68 civilians around the Pearl Harbor naval base and Hickam, Wheeler and Bellows air bases. Eighteen ships were sunk, beached or damaged in the early morning attack.

AMA: Medicare patients slighted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two-thirds of the doctors responding to an American Medical Association survey say Medicare recipients are getting poorer care in hospitals because of payment reforms instituted by the Reagan administration.

A report to be presented to the AMA House of Delegates this week says that 66 percent of those responding said the quality of hospital care has deteriorated since implementation of the so-called prospective payment system that limits hospital payments for Medicare patients.

The comments are consistent with fears of administration critics that the hospital payment limits could result in hospitals scrimping on their quality of care rather than achieving greater efficiency.

Charges on AIDS victim dropped

FLINT, Mich. (AP) — A man with the AIDS antibody was released Saturday after prosecutors charged him with assault with intent to murder for allegedly threatening to spread the fatal disease to four police officers by spitting on them, authorities said.

Two doctors consulted by authorities before the felony warrant was issued said they doubted that AIDS could be transmitted through saliva.

Dr. Willis Mueller, Genesee County medical examiner, said he told police Sgt. Michael Ahearne "that AIDS is transmitted from blood and intimate contact. I told him I didn't think his people were at risk."

John Richards, 28, of Davison, was freed on $10,000 bond and ordered to appear in court Tuesday to respond to the charge, said Sheriff Joe Wilson.

Mandela's emerging defiance rallies South African blacks

WORLD

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Winnie Mandela is defiantly emerging from the shadows of internal banishment to become a leading public voice of black nationalism.

Since her house was firebombed in August, the wife of South Africa's most important jailed black leader increasingly has flouted the 1977 government order restricting her activities, thus ignoring the threat of yet another arrest.

She has spoken out at news conferences against white rule, violating that part of the banning law that prohibits her from assisting in publication of her comments. She has attended funerals, even though she is barred from attending gatherings, and has refused orders to return to the remote town of Brandfort.

Last Tuesday, Mrs. Mandela spoke at a funeral near Pretoria for 12 riot victims. The service was attended by tens of thousands of blacks.

"The blood of these heros we bury here today shall be avenged," she said in a quiet, determined voice.

Declaring that she was speaking for the nation's jailed and exiled black leaders, she added, "We are here today to tell you that the day is not far off when we shall lead you to freedom."

The crowd's cheering response suggested why the white-minority government views her as a danger and attempts to isolate her. As Mrs. Mandela tried to get into a car to leave, she was delayed by hundreds of blacks who called out to her and stretched out their hands just to touch her or clasp her hand.

"She is the mother of the nation," said Amina Cachalia, a long-time friend who was herself banned for two decades until 1983 for her work as an Indian activist. "She is the leadership and speaks for the leadership."

Mrs. Mandela has no formal mandate from any constituency, nor can she speak directly for the banned and exiled African National Congress (ANC) whose armed wing her husband, Nelson Mandela, once led. Yet polls show increasing support among blacks for the ANC and for Mandela himself, 21 years after he was sentenced to life in prison after his conviction for plotting sabotage. Black support for ANC and her husband are key factors in Mrs. Mandela's authority.

Yet the respect she commands from blacks comes as much or more from her own life of opposition to white rule, and the punishment she has endured for those efforts.

She has been banned for all but one year since 1963. She was barred from meeting with more than one person at a time, from attending meetings, from being quoted in South African publications, from being on school grounds and from leaving her house after dark.

Her first years as a banned person restricted her to Soweto, her own community. In 1977, after she helped found an opposition organization in her one unbanned year, the government banished her to Brandfort, a dusty farm town near Bloemfontein, four hours' drive south of Johannesburg.

But even there she drew world attention as a human rights cause. Prominent overseas visitors often made the journey to Brandfort to see her — one at a time, in compliance with the banning rules.

Unbowed by the banishment, she built a clinic next to her home and carried on her social work there, at the same time studying for a degree with a correspondence university. Mrs. Mandela helped found a day-care center, arranged a mobile clinic and taught neighborhood women to grow vegetables.

"She is the queen of Brandfort location (township) because of what she's done," said Helen Joseph, a white friend who also has been banned.

Kremlin denies Sakharov's health damaged

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin countered concerns about Andrei Sakharov on Saturday with a Tass article denying what it called "blasphemous political speculation" that a hunger strike damaged the dissident's health.

The vaguely worded dispatch, which said a checkup revealed "no negative dynamics" in Sakharov's health, was the first Soviet news media report in more than 1½ years about the 1975 Nobel Peace laureate.

It coincided with his wife Yelena Bonner's airplane trip to the United States for a reunion with her daughter, a journey that began with a visit to an eye doctor in Italy and has renewed worldwide interest in Sakharov's case.

Mrs. Bonner, who is under sentence of five years' internal exile to the closed city of Gorky, has said she pledged not to talk to reporters.

But her son, Alexei Semyonov, said in Rome that Sakharov lost 44 pounds and was ill after a hunger strike which Semyonov said lasted nearly six months with an 11-day interruption.

The Tass report did not mention the hunger strike specifically, commenting only on "rumors" about Sakharov's health.

Semyonov said Soviet officials tampered with a telegram from Mrs. Bonner to Moscow and falsified a leaked videotape to conceal the hunger strike.

The Soviets may have wanted to counter this publicity with the official news agency's report, published in English and Russian three days before the Dec. 10 International Human Rights Day.

Communist Party chief Mikhail S. Gorbachev said in an October interview with French reporters that the Kremlin is always ready to discuss human rights. But Soviet officials still react with irritation when reporters raise such issues.

The Tass article appeared intended to convey the idea that the Soviets don't conceal Sakharov's condition, saying "it is well known to all that Sakharov has recently undergone" a medical checkup.

It was, however, the first time since May 30, 1984, that the state-run news media mentioned the 64-year-old nuclear physicist, who was banished to Gorky without trial in January 1980.

Soviets confirm AIDS cases

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union admitted Saturday for the first time that there are cases of AIDS here, but contended there are fewer than 10 victims and did not say if any have died.

The disclosures about AIDS in an article in the cultural newspaper Sovietskaya Kultura reversed official reports two months ago that there are no Soviet AIDS cases and that the disease results from Pentagon-inspired experiments.

The article, the most factual yet to appear in the Soviet press on AIDS, made clear for the first time to Soviet readers that the disease mostly affects homosexuals and drug users, two social groups hardly ever mentioned in public here.

Professor Viktor M. Zhdanov, head of the chief Soviet institute on viruses, told Sovietskaya Kultura that "we have detected an extremely small number of cases" of acquired immune deficiency syndrome in the Soviet Union.

He said they number "less than the fingers of two hands."

AIDS is a virus that attacks blood cells and breaks down a victim's immunity to infections. It is transmitted through blood or semen, and is fatal.

Zhdanov did not say whether there have been fatalities, when and where AIDS victims were registered, or how the disease is treated in Soviet clinics.

Homosexuality is illegal in the Soviet Union and punishable by up to eight years in jail. Drug possession and abuse, much rarer than in the West, are also punished by heavy jail sentences.

Zhdanov did not specify whether the Soviet AIDS sufferers are homosexuals or drug users. But, discussing the incidence of the disease in the United States and Western Europe, he said 78 percent of those who have AIDS are homosexuals.

Another 15 percent are drug addicts and prostitutes, Zhdanov said, blaming the spread of the disease in the West on increased international travel and what he called the sexual revolution.

"This 'anything goes' unbridled sex (is) completely anti-natural for our society (and) has led to the outbreak of the disease," Zhdanov said.

Ortega

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist Sandinista government has intensified censorship and extended it from the news media to virtually all publications since declaring a national state of emergency this fall.

Censorship now includes publications by the Roman Catholic Church, human rights watchdog groups and opposition political parties.

Lino Hernandez, director of the independent Human Rights Commission of Nicaragua, said he is prepared to disobey a Nov. 14 order to submit the panel's monthly bulletin for censorship.

"As we always have been independent and we search for ways that human rights might be respected, we now also publish the denunciations that are presented to our offices by Nicaraguan citizens who believe themselves persecuted," Hernandez said.

"We are prepared to not submit for censorship our bulletin," he said.

On Oct. 15, the Sandinista regime tightened state security with a decree suspending certain individual guarantees. Government officials said they needed the emergency powers to combat an insurgency by U.S.-backed rebels, known as Contras.

One new regulation was that any organization outside the government wanting to make any statement public must first submit it to the censorship bureau.

The bureau, called the Office for Communications Media, is headed by army Capt. Nelba Blandon.

The same day the government issued the emergency decree, troops entered the office of a monthly magazine called Iglesia, or Church, which is part of the archbishopric of Managua.

All employees were evicted, the doors sealed closed. Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, the archbishop of Managua, has not been permitted to enter the office since. Like most other prelates, Obando y Bravo has been a strong critic of the Sandinista regime.

Soon after that, Communications Media agents dressed in military uniform entered the church station Radio Catolica and prevented it from broadcasting homilies given by Obando y Bravo during a pilgrimage he made around the country.

Explosions injure shoppers

AP Laserphoto

An injured man is escorted by rescuers as they evacuate him from the department store Printemps after two bombs exploded there and at another department store, Galeries Lafayette, Saturday.

PARIS (AP) — Two explosions in quick succession tore through two large Paris department stores packed with Christmas shoppers Saturday, wounding 39 people, rescue workers reported.

Dr. Francis Roy of the City Rescue Service said 12 of the victims were in serious condition, with most suffering severe burns.

Fire department officials had said earlier that 25 people were injured, 13 seriously, in the bombings at the Galeries Lafayette and Printemps stores.

Police sources said several telephone calls had been received with the callers asserting responsibility for the bombings, but it was not known if any of the claims were authentic. The sources would not identify the groups the callers purportedly represented.

An anonymous caller to a French news agency claimed responsibility in the name of the faction of the Palestine Liberation Front headed by Mohammed Abbas, also known as Abul Abbas.

The caller threatened a third attack at Parc des Princes sports arena, where a soccer match was being played Saturday night. He told the agency, Agence Central de Presse, or ACP, he opposed any warming of relations between France and Iran.

The Palestine Liberation Front is one of the guerrilla groups in the Palestine Liberation Organization, and the front's Abul Abbas faction was blamed for the Oct. 7-9 hijacking of the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro. The United States accused Abbas of masterminding the Mediterranean hijacking, in which a 69-year-old New Yorker, Leon Klinghoffer, was killed.

Ibrahim Souss, the PLO's representative in Paris, condemned "with the strongest vigor" the bombings. He noted that PLO chief Yasser Arafat said recently in Cairo that the PLO opposed such attacks and limited its activities to Israeli-occupied Arab territories.

Police tightened security at the National Assembly, where deputies were debating a bill Saturday night, and at the Parc des Princes.

Authorities rushed rescue vehicles to the crowded ninth district of the French capital, evacuating the damaged department stores and other stores in the mainly commercial area.

Hundreds of police stationed along the route of a demonstration against racism in another part of Paris were diverted to the district, not far from the Paris Opera.

A fire department spokesman said 20 people were wounded, nine seriously, in the explosion at Galeries Lafayette, and five people were injured at Printemps, four seriously.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Pope decries censorship

Pope John Paul II

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Saturday deplored the expulsions of 10 Roman Catholic priests from Nicaragua and the Sandinista government's "intimidations and vexations" of the church in that Central American nation.

In an open letter to the cardinal of Managua and the bishops of Nicaragua, the pontiff said the continuing presence of priests there was uncertain because of "obstacles of a various nature against the church."

The pope did not elaborate, but he appeared to be referring to forms of censorship by the left-wing Sandinistas against the broadcasts and publication of priestly homilies.

The government accuses church leaders of being counter-revolutionary and has expelled 17 foreign priests in the past four years, including 10 in July.

Guatemalans at polls

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Two presidential candidates square off in a runoff election Sunday for the awesome task of steering Guatemala away from poverty and entrenched military rule and back toward democracy.

The front-runner is Vinicio Cerezo, 43, a lawyer and leader of Guatemala's Christian Democratic Party, generally described as center-left. His rival, newspaper publisher Jorge Carpio, 53, a founder of the 2-year-old National Center Union, is identified with the center-right.

They were the top finishers in the Nov. 3 election but neither received the more than 50 percent of the vote required to win in the eight-candidate race. Cerezo got 38.65 percent and Carpio 20.23 percent.

The winner, to take office Jan. 14, will be the first civilian president since 1970. Guatemala has been ruled by military or military-dominated presidents since a 1954 coup backed by the CIA toppled the left-leaning government of Jacobo Arbenz.

Asian nations at summit

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Leaders of seven nations in impoverished south Asia met Saturday to form a non-political agency to cooperate in dealing with economic and social problems.

Several government heads suggested the members also pledge their peaceful intentions toward one another.

"Prevailing tensions and the continuing nuclear arms race pose a serious threat to our progress and prosperity," said Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi of India. "We must make a conscious effort to remain outside the vortex of the tensions and conflicts."

Joining in the new South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation are two Islamic countries under martial law, Pakistan and Bangladesh; two island republics, Sri Lanka and the Maldives; two Himalayan kingdoms, Bhutan and Nepal; and India, which dwarfs them all.

Rajneesh to leave India

HAMBURG, West Germany (LAT) — Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh, leader of the Rajneesh movement who was expelled from the United States last month and is living in the Himalayas, said in an interview with the West German weekly magazine Der Spiegel that he may not be staying for long in India.

In the interview released Saturday, two days in advance of the magazine's distribution, he said, "India is not my homeland. I belong to no nation, as the entire Earth is my home."

Despite previous reports that Rajneesh was not planning another commune, the bhagwan said that his followers were looking throughout the world for a "suitable place" for a new commune, since the ranch in Oregon was being disbanded. "Maybe we'll know in another two weeks," he said.

Scouts perform skits on peer pressure

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

A young girl catches her older sister smoking marijuana and the sister threatens her with physical harm if she tells their parents.

The outcast girl turns to the audience and says, "I wouldn't want to be part of that group. Would you? Don't ever be afraid to say no."

These scenes are part of a Midland Junior Girl Scout troop's efforts to help kids say no to peer pressure while at the same time earning a badge. The nine troop members performed skits on how to say no to drugs and other illicit acts for area troops in the Permian Basin last week. The skits were videotaped for community use, to teach kids that they don't have to give into peer pressure, says troop leader Susan Fulfer.

The sixth grade girls in Troop 67 had a wide choice of projects they could undertake to earn a badge, but choose to do a project on peer pressure.

Peer pressure was the first thing they came up with and most of it was drug related, Ms. Fulfer said.

None of the 11- and 12-year-old girls in the troop have been asked to take drugs yet, they said. But many said they might be faced with such situations when they enter junior high next year.

We're getting prepared for it," said one troop member, Janna Fulfer.

"I was concerned about how to say no in case I was ever tempted," said troop member Donna Nietert.

We wanted to help our community and teach kids," said another troop member, Laura Prothro.

The girls wrote five separate skits on how to deal with peer pressure situations. The troop said they got the ideas for their skits from incidents they have seen, but have not been involved in personally.

Along with producing and performing the skits, the girls visited with police and a drug counselor.

"They got together with the police department to know what drugs look like. It was a hands-on experience," Ms. Fulfer said.

Kathy Mathews, a counselor with the Palmer Drug Abuse program, also taught the girls about the different effects of drugs on the body.

The videotaped skits may be checked out by any school or community group at the Girl Scout Midland Service Center, 901 W. Dengar.

The troop also collected literature on peer pressure and drugs to make up a display at the scout program center.

Other troop members include Brenda Collins, Christine Gentry, Stacey Kennedy, Mendy McBride, Shelley Rolleg and Alison Vaden and assistant leader Donna Vaden.

Rules set for use of plaza

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

When the Midland Jaycees dedicated a $1 million downtown park to the City of Midland last July, the group envisioned a facility that would provide spontaneous enjoyment for citizens of all ages.

"That's just what we got," said Guy McCrary, chairman of the Midland Centennial Plaza Commission. "I've seen a great deal of use like that."

Since its July 4 opening, a number of Midland organizations have reserved the Centennial Plaza for a host of activities. The United Way of Midland lunched there during its fund-raising drive; and the city scheduled most of its Centennial festivities on or around the plaza grounds.

Still, other citizens find Centennial Plaza a totally unique facility, in that it is available for coffee breaks and brown bag luncheons, not to mention concerts and other events.

Centennial Plaza, like other city parks and recreational facilities, is available for use by all residents, according to Em Carnett, recreation superintendent for the Midland Parks and Recreation Department.

The cost, however, is considerably more.

Ms. Carnett said deposits and fees for using the plaza vary depending on the number of persons who plan to attend a specific event.

In addition, persons are responsible for providing their own restroom facilities, tables and chairs, lighting and sound equipment.

Groups of one to 25 persons must submit a $100 deposit, plus a $25 user fee, according to Mrs. Carnett. Groups of 250 to 1,000 persons require a $500 deposit in addition to a $125 user fee.

By comparison, use of Hogan Park requires an $11.50 user fee for groups up to 25 persons, Ms. Carnett said. Groups of 500 persons or more must pay a $46 user fee.

Organizations who choose to serve alcoholic beverages also must comply with rules established under a city ordinance.

According to Ms. Carnett, the ordinance allows for consumption of beer and wine, but no other alcoholic beverage within the plaza.

However, use of the plaza for activities which include the possession or consumption of beer and wine is limited to groups of 1,000 persons or fewer provided they obtain a reservation permit from the Midland City Council.

Ms. Carnett said the reservation permit prohibits the possession or consumption of beer and wine between 10:30 p.m. and 6 a.m.

"To go beyond that, it would need the approval of the City Council."

Before any group is granted a reservation permit that allows its members to possess or consume beer and wine, Ms. Carnett said the group must deposit a $1,000 refundable cash bond with Parks and Recreation Director George Logan to insure that no paper, litter or other debris remain on the

From Staff Reports

Santa Claus and an assortment of holiday clowns will make an appearance on the streets of Midland, according to a spokesman for the Shriners who are sponsoring the annual Christmas parade Saturday.

"Santa will be there, along with horses, clowns, floats and maybe some bands," said Mrs. Gus Hicks, whose husband is heading the project for Shriners.

"We don't make any money off of this — it's all given away," she said.

Ms. Hicks added that prizes will be awarded for the best floats in first, second and third places. Entry fee for floats is $7.50.

Midland Baptist Temple School's band, which was the only school band to participate in the parade last year, more than likely will be the only one again this year.

"We were so proud of them," said Ms. Hicks. "They were the only band to march last year."

Last year's parade was plagued by adverse weather conditions.

Lee High, Midland High and Midland Christian High School all report that they will not be entering for diverse reasons.

Our band has been doing mostly concerts this season and will not be marching in the parade," said a spokesman for Midland High. "I doubt that I can get enough students to show up for a Saturday parade."

Lee High also said its band would not be attending because "the students were tired of marching."

Dedication ceremony scheduled for new Crane Memorial Hospital

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

CRANE — Formal dedication ceremonies will be held Dec. 15 for a newly constructed hospital here, according to a hospital spokesman.

"We actually opened up back in March but we're just now having the open house and ribbon-cutting ceremonies," said Charles Butts, administrator for Crane Memorial Hospital.

According to Butts, the $2 million facility was approved by Crane County voters nearly two years ago as a bond issue and replaced the existing structure. The former hospital was torn down shortly after the transfer to the new facility was completed.

"The hospital was overwhelmingly approved by the people of Crane County," said Butts. "This new hospital will allow the people of Crane the convenience of modern medical care locally without having to go elsewhere for treatment."

New features of CMH, not included in the former hospital, are respiratory therapy, more modern X-ray

San Angelo teen takes his foot-sized problem in stride

By MARYDAWN WEBBER

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Bigfoot, as he is affectionately called by his friends and neighbors, is a legend in his own size 19 hightops.

The 14-year-old's real name is Charles Carmichael. He has taken life in stride. Bigfoot lives with his mother, Pat E. Clements, and stepfather, Jerry Clements at 1635 Wyoming Ave. in San Angelo. He was born with size 2½ feet. By third grade, Bigfoot had grown into the nickname derived from the mythological Sasquatch. Upon entering the fifth grade, Bigfoot was fitted with the largest shoes sold at retail shoe outlets.

After that, the search became serious.

The Houston Oilers football team gave him 10 pairs of size 15-16 athletic shoes.

He outgrew those two years ago.

"I wrote a letter to Wilt Chamberlain and he sent a note back: 'Sorry, son. I only wear a 15,' and signed his autograph," Bigfoot said.

Sometimes the best man isn't always the best man

Here's some advance notice. This is going to be one of those happy stories, the kind that has an ending that is supposed to make you feel good. I'll try not to get carried away with the flashy adjectives and adverbs but if I slip, forgive me. It's just that happy stories lend themselves to flashy adjectives and adverbs and most of us can't resist using them if given half a chance. It is a nifty way of showing off our command of the language.

Anyway, here goes.

The story involves an old friend of mine. We go way back together — to junior high school, I think — and, despite now living in different cities and not seeing each other but once or twice a year, we have maintained our friendship. I was best man in his wedding and he performed the same role in mine. I'm fairly certain our subsequent divorces had nothing to do with those choices, although, as I would later find out, one never knows.

He is one of those people who seems most comfortable when miserable. He complains incessantly, but does it with humor. It is never offensive.

His way of harping on life's day-to-day hassles keeps me laughing. In short, he is never satisfied with what he has. Even if he were, he would never admit it.

His divorce is a good example. To overstate the obvious, he took it rather hard. He tried repeatedly to get his wife to take him back but, instead, she slapped him with a restraining order.

"You've become a damn nuisance," he quoted her as saying at the time the order when into effect. She then concluded that touching farewell scene by adding, "So just stay away from me, OK?"

"I don't think she likes me anymore," he astutely surmised.

"You may have a point there," I agreed, fighting off a giggle attack.

It didn't matter. He wanted her back, just the same. He refused to be happy. He spent his evenings moping around the apartment, feeling sorry for himself and absolutely rejecting even the most subtle of suggestions that he consider having a date.

"I couldn't do that," he said during one of our numerous post-midnight phone conversations. "I'm just not ready. Besides, it wouldn't be fair to my date. I would constantly be comparing her to Mary," his ex-wife.

I was silent.

"You think I'm crazy, don't you?" he demanded to know.

"Well?"

"It's like this," I finally said. "You can't spend the rest of your life mourning over something you can't control. She left you and that's that. She has her life. You have yours. Get on with it. Besides, it's been six years since she kicked you out. How long are you going let this drag you down?"

He sort of whimpered.

And, it wasn't just his broken marriage. In his eyes, life in general had dealt him a lousy hand. He hated his job. He had no real friends, mainly because he spent his evenings moping around the apartment, feeling sorry for himself. And, anytime I suggested getting together for a weekend somewhere he would complain bitterly of being broke, a circumstance I found preposterous considering the fact he never did anything that requires the use of money.

He called the other night, bursting with excitement. Things were finally beginning to turn around for him and, best of all, he had met a "wonderful girl." They were getting quite serious, a married kind of serious.

"We've set a date," he proudly announced. "Of course, we'll want you to be there."

"What are tuxedoes for?" I replied.

There was an awkward silence. Then he spoke. "Don't take this wrong, but I'm getting a new best man. It's strictly a precautionary move, you understand."

Town renovates old railroad depot for use as city hall

PANHANDLE (AP) — When residents in this historic Texas Panhandle railroad town learned the Santa Fe railroad planned to do away with its old depot here, they asked to be allowed to give the building a new lease on life.

Several possiblities were considered for the maroon brick building that had played a major part in the town's growth.

"The museum was interested in it. We were also thinking about moving city hall. It was small, and we needed more room. The current city hall at that time was about half the size of the train depot," City Manager Larry Gilley says.

After mulling over the possibility of making the old depot into city hall, Panhandle city officials approached the company.

"Santa Fe leased the building to us on an annual non-billable lease. It's still their property, but company officials said they had no future need for it," Gilley said.

The depot had a long history in this town. Trains stopped here in the early part of the century to deliver supplies for the nearby boom town of Borger, where the goods were transferred by vehicles or horse-drawn wagons. Eventually Santa Fe put a station in Borger, and the need for the one in Panhandle decreased. Until 1983, it still was used for freight drops.

But the decision was finally made to close the depot, and Santa Fe filed a request with the Texas Railroad Commission to do away with it.

When city officials in Panhandle received a copy of the official notification, they began to consider what could be done to save the building.

"This is not a typical small-town depot. Most of them were wooden, and this one is brick," Gilley said. The outside of the building has elaborate decorative wooden cut-outs.

So the work began to change an old-time train depot into a city hall that could fit the needs of a modern, bustling town but still keep the flavor of the original building. It became a $26,000 renovation project, a figure which does not include air conditioning.

"We've done very little structure changes. We originally considered lowering the ceilings, but we didn't want to lose the crown molding. Accoustical ceiling tiles were installed but we still kept the flavor of a historical building," Gilley said.

Some work was contracted and the rest was volunteered, he added.

The mayor's wife and one of the councilmen's wives install wallpaper as a trade, and they volunteered to install the wallpaper in the new city hall.

Decorating was turned over to a locally appointed committee, which picked the colors for the walls, paint and carpet.

Carpeting was installed in the city manager's office and the bookkeeper's office, but the original terazzo floors in the rest of the building were kept.

"We hated to paint the crown molding since it is oak, but it had been varnished. We thought it would look better," Gilley added. The gray-blue molding blends with the wallpaper and the carpet in his office.

Paintings with a railroad theme done by local artists decorate the walls, and items, such as a trunk with train tickets, carry the theme further.

Heating is by radiators, but Gilley said they function very well.

Ann Mills, one of the women who works in the office, said the station depot is better than the other city hall.

"It's warmer here than it was in the other building. We have more room, too," she said.

Ceiling fans have been installed in all the rooms, but Gilley said the council was considering air conditioning with the high ceilings.

"The fans aren't bad, but it would be more comfortable with air conditioning, I'll admit," Gilley said.

City clerk Amy Wright takes payments for the city and listens to local residents through the window where train passengers used to buy tickets.

Plumbing in the building would be considered antique, and that's one of the things that will be replaced. But, it would intrigue the casual visitor to the building. The tank of the bathroom fixture is about four feet above the seat, and water is dispensed by pulling a chain.

The wrought-iron railings in front of the building had been installed by the Santa Fe, but the steps were added by the city. The building also meets standards for the handicapped, with the addition of a ramp at the back of the building.

Only 3,000 square feet of the building have been used for the city, but the freight room will eventually be used for storage. Gilley said Santa Fe has reserved parts of the area to store some equipment.

Gilley said residents and visitors alike seem to like the renovation.

"The comments from local citizens have been good. They seem to be glad we chose to take over the old depot, and some people think it's odd to have a city hall here. Mostly, they think it's good to keep intact to maintain the historical value of the building," Gilley said.

He said visitors to Panhandle often say they wish their cities had preserved their old train depots, many of which were moved or torn down.

tive family and proudly announces to strangers: "I'm the baby."

He's heard all the jokes.

"They ask to borrow my shoes to go fishing. Or, (they ask), 'Do those things come with oars?'"

"My big toe is three inches long," he said. "So far as I know, I've got the biggest feet in Texas."

He is active in all types of school athletics including baseball, football and basketball. He excels academically, maintaining a merit-roll grade average.

In fact, the growing boy's sole problem seems to be keeping himself in shoes.

Mrs. Clements said her son has been fitted for a pair of Roper boots which should be ready in about a month.

"I only hold my breath that his feet don't take a growth spurt before the boots get made," she said. "The bootmakers and the doctors all say that men's feet usually grow until about age 21."

Bigfoot said he would also like to be able to find a pair of loafers to wear to dances and to church.

PARADE

"We had planned to participate, but because we went to the play-offs, I don't think we'll attend. The kids are just tired of marching," said Betty Pierce, a band instructor.

Midland Baptist Church School, however, expects 50 of their students to participate in the parade, according to Barbara McKinney. The school band marched last year, but did not play their instruments due to cold weather conditions.

The parade route will follow Andrews Highway, beginning near the Church of Christ at Andrews and Golf Course Road and will disband near Dennis the Menace Park.

"It's a vast improvement," said Butts, a recent transplant from a hospital administrative position in Winnsboro, near Tyler. "The services provided are definitely improved over what they were before."

The 30,000-square-foot facility has a capacity of 29 beds, said Butts, and a staff of 45 employees, three on-site physicians and 10 consulting physicians.

Butts, who was reared in the West Texas area, has high hopes for the hospital.

"With so many of the smaller hospitals closing down due to changes in federal funding, it's good to see that Crane's hospital is doing well and will continue to have a thriving facility."

The CMH dedication ceremonies are being handled by both CMH and the Crane County Chamber of Commerce and will be from 2 to 4 p.m. Dec. 15 at the hospital.

"A ribbon-cutting will begin the two-hour opening celebration of the medical facility that not only serves the city of Crane but also several surrounding communities," said a spokesman for the chamber. "Tours of the 28-room hospital will be offered and refreshments will be served."

Butts added that several area hospital administrators, political figures and others have been invited to the grand opening.

Land appraisals for Stacy complete

From Staff Reports

Stacy Reservoir may have dropped out of the limelight; but the project itself is moving along, according to officials with the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

All field work on land appraisals has been completed, and Howell Engineering of Odessa is furnishing the CRMWD with plats and field notes. These are being relayed to appraisers, who will begin this week returning initial appraisals to the district. Initial contacts for land purchases will begin shortly after Jan. 1.

Latest reports from Freese and Nichols, consulting engineers, indicate that 30 percent of the detailed plans and specification work has been completed.

The district is expecting a draft contract from the Texas Department of Highways and Transportation for relocation of two Farm-to-Market roads impacted by the reservoir 25 miles southeast of Ballinger on the Colrado River.

"In this respect and many others," said O.H. Ivie, CRMWD general manager, "the county judges and commissioner courts of Coleman, Concho and Runnels counties have been more than cooperative. They doing all they can do expedite the project."

Ivie met last week with the U.S. Corps of Engineers in Fort Worth about the 404 (Environmental Impact) permit the project must have. The Corps has indicated it will have an initial draft ready for inspection by March 1, 1986, and hearing dates should follow soon afterward.

Involved in that area are fish and wildlife, archaeological considerations and habitat. Ivie will be in Washington next week in an effort to speed up the process.

On Nov. 26, the district received proceeds from the sale of $53,590,000 in bonds, and they were invested immediately in U.S.-backed securities to earn money to help finance the project, CRMWD officials said.

An exciting week

Two events this past week underscored, in different and unique ways, the growing importance of the Midland-Odessa relationship and while that may be a subject of which some have grown tired, we believe it's worth pointing out again.

"There's just no reason why we should not be good neighbors," said Jim Flowers, executive vice president of the Odessa Chamber of Commerce in a recent ceremony at Friendship Marker at the Midland-Ector County line on Highway 191. Purpose of the session was to inaugurate December as Friendship Month between the two cities and similar comments were made by other speakers from both Midland and Odessa.

Simply put, the ceremony and the comments were further evidence of the realization that the two communities, taken alone, are great cities with much to offer; together, there's almost no limit to what could be accomplished.

It is refreshing and exciting that more and more people are beginning to feel that is true.

A second event came about Thursday with official announcement that a new Permian Basin Center for Energy and Economic Diversification will be established in Midland County for the University of Texas of the Permian Basin. To be located at the intersection of State Highways 1788 and 191 midway between the two cities, the tract is a generous gift of the Scharbauer family whose members once again have proven their leadership as good citizens not only of Midland but of the Permian Basin.

Its name alone hints at the important role the center could play for this area, known not only for its energy-related wealth and resources but for its need to seek and develop diversification. Plans call for both areas, the petroleum industry that exists now and diversification of the economy, to be served through work of the center.

And that is exciting news indeed.

The project speaks well, also, for the University of Texas System and its commitment to develop its institutions to higher and higher standards through addressing valid needs of those areas where its facilities exist.

Gifts totaling more than $5 million will be sought to provide for the initial building and equipment and to finance other needs related to the center. Hopefully, the Permian Basin will respond, along with other potential sources, to assure that the goal will be met.

That support will mean the Midland-Odessa area has taken a major step forward in addressing headon two areas that are crucial to continued development: The petroleum industry, the backbone of our current economy, and the need to branch out in order to protect and strengthen that economy in the future.

Like other new and innovative programs, the positive results of such a facility for both communities can only be guessed at this time. But the possibility of those being far-ranging is strong.

Another View:

Open up the airwaves

Nick Allen has a problem. The other day he took a television program he's produced, a briefcase full of cash and 70 friends with picket signs to a San Francisco television station, hoping to shame it into reversing its decision not to allow him to purchase airtime for his show. In San Francisco, as in many other cities, broadcasters seem not to like the color of his money. Only eight stations around the country — there are 1,208 in all — have sold his organization, an offshoot of the San Francisco-based Institute of Food and Development Policy, time to air its 30-minute documentary opposing Reagan administration policy in El Salvador and Nicaragua.

Too controversial, most broadcasters contend. To which Allen asks: "What does free speech mean?"

He's not alone in asking. On the other side of the political spectrum, former Rep. George Hansen is meeting rebuffs in his efforts to air a series of advertising spots critical of the Internal Revenue Service. The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, Joseph Seagram and Sons Inc., and Mobil Corp. have recently had similar difficulties in airing messages on topics of public interest. "Do you have to own a television station before you can put on controversial programs?" Allen wonders.

In many cases, regrettably, the answer is yes. Few stations, and none of the networks, are willing to sell advertising slots or program airtime for messages on controversial political issues. The clash of opinion that booms through the pages of newspapers, the lecture halls of colleges, the chambers of city councils and legislatures and the studios of talk radio is heard on television mostly as muffled thunder.

Why? In part because broadcasters suspect that more viewers are interested in car chases than Nicaraguan contras, in part because they think that the occasional jarring from a controversial commercial would contaminate the placid environment for selling mouthwash and dish soap. And don't forget plain old timidity.

Twenty years ago, when television stations were few and the medium was young, such caution might have been the soul of responsibility. Today, though, there are more television stations than major newspapers and millions of citizens whose information on public issues comes only from the tube. Responsibility now means opening up the airwaves, if not to every kook and sect, at least to the groups like Nick Allen's and George Hansen's, whose views help define the range of debate heard in Congress and other halls of government.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday Dec. 8, the 342nd day of 1985. There are 23 days left in the year. This is the first day of Hanukkah, the Jewish "Festival of Lights."

Today's highlight in history:

On Dec. 8, 1941, the United States declared war against Japan. In asking Congress for the declaration of war, President Franklin D. Roosevelt condemned the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor the day before, saying Dec. 7, 1941 would be a date that "will live in infamy."

On this date:

In 1886, the American Federation of Labor was founded at a convention of union leaders in Columbus, Ohio.

In 1949, the Chinese Nationalist government moved from the Chinese mainland to Formosa as the Communists pressed their attacks.

In 1966, the United States and the Soviet Union agreed to a treaty to prohibit nuclear weapons in outer space.

Today's birthdays: Entertainer Sammy Davis Jr. is 60. Actor-director Maximilian Schell is 55. Comedian Flip Wilson is 52. Rock singer Gregg Allman is 38. Actress Kim Basinger is 32.

Thought for Today: "Hatred comes from the heart; contempt from the head; and neither feeling is quite within our control."— Arthur Schopenhauer, German philosopher (1788-1860).

Bureaucrats have 'secret' stamp

WASHINGTON — Say what you will about the waning of patriotism, the waxing of greed and the shrewdness of the KGB. In our opinion, nothing has contributed more to the explosive growth of successful spying against the U.S. government than its own ridiculous methods of classifying official documents.

Jack Anderson

Too many people are empowered to wield the little rubber stamps that make secrets of mundane material, and they exercise their heady prerogative with wild abandon. The result is that genuine secrets important to national security become cheapened by their association with the chaff documents that have been overclassified because of potential political embarrassment, ignorance, carelessness or simply a bureaucrat's ego. All this has produced too many "secrets" to guard properly.

"When everything is classified, then nothing is classified," wrote Supreme Court Justice Potter Stewart, "and the system becomes one to be disregarded by the cynical or the careless, and to be manipulated by those intent on self-protection or self-promotion."

Stewart was writing about the Pentagon Papers case in 1971, when the government tried unsuccessfully, on grounds of national security, to prevent publication of secret documents on the conduct of the Vietnam War.

The weakness of the government's case had been demonstrated when a lower court judge challenged the Nixon administration's lawyers to identify the most sensitive secret in the whole mass of leaked documents. The lawyers conferred and decided on the material dealing with "Operation Marigold," a secret 1966 attempt to negotiate with North Vietnam through Polish diplomatic intermediaries.

Never mind that the communist adversaries obviously knew about Operation Marigold. The judge discovered that this super-sensitive secret had been published long before in newspapers — and described at length in President Johnson's memoirs.

President Nixon, the master manipulator of the classification system, was chagrined with the Supreme Court's decision in the Pentagon Papers case. But in a private conversation with White House aides the next day, he said, "Top Secret is meaningless." He noted sardonically that even the White House menu was Top Secret, and that there were 100 million documents still classified from World War II.

During the same era, the Pentagon had convened a "Special Task Force on Secrecy," which studied the classification problem and came to this startling conclusion: "The amount of scientific and technical information which is classified could profitably be decreased perhaps by as much as 90 percent."

An Air Force security expert, William G. Florence, went even further in testimony before Congress after the Pentagon task force had completed its work. He said:

"I sincerely believe that less than one-half of 1 percent of the different documents which bear currently assigned classification markings actually contain (classified) information. In other words, the disclosure of information in at least 99 ½ percent of those classified documents could not be (harmful to) the nation."

The heart of the problem is the number of federal employees who are authorized to classify documents at one level or another. The current estimate of rubber-stamp wielders is 2.49 million.

This astounding number is hardly what President Reagan had in mind when he issued Executive Order 12356. It listed just 25 persons in government who should have the power to classify a document as Top Secret.

But a loophole in the executive order allows the top 25 to designate surrogates who may share their privilege. Now there are 1,516 persons empowered to make an original determination that a document will be stamped Top Secret.

On the next step lower on the ladder of security (and prestige), there are just six additional persons who can classify something as Secret. But they share their authority with 4,235 surrogates.

Finally, the executive order names exactly three additional officials who can classify documents as Confidential; they share the authority with 1,149 surrogates.

But even the total of 6,900 persons who are allowed to classify a document on sight, without consulting anyone, is deceptive. That's because there are 2,484,541 additional federal employees who hold what is called "derivative classification authority."

Normally, these "derivatives" may classify material only when it uses information from an originally classified document. But in some cases they can make their own classification decisions on original material, using guidelines laid down by the top rubber-stampers. So the net effect is that there are, indeed, 2.49 million federal employees contributing to the secret paper mountain that is proving so difficult to protect.

Clearly the classification system is in serious need of an overhaul. Only when the number of bureaucrats with the power to create official secrets is drastically cut back will the nation's legitimate secrets be given the protection they deserve.

GEORGE F. WILL

Ball-point marks West's doom

WASHINGTON — In the silent watches of the night, I wonder: What development sealed the West's doom? The regicide of Charles I? Lenin's arrival at the Finland Station? The answer, I think, is the invention of the ball-point pen.

George F. Will

But here, near the White House, is a redoubt of correct thinking — Fahrney's pen store, headquarters of the counter-revolution in favor of fountain pens. Fahrney's will sell you a ball point, but in an austere deprecating manner.

The grandeur that was Rome included a bronze instrument resembling a fountain pen, found in the ruins of Pompeii. But the sack of Rome by the Goths (looters probably looking for ball points) put pens in decline until (I am simplifying a bit) 1884. Then Lewis Waterman, an insurance salesman, lost a large commission when a leaky pen ruined a contract. "Drats!" he said, and invented the fountain pen.

With pens, as with most things, war has been a transforming force. Sales of fountain pens soared during World War I, the result of folks writing to the boys over there. But a surging sea of barbarism was about to submerge the spires and battlements of civilization because back in 1888 a sinister person named John Loud had got a patent for a ball-point pen.

Ball points did not get rolling until 1935 when a Hungarian in Argentina perfected a way of grinding an ink-dispensing ball. Then — war, again — the British got interested in ball points because pilots were having trouble writing at high altitudes. One thing led to another, and then to Gimbles. There, on Oct. 29, 1945, a day that will live in infamy, 10,000 ball-point pens were sold at $12.50, serious money back then. Twenty-seven customers fainted. One would like to think they were overcome with shame.

At first, manufacturers boasted that ball points could write under water. They were just the thing for a Thoreau who wanted to write in, rather than about, Walden pond. Later, the pitch was refined: "Ball points write through butter!" But who writes sonnets on toast?

When, 5,000 years ago, the Mesopotamians said, "Hey, let's invent writing so we can have more than an oral tradition," they had no idea their bright idea would be so faint by 1985 A.D. Writing may be on the way out. We are inundated by non-literate forms of communication. People receive most of their information (if such it can be called) through their ears, or through flickering pictures presented to their staring eyes. Non-readers are mere receptacles, passively ingesting sounds and sights, avoiding the demands of the active and complicated skill of reading. Reading and writing flourish and languish together.

One reason letter-writing is a dying art and one reason most people consider any sort of writing a chore is that they have never known the physical pleasure, the tactile satisfaction, of a smoothly flowing pen. They have spent their lives pushing ball points across paper, which is like pushing a primitive plow through soggy loam.

When civilization is in steep decline, even good things, like today's increasing sales of fountain pens, happen for dismal reasons. The Mont Blanc Diplomat, an exquisite instrument, suddenly is, like the BMW automobile, another adults' toy from Germany. A salesman at a tony Fifth Avenue shop explains why the shop sells pens but not ink: "Our customers aren't interested in ink."

It is a sacrilege to treat a great pen as a mere ornament. I shall never forget my sense of desolation when my first Diplomat was stolen at the 1980 Democratic Convention (where, of course, private property was not safe). I immediately called Fahrney's.

Fahrney's knows that pens are more than mere property. The store got started as a pen hospital, performing bladderectomies. The Fahrney's Franciscan staff is trained to be gentle when telling someone that his pen is in terminal condition. That is one reason why, just as lovers of outdoor gear make pilgrimages to the L.L. Bean store in Freeport, Maine, pen fanciers trek to Fahrney's as to a shrine.

Defenders of ball points say such pens are necessary for the functioning of the modern world — a perverse defense. They say that ball points, which unlike fountain pens can be pressed as hard as a spade, are needed for filling out credit-card chits and the form-in-triplicate that are bureaucracy's blood. Having heard that defense of ball points, the prosecution rests.

Although ball points ruin penmanship, not even the best fountain pen can fix my scrawl. I am like Joseph Epstein, literary critic and penophile, who says that his handwriting on fine stationery would be like chili on Limoge china. But Epstein, a man of intellectual dash, has had a sublime thought. There are Chris Evert-Lloyd tennis racquets and Jack Nicklaus golf clubs and Pete Rose bats. Why not autograph-model pens? Imagine a George Eliot model fountain pen. Be still my heart.

Checks bring no respect for money

The woman ahead of me in a supermarket checkout line wrote a check for three bananas. I was appalled.

"No wonder the country is going down the drain," I told the children that evening as they settled in front of the TV to watch "Miami Vice."

Russell Baker

I waited for one to ask me what I was talking about so I could reply, "Would you believe I saw a woman today write a check to pay for three bananas?"

But of course none of them asked me what I was talking about. It made me furious.

"Why don't you ask me what I'm talking about when I make a provocative remark about the country going down the drain?" I said.

They said they knew what I was talking about. I was talking about the disgusting nationwide condition characterized by children settled in front of television sets watching cops wear pastel wardrobes.

I sneered at their innocence, crying, "The arrogant innocence of children! How can you think that I, who spent the best Saturday afternoons of my life watching Buster Crabbe dashing about the planet Mongo in the fanciest-cut long johns ever seen on the silver screen ..."

I had forgotten what I was saying.

"Country going down the drain," murmured the oldest child as he rose to refresh his glass.

"Exactly," I said. "In my day I had to give up Buster Crabbe on the planet Mongo before I could drink bourbon."

A remarkable onset of violence distracted their attention from my philosophical musings. When it subsided I put the question to them squarely.

"Will you all promise your old dad here and now that you will never pay for three bananas by writing a check?"

They looked mildly curious. I urged them to listen because a check was too serious to be used for buying three bananas. When people started writing checks to pay for three bananas it showed a lack of respect for money.

"Am I getting through? Do you know what I mean when I say unless we start showing some respect for money, the country's going down the drain?"

"I understand, dad," said the girl. She is highly intelligent, a college graduate. "You're saying we should always pay for our bananas with a credit card."

Is it any wonder that President Reagan himself, the greatest balanced-budget man our nation has produced since who knows when — is it any wonder that he doubled the national debt in a single Presidential term? When there was no respect for the seriousness of money and its most serious instruments — checks, plastic credit cards, commercial paper, bills of attainder, letters of marque — when there was no respect for the very idea of money, even a Reagan might take the nation down the drain.

Some truly evil young people, but beautifully coiffed, were firing automatic weapons in faraway corrupt Miami on the TV screen.

"People who write checks for three bananas at the supermarket are people too innocent to be scared when they ask a person if dinner at La Rive Coach is expensive and that person replies, 'Take your checkbook.'"

"That's 'Rive Gauche,' dad, not 'Rive Coach'," said the girl with her college degree that, now that I thought of it, had been paid for with checks serious enough to buy an entire boatload of bananas and a banana-republic dictator.

"Don't talk Rive Gauche to me, daughter," I said. "Not when I am talking about the dignity and respect due to significant sums of money as represented by the grand old American checking account."

The TV had passed from bloodletting into its marketing mode. Actors disguised as bankers seemed to be urging the children to borrow immense sums of money to establish heavy industrial plants.

The younger boy, who is interested in antiques, took the opportunity to ask why people used to get scared when, having asked whether dinner at La Rive Whichever was expensive, they were told, "Take your checkbook."

"Because when money was still accorded a little respect in this country," I said, "people used their checkbooks only for the most serious purchases, like buying a car, a house, a trip to Europe ..."

"Miami Vice" resumed with screams, gunfire and contemporary music. A revoltingly evil man was buying a car, a house, a trip to Europe and paying with cash. It was infuriating. Before he took off for Europe, I knew, that man would go to the supermarket, buy three bananas to help him survive the airline food and pay for them by writing a check. No wonder we're going down the drain.

Most hunters aren't sadistic, trigger-happy nuts

Modisett

In a number of letters to the Reporter-Telegram in recent weeks, writers have criticized hunting and hunters, and those letters may have left the impression that every hunter in the state is a sadistic, trigger-happy nut whose main purpose is to rid the state — if not the nation — of wildlife.

I don't honestly believe that was the intent of the letter writers. I believe they perceive a problem and wanted to make it known to the public in general. Regardless though, those writers have struck on a point that needs to be properly addressed to put the problem in perspective and to restore integrity to hunting.

I'm a hunter. I don't consider myself a "good" hunter if that definition is based on the ability to bag game. In fact, I'm probably about like a lot of other hunters in Texas and the nation who because of constraints on their time get precious few opportunities to take part in a pastime they enjoy.

Having hunted most of my life, I've had the opportunity to observe and learn from hundreds of other hunters. I can honestly say that nearly all the hunters I've come into contact with in the past two decades or so are intelligent, level-headed, and cautious individuals who know where to draw the line on horseplay and foolishness, and that hunting isn't all about killing animals. Most hunters are extremely safety conscious and willingly "dress down" anyone in the field or the rifle range who isn't practicing good hunter safety techniques or sensible and fair game-stalking practices.

That's right. Hunting isn't all about killing. That may come as a shock to a lot of people who've never taken the time to go out into the fields and pastures to rub elbows with some of these hunters. In fact, hunting's major appeal for many individuals is getting out in the outdoors, walking through fields and across streams, breathing fresh air, watching the world — the real world — awake in the early-morning mist or go to sleep in the twilight and sorting out all of the mental garbage one collects from living in a city without some time to refresh the soul.

In fact, if you can get most hunters to be completely candid with you — and hunters, as a class, do suffer from a tendency to weave tall tales with surprising regularity — a large majority of them probably will admit they rarely "get their limit" in any particular season and may see several seasons pass without even firing a shot at an animal. But they still enjoy "hunting."

And simply because one fires that shot is no guarantee of hunting success. Why? Well, if you've had an old rifle stuffed into a closet for years without ever firing a shot — or maybe you've never even fired a shot at game — go out to a rifle range and fire a few rounds at a target set up at 50 or 100 yards. I would be willing to wager that the ordinary person who hasn't fired a shot in at least six months won't be able to hit the bullseye, much less the entire target, in the first three shots at 50 yards. It's not unusual for a shooter to miss the first several shots at 100 yards — even shooting with a scope.

You see, hunting is like everything else. It takes practice and skill and patience and perseverance.

Now, after having fired at that fixed target a number of times and missing, imagine your luck firing at a turkey in flight or a spooked deer putting several hundred yards between you and him at breakneck speed.

Hunters who are successful typically shoot every week, sometimes every day, and more than that, spend years learning the habits of game animals. The hunt becomes what it has always been. A test of skills: stalking and tracking just to get that one shot, which probably won't be successful without a lot of luck as well as skill.

Ironically, most hunters I know then give the game additional advantages: They don't fire at any birds unless they're in flight, they study the deer or other large animals closely to determine whether they're old enough or healthy enough to be taken, they observe legal hunting hours and bag limits.

All in all, hunting is a great sport and skill and brings enjoyment to many millions of hunters each season.

Now for the other side of the coin. There are those individuals who use very little common sense, go into the wilds to shoot at anything that moves — domestic animals and people included, refuse to respect the rights of homeowners and landowners, and generally are the ones responsible for giving hunting a bad name. They kill more animals than they should, if they're able, and usually leave the carcasses lying in the fields. What a senseless waste!

These individuals are not hunters. They make it dangerous for hunters and farmers and ranchers to be outdoors. Most hunters I know would like to see these individuals be refused hunting licenses. Most of these jokers, in fact, probably don't even buy hunting licenses. After all, most of what they are doing is illegal; why should they bother getting a license?

But don't blame hunters in general for the excesses of some nuts who happen to be old enough to buy guns. That would be the same as blaming all policemen because a few bad apples exist on some police forces or all teachers because some teachers are not qualified to teach.

Meet some hunters. Talk to them. You'll see what I'm talking about. And you'll probably come away with a greater respect for them, their abilities and the ancient tradition of hunting.

We spend 7 percent of our Gross National Product on defense and two-tenths of 1 percent on economic aid. This means that we are spending 35 times as much in preparing for a war which will probably never be fought as we do for programs which can help us win a war we are losing.

The time has come to reassess our priorities. I am not suggesting that we should support the well-intentioned, soft-headed proposals for a massive transfer of wealth from rich nations to poor. This would only create a permanent underclass of paupers nations seeking handouts. We should share not our wealth but the means to achieve wealth. The Reagan administration's Caribbean initiative and the Kissinger Commission's recommendations for aid to Central America point to the direction we should take.

With the industrial nations only beginning to recover from the recent worldwide recession, the last thing they are thinking about is more foreign aid. This is true despite the fact that in the last 20 years foreign aid has fallen substantially when measured as a percentage of GNP.

In 1960 the 17 largest industrial nations gave one half of 1 percent on their GNPs for foreign aid; by 1981 it had fallen to a third of 1 percent. Nations are fed up with seeing their money wasted on ill-conceived, poorly planned and badly-executed projects in the Third World. They are also discouraged by the lack of progress.

For example, during the 1970s personal income in black Africa, excluding oil-rich Nigeria, actually decreased despite billions of dollars in aid. The fact that Ethiopia's Marxist dictator Mengistu Haile Mariam spent $110 million on an obscenely lavish anniversary celebration last year while millions of Ethiopians were starving to death has disillusioned even the staunchest supporters of foreign aid programs.

Many abroad and in the United States have understandably concluded that foreign aid is not worth the investment. As far as traditional government-to-government aid is concerned, they are right. Much of it is wasted, especially when it is handed over with no strings attached. Often officials in a developing country are too proud to take advice from foreigners about how to spend the money, while the bureaucrats in the donor countries are too poorly informed or too sensitive to Third World officials' tender egos to offer advice, lay down conditions, or follow up on a grant once it has been made.

But just as a bank does no favor to a lender by making him a bad loan, we do not help a Third World country when we provide aid which subsidizes socialism, the status quo, corruption, or repression.

Garfield homeowner offers two-cents' worth

As the owner of a home on Garfield, I have been following the recent controversy with a great deal of interest, if not prejudice. I now offer my two-cents' worth.

Any time the city planners propose to sacrifice the property values and appearance of one neighborhood for the convenience of another, they should bear in mind the interests of the entire community and make certain they keep the big picture in mind. Widening Garfield alone would seem to violate these two considerations.

The south end of Garfield deadends at the hospital. In order to reach downtown, Garfield traffic feeds into one of two main east-west streets — Cuthbert or Michigan. In order to significantly increase the amount of traffic on south Garfield, it seems obvious that either Cuthbert or Michigan — or both — must also be widened. To widen Garfield would only create a bottleneck unless the capacity of the outlet streets were also increased proportionately.

If this is, indeed, the case, do the city planners believe that providing North Midland residents another artery to downtown is worth disrupting not just one but two or three neighborhoods? I urge the city planners not to irreparably damage the Garfield neighborhood without bearing in mind this big picture.

A piecemeal or temporary approach to resolving this issue would be disastrous.

Midland should be proud of paramedics

They are very kind, gentle, friendly and most efficient. From personal experience, I can say Midland should be very proud of this service.

Anti-communist Angolan rebels deserve U.S. support

Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — Ever since World War II the U.S.S.R. has spread its power from war-shattered Europe world-wide, deep into Asia, Latin America, into Africa and the Middle East. Its aims usually are carried out by surrogates, normally local communist cadres often assisted by opportunistic and ambitious politicians who think they can play the Moscow game but usually lose their heads in the short run.

Emphasizing the communist expansion tactics, our State Department charged Thursday that Cubans were engaged in active combat in Nicaragua. Officials asserted that Cuban forces are involved in active operations with the use of Soviet-made helicopters supplied to the Marxist Nicaraguan regime.

A ranking State Department official charged that not only were the Cubans actively fighting and directing the Nicaraguan troops, but that they had just attempted "a foothold on the mainland of North America."

It is rare to the average American observer that an anti-communist movement starts in the country of origin and makes considerable headway against any given pro-communist regime. This is happening in Angola, a large nation in southwestern Africa which is propped up by 30,000 Cuban legionnaires sent there by Fidel Castro to maintain a puppet pro-Kremlin government.

A STRAPPING anti-communist guerrilla named Jonas Savimbi leads this fight and has come within striking distance of toppling the regime hated by the population, which fights for scraps of food, and whose the economy is in a desperate condition.

Savimbi, whose forces are known as the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, originally fought to rid his country of Portuguese colonial rule only to see Moscow-type domination installed. It is colonialism at its worst and Savimbi's efforts to oust the regime and its Cuban helpers should be applauded.

Unfortunately, little attention has been paid to the area, which is close to South Africa. Savimbi receives his weapons from captured Cuban and regime arsenals and also receives small arms from South Africa.

He doesn't have the steady supply that the Soviets pour into the regime and Castro sends to his legionnaires. His are guerrilla operations, at which Savimbi is exceedingly adept.

Congressman Jack Kemp, R-NY, in a recent article published in the New York Times, was eloquent in urging that the United States do all possible in coming to Savimbi's assistance. He unquestionably had in mind the declaration by President Reagan that the United States should be prepared to extend some 'covert" aid to Savimbi to assist him in his efforts to rid Angola of communist control.

Angola has large oil deposits and quite a backlog of mineral resources.

JOHN P. Wallach, Foreign Affairs Editor for The Hearst Newspapers, wrote that for the first time the Angolan regime agreed in principle to the phased withdrawal of the Cuban forces. This is seen as part of a package settlement that will terminate South African colonial rule in mineral-rich, neighboring Namibia, Wallach wrote.

Congressman Kemp asserted in his article that Angola's government is "an outpost of white Soviet-style colonialism on the African continent." He said that it was profoundly reactionary and flies in the face of the historical liberation of Africa from colonial regimes and the gradual progress toward democracy.

"We have no right to sit on our hands while soldiers from Cuba and commanders from the Soviet Union crush the aspirations of five million blacks," wrote Congressman Kemp.

The congressman pointed out that while it was most regrettable that Savimbi's forces found it necessary to take support from South Africa, we all should be reminded that America in its infancy during our revolution accepted assistance from an autocratic French king to help achieve our independence from Britain.

"Aiding UNITA does not prevent a political settlement. On the contrary, the cost to the Marxist government of keeping its Cuban phalanx is high — estimated at between $400 million and $800 million a year. If negotiations succeed it will be because UNITA has put pressure on the Marxists to remove foreign forces and move toward free elections. Assist the freedom fighters and negotiate we can and should do both," Congressman Kemp wrote.

WHILE THE summit between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev apparently ended with minimal success and a mutual pledge for future summits, the U.S.S.R. obviously has not altered its tactics in any way from striving toward world domination through whatever agents or agencies it can use.

At home in the Soviet Union, the Russians pursue the same ruthless policy towards dissenters as in Stalin's day. For instance, the famed Soviet academician Dr. Andrei D. Sakharov was forcibly fed for 207 days during the last 18 months. His nose was clamped shut to force him to open his mouth, according to relatives. This information was disclosed in Rome where Sakharov's wife, Yelana G. Bonner, arrived for medical treatment. She will subsequently come to the United States for heart bypass surgery.

The ordeal of Sakharov, a Nobel Peace Prize winner, who was prevented by Soviet authorities from leaving the country, was conveyed by his wife's son and son-in-law who came from Massachussetts to see her.

The KGB, in order to make the outside world think that Sakharov was in fair shape from his place in enforced exile at the City of Gorky north of Moscow, forged messages and sought to conceal his fast so that the world might believe Sakharov was alive and well. He apparently was in bad shape after the dreadful experiences to which he was subjected by the brutal KBG treatment.

A United Nations committee issued a declaration the other day condemning Soviet violations of human rights in Afghanistan and charged that the puppet government the U.S.S.R. supports has been equally guilty of such abuses. Normally, the U.N. refrains from taking on super-powers for violations, particularly where the ticklish and delicate problems of human rights are concerned, but a huge dossier of abuses brought to its attention caused the normally stolid bureaucrats to explode with anger.

And justifiably so.

Monahans man dies, passenger hurt in accident

From Staff Reports

A Monahans man was killed and another injured in a one-vehicle accident early Saturday, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Jack T. Welch, 20, the driver of the 1981 Chevrolet tubing tester, was killed. A passenger, Fernando Sotelo, 29, also of Monahans, is listed in good condition at Crane Memorial Hospital.

The accident occurred at 7:30 a.m. on an unnamed county road 3.8 miles east of U.S. Highway 385, according to the DPS. Welch was pronounced dead at the scene at 9:22 a.m. by Justice of the Peace Margaret Robertson. The body was taken to Box Funeral Home.

Two women take $200 from sleepwalker

Eustis Duhon, 73, of Abbeville, La., was visiting his son in Texas City, about 30 miles south of Houston, when the incident occurred, police said.

Duhon apparently wandered from his son's house in a trance late Thursday, police said. He was found four hours later, 12 blocks away, officers said.

Police Capt. Savas Saragoza said Duhon vageuly recalled having his wallet taken by two women who fled in a black car.

No arrests have been made, Saragoza said

Mistletoe sowed in vain

The Japanese once believed that mistletoe would make their gardens bear more plentifully. They picked mistletoe from the venerated willow trees, prayed over it, cut it into fine pieces and sowed it along with millet, rice and other seeds. But mistletoe can't be cultivated; it just happens. — CNS

Texas teacher shot in hijacking transferred to U of M hospital

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Jackie Nink Pflug, a special education teacher who was shot in the head by the hijackers of an Egyptair jetliner last month, was transferred Saturday night to University of Minnesota Hospitals.

Bob Waligora, resource supervisor at the hospital, said Mrs. Pflug, of Pasadena, Texas, was admitted at about 5:15. She was flown to Minnesota from Andrews Air Force base in Washington, where she had arrived Friday night from an Air Force base hospital in Germany.

Waligora said Mrs. Pflug's family had requested that no information be released on her condition.

Mrs. Pflug, 30, is the daughter-in-law of June and Gregg Pflug of Minnetonka.

MADD to host Candlelight Vigilceremony

From Staff Reports

Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) will host a Candlelight Vigil Monday to pay tribute to victims of alcohol-related crashes.

The ceremony will be held on the south side of Midland County Courthouse at 7 p.m. and is open to "all friends and supporters." Participants will light candles to signify their commitment to end the threat of drunk driving on America's highways, said a MADD spokesman.

"The holiday season is a time of joy and sharing for most people — uniting families and friends together in the happiness of all life has to offer," said Faye Higgins. "For other people, the holidays are filled with sorrow and grief because of the deaths or injuries of loved ones at the hands of drunk drivers."

To have the name of a loved one put on the list to be read at the vigil, call 683-3135, 689-8692 or 699-1711.

Courses will begin in January, February, March or April in the areas of computer information systems, office education and real estate.

For information, contact the MC Student Services Office. Course bulletins also are available at Midland banks, Midland County Library and the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

FAMILY PLANNING IS UNDER ATTACK

Unlike any other law in history, the Family Planning Services and Population Research Act (Title X) actually prevents hundreds of thousands of unintended pregnancies and abortions each year. So why are "abortion foes" out to destroy it?

Their opposition to abortion has earned them headlines across the country. But behind the scenes on Capitol Hill and among their hard-line supporters, their real target has always been family planning itself.

In session after session they've attempted to sabotage America's family planning program. This time, they're out to destroy Title X entirely. They do this even though it makes no sense and even though it flies in the face of their public stand against abortion. For those in hot pursuit of an ideological victory, sense and logic don't count.

The fact is that since 1970, with overwhelming bi-partisan support, Title X has given millions of Americans (especially those with low incomes) a genuine alternative to unwanted pregnancy and abortion. As a result, the nation's family planning program has been credited with preventing more than 800,000 unwanted pregnancies and 433,000 abortions in a single year.

The program is also very cost-effective. For example, in Texas a low-income woman can receive birth control information and services for one year at a cost of $65. However, the welfare costs for the birth and first year of care for a child born to that woman is over $4,600.

But now, because of a surprise attack from some anti-abortion Congressmen, our nation's family planning program is on the verge of being destroyed. The damage will be enormous, measured in dollars, measured in lives.

Funding will cease for contraceptive services to women on the brink of poverty and families struggling desperately to get out. Eight family planning clinics in the Permian Basin will be affected, leaving thousands of women without the help they need to prevent unwanted pregnancy.

Unless you help preserve Title X in its entirety, a wise and compassionate national tradition of making family planning available to all who need it will vanish overnight. That's intolerable.

Despite the fact that no Title X funds are used to provide abortion-despite the fact that Title X is the only proven way to prevent abortion- Title X opponents have vowed to block any rescue effort with one crippling amendment after another.

They can't be allowed to succeed. The only way to stop them is for you to contact your Senators and your Representative and tell them what you think.

Do it today. Because if there's going to be family planning tomorrow, you just can't wait until then.

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

ODESSA — Call it Mojo Magic or whatever you like, the Odessa Permian Panthers know how to win. Even when they're outplayed.

Such was the case here Saturday at Ratliff Stadium. Irving MacArthur's Cardinals outplayed the Panthers but couldn't outscore them. Permian won 27-7.

The Cardinals were able to tear apart the Panthers' rush defense for 223 yards by sending two backs to the century mark, a first for the year.

In fact, only two backs all year had been able to break 100 against the Mojo D: Midland High's Jake Madrid and Amarillo Palo Duro's Earl Pettis. MacArthur quarterback Shawn Hall and running back Wayne England can be added to the list, with Hall picking up 116 yards on 23 carries and England 100 on 27.

"We played with them the whole game," said England. "We committed the mistakes this week and we're usually the ones who take advantage of mistakes. Like Lee last week, that's exactly the way we've been winning.

"We're real proud of our season. It's the most playoff wins in our school's history. We have nothing to be ashamed of today. We can't let it ruin our year because we had a great year."

In the end, it was the area MacArthur coach Ray Overton was most concerned about going into the game that did in the Cardinals: Permian's passing threat in Greg Anderson. Mojo outgained the Cardinals 181-82 through the air.

"We were impressed with him coming in and we still are," said Overton of the Panther split end who caught three passes for 106 yards and a touchdown. His other two catches set up Permian scores. "We knew he could be the difference in the game and he was."

There was one other big difference in the game: MacArthur's inability to hang onto the ball, losing three key fumbles in the first half.

MacARTHUR DREW first blood when Hall busted loose on a 42-yard run to the end zone with only 1:43 gone in the game. The quarterback option keeper came on the Cardinal's second play after their defense held Permian to minus two yards on the Panthers' first series.

MacArthur kept Permian off the scoreboard the entire first quarter despite losing a fumble on the Panther 18. Kicker Woody Bryant had the distance on the 45-yard field goal attempt, but it sailed wide left.

One bullet was dodged and MacArthur seemed on its way to the semifinals.

Taking the ball on the Permian 29, the Cardinals mounted an 11-play, 49-yard drive only to have it stopped when Hall's pitch to England was off the mark. Permian's Blake Batte fell on the ball and the Panthers were saved the possibility of trailing by two touchdowns.

Instead of leading by 14-0 or 10-0, the Cardinals found themselves in a tie game when Anderson showed why he is held in such high esteem by coaches around the state. Beating defensive back Bryan Love on a deep route, the Panther split end hauled in a 43-yarder at the MacArthur 10 to set up Mark Seider's three-yard scoring run.

Starting on their own 17 following the kickoff, the Cardinals began their second long drive. This time, they went 70 yards and were on the Panthers' 13 when Hall's pitch to England hit the ground between the running back's feet.

Five plays later Anderson was wide open at the Cardinal 10-yard line, hauling in a pass from quarterback Jason Harrington and He took it into the end zone for a 47-yard TD and a 14-7 game.

MacARTHUR KEPT moving the ball in the second half but couldn't mount another sustained drive. Two series ended in punts, two were stopped on downs and one died when the fourth quarter clock expired.

Meanwhile, Permian kept adding to its lead. Patrick Wilson made it 20-7 with a nine-yard run two plays after Darren Allman returned a punt 39 yards to the 11. Bryant missed the PAT.

In the fourth quarter, the Panthers came up with an insurance TD after Anderson kept a midfield drive alive with a 16-yarder for a first down at the 34. Bryan Lauterbach scored on a 26-yard pass from Harrington and Bryant closed out the scoring with the PAT, 27-7.

"I thought we played good defense," said Overton. "We let Anderson catch a few passes he shouldn't have. I told the kids to forget about the mistakes in the first half, relax, come out and play because I felt like we outplayed them. I thought we'd come back and win in the second half."

PERMIAN DEFENSIVE lineman Mark Gladson saw the game as a lot of mistakes on the Panthers' part. "I think, basically, we weren't doing our fundamentals like wrapping up on our tackles when we made the hit. They were getting extra yards on runs. We just weren't turning them back like we should have."

But, giving credit where it was due, Gladson added, "They were doing exactly like we expected and we didn't stop them. They're just a tough team."

Offensively, Harrington, Anderson and Lauterbach played a good game. Harrington completed 7-of-11 passes for 181 yards and two touchdowns. Anderson and Lauterbach each caught three for 106 and 61 yards respectively and each scored. Tight end Nolan Watson caught the other pass.

"I think everybody was a little antsy at first and then we relaxed. I started throwing the ball better and we started playing like we know we can."

Harrington, who spent the first two years of his high school career sidelined with injuries, is happy to be guiding the Panthers this year, getting his chance at a starting role when Rich Fletcher went down in pre-district with a knee injury.

SWC proposal would limit booster recruiting

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — The troubled Southwest Conference, stung by new accusations against a member institution, put its hopes Saturday on a plan that would all but eliminate the boosters from the recruiting process.

"Our hope is that it (the proposal to be submitted to the NCAA in January) will help, but it's not the final answer," said SWC President Dr. Michael Johnson of the University of Houston. "There is no doubt that a lot of our current problems are booster-related."

Commissioner Fred Jacoby of the SWC said it was at least "a signal."

"We need to break up the coach, booster, student triangle," he said. "It should be just a straight line between the coach and the student."

Even if the proposal passes at the NCAA Convention in New Orleans, Jacoby pointed out the legislation "would not prevent telephone calls and letter-writing by boosters."

The SWC meeting ended Saturday amid accusations in a copyrighted Dallas Times Herald story that Texas A&M coach Jackie Sherrill is trying to stonewall information about his players while NCAA violations are being investigated. Sherrill denied there is any "cover-up" of information.

JACOBY HAD no comment on the A&M situation only to say that the SWC "will work with the NCAA if it ends up being a major matter. If it is a secondary case, then we (the SWC) will work with the institution."

The SWC compliance committee on Saturday reviewed Southern Methodist's recent three-year probation by the NCAA.

Johnson said the conference decided to "accept the action of the NCAA. As far as the conference is concerned, the SMU case is closed."

However, other matters were in the wings including NCAA investigations of the Baylor basketball program and the Texas Christian football program.

NCAA action on the Baylor program is expected within a week.

"The Baylor case should be resolved soon," said Jacoby.

Johnson said stronger measures are needed than exempting the booster from recruiting.

"When an athlete accepts significant extra benefits, that should make him a professional and not eligible to compete again," said Johnson.

Jacoby said the problem with boosters is that "once he or she gets involved they sometimes become too competitive. Misguided loyalties take over and suddenly it becomes like making a sale."

Mustang misery concludes, Sooners manhandle SMU

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Finally, fourth-ranked Oklahoma can begin worrying about No. 1 Penn State.

Oklahoma was assured an Orange Bowl berth against the Nittany Lions two weeks ago, after beating Nebraska. But the Sooners had to get past Oklahoma State and Southern Methodist before thinking about a national championship.

They cleared that final hurdle Saturday, riding the performance of quarterback Jamelle Holieway to a 35-13 victory over SMU.

"We control our destiny this year," said Oklahoma noseguard Tony Casillas. "We have it in the palm of our hand and it's up to us to win it. It all rests on our shoulders."

Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer said he had "no idea" whether the victory would move his team up in the poll.

"I hope our performance today will show the people around the country we are a different team than we were seven or eight weeks ago," Switzer said.

Holieway scored on runs of 38 and 3 yards, and threw a 16-yard touchdown pass to split end Lee Morris. He finished with 126 yards rushing.

"Jamelle Holieway had an excellent game, he made some unbelievable plays," Switzer said. "He made some unbelievable checks against their defenses."

THE SOONERS finished their regular season 10-1, their best regular-season record since 1979. Southern Methodist wound up 6-5, giving the Mustangs more than four losses for the first time since 1979.

The Mustangs, on NCAA probation, made their final televised appearance until the 1987 season.

"Both our offense and our defense played well, and I'm proud of our football team," said SMU Coach Bobby Collins. "I'll tell you all right now . . . that we're going to be there come next fall."

Bo Jackson takes Heisman in 'closest ever' vote

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — At one point Saturday, Bo Jackson wasn't sure he would survive the Heisman Trophy announcement.

Survive he did, however, winning the 1985 award in the closest vote in the 51-year history of the trophy, which is awarded by the Downtown Athletic Club.

"It's been on my mind all day, and I felt like my heart was going to jump out of my shirt," said Jackson, the Auburn tailback who beat Iowa quarterback Chuck Long by only 45 points in the balloting.

"It's the first time since I've been in college that I've been nervous. I think the people in the next row could hear my heart beating, I was so nervous."

Jackson, who rushed for 1,786 yards this season, said that winning the Heisman was the culmination of his collegiate athletic career, but "getting my degree is more important than the Heisman.

"The Heisman symbolizes the best athlete," he said, "but when I'm done with sports, I can always use my degree in the rest of my life."

Jackson had had his toughness questioned several times this season after removing himself from games with Tennessee and Florida, both of which Auburn lost. But he responded to his critics with a 142-yard effort against Alabama despite playing with broken ribs.

"It wasn't easy," said Jackson, who is also a pro pospect in baseball. "I had to sit and listen to all the criticism that people dished out. Then you have to prove yourself on the field.

"I think I handled it very well, I didn't let it get to me."

Jackson became the second Auburn to capture the award. In 1971, Auburn quarterback Pat Sullivan won the Heisman, the last non-running back to win it until last year when Boston College quarterback Doug Flutie was the recipient.

Jackson and Sullivan are the only Auburn players ever to win the award, named for John Heisman, who coached at Auburn among other schools.

"I think he is most deserving," Sullivan told The Associated Press in Montgomery, Ala. "He is the finest athlete I have ever seen as far as being a pure athlete. I think he has handled himself in a class manner. I am proud to be an alumnus of the same school."

"I wouldn't say it's just a running back award," Jackson noted. "There are tons of great athletes out there. I don't think they should overlook the rest of the field, there are a lot of talented and good people out there."

"Bo has been the strength and heart and soul that put Auburn football back on the map," Dye said. "I feel the same way today as I did four years ago when Bo came to Auburn. You could see he had just unbelievable God-given ability."

And now he has the Heisman.

Jackson, who has been projected by National Football League scouts as the top pick in next spring's draft, had 317 first-place votes and finished with 1,509 points. Long was second with 1,464 points and had 286 first-place votes.

Jackson and Long split as winners of the six regions in the voting. Jackson was first in the Mid-Atlantic, South and Southwest, while Long won in the Northeast, Midwest and Far West.

"It means a great deal," said Jackson. "It's something I've looked over the years at ... It's a tradition I'll try to uphold.

Jackson will receive the trophy at a dinner here Thursday.

Purdue quarterback Jim Everett was sixth, followed by Navy running back Napoleon McCallum, Notre Dame runner Allen Pinkett, tailback Joe Dudek of Plymouth, N.H., State, a Division III school.

Chaps hoping to keep WJCAC record clean

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

New Mexico Military Institute started off at an 8-1 gallop in preconference games, but has dropped both its Western Junior College Athletic Conference outings.

Monday night the Cadets invade Langford Chaparral Center for a 7:30 p.m. against Midland College and NMMI would like to snap back in the final league game before the Christmas break.

The Chaps are 12-0, but for all the recognition it has brought in the national junior college rankings, they seem to be spinning their wheels. MC is undefeated and unlisted among the nation's top 20 and it's a little strange. Three other Texas teams are listed among the elite, headed by Kankakee, Ill., at 10-0.

BUT THAT'S something Coach Jerry Stone would prefer not to dwell on. His main concern is NMMI. "We're tired, but we'd really like to finish up this part of the season without a loss. It really makes a nicer Christmas break for everyone if we are undefeated up to that point."

In NMMI, Midland will be facing a team that is first in WJCAC defense and last in offense. One reason may be that one of the Cadets' prime offensive movers of a year ago, Chase Brown, is wearing MC Green and Gold this season.

So the offensive thrust for Coach Dave Campbell's young and inexperienced charges falls on the shoulders of Eric Adams, averaging 13.2 points per game. Steve Conley is the top rebounder with 6.7 a game and Forrest Barnes is pulling down 4.5 a game.

Ricky Grace and Daron Blaylock pace the Midland offense with 15.5 and 16.3 points-per-game, respectively, and Grace has an impressive 107 assists while Blaylock is second with 60. In steals, its Blaylock with 51 and Grace with 36.

On the boards, Eddie Frazier, 68; Tony Wright, 64; Derrick Lewis, 60, and Chase Brown, 57, are the rebound leaders. In blocks, Lewis 33, and Frazier, 27, are one, two.

MC opened the season with victories over South Plains College and New Mexico Junior College while NMMI suffered its losses at the hands of Western Texas and South Plains, both expected to contenders.

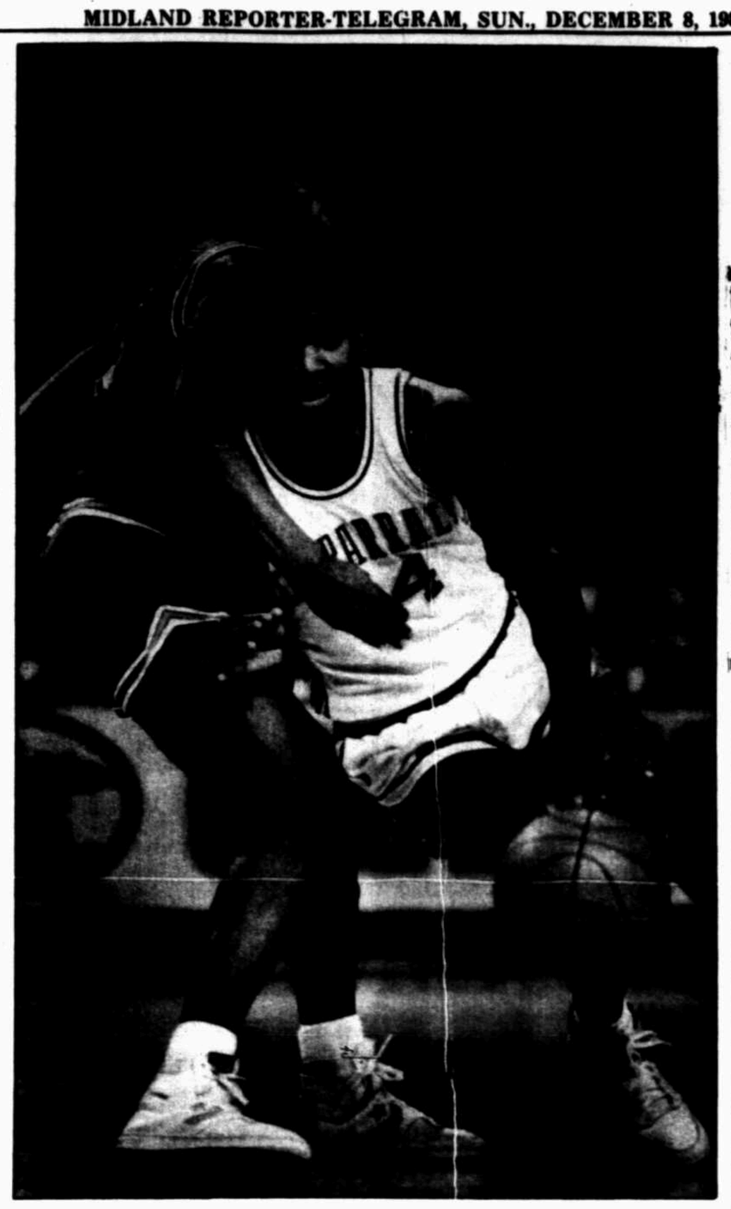

ALTHOUGH MC holds non-conference wins over Odessa College and WTC, as well as the games that count in the standings, it still hasn't faced the menace from the north, Frank Phillips, which beat WTC and lost, 75-74, at Odessa.

After Monday's game, the Chaps go into hibernation, then take a break in the desert sun in early January in the Rotary National Junior College Shootout at Mesa, a tournament that will provide a cross section of talent that should give MC an idea of how far it has come and how far it has to go.

Among the teams will be national champion Dixie, Utah; Shelby State, Tenn.; Ricks, Ind.; Hutchinson, Kan.; and one of those rare breeds, Taft, a California JC's that is seldom seen outside the boundaries of the Golden State.

K-State rips Tech, 80-57

Associated Press

MANHATTAN, Kan. — Norris Coleman connected on nine straight baskets while shooting 12 of 14 from the field for 28 points Saturday night to lift Kansas State to an 80-57 victory over Texas Tech.

The Wildcats led the Red Raiders by as many as 35 points in the second half on a slam-dunk by Percy Eddie at the 10:20 mark. The Red Raiders tried to get back in the game, going on a 19-10 spurt, but they could get no closer than the final 23-point margin.

Texas Tech was led by Wendell Owens with 16 points.

Vanderbilt 85, Baylor 61

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The Vanderbilt Commodores, paced by senior center Brett Burrow and freshman forward Frank Kornet, combined for 30 points to lead the Commodores to a thrashing of Baylor.

Baylor's record dropped to 4-1 with the loss, while Vandy's worksheet now stands at 2-2. It was the first Commodore victory at home this season after losing to nationally-ranked Duke earlier in the week.

The Southeast Conference Commodores broke up a tight game by outscoring the Bears 10-0 midway through the first half.

A technical foul on the Baylor bench started the ball rolling for Vandy, as Burrow sank both free throws for a 14-10 lead. A basket by 6-foot-6 junior Bobby Westbrooks and freshman Barry Kornet extended the lead to 22-10 with 12:16 left

Tennessee 88, Texas A&M 70

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Guard Tony White poured in 34 points, including 18 in the first half, as Tennessee stretched an early lead into a lopsided win.

The Aggies went the first four minutes without a basket and trailed 40-26 at intermission until a layup by 6-foot-3 senior guard Don Marbury, who led Texas A&M with 31 points, cut Tennessee's lead to 9.

Augustana rolls to 36th straight

ROCK ISLAND, Ill. (AP) — Augustana football Coach Bob Reade has already made three consecutive trips to the NCAA Division III national championship Amos Alonzo Stagg Bowl.

But he says it isn't enough.

"Our major goal was to play in the Stagg Bowl again, and now we are going to get that chance," said Reade, after Augustana beat Central of Iowa 14-7 Saturday in semifinal playoff action.

The Vikings, 12-0 on the season, ran their nation-leading winning streak to 36 in a row. Junior fullback Shane McCormick rushed for 115 yards on just 11 carries to lead the Augustana ground game.

The Vikings, top-ranked in the nation in Division III, will be shooting for their third straight NCAA Division III title.

"This feels great," said Harrington. "This is really the first year in two years I've been able to play football like I want to play."

"He does a real fine job getting open," said Harrington.

"Sometimes defenses start to key on Greg and that helps me get open," said Lauterbach. "He's such a fine receiver."

MacArthur bows out of the playoffs with a 9-3-2 record while Permian improves to 13-0-1. Next Saturday, the Panthers take on Cypress-Fairbanks, a 20-11 winner over Conroe, at 2 p.m. in Texas Stadium.

Kroc leaves Padre execs eating crow in San Diego

By WAYNE LOCKWOOD
Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — Here's a new item on the menu at McDonald's. Call it "McCrow."

San Diego Padres president Ballard Smith manfully downed a hearty portion Friday while assuring an amazed media assembly that his ballclub's bizarre week of front office intrigue was simply a matter of "miscommunication."

Manager Dick Williams didn't really say he was thinking about quitting. Ballard just thought he did.

Smith didn't really offer to settle the final year of Williams' contract. Dick just thought he did.

Third base coach Ozzie Virgil wasn't really fired. It just seemed that way. General manager Jack McKeon misunderstood the situation.

Owner Joan Kroc wasn't really angry about all this. She just got the wrong idea from reading the newspapers.

What these folks need is a week at the Cool Hand Luke School of Interpersonal Relationships, it seems. What we have here, at the very least, is a failure to communicate on a grand scale.

TOO BAD. These are good people, well-intentioned people. But events somehow got out of hand and now we are all asked to pretend that another year with a lame-duck manager who has alienated most of his players and much of the front office is really what everybody wanted in the first place.

He alone faced the media from a podium set for six. He alone assumed responsibility for the events of the week.

"There's no question there's been some miscommunication on the part of myself, and also Joan," Smith said.

"I feel bad about that. One of my jobs as CEO is to make sure there aren't these forms of miscommunication. So I guess I have to bear the responsibility for that."

How did Ballard happen to think Williams might not be back? Miscommunication.

"I had a conversation with Dick where he indicated that he wasn't sure he wanted to come back," said Smith.

"DICK WAS going off to do some stuff for Miller's (Brewery) and going on a cruise. My conversation with him was, 'Let's talk about it when you get back.'

"Did he hint that he wasn't coming back? Yes, he did hint. But the bottom line is Dick Williams is going to be back. Whether Dick Williams said he wasn't going to be back, or whatever, he's going to be back."

Why did Williams think the Padres might be prepared to buy out his contract? Miscommunication.

"I did not offer to buy out his contract, but Dick may have thought I said that," Ballard explained.

"I've spent a lot of time trying to figure it out. When we met on Oct. 30, one of the reasons I wanted to meet with him was so I could see about what he had said in the paper and various things. I was trying to get the meeting in the frame of 'Let's talk about what's best for the ballclub let's not worry about contracts and money and whatever.'

"I never offered to buy out his contract. That is not the type of thing I would do without sitting down and talking to Joan about. I can understand why she'd be upset to read about that in the media. I feel bad about it."

IN AN interview with The Associated Press, the owner also indicated that she was upset to read that Virgil had been released without her knowledge. Miscommunication.

"We felt that if there was going to be a change, if Dick had those feelings (about not returning), whoever the new manager would be should have the right to pick some of his coaches," Smith said.

"Jack told Ozzie that we were letting him go, unless Dick was coming back. Now that he is, if Dick wants Ozzie as his third-base coach, I have no problem with that."

He expects Williams, at the age of 57 and after 18 years as a major league manager, to modify his sometimes acerbic style in 1986.

"Dick obviousy is aware that there are players who have some concerns about him, about some of the things he does," said Smith.

"I think Dick has some adjustments to make in his style. He seems prepared to make them. I assume the players will meet him halfway."

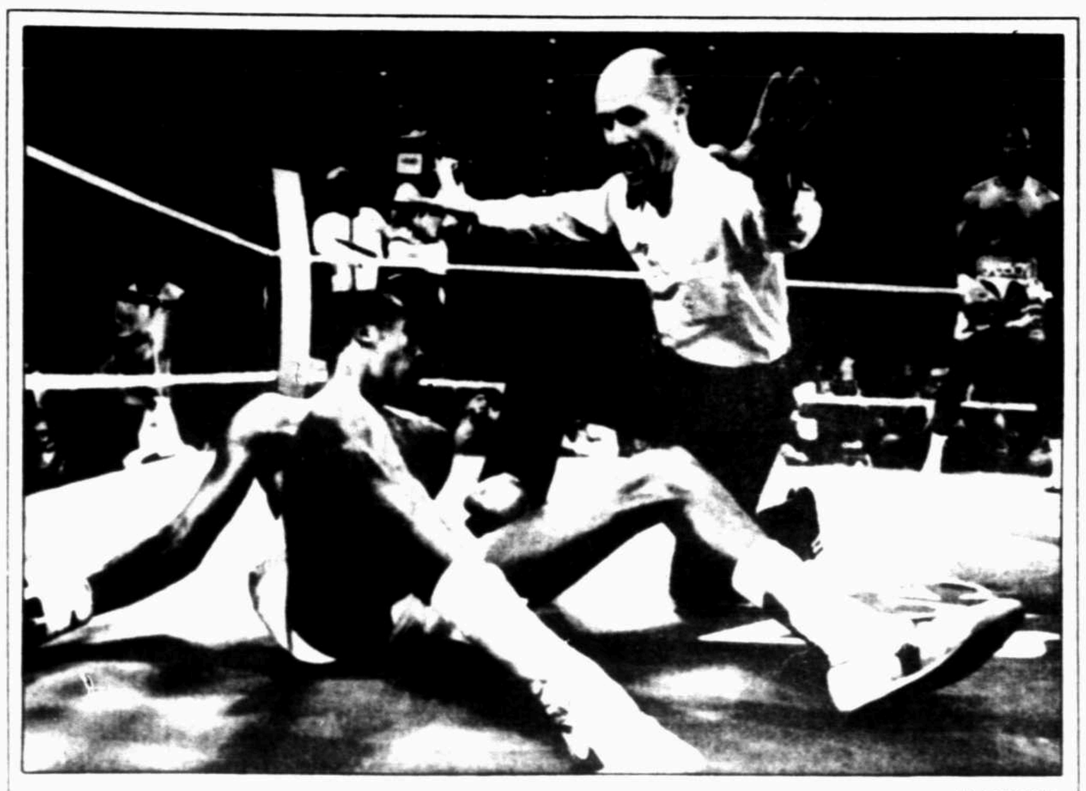

The most unfortunate outcome of a confused week is that Smith, who labored long and well to earn recognition as something more than than Ray Kroc's son-in-law, has been thrust abruptly back into that role.

The rug of authority has been yanked out from under both the president and the general manager. If McKeon can't even fire his third-base coach, how can he be taken seriously while attempting to negotiate a trade?

To that point, Smith read a statement prepared by his mother-in-law.

"I have complete confidence in Ballard," it said. "He is president of the ballclub, with all the authority that goes with that title."

Martin: I will manage again

By JAMES STERNGOLD
N.Y. Times News Service

BOCA RATON, Fla. — Billy Martin, the former manager of the Yankees, said recently he would decide this coming week after meeting with George Steinbrenner, the team's owner, what he would be doing next season. Martin added that one thing was clear.

"I'm going to manage again. I've been doing it so long, I miss it when I'm not doing it."

Martin expressed no desire to retire from baseball. "How many times can you water your garden?" he said.

Martin replaced Yogi Berra as the Yankee manager a month into the past season, then was replaced by Lou Piniella in October after taking the Yankees to a second-place finish. It was the fourth time in seven years the Yankees had dismissed Martin as manager.

Recently there were reports that he had been approached by New York television station WPIX, which televises Yankee games, to work as one of the commentators next season. Martin conceded that such a job was a possibility but expressed little enthusiasm for it.

Martin Appel, a spokesman for WPIX, confirmed that the station had met with the Yankees and that they had agreed Martin might be a good candidate as a commentator. But he said no formal approach had been made. Appel added that Martin was being considered as a commentator only for broadcast television, not radio or cable television.

WHETHER HE is approached for a broadcasting job or another managing job, Martin insisted money would play the key role in his decision, even though he has five years in which he will still be paid by the Yankees on his old contract.

"Unless the dollars are there, I'm not going to take it," he remarked.

Martin was here as both a comic relief for and a guest of a convention of Wall Street executives known as the Securities Industry Association. He told the group that he was encouraged by some of the changes being discussed for major league baseball.

He said he regarded positively the likelihood that there would be several expansion teams soon. He added that he hoped the National and American Leagues would end their split on the designated hitter rule, saying he favored no d.h. "It means there's more managing without the rule," he commented.

MARTIN ALSO said he encouraged tougher sanctions on drug abuse by players, including life suspensions and the loss of pensions for repeat offenders, including managers and coaches.

"It's a big problem and I think that they have to get a little harsher," he said. But he stopped short of calling for mandatory blood tests or other tests for players.

Looking further afield, he suggested that he might even like to own a ballclub some day. "I'd like to be the owner of the Yankees and fire George," he quipped.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Alabama football Coach Ray Perkins, who stepped into the gigantic shoes left by late Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant in 1982, has been given a three-year contract extension, Alabama President Joab Thomas said Saturday.

"The momentum exhibited by our football program has made it increasingly clear that the great Alabama football tradition will continue," Thomas said.

"This extension reflects the confidence the university has in Coach Perkins, his staff and the entire football program," he said.

Perkins, 44, left his job as head coach of the New York Giants of the National Football League when he was hired on Dec. 14, 1982, just after Bryant retired as the winningest coach in Division I college football history.

PERKINS WAS being paid about $100,000 a year on a five-year contract through 1987, which has now been extended through the 1990 season. In 1983, Perkins was named athletic director at the Southeastern Conference school, a post not under contract.

Perkins could not immediately be reached for comment Saturday.

Since taking over for Bryant, Perkins has compiled a 21-12-1 record, including an 8-2-1 mark this year. Alabama, ranked No. 15, takes on unranked Southern California in the Aloha Bowl on Dec. 28.

But in 1984, Perkins suffered a 1-4 start and guided the Tide to their first losing season in 26 years, a 5-6 mark. However, Alabama defeated Auburn 17-15 in their 1984 meeting, knocking the Tigers out of a chance to appear in a second straight Sugar Bowl.

HIS FIRST season, Perkins compiled an 8-4 mark, including a 28-7 victory over Southern Methodist in the Sun Bowl.

An Alabama native, Perkins played for Bryant from 1962 to 1966 and was named an All-American end as a senior, when he also was named SEC Player of the Year.

Faust, Youngstown State talking turkey

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — Former Notre Dame football Coach Gerry Faust talked Saturday with Youngstown State University athletic director Joseph F. Malmisur about the possibility of filling Youngstown State's vacant head football coaching job.

Faust reportedly met with Malmisur for several hours, but details of the meeting were not disclosed.

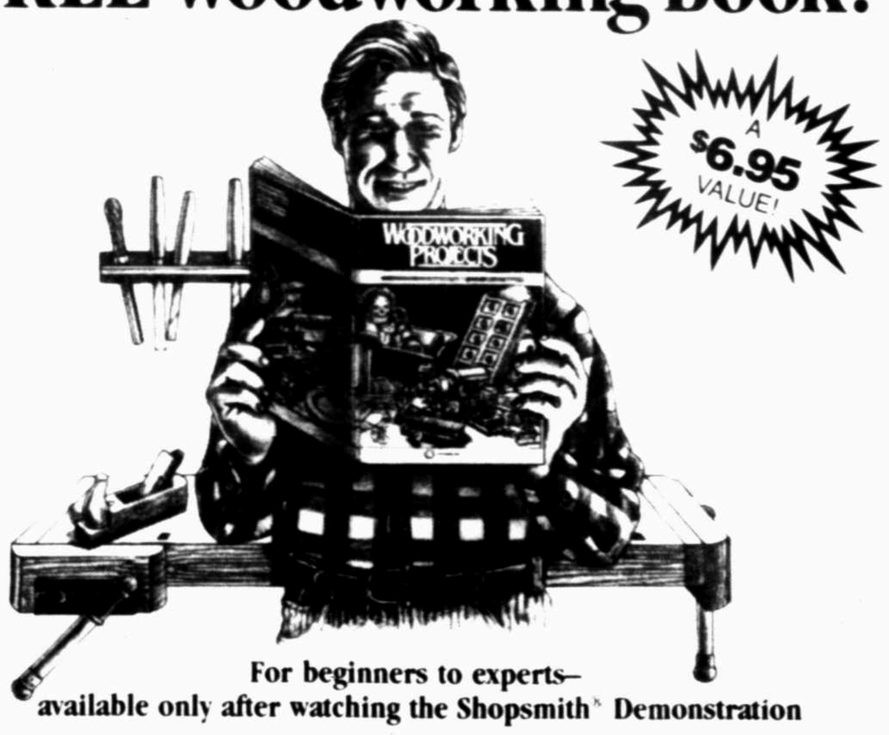

Malmisur could not be reached for comment at his office. His son, Joe, confirmed that his father had talked with Faust, but he said he knew no other details of the discussion.

Youngstown State sports information director Greg Gulas had said Saturday morning the discussion was to take place by telephone. The Youngstown Vindicator, however, reported Saturday that Faust flew into town for the Saturday afternoon meeting.

Youngstown State, which plays in the NCAA Division I-AA Ohio Valley Conference, notified 11-year Coach Bill Narduzzi in November that his contract would not be renewed. The Penguins were 5-6 overall and 3-3 in conference games this season.

Faust resigned from Notre Dame after five seasons in which he compiled a 30-26-1 record.

Napoleon marches through Army's ranks

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Napoleon McCallum capped his Navy football career with a brilliant 217-yard performance and helped set up 10 fourth-quarter points as the underdog Midshipmen beat Army 17-7 Saturday in the 86th meeting of the two service academies.

McCallum, who missed last year's game with an ankle injury and returned in 1985 for an unprecedented fifth year, finished with his second-highest rushing total at Annapolis. It was also the second highest rushing total in an Army-Navy game, behind Eddie Myers' 278 yards for Navy in 1979.

The victory avenged Navy's defeat last year at the hands of Army and took the sting out of a largely disappointing 4-7 year. Army, which will play Illinois in the Dec. 31 Peach Bowl in Atlanta, slipped to 8-3.

McCallum carried 41 times, including eight of the 10 plays as Navy drove for Todd Solomon's clinching 26-yard field goal with 1:15 to play.

McCallum's 6-yard run on Navy's previous possession set up Chuck Smith's 5-yard TD run up the middle with 8:26 to play, giving Navy a 14-7 lead. Navy drove 77 yards in 13 plays for the go-ahead score, including a 15-yard pass from Bob Misch to Greg Schildmeyer and a 15-yard reverse by end Troy Saunders.

which ended 7-7.

Each team scored a touchdown on its first possession, Navy on a 13-yard pass from Misch to Saunders, and Army on Clarence Jones' 10-yard run.

Brigham Young 26, Hawaii 6

HONOLULU — Vai Sikahema scored two touchdowns to lead Brigham Young to a 26-6 win over Hawaii in a WAC game.

Sikahema, a senior running back, caught 12 passes for 198 yards and rushed for 86 more yards in 11 carries.

The victory improved the ninth-ranked Cougars' record to 11-2 overall and gave them a share of the WAC title. BYU and Air Force finished conference play with 7-1 records.

LSU 35, East Carolina 15

BATON ROUGE, La. — Dalton Hilliard ran for 170 yards and three touchdowns, becoming only the fourth SEC back to run for more than 4,000 career yards and leading No. 12 Louisiana State University to a victory over East Carolina.

Hilliard also became the all-time leading rusher at LSU with a total of 4,050 yards for his career. That broke the record of 4,035 by Charlie Alexander, who left LSU in 1978 for the Cincinnati Bengals.

Only Herschel Walker, Bo Jackson and Alexander had ever totalled more than 4,000 yards in their SEC careers.

No. 1 Tar Heels have no mercy on Rutgers, 114-71

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Brad Daugherty scored a game-high 23 points to power top-ranked North Carolina to a 114-71 victory over Rutgers in college basketball Saturday night.

North Carolina, 6-0, outscored the Scarlet Knights 19-7 in the first 5:12 of the second half to stretch a 10-point halftime lead to 64-42 on a dunk by Daugherty, who hit 10 of 11 shots and grabbed a game-high seven rebounds.

Michigan 91, Florida Southern 68

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Center Roy Tarpley scored 19 points and was one of four Michigan players in double figures Saturday as the second-ranked Wolverines romped to a non-conference victory.

Georgia Tech 89, Georgia 65

ATLANTA — Duane Ferrell and Bruce Dalrymple keyed a 9-0 spurt that shut the door on a Georgia comeback attempt as fifth-ranked Georgia Tech drilled the Bulldogs 89-65.

Ferrell started the run with a three-point play after the Bulldogs had sliced a 16-point lead to 69-61 with just under six minutes remaining.

Kansas 71, N. Carolina St. 56

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Ron Kellogg scored 19 of his game-high 23 points in the second half as seventh-ranked Kansas defeated North Carolina State.

Kellogg, a 6-foot-5 senior forward, scored eight points in the first nine minutes of the second half to key an 18-8 run that gave Kansas a 56-34 lead.

N.C. State cut the lead to 52-46 with 7:11 left on a pair of free throws by Nate McMillan, but Kellogg hit jumpers on either side of the lane to make the score 58-46 with 5:10 left.

College Basketball

Kentucky 63, Indiana 58

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Sophomore guard Ed Davender scored eight points in a 17-6 run in the second half that carried ninth-ranked Kentucky over No. 19 Indiana.

The victory improved Kentucky to 5-0 while Indiana, playing without suspended guard Steve Alford, fell to 2-1. Alford was given a one-game suspension by the NCAA because his photo was used in a sorority calendar for charity.

Notre Dame 71, Loyola 58

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Joseph Price and Donald Royal scored 13 points apiece as 10th-ranked Notre Dame fought off a second-half comeback by Loyola of Chicago.

Loyola, 1-5, held the lead only briefly during the early minutes of the first half, despite Andre Moore's game-high 19 points and 17 points from Bernard Jackson.

Memphis State 80, Fresno State 56

HONOLULU — Center William Bedford scored 22 points and hauled down 12 rebounds as 13th-ranked Memphis State overwhelmed Fresno State in the championship game of the Pearl Harbor Memorial Classic tournament.

The 7-foot Bedford, who was ejected from Friday night's game with University of Texas-Arlington for elbowing, made up for it with a good performance as he came up with five blocked shots to intimidate the Bulldogs while hitting 10 of 13 field goal attempts.

Nevada-Las Vegas 64, Maryland 63

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Armon Gilliam scored the only four points for Nevada-Las Vegas in overtime as the 14th ranked Runnin' Rebels blew a 13-point second half lead before defeating the Maryland Terrapins 64-63 Saturday night.

Maryland, 3-2, had a final chance to win after Mark Wade missed two free throws for Nevada-Las Vegas with three seconds remaining. But a shot by Maryland's Keith Gatlin from near midcourt put off the back of the rim as time expired.

Duke 72, Virginia 64

DURHAM, N.C. — Johnny Dawkins scored 24 points and sparked third-ranked Duke to an ACC victory over previously unbeaten Virginia.

Dawkins scored eight of Duke's last 15 points as the Blue Devils boosted their record to 8-0. Virginia took its first loss after four victories.

St. John's 88, Fairleigh Dickinson 56

NEW YORK — Walter Berry had 29 points and 13 rebounds to lead No. 15 St. John's to a victory over Fairleigh Dickinson in the championship game of the 11th annual Joe Lapchick Memorial Tournament.

Louisville 77, Purdue 58

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Senior Billy Thompson led a balanced scoring attack with 13 points and Louisville got a strong game from its reserves as the 16th-ranked Cardinals defeated Purdue.

Iowa 89, Lehigh 68

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Junior center Brad Lohaus scored 20 points pulled down eight rebounds and blocked four shots as No. 18 Iowa manhandled Lehigh 89-68 in Saturday's consolation game of the Amana Hawkeye Classic basketball tournament.

Joe Maddon to return as Midland Angel boss

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

The Midland Angels will attend the winter baseball meeetings searching for an intern to help the front office staff after a record setting season in attendance this past season.

However, one thing they won't be searching for is a new manager. Joe Maddon will be returning for a second year as field boss of the California Angels' Texas League farm club.

A native Pennsylvanian, Maddon now resides in Mesa, Ariz., and is active in the Angels' off-season Instructional programs for the most promising young prospects in the organization.

It helps the young players and should help Maddon in planning for the coming season.

AND WHILE it has been a case of "All's Quiet On the Baseball Front" since the season ended in September, Business Manager Bill Davidson and Matt Perry, director of operations, have made plans and decisions in regard to next season. Sunday games, for example, will start at 6 p.m. throughout the season. Last year, Sunday games were started at 6 during the first two months of the season and then shifted to 7:30 p.m., the regular weekday starting time during the summer months.

A Bonus Book of Tickets will be introduced in 1986 with 12 general admission tickets only $20, a saving of $20. The book will also have a special family pass for opening night.

Last year both a program and yearbook were sold at games, but, due to the cost of printing, only a scorecard, at 50 cents, will be sold. The scorecard will contain scorekeeping panels and a lucky number as well as advertising spaces.

New concessions items and new facilities will be offered the fans. Last year's most popular concessions will be back along with soft pretzels and cotton candy. A picnic area by the club house will be available for group outings. The area may be rented for the night by groups.

Rain halts Edberg-Lendl semi

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Swedish teenager Stefan Edberg was leading top-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia Sunday when rain again halted play in their men's singles semifinal at the $1.5 million Australian Open tennis championships.

Edberg, the 1s-year-old fifth seed, led 6-7, 7-5, 6-1, 4-4 when the play was stopped. The winner of the match will face defending champion Mats Wilander of Sweden in the final.

The Lendl-Edberg semifinal was washed out when it was originally scheduled Friday. Only three games were completed Saturday, with Edberg leading 2-1, before rain again fell.

The players were on court for 2½ hours Sunday when the rain stopped again.

The rain already had forced tournament organizers to move the men's final to Monday for only the second time in the history of the tournament.

Edberg, the former junior Wimbledon champion, is aiming to play in the first Grand Slam final of his career.

IF HE meets Wilander it will mark the first time that two Swedes have played to decide a Grand Slam title.

Edberg was a model of power and consistency after dropping the first set tiebreaker seven points to three.

Edberg got the vital service break in the 11th game of the second set — a game in which lendl served four double-faults.

Edberg then held his own serve to even the match at one set apiece. He then raced to a 4-0 lead in the third set — giving him a run of six straight games.

Lendl appeared to be listless in going for his shots and at the end of the third set, he received treatment for an apparent injury to his left knee.

Wyoming rally defeats UTEP Down Under, 23-21

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Andy Cottingham kicked a 34-yard field goal with 9:35 remaining in the game to give the the University of Wyoming a come-from-behind 23-21 victory Saturday over the University of Texas at El Paso in a Western Athletic Conference football game at VFL Park.

Wyoming trailed 21-7 early in the third quarter but fought back with touchdowns from quarterback Scott Runyan and tight end Mitch Daum.

Wyoming lifted its record to 3-8 for the season, while UTEP finished 1-10, last in the conference.

It was the first competitive American football game to be played in Australia and was watched by a crowd of 19,107. VFL Park has a seating capacity of about 75,000.

The game marked was the last for both the coaches of Wyoming and UTEP.

Al Kincaid, coach at Wyoming since 1981, has been replaced for next season by former University of Idaho coach Dennis Erickson.

UTEP Coach Bill Yung was in charge of the Miners for the last time after a four-year stint at El Paso. His replacement has not yet been named.

UT soph sets US record

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas sophomore Betsy Mitchell set the American record in the 100-meter backstroke in the U.S. Open Swimming championship preliminaries Saturday and came back in the finals at night to break it again with a time of 1 minute, 1.79 seconds.

Her morning record was 1:02.24, breaking the old mark of 1:02.48 that Sue Walsh of North Carolina set at the Pan American Games in 1983. Mitchell, from Marietta, Ohio, set the American record in the 200 backstroke Friday night at 2:11.82.

COUNTRY LIVING MIDLAND STYLE

Few homes in this world have a style and personality ingrained into their very foundations. One such home epitomizes that unique characteristic. Located southeast of Midland off the Garden City highway on County Road 1065 South, just 20 minutes from downtown Midland, this mansion projects originality blended with traditional values.

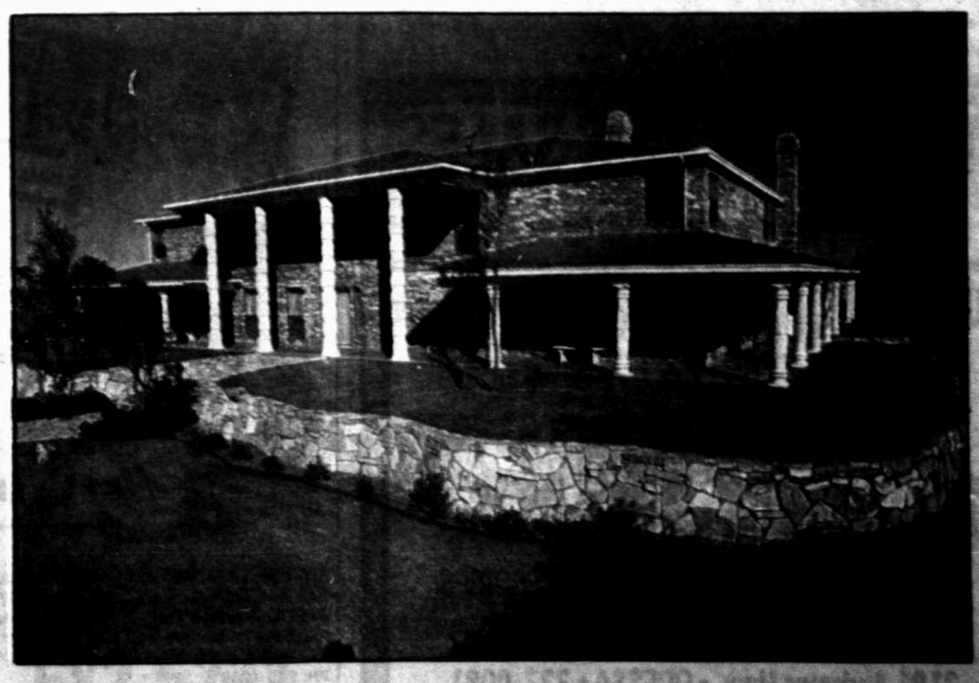

To the east side stands a 20x20 foot lazy-L shaped pool with a diving board and slide. Adjacent is a white gazebo, perfect for large outdoor barbecues.

Julie A. Wiseman
Advertising Feature Writer

"The days of just putting someone in a car and taking them out and showing them houses and writing a contract are gone," says Joanne Langston of Langston Monarch Associaties. Like many real estate agents and other people in the housing industry have discovered, Ms. Langston says the task of helping transferred families relocate is a new kind of challenge.

By no means are transfers a new part of our society. However, many factors such as the prevalence of two-income families, the increased emphasis on lifestyle instead of on career and the emerging trend of women being transferred add a new dimension to the relocation process.

In the 1950's "the man came home and said, 'well, guess what, I've been transferred to Dallas,' If he didn't take it (the transfer), it was a blight on his career," Ms. Langston recounts.

Many of these people who readily accepted transfers as a necessary step in their move up the career ladder are now in top management positions, making decisions about who else needs to be transferred to meet the needs of a company. A conflict often arises when the transfer is recommended.

Those that are now moving up the rungs of the career ladder, entered the work force in the 1970's. They are "the hell no, I won't go generation," according to Ms. Langston. "They wouldn't go to war... they look at life in a different way... careers are not as important as lifestyle," Ms. Langston continues.

Companies are having to make adjustments - buy backs, special services for the "trailing spouse" and other types of relocation assistance are prevalent. A whole new industry has been created and many real estate companies are taking action to assure that they get their fair share of the market.

While new companies have been formed to offer relocation assistance, many real estate companies have seen it as a natural opportunity to expand their services to include complete relocation divisions.

Services vary from office to office, but often included are information packets which are tailored to the family's interest and concerns, tours of the city, counseling, arrangements for baby sitters and interviews for the 'trailing spouse.'

If a group of people is being transferred, some real estate firms in the "new city" will send a representative to the city where the possible transferees are located. Presentations about the prospective new home town are made and questions are answered.

To handle these extra tasks, many real estate companies have added relocation coordinators or complete relocation divisions.

These divisions focus on helping people handle the stress of a move. In accessing the stress involved, Ms. Langston refers to a stress study done by the University of Berkley. Unemployment ranks third and relocation is fourth among the most stressful life events. "When your're talking about transferring a two career family you are talking about exposing them to two of the top four stresses," Ms. Langston explains.

Sixty percent of transfers involve two pay check families. The Department of Labor estimates that by 1990 that percentage will reach 75 percent.

The emeging trend of females being transferred adds a new twist to the "trailing spouse" dilemma. Ms. Langston cites studies which show 55 percent of accounting students are women, one out of every two law students is a woman and 45 percent of all graduate students are women. More women are entering executive positions which make them likely candidates for transfers. Now, one out of every eight transfers is offered to a woman.

"In the past it was always the woman (as 'trailing spouse')," Ms. Langston says. Now, men have to learn to deal with the title and role of 'trailing spouse.' Often, it is quite an affront to the male ego when his spouse's career requires him to leave his job in search of a new one in a new community.

Bruce and Cathy Davis, who have experienced this kind of transfer, say that mutual agreement doesn't make the transition much easier. Cathy had been assistant manager at a Lerner's store in El Paso. She was offered a manager's job with World Bazaar with one condition - that she'd move to Midland.

"It was exciting at first,... but two days before (the job offering) Bruce told me 'I don't want to move,'" Cathy recounts.

Bruce, however, was dissatisfied with his job in auto sales and tired of El Paso, so they decided they'd move anyway.

"If someone had said 'you have to go,' that would be something different," Cathy says.

"Some of my friends were surprised that I would move because of my wife," Bruce says.

While Cathy was training for her new position, Bruce made a trip to Midland to find a place to live. As he drove through Midland he realized, "Midland has got to be the smallest city I've ever lived in... I knew she was gonna have a job. I knew that I didn't. I was starting to feel a little useless."

As they were leaving familiar places, people and jobs, Bruce and Cathy wanted to find stability in something. Their living place seemed to the key. Since they did not own a home, Bruce set out to find an apartment like their apartment at a Trinity Place complex in El Paso. He discovered that Midland also had a Trinity Place complex and choose an apartment with the same floor plan they had in El Paso.

In less than a week, Cathy was in Midland and Bruce was left in El Paso, packing. "My ego was probably a little bruised." As he was packing all the household goods he was thinking "How could she do this and leave me here... I wonder if we could just throw these (household items) away and buy new ones when I get there," Bruce says.

Hitchhiking into Odessa one night at 10:30 because the fuel gauge on his rented moving truck was faulty and the gas tank was empty did not give Bruce any reassurance about moving.

While Cathy was busy adjusting to her new position, Bruce was still fighting feelings of personal insufficiency. "When we first came out here, boy, we were in bad moods all the time... It was real tense for a while" even after he became manager of National Video in Fairmont Park, Bruce says.

When asked if the transition would have been easier if he wasn't the 'trailing spouse', Bruce says, "There'd probably been as much tension, but I would have felt better about myself."

With this scenario becoming more and more prevalent, real estate relocation services and other relocation companies are seeking ways to help families cope with moves. This is especially true when home ownership complicates the transfer.

When the financial dimension of a move is examined, it is not surprising to find that companies which require transfers take a special interest in the personal adjustment of transferees.

The average successful transfer costs a company $42,000 to $50,000 and an unsuccessful transfer costs an average of $75,000, according to Ms. Langston.

"The real estate industry has to assume responsibility for making it (transfer) successful," she concludes.

WASHINGTON—The 138,000 member National Association of Home Builders called the tax reform legislation proposed by the House Ways and Means committee "bad for housing, bad for investment and bad for the economy in general.

"NAHB will active6 oppose the legislation when it reaches the House floor," NAHB President John J. Koelemij said today. "Despite some improvements from the original version proposed by the committee staff, this legislation would penalize first time home buyers, reduce new housing construction and raise rents."

Under the proposed legislation, depreciation schedules for buildings are stretched out to 30 years, rules for partnerships are tightened, capital gains taxes are raised and rules for partnerships are tightened, capital gains taxes are raised and rules for financing low and moderately priced rental housing with tax exempt revenue bonds are restricted and targeted.

NAHB estimates that these and other proposed changes in the tax treatment of multifamily housing would result in the loss of about 200,000 multifamily units during the first year of enactment. Furthermore, NAHB estimates that rents over five years on existing units would rise an additional 15 percent over what they would have increased under current law, because of tightening in the rental market.

To look at the implications of the tax bill another way NAHB estimates that required rents on a newly constructed conventionally financed apartment building would have to be 25 percent higher under the committee's proposal as compared to current law if the new project were to be economically feasible.

In terms of for-sale housing, the proposed tax legislation provides tighter income restrictions and smaller volume caps for mortgage revenue bonds, which have been used successfully in the past to provide below market financing for first time home buyers. In addition, the tax bill repeals the favorable tax treatment for homeowner bond financing, another program used by builders to make housing affordable for young families buying their first home. NAHB estimates that single family housing construction would drop about 30,000 units during the first year of enactment of the tax bill.

Besides the anticipated decline in rental housing construction and the loss of below market financing for first time buyers, passage of the tax bill would create a great deal of "confusion and uncertainty" in the marketplace for at least another six months, Koelemij said.

This cozy kitchen gets its country flavor from simple furnishings, nostalgic accessories and a backdrop of romantically ruffled windows dressed in convenient ready-made "Cherryville" curtains from Burlington House Draperies. The homespun weave and the lavish big-bow tie-backs help provide an "instant" country look even in city apartments.

Popular country style can be cozy and convenient

You don't have to have a barn in your backyard to have the country in your decorating. The suburban split level and the city apartment alike are acquiring the popular country look and America happily glows in its coziness and comfort.

Some people like to spend time hunting country antiques in sorties to the real country; some like to hunt reproductions in downtown stores for more instant gratification. Whatever the source, what's being sought are simple satisfactions and down-home pleasures that come form Windsor chairs, blanket chest, harvest tables, pine cupboards, hooked rugs and patchwork quilts.

One ingredient that can start the look almost single-handedly is what goes at the windows. Since that's often a fabric of some kind, it's unlikely to be an antique.

Fortunately the homespun weaves and the romantic ruffles no longer call for long hours at the loom and eyestraining sessions with the sewing needle. They can be part of that "instant" country look that comes conveniently ready-made.

Country styles are a staple in ready-made draperies, but even so they are constantly being updated with new color combinations and detailing and, particularly, new heavier drapery-weight fabric to suit today's more sophisticated senses," says Roberta Greenberg, stylist of Burlington House, a drapery manufacturer. "New country-style ideas like pole-top headings, large tie-back bows and decorative ruffled trims can give tremendous variety and individuality to a country decor.

Final touches for the country feeling are those utility items of yesterday that have become today's best selling accessories — baskets, copper pans, spatterware, dried flowers, among them.

It certainly looks as if you can take the American out of the country, but

Transfer stress, expense sparks interest in relocation services for real estate offices

Advertising Feature Writer

"The days of just putting someone in a car and taking them out and showing them houses and writing a contract are gone," says Joanne Langston of Langston Monarch Associaties. Like many real estate agents and other people in the housing industry have discovered, Ms. Langston says the task of helping transferred families relocate is a new kind of challenge.

By no means are transfers a new part of our society. However, many factors such as the prevalence of two-income families, the increased emphasis on lifestyle instead of on career and the emerging trend of women being transferred add a new dimension to the relocation process.

In the 1950's "the man came home and said, 'well, guess what, I've been transferred to Dallas,' If he didn't take it (the transfer), it was a blight on his career," Ms. Langston recounts.

Many of these people who readily accepted transfers as a necessary step in their move up the career ladder are now in top management positions, making decisions about who else needs to be transferred to meet the needs of a company. A conflict often arises when the transfer is recommended.

Those that are now moving up the rungs of the career ladder, entered the work force in the 1970's. They are "the hell no, I won't go generation," according to Ms. Langston. "They wouldn't go to war... they look at life in a different way... careers are not as important as lifestyle," Ms. Langston continues.

Companies are having to make adjustments - buy backs, special services for the "trailing spouse" and other types of relocation assistance are prevalent. A whole new industry has been created and many real estate companies are taking action to assure that they get their fair share of the market.

While new companies have been formed to offer relocation assistance, many real estate companies have seen it as a natural opportunity to expand their services to include complete relocation divisions.

Services vary from office to office, but often included are information packets which are tailored to the family's interest and concerns, tours of the city, counseling, arrangements for baby sitters and interviews for the 'trailing spouse.'

If a group of people is being transferred, some real estate firms in the "new city" will send a representative to the city where the possible transferees are located. Presentations about the prospective new home town are made and questions are answered.

To handle these extra tasks, many real estate companies have added relocation coordinators or complete relocation divisions.

These divisions focus on helping people handle the stress of a move. In accessing the stress involved, Ms. Langston refers to a stress study done by the University of Berkley. Unemployment ranks third and relocation is fourth among the most stressful life events. "When your're talking about transferring a two career family you are talking about exposing them to two of the top four stresses," Ms. Langston explains.

Sixty percent of transfers involve two pay check families. The Department of Labor estimates that by 1990 that percentage will reach 75 percent.

The emeging trend of females being transferred adds a new twist to the "trailing spouse" dilemma. Ms. Langston cites studies which show 55 percent of accounting students are women, one out of every two law students is a woman and 45 percent of all graduate students are women. More women are entering executive positions which make them likely candidates for transfers. Now, one out of every eight transfers is offered to a woman.

"In the past it was always the woman (as 'trailing spouse')," Ms. Langston says. Now, men have to learn to deal with the title and role of 'trailing spouse.' Often, it is quite an affront to the male ego when his spouse's career requires him to leave his job in search of a new one in a new community.

Bruce and Cathy Davis, who have experienced this kind of transfer, say that mutual agreement doesn't make the transition much easier. Cathy had been assistant manager at a Lerner's store in El Paso. She was offered a manager's job with World Bazaar with one condition - that she'd move to Midland.

"It was exciting at first,... but two days before (the job offering) Bruce told me 'I don't want to move,'" Cathy recounts.

Bruce, however, was dissatisfied with his job in auto sales and tired of El Paso, so they decided they'd move anyway.

"If someone had said 'you have to go,' that would be something different," Cathy says.

"Some of my friends were surprised that I would move because of my wife," Bruce says.

While Cathy was training for her new position, Bruce made a trip to Midland to find a place to live. As he drove through Midland he realized, "Midland has got to be the smallest city I've ever lived in... I knew she was gonna have a job. I knew that I didn't. I was starting to feel a little useless."

As they were leaving familiar places, people and jobs, Bruce and Cathy wanted to find stability in something. Their living place seemed to the key. Since they did not own a home, Bruce set out to find an apartment like their apartment at a Trinity Place complex in El Paso. He discovered that Midland also had a Trinity Place complex and choose an apartment with the same floor plan they had in El Paso.

In less than a week, Cathy was in Midland and Bruce was left in El Paso, packing. "My ego was probably a little bruised." As he was packing all the household goods he was thinking "How could she do this and leave me here... I wonder if we could just throw these (household items) away and buy new ones when I get there," Bruce says.

Hitchhiking into Odessa one night at 10:30 because the fuel gauge on his rented moving truck was faulty and the gas tank was empty did not give Bruce any reassurance about moving.

While Cathy was busy adjusting to her new position, Bruce was still fighting feelings of personal insufficiency. "When we first came out here, boy, we were in bad moods all the time... It was real tense for a while" even after he became manager of National Video in Fairmont Park, Bruce says.

When asked if the transition would have been easier if he wasn't the 'trailing spouse', Bruce says, "There'd probably been as much tension, but I would have felt better about myself."

With this scenario becoming more and more prevalent, real estate relocation services and other relocation companies are seeking ways to help families cope with moves. This is especially true when home ownership complicates the transfer.

When the financial dimension of a move is examined, it is not surprising to find that companies which require transfers take a special interest in the personal adjustment of transferees.

The average successful transfer costs a company $42,000 to $50,000 and an unsuccessful transfer costs an average of $75,000, according to Ms. Langston.

"The real estate industry has to assume responsibility for making it (transfer) successful," she concludes

WASHINGTON—The 138,000 member National Association of Home Builders called the tax reform legislation proposed by the House Ways and Means committee "bad for housing, bad for investment and bad for the economy in general.

"NAHB will active6 oppose the legislation when it reaches the House floor," NAHB President John J. Koelemij said today. "Despite some improvements from the original version proposed by the committee staff, this legislation would penalize first time home buyers, reduce new housing construction and raise rents."

Under the proposed legislation, depreciation schedules for buildings are stretched out to 30 years, rules for partnerships are tightened, capital gains taxes are raised and rules for partnerships are tightened, capital gains taxes are raised and rules for financing low and moderately priced rental housing with tax exempt revenue bonds are restricted and targeted.

NAHB estimates that these and other proposed changes in the tax treatment of multifamily housing would result in the loss of about 200,000 multifamily units during the first year of enactment. Furthermore, NAHB estimates that rents over five years on existing units would rise an additional 15 percent over what they would have increased under current law, because of tightening in the rental market.

To look at the implications of the tax bill another way NAHB estimates that required rents on a newly constructed conventionally financed apartment building would have to be 25 percent higher under the committee's proposal as compared to current law if the new project were to be economically feasible.

In terms of for-sale housing, the proposed tax legislation provides tighter income restrictions and smaller volume caps for mortgage revenue bonds, which have been used successfully in the past to provide below market financing for first time home buyers. In addition, the tax bill repeals the favorable tax treatment for homeowner bond financing, another program used by builders to make housing affordable for young families buying their first home. NAHB estimates that single family housing construction would drop about 30,000 units during the first year of enactment of the tax bill.

Besides the anticipated decline in rental housing construction and the loss of below market financing for first time buyers, passage of the tax bill would create a great deal of "confusion and uncertainty" in the marketplace for at least another six months, Koelemij said.

—This cozy kitchen gets its country flavor from simple furnishings, nostalgic accessories and a backdrop of romantically ruffled windows dressed in convenient ready-made "Cherryville" curtains from Burlington House Draperies. The homespun weave and the lavish big-bow tie-backs help provide an "instant" country look even in city apartments.

Popular country style can be cozy and convenient

You don't have to have a barn in your backyard to have the country in your decorating. The suburban split level and the city apartment alike are acquiring the popular country look and America happily glows in its coziness and comfort.

Some people like to spend time hunting country antiques in sorties to the real country, some like to hunt reproductions in downtown stores for more instant gratification. Whatever the source, what's being sought are simple satisfactions and down-home pleasures that come form Windsor chairs, blanket chest, harvest tables, pine cupboards, hooked rugs and patchwork quilts.

One ingredient that can start the look almost single-handedly is what goes at the windows. Since that's often a fabric of some kind, it's unlikely to be an antique.

Fortunately the homespun weaves and the romantic ruffles no longer call for long hours at the loom and eyestraining sessions with the sewing needle. They can be part of that "instant" country look that comes conveniently ready made.

Country styles are a staple in ready-made draperies, but even so they are constantly being updated with new color combinations and detailing and, particularly, new heavier drapery-weight fabric to suit today's "more sophisticated senses," says Roberta Greenberg, stylist of Burlington House, a drapery manufacturer. "New country-style ideas like pole-top headings, large tie-back bows and decorative ruffled trims can give tremendous variety and individuality to a country decor.

Final touches for the country feeling are those utility items of yesterday that have become today's best-selling accessories — baskets, copper pans, spatterware, dried flowers, among them.

It certainly looks as if you can take the American out of the country, but

From the limestone sidewalk, visitors can appreciate the fine workmanship applied in the design of the three-year old home by its owners and its builder, Joe Streun. As a part of its exterior Colonial style, (bottom right photo on the cover) used brick look the white brick columns and pillars enhance the appearance of this 9,300 square foot home listed by Chaparral Realtors at $750,000.

Within the home are many unseen amenities, including five perimeter central heat and air conditioning units (with a separate unit for the upstairs), four water heaters and an intercom system.

Each room throughout the home affords eight foot ceilings (except in the great room), raised panel doors. Fifteen ceiling fans are strategically placed in various positions for better effectiveness; moreover, high-gloss paint has wisely been selected for easier maintenance.

The present owners made one very important comment about the building materials and furnishings in the home. Most every item was fashioned and purchased locally.

Along the east wall of the main room, a 5x4 foot fireplace draped in deep purple swags with cascades sets the mood for the room. Amethyst stone about the wide marble hearth reflects its shining warmth.

Four skylights at opposite points on the wall and a second glass chandelier illuminate the marble floor of the entire room. Two sunken foliage beds with lush tropical plants along two walls add a pleasing final touch to this beautiful room.

To the left of the great room, stands a very large split-level, U-shaped kitchen fit for the busiest of families, continuing with marble floors along the lower level. Oak cabinets with glass inlays were fashioned after an antique piece appreciated by the home's present owner. An island bar with rich brown cabinet tops and ornate oak bar stools pose as a service point for easier use of the double ovens.

Victorian-designed wallcovering of a gray/green hue with a patterned border and lace sheers beneath crimson swag drapes with deep cascades adorn the walls and windows onlooking the side yard and oversized two auto carport.

Upon the raised level of the mauve carpeted cooking area, two electric stoves with a long cabinet lessen the workload. Along the east wall, a low-hanging glass chandelier adds luster to etched glass windows looking into the main room. Tucked away for added convenience, a U-shaped pantry boasting approximately 20 feet of cabinet space makes country living easy.

From the far corner of the great room guests have easy access to a private bedroom and bath. Tiny floral patterned wallpaper, antique satin lace sheers beneath crimson moire tie backs with matching cornice boards and a large spacious closet easily accommodate guests. The bath is one of a kind, an old-fashioned birthday bath featuring a raised, free-standing red bathtub and pedestal sink. Twenty-four karat gold-plated fixtures, rose-patterned wallcovering and a low-hanging scarlet and white glass chandelier add a chic touch.

Adjacent is a spacious utility room and an additional 40 foot storage area beneath the divided staircase.

An oak parquet tile floor leading to an immense limestone fireplace with vertical inlayed etched glass windows and pleated velvet tie back drapes pose as a very soothing decorative addition for this relaxation area.

In the study, which also would make a very unique pool room, more parquet tile and knotty pine, clear-sealed panelling with many swag drapes illustrate the epitome of handsome luxury.

In the master bedroom suites (center photo on 12D) classic fashion is the order of the day. Scarlet velvet swag drapes with cornice boards and lace sheers surrounded by "dusty rose" walls set the mood. More of the tin used as wainscotting smartly decorates the walls.

In the master bath, a sunken cultured marble hot tub sparkles beneath an Austrian crystal chandelier. Matching pedestal sinks and a five foot glass shower reflect style and quality. A cozy lounging area with a very handsome fireplace, boasting a hand-carved Mexican oak mantle piece, projects a serene environment.

Four large bedroom are on this floor, two on each side of the staircase. Each has its own bath with tub-shower combination and large walk-in closet. The two bedrooms on the west side presently reflect a more feminine appeal; likewise, the opposite two project a masculine flair, using rich earth-tone hues. But through a most versatile styling plan, each of these bedrooms can be transformed to suit the users' tastes or needs.

Another large living area with a small powder room looks down into the main room. Each of the area's five large windows, draped in heavy cotton swags of golden earth tones, onlook the front lawn and countryside. With limited work, this area can be made into another very large bedroom.

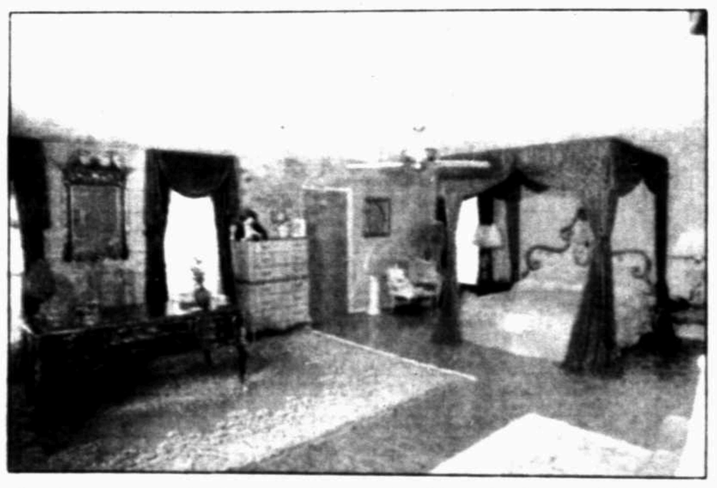

Country living is rarely this luxurious.

Get a BRAND NEW BAG

Christmas just isn't Christmas without bags! For pre-teens, teddy bear book bags, upper left photo, are ideal. Athletes appreciate sports bags of their very own, upper right photo. Luggage of various shapes and sizes make classic gifts, left, and to wrap all these bags, what else but gift wrap bags, lower right.

The invention of the bag parallels the discovery of fire as one of mankind's most valuable finds — and probably occurred about the same time.

From pockets to rockets (well, the moon rocks had to be brought back to Earth in something!), the humble bag is used, in one form or another, every day.

Bags can be found in all shapes and sizes, for all purposes and for all seasons. Grocery bags, brown bags, laundry bags and plastic bags are all common and practical.

The best bags, however, are more imaginative than that — and can be found to please almosteveryone on the Christmas list.

For the pre-teen who loves stuffed animals, Claire's Boutique in Midland Park Mall offers backpacks that look just like cuddly teddy bears. Small key ring-change purses are made to match.

The vital and practical diaper bag has gone glamorous, with some models that even fold out to provide a changing area for baby. They aren't just a tool for a first-time mother.

"Some mothers with three or four kids" come into Mothercare in the mall to shop for new diaper bags, said Connie Sessom, second assistant manager at the store. "Their bags wore out and they have to get more."

Sportsmen — and women — have bags designed just for them. In addition to the classic golf bag and the popular bowling bag, sports bags for athletes have gained favor with racquetball players and other healthy types, said Brad Fitzek, manager of Foot Action in the mall.

"School kids use them," he noted. "It seems to be a big thing." The bags, just the right size for carrying athletes' shoes, towels and cans of racquetballs, are also the right size for carrying students' books and coats. "You can get quite a lot in there, really," Fitzek said.

Pieces of luggage — from parachute fabric totes to large expensive leather pieces — are also bags. Ned Hughes, manager of Roberto's in the mall, said soft-sided luggage is the best kind to buy because it has more expandability and is harder to damage than hard-sided.

But, he added, "the person that travels extensively wants to invest in good hard-shell cases because with that much air travel, it is going to have a lot of abuse."

Price ranges in luggage vary as much as the styles and designs, but price doesn't always mean quality, and "people shouldn't be afraid of going with less expensive," said Hughes.

Hanging bags are becoming popular as carry-on luggage, but travelers "still need to invest in something well-made if they are doing a lot of traveling," he said.

Ballet Midland's recent presentation of the holiday classic, "The Nutcracker," in Theatre Midland inspired several festive social events to celebrate the success of the endeavor.

Special guests were Michael Job of The Atlanta Ballet, guest artist for the production, and Tony Ferro, resident artistic director of Ballet Midland, and his wife, ballerina Susan Clark, who together staged the show. Ms. Clark also made a special appearance as the Sugar Plum Fairy. Guests also included members of the association's board of directors and adult company members.

The theatre lobby was the setting for a reception following the Friday night performance. Hosted by the Ballet Midland Guild, the party was given for the cast, contributors and guild members. Mary (Mrs. Henri) deCompiegne, committee chairman for guest artist receptions, was in charge of arrangements.

The ballet's 1985-86 season will continue in April with a two-part program entitled "History of Dance" and "Red Wagon" and conclude in May with its "Spring Repertoire."

Exciting news to come from Ballet Midland is that two of its members, Miss Clark and Desiree LaVigne, are preparing for the forthcoming International Ballet Competition, the world olympics of the concert dance world. It will be held in Jackson, Miss., in 1986.

TO HONOR NEWLYWEDS Susan and John Nichols, a festive Mexican supper was given Thanksgiving Eve in LaBodega Restaurant's Patio Room.

Hosting the party were Betty and George Moberly and their daughter, Mary Moberly of Dallas, along with Barbara and Ralph Way and their daughter and son-in-law, Karen and Rick Davis of Austin.

Guests included mainly members of the younger set, many of them in town for the holidays.

The Nichols (she is the former Susan Briggs) were married in Washington, D.C., in September and make their home in dland. Susan is on the staff of the Museum of the Southwest, and John is associated with E.F. Hutton & Co.

EMILY GOODFELLOW, daughter of Emily and David Goodfellow, is the newly elected vice president of the Kappa Delta chapter at UT-Austin. In this capacity, she will serve as the sorority's pledge trainer.

Emily, a junior, and another Midlander, Clifford Childers, recently were selected members of the Austin Community Orchestra. A freshman at the university, Clifford is the son of Alibia and Dan Childers. Both students are former members of the Midland High Bulldog Band.

EVELYN AND CHUCK DAVIS recently returned from a 27,000 mile journey to the Far East and the Orient. First on their schedule was Tokyo, where they attended Toyota's USA Dealer Meeting and New Car Show, as Chuck is owner of Permian To The dealers and their spouses were treated to a variety of activities during the week, including tours to Kamakura and Hakone, visits to the various shrines, temples and the Imperial Palace, and entertainment by the Tokyo Philharmonic Orchestra. But most exciting was an unscheduled event — an earthquake — the strongest to hit Tokyo since 1929.

After leaving Japan, the Davises enjoyed a brief stay in Hong Kong before joining a nine-day tour to China. Their itinerary included the cities of Beijing, Xian, Guilin and Canton. Among the highlights were visits to the Great Wall and the Forbidden City, a cruise down the Li River and a viewing of the terra cotta figures from the Qin Dynasty of 2,000 years ago.

Following the tour's end in Hong Kong, the Davises visited Bangkok, where they enjoyed the Tai culture and food; the port city of Singapore and the island of Hawaii. Their stopover in Kona served a twofold purpose: allowing them to get in a round of golf and minimize jet lag.

SARAH LANDRETH, bride-elect of Gerry Grafa, was honored with a miscellaneous shower Wednesday in the Garden Room of Midland Country Club. The hostess was Berniece (Mrs. Allan) Clark.

The couple will be married Dec. 14 in Memorial Christian Church. Sarah is the daughter of former Midlanders, Alice Landreth of Norman, Okla., and George Landreth of San Antonio. The groom is the son of Babe (Mrs. Raymond) Brogniez of Horseshoe Bay, formerly of Midland, and the late Dr. Barney Grafa. He is the grandson of pioneer Midlanders, the late Mabel and Barney Grafa Sr.

Study shows foster home placement can't cure abused child

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Placing abused children in foster homes is not enough to overcome the developmental damage caused by the abuse, a study of school children concludes.

Even eight years after being placed in foster care, the children continued to perform poorly in school, leading two doctors to conclude that "there appears to be no rehabilitative effect of foster care as measured by subsequent school performance."

In a joint research project of the University of North Carolina and the University of Maryland, the school records of 96 abused children placed in foster care were compared with those of 69 who remained in their original home.

Although school attendance went up sharply for children in foster care, their grades were only slightly better than those who remained with their parents.

Smoking law not difficult to enforce

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Contrary to the dire warnings of the tobacco industry and other critics, San Francisco's landmark anti-smoking law has been neither expensive nor difficult to enforce.

"It has been one of the biggest non-events in San Francisco," says Dr. Michael Martin, an epidemiologist at the University of California at San Francisco. He presented a study of the law's enforcement at the annual meeting of the American Public Health Association here last month.

The law, which took effect March 1, 1984, requires employers to adopt, post and maintain a written smoking policy that considers the preferences of both smokers and nonsmokers. If compromise is not possible — if even one nonsmoker is not satisfied by the policy — the employer must ban smoking in the workplace.

The law regulates smoking only in work areas, not hallways, lounges or bathrooms. Violations are punishable by fines of up to $500 a day.

During the first 10 months, Martin reported, the city Department of Public Health received 102 complaints under the new law, but resolved all of them without legal action or fines. Complaints have declined steadily since the first two months the law was in effect.

BAGS

"Luggage used to be kind of sexist, but today, with women going on business trips, suiters would be very handy for them, and men (often) use hanging bags, so they don't need suiters," Hughes said.

For some people, the word "bag" is synonymous with the word "purse." Purses are more than practical, they are a fashion statement. Becky Minica, salesperson at Claire's Boutique, said clutch purses are currently big sellers.

Millie Willis of Penney's agreed, and said another popular style is the Gucci-type barrel purse. Large purses are not as popular as they were a season or two ago, but "more modest-size of purses are selling well," she said, and purses with "shoulder straps are always in."

In Dillard's, Gucci bags with all their accessories are most popular, said salesperson Paula Ireland. Also selling well are "lizard look" bags, carpet bags and shoulder-strap purses.

After purchasing all those bags as Christmas gifts, shoppers can even gift-wrap them in bags. Paper bags decorated with Christmas designs and colors are available at many card and party shops.

La Dulceria in San Miguel Square sells many gift-wrap bags this time of year, said store manager Karen McCague. "More and more people are buying just gift sacks instead of wrapping paper."

Doris Burton, owner of Parties Etcetera in San Miguel Square, said gift-wrap bags have been selling well this season in her store, too. The biggest bag she has available is 35x24x8 inches, and will easily hold a large purse, small piece of luggage, elaborate diaper bag — or even a Cabbage Patch Kid or two.

A line of plastic-coated paper tote bags are decorated in abstract style, in tribute to famous artists, such as Matisse and Mondrian.

There's even a paper gift-wrap bag complete with drawstrings for those who are too busy — or too worn out from Christmas shopping — to worry with wrapping Christmas presents.

Christmas trees can cause allergic reaction

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Call it the yuletide sniffles or a case of the irritating Christmas tree syndrome.

A University of Texas researcher reports that many people who complain of having red, burning itchy eyes and a stuffy nose during the holiday season may actually be allergic to their Christmas trees.

Dr. Timothy Sullivan, head of the allergy unit at the University of Texas Health Sciences Center in Dallas, notes that Christmas trees are often covered with mold spores and sometimes can even produce pollen. Inside the house, these spores and pollen circulate in the air and can instigate an allergic reaction.

Allergies are really "misdirected protective reactions," Sullivan says. They are the body's way of responding to pollen, mold or other allergens, which are identified by the immune system as potent foreign invaders. These invaders are warded off in the same way the body would fight bacteria or other infections.

The result is inflammation of the eyes, nose and sometimes even the lungs, caused by activating white blood cells, known as mast cells. Drugs known as antihistamines help prevent — or at least decrease — the body's response.

Another way to avoid a yuletide allergy to Christmas trees, Sullivan says, is to buy an artificial tree. But from the You Just Can't Win department comes this warning from Sullivan: artificial Christmas trees can gather dust, and many people find dust as potent an allergen as mold or pollen.

Author claims croissant was Polish invention

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Other than finding the fit a little tight, Sniff was obviously pleased with his new sunglasses.

Sniff, by the way, is a dog.

The reason the Maltese was thusly outfitted for the first time is that he belongs to Sylvie Vartan and her husband, Tony Scotti, at whose Beverly Hills home Valerie-Anne Giscard d'Estaing was staying.

She is the author of a book that for three years has been a best seller in her native France, and now is making its debut in America: "The World Almanac Book of Inventions."

The author, daughter of former French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, has crammed within 362 pages in trade paperback format (World Almanac Publications: $10.95) the capsulized stories of more than 2,000 innovations — everything from the wheel to the doggie glasses.

"Those came about 10 years ago because a French optician, Denise Lemiere, got to wondering whether her dog might not like sunglasses, just like humans," the author said while sipping Perrier at a garden table behind the home.

"I have talked with her. She also perfected prescription glasses for myopic dogs and protective goggles for those who like to lean out of car windows."

ALTHOUGH THE BOOK logically begins with the evolution of the wheel (thought to have been introduced about 3,500 BC for potters) no inventor gets credit. "I have a permanent staff of five and a part-time staff of 60 researchers," Giscard d'Estaing said. "We have come up with many facts, but, while exploring the wheel, nowhere could we find a name."

Along the way, during the three years of research, there was no end to the surprises.

Take the croissant. Please, take the croissant. "It isn't a French creation, but rather made its debut in 1683 — courtesy of a Polish military officer in Vienna," the 31-year-old writer said.

"The city had been under siege by the Turks, and was finally rescued by the Poles. A man named Kulyeziski, having played a big role, was given the stocks of coffee abandoned by the Turkish army and was authorized to open a cafe in Vienna. To go with the rare coffee he would be serving, he had a baker make cakes in the shape of the crescent of the defeated Turks."

Now he really had a big roll.

Or consider the microwave oven. "That was discovered in 1946 because an American, Percy Le Baron Spencer, while doing research for Raytheon, noticed that microwaves had melted a piece of candy in his pocket."

GISCARD D'ESTAING said she first became fascinated with inventions at age 12 when she read a book about prehistoric man's discovery of fire. She began wondering who that first person was, although she never did find out.

Her subsequent book, however, does pinpoint cigarettes: "They were invented by beggars in Spain at the end of the 16th Century. They rolled the tobacco they salvaged from cigar butts into small cylinders of paper."

Toothpaste? Although plants have been used since antiquity to combat halitosis, formulas that were mixed with water came later. In 48 BC the Romans used burned deer antler for toothpaste.

The author envisions her work (it has 700 photographs and line drawings) as another Guinness Book of World Records, which renews its popularity each year by coming up with fresh material.

"About a third of next year's edition will be new," the youthful scribe disclosed. "Obviously such basics as the wheel and movable type and the incandescent lamp will stay, but the chapter on the bizarre is the one that annually undergoes the most changes as novel ideas are born."

IT IS ALSO the chapter that is most fun.

- Three years ago a 14-year-old Belgian, Eric Van Paris, devised a fork to please children whose parents make them eat hot food. A rubber squeeze bulb is connected to the fork. By forcing air through a tube, the steaming morsel is cooled.
- During World War II, the Germans built decoy cows, which they placed on operational airstrips to make the enemy believe animals were grazing in empty pastures.
- Nine years ago an American named Mike Taylor invented a motorized bar stool, allowing the occupant to make the rounds of his fellow imbibers without having to get up.

The first American edition includes some items not in the French one, such as the invention of football.

The irrepressible daughter of a former world leader — who spends her leisure time competing in desert motorcycle races — thinks it is about time inventors got some respect.

"The Edisons and the Bells and the Fultons are known," she said. "But what about the others, the ones who also changed our lives? We know more about actors and musicians than we do about them."

SOME WILL ALWAYS remain anonymous, and indeed some weren't even human, but at least they now have recognition.

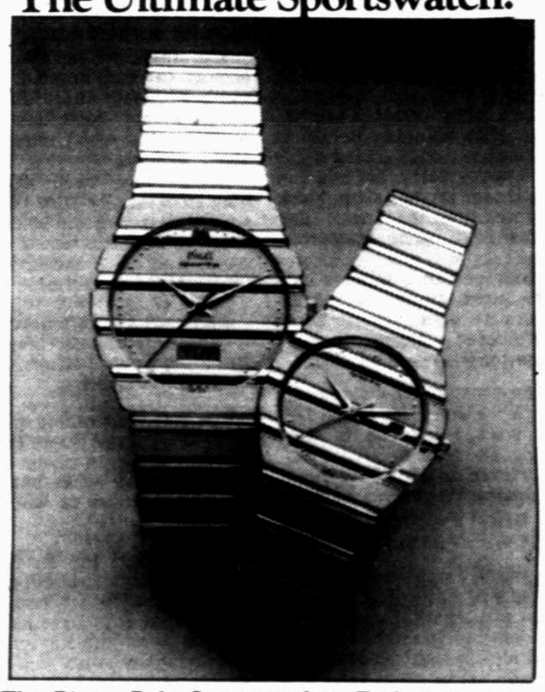

It is said in the book that in the 15th Century a goatherd in Yemen observed that after his animals had grazed on the red fruit of a certain tree, they had difficulty sleeping that night.

Not all holiday stockings just hanging by chimney

By BARBARA DeWITT
Copley News Service

It's December, so toss out your beige and suntan stockings and wiggle your toes into some black holiday hose.

While the first 11 months of the year may call for conservative office attire, this fabulously festive month gives us rounds of holiday parties in which to put our best foot — and leg — forward.

If you're a career-oriented woman, you know that plunging necklines (front or back) are not winning styles for the company party, but you can still be splendid in your basic black cocktail frock (yes, this classic look still reigns) with some glamorous stockings.

Make your entrance in racy lace shot with lurex, sheer black hose with decorative seams up the back, and embroidered patterns accented with rhinestones, pearls or glitter.

More black magic? How about the newest in leg jewelry. It's called Le'-GoGo, and it's a bracelet of tiny beads suspended from an elastic garter to wear over stockings — similar to those decorative garters worn in the '20s with the beaded flapper dresses.

The leg jewelry styles vary from a dainty dangle of beads over the upper calf to a dramatic pattern that covers the entire leg, thigh to ankle. Colors include black, silver, gold, red and blue, and prices range from $15 to $25. They're available at various department stores.

The holidays also usher in a variety of novelty colors and patterns, and the most Christmasy is a red and green plaid, a perfect match for a long velvet hostess skirt.

While the new holiday hose add glamour to your appearance, they are expensive. Expect to pay $7 to $35 per pair, depending on the elaborateness of the design.

Manufacturers say to wash their hosiery carefully in cold water, but quite honestly these fragile creations usually don't last past midnight, so you won't need to worry about washing.

By the way, when wearing evening stockings, be sure your shoe is equally dressy. While black suede or satin are best, this season you'll find velvet and satin shoes, as well as shoes dipped in glitter.

If all you've got are daytime shoes, opt for simple, basic black pumps. But leave your T-straps and kiltie mocs in the closet.

Men have something new in hosiery, too. They're Supp-Hose Lights, and they are light, sheer socks that really look like socks but work on the same premise as women's support hose.

Women don't wait for fur

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

DALLAS — Ask women what they lust for most. Other than that dashing Miami Vice duo, the answer is probably a lavish fur coat.

The fantasy fur might be a silky, featherwight sable cut to brush the calf or a fun-loving silver fox jacket with look-at-me panache. Or it could be a luxe, floor-length lynx-belly topper, a flirty chincilla wrap, even a mahogany mink trench.

A few years ago, a woman did not expect her first fur until the mortgage was paid and the kids' educations were taken care of. And once she owned it, the coat only ventured out of the closet for special occasions.

Those days are gone.

"Today's average, first-time fur buyer is the young, 26-year-old career woman who wants to wear her fur coat everywhere," said Sandy Blye of the American Fur Industry. "It's a phenomenal change from 10 years ago when that same buyer was a 50-year-old woman. It's turned the fur industry around."

Blye said that more than 48 million American women have upscale careers. "These women have disposable income and if they want a fur coat, they go buy it. They are no longer waiting for their husband, boyfriend or daddy to purchase a fur for them. They are buying it themselves with their own money."

While one-third of 1984's $1.5 billion in fur purchases were made by women, Blye estimated that that number will soar to 50 percent in 1985.

Along with setting the pace in fur sales, women are calling the shots when it comes to design. They desire versatility. The coat has to hit the stores slung over jeans and a sweater, command respect at a business luncheon and still be chic enough to cause a sensation when the wearer teams it with an evening gown. Such demands have resulted in a sumptuous selection of updated , elegant styles.

"The basic look this year is simple, sleek and classic," said Blye. "Shoulders are more controlled, armholes lower, the body loose, comfortable and easy. And while lengths are personal preferences, the trends wax to the 7-8-length cut right above the knee or the 52-inch version that sweeps the ankle."

Longer, fuller toppers team up with slip-over-anything dolman sleeves. Back pleats add ease.

Even old favorites such as mink — which accounts for 60 percent of the yearly fur business — sport a fresh face when sliced into sleek trenchcoats or slim Chesterfields.

Rings popular for millennia

NEW YORK (AP) — The history of the ring, like the ring itself, literally has no beginning and no end, research by the Jewelry Industry Council shows. Excavations have turned up rings from as far back as 1400 B.C.

The French digs at Enkomi, Cyprus, in 1930 unearthed a massive ring of electrum, a light yellow alloy of gold and silver, with two figures on it. It depicted a draped seated figure on a throne approached by another wearing a lion's skin and horns.

"While 3,400 years ago may seem astounding, consider that some historians venture to guess that Neanderthal man wore rings as early as 30,000 B.C.," says Kae McCulloch, fashion director of JIC.

Rings have long played an important role with humankind, she points out. They have served as door keys, money, even validity of citizenship. In Roman times, key-shaped rings were either worn on the thumb, or suspended from a girdle. Free men and freed slaves in Rome were privileged to wear gold rings denoting their citizenship around 40 B.C.

Roman gladiators wore heavy wide rings — forerunners of today's brass knuckles, and used for the same purpose.

Satirist Juvenal (50-130 A.D.) described "summer and winter" rings, open filigree "for hot weather" and heavily gemmed ones "best for winter."

"Surely vanity inspired the thumb ring of Hindu women that held a small mirror so milady could easily check her coiffure," McCulloch says.

Watch rings made their appearance in the 17th century, making up in beauty and design for their shortcomings in timekeeping, she adds.

"Today, we are most familiar with wedding, engagement, cocktail, school, birthstone and eternity rings," she notes, "but throughout history, rings have included everything from the infamous poison rings of the Borgias to innocent perfume rings. The perfume rings, unfortunately, were not nearly as popular as the poison rings."

Memorial rings with a strand of the deceased's hair commemorated the dead and were given to family and friends. Posy rings, sometimes called gypsy rings since gypsies sold them, carried mottos: "For a kiss ... take this."

Signet rings, coronation rings, ecclesiastical and religious rings, are all part of the ring story. Many rings have historic significance, McCulloch points out. Caesar learned of the murder of the great Roman general Pompey when the general's seal ring was brought to him.

"Owners have always been proud of their rings — from the happy bride with her engagement and wedding rings to the triumphant athlete with his World Series ring," McCulloch says.

"Ring fashions have come full circle," she says. "Originally more men than women wore rings to denote military rank, royal and religious position, and affluence."

Today, the JIC reports, gold and diamond rings for men for dressy wear are again becoming popular, and many men now opt for double wedding ring ceremonies.

TRAFFIC PATTERNS

Circulation or traffic patterns are a very important consideration in all planning and design. Whenever possible, furniture should be placed so that one does not have to walk in front of chairs or through the center of a seating group. If the space is very limited, furnishings should be reduced to a minimum to avoid constant cross-traffic. This is particularly important when more than two people live in the home and when children are involved. Good planning should not force one to walk through the middle of the living room with a bag of groceries, or when taking out the kitchen garbage. Poor planning creates both inconvenience and maintenance problems.

Group organized for interfaith couples

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The gold medallion Leslie Goodman-Malamuth wears around her neck serves as an emblem of her lifelong struggle as the child of an interfaith marriage.

On one side, it has a Star of David, on the other, an engraving of St. Christopher rescuing a shipwrecked child. Miss Goodman-Malamuth, a tall woman with honey-colored hair, turns the Star of David to the world because she identifies herself as a Jew.

"But there's this other side I keep hidden," she said. "The medallion sums up the conflict."

That conflict, between two religious worlds in which she has never felt fully accepted, is one shared by an increasing number of children coming of age after three decades of a surge in marriages between Jews and Christians. Egon Mayer, a Brooklyn College sociologist, estimates that such children now number 400,000 to 600,000.

Their experiences range from an easy ability to swing between cultures to a bland indifference to religion to deep feelings of rootlessness. To help the adult children speak freely about these experiences, Miss Goodman-Malamuth and a friend, Robin Elizabeth Margolis, recently organized a group called Pareveh, the Alliance for Adult Children of Jewish-Gentile Intermarriage.

Pareveh is a Hebrew word that describes foods that under Jewish dietary laws are neither dairy nor meat, an absence of firm identity that whimsically mirrors the ambivalence many children of intermarriage say they feel. The organization's use of a Hebrew name also suggests that most of its members feel their greatest tensions in gaining acceptance from the Jewish community.

MANY WHO choose to identify themselves as Jews but whose mothers were not Jewish find they are not accepted as Jews, because Jewish law traces religious descent from the mother.

In addition, says Miss Margolis, the group's executive director, children of interfaith marriage sometimes "suffer from severe feelings of displacement and detachment." Even at home, she said, these children are often caught in tugs of war between their parents and their parents' families over whether they will be mostly Christian or mostly Jewish. In the larger world, they are exposed to anti-Semitic or anti-Christian remarks.

Pareveh's founders say they hope to help people integrate their two contrary sides and to work with Jewish organizations in being more welcoming to such people. One of the things Miss Margolis said she personally wants to get out of Pareveh "is company, a lessening of the feeling of profound isolation."

The group, perhaps the first of its kind, has a scattering of members in the Washington area and plans to start a New York City chapter in February. It has been the subject of articles in Jewish weeklies in Baltimore, Washington and Kansas City, and the group has received encouragement from experts on intermarriage such as Mayer, author of "Love and and Tradition: Marriage Between Jews and Christians."

Whether or not it survives, Pareveh is significant as an indication of the response to the rising number of interfaith marriages, once relatively rare phenomenona.

WHILE SUCH marriages stir strong theological and emotional issues for Catholics and Protestants, the American Jewish community views them as a profound threat. Numbering 5.8 million, this small community feels its vitality is threatened by what it perceives to be a high rate of intermariage. Mayer says that one out of every three Jews is marrying out of the faith.

After decades of simply condemning such marriages, the Reform and Conservative movements have begun adopting programs to keep interfaith couples in the Jewish community, and to encourage them to raise their children as Jews. Reform synagogues around the country are holding discussion groups for interfaith couples, and the movement has voted to accept the children of Jewish fathers, as well as Jewish mothers, as Jewish.

"This issue is on the cutting edge of Jewish life today," said Lydia Kukoff, director of the movement's program for interfaith families.

The Jewish Theological Seminary, the central institution of Conservative Judaism, announced recently that it was offering a course taught by Mayer to help its rabbinical students deal with the increasing number of interfaith families.

MISS GOODMAN-MALAMUTH, 30 years old, managing editor of the Nutrition Action Healthletter in Washington, grew up in a home in southern California that she said determinedly rejected religious observance other than Christmas trees and Easter baskets. In a town that had few Jews, she found herself gravitating toward the Judaism she had inherited from her father, liking its emphasis on learning and its familial warmth.

"Since no religion was encouraged, maybe Judaism represented forbidden fruit for me," she said.

Her parents objected to her interest, she said, but even the Jewish community she tried to penetrate did not make her feel comfortable. "You know how women feel they have to be twice as good as men to make it," she said. "Well that's how I felt as a Jew."

"I don't expect everybody to accept me," she said. "But I'm having an easier time accepting myself."

DEAR ABBY

Woman wants to adopt grandchild

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Our 16-year-old daughter, "Linda," is four months pregnant. She didn't want an abortion and neither did her boyfriend (I'll call him John).

We have Blue Cross, so the doctor and hospital bills will be paid for, but we need to know how to go about legally adopting the baby. Some say go to the city hall; others tell us to get a lawyer.

We want to support and raise Linda's baby until Linda is older and has a good job. John is also 16. He was her first and only boyfriend. Does John have to sign the baby over to us? Will his name be on the birth certificate?

Like we told them both, they are both very young and may not even be together in a few years. We like John. He doesn't drink or do drugs, but he is very immature.

I've never worked outside the home, so I will be able to take care of the baby. We will be called Grandma and Grandpa. Linda is going to get tutoring at home until the baby comes so she will have school credits.

John and I will be going to prenatal classes. John's parents are relieved that we agreed to raise the baby and not expect anything from them. Will you please let us know how to proceed? — PENNSYLVANIA "GRANDMA"

DEAR "GRANDMA": You are to be commended for your refreshingly rational handling of a problem that usually evokes ranting, raving, recriminations and hysteria. Your daughter is fortunate to have a mother like you.

With regard to the legalities of adopting your grandchild and the questions concerning the rights of the baby's father, you will need to see a lawyer. Good luck and God bless you.

Read on for a letter from another 16-year-old girl who was not as fortunate as your daughter:

DEAR ABBY: I am 16 and pregnant. My mother doesn't know it yet, and I don't know how to tell her. She told me that if I got pregnant before I was 18, she was going to kick me out. She said she wasn't going to go through this with me like she did with my two sisters — they were 14 and 15 when they had their first babies.

How will I be able to finish school and go to college if I have this baby? The guy I was going with ran off when I told him I was pregnant. I love him so much but I know I'll never get him back. He won't even talk to me now. He is afraid he will get into trouble because he is 32.

How am I going to raise this baby if he won't have anything to do with me? — CONFUSED AND SCARED

DEAR SCARED: First, you must tell your mother. She will be disappointed and angry at first, but I seriously doubt if she will kick you out.

Now, concerning the guy involved: You say he is "afraid" he will get into trouble? He is already in trouble and has an obligation to face up to his share of the responsibility as the father of your child. Please, tell your mother today. It will not be any easier tomorrow.

DEAR ABBY: Here's my advice to people whose neighbors have no covering on their bathroom window and are providing a free show for the folks next door:

One picture is worth a thousand words. The neighbors who are getting a free show should take several pictures of the "free show," then give them to their neighbors, saying the pictures will be entered in a photo contest and their opinion of which one is best would be appreciated. — CHUCK HOWARD, BROOKFIELD, WIS.

DEAR CHUCK: While an uncovered window is an invitation to violation of privacy, taking pictures of a "free show" is a blatant violation that could be cause for legal action, so I'm chucking your advice, Chuck.

Study shows people unaware of arthritis forms

ATLANTA (AP) — A new study shows that half of all people with arthritis don't know what form of arthritis they have and as a result could be getting the wrong treatment, according to the Arthritis Foundation.

It says researchers recently found that of some 200 persons who had been diagnosed with arthritis, 48 percent of them could not correctly identify the type they had.

Young doctors discover 'pains in the neck' caused by heavily-laden coats

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Young doctors who find their jobs a pain in the neck may have to look no further than their white coats.

"Each occupation has its attendant hazards," writes Dr. Robert E. Cilley of the University of Michigan in the Journal of the American Medical Association. For the first- or second-year resident, the white coat, laden with books, diagnostic equipment, drugs and dressings, is one of the hazards.

The malady "is described by sufferers as neck ... 'tightness,' 'strain' or 'tension' and seems to be a variant of a true tension headache ...

"The occurrence of this headache has been related to wearing a physician's coat laden with the paraphernalia of the ward resident."

Lack of sleep makes it worse.

Cilley reports that as residents advance in rank, their coats get lighter and the problem goes away.

Window decorating's most common problems

Associated Press

Odd-sized windows are the main window decorating problem in most American homes, according to Burlington Industries.

The fabric producer bases this statement on the results of its recent national contest. Contestants were invited to send in pictures of their problem windows. Thirty of the most common difficulties were selected as winners by the company's ready-made window coverings division.

Winners received window schemes created for them by interior designers as well as enough curtains and draperies to implement the suggested treatments. Five individuals also received cash awards — one of $5,000 and four of $1,000 each.

After analyzing all the entries, the company concluded that the most common problem is dealing with odd- and irregularly-shaped windows; next comes poor window placement; then, mixed combinations of sizes and shapes in the same room.

According to Donald J. Johnson, executive vice president, it is relatively easy to use window coverings to control the view, the entry of sunlight, and the amount of privacy. Solving esthetic problems, such as how to deal with stained glass and leaded glass windows, is also fairly simple.

But structural difficulties are harder to deal with. Besides the problem windows already mentioned, others which give people a hard time include bay windows, patio and French doors, windows in stair wells, high overhead windows which can't be reached, windows that open inward and those with obstructions such as air conditioners or radiators installed beneath them.

Solutions proposed by a panel of designers for specific situations in the contest are readily usable in other situations as well, according to Burlington. For example, to improve the look of rooms with windows of different sizes, the strategy of using the same material for each one is usually successful. In one instance, where two odd-sized windows were on the same wall, the designer treated them as two elements in a picture wall, covered each in the same material and then hung paintings above the smaller one to balance it against the larger window a few feet away.

With multiple windows, such as those found in a bay, the technique of giving each window its own curtain or Roman shade and then tying the whole together with a valance and side draperies was effective in several rooms.

Most of the designers turned problem windows into decorating assets not by hiding the windows but by virtually drenching them in fabric. As a rule, three or sometimes four separate elements were employed in each treatment. These included an undercurtain or Roman shade, side draperies, tiebacks and a valance.

One of the conditions of the contest was that only ready-made curtains and draperies from Burlington's line could be used. Nevertheless, the designers managed to achieve some custom touches with the ready-mades. For example, several stitched together two or more tiebacks to obtain a length of fabric long enough to make large decorative bows or to serve as a jabot.

One particularly inventive idea was to sew together two sets of the same curtains in different colors. The resulting two-toned curtain was then hung and folded back and caught on a hook, thus exposing the second color to the room.

For a tiny dining area, a designer stapled curtain panels onto the walls from ceiling to floor, then hung draperies in the same material at the windows.

Breast removal may be outmoded

NEW YORK (AP) — Treating breast cancer by removing the breast should soon be a thing of the past, a researcher says.

Dr. Bernard Fisher, professor of surgery at the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine, said "the time is near" when breast removal for cancer will be "relegated to the archives of history."

Fisher, who has said in the past that surgeons should consider alternatives to breast removal, made the remark in accepting an Albert Lasker medical research award at a luncheon in New York. The award was given for his cancer research, which included showing that chemotherapy in addition to surgery can reduce deaths from breast cancer.

Fisher was co-author of a study published this year that concluded that in certain cases of breast tumors up to about 1¾ inches in diameter, removal of just the tumor plus radiation treatments is as effective as removing the breast.

Earlier this week, Fisher said work is being done with larger tumors in large-breasted women, using chemotherapy or radiation to shrink the tumor before removing it by a procedure called "lumpectomy."

"We think it's increasing more valuable for people even with big tumors," he said in an interview.

Tranquilizers may cure hiccups

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Holding your breath, drinking from the back of a glass or swallowing sugar may work.

But North Carolina doctors report that in cases of hiccups that won't go away, injection of a common tranquilizer may do the trick — and safely.

"In our clinics intramuscular haloperidol has been used in seven patients with excellent results," Dr. Michael F. Fleming and several colleagues report in The American Journal of Psychiatry.

Hiccups are involuntary, intermittent contractions of the diaphragm. There can be various causes.

In one case, a 75-year-old man who had been hiccupping for 36 hours was injected with the drug, and hiccups stopped in 30 minutes.

In another case, a 35-year-old man with cancer had hiccups on and off for three months, and ultimately was hiccupping 12 times a minute. Traditional methods failed, as did several other drugs. After injection with haloperidol, the hiccups stopped in 60 minutes, the doctors report.

Parents' job of child-raising never done

By ERMA BOMBECK

Even when children move away from home, parents refuse to let them off the umbilical leash until they have a sweeper in their closet, an air purifier in their bathroom, and a smoke alarm in their kitchen.

Hey man, that's our job!

Don't ask me why, but it has always been so. Parents get all bent out of shape when kids let their dishes dry in the drainer, so the sooner they start putting them in the cupboards before a visit, the sooner parents lighten up on them.

You have to know that every mother, since the beginning of time, has given her apartment-dwelling son or daughter a cookbook. It's always one of those primero-basic-step-by-step-beginning-uno-simple-easy-introductory volumes that has everything but training wheels on it. It doesn't matter. It will never replace the phone number penciled on the wall over the phone for "Palermo's Pizza."

We also feel obliged to share with our children 80 years of experience and research on how to get their laundry to sparkle. This is not a priority among young people. They don't have the patience for sparkling. Wet is good enough. I once lectured one of my kids for two hours on bleach. You'd have thought I was giving him instructions on how to fuel a nuclear reactor. He was against it and said he didn't want to bring his children into a world with bleach.

The reason this is on my mind is that every Christmas we listen to their list of dire needs and question them. They are desperate for a telephone-answering machine, tape deck for the car, hair dryer, ski sweater, car insurance, portable audio for jogging, records, VCR, and membership in a health club.

"I thought this might have been the year he requested an ironing board," I said.

"Well, I don't care," said my husband. "He needs a toolbox and that's what he's going to get. How can someone go through adult life without a toolbox?"

"I bet he won't use it," I said. "Remember last year you bought him a jack for his car and he stored it under his bed because he didn't have room for it in the trunk?"

"That's no worse than what you bought him."

"A crock pot is a necessity for anyone who works," I said.

"He stored his unpaid bills in it," said my husband.

I don't know how long it takes other parents to domesticate their children, but we're not doing too well. One of them asked to borrow a sharp knife the other night. When I asked why, he said his door was sticking.

I reminded him it was also good for cutting up vegetables. He thought a minute and said, "I never thought about that."

Someday, I'd like to see them go through an arch of orange blossoms and hear the sound of little feet.

The reality is McDonald's Golden Arches and the sound of little feet are those headed for little traps under the sink!

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — There is a lot of hocus-pocus going on in offices and living rooms these days. Between appointments and after hours, lawyers, doctors, priests and Wall Street wizards use their pens as magic wands, turning dimes into pennies and making playing cards change suit before the very eyes of clients, friends and relatives.

Inspired by professional magicians like Doug Henning, David Copperfield and Harry Blackstone Jr. and television's Judge Harry T. Stone of NBC's "Night Court," who performs magic tricks in his courtroom, amateur magicianship has "grown more than at any time since the Depression," said Tony Spina, president of Louis Tannen Inc., a Manhattan-based manufacturer and distributor of magic supplies.

"Most of today's amateur magicians are men for whom sleight-of-hand is a therapeutic hobby," Spina said. "It relieves stress while exercising skills useful in their professions." As evidence of the subject's popularity, he noted that the store sold nearly 2,500 sets of the seven-volume Parbell Course in Magic last year, all to amateurs.

While in Harry Houdini's day, magic was the domain of performers who took their secrets to the grave, today's professionals share their secrets with dedicated amateurs.

The amateurs in turn perform for one another. Members of the Society of American Magicians, a group founded by Houdini, perform over lunch at "magicians' tables" in small midtown delicatessens.

MEANWHILE, LOCAL members of the International Brotherhood of Magicians try to mystify one another over dinner at the Roosevelt Hotel here. This group added 1,200 new members this year, many from legal, financial and medical professions.

Last month, more than 1,250 spare-time magicians attended the 23rd annual Louis Tannen Magic Jubilee at Brown's Hotel and Country Club in Loch Sheldrake, N.Y. Together, they perfected their patter, passes and palming. They learned lapping, sleeving, vanishing and transposing. They bought the Svengali Deck and building plans for substitution trunks. Typical gimmicks sold for about $5; the most popular was the $2 Professor's Nightmare, ropes that change lengths. A top hat cost $80.

Among the presto-chango artists at the convention was the Rev. Dermot Brennan of St. Patrick's Church in Yorktown Heights, N.Y. Brennan alters the patterns of silk handkerchiefs and makes sponge balls multiply from his pockets, he said, as "a release from my personal cares and to foster contact between myself and parishioners." He even saws the willing in half, he said, "But after 40 years, I'm getting too old to put up my substitution trunk and appear and disappear with ease."

Doctors are performing bedside magic. One Long Island oncologist, Dr. Sidney Siddharth, uses "chink-a-chink," disappearing coin tricks, to cheer patients. Siddharth said that he picked up the wand six years ago, after watching a David Copperfield television special. "I use anything handy at the hospital as a magic prop, to make pain vanish for a moment," he said. At home, Siddharth entertains other doctors, who, as he put it, "find the mysteries of magic an escape from highly stressful realities."

IN THE banking world, its inhabitants say, a well-transposed coin can be just the right currency between colleagues. When dressing for work, Larry Pinsky, a senior vice president at Manufacturers Hanover, thoughtfully pockets his special pennies and silver dollars.

"Colleagues are impressed when I transform a coin from copper to silver; it breaks the ice at meetings," Pinsky said. "At parties, I make a card vanish in thin air to pick up a flagging mood."

For Pinsky and many other parlor magicians, magic has become a shared language between parent and child. Pinsky performs magic for his 10-year-old daughter, Caroline. Silk scarfs burst into flames, colorful balls reverse order and peas travel from beneath one shell to another. As Caroline gets older, his "now-you-see-it, now-you-don't" routines have had to become more subtle and more quickly executed. "To get better gasps from Caroline, I have to constantly improve my technique," Pinsky said.

Not all magic passes from parent to child, however. Fifteen-year-old Jim Goldstein of Manhattan does "friendly magic," rope and coin tricks, at school. He practices during history class. "I'm teaching my dad a few simple tricks I think he can handle," he said.

WHILE TELEVISION'S Judge Stone performs card tricks from the bench to hold the attention of the court, many real-life judges use magic to keep friends and colleagues alert outside the courtroom. New York State Supreme Court Justice Budd G. Goodman is one of 2,000 members of the Society of American Magicians. He was inspired by a kit that included a dozen illusions, which his wife bought him eight years ago, and his repertory now numbers 100 effects in which he defies the laws of gravity and logic. His biggest audiences are at bar mitzvahs and Hanukkah parties.

"My best effects are the zigzag illusion, splitting a cigarette into segments and returning it whole; mind reading numbers people select from a telephone book, and changing dice into eggs," he said. What draws so many from the legal profession to magic? "We love to perform," Goodman said.

X-ray shows cloudy due to tight braids

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

A 19-year-old Florida woman with a positive skin test for tuberculosis was referred to the county health department for X-rays.

She had no TB symptoms, and a physical examination detected nothing unusual. But, two doctors report in a letter to the New England Journal of Medicine, the first X-ray showed suspicious cloudy streaks at the top of her lungs.

The woman's tightly woven, small-diameter braids were especially misleading, the letter says, because they showed up as "linear, streaky densities" on the X-ray, just as some kinds of pneumonia or TB might. (Traditional braids would cast a broad shadow less likely to be confused with a medical problem in the lung.)

To prevent such confusion, doctors advise radiologists to follow advice given in a radiology textbook: "It is essential that hair long enough to reach the field of exposure be pinned up before the examination."

American West one of hottest trends in decor

Associated Press

A recent informal survey of New York City restaurants turned up at least five with menus and decor based on the American West. This fall, an American furniture company introduced a 24-piece collection based on the West, and Tex-Mex cooking has been identified as one of the hottest trends in fast food.

Even Western movies are back in fashion, says Mary Emmerling of "American Country West," a new decorating and source book. The author, who has been identified with American country decorating, about which she wrote several books, sees a difference between country and Western decorating.

Both styles are informal and rustic and feature lots of white on walls and ceilings as well as folk arts and crafts. "However, the textures are quite different, and Western country furniture is usually oversized and comfortable. The textures are rough as in adobe, stucco and animal hides and baskets," she said.

Even the accessories are outsize. Antlers are often mounted over the fireplace or exterior of the house; rough animal hides may be slung over the arm of a sofa, placed on the floor or hung on the walls and American Indian woven rugs, pottery and baskets are often decorative elements.

Emmerling says she expects this style of decoration to grow in the coming years, an opinion borne out by the introduction in October of a large new furniture collection by Lane Co. Lane and the Museum of American Folk Art collaborated on the collection of Western-style furniture, which includes characteristic wood pieces brought by immigrants from Germany, France and Mexico who came directly to the West. The furniture was introduced at the recent furniture market in North Carolina.

According to Dr. Robert Bishop, director of the museum, interest in the American West has two major sources. The distinctive color palette was popularized by the use of desert colors in makeup. The palette which includes white, beige and gold, turquoise and red "just looks right to use, now," he said.

Bishop added that Western style was a kind of American country, which contributed to its popularity as a home furnishings design theme. Country appears to have a special appeal to Americans that even design authorities cannot discourage.

"Three years ago, people in the know said country was dead, but sales figures didn't bear the experts out. It was one of the few times that the taste-makers said 'forget it' and it went on despite what they said," according to Bishop.

Among the appeals of the Western look to Emmerling is the fact that life seems to flow in and out of doors. Porches and verandas which are a feature of Western-style homes are used as additional "rooms" by Westerners. She traveled through the Western section of the country for more than two years, gathering material for her book and photographing the homes that are described and pictured in the book's largest section. She recalls feeling quite different there compared to the Northeast.

"Everything seems bigger than life. The quality of light kept making me think of the words 'spacious skies.' " She came to see the essence of Western style as an interaction of Indian culture and the pioneers who went West in wagons.

Once they got to states like New Mexico, Texas, Wyoming, Colorado, Nevada and North and South Dakota, they found Indian rugs and baskets, Indian blankets, and the soft wood known as pinon from which they made new furniture, she said.

"Once you begin to look for it, you can find Western motifs in many areas of life," she said. She singled out cowboy gear, the Navajo designs now found on fashion sweaters, and fabrics such as sheets and yard goods whose designs and colors reflect the angular lines of the mesas.

Western-style boots are now a status fashion among the youth of Europe and even leather handbags and belts sport Western motifs, she said.

Spray-painting avoids mess, dries quickly

NEW YORK (AP) — Spray-paints can be easy to use since they eliminate the need for mixing, thinning paint and cleaning brushes. They also dry quickly.

However, according to Karen Saks, managing editor of Family Circle Magazine, it is very important to choose a well-ventilated location.

Always begin by shaking the can thoroughly. Color pigment inside the can is mixed with an agitator ball, so when you hear the rattling you should keep shaking for one minute before starting to spray.

Decorators in demand

Associated Press

A recent survey taken among members of the American Society of Interior Designers found that a wider range of clients is consulting decorators today than in the past.

"The dramatic increase in the number of working women has been a major force in changing the market for interior design," according to Gail Adams, president.

The survey also found that the scope of residential design projects varies widely, ranging from some that cost less than $5,000 to those with budgets of over $200,000. The cost of the average living room redesign was $15,564, the bathroom, $5,008, and the kitchen $12,133.

The new dependence on design expertise has sent many who might not have chosen to work with an interior decorator in the past scurrying to find someone who will stay within the budget and whose personality will blend well with their needs.

As more people seek designers, new methods of pairing the two are likely to arise.

One which was organized in the New York area is the Designer Referral Service set up by Judy Block, formerly employed by a designer, and Sharon Dietz, a former public school art teacher.

The two women met as neighbors in the Westchester County suburb of Chappaqua. They now represent about 45 designers and craftsmen.

They interview each potential client, reviewing the scope of the desired job, budget limitations and other requirements, and advising whether the job is practically possible to accomplish.

THEN THEY pair the client with the most appropriate designer. There is no charge for the service to the client, the women receive a commission on jobs from the designers.

Besides helping clients conceptualize what they want done, the two say the non-threatening atmosphere they provide is another advantage. Many clients feel uncomfortable discussing these issues with a designer.

Mrs. Block says the idea for the new business developed over the years.

As a former assistant to a designer and a member of a family with a carpet business, she was frequently asked to recommend a designer or offer an opinion on a wallpaper, fabric or carpet sample.

"There's a professional to consult for almost everything nowadays, but there wasn't for decorators, we decided we could fill this unmet need," she said.

Among some two dozen clients since June have been a couple with a large budget and no time to interview designers, who wanted a complete redesign of their home and a divorced mother with $5,000 to spend on "a pink bedroom."

Mrs. Block noted that one method she used to find decorators to represent was to visit show houses where many designers' work is on view.

She said she sought good ideas in the use of space and materials, regardless of the particular style chosen.

Show houses in which a number of decorators combine efforts, each one doing a different room, are now held in most areas of the country.

IF ANYTHING, they are more popular than they used to be. The reasons include their appeal for the public and their income-generating potential for designers who may gain clients and the charities which generally sponsor them as fund raisers.

Recently House Beautiful Magazine reported on show houses held throughout the country and noted that they are an excellent resource for those seeking new ideas or a bird's-eye view of current decorating trends.

The magazine's editor, JoAnn Barwick, says there were "literally hundreds" of attractive rooms, indicating excellent work is being done in many regions of the country.

An example of the geographic diversity of the show houses is seen among some of the rooms judged by the magazine as the 10 best in 1985. Rooms were located in Westport, Conn.; Charleston and Columbia, S.C., and Atlanta.

Another method of finding a decorator is to contact the nearest ASID chapter. The national design group has 46 chapters, many of which run a referral service, according to Bill Tellenberg, an executive with the national headquarters in New York.

Seven Minuet Club debutantes presented at ball

Seven Minuet Club Debutantes were presented by their fathers Nov. 30 at its 30th Presentation Ball at Midland Country Club marking the 52-year-old club's annual tradition begun in 1956.

The 1985 Debutantes making court bows were Frances Foster Blackwell, Katherine Carrie Boles, Carolyn Jean Christy Cowden, Shannon Elizabeth Floyd, Elizabeth Black Montgomery, Margaret Jean Wageman and Kimberlee Young.

Miss Blackwell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rebel Eugene Blackwell Jr. of Dallas, was escorted by Timothy Cahill Thompson Jr. a student at the University of Oklahoma in Norman, Okla. Thompson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Cahill Thompson Sr.

Miss Blackwell was presented in a formal gown of white re-embroidered Alencon lace and white silk satin. The tightly moulded bodice, veiled entirely with the French lace and intricately beaded with tiny seed pearls and iridescent paillettes, was fashioned with an off-the-shoulder sweetheart neckline and short lantern sleeves adorned with a bow on the shoulder.

Miss Boles, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Floyd Boles, was escorted by Thomas Frederick Chambers Kennedy, a student at the University of Texas at Austin. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Duncan Kennedy.

Miss Boles' gown of white silk taffeta was designed by Endrius, Ltd. for Neiman-Marcus. It was fashioned with a portrait neckline, worn off the shoulders, dropped-waist, and a long, full circular skirt. The entire neckline was encircled by dimensional, dicoted flowers and leaves, centered with pearls and crystals and the leaves continued down the moulded bodice. The skirt was adorned with the same jeweled flowers and leaves and the back was accented by a large taffeta bow.

Miss Cowden, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Coley Cowden, was escorted by Bloyce Hill Britton III, a student at Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, N.C. He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Bloyce Hill Britton Jr. of Winston-Salem.

Miss Cowden was presented in a formal silk faced satin ball gown designed by Ron LoVece of New York. The fitted bodice featured a basque waist and an off-the-shoulder portrait neckline of crystal pleated satin trimmed with imported beads and beaded satin bows. The slipper length full skirt was encircled by a deep crystal pleated hemline adorned with beading and large satin bows flowing into a softly sweeping train. Accenting the skirt was a beaded bow at the back of the waistline.

Miss Floyd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Eugene Flyod, was escorted by John McCartney Hibbitts, a student at the University of Texas at Austin. He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. William McCartney Hibbitts.

The waist and neckline were edged with silk Venice lace and silk Chantilly lace bodice was enhanced by a beaded Alencon lace, hand-appliqued sweetheart neckline and shirred short melon sleeves trimmed with Chantilly lace. The shirred full taffeta skirt bustles over a shimmering Chantilly underskirt featuring a delicately scalloped hemline accented by taffeta roses.

Miss Montgomery, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Hodges Montgomery of Houston, was escorted by George Pierre Gardere III, a student at Texas Christian University in Fort Worth. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Pierre Gardere Jr. of Houston.

Miss Montgomery wore a bouffant princess gown, of white peau de soie designed with a figurine bodice of off-the-shoulder decolletage. The multi-gored skirt was enhanced with satin bows of graduated sizes caught in a tufted effect. The skirt swept into exaggerated fullness in the back. Her dress was worn by Miss Montgomery's mother when she was a 1960 Minuet Club Debutante.

Miss Wageman, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas James Wageman, was escorted by Patrick Vann Culp, a student at Southern Methodist University in Dallas. He is the son of Judge and Mrs. Vann Culp.

Miss Wageman chose a gown of white silk taffeta designed by Endrius, Ltd. for Neiman-Marcus, fashioned with a moulded bodice, V'ed at the waistline. The portrait neckline and tiny cap sleeves were enhanced by numerous folds of the fabric culminating in a fan-shaped dicoted twist at the center front and on the sleeves. Her long full skirt was accented at the center each by a large taffeta bow.

Miss Young, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack William Young, was escorted by James Miles Boldrick, a student at the University of Texas at Austin. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Pratt Boldrick.

By KATHLEEN O'CONNELL
Hearst News Service

Dressing up for holiday parties gets more and more exciting each season. Just step into any store these days and you're nearly blinded by all the glitter. It's as though designers are trying to literally outshine each other.

Unlike last season, holiday '85 shines more with sequins, paillettes (similar to oversized sequins) and rhinestones than with beads. Don't misunderstand, beaded anything — last year's favorite holiday attraction — is still around. But now we have even more glittering choices.

The nice thing about the holiday season is that just about anything goes — as long as it sparkles and shines. Dressing up can be as elegant as a simple, black dress worn with rhinestone earrings, necklace and bracelet. It can be as chic as a cream satin smoking jacket over solid colored satin trousers. It can be as festive as a red tulle skirt topped with a velvet bustier bodice.

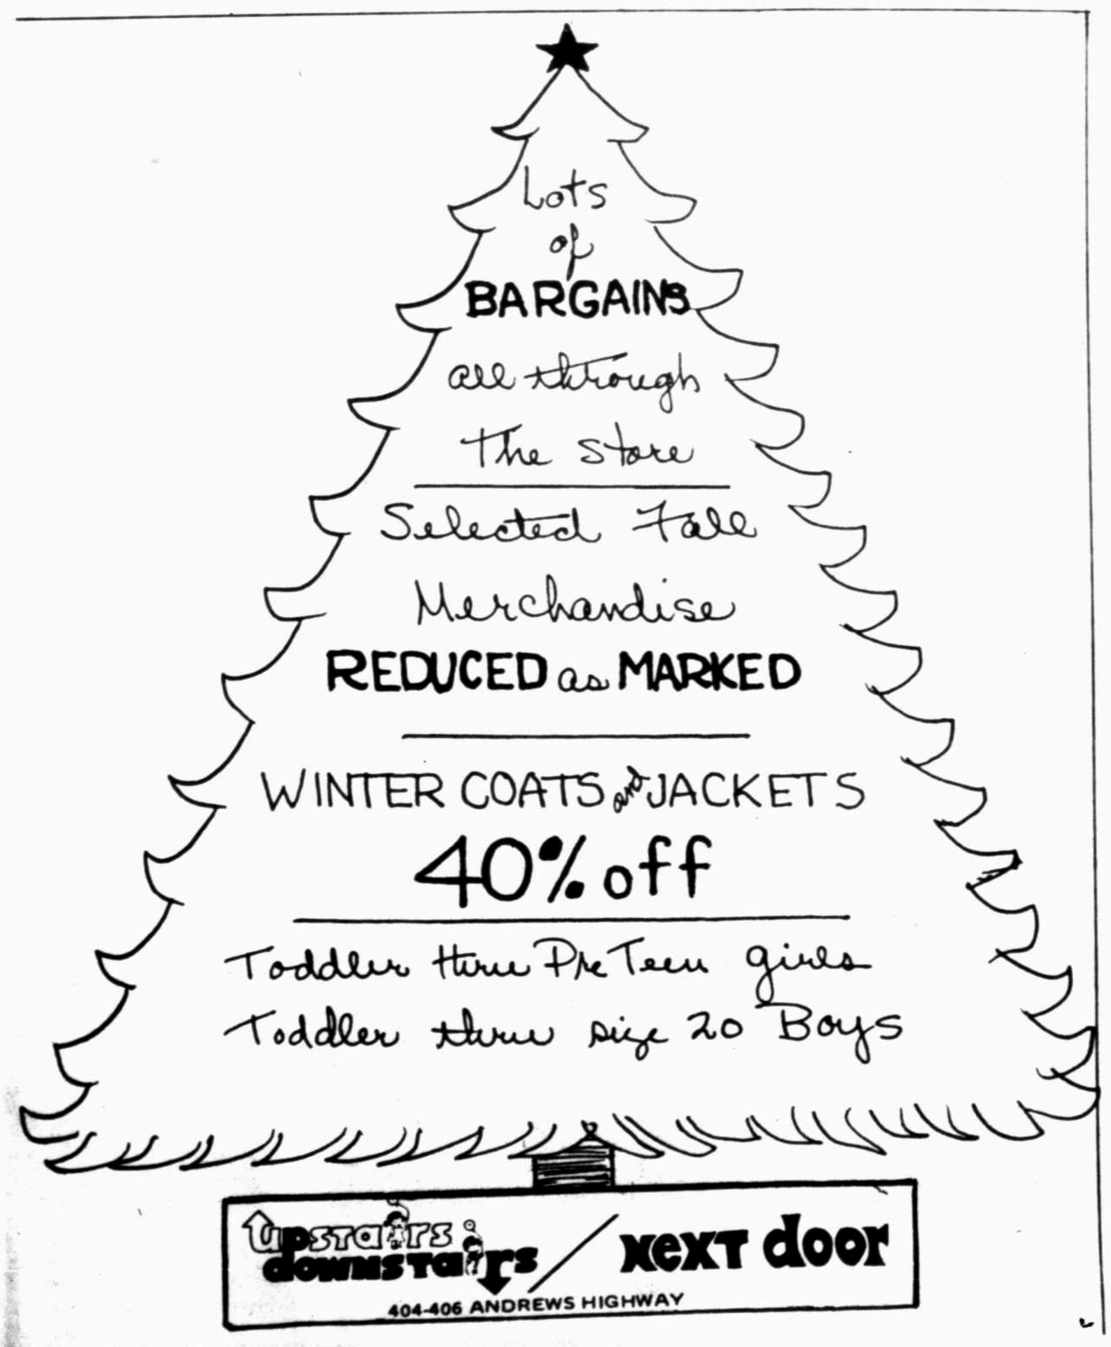

No matter what your tastes, the important thing is to do something different. The holiday season is the one time for women to do something they wouldn't normally do. It doesn't have to be anything elaborate. Looking festive can be as simple as creating a center of interest by wearing an unusual necklace, an antique scarf or a pair of big, bold earrings to complement the clothing.

Holiday dressing doesn't have to be expensive, either. Scout out rummage sales and flea markets for glittery jewelry. Hit the sale tables for costume jewelry. Just remember, don't overdo the glitter. If you're wearing a sequined top over black satin pants, forego the big, bold earrings and hair ornament. You want your face to be noticed, too, not just your clothing.

On the other hand, if you're wearing a solid color, such as lipstick red, cobalt blue or emerald green, feel free to pile on the fake jewels. Patterned or colored hosiery also adds interest to holiday wear.

If it's nostaligia you're looking for, there's plenty of that, too. TD4 by Eletra Casadei has designed a whole holiday collection reminiscent of evenings at the nightclub. All the old glamour remains, but TD4 has an '80s attitude. Lengths range from short to long. Colors are bright and bold, silhouettes are fit and flared, long and lean.

Velvet has always had its place at holiday time. But velvets from TD4 don't look like pristine Christmas dresses anymore. They're mixed with bold jewel-tone satins, smattered with rhinestones, embroidered and flocked. TD4 mixes black with sizzling fuchsia, red and sapphire. A sexy halter dress with flaming red satin inserts, a bustier with an oversized fuchsia bow or a unique zig-zag pattern of satin and velvet gives fabrics an updated flair.

Hallmark's dated ornaments sentimental successes

Hearst News Service

When Hallmark introduced its first Christmas ornaments, including a white glass Betsey Clark ball dated 1973, there was a lot of finger-crossing at corporate headquarters.

"Hallmark was concerned that a dated ornament would leave a dealer in the lurch if he couldn't sell them all," said ornament expert Clara Johnson Scroggins. "What no one foresaw is people would want that date."

Dated ornaments have strong sentimental appeal because they encourage people to reminisce about past Christmases, Scroggins said. Hallmark Keepsake Ornaments, both dated and undated, now rank as the most heavily collected Christmas ornaments in the country, according to Scroggins. And their value has grown astronomically on the secondary market.

Scroggins flipped through a price list from a trusted dealer and ticked off numerous examples: a tin locomotive, which sold for $13 in 1982, now lists for $210. Heavenly Minstrel, a special-edition ornament that cost $15 in 1980, now sells for $250 to $400. Santa and Sleigh, $3.50 when it made its debut in 1975, now sells for $250.

Scroggins, who probably is the foremost authority on contemporary ornaments, owns about 28,000 Christmas decorations. She originally specialized in sterling silver ornaments, and her collection now includes ornaments made by Lenox, Gorham, Waterford and other makers of fine china, silver and crystal. In a more whimsical vein, she also owns about 250 Snoopy ornaments, which adorn their own tabletop tree.

"I love my ornaments and still buy them just for the love of it. I intend to leave a major collection to a national museum, and the rest will be divided among my family."

Brides bought with many different kinds of currency

Copley News Service

Currencies used in purchasing brides have varied considerably from country to country. In the Santa Cruz Islands, brides were bought with coils made ofmango-bird feathers wrapped in banana fibers. In New Guinea, bird-of-paradise feathers were used; in Siam, silver ingots with a special stamp; and in Rhodesia, iron bells.

re Living Desert:

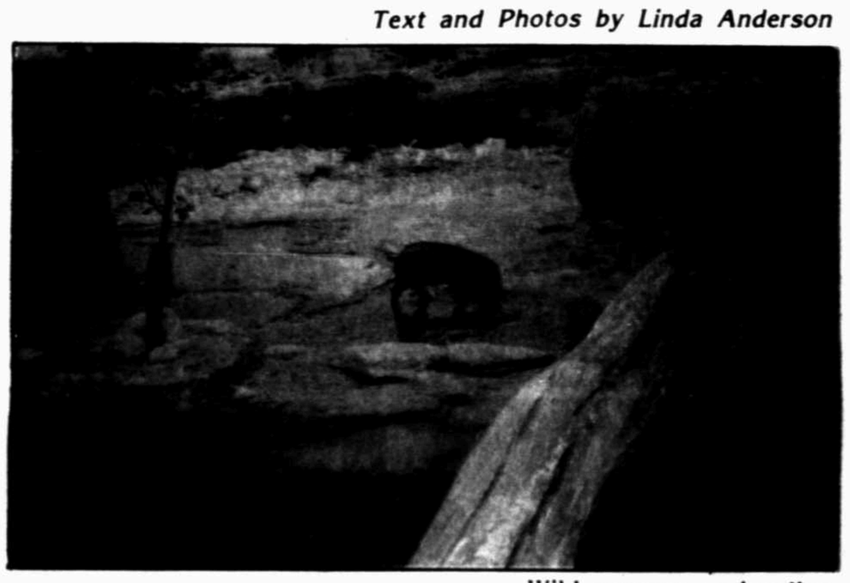

Desert blossoms

Text and Photos by Linda Anderson

Beauty...

Hanging gourds and vines

Wild peccary or javelina

and beasts

It's not easy to appreciate beauty in everyday surroundings. In the desert Southwest, lack of trees, lack of water and overabundance of flatness make the splendor of nature seem miles away.

The Living Desert Zoological and Botanical State Park in Carlsbad, N.M., was established to dispel the myth that the desert is ugly and lifeless.

According to Dean Ricer, park superintendent, between 800 and 1000 varieties of plants and 60 different animal species, including birds, mammals and reptiles, populate the park, which is located on the top of a hill just northwest of Carlsbad. About 400 of the plant varieties are exotic species in the greenhouse, he said, brought in from other deserts around the world.

"Our reason for being here is to interpret the Chihuahuan Desert and (its multitude) of life forms for the public, as well as to preserve it," Ricer said. The Chihuahuan Desert covers two states in Mexico as well as Southwest New Mexico and West Texas, he added. "The Davis Mountains and the Glass Mountains are islands totally surrounded by desert."

With the Sonoran Desert in Arizona and Mexico and the Mojave Desert in California, the American deserts cover a huge amount of western and southwestern real estate.

However, all deserts — even the ones in the same general vicinity — are not created equal. Sand dunes, arroyos, rocky uplands and oasis areas are all found in deserts. The Living Desert State Park's nature trails display the different land types and the plants found naturally growing in them.

In order to see the various habitats, otherwise, an individual would "have to travel all over" the world, Ricer said. "We bring them all together ...

"The Chihuahan Desert has a wider diversity of plants and animals than the other American deserts," he added.

The park displays animals in their natural surroundings, Ricer said, including some — such as bears and mountain lions — which were formerly common in the area, but have been driven away or killed off by man. "Mountain lions don't like to be around people," Ricer said. "They are running out of territory as we overpopulate and expand."

SOME OF THE first park inhabitants the visitor encounters are, indeed, a pair of mountain lions, one affectionately called Albert by some park volunteers. Occasionally Albert or his cage-mate will chill spines by suddenly roaring.

The nearby aviary contains, among others, golden eagles, hawks, kestrels, owls, quail and a roadrunner. Ricer said that during the summer, when the flowers were blooming, numerous wild birds, including dove and three types of finches, arrived at the park to feast on the seeds. "We don't have to put them on display because they put themselves on display."

Poisonous snakes can be seen behind glass walls. Rattlesnakes of several varieties and lengths, gila monsters and other desert reptiles are represented. Visitors to this pavilion are either fascinated by the snakes and spend several minutes watching each one, or are repelled and whiz through, only giving each one a glance and a shudder.

Desert mammals, such as pronghorn, mule deer, collared peccary or javelina, badgers, wolves, buffalo, elk and foxes inhabit fenced open-air areas, where their natural activities and lifestyles are, for the most part, undisturbed. Sometimes visitors are rewarded with a glimpse of fawns romping or tiny peccaries nursing.

A favorite exhibit of children is a prairie dog town, where the fat little mammals put on a display of barking and jumping which is captivating to young — and old — visitors. Pellets of food can be purchased for only a dime, resulting in some very well-fed prairie dogs.

Nocturnal animals, including deer mouse, hispin cotton rat and spotted skunk, have their own indoor exhibit, complete with nighttime lighting and recorded cricket chirps. One unusual feature shows the remains of extinct night animals, the saber-toothed cat and the dire wolf.

As a state park, the Living Desert is funded and maintained by the state of New Mexico; but it also relies on the contributions of private citizens and the community. Volunteer organizations such as Friends of the Park and the Carlsbad Horticulture Society, and front desk volunteers donate both time and funds to the park.

"We have almost 500 man hours each month from volunteers," Ricer said. "Without the volunteers and support of the community, we could not run the park as efficiently."

Billie Stephens, manager and paid employee of the park's gift shop, and a park volunteer, said the profits generated by the gift shop, which is operated by the Carlsbad Horticulture Society, are donated back to the park. She said such donations often run between $12,000 and $15,000 per year.

THE GIFT SHOP was opened in 1978. "We started with a table and cardboard boxes," Mrs. Stephens said. "We have expanded every year."

Donations from the gift shop have provided the park with such items as soil and plant collections, said Mrs. Stephens. "If they need it and we can buy it — if it's approved we do it."

Through the efforts of the state and its citizens, the Living Desert State Park celebrates the life and variety found in the desert — and proves the beauty found in everyday surroundings is visible to those who open their eyes.

Museum honors early New Mexico

LA CIENEGA, N.M. (AP) — It's a trip that takes only a few minutes from Santa Fe but carries people back centuries to a time that Y.A. Paloheimo says should never be forgotten.

Paloheimo's inspiration for bringing the Spanish colonial period to life stands near the tiny village of La Cienega. It's a living museum called El Rancho de las Golondrinas, or Ranch of the Swallows, where people can see New Mexico as it was 200 years ago.

The 86-year-old Paloheimo said he had visited open museums in his native Finland as a boy and when he made his first trip to this area in 1946 he immediately saw the need for the one he later would create.

"I was overwhelmed by the beauty and also very much disturbed by the fact of how little people knew of the Spanish colonial period," he said.

He said he also was astonished that so little was being done to preserve, especially for people of Spanish heritage, a place considered to be one of the most historical ranches in the state.

THE OLD RANCH that would become the museum was owned by Paloheimo's wife, Leonora, and her mother. Paloheimo and his wife began to renovate the property, which not only had been a self-sufficient working ranch, but also a stopping point for travelers on El Camino Real between Santa Fe and Mexico.

The first project was to reconstruct the torreon, or defense tower, that years ago had provided a lookout post against raiding Indians. The foundation still was intact, so Paloheimo knew his reconstruction was historically correct.

He said that after work on the torreon was completed in 1951-52, he and his wife began searching throughout New Mexico for buildings, tools, furniture and other artifacts to move to the ranch.

"It was a very difficult matter to get them," he said. "The people didn't want to part from those things. We had to convince them it was in their benefit to get people to know about their culture and history."

Paloheimo also was short on time because of his job as the Finnish consul for Southern California, Arizona and New Mexico. He opened the office in 1947 and lived in California for the 18 years he held the post. His work on the museum was done primarily in the summers when he and his family would come to Santa Fe.

He said when he retired and moved to Santa Fe he "began to really work on this museum project in earnest."

THE MUSEUM WAS OPENED to the public for the first time in 1972 under lease to the Colonial New Mexico Historical Foundation. The property was donated in 1982 to a charitable trust, Rancho de las Golondrinas, which now runs it.

The popularity of the museum has grown steadily, with attendance increasing tenfold from the 2,500 people who visited the first year. Paloheimo attributes much of the success of the museum to the tranquil beauty of the area.

The museum is laid out as a working ranch with fields, corrals, animal sheds, water and molasses mills, and tinsmith, wheelwright and blacksmith shops much as they would have been years ago.

There are goats, horses, donkeys and chickens. The fields produce crops. The mills and the shops are working replicas. There's a church on a hill with a cemetery nearby. There's the main buildings, built with the torreon and a wall completely surrounding them to provide protection against attack.

Paloheimo said the museum, including the fields, spreads over about 200 acres. He said about seven people work at the museum throughout the year because it is a working ranch, and more are employed from April through October when it is open to the public.

THE MUSEUM ALSO has a Spring Festival in May and a Harvest Festival in October, with people from throughout northern New Mexico participating. Wearing costumes of the Spanish colonial period, they provide demonstrations of the various arts and crafts and work of that time.

Women can be seen baking bread in earthen ovens, washing clothes along a nearby stream or shucking corn and throwing it into a wagon. The tinsmith and blacksmith work in their shops. Men dressed as Spanish soldiers patrol the ranch.

Smaller festivals also are held some weekdays in May so teachers can bring their classes.

Paloheimo said it has been thrilling for him to watch people of Spanish ancestry participate in the museum and come to understand what it means. He also is proud of the museum's educational value.

"The school children are going through every day, year after year, about 20,000 a year ... They can really see and feel their past history," he said.

State Department issues travel advisory

By 'GENE BURKE
Copley News Service

TRAVEL ADVISORY: ANGOLA — The State Department advises that travel to Angola is considered dangerous due to the serious security situation in that country. Although the capital city of Luanda is considered relatively safe, travel by road, rail or air within the country is unsafe due to the possibility of guerrilla attack.

The United States has no diplomatic relations within the People's Republic of Angola, maintains no embassy in Luanda and therefore has no personnel in Angola to assist Americans who encounter problems there. No other country officially represents U.S. interests in Angola.

Although there are no U.S. government restrictions on travel of Americans to Angola, the State Department understands that the government of Angola has imposed restrictions on the travel of foreigners in various areas of the country. Americans traveling to Angola should adhere scrupulously to Angolan laws and regulations.

Q. We are senior citizens and in the past had a joint passport — and at one time had a passport including our three children. Is it true, as I've heard, that now passports are issued to an individual and that the cost is $35 to $40? If this is true, it is outrageous when the passports may be used for just one trip.

A. Since January 1981, all U.S. citizens have been required to obtain individual passports in their own names — children and adults. Often, the bearer of a passport including spouse or children would use the passport when traveling alone. This caused the bearer inconvenience or delay by foreign authorities.

Passport fees, by the way, are $42 for adults for a 10-year passport and $27 for minors under 18 for a five-year passport. The shorter term is based on the fact that a minor's appearance changes more quickly than an adult. If an adult has a passport issued within the last eight years, and can submit it when filing for a new passport, the fee is $35 and a mail-in application may be used. Applicants should check with the nearest post office authorized to accept applications for more detailed information. In some areas, county clerk offices also accept passport applications.

Serious national conference to study varieties of humor

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Coming from Hungary to Hawaii and from India to Italy, up to 1,000 scholars will gather in this area in 1986 and 1987 to deliberate — and joke about — humor.

They won't just be junkets for comedians, said conference organizer Don Nilsen, an Arizona State University professor of English linguistics.

There's in-depth academic study of humor here, although that idea may sound pretty funny to the lay person.

The national humor conference will meet in Tempe for the fifth and last time around April Fool's Day next year, and the sixth international meeting will take place in the area for the first time a year later.

Nilsen will be the host for both conferences with his wife, Alleen Nilsen, assistant graduate college dean. The two are founders of WHIM — World Humor and Irony Membership.

Previous international conferences were in Ireland and India.

Subjects already on the 1987 agenda range from a talk entitled "The Polish Joke," to "The Indispensability of Humor in China," as well as more abstract views of Jewish humor, South African jokes and a lack of humor among college administrators.

Unfortunately, not all those invited can attend, Nilsen said. For some governments, a humor conference is no laughing matter.

Scholars from many communist countries have been prohibited from attending, Nilson said. One professor from Yugoslavia enclosed a copy of a letter from his government which told him, "We have absolutely no confirmation you will return."

Humor, when the meaning is stretched beyond just a good joke, can be as influential as politics or science, Nilsen said.

"It's a good way to learn other people's ways of dealing with the language and other things," he said.

Satire in books, newspaper columns and cartoons communicates the changing mores of society.

"Satire is a method of social criticism and influencing the political process, a way of balancing out society," he explained.

Humor has an undercurrent indicating social trends, he said. Jokes come into fashion quickly and then disappear; Nilson points out that jokes about drinking were dropped from Johnny Carson's monologue as the awareness of dangers of alcoholism and drunken driving increased.

"Western and Eastern humor is different," Nilson said. "Western is sexist and racist. We're afraid the Italians are going to take our jobs or something, so they're put down.

"In jokes in the Eastern bloc countries, your job is fairly secure but the humor is used on politicians, but it's underground humor; it's a way of coping."

Personal trust can be solution to financial puzzle

CLEVELAND (AP) — People who want to simplify their financial affairs may find a personal trust a good solution, says Theodore W. Jones of National City Corp., an Ohio holding company.

A trust, Jones says, is a written agreement which provides for a bank or an individual to manage property for the benefit of another person or persons.

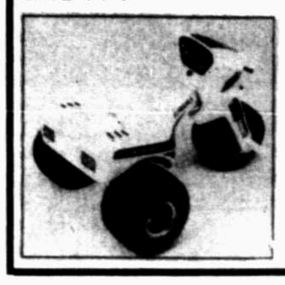

"A person who is extremely busy might decide to let a trustee, such as a bank, handle bookkeeping transactions," he says.

Setting proper priorities can cause career growth

Associated Press

A poor sense of priorities can torpedo a career, but, fortunately, pinpointing what is most important in a job is an acquired skill anyone can learn.

Workers who don't have their priorities straight, according to an article in the December issue of Cosmopolitan, don't focus clearly on the most important goals, don't know what tasks need to be done when, and are unaware of the habits that can mark them as less than serious about their job.

• If you don't know what the most important part of your job is, ask. "There's no need to second guess," said Marge Baxter, a time-management consultant who also conducts a time seminar at New York University. "When in doubt, simply ask your supervisor what your main priority should be — what you're being paid to do."

• Remind yourself of the No. 1 priority. Keep a phrase displayed that will help you keep it in focus. Reminders of daily deadlines help keep you from being distracted.

• Be organized. This is not an end in itself, but it allows you to function effectively.

• Keep lists. The experts recommend keeping a master list, and a shorter daily list of crucial tasks.

• Concentrate on activities that yield the most results. "One-fifth of your work yields four fifths of the dividend," Baxter said. "That's why it's so essential to direct your time to priorities."

• Know your work habits. Do the most important jobs when you are at your best.

• Examine your response to priority tasks. If you habitually put off certain chores, analyze why — and what you can do to make priority work less routine.

• Avoid being a perfectionist. Perfectionism can be procrastination in noble disguise.

• Don't put "riders" on goals. To promise to redo your resume after you buy a new typewriter is just avoiding the job.

• Set deadlines. Impose your own deadlines before a project is due to be completed, and set minideadlines along the way.

• Don't let paperwork steal time from important jobs. Stephanie Winston, an expert at organizing, said each time a piece of paper hits your desk, deal with it in one of four ways — throw it away, refer it to someone else, act on it, or file it.

• Use in-between time to chisel away at priority tasks. Draft a letter in the 10 minutes between appointments or catch up on reading while traveling to and from work or on a business trip.

• Be friendly, but don't act as the office social director. If you must organize an office party, do the chores during lunch or after work.

• Find a job you enjoy. It will keep you motivated and once you are thoroughly involved, you almost automatically choose the right tasks to do first.

With proper care, fine crystal lasts for generations

Associated Press

To insure that fine crystal lasts several generations, it is important to take care of it. Thierry Mantoux, export director of Cristalleries de Saint Louis, the oldest manufacturer of crystal in continental Europe, gives these tips for caring for crystal in the latest issue of Better Homes and Gardens Decorating magazine.

• Avoid any severe temperature changes. Extreme heat or cold can make crystal crack or explode. Never fill a vase that has been sitting in the sun. Before adding ice to ice buckets and champagne coolers, fill them first with cold water to acclimate the crystal. For crystal candlesticks, don't let the candle burn closer than an inch from the top of the stick — the heat can make the crystal burst.

• Hand wash crystal stemware. This is especially important for uncut or gold-trimmed crystal. Heavier cut and more substantial crystal may be put in the dishwasher, but use only the top section and make certain that none of the glasses touch each other.

• Never immerse solid pieces of artware in water. The varying thicknesses in crystal artware heat up and cool at different rates, so immersing a piece in water may make it crack. Instead, add a few capfuls of ammonia or vinegar to water. Then wipe the piece with a cloth dampened in the solution.

Moisture left in a decanter or a vase can cause mold or bacterial growth. To absorb all water, insert a rolled paper towel into the vessel, and leave it for an hour.

Delicate antique linens require care in using, storing

Associated Press

In the Victorian age, keeping household linens white and spotless was a task that required knowing a number of homemade recipes for removing stains, washing with hard water, and adding starch.

Fortunately, care of antique textiles is much easier today, according to Country Home magazine. Although the ideal care formula may differ from case to case, here are some basic pointers to follow:

Almost all antique linens need some type of cleaning before they're used, stored, or displayed. Dirt speeds up deterioration and encourages damage from bacteria, mildew, mold and insects. Even textiles that look spotless should be cleaned to remove damaging acids and airborne pollutants that you can't see.

Most cotton or linen textiles that are in good condition can be washed with water. Generally, it's best to use distilled water because it's free of salts and iron impurities. Water temperature also is important because textiles absorb more as the water temperature increases. To reduce the risk of fibers breaking from overabsorption, use cold or warm water rather than hot.

If the piece is colored, test it for colorfastness. Place a drop or two of distilled water on a small, inconspicuous spot. Wait until it soaks in, then blot with a thick white towel. If the color runs, you'll need to dryclean the piece or display or store it as is.

White or colorfast linens from the 1930s or later can usually be machine washed. Allow the tub to fill with water first, then add the detergent. To remove light stains, add a small amount of nonchlorine bleach. Mix the solution well before putting in the textiles.

More delicate pieces should be hand washed. Use an enamel, glass or stainless steel container. Again, make your solution of water and detergent before adding the textile. Do not scrub or agitate the piece. Instead, gently stir the water above the textile. Rinse well with distilled or softened water, then blot with clean towels.

Linens that are in good enough condition to use can be ironed with care. Use a clean, well padded board and a clean press cloth. First dampen the pieces, then wrap them in a towel and set the bundle in a covered container. Allow the bundle to sit for a few hours until the moisture spreads throughout before ironing.

Store linens and other fine textiles in an acid-free environment. Wood, cardboard and paper produce acids that are harmful to textiles. To make wooden drawers and closets safe, coat the inside wooden areas with polyurethane varnish to act as an acid barrier.

Downward pressure on oil prices could intensify

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

A continuing glut of crude oil worldwide is likely to intensify downward pressures on oil prices, according to a major new study of the crude oil market.

The study, World Oil Trend: A Statistical Profile, prepared by Arthur Andersen & Co, a worldwide accounting firm, and Cambridge Energy Research Associates was released Thursday at Andersen's sixth annual Oil and Gas Symposium. It reports that downward pressure on oil prices could intensify within the next two months, despite a firming of spot prices.

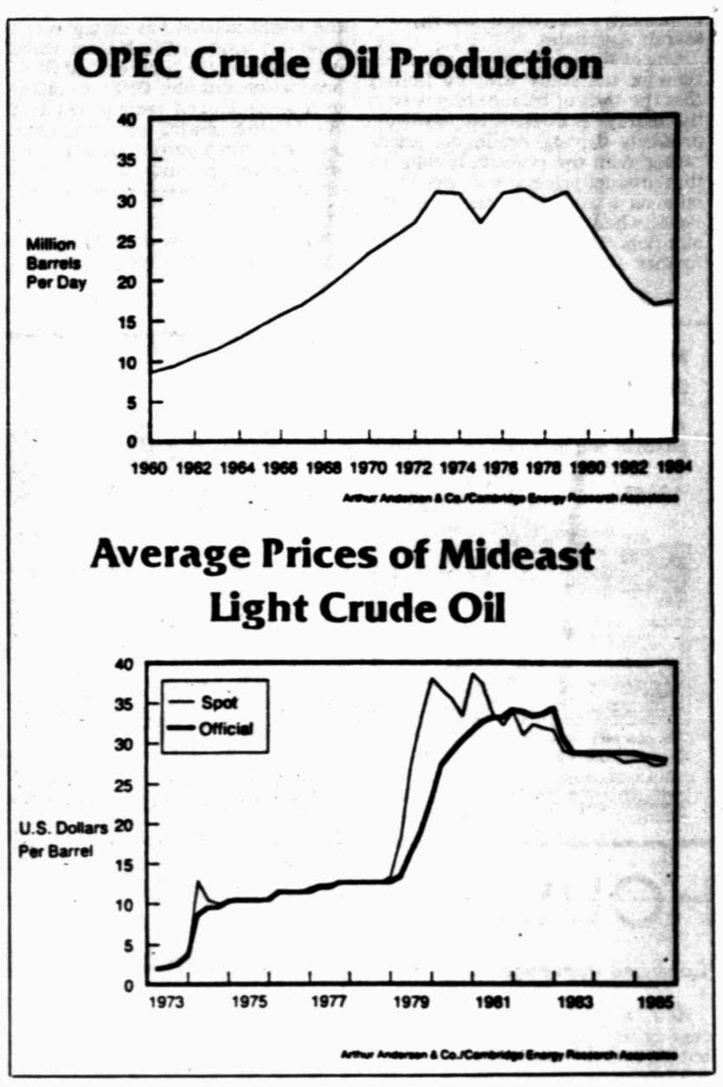

Said Richard Anderson, Director Oil and Gas Industry Services, Arthur Andersen & Co.: "This underlying price weakness will be sharply felt by the oil exporting countries and may lead to further struggles over market share among all oil producers — OPEC and non-OPEC alike."

The report states that the surplus in the world market has been created by a decline in consumption and the growth of non-OPEC production. It revealed that industrial world demand had dropped 17 percent between 1979 and 1984, even though the relatively mature markets of the industrial nations still dominate oil consumption.

At the same time non-OPEC production increased 7.5 million barrels per day between 1974-1984, as a halt was put on what seemed to be an inevitable increase of crude oil production in 1979. That year total and free-world production peaked at 62.7 mbd and 48.7 mbd respectively. By 1984, however world production had declined to 54.1 mbd and free-world production to 39.5 mbd. At the same time, however, production from communists nations rose almost continuously from 1972-1984, peaking at 14.6 mbd in 1984.

Also identified as a problem in the world oil market is a surplus refining capacity of 18-19 mbd, as a result of a 17 mbd or 27 percent increase in capacity from 1973-1981. Since 1981 the refining industry has been in retreat, but it is still 10 mbd higher than it was in 1973.

Please see PRESSURE, Page 2G

OPEC crude oil production (top) climbed steadily throughout the sixties and early seventies, peaking in 1973 and remaining on a plateau for almost 10 years, except for one dip in 1976. The offical price (bottom) tracked spot market prices from 1973 to 1979, when they began to fall under spot prices. By 1982 offical prices and OPEC were led by spot prices, accounting for current market demand prices and increasing downward pressure on oil prices.

Midland housing becoming more affordable

By MELLA McEWEN
Business Oil Writer

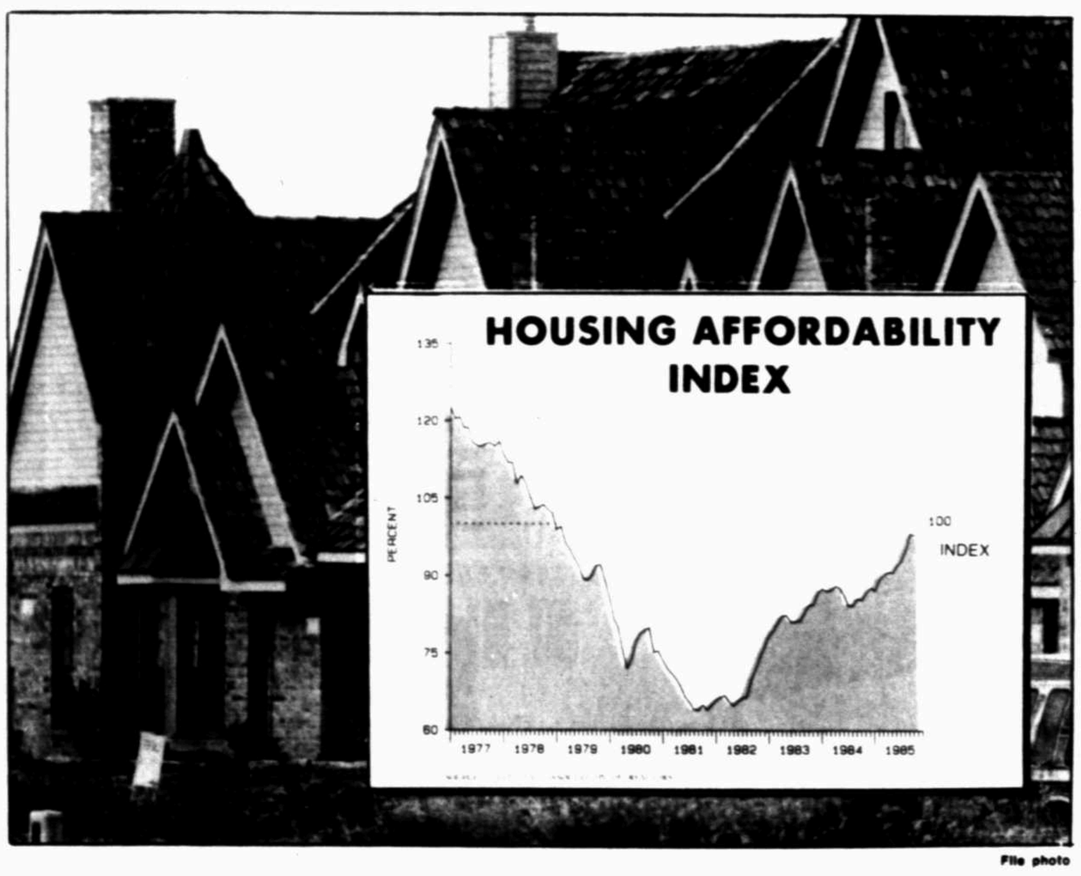

Housing in Midland and nationwide is becoming more affordable, according to a recent survey.

The National Association of Realtors' Housing Affordability Index continued to hover around the 100 mark in October for the third consecutive month. And although the index fell .5 percent, from 98.3 percent in September to 97.8 percent in October, Midland realtor Joan Noel said it is still a good time to buy a home.

"We have a good inventory, interest rates are low, about 11 percent, and money is available," said Noel, president of the Midland Board of Realtors. She said that homes in Midland have been selling for about $87,500, a little higher than the national average of $75,600. She pointed out that house hunters still have a number of choices, although the inventory is being absorbed.

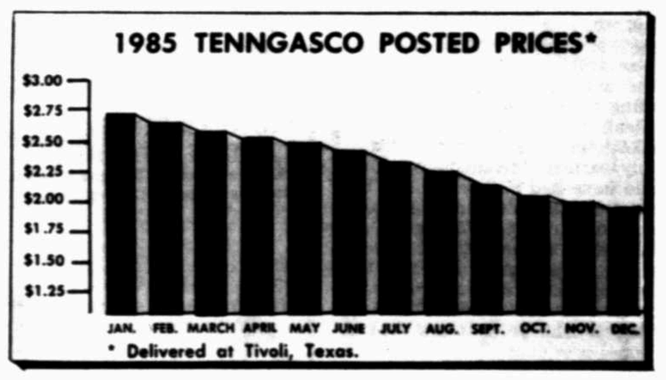

"We're still experiencing a normal growth rate. I think it's about three percent, which is better than average for a city."

Natural gas price falls below $2 per million BTU

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Following a year of price declines for natural gas, Tenngasco Exchange Corp.'s posted spot market price for natural gas has fallen below $2 per million BTU.

The December posted price was $1.87 per million BTU at its Tivoli, Texas delivery point as opposed to $2.03 per million BTU at its Vinton, La. location. These posting locations are used as geographic reference points for determining comparable prices at other locations, because seven other pipelines have access at each location.

While natural gas prices have declined consistently, David A. Harpole, spokesman for Tenngasco Exchange Corp., said he could not postulate a continuation of the price decline curve.

"We look at the market daily and post a price for a 30 day period. For December, the price is $1.87, and we will post a new price at the end of the month," he said.

Caution: Bachelorhood may cause strangeness

As I passed through this Thanksgiving season, I was thankful for many things. But one of the things I was most thankful for is that I'm not a bachelor anymore.

I was almost 30 when I married the first time, and 40 the second time. Before and in between there were long bouts of bachelorhood, which I remember as the most boring, unfulfilling and strangest times of my life.

I don't know what it is — perhaps it's the lack of female influence — but bachelors, at least the ones I knew, including myself, seem to tend to be strange creatures. Perhaps it's because they spend so much time thinking about women and chasing women that they have little time left for dwelling on the routinely, civil things of life.

Thanks to my wife and Furr's I now eat normally. But, once that was not the case. In younger days, immediately after college, I had two equally poor roommates, Larry and Tommy, and our eating habits were strange to say the least.

Tommy, a blonde, blue-eyed ladies man, subsisted on a diet of peanut butter and strawberry jam — three meals a day, seven days a week. He ate it not on sandwiches but by great, gobbing spoonfuls and he was so messy about it we had to put newspapers on the carpet around him. Once we even had to hose him down in the back yard.

LARRY WAS a five-foot-five basketball player, (Now a college basketball coach in California.) and would eat anything as long as it was out of a can. Not only did he eat out of cans he cooked in cans — soup, beans, stew. Anything he could punch a hole in the top of and heat on the stove was his usual evening fare, and since he was short and kept bumping his head on open cabinet doors, all his "cooking" was done in an old army helmet. By design, the only dish he ever washed was his single spoon.

Personally, I preferred steak and mayonnaise sandwiches — made with pancakes. I would cook-up 20 or 30 pancakes once a week and eat them with everything.

Sometimes, however, I would borrow a lesson from Larry and take my noonday meal on the run and from a can. My schedule of graduate classes and work was so hectic that to get a hot lunch, I would often take a clothes hanger and wire a can of beanie weiners to the manifold of the car under the hood. By the time I arrived at Los Angeles China Town, where I parked it would be hot. I thought it an ingenious and original idea until I learned years later from Ford Chapman that he once did the same thing to get a hot meal when he was working 18 hours a day and chasing three cable tool rigs around the Delaware Basin.

AT ANY RATE I would then grab the hot can with a glove, rush to catch the bus to L.A. Civic Center, and eat it on the bus. Picture a 25 year old man holding a can of beanie-weenies with a glove and eating them on the bus — with pancakes. Even in L.A. I managed some stares.

Even more bizarre, picture three men in jockey shorts sitting on the couch, eyes glued to the TV, a short one with an army helmet is eating beans out of a can, a tall blonde is consuming gobs of peanut butter with a table spoon and the more normal one is eating steak and pancakes. We always ate in our underwear, because we didn't want to drop food on ourselves and soil our clothes.

Next to washing dishes bachelors hate washing clothes most. When Kris Kristofferson sings about: "Sunday morning comin' down...and getting up to put on my cleanest dirty shirt," I can identify with that. No bachelor wants to spend evening washing clothes, when he could be out chasing women, so when I washed clothes I did it in one washer — towels, jeans, shirts, shorts. As a result I sometimes wound up with blue shorts and dingy shirts. I never did find a way to explain the blue underwear, but I finally found a solution for the dingy shirts. I merely started calling them off-white. Everyone I would meet, I would ask: "Do you think this tie goes with my off-white shirt." Off-white is okay, dingy is not.

AS FOR JOCKEY shorts, I think I had close to 600 pair when I finally married. That's because when I looked in the drawer in the morning and didn't have a clean pair I would go out and buy a package on the way to work. On at least two occasions I put on my underwear while driving down the Pasadena freeway. How? You have to know how to steer with your chin. I wouldn't have thought of going to work without underwear. That would have been weird!

Many lessons were learned in those bachelor years, but the lesson learned best was: Man was not made to live without woman. To do so would make for a very strange world.

PRESSURE

The report also unveils a pattern of oil prices, different from that normally perceived. Putting oil prices into constant dollars it shows the composite real price (corrected for inflation) doubled in 1973-1974 and again in 1978-1981, but fell by 38 percent from 1981 through mid-1985, putting the real price of imported oil in mid-1985 only 7 percent higher than it had been in 1979.

"The balance of power in the oil market has shifted back from sellers to buyers," stated Dr. Daniel Yegin, President, Cambridge Energy Research Associates.

One of the most interesting revelations of the study was the finding that the shift of balance of power in the market is a result of petroleum products driving crude oil prices, rather than the reverse. It suggests that product prices could once again take on a role reminiscent of the 1960s, when they determined crude oil prices. The report said the shift is further evidenced by OPEC oil production dropping back to the levels of the 1960s, and OPEC oil income falling to mid-1970s level.

Other trends revealed in the report, which have prompted swift and drastic revisions of marketing strategies are as follows:

■ Security of demand has replaced security of supply as the fundamental concern in the market.

■ Companies which have sought to focus their investment on upstream activities are now backing off this emphasis.

■ Major oil company position in the world market has changed considerably since 1970. Majors which once owned over 75 percent of OPEC production, but now OPEC countries own 90 percent of their production. Worldwide, major oil companies own less than 5 percent of total free-world reserves, and their refining capacity is 40 percent less overall than in 1973.

The report notes that the net income for the majors peaked in 1980. An earlier peak had come in 1974, after the first oil shock, followed by a one-year decline. After the second oil shock income declined for two consecutive years, reflecting declining oil use. However, income recovered in 1983 and was stabilized in 1984.

Mergers may continue to play a role among majors as reserves in the ground sometimes prove more valuable to the buyer than the seller, because of a technological edge in recovery and because loan collageral values can be obtained with purchased reserves that are not available through exploration.

In the area of exploration the report finds a continuing decline in finding costs per barrel both domestically and worldwide. It was determined that domestic finding costs dropped 18 percent in 1984, while worldwide finding costs were down 8 percent. This follows dramatic declines of 29 percent and 32 percent, respectively in 1983, returning finding costs to pre-1980 levels.

The 84-page report which aims to identify and clarify basic trends, while pinpointing structural changes in the organization and operation of the industry, predicts that dollar devaluation will continue to aggravate OPEC difficulties. Said Yergin: "Until the middle of 1985, the strong dollar somewhat cushioned OPEC from lower dollar oil prices, but as the dollar depreciates in an environment of weak oil prices, OPEC faces the additional burdern of trying to avert losses of real purchasing power.

How to order

Copies of the study, World Oil Trends: A Statistical Profile, may be obtained for $50, or $25 each for orders of 50 or more from Arthur Anderson & Co.; 711 Louisiana, Suite 1300; Houston, Texas 77002 or by calling (713) 237-2323.

TENNGASCO

Harpole said that natural gas price declines in December and November were the result of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission's Order 436 which required pipeline companies to choose to become marketers or transporters of natural gas.

"The price is Tivoli is 14 cents under the November prices as a direct result of that order," said Harpole. "Prior to the order, large volumes from Texas served the East and West Coast spot markets under FERC-authorized transportation agreements, but Order 436 terminated many of those agreements effective November 1. Now, it is harder to move gas, creating a surplus."

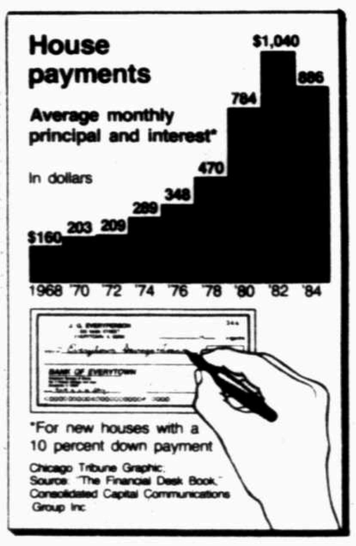

He said the termination of the coal strike in Britain also had an effect on the market this year.

"Fuel oil produced here for shipment overseas was dumped on this market when the coal strike ended," he said.

He said intense competition had also played a role in declining prices. "People have become very creative in selling natural gas," he added.

Harpole said Tenngaso Corp. began its special gas marketing programs in late 1983 and differed from the Natural Gas Clearing House, a natural gas broker, in that the firm took title to the gas and sold it.

The firm posts prices on the 25th of each month and writes contracts for a 30-day period, to provide a responsive price that is equitable to both producer and end user, according to Harpole.

HOUSING

Home in Midland may cost 8.6 percent more than the national average, but the city's median annual income is 9.2 percent above the national average. According to Steve Hardin, director of economic development for the Midland Chamber of Commerce, the median income for Midland is $30,100, while the average household earns $36,394.

His figures come from Sales and Marketing Management Magazine's 1984 issue, which ranked Midland second in the state in median income, and 18th in the nation, Hardin said. The magazine also ranked Midland first in the state and eighth in the nation in average household income, while the city's per capita income was ranked first in the state and seventh in the U.S.

The national median income, according to the National Association of Realtors' affordability index, is $27,689. According to the index, a family earning the median income would have had 97.8 percent of the income needed to qualify for an existing home costing $75,600.

According to the national association, the major factor lowering the index number was a rise in mortgage rates from 11.2 percent in September to 11.3 percent in October. National president Clark E. Wallace noted that the index closely follows the rise and fall of mortgage rates.

The affordability index hit an all-time high of 153.1 percent in February 1972 when mortgage rates were 7.5 percent. It fell to a record low of 63.9 percent in September 1981 when mortgage rates were close to 17 percent.

Wallace attributed improvements in the index to lower interest rates, continued improvement in family income and modest increases in home prices. The association noted that, based on lending standards set by the Federal National Mortgage Association, the qualifying income for a typical resale home in October was $28,306. FNMA lenders require that a borrower's principal and interest payments consume no more than 25-28 percent of yearly gross income.

Preliminary figures released in the Housing Affordability Index show that for October, the average monthly principal and interest payment of $590 comprised 25.6 percent of the median family income, down from a high of 36.3 percent in 1983. In 1978, the average mortgage rate was 9.58 percent, with a monthly payment of $330, 22.4 percent of the median family income.

For October, the typical family would have fallen $50 a month short of the income needed to qualify for a loan covering 80 percent of the purchase price of the typical home sold last month.

Cancer drug thrusts drug company into limelight

By Laurie Itow
Hearst News Service

Encouraging test results for the anti-cancer drug interleukin-2 have thrust Cetus Corp. into the national limelight, giving the company recognition that some stock analysts say is long overdue.

As a result, stock prices for the Emeryville, Calif. based company have almost doubled in the last month, said analyst James McClamant, editor of the Medical Technology Stock Letter in San Francisco. The stock moved up another $2.75 Thursday to $28.50 a share in over-the-counter trading.

"It was a tremendous day," said Cetus treasurer R. Jefferson Works. The stock hit a high of $33.37 a share in the first 45 minutes of morning trading, Works said.

The latest attention-getter was a report in the New England Journal of Medicine Thursday that cited improvements among 11 of 25 patients treated with interleukin-2, which Cetus and other firms produce.

To securities analyst Scott King at Montgomery Securities in San Francisco, the news was "tantalizing results."

The reports of the drug's success drew television crews and reporters to Cetus headquarters Thursday where company executives and scientists became corporate celebrities, said Cetus spokeswoman Katharine Russell.

"This is the first real recognition," said Cetus President Robert Fildes. "I don't think people have recognized Cetus' strength and capabilities."

But he warned, "These are initial results. We still have a long way to go to find the best way to use this drug. The company has worked very hard to develop a number of products. Interleukin-2 is just one of five programs that we think will revolutionize the way cancer patients are treated."

Cetus sold its first stock to the public in March 1981 at $23 a share, when investor hopes were high for biotechnology. The following year, the stock tumbled to $7.87, in part because investors grew impatient with the lengthy research needed to develop products, analysts said.

"The expectations initially were very high," Fildes said. "It took a while for people to realize that the time to develop a product in our industry is very different than the electronics industry. There are no overnight successes. Even though a product may have been proven scientifically, there may be a three- to four-year process to get FDA approval. It's a long-term investment."

This year, before the publicity in the last month, Cetus stock was trading between $9 and $14, Works said.

In the New England Journal of Medicine report, 11 patients with spreading cancers, from melanoma to colon tumors, showed at least temporary improvement with tumors shrinking by half or more.

The publicity not only buoyed Cetus' stock price but "raised the whole awareness of biotechnology stocks," analyst King said.

Thomas Mysievicz, editor of Bioengineering News in San Francisco, said his newsletter's index of 19 biotechnology stocks has risen by about 40 points since Jan. 3. The index, established at 100 in April 1981, closed Thursday at 112.5.

For instance, the stock of Seattle-based Immunex Corp., another maker of interleukin-2, jumped $2.37 to $15.12 Thursday.

"There are at least a dozen competitors making interleukin-2," Mysievicz said.

Cetus and the others probably will develop versions of the drug to eliminate side effects such as nausea, water retention and fever. Cetus hopes interleukin-2 will be available by 1988, after more tests and government approval.

"But Cetus has a lot of other important, promising products as well," Mysievicz said.

Cetus reported a profit of $1.2 million for the year ended June 30 on revenue of $57.3 million, primarily from research contracts and interest income.

Hearst Feature Service

File photo

Analysts expect bargains and profits to do modest this Christmas as consumer buying power remains strained. Items such as computers still remain in demand, but consumers are shopping to find the most for their money.

Christmas cheer for shoppers and retailers may be a bit subdued this year. Although shoppers will continue to find many markdowns, and retailers will likely record fair to good sales increases, bargains will be fewer and profits somewhat modest, industry officials and observers say.

"It doesn't suggest that this year there won't be a Christmas," says Stephen Roach, senior economist with Morgan, Stanley & Co. Inc. in New York. "But the glow of holiday buying may be somewhat more muted or dim than is normally the case."

Sales are likely to suffer from already strained consumer buying power. Consumers have gone on a spending binge this year that has pushed their debt burden to a record high. But retailers have taken pains this year to avoid overstocking inventory as they did last year, when a glut of merchandise led to a price-cutting panic. And they already have planned most of this year's markdowns in ways they say won't take as big a bite out of their profits.

At the same time, retailers say they realize they cannot abruptly switch gears on shoppers, who are now accustomed to widespread pre-Christmas price cutting. The trend has been growing so much in recent years that shoppers have apparently been holding back until they notice markdowns setting in. So this year, retailers planned more of their markdowns in ways less likely to hurt their bottom lines.

One way to maintain the appearance of substantial markdowns has been to stock up on merchandise at reduced prices over the course of the year. The goods can then be put on sale at Christmas without cutting deeply in the stores' profits. Another way has been to tag some goods at inflated prices before the Christmas season. The prices can be cut later without hurting stores' margins.

"A lot of the promotions they ran in 1984 were phony," says Fred Wintzer Jr., an analyst with Alex Brown Partners in Baltimore. "This year, I think they've done the same."

"It wouldn't surprise me that that was going on, but I don't know of any specific examples," said Susan Duchak, a spokeswoman for Chicago-based Sears, Roebuck & Co., the world's largest retailer.

"There will be sales," says Monroe Greenstein, a securities analyst with Bear, Stearns & Co. in New York, "but they won't be as great as a year ago. It will be a satisfactory sales season, but not a great one."

Economic factors can't help but put a drag on consumer spending this Christmas. Some 335,000 manufacturing jobs have been lost in the first nine months of the year alone. Moreover, the rate of growth in consumer spending during the first nine months has been three times as fast as the rate of income growth. Consumers' debt burden has exploded and now stands at 19.2 percent of disposable income, an all-time high.

At the same time, personal savings are near rock bottom. They hit an all-time low of 1.8 percent of after-tax income in September. Last month, the figure was still a less-than-stellar 2.9 percent.

"We've got too much spending and not enough savings," Roach said, "and that's going to make it hard to sustain the consumer buying binge of the first nine months of this year."

Still, some experts disagree.

Stanley Iverson, a retail industry analyst with Chicago-based Duff & Phelps Inc., says he's not concerned about the levels of installment debt. The holiday gift-giving spirit will overcome economic reality in many peoples' minds, he says.

"I don't think most people equate car payments that come due in January and February with the sentimental Christmas season," he says.

Newspaper executives could try leveraged buy-out

LOS ANGELES (AP) — At least four senior executives of the Los Angeles Daily News are trying to buy the newspaper through a leveraged buy-out, the newspaper reported today.

The group brings to six the number of potential bidders for the newspaper, which must be sold by the Chicago-based Tribune Co. so it can proceed with its $510 million purchase of television station KTLA in Los Angeles.

Daily News Editor Timothy M. Kelly; Thomas E. Griffiths, vice president and marketing and public relations director; Gerald W. Rusca, management information systems director; and Eugene Moni Jr., production director, traveled to Chicago to discuss a deal with Tribune Co. officials.

Several newspaper executives have said a decision on a buyer for the Daily News is expected at a Tribune Co. Board of Directors meeting scheduled Monday.

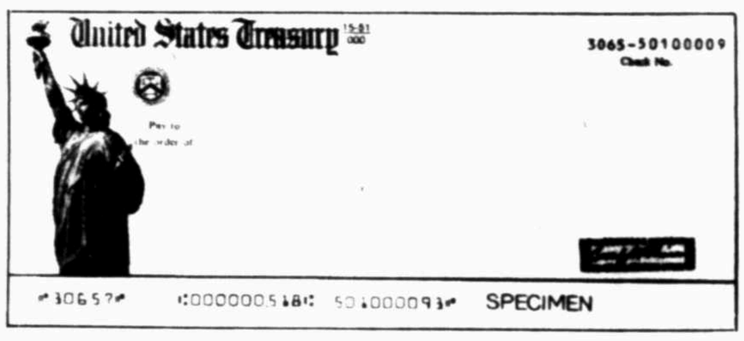

In a leveraged buy-out, a company is acquired largely with borrowed funds that are repaid either from the target company's operating revenue or from the sale of some of its assets. Media analysts have estimated the newspaper could sell for up to $125 million.

Uncle Sam replaces green checks

Uncle Sam has decided that 40 years of service is enough for the old U.S. government check. A new multicolored paper check has replaced the old green punched-card check that has been a familiar part of American society for four years.

The change to paper checks resulted when the U.S. Department of the Treasury's Financial Management Service, the government's financial manager, began to examine alternatives to the punched-card check system in the late 1970s.

W.E. Douglas, financial management service commissioner, said the paper check is also more difficult to alter or counterfeit.

OILFIELD SALES

By RAYMOND BASS

Goals are one of the necessary prerequisites for success in oilfield sales. For without goals, we have nothing to work toward and have no target marked in the distance at which we are aiming. Goals enable us to establish certain objectives and tasks that must be accomplished in order for the goal to be reached.

In football, for instance, we always know how far we have to go to cross the goal line. Thus, we are always aware of how far we must progress in order to score.

Goals, as they are related to sales, should also be easily measured. And in order to measure or progress toward a quarterly or annual goal, they must be specific and concrete so they are easily measured.

That is why the football field is marked off each five yards, with one yard intervals indicated at various places on the field. This enables any team to know exactly where they are in relation to the goal line and it is easily measured by everyone involved.

If a goal is too vague and general in nature, it will provide little direction. The goal needs to be qualified, when possible, with numbers, percentages, sales territory, specific accounts or certain accounts.

A goal is the ultimate aim or purpose toward which we are working. They will determine what we will achieve and are essential to our motivation. Although they can be short term or long term, a goal is such that it is not easily attained in a short period of time, such as an afternoon or several days.

The objectives are the stepping stones necessary to reach the goal. They are the means by which we check our progress, and when reached collectively, result in the attainment of the goal.

Objectives are like rungs on a ladder. In order to get to the top, we simply have to take one logical and sequential step after the other. Objectives should have priorities and be organized in a logical sequence. That way, you can start at the beginning and know what each step is well in advance.

A college graduating class was surveyed and it was found that 87 percent of the graduates had no specific goals, while 10 percent had goals in their minds, and only 3 percent had specific written goals. Twenty years later, at a class reunion, the 3 percent who had put their goals in writing out-performed the other 97 percent combined. The message here is that unless a goal and its objective are written, it is nothing more than a daydream. If it is important to do, it is important enough to write down.

When setting sales-related goals, it is important that they come from within. The more a sales manager can involve the salesman in the goal-setting process, the harder that salesman will work to accomplish them. If not involved in this process, we may work toward a goal because others want us to, but our motivation will be much higher if the desire to accomplish comes from inside us. Because the more we personally want something to happen, the greater our committment.

In addition, the goals and objectives need to be realistic. Fantasies or good intentions simply won't suffice. If our goal is to increase sales of centralizers, scratchers, and other casing accessories by 50 percent within one quarter, this may be difficult, if not impossible. Goals should be set at a level which we are able to accomplish with an ordinary amount of hard work.

Goals also need to have time schedules. Assigning a completion date makes us manage our time well and forces us to make each day count. If there were no time limits in a football game, there is no telling who the winner would be. However, in athlietics, there is a prescribed time in which all goals must be accomplished. Setting dates for each goal and the various objectives also helps us to measure our progress toward their attainment.

It is important that we remember to visualize ourselves having attained the goal toward which we are working. We need to put that mental picture on the video tape of our mind just as if it had already been accomplsihed. One of the best times to do this is just before you go to sleep at night. The subconscious is always working on our behalf, so imaginging ourselves having accomplished the goal will enable our subsconscious to make us be goal-oriented. Remember, what the mind can conceive and believe, it can achieve. But first of all, we have to plant that picture of achievemnet in our head.

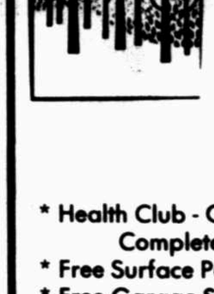

Certainly, goals need to be flexible, especially in this industry where we may have to re-examine our priorities based on what happens in the Persian Gulf or as the price of a barrel of oil changes. We should review the progress toward our goal on a regular basis and make any necessary changes. We can set lots of goals, and steps we should take to reach these goals; however, until we begin to put our plan in action, we will not succeed. Regardless of our experience or other concerns, the important thing is to get out and begin implementing your plan.

The trend in the oilpatch today is for service and supply companies to have annual goals. These goals may relate to a specific account, a geographical area, a product and for individual salesmen.

The purchase price, payable in cash, was not disclosed. The sale of the San Diego business is conditioned upon receipt of necessary approvals by state and federal agencies and upon the merger of CI with the Pacific Telesis Group (PacTel).

New York Times News Service

CHICAGO — Several times a day, Earle Moloney's staff removes all the wiring and plush upholstery from a top-of-the-line Cadillac Fleetwood Brougham or Lincoln Town Car, cuts the steel frame in half with a huge hacksaw and then welds on some longer body parts.

Operating out of a former Bally pinball machine factory here and two other plants, Moloney is one of the nation's foremost car surgeons. And that makes his 16-year-old Moloney Manufacturing Co. a leader in a growing business — the stretching of $25,000 luxury sedans into $60,000 limousines, complete with glass partitions separating passengers and driver and the latest in electronic gadgets and other creature comforts.

With Detroit no longer making its own oversized cars, the limousine market largely belongs to Moloney and three dozen other customizers around the country — and the market is booming.

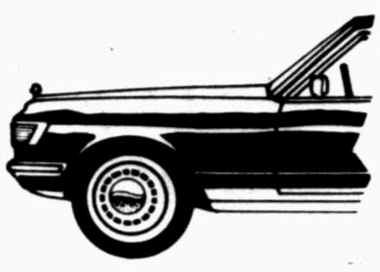

About 6,500 stretch limos were sold in the model year that just ended, up from 2,000 in 1980, according to Ty Bobit, editor and publisher of the California-based Limousine & Chauffeur magazine. While individuals and corporations are still buying the cars, which have been extended 34 to 60 inches, most are now sold to a burgeoning number of livery companies in cities like New York, Chicago and Los Angeles.

The chief reasons cited for the livery surge are the growing price competitiveness of limousines compared with taxis, say to and from airports, and the severe crackdown in some states on drunken driving, which has prompted many to leave the driving to someone else.

"Two young couples can chip in 75 bucks apiece and they have a driver at their beck and call for the evening," James Centner, Moloney's president, said.

Then there is the endless parade of celebrities climbing in and out of limousines, piquing the public's interest.

"Once we got past the Jimmy Carter era, there has been a new willingness to show wealth," said Danny Aldridge, marketing vice president for

Indeed, said Paul Feroldi, director of planning for Dav-El Livery Inc., which operates more than 100 limousines in the New York area, the cars come equipped with color televisions, video cassette recorders and cellular phones, in addition to the traditional extra, a well-stocked bar. "I can't think of anything else we need to accommodate a client except maybe a hot tub," he said.

The demand is such that Cadillac has contracted with an outside company, the Hess & Eisenhardt Manufacturing Co. of Cincinnati, to stretch about 1,000 of its new downsized, front-wheel-drive Fleetwood and Sedan De Ville models a year, adding 24 inches to turn them into what the industry considers a minilimo.

But it has not decided to reverse its 1983 decision to stop building a production-line limousine. Indeed, all of the major car companies, including foreign makers, have dropped limousines from their assembly lines because of the inefficiencies of making such a limited number of units. That has left the field to the customizers.

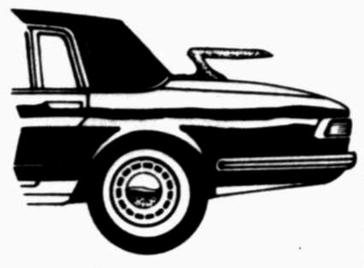

Most of the stretching is done by a handful of companies. Besides Moloney and Armbruster, these include O'Gara Coachworks of Simi Valley, Calif., Dillinger-Gaines Coachbuilders of Brooklyn, N.Y. and Executive Coach Builders of Springfield, Mo. These operations turn out from 40 to 100 stretch limos each a month.

Some of the smaller customizers, who produce as few as two cars a month, may be squeezed by the increasing cost of product liability insurance, industry experts say. The insurance is essential to cover the risks that come from welding heavy cars back together again.

Armbruster-Stageway began in 1887 as a builder of stagecoaches with vaults hidden in the floor to deter highway robbers. The company says it made the first stretch limousine, in 1922, and it expects to turn out about 1,000 limousines this year.

In an intensely entrepreneurial business, Armbruster, Moloney and O'Gara all claim to be the leading producer of limousines. "In this business, figures are routinely stretched too," said Bobit, whose magazine played host this week to 1,300 limou-

Some of the major stretching companies have special areas of expertise. O'Gara, for instance, offers a "security package" for those concerned about terrorist attacks. For about $13,000 extra, a limousine or luxury sedan will come equipped with "anti-penetration glass" and other protective features.

But Earle Moloney has perhaps the most ambitious expansion plans, gambling $5 million in tooling costs

Changes may be coming for municipal bonds

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Momentous changes are afoot in the municipal bond market. Investors are faced with proposed revisions to federal tax laws that would remove the tax-exempt status of many bonds issued after the end of the year, while local governments face stricter limits on the amount and kind of bonds they may sell.

The possibility of a federal tax on bonds of local governments has been a nightmare of the municipal bond market for many years. Now, the proposed 25 percent alternative minimum income tax is widely seen as the federal government's most overt challenge to the ability of local governments to sell tax-exempt bonds.

Under the minumum tax proposal, interest paid on certain kinds of local government bonds — including those for housing, hospitals, mass commuting facilities, industrial development, solid waste facilities, and many water and sewer projects — would be included when calculating how much income was subject to the minumum tax.

Bonds issued for these purposes are a major part of the tax-exempt market, and taxing their interest payments would lead to major changes in the municipal market.

"The minumum tax will create a lot of confusion," said George Friedmander, vice president at Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co. "The same bond would be tax-exempt for one investor but not another, and investors might not know which category they are in from year to year until they do their taxes."

He estimated that the minimum tax might apply to a large portion of the wealthy individuals who are major buyers of tax-exempt bonds.

John Peterson, director of research at the Government Financial Officers Association, estimated that a two-tiered market of "pure" tax-exempt bonds and "impure" sometimes tax-exempt bonds might evolve, with impure bonds yielding a quarter of a percentage point more than other issues. Other analysts estimated that higher yields on "impure" bonds would help pull up rates for "pure" bonds as well.

"As a seller of municipal bonds, the minimum tax proposal is the most lethal element in the tax bill," said James Lebenthal, president of Lebenthal & Co. "It's a foot in the door and there will inevitably be attempts to extend federal taxes to other kinds of local government bonds."

Sponsors of mutual funds and unit investment trusts will also face the issue of how they can advertise "tax-exempt" investment products, when many potential buyers may be subject to the minimum tax. Guy Wickwire, vice president at the Fidelity Management and Research Co., a Boston-based concern that sponsors $7.7 billion of tax-exempt mutual funds, said that it was "wrestling with the problem" and was considering creation of one or more funds that would be purely tax-exempt for all shareholders.

Although none of the changes proposed by the House Ways and Means Committee have passed into law, many lawyers expect the proposed rules to become the battleground of a major legal and economic conflict between the federal and state governments. Besides their objections to federal limits on sales of new bond issues, officials representing local governments and securities firms said the proposal to tax interest on some bonds violated what bond lawyers call the "doctrine of reciprocal immunity" in which the federal government did not tax interest on local government bonds and local governments did not tax interest on Treasury bonds.

That reciprocal arrangement is not spelled out in the Constitution, but is based on the dual system of government and the 10th Amendment, which says that "the powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people."

To determine the two-digit code for any letter of a Ticker Symbol, remember: The first key to be depressed is always the one on which the letter appears. The second key is always a "1," "2" or "3" indicating that letter's position on its own key (first, second or third position). EXAMPLE: "IBM" = "43 22 61"; "BX" = "22 92." Remember to depress the star key (*) after entering each code.

Phone firms scramble for federal pact

Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The race for the federal government's $4.5 billion long-distance telephone service and equipment contract could make its winners — and may break the losers.

"Whoever wins will have a leg up in terms of financial viability or survivability," said Richard Wolf, executive vice president for LaBlanc Associates, a New Jersey information industry consulting firm. "The others will have one foot on a box and the other on a banana peel."

Bidding for a replacement for the present American Telephone & Telegraph Co. system to provide high-speed voice, data and video capabilities, will begin next spring, and a contract will be awarded in early 1987.

Analysts say large corporate users will also benefit from the design and sale of the government system. And, they say, the contract will mean business for everyone from long-distance companies to regional phone companies to network equipment manufacturers to small resellers of phone service.

And, for the first time, AT&T may not be the natural winner, they say. The long-distance giant has dominated government communications procurement, but the General Services Administration, which will make the award, is looking seriously at other companies.

The six companies the GSA finds "interesting" in terms of being potential prime contractors for the job are AT&T, MCI Communications Corp., Satellite Business Systems, GTE-Sprint, ITT Corp. and United Telecommunications Inc., said Ben Bennington, director of telecommunications services for the agency.

"It could be a major break in the dike of AT&T dominance in civilian and military contracts," said Jerome Lucas, president of TeleStrategies Inc., a Virginia consulting firm. "It would be a major blow to AT&T if they lost it."

Billion dollar poultry empire started with 'half load of hay and five cents'

By SCOTT CHARTON
Associated Press Writer

SPRINGDALE, Ark. (AP) — Don Tyson still likes to visit the Fayetteville pool hall where he hung around during the 1940s when he was a nutrition major at the University of Arkansas.

But now he has more money to spend. And he has a black Lincoln Continental to carry him back the 10 miles or so to his food company on a hill outside this town of 23,458 people.

Tyson worked hard over those four decades to build the family company, Tyson Foods Inc., into one of the nation's biggest poultry producers, with more than $1 billion in sales in its recently ended fiscal year.

The company, which went public in 1963, has come a long way since Tyson's father started out with "half a load of hay and five cents."

Its revenues have more than doubled over the past five years, with $250 million of that gain coming the fiscal year than ended Sept. 28. It had a profit of $34.8 million, up from $18.2 million a year earlier.

"Dad was a truck driver who got to hauling chickens," said Tyson, 55. "Then we got into processing, killing our own chickens rather than just growing them."

Don Tyson

NOW, WITH TWO in-house research and development operations and more than 16,000 employees, Tyson Foods offers a smorgasbord of poultry products that eclipses the old days of chicken as a Sunday dinner specialty.

"We're a high-tech chicken company," Tyson said, with computerized Mexican food plants that crank out soft flour tortillas with chicken-based fillings.

Those consumer-ready products are playing an increasingly large role for Tyson Foods. Industry analysts estimate the company gets 60 percent of its revenues from such products, compared with 38 percent five years ago.

But the company has resisted branching into other food lines.

"We're chicken folks. We are just nothing else. We don't shoot a shotgun at the consumer. We shoot a rifle and it's got chicken in it everytime we shoot," Tyson said.

"Today's family needs our type of fast-preparation products," he said. "We ride all the health trends. I see us as an industry passing beef in the next 10 years. I see the heavy fried chicken that was prevalent 30 years ago declining. I see more wok-frying, baking. Grease is just hard to digest."

ASKED WHY THE company has stayed in Springdale, Tyson said. "In 1930, this is as far as my dad could get. You've got to be someplace, so you might as well be someplace that's home."

Tyson started catching birds and driving trucks for his late father in 1944, he recalled as he walked through an elegant room decorated with snapshots and showcases. An enlarged black-and-white photograph of his father, John Tyson, dominates the doorway.

"He was out in front of a chicken house there," Tyson said of the picture. "He started with half a load of hay and five cents in 1930."

Tyson's tan uniform is identical to those worn by employees who amble through the offices. His shirt is emblazoned with the orange-and-yellow company logo and his first name in red script.

"If we had suits on, we might not go out in the chicken house or the feed mill or the processing plant. It's just the way we are, and it makes it easier to get up in the morning and not have to worry about what you're going to put on, what color tie you want," Tyson, a bearded, balding cannonball of a man said as he leaned deep into a thick yellow office couch.

HIS EGG-SHAPED suite inside the complex has a white domed roof, "just like the Oval Office." It was inspired by a visit to the genuine article with former President Jimmy Carter, whom Tyson supported in 1976 and 1980.

Carved eggs are worked into the wood trim circling his office ceiling. Two colorful paintings of fighting cocks by television actor Jack Lord of "Hawaii Five-0" fame were a gift from a friend.

Tyson beamed as he led visitors across a wide corridor to the company's board room. He says the enormous conference table is "just like the one in the Cabinet Room" of the White House.

Tyson loves politics but disclaims any desire to run for office.

"I've been a Democrat since I was in college. I feel if you're in business, you've got to get active in the system, cause the system's been good to all of us," he said. "Obviously, it's been good to Don Tyson."

110th bank to fail this year

HENNESSEY, Okla. (AP) — The Office of the Comptroller of the Currency declared Farmers and Merchants National Bank of Hennessey insolvent Thursday afternoon.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., named receiver, said it would pay off insured depositors.

John Vella, who handles bank failures for the FDIC, said his agency didn't have a chance to find a buyer for the bank, so the only option is an insured deposit payoff.

He said his agency would spend the weekend going over the bank's books to see how much each customer is owed. "This means customers should not be writing any checks, and the FDIC will make preparations to pay off depositors beginning Monday morning," Vella said.

The FDIC planned a townmeeting at 6 p.m. Saturday at the town's old auditorium to tell customers "exactly what has to be done for the payoff," Vella said.

Dale Underwood, an FDIC spokesman, said in a news release from Washington, D.C., that the bank had experienced a high degree of losses the past several years because of deterioration of the quality of its loan portfolio.

"The Farmers and Merchants National Bank of Hennessey was unable to remedy its problems and losses finally exhausted the bank's capital funds, resulting in the insolvency," Underwood said.

The FDIC said the bank had $26.5 million in 4,000 accounts. All but about $172,000 of the deposits in 20 accounts are within the federal insurance limit of $100,000 or otherwise secured, the FDIC estimated.

The owners of the uninsured deposits will share proportionately with the FDIC in proceeds from the liquidation of the bank's assets, the FDIC said.

The bank closing was the 13th in Oklahoma this year and the 110th nationwide. Kansas and Oklahoma lead the nation in the number of failures this year with 13 each, according to figures from the FDIC.

Consultant operates 'charm school' for difficult executives

By Rose Ragsdale
Hearst Special News and Feature Service

George, a hard-driving plant manager, brought a poor-performing corporation into the financial black, but his abrasive qualities resulted in the loss of several talented subordinates and forced a union election for the first time in the corporation's history.

After two meetings with his boss, a brief psychological assessment and about 10 hours of consultation, George learned to deal better with his co-workers. His tutor was Robert M. Bramson, a management consultant who specializes in helping difficult people – usually highly-placed executives like George – get their personality problems under control.

Now a division general manager, George boasts of his stint in "charm school" with Bramson and has referred two subordinates for similar consultation.

Bramson, 60, works with "people who have problems in the work place, and not people with psychological problems." He has written a book on his techniques, "Coping With Difficult People," and teaches seminars on the subject. He says companies most often hire him for high-level executives who are valuable to the organization.

"That kind of behavior in a high-level person really magnifies as it goes down the organizational chart," says Bramson.

High-powered executives are not the only people in the work place with personality problems, but not every company is willing to call in consultants. Thus, many people must figure out on their own how to work with difficult people. Whether the offender is an indecisive, vacillating boss, a do-nothing subordinate, a hostile co-worker or a know-it-all client, most work situations have at least one difficult person – someone everybody has trouble working with.

Bramson says that people generally haven't a clue how to cope with difficult individuals and get their jobs done. He says people waste their energy wishing the difficult behavior would go away, or they make a half-hearted attempt to cope with the person before giving up with a self-righteous shrug. But, he says, there are ways to cope with difficult behavior at every level of a business organization and even in social settings.

"Coping does not involve trying to change the person, because difficult behavior is very satisfying and hard to give up. Also, coping is not trying to get along with the difficult person, because you'll get eaten for breakfast."

Coping, he says, is dealing with people and getting results. Before trying to cope, however, one must determine whether the person fits into the difficult category. Bramson says answering these four questions can help:

- Has the person acted differently in three similar situations?
- Am I reacting out of proportion to the situation?
- Was there an incident that triggered the troublesome behavior?
- Will direct, open discussion relieve the situation?

A "yes" answer to any one of the questions suggests that you are not dealing with a truly difficult person.

People who exhibit difficult behavior without being truly difficult often are caught up in a "negative interaction spiral" of tit-for-tat exchange that gets progressively worse unless it is stopped, Bramson says. This requires a straightforward approach to clear the air.

"Sit down and allow the other person to dump everything on you instead of attacking back. Make the other person aware that you understand what you're being accused of without agreeing with him, and then state your real intentions," Bramson says.

But if you are indeed facing a truly difficult person, think twice. Instinctive reactions when coping with these personalities could be disastrous, Bramson says.

Bramson divides difficult behavior into seven categories: indecisives, hostile-aggressives, negativists, know-it-alls, complainers, unresponsives and overagreeables.

Two of these categories have subgroups. Know-it-alls can be separated into real and phony types. Hostile-aggressives come in three varieties – Sherman tanks, snipers and exploders.

Each requires a different coping strategy, and every strategy requires planning, he says.

Henry DeJong

Geologists plan Tuesday meeting

Henry DeJong will be the speaker at the luncheon meeting of the West Texas Geological Society on Tuesday, December 10, 1985. His talk is entitled "A Regional Appraisal of the Hydrocarbon Potential of the Trans-Pecos Texas: Methodology and Conclusions."

DeJong, who is a consultant specializing in basin evaluation, both foreign and domestic, graduated from Northwestern University in 1948. He has held positions with Sinclair Oil & Gas Co., Atlantic Richfield Co. and Diamond Shamrock Corp.

The meeting will begin at 11:30 am. at the Midland Center and the cost is $7.00. Reservations should be made by calling the Society at 683-1573.

Engineer group to hear Hickman

The Reservoir Study Group of the Permian Basin Section, Society of Petroleum Engineers, will hold a luncheon meeting on Thursday, December 12.

T. Scott Hickman of T. Scott Hickman and Associates will speak on "The Responsibilities of the Independent Reserve Evaluator."

The meeting, which will be held at the American Legion Hall located on Air Park Road west of Big Spring Street in Midland, will be catered beginning at 11:30 at a charge of $5.00 per plate.

AT&T expects to finish cable route in late December

SAN ANTONIO — Final construction on a fiber optic cable route through Midland is expected to be completed by late December, AT&T officials have announced.

Construction crews have been working on the project between Midland and Lamesa since June after AT&T reached an agreement with the Midland city government for use of right-of-way.

"What we actually have in Midland is a sideleg to AT&T's major transcontinental fiber optic route, which is under construction nationwide," explained Ed Smith, operations manager for AT&T in Midland.

"The transcontinental cable route originates in New York and will end in Los Angeles. Several Texas cities — Dallas, Sweetwater, Lamesa and El Paso — are important links in the transcontinental chain. The sideleg from Lamesa to Midland will insure that West Texas residents will have the highest quality telecommunications service and the newest technology once the route is operating."

Midland is the home for one of AT&T's No. 4 Electronic Switching Systems, making it an important center for AT&T's nationwide telecommunications network. The company is installing 12-fiber cable from Midland, hooking up with the 24-fiber transcontinental cable. Each fiber is capable of carrying 17,000 simultaneous 2-way voice conversations or wide-band digital connections.

"The cable itself is only about one inch in diameter, a far cry from some of the older telephone cable which often was the size of an adult arm," said Smith.

"The rapid development of fiber optic technology has greatly increased the industry's efficiency and has truly benefited the customer. Today, with fiber optic links, we are able to provide top-quality digital service to more people at a lesser cost as far as maintenance and installation are concerned."

According to Smith, the Midland sideleg should be operational on January 1, 1987, when AT&T's transcontinental route is expected to be ready for customer use.

Actor Michael Douglas is starring in two films which will soon be released: "Jewel of the Nile," a sequel to "Romancing the Stone," and "Chorus Line," a film adaptation of the Broadway musical.

Michael Douglas

By JANE ARDMORE
King Features Syndicate

Actor Michael Douglas has two major films to be released early this month with starring roles in both — Zach, the director/inquisitor of "Chorus Line," and Jack Colton, fearless adventurer in "Jewel of the Nile," sequel to the so-successful "Romancing the Stone."

And once again, as in "Romancing," he wears two hats, that of star and producer of a mammoth-budgeted film shot in a third world country, with thousands of extras and daily dilemmas involving language, governments, customs and protocol.

Well, it's all grist for the mill of Michael Douglas, who one on recent weekend, when he came quietly to the West Coast to sneak-preview "Jewel," confessed that he thrives on challenges.

He admitted, "Every day was a crisis. We had a lot to accomplish besides being bombarded by seemingly impossible production problems. It was a battle zone!"

He has a beguiling grin, square-jaw and green eyes shoot sparks. "I like taking chances; you jump in when there's no net. This is what making movies is all about, the magic, dealing with both the royal palace and the shepherds."

He reflects, "It drives you nuts at times, but I can't think of anything I'd rather do. I'm really looking forward to my 40s (he's just into them). I guess the big thing is, I'm in this very frankly for the long run: acting, producing, ultimately directing."

But he's in to love and marriage for the long run too... "and to balance my family life and work is really tough. I promised my wife (of eight years), Diandra, that the minute this preview is over and any needed changes in the picture made, I'll give her and our son, Cameron, all my time. Focus totally. That's how I do it. I go from one extreme to the other. I've now been gone 7½ months..." including Morocco, Fez, Mekenes, Ouarzazate, Touaba in Africa; Nice, Cannes and Villefranche; the film lab in London.

BETWEEN THE LINES

Q. Could you tell us anything about that wonderful Lena Horne? What has she been doing lately?

Marie Coelho
Los Banos, Calif.

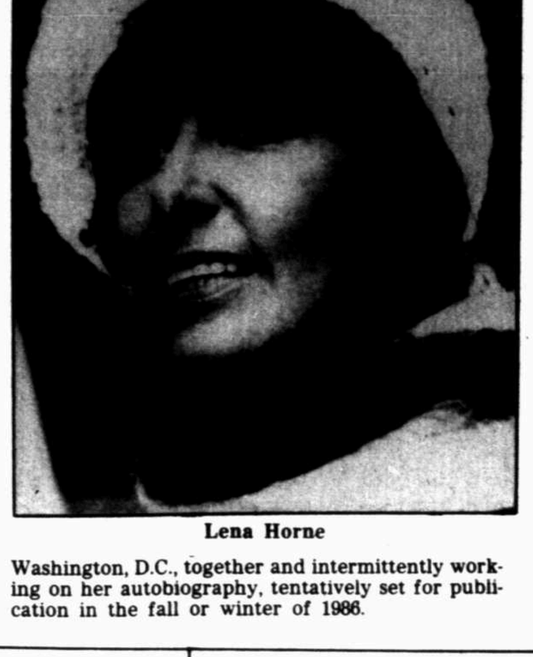

A. The 68-year-old grandmother of five was born in Brooklyn and lived there until her parents split up when she was 3. Her mother, Edna, a performer, then went on the road; her father, Teddy, a numbers runner and later a hotel owner, disappeared (for several decades). She was placed first in foster homes, then with relatives in the South and finally back with her grandmother in Brooklyn.

At 16, she got a job at the famed Cotton Club, but a few years later married Louis Jones, the son of a Baptist minister, had two children, Gail and Teddy, and temporarily retired from show business. After their divorce, she came back, singing with a few Big Bands, then at the club Cafe Society.

She followed that with a brief, unhappy stint in Hollywood, making such films as "Cabin in the Sky," "Ziegfeld Follies," "Words and Music" and "Stormy Weather." She also had a singing role in "Show Boat," in which she sang, while Ava Gardner, on-screen, pretended to. (Ironic, since Ms. Gardner had beaten her out for the role.)

She returned to music and worked steadily until 13 years ago when, within a year, her father (with whom she'd reconciled), her second husband, Lennie Hayton, and her son, Teddy, died. She took time off to regroup.

That seems to be what she's doing now, too. After three years on the road with her triumphant one-woman show, "Lena Horne: The Lady and Her Music," she's spending time putting her new home in Washington, D.C., together and intermittently working on her autobiography, tentatively set for publication in the fall or winter of 1986.

Q. I am wild about actor Timothy Dalton. He's gorgeous! Can you tell me where he was born, a little about his career and what he'll be doing next?

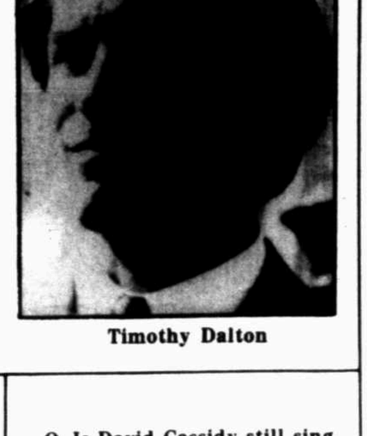

Diane W. Lehr
Baton Rouge, La.
Marilyn K. Cooper
Lawrenceville, Ga.

A. He's 39, was born in Colwyn Bay, North Wales, but at a young age began traveling into London, courtesy of the National Youth Theater. He made his professional debut in 1964 in "Coriolanus" at London's Queens Theater, followed it with two years at London's Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts and then went into the Birmingham Repertory Company for a stretch.

He made his film debut a few years later as Philip, King of France, in "The Lion in Winter" (star Peter O'Toole got him the part). He followed that with roles in the films "Wuthering Heights" (the 1970 remake), "Mary, Queen of Scots," "Agatha," "Flash Gordon," and even stranger, "Sextette" with the, by then, rather aged Mae West.

He's appeared on TV in "The Master of Ballantrae," "Centennial" and recently, the much-praised production of "Jane Eyre" that aired on cable's Arts and Entertainment Network. Currently, he's in the film "The Doctor and the Devils."

He had a long-running relationship with Vanessa Redgrave that was frequently running on and off. At last check, it was off.

Q. I am interested in knowing whether Michael J. Fox has ever been involved with Nancy McKeon. Also, who is he seeing now?

D.A.
Fresno, Calif.

A. You have the answer: Nancy McKeon. The two were even on public view recently when Michael brought her along to a dinner at the White House.

Q. Is David Cassidy still singing? Is he married?

Adrienne R.
Scranton, Pa.

A. Yes to both. When last heard from, David was on concert tour in England. His wife, Meryl, a model, was with him.

Liza Minnelli

Q. I absolutely love Liza Minnelli. I would like to know what her plans are.

K.G.
Bay City, Mich.

A. Following her TV movie, "A Time to Live," she went back on the road with her concert tour. That's where she now is — in Atlantic City, to be exact. At this point, concerts are what she has scheduled, including one to be taped in January and aired as an HBO special later next year.

Q. Could you give me a little information about Cyndi Lauper and her plans? Why does she always have that plastic dog in her videos?

Michelle Hadder
Dunville, Placentia Bay, Nfld.

A. She's 32, and she grew up in the New York boroughs of Brooklyn and Queens. From all accounts, she had a pretty miserable childhood: Her parents divorced when she was 5, her mother (who is featured now in her videos) had to work a couple of jobs to feed her three kids, and Cyndi, angry about the surroundings, became something of a delinquent.

At 12, she started dyeing her hair odd colors and dressing up in unusual clothes, which didn't exactly endear her to the neighbors. She sang in a band, performing Beatles songs, and a couple of years later, she switched to folk songs. Then, after a stretch at art school, she did the Long Island club circuit, performing whatever songs were popular at the time.

In 1977, she started to write her own songs, and the next year co-founded a band called Blue Angel. They put out an album in 1980, but the songs weren't played on the radio. Tired of getting nowhere, the band members decided to break up in 1982. Cyndi then decided to try it on her own. Aided by manager-boyfriend David Wolf (also in her videos), she's done very well, indeed.

Now, as we go to press, she's holed up writing new material for her next album, tentatively due out in February-March. As for the dog, whose name is Nipper and who is the RCA trademark dog, there doesn't seem to be any far-reaching reason. "Cyndi," explains an associate, "just loves that dog."

MICHAEL

"Diandra came to visit me several times. This summer, when Cameron finished first grade, she brought him to me in Morocco while she visited her mom in Spain and found us a house in Saint-Tropez where we could get a bit of a break together.

"I don't intend to be an absentee father. I want this son of mine to have a well-balanced life. Luckily, so far he has. He's a child who's always looking for fun rather than problems. He loved being with me in the desert. Here was an everlasting sandbox, horses, camels, guns, planes, tanks and a bunch of adults acting like kids. He loved it!"

When Douglas was a kid, he spent summers on location with his father, Kirk Douglas. "It was one of the healthiest things that ever happened to me. I got the feel of the business." Kirk has said that Michael didn't like him too much in those days, but today's Michael says, "No real dislike. I just didn't let anyone rattle my cage."

He explains, "I was trying to protect myself from this dynamo who seemed larger than life-size. How could you ever be the man your father was?...

"My father and I get along very well now, and I understand more. We're very different people who had very different lives. Though he was born here, his parents were Russian Jews and he grew up in poverty.

"He had to work and struggle from the age of 9. Because of what he did, I went to prep school, owned a motorcycle and lived three years in a commune before I decided to work. I'm very grateful to my father.

"His father had abandoned the family when he was a young child and he'd promised himself he'd never do that; so when he and my mother were divorced, he had a lot of guilt. He needn't have had. They always stayed friendly, always maintained a dialogue."

Douglas and his brother Joel lived in the East with their English-born mother, Diana Douglas, and their stepfather, William Darrid, a Broadway writer/producer. "It doesn't matter where you grow up; it's the parenting that matters," says Douglas.

"My wife is quite an exquisite lady. We were married when she was 20, and it has been a pleasure to watch her beauty grow: both innner and outer beauty. She makes me very happy — which is some statement from a guy who used to run like hell from any commitment."

He had been a flower child of the '60s, a kid who dropped out of the University of California at Santa Barbara after one semester, retreated to a commune in the mountains and tried the drug bit.

He remembers it as his "laid-back period," a time for feeling "mellow." In due course, he went back East, got a gas station job on his own, was named Mobil Man of the Month and checked in again at UCSB. In his junior year, pushed to chose a major, he chose acting.

"I wasn't really too interested. My brother Joel (co-producer on "Jewel," who worked also on "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" and "Romancing") was more interested than I. I just reluctantly moved into acting halfway through school."

But once decided...in successive years he was chosen the school's best actor, then best director; and soon after graduation, he made his TV debut in a CBS special, "The Experiment."

Douglas's first real break was on the series "The Streets of San Francisco." "A great experience for me," he recalls. "After doing a show a week, I figured I'd never have a case of nerves again."

All the time Michael was perfecting his acting on "Streets," he was trying to put together a production of "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," a property in which his father had acted on Broadway and had secured the film rights to, but had never been able to interest a studio.

Kirk Douglas liked the idea that his son wanted to produce — "My father was the first independent producer/actor in this town" — and turned over the property to Michael, who for the next 5½ years became passionately involved. "The only way to find a project is to fall in love with it. Like falling in love with a woman, it becomes obsessive."

"In my fourth and last year on "Streets," whenever I wasn't needed in front of the camera, I was running across the Oakland Bay Bridge for meetings with my partner Sam Zaentz (who has since won an Oscar for "Amadeus").

"What we had hoped for 'Cuckoo' was critical recognition." What they achieved was all five major Academy Awards and a gross of nearly $200 million around the world. Michael Douglas was no longer just "Kirk's kid;" he had become a power in film making. After the long grind, he and star of the film, Jack Nicholson, went off to promote the picture and laughed their way around the world.

"It was the kind of binge that could become a lifestyle," Douglas remembers. Near the end of the celebration, they found themselves in Washington, D.C., for Jimmy Carter's inauguration and the accompanying parties. On Inaugural Eve, after a concert at Kennedy Center, there was a party upstairs to meet the president.

"I looked across the room and saw Diandra, this marvelous girl with fluffy masses of golden hair. I fell in love instantaneously. I haven't yet figured it out. Next day I took her to lunch. She was a student at Georgetown University in the School of Foreign Service; had been born in Washington; raised in Majorca; spoke five languages.

"Her dad, a Navy man, had died when she was 16; she'd come back to Washington to attend college. Had been here for three years. But she didn't watch much television and wouldn't have recognized me anyhow since I was wearing an enormous beard.

"She figured I was an artist. I told her the awful truth. Three weeks later, I asked her to marry me. Four weeks after that, she did. Without the slightest idea what she was getting into."

He continues, "We couldn't have been more different people and I hadn't realized how insular my California life had become. When the person closest to you comes from another world, a different cultural environment, you've got a challenge to expand your scope. Marriage helped me define my goals, assess my priorities and work with more energy than ever before."

His first project after their marriage was co-starring with Genevieve Bujold in "Coma." His next was a plunge back into producing with "China Syndrome."

Douglas has always been a concerned person, active in behalf of liberal causes. (He has long been a member of The Committee of Concern, a group involved in Central American issues.) "China Syndrome" was clearly a message picture which surprisingly scored at the box office as well.

"It's not a bad life, ours. Diandra has been very supportive and accepts the blessings along with the dilemmas. She really wasn't crazy about California, and last year we found an apartment in Manhattan, bought it and moved East. I'm originally from New York — age 5 to 12, then we moved to Connecticut. It wasn't until I enrolled at Santa Barbara that I moved West.

He continues, "I enjoyed living in Santa Barbara and Los Angeles, but we came to feel that the business was all-consuming. Sometimes it's good to take a break and get away from that; back in New York the entertainment business is only one small part. Diandra put together the New York fund-raiser for 'Jewel of the Nile,' sponsored by the American Red Cross and another grass roots organization to help the homeless in New York.

"For the gift of life itself and for all our good fortune, you have to make some input into this world. I feel, and my wife feels the same way. We had different political points of view when we married, but over a period of time, those points have sort of congealed. She has very high principles and strong ideals, and she maintains them."

"It's always difficult to try to top a very successful picture like "Romancing the Stone."

'Santa Claus' ho-ho-wholesome

By DAVID LEE FORREST

"Santa Claus: The Movie" answers many questions about Kris Kringle that it may never have occurred to you to ask:

— How did the spread of literacy after the Renaissance affect Santa's business? (Kids started writing letters to him.)

— When did the "Naughty or Nice" list get started? (During the 1700s, presumably a pretty naughty century.)

— How Santa felt about Clement Clarke Moore's 1823 poem "A Visit From St. Nicholas?" (He loved it, except for the crack about his belly being like "a bowl full of jelly.")

— Why is his traditional Christmas garb red? (Mrs. Claus thought that green just wasn't his color.)

The movie, like producers Alexander and Ilya Salkind's 1978 "Superman," traces its mythic hero from the beginning. In 14th century Scandinavia a professional woodcutter and amateur toymaker named Claus, played by David Huddleston, and his wife Anya, played by Judy Cornwell, have no children of their own and compensate by making little Christmas toys for the children of their neighborhood.

One Christmas Eve, while making their rounds delivering the toys, the couple get lost and freeze in a blinding snowstorm. They mysteriously wake up — "resurrected" might be a better word, although the movie is hazy on this — at the North Pole.

There a group of resident arctic elves hail Santa as a sort of Messiah figure who will be their Deliverer — deliverer of all the toys they spent the ho-ho-ho-whole year cheerfully manufacturing, that is.

The birth and evolution over the succeeding centuries of Santa's career is the best and cleverest part of the movie. The film bogs down a bit when it finally reaches the 20th century and the rest of the plot kicks in.

One of Santa's elves, an energetic one named Patch, played by Dudley Moore, gets entangled with a villainous New York industrialist named B.Z., played by John Lithgow. This subplot is simply too prosaic for all the magical storytelling that precedes it.

The one thing that partially redeems the second half of "Santa Claus" is the funny way Moore and Lithgow, both terrific comic actors, play off each other.

Lithgow has been a transsexual ex-football player in "The World According to Garp," a psycho assassin in "Blow Out" and a mad scientist possessed by an alien being in "Buckaroo Banzai" and was wonderful in all those parts. He tackles his latest offbeat role as a greedy Grinch who makes unsafe toys with just as much relish.

Just like the skinny Shelley Duvall was born to play Olive Oyl in Robert Altman's "Popeye," short and quirky Moore was born to play an elf who truly believes that "Heaven helps those who help their elf" and brims over with "elf-confidence."

The duo outshine every other actor in the movie, although the other performers are more than adequate.

Huddleston's Santa is appropriately warm and cuddly, but, of course, is not as good as Edmund Gwenn's Oscar-winning Kris Kringle the 1947's classic "Miracle on 34th Street." Ms. Cornwell's surprisingly feisty Mrs. Claus is also nicely played. Children should love them both.

Parents may have to field a few questions from their children after the film. For example, virtually all the toys seen in Santa's workshop are old-fashioned ones made of wood, so a perceptive child may very well ask where the room they make the plastic toys with semiconductors is.

This film has many flaws, to be sure, but certainly looks good compared to some other Santa movies, such as 1964's awful "Santa Claus Conquers the Martians," which is on many critics' lists of all-time worst films lists and, incidentally, was the original screen debut of a very young Pia Zadora.

"Santa Claus: The Movie" could have been better, but is still a very nicely wrapped Christmas package for both children and adults.

"Santa Claus: The Movie" is rated PG, which is odd since it's much more suitable for children than the G-rated "One Magic Christmas," and is now showing at the UA Cine IV.

'One Magic Christmas' not magic

The film features Mary Steenburgen as a wife and working mother who is lacking in "the Christmas spirit." She's no mean Grinch or Scrooge, you understand, she's just not really enthusiastic about Christmas.

As it happens, she has some perfectly understandable reasons for feeling down. Her husband is unemployed, her boss is a creep, her family is losing its home and their savings are dwindling away.

In an offbeat bit of casting, veteran character actor Harry Dean Stanton plays an angel whose assignment is to put Ms. Steenburgen in a better holiday mood. If this sounds vaguely familiar, it's because one of the most popular holiday movies of all time, Frank Capra's 1946 "It's a Wonderful Life," had a very similar plot.

In that classic film, Jimmy Stewart was shown how much worse things might have been had he never been born. In "One Magic Christmas," however, Ms. Steenburgen is simply shown how hideous things in general can become.

To help her get the Christmas spirit, her innocent husband is shot to death (the gunman, bizarrely, is a bank robber desperate for money to buy his son a Christmas gift) and — as if that wasn't enough to brighten anyone's holidays — her children are then kidnapped and get plunged into a icy river during a car wreck.

In a couple of other twisted touches, Stanton is dressed in a dark outfit which makes him look exactly like a stereotypical child molester and Santa's workshop turns out to be manned not by cute elves, but by dead people.

In a G-rated Disney holiday family film, the cruelty is all terribly jarring. It's unpleasantly reminiscent of this summer's glum "Return to Oz," in which Disney sent Dorothy back to a desolate, ruined Oz after having her committed to a Victorian insane asylum where a quack threatened her with primitive electroshock equipment.

Eventually, "One Magic Christmas" does reach a reasonably happy ending, but the bulk of the movie leaves such a bitter aftertaste that the end doesn't justify the means.

"One Magic Christmas," which has some unsettling violence even though it is rated G, is now showing at the North Park Cinemas.

No surprises in latest 'Rocky' film

From a consumer standpoint, "Rocky IV" is not a film that really needs a lengthy review because deciding whether or not to see it is very simple.

- If, on the one hand, you liked "Rocky II," "Rocky III" and "Rambo — First Blood, Part II," then you'll probably want to see "Rocky IV."
- On the other hand, if you think the original 1976 "Rocky" was the best of the series and you didn't care for "Rambo," then the chances are "Rocky IV" will seem like a waste of time to you.

The plot of this movie is equally simple and quite predictable. Rocky Balboa, the Sylvester Stallone character who debuted in the first "Rocky" movie, is challenged to a boxing match with the Soviet Union's champion, a steroid-fueled giant named Drago, played by Swedish kick boxer Dolph Lundgren.

If you've seen either of the other two "Rocky" sequels, you probably won't be too surprised by who wins.

The film is shamelessly manipulative and is so successful — if unsubtle — in getting the audience to cheer and applaud at the appropriate times that there might as well be a flashing "Applause" sign underneath the screen.

During the climatic battle, the movie veers into outright fantasy when the entirely Russian audience (largely Soviet military men), starts cheering "Rocky! Rocky! Rocky!" under the displeased eyes of the general secretary of the Communist party and a good chunk of the Politburo.

This sets up a completely fake speech delivered by Rocky at the film's conclusion about how the U.S. and U.S.S.R. can peacefully coexist, something which all the rest of the movie sets up as utterly impossible.

That's about as imaginative as the screenplay gets. The film is lean, mean, fast on its feet and energetic, but doesn't win any new victories for Stallone's series.

"Rocky IV," like the rest of the "Rocky" sequels, seems to have the same bland appeal as fast food chains; it doesn't matter which one you go to, you can comfortably expect to be served the same exact simple fare without any surprises.

Foundation plans workshop on Texas historic costumes

KERRVILLE — "Decades of Historic Texas Costume," a workshop on the significance and care of vintage handmade clothing, is scheduled for Jan. 8-11 in Kerrville. A Sesquicentennial project of the Texas Arts and Crafts Foundation, the sessions will contain valuable costume information for those involved in pageants and other Sesquicentennial projects.

Betty J. Mills, Lubbock museum professional, author and teacher, will headline the workshop. Her series of three books in paper doll format about a Texas woman named Amanda won the 1984 Wilder Gold Citation for excellence in publication and media design from the Texas Association of Museums. Her latest book, "Texas Women and Their Fashions, 1830-1910," is just off the press.

Curator of Costume and Textiles at Texas Tech University's museum for the past 13 years, Mrs. Mills holds a Master of Science in Clothing. She will provide samples of historic clothing for the workshop and articles from other collections will be available.

The workshop will stress the importance of both preserving old clothing and making more historically correct costumes for the upcoming Texas 150th year celebration. On Jan. 8, Mrs. Mills will direct a decade by decade study of Texas costume from 1830-1950. The Jan. 9 sessions will demonstrate care and conservation.

Utilization of workshop information in communities across Texas is an important goal. On the morning of Jan. 10, Mrs. Mills will be joined by others with specialized knowledge for a panel presentation.

Dr. Ann Beard will lead a session on sources of information and supplies. She has selected a group of 14 instruction leaflets on garment fitting and pattern adjustment that will be given as part of the instruction material to each participant. Ms. Beard is a member of the Texas A&M Extension Service specialist staff, a position held since 1973. She also serves on the ASTM Textiles Committee, which sets voluntary industry standards for fabric and apparel.

"Multiplying Workshop Information in Your Own Community" will be the topic for Jerri Ray. The county extension agent in home economics in Kerr County for 19 years, Ms. Ray is perhaps equally known for her ability to involve both professionals and volunteers in community service.

The panel will be joined by Audie Hamilton, workshop coordinator and executive director of the sponsoring foundation and the Texas State Arts and Crafts Fair. She holds a certificate from the Royal School of Needlework in London, England and did museum study at the Victoria and Albert Museum.

Friday afternoon and Saturday of the workshop are devoted to learning or developing an historic stitch. Pam Baker will teach tatting and Melessa Nong needlepoint for costume detail. Both are beginning projects especially designed for mastery in the time allotted. A full kit and instructions are prepared for each participant.

Audie Hamilton will teach making of a Battenberg lace collar. Belgium tape has been secured for the kit and the participants will learn the ring and spider, as well as three other fill stitches. This session is the only project with a prerequisite. Participants need to know basic embroidery.

Arts group offering European tour

The Concho Contemporary Fine Arts Association is offering a 17-day art tour of Paris, London, and Scotland to take place in June 1985. The tour has been designed specifically to accommodate the interests of those who enjoy the visual arts. Major art museums, galleries and historical sites will be emphasized; yet a good amount of flexibility and sufficient free time also will be provided.

Cost has been kept to $1840 for members of CCFAA; and although somewhat higher for non-members, membership is open to all. Dues are $20. This amount includes all transportation from and to DFW airport and during scheduled tours; comfortable accommodations (two to a room with bath — single accommodations also are available at a higher price); continental breakfast, a welcome dinner; and all scheduled tours, including day-long tours of the chateau region near Paris, Salisbury and prehistoric Stonehenge in England, and the Highland country of Scotland, as well as a stop in Canterbury.

A $200 non-refundable downpayment is due by early January and the balance by April. Flexible and reasonable means of payment are available.

Singer 'delighted' interest revived in big band music

MERCED, Calif. (AP) — Bob McBurney is delighted that interest in big band music seems to be reviving, but he knows it won't get as big as when he sang with the Harry James Orchestra in the early 1950s.

Using the name Bobby Mack, he sang with the James band from 1951 until it disbanded in 1953, then went on to other big bands and vocal groups as that era of soft, smooth swing music faded into rock 'n' roll in the late 1950s.

McBurney quit singing professionally in 1960 and has been involved in a variety of businesses since, the latest as a real estate agent in this central California city 120 miles southeast of San Francisco.

"I think there's an upsurge in big band music, and a strong interest in this music at the school level is helping," he said in an interview, noting that high schools in this area have formed dance bands.

"But don't expect it to be like the old days because that was the music then on the radio, records and in the ballrooms," McBurney warned.

"There's nothing that compares with standing in front of a big, screaming band at a dance. I wish we could get kids into a ballroom and hear a big band in that atmosphere."

For McBurney, it began when he won one dollar in an amateur show at the age of 5 by singing a tune called "All Around the Water Tank."

McBurney kept on singing, and his student high school band in El Monte won the Western finals of a contest that entitled it to perform in New York's famed Carnegie Hall. There, McBurney was named "All-American Boy Vocalist" of 1946, leading to his career with big bands.

Highway overpass proposed for moose in Alaska

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — They provide them for children, so why not for moose?

The Alaska Department of Fish and Game is proposing construction of an $800,000 overpass for moose across the busy Glenn Highway.

The overpass would be a bit wider and stronger than those built for schoolchildren, said acting state wildlife supervisor Dan Timm. After all, moose can weigh up to 1,500 pounds.

Timm said that state biologists believe the overpass would eliminate 25 to 30 collisions between moose and cars in the area each year.

Moose usually die in those accidents and cars are often destroyed. To date, no people have died but there have been serious injuries.

About 350 moose live in the Chugach Mountains to the east of the highway. The snows of winter force an annual migration to feeding areas across a busy highway.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

© 1985 Tribune Media Services, Inc.

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q. – In recent months I have frequently seen the term "limit raise" used in your bridge column. Would you mind explaining the difference between a limit raise and a forcing raise and what you employ for your forcing raise if you adopt this new method? – M.D., San Diego, Calif.

A. – First, limit raises are not something new in bridge; they were used almost half a century ago. Recently, they have come back into favor, especially with those who use five-card major opening bids and forcing no trump responses.

A limit raise is a jump raise of an opening bid: for example, a jump to three hearts of partner's opening bid of one heart. The requirements for the bid are:

1) Four-card trump support.
2) 10-12 points, including distribution.

Obviously, the limit raise is not forcing, just invitational. Partner can pass with a minimum opening bid, but he should go on to game if he is any better than minimum. The lower the high-card count that responder has, the better his distribution must be. Obviously, if responder has 11-12 points in high cards, his hand should be relatively flat. Below are maximum and minimum hands for a limit raise of partner's one heart opening bid:

♠ A98 ♡ KJ95 ◇ 832 ♣ K65
♠ A982 ♡ K954 ◇ 7 ♣ J652

If you decide to adopt limit raises, you must find a way to show the hand with which you would normally have made a forcing raise of partner's opening bid, i.e., a hand of 13-16 points with good trump support. The bid that can best be spared for that purpose after a major-suit opening bid is three no trump, because it is only on very rare occasions that you will have a perfectly balanced 16-18 points. And on those occasions, there are other ways to bid the hand.

Q. – There is always a big dispute in our game about honors. If a defender holds 100 honors in the trump suit, does he get credit for it? – F.N., Des Moines, Iowa

A. – If you "always" have a dispute about a defender who holds 100 honors, I suggest you beef up your requirements for an opening bid – I can't remember that last happened to me.

However, the Laws of Contract Bridge are quite explicit on this point. If anyone holds 100 honors – declarer, dummy or either defender – he receives the honor bonus.

Theater group staging 'Night Before Christmas '85'

Tickets are on sale at ClayDesta National Bank and the KIOSK in the Plaza for "The Night Before Christmas 1985," being presented at 2 and 7 p.m. Saturday at Midland High School Auditorium.

Sponsored by the Midland Council on Alcoholism, "The Night Before Christmas" is being staged by Penguin Playhouse, the children's branch of Adventure Theatre, Inc., a professional company from Amarillo. The manager and director of Adventure Theatre are Bryan Lake and Rena Newton. The two founded and ran Penguin Productions from 1979 to 1985.

"The Night Before Christmas 1985" was written and directed by Ms. Newton, who has written 10 other full-length plays seen by thousands of children over the past six years.

This updated musical takes place in Santa's workshop at the North Pole. Santa has brought a computer whiz kid and a punk rocker there in a effort to understand today's young people. He encourages them to enjoy their childhoods and not try to grow up so fast. Ms. Newton said of her script, "It was written to be a shared family experience and appeals to young and old alike."

Tickets, priced at $1, may be purchased inside the east entrance of ClayDesta National Bank, No. 6 Desta Drive, corner of Wadley Avenue and Big Spring Street, between the hours of 1 and 4 p.m. Monday through Friday, at the KIOSK in the Plaza, Plaza Shopping Center, Wadley Avenue and Garfield Street, from 10 a.m. to noon Monday through Friday, and at Midland High School Auditorium Saturday at 1 and 6 p.m., an hour before each performance.

Children attending the hour-long play must be accompanied by an adult. For more information call 687-5812.

Holy Trinity to hold carol service

The Choristers of Holy Trinity Episcopal Church, Illinois Avenue and H Street, will present the third annual Candlelight Carol Service at 7:30 p.m. today.

The Choristers and Handbell ringers will begin with a medieval custom of plainsong chants and processionals around the nave with the tolling of bells in a mystical setting of candlelight.

Carols from nations around the world will be sung by the choristers, including the Burgundian "Pat-a-Pan," the Cornish "Sans Day Carol," the Spanish "Torches, Torches" and the English "Sussex Carol."

Instrumentalists for the service will include Gloria Steelman and cris Anderson, flute; Troy Rodden, harp; and Trent Timberlake, guitar.

The Ritual of Light, symbolizing Christ's birth and spreading his light to all mankind, will conclude the Candlelight Carol Service.

The Instrumental Prelude will begin 30 minutes before the service begins. Familiar hymns and carols will also be sing by the choirs and congregation during the service.

The public is invited to attend.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon
Monday, December 9, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Those who have been pulling against each other will come together in the coming year. Peace of mind is just as important to you as money.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Listen to those who have proved their loyalty. A business decision may not be to your liking. Majority rules! Others are watching to see how you react. Yield to the decision graciously.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do not let an obsession affect your normally good judgment. Presenting practical ideas will propel you to the top at your place of employment. Perfect an old technique and use it wisely.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may be wearing yourself out doing favors for others. Do not carry it to extremes. Pamper yourself with a meal in a favorite restaurant. Romance finds you when you least expect it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your wit and charm will impress everyone you come in contact with today. Ignore any jealous remarks. A rival's negative comments will boomerang. Keep your mind on your work and avoid direct confrontations.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A compassionate approach helps others but could prove rough on your pocketbook. Keep spending within reasonable limits. It is time for others to do more for themselves. Spearhead a fund-raising campaign.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A herculean work effort leaves you exhausted but pleased. Look forward to receiving new financial rewards. Your dedication is appreciated by those who really count.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Today's events improve a special relationship or partnership. A new sense of purpose helps you climb to the top at your place of employment. An excellent time to resume an old romance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Constructive accomplishments force you into the spotlight, opening the door to new career opportunities. Be receptive to mate's suggestions. Add a touch of elegance to the way you look.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): If you want to be in shape for the holiday, keep those diet and exercise resolutions! Business communications improve -- and so does the bottom line. Streamline routine procedures and productivity will rise.

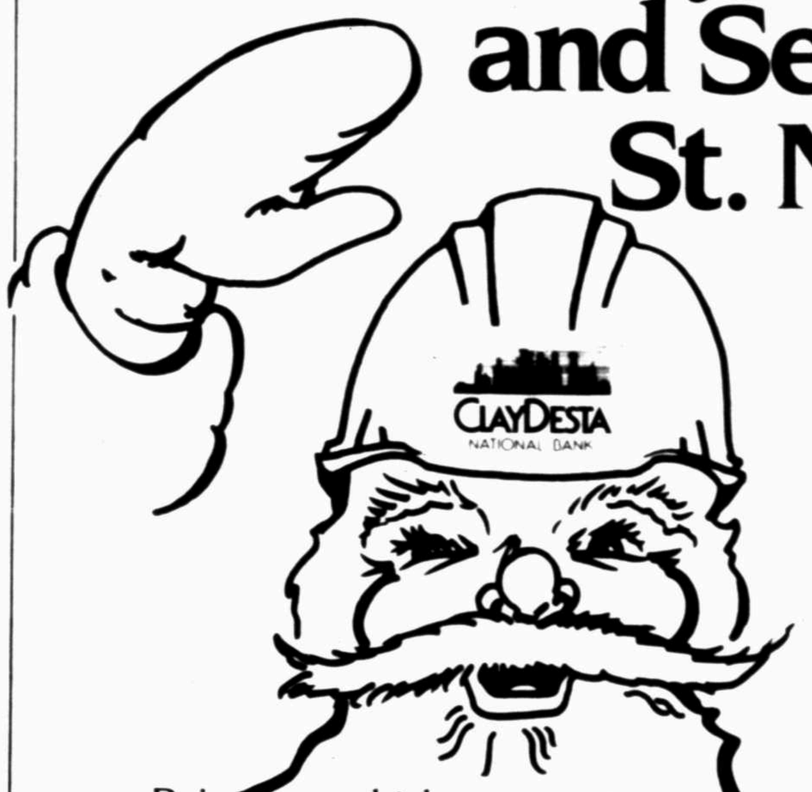

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You can engineer some wonderful things now for yourself and those you love. A real estate or media deal is almost at the boiling point. Be prepared to act quickly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Speak up, but also be receptive to ideas put forth by your co-workers. Friends figure prominently in this week's social plans. Ignore those who try to change your mind with flattery.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You receive lots of encouragement from the people who mean the most to you. Schedule an important appointment for later in the week and you will get better results.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Library extends hours

The Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library has recently started opening on Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The Library, which will celebrate 10 years at 1805 W. Indiana Ave. this coming July, has observed a Monday through Friday schedule for most of that time. The move to open on Saturday is a result of requests from patrons whose work schedules keep them from visiting the Library during the week.

"Miss Clayton's fine oil renderings of horses, cattle and workaday ranch scenes met with a fine reception at the show and sale held recently at the Library as did Michael Wardle's portraits of young women, which hang alongside a breathtaking depiction of the Grand Canyon and an arresting portrayal of Taos Pueblo," said Beth Schneider, secretary to J. Evetts Haley Sr. "Both young artists were also represented through bronze castings which give the viewer a three-dimensional appreciation of the respective subjects."

Midland Community Theatre's production of "Harvey" opened Friday in Theatre Midland's Davis Theatre (Theatre One), 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

The play tells the story of Elwood P. Dowd, an amiable man-about-town, who wrestled with reality for 40 years before winning out over it. He acquires a friend, Harvey, a six-foot white rabbit, and his family is thrown into turmoil.

Dowd is played by Pat Baskin. His sister is played by Marilynn Weaver Others in the cast include Sigrid Lamm as Mrs. Chauvenet, Patty Loftis as Nurse Kelley, David Perkins as Duane Wilson, Gerik Powell as Dr Sanderson, Jim Slaughter as Dr Chumley, Carol Newton as Betty Chumley, Michael Stannard as Judge Omar Gaffney and Steven Gandy as the Cabby.

Performance dates are Friday through Dec. 15 and Dec. 19-21. For reservations call Theatre Midland's box office, 682-4111.

Sculpture exhibit slated

AUSTIN — A search for the best Texas sculptors is under way now as the Texas Society of Sculptors organizes the Official Sesquicentennial Sculpture Exhibition to be presented in Austin next year.

Finalists in the juried competition will be vying for a coveted Governor's Award which includes a cash prize in addition to the usual professional amenities accruing to such winners.

The exhibition is entitled: "Celebrating Texas Sculpture — 150 Years of Liberty" and is not restricted to any specific styles or size. Jurying will take place in September 1986 but artists need to begin selecting works or creating them now to be included. Any resident Texas sculptor may compete.

Interested artists are encouraged to obtain entry information from the Texas Society of Sculptors, Ron Carroll, President, 512/327-1434 or write to 801 Canyon Creek Drive, Austin, Texas 78746 for details.

'Messiah' to be presented

The Chancel Choir and members of the Midland-Odessa Symphony Orchestra will present portions of Handel's "Messiah" at 10:50 a.m. today in the sanctuary of First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave.

Tom Roberts will be directing the 80-voice choir and orchestra in this special concert. Soloists will be Daphne Pemberton and Louis Kluck from the church's Chancel Choir. The Rev. John Anderson will be the guest speaker for the worship service.

The public is invited to attend.

Pittsburgh weather butt of San Diego jokes

PITTSBURGH (AP) — San Diego, which recently erected 10 billboards in Pittsburgh to tease residents abot cold winters, is sending a blizzard of sunny postcards to the Pennsylvania city.

The postcards are miniatures of the billboards, which went up in response to Pittsburgh's designation earlier this year as the nation's "most livable city" by Rand McNally's "Places Rated Almanac."

The new billboards show a blond beauty sunning on a San Diego beach and proclaim, "Winter Is The Pitts If You're Not in San Diego."

Shirley Hulett, spokeswoman for the San Diego Convention and Visitors Bureau, said that postcards are being made available free to San Diego residents "to send to their Pittsburgh friends and relatives as well as to folks trudging through winter all over the country."

Miss Hulett said San Diego's goal is to have Pittsburghers vacation there.

"We have smokestacks, too," she said, "but ours are on cruise ships."

Big Spring museum plans tree festival

Hours are Tuesday through Friday 8 a.m. to noon and 1 to 5 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday 1 to 5 p.m. The museum is located at 510 Scurry St. Admission is free.

Texas artists to receive award to 'encourage, reward' them

Up to six Texas artists will each receive a $3,500 award in a pilot program announced this month by the Texas Commission on the Arts and Mid-America Arts Alliance.

Open to outstanding artists working in the fields of painting, prints drawings and artists' books, the program is patterned after a fellowship program begun in 1983 by M-AAA in conjunction with the National Endowment for the Arts.

The M-AAA/Texas Awards for Visual Artists is designed to encourage and reward those artists already evidencing a solid, if limited, reputation in their own communities. The program is being made possible by support from TCA.

Entries due by Jan. 14 will be judged by a panel comprised of one curator and three nationally known artists. Winners will be announced in mid-February.

To be eligible, an artist must be a resident of Texas. Applicants must be either full-time artists or be pursuing serious careers in their work while holding other jobs. Full-time graduate and undergraduate students will not be considered. The selection panel would expect each applicant to have created a substantial body of work in the medium submitted for review.

The 1986 awards program may be the first of many. According to M-AAA spokesman, consideration is being given to future awards in the area of photography, crafts and sculpture.

For information on application procedures, contact Judy Kennett or Bev Brinson at Mid-America Arts Alliance, 20 West 9th Street, Suite 550, Kansas City, Mo., 64105, 816/421-1388.

M-AAA visual arts programs are made possible through funding from the National Endowment for the Arts, the state arts agencies in Arkansas, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska and Oklahoma, and support from corporations, foundation andindividuals.

The Texas Commission on the Arts has entered into a special arrangement with M-AAA for the purpose of providing support for Texas artists.
