City To Build New Sewerage Disposal Plant

Plans are going forward for the building of a much needed sewerage disposal plant for the city of Lamesa. The definite plans and specifications are expected to be received by the city commission within the next few days.

Harvey C. Allen, local architect, is at work on plans and specifications for a modern plant, and when he completes his work the plans will be submitted to WPA officials with the hope that a WPA project can be secured.

Mayor W. L. Marr stated this week that the city officials were planning to build a large up-to-date plant and one that would take care of a large increase in Lamesa's population.

The city of Lamesa is in bad need of a new sewerage disposal plant as the one now in use is inadequate in every way, and it is hoped that a new plant can be built before many months.

Softball League Creating Much Interest Over County

The Dawson County Softball League, composed of fourteen teams from every section of the county and the city of Lamesa, started play Monday night at the new softball field just south of the CCC camp.

It was estimated that close to a thousand fans were present for the opening games and that a like number were present Tuesday night for that night's games. It is thought that as the season progresses, more interest and attendance will be had.

In the opening game of the season Monday night, the CCC camp team defeated the Barraca Sunday School Class team 29 to 3. This game was featured by the snappy play and heavy hitting of the CCC boys.

The second game was finally won by the Boy Scouts over Woody by a score of 10 to 4.

The third game of the night was the more thrilling and exciting in that the score was closer and that the outcome of the game was undecided until the last man was out. The Earnest Motor Parts Team won from the Gus Ragsdale team 13 to 12 in this contest.

The Liontown team failed to show up Tuesday night and the Welch boys won the first game by default. The second game was exciting in that 34 scores were made, McCarty finally winning out 15 to 14. The third game between Wilson and Modern Dry Cleaners was also a heavy hitting affair, with The Cleaners finally winning 13 to 11. Wilson threatened in the seventh inning, scoring seven runs, but fell two runs short of tying the score.

Wednesday night was an open night for league play, and the Klondike and Collins Dry Goods girls teams took advantage of this by playing the first ladies game of the year. According to some of the spectators some of the league teams would be wise in not playing the ladies, especially the Klondike girls, who defeated Collins 29 to 5. The CCC camp defeated the Klondike boys in a second game.

Tonight (Thursday) finds Coca-Cola playing Texaco in the first game; CCC playing Earnest Motor Parts in the second game and the Barraca boys playing Woody in the third game.

REPORTERS' ASSOCIATION MET JUNE 19TH

"By using compound sentences one can avoid the use of so many short choppy and disconnected sentences in writing club reports," said Mrs. J. L. Morris to the reporters' association when they met in the office of Miss Mattie Phenix, home demonstration agent, June 19.

In making compound sentences however one should always be careful to use the correct conjunction or the meaning of the sentence may be changed entirely. For instance when using "and" one adds something to the sentence whereas "but" takes something from it. There are times when a verb is used instead of the conjunction.

Visitors present were Mrs. Clyde Edmondson and Mrs. Furman Thorpe. Eight club reporters and the chairman of reporters were present.—Reporter.

"But you—you could pay these men a fair price, Warren. The least you can do, in God's justice, is to offer them a decent wage for their years of labor and hardship."

Warren brushed her words aside. "We won't argue about that. Please get ready to leave for Fort Smith."

"I'm not leaving, Warren," she said in a strangely quiet voice. "I'm staying here—here at Dynamite Bay. I'm going to fight this out with you."

Warren turned away, impatiently, and strode out; and Patricia heard him order his men:

"All right, baggage this place up and get it across the river."

He was interrupted by another voice. Patricia's voice, angry and challenging: "Jus' wan meenit! You don't baggage dis place op onless Mee Patricia say so. You don' load her into no plane weelly-neelly, lak if she was some squaw-siche or mtise."

Poleon and three prospectors had come across from the Den, while she was talking with Warren; and they were standing belligerently between Warren's party and her tent. Sam Honeywell, with a canoe paddle in his hand, was edging around to join Poleon and the other three.

"Poleon!" she cried. "Don't start any trouble!"

"No, he'd better not," Warren agreed curtly. "You men, get her tent down!"

One of the Chiwaughimis stepped up, took hold of a tent stake. Poleon pushed him away. The metis snarled and struck Poleon in the face. Poleon swung at him and hit him on the jaw, a pile-driving wallop that lifted the metis clear off his feet and stretched him cold.

"Put dem rifle away!" Poleon bellowed at the three who had guns. "You start any shooting and de whole outfit of you will lan' in de police butter-tub on your ear!"

One of Warren's men sidled around behind Sam Honeywell, crashed the unsuspecting Sam on the head with an oar, and laid him out. The other 11 men rushed upon Poleon and the three prospectors like a hostile wave.

Patricia screamed as the fight broke wide open in a twinkling. Thump—smash—it was a fierce hot melee of struggling men; of clubs; rifles, tent stakes and swishing oars; of grunts and oaths; of men sprawled on the wet ground; of sickening blows with fist and oar and club.

Against the heavy odds the three prospectors were overwhelmed at the first rush. They were knocked down, knocked cold, trampled underfoot. Only the big Poleon, standing at the flap front and brandishing a tent stake, was still on his feet.

"Allons!" he kept bellowing. "You come a-near dis tent, and I'll knock de whole pack of you colder'n a dead dog's nose!"

Over at the community house the alarm had been sounded; and out of the place came pouring a fair-sized riot—half a hundred prospectors, leaping out of the windows, surging thru the doors, snatching up clubs and stones and tent pegs as they raced for the battle.

They hit the place like a demolishing tornado. Outnumbered four to one, Warren's men were slugged, knocked down, swept under, obliterated. Two or three survivors escaped and ran for the sturgeon-head, with a dozen prospectors in hot pursuit.

That same evening, afraid that she would lose her nerve if she waited, Patricia called a meeting in the community house. Standing on a chair, near the door into the kitchen, she gave a talk to her 75 rock-hogs.

She repeated to them what Warren had said to her about the richness of the field; told them she had declared war on the company; reminded them that she was living on their side of the Resurrection now; told them that she was as penniless as they, but that she was going to stick there and fight. Were they going to sell out or stay?

Her sincerity and her fire stirred them out of their discouragement. Cloud psychology and their shame at the thought of letting her down, did the rest. From all over the big room came shouts: "We'll stick till hell freezes!" — "Bet your boots, Pat, we're hanging on!" — "First feller that sells a claim, he gets tarred and feathered!"

Patricia wrote out a pledge, binding each man not to sell one square inch of his holdings. All the men there signed it. She wrote out two other copies, to send back into the barrens for the absent prospectors to sign. Last of all she dashed off a third copy and sent it across Resurrection to Warren, for him to read and ponder on.

CHAPTER VI

Almost every day after their open break, Warren went across the river for a friendly visit with Patricia. Realizing that he had badly blundered in trying to coerce her, he set out deliberately to win back her esteem with kindnesses.

Besides his friendly visits, he took care of her bank overdraft, slipped money into her purse, bought knick-knacks for her at the Hudson's Bay store; and when the prospectors built her a snug cabin in the pines near the big lodge, he fitted it up tastefully with a plane-load of furnishings from Edmonton.

He also offered Elynn double salary to remain with Patricia as maid and woman company; but Elynn flatly refused. Unlike Patricia, she could not stand up to the Arctic. The discomforts of tent life went hard with her even in summer; and with the coming of raw weather she completely wilted. Besides she both feared and disdained the rough prospectors. So there was nothing for Warren to do but send the maid back to Chicago.

Loving Patricia as he did, it galled him to know that her passion was for Tarlton, not for him, but he sternly concealed the hurt and went on playing his cool-headed patient game. After all, he reflected, he had powerful factors on his side. Patricia's social status, her wealth, her family ties and all the old familiar life—of that he was an integral part, whereas Tarlton was alien to it. If and when a showdown came, Patricia would hesitate a long time before severing herself from everything near and dear to her.

All the while that he was befriending Patricia personally, he pushed ahead ruthlessly with his plans to seize that mining field. Privately he passed around the word that any man who sold him a block of four claims would be paid cash, taken all the way to Edmonton by plane, and there given $500 bonus to have a good time on.

Picking out half a dozen of the most discouraged city rushers, he worked on them secretly, persuaded them to sell their holdings, and whisked them south to Fort Smith before the other prospectors caught on.

Most telling of all, he kept up a shrewd insidious propaganda to break down the morale of the men.

This field was sixteen hundred miles from the railroad. . . . To bring in even the smallest stamp mill would cost a fortune. . . . Silver was down to 31 cents. . . . When valuable developed mines in the city country were standing idle, with railroads right at their shafts, what chance had an undeveloped mine in the inaccessible Arctic?

His methodic hammering got results. Spot by spot the red on the chart grew.

Across the river Patricia watched Warren's moves and fought him the best she could. In answer to his propaganda she would argue the men. "If this field is as worthless as he tries to make out, why's he so keen to get hold of it?" Whenever a miner got sick or got behind on his assessment, she persuaded the others to pitch in and keep his claims from lapsing. Under her direction the men cut huge cords of stove wood, laid up whitefish for the dog team, netted lake trout for themselves; and in the Moon-of-Birds-Flaying-South, when the first heavy snows came and the caribou migration was on, she sent a big hunting party north east to the barrens and they brought back meat to last all winter.

Food and fuel, the two main items, were thus taken care of easily enough. Needing money badly for the odds and ends of operating expenses, she wrote secretly to Chicago and had all of her jewelry sold, through Frances, thereby raising enough funds to keep the Den going a while longer.

With the fighting Warren, holding the discouraged prospectors in line, running that big house, scolding six dozen men, planning three meals a day, keeping spirits up and quarrels down, she was a busy girl, the busiest she had ever been in her life. During the first six weeks of her "war", before defeat began closing in and her doubts and uncertainties rose to storm fury within her, there were times when she came near to happiness. No more of that terrible inner restlessness which used to dog her wherever she went. No more wondering where to find diversion tomorrow, or choosing between boreome inanities.

Toward the end of October, Sam Honeywell came in to the Bay, bringing back one of the pledges she had sent up Resurrection for the men to sign. As Patricia scanned the long list of names, she was astounded to run upon Craig's signature.

Instantly she was all eagerness. "Why, Sam"—he had brought the paper to her cabin—"did Craig actually sign this? What did he say, Sam? Did he make any comments about my war on Mr. Lovett? Was he surprised?"

Sam scratched his head. "He was plenty surprised, all right; but I don't mind as he said anything in particular.—Yes, he did too, he said, 'Heavens, what a twirl she's giving it. I dunno what he meant by that.'"

Patricia knew that "twirl" was a reference to Craig's taunt, last fall, that she had taken up the humanitarian game and was giving it a spin. But how was she to interpret his cryptic remark? Was it an admission that he had judged her wrongly? His signature on the pledge pointed that way. Surely he would say a kind word to her, if he ever did get back.

But she refused to do any wishful thinking. If she hoped for nothing, at least she could not be disappointed. Craig's cold aloofness had cost her bitterly enough already.

As she looked back, more sanely now on her declaration of war, she felt that though she had been hot-tempered and extreme, the course she had taken was the morally right course. After making every possible allowance for Warren—his duty to the firm, the temptation of this immense prize—she still believed that he was heartless and predatory toward these men. His final victory—and she saw, at last, that by mid-winter he would have this whole rich field—drove her frantic. Why didn't Craig come back and thaw out and get into this fight, instead of being such an iceberg? He might be able to whip Warren, whereas she could only stare off the debacle a little longer.

With the November Moon-of-Hardening-Ice, Resurrection froze over for its long winter sleep. Shore ice stilled the beating surf of Great Desolation and crept out and out in the bay until at last the whole great lake lay quiet and dead. Snow covered the land and frozen waters, snow as dry and gritty as sand. The sun had swung farther and farther to the south till it was making only a little arch above the southern horizon, and the days had dwindled almost to nothing. After a long morning twilight the laggard sun rose at eleven, inched across its little journey, sank out of sight at one; and then the purple afternoon twilight gradually deepened until at last the stars and Aurora were flashing their cold lights on the scintillating snow.

As the Big Dark drew near, storms that sent the temperature plummeting to 50 below came howling down from the pole and raged for days on end. Near the beginning of December, the sun failed to rise at all, day failed to come, a weird dusk that was neither day nor night settled over the land. At noon, as at midnight, one could look up and see the stars. The Sacred W, the Two Bears, the Dragon and other northern constellations swung around and around in the sky, never setting.

The hopelessness of her struggle against Warren plunged Patricia into a bottomless despair. Strange moods preyed on her. The only girl on Resurrection, one girl among 300 men she hungered for the companionship of her own sex. With the drawing near of Christmas she was seized with a terrific homesickness, and in the privacy of her cabin she cried for Frances, her mother, her girl friends, and the familiar round of holiday parties cheerily going on in far-away Chicago.

MADE FOR THE FAMILY THAT LIVES IN THE COUNTRY

This "miracle" refrigerator is operated by kerosene

HOW would you like to have fresh meats at hand whenever you want them? How would you like to be able to make your own ice creams and frozen desserts, without the work of turning a freezer? How would you like to have an ample supply of ice cubes for cooling hot-weather drinks? You can have all of these things with Superfex. And you can have them no matter where you live. For Superfex makes cold by burning just a little kerosene.

Superfex is amazingly simple. You light its burners and forget it. Two hours later the burners go out—automatically. But Superfex keeps right on working. It gives you twenty-four hours or more of refrigeration with one lighting. This short burning time gives you modern refrigeration in its most economical form.

And you may buy on easy terms, if you wish. Ask for free home demonstration.

BURROUGHS-TARZAN TROUPE SENT NEW YEAR GREETINGS FROM GAUTEMALAN WILDS

Buried practically up to their necks in the wilds of Guatemala, the Tarzan troupe took time out to forward a special New Year's Greeting cable to the City of Guatemala to be dispatched to Hollywood and points east extending the Company's best wishes for a forthcoming year of happiness and prosperity to all connected with the motion picture industry. The Company was on location in Guatemala at that time.

Said Herman Brix, playing Tarzan—"If we can't have the happiness and festivity of the New Year celebration like the boys and girls in Hollywood, we at least can wish them our best for the New Year, knowing that they wish us the same in this far-off country. Instead of actually partaking of the good things in food and drink as we would have had them had we been in Hollywood at Christmas and New Years, we are taking ours on the chin in the jungles eating native cooking."

Junior Cowboy Contest At Stamford Reunion

Stamford, June 15.—A junior cowboy contest, limited to lads under 12 years of age, will be a new feature of this year's Texas Cowboy Reunion which meets in Stamford July 1, 2, and 3. Winner of first place will receive a special made saddle, presented by Jack

M. Little of Dallas. Second prize will be a pair of chaps.

Dr. Dallas Southard is chairman of the committee in charge of the new feature. The junior cowboys will be judged largely on the riding ability of the boy and the performance of his horse. The contestants riding togs and equipment and the appearance of the horse also will be taken into consideration.

The addition of this contest practically completes the program for the Reunion. Performances of the rodeo in which actual cowhands compete in calf-roping, wild-cow-milking, bronc and steer riding, will be held morning, afternoon and night each of the three days.

Special features include the cutting-horse contest, original with the Texas Cowboy Reunion rodeo, on the morning of July 2, and a calf-roping contest for cowboys over 55 years of age on the afternoon of the same day. A junior steer-riding contest for boys under 14 will be held at the night performances on July 2 and 3.

Judging of the cowgirls sponsors representing the various towns and cities will begin on the first day. Award of prizes to the most typical cowboy over 35 years of age and the most typical one under 55 will be announced on the third day. The old fiddlers' contest will begin at 8:30 a. m. on July 3.

A spectacular feature of the Reunion, the grand parade, will move thru the streets of the city starting at 11 a. m. on Friday, July 2. Cowboy parades will be held on the other two days of the show.

Sponsors' dances will be held each night at the new pavilion on the Reunion grounds, while square dances will be conducted at the Cowboy Bunkhouse. Sessions of the Texas Cowboy Reunion Association, composed of old-time cowboys, will be held at the bunkhouse on the mornings of the first and last day. The members of this organization will be entertained around the chuck wagon at noon each day.

As usual, West Texas ranches are being invited to bring their chuck wagons and camp in the chuck wagon area.

Improvements on the Reunion grounds costing $10,000 have been practically completed. The Reunion opens one day earlier than usual this year to avoid operating on Sunday, which falls on July 4.

Delinquent Tax Bill Passed by Legislature

Delinquent taxes may hereafter be paid by installment or in partial payments in accordance with a law enacted at the regular session of the legislature.

Senator G. H. Nelson last week sent a copy of this measure to us with the request that we advise the people as to its provisions.

"On and after July 1, 1937," says the law, "taxpayers owing delinquent state and county taxes, covering both real estate and personal property, shall be permitted to pay such delinquent taxes in partial payments."

All payments under this act shall be due and payable within twenty months from the date July 1, 1937, such payments being due and payable in ten monthly installments, provided that the first payment shall be made on or before September 1, 1937.

No payment for less than $1.00 will be accepted and no partial payment account for delinquent taxes totaling less than $10.00 will be opened.

The county tax assessor and collector can doubtless give any further information that may be desired respecting this new law.

Many in this county who owe delinquent taxes will doubtless take advantage of the installment plan of payment under the new law, since many are able to pay their taxes in small installments who are not able to pay them in a lump sum.

Rats Cause Fifteen
Million Dollar Loss
In Texas Last Year

Austin, June 22.—Texas sustained a fifteen million dollar loss last year, on account of rats, declared Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer. The figure is a very low estimate based upon the probable number of rats in the State, two for each person. No doubt many suffer losses that would pay their taxes, and this does not take into consideration the losses from diseases, time, and money, caused by the rat.

Typhus fever is on the increase in Texas, said Dr. Cox, and the rat is the cause of its spread. Old World Typhus fever has a high death rate, while the type we have in Texas, sometimes called Brill's disease, has a low death rate. It occurs among persons who work or live in rat infested buildings. It was the observation of this fact that led to the discovery that rats are carriers or transmitters of the disease. It appears that the rat suffers attacks of this form of typhus fever and that the fleas harbored by the sick rat bite man and thus human infection results.

Although this disease is not commonly fatal, it cannot be considered lightly. The intense headache, the high fever and the great mental depression are its most unpleasant features. Like in sea sickness, the patients greatest fear is that he is not going to die. The illness lasts about two weeks.

The control of typhus is very difficult and it depends upon the extermination of rats and this is no easy matter. Trapping and poisoning help, but the best results are obtained by starving the rats. This is done by having all buildings where food is stored ratproofed. The State Department of Agriculture will be glad to assist communities in their program for the extermination of this pest.

Mahon Advocates Complete Philippine Independence Now

Washington, June 22.—Advocating complete independence for the Philippine Islands as a vital peace insurance policy for the United States, Congressman George Mahon last week asked the House of Representatives to consider legislation making independence possible in 1938 or 1939. The present law provides for the complete withdrawal of the United States in 1946.

In his address to the House, Mahon stated: "We are legislating for neutrality. We are bent on preserving peace for America regardless of war in Europe or Asia. We are far from Europe, but as long as we maintain our sovereignty in the Philippines, we are liable to be in the middle of a conflict in the Orient. This is most unfortunate, and this untenable position should be terminated at the earliest possible moment. It is one of the major threats to peace of the United States."

He also pointed out that in addition to being a war hazard, the Philippines have been and still are very expensive financially to the United States. The total actual cost to the United States for all departments of Government, which have made expenditures in the Islands from 1898 to the present year was estimated at approximately $900,000,000. Annual expenditures for the Army and Navy in the Philippines are $14,500,000, and under the present law this expense will recur each year until 1946. The Congressman stated that these millions could best be spent in America in the development of the institutions of this country.

Mahon is a member of the House Insular Affairs Committee which has charge of legislation affecting the Philippine Islands.

New Method of Killing Grasshoppers

Gardeners in Dawson and Gaines counties will soon find themselves faced with an enemy that will damage, and in some cases, may completely destroy their growing vegetables unless something is done immediately to halt them, according to Gladys Wright, home management supervisor for the Resettlement Administration, with offices in the Court house.

Miss Wright said reports from practically every county in the Southwest indicates the grasshopper menace is greater at this time than at any period within the past seven years.

And while farmers have a variety of poisons at their command to combat this well-known enemy of all growing crops, Miss Wright said, the gardeners are limited to those mixtures which are not harmful to humans and poultry.

Miss Wright called attention to an article in the May 10 issue of Time Magazine which contained a formula for a cheap and effective poison for grasshoppers. The proportions for this mixture are bran (60 to 65 per cent) molasses (15 per cent), Epsom Salts, (20 to 25 per cent), and enough water to moisten.

This formula, it is claimed, is just as effective as the common arsenic bait. Moreover, it is less expensive. But most of all it is absolutely harmless to humans, cattle, swine, and poultry.

A large number of people saw their gardens destroyed last year from grasshoppers. They shunned the use of an arsenic mixture for fear of poisoning those who were to eat the vegetables.

Miss Wright advises all gardeners in Dawson and Gaines counties to be on guard for the first hoppers and ready to scatter the mixture, described above among the vegetation and around the garden fence at the initial invasion of the winged warriors.

Resettlement Administration Loans Co. Farmers $30,189.00

The Resettlement Administration has loaned farmers in Dawson county a total of $30,189.00 since July 1, 1936, according to S. P. Collins, supervisor for this county, with offices in the court house.

Purpose of this rehabilitation loan program, he explained is to enable individual farmers to get a new start under more favorable conditions. In emergency cases this agency has provided money for food and other necessities until they were able to provide for themselves. The loans have been made for the purchase of necessary farm supplies, livestock, household needs, feed, seed, fertilizer, and for food.

When these rehabilitation loans were made the county supervisor provided and in most cases the home management supervisor assisted in the farm agricultural assistance and guidance women in home management plans. While the county supervisor works on a farm plan to show which crops can best be grown on the farmers land and how he can make the most money from his farm, the home management supervisor works with the farm women in connection with the home.

It is interesting to note that many farmers do not need a loan after their farm plans have been worked out by a county supervisor and they have produced one crop. The rural rehabilitation program of this federal agency has been welcomed in every section of the county. It has been shown that a small loan for necessary items on the farm and proper farming practices would put many of the country's temporarily distressed families on their feet permanently.

Rehabilitation loans made to farmers in Region Twelve of the Resettlement Administration, from July 1, 1936 to June 12, 1937, amounted to $2,522,488.20.

Douglas Hill of Muleshoe spent the week end here with Mrs. Hill.

Buyers to See New Furniture at Mart Show in Chicago

Merchants Here Off To Attend National Home Furnishings Market At Chicago

The home furnishings industry's fall models of 1937 will go on display at the American Furniture Mart, Chicago, on July 5th, and among the thousands of buyers on hand for the event will be representatives of the Higginbotham-Bartlett store here.

"The Chicago market this summer is too important for us to miss," Geo. D. Norman, manager of the store declared. "Style trends change fairly rapidly, and a trip to market is necessary to keep up-to-date with the latest developments. Then, too, the price trend is still upward and by getting our orders in early we expect to effect substantial savings that we can pass along to our customers."

According to word from the Furniture Mart received here, more than 10,000 buyers, from furniture and department stores in all 48 states and several foreign countries are expected to attend the market between July 5 and July 17. It is considered possible that last January's record-breaking attendance of 10,413 buyers may be exceeded.

At the Mart, which is the largest building in the world devoted to one industry, with almost 2,000,000 square feet of space available for home furnishings displays, more than 800 manufacturers will have their fall lines ready for the inspection of the visiting buyers. The show is a wholesale market only, strictly closed to the public.

"We expect to see modern furniture out in front again in the popular priced field next season," Mr. Norman commented. "Since modern turned conservative, it has held first place as the industry's favorite style. More than 50 percent of the new samples in many of the Mart displays will be modern in inspiration."

A great deal of 18th Century furniture will be shown, Mr. Norman predicted, and the local buyers will also select a representative stock of Early American and French pieces. Less prominent styles are expected to record substantial gains as the new season opens.

Outdoor Pool Planned for Scout Camp at Post

Appointment of a committee which will have as its aim the construction of a large out-door swimming pool at Post Memorial Camp for Boy Scouts before next summer was authorized at a meeting of the Board of Directors of South Plains Scout Council Area at Post camp Tuesday night.

Members of the committee are Dr. F. B. Malone, president of the council, Marshall Mason of Post, chairman of the council camp committee, J. Edd McLaughlin, Katis, and Earl M. McClure, executive.

Many problems must be solved before the pool can be constructed but Dr. Malone predicted that it will be ready before next summer's camps. It must be large enough to accommodate more than 100 boys and a water supply must be sought on the caprock which crosses the camp. Drilling operations there planned, he explained, also will solve a water problem which future growth of the camp will present.

Plans also were made for an expanded camping program which eventually will include all seasons of the year. Immediate plans are to construct a trailer on which camping equipment can be carried so that leadership courses may be conducted at central points of the nine counties of the council in the fall.

Written report of Charles Whitacre of Lubbock, council organization chairman, showing a continuous growth in membership of scouts, cubs and adult scouters was received.

J. D. Dyer attended the meeting from Lamesa.
