Cabinet Shuffle Complete

Portland Mayor Gets Transportation Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter completed selection of his revamped Cabinet Friday, then flew to Camp David Md., where the overhaul of his administration began more than three weeks ago.

Carter chose former New Orleans Mayor Moon Landrieu as secretary of housing and urban development and selected Portland, Ore., Mayor Neil Goldschmidt as his new secretary of transportation.

Shortly after Carter's selection of Goldschmidt was announced late in the afternoon at the White House, the Senate confirmed his choice of Patricia Roberts Harris as secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Also confirmed was W. Graham Claytor as deputy secretary of defense.

Both nominations were approved by voice vote. They were the first of the Cabinet changes to clear the Senate.

After meeting with Goldschmidt on Friday afternoon, Carter departed for a weekend at Camp David where he had secluded himself three weeks ago before launching the shakeup of his Cabinet.

The selection of Landrieu and Goldschmidt seemed certain to please the nation's big city mayors, who have been critical of Carter for paring urban programs in his fight against inflation. Heavily Democratic, these mayors could be a key factor in the 1980 presidential primaries.

In selecting Goldschmidt and Landrieu, Carter did some ethnic and religious balancing of his Cabinet. Goldschmidt is Jewish and Landrieu is Roman Catholic.

Joseph A. Califano Jr., fired as secretary of health, education and welfare, had been the only Catholic in Carter's original Cabinet. Goldschmidt will be the only Jewish Cabinet member.

Friday's announcements wrapped up an overhaul of the Cabinet in which:

— W. Michael Blumenthal was fired as treasury secretary. Carter has nominated G. William Miller, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, to replace him.

— Attorney General Griffin Bell announced his retirement. Carter has nominated Benjamin Civiletti, deputy attorney general, to succeed him.

— Califano was removed as secretary of health, education and welfare, with Mrs. Harris nominated to replace him.

— James R. Schlesinger resigned as secretary of energy. Carter has nominated Charles Duncan, deputy defense secretary, to succeed him.

Appointee Praised

In announcing the appointment of Goldschmidt, Carter said in a statement that the Portland mayor "is known as an aggressive and innovative mayor with outstanding administrative abilities." He said Goldschmidt understands local transit problems and "has my full support and confidence."

Goldschmidt told a group of reporters after the appointment was announced that he intends to follow the president's programs, whatever they may be, adding: "My job is to carry out the programs of the man elected by the people."

Goldschmidt said the question of whether he would campaign for Carter's re-election next year in Oregon, a state the president lost in 1976, "has not been a topic of conversation."

Transition Discussed

White House press secretary Jody Powell said Goldschmidt already has discussed an orderly transition at the Transportation Department with Navy secretary Claytor, who has been acting as head of the department since Adams' departure last week.

Carter said of Landrieu, an unannounced overnight White House guest Thursday:

"Mayor Landrieu enjoys a national reputation as a progressive mayor and a strong administrator, as well as a respected and effective spokesman for local governments. He enjoys my full confidence and support."

"It's a good appointment," said Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., chairman of the House Banking Committee.

Landrieu, 49, served as New Orleans mayor for eight years until 1978. He was barred by local law from seeking a third term. A lawyer, he is the father of nine children.

Mrs. Harris already has met with Landrieu to plan an orderly transition at HUD, said Powell. In a statement, Mrs. Harris said:

"I can think of no person better qualified to serve in this position. ... All of us who know the mayor know him to be an inspired leader, a gifted administrator, and a committed advocate for the needs of America's communities, large and small."

Energy Mobilization Board Wins Approval Of House Committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Interior Committee gave overwhelming approval Friday to legislation establishing a powerful energy mobilization board, a principal part of President Carter's energy program.

The committee voted 40-1 in favor of setting up a board with authority to speed development of up to two dozen specially designated, high priority energy projects.

The proposal, outlined by Carter in a speech less than two weeks ago, picked up added momentum in Congress when a House commerce subcommittee gave its approval to a different version of the legislation.

The subcommitee's measure places no limit on the number of projects that could receive the special high priority designation.

On the other side of Congress, meanwhile, the Senate Energy Committee arranged to meet to continue its work on yet a third version of the same proposal.

Carter proposed giving the board authority to cut through red tape and help along plans for construction of non-nuclear energy projects, such as pipelines and gasification plants, designed to reduce U.S. on imported oil. Administration officials have said they envision about 75 such projects receiving the special treatment at any one time.

The lone dissenting vote in the Interior Committee came from Rep. James Weaver, D-Ore., who said a massive energy program such as the one Congress is working on would worsen

Miller Says Recession On, Opposes Tax Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary-designate G. William Miller told Congress Friday the nation is already in a mild recession but said that does not call for a quick tax reduction.

He said he personally expects the rate of unemployment to reach 7¼ percent of the labor force in the last quarter of 1980 — considerably above the Carter administration's official forecast of 6.9 percent.

Even so, Miller told the Senate Finance Committee, inflation is still the No. 1 problem. "At the moment, an across-the-board tax cut...would be unwise because it would unleash a new round of inflationary pressures....I don't think today is the right time for any tax cut."

Instead, Miller said, the best economic medicine is to fight inflation by holding down federal spending, protecting the dollar and developing a national energy policy. When government action is called for to battle the recession, he added, that should be centered on tax changes targeted toward investment and perhaps a reduction of Social Security taxes.

Miller, now chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, was warmly received by the committee, which is considering his nomination to succeed W. Michael Blumenthal as treasury chief. The panel gave no indication when it will vote on the nomination, but action could come as early as Tuesday.

Miller said he did not know about questionable payments of up to $1.7 million that were made by Textron Inc. at a time when he headed the conglomerate, before he became Federal Reserve Board chairman last year.

The firm released a report Thursday acknowledging the payments were made in a number of foreign countries by employees of Textron and its Bell Helicopter division.

Public Report Urged

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., the committee chairman, told Miller a report by the Securities and Exchange Commission "does not at any point suggest you knew or approved" of the payments. Long said the SEC should make that report public because it would clear Miller's name.

Miller said "I cannot defend and do not condone" the payments but could state unequivocally that "I didn't know of or participate in them."

Miller's statement that the United States is now in a recession was the first admission by the Carter administration that the expected slowdown had begun.

He said he expects the recession to end in the first quarter of 1980, or the second quarter at the latest.

"Hold Steady"

For the time being, it is essential that "we hold steady" to spending policies and don't try to offset the latest round of oil price increases by printing money, Miller said. That could bring on a "disastrous downward spiral" in the economy, he added.

"I believe that priming the spending pumps in the mild recession we have now would be unwise," Miller said.

Meanwhile, the House Banking Committee issued a report advising the Federal Reserve not to raise interest rates as a way of shoring up the dollar overseas.

Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., the committee chairman, said raising interest rates would worsen the recession and undermine international confidence in the dollar as a result.

The panel's recommendation to the board, was contained in its semi-annual report on monetary policy.

The committee recommended that the Federal Reserve "promote a strong non-inflationary domestic economy as the means of supporting the dollar, that it not intervene in the foreign exchange markets except to relieve disorderly market conditions, and that it refrain from further use of short-term interest rates under its control for the purpose of propping up the dollar."

Unless inflation is conquered, Miller said, the economic system will fall into disarray and "our political system will be subject to changes we can't predict."

He said he has not backed away from support of greater tax incentives for businesses to modernize and thus increase productivity. Miller said he will try to set a timetable for such tax changes that is consistent with "winning the war against inflation."

Trade Deficit Narrows; Imports Of Oil Worsen

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. foreign trade deficit narrowed to $1.9 billion in June even though the nation spent more to import oil than in any month since March, 1977, the Commerce Department reported Friday.

Both exports and imports hit record levels last month, the report indicated.

Exports of $15 billion were 8.5 percent ahead of the May figure, and imports of $16.9 billion in June were up 3.6 percent from the previous month.

June's $1.9 billion deficit was a marked improvement from May, when imports exceeded exports by $2.5 billion. The April deficit had been $2.2 billion.

Still, oil import figures worsened.

The cost of importing oil in June rose 11.5 percent to $4.3 billion, Commerce officials said. This was prior to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' most recent price increase, effective July 1.

June's dollar total for imported oil was the highest since March, 1977, when the nation paid $4.6 billion to import 340.4 million barrels, Commerce figures show.

Accreditation Team Has High Praise For County Hospital

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

ALTHOUGH the results won't be in for a few months, it appears that Health Sciences Center Hospital will pass its voluntary accreditation check with flying colors.

A two-man, one-woman team from the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals gave the financially struggling hospital some encouragement Friday — not in what they said, but in what they didn't say. Summarizing their two-day visit, team members pointed out very little wrong with the staff and facility.

Visiting physician Rodney B. Hearne explained that the summation conference was, by its very nature, negative in its presentation. But he said the conference "does not speak to the huge number of excellent things we found in our survey."

Hearne said that the summation conference was designed to provide a catalog of various areas from the standards set up in the joint commission's handbook. Some of the comments were in the form of suggestions and will not be included in their report to the conference.

"The punch line is in the wait and see," Hearne said, explaining that the report from the commission, of which the team is only a representative, should be ready in about 90 days.

Hospitals are required to be licensed by the state. But accreditation by the joint commission is a voluntary step taken to provide credibility.

At a cost of $3,300 to the Lubbock County Hospital District, the team interviewed department heads, inspected records and checked out the actual facilities. The team found little fault with the facilities or the operation of the departments, with most of the suggestions for change directed at record-keeping procedures.

Lorraine Kabot, nursing representative for the joint commission, praised the hospital's nursing staff for what she called the excellent quality of patient care. Mrs. Kabot said the the quality of patient care reflects a lot of time spent in planning.

Perhaps one of the more stringent suggestions was aimed at the board of managers for the hospital district, which the commission members said needed more orientation and continuing education programs. He recommended a "total education process for the board," suggesting seminars and on-the-job training.

"We don't normally pass out roses at these meetings," visiting administrator James Snelling said, "but I think it's called for here."

Snelling said new hospitals are usual-

Little Weather Change Likely

LUBBOCK and area communities can expect no change in the partly cloudy skies and temperatures in the 90s that prevailed Friday.

A high pressure system aloft will continue over the area through Sunday and a surface low pressure, creating a slight chance for widely scattered thunderstorms mainly in the Panhandle tonight, will develop along the New Mexico border today.

Success Of Mayor's Crime Line May Dictate Staff Expansion

By DAVE KNAPP
A-J Executive Editor

DUE TO MOUNTING citizen involvement and assistance, Police Chief J.T. ALley is considering the addition of another detective to the highly successful Crime Line Inc. program launched in April by Mayor Dirk West.

"Cooperation has been great," the chief noted. "We've been giving a lot of thought to assigning another detective to the project."

Det. Sgt. Doyle Nelson, a veteran officer, now handles all of the tips telephoned to the Crime Line hotline, 741-1000.

But the workload has been piling up in recent weeks and investigation of tips is time-consuming. Each call is thoroughly checked by Nelson.

Crime Line Inc. was established on April 9 and the first call was received the following day. Thus far it has received 88 calls offering tips on aggravated rape, aggravated robbery, gambling, narcotics possession, burglary of an habitation, burglary, felony theft, location of fugitives and attempted murder.

Because of those tips, 33 felony cases have been erased from the police unsolved rolls. In addition, $100,000 in mer-

Pioneering Alcoholism Study Earns Honor For Med School Dean

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The man who helped the Texas Tech medical school gain national attention by including alcoholism education in its curriculum will be honored Sunday by the Texas Commission on Alcoholism.

Dr. George Tyner, dean of the Tech School of Medicine, worked to include an alcoholism education program when the medical school first was developing its classes.

Ross Newby, director of the TCA, who will present the award to Tyner said, "Under Dr. Tyner's leadership Texas Tech has created an alcohol treatment and teaching team which offers exclusive instruction to undergraduate medical students and to family practice residents."

And Newby added, "Texas Tech was one of the first medical schools in the nation to have alcoholism education in its curriculum."

In a national alcohol meeting two years ago, Tech was given honorable mention for the number of hours devoted to alcohol in the curriculum and its team teaching concept.

A survey by the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism revealed Tech medical students receive 104 hours of training in the subject, while the national medical school average is 60 hours.

When a national grant was awarded to the school in 1974 to provide funds for Tyner to teach the subject, Tyner explained to the agency he had just been named dean of the school and couldn't handle both jobs.

"As dean, I can't do it myself, but I'll organize a team," he suggested to the group, which agreed. "It was a whole new concept," Tyner said of the team teaching idea.

DR. GEORGE TYNER

It wasn't until 1956 that the American Medical Association declared alcoholism a disease, and it was years after that before medical schools included it in classes.

Tyner praised Dr. Rudy Arredondo for his work in persuading various departments to include alcoholism information in their classes.

For example, during a medical school student's rotation in obstetrics and gynecology, the faculty teaches them about fetal alcoholism, the effects of drinking on a nursing mother and related topics.

Areas at the Tech medical school which now include alcoholism in their curriculum are biochemistry, physiology, pharmacology, pathology, psychiatry, internal medicine, surgery, obstetrics and gynecology, family practice and preventive medicine.

Tyner said he is delighted to receive the award, but that it is not his alone. "It's an award for teamwork of a lot of other people."

Yet he admits that faculty members probably were more receptive to adding alcoholism education to their classes because they knew the dean of the school was interested in the program.

Medical students often arrive in the classroom with a pre-conceived, and often incorrect, attitude about alcoholism, he said.

"Alcoholism is a misnomer," Tyner said, explaining that the addiction should be called sedativism. Persons who are addicted to alcohol are also prone to become addicted to sedatives including barturates and tranquilizers, he said.

Newby said alcoholism education in medical schools is extremely important because doctors themselves often have incorrect attitudes about alcohol, he said.

"We lose 100 doctors a year — the equivalent of a medical school graduating class — to alcoholism," Newby said of the physicians who lose their license to practice medicine because of alcohol and sedative addiction.

Tech VP Joining MSU President Cecil Mackey

Ken Thompson, vice president for finance and administration at Texas Tech University, and the closest associate of Dr. Cecil Mackey during his three years as Tech president, will join Mackey at Michigan State University, it was announced Friday.

Dr. Lawrence Graves, who will become Tech's interim president one week from today, said he will appoint someone to fill Thompson's position before Sept. 1, the date Thompson begins his MSU duties.

"I'm sorry to lose Thompson," Graves said. "He was a tremendous asset to Tech."

Although few at Tech expected the announcement this week, the move did not come as a surprise. The 37-year-old Thompson has worked with Mackey for a decade at various schools.

In mid-June when Mackey was chosen MSU president and Thompson was asked if he would join his boss, he replied, "I wouldn't speculate on that. I am throughly enjoying my work at Tech."

But a $10,000 salary increase, plus the prestige of working for a nationally known school, changed that.

Thompson called the salary jump from $48,000 to $58,000 "a sizeable increase" and said he accepted the job, "primarily because it is an outstanding professional opportunity."

Although Thompson was not present at Friday's MSU board of trustees meeting when the announcement was made, he has visited the Michigan campus "several times," he said.

"I've met most of the vice presidents at Michigan State and am impressed with the ability of the staff there," he said.

Mackey said Thompson "will be involved in policy-making in the areas of finance and planning and university administration."

More specific job duties will be developed after Mackey and Thompson review MSU's executive level structure.

"Later in the fall I expect to bring to the (MSU) board my recommendations for an organizational structure that will best serve the university in the years ahead," Mackey said, adding that Thompson will assist him in that process.

Tech's fiscal year ends Aug. 31, Thompson's last day in Lubbock, and he said, "For the university, the timing is fairly ideal. The budget for next year will be approved at the Aug. 3 meeting, so the stage will be set for next year. I would have been most hesitant to leave at a time that would create a problem for Tech."

Mental retardation and learning disabilities are most common in children and adults who were born too soon or too small, according to the National Foundation-March of Dimes.

Southeast Texans Attempt Normalcy After Flood

HOUSTON (AP) — Daily life in flood-ravaged areas in Southeast Texas will approach normal in a few weeks. But things won't be the same.

"Back to normal?" asked Steven Ogden, 35. "Never."

The Ogdens, including their young daughter and dog, were in Dobie High School cafeteria Friday morning, making plans to return to their flooded home. Most of the 400 in the shelter the night before had already gone.

On Interstate 45, people pleaded with police to let them drive into the flooded area.

"You can't drive in unless you're working," the officer said. So the people, with anxious looks on their drawn faces, parked their cars and trucks under the overpass and began walking to their homes, to see what was left.

Across the street at an Exxon station, both odd and even cars were buying gasoline.

"You can't not let them have gas in something like this," explained Herman Shaw, owner of the station. He'd been busy starting stranded cars on the freeway.

One man there, Larry Boren, waited for his daughter to get a raincoat before walking to her house, abandoned Thursday morning.

"She's got a cat over there, you know," he said, walking away in the light mist to meet his daughter.

The high school cafeteria had been home to the Ogdens since Thursday morning, and the strain showed in unkempt hair, reddened eyes and six empty coffee cups before them on the table.

"We had two feet of water in our house when we left," said Ogden, a construction worker.

"No, it was only a foot or so," his wife disagreed.

The family left the house in a boat.

"We had to," Ogden said, because water was 6 feet deep in the streets.

Mrs. Ogden was most concerned with returning to the house.

"You can go home and work, but you can't stay," she said.

Sewer systems are still backed up and houses are likely to be ruined.

"I'm afraid I'm wiped out," Ogden sighed. "It was like being in the middle of a lake." Neither he nor most in the refuge had ever been in a flood.

His wife had clear recall of the Wednesday night rains.

"You'd hear dogs hollering and screaming and there wasn't anything you could do," she said, petting her small furry pup. "I'm sure some of them drowned."

Their house lost power about 10 p.m. Wednesday. Electrical transformers exploded in neighborhood after neighborhood, she said.

Before the phones went out, the family called for rescue, which came the next morning.

Mrs. Ogden said a neighborhood pizza place was offering free coffee at the evacution drop.

"The thing that sounded the best was a cup of coffee after staying up all night — watching the water rise."

Another flood victim, Brian Thompson, 29, of the hard-hit Scarsdale area, also remembered the waiting early Thursday.

"That was the scary part — between 3:30 and 6:30 — the lights kept flickering off and on and you didn't know how high the water would rise."

Unlike most people caught in the flood, he had to take his family to the high school lunchroom.

"We really don't know many people here," said Thompson, a researcher at the University of Houston, who moved from Utah 10 months ago.

He didn't know if he could get back to his home, which floodwaters had barely reached when he left Thursday at noon.

Thompson wasn't sure if he had flood insurance; he'd just assumed the policy when he bought the house.

A Red Cross volunteer there, Nels Just, said the center was for shelter, not information. Other agencies will help people replace what was swept away and try to rebuild.

But Thompson was frustrated.

Flood Insurance Claims May Hit $300 Million

AUSTIN (AP) — Flooding caused by tropical storm Claudette is expected to hit the federal flood insurance program for as much as $300 million in claims from homeowners, an insurance industry spokesman said Friday.

Claims against private insurance companies will total about $11.4 million, said Frank Lewis of Dallas, regional claims manager for the American Insurance Association.

Lewis said the loss estimate was his preliminary judgment after checking Brazoria, Galveston, Hardin, Harris, Jefferson and Orange counties.

"This is just for the insured flood losses to vehicles, mobile homes and the wind losses to dwellings and commercial structures. It does not include any of the losses insured under the National Flood Insurance Program, where losses may be 30 times as great," Lewis said.

The federal program opened a claims office in the Alvin City Hall on Friday and expected to open other offices elsewhere.

Even with the federal program sustaining most of the losses, Lewis said, "This is one of the heaviest private industry flood losses I can remember in Texas."

Clint Dare, manager of the Texas Office of the Insurance Information Institute, said he believed there were 100,000 federal flood policies in effect in the upper coastal area.

Earlier Friday, Dare said he had received word that the flooding would produce 100,000 claims against the federal insurance plan. But he said later that the figure, supplied by federal authorities in Washington, was erroneous.

The state's division of disaster emergency services said it had incomplete reports that water was standing in 15,000 homes and expected the figure would rise much higher.

Dare said there was a possibility Texas claims against the federal insurance program might set a national record.

"We are not certain it (the volume of potential claims) is the largest ever. It is certainly the largest in Texas and one of the largest since the program started," he said.

Homeowners in cities and counties that qualify for the flood insurance program may buy as much as $185,000 total coverage on their homes and $60,000 on their household goods and other possessions.

Small businesses may insure their buildings up to $250,000, with another $300,000 on contents.

Dare said he expected the insured automobile losses to be the worst ever from Texas flooding. Motorists can claim against their comprehensive coverage for water damage to their cars.

He said adjusters hired by the federal government were moving into the area to begin processing claims for damage to insured homes.

Teams of adjusters from the American Insurance Association's Property Claims Services are on the scene also, Dare said, and will handle primarily automobile losses.

Dare said the flooding was "just a sample of what it would be if it had been a full-blown hurricane. ... This is a windless hurricane, there is no difference (in the rainfall)."

Insurance experts predict over $1 billion in losses the next time the Texas coast is hit by a major hurricane and have been urging government action to make the coast better able to withstand one.

Frank Cox, state coordinator of disaster emergency services, said he thought the estimate of 100,000 potential flood insurance claims was "a conservative figure."

Bullock's 'Bad News' News

STATE COMPTROLLER Bob Bullock made a grievous error in urging the unionization of Texas' 169,000 state employes.

"The public employes of Texas, the people who keep this state running, need a real friend," Bullock told delegates to the annual Texas AFL-CIO convention in Austin. "They need someone who's going to stick with them, someone who can give them more than just a promise."

It's not certain at this point whether the controversial comptroller committed political suicide in his blatant bid for friends to help him weather the storms gathering around his office, but as usual he made his position clear.

UNFORTUNATELY, his position in this instance runs directly counter to the interests of Texas and, indeed, to the interests of the state's 169,000 employes.

"Their car is stuck in the ditch and they need you to help them pull it out," Bullock said of the state workers. "They need to be represented by the Texas AFL-CIO."

For evidence, the comptroller pointed to the 5.1 percent pay raise state employes were granted by the last Legislature.

He correctly noted that this will not be enough to keep up with inflation, but he erred in implying that the legislators would have necessarily gone higher if union spokesmen had been representing the employes during budget hearings.

Bullock went right on to say that state workers are afraid their jobs will be among the 25,000 that Gov. Bill Clements hopes to eliminate during his four-year term.

This implication that unnecessary jobs should be preserved—at higher pay—through raw union power and at taxpayer expense betrays a shocking disregard for the public interest.

THE 1,500 UNION delegates gave Bullock an ovation, of course, and this had to be music to the ears of a politician who has been the subject of a grand jury investigation and who has lost or fired a number of key employes this year amid a steady stream of criticism.

He apparently hopes to create a hard core of support for himself among rank-and-file state employes and the 265,000-member Texas AFL-CIO by suggesting they'd all do better working together.

"At last, organized labor in Texas is respectable," he told the union convention, "and it's because you have fought long and hard for the working people."

Then Bullock added: "If you will begin organizing these forgotten (state) employes and I recognize such a union, which I will, I guarantee each of you a fight."

On that point, he is correct. Unfortunately, it will pit the state employes against the state taxpayers—and that is a fight in which there will be no winners, only losers.

AN EDITORIAL:

Solons Boost The Job Ante

THE U.S. HOUSE of Representatives has provided us with another classic example of how it preaches the virtues of frugality while indulging its proclivity for extravagance.

Until Friday (July 20), Congressmen were limited to a staff of 18, including part-time and summer employes. However, with the passage of a resolution offered by Rep. John Brademas, D-Ind., House members will now be able to hire four part-time staffers in addition to the already authorized permanent staff of 18 persons.

The resolution gained wide support, passing the House 214 to 120 ostensibly because the increase entails no additional money for salaries.

U.S. REP. Kent Hance of Lubbock was among the majority of Democratic representatives who voted in favor of the increase in personal staff, according to The National Republican Congressional Committee leaflet, "News from the Other Side."

But many viewed the move as merely a first step in eventually making the additions permanent and full-time, said The News. Voicing that belief was Rep. Lucien Nedzi, D-Mich., who called the move "a staff expansion" resolution.

"However disguised, however sweetly argued, however cleverly sweetened by innocent-sounding definitions, it remains an unfortunate idea and a bad bill," Nedzi said.

He added:

"What this resolution would allow—and encourage—is a 22 percent increase in personal staff. The practical effect is to raise the allowable number from 18 to 22."

OPPOSITION ALSO was based on the secondary effects the increase would have on Capitol Hill's facilities.

"Increased staff will mean increased requirements for office space, furniture and telephones," the newsletter pointed out.

"The move will also place an increased strain on the already over-burdened parking and dining facilities available to House staff members."

Nedzi concluded:

"I personally believe that it is possible to have a better quality with fewer numbers. Let us not entangle ourselves in a bureaucracy of our own making."

If Rep. Hance and others can operate effectively and efficiently on fewer staff members than the law allows, as some do, it's odd they feel compelled to up the ante.

M. STANTON EVANS:

If Coal's That Great, Why Don't We Use It?

WASHINGTON—In his recent address to the nation on energy problems, President Carter stressed, once more, the need to press for conversion to coal.

The basic idea is certainly sound. Our supply of coal is potentially enormous—enough to last up to 900 years, depending on the uses to which it is put. We are as rich in coal as the Middle East is rich in oil.

If we could convert electric-power generating plants and other industries that use petroleum over to coal, we could take enormous strides toward making ourselves energy-independent.

A natural question arising in all of this, however, is why we haven't made use of our coal resources.

WHY, INDEED, production of coal has been lagging behind our annual increase in energy needs, and why the industry is currently functioning well below its known capacity for production (a shortfall of 150 million tons a year).

The answer to those questions is relatively simple: We have not been able to use our coal supply effectively because the federal government won't let us.

The problem was aptly stated a few years back by an energy spokesman who noted that coal, in fact, is our greatest resource, but that under prevailing federal policies there are only two things wrong with it: "We can't mine it, and we can't burn it."

The federal government, with its environmental, conservationist, energy and other do-gooding regulations, has wrapped the coal industry in a massive network of controls that has led us to our present situation—prompting an outcry from the federal government that we must convert to coal!

IF THERE were an active federal conspiracy to destroy the coal industry, it would be hard to see how things would be much different.

A number of the details that go to make the point have been set forward in a lengthy memorandum sent to Carter by Carl E. Bagge, president of the National Coal Assn.

The problems facing coal, Bagge observes, are a result of the "unnecessary stringency" of government regulations. Among the particulars, Bagge cites:

"—The virtual moratorium on federal coal leasing since 1971.

"—The unworkability of the coal leasing program being proposed by (the Department of the) Interior.

"—The Interior Department's regulations, pursuant to the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act, which affect both surface and underground mines and probably will put some producers out of business and make it impractical to mine in some areas.

"—EMERGING POLICIES, particularly of the Interior Department, pursuant to the Surface Mining Act and other laws, which will result in declaring coal lands 'unsuitable' for mining.

"—Public land withdrawals.

"—Emission ceilings being considered by (the Environmental Protection Agency) which could make unusable large shares of the most economically recoverable U.S. coal reserves."

Bagge notes still other federal interventions which have hindered use and production of coal, including taxes on the industry, increased royalty payments to the government, costs of complying with regulations, and the fact that federal price controls have held the price of competitive fuels artificially low.

THE NET effect of all these things, he says, has been to encourage industrial users to switch to oil and gas from coal.

To all of this might be added environmental constraints concerning "non-degradation" of pristine areas, refusal to permit development of coal slurry pipelines, and numerous other recent federal actions, all of which have a negative impact on the industry.

A study from the Heritage Foundation estimates that the Federal Surface Mining law alone has placed some 28 billion tons of coal beyond the reach of the producers.

In this phase of our energy troubles as in so many others, it turns out that the federal government is not the solution, but the problem.

GEORGE F. WILL:

Lower Expectations

WASHINGTON—The battle hymn of President Carter's energy "war" should be the country song with the enchanting refrain, "I Don't Know Whether to Kill Myself or Go Bowling."

The "war" still resembles the European war in the winter of 1940. There is anticipation of fearful battles, but little bloodshed yet.

When FDR wanted to galvanize the nation, he went on a 100-day dash, doing things like closing the banks. Bang! Three days after taking office his impact was visible on Main Street.

Carter flinches from the one obvious action that would have an immediate bite of seriousness: He will not decontrol gasoline prices.

Having advertised his readiness for "tough" decisions, and having said he would "make absolutely certain that nothing stands in the way" of energy goals, he left in place policies that subsidize consumption and discourage production.

The ceiling on oil imports is calibrated to be unnoticeable in the near-term. But Carter's long-term plans are noticeable indeed.

They call for expanded collaboration between the public and the private sectors in producing energy. Call it "state capitalism," or "socialism," or a "mixed economy," or what you please, three things are reasonably clear:

Much of the business community would like it.

And whether or not it would be wise, it would not be un-American.

Anyone who thinks an anti-free enterprise, pro-business policy is a contradiction in terms has not been paying attention to modern politics, or to the modern businessman.

COLLABORATION BETWEEN the state and private capital is routine in all industrial societies.

The U.S. economy is heavily subsidized, and the subsidies were not enacted over the bodies of businessmen who preferred to perish rather than benefit at the hand of the state.

In the 19th Century, too, when the national interest was involved, so was government. Building the railroads that united the United States was not just the moral equivalent of war; it occasionally was war.

First the cavalry tamed those Indians who did not see the romance of railroading.

Then government gave rights-of-way to railroads, and set rates that were not onerous to railroad operators. The profits were private; the enterprise was collaborative.

THE FACT that Carter's energy program envisions a hugely expanded role for government makes it especially unfortunate that he has remounted his anti-Washington hobbyhorse.

He is inciting distrust of the government that he proposes to entrust with "wartime" powers. The gap between his rhetoric and the implications of his policies is becoming eerie.

It would not be so scary if he were cynical, but he really seems to believe that he is an enemy of Washington's power.

However, Carter may understand one thing perfectly. Thinking coherently is not the most politically important thing a President can do these days.

IN 1976, AMERICANS found that side of Carter very fetching. "Many a man in love with a dimple makes the mistake of marrying the whole girl," wrote Stephen Leacock.

But Americans may marry Carter again, because he satisfies the Silverware Criterion.

Many Americans believe, wrongly but firmly, that no President can govern effectively. And they also have come to the quite correct conclusion that Carter at least will not steal the White House silverware.

They feel about Carter the way Jefferson felt about Washington: "He errs, as other men do, but he errs with integrity." And today, when people expect from a President little but error, they hope for little but integrity.

THE PUBLIC virtues, such as the ability to lead, and the ability to formulate and administer policies that address the great issues of the day, are considered beyond the reach of today's political class.

So the electorate evaluates candidates less in terms of the public virtues and more in terms of private virtues, such as piety, sincerity, earnestness, self-deprecation.

For the candidate who campaigned in 1976 on the slogan, "Why not the best?", the best re-election strategy is to count on the electorate's radically lowered expectations, for which he is partly responsible.

ANDREW TULLY:

Rhodesia Due Lift

WASHINGTON—I don't know about you heavy thinkers, but I'm fed up with an American government that makes of this country a co-belligerent with the Soviet Union, and some even nastier states.

I growl about President Carter's continuing reluctance to lift economic sanctions against what is now Zimbabwe-Rhodesia. In dragging his feet, Carter is playing the role he plays best, a role in which he can mouth all his pious phrases about human rights.

But what about the Rhodesians' human rights in the international scheme of things? They held elections ushering in a black majority government that probably were the freest and fairest ever conducted on the African continent.

UNDER BISHOP Abel Muzorewa, the nation's fledgling president, they have moved to establish flexibility and fairness in their internal processes.

So Carter sends the bishop back home under orders to make "administrative, constitutional, or other changes."

Carter misses the point. The question is not whether the elections were fair, although they were.

Nor is it whether Rhodesia has adopted the best possible constitution in allowing a minority of whites to command 28 seats in the nation's 100-member Parliament for at least the next 10 years, a policy aimed at maintaining national stability.

No. The point is that under United Nations pressure the U.S. is singling out Rhodesia for punishment by economic warfare.

THE UN Charter authorizes the Security Council to invoke sanctions against a nation only when its actions are "a threat to the peace."

No proof ever was offered that Rhodesia threatened world peace by withdrawing from the British Empire in 1965. Thus, the sanctions are an insult to international law.

If you want to be practical (and I do), the sanctions are contrary to American interests. Rhodesia possesses large quantities of chrome ore and other commodities we can use.

Indeed, the Soviet Union, which is never bound by principle, violates the Security Council's order by buying chrome ore from Russia—and then selling it to the United States.

MOREOVER, RHODESIA over the past several years has been forced to defend itself against Russian-inspired and Russian-assisted attacks by terrorists most of whom are based outside its borders in Zambia and Mozambique.

We are, in fact, on the terrorists' side, and we are there because Jimmy Carter, politician, fears to offend black voters in America and black African states.

Bah! It is bad enough that Washington is setting a higher standard of democracy for Rhodesia than for other African states—most of which are out-and-out dictatorships.

What is worse is that Jimmy Carter equates his position with justice. Observing his hypocrisy, one wonders if in a bygone day he would have murmured that we could, too, do business with Hitler.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

Pinch Is In Middle

WASHINGTON—If you're not careful, you just might get left out of the bad times the economists say will be here any day now. This recession is going to be an "exclusive" one.

Reserved, you might say, for the middle class.

And while most of us would probably just as soon forego the pleasure, there seems to be fairly persuasive evidence that, for those in the $14,000 to $30,000 brackets, this one's on them.

Never mind that a $30,000 paycheck, like other paychecks, buys only half what it did back in the early 1970s. The way the charts-and-graphs fellows figure it, it is, nevertheless, middle income.

And there are 25 million families out there in that bracket trying to make do on what Uncle Sam lets them keep out of it.

ACTUALLY, WHAT with credit cards and bank loans, they've been doing pretty well in the past few years.

Middle-income families have been spending it up like every day is Christmas, and don't think the government isn't grateful. Without them the economy would have fizzled long ago.

But now, according to the experts, the fun times are over. In the months ahead, it's the family with the average-sized paycheck that's going to be taking most of the knocks.

Folks in upper-income territory (anything over $30,000) may have to cut back on a few frills, but they'll still be able to afford hamburger now and then.

And the truly poor (those making less than $9,000) are bolstered by welfare, rent subsidies and food stamps.

WHICH LEAVES the middle-class to absorb the crunch—and they're going to get it from all directions. If the business slowdown doesn't get them directly, prices and taxes will.

Have a for-instance, right off the experts' graphs:

Say you're supporting the typical "family of four" and you made $25,000 last year. That may seem like a lot of money, but wait until you hear what happens to it in the financial meat grinder.

For openers, you'll need wage increases of about 10 percent this year and next, just to keep up with inflation. (If you're lucky, that is; it's running at 13 percent right now.)

But that still won't do it. Even with a 10-percent raise, your buying power is going to drop 2.6 percent by 1980.

How come? Taxes, mostly.

IN THE NEXT couple of years, the federal bite from income and Social Security is going to get bigger—from 19.7 percent of your gross pay to 21.8 percent.

With inflation, that means it's going to take almost $5,000 more on a $25,000 income to take home about the same amount, $19,553.

If you've got Mama working (and 19.4 million families are in the two-income category), get ready to cry even harder. Two paychecks that total $25,000 get hit twice by the leap in Social Security taxes, which will leave them with an after-tax income next year of $19,346 in 1978 dollars (which weren't all that great, even then).

Shrinking paychecks are only part of the problem. The other part is the possibility that, come the recession, either Mom or Pop will get laid off, since many middle-income families are in jobs that are especially vulnerable in a depressed economy.

THE HARDER times get, the less people have to spend on new cars, furniture, refrigerators, etc., so the assembly-line jobs are the first to go. Ditto (since nobody can afford to build a new house) for construction jobs. And when retail sales begin to drop, which they are, salespersons' jobs get shaky.

This brings us back to Mama. Economists say most two-income families "tend to spend and borrow to the hilt," loading themselves down with heavy mortgages and big installment payments.

Trouble is, she hasn't been in the job market long enough to build up much seniority. And when business gets bad, she's one of the first to get the old pink slip, which puts the old budget in the red.

CREDIT-CARD companies are beginning to spot more delays in settling up on monthly statements, and banks report a noticeable slowdown in loan repayments. Also, lending institutions are bracing themselves for a wave of mortgage defaults as more one-income families discover they can't afford the fancy houses they bought when they were a two-income family.

It's easy to see that any real recession won't be exclusively middle-class for very long.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

EVERY NEWSPAPER publisher in the country certainly knows that U.S. President Warren Harding owned a newspaper in Marion, Ohio. But what every publisher may not know is how Mr. and Mrs. Harding did and did not delegate authority. It is a matter of record that Mrs. Harding sometimes personally spanked the delivery boys.

Ninety-five percent of South America is closer to the Old World than it is to New York City.

The fact that a London monthly magazine for people who raise racing pigeons is called "The Racing Pigeon Pictorial" is not the item. The item is that the publishing company is named Coo Press.

Odd, is it not, that "fasten" and "loo en," which mean the opposite, mean the same when you put the prefix "un" to them?

Four times as many cases of lice infestation are being reported today in this country as were reported 10 years ago. Can you explain the why of this?

People who routinely sleep as many as nine hours every night tend to be chronic worriers. Such is the claim of a Boston sleep lab doctor. Further, he says, they're inclined to be rebellious, opinionated and anxious. Shrug.

You've seen those karate experts break bricks with the side of the hand. A client asks how much force in pounds can they deliver with a blow like that. As much as 675 pounds, according to scientific investigation.

Jest For Fun...

Two Cub Scouts, whose younger brother had fallen into the lake, rushed home to mother with tears in their eyes.

Plainview Murder Leads Followed Up

PLAINVIEW (Special) — Police Chief Alan Stewart said Friday his department has several leads in the stabbing and shooting death of a 35-year-old beautician.

The body of Lela Cook Bradic was found by her ex-husband about 7:15 a.m. Thursday at the woman's beauty shop, Lela's Touch.

Mrs. Bradic, who was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Glen Stone, suffered bullet wounds to the chest, arms and back. She also was stabbed four times in the back.

Stone ruled the death a homicide and ordered an autopsy be performed at St. Mary's Hospital in Lubbock.

Police said robbery probably was not a motive in the murder because the victim had about $50 in her purse and there was small change in the cash register.

The victim's body was found by her ex-husband, Robert Bradic, who built the beauty shop and "still helped her out," the police chief said.

Police said the gunshot wounds appeared to be caused by a .22 or .25 caliber weapon.

The Yukon Territory was established in 1898, two years after the KLondike gold discovery. The area was first explored in 1842. Gold in the Klondike attracted enough people for the territory to be set up, and self-government came a few years later.

State Demo Chairman Asks Support Of Carter Energy Program

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Democratic Party leaders are being asked to sponsor a letter-writing campaign among Texas voters in support of President Carter's energy program.

"I call on Democrats in all parts of the state to write to the president, at the White House, and tell him what you and your family will do before the end of the year to conserve energy — whether it involves leaving your car home one day a week, car pooling, insulation, use of less energy in your home and cancelling a trip which is not a must," said State Democratic Chairman Billy Goldberg in a Capitol news conference Friday.

Goldberg said he will present his plan to the 62-member State Democratic Executive Committee meeting in Corpus Christi Saturday mrning.

Another part of the Goldberg plan would call on the Democratic committee to put pressure on Texas congressmen and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, to support the objectives of the president's program.

"I think the main thing we should try to do is create a sense of urgency and full support," said Goldberg.

He said he did not think the SDEC in Corpus Christi would take direct action on Bentsen's congressional proposal to exempt part of the wildfall profits tax for independent oil producers or other specific terms of the windfall profits tax.

Goldberg also said he expected the committee on Saturday to delay action on a non-binding presidential primary to be held in connection with the May 1980 primary elections.

"I think it is the sentiment of the majority of the committee that we have a statewide referendum (on 1980 Democratic presidential prospects) only if there is competition to President Carter," Goldberg said. 'If Kennedy should decide to run, then I will recommend and I'm sure the committee will approve a non-binding primary ... My own judgment is that Senator Kennedy will not be a candidate," he said.

Goldberg said the state committee could wait until March to call a presidential primary for the May elections.

The Goldberg plan to be presented Saturday in Corpus Christi asked the state committee to:

— Approve a committee in each congressional district to meet with the resident congressman during the August congressional recess. "We will urge support of the objectives of the president's program and that the specifics be worked out and enacted without delay," he said.

— Sponsor a statewide letter-writing campaign by individual Democrats. "Let's let our president know what we will do and that we will give him the help he asked us for in this energy crisis," Goldberg said.

Agency To Collect Delinquent Accounts

Lubbock Power and Light's delinquent utility accounts will be collected by a professional collection agency, the City Council decided Thursday.

National Revenue Corp. will take over 100 delinquent accounts to test the plan, Utility Office Manager Leona Maxwell said.

LP&L will pay NRC $1,875 for processing the first 100 cases but can expect up to $20,000 return on delinquent accounts.

"Most people pay their bills regularly," Mrs. Maxwell said. "The delinquent accounts comprise only a small percentage."

She said bad accounts totaled less than 1 percent of LP&L's profits last year. Delinquent accounts totaled $197,139.96 for all utilities, including water, power and lights.

LP&L does not have an unusual problem, Mrs. Maxwell said. "All companies have bad accounts," she said. "We are just trying to collect on accounts that we haven't had any luck in collecting."

The council approved contracting with NRC on a trial basis. The agreement can be terminated by either party with a 30-day notice.

Texas Oil Marketers Meeting In Lubbock

The Texas Oil Marketers Association, in cooperation with the Texas Service Station Association and the Department of Energy, will hold meetings in Amarillo and Lubbock Wednesday to discuss recent amendments to retailer price rules for motor gasoline.

The rules, issued by the Department of Energy, affect all jobbers, dealers and individuals associated with the service station industry, according to Texas Oil Marketers.

The meetings will be held at 10 a.m. in the Amarillo Civic Center, and at 4 p.m. in Room 107 of the Lubbock Civic Center.

Featured speaker for the meetings is Tim Taylor, area manager of the West Texas-New Mexico Division of Enforcement of the Department of Energy.

The Order of St. John of Jerusalem, parent body of St. John's Ambulance, was founded in 1099. It is the oldest order of chivalry in the British Commonwealth.

Bus Fixed To Run On Alcohol

SEABROOK, N.H. (AP) — Four inventors, irritated by President Carter's contention that energy alternatives are years away, spent 55 cents to fix an old gray school bus so it would run without gasoline.

"We've converted a bus to run on a mixture of water and alcohol. It was no great feat," said Mike Goldberg, one of the inventors who work out of a firm called Self-Propelled Inc. in Leicester, Mass.

"The answers are available today, not 20 years from now. All it takes is a realization by the public that it can try to solve the problems without waiting for permission from the government," Goldberg said.

"All we needed to make it work was the desire to do it, 30 minutes and this 55-cent jet," co-inventor Michael McCallum said, proudly displaying the ¼-inch metal tube which is the key to the conversion.

Goldberg, 27; McCallum, 27; Leon Bristow, 29, and Gregg Friedman, 30, said they listened to Carter's energy speech last week and didn't like the "negative tone of the president's predictions."

"The government wants us to save oil. The obvious way is by using alcohol. But federal experts say it would take a major retooling by the auto industry to accomplish it," McCallum said.

"That's incorrect. Any home mechanic or the guy at the corner gas station can convert any vehicle to run on alcohol. It's a quick do-it-yourself project for anyone who tinkers with cars."

It was quick indeed for the four inventors. Reacting to the speech the next day, they went right to work on the 20-year-old bus one of them owned.

At the request of the Brazilian government, General Motors is preparing engines which will run on pure alcohol.

"We should have them on the market in a couple of years," said Edward Lechtzin, a GM spokesman in Detroit. "Brazil is 90 percent dependent on imported oil and they have a real need to find an alternative fuel.

"We have tested several alcohol engines but there is no great demand for it in this country."

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

These numbers are yours permanently. Check them each day for your biorhythm reading.

'Trade' Of Recognition Considered By PLO

PARIS (AP) — The Palestine Liberation Organization is considering a dramatic policy shift whereby it would recognize Israel's right to exist in exchange for U.S. recognition of the PLO, the Paris-based Middle East weekly Al Mostakbal said Friday.

The Arabic-language newsweekly said PLO chief Yasser Arafat discussed such a move during his recent talks in Vienna with Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky and former West German Chancellor Willy Brandt.

Specifically, the PLO under the policy shift would accept U.N. Security Council Resolution 242, which guarantees the existence and right to live in peace of all the states in the Middle East, including Israel, Al Mostakbal said.

American concessions would include U.S. acceptance of the PLO as the "legitimate and sole" representative of the Palestinian people and U.S. agreement to negotiate directly with the PLO over the future of the West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip and over creation of a Palestinian state, the newsweekly said.

During the discussions in Vienna, it was suggested to Arafat that he ask an "Arab or friendly country" to raise the plan before the Security Council, Al Mostakbal said.

The charter of the PLO calls for abolishing Israel and replacing the Jewish state with a secular nation. President Carter has offered to deal with the PLO on the condition that it recognize Israel's right to exist, an offer that has been spurned by various Palestinian officials. The Israelis themselves staunchly refuse to deal with the PLO, denouncing it as a terrorist organization.

The political future of the West Bank and Gaza is currently under discussion in talks involving the United States, Egypt and Israel. The Palestinian inhabitants of those areas thus far have refused to enter the negotiations.

Students Gripe While Brooms, Rakes Swing

MIAMI (AP) — With brooms and buckets, rags and rakes, tardy students at Jackson High School are cleaning the slate the old-fashioned way.

"I don't even clean up my own house like this," groused a senior named Vicky, assigned to a cleanup project after being late for English class.

A year ago, 85 percent of the students were showing up five to 30 minutes late for classes, Alonzo Gilbert, the assistant principal, said Friday.

But since the leaf-raking, sidewalk-sweeping, bathroom-cleaning details were started in April, the number of tardy students has dropped to 5 percent and has been holding steady through the summer session, Gilbert said.

"It's the biggest morale booster for teachers I've ever seen," he said.

Principal Percy Oliver says he started the work program because he decided it was better than handing out suspensions. "Two things that kids don't like to do are stay after school and work in the sun," he says.

A late student is first given an hour of detention after school. If he refuses to stay or causes any trouble, he is assigned to custodial work the next morning. Or the next two mornings.

"And if he refuses to work, we send him home and make him come back with his parents," said Gilbert.

William Perry of the county's office of educational programs said the work experiment has been so "tremendously effective and successful" that the school board is considering using it in other schools.

"I was tardy to first-period government class," said an 11th-grade boy who wanted to remain anonymous. "Maybe one minute, maybe two. Sometimes, you can't help being late...I missed the bus. I don't want to clean up the school. That's not my job. What if somebody got hurt with a rake? They'd sue."

But Gilbert says students are assigned only simple tasks and watched closely. The school's paid day custodian, Allen Patterson, does the more complex chores.

"Me, personally, I think they should send the students back home," says Patterson, but "they make it easier for the day man."

Researcher Seeking Natural Insecticides

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (UPI) — A Rutgers University researcher is looking for naturally occurring insecticides in flowers and other plants native to New Jersey.

Cecil Still of the university's department of plant physiology says such natural insecticides could reduce the chemical industry's dependence on synthetics, which generally don't get a clean bill of health from the federal Environmental Protection Agency.

The focus of much of Still's recent work has involved cinerariaefolium. This variety of chrysanthemum has high concentrations of pyrethrum, the source of the active ingredient in most household pest sprays and backyard mosquito repellent coils. Still says the plant could become an important agricultural crop in New Jersey.

COLORADO ECONOMY CHANGES

Once primarily a mining and grazing state, Colorado now draws the largest segment of its income from manufacturing, followed by agriculture, tourism and mining. Its snow-capped peaks, ski centers, ghost towns and health spas make it a popular vacation-recreation area.

Five People Drown As Result Of Collision

CENTERVILLE (AP) — A truck hauling chickens struck a small church bus Friday, knocking it into a flood-swollen creek and killing five persons, police said.

The van carried 12 persons and was one of two 15-passenger buses carrying a total of 23 persons, mostly teen-agers, from the First Baptist Church in Cleveland to a youth conference in Glorietta, N.M.

It took nearly eight hours for Leon County sheriff's deputies and Department of Public Safety troopers to recover the bodies.

Dispatcher Jeffie Hillman said three bodies were found in the bus and two were recovered a quarter-mile downstream.

"They all drowned," she said.

The dead were identified as Wayne and Betty McGee, both 36 or 37, David Williamson, about 14, and Elizabeth Bazar and Pam Fitch, both about 15. They were all from the Cleveland area.

The bus, which was completely submerged after the accident, was still in the water Friday afternoon eight hours after the wreck.

"They're having a time getting it out," Mrs. Hillman said. "They've already ruined one wrecker and it's still part in and part out of the water."

Department of Public Safety troopers said the bus had stopped on Texas 7 a mile west of this town located about halfway between Dallas and Houston when the truck struck it from behind.

The bus driver had apparently stopped because floodwaters from Beaver Creek covered the highway. "It's just a small creek. It came up real fast and it's already gone down a lot," Mrs. Hillman said.

Survivors of both buses were taken to the Leon County Memorial Hospital for checkups after the accident, but none of the survivors was injured.

Three Texans Charged In Pot Air Drop

FORT STOCKTON, Texas (UPI) — Three men were charged Friday with felony possession of marijuana in an "air-drop" of an estimated 300 pounds of marijuana.

Justice of the Peace Oliver Grove of Fort Stockton denied bond for Ismael Prieto Segura, 34, of Monahans, Texas, and set bonds of $250,000 each for Alberto Alaniz, 33, of Corpus Christi, Texas, and Raymundo Gomez, 24, of Hebbronville, Texas.

Authorities said the confiscated marijuana fell about 11 p.m. Thursday from a plane that flew over a "blacktop" road five miles east of Imperial.

Gomez was arrested later in Grandfalls and the others were taken into custody at Monahans, authorities said. All three towns are located southwest of Odessa in West Texas.

Authorities said narcotics agents from the Department of Public Safety and U.S. Customs agents assisted in the investigation that led to the arrests.

Homicide Ruled In Infant's Death

Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack said he has ruled homicide in connection with the death of a 7-month-old Plainview infant.

Jose R. Hernandez died at 4:45 p.m. Saturday in Health Sciences Center Hospital after being transferred from Central Plains Regional Hospital in Plainview.

Blalack said an oral autopsy report on the child revealed he died of hypoxia, an oxygen deficiency in body tissues.

Soviet Military Base In Cuba Said Nearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Richard Stone, D-Fla., said Friday he believes the Soviet Union is taking a first step toward establishing a military base in Cuba and accused Secretary of State Cyrus Vance of a "whitewash" for denying it.

Stone told a news conference that a "Soviet command structure" capable of controling a brigade of troops, is in Cuba now and has been "for some time."

He said his main concern is whether or not the Carter administration has the will to protest Soviet violations of agreements such as the one which ended the Cuban missile crisis in October 1962 and to insist that they be stopped.

And he intimated that his vote for the SALT II treaty with the Soviet Union may ride on the administration's response to his accusations.

Stone said the evidence for his accusation is based on high-level classified briefings and that he cannot reveal the numbers, locations, or activities of Soviet personnel in Cuba.

Stone is up for re-election in 1980. Many of his constituents are Cuban-Americans who fled the communist regime of Cuban President Fidel Castro.

A State Department spokesman said that "there is no evidence that Soviet manpower in Cuba is being organized into a combat force."

At the Pentagon, military intelligence sources agreed, saying the Soviets have about 2,000 military technicians and advisers in Cuba supplemented with some 6,000 to 8,000 civilians.

These sources say that it is logical to assume that with that many Russians in Cuba some type of command group exists to coordinate their activities. But they said there is no evidence of any Soviet combat capability.

In a letter to Stone, Vance said "there is no evidence of any substantial increase of the Soviet military presence in Cuba over the past several years or of the presence of a Soviet military base.

"Apart from a military group that has been advising the Cuban armed forces for the past 15 years or more, our intelligence does not warrant the conclusion that there are any other significant Soviet forces in Europe," Vance said.

However, Vance also said that President Carter has also directed "that we give increased attention to the situation and monitor it closely" and "this is being done."

He said Carter raised the question of the Soviet presence in Cuba with Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev at the Vienna summit and "made clear to him that a Soviet buildup would adversely affect our relationship."

"That is a whitewash," Stone said of the Vance letter.

He said the letter does not deny the existence of a Soviet command structure in Cuba. "They simply say the numbers are not significant."

"If the response to a possible or likely violation of an agreement is excuse, alibi and sweeping under the table, that is a whitewash," he said. "And it does not give us confidence to go along with agreements like SALT II."

Clovis Embezzlement Jury Picks Monday

CLOVIS (Special) — Jury selection begins here at 9 a.m. Monday in the retrial of Clara Wiehle, former Texico, N.M., city secretary, who has been accused of embezzling city funds.

In April, Mrs. Wiehle was tried for 16 counts of embezzlement, 16 counts of failure to deposit public money and six counts of tampering with public records.

A mistrial was ruled by Ninth District Court Judge Ruben Nieves after the jury deliberated four hours without reaching a verdict.

An audit of Texico city finances last year detected a $27,000 deficit. Mrs. Wiehle, however, was charged only for the money missing between October 1977 and March 1978, estimated at between $5,000 and $6,000.

Mrs. Wiehle had worked as Texico city secretary for 15 years.

Later Motherhood Brings Happiness

NEW YORK (UPI) — A magazine survey indicates American women who postpone motherhood until their late 20s or early 30s have a more satisfactory life.

The study by journalist Gail Sheehy and Redbook magazine questioned 52,000 better-educated, middle-class women. Slightly more than half who responded who proved to have the happiest lives said they had waited until they were at least 28 years old to have their first child or were currently postponing motherhood to that age or later.

The study found the unhappiest women were those who had rushed into early marriages, had more children at an earlier age and, consequently, felt trapped.

A randomly selected sample of 2,000 were chosen for tabulation. Their average age was 31. Seventy-five percent had attended college, 69 percent were married and 52 percent had full-time, paying jobs outside their homes.

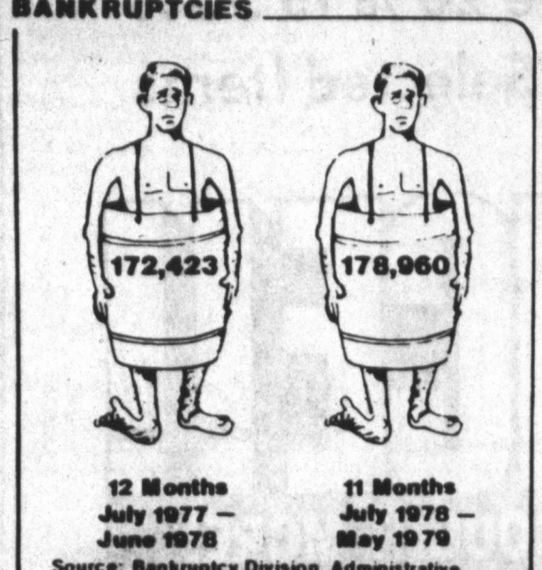
Americans Going Broke In Greater Numbers



(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of two articles on bankruptcy. It deals with the increase in personal bankruptcies and what it means.)

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

A growing number of Americans are going broke every month — filing for bankruptcy in an effort to escape the pinch of mounting debts and shrinking paychecks.

Some economists say the increase in the number of personal bankruptcies — the first such rise in four years — shows that the country already is in a recession. They also say demographics is part of the problem: A greater proportion of the population is in the young adult age group which tends to pile up debts as households are established.

The bankruptcy division of the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts reports that 4 percent more individuals filed bankruptcy petitions in the 11 months from July 1978 to May 1979 than in the 12 preceding months.

The number of individuals filing for bankruptcy reached a peak of 224,354 in the recession year of 1974-75. In the 12 months that ended in June 1975, individuals filed 88 percent of all bankruptcy petitions.

After that, personal bankruptcies declined steadily. In the 12 months that ended in June 1978, individuals filed 172,423 bankruptcy petitions; they accounted for 85 percent of total filings.

Now, the picture is changing again. In the 11 months that ended in May, individuals filed almost 179,000 bankruptcy petitions; they accounted for 87 percent of all filings. "The last six months they've gone up quite a bit," said Kenneth Kimmel, a court spokesman.

Kimmel declined to speculate on the reasons for the increase, but credit specialists were less reticent.

"One would expect bankruptcies to go along with the business cycle," said Bill Hampel of the Credit Union National Association. He said individual bankruptcies are "drifting upward because we're in a recession."

Hampel also noted that "a very large chunk" of the population is between 25 and 35 — the post-war baby boom grown to adulthood. "They typically borrow more than people in other age groups," said Hampel. On the whole, he said, the borrowers are managing well. But increased borrowing means a potential for increased bankruptcies.

At the end of May — the latest month for which figures are available — there was nearly $290 billion in oustanding consumer credit, not counting mortgages. Americans borrowed at a slightly slower rate in May than they did in April, but still piled up more than $5 billion in additional debts during the month.

Personal income is growing, but not fast enough to keep pace with inflation. During the first quarter of this year, for example, personal income rose 2.4 percent; prices went up 3 percent.

Robert Gibson, president of the National Foundation for Consumer Credit, a non-profit agency with offices in 47 states, said more and more people are coming to counseling centers when it is too late. Bankruptcy appears the only option.

There is no single factor causing the problem, Gibson said, although "obviously, gasoline prices have had a devastating effect." He said, however, that he believes the country has been in a recession for several months. "Late last year our offices started reporting that families were getting into debt at a level even worse than 1974 and 1975 in terms of the number of people having trouble meeting their obligations and still maintaining their standard of living," Gibson said.

Joe Martucci, a vice president for Citibank in upstate New York, said the number of bankruptcies began increasing in the Buffalo area a year ago. Today, he said, 10 or 20 bank customers are involved in bankruptcy filings every month. Two years ago, he said, the problem was "almost nonexistent."

Martucci said the bankruptcies he sees generally involve revolving credit accounts where you are allowed to pay a minimum sum per month and are charged interest on the outstanding balance. He said, however, that poor money management is a factor in only one-third of the bankruptcies. The rest, he said, result from a sudden change in family circumstances — an illness or a lost job, for example.

Citizens Find Themselves As Defendants In Suit

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
and NANCY DORN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Citizens named in the lawsuit filed Thursday by the city of Lubbock against the Lubbock Property Owners Association have expressed surprise Friday that they are being brought to court.

The City Council voted to file a class action suit against 10 random signers of an LPOA petition that would require a charter amendment election.

The LPOA amendments would restrict the city tax rate to the current $1.12 per $100 valuation, limit the assessment ratio to the current 60 percent of market value and require voter approval for any increase in the tax rate or assessment ratio.

Two of the 10 citizens named in the suit said they had never been members of the LPOA and only had signed a tax relief petition several months ago.

"I evidently signed some petition weeks and weeks ago," said William E. Spain. "I think I remember it."

He said he was ignorant of the court action until papers were served to him early Friday. He said he was "very, very much surprised" and was unaware of the pending court proceedings.

W.D. Miller, an employee of the Texas State Highway Department, said he had never attended an LPOA meeting and "didn't know what to do" when he found out about the civil suit.

D.L. Young said that he was a member of the LPOA, but had not been active in three or four months. "I was never real active in the association," he said. "It's been three months since I've even talked to any of the members."

Young said he had "rather mixed reactions" about being named as one of the LPOA defendants. He said that although he did support tax relief and had signed one of the petitions, he did not think he was an active representative of the LPOA.

"I think our city growth should be taken care of by the businesses," he said. "New businesses should pay the new taxes."

At least one of the citizens contacted is an active LPOA member and has been a member of the board of directors. Carroll Garner said he was surprised that the city brought suit against the LPOA because the proposed legislation will not go into effect until 1980, and "we weren't going to file suit until we had to."

Garner said that he felt the City Council pushed the lawsuit through quickly so that LPOA members could not organize. The suit, he said, "wasn't put out so that the people would know" before the action was filed.

He said that he felt the city was wasting tax dollars by bringing the LPOA to court. "It's just another indication of they way they are spending our tax dollars," he said.

He said the LPOA had not met to determine a course of action.

Sheri Porter, another of the defendants, has moved to Houston and will not be subpoenaed, city officials said.

Occupations of the other defendants range from retired citizen to special education teacher. One citizen named in the suit is a railroad employee and another is employed in a woodwork shop.

LPOA attorney Warren Goss said he plans to recommend to the association that he represent the 10 persons named as defendants both individually and collectively as a class.

If that plan is approved, the LPOA would pay for the cost of the defense, he said.

Goss said he was disappointed in the council's decision to seek a declaratory judgment because it appears to be a tactic to delay any charter amendment election until after a possible November election date.

"The petition is calculated to tie up the petitions so the November date passes," he said. "They're using the court as a tool not to submit the amendments" to the voters, he claimed.

Goss said the petition for a declaratory judgment, filed in 140th District Court Thursday, seems to contain an admission "that all the petitions are in order and comply with the law."

He noted the petition was filed "before the council even adjourned so it looks like a decision was made prior to any council meeting."

Immediately after council members decided to seek a declaratory judgment Thursday, the petition was filed.

The council's decision "was not in the best interest of everybody here," Goss said.

"To me the petition does not say anthing but the council does not want to give up its right to set the tax rate," he said.

The state laws and constitutional provisions mentioned in the petition "set minimal guidelines" for the city to follow in setting the tax rate and adopting a budget, he said.

The three charter amendments proposed by the LPOA would place "more stringent guidelines on the city," Goss said.

"There are restrictions (the city) has to comply with, but they are minimal type restrictions," he said.

"It appears the City Council is not willing to relinquish certain responsibilities."

Goss noted Lubbock taxpayers will be "paying for a lawsuit against themselves" because of the application for a declaratory judgment. "We're in the position of having to spend another tremendous amount on legal expenses" not unlike the cost of the city's defense in a suit challenging the at-large election of city council members and a class action suit to validate some general obligation bonds, Goss said.

"Where does it stop?" he asked.

First action in the case will come when District Judge William Shaver sets a hearing to determine whether the LPOA petitions signers are a class with joint interests and to determine whether those selected as representatives of the class are representative.

AWOL For 36 Years, Man Quits Hiding

SHADY POINT, Okla. (AP) — After 36 years, Pvt. D.B. Benson has finally emerged from the mountains of eastern Oklahoma, where he has been hiding since he fled the military during World War II.

Benson, now 57, agreed to face the authorities after his relatives were convinced he would not be court-martialed or "shot before a firing squad," Capt. Bill Dyke, an Air Force attorney, said Friday.

"I'm under the impression that his relatives advised him that it would be best for him to clear his military record," Dyke said.

"There's a lot of unusual events that surround this man's story," he said. "This is a very unique situation."

Benson enlisted in the old Army Air Corps in September 1942 and was stationed at Randolph Air Force Base in Texas. He vanished on June 22, 1943, and has been officially absent without leave since.

During the years he was AWOL, Benson hid with his family in the Kiamichi Mountains, in a secluded area far from telephones and mail service.

Dyke said that after Benson finally got in touch the authorities, he met with him and his elderly parents recently in Shady Point, north of Poteau.

"They (the parents) were frightened that I was going to take him away to have him court-martialed or shot before a firing squad," Dyke said. But when he convinced them that the discharge would be handled as an administrative matter, "they brought him from out of the hills so I could talk with him."

Dyke said Benson was apprehensive about coming out but talked with him freely. He said Benson told him why he went AWOL, but the captain said, "I can't discuss that."

Dyke said Benson told him he learned to read and write during his years of hiding, but, "There was a question in my mind whether Benson really understood if he was absent without leave."

The attorney said that when he delivers separation papers to Benson next Wednesday, Benson's military obligation will be finished.

It has not been determined whether Benson will receive an honorable discharge, but the attorney said Benson told him he was willing to accept the type of discharge offered.

He said he believed Benson would be reluctant to discuss his years as an AWOL soldier with reporters.

"After all he has been hiding out for 36 years, in fear for his life. I don't think he'll be anxious to talk to anyone about it," Dyke said.

'HOOKS' UP AGAINST CRIME — Tacoma "property management Consultant" Gaston Hooks Jr. wears an Army drill sergeant's hat with captain's bars, a military khaki shirt and red-stripped Marine trousers, but has no official standing to go with the uniform. The city has denied him a license to operate a security patrol, so he skirted the problem by becoming a consultant. His business boasts a light-and-siren-equiped station wagon, three "sergeants" and several German shepherd guard dogs. But police, the Humane Society and residents of the area in which he patrols, are not completely happy with Hooks' operation. (AP Laserphoto)

Nude And Headless Woman's Body Found In Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — The body of a woman, nude and headless, was found Friday in her southwest Houston apartment.

Detectives said they have not found the head.

Identity of the woman, about 33, was not released pending notification of next of kin. Neighbors said she had lived at the apartment about two years.

Police said the woman was found when one of her co-workers came by to pick her up to go to work at an engineering company.

The co-worker found the apartment unlocked, detectives said, and found the body on the bed.

Her legs and wrist were bound with electrical wire, detectives said.

Contract To Boost UPS Union Wages

WASHINGTON (AP) — Teamsters union members have ratified a national contract with United Parcel Service that is considered within President Carter's anti-inflation guidelines although it boosts wages at least 10 percent a year.

The contract, retroactive to May 1, was approved Thursday. It encompasses 74,000 UPS employees and increases wages between 32 percent and 40 percent over three years, depending on the projected inflation rate.

Tenneco Pleads Guilty To Gas Scheme

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tenneco Inc. pleaded guilty Friday to criminal charges of concealing the transportation of natural gas from federal regulators. The charges were the first ever filed under a 41-year-old law regulating the distribution and pricing of natural gas in the interstate market.

A Justice Department official said related investigations are continuing.

"The convictions today served notice on the natural gas industry that the government intends to enforce the act strictly," said the official, who requested anonymity.

Tenneco called the charges "technical violations of a complex area of the law."

The firm agreed to plead guilty and pay a fine of $1,020,000 to avoid the time and expense of fighting the case in court, a company statement said.

U.S. District Judge George Hart accepted the plea and imposed the fine agreed upon by prosecutors and the firm.

The fine was the maximum permitted by the law and virtually all of it — $1 million — was amassed through a $500-a-day penalty for failing to disclose natural gas rate schedules for about six years. The firm pleaded no contest to that misdemeanor charge.

Tenneco entered guilty pleas to felony counts of transporting natural gas through pipelines from Texas to a Chalmette, La., refinery operated by the subsidiary Tenneco Oil Co. without obtaining approval from the Federal Power Commission.

The violations began as early as 1965 and continued for more than 10 years, the government said.

The FPC, now a part of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, was responsible for regulating the pricing and distribution of natural gas moving across state lines.

By transporting natural gas without informing the regulatory agency and obtaining necessary certificates of approval, Tenneco stood to gain in two ways, the department officials said.

First, natural gas in the interstate market was subject to federal pricing rules. Gas moved without the agency's knowledge could be sold at whatever price the company chose to charge.

In addition, the federal agency enforced distribution policies. In the event of a shortage, agency rules determine which customers in which parts of the country would receive gas and the quantities they could get.

By moving gas without the agency knowledge, the company could determine which customers it would supply.

The department official said Tenneco concealed the transfer of at least 20 billion cubic feet of natural gas.

Twins Show Gratitude With Alleged Extortion

ELK GROVE VILLAGE, Ill. (AP) — Twin 30-year-old brothers who were supported for more than half their lives by an accountant have been charged with extorting $25,000 from him and threatening to slit his wife's throat, police say.

Authorities said that to satisfy demands by the twins, Lodigard Reinke, 50, had to take on a second job of delivering newspapers, put his home up for sale and borrow money from friends.

"In the last two years, the situation became more threatening and in the last couple of months it was vicious. Reinke was scared to death," said assistant State's Attorney Michael Mermel.

The 200-pound twins, Timothy and Thomas Spence, stepbrothers of Reinke's wife, were charged Thursday with theft and intimidation in what prosecutors said was an increasingly threatening scheme that netted them as much as $350 a week. The brothers were held under $100,000 bond each.

They were 14-year-olds when Reinke rescued them from a succession of foster homes and took them in. It could not immediately be determined what had happened to the twins' parents.

Authorities said the 5-foot-2 Reinke, who escaped from Nazi Germany in World War II, said he had given the brothers as much as $25,000 over the years, including $3,000 in cash in early June.

They said Reinke on Sunday night finally told the story which he had kept secret even from his wife until only days before. He and his wife and two children were put into protective custody.

The attorney quoted Reinke as saying that about a week ago the twins put a gun to his head and said they would cut his wife's throat and watch the blood run out if he didn't come up with $14,000. Reinke told police the brothers wanted the money so they could move to California.

Reinke also told police he was scheduled to meet the twins Wednesday night to make the $14,000 payment. Police staked out the meeting place. Timothy Spence came alone to the shopping center parking lot in this suburb northwest of Chicago.

Police moved in and arrested him, confiscating some marked bills they said Reinke had given to Spence, and also confiscating some ammunition for an automatic pistol.

Armed with a search warrant, police went to a motel in Richmond, near the Wisconsin border, where Reinke was paying for a room for the brothers. Police arrested Thomas Spence. They said he was sitting on a bed watching television and holding a Teddy bear. Police said they found an automatic pistol in the room.

Silkwood Attorneys Seek Interest Hike

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Attorneys for the estate of Karen Silkwood are seeking to raise the interest rate on a $10.5 million judgment in the nuclear contamination case from 10 percent to 12 percent beginning Oct. 21.

The interest is presently assessed on the judgment while Kerr-McGee Corp. appeals the case. Attorney Jim Ikard, in the federal court application for the higher interest rate filed Thursday, pointed to a new state law that provides for 12 percent interest beginning in October.

Downed Commuter Plane Said Overweight By 1,000 Pounds

CHRISTIANSTED, Virgin Islands (UPI) — A commuter plane that crashed en route to a tiny Caribbean island with a group of Texas Baptists was more than 1,000 pounds overweight, the National Transportation Safety Board said Friday.

Brad Dunbar, the safety board's deputy public affairs director, also said the weight was improperly distributed, but he added that the weight problem didn't necessarily cause the crash.

"These were findings of fact and not a determination of cause" Dunbar said. The cause will be pinpointed later, if possible, in the board's final report on the crash.

Eight persons were killed and 13 others survived, three of them seriously injured, when a De Havilland Heron propjet of Prinair (Puerto Rican International Airlines) crashed on takeoff from Alexander Hamilton Airport Tuesday morning en route to St. Maarten and St. Kitts.

On board were 12 Baptist church members from Abilene and Clyde, Texas, en route to St. Kitts, a British associated state, for an evangelistic crusade in conjunction with the Antioch Baptist Church of the island. The dead included five members of the Clyde Baptist Church.

Dunbar said the investigation team's "operations group" found the aircraft weighed 13,508 pounds including passengers, baggage and fuel. Maximum legal takeoff weight was only 12,500 pounds and the departure manifest for the aircraft indicated gross weight was 12,374 pounds.

Dunbar said the group also found that the center of gravity "was well behind the prescribed rear line."

A witness said the nose wheel of the aircraft lifted off the runway as it taxied for takeoff and the pilot appeared to compensate for this by adding power on the engines.

Another investigations group found "no massive engine failure," but it has not yet been determined whether the engines will remain in St. Croix or be taken to San Juan, Puerto Rico for a teardown inspection.

Dunbar said the investigation's "systems and witness" groups completed their work Friday, but the "human factors" group expects to finish Sunday. The "operations" group is moving to San Juan over the weekend.

Dunbar said pilot, Jose Rivera, will not be interviewed Saturday as originally scheduled. Rivera has been transferred from St. Croix to the Veterans Administration hospital in Rio Piedras, Puerto Rico. The NTSB, in consultation with the pilot's physicians, will determine when he is well enough to talk.

The aircraft carried 19 passengers plus the pilot and copilot.

Shah Lashes Out At Khomeini Rule

CUERNAVACA, Mexico (UPI) — The exiled shah of Iran, "livid" over allegations he was responsible for the deaths of more than 300,000 Iranians, Friday issued his harshest attack yet against the new Tehran government, calling it "an abyss of medieval leadership."

"The growing question is for how long and whether the people of Iran will tolerate the current regime's revisionist form of government," a spokesman for the monarch said in a prepared statement.

He said the shah "was livid and could not sit back any longer" after reading charges made by the Iranian embassy and printed by the Mexico City newspaper Excelsior that the shah killed 365,995 persons during his 30-year reign.

The spokesman said the statement he was issuing was "without question" the strongest attack the shah had made on the regime of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini since the shah left Iran in January.

"During the months of his absence from Iran ... he has watched in anguish as Iran slipped from the edge of the 21st century into the abyss of medieval leadership and mentality," the statement said.

"He has not been alone in his despair, for the rest of the world has also looked on in dismay. As world criticism of the current regime in Iran has grown, so, too, have their repressive tactics.

"In an effort to kick desert sand into the eye of the observer, the current regime has stooped to inventing malicious lies, for there is not so much as a grain of truth in the so-called information relayed to Excelsior.

"Now that regime has ordered repression of objective news reporting so that indeed the world will know less if anything at all of the fate of his beloved country.

"The regime in Iran is crumbling of its own ineptitude. Instead of building on the documented accomplishments of his (the shah's) reign, that regime is tearing the fabric of what was, and still can be, a vital and dynamic society.

"This newest bumbling effort by the current regime in Iran to wrap itself in a veil of lies and distortions in order to cover its latent shortcoming will fool nobody, least of all the people of Iran."

The shah's spokesman said although it was the monarch's strongest attack on the Khomeini regime, it did not signify the start of any campaign by the ousted ruler to fan the flames of counter-revolution in Iran.

The Iranian embassy statement given to Excelsior said that from 1977 to 1978 alone the shah killed 112,181 opponents, and spent millions on himself and his family while the Iranian people lacked the barest housing.

During his 30-year reign the shah killed 65,000 young intellectuals and "wounded" more than 200,000, while his Savak secret police tortured almost anyone suspected of opposing the monarch, the embassy said.

It also said that scores of students who disappeared during the revolution were found later in underground Savak dungeons, most of them dead as a result of torture.

Juveniles Suspected Of Car Burglary

Two juvenile car burglary suspects were taken into custody Friday when Lubbock police surprised the duo at the multi-level parking building of the College Inn, 1001 University Ave.

After being dispatched on a burglary in progress call at 2 a.m., patrolman John Blythe walked into the lot and saw one of the suspects, a 16-year-old boy, running toward him, reports showed.

The officer said he apprehended the youth and took him to the second floor of the parking lot, where another officer had a 15-year-old boy in custody. Both juveniles were held on suspicion of car burglary.

Investigation revealed that three vehicles had been broken into on the lot before police arrived.

In other activity, John Smith, 26, of 1902 24th St. told police that about $4,000 in auto tools were stolen from Texas Caprock Motors, where he worked. Smith told police that the tools were stolen by a white male suspect, about 55 years old. He said all the tools had his name or initials engraved on them.

Vandals broke several windows and poured white paint down the east side of the Oakwood Baptist Church auditorium, 6002 Ave. U, Thursday night.

The damage, estimated at $1,105, was reported to police Friday by Terry Glenn Wilson, 32, the church's minister of education. Wilson said the church was vandalized sometime between 8 and 9:30 p.m. Friday.

Wilson said the vandal or vandals climbed scaffolding at the east end of the auditorium, which was being painted. White paint was poured down the side of the building onto the windows, woodwork, bricks and bushes.

Police said they found tire tracks and broken beer bottles on the sidewalk near the church.

A painter told police he saw a Mexican-American male, about 35 years old, sitting in a late model Chevrolet pickup in the church parking lot, watching them work just before they quit on Thursday.

Floods Keep Thousands Stranded On Gulf Coast

Some Residents Return; Death Toll Seven

HOUSTON (AP) — Receding floodwaters allowed some residents to return to their homes on Texas' coastal plains Friday, but flooded streets kept thousands more stranded. The death toll from the state's worst floods in nearly 20 years grew to seven.

Five persons were killed when a bus taking church members to a youth conference was knocked by a small truck into a creek swollen by torrential rains near Centerville, 120 miles to the north, officials said.

Two other persons died previously in floods caused by three days of hard rainfall from the remnants of tropical storm Claudette, which struck the coast Tuesday and dumped up to 30 inches on the state.

"I told the people, what with all the rain and people and dogs and cats, it was starting to look like Noah's Ark around here," said the Rev. Frank Minton, whose Park Place Baptist Church housed about 1,000 refugees.

Hundreds of people in southern Indiana began returning home Friday to begin the formidable task of cleaning up after floods that also did millions of dollars in damage and washed out a dozen roads. Gov. Otis Bowen declared a disaster in five counties.

Officials said the flooding on the upper Texas coast was the area's worst since Hurricane Carla hit in 1961. Unofficial estimates indicated damages could rival the $408 million caused by Carla, a killer hurricane that left 46 people dead.

The rushing waters chased some 5,000 people from their homes this week. Hundreds of families in the Houston area began returning, but flooded streets kept most evacuees in schools and churches set up as Red Cross shelters.

Termed Disaster

Gov. Bill Clements asked President Carter to declare Claudette's aftermath along the upper Texas coast as a major disaster.

Houston Mayor Jim McConn, after a second inspection by boat, described the situation as a "tremendous disaster."

"A lot of people have lost everything, their homes, their cars," McConn said.

The Federal Insurance Administration predicted 15,000 federal flood claims will be filed because of Claudette.

The floods also knocked out telephone and electrical service in many areas earlier this week, floated sewage out of treatment plants and forced the shutdown of the Johnson Space Center on Thursday.

More Evacuated

Early morning rain and rising water Friday caused renewed but comparatively minor evacuation operations in Galveston and Brazoria counties.

Transportation still was a problem in some areas Friday. Swollen Clear Creek continued to block the Gulf Freeway that cuts through the heart of the areas affected in Harris and Galveston counties.

Dr. Armond S. Goldman, a pediatrics professor at the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston, stopped while en route to work to assist a stranded family and delivered a baby, the woman's third.

Goldman then went to assist at a high school shelter in Dickinson.

"Most of the people here were largely in shock," he said. "None had expected anything like this."

Hulen Wilder of Baytown was among those taking the flooding in stride. "We've had practice," he said. "This is the sixth time water's been in that house since I moved there in 1955."

Anna Ogden, the wife of a construction worker, whoi sipped coffee in a Houston high school shelter Friday, said she was anxious to get home because "I want to get the refrigerator open and get the food out before the smell gets bad."

The leading edge of the storm system spawned by Claudette left three Indiana towns near the Kentucky border under 10 feet of water. Nearly 1,000 people had been evacuated by early Friday but hundreds of those began returning later in the day.

The floodwaters broke store windows in the town of English and police arrested six people on looting charges Thursday, including one who emerged from a store in a power boat loaded with merhcandise, officials said.

Threat To Assassinate Sadat Reported To Avenge Ambush Death Of PLO Chief

BEIRUT, LEBANON (AP) — A guerrilla group reportedly threatened on Friday to assassinate Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to avenge the murder of the Palestine Liberation Organization's chief of military operations.

The threat to assassinate Sadat was made by the security chief of the Syrian-backed Saiqa wing of the PLO in an interview published by the official Kuwaiti News Agency.

"Saiqa will strike back," said the chief, identified only by his code name, Abu Thayer. "Egyptian officials, including President Sadat, are within our fighters' reach." The agency did not say where Thayer was interviewed.

In the agency report, Thayer said Saiqa had acquired documents proving Egypt's secret service and the Mossad, Israel's intelligence department, teamed up in staging the killing of Zahair Mohsen, who died Thursday, 36 hours after he was shot by two gunmen at the French resort city of Cannes. Mohsen, 43, was the leader of Saiqa.

Newspapers in Beirut and the oil-rich Persian Gulf state of Kuwait accused the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency of complicity in shooting Mohsen. Following his death, hard-line Arab nations pledged to help the PLO escalate guerrilla operations against Israel and thwart the U.S.-sponsored Camp David Mideast peace treaty.

But the Middle East weekly newspaper, Al Mostakbal, reported from Paris that the PLO was considering recognition of Israel in return for U.S. recognition of the PLO. The Arab language publication said PLO chief Yasser Arafat disussed such a move during recent conversations with Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky and former West German Chancellor Willy Brandt.

Saiqa and Syria's official media brushed aside Egyptian Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil's denunciation of Mohsen's murder and persisted in accusing the "Camp David parties" of collaboration in the assassination.

Power Struggle Hinted

Egypt and some Western sources suggested an intra-Palestinian power struggle may have led to the shooting of Mohsen, who often was critical of Arafat's leadership.

In Nice, French police acknowledged there were no concrete leads in their search for Mohsen's killers. Some investigators suggested the job appeared so well-organized and professional that, unless there was an unexpected turn in the case, it might never be solved.

Egypt has blamed Saiqa for a bomb attack against its embassy in Nicosia, Cyprus, a letter bomb explosion at the Cairo central post office and a hostage-taking assault on the Egyptian embassy in Ankara, Turkey, since the peace treaty was signed March 26.

Described As Front

The three attacks were claimed by a group calling itself "Eagles of the Palestinian Revolution," which some sources described as a front for Saiqa.

Saiqa's gunmen kept the Moslem sector of Beirut shuttered at gunpoint since the death of Mohsen. Armed bands roamed the streets here shooting machine gun volleys into the air. Others burned tires at key intersections. Shopkeepers, banks and even pharmacies remained closed.

The PLO and leftist Moslem allies called for a general strike in their sectors of Lebanon today, the day Mohsen's body is to be flown to Damascus for burial Sunday.

Elderly Duo Seeking To Restore Abandoned Hydroelectric Plant

STOCKBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — While the nation talks about energy, 75-year-old Mary Heather is getting ready to generate some of her own, parlaying a $5,000 investment into a mom-and-pop power company.

Mrs. Heather and her kid brother — Joseph Guerrieri is only 70 — are restoring and refitting a vandalized, abandoned hydroelectric power plant that hasn't produced a spark since 1946.

Years of lobbying, cleaning, repairing and rebuilding could start paying off this fall, when the determined septuagenarians expect their old plant to begin generating between 250 and 500 kilowatts.

"That may not be much, but if we can generate enough for 100 homes, I'll feel we're doing our part," says Mrs. Heather, a retired school teacher who lives right off Main Street in this pretty old town in the Berkshires.

The spunky, white-haired widow and her brother, a retired electrical engineer who came east from Oakland, Calif., to help out, are the Housatonic Energy Conservation Association.

The Massachusetts Electric Co. has agreed to buy power from the tiny power company at a rate based on what it would cost to generate its own.

"Plants like this were given up years ago because they were too small to be efficient. But now, with the higher price of oil, they can make money if they keep overhead costs down," says John Carney of Massachusetts Electric.

Carney confirmed that 500 kilowatts would be enough to supply power to 100 homes. He said Mrs. Heather could receive up to $30,000 a year from the utility — "not a killing" — but he added aesthetic and environmental concerns were what made the project worthwhile.

Oil costs and worries about nuclear energy are making hydroelectric power an increasingly attractive alternative, and Washington is granting funds for projects like Mrs. Heather's. But so far she and her brother have avoided Uncle Sam's largesse.

"Mary Heather is exceptional," says Theresa Theobold of the staff of Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., who visited the power station last month.

"Most people want to know 'What can government do for me.' But she's ahead of government. She won't even wait for grants," Miss Theobold says.

Mary Heather's quest for power began in 1975, when another of her brothers heard about plans to demolish the 73-year-old power station on the Housatonic River. She persuaded the town to sell her the plant, its dam and land for $5,000.

The energy association opted for authenticity in its restoration, trudging across New England to find turbines and generators that were period pieces, not new replacements.

For Mrs. Heather, "It all was great fun," until her husband died last August, leaving her alone to care for their retarded son. Now, she says, the job seems harder.

It is also expensive. She says she and her brother have spent at least $150,000 on equipment and repairs, not including their time. Guerrieri plans to seek loans from local banks to finish off the project, and the two plan to hire local residents to run the operation for them.

"We just want to make enough profit to pay off our debts and keep the plant in the black," Mrs. Heather says.

June Trade Deficit Cut

creased 3 percent from May to June's 241.4 million barrels. The May figure had been the lowest for any month in 1979, and appeared to reflect the world shortage of crude oil at the time.

The June petroleum import total works out to about 8 million barrels a day — 200 million below President Carter's newly announced "quota" of 8.2 million barrels daily. The quota is part of Carter's program to cut U.S. dependence on foreign oil

"The overall trade figures are really a little better than they look on face," said Commerce Department analyst Adren Cooper. "If there had been no increase in (the importation) of foreign autos and oil, there would have been no increase in imports."

Exports, he added, "look real good." The Commerce Department report indicates that eight of 10 export categories showed improvement last month. Declines were reported in the beverages and tobacco category and in "miscellaneous" goods.

Exports for the first six months this year totaled $83.9 billion, and imports totaled $95.6 billion.

Energy Bill Approved By Panel

inflation at a time when the country can least afford it.

"We are headed for economic oblivion and a depression. We must cut our excesses," Weaver said.

House Democratic leaders earlier had hoped to get a final vote on the proposed board before Congress begins its month-long recess on Aug. 3.

But they have dropped those plans and a final vote on the House floor is not expected until after Labor Day. A Senate vote also is expected next month.

While the proposed mobilization board has wide appeal among House members, a top-ranking congressional Democrat said Thursday he has noticed the "buildup of a fight" over how broad such a panel's authority should be.

Rep. John Brademas, D-Ind., House Democratic Whip, said some House members believe the board should have authority only to speed up the timetable that precedes a decision on whether to build a project. Other House members say the board's power should extend much farther to substantive laws that often are used to hinder construction, he noted.

Under the House Interior Committee bill, the board has authority to recommend a presidential waiver of federal time requirements only. A president's decision to exercise his waiver is subject to a veto by either house of Congress.

The measure making its way through the Commerce Committee, on the other hand, gives the president the much broader power to waive any federal, state or local law, subject to the same congressional veto.

Another major difference between the two bills involves the number of projects that could receive the special designation.

The Interior Committee measure allows only 12 projects to receive the special high priority designation in any one year, with a total at any one time of 24.

There is no similar provision in the commerce subcommittee bill.

ly in pretty good shape and added that Health Sciences would probably pass its accreditation.

"One doesn't expect to find major staff problems in a medical school," Hearne said, adding that most of the physicians are quite experienced rather than fresh out of medical school.

And, according to Hearne, he found staff morale high, despite impending staff cuts and the hospital's shaky financial condition. He said he can usually walk into a hospital and within five minutes tell if morale is up or down.

Accreditation is granted by the joint commission for periods of one or two years, depending on how many changes are needed to bring the hospital into compliance with published guidelines.

Carter Ends Reshuffling Of Cabinet

White House Thursday afternoon and invited him to spend the night.

Landrieu, now employed by a large commercial development firm in New Orleans, also has the support of Sen. Russell Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and of Ambassador Robert Strauss, whom Carter often consults for political advice.

Richard Carver, mayor of Peoria, Ill., and president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors, said that "mayors across the country are pleased to see one of their own has been named to President Carter's Cabinet."

Vondal Gravlee, president of the National Association of Homebuilders, termed Landrieu an excellent choice because of his "keen knowledge of federal housing programs and a good understanding of the economic and housing-related problems conrfronting urban America today."

But Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., chairman of the Senate Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committee, said he will wait to hear testimony before deciding whether to support Landrieu in confirmation hearings.

"He's been an excellent mayor, he's a very personable man, and he obviously understands the problems of New Orleans very well," Proxmire said. "But I think I should suspend final judgment until the hearings."

Goldschmidt, a native of Eugene, Ore., is a graduate of the University of California at Berkeley law school. He was elected mayor of Portland in 1972 and was re-elected in 1976. He is a former chairman of the Transportation Committee of the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

Carter also announced Friday that he will host a White House luncheon Monday for more than 100 individuals he consulted during his early July "domestic summit" at Camp David.

chandise has been recovered and intelligence information has been received for the Fort Worth area and local businesses. The hotline also has produced data on the rape and beating of an elderly woman in Terry County.

Nelson said he has been amazed by the response from citizens.

"Many just want to help and find the hotline a convenient way to assist," he said. Although thousands of dollars in rewards has been posted for cases appearing in The Avalanche-Journal each Monday, most informants are declining the money.

To date, only $2,400 has been paid out.

"Citizens are coming to the station all the time donating money," Nelson said. The contributions have ranged from $10 to $100. A member of a district court grand jury donated her check for grand jury service this month. Earlier six members of the grand jury, including two police officers, signed over their checks to Crime Line.

"Crime Line is valuable to the Lubbock Police Department, the City of Lubbock and its citizens. I am proud to be a part of it," Nelson said.

The hotline is but one phase of the asault on crime founded by the mayor.

Several "Crime Eye" cameras now are in operation in secret locations — generally convenience stores and other areas of high crime incidence — throughout the city.

The exact number of cameras, their appearance and method of operation is confidential. However, the units are capable of photographing a crime in progress. And, in cities where they have been used, conviction rates range up to 90 per cent.

The hotline is manned from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. At other times, it is answered by an automatic device.

When a call is received, it is logged and the informant is given a code number. The caller then is instructed to report back at a prescribed time, using only his code number. If his information is good and results in a grand jury indictment (or its equivalent in the case of juveniles), a "drop" time and place will be set in order for the caller to collect his reward.

Callers are guaranteed complete anonymity at all times.

Crime Line is a non-profit corporation and is headed by a board of directors. Contributions — which may be sent to Crime Line Inc., Box 2000, Lubbock 79457 — are deductible under the Internal Revenue Service code.

Civiletti Proposes Hispanic Advisory Panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Benjamin R. Civiletti said Friday that if confirmed as attorney general, he would establish a Hispanic advisory board to look into complaints he has not been vigilant enough in protecting the minority group's civil rights.

The proposal came near the end of the Senate Judiciary Committee's three-day hearing on Civiletti's nomination to succeed Griffin B. Bell as attorney general.

Representatives of the Hispanic community mounted the most vocal opposition to the promotion of Civiletti, now deputy attorney general.

Although the committee did not announce a date for a confirmation vote, an aide said the committee chairman, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., hoped to send the nomination to the Senate floor before Congress recesses Friday for a month.

No senator has expressed opposition to Civiletti, and several have announced their support.

Civiletti said Friday he would not turn the Justice Department into a giant public relations organization, but he believed there was a need to improve communications with the Hispanic community.

"I am totally committed to equal rights for all Americans," he said. He described the proposed advisory board as a "working executive group" and said he would consult with Hispanic organizations to determine its makeup.

Civiletti also said he would consider increasing the number of separate civil rights units in local U.S. attorneys' offices. Three units are now operating. He also said the Justice Department should be the leader in minority employment.

"Responsiveness and attention to Hispanic-American rights and their improvement" should be a chief way to measure his performance as attorney general, Civiletti told the committee.

Hispanic spokesmen say the Justice Department has been reluctant to prosecute civil rights cases under Civiletti's leadership, and they did not withdraw their complaints after his statements to the committee.

Al Perez, of the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund, said, "We want some leadership from him. We're hoping Mr. Civiletti has been educated enough to understand we have serious problems."

Carter's Agriculture, Labor Chiefs See Win

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — National Democratic Chairman John C. White told Texas labor leaders Friday he hopes President Carter is the party's nominee in 1980 because Carter can win.

And Carter's secretary of labor, Ray Marshall, said he hopes the Republicans nominate former Texas Gov. John Connally, "because I think we can beat him."

Just before White began speaking, an AFL-CIO public relations man distributed the results of a survey in which 600 of the 1,500 delegates took part.

The survey showed 55.4 percent preferred Sen. Edward Kennedy as the Democratic presidential nominee, with only 36.7 percent favoring Carter for another term.

"I have never seen Jimmy Carter as calm, self-assured and determined as he has been in the last 10 days, and he is doing it under the greatest pressure a president has had in a long time," White said.

He said 1980 would be a "showdown fight" with the "Republican right wing," which he contended is "sucking up money all over the country."

"We are going to have a close race for president of the United States, no matter who the nominee is, and I hope it is Jimmy Carter because I think he can win," White said.

Marshall told the labor delegates, unhappy with Carter's 7 percent guideline for wage increases, that "an aspect of Jimmy Carter that hasn't come across very clearly ... is his feeling for workers."

He said the Carter Administration planned to make another try at winning passage of its "Labor Law Reform Act" which would make organization or workers easier and impose tougher penalties on employers who violate federal labor laws.

Some employers, he said, fine it "cheaper to disobey the law than to obey it, and we've got to put a stop to that."

Marshall also said he was proud of his department's enforcement of the Occupational Safety and Health Act (OSHA), including "elimination of over 1,000 nit-picking regulations" enacted during Republican administrations.

"While they were measuring the height of ladders and looking for cracks in toilet seats and telling farmers that manure is slippery, workers were getting cancer. ... We are going after the sharks, because the sharks are the ones that kill people," he said.

Marshall also said it is a myth that inflation can be cured at the price of higher unemployment, saying it takes a 3 percent rise in unemployment to cut the inflation rate by 1 percent.

The cost to the federal treasury of that much unemployment is $65 billion to $76 billion, he said, "and it is a lot more inflationary to have workers on unemployment compensation or welfare than on a job."

Clements Against Unionizing State Employees

AUSTIN (AP) — State employees will not gain any benefits or improve their efficiency if they join a labor union, Gov. Bill Clements said Friday.

"I am absolutely opposed to union organizing of our state employees," the governor said. He reacted to Comptroller Bob Bullock's invitation to the Texas AFL-CIO to begin recruiting state employees.

"I don't think that will add to our efficiency of operation or to the benefits to be derived by our state employees," Clements added. "I'll do all of these things within my responsibility to see that doesn't happen."

Bullock told the state AFL-CIO convention Thursday that state employees fear for their jobs and need a union to help them.

"I've tried to call Mr. Bullock. He apparently said that and left town," Clements said. "I really don't understand Bob's position on that regard or what prompted him to say it at this particular moment."

If Bullock wants to run for governor, "He's just going to have to get in line like the others," Clements said.

The governor said state employees should not be afraid of losing their jobs, despite his ordered cut of 25,000 jobs within his four-year term.

"We have a 25 percent turn rate in state employees each year. We are in a position of not hiring, (instead of) terminating," he said.

Clements said he has not selected a date for a special legislative session to consider wiretapping and initiative and referendum.

Clements Says Flood Damage To Reach At Least $750 Million

AUSTIN (AP) — Southeastern Texas has suffered at least $750 million in flood-related losses, including undetermined damage to the state's vast oil refining industry, Gov. Bill Clements said Friday.

"We have a real critical situation," the governor said.

Much of the state's refining capacity is located in the Beaumont-Port Arthur and Houston areas, both struck by heavy rains and flooding from remnants of tropical storm Claudette.

"The petrochemical refining complex has been severely curtailed and a good many of these installations have shut down because of high water," Clements told a news conference.

"Some (refineries) also have been damaged to some extent but it's difficult to assess the extent of damage at this time," the governor said.

Texas produces 27 percent of American-refined gasoline. One-half of Texas-refined gasoline is used within the state, Clements added.

The governor asked President Carter earlier Friday to declare the flood-stricken region a national disaster area.

"I am confident that we will receive it (the designation) perhaps today," Clements said.

Areas hardest hit are in Brazoria, Harris, Liberty, Fort Bend, Galveston, Chambers, Hardin, Liberty, Orange and Jefferson counties.

An estimated 15,000 houses with water in them have been reported so far, the governor added.

Approximately 165 Texas National Guardsmen are helping evacuate residents and more will be assigned if needed.

Fuel supplies were underwater in much of southern Harris County, where the odd-even gasoline rationing system was suspended Thursday. Clements said the sales restrictions will be lifted in the entire county through midnight Sunday, and possibly later, depending on needs.

Chambers County is the only area that has requested emergency fuel supplies from the state set-aside program, the governor said. The governor's office can allocate 5 percent of state gasoline supplies and 4 percent of diesel fuel.

About four or five people, mostly clerical help, will be added to the governor's energy allocation office to help handle requests received to date, Clements said. Most requests are not flooded, he added.

Clements said he did not know how long some Texas refineries would be shut down but predicted state gasoline supplies would not immediately be affected.

"We'll have to see if the stocks on hand will carry us for the short term. By the time the short term in over, in August, the summer demand will be down," he said.

Claudette's Damage To Crops Evaluated

AUSTIN (AP) — Some crop losses are not as bad as expected from the flooding caused by tropical storm Claudette, Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown said Friday.

Prospects looked bleakest in Brazoria County. Brown said after a survey of county extension agents in the rice-growing belt of Texas.

"There'll be no second crop here," said agent Lee Wilson of Brazoria, adding there was "extreme flooding in the rice area" and part of the soybean crop was "thigh-deep in water."

Wilson also said there was a problem from fire ants, which seek higher ground during flooding and have appeared on walls of residences and floating in clumps of debris.

However, in Jefferson County the picture was brighter. "Farmers are flabbergasted that losses don't look higher," said agent Ed Weaver, estimating a 10 percent loss. He said 50 percent of the soybean crop was under water.

Jefferson County cattlemen are concerned they may lose forage that has been under water 72 hours. Cattle were moved to higher ground.

In Liberty County, agent Kelby Boldt said, "If we get a week of decent weather the problem will not be too serious. If we keep getting rain, the rice will start rotting in the fields."

Research Supports New Insect Sting Treatment

ICY STINGERS — These white-faced hornets won't sting. They have been frozen in preperation for the extraction by hand of their tiny venom sacs from their stingers. (NEA Photo)

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Stings from boneybees and vespids (yellow jackets, hornets and wasps) account for nearly 100 U.S. deaths annually, according to a report from the Division of Research Resources of the National Institutes of Health.

And up to .8 percent of the population — 1.7 million Americans — suffers at least a mild allergic reaction to such stings each year.

New NIH-supported research at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine and the Mayo Clinic casts doubt upon the treatment used for the last 50 years to protect sensitive individuals from bee and vespid stings. That method consists of injecting such people with an extract made from the crushed bodies of stinging insects in an effort to build tolerance to the antigens in bee and vespid venoms.

Treatment with this whole-body extract (called WBE) is at best marginally effective and may lead to false security in patient and physician, declares Dr. Lawrence Lichtenstein of the Johns Hopkins medical school. Lichtenstein was principal investigator for the sting-desensitization study.

The researchers found a far better defense against sting allergy is the bee's or vespid's own venom, administered in doses that are increased and maintained as the patient's tolerance improves.

The whole-body and venom treatments were compared in a test on 59 allergic patients by a team from Johns Hopkins and Pennsylvania State University.

After six to 10 weeks of injections with venoms, WBE or histamine (used as a placebo simulating the injection of the venom), the patients were intentionally allowed to be stung by the insect to which they were most allergic.

Only one of the 18 patients treated with venoms experienced more than a minor reaction at the sting site.

But systemic reactions were suffered by seven of the 11 persons treated with WBE and seven of the 12 treated with histamine. Three members of the latter groups experienced shock.

The researchers then placed the 14 "treatment failures" from the WBE and placebo groups on venom therapy for six weeks until they reached full dosage. When restung, only one patient suffered an allergic reaction.

The scientists say their study provides evidence that insect venoms are safe and effective in preventing life-threatening reactions to insect stings. They urge that venom be used to treat the hundreds of thousands of patients currently considered at risk.

According to Lichtenstein, the venom-treatment procedure is still being tested and perfected. It usually consists of six weekly or biweekly sessions in which the patient is injected with increasing amounts of the venom to which he or she is sensitive. Ultimately the dosage reaches 100 micrograms — about twice the venom in a single sting.

At that point, the patient is considered protected. But he or she becomes vulnerable again if the treatments are discontinued. Once the maintenance level is achieved, injections are given once a month.

Lichtenstein reports that in March the Food and Drug Administration approved the venom therapy and will allow general distribution and usage. However, he is concerned about the potential problems in matching supply to demand.

"The thing that concerns us now is whom to treat," says Lichtenstein. "If we put 2 million people on venom therapy, it's going to be a costly enterprise. Moreover, the patients will have to undergo injections for long periods of time — possibly decades."

Techniques already exist for collecting large quantities of honeybee venom, but collection of vespid venom remains laborious and labor-intensive.

Dr. Allen W. Benton, entomology professor at Penn State, has developed a device to "milk" a hive of about 65,000 bees of their venom in 15 or 20 minutes.

The vespid-venom supply problem, however, is compounded by the facts that yellow jackets, hornets and wasps are difficult to farm and that extraction of their venom must be done individually.

The venom sacs, each about the size of a pinhead, must be pulled by hand from the stingers of the frozen insects. A good worker can remove only about 300 sacs per hour.

The venom therapy research is supported by the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Disease and the General Clinical Research Centers of the Division of Research Resources, NIH.

Perhaps at age 5 it was childish.

But 25-year-old David Lockwood, an economic forecaster for a major U.S. airline, is committed to the game. He is one of its estimated 200 devotees in the United States and England.

Last year he won the North American tiddlywinks championship.

"It combines the elements of golf — putting and potting out," Lockwood explains. "It draws elements from chess strategy.

"But at its purest level, tiddlywinks is tougher than chess because of its estimations of probabilities. In chess, you know the possibilities because you know what each piece can do. Tiddlywinks is probablistic; it depends on your ability."

Far from just flipping six colored plastic discs into a cup, Lockwood lays a 20 to 25-minute game of strategy, covering and maneuvering winks against another player. (There is also team competition in which two pairs of players pit their abilities against one another.

IN AMERICA

The shots, yes, the shots.

They include the piddle or freeing of a friendly wink, the squop or covering of an opponent's wink, and the nurdle, when a shot leaves a wink too close to the cup.

Lockwood has five squidgers — large plastic discs used to flip the smaller winks.

As in the children's version of the game, play ends when all the winks are flipped into the cup. Lockwood holds the record for most shots potted without a miss — 722.

Lockwood took up tiddlywinks in earnest in 1972 as an engineering undergraduate at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He has since spent hours a day practicing potting and other shots oddly decribed in the arcane language of the game.

"As a result of that, I now have an agent," he laughs.

Though the Americans travel to British tournaments, the teams rarely consist of "all-stars," rather, says Lockwood, they are made up of "those who can afford to go."

As an airline employee, Lockwood can fly free to tournaments. He has even commuted on weekends to England.

It was that mobility, he says, that caused his selection as head of the International Federation Tiddlywinks Associations.

There is no money involved in tiddlywinks — yet. Lockwood and other U.S. players are tryng to establish tournament prizes of up to $1,000. The british, however, are opposed to prize money and expanding the game, fearing "the element" that might be drawn into it.

In contrast, Lockwood looks forward to the popularization of his favorite pastime. The next step, he says, will be production of a game called "Tournament Tiddlywinks."

He hopes people will then begin to see tiddlywinks as serious adult entertainment much like chess or backgammon.

Britons Plagued By Heat, Aphids

LONDON (AP) — Britons sweltered in unaccustomed heat and swatted off a pesty plague of aphids Friday, but the weatherman promised help in the form of rain.

Britain, which this year went through one of its worst winters of the century, was wilting under temperatures high in the 80s — unusually hot for this sea-rimmed land.

At the same time the east coast was cowering under swarms of aphids. A cloud of the insects even reached London and forced legislators to leave their riverside terrace outside the House of Commons for the safety of the library.

Agriculture Ministry experts said the aphids were blown in by warm winds from Europe and had a free rein because their natural enemy — ladybirds — had been killed off by the long winter. Officials said heavy thunderstorms expected by the weekend might kill off the aphids.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I was surprised at that letter from the girl who wrote and said "older" people, in their early 40s, should think twice before having a baby. The writer pointed out that she was born when her parents were in their 40s and she was always uncomfortable at school affairs because they were the oldest-looking parents present. In fact, people mistook them for her grandparents.

I wonder why you didn't ask that young snip if she would have preferred that her mother had undergone an abortion? You must have been asleep at the switch, dearie. — Still Fuming

Dear Still Fuming: Too bad I didn't have your brains in my head when I responded to that letter. But thanks for the snappy comeback — even if it is about three weeks late.

Dear Ann Landers: We built a lovely swimming pool, thinking it would give us a lot of pleasure and that our children would enjoy it, improve their swimming and have their friends over.

I regret to say our new pool has caused us nothing but aggravation. People we barely know show up for the day. Some bring their children, who fight with ours. Yesterday some people came over and introduced themselves as "the new neighbors from across the street."

Saturday afternoon I counted five kids in our kitchen. Two I had never seen before. They were cousins of the "new neighbors," ransacking the fridge, searching for "a cold drink." One of the children had chocolate crumbs all over the floor. He had cut into a cake I had just baked for my bridge club.

Wet towels (not ours) are left at poolside and, of course, I must wash them or they will mildew.

My husband and I are at a loss. What should we do about this terrible Frankenstein we have created? — Wish We Hadn't Built It

Dear Wish: Tell every person who arrives uninvited that the pool has become a problem and from now on guests are not welcome unless they have been invited by phone. Tell them you can accommodate only a limited number and you hope they understand. If their noses get out of joint, so what? With a little luck they will get mad and not come over anymore.

Dear Ann Landers: You could do an awful big favor to the waitresses in both the U.S. and Canada by printing this letter. The problem is a big one.

I am working my way through college — the same as three other girls on the same shift. Almost every night one or two customers will walk out of the restaurant without paying for the bill. I am sure the public doesn't realize that in most restaurants it's the responsibility of the waitress to keep an eye on her station and make sure nobody gets out the door without paying. If she isn't alert, and someone slips out, she has to pay that bill herself.

So, Ann, please tell one and all that they aren't putting one over on a rich owner when they pull that stunt. It's some hard-working girl with falling arches and aching muscles who gets stuck.

Thank you from the bottom of my heart for printing this letter. — Julie From Waukesha

Dear Julie: I hate to think that anyone who lives in Wisconsin, my onetime home state, would be so crummy, but thanks for the tip-off. Here's your letter and I hope it helps.

There is a big difference between cold and cool. Ann Landers shows you how to play it cool without freezing people out in her booklet, "Teen-Age Sex — Ten Ways to Cool It." Send 50 cents and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: Can you give me any idea why my navel has a discharge? I have told a few doctors about this, but they do not know what causes it. I have had blood tests and urine tests but nothing has been found wrong. — C.K.

The umbilicus (belly button to most) is what remains of that nourishing fetal lifeline between the growing baby and the mother's placenta. Snipped off at birth, a stump remains but shortly falls off. The "button" rarely gives any trouble thereafter.

The umbilicus is skin, though, and as such is subject to all of the problems of any skin. I can't speculate specifically about what is causing the discharge. A bacterial infection comes to mind, or some other form of dermatitis. A common type is seborrheic dermatitis (oily skin rash). You may have an infected oil gland cyst, perhaps a furuncle (boil).

In most instances the usual skin cleansers, such as alcohol or peroxide solutions, clear up such problems. An antibiotic cream can be used for a bacterial infection. A continuing discharge should be investigated. Some depressed belly buttons become further depressed if one gains a lot of weight, and this allows debris to accumulate deep down, causing inflammation. Simple hygiene is the answer for that.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: Do diuretic pills cause gout? I hear that any medicine that makes you get up at night to urinate can cause gout. I was taking them for awhile and had a gout attack. Do you have a diet for gout? — G.G.

Diuretics (water pills) can cause a rise in uric acid levels if taken over a long period. Of course, uric acid is a precursor of gout. If one has heavy fluid loss from the body, as one might have with diuretics, the problem becomes one of proportionate increase in the acid. That is, there is more uric acid in less body liquid. This may, indeed, lead to increased crystallization of the acid and deposits (urate tophi) in joints. That causes the pain of gout.

Although diet is taking a back seat to anti-gout medicine (to prevent the deposits), there is a sample diet included in the booklet, "Gout, The Modern Way to Stop It." For a copy, send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I am only 15 years old and have an embarrassing problem for a girl — stretchmarks on my breasts. I've had them for about six months and they seem to be getting worse. What causes this in a young girl? I thought only older females got this, from pregnancy. How can I get rid of them? — J.M.

Lots of young girls have stretch marks, and many write me about them. The skin is like any kind of membrane. Stretch it and something gives. In skin, lines develop along little faults in weakened areas. They may develop in pregnancy or when weight gain occurs suddenly for any reason. Many young girls develop the marks as their bodies go through a growth spurt at about puberty.

What can you do about them? Not much for the present except to avoid any unneeded weight gain, which can accentuate the marks. For most young girls the marks fade with time, although they may never completely leave.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I need an answer. I was on the pill for three years and stopped to give my body a break. Since stopping, a month ago, I have not had a period. Nor have I had intercourse since, so I'm not pregnant. What's the problem with me? Do I have to wait a long time before I menstruate again? — T.M.K.

Studies show that about 98 percent of women who discontinue using the pill have periods within three months. A very few may wait for extended periods, up to a year, before resuming menstruation. This is believed to be a lingering effect of the hormones in the pill on the hypothalamus, the gland that controls the woman's normal hormone production and the cycles. If needed, the doctor can prescribe drugs to reestablish periods. This is effective in most cases. A delay should not cause anxiety. It is wise, incidentally, to interrupt use of the pill once in awhile to give the body a break, as you put it.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: Can a woman buy estrogen over the counter? — M.A.

No. It is a prescription drug.

How to get rid of leg cramps and foot pains? The answer may be simple — write to Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, for a copy of the booklet, "How to Stop Leg Cramps and Foot Pains." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

The student wanted to double West's two-spade overcall, but felt that his 11 high-card points were enough for his partner to be able to make game at notrump. Also, the professor was sitting South and the student knew the dummy would be given maximum play.

West opened the 10 of his suit. East played his jack and now the Professor made the winning play. He let East hold the trick.

East couldn't lead back a spade. He tried the nine of hearts. Eventually the Professor had time to knock out both red aces and made his contract. He would have made an overtrick if West had led a second spade at any time in the play.

Three notrump made was a top score. At other tables in the duplicate game, West had not overcalled. Then when the spade was led each declarer won the first trick with his queen of spades. These declarers all made two heart tricks, but never had time to knock out the red aces. The Professor had realized that West needed six spades and both red aces for his vulnerable overcall.

"You should have doubled," remarked the Professor. "We would have set West two tricks and scored 500 points, not 400. He was vulnerable. We weren't."

Ask the Experts

A Georgia reader asks what was a "ROYAL" spade.

At one period in the game of auction bridge, a player could bid spades at two points a trick or royal spades at nine points a trick. The lowly two- point spade died about 70 years ago.

Hints from Heloise

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE:

Sometimes children can get to the heart of a problem or situation with very few words, yet at the same time, get the point across perfectly.

My grandchildren were living in Chicago during last winter's record-breaking snow storm. When we were finally able to get a telephone call through to them I asked my grandson, "How was the snow?"

His laconic reply described conditions completely. "Deep, Grandmother!" — Grace

DEAR HELOISE:

If you are contemplating moving into smaller quarters, give some thought and spend time going through things as far in advance as possible. Discard, sell or give away things you will neither need nor have room to store.

Cook in a smaller number of pans and determine just how many you have on hand which you really do not need. Go through everything with an eye to what you really need and what you don't need. Repeat this over and over.

Even by doing all of this, once you have moved, you'll wonder many times why this or that seemed so important to you before moving. — H.T.

HINTS FROM HIM

DEAR HELOISE:

Anticipating the same problem as the lady who wrote about her burned counter top, I bought a good-looking teakwood cutting board when we first moved into our condominium.

The board was about fifteen inches square and one-half inch thick and I used double sticky tape to fasten it to the counter next to the stove.

The board stays in place, looks attractive and, of course, has saved the counter top. — Michael Cunningham

SCENTING DRY SKIN

Dry-skinned women often have difficulty finding a perfume or toilet water that will leave a lasting fragrance, because their bodies don't perspire enough to emit the scent. If that's your problem try this: use the bath-oil version of your favorite perfume. It's less expensive, more concentrated and the oil is especially soothing to dry skin.

Treasure Hunter Trying Hard To Make Profession A Business

"Treasure hunting has never been a business, but we are trying to prove it can be one," Webber says.

The corporation's first investment has paid off handsomely, with a find that would warm the cockles of Long John Silver's heart.

In 1641, the Spanish galleon Concepcion sank in the Caribbean, laden with silver and gold. Many sought their fortunes over the years, probing the waters for the wreck. One man succeeded in 1687, pulling up from the ocean floor 34 tons of silver. But experts believed that was only a quarter of the ship's wealth.

The salvage work, which is about half done and is expected to be completed this fall, has brought up silver pieces of eight, silver cakes, bars and wedges, artifacts, candle holders, incense burners, Chinese porcelain, cups and plates, two ornate gold chains, an early 17th Century astrolabe and more.

Webber, 36, from Annville, Pa., has been on numerous unsuccessful expeditions in his years of treasure hunting. He says that for the amount of money that was invested, some of the expeditions were simply foolhardy.

"You can count the finds on one hand," he says.

His answer to the hit-and-miss nature of treasure hunting was to form a corporation that will finance and support research in Europe, handle legal negotiations in foreign countries and select and make use of the most advanced technology.

The purpose is to take the element of chance out of finding treasure ships that sank en route from the Americas to Europe in the 14th to 17th centuries.

"We have many more projects we are planning round the world," Webber says.

Seaquest International Inc. began as an attempt to keep together the group of specialists with whom Webber worked on his first, but unsuccessful, search for the Concepcion, and to fund a second try.

A small group of investors, all of whom Webber had known personally and who are, he said, Americans "of great recognition in the business world," put up $450,000 for a limited partnership.

The partnership, known as Operation Phips II after the Englishman William Phips who discovered the Concepcion in 1687, will be dissolved once work on the wreck is finished. Other partnerships will be formed under Seaquest, a private company, for each future expedition, Webber says.

"We consider ourselves no different from a wildcat oil company," he says.

Incorporated in Delaware and based in Chicago, the firm soon will move to Miami.

"People think all they need to look for sunken treasure is a boat. They don't realize how much research is needed — looking for the treasure registries and testimony of survivors," Webber says.

Seaquest is not telling the value of the Concepcion's cargo, and Webber would only say it would be in the millions of dollars. The Dominican Republic, claimant to the reef bank, gets half of the sales and the right to keep certain one-of-a-kind items.

The mother vessel in the salvage operation, a converted British minesweeper, works out of the naval base at Santo Domingo. The precious metals are placed in numbered steel chests and transported by armed guard to the base compound.

In a room above the admiral's office, items are inspected, labeled and stored until the salvage operation is completed and marketing begins. The treasures will be sold through auctions and worldwide marketing vehicles, Webber says.

"Concepcion is a legend," he says. "It always has been because of William Phips. We want to emphasize that legend to enhance the value of the materials we plan to market.

Worms May Hold Key To Disposal Of Waste

By BARBARA S. MOFFET
National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON — There's a little creature that just might help solve one of the nation's biggest waste disposal problems, save energy, create a fertilizer supply, and even provide a source of protein. It may have been hiding in your back yard all the time.

It's the earthworm.

The worm's potential as panacea comes from a talent gardeners have long appreciated: It digests raw soil and manure, extracting the nutrients and excreting the rest as an extremely rich substance known as castings.

A handful of scientists, engineers, and worm growers now see the worm coming to the rescue in the nation's waste-water treatment plants, where officials cope with millions of tons of sludge at a cost of $1.5 billion a year.

Sludge is derived from human waste and other organic refuse removed from waste water during treatment. It is mounting up at near crisis proportions in some areas, where the traditional choices of dumping it on land or in water or burning it are all growing less desirable because of space limitations and environmental restrictions.

What to do with all the sludge? That's where the earthworm comes in. It seems to love the stuff. An earthworm thrown into a pile of sludge, under proper conditions of temperature and moisture, can eat its weight in a day, the National Geographic News Service says.

Dr. Roy Hartenstein, a State University of New York professor studying the earthworm's potential with a National Science Foundation grant, reports that the worm is an excellent match for a mountain of sludge: It grows fast, achieves sexual maturity quickly, and multiplies prodigiously.

"The basic science has been worked out," he said. "What needs to be done now is for someone to try it out on a larger scale."

Hartenstein has found that worm castings decompose, stablize, and dry more quickly than sludge, drastically reducing the amount to be hauled away for disposal.

The castings are so rich they would make an ideal fertilizer substitute or potting soil, the scientist says. And, in areas where sludge is low in heavy metals such as cadmium, zinc, nickel and lead, the worms finally can be ground up and used as protein-rich animal feed.

One problem with introducing the earthworm in waste-water treatment plants, he said, is that the worm requires sludge that has been treated aerobically, or with oxygen. Most large plants treat sludge without oxygen, and some officials contend it would be too costly to convert.

"But they aren't looking at the long-range costs of disposing of their sludge," Hartenstein said.

One million earthworms already have wormed their way into the sludge of San Jose, Calif., in another project supported by the National Science Foundation. The worms process a small part of the San Jose area's sludge in lagoons on the waste-water treatment plant site, says Jack Collier, who gave up a 20-year engineering career to delve into worms.

Collier takes sludge treated without oxygen and converts it to aerobic sludge for the worms. The whole cycle can take up to a year.

"I'm convinced that technically the earthworm has the ability to do the job," Collier said. "The next step is to convince the cities."

So far that hasn't happened for Collier. San Jose now dumps most of its treated sludge into lagoons, and a recent study ignored the worm and recommended that the area's sludge be composted instead.

"For what earthworms do they are very expensive," said Paul Winnicki, senior engineer of the group that made the study. He said that dewatering the sludge for the worms appears too costly and time consuming. Besides, he said, the worms require too much time and land in converting sludge, and their end product contains a potentially risky level of pathogens.

But an Environmental Protection Agency official who has looked into Collier's project says that although some of the study group's objections are valid, he believes the project has merit.

"I think the idea has potential, but now Mr. Collier needs to figure out how to make his process more efficient and economical," he said.

A city that has turned to the worm is Lufkin, population 30,000. A plant being built there, financed with city and state dollars, soon will be using earthworms to process the town's sludge. Starting with five tons of worms, the planners expect to have 50 tons in a year — enough to take care of all the sludge the town produces.

Experiments there have shown that, contrary to other evidence, worms can convert sludge in its raw state. One aim of the Lufkin projert is to save energy by bypassing fuel-consuming steps most plants taje in oxidizing sludge.

"It appears to be an environmentally and economically sound process," said Ed Green, one of the developers. Green, a former worm grower, got more involved with the creatures a few years ago when a nearby town found it couldn't handle the waste from a poultry processing plant.

"It occurred to me my worms might eat that sludge, and so I tried it, and they did," he explained.

People who want to see the earthworm do its thing might catch the road show of Paul France, a Canton, Ohio, worm grower who started thinking sludge about three years ago. Now he totes a ton of worms to towns across the country, giving 30-day sludge processing demonstrations. He said he has had inquiries from as far away as Jamaica about his process, which converts aerobic-digested sludge indoors under controlled conditions.

Part of France's project includes hauling away some of the sludge of towns such as Laurel, Md., to be converted year-round by his earthworms. He says the operation could be expanded for larger cities by using automated equipment and conveyors to transport castings. "People would never even have to touch the worms," he said.

If the country ever goes all-out for earthworm conversion of sludge, Sherrel Hall of El Cajon, Calif., would like to supply the worms. President of two organizations for promoting the animal, Hall spends much of his time trying to sell the idea of economically marrying worms and sludge.

Although he estimates it would take a whopping 60,000 tons of worms to process all the country's sludge, he has a start in producing them. His operation involves buying great quantities of worm egg capsules from breeders, hatching them in incubators, and harvesting them mechanically. Now producing about 600 million worms a year, he is aiming for 100 billion.

Hall says acceptance of the earthworm as a sludge converter has been slow in coming. "Two years ago we got a laugh every place we went," he said. "Now we're finally beginning to make some headway."

Visit After 30 Years Proved Timely For Man

MANISTIQUE, Mich. (AP) — Jim Olesak couldn't have picked a more timely moment to visit his cousin, Steve Hoholik, whom he had not seen for 30 years.

Olesak, who dropped in for a surprise visit in this Upper Michigan community, was surprised himself when he found his cousin pinned under a tractor, shouting for help.

To his horror, he saw Hoholik prostrate in a puddle where he had been for over 24 hours while mosquitos dive-bombed him and a thunderstorm left him thoroughly soaked.

"What the hell are you doing down there?" asked cousin Olesak, 51, of Rockford, Ill., who was in the area visiting his mother.

Hoholik, 70, a retired electrician, explained that his woes began Tuesday when he drove his pickup truck into a soggy field into which it sank part way.

Hoholik brought his tractor out to pull the truck free but, for some reason, the tractor slipped backward and came to a halt atop his right leg.

"I was hollering but couldn't get nobody," Hoholik later explained from his bed at Schoolcraft Hospital. When Olesak saw his cousin's predicament, he summoned a neighbor who pulled Hoholik free with another tractor.

The elderly victim suffered no broken bones or bruises and said the biggest problem during his ordeal was the mosquitos.

"I tried to get a little shuteye but those things come all over you. It was rough. It was complete hell, that's what it was," he said.

"It was almost like God's will that I was there," said Olesak.

TV's 10 weeks of truth

Carol Burnett

"Everything is true; nothing is true. It's out of my own life, and it's also made up."

Novelist Laura Z. Hobson is talking about "The Tenth Month," her novel of an unmarrried and pregnant 40-year-old woman who decides to keep the child. CBS is in the process of filming the story, with Carol Burnett as the impending mother.

But how much is really true? "About 10 weeks," says Mrs. Hobson. "If I had kept a secret for 30 years, am I going to tell you now? You figure it out."

"The Tenth Month" marks the second time Mrs. Hobson's characters have been brought to life on screen. "Gentleman's Agreement," based on her novel of the same title, won an Oscar for best picture in 1947, as well as awards for Celeste Holm and director Elia Kazan.

As for Carol Burnett's performance, Mrs. Hobson says, "She's one hell of an actress and I think she's beautiful in this."

What's up in cranes?

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Fearless Fred, a delicate crane, took it on the lam this week to an apartment complex where he bunked with a dog, a cat and a tortoise, went jogging, and even took a dip in the pool before his owners caught up with him.

It was just another outing for the 4-foot-tall runaway.

Sue Briggs was first to spot the lanky sandhill crane. She was looking out her apartment window Monday and noticed a long beak poking around in the bushes by a picket fence.

Then Mrs. Briggs' neighbor, Paul Ellig, came home from work. Ellig offered the crane filet of raw perch. Maybe that's when the bird decided to stay. On Tuesday, the crane took a bath in the lake, flew around the complex and dropped in on some area joggers.

Word spread about the friendly bird and on Thursday, said Mrs. Briggs, the bird's owners came to claim the naughty fellow. "They live on a lake not far away," said Mrs. Briggs. "And it seems the bird has run away before. They called him by his name and he came right to them."

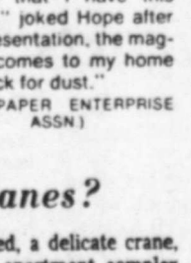
What's Up In vacations?

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — If Hollywood celebrities frequently hop around the world to relax, Phyllis Diller and Bob Hope prefer their own backyard.

Miss Diller says her favorite vacation spot "is filled with books and surrounded by acres of grass and flowers. And the meals there are simply fabulous."

The comedian explains that after traveling half of every year for work, she prefers to stay home in Los Angeles.

And the well-traveled Hope, who says he has been "everywhere twice," said in a recent interview:



PHYLLIS DILLER

"I've traveled over 2 million miles — and that's just between airports. My favorite spot is Palm Springs and I think the reasons are obvious."

Scare put brake's on racing

John Bennet Perry

When John Bennet Perry, star of ABC's new action series, "240-ROBERT," jumps into the driver's seat of the 240 team's customized car, he should feel right at home.

Perry used to be the hottest thing on wheels in his hometown of Williamstown, Mass. He bought his first car at age 14 — a customized '32 Ford coupe powered by a '56 Thunderbird engine. Soon, he was burning up the tracks as a B-altered coupe drag racer.

Eventually, he and a pal built a racing car from scratch. "We had enough power," he recalls, "but to get the car to handle right at that level of competition you needed engineers designing things — but here we were eyeballing the angle that the shocks were set on."

It soon became a very serious matter. "I was only going 125 mph and holding the wheel straight, but the car was swerving back and forth across the track — I had no control."

The experience helped Perry to reconsider his racing career. "I raced after that, but I think I was covering my act a bit, afraid to admit that I'd been scared to death."

What's up in coffee?

Nobody knows when the first coffee break took place on Earth. But the first coffee break on the moon occurred just three hours after the initial manned lunar landing on July 20, 1969.

Here are some more down-to-earth facts about coffee from the International Coffee Association:

-Americans consume 12.43 pounds of coffee per capita each year; that represents an average of 2.06 cups of coffee per person daily. At 27.73 pounds annually, Sweden leads the world in per-capita coffee consumption.

-The United States is the world's leading coffee importer. Nearly 21 million bags of the beans are unloaded at the nation's ports each year. Leading suppliers of that coffee are Brazil, Colombia, Mexico, Angola, Ivory Coast, El Salvador, Guatemala and Indonesia.

-Coffee drinking is more popular in the Northeast than in any other region of the country. Sixty-three percent of Northeasterners drink coffee, compared with 59 percent of Southerners, 54 percent of Westerners and 58 percent of Midwesterners.

-The older you are, the more likely you are to drink coffee. Coffee is drunk by 83 percent of Americans 60 and older, 78 percent of those 30 to 59, 53 percent of those 20 to 29 and 12 percent of those 10 to 19.

-Seventy-eight percent of all U.S. coffee is consumed at home, 12 percent at work and 10 percent at eating places.

-Breakfast accounts for 44 percent of all coffee consumption. Of the remainder, 23 percent is drunk at other meals and 33 percent between meals.

-As of the end of last year, the average retail price of a pound of roasted coffee in the United States was $2.36, amounting to 2 cents of the nation's food dollar. That compares with average retail prices of $5.43 per pound in West Germany, $4.24 per pound in Italy and $3.75 per pound in France.

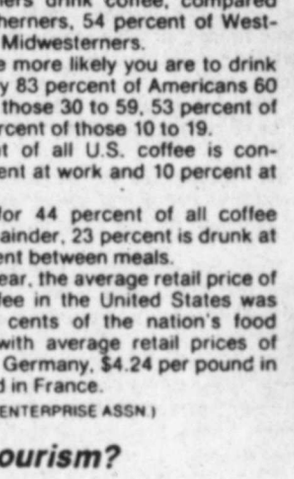
Ali MacGraw's mystery calls

"Really, it's getting scary now — baroque stuff." Ali MacGraw is referring to a rash of calls that Seventh Avenue designers have been getting from Ms. McGraw's "secretary," demanding that they get their collections together for her to view.

The commands, she told Women's Wear Daily, are delivered in a "really rude and hostile way," and reflect "appalling manners — definitely not the way I behave.

"And besides," she says, "I don't have a secretary, and if I did I wouldn't have anyone else select my things."

Why does she think the calls have been made to the likes of Calvin Klein and Giorgio Sant'Angelo? "Probably someone wanting to get in and see the collections by saying



Ali MacGraw

Lillian Carter Progressing

AMERICUS, Ga. (AP) — Lillian Carter, the president's 80-year-old mother, was still suffering "some discomfort" Friday from what doctors believe is bursitis, but she was making progress, an official of Americus-Sumter County Hospital said.

James R. Griffith, the hospital administrator, said Mrs. Carter spent a "moderately comfortable night" after being admitted Thursday for pain in her left shoulder.

He said she originally had been placed in the coronary care unit because of lack of space in the hospital but would be transferred to a private room.

Mrs. Carter's physician, Dr. John H. Robinson III, ruled out heart problems and said the "severe, extreme pain" in her shoulder "could be bursitis," a joint inflammation.

"Miss Lillian is in good condition and has nothing serious," said Griffith, quoting Robinson. "The results of a cardiogram taken and laboratory studies have all been normal.

Marriage Breaking Up

LONDON (AP) — British one-man-show entertainer Bruce Forsyth and his wife Anthea Redfern will separate, their lawyer announced Friday, confirming rumors that the couple's six-year marriage was breaking up.

Forsyth, 50, is a cabaret and television star who recently fulfilled a lifelong ambition to stage a one-man show on Broadway. Miss Redfern, 28, is a British television personality.

It was the second marriage for both and they have two children.

Lefties Driven To Smoke?

DETROIT (AP) — Pity the poor southpaws: a University of Michigan study suggests that too little sympathy with their plight makes them heavier cigarette smokers than right-handed people.

Dr. Ernest Harburg, a researcher in the university's Program for Urban Health, said he first noticed the left-handed nicotine predilection while conducting blood pressure and heredity tests in Detroit.

A 1977 study of 1,672 persons showed similar results, he said: 35 percent of right-handed people and 42 percent of southpaws puffed.

Harburg said he was not ready to theorize about the data, but other scientists suggest that more left-handers turn to smoking to ward off stress they feel from coping with a right-handed world.

Police Probe Comics Caper

SEATTLE (AP) — Seattle police are investigating a major art heist from the Golden Age Collectables shop in the Pike Place Market — the theft Thursday of more than 50 valuable comic books worth almost $4,000.

Shop owner Rod B. Dyke told police the list of missing early editions included Amazing Spiderman copies No. 1 through 17, valued at $1,000; Fantastic Four copies 1 through 20, worth $1,500; Avengers 1 through 10, worth $300; X-Men 1 then selectively, with some valuable editions left behind.

He said about $900 worth of comic books taken in a previous burglary were recovered after they were offered for sale to the owner of a another shop.

Bottling City Investigated

EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, Mo. (AP) — For nearly 40 years, Excelsior Springs has bottled and sold its own Pepsi-Cola, but now the Missouri Attorney General is looking into the legality of a generation of municipally-owned Pepsi plant.

Assistant Attorney General Roger C. Bern, said that under state law, cities may do only those functions authorized by the Legislature.

"As far as we can determine, there is no express authority for them to be bottling Pepsi," Bern said.

The plant provides 25 jobs and about $100,000 of the city's annual $1.4 million budget.

"I can't see why they would let it go for 40 years," said City Manager Paul Beecher. "Coca-Cola apparently feels we have an undue advantage, which we don't. We have to do everything every other franchise has to do."

Owl Fools Mother Hen

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP) — It must have been quite a surprise for a chicken when she discovered that one of the eggs she was sitting on hatched into a baby owl.

The Marin Wildlife Center in San Rafael reported Thursday that it had fooled the hen into sitting on the owl egg, which had been found by a ranger.

Honeymooners Hit Road

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — The first time Barney Hoss rolled his wheelchair onto a motorcycle and asked Cathy O'Neal to take a ride, they ran out of gas. Now she's making a 2,000-mile trip with him — on their honeymoon.

"I trust Barney all the way," said the attractive 28-year-old nurse.

The couple will be married Saturday afternoon and then ride off from their reception on Hoss' specially constructed motorcycle for tw weeks ofcamping and sightseeing in Oklahoma and Texas.

They plan to take part in the International Disabled Expo, a trade show in Houston next week featuring the latest advances in products for the disabled, before heading south for some beach camping in Galveston.

"Some people think we're crazy, taking our honeymoon on the bike, and others think it's just pretty sharp," said Ms. O'Neal, a native of York, Pa.

Hoss was paralyzed from the waist down after an automobile accident in 1970.

Sounds Enhance Excuses

ATLANTA (AP) — Coming up with the appropriate excuse when you're somewhere you shouldn't be — and are not somewhere where you should — may be easier now, thanks to the Excuse Machine.

Car broken down? Push the button and you hear the sounds of busy mechanics at a garage.

The machine, with a selection of 10 excuses why the caller isn't home on time, is housed in an elaborate telephone booth in the lounge of the Ladha Continental Hotel in midtown Atlanta.

Atop the machine is a pink neon sign which flashes the word "excuse" when someone is using the machine.

Among the excuses programed into the machine are: "I'm at the airport; I'm in the supermarket; I'm stalled on the expressway; I'm at a garage; I'm in a casino, I'm at the racetrack."

"Everybody wants to be somewhere else anyway," said Epstein.

Paintings Awarded To Artist

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Three paintings by American artist Georgia O'Keeffe, stolen more than 30 years ago, belong to the artist instead of the Princeton gallery that purchased them for $35,000 in 1975, a state appeals court ruled Friday.

MISS O'KEEFFE

"I am delighted, not only for me, but for all artists," Miss O'Keeffe said. "It certainly would be a sorry state of affairs if someone could steal a painting and hold on to it for six years and then sell it. Well, I am delighted."

The paintings were stolen in 1946 from a New York gallery owned by her husband, Alfred Stieglitz. The theft was never reported to police.

The whereabouts of the paintings remained unknown until Miss O'Keeffe located them in the possession of Barry Snyder of the Princeton Gallery of Fine Arts. Snyder had purchased the paintings from Ulrich A. Frank, who had received them as a gift from his parents.

"There is no question but that she is their owner," Judge Sonia Morgan wrote. "She should not be deprived of her property without having been afforded such an opportunity."

Jeans Thieves Red Menace

ERFURT, E. Germany (AP) — Jeans thieves are striking in East Germany. Newspapers report jeans are disappearing from unattended clotheslines in this southern city.

"Wash should not be left unattended in the evening or night hours," warned Erfurt's Communist party newpaper, "because currently there is no insurance protection."

Jeans, particularly those with Western labels, are prized in East Germany and elsewhere in the Soviet bloc.

Man's House Disappears

McEachern, of Locust Grove, bought the sturdy old wood-frame house in north Tulsa about two months ago when he learned it was to be moved because of an expressway construction. He planned to move it to his acreage near Rose, Okla.

Last Monday he drove to it and stared in disbelief at a bare foundation. The last time he had seen it was about two weeks ago when he was in Tulsa to do some work on it. He had not contracted yet to have it moved.

"You don't accidentally move a house," he said. "You have to jack it up and then it takes two or three days before you can get it out on the streets."

McEachern filed the report with the Tulsa Police Department who listed it under grand larceny. Detective Tom Nolan said the missing house report is a first for him. But at leasthe won't ave to check pawn shops.

Lubbock Gold Shopping Still Not Diminishing

By NANCY ALLEN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Gold, in spite of its skyrocketing price on world markets, is becoming an increasingly popular investment among Lubbockites; and demand for gold jewelry around the city has diminished little if any during the past year, say local brokers and jewelers.

Since the beginning of civilization, the precious yellow metal has held an allure for man based on its beauty, rarity and practicality. But seldom — if ever — has there been a worldwide "gold rush" to match the present situation.

Heading the list of reasons to buy it here and now, however, is its rising value against the U.S. dollar, according to Lubbock commodity and coin brokers.

"When people become wary about the dollar, they begin to transfer their assets to gold," said Jobe Moss of Conti-Commodity Services, Inc.

By all indications, Lubbockites are doing just that.

"There has been no drop at all in our (gold trading) business, in fact it's been extremely good," said Moss. "People want their money in basic commodities," he commented.

"Business has increased remarkably," echoed Charlie McQueen, who trades gold futures contracts on the International Monetary Market for E.F. Hutton. "People are using gold as a hedge against inflation.'

McQueen blamed inflation, the interest rate and lack of confidence in the Carter administration — in that order — for the current high price of gold.

Gold's attraction for investors, say those who sell and trade it, is its ability to increase in value in the face of the declining dollar.

While the price of the dollar on world markets has fallen as a result of President Carter's economic and energy policies — or lack thereof — gold has become stronger in value as investors convert their assets by buying it, Lubbock brokers agree.

He characterized the attitude of his clientele as one of "go ahead and buy the gold now, it's only going to get higher."

Moss indicated while that outlook helps fuel inflation by further sapping the dollar's strength, it could be profitable.

"Right now the potential to make money is good," he said. "I think we'll see gold at $320 and $340 in the next six months." It has been around $307 a troy ounce recently.

When and if the price of gold will ever take a significant downward turn "is what everybody wants to know, of course," commented IMM spokesman Warren Moulds.

Moulds noted "gold has come down somewhat from its high, that's natural. It's like any commodity — people are trying to take their profits."

Though Moss foresees the price of gold continuing to escalate, he predicts "there's going to be a point where it gets extremely high and people start getting wary."

He did not, however, name that point, but cautioned, "remember, the futures market goes down faster than it goes up!"

"Ever since 1975 when it became legal for Americans to own gold, Lubbockites have played an active part in the market. People are becoming very knowledgeable," he said.

Lubbockites trading gold on the futures market are, in market terminology, "speculators," McQueen said. They buy contracts hoping the price will rise and sell them hoping it will drop, he explained.

Unlike "hedgers," speculators never intend to take on the commodity.

"We get calls all the time from people who used to play the stock market," McQueen commented. "Now they're trading commodities."

Lubbock gold coin dealers also have experienced a surge in business which they say in undiminished by the price of gold.

"Business is up tremendously," commented John A. Roberts, a local dealer in rare coins. "I've had more calls on gold since the price went over $300 than ever before."

Roberts, who sells U.S. gold pieces and silver coins from a vaulted stock, also attributes the increase in demand for gold to "the decline in the purchasing power of the dollar."

He says he sees "wealthier people and businessmen" buying gold coins in large quantities, while buyers with smaller assets buy the smaller gold coins and "junk" silver — U.S. coins minted before 1964.

Jerry Coleman of Mako Gold, a local brokerage house for "low premium bullion coins," enthusiastically agreed, "so far this has been one of our best months."

The most popular form of gold on the Lubbock market is the South African Krugerrand, Coleman said, which currently sells at about $322 each, based on a lot of 10. The Krugerrand contains one troy ounce of gold.

"Gold is seen as a stable store of value," he reasoned. "More Americans than ever before are getting into the gold market. Buyers are all types of people — wealthy, average income and even below average income."

Howard Yandell, president of First National Bank, which does low volume buying of gold coins as a service to bank customers, disagreed, however.

Acknowledging "we probably are dealing with a different clientele; people with higher incomes who buy gold as an investment," Yandell said he has seen a 50 percent decline in demand for Krugerrands in the past year.

Yandell termed the current gold buying spree "panicky. It's not so much investment as fear of the dollar," he commented.

He pegged the turning point for First National gold buyers at $275. "People get very cautious when the price goes up so fast," Yandell said.

Doctor Testifies On Controlling Self-Inflicted Wounds' Severity

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A former Army doctor testified Friday in the triple-murder trial of Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald that the depth of a self-inflicted wound could be controlled.

Dr. Severt Jacobson, now a neurosurgeon in Pinehurst, N.C., said that since an earlier Army hearing on charges that MacDonald killed his family, he has decided, "if one were to grab the knife carefully," using a thumb as a brake, "you would only go in as far as you wanted to go."

But Jacobson said he was unable to say whether a chest wound MacDonald suffered was self-inflicted.

MacDonald, 35, now of Huntington Beach, Calif., is charged with killing his pregnant wife Colette, 26, and daughters Kimberly, 5, and Kristen, 2, while he was a Green Beret doctor in 1970. The government claims his own few wounds were self-inflicted or made by his wife in defense.

MacDonald was indicted by a federal grand jury in 1975. The trial started last week after pretrial appeals were exhausted. He currently is an emergency room physician in Long Beach, Calif.

Jacobson was the first doctor to examine MacDonald when he was brought into the Fort Bragg hospital. In 1970, he testified at the Army's hearing, in which the Army found the charges "not true."

Friday, he described most of MacDonald's wounds as superficial, but he said one stab wound partially collapsed MacDonald's right lung and was potentially dangerous.

"Could a doctor reasonably estimate or guess what the consequences would be?" prosecutor James Blackburn asked of the chest wound.

"Statistically, he could guess ... statistically, the risk is relatively small," Jacobson replied.

A former emergency room technician said Friday that MacDonald was not in shock when he was taken to the hospital, and investigators said he was able to give fairly coherent statements.

Paul Connolly, a former Army investigator, said MacDonald's answers about Kristen were evasive. "The only time he really showed emotion was when he was asked about the youngest girl (Kristen)," he said.

"A couple of things Dr. MacDonald told me didn't ring true," Connolly said. Connolly says MacDonald told him rainwater was pouring off the intruders, but he found no wet spots. MacDonald also told him, Connolly said, that he moved Kristen's body, but he found no evidence of that.

Convenience Store In Plainview Robbed

A-J Correspondent

PLAINVIEW — Two Mexican-American armed robbers hit the Alsup's convenience store on Quincy Street about 11 p.m. Thursday, making off with an undetermined amount of cash and checks from store attendant Wanda Allen.

The attendant told investigating officers she had been in the process of transferring funds from the cash registers to a floor safe when the bandits entered. She said one produced a pistol, telling her, "Give us the money or we'll blow your head off."

The two proceeded out of the store on foot, she told police.

Both men were described as being in their 20s, of medium height and wearing blue jeans and tank-type shirts. One had shoulder-length hair, while the other had long hair and was wearing glasses, police said.

South Pacific Islands Growing In Stature

By DAVID ROBIE
(c) 1979 Pacific News Service

TONGA — Yet another South Pacific state has moved off the pages of the offbeat tourist brochures and into the United Nations. The Gilbert Islands, which straddle the equator some 2,500 miles north of New Zealand, became independent on July 12, under the name of Kiribati, which is pronounced, confusingly, Kiribas.

After 87 years under British rule, the group of a dozen tiny islands, spanning 5 million square miles of ocean, will join the ranks of emerging nations in one of the fastest changing and most strategically important regions of the world.

Kiribati, with 52,000 people, becomes a republic and joins the British Commonwealth as its 41st member. The first president is Ieremia Tabai, who was elected Chief Minister by the House of Assembly after general elections in February 1978.

Eight island nations in the South Pacific have become independent since 1962.

Last year the Solomon Islands, with a population of around 200,000, and Tuvalu, population 8,000 — formerly the Ellice Islands — also became independent. The Anglo-French condominium of New Hebrides is expected to follow next year.

The Solomons' capital of Honiara is hosting this year's summit of the South Pacific Forum, a loosely-knit coalition of pocket nations controlling vast stretches of ocean and valuable marine resources.

Powerful nations such as China, Japan, the Soviet Union and the United States have revealed growing awareness of the region because of the newly declared 200-mile economic zones and the strategic positions of the countries on air and sea routes.

And old-time colonial powers like Britain and France have revived their flagging interest while many changes have gone on barely noticed by the rest of the world.

John Dorrance, a U.S. State Department spokesman for the region, said during a recent South Pacific tour that the U.S. wanted to play a greater role but without becoming the "big boy."

He admitted that because the South Pacific had been a quiet political and economic backwater in the past, it had been a neglected part of American foreign policy. However, he predicted that American Samoa would eventually become more actively involved with its South Pacific neighbors and the free-association Micronesian states were likely to seek membership in the Forum.

> 'No blood has been spilt from any country in the region and that is something we're proud of.'

For the first time, the United States has opened an embassy in the Fijian capital of Suva.

Young Vivian, general secretary of the South Pacific Commission, a regional organization grouping Forum countries with Britain, France and the U.S., points out the Pacific road to independence has been peaceful. "No blood has been spilt from any country in the region and that is something we're proud of."

The Soviet Union upset the political applecart in the region three years ago when it made overtures to Tonga and Western Samoa, offering aid in return for the opportunity to set up fishing bases.

Alarmed by the prospect, Australia pressured the U.S. into exerting greater influence, but since then other countries such as China, Japan, Taiwan and even Libya have shown an interest in the South Pacific.

For the Pacific leaders themselves, controlling nearly 48 million square miles of water and fish resources worth about $1 billion a year, there are increasing domestic and international challenges.

Western Samoan Premier Tupuola Efi, who recently survived a leadership struggle, sums up the international difficulties as remoteness and isolation from the rest of the world and dependence on external trade.

He admits: "The human, natural and economic resources aren't present to enable many small island states to go it alone. The attraction for regional action are inviting if not irresistible."

But the diverse range of people and backgrounds in the South Pacific is likely to make a search for regional cooperation and identity difficult.

The countries vary from phosphate-rich Nauru, the world's smallest and wealthiest nation in terms of average annual income, to Tuvalu, the world's second-smallest nation which probably raises more money from postage stamps than any other revenue source.

Larger countries like Papua New Guinea and Fiji are seeking tight control over their own affairs while several states believe the old colonial powers still have a key role to play.

The islanders are forced to look to the ocean, their traditional resource, as the great hope for economic development.

Although the South Pacific countries (apart from Australia and New Zealand) don't have the technology to take over the fishing grounds, millions of dollars can be raised through selling licenses to foreign nations wanting to exploit the ocean.

Japan has offered joint ventures to several Pacific countries to use marine resources and Tonga is about to launch a small-scale commercial fishing industry of its own. But views differ widely over how far the South Pacific nations should chase economic development.

Many people feel that already respected traditions and cultures have been steadily eroded, or destroyed, by a headlong plunge into western-style development.

ST. LOUIS LOSING

St. Louis has been losing population faster than any other major city, although its suburbs are growing at an average rate, the Conference Board reports. One reason: the center city dweller's average income is exceptionally low. Less than 3 percent of families in St. Louis proper make over $25,000 a year, and well over 40 percent earn less than $10,000 annually.

Strike Drains Life From Tiny Coal Town

By TOM TIEDE

ST. CHARLES, Va. (NEA) — There is neither grace nor beauty in this isolated Appalachian village, but there is something that should be more valuable for the times. Coal. Tiny St. Charles sits atop a pair of the largest and potentially richest bituminous coal seams in Virginia's hill country.

TOM TIEDE

So it is that the community might well be bustling about now. The demand for coal, as an alternative to oil, is soaring, the cost of the black rock has quadrupled in the last five years, and coal towns throughout the nation are growing, planning, and prospering as they never have before.

And yet St. Charles is not booming. It's busting. The main street is deserted at high noon, and many stores have been abandoned or boarded up. Coal mines populate the flanks of the town in profusion, but most of them are closed. St. Charles looks like the 1930s; it's deeply depressed, and dying.

The reason for this poverty, in the sight of plenty, is a protracted labor dispute. In December 1977, local members of the United Mine Workers walked out on strike and they haven't returned. According to St. Charles Mayor John Mooneyham, the result has been more than 19 months of "disaster."

Mooneyham, who also owns a hardware shop, says business has dropped 33 percent since before the strike, "and it wasn't good then." Unemployment is said to be above 30 percent. Even church attendance is suffering; Baptist pastor Eugene Huff says his congregation and collections have been cut in half.

Welfare helps, of course. And food stamps proliferate. But the fact that no one is starving is scant consolation. Proud men sit idly on front porches, wrinkled women try to coax green gardens from the black earth. Mayor Mooneyham says emotions have been drained: "Everyone is all cried out."

The locals claim it wasn't always this way in St.Charles. In the 1950s the town was one of the most flourishing in southwest Virginia. A grocer remembers that it was difficult to keep his shelves stocked in those days, "and if you wanted to cross the street you'd wait five minutes for traffic."

Then the mining companies decided that the most easily extractable coal was diminishing, and larger concerns moved away. After that the federal government added to the community problems when it legislated new standards for clean air; the coal here is sulfurous, hence its commercial value plunged.

But new hopes were formed in the early part of this decade. As crude oil grew scarce, the coal mine activity increased here as elsewhere. Men started going back to work. Wages began to climb. Appalachia thrived, and Mayor Mooneyham says it looked as if St. Charles was on the way back to glory.

It wasn't. When the mines were struck in 1977 the UMW demanded more money, better benefits, and safer working conditions. Mine owners said it was too much and they meant it. Bigger companies say they've closed forever here; some smaller operators have gotten out of the business altogether.

Now the UMW strike sign at the entrance to town is weathered and peeling. An accompanying American flag is faded and threadbare. State police come into the community often, looking for strike disruptions, but things are mostly quiet; even strikers admit they are tired of yelling at occasional scabs.

This isn't to say there is no tension after nearly two years. Pastor Huff says most people in town own guns, "and most of them have grudges to settle." On Saturday nights, unemployed men drink whiskey from Coke bottles outside the Cavalier Cafe, and wait impatiently for the inevitable brawls.

Not everyone fights each other. Even in dispair, some people fight for St. Charles. Residents have held bake sales and dances, for example, to raise money for a community health center. And Mooneyham has gotten federal funds to hire men to keep the town's principal thoroughfare swept and tidy.

In other words, the community keeps trying. Huff says the one positive aspect of the crisis is that it's made some townfolk realize their interdependency. Accordingly, despite slim revenues, Huff's church is tapping a $29,000 savings account to give emergency assistance to the needy.

Alas, the tapping is becoming more and more frequent. The local UMW chapter is no longer able to give $100 in weekly benefits to its members. Times are so hard, actually, that the union has been forced to move from its prominent brick headquarters to a clapboard office across the avenue.

UMW insists things will get better. But as everything else, faith is on the decline in St. Charles. Many of the strikers have moved on. The population has fallen to about 400 people. And few of those who remain truly believe they will ever profit from the awesome fortune beneath their feet.

MEAT IMPORTS UP

WASHINGTON (AP) — Meat imports are up about 18 percent from a year ago. U.S. Customs figures through June show that 835.9 million pounds of meat, mostly lower-grade beef used for hamburger, entered the United States, compared to 709.7 million in the first half of last year.

PLANT SITE — This is the Vertac Inc. plant at Jacksonville, Ark. which produced the toxic chemical dioxin that has been found in areas near the plant. (AP Laserphoto)

Pollution Comes To Delta; Bayou Under Quarantine

Today's FOCUS

JACKSONVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Bayou Meto, a meandering stream, rises east of here and threads its way across 70 miles of rural land, far from any place that might symbolize pollution or contamination.

The bayou's idyllic course carries it through the rice country of the delta, across a forested wildlife refuge, and eventually into the Arkansas River, which, in turn, flows to the Mississippi.

But, as country people have been learning lately, rural America, like any Pittsburgh or Houston, may be facing hard questions about chemical contamination: Bayou Meto has been quarantined.

State health officials banned fishing, wading and swimming because state pollution control officials have found dioxin in sludge, fish, mollusks and other samples taken from Bayou Meto.

Dioxin, a byproduct of the manufacture of the herbicide 2,4,5-T, is a toxic chemical suspected of causing or contributing to birth defects, cancer, liver damage, and other maladies.

Vertac Inc. of Jacksonville, 10 miles northeast of Little Rock, manufactured the herbicide until last April. It stopped voluntarily and is working with state and federal pollution control officials on the dioxin problem.

The company is the successor to three other firms that manufactured at the site, including one that produced Agent Orange.

About 3,000 barrels of waste from Vertac's process were stored on the plant property. Some were leaking dioxin. Some barrels had been buried in the ground nearby.

Vertac has spent about $200,000 to get the wastes in new containers and take other anticontamination actions.

But the discovery of dioxin at the site provoked official interest in sampling elsewhere to see whether dioxin has washed into adjacent soil, or streams, or the city's sewage system.

At first, the state quarantined only Rockey Branch Creek, near the plant. Then only about one-third of the bayou was quarantined. But upon further findings, the quarantine absorbed the entire bayou.

Dr. Robert Young, the state health chief, said the discovery of chemical contamination of fish "is considered an indication of more extensive contamination" than previously had been demonstrated.

Scheduling examinations for about 150 present and former employees of Vertac, Young sought the help of a New York team that specializes in chemical contamination of humans.

The team, which began examining Vertac workers this week, is led by Dr. Irving Selikoff of the Environmental Sciences Laboratory of the Mount Sinai School of Medicine. Dioxin is so toxic, Selikoff said, that a spoonful would kill 10,000 baby chicks.

It will be some time before the results of the Jacksonville tests are fully known, Selikoff said.

But a state study already has indicated that 13 of Vertac's 74 current employees have been diagnosed as having cloracne, a form of acne thought to be an early symptom of exposure to dioxin.

Young has called for tests on more wildlife samples, including raccoons, bottom-feeding fish, and predatory fish, not only from the bayou, but also from the Arkansas River.

"Although scientists are unsure of the level at which dioxin becomes dangerous to human beings, it is clear that wading, swimming, or fishing must be discontinued" in the bayou, Young said.

He said the safest course is to assume that no one should eat any fish containing dioxin "until further study can verify that no potential health hazard exists."

Lately, Vertac officials have told Gov. Bill Clinton they need to get the plant back into operation. The costly cleanup increases the financial pressure for resuming production of 2,4,5-T, they said.

So far, Clinton has opposed restarting production, saying it would be "a great mistake" until there is evidence to eliminate doubt about whether production, and its consequences, would be safe.

The governor said he didn't want any worker to lose a job as a result of the plant being idle, nor did he want the community to lose a part of its economic base, but that something bigger was at stake.

If necessary, Clinton said, an administrative order could bar Vertac from resuming production should it want to end its voluntary halt. He said Vertac "is inclined not to test the limits of our authority."

His opposition, Clinton said, is based on findings about the effects of dioxin and suspicions that it may have devastating long-term consequences. He cited the following:

•Findings by the Environmental Protection Agency suggesting that the herbicide was a factor in miscarriages among eight women in Alsea, Ore.

•EPA findings that dioxin caused tumors of the lung and liver, as well as miscarriages, in laboratory rodents.

•An assertion by a Vietnamese physician that dioxin in Agent Orange may be behind "an explosion" of liver cancer in what once was South Vietnam.

•A claim by nearly 500 Vietnam veterans blaming exposure to Agent Orange for problems ranging from deformed children to nervous disorders and asking the Veterans Administration for disability benefits.

Ape Hybrid Supports Theory Of Short-Time Genetic Change

ATLANTA (AP) — Her name is Shawn-Shawn and she's 4 years old. What makes her special is that she is the first reported ape hybrid — the product of the chance mating of two species of apes.

Shawn-Shawn's parents were a male gibbon and a female siamang, which are farther apart genetically than great apes and humans, said Dr. David A. Shafer, one of two researchers involved in the genetic analysis of the parents and the offspring.

The development supports a recently advanced evolution theory that new species may sometimes spring forth through genetic juggling over a few generations rather than from a prolonged series of small mutations taking perhaps thousands or millions of years, researchers said.

"The fact they they could mate is significant scientifically, because the chromosomes (genetic material) of each parent are very dissimilar," Shafer said.

The mating occurred at Atlanta's Grant Park Zoo, where Shawn-Shawn's parents were on loan from Georgia State University because of lack of space at the school's psychology laboratory.

Shawn-Shawn, born in 1975, was dubbed a "siabon." After three months her mother rejected her for unknown reasons, and she was taken to Georgia State and cared for by graduate psychology students until she could survive on her own.

Gibbon cells have 44 chromosomes, and siamang cells have 50. Shawn-Shawn has 47 chromosomes, 22 from the gibbon father and 25 from the siamang mother.

Shafer said the mating occurred when the apes were housed in one cage at the zoo. "Obviously they had been sexually involved for some time," he said. "Because they were raised together (sexual involvement) was more natural for them."

Both species, considered great apes, have long arms and no tail. They share the same habitat in Southeast Asia.

Shafer said the hybrid most resembles a siamang in face and body, including the webbing between the second and third toes. Shawn-Shawn, however, does not have a throat sac characteristic of her siamang mother.

Shafer's colleague, Dr. Richard H. Myers, said they suspect the ape is sterile, like most hybrids. Nevertheless, an attempt at mating is planned when she matures.

Oldest Ford Dealership Closing Its Doors

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Seventy-six years ago, Henry Ford came to San Francisco, shook William Hughson's hand and said, "Billy, you're my first dealer." Now Hughson Ford, the world's oldest Ford dealership, is calling it quits.

Owner Martin Swig said this week that he'll shut the Van Ness Avenue doors for the last time Tuesday because the dealership "doesn't make money any more."

Americans' penchant for high-mileage cars to ride out the fuel crisis apparently caught this Ford dealer unprepared. Hughson is stuck with gas-gulping models like the Thunderbird with the V-8 engine that was delivered to the showroom before Christmas and has done little but gather dust.

Bill Purcell, a Hughson employee, said he is willing to sell an $11,000 LTD for the factory invoice price which is nearly $3,000 less. Despite the offer, Purcell said, only six of the luxury cars have been sold in the last six months — and one of the takers was the sister of a salesman.

Hughson did have some hot-selling models, like the small Fiesta, which takes its gas in sips rather than gulps, but the dealership is sold out of Fiestas.

Purcell said his sales staff dropped from 10 to four as sales of cars over the year dropped from more than 125 a month to about 75.

Not only are customers leery of buying low-mileage vehicles, said Purcell and another sales colleague, shoppers are also scared off by high price stickers.

"How do you sell an $11,000 customized van that laps up gas like a thirsty dog takes to his water dish?" Purcell asked.

He said a big van recently rolled out the dealer's doors after a customer cut a deal for $10,125 after tax and license. The model cost Hughson $10,600. "We really took a bath on that one," said Purcell.

The dealership's founder, William Hughson, died in 1969 and the corporation was sold to Martin Swig and Edouard Richard, owners of four other dealerships on Van Ness Avenue, a wide boulevard largely lined by auto showrooms. Swig said the numerous auto dealers in town didn't help business either.

Women Fuming Over Recording

TOKYO (AP) — Feminists are fuming but Japan's male chauvinists are humming along to a hit tune in which the singer commands his young bride to "keep quiet and follow behind me."

The folk-pop record, "Your Lord and Master Proclaims," has vaulted into the Top Ten on the hit parade just weeks after being released, singing the praises of womanly obedience and sweet subservience, traditional virtues rooted in Japan's feudal age.

"There's something I want to say before you become my bride," vocalist-songwriter Masashi Sada begins. "Hear out my true feelings. Don't sleep before I do. Don't get up after me. Cook nothing but good meals and always look pretty. Keep quiet and follow behind me."

As if that were not enough, Sada goes on to declare that "I probably won't cheat on you, but stupid jealousies are out."

One sports newspaper billed it "the song all men have been waiting for." But women throughout the country are loudly complaining that it is a throwback to the distant days when a Japanese woman was expected to be a slave first to her father, then to her husband, and finally to her son.

Sada's representative, Noriyasu Anzai, admitted he and Sada have received hundreds of angry calls and letters from women. But he claimed that the majority of women who responded said, "Thank you for telling it like it should be."

And he said almost every man they heard from expressed approval of the 27-year-old bachelor singer's definition of proper wifely behavior.

Feminists have made some gains in freeing Japanese women from the constraints of a traditional society that consigned them to a silent, supportive role. But "women's lib" has not made as much progress here as it has in the United States and other Western societies.

One major newspaper, nevertheless, commented that Sada's song is more wishful thinking than a declaration of the married male's rights. The more likely case today is the weak-willed and henpecked husband who has handed over control of everything from the purse strings to the choice of beer to his wife, it said.

The song does end on a softer note — "Don't die before me, you are the only woman I will ever love" — a declaration that in earlier days any self-respecting samurai husband never would have made.

Stabbing Incident Taken To Court

TROY, Ohio (UPI) — A heated argument concerning an umpire's call during a Pony League baseball game has moved into the Miami County Municipal Court after a parent of the umpire allegedly stabbed the father of one of the players.

Judge William Kessler was to continue a preliminary hearing into the case next week and must decide whether William E. Rose, 43, of Troy should be bound over to the grand jury.

Rose is charged with attempted murder in the stabbing of Glen Francis, 39, of Troy during the July 20 baseball game in the league for 13-to 16-year-old boys.

Authorities said Rose stabbed Francis in the chest, back and abdomen when Francis started to argue with Rose's son, David, who was umpiring the game.

The argument started after David threw Francis' 16-year-old son, a catcher, out of the game following a disputed call. Francis' wife, Dixie, then came down from the stands to argue with the umpire about the removal of her son.

More People Unloading Gas Guzzlers On Charity Organizations

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
Associated Press Writer

A doctor in Los Angeles wheeled his 970 Cadillac Coupe deVille into a Salva-ion Army center and handed over the itle to a surprised charity worker.

"It had brand new tires and ran reat," said Salvation Army Maj. Joseph iola. "It was fancy."

The doctor's gift was a rare find for n organization more accustomed to tak-ng in frayed clothing and rusty refriger-tors.

The scene is being repeated with in-reasing frequency in cities around the ountry. The gas crunch has created a windfall for charities dealing in hand-me-downs.

"It's very good for us," said Elaine ewis, public relations director for oodwill Industries in Boston. "It takes a long time to make $700 selling used clothing."

Goodwill and Salvation Army outlets in a number of cities, including Boston, New York, Houston, Denver, St. Louis, Los Angeles and Washington, report notable increases this year in donations of automobiles, mostly big gas hogs.

Goodwill in Washington, which normally takes in three or four a year, already has collected about 70 this year, according to spokeswoman Betsy Forte. Goodwill in Bridgeport, Conn., got 38 in 45 days.

"They're old, large clunkers, especially station wagons, that operate but use a lot of gas," said Jim Fox, a Goodwill Industries executive who said the St. Louis group has taken in three cars in the past two weeks, models dating from 1962 to 1972.

Even in Houston, the self-proclaimed "energy capital of the world," Bill Lufburrow, president of the Goodwill chapter, said, "We've had more than we've ever had.

GIVING THEM AWAY — It probably hasn't gotten as bad as the scene represented in this cartoon, but more people are giving their big, gas-guzzling cars to charitable groups, such as the Salvation Army and Goodwill. The motives of the donors are said to be "part charitable, part economic."

"They tell me you can't get anything for the big cars anymore," Lufburrow added.

But, for some reason, the automobile giveaway has not reached many other cities, especially in the South and Midwest.

Charles Wentworth of the Salvation Army in Columbia, S.C., just laughed when asked if he had received any cars.

"We think we're doing really well if we get a refrigerator," he said.

And in Oklahoma City, authorities are beginning to suspect that motorists are getting rid of their guzzlers another way — by the torch. Arson has been blamed in 67 of 484 vehicle fires in the city since Jan. 1.

"If people had a gas guzzler they could solve two problems by burning it," said Phil Cooksey, an Oklahoma City fire prevention officer. "They would be able to cut gas bills and they could collect insurance."

Several charities noted that in years past, cars were usually donated toward the end of the year, when taxpayers were scrambling for deductions.

The donors usually deduct from their income tax the "blue book" value of the car, which is usually higher than a car dealer would pay. The charity organizations say they have nothing to do with placing a value on the car.

Goodwill in Boston accepts only cars in running order at its Morgan Memorial facility, since it has no auto repair shop. The donated car is taken to a store lot and left. Bids are taken and after two weeks the car goes to the highest bidder. A 1975 Pontiac was sold recently for $200, Miss Lewis said.

"We don't appraise them," she said. "We simply pass along the word of the owner."

Ronald Borsari, head of Goodwill operations in New York, said his organization has been getting a lot more inquiries lately from people asking: "How do you handle it? How is my tax deduction figured out? Do you pick it up?

Americans' Candy Consumption Shrinking

By ROBERT C. RADCLIFFE
National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON — Candy is dandy, but maybe not as dandy as it used to be. Americans aren't eating as much of it anymore.

Last year, says the Department of Commerce, we each consumed only 14.9 pounds of chocolate and other candies. That's down from 15.4 pounds per Americans in 1977.

Nobody yet knows why we are consuming less, but the National Geographic News Service wonders whether:

•We think we are eating as much candy as ever, but are fooled by the ever-shrinking American candy bar.

•The American sweet tooth is going sour, victim of celery sticks and other health foods.

Candy makers, far from being tongue-in-cheek about any of this, nevertheless don't sound worried. The country's 15,000 chocolate candy stores report their best-ever for Christmas, Valentine's Day, Easter, and Mother's Day.

Beyond that, candy makers hope they may soon be able to announce that "Chocolate is good for your teeth!"

Volunteers in Boston are munching away in the interest of science, checking out test-tube research suggesting there is something in chocolate — a heat-resistant, water-soluble protein — that, in the language of toothpaste, "fights dental decay."

If true, candy makers speculate, perhaps this wonder substance could be added to non-chocolate candy to help protect against cavities. (Candy makers, incidentally, spend each working day alternately tasting batches of their production and brushing or rinsing their teeth.)

Meanwhile, candy lovers everywhere keep demonstrating "how sweet it is." World's champion candy eaters are the British, who are fond of gobbling toffees, licorice bootlaces, bulls' eyes, sherbet dabs, and jelly babies.

Americans produced about 3.1 billion pounds of candy during 1978, says the Commerce Department, all sold at an average of $1 a pound. That's a one-year price increase of about $22 million because of inflation's bite of chocolate, almonds, sugar, and the whatever-else in candy.

Today some nutritionists praise various candies for their food value. From time to time through history some candies have also been rated as love potions the equal of hyenas' eyes, and birds' nest soup.

Biggest-selling candies of all time are Life Savers, according to the Guinness Book of World Records, which calculates that if all 25,000,000,000 rolls sucked on from 1923 to 1973 were stacked on top of each other, the hole in the middle would be a million miles deep.

Missouri Governor Has Own 'Meals On Wheels'

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Once a week, meals for Missouri Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale and eight members of his family and staff are being prepared in Jefferson City and driven 150 miles to his Kansas City residence in state vehicles.

The governor recently rented a house near the Country Club Plaza in Kansas City for $1,700 a month while extensive repairs on the mansion in Jefferson City — expected to take about two months — are being made.

The governor also moved to Kansas City so his wife, Theresa, could be near her physician until their baby was born. Teasdale's newest son, Kevin Joseph, was born Sunday night.

Gloria Overfelt, social secretary at the governor's mansion, said Thursday that the food was being sent "in cars that are already going" and the service required no special trips.

She said the first shipment, mainly casseroles and boxed items including fresh fruit, was sent a week ago and another delivery had been scheduled Friday. She said she expected the items sent to last about a week.

Mrs. Overfelt said she felt that as long as the mansion's cook was on the payroll it would be less expensive to send the meals by state cars already on their way to Kansas City than hiring a second cook in Kansas City.

"We thought we'd try it and see how it works," she said.The governor has been living in the temporary residence only for a week.

Nine persons needed to be fed at his temporary residence, he said, and it would be too expensive to hire a cook.

Mrs. Overfelt said the mansion's cook was preparing most of the meals for the governor and his other two sons, but "they fix their own breakfast."

She said food would continue to be sent to the governor "while Theresa is still in the hospital," but Mrs. Overfelt said she did not know what the policy would be after Mrs. Teasdale left the hospital. "Theresa and her mother might do it," she said.

Amish Polio Outbreaks Said Subsiding

ATLANTA (AP) — Public health officials said Friday a polio outbreak among the Amish appears to be subsiding, with no new cases reported in the last month.

The Amish are members of a strict Mennonite sect, and many of them had not been vaccinated when the outbreak began early this year.

The national Center for Disease Control reported that multi-state immunization campaigns have been successful in stemming the outbreak.

Public health officials warned, however, that the possibility of new cases remains throughout the summer months.

In its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report, the CDC said there have been 17 confirmed cases of polio in the United States and Canada this year.

Fourteen of the cases — all causing paralysis — occurred in unvaccinated Amish persons. Another case occurred in a recently vaccinated Amish infant. Two of the cases were reported in Canada and the others were from Pennsylvania, Iowa, Wisconsin and Missouri.

Two non-paralytic cases of polio were confirmed in persons who were not members of thereligious sect but lived near the Amish.

COOLIDGE RECOGNIZED

In September 1919, Massachusetts Gov. Calvin Coolidge attained national prominence by calling out the state guard in the Boston police strike. This brought his name before the Republican convention of 1920, where he was nominated for vice president.

MOTORCYCLING VICE PRESIDENT OF A BANK — Charles R. Stuart Jr., vice president for advertising at Bank of America, poses with his helmet and his motorcycle outside the bank's headquarters in San Francisco. Stuart says he used to get some good-natured kidding about riding a bike to work, but things have changed since the gas shortage. (AP Laserphoto)

Gas Crunch Hurries Cycle Respectability

By JACK SCHREIBMAN

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The gas-stingy motorcycle, once regarded as little more than a disreputable highway interloper ridden by gang members in leather jackets, is becoming business-like transportation.

An informal California survey taken this spring, when gasoline supplies began to tighten, showed increases of 10 percent to 30 percent in sales of all sizes of motorcycles, which can get 40 to 80 miles a gallon.

But riding the two-wheeled vehicles is harder than it looks, as depressing statistics show. Record numbers of motorcyclists are dying in accidents, many of them in their first few months as riders.

Although police figures show car drivers are often to blame in the accidents, the biker who survives a crash knows inside he blew the cardinal rule of safe cycling: drive as if nobody knows you're there.

But more and more bikers are there.

Now a $1.5 billion industry in this country, motorcycles are growing in popularity as efficient, economical commuter vehicles.

Some 5.2 million registered street machines now ply American roads, ranging from small jobs barely legal on the highways to 100-horsepower touring giants.

Nationwide, the Motorcycle Industry Council estimates there are 7.9 million motorcycles of all kinds in the country — including off-road vehicles that don't require registration — with 20 million riders.

The Big Four of the industry are Honda, Yamaha, Suzuki and Kawasaki. None would supply specific sales figures, but Ted Otto of Yamaha said gas worries had given the company an unexpected sales boost.

"We had expected a slump in the market this year," Otto said. "Sales were down from February through March and into April. We were quite concerned.

"We feel that the gasoline crunch has given us a 20 percent increase over the slump the motorcycle market was in," he said.

One easy rider is Charles Stuart Jr., vice president for advertising at Bank of America. Wearing a three-piece suit, attache case strapped to the seat, Stuart is the image of commuter respectability.

"Being the vice president of a bank, it's not expected that you arrive every morning on a motorcycle," he said. "I've received some good-natured kidding over the years. Now, with this gas situation, they're not laughing anymore. I've become legitimate!"

The new generation of road bikes is a far cry from the oil-dripping and ear-splitting behemoths of the past. The new bikes are computer-engineered, clean and so quiet they can barely be heard a few feet away.

They also were involved in the deaths of 4,500 U.S. accident victims last year, an increase of 10 percent from 1977. There were 14.8 fatalities for 100 million motorcycle miles traveled, compared with 3.4 fatalities for all vehicles, same mileage.

A University of Southern California study of 900 motorcycle crashes around Los Angeles showed:

• More than half the crash victims were younger than 23.

• More than half had under six months' experience with their bikes.

• About 92 percent taught themselves to ride and had no formal training.

• Alcohol was involved in 53 percent of the fatal accidents.

• More than 40 percent of the accidents involved biker misjudgment in the "man-machine relationship." Machine failure accounted for 3 percent of the accidents. Bad tires were blamed for 10 percent.

• Sixty percent of crash victims wore no helmets.

There are few schools for motorcyclists. Most dealerships teach only the rudiments of biking, hand out advice about staying clear of traffic for a while and leave the novice to his fate.

One of the best motorcycling schools in the country — the California Highway Patrol course — is closed to civilians. Officers come from around the nation to take the 10-day course. Sgt. John Glover said the waiting time for out-of-state officers is now three years.

Glover's description of biking problems faced by highway officers parallels those confronting civilians.

"Our main concern is new riders," he said. "They get into chasing a speeder at higher speeds, and then they happen to look down and realize they are indicating quite high, and they start tensing up on the bars.... You don't want to tense up at any time. The big thing is relaxing."

Glover said the best advice he can offer bikers is to "be mature about the whole thing. Don't take chances. Drive defensively."

Experts Say Nudity Can Be Overdone

By the Editors of Psychology Today

One of the oldest gimmicks in advertising is to display comely female skin. But while such come-ons may capture men's overall attention, they can also distract men from the advertised product.

Nudity in ads was studied recently by two researchers at Minnesota's Moorehead State University. M. Wayne Alexander, a professor of business administration, and Ben Judd Jr., an assistant professor of psychology, showed slides of 15 experimental ads to 180 male business students.

Each ad contained a picture of a fictional brand of such products as tires, watches, cosmetics or stereo sets. The brand names were words that researchers hoped had no familiar connotations. Bardo, Vardel, Papin and Marin.

Each ad also had an illustration: either a pastoral scene or a female model in various stages of nudity ranging from a modest glimpse of the face and neck to a full frontal view.

After viewing the pictures, the men tried to list as many products and brand names as they could remember.

The nudes proved to have been distracting. The men recalled many more of the products and brands accompanied by pastoral scenes than those illustrated with nudes. Their recall rates did not vary significantly with the different degrees of nudity.

In short, advertisers who want to reach men should remember a new version of an old saying: No nudes is good nudes.

Studies of class size have been done for years, but only 80 of them have been carefully controlled. Gene Glass and Mary Lee Smith, psychologists with the Laboratory of Educational Research at the University of Colorado at Boulder, sorted out and analyzed the controlled studies.

As common sense suggests, they found that a good teacher in a large class can produce better results than a mediocre teacher in a smaller class. But if teacher abilities are equal, pupils in a class of 15 seem to achieve more than those in a class of 30.

Reducing class size from 30 to 25, on the other hand, will barely bring a noticeable change, according to the research.

But in the study, teachers' aides were counted as teachers in determining the ratios. Hence, Glass and Smith say that greater use of aides, paraprofessionals and parent volunteers may help approximate the conditions and the benefits of smaller classes.

Old Age does not seem to have much effect on how well business executives perform, according to Stanley Davis, a 39-year-old professor of organizational behavior at Boston University's School of Management.

Davis tabulated the profits and growth between 1972 and 1975 of 100 representative companies from the Fortune 500 list. He then matched them with the average age of senior vice president or higher. The ages ranged from 39 to 66.

"I tested the data many times in many different ways," Davis reports, "trying to discover a connection between management and corporate performance. I found none."

He adds, "In test after test, the data were boringly insignificant."

Davis did find one discouraging omen for companies anxious to tap the skills of female executives. Despite the talk about women moving up in the business world, his sample of more than 1,800 top executives did not turn up a single woman.

One reason may be age prejudice, because many older women enter management after raising a family, those who get close to senior management levels are likely to be older than their male counterparts. If unfounded age prejudice remains part of the corporate culture, women will face an additional obstacle.

FLOODS TAKE TOLL

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — More than 350 persons have died in floods ravaging the northern Indian state of Rajasthan, Indian newspapers reported Friday. Kalyansingh Kalvi, state agriculture minister, told reporters in Jaipur that about 3,000 villages had been hit by the floods and more than 200,000 cattle swept away in the swirling waters. Some 12,000 square miles of farmland have been devastated, Kalvi said.

Italian Economy Planner Gets Nod

ROME (AP) — A 51-year-old economic planner was designated Friday to form Italy's 38th postwar government to tide the country over the summer holidays.

With Italy's government crisis in its sixth month, President Sandro Pertini named Treasury Minister Filippo Maria Pandolfi as premier-designate. Pandolfi, a member of the dominant Christian Democrat Party and noted as an inflation fighter, accepted the appointment. He conceded his mandate would be to prepare "a truce . .. for a well-defined span of time."

Political observers viewed Pandolfi's task as tough after the failure of Christian Democrat Giulio Andreotti and Socialist Bettino Craxi.

The Christian Democrats, who polled 38 percent of the votes in the national election last June, have excluded a government with Communist in the cabinet. They thus need key support or abstention from the Socialists to form a viable government.

But the relations between the two parties are strained.

Court Orders New Trial For Family

SEATTLE (AP) — The Washington Court of Appeals has ordered new trials for four persons convicted of manslaughter in 1976 in the death of 3-year-old boy they believed was possessed by the devil.

Edward Leon Cunningham, 51; his wife Velma, 45; their daughter Carolyn Cunningham, 27; and Lorraine Edwards, 20, a friend; are serving prison sentences for assault and manslaughter in connection with the death of David Weilbacher.

The appeals court said Thursday taped statements made by some of the defendants to police after their arrests were taken improperly.

Eagles Thrive In Thicket Despite Development

By DON GARDNER
(c)1979 Pacific News Service

For the past six winters we have witnessed a wildlife spectable which brings hope in these times of one environmental horror story after another. In 1973 two adult bald eagles began wintering in a Deep South backwoods county in southeast Texas. Their population has increased to as many as 16 over the years, and they appear quite satisfied with their new winter roost. Most remarkable of all, the eagles seem to thrive thanks to a man-made development that has hurt other wildlife.

This isolated corner of the Big Thicket forest seems an unlikely place to find the bald eagle, which feeds primarily on fish. But the ante-bellum farm site we now occupy sits on a ridge overlooking the Trinity River, one of the South's major rivers.

In 1970 the only reservoir on the 500 mile-long Trinity was filled, the sad result of a land development scheme which flooded 90,000 acres of fertile river bottom farmland and wildlife habitat. Ironically, the bald eagles probably found the reservoir first, and then located the semi-wilderness area along the river below the dam.

Although I have seen bald eagles in Alaska, I will neve forget the joy of discove ing them here in southeast Texas. It was a mild and sunny January day. An hour before sundown I walked to the high meadow north of the house, which allows an unobstructed view of the river bottom below the dam and Huffman Creek coming in from the left. On the edge of the clearing I sat against a pine tree.

I was settled a few minutes when a movement above and in front caused me to look up. A bald eagle, with solid white head and tail feathers, was flying directly over me only a few feet above the tops of the young pines. A bald eagle right here along the lower Trinity! At that time it was supposed there were no eagles in our part of the country.

When the bald eagle saw me it appeared to stop. For a moment it seemed to screech to a halt in mid-air and stand full length, right before my eyes. Then the eagle pushed backwards, banked right and headed toward the center of the creek valley.

Enraptured, I watched the bird fly away. Then I saw another eagle flying a few hundred yards behind the first. It had already veered away from me and was followinbg the new path of the first bird. A pair of bald eagles!

That first winter we saw them several times, usually in late afternoon. We soon concluded they were returning to their roost, somewhere up the creek valley, after a day of fishing along the river.

The following winter, if we went to the right place at the right time, we could see two adult bald eagles almost daily. To our delight they began to be more comfortable with our presense and several times glided above the house. Early in December the next winter the two adults showed up with three young eagles. Unlike the grownups, immature bald eagles do not have white heads and tails. Their heads and tails are dark brown, with splotched or mottled white on their undersides and rump.

The birds piqued our curiosity, and we began researching why bald eagles would turn up in Texas. This enormously graceful animal has an extremely narrow ecological niche, which is being destroyed by industrial growth. Its diet consists almost entirely of floating dad fish snatched from the surface of lakes and rivers. Most wildlife biologists believe that human encroachment and the contamination of waters by pesticides and herbicides are the major causes in the decline of the bald eagle population.

The bald eagle does relatively well in the wilds of Alaska and Canada. When fishing waters begin to freeze in the north, the eagles migrate south hunting open water. Southern eagles are less migratory and nest sparsely from California to South Carolina.

Anb ironic twist to human destructionb of eagle habitat was discovered a few years ago when biologists found that northern eagles in groups of 3 to 200 congregate below the 26 Mississippi River dams from Minnesota to St. Louis. There they feed on dead fish passing through hydropower turbines and canal locks. These wintering birds roost below the dams.

Our theory, based on the literature and what we've seen here, is that population pressures below Mississippi dams caused the eagles to search for new winter roosts, bringing them into east Texas and the area below this large reservoir. An eagle banded in the Chippewa National Forest in Minnesota a few years ago turned up in Texas.

This past winter we began spotting eagles flying up the creek during the first week in December, the earliest arrivals so far. We soon realized there were more birds than ever before. One afternoon I walk into the heart of the creek valley to do a survey. I saw 11 eagles at close range, but my exhilaration was somewhat muted when I realized that 10 of the birds were immature. One of the adults was missing.

Late one afternoon I noticed a number of dark specks about a mile down river and several hundred feet high. Braced against the big pecan tree in the front yard, I panned the binoculars high in the eastern sky. I started counting, eight, no nine birds.

When I first got the focal lenses set on the eagles I thought they were all immature. Then I saw the single adult. This unforgettable bird was soaring right in the center of the other eight birds which were paired off. Each of the four pairs was conducting a ritual courtship-play-dance unlike anything I had ever seen.

The paired young birds, with seven-foot wingspans and mottled white undersides, were doing exquisitely intricate aerobatics. At every turn and tumble the late afternoon sun flashed off their white chest feathers. After watching for some time, I decided that one of the necessary principles of their dance is to lightly touch wing tips. They fly in formation, one directly above the other, only inches separating them. Then they break into a tumble, a roll, a dive, all the while staying within a foot of each other. During these remarkable flying maneuvers they regularly touch just the tips of their wing feathers. No collision, no bump, just a sensitive soft touch of wing tips.

During this time the mature eagle coasted, undisturbed and aloof. Around the adult, the pairs were soaring off, doing their aerobatics, and then returning toward the center. As I watched, I could see the four pair, as if I were watching a circus, all doing their separate dances in a different quadrant.

I watched until they floated out of view. The flock of immature eagles were pairing off prior to returning north to the nesting areas. A few days later they were gone, heading off to Minnesota or Canada, or wherever it is they spend the summer.

We have begun to expect these wonderful birds to come our way each winter. Naturalists from coast to coast are reporting more eagle sightings. There seems reason to believe the bald eagle population in the lower 48 states may no longer be declining. The National Wildlife Federation conducted a national survey last January and counted 9,836 bald eagles. It was more than twice the highest previous total. Researchers are seeing many more immature eagles than before, and that is certainly hopeful.

But, like all the rest of us, their futures are far from secure. The director of the national survey was quick to point out that the total does not necessarily confirm the belief that bald eagles have made a comeback in the U.S. since several pesticides were outlawed in the early 1970s. While some chlorinated hydrocarbon pesticides have been banned, such as DDT and Mirex, others are still widely used in the U.S. and throughout the rest of the world.

This unforgetable Bird was soaring right in the center of the the other eight birds which were paired off. Each of the four pairs was conducting a ritual courtship-play-dance unlike anything I had ever seen. The paired young birds, with seven-foot wingspans and mottled white undersides were doing intricate aerobatics. At every turn and tumble the late afternoon sun flashed off their white chest feathers.

Noo Phongkaseam, now 92, lives in Bangkok home for the aged, remembering his days as a sergeant in the Thai army and the silver medal he won for bravery in the field.

THE SHELTER OF MEMORIES

Bang Khae used to be an orchard. Now it's a place where older Thais enjoy the fruits of long life.

The Thai government built the residence for the homeless aged on land donated by farmers. It used to seem far from Bangkok's urban bustle, but now the spreading metropolis almost engulfs it.

Bang Khae fulfills a special need. In Thailand, as in many Asian countries, the elderly by custom live with their children. Those who have no children, or who have outlived them, must turn to shelter of a different kind, such as Bang Khae.

Photographed here are residents of the home who have lived through and remember an age most of their countrymen regard as history. For these old people, King Chulalongkorn, a legendary 19th-century monarch, is a living memory.

Photographer by Neal Ulevich.

NO RECESSION WORRIES — Moreton Binn, the 43-year-old head of Atwood Richards, gestures recently as he outlines his views on a business recession. Binn, whose firm matches people who want to swap goods and services, says he figures he can double last year's revenues of $126 million, partly because of this year's recession. When the economy cools off, companies need an alternate way to move goods, he says. (AP Laserphoto)

Swap Firm Anticipates Even Higher Revenues With National Recession

NEW YORK (AP) — Moreton Binn isn't worried about a recession, or what effect it will have on his business. In fact, he says, "I welcome it."

Binn, 43, runs Atwood Richards, a company that matches people who want to swap goods and services. And he figures he can double last year's revenues of $126 million partly because of this year's recession.

"Manufacturing is a guessing game. My business never goes bad because somebody always guesses wrong." When the economy cools off, or the fickle public taste changes with the wind, companies can't sell products and warehouses are bulging. They need an alternate way to move their goods.

Enter Atwood Richards.

For example, several years ago, Shell Oil tried to duplicate the success of its No-Pest Strips, developing a similar product to be used in garbage cans. But plastic garbage bags proved more popular. So Atwood Richards traded five million Can Care strips for a load of unrefined sugar from a Caribbean resort that wanted the strips for pest control.

This year, Schick decided it was going to have its grooming products manufactured abroad. So it decided to trade the products still in domestic warehouses to make a clean sweep for the new lines being made in foreign countries.

Atwood Richards took $5.8 million worth of blow dryers, hot combs and hot curlers and traded some to companies for use as incentive give-aways, some to radio and TV stations for promotional use and some to hotels.

Another deal involved $2.4 million worth of calculators and typewriters made by Olivetti-Underwood. The firm wanted to establish a media budget for TV and radio, so it traded its products for advertising time. Atwood Richards was able to trade the machines to companies that were in need of office equipment.

Now, how does AR make money on all this? One, it trades upward. The company "pays" the wholesale cost of an item, then trades it for its full market value in some other product.

Shipping costs are kept down. Binn says 85 of his inventory stays where it's purchased and shipping is absorbed by the manufacturer. AR also owns two warehouses, and sometimes sells to the deep discount outlets.

Moreton Binn — the name is British — made liberal use of the barter system when he was growing up. He traded baseball cards like most of us, but also made deals that foreshadowed his current career.

"My parents died when I was 17, and I lost a sister to leukemia. I had to be more creative in stretching dollars. I used to take tickets in a movie theater, and I would get the proprietor to pay part of my salary in tickets. Then I took the tickets to a grocery store and exchange $10 worth of tickets for, say $7 worth of groceries. The grocer would use them for promotions or giveaways."

He grew up on the West Side of Manhattan, and received a marketing degree from the University of Miami.

Binn's office overlooking Park Avenue has overtones of a thirteen-year-old boy's bedroom — apart from two royal blue sofas and a large cluttered desk, the office contains a Mickey Mouse telephone, a pillow shaped like a baseball cap, a skateboard, several bottles of mouthwash and pictures and statues of horses.

The horses are a clue to another of Binn's childhood interests that have become both a business and an adult pleasure. "I couldn't spell, so I wasn't able to do crosswords like everyone else. I used to turn to the racing pages and do mind-betting." Six years ago, he got into racing. Binn paid $6,500 for a thoroughbred, "Motor Mouse," and sold her a year later for $12,500. She earned $35,000 in purses.

Now, he owns Pen-Mor Thoroughbred Farms, a $3 million operation that has turned out winners like "Jose Binn," a 2-year-old who was injured last year. His owner hopes to return him to the track this year.

In 1974 — the depths of the last recession — Atwood Richards was put up for sale by its parent company, Cooper Laboratories. Moreton Binn, at the time the head of MTA, a promotional firm, says he saw its possibilities and decided during a 10-minute car ride with an executive of Cooper Labs to buy the company.

It hasn't been five years of steady growth for Atwood Richards, partly because "the economy got better."

But it has been five years of fun for Moreton Binn. "I am totally enamored with this, especially in an economy where the dollar is being torn apart. Crises help the barter business."

Family-Owned Papers Seek Estate Tax Relief

WASHINGTON (AP) — Representatives of family-owned newspapers asked Congress on Friday for relief from estate taxes that, they said, are forcing the sale of many independent newspapers to chains.

Publishers John F. Wolfe of the Columbus (Ohio) Dispatch, and Charles H. Smith III of the Knoxville (Tenn.) Journal, testified in support of a bill that would permit family-owned newspapers to establish tax-exempt trusts to pay off inheritance taxes.

The Carter administration strongly opposed the bill, saying it would amount to a subsidy for independent newspapers and lead to other family businesses demanding similar treatment.

"What you are doing in this bill is functionally the same as giving a local publisher a check," Treasury Department attorney Harry L. Gutman told the House Ways and Means Committee.

Wolfe said family-owned newspapers are being sold to chains at the rate of at least one a week, and he blamed the trend on "the unusually harsh effects the estate tax laws have on newspapers."

Wolfe said competition to buy the nation's dwindling number of independent newspapers is producing inflated purchase prices that the government uses as benchmarks in assessing estate taxes on inheritors of papers that are still family owned.

"The exacerbation in prices being paid for newspapers has made it just about impossible to pass a newspaper on to one's heirs," Wolfe said. "If you do not sell prior to death, in order to put your estate in order, your heirs will be forced to sell to pay estate taxes."

Smith said the family-owned papers were not asking Congress for a subsidy, but simply "a reasonable means to prepare for the payment of estate taxes."

Under the bill, sponsored by Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., an owner of an independent newspaper could transfer assets to a tax-exempt trust for the purpose of paying inheritance taxes assessed on his holdings after his death.

The trust's assets would be invested in U.S. bonds and the government could recapture the benefits from the trust if the newspaper is sold within 15 years of the former owner's death.

In a prepared statement, Rep. Lawrence Coughlin, R-Pa., urged support for the bill, arguing that it is important to protect the nation's remaining 600 independently-owned daily newspapers from takeovers.

"To have the voices of independent newspapers continuously diminished is unfortunate for our people and our government," Coughlin said.

Switzerland In Quandary Over Languages

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The peace, quiet and harmony of Switzerland are threatened by a growing dispute over what language to speak in that Alpine country — where French, German and Italian are "official" tongues, with a couple of other available to anyone who wants them. Here is a report.)

By HANNS NEUERBOURG

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — Bernard Griener is perfectly trilingual. But after 33 years of civil service in the Swiss Defense Ministry, the certified translator has developed a deaf ear during office hours to two of his three languages.

"I will no longer acknowledge any communication addressed to me that is not in my maternal French," says Griener, 58. He says the time has come for federal authorities to "respect the minorities."

Griener, who works in the ministry's "secrets branch," is the latest voice in a growing chorus of worried French speakers. They fear their language is threatened by what they consider to be an increasing preponderance of German.

The debate has troubled the much-publicized linguistic peace in this Alpine country of 6.3 million people. Coexistence of German, spoken by 74 percent of the people; French, by 20 percent; Italian, by 4 percent; and Romansh, by 1 percent, has often been cited as a model of multi-cultured harmony. And apart from Romansh, an ancient idiom spoken by a small bilingual minority in eastern Switzerland, all three languages are equally official under the Swiss Constitution.

A high-level revolt against alleged German language supremacy has been pushed by Geneva's Willy Donze, socialist member of the Council of States, the upper house of Parliament. Seconding him, the Geneva newspaper, La Suisse, commented that the "Swiss-German imperialism, which is probably involuntary," may become "the number one state affair."

Donze has won support also from some German speakers in urging that simultaneous translation be provided in the upper house and for the 400 annual committee meetings of Parliament.

Up to now, only the 200 legislators in the lower house, the National Council, can turn to their earphones for translation. Only a few do. Annemarie Huber, spokeswoman of the Federal Assembly, estimates that about half a dozen deputies from each of the two chief language groups regularly rely on the five interpreters hired for the plenary sessions.

Luigi Generali, president of the council, uses Italian for "important statements" but also often addresses the house in German. Occasionally, interpreters are idle when a deputy speaks in Romansh — a "national" but not an "official" language — to the politely listening, non-understanding majority. The Romansh speakers act as their own translators, providing a summary in German at the end of their speech.

Miss Huber agrees that quite a few deputies have difficulties following in detail if a speaker discusses complex technical matters in another language. Only a few are likely to match the linguistic talents of Justice Minister Kurt Furgler, a German speaker who is also fluent in French, Italian and English — sometimes referred to by the tourist-minded Swiss as "our fifth national language."

Complaints about "Germanization" are not all that new. But they have gained in volume with the increasing flow of paper in the federal administration where about 95 percent of all texts originate in German.

Most people agree that the translation service, which has to cope annually with almost 20,000 pages of official documents, is understaffed. But how can the government finance an expansion at a time of stringent economies?

Things are not easy, even for German-Swiss deputies. For the benefit of the French and Italian speakers, the Swiss-Germans are expected to speak what the French call the "classical" German. But for the Swiss Germans — accustomed to their local "Schwyzertuetsch" dialects — this is virtually a foreign language too.

The guttural dialects were occasionally used even in Parliament before World War II when Switzerland emphasized its separate ethnic identity against the Nazis' pan-German drive. Some French speakers say the dialect is hard to listen to and most tourists from neighboring Germany don't understand it.

But Finance Minister Georges-Andre Chevallaz, who is from French-speaking Lausanne, has decided on a forward defense: He has bought an audio-lingual program to learn Schyzertuetsch. And Energy Minister Willy Ritschard, a German speaker, also has signalled he favors a linquistic truce. He takes a cassette course in French.

Rosalynn's Advocacy Growing

WASHINGTON (AP) — She's been called "a strong and effective advocate," even "the assistant president."

But Rosalynn Carter describes her role in the recent White House shake-up as "I just sat in on the meetings and listened, and we talked things over."

The first lady says claims that she is one of her husband's top advisers are exaggerated. She's merely a sounding board for the president, she says, never giving him specific advice about courses of action.

On a recent campaign-style tour of four states, however, Mrs. Carter dropped hints that she remains a strong force in White House decision-making.

She frequently uses the word "we" to describe the president's accomplishments and decisions, for example, saying at one point that, "We did not call one person to Camp David to talk about politics."

At another point, she mentioned that, "I sat in and listened and we, uh, he made the decisions."

In an interview with editors in Los Angeles, the first lady conceded she alone with the president decided to cancel his energy speech scheduled for July 5. When they realized they had captured the nation's attention by calling it off, she said, they decided to move ahead with the domestic summit and the Cabinet shuffle.

And during an in-flight news conference en route to California, Mrs. Carter gave a blow-by-blow description of what happened at the Cabinet meeting when the president's top administrators offered to resign.

"I just like to know what's going on," she said. Asked if she also gives him some advice, she shot back: "Don't all wives?"

The first lady painted a picture of a close-knit, stay-at-home family, with herself in the role of wife and help-meet who enjoys having her husband tell her about what happens at the office. In her case, however, the office happens to be the White House.

"I don't say 'do this' or 'do that,'" she said. "I don't ever do that to him. We just have mutual respect for each other. We discuss the things we're doing. It's a very good relationship."

Mrs. Carter has been credited with influencing her husband to bring media consultant Jerry Rafshoon to the White House to spruce up the president's public image and with getting her husband to pay attention to pollster Patrick Caddell's findings indicating Americans are suffering a spiritual crisis.

The first lady said she serves as an antenna for her husband, picking up on national moods. She said the president is somewhat isolated at the White House.

"His entourages are so large, it's hard for him to get to people. I can get closer to people than he can," she said.

During the tour, she repeatedly turned aside questions about problems confronting her husband's re-election efforts, saying she preferred to talk about the problems of the nation.

"I think the problems of the country transcend politics," she said. "Jimmy is the president, but ... it's the country that needs help."

Couple Allegedly Tortured Teen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bond has been set at $75,000 each for a sixth-grade teacher and his wife accused of torturing a teen-age neighbor in a dispute over a drug purchase.

Police said Curtis Hines, 36, and his wife, Vera, 34, of surburban Oxon Hill, Md., have been charged with kidnapping and assault.

Samuel Williams Jr., 18, told police the couple burned him with cigarettes and lighter fluid, jammed a loaded pistol down his throat and threatened to decapitate him. The youth was hospitalized with third-degree burns.

Williams said the couple gave him $105 to buy marijuana. He said they later asked for the money back, although he had already made the purchase.

When he was unable to return the money immediately, Williams said, the couple abducted and tortured him in their basement for more than three hours Wednesday.

Cowboys Face Oakland In 'Fame' Contest

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — No championship is at stake, but the opening game of the National Football League preseason schedule at the annual Pro Football Hall of Fame festivities has been a sellout for two months.

Months of planning, civic pride and a holiday atmosphere all culminate today at the steps of the Hall of Fame, where Johnny Unitas, Dick Butkus, Ron Mix and Yale Lary will be enshrined.

Later, the stars of today, the NFC champion Dallas Cowboys and the Oakland Raiders — the winningest teams in pro football over the past 16 years — meet in an exhibition battle at Fawcett Stadium.

Tickets for every one of the 20,000 seats have long since been snapped up.

The four inductees took different paths in achieving Hall of Fame status. Two were standouts on offenses and two were defensive aces.

A Pittsburgh Steeler reject in 1955, the strong-armed pass-tosser rose to prominence with the Baltimore Colts in a career which lasted 18 seasons. It included a string of 47 straight games between 1956 and 1960 in which he connected on at least one touchdown pass.

Mix earned his honor blocking as an offensive tackle for the San Diego Chargers for nearly a decade. And in that time he was only penalized twice for holding. He becomes only the second player from the former American Football League to enter the Hall.

Butkus destroyed offenses during his career as middle linebacker for the Chicago Bears. He accumulated more than 1,000 tackles and 500 assists in his nine years in the NFL and recovered 25 fumbles.

Lary played defensive back and was a topflight punter in his career with the Detroit Lions. He was selected for the Pro Bowl nine times in his 11-season career.

The enshrinement brings to 102 those who have attained a permanent accolade in the sport.

Oakland, which failed last year to make the playoffs for the first time since 1971, begins the era of Tom Flores, who replaced John Madden as coach at the end of the 1978 season.

The Cowboys of Coach Tom Landry and quarterback Roger Staubach are looking to regain the NFL championship they lost to the Pittsburgh Steelers in the Super Bowl in January.

The Cowboys are expected to play both veterans and rookies, with the coaches wanting a good look at the rookies for evaluation.

Turner Guides South Cagers' 114-88 Romp

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

FORT WORTH — For dinner, George Turner said he had steak, potatoes, green beans and a little bowl of green, wiggly, moaning Jello.

For dessert, he had the South all-stars.

The 6-1 sharpshooter from Hitchcock who caused quite a stir earlier in the week when he told reporters he was thinking about backing out of an agreement to play basketball for Southern University and attend a junior college (so he could attend the University of Texas in 1980), had it going his way.

He hit half of his 18 shots from the field and five of six free throws to lead the South All-Stars to a lopsided 114-88 win over the North at the Texas High School Coaches Association all-star game at the Tarrant County Convention Center.

The 26-point margin was the worst defeat suffered by either all-star group since 1956 when the North beat the South 81-43. A 55-27 win by the North in 1947 (28 point-margin) was the second worst.

Explained Turner, who was named the MVP of the South squad: "I simply play with poise all the time."

Period.

Although Brad Olson led the North in scoring with 16 points, Perryton's David Reynolds copped the team's Most Valuable honor. Reynolds, playing in foul trouble for most of the second half, hit 12 total points — 10 in the first half.

The main difference — besides Turner — was the South's ability to dominate the backboards almost from the outset of the contest, viewed by more than 4,000. The South out-boarded the North 46-37.

The South also hit 44 of 89 shots.

"We just couldn't play with them under the boards," lamented North coach James Boynton of Abilene. "I thought we might have handled them pretty well in the first half, though. But in the second half, they really hooked up.

"They just came out too quick for us."

The first half ended with the South on top by a mere 4 points, 53-49. But in the third quarter, the South outscored its counterpart 33-16 and that was that.

"I thought we were very fortunate to be up by four at the end of the first half," explained South coach Dave Middleton. "But in the third quarter, we totally controlled the tempo of the game. We were patient and took good shots during the first five minutes (of the last half)."

The South was without the services of Houstonians Robert Williams (6-2) and 6-11 Greg Kite, the latter because of injuries, the former because of — who knows? "It certainly didn't hurt us (not having them)," said Middleton. "The boys that filled in (Robert Shaw and Claude Riley) certainly played well."

It was a 4-point play by Shaw with 6:38 left in the third period that really opened up the game for the South. At the time, the Rebels led only 5 points. But, after Shaw hit a 20-foot hook shot, he was fouled by Reynolds.

After hitting two charity tosses, Shaw came back and hit a 6-footer 16 seconds later, lifting the South to a 66-55 advantage, at the time the largest of the game. After that the roof fell in on the North as the South reeled off 8 more unanswered points.

It was the South's night to rise again.

Winston Gipson of Estacado, Lubbock's represenative at the game, put on an excellent showing, hitting five-of-nine from the field and a pair of freebies for 12 total points. He had 10 of them in the first half.

Mayor Helps Start City Golf Tourney

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

It's Friday afternoon at the Meadowbrook Golf course. The sun is burning down relentlessly, underground the prairie dogs were working just as hard and out on the course, Lubbock's best golfers were toiling in the heat.

The reason for all the activity was simple — the Men's City Championship begins this morning at Meadowbrook and nearly everyone entered was getting in some last minute practice on Friday afternoon.

Everyone but the mayor, that is.

Dirk West stood in the air-conditioned comfort of the clubhouse and told stories. The mayor didn't seem the least bit ruffled by the competition ahead.

"Yeah, me and the prairie dogs," said West, "we'll be teeing off at 9 in the morning (actually 9:50 a.m.) And, boy, am I looking forward to it.

"Gosh, it's hard to keep track," he continued, "but I'll bet I've played in at least 20 of these city championships."

And what kind of track record have you posted over all those years, Mr.Mayor?

"Well, I don't think I've ever finished in the money," he admitted.

That prompted Meadowbrook pro Jay McClure to claim that West was giving himself more credit than he actually deserved.

"I don't think you've ever finished — period," said McClure.

"I durn sure have," retorted West. "Now maybe I did withdraw early once or twice, for one reason or another."

Still, McClure wasn't satisfied. "What about last year?" he asked the mayor. "You pulled out after the first day."

And why was that?

"Well I was getting killed, that's why," said an jokingly indignant West.

Not to doubt the mayor's credibility, but McClure later confided that there was talk among the Meadowbrook regulars of pooling their bets about exactly which hole would be West's last one.

But West, a six-handicap ("and I have trouble with that") golfer, is competiting in the first flight. The real big boys are in the championship flight. And, taking a serious approach, McClure is more than just a little proud of this year's championship flight.

There are 60 golfers in that topnotch

Dixie Team Tries Anson

Lubbock Mayor Dirk West has proclaimed today "Dixie Little League Day" in honor of the Dixie Little League All-Stars, who will meet Anson today at 7:30 p.m. in Snyder for the bidistrict championship.

Dixie advanced to the tournament after defeating the Northwest All-Stars last Tuesday for the Area championship.

A caravan of fans and boosters will meet in Lewis Park at 3:15 p.m. today for departure to Snyder. Mayor West urged support from Lubbockites to support the Little Leaguers.

In the outfield for Dixie, Todd Hunt will be in right, Shane Sawyer in center and Carey Wallace in left.

Winner of tonight's battle will advance to the state tournament, scheduled in Waco.

'Rainbow' To Bring 'Treasure'

This is the first year for the Rainbow Classic Benefit Golf Tournament, and so tournament officials blocked in for 288 spots.

But still the number of entrants for The Avalanche-Journal sponsored Arthritis Foundation Benefit Golf Tournament at Treasure Island Golf Course had swelled to 163 entrants by late Friday evening.

The tourney kicks off at 9 a.m. this morning and golfers still wishing to compete in the affair may sign up until then. The entry fee is only $15 and it's tax deductible, since all the proceeds go to the Arthritis Foundation.

Almost half of the field, 70 golfers, have elected to tee off at 9 a.m. Twenty-four golfers will start at noon, 22 will go off at 3 p.m. and another 47 tee off at 6 p.m.

Each flight is scheduled to hold 72 golfers so there is still plenty of room for last minute entries.

All of the golfers will have a chance to win a gold nugget that goes to the first golfer able to ace the 18th hole at Treasure Island. KMCC will televise all of the action on the final hole to record the winning shot.

McQueen Foresees High-Scoring All-Star Tilt

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

FORT WORTH — Bob McQueen certainly didn't set any tongues to flapping or buildings to moving when he commented, "I think there's enough talent on both teams offensively to keep this from being a 3-0 defensive game."

Common knowledge.

And when the Temple coach ventured out on the plank and said, "I know we're ready and I'm sure the other team is, too," women and children didn't go screaming into the street.

That, too, is common knowledge.

On the eve of tonight's Texas High School Coaches Association All-Star football game at Amon Carter Stadium, starting at 7:30 p.m., things were quiet. No one was taking pot shots at the other and certainly no outlandish predictions were being made either by coaches or players.

Yep, all was quiet on the schoolboy front.

McQueen, the head coach of the South, didn't venture to say, though, that the score in the game will be "something like three touchdowns to two or four to three." His favor.

The South has been pegged a touchdown or two favorite because of runningbacks Craig James of Houston Stratford and Eric Dickerson of Sealy, possibly the two best runners to ever start in the same backfield at the all-star game, commented one vet writer. James, who led Stratford to a Class AAAA state title last year, is the leading Class AAAA ball carrier of all time after rushing for more than 2,000 yards as a senior.

"Eric Dickerson and Craig James are great runners," said McQueen. "But they've done a super job blocking this week."

McQueen, normally the head coach at Temple High, feels the game should be "an interesting one. I know (North coach Frank) Bevers (of Highland Park) is going to run it wide open, and I certainly don't think we'll be dull to watch.

"I've heard we're the favorite, but I think our advantage will be negated because we're playing in what should be a partisan North area, and Coach Bevers has a running back (Lott McIlhenny) that played for him in high school and knows his system, plus a great defensive end (Mike Weddington) who played for me at Temple and knows how to defense our players."

McQueen made one lineup change Friday, moving Anthony Johnson of Union Hill to the starting right cornerback slot and Stanley Jackson of Seguin to free safety. Both positions, McQueen said, had been causing problems all week.

The South, which features South Plains players Dewey Turner of Estacado and Dennis Veals of Dimmitt, will be led by quarterback Rick McIvor of Fort Stockton. McIvor, like Turner a Texas recruit, will also double as the team's punter.

Joining McIvor and McIlhenny in the backfield will be Charles Wagoner of Dallas Carter. Leslie Butler of Fort Worth Arlington Heights will be at flanker.

This will be the 45th meeting between the two all-star teams, with the North holding a 25-15 advantage over the South. The game has finished in a tie only four times. In last year's game, the North edged the South, 7-6.

ENDING NOTES— Eddie Joseph of Wharton has been elected the president of the THSCA, while Bill Shipman of Andrews is the president-elect. . .Coaches-of-the-year in each classification, as selected by a sporting goods business, are Oscar Cripps of Houston Stratford in AAAA, Gordon Wood of Brownwood (AAA), Leland Caffey of Seminole (AA), Jim Byrd of China Spring (A) and Lelvin Schoeneman of Snook (B).

SKATESVILLE — It's two out of three that Russian women disregard a skater from the Western World on the streets of Moscow. At least two of these three Russian pedestrians walk by. One, however, casts a quizzical glance at an American who took time out from the Spartacade to test the skates. (AP Laserphoto)

Yankee-Come-Lately Wins Spartacade Race

MOSCOW (AP) — "I never imagined I would ever compete in such a meet," said Stan Vinson, the 27-year-old former Eastern Michigan runner. "I only came at four days' notice."

Vinson won the 400 meters at the Spartacade Games Friday in 45.69 seconds. It was the United States' fourth gold medal in the track and field events. And Vinson said it was his last 400 meters, except for a leg in the 1,600-meter relay set for Sunday night.

He plans to compete only in the 400 hurdles in the future.

It was quite a night at Moscow's Central Lenin Stadium. Marina Makeeva of the Soviet Union set a world record of 54.78 for the women's 400 hurdles. And Mirus Ifter, the remarkable little man from Ethiopia, completed a double in the distance races with a time of 13:20.8 in the 5,000 meters.

With a stride longer than his own height, Ifter produced the same finishing kick that brought him the 10,000 meters gold last Saturday.

Vinson, an elder statesman in track and field, ranks fifth or sixth among U.S. quarter-milers.

"The Russians can't understand why we run so good because we're so skinny," Vinson said. "Look at those Russians. They're all beefy and muscular. That's how they think we should be.

"We look like kids compared to them. And we run like kids -- fast."

Vinson said the track was slow and he was pleased with his time. Now he wants another gold medal in the relay.

"I love competition," he said. "I'm a great relay man. When I get the stick I go beserk."

Karen Hawkin, 22, of St. Louis, was a bridesmaid again. Ludmila Kondrateva of the Soviet Union, who already had defeated her in the 100 meters, did it again in the 200.

Kondrateva clocked 22.63 and Hawkin came home in 23.06.

Nelli Kim, the Eurasian beauty, won three of the day's gold medals in gymnastics, but 14-year-old Alice Priest of Wichita, Kan., had a moment of glory. She bested Miss Kim in the final vault of the aparatus competition.

Miss Priest was told at first she did not have enough points from the compulsories to compete in the finals. The judges changed their minds, and competition was held up while she was allowed to warm up with two practice vaults.

Then she startled the crowd of 8,000 with scores of 9.8 and 9.65. She had an average figure of 9.725 and vaulted from ninth place to fifth in the final aparatus standings for the event.

In the individual disciplines, Miss Kim won the uneven bars, the vault, and finally the floor exercises with a near perfect score of 9.95.

The Finnerans, husband and wife from columbus, ohio, also began their bid in the diving competition Friday.

Carrie Irish Finneran was third after two preliminary rounds of the 3-meter women's springboard. She was 30 points behind the leader, Irena Kalaninna of the Soviet Union, and only one point behind another Russian. The finals are today.

Oscar Blasts CBS-TV

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Television ratings in the National Basketball Association are suffering because of racist decisions by management and CBS, charged former all-pro Oscar Robertson.

"The owners say there are too many blacks playing the game, and the same time interest in the league is down, and they say that is the reason.

"Well, I think it's because they've done a bad job of promoting the league," said Robertson in an interview with The San Diego Union. He is in San Diego this week for a youth basketball program.

While the NBA "just went out and hired a big New York public relations firm to help them with their image," he believes the league could have done the job itself "if they had simply let the players go into the community. But they feel the black image is bad for the league.

"And yet, what's the most successful organization in sports history? I'll tell you. The Harlem Globetrotters — and they're all black."

The former University of Cincinnati scoring great said CBS has to share the blame.

"First of all, CBS has not done a good job of promoting the games, and also they (the owners) don't want blacks as broadcasters. They've got (Rick) Barry, (Rod) Hundley, (Brent) Musberger, who are all white, but how many blacks are there? I was on for a while, but I had that lawsuit against the owners, so they said they didn't want me."

On other subjects, Robertson said the NBA has declined because fewer high school coaches emphasize defense. And he rapped the NBA's recent adoption of the three-point play as "horrendous."

"The NBA isn't as good as it used to be, and I think it's because coaching at the high school level isn't what it used it used to be.

"When I was in high school, we spent hours on defense, and that's where today's players are having trouble. You cannot make a guy do something he hasn't done. Today, I see guys do a lot of things and wonder why they do them."

Lubbock Auto Racing Show Still In Doubt

The future of auto racing in Lubbock, at least in the near future, remained in doubt today. Races are scheduled tonight at Lubbock Speedway, but the prospect for cars was not promising.

Last Saturday drivers boycotted the track after several days of negotiations failed to resolve a disagreement between the South Plains Racing Association — which lists as members a majority of drivers competing at the track — and track owner/promoter Jack Halpain.

Principal point of contention was the payment of purses in accordance with a schedule agreed upon at the start of the season. The track subsequently went from two nights of racing to one and payoffs were keyed to a percentage of the gate, resulting in sharply diminished purses in some cases.

Other facets of the dispute relating to maintenance of track spectator and racing facilities apparently were resolved, with money the remaining barrier to resumed racing.

Last weekend seven cars put on a curtailed show and spectators got passes to a later program.

Halpain said this week that there would be street stock and mini-stock racing for drivers who wanted to run and that the purse would consist of 100 percent of the gate.

But Ken Duncan, association president, said that the association's members had voted unanimously to accept only the payoff stipulated at the start of the season and indicated no compromise would be acceptable.

Friday night the track hosted a motocross program which lured a large field of motorcyclists. Auto races tonight — if any — will be at 8:30 p.m.

Papale Seeks NFL Version Of Rocky III

CHESTER, Pa. (AP) — Vince Papale knows the odds aren't stacked in his favor as he works to make the Philadelphia Eagles 1979 roster.

But he is not going to give up his National Football League career without a fight.

This season's story of Papale, who stirred fans as a 30-year-old walk-on rookie in 1976, could be dubbed "Vince III," because of his similarity to film hero Rocky Balboa.

"Vince I" would show the high school teacher turned wide receiver give each play his best through his first season on the special teams squad.

"Vince II" would detail the trials of getting cut in August 1978, going home to break the news to his wife, then returning to a television sportscaster's job.

The audience, however, would cheer the twist of fate several weeks later when coach Dick Vermeil invites Papale to return after Wally Henry is injured.

In this year's sequel, Vince, now 33, is back in the Eagles' training camp at Widener College, panting along with 10 other wide receivers trying for five spots.

"When I was cut last summer, I said, 'Never again'," Papale recalled the other day. "I said I might sign with another club just to finish out the season, but I'd never come back for another year. I couldn't put myself and my family through that kind of anguish again. Two weeks later, I knew I was only kidding myself."

Papale faces stiff competition this year, including Harold Carmichael, Charlie Smith, a healthy Wally Henry and Scott Fitzkee, the fifth-round draft choice from Penn State.

Papale also has a fractured disc in his back that sometimes sends a stabbing pain down both legs. But he is more determined than ever.

"Coming to camp this summer, I made up my mind to treat it just the way I did my first camp, in '76," he said. "I'd bust my butt on every snap. I'd hustle, I'd be enthusiastic, I'd be a leader.

"I don't know what happened to me last summer, but my attitude just wasn't what it should have been."

Papale grew up in Glenolden, Delaware County, and was a track star at St. Joseph's College, which has no football program.

After playing semipro football, he spent two years with the Philadelphia Bell of the now-defunct World Football League.

"I'm really proud to be a Philadelphia Eagle," he said. "I was proud when we were 4-10. I'm even prouder now that we're winners.

"I grew up rooting for this team and now, when I hear Dick Vermeil talk about turning this program around, it really touches me because I know I was a part of it. That's not something I'm going to give up easily.

"I know these young receivers are good. This is the toughest competition I've faced in four years.

"But I know what I can do. I know how I feel and I still believe there's a place for me here."

City Championship Starts Two-Day Run

flight and McClure claims that there are at least 20 with a legitimate shot at the title. And maybe even more.

"It's unquestionably our best field ever," says McClure. "It's going to come down to whoever putts well and whoever plays the course the way it's laid out.

"This isn't the kind of course that you can attack," he added. "You just have to play it."

Several of the golfers in the championship flight have already captured area partnerships this summer, but partnerships can be deceptive, says McClure.

"I wish there were more individual tournaments these days," said McClure. "It's hard to tell who the really good golfers are from partnerships. It's too easy to lean on your partner in those tournaments.

"The scores are going to be a little higher this weekend then they have been in all of those team tournaments," warned McClure.

And, according to West and McClure, the field wasn't always as strong in the championship flight as it is now.

"Back in the 50's," said McClure, "this tournament used to be a rotating one between the country clubs and us. But then the clubs sort of lost interest and we've had it ever since the early 60's."

And for a long time the city meet was a match-play tournament. But under that format, it lasted nearly two weeks, and eventually went to its present stroke play system.

Yes sir, the city championship has seen a lot of changes over the years — and most of them have been for the best. But there is one exception.

"The most tragic thing about the tournament," said McClure, "was when we lost our trophy. Boy, we had a beautiful trophy."

"You see," explained West. "It was a traveling trophy. I don't want to name any names, but one year the winner took our traveling trophy and traveled."

The trophy has never been seen in Lubbock again. But it has been heard of since its departure from the Hub City.

"I was at a PGA meeting a couple of years ago," said McClure, "and a pro from California told me he saw a trophy that said 'Lubbock City Championship'.

"It was in a hock shop in LA."

But once again Lubbock's best golfers will be out at Meadowbrook trying to catch a little piece of it.

Dwyer, Sherk Share Canadian Golf Lead

STE. JULIE, Quebec (AP) — Cathy Sherk of Canada overcame a case of early butterflies to fire a 1-over-par 74 and fall into a share of the lead in Friday's second round of the $150,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association.

Miss Sherk, who had a 4-under-par 69 in Thursday's opening round, is tied at 143 with Mary Dwyer, who had a 71 to go with her opening-round 72.

"I got off to a very shaky start," Miss Sherk said. "I had been fine at the practice tee, but when I got between the tee blocks on the first hole, I had butterflies. It's the first time I've experienced this kind of nervousness."

The Canadian golfer saw her three-stroke lead fade quickly. She took bogeys on the first and third holes, then missed good chances for birdies on three other holes on the front nine.

She started the back nine with a bogey as she missed a 15-foot putt, but got that one stroke back with a sparkling 40-footer on the par-5, 515-yard 12th hole on the Richelieu Valley course. She finished with a birdie on 18.

Miss Dwyer was one of six players who started the day trailing Miss Sherk by three strokes, but birdied the par-5, 488-yard ninth with a 9-foot putt. She was able to beat par on the 13th with an 8-footer and completed her round without a bogey.

"They were real tricky pin placements today — I can't wait to see them the next two days," said Miss Dwyer, whose best finish this year was a tie for fifth in the United States Open.

J.C. Snead Conquers Phillic Classic Course

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — J.C. Snead played Whitemarsh Country Club's course with its high rough and narrow, tree-lined fairways in record-tying 7-under-par 64 on Friday to take a two-stroke lead after two rounds of the $250,-0000 Philadelphia Golf Classic.

Snead, who long ago emerged from the shadow of uncle Sam Snead, charged into the lead the hard way. He had to get up before dawn to complete four holes of his first round, which was washed out by a rain story early Thursday evening.

He carded a birdie and three pars to complete that round with a 3-under-par 68, just three strokes off first round co-leaders David Graham and Bill Rogers, both at 65.

Rogers, Andy Bean and Tommy Valentine were tied for fourth at 136.

Snead opened a 10-stroke lead over defending champion Jack Nicklaus, who is at par 142 for two rounds. Nicklaus just returned from England where he tied for second in the British Open.

Graham, a golf glub designer from Australia, took a bogey 7 on the 11th hole, his first over-par hole of the tournament. He had four birdies in his round and wound up with a 2-under 69, 8-under for 36 holes, two strokes behind Snead.

Like his uncle, J.C. Snead is a smooth-talking Southerner from Hot Springs, Va. Snead realizes that Nicklaus is here only because Jack is the defending champion. So, J.C. became the devil's advocate.

"A tournament is a tournament, whatever you call it," said Snead. "This is just as important as next week (the PGA).

"Of course I'd trade a victory for next week, but this is important. After all we're not playing for a trophy," Snead said.

J.C. was right about not playing for a trophy. The winner's share is $45,000. And he went after the dough. Snead rolled in a six-footer for birdie on one, hit a wedge six feet into the third hole for bird, two-putted from 15 feet for a bird on a par-5 on the fifth, bogeyed six, knocked in a six-footer for bird at seven and made the turn in 3-under 33.

On the back side there was no letup by the 200-pound Snead whose last tour triumph was in 1976. He shaved a stroke off par at 12 and 13, shot par through 16 and wrapped up a superb round with 25 and 18 foot birdie putts.

The last Philadelphia Classic competitors to shoot 64s were Nicklaus and Gil Morgan in 1978, while R.H. Sikes did it in 1965.

Rangers Wash Sox 11-2

By the Associated Press

Pat Putnam's bases-loaded double in the first inning fused an 18-hit attack by the Texas Rangers that buried the Boston Red Sox 11-2 Friday night behind Steve Comer's nifty five-hitter.

Comer, 11-6, struck out six and walked five. The Rangers staked him to a big lead in the first two innings, blasting Bob Stanley, 11-7, and reliever Joel Finch for nine runs on 10 hits.

John Grubb went 4-for-5 for Texas, including two RBI singles. He also doubled and scored a run.

After Putnam drove in the first two runs with his double, Buddy Bell, Al Oliver and Richie Zisk followed with RBI doubles in the second.

Fred Lynn singled in the first and Carl Yastrzemski singled in the second. Comer didn't allow Boston another hit until Stan Papi's single in seventh. Dwight Evans added a single in the ninth.

Bump Wills, Bell and Oliver hit consecutive singles to load the bases with nobody out in the first, and Putnam smashed a ground-rule double to score the first two runs. Zisk's groundout brought Oliver home and Oscar Gamble drove home the fourth run of the inning with a single to left.

DODGERS 11, ASTROS 7

Dusty Baker clubbed a three-run homer Friday night, helping Los Angeles to an 11-7 victory over the Houston Astros and giving the Dodgers their eighth triumph in nine games since the All-Star break.

Veteran Los Angeles reliever Charlie Hough, making only his third major league start, held Houston to eight hits over seven innings as the Dodgers recorded their sixth consecutive victory. He needed relief help from Lerrin LaGrow and Dave Patterson to put down a six-run Houston uprising in the eighth.

Houston's rally was highlighted by a pair of two-run singles by Terry Puhl and Jesus Alou. Hough, 2-2, was forced into the starting rotation by Los Angeles pitching injuries.

REDS 2, BRAVES 0

Mike LaCoss and Doug Bair combined on a six-hitter as the Cincinnati Reds recorded their fourth consecutive victory, a 2-0 triumph over the Atlanta Braves Friday night.

Joe Niekro, 14-12, extended his string of shutout innings to 21 before Joe Morgan scored a sixth-inning run.

Morgan singled, stole second and took third when catcher Bruce Benedict's throw went into center field. He scored when Dave Concepcion hit into a force play, ruining Niekro's bid to become the major leagues' first 15-game winner.

ORIOLES 8, ROYALS 0

Ken Singleton and Lee May each slammed home runs and left-hander Mike Flanagan became the American League's first 14-game winner as the streaking Baltimore Orioles downed the Kansas City Royals 8-0 Friday night.

Flanagan, who has lost six, stopped the Royals on just three hits to give the Orioles their ninth victory in 10 games. He struck out eight and walked only one in a sparkling performance.

Singleton socked a three-run homer to left field in the first inning, his 25th of the year, then May connected for a two-run shot in the third, his 15th.

CUBS 4, METS 2

Ivan DeJesus' eighth-inning double drove home Ted Sizemore with the run that broke a 1-1 tie and Kingman added his 32nd homer of the year — a two-run shot in the ninth — for a 4-1 Chicago lead.

The Mets got a ninth-inning run when Chicago shortstop DeJesus made two errors, Steve Henderson walked and Ed Kranepool hit into a fielder's choice.

TIGERS 4, BLUE JAYS 3

Pinch-runner Lynn Jones scored on an errant throw by shortstop Alfredo Griffin in the 11th inning to give the Detroit Tigers a 4-3 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays Friday night.

Ed Putman doubled with one out off reliever Tom Buskey, 4-5. Ron LeFlore hit a two-out grounder to Griffin but the throw was wide to first, allowing Jones to score.

Toronto had tied the game 3-3 with a two-out, bottom-of-the-ninth two-run homer by Rick Cerone off Detroit reliever Aurelio Lopez, 5-3.

CARDINALS 5, PHILLIES 0

Bob Forsch pitched a three-hitter and George Hendrick drove in two runs for the second consecutive game as the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Philadelphia Phillies 5-0 Friday night.

Forsch, 4-9, surrendered second-inning singles to Greg Luzinski and Tim McCarver and a ninth-inning single by Del Unser.

Nino Espinosa, 10-8, was knocked out in the third inning after allowing six hits and all the St. Louis runs.

PIRATES SWEEP EXPOS

John Milner drove in four runs with a single and a three-run home Friday nght to back the five-hit pitching of Bert Blyleven, pacing Pittsburgh to a 9-1 triumph and completing the Pirates' sweep of the Montreal Expos in a twi-night doubleheader.

Phil Garner's RBI single in the eighth inning snapped a tie and carried the Pirates to a 5-4 triumph in the opener before a crowd of 59,260 — the highest in the major leagues this season. The sweep brought the Pirates and Chicago Cubs within one-half game of the first-place Expos in the National League's East Division.

INDIANS 7, WHITE SOX 2

Cliff Johnson drove in three runs with a solo homer and a two-run single, and Ted Cox also homered Friday night as the Cleveland Indians took their fifth straight victory under new Manager Dave Garcia, whipping the Chicago White Sox 7-2.

BREWERS 6, YANKS 5

Cecil Cooper hit his third homer of the night with two out in the ninth inning, lifting Milwaukee to a 6-5 victory over the New York Yankees Friday night in a game which saw Yankee slugger Reggie Jackson ejected after fighting with Brewer pitcher Mike Caldwell.

Cooper lined his 17th homer of the year, into the right-center field bullpen, on a 1-2 pitch from loser Rich Gossage, 1-1, who had relieved Ron Davis in the eighth.

TEMPER TEMPER — New York Yankee Reggie Jackson grabs the neck of Milwaukee pitcher Mike Caldwell and begins to squeeze it as umpire John Shulock moves into to break it up. The incident occured Friday night during the New York-Milwaukee contest. Apparently Caldwell had angered the Yankee slugger. (AP Laserphoto)

Yankees Brawling Again; But Reggie, Billy On Same Side

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The New York Yankees played their game with Milwaukee Friday night under protest after the Yankees' Reggie Jackson was ejected as a result of a fight with Brewers pitcher Mike Caldwell in the fourth inning.

Jackson, the first Yankee to bat in the fourth, had to jump out of the way of Caldwell's first pitch to him. Then, after the count reached 2-2, a high inside pitch from Caldwell sent Jackson to the dirt again.

Caldwell angrily grabbed the bat, put his foot on it and apparently tried to break it as he protested to plate umpire John Shulock. Jackson, who by this time had rounded first base, abruptly turned and charged the mound. Jackson grabbed Caldwell around the throat with both hands, and the two wrestled each other to the ground in front of the pitcher's mound as players charged to the scene from both dugouts. Several also ran to the scene from the bullpens in right-center field.

Jackson was ejected, which prompted a heated protest by Yankees Manager Billy Martin, who apparently contended that since Jackson was thumbed out, Caldwell should be ejected as well. Caldwell remained in the game.

Unitas Hated To Quit Playing

BALTIMORE (AP) — Johnny Unitas, the crew cut Pied Piper in high-topped shoes who led pro football into its glory years, joins the game's elite today in the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

The honor was a foregone conclusion for the spindly legged quarterback rescued from the $9-a-game semipro ranks after being released by the Pittsburgh Steelers in 1955.

In 17 seasons with the Baltimore Colts and one with the San Diego Chargers, Unitas completed 2,830 passes for 40,239 yards and 290 touchdowns. During one stretch, he threw at least one TD pass in 47 consecutive games.

But the competition itself, and its camaraderie, meant more to Unitas than records.

"I hate to quit playing football," he said upon retirement in 1974. "The mind is willing but your body wears out. I would like to play another 30 years if I could."

Unitas was known for his poise under pressure, a mental toughness which enabled him to hold the ball until the last possible moment as opposing players closed in for the tackle.

But Unitas didn't view it that way, even when he passed from inside the New York Giants' 10-yard line in the sudden death National Football League championship game of 1958.

After the Colts won 23-17, in a game which gave pro football a major thrust foreward, Unitas said: "A pass is not a gamble when you know where to throw it."

Win or lose, Unitas exhibited a stoic approach which perplexed reporters. He was never ecstatic after a victory, never crushed after a defeat.

"I play as well as I can every week," he often said, "and after it's over, I don't worry about it."

Preparation was his key to picking apart opposition defenses, and Unitas felt disdain for those who didn't work hard. He was especially critical of modern day players.

"The guys just don't have the dedication I would like to them to have," he said late in his career. "You can't get them to do the things they should be doing. They don't seem to care whether they play football or not, as long as they make the team and get their checks."

JOHNNY UNITAS

As for his own philosophy of preparation and dedication, Unitas once said: "If I didn't use my ability to the fullest extent, I'd be cheating."

Unitas was making $250,000 a season when he retired to run his restaurant in the Baltimore area, but considering his impact on the game he was grossly underpaid during his prime.

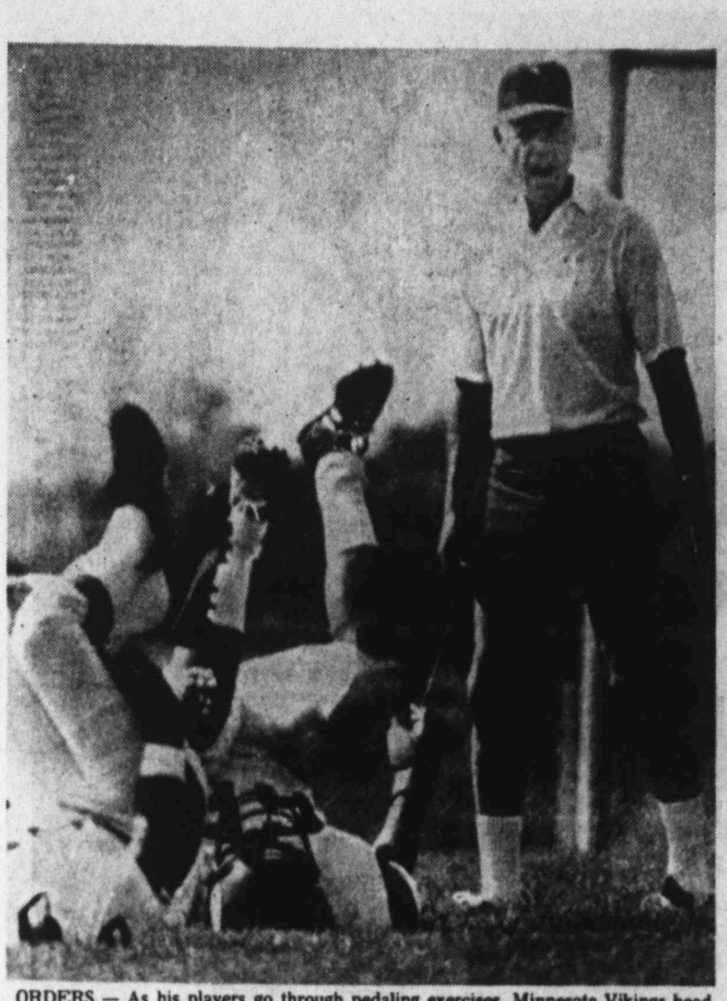
With the Colts winning consecutive championships in 1958-59 as the game gained popularity and prestige, Unitas was everybody's hero. He was cheered when the Colts played on the road, an honor reserved only for a special kind of superstar.

Sid Luckman, the Chicago Bears' great, often tells how he and fellow Hall of Famer Sammy Baugh used to kid each other about who was the best quarterback of all time.

"In time we gave up our little game," Luckman said. "We both realized John Unitas was the greatest."

While there will never be unanimous agreement on that, Unitas was named the best quarterback of the first 50 years of pro football.

In the Hall of Fame, Unitas joins six contemporaries from Baltimore's early championship years. They include defensive linemen Gino Marchetti and Art Donovan, receiver Raymond Berry, running back Lenny Moore, offensive lineman Jim Parker, and Coach Weeb Ewbank.



ORDERS — As his players go through pedaling exercises, Minnesota Vikings head coach Bud Grant yells out orders. The Vikings, always the last NFL club to begin workouts, is training at Mankato, Minn. (AP Laserphoto)

Younger Mullaney Detests Singing At Training Camp

Ryan Mullaney, brother of Minnesota defensive end Mark Mullaney, is trying to catch on with the Vikings as a free agent linebacker. But his first major hurdle at the Vikings Mankato State training camp hasn't been learning how to shed a blocker or make a tackle.

"I could hardly eat that first night I was so nervous," said Mullaney of the long-time tradition where rookies entertain veterans with their school fight songs. "I don't like things like that, and neither did Mark. He was one of the worst. He was hiding up in his room the first day. They had to go get him."

Ryan's vocal debut wasn't half bad, though, and the veterans even gave him a break. Instead of making him do a solo, they let him sing a duet with Nevada-Las Vegas teammate Dan Budak, a free agent safety. Mullaney and Budak said they didn't know their school song, so they offered the shortest rendition of Kenny Rogers' "The Gambler" in the history of music.

Later, in the sanctity of the press lounge, the 6-5, 228-pound Mullaney relaxed and talked about the Vikings.

"I kind of like my chances," he said. "I've seen what some of the other linebackers can do, and I think I can do at least as well, if not better. I'm trying to pattern myself after Matt Blair. He's a good style to copy."

The Vikings' starting linebacking trio is set — Blair and Fred McNeill on the outside with Jeff Siemon in the middle. Scott Studwill and Wally Hilgenberg are the other veterans.

Mullaney's main competition will come from the likes of Whip Walton, a third-round draft pick a year ago; Mark Nichols, who was with San Francisco in 1978, and Jerry Meter, the Vikings' fifth-round selection out of Michigan this year.

"If I have to put on a kangaroo suit to make this team, that's what I'll do," Mullaney said.

Mullaney, 23, was graduated from Las Vegas with a degree in communications after having also spent time at Colorado State and Colorado. Brother Mark, who was a standout player at Colorado State, admits that he's a little apprehensive about having Ryan in camp.

"It would be hard to see him get cut; nobody wants to see something like that happen to their own brother," Mark said. "I just wish the best for him and hope things work out."

"He didn't want me to come here at first, because he figured a lot of guys would give me trouble," said Ryan Mullaney. "But I think he's glad I'm here now. I don't know if the veterans treat me special, because I don't know how they treat the other rookies.

"But they do recognize me — or think they do. I get called 'Mark' three or four times a day."

OU Picked For Big 8 Crown

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Oklahoma, returning 11 starters from last season's co-championship team, has been tabbed by sportswriters and sportscasters to win this year's Big Eight football title.

The Sooners received 84 first-place votes, Missouri was runner-up with 25, and Nebraska, which shared the 1978 championship with Oklahoma, had eight top-spot ballots in the Big Eight's 34th annual mid-summer picks.

Oklahoma also tied for the title in 1975 and 1976, and will be going after its seventh consecutive conference championship.

The summer pollsters have correctly picked the eventual football champion 21 times out 33 since the survey began in 1946.

On a point basis, 8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1, Oklahoma got 890 points, Missouri 770, Nebraska 763.5, Colorado 533.3, Iowa State 473, Oklahoma State 317.5, Kansas State 263.5, and Kansas 203.5.

Oerter Still Learning — At 42

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Venerable Al Oerter, at the young age of 42, says he still is learning to throw the discus, even though he has won the event four times in the Olympic Games.

Oerter, on a sentimental journey in quest of his fifth Olympic title next year in the Summer Games at Moscow, said Friday, "I feel I have a lot more to learn, but I don't know what I can learn. I have a mental image of what I have to do in the (discus) ring, but I don't know if I can achieve it physically.

"If I can achieve it, I will throw 230 feet next year."

In all his years of throwing the circular platter, Oerter never has approached 230.

His best effort, 219-10, was achieved early this year, and his second best toss, 217-8, came at last month's National AAU Championships in Walnut, Calif.

In his most recent competition, during a six-meet, 18-day tour of Europe, he said he threw between 192 feet and 200 feet.

"I was over there to learn, not to throw," he explained at the U.S. Olympic Training site where he is preparing for National Sports Festival II. "It was important for me to be over there. I was very impressed by (world record holder) Wolfgang Schmidt of East Germany. He's a fine technician.

"I think I've learned more in the last year than I did in the 12-year period (from 1956-1968) when I was the Olympic champion."

The amazing Oerter, an inspiration to the so-called geriatic set, competed for another year after the '68 Olympics, then took an eight-year leave of absence before resuming training. Why did he come back?

"I enjoy the environment," said the muscular 6-foot-4, 275-pounder. "My goal is to make the Olympic team again. Not to win medals. The calibre of discus thrower in the United States has improved so much that it would be an honor just to make the team."

He called his goal "fascinating," adding, "I want to see how far I can push myself. The journey to it (the goal) is what is most enjoyable, not the day that decides whether I make the United States team or not."

Oerter said he was certain he would be "at my very best next year" for the Olympic track and field trials that will determine which three athletes in each event qualify for the American team.

He always is at his best when the pressure is heaviest, as his four gold medals testify. In the four Olympic Games in which he competed, he never was the favorite. But each time he won — with an Olympic record.

"My opponents know I will be at my best," he said.

LOOKING FOR NUMBER FIVE — Al Oerter, who won gold medals in the discus in the Olympics in 1956, 1960, 1964, and 1968, says at age 42 he's looking forward to the summer games in Moscow next summer. (AP Laserphoto)

Hurdler Blasts AAU Leaders For Sports Events Conflicts

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Veteran hurdler Mike Shine lashed out at the Amateur Athletic Union Friday for helping create a scheduling conflict with Russia's Spartacade and the National Sports Festival II.

"They pull stunts like this all the time," the former Penn State University star said of the AAU.

Spartacade started July 20 and extends through Aug. 3. The Festival, the United States' answer to the Russian pre-Olympic national meet, runs head-to-head with Spartacade for six days. The American meet began Friday.

"I can't understand why our athletes were put in such a position," said Shine, second to Edwin Moses in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles in the Olympics.

"The Spartacade or the Festival? What would you do? You want to go to both. You want to get the feel of how Russia really is," said Glance, a prime contender in the Festival 100-meter dash today.

Baron Pittinger, director of the Festival, said the sponsoring U.S. Olympic Committee had no choice on its 1979 meet dates.

"It was a problem of timing. The U.S. Air Force Academy (where most of the athletes are housed) was only available this week. And Colorado Springs was the only city committed to the Festival.

"The Russians asked us to change our dates. We couldn't. We were locked in."

Shine also charged America's amateur athletic officials issued directives that U.S. track compeititors had to go to Spartacade to be eligible for the prestigious World Cup Aug. 24-26 in Montreal.

"An East coach here told me they gave him an ultimatum. He said his athletes had to run at Spartacade or no World Cup," Shine said.

Shine, however, refused to name the coach or any individuals involved in such ultimatums, saying, "I don't waht to get myself into trouble."

Shine's target was not only the AAU. He took verbal pokes at the athletes who pulled out of this competition that has drawn 2,300 competitors in 31 sports.

"I get upset at the prima donnas when they don't want to go to a meet. I will never pass up a competition just because I don't want to go," said the outspoken hurdler.

Rejection Of Jane Fonda Appointment Rapped

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. joined Jane Fonda at a California Arts Council meeting Friday to condemn state senators who rejected her appointment to the panel as a "small-minded" group that acted "like a bunch of little kids."

Miss Fonda wiped a tear from her eye as first the governor and then, one by one, each council member praised her and criticized the Senate for its rejection of her appointment.

On a 28-5 vote, the Democrat-controlled Senate last week refused to confirm Brown's appointment of Miss Fonda, a two-time Academy Award-winning actress with growing influence as a political adviser to the governor.

"If these senators were as tough and big as they like to think, why didn't they invite Jane Fonda to be heard and call her to her face the names they called her like a bunch of little kids?" Brown asked rhetorically in an informal meeting with reporters after his appearance at the council.

The rejection of the appointment was one of several slaps at Brown in recent weeks by a Legislature increasingly unhappy with the governor. Many legislators of both parties have come to view Brown as a political opportunist.

Brown opened the meeting with a statement defending her:

"The fact that she holds political beliefs that make it difficult for some senators to be re-elected would only indicate that art must transcend politics."

Some council members charged that her rejection marked a rebirth of the McCarthy era, and many asked her to remain on the council for the next 60 days, because she is technically on the council until 60 days after her rejection.

Miss Fonda, the last to speak, said it was "shocking" that a majority of the Senate voted to "inject politics into what should have been a discussion of my merits as an artist to represent the arts community in California ... these senators appeared to have forgotten the meaning of the word democracy."

UP AGAINST THE WALL — Actor Richard Dreyfuss, center, stands against a wall as he watches unidentified actors during a rehearsal for "Othello," in New York Thursday. Gutsier Rock Style Follows Album

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Walter Egan's first hit, "Magnet and Steel," had a mellow, easy sound and backup work by Fleetwood Mac stars Stevie Nicks and Lindsey Buckingham.

WALTER EGAN

So what does he do for an encore? Drop Miss Nicks and switch to a gutsier, less polished rock beat, that's what. It's not what most people would call building on success.

"You get crazy if you sit and try to do what other people think you should be doing," shrugs Egan during a break at a North Hollywood rehearsal studio where he is preparing for an upcoming tour. "You have to do what you feel and hopefully that will jive with what they want."

It's probably to this quiet-voiced 31-year-old's credit that he's kept up that kind of idealism over a decade of dues-paying in a succession of what he describes as "garage bands."

As a teenager in Queens, N.Y. during the 60s, Egan started honing his singing, songwriting and guitar-playing talents in a surf music band which quickly began emulating the new British sound as Beatlemania gathered steam.

But by the time he moved to Southern California in 1974 he was into country music. In fact, his first big break was when country rocker Gram Parsons recorded "Hearts on Fire," which Egan co-authored with Tom Guidera.

The song appeared on an album released shortly after Parsons death of a drug overdose. But "Hearts On Fire" didn't serve as much of a calling card for Egan's new passion: Good, old fashioned rock.

No matter. A local club date landed Egan a record contract in 1976; an engineer friend gave one of his tapes to Miss Nicks and Buckingham, who agreed to produce him.

Not much came of his first album, but the second, "Not Shy," produced "Magnet and Steel." Another cut, "Hot Summer Nights," was less successful for Egan himself, but a cover version of the song by another group, Night, is on its way up the charts.

Now that he's not a total unknown, Egan is in a position to help his own friends — like backup singer Annie McCloone, whose debut album he produced.

He can also start worrying about image niceties. He doesn't want to be labeled as a middle-of-the-roader by a radio audience that only knows "Magnet." Nor does he relish his reputation in some circles as a Fleetwood Mac satellite.

Stolen Goods Allegedly Hoarded For Protection

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — A psychiatrist who earned up to $100,000 a year in his practice was held Thursday on charges of robbing wealthy homes of half a million dollars worth of guns and other goods which he stockpiled to protect himself against Communists.

The suspect, Dr. Ian S. Gale, 41, was arrested late Wednesday in his car, about half a mile from his home. He was armed with a .38-caliber pistol but offered no resistance.

The suspect's wife, Vita, permitted police to search his home where they found a cache of guns, ammunition, swords, jewelry, hand grenades, gunpowder and ammunition cannisters filled with silver and gold pieces.

"It is the largest amount of stolen goods I've been involved in since I've been a law enforcement officer in the county, and I'm pretty sure the largest ever in South Carolina," said Richland County Sheriff Frank Powell.

Fifth Circuit Solicitor James Anders said Gale apparently stored the weapons and other valuables, which were kept in two sealed rooms at his house, because he feared the Communists would trigger a severe economic depression.

"His philosophy is that the Communists are already in control of the United States and a horrible depression is about ready to hit," Anders said.

"He is associated with militant-type reactionaries," the solicitor said.

Gale, who was ordered held without bond for a 15-day psychiatric evaluation at the state hospital, was charged with eight counts of housebreaking and grand larceny.

Powell said the doctor, who also has a law degree, may be linked to 150 burglaries in Richland County.

Capt. J.A. McCauley of the sheriff's department said Gale was a trained locksmith and apparently broke into "expensive" houses at night. "He went into people's homes on the weekend and when people weren't there."

Authorities said they first became suspicious of Gale's activities four months ago when he cashed an allegedly stolen check with a fraudulent driver's license.

Gale received an M.D. degree from Temple University in Philadelphia, and did special training at the Utah Medical Center in Salt Lake City.

Gays Want Film Crew Out Of Village; Claim Misrepresentation

NEW YORK (AP) — Homosexual activists have been fighting for their rights for years, but now a movie they say misrepresents gay life has them on the other end of a constitutional dilemma.

Filming of the movie "Cruising" in the heavily homosexual Greenwich Village area has triggered a week of sometimes violent demonstrations by gays who claim the picture merely reinforces old stereotypes.

"We're not asking for censorship. We're saying, 'Get it out of our community,'" said Charles Brydon, co-executive director of the National Gay Task Force.

"We're very conscious of the First Amendment with this particular film, and we're also aware that the film will be made," he said. "We're questioning that it's to be made in Greenwich Village, the center of the gay community."

The film stars Al Pacino as an undercover policeman assigned to stop the killings of homosexuals. The detective discovers he too is gay and reacts by going on a psychopathic killing spree.

The script is said to be rife with explicit, graphic details on the murders and sexual mutilations of gays.

Brydon said the film presents a "distorted view of gay life. We've been so victimized by distorted stereotypes that we're saying, 'No more.'"

But producer Jerry Weintraub, whose film successes include "Oh, God," said he will not yield to demands by members of the gay community that the script be rewritten.

"We live in a free society. No changes are contemplated," Weintraub said.

In a week of demonstrations at filming sites, which continued Friday, several protesters have been arrested, including one charged with trying to slash a policeman with a razor.

Protesters and reporters have been shoved to the ground and clubbed, and hundreds of riot-equipped police have been needed to keep the peace. A few minor injuries were reported.

But Mayor Edward Koch, who banned discrimination against homosexuals as one of the first acts of his administration, refused Thursday to withdraw the filming permit for "Cruising."

"This city cannot and will not change its policies or goals in response to violence, disruptive or illegal activities," the mayor said.

He said film producers "know you just don't do that today — simply because it's unacceptable. It's their own self-censorship. No one is telling them you can't do it, they just know not to."

Airlines To Increase International Fares

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Civil Aeronautics Board has approved some international fare increases, responding to airline requests for more money to offset rising fuel prices.

Thursday the board approved first class and promotional fare hikes of 5 percent for Braniff Airlines' North Atlantic routes, 7 percent for Eastern Airlines' Caribbean markets, and between 2 and 17.5 percent for American Airlines' Caribbean flights. The increases will be effective various dates in mid-August.

Clint Eastwood Film Rated Best Of New Releases

Filmeter is compiled by Dick Kleiner in Hollywood and the N.E.A. staff in both Hollywood and New York.)

NEW RELEASES

DRACULA (PG) — Frank Langella, Laurence Olivier, Donald Pleasance. Horror. An old favorite with the thirsty Count made over as a matinee idol. Director John ("Saturday Night Fever") Badham heaps on the flashy effects and the gore at the expense of the story. More distasteful than scary. Caution: too much for our taste. GRADE: C (Handler)

ESCAPE FROM ALCATRAZ (PG) — Clint Eastwood, Patrick McGoohan. Drama. Good, tough escape yarn — lean and fast-moving with producer-star Eastwood in top form. High-quality Hollywood entertainment on a low budget. Hats off to Eastwood and director Don Siegel for proving it can still be done. Caution: some violence, strong language. GRADE: A (Handler)

MEATBALLS (PG) — Bill Murray. Comedy. Summer camp antics from the "Animal House" team. Trips all over itself in trying to imitate its predecessor, and all but buries some nice character scenes between Murray and newcomer Chris Makepeace. Too much bad material has been left in to classify it as a worthy outing. Murray shows some big screen presence. Catch it next year on TV. GRADE: C (Handler)

MOONRAKER (PG) — Roger Moore, Lois Chiles. Spy adventure. James Bond is back and that's about all you need to say. This one is the most illogical, ridiculous, senseless Bond film of all — but it's still great fun, stylish, witty and full of extraordinary gimmicks and special effects. Ignore the plot, just sit back and have a good time. GRADE: B

PROPHECY (PG) — Talia Shire, Robert Foxworth, Armand Assantic, Richard Dysart. Horror. Giant, ill-humored mutant terrorizes Maine campers and eats several of them. Monster resembles Yogi the Bear covered with strawberry jam. Big-budget summer scare movie is silly and boring. A failure on all counts. Caution: some gratuitous dismembering. GRADE: D (Handler)

GENERAL RELEASE

BLOODLINE (R) — Audrey Hepburn, Ben Gazzara, James Mason, Omar Sharif. Romantic mystery. This is further proof that big best-sellers are tough to turn into movies. Sidney Sheldon's book becomes a fuzzy mess here, despite lavish production and a fine cast. It is compressed and emerges with more holes than a yard of screening. And a sub-plot (involving sex and nudity) has absolutely no connection with the rest of it. GRADE: C

THE IN-LAWS (PG) — Peter Falk, Alan Arkin. Comedy adventure. Feel like a good laugh? This is it — a wild and crazy film about a man (Falk) who may be a crook or a hero and another man (Arkin) who is only a poor, suffering dentist. United by the coming marriage of their children, the one drags the other into a complicated mess that isn't very logical — but great fun for everybody. GRADE: A

THE KIDS ARE ALRIGHT (PG) — The Who. Documentary. The story of one of rock's finest bands in a few words and a lot of music from concerts, TV shows and films throughout the career of the Who. A straight-ahead documentary that works through the power of the music and the four compelling personalities that made up the Who. A must for rock fans. GRADE: B (Patterson)

LOST AND FOUND (PG) — George Segal, Glenda Jackson. Romantic comedy. Writer-director-producer Mel Frank tries to recapture the magic of "A Touch of Class," and reunited Segal and Jackson in another light-hearted exercise. Magic is tough to recapture, however, and this gets off to a good start but bogs down about half-way through in a tedious examination of the tenure system on college campuses. GRADE: C

NIGHTWING (PG) — Nick Mancuso, David Warner, Kathryn Harrold. Thriller. Whoever thought of this had bats in his belfry. It's a silly amalgamation of a horror story (with vampire bats as the scary ingredient) and some nonsense about American Indians and their tribal customs. The horror stuff is handled with nice restraint, but the other aspect weighs it down, and it is badly written, edited and acted. GRADE: C-plus

(Film grading: A — superb; B — good; C — average; D — poor; F — awful)

Dutch Soldier Rampages Following Separation

ZEVEN, West Germany (AP) — A lovelorn Dutch soldier commandeered a 39-ton armored tank and smashed a house, a car and a nearby town hall after authorities sent his 15-year-old girlfriend to reform school, Dutch military police said Friday.

The unidentified 21-year-old soldier caused more than $110,000 in damage Monday before surrendering after he plowed the tank into the town hall in Bremervoerde, 40 miles west of Hamburg.

The Dutch authorities said the soldier, assigned to a Dutch NATO garrison in this town in northern West Germany, apparently became angry after he was told his German girlfriend, also unidentified, had been referred by a youth commission to a girl's reformatory.

He started up a German-made Leopard tank parked at the Dutch garrison here and barreled 15 miles down the road at 40 miles an hour to the home of his girlfriend's foster parents in Bremervoerde, authorities said.

Military police said the tank — which normally carries a grenade launcher and 125-millimeter cannon — knocked down a wall of the foster parents' house and damaged the family car. The soldier then drove to the town hall, smashed through glass doors into the lobby, leaped from the tank after it became wedged in the building and holed up in a room.

No weapons were fired and it was not reported whether the tank was fully armed.

Consumers Want Adequate, Upgraded Diet

By RODERICK TURNBULL
Kansas City Board of Trade

KANSAS CITY — It is an interesting xperience in market analysis to observe ow much is said in grain circles about creasing consumption of meat, poultry nd eggs around the world.

The grain people, of course, are talkg about selling more corn, grain sorghm, soybean meal and other feedstuffs.

The comments of the analysts emhasize how people all over the world ot only want to have adequate food, ut they like to upgrade their diets. In eneral, upgrading means eating more f the high protein foods, milk, meat, oultry and eggs. A lot of people are acomplishing these goals; some still ould be happy just to get enough to eat f anything.

But, with more people eating better lus the fact the world has more people very day, the total on food consumpon rises each year. This is a principal eason for America's increasing exports.

The Soviet Union always becomes he prime example in discussions on boosting livestock and poultry production. Some years ago, the Soviet Union let the world know that it intended to increase the production of meat and poultry and it has followed through. A year or two of poor crops forced the Soviets to cut back on herds and flocks, but with last year's record grain yields, a buildback in inventory is in progress.

The Soviet Union's huge purchases of corn from the United States, as compared with lesser acquisitions of wheat, are obvious indications of the emphasis on livestock and poultry production. And, as the analysts see it, the U.S.S.R. certainly would hope to maintain its breeding stock and its high rate of production in livestock, which, of course, would indicate continued large imports of feed grains.

Poland is another nation which has declared a determination to meet consumer demand for livestock products. Just how much grain it will have to import from the United States, analysts comment, depends on many factors, including its domestic production of feed grains, the size of its potato crop and the availability of grain supplies from other countries, particularly those nearby. But the consensus is that Poland will continue to obtain a significant share of its grain supplies from the United States in the years ahead.

Poultry meat consumption still is far below that in the United States. Japan not only imports feed grains for its domestic production of poultry, but also imports poultry meat and egg products. Japan has developed huge broiler operations similar to those in the United States. This year, total broiler production is estimated to reach 961,000 tons.

One reason for continued rise in poultry production in Japan, it is noted, is a consumer shift from higher priced fish to poultry.

Not all comment on increasing livestock and poultry production concerns greater use of American grains. A major effort is on in Europe to use non-grain feeds. However, the non-grains, such as manioc, are low in protein and this calls for imports of high protein feeds such as soybean meal. One result is that Germany is purchasing soybean meal or soybeans in record amounts. The same situation to some extent is true in other Common Market countries.

Incidentally, in most instances where there is talk of producing and consuming more meat, it centers more on pork and poultry than on beef. For much of the world, beef still is too expensive.

While most of the world would like to consume more meat and poultry products, the actual increases tend to take place mostly in the developed countries. Percentagewise, the underdeveloped countries are increasing their imports of cereals such as wheat more than on corn.

Myron R. Laserson, a senior vice-president of Continental Grain Co., speaking in Kansas City recently at a meeting sponsored by the Milling and Baking News, directed his comments to Asia, which, he noted, has half the world's population. Almost a billion people, nearly a fourth of the world's total, live in China.

"The Chinese," Laserson said, "never will be able to import more than a small fraction of the food that they need. But, assuming that the fraction remains constant, the base eventually will be so huge, that the fraction will be in itself an enoumous growing market.....During my lifetime I would expect that China will become the largest importer of U.S. grain. That demand will be heaviest for wheat over the next several years but eventually, as China improves its standard of living, as it develops poultry and cattle operations, the demand will grow to include feed grains."

So the comment goes as the analysts talk about people eating more meat and poultry. Eventually, the talk always emphasizes the utilization of more grains and other feeds such as soybean meal. You can't have one without the other.

Sugar Price Support Plan Approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland said Friday he has approved final regulations for carrying out a temporary price support program for 1979 sugar crops.

The interim program, which reduces federal sugar supports by about 1.7 cents a pound, was initially announced by Bergland on June 18. The regulations spell out how the program will be carried out.

As it stands, the federal support for 1979-crop sugar will be based on a rate of 13 cents a pound for raw cane sugar. That translates into a comparable rate of 15.15 cents a pound for refined beet sugar.

The basic support for 1978 raw sugar averaged about 14.7 cents a pound, the minimum required by a 1977 law that has expired.

Under the program, the department support sugar prices by making loans to processors at the specified rates, with the crop as collateral. Processors, in turn, must guarantee to pay farmers no less than the minimum price specified.

Because market prices have been lower than the supports after interest and storage costs are added, processors have been forfeiting the loans — as the law allows — turning the sugar over to the government to sell if the market improves.

Bergland reasoned that by reducing the support the department's Commodity Credit Corp. to sell 200,000 tons of sugar it acquired from the 1978 crop. Loans on up to 2.2 million tons of 1978-crop sugar are still outstanding.

In his announcement Friday, Bergland said the interim support program will remain in effect until Congress acts on new sugar legislation.

Officials said details of the interim sugar program will be available soon at state and county offices of the department's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

COTTON IS MAKING GOOD TO EXCELLENT growth in the Rolling Plains and ranges from pre-squaring to setting bolls.

Emory P. Boring III of Vernon, area extension entomologist, said early this week that about 25 to 30 percent of the cotton in Dickens, Hall, Jones and Motley counties had reached the square stage. In most of the other counties, he said, more than half the cotton had begun to square.

Fleahopper populations were present in most fields. Most of the older cotton, Boring said, was past the stage where fleahoppers could cause damage.

Moderate to heavy fleahopper populations were in Hall County. Boring said decisions on fleaphopper control must be based on the number of hoppers and the level of square damage they are causing.

"SQUARE SET VARIES GREATLY from field to field," he said, pointing out that older cotton can tolerate much higher numbers of fleahoppers than younger cotton.

"Boll weevil populations are difficult, if not impossible, to find in most fields," Boring said. "However, light square damage is present in a few older cotton fields."

The entomologist said the earliest planted fields should be inspected for boll weevil damage.

Bollworm moth egg-laying activity was expected to increase this week. Grasshoppers were continuing to damage cotton on the margins of fields in some counties. They had caused "excessive damage" to cotton stands in Hall, Childress and Kent counties, but populations had decreased in cotton in Dickens County.

Blister beetles have destroyed stands of glandless cotton in demonstration plots in Kent and Childress counties, Boring reported.

Populations of beneficial insects "are strong" in most fields, Boring said. He said the beneficials in many cases can keep bollworm populations below damaging levels.

MEANWHILE, COTTON HARVESTING continues to gain momentum in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Wilburn Reeves, head of the U. S. Department of Agriculture's cotton classing office at Harlingen, said Friday morning that receipts were up to about 4,500 to 5,000 samples a day.

The office had classed approximately 7,000 bales and had a carryover of 3,700 samples for total receipts of 10,700. This compares with receipts a year ago, when the daily influx was averaging about 8,000, of 54,300, including classings of 46,600 and a carryover of 7,700.

Quality statistics hadn't been compiled but the quality looked about average for the valley. The cotton has been grading primarily strict low middling and stapling predominantly 1 1/32 to 1 1/16 inches with mostly good micronaire readings.

COTTON FUTURES LOST 63 TO 75 POINTS Friday on speculative liquidation and trade selling following the weakness in Midwest grain and precious metals futures.

Floor traders said the decline accelerated during the afternoon as the market plunged through commission house stop loss levels. Volume was moderate at 5,550 lots.

Brokers reported little market impact from the USDA's weekly export commitment report, released after the close Thursday.

Good U. S. crop progress is said to have dampened some buying appetite and may have encouraged some selling. Heavy rains in southeast Texas and northern Louisiana this week aren't expected to have much overall effect on the cotton crop.

THE INDIAN COTTON MILLS FEDERATION has asked the government not to allow cotton exports due to uncertain prospects in the season beginning there in September, Reuters reported from New Dehli Friday, quoting a dispatch from Bombay by the Press Trust of India.

Calling for a review of the cotton export polic y, the federation asked the Industry Ministry to suspend licenses and quotas already granted, saying the delayed monsoon rains this summer have created uncertain prospects for 1979-80.

The agency said the delayed rains might result in a production shortfall of about 600,000 to 800,000 bales against the target of 8 million bales.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat, corn and soybean futures fell sharply Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Commission house selling accelerated near the close, carrying oats and corn futures lower by as much as their daily trading limits after grains had opened higher across the board.

Disappointment that corn futures failed to hold opening gains triggered speculative selling. Continued rains in areas such as central Illinois, previously troubled by drought, were seen as beneficial to both the corn and soybean crops, portending good yields.

An apparent pickup in cash wheat sales led to some hedge-type selling of futures — sales used by buyers on the cash market to lock in current price levels and known profit margins.

There was some disappointment that a strike by grain trimmers at the port of Chicago has not been completely settled. A government source said one newly formed company had reached a settlement with the striking grain trimmers, whose job is to ensure that grain boats are evenly loaded, but other stevedoring firms were still at odds with the union.

Also, some speculative buying had come Thursday on a rumor that was still unconfirmed Friday, that the government would raise a current limit on U.S. wheat sales to the Soviet Union.

Farmland Reporting Deadline Nearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The deadline is nearing for foreigners who own American farmland to report their holdings to the federal govenment.

Under new regulations issued in February, aliens who own or have an interest in land or who gross $1,000 or more from any plot of U.S. land must file the reports.

If they owned the land on or before Feb. 6, the report is due Aug. 1. Aliens who bought land after Feb. 6 must report the transfer within 90 days.

The reports can be made at any of the 2,700 county offices of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service in the county where the land is located. Failure to file the reports can result in fines of up to 25 percent of the assessed value of the property.

The rule covers any tract of more than one acre used for agricultural, forestry or timber production. Small plots such as household gardens are excluded.

Toxic Plants Causing High Livestock Losses

By ROBERT L. HANEY
Texas Agricultural Experiment Station

Toxic plants in pastures cause a tremendous economic loss to livestock owners and higher prices to consumers because of animal deaths, loss of production of meat, milk, wool, and mohair, plus reproduction problems.

It has been estimated that in some years poisonous plants in Texas alone, cost the livestock industry more than $100 million. The figure for the Great Plains and Western States is several times as much.

Credit for a good deal of our present knowledge of this costly problem must go to a former professor at Texas A&M University, Dr. J. W. Dollahite.

More than 40 years of Dollahite's professional life with the College of Veterinary Medicine were devoted to research and observations of toxic plants in Texas for the Agricultural Experiment Station.

Sharing credit with Dollahite for much of the present level of knowledge are two toxicologists, Drs. B. J. Camp and E. Murl Bailey. Camp, for example, was one of the discoverers of the long-sought cause of poisoning by bitterweed. Bailey is a national and international authority on treatment of animals poisoned by plants or chemicals.

During the summer months, Bailey says, the following are some of the plant hazards on rangelands:

Twin-leaf, senna is a threat from May through August to both cattle and sheep. Sicklepod senna is most dangerous in August and September.

Signs are loss of appetite, weakness, and diarrhea. Cattle and sheep are often paralyzed in the hindquarters.

Senecio species (thread-leaf groundsel, woole groundsel, Riddell groundsel, broom groundsel) are very common in the southwestern United States.

Senecio deaths occur all summer as a result of animals having eaten the plant the previous fall. Some animals have developed liver failure months after removal from infested pastures.

Cattle Futures Finish Lower In Heavy Trade

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 137 to 150 points lower on a heavy trade of 31,018 cars Friday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Local and commission house selling continued to stem from weakness in beef despite reduced slaughter. Poor consumption and plentiful supplies of other meats kept prices under pressure again this week.

Feeder cattle futures closed the daily limit of 150 points lower with sellers over across the board. Sales totaled 6,028 cars.

Traders noted easiness in carcass beef, despite light slaughter this week, and the pessimistic outlook on the economy and fears of increasing unemployment and ample supplies of other red meats and poultry.

The six markets expect 700 head Monday.

Hog futures closed 10 to 140 points lower with August under the most pressure at the day's low. Sales totaled 7,552 cars. Most contracts fell to new season's lows and were at the lowest levels in more than a year.

Selling carried over from Thursday night with limit losses in the cattle pits again a prime influence. Some sharply lower cash hogs and a heavy kill this week offset markups in cash hams and loins at noon.

Deliveries total 65 thus far. Wholesale hams were up 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 cents at 72 to 73 cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

The six markets expect 33,500 head Monday. Cash hogs were steady to off 150 points, with the best top at $39.25 at Joliet, lowest since April 1977. Slaughter totaled 291,000 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 117 points lower to 35 points higher on 8,485 cars. August was the weakest at the lowest point in seven years. May was up the most.

Prices climbed 127 points in July for a time on spread buying against sales of the cheaper boy. However, follow-through was lacking as cash bellies slumped again and cash hogs weakened. Limit losses in cattle futures also contributed to selling.

Deliveries total 179 thus far. Wholesale bacon was unchanged to off one-half cent at 34 cents asked to 34 cents

Mart Ends Good Week

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market posted some scattered gains in quiet trading Friday, closing out its strongest week since early June.

Analysts said news of a narrowed U.S. trade deficit last month helped the market recover from some early losses.

The government figures on the trade deficit showed imports exceeding exports by $1.9 billion, against a $2.48 billion gap in May. The deficit for the first half of the year was slightly smaller than the one recorded for the first six months of 1978.

Poll Says Americans Know More Of SALT Pact

NEW YORK (AP) — As Senate hearings on the SALT II treaty continue, Americans' knowledge about the proposed pact with the Soviet Union is growing, an Associated Press-NBC News poll says.

Public opinion remains split and somewhat confused on the complex treaty signed in June by President Carter and Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev in Vienna.

The poll taken July 16 and 17 found public support still strong for the concept of a pact limiting nuclear weapons. But support for this particular treaty, which places a series of intricate restrictions on the number of strategic missiles and bombers each side can have, is much weaker.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has opened public hearings on the pact, preliminary to floor debate later this year.

Here are the questions asked by telephone of 1,600 adults across the country about the treaty and the results:

"Recently, the United States and the Soviet Union reached agreement on a new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty, usually called SALT II. Have you heard or read enough about it to have an opinion?"

Forty-two percent of those interviewed now say they have heard or read enough about SALT II to have formed an opinion on it. That is double the 21 percent who claimed to have such knowledge in March and up from the 36 percent found in the AP-NBC News poll in early May.

That 42 percent were then asked: "Do you favor or oppose this new SALT agreement?"

Twenty-one percent said they favored the treaty, and 17 percent said they opposed it. Four percent said, despite their knowledge about the pact, they were still undecided.

In early May — before the treaty signing and Senate hearings — 26 percent favored the pact, 7 percent opposed it and 3 percent were not sure.

Thus, the surge in knowledge about the pact in the past eight weeks has been accompanied by a surge in the ranks of the agreement's opponents — just as the growth in public awareness earlier in the year was accompanied by a surge in the ranks of the supporters.

Another question was asked in the poll about support in general for limits on nuclear weapons.

"Do you favor or oppose an agreement between the United States and Russia which would limit nuclear weapons?"

Sixty-five percent of those interviewed favored such an agreement, 25 percent opposed it and 10 percent were not sure.

On Friday, Dr. Gary Lawrence of Decision Making Information, a polling firm in Santa Anna, Calif., criticized published polls on SALT as reaching conclusions that are not justified by the results.

Lawrence, appearing at a news conference sponsored by the American Security Council, a group which opposes the SALT II treaty, said that most polls are presenting "attitudes in support of SALT that are 3,000 miles wide and one milimeter deep."

He said that the polls should first determine knowledge about the proposed treaty and then probe the "complex dimensions" of public opinions on the treaty.

Lawrence's firm does polling for a variety of clients and is the main pollster for former California Gov. Ronald Reagan.

As with every sample survey, the results of the AP-NBC News poll can vary from the opinions of all those with telephones across the country because of chance variations in the sample.

For polls with 1,600 interviews, the results should vary no more than 3 percentage points either way simply because of sample error. That is, if one could talk to all adults in the country, there is only one chance out of 20 that the results would vary from the findings of this poll by more than 3 percentage points.

Telephone numbers for interviews were chosen at random in a manner that assures every household in the country with a telephone a roughly equal chance of being selected.

A procedure was used in the interviewing to assure the proper balance of male and female respondents.

Door-Busting Narcs Handed Repair Ticket

Vickie Bogus had just tucked her five-day-old baby boy into his crib for the night on July 19th when she heard a knock on her front door.

Mrs. Bogus opened the window shade to see a group of husky men gathered outside awaiting entrance. But before she could decide what to do, the door flew open and seven men walked in uninvited.

But she later found out the surprise guests were members of the Dallas County narcotics squad, who had smashed open the wrong door with a 45-pound steel battering ram.

But another agent, who asked to remain nameless, said a search warrant had been obtained for a male in his 60s at the address of Mrs. Bogus' apartment. He said the officers yelled "police" before busting the door with the battering ram.

But Mrs. Bogus said that although she was close enough to the door, she never heard the officers identify themselves.

Officers say the man for whom the agents had a warrant apparently used the apartment without the woman's knowledge while she was in the hospital.

The apartment manager, who asked not to be identified, said, "They could have taken a minute to check with me and I could have told them they were mistaken and going to the wrong place."

The manager billed the sheriff's department for $86 — the cost of replacing a dead lock, the door's frame and casing. A hole in the door was patched.

"And if they don't like the bill," she huffed, "they can just buy us a whole new door."

Meanwhile, the suspect's attorney showed up at the sheriff's department a few days later seeking to post bond for his client. Officers told him that wouldn't be necessary since the arrest warrant was faulty.

At last report, the man had not been taken into custody.

DC-10 Crash Hearing Panel To Convene

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Transportation Safety Board will open a hearing in Chicago Monday on the worst U.S. air disaster, the crash of an American Airlines DC-10 that killed 273 persons and forced the grounding of 138 of the big jets for 37 days.

The hearing, expected to last two weeks, will be in the Sheraton O'Hare Hotel, not far from the scene of the accident. The plane crashed May 25 after an engine fell off while it was taking off from Chicago's O'Hare Airport.

Member Elwood T. Driver will preside as a safety board panel hears testimony from about 40 witnesses in its effort to pinpoint the cause of the crash.

The board is an investigative agency with no regulatory authority. It is charged with determining the probable cause of accidents and recommending changes in safety standards to other government agencies such as the Federal Aviation Administration and to state and local governments and industry.

Included on the witness list are engineers, metallurgists, mechanics, crash eyewitnesses and officials and experts representing interested parties.

The parties to the hearing are American Airlines;, McDonnell Douglas Corp., which makes the DC-10; the FAA; the Air Line Pilots Association; the Transportation Workers Union, and the Flight Engineers International Association.
