'Joke' triggers emotions on hot topic

Restaurateur's gun-trade sign goes over with bang

■ Despite belief in right to bear arms, owner can't keep straight face when speaking of 'guns for BBQ.'

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

What started off as a joke has stirred up folks in Midland and caused some great emotions regarding a hot topic: gun control vs. the right to legally bear arms.

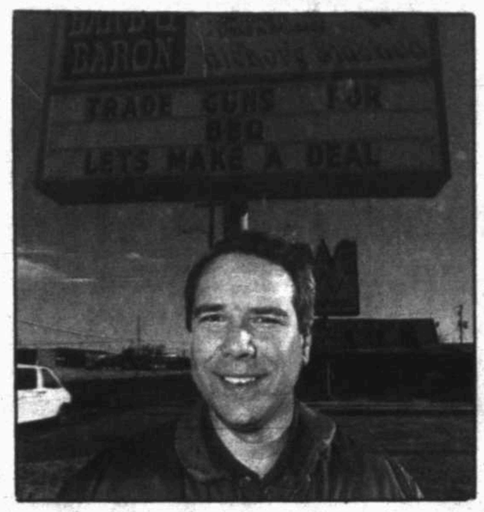

Jerry Walton, owner of Bar-B-Q Baron at 2001 N. Big Spring St., placed a phrase on his restaurant sign as a "gimmick" to get people in his business. The caption reads: Trade guns for BBQ — Let's make a deal.

A gun enthusiast himself, Walton said he'd consider a legitimate trade, but he doubts it will ever happen.

He put his sign up on Jan. 11 and in that time it has caused quite a stir, he said.

Walton said he came up with the idea after listening to the Rush Limbaugh radio talk show — which is played in the restaurant dining room on weekdays — about the success of a New York City pro-

Why so frigid? Blame 'detour' in atmosphere

By Malcolm Ritter
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Why has it been so cold in the Midwest and East? Because the high-altitude winds that blow in the weather have encountered an atmospheric detour sign.

At the same time, some parts of the West have been unusually warm.

■ Area conditions to deteriorate/4A

Relief is in sight from the frigid weather.

Experts blame the cold on a ridge of high pressure that for the past week or so has stood over the western United States and Canada. Like a boulder in a stream, it has forced the usually eastbound jet stream from the Pacific to go around it.

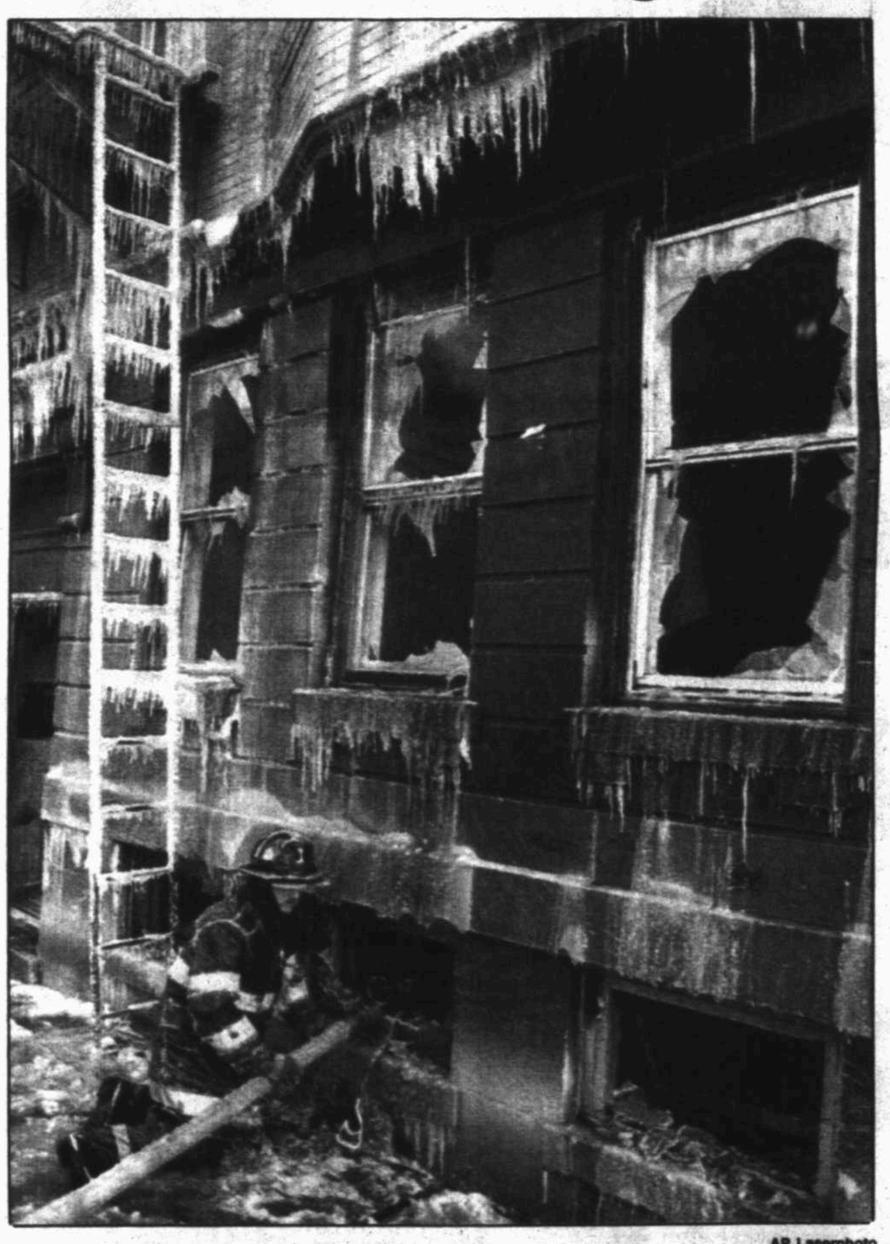

That means that rather than flowing generally eastward across the United States, the jet stream has run up the western side of the pressure ridge into Canada. Then it has come back down the eastern side of the ridge and flowed into the Midwestern and northeastern United States.

On that journey, it has picked up some unwelcome passengers.

"Our air masses are originating in Siberia instead of the western United States," said Gerald Mohler, a meteorologist with Accu-Weather, a private weather forecasting service in State College, Pa.

Not only do those air masses start out cold, but "you can't add any warmth," Mohler said. There's no chance for the typical moderating influence of warm-

A firefighter sprays water in the basement of Paterson, N.J., apartments that had been gutted by a fire on Thursday. The blaze left at least 80 people homeless.

■ With temperatures in some places 30, 40 degrees below zero, even the slightest exposure can be fatal.

Associated Press

The temperature was 20 below zero in northern Wisconsin; the gusts of bitter wind made it feel like 60 below. Toini and Erny Oberg were five miles from home when their car hit an icy rut and slid into a ditch.

There was no question who would go for help. Toini Oberg was 74 and had undergone heart bypass surgery, but her husband was older and frailer and needed a walker.

■ One rescue/8A

Mrs. Oberg borrowed her husband's leather mittens, wrapped her coat and scarf tightly around her, and set out for help. Her destination: their son-in-law's home, 500 yards away.

She never made it.

From the car, 81-year-old Erny Oberg watched in horror as his wife trudged uphill into the wind and collapsed.

"He tried to get his walker from the back seat. But it slid from his reach so he couldn't get it," said the couple's son-in-law, Steve Laakso.

"I don't know why she didn't elect to wait (in the car)," Laakso said. "She had a determination. If something needed to be done, she would do it. She had done things like that a million times. She believed she would be looked after."

Mrs. Oberg died Tuesday — one of 130 deaths blamed so far on the record cold weather that has battered much of the nation since late last week. The toll has been rising daily, even as temperatures edged above zero and, in some cases, reached double digits for the first time in a week.

Senate panel brings debate on state's blockage of home-equity loans to basin

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

The long-standing debate on Texas' constitutional block of home-equity loans came to the Midland/Odessa area Thursday for Texas senators to hear public input on the topic.

This event, at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin's Center for Energy and Economic Diversification, was the fourth of six such meetings. Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, and Sen. Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo, were present. Sen. Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, was unable to fly out of Amarillo because of icy conditions.

The Senate panel is trying to decide if Texas voters should be given an opportunity to amend the constitution to allow equity in a home to be used as collateral for other loans.

Divided in this issue are lending institutions — which would like to offer loans against home equity — and real-estate brokers campaigning against allowing a vote to

Northeast area residents, city officials clash on water issue

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

A meeting between city officials and northeast Midland residents to discuss the possibility of water service in that area deteriorated into a clash of opinions over alleged promises of service made 15 years ago.

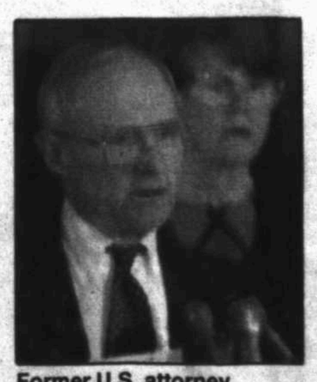

About 80 residents from the area — off Midland Drive north of County Road 60 — turned out for the meeting called by Midland City Council member Pat Schneider at the fire station on Midland Drive.

The area, incorporated into the city in 1978, does not have city water lines. Most residents get their water from wells.

Mrs. Schneider said she called the meeting to find out if residents in that area want city water service and are willing to pay for it.

Russia's finance minister, key reformer, quits

N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — Russia's finance minister, who has come to represent Moscow's commitment to rapid economic reform, announced on Thursday night that he was quitting the government after President Boris Yeltsin named a new government that is expected to put higher priority on protecting industrial jobs than in fighting inflation.

After four days of intense negotiations and financial panic that sent the ruble to new lows, Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin, announced the new Cabinet and declared, "the period of market romanticism is now over."

But the young finance minister, Boris Fyodorov, the best-known reformer in the Russian government after the resignation on Sunday of Yegor Gaidar, said he could not accept a demotion from the post of deputy prime minister to a position in which he would be outranked by industrial managers with little understanding of market economics.

Fyodorov also said that so long as Russia's current Central Bank chairman, Viktor Gerashchenko, remains in place, financial stabilization will be impossible.

The naming of a new Cabinet took on special significance following elections on Dec. 12 in which voters ratified a new Russian Constitution but also voiced strong support for Communists and ultranationalists in what many interpreted as a vote against the government's economic policies.

Yeltsin has felt it necessary to respond to voters' concerns and has apparently thrown his support behind a go-slow policy despite his recent promises to President Clinton to deepen Russia's commitment to move toward a market economy.

Though Chernomyrdin hastened to say on Thursday night that "the government will not retreat from the course of continuing and deepening reform," he added that the new Cabinet must "correct the course of reforms."

South African president calls ANC 'intolerant' in campaign

POTCHEFSTROOM, South Africa (AP) — On the campaign trail Thursday for South Africa's first open elections, President F.W. de Klerk said his party — long associated with apartheid — is now multiracial and democratic while the ANC is increasingly intolerant.

"They make resounding ... speeches about tolerance, but their supporters intimidate everyone who does not agree with them," the president said of the African National Congress, which is expected to win the April 27 vote.

The National Party, which under de Klerk has turned its back on four decades of racial segregation, is expected to come in second in the election, assuring de Klerk a vice presidency.

Meanwhile, ANC leader Nelson Mandela warned Thursday that right-wing whites seeking a return to apartheid could start a civil war similar to those in nearby Angola and Mozambique.

"They can derail any democratic government in this country," he said during a public meeting Thursday at the South African Broadcasting Corp.

Right-wing leaders oppose black rule and say the ANC will impose a dictatorship after the April vote. They are joined by some conservative leaders of black homelands who also fear losing their power and privileges under ANC rule and seek autonomous states.

Mandela said white extremists have significant support in the army, police, civil service and other sectors, Mandela said.

But the South African military, in a statement Thursday, rejected claims by right-wing leaders that some troops would side with pro-apartheid whites instead of remaining loyal to the government.

Mandela said the ANC wanted to work out a compromise to white extremists' demand for a sovereign homeland.

Campaigning in the farming and mining country west of Johannesburg, De Klerk addressed an enthusiastic crowd of National Party workers. Most of his listeners were white, but blacks wearing the blue, red and yellow colors of his party shouted "Viva de Klerk" with gusto.

Wordsworth Rabose, a 25-year-old black man, said he turned to de Klerk's party because of fighting between the ANC and its black rivals. Political violence has killed more than 11,000 South Africans — most of them black — over the past three years.

The $200 weekly salary he receives as a party organizer also was a strong incentive, he added.

De Klerk said his reformed party could offer stability to South Africans of all races, while the ANC's communist leanings threatened the economy.

ANC hecklers had disrupted de Klerk's campaign debut near Cape Town last month. In what may have been an attempt to avoid similar protests, his tour of northwestern South Africa was not heavily publicized.

Japan awaits outcome of vote on landmark political reform bill

By Peter Landers
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO — After more than five years of debate over cleaning up Japanese politics, it all comes down to one vote today in Parliament that is too close to call.

If Prime Minister Morihiro Hosokawa wins, the corruption-plagued political system will undergo its greatest transformation in 45 years. If he loses, it's back to square one on reform — and Hosokawa could be out of a job.

The vote, in Parliament's upper house, is over Hosokawa's package of political reform bills, which would ban corporate contributions to individual politicians and change the system for electing the lower house of Parliament.

The bills are designed to end repeated bribery and influence-peddling scandals that have led to the demise of several Japanese governments during the 38-year reign of the Liberal Democratic Party. The bills passed the lower house in November and cleared their next-to-last hurdle in an upper house committee Thursday.

But the outcome of the final vote, scheduled for this afternoon, was far from certain. Several Socialists, the largest party in Hosokawa's ruling coalition, have said they will vote against the bills, and about a dozen other legislators have not announced their decision.

The coalition has 131 seats in the 252-seat upper house, just five more than a majority, so it will need support from legislators in the main opposition Liberal Democrats. One LDP legislator, Tomoichi Hoshino, voted for the bills in the committee Thursday and said he planned to quit his party.

Hosokawa, who has hinted that he will either resign or call new elections if he fails to pass the package, warned against overconfidence in the showdown vote.

"I fear that we will be in danger unless we fight resolutely to the very end as if it were truly a struggle to the death," he told a meeting of coalition legislators Thursday.

Hosokawa's most important reform would overturn the system under which each district elects several legislators to Parliament's more powerful lower house. That would be the biggest change in Japan's democratic system since a U.S.-written constitution was adopted in 1947.

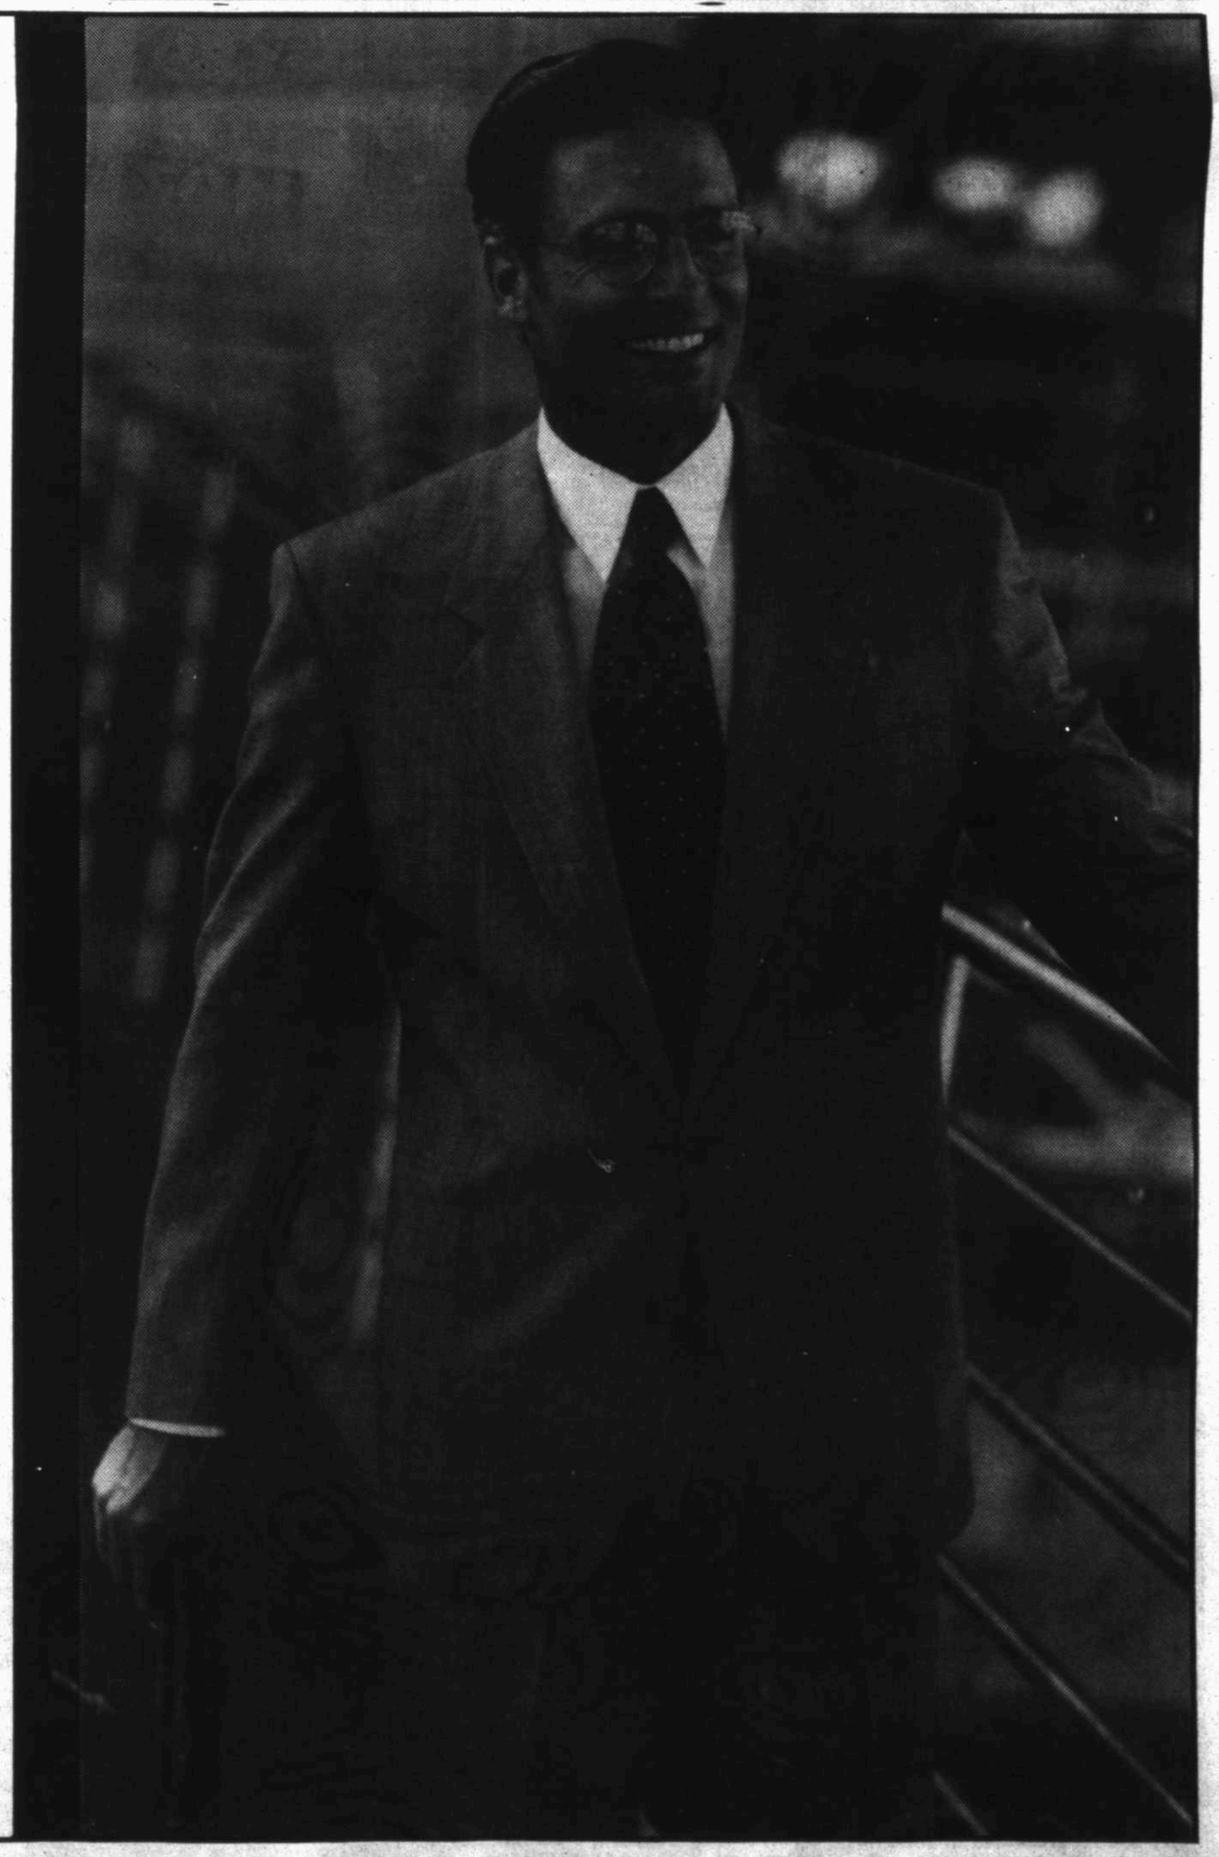

The new system would create 274 single-seat districts, while 226 other legislators would be selected through proportional representation based on how many votes each political party receives.

Cold front descends in basin

Staff Report

A cold front brought north winds and a steady drizzle to the Permian Basin Thursday, but only dropped temperatures to 4 degrees below normal for this time of year.

Conditions were expected to deteriorate during the night, as more rain fell and temperatures reached the freezing level. The National Weather Service issued a winter weather advisory late Thursday for the Permian Basin and warned motorists to be careful, particularly during the late-night and early morning hours, as rain-soaked roads turn icy.

Thursday's lower temperatures and rain, which increased from a mist to a fairly steady drizzle by nightfall, were caused by a cold front that met with moisture already present in the air, a NWS official said. High pressure behind the moisture kept temperatures from getting any higher during the day.

Thursday's high reached 51 and the low dipped to 33. The normal temperature for this time of year is 56 for a high and 29 for a low.

A 30 percent chance of more rain remains in today's forecast, as skies are to stay cloudy all day. There was a chance of freezing rain during early morning hours.

The high today will reach only into the lower 40s, and winds will be east to southeast at 10-15 mph. Tonight will continue to be cloudy with a low near 30.

Saturday should be cloudy early and, as the last remenants of Thursday's front move out of the area, skies should become partly cloudy by afternoon. The high will reach back into the mid-50s.

Forecasters predict temperatures back into the lower 60s by Sunday and Monday.

Thursday's high of 51 come nowhere near the record high for that date of 76 set in 1986. The record low was 5 set in 1966.

STATE

The western part of North Texas was under a winter storm watch for Thursday night and this morning, as freezing rain is expected throughout the region, according to the National Weather Service.

The storm watch extends west of Gainesville to Lampasas, and includes Stephenville, Mineral Wells and Abilene.

Drizzle and light rain hit much of North Texas Thursday, and temperatures were mostly in the low 40s. They were expected to reach near freezing late Thursday night. There should be decreasing cloudiness tonight, with lows in the 20s and highs in the 60s.

NATION

Arctic air eased its grip slightly on the central and eastern United States on Thursday, while parts of the West enjoyed dry and mild weather.

The center of high pressure associated with the record cold of the past few days was over the middle Alantic Coast at early afternoon, weakening as it moved eastward.

Meanwhile, another high pressure center was drifting from the middle Mississippi Valley into the lower Ohio Valley.

A bitter morning saw at least 16 record lows for the date set or tied from the northern Plains and the Great Lakes into New England.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

CLASH: Water controversy spews at meeting

cuss this since the city plans to put a water line parallel to lines on Midland Drive," she said. "We wanted to bring our plan to the people and hear what they had to say about it."

However, the residents of the Melody Acres and Green Hill Terrace subdivisions didn't wait to hear the city's proposed plan to bring service to the area. Instead, most focused their opinions on the 1978 annexation and what they claimed were promises by the city to install water lines within four years.

"What have we been paying for all this time?" said one man. "All this means is more taxes, and we have been paying taxes just like the rest of the city for services we haven't been getting."

"We were told we would get the service," agreed a woman. "We didn't ask to be annexed. We just were. And, now we are being expected to pay for a service the whole city already has and we were supposed to have, but got cheated out of."

"We weren't annexed, we were hoodwinked," one resident said, shouting.

Officials argued that provisions for water service for the area were not made at that time — that the residents would have to pay for a water line and pay a monthly water bill in order to receive water service from the city.

"We have inherited a lot of problems from the previous city governments," Mayor J.D. Faircloth said, raising his voice over the shouts of residents.

"We can't do anything about what happened 15 years ago. What we can do now is try to work with you to bring water service into the area."

Some residents raised questions about being de-annexed, claiming they did not want to be annexed in 1978, but city officials did it anyway.

Faircloth said he would not vote to de-annex the area, but would work with the residents in getting city water services to them.

As residents continued to argue that they already are paying property taxes for water service, Midland City Manager Mike McGregor said the residents have only been paying for traditional government functions, such as fire, police and EMS services, animal control, and park and street maintenance. He said they have not been paying for water.

"Apparently, either they were told they were paying for water services in their property taxes or someone got it into their heads that they were, but they have not been paying a monthly water bill like people within the city have," he said.

A similar situation occurred in the Cardinal Lane subdivision — located north of Loop 250 between Midkiff Road and Midland Drive — that resulted in residents acquiring city water lines last year.

McGregor said the average cost per property owner in the Cardinal Lane district was $11 a foot for installing the line, plus another $88-$1,000 for taps, meters and service.

Faircloth said the city faced the same hostility with Cardinal Lane residents as it did with Thursday's group.

"The city had to work two years to get that water to Cardinal Lane," he said.

"I think once they realize the benefits and that we want to work with them, this plan will be successful."

Mrs. Schneider said she would plan other meetings, but with smaller groups, to bring the city's plan to the residents.

"This is really too big a group," she said. "I went door-to-door and know that there are residents for getting water services out here.

"It's just, in a group this size, you get one or two loudly opposing and you can't really get anywhere."

DEBATE: Home-equity loans issue hits basin

decide if an amendment is needed.

Texans are denied a right granted to Americans in all 49 other states, according to promoters of the change. To allow Texans to acquire home equity loans, not only would the constitution have to be amended, but enabling legislation must be written as well, Montford said.

Part of the debate in the Senate concerns whether, in the event of a vote, the enabling legislation should be written and submitted to voters along with the amendment, Ms. Zaffirini said.

Parker McCullum, who Montford introduced as a regular at these meetings, represented the Texas Association of Realtors. McCullum said the real estate brokers are, contrary to other opinions, not making money from people who sell their homes so they use the equity.

"It has never been about real-estate commissions," he said.

McCullum said the disadvantages of home-equity loans outweigh the advantages.

Banking representative Harvey Mitchell said people in other states benefit by the low interest and statistical security of the home-equity loan. He also cited statistics indicating that home-equity loans in the rest of the nation have a low delinquency ratio.

"I am not so naive to think all these real-estate brokers and bankers are here for ... public service," Montford said.

One petitioner for a real-estate group said his organization conducted a canvass of home owners and found they do not want the home-equity laws changed. To this, Montford said a vote would settle the matter once and for all.

"Let's just do one big canvass and get it over with," he said.

Robert Pate of San Angelo told of his father's problems. He needs the money he has in his home, but cannot borrow against his equity and is now selling his home.

A problem with allowing home-equity loans in Texas is that people can be victimized, Montford said. "A third party may insist on getting one of these things (a loan) — how would we protect against that. ... That part really troubles me," he said.

Local real-estate representative Darrell McDonald cited the "bust" days following the oil "boom," when home prices fell in excess of 35 percent. If a large percentage of Midland's home owners had second mortgages, the effect would have been more disastrous, he said.

"Should we, as a state, tell you, as a home owner, 'Yes. That's your money, but you can't touch it.' Is that too much government? Is that good government," Montford said.

"I was here for the boom and the bust," Montford said. "Can we micro-manage people's finances?"

Ms. Zaffirini said the issue is closely divided, causing lobbying groups to send mixed signals to the legislators.

More testimony from the poorer and southern parts of the state is needed before the Senate can decide to set a referendum so the voters can have the final say, she said.

BANG: 'Gimmick' stirs emotions on hot topic

(From 1A)

gram in which, through the police, Toys R Us offered gift certificates for the trade-in of guns.

Walton said the concept is to reduce crime, but he added, "I'm very hesitant to think criminals are going to turn in their firearms."

The restaurant owner said he doesn't think criminals would want to trade their weapons in for any services or merchandise.

However, Walton said that if anyone seriously wants to negotiate a trade he will consider it, but he won't accept any gun without identification and a way to do a background check to make sure it wasn't stolen or involved in a crime.

"Never in my wildest imagination did I think anyone would want to trade," Walton said. And, so far, no one has.

He said for the most part, customers stop in and giggle when they ask Walton what he would give them for an Uzi or a bazooka.

"Most people react to the sign with hilarity. I've had people stop just to join me in a laugh," Walton said. "Recently, a couple who knew I was a gun advocate approached me. They thought it was a cute gimmick and that was all I intended it to be."

He said most of the people he has talked to agree they don't think the gun trade would work.

Dallas police have initiated a similar program in which guns are turned in for Dallas Cowboys tickets. So far, it has been successful in getting guns off streets.

However, an Odessa man hopes to set up an organization that will collect and destroy guns in exchange for merchandise gift certificates from various retailers in the area.

A spokeswoman said the Odessa police are researching the legality of an individual collecting guns in this manner. A Midland police spokesman was unavailable.

Despite the legal questions regarding the trade-in, Walton said he is one of many Midlanders who are concerned about the question of gun control and the right to bear arms.

"I'm one of a large number of people in our area frightened about the direction our country is headed in regards to lawlessness going unchecked as well as the revolving door of the penal system," Walton said.

An avid anti-gun control advocate, Walton said he fears citizens will become vigilantes if the government doesn't do something to curb the crime. But, on the other hand, he doesn't believe confiscating legally owned guns is the way to do it.

"So many ... are concerned about the steady erosion of rights, including the right to bear arms. ... Criminals who execute their crimes with weapons not legally procured ... should be punished more harshly," Walton said.

He believes capital punishment would serve as a deterrent for violent crime. He also noted that most criminals serve about a month for every year they are sentenced to prison.

"So the prison time is equally as useless as trading in guns for toys or barbecue," Walton said.

"Guns don't kill people. People kill people," Walton said.

Despite his staunch belief in the right to bear arms, Walton can't keep a straight face when he speaks about trading guns for barbecue.

"It's all in good fun," he said.

COLD: More than 100 die in record lows

(From 1A)

Kentucky interstates and highways were open Thursday for the first time since record snowfall shut down the roads on Monday.

Many have died in accidents on ice-slick roads. Some have suffered heart attacks while shoveling snow. A few have been killed by their efforts to keep warm, such as a North Carolina man who died in a fire that began when he tried to thaw his water pipes with a blowtorch.

The victims include a Minnesota woman who fell as she stepped outside to feed birds; a Pittsburgh woman who collapsed while retrieving mail; and a New York motorist, caught in a snowstorm, who knocked at a house for help and was turned away.

With temperatures in some places 30 and 40 degrees below zero, experts say, even the slightest exposure can be fatal. The weather is particularly hazardous for people with heart conditions or diabetes, or those too frail to survive a fall.

"Listen to your body," said Dr. Robert Posoz, a hypothermia specialist with the Naval Health Center in San Diego. "If your feet are cold, or your hands are cold, or you are cold, go inside. You're not going to beat Mother Nature on this one."

Among the cold's victims:

■ Natalie Beroscak, 81, a retired tin sorter with hip problems, who left her Pittsburgh home Tuesday on the coldest night of the year to check her mailbox. She wore a winter coat, a dress — and slippers. The temperature was 5 degrees below zero.

Among the mail she retrieved before dying: an IRS form.

Beroscak's brother, Paul Kosko, said he visited her earlier that day and begged her not to leave the house.

"I knew that if I told her not to get her mail, she'd go after it anyway," Kosko said. "So I told her just to stay inside."

■ Ann Hubbard, 87, who locked herself out of her Woodstock, N.Y., home Monday night and froze to death on her front porch in minus-11 temperature. Police said Hubbard, who lived alone and suffered from Alzheimer's disease, tried breaking into her one-story house by shattering a front window.

"She had the strength to break the glass, but she couldn't push the screen in," Police Chief Paul Ragonese said.

QUERY: Counsel plans broad inquiry the Justice Department prosecutors now investigating the failed Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan and its links to the Clintons' investment in Whitewater Development Corp.

"In order to conduct a truly independent investigation, I should have people working for me who are not also reporting to the attorney general," Fiske told a news conference.

The selection of Fiske, now a Wall Street lawyer, fits suggestions that the special counsel be a veteran attorney and, to demonstrate independence, a Republican. However, while Fiske was appointed by Republican President Ford to be U.S. attorney for the Southern District of New York in Manhattan, he served mainly under Democratic President Carter, from 1976 to 1980.

He declined to say for whom he voted in the last presidential election.

As a private attorney, Fiske defended the manufacturer of the nuclear reactor at Three Mile Island in a $4 billion damage suit and recently represented key defendants in the Bank of Credit and Commerce International fraud case.

Republican leader Dole told reporters he doesn't know Fiske, but "people who know him think he is extremely well-qualified, is independent."

On the other hand, Dole said, "Some of the conservative Republicans have not been happy with him." They were angered by his involvement in the American Bar Association's screening of potential judges.

er air from the Pacific Ocean. Nor have the Siberian blasts picked up any warmth by flowing over bare ground rather than snow.

And the Great Lakes, which normally add some warmth to cold air flowing into the Northeast, are so cold themselves that they aren't helping, Mohler said.

"We have been able to get arctic air masses in essentially pure form," said meteorologist Fred Gadomski of Penn State University.

The result? At least 15 places broke or tied cold-weather records of one sort or another Thursday.

But in the West, some areas have had record warmth. Their air masses are coming from the south-central Pacific, Mohler said. Record highs have been recorded from New Mexico to Montana, and crocuses are coming up two weeks early in Albuquerque, N.M., which reached a record 61 degrees Wednesday.

The wind pattern now afflicting the cold areas appears periodically, as in some brutally cold winters in the late 1970s and early 1980s, said Steve Weiss of the National Weather Service.

"Obviously when it does set up, everybody notices it," he said.

Gadomski stressed that "something new has not happened in the weather. People always get nervous that the weather may be going haywire."

Mohler said the Northeast and Midwest "will be out of the deep freeze and back to near-normal temperatures" by the end of the weekend.

London tabloid: Jackson to settle molestation charges out-of-court

LONDON (AP) — Michael Jackson has tentatively agreed to pay up to $49 million to the 14-year-old boy who accuses him of sex abuse so that the boy will drop his lawsuit, a newspaper reported Friday.

The London tabloid Today, in what is billed as a world exclusive, said the boy had signed a confidential interim contract agreeing to the out-of-court settlement.

The Today newspaper said that lawyers for both sides were drawing up paperwork to esure that the civil trial will be dropped. It said the agreement could fall through unless there is agreement on all the terms.

Vietnam Memorial is 'long overdue'

John Philbeck's reaction upon learning that a lawsuit filed against the donation of $25,000 in hotel/motel tax money to the fund for the Permian Basin Vietnam Veterans Memorial had been dropped said it all.

"Hallelujah, hallelujah, hallelujah," remarked Philbeck. "I'm really glad that they decided to withdraw their petition requesting the restraining order."

We are too. While the suit apparently was filed in the interest of calling attention to the way in which tax dollars were being used, many residents interpreted the lawsuit as a "vendetta" against the Vietnam Veterans Memorial. It was not that, explained Victor Hardy, a governmental affairs representative for the Midland Hotel and Motel Association. Nonetheless, emotions concerning the Vietnam War and the memorial to Vietnam veterans run deep.

In fact, the memorial, which is to be located along Wright Drive near the Confederate Air Force (CAF) headquarters at Midland International Airport, should enhance the CAF as a tourist attraction for Midland. The Texas-shaped piece of sunset red granite bearing the names of the 203 veterans from this region who died or were listed as missing in action in the Vietnam War should be a fitting memorial.

The war and its tremendous impact on not only the men and women who served and died in Southeast Asia, but also on those who returned with scars — either physical or emotional — and on Americans at home who were divided by political overtures of the war, ensure that the memorial will be an attraction for tourists for years into the future.

John Philbeck says the memorial is "long overdue."

He's absolutely correct, and now with the lawsuit withdrawn the Vietnam Veterans Memorial can become a reality.

Congress' mailings cost taxpaye 's plenty

WASHINGTON — Tucked into the dingy basement hallways of the Longworth House Office Building is a sight most tourists to Washington never see: the House of Representatives mail room. In December and January, when members of Congress are home visiting their constituents and many staffers take vacation, this is the busiest place on Capitol Hill.

Anderson

A recent visit to the mail room found three hallways lined with pallets full of franked mail. Most of this was in the form of unsolicited newsletters that members send to constituents via bulk-rate postage. On this particular day, the backlog was so bad that newsletters were being stacked along the walls of the adjacent garage.

The reason for this is the Congressional Franking Privilege, a tradition as old as Congress itself that has evolved into an $80-million-per-year, incumbent-protection plan. Originally designed as a means for members to communicate with their constituents, members are now allowed between $140,000 and $175,000 in free mail annually. Since accounts do not carry over to the next year, December means use it or lose it. In the eyes of many, this is an invitation for abuse.

"I think at a certain point the franking privilege becomes a tax-funded publicity gimmick for politicians," says Rep. Peter Blute, R-Mass., a freshman House member who has sponsored a measure to cut the franking allowance in half. "Vice President Gore talks about reinventing government, but if you want to reinvent government, you have to reinvent Congress first."

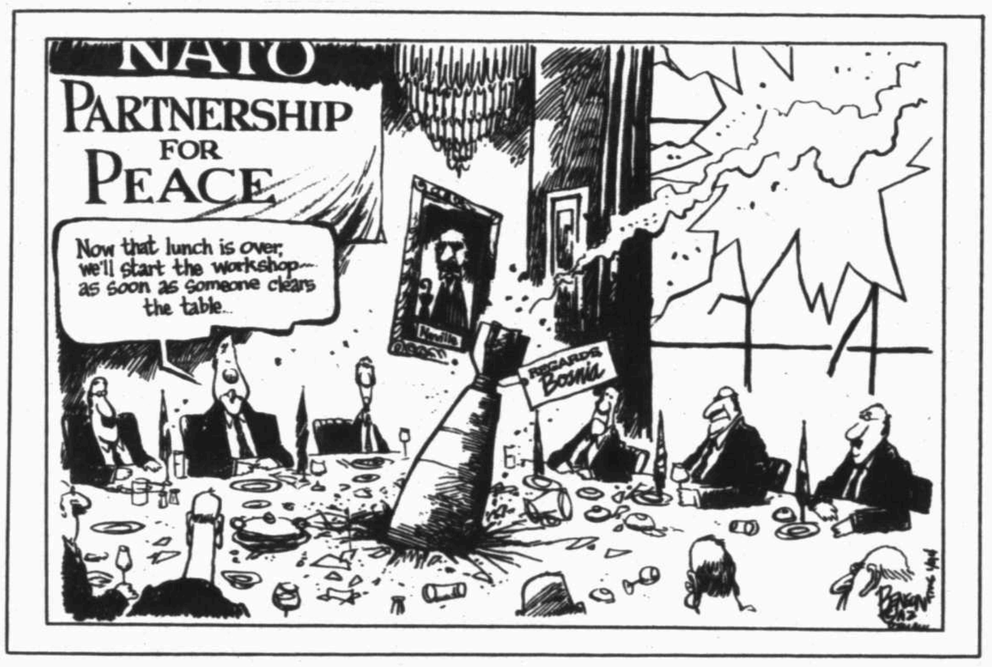

Blute cites his own experience as an example of why the franking budget is bloated. After campaigning against the franking privilege in his 1992 race against incumbent Rep. Joe Early, D-Mass., Blute instructed his staff to answer all mail that came into the office, but nothing more — no mass-mailed newsletters, no postcards announcing town meetings, no "legislative updates" from Washington.

In one year, almost 40,000 pieces of mail arrived in his office, all of which received a reply. The cost to taxpayers was less than $15,000, allowing Blute to return the remainder — more than $150,000 — to House expense accounts. "That taught me that if you cut the (franking) budget in half, you still have more than enough money to supply all your needs," Blute told our associate Jan Moller.

What may be true for Blute is not true for many of his colleagues, who have grown accustomed to using this taxpayer-funded junk mail as a means of keeping up their name recognition back home. This being the information age, many members have begun using demographic research to target their mailings to the right audiences. For a fee, outside companies will supply members with demographic profiles of their districts, breaking households down by age, income and other variables, so mailings may be targeted to the most interested households.

Many members prefer the targeted approach because it helps them get more bang for the buck. Congressional rules limit the amount of mass mailings per year, and don't allow any within 60 days of a primary or general election. Since a mass mailing constitutes anything more than 500 pieces, many members prefer to do a lot of smaller mailings of 450 or so pieces.

Jack Anderson's and Michael Binstein's column is distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

Hope springs eternal even in Vidor complex

Hope springs eternal, the saying goes. In the case of the formerly all-white public housing complex in Vidor there may be good reason for hope, at least from initial indications.

Federal housing officials felt it was wise to move four black families into the complex under the cover of darkness . . . in an attempt to avoid any unpleasantness from the whites living there or elsewhere in the community.

The fact that some 18 white families in the complex gathered to welcome the new black residents around midday of their arrival gives hope that these families will now be accepted by their neighbors and be allowed to lead normal lives.

The racial hatred that has been exhibited in Vidor in the past does not have to be repeated. The unexpected welcome the new black families were given by some white residents in the complex gives reason to think that things may be changing for the better in Vidor.

As one white resident of the complex said, "We're all Americans." That sort of attitude is encouraging.

TAAS must remain minimum standard for Texas students

Once again many high school seniors across Texas are facing the pressure of passing the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills test if they want to graduate. And once again schools will be under pressure to allow students who failed the test, but passed classes, to graduate anyway.

More than 26,000 seniors — 265 in the Amarillo Independent School District — still must pass the test. . . .

Local school districts must be held accountable to some statewide level of excellence. Otherwise, a district could have a high passing rate even though its classes were substandard.

The TAAS forces districts to meet a minimum statewide standard and helps ensure that students are getting a good education. That's why taking the TAAS and passing it are so important.

Furthermore, graduation is a privilege, not a right. Not only is it appropriate to deny graduation privileges to those who fail the TAAS, it is crucial. Those who do pass both their classes and the TAAS deserve not to have their accomplishments tainted by those who did not meet minimum standards.

Students have five chances to pass the exit-level TAAS. That is more than fair.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Jan. 21, the 21st day of 1994. There are 344 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 21, 1793, during the French Revolution, King Louis XVI, condemned for treason by the National Convention, was executed on the guillotine.

On this date:

In 1861, Jefferson Davis of Mississippi and four other Southerners resigned from the U.S. Senate.

In 1908, New York City's Board of Aldermen passed an ordinance that effectively prohibited women from smoking in public (however, the measure was vetoed by Mayor George B. McClellan Junior).

In 1915, the first Kiwanis Club was founded, in Detroit.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Term limits would curb legislators' power

As the old saying goes, if you can't beat 'em, sue 'em: precisely the strategy House Speaker Tom Foley (D-Wash.) is pursuing before U.S. District Judge William L. Dwyer in Seattle.

Murchison

Foley likes his job, as you would expect in the case of the official who is formally second in line to become president of the United States. He disputes the voters' right to legislate him out of his position through limiting Washington state House members to three terms in office. Foley, at 14 terms, is a little bit past that limit. The term-limit measure Washingtonians adopted in 1992 would knock the speaker out of his chair in 1998 — assuming the federal courts go along.

That's the enterprise in which Foley is presently engaged — persuading the federal courts not to go along on the grounds that term limitation is a novel, and unconstitutional, expansion of the qualifications for congressional office.

Foley's lawyer says: "If you cannot tilt the playing field against convicted felons (by denying them the right to seek federal office), you cannot tilt it against those politicians who have committed the lesser offense of being re-elected."

But term limits, if they aren't specified in the Constitution, aren't prohibited either. It probably is a close call, judicially speaking. A federal judiciary that saw our Constitution as truly federal in nature, with large chunks of responsibility carved out for the sovereign states, would likely go along with term limits. That doesn't exactly describe the modern federal judiciary, despite its partial transformation under Ronald Reagan and George Bush. A challenge to federal power has been trumpeted; a branch of the federal government is called on to adjudicate. Does it sound to you, gentle reader, as though the ranks of the Washington lobby were about to open up and enclose one ex-House speaker?

A sadder question, possibly, is: Would Washington be a kinder, gentler place if Foley went home to Washington? It seems unlikely. Not so long ago everyone was complaining about Foley's predecessor, Jim Wright of Fort Worth, whom a financial investigation toppled. Wright's untimely exit didn't warm popular sentiments concerning Congress.

If Tom Foley departed after 1998, his replacement would be another veteran man of the House, probably Missouri's Dick Gephardt. Would that gladden our hearts? Possibly not. It isn't individuals so much who have made Congress unloved and unlovely; it's the culture of the place — big, boorish, remote, insulated, self-satisfied, self-perpetuating.

The old war horses need turning out to pasture, certainly, but as a herd, not one by one or two by two. This is to say, state voters shouldn't have to pass purely state initiatives at reducing congressional seniority. Congress itself should do the job. There ought to be a U.S. constitutional amendment: all members limited to X years' service. The courts couldn't argue with such an amendment. It would change the whole way we practice politics. That's why there is no such an amendment.

But, but, but . . . can't we just throw the rascals out at the polls? This is what anti-term limits folk usually say, but saying is easier than doing, given the relative ease with which incumbents raise special interest money. "Relative," I add, because a lot of incumbents hate the ceaseless fund-raising that comes with the job. The bigger the federal government grows, and the more power it amasses, the greater the clamor to purchase its favors and influence.

The heart of the congressional term problem is just here: in the power that congressmen wield — or that constituents want wielded in their behalf. Too much power is bad for the powerful, evidenced by the stresses of the job and the temptations into which they are daily led. Too much power is bad for the powerless — ordinary citizens just trying to live a life, the government's hand ever in their pockets.

We could do everyone a favor by sharply limiting the growth of federal power; but, as that seems unlikely in the Age of the Clintons, the next best thing maybe is to limit the time available for the exercise of all this vast power. We should do it, not as separate little communities, but as one community — a nation, a people, fed up with the mess daily being made in our names.

CHARLEY REESE

Today's journalism often resembles show biz

I've always had a love-hate relationship with journalism, my life's work. The current low-life fascination with the trial of Lorena Bobbitt (the woman who cut her husband's carrot off) has sent me to my favorite quotation books.

Reese

Thomas Jefferson, one of the great defenders of a free press, became the press' most eloquent critic when he saw how the great privilege of freedom was being abused by those in the business.

"The man who never looks into a newspaper is better informed than he who reads them; inasmuch as he who knows nothing is nearer to truth than he whose mind is filled with falsehoods and errors. . . . It is a melancholy truth that a suppression of the press could not more completely deprive the nation of its benefits than is done by its abandoned prostitution to falsehood."

H.L. Mencken, one of America's great journalists, was even more blunt: "The average newspaper, especially of the better sort," he wrote, "has the intelligence of a hillbilly evangelist, the courage of a rat, the fairness of a prohibitionist boob-jumper, the information of a high school janitor, the taste of a designer of celluloid valentines and the honor of a police-station lawyer. . . . To the best of my knowledge and belief the average American newspaper . . . is not only quite as bad as Upton Sinclair says it is, but ten times worse — ten times as ignorant, ten times as unfair and tyrannical, ten times as complaisant and pusillanimous, and ten times as devious, hypocritical, disingenuous, deceitful, pharisaical, Pecksniffian, fraudulent, slippery, unscrupulous, perfidious, lewd and dishonest."

I would add only that today we should include television journalism in the above.

So, first of all, for those of you who think the world and all its problems began on the day of your birth, criticism of the press is as old as the press itself.

As Harry Truman was fond of saying, "The only surprises in life are the history you don't know."

But, secondly, criticism of the press matters because the press matters. The whole of self-government rests on the premise that if the people are properly informed, they will in the long run make the right decisions. Thus, a free press, which ought to be a source of independent and reliable information about important matters, is critical to self-government — and more so today than ever.

Most Americans never see their public officeholders or even candidates in the flesh. They never attend the councils of government. They have no high-paid lobbyists to keep them informed.

They are forced to rely on the press (print and electronic) for an accounting of their government, of ideas of public interest and of the events that have a bearing on their lives.

And surely, as Jefferson said, what's the point of a free press if all it does is waste away its resources covering bizarre sex crimes; whorishly touting commercial events, enterprises and persons; and poking its nose in the nether regions of the high and mighty?

The great Russian novelist Alexander Solzhenitsyn immediately saw the self-imposed censorship of the American press and publicly criticized it — and was promptly ostracized by the same.

Unless we change, any future historian writing about the decline and fall of the United States will certainly list the failure of its free press as one of the prime causes.

Jury deliberates Bobbitt case

MANASSAS, Va. (AP) — A jury began trying to decide Thursday whether Lorena Bobbitt cut off her husband's penis in "calculated and malicious" revenge or because she was emotionally battered by his sexual abuse.

The prosecutor conceded Mrs. Bobbitt was raped during her four-year marriage, but that she had plenty of options short of attacking her husband.

The jury deliberated less than 30 minutes before breaking for the day. The panel was scheduled to resume deliberations today.

The jury, which heard seven days of testimony, was asked to decide whether Mrs. Bobbitt acted in willful, malicious anger when she mutilated her husband, or whether she snapped under the pressure of years of abuse.

Judge Herman A. Whisenant Jr. told the seven women and five men that they also could consider a lesser charge of unlawful wounding, which has a maximum penalty of five years in prison.

Mrs. Bobbitt, 24, faced up to 20 years in prison and deportation to her native South America if convicted of maliciously wounding Bobbitt.

In closing arguments, defense attorney Blair Howard maintained that John Bobbitt raped his wife in the early hours of June 23, shortly before she severed his penis.

"I can think of no greater provocation than the act of rape," he said. "To rape a woman is not only a violation of the body. . . . It is a direct attack on the emotional structure that holds a woman together."

Prince William County Commonwealth's Attorney Paul B. Ebert said Bobbitt had raped his wife during their marriage, but that, "Two wrongs don't make a right."

"Sometimes I'm sure she didn't want to have sex. And she had the right to refuse him. But it wasn't every day and it wasn't every week . . . that John Bobbitt raped her," he said.

"You can't take the law in your own hands," he said.

Mrs. Bobbitt contended that years of physical and sexual abuse drove her into mental illness and an "irresistible impulse" to harm Bobbitt. She said she acted after Bobbitt returned home from a night of drinking and raped her.

Motorist rescues boy from freezing

DETROIT (AP) — Ten more minutes and 9-year-old Darrin Harvey may have been dead.

The boy's mother was a few minutes late to pick him up at school Tuesday, a day when the temperature dipped to minus 2 degrees. He decided to walk the mile to a relative's home, where the two have been staying since their own home burned.

Soon after Darrin set out, motorist Rush Yarnell caught a glimpse of something in the snow.

"His one hand was up in the air, as if he was begging," Yarnell said. "I knew something was radically wrong." He made a U-turn and rushed back to the spot.

The boy's hands were white. One of his shoes was missing.

"When I first picked him up, I didn't think there was any life there," Yarnell said. "I've never felt a human being so cold, or seen someone shake like that. I'm so glad this came out the way it did."

He and another motorist put the boy in Yarnell's car and drove him to a police precinct. Minutes later, Darrin's frantic mother came to the station to report her son missing. She found him lying on a counter at the precinct.

"I thought I was going to die," Darrin said Wednesday from St. John's Hospital. "I saw my hands were frozen. I was crying. I tried to wave at the cars."

Clinton marks year in office with interview on King show

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton on Thursday night lamented the tough scrutiny of presidential nominees and, reflecting on his first year in office, said it had been tough but rewarding.

Marking that anniversary with an appearance on CNN's "Larry King Live," Clinton said he was working to overcome frustrations of the presidency and dealt with subjects ranging from the death of his mother to the qualities of his attorney general, Janet Reno. He said she had come onto the Washington scene "hot as a firecracker."

He pledged to work with Robert Fiske, the special counsel appointed earlier in the day to investigate his financial dealings while governor of Arkansas.

"Whatever he wants to do," Clinton said. "I just want to do my job. I don't want to be distracted by this any more. . . . I didn't do anything wrong."

Citing retired Adm. Bobby Inman's decision to withdraw as his nominee for secretary of defense, Clinton said he was concerned about the whole nomination process. "These standards are always being raised and heightened," he said.

The president made an anniversary appearance two days after Inman, who would have succeeded Les Aspin in the Cabinet, pulled out unexpectedly and leveled a blast at his critics.

"The process takes too long now," Clinton said. "I think maybe its time to have a bipartisan look at this appointments process . . . I think it's excessive."

Clinton groused that political criticism such as that being leveled in the Whitewater affair "apparently is part of the price of being in public life in the late 20th century in the United States."

"I can deal with it. The only thing that really steams me is what it does to my wife, my daughter, my family," he said.

King noted that the last time Clinton had appeared on his show was the same night that White House lawyer Vincent Foster committed suicide, exactly six months ago.

Clinton said that he knew no more now about what led to the suicide than he did earlier. Foster "left a note, he was profoundly depressed . . . It broke my heart."

Summing up his first year, Clinton said in the hour-long appearance: "The bad days are part of it. It's humbling and its edcucational. It keeps you in your place."

"Are you happy?" King asked Clinton.

The president somberly replied: "Oh, yes. And grateful for the chance to serve."

Fiske said he planned to question the president and his wife under oath as part of his investigation of the Clinton's Whitewater Investment Corp. real estate dealings in Arkansas.

"It's important that I not be distracted from the job of being president," Clinton said.

The president, interviewed by King in the library of the White House at a round table with a picture of Abraham Lincoln in the background, said a major frustration was the scrutiny that Cabinet nominees are being put through.

Crowds besiege federal relief centers; death toll rises in L.A.

By Seth Mydans
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — An angry, tearful crowd pushed against the doors of a federal disaster-relief center that opened Thursday at the epicenter of Monday's earthquake.

Thousands more filled the streets outside, as a desperate need for food, water and shelter clashed with bureaucratic procedures.

Shoving their way into the Federal Emergency Management Agency's center when it opened Thursday at 1 p.m., 15 people who had not made appointments began more than an hour of painstaking interviews while the other 4,000 applicants on the streets outside grew increasingly restless.

"Get the kids out of there," a police officer ordered as he called for backup to control the crowd. "They're going to suffocate."

There were also scenes of disorder in Santa Monica where nearly 200 patients, some on gurneys and some in wheelchairs, were evacuated from from St. John's Hospital after building inspectors declared it unsafe.

And as aftershocks continued to shudder through the city, traffic to major movie studios was disrupted when a damaged bridge in Burbank was closed.

The dimensions of Monday's destruction continued to grow in other ways Thursday. The death toll rose to 51, matching the official coroner's count of fatalities in the 1992 riots.

Hospital officials said 4,604 patients had been treated and released from emergency rooms since the Monday-morning quake; 716 patients had been admitted to hospitals.

At the relief center in Northridge, 1 of 11 to open Thursday, people who had been waiting since dawn shouted and jabbed their fingers at the face of Lourdes Pagano, a FEMA volunteer, who arrived at midday and announced that only those who had made an appointment over an emergency hotline could be helped Thursday.

The others were told to get an application and return for processing another day. Officials warned that a completed application did not guarantee aid.

"Just give us somewhere to stay, just a roof," said Jaime Narvez, 16, who has camped out in a playing field with his family since the earthquake. "We need money and food. We need a place with running water."

Three days after the earthquake, the need for shelter and emergency relief has became the most urgent issue here, with tens of thousands of people camping in parks and playing fields and uncounted others staying with friends.

Officials warned that the need for shelter could become critical this weekend with forecasts of heavy rain and temperatures in the 40s.

Some of the newly homeless said they were searching at least for sheets of plastic to protect themselves.

"The housing problem is bigger than any of us expected," said Henry Cisneros, the secretary of Housing, as he surveyed the chaos at the Northridge emergency office.

Woman takes first class with cadets at Citadel

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Shannon Faulkner walked into a biology class at The Citadel on Thursday and made history. She became the first woman in the school's 151-year history to take a class with the corps of cadets.

"It wasn't like walking into any other class, when there are 30 guys in the class and you're the only woman," said Ms. Faulkner, who also celebrated her 19th birthday Thursday.

"My first day of class went well," she said. "The cadets have spoken to me. I don't think I'll be having any problems."

Well, she did have some.

She got a $10 ticket for parking in the faculty lot. Ms. Faulkner said she thought school officials told her she could park there.

Ms. Faulkner, who had all gender references removed from her high school transcript, first was accepted by the school, then rejected when Citadel officials found out she is a woman. So she sued the state-supported military college last year, saying its all-male policy was unconstitutional.

A federal judge ruled she could attend day classes, although not as a cadet, while her lawsuit proceeded. The Citadel went to the Supreme Court to try to keep her out, but Chief Justice William Rehnquist on Tuesday said she could attend classes.

The Citadel and Virginia Military Institute are the nation's only state-supported, all-male military colleges. VMI's admissions policy is also being challenged in federal court.

Ms. Faulkner walked alone through 25-degree temperatures and a horde of reporters to Duckett Hall for her 8 a.m. biology class, a 75-minute lecture on plant reproduction. Cadets watched from the courtyard and the windows of Stevens Barracks across the street, yelling as she passed by.

"It's real upsetting for a lot of the guys. But they have enough humor, enough spunk, to see it through," said John Johnson, a junior cadet.

Hispanics sue Alamo City police

■ Lawsuit filed in Midland claims San Antonio Police Department, city officials discriminate against Hispanic officers.

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

The San Antonio Hispanic Police Officers' Organization has filed a class action lawsuit in Midland's U.S. District Court requesting the San Antonio police be restrained from hiring a deputy chief until the lawsuit goes to court.

Also requested in the lawsuit are damages of $300,000 for each plaintiff for alleged civil-rights violations by the city.

The lawsuit was filed by El Paso attorney Antonio Silva on behalf of Capt. Alex Torres, Lt. Manuel Longoria, Lt. Raymond Ybarbo, Sgt. Robert Garcia, Sgt. Richard Garcia, Patrolwoman Linda Diaz and the Hispanic Police organization.

Named as defendants in the lawsuit are the San Antonio Police Department, Mayor Nelson Wolff, City Manager Alexander E. Briseno, Police Chief William Gibson and City Council members Roger Perez, Ruth Jones McLendon, Linda Billa Burke, Henry Avila, Juan Solis III, Helen Ayala, William Thornton, Lyle Larson, Bob Ross and Howard Peak.

The officers claim they are being discriminated against based on a pattern and practice of discrimination.

According to the lawsuit, the discrimination has resulted "in a hostile work atmosphere, failure to promote, disparate disciplinary procedures and practices under and over supervision and language duties, performance appraisals, recruitment, assignments, training, hiring, undercover assignments, overtime, geographic assignments and interference in the performance of officers' duties by allowing racial and ethnic stereotypes to exist as a way of doing business."

The lawsuit also alleges that a "good ole boy system" exists within the department.

The plaintiffs have requested a temporary restraining order to prevent the city from retaliating against the officers who have filed the lawsuit as well as another restraining order preventing the defendants from filling any deputy chiefs' positions.

The plaintiffs allege the salaries of Hispanics are

Waco cultists fired 1st shots, reporter says

By Chip Brown
Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — A newspaper reporter who witnessed the government's raid on the Branch Davidian compound testified Thursday that the first shots were fired by the cultists before all the federal agents were out of their trucks.

Marc Masferrer, testifying at the murder trial of 11 cult members, said his editor at the Waco Tribune-Herald sent him to the compound Feb. 28, and that he saw the agents from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms arrive.

"Based on what I saw and heard, I believe whoever was inside the building fired first," said Masferrer, who esti-

Businessman announces mayoral candidacy

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Midland businessman and chairman of the city's Planning and Zoning Commission Bobby Burns — citing a need for new leadership to promote and sell Midland — announced his candidacy for mayor on Thursday.

Burns

"I don't want to focus on what's wrong . . . I want to talk about the future of Midland," said the 42-year-old owner of Robt. Burns and Associates Insurance.

"Midland can do better and that's why I'm running," he said.

One improvement Burns said he would focus on, if elected, is economic development, which would include working harder to develop Loop 250 and Lamesa Road.

Burns criticized the City Council's recent denial of a zone change to permit a restaurant — rumored to have been the Black-Eyed Pea — on Loop 250 adjacent to Chili's Grill & Bar.

Although the mayor voted for the zone change, he was not effective in getting the request passed, Burns said.

"We really need to start to figure out how to get things done, not stop them," he said.

The council vote on the zone-change request was essentially divided due to nearby residents' opposition to the developers.

"It doesn't have to be a win/lose situ-

Broken vessels on face disappear thanks to high-tech laser surgery

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

ODESSA — After years of wearing heavy makeup to cover broken blood vessels on her face, Alma Steelman hopes a new surgery will allow her to use "just a little powder and rouge."

And so far so good. Just moments after a "test patch" was performed on her left cheek recently, she said, "I look better already.

The Odessan said she has been conscious of the tiny red patterns of veins — splotched on her cheeks, chin, nose, and even above her eyebrows — for years. Often associated with alcoholics or heavy drinkers, Ms. Steelman said she was afraid people would think the broken blood vessels on her face were caused by imbibing.

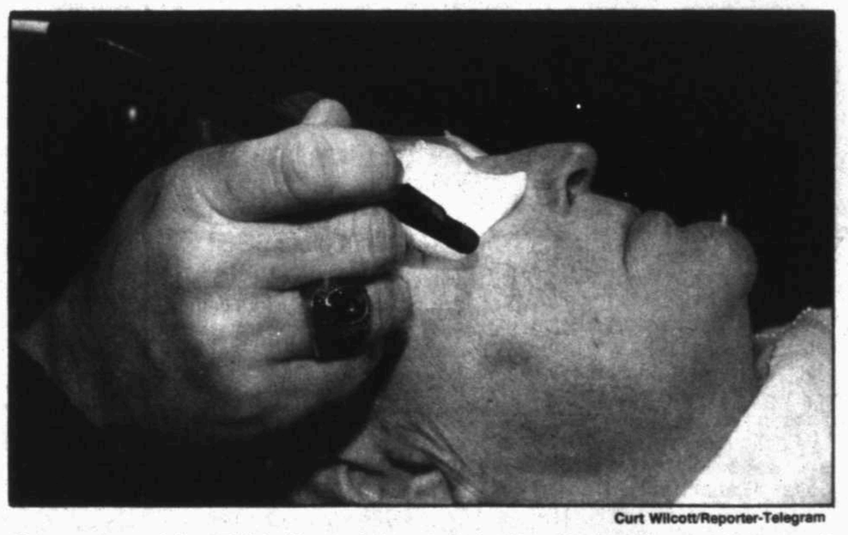

"And I've never drunk in my life," she said.

"I've thought about doing something about the veins for a long time," she said. "They just kept getting darker, and soon makeup didn't cover them at all."

Ms. Steelman made an appointment to visit Odessa dermatologist Dr. Kris Howard to have a facial sore checked. "I also knew that he did the laser surgery," she said.

After learning about the cosmetic surgery, she said she was convinced to

Tax appraiser finds pieces of World War II bombs

DALHART — Huie Stanley makes his living inspecting property sites and answering inquiries.

A U.S. Army Corps of Engineers request in October, however, led the chief tax appraiser for Dallam County on an interesting scavenger hunt that reveled echoes from the past.

What was commonly viewed as heaps of scrap metal rusting on remote grazing land north of Dalhart turned out to be something more interesting — bomb shrapnel from yesteryear when an area air force base conducted World War II test bombing and training.

"You get a kick finding something over 50 years old that has been laying on the ground unmoved. You could see indentions in the ground where the bombs hit and blew up," Stanley said.

Stanley says he has hunted quail and ridden horseback throughout much of the region for years and never paid attention to splotches of metal sitting in the middle of nowhere.

His odyssey began when Rochelle Ross, a project manager with the Corps of Engineers, wrote a letter requesting survey maps of the area.

Ross and two colleagues visited Dalhart in early December and conducted their own field survey.

Their study is part of a defense environmental restoration program of defunct military bases, Ross said from her St. Louis office.

The report concentrates on contamination potential of explosive waste and chemical warfare material.

"Based on past use and what was uncovered, there could be a possibility something was buried there," Ross said.

No danger or hazard exists, however, for contamination to seep into area water tables, she added.

The 100-pound bombs were filled mainly with sand and contained an igniting source for target practice purposes, Ross said.

After probing through past records and archives, Stanley discovered that it's not unusual to find lots of bomb shrapnel throughout much of the area.

Dalhart Army Air Base, opened in the early 1940s, included nearly 30,000 acres of bombing range sites for test pilot and artillery runs.

The government had within its domain about 77,000 acres of land here — much of which as been declared U.S. National Grasslands today.

Dalhart also had an advanced glider school that served as headquarters for all Gulf Coast training. The base also included a jeep target range, skeet ranges, pistol and rifle ranges.

The government gave the air base to the City of Dalhart after the war.

Stories abound here about a teeming Dalhart during wartime. Families took soldiers in because of a housing shortage.

A wayward B-17 crew on a bomb training mission mistook the nightime city lights of nearby Boise City, Okla. and dropped six practice bombs on July 5, 1943.

No one was hurt and damage was minimal, according to local history books.

Five men were killed and two critically injured when their training glider crashed into a house near the base in 1943.

An anniversary memorial will be held on Jan. 26 in the XIT Museum to commemorate the victims.

FRIDAY DAY WATCH

Lights & Sirens

Q. At a fire recently foam stuff was sprayed on the burning material. What is that foam spray?

A. The fire service sometimes uses soap or foam mixed with water to put out certain fires. Materials like cotton and hay are hard for water to penetrate. The soap acts as a water surface tension loosener allowing easier penetration with less water used. Foam and water are used to blanket the fuel from the oxygen, thus extinguishing other fires like gas and oil fires.

Questions about emergency medical services or firefighting should be sent to Lights & Siren, P.O. Box 1152, Midland, 79702-1152.

Ladies retreat

Saturday is the deadline to register for the "Grace So Amazing" Ladies Retreat set for Feb. 4 and 5 at the Midland Hilton. The registration fee is non-refundable. Fees are $55 for four in a room, $60 for three in a room or $70 for two in a room and includes lodging, conference fee and three meals. To register, send checks — payable to Wilshire Park Baptist Church — to Linda McMurry, 2201 Abbey Place, Midland, 79707. Students are invited to the Friday banquet and concert; tickets are $10. The retreat's guest speaker is to be recording artist Dawn Smith Jordan, who as Miss South Carolina, was a runner-up in the 1987 Miss America Pageant.

CHAMBER: Bonilla blasts Dem philosophy keeping more tax dollars in one's pocketbook and doing things that are right for business and family, Bonilla told members of the Chamber of Commerce's governmental affairs committee on Thursday.

Following the session, Bonilla, a 40-year-old conservative freshman Republican legislator from San Antonio, said the permissive philosophy of the Democratic-controlled White House is, "to a great degree, immoral.

"A lot of young people . . . think it is stylish, because the administration promotes it, to be gay or bisexual. And I think that's a tragedy that our young people are being affected by.

"We have to remember what made us strong and what makes us strong as a people — their work ethic, their sense of responsibility and worth."

But Bonilla said it is anybody's guess just how vigorously President Clinton is going to push for the health-care reform program, which was strongly influenced by Hillary Rodham Clinton.

"I know it's a problem," he said of inflationary health-care costs.

"You shouldn't have to live under the fear of a financial disaster if something happens to you . . . a fear of going bankrupt" to pay for medical costs.

Health-care costs could be reduced dramatically through a tort reform that would put a cap on jury awards, Bonilla said.

He affixed part of the blame for high medical costs "to a few bad apples" — lawyers seeking high-dollar damages for their clients.

Bonilla said he would prefer that "the federal government not get involved in it (national health care) at all."

On the subject of welfare reform, Bonilla said conservatives in both the Democratic and Republican parties are in agreement on some aspects of the issue.

"We need to make people more responsible for their own actions," he said.

Bonilla lambasted the federal Endangered Species Act which, he said, has infringed on private landowners and has held up land development for the sake of preserving endangered flora and fauna.

"If it were up to me," Bonilla said, "we'd eliminate the Endangered Species Act. The Endangered Species Act has endangered the human species in so many areas."

Bonilla said the fault rested on the extremes of the liberals in politics and those influencing politics.

"When the liberals are upset with petty crimes, they suddenly are for the death penalty."

In addressing domestic petroleum production, Bonilla said some of the restrictions on oil exploration should be eliminated.

The fire for domestic drilling should somehow be rekindled, he said, but drilling incentives are hampered by "dumb regulations, environmental regulations that make drilling so costly."

Bonilla, a former television executive whose congressional district extends from Laredo to Midland and from San Antonio to El Paso, is one of three Republican legislators who represent parts of Midland. The other two are San Antonio lawyer-rancher Lamar Smith, 46, and Lubbock farmer Larry Combest, 48.

In discussing the benefits of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA), Bonilla said Mexico is "a great market. It's up to the communities to seize the moment."

About gun control, Bonilla said he opposed the Brady Handgun Violence Prevention Act to more rigidly control the sale of firearms.

"Guns aren't the problem," he said.

He proposes stiffer sentences for offenders and "three-time losers" in order to better control hand-gun violence and other crimes associated with firearms.

Bonilla noted that illegal handguns are common in the nation's capital, where handguns are banned and gun-related violence is alarming.

He commended Midland leaders for promoting the north-south Interstate Highway 27 project from Amarillo southward to the east-west Interstate Highway 10 and to the border.

Bonilla said he is "delighted to see the aggressiveness" in building the highway that would promote international trade.

Bonilla told city and chamber leaders it is "wonderful that you are trying to take the lead in diversifying your economy. You understand the importance of diversity."

COSMETIC: Doctor describes surgery

have it done.

First came the patch test, to check her skin's reaction to the surgery. Howard said the incidence of scarring is low.

"Complications are rare. Less than 1 percent have complications and scarring is uncommon. But we never say 'never' on any kind of procedure."

He said the argon laser surgery — which has been performed nationally over the last five to 10 years — works so well because, with the laser "a pulse of energy is selectively and specifically directed" to the veins leaving surrounding tissue untouched.

"The laser passes through the outer part of the skin and doesn't change the surface. It is absorbed by the hemoglobin pigment in red blood cells," Howard said, noting the laser can be tuned to pulsate in microsecond durations.

The dermatologist said another advantage of the laser is that it doesn't disperse heat energy.

While commonly used to destroy varicosities, or dilated veins, the laser can also be used on freckles or age spots.

"It is best used for blood vessels," Howard said.

He said the surgery is strictly cosmetic. "The broken blood vessels are not compromising any function and they are not life threatening."

He also said insurance companies generally don't cover cosmetic surgery. "Unless it's something like a port-wine stain, which is viewed as disfiguring because of the psychological ramifications."

As for broken blood vessels on the face, Howard said they may be caused by sun damage and hormonal influences.

"Heredity plays a big role," he said. "Certain conditions can make the veins more prominent."

He said the surgery is not as successful with removing larger varicose veins on the legs. "Usually, injections are better for the larger veins," he said.

An Odessa dermatologist for more than four years, Howard has had the laser since December.

He charges $75 to $100 for a spot test and $250 to $300 to treat a full face. Sessions take about 15 to 30 minutes.

"I was surprised by how it worked," Ms. Steelman said. "I expected to just have a blast in the face. I pictured something like an X-ray. Instead he followed each little vein in my cheek."

Ms. Steelman said cotton was packed on her eyes and the laser tracing over her face felt like tiny pin pricks.

"It wasn't painful though," she said, noting that afterward, her skin felt like she had been in the sun long enough to start to burn.

Howard said another reason for the patch test is that it allows the client to see how the surgery works before they have their whole face done.

After the surgery is performed, he recommends staying out of the sun for at least a month.

"I can already see a big difference, even without my glasses," Ms. Steelman said. "I'm pretty excited about this."

disproportionate to those of non-Hispanics, in addition to claiming that promotions based on tests and rating boards take Hispanics longer to attain.

According to the lawsuit, Hispanics are under-represented in management and are passed over for promotions. The lawsuit states there are five Hispanic captains out of 18; 10 Hispanic lieutenants out of 38; and 67 Hispanic sergeants out of 178.

The officers also charge they are not allowed time off to prepare for the promotion tests, as non-Hispanic officers are, and they claim the assessors are not qualified to judge the officers as they are a part of the "good ole boy system."

They also complain, in the lawsuit, about the fact that they receive no extra pay for being bilingual.

POLICE REPORTS

Highway fatality

ODESSA — An Odessa woman died Thursday morning after a two-vehicle accident west of Odessa, according to the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Kella Gaye Henderson, 35, died at about 10 a.m. at Medical Center Hospital from injuries she received during the accident that occurred at 7:15 a.m. at Highway 158 and Wireline Road, according to a DPS report.

Ms. Henderson was headed west in a 1994 Nissan on Highway 158 and a 1977 Mack truck, driven by Pablo Salcido Varela of Odessa, was northbound on Wireline Road. The truck disregarded a stop sign at the intersection and collided with the car, which came to rest 40 feet north of the roadway, according to the report.

No charges had been filed in the case, officials said.

PLANNING: Burns seeks stable business base

ation. We can protect the neighborhood and get development," the candidate said.

Burns said none of the City Council members have experience in planning and zoning "and it shows."

If elected mayor, Burns said, citizens would not see economic losses such as the recent local downsizing of Arco Oil and Gas Co. or the pullout of American Airlines' jet service "without a fight."

Burns said, in addition to working to boost the economy, he would work to improve the relationship between the city government and the people of Midland.

Burns, a member of the Airport Board, used as an example the recent go-ahead for a new airport terminal.

"We've still got people out there talking against the airport. Our community needs to be behind that," said Burns, who supports the airport project.

"There's not enough trust in city government."

Burns also touched on the issue of taxes.

"I support no new taxes . . . I'd like to say that three or four times," said Burns, who added that he would like to see the tax base increase through new businesses.

Overall, the city needs to break away from the current "lackluster" leadership and get back to the "can-do" attitude that used to prevail in Midland, he said.

"I believe the city's ready for a change and we'll know (on election day) May 7th," he said.

Burns has owned Robt. Burns & Associates Insurance and Financial Service in Midland since 1983. In 1978 he was in the city manager trainee program in Valley Mills.

He has a bachelor's degree in political science and journalism from Baylor University, and has worked toward a master's degree in public administration from the University of Oklahoma.

He and his wife, Denise Timian Burns, have a 7-year-old son, Austin.

Burns has been the first mayoral candidate to publicly announce his intentions. Candidates are required to file between Feb. 21 and March 23.

Mayor J.D. Faircloth is expected to run for re-election but has not formally announced his intention.

DAVIDIANS: Defense reacts

mated he was 225 yards from the compound.

Defense attorneys said Masferrer might have been too far from the action to see or hear anything clearly. The issue of who shot first is critical to defendants' claims of self-defense.

The defendants claim they retaliated only after being fired upon by dark-clad agents who fanned out from the two cattle trailers with their weapons drawn.

Masferrer said he concluded the shots were fired by the followers of cult leader David Koresh, in part, because "at that time, only four or five agents were out of the truck."

Four ATF agents were killed in the ensuing firefight and 16 were wounded. Six Branch Davidians also are believed to have been killed in the 45-minute gun battle.

Also Thursday, ATF special agents Kris Mayfield and Kevin Richardson described watching as fellow agent Robert Williams was gunned down in front of the compound. Both men said Williams was killed by gunfire coming from the compound.

"I looked up and saw him take a shot," Mayfield said. "His head jerked back and he slumped to the ground on his back, face-up."

He was shot in the head, Mayfield said.

The failed attempt by the ATF to arrest Koresh on weapons charges and search his compound near Waco touched off a 51-day standoff that ended in an April 19 inferno in which Koresh and 85 followers died.

The defendants face up to life in prison if convicted of murder and conspiracy to commit murder.

Attorney Mike DeGeurin, who represents Branch Davidian Paul Fatta, said Masferrer was too far away to see what was happening and watched the scene for only about 20 to 30 seconds before seeking refuge in a ditch.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, JANUARY 21, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Focus on family life and a possible change of residence. Your leadership skills make a fresh career start possible next month. A real estate deal keeps you busy in March. Go ahead and make the first move in romance! Late fall is the best time to travel. December will bring exciting changes in a longtime alliance.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Geena Davis ("A League of Their Own"), opera star Placido Domingo, actress Jill Eikenberry, golf great Jack Nicklaus, actors Paul Scofield and Telly Savalas, British comedian Benny Hill, legendary deejay Wolfman Jack, actor Mac Davis, fashion designer Christian Dior, basketball player Akeem Olajuwon.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A busy day lies ahead. Your original ideas will lead to fresh financial opportunities. A romantic match is less surprising than outsiders may think. Shared interests are far more important than sentimental gestures.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your ambition will take you to the top. Put your persistence to good use. A stimulating intellectual project will sharpen your mind. Some brisk physical activity may help you overcome writer's block.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Put more of yourself into your work and you will make great headway. Seek the help of experienced people. They will applaud your honesty. Wise money management will banish any financial worries.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): If you feel a bit overwrought this morning, keep a low profile. Plunging into absorbing work can be excellent therapy. Try not to be too obvious about your interest in a newcomer.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Handling a conflict calls for all the wisdom you can muster. Stay on top of a financial situation. An emotional drain can lead to physical fatigue. Seek a change of scenery later today.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Events beyond your control could alter your plans. Be flexible. Seize an unexpected opportunity and run with it! Take care of routine tasks before asking higher-ups for a more challenging assignment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Make full use of your excellent communication skills. The direct approach will work best when trying to drum up public support. A romantic partner's intensity may frighten you. Take things nice and slow.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be conservative. Put the brakes on a financial expansion, at least for now. Activities taking place behind the scenes will work to your advantage. A late-afternoon message revives your romantic hopes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Great career gains are possible now. When the moment is right, press your case. Do not let romance sap your independence. Stand on your own two feet and insist partner do the same.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be assertive but non-aggressive when making demands. It you have trouble expressing yourself calmly, put requests in writing. A secret romance will last longer if you are discreet. Avoid taking foolish chances.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Get an early start. An important career or financial decision could be made today. Discuss your ideas and requirements in a businesslike manner. Tonight, the spotlight shines in your direction. Dress to impress!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Higher-ups are impressed by the way you handle responsibility. Give co-workers their space so that you do not appear too pushy. Neglecting old friends to pursue someone new would be a mistake.

While most of the world's great players are concentrated in the bridge powerhouses such as the U.S., France, Britain, Brazil and Italy, some of the lesser-known countries have players who rank up there with the best. Watch Tim Seres, a Hungarian expatriate who made his home in Australia, orchestrate the defense on this hand.

We are not thrilled with South's decision to rebid diamonds. We would have preferred a takeout double. That would have led to a heart contract with interesting possibilities.

Against three diamonds West led a low spade and Seres won the trick with the jack. The bidding and dummy's length marked declarer with a singleton spade, hence some length in clubs. Left alone, declarer would surely ruff at least one club in dummy. Thus, it was necessary to draw trumps.

Most players we know would have shifted to the ace of diamonds and another. Declarer would win, draw the last trump and follow with the ace and queen of hearts. Since West had a doubleton king, declarer would score 10 tricks—five trumps, four hearts and the ace of clubs.

Seres did better—he shifted to the ten of trumps! Declarer was forced to concede defeat. If South went after hearts, West would shift to a club and, when in with the ace of diamonds, East would give West a heart ruff. Declarer tried another trump. East won and shifted to the ten of clubs and again declarer was saddled with five losers.

Country singer Lorrie Morgan, Troy Aikman no longer an item

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Country singer Lorrie Morgan and Dallas Cowboys quarterback Troy Aikman are no longer an item.

Morgan spokeswoman: Both have active careers.

"It just wasn't working out," Susan Nadler, Morgan's spokeswoman, said Thursday. "Both have very, very active careers."

The amicable celebrity breakup was a mutual decision reached during the Christmas holidays, she said. The couple had been dating for several months.

The singer isn't seeing anyone right now, Nadler said. She's working on a new album due out in March.

Aikman has a big National Football League playoff game this weekend against the San Francisco 49ers.

ROCHESTER, Minn. — The latest round of medical tests on Jordan's King Hussein showed no trace of the cancer that required surgery in 1992.

Hussein completed his third round of routine postoperative tests Wednesday, then left Rochester, Mayo Clinic clinic spokesman Chris Gade said, adding that the king's private doctor, Lt. Gen. Samir Farraj, said no signs of cancer were found.

"Test results also concluded that the king's overall health was excellent," Gade said.

Hussein's left kidney and ureter were removed during cancer surgery at the Mayo Clinic in August 1992.

The longest reigning ruler in the Middle East was hospitalized with an irregular heartbeat in July in Jordan, but a hospital spokesman said he was suffering from exhaustion, not heart disease.

Hussein is known to have been hospitalized twice previously with a heartbeat problem, in May 1990 and June 1991.

LEDYARD, Conn. — Gov. Lowell Weicker didn't try his luck on the slot machines when he made his first visit to Foxwoods, the state's only casino.

"I'm just coming over to see how my partner is doing," Weicker said Wednesday. "I'm glad he's doing well."

Connecticut and Indians who run the casino are the big winners, he said.

The governor who had opposed the Mashantucket Pequot Indians' casino plan took a simulated ride on an underwater shuttle and watched a film on dinosaurs in a 360-degree theater before wading through a sea of slot machines.

Weicker fought the tribe's efforts until federal courts ordered the state to negotiate a gaming compact with the Indians. The casino opened in February 1992 and was an immediate success. It's been growing ever since.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — For the fourth year in a row, singer-songwriter Alan Jackson has the most tunes in an awards show recognizing the Top 10 country songs of the year.

Jackson wrote or co-wrote three of the songs to be performed March 9 during The Nashville Network's telecast of the 11th annual Music City News Country Songwriters Awards.

Jackson's songs among the Top 10 included "Chattahoochee," co-written with Jim McBride; "She Got the Rhythm and I Got the Blues," co-written with Randy Travis; and "Tonight I Climbed the Wall," which he wrote alone.

Other top songs and their writers:

- "Don't Let Our Love Start Slippin' Away," writers: Vince Gill and Pete Wasner, performer: Vince Gill.
- "The Heart Won't Lie," writers: Kim Carnes and Donna Weiss, performers: Reba McEntire and Vince Gill.
- "I Cross My Heart," writers: Eric Kaz and Steve Dorff, performer: George Strait.
- "One More Last Chance," writers: Vince Gill and Gary Nicholson, performer: Vince Gill.
- "Two Sparrows In a Hurricane," writers: Mark Alan Springer, performer: Tanya Tucker.
- "What Part of No," writers: Wayne Perry and Gerald Smith, performer: Lorrie Morgan.
- "When Did You Stop Loving Me," writers: Monty Holmes and Donny Kees, performer: George Strait.

TAMPA, Fla. — Retired Army Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf has traded in government-financed security for private guards.

The commander of allied forces in the Persian Gulf War began receiving protection supervised by the Defense Department in June after Iraqi death threats. But the heavily armed squad of Army guards, assisted by deputies, was canceled Sunday, Hillsborough County Sheriff's Col. Tom DePolis said Tuesday.

Schwarzkopf, with an office in downtown Tampa and a home in a walled enclave just north of the city, has made private arrangements for his own security, said DePolis.

Neither Army nor sheriff's officials would say why the move was made. Schwarzkopf also declined to comment.

FAMILY MATTERS

Man calls wife 'domineering'

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: I have been married five years and have a 4-year-old child. My wife is the most domineering person I have ever net in my life. Everything has to go her way or she gets mad and will not even talk to me.

May

She gets my paycheck and I have no say-so as to what is to be paid or what the money is spent on. My paycheck is spent the day I get paid because my wife doesn't know how to handle money.

I am very jealous of my wife but she does everything in her power to make me jealous. My wife will get on the telephone when she gets mad at me and when I ask who she is talking to, she will not answer me. If I pick up the other telephone, she will hang up. My wife has never worked and she very rarely cleans house or washes our clothes. She certainly will not iron. She had rather spend her days visiting with a girl friend or shopping.

I really love my wife and want to raise my child, but I know that all of the fighting my child is around is ruining my child's life. I have really tried to get my wife to go to counseling, but I have not been successful. I work hard physically all day and some days I work more than eight hours. I feel my wife should keep the house clean, have my clothes clean and my evening meal ready for me when I come home from work.

I love my family very much and I really don't want to divorce my wife. Most of my friends and family tell me that I should stand up and be a man. They say I should demand my wife act like a wife instead of a child, or divorce her.

I work with a lot of professional people who tell me that my wife is just lazy and spoiled. They say that she will not get any better at cleaning the house or managing the money, so I should leave before there are more children.

Please, do you have any professional advice? BEAT DOWN

DEAR BEAT: Your relationship with your wife sounds very unbalanced. First, consider seeking professional counseling in order to help you clarify your marital objectives and identify the consequences you are willing to endure in order to achieve those objectives. In my experience, counseling works better if your wife would join you, but that may not be possible at this time.

I believe that it is important for you to learn to set appropriate boundaries with your wife, whether you two stay married or not. You will be interacting with her for years because of your child. It is not so important that you two have had problems. What is important is that you have been unable to resolve those problems in a satisfactory manner.

Your money situation is especially disturbing, since money is a concrete reality — that is, expenditures and credit payments cannot exceed income. A couple must be able to agree together on their financial plan or financial and emotional disaster may well follow.

A marital relationship should be balanced so that one partner does not dominate the other. It should be on an equal ground — two loving people working as a team. I encourage you to seek professional help in order to start the process of finding that equal ground. Your love for your wife and your willingness to work on the marriage are very positive signs. Hopefully you will be able to activate your wife to better your marriage.

THE FOLLOWING TIPS ON "STROKING YOUR CHILDREN" ARE OFFERED BY THE CENTERS FOR CHILDREN AND FAMILIES:

A stroke is a unit of recognition. We all need touching — hugs, kisses, back rubs. Therapist Virginia Satir once said that we need a minimum of four hugs a day to sustain life, a minimum of eight hugs a day to maintain our equilibrium, and at least 12 hugs a day to become self-actualizing.

If a child — or the child part of an adult — is acting "out of sorts," he or she may be "stroke hungry!" In addition to hugs, you might consider the following verbal strokes to produce "I am capable" feelings:

- "I'm pleased that you cleaned up your room."
- "It's really nice of you to help me."
- "I feel so proud looking at such a good report card."
- "You play so well with your sister."
- "I really appreciate your helping me grocery shop."
- "Thank you so much for folding your clothes."

Also try to remember to give those "unearned strokes" too! The "I love yous" tell someone they are special just for being, and that feels real good.

Parents, adult children can learn to get along

By Judi Hunt
N.Y. Times News Service

SEATTLE — Her two youngsters were 9 and 10 when Jane Adams asked her mother at what age children stopped whining.

"Mom lifted her eyebrows, looked me straight in the eye and said, 'I don't know, mine never have,'" Adams says.

The Seattle writer, who made a name for herself 20 years ago when she burst into print with her frank look at "Sex and the Single Parent," was thus reminded — again — that raising children wasn't something that ended when her offspring turned 18 or 21.

"I guess I knew the job would be forever, but I just didn't realize that forever would be so long," says Adams, who has written "I'm Still Your Mother" ($19.95, Delacorte Press), a guide for parents who want to get along better with their adult children.

Forever seems longer than it was for previous generations of parents who expected their grown children to go from home to college, a job or the military and then to marriage without wasting any time in between, she believes.

"Our kids aren't doing that," says Adams, who at 53 is in the vanguard of pre-Baby Boom parents who are discovering, sometimes to their chagrin, that their so-called grown-up children are taking longer to mature than earlier generations.

"They're extending their coming of age by at least five years and not functioning independently like we did at their age. And that means they're becoming financially independent at least a half decade later than we did."

WHICH HAS led to more than 50 percent of 18- to 25-year-old Americans still living at home, Adams says. "And it doesn't end at 25. A third of 25-to-34-year-olds are under their parents' roof," she says.

"Some have never left, others have gone out and tried to make it on their own, only to return home. Jean Davies Okimoto wrote about them and the problems sometimes created by their moving back home in 'Boomerang Kids.'"

But there has been a positive by-product of this lengthy growing-up period, Adams has discovered from interviewing more than 100 parents of grown children.

"The relationships between the generations have changed, too," she thinks. "Parents of our generation, who've spent the last 20 years reading self-help books and inventing our own rules for relationships, don't want to let go of our adult children.

"We want an authentic, honest and intimate connection with our grown kids. We want what most of us don't feel we had with our own parents, a more equal relationship where we're not as judgmental as our parents were with us."

Maybe that's because parents of young adults have grown up with their kids, living their lives more than any other generation of parents has. Adams learned this from herself and from talking with other parents.

"Despite being thoroughly modern women with careers, we found being a mother has been the most satisfying role of our lives for the longest period and now, suddenly, we have outlived that role."

"I'M STILL Your Mother," the 20th book Adams has written, was her last attempt to hold onto her identity as a parent. "I thought by putting into words how I felt and sharing what I and other parents have done to make our adult children genuine friends, I'd be able to help them do the same."

She has indeed done that, says Barbara Mackoff, author of a new book, "Art of Self Renewal," and a doctor of psychology who has spent the past 15 years as a psychologist and educator in the Seattle area.

"Her approach, which is exactly right, is her directing parents to stop seeing their kids as kids," Mackoff says. "She teaches them how to treat grown-up children like intimate strangers and offers techniques for building new relationships with them that give parents a sense of acceptance and wonder."

Once parents stop looking at their adult children as if they're still children, parents will be able to at least start bridging the gap between them and their adult offspring, Mackoff says.

"The techniques that will be the most helpful to the most parents are the ones Jane describes that show parents how to gracefully accept that their children can't learn from their (parents') experiences.

"Our young people's world is far different from our world," Mackoff says.

DEAR ABBY

Does unwashed banana lose its appeal?

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Recently a family member married a woman from a different part of the country. I mention this because perhaps the region she comes from may have some bearing on the answer to this question.

Van Buren

They visit us twice a year and we like them both, but the husband always asks me on the side if I have washed the bananas I serve with breakfast, as his wife insists on having the bananas washed.

The first time he asked me, I asked him if his wife eats the peel, because I have never heard of washing a banana. (He said "No.") I have since asked around and have found nobody who washes bananas. I wash apples, pears, grapes and melons, which I will be cutting through, but I see no reason to wash bananas.

Some people told me to wash only the bananas being used that day, because there is a natural protective coating on the skin and washing it away will cause it to spoil quicker.

My husband gets annoyed when he sees me washing a banana because he thinks it's silly. Abby, are we in danger by not washing our bananas on a regular basis? If you eat bananas, do you wash them before eating them? — CURIOUS IN HARRISBURG, PA.

DEAR CURIOUS: This is a first, and even though it isn't of earth-shaking importance, it is a refreshingly new question. No one in my household has ever thought it necessary to wash a banana. Most fruit, si; bananas, no. We just peel them and eat them.

DEAR ABBY: I have never seen this in your column, and I would like your comments:

I have a friend who, in most ways, is a lovely, good person. The problem is that no matter what you're going through, she has it worse.

If you say you've had a rough day, well, you don't work as many hours as she does. She works more hours so she is more tired and has had a rougher day. If your child is sick, her child had it, only worse. If you mention you are low on cash, well, you don't know what that means until you have her bills. (Meanwhile, her kids are playing in $135 sneakers!)

I'm sure you get the picture. No one has a rougher life. Everything you go through is practically nothing compared to what she goes through. It is not enough to break up a friendship. In most other ways, she's a very nice person.

Why do people do this? Thanks for letting me unload. — FRUSTRATED FRIEND IN CONNECTICUT

DEAR FRUSTRATED FRIEND: They do it because they have a compulsion to top you.

CONFIDENTIAL TO 'DISCOURAGED AT WORK AND AT HOME': Charles M. Schwab once offered some powerful advice with these words: "A man who trims himself to suit everybody will soon whittle himself away."

DEAR ABBY: Our family has a summer cottage where we enjoy entertaining. My husband and I both work an average of 50 hours a week and enjoy spending weekends with friends and family. It involves a lot of work and expense, but it's a nice change from the hectic work week.

So what's the problem? Most people return our invitations, and during the winter months they invite us to their homes, include us in sporting activities, or whatever is going on — except for one couple.

We have never had a meal in their home — or even been asked to watch a video for an evening — yet they are more than eager to be entertained by us. She does not work, is not involved in any organizations, and they have no children — but she complains incessantly about how "busy" she is. This may seem petty, but it hurts never to be included in anything they do.

After many years of this, we decided not to invite them to our cottage this summer. Whenever I see her, she hints to be asked. What do I say? We value all our friends, but friendship should not be a one-way street. — WAITING TO BE ASKED

DEAR WAITING: Some people entertain with such ease and grace, it looks effortless to their guests — you qualify for this group. Others simply panic at the thought of serving a cup of tea at their home. Your friends who have never reciprocated your invitations belong in that category. However, there is no excuse for not inviting you to a restaurant or a sporting event.

If you enjoy the company of these non-reciprocating friends, continue to invite them, but don't expect a return invitation. They may enjoy your company, but are embarrassed because their sofa needs recovering or their carpeting is worn — or they could be waiting until they win a lottery so they can entertain you in style.

Programs help seniors buy prescription drugs

By Robert W. Trott
Associated Press

'The choice folks face these days is, 'Do we spend this money on the mortgage, do we spend it on heat, do we spend it on food, or do we spend it on drugs?' '

— Tom Otwell
American Association of Retired Persons

For many older people, getting the drugs their doctor ordered comes close to food and shelter as a necessity. When they can't afford those drugs, it can mean a life-or-death dilemma. In 10 states, though, the needy elderly get help.

It's an issue of wide concern. About one-third of the $51 billion spent each year on prescription drugs in this country comes from the pockets of older people.

Medicare does not cover prescription drugs ordered outside a hospital. And while the Clinton administration's plan for national health care addresses this issue — proposing a $12 monthly premium for drugs — that may be many years away, if ever.

"The choice folks face these days is, 'Do we spend this money on the mortgage, do we spend it on heat, do we spend it on food, or do we spend it on drugs?' " said Tom Otwell, a spokesman for the American Association of Retired Persons in Washington.

Dan Durham, an AARP lobbyist, said a nationwide survey by the organization in 1992 found 10 percent of people in this country over the age of 45 reporting they cut back on food, heating fuel or other basic expenses to pay for prescription drugs.

"Older Americans rely more on prescription drugs to maintain their health than younger Americans," Durham said. "At the same time, they have the least amount of insurance coverage to pay for prescriptions."

THE AARP survey, conducted by telephone to 1,500 people over age 45, also found that 55 percent of people ages 65-74 had insurance coverage for prescribed medications and the proportion fell to 40 percent among people 74 and older.

In Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Maine, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Vermont, meanwhile, the low-income elderly get a break on their drug bills.

Dating to the 1970s and '80s, most of these state programs set a flat price for any prescription, or provide partial reimbursement, with the government paying the rest.

New Jersey was first. In 1977 it set up its Pharmaceutical Assistance to the Aged and Disabled program. Now costing $168 million a year, the program is paid for mainly from casino revenues to help some 228,000 needy and disabled seniors buy prescription drugs.

The individual pays $5 for each prescription; the state pays the rest. That's a boon in a state where the average prescription costs $35.75, said Ed Rogan, spokesman for New Jersey's Department of Human Services.

"It's always been very popular," Rogan said of the program. "The population is graying. There are a lot of retirees."

IN 1990, Vermont began reimbursing 80 percent of drug prescription costs for people over age 65, if the individual's income was no more than $11,900 or the couple's was $16,100 or less.

Pennsylvania's Pharmaceutical Assistance Contract for the Elderly is the largest such program in the country, with a budget of $225 million and more than 332,000 participants. Begun in 1984, the program picks up the prescription tab after $6, unless the consumer insists on a particular brand.

"These are people who wouldn't get the medication they need if it were not for PACE," said Kate Megargee, spokeswoman for the Pennsylvania Department of Aging.

In Delaware, a public-private partnership between the state and a clinic created with an endowment from publisher and philanthropist Alfred I. du Pont, reimburses its 18,600 elderly participants 10 percent on their drug prescriptions.

And New York has the highest income threshold for eligibility: $15,000 for a single person, $20,000 for a couple. There participants pay $3 to $23 for each prescription, pegged to the drug's cost.

GETTING THESE programs can be frustrating for those pressing for them. In Massachusetts, officials are committed to devising a program but have yet to produce one. Meanwhile, people are anxiously trying to make their drug bills and other costs meet.

"This whole issue of the cost of drugs is one of the most frustrating and angering to older consumers," said Al Norman, director of the Massachusetts advocacy organization, Mass Home Care. "They are really ripped about the cost."

Some states help elderly

Associated Press

The National Pharmaceutical Council, a drug industry group, lists 10 states that help needy elderly pay for their prescription drugs.

■ Connecticut — Sets $12 copay on each prescription. Eligible participants must be at least 65 years old, with income up to $13,800 for an individual, $16,600 for a couple. It covers selected prescriptions, insulin, needles and syringes.

■ Delaware — Reimburses prescriptions 10 percent. Eligible participants must be at least 65, with income up to $11,000 for an individual, $15,100 for a couple. All drugs dispensed through Nemours Health Clinic in Wilmington.

■ Illinois — Participants pay $15 to $25 a month. Eligible participants must be at least 65 with household income up to $14,000.

■ Maine — Reimburses 20 percent of prescription. Eligible participants must be at least 62, (some exceptions for people as young as 55) with income up to $9,200 for an individual, $11,500 for a couple.

■ Maryland — Sets $5 copay per prescription. No minimum age. Maximum income for eligible participants starts at $8,000 for an individual up to $14,950 for family of 10.

■ New Jersey — Sets $5 copay per prescription. Eligible participants must be 65 with income up to $16,171 for an individual, $19,828 for a couple.

■ New York — Sets $3 to $23 copay depending on drug cost. Eligible participants must be 65 with income up to $15,000 for an individual, $20,000 for a couple.

■ Pennsylvania — Sets $6 copay per prescription. Eligible particpants must be 65 with income up to $13,000 for an individual, $16,200 for a couple.

■ Rhode Island — Reimburses 40 percent of prescription cost. Eligible participants must be 65 with income up to $13,509 for an individual, $16,887 for a couple.

■ Vermont — Reimburses 80 percent of prescription cost. Eligible participants must be 65 with income up to $11,900 for an individual, $16,100 for a couple.

Maine rights panel upholds town's summer hiring policy

By Peter Jackson

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — A policy that restricts summer jobs in a Maine town to college students does not represent age discrimination, the state Human Rights Commission has ruled.

The commission took the unusual step Dec. 20 of overruling one of its investigators, who had concluded that the policy was discriminatory, and voted unanimously to dismiss a complaint filed by a 59-year-old Boothbay man.

The policy of Wiscasset, a picturesque coastal town, gives preference in hiring for nearly 30 summer jobs to area students who are in or planning to attend college.

Warren Libby applied for a job as a summer traffic officer; he was neither interviewed nor hired. He filed a complaint with the state commission after two younger people were hired.

The commission's investigator concluded that the policy is discriminatory, but that Libby was not a victim of the discrimination. He lives outside the Wiscasset area, and the investigator and the commission both reasoned that the town is entitled to hire only local residents.

However, the commission overruled its investigator on the discrimination question. It said the policy is not discriminatory because it does not bar older people from being hired — so long as they are college students.

"You can be a gray-haired student," observed commission member Paul Vestal. The town "didn't say it couldn't be an older student."

Wiscasset First Selectman Lawrence Gordon said he was pleased that the policy could remain in force because it helps students pay for their education. They can earn as much as $4,000 in four months, he said.

"We always felt we were doing justice anyway," he said.

Libby, who is unemployed, said he has 10 years of experience as a public safety and parking officer with the city of Portland. He said he will not appeal the commission's ruling, but still believes the policy constitutes age discrimination.

"There aren't that many people in my age group that would be in college," Libby said.

Besides, he said, "I don't feel that I'm over the hill yet."

The director of the rights panel, Patricia Ryan, said she did not know of any other Maine towns that have a written policy giving hiring preference to college students, but noted that the practice is not uncommon.

"I'm sure it happens," she said.

Jimmy Johnson guarantees win

FORT WORTH — In a statement that better resembles Joe Namath than himself, Dallas Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson Thursday night guaranteed a victory in this weekend's NFC championship game against the San Francisco 49ers.

"We will win the ballgame," Johnson exclaimed on Fort Worth radio station WBAP-AM. "You can put it in three-inch headlines: We will win the ballgame."

Johnson made the comments during a talk show hosted by Dallas Morning News columnist Randy Galloway. New York Giants coach Dan Reeves told Galloway he expected the Cowboys to win Sunday, prompting Johnson's unsolicited call.

Using a telephone number reserved for guests, Johnson phoned the show and said, "I just listened to Dan and that's why I called.

"Let me just add to that. In my opinion, now I'm a biased person, I think we're going to go out Sunday and that crowd is going to be absolutely wild. And I think we're going to have a very, very tight ballgame for about three quarters.

"Then, before it's over, I think we're going to wear them out. I think we're going to beat their rear ends and we're going to the Super Bowl. That's my personal opinion."

On Tuesday, Johnson began a campaign directed at firing up the Texas Stadium fans for Sunday's game, which will determine the NFC's representative in the Super Bowl.

"I'm nervous about this game," he said in the radio interview. "But by the same token, I believe in our guys and I believe that our people (fans) are going to come out there and they're going to give us the home-field advantage that I want.

"We probably could win the game without them, but I want them because I want to win this game so bad. ... This puts us back in the Super Bowl. This puts us back being the best in the entire country two years in a row."

Lee, Cooper battle set

■ The top four District 4-5A teams try to gain ground on a crucial night.

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff Writer

Tonight's District 4-5A boys basketball games could take a step closer to clearing up which three teams will represent the league in the state playoffs and which one might stay home.

The top four teams in the district right now, at least according to the current standings, are squaring off tonight. Midland Lee (14-9 overall, 4-1 in league play) is tied for second place and is one game back from its opponent Abilene Cooper (18-4, 5-0).

The Rebels and Cougars will tip-off at 8 p.m. at Chaparral Center in their first meeting this year.

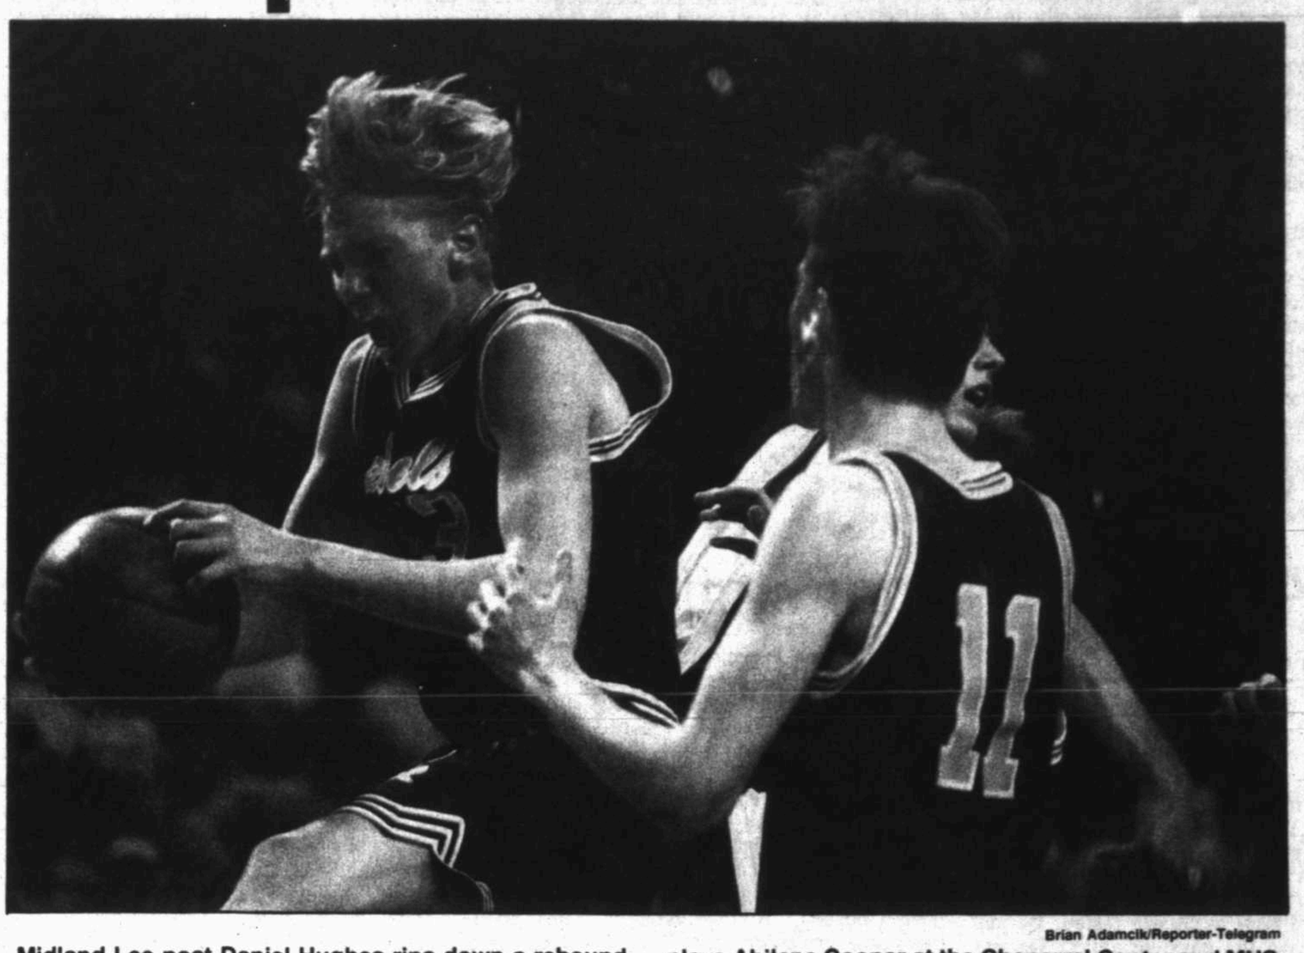

Midland High (15-8, 4-1) is the other second place team and will travel to fourth place Abilene High (14-8, 3-2) for an 8 p.m. start.

While both teams will be extremely interested in what is going on at the other gyms, both coaches have assured that their minds will not be drifting from the task at hand.

"Tonight ought to separate it out a little bit," Lee coach Jon House said. "The four best teams are playing tonight, but we can't worry about what's going on over there. We have to take care of our business."

Sabatini breaks through wall

By Rob Gloster
AP Sports Writer

MELBOURNE, Australia — She blew a huge lead at the French Open and failed to wrap up a Wimbledon final. This time, Gabriela Sabatini promised herself, she was not going to have another Grand Slam collapse.

Sabatini, who led 5-1 in the final set before losing four straight games, wasted five match points before struggling to a 6-1, 3-6, 7-5 victory over Natalia Medvedeva in the second round of the Australian Open Thursday.

"I had some difficult moments," the fourth-seeded Argentine said. "It felt like I couldn't finish the match. For a moment at 5-all, I was thinking I could lose this match. I had match point and I couldn't win, and finally I did it. I felt like I broke that wall."

Sabatini twice served for the match against Steffi Graf in the 1991 Wimbledon final, but failed both times and lost 6-4, 3-6, 8-6. In the quarterfinals of the 1993 French Open, she led Mary Joe Fernandez 6-1, 5-1 and had five match points — but eventually lost.

"I thought about that," Sabatini said. "I've been in this situation before and I was going to do everything, anything I could, to make sure it would not happen again."

Argentina's Gabriela Sabatini ...advances after a three-set win.

Medvedeva was wild in the first set, when she made many of her 51 unforced errors, and had trouble with her serve throughout the match. The Ukrainian, her eyes red and puffy, took no consolation from the match.

"Coming close is no good anymore," she said, a baseball cap pulled partly over her eyes. "I know I can beat players like her."

Top-seeded Graf defeated German compatriot Barbara Rittner 6-2, 6-4 Friday to reach the fourth round, and No. 14 Magdalena Maleeva completed a victory in a second-round match halted Thursday because of rain and darkness.

Graf was joined in the final 16 by Chanda Rubin, who beat Kristine Radford 6-3, 7-6 (7-1) in a match interrupted twice by rain. Rubin, a 17-year-old Louisianian, has never gotten past the fourth round of a Grand Slam tournament.

Men's No. 10 Magnus Gustafsson dropped just six games while winning his third-round match Friday, but No. 11 Marc Rosset was upset 3-6, 6-2, 6-2, 6-1 by Grant Stafford.

Second-seeded woman Arantxa Sanchez Vicario needed eight match points Thursday to finish off Taiwan's Shi-ting Wang 6-2, 6-4. Wang slammed shots all over the Cowboys cozy with comfortable Aikman

■ Jimmy Johnson says Troy Aikman's confidence could keep the $50 million quarterback undefeated in playoff starts.

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

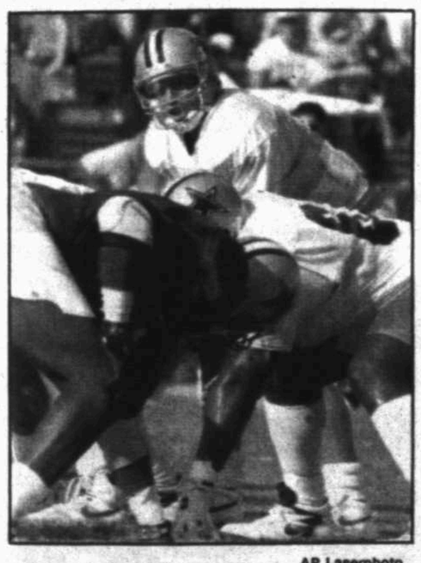

IRVING — The Dallas Cowboys have a cozy comfort zone when Troy Aikman starts a playoff game for them. He's never lost one.

Aikman will take a 4-0 record as a playoff starter into the Cowboys' game against the San Francisco 49ers for the NFC championship Sunday at Texas Stadium.

Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson said Aikman has the confidence of a player "who has accomplished everything that you can accomplish as a quarterback."

"He can go into any game and not have something hanging over his head that he hasn't achieved something that needs to be achieved," Johnson said. "I think it's important that he has that kind of confidence. It's important with any quarterback."

Harding denies fresh allegations

By Steve Wilstein
AP Sports Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. — Tonya Harding whirled around the ice Thursday, smiling, laughing and nailing five triple axels as if unconcerned by fresh allegations that she encouraged and helped plot the attack on Olympic rival Nancy Kerrigan.

A crowd of more than 100 fans, cheering, whistling and shouting "Go Tonya," watched Harding skate brilliantly at a shopping mall rink for an hour while prosecutors from Portland and Detroit met with attorneys for two of the four men arrested in the case.

At the same time, Detroit detectives spoke with the FBI to review its investigation. No federal charges will be filed in the case, FBI spokesman Bart Gori said.

A Multnomah County grand jury, meeting to determine whether to indict Harding along with the four men arrested in the alleged conspiracy, heard testimony from Harding's coach, Diane Rawlinson, private investigator Gary Crowe, minister Eugene Saunders and other witnesses.

No indictments will be issued this week, chief deputy district attorney Norm Frink said.

Three of the four people arrested — bodyguard Shawn Eckardt, alleged hit man Shane Minoaka Stant, and alleged getaway car driver Derrick Smith —

South Plains ices down Chaps

■ Midland College fails to rally from a 24-point second-half deficit; drops to 1-2 in WJCAC play.

By Bill Petitt
Staff Writer

LEVELLAND - On a icy, miserable night in Levelland it only made sense for the Midland College Chaps to be cold.

Midland College, playing its worst half of the season, fell behind by 24 points early in the second half and despite a furious rally that trimmed the lead to five with less than a minute to play, lost a 92-86 decision to South Plains College.

The Chaps fall to 18-2 overall and 1-2 in Western Junior College Athletic Conference play while SPC improved to 14-5 and 2-2 in league action.

"We played about as well as we could in the first half," said South Plains coach Larry Brown. "Last year, Midland came back on us so we knew they were capable of it. They are something like the third leading scoring team in the nation, so we were trying to weather the storm."

Midland did mount a comeback, trimming a 54-30 deficit with 19:14 to play to six, 64-58, with 10:07 to play on an Andre year when they defeated the Cougars last year for the district championship. Lee held Cooper's 6-foot-8, Indiana bound Andrae Patterson to only 12 points.

But House is not as worried about Patterson, who averages 27 points and 14 rebounds a game, as he is the rest of the four Cooper starters.

"They've got more players who have started more games than anybody in the district," House said. "Of course, Patterson has started since he was a freshman, but they have several players who probably have over 200 games of experience between them.

"We can't shut down Patterson, we just don't want him to go crazy," House said. "We're not going to let them bomb us with three's."

Odessa Permian tried to concentrate solely on Patterson, and while the Panthers held him to a season-low 11 points, the Cougars scored seven three-pointers in their victory. Rod Roach finished with four treys and a total of 21 points while Chad Greeson had three and a total of 11 points.

Defensively, the Rebels have sparkled, holding their opponents to a 51-point average for the season.

"We've just got to pick it up a notch offensively," House said.

Midland coach Jack Stephenson just hopes his Bulldogs play at the level they've achieved so far in league play.

"We can't lose if we win," Stephenson said. "I know that's a funny way of saying that, but it's true. But I'm with Jon, the four best teams are playing, but the difference comes in taking care of our business."

A Cooper win and a Midland win would put the Bulldogs in sole possession of second place. A Lee win and a Midland win would force a three-way tie for first place. If Midland loses and Lee wins, Lee and Cooper will be tied while Midland would drop to third.

"We're playing very well right now," Stephenson said.

The Bulldogs have scored a total of 188 points in their last two games and will face another high-scoring machine in the Abilene Eagles.

The Eagles have scored a total 27 treys in the last two games with 6-2 guard Dan Wilson leading the way with 13 of them. Wilson has scored 44 points and 26 points in Abilene's last two games.

In girls action, Midland High (23-3, 7-0) will end its monstrous district home stand with an 8 p.m. game against fourth place Abilene High (10-11, 3-4) at the MHS gym. After tonight, Midland's last four district games will be on the road.

The Lady Bulldogs have already avoided losing to a team which kept them from going undefeated last year on their way to the district title when they defeated San Angelo 71-68 in overtime Tuesday.

MHS was 6-0 when they played the Lady Bobcats last year and fell to Central in San Angelo before losing to Abilene High to cause a three-way tie for first place at the time. A win over Abilene High tonight would assure a second consecutive state playoff berth for the Lady Bulldogs.

Midland Lee's travel schedule will also change drastically after tonight. Seventh-place Lee (7-13, 0-6) will play at sixth-place Abilene Cooper (8-15, 1-6) at 8 p.m. This will be the Lady Rebels last road game and they are hoping their fortunes will change after returning to friendly confines.

Lee opened district play with a loss to Cooper, a team which the Lady Rebels expected to beat. The stunned Lady Rebels then lost their next five games and are dangerously close to being eliminated from the playoffs. If Lee wins their next six district games, it could make the playoffs since third-place Central has a 4-3 league record, but San Angelo would have to lose at least three more games.

COACHING NOTE: House joked that he might have to take a page from the Houston Oilers in dealing with his assistant coach Don Johnson, who recently skipped out of scouting a district team for House to witness the birth of his second daughter. The Oilers docked the pay of defensive lineman David Williams, who missed a game to be with his wife during the birth of his first child.

court, but Sanchez Vicario used her speed to run them all down. Wang often stared in amazement as the Spaniard knocked back what appeared to be sure winners.

"She was so fast," Wang said. "And she's smart. She knows how to play you, and how to beat you."

Sanchez often lunges into the corners of the court to return shots — frequently hitting high defensive lobs to give herself time to get back into position.

Like a center fielder, she roams the court from side to side to run down shots. And even when she's at a disadvantage, she manages to get her racket on the ball.

In the second set, Wang slammed a ball down the middle of the court. As Sanchez Vicario sped from left to right, she shifted her racket from right hand to left, reached behind her and lofted a lob.

"I thought I could not get it with the right hand and so I just hit it with the left," she said. "Even with the left, I won the point."

No. 5 Jana Novotna, No. 8 Manuela Maleeva-Fragniere and No. 9 Mary Pierce also reached the third round Thursday. Pierce lost a first-set tiebreaker to Linda Harvey-Wild before rallying to win the final two sets.

Fourth-seeded man Stefan Edberg won 4-6, 6-2, 6-1, 6-1 against Jan Siemerink, and No. 9 Todd Martin dropped only seven games in a straight-set win over Jonas Bjorkman.

Also advancing Thursday were No. 6 Thomas Muster, No. 12 Alexander Volkov and No. 14 Karel Novacek. Arnaud Boetsch, seeded 16th, withdrew before his second-round match against Alexander Mronz because of sinusitis.

Two players attempting comebacks had mixed results. Mats Wilander, a three-time Australian Open champion, won 6-1, 2-6, 7-5, 6-4 over Frenchman Olivier Delaitre. Tracy Austin, playing in the Australian Open for the first time in 13 years, lost 6-1, 5-7, 6-2 to Sabine Hack of Germany.

The first rain of the tournament forced officials to close the roof on center court for the Sabatini-Medvedeva evening match.

The Australian Open, played on Rebound Ace hard courts, is sponsored by Ford.

AIKMAN: Turner's offense relaxes quarterback

(From 1C)

Johnson said Aikman was a rare player.

"I think a quarterback can win in college who might be lacking in an area or two," Johnson said. "You can overcome their deficiency with some players around him or by being a dominant team.

"I think in professional football all your skills are tested. Do you have the physical skills? Do you have the committment? Do you study it? Do you do all the things that you have to do to be an outstanding quarterback? Troy has them all."

It wasn't long ago that Johnson and Aikman were feuding over differences in philosophy. The arrival of offensive coordinator Norv Turner helped the coach and his quarterback get on the same page.

"Norv relaxed Troy," wide receiver Michael Irvin said. "He was perfect for him."

Running back Emmitt Smith said, "Norv's offense is perfect for me. And it's just right for Troy."

"Getting the ball to the receivers on the run was the kind of offense I needed," Aikman said. "I can't give enough credit to Norv."

Now Aikman and Johnson are friends, with Aikman going over to Johnson's house for advice on raising tropical fish. Aikman recently left in the middle of the week to fly to New York to appear on the David Letterman show. It didn't bother Johnson.

"If Troy wants to go back this week he can go," Johnson said.

Aikman won't be going, but it shows the solid relationship between the coach and his quarterback.

The duel between Aikman and the 49ers' Steve Young should be one of the highlights of the game.

"It could be exciting," Aikman said. "We have a rivalry but we're also good friends. That should make for an intense battle. Steve is the most athletically gifted quarterback in the league."

The Cowboys beat San Francisco 30-20 last year to advance to the Super Bowl and Aikman earned MVP honors in the 52-17 victory over the Buffalo Bills for the league championship.

"I think it raised a lot of people's opinions about me," Aikman said.

Aikman feels Young has had more pressure put on him than he has received.

"I was a first-round draft pick and people had their expectations but at least I didn't have Roger Staubach for a teammate," Aikman said. "It's not like Steve and Joe Montana. Even winning a Super Bowl probably won't silence the critics."

Aikman does feel a little pressure going into Sunday's game.

"Last year nobody expected us to win," he said. "The expectations are a little higher this year. We're expected to win the Super Bowl."

SWOOPES: First team sport star to win award

(From 1C)

basketball title last spring, was chosen The Associated Press' Female Athlete of 1993 one day after Jordan won the Male Athlete award.

The 22-year-old Swoopes edged tennis star Steffi Graf for the honor and was the first female honoree from a team sport in the 63-year history of the AP award.

"Well deserved," Lady Raiders coach Marsha Sharp said. "She's that rare individual with a combination of awesome athletic ability, but I also think great demeanor — confident without being arrogant."

Last spring, basketball fans were hit with the "Swoopes, Rhymes-With-Hoops" fever. Her skills dazzled even her opponents.

"Everyone that I talked to, people after the Final Four, said they had never seen a female athlete play the way I did," Swoopes said.

Swoopes received 26 first-place votes and 180 points. Graf had 177 points, including 20 first-place votes.

A first-place vote was worth five points, second place three points and third place one point.

Tennis player Monica Seles won the award in 1991 and 1992, but was knocked out of 1993's competition when she was stabbed in the back by a spectator at a tournament at Hamburg, Germany, April 30.

Graf, who reclaimed the top ranking in women's tennis after Seles was wounded, won three Grand Slam tournament titles — the U.S. Open, French Open and Wimbledon — last year.

Third in the voting was China's Wang Junxia, who set world records for 3,000 and 10,000 meters. She received 60 points, including five first-place votes.

Swoopes set a record for points in a championship game with 47 as Texas Tech defeated Ohio State 84-82. The previous record was 28.

Her total also bettered the record for a men's final, which is 44 by Bill Walton of UCLA in 1973. And the 177 points she had in five NCAA tournament games topped the previous record by 43.

Still, Swoopes said she was surprised to beat athletes like Graf, who have shined worldwide for years.

"People didn't start talking a lot about Sheryl Swoopes until the Final Four," she said.

But then, did they talk.

Some called the 6-footer a clone of Jordan.

"She's the greatest women's basketball player I've ever seen," said Sharp, who coached Swoopes for two years after she left South Plains Junior College. "She will go down in history as being

Rockets drop fourth straight

Associated Press

DENVER — Reggie Williams and Brian Williams hit baskets in the final minute of the second overtime Thursday night, lifting Denver past the Houston Rockets 111-106 as the Nuggets snapped a four-game losing streak.

Houston, suffering its fourth loss in a row, rebounded from an 18-point first-quarter deficit to draw into a 92-92 tie at the end of regulation.

The Rockets ran off seven straight points early in the first overtime, but Denver countered with a 7-0 run of its own. A tip-in by Dikembe Mutombo with 11.6 seconds left made it 103-103, forcing a second extra session.

After an exchange of turnovers and missed shots early in the second overtime, Mutombo hit a hook shot, and Reggie Williams followed with a layup on a pass from Brian Williams for a 107-103 advantage with 56 seconds left.

After Mario Elie's 3-pointer made it 107-106, Brian Williams put back a missed shot for a 109-106 edge.

■ NBA Roundup

Timberwolves 93, Spurs 83

MINNEAPOLIS — Chris Smith and Thurl Bailey came off the bench to spark a 14-3 second-half run as undermanned Minnesota defeated San Antonio.

Doug West scored 23 points for the Timberwolves, who beat the Spurs for only the third time in 23 games since joining the NBA in 1989-90. Minnesota now has its first three-game home winning streak since 1991.

David Robinson returned to the Spurs' lineup after missing two games with soreness in his right knee and scored 25 points, but he missed 15 of 24 shots as San Antonio shot just 41 percent to Minnesota's 50 percent.

The Timberwolves played without top reserve Chuck Person, who checked into a hospital earlier Thursday with an foot infection. Leading scorer Micheal Williams hurt his ankle with 3:43 left in the third quarter and didn't return, finishing with 12 points and 14 assists.

Hot Duke topples NC State

Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. — Grant Hill scored 19 points as No. 5 Duke avoided a week of top 10 upsets by shooting a season-high 77 percent in the first half en route to a 92-65 victory over North Carolina State on Thursday night.

The win lifted the Blue Devils (12-1, 4-1 into a first-place tie with Virginia in the Atlantic Coast Conference. The Wolfpack (5-9, 1-3) lost to Duke for the seventh straight time.

Of the top eight teams in the country, only the Blue Devils and No. 2 UCLA didn't lose this week. The Bruins played No. 9 Arizona later Thursday night.

Duke made 20 of its first 26 shots from the field and forced the Wolfpack into 11 first-half turnovers in taking a 44-29 halftime lead. The Blue Devils scored 19 of their points off of N.C. State miscues.

No. 6 Massachusetts 76, Rutgers 54

AMHERST, Mass. — Loe Roe and Mike Williams each scored 17 points and Massachusetts used its man-to-man defense to break open its victory over Rutgers.

The Scarlet Knights led by two points early in the second half, but the Minutemen (14-2, 6-0 Atlantic 10) cranked up the defense and in turn their running game.

Waliyy Dixon had 23 points for Rutgers (5-8, 1-3).

No. 11 Temple 68, La Salle 55

PHILADELPHIA — Derrick Battie scored 17 points and Temple held off a late rally to beat La Salle.

It was the first time this season the Owls (10-2) were not led in scoring by Eddie Jones or Aaron McKie, who each finished with 14 points.

The Owls took a 52-37 lead on a layup by Battie with 9:22 remaining, but La Salle (7-8) went on a 12-2 run to close within 54-49 on a 3-pointer by Paul Burke with 5:36 to go.

■ Top 25 Roundup

No. 13 L .svile 83, Tulane 76

NEW ORLEANS — Greg Minor scored 19 points and Dwayne Morton had 12 of his 16 from 3-point range as Louisville went outside to beat Tulane.

Louisville (13-2, 3-1 Metro Conference) finished 8-for-16 on 3-pointers, only making one in the second half.

The Cardinals have scored 80 or more points in 10 games this season. The five starters, who have all scored in double figures in every game this year, continued the streak as Jason Osborne and De-Juan Wheat each had 16 and Clifford Rozier 14. Osborne was 3-for-5 on 3-pointers.

Jerald Honeycutt led Tulane (8-6, 1-3) with 21 points, while Rayshard Allen had 15 and Carlin Hartman 11.

Bad shot selection and poor shooting by Tulane nullified a tough defensive effort that forced 17 turnovers. The Green Wave, who committed just nine turnovers, shot 40 percent for the game, only 30 percent in the first half.

No. 20 Minnesota 63, No. 15 Michigan 58

MINNEAPOLIS — Townsend Orr got a crucial steal and scored four of his 12 points in the final five minutes, leading Minnesota to a victory over Michigan, which played without two of its Fab Four.

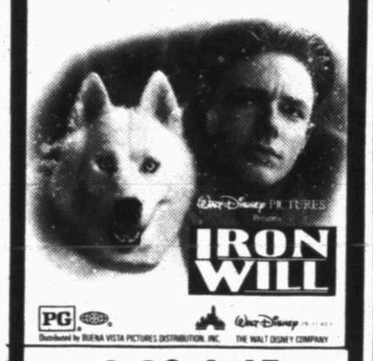

The Wolverines (11-4 overall, 3-2 Big Ten) lost center Juwan Howard and swingman Jimmy King to chicken pox. They were held to just 37.5 percent shooting, their lowest of the season, en route to losing their second consecutive conference game.

Minnesota (12-4, 3-1), meanwhile, rebounded from an embarrassing loss Saturday at Penn State.

'93 housing starts hit 4-year high

■ Economist cites low mortgage rates, better employment gains and improved consumer confidence.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Builders broke ground in 1993 on the largest number of homes in four years, and analysts see continued improvement this year.

"Low mortgage rates, better employment gains and improved consumer confidence have served to boost single-family housing starts in the second half of 1993," said economist John E. Silvia of Kemper Financial Services in Chicago. "These same factors should sustain housing starts in the first half of 1994."

Housing starts jumped 7.1 percent last year to 1.29 million, up from 1.20 million in 1992, the Commerce Department said Thursday. It was the second straight advance and lifted construction to the highest level since 1.38 million new single-family homes and apartments were built in 1989.

Activity improved in every region but the Northeast, where it slipped slightly.

In other economic reports Thursday:

■ The Labor Department said first-time claims for unemployment insurance jumped by 23,000 last week to a seasonally adjusted 380,000. This was the highest level since July 24, 1993, when 395,000 people filed initial applications.

Some analysts said the unexpected increase could be a sign of sluggishness returning to the labor market. But economists at Merrill Lynch and Co. said the increase may have been weather-related, noting that other economic indicators have been showing strength.

■ The Commerce Department said personal income grew 0.7 percent nationally in the third quarter, advancing in all but 11 states.

Ten of the 11 states where income declined were located in the nation's interior, where flooding destroyed crops last year and government cuts in farm subsidies further crimped income. The 11th, Vermont, was hurt by declining payrolls in big-ticket durable manufacturing and in construction.

Home building activity ended the year on a strong note, shooting up 6.2 percent in December to a seasonally adjusted 1.54 million annual rate. This was the highest since a 1.55 million rate in January 1990, and the fifth straight increase.

But the Merrill Lynch economists suggested severe winter weather in much of the Midwest and East this month and the Los Angeles earthquake probably would curb construction early in the year.

Once rebuilding begins in Los Angeles and the frigid winter weather lifts, housing starts should pick up again, they said.

Prices retreat

NEW YORK — It was bitter cold accross much of the East on Thursday, but heating oil traders had their minds set on the warming trend expected next week.

Home heating oil futures dropped 2.12 cents per gallon to 47.96 cents on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Natural gas prices for next-month delivery were slightly lower, but many market watchers attributed the drop to Monday's deadline for trading February gas contracts on the Nymex.

February gas finished off 0.2 cent at $2.250 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Crude oil prices also came under contract-expiration influences, analysts said. West Texas Intermediate for delivery in February settled at $15.10 per barrel, down 12 cents at the New York Mercantile Exchange. The March contract, which will represent the near-month contract on Friday, finished at $14.96, down 25 cents.

Dollar falls

NEW YORK — The dollar fell against most currencies Thursday as the German central bank said it wouldn't ease monetary policy and U.S. authorities issued a mixed batch of reports on the economy.

Gold prices fell in New York and rose in Europe. On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold for current delivery closed at $387.50 a troy ounce, off $4.80 from Wednesday.

In New York, the dollar finished at 111.36 yen, up from 111.30 yen on Wednesday.

Other dollar rates in New York compared with late Wednesday: 1.7380 German marks, down from 1.7463; 1.4550 Swiss francs, down from 1.4620; 5.9125 French francs, down from 5.9340; 1,696.00 Italian lire, down from 1,700.00; and 1.3118 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3113.

In New York, the British pound finished at $1.4970, more expensive than $1.4925 on Wednesday.

On the New York Comex, silver for current delivery closed at $5.254 a troy ounce, off 7.2 cents from Wednesday.

Stocks gain

NEW YORK — Stocks finished ahead in a busy session Thursday after late buying boosted the Dow Jones industrial average and other market performance gauges to record levels.

The Dow industrials advanced 7.59 past the previous high reached Wednesday to 3,891.96.

Several other indicators also set new marks. The New York Stock Exchange composite moved 0.28 beyond Wednesday's closing record to 263.23. The American Stock Exchange market value index edged up 0.15 to 484.81, beating the old record of 484.28 that stood since Nov. 2.

Wildcatters' reception honors Dallas' Placid Oil

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

Formed in the late 1920s by famed wildcatter H.L. Hunt, Placid Oil Co. of Dallas has had its ups and downs in recent years, but following a bankruptcy in the mid-1980s, it is running and doing a fair share of its business in the Permian Basin.

Placid executives were in Midland Thursday, where they were honored at a Wildcatters Reception at the Petroleum Club.

"We're now in a turnaround mode, and we are looking to rebuild with an aggressive exploration program," said Jerry Wright, president and chief executive officer.

Wright said that since coming out of bankruptcy in 1989, Placid has devoted about two-thirds of its budget to halting production declines and one-third to high-growth exploration programs.

With adequate funding created by cash flow from production in Texas, Louisiana, Canada and the North Sea, Wright said the company is heavily involved in 3-D shoots in the Permian Basin and will be involved in drilling on shoots that already have been evaluated.

Mike Grimm, vice president for exploration, said Placid is involved in 3-D shoots in Hockley, Ector, Dawson and Yoakum counties and on the Eastern Shelf.

Grimm said the company has little production in the Permian Basin, but hopes to have more once it begins to fully develop 3-D prospects.

Wright said the company has tried to acquire production in the basin but found it too expensive. It was the lure of 3-D that caused the company to open a six-person office in Midland in 1991.

"I think we can drill for oil cheaper than we can buy it," Wright said.

The company is so high on 3-D as an exploration tool that it is involved in 20 major shoots.

"It is an excellent industry tool," said Wright, a petroleum engineer, who has been with Placid for a little over a year.

"It will help us harvest another crop of oil from old fields, by letting us look for smaller prospects and delineate dry holes to improve our success rates."

The company also is looking to capitalize upon some earlier 3-D shoots that can be re-worked with new science and thinking to find new prospects.

While Placid has not yet "pulled the trigger" on any deep seismic ventures in the Delaware Basin, Wright said the company is looking in that direction.

"The problem with deep gas basins, is that the deeper the target, the larger the grid must be and the higher the cost," Wright said.

Placid, however, is well-capitalized for its ventures. From its beginnings as a trust set up for the six children of H.L. Hunt, the company is now a trust only for Lamar, Bunker and Herbert Hunt, and has grown extensively over the years through exploration and acquisition. Today, the company has revenues of half a billion dollars and 600 employees.

Roughly 60 percent of its revenues come from the Dutch North Sea, with the rest coming from North American production and a 50,000-barrel refinery in Baton Rouge, La.

Fed governor sees modest growth in '94

HOUSTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Governor John LaWare said Thursday he expects modest economic growth and a decrease in inflation in 1994.

LaWare said barring any big surprises, the real gross domestic product should increase at a rate of 3 percent to 3.5 percent for 1994. He also expects inflation to edge down to 2.5 percent.

"I think it is safe to conclude the economy will continue a pattern of modest non-inflationary growth in 1994," LaWare told the Rotary Club of Houston.

LaWare said potential negatives for the economy include higher taxes, financing for the proposed health care plan, cuts in defense spending and consumer anxiety over job losses resulting from corporate downsizing.

"These are real concerns, but at this stage of the game they are very hard to quantify," he said, referring to taxes and health care financing.

Positive factors include very high housing starts and strong new orders for manufactured goods, he said.

"Indicators of consumer sentiment are also suggesting that consumers will support further growth in the economy. Retail sales came through the Christmas season looking pretty good and are continuing to look well," LaWare added.

Low inflation and interest rates contributed to the nation's economic growth in 1993, he said.

Wal-Mart plans 255 to 275 new stores

BENTONVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Wal-Mart Stores Inc., the nation's largest retailer, said Thursday that it plans to open, expand or relocate 255 to 275 discount stores and supercenters in 1994.

As of the Jan. 31 end of its fiscal year, Wal-Mart said, the company will operate 2,022 stores and supercenters, including 142 opened during the past year. Another 130 stores were expanded or relocated.

The company also said in a news release that it plans to open another 20 to 25 new Sam's Clubs stores in 1994, adding to the 419 already open.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Figuring fund share basis can be complicated

By Bill Doyle

Q: I purchased shares of a mutual fund 42 years ago, electing to reinvest all dividends and capital gains distributions. Over the years, I have reinvested dividends 167 times and capital gains 42 times, each in a different amount and at a different per-share cost.

Doyle

Every year, I have reported the dividends and capital gains on my income tax return and paid the tax thereon.

The time has come when I need to redeem shares. How do I calculate the "basis" — cost for tax purposes — of my shares?

A: That's relatively easy, if you redeem all your fund shares. In that case, you add up the amount you originally invested and all your reinvested dividends and capital gains distributions. The total is the basis on all your shares.

The difference between that basis and the larger amount of money you receive when you redeem your shares will be your profit, which will be taxable as a capital gain.

Profit on the redemption or sale of mutual fund shares or any other capital asset owned owned for one year or less is a short-term capital gain and is taxable at the same rate as ordinary income. That tax bite can be either 15, 28, 31, 36 or 39.6 percent.

Profit on the sale of capital assets owned more than one year is a long-term capital gain. It is taxable at 15 percent if you are in the 15 percent federal tax bracket or at 28 percent if you are in a 28 percent or higher bracket.

Your profit on the redemption of shares acquired through reinvestment within the past year will be a short-term capital gain. Your profit on all your other shares will be long term.

Things get much more complicated when you redeem only some of your shares. In that case, you can use either of two methods to determine your basis — "average cost" or "specific identification.'

The latter is also called "identified share." Using it, you decide which particular shares you want to unload and instruct the fund to redeem those shares. Your basis is the price you paid for those shares, either in your original investment or through reinvestment.

The average cost method determines the average per share basis by dividing the total basis by the number of shares owned. But hang on; there are two variations — "double category" and "single category.'

With the double category method, you divide your shares into two groups — those owned for more than one year, on which the profit will be taxable as a long-term capital gain, and those owned for one year or less, on which the profit will be taxable as a short-term capital gain. Then, you figure your average cost per share basis for each group.

With the single category method, you divide your total basis by the number of shares in the account to arrive at your average per share basis. The share you redeem are considered to be those you have held the longest. That usually results in the profit being a long-term capital gain.

Q: Being retired and needing income, I have started redeeming some of my mutual fund shares every month. Meanwhile, I am continuing to reinvest my dividends and capital gains distributions to buy additional shares.

If I use the average cost method of determining the basis of the fund shares I redeem, won't this mean my average basis will have to be recalculated after every reinvestment?

A: Yes. Each reinvestment will increase your total basis and change your average basis.

Q: My tax preparer says the average cost method of figuring the basis of shares sold can't be used in connection with the dividend reinvestment plans I have with a number of common stocks. Why not?

A: Because the Internal Revenue Service has approved the average cost method only for use in mutual fund reinvestment plans — not in corporate dividend reinvestment plans.

CHAPS: Shooting frigid

(From 1C)

Owens layup.

Midland could draw no closer until a Kirk Ford layup with 16 seconds to play.

"The first five minutes of the game dictated how we play the rest of the first half," said Midland coach Steve Green. "When we didn't hit anything on our first two trips down the floor I thought 'Oh God.' We missed some early shots and got frustrated. It's hard when you spot a good team a 20-point lead."

The Chaps looked like they were skating on ice in the first half. Midland committed 17 first half turnovers and hit just 36.7 percent from the field as the Texans never trailed in the half and built a 50-30 halftime lead.

Anthony Pope, who led South Plains with 24 points, scored 17 points in the opening half. He connected on three 3-pointers and backup center Fred Lillie came off the bench to score nine points. Green, expecting SPC to mix up zone defenses, started guard Tellas Lampley instead of John Brown, but the Chaps could not penetrate the Texans defense.

Kevin Rice, who is averaging 10.8 points per game, scored eight in the first half to keep the Chaps within striking distance.

Midland College returns to action Monday against New Mexico Military Institute at Chaparral Center. Gametime is 7:30 p.m.

CHAP NOTES: Scouts from Texas Tech, Louisiana Tech, Tulane, and Florida were in attendance... the 30 points in the first half was a season-low for Midland College.

HARDING: USFSA backs off decision are negotiating with prosecutors about plea bargains in exchange for their cooperation, a source close to the case told The Associated Press.

(From 1C)

Jeff Gillooly, Harding's ex-husband, wasn't trying to cut a deal by testifying against her, the source said.

Prosecutors and police from Detroit returned home after completing their meetings with the FBI and Portland investigators. Asked whether anything pointed to Harding's involvement, Wayne County prosecutor John O'Hair said: "It would be terribly unfair to make any premature judgments on that."

In Colorado Springs, Colo., the U.S. Figure Skating Association backed off plans to vote on whether to keep Harding on the team.

The Amateur Sports Act of 1978, the federal law governing the USOC and its member federations, states that any sports body trying to oust a team member must "provide for notice and an opportunity for a hearing before declaring such individual ineligible to participate."

"We are trying to double-check all our actions in terms of the act," said Kristin Matta, a USFSA spokeswoman.

"The vote is not a done deal," she said. "A vote is not set, a vote is not scheduled."

Harding held her first public workout since winning the U.S. Figure Skating Championships on Jan. 8.

"I felt better today than I have in a few days. I'm sleeping better," she said. She insisted she has no intention of quitting the Olympic team, though the investigation and tension are hurting her preparation "a lot" for the Winter Games in Norway next month.

"My skating is my life," she said. "I go out there, and it's an out for me. I love it. That's the only time I'm getting any enjoyment right now. I have bad days where I can't think and concentrate. I hope it can get back to normal soon. I went out there and I landed every single one of my jumps."

In Stoneham, Mass., Kerrigan skated for more than an hour Thursday.

"I'm in very good shape mostly because he had such bad aim," Kerrigan said on Thursday night's "Eye to Eye with Connie Chung" on CBS.

Harding refused to respond to the latest allegations made by her bodyguard, Eckardt, whose testimony to authorities provided the basis for the warrant and arrest of Gillooly.

Eckardt, whose credibility has been assailed by numerous acquaintances, claimed in an interview published Thursday that an impatient Harding complained about the delay in disabling Kerrigan days before the Jan. 6 assault in Detroit.

"You know, you need to stop screwing around with this and get it done," Harding told Eckardt, according to the interview in The Oregonian newspaper.

Eckardt also told the newspaper in a three-hour session that Gillooly offered a $10,000 U.S. Figure Skating Association check as a bonus if the attack on Kerrigan was carried out immediately.

Harding spoke about the plot in a conversation with Eckardt at her practice rink near Portland while alleged hit man Shane Minoaka Stant was in Massachusetts trying to find an opportunity to attack Kerrigan at a rink near Boston, the newspaper said.

Eckardt suggested she call Stant, but Harding replied, "No, I want you to do it," the bodyguard was quoted as saying.

According to Eckardt, who has confessed to his role in the alleged plot, Gillooly showed him a $10,000 check from the USFSA and said, "Tell these guys I'll give them a $10,000 bonus if they'll get it done," the Oregonian reported.

Eckardt's new allegations expanded on statements in an affidavit, filed by a sheriff's deputy, that led to Gillooly's arrest. They further implicated her in the conspiracy, and may have jeopardized her spot on the U.S. Olympic team. According to the affidavit, Harding tried to help Stant by finding out Kerrigan's practice schedule in Massachusetts.

Harding denied Eckardt's statements in the affidavit, noting that none of the comments were directly attributed to her. On Thursday her attorney, Robert C. Weaver, said she also denied Eckardt's allegations in the Oregonian interview.

"It's nothing we haven't heard before," Weaver said. "I have known of that. He's said the same thing to (authorities). But Tonya denies everything he's said. I think they're just following up on a bunch of questions," Weaver said.

Weaver said he had no indication whether Harding would be charged or cleared by authorities.

There were records in the affidavit of phone calls from Harding's house to Kerrigan's practice arena, a trail of money from Portland to Phoenix to Boston and Detroit, and allegations of concocted alibis.

Eckardt told the deputy that Harding made the calls so Stant could attack Kerrigan before she left for the Olympic trials in Detroit. Stant allegedly stalked Kerrigan in Massachusetts, but didn't get the chance to carry out the assault until he got to Detroit.

Stant was released Thursday after a family friend posted 10 percent of $20,000 bail.

Sarah Bergman, a classmate of Eckardt in a paralegal course, said his claims about Harding's involvement were consistent with the stories he told her before the attack.

"She has collected bits and pieces of conversation and phrases she's heard Eckardt use," said Jerry Spires, a private investigator working with Bergman. "She was confident that Tonya knew. But I don't think she met Tonya directly.

"Shawn Eckardt will tell you the truth, and then he'll lie to you. I know Shawn Eckardt, and I can tell when he's telling the truth. Now he's telling the truth."

Asked how he could tell Eckardt was telling the truth, Spires said: "How do you explain a gut feeling? It's just intuition. I know it won't stand up in court, but I know he's telling the truth."

Plaintiff,
PUBLICATION SUMMONS
Money Judgment: 30301
Case No. 93CV016429

vs.

Guy L. Birdwell and Valerie A. Birdwell
d/b/a Contract Educational Services
5101 North A Street
Midland, TX 79705
Defendants.

THE STATE OF WISCONSIN

To each party named above as a defendant:

You are hereby notified that the plaintiff named above has filed a lawsuit or other legal action against you. The complaint, which is also served on you, states the nature and basis of the legal action.

Within 40 days after January 18, 1994, you must respond with a written answer, as that term is used in Chapter 802 of the Wisconsin Statutes, to the Complaint. The Court may reject or disregard an answer that does not follow the requirements of the statutes. The answer must be sent or delivered to the Court whose address is 901 North 9th Street, Milwaukee, WI 53233 and to the undersigned attorney. You may have an attorney help or represent you.

If you do not provide a proper answer within forty (40) days, the court may grant judgment against you for the award of money or other legal action requested in the complaint and you may lose you right to object to anything that is or may be incorrect in the Complaint. A judgment may be enforced as provided by law. A judgment awarding money may become a lien against any real estate you own now or in the future, and may also be enforced by garnishment or seizure of property.

Dated: January 7, 1994.

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has an opening on one of its few "special allowance" routes. This larger route receives a $50 check each Friday, in addition to the regular monthly route profits. The route is in the

Midland Freshman Area

As with all newspaper distributorships this opportunity requires a 7 day a week commitment (when you go out of town you must arrange a substitute for yourself) and it is early morning work.
Newspaper distributorships provide great supplemental income for housewives/mothers, senior citizens, college students or any other adult wanting to "moonlight".

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:

★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you do not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekened mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family members, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?

An initial $100 refundable deposit is required.
