DPS Warns Be Careful When Traveling

By The Texas Department of Safety Region 5

A time to be thankful is once again upon us. It seems that during the Thanksgiving period, most people are trying to get home to their loved ones. This is a time when families reunite and gather together for big turkey dinners and a period of time when we give thanks for being able to get together and enjoy ourselves. This also brings on an increase of traffic on our streets and highways. We, the Texas Department of Public Safety, urge everyone to use extreme care this year, so that we can live to have another Thanksgiving.

It is true that many Texas citizens will become a statistic during this holiday period and that many planned gatherings will be ruined by these tragedies. Let us keep in mind, as we plan our trips and gatherings, this year to plan ahead and give ourselves plenty of travel time and plenty of rest stops. We must remember to be a defensive driver and to watch out for the other person at all times.

Remember, no matter how good of a driver we may be that we cannot control the person that we are meeting. We have no guarantee that that person has not dropped a cigarette, had a cardiac arrest, tanked up on booze or hopped up on pills. Let's drive as if each driver will always do the unexpected and in

Mark your calendars now and plan to be in Muleshoe Friday and Saturday, December 3 and 4.

Getting the holiday season off to a good start will be the Fifteenth Annual Moonlight Arts and Crafts Bazaar, on Friday and Saturday. The bazaar will begin at 11 a.m. and continue until 7 p.m. on Friday. Saturday's hours will be from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Some booth space is still available and you may reserve your booth space by calling Linda Huckaby at 272-3463.

The Jennyslippers will be serving their annual Barbecue Lunch on Friday. Barbecue, beans, cole slaw, cornbread and fruit will be served from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Delivery may be arranged. Everyone is encouraged to go out and support the Jennyslippers.

This is the Jennyslippers big money making project of the year. All money earned by the Jennyslippers goes right back into the community.

The Jennyslippers will also have a concession stand on Saturday, during the bazaar.

You may purchase your ticket from any Jennyslipper.

The MAC Committee will also hold a drawing for 25 Christmas turkeys at the bazaar on December 4.

At 6:30 p.m. Saturday, December 4 electrical excitement will begin with a parade down Main Street. The parade will be a little different this year. It is not only going to be an early evening parade, it will be Muleshoe's first parade with lights, all floats lit up.

Anyone entering a float in this parade is asked to have all units lit up, the more lights the better. This can be accomplished with the use of portable generators or batteries. Put your thinking cap on and help your club or organization build a lighted float for this unusual parade.

The theme for this year's Christmas parade is "Twas the Night Before Christmas."

There will be judges on Main Street to determine the winners of the following prizes:

First Place: for the Best Use of Lights---$100.00 from Muleshoe State Bank; Second Place: for the Best Use of Lights---$50.00 from Bratcher Motor Supply.

First Prize for the Best Representation of Theme---$100.00 from First Bank; Second Prize for the Best Representation of Theme---$50.00 from Bank of America.

Entries should be into the chamber office before December 1.

You may round out your day by doing some early Christmas shopping at the Moonlight Madness Sales, held at various businesses. These businesses will stay open late, making it possible for you to attend any or all of the day's events and still get your Christmas Shopping done.

The first Moonlight Madness sale will be on November 26, watch for the advertised sales. Moonlight Madness sales will also be held on December 10 and 18.

Basketball Tickets Go On Sale

Great American Smokeout, 24 Hours Without Cigarette

The Great American Smokeout, a day set aside by the American Cancer Society, is held each year on the third Thursday of November. This year's date will be Thursday, November 18.

This is a good natured effort to encourage smokers to give up cigarettes for 24 hours, if only to prove to themselves that they can. They might quit for good.

Thousands of other groups and organizations join the American Cancer Society in sponsoring this nationwide event. Events take place anywhere you find smokers and those who care about helping them to quit.

Activities include rallies, contests, races, jazz funerals for cigarettes, children's poster contests, ashtray throws, cold turkey lunches--any lighthearted activity designed to keep smokers away from cigarettes.

Nonsmokers can join in the fun by adopting family members, friends, and co-workers who smoke and encouraging them to quit. Nonsmokers can show support by making an extra effort to keep close contact by phone or in person; being a calm, smiling, reassuring influence; continually offering praise and encouragement; helping the quitter keep a good sense of humor; and agreeing to give up something they love, such as chocolate, coffee, soft drinks, or soap operas, for the day.

The term Smokeout was coined by Arthur P. Mullaney in 1971. He created an event that asked people in Randolph, Massachusetts, to give up cigarettes for a day and donate the money to a high school scholarship fund.

Later, Lynn R. Smith, editor of the Monticello Times in Minnesota, spearheaded the state's first D-Day, or Don't Smoke Day.

It spread like wildfire throughout Minnesota and then blazed west to California, where it was renamed the Great American Smokeout. Now in its 17th year as an annual nationwide celebration, the Great American Smokeout is better than ever.

Above all, it's the smoker's day. The American Cancer Society's Great American Smokeout focuses attention on those who are trying to lighten up instead of lighting up.

Technological advances are forcing us to take a closer look at where our children will be working and what skills will be necessary in order for them to be successful. Some schools on the South Plains have taken the steps to begin Tech Prep programs in their schools in order to provide skills training in high-demand areas, such as allied health and computing.

What parents need to know is greater than it has ever been as they help their children make choices that can not wait until they have graduated from high school.

A town meeting for parents is being held November 16 at 7 p.m. for parents to learn more about the Tech Prep initiative.

Part of the program will include students, parents, business representatives, counselors, teachers and administrators presenting their views of the Tech Prep program.

Smyer Drops Lazbuddie In District Playoffs

In a long hard fought battle, the Lazbuddie Longhorns lost out on the district title Friday night when they played Smyer. Smyer came out victorious with a 53-44 win.

The Smyer Bobcats put the first scores on the board when they kicked a 25 yard field goal.

Jon Colby Miller scored the first touchdown on a three yard run. The kick failed.

Smyer came back with a five yard run touchdown and the kick failed.

At the end of the first quarter, Smyer led on the scoreboard 10 to 6.

Smyer came back and scored three touchdowns in the third quarter and Lazbuddie scored one, giving the Smyer Bobcats a 28 to 12 lead on the scoreboard.

In the third quarter, the Lazbuddie Longhorns scored two touchdowns and the Smyer Bobcats scored one. At the end of the third quarter Smyer led on the scoreboard 46 to 34.

A fourth quarter rally brought hope to the Lazbuddie fans and put the Lazbuddie Longhorns to within two points of the lead, but the Bobcats bounced back with another touchdown and emerged with the win.

Smyer quarterback Courtney Mosely threw three touchdown passes, rushed for another and returned a fumble for a touchdown. Two of Mosely's scoring passes were to Kevin Mosely and one was to Mark Ramirez.

Lazbuddie came back from a 38-18 deficit with a touchdown pass from Brett Thomas to Jonas Hernandez and a 15-yard touchdown run by Jon Colby Miller in the third quarter. Smyer scored eight points on the touchdown pass from Mosely to Ramirez and a two-point conversion kick, but the lead was cut to 46-32 at the end of the third quarter.

Lazbuddie added a 24-yard scoring run by Miller in the fourth quarter and a five-yard touchdown run by Hernandez, but both conversion attempts failed, and the score stood at Smyer 46-Lazbuddie 44.

Public Perception Of And Attitudes Toward Alzheimer's Disease

Public Perceptions Of And Attitudes Toward Alzheimer's Disease

In September of 1993, Kaagan Research Associates, Inc., a New York-based survey research firm, designed and executed a national projectable survey of 1008 adult Americans to determine their awareness, attitudes and opinions on the topic of Alzheimer's disease. The study was sponsored by the American Health Assistance Foundation (AHAF).

Nearly all adult Americans (97%) have heard of Alzheimer's disease, and two in three respondents (64%) say they have recently read or heard some type of information about the illness (with references to new drugs and/or medications to treat the disease the most common). Forty-six percent of respondents who have recently read or heard something about the disease cited television news or programs as the source, while 31% mentioned newspaper articles.

However while awareness of the disease is quite widespread, familiarity with Alzheimer's disease (defined as causes, symptoms, prevention and/or treatments) lags in comparison. Just 15% of the American public say they are "very familiar with Alzheimer's disease, while 46% claim they are "somewhat familiar". In contrast, considerably larger numbers of respondents say they are "very familiar" with cancer (53%), AIDS (44%), heart disease (38%) and diabetes (38%).

A majority (55%) of survey participants say they personally know someone who has or had Alzheimer's disease, with the figure for respondents over 45 years of age rising to 64%.

The relationship most commonly acknowledged is 'a friend' with the disease, mentioned by 42% of respondents who personally know someone affected, followed by a 'grandparent', cited by 15% of survey respondents.

Survey respondents show only limited concern that they themselves may develop Alzheimer's at some point during their lifetimes. Only 12% of the survey population say they are "very concerned" about this prospect, with an additional 26% "somewhat" concerned. Women, however, are considerably more likely than men to be at least "somewhat concerned" about developing Alzheimer's during their lifetimes (44% versus 31%).

Respondents, however, show higher levels of concern when the scope of the question about developing Alzheimer's is broadened. A majority (63%) of those surveyed say are at least "somewhat concerned" that a loved one or family member might develop the disease in the future, with respondents over 60 years of age showing the highest level of concern.

Respondents who said they were concerned about this possibility were asked who in fact they were thinking of--"mother" was mentioned most often, volunteered by 39% of concerned respondents, followed by 'father' (22%) and 'spouse' (11%).

In addition, for each person mentioned, respondents were asked the likelihood that they themselves would be the primary caregiver if Alzheimer's were to strike someone they were concerned about. With respect to assuming a caregiver role for a parent, there is a substantial gender gap, which parallels caregiver status and numbers in the real world. Only 41% of men say they would be "very likely" to be the primary caregiver in the event that their mothers were afflicted with Alzheimer's, and 38% said they would be the primary caregivers to their fathers, compared to 59% of women who said they would assume that role for their mothers, and 54% who said it would be "very likely" that they would be the primary caregiver for their fathers. When the person in question is a spouse, however, more than 80% of both men and women say it is "very likely" that they would be the primary caregiver for their spouse.

Even when given the adult population of the United States, and then the number of Americans who are 65 years of age or older, the vast majority of the general public cannot make an estimate of how many of their fellow citizens are currently afflicted with Alzheimer's-a full 83% said they could not hazard a guess of that number. Of the 17% who said they could provide an estimate of the affected U.S. population, just 14% were within one million of the generally accepted figure of four million Americans affected. Put another way, just 2% of the entire survey population gave a figure close enough to be considered a "correct" answer.

Americans do know, however, that Alzheimer's disease receives fewer federal research funds than diseases like cancer or AIDS, (84% of respondents surveyed say that this in fact is the case.) In addition, 61% of the public say that it is "very important" that our country increase its funding for research to find treatments and a cure for Alzheimer's disease.

The public appears to be well-informed regarding some basic facts about Alzheimer's disease, such as the disease does not exclusively strike people over 60, that there currently aren't any effective treatments, that in some cases the disease can be inherited, and that once stricken, there is no possibility of an Alzheimer's "remission".

However, in the fact-based section of the survey, Americans appear to some extent to be underestimating the severity of Alzheimer's disease, as well as its occurrence in some of the most vulnerable populations. A majority (54%) of the survey population agreed with the false statement: "Loss of memory and mental function, commonly known as senility, is a normal part of aging."

The public also generally underestimates the percentage of Alzheimer's patients living at home, rather than in hospitals, nursing homes or other facilities. Nearly 2 in 3 (65%) of survey participants said either "ten" or "thirty" or "fifty" percent of Alzheimer's patients live at home. Just 19% of the survey population chose the correct figure, "seventy percent."

In addition, survey participants take perhaps too benign a view of Alzheimer's disease as a potential killer. Ten percent of respondents said that Alzheimer's is never fatal, while a plurality 38% answered that the disease is only "sometimes" fatal. Seventeen percent said Alzheimer's is often fatal, while just a little over 1 in 4 (26%) answered correctly, that the disease always leads to death.

But perhaps the general public shows the greatest difference between perception and reality when asked to determine the occurrence of Alzheimer's disease in the rapidly- growing segment of the nation's population that is 85 years of age or older. When given four choices of rates for incidence of Alzheimer's in this age category, 32% of respondents chose 1 in 5 people affected, 32% picked 1 in 10, and 23% opted for 1 in 20 affected. Only 5% of the survey population chose the largest (and most disturbing) figure of 1 in 2 people 85 and older currently afflicted with the disease.

Program On New MS Drug, Nov. 19-20

The new drug for multiple sclerosis, beta interferon, will be the focus of the Annual meeting of the Panhandle Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, to be held on Friday, November 19, 1993 at the Amarillo Garden Center, Streit Drive, located at the Harrington Regional Medical Center. The reception will begin at 6:30 p.m. followed by dinner catered by the Olive Garden. The program will begin at 7:45 p.m.

The speaker will be Christopher Bever, MD, of Baltimore, Maryland, one of the principal investigators of the new drug and other promising drugs for multiple sclerosis. Dr. Bever is a Professor, Neurology Department, University of Maryland Medical School, and a member of the University of Maryland MS Center/Baltimore VA Medical Center Task Force on Rehabilitation and MS and is the recipient of grants from the National MS Society. Dr. Bever has been sponsored by the Clay Dine Education Fund at High Plains Baptist Hospital.

On Saturday, November 20, the Panhandle Chapter will hold its annual educational program for physicians, allied health personnel, people with MS and family members or other caregivers. Amarillo College, Department of Continuing Healthcare Education, has approved the course for 10 contact hours for nurses, physical therapists and PT aides. The program has also been submitted to TSHA for credits. Lunch will be catered by the Olive Garden.

The exciting new drug for MS, Betaseron, is the first drug in over 25 years which actually alters the course of the disease of the central nervous system which affects a third of a million people in the United States and causes the immune system to malfunction. Vision, stamina, ability to walk, bladder and bowel control, and other bodily functions controlled by the brain, spinal cord and optic nerve are affected. As yet, there is no cure for MS and the cause is still unknown. This new drug will be distributed to some people living in the Texas and Oklahoma panhandles beginning later this month. Widescale distribution will be available to hundreds of thousands of people with MS by 1996.

Dr. Bever is the principal investigator of another promising drug for MS, 4 diaminophyridine (4AP). This drug has been shown effective in improving the speed of the messages along the nerves, a serious problem for people with MS. In a small study, 4AP markedly improved vision, stamina and eye movement and is now being tested on a larger scale.

1994 Irrigation Conference Targets Audience From Great Plains States

Producers and dealers from as far away as Minnesota and North Dakota are being invited to attend the 1994 Irrigation Conference hosted by the Texas Agricultural Irrigation Association scheduled Jan. 10 and 11 in Amarillo's Civic Center.

The intensive 2 day summit co-sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service will offer educational and thought-provoking workshops qualifying participants for continuing education credits (CEU's) throughout the program.

A general session on the 1992 energy regulations and how the new rules will affect irrigation leads off the opening program, Monday, January 10. Concurrent programs in agribusiness marketing strategies and chemigation complete the morning program.

Bob Givens, popular KGNC Radio farm show broadcaster, opens his noonday ag program microphone to a panel of industry and agribusiness experts for a discussion of critical issues impacting irrigated agriculture.

Dealers and producers reconvene Monday afternoon for sessions on topics ranging from workers compensation, EEOC guidelines to a final wrap-up program on chemigation.

Texas Agricultural Irrigation Association's annual membership meeting will begin at 4:00 p.m. with events slated throughout Monday evening. Cowboy poet and humorist, Buck Ramsey, is the banquet program headliner.

Tuesday, Jan. 11 highlights a program on agricultural commodities with morning sessions devoted to peanuts, corn, and sugar beets. In the afternoon, the focus shifts to cotton, wheat and grain sorghum production.

A large trade show, featuring national and local vendors, will offer new innovations in equipment and service and is slated to run during both days of the convention.

How Nutrition Affects An Often Fatal Disease

What do leg muscles, 21st century imaging techniques, and patients with an often fatal lung disorder have in common?

They are all components in a study to examine the effects of nutrition on muscle function in people with cystic fibrosis. People with this disease frequently are undernourished due to abnormal digestion and increased energy needs by the body.

"People with cystic fibrosis need all the energy they can get," said Dr. Barbara Reid, an assistant professor of pediatrics at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston. "They are constantly fighting off infections and the more 'well' they are nutritionally, the better they can withstand these onslaughts."

Reid, a pediatric gastroenterologist, is studying how muscles use energy through a non-invasive technique known as magnetic resonance spectroscopy. using the powerful magnet of a magnetic resonance imager (MRI), she and colleague Dr. Dick Herrick, a physicist, hope to determine if muscles in people with cystic fibrosis use the energy from food differently than healthy people.

The question for Reid is how and when should the diets of cystic fibrosis patients be altered to increase the amount of energy they derive from food?

"About 85 percent of cystic fibrosis patients do not have adequate pancreatic enzymes, which affects how they digest food. Half of what they eat may not be digested," she said. "Right now, they are put on a high-calorie diet and given pancreatic enzyme supplements, but this treatment may not completely solve the nutrition problem Are their cells using energy inefficiently? We don't know."

Reid is examining how leg muscles process energy from food, by measuring levels of creatin phosphate, a high-energy-containing compound she refers to as the "gasoline" of the body. The leg is exercised while in the MRI, which measures the levels of the compound through bombarding the leg with harmless radio signals.

"The radio frequency is absorbed differently depending on what element you're looking for," she said. "So we get a specific 'picture' or data reading for levels of creatine phosphate."

Such understandings of energy metabolism are important since cystic fibrosis patients with both insufficient pancreatic enzymes and nutritional problems have a poorer prognosis in terms of lung problems, normal growth, and long-term survival.

Cystic fibrosis is the most common genetic disease among whites in North America. About 1 in 20 people are carriers for the disorder.

The 75 Cent Tax

The Clinton Administration has decided the proposed new tax on cigarettes will be 75 cents a pack. The new tax was expected to be more.

The tobacco industry and nicotine addicts have objected to higher taxes on cigarettes. Nothing is more logical than the tax. Cigarettes are killing thousands of Americans every year, disabling many more and shortening the lifespans of millions.

The cost in treating lung cancer victims alone is in the billions--much of it paid by non-smoking taxpayers. The grief, financial loss and business disruption caused by sucking into one's lungs smoke from burning tobacco leaves is enormous, totally unnecessary; no good whatsoever comes from it.

The higher the tax the less many will smoke. In effect, that will be beneficial--for them and others who inhale their smoke.

What Is Mental Illness?

There is a fine line between what is mentally healthy and what is mentally illness. It's much like physical illness, it can be helped by improved habits, environment and sometimes, medication.

It's common to think that mental illness does not affect most of us, but did you know that:

--about 1 out of 6 hospital beds are occupied by a mental patient? That's about 217,000.

--15-20% of all Americans are affected by mental disorders every year?

--many who go to their doctors with physical problems have emotional problems that may be to blame?

WHAT CAUSES MENTAL ILLNESS? It's hard to know for sure but some things that influence it are:

1. Environment-experiences with people around us; family, school, situations can affect our self-esteem (good/bad)
2. Physical causes-body chemistry may play a part and some physical illness can cause injury to brain tissue which causes changes in behavior.
3. Heredity-can be a factor. The connection between heredity and environment is not clear in how it affects mental illness.

Some warning signs may be:

-Anxiety-a prolonged, severe feeling that something unpleasant is going to happen, even though there is no apparent cause for worry.

-Depression-more than the "blues"; leading to withdrawal from the outside world; not caring what's going on.

-Physical Complaint-with no organic cause.

-Sudden change-action inconsistent with normal behavior.

If any of the above symptoms are prolonged and severe, it's time to get a professional opinion. Often, understanding the cause can clear away the symptoms.

State Capital HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams
and Ed Sterling
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN --- U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison's lawyers last week subpoenaed all 12 grand jurors who indicted her in September on felony charges of directing state treasury employees to do personal and political business and attempting to cover up an investigation by destroying state records.

The subpoena instructs grand jurors to appear at an Oct. 24 hearing with their voter registration cards for the past 10 years and any documents linking them with the Democratic Party. Defense attorneys want information to support claims that the indictments are political an invalid because the grand jury was "stacked" with Democrats who might have been biased against the Republican senator.

Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle filed a motion in state District Court to quash the subpoena, arguing that Texas law provides for a secret ballot. He said the subpoena was an act of harassment that would "chill possible action of any future grand jury."

The defense has requested that the court seat a special grand jury of six Democrats and six Republicans if the case against Hutchison is to be reconsidered.

Already, some 463 indictments handed up by the panel --- including those of Hutchison --- are in danger of being dismissed. Earlier this month it was discovered that grand juror Melvin Wrenn had been charged with writing hot checks in 1990-91. Texas law forids convicted felons or anyone accused of theft or a felony of serving on a grand jury.

A recent Texas Poll shows that Hutchison's approval rating has decreased from 59 percent favorable three months ago to 34 percent favorable.

Hutchison, 50, served as state treasurer for more than two years before her election to the Senate in June.

Editorial

Intimidated Jury

There was police brutality in the beating of the criminal, Rodney King; the injustice produced sentences in a second trial--after mass rioting, killing and multi-million-dollar destruction.

In the rioting an innocent man--not a hardened criminal--doing nothing illegal, as was King, was dragged from his truck and also beaten almost to death.

The jury in this case--intimidated?--could never come to a specific guilty verdict. Some members had to be excused from duty, others became ill, etc.

A defense attorney made such statements as: the jury had to consider what was going on in the accused minds when they were seen on film beating the innocent truck driver! If this example is followed, crimes can be excused because the guilty party is agitated.

Labor saving devices do no good unless the time saved is wisely utilized.

Upjohn Receives National Licensure Of "J-5 Strain" Mastitis Vaccine

The Upjohn Company has received a national license from the United States Department of Agriculture to market its Escherichia coli Bacterin, (J-5 strain), a vaccine used for the prevention of environmental mastitis caused by E. coli in dairy cattle.

Environmental mastitis is a costly and deadly disease affecting as many as 10 percent of all dairy cattle annually. The bacteria most frequently isolated in these cases are E. coli, and the Upjohn J-5 Bacteria is the only approved vaccine labeled for prevention of environmental mastitis caused by E. coli.

The Upjohn J-5 Bacterin has been used for the past four years in California dairies under a state registration. It is proven to be safe and effective in decreasing the incidence of clinical environmental mastitis caused by E. coli when used in conjunction with traditional preventive management practices.

According to Thomas G. Schalk, D.V.M., Upjohn corporate vice president for worldwide animal health, the Upjohn J-5 Bacterin enhances the company's existing mastitis product line.

"Environmental mastitis is a serious disease in dairy herds", Schalk states. "The Upjohn J-5 Bacterin provides a non-antibiotic, residue-free means of controlling environmental mastitis, it fits our dairy product line and is consistent with our worldwide mastitis product development strategy."

The technology on which the vaccine is based was pioneered by Dr. James Cullor, from the University of California-Davis. The California Milk Advisory Board supported much of Dr. Cullor's research effort.

"This product has proven that it can play a large role in reducing the incidence of environmental mastitis in dairy herds," states Austin Belschner, D.V.M., technical services veterinarian for Upjohn. "Combined with sound environmental, nutritional and milking procedure management, the Upjohn J-5 Bacterin provides an excellent preventive management option to today's quality-conscious dairy procedures."

Balschner describes that each cow on Upjohn J-5 Bacterin should receive three doses of the vaccine, first given to cows at drying-off, then 30 days later, and again shortly after calving. This three-shot system provides protection from environmental mastitis caused by E. coli at the most critical stages of their lactation cycle.

"But, like all other management tools, this vaccine cannot work by itself," Belschner says. "The Upjohn J-5 Bacterin provides the best results when used in conjunction with a clean environment, proper nutrition, and sound overall management practices.

The Upjohn Company is a worldwide, research-based provider of human health care products, animal health products, agronomic and vegetable seeds and specialty chemicals. Headquartered in Kalamazoo, Michigan, the company has been dedicated to improving health and nutrition for more than a century.

Women And Menopause-- Fooling Mother Nature

What is it that keeps a woman protected from heart disease until menopause? So far, the best guess is hormones.

More than 15 percent of all post-menopausal women are on estrogen replacement therapy (ERT).

"With regard to heart disease, estrogen replacement therapy is wonderful," says Dr. Marcella Ritter, who recommends it to her own patients.

Estrogen has proven to reduce a woman's rate of cardiovascular disease--including strokes, high blood pressure, and heart attacks--about 50 percent.

"When a woman stops producing estrogen after menopause," says Ritter, an OB/GYN at the Methodist Hospital in Houston, "she becomes like a man with regard to her risk for heart disease."

Exactly why estrogen protects women isn't known, but researchers suspect that it makes arteries more resistant to cholesterol deposits; it has a positive effect on blood pressure and increases the "good" (HDL) cholesterol levels. Estrogen may protect blood vessel walls from changes that cause fatty plaque to accumulate.

Special Support Program Helps Adults Take That First Step Back To College

Brenda Fabela took the first step back to college. So did Nancy Burton and many other adults.

Fabela's dream was to become a nurse. But she was divorced with two young children to rear. Then Fabela heard about the First Step Program at South Plains College, which provides help for single parents, single pregnant women and displaced homemakers who want to go back to college in a technical field. Besides career counseling, job skills training and support groups, the program also provides direct financial assistance to help pay for some expenses.

"The First Step program gave me an opportunity to improve my life," explained Fabela, 28. The program helped her pay for most of her childcare costs for her two children, Ruben, 8, and Alaina, 4, while Fabela took classes in SPC's one-year vocational nursing program. She graduated this summer from SPC and is now working as a graduate vocational nurse at Methodist Hospital-Levelland. She plans to eventually continue her pursuit of an associate degree in nursing and licensure as a registered nurse.

"These students learn how to juggle work, family, and jobs. And they're determined to go back to school," explained Laura Newth, director of the First Step program on the SPC Levelland campus. The program is also offered on the SPC Lubbock campus.

First Step, the college's free counseling and support service for single parents and others going back to college, helped give Fabela a second chance.

Family stress and financial struggles had initially forced the young woman to drop out of college on her first try. She had been accepted into SPC's rigorous associate degree nursing program and "cried for two days" when she dropped out of school. However, she refused to give up and immediately applied for entrance into the college's one-year vocational nursing program. She was accepted and also applied for funds from the First Step program to help pay for childcare costs while she was going back to school.

More than 40 SPC students are currently receiving financial assistance through the First Step program, which is also available on the SPC Lubbock campus. "To qualify, students must be majoring in a vocational or technical area and be economically disadvantaged," said Newth. "They also must be single parents, single pregnant women or displaced homemakers. Additional funds are also available for married people who are economically disadvantaged who would like to go back to school."

Another student receiving help is Nancy Burton, a performing arts production major who is also divorced with two children, Samantha, 12, and Nicholas, 8. She found out about First Step through a list provided by the college financial services office. "I'm glad First Step is here," said Burton, who is enrolled fulltime in SPC's performing arts production program with an eye to owning a video and sound production company.

"Life has a way of throwing things in your path. But I'm too stubborn to let anything stop me," she says. She had originally been accepted into the Brooks Institute of Photography in California, but was unable to attend. She later heard about SPC's program in performing arts technology, which provides training in television and audio production, lighting, and stagecraft.

"Without First Step, I might have had to work extra hours or decided to go to school for a longer period. But the help provided by First Step enabled me to take additional classes, so I can finish my studies sooner," said Burton. "I'd like to get an internship in a television studio after graduation from SPC."

Burton currently works as a waitress 30 hours a week to help support her family and she encourages other waitresses to follow in her college-bound footsteps. "I put myself through school, and I am trying to talk other waitresses where I work into going back to college, too."

Fabela and Burton received their funds through a Carl Perkins federal grant. Newth explained, "We first received the grant in 1991 and that allowed us to expand the First Step program to provide direct financial assistance for childcare, transportation, books and supplies to qualified students."

The assistance provided by First Step helps the students learn how to blend their school and personal lives and increase their confidence level, says Newth.

"I made it this time," Fabela now says happily. "I learned to balance school and work." And she is not giving up on her dream to eventually become a registered nurse. She plans to reapply for entrance into SPC's associate degree nursing program after working a year or two as a licensed vocational nurse.

For more information about the First Step program, contact Newth at 894-9611, ext. 359.

Healthy Eating

By Harold Ligon, M.D.

A few decades ago mothers and dietitians frequently warned against eating a lot of bread.

Bread, however, was falsely accused. Federal dietary guidelines now suggest from 6 to 11 daily servings of bread, cereal, pasta or other grain foods, depending on lifestyle.

If other grain foods are not being eaten, one can enjoy bread several times a day.

ARTIST OF THE MONTH- Muleshoe Art Association's "Artist of the Month" at the Muleshoe Public Library is Ginnie Seifert. She discovered the world of painting about 20 years ago, and found it has given her a full and enthusiastic life, something beyond her household and family, to broaden her existence. "It's given me a choice of making a purpose in my life," says Ginnie. She loves participating in art shows. The judging, competition and awards are great and to win is a big thrill. She finds artists to be a wonderful group of people. The mediums in which she works are as varied as the people she's met. She paints with oils, acrylics, pastels, water color, pencil and ink, and no subject matter is out of limits. She paints what she wants or is required of her. For something different than her usual subjects, she just finished 7 paintings for the New National Armories Guard in New Mexico. She says "Military subjects aren't something every artist cares to do, but I found it challenging." Ginnie's art has been chosen by the state of New Mexico Hall of Fame, and is displayed in Bruce King Law Enforcement Complex in Clovis, the new Texico Welcome Center, and several banks and libraries in New Mexico and Texas. "I hope to paint forever, but arthritis has hit me where I live, in my hands, so sometimes it's a little difficult," she concludes. (Journal photo)

Christmas Seals Help Fight Lung Disease

As the Christmas season fast approaches, the American Lung Association (ALA) begins its holiday tradition of distributing Christmas Seals to over 1,400,000 homes in Texas.

A tradition that began in 1907, Christmas Seals were printed and sold for a penny apiece in Washington, Delaware. Funds raised from the sale of those seals were used to fight tuberculosis, the major killer than. The death rate from tuberculosis sharply declined in the mid 1940's after the introduction of good diagnostic tools and the discovery of antibiotics, but recently the number of cases diagnosed annually has been climbing at alarming rates.

This year the Christmas Seal People, as the ALA as often known, is fortunate to have Kristi Yamaguchi, Olympic gold medalist, as the 1993 Honorary Chairperson for the Christmas Seal Campaign. Three years ago Ms. Yamaguchi's grandfather died of lung cancer. "Lung disease, such as asthma, lung cancer, emphysema, and tuberculosis is the third leading cause of death in the United States," she said. "I want to help all Americans understand lung disease so that future generations won't have to suffer."

Edward Carter, President of the American Lung Association of Texas, concured with Ms. Yamaguchi. "Over the last decade, the death rate from lung disease has risen faster than the death rate of any other leading disease. Contributions to Christmas Seals help people with lung disease."

This is the second year for Ms. Yamaguchi to serve as chairperson. This places her in the company of other notable two-time chairpersons Bob Hope, Cybil Sheperd, Pearl Baily, and Vicki Carr. In San Antonio, Ms. Carr currently serves as chairperson of the 1993 Christmas Seal Walk, a pledge based walk occuring on December 4 in Austin, Fort Worth and San Antonio.

The Christmas Seal design selected for the 1993 Seal depicts a moonlit winter snow scene with three geese in flight. The design is by artist Michael Chisarik of the Franklin Mint, that has done all the designs since 1990.

Christmas Seals are currently being distributed in the mail throughout Texas. For information on how to receive the Seals, please call the American Lung Association of Texas at (800) 252-5864.

In Fashion

Several things should be considered when buying sportswear. Garments should respond to body movement. Stretch fabrics can react to mobility by stretching and contracting with body movement. This assures comfort whether you participate in a strenuous or a moderate exercise program.

The weight of sportswear is important. Some fibers are very sensitive to heat. Fiberfilled garments are usually best for maintaining desirable body heat. Be sure your clothing will be visible to motorists when near a highway.

RECENTLY MARRIED AND LOOKING FORWARD--Rev. Douglas Ensminger of Houston's Presbyterian Ministeries led a twilight wedding in early summer at 717 Rochow. The ceremony united Joyce Marie Adams and Rick Dennis Beadle in the newly constructed home of the bride's brother. The second story room of the office section of the residence was first used as this wedding site. J.K. Adams of Muleshoe and other close friends and family joined for the occasion reading "Prayer for Two" before hearing Joyce's recitation of another original set of verses "Standing on the Sound Ground of Understanding As It Warms." These accompanied rain that welcomed marriage guests. It fell gently on River Oaks that afternoon.

Open Greeting and Thanks To Family, Friends and Everyone:

On Thanksgiving Day we will have been wed for 6 months having gone to my brother's home/office in Houston May 30 for the ceremony and reading a wedding poem before vows. Joyce wore a white eyelet embroidery dress designed by Carol Tutt of Muleshoe. Her round bouquet was of pink roses. After knowing one another since July 4 of 1991, meeting as an answer to mutual prayer, we honeymooned through Albuquerque, Los Alamos and Santa Fe, New Mexico on Independence Day of this year.

During the ceremony three unusual, somewhat comical things happened. First, the flower girls, small niece and cousin of the bride, forgot themselves and went up the left aisle, much to the delight of Joyce, herself a lefty. Second, rain accompanied the service and a slippery stair from the portico to the newly constructed wedding room almost caused the bride delay. The groom remained calm, having the composure to whisper: "You look marvelous," and adding a "Bay Whoop!" to his beloved's gifts during the recessional. Although Rick was prepared to assist her with a new handkerchief, Mitty didn't cry proclaiming her complete happiness until now, the half year anniversary of her marriage.

Sylvia Pool Horne, formerly of Muleshoe and her mother, Jewel, provided arrangement and wedding flowers for the occasion. Gail Hood Adams, the bride's sister-in-law, assisted as matron of honor, arranging a wedding dinner following the marriage as well as caring for pre-wedding details. Joe Houston Adams hosted the reception in his newly completed home and provided accompaniment for his daughters, Anna Ruth and Kathryn Elizabeth, as they sang solos during the nuptials.

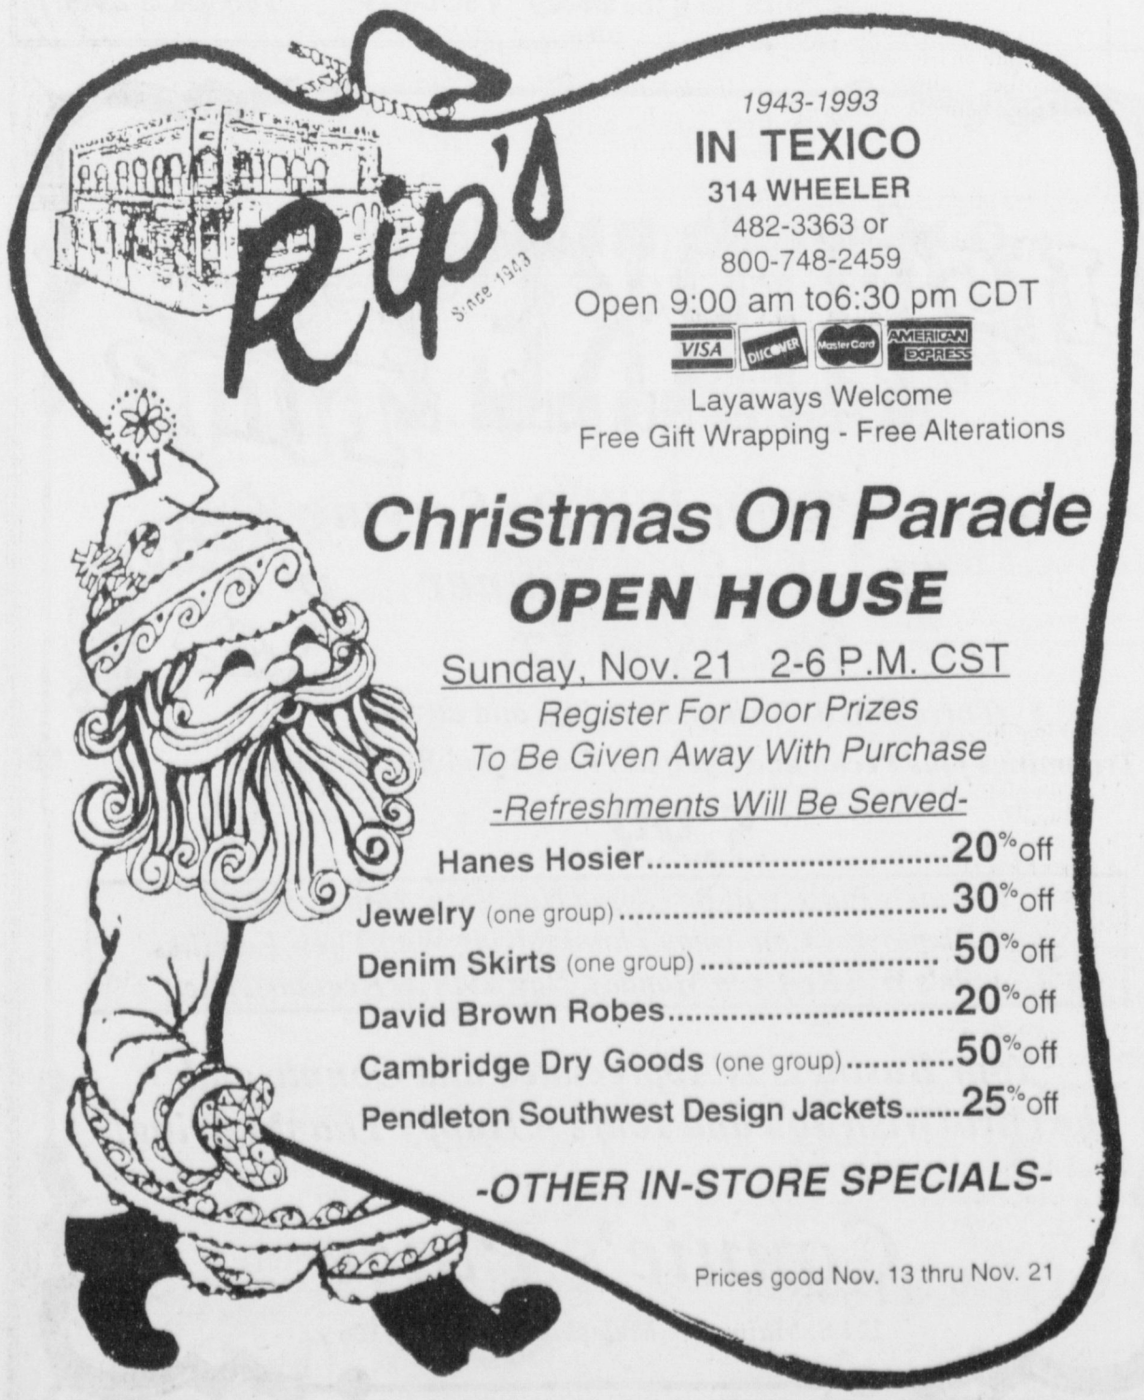

Ellen Weaver Raghavan, TCU roommate of the bride, provided organ music. Among those attending were the bride's father, J.K. Adams of Muleshoe; her aunt Mary Ann Miller of Perrin, her cousin and husband, Janet and Greg Talley of Arlington; Mr. and Mrs. Andy Horne, also of Houston; Dr. Raghavan, her daughter Anjuli and mother Martha Weaver of Hillsboro; and Rev. and Mrs. Douglas Ensminger of Houston. The minister who was kind enough to counsel the couple is a colleague of the Adams family's minister there. Dr. Price of Lubbock, started in faith and helped greatly and lightheartedly suggesting ways to the beauty and art within matrimony.

Truly married life has been full of the new and a renewing of our ideas and philosophies. We trust and believe we will continue to welcome the change as these first salad days pass and closeness unwobbles. We grow in what we believe to be a greatly needed direction in this day of electronic splendor. We grow toward Life abundant slowly and through our understanding and respect for others and those around us. We grow in our capabilities to share views we believe in with one another as we find them in the media, in cinema, live drama, our reading of all kinds and in broadcast performances. We grow to respect ourselves and those around us: sharing opinions and thoughts on how these events reflect God through knowledge, ancient writings, the Bible, early teachings and thought processes.

Know that our matrimony and eagerness about just being happy together is an increasing delight. Rest assured that the years as they pass rapidly now will prove filled with opportunity to gather and thank even about our differences, yea similarities, and for our multitudinous blessings in the cornucopia of this region. As the Lord blesses our farm efforts, agribusiness, commerce and government in this nation, making early harvest of all kinds as real as West Texas, we hope that your holiday season will itself be bounteous and that your difficulties will fade in the vesper for Tomorrow. If not, the Master knows, doesn't He?

State Capital HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams and Ed Sterling
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN --- Texas voters overwhelmingly approved a constitutional amendment on Nov. 2 that gives them the final say on a state income tax --- if one is ever proposed.

Voters also approved an amendment that authorizes a $1 billion bond program to build new prisons and create a "state jail" system to house 64,000 nonviolent offenders.

Gov. Ann Richards and other state leaders hailed passage of the prison bond proposal, which may result in Texas having the world's largest prison system by 2000.

"I'm grateful to the voters of Texas for giving us the green light to proceed at full speed with our prison construction. This is a significant step in our fight against crime," Richards said.

In addition to the prison bond program, voters endorsed an amendment that extends the power of judges to deny bail to certain violent or sexual offenders.

The questions were among 14 constitutional proposals that won approval.

Two other amendments were voted down. One would have authorized a $50 million bond program to fund business startup loans to minorities and women. The other was a $75 million bond proposal to provide financial help in processing, marketing or exporting Texas agricultural products.

Although the two loan programs were rejected, voters passed another business-related proposal. Proposition 2 will give property tax relief to businesses that buy pollution control equipment.

In other election news:

- Houston voters narrowly defeated a zoning ordinance that would have zoned every square inch of the city's 586 square miles.
- With only token opposition, Houston Mayor Bob Lanier coasted to a second two-year term.

Second Subpoena Eyed

People who testified before a grand jury investigating U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison's actions as state treasurer will be subpoenaed again for a new grand jury, Travis County prosecutor Steve McCleery said last week.

Hutchison, 50, was indicted Sept. 27 on official misconduct charges relating to the alleged use of state time and resources to conduct personal and political business.

The indictments were dismissed after officials discovered that a grand juror was ineligible to serve on the panel.

McCleery said no decision has been made whether to subpoena Hutchison. She appeared under subpoena before the first grand jury.

Limited School Vouchers

Breaking from her previous outright opposition, Gov. Richards said she is willing to consider a pilot school voucher system in the next session of the Legislature.

The governor told the Texas Association of Taxpayers last week she would support a measure giving students in poorly performing public schools their choice of attending another school.

"We're going to try a voucher system particularly aimed at those schools that we need to upgrade," Richards said.

Richards' likely Republican foe in the 1994 gubernatorial election, George W. Bush, favors a proposal by Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, giving vouchers so that students may attend the public or private school of their choice.

Bush Resigns Oil Position

George W. Bush resigned his duties at Harken Energy Corp. last week, presumably to focus on a 1994 race against Gov. Richards.

In a statement, Harken said Bush had resigned from the board of directors and as a consultant "in order to devote his time to other matters."

Bush, part-owner of the Texas Rangers baseball team and eldest son of the former president, has filed campaign papers with the Texas Ethics Commission and is expected to formally announce his candidacy for governor this week.

Group for Tougher Gun Laws

Travis County lawmakers and officials kicked off an assault on gun violence last week, saying their aim is to "keep the streets safe by keeping dangerous weapons out of the wrong hands."

The officials have formed Texans Against Gun Violence, a nonprofit statewide organization to promote stricter state and federal gun laws.

State Rep. Sherry Greenberg, D-Austin, said she plans to sponsor legislation next session which would ban automatic weapons, require waiting periods and background checks for firearm purchases.

Other Highlights

- Responding to complaints by the insurance industry, a state district judge has overturned a new state rule that would have strictly prohibited discrimination in the sale of insurance.
- Former Harris County prosecutor Frances M. "Poppy" Northcutt announced her candidacy for the Texas Court of Appeals. Northcutt, a Democrat, is running for Place 2 against two-term incumbent Chuck Miller.
- Former Attorney General Jim Mattox received the endorsement of the United Auto Workers shortly after announcing his candidacy for the U.S. Senate.

The Four F's For Avoiding ...Hurt

We usually take one of, at least, four positions to avoid being hurt in an arguement. Each one offers short term gain. In the long run, they cause trouble. Dr. John Gray, in his book "Men Are From Mars, Women Are From Venus" lists:

1) FIGHT-When opposed, some couples move into a offensive stance. They begin blaming, judging, criticizing and making the other person look wrong. Their intent is to intimidate to make their partner back down. Intimidation always weakens trust in a relationship. People will gradually lose their ability to open up and be vulnerable. They close up to protect themselves and intimacy is gone.

2) FLIGHT-Couples retreat to avoid talking about an issue and nothing gets resolved. They walk on eggshells. They may have peace on the surface but resentments will begin to build if feelings are not talked about. In the long run, they lose touch with the passionate and loving feelings that drew them together.

3) FAKE-To avoid being hurt, a person pretends that there is no problem. They are afraid to be honest about their feelings, so they try to make everything "all right, OK, and fine". Over time these people may become increasingly resentful. They feel like they are always giving but they do not get what they need in return. Resentment will block the natural expression of love.

4) FOLD-Rather than argue, they will just give in . They will take the blame and assume responsibility for whatever is upsetting their partner. They create what looks like a loving relationship, but the end up losing themselves. These people may, in time, become very depressed because they have molded themselves to fit everyone else's needs, ideas and goals and left themselves out. Any form of rejection is very painful because they are already denying themselves so much.

In any of the four stances listed above, our intention is to avoid being hurt. However, it does not work. What does work is to identify the issues, discuss them calmly until the issue is settled.

There are rules for "How to Fight and Do It Right". Maybe, that will be another column soon.

Newspapers recently carried stories about "glum" physicists, reacting to Congress' cancellation of the project to build the world's most powerful atom smasher.

The collider was the physicists' latest dream, costing many billion. Facing record-breaking deficits, not being sure of its value, Congress stopped the project.

Physicists have a spotty record in encouraging Congress to spend more and more billions. Space shuttle extravaganzas, far too many, are one example. Another question about physicists is whether they're something of a closed-shop fraternity in the U.S.

A few years back when a much-respected Italian physicist sought to demonstrate that Einstein's relativity theory contained errors, he was ostracized. Those teaching Einstein's theory had a vested interest in maintaining its acceptance.

So now the physicists will have to wait to learn more about the origin of mass. We can afford to wait--for the new theories.

We have no end of troubles of our own, so why bother us with yours.

Home Health Remedies Common Among Older Texas Hispanics

Home health remedies are commonly used by older Texas Hispanics to treat illnesses, according to an article published in a special October issue of Texas Medicine focusing on geriatric medicine.

Older Hispanics living along the Texas-Mexico border use herbal remedies offered by curanderos in addition to seeking medical treatment provided by physicians. Younger Hispanics are not as likely to use informal methods of health care, say the authors of the article.

Texas Medicine is the official magazine of the Texas Medical Association.

The article was written by Dr. David V. Espino, Dr. Carlos A. Moreno and Melissa Talamentes, M.S. The special issue features a cover story on the health conditions of elderly Texans and also includes articles on long-term care facilities, osteoporosis in older patients and late-life depression.

Inadequate transportation, language barriers and lower socioeconomic status play a role in the delivery of health care to Hispanics.

"The lower socioeconomic status of some elderly Hispanics may cause some difficulties in purchasing medications," the authors write. "These conditions may result in a decrease in compliance with physician instructions."

Since older Hispanics have strong family ties and interactions, the extended family is called upon to provide care during illness or to meet daily living needs. An elderly spouse, adult daughter or daughter-in-law is usually called upon to be the primary caregiver. High levels of stress and depression are often experienced by family members who take on these responsibilities.

"Referrals for family caregivers to access community services are necessary to prevent burnout," the authors write.

Texas Medical Association is a professional organization of nearly 32,000 physician and medical student members. It is located in Austin and has 118 component county medical societies around the state. The Association represents 82 percent of the doctors of medicine licensed and residing in Texas and 96 percent of the state's allopathic medical students. TMA's key objective is to improve the health of all Texans.

Traveling With The Texas Angler

by Keith Warren

Recent rains ended a long dry spell in parts of Texas. It had been so long since it had rained on me that I'd lost my rainsuit.

This last week I joined Jerry Dean, host of Honey Hole TV/Magazine, as a guest on an upcoming Honey Hole program. This weekly program broadcasts on Home Sports Entertainment Network on Thursdays at 6:30 p.m. We met at Richland Chambers Reservoir near Corsicana under cloudy skies with rain in the forecast.

It was my first time to fish this lake. We were after black bass. Right after launching the boat to head up river, the bottom fell out of the clouds. A steady heavy down pour of rain almost blinded us as we made our way through the timber to the mouth of the river. This wouldn't have been so bad if I had my rainsuit with me.

Stopping at the river's mouth, we threw spinnerbaits and worms at the heavy brush that lined the river channel. The lake level was about 2 feet low. The water depth was 2-4 feet where the brush was and 15-20 feet in the channel. Fish locate themselves on the edge of the river right next to the drop to deep water. Not only bass, but crappie and catfish will locate there.

We only caught 6 bass ranging from 1 to 4 pounds between the 2 of us.

The rain stayed with us all day long. The entire time I was out there I was thinking, "I'll never forget my rainsuit again as long as I live."

This time of year it is extremely important to remember to take the proper gear. Not only will it make your trip more comfortable if you need it, but it could save your life.

By the way, we did manage to catch enough fish and get enough video for a television show.

You can contact the Texas Angler at 210/625-3474.

Keith Warren is the Host of The Texas Angler Television show, which broadcasts state wide. Catch the Texas Angler on Home Sports Entertainment Network (HSE) on Sundays at 11:30 a.m.

"Bear One Another's Burdens"

One of the most beautiful "one another's" of the Bible comes from Galatians 6:2: "Bear one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ."

Focus On Faith
Curtis Shelburne

It's not the wording which is particularly lovely; what is lovely is to see how willingly some Christian fellowships put these words into practice when a brother or sister in the Lord is stumbling under the weight of a heavy grief or sorrow, sickness or pain.

But I wonder if in this verse Paul isn't asking us to help lift some burdens that are even harder to bear?

I think he is. Look at the verses which surround this one and you'll see that the "burden" being discussed here is specifically one which a Christian brother or sister is carrying because of a sin or a strong temptation to sin. Let's face it--it's much easier to help bear the burden of someone who is facing sorrow or pain of almost any sort than it is to help carry the load of someone who has stumbled morally.

An elder confesses to a long-standing problem with alcohol. A deacon's marriage seems to be coming apart at the seams. The song leader's son is busted for possession of cocaine. In these and so many other embarrassing situations the easiest. and most wrong, approach is to follow the inscription which writer Dean Merrill saw inscribed on a tourist button: "to err is human. To forgive is out of the question."

When one of us, though, is wounded by sin, our job as Christ's soldiers is not to "shoot our own wounded," but to help get them to safety. In practicality, Paul is telling us that we are not to be "gossip-mongers" who stride to the top of some "holy" huddle by climbing to the top over the bodies of fallen comrades.

As part of the redemptive society, the church, we are to be healers. One of the truest tests of our Christian profession is whether or not we accept that role.

Curtis Shelburne is the minister of the 16th and Ave. D. Church of Christ in Muleshoe.

"YOU TOOK MY PICTURE... AND I WASN'T READY!"

How concerned we are with the image we present to others! And it is right that we should be. How mightily we influence others. It is so important that the self we present is one that will influence others for good.

With guidance from God we will be ready to present ourselves to the world in such a manner as to sway others toward God and all that is worthwhile and good.

"That ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God," come to His Church

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and desiiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.
