Paramedics bend over Erika Hurrera after the 9-year-old was struck by a car Monday afternoon on Andrews Highway. The child was listed in critical condition this morning.

Girl struck by car, seriously injured

From Staff Reports

A 9-year-old girl remained this morning in critical condition with head injuries after she was struck by a car Monday afternoon on Andrews Highway.

Erika Hurrera, 2928 Louisiana Ave., was hit after she and two friends ran between cars traveling northwest on Andrews Highway at 4:10 p.m., according to police reports.

The driver of the 1981 Buick Regal that hit her, 27-year-old Cristina Mary Destefano of 723 W. Dengar Ave., No. 2-A, said she slowed down for a red light at the intersection of Louisiana Avenue, when three children ran between the cars to her left, according to police reports.

Ms. Destefano, an account executive, said she attempted to stop but was unable to before she struck the girl, who was the last of the three running. The child was thrown in the air and struck her head on the right side of the hood before falling into the street, reports said.

Also remaining in critical condition at Midland Memorial Hospital this morning was Robert Arredondo, 1106 E. Hickory. The 25-year-old was stabbed several times in the neck and back during an altercation early Monday morning. A 22-year-old neighbor who was taken into custody today on charges of aggravated assault had not been formally arraigned by press time today.

Reagan lauds Spain's tide of democracy

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

MADRID, Spain — President Reagan, overlooking criticism of his Nicaragua policy here, praised Spain's progress as a democracy today and declared that "the exceptions to the democratic tide in Spanish-speaking America can be counted on the fingers of one hand."

He identified them as "entrenched military" rule in Paraguay and Chile and "communist tyrannies" in Cuba and Nicaragua.

Nearing the end of his 10-day European tour, the president strolled through the gardens of El Pardo Palace with King Juan Carlos, arranged talks with Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez and opposition leader Manuel Fraga and — in a speech before Spanish community leaders — cheered the beginning of "a golden age of freedom" on the Iberian peninsula.

Reagan also is working on a major speech, to be delivered Wednesday before the European Parliament at Strasbourg, France, that will focus on a variety of proposals for improving relations with the Soviet Union.

White House aides said the speech would test whether the new Soviet leadership under Mikhail Gorbachev is serious about seeking to reduce tensions.

In his speech today, Reagan said nations everywhere could benefit from the Reaganomics formula of lower taxes, deregulation of business and a diminished government role in private affairs.

"Freedom, we see, is contagious, and the force of your example has inspired a continent," he said in his speech at the Juan March Foundation, a seven-story building housing a cultural, science and social welfare organization.

He also made a gentle pitch for his Central-American policies, saying that "in country after country, the dicators have given way to the democratic aspirations of their people" in the Western Hemisphere.

For the first time, Reagan said, the exceptions to democratic rule in that region can be counted on one hand, notably in Paraguay, Chile, Cuba and Nicaragua. Meanwhile in Spain, he said, "any visitor here can see that freedom is flourishing."

The Spanish government opposes Reagan's new trade embargo against Nicaragua and his support of rebel Contra guerrillas fighting the leftist Sandinista government in Managua.

While Spain has offered to mediate differences between Nicaragua and the United States, deputy White House press secretary Robert Sims said, "We'd like to see Spain encourage the Sandinistas to have reconciliation with the opposition."

U.S. to address Soviet stand at human rights talks

By CHARLES CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

OTTAWA — U.S. officials say they will accuse the Soviet Union of systematic violations of the human rights provisions of the 1975 Helsinki accords at a 35-nation conference opening today in the Canadian capital.

The Ottawa assembly is one of a series of meetings following up the accords, which established the Conference on European Security and Cooperation. The meeting is the first held outside continental Europe and the first to deal solely with human rights.

The United States, Canada and all countries of East and West Europe except Albania are participating.

The delegations were negotiating today until just hours before the opening speech by Foreign Secretary Joe Clark on the basic ground rules — including the agenda, time limits and which sessions would be open to the press and public.

Western officials said the Soviet Union argued that the entire conference should take place behind closed doors.

"They're dead set against any publicity," Richard Schifter, the U.S. ambassador to the conference, said in an interview.

Schifter said the main American presentation, expected later this week, would accuse the Soviets of disregarding key sections of the accords.

"They really are not paying attention to it," he said. "We have to get the message to them that this is important to us."

Schifter said he would cite Soviet violations of the accords with particular concern for the repression of members of groups established to monitor compliance with the Helsinki provisions.

Schifter said at least 38 Helsinki Watch activists have been jailed or banished in the Soviet Union.

The Soviets are expected to criticize the United States for its race relations, unemployment and housing problems, andd try "to draw attention to particular situations around the world in a nonpolemical, nonconfrontational way."

Before leaving Moscow last month, Soviet Ambassador Vsevolod Sofinsky said each participating country should be limited to discussing its own human rights affairs.

"Discussion of human rights in other countries would not contribute to the success of the conference and would onlylead to confrontation," Sofinsky was quoted as saying by the government news agency Novosti.

Western delegates said the Soviet representative took the same position in the preparatory sessions, but had no chance of prevailing.

The Canadian Committee for Captive European Nations presented statements from officials of 14 organizations urging the Western countries to take a harder line toward the Soviet Union.

"All the attention we can give definitely will help the situation of the prisoners of conscience and those in psychiatric institutions and slave labor camps," said Olaf Tammark, chairman of the Relief Committtee of Estonian Prisoners of Conscience in the USSR.

At a news conference Monday, officials of several groups called for greater freedom for Jews in the Soviet Union.

"The case of Soviet Jewry is one of the most blatant violations of human rights in the Soviet Union," said Steven Roth, chairman of the Helsinki Monitoring Committee of the World Conference on Soviet Jewry.

Artificial heart recipient weakened by brain hemorrhage

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — William Schroeder, who has lived longer than any other artificial heart recipient and a month ago was well enough to leave the hospital, has been readmitted in critical condition with a brain hemorrhage.

Schroeder's condition stabilized overnight and his vital signs were normal today, said Donna Hazle, a spokeswoman for Humana Hospital Audubon.

"He is awake some of the time. He is breathing on his own at this time," she said.

Schroeder, who had battled back from a series of strokes after the heart implant last Nov. 25, gave a hand squeeze and responded to verbal commands after he was taken back to the hospital Monday afternoon, said Humana Inc. spokesman Bob Irvine.

A CAT scanner — a device that uses computers to make detailed X-ray pictures of the inside of the brain — revealed that Schroeder had suffered bleeding in his brain. Doctors believed the bleeding had stopped by late Monday, but "we can't confirm that until the second CAT scan," Irvine said.

The second scan, to determine what caused the hemorrhage and if Schroeder had suffered another stroke, will be performed today, said Ms. Hazle, hospital public relations director.

In recent days, Schroeder had become listless and too weak to leave his bed in a hospital-owned apartment across the street, Irvine said.

Schroeder was listed in critical but stable condition in the hospital's coronary care unit, Irvine said.

"He was real peaceful when I stopped by," Irvine said of Schroeder Monday night. "He is alert and responding to voice commands from Dr. William DeVries. When (DeVries) said move your legs, he moved his legs; when he said move your arms, Schroeder could move his arms.

"(Schroeder) even squeezed my hand."

DeVries implanted the Jarvik-7 heart, driven by pulses of air from an external compressor, 164 days ago.

Irvine said Schroeder's responses Monday night indicated that he had suffered no permanent neurological damage as a result of the hemorrhage, but "that again is preliminary."

Asked if the situation was life threatening, Irvine said, "At this point, they are trying to determine just what the situation is. It is critical, but stable." Irvine said the possibility existed that Schroeder could begin bleeding again.

Schroeder, who was well enough to go fishing 14 days after being released from the hospital on April 6, was returned there at 4 p.m. for a CAT scan.

Doses of anticoagulant drugs that had been given to Schroeder since he suffered mild seizures after a series of strokes Dec. 13 have been stopped, Irvine said.

Schroeder was discharged from Humana to a specially equipped apartment with his wife, Margaret, across the street from the hospital. He received 24-hour nursing care while in the apartment.

Mrs. Schroeder was with her husband through the day Monday, Irvine said.

William Schroeder, who has lived longer than any other artificial heart recipient, is back at Humana Hospital Audubon in critical but stable condition despite bleeding in the brain. Further tests are scheduled today.

A Santa Fe Railroad employee surveys the damage following the derailment of 12 cars, including two carrying hazardous chemicals, in Snyder Monday.

Snyder school, several homes evacuated after train derails

SNYDER (AP) — An elementary school was evacuated just before classes ended and several residents left their homes temporarilty after several cars of a Santa Fe freight train derailed, authorities said.

Two cars containing hazardous chemicals were among those that derailed on a trestle about 2 p.m. Monday.

No injuries were reported, but officials became concerned thas no sign of a leak from two cars that contained the potentially dangerous chemcials, Morgan said.

Morgan said the affected area measured 11 blocks by 10 blocks, and barricades were set up at intersections within the area as people were warned of the situation and allowed to decide on their own if they would leave.

Northeast Elementary School Principal Gerri Parker said officials informed her of the situation about 2:20 p.m., and the decision was made to evacuate the students "as a precautionary measure."

One of the cars contains propylene oxide, a flammable liquid that is "used as a fumigant in making detergents, lubricants and other chemicals," Morgan said.

The other car contains a corrosive, dimethyl chlorothiophosphate.

REAGAN

Also, Gonzalez is under popular pressure to close four U.S.-leased military bases in Spain, where 12,500 Americans are stationed, and has promised a referendum next spring on demands that Spain withdraw from the NATO alliance.

Interviewed during his stroll with the Spanish king, Reagan said talks had "really just kind of begun" on the issue of reducing the U.S. military presence in Spain. "This is a subject for discussion that we haven't gotten down to," he said.

As for Nicaragua, the president said, "All that I've done so far is explain what our position is."

Asked about the seeming lack of broad support for his Nicaragua policy, Reagan said: "I think there are some people having second thoughts and discovering they have been victims of a disinformation campaign, as perhaps some of you present have been."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the president was referring to House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill's remark Monday that Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega's recent trip to Moscow had "embarrassed" House members who had just refused to approve aid for Nicaraguan rebels.

O'Neill suggested that some Democrats might vote differently next time on the rebel aid issue.

Speakes said Reagan had read O'Neill's statement in press clippings transmitted to Madrid during the night from Washington. "Tip's caving in, Tip's changing his mind, according to the press," Speakes said.

Rather than focus publicly on these controversies, Reagan chose today to compliment Spain on its democratic advances since the November 1975 death of Gen. Francisco Franco, the country's authoritarian ruler for 36 years.

In contrast to his five-day visit to West Germany, there have been no mass street demonstrations here since Reagan arrived Monday. But some Madrid residents, forbidden to demonstrate except on weekends, protested Monday night by shutting off their lights and banging on pots and pans for 10 minutes.

But the clamor was out of earshot of Reagan, who is staying at the El Pardo Palace, a 63-room estate nine miles northwest of Madrid that served Franco's home and headquarters from 1939 until his death.

Larry Speakes said the Strasbourg speech would contain a plan for increased U.S.-Soviet military contact to avoid such incidents as the March 24 shooting death of Maj. Arthur D. Nicholson Jr. in East Germany and the Sept. 1, 1983, downing of a Korean Air Lines passenger plane by Soviet jet fighters.

Robert McFarlane, the White House national security affairs adviser, said Reagan would recommend four specific measures designed to reduce mistrust between the two superpowers.

Despite protests, U.S. President Ronald Reagan and his wife appear to enjoy their visit to Spain. Reagan, above left, laughs at a remark by King Juan Carlos of Spain as they talk with Spanish executives. Later, Reagan addressed the Juan March Foundation on democracy and free enterprise. Reagan testing Gorbachev's intent

By ROBERT E. THOMPSON
Chief, Hearst Washington Bureau

MADRID, Spain — As he continues his 10-day journey around Europe, President Reagan will propose a series of peace initiatives designed to determine whether Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev is serious about negotiations on a range of issues with the United States.

After a week of courting the leaders of America's European allies with mixed results, President Reagan is turning his attention to Gorbachev, even though he will not meet personally with the Soviet boss on this trip.

Reagan views this as an opportunity to "test" the 54-year-old Gorbachev's commitment to the peaceful resolution of divisive East-West problems, including communications, travel and the threat of armed hostility.

He will suggest that the two nations establish a military-to-military hotline to avert accidental hostile action in emergency situations and also seek an open-borders policy so that travellers can move freely between democratic Western and communist Eastern Europe.

In addition, the president will dust off a plan which he offered last year and which was rejected by Gorbachev's predecessor, Konstantin Chernenko.

Under the Reagan proposal, the United States and the Soviet Union would rule out the first use of military force, including nuclear attack.

Although the plan was first defined by Reagan in Dublin last year, it has not been laid before Gorbachev since he succeeded Chernenko two years ago.

If Gorbachev is prepared to negotiate over Reagan's proposals, they will be discussed by Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko when they meet in Vienna next week.

Reagan expects to meet Gorbachev in the fall, when the Soviet leader journeys to the United Nations in New York.

The White House views the President's speech before the European Parliament as a highlight of his trip.

While the proposal for an emergency hotline linking the military high command in the Pentagon was first offered three years ago by the late Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash, with the support of Sens. Sam Nunn,D-Ga., and John Warner,R-Va., Reagan has never previously made it a part of his agenda for dealing with the Soviets.

But White House spokesman Larry Speakes said in Madrid Monday that the president was "taking advantage of the new Soviet leadership" in the hope that talks can be stimulated on the three proposals.

"It is an opportunity for them to prove their seriousness" about reaching an accord with the United States on "crisis management," said Speakes.

If an agreement is reached, Speakes added, the hotline could lead to a joint U.S.-Soviet crisis control center aimed at preventing such tragic incidents as the 1983 Soviet shooting down of a Korean airliner over the Sea of Japan and the killing of Maj. Arthur Nicholson by a Soviet soldier in East Germany a few weeks ago.

Reagan decided to renew his public bid for a no-first-use-of-force accord, Speakes said, because "overtures through diplomatic channels have not proved fruitful on this subject."

After a full week in West Germany, where he participated in the eleventh economic summit and travelled about the country, Reagan flew Monday to Spain. He will journey from Madrid to Strasbourg Wednesday morning and then proceed to Portugal before returning to Washington.

In West Germany, Reagan won many friends and was lauded for his pilgrimage Sunday to the World War II concentration camp at Bergen-Belsen and the tiny military cemetery at Bitburg, which holds the remains of German soldiers, including Waffen SS troops, who died in the war.

At Hamback Castle, near Neustadt, an audience of more than 5,000 — most of them young Germans — applauded wildly Monday when Reagan's visit to Bitburg was mentioned.

The president was given a hero's welcome by the crowd, which had assembled for a youth festival. The wreath-laying ceremony at Bitburg, which Reagan saw as a symbol of ultimate reconciliation between Germany and its World War II foes, had a strong emotional impact on the German people.

But the Bitburg visit opened old wounds remaining from the war and the Holocaust and may have cost Reagan some support at home.

During the economic summit, Reagan won on several points, including the summiteers refusal to sanction an immediate international monetary conference.

But he failed to win backing from his fellow conferees for the U.S. imposition of economic sanctions on Nicaragua. Because of the opposition of French President Francois Mitterand, he also failed to win a summit endorsement for a new international trade round to begin in 1986.

In Spain, Reagan's visit sparked mass demonstrations by groups opposed to his policies toward Nicaragua.

There also was some question as to how successful he and Shultz would be during their two-day Madrid visit in persuading the Spanish government that the U.S. military presence here should be maintained at current levels beyond 1988.

France, Portugal on agenda

WASHINGTON (AP) — Highlights of the remainder of President Reagan's 10-day European trip:

Today — Meeting and working lunch for Reagan with Spanish Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez Marquez and a state dinner given by King Juan Carlos and Queen Sofia.

May 8 — The Reagans fly to Strasbourg, France, where the president delivers an address to the European Parliament on the 40th anniversary of the end of World War II in Europe. They fly to Lisbon, Portugal.

May 9 — Meeting for Reagan with Portuguese Prime Minister Mario Soares and address to the National Assembly, followed by lunch with Soares and a state dinner.

May 10 — The Reagans visit Quelez Palace, attend departure ceremonies and return to Washington.

Actresses tell Congress of farmers' woes

Cox News Service

WASHINGTON — Jessica Lange, who portrayed a modern farm wife in the movie "Country," cried Monday as she told congressmen of America's agricultural anguish.

"I have sat countless hours over the last couple of years talking with farmers, trying to understand what they are going through. And I know this: they are in pain," said Ms. Lange, her voice cracking and tears welling in her eyes. "...They are being made to believe they have failed. They've failed their families, their heritage, their country and they have failed their land."

The moving words came in a crowded Capitol Hill committee room as Jessica Lange sat beside Sissy Spacek and Jane Fonda in a display of mid-1980s art merging with mid-1980s reality. Ms. Spacek played a farm wife in the movie "The River" and Ms. Fonda played a rural woman in the TV special "The Dollmaker." Sally Fields, who won an Academy Award for her part as a farm woman in "Places of the Heart," sent a statement of support.

The actresses came to Washington to meet some of their real-life counterparts — rural women who are members of WIFE, Women Involved in Farm Economics. Then they testified before a House Democratic Task Force on Agriculture.

"My own personal connection to American agriculture goes beyond appearing in one of last year's 'farm' movies," said Sissy Spacek. "I am a product of rural America. I was born there. I grew up there. I was a 4-H'er. My mother was a homemaker. My father was a county agent in Texas for 30 years. My grandfather was a farmer and Deputy Agent of the Federal Farm Credit Administration under Franklin Roosevelt."

Speaking in a room packed with farm wives, congressional staffers, reporters, TV crews and members of Congress, Miss Spacek said she didn't come to defend rural Americans on "nostalgic grounds," but rather "to support them as the best and the wisest of farmers."

Congress is in the process of writing a 1985 farm bill. The Reagan administration has proposed a drastic reduction in the federal farm programs that have subsidized and regulated American agriculture since the Great Depression. Some Republicans criticized the Democrats for bringing in movie stars to dramatize the plight of the nation's farmers, many of whom are losing their land to debts and bad markets.

"Some say we seek publicity," said Rep. Tom Daschle, D-S.D., a Task Force member. "They are absolutely right. We seek publicity for the fact that thousands of lifelong farm families are being driven from their land."

"I want to simply say 'thank you'," said Rep. Lindsay Thomas, D-Ga., another Task Force.

Texas woman joins in farm testimony

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — A Hale County, Texas, woman, Mildred Brown, joined film and television actresses Monday in Washington to call attention to the economic pain being endured by thousands of farm families.

"Few farmers in Hale County showed profits in spite of producing excellent crops," Mrs. Brown said in a statement to the House Democratic Caucus Task Force on Agriculture.

The Texas president of a farm wives' group, "Women Involved in Farm Economics," Mrs. Brown joined counterparts from across the country in presenting local statistics to underscore reports of widespread financial trouble on family farms.

The number of acres farmed in Texas dropped by 200,000 in 1984 from the previous year, from 187 million to 186.8 million, Mrs. Brown reported, quoting Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service figures.

The dollar amount and number of Farmers Home Administration loans dropped this year. In fiscal 1984, beginning Oct. 1, 1983, FmHA reported 7,060 outstanding loans for $337.3 million. So far in fiscal 1985, from Oct. 1, 1984 to April 17, only 6,166 loans are outstanding, for $327.4 million.

In 1984, 57 percent of FmHA's loans were behind schedule; in 1985, that has dropped to 53 percent.

The Hale County Production Credit Association carried 240 loans in 1974 while a decade later, the farm credit group reported only 160 loans.

"The reason for the small number of farmer-borrowers is that most have little equity remaining in old equipment and, in many cases, little equity remaining in their land," Mrs. Brown reported.

Information about your changing telephone service from Darlene Gifford, Manager-Community Relations

Information Age booms in Texas

You've heard how during the Industrial Age people had a tendency to settle near major waterways and railroad hubs. Well, these days, it seems people are moving to the areas with the most efficient, up-to-date telecommunications systems. We've reached a period of time known as the Information Age.

How does the Information Age affect us as Texans and our working environment? We feel the economy of Texas will be greatly influenced by this revolution in telecommunications technology, possibly much in the same way as it was by the construction of roads and highways. At the core of this revolution in telecommunications, are businesses in Texas that are knowledge-intensive or what's known as high-tech industries.

These industries include businesses such as finance, research, education, medicine, electronic development and other business services. Many of you may have worked for or now work in one of these growing fields. These knowledge-intensive industries require a sophisticated telecommunications network. Just looking at the high-tech industries located in Texas gives you an indication of the telecommunications needs our customers demand.

An investment partnership

As you can probably imagine, keeping service at high levels and meeting customer needs, requires substantial investment. That's why Southwestern Bell Telephone is investing more than $1 billion in Texas this year, the eighth consecutive year our company has invested more than $1 billion in the state.

We want you to know that Southwestern Bell Telephone is committed to Texas and plays an important role in the overall economy of the state. For example, as of the end of 1984, we operated in 450 cities and towns statewide and served more than 80 percent of the state's telephone customers.

At the same time, we had a work force of 34,248, and we paid approximately $680 million in taxes.

Positioning company for the future

The primary reason we make such an investment in Texas is because of customers like yourself who want and expect quality telephone service in Texas.

And as technology changes our environment and lifestyles, it will be even more important to maintain the traditional quality of service. As customers of tomorrow, you will expect things like shopping without leaving home, electronic mail, banking by telephone and a host of other services — some which are not even invented yet.

We at Southwestern Bell Telephone want to be in a position to provide those services. By continuing the investment and community partnership with Texas, the future will be here before you know it.

House expected to reject Senate version of spending bill

AUSTIN (AP) — It was the Texas House's turn today to act on the state's spending budget for 1986-87.

Senators approved their $36.8 billion version of the next two years' appropriations Monday after first passing a $220 million increase in state fees to help pay for it.

The House was expected to reject the Senate version and ask for a 10-member conference committee to work out a compromise.

One of the outstanading issues between the two versions is a $263 million pay raise for state employees, which was approved by the House bill but not by the Senate.

However, the Senate instructed its five negotiators to "make every possible attempt" to squeeze out a 3 percent annual pay raise in their compromise talks.

The Texas Public Employees Association, which represents 180,000 state workers, has already threatened to kill the conference committee report if it does not have the raise.

"We have enough support to defeat the appropriations bill and force a special session," TPEA executive director Gary Hughes said after Monday's Senate vote.

Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, stressed Monday the appropriations bill could not be financed unless lawmakers finally approved the fees increase, and two pending bills to increase college tuition and reduce retirement contributions to teachers and state employees.

"We are offering this bill as being certifiable (by the comptroller) on the assumption about $700 million in these other measures bill be approved," Jones said.

The Senate version, which passed 27-3, compares with a $36.4 billion bill approved earlier by the House.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said he thought a general tax bill could be evaded this session and Speaker Gib Lewis said he felt one major issue in compromise talks was the Senate failure to back up a House provision in the fees bill that would put a limit on state employess that could be hired.

Two important changes were made in the fees increase bill during Senate debate. It was approved 25-5.

One change, offered by the governor's office and then altered by Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, would increase the present $5.25 annual motor vehicle inspection fee to $7.75 a year. New car buyers would be required to pay $15 that would be good for two years.

The House made no change in the inspection fee but the Senate committee had recommended $9 a year.

Owner of Arabian horses having trouble getting money to feed herd

STATE

TOMBALL (AP) — A man who may inherit $5 million tried to borrow money illegally to feed his herd of starving Arabian horses, prosecutors say.

Alan B. Caliva of Houston is charged with tampering with a government document.

Prosecutors say he gave an altered document to a bank in a bid to borrow enough money to feed the horses. Judge John Hughes scheduled a hearing for June 7.

"Sometimes, I've had to write hot checks just to feed them. It's been a nightmare," Caliva said. "I've wanted to move them, but I have no place to take them. And the owners of the stables won't let them go until they're paid."

The Houston Post reported Monday that 17 of a herd of 50 horses belonging to Caliva are near starvation at a stable near Tomball just north of Houston. Stable owner John T. Parkins says Caliva owes him about $20,000 in rent.

The newspaper said Caliva has sought protection from creditors under chapter 11 of the federal Bankruptcy Code.

Caliva was named as an heir in the will of a man he once cared for, a bequest that his lawyer says could be worth as much as $5 million. But he has no money until legal challenges to the will are settled, said attorney James Patrick Smith.

Caliva told the Post that his horses have gone without food for several days at a time.

"There's just been no money to feed them properly," he told the newspaper. "The banks won't lend me more for the horses until we pay them, but we can't pay them because I haven't been paid."

Smith said he and Caliva's other attorneys will see that the horses are cared for and fed.

Dr. Frank Martin, consultant to the Texas Animal Cruelty enforement division, checks two horses for starvation at a stable near Tomball.

The attorney said Caliva was named as an heir in the will of Frank Williams, who died in 1976. Williams and his wife, Vera, who died in 1983, were a wealthy couple who owned valuable land in Houston.

Caliva, who took care of the couple, said they lived in a rundown home that they shared with 40 dogs and dozens of cats.

Teen-age gang stealing cars, car parts for adults, authorities say

FORT WORTH (AP) — Police say a teen-age gang operating in the Dallas-Fort Worth area has been taking orders for cars and car parts from adults and then stealing automobiles to fill the orders.

Authorities say the operation has been going on for about two years and it's impossible to estimate the number of cars stolen by gang members.

On Monday, Fort Worth area police said they have identified 33 members of the gang.

Over a period of several months, investigators say they have filed cases against 20 of the youths, who told authorities they believed little would happen to them if they were caught because they are under the adult age of 17.

Fort Worth Detective Bill Steele said police here identified the ring about two years ago and have been cooperating in investigations with officials from Cleburne to Denton.

In the Fort Worth suburb of Burleson, Detective Bruce Fayette said 73 cars were stolen last year, and 11 have been taken this year.

Steele said it would be "hard to give a fair estimate" of the number of cars stolen in the Dallas-Fort Worth area by the teen gang.

Steele said the youngsters, who work out of an east Fort Worth neighborhood, take orders for cars or car parts from adults at three or four locations.

STATE IN BRIEF

Police identify solider killed in Austin park

AUSTIN (AP) — A Fort Hood soldier gunned down in an Austin city park has been identified at Keith Rice, 19, of Washington, D.C., police say.

Rice was killed in the Sunday night shooting which also injured two other soldiers, police said Monday.

Rice had been assigned to the 177th Field Artillery, First Cavalry Division at Fort Hood. Wounded were brothers Richard and Sidney Ruffin, who were in the same unit as Rice.

Rice was shot once in the left side of the chest, police said. Richard Ruffin, 21, had been shot three times with a small-caliber pistol and was in stable condition Monday at Brackenridge Hospital. Sidney Ruffin, 20, was shot once. He was treated and released from the hospital, police said.

Homicide Lt. Jim Baker said witnesses told officers that the three soldiers got into an argument with two men, one of whom pulled a pistol and shot all three soldiers. The gunman fled, but Baker said he came to police headquarters about 2 a.m. Monday and gave a statement to officers.

Fire allegedly arson

HOUSTON (AP) — Fire investigators say arson caused a blaze in a vacant building that once housed Texas' first nursing school for blacks.

The fire started about 2 a.m. Sunday in the building near downtown Houston after someone ignited trash in a stairwell, arson investigators said.

The blaze caused about $25,000 worth of damage to the building, which has been vacant since 1975, officials said.

The building was placed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1982 along with several other buildings in the adjacent Riverside Hospital complex. The buildings are slated for restoration in a $5 million project, said Vicki Minor, hospital spokeswoman.

Former judge acquitted

DALLAS (AP) — Former state District Judge Dee Brown Walker was acquitted of a misdemeanor assault charge after a judge ruled that prosecutors had not proved he knew when he touched a female lawyer that it would be offensive to her.

"You can't have an assault when the judge didn't know it was offensive or provocative," said retired state District Judge Thomas Crofts after the ruling Monday.

The decision came despite testimony from the 30-year-old female attorney that Walker, 72, was aware that she was not interested in his alleged sexual advances and professions of love for her two years ago.

Crofts decided the case after Walker's attorneys waived a jury trial.

Walker lost a bid for re-election in November after his indictment on three misdemeanor assault charges.

Teen found hanged in cell

PLAINVIEW (AP) — A 17-year-old high school student was found hanged in the city jail 4½ hours after his arrest on DWI charges, marking the second local jail death in less than a year, authorities said.

In a statement Monday, police said an officer discovered John Henry Velasquez hanging from a noose that had been fashioned from his shirt and tied to a horizontal bar in a detoxification cell.

Velasquez was found hanging at 11:05 p.m. Sunday. He had been arrested and charged with driving while intoxicated after police stopped his car about 5:30 p.m., according to Assistant Chief of Police Jerry Austin.

14 WEEKLY GAMES 10 QUESTIONS WEEKLY

GRAND PRIZE

Mississippi River Steamboat Cruise For Two

Includes Round Trip Air Travel To New Orleans For Two.

GAME RULES:

1) The Midland Reporter-Telegram A.M. 1510 KMND Trivia game is based on skill in answering 10 Trivia questions each week. There will be 14 weekly Trivia Games beginning Monday March 18th and ending Saturday June 22nd 1985. A total of $2,800.00 will be awarded to first place winners over the 14 weeks. Additionally, 2nd and 3rd prizes will be awarded weekly.

2) Questions for each weekly Trivia Game will be broadcast over AM 1510 KMND Radio at least 4 times per day on the half-hour Monday through Friday, between the hours of 6:00 AM and 6:00 P.M. Each question will be read at least two times during the week. The entire set of ten (10) questions each week will have been broadcast over AM 1510 KMND Radio by 6:00 PM Thursday.

3) Questions for each week's game will be numbered from 1 (one) to 10 (ten). The answer to each numbered question must be PRINTED or TYPED on the correspondingly numbered answer line in the official Midland Reporter-Telegram AM 1510 KMND Radio Trivia Game entry form for that week. Each weeks official entry form will be published Monday, Tuesday and Thursday in the Midland Reporter-Telegram. Hand drawn facsimilies of the entire official entry form also will be acceptable, but machine duplicated copies are prohibited.

4) Contestants may submit multiple entry forms each week. However, each entry form must be mailed postage paid to the designated address in a separate envelope with the number of the weekly game marked in the lower left hand corner of the envelope on the address side. Envelopes must be postmarked by midnight Friday of each week, and be received at the contest address by 2:00 PM of the following Tuesday to be eligible for the weekly drawing.

5) The $200.00 first prize will be awarded to the entrant with all 10 questions answered correctly each week. In the case of more than one entry with all 10 answers correct, a drawing will be held. 2nd and 3rd prizes will be awarded to the next 2 entrants with the most correct answers respectively. Again, in the case of more than one entry form with all 10 correct answers, drawings will be held to determine the 2nd and 3rd prize winners. In the case of no entrants with all 10 correct answers, the prizes will be awarded to those with the most correct answers respectively.

6) Correct answers to each weeks Trivia Game Questions will be broadcast twice on AM 1510 KMND Radio Saturday morning between 6:00 AM and Noon. Trivia Game questions and answers will also be published in the Midland Reporter-Telegram each Sunday. Weekly winners will be announced by both AM 1510 KMND Radio and the Midland Reporter-Telegram each Wednesday.

7) It is not necessary to purchase the Midland Reporter-Telegram to play the Trivia Game. Copies of the MRT are available for free examination at the Midland Reporter-Telegram 201 East Illinois and the Midland County Public Library.

8) All winners must sign a release form acknowledging that both the Midland Reporter-Telegram and AM 1510 KMND shall have the right to publish, publicize, and broadcast his/her name, picture, voice and the fact that he/she won the cash or prize. If a winner is a minor, a parent or guardian must sign a minor's release form prior to the prize being awarded. Winners are responsible for all taxes incurred on prize.

9) NO POSTAGE MACHINE CANCELLED ENVELOPES WILL BE ACCEPTED. Only entries bearing the correct postage and cancelled by the U.S. Postal service or entries hand delivered to the contest address by 6 a.m., Saturday will be accepted.

10) Judges decisions will be final in any interpretation of the rules of his game. Employees of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Bakcor broadcasting and members of their immediate families are ineligible.

11) The Grand prize, a 4 night cruise on the Mississippi River on the Delta Queen or Mississippi Queen departing and returning to New orleans including round trip air travel to New Orleans. The winner will be chosen in a drawing at the conclusion of the 14 week trivia game. All weekly 1st, 2nd and 3rd prize winners will be entered in the grand prize drawing.

NASA says spacelab crew 'best research tool in space'

NATION

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Challenger's space shuttle crew, faced with flying rodent food and faulty drinking fountains, proved man to be the best research tool in space, NASA says.

The crew of the 17th space shuttle mission emerged victorious after equipment breakdowns that plagued early stages of the week-long mission that ended with touchdown here Monday.

The stubby-winged space plane returned to Earth with a smooth landing at 12:11 p.m. on Southern California's Mojave Desert, emitting twin sonic booms that rattled windows and set off burglar alarms across Los Angeles.

The flight ushered in a new era of space research based on the success of experiments conducted in the $1 billion Spacelab module, said National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials and shuttle crew members.

"I think this science is what is going to make space pay for itself," said astronaut Frederick D. Gregory, Challenger's pilot. "Sooner or later, we are going to come back with stuff we never even dreamed of."

Challenger returned with a cargo of 24 rats and two squirrel monkeys, which were quickly unloaded and sent to Cape Kennedy, Fla. The rats will be decapitated and dissected. The monkeys will be studied.

The astronauts were sent to Houston for debriefings that began today.

Animal rights protesters greeted Challenger's return and condemned animal research in space, but NASA officials defended their treatment of the animals and said the research was important.

The most important developments from Challenger's flight involved the human factor, said Burton Edelson, associate administrator for science and applications in the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The seven-man crew faced early problems in the mission that hampered five of 15 experiments.

The problems ranged from rat food and feces that flew out of cages to an airlock that frustrated an astronomy experiment. A crew drinking fountain also failed.

Each time, the astronauts and ground crew solved the problems.

Finally, 14 of the 15 experiments were successful because of human ingenuity, said Jesse Moore, NASA's associate administrator for space flight.

"This is what this program is all about," he told reporters after the landing. "We have demonstrated once again the value of people in space."

"It goes to show the most versatile computer you can build is a human being," said astronaut Don Lind.

The spacelab returned with a wealth of data, including a crystal grown in space, which may be useful in computer research.

Other data included miles of film and three million frames of videotape.

Another breakthrough was the short turnaround time achieved, with two shuttle missions having been completed within 24 days, Moore said. Space shuttle Discovery landed April 18.

The Challenger landed in California because during Discovery's landing at Cape Kennedy in April, a tire burst and a brake locked. NASA officials wanted to land Challenger on the dry lake bed in the desert while the braking problem is studied and because of the weight of Spacelab.

Despite the problems that badgered crew members early in the flight, the astronauts and scientists said they enjoyed their 2.9 million-mile flight, which consisted of 109 orbits.

Reported cases of salmonella near 16,000

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — State officials say a six-state outbreak of salmonella food poisoning has stricken nearly 16,000 people, and medical authorities still don't know how milk blamed for the outbreak became tainted.

Figures updated Monday by local health authorities show 15,816 reported cases of salmonella, all but 1,500 of them confirmed, said Dr. Bernard Turnock, acting director of the Illinois Public Health Department.

Salmonella cases were reported in Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, Michigan, Iowa and Minnesota.

Lawyer says lie detector test results may help in clemency hearing for Dotson

CHICAGO (AP) — Attorneys seeking a new trial and clemency for Gary Dotson are buoyed by a lie detector test that an expert says affirms Dotson never met a woman who now claims she falsely accused him of rape.

Although the results of Monday's test are not allowed as evidence in court, they could weigh in Dotson's favor in a clemency hearing before the Illinois Prisoner Review Board on Thursday. Dotson's lawyers were to argue for a new trial today in Circuit Court.

Dotson was asked five questions about his relationship with Cathleen Crowell Webb, said polygraph expert Robert C. Cummins. Dotson's answers indicate he had nothing to do with her on the day of the alleged attack, or any time before, Cummins said.

Mrs. Webb, 23, now of Jaffrey, N.H., said in March she had lied when she accused Dotson of raping her in 1977, when she was 16. She said she made up the story because she feared she was pregnant and wanted to prevent her foster parents' learning that she had had sex with another teen-ager.

Dotson, 28, who has served six years in prison, was freed briefly last month then returned to prison after a judge found Mrs. Webb's new story unconvincing.

The petition before Circuit Judge Richard Fitzgerald for a new trial is based on the argument that Dotson's conviction was won on faulty medical testimony and the words of Mrs. Webb.

Terry Levin, a spokesman for the state's attorney's office, refused Monday to say what the prosecution's response will be to the petition.

Cummins said he "firmly believed" Dotson told the truth when he said he had never seen Mrs. Webb before she accused him of raping her in 1977.

"In my opinion he's telling the truth," Cummins said in a telephone interview.

Cummins also administered a lie detector test to Mrs. Webb last month. He said he believed she told the truth when she answered 10 questions centering on whether she had physical or sexual contact with Dotson.

Don't forget

President Reagan's controversial visit to the Bitburg cemetery is history now and, all in all, it must be written off as a political blunder of major proportion. The president's meaning in going to Bitburg may have been misinterpreted, but the wounds of war can't merely be laid aside; they run too deep.

Certainly most Americans recognize that the president must play to any number of audiences — allies still smarting from wartime animosity, Jews who recall vividly the horrors of the Holocaust, American veterans who watched that part of the world burn four decades ago and Americans who lost loved ones in a fight that, today, seems almost meaningless. It wasn't, of course.

There's an old saying that applies to the Bitburg visit: A lot of water has passed under the bridge of World War II and Nazi Germany, but not enough to wash away the memories. Those memories will linger for ages to come.

After the controversy arose with the realization there would be Nazi SS graves in the cemetery Reagan would visit and that his "blessing" of those graves via his visit to promote reconciliation with West Germany, there was no political "out" for Reagan. Had he canceled the visit, he would have offended West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl. By making the visit, he offended any number of Americans who vividly recall the hatred of Nazi Germany and Adolph Hitler's dreaded SS, and the horrors of the Holocaust.

To make the best of a bad situation, Reagan made the visit to the Bitburg cemetery and spoke words that were fitting, saying "we will never forget" the horrors of the Holocaust.

Reagan could have made that point without visiting Bitburg and reopening the old wartime wounds. He is correct in asserting, of course, that by holding onto the hatred of World War II, the move toward improved relations with West Germany is hampered.

And more than a few Americans will agree it's time to put the past — the hatred — to rest. Put it to rest, but don't forget the horrors of the Holocaust, a world at war and a people caught up in hate. Those are ravages that can't — shouldn't — ever be forgotten.

The world doesn't prevent recurrences by forgetting. It prevents recurrences by remembering.

European moonscape

One of the best kept secrets behind the Iron Curtain has been the devastation wreaked by acid rain in East Germany, Poland Czechoslovakia and the Balkans.

The horror stories, however, are beginning to reach Western Europe. In Poland, the faces of 900-year-old statues are washing away like sugar. Many of the once-verdant hills of northern Czechoslovakia appear to have been charred by forest fires. In some parts of Romania and Yugoslavia, the polluted air is disintegrating women's stockings. The Polish city of Krakow is resigned to the inevitability that all plant life there will be dead by 1990.

In the Kremlin-inspired race to achieve industrial superiority over the Western democracies, Communist Czechoslovakia and East Germany have been burning brown, or low grade, coal in their factories. This spews higher concentrations of sulfur dioxide than hard black coal and the cramped boundaries of the area have intensified the problem.

The people behind the Iron Curtain can only wait silently for disaster to overtake them and nod in agreement when their Communist bosses asserted that pollution is strictly a capitalist evil. But the neighboring states of West Germany and Austria are alarmed by the threat.

North America happily has the land mass than can aid the dissipation of pollutants and American pollution control standards are among the world's most stringent. But the United States and Canada should take a hard look at the experience in Eastern Europe while they consider what should be done to attack this problem within their own borders, believed to be responsible for stunting forest development.

Another View:

Sky-high pork barrel

The Reagan administration has apparently devised a foolproof way of ensuring that it can lock in its multibillion-dollar Star Wars space-based anti-missile system without having to go through the long and difficult job of trying to prove the program on its own merits. The method: Turn Star Wars into a pork barrel of Congress and the aerospace industry.

According to a study by the Council on Economic Priorities, about 77 percent of all the research and development funds for Star Wars since 1983 has gone to states and districts whose representatives are on the House and Senate committees that must approve funds for the program. By spreading around the R&D projects to most of the major aerospace firms — including McDonnell Douglas, Boeing, Lockheed, Rockwell, TRW, Teledyne and the like — the administration makes sure that Congress has a vested interest in keeping the program going.

The report also warns that Star Wars is rife with potential for conflicts of interest because the contractors "standing to gain the most from deployment of some form of strategic defense have been assigned the technical feasibility and strategic advisability of proceeding beyond the research and development phase."

Since no one really knows how much the Star Wars system could cost — estimates range from tens of billions of dollars to $1 trillion — this pork barreling of the program creates a potential for gross abuse that would make the current scandals involving Pentagon arms procurement cost overruns and open-ended contracts pale in comparison.

JACK ANDERSON

Companies misuse maritime fund

WASHINGTON — Shipping companies have avoided millions of dollars in federal taxes and the Maritime Administration may have violated the law to let them do it, according to the Transportation Department's inspector general.

Jack Anderson

The vehicle for these unintended tax breaks is the Capital Construction Fund Program, created in 1971 to help U.S. shipping firms raise money to expand their merchant fleets. The companies could defer income tax on deposits they made to the fund, then draw against the money when they decided to build more ships.

The program was designed to encourage the companies to compete in international trade routes with other countries' merchant fleets. And the law is explicit in allowing withdrawals from the fund only for building ships that will carry goods to and from the United States. But the IG found that Maritime had allowed the companies to use the fund for ships that were engaged in unqualified operations.

The result was a multi-million-dollar tax dodge permitted by the Maritime Administration, according to the IG. In profitable years, the shipping companies would dump money into the construction fund to cut down on their taxes. In the lean years, little or no deposits were made because "they would not result in a tax savings."

By rights, they should have paid the deferred taxes if they used the money for unqualified ships. But in practice, Maritime approved the questionable withdrawals, the IG found.

More than $173 million in withdrawals was found by the IG to have been used to build ships not authorized by the law. "Up to $79.9 million in government revenue was lost as unpaid deferred taxes on the withdrawals," according to the IG report, which was obtained by our associates Corky Johnson and Donald Goldberg. And assuming a 10 percent cost of borrowing to make up this lost tax revenue, "the U.S. Treasury's annual financing cost increased by up to $7.9 million," the IG pointed out.

"There is no assurance (the) deferred taxes will ever be collected," the IG report states, adding: "While such tax deferral-avoidance benefits make this program very popular with the companies involved, the benefits being received are far greater than those intended."

Maritime officials vehemently dispute the IG's contention, insisting that the shipping companies eventually do pay back the tax money. But for various reasons — changes in tax laws or collapse of shipping companies — the agency's statement "that 'deferred taxes are recouped with no loss to the government' is just not correct," the IG stated.

The evolution of the construction fund into a tax shelter — with Maritime's blessing — was made clear in one example cited by the IG: A company that had never made a deposit to the fund suddenly dumped in $10.4 million with the agency's approval. This enabled the company "to avoid additional taxes assessed by the Internal Revenue Service."

The tax-deferral system was described by the IG report as unfair to "taxpayers in general who must make up for the additional interest costs and the unpaid taxes."

The IG cited as an example of unauthorized ships built with the fund 55 vessels costing $97 million for use in oil service in Africa, Mexico, South America and the Middle East by Houston Natural Gas Corp. of Texas. Tidewater Inc. of Louisiana and Nicor Inc. of Illinois, also used the fund to build ships for operations that were not qualified, according to the IG. The Maritime Administration approved all the withdrawals.

"Fund benefits were just not intended to aid in the acquisition of such supply vessels," the IG wrote.

Footnote: Spokesmen for Tidewater Inc. and Houston Natural Gas Corp. had no comment. A Nicor spokesman said his firm had adhered to Maritime Administration regulations. A Maritime spokesman did not respond to our request for comment.

MONEY MATTERS: The Treasury is seriously studying a change in the size and color of U.S. paper currency. One reason for a change would be to flush bundles of cash out of hiding in the underground economy — mainly from drug dealers, but also professionals and others who deal strictly in cash to avoid taxes.

If the currency is changed, these tax cheaters would either have to explain their possession of the old money or not turn it in for exchange. Either way, the government would make money.

— Big Brother is watching ... TV. The ever-suspicious Internal Revenue Service has extended its monitoring of radio stations to include television as well. What the revenooers want to find out, as we reported earlier, is whether the broadcasters are actually running IRS public-service announcements they've been given.

Buchanan 'crisis' besets Reagan

WASHINGTON — A demand by congressional Republicans that chief of staff Donald T. Regan "find and fire" any White House leakers against Communications Director Pat Buchanan has escalated the top-level political crisis with which President Reagan must deal immediately upon his return from Europe.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The letter from 10 House right-wing populists who comprise the hard core of Reaganism on Capitol Hill was sent to the White House even before the disclosure of Buchanan's jottings at a White House meeting on Bitburg. Those jottings turned up the steam of the anti-Buchanan campaign by spreading the calumny of anti-Semitism against him when in fact he is a pro-Israel stalwart.

The political issue involved, however, is not anti-Semitism, which is only another weapon used to beat Buchanan. Nor is his refusal thus far to return the phone calls of most reporters. His problem is being viewed by critics, in the administration and the news media, as "not protecting the president from his worst instincts" (a phrase used last week by Laurence Barrett, Time's White House correspondent). Non-Reaganites credit the president's first-term success to just such protection by "pragmatic" aides.

Specifically at stake is the direction Reagan will take in U.S.-Soviet relations, which Buchanan views as the transcendent second-term issue. Although Buchanan is indisputably confrontational, that thread is deeply woven into Reagan's own inclinations. However, the president's two chief foreign policy advisers, Secretary of State George Shultz and National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane, are accommodationists.

Therein lies the significance of the toughly-worded six-sentence letter drafted by Reps. Dan Lungren and Newt Gingrich. The co-signers (among whom are five members of the House Foreign Affairs and Armed Services Committees) represent a rising force in the GOP that includes Reps. Vin Weber, Bob Walker, Henry Hyde and Connie Mack.

It was they who insisted that their leadership in the House reject the accommodationist approach for giving aid to anti-communist Nicaraguan rebels, an approach McFarlane and Shultz were prepared to accept. Their White House ally was Pat Buchanan, with whom they agree on confrontation.

"We understood that your policy was no back-stabbing, gossiping leaks by your staff," the congressmen wrote Regan, but now "it is very clear" that Buchanan is being victimized by leaks. "We urge you to find the leakers and fire them. If no one talked to Lou Cannon (the Washington Post's White House reporter), bar him from the White House .... This country's attention should be focused on the danger of communism in Central America, not confusion in the White House."

The respected and authoritative Cannon reported April 27 that "senior officials" fear "Buchanan's combativeness will ruin" Reagan's support on foreign policy issues. Three days later he quoted an unnamed official as saying that Buchanan had argued hard for Reagan to give a speech at Strasbourg this week more fitting for "the American Legion in Philadelphia" than the European Parliament.

Buchanan may have few White House allies, but his enemies there are legion. His political friends are on the outside, and they blame outgoing deputy chief of staff Michael Deaver as a key leaker — a claim supported by inside aides and blessed with a double motive.

First, Deaver needed a scapegoat for his mistakes on Bitburg. Second, Deaver's hope to push Reagan toward detente with the new Soviet high command is jeopardized by Buchanan's proximity to Reagan.

Deaver was present during the dispute over the Strasbourg speech, just before flying to Europe in a last futile effort to cancel the Bitburg visit. The reference to "the American Legion in Philadelphia" seems to fit Deaver's lack of familiarity with issues. The speech in question was described to us by other officials as "nothing like" a Legion speech.

In fact, State Department-NSC staff opposition to the Strasbourg draft resulted from fear that its emphasis on free market economics could be construed as preaching to the Europeans. Similar complaints about drafts of foreign policy speeches have been customary from the Foreign Service bureaucracy for the past four years, long before Buchanan returned to the White House. The difference is that this time the conflicts are being leaked in an effort to weaken Buchanan.

The real goal of his foes, however, is clear: not just to weaken but to destroy Buchanan and remove him from the White House. The letter from Capitol Hill shows that destruction-by-leak is not going to be all that easy. It also poses some hard post-European choices for the president and his chief of staff.

LETTERS

Methods, 'out of line'

On April 26, 1985, three of us in our company witnessed an arrest of a drunk at the Paragon building. All of us are in no way a bleeding heart liberal, but some of the methods used by the two arresting officers were clearly out of line.

No doubt the man was being a public pain in the neck, but we doubt that he was as life-threatening as a lot of people around town that make a habit out of racing through red lights and turn arrows that have cycled out. During the whole episode we did not see the man make one threatening move. In fact he appeared to be very cooperative.

Upon initial contact the officer frisked the man and then walked him to the patrol car. At this time a second officer arrived. The man was made to lean on the trunk of the patrol car and spread his legs out behind him. At this time one of the officers grabbed him in the groin area and jerked his feet into the air and back. We wonder if they would have done the same to a woman or the mayor if they had been found drunk in public.

At this point he was frisked again, and then they pushed him down on the car trunk. One officer held his head pinned to the hot trunk by his forearm pressed against the man's neck while the other officer put on the handcuffs. This episode took about three minutes, and it looks to us as though someone needs some training in the art of attaching handcuffs.

Police officers get tired of dealing with drunks and the courts letting them off scot free, but we do not think they should take it on themselves to apply punishment. Had the man made any effort to fight, this letter would not have been written. If anything, it appeared that he was being about as cooperative in his condition as he could be. There may have been some exchange of words, but verbal abuse gives no one the right to counter with physical abuse.

School guards deserve praise

We've heard everything discussed in this column, but nothing about the school crossing guards. They protect our children and grandchildren crossing the streets at schools Monday through Friday all over town.

I'd like to tell you about one in particular. She is Arlene Johnson at Travis Elementary School on the southeast side of town. She is always on the job watching and guiding the vehicles as well as the children, telling each when to go or to stop, or which way to turn. She walks out in the middle of the street or across the street if needed to help children or to hold some of their hands as they cross the street.

Personally, I think she is one of the best and most dedicated I've ever seen and I've seen a lot of them! I see and watch her every evening.

City's people 'cooperative'

I have never encountered a city so universally receptive and cooperative as Midland has been to our SESAME STREET LIVE! show. It may interest your community to know that the Chaparral Center is one of the most efficiently run arenas that we play all year.

Our association with the Reporter-Telegram has been outstanding! Additionally, I would like to extend a special thank you to KMID-TV, KWES radio, KNFM radio, McDonald's, Safeway, The Midland National Bank, J.C. Penny's, the Midland Fire Department and, last but not least, to all the people of Midland and the surrounding area for their support of our show.

Big Bird, Cookie Monster, Grover, Bert & Ernie, and all of their Sesame Street friends are looking forward to seeing you all next year with a brand new show!

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, May 7, the 127th day of 1985. There are 238 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On May 7, 1945, Germany signed an unconditional surrender at Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters in Rheims, France, that was to take effect the next day, ending the European stage of World War II.

On this date:

In 1789, the first inaugural ball was held in New York in honor of President and Mrs. George Washington.

In 1825, Italian composer Antonio Salieri died.

In 1833, composer Johannes Brahms was born in Hamburg, Germany.

An unidentified Vietnam veteran weeps at the Vietnam veterans memorial in New York City Monday evening as New York officially welcomed Vietnam veterans home with a fireworks-studded dedication of the memorial in lower Manhatttan.

Vietnam vets memorial dedication brings tears, embraces, outrage

NEW YORK (AP) — Thousands of Vietnam veterans who returned home to indifference or worse gathered in wheelchairs, military fatigues and business suits to help dedicate the city's memorial to those who fought in Southeast Asia.

Today, an estimated 20,000 veterans will get the homecoming they never received a decade ago when the last Americans left Vietnam. A tickertape parade is planned across the Brooklyn Bridge into the "Canyon of Heroes" in Wall Street.

About 8,000 Vietnam veterans came together Monday night for the lighting of a 70-foot-long, 16-foot-high glass wall etched with the names and words of some of those who served in Vietnam.

About 50 veterans, several in wheelchairs, rushed the wall. One rested his head against it, sobbing uncontrollably.

Another leaned against the wall and stared blankly for several minutes as fireworks exploded over the East River to celebrate the war memorial.

Many who descended on the newly named Vietnam Veterans Plaza were wearing black armbands and black jackets to remember 2,247 American soldiers still listed as missing in action.

For Betty Perko, tracing her son's name on the glass meant solace at last.

Terry Perko, 20, a lance corporal from Maple Heights, Ohio, was fatally shot in the throat on Feb. 21, 1967, by a sniper in Vietnam.

"I guess I can finally get on with my life," said Mrs. Perko, 59, touching Terry's name on the frosted wall as if she were touching her son again. "It's just hard to see those words there, 'killed in action.' It's so final."

Perko's name appears on the wall along with a letter that then-Cpl. John Houghton, now a tugboat deckhand in Camden, N.J., wrote to Mrs. Perko upon hearing of his war colleague's death.

Excerpts from the letter, etched in the wall with 82 others, said:

"We are all afraid to die, and all we do is count the days till we go home. ... I want to hold my head between my hands and run screaming away from here. I'm hollow Mrs. Perko. I'm a shell and when I'm scared, I rattle. I'm no one to tell you about your son Terry. I can't, I'm sorry."

Mrs. Perko, fighting tears, said she never could write Houghton to thank him for the poignant letter: "I just couldn't. I never could answer him."

Police chief still contends Lucas guilty of Scharp murder

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Police still consider the murder nearly seven years ago of a 26-year-old Brigham Young University coed the work of Henry Lee Lucas, the self-styled serial killer who now claims he confessed to hundreds of crimes he never committed.

Provo police closed the books on Maria Rae Scharp's June 29, 1978, sexual assault and suffocation after Lucas signed a confession to the crime in his Texas jail cell in February 1984.

Last month, Lucas, who has been convicted of two Texas murders including the death of his common-law wife, Freida Loraine Powell, recanted most of his 600-plus confessions in interviews with two Dallas Times Herald reporters.

At different times, he has maintained he is responsible only for the death of his mother or for the deaths of three people — his mother, Ms. Powell and 80-year-old Kate Rich, with whom he said he lived in 1982.

Provo Police Chief Swen Nielsen said the confession obtained by his investigators was backed by Lucas' confirmation of details about the murder which only the killer could have known.

Nielsen said two Provo detectives reviewed with Lucas 33 specific points about Miss Scharp's killing and, without being coached, he recalled many of them.

Among the details were the tearing of Mormon temple garments worn by the victim, removal of her shoes, theft of her wallet and the cause of death.

NATION IN BRIEF

Execution date delayed becausecof appeals

CINCINNATI (AP) — A Sept. 4 execution date for convicted murderer Alton Coleman, who authorities say teamed with Debra Brown in a six-state spree of robberies, beatings and killings, will be delayed due to automatic appeals.

"The community cries out for justice," Hamilton County Common Pleas Judge Richard Niehaus said Monday in sentencing Coleman, 29, of Waukegan, Ill., for the July 13 bludgeoning death of Marlene Walters.

Ms. Brown also was convicted in the Walters murder by a separate Hamilton County Common Pleas jury last week. She could face life imprisonment at her May 14 sentencing.

Police say man unattentive

NORWICH, N.D. (AP) — A state highway worker killed when his truck was struck by an Amtrak train apparently caused the accident due to inattention, a state policeman said.

Gerald O. Huus, 52, of Minot died Monday when his truck crossed the tracks in front of the Empire Builder train, en route from Chicago to Seattle and Poreland, Ore., about 2 miles east of Norwich, said Mick McIntyre, a highway patrolman in Minot.

None of the train's 117 passengers and crew were hurt, authorities said. The train was delayed for two hours, said Debbie Marciniak, an Amtrak spokeswoman in Chicago.

Parents say words difficult

DECATUR, Ga. (AP) — Six of the 10 contestants were eliminated in the first round of the state spelling bee before parents complained that the words were too difficult and officials started over.

Cyndy Chan, 14, the winner, was among those at first eliminated Monday by words such as "morigeration," "peignoir," "anserous" and "zymosis," but won by spelling "rescind" correctly after her last competitor was eliminated.

"If it had not started over, there would have been problems," said Jim Williams, Georgia Association of Educators executive director. "The feeling is that the words were too difficult to begin with. The way it ended up, I think everyone felt it was fair."

Lawsuit unsuccessful

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — An unsuccessful lawsuit by a Princeton University student expelled for cheating was the first challenge to the school's 92-year-old honor system, university officials said.

U.S. District Judge Harold Ackerman said Monday the Ivy League school's honor code and procedures were "adequate to safeguard a student from being unfairly convicted of cheating."

The student, Robert Clayton of Lutherville, Md., who had filed $500,000 lawsuit, later returned to Princeton and successfully completed his studies. He graduated in 1982 with a 3.8 grade point average out of a possible 4.0.

Attorney cited for contempt

CINCINNATI (AP) — A contempt citation against an attorney who says he failed to show up to defend a client because of a case of "the screaming itches" was an appropriate response to provocative conduct, an appeals court ruled.

The 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals decided Monday that U.S. District Judge Ann Aldrich in Cleveland was proper in slapping the contempt citation and $1,800 fine on attorney Leonard Jaques.

PUBLIC NOTICE

AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc. ("AT&T Communications"), in accordance with the Public Utility Regulatory Act and the rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas ("PUC") hereby gives notice of its intent to implement a new schedule of rates for its services. The new rates will be effective May 14, 1985, unless otherwise determined by the PUC. All customers and classes of customers would be affected by the proposed rates.

AT&T Communications has filed a reprice of its tariffs designed to more closely recover access and other costs for WATS and 800 Service and all private line services including Channel Services, Foreign Exchange (FX), DATAPHONE® Digital Service, and OCC Facilities.

Also proposed is the institution of a charge for Directory Assistance to begin to recover access costs incurred for such service and increases in rates for operator assisted AT&T Long Distance calls. The initial minute charge for all AT&T Long Distance calls and additional minute rates for AT&T Long Distance calls 51 miles or less are proposed for increases to reflect the access charges approved by the PUC for such calls.

The proposed new rates for all services would result in an increase in adjusted test period revenues of $139 million or 12.7 percent.

A complete copy of the proposed tariffs are on file with the Texas Public Utility Commission.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene or participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information also may be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Hot summer-like weather hangs over Midland

From Staff and Wire Reports

Those lazy days of summer are finally here to stay. The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is predicting continued hot and sunny days ahead.

The temperature should cool down to the middle 60s tonight with the winds coming out of the southeast at 5-10 mph.

Wednesday will be another day suited for swimming pool aficionados. The mercury will soar to the low 90s. Winds will blow out of the southeast at 10-20 mph.

No precipitation is in the forecast, keeping the year's total at 2.27 inches.

Record high for a May 6 is 103 degrees set in 1947, and Monday's 97 fell several degrees short of matching that record. The overnight reading of 64 also failed to match the record low for a May 7 of 42 degrees recorded in 1933.

STATE

Showers and thunderstorms triggered by a mixture of moist, unstable air and a stationary front threatened to spread eastward across North Texas and southwestward across portions of West Texas today.

Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms were reported at dawn across the Panhandle and forecasters said the activity will likely spread eastward across the state as well as around much of West Texas.

The stationary front extended at dawn from central Oklahoma across the Panhandle into northern New Mexico.

It was to be partly cloudy and warm statewide today and Wednesday. Highs were to be mostly in the 80s, ranging upward to near 90 in South Texas and to as high as near 100 in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas. Lows tonight will be mostly in the 60s and 70s. Highs Wednesday should again be mosty in the 80s and low 90s.

NATION

Thunderstorms skipped across the nation from the Atlantic Coast to the heartlands today after a tornado, heavy rain and baseball-sized hail hit the southern Plains.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered along the north Atlantic Coast, across the mid-Atlantic states, the central and southern Plains and the middle Mississippi Valley.

Rain was widely scattered across the Ohio Valley, southeast Minnesota and the northern Rockies.

Assault and battery

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

When the Dodgers and Angels get together out in California, it's called the Freeway Series.

There isn't even an Interstate between Midland and San Antonio, but the way the both teams have hit the ball in the first three games, the Texas League counterpart could be called The Flyway Series.

Midland's Angels lashed out 19 hits, including three homers, to win 18-5 Monday night and Bingo Night, as well as anything, probably describes what is in store for the fans tonight in the resumption of the five-game brawl.

This rivalry is beginning to resemble one of those good Saturday matinee 'B' westerns starring Randolph Scott or Ward Bond or Lash LaRue, the kind you waited for all week. Both teams get nailed with the haymakers launched from the balcony and keep getting up. Midland won the opener 17-1 Saturday. San Antonio slugged the Angels with six homers, 11-4, Sunday and now this....

THIRD BASEMAN Bill Merrifield, two homers, double and sacrifice fly good for six runs batted in, was the round house wallop that floored the Dodgers. Merrifield's three-run homer capped a seven-run second which never even got started until after two were out.

Off to a slow start in April, Merrifield took an "it's about time" attitude. "That's the way I'm supposed to hit. I'm swinging at better pitches. Up until now I've been getting myself out a lot.

"This is how I hit last year at Peoria," a 29-homer, 97 rbi season. "And I had a slow start then, too. I was hitting .210 then hit my first homer and it just started to snowball."

Merrifield hit his first homer Saturday night, but his double off the green monster in center would have been a homer in any other direction.

The Angels collected four doubles and a triple in the carnage and every batter in the lineup had a hit, well, two hits, except for Kevin Davis, who was limited to a triple. And the only batter without an rbi was Tito Nanni.

Between the alarms and excursions sounded by the Angel offense, lefthanders Ken Angulo and Eddie Delzer combined for an 11-hitter to give Midland a 2-1 edge in the series.

Bucs' tough luck hurler, DeLeon, takes it on chin

Associated Press

Jose DeLeon continues to remain an enigma to himself and to the Pittsburgh Pirates.

"I finally get a lead and there it goes without anybody even hitting the ball," DeLeon said after his wildness allowed the San Francisco Giants to rally past the Pirates 7-5 Monday night.

The loss dropped DeLeon to 0-5 this season. He has dropped 14 of 15 games over the past two years despite several sparkling outings during that span.

The major problem he's encountered has been a lack of support. When he went 7-13 last season, Pittsburgh was shut out in six of the losses and scored just one run in five other defeats.

When the Pirates gave DeLeon a 3-2 lead going into the sixth inning against San Francisco, it was the first time he had been in front this season.

BUT DELEON, who struck out nine in the first five innings, allowed the first five batters to reach base in the sixth, three on walks, as the Giants scored four times for a 6-3 lead.

"Jose has all the stuff in the world — you have to in order to strike out nine in five innings — but he got a lead and he was too fine, too tentative," said Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner.

Chili Davis walked to start the San Francisco sixth but was picked off first by catcher Tony Pena. DeLeon then walked Gary Rajsich and Bob Brenly around Chris Brown's infield single to load the bases.

Jose Uribe singled home Rajsich and then Scot Thompson, batting only .139, cracked a two-run single off reliever Cecilio Guante. Uribe then scored on Dan Gladden's grounder.

Bill Laskey, 1-3, pitched five innings for the victory. The Pirates scored twice in the seventh off reliever Greg Minton to pull within 6-5 before Brenly homered — his third — in the eighth to give the Giants a 7-5 margin.

Pittsburgh tried to come from behind in the ninth against reliever Mark Davis, putting runners on second and third with two outs.

Scott Garrelts was then summoned from the bullpen to face Bill Madlock. Garrelts induced Madlock to pop up for the final out and his second save.

"If you had brought me into this game last year, I would have been timid," Garrelts said. "This year I've changed and I feel comfortable. I want to get into the game. Last year, I didn't. I just went to the ballpark to show up."

Dodgers 5, Cubs 4

Mike Scioscia belted a two-run homer in the ninth inning off Chicago reliever Lee Smith to send the game into extra innings, and an error by rookie shortstop Shawon Dunston enabled Los Angeles to score the tie-breaking run in the 10th at Wrigley Field.

Candy Maldonado singled off Ray Fontenot, 0-1, to start the 10th and took third on a single by Ken Landreaux. Pedro Guerrero then hit a grounder that skipped past Dunston, allowing Maldonado to score. Mike Marshall bounced an RBI single past Chicago's drawn-in infield to make it 5-3.

Ron Cey homered for the Cubs to lead off the bottom of the 10th. Ken Howell, 2-1, got the victory.

Cardinals 5, Padres 2

Willie McGee went 4-for-4, including two doubles, to lead host St. Louis over San Diego. McGee's second double was a run-scoring blow during a four-run fifth inning.

The Cardinals overcame a 2-0 deficit in the fifth against Eric Show, 3-2. Rookie Vince Coleman singled with one out and then stole his 18th and 19th bases of the season. Andy Van Slyke tripled home Coleman and Tom Herr cracked a double that tied it 2-2.

One out later, McGee lined his second double to send St. Louis ahead, and Terry Pendleton capped the rally with another RBI double.

Danny Cox, 2-1, went eight-plus innings for the victory.

Arkansas skips past Shreveport

Associated Press

Singles by Reuben Robles and Jose Rodriguez highlighted a six-run outburst in the seventh inning by Arkansas as the Travelers came from behind to take an 8-7 Texas League baseball victory over the Shreveport Captains.

In other Texas League action Monday night, Beaumont edged El Paso, 3-2, Midland whipped San Antonio, 18-5, and Jackson trounced Tulsa, 9-0.

Shreveport Captains starting pitcher Jack McKnight was breezing along with a 7-2 lead, having held Arkansas to five hits and two runs in the first six innings. He was lifted after the sixth inning and Arkansas jumped on Chuck Lusted for six runs and seven hits in the seventh inning.

Texas League

ROBLES DROVE in the tying run with a single and Rodriguez slugged home the winning run.

Luis Roman, 1-0, was the winning hurler for the Travelers. The loss was charged to Lusted, 1-4.

The Beaumont Golden Gators scored all their runs in the sixth inning in the 3-2 victory over the El Paso Diablos.

Ed Vosberg, 2-1, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Mike Birkbeck, 1-2.

Billie Merrifield had two homers and David Heath had a home run as the Midland Angels whipped the San Antonio Dodgers, 18-5. Midland scored seven runs in the bottom of the second inning and never trailed.

The Angels pounded out 19 hits and the Dodgers collected 11 hits.

Dan Cataline homered for San Antonio.

Ken Angulo was the winning pitcher. Mark Heuer was the loser.

Dave Masaden had a double and a single in the fourth inning as the Jackson Mets exploded for eight runs in a 9-0 victory over the Tulsa Drillers.

The Mets had six hits, two walks and took advantage of a Tulsa error in the fourth inning outburst.

The winning pitcher was Bill Fultz, 2-2. The loser was Barry Bass, 2-3.

Straightening his halo

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Daryl Sconiers, isn't he a California Angel? Well, he was, and someday soon he will be again, if all the right cards fall into the right places.

Sconiers, who has four years of major league experience behind him, joined the Midland Angels last Friday in Beaumont and is here on a 21-day rehabilitation program to get him back in shape to rejoin the first-place California club in the American League.

Until then, it is the Midland Angels which will reap the benefits from the powerful lefthanded bat of the tall, muscular first baseman.

This all came about, you see, because Sconiers' halo was, if not knocked off, at least tilted ajar for a while this spring. Rather than report to spring training in Mesa, Az., with the rest of the well-scrubbed California Angel ballclub this March, Sconiers checked into a substance abuse rehabilitation center in California.

The proverbial Angel with a dirty face.

"It was something that lingered with me for the last eight or nine months, something that was there for a while," Sconiers admitted. "It really started to get bad when I was hurt much of last season. As far as controlling it, it's not in my hands now. If you don't learn from something like this, you never will."

WHAT SCONIERS is trying to do now, is get the best of Texas League pitching. It's almost a deja vu for the 26-year-old who has already spent parts of four seasons in the major leagues.

In 1980, playing for El Paso, then California's entry in the Texas League, Sconiers tore up the bus circuit from Shreveport to El Paso with a league-leading .370 average, 187 hits and 296 total bases. Sconiers was the Angels franchise-saving "prospect." The heir apparent to aging Rod Carew at first base.

But something happened on the way to stardom. Maybe it was the major league curveball, maybe it was the platooning with future Hall of Famer Rod Carew he couldn't get used to, but Sconiers never hit the groove he was ticketed for in his first few years in the Bigs.

And in 1984, a psyatic back problem sidelined him the first three months of the season. It was then he seemed to fall into trouble.

"I guess you could say my idle time got the best of me," he says now.

Sconiers played in just 57 games for California last season, compiling a mediocre .244 average and a mere 17 RBI. A far cry from stardom.

Still a young man, and far from washed up, he is in Midland to straighten get his baseball career, and more importantly, his life, back on an even keel.

"I'VE GOT to get myself right, then think about the future. I'll tell you one thing, it really makes you stop and think about life. I don't just mean my life in baseball, I'm talking about life, man.

"No one ever said life was a bed of roses. Once you accept (the problem), it doesn't make it easier really, you just know you have to deal with it. I just have to take one day at a time."

The reality of day-to-day life in the minor leagues hit Sconiers quickly, after just one game at Beaumont with Midland, the team, including its newest Midland Angel, embarked on an all-night, 12-hour bus ride to the home park.

"It brought back a lot of memories," Sconiers said. "In the minors leagues, you can't get a consistent day-to-day pattern going. This is something I had to do. For me, this is a spring training to get myself back to the bigs. I've got a ways to go, I was working out about 10 days in Anaheim before coming down here. I've just gotta' play and work out the kinks in my body. Get the timing back. It's hard to say how long before I'm ready, I'll probably think I'm ready before (the front office) will."

ANGELS

Angulo, 2-2, lasted until the sixth when the Dodgers rallied for four runs. "That cut the score to 10-5," said Midland Manager Joe Maddon. "And the way the wind was blowing tonight, that was like a two-run lead. And Ken had thrown 108 pitches."

MADDON went on, "Deizer was superb. He threw only 32 pitches in 3 1/3 innings and that means he can go again tonight if we need him. Don't let his size fool you. He throws harder than it looks and that good breaking ball makes his fast ball that much more effective."

The 5-8 southpaw who pitched Fullerton State to the College World Series title last year lowered his ERA to 1.73, but California pitching coach Joe Coleman points out that's kind of high for Eddie.

"Last year at Peoria, he had a 1.34 ERA, then he went to Instructional ball in the fall and was 0.00 in 24 innings, even though he was facing some AAA players. That put him below 1.00 for the year. And in the field, he's like a fifth infielder."

For Maddon, the big thing was the seven-run rally with two out in the second. "I was really impressed. We've been able to do that several times this year. It shows anybody on this club can start a rally and anybody can maintain it."

Mark Heuer, a 13-5 pitcher at Vero Beach last year, had two out in the second when Dave Heath powered his second homer over the fence in left. Then Davis followed with his triple, White doubled, Dan Murphy singled, Reggie Montgomery doubled, Daryl Sconiers walked and Merrifield homered. Murphy and Sconiers, of course, were fined for breaking up a rally.

Murphy took solace in the fact that his three hits for the night stretched his consecutive game string to eight. Merrifield, who also made the defensive play of the game to turn extra bases for Dan Cataline into a routine out, stretched his streak to seven. Heath, meanwhile, has hit in eight of the last nine games.

Cataline hit a solo homer in the second and singled home another run in the sixth.

HALO-UCINATIONS—Second baseman Mark McLemore, the Player for the Month of April in the California Angels organization, sat out Monday's game as a result of a knee that is giving him pain. He'll miss tonight's game. Mark would rather be playing, since he's 5 for his last 8 at bats....Scott May 0-0 goes in tonight's 7 p.m. game against Doug McKenzie 0-2 for Midland....Murphy is 14 for 30 in his eight-game hitting streak....Devon White is 7-for-14....When Mark McLemore doubled home two runs Saturday night, Doug and Kevin Davis circled the bases like a couple of synchronized swimmers in a suspenseful chase. The big question was whether Kevin would pass Doug before the catcher reached the plate. Looks are deceiving, however. According to Doug, "I got a late start. I told Kevin in the dugout, 'See, you had to run as hard as you could just to keep up with me.'"

Rahal accepts challenge as Indy 500 front-runner

By STEVE HERMAN
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS—Four days into practice for the May 26 Indianapolis 500, Bobby Rahal has already topped the official track record. And he says there's more speed to come.

"We seemed to stop at a certain point, but we made a couple changes, and we're very happy," Rahal said after turning in a lap of 210.970 mph on Monday.

"We had a productive day, but there are more things to try. You want to go as fast as you can each day, but in a controlled manner," he said. "You want to make changes, but in an intelligent fashion, not just willy-nilly."

Rahal's top lap was one of four that bettered the previous fast speed in practice of 209.302 mph by Dick Simon last Saturday.

Mario Andretti, winner of the season's first race at Long Beach, scorched his new Cosworth-powered Lola around the Indianapolis Motor Speedway's 2½-mile track at 209.643 mph early in the afternoon, reinforcing his standing as one of the favorites for the pole position in Saturday's first round of qualifications.

BUT RAHAL, whose best previous lap was 208.913, matched Andretti with an identical lap at 209.643, then went even faster with laps of 209.741 and finally 210.970.

Roberto Guerrero, the runner-up to Rick Mears last year, tied Andretti's speed, and Herm Johnson beat both of them with a lap at 209.937 in the closing minutes of practice.

"It'll be a real interesting week," said Rahal. "The big speed difference will come from the ability to make your car different."

The official record, set in qualifications last year by Tom Sneva, is 210.689.

But Andretti, who has crashed in the race in each of the past three years, recorded the fastest unofficial practice speed in Indy history a year ago at 212.414.

Most drivers believe both the official and unofficial marks will easily be topped this year because of aerodynamic improvements on the bottom of the cars.

"I've always said there was no limit how fast they could go," said former driver Bobby Unser, a three-time winner who retired after his 1981 victory.

"THE DRIVERS aren't doing anything differently. They're only capable of so much. But they have to train themselves to changing circumstances. It's all these scientific things. They're getting better cars and they're going faster," said Unser, who was visiting the track on Monday.

"The problem with the rules is they can't foresee what's going to happen when they make them," Unser said of attempts to lower the speeds.

Others reaching 200 mph for the first time on Monday, besides Guerrero, were Mears, whose best lap was 201.748; two-time winner Gordon Johncock, who raised his top speed to 204.964; Al Unser Jr., Bobby's nephew and son of three-time winner Al Sr., who had a lap at 205.011; veteran Pancho Carter, who steadily climbed to 207.421; and Emerson Fittipaldi, who improved to 206.706.

Danny Ongais raised his top speed to sixth on the practice list so far, just behind Simon with a lap at 209.253.

OTHERS WHO had reached 200 earlier and improved their speeds on Monday included Sneva, up to 205.855; Danny Sullivan, now at 207.277; three-time winner Johnny Rutherford, who raised his best lap to 206.253; Geoff Brabham, to 206.091; and Bill Whittington, to 207.086.

Kelly leads 45-7 rout over hapless Breakers

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore.—Portland Coach Dick Coury says you won't find a better quarterback than Jim Kelly or a faster football team than the Houston Gamblers.

The combination of Kelly's arm and the Gamblers' blazing speed overwhelmed Coury's Breakers 45-7 Monday night, allowing Houston to regain sole possession of first place in the Western Conference of the United States Football League.

Richard Johnson, returning to full speed after a series of annoying injuries, caught a USFL record four scoring passes. He was just one of several Houston speedsters who exploited the slow-footed Breakers.

"They're as quick as anybody's ever had," Coury said of the pass catchers who do most of the damage in the Gamblers' "run-and-shoot" offense.

Kelly had another big game, boosting his season's touchdown pass total to 35. He completed 32 of 45 passes for 348 yards before sitting out the final 12 minutes of the game. The Gamblers never were forced to punt.

"Kelly must be the best in both leagues," Coury said. "His offense is one of the main things that pulled them through."

JOHNSON SAID he was glad to regain the Houston quarterback's confidence.

"I was hurt for awhile and he kind of shied away from me," he said. "I couldn't perform like I knew I could. Now I think I'm back."

Johnson, who led the USFL with 115 catches last season, has been bothered by a pulled hamstring, sprained ankle and inflamed toe this year. But he said he felt fine Monday night.

"This is the type of night we always expect to have," he said. "We pretty much know we can score every time we get the football."

Kelly, who also scrambled 11 yards for a touchdown, said it's great to have Johnson and another swift receiver, Ricky Sanders, back in good health.

"To be a great quarterback you've got to have great people around you," Kelly said. "When I have all our receivers healthy, it makes me look good.

All of the Gamblers loooked good.

"There'sno doubt in my mind this was the best game we've played all year," said Houston Coach Jack Pardee.

The 5-foot-9 Johnson, in his fourth pro season from Colorado, had scoring catches of 11, 49 and 1 yards in the first half, then added a 7-yard catch late in the third quarter. He wound up with 10 receptions for 167 yards.

HOUSTON SCORED on each of its five first-half possessions to blow open a 31-7 lead, with Kelly completing 23 of 32 passes for 276 yards in the first 30 minutes alone.

Houston, 8-3, won its third in a row — all on the road — and pulled a half-game ahead of Oakland in the Westebrn Conference race.

Portland, 3-8, lost for the fourth-straight week and continued to suffer from a severe lack of offense.

"We were never in it," said Breakers' Coach Dick Coury. "We just evidently aren't as good as I thought we'd be. We just don't have anyone on offense that's a real threat, with any quickness."

The Breakers, playing at home for the first time in a month, drew a crowd of 18,457. There were plenty of boos from the few who stayed until the end.

Portland's only touchdown came in the second quarter on a penalty-aided 75-yard drive that ended with Harold Ricks scoring on a 1-yard run.

Buford Jordan, seeing his first extensive game action in seven weeks due to a hamstring injury, g passes for 95 yards.

Bowa trade unlikely, Green says

CHICAGO (AP) — Backup shortstop Larry Bowa has asked to be traded, but Chicago Cubs President and General Manager Dallas Green isn't sure he can help the frustrated veteran find more playing time.

Green on Monday said that Bowa's agent, Jack Sands of Boston, had formally asked for a trade on behalf of his client.

"I don't know that I can better the situation for Larry Bowa ... at 39 years old," Green said.

Bowa, who lost his starting job to rookie Shawon Dunston in spring training, was not specific when asked Monday if he could live with being the backup shortstop.

"That's what I am, the backup shortstop," said Bowa.

THERE HAS been some talk that Bowa might return to the Philadelphia Phillies, but Green said that was not likely.

Bowa, who accepted his role as backup shortstop when Manager Jim Frey named Dunston his starter, said that situation has not changed.

"You have to let Shawon play," said Bowa. "You can't keep taking him out of the lineup. He's had as many good games as bad games but he hasn't cost us any games. You can't judge a guy on 20 games. He's done a good job."

Still, Bowa added, "I would like to play once a week but I don't think I'm going to. I want to play but I don't think a guy should be chastised for wanting to play.

"It's a 25-man roster and I'm the 26th guy," Bowa said.

BOWA SAID he would not want to be traded to the American League or accept the same role he now has with another team.

"If I had the same role with another team, I wouldn't want to go," he said. "I like this team, it's a good team and I think it will go to the World Series. We're winning and that's the bottom line."

Bowa has appeared in six games and has a .286 average. He is just two games shy of Rabbit Maranville's National League record for most games at shortstop, which is 2,154.

Dunston, 22, has played in 19 games. He is batting .220 with one home run and four runs batted in, but he also has committed nine errors.

Yankees Griffey also says he wants out

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees have agreed to try and honor outfielder Ken Griffey's request to be traded, General Manager Clyde King said Monday.

King said Yankees owner George Steinbrenner "has given me permission to go ahead."

Griffey asked to be traded after Sunday's 6-2 victory over Kansas City in which he homered as a pinch hitter. Griffey has been platooned in left field with Billy Sample since Billy Martin took over as Yankees manager from Yogi Berra April 29. Griffey had sat out the previous three games against left-handed pitchers.

"I talked with Ken for about 10 minutes yesterday (Sunday)," King said. "He wasn't mad or anything. He just wanted to get traded."

Griffey also asked to be traded last season, and King said he told him the same thing this time that he told him a year ago — that it would be difficult to trade him because of his contract. Griffey has a $6.25 million, six-year deal that runs through 1987.

SWC names athletes of week

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Christian University's designated hitter, Mike Ramsey, and Houston discus thrower Cheryl Klein were named Southwest Conference athletes of the week Monday following record-breaking weekend performances.

Ramsey went 5 for 10 at the plate in the Frogs' weekend series against Texas A&M University to wrap up the SWC batting title.

His .478 average is the fourth best in SWC history. Only Baylor's Mickey Sullivan (.519 in 1954), TCU's Jim Busby (.509 in 1948) and Texas' Walt Rothe (.485 in 1971) ranked higher.

Ramsey just gained the batting lead in the conference a week ago, passing Houston's Benny Mota.

Klein bettered her discus record Sunday with a throw of 169-7 to win the Houston Invitational. The toss was a 1-inch improvement over her season best and 9 feet farther than her nearest conference rival.

TREASURY BILLS

Yields decrease

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yields on short-term Treasury securities turned down again in Monday's auctions after a one-week jump.

The Treasury Department sold $7 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 7.76 percent, down from 7.87 percent last week. Another $7 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average rate of 7.93 percent, down from 8.11 percent.

The rates on three-month bills were the lowest since 7.62 percent in the April 22 auction. The six-month rate was the lowest since 7.87 percent, also two weeks ago.

Those two April 22 rates, in turn, had been the lowest since Jan. 17, 1983 as short-term Treasury bills have been a general downward trend since early last September, when they reached peaks of 10.63 percent for three-month bills and 10.75 percent for six-month bills.

The new discount rates understate the actual return to investors — 8.03 percent for three-month bills and 8.38 percent for six-month bills.

Dollar falls

LONDON (AP) — A series of large sell orders put a quick end to a three-day dollar rally early today and sent the U.S. currency into a steep fall. Gold prices moved higher.

The dollar sales, which dealers said were by commercial customers, triggered rumors of central bank intervention — rumors that dealers insisted were unfounded.

In Frankfurt, the sales knocked three pfennigs off the dollar's value against the West German mark in 10 minutes, dealers reported. In London, the British pound surged more than two

At midmorning in Europe today, one dollar bought:

--3.1880 West German marks, down from 3.2370 late Monday.

--2.6795 Swiss francs, down from 2.7185.

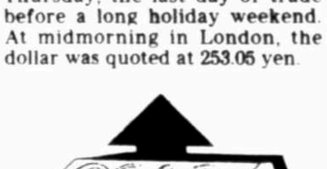
--9.7400 French francs, down from 9.8475.

--3.6260 Dutch guilders, down from 3.6750.

--2,020.00 Italian lire, down from 2,059.50.

--1.38180 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3855.

Earlier, in Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose to a closing 254.15 yen from 252.40 on Thursday, the last day of trade before a long holiday weekend. At midmorning in London, the dollar was quoted at 253.05 yen.



Gold opened in London at a bid price of $309.80 an ounce, compared with $312.50 late Friday, also the last trading day before a holiday weekend. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $311.25.

In Zurich, the noon bid price was $311.15, up from $309.50 late Monday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose the equivalent of 43 cents to close at a bid $311.85.

In New York Monday, gold fell $2.70 to close at $308.90.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $6.12 an ounce, down from $6.20 late Friday.

Small Business Week kicks off with luncheon

By SUSAN LINDSAY
Business-Oil Writer

Small Business Week was kicked off Monday with a formal proclamation of the week and a luncheon at the Ramada Inn.

"Small business gives us a chance to use our imagination," said Joe Golding, owner of Golding's and speaker at the luncheon, sponsored by the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

It is a shame, he said, that the media portrays business as large corporations. "That's not what it is," he said.

About 650,000 new businesses formed last year, he said, while large corporations layed off two million employees. "Small business took up the slack. Without the Small Business Administration, I wouldn't be here today," he said.

Golding said his first desire to go into business appeared when he was a boy. "I had two desires: to help young people and to be my own boss."

He went to college and got his first retail job selling sporting goods in Houston and hated it. His mother-in-law called him and and told him that she wanted to start a business and asked if he would like to help.

"I thought anything's got to be better than Houston so I said yes — Midland, the land of opportunity — I thought I'd get rich. I'll go into the oil business."

He said he went to Midland with $178 in his pocket and discovered that his mother-in-law wanted to start a children's clothing store.

After sending away for demographic data from the Chamber of Commerce, Golding discovered Midland, which had a population of 70,000 then, could not support two children's clothing stores and five were operating then.

"But my mother-in-law had a dream. She said she knew what she wanted to do," he said, adding that she had taught him a lesson.

"My advice is to don't look back when you're 50 and say I should have do that when I was 25 or I should have gone into business when I was 30," he said. "When I'm 50, I want to be able to look in the mirror and say Joe Golding gave his best shot.

"I saw a bumper sticker once that said 'It may be a '49, but it's all mine'. That's how I feel. That's what small business is all about," he said.

The special week is part of a nation-wide recognition of small businesses and their importantance to the business world.

"Small business is vital to our community, particularly in the recovery of our ecomomy," said Midland Mayor Thane Akins as he presented a proclamation of Small Business Week to Amy Stewart, chairman of the Midland Small Business Council.

She said she is proud of the council because it has grown in numbers and responsibilities. It now sponsors a scholarship and a trade show and distributes packets to people interested in starting a small business.

According to the Small Business Administration, there are about 14.2 million non-farm businesses in the United States. About half operate full-time. Small businesses employ about 48 percent of the private work force, contribute 42 percent of all sales in the country and are responsible for 38 percent of the gross national product.

Rigs for sale

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. auctioned off four complete oil rigs today at the Wagner MFG & FAB Co., west of Odessa, where they had been stored. The rigs were active in New Mexico and Texas until they were repossessed when First National Bank of Midland was declared insolvent in October 1983. The FDIC expected the rigs to bring about $4.5 million.

FDIC adopts banking disciplinary actions

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation voted unanimously Monday to adopt a new regulation, bitterly opposed by the banking industry, under which it will disclose disciplinary actions taken against the 8,850 banks it regulates.

The FDIC considers the proposal an important step toward permitting market forces to discipline the banking industry.

Under the new rule, whenever the FDIC enters a final enforcement action against a bank, the agency will make the information available to the public almost immediately as well as encourage the bank itself to volunteer the information to depositors and shareholders. The rule will take effect Jan. 1, 1986.

Last year, according to an agency spokesman, the FDIC took 125 final actions against banks. Many of these were made public under the securities laws. This year, he said, the pace is running slightly ahead of last year.

"I believe public confidence in the banking system is enhanced when the public receives fair and meaningful disclosure, and confidence is eroded when the public believes it is being deceived or is not receiving all the facts," William M. Isaac, chairman of the FDIC, said at an open meeting of the three-member board of directors.

The FDIC first requested comment on a somewhat broader enforcement-disclosure policy in February. Reaction was quick and furious, with many banks and bankers warning that such disclosure could erode public confidence and lead to runs on banks. The FDIC received 768 comment letters, with only 57 favoring the agency's proposal.

"We have strongly opposed the FDIC's proposal from the beginning and continue to question its statutory authority to do this," said George Saunders, regulatory liaison for the Independent Bankers Association. "We are going to look into the possibility of a legal challenge to this, as are others in the industry."

The original proposal called for disclosure of "notices" of pending enforcement actions as well as final actions and would have been effective immediately. Isaac said the FDIC had backed off on both counts, "although I am skeptical about the vailidity of the commenter's concerns in this area and reserve the option of expanding the policy at a later date to include notices."

In a related development, the acting comptroller of the currency, H. Joe Selby, said the comptroller's office was preparing a disclosure policy of its own that would be even more comprehensive. Under the comptroller's plan, national banks would be required to disclose any enforcement actions taken against them by the comptroller. The comptroller sits on the three-member FDIC board.

Issac said Monday that the purpose of the disclosure policy was to correct such problems as inadequate capital, abusive insider dealings, use of brokered deposits and inadequate management. The FDIC's enforcement arsenal includes cease-and-desist orders, removal or suspension of officers or directors, monetary penalties and, in extreme cases, the removal of deposit insurance.

RRC postpones 'white oil' vote

AUSTIN (AP) — Railroad Commission hearing examiners say "white oil" operators have been on notice for almost four years that they might be called to task for their production methods but apparently have ignored those warnings.

Examiners told the commission on Monday there was a "surge" of white oil wells after Phillips Petroleum Co. complained about the practice to the commission in September 1981.

General Counsel Susan Cory said Ivan Hafly, an Austin lawyer representing independent producers, testified that many of the "LTX" operators knew they were "running a calculated risk" when they began using refrigeration units to chill vapor into a liquid they called crude oil.

The commission on Monday delayed for a week a decision on staff recommendations in the controversial case.

Ms. Cory and two examiners stood by their recommendation to apply a statewide rule for classifying oil and gas wells to the Panhandle fields. They contend that the rule requires crude oil to be in a liquid state in the reservoir.

The three examiners also called for retesting wells that use LTX units to chill vapor.

Phillips complains that independent operators use refrigeration units to chill vapor to a liquid so they can count the "clear as water" liquid as crude oil.

The examiners say there are advantages in getting a well classified as an oil well rather than a gas well. Only one gas well may be drilled on 640 acres but 64 oil wells may be drilled in that same area. Gas from an "oil well" qualifies as casinghead gas, which commands a higher price. Also, gas production from an oil well is not as restricted as from a natural gas well.

Phillips contends independents are using the "fake" oil wells to deplete the largest gas reservoir in Texas, which underlies eight counties. The Panhandle Independent Producers' Group says the classification rule excludes the Panhandle fields.

Ms. Cory said the record reflects that the LTX operators started production with the hope the commission would not apply the rule to units already in operation.

The commission heard oral arguments from both sides April 12, and concentrated on the staff presentation Monday.

Witnesses for independent producers have said adoption of the examiners' recommendations would run white oil operators out of business and devastate the Panhandle economy. State Comptroller Bob Bullock has estimated the possible loss in severance taxes at over $100 million a year, if examiners' recommendation and a pending federal ruling on casinghead gas are applied to Texas.

Commission Legal Examiner Patrick Thompson said neither the federal issue nor a bill before the Legislature that would redefine casinghead gas would have a direct bearing on the question before the commission.

Commissioner Buddy Temple said he was confused because it seemed that the commission staff had not enforced the rule over the years, but Thompson said there had been a pattern that "indicated enforcement."

Temple asked if the commission had general powers to consider the economic impact of applying the rule to the Panhandle fields, and Thompson said, "Even if were free to include economic evidence, there are no good statistics or reliable evidence on this subject."

Ms. Cory said of the LTX units, "We're not saying they are not oil wells. We're saying they need to be retested."

A vote on the bill redefining casinghead gas, which is considered a natural byproduct of oil production, was postponed from Monday until Wednesday by Sen. Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso.

Santiesteban, the bill sponsor, said he was waiting for a "favorable quorum" of the Natural Resources Committee.

The new definition is intended to head off a recent federal administrative law judge's finding that 35 independent oil operators violated the law by selling gas from the Panhandle fields for a price well above federal ceilings.

Report says Thayer, broker pay $350,000 to settle case

WASHINGTON (AP) — A vote by the Securities and Exchange Commission this week could settle an insider-trading suit that would cost former Deputy Defense Secretary Paul Thayer and Dallas stockbroker Billy Bob Harris more than $350,000, according to a published report.

The Wall Street Journal on Monday quoted Judah Best, an attorney for Harris, as saying the settlement had been reached with the SEC staff and was expected to be voted on by the full commission in the next few days.

Thayer and Harris pleaded guilty in March to criminal charges of obstructing justice by giving false information to the SEC.

Government prosecutors contended that Thayer, while he was chairman and chief executive officer of LTV Corp., and a board member of two other companies, gave confidential corporate takeover information to Harris.

The government said Harris purchased stock for himself and some friends and passed the information on to associates who also bought shares.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Best refused to disclose any dollar amounts for the civil settlement.

"The important issue is that (Harris) has entered into a settlement with the staff of the SEC, subject to confirmation by the commission," Best said.

Best said he believed that Thayer had also reached a settlement with the SEC staff, but he said he was not certain of this.

Mobil makes move to get rid of Montgomery Ward

NEW YORK (AP) — Mobil Corp. plans major cutbacks at its troubled Montgomery Ward & Co. retail chain and hopes to dispose of it, and oil industry analysts say that if the plan succeeds it will relieve a financial headache for Mobil.

Mobil said Monday the changes at the nation's sixth-largest retailer are aimed at "reshaping it into a business which can operate as an independent, free-standing, profitable retail company without Mobil ownership or financial guarantees."

Mobil did not say how Montgomery Ward might operate independently but did say that, so far, there have been no negotiations to sell the 113-year-old company. Among the possible alternatives to a sale is a spinoff of the company to Mobil's shareholders.

Bruce Lazier, who follows the company for the investment firm Prescott, Ball & Turben, said Mobil's action is "recognition of past mistakes ... it's not going to pour any more money down the rathole."

Rosario Iiacqua, an analyst at L.F. Rothschild, Unterberg, Towbin, said if Mobil succeeds in getting rid of Montgomery Ward, "it means one less headache."

Analyst William Randol at First Boston Corp. called the step "the removal of a negative."

Mobil said it planned to eliminate money-losing segments of Ward's network of 2,099 catalog stores in what spokesman Herbert Schmertz termed "radical surgery." Mobil also said cutbacks were planned for the 322 Montgomery Ward retail stores and 44 Jefferson Ward discount stores, and that administrative costs would be significantly reduced.

The company did not identify the operations to be scrapped nor did it estimate how many of Montgomery Ward's 77,000 employees would lose their jobs.

It said the cost of the restructuring will reduce Mobil's after-tax profit by about $500 million in 1985. It earned $1.27 billion in 1984.

Mobil, the nation's second-largest oil company after Exxon Corp., purchased Montgomery Ward for $1 billion in 1976 as part of an attempt to diversify from the energy business at a time when it was flush with profits from rising oil prices. It has since invested an additional $609 million in it.

Montgomery Ward contributed $53 million in earnings on $6.5 billion in sales in 1984, an improvement on the $40 million in earnings on $6 billion in sales in 1983. But in addition to the costly investment and disappointing return on sales, it also has had lean years, including losses of $93 million in 1982, $160 million in 1981 and $162 million in 1980.

University names library for oilman

By MELLA McEWEN
Business-Oil Writer

Midland oilman Walter R. Davis made his fortune in West Texas, but he has not forgotten his native North Carolina.

Over the years, Davis has returned millions of dollars to the educational system of the state, and North Carolina returned the generoisity recently by having a library at the University of North Carolina named for him.

The wealth Davis gained in the oilfields of Texas has also found its way into many real estate ventures in North Carolina.

His holdings in the Tar Heel State include developments at Southern Shores near Kitty Hawk and Bald Head Island near Southport. He also owns the Kitty Hawk and Avalon fishing piers and a furniture rental firm in Raleigh.

Davis is reported to have acquired the Kitty Hawk pier in May 1964, when early one morning, after he had been out all night with some friends, and had an urge for an Orange Crush. Driving to the pier, he found they only had Coca-Cola. On the spot he wrote out a check for $96,000, though others say it was $25,000 to $50,000, and had the Orange Crush bottler make an immediate delivery. The deal proved so profitable, a few years later he bought the Avalon pier nearby.

While Davis is well known for his real estate holdings in North Carolina, he is equally known for his generosity.

He donated Zeke's Island, next to Bald Head Island, to provide the first unit in North Carolina's National Estuarine Sanctuary, and also served as the key to acquiring Carrot Island at Beaufort and Currituck Outer Banks north of Corolla.

Education, however, has been the recipient of most of his time and money — perhaps because he never had the chance to go to college. He has said several times he wants everyone to have the ability to go to college. He served eight years on the Board of Trustees at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, including two as chairman, and led the fight in the state legislature for $32 million from the funds received in the sale of university utilities.

His alma mater, Hargrave Military Academy, received more than $500,000 and named a gymnasium for him. He has served on the school's board of trustees, paying all expenses from airfare to underwear for a number of the students, and gave a number of cars to faculty members.

Davis graduated from Hargrave Military Academy in Chatham, Va., and instead of going to college, he went to work, mostly for trucking firms in North Carolina, Virgina, Maryland and California.

One of those jobs was with Fred Rumbley, who became his mentor. In 1952, with $100,000 from Rumbley and $5,000 from his late wife Geraldine's nest egg, the Davis' came to Midland to start a trucking company.

Working out of a pickup with a tank strapped to his back, Davis' new company, Western Oil Transportation Co., Inc. was founded to transport crude oil. In a few years, in order to stay in business, Davis founded The Permian Corp. as a crude oil purchasing Co. Permian soon became the parent company of Western Oil Transports and grew into the world's largest independent crude oil purchaser, with annual revenues of about $5 billion.

In 1966, The Permian Corp. was acquired by Occidental Petroleum, and Davis remained Permian's chief executive and was Oxy's number two man behind Chairman Armand Hammer. Occidental sold the Midland-based firm to Westray Corp., holding company founded by former Treasury Secretary William Simon, in 1983.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Terry strike pumps 412 barrels

From Staff Reports

Fusselman production was opened with completion of a Terry County test, the WESTLAND OIL DEVELOPMENT CORP., Montgomery, No. 1-144 Santa Fe Energy.

The well was potentialed to pump 412 barrels of 37.4 gravity crude and no water through Fusselman perforations 12,864 to 12,883 ft., which had been acidized with 2,000 gallons of acid.

Drilled to 13,000 ft., the well was plugged back to 12,960 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 13,000 ft.

The well topped the Kinderbrook at 12,734 ft., the Woodford at 12,802, and the Fusselman at 12,855 ft on ground elevation of 3,349 ft. Top of the pay is 12,855 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from south and 1,800 ft. from east lines of Section 144, Block D-11, T&P survey, two miles northwest of Wellman.

Sixth producer added to Moonlight field

THE ANSCHUTZ CORP., Midland, has added a sixth Mississippian producer to the Moonlight field of Midland County with completion of the No. 414 Barron to flow 282 barrels of 47 gravity crude, 690 Mcfd and no water on a 12/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 3,200 psi. Gas-oil ratio is 2,447:1. The well is flowing from the Mississippian interval 11,525 to 11,545 ft., which had been treated with 50,000 gallons and 80,000 lbs. of 20/40 sand.

The well was drilled to a total depth of 12,128 ft. and plugged back to 12,088 ft. A five inch liner was hung 10,739 to 12,128 ft.

On ground elevatioa of 2,854 ft., formation tops include the Yates at 2,999 ft., Grayburg at 4,532, Spraberry at 8,079, Strawn at 10,637, Barnett at 11,144, and the Devonian at 12,097 ft. Top of the pay is 11,525 ft.

Location is 1,320 ft. from north and west lines of Section 14, Block 40, T-1-S, T&P survey, six miles northwest of Midland.

Devonian producer flows 3.96 Mmcfd

ARCO OIL & GAS CO. recently added a very strong Devonian producer to the Block 31 field of Crane County with completion of the No. P6K Block 31 Unit to flow 230 barrels of 49.2 gravity crude, 3.96 Mmcfd and 12 barrels of water on a 32/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 725 psi. Gas-oil ratio is 17,235:1. The well is flowing from the Devonian interval 8,407 to 8,909 ft., which had been acidized with 6,570 gallons of 15 percent HCL.

Total depth is 9,100 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at the total depth.

ON ground elevation of 2,523 ft., formation tops include the Pennsylvanian at 6,992 ft., Burnett at 7,340, Woodford at 7,732, and the Devonian at 7,921 ft. Top of the pay is 8,407 ft.

Location is 2,640 ft. from north and 6,450 ft. from west lines of Section 40, Block 31, ULS survey, 6.6 miles southeast of Crane.

Three New Mexico discoveries tallied

Three discoveries - two new locations and one recompletion have been completed in New Mexico.

McCLELLAN OIL CORP. has completed the No. 1 MOC White Federal, Mississippian gas discovery in Chaves County, New Mexico, to flow 180 Mcfd on various chokes with a flowing tubing pressure of 40 psi. The well is flowing from the Mississippian zone 6,505 to 6,529 ft., which had been acidized with 2,000 gallons of 10 percent MCA acid.

Drilled to 6,713 ft. and plugged back to 6,700 ft., casing is 4 1/2 inches set at 6,700 ft.

On ground elevation of 3,891 ft., formation tops include the San Andres at 1,150 ft., Glorieta at 2,260, Tubb at 3,770, Abo at 4,410, Wolfcamp at 5,160, Pennsylvanian at 5,870, Mississippian at 6,490, and the Montoya at 6,610 ft. Top of the pay is 6,505 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from south and west lines of Section 9, T4s, R27e.

The well is a re-entry of the Leonard Oil Co. No. 1 White Federal, which was plugged after reaching 6,713 ft.

HARVEY E. YATES CO. has completed an undesignated Bone Springs oil discovery in Eddy County, New Mexico with the testing of the No. 1 Power Deep "32" Stateto pump 25 barrels of 36.4 gravity crude and 23 barrels of water. Yates perforated the Bone Springs interval 7,742 to 7,926 ft., acidized with 4,000 gallons of acid and fractured with 75,000 gallons of gel and 165,000 lbs. sand.

Drilled to 11,770 ft., the well is plugged back to 8,000 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 9,611 ft.

Its Profitable Past

For Your Profitable Future

With this single coin, you have the collateral power to build your future.

It is much more than gold. In Salomon Brothers' investment surveys, rare U.S. coins have consistently ranked number one - with a 10 year compound rate of return of 21.4%.

More than double the return of gold, or diamonds, or oil, stocks, real estate, and treasury bills.

More than three times the return of bonds or silver.

And one of the lowest entry level costs of any tangible investment.

All with high liquidity, favorable tax treatment, easy storage, confidentiality - and FDIC insured member-supported loan programs available.

Watered-down used car rule goes into effect Thursday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Whether they're called cream puffs or clunkers, second hand or previously owned, used cars sometimes break down. So, before buying one, consumers should think about who will pay for any repairs.

That's the message the Federal Trade Commission hopes to drive home with new regulations that will cover the nation's used-car dealers starting Thursday.

But, even before the rules can be shifted into gear, consumer advocates are complaining that changes made last year eliminated most of the regulatory horsepower.

The main provision of the rule requires window stickers on used cars, telling buyers whether a car is being sold "as is," or if a warranty is offered; and giving other advice about such purchases.

"The most important piece of information that a used-car buyer can obtain is to find out from the dealer who is going to pay for repairs if something goes wrong after the sale. And that is exactly what this rule is going to do," said Carol Crawford, director of the Federal Trade Commission's Bureau of Consumer Protection.

The most prevalent problem found in a study of the used car market, she said, "was that cars that were sold 'as is,' that is, without a warranty, were being represented by the dealer as coming with a warranty."

But while the rule gives consumers a clear indication of whether they get warranty protection, a controversial provision that would have forced dealers to tell their customers about any defects they were aware of, was dropped from the regulation.

And it's that missing provision that has drawn the ire of consumer advocates.

"I think that the rule will go into effect without notice and without effect. It simply misses what consumers want to know when buying a car, and that is, what's wrong with it," said Clarence Ditlow, head of the Washington-based Center for Auto Safety.

"If they (the FTC) were serious about protecting consumers from unsafe autos, they would have required disclosure of known defects, rather than leaving it up to the buyer to make that determination," added Jack Gillis, author of "The Car Book," a buyers' guide to auto safety.

In fact, the scrapping of that provision drew a sharp rebuke from FTC Commissioner Patricia P. Bailey, who dissented in the 3-1 vote last fall when the new regulation was passed by the agency.

"The FTC's rulemaking authority is a potentially powerful tool for promoting consumer welfare, but this rule, without the known defects provision, is little more than a consumer education campaign masquerading as significant, industry-wide regulation," said Ms. Bailey in her dissent.

And Rep. James J. Florio, D-N.J., chairman of the House subcommittee on commerce, transportation and tourism, said that dropping the disclosure requirement in effect tells used car dealers that if they know of a major defect, such as a cracked engine block, they don't have to tell consumers.

Nonetheless, the commission believes that the regulation will help car buyers by making sure they understand the terms and conditions of purchases and by making them wary of promises.

Being informed about warranties will allow comparison with different cars and different dealerships, Ms. Crawford said.

In addition, she said, by focusing on warranties, the rule may encourage buyers to bargain for added coverage.

What a dealer thinks about a car also is often reflected in the warranty he offers, Ms. Crawford said. If the dealer thinks it's a great car, he's more likely to provide a warranty.

The new window sticker to be placed on used cars is a legal document and the dealer is bound by whatever promises he makes on the paper, she said. A copy of the sticker has to be attached to the purchase contract.

In development since 1976, the used car regulation will require the sticker to state whether a warranty is offered and, if so, the terms and what is covered. The commission cannot force dealers to offer warranties. But through the new stickers it does warn consumers that if the car is sold "as is," they will have to pay for any needed repairs.

The sticker suggests that buyers have an independent mechanic inspect any vehicle before buying it and warns them that oral promises can rarely be enforced. Also, the back of the form lists the various major parts of a car, along with some of the things that can go wrong with them.

But while this general list may give consumers some ideas about what to look for, it contains little information about the specific automobile being purchased.

The discarded provision, requiring car dealers to list on the stickers any major defects they were aware of, had been included in regulations under development since 1976.

A lawsuit challenging the rule also was filed by auto dealers, and a federal appeals court directed the commission to reassess the regulation. It was then that the disclosure requirement was discarded by the agency.

"That was a very alluring proposal, a very attractive proposal, it sounds good. We looked at it very carefully and it simply does not withstand careful scrutiny," Ms. Crawford said in an interview.

"I think those who have clung to that proposal are promising consumers something that they simply can't deliver," she said. "We found that consumers might read a requirement that a dealer disclose problems that he knows about, as an absolute disclosure of the condition of the car."

However, she added, a form listing no major problems could mean several things other than that the car is in perfect shape.

"It could mean that the car was inspected and they didn't find a problem, but in fact there was a serious problem; it could mean that the car was inspected but not very well, it could mean that the car wasn't inspected at all," she said.

Nuke plant reaches full production

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (AP) — The Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant's Unit 1 reactor, bitterly opposed by environmentalists, reached maximum power and began full commercial production of electricity today, a utility spokesman said.

The reactor began generating 1.1 million kilowatts of electricity at 2:35 a.m., enough to serve 1.1 million residents in northern and central California, said Ron Weinberg, a spokesman for Pacific Gas & Electric, which owns and operates the $5.6 billion, twin-reactor plant.

Jim Weil, an official with the California Public Utilities Commission, was on hand to verify that the reactor had reached its full-power level.

The began about 10:45 p.m. Friday, Weinberg said.

It took two decades, thousands of arrests and a 12-fold hike in its budget for plant operators to reach full commercial production. Reaching the goal, however, doesn't mean an end to problems for the seaside plant midway between Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Last week, a federal appellate court agreed to hear arguments that the Nuclear Regulatory Commission disregarded earthquake safety questions when it granted a full-power license for Unit 1 last August. Diablo Canyon is just a few miles from an area offshore, known as the Hosgri fault, that is vulnerable to earthquakes.

The rehearing, granted May 1 by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, did not prohibit PG&E from starting Unit 1. The rehearing has yet to be scheduled.

A bitter controversy over utility rates sought to pay for the plant's escalated cost has also yet to be resolved. In 1968, when construction started, PG&E estimated it would cost $430 million to build the plant. But the price tag ballooned to $5.6 billion through the years.

PG&E wants an interim rate increase of 3.4 percent, or $183 million, to help pay for the plant, which it says will save customers $5 billion in electricity costs over the next 10 years.

The NRC last month approved fuel loading and testing up to 5 percent of Unit 2's full-power capacity, which also is rated at 1.1 million kilowatts.

AP board elects two new members, re-elects four

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Robert C. Maynard of the Oakland (Calif.) Tribune and Edwin L. Heminger of the Findlay (Ohio) Courier have been elected to the board of directors of The Associated Press, while four incumbents were re-elected.

The directors were elected Monday at the annual meeting of the AP, the world's oldest and largest news-gathering organization.

Incumbent directors elected to new three-year terms were James H. Ottaway Jr. of the Middletown (N.Y.) Times Herald-Record, James E. Burgess of the Madison (Wis.) Wisconsin State Journal, John F. McGee of the Charleston (W.Va.) Daily Mail and Robert G. Marbut of the Corpus Christi (Texas) Caller-Times.

Heminger was elected to one of the three board of directors seats reserved for AP members representing newspapers published in a city of less than 50,000 population.

He was elected to succeed Charles S. Rowe of the Fredericksburg (Va.) Free Lance-Star. The other board opening was to fill the seat of retiring director W.S. Morris III of the Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle and Herald. Under AP bylaws no director can be elected to more than three consecutive terms. Morris and Rowe therefore were not eligible for renomination.

The outcome of the balloting was as follows:

Ottaway 17,470
Burgess 15,801
McGee 15,417
Marbut 14,264
Maynard 7,930

David Starr, Springfield (Mass.) Union, News & Sunday Republican 7,812.

C.K. McClatchy, The Sacramento (Calif.) Bee 7,297.

Harold R. Lifvendahl, The Orlando (Fla.) Sentinel 7,205.

Ted M Natt, Longview (Wash.) Daily News 3,692.

Ralph E. Looney, Denver (Colo.) Rocky Mountain News 2,627.

In the selection of a director from a city of less than 50,000 population, the vote was:

Heminger 15,039
A.L. Alford Jr., Lewiston (Idaho) Tribune 4,543.

AP member newspapers cast votes for directors on the basis of the membership bonds they hold in the news cooperative.

Alabama, Judds get multiple honors

BUENA PARK, Calif. — Alabama, a group that features hot fiddle music and well-crafted love songs, became the biggest all-time winner of Academy of Country Music awards by walking away with three top trophies at the 20th annual awards show.

The Judds, a mother-daughter singing team, won two awards — song of the year and vocal duet — for their "Why Not Me?"

"If we never win another award, it's been a great career," a giddy lead singer Randy Owen of Alabama said. "But I don't see us getting out of the business. I feel just like a little kid."

Alabama, a four-member band, swept the ceremonies Monday night at Knott's Berry Farm by picking up entertainer of the year, vocal group of the year and album of the year honors, the latter for "Roll On," released on RCA Records. Monday's ceremonies, televised on NBC, brought to 11 the number of Academy of Country Music awards the band has won since 1982, one more than singer Kenny Rogers.

Naomi and Wynonna Judd were the only other multiple winners.

"Everybody back in Kentucky is glued to their sets. They're having jug parties tonight!" said daughter Wynonna Judd.

The Judds won a Grammy in February for best country performance by a duo or group for their single "Mama He's Crazy."

Ricky Skaggs won an award for specialty instruments for his mandolin playing, and his Ricky Skaggs Band won for touring ensemble.

Top female vocalist honors went to Reba McEntire.

"My brother and sister used to tell friends, 'She's not a star, she's just a twinkle,'" Miss McEntire said. "I guess I'm a bigger twinkle now."

Top male vocalist went to George Strait. Willie Nelson and Julio Iglesias' "To All the Girls I've Loved Before" was named top single.

The award for top single was an upset. The duo's "Hat" — named for the cowboy hat atop the trophy — beat out songs by Alabama and the Judds. Nelson, Iglesias and Strait were not on hand to pick up their trophies.

Vince Gill, who won the top new male vocalist award for his song, "True Love," managed a tearful thanks to his wife and daughter before leaving the stage.

Veteran Grand Ole Opry performer Roy Acuff, 81, received the academy's Pioneer Award for his overall achievement in country music. Two of Acuff's songs, "The Great Speckled Bird" and "Wabash Cannonball," are longtime country standards.

Nicolette Larson, once a pop singer, walked away with the top new female vocalist honor.

"A lot of people used to say to me, 'You're country,' and I'd say, 'No, I'm rock,'" Miss Larson said. "I give up. I'm country."

The Tex Ritter award for country movie went to "Songwriter," starring Willie Nelson and Kris Kristofferson as country songwriter-performers who find themselves at odds with their own industry.

Hank Williams Jr. beamed as he accepted the award for "All My Rowdy Friends Are Comin' Over Tonight," the first-ever video award presented by the academy. It also was the first award from the academy for Williams, who recently issued his 50th country album.

The final five nominations in 11 of the categories were selected by the academy's 2,600 eligible members from a list of 10 nominations made by the academy's award selection committee. The members voted again to choose the winner from among the five.

In addition, there were nine instrumentalist categories, nominated by the academy's musician-bandleader and artist-entertainer branches.

The academy announced in March that Gilley's club of Pasadena, Texas, had won the country nightclub of the year award for the fifth time. It also honored Coyote Calhoun of WAMZ of Louisville, Ky., as large-market country disc jockey of the year, with Billy Parker of KVOO in Tulsa, Okla., and Dan Hollander of WDXE of Lawrenceburg, Tenn., taking honors for medium- and small-market, respectively.

WMC of Memphis was named the academy's large-market radio station of the year, with KVOO and WLWI of Montgomery, Ala., earning top honors in the medium- and small-market categories.

Tonys eliminate three categories

NEW YORK — When Broadway honors the best of the 1984-85 theater season, there will be no Tony awards for outstanding actor and actress in a musical or for choreography, an unprecedented move prompted by a dearth of quality poductions.

"Big River," a musical version of Mark Twain's "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn," and the Royal Shakespeare Company each captured 10 Tony award nominations Monday, but three musical categories were eliminated because there weren't enough qualified candidates.

The decision by the 11-member Tony nominating committee follows last week's ruling by the Tony administration committee to eliminate the best actress-musical category because only one performer, Leilani Jones of "Grind," met the eligibility requirements. She received a nomination in the supporting category Monday.

"The word on top of the ballot is 'outstanding' and the Tonys always try to stand for excellence, and we thought that none of the people were outstanding," said Henry Hewes, a member of the nominating committee. "We thought it was in the best interest of the theater and the Tonys not to present a slate of people who had not performed excellently in their art."

The decision by the nominating committee reflects what many Broadway professionals consider to be the poorest musical season on Broadway in years, in terms of quality and quantity of shows.

"This has never happened before. The nominating committee has never actually refused to nominate an entire category," said Richard Barr, president of the League of American Theaters and Producers. "If they feel so strongly, I suppose that's what we're going to have to live with, even though I don't necessarily agree with all of their decisions."

"Big River" picked up 10 nominations including one for best musical. Its rivals include the Ellie Greenwich pop musical "Leader of the Pack"; the lavish burlesque musical "Grind"; and "Quilters" which flopped after a 24-performance run last fall.

Country and western star Roger Miller, who wrote the music and lyrics for "Big River," received a nomination as did the musical's author, William Hauptman, and director, Des McAnuff. The show also took three of the four nominations in the featured actor-musical category — for Daniel H. Jenkins, Ron Richardson and Rene Auberjonois. Their competition is Kurt Knudson in the revival of "Take Me Along."

The Royal Shakespeare Company's productions of "Much Ado About Nothing" and "Cyrano de Bergerac" took 10 nominations including three for Terry Hands, joint artistic director of the RSC.

Hands was nominated as best director of a play for "Much Ado," while also getting two other nominations for his "Much Ado" and "Cyrano" lighting designs. Other play directions receiving nominations were Gene Saks, "Biloxi Blues"; Marshall W. Mason, "As It"; and Keith Hack, "Strange Interlude."

The two stars of "Much Ado About Nothing" — Derek Jacobi and Sinead Cusack — picked up nominations for best actor and actress in a play. Jacobi's competition includes Jim Dale, "Joe Egg"; Jonathan Hogan, "As Is"; and John Lithgow, "equium for a Heavyweight."

Hogan plays an AIDS victim in William Hoffman's "As Is," one of four works chosen for best play nominations. The other contenders are David Rabe's "Hurlyburly," "Ma Rainey's Black Bottom" by August Wilson and Neil Simon's "Biloxi Blues."

Ms. Sinead's competition for best actress in a play includes Stockard Channing, "Joe Egg"; Rosemary Harris, "Pack of Lies"; and Glenda Jackson, "Strange Interlude."

"Strange Interlude" also received a nomination for best revival and will go against "Much Ado About Nothing," "Cyrano de Bergerac" and "Joe Egg."

"Hurlyburly," a look at the Hollywood show business scene, scored with three nominations in featured or supporting categories for Judith Ivey, Sigourney Weaver and William Hurt.

Ms. Ivey and Ms. Weaver will compete with Theresa Merritt of "Ma Rainey's Black Bottom" and Joanna Gleason of "Joe Egg" for best supporting actress-play while Hurt's competition in the suppsorting actor category includes Charles S. Dutton, "Ma Rainey's Black Bottom"; Barry Miller, "Biloxi Blues"; and Edward Petherbridge, "Strange Interlude."

Special Tony awards will go to Yul Brynner, who gives his last performance in "The King and I" on June 30 after playing the role more than 4,500 times and to Chicago's Steppenwolf Theater Company for continued excellence in regional theater.

The nominations will now be mailed to 620 theater professionals and critics for final voting. The results will be announced June 2 during CBS' telecast of the 39th annual Tony awards show. The Tony is named for the late Antoinette Perry, a leading force in the American Theater Wing during World War II.

Problem of relaying severe storm information discussed

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Providing accurate and speedy information about severe thunderstorms and tornados was the clouded issue Monday afternoon in a meeting between members of the broadcast media and the Midland and Ector counties' emergency operations centers and law enforcement agencies.

"Everyone who is listening is going to be running into the hall closet or pulling the mattress over them in the bathtub so they (broadcasters) better be right," said Roy A. Elsner, president of KQIP radio station.

"Some way or another, we have to stop confusing the public. We've got to get the story out to them so that if you say there is a tornado warning, you know exactly where it is," he said.

Most area broadcasters said they had NOAA (National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Agency) wires, which provide weather information, in their newsrooms. However, because of other duties or mechanical problems, sometimes the information is not broadcast as soon as they would like. Also, personnel who are not familiar with the Permian Basin may have trouble understanding the exact area targeted in the information they receive from the National Weather Service and the NOAA wire.

But the volunteer weather spotters, amateur ham operators who station themselves from Snyder to Fort Stockton and relay weather information to the National Weather Service, and the NWS depend on the broadcast media to get the word out to the public.

"I think broadcasters sitting behind a desk trying to put together what everyone is saying...for me to try to relay that to someone who is sitting in their car, and wondering what to do, that's difficult to do," John Roman, KQIP program director, said. "We have tornados going in the county and not in populated areas and I think it causes a lot of people to think we're crying wolf."

"Everyone who is listening is going to be running into the hall closet or pulling the mattress over them in the bathtub so they (broadcasters) better be right."
— Roy E. Elsner, preident of KQIP

Roman also pointed to the confusing manner in which areas are described.

"There are a lot of weather services that advocate, well, if there is no population out there, we'll just watch it (and not give a warning)," said Steve Schild, NWS weather service specialist. He added that it could make a difference if that rural area happened to have a road or highway running through it.

"That's what I want," Roman said. "If you tell me it will affect drivers on the road then that's what I want to tell them."

According to Schild, the information is "only one facet of information that is going out. It's also going out to the military and law enforcement" who plot the exact locations in the area. "You should have a map in your station and you should plot it, too."

"Well, that's what's delaying us," said J. Gordon Lunn, KMID—TV weatherman. "When you can say 'a line 70 miles west of 40 miles,' why can't you say from Kermit to Wink?"

"That's not exact enough," Schild said.

"When NOAA came out here, the military was already plotting these," Roman noted. "What's the use of broadcasting it then?"

Volunteer weather spotters and members of the emergency operations centers pointed to the discrepancies in warnings of approaching storms. While one television station may use a symbol because a warning has been put into effect in an area they reach, another might not because it does not have that viewing audience.

They also criticized the broadcast media for slow relays of the information.

"I know in the past there's been at least 20 minutes after NOAA puts out and it appears on the screen," said Bob Edgerton, Midland EOC emergency management coordinator.

"Our station puts a local on the screen within five minutes of it being issued on the weather radio," said John McCall, KOSA-TV news director."That's our goal. Occasionally, we don't meet it but we usually do."

"It has to do with electronics — electronic malfunctions," said Lunn. "It's not that we're not there working on it and trying to desperately get it on the air."

Bob Johnson, KTPX-TV assistant news director, said that even though his station has a NOAA radio and a weather wire in the newsroom, small staffs who are busy with other tasks sometimes cause the delays.

"We find out a lot of people don't know what those bells are; they think they sound pretty," Johnson said. "And if we're not in the newsroom, we have one director on duty and he tends to ignore it, too. I think the staffing problem results in the 20-minute delay. But it doesn't make much difference what channel it was, we're all in the same boat."

"I recognize your mechanical problems and your personnel problems," said Banks Campbell, Midland weather spotter. "But I would beg you to get it on the air right when it goes across the National Weather Service. We (spotters) have spent a lot of money buying minutes."

"I'm not trying to take exception," said Edgerton. "But the quickest way for the public to get it is off the NOAA radio and that's the fact."

Schild said he agreed 100 percent, but Mike Deardorff, general manager of KWES radio in Monahans, pointed out that "they're not a whole lot of people" who can afford a weather radio.

"But they can afford a television set?" Edgerton asked.

The weathermen said they felt the media did a good job in providing education but felt more safety tips should be broadcast. They also urged media members to attend the weather spotter training seminars to further their education.

"And I'm not talking about just coming and taking a couple of pictures and leaving," Edgerton said.

Agreeing to further their education in-house, the broadcasters also pointed out their professional responsibilities.

"One of the problems with broadcasters is we can't take an unofficial report from out in the county."

"I agree that you should not take our report as Gospel," said Edgerton.

"If the U.S. Weather Service is wrong, if I look out my window and see a twister coming at me and the U.S. Weather Service is saying it's clear weather, to hell with them, I'm going on the air," said Elsner. "We're not the least bit afraid of someone being angry with us. Our response is we would hate to think we have abdicated that responsibility and someone had gotton hurt or killed.

"We are all protective of our radio and television audiences," Elsner said. "But what we're talking about here is a life-threatening or life-saving situation."

Brumley: School boards will have to 'earn' control

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

ODESSA — State Board of Education Chairman Jon Brumley told a group of educators in Odessa Monday that individual school boards will have to "work" to earn back the local control taken from them with the passage of sweeping education reforms.

Speaking before the Permian Basin School Board Association, Brumley told educators, "Yes, there's been a shift in control...You ought to be concerned about it. But if you get it back, you're gonna have to earn it. It's not going to be a gift."

Brumley, a Dallas businessman, was appointed by Gov. Mark White to chair the 15-member State Board of Education last fall. The appointed board replaces a 23-member elected board following the passage of House Bill 72 during a special legislative session last June.

The reform package passed the Legislature as the result of school districts "giving education in the State of Texas a bad name," Brumley said. "The future leaders of this state were being shortchanged."

Calling a section of the law requiring teacher competency testing "the most difficult and pressing" of all issues, Brumley noted, "I believe that morale (in the classroom) is not good and until we get that test out of the way, it will continue. All I can promise teachers is that test will be fair."

The State Board's Committee for Personnel Friday will discuss preliminary proposals for a rule governing the competency tests, scheduled to be administered to more than 200,000 teachers in March 1986.

Noting that the perception of teachers among Texas residents "is not good," Brumley said "Whether or not I'm qualified to interpret the test is irrelevant. But I'm here and I'm going to do my best to make sure it (the test) is fair. I can guarantee that the Legislature is going to make sure that this test is given."

In addition, Brumley talked of the board's interpretation of rules regarding the teacher career ladder, no pass no play, school financing and student discipline, saying the state must "look at what's equitable for the children of the state of Texas. We need to balance quality and equity."

Various polls have found widespread support for the education reforms, Brumley said, adding "I believe the reforms will work."

He cautioned the legislature, however, to "be very careful in making it more expensive for school districts right now. Realistically, they're (the Legislature) not going to give us anymore money, but I believe that underfunding the reforms will kill it. We need to make the Legislature aware with credibility and present the cost and impact (of the reforms) as fairly as possible."

Follwing the speech, Archie Blackwell, a member of the Greenwood Independent School District Board of Trustees agreed with Brumley's remarks regarding funding of the reforms.

"It's going to be a problem," he said. "He's saying it just like it is."

Students' exhibits 'impressive' at Showcase, Rebels in Review

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

The blue ribbon committee headed by Dallas computer magnate H. Ross Perot looked at education around Texas, declared them wanting in quality and quantity, and proposed sweeping reforms that continue to generate controversy since approved by state legislators last year.

Anyone attending the Midland High School Showcase '85 or the Lee High School Rebels In Review might well wonder what schools Perot's committee studied.

The exhibits shown at both were impressive. The work displayed indicated that individual initiative, coupled with talent and capable instruction can produce outstanding work.

Industrial arts exhibits in wood, metal and plastic categories displayed at both schools could easily grace the showrooms of retail outlets anywhere and command the going price.

There were hutches, chests of drawers, night stands, end tables and tables, and other fine cabinet work, including a canopied double bed, that would be show pieces in any home. There were replicas of large grandfather-type clocks, as well as smaller versions.

Metal work displayed included a pickup truck headache rack, a chromed custom bumper, charcoal broiler-smokers, a contemporary center-of-the-room or corner fireplace, windmills, a variety of outddoor swings, even metal rocking chairs.

Art work displays covered a wide range of subjects, including pastoral works, character studies, modernistic themes and artistic styles now associated with what is refered to as heavy-metal art. The degree of talent demonstrated by the young artists ranged from very good to near-professional.

Equally impressive were the renderings of those students involved in architectural and technical (what used to be called mechanical) design and drafting. Scale models of homes were displayed, as were blueprints. Technical drafting displays showed highly detailed cutaway perspectives of two modern day fighter aircraft. World War II nostalgia buffs might have scratched their heads to recognize a similarly detailed perspective of a Northrup P-61 Black Widow night fighter.

Other displays and demonstrations at both schools featured computer math, word processors, cosmetology, biology, photojournalism and other educational specialties.

Patio activities at Lee High School kicked off with the Dixie Dolls dancing their way through an energetic routine, followed by a Home Economics Department style show and a comedic monologue reminiscent of the old Gomer Pyle TV series.

At Midland High, those arriving were greeted by the school's percussion ensemble romping through a rousing set of tunes and PTA members in Centennial costumes handing out programs and taking names.

The purpose of the Midland High Showcase '85 and the Lee High Rebels In Review was to show Midlanders what's right in their schools. Both schools amply demonstrated Monday night that there are a lot of students who have taken advantage of educational opportunities available to them, acquiring worthwhile skills and producing some very outstanding work in the course of the learning process.

ECISD opposes order letting student play

Judge rules student can play despite failing grade

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

Ector County School District trustees Monday decided to contest a temporary restraining order issued by 244th District Judge Joe Connally that allows a Permian High School football player to play despite a failing grade.

Last Thursday, May 2, Tommy Bryant, on behalf of his son, Terry, filed suit in Connally's court seeking a temporary restraining order and injunction to enjoin ECISD officials "from declaring or ordering that the minor plaintiff, or any student similarly situated as the minor plaintiff, is ineligible to participate in extracurricular activites, or practice for same, at their respective schools in the Ector County Independent School District, through enforcement of any statute, policy or rule, the validity of which is questioned."

Bryant sought the restraining order after learning his 16-year-old son and five other Permian High football players would not be allowed to suit up for spring practice because they had failing grades in one or more subjects.

The dispute stems from the so-called "no pass-no play" implemented by the Texas Education Agency in accord with wide-ranging educational reforms approved by the Texas Legislature last summer. The rule went into effect April 5, 1985.

Bryant contends the bulk of his son's school work for the last grading period was complete prior to the effective date of the alleged rule which is being applied against him. Terry Bryant had a failing grade in only one subject, Spanish, his father said.

The elder Bryant further contends rules applied against his son "seem to be vague and incomprehensible. There seems to be a great deal of confusion among school administrators as to just what 'extracurricular activities' should be deprived and which ones should not."

Failure to apply comparable sanctions against the drill team and other activities Bryant believes is unfair.

Connally originally granted the temporary restraining order to cover Bryant's son and "any student similarly situated," but later scratched out and initialled that phrase, meaning the restraining order would apply only to Bryant.

At a special meeting Monday noon, school trustees met in closed session for nearly an hour before emerging and voting unanimously to instruct school district attorney Bob Cox to oppose Connally's order and ask him to dismiss the order and follow state law and board policy.

Connally has scheduled a 9 a.m. Friday hearing that could turn the temporary restraining order into a temporary injunction.

CentennialFest deadline extended

From Staff Reports

Due to the number of Midlanders still wanting to participate but have not had time to get their applications in, the Midland Centennial Commission has announced a deadline extension to the CentennialFest parade and booth applications. Both committees have extended their deadlines until Monday, May 20.

Booths are available for food, beverage, arts/crafts and historical displays. Entries for arts and crafts must be handmade and all entries are subject to the approval of the committee.

Booths will be constructed with the food booths being eight feet by 12 feet and all other booths will be eight feet by eight feet.

The booths will be covered, and a table and two chairs will be provided. The booths will be partially decorated, but entrants must provide their own shelves or other displays if needed. Security will be provided on a 24-hour basis.

Parade entrants are encouraged to depict a part of Midland's history. For parade or booth applications, go by the Centennial Office, 109 N. Main, Chamber of Commerce building, ground level, or call 686-1965.

McKinley, Clark, Herd, Ahders chosen Centennial Citizens

From Staff Reports

Nancy McKinley, David Clark, Harriet Herd and County Judge William B. Ahders have been selected as this week's Centennial Citizens by the Midland Centennial Commission and Leadership Midland Alumni. They now are eligible to win two roundtrip tickets to London, England, provided by American Airlines.

Mrs. McKinley previously worked for the Permian Corporation and the Haley Memorial Library. She has been instrumental in the preservation of Midland County history. She was chairman of the recently published "Pioneer History of Midland County 1880-1976." She has served many years as president for the Midland County Historical Society. She also was responsible for the purchase and restoration of the Brown-Dorsey Medallion Home which is registered as a Texas Historical Landmark and the only building in Midland County on the National Register of Historical Buildings.

Mrs. McKinley organized the Aaron Estes Chapter of the Daughters of the Republic of Texas and has served their board of management several times. She also served as past regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution and on the state board. She is a member of the Midland Centennial Commission. A native Midlander who has raised one child, she was named to the History Hall of Fame by the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Clark, an independent oil and gas operator, is president-elect of the Central YMCA board of directors. He served the March of Dimes on the executive committee for two years and was awarded the distinguished Volunteer Leadership Award for the March of Dimes. He belongs to the First Presbyterian Church and has served as a deacon and stewardship chairman. Currently, he is serving as the fellowship council chairman. He is a Leadership Midland alumnus and serves as a CentennialFest chairman for the Midland Centennial Commission. A native Midlander, Clark and his wife, Cynthia, have two children.

Nancy McKinley David Clark

Harriet Herd Judge W. Ahders

Mrs. Herd has lived in Midland 45 years. She helped start or was a charter member of several organizations including: Kappa Kappa Gamma alumni; organizing chairman of Family Counseling Services (now Family Services); organizing board of Permian Civic Ballet; and Junior Welfare League (now Junior League), which she served as president for two years. She also served twice as the organizing chairman for the Midland-Odessa Symphony Young Artist Competition.

Mrs. Herd has served on the boards of Midland Community Theatre, Midland County Library, Central and Metropolitan YMCAs, advisory board of Leadership Midland and the United Way. She is very active in the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity. She was a choir member for 20 years and currently serves on the Vestry. She was the first woman elected to the standing committee of the Diocese of Northwest Texas and the first woman to be elected as deputy to the National General Convention.

Mrs. Herd and her husband, Harvey, have three children and six grandchildren.

Ahders, who serves as Midland's county judge, first moved to the Tall City in 1950 as a special agent for theFederal Bureau of Investigation. He continued to work for the FBI in various capacities until he retired in 1968. He then was appointed municipal judge and held that position 10 years. He was elected to his current position of county judge in 1978.

Ahders is involved with the Midland Council on Alcoholism, Human Relations Council, United Way and Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission. The judge and his wife, Helen, have one son.

Each week between now and July 4, four Centennial Citizens will be selected. The Midland Centennial Commission is asking Midlanders to nominate their choice for Centennial Citizen. Entry blanks are available at the Centennial Office, 109 N. Main St., Chamber of Commerce building, ground level, or by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Centennial Citizen, P.O. Box 1985, Midland, Tx., 79705.

A list of the person's contributions should be included with the entry form.

Police investigate cases involving counterfeit money

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Police are investigating three cases involving counterfeit money passed at four different businesses in about the last 30 days.

According to police spokesman Rusty Baker, the $20 and $100 bills were produced on copy machines, with one of the machines used capable of producing color.

Baker said the $20 bills received at two businesses were black and white, while the two $100 bills were black and green and looked pretty much like the real thing, especially in dim light.

The first bill, a $100, was passed at the Casba Club, on the corner of West 16th Street and West County Road. The bartender said a man stopped in and asked if he could get change for a $100 bill. The counterfeit wasn't discovered until someone took it somewhere else to make a purchase.

The second bills were received at the Antlers Motel, 1120 W. 2nd Street, when a woman paid for a room with two $20 bills. They were not discovered until after a bank deposit was made and the owner received a call from what Baker said was a federal agent.

April 26, a man described as black entered the Planet Rock Club, 612 S. Grandview, and asked for change for a $20 bill. He left after getting change and the phony bill was not discovered until later.

April 3, a man described as white entered the Brewery, 1401 E. 7th Street, ordered a drink and paid for it with a $100 bill. The phony bill was discovered later.

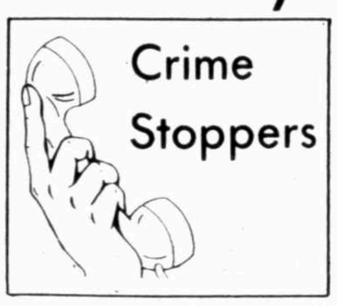
Crime Stoppers seeking information on robbery

Crime Stoppers this week is seeking information on an aggravated robbery April 4 in Odessa.

Mary Williamson was at work at the Community Grocery, 701 N. Amburgey, at 9:45 p.m. when two males walked into the store, pulled a weapon and jumped over the counter. As one man was taking money from the cash register, the other one made her lay face down and held a weapon at the back of her head.

The men were described as Hispanics, 5 feet 6 inches to 5 feet 7 inches and 160-170 pounds. Both men were wearing khaki pants, black cotton-type jackets with a zipper, white tennis shoes and had 3-inch muslin bandages wrapped around their faces, which were shoe-polished.

Crime Stoppers will pay $1,000 this week to anyone with information that leads the arrest and indictment of those involved in this robbery. Crime Stoppers pays cash rewards for information on other felony offenses. Callers do not have to reveal their identity.



To contact Crime Stoppers in Midland, call 694-TIPS; in Odessa, call 333-TIPS.

Anthropologist to address group

From Staff Reports

Dr. David Meltzer will present a program — "An Archeological Perspective on a 10,000-Year-Old Murder Mystery" — Thursday 7:30 p.m. at the meeting of the Midland Archeological Society at the Museum of the Southwest-Stable Gallery, behind the museum.

The meeting will include the annual covered dish supper in which the public is invited to attend.

Meltzer is with the Department of Anthropology at Southern Methodist University. He also serves as research associate for the Department of Anthropology, National Museum of Natural History, Smithsonian Institute and as adjunct Curator for the Dallas Museum of Natural History in Dallas.

Meetings on park updates slated

The Parks and Recreation Department is conducting the meetings to give citizens an update on what has been done and to discuss future developments.

The Washington Park meeting will be at 7 p.m. today in City Council Chambers, 300 N. Loraine.

The Hidalgo Park meeting will be at 7 p.m. Wednesday in City Council Chambers.

The public is encouraged to attend.

Odessan struck by car, killed

From Staff Reports

An Odessa man was dead Monday night after he was struck by a car about 16.9 miles west of Odessa at the intersection of Tomahawk Drive and Moss Avenue, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Fernando Alvarado, 29, was pronounced dead at Odessa Medical Center Hospital.

DPS reports indicated Alvarado was struck at 9:16 p.m. in the center lane by a 1982 Chevrolet traveling in the northbound lane on Moss.

The driver of the car, Luther Ray Garrett of Odessa, was not injured, reports said.

Jane Long Elementary PTA to meet tonight

From Staff Reports

The Jane Long Elementary School Parent-Teacher Association will meet at 7:30 p.m. today in the school cafeteria.

Following a brief business meeting, members will install officers and fourth grade students will perform.

DEATHS

William R. Weaver

Memorial services for William R. Weaver, 61, of Midland, were to be at 1:30 p.m. today in the Ellis Funeral Home chapel with Dr. Ray Riddle, chaplain of Hospice, officiating.

Weaver died Sunday at a Midland hospital.

Survivors include his wife, Marilynn King of Midland; a son, William R. Weaver Jr., of Lake Wood, Calif.; four daughters, Kathleen Faulk of Cambridge, Mass., Neena Tefteller of San Antonio, and Melanie Fausett and Kimberley Weaver, both of Midland; his mother, Velma Weaver of El Paso; a half-brother, C.R. McCune of Fort Worth; two sisters, Yvonne Warwick and Dorothy Weaver, both of El Paso; six grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

James C. Phillips

Services for James C. Phillips of Midland will be at 11:30 a.m. Wednesday in the Ellis Chapel with John Allan, pastor of Our Saviors Lutheran Church, and James Otterness, pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Risen Lord, officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Phillips died Sunday in a Midland hospital.

He was born June 28, 1921 in Wellington and was reared in Dallas. After graduating from high school he entered the Army. Following his discharge in December 1945, he attended Southern Methodist University, receiving a degree in civil engineering.

He married Maurine Johnson Feb. 28, 1942 in Fort Worth. He was employed with Gulf Oil Co., working in Houston, Odessa, Pittsburgh, Pa., Beaumont and Midland. He retired in 1984 after 34 years.

He was a member of Our Saviors Lutheran Church.

Survivors include his wife; one son, James T. Phillips of Odessa; two daughters, Diane P. McGauley of Dallas and Alice Elizabeth Phillips of Beaumont; one sister, Mrs. Malcom Dever of Granite Shaves; three grandchildren; and three nieces and four nephews.

The family requests memorials be directed to Our Saviors Lutheran Church Building Fund, care of John Allan, 1109 Ainslee, Midland.

Communities endangered by agricultural decline

MEMPHIS (AP) — Memphis' population is aging and quickly disappearing. Young people are moving away. Movie theaters and new car dealerships are gone. Farmers are going broke.

It's a bleak picture, and one that has spread to several rural counties across Texas in the last decade.

The situation is so dreary, that some communities face extinction, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reports.

While Texas' population grew by more than three million people from 1970 to 1980, 41 counties in rural West Texas actually lost population.

"If it wasn't for the retired people in town, and for Social Security, Memphis would dry up," said Robert Harvey, 57, a cotton farmer.

"It's a very depressed area, and the people in the area are very depressed. It's like there's been a death in the family, or a divorce," Harvey said.

Memphis, population 3,352, is the county seat of Hall County, where the population has shrunk from 16,966 people in 1930 to less than 6,000 in 1980.

But Memphis' isn't alone.

"There are literally hundreds of Memphises out there" in West Texas, said class of '62 member Phil Duncan, a former Panhandle newspaperman who now heads the Fort Worth office of U.S. Rep. Jim Wright.

Located about 90 miles southeast of Amarillo, Memphis is a quiet, slow-paced town of modest middle-class residences, churches and shops.

A substantial number of downtown businesses appear to be faring well, such as Jerry's Cafe, a mecca for good plate lunches and the latest gossip.

But boarded-up storefronts on several downtown streets testify to the failure of other entrepreneurial dreams.

Ancient burial site found where reservoir is to be

GRAND PRAIRIE (AP) — Students and archaeologists have discovered an ancient burial site that soon will lie at the bottom of Joe Pool Reservoir between Dallas and Fort Worth, officials said.

Grave artifacts from an as yet unidentified era were uncovered by Southern Methodist University students working 42 known archaeological sites in part of the 11,000-acre tract where the reservoir will flow by next year, officials said.

Although the historic information being discovered is not nationally significant, it is important for the area, said Duane Peter, project director for the SMU Archaeology Research Program.

"Prehistoric history for this area is almost a total unknown. Anything the sites have to offer will provide a better picture," Peter said.

This week one of the sites will be opened to give the public access to the remains of a 125-year-old farm.

"Those who are interested can actually excavate, (but) they need to sign up ahead of time," said Susan Leho, field director.

Any artifacts uncovered will be placed in SMU's collection.

Almost 11,000 acres of land will be under Joe Pool Reservoir by next year. SMU was hired by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to do the research before the area is covered by the lake.

In addition to being invited to dig themselves, visitors can see the remaining buildings on the Old Penn Farmstead. The site will border the future lake and become the Lakeview State Park.

Two miles of walking tours are also mapped around the farm buildings, and several craftsmen will demonstrate 19th-century skills in pottery, production, cooking, weaving, spinning and animal butchering during the May 10-12 event.

The Penn farm is one of 11 historic and five prehistoric sites under excavation by the university. Forty-two were identified in 1979 and 1980, but the archaeologists began concentrating on the ones thought to be most important in January.

Actual digging should be finished in June, Peter said.

HOUSTON (AP) — Harris County authorities were holding a 45-year-old man on a charge of murder for allegedly killing his wife by beating her with an electric drill.

Santos Hernandez was held on $10,000 bond for the slaying Monday of his wife Beatrice, 38.

Lt. Grace Ozmer of the Harris County Sheriff's Department said the incident occurred after Hernandez learned that his wife had filed for divorce.

Stop Smoking Clinic deals with physical and psychological need

Fran Nobles credits the success of the Stop Smoking Clinic to the program's dual focus. The five day program is guaranteed. Call 682-7333 for more information.

What makes smokers willing to drive from miles around to go to the Stop Smoking Clinic at Mission Square Plaza?

Karen Kirkwood, a recent participant in the Stop Smoking Clinic, answers that question. "I think it's a terrific thing to go to if you want to quit... It was easy going through that program... I wish I'd gone sooner."

Karen had been smoking for 19 years and was smoking three to four packs a day before she went to the Stop Smoking Clinic. Karen has asthma and before going through this incredible program she had tried acupuncture and quitting cold turkey.

The professionals of the Stop Smoking Association understand how difficult it can be to quit. They were all smokers in the past. That's why they developed a special program to help individuals who want to quit smoking.

The Stop Smoking Association's program deals with the psychological needs of clients along with the individuals' physical needs. The program centers around a guaranteed, aversion-type therapy which does not use drugs or hypnosis. On Monday there is a 45 minute to one hour orientation session which may be in a group. The next four days there are 20-30 minute individual sessions. Each session is scheduled at the client's convenience and the program is set up on a contract basis.

The key to this five day program is the dual focus on breaking the physical need for cigarette smoking, as well as the psychological need.

Nicotine is a habit forming "drug" which enslaves smokers to cigarettes. According to the Stop Smoking Clinic, "this physical dependency on nicotine can be broken within five days. Once a person stops smoking 75 percent of the nicotine leaves his or her body in 24 hours, ...97-98 percent leaves by the third day, ...and all of the nicotine is gone within five days. After five days the need for a cigarette may still be very real, but it is a psychological need, not a physical one."

Because smoking is a habit from association of pleasure or reward, the habit must be broken in the subconscious. The Stop Smoking Clinic deals with this association so that their clients don't experience the severe withdrawal often caused by quitting "cold turkey."

Fran Nobles, a former smoker who started the Midland Stop Smoking Association franchise, went through the program in January of 1984. She says, "It doesn't matter how much you smoke or how long you've smoked, this program (which was designed by Doris Fayo of Odessa) works the same."

Fran reports that within a month after going through the program and quitting, she felt much better than she even expected. Moreover, she no longer had a desire for a cigarette.

Weight is not a problem, because both the physical need and the psychological need for smoking were resolved.

Having experience the success of the Stop Smoking Association program in Odessa, Fran opened a franchise in Mission Square for Midlanders. She emphasizes that there is no miracle cure for smoking. To successfully quit, she says, a smoker must want to do it for himself not just for someone else.

The program is guaranteed if it is followed for five days, so there is nothing to lose. To sign up just call Fran Nobles at 682-7333 or the Odessa office at 335-8175. There are family and office discounts though the program will be individualized for each person involved.

House of Carpets continues low, low prices throughout this week! For big savings, drop by their store in the Village Shopping Center on West Wall Street!

Tremendous sale continues at the House of Carpets

"Since 1951, House of Carpets has been the number one carpet store in Midland, both in competitive pricing and quality installation and service," says House of Carpets President Felix Welmaker. Famous brand names such as C. H. Masland and Sons, Cabin Crafts, Evans Black by Armstrong, and Milliken Place are featured year-round and at attractive, reasonable prices.

House of Carpets is Midland's oldest and most respected name in carpets and has served up to three generations of some of Midland's oldest and most respected families. Over 150 other carpet stores have come and gone, but House of Carpets has remained through boom and bust, maintaining its reputation for quality products and quality service. You can depend on House of Carpets, year after year after year.

This week, House of Carpets is featuring reduced prices on carpets, vinyl floorcoverings and mini-blinds. Please bring in this article and ask for the special discounts. Also, you may bring in this article for a 25% discount on all spot cleaners. (This offer is good until May 11th at 4 p.m.)

If you are new in Midland, you're invited to drop in and get acquainted with the pleasant professional floorcovering counselors at House of Carpets. The "House" is Midland's only charter member of the R.F.I., Specialists. You'll find that doing business with Midland's number one carpet store is a pleasant experience and easy on your budget, too!

Remember, bring in a copy of this article for the special discounts mentioned above. Offers good the remainder of this week!

Aguirre given special recognition at Midland Hilton

Employees like Anna Maria Aguirre make the Midland Hilton more than just another place to stay. Dedicated employees are what make it THE HILTON - a great place to get away.

Recently while cleaning one of the rooms, Anna Maria discovered some jewelry-$10,000 worth of antique jewelry to be exact. Anna Maria turned it into the management, and the jewelry was given back to the guest who left it.

The out-of-town guest was delighted to recover the jewelry which was of great sentimental value. The guest rewarded Anna Maria with $80 and General Manager Marshall Hill says a special party, review, and pay raise are being planned to recognize this dedicated employee.

Anna Maria has been with the Midland Hilton for three years and says that she enjoys working in housekeeping because the employees all work together and share the load. The team spirit really makes a difference.

Executive Housekeeper Mike Davis points out, Anna Maria has a "behind the scenes job... It is so important to us that we have honest, hardworking people there (housekeeping department)."

"We have a very enviable record of things being turned in to lost and found," says Hill.

"Good employees are what make this business go," continues Hill. That's why the Hilton is careful to recognize employees with special awards. It is important for employees to know that "there is a reward for doing your job well," says Hill.

When employees feel confident and enjoy their jobs the guests pick up on that. "It takes positive, upbeat employees to bring guest satisfaction," Hill explains.

Conrad Hilton recognized this when he started the very first Hilton. That's why he worked not only to recruit good people but to keep them with the Hilton. His personnel philosophy still reigns at Midland Hilton. This spirit of professionalism is what has made the Hilton famous for guest satisfaction.

Whether you are planning a banquet, enjoying fine American regional cuisine at Charlie's, or staying at the Midland Hilton, you will enjoy the service of employees like Anna Maria.

Midland Hilton Executive Housekeeper Mike Davis congratulates Anna Maria Aguirre for a job well done.

Dorothy Hall of Scooter's Plumbing, 1101 W. Florida, points out that their extensive showroom makes selecting a whirlpool or GE appliance a pleasure.

Scooter's has whirlpools, GE appliances

Scooter's Plumbing is more than just a plumbing shop. Located at 1101 W. Florida, Scooter's Plumbing has been serving Midland for 23 years and has a complete showroom of GE appliances and Kohler whirlpools, along with high quality Carrier air conditioners.

When you start remodeling your kitchen, Scooter's Plumbing is the place to go for your new built-ins. Scooter's Plumbing and GE are offering a terrific bargain for those who are completely remodeling their kitchen. Contractors and individuals can get GE washers, dryers, refrigerators, ovens, cooktops, microwaves, dishwashers, and disposals at WHOLESALE prices for those complete remodeling jobs. Scooter's Plumbing will even deliver the appliances free of charge.

Owner Roy Rotan points out that he offers the exceptionally popular cooktop with a built-in fan which eliminates the need for a vent-a-hood.

If you want Scooter's professionals to install the appliances, you can get a free estimate on that.

One of the nicest things about Scooter's Plumbing is their huge showroom. GE appliances are displayed in vignettes so that it is easy to imagine how they will fit and look in a home. It sure beats trying to look at a catalog and picture what those appliances are really like.

Mr. Rotan says that they keep many of the built-in models in stock.

Check the prices and you'll return to Scooter's Plumbing.

The Kohler whirlpools at Scooter's Plumbing are also very popular. These high quality units are on display in the showroom and can be priced with or without installation.

Scooter's has everything from the large whirlpools to an economical whirlpool the size of a standard bathtub.

These professionals are proud to offer quality Delta fixtures. Delta's cultured gold faucets are an exceptional value, says Mr. Rotan.

Of course, Scooter's Plumbing is equally proud of their Carrier line. Carrier is one of the largest air conditioning manufacturers in the nation. Best of all, Carrier has done extensive research to develop some of the most efficient units available. They know efficiency pays off.

And you'll find that it pays off to purchase your GE appliances, Kohler whirlpool, and Carrier air conditioning from Scooter's Plumbing, 1101 W. Florida. Call 682-5984 or browse through the showroom, Monday through Friday, 9:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

B and J provides quality carpet and upholstery cleaning

Is it time to have your carpet or upholstery cleaned? If it is there a few things you should know before you trust your carpet investment to just any cleaning system.

The professionals at B and J Carpet and Upholstery Cleaners did a lot of research before they purchased their Von Schrader equipment. Perhaps, you can learn from their discoveries.

There are four basic ways to clean carpet and upholstery: the rotary brush method, the hand application method, the "steam method," and the only safe way the Von Schrader extractor method.

With the rotary brush method shampoo is scrubbed into the surface of the carpet using one large or two small brushes. This does a fair job of cleaning the carpet surface, but the deep-down dirt is either untouched or carried deeper into the pile by the shampoo. This method makes no provision for the removal of the shampoo and dirt, thus the carpet must be vacuumed later in a separate operation.

Have you ever seen a man on hands and knees sponging a carpet? This is the second method of cleaning. Such old-fashioned procedures will brighten the surface but can't remove the dirt deep in the pile. This results in embedded dirt working up quickly to the surface and resoiling the carpet.

One of the methods which many companies use is the "steam" method. In the first place, according to Von Schrader reps, no steam is used- probably a good thing since live steam would be disastrous to your good carpet. Actually, the "steam" is only hot water that is sprayed into the carpet. In most cases, little more than half of the dirt bearing water is extracted from the carpet. The remainder is left and can result in soggy carpet, browning, mildew, shrinkage, or damaged backing, padding and floors. Drying time can run up to 24 hours - a long time for any carpet are to be unusable.

Betty and Jerry Massey, owners of B and J Upholstery are delighted that they can offer the Von Schrader method which protects your carpet from these hazards. This method uses a dry foam (not gallons of water!) and a cylindrical brush which champoos down to the base of the carpet (unlike rotary brushes which merely clean the surface!). Moreover, this equipment immediately vacuums the floor, its powerful suction lifting out dirt laden foam in seconds.

Only the Von Schrader Carpet Extractor applies a dirt emulsifying dry foam, brushes it thoroughly into the carpet and removes both foam and dirt immediately before it can sink back down into the carpet. This simultaneous operation is an important benefit. Because only foam is used, your carpet is ready for use in an hour or so, and there is no danger of shrinkage, dry-rot, browning, or mildew.

Betty and Jerry Massey want to please their customers both with their carpet and upholstery cleaning. All you have to do is call 697-0444 and Jerry will be glad to give you a free demonstration and estimate.

These professionals are bonded and insured. Once they have carefully cleaned your carpet and/or upholstery, paying careful attention to getting those bad spots out, they will rake the carpet for you. They also offer carpet protector by Du Pont, room freshner, and chemicals that will get rid of pet odors. Even your auto upholstery and carpet can be cleaned with their Von Schrader VS 2 equipment.

Whether the carpet in your home or office needs to be cleaned, now is the time to call B and J Carpet and Upholstery. Many apartment managers have discovered what a difference B and J makes and at reasonable prices ($35 for one bedroom apartment, $45 for 2 bedroom, and $55 for 3 bedroom).

Betty Massey uses the Von Schrader VS 2 to get upholstery and carpet around the baseboards looking like new again. Meanwhile, Jerry Massey cleans the carpet with the Von Schrader VS 1. Call B and J Carpet and Upholstery Cleaners at 697-0444.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, May 8, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Your courage and pioneering instincts bring you great success in the months ahead. Travel enhances romance while creating new business opportunities. Build savings as quickly as possible. You will not want to miss out on an unusual investment offer. Make sure partner knows that a temporary sacrifice will be richly rewarded later on. A pet could play a special role in your domestic life. Encourage children to develop their natural talents. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Funnyman Don Rickles, Illinois Gov. James Thompson, actress Melissa Gilbert, Stephen Furst of "St. Elsewhere," Kansas City Royals' Dennis Leonard, St. Louis Cardinals' pinch hitter Steve Braun.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your clear thinking impresses someone influential. Avoid tackling too many projects at one time. A friend will be glad to help out if approached in the right way. Repay favors.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Financial backing is available, but you will have to ask for it. Avoid making impulsive promises when promoting a pet project. Listen to a friend who has your best interests at heart.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your originality attracts the attention of an influential person. As your work environment improves, you find new harmony in your personal relationships. Recent tensions disappear. Forge new alliances.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are delighted by your new popularity. Flexibility is the key to greater success at work. Be willing to tackle those tasks others shun. A quiet but romantic evening caps a busy day.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Distant events take on new meaning. The pieces of a puzzle fall into place.

Success depends on your ability to resist the temptation to mix business with pleasure. Be discreet.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Home improvements are high on your list of priorities. A friend or relative's problem requires special handling. Family members lean on you for support. Offer as much encouragement as you can.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A work situation changes in several ways. A letter or phone call brings welcome financial news. Romance enjoys highly favorable influences. A younger person is strongly attracted to you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your thoroughness begins to pay off. A new project should remain on the back burner until you decide how to promote it. Others are eager to climb on your bandwagon. Forge new alliances.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The atmosphere at work improves. You feel lighthearted and much more optimistic about any changes. Someone you meet on a business trip could play a major role in your future.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Welcome suggestions from younger, less experienced co-workers. They could point out things that you have never focused on. Double check all details related to financial transactions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A creative idea will impress high-ups if it swells profits. A conversation with a co-worker gives you new insight into employment practices. Avoid acting on impulse.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Stress your professional attitude and wealth of experience when applying for a coveted position. An intriguing job offer could be forthcoming. Think carefully before jumping at it.

Opening lead: Queen of ♣.

More often than not, if you make an inadvertent bid, you end up paying dearly for the error. So it is a pleasant duty to report a case where just the opposite occurred. It happened at the recent Spring North American Championships in Montreal.

The players were late in getting started and South, Sam Smith of Newton, Mass., intended opening the bidding with one diamond.

To his horror, he heard himself say: "One heart." After his partner had responded one spade, he could think of no way to bid the hand without getting himself into more trouble, so he tried a rebid of one no trump in the hope that his partner would be weakish and pass. Matters did not improve when his partner jumped to four hearts. West's double, followed by North's redouble, turned the whole auction into a nightmare, but there was no place to go, so Smith decided to stick it out.

West led his singleton club honor. Declarer won in hand and led a low trump, on which West played low. Dummy's ten won, and declarer returned to hand with the king of spades to lead another trump.

There was no point to following with a low trump to this trick, so West won the king and exited with his low trump, won in dummy. The diamond finesse lost to West's queen. He drew the last trump, but that was it for the defense—declarer had all suits under control, and the rest of the tricks were his.

Instead of the zero he had been expecting, South ended up with a top score thanks to the double. The usual contract was three no trump which, when declarer brought in the whole club suit with a finesse of the nine, usually yielded ten tricks if the opponents cashed out when they got in with a diamond.

Richie to receive honorary degree

TUSKEGEE, Ala. (AP) — Grammy award-winner Lionel Richie will return to the place where he launched his musical career as member of the Commodores when he receives an honorary degree from Tuskegee Institute next week.

School officials announced Monday that Richie will receive an honorary doctorate of music during commencement excercises at his alma mater May 12.

Richie, 36, became leader of the Commodores not long after the six-member musical group formed at Tuskegee Institute in 1968.

Since leaving the group two years ago for a solo career, Richie has won a Grammy award and signed a multimillion-dollar contract with Pepsi Cola for a series of commercials.

The musician received a degree from the school in business administration in 1974.

MANCHESTER, Maine (AP) — Samantha Smith, whose 1982 letter to a Soviet leader won her international headlines, will star in a weekly ABC television show this fall.

Samantha, 12, will appear in an action-adventure called "J.G. Culver" with Robert Wagner. She will portray the daughter of an insurance investigator played by Wagner.

"When I first found out I was screaming," she said Monday from her home. "I've gotten over the thrill," but "I'm really excited and I hope it will last a long time."

The family plans to move to California next month for the beginning of taping. The series is set in the United States and London.

Samantha's father, Arthur, has quit his job as a college English professor to devote all his time to handling his daughter's public appearances. She is getting an undisclosed amount for the television show.

Samantha entered the news when she wrote a letter to Yuri Andropov, then-Premier of the Soviet Union expressing her worries about nuclear war. He wrote her back and invited her to Russia for two weeks.

CHICAGO (AP) — Invoking the names of Thomas Jefferson, Alexander Hamilton and Abraham Lincoln as examples of "lawyer-statesmen," Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist said attorneys' contribution to the "political life of the nation is sadly diminished."

Rehnquist in a speech Monday at the University of Chicago Law School said lawyers who play a vital part in this nation's government "appear to be a breed which, if not totally disappeared, is at least disappearing."

He put part of the blame on time demands made by law firms but also said he had no clear idea of why lawyer-statesmen seemed in short supply.

"Firms are getting more demanding of lawyers to put in time (in the office)," he said. "If a lawyer is expected to bill 2,000 hours a year, chances for diversity are diminished."

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — The state treasurer says all those dreary portraits of former governors around the statehouse should be replaced by those of state natives people can relate to — like Olympics gymnast Mary Lou Retton.

"The alcoves inside the Capitol just cry for something to be there that is alive, not a bunch of dead ex-governors," Treasurer A. James Manchin said Monday.

"Those pictures frighten the schoolchildren when they come here on tours," he said.

Manchin said three other native West Virginians had been named by a committee he had appointed to a proposed Hall of Fame — author Pearl Buck, pilot Chuck Yeager and basketball great Jerry West.

Actor Dom DeLuise jokingly sweeps his star on Hollywood's Walk of Fame after receiving the honor in Monday evening ceremonies. DeLuise's is only the second star unveiled at night.

Four others would be named to fill all of the eight alcoves in the Capitol hallway, he said. Possible nominees include comedians Soupy Sales and Don Knotts.

The idea hasn't gone over too well with other statehouse officials, however.

"As long as Gov. (Arch) Moore is running this state, the Capitol building will reflect the respect for the history and tradition of our state in a tasteful manner," said Finance Commissioner John McCuskey.

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — Charles Shipman Payson, who embarked on an industrial career that made him one of the richest people in the nation, died Sunday in Lexington, Ky. He was 86.

In 1983, Forbes magazine listed him as one of America's 400 wealthiest men. Payson married Joan Whitney, daughter of businessman Payne Whitney, in 1924. Mrs. Payson, who owned the New York Mets baseball team, died in 1975. In 1977 he married Virginia Kraft, a former editor with Sports Illustrated. Payson set off on a career in thoroughbred racing, operating a breeding farm and racing stable in Kentucky and a thoroughbred training center in Florida.

NEW YORK (AP) — Henrietta Leith Ambro, who reported on New York City for The Associated Press for 38 years, died Sunday of cancer. She was 68.

Miss Leith got her first newspaper job in 1937, at the Raleigh Register in Beckley, W.Va., then joined the Baltimore Evening Sun in 1942. She joined the AP in 1946 in New York. Miss Leith was the widow of Peter Ambro, an AP broadcast news writer who died in 1965.

Carol Channing no 'dumb blonde'

By BOB THOMAS

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — With her wide, expectant eyes and flying, platinum hair, Carol Channing has often been the picture of the perfect dumb blonde.

However, as she revealed in her portraits of Lorelei Lee and Dolly Levi, sagacity resides behind those open brown eyes. How else could she manage 30-odd years in show business with scarcely an idle week?

Miss Channing is "The Great Survivor" and played "Hello, Dolly" 1,273 times without missing a performance and without a tiff with producer David Merrick, known along Broadway as "The Abominable Showman."

"I never had a fight with David, and it was all because of Charles," Miss Channing recalled about her manager-husband Charles Lowe. "Charles instructed me, 'Don't talk to him.' Every time David came backstage, I was busy studying my script.

"He came backstage during the fourth year of 'Hello, Dolly,' and I was still studying my script. 'That's what I like to see,' he said, 'a performer who tends to business!'"

The Great Survivor is again in Hollywood where it all started for her in 1948, when she appeared in a revue called "Lend an Ear" at a tiny theater off Hollywood Boulevard. The revue, directed by the late Gower Champion, took her to Broadway, where she has starred in such shows as "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," "Show Girl," "The Vamp," "Hello, Dolly" and "Lorelei."

Aside from the disastrous "Skidoo," which she declines to remember, Miss Channing's last movie was "Thoroughly Modern Millie" in 1967. Now she's back on the film stages playing the White Queen in Irwin Allen's extravaganza, "Alice in Wonderland." It is to be a four-hour CBS-TV special next season.

No one could miss Carol Channing as she glided into the MGM commissary in her flowing queen's gown, a foot-high chess marker atop her head. She sat down to a lunch interview and poured herself a glass of clear liquid from a large silver flask.

"It's only distilled water, dear," she said. "And I brought my own lunch, too. I can eat anything, as long as it's organic. I'm allergic to pesticides, you see."

She reported that she had recently gained 10 pounds, on orders from her longtime mentor and frequent co-star, George Burns. "You don't look right; put on some weight," he told her.

"Whatever George tells me, I do," she said. "But it wasn't easy. All women of Nancy Reagan's generation suffer from a degree of anorexia. It is something that is hard to conquer."

Miss Channing had to work "Alice in Wonderland" into her typically cluttered schedule. She took a leave from "Jerry's Girls," the revue based on Jerry Herman's show tunes, in which she has been appearing for 40 weeks. As soon as she finishes as the White Queen, she'll play 14 weeks in an extravaganza at the MGM Grand in Reno, then it's back to "Jerry's Girls."

The Lowes maintain a house above the Sunset Strip, however, she only sees it when she's working here.

"People feel so sorry for me, traveling all the time," Miss Channing said. "All those hotel rooms! I love it. I haven't washed a dish in 15 years, and I'm hoping not to break my record."

Carol Channing appears ageless, though Who's Who reports that she was born in Seattle in 1923, daughter of George Channing, Christian Science lecturer and editor. She got her first taste of dramatics at Bennington College and made her Broadway debut in the Marc Blitzstein opera, "Not for an Answer."

She auditioned for Marge Champion while her husband, Gower, was busy preparing "Lend an Ear."

"You've got to hear this girl," Marge reportedly told Gower, and as a result Miss Channing was cast as the gorgeously vacant Gladiola Girl. The show not only made a star of Carol Channing, but established Gower Champion as a director.

When Merrick suggested "Hello, Dolly!" to Carol, she said, "Yes — if you can get Gower Champion."

In recent years, Miss Channing has undertaken two lengthy tours of "Dolly."

"I'll do it every 15 years. I got that advice from John Gielgud, who told me, 'You Americans are foolish in not wanting to repeat your roles. I make a practice of playing Hamlet every 15 years.'"

The only lapse in her career came with the birth of her son, Channing, now a syndicated political cartoonist at the Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel.

"I don't like not working," she said. "If we have two weeks off, Charles and I fly to New York or London to see the shows. Three weeks off, and I begin to feel bad.

"My idol is George Burns. ... He never stops. ... The other day we were working up a show at his house, and he remembered jokes we had done in 1955 and 1970. When I said I could never do that, he replied, 'Of course not. You're not 88 yet.'"

Graham Parker goes on tour with Clapton

By MARY CAMPBELL

Graham Parker has a new album out and he's opening for Eric Clapton on tour. But the most exciting thing that has happened to him recently is the birth of his daughter Natalie Louise on Jan. 16.

The baby was born in Manhattan, where British-born Parker and his American wife have an apartment. "I live between London and New York," he says.

He says he's going to spend most of his time in New York and his parents will come over from England to visit. "The baby will entertain."

The tour began in early April, for four weeks. After six weeks off, the tour will resume for another five weeks.

"This tour I'm playing rhythm guitar, which I've never done before," Parker says. "I generally hire a rhythm guitarist so I can play on some numbers and on others be free to move around. I'm doing it because I played it on every track of my new album and it seems to be the basis of my new songs."

The album, "Steady Nerves," by Graham Parker and the Shot on Elektra Records, was No. 111 and climbing on the May 4 best-selling chart. Reviewer Marty Racine in the Houston Chronicle calls it "Graham Parker's best album of a lengthy career." He oured with Parker in 1983.

"Steady Nerves" is Parker's first album for Elektra. He was on Mercury and Arista before, fairly unhappy at both labels. After Graham Parker and the Rumour split, he recorded with studio musicians. "I did two albums without a band name, 'Another Grey Area' and 'The Real Macaw.' Only now I'm back into a rock 'n' roll band I could give a name to.

"The name the Shot came way before this record. I didn't tell the band until the record was finished, in case there were any objections. But they seemed to like it."

The name of the band and the title of the album, he says, are in a line in "Locked into Green," one of the LP's songs. "It's about snooker, like pool, played on a big table. The line is 'A shot of drink to steady nerves.'"

When Graham Parker and the Rumour started, Parker says, "We were very, very aggressive. We really frightened audiences a lot at first. It wasn't just thrash and scream. It was melody and structure and a tradition of song writing.

"In the Rumour, everybody was soloing at the same time. Everybody was playing pretty wild, frenetic stuff. It was great to use a band that sat on the groove in 'Another Grey Area.' With the Shot, I've got a combination of the power of a real rock 'n' roll band and a drummer that really holds the groove tight."

The punk movement hurt Graham Parker and the Rumour at first, he says. "The press in England was quick to say we were yesterday's thing. Sometimes it wouldn't matter if you wrote 'Hey, Jude.' But it all balances out after awhile. I think quality is going to win in the end of the day.

"Actually, my records kept selling steadily throughout England during the punk thing. We'd established a real audience. We did a huge amount of touring. Every record that came out, we would tour Britain and England, sometimes twice."

During an interview with Parker, one doesn't see his eyes. "I'm stuck with these sunglasses," he says, "because I started out with them. I wear bizarre T-shirts on stage. I pick them up in strange places, like Greenwich Village. I like to wear ordinary workmen's shirts when I'm not in a professional capacity. And I rarely wear these glasses apart from when I'm Graham Parker and the Shot.

"I don't like to be recognized if I can help it, in my normal life. I walk out of my apartment without the glasses and I have anonymity to a pretty fair extent. If anybody asks if I'm Graham Parker I say, 'No, he's the guy who wears shades.'

"The best compliment I had was in a Mexican restaurant where I was with my wife and her aunt. A woman came up and said, 'I think you're the funniest man in the world.' Either she thought I was Woody Allen or she knows my songs really well and knows how funny they really are. 'Canned Laughter' and 'Lunatic Fringe' on the new record have a few elements of humor."

Parker was pleased by a review of 'The Real Macaw' which called it the best-sung album of the year along with "Thriller."

He says, "Usually people don't pick that out, that Graham is singing to absolute max. I like it when people are paying attention. The reviews of my last two albums have been pretty awful in England. They don't do sensible criticism; they don't say something like I'm mismatched with the producer or the songs aren't focused. They say it's rubbish. It may not be whatever people want or expect but I don't do rubbish."

He'll write more songs, Parker says, after the tour. "I'll have time to breathe and see what happens next. Whether I'll write nursery rhymes, I don't know. Maybe. 'The Graham Parker Children's Album.'

"I think that's unlikely."

Richard Donner does fantasies, rock videos

By BOB THOMAS

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — From the medieval "Ladyhawke" to the magical "The Goonies" to a wild Cyndi Lauper music video, Richard Donner proves he is a filmmaker who refuses to be pigeonholed.

He's the man who directed the first "Superman" epic and the first version of "The Omen." In demand as a maker of big adventures, he turned around and filmed the small-scale drama, "Inside Moves."

During the past two years, Donner was occupied with a medieval fantasy about spellbound lovers who become a hawk and a wolf by night, and a Steven Spielberg romp about seven young people in search of adventure. Then, just to show he can swing with the times, he cranked out the video for the carrot-haired rocker.

Donner talked about his wide-ranging projects in his office at the Burbank Studios, a spacious room whose walls are jammed with mementoes from movies past. A New Yorker who graduated from off-Broadway acting and episodic TV directing ("Wanted: Dead or Alive," "Kojak"), he is a beefy, gregarious man with a voice that can command huge movies sets.

"Ladyhawke" has been released to reviews that ranged from ecstatic to derogatory. Some reviewers complained that the film was an antiseptic view of the middle ages.

"It is not a period piece," Donner said. "I did research into the medieval period and found that it would be distasteful: plagues, blights, nobody bathed. I wanted to tell a love story about people in a beautiful world. I purposely used warm colors to create the effect of a Caravaggio painting.

"This wasn't a swords-and-sorcery movie like 'Krull' or 'Excalibur.' I wanted the lovers to live in a prettified world. The same with the music. I didn't want a classical score; instead I asked Andrew Powell to write rock music with classical overtones."

"Ladyhawke" was filmed in Italy for about $20 million with a cast headed by Matthew Broderick, Rutger Hauer and Michelle Pfeiffer.

Donner filmed "Goonies" in Oregon and Hollywood with unknown actors.

"Steven (Spielberg) and I have known each other for years, mostly in passing," said Donner. "I always used to tell him, 'I really enjoyed your films when I was a kid.'" Donner is a few decades older than Spielberg.

"Last September, Steve called me and said one of the ideas he had had for a long time had been put into a script by Chris Columbus," Donner said. "Would I read it? I read it that night and loved it. The movie seemed easy to do, and I said yes, not knowing that I was getting into."

"The Goonies" concerns seven teen-agers in a northwest town who engage in an adventure that takes them into a magical world. Donner's first problem was casting the seven youngsters. "The Oregon locations were fairly easy," he said. "The kids were wonderful; they infused me with their energy. But when we came back to the studio and started filming the underground portions, it became very tough.

"At one point there were four different directors, including Steve himself, to get the sequences done in time for the summer release. The only saving grace was the kids themselves. I never had kids of my own, and they became like my family."

Even so, Donner needed to get away from kids and shooting schedules, and he left for his house on Maui as soon as "The Goonies" finished.

"On my first day there, a neighbor lady asked if I could take her to the village," Donner recalled.

Japanese filmmaker never forgot V-J day

By BOB THOMAS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When Masahiro Shinoda learned on Aug. 15, 1945, that Japan had lost the war, the 14-year-old's first thought was how he could kill himself.

"It was a beautiful, clear day," Shinoda recalls vividly after 40 years. "I couldn't believe the news, and I cried a lot against the blue sky. I seriously considered suicide, but when I went home, my mother and my father and my brother were not thinking of killing themselves. So the idea left me."

A member of a landowning family in Gifu near Tokyo, Shinoda went on to major in drama at Waseda University. After graduation in 1963, he was one of five chosen from 3,000 applicants for assistant director at Shockiku studio. Since 1960, he has made two dozen films. With Nagisa Oshino, he has become one of the most famous of Japan's New Wave directors.

However, Sinoda never forgot V-J Day.

"For the past 40 years I have been thinking of the day as a tragedy," said Shinoda through an interpreter during an interview. "Then I read a novel by Yu Aku about his own experiences at the end of the war. I was shocked. He was six years younger than I was, and to him the meeting with the Americans was like going to paradise.

"Eating Hershey's chocolate, having chewing gum, seeing Jeeps — this was a new and exciting experience to young people. To my age and older, the defeat was a tragedy. To those who were younger, it was an adventure. But then, isn't all life somewhere between tragedy and adventure?"

Shinoda's rethinking of the immediate postwar experience resulted in the film "MacArthur's Children," based on the Aku book. Released in Japan last June, it attracted an amazing 3 million customers, the director reported.

Though it was Japan's entry as foreign-language film in the Academy Awards, it wasn't among the five nominees, and is only beginning a U.S. release.

The story takes place on a remote island, where the youngsters react with wonder and delight, adults with forboding, to the advent of the Americans. A meaningful scene comes when a fifth-grade boy burns paintings and posters of the glorious Japanese army and fleet.

"That came out of my own life," Shinoda said. "I burned all of the war mementoes I had collected. I also have a vivid memory of being dusted with DDT, and that is in the film — also the crossing out of passages in the history books. But in my school, so much had to be erased that the teacher simply threw out the books."

Glenn Miller's classic swing number, "In the Mood," was the first American music that the teen-age Shinoda heard, and it made a profound impression on him. The record is part of the "MacArthur's Children" score.

Masahiro Shinoda saw no American movies during his youth, however, he remembers his father talking about Charlie Chaplin and Harold Lloyd. His first postwar films were a Sonja Henie musical and "100 Men and a Girl" with Deanna Durbin and Leopold Stokowski. He also was profoundly influenced by the films of William Wyler, particularly "The Best Years of Our Lives."

"MacArthur's Children" has prompted many Japanese to re-examine their feelings and experiences following the war's end.

"Here is the most shocking thing that we learned from the Americans," Shinoda said. "Until the end of the war, we were taught how to die. MacArthur brought his own plan for politics, education, philosophy. The Americans taught us how to live. That is a very radical change."

Arts festival shows 'other side' of U.S.

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE

LONDON (AP) — A three-week festival of American arts in Britain will show another side of the United States with a program plump with poetry, painting, music, theater, sculpture and ethnic crafts.

The festival, which runs May 8-June 1, is billed as the largest American arts event ever held outside the United States.

Jennifer Williams, who directs the London-based British American Arts Association, said the festival is a response to the Britain Salutes New York event in 1983.

"One reason why we were so interested in presenting the festival is that life and art in the United States isn't reflected on television and in movies shown in Britain," Miss Williams said.

"Whatever your feelings about America, there are a lot of wonderful people there and this is an opportunity to see something of it," said Steve Rogers, a 29-year-old Briton who has visited the United States 25 times in the past seven years and organized the festival program.

Rogers said in an interview: "We expected a certain amount of critical reaction in waving the American flag so vigorously, because this is a critical period in international affairs.

"We aren't deliberately doing the festival as a public relations exercise for the United States. We're saying, whatever you may feel about politics, you don't have to be anti-everything American and anti-American culture."

Anti-Americanism is largely confined to the British left, which generally supports Nicaragua, opposes nuclear weapons and scoffs at President Reagan's anti-Soviet posture.

Still, the anticipated arrival in Britain of hundreds of American musicians, actors and other artists for the festival was welcomed by its patron, Prince Philip, husband of Queen Elizabeth II.

"This is a unique chance to savor the rich diversity of a culture that has its roots in three continents," Philip wrote in the festival program, "America Live 85."

The organizers said they deliberately excluded major stars to make room for up-and-coming artists.

"The festival program is designed to surprise people with the diversity of American arts, introduce to Britain artists from all over the United States and to try to avoid the customary focus on the cultural centers of the east and west coasts," Hunter said.

So besides the New York Philharmonic Orchestra and the Merce Cunningham Dance Company, there are the symphony orchestras of St. Louis and Dallas, the Preservation Hall Jazz Band of New Orleans, theater companies from Chicago, a storyteller from North Carolina and architects who will discuss their work.

Evelyn de Rothschild, the festival's British banker-chairman, said about 100 American and British business and private donors gave more than half the total cost of more than $1.2 million to stage 100 events in London, Glasgow and Cardiff, the major cities of England, Scotland and Wales.

Donkey reverts to old habits

LAWTON, Okla. (AP) — It didn't take long for Big Deuce IV, the donkey mascot of Fort Sill's 2nd Battalion, 2nd Field Artillery, to revert to old habits.

The donkey, in disgrace last year because he lay down at the feet of his handler while the national anthem played during a Memorial Day ceremony, was given a second chance and given a promotion to honorary sergeant Tuesday.

But Big Deuce showed what he thought of the ceremony by taking a bite out of his certificate of promotion.

Basic black strikes back

NEW YORK (AP) — The emphasis for evening is basically black, or red for the more flamboyant, and both colors were used prominently in the fall collections of Bill Blass and Akira.

The designers concentrate on evening wear, but even Blass' daywear unveiled last week was dressy: A brown-and-tan tweed day suit was topped with a neck wrap of mink tails; a seven-eighths-wool car coat in a big red-and-grey plaid was trimmed with a mink shawl collar to the hem and matching cuffs; a navy car coat had a notched collar of sheared beaver with matching hat.

Blass also showed less ostentatious wool suits, one featuring a demure Peter Pan collar on a blouson jacket over a simple straight skirt, another paired metallic brocade boleros with grey or gold wool slacks.

Big blouson jackets over short straight skirts or trousers provided some relief from the unforgiving narrow shapes that are so new this season.

ONE OF Blass' nicest day dresses was a simple beige or brown tweed sheath with big padded shoulders, raglan sleeves and slash pockets.

Cranberry and navy also were widely used for day, as were green and red paisleys. Bold plaids in combinations of mustard, navy, red and royal were less attractive.

For evening, solids prevailed, especially black and red. Blass used variety, including spaghetti straps, draped cowl necks, plunging V-necks and big flounces, but never in busy combination.

Stunning in its simplicity was a straight, strapless black velvet bodice from bust to knees, where it met a wide white satin ruffle. It also was shown in black on black. Black and white beaded boleros topped simple straight gowns.

One simple, uncluttered gown was a grape floor-length chemise in silk crepe with peek-a-boo shoulders and draped sleeves. The bottom was bias cut for extra swing and a slight flare — classic elegance.

Blass also used brightly colored beaded leaf appliques, red and orange jacquard floral jackets and appliqued velvet panne over otherwise basic black dresses. These were less striking.

The impact of solids was obvious in Blass' finale. In two lines, the models paraded his collection of basic black and all red gowns on the runway at the Cotillion Room at the exclusive Pierre Hotel. The contrast was dramatic, just as evening wear should be.

AT THE Plaza Hotel, Akira Maki opened his short show with a red wool chemise with sheath top and pleated bottom worn with shoes, hosiery, gloves and earrings also in his characteristic lucky red.

Akira, who left Japan 11 years ago, also showed some tailored, two-tone day suits and jacketed dresses in navy wool with kelly, fuchsia and brown.

But like Blass, Akira's specialty is evening wear in rich fabrics, including this season's ubiquitous black velvet, shiny satin, lace, silk crepe, and billowing chiffon. Especially nice were some floral two-tone silk jacquards in black and brown or black and fuchsia.

Everyone seems to be showing some paisley, and Akira was no exception. He used big paisleys on a black satin ground for a short, strapless cocktail dress that gathered into a neat bow at the waist.

Akira's gown used lots of shirring as in seasons past, surprise pleats hidden until the wearer moves and draping, as in cowl necks and toga-like gathers.

HIS USE of beadwork was understated and elegant, as in a belt or rhinestone buttons.

A wide beaded hip belt with rhinestone buckle added interest to a hot pink gown in silk crepe. The gown was fitted through the torso and shirred from waistline to hip, where the belt began. That indent was the focus of attention making an hourglass shape a must for this one. The bottom was given a swingy fullness by draping that started below the belt.

Several more forgiving dresses featured chiffon petals spiralling around the body or as sleeves. These numbers were very feminine and easy to wear.

Prices for Akira dresses range from $400 up to $800, the starting point for Blass.

Blass classy, Kamali campy

NEW YORK (AP) — A hodgepodge of wonderful styles from sophisticated separates to campy fake furs are in store this fall and winter for fans of Bill Blass, Norma Kamali and youthful designer Danny Noble.

All three collections were unveiled recently in Manhattan.

Round-shouldered coats and blazers, tapered, ankle-button pants and kicky miniskirts are the hallmark of this season's Blassport sportswear collection.

A palette of soft aqua, pink, lemon and rose is a welcome change from the usual orange, olive and plum that tends to dominate fall and winter styles.

Pattern and fabric combinations — lush mohair sweaters and silk jacquard blouses, flannel trousers and jersey shirts and vicuna suede jackets with leather skirts — are pure Blass class.

Coats were an important part of the collection and among the nicest were the swingy, flared coat that looked like a cape with long sleeves and double-breasted bomber jackets in leather, suede and houndstooth wool.

Classic shearlings in traditional camel, baby blue and pink and teamed with ivory satin trousers, silk blouses and jeweled, checkerboard blazers for evening were showstoppers, but daytime offerings were just as nice.

One was the mohair sweater with windowpane checks and a floral pattern knit across the bust and shoulders in aqua, lemon and rose and teamed with matching windowpane trousers and jacquard blouses.

A more common houndstooth set is jazzed up by combining a navy and forest-green blazer with a navy and burgundy trouser and a navy-striped Oxford blouse.

Norma Kamali offered several houndstooth outfits that were anything but ordinary.

In one she mixed an ankle-length, box-pleated skirt and notch-lapel jacket and in another, cuffed trousers with a double-breasted jacket that looked like a '30s-styled zoot suit.

In fact, the entire Kamali collection is '30s and '40s camp with lots of long daytime skirts and bustier gowns accented with vampy black lace. It also is a lot of fun.

The 39-year-old designer apparently let her animal instincts run wild and came up with a collection stampeded by fake tiger, leopard and zebra fur prints and patterns. The beasts are everywhere: in coats, hats, muffs, scarves, gloves and, yes, eveningwear.

In one, Kamali offers a strapless, black satin gown with tiger stripes completed by accents including black lace-up boots (remember grandma's?), a pom-pom feathered hat and spangled gloves.

DEAR ABBY

Blood donors save lives

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Please give the piece titled "What Good Is a Blood Donor?" another run. I missed it the first time it ran, but several people have told me about it.

Blood donors are so desperately needed now, it sounds like something we could use. — VOLUNTEER

DEAR VOLUNTEER: Here it is:

DEAR ABBY: I just donated blood to the American Red Cross Blood Center in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., and I'm enclosing a piece that was handed to me on my way out.

I hope you will print it. So many people are not aware of how important it is to give blood — especially now that our blood bank supply has become critically low. — NEW YORK BLOOD DONOR

DEAR DONOR: You gave more than blood. You gave me an item that will (I hope) inspire more blood donors. Bless you.

What Good is a Blood Donor?

A blood donor is good for people who go through windshields and red lights. For somebody with leukemia. For people being operated on. For barefoot kids who aren't careful. For people who are into feudin' and fightin'. For hemophiliacs and daredevils. For people undergoing dialysis while waiting for a kidney transplant. For people who fool around with guns. For little kids who manage to uncap a bottle of something poisonous.

A blood donor is good for people who have been badly burned. For new mothers who need transfusions. For new babies who need a complete change of blood supply. For people having open-heart surgery. For cancer patients. For people with severe hepatitis and anemia. For kids who fall out of trees or whatever. For anybody any age with bleeding ulcers. For people who were in the wrong place at the wrong time.

A blood donor is good for people who are in a lot worse shape than most people you know.

A BLOOD DONOR IS GOOD FOR LIFE.

DEAR ABBY: I would like your opinion of a problem that I'm sure has cropped up in many marriages. Do you think a husband should bring guests home without giving his wife some notice?

My husband does this all the time. It's usually a co-worker for dinner, or some business associate. If they've never been here before, my husband gives them a tour of the house. This really upsets me because some days I'm behind in my work and the place doesn't look all that great. Yesterday I had an early morning dental appointment and a lot of errands to do, and I didn't get around to making the beds, when in comes my husband with two strangers!

Abby, am I unreasonable to ask my husband to give me at least a half an hour's notice, or the option of saying, "Not today, please"? — FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: You are not unreasonable — your husband is inconsiderate. And unless you put your foot down firmly, where it will make a lasting impression, don't expect anything to change.

Stylish new 'comma' heel punctuates fall shoes

New York Times News Service

Walter Steiger has a new shaped heel that he calls a comma. It's high and thin, and the outside is curved like, well, like a comma. It's the heel he's used on what promises to be a best seller for fall. The shoe comes in solid suede or a floral tapestry fabric highlighted with gold threads. Another comma of fabric extends over the instep for a touch of drama.

Fabric — especially patterned fabric — has become important in shoes. In fact, one of the best-selling styles in the Steiger boutique on Madison Avenue is a graffiti-patterned canvas pump designed for Karl Lagerfeld.

It sells for $210.

Ethiopian leader says local official ordered eviction of famine victims

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Ethiopia's Marxist leader says local officials ordered the mass eviction of more than 50,000 famine victims from a feeding camp without permission from the central government, a top U.N. official reported.

Mengistu Haile Mariam indicated that disciplinary action would be taken against the officials, said Kurt Jansson, an assistant U.N. secretary-general.

Jansson talked with Mengistu on Monday after combing northern Ethiopia by air in a fruitless 1½-day search for people forcced from the Ibnet camp last week.

Jansson, who continues his search by helicoter today, said Mengistu "emphasized that the action was not authorized and that he did not agree with it or approve it. He also stressed that such actions would not be allowed to occur."

Mengistu's reported comments contradicted a government statement issued Saturday which denied the drought victims were forcibly removed from the Ibnet camp, about 250 miles north of Addis Ababa. It said 30,000 healthy volunteers departed for home on foot to plant crops after recent rains, and others remained under care at the camp.

The operation, which took place April 28-30, has been strongly condemned by Western donor governments and the U.N. secretary-general, Javier Perez de Cuellar, asked Jansson to investigate.

The Finnish U.N. official said today that he would continue his search for Ibnet's evicted drought victims to learn the circumstances of their departure, their present fate and their needs.

International relief agency workers were the first to report the eviction of 56,000 famine victims and expressed fear that many victims might die during two-week treks to native villages.

Relief workers identified Melaku Tefari, regional party chairman, as the official who ordered the dispersal of all but 3,000 camp residents and the burning of thousands of makeshift shelters.

Mengistu, Jansson said, "denied army involvement in the burning of the empty huts." The camp's feeding and medical facilities remain intact, he added.

The U.N. official, who is overseeing the international relief effort in Ethiopia, said he also raised the need to step up the transport of food aid by maximizing the use of Ethiopia's trucks and making the Red Sea port of Assab more efficient.

Lebanese militias hammer sections of Beirut with artillery barrage

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Fires burned out of control and hundreds of shell-smashed cars smoldered today as civil war antagonists unleashed their heaviest artillery barrage on Beirut's residential neighborhoods in 10 months.

Police said 28 people were killed and more than 100 wounded in 15 hours of relentless bombardment by field artillery, multi-barreled rocket launchers, mortars and tank cannons in and around the capital. There was a lull after daybreak.

"It is like the doors of hell were all flung open," said Simon Haj, 42, a taxi driver reached by telephone at the basement of his highrise apartment building in mostly Moslem west Beirut. "Shells are raining all around us."

It was the heaviest single overnight toll since the current flare-up of Moslem-Christian fighting erupted 11 days ago. The new figures raised the overall known casualties since April 28 to 68 killed and more than 340 injured.

Police said at least five apartment buildings were gutted by fire in one neighborhood on the embattled Green Line dividing Beirut into Moslem and Christian sections. Shooting prevented fire brigades from moving in to quench the blaze, they said.

Amin Gemayel, the Christian president, conferred by telephone overnight with Moslem Prime Minister Rashid Karami on ways of halting the hostilities and declaring a militia-free neutral zone in central Beirut, local radio stations reported.

They said the two called on the army's six-man Higher Military Council and the four-party security committee representing the principal warring militias to hold a joint session today to negotiate a cease-fire.

Gemayel met with the Higher Military Council at noon Monday at his palace in suburban Baabda, but failed to achieve any agreement.

Police and radio stations said the nightlong artillery battles were the heaviest since a Syrian-sponsored agreement to refrain from shelling population centers was enforced last July 4.

An employee removes the remaining stock of medicine from the Barbar Hospital, battered by rockets in Moslem west Beirut on Tuesday. Police said 28 people were killed and more than 100 wounded in the last 11 hours of field artillery bombardment between Christian east and Moslem west sectors of the Lebanese capital.

AP Laserphoto

The Christian-controlled "Voice of Lebanon" radio station said at least 2,500 shells and rockets struck east Beirut and a string of Christian suburbs stretching to the mountain resort town of Beit Meri, six miles east of the capital.

Moslem radio stations said west Beirut's Shiite Moslem suburbs alone took at least 600 mortar rounds in what they described as one of the most violent nights in Lebanon's 10-year civil war.

Police said several commercial ships docked at Beirut port hurriedly sailed out upon the outbreak of the latest shelling duel at 3 p.m. Monday local time. Several rounds hit the harbor.

The heavy ground fighting on the Green Line suggests that Druse and Shiite militia allies are trying to overrun the no man's land at the Green Line Museum Crossing between the two halves of the capital.

Gemayel is proposing that a 2-square-mile area around the mid-city crossing be declared a neutral zone controlled by religiously mixed army units.

But Druse and Shiite warlords charged Gemayel had already deployed Christian-officered units of the army's 8th brigade in the proposed zone and demanded their prompt withdrawal.

Shiite militia sources said their fighters dislodged an 8th brigade garrison from the two-story building housing Lebanon's military tribunal on the Museum Crossing in hand-to-hand combat overnight. Police refused to comment on the claim.

U.S. military abandons search for survivors of helicopter crash

TOKYO (AP) — The U.S. military today abandoned the search for survivors of the crash of a Marine Corps helicopter off southern Japan, saying the 17 U.S. Marines on board were missing and presumed dead.

An overnight search by Japanese patrol boats yielded only small amounts of debris, including some personal items and an unopened 12-man life raft. Japanese officials said they probably would call off their search soon, also.

The Marine Corps command on Okinawa, where the victims were based, issued a statement today saying: "An accompanying helicopter witnessed the impact and observed that there were no survivors. All aboard are missing and presumed dead."

The casualties were the highest involving U.S. military personnel in the area since March 1984, when another Marine Corps CH-53D helicopter crashed into a Korean mountainside during military exercises, killing 18 Okinawa-based Marines and 11 Koreans.

A Marine Corps officer at Kadena Air Base in Okinawa, who asked not to be identified, said U.S. rescue aircraft essentially quit the search late Monday because, "We knew they were all dead."

WORLD IN BRIEF

American astronaut big hit in Chinese hometown

PEKING (AP) — Chinese-American astronaut Taylor G. Wang, a physicist on the Space Shuttle Challenger, is a big hit in the Communist Party newspaper of Shanghai, where he was born 44 years ago.

"He has become the first descendent of the yellow emperor to travel in space," the Liberation Daily proclaimed in its Monday edition, received today in Peking. The yellow emperor is a legendary figure said to have founded the Chinese race more than 5,000 years ago.

The official English-language newspaper China Daily praised Wang in an article May 2, describing his childhood desire to become a scientist.

"Today he has become the first Chinese-American astronaut to be sent into space," the paper said.

Now a physicist at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., Wang has 20 patents in physics and is a pioneer in the study of fluid motion.

Court sentences separatist

MADRID, Spain (AP) — A court has sentenced an alleged Basque separatist to 92 years in prison for participating in an attack which left four policemen dead and one wounded.

Jesus Maria Zabarta Arregui also was ordered Monday to pay the victims' families $220,000.

The court said Zabarta was a member of the command of the Basque separatist organization ETA which attacked a police patrol car near Renteria, a town in the northern basque province of Guipuzcoa in September 1982.

The prosecution said Zabarta kept watch on the convoy for 18 days prior to the attack, but did not physically take part in the attack.

Chinese monastery opened

PEKING (AP) — A 1,000-year-old monastery on the northern slopes of Mount Everest has been repaired and opened to the public following damage in China's 1966-76 Cultural Revolution, says the official Xinhua news agency.

Rongbo monastery, built for the red sect of Tibetan Lama Buddhism, is located 17,160 feet up Mount Everest, the world's tallest peak at 29,028 feet.

Repair started in 1984 when the Chinese government, which controls Tibet, allocated more than $35,088 for the work, Xinhua said Monday.

Peking claims to have renovated and reopened 75 of some 3,000 Tibetan monasteries damaged in the 1960s.

Sikh temple collapses

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Part of the building in the Golden Temple complex housing the highest seat of Sikh religious authority has collapsed, the United News of India reported.

The news agency said a portion of the parapet on the second floor of the Akal Takht crumbled to the ground Monday, causing no injuries but narrowly missing a woman and two children.

The Akal Takht, the seat of Sikh temporal and religious power, was severely damaged when the Indian army besieged the Golden Temple complex in Amritsar June 4-7 to flush out Sikh extremists hiding there.

A Sikh leader, Santa Singh, repaired the building under government supervision.

Poland suspends embassy flights to protest U.S. diplomats' actions

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Communist government has suspended the U.S. Embassy's air courier service, in a further protest of alleged participation by two U.S. diplomats in a pro-Solidarity march.

Sondra McCarty, a U.S. State Department spokeswoman in Washington, called the move "totally unjustified" but had no comment on whether Washington would respond.

The government last Friday announced the expulsion of the two U.S. Embassy personnel after it accused them of joining dissidents leading an illegal May Day march. Washington retaliated by ordering four Polish diplomats out of the United States.

The Monday suspension ends nearly three decades of periodic flights by U.S. Air Force jets bringing mail and hard-to-find goods to embassy personnel here.

Poland's Foreign Ministry ordered the suspension in a "sharp protest" delivered to the U.S. Embassy, the official news agency PAP said Monday.

The ministry statement said the Polish diplomats "had not violated any laws or abused their status. The decision of the United States is exclusively of a revenge character," according to PAP.

David Swartz, the U.S deputy chief of mission, received the protest note at the ministry late Monday afternoon, embassy spokesman Paul Smith said. The United States and Poland do not have ambassadors in one another's countries.

Smith said Poland had allowed Air Force planes to make special flights to Warsaw every two or three months to carry mail and packages, office supplies and food for the embassy in Warsaw.

"We will get by one way or the other," he said. The flights to Warsaw had been in operation since 1957, PAP reported.

PAP said in its report: "In light of the...U.S. administration's policy toward Poland, the Foreign Ministry has informed American authorities about withdrawing the authorization of the Embassy of the United States in Warsaw to make use of a special unilateral privilege by maintaining regular air courier transport with Warsaw."

On Friday, Poland ordered William Harwood, 38, first secretary at the embassy in Warsaw, and David Hopper, 32, consul in Krakow, to leave Poland within seven days.

The Polish government said the two diplomats were among 15 people detained from an "aggressively behaving" group leading a pro-Solidarity May Day march in a Krakow suburb. It said the demonstration leaders were "chanting anti-state slogans, carrying posters of hostile contents and throwing leaflets."

Benin opens border to illegal immigrants

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — Benin has opened its western border to allow hundreds of thousands of illegal immigrants expelled from neighboring Nigeria to cross the country, according to reports reaching Abidjan today.

Many of the 700,000 immigrants being evicted from Nigeria are likely to travel through Benin on their way to Ghana, Niger, Togo and Burkina Faso.

The Nigerian News Agency reported Monday that the country's border had been closed to non-Benin nationals for a time, stranding thousands of illegal immigrants in the border area.

But Vanguard, a Lagos newspaper, said today that the Benin government is now permitting the immigrants to enter the country and about 800 had passed the border point as of Monday afternoon.

Because of its worsening economic problems and crime rate, Nigeria's military government ordered immigrants to produce work permits or leave the country by Friday.

Vanguard and other independent Nigerian newspapers reported that apparently only a few hundred have left the country as the deadline approaches.

The newspaper reports were read to an Associated Press correspondent who telephoned Lagos from Abidjan.

There also have been reports indicating that Ghana, which is believed to have the largest share of the 700,000 immigrants, was trying to arrange transport home for them on its national shipping line.

Nigeria's official Lagos Radio, monitored in London, reported Monday that a large number of Ghanaians crowded a wharf in Lagos port trying to get berths to travel home by sea.

Four ships have already left the wharf for Ghana since the government ultimatum and two others are expected to leave in the next two days, the report said.

Chile extends six-month-old state of siege

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The military government has extended the six-month-old stage of siege for another 90-days, continuing a nationwide ban on opposition political activity.

Government spokesman Francisco Cuadra said Monday "a clear desire on the part of certain groups to disturb public order" justified extending the siege decree, which includes special curbs on the news media and public gatherings.

President Augusto Pinochet, the army commander who led the 1973 coup against the elected government of Marxist President Salvador Allende, imposed the state of siege Nov. 6. He acted after opposition parties held mass demonstrations demanding a swift return to democracy and during an upsurge in guerrilla attacks.

Though much of the political unrest was stifled under the state of siege, the decree extending it until Aug. 4 said a "state of internal convulsion" still exists in Chile.

Cuadra, in explaining the extension, cited a Socialist Party rally on April 26 and a series of bombings May 2 that blacked out parts of central Chile. The Socialists were holding a party in a downtown union hall to celebrate the 52nd anniversary of the founding of their party when police entered and arrested 264 people. They were accused of plotting anti-government violence.

Cuadra said the government "is evaluating the reasons for the state of siege each day and has the firm intention of ending it if the conditions so justify."

Lakewood Apartments

Dear Dad,
I'm so excited about my new apartment. It's a beautiful place called Lakewood. I know you're concerned so let me tell you that it's very safe & secure. I've got great neighbors & Sandy the activities director, is introducing me to a lot of new people, just like me and Dad, you won't believe this; I got to decorate my own apartment. Just like you & Mom did when you bought your home.
Please visit soon.
Dad, you'd love Lakewood,
