

Checks reveal population good and bad

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Population figures and projections for Big Spring and Howard County present a good news-bad news picture.

The bad news is that the area population has been declining since the early 1980s.

The good news, however, is that state projections indicate county population will increase by almost 20 percent by the end of the century.

The issue of population changes in Big Spring and the county has been a topic of speculation by residents for several years — and most recently by an article in the Abilene Reporter-News.

The article, titled "Big Spring: A dying oil town fights for its life," said that, since the oil bust, the local population has decreased to as low as 17,000 or 18,000.

In an attempt to clarify area population questions, the Herald, with the assistance of Steve Murdock, chief demographer for the Texas State Data Center, conducted a survey of several local and state agencies.

The results show that, while local population has decreased since 1983, the loss is bottoming out and the county should experience population growth for the remainder of the century.

Murdock, who also is chairman of the Rural Sociology department at Texas A&M University, said there are three fairly dependable indicators of population status.

The first is census figures, which show that the county experienced steady growth until 1984, and gradual decline since then.

In the four years prior to 1984, Big Spring gained 3,000 new residents and Howard County an additional 1,000, according to figures released by the U.S. Census Bureau.

From 1984 to 1986, however, the county lost more than 1,000, census figures indicate. The oil bust can be blamed for the majority of that loss, Murdock said.

No figures are available for Big Spring after 1984.

School enrollments, the second indicator, mirror census figures, with one exception.

Figures released by the Coahoma and Forsan school districts show that both experienced steady enrollment gains from 1980 to 1984.

Forsan's enrollment has leveled off since that time, and Coahoma has experienced a loss of almost

How's That? Budget

Q. What was the cost of the turkeys given to city employees at Christmas and the cost of the annual city picnic? City Council is cutting these two items from the annual budget.

A. The turkeys cost $3400 and the cost of the picnic was $2000. To cut budget costs these items were deleted. "We felt these were not absolutely necessary for the operation of the city," said Tom Ferguson, finance director for the City of Big Spring.

Tornado victims see Six Flags

ARLINGTON (AP) - The children of Saragosa, the West Texas town devastated by a tornado in May, were in this North Texas city today for an outing at Six Flags Over Texas.

The 30 children and their seven chaperones arrived Wednesday for the two-day visit to Arlington that will be highlighted by a visit to the amusement park.

The trip was suggested by The Rev. John LaNoue, disaster relief director for Texas Baptist Men, who said he saw the serious looks on the faces of Saragosa children at play.

LaNoue, who was visiting Saragosa planning a Labor Day weekend outing when 500 members of Texas Baptist Men plan to rebuild 23 homes, said the children's faces were emotionless, as though they still were suffering from shock.

Transportation for the trip was provided by Greyhound Lines and private donors are footing the bill for the Six Flags Over Texas visit. Whataburger and Pizza Inn restaurants provided some meals for the youngsters.

James Piper, a 71-year-old Big Spring mail carrier, sorts mail at the post office Wednesday before beginning his route. Piper has been delivering mail to Big Spring residents for 35 years. He was honored recently for a total of 40 years of civil and military service.

35-year mail carrier cites many changes

By KERRY HAGLUND
Staff Writer

Times have changed from the days when James Piper's family used to graze cows in a pasture that now is the Veterans Administration Hospital on Gregg Street.

And times have changed from the days when residents could mail a letter for three cents or a postcard for a penny.

That's what it cost for mail delivery when Piper began his career with the Big Spring post office in 1952 as a sub-carrier for $1.61 an hour.

All carriers back then delivered the mail on foot.

Now the local post office has only one walking route that includes parts of Scurry and Main streets and the connecting streets in between.

Even stray dogs yapping at his heels and a few bites haven't discouraged Piper from delivering mail to Big Spring residents for the past 35 years.

And Piper was honored a few days ago for 40 years of civil and military service. He served in the U.S. Air Force in England from 1940 to 1945, and has worked at the Big Spring post office since 1952.

Piper was presented with a ruby lapel pin and a certificate in honor of his service.

The carrier reported he leaves about 9 a.m. each day to deliver mail on his eight-mile route. The route encompasses an area between State Street and Birdwell Lane, including parts of Sixth, Settles, 11th, Wood, Sycamore and Tucson streets.

"It's good exercise — walking — you can't beat that," Piper said.

His route, and most in the city, is served by "park and loop" routes. The carrier fills his bag with mail, parks the vehicle and makes a loop, then moves the vehicle and starts the process over again.

Through the years, Piper has delivered mail on three different routes, and has worked on the present one for the past 12 years.

Despite more than a decade of pounding the pavement on his latest route, few people

City may get low fire rate increase

By SPENCER SANDOW
Staff Writer

If anticipated manpower reductions in the Big Spring Fire Department occur, the city's key insurance rate could rise by one cent, but the average homeowner would see little or no change in his premium, an official said.

Robert Schultz of the State Board of Insurance said that if the city eliminates three firefighter positions, the key rate could rise from 18 to 19 cents.

An increase would have to reach about 30 cents before homeowners would see a significant increase in premiums, he said.

Schultz said he spoke to Big Spring Fire Chief Carl Dorton by phone about the situation about the first of July. Dorton questioned the manpower reduction's effect on the key rate, Schultz said.

The local firefighters union has spoken against the reduction, contending it would result in danger to residents and significant increases in the key insurance rate.

John Branham, president of the union, has said the job cuts would reduce the number of firefighters on duty at two city fire stations. That could jeopardize rescues during structure fires, and result in more property loss, Branham said.

Schultz said Dorton also asked whether a change to a minimum of 11 firefighters per shift, compared to the state-recommended standard of 12, would increase the key rate, but did not indicate the change would occur.

Dorton since has said the department will continue to schedule a minimum of 12 firefighters on duty per shift.

Schultz said the State Board of Insurance sets cities' key rates. When the board learns information that could effect the rates, it may inspect the city in question, he said.

In addition to fire department manpower, the key rate also is effected by the water system's efficiency in aiding firefighting, how well the fire marshal performs his duties, and the number of fire hazards in a city, he said.

Cities' key rates could be reduced with measures such as firefighter training, extra equipment, posting arson rewards and teaching fire safety in schools, Schultz said.

Herald staff report

One missing person was found, and another was reported to have been spotted in Abilene, according to reports made to local law enforcement agencies.

An anonymous caller reported seeing a body near Moss Creek Road, but an investigation by the Howard County Sheriff's office revealed it was a man who was bound and gagged.

In another incident, a Lubbock man reported to Big Spring police that he thought he saw a missing Temple child in Abilene.

The "body" was reported lying on the side of Moss Creek Road about two miles south of Interstate 20 about 12:30 a.m. this morning, according to the sheriff's office.

Mitchell County Sheriff's office reported receiving the call from a hunter using a spotlight, who thought he saw a body.

After a 30-minute search, deputies found the man lying face down, with his hands and feet tied, and his eyes and mouth bound with socks.

The man, identified as Gregory Summers of Abilene, was taken by ambulance to Scenic Mountain Medical Center, but he had no injuries, the sheriff's report said. He was admitted to the hospital, a hospital spokeswoman said today.

According to sheriff's records, Summers is expected to be released today after several tests.

Summers had been reported missing by the Abilene Police Department and was last seen Monday in Odessa.

According to the incident report, Det. Lee Reed of Abilene said an investigation revealed that Summers possibly had staged the disappearance.

In the child sighting, a Lubbock man who saw a missing child poster at the Big Spring Police office reported that he may have seen one of the missing girls while he was in Abilene.

Reports noted Charles Cranston spotted the poster while visiting police at 4:26 p.m. Wednesday on another matter.

After looking at poster photographs, he indicated he may have seen 13-year-old Angelica Gandara of Temple in Abilene early Wednesday morning.

The girl was described as 5-foot, 3-inches, about 95 pounds, Hispanic, with medium complexion and dark hair, last seen wearing a red shirt, jeans and cowboy boots.

State hospital makes improvements

Herald staff report

The Big Spring State Hospital has taken measures to improve psychiatric supervision of physicians and documentation of patient treatment plans, according to a local administrator.

Acting Superintendent Robert von Rosenberg said today the hospital has made changes since a May review discovered the hospital had an inadequate number of qualified physicians to evaluate patients and a lack of documentation for patient treatment plans.

A report by a federal court-appointed monitor also stated the hospital has tried to correct the problem.

The hospital is required to have board eligible psychiatrists or qualified physicians who are adequately supervised by psychiatrists, von Rosenberg said.

In an effort to correct the shortcomings, the hospital has increased supervision of doctors by reassigning duties of existing psychiatrists and hiring two consultants who each work a half day every week.

Both consultants, one from Midland and another from Lubbock, are psychiatrists, von Rosenberg said.

The hospital also is attempting to improve the hospital's documentation, he said.

The staff is "specifying more clearly the treatment provided; we feel like it's improved," he said.

The May review covered the 100 hospital beds paid for by Medicare in the 300 plus patient hospital.

According to the Harte-Hanks Austin bureau, a settlement agreement from a lawsuit challenging conditions at state hospitals doesn't require Medicare standards be met. But state hospitals must reach standards in order to receive payments.

Von Rosenberg said he thinks the Big Spring Hospital is meeting those standards.

A plan to correct problems has been submitted by the hospital to the Texas Department of Health. Von Rosenberg said he expected a follow-up survey to see if the hospital has corrected the problems.

Hospital moves agency to clinic

COLORADO CITY — The Home Health Care Agency, a branch of the Mitchell County Hospital, will soon have a new home after action Tuesday night by the hospital district's board of directors.

Upon the recommendation of hospital administrator Ray Mason and Dr. Dee Roach, chief of staff, the directors agreed to let the agency move its offices from the hospital to the hospital district-owned clinic building on Chestnut Street.

The clinic is largely unused at the present time since Dr. Rod Caldwell closed his medical practice here, according to a release.

The agency is currently located in a basement office at the hospital.

The board's action came after Roach explained that the home health agency also can be utilized for other civic projects which would benefit the community as well as the hospital.

In his financial report to the board, assistant administrator and comptroller Richard Murphy said the hospital showed a net profit of $41,337 for the month of June, bringing the year-to-date net profit to $292,398.

Murphy said the hospital had 462 patient days during June, "a substantial gain over June of '86." He said July should have nearly as many patient days as June.

C-City school board trims budget

COLORADO CITY — Members of the board of trustees and administrators of the Colorado Independent School District trimmed about $100,000 in expenses from the coming school year Saturday during an all-day budget workshop.

The workshop was conducted at the ranch home of Dr. Billy B. Bridgford, board president. Board members Dwayne Harris, Edie Gregory, Ronnie Aston, Brenda Aguilon, Floyd Ritchey and Bridgford were present, as well as school principals Jerry Reynolds, Jim McLean and Bobby Lemons.

Classroom Teachers Association representatives Rita Latimer and Kitten Arthur also were on hand for the meeting as was business manager Geneva Findley. Board member Kathy Bassham was not present.

The budget for the coming school year must be approved by August 20 said Useton. He said the budget will be reviewed at the board's regular meeting on August 10 and hopefully adopted at that time.

The current budget is about $5.6 million, said Useton. He said the school district's property values have been decreased by some $49 million, which will mean a loss in tax revenues of about $430,000.

The school district will have some carry-over funds from this year's budget. The board is considering using some reserve funds and a small tax increase to make up the difference.

Useton said the school district is starting to cut back on expenses the past few months in order to have the carry-over of funds for the new school year.

Two injured in accidents

A Big Spring man remains in Scenic Mountain Medical Center intensive care and another was treated for injuries in two auto accidents Wednesday night.

Blain Rey Callison, 25, Gail Route Box 466, is in stable condition in the ICU, a hospital spokeswoman said this morning.

He was riding a motorcycle on Gregg Street at 10 p.m., when he was struck by a car at the 16th Street intersection.

Police reports said Dorothy Curtis Hull, 89, 1600 Lancaster St. Apt. 22, was driving a 1977 Chevrolet Impala on the wrong side of 16th Street.

At the Gregg Street intersection, she failed to make sure the way was clear before crossing the road, the reports said. Hull's car, driven west, struck the south-bound motorcycle.

Hull reportedly suffered minor injuries. She was charged with failure to yield right-of-way, police reports said.

In a second accident, 17-year-old Billy Owen Rawls, 1704 W. First St., was injured. He was transported by ambulance to Scenic Mountain Medical Center, where he was treated and released, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Rawls was riding a bicycle on the Pizza Hut parking lot at 8 p.m. when he collided with a 1980 gray Buick Regal driven by Cedric Earl Banks, 19, 2207 Runnels St., police reports said.

Banks had stopped on the parking lot and Rawls rode into his car, the reports said, adding that the impact threw Rawls off his bicycle.

Carrier

"When you've got this uniform on, everyone knows you."

Some people wonder why he's done working at 3:30 p.m., Piper said, explaining that most don't realize carriers start preparing their routes at 7 a.m.

"It gives you something to do everyday, you always keep busy — and you get to meet all kinds of people."

Piper said his wife died about two years ago, and other carriers always kid him about flirting with the widowed women on his route.

Sometimes residents invite him in for a cool drink when it's hot outside, or for coffee when it's cold.

"So that's why it takes so long for you to do your route," said interim postmaster Charles McEntire, jokingly.

"But I don't drink coffee,"

Piper said, protesting.

"Anyone that puts in as many years as ol' Pipe has, deserves to slow down once in a while," McEntire said while the two talked about Piper's work at the Big Spring office.

Times have changed since Piper first began to deliver mail.

But even though he now drives a jeep, he still gets plenty of exercise by parking it, filling his bag and walking the route until his bag needs refilling.

"Some people think what you leave the office with is all you deliver," Piper said.

Piper said he plans to deliver mail another two years before retiring — if his health permits.

He's the oldest employee at the post office. And to stay young he works as a Little League umpire.

He's managed teams for 14 years and umpired for 15. "Anything you do to keep busy helps you stay in shape," he advised.

Agent says late freeze hurt pecan harvest

Herald staff report

A late freeze this past winter is blamed for limiting area pecan crops to "at best, fair," according to County Agricultural Extension Agent Don Richardson.

He said that the freeze caught the pecans at a critical stage of their development, killing much fruit. Although the quantity of the crop was adversely affected, Richardson said that the overall quality of nuts this year was good.

Don Weeks, Ritchey Road, estimates that "about 20 percent" of his crop was damaged due to the late freeze, but that, so far, it looked pretty good. He credited the above-average rains this summer as beneficial to his trees.

"Everybody in this area is doing well with their pecans," Weeks said.

Richardson said that not everyone in the county was so fortunate, and added that other problems besides the late freeze could continue to plague growers.

The biggest threat to crops, he said, are case-bearers — worms that eat the pecans.

Richardson warns growers to be alert for a third generation of the worms this time of the season.

Rosette zinc deficiency is another problem that affects the quality of the crop, he said. He advises growers to spray with zinc three to five times a season.

Growers are advised to regularly water their trees to reduce drop-ping, Richardson said.

Good and bad

200 students in the same period, figures indicate.

Big Spring school enrollment, however, paints a reverse picture. From 1980 to 1984, local enrollment dropped more than 800, according to district figures.

Since then, the district has gained more than 400 students. But schools Superintendent Bill McQuary expects a slight decrease for the coming school year.

Murdock said that, even with the increase in local figures, a picture of gradual loss since 1984 can be painted for the county as a whole. He added that most of the people who moved away during the bust may not have had children in school.

The final indicator, motor vehicle registrations, again mirrors the other figures. From 1980 to 1984, registrations increased slightly, but have dropped by 480 since then, according to data released by the state Department of Motor Vehicles.

Murdock said the figures reflected population trends in West Texas as a whole, which showed gains during the boom days of the early 1980s, and gradual declines since then. He cited Odessa as having similar population trends.

The good news, he said, is that his figures indicate that population losses from the area seem to be bottoming, and he projects a gradual increase for the remainder of the century.

Other state projections say the same thing. The Texas Department of Health forecasts that Howard County will have almost 39,000 people by 1990, and 42,866 by the year 2000.

Ann Henry, a spokeswoman for the department, said that the agency used a "modified cohort survival technique" to arrive at its projections.

In more simple terms, she said the department adjusted recent Census Bureau figures, taking into account migration into and out of the county.

She could not comment on the accuracy of the projection, but did say it was similar to figures of other agencies.

The Texas Water Development Board has released similar projections, predicting county population to be 38,122 by 1990 and 40,876 by 2000.

Mickey Wright, who conducted the projections for the board, said that his projections were arrived at in a similar manner to the Department of Health's.

He said that he divided census figures by age, sex and race, figured those groups life expectancies, and added the migration factor.

He also would not guarantee the projection's accuracy, but said past predictions from the agency had been within 1 percent of census figures.

Hobby says not burying career

Dallas Times Herald Bureau
AUSTIN — A relaxed Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby joked Wednesday that it's too early to bury his political career and left open the slight possibility of seeking office after 1990.

In his first public appearance since his bombshell announcement that he would not seek re-election, run for governor or run for any other office in 1990, Hobby joked about premature obituaries on his life and career.

"Contrary to what apparently is popular opinion, I have not died. I have not resigned from office," Hobby said at a news conference.

On a more serious note, when asked how he wants Texans to remember him, Hobby provided a one-word reply synonymous with his reserved nature: "Affectionately."

In keeping with his low-key image, Hobby said he was amazed at the reaction his announcement about 1990 has generated and how much attention it has received.

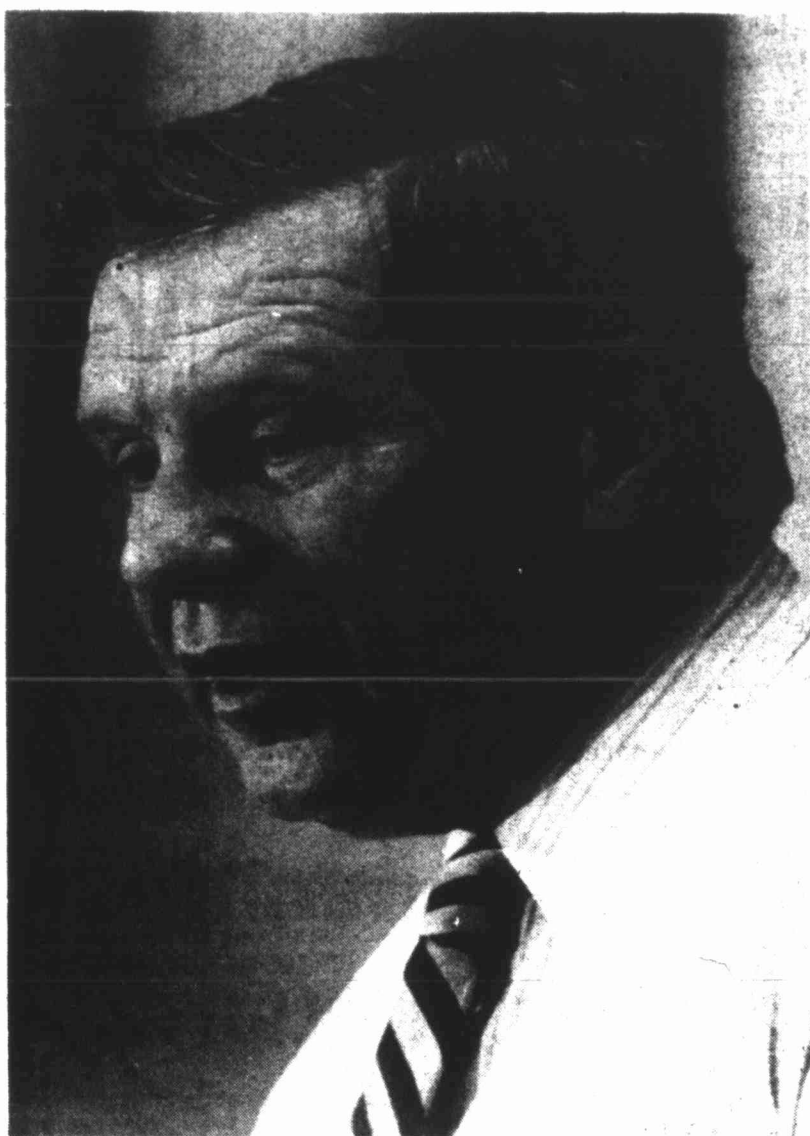

"I've always thought on a scale of news values, when somebody announced they were not running for something — on a scale of 10 — that may get a one," he said.

He reiterated that he has withdrawn as a candidate for any office in 1990, so his actions will not be viewed as those of a political contender when the Legislature in 1989 attempts to restructure the state's tax system.

"The realities of running a campaign in a state as large as Texas are that it's always campaign time," Hobby said. "There are always decisions to be made, decisions which are important not only to the candidate but to many other people as well. I could not decently defer those decisions any longer."

The 55-year-old communications executive from Houston acknowledged that the push for his gubernatorial bid emanated from his supporters and not from some deep-seated desire of his to be governor. However, he also said he "would make a very good governor."

And, when pressed by reporters, Hobby conceded that his decision applies only to 1990 and would "not rule out anything" except 1990 races.

Texas Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby talks Wednesday about his decision to pull out of the race for governor. It was Hobby's first public appearance since he announced his decision Monday.

Hobby recently has become entangled in a verbal sparring match with another Democrat, Attorney General Jim Mattox, who wants to run for governor in 1990. Some political experts say Hobby dropped out to avoid a prolonged, public feud with the feisty Mattox.

Hobby denied that Mattox played any role in the decision but said he prefers to be in office rather than on the campaign trail.

"I don't like putting myself forward, projecting myself. I don't like to read stories in the paper, see myself on television. I'm just basically not that kind of person," Hobby said. "I don't like doing it, but I've done it successfully for 14 years."

Exxon seeks $21 million

HOUSTON — Exxon Corp. has filed a lawsuit in federal court seeking nearly $21 million in refunds it says it was forced to pay to the government on behalf of another oil company.

In a suit filed late Tuesday, Exxon said Sun Exploration & Production Co. refused to pay its share of a $2.08 billion civil judgment awarded to the federal government in a dispute over oil pricing.

Exxon said it was named as a defendant in the government's 1978 suit because it was the unit operator for more than 300 parties holding working interests in Hawkins Field in Wood County.

Exxon said the federal government won its suit claiming there had been overcharges for crude oil.

Sun has refused to repay Exxon for the $20,973,083 it paid to the U.S. Treasury last year on behalf of Sun, Exxon claims in its suit.

Clergyman invokes fifth

DALLAS — Secret testimony by a prominent minister and others before a grand jury failed to turn up evidence to support an indictment in a near-fatal choking attack on the clergyman's wife, a prosecutor said.

Grand jury action in the case is suspended. Norman Kinne, an assistant district attorney, said after Wednesday's 30-minute appearance of the Rev. Walker Bailey.

The Dallas Morning News and the Dallas Times Herald, quoting unidentified sources, said Bailey invoked his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination during his appearance. WFAA-TV, also quoting unidentified sources, reported that Bailey took the Fifth 31 times.

Alleged slayer indicted

ANDERSON — A grand jury cleared the local sheriff of any wrongdoing in a recent jailbreak in which a deputy was killed, but indicted a jail trusty on a capital murder charge.

Grimes County grand jurors indicted James Mann, 26, in connection with the slaying of deputy Wesley Alford, 22, who was shot to death July 19. No indictments were issued against Sheriff Bill Foster.

"We found that the sheriff was not guilty of any misconduct or any improprieties whatsoever," said C.N. "Bud" Powell, a Texas Department of Corrections engineer and grand jury foreman.

Grand jurors did, however, ask that the district attorney seek an attorney general's opinion on using trustees on private property. Mann was one of two trustees at the county jail who Foster occasionally used in construction of his ranch house. The indictment against Mann was handed up on Tuesday.

Jury awards $700,000

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — A Cooper City man who survived the crash of Delta Flight 191 two years ago has been awarded $700,000 in damages by a federal jury. Delta had reportedly offered to settle for $150,000.

Gilbert Greene sued Delta Air Lines for medical costs associated with the physical and psychological scars he still bears, his attorneys said.

News reports right after the accident portrayed Greene as a lucky passenger who emerged virtually unscathed from the Aug. 2, 1985 crash near Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport. Greene, then 21 years old, suffered a lower back injury but was praised for helping carry other victims from the wreckage.

"He was really badly, badly hurt psychologically by the crash, and he was not treated very kindly by Delta and their insurance company," Krathen said.

Scientists review mummy

HOUSTON — An ancient Egyptian mummy is undergoing sophisticated tests by scientists who are trying to figure out exactly what is inside its remains, officials said.

The mummy, still in protective sheets, was moved Wednesday from the Museum of Natural Science to a University of Houston laboratory to undergo $80,000 to $100,000 worth of CAT scan tests. The lab specializes in the study of rocks from oil well cores, far older than a 2,700-year-old mummy.

Scientists are using a CAT scan machine to produce three-dimensional X-rays. Later a high-speed computer will assemble the X-ray images into pictures.

Wulf Massell, director of the Cullen Image Processing Laboratory, said this is the first time they have used their CAT scan machine on something other than a rock.

State orders inmate cut

AUSTIN — The Texas Commission on Jail Standards has ordered Tarrant County to reduce its jail population and provide bunks for every prisoner.

The remedial order, issued Wednesday, said the jail's population must be capped at 1,408, but immediately granted a postponement of enforcement of the order until Sept. 23, the date of the commission's next meeting.

If county officials reduce the jail population, which has been averaging about 1,700 prisoners in recent weeks, the board probably will continue the stay, commission staff Director Robert Viterna said.

Failure to meet the mandated inmate limit will result in removal of the stay, forcing the county to immediately cut jail population by releasing prisoners or transferring them to jails in other counties.

Views of papers across the U.S.

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from around the nation:

Critiques Shultz resignation idea

Notice that grumpy ultra conservatives were the only Iranamok panelists to suggest that, by resigning as secretary of state, George Shultz could have jolted President Reagan out of continuing the Iranian arms fiasco.

Isn't it strange that demands for Shultz's resignation came from that same ideological quarter last November when he didn't defend the goofy Iran initiative?

Shultz endorsed directions for going right that are applicable to any administration: Separating policymaking from intelligence-gathering. Tightening the leash on the National Security Council.

The president is fortunate that this sorely tested but true friend stayed the course.

The Atlanta Constitution

Supports action against Romania

Romania conjures up ominous images of vampire bats, haunted castles and Count Dracula.

Equally ominous to many members of Congress, however, is the misguided presidency of Nicolae Ceausescu, whose administration is marked by repression of ethnic minorities, support for terrorism, religious persecution, egregious offenses against human rights and cynical manipulation of U.S. trade policies.

Enough is enough. Both the U.S. House of Representatives and the U.S. Senate have voted to suspend most favored nation trade status for Romania for six months.

We support the suspension because it puts Ceausescu on notice that the United States opposes his repressive policies.

Roswell (N.M.) Daily Record

Urges campaign spending limits

There is a dire need to limit campaign spending. Under the current system, candidates for public office become obligated to a variety of special-interest groups that contribute large sums to their campaigns.

Unfortunately, efforts to reform election campaigns can result in new abuses. Political action committees, for example, came into being as the result of earlier legislation aimed at limiting campaign spending.

Legislators who are serious about campaign reform, and not merely trying to make partisan points, will work with those of the opposite party to achieve meaningful reform.

The Dispatch, Union, N.J.

Lauds Shultz hearing testimony

At crucial moments, when the country veered from its principles, statesmen stood forcefully to remind the nation of its heritage.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz assumed that role, and the result was a dramatic reminder that a nation constructed on the principles of truth and justice cannot abide deceit and allow patriots to pursue ends without regard to means.

The secretary's testimony reminded a populace infatuated with the commitment, courage and dedication of Lt. Col. Oliver North of an allegedly well-known principle: The responsibility for foreign relations lies with the Department of State. This point seemed lost among North's testimony.

Arizona Daily Star, Tucson, Ariz.

Says death penalty isn't cruel

There is nothing cruel or unusual about the death penalty. Death is not unusual. It is normal. We must all die, sooner or later.

The person who commits a capital offense has merely moved forward, hastened, the time of his death.

Justly, the switch is pulled only when all conceivable defenses have been exhausted. This is justice, in its purest sense, delivered without anger, without rage, without undue haste, and with some degree of compassion.

But above all, delivered simply because it is the law.

Stillwater (Okla.) NewsPress

Catastrophic bill glimmer of hope

The nation's elderly, faced with devastating health care bills in the event of catastrophic or long-term illness, have been offered a glimmer of hope at the end of the tunnel.

Designed to alleviate the dread of financially debilitating illness, the bill tells the elderly that their hospital bills will not exceed a set amount per year — $544 in 1988 — no matter how long they have to stay.

What will probably emerge (from the House bill and Reagan's proposals) will be a compromise bill. We hope it will be one that will prevent serious illness from wiping out the life savings of the elderly without wiping out the taxpayers at the same time.

ROTC getting thumbs up at college

The U.S. Army is seeing evidence of an upsurge in patriotism and interest in military service among college students. It reports that it has a growing surplus of cadets in the Reserve Officers Training Corps program.

Most college students now training at ROTC summer camps can expect to be commissioned as second lieutenants next year.

But only half of those requesting four-year tours of active duty will get them — as compared with 60 percent last year and 70 percent in 1985. The Army has a surplus of officer candidates.

Cadet Andrew Worden reports that non-ROTC students' attitudes have changed since his freshman year at Harvard. "Three years ago, the hostility was open," he says. "But now people are positive. When I walk around in my uniform, I get a thumbs-up sign."

The Pittsburgh Press

Says Sessions will keep FBI as it is

If President Reagan's nominee for FBI director is as he advertises himself, the FBI will remain in good hands.

The director-designate, U.S. District Judge William Sessions of San Antonio, describes himself as a "West Texas tough guy" who is "keenly aware" of constitutional rights and deeply concerned about integrity and fairness.

Sessions appears to possess the strength of character and the legal background necessary to keep the FBI what it is now: an agency only the lawless need to fear.

U.S. Mint vs. subcommittee: Money talks back in quarrel

By JACK ANDERSON and JOSEPH SPEAR

WASHINGTON — In this corner, wearing green: the United States Mint. In that corner, wearing red, white and blue, the staff of the House Banking subcommittee on consumer affairs and coinage, which has oversight of Mint business. We're in the middle, holding the coats.

The donnybrook began when we reported the subcommittee staff's charges that the Mint had tailored specifications for millions of dollars' worth of new coin presses so that only foreign manufacturers could fill the order. What with the enormous U.S. trade deficits, this was a serious charge to make against a federal agency.

To be fair to the Mint, our reporter, Lisa Sylvester, tried repeatedly to get comments from Mint Director Donna Pope's office before we sent the column out. The calls went unanswered.

Since then, however, apparently stung by publication of the subcommittee staff's accusations, Pope's office has put together a 10-page rebuttal and sent it to Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., the subcommittee chairman and Rep. Fernand St Germain, D-R.I., chairman of the Banking Committee.

The Mint denies it tried to cut U.S. companies out of the contract bidding, and charges that the subcommittee staff had reached "a fallacious conclusion."

"The Mint has an obligation to taxpayers to keep abreast of changing and improved technology for better productivity," the Mint rebuttal stated. It suggested that U.S. press manufacturers had failed to keep abreast, while foreign companies had.

The subcommittee staff didn't throw in the towel in the face of the Mint's counterattack. Here are the highlights of the huffing and puffing between the subcommittee staff and the Mint:

● As evidence of the Mint's "tailoring" of the specs, the subcommittee staff pointed out that one bid solicitation went so far as to specify the exact color the coin press should be. "What that has to do with performance beats me," snapped a staffer.

"Just because you want a blue car, it doesn't restrict you to one automobile manufacturer," the Mint responded. Spokesman Michael Brown said a color requirement is not uncommon, because some presses are in areas of the Mint visited by tourists, so the agency "wants to have a unified look."

● Responding to the charge that only 10 firms out of 70 potential bidders solicited sent in replies, the Mint said only a handful of companies in the world can produce coin presses that meet its exacting standards.

The Mint response added that its list of potential bidders is not highly specialized, since the Mint makes no attempt to police or qualify the names on the list; this would help account for the low response rate.

The subcommittee, however, cited a letter from Brown last January that stated: "We develop a list of firms capable of furnishing that particular press and mail them a copy of the solicitation." Brown pointed out that the letter also stated that "any firm that requests will be sent a solicitation and added to the list."

● In a flurry of jabs and roundhouse swings at the subcommittee staff, the Mint declared: "Through the use of crafty statistics and the anonymous comments of disappointed bidders, the report alleges that the Mint rigged the procurement process for pre-selected foreign equipment. This is a fallacious conclusion. The Mint strictly adhered to the Federal Acquisition Regulations."

The subcommittee staff riposted: "We promised (the bidders) up-front anonymity, so they could respond freely and frankly. The statistics spoke for themselves."

"The Mint's response doesn't address the central thesis that specifications were written for particular machinery. They may have complied with the regulations, but that was in form, not substance. Maybe by the letter, but hardly by the spirit."

Young and restless fan is fed up

By CARLEEN EVERETT-HALEY Lifestyle Editor

I reached my point of frustration today.

I know this may sound crazy, but today — when I went home for lunch — my soap opera was pre-empted again!

I understand that the Iran-Contra hearings are just a wee bit more important than the infamous "Young and the Restless." But when the hearings aren't on, they're still pre-empting.

Today, the Noon Show took the place of my soap.

Everyone knows the Noon Show should come on at noon — except the TV station, because it was aired today at 11.

Because I couldn't stand it anymore, I was prompted to call the cable company.

Of course, they didn't know anything about it.

The lady told me that the network can air a show or substitute it without any warning to the cable company or the customer.

"Is that fair?" I asked.

She replied "No" and apologized as she noted there is "nothing I can do about it."

I thought I'd take it one step farther, and get down to the nitty gritty.

I'm just that kind of person. I really don't like fooling with the middle man, getting half-cocked answers. I like to hear it from the top dog.

So I called KOSA in Midland.

The lady who took my call was very gracious. I have a feeling she has had to explain my question to more die-hard soap opera fans than me.

I initiated the conversation by saying that I really did feel silly for calling — after all, I thought, there's more to life than a soap opera.

Around the rim

But since I was calling, I asked,

"Why do certain shows keep getting pre-empted?"

She responded with a question: "What soap opera do you watch?"

That's when I knew she had become a pro at this.

The Young and the Restless, I retorted.

Then she explained: "Because of the Iran-Contra hearings..."

"CBS didn't run The Young and the Restless today," she said.

Of course, her explanation was much longer. And I must admit, it made sense.

She did say that the three networks — ABC, CBS and NBC — won't all be airing the hearings on the same days. They are going to rotate so each station's programs aren't interrupted.

So, she said, The Young and the Restless definitely will be on the next two days.

Now, that was the best news I had heard all day.

As we hung up, I know I felt better and she probably did, too, knowing that one more soap opera fan was off her back.

Now I'm left wondering how Nikki Newman is doing and if her husband is going to give her Mergeron Corp.; if Ashley Abbott is still in love with Victor, or if her psychiatrist has stolen her heart; if Jack will continue to be Mr. Nice Guy, or if he'll slip into his old habits of chasing women; and if Crickett will continue to take the rap for Phillip's car accident.

But hey, it's just another day without my soap — and there really is more to life.

Today, I actually carried on a conversation with my husband during our lunch, and I didn't feel so pressured to get everything done while the commercials were on.

As the days go by without my soap opera, it seems to get less painful and I get more detached.

I must admit, however, that there was a time that I was a real soapaholic. But now I'm feeling a sense of freedom; I think I can either take it or leave it.

If this continues, maybe I'll quit watching all together. That's something the networks better start thinking about, too.

But, you know what?

I can't wait 'til lunch tomorrow. I'll be home at 11.

Hearings prompting nightmares

By ART BUCHWALD

Millions of people are going to bed this summer dreaming they are witnesses in the congressional contra hearings. I must confess that I am one of them. My fantasy is that I am an admiral, and I'm being grilled viciously by counsel for the Senate.

"Admiral, do you mind putting out that stinking pipe?" the chairman says.

"Objection," my lawyer says.

"Objection overruled. The pipe will become exhibit A. Continue."

"Admiral, is it correct to say that you started World War III?"

"Yes sir, and I would be happy to declare it again because it is the only legal thing to do."

"Did the President know you were going to start a war?"

"No sir, he did not. The President doesn't like to get involved in details. The buck stops with me on this one."

"Why is that?"

"I had to keep it a secret from the President to give him plausible deniability. If the President didn't know what we were doing he couldn't stop us from doing it. This is not to say that if the President did know he would not support me in what we were doing."

"The White House emphatically says that Mr. Reagan did not know about World War III and if he did know he would have opposed you starting it."

"He had to say that to give him plausible deniability."

"Admiral, you just set the ceiling on fire with your pipe lighter."

"Objection, counsel is leading the witness."

"Sustained. Whether the admiral set fire to the ceiling of the hearing room is not germane to these proceedings."

"Did the President receive 196 findings outlining the plan?"

"No, they were all burned in my pipe before they got to him."

"What about Col. North?"

"He was terrific. He knew everything that was going on and did whatever was asked of him. I never saw anyone so happy to follow his superior up the hill and down again. Ollie was there when you needed him and, more important, when you didn't need him. The man could lie and shred at the same time."

"Now admiral, will you tell us about the money that was raised for the war by selling arms to country No. 6?"

"We had to sell arms to country No. 6 to get funds to fight country No. 23. The arms cost $14 million and our profit was $140 million. It was the only money we had to finance the start of World War III except what we got from Brunel."

"Would you please tell me where you got your authority to start a war?"

"Our lawyer who just passed his bar exam in Fiji ruled that what we did was legal."

"But you were creating a government within a government. Admiral, aren't you ashamed of yourself?"

"I'm willing to fall on my spear but no matter what our people up here say, I will always maintain that starting World War III was a peachy idea."

"That's not for you to decide. It's a presidential decision."

"Sir, if I had to bother the President about every little war the United States is going to get involved in, Mr. Reagan would not get any sleep."

It is at this moment that I wake up in a cold sweat because I imagine Ollie North has shredded my pajamas.

HOUSTON — Bob Keeshan, television's Captain Kangaroo, was hospitalized this morning, according to a spokeswoman who said the 60-year-old actor and producer asked that no information about him be released.

Theresa Borrello, an admitting clerk at Methodist Hospital, refused to say late Wednesday when Keeshan was hospitalized. Keeshan suffered a heart attack in 1981.

State executes slayer

ANGOLA, La. — John Brogdon, who begged for mercy for torturing and murdering an 11-year-old girl on grounds he was mentally retarded and a child abuse victim, was executed early Thursday in the electric chair.

Brogdon, 25, was pronounced at 12:12 a.m., said C. Paul Phelps, secretary of the Department of Corrections.

Brogdon, the seventh inmate executed in Louisiana since June and the second within a week, was calm but apprehensive as he was strapped into the chair.

He was led into the death chamber shortly after midnight and asked if he wanted to make a statement.

"God bless ya'll," was all he said.

Rocks thrown at cars

LOS ANGELES — Six cars including a police vehicle had their windshields smashed by rocks early today along a stretch of California highway in the latest incident of freeway violence here, police said.

The rock-throwing prompted the Los Angeles Police Department and the California Highway Patrol to close three miles of the Golden State Freeway to look for suspects, but none were immediately found.

Tons of cocaine found

CHICAGO — Federal agents tracked a large shipment of cocaine from Colombia to a produce warehouse here and confiscated it in what a newspaper called one of the largest drug seizures in U.S. history.

The Chicago Sun-Times quoted unidentified federal sources as saying officers seized 2½ tons of high-grade cocaine Wednesday night.

Authorities estimated the street value of the cocaine at up to $500 million and said the drug was hidden inside banana crates, according to radio station WBBM.

Slashing

Two attackers of model sentenced

NEW YORK (AP) — Fashion model Marla Hanson says it's been a "long, long year" but she believes justice has been done with the sentencing of her attackers.

Miss Hanson also said she planned to go under plastic surgery in the near future, and had discussed several options with doctors about repairing the scars left by the attack.

On Wednesday, the two men convicted of holding Miss Hanson and slashing her face with a razor blade, were sentenced to the maximum term of 5-to-15 years each.

Despite impassioned pleas from their lawyers, both defendants, Steven Bowman and Darren Norman, received the maximum sentence from state Supreme Court Justice Jeffrey Atlas, who said he saw no reason to give them less than the maximum.

Miss Hanson was in the courtroom, and sat emotionless next to her lawyer, Michael Shannon.

Miss Hanson did not speak to the judge, but said outside the court that she believed the sentences were appropriate and they appeared to mark the end of her ordeal.

"I could not help but feel compassion for what they're going through," she said of her attackers. "On the other hand, they didn't take responsibility for what happened."

Bowman, 28, and Norman, 21, were hired by Miss Hanson's landlord, Steven Roth, after she demanded return of an $850 security deposit and spurned his sexual advances. Roth is already serving a 5-to-15 year term.

Miss Hanson was attacked June 5, 1986, on West 35th Street and Dyer Avenue in Manhattan.

Atlas, in handing down sentence, made reference to the extraordinary amount of media attention surrounding the case but dismissed suggestions that giving the maximum sentence would be politically safe.

"I am not a political creature. To me, a sentence is safe only when it is fair," Atlas said in the courtroom.

"With respect to Mr. Bowman, it is clear that the crime in which he participated was of the gravest nature," the judge continued. "The evidence demonstrates that he conspired with Mr. Roth in planning the assault."

Model Marla Hanson speaks to the media in New York Wednesday after Steven Bowman and Darren Norman, the two men convicted of holding the model and slashing her face with a razor blade, were sentenced to the maximum term of 5-to-15 years each. Hanson was attacked June 5, 1986, in New York.

Bowman told Atlas he was a hard-working person who never condoned violence, and denied any role in the attack. During his trial, Roth had claimed Bowman was his homosexual lover and attacked Miss Hanson in a jealous rage.

But Atlas said the evidence was so overwhelming against Bowman that his denials were "utterly unconvincing."

Regarding Norman, Atlas observed that a psychiatric report on Norman indicated "the crime he committed is totally out of character."

"In character or out of character... the jury found Mr. Norman was the cutter."

Norman, speaking before Atlas, said, "I was there, but I didn't know what was going to go down. I was simply there because Steven Bowman asked me to come to Manhattan with him. I'm very sorry for what happened to Miss Hanson."

Miss Hanson, standing outside the Manhattan courthouse with her brother Alan, said she believed justice had been done and expressed satisfaction with the sentences.

Soviets to come to U.S.

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze have agreed to meet Sept. 15-17 in Washington, possibly setting the stage for a pre-Thanksgiving superpower summit meeting in the nation's capital.

The White House, in a one-sentence announcement today, confirmed that the two would meet at the same time the U.N. General Assembly is opening its annual session in New York, which Shevardnadze also is expected to attend.

Guard hits Gandhi

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — A sailor hit Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi with his automatic rifle today as Gandhi inspected a naval honor guard, journalist eyewitnesses said.

Gandhi raised his arms to protect himself as the weapon came down on his shoulder, but he appeared unhurt and said he was "absolutely all right," the witnesses said.

A Sri Lankan government official told reporters the sailor had fainted and accidentally hit Gandhi. The guard, who was not identified, was quickly taken away.

Car bomb injures 69

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — A car bomb exploded today near a military headquarters in central Johannesburg, wounding at least 69 people and damaging buildings, the government said.

No group claimed responsibility. Mini-of Law and Order Adriaan Vlok blamed the outlawed African National Congress guerrilla movement for the bombing, and said half of the injured were black.

The independent South African Press Association, or SAPA, said at least one soldier died. It quoted a witness as saying he had seen a man in an army uniform "lying in a pool of blood with his chest and stomach blown away." But official reports did not list any dead.

Soviets ordered out

OSLO, Norway — The government has ordered a Soviet diplomat and three members of the Soviet trade mission to leave the country, accusing them of industrial and technological espionage, the foreign minister said today.

Foreign Minister Thorvald Stoltenberg told a news conference that at least one of the Soviets had been involved in illegal operations for as long as three years. He declined to give specifics, however.

Stoltenberg identified the diplomat as Valentin V. Korpusev, a second secretary.

Lonetree regrets betrayal

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) — The defense began its cross-examination of a naval investigator in the case of Sgt. Clayton Lonetree today as it battled the prosecution over the admissibility of evidence in the espionage court-martial.

Naval Investigative Service Special Agent Gary Lee Hargrove was questioned by military defense attorney Capt. Andrew O. Strotman as the defense sought to prove that statements made by Lonetree to the NIS last December should be thrown out.

The Marine is charged with giving U.S. secrets to his Soviet girlfriend while he worked as a guard in the Moscow Embassy.

On Wednesday, NIS Special Agent Dave Moyer testified that Lonetree said he regretted betraying his fellow Marines.

"The one thing that concerned me is I let my buddies down in the Marines," Moyer quoted Lonetree as saying.

Moyer and Hargrove were called to the stand Wednesday by military prosecutor Maj. David L. Beck, who was seeking to quash the defense's motion to throw the statements out of court.

After Hargrove's testimony today, two more NIS agents were in line, defense counsel Michael Stuhff said. One of the two is NIS Special Agent Thomas Brannon.

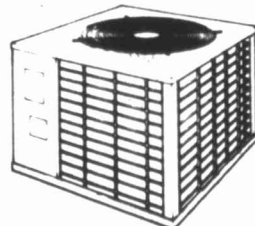

Previous testimony has indicated that during interrogations in London, Brannon told Lonetree to lie in order to keep the sergeant talking.

Under questioning Wednesday by the prosecution, Moyer and Hargrove said that Lonetree spoke to NIS agents in Vienna, Austria, of his own free will, then went to London for further interrogation without asking for a lawyer. They said he was repeatedly advised of his right against self-incrimination.

Defense attorneys Stuhff and William Kuntzler contend that the government stacked the deck against Lonetree by having members of one agency, believed to be the CIA, first elicit statements from Lonetree without advising him of his rights.

The Bible doctrine of hell is truth! It is important to remember these facts:

- #1. It is a mistake to try to determine by human standards and emotions what the punishment of sin should or will be.
- #2. God alone knows what the punishment of sin should and will be.
- #3. The punishment of sin now and eternally from God will be just, fair, right and adapted to what each person is due - by what God determines is right to receive.
- #4. Punishment of the wicked, of every sinner, is not inconsistent with what the Bible describes God to be in his love, but rather is a revelation of God's justice and holiness carried out toward sin, and is what is rightfully due sin against Him.
- #5. Where we each are in eternity will be suited to the character, attitudes and spiritual condition we develop in this life.

"Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have the right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates in the city (heaven)." Revelation 22:14

La Bamba opens new ground for Hispanics

By JESSE TREVINO

An exceptional movie, La Bamba, opened recently in theaters across the country. I am no film critic, but it is necessary to comment on La Bamba because it is more important a film than the summer hit Columbia Pictures wants it to be.

This is not the usual placard-mentality movie of a Hispanic victim suffering at the hands of an Anglo system of justice or anything as predictable. La Bamba embodies powerful, provocative aspects of the Hispanic mind and personality heretofore unexplored in a U.S. film.

That alone makes the movie significant, but its impact may be greater. Indeed, the film's makers show a fair amount of sophistication by understanding the country needs a film that goes beyond the story of an ethnic minority enduring prejudice and hate.

The storyline certainly includes racism, but it does not suffocate the movie, which chronicles the too-short life of Ritchie Valens.

Valens died at the age of 17 with the legendary Buddy Holly. Both would have become mass music idols had they lived. Instead they died in an airplane crash in 1959.

Rather than engulf Valens only with the consequences of a prejudicial Southern California society, the movie sidesteps race and allows other, integral aspects of the Hispanic experience on to center stage.

No viewer can miss the heavy fatalism underlying the movie. Hispanics, in particular, cannot escape how the film's director, Luis Valdez, presents this potent factor of their psyche.

Whatever lurks out there for Ritchie lurks out there for all of us.

Nightmares of a falling airplane, which snuffed out the life of his boyhood friend playing on their school playground, haunt Ritchie.

Spared death while away attending his grandfather's funeral, Ritchie tentatively convinces himself he is destined to become a rock n'roll star because "stars do not fall out of the sky."

Yet Ritchie's fatalism lingers — but not morbidly so — because the audience is disarmed by the exploding smile of an all-American Latino kid pursuing the American Dream.

Through all of this, he undergoes a painful re-awakening to his Hispanic culture and returns to learn Spanish so he can sing La Bamba.

Jesse Trevino

This is the movie's most appealing aspect — and its most controversial. Director Valdez believes a Hispanic American can live in two cultures, sacrifice neither and be loyal to both.

Indeed, Ritchie's older brother — who cannot make the complete transition into and from the Anglo culture — survives to live, but will remain clearly afflicted by his inability to adapt.

At the end, the brother screams at the heavens when he learns of Ritchie's death, realizing Ritchie held the key to taming the furies generated by the clash of two cultures demanding attention within the soul.

In one critical scene, Ritchie has to change his name from Ricardo Valenzuela to suit the demands of the U.S. in the late '50s. Though their father abandoned them when young, the brother vehemently protests the name change, reflecting the blind loyalty Hispanics often have for figures of authority and, too often, their culture.

But Ritchie changes the name nonetheless, and brings about the success he seeks. This latent cultural argument between the two later explodes into a physical brawl.

Treating a subject now 30 years old, La Bamba arrives at U.S. moviehouses in Spanish and English versions; in both, the same old cars, crew-cuts, dress styles and music are in glitzy mode.

What is not clear is how the movie will affect younger Hispanics born after the Valens-Holly era.

Society's modern-day infatuation with entertainment figures and glitz may provide Hispanics a significant link to Valens and how he wrestled with two cultures.

But the movie demonstrates how this cultural clash drives some Hispanics to drop out of school, do drugs, become disenchanted and participate in other self-destructive behavior.

A future Olympian in the making

Don't be surprised if Big Spring has someone to cheer for in the '88 Olympics in Seoul. Boxer Juan Baldwin, one of the fighting Baldwin brothers, was the sixth ranked 119-pound boxer in the nation in the latest USA Amateur Boxing Federation's rankings.

Those rankings were decided from fights in the first quarter of the year. Since that time, Baldwin won the national Golden Gloves title in Knoxville. His father, Jaime Sr., said Juan would probably be ranked third or fourth if the rankings came out now.

That ranking grows in significance when you consider this — the top five ranked ASA boxers get automatic invitations to the U.S. Olympic Trials next spring. Juan said he has no doubt that he'll be at the trials. He sounds sure of himself, not cocky, when he says he'll win the trials and compete against the Russians and the Cubans in Seoul.

Baldwin was the only West Texas fighter ranked by the ASA. There were 120 fighters ranked in 12 divisions.

Baldwin has an opportunity in August to further his chances for Olympic Gold. He's been invited to the ABF's All-Comers Training Camp Aug. 15-28 at the Marquette Olympic Training Center in Marquette, Michigan.

According to an ABF newsletter, the camps "are a key way for boxers to be identified and considered as potential members of future U.S. boxing teams. Any boxer who wishes to participate must be considered a top prospect for future national and international competition."

Jaime Baldwin Sr. said some of the top boxing coaches in the world will be at the camp, as well as the top amateur boxers in the country. The ABF pays for everything but the transportation. Baldwin said it would cost approximately $600 for his son to get to and from Marquette.

"We'll manage. We've always done it," he said. Nevertheless, the Baldwins need sponsors. Anyone who wishes to help Juan get to the camp can call Ed Garza, his coach, at 267-8868.

Four longtime Little League umpires — Jack Griffin, Charles Jefferson, J.R. Piper and Don Spence — received a big pat on the back Saturday night for all they've done for Little League baseball in Big Spring.

Bonnie Barber, who along with her husband Jack has been supporting little league baseball for 25 years, presented the four veteran umpires with plaques thanking them for their time and effort. The presentation was made at National League park before the game between the Big Spring American League and Lamesa All-Stars.

This may or may not deserve to go on the sports page, but what the heck?

The World Wrestling Federation will present "The Superstars of Wrestling" next Thursday night at Ector County Coliseum in Odessa.

Don't miss: Randy "Macho Man" Savage and his sexy sidekick Elizabeth, vs. "The Natural", who's real name may or may not be Butch Reed. Next up: Coca-B-Ware (get it — beware) vs. ex-cheating referee Danny Davis, who doesn't have a nickname. And then: George "The Animal" Steele will battle "The One Man Gang," who looks like a sure bet in a pie-eating contest.

Other highlights will include midget tag-team wrestling and Jose Estrada. Tickets for the show are on sale at T's & Too's in Big Spring. Tickets are $8, $11, and $14.

The Texas Tech Ex-Students Association is sponsoring a trip to the Tech opener against Florida St. in Tallahassee. There is a limited number of spaces remaining for the Labor Day weekend trip.

The package includes game ticket, airfare, lodging, and transportation in Tallahassee. In addition, the group will tour the Pebble Hill Plantation on Sunday, with lunch.

For more information, call (806) 742-3641.

Coahoma shooter Billy Bates won the state championship earlier this month in the small bore rifle (22 rimfire) competition.

Bates competed against 120 shooters at the Ft. Worth Rifle and Pistol Club.

Big Spring shooter Kelly Rogers did well at the 19th Annual Toepperwein Classic Trapshoot last weekend at the San Antonio Gun Club.

Rogers ran a perfect 100X100 in the preliminary singles and won the last doubles event with a 97X100 round.

Betty Ray Coffee and Harriet Richardson shot a one-under 37 to win the Comanche Trail Ladies Golf Association's team scramble Monday. The team of Martha Saunders, Bobbie Patterson and Jayne Ortega finished second with a 39.

In last Thursday's couple play, Jim and Georgie Newsom teamed with Paul and Patti Woodall to shoot a five-under 30 for first place. Max and Betty Ray Coffee teamed with Sherill and Jane Farmer for second. Also, last weekend Jim and Annie Ward won the first flight in a couples scramble tournament in Olney.

The Coors Veterans Memorial Scholarship Fund Softball Tournament will be this Friday through Sunday in Big Spring.

Team trophies will be awarded to the first through fifth place teams, and the top three teams will get individual trophies. There will also be an MVP trophy and a sportsmanship award.

The tournament field will be limited to 20 teams. There is a $100 entry fee. For more information, call Kenneth McMurtrey at 263-8406 or at 263-2608.

Big Spring American League All-Stars, third baseman Clark Fields (left) and shortstop Patrick Martinez go after a ground ball hit during action Wednesday night in Pecos during Little League Bi-District action. Pecos won 13-1. The two teams square off again tonight at 7 p.m. at the American League park.

Pecos drums Americans

By EDDIE CURRAN
Staff Writer

PECOS — Whether it was the long trip, the fast field or the Pecos All-Stars, one thing was for sure Wednesday night — the Big Spring American League All-Stars did not look like the same bunch that beat Lamesa Monday night.

The American stars committed six errors, allowed several crucial passed balls and lost 13-1 to a powerful Pecos team.

Tonight they'll have a chance to avenge that loss, and on more familiar territory. They'll host Pecos at American League Park, with an earlier than usual starting time of 7 p.m.

A blistering, dusty wind and a load of empty pickup trucks greeted the American stars after their 135 mile trip, and the wind didn't let up and things just got worse. The pickups, all parked just outside the outfield fence, had been there since Tuesday — the Pecos fans weren't taking any chances.

Whatever the reason, even during infield practice the American stars didn't appear as sharp as they had been during the district tournament.

Pecos, which returns five players from last year's state tournament qualifying team, started man-sized Julian Urquidez on the mound. Urquidez struck out 12 American League batters while walking just one. He faced just 22 in all — four over the minimum. Pecos, meanwhile, sent 37 batters to the plate.

Neither team scored in the opening inning, though Pecos did get one of their 12 hits.

Pecos' Dominique Tellez led off the second with a single to right that went through the right fielder's legs for a two-bagger. The next batter, Charlie Zamarripa, was hit by a pitch from American starter Jeromaine Gonzales. Both runners scored on passed balls, and Pecos had a 2-0 lead.

In the bottom of the second, John

Kennedy smacked a one-out single to right, but Urquidez struck out the next two batters. It would be the last American hit until the sixth.

The third inning was the American stars' downfall. Pecos' Gary Michaelis reached safely after an error on the Big Spring shortstop, and Junior Williams followed with a single to right. The next batter flied out to Jeremy Edens at first.

With one out and two on, Matt Peters hit a grounder back to the mound, but the throw for the force at third was way off, and Michaelis scored. The next batter popped up to the pitcher for the second out.

If not for the errors, it would have been the third out; and those errors came back to haunt the American stars in a hurry. Zamarripa followed the pop out with a grounder to short, but the ball was mishandled and one run scored.

After two consecutive singles,

Gonzales went to first and Kennedy came to the mound from center field. In Gonzales' defense, all of the runs scored on him were unearned.

The first batter Kennedy faced hit a two-run double, but he struck out the next batter to end the disastrous inning. The score after three: Pecos 7, Big Spring American 0.

American manager Alton Field was asked after the game if his team had been too tight.

"I guess that's what it is. With the wind and the travel — these kids probably never traveled to play a baseball game in their life."

"And that pitcher had a good fastball and a pretty good curve. We have some pretty good sticks on this team and he had 'em going," Fields said.

He also said that the short, dry grass on the Pecos field was much faster than the plush carpet that has grown in the Big Spring parks

Defending champ heads U.S. diving championship

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — Megan Neyer warmed up for the preliminary round defense of her 3-meter springboard title by winning a gold medal in the 1-meter event at the U.S. Diving Outdoor Championships.

Neyer scored 438.84 points. Defending champion Kim Fugett of Cincinnati had 433.89. Mary Fischbach of Fort Dodge, Iowa, and the University of Michigan, was third with 432.21.

They outdistanced a field of 34 divers who completed the 1-meter competition as temperatures climbed into the upper 90s Wednesday afternoon.

Earlier, Greg Louganis held off Bruce Kimball to take the top qualifying score in the men's 10-meter platform competition.

Neyer, of Boca Raton, Fla., is one 12 divers who will compete today in the women's 3-meter, while the men compete on the 1-meter board. The 1-meter championship is determined without a preliminary round.

Louganis, also of Boca Raton, scored 586.92 in the 10-dive preliminary round to Kimball's 576.21. Ron Meyer, of Baton Rouge, La., was third with 566.13. Defending champion Matt Scoggin of Austin, Texas, was fourth with 560.58.

The preliminary round pitted 34 competitors to 12 finalists for the 10-meter finals. Finals in the men's and women's 10-meter competition are Saturday.

Louganis, 27, also was top qualifier Tuesday in the preliminary round of the men's 3-meter springboard event.

He is not defending a title in the outdoor championships for the first time in 10 years because he failed to win an event in the previous U.S. Diving national meet, the indoor championships at Baton Rouge in April.

Louganis said he believed his dives from 10 meters were more consistent than his performance off the 3-meter board.

His top dive Wednesday was his next-to-last, a back 3½ somersault from the tuck position, for which he was awarded 73.26 points.

Kimball got the top marks of the event in his final two dives, receiving no score lower than an 8.5 on a reverse 2½ somersault from the tuck position and a back 2½ somersault from the pike position.

The two highest scorers in the 3-meter and platform competitions will represent the United States in the Pan American Games. The top eight finalists in the same events will earn berths on the U.S. national team.

The membership of the eight-member Pan American team will be selected based on points received in the finals plus 50 percent of preliminary round scores.

The 1-meter event rarely is part of international competition, but meet officials said two 1-meter divers will be added to the U.S. team following the competition.

Ride 'em cowboy

Cody Hinderlitter of Sterling City, competing in the 14-19 bareback bronc competition, tries to stay on during action at the American Junior Rodeo Association rodeo Wednesday night at the Big Spring Rodeo Bowl. Hinderlitter was bucked off and didn't get a score. Action begins tonight at 7:30.

Arena football draws mixed reviews

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Andy Griffith performs a farcical comedy routine called "What It Was Was Football" in which he struggles to describe the game to a friend who has never seen it played.

Imagine Andy Griffith's buddy trying to visualize Arena Football — a miniaturized indoor version that is played in hockey rinks, resembles pinball as much as football, and has such a peculiar playing field that collecting a rebound can be just as important as it is in basketball.

"It's the damndest sport I've ever seen," said Perry Moss, a Pittsburgh Gladiators assistant coach who has coached in every major U.S. pro football league in the last 30 years.

"I'm a little amazed by it myself. It's fast-paced. It never lets up. If you like action, you'll love it," said Arena Football President and founder Jim Foster.

A former NFL promotions manager, Foster deserves the credit — or the blame — for dreaming up the idea of an indoor pro football league that would play in the summer, when big-city sports arenas usually go begging for tenants.

An experimental four-city, six-game season this summer gave fans their first exposure to indoor football, but what Arena Football is isn't exactly football.

The field is half as long and half as wide as a regulation field and there are only eight men to a side instead of 11. The goal posts are only nine feet wide, or about half the width of the NFL's, thus bringing an uncharacteristic uncertainty to even the most routine of plays, the extra point.

The Denver Dynamite's Marty Coyne became the answer to a trivia question when, after missing seven of eight extra-point kicks in the team's first game, he became the first Arena Football player to be waived.

The small field means a team is always in scoring position and no punting is allowed. Players also are expected to play both ways, but that rule was relaxed when fatigue began playing a bigger factor than anticipated.

What undoubtedly will become the league's signature piece, however, are the huge 35-foot high screens that flank each goal post upright. A ball that rebounds off the one of the taut screens, either on a missed kick or an incomplete pass, is free and can be played by either team.

The scoring hasn't been a surprise but the attendance has. Foster was hoping that the league's four charter franchises — Pittsburgh, Denver, the Washington Commandos and the Chicago Bruisers — would average 8,000 fans a game. Instead, they averaged nearly 12,000, prompting the league to announce it will expand to eight or 10 teams and at least a 10-game schedule next season.

Cards' strategy backfires

By The Associated Press
The best-laid plans of men, mice and even White Rats sometimes goes astray.

With the game tied 4-4 in the 10th inning and the New York Mets' switch-hitting Howard Johnson coming to bat, St. Louis Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog decided to

The idea was to have Johnson, who has hit 13 home runs left-handed, take his swings as a right-hander.

"He's been hitting both ways," the white-haired Herzog said. "He hits a little better right-handed, but still, if he hits the ground ball you've got a good chance of doubling him up."

So much for strategy. Johnson lined a two-run homer, his 24th of the season, into the left-field bleachers to give the Mets a 6-4 victory and the reeling Cardinals their sixth consecutive loss.

Tommy Herr scored twice for St. Louis and also drove in two runs, getting the Cardinals even with a ninth-inning single that scored Vince Coleman from second.

The Cardinals, who have stayed ahead in the standings despite a string of injuries, got a scare when first baseman Jack Clark, who leads the majors with 91 runs batted in, was shaken up in a collision with the Mets' Mookie Wilson in the fourth. Clark left the game with bruises to his right shoulder, elbow and forearm, but X-rays revealed no breaks.

Expos 11, Cubs 3
Tim Wallach and Vance Law hit consecutive homers in the fifth, by which time Bryn Smith, 7-4, who allowed six hits in seven innings, was breezing with a 7-0 lead. Mitch Webster added a two-run homer in the sixth as the Expos won for the fourth time in five games.

Manny Trillo had a two-run, pinch-hit homer, his seventh, in the ninth.

Reds 15, Padres 5
Only once in 14 previous seasons had Dave Parker driven in as many as six runs in a game. Now he's done it twice within a week.

Parker, who drove in six against Montreal last Thursday, duplicated that feat Wednesday night when he singled in two runs, hit a three-run homer and was hit by a pitch with the bases loaded.

Giants 16, Dodgers 2
Mike Krukow, who hadn't won a game in nine previous starts, was the beneficiary. Krukow, only 2-6 after a 20-win season in 1986, allowed six hits in his third complete game of the season.

The only run off Krukow came on solo homers by John Shelby and pinch-hitter Alex Trevino.

Chili Davis paced the Giants' 16-hit attack, driving in five runs with a double and a three-run homer, his 17th. Mike Altreche drove in three runs and Kevin Mitchell scored three times as the Giants won for the ninth time in 12 games.

Braves 5, Astros 3
Nolan Ryan gave up just two hits in 5 1/3 innings but dropped 4-13 — the most losses in the league — thanks in large part to four walks, a wild pitch and four Houston errors.

Gerald Perry had both hits off Ryan, scored two runs and stole three bases for the Braves. Atlanta overcame a 2-1 deficit with three runs in the sixth on Perry's double and stolen base, three walks, an error and a sacrifice fly.

Dale Murphy hit his 27th home run in the seventh and an inning later prevented two runs from scoring when he leaped to grab Ken Caminiti's drive to the right-field wall.

Bill Doran accounted for two Houston runs with a solo homer and an RBI double.

Phillies 4, Pirates 3
Philadelphia won its eighth in a row over the Pirates and 10th in 11 games this season as Milt Thompson hit a two-run homer and Von Hayes a solo shot.

Pecos

during this unusually wet year.

"We're not making excuses, but it was a whole lot faster than what we're used to. We were knocking the ball down as it went by," he said.

"Tomorrow will be a different situation at our place," Fields added.

In the fourth, errors and Urquidez's pitching continued to plague the American stars. Pecos scored three runs on three hits, two errors and a passed ball, padding the lead to 10-0.

The American stars settled down in the fifth. Third baseman Clark Fields made a good catch of a pop foul, then second baseman Tom Blankenship stopped a hard grounder and threw the runner out at first for the second out. Fields finished the three-up, three-down inning when he caught another pop-up.

Urquidez led off the fifth with a monstrous blast that flew over the fence in left-center and may still be traveling. Pecos added two more runs in the inning on two more hits to take a 13-0 lead.

Though all realistic hope was gone for an opening game win, Patrick Martinez led off the bottom of the sixth looking to find some of the past week's magic. Martinez unloaded off a Urquidez fastball and bounced it off a pickup in left field.

After a ground out, Kennedy cracked a stand-up double to center — his second hit of the game. The Americans didn't score again, but at least they may have given themselves the confidence they'll need tonight against the same Pecos team.

Chisox's hurler wins seventh straight

By The Associated Press

The Detroit Tigers are among the few American League teams that have not expressed an interest in trading for Floyd Bannister. Maybe they've changed their attitude now.

Bannister pitched a five-hitter Wednesday night for his seventh straight victory over Detroit as the Chicago White Sox beat the Tigers 4-0.

"You can't help getting excited about pitching against Detroit — they're the hottest ballclub in the game," Bannister said after out-dueling Jack Morris and stopping the Tigers' five-game winning streak.

American League

In the last month, Bannister has been mentioned in several trade rumors involving contending teams including Toronto, Oakland and the New York Yankees.

Bannister, 6-8, pitched his first shutout since last Sept. 1 and handed host Detroit only its second shutout of the season. He has not lost to the Tigers since April 7, 1984, when Morris pitched a no-hitter.

Morris, 12-5, failed in his fifth attempt to win his 13th game. He gave up 11 hits in his seventh complete game.

The White Sox scored in the fifth inning on a double by Jerry Hairston and singles by Carlton Fisk and Ken Williams.

Chicago broke the game open with three runs in the eighth. Harold Baines singled with one out, Greg Walker hit an RBI double with two outs and Hairston followed with his fourth home run.

Angels 5, Athletics 4
Oakland's Mark McGwire tied the AL rookie home run record, but Devon White's three-run homer helped California win the game.

McGwire hit his 37th home run in the fourth inning, a solo shot that tied Al Rosen's AL rookie mark set in 1950 with Cleveland. McGwire, leading the majors in homers, is one behind the major-league home run record for rookies held by Wally Berger and Frank Robinson.

Yankees 4, Royals 0
Steve Trout, Tim Lincecum and Dave Righetti combined on a six-hitter for New York.

Mike Easler's three-run, pinch-double in the eighth inning sent the host Yankees win their third straight game. The Royals have been shut out 13 times this season and have lost 16 of their last 20 games.

Mariners 8, Twins 3
Alvin Davis hit a pair of two-run home runs for Seattle at the Kingdome.

Lee Guetterman, 9-2, gave up three runs in eight innings. Loser Mike Smithson, 4-6, allowed seven runs in five innings and was sent to the minors after the game.

The Mariners scored three times in the first inning on an RBI double by Phil Bradley, a sacrifice fly by Gary Matthews and Mike Kingery's run-scoring grounder.

Davis homered in the third, then hit his 13th homer in the fifth.

Red Sox 6, Blue Jays 5
Marty Barrett's bases-loaded walk forced home the tiebreaking run in the eighth inning for Boston. With the score 5-5 in the eighth, Dave Henderson got a pinch-single off Gary Lavelle, 1-3. Ed Romero's single against Mark Eichhorn and a grounder loaded the bases before Ellis Burks tied out. Barrett then drew a two-out walk from Eichhorn.

George Bell hit a pair of solo homers for the host Blue Jays. He has a career-high 32 home runs and leads the AL with 85 RBIs.

Red Sox rookie Sam Horn hit a two-run homer and an RBI single. Horn has three home runs since his major-league debut Friday.

Calvin Schiraldi, 6-5, pitched three innings for the victory.
Brewers 9, Rangers 8
Dale Sveum tied the game with a home run in the ninth inning and singled home the winner in the 12th inning for Milwaukee.

Sveum led off the ninth with his 14th homer for a 7-7 tie. Paul Molitor followed with a triple and Robin Yount hit a sacrifice fly, putting the Brewers ahead, but Ruben Sierra's RBI single with two outs in the bottom of the ninth made it 8-8.

B.J. Surhoff singled with one out in the 12th and Ernest Riles reached on second baseman Jerry Browne's error. After Surhoff was caught stealing, Sveum singled off Paul Kilgus, 1-2.

A two-run double by Sierra and a three-run homer by Larry Parrish, his 23rd, gave Texas a 7-2 lead in the third.

Dan Plesac, 5-4, got the victory.

Orioles 7, Indians 4
Mike Young and Ken Gerhart hit consecutive home runs and Cleveland third baseman Brook Jacoby's error enabled visiting Baltimore to break a 3-3 tie in the seventh inning.

Rookie Eric Bell, 9-7, won his third straight decision. He gave up 10 hits in his second consecutive complete game.

Young led off the seventh with a single off Tom Candiotti, 3-11, and Jim Dwyer walked. Billy Ripken then hit a high bounce that deflected off Jacoby's glove and Young scored.

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, JULY 31, 1987

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is one of your best days to form alliances for now and the future and to reconcile any differences of opinion with associates. Be sure to look at both sides of any argument.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Some public affairs you've been noticing could bring you much prestige if you apply yourself. Be wise in business affairs.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) With the help of a co-worker, improve the efficiency of your surroundings. Take it easy tonight and get some rest.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Be more concerned with the romantic side of life. You'll get good results by being your own best critic.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Entertaining some influential people at home would greatly benefit your career situation.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Handle your correspondence carefully; state your aims directly and get good results. Be more calm with your family tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You may find that an adviser is under the weather and not helpful, so get busy and find needed information privately.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't hesitate to ask favors of a generous friend today. Use your charm and abilities wisely and profit.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) If you are puzzled about a business matter, don't dwell on it. The information is there for the asking.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Plan a trip which is important to your welfare and growth. Make sure your wardrobe is right, but travel light.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You have been in a rut for quite some time. It's time to shake things up and find a way out of the doldrums.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't let others impose on you so much. Make a plan of action and stick to it, as you really need direction.

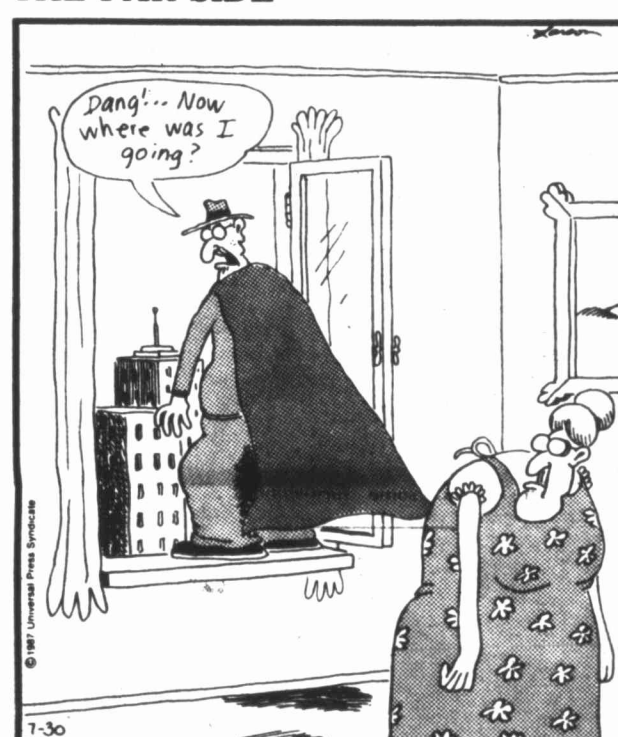

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't let anyone pull the wool over your eyes in business. Your most clever method is simply common sense.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be very magnetic and affectionate, especially where family and friends are concerned. Slant the education toward humanitarian interests, as your child could be quite a boon to society at large. Encourage him or her to participate in healthful sports.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!
