Showdown looms over amendment

WASHINGTON (AP) - The balanced budget amendment is headed for a showdown in both houses of Congress over the next several days, the culmination of years of struggle and a brief, intense period of politicking.

"This issue is in bloom in both houses," Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, said Thursday as the Senate agreed to vote on competing plans early next week, and deficit foes forced a House vote likely to be set for mid-March.

The Senate vote was set after Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., produced a proposal that would soften the existing balanced budget amendment by keeping Social Security tax receipts off-limits, granting an escape valve in times of recession and using follow-up legislation to permit the government to borrow money to pay for highways and other permanent projects.

Sen. Paul Simon decided it as "balanced budget light," and said it was doomed to defeat.

"It's cover for those who want to go back home and say they voted for a balanced budget and then vote against the real thing," the Illinois Democrat said in remarks that seemed aimed principally at six or eight fellow Democrats who remain uncommitted.

He and Republican allies said they would vote against it, and Democrats opposed to any type of amendment were likely to oppose it as well.

But its impact on the final fate of the drive to amend the constitution was harder to gauge.

Reid, who has been uncommitted, stopped just short of saying he would oppose the stricter amendment if his own plan failed.

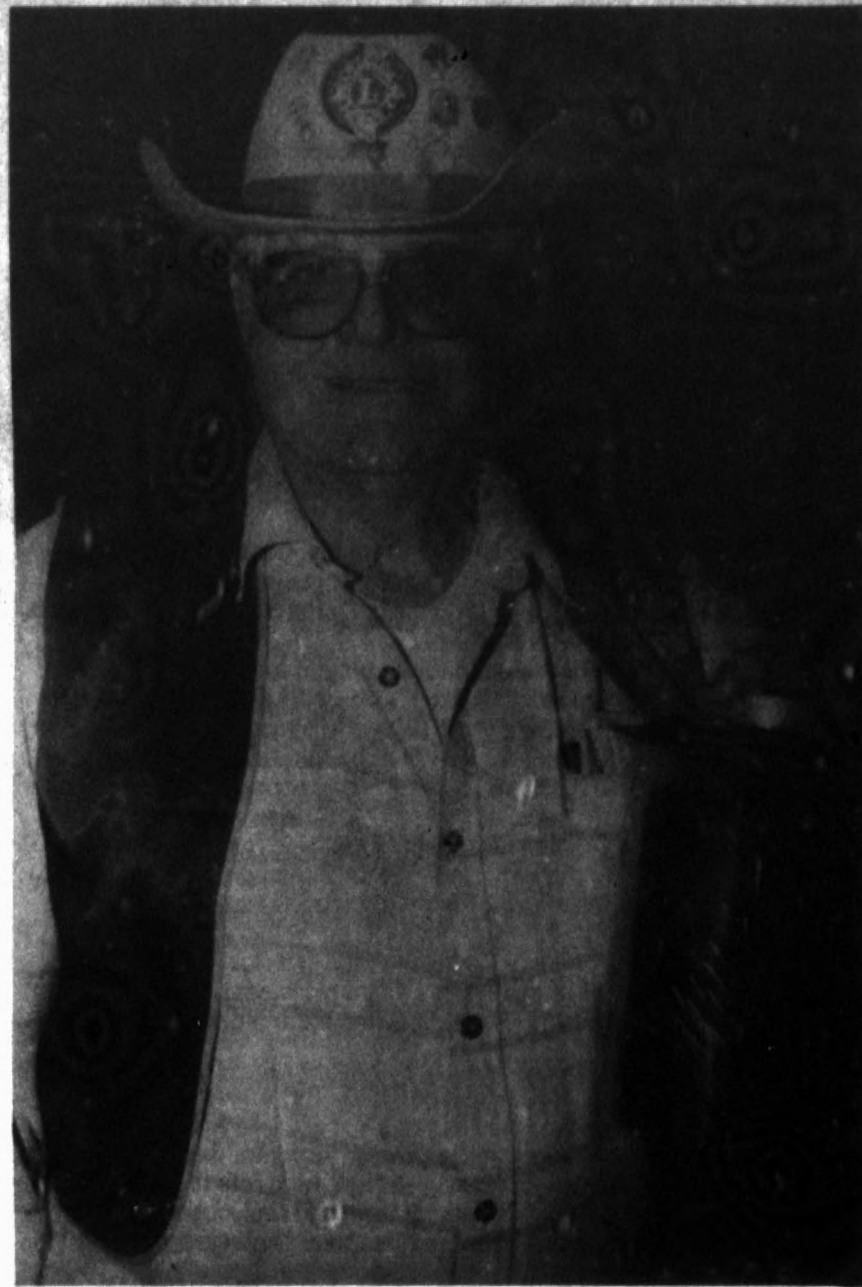

Sen. Kent Conrad, D-N.D., said he would support the plan that offered exceptions, but remained uncommitted on the stricter version.

Balanced budget amendments have surfaced before in Congress - most recently in 1992, when one failed in the House, and in 1986, when an earlier version couldn't get through the Senate. A 1982 version passed the Senate but failed in the House.

HTFCU holds 57th meeting

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

Members and directors of the Hereford Texas Federal Credit Union gathered for their 57th annual meeting on Thursday, where they re-elected three directors and heard a presentation on enthusiasm and making a difference.

Credit Union manager Robert L. Baker thanked the 150 people who attended the session for coming out despite several other local events, noting wryly that "I'm glad Nancy Kerrigan wasn't skating" to provide yet another distraction.

The business portions of the meeting were kept short, with reports from Baker, board president Joe Kerr and the Supervisory Committee printed in the annual report.

Attorney R.C. Hoelscher presided over the election, calling on nominating committee chairman Dick Montgomery to report on the men selected for possible election to the board.

Board vice president Ralph Smith of Dimmitt was elected by acclamation after no other names were added to the ballot to represent the branch office there.

Incumbent directors G.H. "Nick" Yosten and Wayne Amstutz were up for re-election, joined on the ballot by former Hereford Mayor Tom LeGate.

Following tallying of the ballots by Hoelscher and his assistants, Yosten and Amstutz were re-elected.

In other remarks, Kerr said the credit union had just over $30 million in assets in September 1991, but that had dropped to some $23 million at the end of 1993.

"The reason why is the National Credit Union Administration and some of the restrictions they put on us as has to do in the area of loan making," Kerr said.

In 1991, he said, 30 percent of the credit union's loans were in the commercial and agriculture areas. Today, that is less than 10 percent.

"Our loans we feel must increase in order to survive and go on up," he said.

Aside from business, the meeting was devoted to the drawing for door prizes and a presentation by Kenneth Chambers of Dawn, who is a Field Inspector for the Texas and Southwest Cattle Raisers Association and a special Texas Ranger.

Chambers, who interspersed his comments with humorous anecdotes and tall tales, told his audience that they need to have enthusiasm in order to make a difference in the world.

As an example of enthusiasm, he wove a tale of a veterinarian who

Brady law goes into effect Monday

WASHINGTON (AP) - Starting Monday, 34 states and territories must start implementing the Brady law's five-day waiting period and background check for handgun purchases.

Some jurisdictions where the wait and background check are supposed to be implemented could be surprised they're subject to that part of the law.

The National Rifle Association, meanwhile, is trying to block its implementation with federal lawsuits contending the law violates states' rights and is unconstitutionally vague, said Bob Corbin, a former Arizona attorney general and president of the NRA.

Corbin said he hopes to have the lawsuits filed in Arizona, Montana and possibly other states within a week.

"We're getting calls from all over the country, mostly from sheriffs who say it won't work and want to be plaintiffs," Corbin said Wednesday.

There are disputes about just where the new law applies.

In Washington, for example, the state has had its own five-day wait and background check on handgun buyers for years.

"The Brady bill really doesn't affect the people in the state of Washington," Don Faulkner, a co-owner of Timid Gun Shop in Seattle, said in an interview. "The only thing that might affect the people in the state of Washington is the fact that a theft from a gun shop now becomes a federal crime."

But the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms disagrees, and includes Washington on the list of states that must comply with the new regulations.

Seattle police Sgt. Verlin Judd said he was surprised by that, as his unit already checks for virtually all the categories of buyers that the Brady law prohibits from buying a handgun: people charged with or convicted of most felonies, fugitives, illegal aliens, drug addicts and adjudicated mental defectives.

The problem, said ATF spokesman Jack Killorin, is that Washington state's background check is conducted by the chief law enforcement official in the city or county where the gun is bought. The Brady law requires that the check be done by the chief law enforcement official in the area where the buyer lives.

That shouldn't make any difference, Judd contended.

"All felonies go into our Washington state crime information computer," so someone arrested for a felony in Tacoma, for example, would appear in the computer when Seattle police do their check, he said.

If federal authorities deem that unacceptable, he said, "we're probably going to challenge that."

Some of the nation's most populous states, including California, New York and Florida, won't be covered, because they already have Brady-approved alternatives such as required gun-buyer permits or background checks.

Handgun Control Inc., the Brady law's chief proponent during seven years of congressional battles before it was passed last November, developed a list last year of states it believed would be exempt. That list included Washington as well as Minnesota, North Carolina, Rhode Island and Tennessee.

TV forum for Senate candidates turns into on-air verbal warfare

DALLAS (AP) - Allegations abound as four Democrats jockey for a spot in the primary runoff to choose a candidate for U.S. senator.

Claims of bounced checks, negative campaigning and political opportunism turned a televised forum Thursday night into a verbal brawl.

The mudslinging got so thick during the hourlong program on Dallas station KERA-TV that Lyndon LaRouche associate Evelyn Lantz asked, "Whatever happened to Southern manners, gentlemen?"

She ended the hour by saying, "Anybody watching this program knows that I have had considerable less time than these guys going back and forth about nothing."

The guys were Jim Mattox, formerly a congressman and state attorney general; Richard Fisher, a Dallas businessman; and U.S. Rep. Mike Andrews of Houston.

Mattox called Fisher a "political opportunist," noting that he applied for a position in the Bush administration and then helped in the independent presidential campaign of Ross Perot.

Andrews joined in the attack on Fisher.

"You were one of his (Perot's) key advisers in a campaign, when Jim Mattox and other Democrats were fighting to elect Bill Clinton. And during that time, you gave thousands and thousands of dollars to Republican organizations and Republican candidates," Andrews said.

"You're a political pinball. Have you no political compass?" Andrews asked.

Fisher said the harshness of Andrews' and Mattox's attacks on him belie his rising stature in the polls. Fisher contends that he and Mattox are likely to reach an April 12 runoff.

Mattox, who is notorious for his combative campaign style, called for an end to negative campaigning, prompting Fisher to reply, "This is Tonya Harding giving me a lecture on sportsmanship."

Fisher attacked Andrews for writing 121 checks with insufficient funds at the U.S. House bank.

"Here's a congressman who can't even balance his own checkbook..." Fisher said at one point.

"I didn't bounce any checks. Everybody in Texas knows what a bounced check is. That's a crime. But everybody also understands overdraft protection," Andrews said, adding that he made good on all the checks.

He blamed the House bank for not notifying him of the bad checks, but Fisher said the explanation isn't plausible.

"I come back to the basic point: You wrote a check. There was no money in the bank," Fisher said.

"Well, that's what overdraft protection is," Andrews responded. "Enough, enough, enough."

Fisher told him, "You tell that to the average drill-press operator somewhere or some hard-working farmer - that's pretty hard to identify with."

Despite the sparring over Capitol

Hill issues, the key question in the race is which Democrat could unseat Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, one of six Republicans in the March 8 primary.

Mrs. Hutchison, 50, is seeking a full six-year term to the job she won June 5 in a landslide special election to replace Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen in the Senate.

The Democratic nominee faces the formidable task of overcoming Mrs. Hutchison's name identification.

She is the state's first woman senator and this month was acquitted in Fort Worth after the Travis County district attorney's office was unable to obtain an immediate ruling on the admissibility of evidence used to obtain indictments alleging ethics violations during her tenure as Texas treasurer.

Probation given in District Court

A defendant in 222nd District Court Thursday entered a plea of guilty to the charge against him. Probation was modified for another defendant.

Clemente Fortuna, 42, was given five years' probation and fined $1,000, on his plea of guilty to felony driving while intoxicated.

Terms of probation were modified in the case of Arthur Garcia, sentenced to seven years' probation in 1990 for burglary of a motor vehicle.

Directors re-elected

The Hereford Texas Federal Credit Union on Thursday held its annual meeting and election of three directors to three-year terms. Board vice president Ralph Smith of Dimmitt, left, was tabbed for another term representing that town, while G.H. "Nick" Yosten, center and Wayne Amstutz of Hereford were re-elected as well.

TAMU chairman is confident secretaries will be exonerated

By MICHAEL GRACZYK

Associated Press Writer

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP)

The chairman of the Texas A&M University System Board of Regents says he's confident two of his secretaries will be cleared of felony charges accusing them of tampering with school records.

Vickie Running and Sasha Walters were named in an indictment Thursday charging them with falsifying purchase vouchers and altering state records.

"The only thing these two young ladies are guilty of is trying to carry out their jobs at Texas A&M," Regents Chairman Ross Margraves said.

"They are both outstanding people. There are not two more dedicated hard-working employees. Everybody on the board loves them. Everybody supports them."

Mrs. Running, a 13-year A&M employee, was charged with eight counts of falsifying government documents by misrepresenting alcohol purchases as purchases of food and soft drinks.

Mrs. Walters, who has worked for A&M for four years, faces seven counts alleging the same conduct. In general, state law prohibits the use of public money for alcohol.

Neither woman was available for comment Thursday but school police director Bob Wiatt said both had agreed to meet with authorities today.

Margraves said he spoke with Mrs. Running Thursday and described her as "devastated." Mrs. Walters was said to be on planned vacation day.

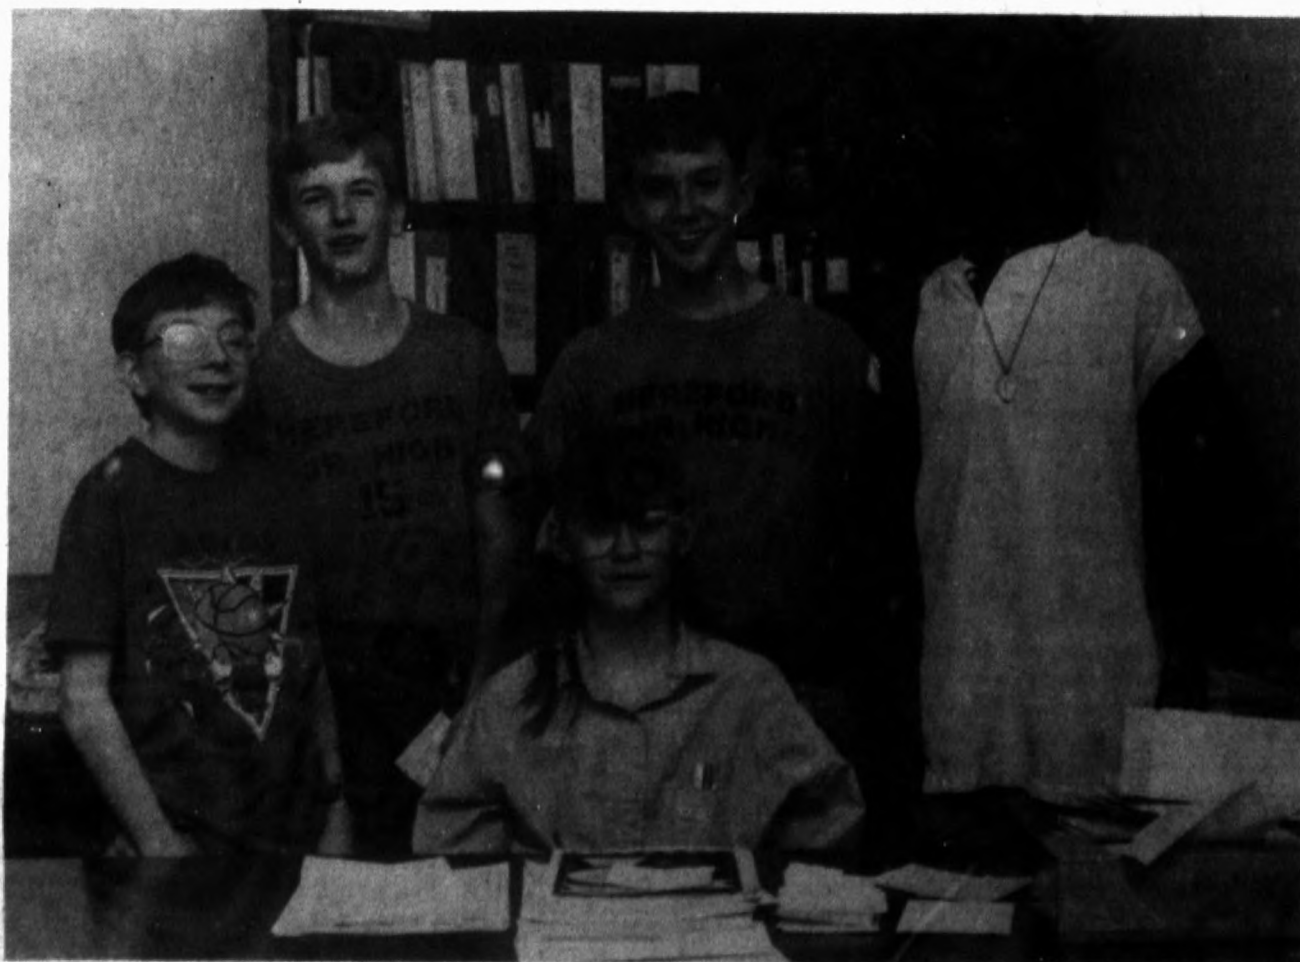

A separate indictment alleges both women presented altered state vouchers to a College Station newspaper reporter to hide the source of income used to purchase the alcohol.

Margraves said the women were following procedures adhered to for years at the A&M System and probably long before they and the current board members arrived.

"That does not make it right, but it's certainly not a conspiracy to evade the law," he said.

Asked if he knew the procedures could be illegal, he replied: "Absolutely not."

"All I can tell you and the public out there is there's never been any intent to do anything that was unlawful."

Massacre leaves 40 persons dead in Muslim mosque

HEBRON, Occupied West Bank (AP) - An American immigrant armed with an automatic rifle fired on hundreds of Muslim worshipers as they knelt in prayer at a mosque today, killing at least 40 Palestinians and wounding 100, reports said. The gunman then shot and killed himself, the army said.

The massacre, believed to be the bloodiest since Israel seized the occupied territories in the 1967 Mideast war, set off rioting across the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip in which seven Palestinians were killed and scores wounded, Arab hospital officials said.

PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat blamed the Israeli army for not protecting the worshipers and said the massacre would set back the Middle East peace process.

Effy Arditi, a police spokesman in the West Bank, identified the gunman as Dr. Baruch Goldstein, 38, a physician from the Kiryat Arba settlement who moved to Israel 11 years ago.

Settler leaders said Goldstein was from Brooklyn, N.Y., and was a major in Israel's army reserves. They said he was a supporter of the anti-Arab Kach movement founded by Rabbi Meir Kahane, who was assassinated in New York City in 1990.

The attack occurred in a mosque at the Tomb of the Patriarchs, a 2,000-year-old shrine where Abraham is said to be buried. It is sacred to both Muslims and Jews.

Jewish and Muslim worshipers had argued Thursday night over prayer rights at the site, said Ron Schechner, head of security for Jewish settlements near Hebron, a city 20 miles south of Jerusalem. Schechner said some Palestinians had chanted "Slaughter the Jews."

The attacker returned to the mosque early today, armed with a pistol and an M-16 rifle and his face covered with a white scarf. He opened fire on the back rows of worshipers as they knelt, heads to the floor, for dawn prayers, witnesses said.

"Suddenly I heard shots. I turned around and saw a man with a beard and black kippa (skullcap) who started shooting at people. I heard people screaming. I lay on the floor and then fainted," worshiper Ahmed Jabari, 50, said.

Israel radio said the gunman emptied the rifle and reloaded several times.

The army said the attacker got past guards because he was wearing an army reserve uniform. The army said the man then killed himself, but Palestinians said he was overwhelmed and killed by worshipers.

Reporters who arrived at the mosque after the attack saw blood on the stairs and hundreds of shoes lined up outside where they had been left by worshipers.

Arab hospitals reported 40 Palestinians killed and 80 wounded in the attack. Army sources put the death toll at 39, including those killed in rioting that spread from Hebron to other towns in the West Bank and Gaza.

An Associated Press reporter on the roof of Ahli Hospital saw soldiers, pelted by hundreds of stones, firing into a crowd of several hundred Palestinians gathered inside the hospital's walled compound.

The army deployed extra troops to the area and clamped a curfew on Hebron, a city of 50,000 20 miles south of Jerusalem. It also sealed off the occupied Gaza Strip and banned Palestinians under age 40 from entering Jerusalem.

Hurdlers lead boys' track team into '94 season

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

Last year's track team was led by several good sprinters and throwers. With those athletes graduated, the spotlight shifts to hurdlers.

The Herd opens the boys' track season Friday and Saturday at the (Frenship) Tiger Relays in Wolforth. The 13-team field in the 4A division includes most of the teams in the northern half of Region I, including five teams from District 1-4A (all but Caprock).

JV B team falls to Canyon frosh

Hereford's junior varsity B team dropped a 9-8 decision to Canyon's freshman team Thursday at Whiteface Field.

Canyon came up with four runs in the top of the fifth inning to take the 9-8 lead. Hereford failed to score in the near darkness of the bottom of the fifth, and the game was called after five innings.

Sonny Perez pitched all five innings for Hereford. Several errors were committed by fielders behind him.

Hereford took a 2-1 lead in the first inning, when Aaron Sorenson walked and scored on Perez' double. Perez scored on an error.

In the second, Chris Garth walked and eventually scored on Joe De La Cruz' sacrifice fly, tying the score at 3-3.

In the third, George Pacheco, Joseph Artho and Stephen Cloud all drew walks. Cy Olson, running for Pacheco, scored on a wild pitch, and the others scored on an error. In the fourth, Olson and Artho walked; Olson again scored on a wild pitch, and Artho came home on a groundout. Hereford led 8-5.

The Hereford varsity team starts its season Saturday. The Herd will host Estacado at 1 p.m. at Whiteface Field.

"We should be real successful with our hurdlers," coach Ron Young said. "Nathan Betzen was third in the (110-meter) high hurdles at the district meet. Several of our (300-meter) intermediate hurdlers are back."

Betzen is the only track athlete back who finished as high as third at the district meet. Mark Kuper, also back, finished sixth in the event.

Hayden Andrews is one of the intermediate hurdlers Young was referring to. He finished well at most meets, but stumbled over a hurdle at the district meet.

Hereford has had success recently with the sprint races and the sprint (400-meter) relay. Though graduation losses were heavy there, Hereford has a good start in rebuilding with Brandon Gearn and Marquise Brown.

Gearn was the only junior in the top four on the 400-relay, and at district he placed 5th in the 200-meter and 6th in the 100-meter dashes. Brown, a sophomore, filled in on the sprint relay last year.

"We've got those two returners," Young said of the relay. "I don't anticipate being as fast, but we'll be decent. We will be able to compete in district for first or second. By the time I get who I want on it, we'll be competitive."

"We might have to coach a little bit this year," Young joked.

The Herd will also be strong in the discus, with seniors Ben Celaya and Chris Williams and junior Scott Parker, Young said. Parker and Celaya were first and second, respectively, in the district junior varsity competition.

Young also expects success from 800-meter runners Jason Eades and Josh Pena, he said, and he expects Hereford's entries in the 1,600 and 3,200 to be better.

Hereford has a chance for success by individuals and by relays. For team success--the district championship--Young will need some quick maturing by young athletes. He has 17 freshmen and 21 sophomores in the program, but only 9 juniors and 11 seniors.

"The district team title is going to be hard because we are so young," he said. "We're going to compete for it, but we are young."

Up and over

Mark Kuper (left) and Nathan Betzen will lead a strong group of hurdlers for the boys' track team this season. Betzen was an alternate regional qualifier last year in the 110 high hurdles.

Sudan stings Channing

The Sudan Hornets used a balanced attack to get by Channing, 78-43, in a Class A bi-district game Thursday night in Whiteface Gym.

Sudan improves to 18-3 and moves on to face the winner between Booker and Miami, which play tonight in Pampa.

Channing ends its season at 18-12. Sudan led 20-11 after the first quarter and 34-24 at halftime. The game didn't become a blowout until midway through the third quarter, when the Hornet press finally got to Channing. Sudan held a 36-27 lead, but went on a 25-4 run to close the third quarter and open the fourth.

Sudan had nine different players score in the first 12 minutes, and the remaining two players got in the books before halftime. Four players scored in double figures: Jerald Weaver with 14, Tim Williams with 13, Jarrod Fisher with 12 and Jerimi Bourland with 11.

For Channing, Scotty Gates scored 16 points, and Hugo Davila had 14.

Hereford might host another playoff game on Tuesday. If Shallowater wins its bi-district game with Seagraves Saturday in Lubbock, Shallowater will meet the winner of the Panhandle-Highland Park game at 7 p.m. Tuesday in Whiteface Gym, boys' athletic director Danny Haney said.

Regents at Tech, Texas, A&M accept Big Eight's invitation

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - University of Texas and Texas Tech today both decided to join the Big Eight Conference, severing ties with the nearly 80-year-old Southwest Conference.

The boards of regents from both schools voted unanimously.

The schools' actions followed similar votes at Texas A&M and Baylor earlier this week.

Texas Chancellor William Cunningham said the decision was painful but necessary. It took the regents 12 minutes to cast their votes.

"The University of Texas has been concerned about the long-term viability about the Southwest Conference for some time," Cunningham said.

Cunningham and Texas President Robert Berdahl cited declining attendance at many SWC schools and a failure of some schools in the conference to strengthen women's athletic programs.

"If the Southwest Conference were healthy there would be no such talk," Berdahl said.

"But the reality is different," said Berdahl.

Texas Tech also resounded its enthusiasm to join the Big Eight.

"Both our men's and women's intercollegiate athletic programs should flourish under this new alignment," Texas Tech President Robert W. Lawless said from Lubbock after the regent vote.

"This is a great opportunity for Texas Tech. It ensures our athletic's future well into the next century," said Texas Tech Athletics Director Bob Bockrath.

Texas Tech joined the SWC in 1956. Texas A&M, Baylor and Texas were charter members of the conference, which organized in 1914. Texas was the largest school in the conference, with an enrollment of just over 49,000.

Baylor's decision to quit came Wednesday, just days after the Big Eight made its proposal wooing the four so-called "haves" of the SWC. Texas A&M made its move on Thursday. The Big Eight's offer excluded Houston, Rice, Southern Methodist and Texas Christian, who have been dubbed the league's "have nots."

A&M Athletic Director Wally Groff said he had mixed emotions about the vote, saying while it was good for his school he was "sad for the schools not invited."

The decision, however, was not difficult, he said.

"If you're not moving forward, you're moving backward," Groff said. "We needed to move forward. It was really a decision about what's best for our athletic program."

The Austin American-Statesman reported today that the conference has heard from about 15 schools interested in discussing possible mergers, including Tulane, Louisville, Memphis State, Tulsa and Cincinnati.

"We're trying to put a league together," SWC Conference Commissioner Steve Hatchell told the newspaper. He said he has talked to Sun Belt Commissioner Craig Thompson about involving their league, which includes Lamar, New Orleans, Louisiana Tech and Texas-Pan American.

Hatchell said there would definitely be a television deal for the remaining schools in the conference.

"The ingredients are there for that," he said. "It's just a case of finding the proper marriage. We can't be real choosy because your options aren't great. We're going to do it quickly, not overnight but hopefully within two weeks."

Norwegians celebrate more success in Olympics

By DAVE CARPENTER
Associated Press Writer
LILLEHAMMER, Norway (AP) — When The Day finally arrived at the Olympics today, Norwegians celebrated with two huge victory parties. But they had nothing to do with figure skating.

Cheered on by 23,000 screaming, jumping, flag-waving, cowbell-banging spectators on Hafjell mountain, three Norwegians swept the men's Alpine combined and rocketed the home team past Russia into the overall medals lead.

Pandemonium erupted again 90 minutes later at the Lysgardsbakkene ski jump arena when the home team won gold and silver on the 90-meter hill. Espen Bredesen, whose last-place finish in the event in 1992 prompted his countrymen to dub him "Espan the Eagle" after British ski-jump clown Eddie "the Eagle" Edwards, outdistanced everyone this time — soaring a hill-record 104 meters on his last jump.

Today, the Norwegians' banners proclaimed him "Espan the Best." Lasse Ottesen of Norway took the silver and Dieter Thoma of Germany the bronze. Jens Weissflog, winner on the 120-meter hill and a member of Germany's gold medal-winners in the team jump, was fourth.

The medals sweep by Lasse Kjus, triple medalist Kjetil Andre Aamodt and Harald Strand Nilsen was the first in an Olympics Alpine race since Austrian women achieved the feat in 1964. Tommy Moe of Palmer, Alaska, finished fifth, 27 seconds too slow for a bronze.

"This is far out!" Strand Nilsen exulted.

For Americans and much of the world, it was all an entertaining warmup act for Nancy Kerrigan and company. Some nine hours after the wild Alpine finish, the new figure-skating champion was to be crowned in Hamar with about 1 billion people looking on, live or on tape-delay.

But the competition that owes its buildup to a whack on the knee was clouded by a last-minute gash in the shin. A banged-up Oksana Baiul, second behind Kerrigan in the technical program, skipped half of her routine at practice today after a scary collision with another skater on Thursday.

Baiul's right shin was wrapped with a bandage today, and when the Ukrainian left the ice early she complained that her back hurt. She was set to skate tonight, but her coach, Galina Zmievskaya, reportedly was seen leaving the arena in tears.

If Baiul can't perform like the world champion she is, and if Kerrigan is less than perfect, high-leaping Surya Bonaly of France, in third place, could jump over both for the gold.

Any medal by Kerrigan would be a record-tying 12th for the Americans, who collected a gold from Cathy Turner and a bronze Thursday night in women's short-track speedskating. That competition resembled a Roller Derby rumble, with bodies flying and tempers flaring, and today IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch asked for a review.

The conclusion of the figure skating will still leave some suspense in Lillehammer — the medals race is wide open. After Russia won the women's biathlon relay to start the day today — a Winter Games record-tying 11th gold — Norway pocketed its ninth and 10th golds and flashed into the overall lead 25-22. Then came Germany 21 after a four-medal day, Italy 17 and the United States and Canada tied with 11.

The Germans boasted the favorite in another event, but she didn't win.

Gunda Niemann, Germany's answer to Dan Jansen, missed out on her last chance for gold today in the 5,000 meters after a fall and a flub left the super-speedskater with only a bronze in her first two races. Niemann took the silver behind countrywoman Claudia Pechstein;

Seiko Hashimoto of Japan got the bronze.

Hockey semifinal games pitted Canada against Finland and Russia vs. Sweden. The Germans (3-4) play the United States (1-3-3) Saturday but only for seventh place following losses by both Thursday night. The Americans need a victory merely to match their worst Olympic finish ever.

"The disappointment of not going to the semifinals after losing to Finland on Wednesday is indescribable," said U.S. coach Tim Taylor.

Baiul was shocked and in tears, blood dripping from an inch-long gash in her right shin, after a full-speed collision with fifth-place Tanja Szewczenko at practice in the Hamar Olympic Amphitheater. She needed three stitches.

Dr. Gunnar Hattevig said the cut wasn't serious. But the collision also gave the 16-year-old Ukrainian a sore lower back, and Baiul — like Szewczenko — never had a chance to practice her long program on the critical final day before the competition.

"It's not good," said Linda Leaver, coach of former Olympic gold medalist Brian Boitano. "This is the one day to work out all the kinks. It's a confidence-building day."

Hawks swap Wilkins for Manning

By CHRIS SHERIDAN
AP Sports Writer

In the biggest NBA trade of the season, the Atlanta Hawks sent Wilkins — their leading scorer and the backbone of the club for a decade — to the lowly Los Angeles Clippers for Manning — a player Atlanta hopes can lead it to the championship this season.

It was one of four trades made Thursday night prior to the NBA deadline. In the others:

- The Utah Jazz went for more of an all-around shooting guard, acquiring Jeff Hornacek from the Philadelphia 76ers along with swingman Sean Green for Jeff Malone and a No. 1 draft pick.

- The Milwaukee Bucks provided the Hornets with a starting center while Alonzo Mourning recuperates from a sprained ankle, sending Frank Brickowski to Charlotte for Mike Gminski and a No. 1 draft pick.

- The Los Angeles Lakers got backup center Dan Schayes from the Bucks for a conditional second-round draft choice. If Schayes doesn't make the Lakers opening-day roster for the 1994-95 season, Milwaukee gets nothing.

In the biggest non-trades:

- Derrick Coleman stayed with New Jersey and moved closer to reaching a contract agreement with Nets management.

- Minnesota pulled out of a deal that would have sent forward Ed Pinckney from the Celtics to the Timberwolves for center Mike Brown.

The Manning-for-Wilkins trade included Atlanta's No. 1 pick in 1994 or 1995, but only if the Hawks sign Manning to a contract. His current deal expires at the end of the season and he'll be an unrestricted free agent, able to sign with any team with Atlanta receiving no compensation.

It was that status and Manning's stated intention of leaving the Clippers that forced Los Angeles to trade him.

Wilkins, a 6-foot-8 forward, also will be an unrestricted free agent at the end of the season.

"Certainly, anytime you have the opportunity to get a player the caliber of Danny Manning, you have to give up something good," Hawks coach Lenny Wilkins said.

In Wilkins, the Clippers get the NBA's ninth all-time leading scorer and an eight-time All-Star. After averaging 29.9 points in 1992-93, his average fell to 24.4 points in 49 games this season.

In Manning, the Hawks get one of the league's most talented young players who is in the middle of his best season yet. Manning is averaging 23.7 points, 7.0 rebounds and 4.2 assists in 38 minutes a game. He has career averages of 18.5 points, 6.4 rebounds and 2.9 assists.

Kerrigan's right knee, Baiul's right shin, Tonya Harding's right to skate — the rare collision on the eve of competition caps a two-month buildup in which the focus has been on anything but skating.

For once, however, the main spotlight won't be on Harding tonight. Even if she hits several perfect triple axels, she won't be able to move up from 10th place as high as her fourth-place finish at the 1992 Olympics.

"She's going to try to do the best she can and see if she can't remind people of the great skater she actually is," said Dennis Rawlinson, Harding's attorney and coach's husband.

Cathy Turner practically had to hire a lawyer to fend off the protests after she successfully defended her Olympic title in the 500-meter short-track race. Amy Peterson of Maplewood, Minn., was an uncontroversial third.

First, world champion Nathalie

Lambert of Canada called Turner "brutal" and blamed her for a fall that eliminated her in a quarterfinal heat.

Then silver medalist Zhang Yanmei of China contended that the American was a dirty skater who had grabbed her leg and knocked her off balance when she passed her en route to the victory.

Zhang stalked off the medals podium she had to share with Turner, angrily tossing a bouquet of flowers across the rink. The officials rejected her appeal.

That ruling was enough for Turner, a former Ice Capades skater from Hilton, N.Y., whose fiery personality has alienated some of her own teammates.

"I don't know what's going on, I just know that everybody's mad at me," the 31-year-old said. "I felt confident and I expected if I didn't get off the line first, it would maybe get a little hairy. But that goes with the sport."

Turner now has four Olympic medals — a gold and a relay bronze here, and a gold and a relay silver from 1992.

Rockets stifle Knicks

HOUSTON (AP) - The team tied for the best record in the East met the team with the best record in the West. It wasn't even close.

Hakeem Olajuwon had 29 points and 20 rebounds and made four straight baskets in a breakaway fourth quarter Thursday night, leading the Rockets to a 93-73 victory over the cold-shooting New York Knicks.

In other games, Phoenix beat Minnesota 120-101, Dallas beat Charlotte 115-110 and Sacramento beat the Los Angeles Lakers 102-90.

"A lot of people are pushing the people for MVP," Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich said. "I prefer to let the performance speak for itself. Hakeem... what else does a guy have to do? It's good to have the whole country see what this guy can do."

Olajuwon sliced through the defense of Knicks center Patrick Ewing to fuel the Rockets' second victory over the Knicks this season. Houston's 94-85 victory on Dec. 3 tied the NBA record of 15 straight victories to start the season.

They continued their mastery of the Knicks on Thursday. New York shot 38 percent from the field and had only 29 points in the second half. Their 73 points for the game was the fewest ever for the Knicks against the Rockets.

"It was a great defensive effort," Tomjanovich said. "We're getting back to the type of basketball that we were playing earlier in the year. To out-rebound this team was definitely a big factor."

"With them starting a road trip, we wanted them to prove themselves from the outside."

The Knicks didn't, leaving coach Pat Riley puzzled.

"Any of you guys have suggestions?" Riley asked the media following the game. "We're getting it handed to us on a regular basis. I'm putting out this to the team: 'If you don't play hard, we're going to have to move somebody out.'"

The Knicks shot 29 percent from the field in a loss to Seattle on Tuesday.

Charles Smith had 14 for the Knicks, while Ewing had 12 points and 11 rebounds.

The Knicks scored 13 points in the third quarter and 16 in the fourth period. The Rockets put the game away with a 13-0 run in the fourth quarter, holding the Knicks scoreless for nearly 5 1/2 minutes.

Suns 120, Timberwolves 101

At Minneapolis, Phoenix remained unbeaten in 19 games against Minnesota, defeating the Timberwolves behind 26 points from Cedric Ceballos.

Phoenix, which has won five of six overall, built a 65-57 halftime lead as Ceballos scored 13 points in the second quarter. The Timberwolves, who lost their fifth straight, never drew within 16 points during the second half.

Mavericks 115, Hornets 110

At Charlotte, N.C., rookie Jamal Mashburn tied his career-high with 37 points as Charlotte lost for the 12th time in 13 games.

The Mavericks entered the game as the NBA's worst-shooting team at 42.2 percent, but made 47 of 74 shots (64 percent).

Kings 102, Lakers 90

At Sacramento, Calif., Mitch Richmond had seven points in a 10-0 fourth-quarter run that helped Sacramento to its sixth victory in eight games.

The game was tied 77-77 before the Kings scored 10 consecutive points early in the fourth. Richmond scored 13 points in the quarter and finished with 22.

Lionel Simmons added 29 points. Sedale Threatt led the Lakers with 28 points.

Banked trey lifts UMass

By CHRISTINE HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

This time, Mike Williams would get the attention he deserved.

He should have been the focus after his game-winning shot lifted No. 8 Massachusetts to a 56-55 win over Temple on Feb. 13. But Owl coach John Chaney stole the show with his post-game threat against his counterpart, John Calipari.

Not this time.

The junior guard reclaimed the spotlight in a rematch between the two Atlantic 10 rivals Thursday night. He banked in a 25-foot 3-pointer with eight seconds to play to give the Minutemen a 51-50 win and its third straight conference title.

"I was sitting around this afternoon hoping it wouldn't come down to a last shot. I was hoping we'd be up 10," said Williams, who finished with 15 points on 5-for-9 shooting from 3-point range. "They gave me a chance to get the shot off and I took advantage of it."

In Nashville, Tenn., John Pierce

of Lipscomb became college basketball's all-time leading scorer with 33 points in his regular-season finale, a 119-102 win over Cumberland.

Pierce's 4,110 total career points broke former roommate Phil Hutcheson's record of 4,106.

In other games, No. 9 Arizona beat Oregon State 96-69; No. 12 Indiana beat Northwestern 81-74; No. 17 California beat No. 15 UCLA 92-88; and Long Beach State edged 25th-ranked New Mexico State 84-83.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

A MAN CALLED "BELOVED"

ONE OF THE MEANINGS OF THE NAME DAVID IS "BELOVED." THE SON OF JESSE WAS THE SECOND KING OF ISRAEL. HE WAS THE YOUNGEST OF EIGHT BROTHERS (1 SAMUEL 16:10-11; 17:12-14). MANY OF THE GOOD TRAITS IN DAVID'S CHARACTER WERE, NO DOUBT, INFLUENCED BY HIS MOTHER, WHO WAS KNOWN FOR HER GODLINESS. SOME OF THE PSALMS THAT DAVID WROTE WERE IN REMEMBRANCE OF HIS MOTHER'S DEVOUTNESS. (PSALMS 86:16; 116:16) DAVID'S ANCESTRAL HISTORY WAS PICTURESQUE AND INSPIRING ALTHOUGH, AT TIMES TAINTED BY SINFUL ACTS. (GEN. 37:26-27, 38) IN PERSON, DAVID WAS RUDDY AND BEAUTIFUL TO LOOK UPON AND AS THE YOUNGEST SON, HE WAS CHARGED WITH THE DUTY AND CARE OF HIS FATHER'S SHEEP. HIS DISPLAY OF COURAGE IN THIS OCCUPATION, BY SLAYING BOTH A LION AND A BEAR WHICH ATTACKED THE FLOCKS, POINTED UP HIS GREAT BRAVERY. HE WAS ALSO POSSESSED OF MUSICAL GIFTS OF THE HIGHEST ORDER AND HE PLAYED SKILLFULLY ON THE LYRE AND WAS VERY ADEPT AT COMPOSING PSALMS. THESE NATURAL GIFTS WOULD CERTAINLY STAND HIM IN GOOD STEAD WHEN DESTINY BROUGHT HIM TO THE THRONE OF ISRAEL!

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You and your readers have gone nuts over how Floyd Hardiman saved Roger Daub, but you should remember that happened 34 years ago and to people of a different generation.

If Floyd is 74 now, he was 40 in 1960 and 20 in 1940. This means he probably went to war for three or four years, like so many of his contemporaries. It also means he was 10 years old in 1930, so he probably was hungry and scared, like most kids were during the Depression.

A history like that builds character. Nothing has happened to today's 40- and 45-year-olds but the 1960s and Vietnam, neither of which taught young people anything but how to have fun, get high and shirk responsibility.

Where we are today as a society is the result of that period in our history. I'm 51, and my generation was born too late to be the best we could be as people. —Wish I were My Dad

DEAR WISH YOU WERE YOUR DAD: Your letter really hit a hot button with me. Who in the world do you think you are speaking for?

Surely you do not speak for the Vietnam vets who risked their lives for their country, were exposed to Agent Orange and experienced years of a living hell. Nor do you speak for those young men, some barely out of their teens, who were taught how to kill children and bomb civilians.

What could be worse than being sent 7,000 miles from home to endanger life and limb for a cause that most people did not believe in? And when those Vietnam vets came home, they were scored as if it were their fault they were sent to fight a war that was none of our business in the first place.

And who, pray tell, are those "40-year-olds" you say learned nothing but how to "have fun, get high and shirk responsibility"? The baby boomers I see are leaders in the arts and sciences, business, medicine, law and government. (Our president is 47).

If you are not the best you can be, don't blame it on the times. I know many young men and women your age who are fabulous.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm writing in response to "Minneapolis," the sexually experienced fellow who is searching for a virgin to marry. I can't believe this guy is serious. If I thought you would print it, I would give him a real earful.

Two years ago, I dated someone who could have been a brother to that nut. I was the virgin, and he was the sexually experienced stud looking for a totally virtuous woman.

What kind of man is it who believes it's perfectly OK to hit the mattress with every available female and then expect his future wife to be 100 percent pure? Do these guys think virgins are just waiting around for some experienced male to teach them about life?

I would rather have a man who knew absolutely nothing about sex than marry an alley cat. After all, most people don't need lessons. They do what comes naturally.

Please tell "Minneapolis" that a man who has fooled around as much as he has doesn't deserve and shouldn't expect a pristine-pure bride. —Heard It All Before in Idaho

DEAR IDAHO: So have I, and it's tiresome. Thanks for letting him have it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You printed a letter from a reader whose sister, even though she had no memory of it, accused their father of childhood sexual abuse. Please tell your reader she is not alone.

Six years ago, my sister, "Melinda," filed for divorce and started to see a therapist. After several months, she told us how abusive her ex-husband had been. We were shocked and felt guilty that we had never picked up on it. Six months later, Melinda began to tell us how her husband had involved their daughters in perverted sex. Again, we were dumbfounded and tried to be supportive.

Melinda explained that through hypnotic therapy, her counselor had dredged all this up, as well as memories of sexual abuse by our father. When I told her I didn't recall our childhood as she described it, she said I was suppressing memories.

She then wrote a letter to aunts, uncles and cousins, describing how our father had abused all his daughters. When my older sister and I protested, Melinda said her counselor had also helped her retrieve "forgotten memories" of my father sexually abusing my mother. My mother and father both denied this vehemently.

There is no evidence to support any of my sister's claims. She is much sicker today than when she began therapy. I know there are many people who were actually abused, Ann, but this seems to be a catch-all day for any problem today. Warn your readers. —Elizabethown, Pa.

DEAR ELIZABETHTOWN: I have dealt with this subject extensively and wish to thank all who wrote to share their experiences. Too bad all the competent, caring therapists are being tainted by the frauds.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You recently published a letter from a woman who had temporarily resided in Switzerland and enjoyed the warm welcome she and her pets received. I believe there are no bad dogs, just bad owners.

My husband and I run a small motel in Treasure Island, Fla. We welcome people traveling with pets. A sign in our office reads:

Dogs are welcome in this motel. We never had a dog that smoked in bed and set fire to the blankets. We never had a dog that stole our towels and played the TV too loud or had a noisy fight with his traveling companion. We never had a dog that got drunk and broke up the furniture. So, if your dog can vouch for you, you are welcome here.

Our policy on children states "Obedience-Trained Children Only, Please." We have three dogs of our own and are treated as though we have a loathsome disease whenever we try checking into a hotel. During the three years that our motel has been operating, we have yet to have any problems caused by pets. We urge all innkeepers to relax their policies. —Resort Owners in Florida

DEAR RESORT OWNERS: Thanks for the testimony. Badly behaved pets, like badly behaved children, reflect their training—or lack of it.

CCA performance set at HHS Tuesday night

The Americus Brass Band will present "Honor and Glory: Memories of the Civil War" during a special performance for members of the Hereford Community Concert Association. The event will begin at 8 p.m. Tuesday, March 1, in the Hereford High School auditorium.

The show is based on historical fact and the events portrayed actually happened, the letters read are all original, and the characters you will meet were real people.

The group will transport you back to that earlier time when, even as neighbor fought neighbor, music was helping to heal the wounds and reforge a new nation, reunited North and South.

The Americus Brass Band is regarded as America's premier Civil War reenactment band. The two-act show is an historically accurate portrayal of the 4th Georgia Infantry Regiment band, one of only two to confederate bands to remain intact throughout the entire war.

Playing authentic instruments, the 14 musicians and three singer/dancer/narrators not only play the marches, quick steps and drills that accompanied the troops during conflict, but also fill the theater with the sounds of the concerts and balls that helped create a whole new national musical identity.

Founded in 1976 by a group of music students at California State University at Long Beach, the Americus Brass Band has been featured in the soundtracks of the Oscar-winning movie "Glory," the ABC mini-series, "The North and South," the CBS movie, "Once Upon A Texas Train," and the NBC mini-series, "Son of the Morning Star."

Stop the spread of germs

This winter—already called the worst cold and flu season in years—one of your best health strategies is to stop germs where they spread—on your hands.

We don't get colds or the flu from winter chills, wet hair or sitting in drafts, experts say. We do get them by picking up germs from other people's hands or the surfaces they've touched and then rubbing our eyes or nose.

To rid your hands of many disease-carrying germs, you need what clinicians call a strong antimicrobial agent. Alcohol is the fastest-acting anti-microbial ever—immediately reducing the overall germ count over 99.9 percent.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)—Tom Cruise traded his pinstripes and dress whites for a bra and hot pink pumps as he accepted the man of the year award from Harvard's Hasty Pudding club.

Cruise, who played Harvard-schooled lawyers in "The Firm" and "A Few Good Men," put on the pumps Tuesday night after his hosts joked about the 5-foot-9 actor's reputation for not wanting to share a stage with anyone taller.

Men in drag then ran up, kissed him and gave him a bra with a bright red satin Harvard insignia on each cup. Cruise put it on over his tuxedo.

SOCORRO, N.M. (AP)—Ted Turner's in exalted company.

He bought some land Monday that's been owned by the King of Spain and by an earlier media baron, William Randolph Hearst.

The 500-square-mile Armendaris Ranch cost a pretty penny, too. More than $10.5 million, according to lawyer James Loughren, who handled the sale.

The Spanish monarch granted the land—including an entire mountain range—to Pedro Armendaris early in the last century. It's been a working ranch ever since.

No immediate word on Turner's plans for the spread, which adjoins his Ladder Ranch in southern New Mexico.
