State prison contender list narrows

From Local, Wire Reports

The list of eight finalist sites for state prison facilities involving donated land--a list which includes Scurry County--has been narrowed to seven as of Monday.

A spokesman for the Texas Department of Corrections indicated Johnson County, one of the finalist announced Oct. 21 by TDC, has withdrawn its bid for a facility.

"They called this morning and said they wanted to withdraw their proposal," said Texas Department of Corrections spokesman Charles Brown on Monday. "They weren't bound to the proposal."

In a related story, State Senator Ray Farabee, who has assisted Scurry County in its effort to ultimately be chosen, said at an appearance in Rotan that he believes there is a "strong feeling" among the TDC board for a West Texas site.

Scurry County's bid is one of three from cities and counties considered to be West Texas. The others include bids from the cities of Amarillo and Childress.

Final selection of up to two 2,250-man maximum security prisons and four 1,000-bed units is expected to be made Monday at the November meeting of the TDC board in Austin.

Regarding the Johnson County bid, Sam Mann, who helped lead the effort against bringing a prison to Johnson County, said the county commissioners court voted to withdraw the proposal Monday because of community sentiment against it.

Johnson County is located just south of Fort Worth.

"Basically, we didn't feel like it was something we'd like to have here. ... We felt like it would be kind of a strike against us if we tried to get other businesses to come here," said Mann, who owns an agricultural products store on the outskirts of Cleburne.

Mann, who was in a group that met with the commissioners court, said residents also feared the possibility of an escape by a prisoner.

A call by The Associated Press to the Johnson County Courthouse in Cleburne was referred to County Judge Wayne Bridewell. A spokeswoman for Bridewell said he was in a commissioners court meeting and unavailable for immediate comment.

Johnson County was one of eight communities whose proposals made a short list of 10 possible prison sites, out of 33 communities competing for one or more new correctional units.

Prison officials also have said all state-owned land would be considered for the new prisons, including sites in Dallas and Houston.

Cities that made the short list were Amarillo, Childress and Gatesville. Also remaining on the list are Falls, Liberty, and Tyler counties.

37th St. widening ranked 1

City will seek state funding

City council members agreed Monday to seek state grant monies to finance a prioritized list of street projects here, shifting the ranking slightly of four projects city staffers said the city needs most.

The top ranked project by both council members and city staffers is the widening of 37th St. from Austin Place to College Ave., an area which Councilman Paul Zeck called "the worst bottleneck in the city."

The indication from the staff was that the project likely stands a good chance of being funded some time during the next five years at an estimated cost of $390,000.

The grant program, to be distributed over this time period, is being offered through the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation. Some $4 million is to be spread among the 13 counties served by the Polls are open until 7 tonight

Scurry County voters have until 7 p.m. Tuesday to cast ballots at four polling places for the Texas constitutional amendment election.

Individuals will vote based upon which commissioner's precinct they reside in.

Polling locations include:

—Precinct 1: the north side of the coliseum under the supervision of Mrs. Wade Davis, election judge.

—Precinct 2: the Scurry County Library, where the election judge will be Jerry House.

—Precinct 3: Towle Park Barn, supervised by election judge Clarence Payne.

—Precinct 4: The south side of the coliseum with Ima Emerson, election judge.

Texas voters will decide two special issues--the controversial pari-mutuel betting question and whether to retain an appointed state school board--and 25 amendment proposals.

To decide amendments...

Voters trek to polls

AUSTIN (AP) — Polls opened at 7 a.m. today as Texas voters began deciding the fate of more than two dozen proposals related to a range of topics from race track gambling to nuclear physics.

Heading the list is a statewide referendum on whether to legalize pari-mutuel wagering on horse and dog races. Race track gambling has been outlawed in the state for 50 years.

Also being decided is a proposal to issue $500 million in state bonds to help lure the "super collider," a $4.4 billion federal atom-smasher research project.

Voters will say whether the State Board of Education should remain a body appointed by the governor, or revert to an elected panel as it was before the sweeping House Bill 72 school reforms of 1984.

A total of 25 proposed amendments to the Texas Constitution and two statewide referendums will be on the lengthy ballot. Several hot local issues also are on ballots in some spots.

With no candidates for statewide office on the ballot, Secretary of State Jack Rains has predicted that about 14 percent of the state's 7.3 million registered voters will go to the polls.

"We've continued to monitor the counties, and we're sticking with our 14 percent voter turnout projection," Rains said Monday.

"Any last-minute media blitz (by various campaigns) should help increase turnout, and we're seeing some of that. I hope the turnout exceeds 14 percent. But realistically, I don't think we'll see much more than that."

To manage Cogdell on agenda

The Cogdell Memorial Hospital board of managers will meet at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday to consider the future management of the hospital.

Board chairman Leon Autry said Monday that a final decison on the matter is at least possible.

The board will meet with the hospital's medical staff prior to the meeting and then will consider various options, including management consultant proposals from two Lubbock hospitals, St. Mary of the Plains and Methodist.

Two management companies have also made presentations to the board this fall, Hospital Management Professionals Inc. and Hospital Corporation of America.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Some politicians divide their time between running for office and running for cover."

The arrival of hunting season reminded Ira's Pete Hester about an incident that occurred five or six years ago.

For several years, Hester has shared a hunting lease with his long-time friend, Max von Roeder. Everybody knows that von Roeder is close with his money, but Hester has proof.

Back in about 1981, von Roeder and his wife, Anne, were headed down country to meet Hester. Near Colorado City, von Roeder's trailer had a flat.

While the tire was being repaired, Max suggested that they save time by grabbing a quick bite to eat. After the unexpected delay, the delegation made it all the way to Ballinger before having a blowout.

Max bought a new tire, had it mounted and started to pay the attendant. The station didn't take out of town checks, so von Roeder opened his wallet in search of a $100 bill that he had gotten from the bank earlier in the morning.

The big bill was gone. Those who know von Roeder are surprised that an EMS crew was not required to revive him. Many would have figured such a loss would have caused von Roeder the big attack.

Stress did set in. All the way to the hunting lease, von Roeder tried to remember where the $100 bill might be. It was then he remembered leaving what he thought was two $1 bills on the restaurant table in Colorado City.

Arriving at the lease, von Roeder couldn't get the ordeal off his mind. He confided in Hester who suggested that Max might call back to the restaurant in Colorado City.

The manager remembered the party, but told von Roeder that the waitress had left on vacation to California. All the worst ran through Max's mind--mainly that the young lady was enjoying sunny California on his hundred dollar bill.

Hester said it ruined the hunting trip. Max fretted so that he sent Anne home early to take care of business.

It was then that Anne opened the bank bag and found the crisp bill that Max had forgotten to take. Said Hester, "When he found out the bill wasn't lost, he was a new person."

Kidnap allegation true-billed

A Scurry County grand jury Monday issued indictments against 10 persons, including three men who were true-billed for aggravated kidnapping in the abduction of a Snyder man last week.

The kidnapping indictments were returned against Larry Dan Beard, 32, of Rt. 2, Box 95; Grady Allen Davis, 25, of 505 32nd St.; and John Randal Locknane, 32, of 2400 42nd St.

They are accused of abducting Lafayette T. Griffin of 3009 Ave. K from his home at gunpoint on Oct. 27.

Griffin told police he was held because of a debt owed to the three by a relative of his. He was taken to an east Snyder nightclub, where another of Grif-

High court rules for Pennzoil

AUSTIN (AP) — Texaco Inc. blasted the Texas Supreme Court's decision to uphold a judgment ordering the energy giant to pay Pennzoil Co. $11.1 billion and says it will appeal to the nation's highest court.

The Texas Supreme Court, without writing an opinion, said Monday there was no reversible error in the case by Texas' 1st Court of Appeals in Houston, which earlier this year upheld the 1985 jury decision.

Texaco was ordered to pay the money for interfering four years ago in Pennzoil's planned merger with Getty Oil Co.

Reaction from Texaco on the ruling was quick and critical.

"This refusal to hear our appeal defies both logic and law," said James W. Kinnear, Texaco's president and chief executive officer. "We will promptly ask the U.S. Supreme Court to review this case.

"The Texas Supreme Court's failure to review this case also raises serious questions about the Texas legal system's ability to meet the constitutional requirement of giving full faith and credit in judicial proceedings to the laws of other states, a basic underpinning of our nation's legal and economic systems," Kinnear said.

"We look forward to the day when the U.S. Supreme Court will rectify the distortions of justice that have figured so prominently in this case."

But Joseph Jamail, Pennzoil's lead attorney in the case against Texaco, said the court did review the case even though it did not hear oral arguments on it.

"That's some more misinformation put out by Texaco and that is a lie," he said in response to Kinnear's statement that the court did not review the case.

"That's their motif," Jamail said of Kinnear's criticisms. "They literally stole Getty away from Pennzoil and now, to cover up their blunder, they want to abuse our entire judicial system. They ought to be ashamed."

To appeal the November 1985 verdict — the largest civil judgment in U.S. history — Texas law required that Texaco had to post an appeal bond roughly equal to the amount of the judgment. Instead, Texaco filed in April for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code to void that state requirement.

Texaco could ask the Texas Supreme Court to reconsider its decision, but Kinnear said Monday the company will appeal directly to the U.S. Supreme Court. Anita Larsen, a Texaco spokeswoman in White Plains, N.Y., said she is not sure when such an appeal will be filed.

Texas Supreme Court decisions usually are made on Mondays, but almost without exception not released until Wednesdays.

Chief Justice John Hill said the Texaco-Pennzoil decision was announced Monday because, "We were concerned that rumors sometimes float about cases' possible outcome, and we felt it would be fair to everybody to go ahead" and release the decision.

Not surprisingly, the court's ruling pleased Pennzoil officials.

"This decision, we think, is amply supported by the record in the case and by the applicable laws," Pennzoil spokesman Bob Harper said.

Harper also said Pennzoil remains willing to negotiate an out-of-court settlement.

"We think it is unfortunate that Texaco's management has persisted in its all-or-nothing strategy in this case and has not made a serious effort to satisfy this judgment by settlement at a level which Texaco could easily accommodate and which Pennzoil could justify to its shareholders."

Demos agree on most social issues

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Democratic presidential candidates generally agreed on how to help the poor, but they jabbed one another for putting too much faith in tax compliance and too little on tough budget decisions.

For 90 minutes Monday night at Tulane University, the Democrats generally reaffirmed their belief in a strong government role to help people escape poverty.

"Yes, I believe in using the tools of government to move on our problems," said Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois. "Those who say we can't do it are just wrong."

The strongest dissent from that view came from former Gov. Bruce Babbitt of Arizona, who challenged his rivals to say, "How are we going to persuade the American people that we can pay for these programs."

Even their disagreements were kept within bounds as Simon and Babbitt joined Gov. Michael Dukakis of Masachusetts, Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee, Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri and Jesse Jackson to debate social policy.

When Dukakis said a 5 percent increase in tax compliance would bring the federal government an additional $35 billion in revenue, Gephardt snapped back that it was "hokum."

That was the sharpest exchange of the night.

The candidates found far more to agree about, including the need for a higher federal minimum wage, better health insurance coverage and the ravages visited upon the poor by President Reagan's economic policies.

They endorsed increasing the federal minimum wage to at least $4.25 an hour. Jackson, while agreeing with his five rivals for the nomination that a boost from the current $3.35 federal minimum wage was needed, added that it would not help the poorest people who have no jobs.

Simon said he feared there have been so many Democratic debates that people were losing interest.

The debate was broadcast live to some parts of the country on public broadcasting stations.

When television commentator Hodding Carter asked the candidates where they would cut the budget, Gephardt, Simon and Dukakis said they thought the domestic side already had taken an unfair share of the cuts during Reagan's time in office.

20 year term assessed for policeman's slaying

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A defense lawyer says the presence of more than 250 armed, uniformed police officers in and around a courtroom will be grounds for a new trial for his client.

Lawyer Alan Brown made the statement Monday after a jury set 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine as punishment for Gustavo Pimentel for his voluntary manslaughter conviction in the Christmas Eve 1983 slaying of a San Antonio officer.

Pimentel, 46, had been accused of shooting to death officer Gilbert Ramirez during a family disturbance.

The outcome of the trial left both sides unhappy. Prosecutors had wanted a murder conviction and defense lawyers had sought probation for Pimentel, who testified he did not know he was shooting at the officer.

Brown angrily described the estimated 250 officers from the San Antonio area as "an armed mob," a remark that prompted District Judge James Barlow to threaten Brown with a contempt of court charge.

"This mob in this courtroom isn't any better than the mobs that hung blacks and Mexican-Americans," Brown said.

The judge then removed jurors from the courtroom and warned Brown that his remarks were out of order.

"I'm going to throw your butt in jail," the judge told Brown after the lawyer used the term "mob" at least four times.

Brown said it was an attempt to "intimidate" jurors into handing down a harsh sentence.

"This demonstration was formed and organized," Brown said after the sentence was assessed. "It's going to cause that (a trial) to happen again."

It was Brown's second trial on the charge.

In June 1984, Pimentel was found guilty of murdering Ramirez and sentenced to 80 years in prison. The jury that convicted him of murder rejected a capital murder charge, which carries a death penalty.

The conviction was overturned by the 4th Court of Appeals, which found prosecutors erred when they introduced new evidence in the punishment phase of the trial and a new trial was ordered. He had been free on bond the past 14 months.

The nine-woman, three-man jury Friday found Pimentel guilty of a lesser charge of voluntary manslaughter after deliberating four hours.

The widow of the slain policeman charged Monday's decision amounted to "a slap on the wrist."

Dear Abby

Old Fears Shadow Woman's Romance With Younger Man

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1987 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a 43-year-old woman, divorced, no children, have an excellent job and am secure in my position. Fourteen months ago, a bright young man, age 31, came to work here in another department. The last thing I had in mind was a serious romantic relationship with this kid, but you guessed it. It happened. I fell in love with him. He didn't pursue me; I invited him out first. We discovered we had so much in common we couldn't wait to see each other again.

We're still "in the closet" about our relationship, but we can't keep it under wraps much longer. He had a steady girlfriend when he came here, but she's no longer in the picture. I stopped seeing an established 50-year-old stockbroker when I realized I was in love with this guy.

I'm embarrassed — almost ashamed — and terribly concerned about what people will think about "us." He's more in charge and mature about this than I am. He's the best thing that ever happened to me, and I've known plenty of men.

Am I crazy? Can this work? We're thinking of marriage. Meanwhile we are sneaking around like a couple of thieves. Help me!

SWEET 16 AGAIN

DEAR 16: Quit sneaking around and don't worry about what "people" will think. Can it work? Yes, if you both want it to. Please read the new book "Loving a Younger Man" by Victoria Houston (Contemporary Books). It's written by a woman who once walked in your shoes. She resolutely reaffirms my advice: "Forget the numbers, and follow your heart." You'll be glad you did. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: I just read your column in the Pacific Stars and Stripes, and can't believe that you said a colonel has a "chicken" on his shoulder. Abby, how ignorant of you! A colonel has an EAGLE on his shoulder, not a chicken. You have your birds mixed up. Please correct that insulting error.

IN THE MILITARY

DEAR IN: My husband was also "in the military" (World War II), and back at Camp Robinson in Little Rock, Ark., we called his full colonel a "chicken colonel" — as opposed to his lieutenant colonel, who had a silver maple leaf on his shoulder. So, please remove the chip from yours.

DEAR ABBY: There is a lady in town who has been a widow for over 30 years. She belongs to several clubs and societies that I belong to. When a prize is given out for newest married member or the woman who has been married the longest, this lady comes forward to claim the prize for the longest marriage. Naturally, the winner should still have a live husband. (A woman whose husband is dead is a widow, isn't she?)

She insists that she has been married more than 50 years and deserves the prize. She is a very determined woman and nobody wants to argue with her. What should we do?

EXASPERATED IN ST. PAUL

DEAR EXASPERATED: Let it slide. Have a token prize for her and another for the runner-up whose husband is still living. The poor woman is living in the past.

Seek protection by Secret Service

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two presidential candidates — Democrat Jesse Jackson and Republican Pat Robertson — have asked the Secret Service to give them protection sooner than the usual January start-up date.

Neither has received a response from the Secret Service.

Jackson received early protection in his last bid for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination, beginning in November 1983. He has reported that he received 314 death threats during that campaign.

Jackson spokeswoman Pam Smith said she knew of only one serious incident in this race. It occurred in February at Drake University in Des Moines, Iowa, where there was a bomb threat at a building in which Jackson was scheduled to speak. The building was evacuated, according to reports at the time, but no bomb was found.

Bend knees in exercise

NEW YORK (AP) — Keep your knees bent during aerobic dance exercise, says the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau.

Dr. Peter Francis, professor of physical education at San Diego State University, says bent knees work the muscles in the back of your leg and force them to move in their full range of motion.

A vintage squeeze

By James Jacoby

Here is another deal from the World Championship of 50 years ago featuring the late Helen Sobel, who was then considered the greatest woman player in the world. I am not certain of the authenticity of the bidding, but I do know that the final contract was six no-trump, and Helen was declarer.

She won the queen of spades in dummy and played A-K and a club. West took the queen and continued with the spade 10. Declarer took the ace in dummy and played a third spade to the king. West discarding a heart. That left declarer with only 11 tricks, but Sobel could see the squeeze possibilities. She played her fourth club, and West had to discard another heart to keep the diamonds guarded. Sobel threw a diamond from dummy, and East also let a diamond go. But now, when the A-K-Q of diamonds were played, East was in the untenable position of having to shed either the nine of spades or a heart. When he discarded a heart, declarer took the last trick with the lowly heart eight.

Defense is certainly the hardest part of the game, and West could not be sure that his partner had as much as the jack of hearts, but he could have broken up this squeeze ending after winning the club queen. He must at that moment return a heart.

A new book by James Jacoby and his father, the late Oswald Jacoby, is now available at bookstores. It is "Jacoby on Card Games," published by Pharos Books.

Personality and nightmares compared

NEW YORK (AP) — Personality may have a lot to do with nightmares.

People who are plagued with a lifetime of bad dreams tend to have "thin boundaries," psychiatrist Ernest Hartmann reports in Health magazine.

People with thin boundaries walk a fine line between reality and illusion and are easily bombarded by outside influences, he says. Consequently, they let frightening material from their days seep into their nights.

Candidates for nightmares tend to have a blurred sense of reality and are unusually sensitive, open, vulnerable and creative. They are the sort of people who get carried away by music or lost in a book, he says.

DENNIS THE MENACE

"I ALWAYS KNOW WHAT'S GOING ON... I JUST DON'T ALWAYS KNOW WHY."

Western gives strong effort but Cisco JV prevails, 95-92

Coach Tony Mauldin delivered as promised. Unfortunately, Western Texas College came up on the short end of a 95-92 ballgame with Cisco here Monday night.

Western lived by the press and the fast break and died from correctable faults - poor shot selection, two few rebounds and missed free throws.

"We are so close yet so far away from being a good ballclub," said the first-year Westerner coach who was making his debut. "Cisco killed us on the offensive boards. We've just got to improve in that area. Our shot selection is real poor sometimes. If we can improve in those areas, we can have a real good team. If we don't, we'll play like this all year."

Vocal fans applauded Western's hungry press attack, which continually kept Cisco off balance. The Westerners proved they are capable of scoring points in a hurry. Down 30-19 in th first half, Western used a full court press to flash in 10 unanswered points, and eventually took a brief, 33-32, advantage.

Cisco rallied back, however, and using a more determined effort on the offensive boards, went out to a 52-45 halftime lead.

"I thought we had them rattled early in the game with our press," said the coach. "We got some steals and had some chances and didn't convert. That hurt. Instead of them chasing us, we were chasing them most of the time."

Western trailed almost the entire second half, but never by more than nine points. Consecutive points by Darrell Nelson, Harvey Marshman and Bobby Spear put WTC trailing by just two, 81-79, with 6:12 left Cisco fought back and with Mark Chambers crashing the boards, worked back in front 92-85.

Western didn't balk Chris Jackson scored from inside and James Hill connected on a three-pointer and a two-pointer to tie the game at 92-92 with 1:13 to play.

Todd Mannon brought Cisco back with an uncontested layup at the other end, though, and Western's Walter Martin missed a pair of free throws with 28 seconds left. WTC fouled on the rebound, and Chambers added one more free throw for the 95-92 final.

Western got off another shot, but it didn't fall.

"I was proud of the way the kids fought back at the end," said Mauldin.

Nelson and Marshman, the two sophomores from Richmond, Va., led Western in scoring with 20 and 19 points, respectively. Hill, a 5-7 freshman from Fort Worth, notched 18. Martin scored 12, Spear and Jackson 8 apiece and Derrick Greene 7.

Martin and Marshman led on the boards with eight each.

Ronald Ateman paced Cisco with 20 points. Mannon scored 17, Thomas Miller 16 and Chambers 11 - all in the second half.

Cisco was 15-19 from the free throw line. WTC was only 14 of 25.

Hill had seven of Western's 20 steals in the game. The Westerners also committed 22 turnovers.

Next action for the Westerners, 0-1, will be in the New Mexico Junior College Classic at Hobbs, N.M. WTC plays at 7 p.m. (CST) on Thursday.

Dusters open season Thursday in Levelland

Western Texas College's Lady Dusters open the 1987-88 basketball season at the Lady Texan Classic in Levelland this week.

The Dusters are scheduled against Western Oklahoma in the tip off game of the three-day classic at 4 p.m. Thursday in the Texan Dome.

Coach Kelly Chadwick's squad is scheduled to play Seward at 4 p.m. on Friday, and will challenge Northern Oklahoma at 6 p.m. Saturday.

Western returns only one starter and one other player from last season's team, which won conference and regional titles and placed fourth in the NJCAA National Tournament.

"We have so many freshmen. We'll have lots inexperience on the floor all the time," mused Coach Chadwick, who has 11 freshmen on the squad. "Really, I think that's our No. 1 weakness."

The team won't be as tall in all positions this season, and probably won't shoot the ball as well - though last year's club led the nation.

"I think our biggest asset, right now, is quickness. We're awfully quick," said Chadwick. "We're very aggressive, and I think in time this could be one of the best defensive teams we've had."

Standout point guard Kayla Thompson, a 5-8 sophomore from Hobbs, N.M., is the only returning starter. She'll be joined by capable Nancy Bals, a 5-10 guard from Lubbock. The other sophomore is Lisa Houston, a 5-10 post from Michigan City, Ind., who transfered from USC.

Freshmen include Snyder's Stephanie McKnight, a 5-4 guard; Staci Smith of Amarillo, a 5-10 guard; Julie Roewe of Denver City, a 5-8 guard; Sheron Rosemond of Denver City, a 5-9 guard; Carolyn Colbert of Dallas, a 5-9 post; Tabitha Walton of Beaumont, a 5-9 guard; and Jackie Reed of Pampa, a 5-9 post. Others are Nickey Allen of Amarillo, a 5-11 post; Erika Bunce of San Antonio, a 6-2 post; and Cathey Crowder of Ira, a 5-10 post. Crowder has suffered a knee injury and will be out indefinitely.

NCAA to investigate UNLV cage program

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) - The NCAA has notified the University of Nevada-Las Vegas that it will investigate the recruitment of former New York City basketball star Lloyd Daniels.

UNLV Athletic Director Brad Rothermel said Monday that he received notification of a probe of the basketball program in a letter dated Oct. 23 from David Berst, the director of enforcement for the NCAA.

"We're not concerned about it. It's our understanding the league will do the actual investigation," said UNLV Coach Jerry Tarkanian, who in 1977 was suspended for two years by the NCAA, which also put the basketball program on probation.

Tarkanian, who sued to block his 1977 suspension and won seven years later, said the announcement of the probe is designed to hurt UNLV recruiting of high school seniors, who sign letters of intent next week.

"We don't need this now," he said.

UNLV President Robert Maxson said last month that a university-sponsored probe into the alleged recruiting violations turned up conflicting evidence and reached no conclusions.

Maxson said the report was being forwarded to the Pacific Coast Athletic Association for further investigation, which would eventually forward its findings to the NCAA.

Berst's letter, however, came only two days after Maxson's statements, and said the NCAA would be conducting a "preliminary inquiry" of the men's basketball program "at the university's request."

Rothermel said the university did not request a probe, and said he did not know what prompted the NCAA to act so quickly.

"There seems to be a discrepancy as to what went on there," Rothermel said. "Normally, the results are forwarded to the PCAA. Then the PCAA forwards it to the NCAA."

Cowboys defense tough as...

Giants feel Doomsday, 33-24

IRVING, Tex. (AP) – "Doomsday, Doomsday!" the Dallas Cowboys shouted going into their locker room and Doomsday it was, a throwback to the old Doomsday Defense that just about insured that the NFL will have a new champion for the ninth straight season.

Led by 36-year-old Ed Jones, one of the last remnants of the group that dominated the league a decade ago, the Cowboys' defense set up all but seven points Monday night as Dallas rallied from a 10-point, fourth-quarter deficit and beat the Super Bowl champion New York Giants 33-24 Monday night.

The 19-point fourth quarter also included four field goals by Roger Ruzek, tying an NFL record for field goals in a quarter.

The defense, which exploited backups William Roberts and Damien Johnson on the right side of New York's offensive line, also brought the crowd of 55,730, which started booing some members of the strike-torn Cowboys, firmly onto the side of the home team.

While Dallas was ending a two-game losing streak and improving to 4-3, the Giants were dropping to 1-6 in their strike-scarred season, meaning that even if they win all eight remaining games, they may not earn a wild-card playoff berth. They also lost quarterback Phil Simms, the Super Bowl MVP, with what was preliminarily diagnosed as a strained knee, late in the fourth quarter.

On a night when the Dallas offense rushed for just 26 yards, fewest in its history, Jones sacked Simms four times and deflected two passes, one of which dropped into the hands of defensive lineman Jim Jeffcoat, who returned it 26 yards for the tying score. It was almost an exact replica off the key play in the game two years ago that helped give Dallas the NFC East title over the Giants, except that one covered 65 yards.

"We knew going into the game that we were facing one of the top defenses in the league if not the best defense, so we knew we had to do produce something," Jones said.

"It seemed like Ed was in the backfield all night," said Dallas' Randy White, who caught one of the deflected passes.

Produce it they did.

Only Dallas' first touchdown, which came on a one-yard run by Herschel Walker at the end of a 72-yard drive, was produced primarily by the offense. That gave Dallas a short-lived 7-0 lead that was erased when Joe Morris went over from five yards out on the first play of the second quarter.

After Raul Allegre's 35-yard field goal gave the Giants a 10-7 lead, the defense went to work, as Vince Albritton stripped Tony Galbreath of the ball at the New York 18 and Jesse Penn recovered with 52 seconds left in the half. Three plays later, Danny White threw a two-yard touchdown pass to Doug Cosbie to give the Cowboys a 14-10 lead at halftime.

But Simms hit Lionel Manuel with two long scoring passes, one of 50 yards, the other for 33 after a muffed 14-yard punt by Mike Saxon to give New York a 24-14 lead six seconds into the fourth quarter.

But within five minutes, Dallas had tied it, on Ruzek's 34-yard field goal and the key play of the game - Jones' deflection of Simms' pass to Jeffcoat. "I know he likes to throw down the middle so I just kept rushing up the middle," said Jones, who later deflected a pass to White on the play on which Simms was hurt.

On the next series, the fired up crowd forced the Giants into two false starts, then Jones had a seven-yard sack that forced Sean Landeta to punt from the 2-yard line. That set the Cowboys up at the Giants' 47, and the offense could go just 16 yards, to set up Ruzek's 49-yard field goal that put the Cowboys ahead 27-24 with 4:11 left.

Giants' Craig named Manager of the Year

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Roger Craig delivered a division championship in his second full season with the San Francisco Giants and plans to stick around to enjoy even better times.

"I'll keep managing as long as I'm healthy and enjoy it. I'll be 58 next year, and I'd like to stay three to five more years, maybe," Craig said Monday after being named The Associated Press Manager of the Year.

The Giants won the National League West title with a 90-72 record two years after finishing last with the worst record in franchise history, 62-100. Attendance this season was a club-record 1,917,863.

"We didn't do it overnight. It took two years of very hard work, and we're not finished yet," said Craig, alluding to the goal of reaching the World Series and grabbing baseball's biggest prize.

"That's in the future," the North Carolina native proclaimed in a telephone interview from his home in Southern California.

"This makes it nicer for next year," he added, referring to the award voted upon by a nationwide poll of writers and broadcasters.

In the voting, held before postseason play, Craig received 46 votes, one more than Montreal's Buck Rodgers, who was named NL Manager of the Year by the Baseball Writers Association of America last week. Residents wash away residue of leak

TEXAS CITY, Texas (AP) — The cleanup continues among residents who returned to homes they were forced to evacuate this weekend because of hydrofluoric acid leak.

Residents washed porches and yards Monday to remove the residue left behind by the chemical leak on Friday that released a toxic cloud and forced the evacuation of about 3,000 people.

Of the hundreds who were injured, 44 remained hospitalized today at two Texas City hospitals for treatment of respiratory problems stemming from the industrial accident at the Marathon Petroleum Co. plant.

People living near the plant were allowed to go home Sunday night. They returned to neighborhoods that were turned an autumnal brown by the toxic acid.

Many residents hosed down their porches and yards to get rid of fluoride residue from the leak, and they were were warned to wash their cars, throw out exposed food, and clean their eating utensils.

"My leaves are all brown. This place looks deserted," said Maria Guttierrez, 33.

Despite assurances from city and Marathon officials, Ms. Guitterrez, a convenience store clerk, said she feared for the safety of herself and her 2-year-old son.

"The smell is too strong," she said.

The toxic acid spilled after a crane accidentally dropped its load, rupturing pipes leading into a hydrofluoric acid storage tank. When the acid came into contact with air, it vaporized, sending a toxic cloud skyward, said Marathon spokesman Bill Ryder.

At AMI-Danforth Hospital, 38 patients remained hospitalized with respiratory problems, nursing supervisor Joanne Butler said. Hospital spokeswoman Beverly Boase said that since Friday evening, 600 people had been treated and 133 admitted.

A total of 171 people were treated at Mainland Center Hospital, spokeswoman Pat Kirk said Monday. Six remained hospitalized, nursing supervisor Jody Hocking said.

Drinkers can get flushed

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — For business and social reasons, I have a few drinks occasionally. After just one highball my face and ears become flushed and red as a beet. I take Tenoretic 50 for mild high blood pressure. Is this flushing a problem?

DEAR READER — Alcohol acts as a vasodilator (blood-vessel widener) of the skin's capillaries. Therefore, in certain people, flushing is a common consequence of drinking.

I am more concerned about your need for medicine to control high blood pressure. Alcohol sometimes makes hypertension more severe, so with your condition, you probably ought to minimize alcohol consumption. Ask your doctor about this.

DEAR DR. GOTT — During World War II, I worked in aircraft maintenance. We washed all parts in 100-octane leaded aviation fuel, using our bare hands. Our overalls were also washed in fuel, hung out to dry for 30 minutes and then worn again. Do you think I should be tested for lead poisoning?

DEAR READER — Your past exposure to leaded gasoline would be viewed today as harmful and excessive. The lead is less of a problem than is the skin exposure and vapor inhalation of volatile hydrocarbons. Gasoline fumes can cause mental changes: confusion and loss of judgment, for example.

You probably did not absorb enough tetra-ethyl lead to cause harm, because you did not become ill at the time of your maintenance work. In any case, your exposure to lead occurred so long ago that testing you now would be without value; you have probably excreted (or stored in bone) most of the lead you absorbed.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Is it true that the tobacco processors are permitted to add opium to their products, particularly snuff?

DEAR READER — Wrong. Opium products are classed as narcotics and their sale is carefully regulated by both federal and state authorities. Opium or its derivatives are not added to any tobacco products processed or manufactured in the United States.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I've used all sorts of creams, lotions and salves for my extremely dry rough elbows. Nothing works. Does being a long-distance trucker cause this problem?

DEAR READER — Dry and rough elbow skin is not, to my knowledge, associated with truck driving — unless a driver frequently rests his or her elbows on the steering wheel, causing chafing. Some types of vitamin and nutritional deficiencies can cause rough skin, so you should have a medical examination to make sure that your health is good.

However, dry skin on the elbows is common in many people who are otherwise healthy. Try using lanolin as a cream to replace the oils in your skin, this usually works.

SECOND THOUGHTS?

If having a prison is so advantageous - why are so many towns and counties changing their minds about wanting a prison?

Breckenridge had 1200 signatures against a prison and dropped from consideration-

Amarillo has 4000 signatures protesting a prison and still fighting-

Seagoville has been having town meetings (covered by Channel 8) trying to save their town from a prison.

Too many people in Johnson County are afraid of the consequences of having a prison - Johnson County listened to its people and withdrew its bid for a prison yesterday.

Do they know something we have not been told?

UNANSWERED QUESTIONS

Who will pay for the $1250 (or more) an acre land?

A 640 acre tract would amount to $800,000.

There are rumors there will be a bond issue to cover the cost. A bond issue is simply a way to get into the taxpayers' pockets
And you thought the prison would not cost you anything?!

Where are the proposed sites?

Approximately 5 miles east of town - (Billy McCormick, John Greene and Larry Schwartz land) on the Camp Springs Road.

How has this prison effort been financed?

A good part has come from your tax money - spent by the Board of County Development - the County - and through the funneling of funds to the Economic Development Committee of the Snyder Chamber of Commerce. The BCD budget of $48,000 comes directly out of your tax dollar.

What is the secret weapon?
Your tax dollars!

Do not be intimidated!
Thank God that this is a free country

Third teenager may be charged

DALLAS (AP) — Felony charges may be filed against a youth who gave a ride to two other teen-agers who are already accused in the shooting of an undercover narcotics officer, The Dallas Morning News reported today.

"Charges of capital murder or conspiracy to commit capital murder are being considered," sources close to the investigation told the newspaper. "At this point, it's a consideraton of what to file."

The 16-year-old youth told police that on Oct. 23, he learned from a 16-year-old neighbor and 17-year-old Richard Goeglein that they planned to kill undercover officer George Raffield, according to investigation sources and a Dallas lawyer who advised Goeglein of his rights last week.

The 16-year-old and Goeglein are charged with capital murder in the shooting death of Raffield, whose body was found Oct. 24 in a field south of the town. The 21-year-old officer had posed as a student at Midlothian High School, where both suspects attend, to investigate drug trafficking.

The 16-year-old neighbor picked up the two other teens a half-hour after the shooting and drove them to the home of Cynthia Fedrick, 23. Sources said the youth split money from Raffield's wallet with the other two and was present when the officer's driver's license was burned at Ms. Fedrick's apartment.

Ms. Fedrick has been charged with a misdemeanor for allegedly hindering an apprehension in the case. She told the Dallas Times Herald Monday that Goeglein and the other suspect went to her home within hours of the shooting and that the juvenile "told me he thought he was in trouble."

"He said, 'I took my daddy's gun. I took the fancy bullets out and put the regular ones in,'" Ms. Fedrick said.

Police also said that within hours of being arrested, Goeglein described in detail how occult activites were involved in Raffield's slaying.

Goeglein told investigators he had been warned not to partiipate in the execution of Raffield by a heart-shaped amulet — an object he named "Terry's heart" and believed had supernatural powers. He told police that the amulet contained "essence of the dead" that answered his questions and directed his behavior.

Stock market prices fall in America

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices gave back some of their recent gains today following losses overseas as confidence in the dollar's stability appeared to weaken.

The Dow Jones industrial average of 30 blue-chip stocks fell about 25 points to about 1,989 about 10 minutes after the opening of trading.

The dollar slid in European and early U.S. trading late Monday and again today following remarks Monday by Karl Otto Poehl, president of West Germany's central bank, expressing concern about inflation and indicating no plans to stimulate his country's economy to absorb more imports.

A selloff in London of stocks and the dollar today raised fears about the durability of a rebound on Wall Street, where the Dow Jones average rose back above the 2,000 mark Monday in the calmest trading since the Oct. 19 crash.

In London today, the dollar was quoted at 136.45 yen, down from a 40-year low of 136.98 yen in New York on Monday and sharply off Monday's close in Tokyo of 137.58. It declined further in New York early today to 136.20 yen and was dropping against most other key currencies.

The Dow average closed Monday at 2,014.09, a gain of 1 percent. Trading volume on the New York Stocks Exchange fell below 200 million shares for the first time since the Oct. 19 collapse.

Five stocks advanced for every three that declined, and the value of all U.S. stocks rose $37 billion, according to the Wilshire Associates tally.

Monday's advance was the fifth consecutive gain for the Dow average since it lost 156.83 points the previous Monday.

Street projects prioritized here highway department's Abilene District.

If funded from the state, the city would be responsible for providing any right-of-way and curb and gutter required with the widening.

In considering the staff's recommendation for a prioritized list, the council shifted from Number 3 to Number 2 a major project, the extension of Ave. E from 37th St. to F.M. 2763, the farm-to-market road running east and west in front of Western Texas College.

This project also carries by far the highest price tag, now estimated at some $3.7 million.

Since this amount is near the sum allocated for the entire 13-county area, council members noted they felt it stood a poor chance of being approved by state officials.

They listed it as second on their prioritized list, however, to "get it before" the highway department for possible future consideration.

An extension of Ave. E would create a second north-south route running the entire length of Snyder. Currently, only College Ave. serves traffic in such an unbroken route.

The city's long term prioritized list of four local projects, as rearranged by council members Monday, includes:

—To widen 37th St. from Austin Place to College Ave., a project estimated to cost $390,000.

—To extend Ave. E from 37th St. to F.M. 2763.

—To rebuild 30th St. from El Paso Ave. to Ave. Y, estimated to cost $370,000.

—To extend Houston Ave. from 30th St. to State Highway 180, estimated to cost $400,000.

The meeting Monday was the regularly scheduled November session for the council. Mayor pro-tem Fred Castillo presided in the absence of Troy Williamson. Councilmen attending the session included Paul Zeck, Ralph Williamson, Mike Post, Joe Fowler and John Johnson.

In other city business, the council voted to:

—Cast on an equal share basis the city's 218 votes for the five nominees to the five-member Scurry County Appraisal District board. Those nominated include holdover board members Mairl McFaul and Dwaine Williams plus newly nominated candidates Doug Flynn, Julius Roemisch and Mickey Sterling.

—Reappoint to the board of electrical examiners Larry White and Steve Green for new two-year terms and for his first two-year term, Jim Whitney.

—Appoint Gary Sisson to the board of adjustment for the unexpired term of Roy McQueen, who recently resigned.

—Approve on second reading the "updated service credit" for the city's participation in the Texas Municipal Retirement System.

—Join with a steering committee of other cities currently formulating an ordinance to be used for the renewal of franchise agreements with Southwestern Bell Telephone. The city's agreement with Bell is not due to expire until 1993. As part of the agreement, the city also agreed to pay some $63.50 as its pro-rate share for the effort.

—Pass a resolution to be sent to the City of Midland commending the city for its efforts during the rescue of Jessica McClure.

fin's relatives reportedly paid the men some money and separated him from the group.

Ricky Dewayne Cox, 24, of 309 25th St. was indicted for burglary of a building in an Oct. 5 break-in at Tri-State Construction Co. in which about 50 blank payroll checks were stolen.

Chris Maxfield, 21, and Patsy Maxfield, 50, both of Rt. 2, Box 59, were indicted for theft over $750 in the theft of steel railroad track fixtures from Santa Fe Railway on Sept. 8.

Ernesto Roberto Aguilar, 21, of 706 26th St. was indicted for unauthorized use of a motor vehicle in the Sept. 20 theft of a 1986 Chevrolet pickup from Roger Weaver.

Two 17-year-old Lubbock men, Ruben Baker III and Booker Thomas Jones, were indicted for burglary of a vehicle in the Oct. 17 attempted theft of a 1985 Chevrolet from David Hitz.

Charles Schmoekel, 36, of Lubbock was indicted for forgery by passing in the attempted passing of a $100 check on Oct. 1. The check was forged on a woman's Lubbock bank account. Schmoekel had not been arrested, a law enforcement officer said.

Statewide vote now underway running heavier than two years ago.

Tony Servillo, spokesman for the Harris County clerk's office, said 7,939 absentee ballots had been cast as of last Friday, up from 3,899 in 1985.

"It's not an indicator of greater interest," he said. "It's because we had one absentee voting place in 1985 and 11 branch offices in 1987. Plus there's a new state law that says you no longer have to give a reason for voting absentee."

In Austin, voters are being asked — again — whether to move the municipal airport from its location near downtown to a site east of the city. Absentee voting was heavier there, too, election officials said.

Probably the most attention has been focused on the pari-mutuel wagering issue.

Texas last allowed pari-mutuel gambling from 1933 to 1937. It also was legal from 1905 to 1909.

The question was placed before voters by state legislators who have debated the question without resolution for years.

Backers pushed the referendum as a job-creating, economy-boosting plan that would raise $100 million in taxes for state government within five years. Besides, thousands of Texans travel to surrounding states each year to bet on horse races, they argued.

Opponents charged that horse and dog racing backers had overstated the benefits of the sport and understated its drawbacks. Gary McNeil, spokesman for the anti-gambling Texans Who Care campaign, said gambling would have a small economic benefit, create low-paying seasonal jobs and attract organized crime.

If the statewide referendum passes, a legalizing election still would be needed before wagering could begin in a county. Fifty-seven counties are holding such elections in conjunction with the statewide issue.

Besides the super collider bonds, several other bond sale proposals are before voters. Proceeds from those sales, if approved, would include $500 million for corrections and mental facilities, $400 million in water projects, $400 million in local public works projects and $125 million for economic development efforts.
