School election deadlines at hand

By SPENCER SANDOW
Staff Writer

Deadlines within the next two days could have a significant impact on school board candidates and their constituents.

The deadline to register to vote is 5 p.m. Thursday, while the deadline to file as candidate for the Big Spring Independent School District board of trustees is 5 p.m. Wednesday.

The two incumbents — Billy Pineda, representing district 1, and Dewayne Fraser, representing district 3 — are the only individuals to have filed for school board election.

Pineda is completing his first term on the school board. He is employed at Miller of Texas beer distributor.

Fraser has served two previous terms on the board and was elected to a term as board president in April 1984. He is co-owner of Fraser Industries.

Tax assessor/collector Dorothy Moore said that voters who are not registered must register by 5 p.m. Thursday at her office in the courthouse in order to vote in the April 4 election, which will feature both city council and school board races.

District 1 and 3 positions on both the school board and City Council will be elected. People who are already registered are not required to register again unless they have moved, Moore said.

Absentee voting for the City Council election begins March 16, according to City Finance Director Tom Ferguson.

Registered voters may vote absentee at Ferguson's office through March 31, he said. But he added that a valid reason must be given for voting absentee, such as plans to be outside the county on election day, April 4.

Senior citizens may vote absentee by mail, he said. Mail ballots will be accepted through 7 p.m. on election day.

Absentee voting for school board also will be March 16-31, according to Ron Logback. The assistant business manager and athletic coordinator at the school district, he said he is in charge of the election.

Absentee voters may cast their ballots for school board at the courthouse office of County Clerk Margaret Ray, he said. Mail-in ballots will be accepted through election day, he added.

Ferguson said absentee ballots typically number about 10 percent of those who vote on election day.

Seven candidates have filed for City Council election. The filing deadline was Feb. 18. For district 1, incumbent Henry Sanchez has filed, along with Pat Deanda, Elaine Oliver and Lee Young.

For district 3, incumbent Harold Hall has filed, as have Patsy Cawthon and D.D. Johnston.

Damaged bridge to be rebuilt

Thanks to a vehicle larger than a bridge was designed to accommodate, Sterling City residents will see a new bridge near their community.

Hilton Hagan, spokesman at the state highway department office in Austin, said that a truck that was too tall for a bridge clearance but passed through anyway has resulted in plans for the new bridge.

A beam supporting a bridge at the west lane of Highway 158 to Garden City was knocked down, he said. Although the culprit wasn't caught, Hagan said that in 99 percent of the cases, it's oil equipment.

Traffic is still able to cross the bridge in one lane, he said.

Because the overpass is 30 years old and has deteriorated since it was built, reconstruction has been scheduled, he said.

"It's lived its useful life," he said. "We're going to rebuild the whole thing, providing more clearance."

The project will cost an estimated $200,000. Engineering plans are being made, he said, and the construction should be under contract within the next six months.

Convinced

Twenty year-old Andrew Becker grimaces as he experiences a crash at five miles-per-hour on the "convincer." The Texas Automobile Dealers Association displayed the convincer at Big Spring Mall Monday to encourage the use of safety belts. A state law requiring front seat driver and passenger to wear safety belts was enacted in 1986.

Clements chitchats in House

AUSTIN (AP) — Amid talk that some House members are not holding the line on state spending, Gov. Bill Clements ventured on to the House floor to chat with lawmakers in informal meetings.

Just before Clements entered the chamber Monday, House Appropriations Committee Chairman Jim Rudd said the governor's help could be beneficial in hammering home the budget message.

"We have a lot of people who run on a ticket of no new taxes, but they like to add money back in," Rudd said.

Various House panels are putting together budgets for state agencies and programs. The proposals are being forwarded to Rudd's committee, which is working on the general appropriations bill.

"Everybody is coming in high," Rudd said. "The arts are coming in high. Tourism is coming in high. Higher education is high. The Department of Public Safety is high. We have a lot of people who claim to be conservatives who are not willing to cut in their own committees."

Clements has promised to block any budget that exceeds the $36.9 billion limit he set for 1988-89.

"It seems to me like the governor should be out here working these people if he wants it done," Rudd said.

As Rudd said that, Clements headed to the House floor.

"I understand that he has a lot of problems with the spending cuts and the reallocation of priorities. We have talked about that, Mr. Rudd and I. I am continuously talking to not only members of my party but also members of his party."

More homes needed for abuse victims

By SCOTT FITZGERALD
Staff Writer

Although child abuse cases and foster home placements have dramatically decreased within a year, Big Spring protective services workers from the state's human services department say a need for more foster homes exists.

"We have no way of predicting the number of abused and neglected children who will need the protection of foster homes in 1987," said Jeannie Hunt, Big Spring's foster home recruiter.

Toni Rash, Big Spring's foster home developer, says homes are needed for youths ages 12 to 16.

According to a news release from the human services' Midland office, Howard County investigations into child abuse and neglect decreased by 29 percent in 1986 from the year before.

The decrease reduced the number of foster children requiring foster care or emergency shelter placements.

Howard County protective services workers placed eight children in foster care or emergency shelter placements during 1986. That reflects a decrease of 29 percent from the year before, when workers placed 28 children in foster care or emergency shelter placements.

Several factors have been attributed to the decreases.

"It's my hope that people are better educated about what legally constitutes abuse or neglect and are therefore reporting more accurately," said Protective Services Supervisor Manuel Garcia of Midland.

"We can make speculations. It could be a reduction in the population," Hunt said.

Recruiters such as herself look for "life endangering situations," during the course of their investigations, Hunt said.

"We place children as a last resort. It's always best to keep them at home and work with them in that environment," she said.

Placing a child in a foster environment can be traumatic and dangerous because of the child's unfamiliarity with the setting, Hunt said.

A better educated public is another factor that Rash attributes to the decrease of placements.

Human services employees have worked more closely in providing counseling to families with potential placement cases. There has been an increase in public presentations to address the child abuse problem, Rash said.

Big Spring currently has five homes that are certified.

North Texans pull together for Collider

From staff and wire reports

FORT WORTH — Landing the Super Collider will not be an easy task, but North Texas leaders have begun pulling together to snare the multibillion-dollar research project.

Efforts to persuade the Department of Energy to put the project in the Dallas-Fort Worth region have created an alliance between people in business, government and academics, said Dr. Lylan Lyon Jr., executive vice president of the North Texas Commission.

Several other Texas sites including one near Garden City, as well as numerous other states, also are vying for the project. Gov. Bill Clements said last week that Illinois and California both have an edge on Texas in the race for the Super Collider.

Big Spring, Midland and San Angelo each pledged $50,000 last week to finance lobbying efforts for the project.

The commission is a group which promotes business development in the area. Officials are scrambling to get the Superconducting Super Collider project that would bring 3,000 jobs and a $270 million-per-year budget to the region.

The Super Collider is a 52-mile doughnut-shaped tunnel, packed with high-power electromagnets, that allows beams of protons to be shot at one another.

The protons collided head-on at nearly the speed of light, enabling scientists to study energy densities at

Funding now could save dollars later

By SUZANNE GAMBOA
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — If the state doesn't begin investing in preventing school dropouts now, it will have to put the money into prisons, welfare programs and law enforcement later, lawmakers say.

Rep. Ramon Martinez, D-Houston, said Monday he is sponsoring a bill that seeks to keep more students in school.

"We know the effect of the dropout problem when over half of the Texas Department of Corrections inmates are dropouts," said Rep. Nancy McDonald, D-El Paso, who is co-sponsoring this bill.

According to a study mandated under the 1984 education reforms, Texas has a 33 percent dropout rate. During 1985-86, half a million Texas youths left school, Martinez said.

The study showed one in five Texas youths were not enrolled in school during that year and had not completed the 12th grade.

Three out of 10 of the dropouts, or 152,000, had left school before the ninth grade, according to the study.

"It doesn't really matter what the rate is, what the percentage is," Martinez said. "The fact is that there is an issue of dropouts in the state of Texas that needs addressing."

The study, conducted by the Texas Department of Community Affairs, showed 230,000 of the dropouts were white, 197,000 were Hispanic and 64,000 were black.

"That goes to show that this issue is not a brown issue. It is not a white issue. It is not a black issue," Martinez said. "It is an issue that is affecting every single community in the state of Texas."

The bill calls for creating a center for statistics on dropouts and development of remedial programs for students, Martinez said. Dropout rates would have to be reported to the Legislature and governor every session.

Martinez said that dropouts hurt the state's economy by creating a pool of uneducated, illiterate workers.

"The issue of dropouts is not only an educational issue but is also an economic issue," Martinez said. "In the future the workforce of this state is going to be a minority workforce. If the dropout rate continues to go as it is now, that workforce is going to be an ill-educated and unskilled workforce."

Lawmakers said they would need additional funding to attack the dropout problem, but said they will use existing funds for the proposed bill.

Happy birthday

Students at the University of Texas celebrate Monday's anniversary of Texas Independence Day with a giant Texas flag, a cannon salute and a ceremonial tea toast in Austin.

Police beat Car's tires vandalized

Brenda Gail Jones, 3304 W. Highway 80 Apt. 22, told police that someone she knows damaged three tires on her vehicle at 2502 Kelly St. at 8:45 p.m. Monday.

Jesus Cardona, 28, 306 N.E. 10th St., was arrested at the scene of a minor accident at 300 W. 17th St. Monday, charged with failure to maintain financial responsibility, second offense.

Two taken to state prison

A Howard County sheriff's deputy transferred two persons to the state prison Tuesday morning.

David Waymon, 23, of Lawton, Okla., will serve a three-year sentence for the involuntary manslaughter death of Robert Roundtree in March, 1986.

Luis Hernandez Jr., 21, 311 N. Aylford St., will serve a nine-year sentence for burglary and driving while intoxicated.

Deputies released Jaime Hernandez, 19, 3606 Dixon St., Monday morning from county jail on orders from District Judge James Gregg. He was arrested Feb. 25 on a revocation of probation theft warrant.

Mitchell County sheriff's deputies arrested Deonna Bell, 24, of Colorado City, Monday morning on a Howard County issuing a bad check warrant. She was released on $400 bond.

Martin County sheriff's deputies arrested Ermalinda Villa, 21, of Stanton, Monday morning on a Howard County issuing a bad check warrant. She was released after paying a $149.57 fine.

Police transferred Jesus Cardona, 28, 306 N.E. 10th St., Monday night to county jail after he was arrested for failure to maintain financial responsibility — a subsequent offense. He was released on $500 bond.

New media company organized

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A new media company has been formed with the purchase of six Texas newspapers that recently were sold by Harte-Hanks Communications Inc.

Tucker Sutherland, chairman and president of the newly formed Sutherland Media Inc. of San Antonio, said the multi-divisional media company includes the Corsicana Daily Sun, the Copperas Cove Leader-Press, the Universal City Herald-News, the Medical Gazette of San Antonio, the Wingspread, published for Randolph Air Force Base, and the News Leader, published for the Army's Fort Sam Houston.

The latter both are in San Antonio, where Sutherland Media Inc.

February acquired San Antonio Monthly Magazine.

The newspapers and magazine were purchased for an undisclosed amount from Worrell Enterprises Inc. of Charlottesville, Va., which acquired them from San Antonio-based Harte-Hanks along with several other publications on Dec. 31, 1986.

The Big Spring Herald was part of the Harte-Hanks Communication Inc. prior to its acquisition, along with three other similar-sized Texas daily newspapers, by MediaNews Group last year.

Sutherland, formerly president of newspaper operations for Harte-Hanks, had acquired an option to buy some of the publications from Worrell before they were acquired from Harte-Hanks.

Sutherland left Harte-Hanks after 18 years with the company to form his own media company.

"This is the fulfillment of a lifelong dream," he said. "To own my own media company has been my desire since I first entered the publishing business."

Sutherland said the acquisitions from Worrell were only the beginning.

"We plan to stay busy in the media acquisition field and have strong financial backing," he said. "We are dedicated to building a sizable company that is both financially successful and that does an outstanding job of fulfilling the information needs of the communities we serve."

in that regard," Clements said.

"What we need to do is think in terms of our present budget, our present programs and move from that point. I don't think too many people are now doing that. They're still thinking in terms of expanded programs and all, and that's just not going to happen," he said.

The governor said he backs the tax package that is expected to hit the House floor Thursday. The temperature of nearly 500 degrees below zero year round.

The project will cost an estimated $4.5 billion and will take about nine years to build, according to the U.S. Energy Department.

Once the state submits the North Texas proposal to Washington, the next step is to sell the idea to the Energy Department, which will pass a stack of proposals to a panel of scientists, who'll work up a "short list" of finalists for the energy secretary to review.

the moment of creation, Lyon said.

Winning the project means first convincing the Texas National Research Laboratory Commission to propose the North Texas site to the federal government.

To achieve its goal the commission is putting together information on how it would obtain the 16 square miles needed for the project, where it would get the necessary 250 million watts of power and where it would get the 2.8 million gallons of water needed each day to keep the Super Collider at a tified as foster homes, she added.

"We need more homes for young teen-agers from the ages of 12 to 16," Rash said.

Most families who wish to provide foster homes to human services are more receptive to younger children.

"They are afraid to get involved with teen-agers. They're not capable of handling them," Rash said. Human services reimburses a family that certifies as a foster home $8 a day per child for persons 9 years or younger. For children over 9, human services will reimburse a family $9 a day per child, Rash said.

Forecast

West Texas: Fair tonight. Sunny Wednesday. No significant temperature changes. Highs today near 60 in the Panhandle to mid 60s in the south, except in the mid 70s along the Rio Grande. Lows tonight will be near 30 in the mountains, far west and Panhandle to near 40 southeast and Big Bend. Highs Wednesday mid 60s north to upper 70s along the Rio Grande.

State

High pressure was producing fair skies over most of the Lone Star state early this morning, with temperatures mostly in the 40s.

Fog was reducing visibility over the middle coastal plain and skies over parts of South Texas were cloudy, the National Weather Service said.

The high pressure over the state was keeping the wind light. The 4 a.m. state temperature extremes were a low of 36 degrees at El Paso and a high of 56 degrees at McAllen and Brownsville.

The forecast for South Texas calls for clear to partly cloudy skies through Wednesday with highs in the mid and upper 60s and lows ranging from the 30s to the mid-50s.

In West Texas skies will be fair and sunny through Wednesday with highs in the 60s and lows in the 30s and 40s.

Deaths

Roy Biddle

Roy Biddle, 48, Big Spring, died Sunday, March 1, 1987 at his home.

18 guilty in heroin trial

NEW YORK — The "Pizza Connection" trial, marked by the slaying of one defendant and an attempt on another, ended with the convictions of a former Sicilian Mafia boss and 17 others as part of a ring that sold $1.6 billion worth of heroin through pizza parlors.

U.S. District Court jurors who returned the verdicts Monday afternoon had listened to about 400 witnesses over 17 months, sorted through 15,000 exhibits, and studied a 410-page book that charted evidence against what U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani said was the biggest U.S. heroin ring to be smashed.

Network writers strike

NEW YORK — Management employees at ABC and CBS filled in for hundreds of striking news writers and editors as the two broadcast giants sought to keep the walkout from affecting their news operations.

ABC's Peter Jennings and CBS's Dan Rather appeared on their evening newscasts Monday. Neither anchorman is a member of the striking Writers Guild of America, which represents 525 news-related employees.

Jennings, who mentioned the strike on his newscast, called it "one piece of economic news we would rather not be reporting this evening."

"Those people on strike are our colleagues and our friends, and we hope it is resolved very soon," he said.

Report prompts panic

CHICAGO — Tornado Preparedness Week got off to a bang in Illinois when the National Weather Service issued an erroneous bulletin saying a twister had demolished the city of Rockford.

The northern Illinois city of 140,000 residents is unscathed today, although newscasters who broadcast the bulletin Monday to listeners across the Midwest were deluged by calls.

"I'm extremely upset about it," said John Gleason, news director of WLAK radio in Chicago, about 80 miles southeast of Rockford and directly in the imaginary twister's path.

WLAK's overnight announcer, who read the bulletin on the air, "was a little shook up over the whole thing," Gleason said.

"He said it was upsetting to read. Afterwards, when he found out it was a hoax ... that's very upsetting to find out you may have panicked thousands of people needlessly," Gleason said.

Towns vie for shuttle

PALMDALE, Calif. — Two communities whose fortunes are tied to the space program are fighting to be the home of the next shuttle construction contract, worth an estimated $2.1 billion.

A contender in the aerospace tug-of-war is the city of Lompoc on the California coast near Vandenberg Air Force Base, the planned launch site of space shuttle missions for the military.

The veteran in the economic battle is the desert city of Palmdale. Rockwell International built the first four shuttles here, 60 miles north of Los Angeles.

President Reagan has asked for a space shuttle to replace Challenger, which exploded, killing its crew of seven on Jan. 28, 1986.

DeKalb High School custodian Linda McDowell paints over the plaster patches used to cover the bullet holes in the wall of room number 7 at the high school. Seventh grad student Nathan D. Faris, 12, (above right) shot classmate Timothy Perrin Monday before turning the gun on himself and committing suicide. Faris apparently was upset with being teased about being overweight and wearing glasses.

Ridiculed boy kills classmate, self

DeKALB, Mo. (AP) — Counselors were called in to help students cope today with the memories of a 12-year-old boy, often taunted as "Chubby," pulling a gun from a bag, fatally wounding a classmate and killing himself.

"It's totally devastating, totally shocking," said DeKalb High School Principal Mark Harpst.

Classes had just begun Monday at the rural school when Nathan D. Faris pulled a pistol from a duffel bag and shot Timothy Perrin, 13, of Rushville, in the head. As students ran from the social studies classroom, Nathan shot himself once in the head, Highway Patrol Trooper Bob Anderson said.

Seventh-graders described Nathan, who lived in Rushville, as the object of relentless teasing. Some classmates called him fat and a "walking dictionary." He earned four A's, two B's and a C on his recent report card, Harpst said.

"Nobody really had anything against him. He was just someone to pick on," said Jessica Lux, 12, who sat one desk away from where the shooting occurred.

Benji Chapman, 12, said: "It's been happening ever since the third or fourth grade. People teased him because he wore sunglasses — they called him Sunny — and because he's fat."

"Everybody always teased him. He was overweight and they called him 'Chubby,'" said Billy Couch, a seventh grader in a nearby classroom.

Nathan warned students Friday that he would be carrying a gun Monday to put an end to the ridicule, Jessica and Benji said.

"He said they wouldn't be picking on him any more," Jessica said. "He said he was going to bring a gun to school, and no one believed him."

When Nathan pulled the gun, students began to taunt him, doubting that it was real, she said. He pointed the gun in the face of one student who on Friday took Nathan's seat, leading to a scuffle between the boys, she said.

Jessica said the boy still didn't believe the gun was real and tried to take it out of Nathan's hand but failed.

Then, Jessica said, "Tim immediately jumped up and he grabbed Nathan's wrists and he was trying to get Nathan to let go. Apparently Tim thought it was a fake gun because when he let go, he went back to his seat sort of laughing."

Nathan then fired a shot at Tim but missed.

Students gasped as the gunshot echoed in the classroom, and some immediately ran from the room as Nathan fired more shots. Tim was hit by one of the shots and staggered out of the room and into a classroom next door.

Benji was sitting in the next room when he saw Tim stumble to the back of the room.

Tim fell on a desk and then he moved back to the front of the class, where he said, "I got shot," Benji said. Crunched over, holding his chest, Tim fell against a wall, leaving a streak of blood, Benji said.

School officials made an announcement on the intercom instructing all teachers to lock their classroom doors.

Harpst said later, "If you ever want a scary feeling, try looking through the school for a student with a gun."

Classes were dismissed after the shooting. By Monday afternoon, custodians had cleaned the classroom where the shootings occurred and patched two bullet holes in the back wall. Five shell casings were found in the room.

Authorities have not determined who owned the gun.

Proposal a 'first step'

MOSCOW — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev considers the Kremlin's proposal to ban medium-range missiles in Europe a "first step" needed to break the deadlock in arms control, Iceland's prime minister reported today.

The Communist Party daily Pravda today quoted Gorbachev as referring to the Soviet proposal as a "tremendous" step toward reaching other East-West accords on disarmament and regional conflicts.

Pravda published remarks by Gorbachev at his meeting Monday with Steingrímur Hermannsson of Iceland. The talks centered on the Soviet decision to seek a separate pact to remove Soviet SS-20s and U.S. Pershing 2 and cruise missiles from Europe.

Police block march

SEOUL, South Korea — Legions of riot police today fired tear gas and fought with protesters to block an opposition-sponsored "peace march" honoring a dissident college student who died under police torture.

There were no immediate reports of clashes in six other provincial cities where thousands of riot police were in place to deter similar marches.

The clashes in Seoul erupted as thousands of people tried to march along sidewalks to mark the 49th day after the death of Park Chong-chul, 21, a Seoul National University student who died by police torture. A 49-day memorial rite is a Buddhist practice to mark the entry of a deceased person's soul into another world.

NATO chief positive

LONDON — NATO's military chief said a proposed Soviet deal to remove mid-range nuclear missiles from Europe should be tied to cuts in shorter-range missiles and other arms.

Western Europe on Monday conditionally welcomed the Kremlin's offer.

"A zero-level proposal in isolation, and I repeat in isolation, would put us back to where we were before 1979," U.S. Gen. Bernard W. Rogers, the alliance's Supreme Allied Commander Europe, said in a speech Monday night to the Royal Institute of International Relations in Brussels.

"In fact, given the Soviet Union's enhancement in the interim of its nuclear and conventional capabilities that threaten us in Western Europe, we would be in a worse position than 1979."

Aftershocks continue

AUCKLAND, New Zealand — Hundreds of strong aftershocks rattled New Zealand's North Island today following a powerful earthquake that drove thousands from their homes, damaged a major earthen dam and injured at least 25 people.

Police said two people were missing after the Monday afternoon quake that tore a mile-long fissure through rolling pastures and woodlands. A team of 40 hazardous waste experts was dispatched to investigate reported spills of toxic chemicals.

"We're getting at least one earthquake a minute appearing at the Tarawera seismometer," said Peter Wood, a state geologist.

Questions, answers about the second W-4 form

By JIM LUTHER

AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Designing one tax-withholding form that every taxpayer can use is akin to making a suit of clothes that fits everybody, the head of the Internal Revenue Service says.

It can't be done, the IRS has concluded. As a result, taxpayers soon will have a choice of withholding forms: the imposing four-page W-4 that was made public last November and the semi-sleek W-4A that was unveiled Monday by Commissioner Lawrence B. Gibbs.

Here are some questions and answers about the forms:

• Q. What was wrong with the November version?

A. Everything, critics say. It was too complex, written in legalese, with a mind-boggling 24-column-wide table of figures.

• Q. And the new one?

A. Simpler and shorter. The IRS says half of all wage-earners will be able to fill out the form in as little as five minutes. They won't have to go beyond six brief paragraphs of instructions, a seven-line worksheet and the seven-line form itself.

• Q. So why didn't the IRS give us the W-4A to start with?

A. When Congress passed the big tax overhaul plan last year, it directed the IRS to come up with a new W-4 that would permit taxpayers to adjust their withholding so it would, as nearly as possible, match their actual tax liability. The form meets that goal. But, as Gibbs said Monday, accuracy is irrelevant if taxpayers can't understand the form.

• Q. So the simpler form is less accurate?

A. Yes. And most people who use the form are more likely to have too much tax withheld from each paycheck.

• Q. But they'll get the money back at the end of the year?

A. Yes. Under the old law and with the pre-1987 W-4, more than three-quarters of taxpayers were overwithheld, many of them deliberately. They received refunds last year averaging nearly $1,000.

• Q. I get a big refund each year to finance our family vacation. What do I do now?

A. You may claim fewer withholding allowances than you are entitled to (each one allows $1,900 a year to escape withholding) or you may use Line 5 on either form to direct your boss to withhold an additional amount from each check.

• Q. I still don't see why we have to have new withholding forms, what with all the taxpayer irritation and confusion they are causing.

A. Two reasons. First, the big 1986 tax law cut tax rates, almost doubled the personal exemption and reduced or eliminated some key deductions. Changes of that magnitude will affect virtually every person's tax bill. Many will get significant tax cuts; some will barely break even; some will pay more.

Second, the new law raises to 90 percent (from 80 percent) the portion of tax liability that must be paid in advance, either through withholding or quarterly estimated payments. For the great majority of taxpayers, the only way to meet that target is change withholding.

Danny Kaye dead at 74

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Danny Kaye, the red-haired clown prince of musical comedy who worked his way from busboy to Broadway and Hollywood, died early today at 74.

Kaye, who was hospitalized Sunday, died at 3:58 a.m. of heart failure brought on by complications of internal bleeding and hepatitis, said Warren Cowan, chairman of Rogers and Cowan public relations firm.

Kaye's wife, Sylvia, and daughter, Dena, were with him when he died at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, Cowan said.

Kaye's performing career spanned television, Broadway, movies and the concert stage. In addition, he was known as UNICEF's longtime "ambassador to the world's children."

Kaye, the red-haired rubber-faced star of such film classics as "White Christmas" and "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty," was reported in extremely critical condition Monday night.

Kaye was released from the hospital last week after spending three weeks being treated for a leg condition, spokesman Ron Wise said.

The Brooklyn-born entertainer got his start as a clowning busboy on the Borscht Belt during the late 1920s and went on to Broadway, Hollywood and the concert stage.

DANNY KAYE

Among his movies are "The Inspector General" in 1948, "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty" in 1946, "Hans Christian Andersen" in 1952 and "White Christmas" in 1954.

Denmark's Queen Margrethe knighted the rubber-faced song-and-dance man in 1983 for his portrayal of the Danish author Hans Christian Andersen in the Hollywood musical. The citation called him "the Pied Piper to the children of the world."

Kaye won Emmy awards for television's "The Danny Kaye Show" in 1963 and best children's special in 1975. He received a special Oscar in 1954.

He also has served as the official permanent ambassador-at-large for the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund.

Kaye conducted some of the world's greatest symphony orchestras, once sang for Queen Elizabeth II and was awarded the American Symphony Orchestra League's gold baton for distinguished service to music and the arts. But he couldn't read music.

In a 1981 performance of the New York Philharmonic, Kaye entered with a quiver of batons, occasionally cued the violins with a leg kick and conducted "Flight of the Bumble Bee" with a flexible red flyswatter.

During one piece, he faced the audience, contorting his rubber face to the music and wisecracking in gibberish German and in British and Bostonian accents.

Conducting, he said afterward, is "the greatest feeling of neurotic power in the world."

Born David Daniel Kaminsky on Jan. 18, 1913, Kaye began his career at summer resorts on the Borscht Belt in New York state's Catskill Mountains.

"He was an all-around performer. He could do anything," said Paul Grossinger of Grossinger's Hotel in the Catskills.

Bigots beware: racism costs

The organized forces of bigotry in this nation were dealt a devastating blow recently when an all-white federal jury in Mobile, Ala., awarded $7 million in damages against the United Klans of America and six current and former Klansmen for the brutal slaying of a black teenager in 1981.

Not only should the landmark judgment bankrupt the 2,500-member organization, it sends an unmistakable signal to other hate groups that they and their members can be held liable for criminal actions.

The case was brought to court by the Alabama chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the family of Michael Donald.

The 19-year-old was kidnapped, beaten savagely with a tree limb, and strangled to death before his body was left hanging from a tree in a racially mixed neighborhood. According to the two Klansmen convicted of the grisly murder, their goal was to discourage blacks from serving on juries and to let everyone know how strong the Klan was in Alabama.

The United Klans of America is only one of the several white-supremacist groups that are part of the national Ku Klux Klan network. All told, the Klan's strength has declined since the 1920, when its membership was estimated to be as high as 5 million. Except for a brief spurt during the 1960s, when the civil-rights movement was hitting its stride, the Klan's ranks have ebbed to an estimated 13,000 persons.

Nevertheless, the wellsprings of intolerance run deep in the United States, as witness the recent events in Howard Beach, N.Y., where a mob of white teen-agers attacked some blacks with baseball bats and chased one man to his death on a roadway.

Nationwide, hundreds of cases of arson, cross-burnings, and vandalism have occurred after minority families have moved into mostly white neighborhoods during the last two years.

The harassing, maiming or killing of human beings because of their color, creed, or religion is not to be tolerated nowadays in the United States. This is the message of the Donald judgment that bigots should understand.

Stardom reaches political offices

Sorny Bono, of Sonny and Cher singing fame, says he will run for mayor of Palm Springs, Calif., in 1988.

Movie star Clint Eastwood, as everyone knows, is mayor of Carmel, Calif.

If this trend continues, the annual meeting of the League of California Cities may be featured in supermarket tabloids.

Looking to heaven for faith and hope

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: What is heaven like? I've thought about this a lot lately, since my mother died a few months ago. She was a very devout person and looked forward to going to heaven, and I wish I had her faith. — Mrs. F.W.

DEAR MRS. F.W.: Heaven is far more glorious than we can ever imagine. "No eye has seen, no ear has heard, no mind has conceived what God has prepared for those who love him" (1 Corinthians 2:9).

At the same time, the Bible certainly gives us some revealing glimpses about heaven's nature. For example, in heaven we will be given new, glorified bodies, and we will no longer have any pain or disappointment. "He will wipe every tear from their eyes. There will be no more death or mourning or crying or pain, for the old order of things has passed away" (Revelation 21:4).

We also will be free from sin, for we will be like Christ. "We know that when he appears, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is" (1 John 3:2). In addition, we will have unbroken fellowship with God. And don't think that we will be bored or that heaven will be dull or monotonous; it will be the most exciting place imaginable, for "his servants will serve him" (Revelation 22:3).

Billy Graham

There is no reason you cannot have the same hope your mother did — the hope of eternal life — if you will accept Christ. You see, there is only one thing that will keep you out of heaven, and that is your sin.

But God loves you, and he sent His only son, Jesus Christ, into the world to take away your sins on the cross. All you have to do is turn to Him and trust Him as your Lord and Savior, and you can do that by a simple prayer of faith today. "For God so loved the world that he gave his one and only Son, that whoever believes in him shall not perish but have eternal life" (John 3:16). Ask Christ into your life without delay.

Coast Guard patrol boats not everything they seem

By JACK ANDERSON and JOSEPH SPEAR

WASHINGTON — Congress may have foisted off an inferior smuggler-chasing patrol boat on the Coast Guard. Officials deny there was any political hanky-panky and insist the boat is a good one, but there seems to be a fishy smell to the whole thing. Here's what we've dug up:

Congress authorized emergency funding several years ago to build 16 new Coast Guard patrol boats for use in its drug-interdiction program. But the boat preferred by the Coast Guard was disqualfied by the courts on a technicality.

So the contract for the construction of 16 patrol boats was granted to Bollinger Shipyards of Louisiana, which manufactures 110-foot craft known as Island Class. The company owner, Don Bollinger, is state chairman of the Republican Party, and his Washington lobbyist, Steven Silver, used to be an assistant to Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska. A later decision to buy up to 37 more Island Class boats came out of the Senate Appropriations subcommittee that Stevens then headed.

Silver insists that politics had no part in the Bollinger contract, and Stevens told us he didn't recall even discussing the matter with the lobbyist. "I don't care where they buy the boat," he said.

But Bollinger Shipyards has a lock on Island Class boats, which are a 20-year-old British design. Bollinger has the U.S. license on them; in addition, the boats' blueprints are based on the metric system, which many other U.S. shipyards don't use.

Politics or not, documents obtained by our associate Corky Johnson indicate that the patrol boats are not ideal craft for catching drug smugglers. Several boats recently delivered have already undergone extensive hull repairs. "The bows on the boats are collapsing. It is sad we are stuck with this thing," a Coast Guard source told us.

Adm. Paul Yost, the Coast Guard commandant, and Mark Stanley,

Jack Anderson

Bollinger's vice president, said the hull problems are easy to repair. Yost said the cracks in the hull may have been caused by running the boats in heavy seas with too much fuel aboard. Stanley said he suspected misuse by Coast Guard crews as the cause of the hull cracks, but said the shipyard will repair them at no cost whenever they occur.

"It is a heck of a good boat," the admiral said. "We are using it now beyond specifications. Congress did not force this boat on us. They said get a boat quickly, and we wanted to get involved in the drug (enforcement) business."

The procurement appears to have been highly unusual, to say the least. Our sources insist that the Island Class boat was forced on the Coast Guard.

After the congressional report, the Coast Guard tried to award Bollinger a sole-source contract. An ad — later revised — appeared in the government's Commerce Business Daily announcing the sole-source contract. The Navy, which handles actual procurement for the Coast Guard, insisted on bids.

Because of its licensing arrangement, though, Bollinger couldn't lose. To get other bids, the government had to pay the company $5.5 million for its design rights. And if another builder were to get the contract, Bollinger would pick up an additional $4 million in design consulting fees.

Ironically, one reason Congress decided to go with an existing boat was to avoid the cost of designing a new one. Our Coast Guard sources say they could have designed a larger, better patrol boat for about $1 million and saved the $5.5 million in design costs paid to Bollinger.

Coast Guard engineers aren't upset just over the 16 Island Class boats already purchased. Congress has ordered the Coast Guard to buy 21 more, with an option for up to 16 beyond that. The contract was awarded recently to Bollinger.

Footnote: Stanley scoffed at the suggestion that politics got Bollinger the contract, pointing out that this was only the company's second government contract in 35 years.

MAN BYTES DOG: The best computer hackers in the world work for the super-secret National Security Agency, which is responsible for the protection of sensitive government computers and supervision of commercial systems as well.

Computer makers submit their latest models and NSA's experts try to find the fatal flaws. In one case, a manufacturer claimed security features that he said were absolutely foolproof.

He wanted the NSA Computer Security Center to test it and then certify it fail-safe. It took the NSA boys just seven minutes to break into the foolproof system.

MINI-EDITORIAL: Reflecting on the ever-spreading Wall Street scandals, we were struck by the fact that the culprits are graduates of the nation's finest business schools, supposedly the best and brightest that the American educational system can produce.

What went wrong? Mandatory business school courses in old-fashioned ethics might help, but we favor a more fundamental approach.

We suspect a few stiff prison sentences would be a lesson that can be understood by even the best-educated swindler.

Urges all to speak up for Irangate

By ART BUCHWALD

There are many citizens in the country who insist the Iran-contra operation is no big deal. Unfortunately they are unable to put their thoughts into words. Perhaps I can be of help. Repeat after me:

"I'm keeping an open mind on Irangate until all the facts are in and the blame is placed on Jimmy Carter where it belongs."

"There are a lot more good people in Iran who need spare parts than there are bad people who want to cut off our legs."

"The United States will not trade arms for hostages, but that doesn't mean we shouldn't give it the old-school try."

"Ollie North will always be a national hero because he showed us that patriotism and immunity are the same thing."

"What would you have done if you were President and Congress said you couldn't give any money to the contras? You would have done what Reagan did — he screened 'Rambo' for the 17th time."

"Poindexter is innocent until proven guilty, but if it turns out he did something wrong he deserves a much better price for his book."

"The President had no idea what was going on in his own White House, and we should all be grateful for this."

"I believe when you get two Israeli arms dealers, one Iranian joker named Ghorbanifar, a Saudi promoter named Khashoggi, a Marine hotshot called North, plus the head of the CIA, and you issue each of them a Swiss bank account number, something is bound to go wrong in Nicaragua."

"People complain because we delivered a chocolate cake and a Bible to the ayatollahs in Tehran. It was a lot cheaper than sending them a dozen roses."

"Bush had nothing to do with Irangate, but I can understand his wanting to back away from the President. After all he is the only Republican presidential candidate who isn't better off today than he was four years ago."

"I'm not for perjury per se but I would rather have it committed by our side than theirs."

"What Irangate boils down to is credibility. We have to choose between those who are telling the truth, those who are lying and those who are taking the Fifth Amendment. Personally I trust people who take the Fifth, because they're officers and gentlemen."

"The thing that gets me the maddest is when they call Irangate another Watergate. Show me a moderate Iranian who was involved in Watergate."

"The worst part about the Iran scandal for conservatives is that it turns people's attention away from the real issues of the country, which are prayers in school and confiscating Playboy from the blind."

"The fact that the money from Iran arms sales has never been accounted for doesn't mean that it didn't go to orphans in Costa Rica."

"Look at it this way. By letting them sample our Hawk missiles we create a new hardware market in Iran. Once they stop burning Americans in effigy we'll have a new generation of satisfied consumers."

"I ask you, who would you rather have in the White House — a weak President who had no idea what his staff was doing, or a strong leader who knew everything that was going on but had no idea what anyone was doing?"

DEAR ABBY: last month I wrote the address of an entertainer. My husband and I went to his concert, and I was for adding to my collection of happy memories. I heard from the entertainer that he still cherishes the from you.

You did not die with clichés; in fact, you were a woman with words, and ended have been a woman by, I needed to tell you.

It's clear from your definition of a widow, never a widow, should be: "A fringing onto the fringes of life, who is totally alone, many people surround you. I wish I could say, 'You believe it or not, this overwhelming it took me two and the words of who came to console. You wonder what away. Well, it is."

Anything goes

Spring-Summer fashion styles vary

ROME (AP) — Nothing goes out of fashion faster than fashion itself. Every six-months designers call on women to abandon the styles of the past season, and fill their wardrobes with new and tantalizing clothes.

If winter is somber and classical, spring is sure to burst with bright colors and romantic styles. Slacks so fashionable one season are out-dated by the next, and hemlines go up and down faster than a roller coaster.

One season the fashionable woman strolls in masculine flats only to totter the next in sexy spikes. And if you haven't pulled all your hair out trying to keep up with the fashion marathon, your hairstyle will change, too.

All over the world, designers delight in tempting their clients with ever-changing styles, but none seem more skilled at this fashion game than the Italians, who pride themselves in being experts on the volatile side of the female psyche.

In October and March in Milan, the top names in Italian ready-to-wear, such as Armani, Ferre, Fendi, Krizia and Versace, present their new collections for the following season.

The spring-summer 1987 look is a major departure from the easygoing, man-tailored style that gave Milan its fashion name. Armani admitted that the new look was a risk but added that he personally had taken the leap to "recapture woman's inner softness."

Hemlines will not be a problem this spring with most designers going the full range from many inches above the knee to midi and even maxi lengths. The conservative set can find many models that hover discreetly at the knee.

Daytime footwear is casually low, but by night the spike heel makes a bold comeback, soaring to a good 4 inches for the sexier fashions.

Jewelry spells good news for the pocketbook. Precious metals are out, replaced by plastic and natural materials such as wood, bone and seashells. Size is all-important, especially for Missoni, with his huge plastic loop earrings, and Ferre, who completes his beachwear with heavy wooden bracelets and necklaces.

Words of love help widows bear the pain

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago last month I wrote you asking for the address of a famous female entertainer. My husband was killed two days after we had attended her concert, and I wanted to thank her for adding to my precious collection of happy memories. I never heard from the entertainer, but I still cherish the letter I received from you.

You did not disregard my pain with cliches; instead you comforted me with simple, loving words, and ended with, "He must have been a wonderful man." Abby, I needed to hear that! Thank you.

It's clear from Webster's Dictionary definition that Webster was never a widow. The definition should be: "A frightened woman hanging onto threads of sanity, one who is totally alone, no matter how many people surround her."

I wish I could go to every widow and say, "You are not crazy, and believe it or not, you will survive this overwhelming pain."

It took me two years to understand the words of a young widow who came to console me. She said, "You wonder when the pain will go away. Well, it never goes away completely, but I promise it becomes more bearable as times goes on."

Dear Abby

My dear widow friends: Be forgiving and understanding with others, and always remember that we, too, were once oblivious to this kind of pain. Counseling is very helpful, but the bottom line is "self" — self-searching, self-understanding and, most important, self-love. Be good to yourself, and you'll be good to others.

TERRY

DEAR TERRY: Your message to widows is well worth the space.

Thank you for wanting to help others as you have been helped. Now a word from a recent widow:

DEAR ABBY: May I elaborate on your comment to "Yea or Nay?" who wanted to know about sending a sympathy card three months after a death. I'm glad you said "Yea." Abby, the cards received later are appreciated as much as those received in the first deluge of mail. Sometimes, more.

1. Send a card or a personal note. I have read and re-read those notes many times. This is an important part of the grieving process — to know that others cared.

2. Don't forget us at the holiday season. I was sadly amazed at the number of greeting cards I didn't receive from friends I had always heard from. We widows and widowers need to get through the holiday time, and it's very important to hear from loved ones.

3. I have just passed the first-year milestone of my dear husband's death. I received many calls and personal notes to let me know they remembered, and missed him, too.

In closing, if there's a doubt in your mind, write or get in touch. The fact that you care will far outweigh the moment of sadness that is there anyway. Sign me...

A RECENT WIDOW

DEAR ABBY: I am a single parent of a lovely 15-month-old daughter. Her father (I'll call him Brad) and his family do not acknowledge her socially, but Brad is paying child support.

Brad plans to marry in three weeks, and says he does not intend to tell his fiancée that he has a daughter to support. I feel that his fiancée has a right to know before she marries him.

Would it be wrong for me to tell her? I am fairly certain that nobody in Brad's family will. If I were in her shoes, I would consider it a favor to be told.

SUZIE'S MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: The bride-to-be has a right to know. Tell Brad that if he doesn't tell her, you will. Then do it, if you have to. But I'm betting you won't have to.

Health care discussed at meeting

Naomi Hunt, county extension agent, presented a program "Controlling Health Care Costs" to the City Extension Homemakers Club on Feb. 27th.

She said that one should concentrate on staying well with proper exercise and balanced meal that limits fats, sweets and alcohol.

Stress can be controlled by adjusting to life's changes, having hobbies and getting adequate rest. Other factors brought out were ways to control and save on drug costs and insurance.

The group met at the home of Jowili Etchison and Jo Reynolds, former member, and Hunt were visitors.

Members of the club answered roll call with the name favorite magazine.

Next meeting will be March 13 at the home of Salena Sewell.

Emotional stress reason for irregularity

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Our 18-year-old daughter recently left for college. She has since reported to us that her periods have ceased. So far as we know she is quite healthy. The idea of pregnancy has been broached with her, but she assures me that this is not the case (whew!). The only difference might be in her lifestyle. We know she is under severe mental pressure to achieve and get the best possible grades. Could that be considered a factor? Should we be concerned? — Mrs. R.I.

With pregnancy ruled out, things like sudden weight loss or unusual physical activity, can be suspected. Emotional stress is a more unlikely, but distinctly possible contributor to menstrual irregularity, even amenorrhea (absence of periods.)

Dr. Donohue

Doctors once referred to a phenomenon called the "boarding school syndrome." In that, the young women leaves home to enter an alien environment, becomes emotionally distraught and experiences loss of periods. If this is your daughter's problem, it should correct itself as she becomes more at ease with her new surroundings.

You should have her seen by the family doctor when she next comes home, if the amenorrhea has not been corrected by then.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have a gout question. If a person has had a painful gout attack (big toe pain), will he eventually have it spread to other joints if he doesn't have preventive treatment? Do you have material on gout? — V.K.

Recurrence of pain in other joints is the rule. So long as the high uric acid level in the blood is not controlled (with medicines), the person usually will experience the recurrence about a year after the initial attack. The booklet "Gout: The Modern Way to Stop

It" is what you want. Other readers may order by writing me in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and one dollar.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: What causes pernicious anemia? — Mrs. L.Z.

The most common cause is lack of the intrinsic factor, a stomach substance without which vitamin B-12 cannot be absorbed. Rarely, the vitamin deficiency arises from a lack of food intake. Meat is a prime source of vitamin B, so those who are on a strict vegetarian diet can develop the problem unless they get supplements.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Yeoman admits Cougars given cash

HOUSTON (AP) — Former University of Houston Coach Bill Yeoman admitted to investigators that he gave cash to his football players on occasion, but never more than $35, a memorandum released by the school says.

Yeoman, who resigned last fall after serving as the Cougars' head football coach for 25 seasons, defended his actions on the grounds the money was given in small amounts and was generally given for humanitarian purposes.

The memo, released Monday, quoted Yeoman as saying he gave money to players for gas for their cars, utilities or rent for players' parents. The former coach said such money was not given to the players, but went directly to the parents.

"For example, if one of the player's parents could not pay rent and were about to be evicted, Coach Yeoman would provide the money for that month's rent," the memorandum written last July says.

The admissions by Yeoman were released in the memorandum as a result of a school in-house investigation by the Houston law firm of Lidell, Sapp and Zivley looking into allegations that Yeoman and his assistant coaches had paid players in violation of NCAA rules.

The former coach told the investigators some of the money came from his own pocket and occasionally he called on alumni to contribute money.

"I have no comment now, tomorrow, next week or next month,"

Yeoman said Monday. Attorneys for the school said they would not comment pending completion of the NCAA investigation.

That investigation is in the preliminary stages.

The in-house investigation emerged after several former Cougar football players said that while on the team they either received cash from coaches, bought gasoline with the coaches' school credit cards or had car repairs made free of charge through arrangements made by the coaches.

Some former players also cited payments for a wedding, an abortion and rent. All are in violation of NCAA rules.

Tech may or may not get punished

LUBBOCK (AP) — A news conference was called for this afternoon to announce any NCAA sanctions against Texas Tech for football recruiting violations.

Texas Tech president Dr. Lauro Cavazos was to preside over the 5:30 p.m. news conference, sports information director Joe Hornaday said Monday.

Although athletic director T. Jones, faculty representative Dr. Bob Sweazy, and the school's legal counsel, Pat Campbell, were to be there, no one from the NCAA was scheduled to attend, Hornaday said.

Texas Tech officials appeared before the NCAA Committee on Infractions on Feb. 15, in Coronado, Calif., to face allegations of recruiting violations between 1982-84.

Allegations against Tech involved ex-coach Jerry Moore, four assistants and six recruits. They ranged from buying a recruit a meal at a Dairy Queen to cash inducements.

All such inducements would be violations of NCAA rules.

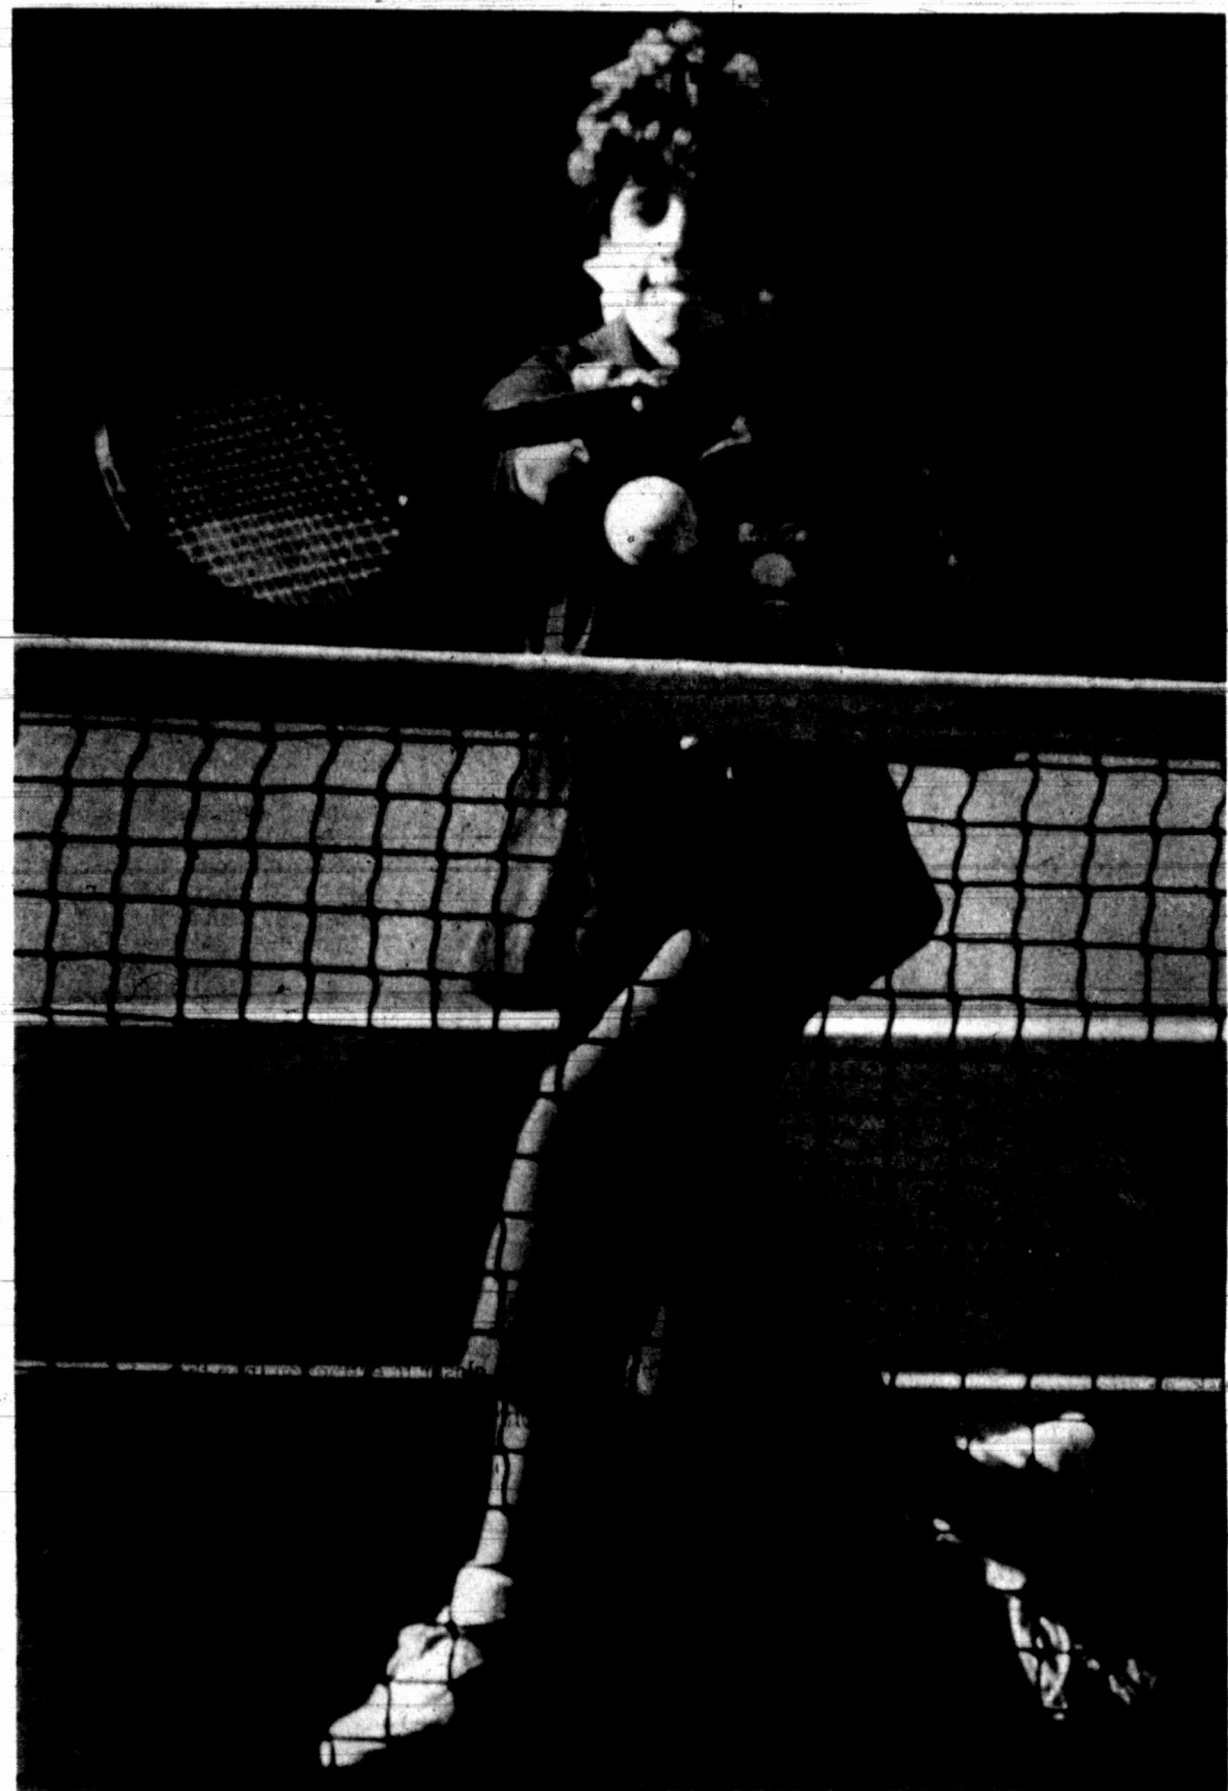

None of the coaches involved is still at the school. Moore was fired in 1985 after compiling a 16-37-2 record in five seasons. Assistants Jim Bates, Tom Wilson, Richard Ritchie and Rodney Allison left before 1985.

Among other charges, Chris Pryor of Converse Judson High School allegedly was offered a pair of ostrich-skin boots and a trip to Las Vegas, and he and high school teammate Norman Lambert allegedly were given cash after signing letters of intent with Texas Tech.

An NCAA report also alleged that money was given to Ronald Morris, who ended up playing for Southern Methodist, and Morris' mother. It alleges Morris received $250 in cash on one occasion, as much as $40 on Tech visits to Morris' home and a red sweatshirt with the university's logo.

"I never asked for anything," Morris said. "It was always given to me."

Another SMU player, quarterback Bobby Watters, allegedly was provided meals and transportation during his visit to Texas Tech.

Raceway in the investor hunting stage

By EDDIE CURRAN
Staff Writer

The promoters of Sunstar Raceways have an $8 million mountain to climb.

At a press conference Monday at the offices of the accounting firm Green & Fillingim, Max Green said that the group has begun soliciting investors for the $8 million project. He said two investors declined their offer, but several others are being contacted.

When asked if he thought the money could be raised, he responded, "If they locate the right investors and put together the right package — yes."

Sunstar Raceways would be a multi-facility racing complex to include: a drag boat strip, a drag car strip, an oval track, and a truck and tractor pull area.

The idea for Sunstar was conceived by Jimmy and Dottie Leffler of Big Spring. Jimmy Leffler said the complex would seat a maximum of 40,000 people, and would employ 150 people.

He also announced that Sunstar

Raceways, which has been incorporated, would sponsor its first race on April 4 of this year. The race will be an "off road challenge series," and will be run in Howard County. He said the land for the race has been leased, and that he mapped out the track Sunday.

He said it will cost $5 to watch the race, with no charge for children under 12. Concessions will be sold.

Drivers from Midland, Odessa, San Antonio, Oklahoma City and Albuquerque are expected to race, he said. Another off-road race is scheduled for Oct. 3, he added.

In October, the Lefflers said they were trying to raise $6,000 for a feasibility study to show investors. Monday, Green said he did the feasibility study, and for considerably less than $6,000.

"We're now able to actively seek investors," Green said. "It's a high risk investment, and naturally, we have stated this in our prospectus."

When asked what type of investor the group is contacting, Green replied, "Let's classify them as sophisticated investors."

Big black cloud stops the tennis for a day

KEY BISCAIYNE, Fla. (AP) — Just when everything seemed to be going right for the International Players Championship, a big black cloud settled, literally, over the two-week tennis tournament.

Rain, the bane of all outdoor tennis events, came down in torrents Monday at the new International Tennis Center, bringing play to a halt after only two singles matches had been completed.

Sweden's Stefan Edberg, the No. 2 men's seed, whipped Kevin Curren 7-4, 6-3, 6-4 in just 93 minutes, and West Germany's Claudia Kohde-Kilsch, the No. 9 women's seed, outlasted seventh-seeded Zina Garrison 6-4, 4-6, 6-1.

Before the rain fell, tournament officials were basking in the sunshine of success. The first week at the event's third new site in as many years had been nearly flawless.

Crowds of 14,995 on Saturday and 13,335 on Sunday chose tennis over the Doral Open, the Flamingo Stakes, the Miami Grand Prix and the beach. And tournament promoter Butch Buchholz expects big turnouts later this week when the higher seeds meet.

The only problem is the weather. Forecasters predict a strong possibility of rain throughout the week. They also caution that predicting weather in South Florida is far from foolproof.

With that in mind, a full slate of matches was scheduled today, beginning with the continuation of the three halted by Monday's rain.

Fourth-seeded Yannick Noah of France led Johan Kriek 4-6, 6-3, 5-3 and Slobodan Zivojinovic of Yugoslavia was ahead of ninth-seeded Miloslav Mecir of Czechoslovakia 6-2, 0-3. In a fourth-round women's contest, sixth-seeded Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia was up 5-7, 7-5, 3-2 over 13th-seeded Lori McNeil.

Both of the top seeds also were scheduled to play today. Martina Navratilova meets unseeded Nathalie Tauziat of France in the first women's quarterfinal, set as the third match on the stadium court. Following that match, Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia takes on 16th-seeded Brad Gilbert in a fourth-round match.

Hawks KO Hill with five homers, 21 runs HILLSBORO — The Howard College Hawks scored 21 runs on 15 hits to destroy Hill Junior College 21-1 in the Hawks' conference opener.

The game, scheduled for nine innings, was halted after seven innings because of the ten-run rule.

Howard Landry went the distance for Howard, and allowed just one hit, a bunt single in the seventh. The one run was unearned — it resulted from the only two Howard errors.

Neither team scored in the second inning, but the Hawks did a double-headers' worth of damage in the second inning. They scored 10 runs on the strength of three hits and some wild Hill pitching. Eight Hawks walked in the inning, and Hill committed two errors.

Randy Deal had two hits in the second, including a homer. Deal went four for five and knocked in six runs. Joel Chimelis added a two-run double.

In the third inning, Ernesto Castro singled, and Juan Rodriguez batted him in. Deal singled Rodriguez home, and Perry Shock hit a homer. The Hawks led 13-0 after three innings.

In the fourth inning, Chimelis and Castro each hit solo homers.

In the last inning, Thad Webber hit a three-run homer and Deal hit a two-run single.

In all, the Hawks hit five homers. Webber had five rbi's, and Hill walked 14 batters. Every Hawk that played got a hit. It was Landry's third win without a loss.

Castro and Webber are scheduled to start in today's games.

Steers open at home today

The Big Spring Steers play their home opener at 4 p.m. today against Abilene Cooper, the sixth ranked 5A team in the state.

At noon today, Big Spring coach John Velasquez still wasn't sure who would start. Right-hander Timmy Gutierrez, who was ineligible until 3:30 p.m. last Friday, will warm up. Velasquez said he would use him if he looked good.

If not, the coach said he would start either Aaron Allen or James Thompson, both left-handers.

Cooper is 2-0, and the Steers are 0-1 after a loss to Odessa Permian Friday.

Car show coming to Big Spring

There will be a car show at the Howard County Fair Barns on the weekend of March 14-15.

The admission will be $2 for children and $4 for adults.

Jordan named 'Player of Week'

NEW YORK (AP) — Chicago Bulls guard Michael Jordan, who averaged 39.8 points and 7.5 rebounds in four games last week, was named the NBA Player of the Week, the league announced.

Jordan also averaged 3.5 steals, 2.8 assists and 2.5 blocked shots in leading the Bulls to a 3-1 record, including victories over Central Division rivals Atlanta and Milwaukee.

Jordan, the NBA's leading scorer, had 58 points in a victory over New Jersey on Thursday. It was his career-high for a regular-season game.

Parrish, Phillies resume talks

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies have resumed negotiations with free-agent catcher Lance Parrish. The Associated Press learned.

The Phillies and Parrish agreed on a one-year, $1 million contract, but negotiations collapsed 10 days ago when the former Detroit catcher and his agent refused to include a clause promising not to sue major league baseball.

Parrish's agent Tom Reich had indicated several times he would charge baseball with illegally and maliciously preventing Parrish from signing a contract. But he also said he would exempt the Phillies from any suit charging baseball with conspiring to prevent movement of major league free agents.

Terrapin caught with coke

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — University of Maryland forward David Gregg has been suspended from the basketball team for a year, retroactive to the start of this season, for alleged cocaine possession, according to a published report.

Tuesday's editions of the Washington Post reported that the Student Judicial Board suspended the 6-foot-9 forward, although he didn't play this season, according to a source familiar with the case.

Gregg, who will have three years' eligibility remaining, allegedly was with All-American Len Bias the morning he died of cocaine intoxication in his dormitory room. He and junior forward Terry Long, who also was believed to be with Bias before he died, were indicted by a Prince George's County grand jury on counts of cocaine possession as well as obstruction of justice for allegedly removing evidence from the dormitory room.

Rebels retain top spot in poll

NEW YORK (AP) — Nevada-Las Vegas, the only major-college basketball team with 30 victories, remained No. 1 in The Associated Press poll, the fifth consecutive week it has held the top ranking.

The Runnin' Rebels, 30-1 and regular-season champions of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association, received 50 first-place votes and 1,244 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters.

North Carolina, 27-2, held the No. 2 spot with 13 first-place votes and 1,210 points. Purdue, 23-3, jumped from sixth to third with 1,118 points.

Indiana, 23-4, dropped one spot to fourth with 946 points, one more than DePaul, 25-2. Iowa, 25-4, jumped from seventh to sixth with 935 points, while Georgetown, 23-4, also improved one place from last week with 914 points.

Temple, 29-3, fell from fifth to eighth place. Alabama, 23-4, jumped one spot to ninth with 799 points, while Syracuse, 24-5, rounded out the Top Ten with 654 points.

Lloyd's the reason UT's numero uno

By MARK WANGRIN

Austin American-Statesman
AUSTIN (AP) — She'll sit there and smile a lot. An aw-shucks smile. She'll pause a lot, trying to choose her words carefully as she takes a low-key approach on the subject she's discussing. She tries to make sure she's not misunderstood, but she's never sure.

Clearly, Andrea Lloyd's favorite topic of conversation isn't Andrea Lloyd.

The forward on the No. 1-ranked University of Texas women's basketball team doesn't crave the limelight. She tolerates it.

Lloyd tries just to blend in, be a team player. Texas coach Jody Conradt clearly remembers an AAU game years ago, in which Lloyd kept passing the ball to much less-talented teammates rather than taking the open shot herself.

But anyone who can shoot as she can, drive toward the basket as she can, rebound, handle the ball, play defense and just plain play basketball as she can, doesn't stay in the shadows very long.

"It's amazing because she's pretty flashy," Conradt said. "How many 6-foot-2 blondes do you see on the basketball court?"

Lloyd doesn't pile up the outstanding statistics. She averages 14.3 points and 9.1 rebounds a game, neither of which ranks among the national leaders. Yet some experts consider her the best women's player in the country. And opposing coaches are quick to back that up.

"She's the secret baking powder in their cake," SMU Coach Welton Brown said.

Houston Coach Greg Williams agreed: "She's so good it makes me sick."

Teammates say Lloyd is a great rebounder not because of her height or quickness but because of her anticipation.

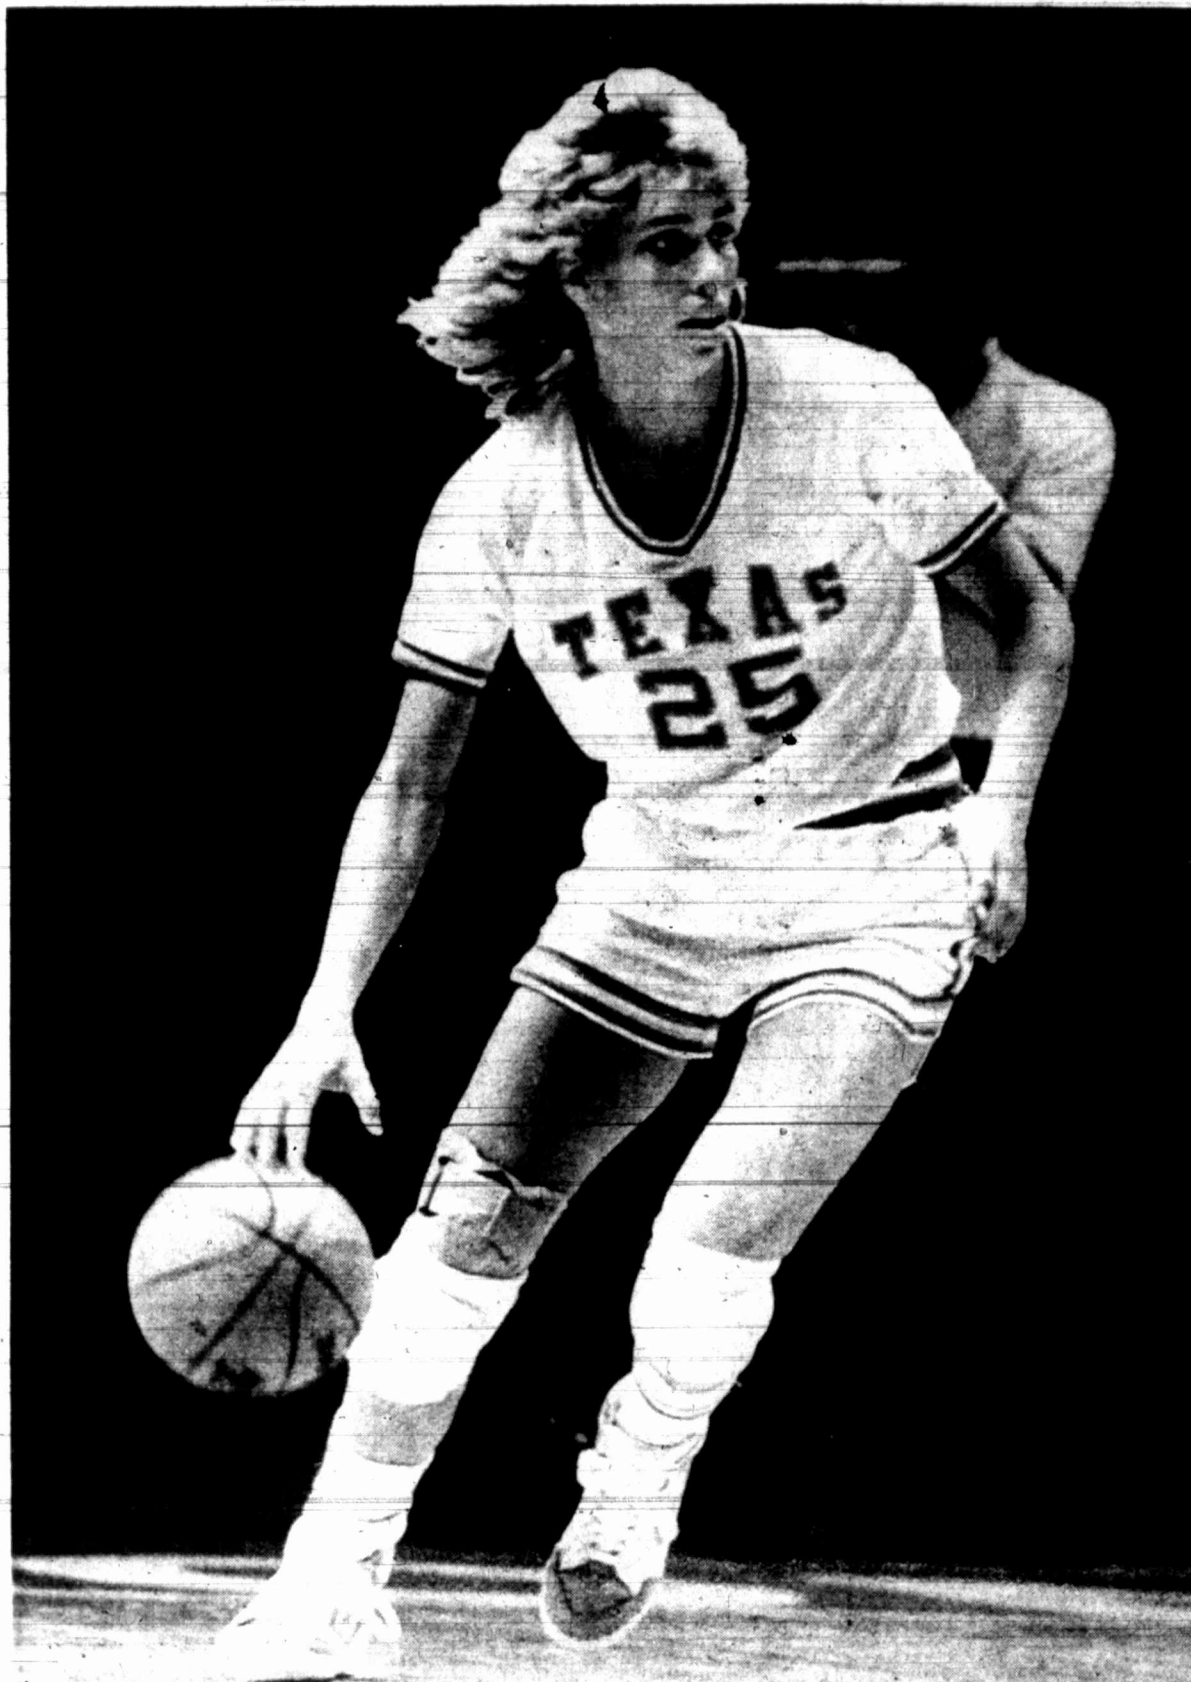

"It seems like she's always around the ball when it comes off the glass," said teammate Yolunda Wimbish. "Just out of nowhere, Andi will come to the spot."

She came to the University of Texas after being a three-time Idaho high school player of the year. As a child, she played boys' Little League baseball and flag football.

"She does so many things that go unnoticed to the normal fan, even to the coaches until they study the films," Williams said. "What she does goes beyond coaching."

Earlier this season, Texas edged Houston 79-73 behind a 15-point and 15-rebound performance from Lloyd.

"One time late in the game, she was the only girl back on a two-on-

Andrea Lloyd, forward on the number one ranked Lady Longhorn basketball team, dribbles downcourt against the University of Houston in Texas' final regular season game Sunday. Many consider Lloyd the best woman's player in the country.

one," said Williams. "She beat my two. She cut off the passing lane and forced my player to take a course away from the basket. Then she got the rebound. Later she put in an offensive rebound. When I look back at the game, and it was close — only one point difference then — hey, those things add up." Her environment forced Lloyd to mature early. Her mother was killed in a car accident when Andrea was only a year old. Her grandparents, Bob and Louise, became her legal guardians, and her father, Noel, became more like a brother to her. When she came to UT, she seemed extremely quiet and shy.

"She was real hard to get to know," said redshirt junior Paulette Moegle, who roomed with Lloyd when they both were freshmen. "She wasn't a Texas athlete. Texas athletes have the stigma of smiling all the time. Now, she's just another Texan."

With the leadership of last year's senior class, Lloyd comfortably could take her back-seat role. When those players left after last year's NCAA title, Lloyd became the heiress apparent. "Generally that's not her nature," Conradt said.

Conradt talked to her lone senior about that. Several times. "We probably talked about it more than any part of my game," Lloyd said. "She knew I'd have to work on it."

Then came Lloyd's moment of truth. On Dec. 14, Tennessee beat Texas 85-78, the Lady Horns' first loss in 42 games.

Texas needed Lloyd. "We blew it at the end," Conradt said. "When the team is out of control, somebody has to slow you down until you regain a foothold."

Lloyd was held to two points and seven rebounds. The player she was guarding, Bridgette Gordon, had 26 points, the most scored by a UT opponent this year.

"That made me so mad," Lloyd said. "I was so embarrassed after that game because I let the girl do so many things I shouldn't have. I said I wouldn't let it happen again. I realized I had to be more assertive."

Williams has noticed the difference. "Sometimes young players have to be hit with a two-by-four to wake up," he said. "I think that game did it to Andrea."

Lloyd began taking some of the shots she'd been passing up, particularly those from around the free-throw circle. "I think by not taking the shots I could have, I was hurting the team," she said.

Since the Tennessee game — 21 straight wins ago — Lloyd has scored in double figures every game. Along with point guard Beverly Williams, who's also developed into a team leader, Lloyd helped UT stay together during a time when injuries claimed center Doreatha Conwell and forward Clarissa Davis.

"I believe Andi is the player who will never choke," Moegle said. "She'll still push, still try, no matter how bad things get. If nothing's working, she'll just do something else."

Pretty soon, Lloyd will have to face that decision on a larger scale. She hopes to make this year's Pan Am Games team — which Conradt will coach — and is aiming toward a berth on the 1988 Olympic team.

SMU faculty rep
says Mustangs
did 'right thing'

DALLAS (AP) — Despite the fact the Southern Methodist football program may be crippled for years, the school's faculty representative to the NCAA told students that SMU "did the right thing" by coming clean on recruiting violations.

About 100 students showed up Monday for a forum sponsored by the SMU Student Senate featuring a panel discussion with Interim President William Stallcup, NCAA faculty representative Lonnie Kliver and student body president Trevor Pearlman.

It was the first time since the NCAA Committee on Infractions announced its sanctions against the school Wednesday that top university officials had met face-to-face with students. SMU will play no football in 1987 and play only seven away games in 1988, in addition to various other penalties that would affect the program until 1990.

"I think we did what we had to do and in the way we had to do it to discover the full extent of our problems and attempt to restore the integrity and respect of our athletic programs," Stallcup said.

Kliver acknowledged the controversy surrounding the school's decision to cooperate with the investigation into NCAA violations and to grant immunity to the people involved with player payoffs.

"Every road looks different depending on where you're standing on that road," he said.

"I would have preferred our sources to identify themselves and make a clean breast of the problems," Kliver said following the two-hour meeting. "That option simply wasn't available."

Kliver said that "under the circumstances we had no alternative" but to promise immunity and confidentiality to people involved in the investigation. He said neither the school nor the NCAA has the name of the booster allegedly responsible for $61,000 in payments to players.

While some students at the forum expressed their hope for the future of SMU football, several others questioned the decision, saying the school was being punished for the actions of a few people.

"Everybody feels very victimized," said second year law student Doyle Glass.

Meanwhile, the Southwest Conference Council said Monday it will allow SMU football players to transfer to any of the other SWC schools and not have to wait a year before playing.

Fighting Irish wins 20th, now ranked 20th; Navy earns bid

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — At the beginning of the college basketball season, Notre Dame's Fighting Irish didn't show much fight.

"When we played Western Kentucky, we were a horrible basketball team," Coach Digger Phelps said of the Irish's season-opening loss last December.

But things have certainly changed for Notre Dame. The Irish moved into the national rankings in the No. 20 spot this week after upsetting DePaul and captured their 20th victory Monday night by defeating Brooklyn, 76-57.

"We're excited about our 20th win, especially with the problems we had at the beginning of the year," said Phelps, whose Irish were the only ranked team to play Monday night.

Brooklyn Coach Mark Reiner attests to Notre Dame's ability to play hard despite the loss of four seniors to graduation and a key freshman to Proposition 48.

"Notre Dame is one of the hottest teams in the country right now," Reiner said. "Sometimes you feel good playing teams like this. They didn't come out and overpower us, but before we knew it, they were up by 10."

Donald Royal led the Irish, 20-7, with a game-high 20 points, including 8-for-9 on the free throw line.

The balanced scoring for the Irish included Mark Stevenson with 12 points and David Rivers and Scott Hicks with 11 each.

"David is the person most responsible for what we've done," Phelps said of his star backcourt player. "He nearly died. He isn't entirely well, but he adjusted his game and he still has everyone else playing better."

Conference Tournaments
Colonial Athletic Association

David Robinson scored 23 points, including a key three-point play early in the second half, to lead Navy to the CAA title with a 53-50 win over North Carolina-Wilmington. Robinson put the Midshipmen ahead to stay with his key basket and foul shot with 17:13 left.

"I think this year's team's goal right now is the Final Four," Navy's Carl Liebert said. "I think we feel like if we come out to play on any given night, we can beat anybody."

Navy, winning its 13th straight game, improved its record to 26-5 and captured the CAA crown for the third consecutive year. The victory also improved the Midshipmen's overall mark against North Carolina-Wilmington to 8-0.

Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference
Ed Golden hit two free throws with 1:14 left in overtime to give Fairfield the lead as the Stags rallied from an 18-point second-half deficit to defeat Iona 73-70 and capture their second straight MAAC Conference title.

It was a miraculous comeback for the Stags, who only got to overtime because A.J. Wynder hit an off-balance 17-foot jumper at the buzzer to tie the game at 65.

Missouri Valley Conference
Byron Boudreaux made a three-point shot with 25 seconds left to break a 56 tie and David Moss added two free throws as Tulsa defeated Southern Illinois 61-56 in the semifinals of the MVC playoffs.

The Golden Hurricane will face Wichita State in Wednesday's championship game. Sasha Radunovich scored 18 points, including a game-winning jump shot with 38 seconds to play, to lead Wichita State to a 56-53 victory over Illinois State in the other semifinal.

Ohio Valley Conference
Marcel Boyce scored a game-high 29 points to lead Akron over Youngstown 103-74 in the first round of the Ohio Valley tournament.

Tyrone Howard scored five points in a 12-2 spurt at the start of the second half that carried Eastern Kentucky over Murray State 89-75.

Senior Darryl Bedford's 24 points and 12 rebounds led Austin Peay to a come-from-behind 78-76 victory over Morehead State.

Others
Senior forward Dave Kipper scored 17 of his season-high 20 points in the first half to lead the Providence to a 97-80 Big East win over Villanova. Senior guard Billy Donovan added 28 points and a game-high 11 assists for the Friars, scoring 10 straight Providence points in the waning minutes of the game from the free-throw line.

The Rockets feast on a 'Gilmore sandwich'

By The Associated Press

You've seen those 7-foot-long submarine sandwiches. That's what Houston's Akeem Olajuwon and Robert Reid made out of San Antonio center Artis Gilmore in the clutch Monday night.

The Rockets were clinging to a 100-98 lead when San Antonio's Alvin Robertson whipped a pass to Gilmore. But with Olajuwon on one side and Reid on the other, the only way Gilmore could get to the ball was to foul.

Reid canned two free throws with 12 seconds remaining and Houston knocked off the Spurs 105-100 for their fifth triumph in as many meetings this season.

"We had to play defense in order to win," Houston Coach Bill Fitch said. "Defense is our game. If you score more than 101 points on us, you will probably beat us."

The third-place Rockets remained 6½ games out in the Midwest Division when Dallas trounced Phoenix 135-112. Elsewhere, it was Atlanta 121, Washington 99; Sacramento 117, Denver 114 and Seattle 123, Cleveland 107.

Olajuwon led the way for Houston with 32 points and Reid had 21. For San Antonio, Alvin Robertson scored 26 and Mike Mitchell 20.

Mavericks 135, Suns 112
Dallas won at home for the fifth straight time by drubbing Phoenix. The Mavericks are 25-5 at Reunion Arena.

"I said at the start of the season that in order for us to improve on last year's record we would have to take advantage of our home court," said Rolando Blackman, who scored 25 points. "We are doing that. Also, I wanted to come out tonight and be aggressive since we had looked so bad in our last game (a 123-98 loss at San Antonio). We did that, too."

The Mavericks never trailed against Phoenix and led by 33 points late in the third quarter. Meanwhile, Phoenix lost its seventh consecutive game and second straight under interim Coach Dick Van Arsdale, who replaced the fired John MacLeod last Thursday.

"It was a tough day at the office," Van Arsdale said. "I don't think you could say that we were ever in this one. We tried everything. The problem was not necessarily offensively, but on defense."

"I've been telling our players that the team that plays aggressive defense wins the games. It's so hard to play a team as good as Dallas after they got beat so badly by San Antonio. We just need to go and try and regroup."

Larry Nance led the Suns with 25 points. James Donaldson had 22 points and Mark Aguirre 21 for Dallas.

Hawks 121, Bulls 99
Kevin Willis scored 26 points and grabbed 17 rebounds as Atlanta stretched its winning streak to three games and climbed within 1½ games of first-place Detroit in the Central Division.

The Hawks, who were led by Dominique Wilkins' 33 points, blew a 13-point lead in the second period, then pulled away again in the third quarter behind Randy Wittman's 12 points. An 8-0 run late in the period, capped by Wilkins' layup with 3:21 left, extended the margin to 84-66.

Jeff Malone had 22 points for Washington, which slipped back to third place in the Eastern Division, one-half game behind Philadelphia and 1½ in back of Boston.

Kings 117, Nuggets 114
Mark Olberding hit all 13 of his free throws and scored a season-high 21 points to lead visiting Sacramento.

The Kings got 24 points each from Eddie Johnson and Otis Thorpe, who also had 15 rebounds, and 23 from Reggie Theus in handing Denver its 10th loss in the last 12 games.

Sacramento took the lead for good 102-100 on two free throws by Joe Kleine with 4:21 left. The Kings led by four points on several occasions but a layup by Denver's Danny Schayes with nine seconds to go trimmed it to 115-114. Olberding then made his last two free throws.

Darrell Walker sparked Denver off the bench with 20 points, Alex English had 26 and Lafayette Lever 15 points, plus 16 rebounds and 10 assists, his 13th "triple double" of the season.

SuperSonics 123, Cavaliers 107
Seattle's Tom Chambers scored 36 points, including six in a row to defuse a fourth-quarter Cleveland rally, as the Sonics won their third straight game. Leading 106-100, Dale Ellis hit a 3-point jump shot and Chambers scored his six straight points for a 115-100 lead with 2:42 remaining.

Seattle used a 25-5 spurt beginning late in the first period to open an early 16-point lead. Maurice Lucas, who came off the bench to score 18 points, hit a 19-foot jumper to give the Sonics the lead for good 32-30 with 10:59 left in the second period.

DENNIS THE MENACE

"YEAH, SHE'S HERE." "JUST SOME LADY WHO WANTED TO KNOW IF YOU'RE HOME."

THE FAMILY CIRCUS

"But she PUNCHED me! Aren't girls supposed to slap?"

Your Daily HOROSCOPE from the CARROLL RIGTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR WED., MARCH 4, 1987

GENERAL TENDENCIES: It's a great day for producing practical and down-to-earth results. Handle those material concerns in such a fashion that you will be able to forge ahead into new prosperity.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) If you study both your monetary requirements and assets, you can devise a fine plan for greater abundance.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Plan how to improve your health and appearance and follow through. Be with fine friends tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Listen to your mate's problems and reach a better understanding. This brings about greater closeness.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Study better ways of convincing your friends of your true affection for them.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Contact a bigwig who needs support for some public aim. Adhere to your regular vocation and make progress now.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) If you study all the factors and details connected with it, that new venture can be quite successful.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A person in business is willing to be of assistance to you. Talk over a joint venture with your mate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You can easily convince a partner to help you with a project that is vital. Gain more support in the business world.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) If you persevere in the work you have going, you can get excellent results. Take it easy tonight, and rest.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Find out what an entertainment will cost and then decide whether or not it is worth your while.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Try to make your home more functional. If you invite anyone in tonight, make sure you feel comfortable with them.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Much data can be gathered now that will get you ahead in the days to come. Be happy with friends tonight.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will want the finer things in life, although of a practical nature. One who is apt to ponder over something too long before reaching a conclusion, so teach your son, or daughter, to speed up the thinking process. If not, others can get ahead in the race for success.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Health commissioner projects AIDS future in Texas

By SUZANNE GAMBOA
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — If Texans don't change their sexual behavior and take steps to combat the spread of AIDS, they can expect to be holding nine funerals a day for victims of the deadly disease, the state health commissioner says.

"The future, in terms of the number of cases, is ominous," said Dr. Robert Bernstein, state health commissioner.

Bernstein, who just returned from a national conference on AIDS in Atlanta, said the state already has 2,067 confirmed cases of acquired immune deficiency syndrome. The deadly disease attacks the body's immunological system and is believed to be predominantly sexually transmitted.

Texas ranks fourth in the nation in confirmed AIDS cases. Of those cases, 1,290 of the victims are dead, said Bernstein.

"There is no vaccine to prevent the infection, no proved drugs to check the virus. If there is no change among individuals from risky to safer behavior, and most especially no action from us all now, then we really can expect the worst," Bernstein said.

The worst, he said, is a projected 16,200 cases of AIDS in Texas in less than five years.

In that case, he said, 11,000 people in the state would be dead from AIDS by 1991. About 240,000 would be infected with the AIDS virus and about 60,000 of those would have AIDS by 1996.

"That would be about nine AIDS funerals a day in Texas," he said. "One of the worst mistakes we can make is to be complacent or apathetic about this problem."

Bernstein said compulsory testing of people is unnecessary, but said testing should be offered routinely at sexually transmitted disease clinics and drug dependency programs.

"This should always be done with the patient's knowledge and right of refusal," he said.

Several lawmakers have introduced bills that would prohibit compulsory testing and allow test results to be confidential.

"We hope with this legislation to encourage voluntary testing so that it will help us in our efforts in this state to work for the prevention of AIDS and this terrible epidemic," said Rep. Nancy McDonald, D-El Paso.

The state health department currently is spending about $1 million for counseling AIDS victims, educating people about the disease and testing for AIDS, he said.

Bernstein said the department is asking the Legislature for about $1.4 million for the next two years to expand counseling, antibody testing and increase surveillance of AIDS cases.

WAL-MART'S ADVERTISED MERCHANDISE POLICY — It is our intention to have every advertised item in stock. However, if due to any unforeseen reason, an advertised item is not available for purchase, Wal-Mart will issue a Rain Check on request, for the merchandise to be purchased at the sale price whenever available, or will sell you a similar item at a comparable reduction in price. We reserve the right to limit quantities.
