London parade was like 'dream' for MHS band

By Jennifer Cherry
Staff Writer

Band members at Midland High School were a part of one of the largest parties in the world when they traveled to England to perform in the London Millennium Parade Festival.

"The parade itself was about the most phenomenal thing I have ever done," said Gary Doherty, MHS band director.

While in London, the band performed three different times. As part of the Music for the Millennium series, the band performed in front of 3,000 people at Westminster Great Hall. And the jazz band, along with bands from Chicago and Kansas City, Mo., performed at St. Paul's Cathedral in front of 1,500 people.

But the biggest thrill, according to most band members, was preparing for and marching in the Jan. 1 parade. While the band warmed up in the shadow of Big Ben, passing tourists stopped and asked for band members' autographs and took photographs with them.

"While we were warming up there were no less than four television stations from around the world filming us," Doherty said.

And then as the band moved into parade formation, even more international television crews began filming. CNN even used the music of the MHS for some of its coverage of the festivities in London. There were about 2 million people at the parade.

"It was a mass of humanity," Doherty said.

Band member Zane Crownover said the "most awesome feeling" was standing in the parade line-up and looking up and seeing Big Ben.

"It was a really unique experience," he said. "It was like a dream."

"We actually planned to march in Antarctica," Crownover said, alluding to the chilly London weather, "but the temperatures were nice."

He said that when the band returned to the United States, it actually felt colder in Midland than in London.

The band premiered a new piece at the parade, Doherty said. It was made up of various songs about Texas. Surprisingly, most of the British at the parade knew the words to every song.

"It was real funny to hear 'The Yellow

Big Spring mayor quits

■ Tim Blackshear resigns to run for Legislature.

By Art Sinclair
Big Spring Correspondent

BIG SPRING — The city of Big Spring is without a mayor.

Mayor Tim Blackshear was in the first year of his third three-year term of office when he filed for District 70 of the state Legislature. Blackshear filed at the Secretary of State's office five minutes before Monday's filing deadline.

The Texas Constitution stipulates that when an elected official files for another office, if there is more than one year left on his term, the resignation from the first office is automatic.

As the only Republican candidate filing for the office, he will oppose Democratic incumbent David Counts of Knox City in the November general election.

"I feel I am aware of many municipal issues, having worked closely with the Texas Municipal League," Blackshear said. "I believe that I understand the problems of both cities and rural residents. I want to make sure that when the Legislature redistricts the state next session we don't lose out in West Texas. Although I feel Big Spring will continue to be the largest city in any new district, I think our new district will be drastically changed under the anticipated new lines.

"If I am elected I will have my office in Big Spring. I feel Knox City is a long way from here and as the district's largest city it would make it much easier to reach our representative if he officed here."

Of his Democratic opponent, Blackshear said, "David Counts is a friend of mine. We have worked closely together in the past; this certainly is not personal. I just felt led to enter the race."

Big Spring City Secretary Tom Ferguson is preparing a list of possible dates for a special election to elect a new mayor. The Big Spring City Council is expected to discuss the issue at Tuesday's meeting. Oscar Garcia, a City Council member and mayor pro tem, will administer the mayor's duties until a new mayor is elected.

Blackshear served on the City Council beginning. He has been mayor of Big Spring since 1992.

LHS parade is set for Tuesday

For the second year in a row, the Lee High Rebel football team will be getting proper recognition with a citywide parade in its honor. This year's parade is set for 5 p.m. Tuesday.

"They are an outstanding group of students who have worked hard all season long. We are extremely proud of their accomplishments, not only as a school but as a community," said Lee High School Principal George Cooper.

In December, the Rebels won their second straight 5-A state title, becoming the first Midland school to ever win back-to-back state championships in any sport.

"We wanted to honor and recognize an amazing and talented football team that has truly put Midland on the map," said

Texaco to close Hobbs plant; 19 employees to move to Tall City

John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Texaco on Wednesday announced plans to close its Hobbs, N.M., District Office later this year and move approximately 19 employees to Midland.

Texaco has 67 employees in Hobbs; 27 work in the Hobbs office. Texaco Permian Basin Business Unit Manager Richard Schneider said 19 of the 27 employees would take employment in Midland and the remainder would move into a field location.

Schneider said the move would take place later this year, perhaps in midsummer, after Texaco's lease in Hobbs expires.

"New Mexico is a very important part of our business, but this consolidation will provide a greater degree of efficiency for Texaco and greater lifestyle stability for our employees," Schneider said.

Schneider said there was no plan to close the Midland office.

He said the Hobbs closing was part of a movement to gain efficiency by bringing district offices into Midland. The Big Spring office was moved to Midland in 1996, followed by Odessa in 1998 and Levelland in 1999.

"In general, all of these moves resulted in

Some doctors doubt new flu drugs' effectiveness

NEW YORK (AP) — Two new prescription flu drugs are selling briskly, spurred by the early onset of the flu season across the United States as well as intense advertising campaigns.

But there are doubts whether the new medicines — Relenza and Tamiflu — can sustain the momentum: Patients need to start taking the medications within 48 hours after symptoms appear, and some doctors are not convinced the relatively expensive medicines will dramatically shorten the suffering.

Still, Glaxo Wellcome, maker of Relenza, and Roche Laboratories, maker of Tamiflu, are betting they can change the way patients and the medical profession approaches the ailment that affects up to 50 million people each year and causes up to 40,000 deaths.

The drugmakers are targeting cities hit hard by the flu with advertising as they pitch their medication to doctors. Glaxo has hired Wayne Knight, who played the pesky mailman Newman on "Seinfeld," to personify the flu bug in its ads.

Relenza has the early lead. More than 51,000 Relenza prescriptions were written in the week ending Dec. 24, more than four times the level in the first week of December, according to IMS Health, a market research firm. Tamiflu sold nearly 45,000 prescriptions the same week, or nearly 10 times more than in the first week of December.

Lori Schieri, an administrator at the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia, took Tamiflu just hours after she developed the bad cough, headache and 101 degree fever associated with the flu. That was on Friday, Dec. 17. By Saturday night her fever broke, and she was back to work on Tuesday.

"It was great to feel better so quickly," said Ms. Schieri, who recalled being sick in bed for a week the previous time she had the flu.

Most people get through the flu using over-the-counter medicines that try to control symptoms.

And those who decide to see a doctor often do so only after being sick for several days. That's a problem as the new flu drugs are only useful in the first two days after symptoms appear.

Flu can typically last five to 10 days.

Israelis leave military base in the West Bank after handover

JERUSALEM (AP) — The handover was quick and unemotional. An Israeli officer shook hands with Palestinian officials and muttered "Bye, folks" before he led a convoy of jeeps out of an Israeli army base in the West Bank on Wednesday.

The Israeli pullback from a small slice of land was to be one of the last before Israel and the Palestinians draw their final borders in a September peace treaty.

The withdrawal ended a seven-week deadlock between the two sides over a relatively minor issue — whether the Palestinians would have a say in sketching the maps of the partial troop withdrawals. Israeli and Palestinian officials were mum about how the dispute was resolved, but both sides said privately the other gave in.

Palestinians held up a November handover of 5 percent of the West Bank, complaining about the type of land being offered, and demanding more populated land closer to east Jerusalem, their hoped-for capital.

The Palestinians said they were trying to establish the principle that Israel cannot dictate the withdrawal maps. Israel resisted, and now denies reports that it eventually relented and promised the Palestinians some of the desired areas in the next scheduled withdrawal from 6.1 percent of the West Bank on Jan. 20.

Israeli Justice Minister Yossi Beilin, who is believed to be involved in backchannel talks with the Palestinians, said the Palestinians looked a gift horse in the mouth when they held up the withdrawal.

The Palestinians "didn't receive a 'tempting offer' because they don't need a 'tempting offer' to receive territory," Beilin told Israel radio on Wednesday. "There is a limit to absurdity."

Once the partial pullbacks are completed, the Palestinians will have full or partial control over 40 percent of the West Bank.

Wednesday's withdrawal began around midday when several trucks loaded with furniture and mattresses pulled out of the Yosef army base east of the West Bank town of Nablus. Braving driving rain, Israel troops lowered their flag.

An Israeli lieutenant colonel shook hands with Palestinian officials waiting at the gate, and left with a quick "bye, folks." The Palestinians rushed in and hoisted their flag.

In all, the army transferred six bases and camps in the northern and southern West Bank as part of the transfer of 3 percent of the land to Palestinian civil rule. On Thursday, the Palestinians were to receive full control over an additional 2 percent of the land, mostly areas north of the town of Ramallah.

By Feb. 13, the two sides are to reach agreement on the framework for a final peace treaty, which would include an outline of a future border between Israel and the Palestinian entity. Negotiators have reported some progress, but it was uncertain whether they could meet the self-imposed deadline.

Progress on the Israeli-Palestinian track came at a time when Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak was engaged in intensive peace talks with Syria. The withdrawal appeared to back Barak's claim that it was possible to move ahead on both tracks simultaneously, and that he would not focus on one at the expense of the other.

Russian presidential elections set for March 26

MOSCOW (AP) — Vladimir Putin launched Russia's presidential election campaign on Wednesday by calling for a clean contest, but some opposition leaders were debating whether it is even worth running given Putin's huge lead.

The election date was finalized earlier Wednesday, when the upper chamber of parliament, or Federation Council, voted 145-1 to hold the balloting March 26. Putin, who became acting president when Boris Yeltsin suddenly resigned last Friday, is widely seen as having a huge, possibly unassailable lead.

Grigory Yavlinsky, leader of the liberal Yabloko party, announced Wednesday that he would run. But he conceded that a Putin victory may be a foregone conclusion.

"That is quite possible," he told reporters.

The only other declared candidate so far is extreme nationalist Vladimir Zhirinovsky, who has staged fistfights in parliament and written books on sex. Communist leader Gennady Zyuganov, who lost to Yeltsin in 1996, said his party would meet Thursday to consider its election plans. He is expected to run.

Two major presidential prospects, ex-premier Yevgeny Primakov and Moscow Mayor Yuri Luzhkov, have not said whether they will run. Primakov announced last month he would run in elections that had been set for June, when Yeltsin was due to step down at the end of his term.

Kashmir militant freed in hijacking attacks U.S., India in fiery speech

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — One of three Kashmiri militants freed as part of a deal to end the Indian Airlines hijacking called on his followers Wednesday to destroy India and the United States.

Encircled by men dressed in camouflage-colored clothes and brandishing automatic rifles, Maulana Masood Azhar gave a fiery speech to 10,000 supporters who gathered in front of a central Karachi mosque.

"I have come here because this is my duty to tell you that Muslims should not rest in peace until we have destroyed America and India," Azhar said, vowing to liberate the embattled Kashmir region from Indian rule.

The crowd responded by screaming, "God is Great!" and "Death to India, Death to the United States."

Azhar's arrival in Karachi from neighboring Afghanistan, where the eight-day hijacking ended Friday, was unannounced.

Though the Pakistani government earlier said that the hijackers would be arrested if they stepped foot in their country, there was no effort to detain Azhar or to bar him from speaking Wednesday.

"I have come back and I will not rest in peace until Kashmir is liberated," Azhar told the crowd, many of them members of his militant group, Harakat-ul-Mujahedeen. The group is considered one of the most radical groups fighting in Indian-ruled Kashmir.

Armed with grenades, pistols and knives, five hijackers seized Flight 814 some 40 minutes after it took off from Katmandu, Nepal, on a scheduled flight to New Delhi on Dec. 24. The hijacked plane made stops in India, Pakistan and the United Arab Emirates before landing in Afghanistan.

To secure the release of the 155 hostages, India agreed to release Azhar, along with two other jailed Kashmiri militants.

The whereabouts of the other two — Mushtaq Ahmed Zargar, an Indian Kashmiri, and Ahmed Umar Saeed Sheikh, a Pakistani-born British citizen — was not clear Wednesday.

Azhar, his head wrapped in a checkered scarf, said the five hijackers were all Indian Kashmiris. He said they had returned to Kashmir, the disputed territory divided between India and Pakistan.

"They are preparing for their next assault," he said, without elaborating.

When the speech ended several bodyguards, with kalashnikov automatic rifles, whisked Azhar into a truck and sped off.

Pakistan said after the hijacking that its border security was put on alert and the hijackers would be arrested if found, a difficult task given the length of the border and the multitude of access points from Afghanistan.

The hijackers have not been seen since they left the airport in southern Afghanistan. They were given 10 hours by Afghanistan's ruling Taliban to leave the country.

The three militants are Kashmiri activists opposed to Indian rule in Kashmir, which has been the source of decades of conflict. Both countries lay claim to the entire territory.

Azhar and Sheikh had been in Indian jails since 1994, although neither had reportedly been formally charged. Azhar, a Pakistani Islamic cleric and a radical ideologue was jailed for trying to unite several of the Kashmiri rebel groups.

Pakistan previously said Azhar, whose father is a retired school teacher from Punjab province, would be allowed to return to his homeland because he did not face any charges at home.

Since the hijacking ended, India and Pakistan have exchanged bitter accusations. India says Pakistan orchestrated the drama, a charge vehemently denied by Pakistan.

Pakistan's military ruler Gen. Pervez Musharraf on Tuesday said India was launching a propaganda campaign against his country to deflect criticism over how New Delhi handled negotiations with the hostage-takers.

In Islamabad, Pakistani officials demanded that India make public information it claims to have on the hijackers' identities and alleged Pakistani involvement.

"Fabrication of allegations without a shred of evidence is reprehensible," a Foreign Ministry statement said.

India's home minister, L.K. Advani, said India has "irrefutable evidence of Pakistan's involvement in cross-border terrorism and in this particular hijacking." He did not offer details.

Bradley says Gore's 'words offend me'

■ Democratic candidate says vice president 'distorts' his proposal to expand health coverage.

Associated Press

DURHAM. N.H. — Democratic presidential hopeful Bill Bradley accused Al Gore Wednesday night of deliberately distorting his proposal to expand health coverage, but the vice president shot back in the first debate of the election year that his rival's plan would leave many New Hampshire residents "high and dry."

Prodded by debate moderator Peter Jennings to say whether Gore had ever taken a quote or vote out of context, Bradley instantly replied, "Yes."

The vice president, Bradley said, "offended me" by claiming he would hurt African-Americans and Latinos and by saying his health care plan would short-change many Americans.

But Gore, standing a few feet away on a University of New Hampshire stage, paraphrased Harry Truman's famous utterance: "I'm not giving him hell. I'm just telling the truth and he thinks it's hell."

Gore held aloft a card that he said characterized Bradley's health plan and contended the people of New Hampshire "would be left out, left high and dry" by Bradley's plan.

"Let me tell you how the private sector works," retorted back Bradley, a former New Jersey senator, adding that health insurance companies would quickly try to fashion coverage to meet the new demand.

The exchange came one-third of the way through the 60-minute debate, the first in a series of confrontations in which Democrats and Republicans will take turns debating in the run-up to the first balloting of the presidential campaign.

Gore is the national frontrunner by far, but Bradley has mounted a surprisingly strong challenge for the Democratic nomination, and is even or ahead in the polling in advance of the first primary set for Feb. 1 in New Hampshire. That prompted the vice president to allude to his "underdog" status.

"Your underdog pitch brings tears to my eyes," Bradley said wryly.

Said Gore: "I hope my upset victory brings tears to your eyes on Feb. 1."

Predictably, the reaction of voters in the audience was mixed.

Laura Akeley, a University of New Hampshire art student, said she arrived a Gore a supporter and was leaving a Gore supporter, although she conceded "I can see now why a lot of people support Bill Bradley."

Doug Mayer, 35, a radio talk-show producer from Randolph, said he had been undecided, but was walking out whole-heartedly behind Bradley.

The two contenders agreed on some issues, citing a need for stricter gun control laws and saying they would make appointments to the Joint Chiefs of Staff only if they would implement a policy of permitting gays to serve openly in the military.

But the two rivals came prepared for battle, clashing on local issues — including development within the White Mountain National Forest in northern New Hampshire — as well as national concerns.

Bradley, who likes to boast of a candidacy of big ideas, said that Gore was "in a Washington bunker." That's understandable, he said, given the Republican Congress, the Democratic fundraising scandals and impeachment. "But the reality is, the Democratic party shouldn't be in the Washington bunker with you," he said.

Gore responded, "I'm proud that I stayed and fought against the Gingrich Congress."

Bradley launched a sharp attack on the Clinton-Gore administration's handling of relations with Russia, saying the United States had not pushed hard enough in the last eight years to reduce the stockpile of nuclear weapons and had agreed to send international aid to Russia "knowing that corruption was rampant."

Gore issued a defense, saying, "I think that in spite of the problems there have been some successes, including a new leader committed to reform, a free press and free elections."

The two men were given the chance to pose questions to one another, and Gore used his turn to ask Bradley whether he believed he had made a mistake on any of three votes he had cast: in favor of Ronald Reagan's budget cuts in 1981, opposed to authorizing the ground war against Iraq in 1990 and against the welfare reform law that President Clinton signed into law. Bradley defended each vote.

Gore said, "I think all three were mistakes." While serving in Congress, Gore voted against the budget cuts and in favor of using force in Kuwait and as vice president supported the welfare law.

Gore said he was worried that Bradley had refused to own up to any mistakes, and was worried about that quality in a president.

Bradley broke in to cite what he said was an error he had made: his vote in 1987 against confirmation of Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan. "Now that was a mistake," he said to laughter from the audience.

While Bradley said Gore was guilty of campaign distortions, Gore said he wouldn't level that charge against his rival.

"I won't accuse him of that. If you want a no, I'll give you a no," he said.

The opening question referred to Clinton and his sexual relationship with Monica Lewinsky.

Bradley said that anytime a president or public official lies, he undermines his authority. But he offered no criticism of Gore's behavior during the year-long impeachment struggle.

The vice president said he thought he had served "the national interest well" during that period, making plain his disapproval of Clinton's actions, yet defending him against what he said was an unwarranted Republican attempt to remove him from office.

For his part, despite a candidacy that boasts of time spent out of public life, Bradley said politics is a "noble profession. I don't think it's corrupt or deceitful ... The only way you are going to achieve something is through politics," he said.

Clintons spend first night in their New York home

CHAPPAQUA, N.Y. (AP) — President Clinton and his wife, Hillary, settled in Wednesday for their first meal and overnight stay in their new $1.7 million home in this well-to-do hamlet north of New York City.

"Like any new homeowners, they're excited," White House spokesman Joe Lockhart after the couple arrived. Joining them was the president's mother-in-law, Dorothy Rodham.

A friend who also lives in Westchester County and has vacationed with the Clintons in Martha's Vineyard brought over home-cooked food for dinner. The house near the bottom of a cul-de-sac was blocked off; reporters and onlookers were kept behind a barricade.

While some of the 17,000 residents in the upscale suburb have complained about the attention drawn by the Clintons, many seemed eager to greet them.

"I think there's been some disturbance for the people" on the Clintons' street, said Wilma Rapp. "Other than that, people feel pretty good about the Clintons. You tell somebody you live in Chappaqua and they say, 'Oh! Hillary!'"

The town already has had its share of the famous: actor Chevy Chase, Tony Award-winning actress Glenn Close, New York Yankees center fielder Bernie Williams.

Initially, Mrs. Clinton — who needs a New York address to run for the U.S. Senate — was scheduled to arrive alone to unpack. An unexpected break in the president's schedule allowed him to accompany the first lady, Lockhart said.

The Clintons' furniture and other goods arrived Tuesday afternoon in two moving vans. The president has said they both plan to live in Chappaqua after he leaves office in January 2001.

The president planned an early return today to Andrews Air Force Base, although it was not known if he then would go to the White House or back to the Mideast peace talks in Shepardstown, W.Va.

Even before their arrival, the Clintons had caused several minor stirs.

In September, protesters upset by U.S. policy in East Timor marched outside the home — even though it was still vacant. In November, the government quashed plans to sell T-shirts reading "Secret Service, Chappaqua Bureau, Presidential Detail," saying use of the Secret Service label was illegal.

Local officials soon made parking on the Clintons' cul-de-sac illegal to spare neighbors any imposition from the media. Authorities also approved installation of an 8-foot fence and a guard booth on the Clintons' property; neither is yet in place.

New York City Mayor Rudolph Giuliani, Mrs. Clinton's likely Republican opponent in this year's U.S. Senate race, played on the "carpetbagger" theme he has used against Mrs. Clinton in offering a backhanded welcome to her and the president.

"I feel very, very proud of the fact that people from around the country want to come to New York, including people from Arkansas," Giuliani said. "We welcome all newcomers, and recognize the fact that they are newcomers."

LONDON: Britons knew words to Texas songs

(From 1A)

Rose of Texas' sung with British accents," Doherty said.

"It was so cool because mothers and children were singing 'Deep in the Heart of Texas,'" Crownover said.

In addition to performing, band members also had opportunities to tour much of the city. April Anderson, another band member, said one of the most amazing sights she saw was Canterbury Cathedral.

Band members also got to see the crypt and the place where the historical English archbishop St. Thomas Becket was assassinated, said Brandon Durrett.

Also, Doherty said, band members found their way to the very first Hard Rock Cafe, the Tower of London, Hampton Court Palace and Dover Castle. The band was led on a four-hour tour of London, as well. Members had their own opinions of what was the most intriguing.

Sarah Lodge, for example, said she found the Tower of London especially interesting because she got to see the crown jewels.

"They were even prettier than I thought they would be," she said.

She also said the bush maze at Hampton Court Palace was fascinating.

Both Crownover and Miss Anderson found the Dover castle to be especially interesting.

He said it "was neat because the students were actually able to walk in a real castle where people lived. The places really brought all of our history lessons to life."

Miss Lodge and Crownover thought that riding the subway, known as the "tube" in England, was fun.

But a true highlight, they said, was getting to watch the gigantic fireworks display that erupted over the Thames River at the stroke of midnight.

"We sang our alma mater and the 'Star-Spangled Banner,'" Marissa Brown said.

She thought that the best part of the trip was that she and all of her friends are seniors.

"You just can't compare this experience to anything else," she said.

Although the sights and the parade were especially memorable, band members had some difficulties getting used to their accommodations in England.

"It took a little while to figure out how the shower stuff worked," Durrett said, laughing. There were "a bunch of plugs and towel racks in the shower itself. They were just very different from showers in the United States."

Katherine Morris and Miss Brown said they had "converted problems" and accidentally blew up their curling irons and blow dryers.

But fun though the trip was, it left members exhausted.

"We were so exhausted that I slept the whole 10 hours on the plane back to the United States," Miss Lodge said.

Crownover said that although he had fun, he was glad to come home and have a homecooked meal.

The band left on Dec. 27 and returned in the early-morning hours of Jan. 3.

The band is scheduled to perform a homecoming concert 7 p.m. Feb. 8 at Midland High School. The concert will give students and family members a chance to see photos and relive the memories of England, Doherty said.

PARADE: City to honor Lee football team

Midland Mayor Bobby Burns, who is coordinating the parade with Lee High School and district officials.

The event, which will be hosted by the city of Midland, will start at the Fairmont Church of Christ, Wadley Avenue and Midland Drive, and end up at the Lee High School field house. It then will be capped off by a community rally.

"Obviously, our main goal is to recognize these young men and to let them know that the entire city of Midland is proud of their accomplishments with these back-to-back titles," Burns said.

The school board plans to recognize the football team at its Jan. 27 board meeting.

Cuban-Americans protest decision to send boy back

MIAMI (AP) — Touching off protests by hundreds of Cuban-Americans, the U.S. government decided Wednesday to send 6-year-old Elian Gonzalez back to Cuba because "this little boy ... deserves to be with his father."

Elian has been in the middle of an international tug-of-war since he was found Thanksgiving Day clinging to an inner tube at sea after his mother, stepfather and eight others died while trying to reach the United States.

He has been living with relatives in Miami, who have insisted they could give Elian a better life than his father could back in Cuba. But on Wednesday, the Immigration and Naturalization Service decided that Elian should be with his father instead.

"Family reunification has long been a cornerstone of both American immigration law and U.S. practice," INS Commissioner Doris Meissner said at a news conference. "This little boy, who has been through so much, belongs with his father."

She said the father, Juan Miguel Gonzalez, "made it very clear that he wants Elian returned to him as soon as possible." Even though the boy's parents were divorced, the INS found that Elian had a "close and continuous relationship" with his father.

The agency ruled that Elian must return to Cuba by Jan. 14.

Lawyers for the boy's relatives asked Attorney General Janet Reno to reverse the decision and also planned to ask a federal judge for a restraining order. They said the INS was violating its own rules by not allowing the boy to apply for political asylum.

Gonzalez, the father, could not be located for comment Wednesday. He and Elian's four grandparents had dinner Tuesday in Havana with Fidel Castro, said the Rev. Joan Brown Campbell of the National Council of Churches, who went to Cuba to help reunite father and son.

After the INS decision in Washington, several hundred people linked arms, shouted "Liberty!" and sang the Cuban national anthem in front of the house where Elian has been staying with his paternal great-aunt and great-uncle.

In front of the Miami INS office, several hundred protesters waved Cuban and American flags and shouted anti-Castro slogans.

The protests were emotional but peaceful, and paled in comparison to the huge government-staged rallies in Havana demanding the boy's return.

"They're using him as if he were a toy and Fidel Castro is saying, 'He's mine, not yours,'" said 28-year-old Norisbel Almeida, a mother of two young children at the protest outside the home. "Why did they show him the good life so he could go back to Cuba and have nothing?"

Since he was rescued, Elian has been flooded with toys, visited Disney World, celebrated his first Christmas in the United States and started attending first grade.

He also been in the constant glare of TV cameras. Reporters and photographers staked out the home Wednesday as TV helicopters hovered above the house and tracked Elian's movement as he left school, dressed in his uniform of blue pants and white shirt.

Family members tried to shield Elian from the protests and media attention, hustling him from school to an undisclosed location.

"He doesn't know what is going on. We don't want to make him feel bad," said Marisleysis Gonzalez, the boy's cousin.

In Cuba, the communist government warned citizens to guard against "excessive optimism" about the U.S. government's decision.

President Clinton said he had honored a pledge to keep politics out of the decision over the boy. "The INS followed the law and the procedure and made the decision that they made after an exhaustive review of the facts," he said.

The Clinton administration has asked the Cuban government to issue an exit visa to the father to allow him to escort the boy back home. Ricardo Alarcon, president of Cuba's National Assembly, had said Cuba would not stop the father from going to the United States as long as American officials first agreed to let the boy return to Cuba.

Cuban adults who reach the U.S. mainland are routinely allowed to stay, but the boy's age created diplomatic problems. Many Cuban exiles have insisted that his mother's death in a bid to live in a free country was enough to allow Elian to stay.

"It's a crime to send him back to Cuba," said Melba Roses, 56, who moved to the United States from Cuba nearly 50 years ago. "There is food here and in Cuba there is none. The child has a right to stay."

Asked what the boy has been saying, Armando Gutierrez, a spokesman for the Miami family, said: "He cares for his father but he would like his father to be here with him."

Jail dilemma needs more than stopgap solution

Jail space is not a topic most people feel comfortable talking about. Most ordinary people, in fact, probably give jails as little thought as possible, until a jailbreak or jail riot occurs and makes news headlines.

But jail overcrowding has come under increasing scrutiny in recent months in Midland County and adjoining Upton County, where Rankin officials have approved a proposal for a 1,000-bed detention center which is scheduled for completion in 2001.

It looks as though there is only one acceptable solution to the overcrowding problem and that is adding onto Midland County Detention Center.

Many Texas counties have faced jail overcrowding and additional jail construction in the past few years as the prison population has mushroomed, and Midland County officials are even pondering the prospect of adding onto the Midland County Detention Center or having to make some other difficult decision to avoid jail overcrowding.

For that reason, the prospect of having a new detention facility at Rankin, only 55 miles south of Midland, which could relieve some of the load on Midland County's jail facility is appealing. Of course, farming out some Midland County inmates to a nearby county's facility is not a perfect nor long-term solution to Midland County's own jail overcrowding problem.

In fact, we are in complete agreement with Midland County Judge Bill Morrow who recently noted that there are only three ways to eventually resolve the problem. Those include:

- Reducing the jail population by a speeding up the judicial process to get inmates awaiting trial out of jail faster or by sending prisoners to another jail facility;
- Adding onto the existing Midland County Detention Center which is expected to cost $7-15 million; or
- Stopping taking federal prisoners, which is really not an option due to an agreement Midland County has with federal judges for this area.

It looks as though there is only one acceptable solution and that is adding onto Midland County Detention Center. Every other alternative would only be a stopgap move that would not address the real problem facing Midland County.

Tripp being tried for 'doing right thing'

Of all the shady deals and characters, of all the reprehensible actions and people involved in the Whitewater/Monicagate controversy, the only person likely to suffer any punishment is the only person who can be construed as having done the right thing: Linda Tripp.

Tripp is being prosecuted under Maryland wiretapping law for her recording of conversations with Monica Lewinsky. It was the tapes of those conversations, turned over to Starr, that left Clinton no more room to dodge. It was the smoking gun Starr had sought for so long.

Perhaps Tripp wasn't such a great friend to Lewinsky. But Tripp knew the president of the United States, the political (if not moral) leader of the free world, was breaking the law and she brought the evidence to the one person in a position to do something about it.

Whatever Tripp's politics, she did what was right. For this, she is being prosecuted in state court under an ambiguous law when she may — or may not — have been granted immunity (that is one of the issues being decided).

Tripp's travails should be a lesson to all Americans — abide by the law at your own risk. Tripp is being prosecuted for doing the right thing. Who is next?

Politicians think imaginatively about running mates

WASHINGTON—Given the homogenization of America, and especially of its political class, there is not apt to be anything again remotely like the Democratic tickets of 1932 and 1936. As speculating about vice presidential nominations begins, remember when the top of the Democratic ticket, Franklin Roosevelt, came from the top of American society—the Hudson Valley squirearchy—and his running mate came from America's frontier.

Will

John Nance ("Cactus Jack") Garner, who died in 1967 at age 98, was, as Alistair Cooke writes in his new book ("Memories of the Great & the Good"), the last public man linking "America of the Civil War and America of the nuclear age." Son of a Confederate cavalry trooper, he was born in a one-room cabin in Texas' Red River Valley, in 1868, before the Apache raids had ended. As a child he knew a woman who had been scalped. A judge at 25, congressman at 34, at the end of FDR's second term Garner went home, vowing never to cross the Potomac again. Never did.

Back then, politics had more certainties than it now has, two of which were that the South would vote Democratic and no Southerner could be elected president. Frequently the South's consolation was a Democratic vice presidential candidate. (Harry Truman's running mate came from a border state, Kentucky; Adlai Stevenson's two came from Alabama and Tennessee; John Kennedy's from Texas.)

Nowadays politics is more fluid, and presidential nominees of both parties are tempted to think imaginatively about running mates, as with Elizabeth Dole. Although her droll husband, with his penchant for making a difficult situation excruciating, semi-endorsed John McCain's candidacy while she was still a candidate, she has endorsed George W. Bush, enkindling talk about her as Bush's running mate.

Would she cure the Republicans' "gender gap"? That gap needs defining.

In 1992 President Bush ran better among married women (40 percent) than among men generally (38 percent). In 1996 Bob Dole did almost as well among married women (43 percent) as among all men (44 percent). The striking Bush and Dole weaknesses were among unmarried women (31 and 28 percent respectively). But this is less a measure of gender difference than class difference: Unmarried women have lower average incomes and higher insecurities than married women. Is Elizabeth Dole an answer to essentially class anxieties?

Picking a running mate is the first thing a presidential nominee does with much of the country paying attention. (A poll conducted Oct. 25-Nov. 7 for the Annenberg Public Policy Center at the University of Pennsylvania found that 59 percent of the electorate does not know that Bill Bradley ever played basketball, 76 percent does not know that John McCain is a senator, 85 percent does not know that Bradley and Al Gore were senators.) The presidential candidate wants his vice presidential choice to have two immediate, summertime consequences, one autumn consequence (actually, nonconsequence) and one or two possible Election Day consequences.

He wants voters immediately to say, "That vice presidential nominee is presidential." The second desired summertime consequence is for the choice to change adventitiously the public's perception of the presidential nominee.

During the autumn he wants his running mate to do no harm—to make no mistakes. On Election Day he wants his running mate to cause a modest shift in an important and closely contested state or, more ambitiously, to cause a consequential portion of a particular group to move his way nationally, perhaps tilting several states.

Dole's credentials might satisfy the summertime criteria. Her disciplined campaigning would satisfy the autumn criterion. However, she is only loosely associated with a state (North Carolina). And regarding the more ambitious of the two Election Day objectives, it is hard to find precedent for a "running mate effect" that transcends the running mate's state.

Because of doubts about Bush's intellectual weight and steadiness, if he is nominated his choice of running mate should given him a gravitas infusion. It might be Dick Cheney—pro-life and well-seasoned, he has been a congressman and White House chief of staff, and was secretary of defense during the Gulf War. (He currently works, and last voted, in Dallas, but retains a residence in Wyoming.)

Or, to tilt a state, perhaps Michigan's pro-life Gov. John Engler. Or, if Bush thinks pro-life dissent would be mild (not likely) and perhaps beneficial (even less likely—right-to-life people will provide much of whatever passion there is behind a Bush candidacy), Pennsylvania Gov. Tom Ridge—decorated Vietnam veteran, strong in suburbs, Catholic but moderately pro-choice.

Such choices might seem unimaginative. But in presidential campaigns, imagination may be overrated.

It's none of my business, I don't care

I always plan ahead when it comes to a new millennium. Since buying a new shepherd dog that can sniff out terrorists and stockpiling a dozen flashlight batteries, I believe I am in pretty good shape. What I vowed to do for the next 1,000 years is not pay attention to things that are none of my business.

Buchwald

For example I've decided not to worry about Al Gore's image. He is what he is, and his staff can't change him. Losing sleep about Gore is going to make me very tired.

I am also not going to spend time wondering if George Bush smoked marijuana more than seven years ago or even since then. I just found out that seven years is the statute of limitations on presidential candidates smoking pot.

I know this comes as a surprise, but I am not going to concern myself with whether Diane Sawyer dated Bill Bradley when he was a great basketball player. Barbara Walters has dated John Warner, and he once told her he might be a presidential candidate.

The year 2000 is the one where I am going to ignore fund-raising dinners for Pat Buchanan, governor-wrestler Jesse Ventura, Steve Forbes and Donald Trump because I believe they should win on their own, without public financing.

I couldn't care less this year how Hillary Clinton furnishes her house in Chappaqua, as long as it's done in good taste and looks neat on Martha Stewart's show.

The only thing that worries me is if, after it's furnished, Bill Clinton then sells the house to pay his legal fees.

These are some of the people I will not pay attention to in the next 100 years: Puffy Combs, Mike Tyson, Ron Perelman, Michael Jackson and Dick Clark.

I have also made up my mind that I will not lend Charlton Heston my BB gun at a NRA show.

Mark my words, I will not attend if New York gives Atlanta Braves' pitcher Joh his antitrust suit, I am not going to care.

If I try to get my daughter on her cell phone and her line is busy, it is not going to bother me.

I also made a decision not to pay any attention to Jack Valenti when he tells me how he shot a 71 at Burning Tree Golf Club when the wind was blowing 30 miles per hour and he birdied on the eight hole.

Most of all, I'm not going to get all excited in 2000 about a Y3K crisis, since in 1999 I handled the Y2K one so well.

Today in History

Today is Thursday, Jan. 6, the sixth day of 2000. There are 360 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Jan. 6, 1912, New Mexico became the 47th state.

On this date:

In 1412, according to tradition, Joan of Arc was born in Domremy.

In 1540, England's King Henry VIII took his fourth wife, Anne of Cleves. The marriage lasted about six months.

In 1759, George Washington and Martha Dandridge Custis were married.

In 1838, Samuel Morse first publicly demonstrated his telegraph, in Morristown, N.J.

In 1919, Theodore Roosevelt, the 26th U.S. president, died in Oyster Bay, N.Y., at age 60.

Doonesbury Flashbacks

Cal Thomas

Missing persons from the last century in 'Time'

In chronicling his version of "who mattered and why" in the century just past, Time magazine editor Walter Isaacson gives short shrift to Ronald Reagan, Pope John Paul II and Margaret Thatcher.

Reagan gets no credit for joining forces with Thatcher and the Pope to push Soviet communism over the edge. He was merely a "choreograph(er)," writes Isaacson, who says the former president must share billing with Mikhail Gorbachev. But Gorbachev, regarded by liberals as a political savior, vowed to mend communism, not end it.

Thomas

In a further attempt to dilute the influence of these three, Isaacson says they had help from Winston Churchill, Harry Truman and Franklin Roosevelt. True enough. But these men successfully contained the spread of communism. It was Reagan, Thatcher and the Pope who set out to kill it -- and did so in Russia.

The New York Times goes further than Time magazine. It questions whether Reagan's 1981 "evil empire" speech, in which he declared economic war on the Soviet Union, "was the act of a simpleton or a visionary strategist." It was far more visionary than the Times editorial page, which regularly denounced Reagan for refusing to buy the liberal dogma of a nuclear freeze, unilateral disarmament and accommodation with the Soviets.

Why do liberals refuse to give credit where it's due? Communism is the backwater of the past, not the wave of the future. Most students -- at American universities and in much of the rest of the world -- no longer study socialism. Rather, they want to learn how to ride the crest of the prosperity wave made possible by communism's reduced threat.

Chinese communism hangs on, not because it (ital) excites (unital) the masses but because a brutal dictatorship (ital) threatens (unital) the masses.

The reason Isaacson, the New York Times and their fellow ideological travelers cannot bring themselves to credit Reagan, Thatcher and the Pope for what they did is that they would have, in the words of Dezi Arnaz, "a lot of 'splanin' to do." Many liberal journalists, writers, economists, politicians, academics and clergy believed in the promises of socialism and communism. They became evangelists for the cause, pumping ideological bilge into the public mind. While "journalists" such as Walter Duranty of the New York Times and Anna Louise Strong were extreme in their lavish praise of Joseph Stalin and Mao Zedong, many others in the media helped pass along uncritical stories and propaganda that promoted the "humanitarian nature" of communism over "inhumane" capitalism. Such people were never held accountable by their peers or their followers, because to do so would highlight their own political sins.

Reagan's words, especially, gave hope to millions trapped behind the Iron Curtain that the United States was serious in its objective to help others breathe free.

In a June 3, 1988, address in London, Reagan noted the two causes -- peace and freedom for all humanity -- to which thousands of men and women dedicated and in some cases sacrificed their lives for more than four decades. He spoke of a "forward" post-war strategy, not of containment but of "public candor about the moral and fundamental differences between statism and democracy, but also a strategy of vigorous diplomatic engagement."

Interest groups spent $697 million to lobby Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Health insurers, high-tech companies, banks and other interest groups spent $697 million to lobby Congress and the federal agencies during the first six months of 1999, a new report says.

That's $116 million per month spent to influence the federal government, according to the report being released Thursday by FEC Info, an Internet consulting firm that specializes in tracking political money.

"It is an incredible amount," said Tony Raymond, a founder of FEC Info. "These are the moneymakers. They have two groups they work on: the legislators, the people who write the laws, but they also work on their home offices, saying 'Our competitors are spending this much on lobbying; we need to catch up with them.'"

The amount is similar to the $710 million spent on lobbying during the first six months of 1998, according to figures compiled by researchers at the Center for Responsive Politics, which also analyzed federal lobbying disclosure reports. FEC Info is a subsidiary of the Internet public policy and health care technology company Netivation.com.

This time around, the health care industry spent more on lobbying than anyone else, spending $95.5 million as Congress debated whether to impose new regulations on managed care health plans. Congress didn't pass the new rules.

In second place were communications and technology companies, which fought over providing high-speed Internet access and sought approval for several telecommunications company mergers. Those companies spent $94.6 million.

The financial services industry, which won approval of a long-sought bill to drop Depression-era barriers against banks, insurance companies and investment houses competing against each other, spent $89.8 million on lobbying.

The two biggest individual spenders were the American Medical Association, which spent $8.8 million, and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, which spent $8.4 million lobbying on health insurance and other issues.

"We've had some very important issues that we've been lobbying on," said Dr. Thomas Reardon, president of the AMA. "There was a lot of emphasis on the patients' bill of rights. We began to do work on health care coverage for all Americans."

The food and tobacco giant Philip Morris spent $7.5 million, but the amount of money the tobacco companies spent on lobbying declined since Congress did not take up any anti-smoking legislation during the just-concluded session.

The Associated Press reported in September that five major cigarette companies, including Philip Morris, spent $11 million from January through June. That was a big drop from the first half of 1998, when the industry poured $37 million into an extraordinary effort to defeat legislation that would have raised cigarette taxes by $1.10 per pack and would have given the federal government new power to regulate nicotine.

The top lobbying firm was Cassidy & Associates, which was paid $10 million during the first half of 1999. Former Reps. Fred Rooney of Pennsylvania and Marty Russo of Illinois both work for the firm, whose clients have included Boeing, Exxon, and a number of colleges and universities.

Patton Boggs, which counts former Rep. Greg Laughlin of Texas in its ranks, was second at $9.2 million. The firm has represented the Association of Trial Lawyers, MCI Worldcom and US Airways.

Verner, Liipfert, Bernhard, McPherson and Hand, home to former Senate majority leaders George Mitchell and Bob Dole and former Texas Gov. Ann Richards, was paid $7.3 million.

During the first six months of 1998, the powerhouse firm received $7.1 million from the tobacco companies alone, but the industry paid just $80,000 during the same period this year.

Israeli, Syrian negotiators discuss future relations, security measures

SHEPHERDSTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Under close U.S. supervision, Israeli and Syrian negotiators Wednesday took up two of the toughest challenges in their fledgling pursuit of a peace treaty: their future relationship and security measures along their border.

They worked in the seclusion of a U.S. government retreat just beyond this 239-year-old town, the oldest in West Virginia. They left for later discussion terms of an Israeli pullback on the strategic Golan Heights.

"We are chugging along in a professional manner," the State Department spokesman James P. Rubin said.

Overseeing the talks was Secretary of State Madeleine Albright. Her military aide, Army Lt. Gen. Donald Kerrick, was at the security committee sessions and Assistant Secretary of State Martin Indyk engaged in peace terms discussion.

American, Israeli and Syrian legal experts participated in preparation for a landmark treaty.

If the negotiations succeed — and no one is making any such claim at this preliminary stage — Israel would surrender the Golan Heights, a security buffer zone along the border, and Syria would establish diplomatic relations with its longtime adversary.

Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak has signaled his willingness to make territorial concessions. But he is holding back until Syrian President Hafez Assad authorizes his delegation here to outline what kind of diplomatic, economic and political relationship he would extend in return.

President Clinton was in West Virginia for the first two days. But on Wednesday he kept away for a meeting with Sen. Thomas Daschle of South Dakota, the Senate Democratic leader, and the House Democratic leader, Rep. Dick Gephardt of Missouri, on this year's congressional agenda.

Clinton then was heading on an overnight trip to Chappaqua, N.Y., where he and first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton are moving s into a new home.

In Washington, a senior U.S. official said Clinton probably would return, but would not decide until this morning.

The meetings of the peace-terms and security committees are to be followed by the convening of committees on the prospective Golan Heights retreat and apportioning scarce water resources.

These are the first face-to-face negotiations in nearly four years.

Gen. Shlomo Yamai of Israel and Gen. Ibrahim Omar of Syria headed their governments' delegations in the security talks, while Zvi Shtauber and Walid Muallem were the Israeli and Syrian delegation leaders, respectively, in the negotiations on peaceful relations.

In Israel, Haim Ramon, minister for Jerusalem affairs, told The Associated Press that "the atmosphere of the talks is very serious, to the point."

"The Americans are trying to bridge the gaps and are working hard for that," Ramon said.

The Israeli official said his government would not compromise on Israeli security and that concluding a treaty would require at least a few months of negotiations.

A source close to the Syrian delegation said the convening of the working groups was a sign of progress. He said Assad was being updated on all developments in the talks.

McCain says he didn't help benefactor on federal license

BEDFORD, N.H. (AP) — Sen. John McCain, running for president on a promise to get rid of big money politics, found himself on Wednesday having to repeatedly deny he prodded a federal agency to approve a TV license request by one of his financial benefactors.

McCain said he did urge the Federal Communications Commission to make a decision on Paxson Communications' application for a license two years after the company submitted it. But he told reporters that he did not tell the FCC which way to vote and that he rightly pressed for a decision in his capacity as Senate Commerce Committee Chairman, not in exchange for the company's contributions or the use of its private jet.

"I didn't tell them to approve it; I told them to act," the Arizona senator said. "I think it's entirely appropriate."

The issue gave GOP front-runner George Bush a chance to criticize McCain for the second time in as many days as Republican contenders fought for advantage in this first-in-the-nation primary state.

"I think it's really important for people who are advocating reforms to live up to the spirit of reforms they are advocating," Bush, campaigning in Iowa, told reporters. Later, in Manchester, N.H., he said, "I respect John McCain" and acknowledged that "I haven't seen the facts." But he also said, "I think somebody who makes campaign financing an issue has got to be consistent and walk the walk."

McCain's place in the polls here and his strong fund raising haven't threatened Bush's front-runner status nationally. But Bush has shown his determination to prevent that from happening, going after McCain Monday on tax cuts in their first major policy dispute and inspiring McCain to release details of a tax plan he hadn't intended to put out until Jan. 11.

McCain appeared at one point Wednesday with William Bennett, the former education secretary and presidential drug adviser who has written widely on morality. And he delivered a speech calling for presidential candidates to refrain from personal attacks and distortion.

"Please do not think I claim some special virtue among the candidates," McCain told the Boys and Girls Club of Manchester. "If we accomplish anything in this campaign, let those of us who seek the highest office in the land help turn the practice of politics toward a higher plane."

Disputes over issues and the candidates' performance in public office are fare game, however, McCain has said. He added that the tax cut tiff and the new talk of improperly acting on behalf of a contributor are only to be expected as a candidate becomes more of a threat in the presidential race.

McCain also said his high-profile role as a proponent of campaign finance reform makes him additionally vulnerable.

"There's suspicion about all of us as a result of these huge amounts of money that wash around political campaigns," McCain said. "With me, being the 'reformer,' obviously those stories are more relevant. I expect more of them."

McCain is chairman of the Commerce Committee, which oversees the FCC. He urged the agency in a Dec. 10 letter to act quickly on a matter involving Paxson Communications, a company that owns 73 family-oriented TV stations and has legally provided a private jet for McCain's use.

The Boston Globe first reported the story Wednesday, saying company officials coordinated $20,000 in campaign contributions.

Fatal fire feeds family faith

By Matt Josefy

'It always seems to be someone else, until it hits close to home with a family member or a friend.'
— Tom Reed,
Gage Craft's grandfather

During the season to be jolly, many took for granted the families that happily gathered around the tree. Shawn Craft, his wife Laura, and their 8-year-old son Joshua did not.

The Crafts moved to Midland prior to Christmas after a tragic turn of events left them hurting and homeless. During the middle of the night, Dec. 9, a fire, of which the cause has not been determined, broke out and claimed the life of 7-year-old Gage Craft in Edmond, Okla.

"We know that Gage is in a better place. We'd rather have him for the seven years that we did than not have him at all," said Mrs. Craft. "I told my family on Christmas Day to think about the celebration they're having up there in heaven. We're just opening a few presents."

"It always seems to be someone else, until it hits close to home with a family member or a friend. Even though we have a close family relationship this has brought us a lot closer. Tragedy always pulls people closer together," said Gage's grandfather, Tom Reed, associate pastor at Midland's First Church of the Nazarene.

"The hardest part for us being around the holidays is really just missing him, his laughter, and knowing how happy he would have been," said Craft, who is recovering from cuts sustained while attempting to rescue Gage. "The fire took everything, but the church has been there for us. It's so amazing it restores my faith in humanity. Nothing in the world could replace our son, no matter how good they made us feel."

Craft attempted to get in through two different windows, cutting his left hand to the point that doctors say he might not have feeling in it for a year. The second- and third-degree burns on his face and legs are recovering rapidly.

"I doubt we'd be where we are today if people weren't there to support us. We thank everybody for their support, thoughts and prayers that helped tremendously," Craft said.

"Their love for each other, their love of life, and their love for people was unique," Reed said. "When you have a strong faith, you're life is not necessarily changed, but it is different. Their life will continue to be as full and fulfilling as it ever has been."

Craft had already planned to relocate to Midland to assume a position as manager of the Black-Eyed Pea, but this hastened their move. In fact, Mrs. Craft had been down two weeks prior to the accident to look for a house.

"Everyone crosses the question why things like this are allowed to happen. We don't focus on why but on the Scriptures that say all things work together for good for those who love the Lord," Reed said. "At some point in time, even if we don't understand why now, God will bring good out of the situation."

Part of the good has been seen in the outpouring of support from community and friends.

"It's been a pretty incredible thing. They've been given furniture and clothes and money to help them through all of this. They've had oil companies send money for them. Lots of people have given through the church trust fund. People are now waiting to find out what they really need. It's been a tremendous outpouring of compassion and love," said Jerry McGuire, pastor of the First Church of Nazarene.

"The only explanation I have for (our ability to persevere) is that we have a tremendous support group of people who are praying for us. Without the stability of our faith this would be a tremendous tragedy, but instead we have a hope and a peace that God is in control," Reed said.

The family received support from people in the city of Edmond, the Red Cross, and the Nazarene churches in Oklahoma City, as well as Reed's church here in Midland. Even the New York Bagel

Long students, teachers have a new home

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

Back to school for Jane Long Elementary students and teachers had a special feeling Wednesday. Students returned from the holiday break to a shiny new renovated school.

"My school is beautiful. My school is wonderful," gushed Principal Teresa Moore.

Wednesday was the first time all year that all Long students occupied the building. Renovations began in June and finished up over the Christmas break. Ms. Moore said that the building is 90 percent complete with just a few housekeeping tasks left to complete.

When Long students started school in August, it was amidst a building well under construction. The campus was torn down to a shell and essentially built back from the ground up. The intense rebuild required that most of Long's students attend classes off-campus during the first semester.

According to Ms. Moore, grades K-4 (about 300 students) were bussed to the old Travis Elementary building at 900 E. Gist. Fifth grade students stayed at Long.

"Now everybody is back together and on the same schedule," said Ms. Moore.

She added that the new building will greatly enhance education at the school. Ms. Moore said the building is safer, healthier and more conducive to learning.

The major physical change at the school is the inclusion of all classes inside. The building, built in the 1950s, had all its classes with outside entrances. The building has been enclosed completely, making the campus more comfortable and safer.

"It's phenomenally safer. Previously,

Drug operation suspect denied bail; another suspect arrested

By Rick McLaughlin
Staff Writer

One of 31 suspects in the Dec. 9 drug operation sweep in the Permian Basin was denied bond Wednesday morning at a detention hearing in U.S. District Court in Midland.

U.S. Magistrate Judge L. Stuart Platt denied bail to Efrain Pando, 31, of Presidio, who is suspected of being a drug courier in the largest drug case ever in West Texas. Platt denied bond because he and federal prosecutors believe Pando is a serious flight risk.

Court testimony indicated Pando told pretrial services that he owns property in Ojinaga, Mexico, including an apartment building, and that he has about 20 relatives in Mexico, including a 10-year-old son.

U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency Special Agent Michael Keene testified that Pando has an outstanding homicide warrant for his arrest from the state of Chihuahua.

Pando, who is said to be a resident alien of the United States, was arrested Dec. 9 as part of a federal and state narcotics investigation that discovered former and current employees of the Herrera law firm and some Herrera family members may have been involved in an illegal drug operation, according to federal court documents.

Pando is believed to have maintained a home in Presidio where he allegedly received shipments of narcotics from Mexico, then passed them along to Odessa to Elizardo "The Lizard" Aranda and Louis Renteria, alleged senior leaders in the drug operation.

Keene said Pando's name came up in conversations during telephone wire taps, mainly to Aranda and Renteria.

Keene said the conversations discussed the transportation of marijuana from Ojinaga across the border to Presidio, and then deeper into the United States. The DEA agent said there were about 20 calls "of an evidentiary nature" monitored from the mobile home in Presidio where Pando lived with a girlfriend.

The agent also testified that a confidential government source saw Pando involved with drug shipments of up to 400 pounds.

Keene noted that some of the calls set up trips to Presidio by organization runners to get marijuana shipments for transport to Odessa, where the contraband was weighed, repackaged and allegedly sent to Reta Baldee Pfolsgroff in Dallas. Pfolsgroff was also arrested in the Dec. 9 sweep and is in custody in the Dallas area.

"The weight of the evidence is substantial," said Platt, who took note of previous arrests and Pando's interests in Mexico to determine that Pando is a flight risk.

"The ties are so substantial," he said, "that I don't see the circumstances (for release) at this time."

In the meantime, another suspect in the case, Celia Puente of Hobbs, N.M., was arrested in New Mexico on a drug conspiracy complaint based on what is being called the Herrera operation, said Lt. Robert Ralls of the Texas Department of Public Safety Narcotics Division. Ms. Puente is currently in the custody of the U.S. Marshal's Service in New Mexico.

Ralls said the investigation shows Ms. Puente is linked to the Herrera portion of the investigation through the Hobbs narcotics distribution operation which, court testimony indicated, was allegedly run by Sandra Herrera, the sister of Jesse Herrera.

Ralls said that a search of Sandra Herrera's Hobbs home by the Lea County Narcotics Task Force and undercover operations by that task force established links between Sandra Herrera, her common-law husband Mike Navarette and Ms. Puente.

A federal grand jury is expected to indict additional suspects today and return additional indictments on some suspects already charged.

Local food pantry hopes to benefit from area Y2K stockpiles

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

Americans who stocked up on canned goods and nonperishable food items in preparation for Y2K are being asked to donate those extra items to local food banks.

America's Second Harvest, the nation's largest hunger relief organization comprised of 200 food banks around the country, will launch the "Y Go 2 Waste" food drive from Jan. 15 to Feb. 15.

"We're driving the national campaign," said Carol Gifford, spokeswoman for the Chicago-based organization. "We left it flexible, so each food bank can develop their own campaign as to the needs in their own community."

Dolly Neff, executive director of the West Texas Food Bank, is urging local residents to hold onto their food items and participate in the Boy Scout food drive scheduled for Feb. 5.

And though the Permian Basin entered 2000 without any disruptions, Ms. Neff said winter weather could be a problem this month.

"We usually see ice storms in January," she noted.

Roy Loris, senior district executive for the Buffalo Trail Council of the Boy Scouts of America said the council will be participating in the annual food drive held by the Scouts throughout the country.

He said the Scouts will distribute bags to households during the week before the food drive and residents are asked to put food items in the bags and place them outside their front door early on the morning of Feb. 5. Some troops will begin collecting bags at around 8 a.m., he said. The collection will begin in earnest at 10 a.m. and last until 2 p.m.

There will also be three drop-off points where Midlanders can leave food: H-E-B at Midkiff and Wadley; Furr's Supermarket at 4340 W. Illinois and the Scout Service Center at 1101 W. Texas. Items can be brought to any of those three locations between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Loris said the goal is to collect 23,000 pounds of food in Midland during the drive, up from 20,000 pounds collected last year. He added that he hopes the excess food stocked for Y2K will boost the collection.

He noted that a number of the organization's Cub Scout packs are being sponsored by elementary schools, and the schools are participating by having students bring canned goods to class for the Scouts to collect and take to the collection points during the drive.

Cub Scouts in Stanton have also been involved, collecting food in December for the Martin County food pantry.

The national "Y Go 2 Waste" campaign is being sponsored by Kellogg's.

There's renewed life in an old-fogey as clutter bites the dust

Clutter.It has sort of been my workplace trademark, which carried into my home life or vice versa.

In a way, it seemed comfortable in that it was familiar — as familiar as clutter is to the "Shoe" cartoon character who piles those reams of disheveled paper high and broad on his desk in avalanche style. As an old-fogey type, he still uses a typewriter at work.

For years, my desk, bookcase and immediate work area took on a ragtag appearance. It was a wreck and a mess. I had some sort of system for finding things, notes and research material. But it was tedious and sometimes frustrating, but rarely was it a defeating quasi-system. I managed, as old-timers in the business say, to "crank out the copy," a phrase suggestive of London's old Grub Street where literary hacks practiced their trade or art.

Todd

In clean-up times over the past 25 years, I have come across years-old, yellowing newspapers and old copy paper reserved for the bygone hot-type days, before the offset press and computer did away with the old presses, Linotypes and typewriters.

Over the years, editors from time to time would suggest that I might clean up and organize my allotted space. Always, they were genteel, occasionally bordering on the demanding, but nice about it dating back to Bill Collyns' days at the newspaper's editorial helm and into Jim Servatius' and Meta Minton's reign. That period takes in veteran city editors from Joe Salman to Gary Ott.

Fighting resistance, I did some clean up and shifted things around — from mostly to sort of. But all too soon, my workplace would again fall into a state of disrepair.

So, I repeated the pack rat refrain.

Eventually, when I was running around "the territory" in the spirit of my old Roustabout column dating to the 1970s, the editor or editors shifted my workplace to a corner down the hallway. It's a cubbyhole, which I find comfortable and semiprivate, as if I were hiding out.

Soon, joining my clutter was a prized birthday gift, a 1927 framed photograph, compliments of my professor-poet friend, Larry Griffin, of a Texas Press Association gathering in El Paso. It seemed so fitting and still does.

Things are changing, and the change has nothing to do with duress. A fortnight ago, around Christmastime, I took some time off from work and spent time in and around the house. It was my usual "sort-of-cleaning-up-the-place" routine that I had practiced for years.

Time and time again, a somewhat tidy place ended up cluttered once more.

Not much more than a week ago, as I was sprucing up the home place, I observed myself shifting things from papers and books to furniture and old typewriters from corner to corner and room to room.

Finally, I suppose, I had awakened. Was I repeating the same process, the same mis-

Funeral retailers oppose proposed casket regulation

AUSTIN (AP) — Funeral merchandise retailers, who would be regulated under a proposal by the head of the state agency that oversees the industry, say there is no need for them to be licensed.

"What do you need to know to sell a box? Come on, let's get real here," said Pat Graham, president of the Texas Association of Funeral Merchandise Retailers.

O.C. Robbins, executive director of the Texas Funeral Service Commission, is suggesting that the commission require companies that sell caskets, urns, clothing and other merchandise be licensed.

"Our state law says that when a family comes into a funeral home to make funeral arrangements, that that funeral director, that professional that's waiting on that family, has to be licensed," Robbins told the Austin American-Statesman.

"Yet you have others in the merchandising business where the family will go to, and they don't have to be a licensed individual and I think that's wrong," Robbins said.

The Texas Funeral Service Commission currently regulates directors, funeral homes and embalmers. Many licensed funeral homes sell merchandise as well as prepare bodies, arrange services and conduct burials. Caskets and such also are sold by unregulated retailers who offer no funeral services.

Graham said Robbins' proposal is an attempt to control the merchandise sales of funeral homes, which are suffering from increased competition on the Internet and the growing popularity of cremation.

"This is obvious intent of that (proposal) is funeral industry protectionism, as far as we're concerned," said Graham, part owner of Caskets Plus in San Antonio. He also is a funeral director at his Graham Funeral Home in Junction.

Jim Garrison, executive director of the Texas Funeral Directors Association, denied that the proposal's purpose is to protect sales. Funeral directors just want "a level playing field," he said.

Both sides say they are looking out for consumers.

Robbins says licensing would give his commission authority to act on behalf of dissatisfied customers.

Regulation would squeeze competition and drive up costs, the retailers say.

Rob Schneider of Consumers Union said fair competition is as important and consumer protection, especially for grief-stricken buyers.

"They don't take advantage of the market like they would if they were buying a car or a washing machine," Schneider said.

The debate likely will continue until the next Legislative session January 2001, when lawmakers can consider Robbins' proposal.

The Legislature last spring killed part of a bill that would have regulated funeral merchandisers.

Police Reports

Midland police officers retire

The Midland Police Department will say goodbye to three officers and one lieutenant today at 2 p.m. in the third floor classroom of the MPD.

Lt. Hank Norton has worked for the MPD for almost 35 years, said Midland Public Information Officer Tina Jauz. Officer John Driggs has served the city for almost 20 years, she added. Officer Tom Tyler has been with the MPD for 13 years.

"These members of the department will be missed," said Jauz. "The retirement party is an opportunity for employees and fellow officers to wish them well."

Obituaries

Alvis Niedecken

Alvis Overton Niedecken died Tuesday, January 4, 2000, at his home.

He was born July 28, 1925 in Hamlin, Jones County, Texas to Herman G. Niedecken and Maggie L. Tucker. He was raised and educated in Snyder, Texas, moving to Midland in 1945 after being discharged from the Army, where he met and married Maxine McKinney on August 22, 1946.

He began working for Jim Worley at Western Fence and Resthaven Memorial Park. Later he worked in the housing construction business, and was a salesman for M&M Credit at the time of his death.

The celebration of his home going will be Friday, 1:00 p.m. at Calvary Assembly of God Church, 908 S. Johnston with the Rev. Randall McDonald and Rev. Gayle Reeves officiating. Services are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home and burial is to follow at Resthaven Memorial Park Cemetery.

He was a member of Calvary Assembly of God and served as Deacon until his illness in 1998.

Outside of his family, whom he loved very much, his passion was his Lord and church. When he met an individual for the first time, the conversation very quickly turned to Christ — asking if the individual knew Him as their Lord and Saviour. If not, he wanted to pray with them. Alvis had been involved with the rest home through the church's outreach ministry, visiting three facilities and one rehab each month.

Mr. Niedecken is survived by his wife of 53 years, Maxine; five sons and their spouses, Norman and Bonnie, Clifford and Sandra, Ronald and Joelle, Kelly, Jeff and Jenell; four daughters and their spouses, Linda Stanley and Ron, Nona Hollums and Carl, Royce Brown, and Teresa Davis, all of Midland; 24 grandchildren, and 15 great-grandchildren. He is survived by three brothers, Clinton Niedecken of Corpus Christi, Ray Niedecken of Odessa, and Floyd Niedecken of Wimberley; three sisters, Fay Martin of Midland, Ludy Davis of Midland and Caroline Reeder of Fluvanna; many nieces and nephews, and friends.

He was preceded in death by four sons, one of which was Raymond, who gave his life in Vietnam; and one daughter, four sisters, three brothers, his parents, and one great-granddaughter.

Neta Starnes

Following a lengthy, courageous battle with an aggressive illness, Neta McCutchan Starnes lost her fight for life on this earth Monday, January 3, 2000, at University Hospital in San Antonio. Ellis Funeral Home will handle funeral arrangements. The services will be held at First Baptist Church of Midland on Friday morning at 10:00 a.m. with burial at Resthaven Memorial Park.

Neta was born May 9, 1940 in Rotan, Texas to Naomi and Charlie McCutchan, who both preceded her in death. Also preceding her in death was her father-in-law, Lonnie Hinds. After her high school graduation from Hobbs, Texas, she moved to Odessa, where she pursued an education in cosmetology. In early years, she worked as a hairdresser, beauty consultant, and convenience store manager. Later, for more than 20 years, she was employed and continued to work as a non-foods supervisor and grocery broker for Sav-A-Stop, McCarty-Hull, Barnett Brokerage and Murdock Brokerage, until her health required her to retire in 1998.

She married Johnny Starnes on July 3, 1986 in Midland, where they continued to make their home. She was a longtime member of the First Baptist Church of Midland.

Neta's entire life was based on a willingness to undertake any task, no matter how difficult, and she encouraged her family to do the same. An immense love for her children and grandchildren and a strong desire for their success motivated Neta to set examples, teaching them to attain their highest goals through strength and perseverance. She celebrated their achievements and guided them through disappointments, constantly urging, "You can have anything you want, if you want it bad enough."

She is survived by her husband, Johnny Starnes of Midland; a son, Kevin Hinds of Miami, Florida; a daughter and son-in-law, Jodie and Don Rasure of Midland; two grandchildren, Kelsie and Korey Rasure of Midland; two sisters and brothers-in-law, Leola and Windle Kincaid of Lake Buchanan, and Thelma and Hilburn McGaha of Odessa; a stepdaughter and her husband, Pam and Ross Kornbach of Jacksonville, Florida; a stepson and his wife, Glenn and Cheryl Starnes of Midland, their children; and several nieces and nephews.

Pallbearers will be Rick Darling, Paul Layne, Lester McGaha, Bob Petty, John Rasure and Jim Bob Solsbery.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests memorials be made to South Texas Organ Bank at 8122 Data Point Drive, Suite 1150, San Antonio, Texas 78229; or First Baptist Church Hospitality House at 2104 West Louisiana, Midland, Texas 79701.

Gladys Johnson

Gladys Ona Gabler Morris Johnson, 74, of Sweetwater, died Tuesday, January 4, 2000 at Abilene Regional Medical Center after a long illness of Sjorgren Syndrome and Lymphoma Cancer.

Funeral services will be held at 2:00 p.m. Thursday, January 6, 2000 at First Salem Evangelical Lutheran Church in Roscoe, Texas with the Rev. Glenn Dittmer officiating, under the direction of Cate-Spencer & Trent Funeral Home of Sweetwater, with cremation following service.

She was born August 29, 1925 in Loraine, Texas.

She grew up in the Champion Community in Roscoe, Texas. She graduated from Highland High School in Roscoe, Texas. She was a farmer and rancher, and she also worked for Village Market, Joe Liner's and Nolan County Welfare. She was a member of First Salem Evangelical Lutheran Church. She was a member of B.P.O. Does, Good Sam's, and Business and Professional Women's Club.

Survivors include two daughters, Kathryn Gay Morris Graham of Midland, Texas and Mary Frances Pilsner and husband, Leroy of Roscoe, Texas; a grandson, Michael James Brazil and wife, Angela of Loraine, Texas; a great-granddaughter, Michelle Ann Brazil of Loraine, Texas; a sister, Ina Gloria Althof and husband, Raymond of Roscoe, Texas; a brother, Ocie Clarence "O.C." Gabler of Loraine, Texas; and best friends, Horace "Ears" Wood and Virginia Eaton.

She was preceded in death by two husbands, W. I. Morris and Harold L. Johnson; two grandchildren, Robin Lynn Pilsner in 1974 and James Alan Pilsner in 1977; a sister-in-law, Dorothy Gabler in 1999; a son-in-law, Richard M. Graham; and her parents, Arthur and Anna Gabler.

Memorials may be made to First Salem Evangelical Lutheran Church, 923 Main Street, Roscoe, Texas 79545.

Honorary pallbearers are Jack Brown, Dr. Jim Brothers, Lloyd Harris, Ralph Stirl, Sidney Porter and Lindy Lindemann.

Border Patrol offers $2,000 bonus to new recruits

McALLEN (AP) — The U.S. Border Patrol, which fell short of hiring goals in 1999, is offering new recruits a $2,000 bonus.

A report by the General Accounting Office released late last month said the Border Patrol hired only 369 agents during the year that ended Sept. 30, despite a congressional mandate to hire 1,000 new border agents.

"It's true that we did not meet our hiring goals for 1999," said Joe Garza, chief of the Border Patrol's McAllen Sector. "One of the reasons is that it's a tight job market and we're competing with private industry and a booming economy where we have low unemployment."

The $2,000 is available to anyone who passes the requisite entrance exams and background checks and is admitted into the Border Patrol academy. In exchange for the bonus, the new agents sign on for at least a year. If they fail, drop out or leave the Border Patrol before that time, the bonus will be pro-rated, Garza said.

New agents being sworn in Monday will be the first to receive the bonuses in the McAllen Sector, which received about 100 new hires last year.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service, which oversees the Border Patrol, will officially comment on the $2,000 bonus and release an updated fact sheet on recruitment efforts Monday, said INS spokesman Tomas Zuniga.

The 2000 budget adopted by Congress provided for the hiring of 1,000 new agents. That money was also set aside for recruiting bonuses or to provide pay raises for existing agents if the 1,000-agent goal is not met.

Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, pushed for those funds to be added in the appropriations bill.

"Especially in Texas, the Border Patrol has more work than agents and that is why Congress gave the INS the authority this year to offer bonuses and other incentives to attract new officers," she said Wednesday.

The GAO report, released late last month, said that agents left the Border Patrol at a lower-than-expected 9 percent rate last year, but increasing numbers of recruits weren't even hired.

About three-fourths of the applicants did not show up for written job tests, and most who took the test failed it, the report said, About 40 percent of applicants failed their background investigations because of criminal records or other problems, it said.

The report sparked criticism from senators like Jon Kyl, R-Ariz, who said the arrests at the Canadian border of two people with alleged links to a militant group in Algeria showed why the Border Patrol needed to be beefed up.

In addition to the 1,000 new agents mandated by Congress, INS will have to hire almost 1,000 more to replace agents that have retired or quit.

Garza dismissed concerns that the pressure to hire so many agents would produce less capable border agents. He believes the bonus will attract qualified candidates who might otherwise not consider a career with the Border Patrol.

FIRE: A videotape of Gage Craft playing football survived the fatal fire

(From 1B)

Company that the family had no direct contact with helped collect items, clothing, and funds to help them get reestablished.

"Just tell (people who undergo tragedy) that you're there and praying for them. There are people who will say that they know how you feel when they don't, but nobody has said that to us," Ms. Craft said. "We talk about Gage like he's still here."

Joshua, 8, woke up to the smell of smoke. He had just been educated on procedures for such an instance in his third-grade class. Doing everything he had been taught, he yelled to alert the rest of the family and ran across the street to a neighbor's house to phone for help.

Everything, with the exception of a few pictures and videotapes, was destroyed. Fortunately, invaluable items like wedding and school pictures survived, as did a videotape of Gage playing football.

Though Gage was not around to open his presents, the family's presence through a time of trauma showed the Christmas spirit better than any sleigh bells or potbellied Santas, who, by the way, brought Joshua a bicycle.

"We celebrated because of what the season is all about. We know where Gage is today — he is in heaven, and we celebrate because of the love and the faith that we have in Jesus Christ," Reed said. "Even in the midst of tragedy we celebrated Christmas. The stocking hung for Gage indicated that God is at work and he is the one giving the peace."

"Christmas shows us the amount of love that God has for us because he gave to us his son. That has carried over into the spirit of Christians everywhere. Beyond Christmas gifts, glitter and lights, deep down we respond with our heart. We can't take away the tragedy of what happened, but the ability of people to care is what I'm seeing. The bottom line is we're going to do whatever we can to help them through this," McGuire said.

A cousin of his wrote the following poem in Gage's memory:

He never got to live his life;
How fair could that be?
His laugh could light up the night,
When you tickled his feet.
His life was a gift to us,
That he never got to give.
So maybe we can live the life,
He never got to live.

SCHOOL: Three area campuses remain on the renovation schedule

(From 1B)

virtually anybody could walk up to a classroom and we wouldn't know it," said Ms. Moore.

She said the new enclosed campus directs all traffic through the office and will allow administrators oversight of campus visitors. She said the new design also will keep students out of harsh weather when going between classes.

"That's really been the thing the kids liked. We asked the kids today what they thought about their new school. They said, 'We like it because it's all inside,'" Ms. Moore said .

Long is the sixth completed campus of a renovation project that began in May 1997. Seven more schools are yet to be completed. Henderson and Bonham elementary schools are still under construction. Wilson Heidelberg, executive director of auxiliary services said Bonham is expected to be complete by March 2000. Henderson is expected to be complete by May 2000.

"We are very pleased for a variety of reasons," said Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. "One is for the quality of the renovations. Most people have been impressed that we are getting the equivalent of new buildings."

The renovation projects are part of a $39.5 million bond issue voters approved in March 1997. The money generated from those bonds will eventually renovate 13 elementary school campuses.

Three campuses, Rusk, Emerson and Jones elementary, remain under the renovation schedule. The school board recently awarded a total bid package of $3,023,525 for the Rusk renovation and Lee George Construction of Big Spring was the successful bidder. Heidelberg said the project will begin in January.

Emerson is scheduled to advertise for bids in March 2000 with Jones following in May 2000. Heidelberg said both those campuses would be complete by December 2000.

TODD: Maybe ridding clutter on the outside will help inside takes, and, crazily, expecting different results? I think so.

(From 1B)

Then, I made the resolve to discard before others take up the chore after I head west — bite the dust and make my journey into eternity.

Still on vacation, I spent a fair amount of time cleaning up my workplace and — guess what — the feeling is good. Maybe ridding clutter on the outside will lend itself to un-cluttering and freeing up on the inside.

Maybe this spruced-up, organized look will bode well. It's a welcome change from former days of renewed habit. If a habit, it is being reinforced by my efficiency mentor, Betty Simmons, who dates back to Bill Collyns's earlier days at the newspaper.

Meanwhile, thanks, folks, for putting up with my old habits. This latter-day habit ought to be interesting.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Thursday, Jan. 6, 2000:

Your creativity and ingenuity lead you in new directions this year. You are full of ideas and energy, a nearly unbeatable combination. Your charisma is unusually high; others clearly want to be part of your team. If you are single, you could easily hook up with another, or you might opt to give a relationship a second chance. Be careful not to be too dominant or strong. If attached, be more empathetic and work on building rapport. Seek to understand where your mate is coming from. You'll both benefit from concrete demonstrations of caring. CAPRICORN often challenges your thinking.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ New beginnings are possible at home. Don't minimize a situation. Get in there and handle it. Check out a piece of property. Do needed investigation. If you feel good about a money matter, trust your instincts. A boss or supervisor might want you to take a stronger hand at work.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Reach out to a loved one at a distance. Stay on top of a potential offer. You care a lot about another; express this devotion. Make calls. Don't stand on ceremony. Your effort and persistence touch hearts. Discuss a winter getaway.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ Others seek you out and want your input. For whatever reason, you might feel shy and withdrawn. Think about a money matter. It is time to clear the slate and begin again. Not everyone has the right answer. Trust your judgment in a partnership. You are building on new ground.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ New beginnings are possible with a partner. Defer or think through decisions. Follow through on what you know is right in this situation. Reevaluate your long-term desires. Are they still applicable? Don't do anything halfway. Communication flourishes. Another finally talks about his feelings.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ Make health decisions. Don't compromise — you deserve the best and want to do the best for yourself. Your instincts are right on, but you might need to trust them more. Take a break. Consider your well-being over the long haul. You could be pressured at work, though you quickly clear out a lot.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Look at a relationship carefully. A child or new friendship needs direction. Make key decisions. New beginnings are possible. If you are single, someone you meet might be very important to you in the near future. Take an overview. Discuss ideas with openness and resourcefulness.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ Discuss domestic and personal problems. You need a change, and that might very well begin with an attitude adjustment. Recognize limits. Keep in mind what is workable for you. You might be compelled to bypass a problem; instead, choose not to. You will ultimately be a lot happier.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ Decide to reveal your feelings rather than keep them in. Talk and clear the air. Others appreciate knowing where you are coming from. Understand what is happening with another by encouraging him to talk. Be receptive. Ask key questions, and you'll get answers.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ Financial resolutions made now are likely to stick. Really think about what works for you. Don't get caught up in an idea just because it sounds good. Be honest about your needs. Be willing to restructure. Don't eliminate any key health benefits. Keep up your visits to the gym!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ New beginnings are possible. You simply need to decide to make them. Consider an image change or revamping your look. Schedule time with a child or loved one, and reminisce about what was. Discussions provide new directions. Melt barriers, don't enhance them. Refuse to be judgmental.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★ Don't always feel like you have to take action. You can slow down some and relax once in a while. Make decisions about how you need to treat yourself. Your intuition guides you — simply listen to it. You are full of fun and liveliness. A domestic matter needs to be sorted through.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ Action surrounds your friends. Be gregarious. Touch base with co-workers and friends. You make headway professionally through your many contacts. Your diplomatic skills are well-known. A talk leads you down another path to the same goal.

The Great Detective and his amanuensis, Dr. Watson, had returned to 221B Baker Street after an evening's bridge at the club. They lit their pipes and sat down in their wing chairs, reflecting on some of the hands.

"I liked your four-spade cue-bid on the last deal," remarked Watson. "It made it easy for me to contract for the small slam. But, my dear fellow, I cannot understand for the life of me why you elected to play West for both red kings and the ace-queen of spades. Surely it was against the odds for one defender to have all the missing wealth."

For a moment a hint of a smile might have been observed on Holmes's lips. "Yes, it is unlikely to find one defender with so much stuff, but by trick two the whole hand was an open book!

"If you remember, West led a low trump. I won in dummy and continued with a trump to my ace, on which West discarded a diamond. That was all I needed to know. Consider for a moment: To lead a singleton trump against a slam is a very risky proposition — it could easily give away the whole hand. The only reason the defender could have for such a dangerous maneuver was that everything else looked worse.

"With that to guide me, I proceeded to take the diamond finesse, then discarded a spade on the ace of diamonds. After drawing the remaining trump, I overtook the 10 of hearts with the ace and promptly took the ruffing finesse for the king. Six clubs bid and made. Really, quite elementary."

Rosie O'Donnell adopts another boy

NEW YORK — It's another boy for Rosie O'Donnell.

Blake Christopher O'Donnell, born a month prematurely on Dec. 5, joins O'Donnell's other two adopted children, Parker, 4, and sister Chelsea, 2.

"The baby is very healthy," Ms. O'Donnell said Tuesday after word of her new arrival leaked out. "He's half-Italian, half-hodgepodge. And everyone is delighted."

Rosie O'Donnell adopts another son. Blake Christopher was born Dec. 5.

Ms. O'Donnell, whose mother died of breast cancer when she was 10, has often said she would like a big family. She once referred to Mia Farrow, who has 14 children, 10 of them adopted, as "a real inspiration."

Ms. O'Donnell is single, but the New York Post said she employs male nannies to make sure the children have a male influence around the house.

BOULDER, Colo. — Don't look for "Boulder" on police uniforms in the miniseries about JonBenet Ramsey's slaying.

The city has denied requests from producers to use the department's uniforms, badges or city seal, Deputy Chief Jim Hughes said Tuesday. And Boulder County won't allow filming at its justice center.

"We are not participating in any way in the making of this movie. It is not appropriate, given this is an ongoing murder investigation," Police Chief Mark Beckner said. "This also is a fictional account. It is not accurate and we do not intend to lend our name to it in any way."

The CBS miniseries is based on the book "Perfect Murder, Perfect Town." The miniseries is to air Feb. 27 and March 1.

Six-year-old JonBenet was found dead in her family's basement in 1996. A grand jury has recessed without indicting anyone, and police have been criticized for their handling of the case.

ST. AUGUSTA, Minn. — Gov. Jesse Ventura may soon have a city named in his honor.

Officials in the township of St. Augusta want to graduate to city status with a high-profile name — Ventura.

"We sent him a letter and asked if it would be OK for us to do that, and we just received a reply back just recently that yes, we got his blessing," Township Clerk Harlan Jopp said.

The town board chose the name because of the governor's stand against special interests and support of a unicameral Legislature.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Fisk University had little trouble persuading South African Archbishop Desmond Tutu to come speak this month.

It just took a little coercion from a staff member — his daughter.

"Bribery and blackmail went on," Naomi Tutu joked in Wednesday's Tennessean newspaper. Ms. Tutu is program coordinator at the Race Relations Institute at Fisk.

"I was able to convince my dad he would get a chance to spend time with his grandchildren," Ms. Tutu said.

Her father, the 68-year-old Anglican archbishop and Nobel laureate who fought to end apartheid, is a visiting professor at Emory University in Atlanta.

Tutu will speak in honor of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. on Jan. 14, three days before the federal holiday for King.

NEW YORK — Two New Yorkers from opposing political camps — Mario Cuomo and Jack Kemp — will become political contributors on CBS's "Early Show," the network said Wednesday.

They make their first appearance Monday, and will regularly show up to discuss developments in the 2000 presidential campaign.

Kemp, a former congressman from Buffalo, was the GOP candidate for vice president in 1996. He is co-director of Empower America, an advocacy group he co-founded in 1993.

Cuomo, a Democrat and New York governor from 1983-95, has been working as a lawyer in New York City.

"The Early Show" airs weekdays from 7 to 9 a.m.

Saints fire Ditka after 3-13 season

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Mike Ditka bet just about everything on Ricky Williams this season. On Wednesday, he paid with his job.

Ditka was fired by the New Orleans Saints after three straight losing seasons, and he said he would never coach again.

Beloved in Chicago for 11 seasons after leading "Da Bears" to the Super Bowl in 1986, Iron Mike could not stop a downward slide in New Orleans that saw the Saints finish 3-13 to match the second-worst record in franchise history.

"We tried, but we didn't get it done," Ditka said. "That's the bottom line. When you don't get it done you're going to get out of there, and in a hurry."

The 60-year-old Ditka said he had hoped to stay on as coach despite the team's troubles, but decided he would never lead a football team again.

"Nope, never, no," Ditka said.

Last spring, Ditka puffed an eight-inch cigar triumphantly after trading eight draft choices — all the 1999 picks and the No. 1 and No. 3 for 2000 — to get Williams. At that time, Ditka proclaimed the Texas running back the "final piece of the puzzle" for the Saints and again talked of taking the team to the Super Bowl.

But Williams, who was injured for much of the season, gained only 884 yards and two touchdowns rushing — including 7 yards on 14 carries in the final game.

"I understand it fully: You're 3-13, you have the expectations we do, you bring in Ricky Williams, and it doesn't work out," Ditka said. "I mean, we got to be realists."

Ditka originally signed a three-year contract and said he should be fired if he couldn't accomplish his goals. He went on to rack up a 15-33 record, including a 6-23 record in the last 29 games, and a league-leading 14-game road losing streak.

This year's record is the worst ever for Ditka. His previous worst mark was 5-11 with the Bears in 1992.

Florida State is unanimous AP champion

By Richard Rosenblatt
AP Football Writer

NEW ORLEANS — After losing to Tennessee in last year's national title game, Florida State players vowed to "get back and win one."

On Tuesday night, that's exactly what the Seminoles did. In beating Virginia Tech 46-29 in the Sugar Bowl, Florida State was the unanimous No. 1 choice in the final Associated Press Top 25 college football poll released late Tuesday night.

"We lost in the Fiesta Bowl and there were a very sad bunch of guys," coach Bobby Bowden said Wednesday after accepting the AP's national championship trophy and two other title trophies. "And they let it be known. There were tears in the locker room and when they came out and we met back at Florida State when this season started, we said 'Let's try Florida State coach Bobby Bowden admires the Sears national championship trophy after his Seminoles defeated Virginia Tech, 46-29, in the Sugar Bowl Tuesday in New Orleans.

Bowden loves winning trophies

By Richard Rosenblatt
AP Football Writer

NEW ORLEANS — Bobby Bowden was back on the national championship podium for the first time in six years, loving every second of it.

"What else? What else?" he said, grinning and gesturing for even more hardware Wednesday after being presented with three national title trophies — including one from The Associated Press — about 10 hours after Florida State beat Virginia Tech 46-29 in the Sugar Bowl.

In perhaps the most exciting national title game since Miami upset Nebraska 31-30 in the 1984 Orange Bowl, the Seminoles and Hokies staged a doozy in the Superdome. The electrifying play of Florida State's Peter Warrick and Virginia Tech's Michael Vick produced a thrill a minute for the nearly four-hour game that featured a huge Hokies comeback followed by a final quarter surge to victory by the Seminoles.

"That was one physical game," Bowden said. "They lost some people, we lost some people, but this team did what it had to do."

The victory gave the Seminoles their second national title — they also won in 1993 — and clinched their place as college football's Team of '90s, a decade that saw Bowden's teams win a record 108 games and extend their streak of top-four finishes in the final AP poll to 13 years in a row.

Florida State (12-0) became the first team to go wire-to-wire in the AP poll since the preseason ratings began in 1950, and the win also ended comparisons to the Atlanta Braves — teams that won everything but the big one.

"Everyone said Virginia Tech was a hungry football team," Bowden said, "but you've got to remember we've been in the championship game and lost, and sat through that loss."

After the game and a call from President Clinton, Bowden said he returned to his hotel suite, visited with sons, daughters and grandchildren, then went upstairs and "celebrated with nobody.

"At 70 years of age?" he asked. "That 30-year old

Cswaykus commits to play at Rice

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland High senior Cotey-Joe Cswaykus is a talented athlete. That is why he will be continuing his athletic career at the collegiate level.

Cswaykus

Cswaykus also has a good head on his shoulders. That is why he will attend Rice University next fall.

Wednesday, Cswaykus orally committed to Rice University, a high profile academic institution located in Houston.

An oral commitment is non-binding. The first day a recruit can sign a letter of intent is Feb. 2.

Cswaykus will fulfill his duties as a student athlete by playing football and baseball for the Owls.

"It (academics) was big consideration," said Cswaykus, who carries a 3.67 GPA, is a member of National Honor Society and is expected to graduate in the top 15 percent of his class.

How big? Well, Cswaykus is going to Rice. That should be enough proof. Second, he will be a biomedical engineering major.

"Sports is only going to last so long. Academics will carry me into the next level of life," Cswaykus said.

Air Force was also high on Cswaykus' list. He already had an appointment set up, and like Rice, had the opportunity to be a two-sport athlete.

"An appointment is a tough thing to turn down and so is the chance to be an officer and a gentleman, but Rice was the place for me," said Cswaykus, who also had North Texas and the University of Texas-El Paso on his short list.

This is not to say that Cswaykus is all brains and no brawn. That is not the case. Cswaykus stands 6-foot-4, weighs 250 pounds and can run 40 meters in 4.8 seconds.

At MHS, he has played on the varsity football team since the half-way point of his freshman year. He has earned all-state honors in baseball and scored points at the District 4-5A track meet.

This past football season, he made District 4-5A's first team as a center. Cswaykus expects to contend for a starting spot next season.

"He is an excellent center," MHS football coach David Browning said. "He has a lot of savvy and did a great job of operating the offense as far as protection calls and things like that."

ECISD narrows list of possible Mojo coaches

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

ODESSA — The list of finalists for football's head coaching vacancy at Odessa Permian is down to five, the Ector County Independent School District announced Wednesday.

The five are Grand Prairie head coach Jerry Bomar, Pasadena Dobie head coach Mike Stephens, Sealy head coach T.J. Mills, University of Tulsa offensive coordinator Rocky Felkner and Corpus Christi Carroll head coach Terry Miller.

ECISD is looking for a coach to replace Randy Mayes, who was reassigned Dec. 6.

ECISD athletic director Don Wright said that the finalists will be brought in for interviews next week and that a new coach could be in place soon after.

"We may be able to go to the board on the 18th (with a new coach)," Wright said.

There are two things that stand out on the list which Wright said is a finalist that could not [illegible]. Wright said applications will continue to be accepted.

The first is Mills, the coach of Class 3A powerhouse Sealy. Mills guided the Tigers to four straight state titles from 1994 to 1997. It was the first time in UIL history for a school to win four straight championships. In his 15 seasons at Sealy, Mills has compiled a 134-47 record.

"T.J. Mills is a hot item around the state of Texas," Wright said.

The finalist list also is notable for its lack of Mojo. Of the five finalists, four have no ties to Permian. Only Stephens has been in the Permian system, coaching at Permian from 1987 to 1990 as an assis-

Chaparrals clobber Cisco in warmup for WJCAC play

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

The Midland College Chaparrals are going into Western Junior College Athletic Conference action on a roll.

Prior to starting WJCAC play Monday at Frank Phillips College, the Chaps wanted to work on rebounding and defending against Cisco Junior College. That emphasis, however, led to some offensive struggles for the Chaps but even more headaches for Cisco in a 72-44 win for Midland College, which improved to 13-3 overall.

In what started out as a close contest, which was reminiscent of their Nov. 20 meeting in which MC won 57-50 at the Weatherford Classic, the Chaps used a 13-3 run to close out the first half for a 38-25 advantage.

After a little talk by Coach Cotten at the break, the Chaps' defense took over the contest in the second half by forcing Cisco into 13 second-half turnovers.

"That's the second time we've held a team under 50 points this season," Cotten said. "We spent the last three practices on our defense and our offense suffered tonight and probably that's because I was concerned about our defense and rebounding. I'm a firm believer that defending and rebounding wins games and tonight was a good indication."

The Chaps held Cisco to just 34 percent shooting from the field and out-rebounded Cisco 34-27, so it was mission accomplished.

There was still enough offense, however, to score 71 points, led by sophomore guards Eugene Costello and Teohn Conner with 16 and 14 points respectively. Ricky Duff added 12 points, which included some crowd-pleasing dunks, and Jason Williams added 10 in probably his best game in a Chaparral uniform.

"I think we were a little sluggish in the first half," said Costello, who scored 15 of his game-high 16 in the second half. "My concern wasn't how many points I got. I just wanted the 'W', do what we were told and work on our defensive purpose."

Now the focus for the Chaps turns to conference play, where they know the stakes will be raised much higher.

"Our 13-3 record going into conference means

Payton's memory inspires bid day by Dallas' Smith

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Some day, Emmitt Smith may again run for 140 yards and two touchdowns by halftime like he did the last time he played Minnesota. What he can't do again is run with the special feeling he had that night.

Smith's big game was a tribute to his childhood idol, Walter Payton, who died a week before the Dallas Cowboys played the Vikings on Nov. 8. Every NFL stadium that weekend honored Payton with a moment of silence before kickoff.

As the fans who usually fill the Metrodome with deafening cheers stood quietly, Smith played out in his mind a scene he'd been planning for days.

"I draped his jersey, 34, on my back, gave him honor and said, 'Let me go play now,' " Smith said. "It was just a moment, a moment that I wanted to lift him up and say, 'Thank you, thank you for what you've done.' "

Smith revealed his inspiration Wednesday while discussing Dallas' return to Minnesota for a first-round playoff game on Sunday.

Smith will be fired up again to take on the Vikings, but this time it will be because of the playoffs. He said the dedication to Payton was a one-time gesture in his first game since the NFL's all-time leading rusher died Nov. 1 at age 45.

"I don't know if that can ever be re-created because the moment and times are totally different," he said. "You could try to re-create it all you want — you could try to duplicate it every week or every year if you want — but it won't be the same."

Smith ran for 49 yards in the first quarter against the Vikings, but it only led to two missed field goals. Two carries later, Payton's spirit took over.

Smith took a handoff at the Cowboys' 37, went off right guard and charged 63 yards down the sideline for a touchdown. He got past the final defender, Kenny Wright, with a stiff-arm to the face.

The Vikings fumbled the kickoff and Dallas recovered at the Minnesota 24. Smith got the ball again and scored without being touched. There was 6:03 left in the second quarter and Smith already had 140 yards on 13 carries.

AP Photo

Dallas Cowboys running back Emmit Smith, shown dragging Giants safety Percy Ellsworth last Sunday, will return to the scene of his best game this season when Dallas plays at Minnesota this Sunday.

He was well within shot of breaking his career-best, 237 yards, and also might have challenged Payton's NFL record of 275, set against the Vikings.

But Smith didn't get another carry. His right hand was broken on Wright's facemask and the only reason he continued playing with it was because the quick turnover forced the offense back onto the field.

"I wanted to honor Walter that night by giving the best performance I could possibly give," Smith said. "But God saw it fit that this hand be broken that particular day. And that's that.

"If it was meant for me to be out there and do more than I did, I probably would have never broken my hand."

Smith had a plate inserted and missed only one game. Despite leaving another game with a strained groin after just one carry, Smith finished the season with 1,397 yards — eight shy of the NFC lead and his best since 1995.

For his career, Smith has 13,963 yards, third on the all-time list. He's 2,764 yards from breaking Payton's mark.

"I lost an individual that I had looked at his personal accomplishments in life as well as in the game of football," Smith said. "I think any player who cares anything about the game of football understands who he was, what he stood for and what he did for the game."

Astros, Lima agree to 3-year extension

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Jose Lima, the Astros pitcher who has endeared himself to Houston fans with his flamboyance, agreed Wednesday to an $18.75 million, three-year contract that avoids salary arbitration.

"It's been a great thing for me to come to this city. I'm making money now, and I don't want to leave for a long time," Lima said at a news conference Tuesday, accompanied by his wife, Melissa, and 18-month-old son, Jose Jr.

Lima, an afterthought in an eight-player trade with the Detroit Tigers in 1996, has gone 37-18 in the past two seasons, including 21-10 with a 3.58 ERA last year as Houston won its third straight NL Central title.

"Jose waited for the opportunity, seized the opportunity, took advantage of the opportunity and has become one of the best pitchers in the National League," Astros general manager Gerry Hunsicker said.

Lima, 27, is known for his on-mound exuberance.

"Like it or not, I like to do my dancing, my (shark-fin style) rally cap," he said. "If you don't like it, don't play against me. Take the day off and enjoy it from the dugout. That's just how I am."

Hunsicker, a buttoned-down traditionalist, said he'd like to see some of Lima's spontaneity rub off on his teammates.

"I think what makes Jose unique is not his skill as a pitcher but his willingness to express himself when he's not only out on the mound, but whenever he's in public," Hunsicker said. "He's not afraid of what people think. I really believe that has played a part in his success."

Astros remember that in spring training two years ago, Lima was hit hard by the Royals and demoted to the bullpen but didn't complain.

"I won't forget that Kansas City day for the rest of my life. Two and two-thirds innings, nine runs," Lima said. "When I went in the (manager's) office the next day, I said, 'Oh guys, I'll see you later.' I thought I was going to get released."

When he was assured a spot on the roster, Lima guaranteed Hunsicker he'd win at least 15 games.

"People laughed behind my back," Lima said. He answered with a 16-8 breakout season.

Lima drew the same guffaws last spring when he promised a 20-win season on a national radio talk show.

"They say, 'There goes Lima again,' " he said. "People don't want to believe in me. But I believe in myself more than anybody. When I take the mound, I think I'm the best pitcher on Earth.

With December's trade of staff ace Mike Hampton to the New York Mets, Lima and Shane Reynolds will anchor a rotation that likely will include Chris Holt and newcomer Octavio Dotel. Scott Elarton, rebounding from off-season shoulder surgery, also could have a spot if he's ready this spring.

Hunsicker said Tuesday he's pursuing another arm that could vie for the rotation. Such a deal could be announced this week, he said.

Lima, who made $2,225,000 last year, would have been eligible for free agency after the 2001 season. He gets a $4.5 million signing bonus that's payable over three years, $3.75 million this season, $4.75 million in 2001 and $5.75 million in 2002. He can earn a total of $2.25 million in performance bonuses in the final two years of the contract.

Holt and outfielder Roger Cedeno are the only Astros still eligible for arbitration.

Dodgers sign Olson to $3.5 million, two-year contract

LOS ANGELES — The Los Angeles Dodgers, continuing to improve their bullpen, signed right-handed reliever Gregg Olson to a $3.5 million, two-year contract Wednesday.

Olson, 33, had a career-best 9-4 record with 14 saves and a 3.71 ERA in 61 appearances for the Arizona Diamondbacks last year. He gets $1.25 million this year and $1.75 million in 2001, and the Dodgers have a $2.25 million option for 2002 with a $500,000 buyout.

Olson began the season as Arizona's closer, and struggled in that role. He was replaced in midseason when the Diamondbacks acquired Matt Mantei from the Florida Marlins.

After that, Olson was used in a setup role and went 5-0 with a 2.61 ERA.

"We are excited about the acquisition of Gregg Olson, a talented setup man," Dodgers general manager Kevin Malone said. "He fits into our offseason plans and provides the manager with the flexibility to solidify his bullpen. This is a quality reliever who definitely shortens a game and brings added leadership to our clubhouse."

Cards offer Benes contract

ST. LOUIS — The St. Louis Cardinals and pitcher Andy Benes are interested in each other, but they're about $3.5 million apart.

Cardinals general manager Walter Jocketty sent Benes' agent an offer estimated at $16 million: $3 million for this year and an average of $6.5 million each of the next two. But Benes is asking for about $19.5 million, an average of $6.5 million per season.

"You know Andy," agent Scott Boras said Tuesday. "He's a very fair man. ... Andy is bending over backward to pitch for the Cardinals this year. He wants to."

Seattle's Payton pours 24 on Spurs

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Gary Payton scored 24 points as the Seattle SuperSonics beat the San Antonio Spurs 99-96 on Wednesday night for their second victory in seven games.

Horace Grant added 16 points, and Brent Barry had 13 for the SuperSonics. Tim Duncan had 24 points, and David Robinson added 20 for the Spurs, who have lost two straight.

Payton scored seven straight points, the last two on a driving layup, to give Seattle a 91-83 lead with 6:00 to play.

But Avery Johnson hit consecutive jumpers and Robinson made two free throws to bring San Antonio within three with 2:40 left.

Chuck Person countered with a 3-pointer with 1:50 remaining to make it 94-89. After Johnson hit another jumper, Baker made a free throw and Payton had a layup to give Seattle a 97-91 lead with 18.6 seconds to play. San Antonio could get no closer than three points the rest of the way.

Seattle led by as many as 15 points in the second quarter and had a 51-44 advantage at halftime. Payton and Ruben Patterson each scored 11 points in the first half.

Pistons 120, Hawks 108

ATLANTA — Grant Hill scored 42 points for the second game in a row, leading the Detroit Pistons to their fifth straight victory, 120-108 over the Atlanta Hawks on Wednesday night.

Hill, who also scored 42 Monday in a victory in Orlando, buried the Hawks with 17-point third quarter, helping bring the Pistons back from a 10-point deficit.

■ NBA Roundup

Jerry Stackhouse added 28 points, and former Hawk Christian Laettner had 23. Isaiah Rider, playing for the second time since a one-game suspension, led the Hawks with 27.

The Hawks played their second straight game without coach Lenny Wilkens, who was home with the flu. Assistant Stan Albeck once again served as acting head coach.

76ers 113, Warriors 92

PHILADELPHIA — Allen Iverson scored 34 points and Matt Geiger added a season-high 26 as Philadelphia extended Golden State's losing streak to seven games.

Iverson, who reached 30 points for the seventh time in eight games, was 11-of-19 from the field and 11-of-11 from the line.

Antawn Jamison had 26 points as the Warriors lost for the ninth time in 10 games and dropped to 0-4 since Garry St. Jean replaced P.J. Carlesimo as coach.

Jazz 118, Hornets 96

SALT LAKE CITY — Karl Malone scored 30 points on 12-of-15 shooting and had eight rebounds as Utah beat Charlotte. Malone also had seven assists and two blocked shots as the Jazz won their fourth in a row and stretched their Delta Center winning streak to seven games. John Stockton added 16 points.

Magic 116, Grizzlies 96

ORLANDO, Fla. — Chris Gatling scored 23 points as Orlando beat Vancouver to snap a five-game losing streak.

Tariq Abdul-Wahad added 17 points for Orlando, John Amaechi had 16, and Darrell Armstrong 15. Abdur-Rahim had 17 points for Vancouver, which beat Miami on Tuesday night for its second road victory of the season.

Bulls 77, Wizards 66

CHICAGO — Toni Kukoc, playing his first game in almost two months, hit his first four shots and finished with 18 points as Chicago beat Washington to snap an 11-game losing streak.

Kukoc, activated a few hours before the game after missing the last 24 because of lingering back spasms, also had 11 rebounds, five assists, two steals and two blocked shots in 39 minutes.

Washington's 66 points were a franchise low, beating the 69 scored against Houston in 1993. The Wizards were 24-of-84 (29 percent) from the floor.

Bulls rookie Elton Brand had 16 points and 16 rebounds. Tracy Murray led the Wizards with 18 points.

tant.

This could mean that ECISD goes away from tradition by not hiring a coach with experience in the Permian system or with Permian's offensive and defensive philosophies. That is not something that worries Wright.

"Our goal was to get the best coaches out there," Wright said.

Noticeably absent from the finalist list were Abilene Cooper head coach Randy Quisenberry, San Angelo Central head coach Gary Gaines, former Euless Trinity coach Ed Hickman and Sonny Detmer.

Detmer received a great deal of interest, creating a prolific passing attack at Mission. He is also the father of NFL quarterbacks Koy and Ty Detmer.

Quisenberry, Gaines and Hickman have Permian ties and drew a great deal of speculation when it was announced that a coaching search would take place. Not one of the three applied, making them non-candidates, according to Wright.

"The philosophy of the committee, which is headed by the (ECISD) superintendent (Vernon Stokes) was that they (the candidates) were going to come to us."

In 1999, Cswaykus batted .582, cranked 50 RBIs and had a .678 slugging percentage. He also showed a tremendous eye for a designated hitter, striking out just eight times in 98 at-bats.

"When you look at the baseball numbers, it doesn't look like he's come over from football," MHS baseball coach Barry Russell said. "When I gave recruits his baseball numbers, that changed their mind."

The idea of a two-sport athlete usually brings up names like Bo Jackson and Deion Sanders and Cswaykus will be the first to admit that is not his deal.

"My forte is not as a middle infielder," Cswaykus jokes. "I thank God, mom and dad and all my coaches for helping me get to where I am."

"We know to win this league we have to win on the road. The first step toward that goal is beating Frank Phillips."

Costello echoes Cotten's sentiments and added that it helps having more experienced players for conference play than the Chaps had last year.

"As sophomores on this team we know that conference is the second season," Costello said. "The first half of the season is to prepare you and get some chemistry going. Once you get to conference everything starts over. Your record is 0-0."

Baylor's 9-2 start puts coach in Blissful state

Associated Press

WACO — Baylor coach Dave Bliss sounds like a happy man.

He should. After all, the Bears (9-2) already have won more games then they did all of last season when they finished 6-24.

"We're getting better," said Bliss, who left a successful program at New Mexico last year to take over the foundering Baylor program.

"We haven't played anybody yet, but at the moment we're the best we can be and at moments we're not bad."

The Bears really couldn't get any worse. Finishing a five-year NCAA probation for recruiting violations, they hit rock-bottom by going 0-16 in the Big 12 in coach Harry Miller's final season.

Struggling to keep pace in the Big 12, the league's only private school averaged just 2,689 fans for home games last season and sought out a proven winner to replace Miller.

Enter Bliss, who guided New Mexico to seven NCAA tournaments in 11 years and leads Baylor back into the Big 12 Thursday night at No. 17 Texas, the defending regular-season league champion.

"We're obviously aware the Big 12 is stiffer competition than what we've played so far," Bliss said. "We don't have any pretenses, although we do know that we're better than we were last year."

Leading the Bears is guard Tevis Stukes, who quit the team in mid-season last year over a dispute with Miller.

Stukes stayed in school, returned to the team this season and averages 19.1 points. He was second in the Big 12 in scoring last year when he quit and has already made 38 3-pointers this season.

"I love Coach Bliss," said Stukes. "Before his arrival, I was trying to get my release so I could transfer without having to sit out a year."

Dave Bliss

The player and coach met to talk about their future together.

"I told him I didn't want to go anywhere, and that I wanted to play for him. He told me he wanted to coach me," Stukes said.

"It's going to fun going into the Big 12 this year to see how we can do. I think the people in Waco are excited."

Bliss coached against most of the Big 12 teams in previous stints at Southern Methodist and Oklahoma. When he was hired, Bliss said he looked forward to playing some of his old opponents.

Right now, however, he's not sure if his team is ready for the challenge.

"I'm the kind of guy who looks forward to eating dinner tonight, but there's something curious about a guy who would look forward to going down to Texas and then to Oklahoma," Bliss said.

"Losing is on the way to winning," he said. "If it was easy, everybody would be doing it."

Injured Cowboys cornerbacks practice, may play

IRVING — Cornerbacks Kevin Smith and Kevin Mathis returned to practice for the Dallas Cowboys on Wednesday and may be able to play Sunday against the Minnesota Vikings.

"I don't know how much they'll be able to contribute Sunday, but it was good to have them on the field and for them to stay on the field," coach Chan Gailey said. "We'll see how they feel tomorrow."

Smith has missed the last two games and five of the last six with a strained right hamstring. If he's cleared to play, he'll start opposite Deion Sanders, as he did when Dallas lost to Minnesota 27-17 in November.

Mathis has been out the last three games because of a sprained left knee. He started the season's first three games while Smith was out with a preseason injury.

Gailey said he hopes to know who can play by Thursday so the right people will get as much practice time as necessary.

"We don't want to leave that dangling," he said. "You've got to practice what you want to do."

Ex-Ram Fears dies at 77

PALM DESERT, Calif. — Tom Fears, an NFL Hall of Famer whose record of 18 catches in a game still stands, has died. He was 77.

Fears died Tuesday at Palm Desert Manor Care, according to Nick Hager of Palm Springs Mortuary.

Fears led the NFL in receptions in each of his first three seasons with the Los Angeles Rams, with whom he played from 1948-56.

In 1950, Fears set a then-NFL record of 84 receptions, including 18 against Green Bay on Dec. 3. He also had three touchdown receptions in a division playoff game against Chicago that year.

Known for his precise pass patterns, including the buttonhook, Fears scored the winning touchdown on a 73-yard pass from Norm Van Brocklin in the 1951 NFL championship game against Cleveland.

He went on to become the first coach of the expansion New Orleans Saints in 1967, and had a record of 13-34-2 in four seasons.

Lady Raiders roll

LUBBOCK — Keitha Dickerson had 19 points and 12 rebounds in No. 13 Texas Tech's 63-54 victory over Santa Clara on Wednesday night.

Katrisa O'Neal added 18 points for the Lady Raiders, who overcame an 11-point second-half deficit.

Santa Clara (9-3) had a 31-27 lead over Texas Tech (11-1) at halftime and increased the lead until the Lady Raiders started chipping away.

The Lady Raiders tied the game 45-45 with just over seven minutes left.

Aleah Johnson's layup with 6:39 left allowed Tech to take control for the first time since the game's opening minutes.

Texas Tech shot just 36 percent from the field, compared to the Broncos' 56 percent. During the first half, the Broncos made 66 percent of their shots compared to the Raiders' 32 percent.

Stars 3, Predators 1

DALLAS — After months of nagging, Dallas coach Ken Hitchcock has the Stars playing the defensive style that won last year's Stanley Cup.

Mike Keane's go-ahead goal 43 seconds into the final period Wednesday night sent the Stars to a 3-1 victory over Nashville, ending the Predators' franchise-best eight-game unbeaten streak.

"Our work ethic is there," said Hitchcock. "We're not cheating ourselves. We're coming to work every day. We're up 2-1 and we're not trying to hit a home run. We're playing smart hockey."

Business seminar

The Midland Business and Estate Council will host a seminar January 11 for trust and estate professionals and the general public. The two-part seminar is on revocable/living trusts and the duties and powers of trustees in Texas. It will be presented by Kenneth McLaughlin, a partner in the Houston law firm of Porter & Hedges, L.L.P., author of Matthew Bender & Co. Inc.'s "Texas Estate Planning" and "Texas Probate, Estate and Trust Administration" reference works. Registration for Session I begins at 3:30 p.m. and for Session II at 4:45 p.m. An optional dinner will follow at 6:15 p.m. Further information and reservations are available by calling 683-0803. Reservations should be made by noon Monday, Jan. 10.

Futures decline

NEW YORK (AP) — Crude oil prices fell Wednesday on the New York Mercantile Exchange in reaction to data showing a smaller-than-expected decline in U.S. stockpiles.

The American Petroleum Institute reported late Tuesday that U.S. crude oil stores fell 1.568 million barrels to 292.335 million barrels in the week ended Dec. 31.

The U.S. Energy Department reported Wednesday a 1.8 million-barrel decline, placing total crude oil stocks at 290.3 million barrels, only 6 million barrels above the record low of 284.5 million barrels in January 1997.

It was expected the decline would be 2 million to 4 million barrels, according to analysts.

Nasdaq tops 4,000

NEW YORK (AP) — Technology stocks, the dominant force on Wall Street this year, propelled the Nasdaq composite index to its first close above 4,000 Wednesday and boosted broader market indicators to records of their own.

The Nasdaq, which lists most of the world's leading technology companies, finished above 4,000 just 38 trading days after its first close above 3,000. The Nasdaq has dramatically outperformed the Standard & Poor's 500 and the Dow Jones industrials, which set their latest records on the slimmest of gains.

The Nasdaq composite rose 69.35 to close at 4,041.46, easily eclipsing its previous record of 3,975.38, set Monday.

The Dow rose 7.95 to 11,484.66, sliding past its previous record of 11,476.71, reached on Tuesday.

The S&P 500 gained 5.80 to a record 1,463.46. The Russell 2000 index of smaller companies rose 8.53 to 497.01, its first new record since April 21, 1998.

Gold falls

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar was mixed against other major currencies in European trading Wednesday. Gold fell.

The euro rose to $1.0320 from $1.0305 Tuesday and the British pound climbed to $1.6380 from $1.6352. But the dollar gained against the Japanese yen, rising to 103.83 yen Tuesday in Europe from 102.95.

Currencies of the 11 countries participating in the euro are no longer traded separately, though they remain in use. Based on the euro rates in Europe today, the dollar is worth: 1.8948 German marks, down from 1.8987; 6.3549 French francs, down from 6.3673; 2.1348 Dutch guilders, down from 2.1389; and 1,875.89 Italian lire, down from 1,879.51.

Gold closed in London at $280.10 bid per troy ounce, down from $291.10 on Tuesday.

In Zurich the bid price was $279.90, down from $280.90.

Gold fell 50 cents in Hong Kong to close at $282.625.

City hopes for byte of digital pie

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

Believing the economic future of Texas lies not with cattle, cotton or drill bits but with silicon computer chips and high-speed Internet connections, Lt. Gov. Rick Perry has formed an advisory council to make sure the state is ready.

According to a report from the American Electronics Association, reported in Houston Business Journal, Texas' high-tech industry employed over 313,000 Texans — more than the oil and gas and agriculture industries combined. — in 1997 and is second in the nation in terms of high-tech employment.

The Dallas Morning News reported in September 1999 that Texas added more high-tech jobs than any other state from 1990 to 1997 and a University of Texas study reported that the growth of the Internet generated $301 billion in revenue and 1.2 million jobs in 1998 in Texas.

Perry's council is called the Advisory Council on the Digital Economy, it is made of 21 individuals from high-tech companies in Dallas-Fort Worth, Austin and Houston, and four state senators.

"Broadly speaking, in the next 20 years, the digital economy will be the major economy," said Austin resident Mike Maples, chairman of the council and a former vice president of worldwide products at Microsoft and president of the American Software Association.

"In terms of job creation and use of resources, it will be the largest employer and the largest contributor to the Texas gross domestic product. The digital economy will have major ramifications throughout the nation and Texas has an opportunity to be a pioneer as it develops."

Dennis Clayton, director of economic development for the Midland Chamber of Commerce, agreed he would like to see Midland take part in the developing digital economy.

"We're very interested in telecommunications centers, call centers, all are top markets for our economic development efforts," he said.

He listed assets like the unused Texas Instruments building on Interstate 20, which he said would be a good match for such customer service, long distance or Internet centers, light manufacturing or perhaps one of the smaller software manufacturing companies.

Such companies, he observed, prefer to be near large research universities "but with the Internet, travel and communications, you'd think they could be located anywhere."

Of Austin and its heavy concentration of software companies, Dallas-Fort Worth and its concentration of telecommunications companies and Houston and its computer companies, "when you think of the population and traffic congestion in those places, they'd look at less congested communities."

Midland's current telecommunications and digital infrastructure "makes us a good location, if we can attract companies," he said. And when the Advanced Technology Center opens in the fall, it could put the area ahead of the curve by providing a trained work force.

"The ATC will provide skills that will help us be prepared and make us ready for those companies," he said. "Over half the ATC will be dedicated to training in digital, computer and advanced technology."

The council will not target one area of Texas but the entire state to ensure it offers a welcome environment, Maples said.

"Your community's evolution with the digital economy should be due to community efforts, not the state's," said Maples, who currently consults with 20 young high-tech firms.

He said the council has been asked to recommend to Perry and Texas legislators action in several areas:

- Ways to increase employment and encourage companies to invest in the state
- Ways to help the 'have nots' take advantage of the opportunities offered by the digital economy
- How the state government can utilize technology more effectively, both in state agencies and state universities.

"We want to encourage the state to not put inhibitors in place," he said, but to ensure there are incentives in place to encourage high-technology companies to locate to Texas, employ Texans and/or perform research and development programs in the state.

Shoppers walk out of a Disney retail store with bags of merchandise in Hong Kong in this file photo. In a letter to stockholders Wednesday, Walt Disney Co. Chairman and CEO Michael Eisner said despite disappointing performances in the company's home video and consumer products divisions in 1999, the company is in good health going into the next decade, although there will be some cost-cutting ahead.

No bonus, but Eisner still reaps more than $50 million

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Walt Disney Co., in a fiscal year marked by a slumping profit and a stagnant stock price, didn't pay an annual bonus to Chairman Michael Eisner for the first time since 1993.

Eisner's pay package for fiscal 1999 included a $750,000 salary and $3,820 in other payments, according to Disney's proxy statement. He also reaped almost $50 million in paper profits through the exercise of previously awarded stock options.

A year earlier, Eisner got a $5 million bonus, with salary and other pay that brought his total to almost $5.8 million.

The lack of bonuses for Eisner and some other top executives reflects Disney's drop in profits for the year that ended last Sept. 30, during which its shares rose 2.5 percent. Ranked as the world's second largest media business, Disney said in the proxy statement that it failed to meet the level of net income that would have triggered bonus payments.

"After the end of the fiscal year," a compensation subcommittee on Disney's board "confirmed that the 1999 target had not been achieved and accordingly that no annual bonuses could or would be paid," according to the filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Strong demand for electronic goods raises factory orders

WASHINGTON (AP) — Factory orders rose 1.2 percent in November as strong demand for electronic products gave American manufacturers their first increase in orders since August.

The November advance followed no gain in October and a 1 percent decline in September, the Commerce Department said Wednesday. Orders had risen by 1.3 percent in August.

The rebound in manufacturing was just one more piece of evidence that the U.S. economy is showing little evidence of a slowdown, despite three interest rate increases last year by the Federal Reserve.

Richard Yamarone, an economist at Argus Research in New York, said there was little doubt the Fed will raise rates again at their first meeting this year, a two-day session on Feb. 1-2, with more increases to follow.

"If we get continued economic strength and tight labor markets, we are looking for another three Fed rate hikes," Yamarone said.

Stocks, led by technology companies, had plunged Tuesday as investors grew increasingly worried about the possibility of future Fed actions. The Dow Jones industrial average, which suffered its fourth-worst point drop of all time Tuesday, losing 360 points, recovered somewhat Wednesday, rising by 125 points to close at 11,123.

President Clinton announced Tuesday that he was nominating Alan Greenspan for a fourth, four-year term as Fed chairman, something investors saw as removing any uncertainty over the Fed's freedom to increase interest rates if they saw the need to move.

For November, manufacturing orders increased by $4.5 billion to a seasonally adjusted $365.2 billion.

The rebound in demand was led by a $3 billion increase in orders for electrical equipment, which rose 8.4 percent over the October level, the biggest gain for this category since July 1998. Demand for electronic components, a category that includes computer chips, shot up by 32.9 percent.

Orders for primary metals, including steel, rose 1.8 percent to $15.7 billion. Compared with a year earlier, orders for primary metals were up 8 percent, a hopeful sign for an industry battered by a flood of cheaper imports since the Asian crisis started in 1997.

Reporter-Telegram names Evers advertising director

Staff Reports

The Reporter-Telegram has promoted Chuck Evers to advertising director. He formerly served as retail advertising manager.

Evers

As advertising director, Evers will continue to oversee retail advertising and national advertising, but he will also oversee the classified advertising department and will be responsible for the DollarSaver.

Charles Spence, publisher of the Reporter-Telegram, said, "We are delighted to have someone of Chuck Evers' background and expertise leading our advertising department, and look forward to working with him in this new role."

Evers came to the Reporter-Telegram March 1, 1997 from the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, where he served as display advertising manager.

He began his advertising sales career in 1972 selling advertising for Harte-Hanks in Corpus Christi. He also served as vice president, marketing for Chesapeake Publishing in Maryland and was self-employed as a consultant on advertising and circulation issues in Maryland before moving to Lubbock.

A native of Iowa, he attended Coe College in Cedar Rapids. Evers is president of the Retired and Senior Volunteers Program and is involved with Casa de Amigos and other groups involved with senior citizens and with the Chamber of Commerce.

He is married to Sharon and they have two sons, Robert, a student at Lamar University, and Chad, a Midland College student.

Change may be only thread holding last 1000 years together

By M. Ray Perryman

Predictions are expected at the end and beginning of a year, but they are especially abundant at the crest of the New Millennium. Prognosticators seem to be coming out of the woodwork to tell us what tomorrow will bring. (What can I say? You know I'm in the middle of it all — and loving it!).

Perryman

Among the spectrum of those forecasting the future, some base their predictions on unverifiable visions, feelings, or hope. Others derive their outlooks for what's ahead by looking at events from the past and seeking parallels. And then there are those who eclectically factor in the possibilities for the future with the realities of the present and the lessons from the past. I suspect you know which camp I call home.

Most everyone is aware of the expressions, "The past is prologue to the future," and "Those who ignore the past are doomed to repeat it." My take is that we make the same errors over and over again because we didn't learn from earlier mistakes.

I strive to incorporate new understandings with the tried and true. Hence, in looking back at our current millennium, I am inescapably aware of the significant changes that have occurred in all phases of life on this globe. Nothing is the same as it was at the dawning of Y1K. In fact, perhaps the only constant thread knitting together the last 1000 years has been the ubiquitous presence of change.

Monarchies have tumbled and democracies have emerged; knowledge and information once controlled by the elite have spread to the masses; political/economic revolutions have transformed borders and allegiances; and technological advances have paved the road as mankind stepped from the earth to the moon. Fortunes have been made (or lost) seemingly overnight, but just wait! The opportunities afforded by the Internet are unfathomable.

Not every occurrence within the global community, of course, has been good. We have witnessed entire countries ravaged by ethnic wars, pestilence, failed economies, famine, and natural disasters. But if we take the time to look back, and what better time than now, we acknowledge the advances outweigh retreats and economic growth far exceeds decline.

A study of political, social, and economic history during the last millennium is telling on at least two fronts. The first is that regardless of the economic conditions people and countries fall into, there is the tendency to believe their present set of circumstances will last forever. From the bubonic plague that wiped out nearly a third of Europe in the 14th Century to the Great Depression that engulfed the world, conventional predictions of the day foretold more of the same gloomy times ahead.

But time unfailingly gives us the great gift of perspective, we now know that the history of civilization will not be held hostage even by seemingly cataclysmic events. Even in the face of personal tragedy, time mercilessly (and blessedly) marches on. When we are crushed by the weight of financial downturns, we can rely on the fact that even though we may feel the current situation will last forever, it will not. And you can take that to the bank!

So what do I forecast for tomorrow? Will our economy run amuck or will it soar to the heavens? Will the bear or the bull be the grand marshal of the stock market parade? Will we see an increase in "paper" billionaires or more people seeking handouts?

The answer is "Yes" to all of the above. There will be ups and downs, slides and slopes, opportunities and challenges. None will last forever; they never do. But, I can assure you, it will be interesting.

Dr. M. Ray Perryman is President and Chief Executive Officer of The Perryman Group (www.perrymangroup.com). He also serves as Institute Distinguished Professor of Economic Theory and Method at the International Institute for Advanced Studies.

DEAR ABBY

Smoking habit brings painful price

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Concerned Daughter-in-Law," whose mother-in-law continued to smoke after being diagnosed with emphysema and deteriorating lungs, brought back some painful memories for me.

Van Buren

My mother was diagnosed with the same condition and she, too, continued to smoke. Her reason was that she was going to die anyway, so she might as well enjoy the only little "pleasure" left in life. It tore at my heart to watch her take her oxygen treatment from the machine beside her chair and, afterward, reach for her cigarettes.

She had to use a walker to navigate the 20 or so steps from her chair to the bathroom. When she returned, she was gasping for breath as if she had run the marathon. How I wished that any young person just beginning to smoke could see her — and possibly keep from making the same mistake. It took her three long years to die from this horrible disease.

Abby, please continue your campaign to discourage young people from starting this terrible, addictive habit, so their loved ones will not have to go through the pain of watching them die a slow, painful death. — CAROL MASON, COSTA MESA, CALIF.

DEAR CAROL: You have my promise — as long as there is breath in my body — that I will do exactly that. But first, ANOTHER warning: No one should EVER "light up" in the vicinity of supplemental oxygen, which is extremely flammable. I heard about a woman who received third-degree burns to her face because she lit a cigarette before her oxygen was completely turned off and the flames melted the plastic breathing tubes onto her skin.

What young smokers fail to realize is that smoking causes changes in brain chemistry and creates a dependency. Tobacco companies recruit new smokers to replace the ones who escape the tentacles of the addiction, or who die from smoking-related illnesses. So, while adolescents and teens may take up the habit to appear "hot," "cool," or grown-up, breaking the habit may require not only iron will, but medical intervention. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the reader whose mother-in-law was diagnosed with emphysema and continued smoking.

When I was an actively practicing pharmacist, I saw similar scenarios with several people who were unable to give up nicotine in the face of the additional stress of the diagnosis. However, SOME of them were able to switch to "cleaner" alternatives such as a nicotine patch, gum or inhaler and avoid the pollutants of cigarettes that cause lung damage. (They were also not dangerous around oxygen tanks.)

Their doctors were willing to continue the prescriptions as long as necessary so their patients would avoid cigarettes. If "Concerned" really cannot get her mother-in-law to seek a second opinion right now, perhaps she could suggest one of these alternatives. — ELAINE DISNEY, CARROLLTON, TEXAS

DEAR ELAINE: What a terrific suggestion, and I hope it will spark interest in anyone who has been advised by a doctor to quit smoking — but has tried and failed.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 27, and I think I have a pretty good marriage. One of my husband's friends kissed me, and I didn't stop him. Now all I do is fantasize about me and him together. What should I do? — CONCERNED IN COLUMBIA, S.C.

DEAR CONCERNED: Arrange a romantic rendezvous and turn your fantasies into a reality — WITH YOUR HUSBAND. And don't let that man kiss you again. Believe me, he's no "friend" to either of you.

DEAR ABBY: In the late '80s, I worked in the kitchen of a catering company. The hours were long, the work was hard and the pay was minimal.

One day, the boss posted a letter on the bulletin board in the kitchen from a customer who was delighted with the food, service and professionalism of our company. All of the employees were thrilled that someone took the time to write a letter to compliment us.

That letter set the tone for a very long time. Whenever we felt overworked and underpaid, all we would have to do was go over to the bulletin board and read the letter. Our spirits and morale were automatically boosted.

Since then, whenever I encounter a product or service that I really enjoy, I take the time to let them know it — in writing.

If there is a company that is doing something right, a product that you really enjoy or a person who is an angel in disguise, take the time to express to them, preferably in writing, what you feel. Encourage them to keep up the good work, tell them what they do is important, and thank them. It will make their day — or year.

To all the bosses out there: Don't keep the letters in a file; put them where everyone can see them! — NEW ORLEANS READER

DEAR READER: I couldn't agree more. A thank-you note or written word of praise takes so little effort — and yet it can make a tremendous difference. The written word is a powerful medium that can be enjoyed over and over again, and speaks as eloquently of the writer as it does the subject about which is being written.

DEAR ABBY: I completely endorse the list of seven suggestions on how to treat the mentally ill sent to you by the psychologist in Texas (published Sept. 19). Now let me add two more:

8. If I confide that I'm taking medication for a mental health disorder, please do not warn me about all the side effects this particular medication has and all the dangers of long-term use, and then tout the "natural" or herbal alternatives to psychotropic drugs. Believe me — I've tried everything else, to no avail. It was a difficult and agonizing decision for me to finally take the step of seeking medical treatment for my illness. I resisted it, I rebelled against it, and I saw several psychiatrists and tried many other medications before I finally received effective treatment.

There may be risks involved in taking my current medication, but no risk is as great for me as doing without. At least now I am not daily, even hourly, considering suicide because of the agony my mental illness causes me. So, instead of issuing dire warnings, simply congratulate me upon finally gaining control over my illness, and offer your support and friendship. This would be truly helpful.

9. I know you love me and mean well, but PLEASE do not suggest that I would feel so much better if I had a meaningful relationship with God. I am suffering from a physical illness with mental manifestations; it has nothing to do with my spirituality or lack thereof. You would not tell someone with leukemia that he would not be ill if he simply prayed more often — don't be so unintentionally cruel as to say such a thing to me. It is the same as blaming me for my sickness, implying that my lack of moral character is the cause of my problems. I do enough of that on my own. Just pray for me, and tell me your thoughts and best wishes are with me. — LIVING IT IN THE U.S.A.

DEAR LIVING: I'm pleased to add your suggestions to the list, and I'm sure they will resonate with many people. I've said it before and I'll say it again: The most unwelcome advice in the world is that which is unasked for.

Decorate with scent: Use candles for home fashion

By Mishe'la Hosey

TOPSHAM, Maine (AP) — What you visit someone else's home, don't assume your host is a wonderful cook just because you smell sugar cookies, gingerbread, cinnamon buns and other delectable fragrances. Those savory smells could be nothing more than wicks and wax.

December is traditionally the best month for candlemakers, accounting for 35 percent of sales. Savvy candlemakers know this and introduce new scents during the holiday season. The nation's fascination with those scents has driven candle sales to a new level, with sales doubling over four years.

"Scented candles are now in every type of store that you go into," said Marianne McDermott of the National Candlemakers Association in Washington, D.C. "The retail aspect has exploded. We really have to cite fragrances as the major reason for that."

Gone are the days when the only scented candles that shoppers could find were plain vanilla and bayberry. The number of fragrance and color choices skyrocketed in the 1990s.

Sales have corresponded with the growing number of scents. Nationwide, retailers sell about $2.5 billion worth of candles a year in a market that has been growing at a rate of up to 15 percent a year, according to the National Candlemakers Association. Though the trade group does not differentiate between sales of scented and unscented candles, anyone who has visited a mall in recent years can see the proliferation of candles with such romantic and mouthwatering names as Angel Kisses, Hearts and Flowers, Cinnamon Bun, Irish Cream and Chocolate Lover's Delight.

The scented candles are also seasonal: Village Candle offers April Showers for spring, Pumpkin Patch for fall and Winter Wonderland for the holidays.

Cookies have celebrity look

By Amanda Hesser
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Celebrities — or would-be celebrities — eager to keep their faces before the fickle public have a new medium: the cookie.

Five-inch oval cookies in the shape of John Malkovich's head recently became a novel — though questionably appetizing — way to promote the film "Being John Malkovich." The cookies were sent to members of the news media to publicize the movie.

When Polly Mellen retired as an editor at Vogue last fall, Barneys New York gave her a party and served cookies carrying a black-and-white photograph of the back of her neatly coifed head. For the release of Simon Doonan's "Confessions of a Window Dresser," Barneys ordered cookies showing the book's cover. And Vanity Fair printed magazine covers on cookies for its Oscar party last year.

Because cookies are smaller than cakes, it is harder to produce finely detailed images on them. Yet the Malkovich cookie is so clear that you can practically make out the pores on his face. And every bit is edible. He can be deconstructed, sweet bite after sweet bite.

Most photo cookies are made by baking a butter cookie in the shape of the photo. The photo is then scanned and printed, using edible dyes, onto a thin edible paper that is then adhered to the cookie with icing.

Even in New York City, few bakeries have the technology to make the cookies. The Cookie Studio in Manhattan, which baked them for Vanity Fair and Barneys, would not reveal its methods.

Cakes 'n Shapes in Midtown, which bought its photo system from Cake Top Publishing in Longmont, Colo., makes photo cookies for anyone, even those who only dream of being a celebrity. But fame is not cheap. A 4x6-inch cookie with no photo is $6; one with a photo is $10.

People are still talking about the cookie from Ms. Mellen's party four months ago. In New York, that is a lifetime.

DITKA: Coach compiles 15-33 record in 3 years with Saints

(From 1C)

New Orleans scored just 260 points this season, while giving up 434.

Also fired by owner Tom Benson were general manager Bill Kuharich, senior vice president Terry O'Neil and the assistant coaches — in what Benson described as the first step in returning the Saints to the spot the team enjoyed in the late 1980s, when it had its only winning years and made four trips to the playoffs.

"This was a difficult decision," Benson said. "Mike Ditka is one of the greatest football people ever."

The Saints 45-13 loss to the Panthers on Sunday at the close of the season was among the worst in Ditka's coaching career. It wrapped up the seventh-straight season New Orleans has finished without a winning record.

Despite the poor showing, Ditka said Benson's decision was surprising.

"I really thought we'd get another year," Ditka said.

Financial terms of Ditka's departure were not disclosed, but he signed a contract extension two years ago. The new deal runs through 2002 and is reportedly worth $2 million a year.

Benson did not meet with reporters or answer questions. His statement said the search for a new general manager and coach would begin immediately and continue until he finds candidates to "take us where our organization and our fans want to be."

Under Ditka, Chicago dominated the NFC Central with 52 regular-season victories between 1985-88. That was the most wins by an NFL team in any four-year period.

Ditka ranked second among Bears coaches in both tenure and victories. He coached the Bears to six NFC Central titles, three appearances in the NFC title game and a Super Bowl title in 1986. The Bears were 18-1 that year. After the Super Bowl, Ditka was honored as coach of the year.

After being fired by Chicago, Ditka worked as an NFL commentator for four years. He was hired by the Saints on Jan. 28, 1997.

His first year was marked by sideline tantrums, yanking players out of games and even a threat to quit, which he rescinded later. The Saints were 6-10 and 6-10 in Ditka's first two years.

"With all the ranting and raving that people saw, he always left it on the field," said quarterback Billy Joe Tolliver. "He had his say and moved on. He was never devious. He's a man's man and a stand up guy and I have a lot of respect for him."

Ditka maintained close ties with Chicago, where he has a restaurant. His newly completed restaurant in New Orleans is scheduled to open Jan. 17.

Despite his Chicago connections, Ditka tried to adopt New Orleans as his own.

"I don't live in the past," he said in September. "This is my team now and this is my city."

After he drafted Williams, Ditka donned a dreadlocks wig and formal attire and posed with the running back in a wedding dress on the cover of a national magazine.

Ditka played in five Pro Bowls and two league championships (1963, 1971) and a Super Bowl during his NFL playing career with Chicago, Philadelphia and Dallas.

He was the first tight end to be inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame. He was the NFL rookie of the year in 1961. Ditka was also an assistant coach with Dallas in 1977.

Ditka's firing was the fifth NFL coaching change since the end of the regular season. Ray Rhodes of Green Bay and Pete Carroll of New England were fired, and the New York Jets had a double resignation, with Bill Belichick following Bill Parcells.

BOWDEN: President Clinton calls

(From 1C)

crowd, I don't want to hang around with them."

When he took Clinton's call, the first thing he asked the president was: "How come you're not working tonight?"

"We're thrilled you were able to see the game. All I can say is 'Go Hogs,'" Bowden said, a reference to the Arkansas Razorbacks from Clinton's home state.

The game itself was a classic battle of superstars — Warrick vs. Vick.

In the final game of his college career, Warrick set a Sugar Bowl record with 20 points — catching touchdown passes of 64 and 43 yards from Chris Weinke, running 59 yards on a punt return for a TD and adding a 2-point conversion grab. He had six catches for 163 yards, and Weinke threw for 329 yards and four TDs in what was likely his last college game.

Vick, Tech's elusive freshman quarterback, had 322 total yards — 225 passing and 97 rushing — and two TDs. The Hokies outgained the Seminoles 503-359, but Florida State's quick-strike ability more than made up for the difference.

"Vick's better than I thought," Bowden said. "I thought we could catch him with our speed, but we couldn't. I told our offense, 'You gotta win the game, our defense simply cannot stop them. They're tired.' They went out and did that."

It was also a year Bowden won his 300th game and secured the first perfect season in 40 years as a head coach, something sons Terry and Tommy already have accomplished.

"I'm sure they wanted the old man to win one," Bowden said. "What is he, 70 years old? How many more chances will he get?"

Asked why he doesn't retire, Bowden recalled his junior college coaching days.

"I was just as excited last night as I was back then — South Georgia College vs. Middle Georgia College in 1955," he said. "I wanted to win that one just as much, and I couldn't sleep any better then than the night before preparing for the national championship.

"I don't know why I'm that way. I still have that same fear of losing, and that desire to win ... and the love of the game and working with those kids."

Naturally, he plans to be back for another title chance next season in the Orange Bowl, the Bowl Championship Series' title game for the 2000 season.

"You bet your life we'll be striving to be back," Bowden said.

POLL: Nebraska finishes in third

(From 1C)

and get back to win one."

Florida State had all 70 first-place votes and 1,750 points from the AP panel, while the Hokies (11-1) finished No. 2 — the school's best finish ever. Tech was No. 10 in 1995.

Virginia Tech received 1,647 points to edge No. 3 Nebraska (12-1), which had 1,634 points after its 31-21 win over Tennessee in the Fiesta Bowl.

In the final USA Today-ESPN coaches' poll, Florida State was first, Nebraska second and Virginia Tech third.

Florida State also won the 1993 national title.

The Seminoles made a little history, too. They became the first team to go wire-to-wire as the top team since the preseason ratings began in 1950. The win also gave Bowden his first perfect season in 40 years as a head coach.

Since 1950, eight teams were ranked No. 1 in the AP preseason poll, fell out of the top spot at some point, but went on to win the national title: Tennessee (1951); Michigan State (1952); Oklahoma (1956, 1974, 1975, 1985); Alabama (1978); and Florida State (1993).

Before 1950, there were two wire-to-wire champions — Notre Dame in 1943 and Army in 1945.

Wisconsin (10-2), a 17-9 winner over Stanford in the Rose Bowl, finished No. 4, followed by No. 5 Michigan (10-2), No. 6 Kansas State (11-1), No. 7 Michigan State (10-2), No. 8 Alabama (10-3), No. 9 Tennessee (9-3) and No. 10 Marshall (13-0).

The Thundering Herd were the only other major college team with a perfect record, closing out their season with a 21-3 win over BYU in the Motor City Bowl.

Penn State, a 24-0 winner over Texas A&M in the Alamo Bowl, was No. 11, followed by No. 12 Florida, No. 13 Mississippi State, No. 14 Southern Mississippi, No. 15 Miami, No. 16 Georgia, No. 17 Arkansas, No. 18 Minnesota, No. 19 Oregon and No. 20 Georgia Tech.

Texas was No. 21, followed by No. 22 Mississippi, No. 23 Texas A&M, No. 24 Illinois and No. 25 Purdue.

The Big Ten and Southeastern conferences each had seven teams in the Top 25.

Mississippi and Illinois moved into the final poll after bowl wins, while Stanford and East Carolina dropped out after bowl losses.

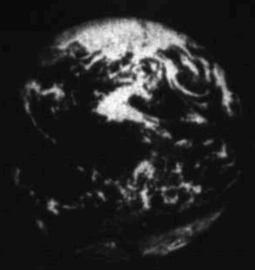
We went all the way around the world to get here.



DAE-WHO?

While Daewoo may not yet be a household name over here, it certainly is everywhere else. Our vehicles are sold in 180 countries. And in several, we're the best sellers. As Korea's number one carmaker - based on the 1999 Automotive News Databook - our annual production capacity will grow to 2.5 million units in the year 2000. All of our vehicles have been carefully developed with the help of the best automotive minds at our technical centers in the United Kingdom and Germany, and in cooperation with other automotive experts around the world.

3 Year, Scheduled Maintenance Program at NO EXTRA COST
In addition to our basic warranties, we provide you with a 3-year/36,000mile, no extra charge, scheduled maintenance program which provides:
• Prescribed maintenance items (engine oil, oil filter and air filter changes; tire rotation; etc.) which are needed every 6,000 miles, for up to 36,000 miles.
• A way to minimize your maintenance costs by providing replacement coverage for items such as brake pads, hoses, belts, wiper blades, etc., if they're needed during your first 3 years or 36,000 miles of ownership.

3 Year, 24 Hour Priority Assistance Program at NO EXTRA COST
Emergencies happen, and when they do, we'll be there to help - 24-hours a day, 7-days a week. This program is offered at no extra charge for the full term of the basic 3-year/36,000-mile limited warranty and includes:
Roadside Assistance Toll-Free Telephone Access Anytime Sign & Drive (In most instances, it's possible to simply sign a receipt. The provider of the service will be paid by us) Emergency Lockout Service, Lost Key Retrieval and Message Service Custom Trip-Routing and Map Service.

3 Year, Factory Limited Warranty NO EXTRA COST
Not only does every Daewoo come with a 3-year/36,000-miles warranty, but also 5-year/60,000-mile coverage on the powertrain. As a result, if warranty work is needed, you'll end up paying less - and we'll end up paying more.

The Toddy Cafe' is opening its first Restaurant February 1, 2000 in Midland, Texas. The Toddy Cafe is a new concept combining a California style cafe' with a coffee bar/ bakery. Fritz F. Gitschner, one of 50 Certified Master Chefs in the country, has created a menu that he calls fast global cuisine. The menu combines various indigenous ingredients from around the world to create unique and flavorful dishes. Since 1964, Toddy Products has been developing coffee and tea products for major retail chains such as Walt Disney, TCBY Yogurt, Caribou Coffee, and Godiva. Combining Master Chef Gitschner cuisine with Toddy's beverages will be the start of America's most exciting concept.
