OPEC makes historic 15 percent price cut

From Staff and Wire Reports

OPEC oil ministers wrapped up 12 days of bargaining with an agreement to cut oil prices by nearly 15 percent and restrict production to keep them there. Many energy analysts doubt the historic plan will work, although Midland energy observers said the accord is viewed as a positive move.

The main threat to the accord announced Monday in London is the likelihood that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, faced with declining demand for oil, will continue to lose customers to more flexible exporters outside the ranks of the cartel.

"This OPEC strategy is not a strategy that can deal with a shrinking market," said John Mugno, an energy specialist at Citibank in New York. "If the market doesn't strengthen then this agreement doesn't make any sense."

The OPEC agreement was hailed in Midland as a move which may stabilize the market and give some confidence to local oil operators — if the agreement sticks.

"What's killing us is the fear of the unknown," said petroleum consultant A.F. Giebel. "This unification, this re-alliance is very meaningful to me. I think it'll strenghthen the marketplace."

The agreement will probably lead to a slight increase in activity here, said Ed Thompson, executive director of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association. "This gives us some certainty, but not as much as we really need. We need to get assurances that these people will stand by their pricing and production agreements.

"At least we have the $29 price now; before we didn't have but a big, fat guess."

World demand for oil has steadily dropped in recent years, partly because consumer nations have adopted conservation measures and resorted to alternate energy sources.

The 13 OPEC ministers announced after a marathon six-hour negotiating session that 12 of them had agreed to reduce the $34 base price by $5, a reduction of nearly 15 percent.

The move was the first such cut in the cartel's 22-year history. It was in response to price cuts three weeks ago by non-OPEC producers Britain and Norway, followed by OPEC member Nigeria, which competes directly with the British and Norwegians for petroleum sales in Europe.

Iran, a cartel maverick, said it disapproved "in principle" of cutting prices, but that it would announce its new prices "soon."

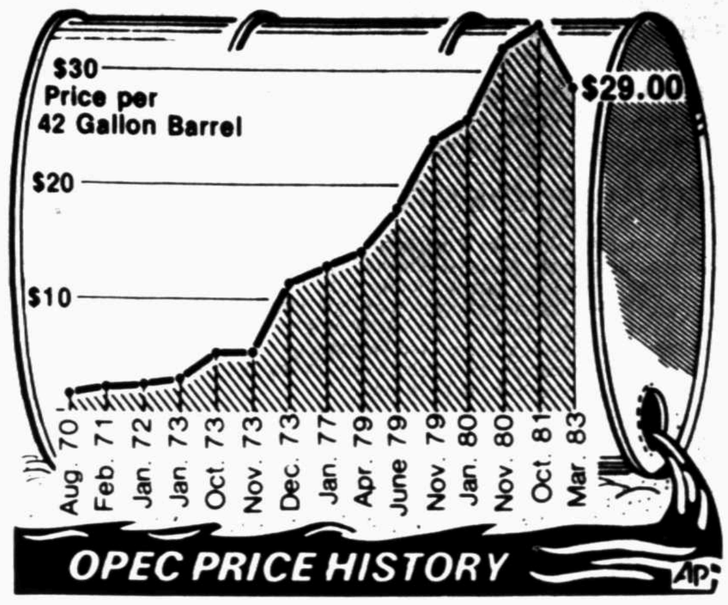

Other OPEC members said they had not decided when they would reduce their prices, though most are expected to make the cuts retroactive to Feb. 1. At $29 a barrel, the OPEC base price is at its lowest level since 1980, when it averaged $28.67 a barrel.

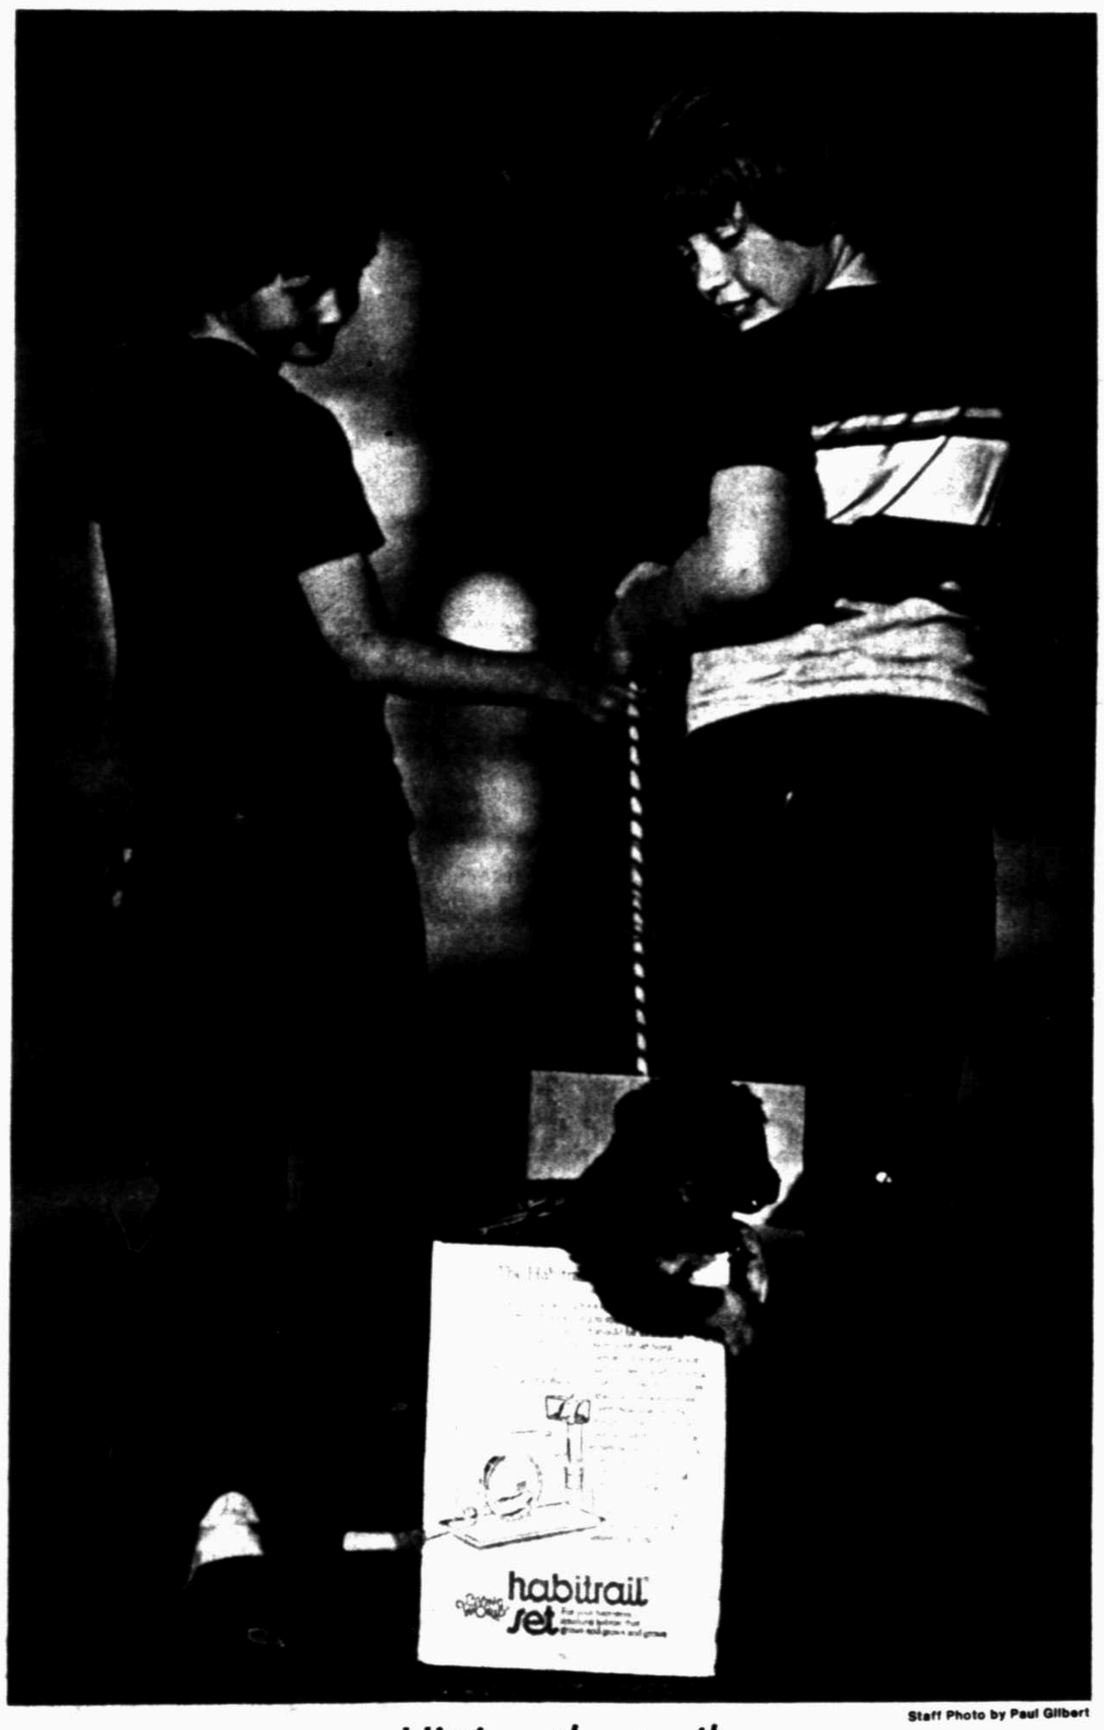

Mexico announced Monday that it will follow OPEC's lead and lower the price for its top-grade Isthmus crude from $32.50 a barrel to $29 and its heavier Maya crude from $25 to $23. Mexico generally follows the cartel's pricing policy.

Mohammad Gharazi, the Iranian oil minister, told a news conference the OPEC strategy for stabilizing oil prices was not jeopardized by his country's unwillingness to sign the price cut agreement. Iran did accept the production-sharing part of the accord, which sets an overall production limit of 17.5 million barrels a day.

Several other ministers, including Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani of Saudi Arabia, said they were certain the agreement would reverse the downward trend of oil prices that has threatened to break up the cartel.

"In a week or two, oil companies would like to see whether we're serious or not, and after that when they find out this is a well-planned package deal...definitely the market will start turning up," a visibly weary Yamani told a post-meeting news conference.

OPEC cuts may not lead to lower domestic pricing

By STEVEN P. ROSENFELD
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — OPEC's first-ever price cut does not guarantee further reductions in what consumers pay for gasoline and home heating oil — retail prices might even climb a few cents, industry analysts say.

Barring a collapse of the cartel's agreement on crude oil prices and production, prices at the gasoline pump will stabilize, the analysts said. Some said the bulk of the price reductions for petroleum products may already have occurred.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries announced agreement among its 13 member nations Monday to reduce its benchmark price for crude oil to $29 a barrel from $34 and limit production to 17.5 million barrels a day.

But with world oil prices on the spot market at about $28 a barrel, analysts said OPEC was merely recognizing that its posted prices had been unrealistic.

Charles Cahn, an analyst at the investment firm of Sanford C. Bernstein & Co. said that if the price and production agreement holds, prices for petroleum products should stabilize and then might climb 2 cents to 3 cents a gallon monthly for two or three months late this spring.

"The consumer will not get any added benefit from this unless wholesalers become convinced the cartel will not stick to its agreement," Cahn said. "OPEC members must not just convince each other, but the consuming world as well."

William Randol, an oil industry analyst at First Boston Corp., an investment firm, said OPEC's decision would not have much of an impact on prices for petroleum products.

"There could be a few more cents a gallon out there, but I wouldn't look for it," Randol said.

Trilby Lundberg, editor of the Lundberg Letter, a gasoline industry newsletter, said OPEC's clout as an oil provider for the United States has diminished, with its share of U.S. imports slipping to 42 percent last year from 70 percent in 1977. The U.S. produces a large share of its own oil.

"There is no guarantee" that the $5-a-barrel cut would be passed on to American motorists, she said. "We may find out in retrospect that we have had either all or part of our price cut."

Oil, T-bills affect economy

By The Associated Press

Suggesting that the economic recovery is continuing, new government figures released today show that production at the nation's factories and mines rose in February for the third straight month.

The increase of 0.3 percent, however, was less than one-fourth the January gain.

Oil analysts, meanwhile, said OPEC's new price cut and production agreement should have little immediate effect on the cost of U.S. gasoline and heating oil, and one OPEC minister believes the cartel's agreement has set the stage for an upturn in oil prices within two weeks.

In other news, yields on short-term Treasury securities turned up, meaning banks and savings and loan associations will be allowed to pay higher rates on certain savings certificates beginning today.

For the first time in its 22-year history, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries agreed to cut its official price for crude oil, to $29 a barrel from $34 a barrel and to limit total production to 17.5 million barrels daily. The announcement came Monday in London, where the oil ministers had held 12 days of talks.

Later in the day, Mexico announced it will drop the price of its top-grade crude to $29 a barrel. Pemex, the state petroleum monopoly, has been selling its light-grade Isthmus crude, used for making gasoline, for $32.50 a barrel. Mexico is not a member of OPEC but generally follows the pricing policy of the oil cartel.

Even before OPEC reached its decision, most of the world's oil had been priced between $29 and $30 a barrel. And on the spot market — where oil not under contract is traded — prices already were as low as $27.50 a barrel. So OPEC's reduction should not touch off lower prices at the gasoline pump, analysts say.

But if the agreement succeeds in drying up the world oil glut, gasoline prices may stop falling and could begin rising later this year.

Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, Saudi Arabia's oil minister, predicted that within two weeks, oil prices "will firm up and start increasing."

Yamani and other oil ministers view tha agreement as a significant turning point for the 13-member group.

Convicted murderer suing sheriff

A convicted murderer who claims he was subjected to beatings and unsanitary conditions in 1981 while he was in the Midland County Jail has filed a $300,000 lawsuit in federal court in Midland against Sheriff Dallas Smith.

The complainant, Lee Roy Jackson, about 35, of Midland alleges "cruel and unusual punishment" in his suit for $200,000 in declaratory relief and $100,000 in punitive damages.

Jackson says he was beaten by another inmate, Mike Louis; then-Chief Jailer Neil Ford and other deputies in September 1981. Earlier in that month, Jackson had been convicted by a jury in Midland's 238th State District Court of shooting grocer William Isaac "Bill" Dennis on March 12, 1981, with a .38-caliber pistol at the counter of Bill's Drive Inn Grocery on Midland's east side.

At the trial, Jackson claimed he accidentally shot Dennis, 61, in a grudge-induced verbal bout.

Jackson was judged a habitual criminal and was sentenced to life in prison. Previously, he had been convicted of burglary, robbery and escape from a penitentiary.

In his federal suit, Jackson claims he was beaten after he was accused by jailers of "making up a lot of noise."

Jackson also claims the "sheriff's office threatened both my mother and her boss...by telling my mother that if she filed suit that her home would be burned down."

Builder criticizes remodeling effort

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A Midland builder who took exception to Midland County using prisoners and sheriff's deputies to remodel the former Tax Office in the basement of the Midland County Courthouse vented his criticism Monday afternoon.

"We're most fortunate in having the sheriff (Dallas Smith) giving us help in this matter," County Judge Bill Ahders told the discontented builder, Pete Adams, in the Commissioners' Court meeting.

"I take exception to that statement," said Adams, who viewed the work as not following "good building practices.

"I'm not opposed to saving money," he said. "Saving money is probably the greatest thing in the world, especially if it's our money."

"Right," agreed the judge. "It's your money."

"But," proposed Adams, "are we saving money at the cost of quality and safety?"

Related stories, Page 1C

After surveying the work and checking around, Adams said he was persuaded that the workmanship was below par and that the remodeling was not approved by the city of Midland.

"Excuse me," said the judge. "The city of Midland has nothing to do with the county. We don't follow their rules; we don't have to. You understand that?"

Yes, Adams said he did. "That's been explained to me several times along the way."

However, Adams said that that independence "does not relieve the county of the responsibility of putting up safe construction."

"We agree," said Ahders. "Do you think we want to put up unsafe construction? Do you think the sheriff would do anything that's not safe?"

"I would hope not," Adams said.

"The sheriff is a very competent sheriff," he commented, "and I think he's done a good job providing law enforcement...and jail administration."

"I agree," said the judge.

"He's not a builder; he's not an architect," Adams added, "and he shouldn't be doing this."

The builder was critical of the sheriff assigning Lt. Bill Decker to supervise the work.

"I think the county hired that man as a deputy — not as a building superintendent, not as a supervisor for a construction crew and certainly not as a carpenter."

County Attorney J. Scott Henderson proposed that Adams' "basic problem" with the remodeling was that he wasn't "allowed to bid" on the work. "You're not worried about the quality of the construction down there."

Not so, said Adams. He said he was "concerned about the quality" but "I wouldn't have bid on this project."

Builder criticizes remodeling effort

"Then what's your problem?" Henderson asked.

Adams said he wasn't "complaining about their doing the work."

Henderson tendered another proposition: "Should we hire outside contractors to build county roads and to do road maintenance and such? Should we shut down the county barn?"

"No," said Adams. "But you've got to qualify that statement. If you have people that are qualified and do the work, you're going to let them do it."

However, Adams said, "I don't think you can get quality work from the people they have incarcerated in jail."

Commissioner C. Wallace "Wally" Craig asked Adams to be specific.

"Generally speaking," Adams said, "there's nothing wrong with the work downstairs, except as a builder I wouldn't buy it. I don't think...the county should buy it. I don't think the county would allow an outside contractor to do that quality of work and get away with it." Adams found fault in the construction of the walls and with what he deemed a potential fire hazard in the construction design.

Craig challenged Adams.

"But, is the quality of work creating a hazard?" the commissioner asked. "Do we have a problem that we can't live with?"

"No, I really don't think so," Adams said. "They're not getting their money's worth for what little money they're spending."

Henderson noted that "ordinarily" the county follows "right down to the letter" the city of Midland's building codes even though the county is a part the state of Texas and has no legal obligation to do so. "This wasn't our ordinary case," he said. The remodeling of 6,000 square feet converted the old Tax Office to additional sheriff's offices, to offices for Constable Tom McGinnis and his staff, to an expanded law library and to a "media room" for members of the press.

Further, Henderson explained the remodeling was "interim construction." The county is calling for a $10.76 million bond election April 23 to finance a new jail and an expanded and renovated courthouse.

"I can assure you of this," Craig told Adams. "That there was no subterfuge involved in doing it the way we did it. It was not some devious plan to hide it from everybody."

The commissioner said the work was done "reasonably well at the most savings possible for the citizens of the county." In addition, he defended Decker, who "had the dual capacity" of supervising the work and having the expertise to do so and of supervising the prisoners to a "reasonable degree."

"I'm sure that's correct," Adams said. "He's doing a good job."

Craig assured Adams "if the bond election should pass, we're not going to build it (expanded courthouse and jail) with...prisoner labor."

Saudi Oil Minister Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani addresses newsmen Monday evening in London following OPEC's announcement of a cut in its base oil price.

Mexico matches OPEC price cut

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico, the United States' largest single oil supplier, has matched OPEC's price cut despite banking fears that decreased revenues could force the financially troubled nation to default on its foreign debt.

Hours after the 13-member Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries slashed its base price Monday to $29 a barrel, the Mexican government followed suit, setting the price of its high-grade light Isthmus crude at $29 a barrel and its lower quality Maya crude at $23 a barrel.

Isthmus crude had been priced at $32.50 a barrel and Maya at $25 a barrel since March 1, 1982.

The nation's treasury secretary, Jesus Silva Herzog, said the price cuts were not out of line with Mexican attempts to control the country's worst economic crisis in half a century.

The crisis, spurred by sinking oil prices and a burgeoning foreign debt now at $83 billion, provoked international banking fears that the nation could default on debt payments, wreaking havoc on the world's financial structure.

"The reduction in the price of oil has a very negative effect on the Mexican economy, but not the catastrophic effect that some people have mentioned," Silva Herzog said in a meeting with executives of The Associated Press and western U.S. newspapers.

"Mexico will not default," Silva Herzog said Monday night.

Mexico, the world's fourth largest oil producer, pumps an average of 3 million barrels of crude a day. Half its estimated 1.5 million barrels a day in exports are sent to the United States.

"Fortunately, we made a projection of payments considerably lower" than the $29-a-barrel price, Silva Herzog said. "We had a cushion."

The treasury secretary also said the dropping prime interest rate in the United States was helping Mexico by decreasing interest payments and improving the American economy, thus spurring Mexico's non-petroleum exports and American tourism to Mexico.

In a wide-ranging discussion of Mexico's economic crisis, Silva Herzog also said:

—The nation is pledged to decrease public spending and limit imports;

—The United States must realize that a healthy Mexican economy aids American interests, especially along the 1,760 mile border between the two nations;

—Mexico and no one else is to blame for the nation's financial crisis.

"We spent what we had and even what we didn't have," Silva Herzog said. "We overspent."

The nation's financial woes began in 1982 as result of a glut in the international oil market and lower prices for other Mexican export commodities.

White suggests oil workers retrain

AUSTIN (AP) — New technologies and the "realities" of the petroleum market might suggest that oil workers retrain for new jobs, Gov. Mark White told union members meeting here.

"We should not sit idly by and ignore pressures and ignore realities in the marketplace," White said Monday.

White told members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union that a $300 million federal job training and retraining program will be available in Texas this fall.

"We have long relied on oil and gas in this state," White said. "We are seeing declining numbers of dollars coming from it as well as the quantity is declining. I think it's time to recognize it, indeed, that we not go the way that Michigan went."

International oil prices have been dropping steadily since the first of the year. On Monday, OPEC agreed to drop its prices from $34 to $29.

Accordingly, state revenue estimates have been reduced twice this year by state Comptroller Bob Bullock, since it is estimated that Texas loses $40 million in oil revenues for every dollar per barrel the oil price drops.

White also told the union members from Texas and Louisiana that his education budget calls for new technological training for children who "need to be taught three languages — they need to be taught English, Spanish and computer.

"If we're part of (technological advances), then we in a sense have ensured the future of this state for being part of the cutting edge of our economy," said White, "and not just a backwash state like we've seen happen in so many places in the Northeast where they didn't keep up with changing economy."

He blamed over-regulation of the oil industry for forcing prices too high for the market to bear.

"We have a very high unemployment in our coal mining industry," he said. "We've got to make certain we set sound policies in the nation so we don't in effect eliminate whole sections of our economy.

"They've hurt us on coal exploration in this country, because of coal severance taxes in the Northwest, because of certain restrictions on extraction of coal in the Northeast," White said. "As a result, we've hurt our economy, and we've forced up the cost of fuel for all of us."

Unemployment checks in jeopardy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration officials say there is no guarantee 27 states will be able to pay unemployment checks beyond this week, even though nearly $200 million is now available for loans to make such payments.

The Labor Department notified state officials Monday that $196.6 million would be advanced to the Treasury Department from the federal unemployment trust fund to avert a cessation of jobless benefits this week.

Otherwise, 27 states and the District of Columbia would have run out of money to continue unemployment payments at 12:01 a.m. EST Wednesday.

The transfer of funds came as enactment of a $5.03 billion supplemental unemployment compensation bill remained stalled in a Senate battle over amendments to a multi-billion-dollar jobs bill.

John F. Cogan, assistant secretary of labor for policy, said the addition of the $196.6 million to the pool from which hard-pressed states may borrow money merely ensures nonstop payments through this Friday.

The flow of benefits in those states beyond this week, he stressed, will almost certainly be interrupted unless the $5.03 billion appropriation is signed into law by Friday at the latest.

States seeking federal loans to ensure benefit payments

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is the list of 27 states, the District of Columbia and the Virgin Islands, with the amounts of money they seek to borrow to ensure nonstop payment of unemployment benefits, according to figures released by the Labor Department:

Pennsylvania, $248 million; Ohio, $223 million; Michigan, $210 million; Illinois, $201 million; Texas, $132.1 million; Wisconsin, $100 million; New Jersey, $65 million; Louisiana, $55 million; Indiana, $46.3 million; Minnesota, $43 million; Kentucky, $41.7 million; West Virginia, $40 million; Connecticut, $38 million; Missouri, $37 million; Tennessee, $35.5 million; Iowa, $35 million; Alabama, $33 million; Colorado, $32.6 million; Virginia, $32.1 million; Utah, $15.9 million; Idaho, $15.3 million; Arkansas, $14.9 million; Montana, $10 million; South Carolina, $8.5 million; District of Columbia and North Dakota, $8 million; Vermont, $5.5 million; Maine, $5 million, and the Virgin Islands, $725,000.

No figures were available for Puerto Rico.

Jack Hashian, a spokesman for the Employment and Training Administration, said "there seems to be enough money lingering" in the unemployment trust fund to assist states facing red-ink problems.

But Cogan noted that the federal and state governments are spending roughly $100 million a week on unemployment benefits, pointing to "the urgency of" gaining swift enactment of the $5.03 billion supplemental appropriation.

The legislation to help states maintain nonstop payment of jobless benefits has been taken captive in a battle over an amendment that would repeal a 1982 law requiring financial insititutions to withhold for federal taxes 10 percent of a bank depositor's interest and dividends.

The administration had sought the $5.03 billion for funds that could be lent to states to continue unemployment benefits for roughly 3 million jobless Americans.

Soaring unemployment over the last year and a half has placed heavy burdens on the ability of states to finance the 26 weeks of basic unemployment benefits to eligible recipients.

Through Feb. 28, government records show, some 20 states owed the federal government $12.6 billion in money borrowed for the payment of jobless benefits.

Figures available through the week of Feb. 19 showed that some 3,712,000 people were being paid unemployment insurance benefits under the various state-run programs. Nearly 11.5 million Americans remained out of work last month as the seasonally adjusted civilian unemployment rate stood still at 10.4 percent of the labor force.

Heading the list of states lined up for new loans from the Treasury is Pennsylvania, which had a 13.2 percent unemployment rate last month. That state is asking for $248 million, government records show.

The state of Ohio, with 13.6 percent joblessness, wants to borrow $223 million. Michigan, with 14.8 percent unemployment, is $210 million and Illinois, with 13.5 percent joblessness, is seeking $201 million.

Investigation launched into Barbie's escape from Europe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General William French Smith, under pressure from Congress and the White House, is launching a full investigation of whether U.S. intelligence helped Nazi war criminal Klaus Barbie escape from Europe after World War II.

Earlier this month, Smith had tentatively decided that the Justice Department would not pursue reports that Barbie, 69, was paid by U.S. intelligence and got U.S. aid in eluding French authorities.

The French were seeking to try Barbie for his role as Gestapo chief in Lyons from 1942 to 1944.

Known as the "Butcher of Lyons," Barbie was twice convicted and sentenced to death in absentia by French courts on war crimes charges in the 1950s.

Last Feb. 6, Barbie was expelled from Bolivia and returned to France to face another trial for alleged wartime mass murders.

Late Monday, Justice Department spokesman Tom DeCair said the allegations that U.S. officials paid Barbie and assisted his flight from Europe to Bolivia in 1951 are viewed "with deep concern, and a preliminary review of pertinent government files indicates that these allegations have sufficient merit to warrant a comprehensive investigation."

DeCair said the goal of the investigation is "to develop a factual record of any relationship that may have existed between Klaus Barbie and the United States government at any time. A report to Congress and the public will be made as soon as the investigation is completed."

Shortly after Barbie was expelled from Bolivia, Erhard Dabringhaus, 65, a German history professor at Wayne State University in Detroit, said that while working as a U.S. Army counter-intelligence officer in postwar West Germany, he was ordered twice to lie to French officials seeking Barbie.

He told the French that he knew nothing of Barbie, although in fact he knew that the U.S. government was paying Barbie $1,700 per month for at least the last six months of 1948 for his cooperation with U.S. intelligence, Dabringhaus said.

Dabringhaus, who was assigned at that time to an intelligence unit in Augsburg, West Germany, said that most of Barbie's information was useless but that he did provide good information about a uranium mine in northern Czechoslovakia — information of particular interest to the United States, which then still enjoyed a monopoly on atomic weapons.

Also last month in Pittsburg, Calif., another retired U.S. Army counter-intelligence officer, John Willms, said he protected Barbie from French interrogators in the spring of 1946 while Barbie was in U.S. Army custody.

'Pay raises may not be enough'

AUSTIN (AP) — Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, a former math teacher whose salary was only $15,000 after 22 years on the job, says teacher groups pushing ambitious pay raise packages might not be asking for enough.

Officials from several groups brought their requests to the House Public Education Committee on Monday. Most called for substantial increases, including a hike in starting salary.

Barbara O'Neal of Waco, president of the Texas State Teachers Association, testified for starting teacher salaries of $15,100 in 1985, up from the current $11,110. She said the raise "starts to address" the problem of attracting good teachers.

Johnny Veselka of the Texas School Administrators Council called for starting salaries of $14,530 in 1985. "It's a step in the right direction," he said.

But Ms. Glossbrenner, D-Alice, said it might take more than a step to make teaching careers more attractive.

"Everybody says it's a step in the right direction," she said. "I want to know when we're going to get there.

"When you take 36 percent of something that isn't very much, you still don't have very much," she said of one of the proposals.

Ms. Glossbrenner, a committee member, asked Veselka if $13,000 would lure good students into education.

"Are these kind of figures really going to get the best and the brightest, or at least the good, students into the teaching profession?" she asked.

Veselka said it would not be enough. Districts using local funds to bring starting salaries up to $14,000 have not found it easier to find quality teachers, he said.

Ms. Glossbrenner, who was chairman of the Alice High School math department when she quit in 1976, said legislators might be "kidding ourselves" in thinking anything less than a huge pay hike would whittle down the teacher shortage.

She said many young Texans want to teach, but "it's too expensive a hobby."

The Monday hearing also pointed out differences among several teacher groups pushing for pay hikes.

Odessa teacher Betty Pyle, president of the Texas Classroom Teachers Association, called for starting base salaries of $14,000. She said, however, that raises for more experienced teachers are more important.

Residents return; Spill cleaned up

HALLSBURG, Texas (AP) — About 400 people forced to leave their homes were back today after authorities mopped up a highly toxic chemical that spilled from a derailed train.

Investigators were trying to determine what caused nine Missouri Pacific cars to derail, puncturing a tank car that leaked 10 gallons of the chemical phenol.

No injuries were reported.

Families living within a one-mile radius of the wreck were ordered to evacuate. Several highways in the area eight miles east of Waco and 75 miles south of Dallas were closed until the chemical was cleaned up Monday afternoon.

The Hallsburg elementary school, three miles from the accident site, was closed for the day.

Three train employees were taken to Hillcrest Hospital in nearby Waco as a precaution and were released, said hospital spokeswoman Sue Ann Smythe.

"They exhibited no symptoms of having inhaled whatever this stuff was," she said.

The Dow Chemical Co.-owned phenol was sealed off by 8 a.m. and workers began righting the three tanker cars and six boxcars that derailed, Texas Department of Public Safety Lt. Ralph Briscoe said.

The train, bound for North Platte, Neb., from Houston, derailed as it broke off the main line and onto a side track to allow a southbound train to pass, authorities said.

A car carrying another hazardous chemical, butadiene, derailed but did not spill, Briscoe said.

Sheriff's deputies enlisted help from local chemical companies and used protective suits in containing the spill. Dow Chemical sent a team of spill experts to direct the cleanup.

Phenol, or carbolic acid, acts as a corrosive on the central nervous system and can cause death in moderate amounts through skin contact, inhalation or ingestion, according to Sax's Dangerous Properties of Industrial Materials. The chemical has several industrial uses and is an ingredient in glue, oilfield soaps and insecticide.

Phenol is listed as a hazardous waste by the Environmental Protection Agency, said a Fort Worth industrial chemist.

EL PASO (AP) — City workers shouldn't be allowed to live in neighboring New Mexico, El Paso Mayor Jonathan Rogers says.

It's "wrong" that 18 of the estimated 3,600 city workers paid by El Paso tax money aren't paying local city taxes because they live across the state line, Rogers said Monday.

Rogers' request to rescind the city employment policy would affect 18 workers, including seven firefighters who live in Anthony, Chaparral and Sunland, N.M., city officials said. Those communities are about 15 miles north of El Paso.

City workers already are prohibited from living in Ciudad Juarez.

Money could run out

AUSTIN (AP) — Unless Congress acts right away, Texas will run out of money for state unemployment benefits this week, according to the Texas Employment Commission.

"We have enough money to pay unemployment benefits through Thursday, maybe Friday," said Jo Bevil, TEC cashier. "We understand the Department of Labor will have some money they can use for at least through Friday."

Ms. Bevil said the Texas TEC would write out checks for jobless benefits and hold them until the money was available.

The U.S. House has already passed a bill giving additional unemployment compensation loans to 29 states. However, the measure is pending in the Senate.

Last October the TEC was forced to borrow $300 million from the federal government to keep the unemployment conpensation fund solvent.

Proposal upsets students

AUSTIN (AP) — A member of the Texas Student Lobby says a House proposal on raising fees could be used to railroad a college tuition increase through the Legislature.

"We're very concerned that the procedure for tuition rate-setting under this bill would not allow any public input of any kind," Rob Dollars said in a statement. "Massive increases in fees could simply be railroaded through the Legislature without a single hearing and with no chance of a gubernatorial veto."

The House Appropriations Committee scheduled a hearing today on a bill the Student Lobby says would allow the Legislative Budget Board to recommend to the Legislature the type and amount of all fees charged by the state.

Jim McCormack, director of the Student Lobby, said Monday the bill by Rep. Bill Presnal, appropriations chairman, "represents a backdoor approach to legislating fee increases that affect every single Texan.

"...We're particularly concerned with this bill's effect on tuition for state college and university students — it practically mandates at least a 100 percent tuition increase without a single tuition bill being passed by the Legislature," McCormack said.

Tax receipts down

AUSTIN (AP) — Comptroller Bob Bullock says local sales taxes are running 4.5 pecent behind last year.

"This decline in both local and state receipts from the sales tax was part of the reason I have lowered my estimate of available state revenues," Bullock said Monday.

Checks were mailed out Monday to 974 cities for the local sales taxes, which are collected by the state along with state sales taxes.

Houston received the largest payment, $7 million but receipts from the local sales tax were down 31.5 percent from the $10.3 million last March.

Dallas got $4.2 million, down 19 percent from March 1982.

San Antonio received $2.1 million, down 12.4 percent; Fort Worth got $1.4 million, down 14.46 percent; El Paso $746,000, down 43.7 percent.

Rodino questions department's decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General William French Smith is facing stern questions from a House committee chairman who says failure to prosecute Anne M. Burford is a problem that "has not gone away" with her resignation.

Anne M. Burford

Rep. Peter W. Rodino Jr. and members of his House Judiciary Committee are expected to ask Smith today why prosecutors ignored a historic contempt citation against the former administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency.

The Justice Department, headed by Smith, has sent the committee members a letter stating that the decision on prosecuting Mrs. Burford rests solely with the U.S. attorney in Washington, Stanley S. Harris.

Mrs. Burford resigned last Wednesday after 22 stormy months as chief of the environmental agency. After she left, Rodino, D-N.J., said: "Our concern about the role the (Justice) department has played has not gone away with the departure of Mrs. Burford from EPA."

The ex-EPA administrator became the highest ranking public official ever voted in contempt of Congress when the House cited her Dec. 16 by a lopsided tally of 259-105.

The vote followed her refusal, under presidential order, to give Congress documents about toxic waste dumps.

Anyone convicted of the offense faces a maximum one year in prison and a $1,000 fine. But in Mrs. Burford's case, the matter has never been taken before a federal grand jury.

Harris said in an interview Monday that he was not counseled by either the White House or the Justice Department to avoid prosecuting Mrs. Burford.

Rather, he said, he has delayed his decision because of a conflict-of-interest that developed in his legal role.

The conflict resulted from his involvement in a Justice Department lawsuit challenging the legality of the House vote.

Harris said he could not prosecute Mrs. Burford while participating in a suit to stop that very prosecution.

U.S. District Judge John Lewis Smith Jr. has dismissed the suit, but the deadline for the Justice Department to appeal is several weeks off. Until the department decides what to do, Harris said, the suit remains alive and so does the conflict.

"The decision (on prosecution) was delayed because of the conflict," Harris said. "I was not under White House or Justice Department orders.

"I told the department what I thought I ought to do. They had no objection to my sending a letter to (House Speaker Thomas P.) O'Neill saying there was a conflict. I still believe a conflict exists because of the possibility of appeal."

An appeal may now be unnecessary since the White House agreed to give congressional committees investigating the EPA the documents formerly withheld.

The committees are investigating allegations of conflict of interest, perjury, political manipulation and "sweetheart" deals for industrial polluters.

Once the appeals deadline passes, Harris acknowleged, "There would be no conflict and we would have to see what the circumstance is at that time."

Circumstances most likely would be different because House members from both parties have called for a resolution that would state Mrs. Burford no longer is in contempt.

But lawmakers who believe Harris' inaction was an affront to Congress still might not let the issue die.

Metropolitan Life must pay $8 million in damages

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An insurance company that denied an accidental death claim for $12,000 by contending that a drowning was a suicide must pay $8 million in punitive damages, a jury has decided.

Monday's award was the largest ever granted in a "bad faith" insurance case, said William Shernoff, who represented a widow in her Superior Court case against the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

Mary Frazier, 30, whose husband, David Frazier Jr, 23, drowned in Channel Islands Harbor in Oxnard, appeared calm after the verdict. "I feel great," she said. "It has been a long battle."

Frazier, a postal worker, had been fishing with relatives on a commerical boat, the Electra, on March 13, 1975.

Crew members said Frazier began screaming things like "don't let them get me" and having flashbacks to Army service in Vietnam, and that he jumped overboard, resisting rescue attempts.

But Maye Frazier, Frazier's mother who was aboard the Electra, said he slipped on debris and fell overboard. The family said Frazier's Army duty was in Hawaii, not Vietnam, and that he never had indicated any interest in suicide.

Deciding the death was a suicide, Metropolitan refused to pay the $12,000 double indemnity portion of the life insurance policy provided to postal employees. The company, however, did pay the basic $12,000 portion of the policy for death by any cause except suicide — even though suicide would have allowed it to pay nothing at all.

Jurors were not told about a previous settlement in a suit filed by Mrs. Frazier against the owners of the Electra and had to determine anew that Frazier's death was accidental.

They also ordered Metropolitan Life officials to pay Mrs. Frazier the previously denied $12,000 and $150,000 for her emotional suffering caused by the denial of benefit.

James Wilcox, who represented Metropolitan, said he was stunned by the verdict and that he and his client must "just try to absorb it ...and try to calm down and then make a rational decision as to what to do next."

But he predicted that Metropolitan will ask Judge M. Ross Bigelow to reduce the award or grant a new trial.

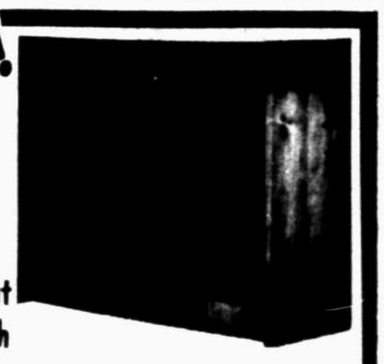

Shernoff, who predicted five years of appeals, had asked jurors to set punitive damages high enough to teach a lesson to Metropolitan.

Reason to smile

When the storm clouds start rolling in and it looks as though your parade will get rained on for sure, it's always nice to have a glimmer of hope to carry you through. Believe it or not, the oil industry may have that glimmer.

The industry has faced more than enough "hard times" in recent months. Drilling activity is off, oil prices have been falling and many oil companies, including those in Midland-Odessa, have been cutting back on their work forces. The last few months haven't been disastrous; statistics verify that fact. But they have been discouraging for many in the industry.

Mid-America Petroleum Inc. says there's one aspect of oil drilling currently which should cheer oil men to a degree. It's the cost of drilling a well. It's falling some.

Back in January 1979, Mid-America says, it cost about $350,000 to drill and complete an "average" 7,500-foot semi-proven well. Oil was selling for $15.25 per barrel at that time. In March this year, it cost $350,000 to drill and complete an average 7,500-foot semi-proven well. But now oil is selling for $30 a barrel — twice what it sold for just four short years ago.

What that means, Mid-America is quick to point out, is that 1983 may be shaping up as the best profit margin year for the oil industry in a decade. And, as any oil man knows, those profits are essential to continued operations.

That's a good thought for a time when the pressure is to close ranks and expect the worst.

Koestler's efforts

Arthur Koestler provided an intellectual foundation to the struggle against communism that will be remembered long after his death in London the other day.

The 1940 publication of his watershed novel, "Darkness at Noon," exposed the Soviet Union of the Stalin era as a brutal totalitarian state that in no way resembled the workers' utopia so avidly defended by numerous Western intellectuals of the time.

Koestler's knowledge of communism was unusually intimate. His passionate opposition to it came only after the ordeal of a tortured intellectual journey.

A once-enthusiastic Communist Party member, Koestler became disillusioned and then horrified at the Soviet philosophy that the end justifies the means.

Koestler's revulsion over the nature of communism found powerful expression in "Darkness at Noon," the story of an old Bolshevik commissar persuaded to confess to crimes he never committed.

The Koestler indictment was inspired by the savage purges and show trials of the Stalinist slave state. Moreover, its bleak portrayal of prison life owes much to Koestler's own imprisonment in Spain as a known communist and opponent of the Franco regime.

In reviewing "Darkness at Noon," George Orwell wrote: "Brilliant as this book is as a novel, and a piece of prison literature, it is probably most valuable as an interpretation of the Moscow 'confessions' by someone with an inner knowledge of totalitarian methods.

"What was frightening about these trials was not the fact that they happened — for obviously such things are necessary in a totalitarian society — but the eagerness of Western intellectuals to justify them."

In recent years, Arthur Koestler shunned politics and turned to mysticism, science and other interests. But his great contribution continues to be his compelling revelation that communist totalitarianism is nothing if not evil, and to pretend otherwise is nothing if not intellectual dishonesty.

Suppressing ideas

Does the 68-year-old widow of Salvador Allende, the Chilean Marxist president assassinated in the 1973 military coup, threaten to shake the foundations of the republic? The State Department apparently thinks so. It has turned down her application to enter the United States on the ground that letting her in temporarily would be "prejudicial to U.S. interests."

In what way "prejudicial?"

According to a State Department spokesman, Hortensia Allende, invited by the Roman Catholic archdiocese in the San Francisco area, Stanford University and the Northern California Ecumenical Council to address church groups, is a "highly placed member of the World Peace Council, which has a direct political affiliation with the Communist Party of the Soviet Union."

So? So the Reagan administration has a thing about the World Peace Council. Last June, the State Department spokesman denied visas to more than 400 members of the council to keep them from attending a U.N. disarmament conference, then partially reversed itself and allowed around 50 of these presumably dangerous foreigners in, under restricted conditions.

The World Peace Council is hostile to the Reagan administration's policies on nuclear arms. So are a lot of Americans. So are a lot of foreigners who have not the remotest connection with anything that can be labeled a communist front. Allende denies that she's a member of the World Peace Council, but what difference does it make? Does the Reagan administration think it can shut off debate by shutting the doors to foreigners belonging to "proscribed organizations?"

Does it consider the citizens of this free country to be so childishly naive as to need Big Brother's protection from supposedly dangerous opinions? How does it think its restrictions on travel square with the 1975 Helsinki Accords, signed by the United States, the Soviet Union and 33 other countries? The United States regularly denounces violations of the accords by the Soviet Union and its satellites.

The State Department excluded Allende under provisions of the McCarran Act, enacted over President Truman's veto during the Great Witch Hunt of the early 1950s. That law allows the exclusions of aliens who may "engage in activities prejudicial to the public interest," but they may be granted visas, and in cases like this they should be. For what is truly prejudicial to the public interest is not ideas hostile to this or any administration; it is the attempt to suppress them.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Man claims he's being railroaded

WASHINGTON — A man who told a Washington, D.C., grand jury he had seen Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., accept two $10,000 cash bribes claims he is being railroaded to prison because of his sworn testimony.

Jack Anderson

The man is William W. Pearce, and the circumstances of his indictment, arrest and incarceration are indeed peculiar. Here's the story:

Pearce was hired by ex-CIA agent Edwin P. Wilson, now a twice-convicted felon. At one point, Pearce was asked to spy on another Wilson associate. Pearce swears he saw the associate deliver bribes to Thurmond on two separate occasions at the Capitol Hill Club in Washington, D.C.

Pearce also had a full-time job with Honeywell, Inc., which was unaware of his work for Wilson. When company officials heard of the connection between Pearce and Wilson, they questioned Pearce about it and secured his dismissal in April 1982.

Pearce sued Honeywell over what he said was a forced resignation; Honeywell countersued, claiming Pearce defrauded the company on some billings. The matter dragged on.

Then on Feb. 2 and 3, I reported Pearce's charges about the alleged Thurmond bribes. On Feb. 8, Pearce met with Honeywell attorney John Lucas. He says Lucas wanted to settle the legal dispute.

Pearce said he agreed to drop his suit when Lucas promised Honeywell would drop the countersuit.

On Feb. 10, Pearce appeared before the grand jury and gave sworn testimony about the alleged payoffs to Thurmond.

On Feb. 15, Pearce was indicted by a federal grand jury in Norfolk on six counts of defrauding Honeywell.

On Feb. 17, two U.S. marshals showed up at Pearce's Virginia Beach, Va., home. Pearce was not there. The marshals showed his 18-year-old son, Todd, a writ of attachment on the house, which allowed them to make an inventory of its contents as part of Honeywell's civil suit.

In an unusual move, Lucas, the Honeywell attorney, accompanied the marshals and was allowed to go through the house, too. Pearce said his son saw Lucas examine the contents of a desk drawer.

A spokesman for the marshals said they didn't see the attorney rummaging through Pearce's belongings. But there is some question whether Lucas was in their sight at all times, and Pearce says the only explanation for Honeywell's subsequent attachment of one of his bank accounts is that the attorney found the account number among Pearce's private papers.

Lucas said he couldn't comment on any aspect of the case because it is in litigation.

On Feb. 18, Pearce called U.S. District Judge J. Calvitt Clarke Jr. to complain. It was Clarke who had signed the order stating that the marshals must take the Honeywell attorney with them to the Pearce home.

The following day, Pearce arrived at court in Norfolk ahead of his lawyer, and was confronted by a man who said he was an FBI agent. The man showed no identification and served no legal papers on Pearce, but informed him he was under arrest. He didn't say what the charges were, nor did he read Pearce his rights.

The agent seemed to know about the Thurmond matter. He also boasted that he knew "more about me than my mother or father (did)," Pearce recalled.

After that day's attachment proceedings before Clarke, another judge ordered Pearce held on $100,000 bond in the fraud case. Pearce has no criminal record, and the amount of the alleged fraud is less than $100,000.

"It might as well have been $1 billion, since all my money was tied up," Pearce said. He was taken to the Virginia Beach jail, where he spent several days until his family scraped up a portion of the bail money and he was released.

Pearce feels his treatment was a setup. His attorney, Robert J. Flynn Jr., said he plans to file a civil suit charging that Lucas, Honeywell, Thurmond and Judge Clarke were engaged in a "prior conspiracy" to harass his client.

Flynn believes Clarke had a personal interest in helping Thurmond. As one of three persons recommended by Sen. John Warner, R-Va., for a vacancy on the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals, Clarke would need approval of the Senate Judiciary Committee if nominated. Thurmond is chairman of the committee.

INSIDE REPORT:

Southern push may hurt Mondale

ATLANTA — On the morning after last week's "cattle show" of presidential hopefuls, the first shots were fired in a Southern counterrevolution against the tightening and potentially-fatal grasp by left-of-center special interest groups on the Democratic Party.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Southern Democratic state chairmen assembled for breakfast behind closed doors to hear from a special guest invited by Georgia chairman Bert Lance. He was a colleague of Lance's from the inner circle of Georgians who in 1976 guided Jimmy Carter to the presidency: Hamilton Jordan.

Using flip charts and pointer, Jordan told his story in blunt terms: No Democrat can be elected president without the South, but no Democrat can win the South if the special interest groups — labor, feminists, environmentalists, peace activists — force the dialogue left of the national consensus.

As of today, said Jordan, none of the six cattle show entrants who had appeared at the previous night's Georgia Jefferson-Jackson dinner could defeat a resurgent Ronald Reagan. To change that, he continued, it is necessary to shift the dialogue of the candidates toward the center. In effect, Lance and Jordan were calling for the establishment of a Southern political action committee to counteract all the other PACs representing Democratic constituency groups who have forced the candidates to the left.

There was full agreement from the Southern leaders, and therein lies both a threat and an opportunity for front-runner Walter F. Mondale. His campaign has been based on capturing the Democratic special interest groups that Lance and Jordan see as guarantors of defeat. Yet, the Southern counterrevolution could give Mondale the opportunity to emancipate himself from their tight embrace that ultimately may suffocate him.

Until now, Mondale and his strategists have welcomed the ambitious efforts by their old Carter administration pals, Lance and Jordan, to mobilize the South. With the burden of racist politics lifted and black voting percentages higher than elsewhere, had not the South at long last moved into "the mainstream"? Mondale's "Southern strategy" is to campaign here vigorously but not much differently from elsewhere. Typically, his first visit upon arriving in Atlanta last week was with the local black caucus.

Lance and Jordan more precisely put the South in the mainstream of the nation, but not of the Democratic Party. While the party has moved left of center, they say, the nation has moved right of center — where the South is today. Thus Jordan's injunction: To win the South, Democratic candidates must break away from the rhetoric of the special interest groups, and do it quickly.

Mondale's advantages of oratorical punch (demonstrated once again at the Atlanta cattle show) and organization may count for less in the South than elsewhere. The consensus of Democratic politicians gathered here was positive toward Mondale personally, negative about his ability to carry the South. A perceived potential to do just that, conversely, is the great strength of Sen. John Glenn.

Glenn's less strident speech here did not generate a response equal to Mondale's, but may have been more in keeping with what the Southern Democrats want. No candidate here, however, really met the Lance-Jordan standard for centrist rhetoric. The compulsive Reagan-baiting did not go over well with Georgia's new governor, Joe Frank Harris, Lance's close ally. "He's not all bad," Harris told us in speaking of Reagan. "He's a Republican and I'm a Democrat, but he's my president."

Early Mondale hopes of Lance rounding up Southern votes for him have been fading. When Mondale's agents requested privileges for the former vice president to speak first and apart from the pack here as he had at California and Boston cattle shows, Lance responded with a firm no (gently adding that it "would hurt Fritz").

In their quest for centrism, Lance and Jordan maintain strict neutrality, though Lance does not preclude making a choice prior to next year's Georgia primary. They vigorously deny any intention of a Jimmy Carter resurrection; when he drives up to begin his spiel, Jordan says, "people expect Jimmy to jump out of my trunk handing out brochures." The next stop on Jordan's traveling road show will be Southern Democratic governors in Florida.

All this is more unsettling for Mondale than for Glenn. Jordan has privately spelled out his theories to a Mondale strategist whose reflexive reaction was that this could be damaging to his man. In contrast, Bill White, Glenn's national campaign manager, sat in on Jordan's briefing to the state chairmen last week and later said he agreed with it all.

Yet, opportunity beckons for Mondale: to shift his rhetoric from incessant massaging of lobbying groups, to cool his ardent pursuit of the AFL-CIO endorsement, to find something wrong with Israeli policy, to suggest there are limits to his support of school teachers.

If not, he may collide with the Southern counterrevolution's determined effort to push the Democratic Party to a centrist posture where it can effectively contest for the presidency.

CHARLEY REESE

Power desire corrupting journalists

Is the press really liberal? Well, it depends on which segment of the press you are talking about and how you define liberalism. If you're talking about the so-called "national" press, the answer is a firm yes.

Charley Reese

Stanley Rothman and S. Robert Lichter, a couple of professors, interviewed and tested a random selection of journalists from the New York Times, the Washington Post, the Wall Street Journal, Time, Newsweek, U.S. News and World Report, ABC, CBS, NBC and public broadcasting.

Those folks are definitely liberal if we define liberalism as left-of-center economics, hostility to business, hostility to American institutions and acceptance of the "new morality" which is a positive way of saying rejection of the old Judeo-Christian ethics.

Just a few of its findings showed that 45 percent of the journalists believe the American legal system favors the rich; 68 percent believe government should substantially reduce the income gap between the rich and the poor; only 15 percent believe adultery is wrong; only 9 percent believe homosexual relations are wrong; and only a minority attend church or synagogue while 50 percent describe themselves as atheists or agnostics.

The two researchers found, by administering a series of tests, that the political attitudes of the journalists influenced their perceptions of society and therefore their news judgment. This is only a verfication of what common sense would tell you. In theory, journalistic training which views the ability to overcome your biases as the mark of a professional, should offset this very natural quirk of human nature.

Unfortunately, the researchers found something else, something which is most disturbing. They found that these elite journalists actively sought power.

"Leading journalists see themselves as already quite influential, but they want relatively more power in American society than they now have," the researchers said.

That's disturbing because while bias is a natural part of human nature and can be overcome, a desire for power implies no such effort is likely to be made. If your goal is to discover the truth, regardless of the consequences of that truth, then you have an incentive to be alert for and to overcome your biases. But power means influencing people to think and act in a certain way. Therefore, a desire for power implies that the person has already decided what the truth is. Nobody desires to influence another person unless they think they know what that person ought to do.

A desire for power flies in the face of my old-fashioned concept of the role of a journalist as a disinterested observer of people and events. In my fuddy-duddy day, the news reporter wanted to inform and left it up to the editorial writer and public relations man to peddle influence.

This is a critical issue for all of us. People cannot function in a free society without information. Those who control the flow of information, if so inclined, can definitely influence people by selecting and coloring the information. By the selection process, they can set the public agenda, so to speak, and by coloring the information, can influence how people think.

I can cite you a quick example. Compare media attention to the massacre of Palestinians in Beirut with the media attention to reports of an equally large massacre in Zimbabwe. Chances are, unless you are a cover-to-cover reader, you aren't even aware of the alleged massacre of over 1,000 people by the forces of Zimbabwe's leader, Robert Mugabe.

In this example, it just so happens that cameramen and newsmen were conveniently present in Beirut and absent in Zimbabwe. What they can't see and photograph, they can't very well emphasize, a fact which gives a great propaganda advantage to totalitarian governments.

But if just simple logistics and the ordinary quirks of human nature can contribute to a distorted reflection of reality assuming even the best of intentions, think what a desire for power rather than a desire for truth can do.

Bill would limit FBI's domestic spying

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Republican senator, saying he wants to prevent "past mistakes" from reoccurring, is pushing a bill that would reverse new rules that broaden the FBI's guidelines on domestic spying.

The measure co-sponsored by Sen. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., sets limits on undercover operations and also permits innocent "sting" victims to collect damages.

The legislation, which was introduced Monday in the Senate, would prevent the FBI from infiltrating and putting informants in political and other groups for a so-called "preliminary inquiry."

Under the bill, infiltration of a political, governmental, religious or news media organization could occur only after the Justice Department found "probable cause to believe that the (undercover) operation is necessary to detect or to prevent specific acts of criminality."

Last week, Attorney General William French Smith issued new, looser rules for the FBI, which allowed for the first time since 1976 the use of infiltration and informers in preliminary inquiries into domestic groups.

Preliminary inquiries were defined as those "where there is not yet a reasonable indication of criminal activity" to warrant a full investigation.

In 1976, Attorney General Edward Levi limited the use of infiltration and informants to full-scale domestic security investigations.

Levi's purpose was to end abuses uncovered by Congress which found that the FBI in the 1960s and 1970s had infiltrated anit-Vietnam War groups, civil rights organization and the women's liberation movement, disrupted their activities and tried to discredit their leaders.

Mathias said that he and his six co-sponsors "came to the conclusion that the current (FBI) guidelines weren't adequate in this area. This bill would require at least reasonable suspicion for undercover activity."

Mathias said he had received "mixed" reactions about the legislation from the Justice Department officials. He did not elaborate.

The legislation is the product of the special Senate committee that last year reviewed FBI undercover operations, including the Abscam probe that led to the criminal convictions of one senator and six representatives.

The bill would set statutory boundaries for Justice Department undercover investigations and allow innocent "sting" victims to sue the government for damages.

Nickolas Blackburn Mark Blackburn

Father wins custody of son

WAYNESBORO, Ga. (AP) — A judge says Kathleen Blackburn's "sexual irresponsibility" and "unstable lifestyle" cost her custody of her young white son, despite her claim that courts are prejudiced against her because she has a racially mixed daughter.

The 28-year-old woman cried Monday as Superior Court Judge Bernard Mulherin read a 30-page order awarding custody of her 4-year-old son, Nickolas, to his father, Mark Blackburn, in the latest decision in a 4-year-old custody fight.

Ms. Blackburn "has had numerous meretricious relationships, without discretion and in the presence of (Nickolas), is sexually irresponsible and maintains an unstable lifestyle," the judge said.

Since her divorce in 1979, she has "failed to set an appropriate moral example" and has been "seen, and photographed under circumstances likely to compromise her moral integrity," Mulherin said.

Ms. Blackburn, a native of Minneapolis, said last year that attempts to take Nickolas away from her were motivated by racial prejudice because of her illegitimate racially mixed daughter, not sexual misconduct.

The judge observed that her affair with a black police officer led to the birth of a daughter, Jennifer, in 1981. "Her conduct with him and others was immoral and a bad influence on the child (Nickolas)," the judge said.

Ms. Blackburn, clutching a Bible, declined to comment to reporters as she left the court.

Blackburn's attorney, Sims Lanier, said he expected Nickolas to be returned to his father today.

Ms. Blackburn's medical history showed she underwent an abortion, two similar operations and has been examined "on more than one occasion for venereal disease" and was treated for gonorrhea as late as August 1982, Mulherin said.

He said that after her divorce, Ms. Blackburn neglected Nickolas' physical needs, including feeding him outdated baby formula.

Ms. Blackburn received custody of Nickolas at the time of her divorce in the south-central Georgia town of Millen. But a Jenkins County judge declared her an unfit mother in 1981 and awarded custody of Nickolas to his paternal grandmother.

The Georgia Supreme Court overturned the lower court order last year, and Nickolas was reunited with his mother four days before Thanksgiving. The father subsequently filed for custody of the boy, and the case was moved to Waynesboro where the mother currently resides.

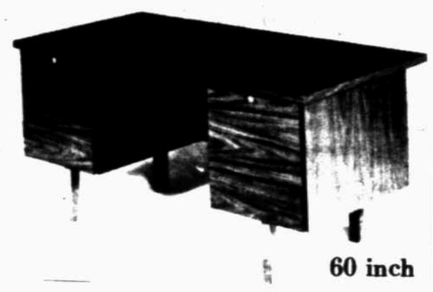

Since returned to his mother's custody, Nickolas "has been physically abused or disciplined to an extreme" by his mother or "one with whom she keeps company," Mulherin said.

The father, on the other hand, "gives the appearance of being a hardworking man with dedicated goals in life and a part of a wholesome family unit," the judge said.

Blackburn, a 24-year-old electrician in Augusta, remarried in 1981 and has two stepdaughters by his wife's previous marriage.

Mulherin said Blackburn "has undergone a dramatic transformation of maturity and capability" since a theft arrest, an assault conviction and psychiatric treatment following his divorce.

20 people arrested in Miami's Liberty City

MIAMI (AP) — Riot-equipped police in a convoy of patrol cars arrested 20 people in a sweep down the main boulevard of Liberty City after rocks and bottles were thrown for a second night in the troubled ghetto.

The helmeted police returned in force to Liberty City at about 8 p.m. Monday after callers reported "sporadic" bottle-tossing in the same neighborhood where a four-hour melee erupted Sunday night when officers shut off a stereo at African Square Park.

"Things have basically cooled off at this point," Miami Police spokeswoman Stephanie Dalton said early today from a Liberty City mobile command post. "We hope this calm will last."

A motorcade of police cruisers, doors ajar and moving single-file, was sent down Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Boulevard, and police hustled 20 suspects away, authorities said.

Calm returned with the chilly early morning air, and police stressed Monday's incident was far less severe than the disturbances that began Sunday night.

"The arrests were not mass arrests; these people were seen doing something," said Deputy Police Chief Clarence Dixon, who directed operations from a command post on a supermarket parking lot. "Some we know were arrested for loitering and prowling violations."

The exact charges and ages of those arrested were not known, but Dixon said "some of them weren't kids."

No injuries were reported in Monday's spate of rock-and-bottle tossing, although Dixon said "several vehicles" had their windshields smashed by flying objects.

Shots were reported at one street corner, "but we checked it out and found nothing," the deputy police chief said.

After police shut down a boisterous Sunday evening dance party because some residents complained of the din, an estimated 500 people spilled out of the park, hefting bottles and chunks of concrete, kindling trash fires and ransacking a self-service gas station.

Thirty-one were arrested in that disturbance, Miami's second this winter. In late December, two days of looting, burning and street fighting erupted in the black slum of Overtown after a white police officer fatally shot a young black man.

"This city's got problems; I've said it before," said City Manager Howard Gary, who boarded a police cruiser at 1 a.m. today to patrol Liberty City streets. "But the way to solve them is not to go into the street and toss a bottle."

Early today, officers cordoned off a six-block stretch of Martin Luther King Jr. Boulevard to traffic, and Gary urged motorists who had no business driving through Liberty City "to go elsewhere."

At an emergency meeting Monday of the Metro-Dade Community Relations Board, community activists and board staffers charged that drug pushers finance street dances that draw hundreds of young people to the area almost every weekend.

Citizens protest gang rape

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — Hundreds of protesters outside City Hall chanted "stop rape" as a city board canceled the liquor license of a bar where a female customer was gang-raped while other patrons looked on and cheered.

The protest Monday night brought women from New York City and Boston to this southeastern Massachusetts city to demand an end to violence against women.

"There is a stigma on the city of New Bedford because of what happened," said Earle M. Carter, chairman of the city's Human Relations Commission, who participated in the protest.

The protesters silently marched from the YWCA building to City Hall, a distance of two blocks.

They carried lighted candles and signs and banners, some reading: "Rape Is Not a Spectator Sport," "Rape is Hate," "Rape is Violence," and "Are our Daughters Safe?"

Four men have been charged in the assault March 6 at Big Dan's Tavern. Police said a 21-year-old woman who had gone into the tavern to buy cigarettes was dragged to a pool table and repeatedly raped for two hours, while some patrons cheered and no one summoned police.

Authorities estimated that 2,500 women and men marched in the protest and that hundreds of others watched.

By the time the demonstrators had left the steps of City Hall, the city Licensing Board voted to "irrevocably" take back the liquor license of Big Dan's Bar. The bar's co-owner, Deborah Brum, had surrendered the license voluntarily last week after the assault.

Afterward, Mrs. Brum had the bar cut up with chain saws and tables removed from the establishment, located in a working-class neighborhood.

The unanimous vote to take back the license came over the objection of Russell Sobral, attorney for Mrs. Brum's brother, John Machado.

Sobral, along with a lawyer for creditors of the bar, said the decision would be appealed, claiming Mrs. Brum did not have the authority to surrender the license.

While Mrs. Brum nominally headed the Big Dan corporation, her brother operated the tavern. As a foreign national, Machado, a Portuguese, could not hold a liquor license under state law as could his sister, a U.S. citizen.

Kahl's associates ordered to stand trial

FARGO, N.D. (AP) — Five associates of fugitive tax protester Gordon Kahl have been ordered to stand trial May 2 for the Feb. 13 shootout that killed two U.S. marshals, but Kahl remains at large.

Kahl's wife, Joan, and former Streeter police chief Vernon Wegner, 25, pleaded innocent.

A large selection of handmade Oriental and Persian Rugs (new and old). Kerman-Kashan-Tabriz-Ardebil-Suk-Saruk. Oriental rugs and carpets have been produced for centuries and the rugs and carpets produced today are the same in almost every respect as those produced 500 years ago. The best known and most beautiful rugs come from Persia but there are also excellent pieces that come from China, Afghanistan, Turkey, Pakistan, India and Romania. There are other countries in Asia and Aftica who produce hand made rugs, but we do not have enough space here to enumerate all of them. All these rugs are made of wool. There are exceptions such as some of the Persian Qum that are made of pure pure silk.

One may ask why is a hand made oriental rug carpet the most prized and sought after of all floor coverings? The main reasons are:

1). An oriental rug, being entirely hand made, has a guaranteed durability. Even accidental damage can be repaired without decreasing the rug's value. This cannot be said of a machine made rug which, once damaged, loses it's value.

2). The decorative value of an oriental rug in undeniable. It greatly enhances a room and creates an immediate impression of friendly warmth on entering it.

3). Provided it is used with care, the value of an oriental rug increases year by year. It is a safe investment and can be turned into ready cash at any time.

It is sometimes believed that oriental rugs and carpets are very expensive items. This is not so. We have many fine pieces that sell at under $500.00

A Brief summary of our rugs and carpets, and their characteristics is as follows:

Persian: The finest pieces come from the towns such as Isfahan, Qum, Kashan, Tabriz and Kerman. In addition there are the nomadic rugs of coarser weave such as Humadan, Shiraz, Abadeh, Afshan and Belouch. We aslo have Kalims which have no pile, which come in colorful, geometric designs.

Chinese: The thickest pile of all carpets and rugs. They are very luxurious and come in embossed Aubusson, Floral and Peking designs.

Pakistan: Specialises in Bokhara and Afghan designs and in excellent copies of Persian design considerably less expensive than Persian rugs.

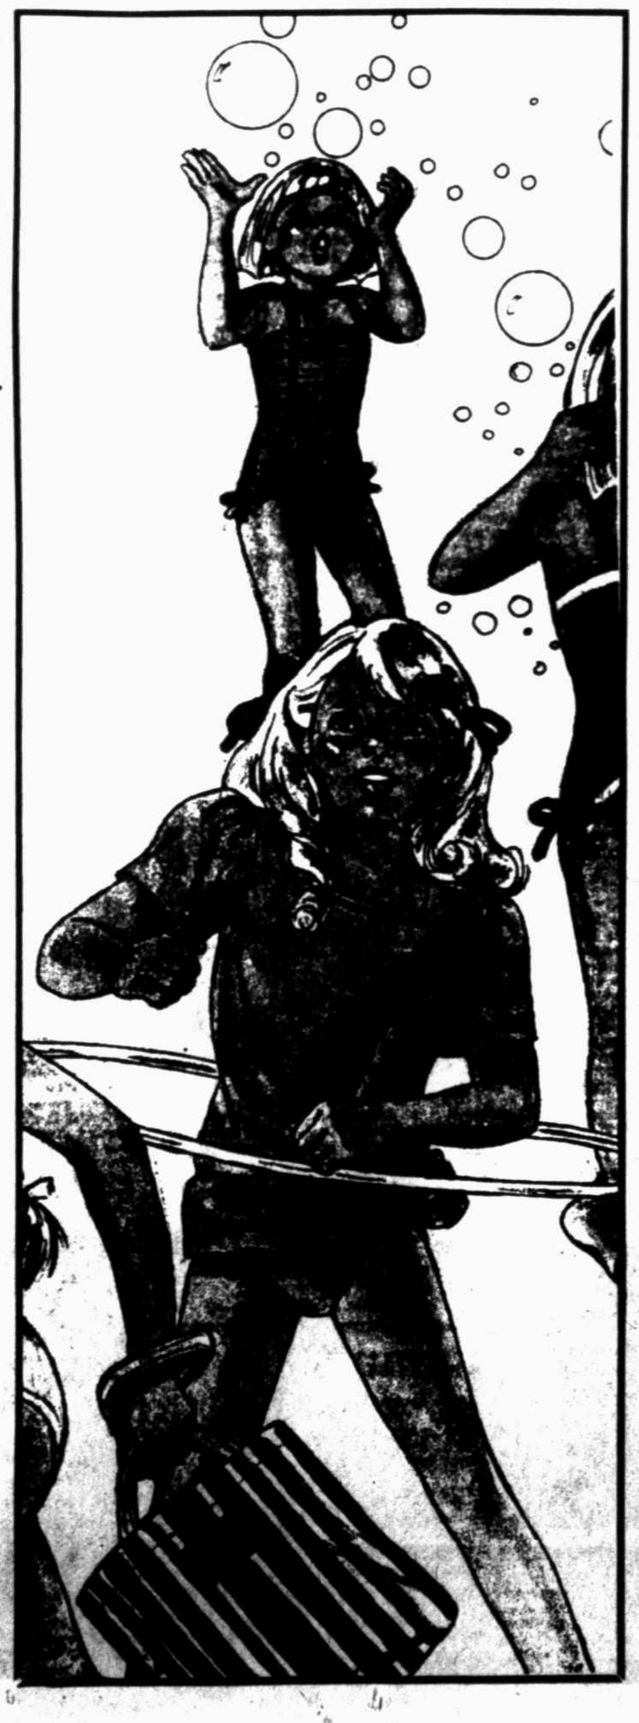

Afghan: In well known elephant foot designs in red and gold. Useful for offices and hallway. Other designs are also produced.

India: Mainly heavy pile produced with beautiful pastel on paste backgrounds in Floral, Aubusson or Chinese Peking designs.

Turkish: Made of wool, silk and artificial silk. Some rugs rival those of Persia in quality and design. Reasonably priced.

Romanian: Mainly copies of Persian designs, but we also have large carpets with the Aubusson design made in wool supplied from England. Extremely good value & very low prices.

District 4-5A baseball season opens today

Brundage burns out on Tournament of Champions

The baseball season is barely two weeks old and I'm already suffering from that new-found malady plaguing coaches and athletes around the United States dubbed burnout. It's what happens to sports writers who sit through seven baseball games in two days.

I felt that way about basketball too by the time the season and all the tournaments were over. So far the only sport I didn't burnout on was football and that's only because the teams only play once a week. The USFL may change all that, however.

Though the weekend did seem to drag on a bit, I did manage to see some excellent baseball games and some very intense moments, few as intense as the late innings of two of the three meetings between Midland High and eventual Tournament of Champions winner Lubbock Monterey.

Few who watched the first clash Friday afternoon will soon forget the dramatic come-from-behind victory the Bulldogs pulled out in the bottom of the seventh and eighth innings.

The grand slam by Jose Carrasco that brought the Bulldogs back into the ball game from a 6-1 deficit will long be remembered, at least by the coaches of the two teams Tim Whalen (Midland) and Bobby Moegle (Lubbock) and by Carrasco, of course. One player, Monterey's Kevin Short, the pitcher who was on the mound at the time, is probably trying to forget.

The second moment came early Saturday evening when the Dawgs and Plainsmen battled in the first of two championship games, a game which was tied at 3-3 after regulation and went two extra innings before Monterey could claim the victory. The second game that night Midland High, like Short, is trying to forget.

STILL, IT was a good weekend for all the teams involved since District 4-5A action gets underway today at 4 p.m. with Midland Lee hosting Odessa High and the Bulldogs (5-6) traveling to Odessa to take on Permian's Panthers.

Elsewhere around the league, pre-district favorite Big Spring, 6-5, hosts Abilene High, 5-6, and Abilene Cooper, 9-4, hosts San Angelo, 6-6. All games are scheduled for 4 p.m.

For the Midland Lee Rebels, 6-5, the tournament saw up and down performances with hitting, a pre-season worry of Coach Ernie Johnson, being the weakest area. In four games, the Rebels managed only 14 hits.

"We're just atrocious right now. We're probably hitting poorer the last couple of games than we have all year," said Johnson. "I just hope a couple two or three players can get hot and get us going in district."

While the Rebels weren't able to collect many hits, they did manage to hold their errors down, somewhat, with only eight.

"I'd like to get it down to only one a game," said Johnson.

Getting the starting role on the mound for the Rebels today will be Kerry Robertson. "I thought his performance last weekend against Midland High was good," said Johnson. "He pitched nine real strong innings and he's about the best we have right now."

Robertson also pitched well in the T of C against Amarillo, holding Tascosa to one run on three hits while striking out 12.

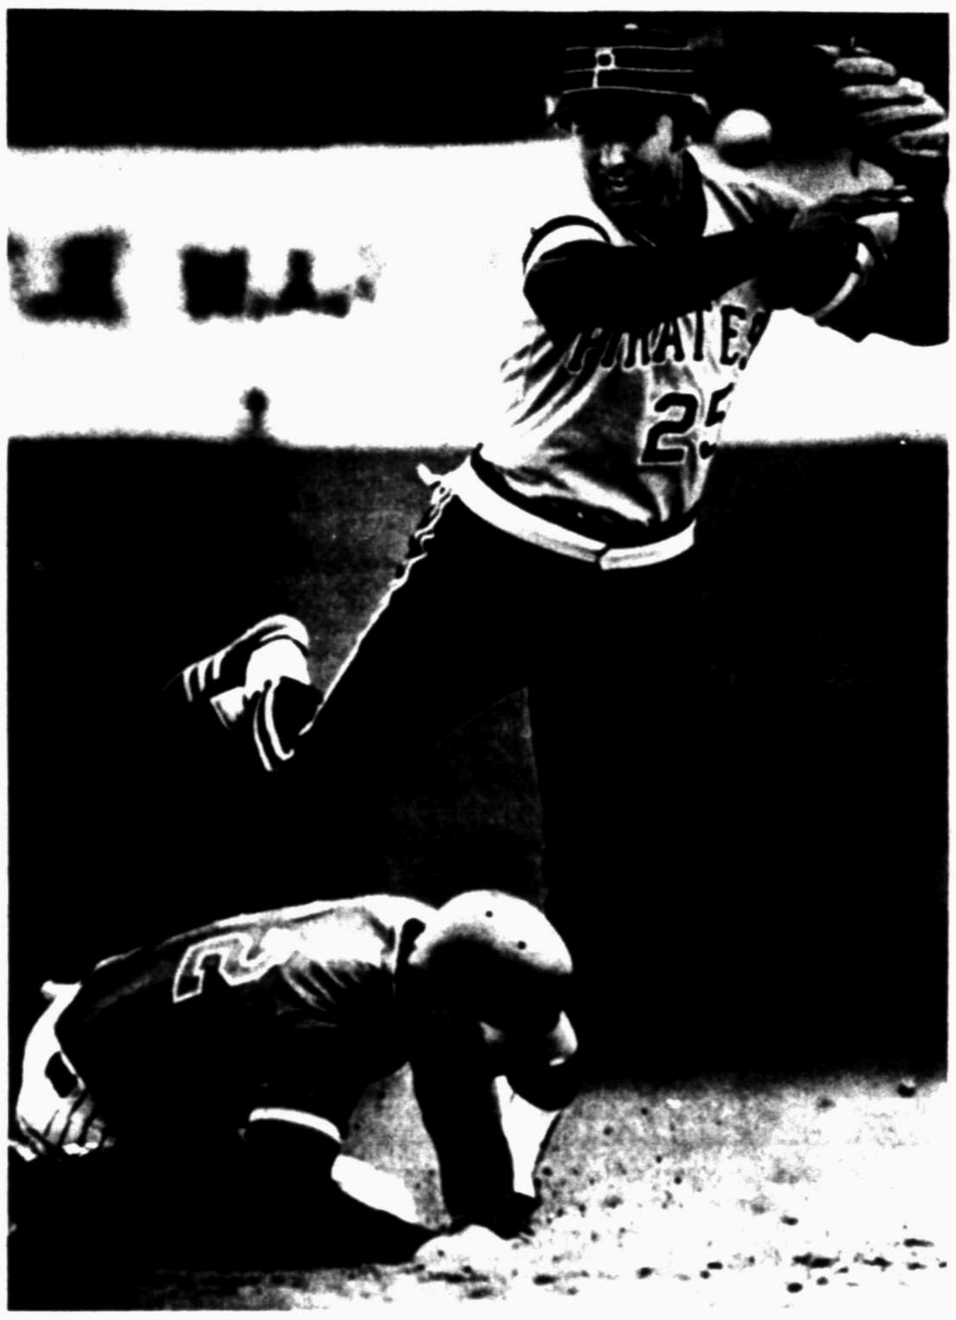

Midland High was able to collect hits throughout the tournament, collecting 29 including a nice assortment of singles, doubles, triples and home runs, but found things difficult on defense with 15 charged errors in four games.

"I'm pleased with the team's overall hitting," said MHS head coach Tim Whalen. They're going up their swinging and making contact. We're going to have to go up and score runs, especially if our defense stays shakey.

"We'll be rocking along and all of a sudden get into a run and start kicking the ball around. If we can eliminate some of the mistakes, we'll do all right."

Oft-used Carrasco is a probable candidate for the starting role today despite a heavy work load over the weekend, a total of 16⅓ innings.

"It will be either (Tim) Davis or Carrasco," said Whalen. "I saw him today (Monday) and he says he's fine. They (the players) know any time they can't go to tell me and they get out. I'm not worried about him"

Cougars No. 1 and ready

HOUSTON (AP) — University of Houston Coach Guy Lewis expects to have all the troops back in action this week as the Cougars prepare to begin play in the NCAA tournament and defend their No. 1 ranking in the final Associated Press College basketball poll.

He would also like to see a return of the Cougars' free throw shooting touch.

"We really didn't have all of our players for a single workout last week," Lewis said Monday after the Cougars swept through the final balloting with 52 of the 56 first-place votes cast by the AP's panel of sport writers and sportscasters.

Several Cougar starters and Lewis were stricken with a flu bug last week that slowed them in preparation for the Southwest Conference tournament.

While upsets caused major shakeups in the AP poll, the Cougars ignored their illnesses and cruised through the SWC tournament at Dallas to gain the No. 1 seed in the 52-team NCAA tournament.

Houston's free throw shooting is still sick, however.

Lewis said he hopes the problem will just go away. The infirmity has plagued UH most of the season. Extra practice has not helped, nor have other methods.

"I can't seem to do anything about poor free throw shooting," Lewis said. "I have tried making them run the stands when they miss, and stuff like that."

The Cougars will take a 27-2 record and a 22-game winning streak into the first round of the Midwest Regional tournament at Houston. The Cougars received 1,112 points in the final AP balloting to give them a commanding tally over runnerup Louisville, which got the other four first-place votes and 1,058 points.

It was the second first-place finish for the Cougars in the AP poll. Lewis' 1967-68 team won 31 games in a row and advanced to the NCAA semfinals.

North Carolina State battled its way into the final rankings with upset victories over Virginia and North Carolina in last week's Atlantic Coast Conference tournament. The Wolfpack moved into the No. 16 position in the final poll.

Louisville, 29-3, swept the Metro Conference tournament, to move from third to second.

St. John's, winner of the Big East tournament, jumped from No. 8 to third with 997 points and a 27-4 record going into the NCAA playoffs.

Virginia's 81-78 loss to North Carolina State dropped the Cavalivers, 27-4, from second to fourth with 891 points.

Big 10 champion Indiana, 23-5, advanced from seventh to fifth with 848 points, while University of Nevada-Las Vegas, 28-2, the Pacific Coast Athletic Association champ, moved from ninth to sixth with 738 points.

UCLA, 23-5, the Pacific 10 champon, lost two of its three games last wek and fell from fourth to seventh. North Carolina, 26-7, which lost to North Carolina State 91-84 in overtime, held on to its No. 5 spot.

Arkansas, 25-3, beaten in the SWC semifinals by Texas Christian, 61-59 in overtime, dropped three spots to ninth, while Missouri, No. 12 last week, advanced to 10th despite losing the Big 8 tournament to Oklahoma State 93-92 in overtime.

The second 10 includes, in order, Boston College, 24-6; Kentucky, 21-7; Villanova, 22-7; Wichita State, 25-3; Tennessee-Chattanooga, 26-3; North Carolina State, 20-10; Memphis State, 22-7; Georgia, 21-9; Oklahoma State, 24-6, and Georgetown, 21-9.

Houston, the seventh team to reach the No. 1 spot in the AP poll this season, held the position three weeks, a fact that pleased Lewis.

"I'm happy we're maintaining it," Lewis said. "I felt like we got over the big hurdle when we won the first game after being voted No. 1. That was kind of the pattern" of previous teams, who lost right after reaching the top spot.

Here's a who's who list not found in the Hall of Fame

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Monte Irvin is a great admirer of Enos (Country) Slaughter. Stan Musial has high regard for Horace Stoneham. Walter Alston would like to put in a vote for his old shortstop, Pee Wee Reese, and a rival, Marty Marion.

Buck Leonard, one of the greats of the old Negro leagues, thinks the blacks still haven't had their just due and he puts in a plug for Willie Wills, a one-time shortstop with the Newark Eagles. George Kell also feels that shortstops, such as Phil Rizzuto, Marion and Reese, don't get their just due.

On the theory that it takes one to know one, some of baseball's Hall of Famers, congregating in St. Petersburg last weekend, were lured into the seething controversy over what has been called discrimination against the "good glove" man as opposed to slugging and pitching stars.

The question put to them was a simple one:

If you could pick someone not in the Hall of Fame who you think should be in but is not, whom would you pick?

"Pee Wee Reese and Phil Rizzuto," unhesitatingly replied Kell, the strong-hitting third baseman of the Detroit Tigers who was voted into the Hall of Fame last Thursday in his first year of eligibility for consideration by the Committee on Veterans. Reese was a Brooklyn Dodger and Rizzuto a Yankee.

"Luis Aparicio of the Chicago White Sox is another very deserving candidate as is Glenn Wright, who many thought might make it this year. The shortstop is a solidifying force on any team. Take him out of the lineup and the club is in trouble."

"I agree," said Alston, another member of the Hall of Fame's 1983 induction class, who managed the Dodgers to seven pennants and four World Series crowns on a year-to-year contract for 23 years.

"Pee Wee's value to us isn't fully shown in the stats (statistics). He was a great competitor. He could do a lot of things on and off the field and he was a great team leader. I roomed with Marion in the minors. He proved to be a great shortstop. So did Rizzuto."

Stan Musial, elected in 1969 for his 22 productive years with the Cardinals, said Horace Stoneham, longtime owner of the Giants, should have a plaque in the Hall of Fame but he also joined in the growing groundswell for overlooked shortstops. He and Marion were teammates on the Cardinals.

"The thinking is changing," Musial said. "There has been a tendency, because of so much media attention, to favor big hitters and strong pitchers, but defensive men are getting more attention. The defense does its job. The guys should get credit for it."

Ralph Kiner, a 1975 inductee who hit 369 home runs, most of them for Pittsburgh, said players should be rewarded for their defensive as well as offensive talents.

"Who can deny the contributions that Rizzuto and Reese made to those great Yankee and Dodger teams of the 1940s and 1950s?" he said.

Irvin, inducted in 1973, agreed that a legitimate Hall of Fame should recognize players in all positions but had a special feeling for the tough, hard-playing Slaughter, a 19-year outfielder for the Cardinals touching three decades, a man who played in five World Series and had a career batting average of .300.

"He was in the mold of Ty Cobb, Honus Wagner and Pete Rose," Irvin said. "He was a good fielder and was a terror on the bases. He had no fear whatever. He wasn't all that popular but he was a fine ballplayer."

Word is that the Veterans Committee may name Rizzuto and Reese as a twin selection next year, when Pee Wee becomes eligible. That would be very nice.

Martin gets Yankees ready for television

By The Associated Press

Even George Steinbrenner can't complain about this one.

In the past, the hard-to-please owner of the New York Yankees has taken exhibition games more seriously than his managers and players, especially those that were televised back to New York.

Monday night, the Yankees were on TV for the first time this spring and Ron Guidry and Dale Murray combined to pitch a no-hitter, an 11-0 rout of a split squad of Pittsburgh Pirates.

Billy Martin, in his third tour as manager of the Yankees, has been the victim of Steinbrenner's wrath in previous springs. Perhaps there really is some substance to Martin's insistence that he has learned his lessons well in his first two terms.

"I learned that when the game is on TV back home, I gear up for it," Martin quipped.

Guidry worked four perfect innings, striking out four, and Murray pitched the last five. The only Pittsburgh batter to reach base was Dave Parker, who was safe with one out in the fifth inning when second baseman Willie Randolph booted his grounder for an error. Parker went to second on a wild pitch, but Murray retired the next two batters on fly balls. Guidry has pitched seven innings this spring, including three against the Jacksonville University, and has retired all 21 batters he has faced.

Ironically, the Yankees have not had a no-hitter since Don Larsen's perfect game in the 1956 World Series. Their last regular-season no-hitter was by Allie Reynolds in 1951.

The Yankees jumped on John Candelaria for five runs in the first three innings and added five more against veteran Randy Jones, who is trying to win a spot on the Pittsburgh staff. Jones allowed three hits and walked seven in two innings and forced two runs across with bases-loaded walks. Butch Wynegar drove in three runs with a third-inning single and a two-run double in the sixth.

Another group of Pirates didn't fare much better against the New York Mets, managing only seven hits and bowing 8-1 as Hubie Brooks and Tom Veryzer doubled home two runs apiece in a five-run third inning. The Mets sent 10 batters to the plate against Ross Baumgarten in the big inning with eight getting hits.

The Atlanta Braves had some good news and some bad news in the pitching department. The number of casualties among the Braves' mound corps grew to four with the aching arms of Phil Niekro and Rick Camp, considered the team's two top starters.

Niekro, suffering from a sore shoulder, was taken out after pitching one inning on Sunday. A day earlier, Camp said he "heard something pop" in his arm while pitching batting practice. He will be out at least 10 days.

In addition, Tommy Boggs, who pitched only 46 innings last year after suffering a slight tear of his rotator cuff, is unable to throw and is to return to Atlanta Wednesday for tests, and free agent reliever Terry Forster has yet to pitch in a game this spring because of shoulder problems.

However, rookie right-hander Craig McMurtry extended his scoreless streak to 11 innings Monday, while Claudell Washington and Glenn Hubbard drove in two runs apiece in a 5-0 victory over the Texas Rangers.

McMurtry pitched the first five innings, holding the Rangers to three hits, walking none and striking out two. Only one Texas runner advanced as far as second base and McMurtry retired 10 batters in a row during one stretch.

The 6-foot-5 McMurtry, who was 17-9 with Richmond of the Class AAA International League last year, said he is trying not to think about making the jump to Atlanta.

"If I did, I'd probably start pressing," he said. "The way I look at it, I just go out there and work on the things I have to and let things fall into place. I can't be thinking about where I'll be. I try not to look ahead. If I make it, good; If I don't, then OK, too."

Express downs Feds, 20-3

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Every game in the United State Football League is a learning experience for the teams, and the Los Angeles Express seems to be catching on faster than most.

The Express, featuring a solid defensive performance and two touchdown passes from Mike Rae to Ricky Ellis, ran its record to 2-0 Monday night with a 20-3 triumph over the winless Washington Federals.

"We weren't dominant," said Express Coach Hugh Campbell. "We still have a lot of things to worry about. Our team is showing a lot of spirit, but we still have a long way to go academically."

Considering the club has played just two games, the Express actually made few mistakes against Washington, suffering no interceptions, no lost fumbles, and drawing just five penalties for 44 yards.

"We're still young and will make mistakes," said Rae, a pro veteran of nine years in the National Football League and Canadian Football League. "We have a long way to go. We don't know how good we are yet; we've won two games, but we don't know how good the other teams are.

"I've been watching TV and trying to analyze the other teams in the league, but it's still too early to tell."

Rae, quarterback on Southern California's national collegiate championship team in 1972, threw scoring strikes of 17 and 18 yards to tight end Ellis in a 35-second span of the second quarter to pull the Express away from a 3-3 tie.

He completed eight of 14 passes for 110 yards in the first half, then gave way to rookie Tom Ramsey — under Campbell's two-quarterback system — in the second half.

Spearheading the Los Angeles defense against the Federals were safety Alvin Burleson, who logged seven solo tackles, one assist and one quarterback sack; and linebacker Ron Seawell, who was in on six tackles, deflected two passes and intercepted another.

The Federals, who have scored just 10 points in their first two games, suffered a couple of blows to their offense in the first half. Running back Craig James went out with a sprained back, quarterback Mike Hohensee suffered a bruised sternum and wide receiver Reggie Smith hurt an ankle.

"It was just unfortunate that we had all those injuries," said Washington Coach Ray Jauch. "The initial report is unclear on James and Hohensee, but it looks like both will be out for next week."

Jauch said he thought his club showed improvement over its 28-7 opening loss to the Chicago Blitz, commenting, "We improved on a few things from last week...Defensively, we were able to do some things that were good."

Rangers finally beat Flyers

NEW YORK (AP) — Pelle Lindbergh knew it wasn't his night after the first couple of shots. Anders Hedberg knew it was a special night just because the Philadelphia Flyers were in town. And goaltender Glen Hanlon was hoping it was his night for a shutout.

Hanlon didn't get his shutout and had to settle for a 34-save, 8-2 victory over the Flyers Monday night, a victory the New York Rangers clinched in the opening period, when they beat Lindbergh five times. Hedberg set up two of those first-period goals and was in position to score a half-dozen times in the contest.

"After the first period, we had it sewed up," noticed Hedberg, whose linemates — Mark Pavelich and Rob McClanahan — each scored two goals. "It was very important for our well-being to beat them. You can't just keep losing to a team and think you can turn it around in the playoffs. Winning 8-2 was especially good because of what lies ahead."

Flames 7, Devils 0

Lanny McDonald got his 58th and 59th goals, Paul Reinhart and Jim Peplinski each had a goal and two assists and Don Edwards stopped 23 shots to register the Flames' first shutout of the season.

The team shut them down well, forcing them to take most of their shots from the outside," said Ed

Recovery won't be the same this time

EDITOR'S NOTE — Even in the deepest throes of this almost 4-year-old recession, the U.S. economy was molting — shedding its traditional dependence on steel, autos and other heavy industry and embracing the new "industries" of high technology.

In the first of a four-part series, "After the Recession: Toward a New Economy," AP Writer Robert Furlow reports on what the future seems to hold for the U.S. economy as the country pulls out of the recession.

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

THE NEW ECONOMY

First in a Series

WASHINGTON (AP) — For decades in the United States, as surely as one recession eventually led to the next, economic recovery meant workers streaming back to the mills and mines, to factories and auto plants.

It won't be quite the same this time.

Government officials and private economists say they can now see years of strength ahead for the U.S. economy. But they also say it won't be the traditional strength of big steel and heavy industry.

The old smokestack industries will never drive the economy again, having lost that role to clean, white-collar "industries" that do things, move things and manage things rather than make things.

A Commerce Department forecast says:

"The bright stars among American industries are in the high-technology area" — electronic computing equipment; telecommunications; semiconductors (computer chips) and related devices; games, toys and children's vehicles; surgical and medical instruments; radio and television equipment; robotics; guided missiles and space vehicles.

THE WORD YOU HEAR again and again is "services," not "products." And if banking and computing are what America now does best, that's what young Americans will be doing in the expected bright future, although millions of unemployed will remain to remind everyone the changes aren't painless.

"Yes, we'll still be a world leader, but not in the same industries," said Robert Ortner, the Commerce Department's chief economist.

And private economist Allen Sinai, vice president of Data Resources Inc., said, "I don't think there's any doubt we'll have a good recovery in steel, autos, rubber, forest products, some of the most depressed industries. But in terms of scale and employment, it is not likely such industries will return to late-1970s levels for many years."

That's not necessarily good or bad, he said, it's just "natural evolution," and there's no use fighting it.

"It would be a gross mistake for government policies to subsidize the expansion of industries where we no longer have a competitive advantage," Sinai said. And that description apparently fits steel and autos.

JAPANESE PLANTS, operating with relatively low labor costs and relatively high productivity, have made well-publicized inroads into U.S. markets.

One of each five cars sold last year in America was made in Japan, as were most of the 35mm cameras, stereos, videotape recorders and radios.

American steelmakers also have felt the sting of competition from Japan, which produced about 7 percent of the steel used last year in the United States, an increase of 15 percent from 1981. And the problem has been made worse for U.S. companies by the rising value of the dollar, which has made it more expensive for foreign companies to buy U.S. steel and less expensive for Americans to import foreign products.

Unless American steelmakers can somehow adjust and become more efficient, Ortner said, "they may remain a shrunken industry concentrating on specialty products and on the seeking of protection (against imports) in Washington."

Not that big U.S. industries will disappear entirely. Commerce's 1983 U.S. Industrial Outlook says:

—Steel shipments should reach 75 million to 80 million tons this year — up from last year's 24-year low of 60 million — "if the auto and home-appliance industries perform as expected" and if steelmakers replenish depleted inventories.

—A 29 percent gain in the value, adjusted for inflation, of cars and trucks built in the United States "is expected to give the general economy a lift."

—Total new construction should increase for the first time since 1978, led by home building, and lumber mills should record a 14 percent increase after averaging small yearly declines for a decade.

AND THE SIGNS of recovery are growing. A couple of steel mills have been fired up again in the past few weeks. Some laid-off auto workers have been called back to work. Lumber mills in the Northwest are reopening, and construction of housing and resales of homes have picked up again as mortgage rates have dropped from around 17 percent to about 12 percent.

Still, cautioned Sinai, "The damper on an optimistic view is that we're starting from such a low point. It's no great task to show some improvement."

Despite the expected rebound in big industry, the report said, "The U.S. economy is moving into another stage, with much more activity in services, high technology, information."

These industries — all depending on miniaturized circuits — "registered high growth rates all through the recession, and they will post records in 1983," the report said.

American strength in such areas is clear, it is generally agreed, although other nations such as Japan have been very successful in specially targeted computer fields.

THIS NATION'S shift toward services and high technology has been occurring for years, although it has sometimes been overlooked, perhaps because of what Treasury Secretary Donald Regan calls "manufacturing myopia" — a tendency to keep seeing the world as it was, rather than as it is.

Experts say now is time to buy homes

By LESLIE HAINES
Energy-Business Writer

Local housing experts, builders and real estate agents say there has never been a better time to buy a house in Midland or Odessa: interest rates are down, more financing options are available, and there are more homes to choose from.

But, buyers must be aware they cannot beat the "teeter-totter" principal: if interest rates go down, prices go up, and vice versa.

This fact and more was explained at free seminars held Saturday in Odessa and Midland by the Permian Basin Home Builders Association. The seminar was planned to educate the public and stimulate what is already a buyers' market, according to Bud Blake, chairman of the organizing committee.

Economists say the housing industry will lead this country — and Midland-Odessa — out of the recession. Home buying leads to appliance and furniture sales and stimulates the material suppliers and construction industries.

Two key points were made by the speakers: now is the time to buy, and communication between the buyer and Realtor or builder is essential when exploring creative financial arrangements.

"Th..e may not be a better time to buy than now," said Tookie Berry, executive director of the local home builders association. "Interest rates are down and there is a better choice of homes here than we've ever had before."

There are about 900 homes, both new and pre-owned, for sale in Midland now, said Laura Manulik, president of the Midland Board of Realtors.

Berry quoted from the March 4 issue of the Kiplinger Washington Letter which said home prices are about as low as they will go, and prices will rise this summer as demand increases due to lower interest rates.

Interest rates may not go much lower, Berry said, and in fact, they are expected to rise throughout this decade.

Buyers should realize there is a teeter-totter principal at work in the real estate world, according to Jeff Elias, real estate expert and author from Garland.

"Last year, one end of the teeter-totter was high — interest rates — so prices were lower. Now it is changing. Interest rates have come down and prices are going to go up. Maybe local builders are slow to react, but they will lower prices when they catch on.

"If you are saying you are waiting for rates to go to 10 percent, you are also saying you are waiting for prices to go back up. You cannot beat the teeter-totter principal."

Prices for home building supplies such as sheetrock, lumber, brick, shingles, marble and so on have already started to climb since the first of the year, according to the Kiplinger Letter and Bill Seay, Fort Worth builder who adressed the seminar.

"There have been two price increases on insulation in the Fort Worth area since December," Seay said. "My cabinet maker sent me a love note last week saying that he reviewed his 1982 figures with his accountant. As a result, he is raising his prices 10 percent effective immediately."

Seay said he was pleading with the public to take these economic events seriously. "Don't wait to buy. Every day you didn't own a home in the last seven years, you lost $41 a day in equity build-up. It's hard to believe, but that's what the statistics show."

Each of the speakers emphasized that communication is the key ingredient in buying or selling a home. Many people believe they cannot afford a down payment, or qualify for a mortgage loan, or pay the monthly payments. They can, Elias said. They need only ask the seller, Realtor or lender what arrangements are available. He detailed the new financing methods such as adjusted rate and graduated payment mortgages, (ARMs and GPMs), the "rich uncle" concept and others.

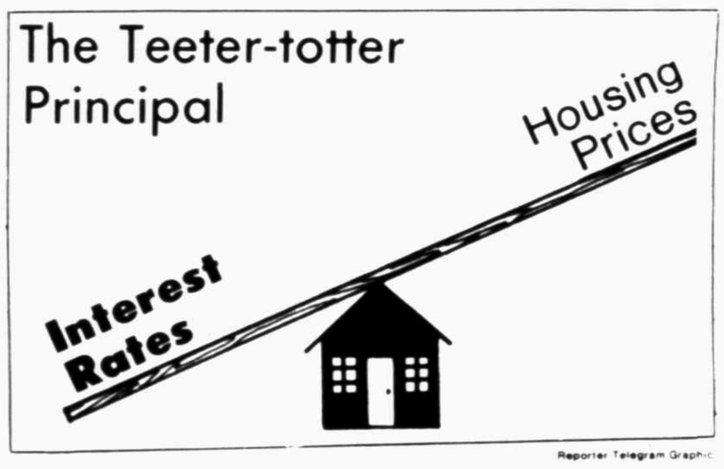

"Lenders are in the business of lending money to make money. They want to make loans. One of every six loans is paid back each year, so lenders need to make new loans," he said.

Previously, lenders said a person should spend no more than 25 percent of his income on a mortgage payment. In today's economic climate, most lenders have changed that to 28 percent to 30 percent, Elias said, in an effort to qualify more people for loans. ARMs, GPMs and other financing methods enable consumers to qualify easier than before.

"Don't be afraid of adjustable rate mortgages (where the interest rate and payment increases each year for five years). The national average time a home owner is in his home is only five years. The first year is the most important one for qualifying for a loan. What difference does it make what the payment is in the 28th year if you're not living there any more?"

The seminar grew out of frustration on the part of local builders and real estate salesmen who wanted to stimulate the market by educating the public, said Bud Blake, chairman of the seminar organizers.

About 400 potential home buyers attended the meetings held in each city. Speakers from Fort Worth, Garland, Midland and Odessa covered topics such as how to qualify for a loan, what an appraiser does, how the price of a new home is determined, what to expect at closing, and the status of the local real estate market.

Lease sale postponed

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — A proposed sale of coal leases for land in the San Juan Basin in northwestern New Mexico has been postponed by the Bureau of Land Management because of requests for more public comment.

A "target date" of Dec. 15 has been set for the sale, which still could be halted if public comment or further study reveals problems with coal mining on the land, Jeff Radford, BLM spokesman, said Monday.

Money still flowing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate investigators say 13 years of efforts to stem the flow of U.S. money to foreign tax-haven banks have been a "monumental failure."

Federal regulators and U.S. banks share partial responsibility for the growing number of so-called "offshore banks" that hide funds from tax collectors and launder money from criminal activities, the investigators said.

The comments were made in a report by staff of the Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations, which today began two days of hearings into the situation.

The staff said the Bank Secrecy Act in 1970 has not stemmed proliferation of offshore banks in countries offering secrecy to depositors and little, if any, taxation.

"The Bank Secrecy Act and the administration of it has been a monumental failure in two important respects," they said.

Not only has the act failed to "measurably slow" the flow of money out of the United States, officials have not developed sufficient information to propose administrative, diplomatic and legislative remedies, the report said.

The report also was critical of the way the bank secrecy statute is administered, such as a requirement that U.S. banks notify the Internal Revenue Service about each currency transaction exceeding $10,000.

"For most of the decade after passage ... its reporting provisions were rarely invoked," the report said. "Some banks, especially small banks, have willingly participated in schemes to circumvent or evade the requirement. ..."

The staff said it could not estimate the amount of money sent to offshore banks. It said private-sector economists have estimated the annual outflow at between $9 billion and $43 billion.

Nevertheless, the report said, "offshore havens are a critical element in facilitating criminal activity in the United States today. ...

"The use of ... offshore facilites has become so pervasive that it challenges basic assumptions regarding the ability of federal and state authorities to enforce the laws," it said.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, March 16, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: President James Madison, former First Lady Patricia Nixon and Hall of Fame Pittsburgh outfielder Lloyd "Little Poison" Waner were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: "CHiPs" star Erik Estrada, comedian Jerry Lewis, golf's Hollis Stacy and U.S. Senator Daniel Moynihan (D-N.Y.). In coming months, you get a chance to accomplish things that will set you apart from the crowd. Do your best! A financial situation shifts in your favor. Athletes and those in the arts have an exceptionally good year. A family connection is more valuable than you realize. Be selective in romance. A so-so job could lead to a better one.

ARIES (March 21-April 19.) Start the day right by distancing yourself from a negative situation. A good friend helps you find innovative solutions. Postpone a meeting and delay signing any legal documents.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A large corporation seeks your services, but you might operate better in a more relaxed atmosphere. You need a strong ally at your side. You do not have to impress your friends.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Others are counting on you. Take the lead in a family discussion. You need to be honest about a crisis. Do not let children learn what is happening from an outsider.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You could be mistaking admiration for love. Enjoy what you already have and let things develop naturally. A professor makes a decision that lets you off the hook.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Stick with a career decision a little longer. To change priorities now would not be wise. A lucky circumstance leads to more exciting romance. Help is near if you really need it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do not let others manipulate you. You have a mind of your own and should speak out more often. A romantic adventure could interfere with the flow of ideas.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Handle financial matters with caution. See people and places as they really are. A short trip brings you in contact with a fascinating member of the opposite sex.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Opposites seem to attract today! Use unconventional tactics to increase profits, but stay within the law. Entertaining a client at home helps you develop better rapport.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You reap rewards for past business efforts. A small windfall or legacy gives you greater financial security. Enlist the help of experts to invest money wisely.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The emphasis today is on creative endeavors, basic changes and a variety of experiences. Bargain-hunters will not be disappointed. The end of a relationship is inevitable.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Unexpected gains are featured. Someone you meet for the first time stimulates you intellectually. Think twice before reviving an old romance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Older family members command your attention. Finances could be involved. Make a comprehensive budget. A brother or sister's cooperation will ease a difficult situation.

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

American internationalist Lew Mathe once described a good slam as "one that makes." By his definition, today's slam was one of the great ones.

South felt that it would do no harm to cue-bid the ace of spades on the way to five diamonds. That was all the encouragement North needed to go on to slam — the fact that his partner had denied first-round heart control and had not yet promised second-round control was a minor matter.

It would have been fitting justice had West elected to lead the ace of hearts, but in the real world the queen of spades was a natural attack. Declarer won in dummy, drew two rounds of trumps and then cashed the ace of spades and ruffed a spade on the table. Some people would simply throw in the towel by conceding two heart tricks, but our declarer, one of the world's great players, was made of sterner stuff.

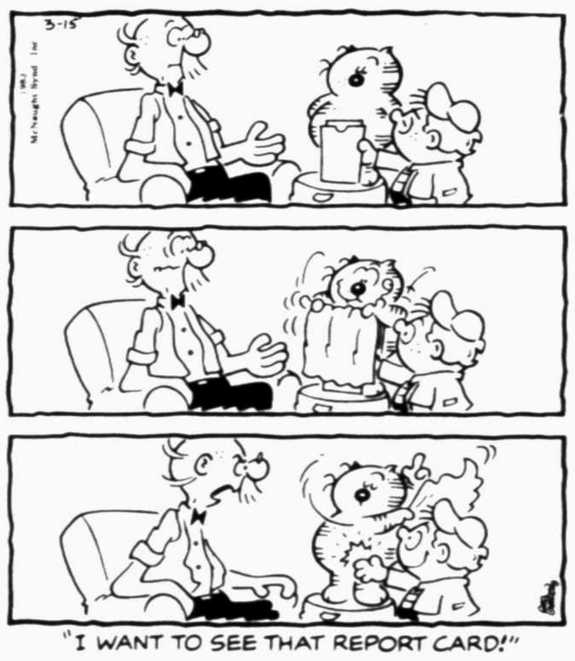

He ran four more rounds of diamonds, discarding three hearts from dummy. West had to find four discards. Since he could part with only one club, he sluffed his three low hearts. Now declarer exited with a heart, and West found himself on lead.

He tried to fool declarer by leading the jack of clubs, but declarer had only one line. He won and finessed the ten of clubs, and the slam was made.

West had two chances to defeat the contract. He could have sluffed the ace of hearts instead of a low one, allowing his partner to score the king of hearts and a spade. Or he could have exited with a low club. While that would have permitted declarer to win a cheap club trick immediately, he would be unable to get back to dummy to enjoy the ace of clubs, and the slam would have failed.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Inouye to oppose more military aid for El Salvador

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Democratic senator with a critical role in screening foreign aid says he will oppose President Reagan's request for more military assistance to El Salvador because the administration is fighting "the battles of the past."

Sen. Daniel K. Inouye of Hawaii, ranking Democrat on the Appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations, has supported other aid requests for the Salvadoran regime.

"Now, my compass points to a different direction," he told the Senate Monday.

Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia predicted that Inouye's words would have weight with members of the subcommittee. The panel plans to hold a hearing next week on the president's military aid package.

Reagan's request, totaling $110 million in additional military assistance, also ran into trouble at a hearing of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee's subcommittee on Latin America.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, told Thomas O. Enders, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, that he would support efforts to cut the administration's request unless he got more convincing arguments for it.

"The levels of aid seem more supported by administration hype and rhetoric than by a careful assessment of the military situation on the ground," Glenn said.

Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., suggested that reverses suffered by the Salvadoran regime in its 41-month-old battle against leftist insurgents might be "due to the weakness of the government" rather than military shortcomings.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz will defend the administration program Wednesday at a hearing of the House Appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations. Enders will testify the same day before the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Inouye's speech was a setback for the administration, as he supported military aid to El Salvador last year, although favoring conditions on it, and was the only Democratic senator to support the administration's Carribbean Basin Initiative package of economic aid.

"As I have listened to our policymakers in the White House and in the Department of State, I have become convinced that ... there is a tragic flaw in their reasoning," he told the Senate.

"They look toward Central America and see the demands for a negotiated end to the bloodletting and they see Laos; they speak of spreading violence, of falling dominoes, and they hear the ominous echo — Vietnam. This administration fights the battles of the past, because it fears the future."

Paper attacks Nkomo's presence in England

LONDON (AP) — Britain's biggest selling newspaper The Sun today attacked Zimbabwe opposition leader Joshua Nkomo's presence in England as "a massive piece of impudence" and said the government should send him packing.

The respected conservative Daily Telegraph predicted that despite Nkomo's vow to return home soon, "The probability is that he will become like any other exiled African leader, dreaming old dreams in a state of obscure luxury."

The tabloid Sun, which sells 4.2 million copies a day, said it opposed Nkomo's refuge here from Zimbabwe Prime Minister Robert Mugabe because during the war for independence Nkomo "made war on people of British stock."

Nkomo and Mugabe led separate guerrilla armies against the white minority government of what then was the British colony Rhodesia. Britain mediated the settlement that ended the seven-year war and created independent Zimbabwe in April 1980.

"It was a massive piece of impudence for Joshua Nkomo to seek our hospitality," The Sun said in an editorial.

"Though he himself prudently kept away from the front line (during the war), women and children were killed and appalling atrocities were committed in his name.

"Now Mr. Nkomo has been bested by the equally odious Robert Mugabe, who is fast establishing a Marxist dictatorship in Zimbabwe," the paper said.

The paper said Britain should allow Nkomo to stay a maximum of one week and then have him "sent on his travels."

Nkomo first fled to neighboring Botswana last week, claiming that Mugabe had sent troops to his home to kill him. Mugabe denied it.

But he told a news conference on his arrival here Sunday that he was "no exile" and would return home as soon as he could get Mugabe to guarantee his safety.

President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia is scheduled to arrive in London for a state visit next week, arousing speculation that Nkomo would end up taking exile in the country bordering Zimbabwe. The Zambian Embassy here said it had heard nothing about such a plan or for a possible mediation role for Kaunda between Nkomo and Mugabe.

Member of Parliament Robert Hughes said Monday night that he and other members of the opposition Labor Party interested in African affairs were trying to arrange a meeting with Nkomo.

"If I can do anything to help I shall be glad to do so," Hughes said.

Real Estate turned out to be her cup of tea

By JIM PRESNELL
Energy-Business Writer

Sara Carr Newsom grew up hating the real estate business. Her mother, Mary Ann Carr, was active in real estate and was president of the Midland Board of Realtors in 1969.

Sara hated real estate because it was so much a part of her mother's life.

But she grew up, got a degree in horticulture from Texas A&M, married Len Newsom, and "...just couldn't make any money," she said Monday. "I studied for the real estate exam — even though I had been familiar with much of it. I passed it," Ms. Newsom said.

She took over her mother's business, Mary Ann Carr Realtors, and has managed it successfully since 1976. "Now I love this business. It's nice to find your niche in life."

Ms. Newsom is the youngest president ever elected to the 400-member Board of Realtors here. She is 28.

She believes in reaching goals, being politically active (everyone should be, she said), and working hard at public relations — with her own firm or in her upcoming position.

The Board of Realtors joined forces, she said, mainly to sell houses. The Multiple Listing Service entity the board formed allows buyers to look at a much larger number of homes than would usually be available from one in-town Realtor. "We have a better range of houses to sell, and we cooperate professionally," Ms. Newsom said.

Sara Carr Newsom

The mother of two children manages home life around her office's demands but has "no ambition to be top salesman. Everyone has their priorities," she said. "Mine are running my office and my family."

Ms. Newsom exclusively sells and manages properties now. "I used to build a little bit, and I used to sell insurance. But in 1981 and '82, the real estate business got too busy here to do anything else."

She is more comfortable pacing the development of business in the climate that exists in 1983.

"Compared to last year and the year before, we are not selling many homes — but we're back on an even keel.

"We just couldn't function as well during a boom. We can do a much better job now," Ms. Newsom said. She sees her functions as head of local Realtors as including a lot of PR and politics — but these are areas where Ms. Newsom exudes confidence.

"It won't be stressful. Stress is when you get to the closing table and the buyer, or the seller, backs out."

Ms. Newsom said the news media is blowing real estate economic indicators out of proportion. "There are a large number of homes for sale, but they are selling."

When is a home difficult to sell? "Red or blue carpeting is tough," Ms. Newsom said. "Nothing goes with it."

An important part of selling a home is "first impressions. Drive-up appeal is important — it can sell a house. The lawn should be manicured, the front door and front of the house should be painted and cared for."

A home is a product, Ms. Newsom said. "Real estate is, essentially, selling. We've got a product to sell, and must have quite a bit of people skills and general knowledge."

Bond program financing awaiting lenders' interest

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

The Permian Basin Housing Finance Corporation plans to distribute as much as $33 million in bond money for low-interest home loans in 13 West Texas counties, providing that area lending institutions show enough interest to make the program worthwhile.

At a Monday PBHFC meeting attended by a few Realtors and about six area lenders, bond underwriters from Rauscher Pierce Refsnes, Inc. said that because the program carries a 45-day deadline for obtaining lender commitments, interest must be drummed up — double-time.

In 1982, the state offered $490 million in bonds to housing finance corporations throughout the state. PBHFC was originally denied funding because its $33 million application, when ranked chronologically with 20 others, finished too far down the list to receive money.

When other housing organizations failed to obtain commitments from lending institutions on all or part of their allotments, the PBHFC got a second chance at the funds.

Following the meeting, which was conducted in the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission conference room at Midland Regional Airport, Jim Gallivan, financial consultant, said he's "almost 100 percent sure" PBHFC will be authorized to sell the full $33 million worth of bonds.

Kenneth Smith, Rauscher Pierce Refsnes assistant vice president, said the allocation will be announced Monday, the same day he hopes to have preliminary commitments from area lenders.

Because of government rules on the bond program, he said, "there's an extremely short fuse on the whole thing."

Gallivan said because the program also involves "economies of scale," more than $15 million in commitments must be obtained to justify pursuing the program.

He explained that if enough interest is indicated within the next several days, area lenders will be contacted within about two weeks to sign up for the program and to pay a participation fee — about 2 to 4 percent of the commitment amount.

A bond issue would then be drafted, and a bond rating obtained, for the total amount lenders are willing to accept. Smith said that an adequate bond rating — "A or A- at the worst" — could hinge on whether a cross-section of lenders in the 13-county PBHFC show interest in the program.

Gallivan said that once rated, the bond issue would be sold to the general public. "We would try to achieve the lowest market rate we could," he said, referring to the interest rate offered to investors.

Proceeds from the sale would be placed in a trustee bank and distributed to area lenders as mortgage loans were granted. Gallivan explained that mortgage payments, at an interest rate slightly more than that of the bond issue, would be used to pay bond buyers.

Gallivan said the mortgage interest rate would not exceed the bond interest rate by more than 1⅛ percent.

He said that given today's market, the mortgage interest rate would be a fixed 11 percent for 30 years. He said today's standard market rate is between 12¾ and 13 percent.

Gallivan explained that only homebuyers with adjusted gross incomes of $40,000 or less are eligible for the program.

At least 90 percent of the allotment given a lending institution must be given to people — generally first-time homebuyers — who have not had a "present ownership interest" in their principal residence during the past three years.

The loans are restricted to owner-occupied, single-family homes and would include condominium units. Loan limits are $70,620 for a new home and $60,500 for an existing home.

When is a Ricky not a Ricky?

Mistaken identity case discussed

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Ricky Ramirez is not necessarily Ricky Ramirez.

And the Midland County commissioners are proposing to spend $1,475 in recognizing that proposition and in rectifying the mistake made by law-enforcement officers.

Last summer, a Ricky Ramirez was indicted by a Midland County grand jury for aggravated assault by use of a handgun against his own brother on July 11.

On Aug. 19, another Ricky Ramirez, 20, formerly of Midland, was arrested by an Ector County deputy sheriff at his Odessa home on a warrant issued by the Midland County sheriff's office. He summarily was thrown in jail in Odessa, then in Midland, and was released on a $5,000 bond.

He was the "wrong" Ricky Ramirez, as it turned out. The indicted "real" Ricky Ramirez apparently is still at large, said District Attorney Vern Martin.

As a result of his arrest, which Midland County Attorney J. Scott Henderson said was based on reasonable "probable cause," Ricky Ramirez, via his attorney, Will Hadden of Odessa, tendered a $2,000 bill to the Midland County Commissioners' Court.

"We don't have to pay any of it," Henderson advised the commissioners on Monday. "It (the wrongful arrest) really wasn't anybody's fault. We (the county) are immuned from suit." However, Henderson later noted that the Midland County commissioners "have this policy of making things right — at least making reimbursements."

"I think we should pay ($1,475)," said Midland County Judge Bill Ahders.

That $1,475 would cover Ramirez's $1,000 cost of hiring his initial Odessa lawyers, Bill Alexander and Larry Myrick, and the $400 for lawyer Hadden's petitioning the commissioners to compensate Ramirez for his wrongful arrest. The remainder, $75, would compensate Ramirez for the 15 hours of work, at $5 per hour, he lost due to his arrest and incarceration.

Through Hadden, Ramirez had sought an additional $525 to compensate for his embarrassment and humiliation over the incident.

Henderson suggested rounding out the compensation to $1,500 rather than the $1,475 proposed by Ahders. The $1,500 would have the effect of paying Ramirez $25 for his embarrassment, Henderson noted.

"Embarrassment is worth more than the $25," said Commissioner C. Wallace "Wally" Craig. "I'd almost take it as an insult that I had only $25's worth of embarrassment."

Finally, the commissioners agreed to offer Ramirez the $1,475. "I guess so," Craig said with a tone of reluctance.

"He (Ramirez) hasn't agreed to accept this," Henderson said later. "I think he will." Henderson said Hadden would let him know today if Ramirez will accept the county's offer.

In a Feb. 21 letter to the Commissioners' Court, Hadden asked for $2,000 "to settle and compromise" Ramirez's claim. In addition, Hadden asked for a letter from the district attorney or another in authority "confirming that he was the wrong Ricky Ramirez."

"He (Ramirez) was embarrassed and humiliated by the incident — his neighbors seeing him being taken from his home by handcuffs by a law-enforcement officer, having to explain it to his boss," Hadden wrote. "The story of his arrest was on the radio in Midland and in the Midland newspaper.

"It appears that a $2,000 offer of compromise and settlement of this claim plus the letter is very reasonable and should be seriously considered by the (Commissioners') Court."

Martin noted that mistaken-identity arrests, though based on probable cause, are infrequent.

"It's a very rare thing. It's happened before," said Martin, "when the son did something, and they arrested his father. That's usually the case."

Speeding neighbor worries rural residents

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Several rural Midland County residents who expressed alarm over speeding along their quarter-mile road on Monday tried to persuade the Midland County Commissioners to lower the speed limit there from 55 mph to 20 mph.

"Actually," said the group's spokesman, Charlie Cooper, "it's more dangerous than a school zone."

The band of citizens' wrath seemed to be aimed at one of the neighbors who "speeds" along the roadway off Warren Road south of Midland.

"We've talked to him so many times, I think I'll put it in a recording," said Cooper, who suggested that the 55 mph limit, though legal there, is far too fast a speed limit for the road conditions and neighborhood.

"I think I'd lose my temper," said County Judge Bill Ahders.

The judge noted that the group's efforts seemed to be "for the protection of the kids" and their pets.

"And I love dogs, too," said Ahders. "I don't want anybody running over my dog."

Bill Harral, the county's consulting engineer, suggested setting a 30 mph speed limit along the quarter-mile strip.

Ten-pound rattlesnake takes round-up honors

There are rattlesnakes, and then there are big rattlesnakes.

But the rattler which snared biggest snake honors at last weekend's 25th Annual Sweetwater Rattlesnake Round-up would have given a 20-piece mariachi band a shake for its booty.

The Sandhills Rattlesnake Club, with members from Andrews, Midland and Snyder, took home a trophy and about $280 after capturing the competition with a 10-pound, 74-inch rattler caught during the two weeks prior to the contest.

Harley Tyler, club president, said the snake narrowly missed the Sweetwater Round-up's reptile record — 76 inches.

The club also lost out on a few hundred dollars, he explained, because competition sponsors opted to pay by the inch this year instead of offering $500 for the largest snake, as in previous years.

As some consolation, he said, club members did land an interview with Time magazine.

Tyler said the snake-capturing club, formed about eight years ago when a friend's daughter was bitten by a rattler, brought about 130 snakes to the roundup.

The club's 10-pound lunker was only part of the 15,030 pounds of rattlesnake collected by 432 hunters for this year's round-up. In 1982, 400 people "charmed" 18,000 pounds of snake into this West Texas town, about 40 miles west of Abilene.

"A big rattlesnake is five-and-a-half foot, and that's a big rattlesnake," Tyler said. "Out of 15,000 pounds of snakes, this one was the biggest."

Outage affects 33,000

Life for 33,000 Permian Basin residents came to a halt for less than 10 minutes Monday afternoon when an unusual accident caused a power outage.

Sara St. Clair, spokesman for Texas Electric Service Co., explained that a ditch digger being hauled on the back of a flat-bed truck at Mission Country Club located between Midland and Odessa was the cause of the blackout. When the truck drove under a telephone line, she said, the ditch digger hit the phone line, causing it to snap and swing into an electric transmission line 50 feet away.

"This caused the circuits to trip" and electricity to stop flowing, she said.

The blackout affected 33,000 customers ranging from west Midland to Midland Air Terminal to east Odessa. Traffic lights also quit functioning in this area.

Rabid skunk found in county

Another rabid skunk case in Midland County was confirmed Saturday, according to a spokesman with the Animal Control Department.

The skunk was killed Thursday and taken to the department. Tests on Saturday confirmed the animal was rabid.

It was shot near County Road 1788 about five miles north of Midland Air Terminal and 1½ to 2 miles east of the Ector County line.

This is the first time a rabid skunk has been found in that area, which is far northwest Midland County, the spokesman said.

Speeding worries county residents

"If they're going to violate the 30, they're going to violate the 20," he said.

"I think 30 is about as low as you (legally) can go," advised County Attorney J. Scott Henderson. The commissioners are to set the speed limit in their 9 a.m. special meeting Friday in the Midland County Courthouse.

Steve Eash said his concern is for the safety of his children. He said the unnamed speeder who lives at the "end of the dead-end (road)" has a child of his own.

"I've got four children walking down that road," said Eash, "and it scares me every time I see him coming."

"There's no place for the children to walk but the road," said Don Dickerman.

"That's a problem," agreed the judge.

"That's the way the country was built," offered Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis.

Lorene Dickerman said the speeder "killed my dog" by running over the pet, and never apologized.

Furthermore, she said, the eight families living in the neighborhood moved out there to escape the bustle of the city life.

"We're trying to get away and trying to make a decent place to live."

'Missile alert' really agencies' practice

Anyone listening to a police scanner this morning may have felt their heart leap into their throat when, at about 8:30 a.m., word came that several Soviet intercontinental ballistic missiles were screaming toward West Texas.

If they listened closely, however, they discovered that the warning was only part of a day-long radiological fallout exercise conducted in Disaster Regions 4 and 6 by several public safety agencies.

Midland County, along with 95 other central and West Texas counties, were included in the drill, which gives local emergency management coordinators the opportunity to test their ability to report bomb locations and fallout amounts to district, state and federal emergency operating centers.

Local radiological defense officers were supplied with a set of hypothetical data, including detonation locations and wind speeds, and asked to calculate and report nuclear fallout amounts.

Texas Highway Department and Department of Public Safety communications systems were used for reporting the information, which was relayed to the Texas Emergency Management Council's underground emergency operations center in Austin.

Also participating in the simulation were the governor's Division of Emergency Management, the Texas Department of Health and Region 6 of the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

State's crime rate rises in AUSTIN — The 1982 overall crime rate in Texas rose 4.2 percent from the 1981 figure, according to statistics released Monday by the Department of Public Safety.

A total of 962,260 major crimes were reported in the state during 1982. Robbery led the violent crime category, which also includes murder, rape and aggravated assault.

The number of robberies rose 17.8 percent; aggravated assault went up by 11.2 percent; murder showed a 1 percent increase; and "a slight change" was recorded in cases.

"The murder rate, keyed to population, actually registered a decline of 1.8 percent," said DPS Director Col. Jim Adams.

Other major crimes also showed increases. Included in that category are theft, up 10.4 percent, and burglary, up 4.6 percent.

A heartening note for motorists is that the total number of DWI arrests in 1982 rose 25.6 percent over the 1981 figure, reflecting the growing emphasis on getting drunken drivers off the road.

Seventeen Texas law enforcement officers were killed in the line of duty in 1982, nine of them "by felonious action." The others died in duty-related accidents.

D.A. Earle offers apology

AUSTIN (AP) — District Attorney Ronnie Earle has apologized and pleaded no contest to misdemeanor charges he filed against himself for failing to file campaign expense reports in 1981 and 1982.

"My failure to file was unintentional, but that does not excuse it," said Earle, who was fined $200 on Monday. "I owe my constituency an apology, which I now tender."

Earle, who is in charge of a Public Integrity Unit that investigates state officials, was fined $100 for each late report and also had to pay $12 in court costs.

The reports are due Jan. 15 for the preceding year. Earle filed his reports for the missing years Monday, showing he had received no contributions and had campaign expenditures totaling $2,059 during the two-year period.

Earle's attorney, Randall "Buck" Wood, said the discovery was strictly an internal affair.

Less than two weeks ago a newsman's question prompted House Speaker Gib Lewis to admit he had failed to list several business interests on his required financial disclosure statement. Lewis' amended statement revealed ties with liquor dealers and a horseracing lobbyist.

Wood said no reporters' questions prompted Earle to file the overdue reports, although he conceded, "I wouldn't say his mind wasn't triggered by all of this."

Tower climber doesn't make 1,000-foot mark

HOUSTON (AP) — A stuntman who scaled the 75-story Texas Commerce Tower said that for the last 25 floors, his body gave out and "I didn't think I was going to make it."

"I felt good to the 25th floor," said Ron Broyles after he finished the climb late Monday. "At the 50th, I didn't think I was going to make it. My arms were dead, my legs were going. My fingers wouldn't work."

Broyles, 29, of Los Angeles was arrested on a charge of criminal trespass as he reached the parapet of the office building at 10:44 p.m. He was released around midnight after posting an $800 bond, pending arraignment today.

The building is 1,049 feet above sea level, but only 999 feet over the street. Officials said the face Broyles chose rises 993.33 feet.

He was apparently undaunted by his failure to crack the 1,000-foot mark. "If that didn't do it technically, I'll go back and climb another one," he said.

Hundreds of spectators cheered and honked horns when Broyles, clad in a white tuxedo, ended his trek by swinging himself onto the roof, more than 18 hours after he began his ascent at 4:30 a.m.

Officials said he was not noticed until he was at the eighth floor, beyond the reach of fire department ladders.

The crowd, which gathered on streets ordinarily deserted after sundown, chanted "Go, go, go" as Broyles rested for several minutes at the 74th floor.

Four teen-agers charged

ODESSA — Four teen-agers were charged with robbery after a police officer on routine patrol saw them running from the Colonial Food Store at 8th and Muskingum about 11 p.m. Monday and later learned the store had been robbed.

Officer Rick McCoy said he followed the suspects and saw them enter a house at 608 N. Adams. Shortly afterward, a clerk reported four youths matching their description had taken an undisclosed amount of money from the store at gunpoint. They were taken into custody after police surrounded the house.

Jailed under $25,000 bond each set by Municipal Court Judge Otis Moore were 17-year-old Oscar Benevides, 18-year-old Roberto Martinez and 17-year-old Jessie Pando. A 15-year-old boy was held for juvenile authorities. A .22-caliber rifle was taken into custody.

Junior League ball features Greek decor

White columns and statues reminiscent of ancient Greece provided the atmosphere Friday night for the Charity Ball. Sponsored by the Junior League of Midland Inc., the ball was attended by approximately 1000 people. Proceeds from the $125 per couple, black tie ball will be returned to the community through the programs of the Junior League.

A buffet dinner catered by Don Strange of San Antonio featured chateaubriand, avocados stuffed with caviar, oysters on the half shell, salmon, artichokes, asparagus, breads, and was topped off with a dessert table featuring cakes in several different flavors as well as strawberries with chocolate sauce and chocolate candies.

The two dance floors were crowded as party goers took advantage of music for dancing provided by North Texas One O'Clock Lab Band and First Crossing.

'Most married man' good father, says son

Hearst Feature Service

Though only 18 and never married, John Wolfe has learned well the lessons of matrimony. His 74-year-old father has tied — and loosened — the sacred knot 25 times now.

And when 23-year-old "number 25" walked out on John's father, Glynn, the world's "most married man," John figured good riddance.

"She was bad news," he said. "Glynn's better off without her. You never know a person till you marry 'em. Then you wake up and find yourself with a whole new person."

John's own ideas about the marriage sacrament may be a little distorted. But then, yours would be too if your mother was a number.

"My mother was number 14," said Wolfe the younger. "I've never seen her. Her name was Paulette Snyder and she was last known to be in Vegas, where my dad married her in 1964. She just took off and Glynn raised me. I'm the only one of the kids that grew up with Glynn. The rest of 'em the female part kept."

The time-honored notion that marriage makes a person whole is not lost on the Wolfes. It's just that neither John nor Glynn figure "the female part" is necessarily the better half. The elder Glynn seems to think of his two dozen plus wives as interchangeable parts.

Glynn said that he wasn't hurt or terribly disappointed that No. 25 left him.

"Aw, she kept usin' my toothbrush all the time," Wolfe said in a phone interview. "It was the little things more than anything. And the age difference I guess. All she wanted to do was (party), go downtown and stay up late. . .she'd get mad when I'd wake her up in the morning."

Wolfe scoffed at the popular misconception that septuagenarians tend to lose their sexual drive: "Hah! I wear 'em out," Wolfe said.

Wolfe began his world-record setting trip into the Guinness book where he is enshrined for having engaged in "the greatest number of marriages accumulated in the monogamous world" in 1927. Wolfe was 19 at the time. After three years that marriage broke up because, Wolfe said, "I got sick of fighting with her father. I divorced her to get rid of the father."

Wolfe said his own parents "lived happily together for 50 years."

Wolfe of course, never followed their example.

"I just got started and couldn't stop," he said.

Somehow, Wolfe fails to see 25 broken marriage agreements as any sort of failure, at least on his part.

"Hell, I'm world famous," he said. "I took one of my ex-wives to Tokyo last year and they treated me like the American ambassador.

"I'm just going to keep on goin'," said Wolfe, who will turn 75 in July. "This last girl was 22 when I married her and she turned 23. She was wild though." Wolfe filed for divorce three weeks after marrying his latest bride in December.

Surprises from 'Celebrity Yearbook'

By ERMA BOMBECK

Okay, all of you high school seniors out there — and you all know who you are — you say your graduation picture makes you look like a convicted shoplifter?

You say under student activities, all they listed was lunch?

You say in the class history they called you Dan instead of Jan?

Take heart. I have before me a book by Dan Carlinsky called "Celebrity Yearbook" that I've blown a half day on. Inside are the graduation pictures of a couple of hundred celebrities as they appeared in their high school yearbooks. You're supposed to guess who they are. There are a lot of surprises (and hair colors) that could sustain your ego for 15 or 20 years.

Let's get the cheerleaders, princesses and queens out of the way first. They're born with congenital cuteness, pompom hands and capped teeth and there's nothing anyone can do about it. They never change, so let's get it over with: Ann-Margret, Cheryl Ladd, Shirley MacLaine, Sally Struthers, Cheryl Tiegs and Phyllis George.

Now, onto the graduates, some of whom were lucky to find their way out of the parking lot following graduation exercises.

Paul Newman ran a student laundry, Bella Abzug was a member of the Freshman Sing, Dolly Parton was a member of the Future Homemakers of America and Penny Marshall was an "aide to Mr. Fitzpatrick" and aspired to become a secretary.

The man whose goal was to be president of the United States had to settle for Mel Brooks, comedic genius, while the part-time lifeguard at Dixon High in Dixon, Ill., turned out to be Ronald Reagan, president. Those are the breaks.

David Letterman fattened out his accomplishments with "hall monitor," Julia Child was a "Grass Cop" (and we all know what a future there is in that) and Pat Boone was chairman of the Courtesy Week Committee.

I tried to imagine as I read through the book who among all that talent would have leaped off the pages at me. Maybe Johnny Carson of Norfolk High, class of '43, who wrote one of the funniest class histories I've ever read. ("I was turned down so many times for a date for the Junior Senior Banquet, I felt like a bedspread.")

Maybe Fred MacMurray from Beaver Dam, Wis., who was just plain handsome.

But most of them were . . . ordinary. They looked just like the pictures in your yearbooks . . . young, apprehensive and wondering how they were going to unload the 200 billfold-size pictures that were left.

DEAR ABBY

Humming in woman's head isn't music

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have a noise in my head right now, and I have had it for about four weeks. It sounds like a high-pitched humming or buzzing that never stops. At first I thought it must be something in the house, but I hear it when I go outside, too. No matter where I am, I hear this humming, buzzing sound all the time. It's driving me crazy.

My husband has been telling me for three years that he hears a constant ringing in his ears, but I thought he was just imagining it.

I am 65, and my husband is 69. What is the trouble with us? Are we going crazy or what? Have you ever heard of this problem? And what can we do about it? — HEARING THINGS IN ILLINOIS

DEAR HEARING THINGS: I have indeed heard of it. It's a condition called "tinnitus," and millions of people are afflicted with it in varying degrees. There are many causes, but a few of the most common are: wax buildup in the ears, exposure to loud noises, Meniere's disease, a tumor in the auditory nerve, middle-ear infection or allergies to food or medication. Sometimes this condition is simply part of the natural aging process.

You and your husband should be examined by an ear, nose and throat specialist to determine what the cause is, and what, if anything, can be done to alleviate it.

If it cannot be remedied, you may have to learn to live with it. Please don't put off seeing your doctor. The more you know about this condition, the less anxious you will be.

DEAR ABBY: I'm all for giving cash gifts. It's been my personal experience that I actually spend less that way — not to mention the wear and tear on me and my car while hunting for the perfect present.

Besides, there are ways to personalize cash. I've made a cardboard "pizza" with coins pasted all over it for a teen-ager's birthday, filled a baby bottle with money for a baby shower, wrapped dollar bills around a bottle of suntan lotion for "honeymooners," given rolls of quarters to a college-bound friend (the washers and dryers in dorms get hungry, too), etc.

Last Christmas I stuffed some pasta shells with dollar bills so my new sister-in-law could buy whatever pasta-maker machine she wanted. Returns are a bummer! — LINDA IN FARMERS BRANCH, TEXAS

DEAR LINDA: Cash is not nearly so crass when presented with a creative gimmick. Thanks for some valuable suggestions.

DEAR ABBY: "Betty in Greenwich, Conn." wanted to know if it was considered proper for her Texas gentleman friend to keep his hat on while dining in a restaurant, and you said, "Unless this Texan is an Orthodox Jew, he should remove it."

Abby, I'll bet a million dollars that this man with the glued-on hat is neither kosher, Orthodox or whatever. The poor guy is bald! — ZELDA IN CHICAGO

Jury selection complete in suit of Garner brought by golf fan

SALINAS, Calif. (AP) — Jury selection has been completed in a civil trial of James Garner, being sued for $2.2 million by a golf fan who accused the actor of belting him during the 1981 Bing Crosby Pro-Am Golf Tournment in Pebble Beach.

William Stewart, 33, of Laguna Beach, has charged Garner in Monterey County Superior Court with hitting him in the face and knocking him down on the ninth hole at the February 1981 tournament, in which Garner was a participant.

James Garner

The actor, who played Jim Rockford in the popular "Rockford Files" television series, refused comment on the case on Monday; he has said that Stewart was heckling him and he gave the spectator a slight push.

In his suit, Stewart said Garner was a man of considerable wealth and fame whose actions set an example for millions. The incident left Stewart with "severe mental anguish" as well as physical pain, his suit said.

NEW YORK (AP) — "Let the lines come," says actress Linda Evans, and she's not talking about the lines she has to learn as a star of television's "Dynasty."

Linda Evans

"I promised myself if I took this series and worked really hard I would never have to work again. Let the lines come. Let the gray hair come," said Miss Evans, adding that with the money she earns, she'll be able to "grow old gracefully."

"I don't want to be 52, with fluffy blond hair, having to say, 'Uh, can I have a job?' " she said in an interview with McCall's magazine.

What she does want, said Miss Evans, is a baby.

Divorced twice, the 40-year-old actress now is living with George Santo Pietro, owner of pizza restaurants in Los Angeles, McCall's said.

Says Miss Evans of having her first child, "I still have time."

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Entertainer Sammy Davis Jr., admitted to a hospital with viral pneumonia, has canceled appearances here but hopes to be performing again by the end of the month.

Sammy Davis

Davis was described in good condition Monday, a day after he was admitted to Washoe Medical Center for tests after a case of the flu turned into viral pneumonia.

The 57-year-old Davis canceled the rest of his appearances at Harrah's hotel-casino here but is expected to make his next engagement — March 28 at the Diplomat Hotel in Hollywood, Fla., said press agent Nancy Hite.

Davis has been resting comfortably and "watching lot of television," said hospital spokesman Jack Bulavsky.

Weather may have caused birds' exodus

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unusual weather may have caused millions of birds to stage an unprecedented mass exodus from Christmas Island, leaving their young to die in nests on the Pacific atoll, scientists say.

Virtually the entire adult population of sea birds on Christmas Island mysteriously disappeared last year, leaving thousands of chicks behind to starve to death, scientists reported Monday.

Researchers suspect that weather changes may have caused the birds to abandon the island, the first such massive disappearance of an entire bird population ever recorded on a tropical atoll.

Dr. Ralph W. Schreiber, curator of ornithology at the Natural History Museum of Los Angeles County in California, said about 17 million birds representing 18 species either abandoned the island or perished.

The sudden departure, which occurred between Schreiber's visits to the islard last June and November, was particularly devastating for the thousands of nestlings.

Some bird species will lose at least an entire generation because of the disruption, Schreiber said.

"What has happened there was a real shock and a catastrophe when put in the context of the breeding biology of these species," he said.

The disappearance occurred during an unusual weather phenomenon known as El Nino, which results in a change in Pacific wind patterns, ocean currents and water temperatures.

This weather, which has resulted in an unusual winter in many parts of the world, is responsible for shifts in fish populations and changes in the habits of animals depending upon these fish, he said.

Schreiber said in a telephone interview that many of the birds may be living in the air above more distant waters, waiting for the weather to change before returning to Christmas Island.

The birds, which feed exclusively on fish and squid, spend most of their lives in the air, floating on air currents and swooping down occasionally to feed, he said.

"There are other islands nearby, but they are 60 to 100 miles away," Schreiber said. "Under normal conditions, birds from one island do not go to other islands and there is no reason to go to another island even in an emergency."

I am wondering why there is not a signal light at the intersection of South Big Spring Street at Interstate 20. There have been several traffic accidents at this spot, because it's almost impossible to enter Big Spring Street from the service road, where there usually is traffic from the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, because of the speed of incoming and outgoing traffic on Big Spring Street. — F.S.

ANSWER: Robert Wilson, engineer in the Odessa office of the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation, says that the contract for the construction of a signal light at this intersection has been "let," and the project should get under way in two to three months, depending upon the arrival time of necessary materials.

On Feb. 22 utility companies dug up the alley in the 1200 block between Country Club Drive and Harvard Avenue. A water pipe was broken and covered up. The water is still bubbling up and making a marsh. Not only is this a mess but precious water is being wasted.

Is it possible to get someone to correct this? I have tried to no avail. — L.H.

ANSWER: The Water and Sewer Division of the City of Midland was contacted and informed of the problem. A spokeswoman in the division said that to her knowledge no report had been made about the situation, but that there would be a check made on it right away.

I have been told that Midland firemen do not have the keys necessary to turn on and off water hydrants in the city. I also was told that the Public Works Department does this instead of the fire department. Is this true? I heard of one situation when a water heater collapsed in a house and when the people contacted the fire department for assistance, they couldn't cut the water off when they arrived. — Barbara Larsen

ANSWER: Bill Tatsch with the Customer Service Division of the Water and Sewer Department reports that the department has stand-by crews available and when emergency calls are received these crews are notified by radio. The crews are able to cut off the water supply to residences when necessary. He also says that the Public Works Department is in charge of the maintenance and repair of the city's fire hydrants and problems evolving from sewage stoppages, etc.

I live on 151-West off FM 1788 in Midland County and our area is becoming a dump heap, which we do not appreciate at all. People are using caliche pits and other areas along the highways to dump trash and raw garbage. When the wind blows, this trash covers our yards. I don't see why people who do this sort of thing don't have some pride in the way Midland and the surrounding area look. Midland has always been a clean place to live. Isn't there something that can be done about preventing this trash dumping? — Juanita Turner

ANSWER: Midland County Commissioner Durward Wright, in whose precinct this particular area is located, says that this illegal dumping of trash is a problem throughout the county. He encourages anyone aware of someone dumping trash where they shouldn't to obtain, if at all possible, the license number of the vehicle involved and contact the constable's office with this information. If this is done, the constable's office can trace the offenders and offer them the alternative of cleaning up the trash or paying a fine. A representative of the constable's office may be contacted to enforce the law by calling the Midland County Courthouse, 682-9481.

A spokesperson in the constable's office says that fines for illegal dumping of trash range from $25 to $200. She also notes that efforts are made to determine who the guilty culprits are by looking through the trash to find correspondence bearing names and addresses, but the most effective way is through the license registration numbers.

Hurts related to sport

Dear Dr. Solomon: I saw on television where a girl was trying out for a high school football team. Why anyone would want to play football is beyond me. But what I'd like to know is if a girl is more likely to get hurt playing football than a boy. — Mrs. M.R., San Diego, Calif.

Dear Mrs. R.: Dr. Mary Morden, of the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, says that injuries in trained athletes are generally related to the sport in which they participate rather than to their sex. For example, if knee injuries are common in football, both boys and girls who play the game are likely to suffer knee injuries. The same hold true for tennis or any other sports activity.

However, women who undergo endurance training may have the onset of menstruation delayed because it is affected by the ratio of body fat to lean body mass.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My niece has been diagnosed as having juvenile rheumatoid arthritis, and I'd like to know what it is and what causes it. — Ms. J.S., Rye, N.Y.

Dear Ms. S.: Juvenile rheumatoid arthritis (JRA) is characterized by chronic arthritis and may be associated with disability and blindness. It usually occurs in children under 16 years of age, and generally affects girls more often than it does boys.

There is no firm evidence of what causes JRA. Some speculation has centered around infection, psychological stress, and heredity, among other factors, but one of these has as yet been substantiated.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Can the pill make a woman sterile? I've been trying to become pregnant for a few months but with no luck. Before this, I was on the Pill. Can this be making the difference? I'd also like to know if an IUD can make a woman sterile. — Kay, Boston, Mass.

Dear Kay: Dr. William Droegemueller, chairman of the department of obstetrics and gynecology at the University of North Carolina School of Medicine, says that women who use oral contraceptives may experience some delay in becoming pregnant after they stop taking the Pill, but they don't become sterile.

In contrast, the use of an intrauterine device does not result in delay in conception following its removal.

For Trudi, Scranton, Pa.: The reason that infants who are breast fed appear to have a lower rate of eczema than do other children may not be the protective effect of the breast milk, but the fact that they probably receive few solid foods during their first few months of life.

The results of a study of more than a thousand infants by a group of New Zealand researchers indicate that infants who receive only breast milk during their first four months of life had significantly less eczema than did a group of children who were not breast fed. Further analysis showed that this was a result of the breast-fed infants' not consuming solid food.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I always thought that aspirin was as safe as anything could be because it was given so readily to children. But I had a case of hives the other day, and my doctor said it could have been caused by aspirin. Am I the exception? — Leo, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

Dear Leo: No drug is completely safe for all people all of the time. Dr. Guy A. Settipane, director of the divison of allergy at Rhode Island Hospital, Providence, says that aspirin intolerance is found in about 23 percent of people with chronic urticaria (hives).

People who use acetaminophen instead of aspirin should realize that about five percent of individuals who are sensitive to aspirin are also sensitive to acetaminophen.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've heard that even infants can have cataracts. What I'm wondering about is how long they have to go around with poor vision before they can be operated on. — Mrs. M.E., Birmingham, Ala.

Dear Mrs. E.: Very young children may indeed develop cataracts. However, cataract surgery is not only possible at a very early age, it might in fact be desirable.

Dr. David Taylor, of the Hospital for Sick Chilren, and Dr. Noel S.C. Rice, of Moorfields Eye Hospital in London, say that children with cataracts should have surgery completed and optical treatment started by two months of age for best results. The child is able to wear regular glasses by three years of age, and bifocals, if necessary, by school age.

Dear Dr. Solomon: What causes boils and what is the best way to treat them? Would you recommend a medicine I could get in a drugstore that would be helpful in treating boils? — Doug, Oklahoma City

Dear Doug: Boils are the result of an infection of a sweat gland or hair follicle, and treatment must be obtained from a physician; otherwise, blood infection may occur.

As for the over-the-counter preparations, an advisory panel has reported to the Food and Drug Administration that none of the ingredients in any of the products now available without a doctor's prescription has been found to be effective in the treatment of this condition.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Why are doctors so concerned about the possibility that a baby may be born before the exact time it is due? If the baby weighs enough, what difference does it make how long the mother has been carrying it? — Mrs. T.R., Chicago.

Dear Mrs. R.: The results of at least one study have shown that the duration of pregnancy is more important than the infant's weight in determining survival. This has been demonstrated in a study of premature infants deliverd at St. Margaret's Hospital for Women in Boston.

One finding was that even a two-week increase in the duration of a pregnancy, from 26 to 28 weeks, resulted in a doubling of the rate of survival, from 45 percent to 92 percent.

Prosecution makes emotional summation in Fleming trial

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — In an emotional final argument in the Groucho Marx estate trial, an attorney for the Bank of America told a jury that the comedian's companion, Erin Fleming, victimized Marx in his final years.

"She threatened to kill him; she threatened to leave him; she threatened to put him in a convalescent home," attorney J. Brin Schulman said Monday. "She really gave him hell."

Schulman, who shouted and pounded a lectern as he berated Miss Fleming, was to conclude his presentation today.

Miss Fleming's attorney, David Sabih, will offer a defense summation, then Schulman will have an opportunity for a brief reply before deliberations begin.

Schulman urged the jury to condemn Miss Fleming's behavior by granting the bank's petition as executor of the Marx estate to retrieve $400,000 in cash and additional gifts, including two homes. The bank alleged that Miss Fleming, 42, obtained the gifts by threatening and deceiving the ailing comic before his death in 1977 at the age of 86.

Schulman also focused on the bank's role in the seven-week trial in Los Angeles County Superior Court. "The bank is here not as an institution, not as the great big Bank of America that has some interest here," he said. "The bank is here as executor of the estate...They are duty bound to be here."

Schulman contended that Miss Fleming, Marx's companion during the last six years of his life, mistreated him physically and mentally.

"It can not be permitted that you or history will say that this is the way we treat old people in our society," Schulman said.

"We can shove food in their faces, we can drug them, we can make them shake and be frightened. If a celebrity does not have shields from that kind of thing, what shields do you or I have?" he asked.

However, Schulman later told the jury to disregard Marx's celebrity status.

"The person we are talking about is not some myth or legend, not some super person in history known as Groucho Marx," Schulman said.

"We are talking about a person in his 80th year. He was slowed down, he had urinary problems, he had strokes before he met Erin Fleming."

Schulman suggested that Marx was vulnerable to Miss Fleming and became dependent upon her. He argued that she used fraud and undue influence to get money and gifts from the ailing comedian.

Miss Fleming, he said, was a stranger who intruded into Marx's life and alienated him from his family and convinced him that his son, Arthur, wanted to put him in convalescent home.

"He feared it because Erin told him to fear it," Schulman said. "As much as he feared the son, he was terrified of her."

Canadians get monthly baby bonus

TORONTO (AP) — Once a month, every Canadian mother finds a government check in the mail, a token of the country's appreciation for her efforts in bringing up the next generation.

When the first family allowance checks were sent out in 1945, the government said they would boost the economy, help the poor and recognize the role families play in Canadian society.

Opponents said the real idea was to keep the Liberal government in power. If so, it worked.

But whatever the reason for its birth, the "baby bonus" has grown up to be so popular it is unlikely any political party would even think out loud about tampering with the program.

"Family allowances became in time, if you'll forgive the pun, a motherhood issue," says Ken Battle, director of the National Council of Welfare, a panel of citizens set up to advise the welfare ministry.

In early March, the council recommended an overhaul of Canada's general approach to benefits for children under 18, but urged the government to keep its hands off the baby bonus.

"A government which tampered with the principle of universal payment would risk alienating a large segment of the electorate, and an opposition party which advocated repeal of universal family allowances might lose more votes than it would gain," the council warned.

The report proposed scrapping the existing income tax exemption for parents, which it said "makes no sense as a social program" because it gives higher benefits to those who have higher taxable incomes.

With the $900 million from the tax exemption, the council proposed increasing the existing child tax credit, which favors the poor.

Under the current scheme, even Canadians who pay no taxes receive the maximum credit of $279 as a refund. For those who earn more than about $23,000 the size of the credit diminishes and eventually disappears.

Minnelli rests after hospital release

DALLAS (AP) — Singer Liza Minnelli was resting in a hotel following her release from a hospital where she was treated after getting food caught in her throat, officials say.

The 37-year-old performer was discharged at 6 p.m. Monday, said Mandi Turner, a nursing supervisor at Presbyterian Hospital. Her agent, Michael Maslansky, said she planned to spend the night in Dallas and fly to Tucson today.

"She felt some food was lodged in her lower throat and she was having difficulty breathing and apparently was choking when he (a doctor) was called," hospital spokesman Bill Mays said.

The singer had completed a series of performances in conjunction with the opening of the renovated Majestic Theater on Sunday night.

"She got something caught in her throat and she had muscle spasms," Maslansky said.

The One Place Where Freedom and Super Prices Meet

House of Carpets' professional designers Jana Beaird and Tricia Naughton discuss the big map which depicts House of Carpets customers for the years 1951 through 1959. Since opening in 1951, House of Carpets has carpeted more Midland homes than all other dealers combined.

House of Carpets first in carpet sales

Every year since 1951, House of Carpets has been elected No. 1 in Midland! Not by any special election, but by the people in Midland who select carpeting for their own homes. The election each year is such a landslide that more people buy carpets for their homes from House of Carpets than from all other Midland stores combined.

The reasons for such a landslide are perfectly clear, says Felix Welmaker, owner. First, when people buy an item such as carpet, they expect it to last beautifully for years, and they select a carpet store they know will be there to service it during that time. Over the past 31 years, more than 150 other carpet dealers have come and gone, but House of Carpets has remained constantly in business under the same ownership during all the many "booms" and "busts" experienced by the Tall City. Midlanders like that dependability.

Another reason for House of Carpets' popularity, says Welmaker, is the pleasant and well-trained people who work there. Midlanders can enjoy shopping there. If you have not visited House of Carpets yet, you are probably new in Midland. You're invited to drop in and visit. Ask questions about carpet, interior design, color coordination, the latest trends and styles. You'll find the answers you need at House of Carpets.

Many other reasons could be listed that help explain House of Carpets success over the years, but Welmaker feels this is one of the most important: the quality products at House of Carpets are priced so reasonably, almost anyone can afford them. Of course, they have exotic carpets at higher prices, but in every quality range, you'll get exceptional value.

When you're ready for carpet, or draperies, or mini-blinds, or ceiling fans, or wallcoverings, or decorating advice–go by the House of Carpets in the Village Shopping Center and visit with them. We feel sure you'll give them your vote.

Iran hangs three who refused to recant faith

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Iran last week hanged three members of the Baha'i faith for refusing to convert to Islam, the Baha'i World Center in Haifa said today.

An Israeli newspaper reported today that two Jews also were executed recently in Iran.

The Baha'is were hanged in the southwest city of Shiraz on Saturday, and included two men, Yadu'llah Mahmudnizhad and Rahmatu'llah Vafa'i, and a woman, Tuba Za'irpur, said Baha'i spokesman Donald Barrett. The Baha'i center learned of the executions Sunday and today from relatives of the victims, he said.

Their deaths brought to 140 the number of Baha'is executed under Iran's fundamentalist Moslem regime led by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, Barrett said. He said 200 Baha'is are imprisoned in Iran, and 19 others still face death sentences ordered months ago by the Iranian Supreme Court.

The three were among more than 80 Baha'is imprisoned in Shiraz, where in 1844 the Persian religious leader Baha Ullah founded the faith.

Barrett said the executions were not announced in advance, and the families were not notified until after the victims were buried by prison guards. He said the others facing death sentences also do not know when they will die.

"This is a heinous way of further distressing and persecuting the prisoners and their families," Barrett told The Associated Press.

The Baha'is are the largest religious minority in Iran with more than 300,000 members, but are not recognized by the Iranian constitution. Barrett said the Baha'is in Iran have no civil rights, though they have stated their loyalty to the government.

Barrett said the imprisonment and execution of the Baha'is is "entirely based on trumped-up charges," including spying for Israel, and "the real reason is the religious fanaticism against the Baha'is."

Baha'is are allowed to go free if they recant their faith, Barrett said, but only a few have done so.

The U.N. Human Rights Commission meeting last week in Geneva adopted a resolution condemning Iran's persecution of the Baha'is.

In a separate development, the Maariv daily quoted what it called qualified sources as saying a Jewish man in Iran, Yaacov Dochnian, was executed a few days ago after several months of imprisonment. The only other details known about Dochnian were that he was a driver, was married and had three children, and that his passport showed he had spent five months in Israel five years ago.

The newspaper also said an unidentified young Jewish woman was executed along with a group of Iranians a few weeks ago.

Secretary of State George Shultz, right, greets Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Sahmir at the State Department Monday in Washington for a second day of talks between the two concerning the deadlock in withdrawal of Israeli troops from Lebanon. Shamir will meet with President Reagan later today.

Negotiators move to Mideast to attempt to break deadlock

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. negotiators trying to get Israeli troops out of Lebanon are returning to the Mideast after high-level talks here with both sides apparently failed to break a deadlock on key issues.

Although some progress was reported after Monday's talks, the two sides are unable to agree on whether Israel should exercise responsibility for security along Lebanon's border with Israel, U.S. officials say.

Israel insists on keeping some military force in southern Lebanon; Lebanon insists that all Israeli troops must leave.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz had met separately with Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Lebanese Foreign Minister Elie Salem in hopes of breaking the deadlock in the 10-week-old talks.

But all sides agreed more negotiations in Lebanon and Israel are necessary. They will resume in the Middle East Thursday with U.S. participation.

"I believe we will get an agreement," Shamir said after his third meeting in two days with Shultz. "I cannot say it is very near, but I believe we will get an agreement."

U.S. officials said additional discussions might be held before Shamir leaves Washington later today.

Shamir also met with President Reagan Monday and afterward quoted Reagan as saying: "It's time we stopped talking about each other and started talking to each other."

Shamir claimed to reporters that after a total of nine hours of talks with Shultz the United States now had a better understanding of Israel's position.

"Much more understanding in the United States about our position concerning Lebanon was achieved and this understanding will find its expression in the negotiations between the parties which will continue in the area," he said.

But he didn't answer directly when asked whether an agreement on a troop withdrawal was any nearer as a result of the talks here, which Israel had requested.

"These were conversations between the United States and Israel and not negotiations," he said. "We have not negotiated on all the details because that was left to the negotiators in the area."

He said that in deciding on a troop withdrawal agreement, Israel wants to see "clear evidence that the Syrians and the Palestine Liberation Organization want to withdraw."

Shultz has said Syria has agreed to withdraw when the Israelis do and that the Palestinians probably would leave with them. But Shamir obviously has doubts.

Shamir also said Israel would oppose having an international peacekeeping force provide security in southern Lebanon as a substitute for the Israelis.

U.S. officials had said publicly they didn't expect a breakthrough as a result of talks here. But privately they hoped Shamir would show enough flexibility on key issues to make rapid progress possible.

Swedish paper claims one of subs was NATO vessel

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — A Swedish newspaper claimed today that one of the two unidentified foreign submarines hunted by the Swedish navy off Stockholm last October was a NATO vessel.

Swedish naval officials denied the report, which was carried by Dagens Industri, a business newspaper.

Although the Swedish navy had not identified the vessels, there was widespread speculation that the intruding submarines came from the Soviet bloc.

Dagens Industri, quoting unnamed sources in the Swedish military and two Northern Atlantic Treaty Organization countries, said sonar recordings of running engines indicated one of the subs came from a NATO country. Which country was not known.

This would imply that both NATO and Warsaw pact subs played hide and seek with the Swedish navy during the two-week episode on Hors Bay in the Stockholm archipelago last October.

Sweden's navy commander, Adm. Per Rudberg, rejected the report, saying "This sort of information has no relevance to the material we have."

He declined further comment, saying the navy had submitted everything it had on the hunt to a parliamentary investigative commission which will report on the Hors Bay incident to the government at the end of April.

Capt. Sven Carisson, the navy's chief press spokesman, said the Swedish navy simply is not able to identify a submarine by the sound of its engines.

Carl Bildt, a member of the submarine commission, also rejected the report, saying, "There is big money waiting for Dagens Industri in the fiction story market."

The navy, which tried unsuccessfully to bomb the intruders to the surface for identification, has avoided speculation on the nationality of the foreign submarines.

The only submarine intruder that the neutral Swedes have ever captured was a Soviet sub that ran aground off a top secret naval base at Karlskrona in southern Sweden in October 1981.

Aga Khan dickers for horse

LONDON (AP) — The Aga Khan's representatives are negotiating secretly for the return of his $13 million racehorse Shergar, seized by an armed gang five weeks ago from a stud farm in Ireland, the Daily Express reported today.

The London tabloid quoted Tim Rogers, who belongs to the 35-member syndicate headed by the Aga Khan that owns the stallion, as saying: "We believe the horse is alive and still in Ireland. Negotiations are going on. I am not involved directly but I am doing what I can to help."

The newspaper said there were hopes the 5-year-old double-derby winner, earlier rumored dead or maimed, will be freed by the end of this month.

In public, syndicate members "refuse to say who now has the horse, or with whom they are negotiating," Daily Express racing reporter Ross Benson wrote. "But one told me: 'I don't think we would be surprised if someone with a grudge against the Aga Khan had paid the IRA to do it.'"

Guerrillas of the Irish Republican Army are fighting to drive the British from Northern Ireland and unite the predominantly Protestant province with the overwhelmingly Roman Catholic Irish Republic.

Spanish premier postpones vote on Spain's membership in NATO

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Premier Felipe Gonzalez has decided to postpone a promised referendum on whether Spain should withdraw from NATO for at least a year.

The Socialist premier told a news conference Monday marking his first 100 days in office that he had decided on postponement because his government did not want to jeopardize the success of talks in Geneva between the United States and the Soviet Union to reduce nuclear missiles in Europe.

"No date has been set because no date can be set," he said. "It all depends on the outcome of the delicate East-West negotiations in Geneva."

Spain joined NATO last May when the centrist government of Leopoldo Calvo Sotelo was in office, but the Spanish armed forces are not integrated into the NATO military command structure. The promise of a withdrawal referendum was a principal point in the Socialists' successful election campaign last year.

Gunmen kidnap Italian merchant

SAREGNO, Italy (AP) — Four masked gunmen carried off a wealthy furniture store owner in the eleventh abduction for ransom in Italy this year.

Police said Giovanni Cesana, 49, was working late at his furniture store Monday night when the bandits broke in, tied up an employee and forced Cesana to leave with them.

Isabella Sciatti, the wife of another Saregno furniture store owner, was kidnapped on March 2. It was unknown if the two cases were related.

Earthquake recorded in U.S.S.R.

MOSCOW (AP) — A strong earthquake was recorded in Soviet Turkmenia near the Iranian border, but caused no casualties or serious damage, the Soviet news agency said.

At the epicenter Monday's tremor measured 7 on the Richter scale of ground motion, Tass said. A quake of such force is capable of doing major damage.

Crime rises in England, Wales

LONDON (AP) — Crime in England and Wales rose 10 percent last year, bringing the total number of recorded criminal offenses to a record 3.25 million, the Home Office said..

The figures were disclosed Monday as three gun-wielding raiders opened fire in Raphael's jewelry store in London's West End and escaped with between $150,000 and $450,000 worth of precious metal and stones.
