Scaled-down school reforms forwarded to Legislature

DALLAS (AP) — An educational reform plan scaled down to under $1 billion is on its way to the Legislature after receiving final approval from its creators — the Select Committee on Public Education.

The committee voted Thursday to postpone some costly items in its blueprint for a revamped public school system in Texas, but maintained the heart of the package.

If approved by the Legislature in a special session expected this summer, students will spend more time in the classroom and will have more homework. Teachers will be better paid and will work under a "career ladder," but will have to take basic skills tests. Extracurricular activities and sports will be limited.

The committee promised teachers an across-the-board 10 percent increase in the minimum salary scale.

"I do believe we have the foundation here for great progress in the education system in Texas," Gov. Mark White after final approval of the report. "I believe the people of Texas will applaud the work of this committee."

Just to make sure, the governor said he and the state's other top elected officials will tape television commercials aimed at selling the reforms — and the tax hike needed to pay for it — to the public before a special session of the Legislature.

The blue-ribbon committee chaired by Dallas businessman H. Ross Perot, meeting formally for the last time after 10 months of study, scaled its plans back from a package of more than $2.4 billion to one of more than $987 million.

Most of that money is earmarked for teacher salaries and "equalization aid" to poor school districts.

In its final report, the committee left intact reforms approved last month that will not cost new tax revenue, such as limiting extracurricular activities and sports, requiring more homework and giving teachers basic skills tests.

Both White and Perot said they believed that if the program is implemented, it would give Texas one of the finest public education systems in the country and ease the state's transition from an oil and gas state to a high-technology leader.

"The future of the state and the future of our cities — the future of San Antonio and El Paso — is tied to getting this new educational system," said Perot, founder and chairman of Electronic Data Systems, a Dallas computing company.

To trim its program, the committee recommended that the 175-day school year be extended by five days instead of 10 and that class size limits be dropped to only 20 students in first and second grades. Originally, the committee had recommended class sizes be limited to 15 students in grades one through four.

The committee also put off until 1988 plans to extend the seven-hour school day by two hours for optional extracurricular activities, and tutoring and requiring a full day of kindergarten for 5-year-olds.

House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said the nearly $1 billion in additional tax revenue needed to fund the Perot committee's plan could be raised through a one-cent increase in the sales tax or a combination of so-called luxury or "sin" taxes.

White acknowledged that it would be difficult to convince lawmakers to raise taxes during an election year, but added: "The worst thing we can do in an election year is to turn our backs on the real needs of the state of Texas."

White also said he believed the plan would fulfill his campaign promise of a 24 percent teacher pay raise over two years — 12 percent in 1985 and 12 percent in 1986.

The committee did not specify what teacher salaries would be other than to say there was enough money to raise all minimum salary levels by 10 percent. The minimum starting salary for teachers with no experience would be raised by more than 30 percent to $1,520.

Teacher groups said they were not satisfied with the blue-ribbon committee's plan.

"Salaries are just not high enough," said Texas State Teacher's Association executive director Jim Butler. "We think teachers need a 25 percent increase right away."

Local educators' reactions to Perot's plan mixed

Midland educators and administrators expressed mixed emotions about final recommendations released Thursday by H. Ross Perot's Select Committee on Public Education.

Maridell Fryar, director of secondary education for Midland schools, said the district is most concerned by the "Big Brother" aspect of some recommendations and the suggestion to replace the elected State Board of Education with an appointed body.

A nine-member appointed board would not adequately represent various geographic, demographic and economic areas, she feared. "The chance that there would be any real representation from our area would be slim."

J. Murphy Horton, state board member from Midland, has said an appointed board would be responsive to the wishes of the governor and not the people.

"The second big issue we are concerned about is that many of these recommendations seem to smack of the Big Brother aspect," Ms. Fryar said. "Many would subvert the local decisions that are the hallmark of public education."

Committee recommendations included increasing teacher base pay to $1,540 a month, extending the school year five days, limiting first and second grade classes to 20 students, giving the state board control over extracurricular activities and periodically testing teachers for minimum skills. Another proposal called for equalization — designed to decrease state funds to wealthy districts and increase subsidies to poor districts.

Barricades bolstered as embassy siege continues

LONDON (AP) — Police strengthened barricades around the besieged Libyan Embassy today and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, back from a visit to Portugal, drove straight to her country retreat for a briefing on the diplomatic standoff.

Both London and the government of Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy are taking tough stands in the four-day showdown. Khadafy says he will settle for nothing less than an end to the siege while London is demanding to search the Libyan Embassy and question those inside about the shooting incident which began the confrontation.

"Both sides reaffirmed their wish to conclude matters in a peaceful manner," said a spokesman at the Foreign Office in London who declined to be identified.

■Khadafy interview "coup" for NBC — Page 4A

In London, top government officials assembled at 10 Downing Street while police continued talking via telephone to the Libyans holed up in the embassy. Scotland Yard spokesman John Miller said the conversations were "cordial."

Lemonade, candy bars and American cigarettes were sent in before dawn and "talks are continuing as and when necessary," Miller said. He declined to elaborate.

The confrontation began Tuesday after a gunman firing from the embassy sprayed 70 peaceful anti-Khadafy demonstrators with submachine gun fire, killing a young policewoman and wounding 11 protesters.

Scaffolding and other materials were moved in to strengthen the 20-foot-high blinds of blue plastic sheeting blocking off the six streets that run into fashionable St. James's Square where the Libyan "People's Bureau" is ringed by marksmen.

Spectators who have gathered daily at the entrance from Regent Street, one of London's main shopping zones, can see only police officers and blue-bereted, flak-jacketed Scotland Yard snipers moving in and out of the barricaded area.

Still, the crowds reach up to 100 people at a time, and Scotland Yard said today, "We're expecting larger crowds than usual over the long Easter weekend. We're taking routine precautions."

Khadafy declared in an NBC News interview from Tripoli that he would settle for "nothing else" but the lifting of the siege.

U.S. senators meet with Nicaragua's vice foreign minister

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Two U.S. senators conferred here with Nicaragua's vice foreign minister, and leftist rebels in El Salvador said it was their gunfire that hit and forced down the senators' helicopter two days ago.

Sens. J. Bennett Johnston and Lawton Chiles met with Victor Hugo Tinoco, vice foreign minister of the leftist Sandinista government, soon after their arrival Thursday. Details of the discussions were not disclosed.

In El Salvador, a military commander said the army had beaten back a coordinated leftist rebel offensive on several towns in Morazan province, and in Costa Rica a spokesman for anti-Sandinista rebels said his group's forces had withdrawn from a Nicaraguan port town seized earlier in the week.

Prior to the meeting with Tinoco in Managua, Johnston, a Louisiana Democrat, said he and Chiles, D-Fla., wanted to talk to Sandinista leaders to "see what their intention is regarding the military buildup here."

Chiles said the senators would discuss Nicaragua's alleged support of insurgents in El Salvador. The Reagan administration backs the Salvadoran government in its civil war and opposes the leftist Nicaraguan regime.

Later, the senators attended a dinner at the U.S. Embassy with leaders of a few small opposition parties. They were to return to Washington today.

In Costa Rica, a spokesman for rebels trying to overthrow the Sandinistas said his forces have pulled out of San Juan del Norte, the Caribbean port town they had occupied last week.

It was the first time Nicaraguan rebels had gained control of a town since they took up arms in late 1981, but the government says the town has no economic or strategic importance.

"What interests us is the control of the coast and the mouth of the (San Juan) river," said Orion Pastora, a spokesman for the rebels' Revolutionary Democratic Alliance.

Puerto Rican nationalists claim Washington Navy Yard bombing

WASHINGTON (AP) — An explosion triggered by a bomb placed under a sofa wrecked the officers club at the Washington Navy Yard early today. A Puerto Rican nationalist group claimed responsibility and said it was protesting a massive U.S. military exercise beginning today in the Caribbean.

There were no injuries in the blast, which occurred about two hours after closing time. Sailors sleeping in nearby barracks were rocked awake by the explosion, which blew the steel doors off the building and started a fire.

Responsibility was claimed by the Puerto Rican nationalist underground group FALN, which for several years has used bomb attacks to publicize its demand for Puerto Rican independence from the United States.

"It was a bomb, but we don't know what type," said Norman Zigrossi, special agent in charge of the FBI's Washington office. "We believe it was located under a couch in the entryway."

He said "we are considering the possibilities" that the bomb was set by the same group that detonated a device at the Army War College at Ft. McNair in April 1983 and in a corridor at the U.S. Capitol last November. There were no injuries in those attacks.

Lt. Cmdr. W.R. McLoughlin, a Navy spokesman, said the Washington Post and United Press International were called by an organization claiming responsibility. Asked which group, he said, "It was the FALN with the Washington Post and with UPI I can't confirm that."

UPI newsman Pat Killen said that, shortly after 2 a.m. EST, a woman called the news service and asked for the news desk. She then played a tape, Killen said, of a raspy-voiced man who spoke of "guerrilla resistance ... that bombed at 2 a.m. the officers club at the Washington Navy Yard ... in protest of current war games."

That was an apparent reference to "Ocean Venture '84," a major exercise beginning today in the Caribbean and involving 30,000 personnel from the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force.

As part of the operation, due to last through May 6, an amphibious landing and air assault will be staged on Vieques Island, Puerto Rico.

U.S. headed for 'debacle' in Central America

state

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — The U.S. effort in Central America is heading for a "debacle" in the form of a major military offensive — perhaps as early as this fall — unless the Reagan administration spells out a Central American policy and Congress backs it, former secretaries of state Henry Kissinger and Alexander Haig say.

The offensive, led by Cuban-backed forces, could be similar to the Tet Offensive of the Vietnam War, Haig said Thursday. The Tet battles were considered a major factor in shifting public opinion against the U.S. role in Vietnam.

Haig and Kissinger, hailed by Haig as "my brilliant mentor," said the administration must put into action a total program for defeating Cuban and Soviet-backed strategies in the troubled Central American region.

Their comments came at a news conference before lectures on foreign policy to students at Texas A&M University.

"I would not be surprised to see a major offensive," Haig said.

"I'm very much afraid things are simmering along and will not come to a conclusion," Kissinger added.

Haig said Cuban President Fidel Castro should "return to the concerns of his own people" and the Soviet Union should know "it is in their best interest to take a more benign attitude in this hemisphere."

Haig, who quit as secretary of state early in the Reagan administration, said the U.S. government needs to make it clear to the Cuban leader "to butt out or we're going to do something he won't like."

Haig also said he was "deeply appalled" at the reaction by some American politicians who compared the U.S. intervention in Central America to Vietnam.

Congress, he said, needs to "loosen up" on the emotion surrounding Central America. "After all, we must be concerned about the vital interests of our hemisphere."

Kissinger, who chaired a bipartisan presidential commission which studied the region, agreed.

"We can't wait until foreign forces are crossing the Rio Grande, for God's sake," he said.

The recommendations of his Central American commission should be presented to Congress either for acceptance or rejection, Kissinger said.

"You cannot make an argument for doing too little. That is exactly what we are doing today. We are caught in a situation where the administration has not put forth a total program."

Kissinger said President Reagan must tell the American people the "magnitude of the danger."

And he criticized Congress for cutting by one-half or one-third "whatever the administration puts forward."

"The end result is that we are doing just enough to stay involved and not enough to bring it either to negotiation or to a successful conclusion," Kissinger said.

He said some 9,000 Cuban troops and advisers were in Nicaragua and, with Soviet help, had built the Nicaraguan army to 75,000 men — a force larger than the armies of all the other Central American countries combined.

And while neither Kissinger nor Haig favored sending U.S. forces to Central America, both said any covert activities now being conducted should be overt.

"There are no secrets," Haig said.

Kissinger, Haig and lecture moderator Marvin Kalb of NBC News shared $72,000 from the university for the one-day appearance.

Camp survivor murdered in San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A 54-year-old man remained in Bexar County Jail today in lieu of $100,000 bond in connection with the shooting death of a Polish immigrant who he claimed had attacked him with a mop and a broom.

Joel Ortega, 54, was charged with murder in the death of Diane Dzanski, said prosecutors. Ortega told police he fired at the woman in self-defense.

Mrs. Dzanski, 59, who had survived the horrors of a Nazi concentration camp and moved to Texas after she abandoned the search for her missing family, was found shot to death Tuesday night in the B&D Ice House, a bar that she owned.

"She lost her family when Germany invaded Poland," said Mrs. Dzanski's ex-husband, Bruno Dzanski. "She lived in the work camps. She tried to locate her mother and father after the war. There was no way to know if they were killed or alive."

The San Antonio Light reported that Ortega handed officers a .22-caliber pistol after telling them he had shot the woman. He had led police to the bullet-riddled body, which was lying face down behind the bar, the newspaper said.

Ortega was quoted by the newspaper as telling police Mrs. Dzanski attacked him with a mop and a board while he was in the men's restroom. Ortega lives in an apartment two blocks from the bar.

He told officers he did not know what provoked the alleged attack.

Bruno Dzanski said his ex-wife left her homeland in 1950 after she failed to locate her family following World War II. Dzanski co-founded the bar with his brother-in-law in 1960.

He said his ex-wife's search for her parents, brother and two sisters after arriving in New York was futile.

She later settled in San Antonio, where they met.

"She used to talk about the bombs and the sound of the planes whistling by," he said.

McAllen reporter claims he was tortured in Mexico

McALLEN (AP) — A newspaper editor says he plans to file a protest in Mexico on behalf of a reporter who says he was arrested and tortured for hours by Mexican authorities following coverage of a strike rally.

Scott Lind, a reporter for The Monitor, said Thursday that he was held overnight in a Mexican police office building, blindfolded, beaten on the head and shocked with a cattle prod.

Oscar Bravo, commander of the municipal police in Reynosa, Mexico, where striking workers from a Zenith plant held a rally Tuesday, denied that police beat Lind or mistreated him in any way.

He said Lind was arrested because he was "inciting" supporters of four hunger strikers.

"This gentleman, with much insistence, was offering support to the people who were in favor of the strikers. He was walking around inciting people and talking with them," Bravo said.

Asked what law Lind had violated, Bravo said, "He was violating the law. He was an agitator. He was going around inciting and causing problems."

Manuel Alonzo Guzman, commander of the federal security police in Reynosa, about three miles southwest of McAllen, said he was upset because initial press reports said federal police arrested Lind.

"It was not us. It was the municipal police. It was the municipal police who arrested him and then released him" Wednesday morning, Alonzo said.

Alonzo said he had visited Monitor editor Jack King in McAllen to express his regrets and explain that his department was not involved.

"During the four hours of interrogation I received electric shocks to my testicles, neck, legs and at least one time to my lips, and (they) periodically struck me on the ears and side of my face. At the same time, (they were) asking me who I had talked to that day," Lind, 29, told The Associated Press.

Hart takes a break over Easter weekend

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gary Hart is taking a break from his presidential campaign to rest with his family over the Easter weekend and is looking ahead to caucuses in Texas, which he says "is going to be the state for us."

He arrived in Washington Thursday night after a grueling four days of speeches, rallies and news conferences that began in California and wound through Missouri, Indiana, Ohio, Texas and North Carolina.

An enthusiastic crowd of about 3,500 at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill closed out the week on an upbeat note for the candidate, giving him rousing responses to each of the applause lines in his standard stump speech.

Hart spent the week urging Democrats across the country to "go out and grab change by the throat" by picking him, not Walter Mondale, to be the party's presidential nominee.

By week's end, though, his goal had slipped a bit further from his grasp with Missouri Democrats handing Mondale a lopsided victory in party caucuses there. The former vice president now has 1,130.8 of the 1,967 delegates needed to win the nomination at the July Democratic National Convention, while Hart has 624.

Never mind that, Hart said as he set off for the day of campaigning Thursday in Texas, where 169 delegates are at stake in its May 5 party caucuses.

"There is no state, the loss of which, is going to drive me out of this race," Hart said at an Austin news conference.

"We feel that this (Texas) is going to be the state for us," Hart added.

Rep. Martin Frost, D-Texas, Hart's state coordinator, told about 300 Tyler, Texas, residents gathered in the town square Thursday afternoon that the Colorado senator is "right on energy issues, right on national defense and right on agriculture."

Hart has to convince Democrats in the upcoming primary and caucus states of the South and West that that is the case if he is to have any hope of derailing Mondale.

In speech after speech, Hart tries to tell his audiences that Mondale, as president, will only be beholden to "special interests" and big labor.

He acknowledges, however, that it is going to be tough to make the argument.

"It's hard to get people to care about labor's influence in the next administration," Hart said in an interview aboard his campaign jet.

state in brief

Hart: Some refugees shouldn't be deported

AUSTIN (AP) — El Salvadoran refugees who legitimately fear for their lives if sent back to that war-torn Central American nation shouldn't be deported by the U.S. government, Sen. Gary Hart says.

"I think they ought to be protected here," Hart said Thursday while campaigning for the Democratic presidential nomination in Texas.

"People who have fled the repressive elements of Salvadoran society and the death squads have left that country for fear of their own lives," he said.

Hart was asked about a case in which two El Salvadorans are being prosecuted after being arrested in South Texas along with two American churchwomen.

He said he didn't know specifics of that case, but believes the United States should provide sanctuary in some cases because the Reagan administration has been providing military aid to the government of El Salvador.

Poker machines confiscated

DALLAS (AP) — Four people have been arrested and seven electronic poker machines confiscated in a raid by vice officers at a social club in west Dallas.

Officers said they seized about $5,000, much of it in quarters, in the raid Thursday night at Moose Lodge No. 2140 on Sea Harbor Road. The club's operator and three others who made payoffs to players were arrested, Lt. E.W. Smith said.

A club official said the machines were "just for amusement" and had been in use for about a year.

Club guilty of discrimination

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas nightclub has been fined $413 after pleading guilty to violating two city anti-discrimination ordinances.

The fine assessed Confetti's, a Greenville Avenue nightclub, on Thursday followed a complaint filed by Charles Peal, a black Dallas Times Herald assistant sales manager, who said he was barred from joining a company party at the club on Jan. 20.

Mysterious killings shake Iowans

By CYNTHIA BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer

OTTUMWA, Iowa — In rural southeastern Iowa, some doors are being locked for the first time and people are talking nervously after the mysterious murders of a man, his mother and his fiancee, all found dead in the past week.

The three bodies were found in different locations on different days, but the deaths appear to be related, all caused by blows on the head, authorities say.

"Everywhere you go, that's all people are talking about," said Ray Cook, owner of Ray's Longbranch Tavern in Drakesville. "I was in a bar in Ottumwa Wednesday and people were saying, 'Ray, I ain't going to your town. It ain't safe.' "

Drakesville, a sleepy community of 200 about 15 miles south of Ottumwa, has never known much violent crime. Doris Stogdill, who works in Cormeny Grocery, said the peace has been unbroken in the 32 years she's lived there.

But suddenly, last Friday, the calm was shattered when the body of 20-year-old Justin Hook Jr. was found outside his burned-out mobile home on a remote gravel road two miles from town.

When authorities tried to notify Hook's mother, Sarah Link, 41, of Farmington, they found she was missing. On Monday, a farmer found her body on a hilly, wooded section of his land just north of Eldon, about 12 miles southeast of Ottumwa.

Two days later, police dogs found the body of Hook's fiancee, 19-year-old Tina Marie Lade of Ottumwa, in a ravine about half a mile from where Mrs. Link's body was recovered.

"It makes you wonder — everyone's wondering if they're next," Mrs. Stogdill said.

Police say they have suspects and believe the killings are related, but they refuse to say whether an arrest is imminent, a motive is apparent or a murder weapon has been recovered. All three victims died of blows to the head, according to Dr. Thomas Bennett, state medical examiner.

"We're doing a lot of leg work now. We've got a lot of leads left to run and we keep getting new leads every day," said Sam Swaim, one of eight Iowa Division of Criminal Investigation agents sent to investigate.

But residents are not silent on the subject and speculation continues almost non-stop about motives, means and suspects, said Carole Meeth of Drakesville.

"Everybody's got ideas. It doesn't take much to get a small town talking. And I think everybody's starting to get pretty nervous about this," she said.

People in Drakesville could offer little information about Hook.

"He wasn't really well-known in town. He bought his groceries here, but that's about it," said Ms. Meeth.

Mrs. Stogdill said he had curly hair, rode a motorcycle and often carried a gun and a knife. "He was real polite. He seemed like a nice boy," she said.

Windle Riley of Ottumwa, a cousin of Miss Lade, said Hook gave Miss Lade an engagement ring last week when she turned 19. He said he has no idea why anyone would have wanted to kill his cousin, whom he described as "not really reserved, but kind of a quiet girl...very lovable."

Swaim said authorities have no reason to believe there might be other victims, and some residents seem to agree.

"Most of us feel that it (the murders) was family-oriented and that there isn't too much danger to the rest of the public. I really think it's a case of somebody who had it in for that family for some reason," said Marilyn Hofstetter of Eldon.

Sharon Benson of Dave's Hardware said people in Eldon "would be bananas by now" if the bodies found near their town didn't appear to be linked to Hook's death.

Blowing dirt may bury weekend Easter egg hunts

From Staff and Wire Reports

Easter eggs may be buried as Midlanders prepare for a dry and dusty holiday weekend.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, winds and blowing dirt will give the Easter Bunny a taste of a West Texas windstorm.

Winds will be from the northwest at 25-35 mph and gusty, decreasing to 10-25 mph and gusty later tonight. Saturday should bring more blowing dirt with winds from the north at 20-30 mph and gusty.

Increasing cloudiness tonight will result in a less than 20 percent chance of isolated showers. Saturday will be partly cloudy.

Temperatures are expected to drop into the middle 40s tonight, climbing into the middle 60s Saturday.

Beautiful weather Thursday brought a high of 89, five degrees cooler than the record high of 94, set in 1964. The overnight low of 60 was 33 degrees warmer than the record low of 27, set in 1933.

STATE

Texas was in for severe thunderstorms today as a Pacific cold front, preceded by dry air from Mexico, pushed its way into the state.

The collision between the dry air with moist air rushing north from the Gulf of Mexico was sure to produce "a rash of thunderstorms" by late afternoon, continuing throughout the night, the National Weather Service said.

NATION

Wintry weather packing snow continued in the Rockies today as heavy thunderstorms moved from Alabama into Georgia, dumping an inch of rain on Atlanta in two hours.

Meanwhile, another day of rain began from northern Virginia through most of New York.

The forecast called for a rash of severe thunderstorms in Texas later today when a Pacific cold front pushes its way into the state.

Rain and snow fell from western Montana through Wyoming, Colorado and New Mexico.

Khadafy interview proves difficult

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — It cost nearly $25,000 and took a series of frantic phone calls to set up, but NBC's "Today" show managed to provide viewers Thursday with an eight-minute live interview with Col. Moammar Khadafy, on a breakfast menu that also included Joan Collins and Boy George.

Host Bryant Gumbel's converstion with the Libyan leader was the most difficult segment to do, both for technical reasons and Khadafy's unusual, last-minute demands. He insisted that he see Gumbel's face during the interview, so NBC had to beam the broadcast to Khadafy in Libya.

"If he makes problems, you can't say we won't put you on for your next movie," said Steve Friedman, executive producer of "Today."

To the viewer, it appeared that Khadafy, in Libya, and Gumbel, in New York, were having a casual chat. Behind the scenes, it was bedlam. "It's not like dialing 312 and calling home," said Gumbel.

The interview was arranged by Helen Hage, a Washington publicist who is on retainer at "Today" because of her contacts in the Middle East. On Wednesday, Friedman asked her to request a Khadafy interview after a British policewoman was killed and 11 demonstrators were injured by gunfire from the Libyan embassy in London.

"Some might call it checkbook journalism," said Friedman. "But we can't put her on the staff, and to keep her within the family, you have to offer something in the relationship."

Ms. Hage, who arranged previous "Today" interviews with President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt and Khadafy (from a tent in the desert), said Khadafy would be available at 7 a.m. EST on Thursday.

But at 6:30, Libyan officials informed "Today" that the interview had to be moved from the Libyan TV studio. "For security reasons, they said it had to be at a secret location," said Friedman.

Khadafy also insisted that he be able to see Gumbel. A two-way audio hookup to hear questions is standard, but it's unusual to demand a return picture. NBC complied, which meant a second satellite transmission.

The camera at the secret site, however, was not compatible with NBC's equipment. No picture. When that was corrected by routing the signal through London, there was a picture — but no Khadafy. Then, at 7:55, there were no satellites. NBC had booked them for just one hour.

"At one time we had nine different satellite orders," said Friedman, who estimates the various hookups cost between $20,000 and $25,000.

While NBC was scrambling for new satellite connections, the show went on. Gumbel chatted with Miss Collins of "Dynasty" about her kiss-and-tell book. The satellites, Khadafy and his video all arrived just before a feature on rock star Boy George was broadcast. Gumbel said Khadafy, waiting in a room adjacent to the makeshift studio, could have listened to Boy George if he'd wanted to.

"Whether he did or not we don't know," Gumbel said. "I didn't ask him what he thought of 'Karma Chameleon' (his hit song.)"

Finally, Khadafy came before the camera. "He sat down in the chair at 8:35, at 8:35:15 he was on the air," said Friedman.

In the interview, Khadafy said the British military had attacked the embassy, and the gunman inside was defending sovereign Libyan territory. Gumbel pointed out that all reports said no shots were fired at the building.

Educators' reactions 'mixed'

Ms. Fryar, while not opposing the recommendations outright, was skeptical. Some, she felt, are ambiguous and others unnecessary. "There are some things proposed that we believe are good," she said, pointing to recommendations to strengthen regional education service centers. "There are some benefits in financial reform that bear looking at. If we're not careful we might throw out the baby with the bath water."

She objected to testing teachers on the grounds that minimum skills might come to mean maximum skills. Also, while a test can determine knowledge it does not indicate how well a person can teach. "That is immeasureable in a paper-and-pencil test."

Sam Manning, representing Midland Federation of Teachers, did not object to entry-level testing, but disagreed with the idea of retesting certified teachers.

Of the proposal to increase base pay by 10 percent, Manning said, "It's a start."

He approved of a longer school year and smaller classes. "In my personal experience, when you have fewer students you can develop a better relationship and learning becomes easier for those people. It's a better environment."

He also approved of recommendations to limit extracurricular activities to some degree. "I'm not against extracurricular activities. I'm in agreement with putting them outside the academic day and also limiting the number of days students are out for this type of thing."

"We're not against reform by any means," he continued, "but I don't know if we need to jump on it as fast as we have. We need input from parents and teachers before we rush into anything. We have done it too quickly."

"It's real hard to say what it (the select committee) has accomplished, aside from focusing a great deal of attention on education," Ms. Fryar said. "In the final analysis all he (Perot) has done is get everyone excited and prompt the UIL (University Interscholastic League) and the state board to act in response to what they thought the committee might recommend."

Britain will surrender Hong Kong

HONG KONG (AP) — Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe today became the first British official to state publicly that Britain will return Hong Kong to China in 1997 without retaining an official presence in the colony.

It is unrealistic "to think of an agreement that provides for continued British administration in Hong Kong after 1997," Howe said at a news conference. "The expiry of the lease is a fact we could not and cannot ignore."

But he said Britain will resist a "sellout" and is optimistic it will reach agreements with China for Hong Kong's 5.5 million residents to have "a high degree of autonomy under Chinese sovereignty that would preserve the way of life in Hong Kong, together with essentials of the present system."

"My discussions with the Chinese leaders have convinced me that they want the Hong Kong systems to remain fundamentally as they are," he said.

China has stated repeatedly that it will regain sovereignty over Hong Kong when the 99-year lease on the New Territories expires, and China and Britain currently are negotiating Hong Kong's future after 1997.

The talks began in Peking in September 1982, and the 12th round ended last week. A 13th round is scheduled for April 27-28.

Britain has declined comment on the talks and had never stated publicly that it would return Hong Kong.

The Chinese have set a deadline of September for the talks to conclude. They have said that they will unilaterally announce their own plan at that time if one hasn't been negotiated.

Salvadorans seek more aid from Israel

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Salvadoran officials hope for increased economic and military aid from Israel now that the Israeli Embassy here has reopened and El Salvador's embassy has been moved to Jerusalem.

The Foreign Ministry received the credentials of the new Israeli ambassador, Aryeh Amir, on April 12 in a private ceremony held as Israel announced that the Salvadoran Embassy had been shifted from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem, Israel's disputed capital.

"I believe that our relations, and aid, will increase," President Alvaro Magana of El Salvador said in a telephone interview.

Magana said a security agreement and aid from Israel was an "interesting possibility" in light of the latest developments. "There's nothing concrete yet. But there are many interesting fields. Security is one of them."

Magana's U.S.-backed government has been fighting leftist guerrillas in a 4½-year-old civil war.

The new turn in the Israel-Salvador relationship sparked controversy both here and in the Arab world, which had been expanding its links to El Salvador.

In Cairo, the Egyptian government protested the move by withdrawing its ambassador to El Salvador, it was announced Thursday.

El Salvador is the second country, after Costa Rica, to relocate its embassy in Jerusalem. A bill is pending in Congress seeking to move the U.S. Embassy from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem.

Israel seized east Jerusalem from Jordan in the 1967 war and annexed it by law in 1980, declaring the united city its "eternal and indivisible capital." But the Arabs consider east Jerusalem occupied Arab land.

A former presidential chief of staff, Francisco Jose Guerrero, said El Salvador could benefit from Israel's expertise in developing agricultural programs and improving rural education.

Power line research funds sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government plans to step up research on magnetic fields produced by power lines in the wake of studies suggesting that people exposed to such fields may be more likely to get leukemia or other types of cancer, and commit suicide.

Responding to increased scientific and public concern over this issue, the Department of Energy is seeking a 23 percent boost in funding for a research program investigating the biological and health effects of high-voltage transmission lines.

At the same time, a report issued by the Library of Congress has concluded that the federal government currently lacks any official safety standards or enforcement agency to deal with power-line environmental problems.

"There is no single federal agency responsible for assuring public safety and comfort in the proximity of overhead transmission lines, and no federal standards exist setting quantitative limits from HVTL (high-voltage transmission line) field exposure," it said.

The Congressional Research Service report added that although the Environmental Protection Agency "has oversight responsibility for power-line health and environmental regulation in the public sector, it has not been funded to carry out that mandate."

Scientific studies reporting an apparent link between health problems and exposure to electomagnetic fields have included epidemiological surveys of cancer incidence among residents of Denver and three other Colorado localities; leukemia among electrical workers in Washington State and Los Angeles County, Calif., and birth defects in children of power substation workers in Sweden.

In addition, a controversial study analyzing more than 600 suicides among a sample population in England concluded that "significantly more suicides occurred at locations of high magnetic-field strength" near high-voltage transmission lines.

AT&T seeks permission for two long distance calling discounts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Telephone & Telegraph Co., preparing for heightened competition with other long-distance firms, wants to offer you a new way to "reach out and touch someone."

The company asked federal regulators Thursday for permission to introduce two new long-distance calling options this summer, featuring an hour's worth of calling anywhere in the United States for a set monthly fee.

Dubbed the "Reach Out America" plan, the first option would allow customers to place an hour's worth of calls after 11 p.m. and on weekends for a monthly fee of $10. The second option would cost $11.50 a month and would provide the same hour's allotment of calls during night and weekend hours, plus an additional 15 percent discount for calls dialed during evening hours from 5 p.m. to 11 p.m.

The options would apply only to direct-dialed, interstate long-distance calls. Additional night and weekend calls beyond the first hour's allotment would be billed at a pro-rated fee equal to $8.75 per hour.

Since AT&T already offers a 60 percent discount off its normal business rates for evening and weekend calls, the $10 option plan would not offer large savings to all consumers. Those who would benefit the most are customers who regularly call friends or relatives in other states far away — because the call's distance would no longer be a factor — or those who would use the package to place many more calls than they do now.

AT&T presented the proposal to the Federal Communications Commission, which must give its approval before the options can be offered. Assuming it can obtain commission approval, however, the plans could place additional pressure on competitors like MCI Communications and GTE-Sprint to match the options or offer new discounts of their own.

The options were also seen as a bid by the company to further distinguish itself from its competitors as "equal access" is phased in across the country. When a local phone company offers equal access, customers can dial a long-distance call on the network of a firm like MCI as easily as they can now through AT&T. The advent of equal access is expected to spark a massive battle in the long-distance industry as firms attempt to convince consumers to pick them as their primary long-distance carrier.

FCC staff officials declined to discuss AT&T's filing Thursday or to predict the commission's reaction. The new options, by eliminating the variable of how far a call travels, represent a marked departure from AT&T's long-standing practice of billing on the basis of distance along with time of day, day of week and duration of the call.

AT&T justified the proposal Thursday by citing experiments it conducted last year in three states, adding the options would enable it "to participate in the increasingly competitive marketplace by meeting expanding customer needs with an assortment of pricing options."

It said the experiments in New York, California and Iowa had shown such "block-of-time discounts" can be offered without the company losing money because most participants ended up placing more and longer long-distance calls at times when AT&T has slack capacity.

That assertion could prove important to the FCC's deliberations. The new options are being proposed at a time when AT&T is complaining it faces a sharp drop in profits because of the way the commission is introducing new fees to be paid to local phone companies for handling long-distance traffic.

Video show-and-tell begins in De Lorean trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With large black earphones clamped over his silver hair, automaker John Z. De Lorean heard himself in a government tape volunteer to use the books of "my private company" to launder money for a convicted drug smuggler.

The words poured from a tape machine in a packed courtroom Thursday as the government opened the electronic show-and-tell portion of its case. One videotape depicted De Lorean calmly assessing a cocaine-based financial proposal as "a good opportunity."

The 59-year-old automaker, arrested in October 1982 in a government "sting," is accused of conspiring to distribute $24 million worth of cocaine to help his now-bankrupt De Lorean Motor Co. in Northern Ireland.

Defense lawyers say the tapes are deceptive, claiming De Lorean was being "set up" to look guilty when he was actually frightened and resisting suggestions of a drug deal.

"I'm excited about it," De Lorean was heard saying at the end of a long discussion of laundering drug profits through his company. "... It's a real opportunity in this world right now."

He also was heard hesitating to launder money through "our public company," but saying that "in my private company" he could "create existing history going back three or four years" for the benefit of drug smuggler William Morgan Hetrick, who needed to launder illegal profits.

Prosecutors today were to continue presenting their case, which includes five hours of video evidence and 48 audio tapes.

FBI agent Benedict Tisa, who introduced the tapes in court, told jurors he masqueraded as a bank officer and secretly taped meetings with De Lorean and Hetrick.

In the most significant tape, recorded Sept. 8, 1982, Tisa spoke pointedly about cocaine connections in a deal intended to give De Lorean's company an infusion of cash.

Tisa was heard telling De Lorean about the man who wished to invest in the De Lorean Motor Co.

"Just so that the cards are on the table, you know exactly what's going on," Tisa said. "He's very successful in bringing in cocaine and putting it out, OK? During the course of that he's accumulated obviously a great deal of cash."

De Lorean's response was, "Yeah, that's big."

Tisa then said the man needed a "conduit" to move his cocaine profits into the country.

"It looks like a good opportunity," said De Lorean.

Throughout the tape, De Lorean expressed a desperate need for money. At the end of the tape, he declared, "All I know is the time is urgent."

In a second videotape shown Thursday, Tisa tried to sell Hetrick on the idea of investing in De Lorean's troubled firm.

He proposed that Hetrick, a confessed drug smuggler, "invest" $15 million in De Lorean's company. De Lorean, according to the plan, would give Hetrick $1.8 million to finance a drug distribution deal that would return $40 million to $50 million. When that deal was completed, Hetrick would get his "laundered" money back.

Hetrick, however, resisted the plan, saying he didn't trust the intermediary in the deal, James Timothy Hoffman.

Hoffman, a convicted drug dealer who turned informant, is the government's star witness against De Lorean.

In his meeting with Tisa at the Bel Air Sands Hotel on Sept. 14, 1982, Hetrick recited a profane litany of grievances against Hoffman, who he said had cheated him out of $10,000.

"With Jim, you always gotta be watching your back," he said.

Hetrick said he had checked out De Lorean's firm in The Wall Street Journal and thought it was a poor investment. "It's not a well-made car," he said of the stainless-steel, gull-winged car.

Hetrick, a pilot who flew drugs from South America, finally agreed to meet De Lorean and consider the deal, but said he did not want to be involved in drug distribution.

Hetrick, indicted with De Lorean, pleaded guilty to multiple drug charges in a plea bargain in which he cooperated with the government. He is scheduled to be sentenced after De Lorean's trial ends.

'Life' appropriate

CAMDEN, N.J. (AP) — A judge says psychiatric reports convinced him that life in prison, not execution, was the appropriate sentence for a 26-year-old woman who drowned her four sleeping children by putting them in a rain-swollen river.

Jeanne Anne Wright, who pleaded guilty to murder in the November 1983 killings, was so distraught over her life that she concluded the children would be better off dead than alive, Superior Court Judge Rudolph J. Rossetti said in sentencing her Thursday.

Miss Wright and her three oldest children had been abused by the children's father, her lawyer said. She must serve at least 30 years before becoming eligible for parole from the four life sentences.

Climb may be halted

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — An Army lieutenant making his second try at a solo climb of Mount McKinley, where a Japanese adventurer died in February after reaching the 20,320-foot peak, says winds of 70 to 80 mph forced him to give up.

Bruce Shearer, 31, began his ascent of North America's highest peak March 23 and reached the 17,200-foot level last week, but was forced to huddle there for five days. He turned back after the wind, strong enough to slam him "into the ground," tore his tent apart, he said Thursday. He vowed to try again next year.

In February, Naomi Uemura became the first person to conquer the mountain alone in winter, only to die during his descent.

Relative awaits trial

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — A man sentenced to 10 years in prison and fined $10,000 for illegally making explosives now awaits trial in the deaths of 11 of his relatives killed last year when a fireworks factory blew up.

Dan Lee Webb, 31, of Benton, received the maximum sentence Thursday in U.S. District Court. Federal authorities say his business, Webb's Bait Farm, was actually a plant that produced fireworks the government classifies as exploives.

On May 27, 1983, Webb's mother, brother and nine other relatives by blood or marriage were killed when the plant blew up. He faces trial April 30 in Polk County Circuit Court on 11 counts of manslaughter.

Publisher gets money

CHICAGO (AP) — Religious-music publisher Dennis Fitzpatrick says he "thanked God" when a federal jury returned a $3.1 million judgment against the Chicago Archdiocese for illegally photocopying his works.

A church spokesman said the archdiocese would consider appealing Thursday's ruling. The award included $2 million to compensate for business Fitzpatrick claimed he lost when the archdiocese allegedly "blacklisted" his works in retaliation for his 1976 copyright suit.

Fitzpatrick, who heads FEL Publications Ltd. and also writes religious songs, filed suit over parochial school teachers' practice of photocopying works from his hymnals.

Police search area

NORTH BEND, Wash. (AP) — Police searched a wooded area for clues that might link a set of possibly human remains to the 20 so-called Green River killings of young women, authorities said.

Members of the Green River Task Force rushed to the scene, about 25 miles east of Seattle, after a Weyerhouser Co. employee found the remains late Wednesday, King County Officer Bruce Kalin said Thursday. He said there was no "positive link" to the slayings but that the task force was interested in the discovery.

So far, 20 deaths have been attributed to the Green River killer, named for the river where the first victims were found in the summer of 1982. Police say the disappearances of 10 other women may be linked to the killer.

Gov. White's right

In Midland Wednesday, where he was honored by the Midland County Democratic Party for his relief efforts in the drought, Gov. Mark White touched on the importance of agriculture when he said, "A lot of people think it means growing corn. It's more than that. It's feed and seed and grain. It's tractors and the industries that make them. It's steel and steel mills; coal and iron ore mining."

When one talks about agriculture, said the governor, "You're talking about the single most important industry in this country."

Gov. White's exactly correct on two points. Agriculture does affect the lives of individuals in more ways than they may recognize. And, secondly, all too many of us tend to forget about it's importance in our daily lives.

Whose life is affected by agriculture? Well, as the farmer asked the city dweller who was speaking disparagingly of country folks and their "backward" lifestyle, "Do you eat? Do you wear clothes?"

Examples of how agriculture affects individuals who may have long since forgotten are all around us. How about the banker who won't make this year's profit margin because farmers didn't plant crops? Or the feed store that goes bankrupt because the drought put too many farmers and ranchers out of business — which killed the feed store owner's business.

Agriculture touches all our lives whether we recognize it or not. Even the oil industry is tied to agriculture. Just about all pesticides, herbicides and fertilizers contain oil products. If enough farmers do not buy those products, the oil industry does feel the loss.

So the next time someone's bemoaning the drought's ravages, don't discount their despair. It'll touch your life before it's over.

Debasing the debate

The political debate in this day and age is not what it used to be. This statement may seem more like nostalgia than an observation that will stand the test of history, but surely it is the sad truth.

This form of political pastime got started in 1858 with the memorable Lincoln-Douglas debates. Although Stephen A. Douglas won re-election to his Senate seat from Illinois, his encounters with Abraham Lincoln propelled the latter to national prominence and in a couple of years to the White House.

Other debates at other times have created shifts in the direction of political winds. Thomas Dewey outpointed Harold Stassen in a face-to-face encounter in 1948, going on to win the Republican nomination but not, as everyone recalls, the election.

Richard M. Nixon would be the first to admit that his ill-at-ease appearance in the nation's first televised debate in 1969 did not win him any Brownie points. The event starred John F. Kennedy, who maintained his momentum until the last ballot was cast on election day. Jimmy Carter was generally judged the winner in his debate with Gerald Ford, mainly because of a misstep or two by Mr. Ford. But Jimmy got his comeuppance, and then some, in his historic joust with Ronald Reagan. The president-to-be really shone in that one.

So what's wrong with today's continuing series of debates starring Messrs. Mondale, Hart and Jackson? Well, for one thing, "starring" is the wrong word, for there has been too much pettiness and quibbling to call any of the three a star debater.

Quips like "Where's the beef?" have taken the front and center of the stage, relegating serious discussion of issues to the wings. As Vermont Royster of The Wall Street Journal wrote the other day: "At times the wrangling makes you think of small boys squabbling in the playground rather than grown men debating serious public issues."

Another View:

Going after pot

The U.S. government pressures other nations to stanch the flow of drugs into this country, yet it appears helpless to stamp out the marijuana grown illegally at home. That awful irony is not lost on creeps here and abroad.

The House Narcotics Committee reported recently that domestic production of marijuana now reaps an illicit $52 billion a year. That makes it the second largest cash crop grown in this country, exceeded only by soybeans.

That there is more pot cultivated in the United States than corn or wheat is mind-blowing in itself. Agents of the Federal Drug Enforcement Agency say pot producers grow their furtive bonanza in almost any location and under almost any conditions: in open fields, mountain meadows, almost inaccessible backwoods plots, in huge greenhouses, on rooftops and even in caverns 90 feet below the ground.

In 1982 agents arrested 2,512 marijuana growers but even they admit that's a mere handful compared to the army of producers.

Now, however, a new element of concern heightens the frustration. Growers in Pennsylvania have developed a new strain of pot that is reputed to be 28 times as potent as the ordinary variety. There is little doubt that it will soon find its way across the country.

Authorities fear what havoc this new powerful pot will wreak among the young people, those in their teens and early 20s, who are far and away the greatest consumers of the domestic crop. Given the success rate in catching growers, they can do little but wait for the tragic consequences to show up.

Meanwhile, whenever authorities try to destroy illegal crops by aerial spraying, they must battle outraged environmentalists more worried about trees and streams than about the lives that are being laid to waste.

JACK ANDERSON

Gemayel wouldn't bargain peace

WASHINGTON — Looking back, the disaster in Lebanon seems like a Greek tragedy — doomed from the start.

Jack Anderson

But it was not a preordained failure. If the central character in the grim drama, Lebanese President Amin Gemayel, had been less arrogant and shortsighted, the outcome could have been different — if not a happy ending at least a tolerable one.

That is the verdict of U.S. and Israeli officials interviewed by my associate Lucette Lagnado in Washington and Jerusalem.

"The tragedy of Lebanon was that a person like (Gemayel) was at the helm," said one disgusted Israeli diplomat. "Lebanon really deserved someone with more perception. This man was a — merchant."

That's an apt condemnation. Gemayel's bazaar mentality kept him from bargaining realistically with Druse leader Walid Jumblatt. By the time Gemayel was ready to drop his price, Jumblatt was no longer interested. His militia had whipped Gemayel's Christian-led army and he could set his own terms. There was no room left for haggling.

It's not that Gemayel didn't have adequate warning. When the Israelis decided to pull their troops out of the Shouf Mountains overlooking Beirut, they urged Gemayel to negotiate with Jumblatt, and warned him that the Druse militia would beat the Lebanese army in any fight for the strategic turf.

As I've reported, the Israelis and U.S. negotiator Robert McFarlane drew up a document that was to be the basis for negotiations between Gemayel and Jumblatt. The Israelis got a reluctant Jumblatt to approve the document as a starting point; McFarlane got Gemayel's approval.

A meeting was set up for the two Lebanese factions in Paris. Jumblatt showed up; Gemayel did not.

That was bad enough. But as Jumblatt was to observe later, the U.S.-Israeli negotiating document was apparently lost by the Lebanese Christians "on the way between Beirut and Paris." Gemayel's negotiator, Walli Haddad, arrived in Paris with an entirely different set of proposals, and they were unacceptable to the Druse.

To make matters even worse, Gemayel's envoy was forbidden to deal directly with the Israelis, who at that time were still in control of the Shouf Mountains. Obviously, Israeli support was crucial to Gemayel.

So Haddad and the Israeli representative, Uri Lubrani, went to the U.S. ambassador's residence in Paris — but sat in separate rooms. They communicated through McFarlane on an internal phone line. "It was an unbelievably infantile kind of arrangement," recalled one official.

The Israelis told Haddad that Gemayel's terms for negotiation would kill the whole mediation effort. They were precisely correct: The talks collapsed and both sides went home. McFarlane was disappointed; the Israelis were furious.

Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens made one last try. He went secretly to see Gemayel's father, Pierre, in his native village in Lebanon, expecting that Amin Gemayel would appear. But once again the Lebanese president snubbed the Israelis.

One reason for Gemayel's suicidal obduracy was his reliance on the Reagan administration's promise of support. Secret files show that Israel had pledged to defend Gemayel's regime in return for a peace treaty between the two countries. It was a commitment Israel was prepared to keep.

But McFarlane's predecessor, Philip Habib, persuaded Gemayel to turn the Israelis down. "Who will protect me?" asked Gemayel. Habib promised that the United States would provide protection, saying: "You have President Reagan's word on this."

Later, when the Israelis were preparing to evacuate the Shouf, Gemayel made another appeal. He begged the Israelis not to leave. The Israelis refused to stay, and washed their hands of Gemayel.

At that point, the real-life drama did indeed become a Greek tragedy, moving inexorably toward disaster. The secret records contain urgent, sometimes pathetic appeals by Gemayel to the United States for protection as his government was teetering. But Habib's solemn promise on behalf of President Reagan was forgotten.

NCPAC WINS ONE: The Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee charged several months ago that President Reagan's re-election committee and the National Conservative Political Action Committee were illegally coordinating their efforts. This month the Federal Election Commission rejected the Democrats' complaint.

The Democrats had cited seven meetings between NCPAC and Reagan administration officials from 1981 to 1983. But the election commission's general counsel, Charles N. Steele, stated on April 3:

"It is the opinion of this office that the evidence presented does not establish the requisite cooperation, consent and consultation that would destroy the independence of NCPAC expenditures."

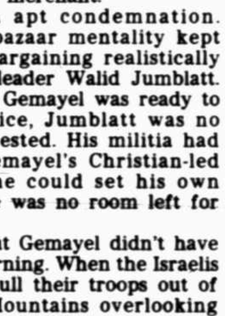
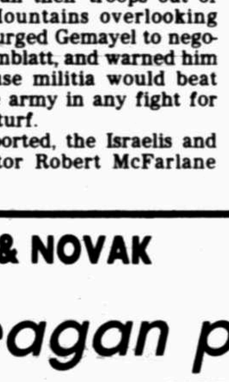
Reagan pushing family tax cut

WASHINGTON — Tucked away — and largely overlooked — in a speech by President Reagan to New York state's Catholic school parents April 5 was a hint of a possible massive election-year tax cut for the traditional American family.



Rowland Evans



Robert Novak

For the first time, the president pointed out that tax laws have discriminated against American families since the 1940s by an effectively lowered exemption for dependents. He attacked "a tax system that excessively burdens the family and actually discriminates against ... family values."

Then, in the next breath, he informed his New York City audience that he had ordered the Treasury to come up with recommendations "to make your taxes more simple, fair, for families and for all Americans." Back in Washington, that gave hope to Reagan administration officials who have been waging an uphill fight for bigger tax allowances for dependents.

The stakes involved in that fight are immense: the Reagan re-election campaign's strategy, economic policy in a Reagan second term and the outcome of the struggle between the Republican Party's elitist and populist wings.

The conventional wisdom in the financial community, widely shared in the Treasury and elsewhere in the administration, has been the need after the 1984 election for a consumption-based tax system. Either through a national sales tax, new investment incentives or a combination of both, the individual's discretionary spending would be channeled out of consumption and into savings.

But what about ordinary, working heads of families who lack discretionary income? Populist Republicans fear that consumption-based taxes will only aggravate the havoc already wreaked on the American family by the Internal Revenue Code and incidentally confirm the GOP's image as the Rich Man's Party.

In his April 5 speech, Reagan noted that the $600 exemption set in the 1940s for each dependent (it is now $1,000) would be more than $3,000 if it had been indexed for inflation during the past 40 years. In fact, as a share of per capita income, the exemption would be $5,600 today.

The tax system's bias against the family derives mainly from mindless governmental acquiescence to inflation. But in part it reflects the economic theory, shared by key professionals at the Treasury, that children represent "consumption" items and should be treated as such for tax purposes.

This anti-family mindset has been battled from the White House policy office by Bruce Chapman, who as census director in the Reagan administration's early years became attuned to what the government has done to the family. A founder of the liberal Republican Ripon Society, he has emerged inside the administration as a champion of the family.

Chapman runs up against the numbers: To double the dependents exemption to $2,000 will shoot a huge (perhaps more than $200 billion) hole in Treasury revenues. Thus, it must fit into an overall tax "simplification" package that generates additional revenue by broadening the tax base.

But Chapman is not alone. Rep. Jack Kemp's flat tax bill doubles the exemption, a proposal where supply-side economic conservatives and New Right social conservatives converge.

Incorporating this in Reagan's re-election campaign still must win approval from skeptical administration policymakers, but the opportunities are immense. While Democrats are committed to a postponement of tax indexing which would further shrink the effective dependents exemption, Reagan can promise the American bread-winner substantial pocketbook savings.

The possible precursor of '84 campaign oratory was delivered by Reagan in his April 5 speech. Noting that as "costs of raising a family have gone up, the tax treatment of families has actually worsened," he asked: "Is it any wonder that American parents feel so much financial pressure today and that such pressures sometimes contribute to family breakups?" If he follows that question with a promised tax break for the traditional family, the Democratic "fairness" argument would be conclusively rebutted.

CHARLEY REESE

'A Team' not like TV image

Picture a wooded hillside and three cottages on a lake in an isolated park somewhere in the Southeast. It is cold and raining. The park is empty except for five men and two women. The men are in one cottage. The bed is littered with shotguns and bandoleers of .12 guage double-ought buck shot.

Charley Reese

You might easily imagine that a gang of bank robbers is planning its next job, but you would be wrong. I was present in those cottages, invited on the condition that I protect the people's identities and the location. The men were mercenaries or soldiers of fortune and they had come together to plan their next mission. I have made up names for them.

The real "A Team" bears little resemblance to the popular television show. Some of the men are Vietnam veterans but a couple date back to the Korean War. The women were the wives of two of the men. These men do not wear military fatigues nor do they run about the woods practicing survival games. They are soft-spoken and not given to much conversation.

This particular team, which doesn't call itself the "A Team" by the way, is not necessarily typical of all mercenaries.

"Some mercs are nothing but bandits," Stone Eyes, the team leader said. "There are a lot of bandits and a lot of amateurs who call themselves mercenaries and they are giving us all a bad name. We don't run drugs, we don't do assassinations, and I won't have a man who uses drugs on my team because you can't rely on them. We are soldiers."

"Some mercenaries are psychopaths and some are just cold-blooded killers," observed Stalker. "I feel good about being on this team. These are a good bunch of men." Stalker looks more like what you might imagine a mercenary looks like than the others. He's a tall, lean man with heavy muscles and a battered face, a reminder of the beatings he suffered in a Haitian prison after a mission went sour. Looks are deceiving, however, for Stalker is a former junior high school teacher, former Marine platoon leader, and a thinker.

The Neat Man, the team's medic and one of its two pilots, was a "dust off" medic in Vietnam which means he rode the rescue helicopters to pluck the wounded from the battle field. He lived a "straight" life for 10 years but now that his marriage is over, he's decided to become a full time mercenary.

Stone Eyes and Whiskers, the old man of the team, have pasts they prefer not to discuss. Whiskers is a sharpshooter and you wouldn't want him to come after you because he would neither flinch, miss nor shed any tears over your corpse. He has a very philosophical outlook on life but it is not the same one most people have. Three other members of the team I have not met.

This team does not do any jobs inside the United States. It only takes missions outside the borders and it specializes in Latin America. The reason is purely pragmatic. They do not want any trouble with the government. They pay their taxes and their parking tickets and they do not own any illegal weapons nor do they routinely carry weapons. The only reason the shotguns were there is because they had just picked them up from a nearby gunsmith who had done some work on them.

So what kinds of jobs do real mercenaries do? Well, this particular team specializes in extractions, which is a euphemism for busting people out of jails. Sometimes they are political prisoners and sometimes they are American kids who have ended up with long sentences in some South American jail, usually on drug charges.

They also recover stolen property and retrieve drug dealers or other criminals who have jumped bond and lit out for Latin America. It is not a business without its risks. Not long ago they lost four men and an airplane in a South American jungle.

Ideologically, they are all anti-Communist and Stone Eyes has been negotiating with some of the Nicaraguan contras lateley but I do not know how that will turn out.

As for why these men do what they do, I have found them all to share at least two common traits. They are men who despise the 9 to 5 routine and they are men who are addicted to excitement. They will tell you they do it for the money but there are easier ways to make a living.

I find it comforting that America is still producing such men. If things get heavy, it will be men such as these — not politicians, journalists, professors and bureaucrats — who pull the bacon out of the fire.

Gemayel, Assad agree on Cabinet

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — President Amin Gemayel returned to Beirut today after 11 hours of talks with Syrian President Hafez Assad. Government sources said the two men agreed a new Cabinet would be formed quickly to help steer Lebanon out of civil war.

The sources said Gemayel would appoint a new Sunni Moslem prime minister within the next few days to form a half-Christian, half-Moslem Cabinet.

In addition, at least three hours of the talks were devoted to a new approach to achieve an Israeli withdrawal from southern Lebanon, said the sources.

News of the Cabinet agreement leaked as 1,800 Lebanese policemen and army conscripts began moving into buffer zones today in the second stage of a two-day operation to disengage warring militias in and around Beirut.

Local radio stations said the deployment of observers around the strategic town of Souk el-Gharb on the first mountain ridge east of Beirut was completed this morning.

About 200 truce observers were posted Thursday along the "green line" separating Christian east Beirut from the mostly Moslem west.

Lebanese administration sources said the foremost tasks of the new Cabinet will be to consolidate a cease-fire on all fronts, broaden disengagement zones between warring factions and gradually disarm rival militias.

The new government will set up a ministerial committee to reorganize the command of the Lebanese army, which opposition groups accuse of being biased to Christian militias, the sources added.

Arms talk support sought

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration has taken the struggle for arms control to the public arena, challenging the Soviet Union to show "equal willingness" to reduce ground forces in Central Europe and to reopen talks to curb nuclear weapons.

President Reagan issued the challenge on his way to the Far East on Thursday, only hours after a new U.S. proposal was put on the table in Vienna, Austria. Designed to break a decade-long deadlock, it offered to work around a lingering dispute over how many Warsaw bloc troops are massed in East Germany, Czechoslovakia and Poland.

Essentially, an administration official told reporters at the State Department, it would allow a discrepancy of up to 10 percent in the U.S. and Soviet estimates of those forces. The purpose is to move beyond the dispute to an agreement lowering troop levels on both sides.

Reagan did not go into details in his statement, but he seized on the new U.S. move as an example of his commitment to arms control. "We are bargaining in good faith," he said. "With equal willingness on the other side, real progress can be achieved quickly."

At the same time, Reagan accused the Warsaw Pact of a "continuing unwillingness" to agree to effective procedures to make sure any troop reduction agreement is honestly observed. The president made no mention of the fact that last June the Soviets and their allies agreed in principle to having Western observers monitor their moves.

The presidential statement and the State Department briefing clearly were designed to attract maximum attention to U.S. arms control efforts. Usually, such talks are held quietly in order to encourage give-and-take in a confidential setting.

But with talks on nuclear weapons indefinitely suspended, the administration wants to emphasize positive developments in other arms control arenas, such as the negotiations on conventional forces and on banning chemical weapons.

The publicity is designed partly to put the United States in the best possible light, and also to increase whatever pressures that East European countries are bringing to bear on the Soviet Union.

The Reagan administration is feeling some heat as well. West Germany, Canada and some of the smaller NATO countries have been urging the United States to make concessions on the troop data issue.

The outlook for a treaty after nearly 11 years of bargaining appeared uncertain. The administration official, who briefed reporters on condition his name be withheld, said the outcome could depend on how the Soviets intend to manage their election-year relations with the United States.

"We're just putting our heads in the sand if we don't realize their reply will depend, in part, on how they choose to play the overall relationship between now and the elections," he said.

Hess will mark 90th birthday

By VOLKER ADAM
Associated Press Writer

BERLIN — Rudolf Hess marks his 90th birthday next week in West Berlin's Spandau prison with the Soviet Union still adamantly blocking parole for Adolf Hitler's former deputy.

A prisoner since his "peace flight" to Britain in 1941, Hess appears destined to serve out the life sentence imposed by the Nuremberg war crimes tribunal for his role in planning and carrying out Nazi Germany's war of aggression.

His son, Wolf Ruediger Hess, a Munich businessman, has applied to visit him on his birthday, April 26, as he did last year. Other family members may also go along.

Hess has been the only prisoner since 1966 at Spandau, which is operated by the Four Power victors over Nazi Germany — the United States, Britain, France and the Soviet Union.

The Western powers have long urged his release on "humanitarian grounds," with Britain renewing the appeal April 16. But Moscow insists that Hess remain behind bars as a "symbol of the victory over Hitler fascism."

In West Germany, Hess is referred to as the "world's most expensive prisoner." The Bonn government has spent the equivalent of $7.7 million to pay for the prison since 1966.

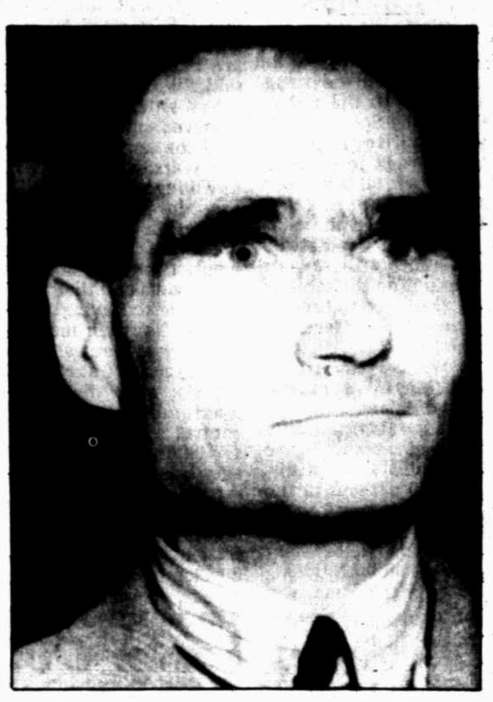
An official wall of silence has been erected around Hess, with the Allies refusing to comment and his family, which is permitted monthly visits, forbidden from discussing his situation.

An informant who could not be identified in any way told The Associated Press that Hess is in remarkably good health for his age despite reported stomach and circulation problems in recent years.

The source said the aging Hess refuses to make use of a $47,300 elevator built last year to ferry him to and from his tiny cell to the prison yard where he is permitted daily walks — twice around the area bounded by a high brick wall.

The informant said Prisoner No. 7, the last surviving member of the Nazi hierarchy, is awakened daily at 6 a.m. in his 9-by-7½-foot cell and given breakfast an hour later.

He is permitted to read four newspapers daily, all censored of references to his case or the Nazi regime — a subject he is forbidden to read about or discuss, acccording to the terms of his imprisonment.



Rudolf Hess

Hess can receive and write one letter per month and watch some television if he submits a request in advance.

Although Hess is forbidden to see anything connected with the Third Reich, the informant said he came on a published report about the bogus "Hitler diaries" published by Stern magazine last year and found the hoax amusing.

Once a month, Hess is permitted a family visitor for one hour. An extra Christmas visit is allowed for a two-hour period. Meetings take place in a special room, separated by a wooden wall with an open window, in the presence of the four Allied wardens of Spandau. No body contact is permitted.

Hess is referred to as the "world's most expensive prisoner." The Bonn government has spent the equivalent of $7.7 million to pay for the prison since 1966.

The informant said Hess's son usually visits. His elderly and ailing wife, Ilse, last visited Spandau prison in October 1981.

Authorities have not said what will become of Spandau prison after Hess' death.

There is speculation that the prison, a former Prussian military jail built for 600 inmates, may be razed. However, the Soviets have proposed turning the building into a memorial for victims of the Nazi regime.

Spandau prison and an air traffic security installation are the only Four Power agencies still operating in West Berlin.

The West Berlin government has suggested modernizing the prison to handle the overflow of criminals now jailed in city penal institutions.

Hess became the only prisoner in 1966 after former Nazi Armaments Minister Albert Speer was released. Seven Nazi war criminals served time at Spandau starting in 1947.

The son of a German export businessman, Hess was born April 26, 1894, in Alexandria, Egypt, and later returned to Germany for schooling.

He was an early Nazi supporter and devoted Hitler follower, taking dictation for "Mein Kampf" from the Nazi dictator during their imprisonment following the abortive 1923 Munich "Beer Hall Putsch."

But the Fuehrer later denounced Hess as a madman after Hess, wearing a Luftwaffe uniform, flew a Messerschmidt from the Bavarian city of Augsberg across the North Sea to Scotland in what he insisted was a private mission to make a separate peace with Britain.

He was condemned to life imprisonment at Nuremberg for planning and waging aggressive war, but was acquitted on charges of committing war crimes.

Demonstrators press opposition to missiles

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Hundreds of West Germans marched to protest NATO nuclear missile deployment and U.S. policy toward Nicaragua, opening a series of planned Easter weekend demonstrations.

In the Netherlands, about 2,000 people staged a peaceful demonstration Thursday in Amsterdam to protest U.S. involvement in Nicaraguan affairs. The protest was organized by a local group called the Nicaragua Committee.

Man nailed to cross

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A Filipino construction worker had himself nailed to a wooden cross for a fifth straight Good Friday today to dramatize his desire to be reunited with his American father.

"Oh God, forgive us," Donald Rexford Jr., 36, cried out in Tagalog as aides hoisted him up on the cross for a few seconds in view of some 300 people, including foreign tourists and news photographers.

Rexford had five-inch stainless steel nails driven through his palms in an annual ritual he has vowed to continue until he meets his father, a World War II soldier he says now lives in Pontiac, Mich.

Squatters evicted

AMESBURY, England (AP) — Hundreds of police descended on a squatters' camp near Stonehenge, the prehistoric circle of stones in southwest England, and evicted about 250 people.

A police spokesman said some resisted during the confrontation Thursday, and 25 people were arrested on obstruction charges.

Among the items seized were ax handles, a machete, a sword and various substances suspected of being narcotics, the spokesman said.

Files to be destroyed

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Premier Andreas Papandreou says millions of secret files on Greek citizens' political activities will be destroyed and all forms of torture will be banned by law.

He said the new government measures, announced Thursday, express "the widespread desire for democratic individual rights and freedom."

Papandreou said a draft law outlawing torture and making "all forms of violence which offend human dignity" punishable offenses will soon be introduced in Parliament.

Dissident sentenced

MOSCOW (AP) — The Estonian Supreme Court has sentenced a dissident to 10 years in prison on charges of "anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda" arising from his work for political prisoners, the official Soviet news agency Tass reported.

Tass said Enn Tarto, of Tartu, Estonia, was convicted for "criminal links" to a Stockholm-based group called the Relief Center for Estonian Political Prisoners.

It said Tarto, 45, "doubled as a henchman of Western subversive radio stations...(compiling) lists of 'political prisoners,' later rewritten as lists of 'freedom fighters' by Western secret services."

Meeting requested

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Cyprus is requesting a meeting of the U.N. Security Council next week to protest Turkish actions it regards as strengthening the secession of the Turkish-occupied northern part of the divided island.

The announcement Thursday said Cyprus President Spyros Kyprianou and leaders of the four main Greek Cypriot political parties would go to such a meeting.

It said the request was made "in view of the continuous and flagrant violation" of Security Council Resolution 541. The resolution branded November's unilateral declaration of independence by Turkish Cypriot leader Rauf Denktash "legally invalid," and asked for its reversal.

Hardy gains state berth

From Staff Reports

LUBBOCK — Midland High distance runner Claire Hardy won a trip to Austin and the Girls' State Track Meet at Memorial Stadium, posting a record setting victory in the 3200-meter run here Thursday in the Region I meet.

Hardy had two goals going into the meet and managed to meet both of them. First, she wanted to qualify for state. She did that by meeting her second goal which was breaking 11 minutes in the 3200.

HER TIME of 10:57.27, a personal best, shattered the old record of 11:17.12 set by Brenda Moore of Amarillo High in 1982. Hardy finished 30 seconds ahead of Hereford's Selma Mareno.

Things weren't as successful for Hardy in the 1600 as she ran a 5:17 to finish third and miss qualifying for the event at state. Her 1600 time matched the pace she set at the halfway mark of her 3200.

"Her one mile split in the 3200 meters was 5:17," said MHS track coach Brenda Mitchell. "The first lap of the two mile was a very close but after that Claire took her lead and never lost it. Claire's split on each lap was very consistant. When she hit 5:17 at the mile, she realized she could reach her goal. She wanted to run 10:59 and the 5:17 really encouraged her."

Hardy's record at regionals kept a phenominal streak going. "So far, Claire has set the record in every meet she's run in this year," said Mitchell.

Hardy has one opportunity to run before her May 5 date with the rest of the state's 3200 meter field. Next Friday, there is a state qualifier's meet in Hamlin and Mitchell thinks she'll try and run in it.

THING'S DIDN'T fare as well for the other two Midland High girls at regionals, OJ Johnson and Tina Knight, nor for the lone Midland Lee entrant, Felicia Farias.

Competing in the long jump, Knight finished sixth Wednesday with a leap of 16-feet-10. Sixth place wasn't bad considering she scratched on two of her better jumps.

"Tina had a couple of very good jumps, very good," said Mitchell. "She scratched by the toe twice. Sixth in the region is not bad but it wasn't her best jump."

This was Knight's second trip to regionals in as many years and in as many events. Knight qualified in the triple jump as a sophomore and next year Mitchell is hoping for a double.

"We feel very positive about next year because experience is very important in the field events when you reach regionals."

Johnson, who finished second in the 4-5A in the 100 hurdles, failed to make the finals at regionals.

FARIAS DIDN'T quite reach her goal of clearing 5-foot-4 at regionals to match her personal best mark, but she did managed to get a little revenge.

Her 5-foot-1 jump put her in 10th place, ahead of Odessa High's Kerry Evans, who took away the 4-5A crown this year Farias had worn since she was a sophomore.

Stanton earned to state berths in Class 2A with Mary Beth Tollison winning the 3200 with a 12:29.53 and Dwana West capturing the 100-meter hurdles title with a 14.85. Reagan County's Jackie King won the 100 with a 12.46.

The Reagan County boys won the 8-2A track crown being paced by victories by Howard Williams in the high jump (6-3), Mitch Woodard in the 110 hurdles (15.60), Emit Baker in the shot (50-9) and Tim Thompson in the 100 (11.16). Stanton's Rocky Barnes won the 400 (49.86) and the 200 (22.69) while Eddie Thomas and Tim Bryand both cleared a record 12-6 in the pole vault.

Monahans won the 2-3A boys meet by a 146-122 margin over Andrews. Andrews was paced by victories from Lester Abron in the 800 (1:59.33), Randy Friemel in the high jump (6-6) and Zandy Willems in the pole vault (13-0).

Colorado City won the 6-3A boys title with 130 points, but Crane's Joe Vasquez won the 110 hurdles (14.48) and intermediates (39.31) while brother Jim won the 200 (22.45).

Bobcats put Bulldogs on shelf

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Midland High's post-season hopes were put on the shelf Thursday night, dashed by San Angelo as the Bobcats held on to post a 9-7 District 4-5A victory over the Bulldogs at Memorial Stadium Diamond.

The Bulldogs, trailing the Bobcats most of the way, made a valiant fight to remain alive in the 4-5A playoff picture by twice bringing the winning run to the plate in the last two innings. There just wasn't enough swing left in the bats to get the last hit needed.

The loss, combined with victories by league leader Abilene Cooper and second place Midland Lee (10-2 and 9-3 respectively) leaves Midland High with a 6-6 record, three games behind Lee with only two left on the schedule.

SAN ANGELO took advantage of pitching control problems by starter Mike Timlin and reliever Doug Daehling. Four of the Bobcat's first six runs were set up by walks.

San Angelo's Brad Goodwin started the game's trend in the first inning when he led off with the first of his four walks. He ended up scoring in the frame, the first of three runs after receiving a free pass to first.

The killing blow to the Midland High hopes came in the top of the second and again it was walks that set up the damage. Jim Osborne looked at a full count pitch and went to first. Joel Padilla moved him to second with a single to left and Frankie Hill walked to load the bases.

When Timlin fell behind 2-0 on Goodwin, Bulldog coach Tim Whalen called Daehling to the mound. His first two pitches were balls and Goodwin's walk brought home Osborne.

On Daehling's third pitch, Bobcat Zane Hoppe drilled a shot to the right-center fence to score three runs. He lost his triple when, after sliding safely into third, he came off the bag and was tagged out by Steve Wootan.

Daehling walked two more Bobcats in the second before getting out of the inning. San Angelo led 5-2.

San Angelo padded its lead in the fifth inning when Osborne hit a one-out double up the middle followed one out later by Frankie Hill's double to right-center. Daehling then gave Goodwin his third free pass and left the mound when Hoppe connected for an RBI single to score Hill.

With runners on the corners, left hander Mike Timlin was called on to finish the game and, before striking out Larry Guerrero to end the inning, let loose a wild pitch to score Goodwin. San Angelo's lead was up to 8-2.

ONE BULLDOG run in the fifth inning, on an RBI single by Chris Herbert, was countered by Mike Torres' solo home run in the sixth to maintain the six-run spread.

"Our pitching was real erratic," said Whalen. "We'd throw three good pitches and three bad pitches and they would hit one of the bad pitches down town."

The Bulldogs weren't ready to give up the playoffs without some kind of fight. With one out in the sixth inning, Timlin took advantage of San Angelo pitcher Greg Liewsky's tiring arm, taking four straight balls for a walk. He scored on Stanton's triple to right field and Stanton scored on Keith Clay's ground out.

With two gone, the Bulldogs started a second rally in the sixth when Evan Poer hit a single up the middle and went to third on Greg Hatcher's single to right. Mitch Welch came in to run for Hatcher and went to second when Darren Thorpe drew a walk. Poer and Welch scored on Herbert's double to right.

LA Express $40 million quarterback Steve Young: "I really feel like the NFL is going to quietly take about four or five teams and then watch the rest of the USFL fall by the wayside. There might be some talk under the covers right now about that kind of stuff."

Trivia Teaser...

In what some regard as the most sensational Masters finish ever, he scored a double-eagled the par five 15th in a 36-hole playoff with Craig Wood. The shot brought him from three strokes behind with four to play. It was Ralph Gudhahl, Horton Smith or Gene Sarazen?

Thursday's answer: Mickey Mantle, one of the greatest switch-hitters in the history of baseball, hit home runs right-handed and lefthanded in the same game 10 times. It's a major league record.

Bryan Willis flirts with perfection

From Staff Reports

BIG SPRING — Midland Lee pitcher Bryan Willis had a perfect game going through five innings of play Thursday before losing it in the bottom of the sixth. It was the only hit he allowed as he finished the game to give Lee a 6-0 District 4-5A victory over Big Spring.

In seven innings of duty, Willis still managed to face the minimum number of batters, getting Michael Dodd's single in the sixth erased when Chris Lamb grounded to Lee shortstop Keith McDonald, who started a 6-4-3 double play. Dodd was the only base runner the Steers came up with as Willis struck out nine and didn't walk any while the defense played errorless ball behind him.

Only four Big Spring batters, including Dodd, managed to hit a ball beyond the Rebel infield, three of them flying out.

The Rebels opened the scoring in the first inning on Steve Woodlee's RBI single to score Dennis Matta. In the second, Willis and Danny Gonzalez came home on an error and Keith McDonald scored on Gonzalez' RBI single in the third.

Phillips came home in the fifth when Donny Rivas singled and Willis scored the final run in the fifth after hitting a triple — the game's only extra base hit — and scoring on Jimmy Phillips' single.

The victory gives the Rebels at least a tie for the second of two playoff berths available with a 9-3 record and still leaves them a shot at 4-5A leader Abilene Cooper. Cooper, a 10-4 winner over Odessa Permian for a 10-2 record, is Lee's next opponent on Tuesday at 4 p.m. at Lee Diamond.

Should the Cougars win that encounter, then they'll own the 4-5A title outright. A Lee victory and the two teams will be tied going into the final game of the season. A Lee victory also guarantees a playoff berth no matter what Odessa High, in third at 7-5, does against San Angelo Tuesday.

ODESSA HIGH kept its slim playoff hopes alive Thursday despite dropping a 10-9 decision to Abilene High. However, the Rebels would have to lose both of their final two games while OHS needs victories in theirs.

The Bronchos built up a 9-7 lead in the first four innings of play. Eagle Steve Stacey erased it with a two-out, two RBI single in the fifth for a 9-9 ball game.

In the bottom of the sixth, designated hitter Tony Lombardi led off the inning with a single and David Gonzales moved him to second after being hit by a Tommy Olivas pitch. Third baseman Mike Keith singled to bring home Lombardi.

The Eagles held their 10-9 lead through the top of the seventh to claim the victory. Stacey, who came in for Mack dennis in the third inning, picked up the victory for a 2-0 district record while Olivas suffered the loss in relief of Boyd Cowan.

Meanwhile, Abilene Cooper was busy taking care of business in Odessa, scorng all the runs the Cougars needed in the first three innings, posting a 5-1 lead enroute to the 10-4 win.

Joby Hill picked up his fifth 4-5A victory of the season against no losses while Jaime Salgado took the loss for Permian.

Lee, however, now enters the tough part of its schedule since two of its three district losses have come to Cooper and MHS, teams they end the season with Tuesday and Saturday. So, the Rebs aren't out of the woods yet.

If any district ties occur for first or second place, a playoff will have to be held to determine which teams make the playoffs or go as district champions or runnerups.

LA's Young apologizes for remarks on USFL

CHICAGO (AP) — Los Angeles quarterback Steve Young said he was "guessing" along with other football fans when he spoke of the imminent demise of the United States Football League.

"I take total blame for anything bad that comes out of this," said Young, who recently signed at $40-million contract with the Express of the 2-year-old league. "I feel horrible . . . I'm still young and haven't learned yet what you can say and what you can't."

At a news conference Thursday, Young, 21, did not deny the widely publicized remarks he made during a telephone interview with Chicago reporters. But he said they may have been misconstrued.

"I said a lot of positive things about the USFL in that interview," he said. "I talked about the head-to-head competition and all the options the league will have down the road. I think this was all blown out of proportion."

Young is in Chicago for a game tonight against the Chicago Blitz.

M-Cubs celebrate victory with 10 ½-hour bus ride

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Midland's Cubs celebrated a second straight victory by piling on a bus after the 6-3 win over El Paso Thursday for a 10½-hour bus ride to Beaumont.

"I don't count the miles," says pitching coach Glenn "Goose" Gossage, "I count the hours."

As the Cubs headed for a south Texas sunrise, it may be that they are just a catcher or two away from running away with the pennant, although their record is 3-7 after a 10-game season-opening Texas League home stand.

As a result of injuries and illness, the Cubs have had three catchers in the lineup the last two nights while hanging up 7-1 and 6-3 wins. Don Hyman has been at third, Joe Henderson at first and Antonio Cordova in the "tools".

Between them, they supplied six of Midland's 10 hits and knocked in five runs. With that kind of production, no wonder Manager George Enright is bellowing, "Send us more catchers."

"IN ALL three games we've won, we've been strapped," pointed out Enright. "In the 14-10 win over San Antonio in the series opener, we had no bullpen and we were shorthanded in the infield. Apparently, these guys respond to adversity."

Thursday night, the Cubs were missing infielders Tony Woods, Jeff Rutledge and Mike Anicich, consequently the three catchers in the starting lineup.

While Danny Norman, Jim Auten, Cordova, Henderson and Hyman were supplying the offensive fireworks, lefthander Neil Bryant was picking up his first win with relief help from Jorge Carpio and Joe Huey, who got a save out of it.

BRYANT TOILED the first 6⅓ innings and had a no-hitter until Dale Sveum homered with two out in the fourth.

"I didn't realize I had a no-hitter going until after he hit it," said Bryant. "That was kind of early to be thinking about a no-hitter. But he hit a good pitch. He simply outguessed me."

The Cubs were leading 5-1 when Bryant departed in the seventh with one out after giving up a single to Dan Plante. "I was beginning to get a little tired," Byrant admitted.

Carpio got out of the seventh without surrendering a run, but in the seventh El Paso rallied for two unearned runs when left fielder Danny Norman dropped the ball. "I didn't lose it in the lights. I just dropped it. No excuses."

JOE HUEY came in to get the third out and snuffed out the Diablos in the ninth.

"I was going to come in with Huey in the ninth, anyway," said Enright. "I lifted Neil as quickly as I did, because I wanted to get Carpio into the game with no more than one runner on base. Jorge has been very effective for us in relief and without the error he would have been out of the eighth tonight."

The Cubs began the scoring off Tim Crews in the second when Norman plunked a banjo hit into right, Cordova beat out a high infield bouncer and Henderson, the ex-Diablo doubled into the right-center hole for two runs.

Four hits to open the fourth chased Crews as Norman tripled, Auten singled, Cordova doubled and Henderson singled to left to knock in two more runs.

The final run came in the seventh on a hit batsman, Norman's double and a singl by Cordova.

Enright was unhappy with the sixth, however, "when not a batter was retired on a batted ball. "We did a poor job of base running. We're just lucky we got some hits and good pitching tonight."

CUB-ICLES—Third baseman Tony Woods should be back in about three games and Mike Anicich is out with an injury. Rutledge left the team because of an illness to his little girl back in Fresno, Calif. "I really don't know whether Jeff will be back. It all depends on how serious the illness is. If it's bad, he'll probably be sent to the Lodi club so he can be close to home. But I'd like to have him back."...No. 1 hit tune at Cubs Stadium is Happy Trails, played to the departure of the opposing pitcher...It's a mean thing to do to a guy down on his luck, but the fans love it...GM Bill Schammel was anticipating 600, hopefully, for Thursday's Ladies Night game. Some 1,156 fans show up..."If you had seen Cordova last year, you wouldn't believe it is the same guy," says Enright. "He caught about 60 games, made 22 errors and had something like 18 passed balls at Salinas. Last winter he went home to Venezuela and caught in the winter league and was named the all-star catcher."

Williams' three-point play spills Dallas Mavericks

By The Associated Press

Gus Williams would rather be lucky that good.

The veteran Seattle guard was more than good on Tuesday night, scoring 37 points, a personal playoff best. But the SuperSonics lost the first game of their National Basketball Association series to the Dallas Mavericks on a last-gasp shot by Rolando Blackman.

Back in Dallas' Reunion Arena Thursday night, Williams scored a modest 19 points, but his off-balance, desperation three-point shot at the buzzer banked through the basket and gave the Sonics a 95-92 triumph and evened the best-of-five series 1-1.

"I consider myself lucky that it went in," Williams said. "I wasn't trying to bank it off the glass. I had a feeling it was definitely going in but not off the glass."

"I've seen Gus do that shot on everybody but we haven't had any lucky shots all year like that," added Tom Chambers, who led all scorers in the game with 30 points. "Nobody deserved more than Gus. He worked for it."

Chambers set up Williams' clutch basket when he blocked a Pat Cummings' shot with three seconds to play, but the final play was not designed to go to the veteran guard.

"The play was supposed to go to Jack (Sikma) and then Chambers off the lob. But I popped out and got the ball," Williams said. "I turned and got a good look at the basket."

"We lost by three and we should have lost by 20," Dallas Coach Dick Motta, referring to his team's .405 shooting percentage for the game.

But he added, "We could have won the game. They just needed a prayer on their last shot and their prayer was answered."

Blackman led the Mavericks with 28 points, while Mark Aguirre had 27 points and a career-high 17 rebounds.

Dallas lost despite becoming only the second team in NBA playoff history to make every one of its free throws.

The Mavs were a perfect 24 for 24. In 1976, Detroit hit all 15 of its free throws against Milwaukee.

Celtics 88, Bullets 85

Boston, shooting for its 15th NBA title, took command of its series against Washington when Larry Bird scored four of his game-high 23 points in a decisive 10-2 surge midway through the fourth quarter.

NBA Playoffs

Greg Ballard's field goal had given the visiting Bullets their last lead at 78-77. Two free throws by Bird sandwiched around field goals by Dennis Johnson and Kevin McHale put Boston ahead 83-78 with 7:23 left.

Joe Kopicki's 18-footer cut the deficit to three, but Gerald Henderson sank a jumper and Bird hit a turnaround as Boston grabbed a 87-80 advantage with 4:42 to play. Washington had a chance to send the game into overtime in the final seconds, but Jeff Ruland's three-point attempt missed.

Henderson finished with 21 points for the Celtics, while Ballard led Washington with 20.

Bucks 101, Hawks 87

Milwaukee won handily at home for the second straight time as Marques Johnson scored 27 points.

Johnson had 12 points in the first quarter, six of them during a 12-4 spurt in the final four minutes of the period to give Milwaukee a 24-14 lead. The Bucks opened a 34-18 margin in the second period, their largest of the game.

An 11-4 spurt, during which Dominique Wilkins scored nine of his team-high 22 points, pulled Atlanta to within 57-52, but Milwaukee rebuilt the lead to 10 at the end of the third quarter and coasted from there.

Pistons 113, Knicks 105

At Pontiac, Mich., Bill Laimbeer scored 31 points and got enough support from his teammates to enable Detroit to offset the 46-point performance of New York's Bernard King.

King had 23 points for the Knicks in the first quarter, matching the known high in NBA playoff history established by Gus Williams on Tuesday night. Early NBA play-by-play records are incomplete, so it is not known officially if the point total is a record.

King's 23rd point — no other Knicks scored during his hot streak — gave New York its only lead at 27-26 with 3:17 remaining in the period.

But after the Pistons went ahead 99-94, New York could get no closer than five the rest of the game.

Nuggets 132, Jazz 116

Dan Issel, Kiki Vandeweghe and Alex English scored 33, 32 and 31 points, respectively, to help Denver hand Utah its worst loss of the season at the Salt Palace.

Issel and Vandeweghe scored 10 points each in the decisive third quarter, when the Nuggets putscored the Jazz 30-11 to extend a nine-point halftime lead to 100-72 late in the third quarter.

Adrian Dantley scored 27 points to lead Utah, which lost only four of 30 games at the Salt Palace during the regular season.

It's time to stop laughing

By SCOTT OSTLER
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Analysis

A lot of people I know believe the NFL does not schedule football games year round because the owners have sworn to uphold the biblical integrity of seasons.

You know: To every time there is a season, under heaven; a time to reap, a time to sow, a time to play football, a couple weeks for indoor pro tennis....

The truth is, however, that the NFL season is traditionally six months long simply because the owners needed those other six months to count their profits.

I MENTION this because every year about this time, one of the hottest questions of sports debate is: Do we really need a new football league?

For me, this always raises the question: Do we really need an old football league?

And I have another question: Why all the hostility toward the United States Football League?

Sure, I've ridiculed the new league. It's easy to do, and fun. It's something I try to do to every new team or league, sort of like a freshman hazing. I think new leagues would feel left out if sports columnists didn't make fun of them.

This particular new league has silly, egotistical owners; team names that have all the class and dignity of breakfast-cereal names; ironclad rules the owners break before the ink is dry.

In the USFL they lie about attendance, hire players on street corners and move franchises from town to town like tent shows.

These things, to me, make the new league all the more lovable.

But a lot of people really hate the USFL. They view it as a dark, sinister invader of the pristine American sports universe.

Let's examine some of the arguments from those who advocate capital punishment for the new league.

THE USFL sins against nature by playing in the spring. Football was meant to be played in the fall and winter.

But it's OK to play football inside domes or on artificial turf, as many NFL clubs do? This is the natural order?

Imagine Grantland Rice writing: "Outlined against the blue-gray steel latticework of the Astrodome, the Four Horsemen rode.... "

The USFL has caused an overflow of football on TV and in the sports pages.

This is a deep problem. TV and the NFL spent years programming and brainwashing us.

They started us with one TV game every Sunday. It was keen. Everyone watched. Gradually, quietly, they slipped in an occasional doubleheader. Then Monday Night Football, then triple-headers, then games on Saturdays and Thursdays.

Then came the USFL. Fans who had been turned into TV football junkies by years of NFL watching couldn't suddenly switch off their sets after the Super Bowl, not with more football coming.

We are having to learn selectivity, and it's painful. We are having to learn that it may be necessary to occasionally miss a televised football game, if only to make an appearance at work or say "Hi" to the wife and kids.

For those who are troubled by too much football on TV now that the USFL is here, I would offer this invaluable bit of advice:

Don't watch.

THE SALARY war caused by USFL raids on NFL talent and the signing of top college players will ruin football and raise ticket prices.

Salaries have gone up drastically in the NFL because of the new competition. Team profits will fall. This is bad?

For decades, NFL players have operated closer to the poverty level than have NFL owners. Name one owner who wound up on Skid Row due to overpaying his players.

NFL ticket prices will rise because of the salary increases, but they would have gone up even without the new league. The owners would have blamed increases on the soaring cost of pigskin. Now they have a better excuse.

The USFL isn't ruining America. It's not as bad as pornography, organized crime or crabgrass.

I think we should give the new guys a break. I, for one, promise to stop ridiculing the USFL for at least a week.

Dodgers slow Padre express, 4-0

Cubs, Mets, Giants also take victories

By The Associated Press

NL Roundup

The Los Angeles Dodgers slowed the San Diego Padres' express for at least one night thanks to an express of their own — pitcher Alejandro Pena.

Pena, one of the Dodgers' hardest throwers, cooled off the Padres with a five-hitter Thursday night as the Dodgers defeated the runaway National League West leaders 4-0.

"Pena had better control than in the past," said San Diego Manager Dick Williams, whose club lost for only the third time in 13 games. "He did a super job on us. That's the first time anyone has shut us down like that."

Pena, 2-1, struck out six and didn't issue a walk in his overpowering performance.

"As soon as I started warming up, I felt good," said the 24-year-old Dominican. "I just felt like everything was alright. I felt strong start to finish. I had good location, and I had a very good fastball."

Pena retired the first 10 batters without allowing a ball out of the infield. The Padres' first baserunner was Tony Gwynn, who was grazed by a pitch with one out in the fourth. Carmelo Martinez ended Pena's no-hit bid with a single with one out in the fifth.

The Dodgers took a 1-0 lead against loser Ed Whitson, 1-1, in the second inning on Mike Scioscia's RBI single. Steve Sax and Greg Brock later added solo homers and Ken Landreaux a sacrifice fly for the rest of the Dodger runs.

Cubs 6, Cardinals 1

Gary Matthews singled home one run and doubled and scored twice, and Steve Trout turned in his second straight complete game to lead Chicago over St. Louis.

Trout, 2-1, yielded nine hits and also singled and scored the first run of the game on Matthews' single in the third inning.

Loser Danny Cox, 2-1, had allowed only three hits until the Cubs chased him in the sixth on successive doubles by Matthews, Leon Durham and Ron Cey.

"Matthews makes a big difference," said Chicago Manager Jim Frey, whose team acquired the outfielder in a trade with the Philadelphia Phillies this season. "He's a great offensive player. His enthusiasm rubs off on the other guys. He has a positive attitude, and he takes a walk which a lot of guys will not do. He's a veteran who knows his role on the club."

Mets 7, Expos 6

Hubie Brooks' two-run homer with one out in the eighth inning paced New York over Montreal. It was the second straight comeback victory for the Mets, who beat the Expos with a ninth-inning rally the day before.

Jesse Orosco, making his third relief appearance, pitched the final two innings for his first victory. Dan Schatzeder, 0-2, gave up the winning blow to Brooks after walking Mookie Wilson with one out.

Gary Carter's two-run homer in the seventh inning, his third of the season, had given the Expos a 6-5 lead. It came with Tim Raines aboard via a walk and erased a 5-4 Met lead. Carter's two-run single also highlighted a four-run fifth inning.

Giants 3, Reds 1

Jeff Robinson and Gary Lavelle combined on a three-hitter to pace the San Francisco over Cincinnati.

Robinson, pitching in only his third major league game, struck out nine and walked two before leaving at the start of the ninth inning after giving up his third single. Lavelle struck out the last three batters to record his first save of the season.

The 23-year-old Robinson, who was playing college baseball for Cal State-Fullerton a year ago, also got his first big league hit, driving in a run in the sixth with a single.

Royals finally end Detroit streak

Rangers beat Red Sox in ninth inning

AL Roundup

Dan Petry was the man no one wanted to be, the pitcher who lost Detroit's first game of the 1984 season.

"Nobody wanted to be the one to pitch when the streak was broken," Petry said. "I guess it was me, though. I pitched well enough. I have no complaints."

With their 5-2 loss Thursday to the Kansas City Royals, the Tigers saw a nine-game, season-opening streak end. It was the best in the club's 84-year history, by far, with a six-game streak in 1911 standing as second best.

"We knew we weren't going to win 162," Tigers center fielder Chet Lemon offered in consolation. "But we played good ball to go 9-0, and we just want to keep on playing good ball."

Royals second baseman Frank White and pitchers Bret Saberhagen, a rookie, and Dan Quisenberry were the principle architects of the streak-ender. White hit a two-run homer in the eighth inning, and Saberhagen and Quisenberry combined on a seven-hitter.

The only hit off Quisenberry, who earned his fifth save, was a ninth-inning home run by Kirk Gibson.

"Nobody told me they were unbeatable," said Saberhagen, who pitched six innings in his first major league start. "But I was nervous all last night."

Detroit took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Lou Whitaker singled, took third on Alan Trammell's single and scored on a grounder by Lance Parrish.

But Kansas City took the lead for good with two runs in the third on RBI hits by Jorge Orta and Hal McRae, and they added an unearned run in the sixth after two errors by Detroit third baseman Howard Johnson.

Rangers 7, Red Sox 4

Mark Clear walked Bobby Jones with the bases loaded to snap a 4-4 tie in the top of the ninth, and Texas scored two more runs in inning to beat Boston, which has lost seven straight.

The Rangers loaded the bases on Pete O'Brien's single to right and bunt singles by Mickey Rivers and Wayne Tolleson, chasing Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd in favor of Clear. Clear then walked Jones, Billy Sample singled and George Wright hit an RBI-grounder for the three runs.

Blue Jays 2, Orioles 1

Garth Iorg had four hits and drove in both Toronto runs, the tie-breaker with a triple in the ninth inning, to help the Blue Jays hand Baltimore its fourth straight loss. The Orioles are off to the worst start in their history, 2-10.

Jim Clancy scattered seven Baltimore hits in his first complete game of the season.

Iorg's game-winning hit came with one out in the final inning and chased home Willie Upshaw, who had singled. Iorg, who came into the game 1-for-19, also scored Upshaw in the fourth with a single. Upshaw had doubled.

Baltimore's run scored in the second when John Lowenstein and Ken Singleton walked, and Joe Nolan followed with a single.

White Sox 3, Brewers 1

Richard Dotson threw a five-hitter, and Harold Baines scored two of Chicago's runs to beat Milwaukee. Dotson walked one and struck out one.

Baines doubled and scored on Greg Luzinski's single in the fourth to make it 1-0. In the ninth, the White Sox scored their third run on Baines' walk, Luzinski's single, a sacrifice bunt, an intentional walk to Tom Paciorek and Vance Law's sacrifice fly.

Jim Sundberg accounted for Milwaukee's only run when he homered to lead off the fifth inning.

Jackson braves play

LONDON (AP) — Few actors would willingly undertake a five-hour play, but for Academy Award-winning star Glenda Jackson, doing a revival of Eugene O'Neill's "Strange Interlude" is just what the doctor ordered.

"There is no continuum of work for an actress when she gets to be my age," the 48-year-old performer said in an interview with the Associated Press in her dressing room in Croydon, south of London, where the 1928 play is having a try-out run.

"The parts are simply not there, and it's very difficult to find stuff you want to do that coincides with what managements want to do," she said. "I suggested 'Strange Interlude' to Triumph-Apollo (the production team) expecting them to say no, but they said OK."

The show, a nine-act drama compared by critic John Gassner to "a large impressionist novel," will begin a 10-week run at London's Duke of York's Theater April 9.

For Miss Jackson, whose sharp wit and intelligence shone through her Oscar-winning performances in "Women in Love" and "A Touch of Class," "Strange Interlude" marks her second theatrical risk in a row.

Last summer, she appeared on the West End, London's Broadway, in "Great and Small," a play by the West German writer Botho Strauss, in which she appeared as an alienated woman named Lotte who ends up as a bag woman.

Written in 10 fragmented scenes, "Great and Small" had a stormy try-out run, marked by audience protests and walk-outs and some harsh reviews.

But Miss Jackson was unfazed.

"I was only perturbed by the controversy surrounding 'Great and Small' — if people left with the impression that Strauss was a bad author or that it was a bad play," she said.

"I think he's a remarkable author and that it's a terrific play," she said.

Miss Jackson is adamant about introducing the unexpected into the commercial theater mainstream, and she has sharp words for London's celebrated subsidized theaters — the National and the Royal Shakespeare Company (RSC).

"I particularly wanted to do 'Great and Small' in a commercial context because of my feeling that, at its more natural home like the National or the RSC, it would have fit neatly into their cultural slot, which means nothing at all would have happened," she said.

Miss Jackson expressed concern that "we're creating subsidized audiences rather faster than subsidized theater — people whose obligations are fulfilled by going to the place, and that's it.

Opening lead: King of ♠.

Especially in duplicate bridge, light opening bids can be an effective weapon. However, if you don't buy the hand when you open light, the tactic may boomerang — it might steer declarer to the winning line.

We have often said that, with freak hands, it usually pays to bid one more rather than defend. Here, West would have done well to go on to six diamonds. If he divines the trump position, he will go down only one trick unless North finds the spade lead.

Against six clubs, West led the king of spades. Obviously, declarer's only problem was to limit his heart losers to one. However, since East almost surely had the king of hearts for his opening bid, declarer had to resort to an end play.

Declarer ruffed the opening lead, crossed to the king of trumps and ruffed another spade. He cashed the ace of diamonds, ruffed a diamond on the table and a spade in hand. He then returned to the board with a diamond ruff to complete the groundwork for the end play.

Now declarer led dummy's last spade and discarded a heart from his hand instead of ruffing. East won, but was in the unenviable position of either leading a spade, which would give declarer a ruff-sluff, or leading a heart away from the king. Declarer would allow that to run to dummy's queen and all would be well.

We don't like East's light opening bid. If East feels constrained to open, we would prefer a three or four spade preempt. Now even if the opponents get to slam, odds are that declarer will misguess the heart position and go down.

Economy to slow for rest of 1984

By The Associated Press

Economic growth will slow for the rest of 1984 as businesses begin to sell off the big inventories that helped boost the gross national product in the first three months, economists in and out of government predicted.

On Wall Street, where markets were closed today because of the Good Friday holiday, prices opened lower Thursday on the New York Stock Exchange after the Commerce Department reported the economy grew at an annual rate of 8.3 percent in the first three months of the year.

Although the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks managed a late rally to close 1.57 points higher at 1,158.08, analysts said investors were concerned that the strong growth would raise business credit demands, keeping upward pressure on interest rates.

The Commerce Department's report said economic growth based on the gross national product was up from 5 percent in the last three months of 1983.

But the Reagan administration, concerned that fears of renewed inflation could push interest rates higher, stressed its belief that economic expansion was slowing to a moderate, more sustainable rate with inflation under control.

"Although there may appear to have been a sharp spurt in demand, there is less there than meets the eye," said Martin Feldstein, the president's chief economist.

"More than half the increase (in demand) was due to inventory accumulation. Final sales rose at the same rate in the first quarter of this year as they did in the final quarter of 1983."

Feldstein predicted GNP growth in the second quarter would be "at the lower end of the 3 to 5 percent range."

Donald Ratajzak, an economist at Georgia State University, predicted growth of 3 percent or less in the April-June quarter.

Ratajzak said 4.7 percentage points of the first-quarter growth came from rising inventories.

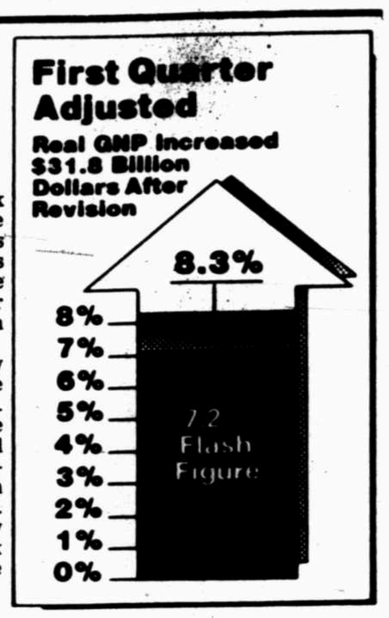
"The 8.3 percent looks huge, but when you dig beneath the surface there are pockets of weakness all over the place," said Michael Evans, head of a private consulting firm in Washington.

"Consumer sales fell out of bed in February and March and I think buinessmen are going to be pretty worried about this and will start reducing their inventory stock pretty quick."

In other economic news Thursday:

—Unemployed Americans early this month sought jobless benefits in larger numbers than at any time since mid-January, the Labor Department said. Approximately 388,000 jobless people filled out applications for unemployment compensation insurance benefits at state employment offices in the first week of April. This total of first-time applicants for benefits, which was adjusted for such seasonal variations as inclement weather and routine plant closings, was 53,000 higher than in the previous week, which ended March 31.

—The nation's basic money supply rose $3 billion in early April, the Federal Reserve Board reported. The rise followed a sharp drop the previous week and economists said the report did not raise new concerns about further increases in interest rates in the weeks ahead. The Fed said M1 rose to a seasonally adjusted $536.4 billion in the week ended April 9 from $533.4 billion the previous week.



Commissioner calls recontrol bill 'cruel'

EL PASO (AP) — A U.S. House committee decision to tighten federal government control of natural gas is a misleading move that "is cruel" to consumers, according to the chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission.

At a Thursday commission meeting, Wallace said the measure "masquerades itself as being a boon to consumers."

The Energy and Commerce Committee recently voted 22-20 for a measure Wallace predicted would "give short-term relief on price at the longer-term expense of supply."

"The supposition that price controls provide exploration and production incentives, and, therefore, assure adequate supply, is without any basis of analytical support," Wallace told the statewide oil allowable hearing.

The commission routinely set the allowable at 100 percent of market demand for May. The commission first went to the ceiling on oil production in April 1972.

Wallace noted in announcing the allowable that crude oil and petroleum products imported into the United States averaged 5,044,000 barrels per day for the four weeks ending March 30, an increase of 1,603,000 barrels per day from the same period last year.

The 100 percent production factor applies to all fields except a few, including the East Texas Field, which was restricted to 86 percent production.

Major buyers of Texas crude oil submitted nominations for 2,401,616 barrels of oil in May, an increase of 14,416 barrels daily from April.

Here are the nominations by major purchasers of Texas crude oil, in barrels per day, with any changes from April in parentheses:

Consumer group reports high winter heating bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — Household energy bills last winter ate up nearly half the income of some families, according to a consumer group specializing in issues relating to the poor.

"In 32 states, after paying home energy bills during the three coldest months of this winter, the families of unemployed workers had on the average less than $100 weekly remaining out of the average unemployment check for all other living expenses," the National Consumer Law Center said Thursday.

The center said that in 16 states those living on unemployment benefits had $75 or less remaining weekly after paying home energy costs. In 26 states, more than 25 percent of the average unemployment benefit was spent on home energy bills during the three coldest months of this winter.

It said that average benefits paid by the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program, which was designed to help the poor pay their energy bills, in participating households ranged from 6 percent in New Mexico to 58.8 percent in North Dakota.

Economist predicts natural gas prices will continue to decline

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Oil Writer

An oil and gas economist says natural gas prices will continue to decline for some time before they begin to rise again.

Arlon R. Tussing, who has been described by the Wall Street Journal as a "maverick who has an impressive record for accurate but controversial forecasts in the volatile world of energy," was in Midland Thursday to address a group of business and energy executives at Midland Country Club.

Tussing was invited to speak in Midland by The University of Texas of the Permian Basin and the West Texas Producer's Forum. One of the few forecasters in the world who predicted the economic downturn of 1982, Tussing told the group "the worst is yet to come in the energy market."

While many economists believe sluggish energy prices will stabilize or begin to rise with continued economic growth, Tussing believes inexorable market forces will keep forcing the real price of energy down for the next 10 years.

"The economic recovery means a revival of the construction industry, not the energy industry," he said.

"The new buildings being completed today consume less than 35 percent as much energy per square foot as existing buildings."

In addition, the economic recovery will also mean a revival of the automobile and airline industries. As the recovery advances, he predicted, there will be a more rapid replacement of new fuel efficient cars, which consume only 60 percent as much fuel on the average as older models — and new airplanes — the Boening 767 for example, which consumes 60 percent as much fuel per mile as its 727 model.

He bases his predictions on an analysis of natural gas as a commodity, a research factor, he believes, is often overlooked.

He claims major structural changes are creating a level of competion in the U.S. gas market which has never been experienced. As competition grows, he believes, a long term real energy price decline will follow.

Tussing also said in terms of real dollars the current price of oil is too high. While he did not want to speculate on what the price of oil would be by 1990, he did suggest that the long-term price of crude oil could be $15 per barrel by then in today's dollars.

Historically, after being adjusted for inflation, the long-term price of crude oil has averaged about $15 per barrel also in terms of today's dollars. As the price of oil passes $15 per barrel, demand drops. Below $15, it increases.

The reason why "there's a worlwide flight from oil today," Tussing said, is because of investment decisions made the 1970s when prices were high and everyone thought they would continue to rise.

"We have seen a depletion of certain fuels, but eventually an energy crisis has brought on substitutie sources and cheaper prices."

While many thought oil would get scarce over time and the price would continue to rise, historically, the longest oil prices have risen or fallen has been nine years — from 1973-1981.

One of the reasons people failed to forecast the downturn, said the Seattle-based consultant, was because they did not notice price induced conservation early enough. And now with the economic recovery, it's a buyers' market.

Tussing said one does not forecast five years in advance unless one understands what has happened in the 50 years preceeding.

As for accurately predicting the future of the natural gas industry, he said, the key to understanding what will happen lies in accepting the energy resource as a commodity as opposed to a by-product of the oil industry. He advises individuals to learn about how commodities are sold and how the supply and demand system works.

"People have forgotten that crude oil is a commodity and is therefore cyclical. It is subject to the same supply and demand trends as any other commodity."

He also said producers would be foolish to sign a contract at a fixed price rate because they will either be leaving money on the table or goods on the shelf. The only alternative is to tie unit prices to the spot market rates. "What is the right price today, won't be right tomorrow.

Tussing predicted a national spot market for natural gas would be established with its center being in the Houston vicinity.

However, Tussing urged, now is the time to make those investments that aren't going to pay off for seven to 12 years from now. The frontier areas are prime, he said, because the cost of "input" — people and materials — is at its lowest.

New Mexico gas buy may lower bills

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Public Service Company of New Mexico's planned purchase of Gas Company of New Mexico could cause lower natural gas bills, the state Public Service Commission chairman says.

But David Cohen said, "I think people need to be concerned about whether PNM might be pushing higher-cost electricity at the expense of less expensive natural gas for certain types of energy usage.

"It is definitely something which needs watching," he said.

The merger could produce a number of benefits for New Mexico consumers, Cohen said.

"With a merger there could be some cost savings by eliminating areas of duplication such as billing, certain areas of administration and public relations and there may be some savings in the cost of fuel," he said.

U.S. District Judge Sherman G. Finesilver of Denver on Tuesday gave preliminary approval to PNM's purchase of Southern Union Gathering Co.'s gas holdings in the state — including Gas Company of New Mexico — for an estimated $173.5 million

Waste subsidy gets clean up money

HOUSTON — Browning-Ferris Industries Inc. has announced that its chemical waste subsidiary, CECOS International Inc., was awarded an $11.8 million contract to clean up portions of the Berlin and Farro Hazardous waste site in Michigan.

Mobilization began March 22 on the Berlin and Farro site in Swartz Creek, Gennesee County, Mich. The site is number 13 on the Environmental Protection Agency's National Priorities List of 567 "Superfund" sites.

Frank R. Nero, president and chief executive officer of CECOS, said that CECOS was awarded the contract after an agreement was reached between the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, the State of Michigan, and a consortium of ten industrial firms.

The ten firms, acting as a site steering committee representing hearly 200 companies that once used the site for waste disposal agreed to clean up the site in accordance with a work plan and consent decree developed during negotiations.

Shareholders vote to reincorporate firm

DENVER — Energy Methods Corp. shareholders voted to reincorporate the company in Delaware and change the company's name to EMCOR Petroleum Inc.

Approval came at the company's annual meeting which was reconvened to consider the proposals after adjournment recently. Approximately 71 percent of the outstanding shares approved the measures.

Reincorporation will be accomplished through merger into a newly-formed wholly-owned Delaware subsidiary. The company said there will be no change in number of shares and no exchange of certificates. The stock will continue to be traded in the over-the-counter market. Corporate headquarters will remain in Denver.

Shareholders also voted to adopt articles and bylaws which contain "anti-takeover" provisions, designed to make it more difficult to acquire control of the company through transactions not having board approval.

Use of gas appliances causes less pollution

The use of natural gas furnaces and other gas appliances cause less air, water, and solid-waste pollution than comparable electric appliances, according to a new study by the American Gas Association.

The study, A Comparison of the Full Cycle Emissions of Natural Gas and Electric Appliances, found that total-cycle emissions from natural gas appliances result in only 15 to 20 percent of emissions from electric appliances and less than one percent of water and non-combustible solid-waste emissions.

Most homes have four appliances which convert energy to heat, mostly by either natural gas or electricity. In order of descending consumption, they are: furnaces, water heaters, ranges for cooking, and clothes dryers.

The total-cycle emissions from natural gas appliances for all categories of tested emissions — from extraction through end-use — were much lower than from electrical ones.

Amoco Australia announces completion of farm-in plans

From Staff Reports

HOUSTON — Amoco Australia Petroleum Co. has announced that it and South Australian Oil and Gas Corp. Pty., Ltd, have completed farm-in arrangements with the current holders of permits on two offshore blocks in the Bass Basin, between Tasmania and mainland Australia. The Australian government has approved the farm-ins, Amoco noted.

Amoco Australia said the two companies would conduct geophysical work on the blocks and that the agreement calls for one well to be drilled on each of the two blocks during the final two years of the initial term of the permits, which ca be renewed. The initial term of Permit T/14P expires in Jauary 1986. The initial term of Permit T/18P expires in July 1986.

Amoco will earn a 50 percent interest in each of the two blocks and South Australian Oil and Gas Corp. 25 percent.

Block T/14P is 2730 square kilometers, with water depths from 60-90 meters and is 80-14- kilometers offshore. Other holers in the block and their interests are : Cue Energy Resources N.L., 2.5 percent; Setright Oil & Gas Pty., Ltd., 6.5 percent; Romsey Resources Pty., Ltd., 2.5 percent; Galveston Mining Corp. Pty., Ltd., 2.5 percent; and South Eastern Petroleum N.L., 2.15 percent.

Block T/18P is 7690 square kilometers, in 60-80 meter water depths and from 30-130 kilometers offshore. The remaining participants and their interests are: Bass Strait Oil & Gas N.L., 8.75 percent; Tasmanian Oil & Gas N.L., 6,875 percent; Hampton Oil & Gas Group Pty., Ltd., as trustee for Forsayth Oil & Gas N.L., 3.75 percent, and as trustee for Phoenix Oil & Gas N.L., 3,125 percent; Tassoil, Ltd., 1.25 percent, and South Eastern Petroleum N.L., 1.25 percent.

Ford recalls trucks, vans

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Owners of 1984-model E-150 and E-250 Ford Econoline vehicles equipped with 5.8 liter V-8 engines should have their vehicles checked for possible choke problems, Ford Motor Co. says.

"Some of the vehicles may have been manufactured with an incorrectly assembled wiring harness that supplies power to the electric choke," said John P. King, service engineering manager of Ford Parts and Service Division. "This could result in the choke not functioning as required for proper fuel combustion."

The models with the possible problem have four-barrel carburetors and automatic transmissions, King said in a statement. There are 959 of the vehicles in the United States and 27 in Canada, he said.

Ford is said it is also recalling 500 1984-model F-150 and F-250 series light trucks and 490 1984-model C-Series trucks.

Some of the 5.0 liter, V-8 F-150 and F-250 trucks may have been built with a vacuum delay valve instead of a vacuum retard delay valve in the air system, King said. Those vehicles may require modification to assure acceptable emission control levels, he added.

The C-series trucks equipped with hydrualic brakes may need replacement of a part in the brake pedal linkage assembly, King said. This brake problem could cause accidents, although none have been reported thus far, he added.

Residential construction to drop

DALLAS — The only major sector of the Texas economy that will slow down this year is residential constructin, says RepublicBank Corp.'s regional economist Edward L. McClelland, Phd.

"For the past two years Texas has led the nation in home building. And most of that has been in multi-family dwellings which are now in ample supply," McClelland states in the new April issue of Economic Perspective. "As a result, total housing permits are forecast to decline this year, even though single-family housing should remain strong enough to ensure that Dallas-Fort Worth and Houston will again be the leading home building markets in the country."

While the slowdown in multifamily residential building will be a drag on overall construction activity, commercial, industrial and governmental construction will remain active, he says.

The Texas economy as a whole will continue to expand and should be strong throughout 1984. Two key indicators of the growing strength of the state's economy are the sharp rise in the demand for labor and the increase in industrial production.

Jobless rates are falling in all regions of the state, and the overall Texas jobless rate fell from a high of 8.7 percent in March, 1983 to 5.7 percent in February of this year.

Growth in employment has reduced the number of jobless workers in Texas by a third, or 219,000. In the past year, total employment in Texas rose by 290,000. Half the gain was in nonagricultural wage and salary employment, primarily in service-producing industries. The slowest growth has been in the goods-producing industries such as manufacturing, construction and mining.

Protesters vow to fight nuke plant

By The Associated Press

Protesters said they would continue to fight California's Diablo Canyon nuclear plant even as workers prepared to activate its first giant reactor, but money problems halted all construction at the equally controversial Seabrook plant in New Hampshire.

A spokesman for the utility with the largest share in the twin-reactor Seabrook project said it was uncertain if the shutdown could keep Public Service Co. of New Hampshire from bankruptcy.

In San Francisco, cheers went up at a shareholders meeting at Pacific Gas & Electric Co., owner of the $5.9 billion Diablo plant, as word arrived Wednesday that a federal appeals court in Washington had rejected opponents' latest bid to block the long-delayed start-up.

"The timing couldn't have been better," said PG&E chairman Frederick W. Mielke Jr.

Diablo Canyon, site of 482 arrests since January, received a low-power license 2½ years ago, but that was suspended two months later when design flaws were discovered. Last week the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, citing modifications and improvements, voted to let the utility bring the 1,084-megawatt Unit 1 reactor up to 5 percent of capacity.

PG&E spokesman George Sarkisian said Wednesday that crews had started preparing the plant to "go critical within the next few days" as control rods are lifted gradually to start a nuclear chain reaction from the 16-foot-long rods of uranium fuel in the reactor's core.

In New Hampshire, Public Service Co. announced it had laid off all but 1,000 of 6,200 workers at Seabrook, scene of numerous protests.

The utility, which is managing construction for several New England power companies, estimated the shutdown would save $750,000 a day. In the meantime, the company will continue to look for financing.

The shutdown "doesn't eliminate our need to reach an agreement with our credit bankers," spokesman Nicholas Ashooh said.

"We are still working to avoid filing for protection, but I couldn't characterize how close we are or are not to that event," Ashooh said.

Seabrook's estimated cost has risen from the original $850 million in 1968 to a newly projected $6.9 billion for both reactors — down from a $9 billion estimate announced March 1.

Construction manager William Derrickson, hired March 1 after finishing a Florida reactor in record time, said his new $6.9 billion estimate depended on an "aggressive" construction schedule and a "substantial reduction" in non-manual labor costs.

But the fate of Unit 2 remains "uncertain at best," Derrickson said. Work on it has been virtually stopped since last September, and the owners voted in March to cancel it but to help Public Service of New Hampshire recover a $300 million investment in the unit.

In California, Mielke said Diablo Canyon's Unit 1 might go to full power by early summer by "if all goes smoothly."

Outside the Diablo Canyon plant, located about halfway between Los Angeles and San Francisco near San Luis Obispo, protesters continued a round-the-clock vigil in the rain.

One woman was charged Wednesday with trespassing, bringing the arrests since the vigil began in January to 482, according to San Luis Obispo County Sheriff's Sgt. Leon Cole.

"Many people will continue to work to make sure Diablo never goes past low power," said Pam Metcalf of the Abalone Alliance, a coalition of anti-nuclear groups.

The final barrier to the Diablo start-up was cleared Wednesday when three judges of the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington rejected a request by a group called Mothers for Peace for another delay.

Work on Diablo Canyon, initially expected to cost $1 billion, began in 1969, but four years later an offshore earthquake fault was discovered 3 miles away. In 1975, when the plant was originally expected to have begun operations, the NRC ordered it redesigned to withstand greater stress.

Standard Oil must pay damages

Incurred in 1978 wreck of supertanker

CHICAGO (AP) — Standard Oil Co. of Indiana and two subidiaries must pay the French government and an insurance company for damages incurred in the 1978 wreck of the supertanker Amoco Cadiz off the French coast, a federal judge ruled today.

U.S. District Judge Frank McGarr said Standard and the subsidiaries are liable "to the full extent" for damages suffered by the French government and Petroleum Insurance Ltd. in the second largest oil spill in history. The amount of damages was not considered in the trial.

The subsidiaries are Amoco International Oil Co. and Amoco Transport Co., which were in charge of the ill-fated shipping operation.

McGarr said Standard and its subsidiaries were entitled to damages from the company that built the ship, Astilleros Espanoles S. A. of Spain, "to the extent that (their) own liability was contributed to by the negligence and fault of the shipbuilder."

The judge denied all claims against Bugsier Reederi und Bergungs, A. G. of West Germany, operator of the tug that tried to tow the supertanker out of danger.

McGarr removed the question of monetary damages from the proceedings so he could concentrate on the question of liability in one of the largest martime law cases in history. Attorneys have estimated damage claims could reach $3 billion.

Carl Meyerdirk, a Standard spokesman, declined immediate comment on the ruling, saying "the attorneys are currently studying it."

In addressing the liability of Amoco International Oil Co., McGarr said that "it negligently performed its duty to insure that the Amoco Cadiz in general and its steering gear in particular were seaorthy, adequately maintained and in proper repair."

Regarding Amoco Transport Co., registered owner of the ship, McGarr said the company "failed to insure that the Amoco Cadiz was seaworthy on her final voyage." He said that Amoco Transport had "actual knowledge of the unseaworthy condition" of the supertanker and that the firm's ship inspectors "knew of or negligently failed to ascertain the unseaworthy" condition of the tanker.

McGarr said that Standard Oil, the parent company, "was initially involved in and controlled the design, construction, operation and management of the Amoco Cadiz and treated that vessel as if it were its own."

He also said "that design and construction faults contributed to the grounding of the Amoco Cadiz," thus rendering the Spanish firm that built the ship "liable, in part, for the consequent damage."

The tanker spewed 68 million gallons of oil into the Atlantic after foundering in a gale and impaling itself on rocks near a small fishing village.

The spill wreaked havoc on Brittany coast, killing thousands of birds and washig black tar up on 100 miles of beaches.

The government of France contended that Standard Oil and its subsidiaries cut corners on the vessel's maintenance and ignored mechanical problems to maximize profits in the tight oil markets of the 1970s.

Standard and the subsidiaries denied any blame. Company lawyers contended liability couldn't be imposed on Standard "simply because of its role as parent company, for the alleged negligence of its corporate subsidiaries."

The company also maintained the 1969 International Convention on Civil Liability for Oil Pollution Damage restricted such claims only to the registered owner of a vessel, Amoco Transport.

Standard also contended French authorities failed to provide assistance in the crucial hours of the wreck, as well as in helping contain the oil spill.

France was joined in the suit by about 80 other plaintiffs.

The decision in the complex legal case comes slightly more than six years after the March 16, 1978, wreck of the Liberian-registered supertanker, which created a slick 18 miles wide and 80 miles long.

U.S. District Judge Frank McGarr ruled Thursday in Chicago that Standard Oil Co. and two of its subsidiaries must pay the French government and a Bermuda-based insurance company for damages incurred in one of history's worst environmental disasters, the 1978 wreck of the oil supertanker Amoco Cadiz off the French coast.

Flare Inc. reports lower revenues, net loss

From Staff Reports

Flare, Inc. reported substantially lower revenues and a net loss for its third quarter ended March 31, 1984. For the quarter, operating revenues decrased 47 percent to $1,171,834 as compared to $2,210,697 for last year's third quarter. As a result of the decreased revenues, the company reported a net loss of $451,741 ($.06 per share) versus net earnings of $189,093 ($.02 per share) for the comparable quarter.

For the nine months, Flare earned $764,863 ($.10 per share) on revenues of $6,656,509 as compared to net earnings of $1,349,401 ($.16 per share) on revenues of $6,646,067 for the nine months ended March 31, 1983.

J.D. Faircloth, president, attributed the disappointing third quarter results to two factors. First, many of the customers who purchased seismic data during the company's unprecedented second quarter, in which operating revenues aggregating $3,778,693 were produced, are presently interpreting this data and have deferred subsequent purchases of data until their backlog of data to be evaluated has been reduced. Secondly, the acquisition or potential acquisition of several of the major and large independent oil and gas compaies has curtailed data purchases by the affected companies.

As a result of the company's management realignment which was implemented at the end of the company's second quarter, the company reduced its general and administrative expenses for the third quarter by 37 percent to$475,404 as compared to $754,430 for last year's comparable quarter and by $412,909 (46 percent) when compared to the $889,313 reported for the second quarter of fiscal 1984.

Although the third quarter results were somewhat discouraging, the compay remains encouraged by the commencement of a new seismic data program and other activity forecasted for its fourth quarter and the remainder of calendar 1984.

Flare, Inc. is primarily engaged in the development and marketing of seismic data used by the petroleum industry in the search for oil and gas reserves. Its principal operating subsidiary is Seismic Reflections, Inc.

Dome Petroleum struggling to restructure

CALGARY, Alberta — Dome Petroleum Ltd. failed to meet its target date for obtaining a debt-restructuring agreement from its lenders, but the financially troubled oil and natural gas company said progress is being made.

A 29-member banking consortium led by Citibank, Dome's largest single creditor, met in New York to finalize restructuring its $1.2 billion (U.S.) loan to Dome, due in 1989. "An agreement on a compromise is near," said a member of the consortium. Details of the meeting's outcome weren't known.

Seismic exploration increases

Seismic exploration for oil and gas increased by one crew during the fourth quarter (Dec.) of 1983, with a total of 996 seismic land crews and marine vessels active. According to the Society of Exploration Geophysicists, which conducts the quarterly survey, the December total (996) reflected an increase of nine land crews and a decrease of eight marine vessels for a net increse of one crew from the Sept. 1983, total of 995 crews and vessels. Gains were reported in Canada, Mexico, and the Middle East.

The International survey reflects data reported on seismic oil exploration activity by 125 private and governmental crew operators around the world. Special significance is attached to the figures since seismic crew activity is recognized as the leading indicator of all petroleum exploration activity.

Landfill gas recovery rises

Landfill gas recovery in the U.S. over the last four years has increased dramatically, according to a study by the American Gas Association.

According to the A.G.A. study, the amount of energy recovered from landfill gas has grown nearly 800 percent from 0.8 trillion Btu (tBtu) in 1980 to an estimated 7 tBtu in 1984. Gas recovered from landfills this year will be the equivalent of 1.2 million barrels of imported oil. The number of operating landfill projects has increased from eight projects in 1980 to more than 25 projects in 1983 with eight additional projects and explains landfill gas recovery techniques and advantages.

In recent years, the development of landfills to recover methane has become increasingly important, especially to local communities in which this gas is produced, the study states. Numerous advantages to landfill gas development are outlined in the study, including reduced safety hazards, the reduction of undesirable odors, and increased supply security.

Homestake Mining, Felmont Oil to merge

SAN FRANCISCO — Homestake Mining Co. and Felmont Oil Corp. said their boards unanimously approved a definitive agreement for the merger of Felmont into a Homestake subsidiary in an exchange of stock valued at about $400 million.

The companies said they expect the merger to be completed in July.

Alta Energy reports closing of private stock

Alta Energy Corp. president R.F. Bailey of Midland and Robert W. Scharar, president of FCA Corp. of Houston and El Paso, have anounced the closing of a private placement of approximately $2 million of Alta Energy Units. The units consist of a combination of convertible preferred stock, subordinated notes and warrants to acquire common stock. The offering proceeds will be used by Alta to increase working capital and to reduce bank debt. FCA Corp. was the investment advisor for the purchasing group. This private placement represents Alta's only infusion of working capital since its formation three years ago.

Bailey also announced two significant oil well completions. The Reese A-1, Gonzales County, Texas, is flowing between 120 and 140 barrels of oil plus 90,000 cubic feet of gas per day through a 1/8 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 700 pounds per square inch. The Getty 12-1, Duchesne County, Utah, is pumping between 150 and 200 barrels of oil per da plus a substantial volume of gas. Alta and its pertners own acreage for additional evelopment wells offsetting these two completions. The two successful wells are part of a recently completed 12-well drlling program. Of the 12 wells, 11 were completed as oil wells, one was completed as a gas well and there were no dry holes. Alta, the operator of all 12 wells, and its three limited partnersips, Alta 1983-I, Ltd., Alta 1983-II, Ltd. and Alta Commonwealth, Ltd., own from 29 percent to 68 percent of the working interest in the wells.

Alta Energy Corp. is engaged in the exploration for, and production of, oil and natural gas in Texas, Colorado, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Utah.

Bunny business

Two Midland businessmen were up to some bunny business Thursday at Petroleum Information Corp.'s headquarters in Claydesta Plaza's Twin Towers. Apparently Andy Austin, left, holding his three-month-old son Jason, and Arnold Fincher, caught holding the basket, decided to take an active part in Easter week festivities.

Computerization of oil industry already begun

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

In a recent issue, Texas Monthly magazine entertained the heretical notion that the oil industry's economic preeminence may one day face a challenge from the state's new high-technology industries.

What they neglected to mention is that by then the oil business will have become something of a high-tech industry itself.

The computerization of the oil industry has already begun, and the technology needed to complete the process is sitting on the shelves of computer stores all over town.

But it's not being used.

"At least 95 percent of people (in the industry) are not using computers adequately," says Munesh Singh, president of Abacus Computers. "And even those who are using them are using only one or two functions instead of the whole range."

And it is the small independents, who have the most to gain from computers, who show the most resistance, say members of the Midland computer community.

The data processing departments of the big oil companies may be "under-used and misused," says geophysicist and programming consultant Valerie Piper, but at least they have the capacity and the expertise. The independent oilman usually has neither.

THE INDEPENDENTS hold back because they don't think they have the time to learn, because they prefer to deal with tangible data they can hold in their hands, and because it's still possible to do things the old way. But mostly, "It's fear of the unknown," says Ms. Piper.

"There's a lot of interest, but they don't know what computers can do, and the computer companies in town don't have the personnel who can tell them. Even with software, there's no guidance. None. They say, 'Tell us what you want, and we'll order it.' "

Ted Windecker, a retail dealer who also teaches computer classes at the Permian Basin Graduate Center, agrees with Ms. Piper's sour assessment:

"Here's a guy who's scared and confused to begin with, but he's seen Alan Alda on television telling him how easy computers are to use. So he walks into a local computer store, and the salesmen, who don't even understand the jargon they use, can't tell him what he needs to know in intelligible form. So either he doesn't buy, or he buys and doesn't use it.

"A local retailer told me a year ago that he estimated 60-80 percent of the computers he was selling were used once and then went into the closet."

Windecker says most retail salespeople are trained to sell computers the way other salespeople sell cars — they try to close the sale within 30 minutes. But a person who knows enough about cars to make a quick decision may need weeks or months to make a similar decision about a computer.

"THAT'S THE WAY computers will be sold in ten years, when computer literacy reaches the level of auto literacy," says Windecker. "But right now a customer needs a lot of hand holding."

Singh says his customers are put off by the "high-pressure sales tactics" they find in some stores, and he emphasizes the value of having salespeople with computer backgrounds. He contrasts his employees, with their computer science degrees, to those of a competitor such as MIDA Corp., which prefers to hire people with sales or business backgrounds and then give them computer training.

But MIDA Vice President Stan Hawthorne says businessmen are put off by technical talk.

"A lot of salespeople like to talk about bits and bytes, which a businessman could care less about," says Hawthorne. "What he really needs is a salesperson with business knowledge, who knows how a computer can be applied to business."

The idea that computers are under-utilized in the oil business and that retail salespeople are part of the problem "is exactly wrong," says Bernard Appel, a Radio Shack executive vice president.

"There is fear of the unknown, but it can be overcome," says the Fort Worth-based marketing executive. "Computers are being utilized more and more every day."

STILL, THERE are a lot of independent computer consultants in Midland who are finding a market for their services among oil companies which want to get into computers or make better use of the ones they already have.

"I usually get involved in one of two ways," says consultant Gene Houk. "I deal with people who are out there in the jungle looking for a computer and getting too little information or massive amounts they can't correlate. Or I help people figure out how to maximize the capacity they already have."

For example, one of Houk's clients has more computer capacity than it can use, so he is working out a time-sharing program which allows the company to rent out its unused capacity at rates as low as $5 an hour. Its potential customers are small companies which can't afford to invest in a central processing unit on their own, but can afford to link a microcomputer to Houk's client's computer for a reasonable fee.

Similarly, petroleum geologists can link their personal computers to huge data bases.

"Ninety-five percent of U.S. production is now on data bases," says Philip Stark of Petroleum Information Corporation, a Denver company. "Access to this tremendous data base is vastly under-utilized by geologists and to some extent by petroleum engineers."

ONE GEOLOGIST who is using computers is consultant Helen Barr, who says, "I used to work in a big corporation where we did a lot of residual mapping (with computers). Independents can't do that now — they don't have the equipment. I'm trying to develop programs that can help them."

Geophysicists make more use of computers than geologists, but that's not really saying much, according to geophysicist Ms. Piper.

"I'd say about 10 percent of geologists and 20 percent of geophysicists use computers," she says. "It's true that processing geophysicists use them to get seismic sections, but I see a wider use coming from having a data bank for check shot surveys."

Computers can also do much of the title search work that landmen do, according to Windecker.

"And simple document processing, leases, abstracts and other word processing functions — this sort of thing can be done quite well (by computer) and isn't being done," says Windecker.

For $2,500, a personal computer with intergrated software can let its user deal with general ledger, accounting, word processing, tax programs and other administrative functions without having to know how to program, says Rick Winter of Brazco Development, a real estate firm with oil and gas interests.

"YOU HAVE TO integrate the programs," says Winter. "That's the step that most people miss — they can't see how to tie the applications together. But the software (to do it) is there."

If, as Philip Stark says, the microcomputer is creating a renaissance in computer interest, then much of the oil business is apparently still living in the Middle Ages.

Tower plants seeds for Reagan race

Sen. John Tower

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

While the Democrats are playing tug of war with the presidential nominees, Texas Republicans are starting to gather their grassroots forces under the wing of the Reagan-Bush campaign.

That was the thrust of a visit to Midland Thursday afternoon by U.S. Sen. John Tower, who is the Texas campaign chairman for the re-election of President Reagan and Vice President George Bush. He spent this week getting the campaign roots growing in 11 Texas cities.

Although the Republican duo took a majority of the votes in the 1980 election, Tower said during a news conference at Chaparral Aviation that polls show Reagan is more popular in Texas than any Democratic candidate.

"We, as supporters, need to get organized and get a strong grassroots campaign," said the senator, who is leaving his post in 1985 at the end of four terms. In registering people to vote, the Republicans are seeking citizens whose views side with Reagan's, he said.

"Our primary concern is will he be re-elected. Reagan's policies are more conducive to the economic growth situation than those of his opponents."

Tower didn't buy the theory voiced by State Democratic Chairman Bob Slagle that Reagan is responsible for not decontrolling gas — one of his 1980 campaign promises.

"I don't think anyone will buy that kind of argument. The Democrats are responsible for phasing out the depletion allowance — an anathema to this state. The president promises to attempt certain things," Tower explained. "The president can't change the law. In fact, Congress has stood in the way of deregulating the (oil and gas) industry."

He accused the Democrats of imposing the "70 percent Windfall Profits Tax," and defended Reagan's actions in having the Justice Department argue to retain the legislation. One federal judge had declared the law unconstitutional but the Supreme Court upheld it. "He is required to defend certain laws in the courts. The Justice Department is obligated to support federal laws on the books."

Tower said he has no more political aspirations for himself, although he will remain politically active when he retires to Wichita Falls next year. And he denied that he wanted a cabinet position for himself.

Sims: Doctors need to lobby Legislature

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Although state legislators are focusing on water as the source of life for Texas, some area physicians said they wanted legislation that would draw blood.

Speaking to the Midland County Medical Society and Midland Memorial Foundation Trustees, which included his predecessor Pete Snelson, State Sen. Bill Sims said Thursday that physicians would have to lobby to get the legislative changes they want.

Of the 3,800 bills introduced in the last legislative session, 1,100 were passed. Those passed did not include Sims' two favorite issues, water and pari-mutuel betting — nor did they include one issue important to physicians.

"We need a revision of medical and hospital malpractice laws," said Dr. Thomas McIntosh, family practioner. "We ought to have more of a burden of proof. That way, we'd have less suits, whether they come to trial or are dismissed. The insurance premiums would decrease and we wouldn't have to practice 'defense medicine' and, therefore, the costs across the board decrease."

But the lawyers, who make up the majority of those serving on the State Supreme Court and in the legislature, would pose some problems, according to Snelson.

"There would be some difficulty in shutting off the suits (already on court dockets). And, of course, you've got an awful lot of civil lawyers in the legislature that would fight anything that would close the chance to get a case filed."

"Why can't we make it more like a criminal court?" McIntosh asked, adding a doctor does not have to be proven guilty beyond a reasonable doubt in a malpractice case.

"That sounds like an excellent idea," Sims said.

"With each and every patient we deal with, we put our reputation on the line — and not only that, but the well-being of our wife and our children every single time," said plastic surgeon Dr. Terry Tubb.

Tubb cited a report in which 15 suits had damages totaling more than $50 million, with most of the cases over babies born with deformities. He said attorneys aren't even considering the malpractice suits that ask for less than a certain monetary limit.

"It ought to be felonious," Tubb said. "In Alaska, it's gotten so bad that doctors are refusing to take care of lawyers unless it's a life and death situation."

"Who is the most interested in law in Texas? It's the attorneys. The name of the game is lobbying..."

"It has really gotten out of hand," agreed Dr. P.A. Talboys, family practioner. "It seems like there ought to be some limit (to damages), some fair amount."

Only about 21 percent of the malpractice cases are taken by attorneys "because there are so many of them for such little fees," Talboys said.

Talboys questioned Sims about the senator's opinion on electing Supreme Court justices rather than appointing them. Sims, a Democrat from San Angelo, said he couldn't comment.

"But just because a public officer is receiving political contributions (from one source) doesn't mean he should vote in one way when the people say vote in another way," said Dr. Joseph Ruda, ophthalmologist.

Sims told the physicians to lobby for the legislation they want.

"Who is the most interested in law in Texas?" Sims asked. "It's the attorneys. The name of the game is lobbying and the people who deal with the law realize the importance.

"You can't isolate yourself and say, 'I'm a doctor — I don't have any moral responsibility,' " Sims said. "Like it or not, you are a lobby. Certainly, you're representing more people than anyone else."

Midland County voters to decide nominees in local races

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland County voters, who will be deciding nominees in six local contested political races, have until 5 p.m. May 1 to cast absentee ballots in the Democratic and Republican Party primary elections.

Primary elections will be held on Saturday, May 5.

Through Thursday, the fourth day of absentee voting, 282 Midlanders had voted absentee or had been mailed absentee ballots, said Janeice Builta, Midland County elections administrator.

"It's a very light turnout," Ms. Builta said, "but I think it has to do with the (Easter) holidays. I think it will pick up."

More than 43,500 Midland Countians are registered to vote in the primary elections in which six of the 13 county- and precinct-level offices listed on the ballots represent contested races. On the Republican ballot, four of seven offices are being contested, and on the Democratic, two of six positions are being challenged.

In 1982, the most recent primary elections, almost 12 percent of the 44,300 registered Midland County voters cast ballots in the elections. In 1980, a presidential-election year, 27 percent of the 44,000-strong electorate cast ballots in the primary elections. The voter turnout for the general elections was almost 75 percent in 1980 and almost 51 percent in 1982.

Six automatic voting machines are set up for absentee balloting at the Elections Administrator's Office at 709 W. Washington Ave.

Janet Massey, chairman of the Midland County Democratic Party, said Texas does not have a registration for party affiliation. Voters who may have aligned themselves with the Democratic Party or Republican Party or as independents had no party affiliation at all may vote in either primary election. A voter, however, cannot vote in both primary elections; he must opt for one.

Though the voter historically may have cast ballots in a particular party primary, the voter may "switch" to an opposing primary election if, for instance, he wants to support a certain candidate.

"I don't think they have done it so much in the primary, really," Ms. Massey said. She did not address the ethics of party switching in primary elections.

"I don't want to help Republicans get votes," Ms. Massey said. "We have had our Democrats for Nixon."

However, Ms. Massey did note that party precinct chairmen are bound to support "all the nominees of the party or you will be removed."

"We do not have party affiliation by registration in the state of Texas," she said. "I kind of wish we did."

Printed ballots note "I am a Democrat..." or "I am a Republican...and pledge to support the nominees of this primary."

The 1984 general election will be held Nov. 6.

Local offices on the ballots, by party affiliations, include:

Republican Party

— District Attorney: Vern F. Martin, district attorney since 1977, is being challenged by Al Schorre, a Midland lawyer and a former prosecutor.

— County Attorney: Mark H. Dettman, first assistant county attorney, and Michael L. Williams, chief prosecutor for the 142nd State District Court, are seeking the position now held by J. Scott Henderson. Henderson is not seeking re-election.

— Sheriff: Dallas Smith, sheriff since 1977, is being challenged for the nomination by Gary Painter, the sheriff's former patrol lieutenant.

— County Tax Assessor-Collector: Frances Shuffield, the incumbent, is unopposed.

— Justice of the Peace: Charlie Sprayberry, justice since 1981, is being opposed by Dewey Lee, the district attorney's chief investigator, and Robbie J. Rucker, a Midland schoolteacher.

— Constable: Tom McGinnis, constable since 1981, is unopposed.

— Republican County Chairman: William T. "Bill" Shaner's bid for re-election to the post he has held since 1976 is unchallenged.

Democratic Party

— 142nd State District Court Judge: Pat Baskin, presiding judge of the court since 1981, is unopposed.

— Sheriff: Joe W. Carr, detective sergeant with the Midland Police Department, is unopposed for the nomination. In 1980, Carr challeged Smith for sheriff in the general election but was defeated 2 to 1.

— County Commissioner of Precinct 1: Durward Wright, a financial consultant who has been commissioner since 1969, is unopposed.

— County Commissioner of Precinct 3: C. DeWayne Davis, a retired schoolteacher who has been commissioner since 1981, is being challeged by Scott Welch, an independent electrical contractor who is son of former Precinct 2 County Commissioner Charlie Welch.

— Justice of the Peace: Rick Kerr, sales manager for an oilfield supply company, is unopposed.

— Democratic Party chairman: Janet Massey, party chairman and manager of Midland Oil Scouts Association, is being challenged by Terry M. Lowry, a Midland landman.

Cause of boy's death still unknown

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The cause of death of a 14-year-old boy found lying in the parking lot of a local convenience store just after midnight Thursday remained a mystery Friday morning.

Odessan Robert Byron Coons, 14, was pronounced dead at 1:18 a.m. today after being transferred to Medical Center Hospital. Police responded to a 12:13 a.m. call from the northside convenience store at the intersection of University and Dixie to find the boy lying in the store's parking lot.

There were no visible signs of wounds or blows suffered by Coons. An autopsy is scheduled for today to determine the cause of death.

Witnesses told police Coons had been involved in an argument with a white man and woman in the parking lot. Investigators are seeking suspects in the incident, which police are treating as a murder.

Names of two fire victims released

From Staff Reports

Authorities have released the names of two of the three transients who died in a house fire at the intersection of Marienfeld Street and Lousiana Avenue Monday morning.

The two were identified as 33-year-old Robert W. Sherrin of Sweetwater and 53-year-old Don Maness of Magnolia, Ark. The third victim's name is being withheld pending notification of relatives.

All three victims were badly burned and identification was made through fingerprints, according to Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry. Sprayberry cancelled scheduled autopsies after it was determined no foul play was involved in the deaths.

Nine men were in the vacant house when it erupted in flames about 3:30 a.m. Monday. Six of the men escaped without injury. It is believed the fire started in a couch.

Girl indicted in stepfather's death

From Staff Reports

A pregnant teen-ager has been indicted in the stabbing death of her stepfather earlier this month.

Diedra Carter, 17, of 707 N. Weatherford, is charged with stabbing 38-year-old Noon Hudson Jr. to death during an argument in the family home about 1:25 a.m. on April 4.

Hudson, a Vietnam veteran and unemployed laborer, had been stabbed once in the chest with a butcher knife and was pronounced dead at Midland Memorial Hospital 1½ hours later.

Police initially released the girl after questioning and indicated that the stabbing was in self-defense.

The case was turned over to the grand jury for further investigation, however, and the indictment was returned late last week.

Oil industry using high-techology

"Part of the problem is that technology is changing so rapidly," says Windecker. "Machines that came out three years ago are already being replaced before all their capacity has been used, and by machines that have even more capacity. The point will be reached when the technology will be stabilized" and the industry will learn to use the capacity it already has.

"The oil industry is becoming more and more an information industry," says Ms. Piper. "Right now computers may be a novelty, but their ultimate impact is almost inconceivable. In five years, this article will be obsolete."

Jaycees to have Easter egg hunt

Midland Jaycees will have their 13th annual Easter Egg Hunt at 9 a.m. Saturday at Cubs Stadium.

All children, toddler to 6th grade, are encouraged to participate. There will be no charge.

President arrested in carriage mishap

In 1853 President Franklin Pierce, driving home by carriage from the home of William Morgan in southeast Washington, D.C, ran down an aged woman, Mrs. Nathan Lewis. Pierce was arrested by Constable Stanley Edelin, but the case was dropped when Pierce was found not guilty.

Krueger: Bill was attempt to prevent boondoggle

AUSTIN (AP) — Democratic U.S. Senate front-runner Bob Krueger says his proposed legislation in Congress to exempt parts of San Antonio from federal voting rights requirements was designed to avoid a bureaucratic boondoggle — not create one.

But his often-vocal opponent, Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, claimed the introduction of the legislation by Krueger when he was in Congress shows that he "was acting for the wealthy Republican establishment.

"The right to vote and the right to equal representation are far too important to be subjected to the flip-flop antics of a politician who wants to please big-shot Republicans," Doggett said.

Krueger has been an outspoken backer of extending the Voting Rights Act into Texas. But The Dallas Times Herald reported Thursday that Krueger "introduced legislation in 1976 that would have hampered federal efforts to ensure equal minority representation in San Antonio city government."

Krueger said his introduction of the resolution is being misinterpreted.

"The Justice Department at that time was abusing its review power in order to trigger opposition to the Voting Rights Act," Krueger said, adding his resolution was "meant to send...a very clear message that the integrity of the Voting Rights Act must be protected."

Krueger said he introduced the measure to discourage the Republican-controlled Justice Department from undertaking a time-consuming bureaucratic review of procedures used by San Antonio in annexing some neighborhoods.

Krueger, Doggett and U.S Rep. Kent Hance, D-Lubbock, are the leading Democrats running for the seat being vacated by Republican Sen. John Tower.

In other political developments Thursday:

Sen. Gart Hart, speaking at the end of an Austin visit, attacked claims that Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale's campaign has the best organization in Texas.

"We've been organizing in this state for months and months," Hart said. "I'll be more than happy to match my organization against Mr. Mondale's."

Woman vows to fight 'next 20 years' for baby

FORT WORTH (AP) — A young woman who lost a court battle to regain custody of the baby she put up for adoption says she will fight the ruling, vowing to fight "for the next 20 years."

A state district judge ruled Thursday that Barbara Landry was not coerced into signing adoption papers at a home for unwed mothers, and therefore, she cannot regain custody of her child.

State District Judge Brian Carper refused Miss Landry's request to reopen the adoption proceedings, saying she is bound to the documents she signed that relinquished her parental rights.

"I was expecting it. I was ready," Miss Landry said as she left the courthouse.

Carper said counselors at the Edna Gladney Home did not pressure Miss Landry, of The Bronx, N.Y., into giving up her child as the woman claimed.

But one of her attorneys, Robert Berg, argued in district court that the signed adoption agreement was illegal. After the ruling, Berg said he would appeal the judge's ruling.

The attorney said he will present evidence in the appeal that Miss Landry was suffering postpartum depression and was therefore not "mentally competent" to make that decision.

Miss Landry said she was confused when she signed documents.

"I'll fight this for the next 20 years if I have to...I miss her. She's part of me. They tell you (you) can have more kids. Sure, you can have more kids, but they won't be this kid," she said.

Miss Landry filed suit to determine whether she should be bound by an affidavit she signed Feb. 14 in which she gave up her parental rights.

The woman gave birth to an infant girl on Feb. 10 and signed the papers four days later. But on Feb. 24, she changed her mind and hired an attorney.

Edna Gladney officials said the adoption was irrevocable. Under Texas law, they argued, adoptions handled by a state licensed adoption center take effect immediately.

State commission grants water district's application

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Water Commisson has granted an application by Colorado River Municipal Water District for construction of reservoirs on Beals Creek and Red Draw in Howard County, a spokeswoman says.

CRMWD seeks to construct a channel dam on Beals Creek, five miles east of Big Spring, to intercept and divert low flows and impound 3.4 acre-feet of water, the TWC reports.

The reservoir on Red Draw, five miles southeast of Big Spring, is to impound 8,538 acre-feet diverted from Beals Creek.

CRMWD is also amending water permits to use up to 6,000 acre-feet in Red Draw Reservoir to meet existing authorization for mining purposes, and 2,000 acre-feet for industrial purposes.

Also requested were diversion points and rates of diversion for the reservors and use of 50 acre-feet annually from Beals Creek for construction purposes.

Easter animals need proper care

By DAVID LEE FORREST
Lifestyle Writer

Fluffy chicks, cute ducklings and little baby bunnies — symbolic of fresh, new lives — are traditionally linked to Easter.

They are often given as gifts during the spring holiday season.

Many of these tiny harbingers of spring may have only short, unpleasant lives, however.

"A lot of them probably don't even survive," said Rice Freeman-Zachery with the Midland Department of Animal Control.

Many of the animals are simply squeezed to death in the well-intentioned but over-zealous hands of a child.

"Small children who desire these things don't know how to handle them," said Dalton Byerly of the local chapter of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. "It's a lot of stress for the animal."

"They should be under a parent's supervision," said Ron Coughlin, manager of Jerry's Perfect Pets. "As long as a parent is in charge, it's okay."

A hand-printed sign in his pet store says that Easter ducklings are "To be sold with parents' care and supervision around children."

Even adults purchasing them often haven't taken the time to learn how to properly care for the animals, Byerly noted.

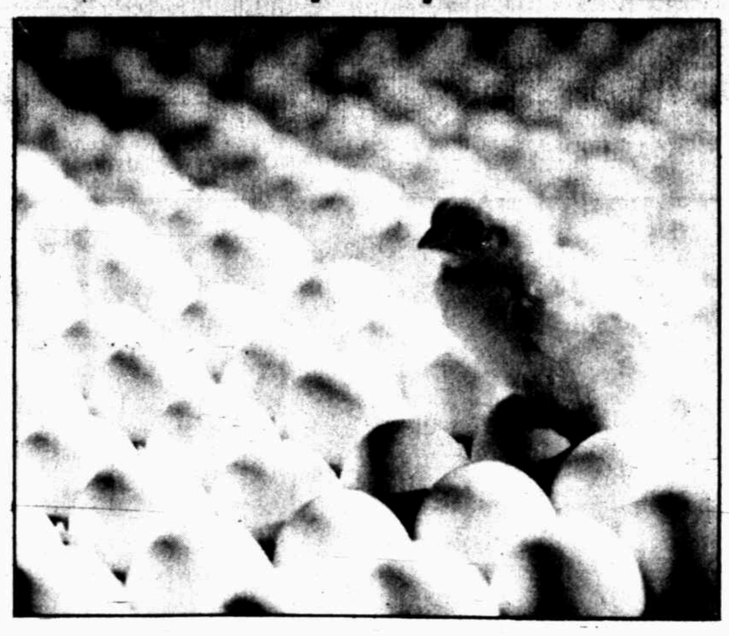
"I wouldn't say 50 percent are done that way. Most are impulse buys," Byerly said.

"We don't believe in giving pets as gifts," Ms. Freeman-Zachery said, since a new pet should be carefully selected by the future owner to ensure he really wants it and will care for it.

"They need to find out what they're getting into," she advised.

Often, recipients and impulse buyers "don't have any plans for what to do with it," she said. "A lot of them are just turned loose.

"You have to consider that it won't always be cute and fluffy. Make sure you realize this is a commitment for the entire lifetime of the animal."



If not properly cared for, baby chicks and other animals given as Easter presents may have only short, unpleasant lives.

"They have to be fed and cared for, just like we have to be fed and cared for," said Earnest Kiker, Midland County Extension agent for agriculture.

"The newness wears off," Byerly said, as the animal grows, but "the expense does not end with the purchase."

Instead of a very small, down-covered duckling, the owner soon has a large, fully-grown duck and he doesn't know what to do with it.

"You're not going to eat it — simply because it was a pet," Byerly said.

Both Byerly and Ms. Freeman-Zachery pointed out that poultry are not normally considered pets.

"Of course, they're not really meant to be house pets," Ms. Freeman-Zachery said.

Ducks are a "good farm-type animal," Coughlin said. "Inside the city limits I don't think they'd make good pets.

"Rabbits make good pets. The good point about rabbits is they don't get killed so easily. They're sturdy."

Raising a chicken, duck or rabbit doesn't have to be a negative experience for a family, Kiker said, "if they buy them with the intention of taking care of them" and "if you'll teach the kid the responsibility and care of that animal.

"I think it'd be an excellent idea as a teaching aid."

Both Byerly and Ms. Freeman-Zachery agree that if carefully planned and supervised, raising these animals can be a good learning experience for children.

Improperly planned, "It does not teach them a responsibility for life," Ms. Freeman-Zachery said. "It teaches them to think of them (animals) as a toy."

"People have got to understand that they're not a playtoy," Couglin said.

"Be sure you want to take responsibility for another life," Byerly said. "That is a life, however significant we think it is."

Easter's date varies annually

Easter's date varies from year to year, but it always falls on the first Sunday after the first full moon on or after March 21, according to "The World Book Encyclopedia."

It cannot come before March 22 or after April 25.

The first Nicene Council in 325 A.D. set the method of determining what date Easter would fall on.

Cancer society country-western event planned

Round Up '84, a by-invitation fund-raising social event for the American Cancer Society in Midland, will be April 28. Proceeds from the gala will help support service, education and research programs of the ACS.

In addition to food, games and dancing, entertainment will include Country & Western singer Louise Mandrell, the Hill City Cowboy Band of Fort Worth and Fandangle of Fort Griffin.

Anita Hollander, cancer victim and survivor who is also a Broadway performer, will be a special guest. Catering the event will be Perini brothers of Buffalo Gap.

Joseph O'Neill Jr., who has been cured of cancer, has been named Honorary Chairman of Round Up '84. A Midland resident since 1948, he is a partner of O'Neill Properties Limited and has been active in community service and the petroleum industry.

O'Neill was first president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association and he headed the fund drive for the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum.

Chairman this year is Mrs. Kathy Wommack; co-chairman is Mrs. Kerry Faudree. This year's event has involved more than 100 local volunteers.

According to Mrs. Wommack, "With more than 3 million Americans alive today who are cured of cancer, we are winning the battle, but can't afford to stop now. This event will help provide funds necessary for the ACS to accomplish its goal: the elimination of cancer in our lifetime," she added.

DEAR ABBY

Clean hands for clean bill of health

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: People come to you with every conceivable problem, so I'm encouraged to present one that is so touchy I've never seen it mentioned in your column.

How do you get people to wash their hands after using the bathroom? In our home, the bathroom is right off the kitchen, and when the water is turned on, it can be heard in the next room. Guests have gone into our bathroom, used the toilet (I can hear it being flushed), and they come out without having turned on the faucet, so I know they haven't washed their hands. Then after supper they offer to help me dry the dishes! (I always say no, thank you.)

Worse yet, where I work there's a cafeteria, and I've seen some cafeteria employees walk out of a bathroom stall and go straight out to serve the people without having washed their hands!

Abby, please explain how dangerous this is. If you print this, I promise to frame it and hang it above our toilet. Thank you. — PLEASE WASH IN WINONA, MINN.

DEAR PLEASE: I cannot stress too emphatically how important this one specific area of hygiene is to good general health. Children should be taught to wash their hands (with soap) after using the bathroom, and adults should have made it a lifelong habit.

Last November, the Mayo Clinic, the medical mecca of the world, sponsored an "Infection Awareness Week" program. As part of its campaign, prominently displayed along the corridors of the Mayo hospital complex were posters showing a pair of hands under this terse message: "The 10 Most Common Causes of Infection."

To remind doctors, nurses and employees of the Mayo Clinic to wash their hands frequently were other posters bearing this catchy message: "A milligram of handwashing is worth a kilogram of antibiotics."

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I differ on a point of etiquette. We are both seniors. He says that on being introduced to a lady, if the lady extends her hand, he should shake it. If she does not extend her hand, she expects to be kissed on the cheek, whereupon he kisses her to avoid embarrassing her.

I say, if the lady extends her hand, the gentleman should shake it; if she doesn't extend her hand, there is no need to kiss her on the cheek.

What do you say? — NO NAME OR ADDRESS

DEAR NO NAME OR ADDRESS: Your husband is wrong. Handshake or no handshake, a gentleman does not kiss a lady on the cheek (or anywhere else) unless she initiates it.

DEAR ABBY: We were having a discussion about drugs in our class and we decided to ask you why kids do drugs. Thank you. — DIANA

DEAR DIANA: This may be an oversimplification, but most kids begin using drugs out of curiosity. They've heard how great it feels to get high and they want to find out what they're missing.

Some kids take drugs in order to avoid facing their problems; it's a quick and easy way of avoiding reality with all the painful thoughts and feelings.

The very young try drugs because they want to be "one of the crowd." They think everybody's doing it. (They're wrong — everybody is not doing it.)

And some kids take drugs because the more they take, the more they need, until finally they're hooked.

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send your name and address clearly printed with check or money order for $2.50 (postage is included) to: Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Grocery sacks invented in 1883

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — The brown paper grocery sack was conceived in 1883 when Charles Stillwell invented a machine that made self-opening bags.

Stillwell's sacks opened with a flip of the wrist and stood alone on oblong bottoms. Today, American supermarkets use 22 billion such bags annually, according to St. Regis, a maker of bags.

Insect control needed for lawn care

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Many lawn-damaging insects spend the winter buried deep in the soil only to emerge again in the early spring, says Dr. Jo-Ann Reed, an entomologist at Spectrum Home & Garden Products.

With the arrival of warmer weather, she says, these insects move toward the surface to begin feeding on the roots and leaves of turf grass. If left untreated, some of these pests can actually destroy a lawn.

Diabetic side effects examined

HOUSTON (AP) — An experimental drug believed to prevent cell destruction that causes blindness and kidney disease in diabetics could be the "first step forward" in controlling the disorder since insulin, doctors say.

The first human studies of the drug sorbinil began recently at 12 hospitals around the country, including the Hermann Hospital Eye Center in Houston.

Researchers hope to enroll as many as 100 study subjects. All must be diabetics between 18 and 40 years of age who have had the disease 3 to 10 years and are on insulin therapy.

John Walsh, clinical research coordinator of the study, said the drug represents "a totally new approach — the next big step, it if works."

Diabetes, which strikes 10 million to 11 million Americans, is caused when the body fails to produce sufficient insulin to metabolize sugars. The usual treatment involves control of the diet and replacing the missing insulin with pills or injections.

Diabetes can cause the death of cells, leading to blindness and kidney problems. The disease is the most common cause of blindness.

Cellular destruction takes place when a sugar substance called sorbitol is not metabolized and accumulates inside cells, said Dr. Charles Garcia, a clinical associate professor of opthalmology at the University of Texas Medical School at Houston. Sorbitol forces water to be absorbed until the cell bursts.

Garcia said that the experimental drug is thought to prevent such cell damage by blocking the formation of a compound called aldose reductase, an enzyme essential to the formation of sorbitol.

In effect, the drug will not treat the basic diabetic condition, but hopefully prevent some of the damage caused by the disease, said Garcia.

Stevie Wonder honored at Harvard

Stevie Wonder

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Musician Stevie Wonder never attended college, but he received 10 standing ovations during a visit to Harvard Law School, where he led 1,200 students in a sing-along and urged them to help the poor.

Wonder, appearing as a guest of the Harvard Law School Forum, was greeted Thursday by prolonged cheering and shouts of "We love you, Stevie" from the packed house.

"OK, Harvard," the 33-year-old singer asked once the cheering had stopped. "Will you have the courage to share your experiences? Will you speak out in those affluent crowds?"

Wonder, who began his hit-studded career at age 12, encouraged the future attorneys to provide their services to the poor for free.

"In my career, I've learned that giving of services free gives you a great return on your investment," he said. "Not just financially, but morally...."

The audience joined in a rendition of Wonder's classic hit "You Are the Sunshine of My Life" and the song "Let's Join Together as One ... and Have Some Fun."

An organization of black law students presented Wonder with an award, and the university also gave him a plaque honoring his efforts to establish a national holiday in honor of Martin Luther King Jr.

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — A ceremony to present the Walter Cronkite Excellence in Journalism and Telecommunications awards at Arizona State University has been postponed because a doctor ordered the veteran anchorman to take it easy, a CBS News spokeswoman says.

Cronkite was scheduled to present the awards at a luncheon April 27 to CBS founder William S. Paley and CBS President Emeritus Frank Stanton. Paley, Stanton and Cronkite will attend a rescheduled ceremony in the fall, Ann Bergin, the university's public relations director, said Thursday.

Ann Morfogen, a CBS News spokeswoman in New York, said Cronkite's doctor told the broadcaster he was overworked and should take the week off. Cronkite plans to return to work on Monday, she said.

Woody Allen

Phil Boroff

NEW YORK (AP) — Woody Allen, whose movies have joked about the lack of privacy suffered by celebrities, has asked a court to keep a look-alike from appearing as his double in advertisements because he feels his privacy has been invaded.

The star of such movies as "Annie Hall," "Play It Again, Sam," and "Sleeper" is also asking for $10 million from look-alike Phil Boroff of Los Angeles and a company that used Boroff to advertise a movie rental chain.

"I have suffered and continue to suffer ... harm," Allen, 48, said in court papers filed with his suit this week. "My right of privacy has been invaded.

Guidelines established for exercise program

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am planning to join an exercise club that meets three times a week, and I want to combine that with exercises that I can do at home. However, I don't want to pull a muscle or to get sidelines with some injury. Do you have any rule of thumb about how I should go about this? I am in my early thirties and generally in good health but a little soft from inactivity. — Marion, Miami, Fla.

Dear Marion: The Union Memorial Hospital in Baltimore lists the following guidelines for an exercise program:

(1) Exercise regularly, four to five times weekly for 20 to 30 minutes at a time; (2) train, don't strain — exercise should not be exhausting; (3) make sure you are able to carry on a conversation while exercising; if you cannot, you are exercising too vigorously; (4) progress at your own rate; (5) be patient — don't expect miracles overnight; (6) read as much as you can about exercise and its effects.

Dear Dr. Solomon: The recommendations for gaining weight during pregnancy have undergone a great deal of change since I was pregnant with my children. My obstetrician used to be happy when I gained very little; but now pregnant women are encouraged to gain a certain amount of weight. There is also a lot of concern these days about babies who are too small when they are born. What I would like to know is what causes babies to be smaller than normal when they are born, and what this means for them in the future. — Mrs. D.W., Cedar Rapids, Iowa

Dear Mrs. W.: There are various reasons why a baby might be small for gestational age, including maternal smoking and heavy alcohol consumption, and multiple pregnancies. There are some indications that these babies continue to be shorter and weigh less compared with other babies as they go through their adolescence, but the results of neurologic and intelligence tests are within the normal range.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Are warts contagious? Both my children have warts and I'm beginning to wonder if they catch it from each other. — Mrs. B.Y., Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Mrs. Y.: Since warts are caused by a virus, they are contagious. This means they can be spread directly from one person to another, or indirectly. Warts can also be spread from one part of the body to another as sometimes happens when a wart is scratched.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Everyone talks about blood pressure and I have a general idea about what it is, but how would you define it? And would you do the same for high blood pressure? — Donna, San Francisco, Calif.

Dear Donna: Blood pressure is the force exerted by the blood against the inside of the arteries as it is pumped by the heart throughout the body. High blood pressure (or hypertension) refers to a sustained high level of pressure.

Dear Dr. Solomon: If someone who has diabetes can use a pump to get the insulin he needs during the day, why can't the same kind of pump be used to provide drugs for someone being treated for cancer? I don't think the pump would care what kind of drug it was providing to the individual, do you? — Frankie, Clearwater Beach, Fls.

Dear Frankie: The use of pumps to provide continuous chemotheraphy to cancer patients is currently being tested. As you imply, a continuous delivery of a chemotherapeutic agent in these patients would probably be preferable to the standard form of treatment now being used.
