Air Controllers Strike Looms Again

Friday update

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An air traffic controllers strike, narrowly averted 12 days ago, looms again as a real possibility with the union's recommendation that the tentative contract be "overwhelmingly rejected."

The union's executive board called the agreement unacceptable and said it "does not address the fundamental issues important to the air traffic control profession."

Ballots on the new contract are scheduled to be sent to the 15,000 union members Wednesday and a tally is not expected to be complete until the end of the month, union spokeswoman Marcia Feldman said.

If the agreement is defeated, the union would ask for new negotiations.

The tentative pact was hammered out in all-night negotiations that ended just two hours before the controllers had threatened to walk off their jobs. A strike would ground at least half of the nation's commercial air traffic.

The board's resolution not to support the agreement was read Thursday during a closed meeting with 400 controller representatives in Chicago and announced publicly through the union's Washington headquarters.

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis, who handled the negotiations for the government, reiterated Thursday evening that the Reagan administration would stand firm on the money package agreed to June 22. He urged the controllers to approve the pact and "not be persuaded that they can get more" by rejecting it.

"In an already ailing economy we do not want a costly strike," Lewis said in a statement. "But at a time when the president and Congress are working hard to achieve economic recovery, neither can we agree to an inflationary contract that would be patently unfair to the taxpayers and to other federal workers."

Ratification of the tentative contract would require 51 percent and many leaders of locals around the country have predicted it will be soundly defeated.

The pact calls for a wage and benefits package that amounts to a 6.6 percent increase over what the controllers currently get in wages and benefits. They also would get a 4.8 percent general wage hike expected to be given to all government employees.

Bouncer Saves Houston Girl

HOUSTON (AP) — The memory of assaults on two women who were close to him spurred bouncer James Dickson to leap atop a moving car Thursday and subdue a knife-wielding man abducting an 18-year-old cashier.

"You don't forget those things," the 6-foot-2-inch, 200-pound Dickson said.

His heroism prompted Kim Carnes, the woman he saved, to nickname him "Superman III."

Samuel Lee West, 28, was charged with aggravated assault and burglary of a motor vehicle with intent to commit rape after the early morning incident. Bond was set at $20,000.

Ms. Carnes said she was getting into her car after buying ice cream when the incident occurred.

"I thought it was one of my friends kidding when I felt the hands around my neck," she said. "Then I saw his face."

The man forced his way into the car with her and began to drive away, Ms. Carnes said. She said she started to cry.

Dickson, who had been in the store buying steaks, heard Ms. Carnes and raced to the driver's side of the car on his motorcycle.

"I asked him (the abductor) if everything was OK and he said, 'Yeah,'" Dickson said. "I looked at her and read her lips saying, 'No, help me!' as the car started moving forward."

Ogg Is Accused

HOUSTON (AP) — A $150 million federal civil court suit alleges that state Sen. Jack Ogg of Houston took a bribe to influence his vote on a Harris County landfill permit.

Conservation Management Inc., created to compete with waste disposal firm Browning-Ferris Industries Inc., accused Ogg and BFI of conspiring with Jack Charmichael, chief of solid waste for the State Department of Health.

The suit says BFI paid Ogg "substantial sums of money" to influence Charmichael to deny a landfill permit for Conservation Management Inc.

Prime Minister Chosen

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos named Finance Minister Cesar Virata prime minister today, turning aside suggestions from supporters that he give the post to his wife, Imelda.

The government television service said a caucus of the president's New Society Party at the presidential palace endorsed the nomination. This insured Virata's election by the Interim National Assembly since the party controls the assembly.

Questions Are Raised

HOUSTON (AP) — House Majority Leader Jim Wright says some of his colleagues in the House have raised questions about their competence and integrity because they went along with President Reagan's proposed budget cuts.

Speaking Thursday to lawyers attending a State Bar of Texas convention, Wright said the law-making duty of Congress was being taken over by a few appointees of a "winsome and popular president."

Soldiers Attack Mission

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — A squad of rampaging Ugandan soldiers, apparently hunting a wounded guerrilla leader, attacked an Italian Roman Catholic mission in northwest Uganda, killed 60 unarmed civilians including at least 24 young girls and wounded dozens of others.

Ugandan government sources and Swedish Red Cross worker Lars Astrom Thursday confirmed the massacre June 24.

Government sources said the troops entered the mission in the belief that it was harboring anti-government guerrillas.

The SDN Column

Keeping tab on our neighbors:

Those who are able to laugh at themselves seem to fare best in this world, although there may be times when it is difficult to do so.

Our business here at the SDN is the type that opens the gates to all types of laughable situations, especially if you are on the outside looking in. Somehow, they always seem funnier when they happen to someone else.

Craig Nieman of the Lamb County Leader-News has come up with one of the best list of "laughers" from newspapers we have seen lately. We enjoyed it even more, of course, when we finished reading the list without finding the SDN mentioned.

It went this way—

A headline in a Chicago paper blared, "Man's Death Caused by Crimp In Tail Pipe." Then there was the Los Angeles paper which proclaimed, "Car Leaves Road; Suffers Broken Nose."

A Minnesota paper advised, "Car Wreck Caused by Bee in Pajamas," while a Mississippi paper's headline stated, "Auto Hits Pedestrian Without Tail Light," and another disclosed, "Girl Hurt by Auto Hiding in Box."

Then, there was the Tucson paper which reported, "Man is Found Dead by Automobile Near Peoria." Another interesting report came from Texarkana, where a headline revealed, "Woman Is Killed When Bus Hits Her on Curve."

The Big Apple wasn't immune. A New York paper headlined, "Woman Hit by Auto Leaving Driveway Driven by Her Husband," and a San Diego, Calif., paper offered this startling information: "Expect Man to Recover from Fatal Crash." But perhaps he was no better off than a man in Detroit, where a newspaper reported, "Slain Man Seen Running Ahead of Death-Dealing Auto."

A Boston paper offered some grim advice, "Autos Killing 110 a Day; Let's Resolve to Do Better." To cap it all, there was one which said, "Laxative Company Cleans Out Local Staff." An effective demonstration, no doubt.

Tax Cut Might Pass If Recess Is Delayed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Finance Committee wants Congress to delay its August vacation a week or 10 days to ensure that Americans get a tax cut this fall.

The lawmakers, now in the middle of a Fourth of July recess that lasts until Wednesday, have only 21 working days — counting Saturdays — left this month. There are doubts the largest tax-cut bill in history can make be written into law in so short a time.

The Internal Revenue Service needs six weeks after a tax-cut bill is passed to draw up new withholding tables. If the tax reduction is to take effect on Oct. 1, as President Reagan wants, Congress would have to complete its work by Aug. 15.

That's where the problem arises — the summer recess is scheduled to begin at the close of business Aug. 1.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., the Finance Committee chairman, told reporters Thursday that he wants the Senate to defy tradition and pass a tax-cut measure before the House acts. "If Congress does not act soon it will be impossible to deliver any tax relief to the American people this year," he said.

Dole said he thinks the Senate can pass its version of the bill — which is just about what President Reagan asked — in three or four days. But the timetable is much less certain in the Democratic-controlled House, where the Ways and Means Committee has yet to finish its own tax-cut plan.

The House panel returns to work Wednesday with several major decisions pending. Although the chairman, Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., says he wants the bill passed by the House before Aug. 1, his aides admit it will take some effort to accomplish that.

Then, a conference committee would have to resolve the differences between the House and Senate bills.

Several years ago, then-Sen. Gale McGee, D-Wyo., complained that he found it impossible to take a vacation with his family since Congress met virtually year-round. So Congress passed a law requiring members to take off the month of August — a favorite time to get away from humid Washington — in non-election years.

Snyder Residents Set For Big July 4 Event

Snyder area residents were ready to celebrate Independence Day in traditional fashion and host hundreds of guests in Towle Memorial Park as July 4th approached.

It will be the 21st July 4th celebration in a row here, and it is the biggest single event held annually in Scurry County.

First planned activities were scheduled to begin today, with the junior division of the July 4th Tennis Tournament launching play this morning on the Snyder High School courts.

The July 4th Arts and Crafts Show, one of the most popular attractions in recent years, is scheduled to open in the National Guard Armory in Towle Memorial Park at 6 p. m. this evening, and the first night's action in the July 4th Tractor Pull will begin at 7 p. m. at the Snyder Rodeo Grounds on West 30th St.

Most business firms and offices will be closed Saturday for the Independence Day holiday.

Activity in Towle Memorial Park will begin at 9 a. m. and continue until the big fireworks display closes out the celebration at about 9:15 p. m.

Opening ceremonies are scheduled for 9 a. m. Saturday at the Armory. Glenn McCathern, education director at Colonial Hill Baptist Church, will give the invocation, and "Chosen Generation," a group from First Baptist Church directed by Jerry Neill, will sing America. Mayor Milton Ham will welcome the crowd to Towle Memorial Park, and the Veterans of Foreign Wars will be in charge of the flag-raising ceremony, after which "Chosen Generation" will sing the national anthem. The parade, under leadership of the VFW, with Kin Minyard in charge, will follow.

The arts and crafts show will re-open, the Jaycees Fishing Rodeo will begin following the ceremonies, and the July 4th Art Show, sponsored by the Snyder Palette Club, will be opened to the public at 10 a. m.

Food and game booths will be open in the park throughout the day.

Saturday evening activities will begin with the second session of the tractor pull at 7 p. m. at the rodeo grounds.

In the park, Congressman Charles W. Stenholm will speak at 7:30 p. m. at the armory, and the July 4th Queen will be crowned at 7:30 p. m. "Chosen Generation" will present a concert of patriotic songs at 8:30 p.

States May Cash In On Resources

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — States have a legal right to cash in to the fullest on the natural resources within their borders, the Supreme Court says.

But Congress is expected to be asked to blunt the court's new ruling to prevent economic warfare between energy-producing states and energy-consuming states.

By a 6-3 vote Thursday, the nation's highest court gave Montana permission to impose a whopping 30 percent tax on its abundant reserves of coal, mainly sold out of state.

The court said Montana's coal severance tax, set at 30 percent of the coal's selling price, does not unconstitutionally interfere with interstate commerce or any federal law.

Closing out its nine-month 1980-81 term with a trio of important decisions, the court also:

—Unanimously upheld the financial agreement that freed the 52 American hostages from Iran, clearing the way for the release by July 19 of more than $2 billion Iranian assets frozen in this country.

—Ruled that cities may ban, if they desire, all "commercial" billboard advertising.

Thursday also marked the last day on the bench for Justice Potter Stewart, who retires today at age 66 after 23 years on the court.

The Supreme Court, in its severance-tax decision, emphasized the fact that Montana imposes the tax on coal sold to in-state as well as out-of-state buyers.

The Montana decision carries the potential for an enormous effect on national coal prices. Montana contains about one-fourth of all known U.S. coal reserves, and more than one-half of the nation's low-sulfur coal reserves.

In Congress, two leaders of the Northeast-Midwest Congressional Coalition said the decision must be met with new federal laws imposing a cap on the amounts energy-rich states can charge for their resources.

The court put off until next year deciding whether the Jicarilla Apache Tribe can impose a severance tax on oil and gas extracted from its reservation in northwestern New Mexico.

Ask Us

Q.—Could you tell me what a company car is exactly for, who is supposed to ride in it and are families supposed to drive them, is it considered a family car, who is covered by insurance and who is not, etc.?

A.—It depends on the company which owns the car and its policy concerning use of the car. There is no standard practice. Some firms permit employees to use company cars for personal transportation, while others require company cars to be parked during non-business use. In other words, the owner of the car calls the shots.

highly effective

Even the most severe critics of American capitalism admit that the system is highly effective in creating wealth, but charge that it's concentrated in the hands of the wealthy few--so-called "fat cats" who presumably own most of American business and are the chief beneficiaries of profits.

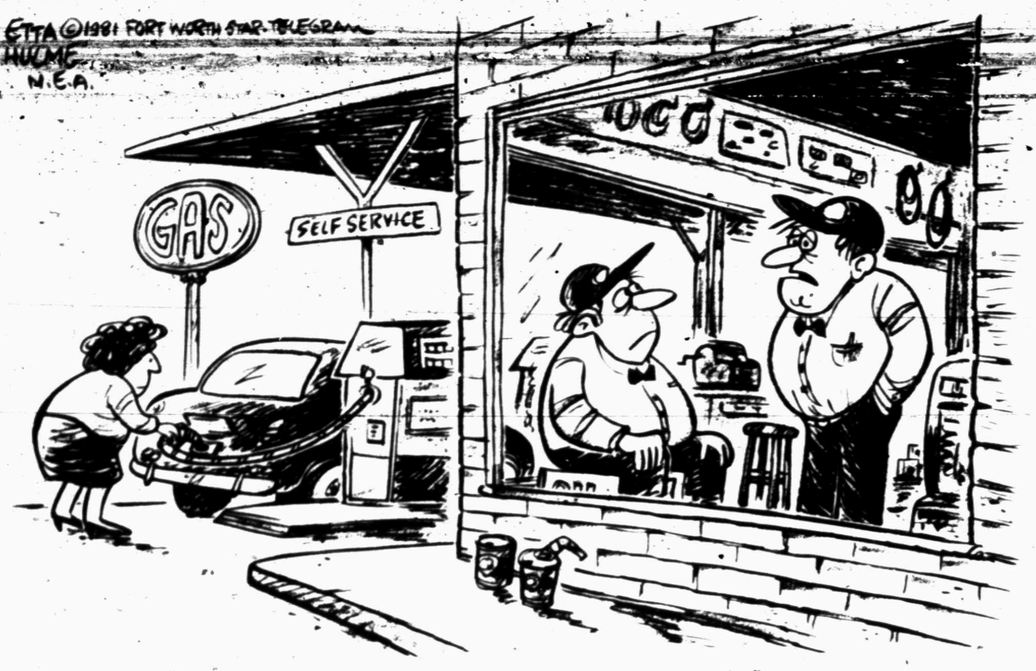

Eeconomists who studied the subject maintain that this is myth, not fact. Charles Hull Wolfe, former President of the American Economic Foundaton in New York City, says that in one way or another as many as 150 million Americans are investors and owners of business-supplying the capital to build facilities and buy equipment and materials.

"If you have a savings account, own shares of stock or life insurance, or are in a pension fund-and that includes most adults-you are helping generate funds invested in business, and you benefit from business profits," Wolfe observes. "Employee pension funds own 35 percent of all equity in U.S. business, and could own 50-60 percent by 1985. As profits go up and down, pension fund income rises and falls, and it becomes easier or more difficult to pay benefits."

"You may not invest in any business directly," Wolfe adds, "but your bank, savings and loan association and pension fund do make such investments, and the more profitable American business is, the more you benefit. There is a positive correlation between profits, wages and employment. As profits rise, so do employment and employee compensation.

Another misconception, Wolfe says, is the notion, revealed by opinion studies, that 30 percent or more of the U.S. families are below the "poverty level"-earn less than $5,786 a year.

The U.S. Census Bureau shows that only 12 percent earn less than $5,786 for a family of four members. The Bureau also reveals that most Americans are fairly well off-in the economic middle class. Forty-four percent of U.S. families earn from $5,786 to $15,000-while another 44 percent earn more than $15,000.

my turn

by shirley a. gorman

This past fall's television season was delayed for several months due to the actors strike which dragged on interminably while intermediaries haggled over such pertinent questions as how much should thespians be paid for their services. Now a second, equally disturbing strike (this time by the Writers Guild) threatens to disrupt still another television season. While both parties struggle to find a solution we--the viewing public--are forced to watch reruns and sometimes even reruns of reruns.

I can't really blame the writers for wanting more money and benefits. After all in these inflation ridden times, every dollar counts. But while all the talks are going on I wish just one script writer would have the courage to say that in addition to more money he or she also want the right to write intelligent, adult scripts and I'm not talking x-rated either.

As an avid television watcher I have been more than a little annoyed at some of the juvenile shows and episodes that have been allowed on the air, while the truly good shows like "Lou Grant", are few and far between.

Basically I think script writers want to write mature, well thought out pieces (if they don't they should be drummed out of the WG) but the problem very often lies with network producers and other assorted personnel who have no idea what a truly good idea or script is and have absolutely no intention of finding out either.

But the line has to be drawn somewhere or else more and more Americans are going to be turning off their television sets, or be turning to cable channels and HBO. A good case in point has been this past season's revamped "Buck Rogers" which, in spite of all the promised changes and improvements, fell far short of the mark. It promised so much and delivered so little because in spite of all the changes (all basically good) the bulk of the scripts were terribly juvenile and not very well thought out. I'm not surprised that the show has not fared well in the ratings. For science fiction to survive on television it has to be very, very good and even then it is in for the fight of its life just to stay on the air. Remember "Star Trek"?

I really do want to see the strike settled and soon because every year I eagerly look forward to the new season hoping that another "Gunsmoke", "Star Trek", or "How The West Was Won" has somehow slipped by unnoticed. But I usually end up being disappointed all over again.

I've always thought it a shame that the "age of the atom" dawned with two hideous nuclear bomb bursts over Japan.

Little wonder some still see this friend as an enemy. Had you first been introduced to electricity by way of the electric chair, doubltess you'd still be afraid to plug the toaster into the socket!

Historians, clergy, military and sociologists will debate forever the Truman decision to use the atomic bomb on Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

There will always be those who say we could have won at less cost and others who will insist that it shortened the war, saved lives.

What I am about to relate will not resolve the issue for everybody, but it does satisfy me.

I respect no chronicler of World War II more than William Manchester. He saw it through the eyes of a Marine and he has researched it with journalistic diligence.

In his book "Goodbye Darkness," he examined the pros and cons of dropping those atomic bombs. Research for that volume and since has satisfied Manchester with the wisdom of Truman's historic decision.

Douglas MacArthur was able--before a battle--to predict with uncanny accuracy how many lives would be lost on both sides.

Time and again in the Pacific campaign his projections proved phenominally precise.

Washington was impressed with the general's insight. President Truman--despite their subsequent falling out--remained awed by MacArthur's tactical genius.

President Truman had asked General MacArthur how many American lives it would cost for our troops to invade and secure the five islands of Imperial Japan.

MacArthur's reply was one million men.

And this much blood would purchase only "the initial phase" of the conquest, because the Japanese were prepared to fight to the very last--a hundred million Japanese, including women and children, were pledged to die.

And they meant it. They had demonstrated on Saipan that they would throw themselves off cliffs rather than surrender.

Also--Hiroshima and Nagasaki were not the worst things that happended to Japan during that war. More Japanese were killed in the fire-bombing raid on Tokyo.

And Machester reminds us also that during MacArthur's five year rule of Japan after the war, his public health innovations saved more Japanese lives than were lost in the entire war.

NEW YORK (AP) — The subterranean economy, that "off the books" part of production that doesn't get reported to the tax man or measured by official statistics, seems to be growing.

That assessment comes from Prof. Peter Gutmann, who in late 1977 created a big to-do when he estimated that more than 10 percent of the gross national product evaded the radar of the income tax people.

Four years ago, the figure was set at close to $200 billion. Now, says Gutmann, it is around $420 billion. Some of that is inflation, but almost every other economic statistic is similarly inflated.

Inflation aside, the gross national product itself grew and, says Guttman, the subterranean, or underground, economy grew even more.

"Sticking to the super-conservative 10-plus percent of the legal output that I estimated for five years ago," Gutmann said last week, "the 1981 figure comes in around $310 billion GNP."

But wait; there's more.

"More realistically," he continued, "making some allowance for faster subterranean than legal growth, as well as omitted items, the subterranean economy is at around $420 billion."

That's quite a figure. If true, it suggests that many of the statistics for unemployment, income, production, savings and what-not are way out of line with reality. It suggests we are living a myth.

It also suggests something that many people will consider a very practical matter in these days of high taxes: The government may be losing hundreds of millions of dollars in income-tax revenues.

In remains difficult for many people to accept the existence of so vast an unreported, unrecorded, untaxed economy. After Gutmann's original estimate was published, the IRS could hardly believe what it saw. It mounted its own study, a study some say was initiated in an attempt to show that no such amount was slipping through its fingers.

The most common types of transactions, Gutmann said at a conference on the underground economy, are "those made illegal only by the practice of tax evasion."

First, he continued, there is the owner or manager of a business who skims some cash off the top of the proceeds. And then, he said, there are businesses that use cash receipts to pay employees off the books.

The latter, he contends, go underground "to save on Social Security taxes, unemployment insurance taxes, various worker benefits, and paperwork costs, or to avoid government regulations."

Next is the business that has cash receipts, and uses the cash to buy supplies. This makes the business seem smaller, and consistent with cash-skimming and cash payments to workers. It may also mean discounts.

Finally, said the professor, who teaches economics and finance at the City University of New York, some businesses, mainly in services, deal wholly in cash, and simply don't exist in official government figures. Drugs, prostitution and loan-sharking would fall into this category.

commentary

In their long history as a nation, the French have experienced just about everything under the political sun with one notable exception.

A government of France such as has emerged from the 1981 elections.

For the first time in many experimentations with representative government, the French have opted for both a powerful leader with a firm popular mandate and a National Assembly under the firm control of a majority party-the president's.

The first situation is no novelty. France has had powerful presidents ever since Charles de Gaulle created the present office to the measure of his own out-sized capabilities and ambitions. But not even de Gaulle enjoyed an outright parliamentary majority. He and his center-right successors relied upon coalitions in the National Assembly.

This suggests that Francois Mitterrand's power and potential impact upon France may exceed that of even de Gaulle, who designed the Fifth Republic's constitution so that the president could govern without the National Assembly should that body prove difficult. But parliamentary agreement is still necessary for a fundamental restructuring of the French society and economy.

And that, of course, is precisely what Mitterrand intends if his campaign declarations are to be taken at face value.

What he has declared he plans for France is a program of extensive nationalization in the financial and industrial sectors of the economy and broad social reforms. If carried through approximately as envisaged, it could amount to a reordering of society through legislation of a significance second only to the revolution that began in 1789. It could, in fact, be the long-delayed completion of that unfinished upheaval.

To hear the French themselves, there now appear to be no serious obstacles to that end. The opposition parties on Mitterrand's right are in disarray and he has his sometime Communist allies precisely where he wants them-in a position of having to accept whatever tokens of power he may choose to share in the new French order or to go without. In the words of a few of the current headlines, "Mitterrand Holds All the Cards" and "Socialism's Hour Has Finally Arrived".

Mitterrand, who has been playing it cautiously initially, may think otherwise himself, however. And with some reason.

The Socialist victory may be if anything too overwhelming. The party, in the political doldrums only a few years ago with some 5 percent of the popular vote, could find its present swollen size a source of weakness rather than strength. Many if not most of the votes that have put president and party into power are borrowed-from Communists, who see their longtime rivals as the best bet at the moment of effecting meaningful reform, and elsewhere. Defections are to be expected if promises are not made good as rapidly as expected or in the form desired.

The party is also divided internally between hard-core leftists who want to proceed full steam toward nationalization and moderates who want to move with caution to avoid alarming less radical elements and uniting the opposition. The possiblities are there for a doctrinal struggle such as may be in the process of destroying the British Labor Party and is seriously weakening the West German Socialists.

Those are problems for the future, however. For the present, the headlines have it right-Mitterrand and his Socialists have it all their way.

Only a few months back, no one, with the possible exception of Mitterrand himself, would have believed this possible. It is a situation foreign to the French experience. Even after the Socialist success in the first round of presidential voting, a reassertion of the innate conservatism of the French and their penchant for fragmenting power was anticipated. The expectation was for an ultimately split vote giving Mitterrand considerably less than total victory.

But the French have been consistent in carrying through what they started. What is now to be determined is exactly what it is that they have started.

Your Birthday

July 4, 1981

There is a strong possibility this coming year that you can develop several new channels to add to your income and resources. What makes it more admirable is that they are apt to be your own creations.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Lady Luck continues to favor you materially, provided you're not looking for something for nothing. She's apt to turn her back on you if you take foolish gambles. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're a take-charge type today. Others will recognize this quality and go along with you, if you don't try to alter the procedures too much.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Conditions are developing in favorable ways which should allow you to fulfill a secret ambition. You'd be wise not to talk about it, however.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) This should be a fun day for you. Things in general will work out to your liking. There is a clinker you may have to contend with, however, and that's your extravagance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If you let matters run their course today, the end result should be very rewarding. Injecting changes might throw conditions off-kilter.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Should you have to make a choice today between spending time with old friends or with newer acquaintances, choose the former. Old pals wear better.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) This is a good day to arrange something sociable with persons you work with, or with those who could give your career a boost. Share time with kindred spirits.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Stick to your original plans today and all should work out smoothly. Making sudden changes in order to accommodate others may spoil everyone's fun.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Frivolous pursuits may provide others with enjoyment today, but you're not apt to be content unless you feel you're doing something constructive.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Seek companions today who are as active and fun-loving as yourself. Try to keep everything on a pure pleasure level. Don't inject serious topics.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Material opportunities could come through persons with whom you are associating today. In your case, business and pleasure make a profitable mix.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You're a bit more daring than your contemporaries today. This is OK, provided you use good judgment. Curb impulses to take erratic risks.

Brent Green, Art Williams and Ted Rose, all faculty members of the Abilene Christian University Art Department, will be included in the Diamond M Museum's contemporary exhibit opening this Sunday afternoon.

Brent Green, head of the department, will be showing boldly colored figurative paintings. His acrylics contain striking complementary and secondary colors, and this combined with his direct manner of paint application produces a captivating image of the individuals he depicts. As a painter, Green has had mural commissions in Austin and Houston.

Cast resin sculptures will be displayed by Art Williams. His figurative sculptures are cast in very limited editions of five, each of the five in a different color. "Though I often cast in bronze and plastic, I am basically a carver; even my approach to castings is to do the original in plaster. . .to carve it out. I enjoy many different shapes; however, the human figure is gradually taking preiminance. . ."

Painter, Ted Rose, will be exhibiting his large non-objective acrylics. His paintings are a combination of slick layers of opulent transparent colors. Many may remember that Rose won First Place in the Palette Club's 1981 Annual Spring Show. Rose has exhibited widely and has been awarded numerous research grants.

Exhibiting artists from Midland include Sara Gilstrap and Warren Taylor, both faculty members at Midland College. Sara Gilstrap will be showing wall hangings and ceramics. She says of her wall hangings, "Fiber art is a means for my creating form in space in which technique, structure and pure design qualities are personal and expressive involvements." Ms. Gilstrap has received numerous commissions for her large tapestries and has been published in "The Weaver's Journal".

Watercolorist Warren Taylor is well established in regional and national exhibitions and has won numerous awards. Taylor's work is very enjoyable and colorful, due in part to his use of the comic strip and fruit as his still life materials. Taylor's style of painting demands a controlled approach and places a lot of emphasis on angles, light and dark contrast and the placement of objects.

John Gibson, interim director of the museum, says this as an important exhibit for Snyder, and feels that everyone should try to see it. "These artists represent the current trends in contemporary art and are the educators of our artists of tommorrow." The Diamond M Museum invites the public to the opening of Contemporary Work by Ten West Texas Artists, Sunday, July 5 from 1 to 4 p.m.

Lady Bird Won't Shop At Commissary Again

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Lady Bird Johnson says she was not aware that Air Force policy did not allow her to shop at a base commissary as she has done for more than a decade.

The former first lady said she began visiting the commissary at Bergstrom Air Force Base in Austin while the late Lyndon B. Johnson was president and was not informed until two weeks ago that the visits were against Department of Defense regulations.

"When Lyndon and I began to use Bergstrom's commissary, I understood it was a privilege we were entitled to. No one ever informed me that it had been withdrawn," Mrs. Johnson said in a statement Thursday.

"Although I have used that privilege less frequently in the past few years, I regret very much to learn that it was not authorized. The information that this privilege was withdrawn reached by office just two weeks ago and I will certainly abide by that regulation."

A spokesman for the Air Force Commissary Service, headquartered at Kelly Air Force Base here, said Thursday that the Johnsons never should have been authorized to use the commissary, but that they had obtained a "green card" during Johnson's presidency allowing them to do so.

"The Department of Defense regulations do not specifically state in any shape, manner or form that the president or immediate family has commissary or exchange privileges. It's not in there at all.

It doesn't address that as an entity. It's a rather lengthy regulation. We've gone over it with a fine tooth comb and we've been to the Department of Defense about it, too, and the president is not addressed," Carl Grubb, deputy director of public affairs for the AFCS, said Thursday.

"The only time a president is authorized for that kind of privilege is if he is, in fact, a retired military officer or retired military person. For instance, Eisenhower had the privilege because he was a five-star general. Of course they never retire, but had he been a four-star general retired he would have had the privilege."

Last month, there were reports that former President Jimmy Carter's staff had inquired if he were entitled to privileges at military bases. However, Jody Powell, Carter's spokesman, said Carter was inquiring only about the policy for former presidents.

Apparently Carter's inquiry led to discovery that Mrs. Johnson had been using the Bergstrom commissary for years and a brief article in the Air Force Times announced her privilege was revoked at Bergstrom.

"The question with Carter came up because he had...seven years active duty. That does not entitle him to commissary privileges at all — only while he's on active duty," Grubb said.

Chicken Salad With Pesto

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press
Food Editor

We constantly find, as you may, how thrifty it is to copycat dishes served in restaurants or bought at "take-out" shops. A recent example turned out delightfully.

For the chicken, we used a 3½ to 4-pound fryer or roaster and cooked it in the solid-bottom upper part of a steamer along with an onion, a celery rib, a pared carrot and some peppercorns. The chicken cooks in about 45 minutes and is delightfully juicy and tender when you bone and skin it. The defatted natural broth that accumulates from the chicken and vegetables is rich and jellied and can go into the freezer for use in a dish other than this salad.

CHICKEN SALAD WITH PESTO AND MAYONNAISE

¼ cup commercial mayonnaise
4 teaspoons pesto, recipe follows
1 cup cooked chicken, cut in 1-inch pieces
2 or 3 cherry tomatoes, halved if small or medium and quartered if large
Salt to taste
Salad greens

Whisk together the mayonnaise and pesto. Add the chicken and tomatoes; mix well. Just before serving, add salt. Serve on salad greens. Makes 1 large serving. Increase proportions as needed.

PESTO

Large clove garlic, peeled
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup knife-shredded (about ¼-inch wide) fresh basil leaves, see Note
¼ cup olive oil
1 tablespoon pine nuts
1-3rd cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese, not packed down

In a food processor with the metal blade and the machine running, drop the garlic through the feed tube and process until finely minced. Stop machine and uncover; add salt, basil, oil, pine nuts and cheese; process until a paste forms. Store in the refrigerator. Stir thoroughly before using. Makes about ½ cup.

Note: Pack down the shredded basil leaves as you measure them, but don't expect them to stay packed down — they will spring up again.

Here is a hand from a high stake rubber bridge game. South and West were top experts. North a wild swinging bidder and East a fair player with conservative tendencies.

In explanation of the bidding, South wasn't really prepared for the horrible dummy that hit the table. South had expected a singleton club or maybe even a void, but he did expect to find the king of spades.

Still, after the diamond lead, South saw that if no one held three spades or five hearts the slam was coming in. He ruffed the diamond, played his ace of spades and started on hearts. When the second high heart held, South was home since he could discard dummy's one club on the third high heart and ruff out East's jack.

West was really annoyed at himself for leading that diamond. He said to South, "I should have known you were void of diamonds. You might have been void of clubs also, but that redouble should have made me lead the club ace."

"Looking back, it is a fine theory," replied South. "But I just doubt if anything could persuade you not to open a diamond. After all, the proof of the pudding is in the eating. I did redouble and you did lead the diamond."

The Louvre Museum was first opened to the public 188 years ago in 1793 by Napoleon. The building was originally a keep, erected in the 13th century, which Francis I transformed into a palace. It became a national museum known as the Musee Napoleon and a large number of confiscated works seized by Napoleon were exhibited. The works were returned to their owners after Napoleon's downfall but the Louvre now contains some of the most celebrated works in the world.

BEAUTY DIGEST

Diane Robbens

Soaking solution

Don't be tempted to beat the summer heat by soaking in an ice-cold tub. Water temperature that low will only make you feel hotter! Instead, run warm water into the tub. Bath water that's about 90 to 99 degrees causes blood vessels to dilate so internal heat can be expelled at the body's surface. You'll feel cool and refreshed for several hours.

A close shave

The more you shave your legs in the summer, the drier they can get. Here's a great trick to keep them soft, smooth and silky. Simply fill a plant mister or an atomizer with baby oil, then gently spray your legs after shaving to seal in natural moisture. You can even spray on some oil whenever you wear shorts. Your legs will have a healthy glow.

A fine line

If you have a hard time adding body to your fine, straight hair, one good suggestion is frequent shampooing. Fine hair goes flat with the slightest bit of oil. Don't bother with cream or lanolin rinses that coat the hair — use a lemon rinse instead. Just add two tablespoons of lemon juice to a cup of water and pour over just-washed hair. Remember, a one-length blunt cut makes fine hair appear fuller; otherwise, try a perm or body wave.

HEALTH
Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Acute pancreatitis

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My mother, age 67, just died from acute pancreatitis. I just don't understand why it happened. I never heard of anyone dying from this. She went into the hospital with abdominal pain and they said she had to have her gallbladder and stones removed. She did but she never recovered from this. In three weeks she was dead. They said she died from acute pancreatitis. Can you tell me just how it kills you?

DEAR READER — It is always a shock when someone close to you dies suddenly or after a short illness. People do die from pancreatitis although many people have chronic or recurrent pancreatitis and live with their illness.

Pancreatitis means inflammation of the pancreas. The pancreas is a long, thin organ with its head encircled by the first loop of your small intestine, just outside your stomach. It forms a juice that contains enzymes for the major part of digestion of your carbohydrates, fats and proteins. That is why I call it your enzyme organ. This is a powerful digestive juice. When it gets out into the meaty tissue of the pancreas itself, it will digest the pancreas, a process that causes inflammation and pain.

There are many causes of pancreatitis and one of these is gallstones. The long tube, called the pancreatic duct, that drains the pancreatic juice into the small intestine empties in the same spot as the bile duct. When a gallstone lodges in the bile duct its pressure shuts off the opening of the pancreatic duct. When the pancreatic juice cannot drain it builds up in the pancreas and starts to leak into its tissue. This starts the digestive and inflammatory process.

The functions of the pancreas and the causes of pancreatitis are discussed in The Health Letter number 11-4, The Pancreas: Your Enzyme Organ, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Death occurs in acute cases when the accompanying shock is so severe that the body can't cope with it.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Would you please explain why women have a rapid gain of weight and the stomach expands into a pot belly after the menstrual flow stops? I had always been underweight and now I find I'm overweight with a large stomach and I really don't know why. I eat and exercise the same as before but I've gained 10 pounds that I don't need in all the wrong places.

DEAR READER — Careful studies have shown that women tend to have a decrease in the size of their muscles at that age. Your muscles use some calories even when you are at rest. The loss of muscle cells decreases the number of calories your body needs even at rest. The decreased calorie need, combined with eating and exercising as usual, results in a surplus of calories that eventually results in body fat.

All of this means that as a woman approaches the change in life she needs an exercise program that includes enough strength-type exercises to maintain the size of her body muscles. If she can't do that she must exercise more or consume fewer calories if she wants to avoid the middle-aged spread.

Gas Prices Cheaper This Weekend

FLOYD NORRIS
Associated Press Writer

Americans hitting the highway this Fourth of July weekend will find a revolutionary development: lower prices at the filling station.

Nearly every major refiner has cut prices the past two weeks — some by up to 3 cents a gallon — an extraordinary occurrence because prices traditionally rise a penny or two in the days before a major summer holiday, as companies seek to profit from vacation travelers.

But there is a glut of gasoline this year, and competition is fierce in some areas. More drivers are staying home or taking shorter trips, and gasoline use is down significantly from last year.

"There have never historically been such cuts before the Fourth of July," said Dan Lundberg, whose Los Angeles-based newsletter follows gasoline prices.

Drivers on the West Coast are not seeing such good news, however. Prices have been climbing slowly there as consumption has dropped by much smaller amounts than in the East and Midwest.

Chevron USA cut wholesale prices as much as 2.5 cents a gallon in selected sections of the country today, following reductions of up to 2 cents by Shell Oil Co. and 1.5 cents by Cities Service Co. on Thursday.

But Mobil Corp. this week raised its prices 1 cent a gallon in all states west of the Rocky Mountains except Arizona.

In most of the country, prices generally are lower. Exxon Corp. has dropped prices as much as 3.1 cents a gallon.

The moves mirror those before the last holiday, Memorial Day. In California, according to Lundberg, retail gasoline prices rose an average half-cent a gallon, while in the country as a whole there was a reduction of the same amount.

Overall, gasoline prices last month were down about 2.5 cents from the peak in March. The slide has come as high oil production in Saudi Arabia has helped reduce prices in the world market for crude oil.

A number of oil-exporting countries have tried to buck the trend and have been rewarded with rapidly declining sales of oil as companies cancel contracts or reduce purchases.

On Thursday, Conoco Inc. canceled its purchases from Libya, and Exxon said it would "significantly reduce" its purchases from the North African country, despite a $1.10-per-barrel reduction earlier in the week in Libya's oil price. British Petroleum previously canceled Libyan purchases.

Cie. Francaise des Petroles, one of France's two major oil companies, said it would not import Mexican crude during the third quarter of 1981, following a similar action by Exxon. Mexico raised its oil price $2 a barrel Wednesday.

Jaycees Slate Fishing Rodeo

The Snyder Jaycees remind all children 12 and under that they are invited to participate in the annual July 4th Fishing Rodeo.

Those wishing to enter should gather at the east end of the pond in Towle Park and be ready to begin at 9:30 a.m. Saturday.

Four trophies will be awarded. The big prize will go to the person catching the biggest fish. Three trophies will be given to the next three persons catching the most fish.

BIRTHS

Maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Bill Rylander, Jr. of Snyder and paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. C.W. Brown of Ira.

Great-grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Joe Rylander, Sr. and Mrs. Mildred Richardson, all of Snyder.

Ventriliquist Set To Perform

Joyce Jordan is a housewife and mother of two boys and two dummies. That's because she is a ventriloquist, but you will never hear her refer to either Trixie or George as dummies.

In fact, Joyce says that Trixie is her "adopted daughter" and George...well, he's just a big fluffy, cute and very shy orangutan.

The trio travels throughout the states holding children's crusades, youth camps, camp meetings, teacher training conferences and banquets as well as personal appearances on television.

They will be at the Ira church of God July 6-8 from 9 a. m. to 11 a. m. for Vacation Bible School. There will be Bible stories, contests, magic and refreshments. Youngsters between the ages of three and 13 are invited to attend.

Manhunt Begins For Terrorists

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — All Iranian citizens have been ordered by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini to help in a nationwide manhunt for "counter-revolutionaries."

"Today everyone must be an information outfit," Khomeini said Thursday in a speech broadcast on Tehran Radio. "It is the duty of the people to open their eyes and ears. We all have the duty of reporting any saboteur we discover to revolutionary authorities, to security or military forces or to courts."

Khomeini was speaking to families of the 72 people killed in the bombing of the Islamic Revolutionary Party headquarters on Sunday.

"We must not forget that we are at war with America," he said. "We are at war with America and the leftovers of America. We have to purge the country from the leftovers of America and Russia."

Tehran Radio said 17 more leftists were executed Thursday, raising to 89 the number of people Iran has announced have been shot by firing squads in the past two weeks.

A similar fate may await 50 other leftists rounded up for allegedly plotting to blow up the Majlis, or Parliament building in Tehran.

Members of the main Iranian leftist groups, Fadayeen Khalq and Mujahedeen Khalq, occupied the Iranian consulate in Paris for three hours Thursday to protest the executions. The masked, unarmed protesters sprinted away, their arms linked, after ending the occupation.

"There was not much resistence when we walked in," said a spokesman for the leftists who declined to identify himself. "The consulate workers left after we arrived. We didn't try to keep them. Our protest isn't against the Iranian people but against the Islamic regime."

Dear Abby

Widow's 'Knowledge' Hasn't Set Her Free

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Roy and I had a long and happy marriage. Shortly after we were married, I asked him if he had ever had sex with anyone else. He said yes, before he knew me. Then he told me her name was Maggie. He said he had gone to her home to take out her sister, but she had stood him up, so just to get even, he took out Maggie, and that's when it happened. Roy said they were both in their teens.

Roy is dead now, and I recall that there was a basket of flowers at his funeral with a card signed, "From a friend." I have a feeling they were from Maggie. It never bothered me while Roy was living, but it bothers me now. Maggie lives near me. She is also a widow. Whenever I see her I have this nagging urge to tell her that I knew what happened between her and Roy, even though it was before he knew me.

Is there any way I can get rid of this nagging urge?

TROUBLED

DEAR TROUBLED: Try not to dwell on it. And if you find yourself painfully preoccupied with this incident, which has absolutely no significance or importance now, see a therapist and talk it out of your system. No purpose would be served by telling Maggie that you "know."

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow (63) who would like to marry again, but I'm not desperate. I met a widower two years ago who begged me to go out with him. At first I wouldn't go because although he is good and kindhearted, he is very careless about himself. He finally broke me down and I went out with him, but I had to ask him to please take a bath because we were going someplace special. Before I accepted another date with him, I bought a deodorant and asked him to use it. Even though he says he bathes regularly, I can't believe it. If he does, he puts the same dirty socks and underwear on, because the man is just not clean, and he smells terrible!

When he wears a suit, there are stains all over it. He says he loves me and wants to marry me, but how can I marry a man who smells so bad nobody wants to sit down next to him?

If it weren't for this one fault, he would make a good husband because he is good company and a kind person. I told him several times what is wrong with him, but he refuses to believe it. Maybe if you print my letter he will take the hint and clean up. He's in his middle 60s — too young to be going senile. What is wrong with him, Abby?

FUSSY WIDOW

DEAR FUSSY: He is either lazy or stingy. (Maybe both.) Don't expect this letter to work a miracle. If you've told him and it made no impression, he's a lost cause. Pity. Worse yet, a dirty shame.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from WEAK IN ILLINOIS, who went from one adulterous affair to another, could have been written by me. I am an honest and decent woman in every other aspect of my living, so the only explanation I have for my promiscuous sexual behavior is that I am oversexed.

Women who are undersexed (or frigid) are at least socially acceptable, but the oversexed woman, referred to as a nymphomaniac, gets absolutely no sympathy. Worse yet, she is looked down upon as the lowest form of humanity, to be shunned, ridiculed and despised.

I have been this way since my teens. I tried psychotherapy for several years but it didn't help. I wish I could control this terrible sex drive.

The idea of an Adulterers Anonymous is a good one. Just being able to talk to someone who has the same weakness would be a big help.

For Hostages' Release...

High Court Approves Agreement

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, taking just eight days to approve an agreement that took 444 days to achieve, is deferring to presidential authority in international crises and allowing the next stage of the Iranian hostage accord to go forward.

The unanimous decision Thursday clears the way for the transfer by July 19 of $2.3 billion in Iranian assets to Iran and an international tribunal, which will decide claims against Iran.

But the court left open the possibility that some of those claims might still be settled in the U.S. Court of Claims.

Just moments after the decision, the Treasury Department announced it would issue regulations Monday requiring that Iranian assets which remain in U.S. banks be transferred to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York in preparation for delivery to a foreign central bank. No further details were disclosed.

Acknowledging that the issues struck at the very heart of American government, the high court deferred to then-President Carter's efforts to win obtain the release of the 52 American hostages last Jan. 20.

"The questions presented by this case touch fundamentally upon the manner in which our republic is to be governed," Justice William H. Rehnquist wrote for the court, which heard oral arguments in the case on June 24.

And while emphasizing that the time pressures forced a decision on the narrowest possible grounds, Rehnquist made it clear that the court will think twice about second-guessing the nation's chief executive in an international crisis.

Rehnquist said the court's intrusions into the day-to-day issues confronting both the president and the Congress have been "rare, episodic, and afford little precedential value for subsequent cases."

Rehnquist said Carter's authority to enter into the hostage accord was embodied in a composite of powers granted by the lawmakers, rather than in one specific congressional act.

"Crucial to our decision today is the conclusion that Congress has implicitly approved the practice of claim settlement by executive agreement," Rehnquist wrote.

The court made it clear that firms and individuals with claims against Iran who cannot get satisfaction from the international tribunal may take their disputes to the U.S. Court of Claims, on the grounds that the hostage accord resulted in an unjust taking of property by the U.S. government.

Under the agreement, $1 billion of the assets to be transferred by July 19 are to go to the jurisdiction of the tribunal for claims-settlement purposes.

The nine-member tribunal held a series of organizational meetings this week in The Hague, as it prepared to hear more than 2,200 claims against Iran.

Oldest Graduate Becomes Lawyer

HOUSTON (AP) — Most members of the Texas Young Lawyers Association are forced out when they reach the ripe old age of 35. But Willie Kocurek of Austin is an exception to that rule.

At age 70, he still gets to be a member because of a rule that allows lawyers in the club for three years after they pass the bar exam.

Kocurek did that two months ago, and today he is an inspiration to anyone 40 or older harboring secret desires of changing careers.

Kocurek, a former appliance merchant, is the oldest person ever to graduate from the University of Texas law school. He was in Houston for this week's State Bar of Texas convention.

"I moved to Austin 52 years ago to become a lawyer," Kocurek said. "There were sidetracks in the meantime."

The main "sidetrack" was Kocurek's appliance store, which he owned in Austin for 50 years and used advertising to make the public familiar with his slogan "You don't need money — just a little bit a month."

He said he tried once before to start law school, 10 years after he graduated in 1933 from UT's business school. But a war was in progress, and after one semester he was drafted into the Navy.

"But that one semester gave me permission to get back in," Kocurek said. After the war he said he was unable to arrange a schedule to allow for both working and law school, and with a wife and kids, he decided his dream of becoming a lawyer would have to wait.

Then "three years ago we said 50 years in one business is enough. We are now in the second 50-year span business," Kocurek said. He said going back to school was "purely an ego trip we didn't want to let life pass without doing."

He said he had no trouble getting along with younger professors and students. Kocurek said he and his wife attended all of the school's social functions, including an annual event called "The Fall Drunk."

Kocurek says he is opening a law office with two of his younger classmates, aged 60 and 50. Both went to law school after retiring from the military as colonels with more than 30 years of service.

He said there were advantages to being 70 years old — for one thing you don't have to pay the $65 annual dues to the State Bar because lawyers 70 and older are exempt.

So when Kocurek and other attorneys were sworn into the bar in May, Chief Justice Joe Greenhill said Kocurek was "practicing his old philosophy — 'you don't need money.'"

Snyder Police Probe Damage To Tile Fence

A tile fence by the swimming pool at the Purple Sage Motel was hit by an unknown vehicle early Thursday morning. Damage to the fence was not immediately known. Officer Robert Harbin took the report.

Several police units responded to a call at 3 p.m. at G&G Grocery on the Clairemont Road of gunshots being fired through the back door to the business. Upon the officers' arrival, it was discovered that what the caller heard was a car backfiring, and the hole she saw in the door had been there for quite some time. Taking that report were Sgt. Dale Burns and officer Richard McCulley.

Sgt. Scogin worked a wreck at the traffic circle at 4:52 p.m. Involved was a 1973 Chevrolet driven by Mildred White, and a 1977 Mercury driven by Rhonda Perkins. The vehicles received minor to moderate damage but there were no injuries.

Tony Fernandez at 2409 26th St., reported the theft of a 1964 Plymouth, license SCK-481, from in front of his residence. Although he reported the theft at 8:15 p.m. Thursday, he said the theft occurred Monday and that the vehicle was not in running order and would have to be towed away. Investigating was officer Don Cheek.

At 1:48 a.m. Friday, a prowler was reported at 4504 Houston. Police reports indicate someone had opened a window and tried to get in. Responding to the call was officer Tony Pantoja.

Officer Kerry Fritz took a 24 year-old man into custody in the 5100 block of College Ave. for driving while intoxicated at 2:36 a.m.

At 5:10 a.m., Clint Cook, a driver for Mrs. Baird's Bakery, requested an officer and an ambulance when he noticed a man lying on the ground outside the Wild Country Club. The man found on the ground said he'd been in a fight. He was treated and released at Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

Probations Are Revoked

Three persons had their probation revoked in 132nd District Court Thursday after their arrest for possession of marijuana, less than two ounces, a misdemeanor.

Florence Lee Banta and Marlan Clinton Banta Jr., had three year probations revoked. They had been on probation since August 1980 for possession of marijuana, less than two ounces.

Thomas Maurice Blackerby, on probation for two years for burglary with intent to commit theft since Feb. 1981, had it revoked.

Felonly Charges Are Filed Here

Felony charges of driving while intoxicated have been filed in District Attorney Pete Greene's office against Silvero R. Guerrero.

Grass Fire

Snyder firefighters extinguished a grass fire at 33rd and Ave. G during the noon hour Thursday.

Company Gives MX Alternatives

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Boeing Co. says it has briefed a Defense Department advisory committee on small-missile alternative to the proposed MX missile system under consideration by the Pentagon.

Bill Jury, the firm's spokesman on military matters, made the statement in response to a Washington Post story today saying that Boeing has told the Pentagon and some congressmen it could begin deploying 3,350 Small Intercontinental Missiles, each weighing 11 tons, by 1986.

Jury said the Pentagon briefing was given to a special panel appointed by Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger to study the MX system, which would have 200 91-ton, 10-warhead missiles deployed on a rotating basis among 4,600 silos in Nevada and Utah.

Masked Thieves Steal A Million In Jewelry

LONDON (AP) — Masked raiders invaded London's prestigious Cartier's jewelry store after hours Thursday night, sprayed ammonia in the faces of two security guards and got away with as much as $1.88 million worth of gems, Scotland Yard said today.

"They escaped and we are still trying to establish how they got in," a Scotland Yard spokesman told The Associated Press.

He said the raiders, who might have been armed, broke into the exclusive New Bond Street store in London's Mayfair district at 9.30 p.m., setting off burglar alarms at both the local police station and Scotland Yard headquarters.

In addition to being sprayed with ammonia, both security guards were hit on the head, police said. One guard remained in a London hospital today and the other was released, but police said neither man was seriously hurt.

The store was closed today while members of the staff took inventory in an effort to determine exactly what was missing.

Company spokesmen declined immediate comment and said it might take all day to establish how much jewelry was stolen.

Despite the robbery, members of the staff followed tradition, filling the usually glittering windows of the 77-year-old store with displays of sapphire, emerald and diamond jewelry.

"Our impression is that as much a 1 million pounds (the equivalent of $1.88 million) worth of jewelry has been stolen," the Scotland Yard spokesman said. "We understand it's certainly not more than that and could be less."

The thieves missed two wedding gifts destined for Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer — including a valuable clock — because they had been taken from the store for display at a charity exhibition in the Belgravia district to raise funds for the International Year of the Disabled.

A security van sent to return the gifts to Cartier's at the close of the exhibition arrived soon after the raid.

"Our guards packed up the exhibits and took them to Cartier," said a spokesman for the security firm, Securicor.

"When they arrived they found the building surrounded by police...The exhibition boxes were taken to a security vault and locked away."

Cartier, which has stores in Paris and New York, was founded in Paris in 1847 by jeweler Louis-Francois Cartier, and developed as an international house by his grandsons Louis, Pierre and Jacques.

Cartier's New Bond Street showrooms, located in a street which contains other well-known jewelers, were opened in 1902.

Callers Keep Radio Show On The Air

Editor's Note: Alvin Van Black says he doesn't even like to talk on the telephone. Nevertheless, he's taken some 130,000 phone calls as one of the most popular and controversial radio talk show hosts in the country.

—— By ANDREW M. WILLIAMS Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — A man telephones Alvin Van Black to complain about being summoned for jury duty the day after he took his 85-year-old uncle to the hospital, and thousands of people are eavesdropping.

The thrill those people get from listening in on someone else's conversation, Van Black says, is what has kept him in the radio talk show business for 13 years.

Van Black says the key to success with a phone-in program is letting a few people entertain a great many. He says there is a very distinct difference between his callers and his listeners.

"Only a tiny few will call," he says. "Why, you'd burn in hell before you'd call."

With that comment, Van Black begins to warm to his subject. His voice rises to near a yell and he waves his arms about.

"I just can't imagine stopping my car and getting into a tin phone booth and spending a quarter just to yell about some topic," said Van Black, a large man who spends much of his time sitting But because he moves about in his chair so much, he could not be called sedentary.

About a quarter of the approximately 50 people he talks to each day are regulars, Van Black says, "people who just can't let a day go by without putting their two cents in."

"I don't know how, with 2 ½ million people in this town, I keep talking to the same people."

Talking or listening, people are turning to talk radio. Jack London, program director for KPRC, says his hosts Van Black and David Fowler lead Houston's mid-day AM ratings.

Talk is KPRC's mainstay. Van Black's three-hour afternoon show is part of 9 ½ hours a day of phone-in programming.

One single, technical fact is largely responsible for all this chatter, London says. AM radio's relatively poor sound quality makes it difficult to compete with FM stations for music audiences.

Van Black figures he's talked to as many callers as any talk show host in Texas.

"I've got 130,000-something calls now — that's approaching three full Astrodomes," he says.

Before any of those callers talked to Van Black, they talked to the show's producer, who determined they were coherent — not too drunk, not too crazy.

Don has passed the producer's inspection. "Don is on line three," the producer says to Van Black, who hears him in one side of a headphone set. In the other ear, a man has been complaining that he was not allowed to pay cash for a traffic violation in a Houston suburb.

Van Black advises the man to talk to the attorney general's office, then turns to his new caller.

"Hello, Don," Van Black says, and Don begins to criticize a previous caller, a woman who had been upset by the NAACP's reception of President Reagan.

Van Black agrees with Don. Earlier, he had lambasted the woman after she suggested there is too much freedom in this country when blacks are rude to a Republican president after Lincoln set them free.

Through all of this, a six- to seven-second lag between talk and broadcast lets Van Black act as his own censor. His conscience is his guide, and what gets bleeped depends partly on who the caller is.

"A lot of old men can't talk without putting 'damn' in all the time," he explains.

Fame has its drawbacks, especially when it is gained largely by arguing with strangers.

Van Black, who shifts in his chair and flails his arms even when speaking mundane sentences, fairly shrieks when he talks about "Crazy people! I get thousands of letters from crazy people!

"There are about 50 boxes of these things around here — they're a horrible fire hazard, they're a storage problem ..."

Some of the letters are threats. "You know, burn your house down, punch you out ..."

Many of the callers are crazy as well.

"They sound just as lucid and clear," Van Black says, shaking his head.

"There's one little old lady who's wrapped her house in metal foil because the Chinese Communists are bombarding her with microwaves to get secrets out off her brain. That's a pretty common one.

"You can't believe how many CIA operatives we have here," he continues, sarcastically.

Callers Keep Radio Show On The Air

Editor's Note: Alvin Van Black says he doesn't even like to talk on the telephone. Nevertheless, he's taken some 130,000 phone calls as one of the most popular and controversial radio talk show hosts in the country.

—— By ANDREW M. WILLIAMS Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — A man telephones Alvin Van Black to complain about being summoned for jury duty the day after he took his 85-year-old uncle to the hospital, and thousands of people are eavesdropping.

The thrill those people get from listening in on someone else's conversation, Van Black says, is what has kept him in the radio talk show business for 13 years.

Van Black says the key to success with a phone-in program is letting a few people entertain a great many. He says there is a very distinct difference between his callers and his listeners.

"Only a tiny few will call," he says. "Why, you'd burn in hell before you'd call."

With that comment, Van Black begins to warm to his subject. His voice rises to near a yell and he waves his arms about.

"I just can't imagine stopping my car and getting into a tin phone booth and spending a quarter just to yell about some topic," said Van Black, a large man who spends much of his time sitting. But because he moves about in his chair so much, he could not be called sedentary.

About a quarter of the approximately 50 people he talks to each day are regulars, Van Black says, "people who just can't let a day go by without putting their two cents in."

"I don't know how, with 2 ½ million people in this town, I keep talking to the same people."

Talking or listening, people are turning to talk radio. Jack London, program director for KPRC, says his hosts Van Black and David Fowler lead Houston's mid-day AM ratings.

Talk is KPRC's mainstay. Van Black's three-hour afternoon show is part of 9 ½ hours a day of phone-in programming.

One single, technical fact is largely responsible for all this chatter, London says. AM radio's relatively poor sound quality makes it difficult to compete with FM stations for music audiences.

Van Black figures he's talked to as many callers as any talk show host in Texas.

"I've got 130,000-something calls now — that's approaching three full Astrodomes," he says.

Before any of those callers talked to Van Black, they talked to the show's producer, who determined they were coherent — not too drunk, not too crazy.

Don has passed the producer's inspection. "Don is on line three," the producer says to Van Black, who hears him in one side of a headphone set. In the other ear, a man has been complaining that he was not allowed to pay cash for a traffic violation in a Houston suburb.

Van Black advises the man to talk to the attorney general's office, then turns to his new caller.

"Hello, Don," Van Black says, and Don begins to criticize a previous caller, a woman who had been upset by the NAACP's reception of President Reagan.

Van Black agrees with Don. Earlier, he had lambasted the woman after she suggested there is too much freedom in this country when blacks are rude to a Republican president after Lincoln set them free.

Through all of this, a six-to seven-second lag between talk and broadcast lets Van Black act as his own censor. His conscience is his guide, and what gets bleeped depends partly on who the caller is.

"A lot of old men can't talk without putting 'damn' in all the time," he explains.

Fame has its drawbacks, especially when it is gained largely by arguing with strangers.

Van Black, who shifts in his chair and flails his arms even when speaking mundane sentences, fairly shrieks when he talks about "Crazy people! I get thousands of letters from crazy people!

"There are about 50 boxes of these things around here — they're a horrible fire hazard, they're a storage problem ..."

Some of the letters are threats. "You know, burn your house down, punch you out ..."

Many of the callers are crazy as well.

"They sound just as lucid and clear," Van Black says, shaking his head.

"There's one little old lady who's wrapped her house in metal foil because the Chinese Communists are bombarding her with microwaves to get secrets out off her brain. That's a pretty common one.

"You can't believe how many CIA operatives we have here," he continues, sarcastically.

Borg Rallies To Defeat Connoors...

Dramatic Day At Wimbledon Net Championships

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - After one of the most dramatic days in the 104-year history of the All-England Tennis Championships, everything ended as expected.

Bjorn Borg, bidding for a sixth straight Wimbledon title, will face pugnacious John McEnroe in the men's singles final Saturday, a renewal of last year's five-set epic.

Before that was settled Thursday evening, there were tantrums from McEnroe on court, an attack on the British press from him off court, a fight between reporters in the press interview room and a dramatic comeback by the amazing Swede, Borg.

McEnroe defeated Rod Frawley, an unseeded Australian, 7-6, 6-4, 7-5 and Borg downed third-seeded Jimmy Connors 0-6, 4-6, 6-3, 6-0, 6-4 in a 3½-hour tussle to clinch his place in the final.

It seemed impossible there could be anything more thrilling than McEnroe's battle to overcome the brave, determined Frawley and his own explosive temperament.

Frawley, ranked 12th in the world, made Mighty Mac battle for every point.

McEnroe was given a warning for unsportsmanlike behavior and a point penalty and he was involved in a series of stormy clashes with the umpire.

It was even more stormy in the interview room afterward when McEnroe attacked the British press [illegible] regarding his private life.

The fiery New Yorker left-hander, given a rough time by the British press throughout the tournament, accused the newspapermen of being "trash" and "liars." He then stormed out of the interview room as a news reporter interrupted a further question on tennis.

The press, stunned by McEnroe's sudden departure, then proceeded to bicker among themselves, and two irate reporters ended up rolling on the ground as others looked on in amazement.

McEnroe regained his composure, however, and went on to win a men's doubles semifinal with his partner, Peter Fleming.

Borg, meanwhile, fell two sets behind against Connors, who was playing like a man inspired.

"I was lucky to survive," the 25-year-old Borg admitted after clawing his way back into the contest with yet another display of guts and determination.

Connors, as if exhausted by his early brilliance, slacked off just a little. That was all the encouragement Borg needed.

ATTEND INSTITUTE - Aikido students from Western Texas College attended the United States Aikido Instructor's Institute in Houston recently. On the back row are Robby Freyer and Russell Johnson from WTC, Lee Burke, WTC health and physical education director, and Leon Smith. All students were promoted to Nikyu, 2nd degree brown belt except Kupatt, who was promoted to Sankyu, 3rd class brown belt. (WTC Photo)

Lloyd Captures Her Third Title

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - Top-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd defeated second-seeded Hana Madlikova of Czechoslovakia 6-2, 6-2 today and won her third women's singles crown at the Wimbledon Tennis Chamionships.

Lloyd also won the title in 1974 and 1976, and had been runnerup for the last three years.

The loss spoiled Mandlikova's bid for a Grand Slam. The 19-year-old Czechoslovakian had won the Australian Open last December and the French Open last month.

For Lloyd, who was playing in her seventh final, victory was a must to prevent her from feeling she has not fulfilled her potential at the world's greatest grass court tournament.

In her six previous finals, Evert Lloyd has won only twice - in 1974 and 1976. She has lost in the final for the past three years.

That knowledge was a major motivating factor when the Fort Lauderdale, Fla., baseliner faced Mandlikova.

The lean, powerful Czechoslovakian girl has matured rapidly in the past year, winning the Australian and French Open titles and defeating Lloyd in the semis in Paris.

It also must have been in the back of Lloyd's mind that this might have been her last chance to win Wimbledon.

She frequently has stated her desire to follow in the footsteps of last year's champion, Evonne Goolagong, and start a family.

All that is in the future for 19-year-old Mandlikova.

Her goal is to become the top tennis player in the world, and she underlined the correctness of her No. 2 seeding by defeating her compatriot, Martina Navratilova, in a three-set semifinal Wednesday.

Chambers Dies In Auto Wreck

HAMMOND, La. (AP) - Linebacker Rusty Chambers, the Miami Dolphins' leading tackler for two straight seasons, and another man were killed in an auto accident, police said.

Also killed in the accident, just before midnight Wednesday, was Michael Piazza, 28, of Hammond. Robert T. Hudson, 29, of Hammond, was seriously injured.

District Fire Chief Joe Costa said all three men were trapped in the wreckage after the car slammed into a culvert and overturned. He said he had to use special equipment to free the victims.

Chambers, 27, was signed as a free agent by the New Orleans Saints in 1976, then was claimed on waivers by the Dolphins that year.

In 1978, Chambers totaled 151 tackles, followed by 178 in 1979, both team-leading totals.

'Going Around In Circles'...

Talks Break, Resume Saturday

NEW YORK (AP) - Major league baseball will mark the Fourth of July, traditionally one of the biggest dates on the sport's calendar, with strike negotiations instead of ball games.

Federal mediator Kenneth Moffett has recessed until Saturday, July 4, stalemated talks in the players strike, which entered its fourth week today.

The two sides met at the bargaining table for about 90 minutes Thursday with no discernable progress on the issue of free agent compensation.

"We're going around in circles," said Mark Belanger of the Baltimore Orioles. "It's the same stuff every day. It went as you might expect. Certainly, there was no progress."

But Reggie Jackson of the New York Yankees preferred a more positive view of Thursday's talks.

"Nothing happened, but it seemed as though they were saying, 'Let's hear what you have to have and we'll tell you what we have to have to a settlement. Maybe I'm wrong,' he said. "At least today people were saying, 'Where can we go from here? Can we do anything?' It doesn't mean we're near a settlement, but it seemed they wanted to listen more today. I didn't feel they listened before. Listening and hearing are two different things."

Donald Fehr, general counsel of the Major League Players Association, smiled at Jackson's description of the meeting.

"If he means people were not screaming at each other, he's right," the attorney said. "That happens often. But the tone of the meeting was no different as far as I was concerned. Their position is, 'Please accept our proposal that the number six-teen player be used for compensation paid for by the club signing the free agent.' I don't detect anything that happened that we're one step closer."

Pooley's 68 Captures Early Lead At Western

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) - Don Pooley considers himself "a good bunker player," but claims "nobody holes out from a bunker too often."

Admitting "I played well until the last five holes when I scrambled well," Pooley not only holed out from the bunker on his final shot Thursday but also blasted his way into the first-round lead of the 78th Western Open over awesome and rugged Butler National.

Playing the back nine first and going out in 35 with two birdies and a bogey, Pooley came in with a 33 for a 4-under-par 68, edging Greg Powers, Jim Simons, Bill Rogers and Joe Inman, who tied at 69.

"I had a good drive," said Pooley of the final hole "which left me 175 yards away. I hit a 4-iron into the trap. I blasted out from about 60 feet, saw the ball take three bounces and go into the hole. I couldn't believe it. I was just trying to get it up and down for a share of the lead.

"Yes, I knew I had taken the lead when the ball went in," said the 29-year-old from Arizona, whose only victory on the tour came in the B.C. Open at Endicott, N.Y. last year when he earned $157,000 to end up 18th on the money list.

Simons and Rogers played morning rounds. So did Lee Trevino, who shot 71 and was tied with seven others.

Also playing a morning round was Jack Nicklaus, who shot a 3-over-par 75 but vowed, "I'll play better tomorrow. My objective tomorrow is not to make the cut but to get back into the golf tournament. A good round can put you right back on a tough course and this is a tough course."

Yet, 13 players smashed par in the opening round including Mike Peck, Andy North, Mike Reid, Tom Jenkins, J.C. Snead, Bob Beauchemin and Jim Colbert, all of whom matched Trevino's 71. Ten others equalled par over the 7,097-yard, tree-lined course with meandering Salt Creek and Teal Lake adding to the numerous water hazards.

Pair Locked In Jackson Classic

DORION, Que. (AP) - Sandra Haynie and Janet Coles carded 4-under-par 68s to share the first-round lead in the $200,000 LPGA Peter Jackson Classic.

Pat Bradley, Rosey Bartlett, Marlene Hagge and Jan Stephenson came in with 3-under-par 69s to share the second spot.

The University of Pittsburgh won numerical honors in the 1981 NFL draft with 12 players chosen.

Reihner Parts With Houston

HOUSTON (AP) - Houston Oiler guard George Reihner knew his retirement from pro football would come sooner or later but he thought it would be later.

There's no way in the world anybody could have told me I wouldn't play for 10 years and be right up there with the big names," Reihner said Thursday after ending his brief but promising career to devote fulltime to his law studies.

Reihner came to the Oilers as a No. 2 draft choice in 1977 and immediately earned a starting position and post-season rookie honors. But a knee injury late in the 1978 season started his downfall.

Reihner, a three-year starter at Penn State, reinjured the knee during the 1979 preseason and has not played since. He said, however, his injuries did not force him out of the game.

"If I was making a legitimate sum of money playing football I couldn't walk away from it," Reihner said. "I was unfortunate to be injured at the end of a contract so I don't have much bargaining position.

"I made a purely business decision. It's difficult to do two things well and I'm a person who doesn't like to slide by. With the money I was making, I didn't think it was enough to keep me from going to law school full time."

Pull To Begin At 7 Tonight

Snyder's Fourth of July celebrations get underway a few hours early tonight when a large crowd is expected to attend the annual tractor pull at the rodeo grounds.

The two-day pull is being held nightly at the old arena, starting at 7 o'clock both tonight and Saturday.

A number of area and local pullers are expected to participate in the competition, which will include drivers from several states.

Among the local and area contestants expected are Jesse Allen, Manuel Garcia, Eldon Kirkpatrick, Larry Lee, Royce Patterson, Tommy Patterson, David Shifflett, Ernest Shifflett, Curtis Stipe, Bill Freeman, the Kenny K Pulling Team, the J&J Pulling Team and the B&B Pulling Team.

Tickets are $4 for adults and $2 for children under age 12.

Co-Drivers Win Race

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) - Amos Johnson and Roger Mandeville, co-driving a Mazda RX-3, outraced a Mazda driven by Jim Downing and Tom Waugh to the finish line to win the Daytona 6 Hours Champion Spark Plug Challenge Thursday night at Daytona International Speedway.

Johnson brought the car across the finish line about 15 seconds ahead of the second-place car, after completing 152 laps and totalling 597.84 miles.
