Candidates spar as Southern primaries loom

Poll finds unease among Texas voters

By Max Baker and Jack Z. Smith
N.Y. Times News Service

In 1984, it was still a safe, simple question for incumbent President Reagan, who had first used it to score points in a memorable presidential debate.

Four years later, it remained a safe bet for presidential candidate George Bush. It was a question on which voters could immediately focus and gauge their plight and their choices: "Are you better off today than you were four years ago?"

But in a 1992 election campaign that seems certain to be dominated by far-ranging economic concerns, the question may come back to haunt President Bush in his adoptive home state.

Only a third of those expected to vote in the primary March 10 believe their economic standing has improved during Bush's ■ Democrats' in-fighting overshadows Buchanan attacks.

By Ron Hutcheson
N.Y. Times News Service

ATLANTA — Despite pleas for peace, the bare-knuckles fight for the Democratic presidential nomination escalated as decorated Vietnam War veteran Bob Kerrey bluntly confronted Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton over his 1969 draft deferment.

In a debate Sunday at Former President Jimmy Carter's presidential library in Atlanta, the Nebraska senator challenged Clinton to justify his failure to join the military or volunteer for some alternative national service.

The renewed attacks on Clinton, which included negative ads against him aimed at Georgia's black community, came as Republican challenger Pat Buchanan continued his harsh criticism of Presi-

Study: Trade pact to add 130,000 jobs

■ Agreement to improve U.S. trade balance by about $10 billion, group says.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Free trade with Mexico will add 130,000 jobs in the United States, even after subtracting 112,000 jobs dislocated by imports from south of the border, a new study concludes.

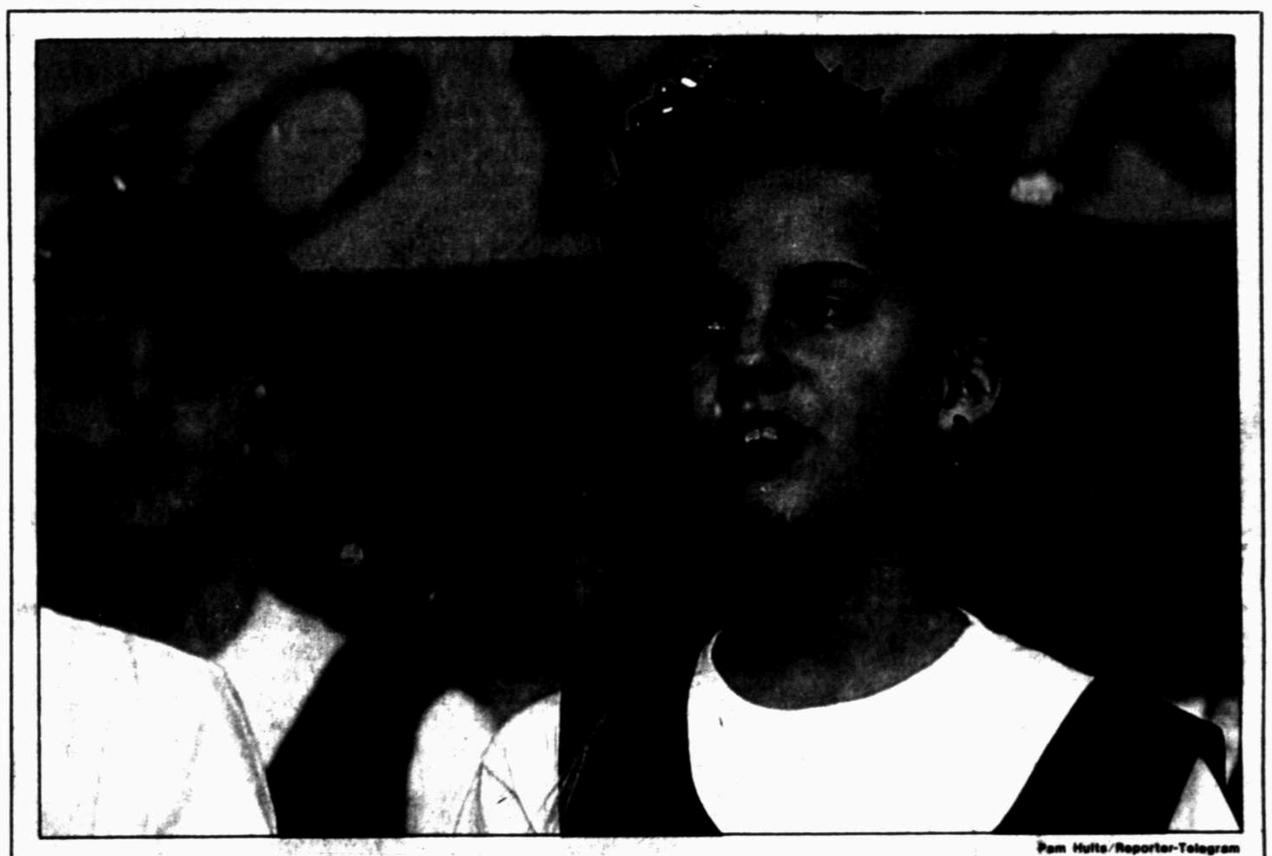

The Institute for International Economics, a nonpartisan, nonprofit Washington research group, found that the proposed U.S.-Mexico-Canada free-trade pact, now being negotiated, will improve this country's annual trade balance by about $10 billion.

Still, elimination of tariffs could mean serious problems for some U.S. industries — including California agriculture — and their workers.

Negotiators for the three countries got down to hard bargaining last month in Dallas and reported significant advances.

A source close to the negotiations predicted that if an agreement were reached by the middle of this spring, it would be submitted to Congress for ratification this year. If not, it probably

Senator drops re-election bid amid sex allegations

SEATTLE (AP) — U.S. Sen. Brock Adams abandoned his re-election campaign Sunday after a news report surfaced with claims from eight unidentified women that he sexually abused and harassed them.

Adams

State Democratic leaders had urged Adams to resign his Senate seat after The Seattle Times report appeared, but the first-term senator refused to step down.

"This is the saddest day of my life," Adams said at a news conference.

"I care for people and I have never harmed anyone," he said. "But I find now that it is not worth it to continue this campaign."

Because of an earlier sexual misconduct accusation, Adams already was rated among the most vulnerable of senators whose terms expire this year.

State party leaders said the articles, which covered half the front page and three full inside pages Sunday, were ruinous regardless of whether the women were telling the truth.

The Times is the largest-circulation newspaper in the state.

"It's devastating. It was bad before, but now I think Brock's position is untenable," state Democratic Party Chairwoman Karen Marchioro said. "This is a very, very serious hit on a person who was not in that strong a position anyway."

Adams, 65, said the accusations were false and refused to let them force him

Canada's 'Star' publishes 'lost' Hemingway articles

TORONTO (AP) — Ernest Hemingway, the most famous reporter the Toronto Star ever had, reemerged on the newspaper's pages Sunday in a batch of "lost" articles written by the budding novelist in the 1920s.

The two dozen stories — missed in previous collections of Hemingway's early work, rejected by the Star's editors at the time, written under a pen name or published without a byline — were unearthed as part of preparations for the newspaper's centennial this year.

William Burrill, a writer and editor, discovered them while researching Hemingway's years with the Star in the newspaper's archives, the JFK Library in Boston, at Princeton University and in Paris.

James D. Brasch, a professor at McMaster University and an expert on Hemingway, said the newly discovered material sheds new light on the writer's development. In a letter to the Star, he said the stories "will have consequences far beyond the mere increase in the text."

Junk-bond inmate Milken says he's misunderstood

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Milken insisted in his first jailhouse interview that moneymaking never motivated him and that he's been misinterpreted by critics as the epitome of 1980s greed.

The wealthy junk-bond financier told Forbes magazine that he had sounded an early alarm about high corporate debt and hostile takeovers, and never traded on inside information, as alleged in the best-selling book "Den of Thieves."

"I know this will sound Pollyannaish to you, but I wasn't basically focused on making money," he said.

Milken, 45, said he regretted dealing with Ivan F. Boesky, the disgraced stock speculator whose squealing led to Milken's prosecution for securities fraud in the biggest Wall Street scandal of all time.

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — Saudi Arabia's absolute ruler, King Fahd, took a tentative first step toward sharing power Sunday by announcing the long-promised creation of an advisory body and spelling out a constitution based on Islamic law. The 61-member Majlis al-Shura, or Consultative Council, was set up to make recommendations to the king and the prime minister, although it would have no ability to make laws on its own./3A

Taped beating jury

SIMI VALLEY, Calif. — A year after the videotaped beating of black motorist Rodney King, four white police officers will relive in court the night that altered their lives and turned the spotlight on police brutality. If a jury has been seated by today, as expected, opening statements in the officers' trial are scheduled for Wednesday. On March 3, 1991, King was clubbed, kicked, beaten and struck with a stun gun in front of a crowd of officers who converged after chasing his car several miles. An amateur cameraman, peering out his apartment window, saw flashing lights and flailing arms and turned on his new camcorder. The tape, played repeatedly on national television, electrified the nation./8A

Early abuse alert

FORT WORTH — Child welfare workers in Utah were alerted as early as 1983 to possible abuse of a boy who eventually died after being chained and starved in his family's home, a newspaper reported in a copyright story. A teacher's aide in Clearfield, Utah, told authorities in 1983 she suspected that Stephen Jay Hill, then a 5-year-old kindergartner, was being deprived of food, the newspaper reported. Stephen, 13, died last November about two weeks after he was found chained to a cabinet in the family's trailer in White Settlement./7C

WEATHER SUMMARY

Today holds chance of rain

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies with a 20 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms and a high in the lower 70s with winds south to southwest at 15 to 20 mph and gusty. Tonight should be cloudy with a 30 percent chance of showers and a low in the upper 40s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tuesday should be cloudy with a high in the upper 60s.

After an overnight low of 44, Monday's high reached 73 compared with the record high for that date of 85 set in 1976. The record low for that date is 9 set in 1980.

STATE

A major storm system over the western United States moved Sunday toward Texas, where March temperatures soared under high thin clouds and southerly winds.

Thermometers across much of the state rose into the 70s and 80s.

The warm, fair weather was caused by a ridge of high pressure.

The North Texas forecast calls for partly cloudy and windy conditions today with a slight chance of afternoon thunderstorms west. It will be cloudy tonight and Tuesday, with an increasing chance of thunderstorms.

NATION

Unseasonably warm weather prevailed throughout much of the Midwest and the Plains on Sunday, breaking high temperature records in at least 21 cities. It snowed over parts of New England and New York state.

Temperatures in the upper Great Lakes region, the upper Mississippi Valley and the northern Plains were from 15 degrees to 25 degrees higher than seasonable for the first day of March.

High temperature records include 60 degrees in Milwaukee, breaking the 59-degree record set in 1882. It was 61 degrees in Chicago, breaking the 1962 record of 60 degrees.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

RIVALS: Buchanan continues criticism of Bush

(From 1A)

dent Bush.

Bush steadfastly avoided mentioning his rival by name on the final day of his two-day campaign trip to Georgia. The president and his wife, Barbara, attended a rally in Savannah after starting the day with services at the First Baptist Church in Atlanta, one of the South's largest Southern Baptist congregations.

In an interview with Atlanta television station WAGA, Bush said he would not respond to Buchanan ads that accuse him of supporting federal funding for sexually explicit art.

But he added, "Some of these ads that are so divisive and so ugly, I think turn people off."

Buchanan's broadsides were overshadowed Sunday by Democratic infighting at the Democrats' final face-off in Georgia before Tuesday's election.

Kerrey, the most aggressive candidate in the debate, did not attend in person, but managed to lob hand grenades via satellite from a television studio in Denver. Kerrey, who is lagging behind Clinton and former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas in Georgia, hopes to offset his expected setback there with a win in Colorado, one of seven states that will hold primaries or party caucuses Tuesday.

Most of the candidates reunited Sunday evening for another debate in Maryland, which will also hold a primary election Tuesday. Kerrey did not participate in the Maryland forum because organizers would not permit a satellite hookup.

Clinton and Bush have focused on the Georgia election as their top priority because the state is considered a trial run for primaries a week later in vote-rich Texas and Florida, the powerhouses in the 11-state contest known as Super Tuesday.

Kerrey, 48, who raised Clinton's draft history as a campaign issue last week, used the Georgia debate to fire questions directly at his rival.

"You could have gone in the Peace Corps. You could have walked into any recruiting office and joined up and served when duty called," said Kerrey, who lost a leg and won the Medal of Honor as a Navy SEAL. "What do you say to a young person, when you're selling your national service program, when they come back and ask you how come you didn't serve in the 1960s?"

Clinton replied, "I tell them, first of all, I opposed that war. I thought it was a terrible mistake."

Clinton, 45, also noted that he voluntarily surrendered his student deferment and re-enrolled in the draft within a year. Clinton was never called into service because of a high number in the draft lottery.

"For most of the year that I was in the lottery pool, I thought I was going to serve," he said.

Clinton also came under fire in new radio ads criticizing his angry response to an erroneous report that the Rev. Jesse Jackson had endorsed one of the other Democratic hopefuls, Sen. Tom Harkin of Iowa.

In an outburst that the candidate did not realize was being captured on a live microphone, Clinton called Jackson's purported endorsement "a dirty, double-crossing, backstabbing thing to do."

Ads sponsored by Tsongas on black radio stations say that outburst showed disrespect for blacks.

Ironically, Tsongas has been the most vocal about the need for Democrats to stop their personal attacks on each other. Clinton bristled when Tsongas challenged him during the debate to drop all ads that mention the other Democrats by name.

POLL: 'Better' question might haunt Bush in Texas

(From 1A)

first term, according to a statewide poll conducted for the Fort Worth Star-Telegram and the San Antonio Express-News.

In the poll, conducted by the Washington, D.C., firm of Belden & Russonello, 65 percent of the likely voters surveyed said their lot in life is the same or worse than it was since Bush took office.

"I don't think you could get a job here if you had the money to buy one," said David Whitfield, a 35-year-old rancher and pastor in the House of Prayer in Bonham in North Texas.

Seventy-five percent of those polled said the state's economy — racked by layoffs, plant closures and bank failures — is worse than it was four years ago; 7 percent think the state's economic status is about the same. Fourteen percent believe Texas' economic climate has improved.

Almost half of the Democrats and Republicans expected to vote in the primary said that if the state wants to break out of its doldrums, someone other than Bush needs to lead the way.

"Every time you pick up a newspaper, there's another company laying off a few thousand people, or closing 30 outlets, or filing for Chapter 11," said Bob Slagle, state Democratic Party chairman.

"Most everybody has a family member or a friend or a neighbor that has been laid off," said Slagle, a lawyer from Sherman.

Of the Democrats and Republicans who voted for Bush in 1988, more than four out of 10 polled said they will not vote for him in the primary.

Also, 86 percent of those who think the state's economy is worse also think that the nation needs a new president.

People are not convinced that Bush has shown leadership in mending the nation's financial state, said Nancy Belden of Belden & Russonello.

"I'm coming off not just this data but the other things I read. He is going to have a hard time," she said.

The poll indicated that the economy is the dominating issue.

ADAMS: Senator abandons re-election campaign from the office he won in a 1986 upset over Republican Sen. Slade Gorton.

(From 1A)

"I'm going to stay," he said. "I don't expect to hear these kind of things in the future. I would hope that all of you in the press would begin to police yourselves."

Before joining the Senate, he had served in Congress from 1965 to 1977 and was President Carter's transportation secretary.

Marchioro said dropping his re-election bid was the least Adams should do. She said there was no indication any Republican opponent was involved with bringing forth the story.

Former U.S. Rep. Mike Lowry, who had all but formally announced he'd oppose Adams for the Democratic nomination, didn't immediately return telephone calls to his newly opened campaign headquarters or his office.

Gov. Booth Gardner, who is not seeking reelection and reportedly is interested in the Senate seat, said through an aide that he supported Adams' decision not to run for reelection.

State Sen. Patty Murray, the only Democrat now campaigning for Adams' seat, said she wouldn't alter her campaign strategy. "I do not want to judge the accused or the accusers," she said.

"I think it certainly changes the complexion of the campaign," said Rep. Rod Chandler, the leading Republican Senate contender. "I think I might even claim the front-runner status in the entire race now."

The Times story said reporters began hearing accusations of sexual misconduct against Adams in the 3½ years since Kari Tupper, a former congressional aide and family friend of Adams, claimed he drugged her and molested her at his Washington, D.C., home in 1987.

No criminal charges were ever filed, and the U.S. attorney for the District of Columbia said the accusation was without merit. Adams insisted it was a fabrication designed to extort money from him.

The Times said that in ensuing months, people contacted the paper to report information or personal experiences to suggest Tupper was telling the truth.

MILKEN: Financier regrets Boesky deals, he says trade with him," Milken said in the magazine's March 16 edition, which hits newsstands today.

The 15-page interview is the first time Milken has spoken to the media since he was sentenced to a 10-year federal prison term in November 1990.

Under terms of a civil litigation settlement likely to be finalized in early March, Milken will relinquish much of his wealth to satisfy lawsuits from the government and investors who claim his actions defrauded them.

The settlement will leave him with $125 million.

Wealth, Milken said, "is a by-product of solving problems and creating value. If you do those things, you get a high rate of return."

While not denying the charges to which he pleaded guilty, Milken said he took risks few others dared take and created jobs and value for many corporations as the chief junk-bond dealer for Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., the now-defunct Wall Street investment bank.

Milken has been widely portrayed in the media as one of the most powerful financiers since J.P. Morgan's time. He pioneered the $200 billion market for junk bonds, the risky but potentially high-yielding debt securities used to finance the corporate takeover binge of the 1980s.

"Den of Thieves," by Wall Street Journal reporter James Stewart, portrays him as the leader of a gang that used junk bonds to plunder companies and suck the wealth from unwitting investors.

"The book's dust jacket says, 'Once upon a time. ... That's how you start fairy tales, and the book is a fairy tale," Milken said. "It turns night into day and day into night."

Asked whether his accomplishments amounted to paper-shuffling that contributed nothing to American business, Milken responded: "That's just one of the many myths about me."

Milken began serving time at a minimum-security prison in Dublin, Calif., last year and is eligible for release in 1994. He has appealed for a reduction in his punishment, but a judge has not begun considering the request.

The Forbes story was based on a series of conversations over four months, starting in November and initiated at Milken's request, said one of the magazine's interviewers, James W. Michaels.

Asked of his roundly ignored advice to Wall Street starting in 1987 that it was time to deleverage, get out of debt and sell common equity, Milken said:

"After 1986, I felt like a skilled surgeon who's been locked out of the operating room and watches through the glass in horror as some first-year medical students go to work on a patient.

PACT: U.S. to gain 130,000 jobs, study projects

(From 1A)

would have to wait until after the November elections.

To make sure that the deal is ratified, the U.S. negotiating team is consulting regularly with key members of Congress and industry leaders over the fine print, such as the timing of phaseouts of tariffs.

"You can be pretty sure that if an agreement is reached by the negotiators, it will be approved by the Congress," Institute President Fred Bergsten told a press conference last week.

The study predicts that Mexican fruit and vegetable growers will make "major inroads" in U.S. markets. Mexico's Culiacan region on the Gulf of California has two huge advantages over California, Texas and Florida in production of citrus and tropical fruits, tomatoes, asparagus, broccoli and cauliflower: much lower farm-worker wages and year-round frost-free weather.

By contrast, farmers in the Midwest stand to be big winners from free trade because they can produce seven times as much corn per acre as Mexico's small, inefficient farms, and thus have much lower production costs.

In fact, free trade is expected to knock many Mexican corn farmers out of business, leading to the migration of up to 700,000 agricultural laborers into cities.

To cushion the disruptions, the institute urged that the final pact contain a 15-year phaseout of agricultural trade barriers on both sides of the border.

Among other findings from the study:

■ The U.S. trade balance with Mexico is expected to turn from a $2 billion deficit in 1990 to a $9 billion surplus in 1995 because of sharp increases in exports of such products as pharmaceuticals, high-grade steel, construction equipment and industrial chemicals.

■ Mexico will gain 600,000 jobs, primarily because increased imports from the United States will relieve supply bottlenecks that impede production. Mexico's recent moves to liberalize its economy, including free trade, could prove to be of historic significance as Mexico bids to join the industrial world.

ARTICLES: Hemingway re-emerges as a reporter

(From 1A)

"The Sun Also Rises" and "For Whom the Bell Tolls," worked for the Toronto Star as a freelancer, staff reporter and foreign correspondent from 1920 to 1923.

He went on to fame as a novelist and short-story writer before committing suicide in Ketchum, Idaho in 1961 at the age of 61.

The new collection of stories includes 13 articles not included in "Ernest Hemingway — Dateline: Toronto," published by Charles Scribners Sons. They include nine unbylined stories and one signed with the pen name Peter Jackson.

The unsigned stories were found in Hemingway's personal clippings scrapbook the newspaper said.

There are also five stories, collected by former Star librarian William McGeary, who died in 1984. The Star said McGeary compiled strong evidence to support labeling them as Hemingway's work.

Seven stories were also written for the Star but rejected by editors, including a 1922 interview with former French Premier Georges Clemenceau.

Managing Editor John Bone, who turned down the piece, wrote to Hemingway that he was sorry to "pass up your excellent color to be found throughout the article." The story had 11 paragraphs of description about coming up Clemenceau's driveway, someone bringing in the groceries, the house and Clemenceau's study before it got down to the business of the interview.

In some articles, Hemingway takes a novelist's approach to his subject.

"His eyes smiled," he wrote of Clemenceau. "They are the only things you can see while you are talking to him. They seem to get inside of your eyes somehow and fasten claws there. When he is talking all his brown, healthy, Chinese mandarin's face seems to have nothing to do with them."

An environmentalist before it became fashionable, Hemingway wrote a story under the pseudonym of Peter Jackson that touched on the effects of dust raised by cars on the old oak trees in Toronto's High Park.

"A chill, cold wind blows over High Park. There is snow in the air," he wrote. "Other trees sway with the wind. The pines seem to enjoy it. But the oaks are sullen and rigid. Stripped of their leaves by the wind, they stand stiff and despairing looking against the sky. For the oaks are dying."

Saudis edge toward pluralism with council

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Saudi Arabia's absolute ruler, King Fahd, took a tentative first step toward sharing power Sunday by announcing the long-promised creation of an advisory body and spelling out a constitution based on Islamic law.

The 61-member Majlis al-Shura, or Consultative Council, was set up to make recommendations to the king and the prime minister, although it would have no ability to make laws on its own.

Its creation by royal decree was seen as a step toward political pluralism in the Islamic kingdom ruled by the Al-Saud family since 1932.

Fahd said in a statement that council members would be Saudi nationals aged 30 or older, apparently to be drawn from the kingdom's oil, religious and academic communities. If so, this would be the first time non-royals were allowed to participate in the kingdom's decision-making.

The country's monarchs have been promising political reforms for three decades. Pressure for change accelerated after Iraq invaded Kuwait in August 1990, leading to the deployment of hundreds of thousands of non-Muslim troops into this traditionally closed society.

Sunday's reforms, contained in three decrees, were the most profound in Saudi history.

"Decisions of the council go to the prime minister, who turns them over to the Cabinet to consider. If the two bodies concur, the king may approve them. If they differ, then the king has the right to decide what he sees fit," one decree said.

The second decree reorganized provinci l administrations and the other, an 83-point document, formalized the existing system of government, including that the throne will remain in the Al-Saud family.

This was widely seen as the outline of a formal constitution, although Fahd stressed that the Koran, Islam's holy book, "is the constitution" of the kingdom, apparently to placate conservatives opposed to change.

In recent months, many Saudis have voiced hope for a written body of law, akin to a constitution, to adapt the country's legal system to 20th century life. Today, the country is still governed by 7th century sharia, or Islamic religious laws.

The royal decrees broadcast on state television said council members will be named within six months by the king to a four-year term. No date was given in the decrees or in a statement by Fahd on official Saudi Press Agency for the council's first session.

Councils similar to that announced by Fahd on Sunday exist in several Persian Gulf sheikdoms. All are wholly or partly appointed by the ruler and none have political power.

Russia's Gorbachev Foundation faces rough start

By Alan Cooperman
Associated Press writer

MOSCOW — Mikhail Gorbachev's new think tank has a lot going for it: a handsome complex of buildings, wealthy would-be Western contributors, a noble mission and, of course, its famous boss.

But the Gorbachev Foundation, which officially opens Tuesday, also has a host of troubles.

The government of Russian President Boris Yeltsin apparently views it with some suspicion. Russian media have mostly ignored it. New tax laws are strangling it. And some researchers invited to join its staff are wary.

Gorbachev says he has no plans to use the non-profit, non-government organization to challenge Yeltsin — although he said the Russian president had asked him pointblank whether he was creating an opposition movement.

The foundation "is not a shadow cabinet," Gorbachev told the newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda on Saturday. "I personally am not going to become an opposition figure as long as the government is implementing reforms."

The stated goals of the foundation — formally named the International Foundation for Socio-Economic and Political Studies — are to produce research papers, books, lectures and conferences that strengthen democracy and civil rights, plan market reforms, encourage disarmament and foster peace.

Those aims reflect Gorbachev's achievements as Soviet leader from 1985 to 1991.

But his failures also are reflected in the foundation's shaky start.

Gorbachev, who resigned Dec. 25, is still far more popular abroad than at home, where many blame him for the country's economic free fall.

Grigory Revenko, a longtime aide and one of the foundation's two vice presidents, notes that dozens of newspapers in the United States and elsewhere began publishing a monthly column by Gorbachev in February. But only one Russian newspaper, the reformist daily Komsomolskaya Pravda, expressed interest.

"There's a peculiar silencing of Gorbachev today, even a desire that he not actively participate in the internal life of the country," Revenko said in an interview.

After initially disappearing from public view following his resignation, Gorbachev, who turns 61 today, has lately been re-emerging.

He grabbed headlines in late February by accusing Yeltsin and other commonwealth leaders of "flabbiness, self-importance and irresponsibility" in the face of the Soviet Union's breakup.

Yet much of Gorbachev's activity is directed abroad, just as it was during his presidency. He plans speaking trips to Germany in March, Japan in April and the United States in May, aides said.

A black Zil limousine, identical to those he used as president, delivers him each day to the foundation, a complex of four buildings — including a 120-room hotel, swimming pool, cafeteria, bar, library and conference rooms.

Moroccan king proposes trying Libyans in neutral court

RABAT, Morocco (NYT) — King Hassan II of Morocco, one of the Arab world's most pro-Western rulers, has proposed the establishment of an international court for terrorism cases, perhaps under United Nations auspices, to give two Libyans accused of blowing up Western airliners a fair trial "on neutral ground."

"If the accused were judged in Libya, that would not be credible," Hassan said. "If they were judged by an American or English court, that, too, might not seem credible. Let's find a median solution."

The king added that "creating such a special court for terrorism might be an appropriate beginning of the new order."

The 62-year-old king, the leader of the only Arab country currently sitting on the United Nations Security Council, has had a long and friendly relationship with the United States. But he made clear that he is not prepared to support the Bush administration's call for sanctions to force the Libyan leader, Col. Moammar Gadhafi, to surrender the two Libyan government employees whom Great Britain and the United States have indicted in the bombings of a Pan Am jet over Scotland in 1988 and a French jet over the Sahara in 1989.

In an interview on Thursday at the royal palace in Marrakesh, Hassan said that while Morocco and Libya's other Arab neighbors all had had "trouble" with Gadhafi's government, it would be extremely difficult for Egypt, Algeria, or any neighboring state to condemn Libya or impose sanctions on it without proof of its complicity in the bombings.

Libya, he said, is a neighbor and ally, a member of the three-year-old Mahgreb union aimed at forging economic and political cooperation among North African states.

But he said that if a special court was created and it concluded that the two Libyans were guilty and that Libya itself had ordered the destruction of the airliners: "I'll be the first to adopt a severe attitude toward Libya."

Iraqi deputy prime minister plans to go to U.N. for talks

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister Tariq Aziz said he would head a delegation to the United Nations that will explain Baghdad's efforts to implement Security Council resolutions demanding that Iraq eliminate its mass destruction weapons.

The move appeared to be aimed at averting a potentially serious confrontation with the United Nations over Saddam Hussein's latest defiance of Security Council resolutions.

Aziz, speaking on Iraq's state-run television, did not say when the delegation would arrive in New York.

The development came as U.N. pressure on Iraq mounted amid fresh allegations that Baghdad was hindering U.N. inspectors assigned to locate and eliminate Iraq's chemical, biological and nuclear weapons programs as well as long-range missiles.

A U.N. team assigned to destroy Iraqi missile production equipment reported Saturday that it was unable to perform its mission because of obstacles caused by the Iraqis.

The official Iraqi News Agency said Sunday that the government decided to send the delegation including Aziz in response to a Feb. 22 statement by the Security Council accusing Iraq of failing to comply with its Gulf War cease-fire resolution.

The cease-fire resolution states that U.N. economic sanctions imposed after the August 1990 invasion of Kuwait will remain in force until Iraq complies with the disarmament provisions.

Aziz's announcemen' followed an earlier INA report t Saddam Hussein had met Saturday with military and government leaders to discuss the latest developments.

INA, monitored in Nicosia, quoted Aziz as saying that Iraq has carried out all its commitments under the cease-fire resolution,

World in brief

■ Israelis, Shiite forces exchange fire

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A fresh outbreak of artillery exchanges in southern Lebanon shattered a weeklong lull as the pro-Iranian Party of God vowed to step up its armed struggle against Israel.

But accounts of the fighting differed. In a statement on Sunday, the Party of God claimed responsibility for an attack against an Israeli army outpost in southern Lebanon, saying three Israeli soldiers were killed and an unspecified number wounded.

Security officials here said that minutes after the statement was released, 40 shells struck the Shiite Muslim village of Kfar Ruman in the hills east of the port city of Sidon. But an Israeli army spokesman quoted on the state radio monitored here said several mortar shells had been fired at a position of the Israel Defense Forces on the border of Israel's self-described security zone in southern Lebanon. The spokesman said that there were no casualties and that Israeli soldiers had returned the fire.

■ Gaza Strip fighting claims three lives

GAZA — Three Palestinians were shot to death by Israeli soldiers over the weekend as Arabs and troops clashed fiercely in the Gaza Strip.

Two men, one of them a teen-ager, were killed on Saturday in the Rafah refugee camp on the southern tip of the strip, prompting protest demonstrations and battles with Israeli soldiers on Sunday in which a third Palestinian was fatally shot.

He was identified as Ahmed Sarafandi, 18. About 20 other Palestinians were wounded in the clashes as soldiers fired live ammunition at youths who were throwing gasoline bombs and stones at them.

The Israeli army says the teen-ager was carrying a pistol at the time, but Palestinians in Rafah insisted that he was unarmed. In the last few weeks, soldiers have been authorized to fire on sight at armed guerrillas, after a series of ambushes in the West Bank and Gaza Strip that have killed four Israelis since late October.

■ Proposal to aid Third-World environments

UNITED NATIONS — A proposal for giving poor countries billions of dollars to help them develop without damaging the environment will be made today at the opening of a major conference here.

Industrialized countries would provide the additional funds, called "earth increments," through existing aid-giving institutions.

The conference was called to prepare for the world environmental summit meeting planned for Rio de Janeiro in June, officially called the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development.

The aid proposal, to be made by Maurice F. Strong, the Canadian who is secretary general of the Rio meeting, highlights the major problem confronting the preparatory meeting: how to pay the huge cost of the environmental cleanup the Rio session is expected to endorse.

■ Bosnian voters call for independence

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia — A large turnout of voters appeared to have sealed victory for a referendum on independence in the ethnically mixed central Yugoslav republic of Bosnia-Herzegovina.

A vote in favor of independence would further the disintegration of Yugoslavia that began last summer with the secession of the republics of Slovenia and Croatia, touching off the first major war on the European continent since World War II.

Slovenia and Croatia have already won international recognition and Macedonia hopes to follow them soon.

Leaders of Bosnia-Herzegovina's Muslim Slav and Croat communities, which account for 60 percent of its 4 million people, expect the European Community to grant this republic diplomatic recognition soon after the official results of the referendum are announced on Tuesday.

IRA claims responsibility for London bombs

LONDON (AP) — Police on Sunday defused an IRA bomb at a train station, the third discovered in this capital in 48 hours. Two other devices planted by the outlawed group exploded on Friday and Saturday, injuring 29 people.

The Irish Republican Army claimed responsibility Sunday for planting all the bombs as it continued its campaign to end British rule in Northern Ireland.

In a statement from Belfast, the IRA said it wanted to force the issue onto the political agenda ahead of the election, which must be held by July, and vowed to continue the campaign of violence on the British mainland before the election.

But Home Secretary Kenneth Baker, the Cabinet minister responsible for law and order, maintained that the IRA would not disrupt the electoral process.

"An election is a time when there is a clash of ideas, of policies and of arguments. It has nothing to do with bombs and bullets," Baker told London Weekend Television News.

Earlier Sunday, a bomb found in a north London train station was defused hours before thousands of fans were expected to arrive for a soccer match, a Scotland Yard spokesman said.

The bomb was spotted by a British citizen at 9:20 a.m. at British Rail's White Hart Lane station. A telephone warning was received about an hour later, police said.

The station is near the Tottenham Hotspur soccer ground, where 30,000 spectators were expected to attend a semifinal match at 3:30 p.m.

The bomb was defused within an hour, the spokesman said. The televised soccer game was delayed an hour after police received the telephone warning. Fans waited outside the stadium as officers and dogs searched the area. Nothing was found.

A bomb containing about two pounds of explosives went off outside a government prosecutor's office Saturday night, slightly injuring a woman who was running to catch a bus, police said.

Death toll in collapse of Arab cafe rises to 23

JERUSALEM (NYT) — The death toll in an Arab cafe whose roof collapsed rose to 23 on Sunday as rescue teams pulled more bodies from the wreckage. Officials called the incident on Saturday one of the worst disasters in this city's recent history.

In a rare moment of common purpose, Israelis and Palestinians worked side by side to find survivors and dig out the dead, but later said their cooperation was an anomaly that could not erase tensions in this ethnically divided city.

The roof of the Rawdah coffee house in Arab East Jerusalem caved in Saturday afternoon when it was struck by a collapsing retaining wall of an adjacent cemetery. The wall had given way under the weight of soil saturated by weeks of record rain and snowfall.

Merchants and laborers who filled the cafe, across from the walled Old City, were buried under tons of concrete, rock and mud. Police officials said 23 men had been killed and 20 injured.

"In 26 years in office I can't remember a disaster like this," said Mayor Teddy Kollek, who rushed to the scene.

Soldiers from an army rescue crew worked together with Palestinian volunteers, picking and cutting their way through the rubble and carrying out victims to Jewish and Arab ambulance crews.

"There was 100 percent cooperation," said Wael Muhalwass, an Arab municipal employee who had worked through the rainy night. "But we don't know what tomorrow will bring."

"There was natural and exceptional cooperation between the army, the Arabs, and the police," said Amir Heshin, the mayor's adviser on Arab affairs. "This is an episode that will be recorded in our history, but I wouldn't exaggerate and say we should use it to promote co-existence."

Bush must offer solutions to ills

President Bush is making a big mistake on his campaign swings by defending the status quo and assailing those who are attacking the sorry state of the economy and other problems.

It was astonishing to hear the president speak recently about the greatness of America, our being Number 1, and criticizing those who are finding fault with the state of affairs.

There is much to find fault with, and the sooner Bush starts offering solutions to unemployment, government spending, debt, our unfavorable balance of trade and other problems, the better.

Even staunch Republicans are concerned that the president has no agenda — no organized plan apart from his short-term economic proposal — for the many problems besetting us. Patrick Buchanan has tapped into the unease not only among Republicans but swing-vote Democrats and independents who voted for the Reagan-Bush ticket. Buchanan, like former Sen. Paul Tsongas and Gov. Bill Clinton, is running an issues campaign.

The nearly 9 million jobless and the middle class battling to hold jobs and pay bills despise rah-rah speeches about America being Number 1. They want to know what Bush can do for them next week, next month and next year.

The president's campaign appears highly disorganized in terms of ideas, solutions to genuine problems and overall goals. If he is not careful, Buchanan may defeat him in some states. Should the columnist do that, Bush would be in serious trouble, and the White House door would be open to the Democrats.

The president simply cannot, as he has threatened to do, bash Buchanan. He would alienate the conservatives, the backbone of the GOP, and court disaster in November. Bush must offer voters specific solutions to a wide range of problems. He's not doing that today.

JACK ANDERSON

Renegade safecracker embarrasses CIA

WASHINGTON — Central Intelligence Agency Director Robert Gates says it's a new day at the CIA — time to shed some sunlight on musty CIA secret files, including those on the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. Proof of Gates' new-found openness will be whether those files include the embarrassing saga of a renegade safe cracker.

Anderson

It began one morning in the summer of 1978 in the offices of the House Assassinations Committee. The committee had the job of reinvestigating the Kennedy assassination and to determine if a lone gunman, Lee Harvey Oswald, did it. A committee staffer showed up at work one morning to find the door to the safe propped open and the contents — particularly the Kennedy autopsy photos — rifled.

G. Robert Blakey, then chief counsel to the committee, and now a professor at Notre Dame, called in some Washington police officers to take fingerprints. Everyone on the committee staff was fingerprinted. The one set on the safe that shouldn't have been there belonged to a CIA security officer whose job was to shuttle classified documents requested by the committee from the CIA headquarters in Langley, Va., to Capitol Hill.

Blakey stormed over to Langley for a meeting with then-CIA Director Stansfield Turner. His deputy, Frank Carlucci, later Ronald Reagan's defense secretary, was there too.

"What's your guy doing in my safe?" Blakey demanded. He is now reluctant to talk about the details from that point, but sources told us that Turner and Carlucci were aghast to learn about the break-in. Relations between the CIA and the Assassinations Committee were already strained. Some members of the committee suspected that the CIA was part of a conspiracy to kill Kennedy, and was being less than forthright about sharing what it knew.

One former committee staffer told us that they weren't surprised to find the autopsy photos were the target of a CIA break-in. The CIA reportedly never had the photos in its own records and was itching to lay hands on them.

To this day, those grisly photos have been kept a secret at the request of the Kennedy family. But they have long been the centerpiece of a controversy about JFK's wounds and the second-gunman theory.

The break-in of the committee's safe was shaping up to be a fine conspiracy indeed, except that it wasn't a conspiracy at all. It apparently was the work of a curious CIA employee who just wanted to see what all the fuss was about.

The accused officer spoke with our associate Dale Van Atta recently on the condition that he not be named. He didn't deny that he broke into the safe, but he didn't confirm it either. "They had no grounds to accuse me of anything," he said. "There was nothing missing and nothing stolen from the safe."

He was hauled in at Langley and put through an eight-hour polygraph examination. He figured the committee was out to get him because he had complained that they "had very poor security" with the documents.

He was eventually fired. Blakey confirmed that the CIA decided the incident was "no big deal. It was nothing more sinister than that he was curious."

But the committee didn't let the CIA off the hook. Former committee staffers and CIA sources told us that the committee cleverly used the incident to ensure the CIA's enthusiastic cooperation with the rest of the investigation.

"We hushed it up, and the CIA was so grateful, a veritable waterfall of documents came our way," one staffer recalled. "Practically anything we wanted for our investigation, we got without complaint."

THIS WEEK'S EDITION OF 'CROSSFIRE'

CHARLEY REESE

Bush is enough to drive one away from GOP

After watching hours of primary coverage on C-Span, I've decided to get the jump on everyone else and endorse someone for president. My endorsement goes to Anybody but Bush.

Reese

President George Bush does not seem able to open his mouth without insulting the intelligence of the voters. In New Hampshire, with Pat Buchanan snapping at his heels, Bush railed bitterly against negative campaign advertising.

Does he think we are afflicted with amnesia? Does he think that we've forgotten that in New Hampshire in 1988 he called Senator Bob Dole, Senator Straddle and warned that Dole would raise taxes while he, Bush, would never do that? Does he think we've forgotten Willie Horton and the cracks about the American Civil Liberties Union? Does he think we have forgotten that his campaign consisted of no new taxes?

Bush did not realize that we were in a recession until his political pollsters told him. He didn't realize we had a health care crisis until he heard it from his pollsters. His response has been a hodgepodge; he can't even remember what he promised in the State of the Union campaign kickoff speech.

By the way, Mr. Read My Lips raised taxes by $166 billion. The same Mr. Bush, who now rails against big spenders in Congress, has sent budget proposals that would outspend the Democrats and Ronald Reagan. The same Bush who is now against big government has seen government expand and government regulation proliferate during his three years in office.

And the opportunistic inconsistencies don't stop there. Mr. Bush agreed to the same tax code he now condemns. When it was passed in 1986, Mr. Bush agreed to the present capital gains tax rate, he agreed with dropping the investment credit.

He told the truth recently when he said, "I will do whatever it takes to win." The only consistency in his presidency has been a faithful pursuit of the interests of global corporations whether they are global oil companies with ties to the Kuwaiti rulers or global corporations salivating over cheap Mexican labor, which a free trade agreement will make even more accessible.

The Republican Party, as measured by its leaders, is morally defective and philosophically sterile. It's sickening to watch the performance of so-called conservatives like Rep. Newt Gingrich and HUD Secretary Jack Kemp.

These men are running around talking about George Bush's desire for less government and lower taxes. They cannot even say it with a straight face. They know it is a lie. They are just a pack of partisan dogs who bark when and where and what the party tells them to bark.

Listen to any one of the Democrats make a stump speech. Listen to George Bush make a stump speech. It is obvious Bush neither knows nor cares what is going on in this country. The Democrats may be confused about solutions, but they at least know what the problems are.

One can say at least of Jerry Brown, Paul Tsongas, Tom Harkin, Bob Kerrey and to some extent Bill Clinton that their speeches have not changed. They were saying the same things before they became candidates.

Bush, on the other hand, has been all over the place on every issue, even criss-crossing himself. He has condemned, praised, and condemned the same positions over a period of time.

Barry Goldwater brought me to the Republican Party. George Bush is sending me out of it. After I cast my protest vote for Buchanan, it's hasta la vista, baby.

I'll take a genuine liberal any day over a pack of phony conservatives led by a naked opportunist.

Charley Reese's column is distributed by King Features Syndicate.

Safety ignored on bridge

It's been more than a year since the Bridge of The Americas (in El Paso) was declared dangerous . . . and more than seven months since truck loads weighing more than 20 tons were banned for safety reasons.

The free bridge has yet to be repaired, the truck scales are gone and the Mexican highway department has quit enforcing the weight limits.

This is a disaster waiting to happen.

The responsibility for the bridge's safety belongs to Mexico and the United States, which operate the bridge jointly through the International Boundary and Water Commission and its Mexican counterpart.

About 800 trucks cross every day with products from the "maquiladoras" on the only free commercial bridge between Mexico and the United States.

A decision by the two governments on whether to repair the existing bridge or build a new one was to have been announced in December. It wasn't.

The Bridge of the Americas is a vital link between El Paso and Juarez (Mexico). It's unbelievable that those in charge are unable to make a decision and have, in the meantime, thrown safety to the wind.

Fleming ignores responsibility

If the U.S. Senate is truly interested in correcting abusive leaks of confidential committee information, then its members should insist on using the power of subpoena to question the likely perpetrators rather than news reporters who published the story.

Unfortunately, the special counsel hired by the Senate to ferret out who leaked damaging information from Professor Anita Hill about Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas during his confirmation hearings has chosen to stone the messenger.

By intimidating reporters who were simply doing their jobs under First Amendment protection, the special counsel, Peter Fleming, ignores his deeper responsibility of identifying the congressional sources who are bound under Senate rules to keep certain investigative information confidential. Those who broke the rules and self-servingly provided the information to the press are the real culprits and should bear the brunt of appropriate sanctions.

Fleming has all the authority he needs to expose whoever leaked the information in Hill's deposition. If he truly wants to get to the bottom of the abuse — and has the courage to do so — he will go to the source of the abuse rather than harassing reporters for doing their jobs, which coincidentally revealed embarrassing Senate impropriety.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, March 2, the 62nd day of 1992. There are 304 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On March 2, 1939, Roman Catholic Cardinal Eugenio Pacelli was elected Pope. He took the name Pius XII.

On this date:

In 1793, the first president of the Republic of Texas, Sam Houston, was born near Lexington, Va.

In 1836, Texas declared its independence from Mexico.

In 1877, Republican Rutherford B. Hayes was declared the winner of the 1876 presidential election over Democrat Samuel J. Tilden.

In 1899, Congress established Mount Rainier National Park.

In 1917, 75 years ago, Puerto Ricans were granted U.S. citizenship.

In 1923, Time magazine made its debut.

In 1933, the motion picture "King Kong," starring Fay Wray, premiered at New York's Radio City Music Hall and the RKO Roxy.

In 1939, the Massachusetts legislature voted to ratify the Bill of Rights, the first 10 amendments to the U.S. Constitution.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Boy Scouts teach moral values, not threats

I occasionally still think about the late Charlie Bohannon, Scoutmaster of my Boy Scout troop in my hometown of Moreland, Ga.

We met in the little block building across the railroad tracks, a quarter-mile from my house.

Grizzard

Charlie always had the stub of cigar stuck in the side of his mouth. He also had time to deal with all us rowdies. We went camping on the Flint River one time and John Cureton climbed a tree and wouldn't come down.

Cigar in mouth, Charlie finally had to climb the tree and bring John down. The problem wasn't that John was in the tree. He was in the tree singing at the top of his voice and nobody could go to sleep.

Scouting was a great experience for me. Ol' Charlie had some old-fashioned values and he passed them along to some of the rest of us. Boy Scouts don't steal, for instance.

I once passed up a golden opportunity to steal some watermelons from somebody's patch. I felt I'd be letting Charlie down.

Charlie was a good husband, father, provider and Scoutmaster. He touched a lot of little country boys' lives.

I started thinking about Charlie Bohannon and Scouting when I began reading about the efforts in San Francisco to get the Boy Scouts of America to lift its ban against homosexual Scouts and leaders.

The BSA also bans girls and atheists. My entire Moreland troop would have enjoyed being in the Girl Scouts because of the possibility of sharing a tent with Kathy Sue Loudermilk, but I can't imagine a girl wanting to be in the Boy Scouts. You've tied one knot, you've tied them all.

I received my God and Country Award in the Boy Scouts. Let an atheist be a Boy Scout and he would want just a Country Award and the Boy Scouts don't offer that.

As far as homosexuals being Scouts or Scout leaders is concerned, you must realize you're dealing here with a 45-year-old man who simply can't imagine such a thing.

I can't imagine having had a homosexual Scout leader or homosexual fellow Scouts. The reason is, I'm like Charlie Bohannon. I'm terribly old-fashioned, or I'm "politically incorrect," as old-fashioned is called today.

I do admit some members of my troop had doubts about Arnold Bates, the teacher's pet, until somebody saw him kissing Kathy Sue Loudermilk square on the mouth during a hayride.

But I don't want to overreact here. I doubt there would be that many instances of one Scout trying to have a homosexual relationship with another if the Boy Scouts allowed gays.

And just because a homosexual is a Scoutmaster, it doesn't mean he's also a child molester.

Still, Scouting holds to basic values and standards, and that is its right. Homosexuality is not a basic value or standard. It's an alternative way to live and love.

To each his own.

Now get this. The United Way of the Bay Area, which donates hundreds of thousands of dollars a year to local Scouting units, has threatened to withhold its funds if the Boy Scouts won't change its rule about homosexuals.

Why would anybody want to financially blackmail an organization that does so much for young people? That's a lousy example.

And also get this: Buford Hill, Western region director for the Boy Scouts of America, has said that the United Way threat will not change the Scouts' policy against homosexuals.

He said the Western region will look for other sources of financing.

And then, he said, "Our values are not for sale."

Ol' Charlie Bohannon would have been proud of that statement.

■ Designers create coat for homeless

PHILADELPHIA — An apparel design professor whose students have produced stuffed caterpillars for children with cerebral palsy and cloth blocks with Braille characters for blind toddlers has come up with an elegant robe that would move well on a runway with pieces designed by Giorgio Armani or Issey Miyake. But the latest project was designed for the homeless and can double as a sleeping bag.

In this project, form is secondary to function, said the professor, David L. Wilson, director of fashion and apparel programs at the Philadelphia College of Textiles & Science, a four-year independent college.

Shelter-Pak, as the hooded, full-length coat is called, is designed to be as warm as a sleeping bag, but unlike a sleeping bag it has no zippers or Velcro snaps that would restrain a person under attack. It has no buttons to pop, only a belt to tie. The pockets are deep, one as deep as a duffel bag.

In warm weather, the coat can be folded inside the large pocket, carried as a backpack or used as a pillow. It weighs slightly more than five pounds and is reversible, with one side made of wool and the other of a waterproof nylon. It comes in two sizes, several colors, including black, purple, blue and tan, and is unisex. It is made of about $50 worth of material.

■ Scientists study disorder linked to Alzheimer's

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — Researchers have isolated a chemical disorder unique to sufferers of Alzheimer's disease, a finding they say may lead to more effective drugs to treat the illness.

The disorder involves the way brain cells use choline. The chemical is an important building block not only for brain cell membranes, but also for the neurotransmitter acetylcholine.

Neurotransmitters are the chemicals that carry signals from one nerve cell to another.

Researchers at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology have found that choline levels in the brains of Alzheimer's victims are much lower than normal.

MIT announced on Friday the results of the study, reported in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, a leading science journal.

■ NASA's Pioneer 10 still calls home

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Pioneer 10 set out for Jupiter 20 years ago today, carrying a message from earthlings, just in case.

The nuclear-powered spacecraft is now 5 billion miles away — farther from Earth than any other human-made object — and still beams back precious scientific data as it hurtles deeper and deeper into space.

"The great technical miracle of the whole thing is that we can receive intelligible data from 5 billion miles away using only 8 watts of radio power. That's a great human achievement," said University of Iowa physicist James Van Allen, principal investigator of one of Pioneer 10's telescopes.

The faint radio pulses eventually will disappear and power to the scientific instruments will cease, probably around the year 2000. But Pioneer 10's odyssey will go on and on, barring collision or capture by space beings.

Clinton's edge in black support seems to wane

By John King
Associated Press writer

ATLANTA — Sean Barnave walked out of the Morehouse College auditorium alternately nodding and shaking his head.

"He's saying a lot of things that need to be said and he says them with a sense of conviction and credibility," Barnave said of Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton's call for racial healing. "But I'm not sure I believe any of them."

It appears Barnave is far from alone.

As the Democratic presidential campaign shifts to the South and other states with significant black populations, Clinton has the overwhelming edge in endorsements from black elected officials and church and community leaders.

But whether that support, which Clinton aggressively courted, translates to votes remains to be seen. Neither Clinton nor his Democratic rivals have sparked the kind of interest among black voters that Jesse Jackson's 1984 and 1988 presidential campaigns did.

"A lot of African Americans are certainly disenchanted with the whole system," said Barnave.

The black vote could make the difference for a Democratic candidate in a hotly contested state such as Maryland, where blacks represent about a quarter of Democratic primary voters.

Cleveland Beckett, a New Yorker going to college in Atlanta, says blacks can't afford to sit on the sidelines and blame the candidates for not inspiring them.

"We need to participate in this campaign," said Beckett, adding that he will vote for either Clinton or former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas in Georgia's primary on Tuesday. "We need people to take a stand. Power comes only through participation."

This year's primary was heralded at the outset as a wide-open competition for black votes. Virginia Gov. L. Douglas Wilder, who is black, was given the clear edge, and his early exit from the race was expected to set off a scramble for black support.

But only Clinton has made a concerted effort.

A recent Georgia poll showed 43 percent of blacks supporting Clinton; 16 percent Tsongas. One quarter were undecided a week before the primary.

The undecideds are the targets of a Clinton radio ad in which Rep. John Lewis, D-Ga., a former aide to Martin Luther King Jr., says Clinton will "keep the dream alive and build a better future for all."

Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson is urging blacks to coalesce behind Clinton, arguing that spreading their votes will dilute their power.

Many younger blacks, however, openly question whether they should follow that philosophy.

"I'm an individual and plan to vote as one," said Morehouse student Anthony Dome, 19. "I'll look at the people supporting (Clinton) but ultimately make my own decision."

Jackson won Georgia's 1988 primary with overwhelming black support. Overall, he received more than 90 percent of the black vote cast in Democratic primaries, a margin none of the current candidates is likely to approach.

"I just don't think blacks are going to vote in great numbers," said Bert Lance, a former adviser to Jimmy Carter and Jesse Jackson.

California GOP endorses Bush in straw vote

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — President Bush overwhelmingly won a straw vote among leaders of the California Republican Party Sunday after dropping efforts to seek a formal party endorsement.

Bush won 89 percent of the straw vote among the delegates to the weekend California GOP convention. The vote was 745 for Bush, 92 for Buchanan.

"The California Republican Party strongly supports George Bush. I think today that message is loud and clear," Party Chairman Jim Dignan said.

But supporters of Buchanan — who has not campaigned at all in California — still claimed a victory from the Bush camp's decision not to seek a formal nod from the party.

"They failed in their primary mission, which was to shut us out of the party mechanism," said Richard Neff, Buchanan's California campaign coordinator. "George Bush didn't get a formal endorsement. George Bush lost."

California officials expect to seat jury today in Rodney King beating case

SIMI VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — A year after the videotaped beating of black motorist Rodney King, four white police officers will relive in court the night that altered their lives and turned the spotlight on police brutality.

If a jury has been seated by today, as expected, opening statements in the officers' trial are scheduled for Wednesday.

On March 3, 1991, King was clubbed, kicked, beaten and struck with a stun gun in front of a crowd of officers who converged after chasing his car several miles. An amateur cameraman, peering out his apartment window, saw flashing lights and flailing arms and turned on his new camcorder.

The tape, played repreatedly on national television, electrified the nation. The Los Angeles Police Department was condemned as racist and its 65-year-old chief, Daryl Gates, was pressured to resign. He said he will leave in June.

In an interview broadcast Sunday on KTTV-TV, Gates said he underestimated the impact of the beating on the police department.

"I think initially I could have indicated I was a little more shocked at what I'd seen," he said. "I was shocked. . . . I was very shocked. But I did not want to indict the officers until we knew what the facts were. I did not want to color it any greater than it already was."

The four officers were charged with using excessive force. Their trial was moved from Los Angeles to Simi Valley in nearby Ventura County because of the political fallout.

Warren Christopher, chairman of a citizens committee formed to review the police department, said there have been changes for the better.

The commission recommended, among other things, a change in police leadership, citing major problems of mismanagement, excessive force and bias against women and minorities in the department.

"We've traveled a substantial distance down the road to reform in the year since the Rodney King incident," Christopher said in a recent interview. "I think the next 12 months will be decisive."

Lawsuits against cities increase

By Arlene Levinson
Associated Press writer

Some call it a law of nature: As cupboards in City Halls fill with cobwebs of debt, people are suing cities more than ever. It's a plaintiff cry heard round the country.

"When times get bad, people get lawyers," said Mayor Sam Pick of Santa Fe, N.M.

A 67-year-old woman is suing Brownsville, Tenn., for $300,000 because she says she got banged up tripping over an uneven sidewalk.

The refusal of Dayton, Ohio, to approve a landfill and recycling center provoked a lawsuit from the disappointed company and a landowner. They say their constitutional rights were violated.

Philadelphia may stare into the abyss of bankruptcy, but that's no deterrent to filers of 4,200 lawsuits pending against the destitute city.

This month, a state appeals court upheld a $4.3 million jury award against New York City and its transit system for a 29-year-old mugger left paralyzed when a police officer shot him. The mugger was fleecing an elderly man in a subway.

No nationwide figures exist on such lawsuits, their size or success rates, say compilers of legal statistics. But city attorneys in Kansas City, Kan., Dallas, Jacksonville, Fla., and Indianapolis, among others, say figures are up.

Around the country, in cities pinched by shrinking budgets, officials complain they're overtaxed by litigious citizens.

Richmond, Va., cut other staff to rein-in costs but hired an extra lawyer when lawsuits jumped 60 percent.

Then there's insurance. Santa Fe just got a notice that its liability premiums will jump from the current $640,000 to $1.2 million with a $250,000 deductible.

Many cities turn to self-insurance, investing their own rainy-day funds for legal emergencies. Others do without and cross their fingers.

Until fairly recently, cities couldn't be held accountable for axle-bending potholes, sickeningly inept public hospitals or brutal police.

But after about 1960, states began passing laws that let people take cities to court. In 1978, the U.S. Supreme Court said the Civil Rights Act applies to government bodies as well.

"The basic message is: for the last 25 years, particularly with the Civil Rights Act, you have a growing liability of municipalities," said Professor David McCarthy of Georgetown University Law Center, an expert in local-government law.

More court access, multiplied by inflation and the many ways government intersects our lives, adds up and up in lawsuits and damages they demand, McCarthy said.

Westinghouse, Philippines to confront bribery charges

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Samuel Hull Jr. says he enlisted a bag man in the Philippines 19 years ago to bribe President Ferdinand Marcos and secure a contract to build a nuclear power plant.

The former executive for the plant's builder will provide key testimony when the Philippines government takes Westinghouse Electric Corp. and subcontractor Burns & Roe Enterprises Inc. to court this week alleging bribery.

The companies deny the charges.

Jury selection was set to begin today. U.S. District Dickinson Debevoise has limited the jury award, if any, to $17.3 million, the size of the alleged bribe.

Pittsburgh-based Westinghouse and its subcontractor, Oradell-based Burns & Roe, won the $2.3 billion job and built the plant. Though the Philippines is paying it off at $300,000 a day, the plant sits idle.

The Philippines government claims the plant was built on a dormant volcano and is riddled with defects and shoddy work. Those issues are the subject of separate arbitration in Switzerland.

Hull ran international operations for Burns & Roe, a design and engineering firm. His account of events is already told in affidavits and depositions.

Burns & Roe was eager for the work but faced stiff competition from Ebasco Services Inc., of France, Hull said in court documents.

In a company telex in 1973, Hull asked a subordinate in Manila to ask a Westinghouse official if he knew anyone who could deliver money to Marcos.

"Suggest you discreetly inquire if Lynne has any knowledge of existence of bag person and if positive how to contact without embarrassment," Hull wrote.

"Lynne" was a reference to Llewelyn Saunders, Far East manager for Westinghouse, Hull said.

With Westinghouse help, Burns & Roe enlisted Herminio T. Disini, a close friend of Marcos, Hull said.

Disini promised "the fix" was 99.99 percent sure, but Hull said he later learned the National Power Commission gave the reactor contract to Ebasco.

Police fatally shoot man near L.A. marathon finish line

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police fatally shot a man Sunday who tried to grab an officer's gun near the finish line of the city marathon just minutes after the winner had run by.

There was no explanation for the sudden attack on two officers by the man who had been walking through the finish area with a cousin, police Lt. William Hall said.

"The cousin says he doesn't know why the dead man flipped out," Hall said.

As runners streamed across the finish line, the man assaulted the officers on foot patrol in a food-and-beverage sales area. He knocked both officers to the ground and began trying to take the 9mm pistol from the holster of one officer.

"A tug-of-war ensued for possession of the weapon," Hall said. "The victim was unarmed, but he was very large and very muscular and he was obviously overpowering the officers."

The officers fired nearly simultaneously, hitting the man in the chest twice. The struggle occurred in an area packed with thousands of spectators and contestants, dozens within immediate gunshot range, making the decision to shoot more difficult, Hall said.

Autopsy tests were planned to determine if the dead man might have been under the influence of drugs. None were found on his body, Hall said.

"This gentleman appeared to have immense strength," said witness Joan Barton.

The annual marathon winds up just south of downtown at the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum. The shooting came minutes after the first few runners completed the 26.2-mile loop.

John Treacy of Ireland won in a time of 2 hours, 12 minutes and 28 seconds.

Madina Biktajirova of Belarus, the former Soviet republic once known as Byelorussia, was the fastest woman. She set a course record of 2 hours, 26 minutes and 22 seconds.

Taxi Driver

Taxi driver Matt Kuykendall has the door open as he waits for one of his regular riders. Matt knows many of his passengers by name and already knows where they want to go.

Right, Lilly Cochran, having arrived by bus from New Jersey, takes a taxi to her new home in Midland.

Right, Connie Urias, a regular customer, uses the taxi to get to the hospital twice a week.

Right, Richard Jones helps his wife Elenora load into the taxi. She is a dialysis patient and depends on the taxi to get her to the Dialysis Center several times a week.

Neither snow, nor rain, nor heat, nor gloom of night stays local taxi drivers from answering the calls of Midlanders in need of a ride.

In fact, the nastier the weather, the better the cabbies like it.

Discussing a recent cold day when torrents of rain pelted the Permian Basin, Rick Burton, who has been employed by Midland's City Cab for seven years — said, "It was a great day!"

Matt Kuykendall, 42, a fellow driver for three years, agreed.

"In bad weather — especially snow and ice — no one wants to drive. So many people here can't drive on ice, so they call a cab," Kuykendall said.

And what about the warm weather, especially those scorching days of summer?

"We love being outside in the sun," Burton said. "A lot of us were oil field roughnecks. We like being outside with people, not cubbyholed into an office."

Kuykendall said he worked as a roughneck "before the oil field went down."

"Then I hit the road for a few years before coming back to Midland and taking a job driving cabs," he said. "It treats me good, I make a living."

Burton, 40, said the drivers work on a commission basis. "But the tips are ours to keep," he said. "When City Cab bought out Yellow Cab in 1991, we started doing better. Now there is about 15 drivers including both day and night shifts."

Kuykendall said his day begins at a very bleary-eyed 4:30 a.m. "Then I work 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. — 12-hour days, six days a week."

"The tips are probably a lot better at night, but most drivers want to work days," he said.

The cab service charges $1.20 per mile, but offers flat rates for long-distance trips.

"For example, a trip to Dallas is roughly $300,"

Nation's elderly find healing in volunteer work

By Lynn Bulmahn
Associated Press writer

WACO — Lee Ann Goeke, 79, sacks beans and rice all day, two days a week.

It's her doctor's orders.

"He didn't like me to stay at home alone," said the Caritas Food for People volunteer. "He said women are the worst ones to turn on the TV."

Before she became a food bank volunteer, Goeke said she'd suffered a stroke and three heart attacks. Since starting her volunteer job of dividing bulk quantities of food into smaller, family-sized packages eight years ago, she's the picture of health.

It's not easy work, she admits. But, she says, she always feels better on the days she volunteers.

Goeke is on to something.

The premise of the new book "The Healing Power of Doing Good" is that volunteering to help others is good for your own health.

The book's author, Allan Luks, a former Peace Corps member who now directs the Big Brothers-Big Sisters agency in New York, said he has noticed a phenomenon he calls "helper's high" among volunteers.

Luks tested his theory by administering a survey to more than 3,000 volunteers from all over the U.S. Almost all — 95 percent — indicated they had a "feel good" reaction after volunteering.

Ninety percent of these surveyed rated their health as better than the health of other people their own age. Many said they began feeling better about the same time they began their volunteer efforts.

Luks is not the only researcher who has found volunteering to be therapeutic. A 10-year University of Michigan study that followed 2,700 people in Tecumseh, Mich., found that doing regular volunteer work dramatically increased life expectancy.

Epidemiologists found that men who did not volunteer were more than twice as likely to die as men who gave of their time at least once a week. The difference was less noticeable among women. Researchers say that may be because women in our society commonly help other people.

'I do not know all the little details that goes into making a person happy. But I would say doing good is one of them.'

— Caritas executive director Eugene Jud

The Michigan epidemiologists concluded that helping others can bring physical and psychological benefits. Their study showed that volunteering added to men's lifespans more than any other activity. Local volunteers and agency directors have noticed much the same things.

"I do not know all the little details that goes into making a person happy," said Caritas executive director Eugene Jud. "But I would say doing good is one of them."

Jud said when people help others, they get a feeling of tremendous satisfaction.

Luks writes that many volunteers experience a feeling of euphoria immediately after their good works. Later on, this mellows into a feeling of calmness. He says this calm sensation may counteract such negative emotions as loneliness, helplessness, hostility or even depression.

United Way Volunteer Center director Dottie Wienecke agrees. "Volunteers live longer," she said. "It's a known fact. When you're not self-centered and serve others, you get better satisfaction out of life."

One's self-esteem may also benefit from volunteering. When the volunteer is well-matched with his volunteer work in terms of skills, Luks says, he also may feel increased confidence and a sense of usefulness.

Luks' book says that although people may feel better helping friends and relatives, the greatest "helper's high" stems from assisting strangers. His survey covered volunteers within 20 agencies, working in all sorts of settings.

"The idea is that your emotions influence your physical health," said Mary Cantrell, whose work as executive director at the Mental Health Association is on a volunteer basis. "When you do things for other people, you get a lot of strokes. Positive strokes are important in the way you feel about your self. People can't live without them."

"When you're doing something that doesn't always involve yourself, I think that's really healthy," said Family Abuse Center volunteer counselor Helga Smith. "I've got friends who volunteer at different places and they all say they feel really terrific."

At Hillcrest Baptist Medical Center, long-time rehabilitation patient Rick Henderson is an outpatient who now volunteers to help others.

"I was in here, in this unit, for awhile — two months," he said. "I got along with everybody so well here that I decided to start volunteering."

Henderson had been paralyzed as the result of surgery to remove a tumor from his spine when he was 17. Now 24, he is learning to walk again.

Between his daily outpatient therapy sessions, Henderson volunteers.

"I push chairs around for people when they're walking," he said. "I run and get stuff for the physical therapists."

Like many volunteers, Henderson hopes to turn his volunteer work into a job. He's wants to eventually become a physical therapy assistant.

Smith is volunteering to fulfill a graduate course requirement toward her licensed professional counselor certification. However, she formerly volunteered at other agencies.

TAXI: Drivers like meeting others

he said, noting that his range "is unlimited."

Burton said a long-distance trip can be unnerving, "especially if you are 40 miles outside of Midland in a field somewhere and your passenger — who doesn't speak English — keeps pointing that their destination is just ahead."

Burton said he is anxious about breaking down "out in the middle of nowhere," but seldom feels isolated because he is always "close to the radio" and in contact with the dispatcher.

"About 95 percent of our customers are trouble-free," he said. "You get a few who run (take off without paying) now and then, but nothing to really worry about. If someone is a problem, we report it to the other drivers."

Both cab drivers said they have regular customers who seem like neighbors. "We take some people to and from work every day," Burton said. "And other regulars, if we don't hear from them in a few days, we will go by, knock on their doors and make sure they are OK."

Aside from a familiar clientele, the drivers said one of the perks of the job is meeting people from "all over the world," including an author from England who was recently in the Tall City researching a book on a local race car designer.

The drivers say their busiest times are the first few days of every month "when people have money from Social Security and pension checks."

For the night crew, the weekends are most lucrative; for the day crew, weekdays keep them hopping.

"And the holidays are just dead," Burton said.

Kuykendall said the day shifts are most sought after because "you don't have to transport the club and bar traffic."

When business is slow the drivers watch a tiny black-and-white television about the size of the average alarm clock. "We also play cards," said Kuykendall, as he produced a deck and began a game of solitaire at the his office on a recent afternoon.

"When waiting for a call we play cards, watch TV, read the newspaper and tell lies," Burton said, laughing.

"For the most part, even if you grew up here, you don't know Midland until you start driving a taxi," Burton said.

"We drive about 150-200 miles per day and we notice the name of every little store and apartment complex along the way, let alone memorize all the street names. We make a lot of friends and some we just know for the trip."

Firefighters douse trailer blaze

Staff Report

ODESSA — A mobile home fire Sunday afternoon destroyed a bedroom but caused only minor smoke damage to the remainder of the trailer, Odessa fire officials said. No one was injured in the blaze.

Two units were called to the blaze at the home in the 5700 block of Tom Green Avenue at 3:17 p.m.

Officials did not release the name of the owner of the home.

The cause of the fire had not been determined.

NASA plans new lunar lander

HOUSTON (AP) — A Johnson Space Center task force is planning to design a new lunar lander suitable for robotic voyages that could pave the way for man's return to the Earth's moon.

The program, proposed by NASA chief of exploration Michael Griffin, could launch an unmanned moon mission as soon as 1996 if it's approved by Congress, the Houston Chronicle reported Sunday.

"What we are looking for both with the orbiters and the landers is a nice neighborhood for a Plymouth Rock," said Harry Erwin, manager of Johnson Space Center's Lunar and Mars project exploration office.

The project, named Artemis, could quickly focus the space program on lunar exploration, perhaps winning confidence from Congress that NASA's plans for a trip to Mars are realistic.

Psychiatrists, judges help jurors face traumas

HOUSTON (AP) — The horrors expelled during the courtroom drama of murder trials — like the grisly details of the recent Jeffrey Dahmer trial in Milwaukee — often leave jurors alone trying to cope with the stress and trauma, Houston court officials say.

"A lot of the murder cases look like something you'd see in a horror show," said Harris County Assistant District Attorney Joe Roach. "They have a hard time fathoming that someone could do something like that."

Roger Bell, a psychiatry professor at the University of Louisville, has spent more than two years helping people cope with the stress of serving on a jury.

Bell and psychiatrist Theodore B. Feldmann "debriefed" jurors following the trials of Larry Mahoney, convicted in the deaths of 27 people in the worst drunken-driving accident in the nation's history.

■ See more state news/7C

Jurors are not formally counseled following trials in Harris County. But judges, prosecutors and defense attorneys routinely talk to juries once a case is completed not only for critiques but also to allow jurors a chance to vent their feelings on what they've witnessed, officials said.

State District Judge Michael McSpadded said both he and jurors reacted emotionally following the 1986 trial of Raymond Edward Coffey.

Coffey was convicted of injury to a child for killing Christopher Kalmbach by forcing black pepper down the 2-year-old's throat.

Officials capture escaped prisoner

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A convict serving a 50-year sentence for aggravated robbery was captured Sunday north of Galveston, one day after he fled in a prison maintenance truck.

Texas Department of Criminal Justice spokesman Charlie Brown said law officers arrested Dennis Jackson, 38, at about 11:35 a.m. at a convenience store in Bacliff.

Jackson was imprisoned since Oct. 21, 1980, after being convicted in Harris County. He had been working on an outside maintenance crew about 8:35 a.m. Saturday when he jumped in the truck and left.

Brown did not know Sunday how the arrest was made, or where officers took Jackson.

'It's a jungle out there' at Heartbeat '92

By Linda Anderson

About 550 Midlanders left late winter in West Texas to spend an evening in the jungle.

American Heart Association's Heartbeat '92 fund-raiser, themed Safari Night, was presented Saturday at ClayDesta Atrium.

The major fund-raiser for the Midland chapter of American Heart Association (AHA), the event was expected to raise about $60,000, according to Kathy Long, chairman of Heartbeat '92.

Funds raised by the event are used in several different ways, said Michael Lemond, president of Midland division of AHA, Texas affiliate. "About one-third of the funds are used for research. This comes back here as a benefit to the local city through medical technology" including "angioplasty and other cardiovascular technology.

"One-third (of the funds) are used for education," he continued. "That is local by and large — school site education, work site education. We provide volunteers who will go to the work site and teach employees how to use the 'Heart At Work' kit. And there's a 'Heart Rx' kit for doctors.

"About 10 percent (of the funds) are used for local programs like cholesterol checks. The remaining funds are used for fundraising."

The jungle atmosphere of this year's Heartbeat was filled with the beat of old-time rock 'n roll, as Johnny Dee and the Rocket 88's blasted out such favorites as "Rock Around the Clock" and other hits from the '50s and '60s.

Buffet dinner, catered by The Plaza Club, included London Broil, chicken breasts, mixed vegetables, Corn O'Brien, dinner rolls and assorted desserts.

Johnny Dee, left, and his band, the Rocket 88's, played classic rock 'n roll at Heartbeat '92.

An auction, presided over by auctioneer J. Gordon Lunn, included such items as a package for "The Sporting Heart" (including stress test, fitness program, cookbook and scuba lessons), "Heart of the Day" (southwest picture, gift certificate, computer and dinner), "Cinderella's Heart" (gift certificate, antique jewelry, dinner, crystal and roses), and "Heart of the Road" — a 1992 Toyota Camry.

And during the evening partygoers could have their photos taken by Midland photographer Lisa Frosch.

Contributors were Janice and Bob Marshall, Parker & Parsley, Doss Rogers, Texas Commerce Bank and Dr. and Mrs. Shelton Viney.

Underwriters were Abell-Hanger Foundation; Fasken Foundation; Kemp, Smith, Duncan and Hammond, P.C.; and Memorial Hospital of Midland and its heart care physicians: Dr. Michael S. Miller, Dr. Brian D. Mohr, Dr. P.V. Patel, Dr. Ravi Patel and Dr. Joseph Suckarieh.

A crowd of party-goers enjoyed dancing to the music of Johnny Dee and the Rocket 88's at Saturday's Heartbeat '92 Safari Night fund-raiser for the American Heart Association's Midland Chapter. The event was presented at ClayDesta Atrium.

ClayDesta donated the space for the event.

Heartbeat '92 committee were Ms. Long, chairman; Karen King, secretary/treasurer; Leanna Preston, auction chairman; Lisa Brown, decorations chairman; Charlotte Heasley, entertainment chairman; Tammy Smith, food/beverage chairman; Gina Aaron, invitations chairman; and Linda Powell, sponsor chairman.

Women build own credit

N.Y. Times News Service

For a married woman to build and maintain a credit history on charge accounts and credit cards, it is important for her to have credit in her own name or in joint accounts. But confusion often arises when marital status changes. Here is some advice on the effect that these life changes can have on your credit status.

■ Marriage: When you marry, you don't have to do anything to maintain the accounts you had when you were single. Or you can establish a credit history via your husband by opening joint accounts, which means that both parties will be responsible for all debts and each will benefit from good payment records (or suffer from poor ones).

■ Divorce: If you are legally separated or divorced, write to all creditors to close all joint or authorized-user accounts. This will avoid future charges by your husband for which you may be liable.

■ Widowhood: A store or credit card company cannot automatically close a joint account when one of the parties dies. But you may have to reapply or update an application to show that you continue to qualify on your own.

Doctor gives advice: Better shop around in supermarket

By Carolyn Poirot
N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH — It was not the blacklisting of Twinkies, but rather the denunciation of corn dogs that caused the most consternation for first-year medical students touring a Tom Thumb Page grocery store recently.

A collective groan — or maybe it was a moan — arose from the 15 Texas College of Osteopathic Medicine students when Dr. Ann Blankenship pronounced corn dogs "just bad, period."

Then there was the big Blue Bell ice cream debate.

But what about Diet Blue Bell with no sugar? Or Blue Bell Lite with less fat? Or Blue Bell Free with no sugar or fat? Surely there was some version of their favorite premium ice cream that was just as healthful as its non-fat frozen yogurt counterparts, some of the students argued hopefully.

The grocery store tour was designed to teach medical students how to make healthful food selections so they can use the information for themselves and pass it along to their patients.

STUDIES HAVE found that one in three medical care dollars could be saved if people practiced good nutrition, said Blankenship, a nutritionist. The problem is people tend to buy foods out of habit without evaluating their choices, she said.

"There are about 20,000 items available in a grocery store, and most people will spend only about 45 minutes a visit there," Blankenship said. "Medical students are like everybody else — they don't have any time and they may not comparison shop. Besides the personal benefit they get from good nutrition, it's important that the physicians know what they're asking of patients.

"They need to know it's not easy to eat right in order to have more empathy for their patients," she said. "It makes them better physicians."

The tours began at the request of some students in her Developing Dimensions in Health Care class after they discovered that she took patients on grocery store tours to teach them to make wise food selections. The medical students wanted in on the action, she said.

"I think fat's the key to most of this stuff — and serving size. What they consider a serving size is really a small portion," said John Brown, one of the students.

One-half cup or a piece of meat the size of your palm is considered a portion for most nutritional information.

HOWEVER, BLANKENSHIP pointed out that one snack pack containing crackers and small pieces of meat and cheese and labeled as having only 40 calories per serving, had eight of those 40-calorie servings in the one small package.

"Labels can be so misleading. Something that's 85 percent fat-free can still get most of its calories from fat," observed David Lopez, another student.

He said he found the bread counter most interesting, with whole grain breads all receiving higher marks from Blankenship than either enriched breads or unenriched products.

"You have to look for whole grain but watch out for sugar, salt and fat. No one thinks of fat in bread," he said.

"Be a perimeter shopper," Blankenship advised. "If you don't know anything else, remember fresher, more perishable items are located around the edges of the store for easy stocking. Processed foods with longer shelf lives tend to be clustered in the middle."

Also: Read labels. Always make sure the first ingredient listed is not high in fat. Margarines should list a liquid vegetable oil first.

And, Blankenship told the student doctors, when buying beef, all you need to remember is "select" and "choice" — "loin" and "round." They will be the most lean cuts.

For hamburgers and sandwiches, grind your own beef or turkey without fat or skin.

To make a good low-fat cheese spread, dump plain non-fat yogurt in a colander lined with a paper towel and let the liquid drip off all night. What's left is great on whole wheat toast, bagels, tortillas or rice cakes.

WHEN IT COMES to cottage cheese, buy whatever's on sale and put it through the same colander process, Blankenship advised.

Remember, 2 percent milk still derives almost half its calories from fat. "Pat yourself on the back when you get down to one-half percent or skim milk," she told the TCOM students.

Look for corn chips prepared with no oil, such as "Guiltless Gourmet." The only fat they have is a smidgen from the corn itself, she said.

"Blue corn chips are actually no better for you than regular — except they have 'mystical powers,'" Blankenship said.

DEAR ABBY

Readers sentence women who like to sit at the bar

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Your reasons why a woman would sit at a bar stool instead of a table show that you have not gone out much as a single woman or you would know why women prefer the bar stool over a table.

Van Buren

As a professional career woman, I can tell you that most women prefer to sit at the bar because it's easier to control "unwanted advances."

A table affords too much opportunity for someone to wander over and sit down (uninvited), making it difficult to extricate yourself from what could be the embarrassment of asking him to leave.

Whereas, while sitting at the bar, you can swivel away, placing your back to the uninvited person, and thus avoid conversation.

The bartender is a single woman's best protector. If she gives a few eye signals to the bartender, he will politely tell the offending person, "Please don't bother the lady." — A WOMAN'S VIEWPOINT

DEAR VIEWPOINT: Read on for another point of view:

DEAR ABBY: I take issue with your response to the Chicago man whose wife preferred sitting at the bar alone — or with her lady friends — rather than at a table.

A lady sitting at a bar projects a different image than one sitting at a table. It is understood that no invitation is required for any individual to occupy the adjacent seat at a bar. When a woman is seated at a table, a stranger will not join her without an invitation.

Abby, tell that man his original "vibes" were correct. If his wife goes to bars alone and does not want to be bothered, she should sit at a table. — MRS. R.S. LICHTENBERG, POULSBO, WASH.

DEAR ABBY: I am a single woman and I like to sit at the bar because I love to dance. If I were to come into a bar and sit at a table, people may think I am waiting for someone, and nobody will ask me to dance. I would rather let them think I was a pickup because, after talking to me, they would find out differently.

As for a married woman sitting with her girlfriend at a bar — that is something else. Why would a happily married woman want to go to a bar without her husband? Either she wants to make him jealous, she's looking for someone else, or she already has someone.

I know. I was a bartender for 15 years. — LOTS OF HANKY-PANKY IN TEXAS

DEAR LOTS: Let's hear it from a woman bartender from Bellevue, Wash.:

DEAR ABBY: Having been a happily married woman bartender with two children, I beg to differ with "J. in Chicago," who says a woman who sits at the bar, unescorted, is usually looking for company.

When I go out without my husband, I always sit at the bar because I know I'll be bothered less by unwelcome company because of the bartender's presence. A bartender serves as a buffer or protector for women who have stopped at a bar for nothing more than a quiet place to "people watch" or who just want to relax and visit with a friend. — DINA

'Hunter' seeks flora, not fauna

By Linda Yang
N.Y. Times News Service

Some things never change. For bring-em-back-alive plant hunters like Paul W. Meyer, there is still danger and exhilaration in scaling mountains and trekking forests. His quest? Splendid new species for gardeners back home.

Never mind that a four-wheel drive has replaced the donkey or yak as preferred transportation.

Or that the once-cheap labor is now a major expense. Modern plant hunters continue a tradition that some believe started with the pharaohs' search for fruiting plants.

Finding prize exotics was also a lucrative pursuit among Renaissance merchants and a fashionable diversion among Victorians.

Sleeping on floors and cheerfully swallowing such delicacies as silkworm pupae fried in soy sauce is still part of the job, Meyer said. On his earliest foray — a 1979 trip to South Korea — he was a staff horticulturalist for the Morris Arboretum of the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia.

There, he netted 200 collections of seeds from rare plants.

Meyer, now director of the Morris Arboretum, strolls its grounds appraising reminders of those early trips, like the now 10-foot-tall Korean Mountain Ash (Sorbus alnifolia) and 15-foot-tall Japanese alder tree (Almus japonica), both rarely seen in the United States.

"Our goal is not simply to add rare or unusual species to the Morris collection," Meyer said. "The plants we look for must further one of several objectives that ultimately benefit home gardeners."

THESE OBJECTIVES include species tolerant of salt spray or flooding, species that expand the gene pool for outstanding traits like variegated leaves or resistance to insects and disease, and species that withstand conditions like the compacted soil that suffocates cities' tree roots — Meyer's particular interest.

And so the Korean Mountain Ash collected from a site near the Sea of Japan has proven tolerant of the ice-melting salts that kill roadside trees, while the Japanese alder, a flood-plain species whose roots have nodules that add to the soil, appears unaffected by impoverished city earth that is lacking in oxygen.

Effective plant collectors are "need driven," said Barry R. Yinger, who has logged more than 20 plant expeditions since 1976, most to Japan. "We go to areas where we expect to find plants with traits that fill our needs," said Yinger, who is head of horticulture for the Somerset County Park Commission in Far Hills, N.J.

One of his own "need driven" excursions took him to a frosty Korean locale where he had heard there were camellias capable of surviving exceptional cold, and to remote spot where day lilies reputedly bore 50 to 70 flowers a stem — "the highest I'd ever heard of," he said.

Both species were located. Seeds were collected. And both are now being propagated for sale to home gardeners.

"I admit I do jump up and down a bit when I discover something special," Yinger said, "like the time in a Japanese woodland when I literally stumbled over something incredible."

IT WAS A white flowering Japanese hydrangea vine (Schizophragma hydrangeoides Moonlight) whose silver leaves have dark green veins.

"Such finds make the heart beat faster and the blood pressure rise," he said, "but I also try not to get overly excited. Sometimes the plants you think are unique turn out not to be. Then you must face the fact they're not such a big deal."

Only in the last four centuries have records documented these "human-assisted movements of plants around the globe," said Dr. Stephen A. Spongberg, author of "A Reunion of Trees" (Harvard University Press, 1990, $35), said. Spongberg's own first hunt took him to Japan and Korea, in 1977.

While the hunter's goal — better garden plants — remains the same, Dr. Spongberg said, few modern explorers go forth the way Ernest Henry Wilson did at the turn of this century.

Chinese Wilson, as he was called, introduced more than 1,000 new garden species in 11 years; he was first sponsored by a single nursery (Veitch & Sons in England), then by a single institution (the Arnold Arboretum of Harvard University).

Dental Update
In the interest of better dental health

Preventive Dentistry

According to the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, by the time a child is school age, the average child has three decayed teeth. Of children over fourteen, 75 to 80% have some form of gum disease. In addition to gum disease, four out of five in this age group also have an average of eleven cavities. By the time middle age is reached, two out of three people have serious gum and bone problems around their teeth and may well be on the way to losing all of their teeth. Much of this process of dental disease can be PREVENTED!

When preventive dentistry is begun at an early age, you can prevent most tooth decay, gum problems, and tooth loss. At present only 30% of Americans see a dentist regularly, which indicates the large number of people who are convinced that toothlessness is inevitable and wait for pain to initiate any kind of dental care. Unless you have waited too long, being toothless is not a necessity, and preventive dentistry is the answer.

EFFICIENCY IN GOVERNMENT

My goal as Midland County Tax Assessor-Collector is to make the office more efficient. By cooperating with the Commissioners Court and working with the Central Appraisal District, we can save a large sum of your tax dollars.

With my years of business management experience, college training, and direct involvement in the oil & gas business, I am the best qualified candidate for your Tax Assessor-Collector. I hold B.S. and M.Ed. degrees in mathematics, a commercial broker's license, and have experience in minerals and oil and gas leasing.

Vote for a sound business approach to running your County Tax Assessor-Collector's office. I would deeply appreciate your vote in the Republican Primary on March 10.

'No Show Rog'

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — Roger Clemens had still not reported to spring training camp Sunday, a full week after he was expected. But his Boston Red Sox teammates continue to build a little shrine to the missing star.

Clemens

Among the items added to the red carpet leading to his booth in the locker room was a milk carton with a baseball card of Clemens attached, and the caption: "Have you seen this pitcher?"

A Waldo book, usually used by kids to search for the title character in drawings dense with people, had Clemens' name taped over the title, thus making it "The Great Roger Search."

A helium balloon was hung that carried the message, "Welcome back. We missed you."

And there was a case of sunflower seeds.

Clemens, who lives in Houston, had said in an interview last week that he was working out and that if he were at camp he would just be standing around spitting out sunflower seeds.

'Horns closer to title

■ With two more wins, the University of Texas will clinch its first outright Southwest Conference basketball championship in almost two decades.

Associated Press

The Texas Longhorns are just two victories away from something they haven't accomplished in 18 years.

If coach Tom Penders' fast-improving team can defeat the Rice Owls on Autrey Court, called the "Jungle Gym," on Thursday night (8:30 o'clock) in a nationally televised (ESPN) matchup and defeat Texas A&M next Sunday at home in an ABC regionally televised 2:45 p.m. game, then the 'Horns will have won their first outright league title since 1974.

Texas had to share the championship in 1986, 1978 and 1979.

Then, if the Longhorns are looking for other horizons to conquer, they can set their sights on a first SWC Post-Season Classic championship. Texas hasn't won one in the 16 year history of the tournament.

The SWC, fighting for national recognition, has become the first conference with three teams owning 20-victory seasons.

Texas, Houston, and Texas Christian have reached the 20-victory plateau.

Texas (20-9) blasted Baylor 97-67 on Saturday while Houston (20-5) struggled at home to subdue Texas A&M 79-69 and Texas Christian (21-7) rallied from a 14-point deficit to defeat Rice 64-59. In a non-conference game, Texas Tech lost in double overtime 96-90 to Northern Illinois.

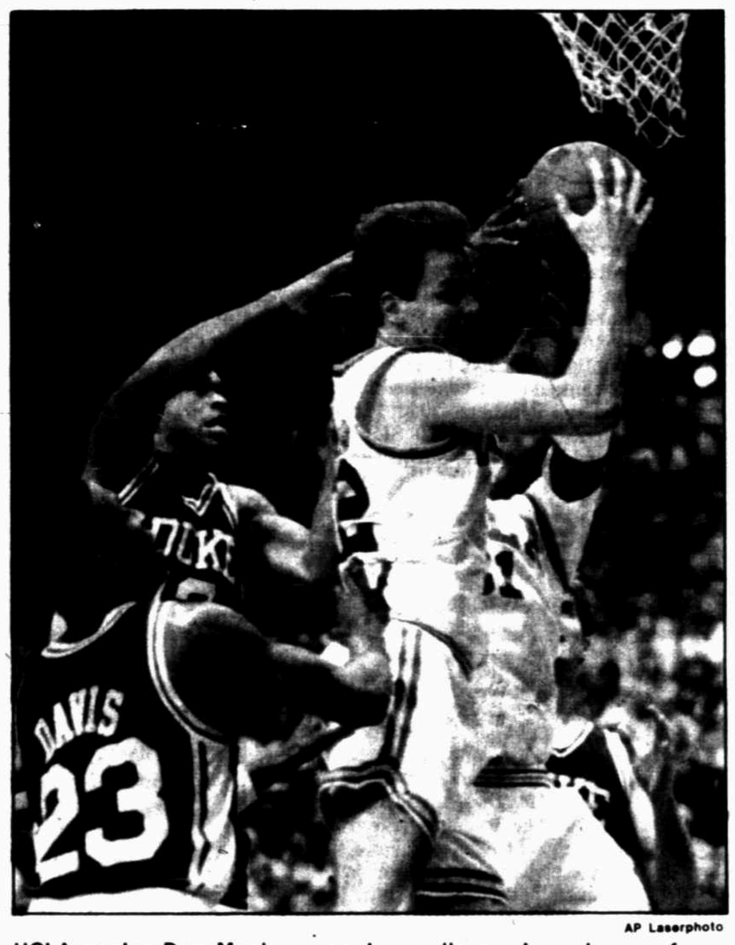

Texas leads the SWC race with a 10-2 mark followed by Houston and TCU at 9-3. Rice is out of contention at 6-6.

The Texas victory was revenge for an 84-68 loss to Baylor at the Ferrell Center on Jan. 27.

"The epitaph for this game was written the day after our last game," said Penders.

Devils ruin Bruins' day

Duke-UCLA falls below expectations

LOS ANGELES — For 37 minutes, Duke-UCLA was as close as expected although certainly not as pretty.

The top-ranked Blue Devils then lived up to their billing, outscoring fourth-ranked UCLA 14-4 over the final three minutes Sunday for a 75-65 victory, the Bruins' third straight loss.

The game was tough, based on defense and well below the anticipated level of a matchup between two of the country's best teams.

"We struggled offensively for the first 30 minutes, but the defense was good throughout," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "It was a dogfight throughout."

It was an even dogfight with the game tied 61-61 with 3:06 to play on two free throws by Christian Laettner.

Duke (23-2), which is playing without injured swingman Grant Hill and with point guard Bobby Hurley just back from a broken foot, then took over and it was Laettner who started things off.

He hit a 3-pointer with 2:32 left to break the final tie and the lead was five 23 seconds later when Antonio Lang converted a steal into a layup.

Don MacLean got UCLA (21-4) back within three with a driving jumper with 1:56 left, but the Blue Devils then scored six straight points to wrap things up as UCLA made one of six shots and committed another turnover.

"I didn't think my 3-pointer sunk the Bruins as much as Lang's steal did," said Laettner, who had 29 points and 13 rebounds.

What really did them in was Hurley returning to the role he handles best for the Blue Devils, transition playmaker.

The first half saw Duke shoot 33 percent (7-for-21) and that was much better than UCLA's 11-for-41

CHICAGO — It was a competitive flop.

"I don't think that's what NBC had in mind when it scheduled the game," Chicago coach Phil Jackson said Sunday after the Bulls romped to a 111-91 victory over the Portland Trail Blazers in a game between two of the NBA's best teams.

NBA

"Our defense was terrific and their shooting was poor. We just caught them on an off day."

Michael Jordan with 31 points and Scottie Pippen with 20 led the rout.

"They contributed to our success by turning over the ball," Jordan said of Portland's 23 turnovers. "You guys made it like it was the NBA finals and that gave us more incentive. We were very aggressive."

"It was very discouraging the way we played," said Clyde Drexler, who led Portland with 26 points. "It's very disappointing to go on national TV with a possible championship matchup and not play better than we did."

Were the Bulls sending a message to the rest of the league?

"Hopefully it was a atatement," Pippen said. "But it wasn't that easy. We took an early lead and they came back. The intensity was there. We took advantage of the turnovers and that was the difference."

Portland coach Rick Adelman said things would be different in the playoffs.

"We wanted to come here and play well," Adelman said. "I'm disappointed

Bill Elliott

Elliott victorious with new pit chief

Associated Press

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. — Bill Elliott always ran his own show and there were questions about how he would get along with crew chief Tim Brewer after switching teams over the winter.

The preliminary answer after the second race of the NASCAR Winston Cup season is "Great!"

That's what the 36-year-old Elliott said Sunday after running away from Daytona 500 winner Davey Allison to win the Goodwrench 500 at North Carolina Motor Speedway.

"When it first came up that I was going to go to Junior (Johnson's team), there was a lot of talk that Tim and I wouldn't work together very well," Elliott said. "But it's been really good.

"We ran great at Daytona (before getting into a mid-race crash) and here the car was absolutely flawless."

The victory was Elliott's first for Johnson and his 35th in 350 career starts.

Johnson, a Hall of Fame driver himself whose previous drivers have given him six Winston Cup titles, said, "With the work and the input he puts into the car and the way he finishes races off, you've got to believe Bill could drive for anybody and be successful. I felt like we'd do real well together, and I think we will."

Elliott, looking like the "Awesome Bill" of old, pulled away steadily over the final 100 miles, beating Allison to the finish line by a whopping 12.75 seconds. They combinbed to control the race with Elliott leading three times for 260 laps and Allison in command four times for 190 laps.

"Tim Brewer and all the guys made it easy on me," Elliott said. "Yesterday, we didn't run very much in practice, but the car was the best one I've ever had at Rockingham. I was just hoping we had it right, and it was."

"Davey would be be good for 40 or 50 laps (after pit stops), then I'd get a good run on him and I'd be able to open up a lead. I knew if the caution flag didn't come out there at the end, we'd be in good shape."

Elliott collected $57,800 from a purse of $854,786.

JIMMY PATTERSON

Musings on a successful MC season

Trying to sit down and figure out the highest of the high points for Midland College basketball this season is not an altogether easy task. While this year was not to be mistaken for the Chaps' national title year in '80-'81, a very entertaining, above average brand of basketball returned to Chap Center after two seasons of mediocrity.

Patterson

Three of the top highlights of the season, though, happened not on the parquet at Chap Center, but rather in New Mexico, Levelland and Odessa. A trio of MC's biggest wins occurred on foreign floors: a two-point defeat of conference champion New Mexico Junior College; a four-point win over South Plains in Levelland, and a thrashing of Odessa College last Thursday night to end conference play.

With a second-place finish in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference, it's on to the Region V tournament next, which begins Friday night in Waco. The Chaps open play Saturday at 8 p.m. against the 20-10 Temple Leopards.

But before embarking on the trip to Central Texas, let us pause and reflect on a few Kodak moments maybe not everyone saw in the just-completed regular season:

■ Tres gigante. South American-born freshman Mauricio Gutierrez rocked Chaparral Center with a buzzer-beating shot from half court during MC's 107-71 win over Frank Phillips, January 9. Gutierrez, not your typical highly-regarded long-range threat, raced off the court as if he had just led his team to the national title.

■ Show some respect for your elders. After OC post Nathan King won a battle in the paint against MC's Ari Rodriques during a January game, King was quoted as saying "I like the way the kid plays." King is 19, Rodriques will be 23 in August.

■ Slam Bang Theater. During a recent practice session, Rodriques, who slam dunked in competition once all season, went up against Gutierrez and hammered home a thundering dunk. When he was finished, Rodriques pointed his fingers at Gutierrez as if he was shooting a six-shooter and saying, 'In your face.' The whole team was on the floor howling at the incident involving the normally placid, undemonstrative Rodriques.

■ Streakers. The Chaps sometimes got on one train of thought and stayed there for a while, be it winning — seven in a row in conference play from December 7 to January 27, or losing — three straight at the end of the season. The seven game conference win streak had not been accomplished since 1987, the three game skid hadn't been seen '80.

■ As good as Green and gold. Make what you'd like out of this, but consider: Steve Green led the Howard College Hawks to the conference championship and regional tournament for two straight years and then vacated that post in favor of MC last spring. MC, during the same two years, stayed home from regionals. Green comes here. MC's back in Waco; Howard stays at home.

Assistant coach Randall Dickey thinks it's more than coincidence.

"I think this year more than anything else placed Coach (Green) on a level above the other coaches in the conference," Dickey said.

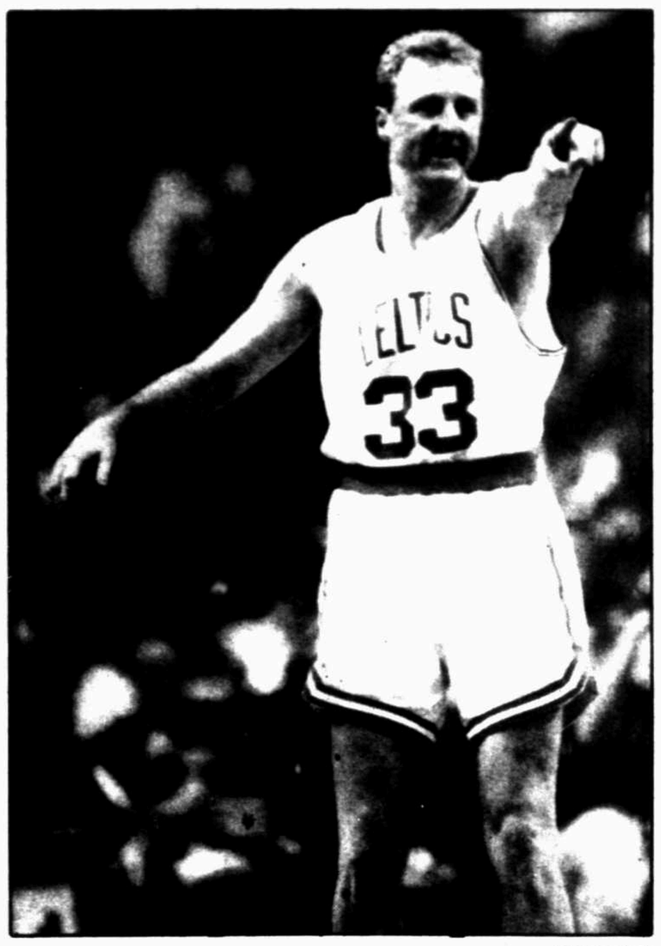

Other notes of interest:

The 91.5 points per game average the Chaps finished the season with was the second highest in school history.

The Chaps will be making their 12th appearance at the regional tournament. In previous trips, MC has finished first five times, second four times, and has been knocked out in the semis on two other occasions.

It was as if Larry Bird never went away for two months ... Sunday night in his return to action after a back injury, Bird scored 26 points and had 13 rebounds against Dallas.

we didn't do better but come April and May, it's a totally new and different situation."

It was the second and last regular-season meeting between the teams. The Bulls also won at Portland 116-114 in double overtime.

The Bulls outscored Portland 35-17 in the second quarter, then blew it open with an 11-2 run early in the third quarter.

The Bulls led 16-7, but two baskets by Drexler and a 3-pointer and two free throws by Terry Porter gave the Trail Blazers their first lead 18-16. Portland led 23-20 after the first quarter.

Then Portland went into a second-quarter funk, going 6:14 without a basket. A 3-pointer by Craig Hodges tied it at 25, as the Bulls went on a 13-3 run to take a 35-28 lead. During that stretch, the Trail Blazers missed four straight shots and had four turnovers.

Celtics 101, Mavericks 91

BOSTON — Larry Bird had 26 points, 13 rebounds and nine assists in a spectacular return from a two-month layoff, leading the Boston Celtics over the Dallas Mavericks.

Sidelined with an inflamed nerve in the lower back since Dec. 30, Bird played 34 minutes, including the entire third period, hitting nine of 16 field-goal attempts and all seven free throws.

The 35-year-old veteran took charge in the third period, sparking the Celtics to just their fourth victory in 12 games. He had seven points, seven rebounds and five assists in the quarter, then returned briefly in the final period, narrowly missing his first triple-double.

Boston broke away from a 59-59 tie in the decisive third period, outscoring the Mavericks 19-9 to take a a 78-68 advantage into the final quarter.

Given a standing ovation when introduced, Bird threw up a brick on his first shot from 18 feet, but quickly settled down. He scored seven points, including a 3-pointer, while playing eight minutes and helping Boston to a 21-21 first period tie.

Bucks 109, Hawks 106, OT

MILWAUKEE — A free throw by Jay Humphries broke a tie with 14 seconds remaining in overtime, and the Milwaukee Bucks ended a five-game losing streak with a victory over the Atlanta Hawks.

The decisive free throw — the only one of four Humphries made in crucial situations — enabled the Bucks to overcome missing six of eight from the line in the final 1:57 of the fourth period. Atlanta, which had easily won its previous three games, outscored Milwaukee 9-1 in that span to tie the contest at 102-102 on Duane Ferrell's 3-point basket at the buzzer.

Clippers 101, Magic 95

ORLANDO, Fla. — Danny Manning scored 25 points and Ron Harper 24, and the Los Angeles Clippers held Orlando to one basket in the final 4:57.

The Magic led 91-89 after Anthony Bowie's layup with 4:57 to play, but they didn't score from the field again until Bowie hit a 3-pointer with 4.7 seconds remaining. Between those two baskets, Orlando missed six consecutive shots.

Suns 114, Jazz 109

PHOENIX — Jeff Hornacek scored 15 points in the fourth quarter, while Kevin Johnson scored 12 and Dan Majerle added 10 in the final period as the Suns beat the Utah Jazz, their 12th consecutive loss in Phoenix.

Majerle, who had just 14 points in the game, made two 3-pointers in a 70-second span. The second capped an 11-1 run and gave Phoenix a 93-84 lead with 8½ minutes to go.

Johnson scored 32 points and had 14 assists in a spectacular duel with Utah point guard John Stockton, whose selection for the U.S. Olympic team left Johnson feeling spurned. Johnson scored 10 of his team's last 14 points in the final 3:10.

Karl Malone led the Jazz with 26 points and 13 rebounds. Theodore Edwards scored 23 points and Jeff Malone added 19.

Hornacek scored 27 for the Suns and Tim Perry had 20.

Nets 90, Knicks 75

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Chris Dudley had 18 rebounds, leading New Jersey's 65-39 rebounding advantage, and the Nets ended a nine-game losing streak against New York by beating the Knicks 90-75 Sunday night.

The win was the Nets' first over the Knicks since March 28, 1990 and it helped New Jersey extend its current overall winning streak to four games, all against winning teams. The Nets are four games into a stretch of 11 consecutive games against plus-.500 teams.

In the last three games, the Nets snapped an 11-game losing streak against Portland, an 11-game road losing streak to Detroit and the nine-game losing streak to the Knicks.

SuperSonics 113, Cavaliers 107

SEATTLE — Eddie Johnson scored 22 points, including the go-ahead basket with 2:35 left, and Michael Cage had 16 points and 14 rebounds, lifting the Seattle SuperSonics over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Johnson broke a 100-100 tie with his basket. Ricky Pierce's layup with 2:02 left made it 104-100 before a layup by Johnson gave the SuperSonics a six-point advantage with 1:04 left.

Seattle, which won its sixth consecutive home game, clinched it by making seven of eight free throws in the last 30 seconds.

effort (26.8 percent). The Blue Devils committed 14 turnovers in the first half, one less than their game average for the season. Those are not usual Duke numbers when Hurley is running the show.

"Our big question is how we handle Hurley's reentry," Krzyzewski said of his junior floor leader who broke his foot on Feb. 5 and made his return last Wednesday against Virginia. "In the first half we didn't hit him on the break and I said to the guys 'He's back. Let's hit him and run our offense."

A 29-24 halftime deficit turned into the 10-point win when the Blue Devils did just that.

"I was wondering if we were going to score a lot of points the way we were playing in the first half," said Hurley, who finished with 11 points and four assists. "Our defense kept us in the game and then we started working the break like we can."

The stepped-up offense was OK by UCLA's way of thinking until the final three minutes.

"You have to hand it to Duke," UCLA coach Jim Harrick said. "They stepped up and hit the big shots in the stretch. Laettner's 3-pointer took the starch out of us. Duke played well in the second half and they played a great game in the last three minutes."

Tracy Murray, who led UCLA with 22 points, said he wasn't surprised by the final minutes.

"That's why they're No. 1," he said. "You knew they'd step up. You wait for Bobby to do things like that, he's a good point guard and that's what they do down the stretch."

UCLA finished 0-for-14 from 3-point range and only reserve Tyus Edney was better than 50 percent from the field for the Bruins.

"That was a significant factor," Harrick said of the shooting woes. "We have shot the ball well from the outside all year, but their defense is very good."

The buildup to the game was tough to live up to, especially a non-conference game in the final weeks of league competition.

Duke had already locked up first place in the Atlantic Coast Conference and has two games to play.

UCLA, on the other hand, is tied with Southern Cal, which beat the Bruins twice, for first in the Pac-10 so they have to finish ahead of their crosstown rivals to win the league.

"We need to win a game to get back on track," said MacLean, who finished with 20 points and 10 rebounds. "We played hard and have nothing to be ashamed of, but these are games we have to win now. We played good but didn't win. We have as much talent as Duke and we shouldn't lose on our home floor."

Duke thrives on the road challenge.

"We think we can go to any city and win," he said. "The signifigance of this game is that we have to get used to going into otner areas with hostile enviroments."

Brian Davis, who finished with 19 points and 11 rebounds for Duke, said it was just another win for the Blue Devils as they prepare to defend their title.

"We have a lot of big games, but no bigger games," he said. "The end of the game is when we get aggresive, when we attack. We've been there."

No. 2 Indiana 76, Illinois 70

Damon Bailey made three free throws in the final 28 seconds as the Hoosiers (21-4, 12-2) held off the visiting Illini and retained their one-game lead over Ohio State in the Big Ten.

Indiana led 67-45 with 6:45 to play, but the Illini closed to 73-67 with 50 seconds remaining. Deon Thomas of Illinois lost the ball out of bounds attempting a shot, and Bailey made the front end of a one-and-one with 28 seconds to go. Rennie Clemons of Illinois traveled and Bailey made two free throws with 12 seconds left.

Maryland 82, No. 10 North Carolina 80

Walt Williams' tip-in with 1.3 seconds stopped North Carolina's rally from a 22-point deficit as the visiting Tar Heels extended their losing streak to four, their longest since 1965.

Maryland led 51-29 at halftime before North Carolina (18-7, 8-6 ACC) rallied. The Tar Heels took their first lead at 80-79 on a three-point play by Hubert Davis with 18.5 seconds to go.

Evers Burns then missed a short jumper for Maryland, and Williams, who scored 28 points, converted his second tip-in attempt.

No. 11 Kentucky 80, Vanderbilt 56

Jamal Mashburn made five of six 3-point attempts and scored a career-high 34 points as the Wildcats (22-5, 11-3) clinched the SEC Eastern Division title with its seventh straight victory. Kentucky turned the ball over only five times as it won its 16th straight at home against Vanderbilt.

Seton Hall 77, No. 24 Connecticut 64

Bryan Caver, left out of the starting lineup for violating team rules, scored 11 straight points in the second half and finished with 18 for Seton Hall (18-7, 10-6 Big East), which has won nine of 11, including six against ranked teams. The Huskies (17-8, 8-8) have lost seven of eight.

Irish as inconsistent as they come this season

Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Notre Dame has developed an odd quirk of character this season: it makes the tough look easy, and the easy seem impossible.

While the Irish (13-12) have vanquished ranked opponents like UCLA, North Carolina and Syracuse, they've stumbled badly before the likes of Detroit Mercy, Butler and Dayton.

First-year coach John MacLeod winced when he signed on to lead a faltering program that would face 11 teams that have made the Top 25. No one was predicting a winning season, much less an NCAA tournament bid.

"Their mothers certainly didn't make that schedule," said St. John's coach Lou Carnesecca. "I don't know who could make that schedule and not come out wounded, if not dead."

Make no mistake, the Irish have taken their lumps against ranked teams. Indiana crushed them by 28 points. Duke won by 29. Kentucky by 21. Missouri and Michigan handed them nine-point losses.

But Notre Dame has inflicted casualties of its own in a growing list of ranked-team victories that also includes Southern Cal and DePaul. Carnesecca's No. 20 St. John's squad became the latest when the Redmen fell Saturday, 79-70, and ended a seven-game winning streak.

LaPhonso Ellis scored 30 points for Notre Dame, 16 in a perfect performance at the free throw line. Malik Sealy led St. John's (17-8) with 21 points.

"This was another great ballgame," MacLeod said. "We've had a lot of these here recently. I think that shows we're getting better."

But for how long? After beating North Carolina by a dozen points, Notre Dame lost to West Virginia by 20. A victory over UCLA was followed by a two-point loss to Dayton.

The Dayton loss was followed by a nerve-wracker against Loyola in which Notre Dame gave up most of a 17-point second-half lead but held on for a 76-67 victory.

"It's happened to us a couple of times, so I was hoping we could learn from what happened before and just be able to pull away," said freshman Billy Taylor.

After the St. John's victory, the Irish face another unheralded opponent — Xavier — in their final home game. Notre Dame closes the season on the road against DePaul and Evansville.

The independent Irish have no conference standings to worry about and focus instead on making the post-season tournament.

Seles solidifies grip with win at Evert Cup

N.Y. Times News Service

INDIAN WELLS, Calif. — She hits the ball harder than anyone else, finds angles the mathmeticians have yet to discover and shows an appetite for winning that is nothing short of insatiable.

There's been no scientific evidence that Monica Seles is of extraterrestrial extraction, but some of her chastened opponents are beginning to suspect it.

How did she celebrate her latest display of invincibility? She hopped in an air balloon Sunday afternoon and disappeared into the smoggy stratosphere above the Palm Springs desert.

At the Matrix Essentials Evert Cup, a $350,000 tournament where the title sponsor doled out beauty makeovers to the players and the presenting sponsor, Chris Evert, doled out tips on maternal bliss along with a crystal trophy, Seles cemented her No. 1 status with a 6-3, 6-1 victory over eighth-ranked Conchita Martinez of Spain.

It has been two years since Seles entered an event and failed to reach its final, she has amassed a 178-23 career match record, and on Sunday she captured her 23d title after reaching her 22d consecutive final.

Only Steffi Graf has equaled her for consistency in finals, and only Martina Navratilova, with a 23-tournament span that ended eight years ago, has gone her one better.

"I've still got to improve a few things," said the 18-year-old Seles, the certified baseline hellion who figures that the addition of a similarly vicious volley "will make me an even better player than I am now."

And then the Yugoslav expatriate flew away, leaving it to her downcast opponent and to Evert to reflect on this latest achievement.

"Her style doesn't remind me of anybody," Evert, who lent her name to this new tournament, said of Seles. "She hits angles I've never seen before. What separates her from everyone else is that, mentally and emotionally, she has it all together. She has that hunger: It's just so normal for her to win."

For the seventh time in seven meetings with Seles, the third-seeded Martinez lost in straight sets. Attempting to explain Seles's propensity for reducing opponents to victims, Martinez, just as she had throughout the match, shook her head and gave a hopeless shrug.

"She played hard from everywhere on the court," said the 19-year-old Spaniard.

Crowd favorite Couples defeats Love at LA Open

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Fred Couples was the darling of the huge gallery at the Los Angeles Open Sunday, with Davis Love III seemingly cast as the villain.

The two matched stroke for stroke for the final five holes of regulation and one playoff hole, before Couples rolled in a 10-foot birdie putt on the second playoff hole to win his second LA Open title in three years.

The majority in the crowd of 52,200 at Riviera Country Club seemed to be pulling for Couples.

"I don't think anyone out there ever roots against somebody," Couples said. "I think the fans were for me, but I don't think they were against Davis at all.

"The last two or three years, I've done well here and I've gotten a good following."

Love, who just missed a 35-foot birdie try on the second playoff hole that would have kept the playoff going, said he didn't like some of the comments from the crowd.

"The noise didn't bother me. The only thing that did were the people who were verbally pulling against me," Love said. "It didn't make me play bad, but it is upsetting to have people come to a golf tournament and outwardly pull against somebody, especially in a playoff.

"There were at least five or six times that I heard people pulling against me when I'd miss a putt. It was like when somebody would miss a putt against Jack Nicklaus."

Some in the gallery made snide remarks to Love about the 12th hole the previous day, when he took a triple-bogey 7.

Glenn holes ace

Staff Report

Gene Glenn sunk his second ace on the same hole at The Club at Mission Dorado Sunday afternoon.

Glenn perfected the 145-yard, No. 17 hole, using a 7-iron.

Glenn's playing partners included Bill Gray, Jim Sumner and Tookie Berry.

Lee netters bring back Border Olympics title

Staff Report

LAREDO — Midland Lee's boys and girls tennis teams garnered enough points Friday and Saturday to bring home the team title in the Border Olympics high school tennis tournament, held Friday and Saturday in Laredo.

Lee netters finished with 24 points, outdistancing second place McAllen Memorial, which put 16 points on the board.

The Lee girls doubles team of Stacey Stroman and Mabry Kniffen defeated teammates Monisha Poudyal and JoAnn Kelly, 7-5, 6-3, in the finals.

Gooch-Moore, Lee's boys doubles entry, advanced to the finals before losing to Alice's top doubles entry, 6-4, 4-6, 6-1.

In boys' singles, David Stark advanced to the semifinals before being put away by Laredo United's Carl Sanchez, 6-1, 6-1. Stark's teammate, Raymond Streeter, fell in the quarterfinals.

Wendy Hobbs moved to the girls singles finals before falling, 6-1, 6-2, to McAllen Memorial's Natasha Leaky.

Sierra ups his asking price by $2.5 million

Associated Press

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. — Texas Rangers outfielder Ruben Sierra has increased his price for a five-year contract from $27.5 million to $30 million.

Texas rejected the $27.5 million proposal last month and went to arbitration, where Sierra was awarded a $5 million, one-year contract, the highest ever in arbitration.

The deal gave Sierra the third-highest salary in baseball this season, but he was disappointed the Rangers wouldn't agree to his multiyear proposal.

"I grew up with this team, up from the minor leagues," he said Saturday. "I don't want to play for another team. But they only want to guarantee two years."

The Rangers' final offer was worth between $14 million and $16 million for three years in present-day dollars, but included money deferred over more than 40 years. Texas wouldn't guarantee a five-year deal because the team is concerned that television revenue may decrease after 1993.

"They don't need to worry about that," Sierra said. "They need to worry about winning the pennant and the World Series."

Sierra is eligible for free agency after the season, but remains confident Texas will meet his escalating price.

"I don't think I'm going to go anywhere," he said. "I'm going to be back here. I'm going to have a great season and make them change their minds. I'm going to do what I can do and have a great season so they'll believe in me again."

Rangers manager Bobby Valentine said he feels the same way.

"After talking to him, I think we're on the same wavelength and he'll be here for a long, long time," Valentine said.

Minnesota nips Texas A&M

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Charlie Nelson singled to left center with two out in the seventh inning to score George Behr and give Minnesota a 9-8 victory over Texas A&M Sunday at the Metrodome.

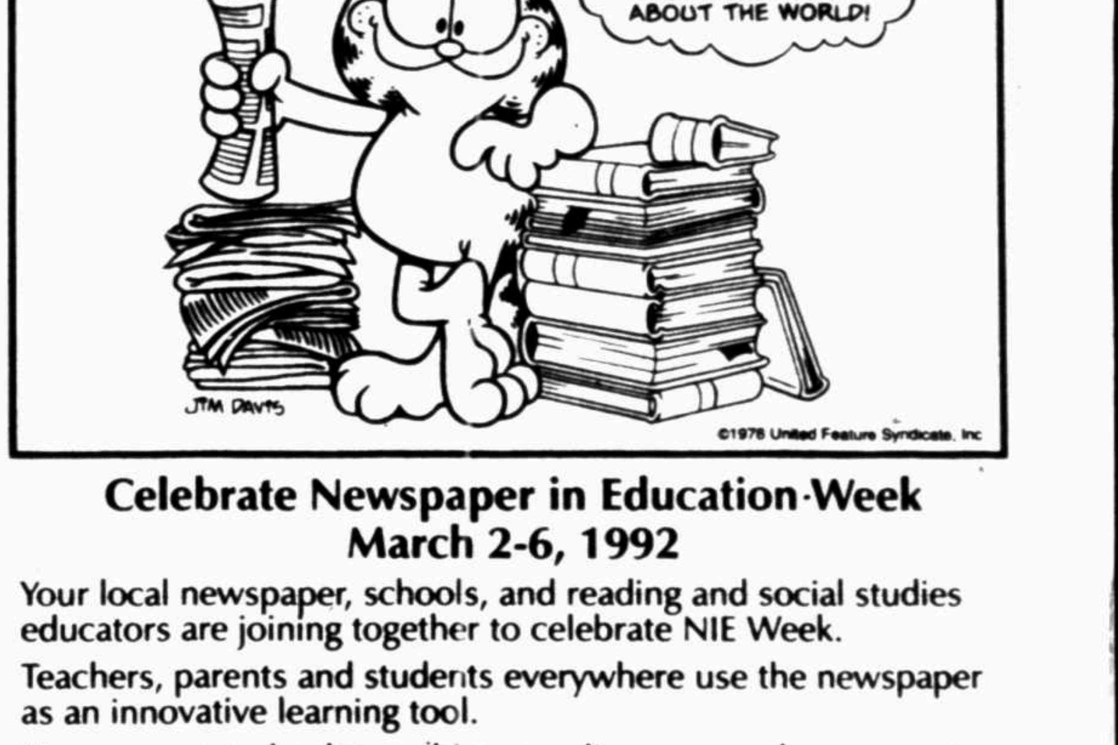

The game was shortened from nine innings to seven because of Texas A&M's flight arrangements.

Texas A&M defeated Florida State and Mississippi State earlier in the three-day tournament to finish with a 2-1 tourney record. Minnesota finished 1-2, losing to Mississippi State and Florida State.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

MONDAY, MARCH 2, 1992

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Mikhail Gorbachev, author John Irving, actress Jennifer Jones, rock star Eddie Money.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You can make sizable financial gains now by consolidating your resources and becoming more aggressive. A practical approach is vital. Romance brightens your evening.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You will serve your cause best by showing a cooperative spirit. Be on the lookout for an opportunity to join forces with a member of the opposite sex. Together, you can accomplish miracles!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Limit your socializing if money is in short supply. Remember someone who helped you at a critical time and reciprocate. New romance is on the horizon. Make a clean break with the past.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Someone may want to use you as a sounding board. Be frank. Solo efforts pay the biggest dividends now. A conversation with higher-ups could make your day. Look for ways to cut expenses.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Avoid making even minor mistakes where your financial interests are concerned. Purchase essentials only. Communications with a member of the opposite sex take on romantic overtones.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Give more thought to the location of your home and office. Make certain you are on sound financial footing before launching any new ventures. Stick to conventional business methods.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Employment matters may not be moving as fast as you would like. Do your best to remain patient and confident. Keep the menu simple if entertaining tonight. You could be late getting home.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The financial picture will show definite improvement this week. Your artistic interests are stimulated by a loved one's encouragement. Romance moves in an exciting new direction.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The emphasis is on maintaining your dignity and composure. Your help is needed in straightening out a delicate situation. You gain valuable insights from talking with new friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A friend from your past could reappear today. Entertain in the comfort of your own home instead of going to an expensive restaurant. Your mate is in an understanding mood.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A better day for winding up old projects than launching new ones. A friend's business tip could prove right on the money. The extra income will prove handy.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Financial progress may be slower than you would like. Avoid forcing the pace, especially where joint resources are involved. Very little stands in your way of achieving public acclaim.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are original thinkers who will express themselves with great eloquence. These youngsters' questions reveal their deep curiosity about all aspects of life. Adventurers at heart, these Pisces love a challenge. They eagerly tackle the tough jobs that their peers find daunting. Travel will be a lifelong passion. There is nothing like a change of scenery to boost these children's spirits!

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠83 ♡6 ◇QJ76 ♣KQ6542
Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
A.—This is not the hand to count two points for your singleton heart, which would merit a response of two clubs. The hand is a potential misfit, so do nothing to encourage partner. Respond one no trump.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠9542 ♡3 ◇AJ652 ♣AK2
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 NT	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Since partner would have responded in a four-card major if he had one, and might have raised diamonds with four-card support, you can expect to find four or more clubs in the North hand. Indeed, we wouldn't be surprised if partner held six clubs, so we would rebid two clubs! The only time this could land you in the wrong strain is if partner's distribution is precisely 3-3-3-4.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQJ762 ♡KQ85 ◇K6 ♣7
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Take away the king of hearts, giving yourself a minimum opening bid and a weak second suit, and you would rebid two spades. With this considerably stronger hand, you should have no qualms about rebidding two hearts.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K105 ♡AQ872 ◇K985 ♣6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Suppose you bid two diamonds and partner takes a preference to two hearts. Wouldn't you feel guilty about suppressing your spade support when partner might have five, possibly six, cards in the suit? However, your hand isn't good enough for another bid. Avoid this dilemma by raising to two spades now.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KJ76 ♡AK854 ◇K8 ♣A6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Even if partner has a dead-minimum response, you want to be in game, and the surest way to get there is to just bid it. A jump to three spades would be invitational and could be passed, so jump to four spades.

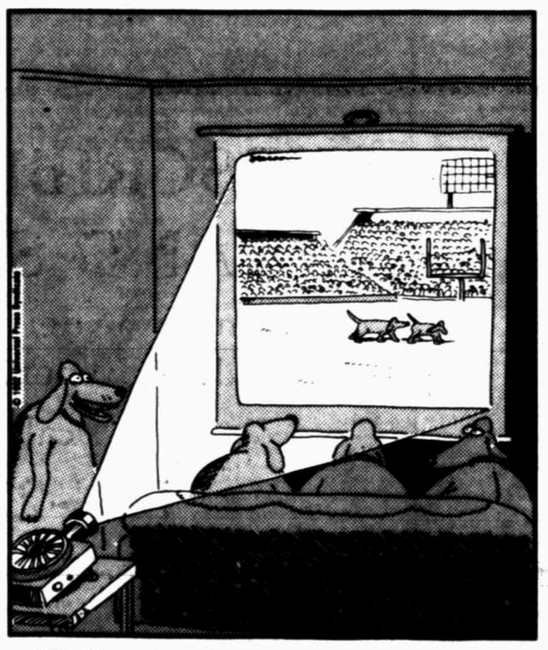

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KJ6 ♡AK854 ◇K93 ♣A9
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—This is the same strength hand as in the previous example, but you have only three-card support for spades, so you can't jump in responder's suit. Instead, leap to two no trump to show your balanced 19 points with stoppers in the unbid suits. You can still get to four of a major should partner now support hearts or rebid spades.

Appearance by Kitty Dukakis draws praise from Fla. judge

Kitty Dukakis, the wife of Michael S. Dukakis, the former Massachusetts governor who was the 1988 Democratic presidential nominee, stood beside a defendant in a drug trial in West Palm Beach, Fla., on Wednesday and asked the judge to give the woman a second chance.

Dukakis

Mrs. Dukakis, who has acknowledged her own struggles with alcoholism and pill addiction, made a special appearance in Palm Beach County Circuit Court before Judge Richard Wennet when Joyce Fries, 35, pleaded guilty to drug charges.

Mrs. Dukakis appeared in connection with her work as a counselor at Wayside House, a residential drug rehabilitation center in Delray Beach, Fla. She said of Miss Fries, "I have no doubt that she will continue with the successful record that she has kept with us, one day at a time."

Wennet later accepted a plea bargain, sentencing Miss Fries to three years' probation.

Spectators in the court said the judge seemed surprised to see the wife of a national figure before him.

The judge "welcomed and praised her," Phyllis Michelfelder, the executive director of Wayside House, said yesterday. "He told Miss Fries, 'Hopefully this will make a real difference to you when a person of this stature can come to court and has faith in you.'"

Another Florida judge, Mary E. Lupo, who presided over the rape trial of William Kennedy Smith in December, will go to New England in April to preside over a mock trial at Yale Law School.

The Thomas Swan Barrister's Union, the student organization that arranges mock civil and criminal trials before juries drawn from the New Haven area, said the case she is to hear on April 24 has yet to be decided.

"Judge Lupo was in the news at the time we were sending out feelers to various judges around the country," said Grant Dorfman, a third-year law student who is a director of the Barrister's Union.

"She was definitely someone we wanted to have. We thought she handled herself with considerable grace in a difficult situation."

"Plus," he added, "she is a celebrity."

NEW YORK — The recession has not only sent the art market into the toilet. It's put a dint in a prize toilet seat decorated by Willem de Kooning.

Bidders at an art auction Thrusday turned their backs on a five-hole, three-seat toilet bench decorated by the 87-year-old abstract expressionist.

The 10-foot bench, on which de Kooning drew black-and-white abstract doodlings during a garden party in 1954, failed to attract its reserve price — the lowest bid acceptable to the seller.

Bidding went no higher than $7,500.

Guernsey Auction House, which conducted the sale, declined to divulge the reserve price or identify the seats' owner. The auctioneer estimated its value at $50,000 to $60,000.

LAKELAND, Fla. — Mayor Frank O'Reilly was crushed. Irish rock band U2 was in town all week rehearsing for the Saturday start of its first U.S. concert tour in five years and he hadn't gotten in to shake hands.

"I'm so mad I could die," said O'Reilly, a 56-year-old native of Ireland and a U2 fan. "I was going to give them a key to the city."

Dan Donoghue, 22, was luckier.

He drove 90 miles from Clearwater to rehearsals at the Lakeland Civic Center just to glimpse lead singer Bono and ended up giving him the T-shirt off his back.

"Bono turned around and said to me, 'Cool T-shirt,'" Donoghue said. "It was a Bob Marley shirt, so I took it off and gave it to him."

LAWRENCE, Kan. — The last time feminist writer Robin Morgan spoke at the University of Kansas, women seized a campus building to demand better treatment and forced the creation of a Women's Studies Department.

Returning 20 years later, Morgan, 51 and now editor of Ms. magazine, pronounced the feminist movement alive and well with plenty of work to do.

"Two-thirds of the world's non-literates are female," Ms. Morgan said. "The vast majority of the poor, the starving, the less educated — forcibly less educated — are female.

"Ninety percent of all refugee populations are women and children. There's no world problem that doesn't impact earliest and most severely on female human beings, and yet female human beings are not the ones who are consulted about the remedies for it."

She urged women to seek power through political office as well as traditional activism.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Country music singer Don Williams says his March concert tour of Britain and Ireland isn't for the money, it's for the fans.

"It's too far to go just for the paychecks," he said.

Prices slip

NEW YORK — Oil prices fell modestly Friday, in a mostly dull session enlivened only by the first offering of sour crude futures at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in April settled at $18.68 per barrel, down 7 cents.

Lower-grade West Texas Sour for delivery in May debuted at the exchange by settling at $16.05 per barrel. The high price was $16.10 and the low price was $15.90.

For the week, sweet crude rose 2 cents a barrel on contracts for next-month delivery.

Traders said no news moved the market, which was dominated by technical features relating to Friday's expiration of the March delivery contract for heating oil and gasoline.

Natural gas prices were mostly higher, with contracts for delivery in April settling at $1.171 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 1.5 cents for the day. Natural gas fell 7.8 cents for the week on contracts for next-month delivery.

Dollar gains

NEW YORK — The dollar made modest gains against major foreign currencies Friday in a volatile trading session that lacked any significant market-moving news.

At closing in New York, the dollar closed at 1.6390 German marks, up from 1.6345 late Thursday.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell to 129.33 Japanese yen from 129.35 yen at Thursday's close.

In London, the British pound rose to $1.7565 from $1.7550 late Thursday.

Stocks retreat

NEW YORK — The stock market posted a small loss Friday after an early advance faded.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than 12 points at midafternoon, closed with a 1.78-point loss at 3,267.67. That left the average with a net drop of 12.52 points for the week.

Declining issues held a slight edge on advances in the daily tally at the New York Stock Exchange.

Survey: Business confidence rises

■ Analysts see signs of emerging optimism from nation's manufacturers.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The first signs are emerging that the nation's manufacturers are becoming more confident of the future and are looking ahead to increased production and, eventually, additional jobs.

A private survey of business confidence rose in February, reversing months of steady declines. And the government reported a big jump in capital goods orders in January, suggesting businesses are beginning to resume investing in new equipment.

Still, most analysts believe industrial production will remain weak — if not negative — during the current quarter as businesses postpone purchases and try to sell inventories that built up at the end of 1991.

Any improvement, the analysts say, will be modest compared with other post-World War II recoveries.

The manufacturing sector, which had the unusual role of leading the economy out of the recession last spring, stalled in the fall with the rest of the economy.

But a February survey by Cahners Economics of Newton, Mass., suggested "an expanding economy will be evident by mid-year." The monthly survey asks 400 businesses about their outlook three months in the future.

Kermit Baker, Cahners' chief economist, said a sharp upturn in the firm's January index "provided the first clear indicator that the U.S. economy is reviving."

The January reading, Baker said, was supported when the Cahners' index rose a month later. The index had fallen steadily from June until December.

However, "to confirm any real shift toward economic recovery, business has to see signs of consumer confidence returning," Baker said.

An index of current activity compiled from a survey by the National Association of Purchasing Management was unchanged in January after falling for three straight months.

"I have a sense that we're building a bottom here, if not in January, then in the month or two to come," Robert Bretz, chairman of the association's survey committee and head of corporate purchasing for Pitney Bowes Inc., said when the survey was released a month ago.

The association's survey for February was to be released today.

The Commerce Department report on orders for big-ticket durable goods last week showed overall non-defense capital goods orders jumped 9.1 percent in January. Excluding aircraft, which some analysts contend often skews the figures because of volatility, orders still rose 4.3 percent.

Capital goods orders often are a barometer of industry plans to expand and modernize, as well as a measure of business confidence. Still, some feel the business investment plans are due more to lower interest rates and lower equipment prices than to growing confidence.

U.S. quality to be focus of lectures

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

As America strives to find ways to compete in the world economy, attention turns to quality.

And quality is the focus of the Midland College chapter of Students in Free Enterprise "Success 2000" lecture series, which is scheduled to begin March 17 with a speech by Hogan T. McWilliams, director of quality for Texaco Exploration & Production Inc.

SIFE is a non-profit organization formed to establish and direct student-generated free market economic education programs.

The chapter chose to focus on quality because it is "big news," said Andra Jones, chapter president. "Since we've been in this recession, people want to find out what the problems are, and this series will help people realize what they can do to change the situation. We're just laying a foundation, really. Changes aren't going to happen quickly," she said.

"Over the last 20 years," Ms. Jones said, "it has become acceptable in American management to be 'quick and dirty' with 'tolerable error rates.' Now, we are beginning to realize that maximum output at the expense of craftsmanship is short-sighted. If we are to compete in the global economy, we must compete with quality products and excellent service. The economic strength and vitality of the Permian Basin in the year 2000 will depend on the area's capacity to educate, train and retain a quality work force in the 1990s and beyond."

Dr. Jerry Lee Jones, chairman of business studies at Midland College, agreed that quality is becoming a major concern, and added that he believes the nation is in a state of "quality crisis in education, government, business."

Jones said that sources tell him Gov. Ann Richards is expected to announce early this week a Total Quality Management program for the state of Texas, a sign of growing concern with improving quality throughout the country.

Yes, he said, he believes Americans can return to a commitment to quality and better compete in the world economy.

Ross Perot Jr. flies in a helicopter past the new American Airlines maintenance facility at Alliance Airport north of Fort Worth recently.

Airport area expands with little fanfare

By Evan Ramsted
Associated Press writer

FORT WORTH — Blink. There's a new airport here.

Blink. There's a new company by the airport.

Blink. There's another highway nearby.

Things aren't happening quite that fast in Tarrant County. But in less than four years, empty prairie 10 miles north of downtown has become a one-of-a-kind airport and the fastest-growing region in North Texas.

Alliance Airport is the largest built in the United States since nearby Dallas-Fort Worth International was finished in 1974 and the first built jointly by government and private interests.

"That's where the name Alliance came from, an alliance of the private sector and public sector," said developer Ross Perot Jr., chief mover of the project and son of the Dallas billionaire.

Alliance is the first airport in the U.S. built jointly by government and private interests.

The Federal Aviation Administration asked to build a reliever airport on Perot land in January 1987. The Perots studied the idea, contacted local companies and decided a larger airport was needed than the FAA planned.

So they offered to donate the land, pay for the engineering and environmental studies, annexation and zoning costs. Eighteen months later, ground was broken for the nation's first industry-only airport. And 18 months after that, in December 1989, Alliance opened for business.

Since then, the Santa Fe Railroad, American Airlines, Drug Enforcement Administration and others have moved in. And a new state highway linking Alliance with Dallas-Fort Worth International is about to open.

"To me, spring of 1992 is when Alliance formally opens," Perot said.

A cone-shaped control tower and American's quarter-mile-long hangar dominate the Alliance landscape. Much of its 4,800 acres is still pasture, grazed on by longhorn cattle, but signs in Hill Country limestone now mark its entries.

In the past five years, an estimated $1.5 billion has been spent to develop the area north of Fort Worth. That includes Alliance, American's $500 million maintenance base at the airport, office campuses, a U.S. Treasury currency plant, warehouses, new housing, schools and parks.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Unhappy investor should consider arbitration

By Bill Doyle

Q. Last year, I bought 175 shares of a stock at $7 a share. I made the purchase because a broker said it was a good investment. Later in the year, I told that broker I wanted to sell those shares and purchase a different stock. The broker was against that move. He again said the stock I owned would do well and that I should trust his and his firm's judgment.

Doyle

I kept the 175 shares. Two weeks later, I was notified that company was no longer in business and that I had lost the $1,225 I invested.

I wrote to the president of the brokerage firm, who replied that his compliance department would investigate. Two weeks later, I received another letter, stating the firm would defend and protect its representative — my broker.

If the broker had done as I asked, I would have made money. The stock I wanted to buy has gained in value. I feel cheated. Do I have any recourse?

A. You can try to recoup your loss by starting arbitration proceedings against the broker and his firm. Because the two stocks you named in your letter have a record of being traded in the over-the-counter market, you can seek arbitration through the National Association of Securities Dealers (NASD). If the brokerage is a member of the New York Stock Exchange (NYSE), you can use that exchange's arbitration facilities.

NASD's arbitration unit is located at 33 Whitehall St., New York, N.Y. 10004; the NYSE's at that exchange's headquarters, 11 Wall St., New York, N.Y. 10006.

Another arbitration panel might be available to you through the American Arbitration Association (AAA), 140 W. 51st St., New York, N.Y. 10020-1203. Whether or not you can use AAA depends on the wording of the customer's agreement you signed with the broker, the securities regulations of your home state and, in some instances, the willingness of the brokerage to submit the case to AAA.

If you have your druthers, go the AAA route. Even though the brokerage fraternity contends arbitration hearings sponsored by the securities industry give investors just as fair a shake, investors have won some 60 percent of the AAA hearings and about half of those heard by securities industry forums.

Q. I am 42 and will retire from the military with 20 years' service in November, after which I plan on working in some other career. I am considering diversifying about 15 percent of my individual retirement account. I have been contacted by a financial services firms, which wants me to invest in a managed futures account.

I know trading in futures and options is very risky, especially if one tries to do it on his own. But this company's sales pitch is that my account would be managed by an expert and that trades are made only by computer, after considering thousands of inputs. The firm gets a minimum fee of $49 on each trade and the manager takes 25 percent of new profits.

Would you advise any part of an investment portfolio be placed in this type of program?

A. Not unless you're ready, willing and financially, able to speculate — another word for gamble — and you face up to the hard fact that you could lose every dollar you put in.

Playing the futures and options game in commodities, stocks, stock indexes and other items is far too risky for all but high-rollers. Dealing through an outfit such as the one you named in your letter might reduce your risk. But it certainly would not eliminate it.

The track record of firms handling futures and options accounts for individuals is poor. If you want to turn your money over to someone else, my suggestion would be to pick a mutual fund. Most such funds historically have performed far better than managed futures and options accounts.

And, if you are bound and determined to gamble, take a trip to Atlantic City or Las Vegas. There, you can enjoy the salt or desert air.

Newspaper: Utah officials knew of abuse

FORT WORTH (AP) — Child welfare workers in Utah were alerted as early as 1983 to possible abuse of a boy who eventually died after being chained and starved in his family's home, a newspaper reported in a copyright story.

A teacher's aide in Clearfield, Utah, told authorities in 1983 she suspected that Stephen Jay Hill, then a 5-year-old kindergartner, was being deprived of food, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Sunday.

Stephen, 13, died last November about two weeks after he was found chained to a cabinet in the family's trailer in White Settlement. He weighed only 55 pounds and was comatose when found.

The boy's parents, Jay and Linda Hill, who are both Mormons, have been indicted by a Tarrant County grand jury on murder, kidnapping and child abuse charges. Their murder trials are scheduled to begin this summer.

Police records in Utah show that two child abuse complaints were filed against the Hills before they moved to Texas in 1985. One of the complaints was unsubstantiated and the other was "substantiated but not prosecuted," records indicate.

The newspaper said it was unable to determine whether any legal action was taken against the Hills by Utah authorities.

Tarrant County district attorney David Montague, who is prosecuting the case, declined to comment on the revelations.

Charles Baldwin, an attorney for Linda Hill, said he had seen complaints filed by the teacher's aide, Anne Barlow, and he expects her to testify in the murder trial.

"Maybe Anne Barlow was right," Baldwin said. "But none of the official people did anything about it."

Ms. Barlow said she first suspected Stephen was being abused when he went to school with a cut lip.

"When I asked what happened, he said, 'Mommy hit me with a belt. She didn't mean to. I'm just bad,'" Ms. Barlow said.

She said she also witnessed a confrontation between Stephen and Linda Hill outside the school, where the mother sat in her car while making the boy remain outside.

"She grabbed him by the ear, making him run alongside the car while she drove, yelling, 'You better run faster.' And she kind of speeded up the car," Ms. Barlow said.

The aide said at least five complaints to Utah child welfare workers yielded little results. She said caseworkers told her they could only advise counseling for the Hills.

"The system let Stevie down," she said. "It's tragic and it never should have happened. If people had intervened that many years ago, Stevie might have been alive today."

Carl Peterson, then the principal at Holt Elementary School in Clearfield, Utah, said he also noticed signs that Stephen was being abused. He said he violated strict orders the parents gave not to feed the boy at school.

"He said he didn't get any breakfast," Peterson said. "I would take him down to the cafeteria and get him a little food to tide him over until lunch ... I made sure that boy got fed."

Several Fort Worth school officials claim to have notified Child Protective Services in 1987 that Stephen's younger brother, Douglas, was being abused. A friend of the Hills also said she told a CPS caseworker in 1989 that Stephen appeared unusually thin.

But CPS officials in Tarrant County have said they can't locate any complaint records regarding the Hills.

Douglas, 12, has been placed in state custody.

Doctor uses poison to treat muscle disorders

HOUSTON (AP) — A Baylor College of Medicine doctor has reported early success in treating some types of human tremors by injecting a type of poison into muscle tissue.

Dr. Joseph Jankovic, a professor of neurology at the school, has injected botulinum toxin into hundreds of patients that suffer from tremors, a common condition that causes unnatural flapping of their limbs.

Tremors are sometimes caused by erroneous signals sent to muscles from the brain. Jankovic said the toxin molecules bond to muscle cells and block input from nerve impulses.

Injected in very small doses, the poison remains in the muscle and does not endanger other parts of the body, he said.

The poison, one of the most lethal biological toxins known, is produced by a form of bacteria called Clostridium botulinum and causes the deadly food poisoning known as botulism.

Botulinum toxin already has been approved for use in treating some facial nerve disorders, including certain eye problems.

Fellow Baylor instructor Dr. Donald Donovan has successfully used the toxin for several years at Methodist Hospital to treat victims of spasmotic dysphonia, a chronic voice loss caused by tremoring throat muscles.

A National Institutes of Health panel considered use of the poison in November 1990 and found that it is a "safe therapy when administered in the appropriate doses by experienced physicians."

Jankovic says he stretched the use to treating tremors, including those suffered by 63-year-old Houston artist Laurie Whitehead. She suffers from tremors in her left arm.

Ms. Whitehead has regained some use of her left hand since she began the toxin injections.

Police handcuff Secret Service agents in San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Two Secret Service agents working at last week's Latin American drug summit were handcuffed after they got drunk and punched a teenager in the stomach, a newspaper reported Sunday.

The San Antonio-Express News cited police reports that said Eric Pingcolt, 34, and Peter Ochinko, 32, yelled obscenities and hit the boy Tuesday night. Both men are from Washington, D.C.

"There was an incident," Police Chief William O. Gibson said Saturday. "I don't have the details. It was handled by the Secret Service."

No charges were filed and both men continued to work during the summit.

Secret Service agents were responsible for protecting President Bush and other dignitaries attending the two-day event.

The police report said two San Antonio police officers noticed Pingcolt and Ochinko staggering and appearing intoxicated. Witnesses said Ochinko lifted a man and dropped him, and then threw another man against a telephone booth.

Ross Chavez, 13, told officers he had been waiting for a bus when Pingcolt punched him.

Ochinko and Pingcolt said they were attacked by people waiting for a bus.

An Introduction to
S.B.A. Guaranteed Loans
TEXAS NATIONAL BANK and Midland College invite Midland Entrepreneurs to an information seminar on the S.B.A. Guaranteed Loan program.
An S.B.A. representative will be available for questions.
If you're considering an S.B.A. loan for your business,
join us Tuesday evening, March 3rd,
Plaza Club at ClayDesta Center.
For more information and to make reservations,
please call 688-8500.
Small Business Administration guaranteed loans have helped thousands of small companies get started, expand and prosper.
Guaranteed loans are made by private lenders, usually banks, and are guaranteed up to 90% by the Small Business Administration.
Loan terms may be up to 25 years for real estate; up to 10 years for equipment; and up to 7 years for working capital.
Equity requirements are at least 30% for start-up operations.
Qualified applicants must demonstrate -
• Sufficient funds to operate the business on a sound financial basis.
• Past and future earnings will be sufficient to repay the loan.
• Adequate collateral to secure the loan.
• Expertise necessary to operate the company.

★☆★☆★☆★☆★☆

Before signing a contract or sending money to an "Advance Fee Loan Broker" we recommend that you check with the Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin. Be wary of any broker claiming the easy availability of thousands of dollars for loans at reasonable rates or the availability of "foreign" money.
