SENATOR WALSH DIES SUDDENLY

BURKETT RITES READ TODAY AT ABILENE CHURCH

Minister Once Held Pastorate in Midland

ABILENE, March 2.—Last rites were said from the First Baptist church here this morning at 10:30 o'clock for Dr. J. C. Burkett, veteran Baptist minister who succumbed in a local hospital Tuesday night.

Ministers officiating in the service were: the Rev. Geo. W. Parks, Roscoe; Dr. J. D. Sandefer, Simmons university president; the Rev. L. B. Gilbert, Del Rio pastor; Dr. T. S. Knox, pastor of the First Presbyterian church here. Music was given by the First church choir.

Pallbearers were T. D. Johnson, Harry Rice, J. E. Heath, Fletcher Willis, Gus King, L. A. Muston, Henry Antillery and Joe Hinshaw. They are members of Southside and Immanuel Baptist churches, in which Dr. Burkett served as pastor.

The entire service was planned in accordance with a request of Dr. Burkett.

The veteran minister, approaching his 73rd birthday, was ordained into the ministry in 1883 and during the half century of service had been pastor of nine Texas churches. Under three pastorates, new church buildings were completed. He was instrumental in building University and Southside churches here, and since last November had been pastor of Immanuel church.

He had been a trustee of Simmons university since 1903, and had served on the board of trustees of the West Texas Baptist sanitarium since its organization.

The body remained at the Burkett home, 940 Sayes boulevard, until shortly before the funeral hour.

MIDLAND PEOPLE ATTEND FUNERAL

Percy J. Mims, Mrs. Elliott H. Barron, Mr. and Mrs. T. Paul Barron and Mrs. Carroll Hill, a granddaughter, attended the funeral from Midland.

The minister was pastor of the Midland Baptist church for 12 years, leaving in 1912.

He was one of the most beloved ministers Midland ever had and was noted among ministers of his denomination.

Churches Beautify Lawns With Trees

Beautification of the Baptist church grounds was outlined Thursday by R. O. Walker, Midland nurseryman, in conjunction with a group of members and Charles Nolan, experienced landscaper. Walker will plant trees and shrubs. Some of the smaller trees which are showing poor growth will be uprooted and new trees planted. The largest will be left.

The Presbyterian church has completed a beautification program, making the lawn the most attractive of any church in the city, landscapers say.

Midland Day Set For Stock Show

March 16 has been designated as Midland day at the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock show, which opens at Fort Worth March 11 and runs through March 19.

A Midland day was designated on request of the Midland chamber of commerce. The Midland organization received a letter Thursday from John B. Davis, manager of the great cattle show, stating a date had been arranged and stating further that the publicity department of the Southwestern exposition would give the special Midland day publicity.

It is expected that the usual large number of cattlemen, their families and other folk from Midland will attend. The Fort Worth show is now one of the greatest of its kind in the United States and draws attendance from all over the nation. The entertainment features this year are said to be the best yet arranged for the show.

Boettcher Freed by His Abductors; Ransom Moot

DENVER, March 2. (UP).—Charles Boettcher II, released after $50,000 ransom money was paid, according to some sources, was unhurt during his enforced stay with abductors. An unparalleled hunt started for the kidnapers. Officers fired on a car similar to that used by abductors. Machine guns were taken at Eaton, center of the search.

The ransom was said to have been thrown to abductors off a culvert near Pate, Colo., by Dr. John Foster after a glimpse of Boettcher blindfolded.

Two were arrested today near the spot where the money was paid, and airplanes were scouring Wyoming for traces of the suspects.

DENVER, March 2.—Charles Boettcher 2nd, wealthy Denver broker kidnaped February 12, was released last night by his abductors and returned to his home at 10:15 p. m.

He was brought to the back door of his ornate residence at 777 Washington street by a police car.

It was from the driveway of this house he was taken by the kidnapers who carried him away after thrusting a note into the hands of his wife demanding $60,000 ransom.

The Denver Post said he was freed after a representative of Claude K. Boettcher, father of the young broker, had paid $60,000 ransom to the abductors in a secret rendezvous near Denver. Chief of Police Albert T. Clark denied a ransom had been paid.

First reports were that young Boettcher was found in good health at East Thirty-fourth avenue and Franklin street, after being let out of an automobile at that point.

Meanwhile virtually the entire force of Denver city detectives was in hot pursuit of the kidnapers, who were reported fleeing toward northern Colorado with the ransom money.

Officers of Adams county, notified by Denver police to be on the lookout for a small sedan, attempted to stop a car of that description four miles south of Brighton, Colo., shortly before 9 o'clock. The car failed to heed an order to stop, and the officers fired several charges of buckshot into it. Two men were in the car.

Two police squad cars were ordered out from police headquarters to pursue the car.

Drove Two Nights

The kidnapers drove by automobile two nights and a day after abducting Boettcher February 12 before making him prisoner in a house, Chief Albert T. Clark said after a conference with the young broker.

The chief said whether the house was in Denver and certain other details made known to him could not be released at the time. The officer expressed his opinion, however, the abduction was a "legitimate kidnaping."

According to the story Chief Clark said Boettcher told him, the kidnapers told the young heir he was "going on a long ride," and that if he was "good" he would not be injured.

The abductors drove all night of the kidnaping, all the next day and most of the next night. Boettcher was blindfolded after the kidnapers' car had progressed only a block from the Boettcher home, scene of the abduction.

Remained in House

Boettcher remained in the house throughout his absence, Chief Clark said.

The wealthy society favorite was released on Gaylord street between 34th and 35th streets, was blindfolded and instructed to count to 150 before removing the blindfold. He was told then to walk "around the block" where he would find a drug store and could communicate with his family.

Clark said Boettcher informed him that when the ransom notes were written he was placed in a corner and a light placed behind him so he could not see his abductors. Boettcher said he believed

GREAT CROWDS EXPECTED FOR SALES EVENTS

Midland merchants were still preparing this morning for the expected two big days of the city-wide Inaugural sale, Friday and Saturday.

It is expected that Saturday will find the largest crowd in the city that has been here in months.

Many Midland people are attending the Stock and Poultry show at Odessa today and the local Inaugural sale will receive additional publicity by those people.

Today's shoppers found exceptional bargains in the stores that are co-operating in the big city-wide sale.

Plans have been completed for Saturday's program, which includes a broadcast from the court house of Roosevelt's inaugural address, the parade of the Midland high school band, special discounts at the theatres and the awarding of 35 presents by merchants.

Warns Children About Dangers Of Kite Flying

Joe D. Chambers, manager of the Texas Electric Service company office here today warned Midland boys and girls of the dangers in flying kites near electric power lines.

"It is not our intention to discourage this sport," Chambers said, "but rather to enlist the cooperation of parents and children in avoiding the dangers of flying kites near electric lines.

"Wire should never be used for kite string. If wire comes in contact with an electric line death is probable.

"Do not climb poles to rescue kites caught on the wires and do not try to jerk a kite from the wires.

"It is dangerous to fly a kite during a sandstorm, as the wet cord may act as a conductor for the electricity generated by the storm."

TEXAS INDEPENDENCE DAY

Today is the 97th anniversary of the issuance of Texas' declaration of independence; and the occasion will find patriotic programs throughout the state commemorating the event.

Local observations will include the raising of flags at the Midland schools and programs at several club meetings. Although the First National and Midland National banks observed the day with a holiday, other business houses remained open.

Another Cattleman Gives up His Wide Acres and Retires

Another old-time ranchman and another land mark of the range have passed on.

"Uncle" Jim Daugherty, 74-year-old cattleman of Van Horn and Abilene, transferred the 150,000-acre Figure 2 outfit Wednesday to J. M. West, Houston capitalist, his old thick-wall ranch house, cattle and other equipment going.

For 33 years this April, "Uncle" Jim has operated the Figure 2. This place, which controlled more than 700 sections when he took it over under the name of the Black Mountain Cattle company, was paid out in two years and once ran about 40,000 cattle.

Daugherty, brother of the late W. A. Daugherty and uncle of Lum Daugherty of Midland, once owned the 190-section TC outfit, the 300-section D ranch and the old 250-section University outfit. In the days of the buckboard as a favorite mode of travel he sometimes took eight days, driving 60 miles a day, to get around to his various headquarters.

Daugherty likely will make his home with a daughter in Los Angeles. He is having trouble with his eyes and his relatives say this impelled him to get rid of his holdings.

TEMPLE, March 2.—Four hundred persons including the managing editor of a daily newspaper here signed a petition addressed to Pres.-elect Roosevelt that he name Guiseppe Zangara, the man who attempted to assassinate him at Miami, a member of his cabinet.

Only four persons refused to sign the document, a reporter for a local newspaper said.

The name of the convicted man was included in the petition which began with a plea that the president-elect adopt a policy of economy in government expenses.

With the exception of the four who refused to sign the petition, none read farther than the first paragraph of the petition, its sponsors said.

MIDLAND TOLD CARE WILL AID BOLL WORM HALT

Carefulness on the part of Midland county farmers and ginners will greatly lessen liability of any future pink boll worm quarantine, according to a letter from R. E. McDonald, federal entomologist, to the Midland chamber of commerce.

Details of how Midland, Ector and Andrews counties may cooperate are contained in the following letter:

"The secretary of agriculture signed amendment to Quarantine 52 releasing Midland, Ector and Andrews counties, and O. W. Walton will notify you about it. It is my understanding that the state will retain the provision requiring seed when milled to go to designated mills. This point I believe was discussed with you by Messrs. Del Curto and McDonald of the state department of agriculture.

"We wish to express to you and through you to the people of that section our appreciation of the cooperation received the past few years in our efforts to prevent the introduction of the pink boll worm into the cotton belt. It is hoped that the people of your district will continue their vigilance in preventing a reintroduction and development of this insect.

"We believe that with the efficient clean-up and control measures now being practiced in the Big Bend the tendency will be toward making your area less likely to become contaminated. Unsterilized planting seed even from a lightly infested area may contain considerable pink boll worms. Seed produced late in the season is more likely to contain the pink boll worm than that produced early in the season. Therefore it would be a good idea for the farmers to save their planting seed as early in the season as practical.

"Your area produces comparatively small stalks of cotton and has a shorter season than some other cotton areas, both of which tend to make control or eradication of the pest somewhat easier than elsewhere. Nevertheless, large numbers of pink boll worm can be carried over when housed in seed cotton, cottonseed or cotton debris in any climate. We have had developed comparatively heavy infestation in one year in the carrying over of considerable quantities of unginned bolls. Therefore, your ginners, county agents and other interested can make use of some preventative measures without any expense. These things are mentioned for the reason that this area is somewhat more exposed than some other areas and because we are all exceedingly anxious that there be no reappearance of the pink boll worm in that section.

"The regulation retained by the state requiring seed for crushing to go to designated mills is, in my opinion, very wise. State officials advise me that there will be sufficient mills

Death Breaks 5-Day Marriage

Words intended for humor proved ironic as Senator Thomas J. Walsh, shown above with his wife after their marriage ceremony of last Saturday in Cuba, died aboard a train en route to Washington last night. "This is what you get, my dear, for being the wife of a man in public life," the Senator was saying as this picture was posed. The great man, who was to be attorney general of the new administration, was 74. His widow is the former Cuban beauty. The couple flew to Florida within a few hours after the civil and religious marriage ceremonies had been performed in Havana.

First Production Loan Here Asked

It is estimated that about 120 applications may be made in this county. The first application was made by a farmer who was among the first to pay off his loan made in 1932.

John S. Andrews, field supervisor, will be in his office from 10 o'clock Friday and Saturday mornings.

REFERENDUM ON APPROPRIATIONS MAILED MIDLAND

More than one hundred public expenditure committees (the number is 107) throughout West Texas—all affiliated with the central public expenditure committee of the West Texas chamber of commedce headed by Van Zandt Jarvis, Fort Worth—are balloting this week on recommendations of the regional chamber's state budget committee, touching the problem of appropriations by the 43rd legislature for the support of the state government in the 1933-35 biennium.

The matter comes before the affiliated local committees in a form of a referendum submitted by the state budget committee whose members are: C. M. Caldwell, chairman; O. C. Coles, J. O. Jones and D. A. Bandeen. Results of the referendum will be laid before the central committee headed by Jarvis, as the policy of the West Texas chamber of commerce in the vital question of taxation and revenue raising.

The referendum has been received in Midland by Marvin C. Ulmer, chairman of the local public expenditure committee, and R. M. Barron, Geo. D. McCormick, J. E. Hill, members, and will be acted upon at once, Ulmer said, by his committee. If all committeemen throughout the territory vote, an expression will have been secured from nearly 1,000 West Texas business men, to be duly passed along to their senators and representatives in the legislature. Senator Ken Regan and Representative B. Frank Haag will receive Midland's expression.

Recommendations

Recommendations of the state budget committee, appearing on the referendum form are:

(1) That appropriations from the general revenue fund, not exceeding $32,000,000, be made by the Texas 43rd legislature to judiciary, departmental, eleemosynary and educational budgets for the 1933-35 biennium.

(2) That any and all new rev-

WALSH FAMOUS FOR PROSECUTION OF FALL

Senator Thomas J. Walsh, democrat of Montana was born at Two Rivers, Wis., June 12, 1859. He received his early education in the public schools from which he graduated. He taught as principal of several high schools and while so engaged was awarded a life certificate on an examination covering all the branches included in the usual college course. In 1884 he received his degree of B. L. from the University of Wisconsin and received his LLD degree from the same university in 1931. He also took his LLD degree from Loyola university in 1928. He began the practice of his profession at Redfield, South Dakota associated with his brother, Henry Comer Walsh. He opened law offices at Helena, Mont., in 1890 and 1907 associated himself with Col. C. B. Nolan, former attorney general of the state. The law firm was at first known as Walsh, Nolan and Scallon and today is known as the firm of Walsh and Scallon.

Senator Walsh married Elinor C. McClements of Chicago, Ill., Aug. 16, 1889. Mrs. Walsh died Aug. 30, 1917.

In 1906 he made an unsuccessful attempt for congress. He was a candidate for United States senator in 1910 against Senator Thomas H. Carter and through his efforts a democratic legislature was elected, but a deadlock ensued which ended on the last night of the session in the election of Henry L. Meyers. He was made candidate again in 1912 being unnanimously nominated at the state convention as the candidate of his party and received the highest number of votes cast for any candidate at the following election. The legislature of 1913 ratified the choice of the people, every member of both branches, irrespective of party, voting for him. He was re-elected in 1918, again on Nov. 4, 1924, and again in 1930.

Senator Walsh was delegate to the democratic convention six times to 1928 and was a member of the sub-committee on platforms each time excepting the last. He was chairman of the democratic national central committee in 1924 and again in 1932 at Chicago at which time Franklin D. Roosevelt was nominated for the presidency of the United States.

Midland Schools, 1906-31

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article continues a serialized history of the public schools system of Midland since 1906. It is taken from a thesis written by Supt. W. W. Lackey as part of the requirements for the M. A. degree. Yesterday's article considered early beginning of the system.

Salaries

The superintendent was employed at a salary of $1,200.00 per year, and the principal of the high school at $60.00 per month. Other teachers, some of them remarkable teachers, were to receive $55.00 per month or less. Some of the teachers held only second grade certificates, all except the pricipal having been employed prior to the employment of the superintendent. In this connction it will be interesting to note that the salary of the school superintendent at Abilene was then $1000.00 and that of the principal of the Abilene high school, $75.00 per month.

The School Plant

The school plant consisted of the eight-roomed, two-story brick building shown here. It was equipped with double desks, good teachers' desks and swivel chairs, stoves and blackboards. The building was not fenced, and, since the towns was not incorporated at that time and since no stock law was in force, slight annoyance was experienced at the hands of hungry milk cows which sometimes pilfered from the porch of the building the lunches left there by students until the noon hour. The outline of the building was in the form of an "H", and the second floor porches, which have since been enclosed, were open at that time. These have since been converted into book-room and office space.

As indicated heretofore, this building was erected in 1893 by private subscription. The Corner Stone, located in the southeast corner of the building, bears the following inscription:

W. E. CONNELL
J. T. PEMBERTON

COMMITTEE

The site occupies an entire block, and, as indicated by records in the county clerk's office, cost $325.00. No records are available as to the cost of the building. Various estimates, however, have been given from memory by old timers. These estimates vary from $4,000.00 to $21,000.00, but the consensus of opinion of old settlers places the cost at approximately $4,000.00. No record seems to be available as to the list of subscribers and the amounts donated by each. It has therefore become necessary to depend on the memory of many who were living in Midland at the time. It is the general opinion that practically every head of a family made a contribution to the enterprise. The following names have been given in by J. M. Flanigan, Judge J.H. Knowles, Mrs. Frank McCormick, Mrs. A. Harry Anderson, Clarence Scharbauer, Elliott Barron and others

Text of Hogan's Committee Speech

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is part of the speech made Tuesday by ex-Senator T. S. Hogan of Midland before the senate finance committee. The testimony was given during a hearing on investigation of economic problems and caused a verbal clash between blind Senator Gore of Oklahoma and the Midland man. The speech, because of its length, will be continued in another installment.

Permit me to say that I am in total disagreement with the opinions of a large majority of the witnesses who have preceded me both as to the cause of the depression and the proposed cures for the nation's ills.

If we start on a false premise all our conclusions will be wrong.

The World war was not the cause of the depression, instead it actually delayed the economic collapse.

What might be called the banking type of mind can see in the consequences of that conflict only what the financial ledger shows—a great destruction of property and an unbalance of the financial set-ups of all the nations of the world.

By them the loss of life is computed in the dollar earnings of each adult male during the years of his prime.

Devastating and appalling as these losses were the fact still remains that the only way the World war hastened the world depression was through an accelerated development of the mechanization of industry and agriculture throughout the world without any, or at least sufficient, raising of the world standard of living to absorb in times of peace this increased production capacity.

It is to that fact, and not to the direct destruction of the war, that we can trace most of our social ills.

Under the urgency of war we mounted "The Man with the Hoe" on the modern tractor in the fields of Europe, the plains of Morocco and the hinterlands of Asia and South America.

Recall the tens of thousands of Ford tractors alone which rapidly displaced hand labor with machine labor even in the country estates of England to say nothing of remote areas whose agricultural possibilities had theretofore received but scant development.

The apex of this hysterical expansion of agriculture is symbolized in the activities of Thomas D. Campbell, now known throughout the world as the wheat king of America.

Backed with millions of some of the leading financiers of America and encouraged by the government to the extent of turning over to him two great Indian reservations in Montana in which he was permitted to select the choicest lands for broad scale wheat farming, he inaugurated the largest wheat farming operation in history up to that time.

It may be cruel to bring that up now but his Wall Street backers lost all the millions they put into it despite the high prices of wheat prevailing at that time.

Having started some hundreds of tractors and combines on these great bench lands of Montana, he was sent to Morocco with government backing to develop wheat growing on the same broad scale in that nation.

I illustrate with this specific example only for the purpose of demonstrating how rapid the mechanical development of world agriculture became during those hectic days.

Tens of thousands of others, in lesser degree, were hastening the process in every corner of the world.

The predominant incentive was, of course, the personal profit anticipated out of war prices for food.

Industrial development likewise received a world wide impetus with a corresponding displacement of crude hand methods by modern mass production.

Abnormal, selfish, vicious and stupid as has been the handling of national and world finance during and since that time with the resultant pyramiding of a debt structure impossible for the workers of the world to maintain, it is still true that the sudden mechanization of industry and agriculture without equally rapid improvement of the standard of living of the masses was, and is, the primary cause of this world wide panic.

In the life time of those of us who are sixty years old there has been more mechanical advancement than in all the previous history of mankind.

Inventions, chemical discoveries and highly coordinated production methods revolutionized industry and came to be symbolized in the minds of the people of the world in the mass production of Henry Ford.

Necessarily these rapid changes disorganized long established methods of production and caused great social maladjustments. The life of

SINGING TO THE BALCONY

New York's Metropolitan Opera Company asks a public fund of $300,000 to save grand opera. The depression has cut patronage, and the general understanding is that the wealthy backers of the Metropolitan can no longer carry the hod without a lot of help from the general public.

But Deems Taylor, critic and composer, asserts that from 1910 to 1932 the wealthy directors had not contributed a dime to the support of grand opera. During those years, he says, the Metropolitan was self-supporting.

"Now," he says, "the directors allow it to be said that they are weary of the burden—a burden which in fact they had not even confronted for nearly a quarter of a century."

Which seems to indicate that what some of us had long suspected may be true—that in the last analysis grand opera depends entirely on the support of the ordinary citizen, no matter how many social registerites may lend their names to the headlines that center about it.

BETRAYAL OR DEFEAT?

Senator Borah's assertion to a New England manufacturer that Congress could not confer extraordinary powers on the president "without the cowardly betrayal of its constitutional obligations" is probably perfectly true. About the only trouble is that that cowardly betrayal seems to have taken place already.

That it should be Congress' job to make a sweeping change in governmental organization and drastic cuts in governmental expenditures goes without saying. But Congress has had ample time in which to do it, and it has demonstrated pretty clearly that the job is just naturally beyond it.

The one certain thing is that the job has got to be done, and it has got to be done right. If Congress can't do it—and do it speedily—it can do nothing less than give the president a free hand at it.

OUR SONG BIRDS "PROSPER"

There has grown up in the past generation a belief that American song birds have decreased in numbers since the settlement of the country. It is a relief, therefore, to larn from Dr. T. Gilbert Pearson, president of the National Association of Audubon Societies, that this is not the case. On the contrary, they are flourishing nowadays as never before.

"Contrary to popular opinion," says Dr. Pearson, "dense and unbroken forests do not afford an ideal habitat for a great variety of song birds. Consequently, with the gradual clearing away of forest areas, the planting of orchards and the growth of a diversified agriculture, there has been brought about a change in conditions which have been conducive to the welfare of birds."

To any one who delights in the presence of song birds, this must come as a bit of welcome news.

Farmers of Kimball and Cheyenne counties, Nebraska, are demanding that the legislature prevent the wholesale theft of their hay. Only stacks in the very shadow of the farmhouse are found to be safe. The marauders are antelope. Protected rigidly by law, the herds have increased to 350 fleet-footed but husky hay hounds. The farmers ask the legislature to make it plain to those amiable antelopes that if they are longer to claim the law's protection they have got to show some respect for the law.

Night illumination of Niagara Falls is to be reduced from $15,000 to $12,000 in cost, but not at all in volume of light. With all the electricity it generates, it might seem that Niagara should be able to get all the illumination it can stand for nothing.

A Scotchman had the misfortune to lose his wife and it happened that his cow died on the same day. A little later most of his friends kept telling him that he should get married again and many of them offered their services in trying to get him a wife. Finally he confided his troubles to a very close friend.

"Most everyone is offering to get me a new wife but no one has offered to get me a new cow," he said.

Someone has sent this in:

Father, when he thinks in terms of a new automobile, thinks as to how many gallons it will make to the mile. Mother thinks of the color of the upholstery. Daughter thinks as to whether it has a cigaret lighter. And the neighbors think as to how they can afford it.

An old story which is usually printed at this time of the year:

"Do you know that some of your hens have been coming into my garden?"

"I thought they must be doing that."

"What made you think so?"

"Because they're not coming back."

A Scotchman was not feeling as well as usual and he called his family doctor who looked him over and gave him some pills to be taken at bedtime. Whisky also was prescribed for his stomach, a small glass to be taken after each meal. About a week later the Scotchman called on his doctor and said he was not improving.

"Have you taken the medicine exactly as I instructed?" asked the doctor.

"Well, you see," said Sandy, "I may be a bit behind on my pills, but I'm six weeks ahead with my whisky."

A bill collector presented a bill to a former member of the legislature. "You received this bill three months ago; why don't you pay it?" asked the bill collector. "Well, you see, all bills have to go through three readings," replied the miniature statesman. "Yes, and after the second reading you probably will move that the enacting clause be stricken out," said the bill collector.

Or we'll tell it to the east in the manner: The west isn't half as crazy as the east is crooked.

Hunter Told How To Capture Lions

KINGSBURG, Cal. (UP).—Kingsburg today knew just how to capture mountain lions. Jay Bruce, famous hunter, told the citizens.

Here's how he captured more than 500 of the big cats during his career as official exterminator:

First, you take a pack of dogs, get on the trail of a lion, and chase him for miles and miles. Finally, you chase him up a tree.

Then, you take a long pole, fix a noose to the end of it, and try to slip it over the lion's head. The lion, of course, resents that and jumps from branch to branch in his tree, and from tree to tree.

However, you persevere. Finally, you succeed in slipping the noose around the lion's neck and tie the rope to the trunk of the tree. Then, you tie up your dogs (because they probably would attack the cat when he came down) and yank the lion from his branch and onto the ground.

After that, all you have to do is to slip a sack over the lion's body, tie the sack to a pole, get some help, and carry the lion away.

Quite simple, Bruce says.

Lili Damita Is Again RKO Star

Lili Damita shines once under the RKO-Radio Pictures banner in the J. G. Bachmann production, "Goldie Gets Along," now showing at the Yucca theatre, an inside story on the bathing beauty contest racket.

The talkies occasioned no delay in the cinema career of the gay Miss Damita, as her experience in the Follies Bergere, the Casino de Paris Revue, and opera on Continental Europe, fitted her for this newest development of screen art. When she played the leading female role opposite Ronald Colman in "The Rescue," she scored immediate acclaim. She followed with leading roles in "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," "The Cock-Eyed World" and "This Is the Night."

On Broadway, Miss Damita appeared in the musical comedy "Sons O' Guns," with the late Jack Donahue for nearly a year. Broadway has seen her for the whole of a recent season in George White's "Musical Hall Varities."

Helpful Health Suggestions

By M. Elizabeth Wilson
County Health Nurse

IMMUNITY TO SMALLPOX

Just as one is able to tell from a Schick test that a person is immune to diphtheria, so it is possible to determine from the early reaction of a person's skin to the ordinary cow-pox vaccine that the person is already immune to smallpox. The discovery of this characteristic cutaneous reaction showing immunity to smallpox is of great practical value.

Let no one believe for a single moment that smallpox is becoming a rare or unknown disease. Let no one think that it is not often fatal. Let no one think that the fatalities are growing less or that the disease is dying out.

The smallpox case-rate in the United States is at present, according to reports received, the highest of any civiliad country in the world. Much of the disease, it is true, is of a mild type with a low death rate, but more and more epidemics of the severe type with high death rates are appearing; and this despite the bulwark built up by those who, having acquired and weathered a mild attack, are therefore immune to further infection.

Any study of any epidemics in any country in the whole world, any study of the result of the introduction of vaccination in apreviously pest ridden country, and study of an outbreak any time any where will convince any reasoning being that vaccination and vaccination only will suppress, modify and prevent smallpox.

Every child should be vaccinated before or soon after it is six months old. There is only one way to prevent smallpox and that is through vaccination. The method is logical, specific, sensible and satisfactory. Isolation and disinfection are only secondary.

Speakeasies Have Own Code Words

PHILADELPHIA (UP).—The good old lunchroom jargon may have gone the way of buggies and hitching posts, but on the very site, and perhaps in the same structure, where "Adam-and-Eve-on-a-raft" is no more, other bits of phraseology have sprung up.

The speakeasies have their idioms, as for instance:

One up—rye highball.
One down—straight rye.
Mr. Haig, a white horse—straight Scotch.
Slufoot, payoff man—cop who collects money for protecting speakeasy.
Monkey—cop in uniform.
A red—pint of rye.
Ticket—warrant for a raid on the speakeasy.
A white—pint of gin.
Getting a tail—being trailed by a detective.
Tout—some one paid to bring customers into the speakeasy.

And son on and so forth, from a "coonskin" to a "Santa Claus."

Collector Received Hangman's Noose

KALISPELL, Mont. (UP).—A hangman's noose which had seen actual service was among the Christmas presents received by Sam Johns.

Johns is a collector of historical items. His friends decided that a noose used to hang one Frederick Lebeau, April 2, 1909, would make a valuable addition to his collection—so Christmas day there it was, dangling from his Christmas tree.

The Lebeau case was famous in Montana, partly due to the fact that Lebeau was convicted of murder and hung after a coroner's jury had returned a verdict that did not connect him with the death of Riley Yoakum and his father.

The son and father were found dead in their cabin, apparently the victims of a murder and suicide affair in which the son killed the father, then himself. Lebeau, returning to the scene following the verdict, was arrested on the strength of a companion's testimony, tried, convicted, and hung.

Autos to Cut Income Taxes

WASHINGTON. (UP).—Income tax laws permit a number of deductions for the cost of operating and maintaining an automobile, the Internal Revenue bureau has announced.

The bureau said, "deductible items include sums paid during the taxable year for registration fees, drivers' licenses, personal property tax, and municipal taxes; interest on money borrowed for the purchase of a motor car, either for business or pleasure; loss sustained by reason of damage while the car is being used for business, provided such loss is not covered by insurance or otherwise; damage paid for injury to a pedestrian, provided that the car was being used for business at the time, and again provided said payment was not covered by insurance or otherwise; amount paid for insurance on motor vehicles used for business purposes."

Depreciation, based on the cost of the car and its estimated useful life, also is deductible.

ECTOR COUNTY ROAD SUIT IS UP IN REVIEW

J. M. Caldwell, attorney for plaintiffs in the George Elliott et al civil proceedings against Judge W. R. Ely et al of the state highway commission, went to El Paso Wednesday night to be present in the civil court of appeals, where the case was set down for review today.

The case went to there on appeal from the decision of District Judge Charles L. Klapproth of Midland, who dissolved a temporary injunction granted earlier in restraint of highway construction over a rerouted course through the city of Odessa. On a technicality an earlier temporary restraining order granted plaintiffs here was reversed by the El Paso appeals court and the case remanded to the lower court.

In case plaintiffs win at El Paso it is expected defendants will take the case to the supreme court on a writ of error.

The attorney general's department is conducting the case for defendants.

Referendum

enue producing measure be opposed, unless passed to take the place of existing revenue producing and tax measures which have been abolished.

(3) That a new state constitution be the basis of reorganizing our state administration and our county government.

The state budget committee notes:

"We feel that some such program as we have outlined must be adopted by our West Texas federation of public expenditure committees if we are to attain at Austin any results in curtailment of expenditures; any results in avoiding new taxes; and any results in permanently reorganizing our state's business. Unless concerted action is taken by the citizens, a much greater biennium budget than $32,000,000, might be adopted. There is also great confusion about new taxes, and about securing the benefits to the state of the reports of the efficient and economy committee."

Proposal No. 1

As to the proposal No. 1, the WTCC state budget committee points out that its recommendation of a $32,000,000 budget is approximately in line with that recently submitted by the state board of control, total $32,619,557, and representing a 29 per cent reduction over the last board of control estimate, in the following reductions from the 1931-33 biennium appropriations:

Judiciary	$1,092,895
Departmental	$2,821,651
Eleemosynary	$1,693,825
Educational	$2,338,587

The $32,000,000 budget, the committee contends, will finance all state departments and institutions on a high plane, even contemplating the application of the present ad valorem tax rate of 27 cents, which the committee contends should not be increased; will materially cut the existing deficit by the end of the 1933-35 biennium; and will not force new taxes, better still, it will compel strict economy in the conduct of the state's affairs.

Proposal No. 2

Starting its opposition to imposition of new taxes unless they are to take the place of existing taxes, which are to be abolished, the committee points out that present revenue sources under existing laws, with application of the 27 cent ad valorem tax rate, will produce estimated general revenue of $34,364,321, after deducting the anticipated deficit of $3,750,000 at the end of the present biennium. Under the $32,000,000 budget, the deficit would be cut to $2,260,679.

"A financial program which will accomplish the above in one biennium is surely most adequate," argues the committe. Such a program is sound financing.

"The consideration, therefore, of a sales tax measure, an income tax measure, etc., unless existing revenue measures are wholly abolished, most surely is ill advised at this time. The sales tax measure, for instance, is estimated to produce $45,000,000 which at the present time, would be in addition to the ad valorem tax. Such a measure would merely give to the state barrels of money, and would defeat the splendid progress of economy."

Proposal No. 3

Contending that a new state constitution should be the basis of reorganizing state administration and county government, the committee calls attention to the work of the joint legislative committee on organizaztion and economy, headed by Rep. Harry N. Graves, of which not all of the reports have been released. The complete report will be in 14 parts, one alone—that on teachers colleges—being contained in a book of 352 pages.

Asserting that the studies and reports of the Graves committee are the "most comprehensive and far-reaching that have yet been made on the state's business," the committee contends they cannot be given comprehensive attention in any way unless than by a constitutional convention.

"Any organization of the state's administration made on a basis and within the scope of our present constitution is bound to be anticipated and ineffective," the committee says. "We are living under the constitution of 1876, which is not adequate for present administration. This constitution creates services not now needed, and authorized practices not now modern. It fixes salaries and prescribes offices which should not now be included in a thoroughgoing reorganization; and it eliminates other things which should be included. The time to bring about these fundamental changes is at a constitutional convention called for that purpose."

"Scarlet Dawn" Has Great Epic Sweep

A wide sweep of colorful adventure and romance is the outstanding quality that marks "Scarlet Dawn," in which Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., gives his finest screen performance since "Dawn Patrol." It is another of the great line of Warner pictures which opens today at the Ritz theatre.

All of the essentials of good motion picture entertainment are contained in this film; good story, fine acting, and the superb direction of William Dieterle, who is asserting himself as one of the ace directors of Hollywood.

A very imposing cast, for which Warner Pictures have become noted, helped materially in placing this picture on a high level. The three women were very adroitly played by Nancy Carroll, Lilyan Tashman and Shelia Terry. Making up the balance of the cast of this colorful piece of entertainment are Earle Fox, Frank Reicher, Walter Walker, Mischa Auer, Mae Busch, Hadji Ali, Lee Kohnlmar, C. Henry Gordon, Alphonse Ethier, Ivan Linow, Betty Gillette, Richard Alexander, Maurice Black, Dewey Robinson, William Ricciardi, Yolo D'Avril, Harry Cording and William LeMaire.

The story was based on the novel, "Revolt," by Mary McCall, Jr. Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. contributed his versatile abilities still further, in collaborating on the screen play with Niven Busch and Erwin Gelsey.

It is the sort of picture that will appeal to the young and old alike. It has the rare feeling of romance that was so evident in "Seventh Heaven" and in "Lilac Time."

Gus Moreland Captures Honors

NEW ORLEANS, March 2.—Gus Moreland of Dallas, Texas, recent winner of the Houston invitation tournament, scored a 69 Wednesday to capture medalist honors in the 18-hole qualifying round of the New Orleans Country club carnival invitation golf tournament.

Hickman Greene of Baton Rouge was second with 76, while Gene Vinson of Meridian, Miss., champion of Mississippi, and Fred Odom and Jules Lazard of New Orleans tied for third with 77 each.

The 69 score by Moreland is a new course record, as par for the course was recently increased by one stroke.

Moreland's card:
Out—345 434 535—36
In—535 442 433—33—69
Par:
Out—344 435 435—35
In—545 443 434—36—71

Johnny Dawson, of Chicago, the defending champion, made the round in 79, qualifying handily.

In the first round play today Moreland faces Gaston Peek, a fellow Texan from Galveston. Dawson plays Harry Rainold of New Orleans, and Hickman Greene meets J. R. Robinson of Kansas City, Kas.

Boettcher

there were only two men involved.

Boettcher was whisked away from in front of his home the night of Sunday, February 12, as he and his wife returned from a visit with friends.

Forced Into Auto

Two men, according to his wife, drove into the driveway at the fashionable Boettcher home, and as young Boettcher stepped out of his car, one of the kidnapers, at the point of a pistol, forced them to enter the machine of the abductors. At the same time he handed a note demanding $60,000 ransom to the wife, Mrs. Anna Lou Boettcher, the former Anna Lou Pigott, Helena, Mont.

Mrs. Boettcher immediately notified her father-in-law, Claude K. Boettcher, who, after reading the ransom demand, called police. There followed one of the most intensive man hunts in the history of Colorado.

The day following the kidnaping, Chief Clark announced he would have the criminals in jail within 48 hours. Two days later N. W. Mitchell, a reputed member of a Denver alcohol ring, was arrested. It was rumored his arrest had resulted in solving the puzzle. He later proved an "airtight" alibi and was released.

Others Taken Released

During the next few days many other arrests were made, but in each instance the suspect was released for lack of sufficient evidence to connect him with the crime. These arrests included that of O. E. Stevens, alias Charles Belmont, operator of two fashionable gambling resorts near Colorado Springs. Stevens, who had a long police record in St. Louis as well as Denver and Colorado Springs, admitted Boettcher had frequented his places and at one time had owed him $1,200 in gambling debts. But Stevens, like the other suspects, was released for lack of evidence.

February 18 the investigation took a new turn with the gang murder of Joseph P. Roma, "the little north Denver grocer," who was the admitted ruler of Colorado liquor rings. Police at first believed Roma's murder was connected with the Boettcher kidnaping, but later came to the conclusion it was the outgrowth of rivalry in the liquor traffic.

Connected With Case

Roma's murder was at first connected with the kidnaping for two reasons. One was that during the week preceding his death he had been holding secret conferences with police which could have easily been interpreted by the underworld that Roma had knowledge of the kidnaping and was about to "squeal." The other was that Frank Mortellaro, whose death a year previous Roma had been accused of engineering, was arrested for questioning about the kidnaping the same day Roma was murdered.

February 20, two days after the Roma killing, a definite split developed between police and members of the Boettcher family when it was revealed Claude Boettcher was negotiating privately with the kidnapers and was refusing to turn over to police notes he had received from them. Chief Clark did not relax his vigilance, but he stated publicly he and his men were handicapped by lack of access to these notes.

WTCC Convention Dates May 11-13

BIG SPRING, March 2.—The 1933 general convention of the West Texas chamber of commerce will be held here May 11, 12 and 13.

Dates for the conclave were fixed today at a conference of President Wilbur Hawk, Manager D. A. Bandeen and Assistant Manager Maury Hopkins, with directors of the Big Spring chamber of commerce.

Bandeen said the regional organization will be able to report at the convention between 50 and 75 new affiliated towns. The number has been around 100.

Line to Cowden Well Mere Rumor

EL PASO—El Paso officers of the Pasotex Petroleum company said they know nothing of oil field reports that the Standard Oil company of California is negotiating for the purchase of five sections and two oil wells on the Dick Cowden ranch in northern Ector county from the Stanolind Oil and Gas company.

It was reported in San Angelo that the Pasotex pipe line would be extended from Winkler county to the Cowden wells, and that the oil would come to the Pasotex refinery at El Paso.

El Paso officials said the Standard Oil Co. of California has leases in the Ector county territory but doubt that the pipe line will be extended.

Sanitary Toilets Offered at Bargain

Sanitary toilets are offered Midland county people this week at a bargain.

Construction work will be done free of charge by labor furnished by the Midland Welfare association. The only cost is for materials and most of these can be "scraped" up to eliminate any but slight costs.

An initial order of 25 of these sanitary concrete slab toilets is now under construction. City or rural people may see models at the Cameron Lumber company.

Details may be had from W. B. Simpson, chairman of the Midland Welfare association; A. B. Cole, foreman of the city streets department; Mrs. Harvey Sloan, president of the Midland public health board, which actually started the work here; Miss M. Elizabeth Wilson, health nurse, or the chamber of commerce.

One of these cheap but sanitary privies can save the lives of children, can save vast medical expense in eliminating the liability of disease spread by flies, not to mention the added cleanliness," physicians say.

Texas U. Celebrates Golden Anniversary

AUSTIN, March 2. (UP).—Former University of Texas students in all 48 states and practically every civilized country joined today in worldwide observance of the golden anniversary of their alma mater.

March 2, annual day of thanksgiving for the founding of the institution, had especial significance this year in the 50th anniversary observance.

Banquets will be held by many of the Texas "Exes" clubs throughout the nation tonight, while in distant countries small gatherings of two or three will be seen at the former students meet. One of the largest gatherings will be at San Francisco, where "exes" of the bay region will assemble.

AUTOGIROS FOR JAPAN

TOKYO.—The Japanese government has placed orders for two autogiros with an American company through its Tokyo representatives. The giros are to be of the latest type and will be equipped with cabin tops. Autogiros are quite new in Asiatic countries.

Four New Farm Families Here

Four new farm families have located in the Midland area, having purchased 640 acres of land from Dr. J. B. Thomas and Andrew Fasken at a point 14 miles northwest of Midland. The new farmers are G. L. Dismukes, his brothers, J. B. and M. L. Dismukes, and a cousin, F. L. Dismukes. They are from Levelland.

They will operate the farm land on the B. N. Aycock ranch this year while preparing their new farm for crops. They are putting in 300 acres and next year will put an additional 100 acres into cultivation.

Hogan Speech

the whole communities built around what was considered fairly permanent methods of producing consumers goods was totally disorganized by the new methods which centralize in a relatively few places the manufacture of these goods. When modern changes are discussed everyone immediately thinks of the great steel plants and automobile factories but the garment makers of New York and the shoe manufacturers of New England were a greater factor in disorganizing established custom in the homes, villages and towns of the country.

Shoemakers, tailors, dressmakers, blacksmiths, etc., were compelled to seek the means of livelihood in other fields. Enlargement on this subject is unnecessary as it is a matter of common knowledge.

The benefits that came from the new discoveries and new methods were many and enormous and the statistician may be able to prove to you that the mechanization of production actually increased the demands for labor but that is but poor consolation to the jobless, destitute and homeless left in the wake of these prodigious changes.

I risk your displeasure in consuming your time in the recital of these trite, well known and established facts for the purpose of impressing on you that methods of government must change to meet fundamental changes in society or that government will cease to exist.

Much of the legislation proposed before this congress might as well be written to lay down the legal methods for hunting buffaloes, for no matter how much our political leaders attempt to refute it rugged individualism in business or government is as extinct as the buffalo.

An ordered, planned and national program based on the ultimate welfare of all the people must take the place of governmental policies designed to encourage free and unrestricted competition.

The evidence to support this statement is omnipresent and irrefutable. It reaches into the most ancient conceptions of individual prerogatives and, as a matter of urgent necessity, seeks to regulate what the farmer must grow on his own farm. His failure to conform to an agricultural program national in scope would only bring him further and more complete bankruptcy. Attempts to evade the direct application of a planned agricultural economy through the adoption of palliatives and half baked theories is evidenced in a score or more of proposed laws pending before this congress, the most grotesque and absurd of which is the Smith Cotton Bill which proposes to reward farmers for incompetency by penalizing the fertilization of their lands and undertake to convert cotton growers into cotton brokers by forcing them to gamble on the cotton exchange on the future price of cotton.

Everywhere the initiative and courage is lacking to recognize fundamental facts and take the consequences of the legislative program bold enough to meet the needs of the times.

Faced with the alternative of complete collapse the oil business swept aside all precedent and usages and, except for one fatal defect, established a planned economy in production which might well be used as a national model.

The defect was that the fixing of the price of crude oil was left to the manipulation of powerful groups instead of being fixed by the government.

In the face of an overproduction so great that high quality crude oil sold for as low as eight cents per barrel, which was less than one-tenth of production cost, the oil industry, backed by governmental support, established a system of proration under which production was reduced to an amount equal to, or less, than the daily consumption. Many injustices and harsh invasions of the rights of individuals and small producers accompanied the inauguration of this proration system most of which could have been avoided if the government had assumed direct control instead of forcing the issue through indirection and evasion of responsibility.

But with all its faults the proration of oil production saved the nation from an even more severe financial collapse than now exists.

I doubt if more than a small minority of our lawmakers realize how large a part the oil business plays in the whole economic life of the nation.

The approximate 2,200,000 barrels of oil consumed each day including Sundays represents at the wells where produced a market price three times as great as the total price received by the farmers for the wheat crop of the United States.

The number of barrels of crude oil and bushels of wheat produced in the year 1932 were almost identical.

When ultimately purchased as gasoline, kerosene, lubricants and by-products the consuming public pays nearly as much for oil products as the entire agricultural crops and livestock brought the farmers in 1932.

So if an industry of this magnitude can balance its production with its consumption others can do likewise.

To summarize the state of the nation, we have:

1. A tottering financial structure controlled by the same men whose unsound policies precipitated the depression.

2. A farming situation bordering on open, organized revolt against the government.

3. A labor situation in which the opposing forces are preparing for a titanic struggle which will almost inevitably shake the whole social structure.

4. An unemployment situation that has already cost more lives than we lost in the American forces during the World war; set us back a full generation in the dearly won social progress of the past, and which if not corrected quickly may conceivably bring on another era comparable with the Dark Ages of past history.

5. Capitalism as a system of industry and government is a demonstrated failure in the face of national crisis and has been destroyed by the practice of its adherents as evidenced in testimony taken before the banking committee.

It will take more than the vision of moles and the courage of rabbits to correct a situation as desperate as this. Temporary expedients are fore-doomed to failure. The diagnosis indicates the imperative need of major surgery.

The question to be decided, and that promptly, is what measures should be enacted to meet the situation.

I beg lieve to respectfully suggest as measures necessary and attainable by congressional action the following:

1. Immediate government control of the entire transportation system including railroads, waterways, pipelines, aviation and truck and bus lines.

2. The establishment of a six-hour day and five-day week in all industry accompanied with the right of employes of collective bargaining.

3. The establishment of a national monetary system based on bimetallism, and as a collateral proposition use all the power and prestige of the nation to secure a voluntary international agreement for the use of both gold and silver as equal basic money in world commerce. The Bank of International Settlements or a World Exchange bank should be set us as an international agency whose certificates, based on bold or silver in approved depositories of the several nations, would be accepted in lieu of the actual transfers of the metal itself.

4. Arbitrarily fix by law the price of all basic farm products and fix that price high enough to cover production costs in which are figured the maintenance of a standard of life on the farm commensurate with the resources and mechanical development of the nation and energy and intelligence of the people. This price could, of course, only apply to products used within the nation.

5. Readjust international debts on the best practical basis obtainable on the broad principal that concession should, where feasible, be compensated by increased international trade.

6. Provide the machinery for a readjustment of debts and interest but not through omnibus bankruptcy laws or moratoria unsupported by the means of increasing earnings and income. Coupled with the program above set forth a temporary moratorium on mortgages would give the debtors time to rehabilitate themselves under the increased price of their products and would not pull down the whole financial structure of banks and insurance companies as general bankruptcy and moratoria laws inevitably will do.

I admit these proposals are sweeping and revolutionary but they are not one tenth as sweeping and revolutionary as the changes will be if you permit the rapid deterioration of business and even of the people themselves to continue. Unless you recognize that a crisis of war time emergency confronts us it is, of course, futile and useless to consider the suggestions here made.

Carveth Wells to Conduct Air Tour

The home city of the 1933 World's Fair and some of the unusual things the tourist should see while visiting there will be described in graphic, clear-cut style by Carveth Wells, Continental Oil Company radio entertainer Wednesday night, March 8, over a net-work of 23 N. B. C. stations.

Wells, whose explorations have taken him into many mysterious corners of the world, will present a birdseye view of America's second largest city, and its history. La Salle, Marquette, Joilet and Mayor Cermak, as well as some of the best known buildings and parks will be featured. The Chicago Conoco program is a prelude to several future broadcasts which will be devoted to the Century of Progress exclusively.

The Conoco program may be heard by local listeners who tune in on station WFAA, Dallas, Wednesday night at 9:30 o'clock.

In the event of the reoccurrence of the pest it will in the beginning certainly be light, then the state will have already received protection against its spread sufficient, I think, to make unwarranted any widespread excitement. Furthermore, it would result in a very great saving in the cleaning and inspecting the large number of places that might be brought under suspicion if the seed is scattered hither and thither throughout the country."

Club Observes Tex. Independence Day

Texas Independence day was observed by the Rotary club in a special patriotic program at the regular luncheon period today noon.

Mrs. Roy Parks, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Rawlins Clark, sang "Texas Bluebonnet," the words to which she composed. Miss Gene Evans wrote the music.

B. C. Driver, school student, read "Defense of the Alamo," and two students of the Vickers studio of dancing, Frances Burris and Mary Elizabeth Newman, did a medley of dance steps, accompanied by Miss Edna Mae Jones at the piano.

A bluebonnet painting done by Mrs. F. H. Lanham of Midland and arranged in a map setting by Miss Leona McCormick was exhibited, and W. Ily Pratt described the picture while reading a story of patriotic import.

The club sang "The Eyes of Texas" to conclude the program. Bill Blair led the singing.

Decision to hold a ladies' night program Thursday evening in lieu of the regular weekly luncheon was voted. The dinner will begin at 7 and be concluded at 8:30, at which time the Rates and their wives will be guests of Blair at the Yucca theatre.

Increased Enrollment

The school enrollment during 1906-1907 went up to 513, and the next year to 583. The enrollment of 1906-1907 showed an increase of approximately twenty-five per cent over that of former years, and the need of additional room became so imperative that the board of school trustees rented the town library building for the primary department. Records show that the first grade teacher, Miss Josephine O'Reilley, enrolled 101 pupils during 1906-1907 The first and the second grades were placed in the two-roomed frame buildings, the town library building, shown here, under the direction of Miss O'Reilley and Miss Mary Hicks. This building continued to be used by the school until the annex, a two-roomed frame building, was built by the trustees on the school grounds back of the old main building.

At the end of the chapter appears a picture of the North Ward school building as it originally appeared with the belfry, gables and pipe fence together with a copy of the inscription on the corner stone; a picture of the same building after it had been repaired, equipped with modern heating and sewage system, and with a new roof; and a picture of the old town library which was used for school purposes in 1906-1907 and 1907-1908.
