4.8 million Texans expected to vote

ELECTION '88

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — With more than 1 million absentee votes already cast, another 4.8 million Texans are expected to go to the polls today to vote for president, choose a U.S. senator and elect a host of statewide and local officials.

Republican and Democratic volunteers and paid staffers are cranking up their phone banks and walking the blocks to turn out their voters between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m.

The National Weather Service predicts partly cloudy to mostly sunny skies across the state with high temperatures ranging from the 60s to near 90, so weather should not hinder an expected record voter turnout.

Although most Texas surveys show the Republican ticket of George Bush and Dan Quayle leading Democrats Michael Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen in the race for the state's 29 Electoral College votes, Democrats remained optimistic Monday that Bentsen's home-state popularity could pull Massachusetts Gov. Dukakis to an upset.

Bentsen campaigned in Texas and three other states Monday, ending the day with a 1:30 a.m. rally in Austin. Dukakis scheduled rallies all night long across the country.

"This is a ticket that won't quit, that hasn't quit," said Ed Martin, executive director of the Texas Democratic Party.

Vice President Bush, meanwhile, returns to Texas today to cast his ballot in Houston. The Republicans kicked off a "massive get out the vote program" late Monday to help ensure a big victory party in the Bayou City tonight.

"We're right where we want to be," said Mark Sanders, spokesman for Bush//Quayle '88.

Most observers credit a hard-hitting, unanswered advertising campaign labeling Dukakis as a liberal for Bush's double-digit lead in the polls here. For nearly two months, the GOP attacked Dukakis on such issues as gun control and law and order. Democrats say Dukakis didn't fight back until October because he thought the voters wouldn't believe the Republicans' "pack of lies."

Dukakis, meanwhile, tried to capitalize on the conservative Bentsen's popularity to woo Reagan Democrats back to the fold. Both men speak fluent Spanish and used that ability in several campaign swings through traditionally Democratic South Texas.

Candidates cast ballots as race ends

George Bush and Michael Dukakis joined millions of other Americans at the polls today at the end of their long presidential campaign. Bush said, "I feel nervous," though pre-election surveys showed him leading. Dukakis predicted a surprise victory.

Republican Bush and his wife, Barbara, voted in Houston shortly after sunup.

"Every time I vote here I feel nervous," he told reporters.

"No predictions," he replied when asked about the outcome.

After two days of non-stop campaigning, including pre-dawn stops today in Iowa and Michigan, Democrat Dukakis returned to Boston.

"I think tonight we're not only going to surprise a few people, but we're going to be doing the celebrating," he told supporters who welcomed him at the airport.

"I voted for Mike Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen and I'm proud of it," he said after casting his ballot later, along with wife Kitty, daughters Andrea and Kara and son John.

"I come away from all of this even more optimistic about the future of this great country of ours than when I started," a sleepless Dukakis had told 3,000 supporters who turned out for a 3 a.m. rally in sub-freezing weather in Des Moines, Iowa.

INS gearing up for 'phase two' of amnesty plan

HOUSTON (AP) — After a slow start, immigration officials at the nation's busiest alien amnesty center are bracing for thousands of applicants in the coming of months seeking permanent residency status.

Three people showed up at the Houston INS center Monday on the first day that applicants could be granted permanent residency under the historic amnesty program. But only those illegal aliens who signed up May 5, 1987 — the first day of the program — were eligible to apply Monday.

"This is a really significant time for us," said Ron Parra, district director for the Immigration and Naturalization Service. "I think this program is extremely far-reaching."

More than 1.7 million people who entered the United States illegally before 1982 applied for amnesty nationwide by the May 4 deadline. The Houston INS office handled more applications — some 125,000 — than any other single immigration office in the nation.

Those who applied for amnesty must wait 18 months after their original application before obtaining permanent residency, meaning only those who submitted applications on the first day were eligible to get permanent residency Monday.

Legalized immigrants can apply for permanent residency 18 months after they first applied for amnesty and must apply within one year or lose their legal status.

Since many illegal aliens were reluctant to apply for amnesty at first and only came foward as the deadline neared, INS officials expect to be processing more people in the coming months. On the last day, 7,000 people applied at the Houston office.

On the civics test given at the INS center, applicants must answer at least six of the 10 questions correctly to pass. Another requirement is that legalized aliens have a knowledge of English.

Immigrants either can attend special classes and present a certificate of completion when they apply for permanent residency, or they must pass the test on the subjects given by INS clerks when they apply.

Ranch worker learned Spanish, then English

By HOLDEN LEWIS

EL PASO (AP) — After Yugoslavian Shane O'Neil jumped a cargo ship in Chicago 15 years ago and headed to the Southwest to work as a ranch hand, he decided to learn Spanish first.

That way, he figured, he could pass himself off as a Mexican if he were picked up by the Border Patrol and would be deported to Mexico instead of back to Yugoslavia.

After he picked up a working knowledge of Spanish, he began studying English the same way he learned Spanish — by talking to people and by listening to television and radio.

Four held in marijuana investigation

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Four men were arrested and nearly 200 pounds of marijunana seized Monday after a two-week investigation led lawmen to a pair of West Texas ranches where the primary cash crop was the illegal weed.

Before dawn Monday, officers stopped two vehicles, a pickup truck and a Cadillac sedan, as they were leaving a ranch seven miles north of the U.S.-Mexico border near Presidio, said Art Van Dorn, commander of the Midland-based Permian Basin Drug Task Force.

One of the vehicles was going south and the other north on State Highway 67 when they were stopped, Van Dorn said. Neither of the vehicles had headlights on when stopped, he said.

Investigators found a false bottom in the Cadillac and in it 93 pounds of marijuana, he said.

Five men were arrested at the scene and are expected to be arraigned before a federal magistrate today. Two of the men were from Odessa, one was from Presidio, and one of the men was from Ojinaga, Mexico, according to investigators.

Investigators from the task force, U.S. Customs, the Presidio County Sheriff's Department, El Paso-based West Texas Drug Task Force and Odessa Crime Stoppers then obtained a search warrant and converged on the ranch.

Houston's two-in-one forms may 'speed up' traffic tickets

HOUSTON (AP) — A new traffic ticket that allows police to write two violations on one form, doubling their output with little extra effort, could spark a turnaround in a year-long decline in traffic citations, police and court officials said.

Before, police had to write up separate violations on separate tickets, making multiple tickets an annoyance. Police have had the new ticket forms about two weeks, and Municipal Courts administrator Don Hollingsworth says officers aren't hesitating to give drivers two tickets.

Drivers who speed or run red lights are at a much higher risk now of getting a second citation for not wearing a seat belt or having an expired inspection sticker.

There is no significant increase in the number of tickets being written yet, but after a year of plummeting revenues as police wrote fewer and fewer tickets, it appears the slowdown has bottomed out and the numbers may be creeping back up.

September marked the nadir of a traffic ticket roller coaster ride that has wreaked havoc on city budget projections. From an average of about 60,000 a month in most of 1986, tickets soared to 90,000 a month later that year. Then, from 85,403 written in January 1987, tickets plunged to 41,187 in January 1988, and then dropped still further to 30,151 in September.

In October, police wrote 35,191 tickets — the largest monthly increase since May.

One police officer said confidentially that not only do the new tickets make it easier to write up multiple citations, but officers believe writing more tickets could help win them a pay hike next year.

City Council has promised a 3 percent pay hike to city employees if there is enough money in the budget at the end of the year. Consequently, some officers are reasoning that more tickets will mean more revenue, which will mean more pay, one officer said.

Election to answer degree of dominance

WASHINGTON (AP) — The only question that today's voting will answer about the Democrats' control of the House is precisely how dominant they will be, politicians and observers agree.

A mere handful of the 408 incumbents seeking re-election are expected to fall, a group that may include a young Georgia congressman facing a legal problem and a veteran Rhode Island lawmaker mired in an ethical controversy.

Expectations are that when the smoke clears, the current Democratic majority of 255-177 over Republicans — there are three vacancies — will be little changed.

"There's a tendency, when they're not hurting, for people to go with incumbents," said Nelson Polsby, a political science professor at the University of California at Berkeley who studies congressional elections.

Coupled with that attitude are the tremendous campaign advantages that officeholders have. They routinely raise more money than their opponents — they have a $151 million to $32 million edge over their challengers in contributions so far. Also, they often are from districts mapped to help their electoral prospects, and they usually are much better-known among voters than are their challengers.

Even if GOP presidential nominee George Bush defeats Democrat Michael Dukakis, observers say turnover of House seats should be in the low single digits. Spokeswoman Peggy Connolly of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee said Monday that she expected Democrats to pick up two seats, while National Republican Congressional Committee spokesman Rich Galen predicted a swing of two seats either way.

"It's just so hard to knock off an incumbent," Galen conceded.

History backs him up. In 1986, 98 percent of the incumbents seeking re-election were successful.

House Banking Committee Chairman Fernand J. St Germain, D-R.I., found himself in a dead heat as voting began and could earn the distinction of being the first House committee chairman to be defeated since the 1980 defeat of Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., who headed the ways and means panel.

St Germain's problems were aggravated two weeks ago when a federal judge in Washington unsealed a letter from a Justice Department official to the House ethics committee mentioning "substantial evidence of serious and sustained misconduct" by the lawmaker.

The department said in May that it had declined to prosecute St Germain, 60, over allegations that he received favors from savings and loan industry lobbyists. But it has sent its findings to the ethics panel, which cleared the legislator last year of separate charges that he had used his influence to build a $2 million real estate empire.

St Germain, a 14-term veteran, has denied that the ethics committee is investigating him, and has questioned the timing with which the Justice Department letter was unsealed. His GOP opponent, political newcomer Ronald K. Machtley, 40, has accused the Democrat of an attitude that "considers acceptable public service as not being indicted."

Facing grimmer odds was Rep. Pat Swindall, R-Ga., who trailed nearly 2-1 in pre-election polls against his Democratic challenger, former television actor Ben Jones.

Swindall, 37, has been charged with lying to a grand jury when he said he could not recall being told that an $850,000 home loan he was seeking might be connected to illegal drug proceeds. The broker was an undercover federal agent who recorded a conversation in which he told Swindall the money might be tainted by drugs.

A trial on the 10 perjury counts, which Swindall had hoped to complete before Election Day, was postponed.

The race between the two-term veteran and Jones, who portrayed Cooter on "The Dukes of Hazzard," has been one of the most personal and bitter contests in the country.

The real House battlegrounds — where each party has the best chance of picking up territory — are the 27 House seats in which incumbents are not seeking re-election. Since Republicans hold 15 of those seats, the GOP has the most to lose.

As hundreds of balloons rise behind them, Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis, and his wife, Kitty, wave to thousands of supporters gathered for a noontime rally in San Franciso on the last day of campaigning Monday.

Dukakis hoping to surprise pollsters

BOSTON (AP) — Underdog Michael Dukakis ended his marathon run for the presidency today with a cross-country journey home, predicting that he'd surprise the pollsters with an upset victory over Republican George Bush.

Arriving sleepless from a night-long flight from California that included stops in Iowa and Michigan, the Democratic nominee was publicly optimistic as he cast his ballot at a hometown housing project.

"I voted for Mike Dukakis," he said leaving the polling booth.

At a Boston airport welcome-home rally, Dukakis told his audience to expect the unexpected.

"I think tonight we're not only going to surprise a few people, but we're going to be doing the celebrating," Dukakis told several hundred cheering supporters. "It's been an incredible experience."

He was equally feisty at a rain-swept rally at the Detroit airport, his last stop before Boston.

"We always knew this would be a tough, competitive race," he said. "Democrats win tough, competitive races...Let's go out there and make sure that we're the ones who are popping the champagne corks and preparing for a new era of American greatness."

Earlier, about 3,000 partisans braved sub-freezing temperatures to greet Dukakis before dawn in Des Moines, Iowa, in the state where the Massachusetts governor began his bid for the White House 20 months ago.

"There is so much we can do working together, just so long as we remember that we are one nation, one community, one people," he told them.

The rallies were part of a grueling, virtually non-stop schedule Dukakis has kept up since the weekend in his uphill bid to defeat Bush.

"I come away from all of this even more optimistic about the future of this great country of ours than when I started," he told supporters before flying to Detroit and then home to Boston.

Dukakis began the campaign's last trip back across the country after spending a final day in California.

"Don't let them tell you this campaign is over," Dukakis said Monday night in a speech to more than 10,000 supporters in Los Angeles before heading home. "It won't be over until the people of California have their say...I know this race is within our grasp both here and across this country."

Dukakis told his California audience they may hear news reports calling the race in Bush's favor based on exit polls in Eastern states. But he urged them to work until polls close in the West.

"It's yours and the hands across America that will win this election for us," Dukakis said.

He also took another swipe at Bush's selection of Indiana Sen. Dan Quayle as his running mate by noting that the GOP nominee did not mention Quayle during a half-hour network commercial broadcast on election eve.

Quayle given hero's welcome at hometown

HUNTINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Republican Sen. Dan Quayle, saying "Well, we got one sure vote," cast his ballot today in his hometown where he ended his occasionally rocky campaign for the vice presidency.

Returning to Indiana Monday night, Quayle told about 2,000 supporters nearby Fort Wayne that he was "finally at home" after a campaign that began when he was picked for the No. 2 slot at the Republican convention in August.

"Well, we got one sure vote," Quayle said as he emerged from the Huntington County Courthouse where he and his wife, Marilyn, voted.

"Two," said Mrs. Quayle, adding it was a "very exciting" day for the couple.

Before voting, Quayle went to the family dentist for a routine check-up and teeth-cleaning. Aides said the visit to the dentist has been an election day ritual since Quayle was elected to the House of Representatives in 1976.

As he walked from the dentist to the courthouse, elementary school children cheered Quayle, who was raised in the town.

Huntington also was the scene of one of Quayle's most trying campaign moments: a tension-filled confrontation with reporters who questioned him about his past the day after he accepted the vice presidential nomination.

At the rally Monday night, Quayle did not mention accusations that he had used family influence to get a slot in the Indiana National Guard to avoid the draft during the Vietnam war.

But he said, "There have been weeks of wild exhilaration along with personal testing, and we knew you were there."

Quayle, seeking to become the first Indiana native to become vice president since Thomas R. Marshall served under President Woodrow Wilson from 1913-1921, was praised by several state party figures as a political survivor.

Rain fell on Election Day today in the Pacific Northwest and Ohio Valley after snow settled on Sections of the West and Midwest, in some places for the first time this season.

Boise, Idaho, got its first flakes, a half inch of snow, as did the valleys of eastern Oregon and northern Nevada, where up to 2 inches accumulated. About 2 inches of snow were reported in northeast Wisconsin, too.

A storm spread rain in the Northwest, but it amounted to no more than a quarter-inch across the region. In Illinois, scattered rain fell early this morning after light rain late Monday in the western Ohio and western Tennessee valleys.

Today's forecast called for scattered showers from western and central New England to the upper Ohio Valley, and from there to the southern Appalachians and parts of Alabama and Mississippi; snow mixed with rain in upper Michigan; rain from the Pacific Northwest to the northern and central Plateau region; and snow in parts of Montana and Wyoming.

Bentsen, Bush wrap up race in home state

HOUSTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush returned to the city where he began his presidential bid 13 months ago to campaign and vote in today's general election, while Democratic vice presidential candidate Lloyd Bentsen made a final drive for votes through his home state.

Bush addressed several thousand jubilant supporters Monday who crowded into the triple-decked Houston Galleria shopping center. He planned to vote today at a nearby Ramada Inn and attend election night festivities at the George R. Brown Convention Center.

"I've been all over this great country in these months," Bush said during the Monday rally. "Tonight, as this wonderful campaign draws to a close — and this is our final event — it is great to be back, for me where it all began, right here in Texas. There is no place like home."

Bush, whose appearance was preceded by entertainment from country singers Crystal Gayle and Loretta Lynn, was introduced by U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, and Gov. Bill Clements.

"With God's help and your support, we'll shorten his title and take the 'vice' out of 'vice president,'" Gramm told the crowd.

Bush noted Monday that he and his wife, Barbara, have voted in Texas in every presidential election since 1940.

Bentsen, who was scheduled to spend election night at Austin's Driskell Hotel, also stumped in Houston Monday, urging supporters outside City Hall to vote Democratic because the ticket of Michael Dukakis and Bentsen are "on your side."

Bentsen, flanked on a stage by family members, state Democratic officials and Democratic candidates of Harris County, said people despise his Republican counterpart Dan Quayle.

"He is no friend of the people of Texas," Bentsen said. "I watched him. In 1985, Dan Quayle was the primary sponsor of the repeal of percentage depletions to tangible drilling costs and development costs. Now that's the way he voted. He voted against an amendment to make unemployed oil service workers eligible for trade adjustment assessments."

Bush favored in nation's first votes

DIXVILLE NOTCH, N.H. (AP) — Residents of Dixville Notch followed tradition by becoming the first voters of the 1988 presidential election today and favored Republican George Bush over Democrat Michael Dukakis by 34-3.

The town's 28 registered Republicans, six Democrats and four independents came out in snowy, windy weather to carry on the tradition of casting the nation's first votes just after midnight. One voter broke with the nominees and wrote in GOP Rep. Jack Kemp of New York.

Town officials tallied the results immediately after the last ballot was placed in the box in a room at the Balsams resort.

Located in extreme northern New Hampshire, Dixville Notch incorporated only for the purposes of voting and has been casting the first ballots since the early 1970s.

More often than not, Dixville Notch has not been a bellwether for the nation, although the town voted 29-1 for Ronald Reagan over Walter Mondale in 1984.

Queen bee's death depresses workers

Every now and then a queen honeybee dies, and for some reason the colony doesn't replace her quickly.

When that happens, worker bees sink into a deep depression, honey production falls off and workers' lifespans are cut sharply.

In three weeks, honey production drops to 59 percent of normal. The lesson for beekeepers is clear: Keep the throne occupied.

NATION

"Our spirits are bright, the future looks good. We're grateful to all of you," he told several hundred people who stood in the rain in Detroit.

Initial reports from around the country were of a heavy early turnout of voters. In Georgia, North Carolina, Rhode Island and Tennessee, elections officials said early turnout was heavier than normal.

Bush's running mate, Dan Quayle, made no secret of his choice after voting in his hometown of Huntington, Ind.

"Well, we got one sure vote," Quayle said. "Two," chimed in his wife Marilyn who accompanied him.

Bentsen, the Democratic vice presidential nominee, was in his home state of Texas although he had used an absentee ballot to cast his vote early.

Following long-standing tradition, the 38 voters of Dixville Notch, N.H., cast their ballots at midnight.

Their votes, the first counted, were 34 for Bush, three for Dukakis and one write-in ballot for former Republican candidate Rep. Jack Kemp of New York.

With pollsters still finding millions of voters claiming they hadn't made up their minds, Bush and Dukakis made final-hour appeals for support on television Monday night.

"I cannot predict all of the challenges America will face in the years ahead," Bush said at the conclusion of a 30-minute television commercial broadcast on the three major networks. "I can tell you what principles will guide me, what values I hold dear and I can say that I believe I have the experience to be a steady hand guiding our country."

He described Dukakis as someone with "no experience in national security affairs."

The Democratic nominee's 30-minute appeal was on the networks immediately preceding the Bush broadcast.

In his broadcast, Dukakis spoke of family, jobs, senior citizens, hunger and farmers and answered questions on issues that have dogged him, including his record on crime, his military policy and his reluctance to respond to the negative attacks.

Dukakis also charged anew that the Republicans would try to balance the budget by cutting Social Security.

STATE

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, Dukakis' main competitor for the nomination, stumped for the Democrats in black communities in Houston, Beaumont, Austin and Dallas.

Lenora Fulani and Rafael Mendez of the New Alliance Party and Libertarians Ron Paul and Andre Marrou are also on the ballot.

Taking advantage of a special law passed to help then-U.S. Sen. Lyndon Johnson's 1960 presidential attempt, Bentsen appears twice on today's ballot. The 67-year-old Democrat faces Republican Congressman Beau Boulter of Amarillo and Libertarian Jeff Daiell in his race for a fourth term in the Senate.

Most of Bentsen's personal campaigning has come as a vice presidential candidate, but his paid Senate advertising stresses his experience and leadership in Washington. Boulter has tried to brand Bentsen a liberal by tying him to Dukakis, and he is asking Texas voters to reject Bentsen's "greedy" bid for two offices.

If the Democrats win the White House and Bentsen wins re-election, the senator will resign his Senate seat in January, setting the stage for a special election sometime next year.

Texans must make choices in a record-high 11 contested statewide down-ballot races today. Republicans are counting on several appointed incumbents to break through the barrier that has limited the GOP's statewide victories so far to president, U.S. senator and governor.

Railroad Commissioner Kent Hance and Supreme Court Chief Justice Tom Phillips, both appointed by Republican Gov. Bill Clements to fill vacancies created when incumbent Democrats resigned, provide the party's best hopes for down-ballot victories. Hance faces Democratic state Rep. Clint Hackney of Houston in the race to fill the two years remaining in former Commissioner Mack Wallace's term.

In the battle for a full six-year term on the three-member panel that regulates the energy and transportation industries in the state, former Republican state Rep. Ed Emmett of Round Rock is challenging incumbent Democratic Chairman Jim Nugent. Libertarian Richard Draheim and Reynaldo Lozano of the New Alliance Party are also seeking that seat.

Three Supreme Court resignations in the past year combine with the three regular seats up for grabs today to give voters the choice of 13 high court candidates. The size and source of campaign contributions has been the major issue in races once decided by comparing resumes at the Democratic primary.

Democratic Justice Ted Z. Robertson of Dallas is giving up his seat on the court to challenge Phillips, a former Houston district judge. Republican Appeals Court Justice Paul Murphy of Huntsville faces former Democratic state Sen. Lloyd Doggett of Austin in the race for Robertson's seat on the bench.

In Place 2, incumbent Democratic Justice William Kilgarlin faces Republican Appeals Court Justice Nathan Hecht of Dallas. Another Republican on Hecht's court, Charles Ben Howell, faces incumbent Democratic Justice Raul Gonzalez of Corpus Christi and Libertarian Calvin Scholz of San Antonio in the Place 3 race.

The Place 4 campaign pits Republican Justice Barbara Culver of Midland, appointed to the court by Clements in February, against former Democratic Congressman Jack Hightower of Vernon. Republican Justice Eugene Cook of Houston, whom Clements placed on the bench in September, faces Democrat Karl Bayer, an Austin attorney, in the Place 5 race.

At the Court of Criminal Appeals, Democratic Judge Mike McCormick of Lockhart battles Republican district Judge David Berchelmann of San Antonio in the race for presiding judge. The Place 1 race features incumbent Democratic Judge Chuck Campbell and Libertarian Egon Tausch. Incumbent Democratic Judge Chuck Miller faces Republican district Judge Tom Rickhoff and Libertarian lawyer Carol Caul in the Place 2 contest.

Texans also must vote yes or no on three constitutional amendments on today's ballot. Proposition 1 would ensure that the state spends all federal highway funds for building or maintaining public roadways. Proposition 2 would create a "rainy day fund" in the state Treasury. Proposition 3 would allow various state trust funds to expand their base of investments.

AMNESTY

On Monday, O'Neil used that English ability to pass a test allowing him to earn permanent U.S. residency under the second phase of the immigration amnesty program.

O'Neil was among the first three amnesty recipients in the Immigration and Naturalization Service's El Paso district to apply for permanent residency. Monday was the first day amnesty recipients could apply for their "green cards" allowing them to live permanently in the United States, to work and to leave and enter the country as they please.

With four TV cameras aimed at him, O'Neil calmly recited the colors of the U.S. flag, explained what the flag's 13 stripes symbolize, told how many states are in the union, identified Ronald Reagan as the president and defined the Constitution as the supreme law of the land.

After filling out a short test with similar questions and having his fingerprints taken, the Yugoslavian was given his permanent residency card, which has not been green since 1976.

"It's just exciting, I guess, getting something like this," the 31-year-old cowboy said, gazing at the white card. "It's liberty for me."

The other two new permanent residents — Juan Helguera Segovia and Feliciana Gutierrez — didn't have to take the nerve-wracking test.

All three entered the country illegally and were among the first to apply for amnesty from deportation when the application period began May 5, 1987, making them eligible to be among the first to apply for permanent residency.

O'Neil, who took that name after he got to the United States, joined the merchant marine at 16 and got work aboard a ship that cruised up the St. Lawrence Seaway and docked in Chicago. He left the ship and never went back.

"I left for political reasons," he said. "I believe in liberty, and I've always believed in God. I'm Catholic."

Helguera, a well-service worker in Odessa, obtained permanent residency by showing that he had taken English and civics classes at Odessa College. The 28-year-old native of Durango, Mexico, came to the United States nine years ago to seek work.

"In the nine years, they (the Border Patrol) stopped me only once," he said. "They gave me 15 days to leave, but I didn't leave."

His wife, Dolores, said she plans to apply for permanent residency in a few months, when she becomes eligible.

Mrs. Gutierrez moved to El Paso with her daughter, Ofelia Haller, in 1978. The 88-year-old native of Hidalgo de Parral, Mexico, was exempt from the English and civics requirement because of her age.

"I'm glad and very thankful," she said of getting permanent residency.

All three said they plan to apply for citizenship. O'Neil, a staunch supporter of the Republican Party, seemed the most eager to become a citizen. Because he is married to an American citizen, he most likely will be able to vote for president in 1992.

Asked if he wished he could vote in the 1988 presidential election, O'Neil said, "Oh, you bet, of course. I sure hope Mr. Bush will win tomorrow."

ARREST

There, they found another 100 pounds of marijuana in a barn. There were several workers at the ranch but they were not arrested, Van Dorn said.

The two vehicles were seized by the officers. At about 6:30 p.m. Monday, officers went to a ranch in north Ward County, between Pyote and Wink. No marijuana was found, but two horse trailers with false bottoms were seized, officers said.

No weapons were found in any of the operations, Van Dorn said.

The marijuana seized was found in bales, and is valued at between $350,000 to $400,000, according to officers.

"They were all linked together," Van Dorn said of the three operations. "It tends to make one whole case for us. And we know the dope was going into the Permian Basin for distribution."

Agents from the Drug Enforcement Administration, the Department of Public Safety, the U.S. Customs Service, and several local agencies assisted in the operation, he said.

Van Dorn said prosecutors would be "looking into" the possibility that the ranches can be seized from the owners and the awarded to the government because of the alleged illegal activity.

Virus spreads unanswered ethical questions

NEW YORK (AP) — The marauding computer virus unleashed last week has jolted many academics into realizing that ethical values are critical in a field where brilliant minds can turn dangerously arrogant, careless and naive.

"I would like to see students more sensitized to this," said Peter Yee, a member of the experimental computing center at the University of California's Berkeley campus, one of the targets of the virus.

The virus, believed spread by a graduate computer science student at Cornell University, clogged an estimated 6,000 computers at universities and research institutes by spreading via electronic mail networks and making copies of itself. It reportedly only took up memory space and did not destroy files.

"Before this incident, students felt that security and privacy were somebody else's problems," Yee said Monday. "Now that one of our own has done this, I expect more in-depth discussion."

Others queried in an informal sampling of top U.S. universities said they believe most computer science students have a fundamental grasp of proper ethical conduct. But several said computer advances are moving so quickly that questions of right and wrong often have not been discussed in depth.

"I think there's a broad consensus among students and faculty at Harvard that tampering with major computer information systems is a very bad thing to do, and it can cause disruption within the whole social structure," said John Shattuck, Harvard vice president for government, community and public affairs.

Robert Morris Jr.

At the same time, Shattuck said, "I think the technology is moving so rapidly here that it's somehow gotten ahead of the discussion and careful weighing of principles, as reflected in the slow evolution in the law in this area. This case will certainly draw attention to the questions."

The Cornell student, Robert T. Morris Jr., did his undergraduate studies at Harvard.

The Justice Department has directed the FBI to conduct a full-scale criminal investigation of Morris and the incident, a government source familiar with the case said late Monday on condition of anonymity. The FBI had been conducting a preliminary inquiry.

"It's a bit terrifying," the 23-year-old Morris said.

Thomas Guidoboni, a lawyer in Washington, D.C., said he had been retained to represent Morris, who is staying at his family's Arnold, Md., home. "We have notified the federal authorities of our representation and his whereabouts," Guidoboni said.

Eugene Mallove, spokesman and chief science writer for the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, said the virus incident compelled the school's authorities to reiterate their policy on the misuse of computers, which will be published Wednesday in the campus newspaper, Tech Talk.

"We're going to send out a message loud and clear that this is not to be tolerated, this is not a matter to be taken lightly," he said.

The spread of the virus occurred just a few weeks after MIT held a symposium on ethics in high-technology fields, although the specific question of spreading computer viruses wasn't discussed, Mallove said.

James Ball, director of computing at Stanford University, another victim of the virus, said most students and researchers were awed by the infestation and how easily it spread.

"A lot of us have talked about what could have happened. If this had been a malicious attack, it could have been a real disaster," Ball said. "For us, the reaction was wiping the sweat off our brow and saying 'woooh.'"

But Ball said that underlying ethical and legal questions about why spreading such a virus was wrong, or even whether it was wrong, haven't been discussed much, reflecting an important weakness in the discipline.

"There's a great deal of naivete among computer science people. They spend an enormous amount of their lives in front of a screen. Some are somewhat introverted," he said. "Computer scientists, I don't believe, have the foggiest notions about laws on things such as copyright infringements."

Still, Ball said: "I think there's a general impression it was wrong. People were talking about the possibilities of fines and imprisonment. People realize the severity of the potential outcome for people who do it, sort of like if I'm speeding and I see a crash where people burned to death."

Afghan leader asks for U.S. support

WASHINGTON (AP) — The leader of the Afghan resistance alliance is asking for U.S. money to help refugees and to rehabilitate his war-torn country in talks today with State Department officials.

There was no advance price tag as Burhanuddin Rabbani outlined his plans for Afghanistan's future. At a session Monday with Undersecretary of State Michael H. Armacost he gave an initial description of the elections he said he wants to hold in January to select a new government in Kabul.

A U.S. official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Rabbani did not ask for additional American military aid to carry out the guerrillas' fight against pro-Moscow government forces.

"They didn't come in pressing for more guns," the official said. "They are confident of their ability to see this war to its end."

Although the level of U.S. military support remains secret, the rebels are believed to have received several hundred million dollars in recent years. Much of the aid, including shoulder-fired Stinger missiles, is channeled through Pakistan.

Rabbani, who sees President Reagan and Secretary of State George P. Shultz on Wednesday, is the leader of the Islamic Society guerrilla group and of the main rebel alliance. He had talks scheduled today with Assistant Secretary of State Richard Williamson, who coordinates humanitarian aid to the rebels, and with the Agency for International Development.

"It was a very cordial meeting," a U.S. official reported after Monday's session. "There was a restating of our support for the Mujahedeen. Both sides gave their assessment of the issues."

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Rabbani and Armacost just "touched on" the guerrilla leader's plan, and that it would receive more extensive consideration later in the week.

The Reagan administration already has registered its general support for a political settlement, provided it involves self-determination for the Afghan people. Before Rabbani's arrival, U.S. officials said his plan, which would exclude communists, offered "a promising channel" to that end.

Reports from Pakistan, which also backs the rebels, indicated Rabbani may ask for more advanced weapons from the United States. But the guerrillas are making gains with the arms they already have, and a U.S. official said "it would seem they are well-fixed."

Rabbani's plan for a new government involves negotiating a cease-fire with Afghan forces. Even the introduction of Soviet Backfire and MiG warplanes and SS-1 Scud missiles have not averted the government's impending loss of Knadahar, the country's second-largest city.

The State Department has counseled the guerrillas to exercise restraint toward Soviet troops, all of which are supposed to be out of the country by Feb. 15. But the rebels have not been asked to take it easy on the Afghan forces.

Half the more than 100,000 Soviet troops in the country since 1979 were withdrawn Aug. 15.

Mrs. Marcos demands 'right to dignity', returns to exile

HONOLULU (AP) — Former Philippine first lady Imelda Marcos called for the U.S. government to respect "our right to our dignity" as she returned to her Hawaii exile from New York where she pleaded innocent to racketeering charges.

"I've just come back from the most harrowing and most inhuman experience of my life," Mrs. Marcos told reporters and about two dozen supporters after her arrival Monday night at Honolulu International Airport.

Later, when she arrived at the couple's hillside estate, her husband, deposed Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos, stood up from his wheelchair briefly and kissed her. He also was wearing a neck brace.

Marcos has been in a wheelchair but without a neck brace during his few public appearances since the indictments were returned last month.

The Marcoses are accused in federal indictments of plundering $103 million from the Philippine treasury, funneling it to foreign bank accounts and using it to buy prime New York City real estate and art.

Mrs. Marcos was allowed to return to Hawaii after posting a $5 million bond. Marcos, 71, remained in Hawaii after lawyers argued he was too ill to make the trip to New York for arraignment.

She arrived aboard a jet owned by tobacco heiress Doris Duke, a longtime friend who also arranged her $5 million bond.

Activist doubtful aid to homeless to increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proposals for more federal aid for America's homeless are likely to fare poorly next year, no matter who wins today's presidential election, says a leading activist for the homeless.

"It's going to be a long fight," said Mitch Snyder, head of the Center for Creative Non-Violence. "America's politicians haven't shown much concern about the homeless."

But Snyder was more critical of Vice President George Bush, the Republican candidate, than Democratic candidate Michael Dukakis.

"We've already seen what Bush can do during the eight years of the Reagan administration," Snyder said. "I think things will be easier under Dukakis."

Snyder's comments Monday came as 377 people were arrested at the Capitol, capping a long series of protests organized by Snyder.

The protests began Sept. 26, and 239 people had been arrested before Monday's big demonstration. Most of them had been charged with unlawful entry.

About 2,000 people took part in a march and a 90-minute rally that preceded Monday's arrests, according to Dan Nichols, a spokesman for the Capitol police.

TV show reunites survivors

NEW YORK (AP) — As Robert Kahn listened to a Holocaust survivor tell his story on television, he suddenly had a flash of recognition. The man on the screen, he realized, was a boyhood chum he hadn't seen in 50 years.

Ernest Michel's face wasn't familiar, Kahn said, but the name rang a bell. And when Michel told the "CBS Morning News" interviewer Monday he had grown up in Mannheim, Germany, "it all came back," Kahn said.

Michel, executive vice president of the United Jewish Appeal Federation of New York, was appearing on the program to discuss the 50th anniversary of Kristallnacht, the night when Nazis went on a rampage against Jews in Germany.

As Kahn watched from his home in Dayton, Ohio, he said he realized that Michel was a boyhood friend who had attended the same synagogue in Mannheim. The two hadn't seen each other at least since autumn 1938.

Kahn fled Germany with his parents in early 1939; Michel stayed and spent the war in labor and concentration camps, where almost all his family died.

The two, who were 15 in 1938 and are 65 today, spoke by telephone Monday evening, quickly catching up on the intervening years.

Witness denies bribes

NEW YORK (AP) — A witness in former Miss America Bess Myerson's divorce-fixing trial denied prosecution allegations that the one-time cultural affairs commissioner tried to buy him off with the prospect of a job.

"I explained it to those guys (federal prosecutors) there. It's a joke, a longstanding joke between us," Walter Canter said in a telephone interview Monday evening.

Canter, a former journalist who worked as a speechwriter for Miss Myerson for 15 years, testified Monday that she fired him in 1983 from his job at the city's Department of Cultural Affairs.

He said he had not heard from her until two or three weeks ago, when she telephoned him.

Defense lawyers immediately objected, and U.S. District Judge John Keenan conferred privately with prosecutors and defense lawyers before barring any further testimony about the call.

Canter testified Monday that he had rewritten a resume for Miss Gabel. He said he had written speeches and ghostwritten magazine articles for Miss Myerson from 1968 to 1983.

Murder, gun control linked

BOSTON (AP) — A study concludes that Seattle's weaker gun control laws probably explain why the risk of being killed with a handgun there is five times higher than in nearby Vancouver, British Columbia.

The researchers said that Seattle has a higher overall homicide rate than Vancouver, and virtually all of the difference can be explained by the city's higher incidence of handgun shootings.

The researchers cautioned that similar studies should be done in other cities, but they said their work suggests that "a more restrictive approach to handgun control may decrease national homicide rates."

The study, directed by Dr. John Henry Sloan of Harborview Medical Center in Seattle, is being published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

The researchers noted that Vancouver and Seattle are similar large cities 140 miles apart in the Pacific Northwest. However, the Canadian city has tougher gun laws.

In Vancouver, self-defense is not a legal reason to buy a handgun, and concealed weapons are not allowed. Permits are required to buy and transport handguns, and those obtained for recreation can be fired only at licensed shooting clubs.

Opponents of gun control argue that limiting access to guns will have little effect on homicide rates, because those who want to kill will find ways to obtain guns or will use other weapons.

Groups ban together

NEW YORK (AP) — The Conservative movement of Judaism has called on Israel's Likud bloc and Labor party to withstand demands by Orthodox parties that hold the balance in Israeli politics.

Neither Likud nor Labor emerged from last week's parliamentary elections with enough seats to form a majority. The 18 seats won by several small Orthodox parties could give either side a majority.

Among demands being made by the Israeli religious parties are outlawing abortion and autopsies and halting mass transit on the Sabbath. They also want automatic Israeli citizenship be available to converts to Judaism only if their conversions were performed by Orthodox rabbis.

The statement by the Conservative movement was released at the Jewish Theological Seminary in New York and urged Labor and Likud to "reject the blackmail demands," The New York Times reported today.

Teacher won't compromise

POINT PLEASANT, W.Va. (AP) — A blue jean-wearing teacher suspended for not wearing a tie to class says a dress code compromise that bans dungarees "sounds like a stinking deal."

Superintendent Charles Chambers on Monday offered the compromise, which would allow math teacher Bill Webb to return to work without a tie. Webb said he has not worn a tie to class in at least 15 of his 20 years as an educator.

Chambers, who has suspended the 46-year-old teacher three times this school year for not wearing a tie, said Webb faces charges of insubordination and could be dismissed if he won't agree to the dress code changes.

"I'm not an unreasonable person, although I've been painted as one," the superintendent said.

Survey reveals nation's charity

America's Yuppies have come in for a great deal of badmouthing during their relatively short time on the scene. Now, according to a Gallup Poll, it turns out that at least some of those young urban professionals are as self-centered and selfish as their popular caricature suggests.

The national survey disputes the commonly held notion that the most generous givers are America's richest citizens. On the contrary, the poorer one is, the greater the percentage of one's earnings he or she is likely to give to charity. The most generous are those with incomes of less than $10,000; the least generous those with incomes between $75,000 and $100,000. The profile of the least generous American: single, affluent, urban, neither a church attendee nor charitable volunteer.

There are, to be sure, many very wealthy Americans who give lavishly.

But, in the words of the president of the Independent Sector, Brian O'Connell, "Contrary to popular opinion, the well-to-do in America can not be described as generous."

Besides income level, Gallup found other predictors of generosity as well.

Those who regularly attended religious services contributed more than twice the percentage of total income as those who didn't attend. People living in rural areas are more generous both with their time and with their money than urban dwellers.

The survey results are, as O'Connell said, surprising. Apparently, the more financially successful one becomes, the more materialistic, secular and self-centered he or she becomes.

Such an outlook does not bode well for those who imagine that a kind of volunteerist engine can be brought to bear on many, if not most, of the nation's social ills.

True enough, the poll found that 45 percent of Americans manage to volunteer an average of 4.7 hours a week for charitable work. And 73 percent do make a charitable contribution of some kind. Surely that is a testament to America's moral fiber.

Still, what about that 29 percent of the population that gives, in time and money, nothing? What about the finding that the more one earns, the more tightfisted one becomes? In an era when success is increasingly measured by the amount one earns — when earning millions is the goal not just of Boesky but of everyone from professional athletes to lottery players — what virtues can this nation hope to preserve?

Another View:

Computer misery

The electronic networks that distribute mail between computers are as vulnerable to sabotage as the Postal Service. The letter bomb of the computer age is a program that clogs up or damages recipient computers. This week, one closed down thousands of computers at universities and government laboratories from coast to coast. A hacker's pastime has become a peril.

The current wave of destructive programs are known as computer viruses, which is what they spread like inside computers — and then outside, through computer networks. The copies can consume so much memory that the infected computers slow down or even shut out their users.

The perpetrator of the latest virus, The New York Times has been told, is a Cornell University graduate student who meant to infect but not disrupt an academic computer network sponsored by the Defense Department. Through an error, the program copied itself far faster than intended.

Unlike military networks, which can be accessed only from guarded terminals, academic computer networks are designed for ease of access. The price of openness is vulnerability. The Cornell virus exploited an error in the network's software that has now been patched. But persistent programmers can doubtless find other entry points. What can be done to avoid widespread disruptions like this week's, or the worse calamities that might result from sabotage?

One possibility is to screen the programs submitted for transmission. But with reason, the operators of public networks do not relish the idea of reading their users' mail. A sentinel program that looked for rapid duplication of the same message among network users would find it hard to discriminate between virus propagation and a legitimate mass mailing. Even if a virus could be identified, it might have done much of its damage by the time it was detected.

It's probably the responsibility of computer owners to protect themselves. Some systems pass all communications through a filter. Carnegie-Mellon University inoculated its computers five years ago with a program that recognized and fended off a Massachusetts bug. A score of antiviral programs or "vaccines" are commercially available. But the vaccines may only induce development of more advanced viruses designed to defeat them, since some hackers evidently consider it an interesting challenge to bring down a network.

The Cornell virus was a highly sophisticated, 60,000-byte program, designed to decode encrypted passwords in the Unix operating system and masquerade with them as a legitimate user. It has wasted thousands of hours as computer operators purged it from their systems. But its consequences will ultimately be benign if the epidemic alerts computer owners to the need to prepare against future assaults.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Nov. 8, the 313th day of 1988. There are 53 days left in the year. This is Election Day.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Nov. 8, 1923, Adolf Hitler launched his first attempt at seizing power in Germany with a failed coup in Munich that came to be known as the "Beer-Hall Putsch." Hitler was imprisoned for high treason.

On this date:

In 1793, the world-famous Louvre Museum in Paris opened its doors to the public for the first time.

In 1837, Mount Holyoke Seminary, a college exclusively for women, opened in South Hadley, Mass.

In 1889, Montana became the 41st state of the union.

In 1904, President Theodore Roosevelt — who had succeeded the assassinated William McKinley — was elected to a term in his own right as he defeated Democrat Alton B. Parker.

In 1932, New York Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt defeated incumbent Herbert Hoover for the presidency of the United States.

In 1933, President Roosevelt created, by executive order, the Civil Works Administration, designed to create jobs for more than 4 million unemployed.

In 1942, Operation "Torch" began during World War II as U.S. and British forces landed in French North Africa.

In 1950, during the Korean War, the first jet-plane battle took place as U.S. Air Force Lieutenant Russell J. Brown shot down a North Korean MiG-15.

In 1960, Massachusetts Senator John F. Kennedy defeated Vice President Richard M. Nixon in their quest for the White House.

JACK ANDERSON

Vet unwitting subject of experiment

WASHINGTON — Mike Rego walked into a Veterans Administration hospital in 1982 seeking help for his skin condition and says he unwittingly became a subject in a medical experiment.

Jack Anderson

A researcher at the San Francisco Veterans Hospital recently was accused by the Food and Drug Administration of failing to get "informed consent" from patients before he used an experimental drug on them. Rego is one of 26 patients whose records indicated that they may not have been adequately warned about the drug 6-aminonicotinamide or 6-AN.

We first reported nearly a year ago on Rego and his struggle to find out more about the drug. Now the researcher, Dr. Herschel Zackheim, has signed an agreement in which the FDA alleges he violated FDA rules governing experimental drugs. The FDA has ordered Zackheim to work under supervision and with only small numbers of patients.

Rego, a Vietnam veteran, went to the San Francisco Veterans Hospital in 1982 for treatment of psoriasis. Zackheim prescribed 6-AN, an ointment. Since the drug was experimental, Zackheim was supposed to have Rego sign a consent form. But Rego says he didn't sign any form, and there is no form in his file.

The 6-AN treatment was stopped after six months when Rego broke out with pustules. Later, Rego was diagnosed as having amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, or Lou Gehrig's disease. It is an incurable and fatal nerve disorder. Rego's attempts to find out if there was a connection between 6-AN and the disease led the FDA to look into Zackheim's use of the drug.

Zackheim disputed claims that Rego didn't know the drug was experimental, and denied any connection with Lou Gehrig's disease. The doctor told our associate Stewart Harris that the paperwork informing Rego of the experimental nature of the drug was lost. At the very least, Zackheim said that he told Rego he was using an experimental treatment.

If he did tell Rego, that was not reflected in the medical files reviewed by FDA investigators. In fact, the investigators reported that half of the 52 patient's charts they looked at did not contain consent forms.

Zackheim also failed to follow proper research protocol and mixed his skin ointment with the controversial chemical DMSO without FDA approval, according to the investigators' report.

Faced with the evidence, Zackheim signed an agreement with the FDA saying he would not do any more studies using more than 20 subjects and that his research will be closely supervised.

Zackheim told us he didn't like the agreement, but said he signed it because, "If I did not sign it, I would not be allowed to continue my research."

FDA investigators have documented numerous cases of researchers who failed to obtain informed consent from patients before using an experimental drug. One FDA official told us that most cases are simply paperwork problems. Subjects learn informally about the drugs, but they don't sign the forms. FDA investigators are understandably edgy about the informality.

Concern over the use of experimental drugs prompted Rep. Fortney "Pete" Stark, D-Calif., to draft a bill that would cut off Medicare funds to researchers who don't follow the rules on those drugs.

Stark's bill did not pass before Congress adjourned, but he said he would introduce it again next year.

Meanwhile, Rego is still trying to find out more about 6-AN. The Veterans Administration promised that it would contact other subjects in Zackheim's study to find out if they are suffering side effects. But Rego told us some of the subjects have not received word from the VA.

HEDGING BETS IN ISRAEL — Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir is secretly pressing the United States for a closer relationship with his country. At the same time, he has been getting in the way of the earnest efforts of Secretary of State George Shultz to nail down a Middle East peace plan. Shamir's meddling includes a secret set of demands, among them a written memorandum of understanding, firming up the relationship Israel now enjoys with the United States under a gentlemen's agreement. Our White House sources say Shamir wants to lock in any progress Israel made under the Reagan administration. The Israelis aren't sure what a new U.S. president will do, so Shamir is hedging his bets on today's election.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Imelda Marcos and Nancy Reagan both have first-lady status, but that's where any comparison ends. Imelda showed up for a court arraignment in New York last week wearing a dress that Nancy wouldn't be caught dead borrowing — a turquoise silk and chiffon ball gown. If Nancy had to appear in court, she would have worn the most dignified suit that someone else's money could buy.

Election could give Texas two more Demos

WASHINGTON — Today's election could add two new Democrats to the Texas delegation in the U.S. House of Representatives.

Roberson

Otherwise, it appears the powerful state delegation — the third largest in the nation, behind New York and California — will be the same old bunch when Congress reconvenes in January.

The reelection rate for incumbents, which is an amazing 98.4 percent nationwide, is about that high in Texas.

Of the 27 Texans in the House, 13 are unopposed for re-election; 12 others appear to be safe, and one, Beau Boulter of Amarillo, is giving up his seat to run for the Senate. Only one incumbent, Republican David (Mac) Sweeney, appears to be in trouble.

In the contest for the open seat in the high plains (13th District), recent polls show state Sen. Bill Sarpalius, a Democrat of Amarillo, ahead of Republican Larry S. Milner, also of Amarillo. Boulter is vacating that seat in order to challenge Lloyd Bentsen for the Senate.

In the rural southeast Texas 14th District, the race between incumbent Sweeney, 33, and second-time challenger Greg H. Laughlin, a 46-year-old attorney from West Columbia, is going down to the wire. Neither is a clear favorite.

With Boulter and Sweeney out and Sarpalius and Laughlin in, the state's lineup would be 19 Democrats and eight Republicans. Now it is 17 to 10 in favor of the Democrats.

Several veteran incumbents, like House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Fort Worth; Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Beaumont, and Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Austin, who have had aggressive opponents in recent elections, were not even challenged this time.

Some newcomers to the delegation escaped without a battle. For example, freshman Lamar Smith, R-San Antonio, is opposed by James A. Robinson, a perennial Libertarian Party candidate, from San Antonio. And Albert Bustamante, D-San Antonio, who won a second term with 90.7 percent of the vote in 1986, is opposed by Republican Jerome L. "Jerry" Gonzales, a nurse from Pleasanton running on a shoestring budget.

Analyzing the race in the high plains district, sources in Amarillo and Austin say Milner, a 50-year-old utility lobbyist making his first political race, is getting a boost from Republican presidential nominee George Bush's popularity. Milner should get something of a lift from Boulter, too, who is expected to carry his home district while being overrun by Bentsen elsewhere.

Sarpalius, 40, has an aura of incumbency himself because the state Senate district that he has represented for eight years overlaps about two-thirds of the congressional district, which is heavily Republican in the northern part of the Panhandle and mostly Democratic in the south, around Wichita Falls.

Sarpalius, a victim of polio as a child, was reared from age 12 at Boys Ranch, a home for troubled youths, 40 miles northwest of Amarillo. While he was at the ranch, he became president of Future Farmers of America. After earning two degrees in agriculture, he joined a private agribusiness concern.

Milner touts his 20 years of business experience and denounces his opponent as "a professional politician."

In the only other close House contest, Sweeney has been emphasizing the value of his incumbency by reminding voters that he played a part in bringing a new Veterans Administration clinic to Victoria County and in locating a foreign trade zone in Calhoun County.

Daniel Cobb, editorial page editor of the Victoria Advocate, notes that Sweeney failed to carry Victoria, the largest city in the district, in 1986. "Could Sweeney lose? He sure could," Cobb said.

• • •

Sweeney and Boulter were among six conservative Texas Republicans washed into Congress in the 1984 Reagan re-election tide.

In 1986, the all-Democratic Texas House delegation was infiltrated by two Republicans: Bush of Houston and the Panhandle's Bob Price. Bush left in 1970 to run unsuccessfully for the Senate against Bentsen. Price was knocked out by former Rep. Jack Hightower, a Democrat, in the post-Watergate election in 1974.

In 1984, while Reagan was raking in 75 percent of the vote in the 13th District, Boulter, an Amarillo city councilman and lawyer, clutched Reagan's coattails to defeat Hightower, 53 percent to 47 percent.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Don't blame others for your shortcomings!

It's a terrible thing to admit I suppose but one of my favorite pastimes is seeing what people say when they've been caught messin' where they shouldn't have been messin', to borrow a phrase from Nancy Sinatra's immortal, "These Boots Are Made for Walkin'."

Grizzard

A major league baseball player once missed a pop fly during a night game and said, "The moon got in my eyes."

Another major leaguer, having caused quite a stir because of comments he made to the media, said, "I was misquoted."

The problem was he made his comment on live television.

When Ronald Reagan got in too deep over Iran-Contra, I thought he handled it well. He said, "I forgot."

Which brings me to the college football player who was asked recently whether or not he took $5,000 from an agent.

He said, "I don't recall."

You might not recall the capital of Utah, but if you're a college football player, I've got to believe you know whether or not somebody gave you 5,000 big ones.

That brings us to the case of Congressman Pat Swindall, R-Ga., whose trial for perjury was halted by a U.S. district judge when his order on pretrial publicity was violated by Swindall's circulating campaign literature. (Swindall, who is locked in a reelection fight with Democrat Ben Jones, had mailed the literature to prospective jurors.)

Swindall is charged with lying to a grand jury, which is looking into a massive money-laundering scheme in which Rep. Swindall attempted to negotiate a $850,000 home loan.

So far, Rep. Swindall has compared himself to Superman, noting that when he was a child, Superman was one of his heroes and Superman always won out over the odds in the end.

After that, he compared himself to Joe Namath, the former New York Jets quarterback who predicted his team would win the 1969 Super Bowl despite the odds against them.

Pat Swindall says you just wait and see if he doesn't beat this rap.

Then, Rep. Swindall compared himself to Little David, having to fight the Goliath of the federal government.

That's Superman.

What Rep. Swindall forgot was Superman was too much involved in truth, justice and the American Way to get himself indicted for perjury. Joe Namath hung around a few shady characters, but Broadway Joe never held public office.

The Little David comparison doesn't fit here, either. Little David was fighting for his life, not fighting to stay out of the slammer.

Many public officials do something else when they find themselves cornered. They get God involved.

Rep. Swindall says if he goes to jail it's because God really needs a prison ministry.

If you go to prison then, Pat, it won't be because God had anything to do with it. It will be because you're a crook.

It's like my high school English teacher, Miss Maryella Camp, said while addressing my senior class in 1964.

"Everybody is going to get to graduate except Frankie Garfield, who didn't make it."

At which time Frankie, in a loud voice, swore a rather common oath.

"Don't blame God, Sugar," said Miss Maryella. "He's not the one who flunked senior English."

AP/Trine Glasver

BOSTON (AP) — Human rights champion Andrei Sakharov warned on his first trip to the West that Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's reforms face a domestic backlash, but dismissed the personal risks of continuing his outspokenness.

Sakharov

"If perestroika does not succeed, then the question of my return to (exile in) Gorky is totally insignificant," Sakharov said through a translator Monday. Gorbachev released Sakharov from internal exile nearly two years ago.

Perestroika, the restructuring of the Soviet economic and political system, is "at a very critical phase," the 67-year-old Nobel Peace Prize winner told reporters during a two-hour news conference.

He said there are "sharp debates in the press and at all levels" over political and economic issues. "The fate is being decided of which direction our development will go," said Sakharov.

"The West must not fear perestroika. A greater danger to the world as a whole would be the failure of perestroika," he said, warning that failure could strengthen his country's military-industrial complex and result in an expansionist foreign policy.

Sakharov said arms control negotiations between the Soviet Union and the United States are at a critical juncture, with both sides considering 50 percent cuts in their strategic arsenals. "It is an extraordinary opportunity," he said.

Monday was Sakharov's first full day outside the Soviet Union. He arrived Sunday night from Moscow to begin his two-week trip to the West by visiting relatives in the Boston area. His wife, Yelena Bonner, remained in Moscow.

Sakharov was scheduled to undergo a heart examination at Massachusetts General Hospital today or Wednesday, then fly to Washington on Thursday night to take part in a board meeting of the International Foundation for the Survival and Development of Humanity.

Sakharov has accepted an invitation to meet President Reagan at the White House on Nov. 14, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater told reporters aboard Air Force One as Reagan returned to Washington from California on Monday night.

Sakharov's news conference was held to promote the foundation, which was organized in January by U.S. and Soviet scientists.

Yevgenii P. Velikhov, foundation chairman and vice president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, said the organization has begun work on nuclear weapons verification and environmental protection and hopes to sponsor an exchange visit of 2,000 children between the Soviet Union and the United States next year.

Sakharov, a physicist who helped his country develop the hydrogen bomb in the 1950s, won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1975 for his fight for human rights. In January 1980, he was banished to Gorky, an industrial city about 250 miles from Moscow that is closed to foreigners, for opposing the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. In December 1986, Gorbachev allowed him back to Moscow.

Sakharov declined to comment on today's U.S. election, but said he respects the United States for its democracy, work ethic, dynamism, self-criticism and generosity.

"The phrase you often hear in the U.S. is, 'Can I help you?'" he said. "That is something you hear mainly on the street or in stores, but it also appears (in U.S. behavior) on the international stage."

In contrast, Sakharov portrayed the political climate in his homeland as contentious and uncertain.

He said five "prisoners of conscience" who were convicted of anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda have been released in recent days, but he listed eight others who remain in prison camps or exile.

He called perestroika "a genuine, real process" but said a crackdown on demonstrations, including the violent breakup of a meeting in Minsk on Oct. 30, gave him "very great anxiety" over the course of the reforms.

"This is extremely dangerous and could destroy perestroika and turn it around," he said.

Only two people take part in needle exchange

NEW YORK (AP) — Only two people received free needles on the first day of a program for drug addicts that seeks to stem the spread of AIDS, but an official declared the nation's first government needle giveaway "an enormous success."

Dr. Stephen Joseph, the city's health commissioner, said he anticipated a slow start for the experiment, which calls for participation by 400 of the city's estimated 200,000 drug addicts.

The experiment is an attempt to learn whether giving intravenous drug users clean needles will limit needle-sharing among addicts. AIDS can be spread through the use of contaminated needles, and health officials say drug abusers are a major conveyor of acquired immune deficiency syndrome to heterosexuals.

The program has drawn opposition from the city's top police official and some black and Hispanic leaders, who say giving out needles encourages drug abuse.

"It's genocide, pure and simple," said City Councilman Hilton Clark of Harlem.

But Joseph contended the black community is bearing the brunt of the AIDS crisis. "The lives that can be saved if this program works is the lives of black women and babies," he said.

The two men who received needles and syringes Monday had to find their way to a small unmarked room at the city's Health Department. Other sites had been planned but abandoned because of neighborhood complaints.

"I think the enormous success of today is that the program got off the ground at all," said Joseph. "Nobody stopped us from doing it."

The program is the first such government-sponsored program in the nation, although similar ones have operated in Europe.

Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn had backed a proposal similar to the New York program, but it was rejected by the Boston City Council earlier this year. A pilot program in Portland, Ore., has been delayed until next month. In Tacoma, Wash., a private individual has been distributing needles with help from the health department.

In New York, needles will be given only to addicts at least age 18 who have applied for drug treatment and been denied immediate admission to the city's overcrowded programs. Addicts also will receive counseling and help to get into a drug rehabilitation program.

In a speech to executives in Manhattan on Monday, U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop endorsed the concept of needle exchanges, although he said later he was unfamiliar with New York's program.

He conditioned his support to programs limited to those who have not sought drug treatment. New York's does not have that restriction.

Joseph proposed the program more than two years ago, but state health officials were reluctant to approve it. Mayor Edward I. Koch has backed the plan, but it was opposed by Police Commissioner Benjamin Ward and City Council's Black and Hispanic Caucus.

Applicants fill out a consent form, take a blood test and receive a kit containing a condom, sterile water, cotton, a lubricant and pamphlets about safe sex and needle hygiene.

Any addict who tries to get a new needle without returning the old one will be expelled from the program, Joseph said. Researchers will test blood from the used needles to see if they are being shared.

While in the program, addicts will be immune from prosecution for having the syringes. The sale of unprescribed needles is legal in 38 states, but not in New York.

American student identifies man as Beirut hijacker

WASHINGTON (AP) — An American student who was aboard a Jordanian airliner seized by terrorists in 1985 says he is positive that hijacking defendant Fawaz Younis led the "horde of men" who stormed the plane in Beirut.

"I recognize him as the leader of the hijackers," said William L. Slade, pointing across a courtroom toward Younis, who was seated at the defense table.

"How sure are you about that?" asked Justice Department prosecutor Karen Morrissette.

"Positive," replied Slade, whose testimony Monday in U.S. District Court marked the first time Younis had been publicly identified by one of the victims of the June 11, 1985 hijacking of a Royal Jordanian Airline jet.

The Boeing 727 was seized by five heavily armed men as it was preparing to take off for Amman, Jordan.

"About two minutes before takeoff, I heard a great deal of gunfire outside the aircraft," Slade testified. "A whole horde of men stormed onto the airplane."

"My gut instinct was to duck. I crouched into my chair," recalled Slade. The group started "beating everything in their way onto the floor."

When things calmed down, Slade, 21, said he noticed that two hijackers were standing at the rear of the plane and another was stationed in first class. A fourth hijacker patrolled the aisle between the two sections of the cabin and the group's leader was in the cockpit.

The hijackers who took over the passenger section identified a group of five or six Jordanian sky marshals and "proceeded to beat them thoroughly and torture them."

None of the passengers was attacked by the hijackers, he said.

Slade said he could see the leader in the cockpit from where he was seated in the back of the plane next to his father, Landry Slade, a former professor at the American University in Beirut.

Slade said the hijackers' leader emerged from the cockpit 10 times during the 39-hour ordeal in which the plane was ordered flown to Cyprus, Tunisia, Sicily, back to Cyprus and then to Beirut.

Slade testified that Younis came within four or five feet of him several times during the flight and that he got a good look at his face when he left the plane.

"I shook his hand at the end of the ordeal. I was very close him," Slade said, recalling that he looked at Younis in the eye.

The hijackers blew up the plane at Beirut International Airport shortly after the aircraft's 72 passengers and crew members were released. Younis was also photographed reading a statement at a press conference that the hijackers held before the plane was blown up.

The videotape is expected to be played at the end of this week's hearing, after five other hijacking victims, including Slade's father, testify.

U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker convened the hearing to determine whether to admit the eyewitness identification of Younis as evidence when the case goes to trial next year.

Planners lack emergency management input

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN
Staff Writer

A number of companies operating in the City of Midland and Midland County missed an Oct. 17 deadline imposed by the Environmental Protection Agency aimed at identifying hazardous on-site chemicals.

"We don't know if everyone has complied, but there's a suspicion right now that a lot haven't," said Midland Emergency Management Coordiantor R.G. Edgerton.

Under Title III of the Superfund Amendment and Reauthorization Act (SARA) and the Texas Right to Know Act, many companies apparently ignored the deadline or were uncertain just what was required.

But Edgerton said he is still encouraging businesses who store or use hazardous chemicals to file a report with the Local Emergency Planning Commission (LEPC), acting as liaison for the state and federal government. "It's my understanding that they won't be penalized if they volunteer the information."

To date, 30 companies have complied with the mandated guidelines, which in turn, have been placed on file with the Department of Public Safety's Division of Emergency Management.

In Austin, Program Manager Mike Scott said his division is still compiling countless amounts of data related to emergency response plans under SARA and the Texas Right To Know Act.

He said that in comparison to numerous other Texas communities, both Midland and Ector counties are in "excellent shape" as far as having written action plans in place "But I wouldn't say the same about some others, like Lubbock," he said.

At some point, EPA and state authorities are expected to crack down on those who omit or fail to report on-site toxic materials. For example, under SARA Title III requirements, a company can be fined up to $25,000 per incident of non-compliance.

Not surprisingly, about two-thirds of all companies in the Lone Star state are in non-compliance with both state and federal guidelines. But, according to Mike James, facilities manager for Texas Instruments, both county and city authorities in Midland are making a special effort to understand the law and get the word out.

While compliance is a problem, it's hardly the only one now facing the LEPC. According to Frank Schroeder, a volunteer member, the local committtee could use a lot more support from the private sector than what it is already receiving.

James said that while he can't speak for everyone, he's certain Midland's major companies are involved. "We're just wondering if we're getting all the input we need and if not, how can we encourage them to do so in a positive manner."

Under the federal progam, each community is required by law to include representatives from the private sector, inclusive of operators that must file under Title III.

James said both SARA and "Right To Know" have a common objective — to make the identity of hazardous chemcials known. "This isn't designed to be a handicap or prevent someone from doing business."

In the meantime, Midland has compiled a four-volume action plan aimed at preventing certain disasters from occurring and/or minimizing life and property destruction when such devistation occurs.

"We have a small group right now that works like the dickens," said Edgerton. "But we send out a lot more letters than what we get response to when these meetings are set up."

Schroeder said it is the group's intent to broaden its communication by contacting the Midland Chamber of Commerce as well as the Midland Hispanic Chamber in attaining more cooperation.

"A lot of folks don't realize just how important this new law...we want to make this a positive thing," said James.

Developer did 'excellent job,' ex-banker says

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Odessa real-estate developer Louis Rochester, who is being tried in federal court on 25 counts of bank fraud and racketeering, was "outstanding" in his performance as a developer of residential and commercial property in Odessa, according to testimony.

"He did an excellent job in developing certain tracts of land and an excellent job of marketing," testified A.R. "Happy" Dyer, former president and chief executive officer of Odessa Saving Association. The 70-year-old Rochester was an OSA "advisory director" and major stockholder.

Rochester's expertise, for example, in developing University Gardens addition near The University of Texas of the Permian Basin netted OSA generous profits in a joint venture, Dyer said.

"It was the goal of the board of directors to build a strong and influential institution," Dyer said. "But at the same time, we were trying to create public trust and public confidence."

But, charged the prosecutor, Assistant U.S. Attorney Jim Blankinship, Rochester in the early 1970s violated banking regulations by using "insider" information gleaned in his role as an "advisory director" of the OSA board to build up profits and by concealing his shares in the saving association.

Rochester developed the land and "split the profits up," Blankinship said.

In order for Rochester, as an OSA shareholder, to participate in joint ventures with the savings association and a Dallas insurance company, he would have to resign as a "director" of OSA and would have to reduce his OSA shares to less than 10 percent, according to federal bank regulators.

But, said Blankinship, the day Rochester resigned as a director, the board immediately appointed him as a non-voting "advisory director." Additionally, said Blankinship, rather than divest himself of OSA shares, Rochester hid the stock under names of friends.

"It was then that the deceiving and deceit began," Blankinship charged in his opening statement in the jury trial presided over by U.S. District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton.

Rochester's friends who held most of his stock did "not own the stock any more than you or I did," Blankinship told the jury. "Those (OSA) records were corrupted...by false records...with the intent to deceive."

The joint venture, the prosecutor said, made OSA "good" profits. "Millions and millions of dollars were funded through the joint venture with OSA for land development," Blankinship said.

Blankinship said that people who own "big interests" in a federally insured banking or saving-and-loan institution and who, as directors, are "insiders can't just borrow like they want to because they are the ones supposed to be protecting the depositors." Rochester, he said, "took out loans he was not entitled to."

Rochester's lawyer, DalDavid Schick of Dallas, did not offer opening comments prior to testimony, which began mid-afternoon Monday.

All told, more than 40 potential defense witnesses, including Rochester, are subject to be called to the witness stand. And a like number of prosecution witnesses are subject to testify, according to court records. The case was developed by the Midland FBI office.

The case is being considered by 14 jurors — eight men and six women. When testimony ends, possibly at week's end, Bunton will cut the two alternate jurors, And 12 jurors — seven men and five women — will decide the case.

4 men charged in burglaries, robberies

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Four Georgia men suspected of two convenience store robberies and several burglaries since coming to Midland two weeks ago were charged late Monday, a sheriff's investigator said.

The men also were questioned about the Sept. 4, 1987, shooting death of Verna Peace, a clerk at the same convenience store one of the men allegedly robbed Halloween night. However, Sheriff Gary Painter said no link to the older case has been found.

Mitchell Malcom, 17, was charged Monday with two counts of aggravated robbery, including the Halloween holdup of a Town and Country convenience store, and four counts of burglary, Investigator Sue Rudie said.

The store, located near Midland International Airport, was the site of the killing of Ms. Peace in September 1987. Lawmen have been unable to solve the case and have speculated that the man who shot the woman may have been from out of town.

But Painter said the cases don't fit together.

The perpetrator of the Halloween robbery "used a knife, and there was no gun involved," the sheriff said. In addition, the suspect, "was in Georgia at the time of the Verna Peace killing," he said.

Malcom and three other men were arrested early Saturday after the botched robbery of another Midland convenience store, also near the airport, Painter said.

The 2:30 a.m. robbery of a 7-Eleven located on West U.S. Highway 80 "was the same as the Town and Country holdup," Painter said. "One of them went in, brandished a knife, took the money and left."

Minutes after the robbery, officers were sent to the store and got a description of vehicle leaving the scene. The car was stopped by a Department of Public Safety trooper on Highway 80 a mile west of Loop 250, according to reports. Two men inside were arrested after a knife and the stolen cash was recovered, and the store clerk identified one of the men. The other men were arrested later, Painter said.

After the men were questioned, they were linked to at least four business burglaries, Painter said. Property allegedly stolen in the burglaries, including musical instruments and jewelry, were recovered from the room where the men were staying at the Desert Inn Motel, 3101 Bankhead Hwy., he said.

The men came to Midland two weeks ago from Kennesaw, Ga., and were working at a local Burger King, according to investigators.

Also charged were Willie Ernest Stutler Jr., 21, on one count of aggravated robbery and four counts of burglary. Bonds for Stutler totaled $85,000, Ms. Rudie said. His brother, 18-year-old Timothy Brian Stutler, was charged with one count of aggravated robbery and two counts of burglary. His bonds totaled $65,000, she said.

Brenton Duane Wilderman, 17, was charged with one count of burglary, and his bond was set at $25,000, Ms. Rudie said.

Painter said investigators were still questioning the men about other Midland-area burglaries. He added that Georgia law enforcement agencies would be contacted, as well as Texas agencies who may have unsolved convenience store robberies.

Armed man robs local 7-Eleven

From Staff Reports

An pistol-toting man robbed a Midland convenience store early today, Midland police reported.

The clerk at the 7-Eleven store at 715 W. Scharbauer Dr. told police a man walked into the store about 4 a.m. today and appeared to look around. When the clerk approached the man, he demanded "all of the money." He then pulled a pistol, described as a black steel 9 mm, from under a coat, reports said.

The clerk gave the man cash from the register, which he put in a jar before he ran southeast from the store, officers said.

The man was described as black, about 6 feet tall, weighing about 180 pounds, with black hair and brown eyes. He escaped from the store with about $35 cash, police said.

Three roofers injured in fall

From Staff Reports

Three Midland roofers were being treated at Midland Memorial Hospital this morning for injuries they sustained in a fall from a two-story apartment building, a fire department dispatcher said.

Ambulances were dispatched shortly before 10 a.m. to the Midland Village Apartments, 2433 Whitmire Blvd., after receiving a call for assistance in response to the accident.

Midland Memorial Hospital spokeswoman Sue Ristom was unable to determine the conditions of the injured at press time.

Details of the accident remained sketchy, according to the fire department dispatcher.

Class explores JFK assassination

AP Laserphoto

Former reporter Jim Marrs talks to his class at the University of Texas at Arlington about his theories of conspiracy in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. The seven-week course, one of the most popular classes at the school, offers students a chance to "discover the truth" behind the Kennedy killing.

ARLINGTON (AP) — Jim Marrs' message is that conspirators assassinated President John F. Kennedy almost 25 years ago, and his forum is a class that is among the most popular on the University of Texas at Arlington campus.

"The course is always full, and it's most popular," said Earlene Richardson, an administrative assistant with UTA's Continuing Education office, which offers the course each spring and fall. "The class has people who continue to repeat it. I have one lady I know who has taken it every time it's been offered since I came here 1½ years ago."

Each year since 1976, Marrs has taught "JFK Assassination Conspiracy Revealed," a seven-week course offering students a chance to "discover the truth" behind the Kennedy killing.

When he began teaching, he said, a majority of the students believed Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone in assassinating Kennedy on Nov. 22, 1963.

Now their attitudes are reversed, and students flock to his class, as one student said, "to find some answers."

Marrs, 44, became hooked on the assassination while working as a reporter for the Fort Worth Star-Telegram from 1968 to 1980. First, he came into contact with reporters and photographers who covered the assassination. Later, he began meeting witnesses, police and public officials involved in the case.

"I begin to realize that all that could be said about the assassination had not been said," said Marrs. "That's one of the reasons I stuck with it. I wanted to know myself what the heck happened."

During a typical session, Marrs runs past the allotted two-hour period by at least an hour.

He suspects:
— Oswald's fingerprints were planted on the assassin's rifle after Oswald was assassinated.

— An impostor's body buried in Oswald's grave was switched with the real body shortly before investigators dug it up and re-examined it in 1981.

Police seek man shot at scene of burglary

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Police today continued to seek a suspected burglar who was shot once, possibly twice, after he broke into the home of former City Planning Director Judy Miller, overpowered her and then bound and gagged her.

Police Cpl. John McAhon said officers Monday checked local hospitals, medical clinics and doctors trying to find someone who might have treated a man with one or two bullet wounds and who had lost a considerable amount of blood. As best can be determined, McAhon said, the man has not sought medical attention at any known facility.

The attack on Ms. Miller, 42, occurred about 2 a.m. Monday. She told officers she was awakened by a man jumping up and down on her. She fought with the man, whom she described as being a white male, about 6-feet tall, weighing about 200 pounds, and wearing a beige, hood-type mask over his head.

The man finally overpowered her, tied her hands behind her back with a black, plastic tie wrap and gagged her with tape, McAhon said.

Ms. Miller managed to free her hands and grabbed a .38 caliber pistol near her bed and began shooting at the man as he fled toward a bathroom where he had apparently gained entry through an open window, McAhon said.

According to McAhon, the suspect left a trail of blood as he escaped out the bathroom window, over a fence and into an alley behind Ms. Miller's residence. He said Ms. Miller fired several shots at her assailant as he fled and hit "at least once, possibly twice."

Ms. Miller was fired from her $45,324 job as city planning director Oct. 27 by City Manager Bill Brown. Brown has declined to say why he fired Ms. Miller, saying only it was a personnel matter.

Ms. Miller joined the department as a planner in June 1974 and was promoted to director in February 1976.

The former director has filed a grievance with the city of Odessa contending her termination was the result of sexual discrimination.

The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission office in El Paso also has been notified of her action, according to her attorney, Melissa Hirsch.

SPCA worker devoted to animals

By MICHAEL QUINTANILLA

DALLAS (AP) — As soon as Bobby French drives up to the empty house, with its broken windows and scraggly yard, he knows what he'll probably find around back. Sure enough, chained to a tree is a malnourished dog, abandoned by its owners.

"Hi, girl. How ya doing, girl," French says sweetly while leaning over the fence to pet the animal. The German shepherd licks his hand, happy that French has come to the rescue.

For the past four years, the red-bearded man with shoulder-length hair and a double-pierced left ear has aided thousands of animals' — cats terrified in treetops, neglected horses with diseased hooves and dogs so emaciated that they could barely stand up to drink water.

French is the ony pet-abuse investigator with the Dallas Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, a private, non-profit animal welfare organization. And he's one of only a few field investigators anywhere in the state.

Even though he wears a uniform and a badge, French is neither a dog-catcher nor a policeman. He does not have the right to arrest animal abusers. But he does have the right to speak his mind, take charge of abandoned animals and educate pet owners.

"It's just not right. I don't understand why people do this sort of thing,' French, 34, says about the starved and injured animals he has seen throughout the years in scenes that have played in his sleep over and over again.

On a recent afternoon, French is talking to a neighbor who called to report the abandoned German shepherd. The neighbor — who has been feeding the dog a few table scraps and filling its bowl with water — agrees to keep an eye on the animal until French can return the next day to take it to the SPCA shelter.

AP Laserphoto

SPCA field investigator Bobby French comes to the aid of a dog left behind by his owner in Dallas. French the only pet-abuse investigator for the Dallas Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to animals, rescues as many as 150 helpless, neglected animals a month.

"We'd like to keep her, but we've got our hands full with our dog," the man explains. French says he understands. That's why he's here.

"We'll fatten her up, check her for worms, and hopefully she will be adopted to someone who'll give her some tender loving care," French tells the man. He turns toward the dog and gives her one last pat. "You be a good girl now. I'll be back and you'll be fine. You're almost home, girl."

Back in the pickup, French says he's grateful that the neighbor called the SPCA.

"I have seen some of the most pitiful cases of animal abuse. What is said is that people don't understand that animals have feelings. When you find a dog that is hairless, full of sores and sick, he still wags his tail. He'll wag it for the owner who has neglected the animal, and that's what makes me mad, because that owner doesn't respect the animal."

It's the animal's suffering that bothers French the most, and that's the reason he is committed to his job of rescuing as many as 150 helpless, hungry and homeless creatures a month.

He says about 70 percent of the cruelty cases reported to the SPCA are in regard to animals without shelter, food or water — often because their owners simply can't afford to care for them. The rest of the calls are for physical abuse — dogs thrown against the side of a house, puppies hung over a balcony as punishment and cats beaten because they tear up furniture.

He has logged as many as 200 miles a day in his four-wheel drive Nissan, journeying as far as Hugo, Okla., and Killeen, Texas, to investigate reports of abuse that other organizations do not have the time or manpower to handle.

"I cover a lot of ground because too often no one else is available," he says. In the process, he has been cursed, threatened and chased off property — and has faced the open end of a rifle.

It was while French was living in Beaumont 11 years ago that he became interested in animal sciences and took a correspondence course dealing with the subject. He worked nights in a steel mill and volunteered in the mornings at the Beaumont Humane Society, where he learned as much as he could about pet care, animal abuse and people.

He soon became the shelter's part-time manager. A year later he quit the mill job, dropped the corespondence course and devoted his time "to the welfare of animals."

Lab has tough time with pot-eating mice

ANGLETON (AP) — Brazoria County Crime Lab workers finally have turned the tables on a band of marijuana munchers.

The lab's stash of confiscated marijuana, which used to disappear, now is safe.

And a pesky group of pot-loving mice is gone, but not until a lot of patience and ingenuity.

Crime lab Director Michael Manes says employees decided something had to be done because the critters became bolder and bolder as they developed a love for their newfound food, kept in a vault.

Because the drug had given them a false sense of security, it got to the point where the mice simply would sit and stare at workers when they opened the darkened vault rather than scurry from the light, according to Manes.

The first move against the mice was to place drugs that might be needed in court cases in steel cabinets so no evidence would be destroyed.

An attempt to catch the mice with poisoned food met with little success because they seemed to prefer marijuana seeds to cheese. The cheese rotted as the bags of marijuana continued to be gnawed open.

Manes said about the only luck they had in catching the mice was when one would accidentally step on a trap as it walked from one bag of pot to another.

"We soon just put them around the room without any bait and hoped they'd stumble into one," he said.

Attempts to kill off the furry drug abusers with poisoned marijuana were a little more successful, but still didn't meet expectations.

Manes soon put poisoned water in the room, thinking the rodents would be thirsty after eating all those dry marijuana seeds.

In addition, they thought about getting a cat, but nixed the idea because they didn't want a feline setting off an elaborate set of alarms at night.

Someone suggested a snake should be allowed to slither through the bags, but the idea was nixed by an assistant chemist.

Slowly, the combination of poison, traps and a sawed-off pool cue cut the mouse population to nearly zero.

Today, rarely a rodent scurries through the lab where packets of poisoned food still lie in the corners.

But a large jar of preserved rodent bodies serves as a reminder that the penalty for marijuana-eating mice at the Brazoria County Crime Lab is death.

Cormorant eating up profits of state's fish farmers

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — The goose-sized cormorant can't help that it has developed a taste for seafood, says a wildlife advocate who opposes fish farmers who think the best example of that fish-hunting bird is a dead one.

The bird, which is protected by state and federal laws, is on the hit list of the aquaculture industry.

"Cormorants are part of our natural fauna, and I frankly feel that it's important that we preserve and protect our wildlife," said Jesse Grantham with the National Audubon Society's sanctuary office in Corpus Christi. "You can't just go blasting at everything that gets in the way."

Grantham suggests fish farmers cover stock ponds with nets, or try other non-lethal control methods, including barriers, netting, wire and causing a noise in the area.

But Jim Ekstrom, owner of Aquaculture Enterprises in Seguin, believes killing the birds is necessary.

"They're just evil birds," Ekstrom said. "There's no good to them at all."

He estimated that cormorants ate $30,000 worth of his fish last year.

Ken Zwahr, owner of Danbury Fish Farms near Angleton, recently received one of the first state permits to kill 150 of the birds in a year.

If he is convicted on each of the 25 counts, Rochester could be sentenced to a maximum of 140 years in prison and fined up to $3.548 million. The indictment alleges mail fraud, wire fraud, misapplication of bank funds, false entries, concealment of facts from the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, and racketeering.

Sealed indictments against Rochester, who maintains his innocence and who pleaded "not guilty" to each of the 25 counts in arraignment Monday before the judge and then in the presence of the jury, were lodged June 30.

In mid-July, Rochester, in a prepared statement, said that he had "not intentionally violated any law or engaged in any wrongful conduct," that he expected to be "exonerated," and that he had "been singled out for prosecution by the government."

Rochester noted then that he had been "charged with violating technical regulations pertaining to savings and loan regulations."

"The matters in question do not involve financial loss or other injury to Odessa Savings or to any other business or person," Rochester maintained.

Odessa Savings Association, which was established in the late 1940s, and other thrifts recently were bought out by Olney Savings & Association and bear the Olney logo.

Blankinship maintained that Rochester left victims in his wake of developing land in joint ventures with OSA.

"The victim is not just Odessa Savings Association and its depositors," said Blankinship, "but other shareholders."

In his testimony, former OSA officials A.R. Dyer said that the OSA board in 1974 "believed" that Rochester had reduced his OSA stock to less than 10 percent. Dyer and Rochester have been friends dating back to their teen-age years in Odessa, Dyer indicated.

"I think that was the general thinking of the board," Dyer said of the Rochester stock. "There was no animosity on the board," he said, and "all (board) actions were unanimous."

Dyer said that he had been a "strong" believer in conforming to federal and state banking and savings-and-loan regulations. "That was the proper way to conduct business."

Dyer said that Rochester's expertise in developing and marketing was "common knowledge."

"We (OSA board members) felt that he (Rochester) was the best man in the community to develop that particular tract for us," Dyer said of University Gardens.

However, under Blankenship's questioning, Dyer said that he "would have to say" that he was deceived by Rochester if Rochester had "parked" his stock with other people in trying to conceal his ownership.

Further, Dyer said that had he been aware of such alleged deception, "I think I would have" notified federal banking regulators.

Man convicted of abandoning son's body faces murder charge in Texas

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Eli Stutzman, convicted of abandoning the body of his 9-year-old son in a case made famous by Reader's Digest, left the Lincoln Correctional Center today to face a murder charge in Texas.

Warden John Dahm said Stutzman left Lincoln on a private plane at 7 a.m. for Travis County, Texas.

Stutzman was indicted there in July in the killing of his former roommate Glenn Pritchett, 24, whose body was found near Austin on May 12, 1985.

Stutzman, 38, has been serving a one-year sentence for abandoning a human body and a six-month term for concealing a death. He was sentenced in Thayer County in January after pleading guilty to two misdemeanors related to the death of his son, Danny.

A motorist found Danny's body on a roadside near Chester on Dec. 24, 1985. His identity remained a mystery until Reader's Digest in December 1987 published a story about how compassionate townspeople buried the unknown boy. A magazine reader thought the boy in the story might be Danny and contacted authorities.

Stutzman later said Danny died while they were driving from Wyoming to Ohio and that he left the boy's body in a ditch.

Ex-convict charged with capital murder in death of EPA agent

HOUSTON (AP) — An ex-convict already being sought in a bank robbery was charged with the capital murder of an Environmental Protection Agency enforcement officer who was gunned down outside a restaurant during an apparent robbery last month, police said.

Anibal Garcia Rousseau, 47, was charged Oct. 29, two days after witnesses identified him as the gunman who shot EPA agent David Delitta in the parking lot of a Houston restaurant.

The capital murder charge against Rousseau, who remains at large, stemmed from the Oct. 27 incident, when he allegedly approached Delitta and another EPA agent at gunpoint as they arrived to meet other agents for dinner.

As the agents got out of their car, Rousseau approached them, pointing a chrome, short-barrel, .38-caliber pistol and ordered them to place their wallets and money on the trunk of the car, investigators said.

Delitta, who formerly worked as an agent with the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration and was licensed to carry a weapon, went for his pistol and was shot by Rousseau, police said.

Delitta, who died the next day, had worked in the EPA's enforcement division for four months and was in Houston to participate in a trial.

Police say Rousseau has an extensive criminal history including a charge of robbing a north Harris County bank last month.

He was released from the Texas Department of Corrections in 1986 after serving time on narcotics conviction, prison records showed.

Prior to his last conviction, Rousseau was sentenced in 1977 to 13 years on a delivery of heroin conviction out of Harris County. He was paroled in 1982.

Season's looks vibrant, individual

By ZENIA CLEIGH
Copley News Service

Kathi Diamant, a free-spirited, friendly co-host of a morning show in San Diego, wears designer clothes from Saks Fifth Avenue every day on the set.

So when it's time to buy her own wardrobe, Diamant opts for the most casual look possible — mixed colored sweats matched with her favorite accessory, a brimmed wool hat.

Fans who see her off screen in these clothes hate it. "Viewers are disappointed when they see me. They don't want it to be me," she said. "They want Kathi co-host to look glamorous, dressed up."

But Diamant, like Ann Parode, a senior bank vice president, sticks to her own individual style. Both of these chic women follow fashion only as long as it suits them.

"I don't buy fashion trends. I buy things that I think will look good 10 years from now," said Parode, a conservative dresser who complements her extensive wardrobe of business suits these days with wearable art and expensive shoes. ("You can tell people's station in life by their shoes. You watch.")

SELECTING WHAT looks and feels good on you is always the right approach to updating a wardrobe for any season.

Just in case you do feel like adding a little pizzazz, following are some tips from personal shoppers and department store managers on the hottest ways to update.

Add a bright jacket or cardigan sweater in one of the jewel-toned colors. Purple and shocking pink are the most "fashion forward," as they say in the business. Especially purple.

For the absolute end, pick something in "citron" or "poison green" — those are new terms for what we used to call chartreuse — if you are very blond, with a peach-toned complexion, a redhead, and/or very daring.

Otherwise, try a kelly green, cobalt blue or a red jacket from previous years.

Anchor the bright garment with black. Black skirt, black pants, black stockings, black shoes, black turtleneck or blouse. If black doesn't suit you, anchor the bright color with the darkest basic color in your wardrobe — brown, navy or gray.

Please: Do not throw these colors around like a tropical fruit salad. Pick one bold color and stick with it. If you like, you can add the jazzy tones with accessories — shoes, bag, hat, scarf — instead of a jacket.

If you can, make the jacket short. A short, shaped jacket with waist emphasis is the newest look.

However, there are three words of caution: proportions, proportions, proportions. A short jacket looks wonderful on a woman with a decently small waist. It also looks excellent with pants. If that is not your style, try one of the slimming longer jackets, also indented at the waist for a feminine silhouette.

A short jacket with a short skirt looks good on a petite woman. But you might want to keep it a monochromatic look. It's hard to pull that off unless your proportions are absolutely right.

Otherwise, the newest look is a short jacket with a longer, "equestrian" length skirt worn down the calf. The longer jacket looks best with a shorter skirt. The best hem length advice is to keep your skirt around the knee at a length that best flatters your legs.

INVEST IN something high waisted — either a skirt or a pair of the new, fluid, wide-legged trousers, which look best on women with long legs. Trousers in a wool crepe go from day into evening for the flowing palazzo pant look. (Add an ornate jacket or a lace blouse.)

See if you can find "the 'L.A. Law' blouse," the kind of silk charmeuse surplice wrap blouse that actress Susan Dey looks so sexy and professional in on the popular television show.

The wrapped blouse is an option, too. Otherwise, use a white blouse that can stand alone with basic black. Try one with black detailing.

Now is the time to resurrect your black-and-white textured menswear suits — the ones in houndstooth, glen plaid, herringbone or their cousins. Add that spot of color in accessories or a blouse. Red looks outdated. Go for the purples, greens, pinks. Or add ultra-feminine accessories such as a lace pocket square or pearls.

Leather and suede — always popular in Europe — have been growing in popularity in recent years as a sleek fashion statement, particularly now that they are available in colors.

If money is no object, add a new suede outfit in a purple, fuchsia or chartreuse — a skirt or a high-waisted trouser with a bolero or rounded shoulder jacket.

Otherwise, go for a suede shoe or belt.

The most daring look of the season is what is being called "tonal dressing." This means dropping the anchoring black skirt and instead following a single color all the way through your outfit, but in differing tones. Such as a kelly green suit, a chartreuse blouse, green opaque hose and green shoes. This experiment works best if you add a touch of suede or leather.

The "heroic look" is in with accessories. Lots of brass buttons, heraldic emblems on blazers. (Watch out, though; next season this may date you.)

So is the "Chanel" look. This means lots of gold chains, quilted bags with chain straps, black flats with a demure bow, hair bows and pearls. Charm bracelets and glass ornaments in jewel-tones are popular, too. Pumps should have a short, chunky heel.

MIXING PATTERNS still makes a very interesting look, but be careful how you do it. Pinning a paisley shawl over the shoulder of a jacket is one way to incorporate a print. A patterned shawl or wrap is a key accessory to the season.

Other items to consider are a chemise dress in a menswear fabric or a jump suit, preferably with the wrapped neckline.

This is the time to put away your short-sleeved dresses in linens and cottons and make a transition from summer to cool-weather clothes.

DEAR ABBY

Daughter wants handout to foot bill

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter is 26. She's living with a man we've never met. They have lived together for more than two years. Eighteen months ago, she called to tell us that she was pregnant. At the time, I suggested that they get married, but she said she didn't know if she really "loved" him. They now are the parents of a healthy 10-month-old boy.

Last week, this daughter (who lives 1,000 miles away) called to say that she decided to marry this man — and would we pay for the wedding? I didn't know what to say.

We haven't seen her for more than two years. Two years ago, my wife and I drove from Phoenix to Denver to surprise her on her birthday. We called her from a service station on the outskirts of town, and were told she had other plans and couldn't see us that week. Almost every call we've had from her since she left home at 18 was an SOS for money.

My first reaction to her request that we pay for her wedding was anger — although I didn't express it. I don't think we should pay for it. What do you think? — HOT IN ARIZONA

DEAR HOT: In view of the shameful way your daughter has treated you, you would be justified in telling her to finance her own wedding, but please don't. Tell her instead that you would like to see her and meet her fiance and your grandchild, and THEN you'll talk about paying for her wedding.

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, Newsweek magazine recommended 10 ways to cope with the pressure of the workplace. I think the list is so valuable that you may want to share it with your readers. The tips:

1. Maintain a sense of humor
2. Meditate
3. Get a massage
4. Exercise
5. Eat sensibly
6. Limit alcohol and caffeine
7. Take refuge in family and friends
8. Delegate responsibility
9. Stand up to the boss, or
10. Quit!

Then we were told that the magazine's prescription is really nothing new — that it was summed up about 250 years ago by Jonathan Swift, who wrote: "The best doctors in the world are Dr. Diet, Dr. Quiet and Dr. Merryman."

I just had to send this to you, Abby. Please print it. It should help millions of readers. — MILLIE HAWTHORN, HARRISBURG, PA.

DEAR MILLIE: Newsweek's recommendation for coping with pressure is well worth quoting. And Jonathan Swift's prescription for good health can be paraphrased into the more contemporary: "Eat judiciously, practice moderation in everything, and make merry!" (Van Buren)

DEAR ABBY: I am 65 and so is my husband. While I am still working outside the home to make ends meet, my husband is gambling away a big part of our income in state, national and international lotteries. He doesn't buy just one lottery ticket; he buys 100 to increase his chances of winning.

He enters "contests" that require sending money and more money every time he "wins" a round. He orders merchandise and magazines we don't need in order to win something. He subscribes to cheap-looking newsletters that promise to send him the "secrets" of how to pick winning numbers.

Abby, we could get along very well with our combined incomes if he didn't gamble, but he denies that he is gambling! He says gambling is going to the races or playing the numbers.

Please check with Gamblers Anonymous and ask them if what my husband is doing is gambling. Answer soon. I fear for our future. — TIRED WIFE

DEAR TIRED: Regardless of how your husband tries to justify his spending money in order to "win" money, the name of this game is "gambling." You don't indicate where you live, but if there is a Gamblers Anonymous near you, urge him to go. It would be well worth the investment in time. He would soon learn what "gambling" is, and how to control it.

Problems? Write to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. All correspondence is confidential.

'Hottest' accessories made from suede

By LESLIE WATTS
Hearst News Service

Don't step on my blue suede shoes — or the green, gold, purple, pink, brown or black ones, either.

Elvis was onto something big, but blue was just the beginning. For fall '88, there's suede in almost any color you can think of. And not just for shoes. Hair clips, headbands, handbags, gloves, belts, earrings, hats and bracelets are being featured in this lush, plush velvet of the leather world.

Suede was thought so important at Neiman Marcus' Galleria store in Houston that one of the first show windows of the season was devoted to "The Essential Suede Shoe." Customers apparently took the message to heart.

"We were selling so many suede pumps when they first arrived, it was hard for us to keep them in stock," said Phyllis Wehring, spokesperson for Neiman Marcus. "This was true not only of the basic colors, but the brights as well."

"It's the most important look in fashion accessories for the fall and holiday seasons this year," said Lisa Aaronson, fashion director for Saks Fifth Avenue. "Sales have been fabulous. Everything suede has been doing very well, from shoes and belts to handbags."

Aaronson says the must-have fashion accessory is a wide suede belt in black.

"It really goes with everything. It belittles your waist," she said.

Donna Karan's signature accessory this year was anything suede, and she set the pace for the season with her New York collection. Other important looks include quilted suede a la Chanel, usually seen in handbags, and the mixing of suede and passementerie trim in shoes such as Charles Jordan's suede pump in red or black with black braid.

In dresses and separates, the mixture of suede with smooth leather or other materials is a popular look. The Vakko line of dresses and separates features suede with leather and lace in dresses and separates in basic black and brown, plus electric pink, iris, green and ruby.

Suede garments are a special find for those who love leather but aren't model-slim. Whereas smooth-finished leathers generally emphasize every bump and lump, suede's soft textures and matte finish can be flattering even to larger sizes.

Suede is produced by buffing the fleshside of a piece of leather to raise a soft nap. Characteristics of suede pieces vary with the animals from which they come. Cow or calf suede is the most common, but lamb and pig suedes are also popular.

Democratic vice presidential candidate Lloyd Bentsen greets a crowd of nearly 200 people upon his 2 a.m. arrival in Austin with his wife, B.A. Bentsen will spend election night at the Driskill Hotel, which had been Lyndon Johnson's favorite election night haunt.

Bush 'nervous' as he casts ballot

HOUSTON (AP) — Republican nominee George Bush said he felt nervous as he voted today in his adopted home state of Texas, where he ended his presidential campaign telling voters the election is a referendum on a "philosophy, a way of life."

The vice president and his wife, Barbara, voted in a hotel conference room which had been set up as a polling place. The couple then visited a local Republican headquarters to talk to people working to get out the vote.

Emerging from the voting booth, Bush was asked how he felt. "Nervous...everytime I vote here, I feel nervous," he said. Asked about the outcome, he replied, "No predictions."

At the GOP headquarters, Bush personally made a half-dozen telephone calls. "No, I'm not kidding," he told one person who apparently expressed skepticism that Bush was on the line. "Having done all the hard work, now the key is to get the vote out," he said.

STATE

The vice president also showed off his French to a reporter from France. "Je peux parler un peu de francais," he said, explaining he could speak the language a little. He added he felt "tres heureux, aujourd'hui," or "very happy, today."

Bush told reporters he was "very glad" the campaign was over. He planned a "relaxed family day" with "a lot of exercise." He planned to watch election returns on television with family members and friends at his home in a Houston condominium-hotel complex.

Bush wrapped up his campaign Monday with a final swing through Michigan, Ohio and Missouri. He attended a raucus rally Monday evening at the Galleria shopping mall where country stars Loretta Lynn, Crystal Gayle and Mo Bandy entertained several thousand fans.

Today's election is "more than just a referendum on peace and prosperity," Bush told the crowd.

"It's a referendum on a philosophy, a way of life that's well and alive right here deep in the heart of Texas," he said.

In a half-hour paid TV advertisment Monday night, the Republican presidential nominee summed up the themes of his campaign and said rival Michael Dukakis "has no experience in national security affairs."

"I don't believe we can take a risk on an issue as important as our national security," he said on the ad broadcast on the three major networks right after Dukakis aired a half-hour spot of his own.

Later, a soft-speaking Bush talked to viewers for a few minutes at the end of the half-hour commercial that featured biographical and campaign scenes set to music and narration, as well as an endorsement by President Reagan and various Bush family members.

"I respect my opponent, I admire his devotion to family, and I appreciate his decision to enter public service," Bush said. "But I do believe we are guided by fundamentally different philosophies, a great divide, an honest difference of opinion on which approach will lead America in the '90s stronger and more secure than ever."

Bush also echoed President Reagan's 1980 campaign line by saying, "If you elect me president you will be better off four years from now than you are today."

The ad made no mention of Bush's running mate, Sen. Dan Quayle of Indiana.

Bentsen winds up campaign in Austin

AUSTIN (AP) — Lloyd Bentsen ended a final, marathon campaign swing in his home state today, still defiant of polls showing the Democratic ticket trailing.

More than a hundred supporters greeted him at the Austin airport for a welcome home ceremony that featured sparklers, a spotlight entrance, and a Buddy Holly tune.

To the end, as he stumped through Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas and Missouri on election eve, he insisted the polls were turning around and that he and Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis would win.

He raced through eight cities in 19 hours, finally winding up a day of virtually continuous campaigning with the upbeat rally at 2 a.m. CST.

"No retreat, baby. No surrender," vowed the 67-year-old chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, quoting a song by rock and roll star Bruce Springsteen.

Bentsen was to spend election evening in Austin, visiting with campaign workers and then waiting for the results in his hotel room. The Democratic celebration was being held in the Driskill Hotel, where Lyndon Johnson spent election eve in 1960.

Also like LBJ, Bentsen was on the ballot today for re-election to his Senate seat. Under Texas law, he can run for both offices and he has promised to resign the Senate if he wins the vice presidency.

Polls released just prior to Election Day indicated the ticket was still trailing Republicans George Bush and Dan Quayle, although the gap narrowed to just a few points.

Dukakis was campaigning around the clock and Bentsen wasn't far behind. His day started at about 7 a.m. Monday and didn't end until past 2 a.m. Tuesday. He hit eight cities, five in Texas and one each in Arkansas, Louisiana and Missouri.

In Kansas City, his last major campaign stop, several hundred supporters jammed into a hotel ballroom when he spoke at nearly midnight.

"The momentum is with us, it's going our way," he told them.

The final message was simple.

"We're on your side, and they're not," he repeated at every stop, echoing Dukakis' class-conscious argument that the Democrats care more about middle-income needs such as health care, housing, and Social Security. Republican negative advertising was distorting that message, he said.

In Houston, where a crowd of 3,000 greeted him, Bentsen said he could "remember how Jack Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson carried Texas." Surrounded by family and political allies, he asserted, "We carry Texas and we carry it all."

Late in the day, Bentsen added to his stump speech the Springsteen line. Reporters asked afterward if he were a Springsteen fan.

"I am now," he replied, upbeat despite the grueling schedule.

Widow of AIDS victim has AIDS related-complex

DALLAS (AP) — A woman whose husband contracted AIDS and died after a blood transfusion says she now has AIDS-related complex.

"Everything that's happened to me, I saw happen to Bill," Joyce Lee, 48, said Monday.

Mrs. Lee, who now lives in St. Louis, was in Dallas searching for a new lawyer for her lawsuit against the Dallas Blood Center and Parkland Memorial Hospital.

The suit contends that the Dallas Blood Center and the Dallas County Hospital District were liable for her husband's death by infusing him with contaminated blood after an automobile accident in 1984. Lee died in August 1987, and the suit was filed the same month.

Mrs. Lee said she needs a new lawyer for her suit because Michael D. McKinley, the lawyer who filed the suit, withdrew from the case. McKinley said he was not "ethically permitted" to discuss his reasons for withdrawing.

The widow said she has been found to have AIDS-related complex, an immune deficiency considered somewhat less serious than AIDS itself and has been in and out of hospitals this year and is taking the drug AZT.

At the time of Lee's transfusion, blood bank and hospital officials said, there was no test available to determine if blood was contaminated with the AIDS virus and contend that neither they nor any other blood bank or hospital could have detected contaminated blood.

State District Judge John McClellan Marshall said he had scheduled a dismissal hearing for the suit because there had been no action in the case for two months and he needed to determine if the parties in the suit were interested in continuing the case.

"She came all the way from St. Louis, so I can't say she lost interest," the judge said.

STATE IN BRIEF

'Towel bandit' strikes twice

CONROE (AP) — A man dubbed "the towel bandit" struck two businesses in the Conroe area within 12 hours during the weekend, authorities say.

The man is believed to be responsible for four robberies in southern Montgomery in the past four weeks, according to Montgomery County Sheriff's spokesman Bob Morrison.

In each robbery, the man was described as a black male who appeared to brandish a handgun wrapped in a red or white towel or cloth.

All four robberies were in the same area, along Interstate 45, Morrison said. No one was harmed, but the suspect threatened clerks in each incident, he said.

The robberies included a robbery at Travelodge motel on Oct. 28, a robbery at a Texaco service station on Oct. 30 and the robbery of Springtime Food Store at 7:30 p.m. Saturday and the robbery of an Ecol service station 12 hours later only six blocks from the food store.

TDC reopens its doors

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Texas prison officials paroled an additional 95 inmates, clearing the way for the crowded corrections system to reopen its doors to new inmates today, a spokesman said.

The Texas Department of Corrections closed the doors to new inmates late Thursday, when prison population exceeded a court-mandated 95 percent of capacity. Prison officials paroled the additional inmates Monday.

Last week's closing marked the second time this year the prison system had to stop accepting new inmates. They were shut Oct. 3 for one day.

The prison system was padlocked 23 times last year due to excessive crowding.

TDC spokesman David Nunnelee said 160 inmates were released on parole Friday, and 95 were let go Monday, cutting the population down to 38,826, or 94.7 percent of capacity.

Search continues for body

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP) — The search continued today for the body of a man missing since a helicopter crashed Friday in the Gulf of Mexico, presumably killing four of the six people aboard, officials say.

An unidentified body and the body of pilot Jim Roos, 44, of Nacogdoches, Texas, were found Monday in the wreckage, said Michael O'Malley, a spokesman for Mobil Oil Exploration & Producing Southeast in Dallas.

O'Malley said the other man was either R.F. Piglia Jr., 27, of Baton Rouge, or a 40-year-old welder who worked for Cameron Construction Co. in Cameron, La.

The body of Eugene Scott, 40, of Abbeville, a Mobil employee, was found Sunday, he said.

Two other Mobil employees were rescued shortly after the helicopter crashed Friday morning in 310 feet of water about 120 miles south of Lake Charles.

Stormie to undergo surgery

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The world's only survivor of a heart-liver transplant was scheduled to undergo surgery today to open a bile duct that has caused her new liver to malfunction, according to hospital officials.

Doctors in Dallas originally feared Stormie Jones, 11, of White Settlement, Texas, was suffering liver rejection, in which the body's natural defenses against infection attack the transplanted organ.

The operation scheduled for today at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh was planned to clear the blockage in the bile duct without replacing the organ, said liver transplant pioneer Dr. Thomas E. Starzl.

Sophisticated medical service is alternative to hospitalization

As medical technology becomes more sophisticated, high tech medical services, such as O.P.T.I.O.N.Care in Odessa, allow patients to take an active role in their treatment while regaining independence in the comfort of home.

O.P.T.I.O.N.Care, one such enterprise recently launched by pharmacist Kenneth Benson, offers home intravenous and nutritional services as an alternative to extended hospitalization for the medically sound and stable patient.

Certain medical conditions require lengthy or long-term I.V. therapies. These treatments may even be required after hospitalization is no longer necessary. With O.P.T.I.O.N-.Care a patient can administer his own treatment at home.

I.V. therapy can include any one of several different treatments prescribed by a physician. O.P.T.I.O.N-.Care specializes in providing medications such as antibiotics and steroids, pain management therapy, nutrition therapy (as a result of a faulty digestive tract), fluids (for those unable to meet their fluid needs by oral intake), and tube feeding (for those who have a functioning digestive system but are unable to swallow).

Upon referral by a physician, Benson, along with the cooperation of a registered nursing staff, meets with the patient and family to discuss the details of home I.V. therapy. Benson prepares the prescribed solution at the O.P.T.I.O.N.Care pharmacy located at Major Medical Supply in Odessa. He then delivers the supplies and equipment to the patient's home. A registered nurse administers the therapy and teaches the family the techniques which will enable them to administer the therapy independently. Once patient independence is established, O.P.T.I.O.N.Care professionals periodically deliver supplies and monitor progress, making reports to the referring physician.

Home therapy costs about 30 to 35 percent of the same therapy on an in-hospital basis. Certain therapies are covered by insurance and Medicare. O.P.T.I.O.N.Care accepts this type of coverage and will do the billing involved. In fact, for a person with good insurance coverage there may be no cost at all.

Benson said, "As medical costs continue to rise, we will witness more and more patients being released from hospitals as soon as possible. This can indefinitely burden the family who must then maintain hospital quality care at home. Unless the patient and the family are fully supported and encouraged by their physician and/or other medical professionals, a successful recovery would be questionable. O.P.T.I.O.N-.Care takes that idea of support one step further and puts its patients and families in touch with one another.

Another important aspect of O.P-.T.I.O.N.Care is that it is locally owned and operated. All the equipment and supplies are located in the O.P.T.I.O.N.Care pharmacy where Benson mixes the solutions. This assures that they can be there for the patient or the family 24 hours a day, anytime they are needed.

O.P.T.I.O.N.Care owner Kenneth Benson mixes I.V. prescriptions under a Laminar flow hood. The hood provides a sterile area in which to mix the solutions. Antibiotic doses are dispensed in small volume containers for individual doses while the more complicated nutrition solutions are dispensed in larger volume containers for continuous infusions.

Ranch House offers the finest in delicious Hill Country holiday meats

Greg Golden, Ranch House manager, displays some of the delicous homemade breads, spiral sliced honey glazed hams and condiments all available for holiday dining and gift giving. Call 699-0695 to place your order now.

Tasty Hill Country mesquite smoked meats from the Ranch House are just perfect for your holiday dining or for gifts for friends and loved ones. The Ranch House, located across from Mervyn's in Midland Plaza, brings you the best in spiral sliced and honey glazed smoked hams, turkeys, chickens, bacons and a variety of other delicious meats.

You'll like the prices at the Ranch House, too. For example, spiral sliced and Honey Glazed hams are $3.99 a pound, smoked turkeys are $19.95 each, smoked brisket is $5.90 per pound and a quarter pound of beef jerky is just $4.75.

All gift meats, like the other products at the Ranch House, are ready for gift boxing and can be shipped any where in the United States.

What sets the Ranch House meats apart from others is the magic of mesquite. For years the twisted trunk of the mesquite tree has cast a lonely shadow over the vast rangeland of Texas. The early cowboys came to hate its thorn-covered branches, but found that this ugly little tree, which grew on the prairie, gave them the wood they so desperately needed for their campfires on those chilly Texas nights.

This campfire is where the true magic of the mesquite tree was first discovered...the sweet pungent aroma that permeated fine cuts of meat cooked over its succulent smoke became a culinary legend that has been passed down through the years. Today the Ranch House still slowly smokes all of its fine products over mesquite embers to capture its legendary flavor.

Only Grand Champion bone-in mesquite smoked hams are used. A special machine spiral slices each piece to the bone. You can purchase your meat cut to order–whole, half, etc. The honey glaze flavoring makes Ranch House hams special. You'll love the honey, sugar and spices combination for which Ranch House spiral cut hams are famous!

All Ranch House products are processed the Hill Country in Menard, Texas. Ranch House is locally owned and managed by Greg Golden.

Not only does the Ranch House have delicious fully cooked meats, but you can choose from a variety of tasty condiments and specialty products from all over the state. Sauces, salsas and dips from the El Paso Chile Company are perfect for Christmas giving. Or, choose from D.L. Jardines products such as jalapeno ketchup , mustard or mayonnaise.

From the Brazos Beef Emporium is Brazos Blackeyed Pea Dip. Cherchios champagne brand mustard goes hand in hand with the honey glazed and spiral sliced ham. Any condiments can be specially gift boxed, also.

Also at the Ranch House is a sandwich deli where a lunch menu is served Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Available on homemade bread are ham, turkey, beef and brisket sandwiches. The bread is also for sale for $1.70 per loaf. Sparkling clear iced tea is made with reverse osmosis water. And don't forget to try a delicious Ranch House dessert!

The Ranch House is proud of the products offered in the store. So, every product in the store comes with an unconditional guarantee.

Stop by the Ranch House soon. Call 699-0695 to order your ham or turkey now before the holidays!

Professionals at Lewellen Construction can install maintenance-free steel, vinyl siding

If you are one of those who think maintenance-free siding is a great idea, but have held back because of the cost, read on.

Over the years, Bill Lewellen, of Lewellen Construction, has frequently been approached by homeowners who are interested in installing maintenance-free steel or vinyl siding themselves.

"We have always tried to discourage this for a number of reasons," Bill explained. "First of all it takes years to learn the 'tricks of the trade' and secondly, many of the tools required are peculiar to the installation of siding and trim."

"Also we pride ourselves on the high quality of work that we turn out, and we have seen the shoddy workmanship performed by the inexperienced," he continued.

Because of this, Bill has decided to extend a special offer to anyone who is interested in installing their own siding.

One of the experts at Lewellen Construction will come out and take all the measurements necessary to give you a quote on a "material only" package.

However, they won't leave you there if you decide you can handle the job; they will give you a free in-house seminar covering the basics of siding, soffit and fascia installation.

Once you have completed the free seminar, you will also be entitled to two hours of free on-site consultation. If additional assistance is needed, it will be provided at a nominal hourly rate.

If you are just tired of painting, or you would like to increase the value of your home without going through a do it yourself program, don't worry. Professional installation by the experts at Lewellen Construction is still available on siding, trim, patio covers, roofing and windows.

Call Lewellen Construction Company for more information at 686-8007 or 563-4520.

Palo Duro diplomats in way of Rebel advancement

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

If Midland Lee's football playoff road is to continue past Saturday's 1 p.m. date with Amarillo Palo Duro in Amarillo, the Rebels will have to beat two former presidents, an American diplomat and an Army general.

The speedy backfield of the 8-2 Dons looks more like the setting of a diplomatic meeting than a grid power. Playing at quarterback is junior Carleton Franklin. The fullback is Doug Washington and the half back is Clifton Monroe. The other halfback in the Dons' wishbone is Mike "General" Westmoreland.

Westmoreland is a major key for the Rebel defense. The General rushed for 1,128 yards, making him District 3-5A's rushing leader for the season. He averages 7.4 yards per carry and has scored an amazing 20 touchdowns, including four in a 41-6 win over Amarillo High Saturday, a game that put Palo Duro in the playoffs.

Monroe has 530 rushing yards, averaging five yards per carry while Washington has 522 yards for a 5.3 average.

Franklin has had some problems that you would expect from a junior. He has completed only 29 percent of his pass, hitting on only 22 of 78 attempts. He also has thrown seven interceptions and only two touchdown passes.

But Westmoreland is more than enough to make up for such a weakness. He has great football speed and is a dangerous breakaway threat. Monroe and Washington are more of the grind-it-out types of runners, but possess running power. Monroe is 205 pounds and that is big for a halfback.

Defensively the Dons will throw up a five-man front against Lee and that could pose some problems for Lee since the Rebels have faced only two teams this year that use this particular kind of defensive front. Fortunately, for Lee, the Rebels won both of those games against Del Rio and El Paso Andress.

The key for the Dons on defense is the play of its two linebackers, Monroe and junior Chris Montague. Monroe, who sees action on both sides of the ball, was 3-5A's defensive player of the year as a junior. Both are talented players.

One possible weakness for the Dons is nose guard Kevin Swain, who is only a sophomore. Swain was forced into a starting role because the starter was lost to grades. However, with Monroe and Montague playing behind him in the linebacker posts, the weakness is lessened somewhat.

Cornerback Johnson Brown and safety Daniel Johnson, who likes to blitz from a stacked defense from time to time, are both juniors. Johnson also plays tight end on offense.

Palo Duro dropped a non-conference contest to Class 4A Hereford, 20-9. The Dons followed that loss with a 20-17 loss to 3-5A champion Tascosa to open district play. Since then Palo Duro has ripped off six consecutive victories. Lee comes into the game with five consecutive victories.

This is the fifth consecutive season that Palo Duro has advanced to the bi-district round of the state playoffs, but the Dons have failed to get past the bi-district round in four previous tries.

Palo Duro has nine overall trips to the playoffs while Lee is making its sixth consecutive appearance and eighth overall.

Even though the Dons' playoff streak has coincided with Lee's playoff run, this is the first playoff meeting between the two teams. Palo Duro has bi-district losses to both Odessa Permian and San Angelo during the last four years, including a loss to Permian last year in Ratliff Stadium in Odessa.

This is also the first time that Amarillo has hosted the bi-district meetings since the UIL went to the two-team per district playoff format. And they are going to do it up in style as Dick Bivins Stadium will be the site of a bi-district, day-night, doubleheader with Permian taking on Tascosa at 7:30 p.m.

Tickets for the Lee-Palo Duro game can be purchased at the Memorial Stadium ticket office in Midland for $5 for adults and $3 for students. All tickets will be $6 in Amarillo.

Sugar Ray puts name on two titles

LAS VEGAS (AP) — If having fun in the ring is Sugar Ray Leonard's measure of success, he had the time of his life against an overmatched Donny Lalonde.

Leonard, showing flashes of power few thought he could bring against a light heavyweight champion, fought back from only the second knockdown of his 11-year pro career Monday night to knock Lalonde out in the ninth round and win two boxing titles.

The impressive win gave Leonard the World Boxing Council light heavyweight title held by Lalonde and also the WBC's newly created super middleweight crown. It also touched off speculation about possible future fights for Leonard, perhaps a rematch with Thomas Hearns of their epic 1981 fight won by Leonard.

"I was just out there to have some fun," Leonard said after returning from an 18-month ring absence to win for the 35th time in 36 fights. "I happen to be out there because I love being there, that's it."

LEONARD, further cementing his already considerable place in boxing lore, became the first man in history to win parts of five titles while quieting critics who suggested he had had one comeback too many and had no business being in the ring.

He also diplayed at its best the fiery determination to win that, perhaps more than anything, has made him one of the era's greatest fighters.

"Ray dug a little deeper than I did," said Lalonde. "Ray's got a lot of heart, he's a great champion."

Leonard, fighting for only the third time in nearly seven years, battled back from a flash knockdown in the fourth round to turn the tables and become the power puncher against the hard-hitting Canadian.

Fighting flat-footed and refusing to back off, Leonard turned in a brilliant ninth-round performance, knocking Lalonde down once before stopping him at 2:30 of the round wih a vicious left hook followed by a right hand.

"It was just a matter of me keeping my composure and trying to get the left hook in there," Leonard said. "It was just a matter of time before I caught him."

The end wasn't always so clear-cut, however, in a fight that Lalonde was in all the way and was actually leading on one ringside judge's scorecard after eight rounds.

"I felt I was way ahead," Lalonde said. "I thought I had him hurt quite a few times."

Lalonde, whose chances of winning rested solely on landing his right hand to Leonard's head, did just that in the fourth round, catching Leonard flush on the face as Leonard attempted to throw a left hook.

Oilers dump Browns in key AFC shootout

HOUSTON (AP) — There can be no more doubt about the reality of the Houston Oilers to running back Allen Pinkett's way of thinking.

"That's two weeks in a row against two winning teams that we've taken charge and that takes it out of the fluke stage and makes us genuine," Pinkett said Monday night.

The Oilers proved themselves genuine Monday night, charging to a 21-3 lead over Cleveland and then holding on for a 24-17 victory that established Houston as a serious title contenders.

"Cleveland is in the upper echelon of the league and it's an honor and privilege to beat them," Pinkett said.

The victory put the Oilers one game behind AFC Central Division leader Cincinnati with a 7-3 record and dropped Cleveland two games off the pace at 6-4.

"I think Cleveland realizes they aren't going to win the division now," Oiler fullback Alonzo Highsmith said. "This is a new team the second half of the season.

"We're still building momentum. It's always a physical game when we play Cleveland, but we had their number tonight."

Highsmith scored his first touchdown of the season on a one-yard run in the second quarter and the Oilers depended on their ground game and a rugged defense for a 7-3 halftime lead.

The Oilers got the first big break of the game in the third quarter when Johnny Meads blocked an NFL-record-tying fifth punt this season for the Oilers.

Those blocked punts match the mark shared by the 1975 Detroit Lions, the 1978 Atlanta Falcons, the 1985 Minnesota Vikins and 1987 New Orleans Saints.

Warren Moon, who hadn't beaten the Browns since he became the Oiler quarterback, then threw an eight-yard touchdown pass to Ernest Givins and Mike Rozier ran three yards for another score and it was 21-3 with 4:47 to go in the third quarter.

That's when Browns quarterback Bernie Kosar, who had not lost to the Oilers in five games, almost pulled it out.

"We got behind early but we scrached and clawed and got ourselves back in it," Kosar said. "In the second half, I tried to calm everybody down.

"We've been in that situation before. I told everybody we really needed to win the game. Now at 6-4, every game down the stretch is important."

Reggie Langhorne ran 20 yards on a double reverse for a touchdown to make it 21-10 in the third quarter.

Astros name Howe as manager

HOUSTON (AP) — Although Art Howe had been seeking a major league managerial post since 1986, he says it wasn't until this year that he really felt ready.

Howe, hired Monday as manager of the Houston Astros, interviewed at Pittsburgh in 1986, and discussed vacancies with Seattle and the Chicago White Sox this year.

"I interviewed at Pittsburgh in 1986 when Jim Leyland got the job, but deep down, I didn't really feel ready," Howe said Monday.

Howe, who played seven seasons with the Astros before ending his career in St. Louis, became a coach with the Texas Rangers on May 21, 1985. Despite his inexperience, he applied when the Pittsburgh job became available.

"I'd never been through a spring training as a coach, so I didn't know how to organize it and how to maximize the time," Howe said.

"I think working with Bobby Valentine has been a great help to me," Howe said of the Rangers' manager. "He is so organized. He doesn't miss the slightest detail. I owe him a lot for helping me along."

Howe replaces Hal Lanier, fired at the end of a disappointing season in which the Astros faded to a fifth-place finish in the National League West, 12½ games behind the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Lanier led the Astros to the division title in his first season, 1986, but Houston had late-season swoons in 1987 and 1988.

Howe, who signed a two-year contract, says he isn't worried about Lanier being fired two years after winning the title.

"That has nothing to do with me," he said. "I'm coming in with a fresh outlook, trying to get the players to play 100 percent."

Howe said three holdovers from Lanier's staff, Yogi Berra, Matt Galante and Les Moss, would remain with the team.

Although Galante was a finalist for the job, Howe anticipates a smooth working relationship between them.

"There won't be any problems with Matt," Howe said. "From all I've heard about Matt, he's a super guy."

Howe, who was the Rangers' hitting instructor, will delegate that duty to Berra. Galante likely will move from first to third base coach.

Howe said his first job would be to fill coaching vacancies and that former Astros players Phil Garner and Jose Cruz were candidates.

BILL GRIMES

Bi-district football playoffs begin for area hopefuls

ONCE UPON A TIME, Andy Williams sang about "the most wonderful time of the year".

Williams, most recently seen singing the Star-Spangled Banner at a George Bush rally, was talking about Christmas.

But a diehard West Texas football fan might consider the holidays great for another reason. That's because football playoffs dominate the horizon.

Grimes

Even a casual football fan such as myself gets fired up about the postseason. And why not? To me, it's kinda fun to see how things unfold.

(Plus, I get to get out of the Permian Basin for a day, if our teams go far enough.)

And going far may be a definite possibility for some of the four area teams that open bi-district play this week. So without further ado, here are my picks for this weekend's action:

Greenwood-Denver City
8 p.m., Friday, Ratliff Stadium, Odessa

I'd like to say that Greenwood can cap a thrilling nine-week run by exacting revenge on a team that drilled them by 20 points in the first week of the season. But I have to wait and see if Randy Donnell can play.

The Rangers' star quarterback-free safety hurt his ankle against Clint last Friday and was last seen with an ankle in three different shades of purple and swollen far beyond its normal size.

Donnell wasn't a factor in Denver City's earlier 26-6 win, but you can bet the farm that he could cause trouble for the Mustangs this time, given that he's had 10 weeks to master Coach Bob Purser's Wishbone offense.

You've got to figure that Denver City will key on the Jimmy Team of alternating fullbacks O'Briant and Cox if Donnell can't go. You also can't count on the Rangers throwing the ball with much success, since DC has allowed only 223 passing yards this season (even though Greenwood's Tom Marvin caught the only TD pass allowed by the 'Stangs.).

The bottom line is, while I don't think Denver City backs Kenny Samaniego and Vincent Horton can run roughshod against an outstanding Ranger line, it may be very hard for Greenwood to move the ball without their starting quarterback.

Early this week, Donnell's status was still uncertain, but Purser said he may be able to play Friday.

This is a game that calls for two predictions, since Donnell is such a dominating athlete. Figuring that he is worth seven points on both sides of the ball, here goes: Greenwood 14, Denver City 7 with; Denver City 14, Greenwood 7 without.

Stanton-Winters
7:30 p.m., Winters

This Class AA bi-district pits two teams with awful 1987 records that completely turned it around this year.

Stanton, 3-7 last season, looked headed the same route after Class A Garden City dumped them in the fourth week of the season. But Coach Dale Ruth went back to the Wishbone, and the Buffs got a big win over McCamey in the seventh week of the season to key an undefeated district schedule.

There's no reason here to think that the Buffs will kiss their six-game win streak goodbye against a Winters 11 that couldn't get its offense untracked until the last two weeks. While the Blizzards have made tremendous strides from their 1-9 mark last season, they seem a bit outmanned both speed- and size-wise against Stanton. I don't even think a home-field advantage could help.

Though football games aren't won on paper, Stanton looks to be the favorite here. Stanton 21, Winters 7.

Reagan County-McCamey
8 p.m. Saturday, Crane

Oooooooohhhhhh, I don't wanna pick this one. But I'll give it my best shot.

Reagan County knocked off the Badgers 14-6 in the season's fourth week, but McCamey coach Danny Wilhelm rallied his troops to second-place in 5-2A.

Meanwhile, Coach Ronnie Reeger's Owls stormed through District 6-2A without a blemish. In fact, the Owls are undefeated, period, going into Saturday's game.

The Owls outgained McCamey 279-89 in their first meeting. But wait! The Badgers missed starting QB David Anglin for that game. Since a disappointing loss to Stanton in the seventh week of the season, the Badgers have run roughshod over their foes, allowing only two points in their last three games.

Therein may lie a problem. The Badgers have either won big, or not won. Don't look for them to beat Reagan County big, ergo, don't look for a Badger win.

And, winning begets winning, while losing close games can be a habit, too.

Even though the Owls may have trouble moving against an outstanding McCamey defense, they should be able to eke this one out. When you're 9-0, you usually find a way to win. Reagan County 7, McCamey 7. RC wins on penetrations.

Chap netters impressive against major teams

From Staff Reports

ABILENE — Throw a junior college athlete into competition with a bunch from major university programs is like putting one Christian into an arena with a pride of hungry lions, right? Not if that junior college is Midland College and the sport is tennis.

The MC Chaparrals came away from last weekend's Fairway Oaks Collegiate Indoor Tournament here with at least their share of wins. The three-day event pitted individuals from Southern Methodist, University of New Mexico, Arkansas, University of Texas, Texas Christian, Trinity, Abilene Christian and Midland College.

"We came away with more wins than SMU, Abilene Christian and Trinity, and impressed some coaches," said MC coach Joe Williams. "In fact, some of the coaches wanted to sign several of our players at mid-term. It was a great weekend for our players and our program. We convinced a lot of people that we could pretty well hold our own with anyone."

The Chaps took four consolation titles in the event, which concluded their fall season. One of the players they had trouble with was former MC All-American Eric Lingg, now playing for TCU.

SINGLES: 1) Ton van de Pieterman (MC) lost to Luis Ruette (TCU) 6-3 3-6 6-4; defeated Manuel Rodriquez (Trinity) 6-4 6-0; defeated Warren Fulgenzi (New Mexico) 7-6 6-3. 2) Scott Randolph (MC) lost to Scott Robertson (SMU) 7-6 6-1; defeated Alan Dils (New Mexico) 6-1 7-5; lost to Greg Tournant (Trinity) 6-3 6-1. 3) Amine Boustani (MC) defeated Page Buck (SMU) 7-6 3-6 6-3; lost to Eric Lingg (TCU) 6-4 6-2. 4) Robert Antoun (MC) lost to Hubert Karrasch (Texas) 6-3 6-4; defeated Randy Martin (New Mexico) 6-3 6-3; defeated Reza Mirza (Trinity) 4-6 6-1 6-4. 5) David Fontaine (MC) lost to Keith Burford (Arkansas) 6-3 6-4; defeated Kurt Atkerson (Abilene Christian) 6-1 6-1; defeated Rene Schlattter (Trinity) 6-2 6-0. 6) Tommy Helting (MC) lost to Tony Bujon (TCU) 6-7 6-2 6-1.

DOUBLES: 1) Boustani-van de Pieterman (MC) defeated Devening-Kudelko (SMU) 7-6 3-6 6-1; defeated Michulka-Karrasch (Texas) 2-6 6-4 7-6; lost to Lingg-Banducci (TCU) 6-2 6-0. 2) Randolph-Fontaine (MC) lost to Im-Banzari (Arkansas) 6-4 6-1; defeated Collins-Cowart (Abilene Christian) 7-6 6-2; defeated Benvin-Mirza (Trinity) 6-4 3-6 6-2; 3) Antoun-Helting (MC) lost to Sadler-Taylor (Texas) 6-3 1-6 6-4.

Lufkin, Culpepper back in playoffs

AUSTIN (AP) — Former Midland High coach Pat Culpepper can't quite put out of his mind what his Lufkin Panthers did recently in its 39-0 trouncing of Texarkana High School. It wasn't so much that his football team guaranteed itself a playoff berth, it was how they did it.

"It was the most unusual game I've ever been in," Culpepper said. "For the first time I've ever heard of, a team had no first downs. And they never crossed the 50-yard line. We've got a great defense."

THE MAN speaking should know a thing or two about great defenses. Culpepper, downright tiny for a middle linebacker at 5 foot 11 inches and 185 pounds, was defensive captain of the 1962 University of Texas team that went 9-1-1.

Today, after a coaching odyssey that has seen the 47-year-old Cleburne native coach at six colleges and two high schools, Culpepper is at the helm of a rejuvenated prep program that has had four winning seasons and two playoff berths over the last five years.

"My dream has always been to go back to the University of Texas and coach football," Culpepper said. "But you never know, because I'm enjoying what I'm doing now. I've coached college football, and I've met some great people. But hardly anything in coaching beats being with a team in the playoffs in the state of Texas."

Culpepper has had to readjust his goals before. A diehard Aggie fan because of Bear Bryant, he was set to play for Texas A&M until Bryant left for Alabama. Instead, he was wooed to Texas by Darrell Royal. It was a move he was never to regret.

"I've kept a lot of letters and notes that I kept while I was at Texas," Culpepper said. "I've saved magazine and newspaper articles through the years and (Royal's) responses to things. I review that information frequently."

ROYAL WASN'T the only big influence on Culpepper. Defensive coordinator Mike Campbell and assistant Jim Pittman earned his undying respect.

Culpepper even left to work for Pittman at Tulane after two seasons as a Longhorns assistant and another at Colorado. He left Tulane after two years to coach another season at Colorado.

Culpepper moved on to Baylor in 1969, where he was defensive coordinator for five seasons, before taking the same position at Memphis State. In 1976 he got his first crack at a head coaching job, when he took over a Northern Illinois program that went 3-8 the season before.

The Huskies had a 1-10 mark his first season, but started improving, going 3-8 and 5-6 in the next two seasons. But after a 5-5-1 season in 1979 and some administration changes at the DeKalb, Ill., school, Culpepper was gone. The following season, with Culpepper's seniors, Bill Mallory went 7-4.

"I got quite an education because football is a lot different up (north)," Culpepper said. "I learned a lot."

Culpepper got a chance to use what he learned when Royal helped him get a job at Midland High. Under Culpepper, Midland beat Midland Lee for the first time in nine years in 1982 but couldn't escape the shadow of Odessa Permian or Lee again. So in 1984 he took the job at Lufkin.

AT 47, Culpepper is still at his college playing weight, fitting in four racquetball workouts a week. "You have to set a good example," he said.

Culpepper and his wife, Martha, have three children. Connie, the eldest, is a sophomore at Southern Methodist. Johnny, a junior at Lufkin, is an aspiring quarterback, but missed the season with a broken elbow.

His youngest son, Will, a fifth-grader, is the ballboy for Lufkin. Just in bringing the ball on and off the field for the state-ranked Panthers, Will jokingly said he has already rushed for a thousand yards. But rushing is someing for running backs, and Will ...

"He's going to be a middle linebacker at the University of Texas some day," Pat Culpepper said. "He should be a good one."

OILERS

Cleveland tight end Ozzie Newsome caught his 600th career pass, a four-yard touchdown strike early in the final period, but was unmoved by the milestone.

"Getting 600 was nice but it would have felt better with a victory to go with it," Newsome said of his catch, which pulled Cleveland within 21-17.

Houston's defense, which plagued Kosar throughout the game, stopped the Browns two more times, the last with 1:01 to go on Ray Childress' fumble recovery.

After Highsmith scored, Cleveland's Matt Bahr booted a 40-yard field goal in the first quarter for the first-half scoring.

The Oilers came out running at the Browns and finished with 148 yards on the ground, led by Rozier's 76 yards on 23 carries.

"Tonight the trenches belonged to us," Rozier said. "We were out there to play hard and our offensive line did the job.

"We came out to run the ball and the line blocked well all night."

The Oilers have won 15 of their last 16 non-strike home games and the Browns administered the only loss in the streak with a 40-7 victory last season.

The Browns made it close in the fourth quarter but couldn't complete the rally, Cleveland Coach Marty Schottenheimer said.

"I was proud the way we came back," Schottenheimer said. "I felt we had the opportunity to win the game but Houston made the plays when they had to."

The combination of Rozier and Highsmith, who carried eight times for 40 yards, and Pinkett, who was 8-31, enabled the Oilers to break a seven-game losing streak against the Browns. That enabled Houston to hold the ball for nearly 36 minutes, 12 more than Cleveland, which ran the ball just 16 times for 44 yards against a tenacious Oiler defense.

Dodgers' Lasorda named Manager of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Tommy Lasorda hasn't slowed down in the offseason.

"I got a schedule that Lewis and Clark couldn't keep up with," the Los Angeles Dodgers' manager said the other day.

Lasorda spends the offseason giving motvational speeches. On Monday he was honored for motivational speeches during the season. Lasorda was named The Associated Press Major League Manager of the Year for 1988 in voting by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Lasorda received 97½ points and Boston Red Sox manager Joe Morgan was second with 26½. Oakland Athletics manager Tony LaRussa was third with 25 points and Detroit Tigers manager Sparky Anderson was fourth with 11.

Lasorda, already named National League Manager of the Year by the Baseball Writers Association of America, said the award was more a tribute to the Dodgers' organization than himself.

"It was just not a victory of a World Series, it was a shining example to all people of what you can accomplish and what can happen in life if you really and truly believe in yourself," he said.

"The thing about this World Series, as I told the president of the United States, it proved that the people of this country like the underdog. I haven't ever seen as much interest in the World Series as I saw this year.

"Nobody thought we had even a slight chance of beating the Mets in the playoffs. Nobody thought we could even come close to beating them. And then when we went into the World Series, no one thought we could come close to beating the Athletics."

Los Angeles, 94-67 this year, has won the NL West six times in 12 seasons. Two other years, the Dodgers were in contention until that last weekend. Lasorda said the key for him during the playoffs and World Series was to keep the players from getting down.

"No matter what you feel, when you walk into the clubhouse you have to put on a new face on, a happy face, a winning face," Lasorda said. "The personality and the attitude of the manager is going to reflect on your team. That's the philosphy I wanted, that's what I have to have.

"You have to talk to them, communicate with them. You've got to say to them that they'll bounce back. You can't let them get down.

Texas facing another losing football season

AUSTIN (AP) — With Texas facing the possibility of its second losing season in three years and only the ninth in its history, Coach David McWilliams hopes his team can get back on track with a win over Texas Christian, a team the Longhorns have beaten 20 straight years.

Texas, coming off its second-worst defeat ever, 66-15 to Houston, has lost four straight for the first time since 1956 in a single season.

The Longhorns, 3-5, must win the remainder of their games to avoid a losing season. Texas was 5-6 in 1986 under Fred Akers and went 7-5 last year in McWilliams' first season as head coach.

"I was here in '76 too, when we were struggling to win," said McWilliams, a UT assistant from 1970 to 1985.

"The only difference now is that I'm the man in charge and, let me tell you, I don't like it. I am not going to get comfortable with this," he said Monday.

In the loss to Houston, Texas allowed 619 yards, more than 100 over the previous high given up in the Longhorns' season opener to Brigham Young.

Cougar quarterbacks Andre Ware and David Dacus combined for 412 yards passing, just seven short of the record set earlier this year by North Texas.

"Going into the Arkansas game, I thought we had turned the corner. But all of a sudden we have all these injuries, and then we kind of had to start over. Now we are just trying to find something we are comfortable with," McWilliams told his weekly news conference.

"When it looks like we are getting better and improving, something always happens to set us back," he said.

In 4-5 TCU, the Longhorns will face a team that has lost three of its last four games. Two weeks ago, the Horned Frogs lost to Houston 40-12.

"Although they have had a lot of injuries too, they still have the ability to pound the middle pretty good and that will be a major concern to us," McWilliams said.

McWilliams said that despite the losses, his team's morale is holding up.

"They are still eager to get out there and get after it. We're just trying to win the last three games and have a 6-5 season," he said.

"These things happen. What if you go home and the dishwasher is broken and the dog as eaten something you need and your car has a flat tire? What do you do? You start by fixing the dishwasher."

King's Row

Oklahoma's Stacey King, the older brother of Midland College freshman Darryl King, shows why he is a preseason All-America pick in an exhibition game against Fort Hood Monday night.

Sweeney gives Landry problem

IRVING (AP) — Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry was expected to decide today whether to start new quarterback hero Kevin Sweeney Sunday night against the Minnesota Vikings or give Steve Pelluer another chance.

Landry acknowledged Monday he was getting a lot of outside pressure to play the popular Sweeney.

"There always is pressure when it comes to who will start at quarterback," Landry said.

Sweeney, the hero of a near-miracle in the Meadowlands, threw three touchdown passes in the second half against the New York Giants on Sunday but Dallas fell short 29-21.

The Cowboys haven't lost six games in a row in one season since their expansion year of 1960.

"I don't know what will happen right now," said Landry, who usually announces all lineup changes at his weekly Tuesday press luncheon. "We were a different team with Sweeney out there. Sweeney fueled the fire."

Sweeney was the hero of the NFL strike replacement games for Dallas last year, winning both games he started. However, he had never played in a regular game until Sunday.

"I know who everybody wants to be the starter," Landry said. "He (Sweeney) was about the only exciting part of what happened against the Giants."

Sweeney started the third period with Dallas trailing 26-0. Sweeney hit 19 of 37 passes for 189 yards.

Landry doesn't want to destroy Pelluer's confidence. Last week, he predicted Pelluer "will blossom out" and become an efficient quarterback.

But even Pelluer admitted what Sweeney did "was exciting and awesome."

"I made some poor decisions in the first half but I felt I could come back in the second half," Pelluer said. "It was Coach Landry's decision and I'll respect it."

Sweeney wasn't pushing Landry to start him.

"I feel like I deserve to play but I will have patience," Sweeney said. "I've learned a lot in the last two years on the sidelines. If I sit down, I'll just wait my turn.

"I'm sure the Giants didn't know what to expect. I didn't know."

Sweeney took the Cowboys on touchdown drives of 70, 59, and 80 yards. Two of his touchdown passes came on fourth down.

"He just wouldn't accept a defeat," Landry said. "If we don't have a defensive back fall down on a long pass play and the Giants get a field goal then we are driving for the winning touchdown at the end. That would have been fun."

Mariners hire Lefebvre

SEATTLE (AP) — Jim Lefebvre admits he had doubts about becoming the Seattle Mariners' new manager. But he says team owner George Argyros convinced him the organization is now committed to winning.

The Mariners went through two managers in a last-place 1988 season. On Monday the team announced that its new manager would be the 46-year-old Lefebvre, 46, the Oakland Athletics' third-base coach and hitting instructor.

Lefebvre said he was reluct

IMPALED ON 'THE FORK'

North-South vulnerable. West deals.

	NORTH ♠ J 4 ♡ J 6 5 4 2 ◇ Q 8 7 6 ♣ 8 2
WEST ♠ 9 7 ♡ K 8 ◇ A J 10 9 5 ♣ A 7 6 5		EAST ♠ 8 6 ♡ A Q 10 9 7 3 ◇ 3 2 ♣ Q 10 9
	SOUTH ♠ A K Q 10 5 3 2 ♡ Void ◇ K 4 ♣ K J 4 3

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	4 ♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡

Cardinal Morton, chancellor of the Exchequer for Henry VII, had a very simple method for determining how high merchants should be taxed. If they lived lavishly, they obviously could afford to be assessed heavily; if they lived frugally, they had to have huge savings and again could afford a high levy. In bridge, a Morton's Fork Coup presents a defender with a Hobson's Choice. Regardless of which play he chooses, he loses.

The bidding on this hand from a world team championship some years ago was straightforward. South needed little from his partner to make game, so he simply bid it right away.

West led the king of hearts, and declarer paused to count his tricks. Since both minor-suit aces rated to be with West, the only sure tricks were seven trumps and a diamond. If East held the queen of clubs, a finesse in that suit would yield a ninth trick. A club ruff would have to be the fulfilling trick.

However, if declarer crossed to the jack of trumps to take the finesse, West would have only to return a trump when in with the ace of clubs to stop the ruff. The way out of the impasse was simple, yet elegant. Declarer ruffed the opening heart lead and led a low diamond.

West was impaled on Morton's Fork no matter what he did. If he rose with the ace, declarer would have two diamond tricks and would not need a club ruff. If he ducked, the diamond queen would be the entry to dummy for the club finesse. After West won the ace of clubs, his shift to trumps would come too late. Declarer would win, cash the king of clubs and ruff a club. That meant ten tricks either way.

Jury rules Creedence's John Fogerty didn't steal one of his own songs

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Rock star John Fogerty got a favorable review from a federal jury, which determined that he hadn't stolen one of his own Creedence Clearwater Revival songs for his solo career.

The six-member U.S. District Court jury Monday unanimously rejected a plagiarism lawsuit by Fantasy Records, which holds the rights to Creedence songs.

The suit, one of several in a long-running feud between Fogerty and his former recording company, claimed his 1984 composition, "Old Man Down the Road," copied the tune from "Run Through the Jungle," which Fogerty wrote and sang for Creedence in 1970.

"Old Man" sold about 150,000 copies and was the lead single from Fogerty's solo "Centerfield" album, his first major commercial success since Creedence disbanded in 1972. The suit sought a substantial share of the profits from the single and the album, which sold more than 2 million copies.

Fogerty's defense included two days on the witness stand with guitar in hand, playing many of his compositions to demonstrate his style. He contended any similarities between the songs were part of his "swamp rock" style.

At a post-verdict news conference, Fogerty, 43, said, "William Shakespeare, John Lennon, (Bob) Dylan and maybe (Bruce) Springsteen (were) saying, 'Johnny, don't blow this.' How can you not sound like yourself?"

The jurors were "awed by a superstar and the performance that was put on," said Malcolm Burnstein, a lawyer for Fantasy Records.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Marvin Mitchelson, the celebrity divorce lawyer for clients such as "Dynasty" star Joan Collins, met with state bar association officials but didn't resolve pending misconduct charges.

Mitchelson

"There is no question this is a witch hunt," Mitchelson told reporters as he left a two-hour closed conference Monday with two bar prosecutors and a referee.

Mitchelson stands accused of six charges, including charging excessive fees and failing to place clients' funds in trust funds. Two of the cases in which complaints were filed involved actress Julie Newmar and Eleanor Revson, sister-in-law of the founder of Revlon Cosmetics.

Attorney Arthur Margolis, who represented Mitchelson, said the failure to resolve the charges means that Mitchelson will have to face a disciplinary hearing, probably in January.

Mitchelson said the charges were "ill-conceived and I believe I will be vindicated."

"I have never seen them (the bar) go after anybody like this," Margolis said. "They would not have done this if it was not Marvin Mitchelson."

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Gucci heir Maurizio Gucci, who could have been sent to jail for three years and fined $23 million for attempted tax fraud, received a one-year suspended sentence and a $750 fine.

Gucci's conviction and sentencing Monday means he will regain control of shares that will give him half of the Gucci luxury goods company, said his lawyer, Vittorio Ajello.

Gucci was accused of arranging the falsification of a signature on documents to avoid paying inheritance taxes by making it appear his father, Rodolfo, transferred ownership of the shares before his death in 1983.

His ownership of the shares was not in question, only when the transfer was made. The court froze the shares to assure he could pay any fine levied in the case.

Under Monday's decision, Gucci's criminal record will be expunged at the end of a year and will have to pay the inheritance tax on the shares.

Gucci is the great grandson of Guccio Gucci, who founded the company in 1922.

WHITEWATER, Wis. (AP) — Dr. Ruth Westheimer says religious training helped prepare her become the nation's best-known sex therapist.

Westheimer

"In the Talmud it says that a lesson taught with humor is a lesson retained," Westheimer said of the collection of rabbinic commentary that constitutes Jewish law. "And in human sexuality this is very important."

"My success is not only because I'm outspoken, I can use humor and I'm very well trained," she said during a visit Saturday to the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater. "I am successful because there is a need in society."

She described herself as a sex educator who does not promote sex but "sexual literacy," explaining, "I think most of the difficulties stem from being unable to communicate."

She said her success happened purely by chance.

"I never would have dreamed, coming from an Orthodox Jewish background, that I would talk about (sex) across the world," she said.

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Writer Naguib Mahfouz, this year's winner of the Nobel Prize in literature, was honored for the second time in less than a month when he received his country's highest decoration from President Hosni Mubarak.

In the Presidential Palace ceremony Monday, Mubarak embraced Mahfouz and placed around his neck the High Nile Ribbon, a yellow sash usually bestowed on heads of state.

"I ask God to grant me time to enjoy the honor...and pray to God to give our land peace, security and faith," the frail, 76-year-old Mahfouz told Mubarak and an audience of several hundred people.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham, who has preached to more than 107 million people around the world, celebrated his 70th birthday quietly with relatives.

"The family has really wanted to make this a private affair," said Graham spokesman Larry Ross. "They're going to keep it low-key."

Graham, whose birthday was Monday, has said he won't retire until his health or that of his wife, Ruth, makes it necessary.

This year, Graham went to China in April, where he visited his wife's birthplace in Jiangsu province, spoke with university students and professors, visited a Bible printing plant in Nanjing, preached at churches in Beijing and Shanghai and met with government leaders, including Premier Li Peng.

He was in England and Scandinavia in May and in the Soviet Union in June to speak during the 1,000th anniversary celebration of the Russian Orthodox Church.

Graham appeared at the Republican and Democratic national conventions, then embarked on a busy crusade: Buffalo, N.Y., in August; Rochester, N.Y., in September; and Hamilton, Ontario, in October.

Texas economy more diversified

Real estate, construction, banking still weak links

AUSTIN (AP) — Real estate, banking and construction continue to be the weak links in the recovering Texas economy, according to the November issue of Fiscal Notes by Comptroller Bob Bullock's office.

Those industries have been "battered by overbuilding and bad loans," said an article in the comptroller's publication distributed Monday.

Most of the economic gains have been in manufacturing, services and trade, the comptroller's office said in the report, which summarizes the 1988 Annual Report for the State of Texas.

In addition, it said in another article, the Texas economy is more diversified and better able to withstand blows to any one industry.

"Problems in one industry — such as oil and gas — no longer sink the entire economy of a region," it said.

The Texas region along the Mexican border continued strong growth, spurred by twin-plant expansion in Mexico, the article said. Twin plants involve factories in Mexico that assemble parts made in Texas, it said.

The McAllen area gained 3,600 new non-farm jobs by August 1988, a 4.1 percent increase from the previous August. During the same period, Laredo's work force grew by 2,100 jobs, or 5.9 percent, the article said.

Gulf Coast manufacturing — especially petrochemicals — grew mostly because of increased exports that benefited from the falling dollar, according to the comptroller's office. Petrochemical industry growth stimulated plant expansions, which generated construction and engineering activity.

From August 1987 to August 1988, Houston non-farm employment rose by 2.6 percent, or 36,300 jobs. All other major Gulf Coast cities also had job gains, including 2,300 in Corpus Christi and 1,700 in Brazoria.

Among events helping the East Texas economy were the dollar's lower value and a trade agreement on Canadian timber imports, the article said. The Longview-Marshall area gained the most jobs in East Texas, with total employment up by 1,700, or 2.6 percent.

The Plains region's economy also was helped by a manufacturing resurgence. The falling value of the U.S. dollar helped apparel, electronics and plastics manufacturers, the report said. Farmers also received good prices for cotton and beef, and the region saw an increase in oilfield equipment manufacturing because of oil prices holding relatively steady.

Employment rose or remained stable in every major city in the Plains, the comptroller's office said.

Lubbock added the largest number of jobs, with employment up by 2,900, or 3.2 percent. Midland had the most rapid rebound, as non-farm employment grew 3.5 percent, or by 1,500 jobs. Abilene's employment was up 3 percent, by 1,500 new jobs. Odessa gained 1,200 jobs, or 2.8 percent.

Employment improved at a slower pace in the Metroplex — including Fort Worth-Arlington, Sherman-Denison and Dallas — and the Central Corrido, including Austin, Waco and San Antonio.

"These regions continued to suffer from weaknesses in the construction, banking and real estate industries," the report said.

Pillsbury to spin off Burger King

N.Y. Times News Service

CHICAGO — The Pillsbury Co. on Monday became the latest major corporation to announce a restructuring of its businesses and finances in the face of a takeover threat.

The Minneapolis-based food-and-restaurant giant, which is facing an unwanted $5.2 billion bid from a British conglomerate, said that it would spin off to shareholders its ailing Burger King subsidiary and would have Burger King borrow heavily to pay shareholders a special cash dividend.

Under the plan, Burger King franchisees would gain a greater say in the company's management.

The moves by Pillsbury come about three weeks after it formally rejected the $60-a-share cash offer from Grand Metropolitan PLC, a London-based food and distilling concern.

The actions provide another illustration of how big American corporations are responding vigorously to takeover bids, either announced or expected.

In recent months, four other large corporations — Macmillan, Kraft, Interco, and Sears, Roebuck — have all announced their intention to restructure their businesses or to make special payouts to shareholders in response to what they perceive as takeover threats.

In some cases, the maneuvers have staved off a takeover, while in others raiders have still managed to prevail.

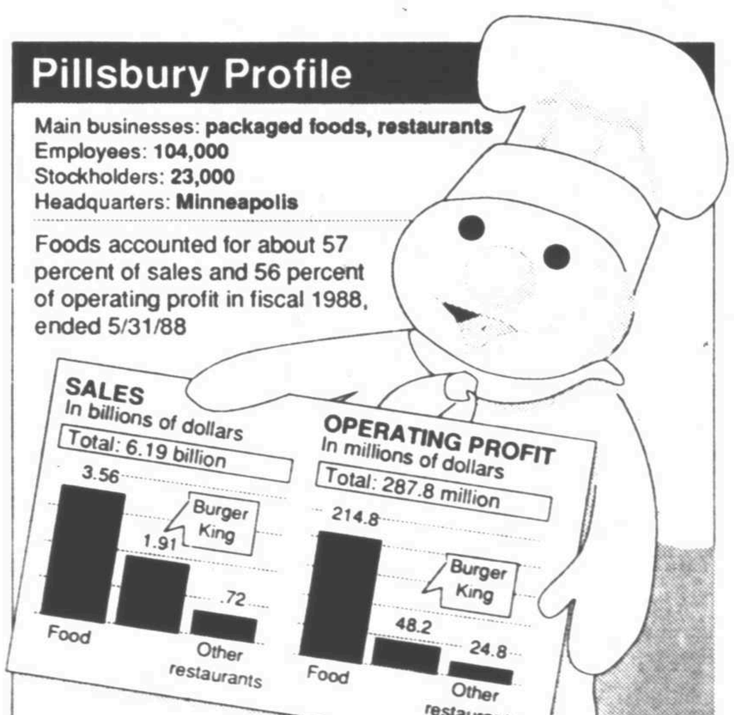

A Pillsbury adviser, who requested anonymity, said the overriding goal of the Pillsbury plan was to give shareholders a total package — Pillsbury stock, new Burger King stock, and any special dividends they might receive — that would be worth more than Grand Met's $60-a-share bid.

But industry analysts, pointing out that Pillsbury provided only limited details about the plan, promptly questioned the company's intentions, and some said they believed Pillsbury was actually maneuvering to get a higher offer from Grand Met.

According to the Pillsbury adviser, the company's executives believe the spinoff of Burger King into a separately traded company would, in effect, result in a higher market value for that operation.

Pillsbury executives indicated they were still opposed to selling out to Grand Met.

They said they had been instructed by Pillsbury directors to continue examining alternatives to the Grand Met bid, including the payment of a second special dividend.

Safeway switch set

Midland shoppers will have two new supermarkets to shop at come Wednesday.

That's when the city's two Safeways will reopen as Furr's Supermarkets, completing a year-long acquisition effort.

"This is similar to what we did in New Mexico, when we changed some Furr's stores to Safeway because their distribution center was closer," explained Bob Hurmence, vice president of public relations for the Lubbock-based Furr's. "The stores in Midland are closer to our distribution center."

In a telephone interview, Hurmence said the changes would be mostly internal, involving changes in computer systems and cash registers, and adding some new in-house products to the shelves. He said there would be little, if any change in personnel, because most of the personnel changes have been accomplished over the past year.

NATURAL GAS

Austin-Boston gas alliance set

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Sharp

An unlikely energy alliance between two diametric regions of the nation will be forged Thursday at a meeting of the Texas-New England Natural Gas Conference in Boston, according to Texas Railroad Commissioner John Sharp.

Known informally as the "Austin-Boston" connection the conference of producers and consumers will consist of 10 representatives from the Texas energy industry and 10 New England representatives, and will focus on an agenda of mutual concerns to be presented at a Natural Gas Summit set for November 29-30 at the University of Houston.

Sharp, who with Massachusetts Congressman Joe Kennedy is a co-sponsor of the effort to match the environmental concerns of New England with Texas production, said the conference would also review efforts made by various groups within the "connection" to develop a national energy policy in which natural gas is the cornerstone.

"Natural gas should be the cornerstone of a national energy policy," said Sharp. "By increasing its use across the United States, we decrease our reliance on foreign oil, and begin to address serious pollution problems such as acid rain. We can also create new jobs for Texans."

Among the specifics expected to be reviewed at the conference are:

- the role of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission in streamlining regulations to increase pipeline capacity into New England;
- the deregulation of natural gas;
- tax incentives to drill more wells and increase reserves of natural gas;
- the role of natural gas as a transportation fuel, and incentives to encourage the conversion of vehicles to natural gas use;
- impending clean air legislation and the need to make Congress aware of natural gas as an option in cleaning up air pollution.

"We must have a broader view toward energy, a nationwide dialog that emphasizes the common interests of all parts of the country," Sharp said. "We must bury the 'us-against-them' mentality that has for so long blocked attempts to solve our energy problems."

On July 4, this year, Sharp, at the invitation of Rep. Kennedy, led a contingent of 100 Texas producers to Boston for a two-day meeting with New England gas companies and consumer groups. The purpose of the meetin was to explore the possibility of forming a coalition between the two regions, which have traditionally been at odds on energy matters.

At that meeting Kennedy told the gathering that Texas had a product (natural gas) that could clean up the air pollution problems of the Northeast, and that an energy coalition of the regions would be benefit of both.

Church's rejects Popeye

Popeye won't quit pursuit

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The board of directors of Church's Fried Chicken said a $290 million takeover bid by rival Popeyes Famous Fried Chicken and Biscuits won't fly and rejected it as inadequate.

The Church's board announced Monday the Popeyes offer was not right for the San Antonio-based company, which has been struggling through a tough economy and shuffling of top management.

"The price that they gave us was inadequate," said Ernest Renaud, Church's president and chief executive officer.

Church's, the country's second-largest fried chicken restaurant chain behind Kentucky Fried Chicken, had considered the $8 per share offer from Popeyes' parent company, A. Copeland Enterprises Inc. of New Orleans, for two weeks.

Church's, which also announced a shareholder protection plan that would make a hostile takeover more difficult, said it would file a counterclaim in Louisiana federal court to stop Popeyes from pursuing the takeover offer.

Church's rejection did not ruffle Popeyes' feathers, said company spokesman Mark McKinnon.

"We are disappointed. We still want a friendly deal and would sign a confidentiality agreement to get more information about the company," McKinnon said. "The bottom line is we are not going away. Our offer still stands."

Church's officials also have filed motions in federal court in San Antonio seeking a declaratory judgment confirming the validity of the shareholder rights plan.

The shareholder rights plan, commonly known as a poison pill, enables Church's shareholders to sharply increase their holdings in the company in the event a hostile bidder acquires a stake of 20 percent or more, and to buy at a discount stock in the hostile bidder if it wins control of Church's. Such plans are aimed at making a hostile buyout prohibitively expensive.

"This is a program that's designed not to prevent a takeover, but to encourage a potential buyer to negotiate properly for the benefit of the shareholder," Renaud said.

Midlander named to state chamber post

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

Fuller

Midland's Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs has spent much of its nearly three years building an extensive business network, and the results continue to pay off.

Through its networking, the MBCE has made a name for itself across the state, allowing it to play a large part in the formation of the new Texas Association of Black Chambers of Commerce. In fact, the statewide organization elected Robbyne Fuller, MBCE president, as its vice president at its final organizational meeting in Dallas last month.

Fuller told members at Monday's meeting that officers have been elected, the bylaws written and approved, and a proposal is being written to obtain funding from the Texas Department of Commerce.

"There are 20 minority chambers in Texas and they will be asked to join," Fuller told the group. The organization will hold four meetings a year and an annual convention that is expected to attract between 800 and 1,000 attendees.

The TABCC's first slate of officers include Tracy McDaniels of Austin, president; Fuller; Odell Crawford of Odessa, secretary; William Toliver of Waco, treasurer; and Billy King of Abilene, parliamentarian.

Guest speaker Chuck Clarkson discussed the Midland Boys and Girls Club Inc. He told the members that the club currently has 600 members, 200 of which are girls. The make-up is 60 percent Hispanic, 30 percent Black and about 10 percent Anglo. "Where we're located, at 110 E. New Jersey, we have a potential market of 3,000," he pointed out.

Noting that the idea in the past has been to offer recreational activities to keep the kids off the street, Clarkson said the club is now trying to add educational activities. "If we can get them in the door with recreation, then we can work on their minds," he said. He added that the club recently received a grant from the Abell-Hanger Foundation to purchase some computers.

Oil prices fall below $14

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil prices retreated below the $14 barrier this morning, falling to $13.82 at mid-morning, down 24 cents from Monday's close.ts.

Monday on the New York Mercantile Exchange, the December contract for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, closed at $14.06 a barrel, up 2 cents. The contract increased 14 cents on Friday.

Interest was largely focused on gasoline contracts, with the December contract for unleaded gasoline gaining 0.91 cent to settle at 47.25 cents a gallon, after rising 1.14 cents on Friday.

Among other refined petroleum products traded on the exchange, the December contract for wholesale home heating oil, which fell 0.24 cent on Friday, was up 0.05 cent to 44.13 cents a gallon.

Peter Beutel, an energy analyst with Elders Futures Inc., said that while technical factors continued to dominate trading in crude and heating oil, there was fundamental buying for gasoline.

"We're seeing increased demand stimulated by lower prices and less refining capacity ...," he explained.

Dollar dealers await election outcome

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was slightly lower but stable against most major currencies in lethargic European trading this morning as the market awaited the outcome of the U.S. presidential election.

Gold prices rose.

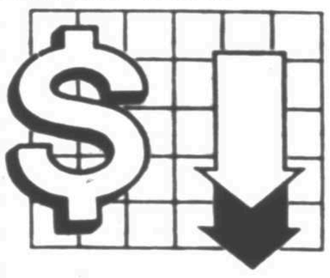

Dealers said the market was focused almost exclusively on the election, leaving little room for other factors to influence the dollar.

They predicted that if Vice President George Bush is elected as is expected, the dollar would fall by a few pfennigs.

"I can imagine that the dollar will drop to 1.75 marks and then we'll have to see at what point the central banks step in," said a dealer at a large Frankfurt bank.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell 0.34 yen to a closing 124.73 yen. Later, in London, it was quoted at a higher rate of 125.25 yen.

In London, the dollar fell against the British pound. It cost $1.7780 to buy one pound, more expensive than $1.7755 late Monday.

Other mid-morning dollar rates in Europe, compared with late Monday:

—1.4950 Swiss francs, down from 1.4965

—6.0815 French francs, unchanged

—2.0060 Dutch guilders, down from 2.0148

—1,324.50 Italian lire, down from 1,327.75

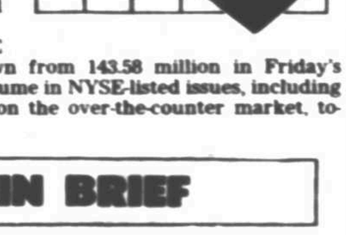

—1.2330 Canadian dollars, down from 1.2374

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $422 a troy ounce, up slightly from a late bid price of $421.75 on Monday. At mid-morning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $421.85.

In Zurich, gold rose and was trading at a mid-morning bid $422.05 compared with $420.65 late Monday.

Silver bullion prices rose on the London market, where the metal was trading at a mid-morning bid price of $6.48 a troy ounce, compared with Monday's $6.45.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices tumbled in light trading Monday as weary investors awaited the outcome of the presidential election.

The Dow Jones Industrial average lost 21.16 points to close the day at 2,124.64.

In the broader market, declining issues outpaced advances by nearly 4 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 1,200 issues down, 314 up and 444 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the NYSE came to 133.87 million shares, down from 143.58 million in Friday's session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trading at regional exchanges and on the over-the-counter market, totaled 171.01 million shares.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Sears cuts advertising, trims inventory

NEW YORK — Top executives of Sears, Roebuck & Co. said Monday that it would save about $200 million under its new lower-price policy by reducing advertising, trimming inventory and streamlining its warehouse distribution system.

Japanese toymaker apologizes for Sambo doll

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A Japanese toymaker is donating more than $250,000 in toys to poor children in San Francisco as a apology for selling Little Black Sambo dolls in Japan.

Sanrio Toy Co., whose U.S. operations are based here, also has stopped making the Sambo character and two similar black-faced toys.

Sanrio came under attack in July when The Washington Post carried a story describing the popularity in Japan of black caricatures based on Little Black Sambo, a children's book figure created by British author Helen Bannerman in 1898.

Americans spending more on cigarettes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite a decline in smoking, annual spending by Americans on cigarettes is climbing and probably will continue to do so through the rest of this century, says an Agriculture Department economist.

"Manufacturers will face falling domestic volume and will need to raise prices to maintain profits," Verner Grise said Monday.

Grise said that in addition to federal and state taxes, "a growing number of local jurisdictions are looking to the same revenue source" of cigarettes.

Drexel said talking with Howard Baker

WASHINGTON (AP) — Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., the embattled Wall Street investment firm, has been negotiating with former White House aide Howard H. Baker Jr. about becoming its chairman, The Washington Post reported today.

Drexel is the subject of a massive civil-fraud case and the target of a federal grand jury probe.

The Post, citing sources it did not identify, reported that some senior Drexel executives hoped Baker's arrival would persuade Manhattan U.S. Attorney Rudolph W. Giuliani not to name the firm in an expected racketeering indictment.

Originally completed in the Devonian formation, the No. 108 Jones was reentered and retested to flow 15 barrels of crude, 20 Mcfd and no water on a 24/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 350 psi. The well flowed from perforations 11,120 to 11,134 ft., which had been treated with 40,000 gallons of frac. Gas-oil ratio is 1,333.33:1.

Scheduled as an 11,280 ft. wildcat workover, the well was plugged back to 11,513 ft. from original depth of 12,450 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,737.5 ft., include the Spraberry at 7,643 ft., Dean at 8,933, Strawn at 10,435, Atoka Lime at 10,660, Mississippian at 11,456, and Woodford at 11,524 ft. Pay was topped at 11,116 ft.

According to Clarkson, the club tries to give a lot of encouragement, awards and rewards. The group has scheduled its first recognition and awards banquet for Dec. 6 at Karen's in the NCNB Building. Guest speaker will be D.D. Lewis, former member of the Dallas Cowboys.

In other business, Fuller reported that she and her husband James are busy recruiting for the Excel Youth project, and continue to meet with the project's advisory board.

James Fuller, vice president for education and media affairs, said the Jubilee task force is considering combining the chamber's third anniversary and Jubilee celebrations in 1989. He also discussed the United States Postal Service Women's Program, which requested participation in National Women's History Month next March.

"This is an opportune time to address the women in our community and their various social, economic and religious roles," he stated. "It's also a tremendous opportunity to meet with some of the community's other organizations."

SAFEWAY

Furr's Inc. acquired Safeway's 59-store El Paso division in October 1987 when the division was sold to raise capital to pay off $4 billion in debts assumed when the investment group Kohlbert, Kravis, Roberts & Co. initiated a leveraged buyout in 1986. KKR currently is involved in the battle for RJR Nabisco.

Final approval of the purchase by the Federal Trade Commission was not gained until Furr's arranged to sell 12 stores to the Jaynes Group, a corporation organized by former Safeway employees and headquartered in El Paso. The 12 stores involved in the sale were located in Fort Stockton and Pecos, and in Almagordo, Artesia, Clovis, Espanola, Hobbs, Las Vegas, Lovington, Portales, Roswell and Silver City, N.M. That purchase was completed in June.

"This changeover is the culmination of a process that began in October 1987," Hurmence said.

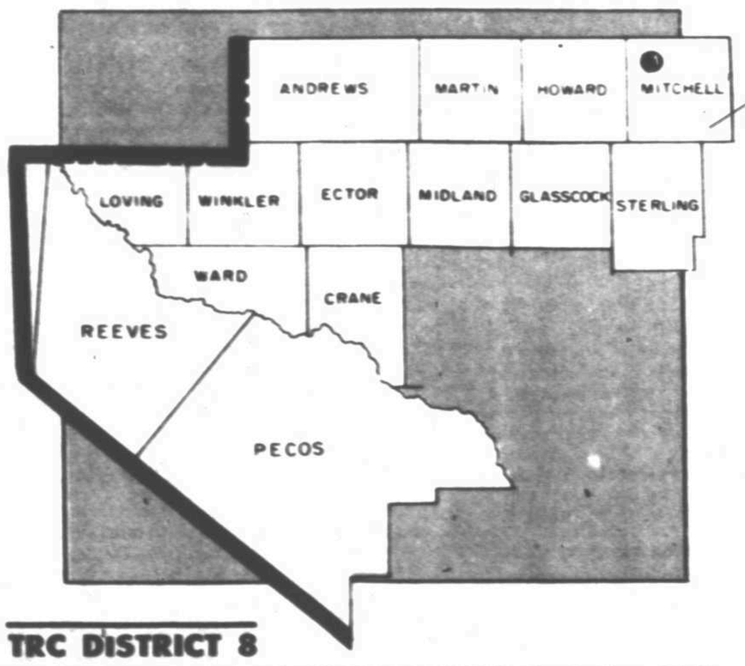

Consumer debt grows slightly in September

Enron sells properties to American Exploration

HOUSTON (SWN) — Enron Oil & Gas Co., a subsidiary of Enron Corp., and American Exploration Co. have signed a letter of intent for American Exploration to purchase certain of Enron's gas properties in the Sawyer (Canyon) Field area in Sutton, Schleicher and Edwards counties, Texas, for $120 million in cash. The purchase, which is subject to negotiation of a purchase and sale agreement, is expected to close prior to the end of 1988.

Supreme Court upholds tax on offshore income

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled unanimously today that states may tax some income from oil and natural gas extracted from the Outer Continental Shelf.

The justices upheld an Iowa tax, challenged by Shell Oil Co., that is imposed on that portion of a company's income derived from doing business in Iowa.

Justice Thurgood Marshall, writing for the court, said the state levy does not violate a 1953 federal law authorizing exploration and production of Outer Continental Shelf oil and gas.

"We reject Shell's argument that Congress intended ... to prohibit the inclusion, in a constitutionally permissible apportionment formula, of income from Outer Contintental Shelf oil and gas," Marshall said.

He said the law only prohibits a state adjacent to such offshore land from taxing that land directly. Nothing in the law bans a state from imposing a tax such as Iowa's limited to that portion of a company's income derived from selling Outer Continental Shelf oil and gas within that state.

The Outer Continental Shelf is underwater land more than three miles off the shore of any state. The land is owned by the federal government and leased to private companies.

Today's ruling upheld a 1987 decision by the Iowa Supreme Court.

The Reagan administration said it agreed with the state court ruling and urged the U.S. Supreme Court to decide in Iowa's favor.

The Justice Department said the Iowa case presented a good opportunity for the high court to resolve the dispute over a state's authority to tax a multi-state activity.

The Iowa tax on multi-state transactions uses a formula called the unitary method to determine what a company must pay the state.

The unitary method, used by many states, allows Iowa to claim as its share of taxable income the fraction of corporate income that equals the company's gross sales in Iowa divided by the company's total sales.

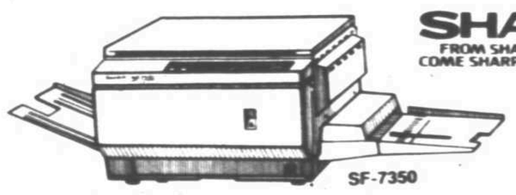

The case is Shell Oil vs. Iowa, 87-984.

ONEOK selling reserves for $52 million

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — ONEOK Inc. will sell more than half of its oil and gas reserves to a unit of Mustang Energy Corp. of Oklahoma City for $52 million, according to an agreement announced Monday.

ONEOK's exploration subsidiary is to sell the reserves, located primarily in Oklahoma, Texas and six other states, to Mustang Fuel by Dec. 15, said Bill Van Meter, president of ONEOK's Energy Cos. division.

Van Meter said a work force reduction will be necessary because of the sale, but the exact number of employees involved has not been decided. The Energy Cos. division employs about 65 people, most of them in Tulsa.

Chinese teams work to reach remote area hit by quake

BEIJING (AP) — Military rescue teams and doctors today worked to reach a remote and mountainous southern region where the government said China's worst earthquake in 12 years had killed more than 900 people.

An employee at the Ministry of Civil Affairs told the British Broadcasting Corp. and other reporters today that the death toll from Sunday's quake had reached 939. The quake registered 7.6 on the Richter scale, indicating a temblor of tremendous and devastating strength.

However, the ministry later denied issuing the figure, apparently because it had been issued without permission. Other government offices in Beijing and the afflicted province, Yunnan, refused to answer questions about the quake, effectively imposing a news blackout.

Sun Shaocheng of the ministry's emergency rescue office said he could only confirm state-run radio's earlier report that more than 600 people were killed.

"The number is climbing," he said, adding that he had no new figures.

The State Seismology Bureau said there were 40 aftershocks in the stricken sub-tropical area, the strongest measuring 7.2.

The quake was centered in Yunnan's heavily forested Lancang and Menglian counties, about 240 miles southwest of the provincial capital of Kunming and just inside the border with Burma.

Many of the casualties are believed to be from the Lahu minority, a Tibetan-Burmese hill people who are mainly subsistence farmers and hunters. They have their own language and are Buddhist.

Yunnan, with a land area nearly as large as California, has a population of more than 34 million. Lahus in the province number about 300,000. Lancang's population is about 30,000.

Most of the region's mud and wood homes are built on stilts because of its heavy rains and would have little chance of surviving a major quake.

A quake of 7.6 on the Richter scale would cause severe damage in a populated area. The scale is a gauge of energy released by an earthquake, with a reading of 7.0 ten times as powerful as a 6.0, which is also capable of inflicting heavy damage.

The official Xinhua News Agency has not issued updates on the quake since reporting 37 dead and more than 100 injured late Monday. The agency said the quake destroyed most of the houses in Lancang and Menglian counties. Buildings were destroyed in 14 surrounding counties, it said.

A Xinhua reporter in Kunming who would not give his name said rescue teams, doctors, food and supplies had reached the stricken area, but a delegation dispatched from Beijing led by State Councilor Song Jian had yet to arrive.

The reporter said the area had ample food and water supplies but its main road link to the outside world, rendered impassable by quake damage, was still under repair.

Efforts to reach Lancang by telephone were unsuccessful and officials in Kunming claimed they knew nothing about developments in the stricken area.

The death figure of 939 would be China's highest since July 28, 1976, when 242,000 people were killed in the northeast China city of Tangshan in the nation's worst natural disaster in modern times.

That quake measured 7.8 on the Richter scale.

The last major quake was on Aug. 23, 1985, when a 7.4 temblor killed 71 people and injured 125 in the far western Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region.

A quake measuring 5.0 occurred Oct. 15 in southern Yunnan, which is hit frequently by earth tremors, but there were no reports of casualties.

Skip roars into South China Sea

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Typhoon Skip roared into the South China Sea today after killing at least 19 people and forcing thousands to flee their homes in a nation still reeling from a storm that killed hundreds last month.

Skip's center passed about 100 miles south of Manila, sparing the capital from the high winds and flooding that Typhoon Ruby brought two weeks ago.

But officials said Skip triggered tornadoes, landslides and widespread flooding across part of the country's midsection known as the "typhoon belt" — the central Visayas islands and the Bicol Peninsula of Luzon island.

The government weather service said that at mid-morning Skip was about 150 miles southwest of Manila. Maximum sustained winds, clocked at 108 mph when Skip hit the islands Monday, weakened today to about 93 mph as the storm crossed the Visayas, the weather service said.

Reports of damage and casualties from Typhoon Skip were sketchy because of poor communications to the affected areas.

The Social Services Department said at least 400,000 people were "affected" by the typhoon, meaning their homes or property were damaged or destroyed. It said most were on Leyte Island, which was without electricity because Skip's winds blew down power lines.

Telephone operators in Manila said all lines to Leyte were down today.

Residents, forced to abandon their homes following the flooding of low-lying areas in Taguig, a Manila suburb, line up to receive medical treatment from the military today. The evacuees, temporarily housed in a gymnasium, fled their homes when they were flooded by Typhoon Skip.

The Office of Civil Defense said seven children were killed in flooding late Monday in the Manila suburb of Pasig, where floodwaters from Typhoon Ruby have still not receded.

The Red Cross said at least six people were killed Monday in Camarines Sur province on the Bicol Peninsula. They included three bodies recovered from a landslide in Pasacao about 210 miles southeast of Manila in Camarines Sur. Twenty other people were missing and believed buried in the slide.

The Red Cross said at least two other children died when a tornado triggered by Skip tore through another town in Camarines Sur. One person drowned elsewhere in Camarines Sur, the Red Cross said.

On Panay island, the government's Office of Civil Defense said five people drowned and a sixth was electrocuted in a storm-related incident.

Government officials said more than 3,000 people were left homeless on Cebu island and altogether 20,000 were "affected" by the storm. Shelters were set up in schools and churches to care for the homeless.

On Mindoro island, the Red Cross said 80 percent of San Jose, a city of about 70,000 people, was under water today.

Skip came ashore early Monday on Samar island, 410 miles southeast of Manila, and moved across the islands of Masbate, Romblon, Tablas and Mindoro.

Departmental spokeswoman Teresita Padua estimated damage on Leyte alone at about $400,000.

In Manila, the government ordered schools closed today. Most domestic flights from the Manila airport were canceled but Philippine Airlines said service would be restored by tonight.

The typhoon passed well south of the six American military installations, including Clark Air Base and the Subic Bay naval base, where damage was reported minimal.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Hirohito's condition remains unstable

TOKYO (AP) — Emperor Hirohito's condition worsened today when his blood pressure plummeted and his temperature soared, but later the frail monarch showed a slight improvement, the Imperial Household Agency reported.

Hirohito, 87, suffered what appeared to be his worst crisis since he fell ill Sept. 19 with internal bleeding. His temperature, normally 95.9 degrees, soared to 102.2 degrees this afternoon. But at 8:30 p.m., it had dropped to 99.1 degrees, the agency said.

His blood pressure remained dangerously low, at 76 over 40. In the morning it had been 126 over 60 but dropped to 68 over 30, a level that can cause brain damage if not raised.

Agency spokesman Kenji Maeda said Hirohito remained conscious but had continued to discharge blood, and doctors were standing by to give more blood transfusions.

Japanese Broadcasting Corp. said Hirohito today received an emergency transfusion of 1.26 pints of blood. The emperor has received 41.14 pints of blood since he first coughed up blood seven weeks ago.

Jew, 2 Arabs die in Israel

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Palestinian revolt claimed victims on both sides when an Arab worker stabbed an Israeli soldier to death and was himself killed, and Israeli troops shot and killed a Palestinian woman in a separate clash.

Cpl. David Danieli, 28, a teacher from the coastal town of Ashkelon, was on army reserve duty guarding a Jewish cooperative farm in the occupied West Bank when he was killed Monday by a 21-year-old Palestinian worker.

The farm, Massua Moshav, is 26 miles northeast of Jerusalem and about one mile from the Jordanian border. It relies on the day labor of about 100 Palestinian workers to cultivate bananas, grapes, dates and flowers.

Residents of the farm said the young Palestinian approached the soldier and demanded back wages of about $100, but the soldier asked to see identification papers before letting the worker into the farm.

At that point, the witnesses said, the worker shouted "Allahu Akbar" — Arabic for "God is Great" — then stabbed the soldier repeatedly. A Jewish farmer shot and killed the assailant moments later, they said.

Israeli prisons criticized

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's Supreme Court today criticized the army for overcrowded conditions at the Ketziot tent prison and for failing to expedite judicial review for 1,500 detainees jailed there without trial.

But the three-judge panel rejected an appeal for release by 14 detainees, only five of whom are still held.

The court upheld the army's right to imprison Palestinians from the occupied territories in Israel despite Geneva conventions against transferring prisoners across borders.
