E. O. Lowgren, who has occupied the front of the Hamer concrete building since the fire last fall, has moved his shoe and boot shop to the office in the Hankins-Riley building, formerly occupied by F. M. Chase. Mr. Chase now has an office in the telephone building with the Aurora Record Association.

Schreiner-Hodges Co. have moved their office from the front of the store in a position near the center, and have made the office about twice its original size. The shelving and counters of the grocery department will be extended to the front, filling the east side of the building.

The Hamer concrete building is being rapidly put in order for the new grocery that will open on April 1st. The building is being celled, the partitions taken out, and a warehouse will be cut off in the rear of the building.

The old warehouse, formerly livery stable and truck depot, owned by T. M. Hodges and located south of the square, is being moved. Part of the building is to be used for goat sheds on Mr. Hodges farm and the most substantial part, some 15x35 feet has been sold to the Furniture store and will be moved to the rear of the Masonic building, where it will be used as a warehouse by Messrs. SAN ANTONIO MEN MAKE ICE PLANT PROPOSITION.

Last Friday, Messrs. Lee Dekle and W. K. Snow of San Antonio were here to take up a proposition of an ice plant for Junction, with the business men.

A representative number of business men met in the office of Mr. Riley at the Junction State Bank and heard the proposition that the San Antonio gentlemen had to make for establishing a six ton ice plant in Junction that would be ready to take care of the demand this summer.

After going into the matter, most of those present went with Messrs. Dekle and Snow to look over some proposed sites for the plant, and a satisfactory one was found that could be purchased at a fair price. The necessary funds for the erection of the plant were met by a number of the business houses and individuals Monday, when Messrs. J. A. Heyman and J. N. Hodges circulated subscription for this purpose.

The deal is being held up for a few days pending the working out of the details of the agreement and more complete account of the matter will be given next week.

FIRST OFFICERS OF KIMBLE COUNTY.

J. A. Browning, one of the early settlers in this county, and present County Treasurer of Kimble County, has furnished us with a list of the first county officers.

The county was organized in 1876 from Bexar County, and named for Henry Kimble.

The first officials are as follows: Judge, William Potter; Sheriff, Frank Latta; Tax Assessor, W. P. Gilliland; Surveyor, M. J. Denman; Treasurer, N. Q. Patterson and Clerk, E. K. Kountz.

Porter Creek, that runs into Santa Llano a few miles above Junction, was named for William Potter; Frank Latta is the father of Oscar Latta, who was the sheriff of the county a few years ago; Mr. Denman was an uncle of H. G. Denman of the Junction State Bank; N. Q. Patterson was the father of N. C. Patterson and E. K. Kountz was the father of J. C. Kountz.

So far as we are able to learn, Messrs. Denman, Patterson and Kountz are the only near relatives of any of the first officials.

The Commissioners were: Precinct 1, J. R. Steffey; Precinct 2, Felix Burton; Precinct 3, Henry Pearl and Precinct 4, A. Van Court. Justice of the Peace, Precinct 1, was J. D. Seville.

Any reader who knows of the whereabouts of any of these first officers of the county, if any are still living, will confer a favor on The Eagle by sending in the information, which will be published.

LONDON ORGANIZES COMMERCIAL BODY.

That the business men and citizens generally of London are wakening up to the needs of organized effort to place their little town on the map and to further their best interests, is evidenced by the fact that on Tuesday of this week, they organized a Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Cargill of the Brady Chamber of Commerce, while on his way to Junction, stopped there for a short while and after talking with several of the

BRADY COMMERCE SECRETARY HERE.

Wm. D. Cargill, secretary of the Brady Chamber of Commerce was in Junction Tuesday night and a part of Wednesday.

Mr. Cargill was here in the interest of a plan to secure the co-operation of towns in the counties in that section of the State surrounding Brady in a "Heart of Texas" district of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce. At the recent district convention, plans were partially worked out to divide the area covered by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce into eleven districts, of which this proposed one is number three.

At this meeting Mr. Cargill had a district approved, that would be known as the "Heart of Texas," including Burness, Coleman, Brown and Comanche Counties on the north, Kerr, on the south, Kimble on the west and San Saba and Llano on the east.

One of the purposes of this sectional organization is the benefits that will result from the co-operation of the different chambers of commerce, principally from an advertising or publicity standpoint.

The matter was placed before the Junction Chamber of Commerce directors Wednesday afternoon and received their endorsement.

The slogan, "The Heart of Texas," will be used and all towns will be urged to make the best of it by having the map of Texas, with the heart inserted, to cover this section, on their stationery, and in all advertising literature and newspaper articles that are written for the public.

Mr. Cargill is very enthusiastic chamber of commerce worker, and is a live wire in his line of work. He was in Menard Monday and went from there to Kerrville.

"BOB WHITES" RECEIVED TO RE-STOCK COUNTRY.

Twelve pairs of "bob whites" or quail as they are generally called in this country, were received by Deputy Game Warden W. W. Taylor this week and were distributed in the county, being turned loose at the following places: Beasley ranch, on the Divide; Maddox and Quisenberry ranches on Gentry; John Cossett ranch on North Llano and Tom Jones ranch on Main Llano. Owners of these several ranches assured Mr. Taylor that they would make every effort to protect these quail and their offspring, and this shipment, which direct out of Old Mexico, will help to re-stock this country.

There are a few covies here and there in the county, and by proper protection from the land owners, they will again be plentiful in a few years.

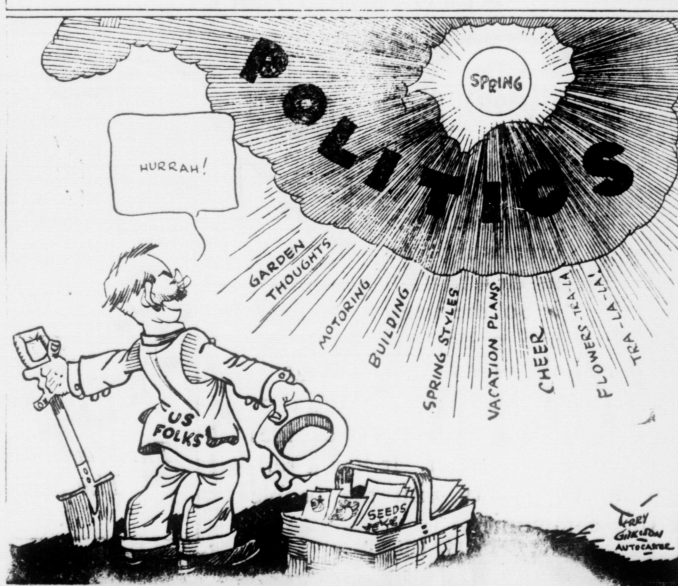

The expense of getting these birds here was met by the Game, Fish and Oyster Commission, and was about $2 a bird.

representative business men, and finding that they desired such an organization, kindly agreed to assist them in the initial steps of the organization.

At this first meeting, G. Lewis was elected president; W. W. Barrett vice president; and Ernest Amaon secretary. The directors, elected were: Claude Weaver, French Cummins, W. L. Amaon, J. J. Ake and J. W. Deering.

Fire protection, highway improvement, tourist park, lumber yard, fishing grounds and a bank are among the things that they will undertake.

COMANCHE WAR TRAIL.

(By Carlisle Graham Raht, in Texas Highway Bulletin.)

For many years before the advent of American settlers in Texas, the Comanche Indians had been accustomed to make raids into Mexico, for the purpose of securing horses, cattle and loot of various kinds, including women and scalps.

At the close of the Texas Revolution, the Mexican Government made an attempt to secure the good will and co-operation of the Indians in making war on the American settlers. But after the big Comanche raid of 1840, which reached almost to the coast and ended so disastrous ly for the Indians at the battle of Plum Creek, the Comanches felt very bitter against the Mexicans and renewed their raids with greater daring and ferocity than ever before. They penetrated 200 miles south of the Rio Grande and carried terror and destruction into the heart of Mexico. Afterwards, for 30 years or more, their raids into Mexico were made with great regularity and with little or no resistance on the part of the Mexicans. To the Comanche mind, the easiest way to fame and fortune was to participate in these raids, where horses, cattle, food, clothes, arms, etc., were to be had for the taking; not to mention that with the poor people kneeling before them and begging for life, the taking of scalps was dead easy.

A visitor to a Comanche camp in the forties, after the return of a raiding party from Mexico, was offered all kinds of property stolen in Mexico and at remarkably low prices. One Indian offered a young Mexican captive for sale for $40.00.

It is therefore not to be wondered at, as the fall drew near and rains began falling, that to the mind's eye of the Comanche there arose a vision of a raid over green prairies with plenty of water in every tank of "charco" and, on the other side of the Rio Grande—tipening crops, fat cattle, fine horses, beautiful girls, scalps, loot, etc.

So, in the month of September of each year, when the moon became full, the war parties of young, ambitious bucks began to trail across the 400 miles of wild country which lay between the Llano Estacado—the staked plains—and the homes of the "vaqueros" and farmers in Durango and Chihuahua.

For, remember that whereas the Apaches were sneaking and cowardly, the Comanches were bold and daring. Magnificent horsemen as they were, a half-wild horse taken from some herd of mustangs, a bit with a rawhide rein for bridle, and a tanned sheepskin or a patch of buffalo hide for a stirrupless saddle, the long trip over thorny plains and through stony mountains was to them a festive occasión.

With a bow of Osage orange-wood—boise d'arc—and arrows of the river reed, or the "vara dulce", slung over the shoulders in quivers of lynx hides; carrying the lance of ashwood shod with iron and resting across the saddle with the "chimarr" or shield of buffalo hide, fringed with turkey feathers; and occasionaly an old Spanish "esco-peta" with a bell-shaped muzzle, much resembling the muzzle of a trombone—a gun which shot a slug of lead as large as a quail egg—slung under the leg in a rawhide case; with a Bowie knife from Texas, or a machete from Mexico, carried anywhere room could be made, these free-booters of the plains were ready to fight any foe.

Each year, in the light of the Mexican moon—for so they came to term the September full moon—the Comanche war trail swarmed with parties of these barbaric warriors, in troops of half-dozen to a hundred or more, including outlaws from many other tribes and even renegades from Mexico, who hurried forward to the carnival of bloodshed and rapine on the south side of the Rio Grande.

The trail carried them over the southernward shoulder of the great Llano Estacado, where for a hundred miles, nothing was to be seen but the open, grassy plains tenanted only by the jack rabbit and antelope, and sentinelled by the gull and hawk, down through the terraced pass at the Castle Gap, just above the Pecos River, into the wide mesquite plains of the Pecos Crossing, on past the noted Comanche Springs into the mes-quite-topped limestone hills, then into the mountains of burnt rocks—monument of primeval fires—and over the Rio Grande into the promised land.

Here the parties diverged, each to its chosen area. One scoured the fertile valleys of the Conchos River, up to the very walls of Chihuahua City; others carried fire and lance into the confines of Durango; some went to the mines, some to the farming valleys, but most of them sought the "haciendas", where they might find horses and cattle, the great source of savage wealth.

When they went upon these raids, the faces of the warrior were painted red, sometimes they wore head dresses of buffalo skins with the horns still upon them, but generally the Comanche wore no head-dress beyond a single band or scarf tied around the forehead. In one hand, each warrior carried a long lance, daubed in red; in the other a round shield of tanned buffalo hide, with gay colors daubed, and bordered with a margin of different feathers, which, when the shield was swung, fluttered in the breeze.
The horses shared in the grotesque appearance of their riders, as they were colored a most gory red on head and tail.

Along in November or December, following, the parties began to return. The great Comanche war-trail then again presented an animated picture. A party here would be driving a herd of cattle; a party there, a troop of half-wild horses. In another band might be seen a small train of captives, "laced like Mazeppa to a Tartar of the Ukraine breed," and herded and driven in any other beast devoted to man's use. There might be a great prairie fire started by a party of raiders to

THE CITY MARKET.

But there was no way to cover or hide the Great Trail itself. It was worn deep by hoofs of countless travelers—man and beast—and was whitened by the bones of many animals. It was a great chalk line on the map of West Texas, cutting through the heart of the Big Bend.

The various tribes joining the Comanches spoke different languages, but it so happened that the Kiowas, the Utahs, the Cheyennes, the Apaches, the Comanches, each in time, learned some Spanish from his Mexican captive, while the captive in turn became a good Indian, and at the same time a good interpreter; so it came about, as has so often happened among the languages of the world, that the tongue of the vanquished became the tongue of the warrior, which in this case was Spanish. This was aided and supplemented in many ways by the sign language common to the Indians of the Spanish Southwest, so that on the trail these Indians of diverse races and tongues had a common language which was foreign to each one of them.

Among these lords of the war trail, "Tave Tave," or as he was generally called, "Bajo el Sol," the Comanche was the most noted war chief. He was distinguished for his skill in arms, for address in the battle plain; but mostly for indomitable courage. It is said that he took his name because he feared nothing "under the sun."

His mother, "old Tave Pete," was a kind of female "shaman" in her tribe. She was old—so old, the time-honored Mexicans said, that when she rode on the forays, she tied up her lower jaw by a thong passing up over her head, in order to prevent it dropping down against her throat and breast, as it otherwise would have done; yet she had great influence with her people.

The forays of the Indians in Chihuahua and Durango were most destructive to life and property. The country was being depopulated. The center of government at the City of Mexico—when there happened to be one—was entirely occupied in trying to uphold itself against hostile factions, and had no time to aid its frontier states. These states themselves were more or less divided among warring factions; all was confusion. The states were suffering both from the Comanche war-trail and, also, from the mountain Apaches, who, from their ranches, in New Mexico, Chihuahua, and the Davis Mountains in the Big Bend, descended upon the defenseless border in a separate warfare of their own. The Comanches descended upon these frontiers once a year, but the mountain Apaches—like the poor, were with them always.

In despair over the situation, the State of Chihuahua resolved to make a treaty with the Indians for that state alone. As the lesser of two evils, and also as probably being a more reliable ally, it was decided to treat with the Comanches. The treaty was made with "Bajo el Sol" as the main chief, and with other chiefs of the war trail, by which "Bajo el Sol" and his associates, for a consideration, agreed to make war on the Mescalero Apaches, and to refrain from ravaging Chihuahua, being left free, however, to raid any other Mexican states. To carry out the agreement more effectually, the Indians of the war trail moved into Chihuahua to the borders of Lake Haco. From this seat, they could more conveniently carry out the fight with the Mescalero Apaches, and at the same time harry Durango.

"While this treaty was in force, 'Bajo el Sol,' with his wife and her younger brother, was traveling near the Del Carmen Mountains, on the Rio Grande, above Boquillas, Brewster County, when they ran into a band of about thirty Mescalero Apaches. These Indians had in their possession a captive Mexican boy, by name of Domingo Porras.

"The wife of the Comanche Chief entreated him to go on and leave the Apaches unmolested. To this, 'Bajo el Sol' replied that his treaty with Chihuahua bound him to fight the Apaches wherever he met them, and he would not have it said that he feared the face of living man. So he sent on his wife and her brother, and prepared to make his lone fight against thirty Apaches.

"He tightened the cinch of his skin saddle, and examined the rawhide bits in the mouth of his horse. Then he looked to see that the point of his ash-wood spear was well set, saw that his arrows were good and in place, strung his bois d'arc bow, and placed his 'chimal' buffalo-hide in readiness.

"His preparation complete, he rode up to the Apaches and in the 'langua franca' of the Southwestern Indians, demanded the surrender of the captive boy. This was refused. The Apaches formed them that he would fight them and that they must get ready, in reply, they taunted him. He set his spear firmly under his right armpit, and charged them.

"The Apaches scattered to avoid the charge, and while they ran and dived among the bushes and rocks, Bajo el Sol shot at them with his bow and arrow. After this erratic manner, the fight continued for several hours, during which time he killed two Apaches and wounded several others. His arrows all being shot, Bajo el Sol continued the fight with his spear alone, which the Apaches, owing to the broken nature of the ground, were easily able to avoid.

"In some manner the Apaches had gained possession of an old 'escopeta,' and the owner had only one load. At last, it was planned among the Apaches that the owner of the 'escopeta' should hide behind a certain rock, while the other Indians continued to lure 'Bajo el Sol' to charge them by the side of this rock. He charged, as they intended him to do, and the Indian with the 'escopeta' came out from behind the rock just after he had passed and fired at point-blank range. The slug struck Bajo el Sol in the back of the head and he fell from his horse. Thus ended, in the foothills of the Del Carmen Mountains, the last fight of the most heroic Indian of the old Comanche War-Trail.

In 1851, Major Emory, with a small party of the boundary commission, escorted by a detachment of 15 soldier, encountered, near Ft. Stockton, a war party of Comanches and Kiowas under "Mucho Toro". They were returning from Mexico and had over 100 head of horses.

"Mucho Toro", in full dress, paid Major Emory a visit, on which occasion he displayed great humility, and exhibited conspicuously upon his breast, an immense silver cross, which he said had been given him by the Bishop of Durango, when the chief was converted to Christianity. He had, no doubt robbed some church of it. His features showed the profile of the Mexican Indian peon, but the warriors he commanded had the bold aquiline profile of the Kiowas and Comanches. He represented a type of that class of Mexicans, who, by affiliation with the wild Indians, had wrought such irremediable ruin in the northern states of Mexico.

In 1846 they overran the states of Durango and Chihuahua, cut off all regular communication and defeated, in two pitched battles, the best troops of the Mexican army. They brought back as booty over 10,000 horses and left behind them hundreds of poor murdered peons.

In 1850, such was the Mexican dread of the Comanche, that the Mexican commander at Chihuahua, hired a company of Americans, and at extravagant rates, to fight the Indians; although at that time he had a large force of Mexican regular troops in the city.

being distributed all along.

We see people buying money orders to be sent to the big mail order houses, who are making their living off the local retail merchants.

This particular one happened to be a truck driver, but that is not the case with all truck drivers, and the truck drivers are not the only examples of those who send their cash to mail order houses, then expect the home merchant to sell them on credit, to pay taxes for schools and for county government, and to give them employment.

It is a recognized fact in the financial world that expense of operating a mail order business is higher than operating any other kind of business. The mail order houses send out hundreds and thousands of catalogues and circulars; they employ hundreds of clerks, and have other expenses that any business must have, yet a great many otherwise, clear-thinking people, seem to think that the mail order house can sell cheaper because they have less expense. The facts are to the contrary. They can make a $2.98 pair of shoes look like a $5 pair and by a well worded description, can secure orders and make sales of articles that are of such low quality that if the buyer were to purchase the same article from a local merchant, he would never trade with that merchant again.

Before you send money to the larger cities, stop and see if you cannot get the same quality and price at home. See if you can ever hope to get any accommodations from these houses, or if the profits on the goods you buy will ever help you or any of your neighbors who are working for retail stores, or if it will ever help develop your own community.

Try the home merchant first.

One of the candidates for Governor of Texas said the other day that the Legislature was not responsible for extravagant government, but that the people are to blame. Having been connected with the Legislature of the State of Texas for a period of twenty years, the last twelve as a member of the House, we beg to differ with the aforesaid candidate. When Legislatures form themselves into groups, each wanting something for their particular section, and one group will say to the others, you help us and we'll help you, and thus new project after project is started to eat up the people's money, as we have seen happen time and time poem by Uncle John

Jim Linker's got a thoughtful spouse—a regular gem, and Jim declares; whenever this around the house, he's one of her special joys. She criticizes how he chooses, and hates to see his whiskers grow—She fusses lots about his eyes—she hates to see him shine, you know. She loves to see her hubby work, and bring the household linen in, but he must eat it with his fork, and not spill gravy on his shirt. She fancies if on his head there ain't the scent of new-mown hay—why, it would prefer me to death to brush my trout six times a day? Jim likes to read the paper some—of evenin's in his rockin' chair—till she suggests he get the comb, and rake the straw seed from his hair. She recommends a chilly bath each night afore he hits the hay, and considers a show of wrath, on how he shows his elbow away. I'll say they are a real pair, affectionate—an rightly mated. There wouldn't be no discord there, if she could keep Jim regulated.

again, then we feel that we know what we are talking about.
The people are to blame only to the extent that they elected the Legislators, but how in the mischief can they be blamed for voting for a man who roars from every hilltop how strong he is for economy, and when elected, goes to Austin and votes for every fool measure that carries large appropriations.—

HANDWEIGHT LAMBS
POPULAR WITH FEEDERS

The Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers' Association in its constant efforts to advance the sheep and goat industry of the State, has adopted a plan proposed by Mr. Hal Hamilton at a recent meeting of the Executive Committee at Del Rio, according to S. S. Bundy who is a member of the committee.

It was decided that in order to stimulate the increasing popularity of Texas feeder lambs, the facilities of the organization would be used to advertise them and to bring the buyer and seller of Texas sheep together.

The organization is particularly well adapted to this undertaking, the numerous inspectors that are maintained in the field will be constantly in touch with the growers, and the secretary's office at Del Rio will keep in touch with buyers.

The official publication of the Association, the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers' Magazine will publish a list, not only of lambs for sale, but sheep and goats as well, and buyers and sellers, both local and otherwise, will thus find through the office of the secretary, a medium by which their wants may be supplied.

The increasing popularity of Texas Feeder Lambs is manifest in the strong demand of the past few years for this class of stock.

Several years ago, because of unfavorable feed prices, local feeders found it necessary to ship thousands of their lambs to northern feed lots. In this way northern feeders learned that these lambs, which were principally Rambouillet, or Ram-bouillet Delaine ewes were well adapted to their feeding operations. They produced a handi-weight carcass that found much favor and one that made a good appearance in the coolers.

The retailers found that these lambs produced a maximum of choice cuts, and the consumer found that the meat of these rapidly grown lambs was more juicy and of finer texture than that of lambs of the larger mutton breeds.

Texas breeders believe that the movement of Texas Feeder Lambs to northern feed lots is just in its inception and that instead of tens of thousands, hundreds of thousands will find their way to feeders annually.

MENARD IS MAKING PROGRESSIVE MOVES

According to visitors from Menard this week, our neighboring town to the north is feeling the effects of the advent of better times.

At a recent meeting of the City Council, it was decided that a chemical engine mounted on a truck, should be purchased to add to the equipment already on hand. The Council also voted to have a fire alarm provided. Already this town has hose and carts that would be of great assistance in checking a fire in the business part of town where fire plugs are located, but the chemical engine will give added protection to the whole town, and will likely reduce the insurance rate considerably.

Messrs. Vehle and W. C. Kiehne of the local meat market are planning to have an up to date bottling works in operation by the time the season opens.

CAN'T PAY POLL TAX BY CHECK BY MAIL.

Austin, March 8.—There is at least one voter in Kimble County who has been deprived of his right to vote in any of the elections this Summer through no real fault of his, according to a ruling of the Attorney General's Department. This particular voter, who lives only 40 miles from the county seat, sent a check to the county tax collector on January 25 for $1.75 to pay for his poll tax.

Through some unexplained cause the check did not reach the collector's office until after February 1, or one day after the time for the payment of poll taxes expired.

Under this condition of affairs the county attorney of Kimble County sought an opinion from the Attorney General's Department as to whether the voter could now obtain his poll tax receipt. He was advised that the voter could not obtain a poll tax receipt at this time, as the check came too late, and besides it was pointed out the law requires poll taxes to be paid in money and in the office of the county tax collector.

SOUTH TEXAS ROAD CONFERENCE MARCH 27.

All South Texans willing to help push along South Texas highway work, are asked to meet at San Antonio, March 27. Old Spanish Trail officials, Chambers of Commerce and the civic clubs are arranging the meeting. Governor Neff and the highway commissioners and engineers will be present. Chambers of Commerce, mayors, county judges and Old Spanish Trail members are being urged to appoint and have representatives present.

All the South Texas trunklines, O. S. T. headquarters states, have had or boggy sections. Tourist agencies of the United States instruct travelers to avoid South Texas. Business travel is restricted. Yet 80 percent of every trunkline is improved or building. The Highway Department, the U. S. Road Bureau, and the state legislature, are committed to the policy of aid, but the counties must vote and pay their share. South Texans should get together in the interest of South Texas and help find ways to close these gaps and let the outside world into the territory, and let business travel flow freely.

March 27th, at San Antonio, is Dedication Day for the Old Spanish Trail zero mile stone. The Federated Women's Club will be in session and they have charge of the dedication, beginning at 2:30 p. m. Governor Neff delivers the address. The Highway Commissioners will attend. Old stage drivers who drove the trails to El Paso, San Diego, Mexico, or northward, will, with their old outfits, reproduce at the dedication, the journeys of those pioneer days. After the dedication the Road Conference will convene with the men, women, state, county and city officials present. The effort will then be to work out ways to close the gaps and help get together on all road questions for the good of all South Texas.

GETTING SOMETHING FOR NOTHING.

Every citizen should give to his community all he can of the best that is in him. If he does anything less, he is not a good citizen.

No man has the right to take a living out of his city and not put back into it something at least as valuable as that which he takes away. No man can do it and be a success. It is a universal law that we get out of anything only what we put into it. The man who makes his living off a community, who lives under the protection of its laws, who enjoys the privileges of its schools and churches and libraries and associations with the people who build them, is cheating both the community and himself if he does not do his part toward the community life.

By work alone do we develop. The man who takes and gives not, who tries to reap where he has not sown, who does not bear his part on moulding the life of his community, not only robs his fellow men of the service they have a right to expect of him, but he robs himself, stunts his own growth, both materially and spiritually.

Such a man is a parasite. He is like the mistletoe, which seems to take root in the soil like other plants, and draws its sustenance therefrom, but fastens itself upon a living tree and lives by robbing the tree of its sap. He cheats his community by taking rich treasure and giving nothing in return. He cheats himself by failure to develop his spirit of service, of work for others, of enthusiasm and activity for the common good.

"Giving" does not mean the mere paying of money. Many a civic shirk, many a deadhead, many a drone, pays his taxes and gives money to charity. "Giving" means more. It means putting at the service of the community your best thought, your time, your energy—your very self.

It does not mean partisan politics, but it does mean taking a man's part in shaping the policies and enforcing the laws of his city. It does not mean bitter sectionalism among the churches, but it does mean taking active part in whatever church has one's allegiance, and liberalism toward all others.

It brings to every man the joy of being a useful part of the life of the community, and the feeling of brotherhood with others. We know a man best by working with him. Nothing unites men so quickly and so firmly in the bonds of friendship as some big, absorbing, useful task in which they have labored hard together. And out of this comes a double blessing, for the community and for each individual who has helped build it up.—Stephenville Tribune.

RANGERS ARRESTED 245 MEN AT SAN ANTONIO.

Austin, March 7.—During the six months beginning September 1, 1923, and ending March 1, 1924, State Rangers operating in San Antonio, filed with the United States Commissioner 192 complaints charging violations of the national prohibition act; captured 107 stills; destroyed 15,400 gallons of mash and 2,140 gallons of whiskey, and arrested 245 men on charges of gambling, according to report made to Adj. Gen. T. D. Barton by Capt. B. C. Baldwin, commanding the San Antonio company of rangers.

Report of activities of the rangers for February showed the filing of thirty complaints before the United States Commissioner charging violations of the national prohibition act; capture of 17 stills; destruction of 3,215 gallons of mash and 215 gallons of moonshine whiskey, and seizure of three automobiles alleged to have been used in transporting liquor, the cars having been turned over to the Federal authorities.

In addition, the rangers are reported to have arrested seventy-eight persons charged with gaming, "either with cards or matching a cock fight." Convictions or pleas of guilty for gambling totaled seventy.

2,400 STEERS SOLD TO KANSAS MAN.

G. R. White of Brady has sold to Fred J. Brown of Longford, Kansas, 2,400 three and four-year-old steers for approximately $135,000, bringing sales since late fall by the Mann Commission Company of San Angelo to 5,700 head of cattle for around $300,000. All the cattle will be delivered in April, most of them between the 15th and 25th, for shipment to Kansas grass.

For J. W. White of Mason, 605 three and four-year-old steers were sold to Ernest Bauer of Broughton, Kansas, at $55 per head.

Chase Brothers of Kansas, bought 2,650 steers, three and four, in five West Texas counties, Walter Mann reported. Seven hundred were purchased from Lucy & Ends of Dumas, 550 from S. E. McKnight of Soper, and Frank Brandenberger of Mason. Earlier purchases by Chase Brothers, previously reported, included 600 steers from Bevans & Co., of Menard, 100 from Howard Cox of Ozona and 600 from Sam White of Weatherford, who has a ranch near Overa, in Pecos County.—San Angelo Standard.

LARGEST C. OF C. CONVENTION IS EXPECTED.

Attendance at the annual convention of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce at Brownwood in May will exceed that of all previous conventions of that organization, according to A. C. Ater of Houston, traveling passenger agent of the Santa Fe, who was in Fort Worth Saturday. His road already has arranged for nearly 100 Pullman cars, he said. San Angelo, Vernon, Plainview, Houston, Dallas and Fort Worth have arranged for special trains. Ater said that Brownwood may have 25,000 visitors during the three-day session.

On March 12 railroad passenger officials will hold a conference in Brownwood with the West Texas Chamber and with Wright Armstrong, secretary of the Brownwood Chamber of Commerce regarding traffic and caring for the crowd. It is expected that thousands of the visitors will sleep in the cars, said Ater.

but it did the work. It just seemed to cleanse the liver. Very soon I felt like new. When I found Black-Draught so easy to take and easy-acting, I began to use it in time and would not have sick headaches."

Constipation causes the system to re-absorb poisons that may cause great pain and much danger to your health. Take Thedford's Black-Draught. It will stimulate the liver and help to drive out the poisons.

QUALITY

Since our organization it has been our constant aim to handle only such lines of merchandise as would meet the demand placed on goods of the first class. Such merchandise, while probably costing a little more at first is the cheapest in the long run, because of the extra service and satisfaction that you get.

SERVICE

It is our constant effort to render courteous and prompt service to each and every customer no matter what the amount of the purchase may be. Even if you do not make a purchase from us, our employees are always ready and glad to give you any information that will be of service to you—information that they have gained from long experience, which will prove valuable to you as one of our customers.

It would be a reflection on your good judgment to undertake to tell you that we can sell you merchandise at a price that would not allow a fair profit. You know it takes money to operate any kind of business.

However, by making extensive purchases and by keeping our operating expenses at the lowest possible level, we are able to sell you standard merchandise at as low a price as you will find in any legitimate business concern.

The profits of this organization go to pay employees, to work for the benefit and upbuilding of the town, to pay taxes for county schools, etc., and whatever dividends are made goes to home people, who are our stockholders.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

On Wednesday afternoon, of March 5th, Mrs. Hugh Wilson's circle of the Baptist Woman's Missionary Society entertained with a George Washington birth day party at the pretty home of Mrs. George Braley.

American flags waved from the front porch and near the entrance a tree stump with a hatchet buried in it was suggestive of Washington's early life. During the afternoon a pleasing musical program was given.

Mrs. Martha Washington, with a retinue of her colored servants, added to the occasion. "Rastus" greeted the guests in a manner which caused much merriment.

In the dining room two tables were spread with snowy white cloths and miniature stumps, hatchets and American flags further carried out the patriotic motif. The menu, which was typical of old Southern hospitality, consisted of baked turkey and dressing, mashed potatoes, fruit salad, cranberry sauce, rolls, mock cherry pie with whipped cream, and tea and coffee. The pretty place cards were pictures of the stump of the famous cherry tree.

Each guest contributed towards Buckner's Orphan Home in the nature of money, clothes or quilts, and a goodly contribution resulted.

The Baptist ladies deserve credit for the manner in which they carry on their work of charity and at the same time mingle pleasure with work.
