Iran won't agree to oil price cuts

LONDON (AP) — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries postponed its summit until Tuesday after Iran said today it would never agree to a cut in the cartel's $34 base price and demanded Saudi Arabia slash its production to 3 million barrels daily.

The 3-million-barrel figure is the same level Iran is believed to want for itself.

Venezuelan Oil Minister Humberto Calderon Berti told reporters that the meeting scheduled for this afternoon was postponed until Tuesday morning at the request of the Iranians.

Indonesian Oil Minister Dr. Subroto said: "We are still exchanging views. We will continue bilateral and trilateral consultations today."

Asked to comment on what would happen if Iran sticks to its position on prices, Subroto said only: "If, if, if, if, if."

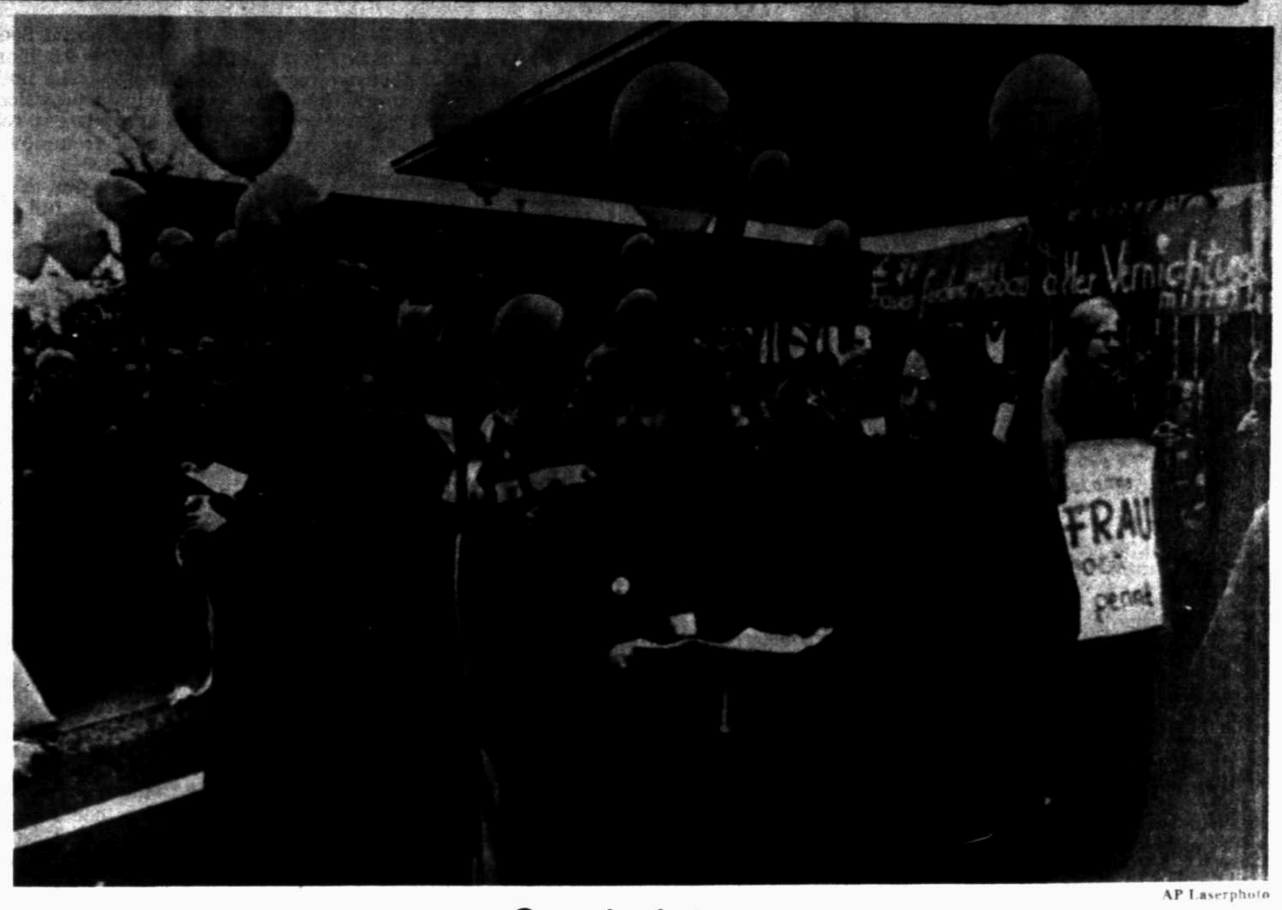

Iran's position was announced by Iranian Oil Minister Mohammad Gharazi, who told reporters that "Iran will never come down (on the base price), never." He called for Saudi Arabia to reduce its production to 3 million barrels a day, down from a current 4-5 million barrels.

"Three million for them is enough," he said.

Gharazi said production — not price — was the barrels daily and selling it for as low as $26 on the spot market. Arab Gulf members of OPEC were reported to have agreed Sunday to cut the base price to as low as $28.50 to compete with African and North Sea producers, who last month cut their prices to $30.

But informed sources said non-OPEC member Britain, the big North Sea exporter, had advised other OPEC members that a cut below $29.50 would trigger a further reduction in the North Sea price.

All 13 OPEC members have not met since price cuts last month by North Sea producers Britain and Norway and OPEC renegade Nigeria escalated the problems caused by sagging demand in a marketplace slowed by recession.

Burford status shaky, according to official

WASHINGTON (AP) — Administration officials are trying to quiet speculation that Anne McGill Burford will be fired as administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, hoping that will make it easier for her to resign gracefully.

One administration official said Sunday the president's advisers are trying to convince the president and Mrs. Burford that she must leave "without creating a storm...without pushing the president and without pushing her."

Anne Burford

The official, speaking on condition he not be named, said Reagan's advisers have adopted a strategy of "gentle persuasion," aimed at both the president and the EPA chief, with the view that "hopefully something will happen."

Reagan still supports his embattled EPA chief, but that backing, at least in private, may not be as solid as it once was, sources said.

One administration official said that White House aides spoke with Reagan about the issue Friday and "it was the first time he budged at all from the all-out support" he has offered Mrs. Burford in the face of calls from Democrats and Republicans in Congress that she resign.

Reagan was "still fairly adamant in support of her," but recognizes that "this thing is getting pretty bad," the official said Sunday.

He referred to allegations of mismanagement and wrongdoing at the EPA, centering around operation of the $1.6 billion "superfund" hazardous waste cleanup program.

Reagan, who is expected to meet with Mrs. Burford this week, said on Saturday that she can remain as EPA administrator "as long as she wants to."

"The president meant what he said...when he remarked that she could stay on as long as she likes," a high-level White House official said. "He is simply not of a mind to ask her to go. He has absolutely no plans to ask her for her resignation or to relieve her of her duties."

"Everybody wants to calm this thing down for tactical reasons," said one source. "Pressure was building up on her and putting her in a very difficult situation."

Mrs. Burford faces another "difficult situation" on Thursday, when she is scheduled to appear before one of six congressional committees investigating the EPA.

Mrs. Burford has been ordered to produce sensitive EPA documents about the "superfund" cleanup program for a House investigations subcommittee headed by Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich.

Mrs. Burford, citing Reagan's orders, previously has claimed executive privilege to withhold the documents from Congress. She was cited for contempt as a result, but has since urged Reagan to waive his claim of executive privilege and let her deliver the documents..

Mrs. Burford, meanwhile, said in Denver "I will always follow the directions of the president."

Kohl wins landslide victory

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The re-election of Chancellor Helmut Kohl's government shows West Germany "stands strongly" with its Western allies, his Christian Democratic Union said today.

In a statement issued following Kohl's landslide victory in Sunday's parliamentary election, the conservative party said the results were a "stabilizing factor" in international politics.

"The security of our country will not be gambled with," the party said.

Kohl's victory was seen as a boost for the NATO plan to deploy 572 U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Western Europe this year barring a U.S.-Soviet arms control agreement.

During the election campaign, Kohl said a vote for his party was an endorsement for NATO. He criticized opposition Social Democrat candidate Hans-Jochen Vogel for distancing himself from the missile deployment plan.

Despite the landslide victory by the pro-NATO coalition of Christian Democrats, the Christian Social Union and Free Democrats, West German voters also gave 27 parliamentary seats to the Greens, the environmentalist party, which opposes membership in the Western alliance.

Related Stories, 4C, 5C

The election marked the first time the Greens won seats in the national Parliament, although they have been represented in several state legislatures.

During a news conference today, Greens leaders vowed to use sit-ins, lie-ins and massive protests to prevent deployment of the American missiles.

Kohl's coalition won by a wider margin than expected, handing the Social Democrats their worst defeat in 22 years.

He said the parliamentary elections affirmed the policies of his "coalition of the middle," including support for NATO plans to begin stationing 108 Pershing and 96 cruise medium-range nuclear missiles here by the end of the year.

Vogel had said that, if elected chancellor, he would do everything possible to make the missile deployment unnecessary.

He told reporters Sunday he did not regret moving the party to the left on the missiles issue and contended that the Social Democrats do not need to "hang their heads."

"We will conduct a constructive opposition," said Vogel, who offered to take "personal responsibility" for the defeat.

The Greens said they would use their new status as a parliamentary party to fight Kohl's stance.

"This result is a success for all the people who are ready to fight against the weapons state," Greens leader Rainer Trampert said.

With 89.1 percent of the electorate voting, Kohl's Christian Democrats and their Bavarian allies, the Christian Social Union, won 48.8 percent of the vote. It was the biggest conservative triumph since West Germany's first chancellor, Konrad Adenauer, helped the party collect 50.2 percent of the vote in 1957.

The Social Democrats got only 38.2 percent, their worst showing since 1961

Mishap kills Midlander

GARDEN CITY — A Midland man is dead and two other Midland men were injured in a two-vehicle traffic accident on Texas Highway 158 near Garden City early Sunday morning.

Pronounced dead at the scene by Glasscock County Justice of the Peace J.E. Wooten was James A. Beckett, 47, of 4407 Erie Drive.

In stable condition this morning at Malone-Hogan Hospital in Big Spring was 19-year-old George Ramirez of Route 4, Midland. He suffered facial lacerations and a broken leg.

Released following treatment for minor injuries was 22-year-old Samuel Rodriguez, also of Route 4, Midland. He was a passenger in Ramirez's 1976 Pontiac when it and a 1977 Mack truck driven by Beckett collided almost head-on about 7 a.m. Sunday, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Ramirez was westbound and Beckett was eastbound at the time. Beckett's body was taken to the Ross Funeral Home in Sterling City.

Tradition indicates approval for MMH

By GAIL BURKE

If tradition holds true, Midland Memorial Hospital's 77-bed expansion will be approved Friday — and Parkview Hospital's plans for a 110-bed facility will be denied.

MMH has received a favorable recommendation from a state health commission hearing officer for its $15 million expansion project, according to Arlene Strickland, MMH public relations director.

Gordon Hardin, hearing officer at the Texas Health Facilities Commission, gave his recommendation to the commission Friday. Hardin recommended approval for MMH, but he gave an unfavorable recomendation for Parkview Hospital's plans for a $17 million full-service hospital. The facility, to be named Doctors Hospital of the Permian Basin, would be located in northwest Midland.

The THFC's official decision will be announced Friday.

Traditionally, the three-member commission follows the hearing officer's recommendation, according to Carol Daniels, deputy administrator of the THFC, but "they can also disagree. It can really go either way."

While Dick Liley, Parkview administrator, could not be reached for comment this morning, Ray Branson, MMH president, said the recommendation "is certainly favorable, in our opinion.

"Approximately 60 to 70 percent of the time the three-member commission agrees with and adopts the hearing officer's recommendation," Branson said.

He added that the hearing officer's recommendation was to be shipped to him today. According to Kevin Reed, MMH's attorney, the decision was based on MMH's bed-need analysis by TriBrook Group Inc., versus a similar study done by Parkview's bed-need expert.

"That's what I was told," Branson said. "We'll have to look it over and see what the recommendation actually said."

According to Branson, most of the MMH governing board members were contacted by telephone Friday about the decision.

One man at center of Stripling-Roosevelt conflict

Stripling's Washington part two

EDITOR'S NOTE: The 1930s and '40s were a period of self-examination for America as the fear of communism spread. This is the second of a six-part series on Midlander Robert Stripling's experiences amid this political climate through two decades in Washington. Today's article deals with Stripling's clashes with Joseph Lash and Eleanor Roosevelt.

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

It was 1945 and the war was on. But for Robert E. Stripling, the battlefield wasn't in Europe or the South Pacific. It was at the White House.

Stripling stuck to his guns; Eleanor Roosevelt loaded hers and fired. She won.

The war between the two centered on one man — Joseph Lash. To Stripling, he was a communist. To the first lady, he was a good friend who deserved a commission in Naval Intelligence.

Mrs. Roosevelt proceeded with her plan to get a commission for her friend, but Naval Intelligence stopped her, saying that Stripling with the House Unamerican Activities Committee had a record of Lash's communist activities. Because of that, Lash could not be allowed into the intelligence division unless his record was cleared.

Through her secretary, Malvina Thompson, the first lady summoned Stripling to the White House one afternoon. Stripling, who worked as an investigator for the committee, refused. "I knew what it was about and wasn't going to go," he says of "Sister Eleanor's" request.

Mrs. Roosevelt turned around and called HUAC's chairman, Rep. Martin Dies of Texas, who lunched with her the next day. "The first lady said Joe admitted he was a communist but he wasn't anymore. She wanted Joe to appear before the committee in a closed session," Stripling said.

THE HEARING was set. "Lash was put under oath and testified he had been a communist. But when I asked him about Joe Cadden, a good friend of his also in the Communist Party, Lash clammed up."

Stripling told the Republicans on the committee that the hearing had been fixed to give Lash his commission. "The Republicans said Lash looked healthy enough to serve, so they sent a letter to his draft board. He was drafted in two weeks" for the rear rank of the Army.

But so was Stripling.

At the age of 32 and a father before Pearl Harbor occurred, Stripling was working for the government with 75 people under him. Normally, he would have been excluded from serving in the military. Or he would have been given a commission.

He suddenly became the object of some radio personalities, including Drew Pearson. "He would come on the air on Sunday night and would say Douglas MacArthur's nephew was in the South Pacific fighting Japanese, but Stripling hadn't seen any action. He made weekly attacks on me," Stripling recalls.

One general called Stripling to warn him that Mrs. Roosevelt was trying to run the Selective Service and that the HUAC chief investigator should take a job in the oil and gas industry. That would keep him out of the draft.

STRIPLING REFUSED; he was ordered into the Army. In January 1945, he was sent down alone on a special bus to Camp Robinson in Arkansas for 18 weeks of basic training.

At one point, Stripling recalled, Gen. Joseph Stillwell was contacted. But he said his orders came from the White House and that Stripling was "to receive 18 weeks of the most vigorous training."

Eventually, he quit cleaning latrines and was assigned to teach at Camp Holabird near Baltimore, Md., training ground for a counter-intelligence corps. In Lash's newest book, "Love, Eleanor," released in April 1982, the author contends the corps was disbanded, and Stripling calls it a "lie."

"I taught 1,400 men at Camp Holabird a course on the subversive nature of the communist conspiracy," he notes.

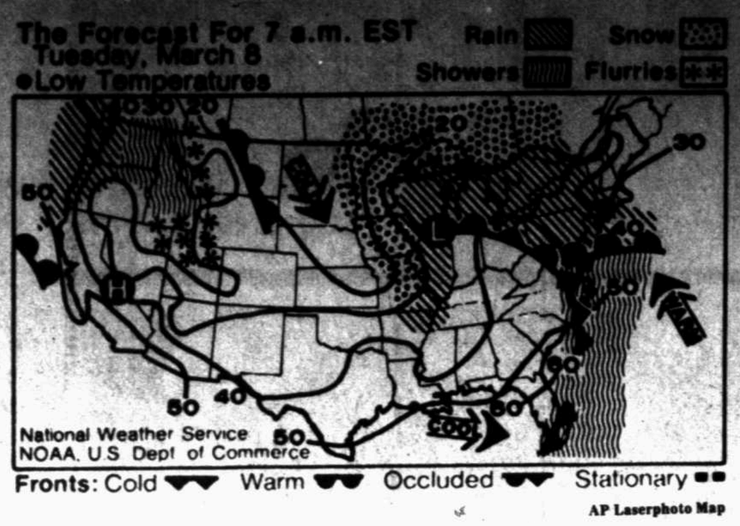

Looking back, Stripling sees, "There is no question I kept Lash from getting his commission, but I paid a high price. Mrs. Roosevelt wasn't the kind woman everyone thought she was. She actually was very mean and would stop at nothing to achieve her goals."

Clashes with the first lady and the alleged affairs of Eleanor with Lash and FDR with Lucy Mercer took away forever the awe of Washington Stripling had felt when he had arrived in 1932.

"Watergate was not so bad when you look back on all the hanky-panky. It's a sordid story and it did affect me very much."

WEATHER SUMMARY

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts showers and rain Tuesday for the Atlantic coast, rain from the Midwest into the Northeast and snow from Missouri to Minnesota and the eastern Dakotas. Rain, showers and snow are forecast for the Northwest.

Windy conditions calming down

After a weekend of fierce winds and tumblin' tumbleweeds, Midlanders can expect calmer wind conditions with springlike temperatures through Tuesday.

It is expected to be fair and cool through Tuesday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. Tonight's low should be near 40, while Tuesday's high is expected to reach the mid-70s.

The high winds Midlanders battled over the weekend are expected to calm with southwesterly to westerly breezes blowing through at 5-10 mph tonight. Tuesday, winds should travel westerly at 10-20 mph.

Sunday's high of 74 couldn't match the record high of 90 set in 1946, and the overnight low of 45 was quite a bit warmer than the overnight low of 16 set in 1931.

Social Security plan may raise retirement age

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite last-ditch attacks, a $165 billion Social Security rescue plan barreling through Congress likely will include a provision for raising the retirement age from 65, says Senate Finance Committee Chairman Bob Dole.

The full House this week is expected to approve the package of payroll tax hikes, a curb on benefits, a levy on retirees benefits and mandatory coverage for new federal employees — as recommended by the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

Then Dole's panel will keep the momentum going, drafting its version of the bill this week for the full Senate to consider next week.

"I guess our only real timetable is to have it passed and on the president's desk before we leave here on March 26" for Congress' Easter recess, Dole, R-Kan., said in an interview. "And I think that goal can be attained."

Congress also will be occupied this week with its various committee probes of the Environmental Protection Agency and its embattled administrator, Anne McGill Burford.

EPA General Counsel Robert Perry was scheduled to testify before the House Energy and Commerce investigations subcommittee today. Mrs. Burford has been subpoenaed to appear with sensitive EPA documents on Thursday.

The bipartisan 32-3 vote by which the House Ways and Means Committee sent the Social Security plan to the full House is being taken as evidence of the strong support the plan will have on the House floor, where a final vote is due Wednesday or Thursday.

However, the Ways and Means Committee sidestepped the issue of whether to raise the retirement age as one of the measures to wipe out a Social Security deficit projected at $1.9 trillion over the next 75 years.

The House panel accepted instead a provision mixing a 5 percent benefit cut for new retirees 25 years from now with a payroll tax hike in 2015.

But the question is not settled and the full House will vote whether to scuttle that provision in favor of raising the retirement age or raising the payroll tax again in the next century.

A Republican-dominated majority of the 15-member reform commission, including Dole, recommended raising the retirement age from 65 to 66 by 2015, then indexing it to longevity so it would hit 68 by 2060. But the proposal was not made part of the consensus recommendations the commission sent to Capitol Hill.

Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, chairman of the Ways and Means subcommittee on Social Security, has tried for years to raise the retirement age and will offer an amendment to do so when the bailout package is debated in the House.

Dole also favors raising the retirement age, and the full Senate is expected to back his position.

Even if the House rejects the amendment to raise the retirement age, a close vote coupled with affirmative Senate action on the issue could force congressional negotiators to include the provision when they work out a compromise of the bills passed by each house.

"My own view (is) the age provision will pass, that there's a lot of Democratic and Republican support for that," Dole said. "It's a real reform. It recognizes the change in longevity that's taken place since we passed Social Security. I think it would restore a lot of confidence in the system."

Still, a late attempt is being made to head off any increase in the retirement age.

AND THE succeeding president wasn't much better, in Stripling's eyes. "I remember when he was in the Senate. He had Bess (Truman's wife) on the Senate payroll for $400 a month and she never came to Capitol Hill."

He was discharged in July 1946 and went back to Washington to find the committee had become useless.

But he was asked by a ranking Republican House member to head up the committee. Fall elections in 1946 meant January began with Republicans in control of the House, Truman re-elected president and Stripling as counsel and chief investigator of HUAC.

Added to the committee were three new Republican members. One was Richard Nixon, elected to his first term from California.

Stripling had been informed by the House speaker and committee chairman that Nixon "was young and able and for me to give him as many breaks as possible," says Stripling.

He did just that and over the months he and Nixon became friends. Only three months separated them in age, with Stripling being the older.

The Hollywood Hearings thrust HUAC into the spotlight, but these were a precursor to the ones that saw Joseph McCarthy in the lead.

Stripling called only 10 persons from the movie industry to testify in those hearings. And when each denied being a member of the Communist Party, Stripling produced their

THE GOVERNMENT had an informant in the party who had slipped the membership cards to Stripling. "We didn't make up any black list. We had actual membership cards of 32 people. After calling in 10, I saw no point in continuing the hearings." Nor did he see any point in McCarthy's later hearings.

In Stripling's view, if someone says he believes in the communist philosophy, "that's his right. But if you join the Communist Party, you are part and party of a foreign government. You are an agent of a foreign government."

The committee's next assignment involved those agents and led the investigating congressmen to officials in high government posts and a case that won't end. Meanwhile, it strengthened the bond between Stripling and Nixon.

Group offers alleged missive from Kahl

SHAWANO, Wis. (AP) — Authorities today were offered a letter which a Wisconsin leader of Posse Comitatus says was written by tax protester Gordon Kahl, who is sought in the slayings of two U.S. marshals in North Dakota.

Sheriff Jim Knope of Shawano County said he was told by James P. Wickstrom, "director of counterinsurgency" for the militant protest group, that the letter would be available at 9 a.m. at Wickstrom's home in nearby Tigerton.

"I am going after it against my wife's wishes," said Knope, whose relations with Posse Comitatus members have been strained. "I want that letter."

Wickstrom had said Friday in a Cable News Network interview that the letter describes Kahl, 60, as having fired in self-defense Feb. 13 near Medina, N.D., when two marshals died and four other persons, including Kahl's son Yorie, 23, were wounded.

In a telephone interview Sunday from his home, Wickstrom declined to discuss particulars of the 16-page letter.

Denying he ever had much of a quarrel with Knope, he said he offered the letter because "I don't want the government coming after me for withholding information."

Wickstrom, whose Posse Comitatus members protest taxes and bureaucratic regulation of citizens, says the public has been given wrong information about the shootout.

"The police had already shot his son twice," Wickstrom said Friday. "They fired the first shots at these men, trying to kill his son Yorie. I believe he fired back in defense, trying to save his son and trying to save himself."

Wickstrom has suggested Kahl is hiding in Texas. He said Sunday he would help find Kahl only if the government met "certain conditions." He did not elaborate.

He said Kahl could find refuge with more than 2,000 persons, whom he did not identify.

Mild weather forecast in state

By The Associated Press

It should be sunny and mild across Texas for the next couple of days, the National Weather Service says.

The forecast came despite a weak cold front that ran early today from the northeast corner of the state through Austin and down into the Edwards Plateau region before swinging northwest.

MMH hopes THFC tradition holds

The decision marks the culmination of a long bureaucratic process which included appearances by hospital officials from MMH and American Medical Corp., which owns Parkview, in Austin during a two-week THFC hearing in November.

Both hospitals, in compliance with state law, submitted certificate of need applications to the THFC. At the local level, the Permian Basin Health Systems Agency Area-12 approved MMH's application, denying Parkview's.

California storms move inland

Colorado digging out again

By The Associated Press

The storm that punished California last week continued to "mess up" the country today with blizzard-like conditions in the Dakotas, tornadoes in Dixie and torrential rains from Kentucky to Florida.

Meanwhile, Colorado began digging out from a weekend blizzard that dropped up to two feet of snow in 24 hours, blocking highways and closing airports, including Denver's Stapleton International Airport, where more than 1,200 travelers were stranded.

By Sunday night, three runways were open. A fourth was to open today, and air traffic was back to 75 percent of normal, an airport spokesman said. Stapleton also was closed during a Christmas Eve blizzard which stranded holiday travelers all over the state under 2 feet of snow.

At least six people died in weather-related accidents over the weekend, including three killed in the crash of a light plane during a violent stom in Kentucky Saturday night. Nineteen were killed last week in California, where rains, mudslides and tornadoes caused an estimated $203 million in damage.

The wind-chill factor dipped as low as 25 degrees below zero in the Northern Plains early today, said Ryan Tilley, a meteorologist for the weather service at Kansas City, Mo.

"The storm is moving very slowly through Minnesota, pulling a lot of cold air behind it," Tilley said. "It's been messing up the Midwest in one way or another for the last two or three days."

Tilley said the storm will keep lumbering east through Wednesday. Other storms are massing off the California coast, he said, but nothing comparable to the series of crushers that devastated the Golden State last week.

Heavy snow driven by winds gusting to 40 mph blocked roads with drifts in the Dakotas today and produced near-blizzard conditions in the Black Hills.

In eastern Wyoming, blowing and drifting snow also forced authorities to close Interstate 80 from Cheyenne to west of Laramie.

Tornadoes touched down in three North Carolina communities Sunday, ripping off the roof of a housing project building in Monroe, and damaging schools and businesses, but causing no serious injuries, authorities said.

"I heard the big wind and all of a sudden the top just came off," said Sylvester Barnett, one of the 13 residents who lives in the housing project. "I fell down and there was stuff just falling all around."

Tornadoes also touched down along N.C. 109 outside Winston-Salem, uprooting trees, and in northwest Guilford County, where a camper truck was damaged.

In the Florida Panhandle, another tornado hit the Holiday Isle Surf and Racquet Club, just east of Destin, on Saturday night, damaging several cars.

Gale-force winds of 40 mph whipped up a freakish "tumbleweed blizzard" Sunday near Rankin, Texas, piling up the plants 10 feet deep in places and blocking traffic on Texas 349. One car was buried for a time by the dried weeds.

Cities join move to cut defense spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National League of Cities, joining the groundswell against growing federal deficits, today called for the repeal of the July tax cut and a significant cut in the growth of defense spending.

The policy statement was approved by the group's board of directors after two days of debate at the league's annual winter meeting.

The paper, titled "Priorities for America's Cities, said that "to alleviate reasonable fears that high deficits in future years could arrest expected economic recovery," Congress and the administration should reduce projected deficits through fiscal 1986.

First, the paper called for "significantly reducing the rate of real growth in defense spending." An earlier draft had set 5 percent per year as a reasonable defense spending growth rate, but that number was dropped before the paper was approved by the board.

The league already was on record as favoring a growth rate of no more than a 7 percent. President Reagan has asked for yearly growth of nearly 10 percent in defense spending for the next two years.

The league also called for the elimination of the 10 percent income tax rate cut scheduled for July 1 and the indexing of federal income tax brackets next year to prevent automatic inflationary rises in taxes.

To reduce the projected federal deficit, the league also proposed a delay in cost-of-living adjustments in all programs not based on need, including Social Security and federal pensions. The organization also called for changes in the way automatic increases for such programs are calculated, so that such benefits rise more slowly than the overall cost of living.

The statement said that "it is now time to shift national policy toward a concerted effort to insure strong and substantial economic growth and to strengthen the ability of local governments to provide important public services.

"President Reagan's fiscal year 1984 budget fails to meet the needs of the nation's cities," it added.

"It accepts slow economic growth and continuing high unemployment, without making a meaningful effort to create jobs for the unemployed; it continues the greatest arms buildup ever, while focusing additional spending cuts on important social programs; and it provides inadequate help for cities to maintain needed public services."

The document targeted high federal budget deficits as one of the key roadblocks to any sustained economic recovery.

Senate Finance Chairman Robert Dole, R-Kan., applauded the new emphasis on deficits as he spoke to the group on Sunday.

"We've got to do something in the federal government to bring down deficits," Dole said.

Unless federal deficits, expected to rise in the $200 billion to $300 billion range over the next five years, are brought under control, Dole said, neither interest rates nor inflation will stay down or go any lower.

"We've got to face up to the deficit," Dole said.

Royal couple to fly to Seattle

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Calif. (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II prepared to leave California today after 10 days of storms and cheering crowds ended with a peaceful mountain weekend marred by the deaths of three Secret Service men guarding the royal party.

The queen and Prince Philip were to depart on a two-hour flight to Seattle from Castle Air Force Base near Merced aboard Air Force Two, a presidential jet made available for their use.

After a day in Seattle, the royal couple was scheduled to sail for Victoria, British Columbia, aboard the yacht Britannia.

The queen and Philip spent the weekend walking around Yosemite National Park and attended services Sunday in which the Rev. John Davis prayed for the three Secret Service agents killed in an auto accident Saturday.

Dressed in a bright turquoise suit with a black handbag and matching shoes, Queen Elizabeth sat somber-faced in the tiny 103-year-old Yosemite Chapel.

The men were killed when a Mariposa County sheriff's vehicle scouting ahead of the queen's motorcade crossed the center line and crashed head-on into the Secret Service vehicle, authorities said. Two sheriff's deputies were injured in the accident, which the queen passed shortly afterward.

Outside the chapel, nestled in a meadow about 200 yards from the Merced River, the queen accepted several gifts: a willow basket from a Pomo Indian woman, a brass plaque from Yosemite's signmaker and a 1944 Ansel Adams photograph entitled "Clearing Winter Storm."

Pausing to peer at the reflection of the peak Half Dome in Mirror Lake, the couple then strolled around the park.

The queen asked a ranger guide dozens of questions about the history, animal and plant life of the park, having noted on her stop in Sacramento that the 1,189 square mile tract was developed with the inspiration of naturalist John Muir, a Scot.

Park Superintendent William Burgen said the prince asked him if the park still had any grizzly bears.

"I told him I thought the last one was killed somewhere in the 1920s," Burgen said.

The queen took snapshots from the misty foot of Yosemite Falls where plumes of water splash on the granite boulders and flow into the Merced River.

It was a subdued break from a tour filled with banquets and appearances that began Feb. 26 when the royal couple arrived in San Diego aboard the Britannia, two days before California was struck by the worst storm of the season.

The storm, which caused $203 million in damage and raged through most of the queen's stay, prevented her party from sailing in the Britannia from Los Angeles to Santa Barbara. But the queen and the Duke of Edinburgh braved a ride up the winding, mountain road to President Reagan's mountaintop ranch in a four-wheel-drive vehicle.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: This was the birthdate of the famous American jurist Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes. Also sharing your birthday: Lynn Redgrave, dancer Cyd Charisse, "Cheers" hotelkeeper Sean McClory and Boston Red Sox outfielder Jim Rice. Monumental good luck hastens your progress in the year ahead. Concentrate on implementing new ideas and business will prosper. Financial matters become less complicated. You are able to get a better return on your investments. Be a pioneer. A dream can become reality if you want it enough. Learn how to assert your independence without alienating others. Stop issuing ultimatums. Casual romances are not for you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be prepared. The boss may make unreasonable demands. Getting away for a few days will restore your equilibrium. You become more prudent about what you say in public.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Work keeps you on the run today. A business venture pays off big. Share the good news with mate. A romantic confrontation cannot be avoided. Face up to your responsibilities.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A bit of mystery makes this an intriguing day. The rumors you hear are all wrong. You learn an important lesson by observing another's behavior.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A business development you anticipated occurs today. Be ready to move immediately. Ask for recommendations in writing to avoid misunderstandings later on.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You end up racing the clock. Contradictions leave you thoroughly confused. Talk things over with someone who knows what is going on.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A negative development is not directed at you. Something very nice is about to happen. You get a chance to continue your education with the company footing the bill.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be careful of what you reveal in a job interview. Sounding apologetic will work against you. Act decisive. New career choices result from your attending an extension course.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Circumstances put you at the beck and call of others. Handle the situation with your usual diplomacy. Pleasant social encounters make up for a dull work day.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Force yourself to deal with the warfare going on at place of employment. Member of opposite sex is the one stirring things up. This is no time to lobby for your views.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Do not allow someone to spread propaganda that could hurt your lead in a competition. Confusion could spoil the effect of what you are trying to do.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You want freedom for yourself, but are jealous when loved ones desire the same thing. Trust is the key to greater happiness. Remain calm when co-workers become emotional.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Test results are delayed. To reduce tension, keep busy. A shared summer vacation contains many pitfalls. Yard cleanups are easy if family members pitch in. Let a friend off the hook.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J854 ♡AK72 ◇5 ♣9863
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	Dble	Pass	1 ♡
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Partner has shown that he has a better than minimum takeout double with a five-card spade suit. In support of spades, your hand is worth 11 points. To bid any less than four spades does your holding an injustice.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KJ ♡J763 ◇Q8 ♣J9542
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—You have a weak hand and most of your values are soft, i.e., queens and jacks, which might prove to be of doubtful value. But partner knows you are weak. What he doesn't know is that you have two honors in his trump suit and a key honor in his second suit. That is just enough to take the push to four spades.

Q.3—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠10764 ♡J853 ◇A84 ♣A3
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	1 ♡	Pass	Pass
Dble	2 ♡	?

What action do you take?
A.—By reopening with a double, partner has shown a good hand. You can probably expect four defensive tricks from him. Your hand rates to take at least three tricks on defense. At this vulnerability, that looks like a 500 penalty at least. Double.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠10764 ♡J853 ◇A84 ♣A3
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	1 ♡	Pass	Pass
Dble	2 ♡	?

What action do you take?
A.—No this is not a repeat of the previous problem. The hand and bidding are the same, but the vulnerability is not. This time, a penalty of 300 might not be sufficient compensation when you could close out the rubber. Since partner should have four spades for his reopening takeout double, jump to three spades to invite partner to game if he has sound values. Indeed, we would not quibble with four spades, because the hands should fit well.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠85 ♡65 ◇Q9832 ♣AKQ10
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
4 ◇	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—You have no need to be ashamed of your hand—it is the equivalent of an opening bid. Facing a partner who has jump raised, you are in the slam zone. The best way to get your message across to partner is to cue-bid five clubs. If partner can do no more than return to five diamonds, pass.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠987432 ♡A6 ◇73 ♣AJ5
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Once partner raises spades, your hand revalues to 14 points. Since partner opened, you have enough for game. Bid four spades. Anything less earns you an award as Conservative of the Year.

More tax revenue

Ever since Congress voted to cut taxes across the board in 1981, critics have complained that the tax cut was tilted unfairly to the benefit of the rich. While tax rates in general were to be cut by 25 percent in three steps, the maximum tax rate was cut from 70 percent to 50 percent in one step.

Supply-side economists argued that the government would wind up collecting more taxes rather than less from the higher income group, and data coming in suggests they were right.

The magazine Forbes reports that taxpayers filing quarterly estimates of income tax — generally those in the higher brackets — paid $85 billion in income taxes in 1982, up 10 percent from the previous year. Their taxes represented 29 percent of the total collected, compared to 27 percent a year earlier.

Rep. Jack Kemp, R-New York, has been quick to trumpet these preliminary results of the tax cut he championed. "Lowering the top tax rates has lured high-income taxpayers out of tax shelters and into more productive, job-producing — and taxable — investments. Revenues are up, not down, as a result," Kemp says.

Critics of supply-side economics have pooh-poohed the idea that a dramatic cut in income tax rates could produce an increase in tax revenue. They were not impressed by the experience with such a tax cut during the Kennedy administration. Maybe the results of the Reagan tax cut will bring them around.

Creeping 'Franglais'

For decades the greatest threat to French culture, at least according to some of its self-appointed defenders, has been not a shortage of snails or ruptured goose livers but the steady infestation of the language with anglicisms.

"Le marketing," "le planning," "le know-how" represent only a tiny tip of the iceberg (in French "le iceberg"). An official campaign against "Franglais" has been waged for more than a decade, with restrictions on words in some instances.

Now, the finance ministry has come up with a list of 244 imported (i.e. English) business and financial terms, accompanied by officially approved French translations. Thus will marketing become "marcheage" and planning translates as "rationalisation." Being realistic, though, the ministry notes that the list is not mandatory. And it doesn't even begin to deal with the ubiquitous hamburger ("ahm-bour-GAIR") or the embarrassing fact that the government's own Yankee-baiting minister of culture is named Jack Lang (no translation).

Another View:

Spending consensus

It is evident across the political landscape that some steam has run out of President Reagan's rearmament drive. He and his defense secretary remain committed to his first spending goals, but elsewhere in the administration and in much of Congress dedication has slackened. Polls show the public is still wary of the Soviet threat, but less ready to support the expenditures the administration sees as essential to meet it.

The reasons for this turn are varied. No new international crisis has come along to salt the wound of humiliation opened by the Iran hostage-taking. In most minds, the martial-law crackdown in Poland did not so much freshen the Western sense of danger as confirm a Kremlin intent to prevail in its claimed sphere. The MX debate proved to be, among other things, a window revealing the arbitrariness of much defense planning. Economic distress and the politics of economic distress, meanwhile, have double-whammied defense: made the Reagan levels seem unfair or at least politically questionable, and put on defense a burden to carry its share of the cuts needed to shave those huge looming deficits.

The upshot is that some, not all, of the momentum for accelerated defense spending has been lost. A new consensus appears to be forming: spending should increase, but at a slower, steadier and hence more politically sustainable and economically tolerable rate; the new rate can be pursued without damage to national security if new projects are chosen with greater care, and the new rate has its own welcome implications of foreign-policy moderation.

The figure representing this emerging consensus is 5 percent. Its most recent supporters include three Democratic eminences, Robert McNamara, Cyrus Vance and McGeorge Bundy, and a retired admiral, who is no dove, Elmo Zumwalt.

A 5 percent defense increase after inflation every year for the next five years: it's not the Reagan 7-to-9 percent, but it's not hay. As many people may find it indefensibly high as find it unacceptably low. We find it a sensible figure for purposes of planning what weapons the government needs.

A 5 percent growth increment, itself worth more every year, would come on top of an already greatly expanded, recurring base of expenditures and would help buy an awful lot of defense.

It would make a contribution to economic recovery, by its impact on the deficit, of some $135 billion. It should enforce upon the Pentagon, unless it means to dare Congress to take knife in its own hand, a new and necessary degree of budget discipline. It would help the president, now in a defensive crouch, take command of an issue likely to dominate the political debate of the next two years.

CHARLEY REESE

Grid salaries just under free market

No doubt young Hershel Walker's multi-million dollar contract with a New Jersey football team will touch off the usual comments about society not paying really valuable people enough.

Charley Reese

You know how the routine goes: What kind of society will pay millions for dumb football players but only a pittance for truly dedicated teachers, social workers, etc.? The answer is a free society.

Salary or other income does not represent a judgment as to the worth of a human being. Income represents a person's market value. Market value and value measured in terms such as contribution to humanity are two different things. To confuse the two is to confess that you have been caught up in the materialism game in which the only criteria for judging value is annual income and the only means of expressing evaluation is with cash.

Hershel Walker will receive about $5 million for three years because an individual or group of individuals bid that much for a marketable commodity (Walker's skill and reputation as a football player). The investors believe that by hiring Walker they can in the long run earn more than they are paying him.

Most of us will not contribute one penny to Walker's income. The people who buy tickets to the games in which he plays will contribute voluntarily in exchange for the pleasure of seeing him play. Television networks which pay to televise the games will contribute voluntarily as an investment on which they expect to earn a return by selling advertising.

The argument that people who buy the advertised products are forced to contribute to his income is specious. Nobody is forced to buy any product and the products will be advertised somewhere anyway.

Thus, Walker's income is received entirely from voluntary contributions and only an envious little twit would begrudge the kid his good fortune.

His income says nothing about society because society is an abstract concept that does not exist in reality. Society isn't paying Walker; a relatively few individuals out of 230 million will pay him for services rendered.

What something like this always brings out are the closet totalitarians who would like to impose their value judgments on the rest of us. Observing what happens when people are free to exercise their own judgment, these closet types decide they don't like other people's judgment and so set out to preach their elitist nonsense. Intolerant snobs are what they are.

I personally despise rock and roll bands, or most of them anyway, but it doesn't bother me that Mick what's-his-name of the Rolling whatever is a millionaire because he doesn't have a nickel of my money in his bank account. I'm not forced to contribute to his income or listen to his noise. If hundreds of thousands of other people choose to do so that is their right and their business.

What we ought to do rather than whine and complain when the free market takes a direction with which we do not agree is work toward freeing other segments of our society so they, too, can enjoy the benefits of freedom.

One reason teachers aren't paid well is because they work for a state-owned near-monopoly. If you want to teach, you don't have much choice but to work for the state which sets salaries, not on a free market basis, but by political fiat.

Thus teachers, unlike football players who can market their ability, must resort to political influence in order to effect their income. It does not matter how good the individual teacher is; what matters is a political decision made by politicians.

That is what happens when you eliminate the free market. You must of necessity resort to politics as a pricing mechanism. When there does not exist free competitive bidding as a means of determining value, then that value is determined arbitrarily. In most of the communist countries of eastern Europe, for example, the political decision has been made to pay coal miners more than doctors, a purely arbitrary choice based on political ideology.

We are fools to surrender our liberty in economic matters but a great many people seem intent on doing it. There is a reason why they want to do this. A free market rewards the best in any category; a political system protects the least competent from the consequences of their own failures.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Feds probing lobbyist's role

WASHINGTON — The Washington lobbyist for a Department of Energy contractor has been traveling to industry conferences with a woman who happens to be a DOE official. Questions about the propriety of their relationship have been raised in two separate federal investigations

Jack Anderson

The lobbyist is Walter Flowers, a former Alabama congressman, who once chaired an energy subcommittee. He is now vice president in charge of government relations for Wheelabrator-Frye Inc., a reputable conglomerate that recently merged with Signal Companies. Wheelabrator-Frye has a single contract with DOE to design a demonstration plant in Kentucky to produce synthetic fuel from coal.

The multimillion-dollar contract barely survived the Reagan administration budget cuts last year. Wheelabrator-Frye, which had already spent $131 million of DOE money, was allowed an additional $55 million in closeout costs.

Flowers' traveling companion is Beverly Burns, who is deputy director of the DOE's congressional liaison office. She used to work for Flowers on Capitol Hill.

Flowers, who is separated from his wife, acknowledged that he has "known Beverly on a personal basis for several years" and considers her a "close friend" — a relationship that neither of them has tried to hide.

In fact, he used the personal nature of their affiliation to deflect any suggestion that Burns was involved in a conflict of interest. Flowers told my associate Dale Van Atta that throughout their long friendship and on their travels here and there, they have "never discussed business."

Last October, Flowers and Burns traveled to Budapest, where they were guests of the U.S. ambassador to Hungary — a former DOE official who counts them both as friends. Flowers said the trip to Budapest and back by way of Amsterdam was purely personal.

But a knowledgable source said Flowers went to Amsterdam to speak at a symposium on coal gasification, and logged at least two business dinners for Wheelabrator-Frye on the trip.

Flowers' employer is conducting a quiet investigation of his relationship with Burns. So are investigators for the DOE and the U.S. Synthetic Fuels Corporation. Their questions are basic:

Did Burns give Flowers inside information about DOE? Did Wheelabrator-Frye unwittingly pay any of Burns' hotel or travel expenses, which would be against government rules? Was she on official leave of absence on all her trips with Flowers? Was it wise for her, as a federal employee, to appear with a federal contractor at conferences aimed at promoting synthetic-fuel development by the government?

The chief lobbying organization for synfuels is the National Council on Synthetic Fuels Production; Flowers was its first chairman and is now a board member. It is Burns' attendance at the council's semiannual meetings that is being investigated.

Flowers admitted that Burns was with him at the council's meeting at the Basin Harbor Yacht Club in Vergennes, Vt., last October. He denies they were together at last April's meeting in Palm Springs, Calif., or at the San Francisco meeting in February 1981. But eyewitnesses place Burns at both meetings.

Although Burns and Flowers insist that she always paid her own way, sources charge that Flowers billed Wheelabrator-Frye — without the company's knowledge — for some of Burns' expenses, including double-occupancy rooms.

WHIRLWIND TOUR: To shivering constituents, a congressional investigation to Sun Belt spots in the middle of the winter often carries the taint of that dreaded word, "junket." But five House members looking into the drug traffic took no chances last month. In recognition that time on the ground can be grounds for suspicion, their breath-taking itinerary went like this: One afternoon and evening in Nassau, including a two-hour meeting with the prime minister; to Key West for a two-hour stopover; to Miami for two days of hearings, then back to Washington.

The non-junketing quintet were Reps. Glenn English, D-Okla., Edolphus Towns, D-N.Y., Buddy MacKay, D-Fla., Dan Daniel, D-Va., and Thomas Kindness, R-Ohio. The State and Defense Departments paid for their trip.

INSIDE REPORT:

Nofziger lists return demands

WASHINGTON — In the latest backstage White House power play to outflank chief of staff James Baker, veteran Reaganite Lyn Nofziger has been made an offer to return as the president's communications director in time for the 1984 campaign. The signal back from Nofziger is that he might accept.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The secret bid to Nofziger came from two senior aides — presidential counselor Edwin Meese and national security director William P. Clark — often aligned against Baker. Nofziger, now netting a six-figure income as a Washington consultant, surprised insiders by suggesting he might accept under the proper conditions: reporting only to President Reagan, and unlimited access to him.

That would turn the currently cumbersome Big Four at the White House into an even more unwieldy Big Five, raising some doubts about whether the president would meet Nofziger's conditions fully. The current communications chief, David Gergen, reports to Baker and is one of his key lieutenants.

JIMMY HELPS RON

Jimmy Carter has sent word to the White House that he will support Ronald Reagan's Mideast peace plan, publicly and enthusiastically, no matter how much political capital the Democrats try to make out of the president's rift with Israel.

Carter made that promise to President Reagan while in Washington to confer with Secretary of State George Shultz prior to the former president's Mideast trip.

That pledge could mean trouble for Carter's vice president, Democratic presidential front-runner Walter F. Mondale (who has publicly rebuked his former chief for following policies opposed by Israel). Carter's pledge means that if Mondale on the campaign trail tees off on the Reagan peace plan, he now may have to contend with Carter as well as Reagan.

GOP'S WHITE HOPE

Although the Republican establishment is unlimbering its big guns for former state representative Bernard Epton in Chicago's April 12 general election for mayor, he was so lightly regarded before the Democrats nominated a black that he was not even introduced at the most recent gathering of Illinois GOP faithful.

Epton was present but was not introduced or even mentioned in Chicago Jan. 19 at the massive fundraiser for Sen. Charles H. Percy. At that time, he was looked upon as the usual Republican sacrificial lamb against either Mayor Jane Byrne or State's Attorney Richard Daley, battling it out in the Democratic primary.

But Epton took on new importance after Rep. Harold Washington's surprise Democratic nomination. Such famous GOP political strategists as John Deardourff and Bob Teeter were sent to Chicago to see what could be done. Gov. James Thompson, in Washington for the governors conference, told newsmen that Epton was the finest Republican candidate for mayor of Chicago in his time.

BUSH'S FRIEND IN N.H.

If President Reagan does not seek re-election, a presidential campaign by Rep. Jack Kemp would face trouble in New Hampshire's first-in-the-nation primary from an unexpected source: newly-elected Gov. John Sununu, who describes himself as a "hard-line conservative."

Sununu wants and expects a Reagan second-term bid, but in the absence of one is not at all interested in fellow-conservative Kemp. In Washington for the governors conference, Sununu was making it clear that his choice is Bush (who he says has become "a real Reaganite"), that he expects Bush would get Reagan's endorsement and that he believes Bush's only real challenger in the New Hampshire primary would be Sen. Howard Baker.

Kemp's insiders believe the governor's attitude stems from the role of Charles Black, one of the congressman's closest political advisers, managing one of Sununu's opponents in the 1982 Republican primary for governor. Whatever the reason, Sununu says he does not think Kemp, presumed to be the Republican right's choice to be Reagan's heir, could launch a credible campaign in New Hampshire.

WHITHER DOLE?

Sen. James McClure of Idaho is the early favorite to succeed Sen. Howard Baker as Republican floor leader next year — unless there is a move for the job by the man called the uncrowned king of the Senate: Robert J. Dole.

Dole has confided to friends that he is interested in the post but has not made up his mind whether he would want to relinquish the powerful chairmanship of the Senate Finance Committee. Should President Reagan not seek re-election, Dole surely would devote his time to seeking the presidency rather than the Senate leadership. He also will have to ponder the strong possibility that the Republicans could lose control of the leadership so that he would only be minority leader if he suceeded Baker.

McClure, now chairman of the Senate Republican Conference, is given the edge to replace Baker over the sharp-tempered, sharp-tongued Sen. Ted Stevens of Alaska, currently assistant majority leader. Dole is not all that popular with his colleagues but is widely feared and respected.

Red Adair pays $140,000 for champion Chianina steer

HOUSTON (AP) — Oilwell firefighter Red Adair paid 171 times the amount he could get at current market prices for a grand champion steer at the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo.

Adair, making his first major buy at the show, battled a group of four Houston businessmen Saturday and ended up paying a world record $140,000 for the 1,225-pound Chianina steer named Black Velvet.

The price Adair paid was $13,000 more than last year's record set by a group of five people and $28,000 more than any person has ever paid for one animal at a livestock auction, said show spokeswoman Mike Nathanson.

At current market prices, officials said, the steer would sell for about 65 cents a pound, or $817. Adair donated the steer to the Meadowbriar Girls School of Houston, a home for troubled girls.

Money from the record sale went to the exhibitor, Clifton Smith, 18, from the Rio Grande Valley community of Lyford.

Smith, who wept as the price for his animal topped the $100,000 mark, said he would use the part of the money to study agriculture at Sam Houston State University in Huntsville next year and invest the rest in more cattle.

Former governor's wife strangled, detective says

HOUSTON (AP) — Medical examiners have ruled Elizabeth Faubus, one of four wealthy women found slain in their westside homes in a five-day period, was strangled, a detective says.

Mrs. Faubus, the estranged wife of former Arkansas Gov. Orval Faubus, was found immersed in the bloody bathtub of her affluent home Thursday, less than 72 hours after the bodies of two west Houston women were discovered in bathtubs in their homes.

The 44-year-old Mrs. Faubus was to be buried today.

An autopsy report from the Harris County Medical Examiner's Office revealed "nothing unusual," Detective J.C. Mosier said.

"Her death has been ruled a homicide," Mosier said. "We got the report (Sunday) from the medical examiner and it said she had died of asphyxiation due to pressure on the front of the neck.

"What we don't know is whether death was caused by hands, an arm on the neck, a belt," Mosier said.

Mrs. Faubus also suffered head wounds from an unknown weapon but they did not cause her death, Mosier said.

Medical examiner's were unable to determine how long Mrs. Faubus had been dead, he said.

"She was found in water, which we're told changes the body temperature and hurts attempts to determine an exact time of death," he said.

Investigator J.C. Thomason of the Harris County Medical Examiner's Office refused to confirm or deny the report.

"The case is still on hold, waiting for toxicology results. And until the 'hold' is taken off, the cause of death won't be released," Thomason said.

The latest victim in the neighborhood, Bonnie Grace Wright, was found fatally stabbed on the kitchen floor of her home, located one block from the apartment of a 61-year-old woman found murdered in her bathtub, detectives said.

Investigators are studying the cases closely, but have not found any solid evidence linking the four deaths, detective David Preece said Sunday.

"Anytime you have a string of women from the same area killed in the same week, the cases are going to be closely scrutinized," Preece said.

"Right now, the only similarities we know are that all were women living in affluent neighborhoods, who were at home alone and killed within a five-day period," Preece said.

Mrs. Wright's bloody body, clad only in a bathrobe, was found Saturday afternoon by her husband upon returning from a business meeting, Preece said. A knife was found near Mrs. Wright's body, Preece said.

Investigators said Mrs. Wright suffered multiple stab wounds in the upper chest and had marks on her hand indicating she might have struggled with her attacker.

The medical examiner's office has not ruled on the cause of Mrs. Wright's death, but investigators were treating it as a homicide, Preece said.

There were no signs of forced entry and investigators have not established a motive for the slaying, Preece said.

The Wright home is located a block from the apartment of Ruth Kottler, 61, who was found slain Tuesday in her bathtub.

Jury selection set in New Orleans' officers' case

DALLAS (AP) — Jury selection which was delayed once was set to begin here today in the civil rights trial of seven New Orleans police officers accused of beating black citizens during the investigation into a fellow officer's slaying.

The trial was moved to the court of U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer after defense attorneys argued it would be impossible to seat an unbiased jury in New Orleans.

The seven are accused of beating and threatening blacks while interrogating them about the slaying of white policeman Gregory Neupert.

The 23-year-old officer was found shot to death in his patrol car Nov. 8, 1980 at a housing project in Algiers, a rough and predominantly black section of New Orleans.

Four more people died in the resulting police crackdown on the area. No charges have been filed in the deaths.

Three days after Neupert was slain, 40-year-old police informer Ray Ferdinand was killed by two black officers who said he pulled a knife after they stopped him.

Two days later, police staged a pair of predawn raids in which the two men accused of slaying Neupert and a woman were killed. The victims were James Billy Jr., 26, Reginald Miles, 28, and Miles' girlfriend Sherry Singleton, 26.

The white police officers who participated said the three tried to shoot it out with them.

Black activists reacted immediately and vocally to the racial overtones they perceived in the deaths. The ensuing controversy rocked New Orleans, and Police Superintendent James Parsons resigned in an attempt to defuse the situation.

Police stockpiled riot control equipment and state and federal grand juries investigated.

The seven were charged with conspiracy to violate the Civil Rights Act, which packs a maximum punishment of 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine. They also were charged with actual civil rights violations, a misdemeanor carrying a maximum punishment of a year's imprisonment and a $1,000 fine.

The defendants are Sgt. John E. McKenzie, 40; Detective Ronald Brink, 37; Detective Thomas R. Woodall, 32; Officer Dale Bonura, 34; Officer Stephen Farrar, 31; Officer Richard LeBlanc, 32, and Stephen Reboul, 29, who was fired from the force for unrelated misconduct. The other six were reassigned to desk jobs.

Mistrial requested in murder case

RICHMOND (AP) — Defense attorneys who have asked a judge to declare a mistrial in the case against a Mexican accused of killing an illegal alien from El Salvador awaited a ruling on the motion today.

Attorneys for Juan Ramon Ortiz, 26, of Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, moved for a mistrial after chief prosecutor Don Bankston questioned a witness about "the murders" of three other Salvadorans.

Defense attorney Charles Cates said the prosecutor had mentioned extraneous crimes in the presence of the jury. State District Judge A. Reagan Clark said he would rule when court reconvened.

Ortiz is charged with the murder of Roman Turcios, one of four Salvadorans discovered in July bound and shot to death on the banks of the Brazos River in Fort Bend County.

Prosecutors have said the four Salvadorans were slain to avenge the death of a member of an illegal alien smuggling ring who had demanded more money from a relative of two illegal aliens.

Twelve other Mexicans also have been charged in the murders.

10 percent surtax recommended

AUSTIN (AP) — A governor's task force says Texas needs an additional $14 million to pay unemployment benefits and has recommended that the Legislature pass an emergency 10 percent surtax and ask Congress to approve more federal loans.

Elvis Mason of Dallas, chairman of Gov. Mark White's Task Force on Jobs, said Texas will run out of money for unemployment benefits one week from today unless Congress passes a bill to give additional federal loans to 29 states with bankrupt unemployment funds.

The task force said Saturday the surtax would be levied on the state unemployment taxes paid by Texas businesses during the first three months of this year.

The surtax is needed so Texas can pay interest on federal loans that are subsidizing the state's bankrupt fund for unemployment benefits, the task force said.

The House passed the loan package last week but the Senate has not acted on it.

Harrelson jury to start deliberations

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — A U.S. District Court jury may begin deliberations today in the perjury trial of Jo Ann Harrelson, accused of lying to a grand jury about buying the rifle supposedly used by her husband to murder a federal judge in San Antonio.

First, jurors were to hear closing arguments and then guidelines from Judge William Sessions about the finer points of law in the case.

Italian brothers claim that Cullen family cheated them

HOUSTON (AP) — An Italian baron and his brother are suing their rich relatives, claiming they have been cheated out of hundreds of millions of dollars from the fortune of their late grandfather, oil tycoon Hugh Roy Cullen.

Baron Enrico di Portanova, 49, and his brother Ugo, 46, contend that Lillie Cullen di Portanova, their mother and one of Cullen's daughters, was denied a share of stock in Quintana Petroleum Co. that would have passed to them after her death in 1966.

Attorneys representing the Cullen family have scoffed at the di Portanovas' claims, saying Cullen never intended for the stock to be part of his estate.

Cullen's fortune was amassed in the Texas oil fields.

According to court records, the Cullen family control 224 shares of Quintana stock, with the estate of late Houston oilman John B. Holmes holding the remaining 25 shares.

Probate Judge Pat Gregory has scheduled two trials to resolve the question.

The first trial, tentatively scheduled for July 18, will determine whether Quintana Petroleum stock was illegally transferred from three of Cullen's daughters to their husbands and two nephews. The trial also will determine what liability, if any, the Cullens have to the di Portanovas.

If the di Portanovas win the first round, a second trial before a different jury will determine the amount of the Cullens' liability.

The suit seeks to give the di Portanova brothers a share in the ownership of Quintana Petroleum Corp., set up by Cullen as a privately-held firm to operate an armada of oil and gas wells, handle ventures with other companies and oversee the family's investments.

Named in the di Portanovas' suit are Cullen's two surviving daughters, Wilhelmina Cullen Robertson and Margaret Cullen Marshall, their husbands, and grandsons Douglas Marshall and Roy and Harry Cullen.

Also included in the suit are Isaac Arnold Jr., son of Cullen's daughter Agnes Cullen Arnold; and the estate of the late Mimi Robinson Arnold.

There's something in the air

New Englanders fear acid rain effects

LINCOLN, N.H. (AP) — Patrick Reardon doesn't climb the 1½-mile trail from Lincoln to fish at Lonesome Lake anymore. He hasn't since the trout stopped biting 15 years ago.

"You walk up five times and don't get a fish, you say forget it," he says.

Reardon thought then it was bad luck that kept trout off his hooks. Now he thinks it's something else — the same thing that made all the fish turn belly up in Beaver Pond, 10 miles away. Something in the rain.

Reardon's awakening has been reflected across New Hampshire, where this week residents will consider a resolution urging Congress to halve smokestack emissions — mostly in the Midwest — that scientists believe fall as acid rain on the Northeast and Canada.

"We never knew what was going on," says Reardon, a fisherman since 1938. "It didn't seem to make sense that something they're doing out in the Midwest would affect our fishing here. But apparently it is."

In most communities, the acid rain resolution will be voted Tuesday at town meetings. About 60 percent of the state's 920,000 residents live in small towns and thus can vote at town meetings, the 303-year-old ritual of Yankee self-government.

"The support for it (the resolution) has been overwhelming," says Martha Lyman, head of a drive that in seven weeks placed it on town meeting warrants in 193 of the state's 221 towns. "People have just responded to it."

"We've raised this into a national dialogue," adds her associate, Scott Martin. "We've got the presidential candidates talking about it."

AP Laserphoto

Patrick Reardon thinks something in the air — acid rain caused by emissions from Midwest states — is causing the acid level in New Hampshire lakes to be so high.

But the talk may be too late for Reardon's old fishing hole, its water poisoned.

"I don't think anybody could look ahead and see a disaster coming so plainly," says Deke Towne, the state's chief water pollution biologist who has been testing the rain since 1972. "We knew back then that something was coming down to acidify the water."

Of 302 New Hampshire lakes and ponds the state has checked since 1975, 40 are acidic, Towne says. Worse, he says, is a sharp drop in alkalinity — the natural buffer against acidity — in nearly every body of water in the state.

"I don't think it's appropriate that the patient die before we declare him seriously ill," says Towne. "We're wearing out our buffer. More and more lakes are becoming acidic."

Towne and Ms. Lyman's Acid Rain Education Project say more than fishing is at stake. They cite studies saying acid rain may kill or stunt trees, corrode buildings and bridges, threaten water supplies; mask vistas in haze, even dull the finish on cars.

The issue could affect the showing of Sen. John Glenn in next year's New Hampshire primary, the nation's first showcase for presidential contenders. The Ohio Democrat, whose state is the Midwest's biggest emitter of sulfur dioxide from coal-burning plants, says more study is needed before emissions from states east of the Mississippi are slashed.

Glenn says studies show that car exhausts also contribute to acid rain, and warns that the cost of smoke-cleaning devices would ruin some industries.

"I want to do whatever is possible to clearly define the problem so we can cut back on those sources," he said in New Hampshire a month ago. "I want us to get a clear picture of what is happening first."

Ms. Lyman contends that Ohio could halve its emissions by installing antipollution devices on power plants and disputes utility claims that the cost is prohibitive.

Northeast cities top poverty list

WASHINGTON (AP) — Newark, N.J., leads the Census Bureau's list of the 10 poorest cities in the nation, as cities from the northeast are replacing those from the South on the impoverished list.

The list, based on 1980 census figures, has five cities from the northeast. Ten years earlier, Newark was 10th and the only northeastern city on the list.

The nation's second poorest city in 1980 was Atlanta, which did not appear on the 10-city list in 1970. No. 3 was New Orleans, which was first in 1970.

Tied for fourth were Hartford, Conn., and Paterson, N.J., with a poverty level of 25.2 percent. They were followed by Miami, 24.5 percent; New Haven, Conn., 23.2 percent; Baltimore, 22.9 percent; Macon, Ga., 22.4 percent; and Savannah, Ga., 22.3 percent.

The nation's poverty level varies according to the size of family. In 1980, a typical poverty level was considered to be $7,412 for a family of four.

More Northeast commuters stranded

Suburban transit system joins strike list

NEW YORK (AP) — About 85,000 commuters from the northern suburbs crowded into buses, cars, limousines, subways and even helicopters to reach work today on a rainy morning after a trainmen's strike shut down the Metro-North railroad.

The walkout, which affects commuters living in Connecticut and New York suburbs, came almost a week after trainmen struck the NJ Transit rail system, forcing 70,000 commuters from New Jersey to find other ways to get to work.

Traffic on highways leading into the city became heavy shortly after dawn, as motorists left home early to beat the rush.

By 7 a.m., traffic was heavy on the Cross-Bronx Expressway, and a traffic reporter for a local radio station described "an automotive avalanche" on several local highways.

Buses picked up passengers at the closed railroad stations and carried them to subway terminals in the Bronx. Most riders seemed resigned to the incovenience and added expense — 75 cents each way for a subway ride many otherwise would not have needed.

"I guess you just have to make do," said Nancy Zimmerman, an employee of USA Today in Manhattan, as she walked from a bus to a subway in the northeastern Bronx. "We really don't have much of a choice."

"I've done this before, and I guess somewhere along the line I'll do it again," said Peter Gutman of Larchmont.

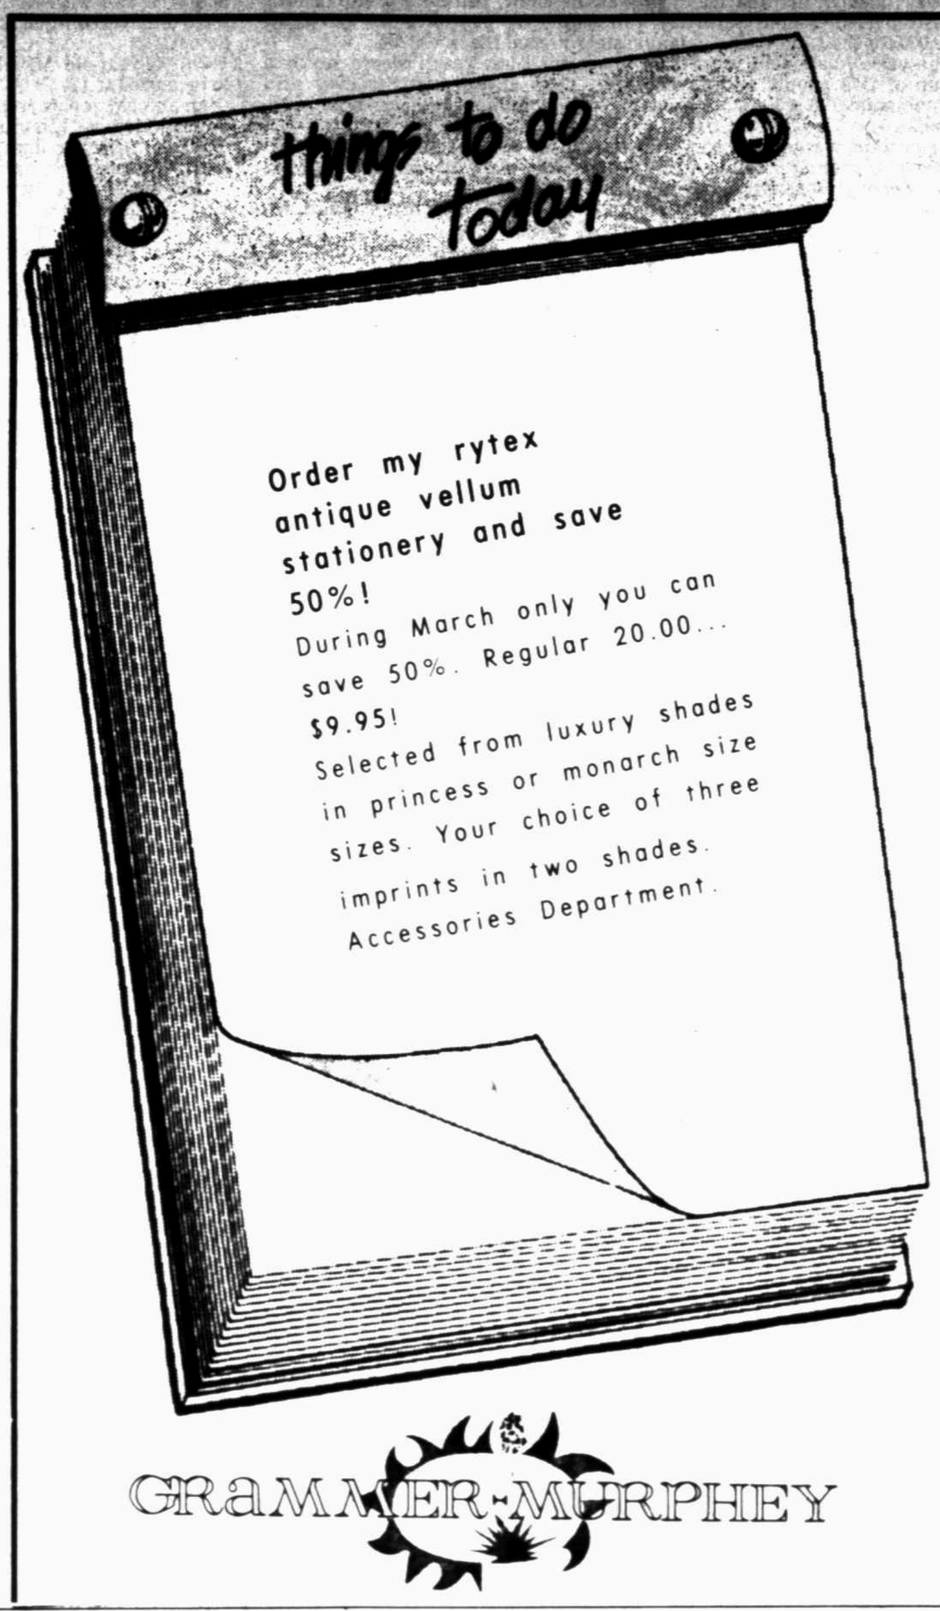

The Metropolitan Transit Authority said subway cars had been added to handle an extra 25,000 passengers.

The Metro-North walkout was announced by Edward Yule Jr., an official of the United Transportation Union, at 2:30 a.m., 2½ hours after a strike deadline expired.

"We are sorry to do this to the commuters, but management left us no other choice," Yule said. "We will do everything we can to make it a short strike, but it will probably be a long strike."

Richard Ravitch, chairman of the Metropolitan Transportation Authority — Metro-North's parent organization — also predicted a protracted walkout "if the attitude of the union remains unchanged."

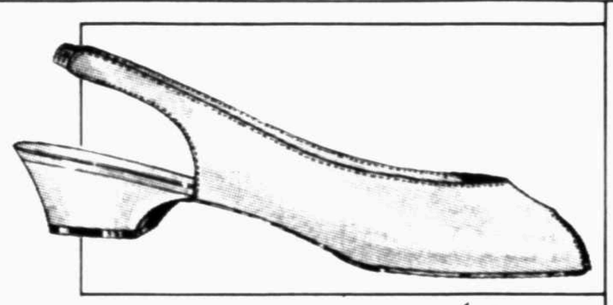

The last Metro-North trains of the night departed Grand Central Terminal while talks continued past the deadline, but picketers replaced commuters at the terminal early today.

Walker ineffective as USFL opens season

Herschel who?

"We didn't block as well as we should have for him — we can help him out a lot more than we did today," Chuck Fairbanks, coach of the New Jersey Generals, said of Herschel Walker's less-than-spectacular pro debut Sunday.

The high-priced running back who left the University of Georgia a year early for a $5-million, three-year contract, did score the game's first touchdown. But he gained only 65 yards on 16 carries and by the second quarter, was largely forgotten by the crowd of 34,002 in the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum.

Instead, all eyes were on Tom Ramsey and Tony Boddie as the Los Angeles Express beat the Generals 20-15 in a season-opening United States Football League game, one of five played Sunday.

"This was real fun," said Ramsey, a former UCLA quarterback who passed for two touchdowns. "I think this is one of the more exciting games I've ever played in. The fans got their money's worth. When the fans are with you, like these fans were, it fires me up."

Ramsey, who played his college ball in the same stadium last year when he was the nation's college passing percentage leader, turned things around when he replaced former National Football Leaguer Mike Rae with the Express trailing 9-6.

Boddie, a 12th-round draft choice out of Montana State, rushed for 77 yards on 13 carries and caught five passes for 49 yards.

Meanwhile, Walker was generally ineffective. Usually a prime pass receiver as well as a runner, the Heisman Trophy winner caught only one pass, for three yards.

"It's tougher than I thought it would be," said Walker, who had been on his way to becoming the most productive runner in collegiate history. "A lot of the guys had more speed than I expected to see. And the execution was better; I guess that's the biggest adjustment I have to make."

"Herschel made some mistakes out there, but certainly nothing that can't be corrected," said Fairbanks. "I said before the game that we'd use other backs simply because Herschel had been with us only a week."

Fairbanks added, "We didn't help Herschel a lot. In the second half, we were in a catchup situation early, and I felt I had to take him out because of his lack of preparation."

Blitz 28, Federals 7

Rookie Trumaine Johnson caught one touchdown pass and set up a second to lead Chicago past Washington and give Coach George Allen a triumphant return to the nation's capital.

Greg Landry, a veteran of 14 years with the NFL's Detroit Lions and Baltimore Colts, repeatedly found the seams in the Federal secondary, completing 19 of 26 passes for 251 yards and two touchdowns.

The Blitz's No. 1 draft choice out of Grambling, Johnson ran away from the Washington secondary to catch 11 passes for 158 yards, including a 23-yard touchdown reception.

Allen, who was fired in 1977 after leading the Washington Redskins for seven years, was greeted warmly by the 38,010 fans who ignored a steady drizzle and a regional TV telecast to attend the new league's inaugural game in Washington.

"I wasn't particularly happy about playing our opening game here in Washington because of all the distractions. I would have rather played in Birmingham," Allen said.

He added, however: "I love Washington. I was very emotional out there during the National Anthem."

Stars 13, Gold 7

Quarterback Chuck Fusina scored a touchdown and David Trout kicked two field goals to lead Philadelphia over Denver. The Stars' defense, questioned before the season, put on a last-minute, goal-line stand to hold off what the fans in Mile High Stadium thought was going to be a winning Gold touchdown.

"Coming into the game, we didn't know much about Denver," said Philadelphia Coach Jim Mora. "We had to feel our way initially. Denver probably felt the same way we did.

"Our offense had opportunities they didn't take advantage of, but they played well. It would have been nice to have an exhibition game, but I am very happy to win this one. It will be a very competitive league."

Bandits 21, Breakers 17

John Reaves passed for 358 yards and three touchdowns, including a 33-yard game-winning strike to Willie Gillespie, to lead Tampa Bay over Boston.

Reaves, who had a stormy NFL career after leaving the University of Florida as the NCAA's all-time passing leader in 1971, completed 28 of 39 passes and connected with Gillespie with 10:17 remaining.

Invaders 24, Wranglers 0

Fred Besana fired two touchdown passes to Wyatt Henderson — including a 53-yard bomb in the first quarter — as Oakland defeated Arizona.

Besana, a 29-year-old quarterback out of California, connected with Henderson on the first and last touchdowns of the game as the Invaders dominated the Wranglers from start to finish.

The game was watched by a crowd of 45,167, biggest of any USFL contest. The Philadelphia-Denver game in the fledgling league was a close second, with 45,102.

McEnroe's loss eliminates U.S. from Davis Cup play

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Guillermo Vilas gave John McEnroe a genuine tennis lesson, overwhelming the American ace to lead Argentina to a 3-2 upset victory that eliminated the defending champion United States team from Davis Cup competition.

McEnroe, who dropped his first singles match to Jose Luis Clerc, controlled play during the first game Sunday, when he broke Vilas' service at love. The American jumped out to a 4-2 lead, but his dominance was short-lived. Vilas won 6-4, 6-0, 6-1.

Vilas, combining power and precision in one of the best performances of his career, won the next 15 games, breaking McEnroe's service seven times in succession.

When McEnroe charged the net, Vilas passed him with suberbly placed shots down the line or dropped topspin lobs inches inside the baseline.

McEnroe looked more and more dejected as Vilas returned his best shots with sharp winners. When the American finally held his serve in the penultimate game, he raised his arms to the 11,000 spectators on hand in a gesture of mock triumph.

Argentina, which lost a hard-fought final to the United States in 1981, advanced to the quarterfinals against Italy July 8.

Vilas defeated Gene Mayer 6-3, 6-3, 6-4 on Friday, and McEnroe fell to Jose Luis Clerc 6-4, 6-0, 3-6, 4-6, 7-5 in a match concluded Saturday morning after being suspended Friday evening for lack of light.

McEnroe and Peter Fleming beat Vilas and Clerc 2-6, 10-8, 6-1, 3-6, 6-1 in Saturday's doubles.

Mayer downed Argentine reserve Alejandro Ganzabal later Sunday 6-4, 3-6, 10-8.

Vilas victory Sunday — on the slow clay courts favored by the Argentines — gave him a 7-6 lifetime edge against McEnroe.

McEnroe continued his singles losing streak at the Buenos Aires Lawn Tennis Club. He dropped both his singles contests — also to vilas and Clerc — when Argentina eliminated the U.S. in 1980. That was the only year in the past five years the Americans failed to win the cup. Czechoslovakia took it that year.

Argentina and the United States have met eight times in Davis cup play. The U.S. leads 5-3.

In another upset, Paraguay shocked Czechoslovakia 3-2. Francisco Gonzalez won the decisive match with a 6-3, 12-10, 3-6, 6-3 victory over Tomas Smid. The Czechs, who won the Davis Cup in 1980, feature Ivan Lendl, the world's top player.

Lendl beat Gonzalez on Friday but Paraguay, playing in its first Davis Cup zonal championship since 1932, got a victory from Victor Pecci in the other opening day singles. Pecci beat Smid, then teamed with Gonzalez to win the doubles over Lendl and Smid on Saturday.

Yannick Noah took his singles match over Vadim Borisov 6-2, 6-2 before Konstantin Pugaev gave the Soviet Union its lone point by defeating Henri Leconte 10-8, 6-4.

Miller holds off Nicklaus, captures Inverrary Classic

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (AP) — Johnny Miller is climbing up the steps, one by one, just as he did a decade ago.

And, just as the Golden Boy did in the early 1970s, a more-mature Miller is doing now — setting his sights on the top of pro golf's heap.

"This is a step up the ladder just like I took in '72 and '73," Miller said after he'd turned back Jack Nicklaus' late bid and scored a two-shot victory Sunday in the Honda-Inverrary Golf Classic.

"I may have skipped a step or two, maybe three, back in the '70s. But I'm taking them one at a time now," Miller said following a solid, 3-under-par 69 that provided him with his 22nd Professional Golfers Association tour triumph on a 278 total, 10 under par for four trips over the 7,129-yard Inverrary Country Club layout.

"I've always been a super inconsistent player, even when I was winning everything," said Miller, now 35.

"Over the winter, I set two goals for myself. One is that, for the first time in my career, I'm going to be a consistent player. I had a consistent year last year. I only won once, but I had a stroke average of 70.7 and that's not bad. I was top-10 five or six times.

"Well, this year, I want to be even more consistent. I've always played good on the West Coast, but I've never played good in the spring and summer. This year, particularly with the way I'm putting, I'm expecting a good spring and summer.

"This win is a big step in that direction. And it's a step up the ladder. I think I'm ready to make a shot at the leaders (of the game). No. 2 or No. 3. I might not quite be ready for No. 1 yet. Maybe next year.

"And the other goal, well, that's win another major and win it this year," said Miller, who won the 1973 U.S. Open and the 1976 British Open.

He paused for a moment and reconsidered.

"I might be ready for that now," he said. "I might be ready to do that now, win in the majors. If my nerves hold up. If I can pretend, work real hard and pretend that it's the Tallahassee Open and not the Masters.

"If I can keep on putting like this, putting consistently, I think I can challenge for the top again, challenge in the majors.

"I think it's going to be an exciting year for me."

It was an exciting windup over the windswept course. Almost, Miller admitted with a smile, too exciting.

"Jack provided the drama — almost too much," Miller said.

Mike Donald, Mike Sullivan and Fred Couples tied at 281. Donald and Couples had closing 71s, Sullivan 70. Tom Kite, Ray Floyd, Hal Sutton and Wayne Levi followed at 282. Kite shot 69, Floyd 70, Sutton 71 and Levi 74.

USFL's opening day a measured success

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Sports Writer

In all its preseason hoopla, the United States Football League kept emphasizing one word — competitive. The new league's aim, its drumbeaters said, would be to provide football fans with a spring and summer of close, exciting football and a host of new young stars.

If that's so, the USFL's opening day was a good start.

Three of the five games weren't decided until late in the fourth quarter — the exceptions were the 28-7 rout of Washington by George Allen's Chicago Blitz, and the Oakland Invaders' 24-0 shutout of Arizona.

In the contest that much of the nation saw on television — the Los Angeles Express' 20-15 win over the New Jersey Generals — the Express stopped the Generals on the two-yard-line in the final 45 seconds. In another televised game, Denver, trailing Philadelphia 13-7, also failed on fourth down at the Stars' two in the final minute.

"Fantastic!" raved Russell Doris, 24, of Norwalk, Calif, leaving the game in Los Angeles. "I bought a ticket because I was curious and I liked the price ($11). The game has been very exciting. I'm definitely going to get season tickets and come back."

Moreover, the standouts on the USFL's first day were just what Commissioner Chet Simmons ordered. With the exception of John Reaves, the much-traveled and much-troubled quarterback who threw for 358 yards in Tampa Bay's 21-17 win over Boston, and gray-haired Greg Landry, who quarterbacked Chicago in its rout, Sunday's stars were the young players around which the USFL hopes to build.

There was Trumaine Johnson of Chicago, a rookie from Grambling who caught 11 of Landry's passes for 159 yards; Tony Boddie, Los Angeles' 12th-round draft choice from Montana State, who outgained the rusty Herschel Walker and Boddie's teammate, Tom Ramsey, who relieved veteran Mike Rae in the second quarter and threw for the Express' two touchdowns.

There were no sellouts on opening day, but the average attendance was 40,923, including 38,010 who sat through a drizzle in 55,000-seat RFK stadium in Washington and a high of 45,167 at Sun Devil Stadium in Tempe, Ariz.

By comparison, the opening day average in the World Football League in 1974 was 43,104, with a high of 59,112 in Jacksonville. However, great disparities were later discovered between the number of people in the parks and the number of paid admissions at games in the WFL, which lasted two seasons.

But the WFL was in direct competiton with the National Football League. Many of the more than 50 fans interviewed by the Associated Press at Sunday's games seemed to think the USFL and the National Football League could co-exist, spring and fall and most were positive in their comments.

In Los Angeles, the only game site with a major league baseball team, some fans said they could follow the USFL and baseball.

"I also go to Dodgers' games, we have season tickets to them, too, but that won't interfere with attending these games," said Dorothy Itzkowitz, who was at the Los Angeles Coliseum.

"We're still avid Redskin fans here, but there is room for another team," said Noel Woolsey of Falls Church, Va., who was at RFK Stadium for the Blitz-General game. Another Washington fan, Dick Kerck, said: "I've been on the waiting list for Redskin tickets for seven years. I'm not getting in there unless they double the size of the stadium."

"They're not going to replace my Broncos," said Gerri Ferguson of Denver at the game between the hometown Gold and the Philadelphia Stars. "But it gives a lot of players a chance to play. I think there are a lot of good players and most of them don't get to play in the NFL."

"I think there's room for spring football, summer football," said Chuck Gray of Torrance, Calif, who was at the Generals-Express game.

In Tampa, the Bandits promotional effort featuring a masked rider and horse seemed to pay off and so did the Bandits' wide-open style, which some fans found more exciting than the defensively oriented NFL Bucs.

"I'll be back," said Ralph Bliven, who drove 60 miles to see the game in Tampa. "It's exciting football, not stuffed shirt, like the NFL." Said Hal Byrnes of Largo, Fla: "I liked the game much better than the Bucs. There was more passing, more excitement."

"I'm sold on them," said another fan, Pat O'Hara. "It's not sloppy and I really liked the horse."

And then there was Connie Hunter, whose husband Bill said: "I didn't give her a choice."

"My off season went from six months to one month," said Mrs. Hunter. "He drags me to the Bucs' games, too. It looks like I'm going to miss a lot of beach time."

It's tournament time in college basketball with 49 berths in the NCAA playoffs up for grabs. Three of the spots were determined over the weekend with Princeton, North Carolina A&T and Alabama-Birmingham gaining spots in the NCAA field.

Postseason tournament winners and regular-season winners in the Ivy League, Big Ten, Western Athletic Conference, Pacific-10 and West Coast Athletic Conference get automatic berths. Those conferences conduct no postseason tourneys.

No. 2 Virginia (25-3) and No. 3 Louisville (27-3), tuning up for their postseason tourneys which begin this week, survived scares Sunday.

Ralph Sampson, playing his last home game for Virginia, hit a jump shot with four seconds left to give the Cavaliers an 83-81 Atlantic Coast Conference triumph over Maryland. Milt Wagner scored all of Louisville's six points in overtime to lift the Cardinals over Metro Conference foe Memphis State, ranked No. 17, 64-62.

"I wish I could stay another four years," said Sampson, "but I've got to move on." The 7-foot-4 center finished with 23 points, 10 rebounds and four blocked shots to give Virginia a share of the ACC crown with North Carolina.

At Louisville, Wagner hit the game-winning goal, a 15-footer, with one second left against Memphis State to give the Cardinals an unbeaten record in the Metro Conference. Keith Lee scored 21 points for Memphis State, 21-6 overall but only 6-6 in the conference.

"You have to keep Louisville off the boards," said Tiger Coach Dana Kirk. "The difference was the rebounding. They got most of their baskets off second shots."

Cliff Pruitt scored a game-high 15 points in helping Alabama-Birmingham to a 64-47 victory over South Florida. The Blazers held Charley Bradley, who had been averaging 28 points, to 12.

UAB, which made it to the NCAA final eight last season, finished with a 19-13 record.

Princeton, paced by Rick Simkus' 13 points, won the Ivy League title by topping Columbia 72-56, while Joe Binion's 22 points and 14 rebounds powered N.C. A&T over Howard 71-64 for the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference tourney crown.

New Mexico girls decide who's best in basketball

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — Albuquerque Eldorado, Kirtland Central, Clayton and Melrose are beginning their reigns today as the best New Mexico has to offer in girls' high school basketball.

The four squads captured state titles in their respective divisions Saturday with Eldorado taking the Class AAAA prize, while K-Central won in Class AAA, Clayton in Class AA and Melrose in Class A.

Eldorado's unbeaten Eagles trounced Hobbs 76-55 in the AAAA title battle, K-Central nipped Bernalillo 56-54 in a thriller for the AAA crown, Clayton rolled over Thoreau 70-31 to breeze to the AA championship and Melrose held off Reserve 54-47 to claim top honors in the small school division.

SWC starts post-season tournament Monday

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

By the dead reckoning of all the experts, the Southwest Conference post-season tournament, which starts tonight in Lubbock, Fort Worth and Dallas, is expected to end with another showdown between Houston and Arkansas.

Should that be the case, let's inject a little intrigue.

There will be no 45-second shot clock in the tournament so the Razorbacks, should they advance to the finals, could slow it down against the run-and-gun Cougars.

Houston Coach Guy Lewis isn't worried.

"I played 27 years without a shot clock and I think we can play a little longer," he said after the Cougars had charged through the regular season unbeaten with a 93-64 victory over Baylor.

"I think a whole lot of teams are going to change," said Houston's Larry Micheaux. "I don't think teams can compete with us in a running game."

Houston, Arkansas, and Texas A&M are idle tonight during the SWC's first round.

The Cougars won't play again until 6 p.m. Friday in Reunion Arena in the semi-finals.

Second-place Arkansas, which drubbed Rice 82-55 Saturday, will have a bye until 9 p.m. Friday when it plays in the semi-finals.

The tournament championship game is noon Saturday and will be televised nationally.

The third-place Texas Aggies, who completed a long climb up the ladder with a 93-70 victory over Texas Tech, earned a bye until Thursday night when they play in a second round game.

UTEP must wait for WAC title

Despite a narrow loss to Hawaii on Saturday night, Texas-El Paso leads the Western Athletic Conference with an 11-5 mark at the finish of its regular season.

But UTEP must wait for the outcome of two basketball games next weekend to determine whether the school winds up as WAC champ and advances to the National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament.

Wyoming plays at Brigham Young on Saturday, and Air Force visits Utah. For UTEP to be the league winner, both BYU and Utah — now tied in second place — have to lose those games. Otherwise, several tie possibilities exist. In the event of a three-way or two-way tie after next weekend's games, tie-breaking procedures would begin.

In weekend WAC action, Utah defeated Brigham Young 64-62, and the two teams are tied for second in the conference with 10-5 records. Hawaii edged UTEP 62-61, Wyoming beat Colorado State 49-39 and San Diego triumphed over New Mexico 77-73. And in non-conference play, Air Force defeated Southern Illinois-Edwardsville 59-51.

Don Haskins, coach of league-leading Texas-El Paso, wasn't happy with the performance of his team against Hawaii over the weekend.

"We played out of control a lot," Haskins said. "We were very tight and missed a lot of critical free throws."

But despite Hawaii's 62-61 victory, UTEP remains atop the WAC at 11-5, 19-9 overall, while the Rainbow Warriors finished up in fourth place at 9-7, 17-11 overall.

For Utah, it took three overtimes and a free throw by David Cecil to defeat BYU. Utah now is 10-5 in the conference and 15-13 for the season, while BYU drops to 10-5 in the WAC and 14-14 overall.

Peter Williams led the Utes with 22 points. Devin Durrant of the Cougars led all scorers with 25.

O'Brian thinks NBA strike talks will resume

NEW YORK (AP) — National Basketball Association Commissioner Larry O'Brien says a strike by players would not benefit them or the league.

"There are no winners in a sports strike — only losers," O'Brien said Sunday in an interview on CBS' 'Sports Sunday.' "The players would lose salaries and benefits and owners would lose a tremendous amount of revenue. If there's a strike, the teams that are having difficulty will continue having difficulty."

O'Brien said that stalled negotiations may resume this week between management and players, who have threatened to strike April 2 if an agreement isn't reached on a new contract.

The commissioner said that he had received a letter from Larry Fleisher, general counsel for the NBA Players Association proposing the resumption of talks that broke off last Tuesday after a 24-minute meeting. He said NBA negotiators would be in touch with Fleisher early in the week to set up a meeting.

On Saturday, the league announced it would attempt to delay players' free agent rights if they strike. It said it had asked Special Master Kingman Brewster to declare that "any player who fails to complete his playing contract because of a strike will not become a veteran free agent this June."

Brewster, former president of Yale University, is the league's arbitrator under a settlement between the league and the players' union.

O'Brien, unlike baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn and National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle, said he would stay actively involved in the labor dispute.

"I believe it's my responsibility," O'Brien said.

Slumping Philadelphia loses again

NBA Roundup

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The New Jersey Nets, after taking some of the luster off Philadelphia's storybook season, didn't lose any respect for the 76ers.

"Let's not be brainwashed by this win," forward Buck Williams said after hitting 10 of 14 shots, scoring 22 points and pulling down 15 rebounds in New Jersey's 112-106 triumph Sunday over the 76ers. "Philadelphia is a great team."

"The biggest factor to beat them (Philadelphia) is that everyone has to play well," Nets Coach Larry Brown said. "And that was the case."

It was the second consecutive loss for the 50-9 76ers, the first time this season they have lost twice in a row. No National Basketball Association team has ever made it through a season without losing two straight.

Elsewhere in the NBA, Washington beat Atlanta 102-91, Chicago trimmed Indiana 106-98, Kansas City crushed San Diego 144-105, San Antonio downed Cleveland 117-98 and Utah stopped Portland 110-105.

Philadelphia, despite sub-par performances from its star players, rallied to within one point of the Nets in the final period after trailing by as many as 14 in the third period.

In addition to Williams' sparkling play, Albert King scored 22 points, Otis Birdsong added 15, including two crucial field goals in the final two minutes, and center Mike Gminski had 12 points and nine rebounds in relief of foul-plagued starter Darryl Dawkins.

Gminski and Dawkins combined to hold all-star Moses Malone to 15 points, 9.5 below his average, and eight rebounds, only the second time this season he didn't reach double figures in that category.

In addition, Julius Erving scored only 12 points, half his average, and Andrew Toney had 15, four under his norm.

"Everybody chipped in," Williams said. "Our bench really contributed and everyone helped out on defense. When you play well defensively, the offense takes care of itself."

"Their defense was designed to stop me," Erving said. "Every time I touched the ball I drew a crowd, as did Moses."

"One person can't stop Dr. J," said King, who guarded Erving most of the game. "You need help from your teammates. He's one of the greatest players in the game. Maybe he stops himself sometimes. Today he just had a bad game."

Kings 144, Clippers 105

Kansas City had 10 players with eight or more points, led by Mike Woodson with 22, in its easy victory over San Diego.

The Clippers, who lost their fifth straight game, got 26 points from rookie Terry Cummings, but they missed center Bill Walton, who is out with a sprained ankle.

The Kings took control of the game with a 19-6 spurt in the first six minutes of the second quarter that gave them a 54-35 lead. They led by as many as 45 points in the fourth quarter.

Bullets 102, Hawks 91

Jeff Ruland and Rick Mahorn paced a 49-28 rebounding advantage as Washington broke Atlanta's six-game winning streak.

Ruland had 25 points and 15 rebounds, while Mahorn added 17 points and 17 rebounds for the Bullets, who overcame a third-quarter deficit by outscoring Atlanta 21-3 in the closing minutes of the period.

Spurs 117, Cavaliers 98

Artis Gilmore scored 23 points while playing only in the first three quarters of San Antonio's victory against Cleveland.

Gilmore hit nine of his 11 shots from the field as the Spurs led 92-74 after three periods.

George Gervin added 20 points for San Antonio, while Cliff Robinson scored 25 and World Free 23 for Cleveland.

Bulls 106, Pacers 98

Reggie Theus scored 28 points as Chicago handed Indiana its ninth straight defeat.

The Bulls led by as many as 18 points in the second quarter, but the Pacers chipped away at the deficit and finally trimmed it to two early in the fourth quarter as Indiana scored 11 straight points. Then Chicago countered with eight points in a row, four of them by Theus, to regain control.

Jazz 110, Blazers 105

John Drew scored 10 of his game-high 31 points in the fourth quarter to lead Utah over Portland.

The Jazz, winners of four of their last six games despite a 23-40 overall mark, outscored the Trail Blazers 22-17 in the final period. Two free throws by Drew gave Utah the lead for good with 1:34 left and he kept his team ahead with four more foul shots.

The Blazers were led by Jim Paxson with 27 points, Wayne Cooper with 23 and Calvin Natt with 22.

Hawks, Stars in tight NHL race

NHL Roundup

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

The top of the Norris Division is no place for visitors.

The Chicago Black Hawks lead the Minnesota North Stars by four points in the only tight race for a National Hockey League division title. Both teams seem to be gearing up for the playoffs in fine style, witness their home-ice performances Sunday night.

The Black Hawks rode two goals and an assist by center Denis Savard to a 5-4 victory over the Canadiens, their third victory in as many outings against Montreal this season. And the North Stars blitzed the Los Angeles Kings 8-3 to keep pace as Steve Payne and George Ferguson both scored three goals and Bobby Smith collected a goal and four assists.

Chicago grabbed a 5-2 lead and withstood a late rally by Montreal, which staged a similar comeback Saturday night in beating St. Louis.

"It was impossible to come back two nights in a row, considering we scored five goals in 10 minutes against the Blues and almost pulled it off tonight," said Montreal Coach Bob Berry.

"The Hawks were destined to have a good year against us," said Montreal forward Bob Gainey. "We had trouble getting out of our own end tonight and we kind of relaxed in the second period."

Savard, who scored twice in the opening period, was surprised by his team's success against the Canadiens this season.

"If anyone had told me that the Canadiens would not win a regular-season game against us this year, I could have got 10,000-1 odds in Montreal before the season.

"I guess I always think that because I grew up there. My biggest hope was to play for them. But I don't hold any grudges. In fact I feel kind of sorry for them now, because I guess the mighty have fallen."

North Stars 8, Kings 3

Minnesota is unbeaten in five games and has lost only two of its last 13.

"Everybody kind of got excited," said Payne, who got the third regular-season hat trick of his five-year career. "We haven't had that kind of game in a while."

Indeed, it was the most goals scored by the North Stars since Dec. 9.

Ferguson's three goals gave him eight for the year and Smith took over the team lead in points with 69.

Nordiques 7, Whalers 3

Quebec routed Hartford for the second straight game. On Saturday, Michel Goulet scored three times to pace the Nordiques to a 10-3 romp. Sunday, it was Peter Stastny's turn to score a hat trick. Rookie Louis Sleigher added two goals for Quebec, while Ron Francis had three for the Whalers, who have lost eight in a row.

Bruins 5, Oilers 2

Boston disarmed the high-scoring Oilers by striking for two goals in the opening 1:17 and held Wayne Gretzky, the NHL's runaway scoring leader, to one goal. Rick Middleton had a pair of goals for the Bruins, including his 300th career tally.

Sabres 6, Red Wings 4

Buffalo, the hottest team in the league, stretched its unbeaten streak to eight games (7-0-1), including seven straight victories, as Tony McKegney contributed two goals.

"A lot of guys are scoring," McKegney said.

"We're getting scoring from all our lines," Sabres Coach Scotty Bowman said, "and the kids are getting the goals."

Flyers 5, Penguins 3

Ilkka Sinisalo scored two goals for the Flyers but suffered a possible broken bone in his hand with 1:21 remaining when Pittsburgh defenseman Paul Baxter swatted him with his stick.

Devils 6, Rangers 4

Steve Larmer had two goals and two assists as New Jersey scored only its fourth road victory of the season and first away from home in 14 games. Mark Pavelich scored twice for New York.

"We worked pretty hard tonight and got a few breaks," said Larmer. "I guess it was just our night. We wanted to win here and gain a few fans. It's just across the river."

Canucks 6, Jets 2

The suddenly revitalized Canucks completed a three-game sweep over the Jets and moved past Winnipeg into third place in the Smythe Division. Darcy Rota continued his hot streak with two goals for the second straight night — he has a career-high 32 goals.

Vancouver leads Winnipeg by one point and Los Angeles by two in the race for the final two Smythe playoff berths.

Glad's new "Handle-Tie" garbage bags eliminate the need for conventional metal twist-ties.

GLAD'S NEW BAGS GET A HANDLE ON TRASH

Getting rid of garbage and trash costs Americans a lot of time - - and money.

Using leftover grocery bags as refuse carriers has lost favor with many people, so manufacturers now market a variety of plastic bags.

Although the polyethylene sacks come in a variety of sizes and shapes, almost all feature twist-tie closures, which never seem to be within reach when you are wrestling a sack full of garbage.

Union Carbide Corp. claims that its Glad Handle-Tie bags eliminate the need for twist-ties.

"See how easy Glad makes it!" says the headline in a direct-mail advertisement for the product.

Underneath three photos of bags being tied, lifted and carried, the ad continues: "Tie...handles together, no need for twist-ties. Lift...the bag by the handles. Carry...the garbage away."

A Union Carbide spokeman said the bag is the type that fits as a liner inside a container. The handle-tie provides consumers with an "easy way out" of dealing with twist-ties.

To test the ad's claim regarding the bags' ease of closing, the spokesman suggested merely following the directions on the package. He did mention one caution, however: "Getting all plastic bags of the (rigid) container can be difficult, so tie the bag while it is still in the container."

Following those suggestions, we snapped a bag's handles apart, inserted the bag into a container, loaded the bag with refuse, tied the handles together and then lifted the bag out of the can.

As the ad claims, those tasks were easily accomplished with no fumbling for a twist-tie to close the bag.

Generally, we found the Handle-Tie bags useful. We did find, however, that they were more expensive — 12.5 cents apiece — than similar 13-gallon bags of the same thickness. Hefty tall kitchen bags with twist ties cost approximately 8.5 cents apiece, Lady Lee tall kitchen bags with twist ties were approximately 6.6 cents apiece and Glad's own regular twist-tie bags were also about 8.5 cents apiece.

Yarborough leads rain-delayed Carolina

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — Rain and snow have become a way of life on race weekends at North Carolina Motor Speedway.

Six times in a row and seven of the last eight times rain or snow has postponed a scheduled Grand National stock car race at the speedway in the sandhills of North Carolina.

NASCAR officials managed to get Sunday's Warner Hodgdon Carolina 500 under way — albeit an hour and 50 minutes late — but rain eventually suspended the action just 143 laps into the scheduled 492-lap event, forcing rescheduling of the race until next Sunday.

"There just seems to be something about this place," said Cale Yarborough, the Daytona 500 winner who was just ahead of Bobby Allison when the race was red-flagged.

"It's very hard on everybody," Yarborough added. "We'd just like to go racing, not worry about the weather. But that's the way it seems to go. At some places, the weather always seems to be a factor."

An estimated crowd of more than 30,000 turned out Sunday despite a morning-long rain that delayed the start of the race. And most of them stayed around until the rain began coming down hard again about an hour after the cars were red-flagged.

The first 22 laps Sunday were run under a caution flag as the 35 starters helped dry out the soaked 1.017-mile asphalt oval. The green flag fell on lap 23 with pole-sitter Ricky Rudd still out front.

Dale Earnhardt jumped into the lead briefly, but Yarborough took over on lap 36 and, on lap 39, the engine in the Chevrolet driven by Dave Marcis let loose in turn one. The cockpit filled with smoke and flames shot out from beneath the car, but Marcis kept it on the track and shut off the engine, quenching the flames.

He finally rolled the car to a stop at the end of the backstretch while sitting in the driver's-side window and holding onto the steering wheel. He was not injured.

Neil Bonnett and Yarborough, both driving Chevrolet Monte Carlos, fought it out from that point until the red flag.

Earnhardt, who had fallen back into the pack after a pit stop, bumped fenders with Lake Speed on lap 72 and slid his Ford Thunderbird backwards into the first-turn guardrail. Earnhardt spun off the wall, garthered the car back in and drove it into the pits where it was retired with a bent frame.

The fourth caution flag of the race was waved on lap 109 when Buddy Baker blew the engine in his Ford Thunderbird and made a couple of loops coming out of the fourth turn. He was able to drive the crippled car into the pits.

On the same lap with Yarborough and Allison when the race was halted were, in order, Bonnett, Richard Petty, Terry Labonte, Joe Ruttman, Darrell Waltrip, Harry Gant, Tim Richmond and Rudd.

The Midland College Booster Club has put together a travel package for Wednesday's 7:30 p.m. Bi-Regional playoff game between Midland College and San Jacinto in Fort Worth.

Plans call for a chartered flight to leave Midland sometime Wednesday afternoon and return after the game that night. Buses will also transfer the MC fans from the airport to Fort Worth's Wilkerson-Greines Activity Center, where the game will be played.

All price information, time schedules and reservations can be obtained by calling Chaparral Center at 684-9811.

Injuries dominate spring training

By The Associated Press

Mike Schmidt's knee and Jim Bibby's shoulder shared the spotlight at baseball's spring training camps over the weekend.

Schmidt left the Philadelphia Phillies' camp in Clearwater, Fla., Sunday and was to undergo arthroscopic surgery today in Philadelphia to discover what is causing swelling in his right knee.

Dr. Phillip Marone said Schmidt, who will miss at least 10 days of spring training, has fluid or perhaps some loose pieces of bone in the knee.

The two-time National League Most Valuable Player has had knee surgery twice before, the last time in 1971 after suffering injuries playing high school football.

"The knee swelled up a week ago and hasn't gone away," said the slugging Phillies third baseman. "When you get a little older and a little arthritis in the knee, it flares up, so I'll get it washed out."

Bibby didn't pitch for Pittsburgh in 1982 after he was the Pirates' most consistent starter from 1979-81.

On Sunday, Bibby gave up two hits and two unearned runs in two innings as the Pirates played a 10-inning intrasquad game. He said he felt fine after the outing.

"My velocity is coming around," said Bibby, who was 19-6 in 1980. "Today was just to get the feeling of playing in a game again."

In a light slate of exhibition action Sunday, former Yankee Aurelio Rodriguez singled home the tying run in the eighth inning and later scored on a double by Rick Dempsey as the Baltimore Orioles defeated New York 7-6. Rodriguez's hit broke a 4-4 deadlock and highlighted a three-run inning by the Orioles, who won despite a two-run homer by New York's Don Baylor.

Another group of Yankees salvaged a 5-5 tie against the Montreal Expos in a game stopped by mutual agreement after 12 innings. Oscar Gamble drove in four runs with a two-run double and a two-run homer for the Yankees, but Montreal scored two runs to make it 5-5 in the seventh on RBI singles by Tom Wieghaus and pitcher Dan Schatzeder.

Pedro Guerrero cracked a home run and drove in two runs to lead the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 10-1 victory over the Atlanta Braves, who managed just five hits.

Catcher Tim Laudner capped a five-run fourth inning with a run-scoring single as the Minnesota Twins defeated Rollins College 5-2. Oakland beat Grand Canyon College 4-0.

Rich Dotson was struck on the right knee by a line drive off the bat of Rudy Law during a Chicago White Sox intrasquad game, but the pitcher suffered only a bad bruise.

Palli wins first LPGA event first time out

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — French golfer Ann-Marie Palli, playing for the first time as an LPGA tourney leader, proved she could stand the heat by firing a 4-under-par 69 to build a four-stroke lead in the second round of the Samaritan Turquoise Classic.

Palli said she felt uncomfortable playing in front of Sunday's crowds on the par-73, 6,380-yard Arizona Biltmore course. She said the spectators helped her concentration because "there are so many people you don't see anybody."

After the first round, played Friday and Saturday, Palli led by one stroke, shooting a 5-under-par 68 to Dianne Dailey's 69.

In second place after Sunday's second round was 32-year-old Lynn Adams, who had been in a three-way tie for third place after the first round of the $150,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association event.

The third and final round of the event was to be played today.

Adams, a Kingsville, Texas, native who has never won an LPGA tournament, said she's worked hard at her game for the past seven years and "I know in my heart I'm just about ready."

Palli was 9-under-par at 137 Sunday after two rounds. Adams, meanwhile, shot a 2-under-par 71 for a two-round, 5-under-par total of 141.

Tied for third place at 142 were Vicki Fergon and Chris Johnson. Dailey was at 144.

More riding bandwagon

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's purchasing managers have joined the bulls' bandwagon.

In its monthly report, the National Association of Purchasing Management said the economy expanded broadly in February, with production and incoming orders turning sharply higher.

The leading indicator — the speed of vendor deliveries — was favorable for the first time in two years, the group said Sunday. And inventories declined less than in previous months.

Also slowing was the drop in employment, registering the best showing in over a year.

The overall picture in industry is much better than had been anticipated, concluded the report, which is based on a survey of purchasing managers of 250 companies engaged in 21 industries in 40 states.

Sandra Shaber, senior economist with Chase Econometrics Associates Inc. in Bala Cynwyd, Pa., said about the purchasing managers' report: "That's all pretty consistent with what we're getting from other indicators. All of these signs point to the fact that we are in an economic recovery."

She warned, however, that "there is some undue optimism of just how fast the economic recovery is going to take place this year."

1,000 line up for six jobs

WOODHAVEN, Mich. (AP) — Nearly 1,000 applicants lined up outside a suburban Detroit cable television company in an effort to land one of six managerial and technical jobs, officials said.

The job-seekers, many wearing suits and ties, gathered outside United Cable Television an hour before the firm opened its doors, forming a line that stretched a half-mile. An hour and a half after the firm opened Saturday, 550 applicants had been processed, said Hugh MacEachern, the firm's general manager.

"We're getting some very fine people in here," MacEachern said. "People are prepared."

Nearby merchants and residents complained to Woodhaven police about traffic tie-ups, and an officer said applicants even parked in the front yard of one man's house.

"We had no choice but to have them move their cars," the officer said. "But a lot of us left feeling we're pretty lucky to have our jobs. It makes you realize how many unemployed people there are out there."

The job openings were for sales, management and technical positions, MacEachern said, adding that they had been advertised in local newspapers. United Cable serves five communities south of Detroit.

"The cable industry is growing so quick that a lot of people are getting promoted very fast," he said. "A lot of positions are opening up, but we didn't anticipate this."

Economists urge caution

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's top economist conceded the government's report that unemployment held steady compels "some need for caution" before trumpeting brighter prospects for the 11.5 million Americans out of a job.

The Labor Department Friday said that the unemployment rate in February was vitually unchanged at 10.4 percent of the civilian workforce.

An annual report by Republican members of the Joint Economic Committee, meanwhile, predicted "It will be mid-to-late 1983 before we see a significant decline in the unemployment rate," adding it might even edge up slightly in the months ahead.

In a civilian labor force of 110.5 million, the total number of unemployed rose only by 44,000 — from 11,446,000 to 11,490,000, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said.

Martin S. Feldstein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, said: "On balance, it does show some need for caution" in assessing possibilities for substantial relief in the next few months.

Money market assets down

NEW YORK (AP) — Assets of the nation's 304 money market mutual funds fell $1.7 billion this past week, the 13th consecutive weekly decline, the Investment Company Institute said.

The latest decline in the week ended Wednesday followed a $1.3 billion drop the previous week and left the funds' assets at $189.5 billion, the lowest level since they were $188.1 billion on March 10, 1982, according to the Washington-based mutual fund group.

The assets have fallen $42.9 billion since reaching a record high of $232.3 billion in the week that ended Dec. 1, 1982.

Investors have been drawing money out of the funds for a number of reasons: declining interest rates and new money market accounts that banks and other savings institutions were allowed to offer beginning last Dec. 14.

Many of the savings institutions also offered temporary premiums over existing open-market rates to draw new customers.

Meanwhile, the latest average yields on the money market funds dropped from levels last week, Donoghue's Money Fund Report, a trade newsletter, said Friday. The seven-day average yield fell to 7.76 percent in the week ended Wednesday compared with 7.82 percent the previous week, it said. The 30-day average yield dropped to 7.80 percent from 7.81 percent last week.

Bull's boys investigated

NEW YORK (AP) — Merrill Lynch & Co. has acknowledged that federal authorities subpoenaed its records.

A law journal said investigators were looking at whether the company failed to report millions of dollars worth of cash transactions.

The National Law Journal, a weekly newspaper, said Internal Revenue Service investigators were trying to determine whether racketeering cash was being "laundered" in securities transactions.

Merrill Lynch, the nation's largest investment firm, Friday issued a statement saying it was cooperating with the government, but it would not comment on the published report.

"Merrill Lynch is aware that the U.S. attorney requested documents relating to currency transactions by customers," the firm's statement said. "The company is unaware of any instances where we have not fulfilled our reporting obligations."

In a story prepared for its March 7 edition, the National Law Journal said government "attention has recently focused on sophisticated criminal elements who authorities believe are now using financial institutions, such as brokerage houses, to hide or otherwise 'launder' cash transactions."

Reagan touts free trade

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — President Reagan denounced trade protectionism — except in cases of "predatory foreign competition" — warning that it might mean a slide into world-wide political turmoil and financial chaos.

The president pledged that the United States would "carry the banner for free trade...." and urged American businesses Friday to create new jobs through export markets.

Reagan singled out for criticism legislation that would require major auto importers to make a portion of their cars in this country.

"Once such legislation is passed, every other industry would be a target for foreign retaliation," Reagan declared in remarks prepared for delivery to the Commonwealth Club.

"We would buy less from our partners, they would buy less from us, the world economic pie would shrink," he said. "Chances for political turmoil would increase dramatically."

Instead, Reagan argued, U.S. businesses should create new jobs through export markets, confident that government is an ally, not an adversary.

PSA, Braniff still dickering

By the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Although it has grounded its plan to lease 30 Braniff Airways jets, Pacific Southwest Airlines still thinks that it could work out another, perhaps less ambitious, leasing deal with Braniff.

In any event, the San Diego-based unit of PSA Inc. still plans to expand and vows to eventually operate routes out of Dallas and several other major cities, its president, Paul C. Barkley, said.

Barkley, who is also chief operating officer of the San Diego-based carrier, said last week that Braniff officials have been discussing with their creditors several alternative leasing arrangements following last Wednesday's federal appeals court ruling blocking the 30-plane lease deal.

Under that deal, which officially expired last Friday at midnight, PSA would have formed a new low-fare Texas division, doubling its size and giving it a nationwide route network with little cash outlay of its own. The new division would have employed about 2,000 former Braniff employees and operated about 100 daily flights from DallasFort Worth to more than 20 other cities.

Although PSA officials are not yet involved in negotiations concerning new deals, the airline certainly is willing, Barkley said.

"We will look at anything that makes sense," he said, adding that the number of planes to be leased under a new deal "might be smaller" and that Braniff might provide more help with start-up costs.

Barkley said a smaller deal would not have to begin during the summer to make it worthwhile for PSA. The airline had said that initiating flights in June, the beginning of the heavy summer travel time, would have been necessary for the 30-aircraft division to earn a profit and help offset heavy start-up costs.

The appeals court, however, ruled that the 30-airplane plan was tantamount to a reorganization for Braniff, which is in Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings. Thus, the deal would have been subject to formal creditor approvals and other procedures, a long, involved process precluding a summer start-up.

However, a leasing deal involving a smaller number of planes would incur more manageable start-up expenses, he said. "With five or 10 planes, everything looks different," he said. With a smaller lease plan, Barkley added, a three-to-five-month creditor approval process would not necessarily be a hindrance. And there might even be a chance that a smaller deal would not need the approvals from Braniff creditors that the larger deal would.

Barkley vowed that PSA will expand from its current emphasis on California intrastate routes no matter what happens with Braniff. "We will someday be in Dallas and Houston," he said, adding that other cities — including Portland, Ore., Denver and Albuquerque, N.M. — also are under consideration.

He predicted that the airline will earn an operating profit this year for the first time since 1980. However, he added that it may defer until 1984 delivery of six fuel-efficient DC-9 Super 80 jetliners, which it had planned to accept this year.

While PSA has been hurt by the recession and fare wars, it has weathered these misfortunes much better than many of its competitors, analysts say.

At a time when other airlines had difficulty modernizing their fleets, PSA has acquired and taken delivery of 21 DC-9 Super 80s since 1981.

Their quietness make PSA "one of the few domestic carriers able to take advantage of noise-sensitive markets," said Harry Harwood, an analyst with the Los Angeles-based brokerage of Bateman Eichler, Hill Richards Inc.

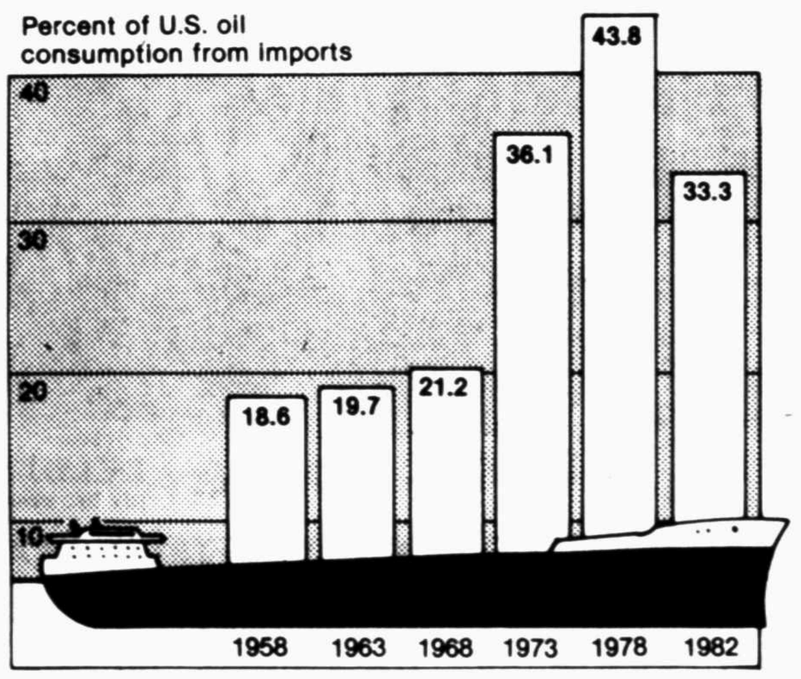

Meanwhile, PSA Inc. earned more than $50 million from sales of the tax credits associated with the purchases, which it used along with sales of 727 jets to post profits of $28.6 million in 1981 and $19.5 million in 1982, offsetting the losses from airline operations.

Recently, PSA has posted strong traffic increases and has gained market share on its California markets, particularly in the lucrative Los Angeles-San Francisco corridor, Harwood said. And two of PSA's rivals on the Los Angeles-San Francisco corridor, Pacific Express and Western Airlines, have reduced flights, he said.

"When the economy improves and fare wars moderate, PSA could be a very large earner," he said.

Oil imports

U.S. imports of oil rose steadily through the 1970's then began falling off in the 80's. Conservation measures and Alaskan oil production have helped reduce reliance on foreign oil, both in terms of total barrels and percentage of total U.S. consumption.

'The Shadow' warns double-digit inflation could return next year

By STEVEN P. ROSENFELD
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A group of economists warned today that double-digit inflation and economic stagnation could return in the next two or three years, despite growing signs of an economic recovery.

The Shadow Open Market Committee, made up of "monetarist" economists, urged the Federal Reserve Board to slow the growth of the nation's money supply, even if it means slowing the pace of the recovery. It also called for curbing the growth of federal spending, a tougher stand on loans to debt-ridden nations and went on record against protectionist trade restrictions.

The committee owes its name to its self-appointed role as a watchdog of the policy-making arm of the Fed, which is known as the Federal Open Market Committee. Monetarists believe the quantity of money determines the level of economic activity and prices. If the money supply grows too quickly, they believe inflation will be spurred; if money supply grows too slowly, the economy will be choked off.

"We have paid a very high price in this country to get rid of inflation. It would be foolish policy to squander that now," said Allan Meltzer, a Shadow Committee member and professor at the Graduate School of Industrial Administration at Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh.

While two recessions since 1980 have slowed the pace of rising prices, and falling world oil prices will help keep prices down, "nobody believes inflation has been purged from the system," Meltzer told reporters Sunday following a committee meeting.

He noted long-term interest rates remain well above the current inflation rate, indicating lenders are still demanding a high premium to protect their money from the risk of reignited inflation.

While the consumer price index is now rising at an annual rate below 4 percent, the interest rate on 30-year Treasury bonds is about 10.5 percent.

He said lenders are worried about the impact on inflation and interest rates of record federal deficits and concern that deficits will remain at historically high levels for years to come. He also cited worries about a surge in growth of the basic measure of the money supply, known as M1.

M1, which includes cash in circulation and deposits in checking-type accounts at banking institutions, grew at an annual rate of 12.8 percent during the past three months, the Fed reported Friday.

The Fed has said it would like M1 to grow between 4 percent and 8 percent between the fourth quarter of 1982 and the fourth quarter of 1983. The Shadow Committee said it seeks M1 growth of 5½ percent for that period.

A resolution submitted to Congress last week by Democratic Sens. Gary Hart of Colorado and Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York, meanwhile, seeks to prod the Fed into loosening its policy to help stimulate the current economic recovery.

But the Shadow Committee said continued rapid money growth will contribute to renewed inflation late in 1984 or early in 1985, followed either by anemic economic activity or another recession.

"The next round of inflation is always set in the policies pursued during the recovery from the preceding recession."

Burton Zwick, vice president for economic research at the Prudential Insurance Company of America in Newark, N.J., estimated 7 percent growth of M1 this year would mean inflation growing to 9 percent or 10 percent by late 1984 or early 1985.

66 Credit Union meeting Saturday

The Odessa 66 Credit Union wound up 1982 with $12,000,704.48 in assets and 4,216 members.

The credit union was organized for Phillips Petroleum company Employees and their families May 18,1949. Since that time it has loaned $69 million according to Joann Crain, credit union president.

The annual membership meeting of the Odessa 66 Credit Union will be held Saturday March 12, at the Ector County coliseum. Audry Fisher, chairman of the board will preside.

Following a bar-b-que dinner a business meeting will be held to elect officers for the coming year. A number of adult and youth prizes will be given away.

All members of the credit union are urged to attend the meeting. About 1,200 people are expected to attend from the Permian Basn, southeast New Mexico and Oklahoma.

A dance will be held at the coliseum following the meeting.

Gas society to meet Tuesday

Ruth A. Maurer, assistant professor of mineral economics at the Colorado School of Mines, Golden, Colo., will speak at noon Tuesday to the Natural Gas Society of the Permian Basn. The Midland Country Club will host the event. Maurer's topic is "Natural Gas Prices and the Economic Problems of Deregulation." The luncheon will cost $15 at the door.

Maurer, besides being a professor, a researcher for a Denver bank, a wife, and a mother, is also mayor of Golden.

She said in a recent bank publication that she doesn't believe Congress will take radical action on the deregulation of gas because "... Congress isn't in a radical mood ... If there's a surplus, there's no reason to deregulate."

Hayes says he's fan of Prince Rainier

Woody Hayes

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Former Ohio State University football coach Woody Hayes says he is a fan of Monaco's Prince Rainier, pointing out that each has had run-ins with photographers.

At an awards dinner last week, Hayes mentioned Rainier as a man he could respect, recounting the prince's clash with photographers during a recent visit to New York.

Recalling that Rainier was reported to have punched two photographers within 24 hours, Hayes, who is 70, joked, "A man 60 years old taking a swing at photographers. Sixty years old. Can you imagine that?"

Rainier, now 59, turns 60 in May.

While at Ohio State, Hayes once struck a television cameraman and then lost his job after punching an opposing player who had intercepted a pass.

Linda Evans

Tom Selleck

NEW YORK (AP) — Linda Evans of the television series "Dynasty" has been chosen by readers of People magazine as the best-looking woman in America, while Tom Selleck of "Magnum P.I." got the nod as best-looking man.

Miss Evans, 40, won over Victoria Principal of "Dallas" by .2 percent in the magazine's fifth annual celebrities poll, featured in this week's issue. Selleck, 38, also was named America's favorite TV actor, displacing "M*A*S*H" star Alan Alda, who won the past four years. Favorite TV actress was Stefanie Powers of "Hart to Hart."

Jesse Jackson

ATLANTA (AP) — Civil rights activist Jesse Jackson has been predicting that a black will run for president in 1984, and now he suggests it may be him.

Jackson, 41, said in an interview published Sunday: "I have met with many people and many people have approached me. I have been studying the options and testing the waters."

The leader of the self-help group Operation PUSH says blacks need a single, consensus candidate for president who can draw support from a broad, national base of black organizations.

The recent Democratic mayoral primary victory of Harold Washington in Chicago has led blacks to re-evaluate their political thinking, Jackson said. Washington, who is black, won the primary even though Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., had endorsed incumbent Jane Byrne and former Vice President Walter Mondale had backed another of Washington's opponents, Richard Daley.

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Debbie Reynolds has been undergoing tests to determine why she felt faint and couldn't continue during a matinee performance of the Broadway musical "Woman of the Year."

"She's doing fine," producer David Landay said Sunday as doctors tried to figure out what happened to her during Saturday's matinee.

"There was no indication anything was wrong," said publicist Merle Debuskey. But then, about five minutes before the intermission, "she started losing her place."

"She got confused and scared," he said. "She never really blacked out but was feeling faint and confused."

Miss Reynolds, 50, remained hospitalized today in good condition at Roosevelt Hospital.

Journalist returns from El Salvador

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Michael Luhan said his 18 days and long night marches with guerrillas started almost routinely for a correspondent in El Salvador.

"It was a relatively innocent enough endeavor. We just got incorporated into something that exceeded all our imaginations," said Luhan, 30, who returned Sunday to a New Orleans reunion with his Bloomington, Ind., family.

Luhan, a freelance reporter working for the Dallas Morning News, said he and Swedish journalists Tom Thulin, 22, and Jens Rydstrom, 27, walked into the jungle at the base of the Guazapa volcano on Feb. 14, trying to get in touch with Salvadoran guerrillas.

"It was a pretty common thing. The problem with reporting in Salvador is that you don't have much access to the real world. So you go to the fringe of the front and try to make contact.

"Unfortunately, or fortunately, as it turned out, we walked into the middle of a very strategic, guerrilla-controlled zone. We were unannounced. We had no letters of recommendation by which they could trust us."

Nor was he wearing his Salvador Press Corps Association T-shirt — a shirt bearing a logo of a volcano over the initials "SPCA" on the front and, in large capitals on the back, the Spanish for "Journalist! Don't shoot!"

For the first four days, he said, the three reporters were kept in a house used as a kitchen for the guerrilla troop.

"Once it came out on the local radio that there were three journalists missing, they realized that's probably who we were...They began cooperating with us, showing us something of the internal structure of the zone."

However, he said, the guerrillas could not let the journalists leave because of "very strong indications" that the government was preparing to move against the position.

Luhan said he assumes the Swedes, who are accredited by the publication Ny Dag, are still with the guerillas.

His mother, Evelyn Luhan, said the family didn't learn he was missing until the Friday after, when the State Department called Luhan's wife, Poonam Thapa, in Bloomington.

"I was hysterical. I had feared this. He has gone down there three or four times. All I could think of was they would torture him," said Mrs. Luhan.

"Then I found out what the story was. I felt pretty good because I didn't think the rebels would harm him," she said.

Luhan said the rebels tried to arrange a meeting with Red Cross representatives to pick up the reporters.

"As it turned out, the army advance was so rapid and so strong that security soon outstripped other considerations," he said.

He estimated that the guerrillas' night marches covered at least 150 to 160 miles through the mountains during the time he was with them.

The family of freelance American journalist J. Michael Luhan, center, greeted him Sunday on his arrival at New Orleans International Airport. Luhan, missing in El Salvador since Feb. 14, spent 18 days marching with guerrillas through the Salvadoran mountains before dropping out and contacting the army on Friday. Shown with Luhan are his father, John, left; mother, Evelyn; and brother, Kenneth.

"That's probably conservative. It felt like a thousand," he said.

Meanwhile, said Mrs. Luhan, her son Kenneth, who lives in Corpus Christi, was calling congressmen and senators — particularly those who dealt with aid to El Salvador — to intercede for his brother.

In the end, Michael dropped out of the march, exhausted. The journalists were eating what the rebels ate — tortillas and beans at first; later, whatever could be picked up along the way — and he had lost 25 pounds.

"Suddenly, I ran out of gas. I couldn't go on."

Mrs. Luhan said that happened near a village where her son had interviewed a Salvadoran army battalion commander, but when he reached the village he discovered that the commanders had changed.

"When the soldiers picked him up to see the high command, he said he was sick, and before he saw the commander he wanted to see a doctor," she said.

A soldier kept watch during the examination, but Luhan whispered to the doctor through his stethescope while his chest was being checked.

"Michael picked it up and held it to his mouth and said, 'I want to get word to the Red Cross," Mrs. Luhan said.

She said her son also was allowed one phone call and called his wife, who let the rest of the family know he was safe.

Luhan said the army questioned him for four hours, something the rebels had told him would happen.

He said his accidental run-in with the guerrillas gave him a much closer view of the war than most reporters can get.

"We got a much better idea of the way the respective sides play the game," he said.

Special effects man often gets 'a trifle gross'

AUSTIN (AP) — You and your family are enjoying a picnic lunch out in the back yard on a sunny, quiet summer afternoon. Nearby, a man lies in the grass, aiming a shotgun. He fires.

You go on with your lunch, because if you live in this average north Austin community, you know it is only your neighbor, Michael O'Sullivan, testing another special effect for a movie.

This time O'Sullivan is shooting .38-caliber cartridges full of ratshot at panes of breakaway glass he has rigged up in his carport. The effect will be used in a low-budget murder mystery filmed in Austin called "Blood Simple."

"I always try to warn my neighbors," said O'Sullivan, 31. "But it gets a little funny sometimes."

The shattering glass was only loud. Sometimes the effects get a trifle gross.

Michael O'Sullivan

In another scene for "Blood Simple," O'Sullivan had to convincingly depict a man being shot. He rigged up small explosives with a syrupy mix so a hole would be blow in the character's shirt and "blood" would spurt out.

As with all his special effects, O'Sullivan tried it out on himself first.

He rigged himself up with several of the explosive caps filled with "blood" and wired them to a foot-operated control on the ground. Looking like a suicidal terrorist and with neighbors and friends standing in a semi-circle around him to judge the visual effect, O'Sullivan stepped on the detonator.

He described the result as "a little messy."

O'Sullivan, originally from New Orleans, lives with his wife, Cheryl Zeeb, 31, a house renovator, and their two children.

He said he started playing with explosives as a child, when he designed his own firecrackers. Later he became an artist. Now he invents all kinds of special effects, machines and gadgets.

"They come up with some incredible things," he said of his clients. Sometimes after a client sees the effect, O'Sullivan said, they decide it's more realistic than good taste dictates.

O'Sullivan said a commercial for an air conditioning company called for a sizzling doorknob, throbbing walls, a painting of a barn from which flames starting shooting, a boiling fish bowl and a bird roasting in its cage.

"The whole idea was that the room was so hot that..." explained O'Sullivan. He created all the effects, including designing a small barbecued bird that was more than the sponsor had expected.

"When they came in and saw it, they said, 'That's just too much. The animal bureau will be out after us if we put that on the air,'" said O'Sullivan.

Tattoos not easily removed

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have a tattoo which I would like to have removed. Is it possible? — M.S., R.S., Detroit, Mich.

Dear R.S.: Tattoos are very difficult to remove, but there are several available techniques. Although postoperatively the tattoo is no longer seen, it is impossible to accomplish removal without some degree of residual scarring.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I was told that I had a depression and started taking anti-depressant medicine. It's now 10 days later, and I do not feel any better. Do you think it is ever going to work? — Mrs. J.J., Toronto

Dear Mrs. J.J.: In a few weeks (perhaps three) you should start to feel a lot better, a lot like your old self. Your doctor has prescribed some pills (probably called tricylcic antidepressants) which should help rid you of the sad, lonely, and sometimes frightening feelings of depression. Perhaps you doubt the drug will work; most depressed people feel that way. When you're upset, it's hard to imagine feeling comfortable, optimistic and happy. So now, instead of being confident, you may be skeptical about the therapy you're beginning. This is a common reaction. Thousands of people who felt that way at the start have come to experience the relief of a great burden being lifted. So if you don't feel quite like rejoicing, at least be assured that you've taken an important and positive step. Most antidepressant therapy works. It's been used — often effectively — in many thousands of people who once felt much like you do right now. You've embarked on a very positive approach to feeling well, enthusiastic and hopeful. Hang in there.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Years ago I went to school with a boy who had hemophilia. The reason I remember it so well is that I used to carry his books for him from one class to another because he had trouble getting around. Now I hear that people with hemophilia can even play ball, and I wonder what accounts for this. Is there some new medicine that helps control the disease? — Manny, San Francisco

Dear Manny: Patients with hemophilia often experience bleeding into the joints, and this can lead to severe arthritis. It is the arthritis rather than the bleeding itself that often kept patients from engaging in a range of activities. Bleeding can cause the lining of the joints to become inflamed and this, in turn, can lead to muscle weakness.

A study by Dr. Walter B. Greene, assistant professor of orthopedic surgery at the University of North Caroline School of Medicine, has shown that a daily exercise program of 15 minutes' duration can help stengthen muscles. Patients are encouraged to be as active as their disease permits them to be. Swimming is also recommended since it is an activity with a low incidence of injury compared with that of injury in other sports.

Workers excel in first annual Office Olympics

CHICAGO (AP) — If the business of America is business, why would office workers practice the secret triple-fold technique, chant over small paper wads and cultivate sweaty feet?

The answer is simple: They are training for next year's Office Olympics, hoping to learn the methods of masters like 34-year-old architect Ken Abrams, who carried off the gold medal Friday in the Paper Airplane Fly event of the 1983 competition.

Abrams, who admits learning the secret triple-fold technique "at the knee of my big brother," hit his boss with paper airplanes three of five times from 20 feet. And he was just one of five champions to emerge from a field of 50 contestants gathered at a Loop hotel to battle for honors in the inaugural Office Olympics competition.

Another medalist, Kitty Kingston, 35, owner of a Near North Side public relations firm, won the Waste Paper Basketball event by sinking nine of 13 attempts.

Her key to victory: "Wad the paper into a small ball without air pockets and chant over it."

Linda Rutkowski, 25, who works in the bond department of Near North Insurance, credited her triumph in the Speed Swivel Chair Spin — 24 revolutions in 30 seconds — to "fancy foot peddling and sweaty feet."

The Olympics was the brainchild of Evanston mail order consultant Meir Sered, 39, who said he began his career in waste-paper basketball at the age of 11 because his Jewish theological schools lacked athletic programs.

"This is a chance for them to excel in those obsessive sports they carry on at work each day while the boss is looking the other way," said Sered.

"This is for those sedentary athletes who refuse to jog or go into weight training; or who never got an athletic letter in high school; or who refuse to send their 6-year-olds to camp for the summer," he told a cheering crowd gathered for the matches.

Nearly 100 bosses, secretaries and other office workers paid 87 cents each to watch the events, kicked off with a drum-and-bugle duet and an Olympic time-card torch ceremony.

Another of the Olympians whose training paid off was Karen Simonaitis, 33, an admissions representative at Chicago's Career Academy who won the Coffee-Cup Carry. She ran the official 25-foot course with three full cups in six seconds, which must have seemed easy after her training regimen of running up and down her driveway for 45 minutes with an armload of coffee cups.

The final event was won by Hyacinth Wellington, 20, a computer operator at Time Inc., who topped the Hat Rack Toss by ringing five of seven attempts.

Texas history

They twirled the ropes high over their heads and each kept shooting it out over the cow they were after. The ropes fell short, and the boys tried again.

Higher and faster the ropes circled the air. But instead of hitting their mark, they fell, encircling the handlers.

Finally, one pint-sized roper hit the target and climbed onto the bale of hay, using his rope to guide the "cow."

For kindergarteners at Milam Elementary, Friday was more than just another school day. To them, it was the sights and sounds and smells of Texas as they celebrated Texas Day in a "concrete" manner. It stretched from donning cowboy clothes, replete with hat, boots, holster and gun, to learning about Indians and native foods.

Led by teacher Billie Law, three other instructors combined their talents to teach the 5- and 6-year-olds some Texas history. The "Indians" and "cowboys" looked a bit smaller and the cows' "moos" sounded a bit different. But it was Texas all the same.

With bales of hay — cow heads stuck into the ends — on the floor in one class, the youngsters tried their hand at cattle ranching with Mark Law, a roper on the Midland College rodeo team, teaching the technique.

"Some of these kids have never been around stuff like this," said Mrs. Law.

Set up in each of the four classrooms were three "centers," each depicting a different aspect about Texas history and lifestyle.

The roping center brought the loudest squeals from the youngsters, and some refused to give up their ropes.

In another classroom, two sixth-graders painted Indian yellow and white and blue "faces" on the students before sitting them down around the "campfire" in front of the teepee to talk about Indian life.

"What are Indians?" began one of the sixth-graders.

"They shoot people," cried one youngster.

"Not exactly," said the young instructor.

"They shoot cowboys," said another student.

"They speak Spanish?" questioned another.

As the two students showed pictures of famous Indian chiefs, the kindergarteners squeezed closer together, cocking their heads to get a better look. After the short talk, they crawled through the small teepee.

In another corner, teacher Jackie Payne was singing, "My state's the best state in all the United States," while her group clapped with the beat of the music. And another group created "cows" — the main industry in Texas' early days — from aluminum soft drink cans and brown construction paper while learning about branding.

One boy was coloring his picture of a cow with a green face and yellow horns. "Have you ever seen a cow with those colors?" he was asked. "Un-huh," he replied solemnly, starting on the legs with a brown marker.

Texas food didn't appeal to all. While some youngsters chomped down on the bean-and-cheese nachos and asked for more, others turned up their noses.

"I like hamburgers," said a girl named Vickie, pushing away her untouched nachos.

But the cow-roping center pulled in everyone. After trying repeatedly for 15 minutes to get his cow, a youngster named Chad finally "caught" it and hopped on for a ride into the Texas sunset.

Professor still trying to explain universe

Dirac says he no simple equations

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Fifty years after winning his Nobel Prize for physics, Paul Adrien Maurice Dirac is still trying to explain the intricate beauty of the universe.

"A good equation must be beautiful," Dirac said in a recent interview. It's like appreciating any kind of beauty. You feel it within you. Some people appreciate it very much and others cannot appreciate it."

Dirac, 80, was a professor of mathematics at Cambridge University in his native England when he shared the 1933 prize with Erwin Schroedinger.

Working separately, they pioneered quantum mechanics, a mathematical system for describing the behavior of molecules, atoms, subatomic particles and other aspects of physics.

Dirac's work established the base from which television, computers, space travel and other high-technology have emerged, but said he doesn't use that kind of gadgetry.

"I don't have such complicated equations," Dirac said. "Simple would not be the right word, it would be deep mathematics, not the kind a computer would help with."

Mostly it is a matter of sitting and thinking. Some of Dirac's most brilliant ideas came while walking, although he has curtailed his walks because of advanced age. He has been at Florida State University since 1969.

Some of Dirac's colleagues, shown in a group photograph on the wall of his cramped office, have included the most eminent physicists of the century: Albert Einstein, Werner Heisenberg, Marie Curie, L.V. de Broglie and Neils Bohr. Only Dirac and de Broglie are still living.

While at Florida State, Dirac developed the theory that gravitational forces are getting weaker as the world gets older.

Asked if he knew why, Dirac, puckishly replied: "That is not a good question."

"Why? Because God made it so," he said. "You can give that answer as any other answer to that kind of question."

Dirac is a member of the Pontifical Academy of Science. He said he agrees with Pope John Paul II that science and religion aren't contradictory.

"They are both seekers after the truth," Dirac said. "There cannot be any conflict between people who are seeking the truth even if they seek it by different methods."

Dirac said honors like the Nobel Prize probably are overemphasized.

"There's perhaps not much difference between those who get the Nobel Prize and those who just fail to get it," Dirac said.

"In a way it's a rather bad idea to give so much prominence to some individuals who perhaps are hardly any better than those who fail to get this prize."

Dirac remained at Cambridge until reaching the mandatory retirement age of 67, although he frequently traveled to the United States as a visiting lecturer and to serve as a member of Princeton University's Institute for Advanced Study.

Still a British subject, he ultimately settled at Florida State because of its physics department, which he called the best in the Southeast, and the state's temperate climate.

Described once in Science News magazine as being a "cranky or just downright ornery old man," Dirac said he prefers working alone.

But with a twinkle in his eye, he also said working alone helps him keep failures to himself.

"You can withdraw from a certain position as soon as you find it is wrong," Dirac said. "You don't have the difficulty of explaining to other people why it was wrong. It's best to keep quiet until you're pretty sure that you're right."

BRAZORIA (AP) — Suzy Cyr is a registered nurse during working hours and a frustrated pioneer woman during her spare time.

"I've just always been real interested in the women of the West and what they did — creating something from nothing," said Mrs. Cyr, who works at Community Hospital of Brazosport.

So she churns homemade butter with fresh milk from their cow, grows her own vegetables, makes her own preserves and wine, and decorates her Brazoria farmhouse with antiques.

And two years ago, she and her husband Philip, an engineer, went even further back to the basics: they bought a sheep and began to explore the art of shearing, spinning and knitting with homegrown wool.

"We started this on a lark. We bought the sheep for $25 and then we bought the sheep shears for $125," Cyr recalled with a laugh.

"I think the thing that really spurred me on is that I'm an American history buff...the thought of all those women working all winter and summer to make clothes just amazes me. It wasn't a hobby for them, they had to do it to provide clothes for their family," Mrs. Cyr said.

It's a little bit of fantasizing," she added.

Since their first purchase, the Cyrs have acquired seven sheep to add to their collection of six horses, chickens and a herd of cattle.

Cyr has learned to shear and card wool, and his wife has learned to spin, wash and knit it, all time-consuming and difficult tasks for beginners.

Mrs. Cyr remembers the first time her husband sheared their sheep. Unfortunately, since he was new at the process, he kept on cutting the hapless sheep with the wool.

"That sheep got a butchering," Cyr recalled ruefully.

When they bought a spinning wheel, Mrs. Cyr had to teach herself how to spin — a complicated task made worse by the fact that their first fleece, from Cyr's first shearing, was made up of hairs that were too short.

Finally, they went to the Texas Renaissance Festival, where a woman explained some of the finer points of the craft to Mrs. Cyr.

So they went back home, bought some more sheep and tried again — this time with more success.

"We got nice long fleece...but we went through three fleeces before we learned," she said.

"It's like a kid learning how to throw a baseball. You can tell him how, but you have to throw a million baseballs before he can do it," Cyr said.

Besides the problems of self-teaching, they found themselves thwarted by the local veterinarians, who told them they couldn't raise sheep on the Brazos River because it is too wet.

"But we haven't had any problems because we keep up a good health program for them...in order to have good wool, it's like having a good head of hair. You have to feed them properly, taken them for shots," Mrs. Cyr said.

Since that inauspicious beginning, she has knitted a wool vest for her husband and is working on an afghan and a woven saddle blanket.

Hell's Angel testifies about 'birth of a biker'

A new Angel has six months to kill or be killed... They beat him up, take his motorcycle away and run him off... If he's accepted, he becomes a "prospect."

WASHINGTON (AP) — It takes far more than a Harley-Davidson superhog and a thirst for beer to become a Hell's Angel.

The nation's most famous outlaw gang has a rigorous, violent rite of passage a man must complete before he's awarded his "colors" — the death's-head patch.

And even then, the testing continues.

A new Angel has six months to kill or be killed, according to "Butch," a former gang leader from Cleveland who told the Senate Judiciary Committee about the birth of an outlaw biker.

The veracity of his testimony could not be determined. Law enforcement officials have told Senate panels recently that outlaw bikers must prove themselves through crime, but "Butch" was the only witness mentioning mandatory murder.

"Butch," who was not further identified, is now in prison for a murder on an Angel rumble in 1974. He went into the federal witness protection program when he quit the Angels and became an informant in 1981.

His testimony, under oath, outlined the following procedures for becoming an Angel:

First, the man — the Angels have no women members — must meet basic qualifications: be at least 21 years old, white and own a Harley-Davidson motorcycle. If he's accepted by one of the Angels' 33 U.S. and 18 foreign chapters, he becomes a "mudcheck."

To move from this bottom rung, he must survive "a lot of fighting," routine assaults by two or three Angels out to test his mettle. He said those who survive become "hangers-around."

"He can come into the clubhouse and do flunky work," said the witness.

Anywhere from three months to a year later, chapter members vote. Three blackballs and he's out.

"They beat him up, take his motorcycle away and run him off," the committee was told. If he's accepted, he becomes a "prospect."

"They work 24 hours a day," the witness said, cleaning members' bikes, running errands, standing armed guard overnight at the clubhouse and doing anything an Angel tells them — including committing crimes. Law enforcement agents say this requirement virtually prevents infiltration of outlaw gangs.

The "prospect" phase can last from six months to five years before a unanimous vote of the chapter adds a new name to the 500 to 600 that law enforcement officials say comprise the Angels' roster.

For initiation, "there's usually a big party — drinking and fighting," according to "Butch."

The new Angel must get a tatoo with the club name and death's-head logo, pay $500 into the chapter's bail bond fund and perform another task known as "rolling your bones."

"The new member has six months to kill someone," said "Butch." The name of the victim, often a rival outlaw gang member, is supplied by the chapter's intelligence officer.

"If they renege on that, then they're killed," testified "Butch."

The rewards of being an Angel are great, he said, adding that two or three Angels are reputed to be millionaires from dealing drugs, especially methamphetamines.

The goal of a biker, he said, is to live well without worrying about a regular job. Women, he added, are a means to this end.

Fires ruin mobile home, apartment

Two unrelated fires destroyed a rural mobile home and heavily damaged an eastside apartment over the weekend.

Shortly before 4 p.m. Sunday, fire of undetermined origin gutted a house trailer owned by Jeff Connors of County Road 140, about a mile west of Midkiff Road. Five fire department units responded to the call and firemen spent more than three hours on the scene. No injuries were reported.

A vacant apartment owned by Julius L. Brooks of 1800 E. Oak Ave. sustained heavy damage in a blaze that broke out about 11:50 p.m. Sunday at 1202 E. Noble. The fire is under investigation by the fire marshal's office.

Four bitten at Rattlesnake Roundup

TAYLOR (AP) — While death and taxes are sure things for most people, men and women who handle snakes for a hobby are resigned to one additional fact — sooner or later, they will be bitten.

Four people were bitten at the national Rattlesnake Sacking Championships held during the weekend at the Taylor Rattlesnake Roundup. One of them was listed in serious condition at a Temple hospital.

Most others knew what it felt like.

"If you fool with snakes long enough, its going to happen," said Allan Strahan of the Heart of Texas Snake Handlers Club.

Strahan, participating in the, rolled up his sleeve to reveal a nine-inch scar on his forearm.

"In 1978, I was at a contest in Mason and somebody handed me a tow sack with a rattler inside. One of his fangs was sticking through the cloth and I stuck my thumb on it," he said.

New Eagle scouts will be honored at banquet

Scouts who have received the Eagle award in the Buffalo Trail Council, Boy Scouts of America, during the past two years will be honored at a recognition dinner Friday at 6:30 p.m. at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

To become an Eagle Scout, a young man must earn 21 merit badges, be active and serve as a leader of his troop, and plan, develop and give leadership to others in a service project helpful to his religious organization, school or town. About 47 Scouts have received the Eagle award during 1981 and 1982, according to David Y. Rogers, banquet chairman.

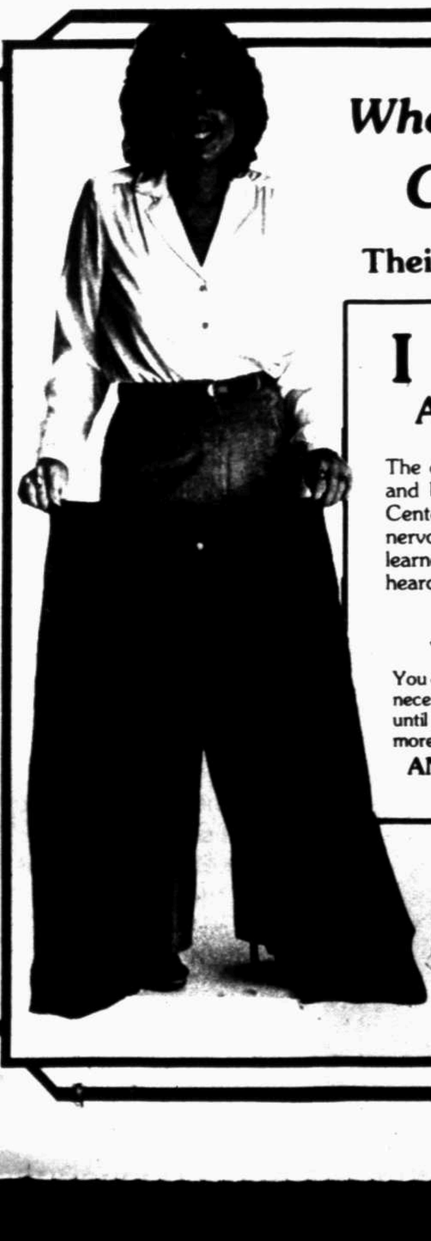

Speaker will be Dr. Leon Blair of Fort Worth. Blair is a noted historian and educator, who has been a long-time supporter of Scouting.

Other highlights will include a presentation to the Eagles by The Elks Lodge No. 1826, a Challenge of the Eagle by Steve Odom, scout executive, and presentations for 1981 and 1982 Scoutmaster of the Year.

"We are justifiably proud of the Scouts who have earned the Eagle rank the past two years," Rogers said. "Not only does this accomplishment reflect upon a young man's dedication to the ideals of Scouting, it also reflects upon him as he enters college, business and community service."

The Eagle is Scouting's highest advancement award.

Most people consider criticism an onerous ordeal

Copley News Service

Most people consider giving and taking criticism an onerous ordeal to be avoided.

Sadly, these same people tend to harbor grudges for years against their bosses and loved ones, severely undermining their ability to sustain nourishing intimate relationships with them.

According to Marty Christensen, president of Marty Christensen and Associates, a personal communications consulting firm, 99 percent of all people could greatly enhance the quality of their lives by learning to consider criticism as a gift — not a curse — and learning to give and take it constructively.

"Most of us have been taught since we were tiny that getting information we felt was negative was bad, that we should defend ourselves from that. It's my belief that the opposite of that is true," said Christensen in an interview.

In fact, she said, criticism is a gift which can provide people valuable information about how to deal with those they care about, be it a boss, a mate or a friend, and help them get what they want out of their relationships.

"It gives me specific information about how I can please you, how I can move up in the corporation, or how I can make more sales," Christensen said. "And it also says an enormous amount about trust. If you're free to criticize me, you've made a statement that I can handle it, that I'm teachable."

Unfortunately, Christensen said, "What happens when people don't confront each other is that they build resentments. They end up blaming the other person, very often withdrawing from that person." And, she added, "A lot of people get fired or walked out on in a marriage without ever knowing what they've been doing wrong."

So, how do you give criticism constructively?

First, Christensen said, become aware of what your feelings, perceptions, values and needs are in the matter. Is your gripe a projection of your own prejudices against the personal integrity of another, a situation in which it would benefit you to change yourself?

Does it really matter that your date is wearing a jacket you absolutely can't stand? Or, is this an issue which clearly steps over the boundaries of your values and is not negotiable? In that case, perhaps you want to insist that person refrain from smoking around you.

"Most of us have been taught since we were tiny that getting negative information was bad, that we should defend ourselves from that. It is my belief the opposite is true."

Marty Christiansen
Marty Christiansen and Assoc., president

Determine the outcome you want. Do you merely want to vent your own frustration? Or do you sincerely want to enable your employee to improve his performance or tell your mate how he can get along with you better? Asking yourself questions like these will help you frame your criticism to get the results you want.

Then ask yourself what your responsibility in the matter is. If the problem is that your co-worker cracks her gum, perhaps the matter is not your responsibility. If your son is getting bad grades, then perhaps the matter is something you should concern yourself with.

At this point, you can begin to think about your options in delivering the criticism, remembering that it is best to do so in an atmosphere of rapport with the other person. You might take your son aside and say lovingly, "This is one of those times when I need you to listen to me for a few minutes without interrupting me."

Or, you might say to a co-worker, "I have some information that might be valuable to you and it might sound like a criticism. Are you interested?"

According to Christensen, building rapport is a very individual situation. Some employees might want the negative things said straight out. Others might respond better if you say something positive before getting into the heart of the matter. It doesn't hurt to approach people and ask point-blank, "When I've got a beef with you, what do you want me to do with that information?"

When you deliver your criticism, Christensen said, it is helpful to keep the following steps in mind:

— Separate the objective from the subjective.

"This is probably the hardest thing for most people to do," she said. "Most of us act as though our assumptions are true. But it is not usually too helpful for me to tell you you're inconsiderate. That's subjective — that's my judgment. But for me to tell you you showed up 15 minutes after our appointed meeting time, that's objective."

— Communicate the objective information, what the situation was. Like, "You interrupted my rhinoceros story at the party last night. Almost every time I tell that story, you give the punch line."

Instead of saying, "That's rude, that's inconsiderate — you're not such a good storyteller yourself; you're just like your mother," drop all those assessments and labels.

— Instead, tell the person exactly how you feel. For example, in the case of the rhinoceros story, you would say, "I felt embarrassed and frustrated. It makes me feel like some little kid who has to be rescued."

— Then, tell the person the effect that behavior has on your relationship: "I feel I'm not valued by you."

— Lastly, give a request. "Please don't interrupt my stories anymore, even if I'm messing them up."

In the case of a supervisor dealing with an employee who has turned in a poor report, a constructive way to criticize would be like this: "I'm really concerned about the quality of the reports, and frustrated that I have not been able to get my point across to you. (Communicate the feelings.)

"Specifically, it needs to be three pages and double-spaced. I will not accept any misspellings. (Objectively point out what was done incorrectly and specify what you want.) This report is due to my supervisor Friday in order for the project to be in on time, and unless I get your report on Thursday, that will be impossible. (Tell them what effect their behavior has on your relationship.)

"I'd like you to redo this and have it on my desk by 2 p.m." (Make your request.)

Leprosy victims discover pain mostly mental

Copley News Service

It started with tingling sensations in Doyle Jensen's hands and feet, then swiftly progressed to a debilitating numbness in his extremities.

Red and purplish skin lesions appeared on his body.

Within three months he was forced to take a leave of absence from his job as a school electrician. Gripping a baseball bat or taking a leisurely stroll through his neighborhood became difficult.

"I was scared to death," said the 28-year-old former Mormon missionary from Elmo, Utah. "I thought I had some incurable disease."

And, in fact, he does, as he eventually found out.

The bizarre symptoms were a mystery to the dozen or so doctors whom Jensen consulted in the winter of 1979.

Jensen subsequently went through a year of treatment for ailments as diverse as arthritis, diabetes and cancer. And still his condition progressed unabated.

It wasn't until an enterprising neurologist at the University of Utah Medical School confronted with his case decided, on a hunch, to test for a disease seldom mentioned in the United States — leprosy.

A skin biopsy performed on him in early 1981 confirmed that Jensen, 28, was suffering from this tragic malady.

The numbness in his extremities is now gone and he is no longer contagious, but Jensen — who apparently contracted a mild form of leprosy while working in the mid-1970s in Western Samoa in the South Pacific — will be taking medication for the rest of his life to keep the incurable disease and its symptoms in check.

He doesn't worry that while he was searching for a cure, others may have contracted the malady.

"There's nothing to worry about because the possibility of anyone ever catching it is so slim," he said recently at his residence in Utah where today he is back to leading a normal life.

Nevertheless, he adds, coming down with the disease "was a shock — a trying, frightening experience."

Jensen, married and the father of two children, is part of a growing — but not yet serious — American health problem.

While most of the world's estimated 20 million leprosy victims remain confined to humid, tropical or subtropical regions, the reported cases of the disease in this country have nevertheless increased dramatically in the last decade.

Officials at the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta estimate that there are nearly 5,000 people with leprosy — or Hansen's disease — in the United States, primarily recent immigrants. About 250 new cases were reported last year alone.

"The increasing incidences of leprosy in the United States are not so unusual when you consider the great number of people who have come here in recent years from Southeast Asia, Cuba, Haiti and other areas where the disease is endemic," said Dr. D.A. Lopez, a leading leprologist and the director and one-man staff of the 9-year-old clinic.

Lopez, 46, sees about three new leprosy patients a month. Most of these are immigrants from Southeast Asia and the interior of Mexico who have developed symptoms of the disease only after moving here.

"I call it the American phenomenon," explained the soft-spoken specialist. "Many of my patients probably were exposed to the disease in childhood but continued to do well. When they came here from their native countries, there occurred an imbalance in their immunity system — stress probably being a factor — and the symptoms developed."

The disease, caused by a bacillus which has an incubation period of up to 15 years, is one of the least contagious of all communicable diseases, said Lopez. It is thought to be transmitted by close and prolonged contact, most often among genetically predisposed family members of victims. Malnutrition, protein deficiency and poor sanitation may also be contributing factors in determining a person's susceptibility, he added.

"Most healthy people will resist the disease," he emphasized, adding that more than 96 percent of the world's population is probably immune to its effects. This despite the fact that the disease reached epidemic proportions in Europe in the 1300s. Better nutrition and hygiene have been attributed for the higher immunity levels in modern man.

Present in Egypt as long ago as 4000 B.C. and in India and Japan as early as 1000 B.C., leprosy still carries an odious stigma, despite the fact that modern medicine — through the use of three drugs — arrests the disease and its symptoms and prevents its transmission.

The misconceptions and outright myths surrounding leprosy originate from the Bible, believes Lopez.

"There are at least 20 references in the Bible to leprosy, some of them referring to the affliction as a punishment from above," he said. "Over the years, the stigma has been perpetuated."

In biblical days, leprosy victims were identified by the torn clothing that they wore. They walked the streets yelling "unclean" to alert unsuspecting people whom they confronted.

The disease, believed also to be transmitted by insects, subsequently spread through the centuries over most of Europe and the British Isles.

By the 1300s it had reached epidemic proportions and segregation and disinfection of those afflicted were advocated as methods of control. Of the 720 hospitals established in England between 1300 and 1500, 217 were built for the isolation and quarantine of leprosy victims. And in 14th century Paris, over 40 so-called "leper houses" were in operation. Some of the sick admitted to these institutions, however, were not suffering from leprosy, but other skin and degenerative diseases.

As late as the 1930s leprosy patients quarantined at the National Leprosarium in Carville, La. (now known as the National Hansen's Disease Hospital), were not allowed to marry or vote.

The persecution continues today, if on a smaller scale. Some leprosy victims have also become suicide victims. Others have been divorced by their spouses.

Eight of Lopez' patients have lost their jobs because of their affliction. One victim, formerly a desk clerk at a hotel, was demoted to a janitor when the employer learned he had the disease.

Even more heartrending is the isolation of patients by their families. "Spouses don't want to withdraw their love, but there is a certain subconscious fear and coldness that develops," said Lopez. "Spouses of victims often move to a different bed, a different room."

'Knot's Landing' star shares beauty tips, cosmetic philosophy

Copley News Service

Some actresses have a natural knack for applying makeup. Almost instinctively they know exactly what to put on, how much to put on and where on their faces to put it. For others, it's complete reliance on a makeup artist to turn them into celebrated prime-time beauty queens.

Actress MICHELE LEE, who portrays the feisty super beauty Karen MacKenzie on nighttime drama "Knot's Landing," has the best of both worlds!

As the daughter of Jack Dusick, one of Hollywood's most legendary makeup artists, Michele grew up knowing just what to do to look her absolute best. Now, oftentimes doing her own makeup for professional appearances, the "knack" is instinctive.

"I hesitate to give women beauty advice," says Michele, "mostly because of the kind of 'cosmetic philosophy' I was brought up on. My father's basic rule was the concept of 'no rules' and that you have to do what's right for you, regardless of what the book says.

"Cosmetic and beauty trends come and go," she continues, "and you should follow a trend if it suits you. But, not every look is right for every woman so it's important that you find your own style and stick to it, update the look with new colors or new products. Also, you shouldn't be afraid to experiment and try new things. You should make a statement with your face, that really says who you are."

As outspoken and gutsy as the character she so brilliantly portrays, Michele has strong feelings about the beauty products on today's market, especially those related to skin care.

"There's no question about it," says this super beauty, "if you moisturize your skin, especially around your eyes, your makeup is going to look better than if you apply it directly to dry skin. And yes, you will appear younger looking. But," she continues to say, "what my father believed and consequently I do too is that there are no creams or lotions that can stop the aging process or the natural drying process of the skin. No matter how high priced an item is, it only works on the top layers of skin which is not where wrinkles begin. If you stay out of the sun and moisturize the dry areas on your face, plus avoid harsh products you will do OK."

Michele also adds, however, "The main thing to do is to make yourself feel good about yourself. If you like a certain product line and you're happy with the results than you should continue with it. All I'm saying is not to be frightened of the aging process, because sooner or later we all end up with lines and creases and other than plastic surgery, there's not too much you can do about it."

So, how does Michele keep her good looks year after year? Her beauty routine is simple and centers around two basic steps.

DEAR ABBY

Mercy mission needs 'angels'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: When AirLifeLine was formed in 1979, we had 15 pilots in California and a strong desire to help people in need. Over these few years AirLifeLine has grown to 612 pilots in 46 states. Your interest and the help from so many of your readers have nurtured that growth.

Our mission remains the same: to provide a ready network of planes to fly life-saving equipment, personnel, blood and human organs wherever needed, whenever needed, on a moment's notice. AirLifeLine pilots are available 24 hours a day, every day of the year.

Our growth has allowed us to help more people than we ever imagined. To date AirLifeLine pilots have flown over 185,000 miles of service, and we've never charged a penny to any patient, hospital or public agency!

We've also found a multitude of new ways to use our planes to ease human suffering. In December 1982, AirLifeLine was asked to transport a highly trained capuchin monkey named Sara from Boston to Sacramento, Calif. Sara was raised to be the "arms" and "legs" of a bedridden paraplegic. Sara holds a telephone, fetches water, turns the pages of a book, operates a television set or radio. Trained capuchins like Sara are to a paraplegic what a seeing-eye dog is to a blind person. Sara is now living happily in Sacramento, bringing comfort and dignity to a paraplegic human being.

This program has been so successful that AirLifeLine has been asked to deliver capuchins to paraplegics in other states.

Unfortunately, this growth and success have also brought problems. AirLifeLine is rapidly depleting the funds available to us. Every mission is vitally important, but each mission drains our resources further.

In the four years we've been operating, we've never had to say "no" to a request for help. We hope we never have to. But we desperately need a few "angels" to help keep our planes flying.

Any "Dear Abby" reader who would like to help this work can reach AirLifeLine at 1722 J Street, Suite 14, Sacramento, Calif. 95814.

We are also here to serve anyone needing our help. We believe that no human being should be alone and sick with nowhere to turn. We don't care where you live or whether you are rich or poor. If you need a human hand to reach out to you, AirLifeLine is here.

With God's help (and a little help from a few of his "angels"), we will be here for a long time. Sincerely, TOM GOODWIN, PRESIDENT OF AIRLIFELINE

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Sitting Duck," wondering how she would protect herself if her car broke down at night on a lonely road, reminded me of something I used to do (years ago) when I was an attractive 18-year-old girl working at an all-night restaurant.

Sometimes I'd get off work at 3 a.m. and have to drive home alone, so I went to a costume shop and bought a man's beard close to the color of my own hair. I also bought a man's cap. I kept the beard and cap in the glove compartment of my car, and when my car broke down (as it did quite often) I would put them on.

At night no one could tell I wasn't a man, and I felt much safer. Of course, I would take off the beard and cap when I saw a police car pull up.

There's nothing kinky about it. I just felt that a potential attacker would be less likely to bother a "man" than a woman. – J.N. FROM BERKELEY

Mini-MBA program designed for women

Hearst Feature Service

The University of Southern California is offering a "mini MBA" program for those who want to move up the corporate ladder, yet can't get enough time away from their jobs, homes and kids to get a regular MBA. But there's a catch: You have to be a woman to apply.

Anne Kimbell Relph, director of management programs for USC's College of Continuing Education, said the program is designed to fill in the gaps many women may have in their training and to provide a place where women can experiment with various management approaches. She said she developed the program, which she claims is unique on the West Coast, after surveying a number of chief executives on what their women managers needed for promotion. The program opened in September 1981.

Women in the program meet all day every other Saturday to study business math, finance, management styles, assertiveness and other subjects and receive a Certificate in Management Effectiveness after eight months. Twenty-eight women currently are enrolled (the maximum accepted is 30) and another group will be added next year in Orange County, Relph said.

According to Relph, the women in the mini MBA course are a little older than the average MBA student and have more work experience. They come from a variety of backgrounds, occupations and industries, including radio, banking, aerospace, computers and energy.

But Relph said USC's certificate is "meaningful." Of the 30 women who graduated last year, the first year the program was available, at least half have been promoted, she said, even though students don't receive the traditional MBA degree.

Toaster care

Never heat sugary-topped or filled pastries in a toaster. Sugar in the pastry can gum up the toaster and cause a fire or burn your hands when you remove the pastry.

Drinking milk

If you're having difficulty persuading your family to drink their quota of milk, it could be it's not cold enough. Surveys show that when milk is served at 40 degrees, most people like it lots. Pour milk into ice cube trays, let freeze, then pop a few of those in with the milk to be served, and watch them go for it!

Pope John Paul II greets Salvadoran children waiting outside the Metropolitan Cathedral in San Salvador Sunday. Huge crowds waited for a glimpse of the pope as he toured the capital city of El Salvador.

Montt ignores plea for mercy from pope

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul today undertook the delicate task of dealing with a president who ignored his plea to spare six convicted leftist terrorists last week from death at dawn before a firing squad.

"In the name of all the innocent victims, I want to ask that all forces and goodwill be mobilized to achieve peaceful social coexistence, the fruit of justice and of a great reconciliation of all the spirits," the pontiff said upon arriving Sunday night.

"I encourage all efforts made in that direction."

Hundreds of thousands of Guatemalans greeted the pope with fireworks, sirens and pealing bells on the fourth stop of his eight-nation tour.

Among those who packed La Aurora airport and lined the road to the capital was Gen. Efrain Rios Montt, the Protestant president of Guatemala, where four out of five citizens are Roman Catholic.

Protestants sects, including the president's evangelical Church of the Word, are pushing to convert peasants.

Rios Montt, installed by the military as president after a coup last year, greeted John Paul as a "messenger of peace" on a visit he likened to "fresh water for the thirsty."

However, John Paul is expected to take Rios Montt severely to task in a scheduled private meeting today for ignoring a papal plea for clemency and executing five Guatemalans and a Honduran.

Papal spokesman the Rev. Romeo Panciroli said Thursday John Paul had heard this "dramatic, unexpected and incredible news and had expressed his deepest sadness mostly because it was nearly the eve of his scheduled visit (to Guatemala)."

Pilgrims wait for pope

OLINTEPEQUE, Guatemala (AP) — The five miles of tortuous, rocky road through the mountains take two hours to drive, and the pilgrims inched along in a two-ton truck carrying a statue of the Virgin Mary.

No effort was too arduous for pilgrims journeying from Quezaltenango, Guatemala's second largest city, to Olintepeque, a community 7,900 feet above sea level that Pope John Paul II will visit for two hours shortly after the noon high of the sun today.

Several hundred of the estimated 8,000 people who camped out overnight in a chilly wind came from as far away as southern Mexico for the exciting chance to see the pope on his way to Quezaltenango.

"I feel happy to be able to see the Holy Father, even though the trip has been very tiring," said Antonia Gonzalez of Tuxtla Chico, in the southern Mexican state of Chiapas. She and her large family were among those who traveled mostly by jitney from border points as far as 250 miles away.

Olintepeque, 135 miles west of Guatemala City, has 2,500 people and an airport which serves Quezaltenango.

John Paul will fly by helicopter from the Guatemalan capital to say a Mass at the airport.

For the mountain people here, the most thrilling moment will be when the pope crowns the Virgin of the Rosary, Quetzaltenango's patron saint.

People dressed in gaily-colored outfits, including their woolen capes, or ponchos for a day that will likely be one of the most memorable ones in their lives.

"I am happy. For me it is something grandiose to be able to see the pope from so near," said Maria Morales.

Kohl's victory result of weak opposition

An Analysis

By ROBERT H. REID

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl's victory in the West German elections may have been due more to weaknesses of the rival Social Democrats than to heartfelt support for his policies on defense and the economy.

Kohl claimed Sunday's victory was a ringing endorsement for his "policy of the center," but his Christian Democratic Union actually did little better than in 1976 when Kohl lost to Social Democratic Chancellor Helmut Schmidt.

In 1976, the Christian Democrats and their allies, the Christian Social Union, captured 48.6 percent of the vote. The same conservative alliance took 48.8 percent of Sunday's vote.

The difference between defeat seven years ago and victory Sunday was the Free Democratic Party, the small liberal faction which often plays kingmaker in West German politics.

The Free Democrats won 7.9 percent of the vote in 1976 and threw their support to the Social Democrats, enabling Schmidt to take power.

This year the Free Democrats, who won 6.9 percent of Sunday's vote, have pledged to support Kohl when the Bundestag, or Parliament, meets within 30 days to select a new chancellor.

Meanwhile, conservative Social Democrats may have been driven off by chancellor candidate Hans-Jochen Vogel's flirtation with the anti-nuclear Green Party. Such overtures offended many Social Democrats, including Schmidt, who disagreed with the Greens' opposition to economic growth, nuclear power and West German-based NATO missiles.

Last week Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher said Vogel's overtures to the Greens were driving many Social Democrats to his Free Democratic party.

Conversations with West Germans prior to the election revealed that many of them were uncertain of Vogel's positions. Although he voiced skepticism over plans to deploy U.S. missiles in Europe, he never renounced the idea.

Vogel said last week during a televised debate that he would deploy the missiles "in the extreme case" that all efforts to reach an arms agreement with the Soviets failed.

Although the debate over nuclear missiles and NATO policy drew close attention in foreign countries, West Germans themselves considered unemployment and the economy to be the most crucial issues of the campaign, according to pre-election surveys.

But Vogel was hobbled in his attempt to exploit the rising unemployment rate. Although the jobless rolls had swelled by 700,000 since Kohl took office Oct. 1, unemployment began its upward trend under the Social Democrats, who had governed for the past 13 years.

The Christian Democrats lost ground during their defeat in 1980, receiving only 44.5 percent of the vote with arch-conservative Franz Josef Strauss as their candidate for chancellor. Many West Germans found Strauss too conservative for their political tastes.

Kohl uses everyman image to his advantage

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl fought his way back from the political wilderness and overcame a reputation as a dependable but dull provincial party official with limited experience in international affairs.

Kohl seems less slick and sophisticated than most politicians in West Germany, but that may have worked to his advantage.

"My biggest asset is that people would buy a used car from me without hesitating," he once said. "It may sound old-fashioned and unprogressive, but that doesn't matter to me. I am proud of that trust."

Defeated in a chancellor's race in 1976, and passed over as his Christian Democratic Union's candidate four years later, Kohl became chancellor last October when the minority Free Democrats switched sides in Parliament and allied themselves with the Christian Democrats.

But it was Sunday's national election that gave the 52-year-old chancellor a stamp of approval from the public, and settled doubts about his leadership.

Although the election centered on nuclear arms and the economy, Kohl's appeals for a return to traditional German values seemed to strike a responsive chord with voters.

During the heated campaign, he was the down-to-earth everyman who emphasized the importance of diligence, discipline, morality and order.

He is viewed by the West German press as a hard-working family man who is proud of his straight-arrow image. On the campaign trail Kohl was genial, jocular and at ease with those around him.

The conservative Kohl is expected to pursue a business-oriented economic program that will emphasize tax breaks to boost private investment.

His foreign policy statements are more pro-American than those of the opposition Social Democrats.

Kohl's win should aid U.S. position

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl's surprisingly easy victory in the West German parliamentary elections should strengthen President Reagan's negotiating position in arms control talks with the Soviet Union.

One administration official said privately the return of Kohl as chancellor is a vote of confidence in NATO's strategy of planning to deploy new U.S. nuclear missiles throughout Europe later this year.

However, officials don't expect the Soviets to give up on their campaign to influence European public opinion to block the missile deployment, even though the Kohl victory is a setback for Moscow's strategy.

An Analysis

The victory also means continuing good relations between Bonn and the Reagan administration, which clearly had favored Kohl and his Christian Democratic Party and expected him to win.

Reagan called Kohl at about 4 p.m. EST Sunday, "congratulating him on his victory," said Robin Gray, a member of the White House press office staff.

Gray said the president "looks forward to working together as they and our governments have done in the past, on the economic and security challenges which our nations face."

Reagan also reaffirmed strong ties between Germany and the United States, Gray said.

Kohl's margin of victory came as a surprise.

The opposition Social Democrats conceded defeat less than an hour after the polls closed. The party's candidate for chancellor, Hans-Jochen Vogel, said later: "We did not reach the goal of the election. This is defeat."

Administration officials felt Vogel, who for a time mounted a serious challenge to Kohl, steadily lost support after his campaign peaked in early February. They said a lapse into stridency hurt him with West Germany's largely moderate electorate.

The administration considered the missile deployment, arms control and U.S.-German relations generally to be key secondary issues, behind Germany's domestic economic problems.

Privately, State Department officials feel a visit to Europe by Vice President George Bush in late January helped Kohl, who was in favor of the NATO missile deployment strategy. Vogel, on the other hand, voiced sufficient questions to cause some officials here to worry that he would scuttle the plan and undermine Reagan's negotiating strategy at Geneva.

Reagan's strategy is based on standing firm on the NATO plan to deploy 572 U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in West Germany and other European countries, beginning later this year, unless the Soviets dismantle their SS-20s missiles.

Castro alleges CIA plans his assassination

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Cuban President Fidel Castro said today the Reagan administration has ordered the CIA to resume efforts to assassinate him.

He said the information came from "trustworthy sources," and called the Reagan government "the modern barbarian of our times."

Addressing the opening session of the 7th non-aligned summit, the Cuban leader delivered a wide-ranging onslaught on Reagan's policies throughout the world, particularly in southern Africa, Central America and the Middle East.

"Through trustworthy sources, we have learned that the U.S. administration has instructed the Central Intelligence Agency to resume the plan to kill Cuban leaders, especially its (Cuba's) president," Castro declared.

"What else can be expected from such an unscrupulous character" as Reagan, Castro added.

Castro asserted that previous U.S. administrations had made similar plans to kill him, "as confirmed before the U.S. Senate."

He said he was forced to order an increase of Cuba's armed forces by 500,000 men because of "the continuous provocative threats launched by the president of the United States against our country."

"The decision of the present U.S. administration to resort to any means whatsoever against Cuba is proclaimed openly," Castro declared. He said this was in reprisal for Cuba's relentless pursuit of its revolution and its revolutionary principles, its cooperation with the Third World and its refusal to "sell out...to American imperialism."

"The illegal and criminal Yankee economic blockade of Cuba has already lasted for 23 years, an event unprecendented in the world," Castro said, adding:

"We have not and will never yield to the modern barbarian of our times."

Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, in a speech opening the summit, said the future of mankind was jeopardized by the threat of nuclear holocaust and economic collapse.

She said heads of state should consider attending the U.N. General Assembly session this year and "spend a week or 10 days together to give a fresh collective look at some of the major problems of the world."

Mrs. Gandhi, who succeeded Castro as chairman of the non-aligned conference, touched on a wide range of issues in her address and made an impassioned plea for nuclear disarmament.

"Humankind is balancing on the brink of the collapse of the world economic system and annihilation through nuclear war," she said. "Never before has the earth faced so much death and danger."

She urged collective action to prevent the collapse of the world's monetary system and called for the convening of an international financial conference.

One-hundred non-aligned countries are participating in the summit, and 70 of them are represented by their heads of state or heads of government.

Cambodia's chair was empty, however.

Participants at a preliminary meeting were unable to resolve the rival claims of Cambodia's Vietnamese-sponsored regime and the anti-Vietnamese coalition, and the group ruled that neither Cambodian delegation would be seated. A similar stalemate developed at the last non-aligned conference, in Havana, Cuba in 1979.

Mrs. Gandhi did not mention Cambodia in her speech but she appealed to Iran and Iraq, members of the conference, to end their "tragic war."

She expressed hope for "early normalcy" in Afghanistan but did not comment specifically on the estimated 90,000 Soviet troops stationed there. That issue may lead to a confrontation between Soviet-influenced countries and nations such as Pakistan which seek a Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan.

With Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat on hand as a full-ranking chief of state, Mrs. Gandhi voiced support for "the brave, homeless and much harassed Palestinian people."

"Israel feels free to commit any outrage, unabashed in its aggression, unrepentant about its transgressions of international law and behavior. But can it forever obstruct the legitimate rights of the Palestinians?" she said.

Nkomo says government troops raided his house, killing one

BULAWAYO, Zimbabwe (AP) — Opposition leader Joshua Nkomo says government troops sent by Prime Minister Robert Mugabe raided his bungalow, shot his chauffeur and would have killed him if he had been home.

"My life is in danger and that of my family," Nkomo said in a secret meeting with reporters Sunday. "I can only appeal to the international community to drive some sense into Mugabe's head."

Nkomo said he was elsewhere in Bulawayo when the soldiers forced their way into his house Saturday night because he suspected it was not safe for him to go home.

Nkomo said his driver, Yona Ncube, was shot in his bed and his body was taken away in an army truck.

Witnesses said soldiers sealed off Nkomo's power base in this provincial capital again Sunday, searched homes, ordered residents to dig up gardens in a hunt for weapons and questioned hundreds of prisoners seized in raids that left three dead, including Nkomo's driver.

The government says the crackdown is part of an effort to ferret out "dissidents" — its term for army deserters who have become bandits or rebels.

In the first government statement on the crackdown, a spokesman said Sunday night that police and army operations continued in Bulawayo with "considerable successes," the semi-official Zimbabwe Inter-African news agency reported.

The spokesman said the sweep was ordered following reports that dissidents had fled to Bulawayo from adjacent tribal lands.

Barbie has emergency operation

LYON, France (AP) — Convicted Nazi war criminal Klaus Barbie was reported in satisfactory condition today after an emergency hernia operation, but his daughter was barred from visiting him at the hospital.

Barbie, 69, was rushed from his prison cell Sunday afternoon to Lyon's Edouard Herriot Hospital for the operation. Officials said he was in satisfactory condition and is expected to stay hospitalized at least a week.

Informed sources said Barbie might later be put in a nearby hospital that specializes in kidney diseases. His daughter says Barbie also has a nervous system disorder.

On Saturday, Barbie had been allowed to visit for two hours with his daughter, Ute Messner, who works as a librarian in a small Austrian mountain town. The two were separated by a glass window during the jailhouse meeting.

Barbie was expelled from Bolivia a month ago and was brought to France where he was charged with crimes against humanity and imprisoned while awaiting a new trial.

Kremlin stung by Kohl's victory

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin, clearly stung by the conservative victory in the West German elections, said today the results likely will "lend vigor and energy to the Reagan administration, which is counting the days" to deployment of new U.S. missiles in Western Europe.

The Novosti press agency said the election results "push to the fore" the question of how East-West relations will develop and said the world public would hold West Germany accountable for "aggravating the nuclear danger and forgetting the lessons of World War II."

Pamphlet warns against smoking

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new federal publication says cigarette smoking causes more illness and death than all other drugs and is "the most widespread example of drug dependence" in the country.

The anti-smoking pamphlet, titled "Why People Smoke Cigarettes," was released by the Office on Smoking and Health.

"For years smoking was thought of as a habit — a 'nasty habit,' Mark Twain called it," the pamphlet says. "It has now been established that for many smokers it is more than this, that it is, in fact, the most widespread example of drug dependence in our country."

It says cigarettes, smoked by 56 million Americans, are addictive because nicotine "reinforces and strengthes the desire to smoke and causes users to keep on smoking."

The pamphlet comes as the Reagan administration prepares to give Congress its views on legislative proposals to strengthen warnings on cigarette packages.

Dr. Edward Brandt, the assistant health secretary who heads the Public Health Service, testifies Wednesday before the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on health.

The administration came under criticism from some health associations and congressmen last year when it flip-flopped on warning labels. After Brandt told a congressional panel that the administration backed a stronger warning, he was forced to retreat when the White House withdrew its support.

A comment on the pamphlet from the Tobacco Institute, the cigarette industry's lobbying group, was not immediately available.

Judy Murphy, a spokeswoman for the Office on Smoking and Health, said that about 30,000 copies of the pamphlet will be made available to the public. The office won't advertise them and will "rely on word getting out through the voluntary organizations," she said.

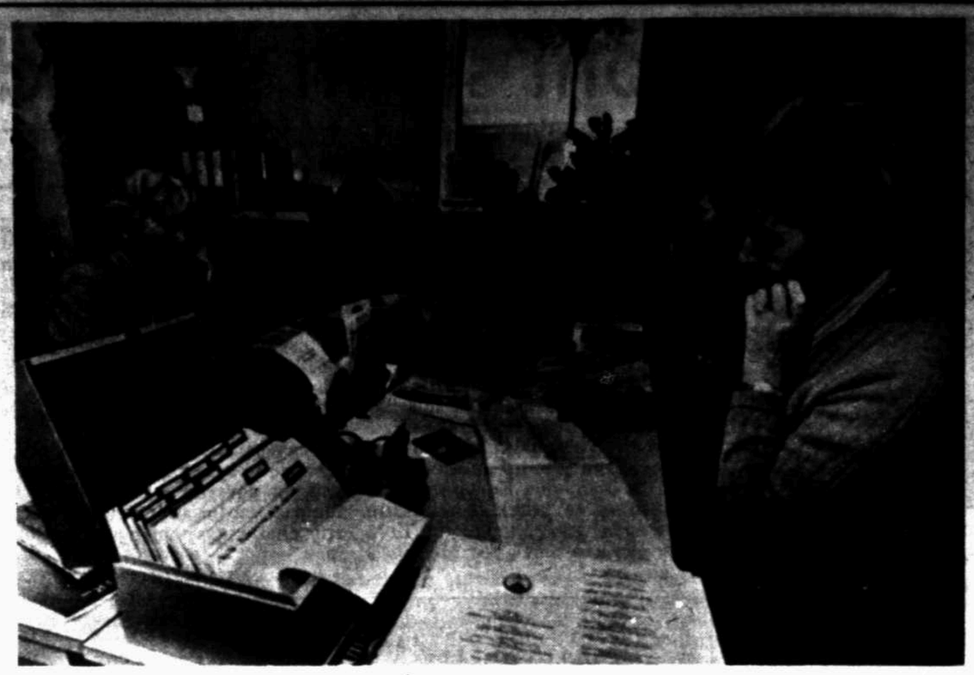

"It's a stronger characterization of cigarette smoking as a dependence than we have said in the past," she said. "We came to the conclusion that maybe it was time we did."

The pamphlet says alcohol affects 10 million problem drinkers and their families and accounts for half of the nation's automobile fatalities. Among illicit drugs, marijuana is the most widely used. Fewer than 500,000 people use heroin, "but (as) with other opiates it exacts a terrifying toll of crime and social disarray," the pamphlet adds.

It says the addictive nature of cigarette smoking causes sales to continue despite public knowledge about the health hazards.

The pamphlet says the immediate effects of inhaling nicotine are "subtle and not catastrophic." But it warns that long-term consequences are produced by "many tobacco-smoke constituents in addition to nicotine. There is evidence to suggest that nicotine is implicated in the onset of heart attacks and that it is a co-carcinogen, enhancing the tumor-producing effects of cigarette tars.

"Its most important role, however, is its action on the brain and nervous system in helping create dependence," the pamphlet says.

Volunteers work the phone at Ecoute Cancer, or Cancer Phone, Paris chapter of the French National League Against Cancer's way of helping victims deal with the disease.

French cancer patients have sympathetic ear

PARIS (AP) — Some are desperate. Most are afraid. All are worried. They have cancer and are searching for help and a sympathetic voice.

That voice resides in a single room in Paris. It is an understanding voice because the person behind it has suffered from cancer too, or has been close to someone who has.

It's called "Ecoute Cancer," or Cancer Phone, and is made up of 15 voices, all volunteers participating in a new program initiated by Francoise de Boissieu, president of the Paris chapter of the National League Against Cancer.

"Cancer is a great revealer in that it doesn't leave things as before," said Mrs. De Boissieu, referring to the myriad of non-medical problems that victims and their families often face.

"The relations of a couple deteriorate. Many couples separate. There are many cases of divorce, abandonment, problems with child care. Or, to the contrary, some couples get closer. Cancer never leaves relationships in the state they were (in) before."

To deal with these problems, many of which aren't, or can't, be handled by physicians, Mrs. De Boissieu has put together the Ecoute Cancer team that she says is unique in Europe. Its members remain anonymous, never meet with the callers personally and never ask indiscreet questions.

Since it was started in early November, operating from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, Ecoute Cancer has handled about 1,700 calls, an average of 21 a day, in what Mrs. De Boissieu says has been a huge success.

"Nobody wants you to know that they are concerned about cancer. There is a secrecy about cancer, even in a couple. There are many people afflicted with cancer where even the spouse doesn't know. They are afraid that the quality of the relationship will be changed."

Ecoute Cancer offers no medical advice and refuses to have a doctor on the team, though several have volunteered.

"You can't ask a doctor to do other than what he knows how to do," Mrs. De Boissieu said. "We don't want doctors because we don't want to start medical consultation on the phone."

The first questions from callers are always medical, Mrs. De Boissieu said. All such questions are referred to the caller's doctor, or if he hasn't one, three addresses in his neighborhood are provided.

The major questions involve chemotherapy — many people need encouragement to follow the treatment to the end — and changes in the body, including a frequent worry about hair loss.

Many concern personal problems, the need to alter future plans, how to deal with relatives and friends who perceive the victim differently, or fear of consulting a doctor. Some simply need a translation of medical terms.

Barney Clark celebrates 39th wedding anniversary

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Artificial-heart recipient Barney Clark and his wife celebrated their 39th wedding anniversary quietly in his room at the University of Utah Medical Center, spokesmen said.

Clark, 62, improving slowly from a bout of pneumonia, remained in fair condition today, his 96th day on the artificial heart.

University of Utah Medical Center spokeswoman Anne Brillinger said the couple celebrated their anniversary Sunday.

"Mrs. Clark gave Dr. Clark something he's been asking for — a large wall clock," Ms. Brillinger said. "It has been hung directly under a wall-mounted television set in his room."

Clark watched Saturday night as his alma mater, Brigham Young, was defeated 64-62 in a triple overtime basketball game with arch-rival Utah.

Owning is better than renting.

If you're presently renting retail or office space, you already know some of the disadvantages-frequent cost-of-living rent increases, leases that give the landlord all the advantages, costly sales overrides on your retail sales. In short, you're not in control.

From a pure economic standpoint, ownership beats renting. Consider these advantages.

* You mortgage payments are fixed and not subject to escalation or overrides to a landlord.
* You receive tax deductions for interest and tax payments.
* You get a tax deduction for depreciation over the next 15 years.
* You have control over your space, and no one can cancel your lease.
* You can buy enough space to meet your future growth plans and lease the expansion area until it's needed.
* All maintenance and upkeep is furnished through the Owner's Association.
* Your real estate investment gains value.

In addition to all this, Mission Square is strategically located in one of the city's fastest growing areas; North Big Spring and Loop 250, just northeast of ClayDesta Plaza.

Mission Square is an ideal location for professionals, service businesses, and a variety of retails stores. Contact our office now, for a full color brochure and further details.
