All 100 sign up for prison jobs

Haitians take advantage of chance to work

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

When the Haitian refugees arrived at Big Spring's Federal Prison Camp last month, they were restless to go to work.

Now the Haitians are being allowed to work in the prison industries and as prison landscapers after they signed waivers saying they feel safe among other inmates, according to John Allman, prison camp superintendent.

Federal law does not allow nonsentenced inmates to mix with sentenced prisoners unless they volunteer to integrate, Allman explained. Upon learning they could go to work if they signed the waivers, all 100 Haitians put their signatures down, Allman said.

The refugees apparently were feeling unproductive staying inside all day and wished to be doing something worthwhile like everyone else, the superintendent said.

"We found out some of them were skilled tailors and so we took them to our facility that makes mail bags for the postal service. Their eyes lit up when they saw the sewing machines and they sat down and went to work with no problem," Allman said.

He said about 20 others went to work in the lock and lace department of the mail bag facility. The rest of the men are doing landscaping and warehouse duties.

"The men send what they make back to their families, they don't spend any money at our commissary. From what I can discern, $50 will feed their families for about six months. In Haiti the average yearly income is only $200," he said.

The Haitians working in industry are paid the same as regular inmates, and the other Haitians receive stipends for their work in the yards and warehouses.

"We haven't had any problem with them, they're happy and really have no intention of leaving the grounds. They really wouldn't know where to go anyway... they don't speak English and are not familiar with the area," he said.

Area churches have donated postage stamps so the Haitians can correspond with their families and send the money they are making home. The refugees also have received recorded Christian messages in the native languages and this has boosted their morale, Allman said.

"The men are so much happier working and that helps their mental situation. They are for the most part educated and have some kind of working skill. They want to feel useful the same way anyone else would," Allman said.

The Haitians begin their hearings with the Immigration and Naturalization Service on Monday, and Allman estimates the proceedings will last two weeks. He said the Haitians probably will remain in Big Spring for one more month.

"I'm not making a judgment of whether refugees are good or bad, it's not my place. My job is to treat them humanely until it is time for them to leave," Allman said.

O.I.L. expansion plan gains go sign from industrial unit

By BILL ELDER
Staff Writer

O.I.L.'s plan to expand its operations at the city's Industrial Park — a plan O.I.L. is currently negotiating with the city — got a go-ahead Wednesday from the private, non-profit Industrial Foundation.

The foundation, which exists to bring industry to Big Spring, offered to construct an assembly building for O.I.L. if the city will pay back the foundation, according to foundation President Clyde McMahon.

McMahon said this morning that the foundation met with O.I.L. Wednesday and offered to help out since it knew O.I.L. wanted to expand operations much faster than it is likely to be able to.

The O.I.L. plan hinges on approval from the Federal Aviation Administration, since some of the airport facilities will have to be relocated to make way for O.I.L.

The plan also hinges on the relocation of about 14 tenants on the western side of the park, and ultimately must be approved by the city council.

The council earlier this week learned from its Industrial Park Steering Committee that the plan would be a financially sound one for the city. It will, however, take several months of planning.

O.I.L. has notified the city it would like to get its first new assembly building constructed and into production by November.

McMahon said the foundation's offer would come close to allowing O.I.L. to meet that schedule.

The city, he explained, would probably pay the foundation out of rental charged O.I.L. or revenue from airport bonds issued to finance relocation of airport facilities.

McMahon said it wasn't known how much the construction will cost or exactly where it will be located, but it will be on what is now airport property and would take up about 20,000 square feet, he said.

O.I.L.'s projected expansion could boost its work force to 2,000 employees and increase its annual payroll of $15 million to $40 million by 1984, according to Chief Executive Officer Chris Christopher.

Eight-year probated term handed Mesker

By CAROL HART
Staff Writer

Robert Earl Mesker, who pleaded guilty to a charge of voluntary manslaughter in the shooting death of his brother, was given an eight-year probated sentence by a Howard County jury at 5:23 p.m. Wednesday.

The jury spent about two hours deliberating punishment in the case. Mesker was represented by Robert Moore II, Rick Hamby, district attorney, represented the state.

Testimony took only one day, as only the punishment phase needed to be determined. Mesker testified in his own behalf Wednesday morning. Wednesday afternoon, Mesker's wife, Dorothy, took the stand, as did his mother.

Dorothy Mesker was in tears during most of her testimony Wednesday. She recalled the day her husband shot his brother, Stephen Allan Martin, April 19, 1980. Martin had changed his name from William Harley Mesker, and throughout the trial was referred to as Billy by family members.

The shooting occurred on the same day as the death of the men's father, Samuel Harrison Mesker. The elder Mesker reportedly died of a heart attack.

Robert Mesker's wife told the jurors that she and her husband, who live in Odessa, had left their house on that Saturday to run an errand, and when they returned, Mesker's cousin, Jim Mesker, who had been staying with the couple, ran out to greet them.

Mrs. Mesker said her husband's cousin, "had no tact," and the cousin told Robert, "Hey, man, your daddy's dead."

"Robert just kept walking," Mrs. Mesker recalled, saying that the cousin repeated, "Did you hear me, I said your daddy's dead." Mesker then got in his pickup and left.

Robert Mesker testified Wednesday morning that he drove to Big Spring, came to his parent's home at 1812 Main, and later took a pistol and shot and killed his brother.

Mesker also told jurors that he felt his brother was a dangerous man, and was "drugged up or drunk up" most of the time. He said he felt his brother caused his father's death. He said his father was highly agitated on the day of his death, because Billy had been placed in jail, then released, and family arguments had ensued.

Mrs. Mesker told jurors she had to get the couple's children dressed and "find a ride" to Big Spring.

Moore asked Mrs. Mesker to describe her husband's actions when she saw him. "He didn't talk," Mrs. Mesker said, tears streaming down her face. "He came over and sat in my lap. He didn't say a word, he just cried."

Mrs. Mesker also told jurors, "I don't know if I could go on without him (her husband)" as she prepared to leave the witness stand.

Then Lucille Mesker was called to the stand. Mrs. Mesker, the defendant's mother, described her husband's condition on the day he died.

"He had undergone a stressful situation" recalled Mrs. Mesker. "He was extremely mad and upset. He was cussing and ranting and raving."

Mrs. Mesker said that on 7 a.m. April 19, 1980, she and her husband got a call "at 7 a.m." from Billy. "He was in jail for drunk and disorderly" conduct, she told jurors.

"He expected us to come get him out," Mrs. Mesker told jurors. "Sam See 'I'm going' page 2A

County tax appraisal board reviews proposed '82 budget

Members of the Howard County Consolidated Tax Appraisal Board reviewed the proposed 1982 budget for the unit during a meeting Wednesday.

The budget will be presented to the public at the Sept. 9 meeting of the board. Gene Pereira, chief tax appraiser, said that a copy of the budget will be presented to the heads of all political entities in the county between now and Sept. 9.

The board appointed Billy Smith and Lila Estes to select an audit firm for the district. Pereira said "By law, we are not required to have a committee to select an audit firm, but we recommended choosing one."

A request to amend the present budget by transferring $585.50 from the contingency fund to the labor (extra) fund was approved by the board.

Salaries for tax appraisal office employees were also discussed. Pereira recommended that each employee be given a flat 12 percent increase, but the board decided not to grant across-the-board salary increases. Each person's salary will be increased on an individual basis, according to the board's decision.

Pereira told board members that he contacted the state property tax board director to request that schools for his employees be offered in West Texas. Pereira said that the director agreed to write letters to the education committee of the state property tax board to request the schools in this area.

Relief spelled c-o-o-l r-a-i-n

Big Spring and surrounding areas experienced rain for the third day in a row yesterday. The rain brought with it cooler temperatures and overcast skies. The moisture started falling at approximately 6:30 p.m. and showers continued through the evening.

The U.S. Experiment Farm Weather station, Big Spring's official rain gauge, reported .11-inch. Big Spring is ahead of rainfall totals a year ago, but behind the normal for the area. Normal precipitation for this time of year is 11.35 and so far Big Spring has received 10.96 inches.

Today's forecast predicts only a 20 percent chance of showers. Long range forecasts anticipate a general clearing trend and fair skies.

Q. Where, when or how can a person get a new phone book? I've been calling the phone company but get no answer.

A. The best way to get a phone book, if one was not delivered to your home or business, is probably to go by the Southwestern Bell Telephone office, 205 E. 4th, and pick up a book. Telephone office employees have a stack of telephone books waiting for any customers who may not have received their phone books yet.

International controllers board is against boycott

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — The International Federation of Air Traffic Controllers Associations today decided against calling for worldwide action to support striking U.S. controllers.

The association's president, Harry Henschler, told reporters that President Reagan should reopen negotiations with the U.S. Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization in return for the international gesture.

He called on air controllers who are staging or planning job actions to call them off.

Henschler said after the federation's executive board ended its two-day meeting that the board would recommend postponing any international steps in support of the U.S. controllers at least until Aug. 22.

Delegates of the 61 member organizations of the international federation will meet "if required" on that date in Amsterdam, according to a telegram from the four members of the executive board sent to Reagan.

Henschler said Portuguese controllers had agreed to call off their announced boycott of flights to and from the United States scheduled to start at midnight Sunday. The tower in the Azores, part of Portugal, controls the key southern trans-Atlantic route.

Neutron bomb discussed

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The Reagan administration told the Geneva disarmament conference today that the neutron weapons being produced in the United States "are designed not to make nuclear war more thinkable, but to make aggression less so."

However, the Soviet Union said the U.S. decision to build the neutron weapon could "not fail to complicate" disarmament talks, and that "it is difficult to find any justification whatever (for this) new qualitative leap in the arms race."

The neutron weapon produces twice the deadly radiation of a conventional nuclear weapon but less than a tenth as much explosive power, heat and fallout. Thus the neutron weapon, a small warhead that can be placed on artillery shells, can kill people without inflicting intolerable damage to buildings.

The U.S. ambassador, Charles C. Flowerree, said the United States "categorically rejects" the argument that deployment of the neutron weapon, which he labeled "preeminently an anti-tank device," would make it easier to cross the threshold into nuclear war.

He told the 40-nation committee that the West was forced to react to the reality of Soviet armament. He said Moscow was spending twice as much annually on arms as it was 20 years ago, while the U.S. effort was at the 1964 level.

Welfare plan confirmed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Officials in the Reagan administration confirm they are considering a plan to shift responsibility for the nation's largest cash welfare program, Aid to Families with Dependent Children, to the states.

Georgia Gov. George Busbee told the National Governors Conference in Atlantic City, N.J., earlier this week that he was "convinced" such an effort was in the works.

The Washington Post, in its editions today, quoted Robert B. Carleson, a White House domestic policy adviser, as saying "the general decision" to convert the federal government's $8 billion share in the AFDC program to block grants has been made.

"But the timing and the form depend a lot on the budgetary situation and they are very important," Carleson told the newspaper.

Personal computer plan

NEW YORK (AP) — International Business Machines Corp. has plunged into the $2 billion personal computer industry with a line of desk-top computers ranging in price from $1,565 to more than $6,000.

IBM said Wednesday that its computers can be used in the home, school or office and may use hundreds of different programs.

The personal computers will be sold through IBM's product centers and outlets of Sears, Roebuck and Co. and ComputerLand Corp. beginning in October.

A stripped-down version will include a unit with a keyboard that can be connected to a home color or black-and-white TV set. The unit can be expanded with its own display terminal, a printer and auxiliary storage cassettes.

The standard unit can store up to 16,384 characters, more elaborate models can store up to 262,144 characters.

'Zipadee-doo-dah Day' set August 18 at VA

Feeling like the doldrums of summer have got you down?

If so, what you need to do is accent the positive side of your life — and a good place to do this could be the "Zipadee-doo-dah Day" coming up Aug. 18 at the Veteran's Administration hospital at the corner of Gregg and F.M. 700.

The hospital has put together a day-long series of events designed to promote mental health awareness.

Highlights include a brown-bag lunch led by the Mental Health Association of Abilene and Dr. Ralph Kantor, an Abilene family psychologist.

The hour-long program will be held at 11 p.m. and will repeat at noon. Lunchgoers will need to bring their lunches.

The day's events — which include a poster contest — are free and will be held in room 212 of the hospital.

The public is invited and as hospital staffer Dock Voorhies put it: "It's a day to accent the positive."

Police Beat Officers subdue prisoner

A 30-year-old Big Spring man was arrested for assault after he allegedly gave police officers a hard time as they attempted to book him at the police station early today.

Officers had arrested Jack Ross Cathey Jr. of 701 Edwards at about 2 a.m. for traffic violations and disorderly conduct. The officers said Cathey resisted arrest and had to be subdued.

At the police station, Cathey had just completed a telephone call when he asked his arresting officers to give him their names, according to reports.

Officers C.O. Boyd Jr. and Roger Sweatt then identified themselves, according to reports, only to have Cathey point his finger at them and threaten to "whip" them.

The officers apparently got into a scuffle with Cathey after that and he was forcibly put in a jail cell.

He was later transferred to county jail, charged with resisting arrest and placed under a $2,500 bond. The bond was made today and Cathey was released.

A golf cart worth $800 was reported stolen from the municipal golf course between Aug. 10 and 12, police said. The cart was kept in a storage shed which had its hasp broken off. A detective was assigned to the case.

Maria Mendez, 31, complained to police that a check made out for $264 was taken from a mailbox on Wood sometime between the beginning of the month and Aug.

L.G. Roberts of 2518 Fairchild complained to police that between 2 and 9 a.m. Wednesday someone broke into his car while it was parked at his home and took a cassette player and tapes worth a total of $205.

Earl Griffin, 38, of 806 Douglas, complained to police that his Ford automobile was parked in the lot of the Gregg Street Safeway between 8:30 p.m. Tuesday and 11:30 a.m. Wednesday when someone took the car. Griffin said it contained a ring worth $300 as well as tools worth $250, according to reports.

Cynthia Smith, 28, complained that her Mercury automobile was parked in the driveway of the Mid-Continent Inn when the windshield was broken out with a rock. The incident occurred at about 6:55 p.m. Wednesday, police reported.

The 7-11 on Highway 80 and Willia reported to police that a case of beer worth $8.99 was taken from the store at about 1:45 a.m. today.

Three vehicles collided at the intersection of Utah and Highway 80 at about 3:45 p.m. Wednesday, sending the driver of one of the vehicles, Buel Wood of 1817 Benton, to Malone-Hogan hospital by ambulance. He was treated for a fractured left pelvis and listed in good condition this morning by a hospital spokesman.

Billy was bailed out of jail, and was angry with his family because they had used part of his money to arrange for his release. Mrs. Mesker said Billy called her later that day, requesting that she give him $40. She refused.

Billy was angry, and Mrs. Mesker said she started "bawling." (Her husband) said I'm going to town. I'm going to get away from this."

The elder Mesker went to the domino hall, said his wife. She went to visit her sister. While at her sister's home, she received a call that her husband had been taken to the hospital. Later, "they told me he was dead."

Mrs. Mesker then discussed Billy, saying "we'd had problems with Billy for years. It was like a vicious circle. He was arrested many times, all over the state. He was a habitual liar. He had gone to the pen."

Mrs. Mesker said Billy experienced personality changes. "He was like somebody wild. He was like an Billy called her shortly after his father died, and asked why his mother was crying, she recalled.

She told him "Billy, your daddy passed away."

She said Billy cried out, "Oh, my God. Mother please don't tell me that. Mother, I killed my own daddy."

Later, when Robert came to her home, she said he told her "He (Billy) killed my daddy. He can't have you, mother."

When Mrs. Mesker was excused from the witness stand, she turned to the jurors and said "I'd like to say to the jury, Robert is a good boy."

Jessie Angel Vega, 27, 1502 Virginia, pleaded guilty on a burglary charge, and was given a five year sentence in the Texas Department of Corrections. He was given credit for 64 days in jail.

HC prexy explains calculated tax rate

Members of the Howard County Junior College District board formally approved the proposed increase of the calculated tax rate for the district at a public hearing Wednesday.

Sam Hill, director of learning development at the SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf, asked the board members what the tax increase entailed.

Dr. Charles Hays, president of the HCJCD, said that there would be no increase in a person's tax if that person's property had not increased in value.

Those whose property had increased in value were sent notices earlier this year by the Howard County tax appraisal offices.

The board members will adopt the actual tax rate at their regular college board meeting at 12:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Coahoma council to mull appointment of auditor

Members of the Coahoma city council will discuss the appointment of an auditor for the 1980-81 audit at their meeting at 7:30 p.m. today.

The council will also be called upon to accept Gary Hanson's resignation and appoint a replacement for his seat on the council. They will also discuss Sharon Grant's 90-day trial period as city clerk, and her merit raise.

Other items to be discussed are the city judge, yearly raises for city employees, a peddler's ordinance and fence repairs at the city yard.

The council will also discuss Hanson's replacement as mayor pro-tem.

Airlines predict normal international schedule

By the Associated Press

Overnight flights to Europe went off close to schedule from New York after Canadian air controllers returned to work and officials on both sides of the Atlantic predicted a "normal schedule" today.

Meanwhile, members of the International Federation of Air Traffic Controllers Associations were meeting in Amsterdam to discuss whether action should be taken to support striking controllers in the United States.

There were some delays Wednesday on flights from Europe to the United States and hundreds of would-be travelers spent the night sleeping where they could at London's Heathrow Airport, but the problems were expected to clear up quickly.

"By tomorrow morning, assuming the lanes stay open, we should be down to a normal schedule" across the North Atlantic, U.S. Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis said Wednesday. He said delays of only a half-hour are foreseen today.

The flight zone "has opened up again and it is our feeling that we will be getting things back to normal," said Gerald Fitzgerald, operations manager at Kennedy International Airport, the nation's busiest handler of international flights. On a normal day, 120 jets depart over the North Atlantic from the airport.

Trans-Atlantic travel was thrown into havoc Monday and thousands of passengers were stranded when Canadian controllers refused to handle flights to or from the United States, claiming that a strike by American controllers had made the U.S. air traffic system unsafe. Many flights were canceled and there were lengthy delays on others.

The Canadian controllers agreed on Wednesday to end the boycott, in return for an inquiry into the safety question. U.S. authorities deny that the system is unsafe.

Jean-Luc Pepin, Canada's minister of transport, had begun actions that could have led to $5,000 fines, job suspensions and firings against the Canadian controllers. More than 25 controllers were suspended.

Lewis said domestic air service remained at about three-fourths of normal as the strike by members of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization over wages and working conditions entered its 11th day today.

Although Lewis said the lengthy delays for international fliers had abated, he also said there among them Crow and Edwards. "A slogan should say who we are, and what we stand for. Caring is the hospital's product," explained Edwards, who won, for his efforts, a $25 gift certificate to a local steak house.

TCA awards BSISD financial assistance

The Big Spring Independent School District received a financial assistance award totaling $900 from the Texas Commission on the Arts at a meeting in Austin, Commission Chairman Mary Lou Braymer announced today. The school district will use the funds for a Performing Arts Repertory Theatre presentation of "Teddy Roosevelt."

The award was among 138 approved this spring for a total of $1,273,024. The awards were delayed, however, pending Governor Clements' approval of TCA's 1982-83 biennium budget.

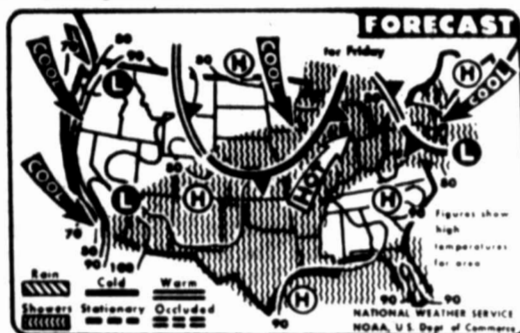

Financial assistance awards, which must be matched by local funds, support public programs in music, dance, theatre, visual art, architecture, media, literature and education, and serve to implement TCA's goal of making the arts accessible to all Texans. Awards are made to non-profit organization, educational institutions and units of government.

Application forms are available from TCA, and are due by February 1 and September 1 each year. Following a review process, awards are made in April and December.

The Texas Commission on the Arts serves Texas — its arts organizations and its people — by providing coordination, information and financial assistance for art programs.

Clements wants legislators back to finish tax issue

By JIM DAVIS
Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — An angry governor provoked by lack of action on a sticky ad valorem tax issue has promised Texas legislators they'll return to Austin later this year.

Gov. Bill Clements called the special session that just ended to complete congressional redistricting and push his pet ad valorem tax proposal. Redistricting was completed, but not before the special session was consumed by wrangling and political maneuvers.

As the lights went out in the Legislature, lawmakers headed home knowing they will be called back to decide whether the ad valorem tax will be abolished.

Clements clearly blamed the Texas Senate for refusing to go along with a House-adopted proposal to allow voters to kill the tax by constitutional amendment and promised the special legislative session.

"So, I might as well say now that I expect to see our legislators back in town later this year," Clements said.

"And I think a majority of our senators then will be more responsible about this issue — when they consider the alternative of hitting their constituents with an unneeded tax bill approaching a billion dollars as a result of the Midwestern suit," Clements was referring to a suit by two regents and a student at Midwestern State University to force collection of the 10-cent state ad valorem tax mandated in the Texas Constitution.

The Legislature tried to wipe out the tax by statute in 1979 by simply lowering it to an insignificant rate. The suit says that action was an improper attempt to get around the constitution, and most constitutional lawyers say the suit will be successful.

If that is the case, Clements said, a special session will be called as soon as the suit is completed on appeal. Normally that could take many months, going from district court to intermediate court of appeal to the Texas Supreme Court. On constitutional questions, however, appeal is direct from district court to the Supreme Court and should go much faster.

The suit is scheduled to be heard in an Austin district court Aug. 24.

Some legislators Tuesday expressed the hope that the Midwestern suit will be withdrawn to head off a possible burden to taxpayers if it is successful.

Sherrill Burba, regents chairman at Midwestern State and a plaintiff in the suit, said that's not likely.

"For all practical purposes, the action of the state Legislature (Tuesday) has said to Midwestern and the other 16 schools, 'We don't give a damn, forget it,'" Burba said. "The purpose of the lawsuit was to get them to do something. I think the lawsuit will be tried. In my own mind there is no question but that the suit will be successful."

House members took care of a few chores and a few hung around to see if the Senate might do anything requiring House action. The end came at 2:23 p.m. and within a few minutes the chamber was empty.

Reagan takes aim at regulations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is drawing cries of protest from consumer, environmental and women's groups over its broadest attack yet on government regulations governing everything from sex discrimination in sports and jobs to help for the handicapped.

Vice President George Bush announced Wednesday that 30 more rules have been targeted for possible elimination or easing in response to 2,500 individual suggestions for regulatory relief. That swells the administration's regulation "hit list" to 91.

"It's another signal to big business that there will be no law and order applied to them under the Reagan administration," consumer advocate Ralph Nader said. "It's just another installment in withdrawing the health and safety protections for the American people that have been in place for years."

Women's groups were particularly unhappy with the review of regulations prohibiting sex discrimination in school athletic programs and sexual harassment by employers.

Eleanor Smeal, president of the National Organization for Women, called the review "outrageous" and said NOW would "make sure that the message gets out to women and girls that this administration, under the guise of trying to simplify, is really taking away women's rights."

The Education Department's "Title IX" rules enforce a 9-year-old law that bans federal aid to the country's 16,000 public school districts and 3,000 colleges if their sports programs discriminate against women. Because of the law, schools have been upgrading women's athletics.

In announcing the review, the administration said concern had been raised over requirements that force schools to spend comparable amounts on men and women's sports programs for coaches' salaries and equipment.

Allman reports on federal prison

The temporary flap over the Haitian interlude has somewhat obscured the mission of the Federal Prison Camp here. John Allman, superintendent, told the Downtown Lions at their meeting Wednesday at Howard College.

Magistrates will be here Monday to begin processing the status of the refugees, most of whom likely will be deported, according to Allman. The 100 who came here were part of a bloc shifted from Florida where court proceedings threatened to preempt deportation hearings. "It was never intended that they would remain here as prisoners," said Allman.

On the more positive side, the superintendent had glowing praise for the way in which Big Spring people have worked with the camp and its residents.

"I can honestly say that in all my experience as a prison manager I have never seen the degree of cooperation we have received from Big Spring," he added.

Allman listed some of the things inmates (who are non-violent type prisoners awaiting parole back into society) have done. For instance, the Jaycee chapter at the camp, with aid of Big Spring and Snyder Jaycees, have given $100,000 for youth and humanitarian projects ($87,000 came from the Willie Nelson concert); sponsored by the International Little League; manned the fire department at the Big Spring Industrial Park; worked with senior citizens and day care centers; put up and took down community Christmas decorations; rescued the collapsed Centennial sets; attend vocational and academic classes (mostly at Howard College).

Not only do some 30 to 40 attend church with their sponsoring Big Spring families each Sunday, but in the two years of operation of the camp here, some 200 have made professions of faith. There have been only two incidents of difficulty with those paroled from the camp.

"Someday someone will embarrass us," he conceded, "but please remember the hundreds who didn't."

The camp currently has 237 inmates, far below its maximum complement. Prisoners can earn small amounts in the make-work industries which turn out mail bags for the postal service and electronic components for U.S. Army tanks. The output is equivalent to a $10,000,000 industry, according to Allman. He said the camp has an annual payroll of $2,600,000 and an operating budget of $3,000,000 for a considerable impact on local economy.

Next week, said program chairman Lynn Hise, the speaker will be Gene Persira, the chief appraiser for the tax appraisal board. President Jerry Phillips announced a board meeting for Thursday evening.

Bloom is on in seed industry

DETROIT (AP) — The bloom may be off the auto industry here these days but the area's seedling industry is enjoying record growth. Detroit, long recognized as the motor capital of the world, also boasts the lesser-known distinction of being the largest flower-producing area in the nation. Within a 30-mile radius of the city, more than a million bedding-plant flats are produced each year. The flats are the small baskets or boxes of young flower and vegetable seedlings that are transplanted in home gardens.

Air Force accused of waging war for Western U.S. MX plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some defense officials are accusing the Air Force of waging guerrilla warfare to keep the Reagan administration from dropping a plan to base the new MX missile in shelters in Western states.

The idea, the officials say, is to head off a substitute plan to deploy the new missile in giant airplanes. The airborne plan reportedly is favored by Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger.

The officials imply that Air Force officers have been trying to muster support in Congress via back-door contacts and have been indicating to some outside sources that they might not be able to testify on behalf of an airborne plan.

Officials on both sides discussed the budding controversy only on the condition they not be identified by name since neither Weinberger nor other senior administration officials have made public their intentions.

on how to deploy the new missile to immunize it from Soviet attack.

Denying any underground campaign to head off the airborne plan, Air Force officials said they have been open in backing a plan approved by the Carter administration and Congress to shuttle 200 MX missiles among thousands of reinforced horizontal shelters spread through desert valleys in Utah and Nevada.

However, President Reagan is on record as opposing that so-called shell game deployment. It also is opposed by officials of the states involved, environmentalists and other powerful forces such as the Mormon Church.

Referring to growing pressure from advocates of competing MX basing schemes on Weinberger and his advisers, one Air Force general suggested that "the heat is getting to them."

Boll Weevils have guts

It appears the punishment phase of the "boll weevil" rebellion has begun. Loyalist Democrats in Congress are beginning to zero in on their fellow Democrats who voted with President Reagan in the tax relief and budget bills.

Rep. Kent Hance found his name deleted from the list of House Ways and Means Committee members taking a three-week official trip to China and Hong Kong.

Rep. Phil Gramm founded himself excluded from a conference committee on budget reconciliation that bore his name.

These members of the Conservative Democratic Forum have been called turncoats, opportunists, and worse. Rep. Mickey Leland earlier had called Rep. Charles Stenholm, Rep. Hance and Rep. Gramm "three evil men."

Pressure is on to punish the defectors by denying them important committee assignments.

But if the case of Rep. Gramm is an example, discipline could backfire. At home in Bryan, Gramm was given a hero's welcome at an appreciation dinner attended by more than 1,500 constituents.

The Boll Weevils are a brave breed of lawmakers, but they're not fools. They realize their constituents helped sweep President Reagan into office.

Furthermore, Americans have made it plain that they are fed up with inflation and they want it controlled now.

As Hance said, "The President's program deserves a chance."

The Democrats who support the President's fiscal policies are doing so because they believe he is right, not because of pressure or inducements from the White House.

Except for a few party traditionalists, the people back home are proud that their congressional representatives have the integrity and fortitude to stand for what they believe to be in the best interests of the people.

"Bet you'll never guess who lost..."

Shallow men believe in luck, believe in circumstances. It was somebody's name, or he happened to be there at the time, or it was so then, and another day it would have been otherwise. Strong men believe in cause and effect. The man was born to do it, and his father was born to be the father of him and of his deed, and by looking narrowly, you shall see there was no luck in the matter, but it was all a problem in arithmetic, or an experiment in chemistry.

When flies foul up

Art Buchwald

You can't go off for a few days on vacation without someone fouling up. Take the Mediterranean fruit fly. I specifically left orders that only STERILE flies were to be released in fruit-bearing areas of California.

It was a very simple operation and a child could have done it. I have a copy of my telephone conversation with the people I dealt with.

"Is this the Mediterranean Fruit Fly Company?" I said.

"I need 14 million sterile fruit flies to release over the San Jose area this month. Do you have them?"

"Now I want to make sure these are the yellow iridescent kind with a wing span of less than a half-inch, and I want only males. You got that?"

"What I plan to do is release the males at mating time, have them search out the females and fire blanks. This way we'll wipe out the fruit fly without using harmful insecticides. You get what I'm driving at?"

"Si."

"How do I know that all the flies will be sterile?"

"My brother Carlos inspects each one before it leaves the factory."

"Does Carlos know anything about quality control?"

"Si, we have never ever sold a male fruit fly that could help a female lay a fertile egg. If Carlos even suspects a male is not sterile he'll smash it with a fly swatter and ask questions later."

"I have only Carlos' word for this?"

"With each sterile fly we give you a warranty. If the fly turns out not to be sterile we give you your money back, and you get a free fly on us."

"That's fair," I admitted. "But it's hard to believe that your brother Carlos would be able to personally inspect 14 million fruit flies."

"He doesn't do it alone. My cousin Luis helps him."

"That explains it," I said. "Just out of curiosity, how do you sterilize a fruit fly?"

"You have to be very careful."

"I know that. But it seems to me, when you're dealing in these numbers, there could easily be a slip-up and a non-sterile male could sneak through. How do you prevent that?"

"My cousin Eduardo stands at the door with a can of 'Raid.'"

"You seem to run a very safe operation. When can I have delivery on the fruit flies?"

"I'll ask my brother Carlos."

"The man came back in a minute. 'Will Tuesday do?'"

"That seems reasonable. I'm going off on vacation, and I would like all the sterile fruit flies to do their work while I'm gone."

"Si."

Obviously something went wrong, because when I returned I got the word that the Med fly had infested the entire fruit-growing heart of California. I immediately called the Mediterranean Fruit Fly Company.

"All right," I said angrily. "What happened?"

"I do not know, señor. My brother Carlos told me when the 14 million flies left here for California they were all sterile."

"A likely story. What do I do now?"

"I'll let you speak to my Cousin Tomas."

"What for?"

"He's in charge of our company's helicopter spraying division."

"You have a spraying division?"

"Of course. You don't think we can make any money sterilizing fruit flies."

Around the rim Looking back

Newspapers make pretty interesting reading, especially if the newspaper you happen to be reading is 25 years old.

For some reason, none of us here at the Herald have figured it out yet, several copies of the Dec. 6, 1955 Herald were holed up inside a filing cabinet in the office. Reading that paper gives one a good idea of what was happening on Dec. 6, 1955.

The front page features page one type articles, like the kidnapping of a local four-year-old girl, Mary Jean Nance. There's also a story about the ongoing trial of a San Angelo man, accused of murdering a San Angelo woman. According to the story, the woman was the victim of a bomb placed in her automobile.

But the most interesting news isn't on the front page of that Herald. There's an insightful picture of 1955 contained inside.

For example, one column, called Date Data, by Beverly Brandow, couldn't be printed today, what with all the Equal Rights feminists around. Beverly answers a question from a young man who wants to know about "dutch dating." The young man explained that he asked a girl out, then recommended that they go dutch treat. The girl turned rather cool after that suggestion.

Beverly really let the poor guy have it, and said "when a girl is with girl friends she feels pretty much on her own; when she is with a fellow she wants to relax and feel she can rest her brain and let him make the suggestions and handle things... Dutch dating is, in my opinion, one of the worst things boys could ever have introduced into dating."

I'll bet Dear Abby would have something different to say to that today. The classified ads were also a little different in 1955. For example, under the furnished houses column, there was "three rooms and a bath. Extra nice. $50 a month."

The best reading was the movie ads. The theaters were the Ritz, the State, the Lyric, the Jet and the Terrace Drive-In. Featured movies included "Good Morning, Miss Dove," "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," "White Christmas," and "Son of Paleface." Maybe 25 years from now, somebody will pull out a copy of today's Herald, and marvel at how much things have changed.

Reagan soft as sledge hammer

Evans, Novak

WASHINGTON — Glancing quickly at the two statements prepared for him on the air traffic controllers' (PATCO) strike, President Reagan reached for a white pad to write his own version and suddenly asked: Let me see the no-strike oath, I want to use it.

The time was Monday morning, the day the strike started. The place was the Cabinet room. Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis, author of one of the two prepared statements (the other was the White House staff's), quickly produced the no-strike pledge taken by all controllers. Reagan wrote his statement, including the entire no-strike oath.

Then, minutes later, he stepped into the Rose Garden to go on TV and teach the striking PATCO union a lesson they were learning the hard way. It was the same lesson that House Speaker Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill and other now-wisest Democratic grandees recently learned — also the hard way.

The lesson: When Ronald Reagan picks a target, he is as blunt and stubborn as a sledge hammer, despite his velvet glove of affability.

Among the 13,000 striking controllers, learning that lesson will cause anguish, tears and probably tragedy after the excitement of early combat wears off. For behind the cold, anti-strike logic pouring from Lewis' Transportation Department, Atty. Gen. William French Smith's Justice Department and the editorial pages of the Washington Post and the New York Times, Reagan's sense of his own rectitude is the real guarantee against retreat.

That extends the president's sway beyond the Democratic-controlled house, where Tip O'Neill and his aides learned to their surprise that an ideologically committed conservative president could bend the House to his will on radical budget and tax reform. It puts on display a president willing to assume the righteous pose of union-busting strike-breaker without apology.

"Don't forget that Cal Coolidge is one of this president's favorite characters," a top Reagan adviser told us. Gov. Coolidge of Massachusetts broke the Boston police strike in 1920, the key event in his becoming president three years later.

Weeks before PATCO President Robert E. Poli pulled his men out on strike, back in June during the first potential crisis, Reagan had counseled Lewis against offering more than the $40 million settlement package then on the table. Reagan stayed near the center of the long negotiations between the government and the union. He privately labeled the strike threat a virtual declaration of war against the government and he feared that any settlement over the $40 million mark would undermine his anti-inflation fight and crack his federal wage ceiling.

But the president's sense of timing made him acutely aware of the political advantages of taking a hard line in a labor crisis that might have been made in heaven for the glory of any president. The raise that Poli is demanding would give some of his working hours than the secretaries of State and defense (and all other Cabinet members) that would not make emotional allies out of blue-collar workers.

Along with the no-strike oath, regarded by Reagan in the old-fashioned way as a solemn undertaking, the conditions that underlay the union's strike were a political safety net for presidential intervention. The one threat was that with 13,000 controllers on strike, the nation's airways might indeed be forced to shut down. That would lead to an irresistible public demand for ending the strike, playing into the union's hands.

The administration is meeting that threat frontally, decrying the scare tactics of Poli that passengers are risking their lives in daring to fly during the strike. Thus, five days into the strike, whatever course it takes and however militant the union remains, Reagan seems headed for political gains in the handling of his first labor crisis.

That gives him an early-term dimension denied recent predecessors: a third conspicuous presidential success in a row, this one far beyond the congressional budget and tax wars. Reagan is showing an ability to pick his targets well and to use the sum of his powers to gain his end, a performance like to reverse the dangerous erosion of presidential power at a time the Western world has maximum need for a strong presidency.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I have not had a very happy life. Even as a child my parents abused me and I have always felt miserable. Frankly, death would almost be a relief. Can you give me any reason for living? — F.B.W.

DEAR F.B.W.: You need to realize that the unhappy experiences you have had in the past have colored your thinking very much. You did not receive the love that your parents should have given you, and you consequently have the feeling that you are not worth anything. I can understand why you feel the way you do, and I am deeply sorry for the experiences which have made you feel this way. But there is hope for you, and more than anything else you should make it your goal to discover it.

I wonder if you have ever taken time to ask yourself how God looks at you. The most important thing I can say to you is that God loves you. He sees your faults and sins, he also knows your discouragement and even bitterness. And yet he loves you and accepts you just as you are. I know God loves you because he was willing to send his Son into the world to die a cruel death on a cross. And he did that so you could be forgiven and then made part of God's family. "Greater love has no one than this, that one lay down his life for his friends" (John 15:13). And that is what Christ did for you out of love for you — he laid down his life for you.

My prayer is that you will respond to his love by inviting Jesus Christ to come into your life and reside there as your Savior and Lord. When you come to Christ, you enter into a personal relationship with God himself. He is your heavenly Father, and you become his adopted child.

Perhaps you know one of the most familiar verses in the Bible, John 3:16. It tells us, "For God so loved the world that he gave his one and only Son, that whoever believes in him shall not perish but have eternal life."

I like the suggestion someone has made, that in order to see its meaning for us we repeat that verse and put our own name in place of the general terms like "world" and "whoever."

"For God so loved Billy Graham that he gave his one and only Son, that if Billy Graham believes in him, Billy Graham shall not perish but have eternal life." You do that, and you will begin to discover God's great love for you. And that will give you a reason for living.

Occipital nerve cause of headache

Dr. Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I've never seen an article about occipital neuralgia. I have a headache every day, and there are some days that I just can't stand it, it gets so bad. My family doctor has tried to help, but nothing works. Doesn't anyone else in this world have occipital neuralgia with some relief? Some days I think I am ready for an asylum. I also have a disc degeneration between my C3 and C4 spine sections. — L.J.

Occipital refers to the back of the head. When an occipital nerve (serving that area) is inflamed or irritated, whatever the cause, the area from where the head and neck join, up to about ear level, is painful. The pain is worse when you bend your head to the side that hurts. That stretches the occipital nerve on that side.

Of course, if there is a treatable cause of the irritation, elimination of that will cure the pain. If no cause can be found, aspirin and sleeping with an extra pillow to take off any stretching pressure from the nerve will help. At times, a neck brace helps for the same reason. Numbing of the nerve with Novocaine-like drugs has been done. Perhaps one of these maneuvers will give you relief.

One of the occipital nerves does leave the spinal cord at the point where you say you have disc trouble (between C3 and C4). You might ask a neurologist to investigate. He might suggest one of the relief measures I mentioned. It is a most unpleasant cause of headache, and I truly sympathize with you.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am a 20-year-old college student. Recently my doctor diagnosed a digestive problem as lactose intolerance. He said he could not be certain, however, without a lactose intolerance test. My symptoms indicate that the situation is getting worse — that is less milk now causes worse effects. Is there any reason why I should have the test done? What does it involve? Is there anything I can take for it? I like milk. — D.M.

A good reason to have the test done is to find out if you really do have lactose intolerance so that it can be treated. It may cause you a little stomach discomfort, but that would be about it. First, your problem.

Lactose is a complex milk sugar. If you do not have the enzyme that breaks it down into less complex sugars then it stays around and causes abdominal cramps, bloating and diarrhea. The severity of the symptoms depends on the relative lack of the enzyme. If there is still some of it around, the symptoms are not so violent.

Now, about the test. It is pretty simple. You are given a measured amount of milk sugar to drink. After a short wait, a blood sample is taken.

The blood is checked to see if you digested the milk sugar. If you did, your blood sugar (the smaller less complex sugars I mentioned) rises. If you didn't digest it your blood sugar remains unchanged from what it was before the test. That means the milk sugar was not broken down so didn't get into your blood. You didn't have the enzyme that does that job. If you truly have lactose intolerance, you have to avoid milk sugar.

Protective order issue in Ma Bell rate battle

By JACKIE CALMES

AUSTIN — With a protective order guarding a mini-library of Southwestern Bell Co. documents, attorneys preparing to fight Bell's $469.8-million rate hike complain that information-gathering is tougher than declassifying top government secrets.

"You end up getting what the company wants you to have and when they want you to have it," Don Butler, attorney for the Texas Municipal League, groused Wednesday.

"Our people ... cannot possibly prepare for the trial of this case," Ray Besing of MCI Communications Corp. argued. "It's just unfair and defeats the whole process of discovery."

At issue is a protective order requested by Bell to guard what it says are trade secrets. The order was signed July 17 by Texas Public Utility Commission examiners Carolyn Shellman and Robert Gillespie. The two will preside over the Bell hearing, scheduled to begin Aug. 24.

Wednesday, Ms. Shellman conducted two emergency pre-hearings for attorneys who had complained that many volumes do not contain proprietary information that could be exploited by Bell competitors. Under the order, only attorneys and outside experts have access to the guarded volumes, and they must sign the order and agree not to take copies outside or keep notes.

Brook Brown, attorney for Texas Alarm & Signal Association, won some information and left the commission with Bell's promise to look for more.

Meanwhile, MCI's Besing and Bell attorney's were at the company's downtown Austin office, where the volumes are stored, trying to compromise. They could not, and by mid-afternoon they were at the commission with more than 40 contested volumes.

After several hours, they agreed that MCI could send copies to its experts in Canada, who would have to abide by the order's secrecy pledge.

"All of these documents have been made available to anyone who's a party to this case," Bell attorney Jim Wurtz argued. "We're not talking about denial of access; we're not talking about hiding documents."

Besing said some of the protected information would prove his company's claim that Bell is proposing most of its increase for local rates so that it can hold down long-distance charges. MCI competes with Bell in the long-distance market.

Martha Smiley, attorney for another competitor, U.S. Telephone, objected that Bell had not borne the burden of proving the information is proprietary. She also complained that parties are forced to hire outside help since only their attorneys, not employees, have access. "I'm a lawyer, not a utility rate expert," Ms. Smiley said.

"There's two issues here," she said. "Number one, should Bell have been entitled to the protective order to begin with, and if it is, does the protective order deny access to a company that cannot hire outside experts? What about consumer groups?"

Consumers Union's Carol Barger asked for Wednesday's hearing. Ms. Barger said she did so after visiting Bell's headquarters Monday and seeing volumes stacked 2-feet high on several long tables. She did not attend the hearing, however, having settled with Bell Tuesday.

Protective orders were granted — and fought — in last year's Bell rate case and in a previous case involving Mountain Bell Co. The municipal league's Butler complained that dangerous precedent is being set.

"There's just a wholesale assumption that everything is proprietary and then it's up to us intervenors to prove it's not," he said.

"It's a workable system," Bell's Wurtz said, "but it always causes inconvenience to the parties."

"It is workable," commission attorney Jose Varela agreed, "but that doesn't answer the legal questions of Bell's justifications for it."

Strikers' families pitch in DALLAS (AP) — John Germata never thought he would have to ask his children to pay for their rooms, and Gary Hockensmith couldn't envision his teen-agers working in restaurants so they could eat for free.

A week into the air controllers' strike, the unthinkable has become reality for both families.

Germata, 45, of Richland Hills, walked away from a $45,000-a-year job at the Federal Aviation Administration's Fort Worth Center, joining 12,000 other union members in a nationwide walkout.

He and his wife Judy began planning for the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization strike in March, but with five children at home, there were few opportunities to save money.

"We started trying to put money back, and we haven't had a vacation in over a year," Germata said. "There have been no new purchases. We've really watched it."

"We asked for a token amount of money for room from our teen-agers."

Since the strike started, "all the kids offered their money, even the high school kids who are saving for college," he added. "In fact... the littlest one offered her birthday money."

"We haven't had the air conditioner on in three weeks," Mrs. Germata said. "And I'm pretty good with buying groceries, knowing how to cut corners. We're buying a lot of the store brands these days, which are cheaper, instead of the name brand."

The Germata children will be starting school in a few weeks, but they might not be as well-equipped as in previous years.

"We've looked to see if maybe they don't need as many jeans this year, or as many shirts; maybe they can wear what they have a while longer," Germata said.

Like the Germatas, Gary and Cari Hockensmith are digging into their savings and they expect the money to last about another month. Although they haven't been forced to ask their children for help, the three children have promised financial assistance from their jobs at fast-food restaurants and convenience stores.

Hockensmith, a 38-year-old air controller who was fired from his $41,000 job at Dallas-Fort Worth Airport when he went on strike, says his family has cut expenses to the essentials. "We tried to project what might happen, what we might do. We started our financial planning about a year ago. We tucked a little extra away. But savings in this day and age won't go far."

"I'm not trying to lie to anybody. It's a scary experience. We've never been through anything quite like this before," said Hockensmith, a 14-year FAA worker who previously controlled air traffic in El Paso and Lubbock.

He plans to wait another month before seeking employment, but Germata says he is not optimistic about an end to the strike anytime soon. He has talked with a trucking company about a job and is looking through the telephone directory for possible employers.

"We're not sleeping too well right now," said the 23-year FAA veteran. "It's a very emotional thing for us, seeing some of our friends going back to work. It's difficult to forget your friendships, but the lines were drawn and they crossed them."

"I'm willing to go look for something else so I don't burn all my money. But I don't know if I can get a job because I'll have to be honest with an employer and tell him that if they call me back, I'll have to go."

Dear Abby

A Tale of Two Mothers

DEAR ABBY: NO PROGRESS REPORTS seems to want to punish the very woman who provided her with a family. I'm an adoptive parent who will be forever grateful to the young unmarried mother who had the courage to bear and relinquish her infant son to us 13 years ago.

He's a very special, gifted boy, and every time he wins an award or just puts his arms around me, I think of his "other mom," and my heart breaks a little. I wish that she could know how wonderful he is, and how much joy he has brought us.

One day I'm sure our son will want to know his natural mother, and we will help him in his search. I want to put my arms around her, cry with her for all she's missed and say "thank you" for giving us this wonderful son.

DAVID'S MOM

DEAR MOM: Your generosity and understanding make you a special mother. However, not all adoptive parents had your good fortune. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: We adopted a 3-pound "preemie," lavished all the love and care we had to give, and wound up with an unloving, selfish girl who was interested only in what she could get from us. She's 35 now, and all the misery she's caused herself and us would fill a book. I wonder how many more out there have similar tales to tell?

HEARTBROKEN IN TUCSON

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: Parents of children, natural-born or adopted, get no guarantee that their children will bring them joy instead of heartache. Most children are a mixture of both.

Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (35 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Letter Booklet, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.

Doctors able to view unborn babies by using sound waves

HOUSTON — Doctors are able to lower infant mortality rates with a medical advance that allows them to "examine" unborn babies by using pictures produced by sound waves, says a researcher at Baylor College of Medicine.

The technique, called ultrasonography, also allows mothers — and fathers — to "see" their babies before birth, if they choose.

The procedure provides doctors with a safe and painless way to know what is going on inside the womb and in some cases to detect and treat problems in the fetus (the developing baby), said Russell Deter, M.D., director of the obstetrical ultrasonography program at Baylor.

Using a scanner that bounces ultrasound waves (not heard by the human ear) off body tissue at a specific depth, doctors get a cross-sectional "photograph" that shows details of the development of a fetus. Some scanners, like movie cameras, also show fetal movements.

The technique is especially valuable in caring for expectant mothers who have medical problems or a history of difficulty in pregnancy, Deter said.

Although its purpose is medical, a frequent side effect has been a strong emotional involvement of the mother with the unborn child.

Some mothers prefer not to find out details such as the baby's sex, Deter said, and only want to know that the fetus is healthy.

Others want to watch the baby develop in the womb. Some even name the baby before birth.

One young mother whose third pregnancy was monitored by ultrasound describes her experience this way:

"You see this thing that looks like a frog — it really does look like a tadpole — you see it growing arms and legs and becoming a little person that sucks its thumb and does upside down flips, that reaches out and holds on to its foot or the umbilical cord. I still have pictures from that time and my older children can hardly believe that it's Katie."

"The first time my husband saw it he was almost dumbfounded. He thinks every father should have the chance to watch the baby growing."

Watching babies in the womb and improving methods for assessing growth has been the focus of several ultrasound research projects by Deter.

Most obstetricians use ultrasound to see whether there are one or more fetuses, the position of the fetus and details of its anatomy.

Doctors can also determine the age of the fetus when the mother is uncertain of the date of conception by using ultrasound pictures to compare fetal measurements to standard growth charts. Knowing the exact age of the fetus can be vital

Homemade frozen yogurt is low in calories, fat and cholesterol but high in nutrition

COLLEGE STATION — Go frozen-yogurt crazy — at home!

Frozen yogurt is a craze sweeping the nation, especially in the food-service world and particularly with the health-conscious. Now, you can make it at home — and the sky is the limit on flavor and style creations, says Mary K. Sweeten, a foods and nutrition specialist.

Simply freeze plain yogurt in popsicle molds, or make homemade yogurt ice cream. To make yogurt ice cream, follow directions for ice cream but substitute yogurt for milk. For each quart of yogurt, add three cups of fruit.

Then freeze in an ice-cream freezer. Store in airtight containers in the freezer. Fruits that combine well with yogurt include strawberries, apples, raspberries and oranges. Also, lemon juice makes a zesty flavor partner.

Don't overlook canned fruits, either, and remember that yogurt also is fabulous in frothy milk shakes, and it blends beautifully with fruit-flavored liqueurs for party-pleasing parfaits.

Farm policy folly

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The 17th Congressional District of Texas sprawls from the diversified agricultural production areas of Cooke, Wise and Parker counties to the east; to the South Plains, where cotton remains king; from wheat country in the northern counties, to the dairy and peanut counties of Eastland, Erath and Comanche in the south.

Scattered throughout the area are some of the nation's most productive areas for grain sorghum, cattle and hogs, with a scattering of sheep and goats and poultry. All combine to make agriculture the largest employer, taxpayer and income-producing industry in the District.

For that reason, as well as my 20-year background in the industry, I chose the Agriculture Committee as my first choice of assignments in Congress. It has historically been a troubled industry and, with passage of this year's farm legislation (in its current form) I'm sorry to say I do not believe the situation will improve rapidly.

My commitment to the agricultural industry remains unchanged: To support legislation that will provide for increased profitability for production. In light of current budgetary restraints, I'll be the first to admit that that is a tall order. The agricultural budget in 1972 was $5.3 billion and, before we even began cutting this year's federal spending, the agriculture budget was down to $4.4 billion, not taking inflation into consideration at all.

That spells real trouble for all segments of the industry, all across the nation. We are cutting into muscle — not fat — in agricultural spending this year. But agriculture

Committee is told textbooks push homosexuality, humanism

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Homosexuality and humanism are pushed in several homemaking texts offered for use in Texas high schools, the state Textbook Committee has been told.

Publishers denied they were pushing anything but information and questions to get teen-agers to thinking about matters that are or will be important in their lives.

The committee enters its fourth day of hearings today on texts for earth science, homemaking and elementary school social studies classes.

Janie Riddle, a Houston mother of three children, singled out Bennett Publishing Co.'s "Finding My Way" for criticism.

She read from the book a discussion of homosexual physical exchanges and said:

"Trying to softsoap wrong does not change things. I don't send my children to school to learn the how-tos and why-nots of homosexual behavior."

Mrs. Riddle, who is pregnant, also protested a statement in the book that "making a baby with no one to care for it is immoral."

"I object to a book on homemaking pushing abortion," she said.

Bennett responded in writing that "understanding one's sexuality is important in personal development and relations with others, both of which are also concerns of home economics."

The publisher said the book "recognizes that people are different and gives them the freedom to follow their own consciences. The petitioners (Mrs. Riddle) would deny the students those rights."

Donald Orloff, a Houston mechanical engineer, said American Book Co.'s "Earth Science," a high school geology text, offers evidence for evolution over billions of years while ignoring evidence for a special creation less than 50,000 years old.

"It's not science. It's simply an attempt to remove an intelligent creator from the picture," he said.

Orloff said the book's discussion of methods for determining the age of rocks mentions "only methods that give very old ages to the earth while ignoring those that give a very young age."

American responded in writing that the time measurements discussed in the book "all give consistent estimates and have been accepted as standard practices by earth scientists."

Estimates of the age of the earth range as high as six billion years.

Patsy Moore of Houston protested Bennett's "Married Life," a homemaking text that she called "humanist," and Webster-McGraw's "Child Growth and Development."

"I love the Lord, my God. I love my children. And I love your children, and that's why I'm here," she told the committee.

Mrs. Moore specifically objected to discussions of men and women living together outside of marriage, abortion, racial inter-marriage and premarital pregnancy.

Bennett said it "flatly denies that this or any of its textbooks are humanist publications."

Webster-McGraw said, "Although we respect the petitioner's religious convictions, as publishers we are charged with the responsibility of providing materials for students from a variety of religious backgrounds."

LULAC is seeking legal aid for study of redistricting

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The League of United Latin American Citizens requested legal aid Wednesday in reviewing the congressional redistricting bill approved by the recent special legislative session.

LULAC asked the Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund — MALDEF — to conduct a "searching investigation" into redistricting.

Of particular interest, LULAC said, is whether the redistricting plan violates the 1975 federal Voting Rights Act.

Based on MALDEF's findings, the LULAC officers said, a decision would be made on whether to sue to overturn the plan. If LULAC files suit, they said, it would want MALDEF to represent LULAC.

Reagan panel fights release of fed audit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's campaign committee is fighting release of a Federal Election Commission audit report alleging that the committee misspent more than $1.5 million in federal campaign funds.

Reagan lawyers say they fear the president's campaign committee and "the various individuals" associated with it "will suffer irreparable damage, loss and injury" and "unnecessary and unwarranted exposure to severe damage to their good name and reputation" if the report is released later this month as scheduled.

The suit by the Reagan-Bush Committee was filed in U.S. District Court here Tuesday and papers in the case were released Wednesday.

It was the first public disclosure that the election commission suspects campaign spending violations that would require a large repayment of government funds supplied the campaign.

Repayments for campaign spending irregularities have been common after presidential campaigns since government financing began with the 1976 primaries, in part because of the complexity of the law and the difficulty of bookkeeping for a national campaign.

However, $1.5 million would be the largest repayment so far.

The federal government gave Reagan and former President Carter $29.4 million each to finance their general election campaigns last year. They were forbidden to spend more than that except for certain bookkeeping and legal expenses and support from their parties.

The audit challenged by the suit filed Tuesday covers the Reagan general election campaign.

The audit of Reagan's primary campaign was released last Feb. 2 and asked $413,960 in repayment, including $137,737 for exceeding the spending limit in the New Hampshire primary. The rest was for various smaller alleged overpayments or ineligible payments.

All the primary repayments still are being negotiated. Reagan voluntarily returned $952,879 in unused federal money.

It's not too late for other missing children, parents say

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — Saying "it's too late for Adam but it's not too late for other children," the parents of Adam Walsh have called for a national computer system to aid in the search for missing children.

The 6-year-old boy's severed head was found Monday in a canal along the Florida Turnpike near Vero Beach. Police speculate the killing was the work of a dangerous "psychopath" who could kill again.

"Little children can't vote, little children can't pay taxes, so politicians aren't aware of the problem," John Walsh said Wednesday at a news conference with his wife, Reva.

He said a reward fund of more than $120,000 that was started to help locate their son will be given to bona fide groups involved in finding missing youngsters.

The Adam Walsh Memorial Fund also will be used for lobbying on the missing children issue, said Walsh, vice president of the new Paradise Grand Hotel in the Bahamas.

Meanwhile, police Lt. Richard Hynds said Adam's killer is a dangerous "psychopath" who could kill again. Authorities have no solid leads in the case.

Wright's office will conduct further examinations before ruling on cause of death, but he said "there is no doubt it is a homicide."

WETHERSFIELD (AP) — Jim Wethersfield is feeling the pressure. He knows that he must win this year's Sammy Davis Jr. Hartford Open. Last year, Simo won the $54,000 tournament. He lost a six-hole playoff to Howard Twitty of the Hartford Wethersfield Club course.

Drew Pearson unhappy with Cowboys

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Dallas Cowboys star wide receiver Drew Pearson says his National Football League career is fast drawing to a close, and he won't play in the 1981 season unless his contract is improved.

With three years and an option season to go on his current contract, Pearson has been discussing renegotiation with Cowboy management since February. The two sides are still far apart. "At this point, I don't feel optimistic, not in the least," Pearson said Wednesday. "Right now there's no way I'm going to play the '81 season with my contract."

Pearson, who came into the National Football League as a free agent in 1973, is the Cowboys' all-time leading receiver, an All-Pro and Pro-Bowl player, and a member of the 1970s All-Decade team.

"If football ended for me today, I've fulfilled my dreams," he said. "I've reached every height, personally and team-wise, that the game offers ...

Without football, I don't think I'd curl up and die.

"Either this season or next will probably be my last, regardless. The only way I would consider playing any longer after a couple more years maximum would be if they were to offer me a great deal of money to stay on."

He said the two sides were $50,000 to $60,000 a year apart.

His attorney, Roy McCoy of Dallas, talked to Cowboys player personnel director Gil Brandt last weekend, but

Pearson said no progress was made and management appears to be "saying, in essence, that I should settle for less."

He accused Cowboy management of being "unrealistic" and said contract talks were a "one-way street" with management in "complete control."

"Being part of what makes this team go makes it additionally frustrating," he said. "And I really don't see why it has to be that way. That's what's driving me out of the game."

He said he would retire if he does not play in the 1981 season, and that he believed he could match his current income by working in television or radio, although he has not had any concrete offers.

"Right now, I'm in limbo. It wouldn't do me any good to walk out of camp at this point. All they would do is fine me ... and try to let things blow over. Maybe later ... that would be the right strategy."

He said locker room talk is beginning to focus on contracts and money, even among younger players, and "any time money becomes the primary issue, then football you've got problems."

"Players are beginning to ask how important this (pro football) really is," he said. "They're beginning to wonder if maybe it isn't overrated. There are several younger players talking about making this their last year, things like that."

"They're saying they can get into something that will earn them just as much money and not offer the physical punishment the game does."

Former All-Pro receiver leaves Baltimore camp

Carr shiftier on Colt brass than DBs

By the Associated Press

Defensive backs may be used to Roger Carr's "now-you-see-me, now-you-don't" routine. Now the Baltimore Colts are facing that very problem in the form of a contract dispute.

The veteran Colt returned to the National Football League team's Towson, Md., training camp Wednesday, and disappeared almost as quickly.

Carr was to have signed a multi-year contract last week. But a snag developed in his negotiations with Colts' General Manager Dick Szymanski and the eight-year pro from Louisiana Tech walked out Tuesday. His return Wednesday caught everybody by surprise.

Assistant General Manager Ernie Accorsi hurried from the practice field at Goucher College to the dormitory where a temporary team office has been set up. But by the time he arrived, Carr was gone.

Szymanski added, "Roger will be back when he's back and I don't want to say anymore about it. Roger is Roger and it's up to him to come back."

Coach Mike McCormack, who said he had talked to Carr Wednesday by telephone, was more optimistic.

"Roger says he wants to come back, and I'd love to have him back. I think Roger will be back very soon."

Attempts to reach Carr for comment were unsuccessful.

Carr, who caught a touchdown in the Colts' exhibition loss to New Orleans last Saturday, was Baltimore's leading receiver last season with 61 receptions, including five TDs.

Elsewhere, Dallas General Manager Tex Schramm denied reports that wide receiver John Jefferson of the San Diego

Chargers might be traded to the Cowboys.

"We've had no conversations whatsoever," said Schramm.

Jefferson, the only receiver to surpass 1,000 yards in each of his first three seasons, is seeking to renegotiate the final three years on his contract with the Chargers.

The Philadelphia Eagles received bad news when it was disclosed that All-Pro linebacker Bill Bergey's left knee is acting up again.

Baseball might find saturation point in 2nd half

By the Associated Press

After two midsummer months without major league baseball, television stations plan to make up for lost time — and make up lost advertising revenue — by showing just about every game they can focus their cameras on for the remainder of the season.

While NBC and ABC are sticking with their announced schedules, partly because they are locked in by football commitments, local stations have added many games to their programming logs for Part II of the strike-interrupted 1981 season.

Most station officials concede there were some losses in advertising revenue because of the strike, without giving dollar figures, but are hopeful of recouping those losses in the second half of the split season. There should be enough baseball on TV to satisfy the appetite of even the hungriest fanatic — especially if his TV is hooked up to cable and he gets the USA Network (which shows Thursday night doubleheaders) and the various superstations. WTBS, Ted Turner's Atlanta-based station which carries the Braves games and beams them via satellite to cable companies around the country, plans to televise all but two of the team's games in the second season — six more than scheduled. The only reason it's not doing every game is that the networks are showing games in prime time those nights, and their contracts prohibit competing local telecasts.

During the strike WTBS showed 24 games of the Braves' Richmond farm team, and when Richmond went on a winning streak these games frequently pulled higher ratings than the Braves telecasts.

Another superstation, WGN in Chicago, plans to televise 49 Cubs and 29 White Sox games, nine more than scheduled. That's an average of more than a game a day — surely enough for the most rabid fan.

Casper, Venturi eligible for Legends

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Newcomers eligible for next year's Legends of Golf Tournament include Billy Casper, winner of the 1959 and 1966 U.S. Opens, and Ken Venturi, who won the Open in 1964.

To be eligible for the Legends a golfer must have reached the age of 50 and must have won a major tournament such as the Open, Masters, PGA, been a leading money winner or played in the Ryder or World Cup matches.

The 1982 Legends will be held April 19-25 at the Onion Creek Club, and the final two rounds of the 72-hole tournament will be nationally televised.

The club has agreed to host the tournament through 1984 and has an option to continue the tournament through 1986.

Simons expects record low at Hartford

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Jim Simons is feeling the pressure. He knows that many people expect him to do well, if not win, this year's $300,000 Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open.

Last year, Simons nearly won the $64,000 top prize, but lost a six-hole playoff to Howard Twitty on the 6,534-yard Wethersfield Country Club course.

The person, however, applying the most pressure in the 72-hole tournament that was to begin today was Simons himself.

"I have a tendency to say yes that I'm pressuring myself," Simons said. "It would be unrealistic not to."

But the 31-year-old golfer was asked Wednesday whether he felt he would be able to match the opening-round score he shot last year, a 9-under-par 62 that gave him the early lead.

"I think that I'd be unrealistic" to hope to repeat such an opening score Simons said, explaining that "good rounds just happen."

Adding to Simons' concern was that he failed to make the cut at last week's PGA championship, which he blamed on a long layoff. He also was nursing a bee sting on his right hand that caused some swelling and left him with a grip "that doesn't feel right."

"Mentally, I'd feel better if I made the (PGA) cut," he said.

Simons and other golfers indicated the course record of 20-under-par — set by Billy Casper in 1973 and tied three years ago by Rod Funseth — could be in jeopardy this year.

This season's best score for 72 holes was Hale Irwin's 23-under-par that captured the Hawaiian Open.

"It's in better condition than last year," Simons said of the course. "The scores are going to be better than last year."

Winfield no spoiled rich superstar

By the Associated Press
Big Dave Winfield doesn't care about being the richest baseball player in the world—he just wants to be the best. The best possible, that is, with the skills at hand.
"I'm not one to think about the first and 15th (paydays)," says the New York Yankees' $24 million outfielder. "That's not why I go out there. I go out there always to do my best."
Take the All-Star Game in Cleveland Sunday. I didn't look at it as entertainment. I wanted to win. I was very unhappy when we didn't."

Highest paid performer in the majors, the 6-foot-6, 220-pound athletic marvel is an enigma to the skeptics who watch and report the game. Why is he always so charged up? Why does he continually knock himself out as would some raw rookie struggling to make the squad?
Why is he so nice to kids and fans? Why is he always so readily available and amenable to newsmen? Where are the prima donna qualities, arrogance and don't-bother-me brushoffs often associated with highly paid superstars?

Winfield is almost too good to be true. In the 1920s, he would be a black Frank Merriwell, a faultless hero. In the 1980s, the age of egotism, commercialism and cynicism, he is an anachronistic puzzle.
In the All-Star Game, marked by an explosion of home runs (none by Winfield) and won by the National League 5-4, it was the long-legged, graceful Winfield who elicited the loudest exclamations from NBC's broadcasting team of Joe Garagiola, Tony Kubek and Bryant Gumbel.

In the seventh inning, he raced to the wall, leaped and threw himself against the barrier in an effort to snare Gary Carter's second home run, which barely eluded him.
An inning later, he made a similar racing, wall-banging effort to intercept Mike Schmidt's blast that proved the winning shot of the game.

He showed little regard for George Steinbrenner's $24 million piece of baseball bric a brac.
These were the kind of titanic blows that most outfielders would stop and gaze at curiously as they might a winging bird.
Not Winfield.
As if this weren't sufficient evidence of his old college try spirit, the rangy outfielder returned to New York and repeated his heroics in Yankee Stadium in Monday night's 2-0 victory over the Texas Rangers.

In the second inning, Texas' Leon Roberts slashed a hooking line drive that had "double" or "triple" written all over it. Winfield made a leaping backhand stab and took a tumble, the ball stashed away in his glove. In the seventh, Buddy Bell poled one of Tommy John's pitches to deep left. With speed and perfect timing, Winfield made a catch that kept the ball out of the stands.

Astros Walling likes PH role

By the Associated Press
The San Francisco Giants have seen Dennis Walling bat just twice in the last three days, and must feel by now that it's more than enough.
Walling laced a run-scoring single Wednesday to lead the Houston Astros to a 5-4 National League victory over the Giants. On Monday he delivered a two-run double to key a 6-5 victory by the Astros.
The recent successes have given him new life as a pinch-hitter, he feels. He was 1-for-9 without a run batted in during the first half of the season.
"I can accept coming off the bench if I can get mentally prepared to be a pinch-hitter," Walling said. "Everybody wants an identity. We made some moves and my role is more defined now."
Luis Pujols opened the Houston eighth with a single and Kiko Garcia ran for him. After a wild pitch and a sacrifice by Terry Puhl, Greg Minton replaced Al Holland, 3-3. Minton walked pinch-hitter Harry Spilman and Walling, hitting for Joe Sambito, 3-3, lined his game-winning hit.

NL Roundup

The Astros chased All-Star Game winner Vida Blue with three runs and six hits in the third inning. Dickie Thon doubled home one run, and the other two scored on base hits by Tony Scott and Jose Cruz. The Astros added an unearned run in the fifth off Fred Breining, staking Vern Riffe to a 4-0 lead.
The Giants scored four times in the sixth to tie the game. Enos Cabell doubled with one out and scored on Jack Clark's single. Darrell Evans followed with a two-run homer, his 10th of the season. One out later, Jerry Martin belted his third homer of the year.

Cardinals 11, Phillies 3
George Hendrick hit two home runs and knocked in three runs and rookie Orlando Sanchez singled home the go-ahead run in the fifth inning as St. Louis clobbered Philadelphia.
For the second straight night at Veterans Stadium, the attendance was well under the pre-strike average of 32,684. A crowd of 23,566 turned out for the third of the four-game series between the top two teams in the first half of the NL East season.
Bob Sykes, who pitched 31-3 innings and gave up four hits and no runs, earned a victory in his first decision of the season.
Expos 3, Pirates 2
Andre Dawson hit his 15th homer of the season to back the combined eight-in pitching of Ray Bennis and three relievers, leading Montreal over Pittsburgh.
Mets 7, Cubs 4
Dave Kingman and Ellis Valentine drilled consecutive triples at the start of the 10th inning, leading New York past Chicago for the Mets' third straight victory since the reopening of the season.
Dodgers 8, Reds 5
Dave Lopes singled home the tying run in the fourth inning and cracked a two-run homer in the seventh to lead Los Angeles over Cincinnati.
Dave Stewart, 4-1, who relieved starter Bob Welch in the fifth inning, earned a victory with relief help from Steve Howe. Howe posted his seventh save.
Tom Seaver, 7-2, took the loss, his first since April 18 on a snap a six-game winning streak.

Rudi finds old bat in Bosox HR derby

By the Associated Press
It's been a long time since Joe Rudi was a hero. Wednesday night, he proved he hadn't forgotten how.
The 13-year veteran outfielder belted a pair of home runs Wednesday in leading a six-homer blitz by the Boston Red Sox in an 8-1 romp over the Chicago White Sox. Being in the spotlight again felt good to Rudi, a star with the World Champion Oakland A's in 1972 through '74, but something of a bust since then.
"I feel as good as ever, just great," said Rudi, who will be 35 next month. "I can hit as well as I ever did. I just need the opportunity to play."
Rudi hasn't gotten that opportunity very much in recent years. After joining California as a free agent in November 1976, Rudi was plagued by injuries and slumps. He made it into only 64 games in his first season as an Angel, batting .264, his lowest average as a full-time major leaguer.

AL Roundup

In 1978, Rudi knocked in 79 runs but hit only .256 in 133 games, then appeared in just 90 contests in '79 and 104 games (.237) in '80.
The Angels, fed up with Rudi's declining average each season, dealt him to Boston last winter, but it's been more of the same for the outfielder this year. He's batting a minuscule .169 in 22 games.
That made Wednesday's performance even more gratifying.
"He's an old pro who can help us a lot down the stretch," said Boston Manager Ralph Houk. "He had trouble with his legs at the start of the year, but now he's in excellent shape. He's been through the pressure a lot during his career and I just hope he stays hot."
Also hot Wednesday night for Boston were Jim Rice, Dwight Evans, Dave Stapleton and Gary Allenson, all of whom homered. The six homers set an American League high for the year.
Bobby Ojeda, called up from Pawtucket of the International League Sunday, scattered seven hits, including three by Ron LeFlore, in his 1981 major league debut. He had a 1-1 record with Boston last year.

Rice also threw out two runners for his sixth and seventh assists of the year.
Elsewhere, it was California 4, Seattle 1; the New York Yankees 5, Texas 4; Cleveland 9, Milwaukee 4; Minnesota 4, Oakland 3; Toronto 4, Detroit 3, and, in a doubleheader, Kansas City bombed Baltimore 10-0, then was edged by the Orioles 4-3 in the second game.
Angels 4, Mariners 1
Bobby Grich, who signed with California as a free agent a week after Rudi in 1976, also pounded a pair of homers Wednesday as the Angels down Seattle 4-1 for their first victory since the resumption of play following the 59-day layoff, which included the 50-day strike.
Grich has fared much better than Rudi with the free agent-laden Angels. In 1979, when California won the West Division—and Rudi was stumbling through a .242 campaign, with 11 homers and 61 RBI—Grich had a spectacular season, batting .294, with 30 homers and 101 RBI.

Indians 9, Brewers 4
Rick Manning drove in three runs and scored three with a home run and two singles as the Indians snapped a seven-game losing streak.
Mike Hargrove added four hits to a 17-hit Cleveland barrage and Len Barker struck out five and didn't walk a batter in eight innings.
Twins 4, A's 3
Minnesota rallied from a 3-0 hole with seventh-inning RBI singles by Hosken Powell and Mickey Hatcher providing the tying and winning runs. The Twins trailed 3-2 before bunting five singles against reliever Bob Ojwchinko, 3-2, in the seventh.
Blue Jays 4, Tigers 3
Toronto's Damaso Garcia spoiled the strategy of Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson, who twice ordered intentional walks to the batter ahead of Garcia. The Blue Jays second baseman squeeze bunted home a run, then delivered a sacrifice fly.
Royals 10-3, Orioles 0-4
Frank White's grand slam homer and Hal McRae's three RBI paced the Royals' win, then ace pinch hitter Terry Crowley's sacrifice fly won the nightcap for Baltimore.

Big cuts expected soon for Cowboys

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP)—The Dallas Cowboys have trimmed their roster to 79 with the release of Dan Anders, a rookie defensive end from the University of Northern Arizona.

The cut, announced Wednesday, leaves Dallas with 19 players more than the 60-man roster they must have by Tuesday. The Cowboys are expected to make another cut this week prior to their game Saturday against the Los Angeles Rams.

Yankee relief depth sinks Rangers

NEW YORK (AP)—The home team's bullpen used to occupy a runway between the right field stands and the center field bleachers. When Yankee Stadium underwent a facelifting in the mid-1970s, the bullpen moved into a new neighborhood in front of the bleachers just left of straightaway center field, way out there in Death Valley alongside the ballpark's famous monuments.
The change of scenery hasn't diminished its effectiveness any. The tradition of Wilky Moore, Johnny Murphy, Joe Page, Ryne Duren, Luis Arroyo, Sparky Lyle, et al, coming in to extinguish opposition rallies lives on.
In Goose Gossage (2-1, 0.56 ERA, 17 saves, 36 strikeouts in 321-3 innings) and Ron Davis (2-2, 1.81, four saves, 491-3 innings, 60 strikeouts), the New York Yankees have baseball's best 1-2 bullpen punch. They may also have the best 3-4 punch.
With Gossage and Davis under the weather Wednesday, first Dave LaRoche, a Yankee since April, and then George Frazier, a Yankee for three days, came in to extend the club's stretch of remarkable relief pitching.

LaRoche, 4-0, worked 2 and two-thirds scoreless innings and lowered his ERA to a Gossage-like 0.62 while Frazier, who pitched three strong innings a night earlier, picked up his first save by throwing double play balls to Tom Poquette and Al Oliver over the last 1 and two-thirds innings as the Yankees nipped the Texas Rangers 5-4 on Graig Nettles' two-run homer off Fergie Jenkins in the sixth.
New York's relief corps has allowed only one run in its last 48 and one-third innings. Overall, the relievers are 10-4 with 23 saves and a 1.78 ERA for a team that hasn't had a complete game in 32 outings. They have inherited 95 runners and only 30 have scored.
"I was a little nervous out there and I went from feeling too strong to tired real quick," said LaRoche.

Lewis sets example for young Pokes

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — D.D. Lewis, the 13-year-veteran linebacker, romps through the grueling two-a-day workouts of the Dallas Cowboys like a young colt, determined to end his career with a third Super Bowl ring.

"I've got to make every minute of every day count because this is my last time around," said the familiar No. 50 on the Cowboys' team.

Lewis has a dream of going out on top with a Super Bowl victory in the Silverdome at Pontiac, Michigan next January.

"A lot of great players have never gone out with a Super Bowl win, including Roger Staubach," said Lewis. "It would be like calling your own shot."

Lewis said the Cowboys famed Flex Defense needs some major repair work before the team can realistically count on its sixth Super Bowl appearance.

"We have to quit giving up the big plays or eventually it will cost us," said Lewis, noting the secondary was a victim more than several times last year by the long bomb.

"I know one thing," he said. "Everybody here has their mind programmed for the season. I think we have enough hatred for Philadelphia to keep us grinding through camp."

The Cowboys lost two out of three games to the Eagles last year, including the National Conference title matchup, to their Eastern Division rival.

"We played really good defense last year but you can't call us great because the big plays killed us," he said.

"The Eagles were very good about shutting down the long gainers against them. They didn't permit many scoreboard surprises."

Lewis said if safeties Charlie Waters and Randy Hughes can overcome off-season surgery, the secondary will be much improved.

"Hughes' shoulder seems healed and Charlie's knee looks good... it doesn't swell up on him. Of course, the ultimate test will come when he gets hit."

Lewis said he has been particularly impressed in camp with the front four defends Harvey Martin and Ed Jones, and tackles Randy White and John Dutton.

"Boy, do they look good," said Lewis. "I don't know another team that has four like 'em. Our pass rush should be something this season."

Lewis said he hopes to totally enjoy this season.

"I hope I don't play like an old man," he said. "I'm gonna show the younger kids how to hustle when you get 35. I don't want this one last opportunity to slip by."

Unlikely hero emerges in TL

By the Associated Press
Pitcher Doug Sisk, who had not swung a baseball bat in three years, got the decisive hit for the Jackson Mets Wednesday night in a 12-11 Texas League victory over the Shreveport Captains.

In other Texas League action, the Tulsa Drillers edged the Arkansas Travelers, 5-4; and San Antonio split a doubleheader with El Paso. The El Paso Diablos took the first game, 8-2, but San Antonio rallied to win the second game, 3-0. Amarillo's scheduled game at Midland was postponed because of rain.

Shreveport held a 10-3 lead after seven innings, but couldn't keep its advantage as Jackson scored five runs in the eighth inning and four in the ninth.

Sisk came in with a base hit in the ninth to clinch the game for Jackson.

College football awaits sticky decision on TV

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — NBC-TV and the College Football Association are negotiating this week on a television package to rival — possibly even nullify — a four-year, $263 million deal that ABC and CBS made with the NCAA.

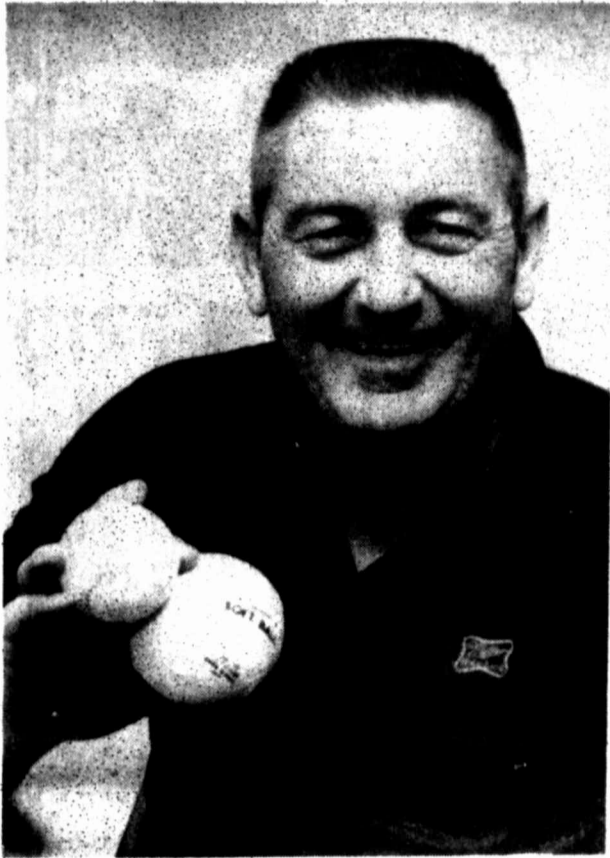

The Associated Press also has learned that NBC has offered to buy bankroll the CFA if it attempts to split away from the NCAA over the issue of television rights.

However, a pullout by the 62-member CFA, which includes all major football conferences and independents except the Pac-10 and Big Ten, appeared unlikely in the immediate future. Such a break would require an immediate, enormous financial investment and put the schools' other programs, such as basketball and track, at a big disadvantage.

Charles M. Neinas, who resigned in April 1980 as Big Eight commissioner to become the CFA's first executive director, has maintained consistently that the 5-year-old organization's goal is to work within the NCAA structure. All CFA members also are NCAA members.

Nevertheless, Neinas told the CFA board of directors in a report last month that NBC executives offered to help financially if a "divorce" from the NCAA was attempted. In return, NBC would get exclusive rights for five years to all CFA athletic events.

Many observers feel the most likely result of a CFA revolt would be the collapse of all centralized control over football television rights. The NCAA, which always has exercised control over football television, reached a four-year agreement with CBS and ABC last week for more than double the $120 million that ABC is paying for an exclusive four-year deal that expires at the end of this coming season.

KING OF HIS COURT — Eddie Feigner is a 54-year-old one-time truck driver, logger, crane operator, and office accountant whose chief claim to fame is that he is recognized as the greatest softball pitcher in the world. Feigner has over 6,000 pitches to his credit.

Softball whiz Feigner has incomparable marks

By the Associated Press
When some baseball hotshot breaks a record — as Pete Rose did this week with his 3,631st basehit in the National League — Eddie Feigner stifles a yawn and strikes out another batter with a 100mph ball thrown while blindfolded, underhand and through his legs.

"My records? Geez, I lost count of most of them," says the 54-year-old onetime truck driver, logger, crane operator and accountant who is generally recognized as the greatest softball pitcher of all time.

His counterparts in the major leagues would have to be such immortals as Cy Young and Walter Johnson or, of more recent vintage, Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale. Their records leave him cold.

"Cy Young won 511 games in his career," someone reminded Feigner. "How would you stack up against that?"

"Well, let's see," replied the crew-cut ex-Marine from Walla Walla, Wash. "The brochure here says I have won 5,721 and that's not counting 150 so far this year."

"Old John Chesbro had 48 complete games one season," an interviewer said. "My record is 257," replied Feigner.

"And Walter Johnson's 113 career shutouts?"
"Guess I've had 10 times as many."
"And lifetime strikeouts? Johnson had 3,508."
Feigner shrugged his burly shoulders and sniffed defiantly.

"The book says I have 107,520. That's not counting 1981." The book also showed 781 no-hitters, 223 perfect games in 11,750 exhibitions in 3,648 cities.

Feigner is one of sport's most amazing personalities. You don't see his name in newspaper headlines. The world isn't keeping tabs on his statistics, a la Pete Rose. He doesn't throw the joint into a tizzy when he goes into the 21 Club for lunch.

But, to the guys and gals who don those fancy uniforms and populate the sandlots in the commercial softball leagues, his name is magic. He's the hero of the working stiffs.

Feigner is in the New York metropolitan area this weekend with a barnstorming cast called "The King and His Court," playing neighborhood teams on Long Island and in Westchester County.

To make it even, Feigner uses a backup team of only three — and sometimes four — players against a nine-man lineup. His teammates are younger, some with pro baseball experience.

The softball is about twice as big as a baseball and a lot as hard. In fast-pitch ball, it must be thrown underhand. Yet Feigner's delivery has been clocked at 105 mph (compared with Nolan Ryan's 100 mph). To amuse fans, he pitches between his legs and blindfolded.

"Once I threw a ball the length of a football field and hit the uprights," he said. Baseball's million-dollar contracts arouse none in softball," he insists. "It got me good jobs and here I am still going strong at 54. In earnings, I rate in the top 20 in all sports, and I've got at least 10 more good years to go."

After half of conference on probation in 1980

Pac-10 returns to near full strength

By the Associated Press

The Pacific-10, known facetiously as the "Pac-5" last season, will be near full strength again for the 1981 college football season.

Last year, half the conference's schools — Southern Cal, UCLA, Oregon, Oregon State and Arizona State — were ruled ineligible for a Rose Bowl bid or other postseason play because of academic improprieties. This season only Arizona State remains on football probation and the Sun Devils will still be able to contend for the Pac-10 title.

Washington is the reigning conference king, but the league appears well balanced and the Run for the Roses could be a wide-open race.

The Huskies, who lost to Michigan in the 1981 Rose Bowl, were 9-2 and captured the league crown with a 6-1 record. But they face a massive rebuilding task offensively, with those gone including quarterback Tom Flick and tackle Curt Marsh.

Southern Cal, 8-2-1 and 4-2-1 last season, has tailback Marcus Allen and linebacker Chip Banks heading a fine group of returnees, and the Trojans might well be considered the team to beat. UCLA, coming off a 9-2 and 5-2 season, lost safety Kenny Easley and tailback Freeman McNeil, but appears to have the personnel to make another strong bid for the league title.

Stanford, featuring quarterback John Elway and Darrin Nelson, could break through this time after a disappointing 6-5, 3-4 campaign. Oregon, where Coach Rich Brooks' rebuilding program is progressing nicely, and Arizona State, where second-year Coach Darryl Rogers has a host of talented players returning, can't be counted out of the conference title picture.

Arizona, Washington State, California and Oregon State figure to make things tough for the others at times, but would have to improve greatly to figure heavily in the Pac-10 race.

Don James' Washington squad may be hurting offensively, but the defense appears strong again. The Huskies have seven starters, including tackle Fletcher Jones and linebacker Mark Stewart, returning from a unit that was the conference's best in scoring defense.

Sophomore Steve Pelluer appears to have the inside track on the Huskies' quarterback job, with wide receivers Paul Skansi and Aaron Williams among the few returning starters on offense. Also back is place-kicker Chuck Nelson, who led the Pac-10 in scoring last season.

At Southern Cal, tailback Allen, the nation's second-leading rusher in 1980, will spearhead the Trojans' wear-down ground attack. Banks, who led the team in tackles last season, and offensive guard Roy Foster seem the prototype big, strong linemen that have characterized Southern Cal teams. At quarterback, John Mazur seems to have a slight edge among the group bidding for the starting job.

UCLA Coach Terry Donahue has a fine defensive unit returning, including tackle Irv Eatman. Offensively, Kevn Nelson will try to fill McNeil's shoes, with tight end Tim Wrightman and split end Cormac Carney among a good group of returning receivers.

Stanford, as usual, will have a quick-strike offense, and second-year Coach Paul Wiggins, a former defensive standout in the National Football League, says he hopes to make marked improvement in the Cardinals' defense.

Elway, a junior who passed for 2,889 yards and 27 touchdowns last year, will have Andre Tyler (53 catches) as a target again. Nelson, who has gained almost 3,000 yards rushing in three seasons and also is a threat as a receiver, adds an extra dimension.

Oregon's Brooks, whose Ducks were 6-3-2 and 4-3-1 last year, predicts he'll field a "valid championship contender" featuring fullback Vince Williams, tailback Reggie Brown and center Mike Deleagato offensively.

Arizona State quarterback Mike Pagel, who threw for 2,025 yards last fall as the Sun Devils went 7-4 and 5-3, heads an impressive list of returnees.

The team's top three rushers — Willie Gittens, Robert Weathers and Gerald Riggs — also are back.

Coach Larry Smith, in his second year at the helm of the Arizona Wildcats, intends to put the ball in the air a lot, predicting his quarterbacks will throw some 45 times a game. Tom Tunnicliffe, who threw for 1,204 yards as a freshman last season, figures to do most of the passing.

Cal Coach Roger Theder's job may be on the line this season, and the Bears, 3-8 last season, will go with a new "Run and Shoot" offense installed by assistant Mouse Davis, former head coach at high-scoring Portland State. Cal will have an unproven quarterback, either Gale Gilbert or Jay Torchio.

Washington State, 4-7 and 3-4 in 1980, may have the players to improve that record this fall. Tight end Pat Beach and running back Tim Harris are among the regulars back offensively, with linebacker Lee Blakeney and safety Paul Sorenson heading the defense.

Oregon State Coach Joe Avezzano still is looking for his first victory after a 0-11 campaign. Hopes for a running game hinge on the return of running back Darryl Minor, who missed all of last season. Senior quarterback Ed Singler, who threw for 1,166 yards last year, is among the offensive returnees.

In the Pacific Coast Athletic Association, defending champion Long Beach State lost 18 starters so San Jose State, with running back Gerald Willhite among a group of fine returnees, is the favorite.

The PCAA race shapes up as close one, with the new California Bowl between the PCAA and Mid-American Conference champions on Dec. 19 in Fresno State's new 30,000-seat Stadium as an added incentive.

In addition to San Jose State and Long Beach State, Utah State and Fresno State are expected to have good shots at the league title, with Pacific and Fullerton State in rebuilding stages.

Akers says injuries key to UT title drive

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — After a near-national football championship in 1977, Texas has slipped in the football rankings, and Coach Fred Akers says the Longhorns must stay healthy to rebound.

"I'll guarantee you health is the No. 1 factor," Akers said. "The (Southwest) conference is an exciting one because the talent is distributed so evenly. That tells you that keeping players healthy is as important as anything you can name."

Five running backs and guard Joe

Shearin and tackle John Tobolka on the left side of the offensive line were sidelined with injuries for part of last year as Texas fell to 7-5.

In 1979 the loss of starting backs A.J. "Jam" Jones and Rodney Tate late in the season ruined a possible outstanding year as Texas dropped its final two games and finished 9-3.

"It's our year to stay healthy," Akers said in an interview. "I hope it (string of injuries) has run its course. The last two years we were hurt badly, but we're through with that."

Whether it is Texas' year to return to the Cotton Bowl as SWC champions depends largely on the play of Rick McIvor at quarterback.

Akers granted Donnie Little's request to switch from starting quarterback to wide receiver in spring training, and he installed McIvor, a 6-foot 4 junior with a strong throwing arm, as the No. 1 quarterback.

"Quarterback is the key for us," Akers said. "We're not proven there. It's a big question mark. You have to be honest about it. ... I don't know that I remember a team that won the championship that didn't have an established quarterback. It may have been us in '77."

Jones returns for his senior year with 2,040 yards rushing, and the line is the largest in Akers' five years as head coach at Texas. Akers describes 260-pound tackle Terry Tausch as a "bona fide" All-American, and he rates center Mike Babb — "the strongest football player we've had around here" — as another possible all-star.

Defensive leaders include tackle Kenneth Sims, 6-6 and 265, and linebackers Doug Shankle and Bruce Scholtz. "Kenneth Sims has got a shot at being the best lineman in college football," said Akers.

Akers has been described in published reports as a man under pressure to win big in 1981, but he said, "I feel the same way I've felt any other season I've coached. A coach who's worth his salt gets involved in pressure only when it comes from within himself. Good coaches don't pay any attention to outside pressures. They put enough on themselves — they want to win."

"All I can ask is that they (the Longhorns) go out there and do the best they can," said Akers. "I can't ask them to do any more. If our best doesn't get us there, someone else deserves it."

DENTON, Texas (AP) — Two transfer students have joined the North Texas State University football program, coach Bob Tyler announced Wednesday.

Mike Fisher, a former quarterback at Southern Methodist University, has transferred from Louisiana Tech as a junior and will be eligible for play during the 1982 season.

Pearson joins primary owners Mike Hargis and Jim Jarrell, and says his primary role with the Central Hockey League team will be public relations.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, AUG. 14, 1981

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day when you should avoid getting into arguments, otherwise you could lose out where it counts the most. Make plans to build a more secure future for yourself.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Study creative ideas you have and build a sound foundation for the future. Engage in favorite hobby with congenials.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Plan to have more of the good things in life by using your talents to best advantage. Sidestep a troublemaker.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Study your surroundings and then quietly go about making needed changes. A new venture can be most successful.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Come to a better understanding with associates. An invitation could lead to an interesting experience.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Engage in the more practical aspects of your living instead of spending so much time on fun and frolic. Be sensible.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A fine day to engage in some new activity that will be inspiring to you. Stop worrying about matters unrelated to you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Listen carefully to what an expert has to suggest and you find the right solution to a pending problem. Be more cheerful.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Try to understand what associates and good friends expect of you and endeavor to please them. Take it easy tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Make sure you carry through with civic duties you have assumed and get the right results. Avoid arguments.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You are highly inspired and can accomplish a great deal today. Be alert to opportunities at hand. Be logical.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Handle obligations before engaging in amusements. Become more skilled in your line of endeavor. Be courteous to others.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Come to an agreement with associates on a joint project you have in mind. Avoid temptation to argue with co-worker.

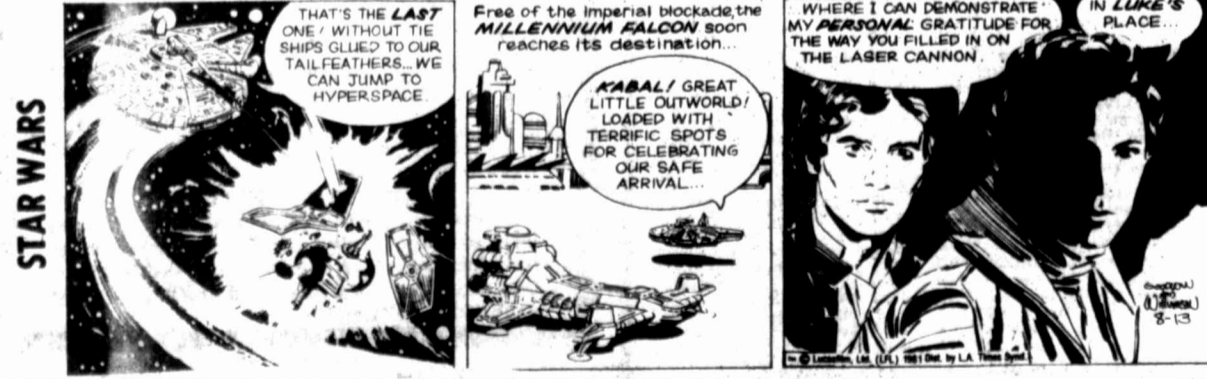

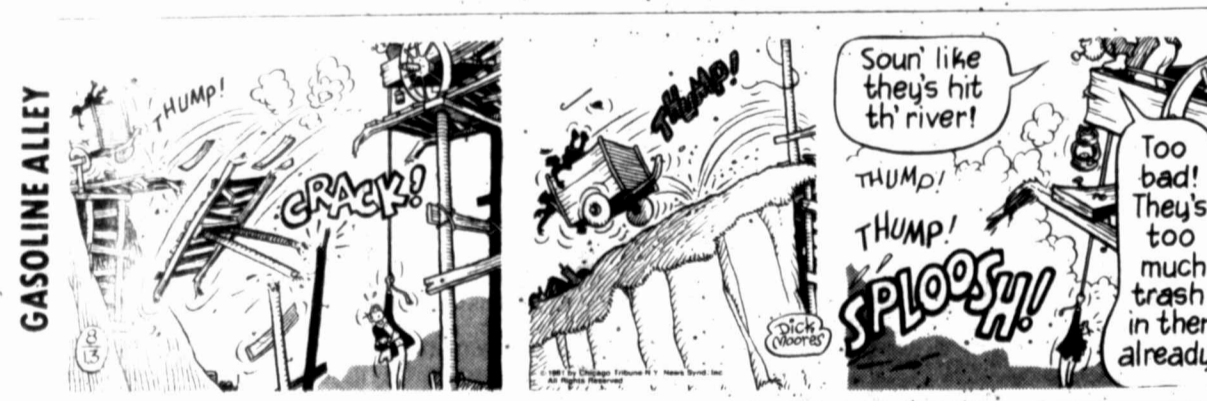

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have a practical nature but will also appreciate the importance of idealism. Make sure you provide the kind of education that will encourage your progeny to tackle large projects and bring to a workable level.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

TOP OF THE TOWN — A man identified as Ron Broyles, 27, of LaFollette, Tenn., used homemade steel brackets to scale the 27-story glass-covered United American Bank, Knoxville's tallest building, Wednesday morning. This picture was taken as the climber neared the roof, where police whisked him off to jail. The stunt was believed to have been a publicity stunt by a local furniture store.

CBS correspondent makes move to 'fast'

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS correspondent Richard Threlkeld was not a contestant in "Can You Top This?", a new game show for TV journalists in the news-entertainment business. Instead of letting the three networks alternately bid up his value, as Dan Rather and Tom Brokaw did recently, Threlkeld decided to move to ABC without fanfare and without telling CBS.

"I don't like to horsetrade. I'm not a horse," said Threlkeld, 43, who will switch networks in January after 16 years as one of CBS' most distinguished and versatile newsmen. "After I decided ABC was the best place for me to go, it would have been wrong to make a verbal agreement and take it back to CBS to see what they could do."

For the past three years, Threlkeld has brought the same clear-thinking to the week's major story, the "Cover Story," on "CBS News Sunday Morning." Some of his earlier assignments included co-anchoring the "CBS Morning News" and covering the Vietnam War and the political wars of the past few presidential campaigns.

In ABC, he saw a growing news organization feeling its oats and willing to experiment with different newsmen. ABC agreed to create the job Threlkeld outlined, sort of a roving news analyst.

"Everybody who knows me knows I have a short attention span for jobs, so the time was right," Threlkeld said. "ABC was offering me an opportunity to be an Anthony Lewis (of the New York Times) with a transistor."

Threlkeld said it certainly wasn't easy leaving CBS and its rich journalistic tradition. "CBS is the Rolls-Royce of TV news — traditional, utterly dependable and very predictable," he said. "ABC is like a Ferrari — real fast, not always predictable, but a lot of fun."

People at CBS aren't treating him as a journalistic leper. "It's been a healthy reaction. Nobody has said, 'How can you do this?'"

Threlkeld will have a reunion at ABC with former CBS staffers Hughes Rudd and Sylvia Chase. But for now, he's spending six months at CBS in an unusual lame-duck role.

"There's nothing lame about him," said E.S. "Bud" Lamoreaux, senior producer of the Sunday show. "I plan on keeping him on the air as long as he wants, and nobody from management has told me otherwise."

Charles Kuralt, anchor for CBS' morning news shows, said: "I want to keep this lovely thing going. Any piece we get out of him is all to the good. He's a marvelous writer and unexcelled at putting stories together effectively."

Selective service reminder

Boyd Johnson of the U.S. Selective Service advises that men who reach their 18th birthday are required by law to register with the selective service at any U.S. post office.

Within 30 days of his 18th birthday, a man is to fill out a registration form which asks for his name, address, phone number, social security number and birth date.

The purpose of registration, according to Johnson, is to have available on a computer the names of men born in 1960 and later, who could be contacted quickly if a national emergency arises, and Congress declares an induction.

There are only two million people in the armed services today, but should an emergency arise, said Johnson, many more would be needed. In World War II, 10 to 16 million men were called on.

Since the induction of registration, nearly six million men have registered. Failure to register is a felony, punishable by a maximum penalty of $10,000 and/or five years in prison.

ABC, Westinghouse may move into cable news

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC and Westinghouse say they joined in a venture to create a 24-hour cable television news network, similar to the format used by all-news radio stations.

A source familiar with the project confirmed Tuesday night the undertaking is between Group W Satellite Communications, a division of Westinghouse that owns television and radio stations, and ABC Video Enterprises, a division involved in cable and new communications technologies.

ABC officials would not comment on the project. Charles F. Carroll, head of public relations for Pittsburgh-based Westinghouse Electric Corp., was said to be in New York Tuesday night but was not available for comment.

ABC and Westinghouse said details of the "major new cable programming service" would be spelled out today.

The New York Times, quoting "high-level officials close to both companies," reported today the project would get under way in the spring of 1982.

Twenty-four-hour news programming for cable television has been the exclusive province of the Atlanta-based Cable News Network, which was started in May 1980 by Ted Turner.

The Times said the ABC-Westinghouse service will carry advertisements and will be given free of charge to cable systems, which are expected to provide it free to subscribers. CNN also has advertising, but it charges cable systems 15 cents a subscriber for the news service. The Times noted that if that charge is retained, it is likely to put CNN "at a serious competitive disadvantage."

In contrast to CNN, the ABC-Westinghouse news service will focus exclusively on short, continuous summaries of breaking news, the Times said. CNN runs longer reports and makes extensive use of interviews and "softer" news features.

In addition to national news, the new network will offer regional "cutaways," using a network of 24 local television stations that will provide five minutes of news from their areas each hour, the Times said.

Although the service will use pictorial footage from ABC News, it will not use reports by ABC News correspondents and will have its own independent editorial staff, the newspaper added.

Parents dubious about child-snatching law

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Eunice Munford says the police would have shown more concern if her purse had been stolen — instead of her four children.

Mrs. Munford was granted custody of the children in her divorce settlement, but she said police treated their disappearance as a "domestic squabble" because they had been snatched by their father, her ex-husband.

The American Bar Association says 100,000 children are snatched from their mothers or fathers each year by ex-spouses who refuse to abide by legal custody orders. Only 10 percent of the children are ever returned to the parent who was granted legal custody, the ABA estimates.

If an adult snatched any child not his or her own, it would be a violation of the federal kidnapping law and the FBI would help track the culprit down.

Standardizes child custody orders throughout the 50 states.

Allows the federal Parent Locator Service, originally aimed at locating parents who skip out on child support payments, to find child snatchers as well. The service is part of the Office of Child Support Enforcement, operated by the Social Security Administration.

Empowers the FBI to handle arrest warrants which charge unlawful flight to avoid prosecution in such cases.

Mrs. Munford, who lives in Austin, said the law still leaves parents mostly to their own devices to track down their children and retake custody.

"It doesn't have much teeth," she said of the law. "Even if the Parent Locator Service can assist these people, there's nothing they can do as far as enforcement."

The new law empowers the FBI to act when state felony warrants are issued, but only six states, including Texas, have felony child-snatching laws, and even in those cases, local prosecutors are often reluctant to act.

Charles Conaway, first Assistant District Attorney in San Antonio, explained that it's up to the complaining parent to find the missing child, and prove that the ex-spouse has taken custody, before the state can file felony charges.

"There's not a lot you can do if you're dealing with someone who doesn't have any roots, any close ties to anywhere," Conaway said. "It's awfully easy to take a small child and get on Greyhound and say 'bye. How are you going to find them?'"

John Warren, 29, a San Antonian who works for the state welfare department, said he paid $20,000 to have a lawyer and private detective help him gain physical custody of his 5-year-old daughter.

Warren obtained a "writ of attachment" for the arrest of his ex-wife and return of his child, but he said no law enforcement agency would help him find her.

"Everybody has a lot of sympathy for you, but nobody will enforce the law," Warren said after seeking help from police, the district attorney's office, the Dallas court that granted him custody, the sheriff's department in Corpus Christi and the FBI.

Warren won custody of his daughter last

Dec. 8, but didn't see the child again until June, when his ex-wife voluntarily surrendered her to him in front of a Dallas church.

"She told me she gave up, that she couldn't run any more, that she didn't have any money," Warren said.

Mrs. Munford said she hired a lawyer in California and the police went along in an unofficial capacity when she removed her four children from school and her ex-husband's home a year after she gained custody.

"It's just a helpless situation," she said. "I couldn't believe something like this could happen and the law wouldn't help me and protect me. The children are the real victims of this. The kids love their father and their mother. They don't want to be pulled between one and the other."

Craig Hatchett, head of the Parent Locator Service in Austin, said it's difficult for his office to enforce the new federal law.

Hatchett said people who use the service to locate their children will be charged a fee to cover the cost of manpower and time. He said he's not sure how far the state can go to validate custody orders, and noted that in some cases both parents have been awarded custody — in different states.

"The Parent Locator Service is not worth very much, anyway," Warren said. "It's very unsuccessful in finding even fathers who don't pay child support."

"COLD SHOULDERS" — That is the name artist Ole Callson gave this exhibit which appeared at the Cologne Gallery until July 20. Plaster bodies are reduced to headless shells and seem to move and destmty the individual works of art.

But most officials agree that law enforcement agencies treat child snatchings as family quarrels, reluctant to spend time, resources and taxpayers' money to help distraught parents track down and seize custody of their children.

But as one of his last acts in office, former president Jimmy Carter signed a child-snatching law that, for the first time, put the federal government on record as frowning on the phenomenon of child snatching.

The law, which took effect July 1, does three things:

Mrs. Munford was luckier than most. Using mostly her own resources, she found her children in California and regained custody. She had searched for a year.

"I found in my own experience that it would have been much easier (to get help from the police) if my ex-husband had taken my car — much easier," she said.

Mrs. Munford, who works for the state Department of Human Resources, is Texas coordinator for Children's Rights Inc., a Washington, D.C.-based organization made up of parents whose children were snatched.

PINOCCHIO'S PEN PAL — Eight-year-old Fransie Geringer, left, who has a rare premature-aging disease, told recently how he wanted to visit Disneyland to meet Pinocchio — his favorite storybook character — or at least to receive a letter from the fairy tale puppet. After an Associated Press article about the boy appeared, officials at the Characters Department at Disneyland wrote a letter from "Pinocchio" to Fransie, asking to be pen pals. He's shown at this home in Orkney, South Africa, with his father, Herman, 37, and brother, Paul, right 10.

Pinocchio writes to South African boy with premature-aging disease

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Pinocchio, the ex-puppet who became a real boy in the Disney cartoon fairy tale, is coming to life again for a South African lad who has a rare premature-aging disease that may prove fatal by age 16.

Officials at the Characters Department at Disneyland have written a letter from "Pinocchio" to 8-year-old Fransie Geringer of Orkney, South Africa, in which the character asks Fransie to be his pen pal.

Pinocchio got Fransie's address from an Associated Press article that told about the boy's disease — progeria, or premature aging — and how Fransie wanted to come to Disneyland to meet the boy-

Because Fransie's father, Herman Geringer, could not afford the trip, the boy said he hoped for the next-best thing, a letter from Pinocchio.

The letter, mailed Tuesday, said: "Dear Fransie, The Blue Fairy told me that you are one of my biggest fans. She also said that you are a real boy like me. Jiminy Cricket (he is my official conscience) sends his love and wants me to make sure that you stay out of trouble. It must be fun to live in South Africa. I wish I could visit there someday. Maybe we could be pen pals."

"I am sending some pictures of me and some of my friends. Your pen pal, Pinocchio."

The letter should take at least a week to reach Fransie, who lives in a small gold-mining town about 100 miles southwest of Johannesburg with his parents and 10-year-old brother.

Bald and emaciated, with only 40 pounds on his 3-foot-8-inch frame, Fransie has old-looking but strong hands. He wears rubber-soled slippers that provide soft padding for his bent toes.

He has big brown eyes, bulging over a spindly nose and once asked his mother, Magda, "Why do I look so ugly?"

"What can I say?" she said. "I say, 'No, you're not ugly. You're a very pretty boy.'"

His doctor, Dr. Martinus van Zyl, says the child will live to be 16 or 17.

"Victims of this disease die of coronary heart disease," he said. "If he gets a coronary, he'll die, just like that."

When Fransie was a year old, his hair began to fall out and he failed to develop fatty tissue. The visits to specialists began.

"My aim is to make him happy and let him enjoy his life for as long as he's here for us," said his father. "That's all I care about."

The Pinocchio letter was read to The Associated Press by a worker in Disneyland's Characters Department who asked to remain anonymous.

California town draws thousands to watch 'frozen' summer festival

LAGUNA BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Thousands of people are flocking to an outdoor stage to watch life imitate art, as residents of Laguna Beach strike elaborate poses in still-life recreations of the world's most famous artworks.

It's something like a play and something like a museum. But an element of suspense is part of the appeal as the audience watches for the least flinch by a player.

The Laguna Beach Pageant of the Masters, where actors duplicate paintings and sculptures with their poses, faces, costumes and backdrops for 90 seconds, is said to be the only show of its kind in the world.

The coiffed and costumed figures who take part in the show for eight weeks in the summer are volunteers from Laguna Beach. They are people like Charles Thompson, a 37-year-old designer of custom hairpieces, who portrays Jesus in a tableau of Da Vinci's "The Last Supper." The scene closes the pageant each night to the sound of "oohs" and "aahs" from the crowd of 2,600 in the open-air Irvine Bowl.

"It began 12 years ago," said Thompson, who plays Jesus for four of the show's eight weeks. "There was an ad in the paper saying they had an opening for Jesus. I called and auditioned, and I've been doing it ever since."

The show is always a sellout, with ticket grabbed a year ahead by residents and visitors, including many from abroad. Hollywood stars often make the trek from Los Angeles, 60 miles to the north.

"Jane Withers never misses the show. Charlton Heston was here last week, and so was Barry Manilow," said Sally Reeves, public relations director for the pageant and its parent event, the Laguna Beach Art Festival. The pageant runs through Aug. 30 this year.

Each year, the show raises $200,000 for Laguna Beach and thousands more for scholarships and grants to artists and performers.

Some say much of the fascination with the pageant comes from watching for a break in the pose — the statue that sneezes, the baby who squeals, the child who falls asleep in his pose.

Once, Ms. Reeves said, a pigeon landed on the painted breast of a woman frozen in the pose of a statue.

Yoko mourned Lennon's death with chocolates

LONDON (AP) — John Lennon's widow, Yoko Ono, said in a British newspaper interview published today that for three months after the ex-Beatle's death, she stayed in bed and ate only chocolate cake and mushrooms.

In a copyright interview by the Daily Mirror, the ex-Beatle's widow was quoted as saying she had no hatred for Lennon's confessed murderer, Mark Chapman, who awaits sentencing for the assassination in New York last Dec. 8.

"It's still hard for me to take his death in," Yoko was quoted. "For three months afterwards I could eat only chocolate cake and mushrooms. What was there to stay healthy for anyway?"

"I spent nearly all of those three months in bed."

Interviewer Ray Coleman quoted Yoko, 48, as saying: "I don't particularly hate the person who pulled the trigger. I have strong emotions of sorrow and hate and resentment — but where do you put them? It's not like you can throw it at this poor thing who doesn't know what he is doing."

In the two months after Lennon's death, said Yoko, who was interviewed at the Dakota apartment building outside which her husband was shot, she received 200,000 letters of sympathy.

"For 10 years I was the devil. Now suddenly I'm an angel. Did the world have to lose John for people to change their opinion of me? It's unreal. It if brought John back, I'd rather remain hated," she was quoted as saying.

Council excited about O.I.L. plan

By BILL ELDER
Staff Writer

The city council voted Tuesday to continue negotiating with O.I.L. on the company's expansion plans — plans which could boost the city's population by nearly 10 percent within three years.

O.I.L. has asked the city for permission to expand its facilities at the city Industrial Park and expects to hire, if given the go-ahead, 2,000 employees by 1984.

O.I.L.'s proposal calls for a monthly lease payment of $36,000 and as City Manager Don Davis told the council last night, the proposal looks like a sound one from the city's standpoint.

It's a complicated proposal — to take over all the acreage it seeks, O.I.L. would force the relocation of 77 airport hangars as well as some 14 tenants of the Industrial Park.

But, as Davis told the council, it appears that the city can relocate its airport facilities to the western side of the runways, finance the relocation with airport revenue bonds, pay off its bond service and continue to earn as much rent from O.I.L. as it does from the existing tenants in the proposed expansion area.

"Our cash flow will not be jeopardized," Davis reported to the council.

If the city each month sets aside $17,000 of the $36,000 to meet its bond service (assuming it sells $1.5 million in bonds — enough to cover the projected cost of the first phase of airport relocation — at something like 12 percent interest), the city will be left with a net of $19,000, which is the amount the city takes in now from the tenants in the expansion area, Davis said.

The total cost of relocating 75 T-hangars, two fixed-base-operator hangars and an administrative building has been estimated by the Industrial Park Steering Committee as being about $2.5 million. In addition to the bond issue, another source of potential funding the city is exploring — but not counting on, Davis stressed in an interview with The Herald — is a grant from the federal government. No figures have been released and indications are that a federal grant will be a slim factor in the overall deal.

The reason is the haste with which O.I.L. and, to a lesser extent, the city hopes to strike the deal. O.I.L. Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Chris Christopher told the Industrial Park Steering Committee last week his company hopes to launch the first phase of its new production schedule by November (O.I.L. manufactures oilfield equipment and intends to build a "fairly large assembly building" under its new lease, according to Christopher). The federal government, however, may require more time in reviewing and allocating any funds that are applied for and this may, city officials have noted, take too long to fit O.I.L.'s schedule.

As Assistant City Manager Paul Feazelle told the committee: "Our experience with federal grants is that if you turn a spade full of dirt before everything is approved, the grant's out the window."

The feds play another role in the expansion. The Federal Aviation Administration must sanction any changes in airport operations that are proposed (though runway operations would not be significantly altered under the plan). Davis told the council the FAA has been apprised of plans for the airport relocation and the agency reportedly sees merit in the plans.

David, Park Manager Hal Boyd and Mayor Clyde Angel are scheduled to travel to Albuquerque, N.M., Friday to provide FAA officials with details on the proposal.

In the meantime, with the council's Tuesday approval, the city will fund Don Cress & Associates with $3,600 to proceed with drafting an airport master plan that includes the relocation of airport facilities from the east to the west side of the runways.

While the FAA reportedly sees merit in the rough version of the plan, it's conceivable that the agency could balk at the plan, should it decide interim airport operations would be jeopardized by the construction of new buildings on both sides of the runways.

Another hitch in the plan involves utility connections to the western side of the airport, which the city needs to explore and Cress would be authorized to analyze in the airport master plan.

For O.I.L., the big hitch involves obtaining the leases of some 14 private industry tenants, who would, in the words of one city official, "need to be taken care of."

"It's a sensitive area," admits Mark Brady, Christopher's administrative assistant. "We want to try to negotiate something that's fair and equitable to everyone. We're trying to do this in the spirit of cooperation, and we realize they have a perfect right to say 'no.'"

Councilman are aware of how sensitive the issue is as well.

"We've got some people up on that land who are in business, who are going to be out of business when O.I.L. comes in," observed Councilman Jack Y. Smith at last night's meeting.

Councilman Russ McEwen quizzed Hal Boyd on the possibility of keeping the tenants in another area of the Industrial Park.

"It's possible," the park manager said. "We'll have to see what their needs are."

The 14 tenants are located along the western edge of the park between hangar 75 on the south and hangar 19 on the north. If O.I.L. assumes their leases, the company would pay 7.5 cents per square foot — nearly twice what the city earns now — for the acreage.

Understandably, city officials are both cautious and excited by O.I.L.'s proposal.

"The city's tax rolls grew by $15 million this year, primarily because of O.I.L. and Western Container," City Manager Davis told the Steering Committee Monday, outlining the importance of O.I.L. to Big Spring's economy.

Officer fired after shooting

PLANO, Texas (AP) — An officer who shot and killed a 19-year-old man after a chase in May has been fired from the Plano Police Department after his recounting of the shooting was contradicted by a fellow officer.

Attorneys for Robert Crable, 29, said Tuesday they would appeal the unanimous decision of the city's three-member Civil Service Commission.

The commission listened to almost seven hours of testimony Tuesday and watched a videotaped reenactment of the chase that led to Rocky Shelton's death.

Delegates are elected to national convention

Virginia Younger and Maxie Irland were elected delegates to the National Convention of World War I Veterans and its auxiliaries as Barracks No. 1474 met Saturday with its auxiliary.

The convention will be held Sept. 5-10 at Minneapolis, Minn. Marion Irland will attend as senior vice commander of the Department of Texas.

Bernice Micallef, auxiliary president, presided over the business meeting at Kentwood Older Adult Center. Valeria Blanton, a new member, was given the oath of obligation.

Virginia Younger, Americanism chairman, reported that 35 letters were written by members to Charles W. Stenholm and

Sam B. Hall Jr., congressmen, asking their support of House Bill 1918. This bill, now in committee, will allow pensions for WWI veterans and their widows. It was reported that Winifred Wood, Sarah Findley and Ruby Simpson served cake and coffee at the Veterans Administration Hospital. The group will meet next Sept. 12 at 10:30 a.m. in the Kentwood Center.

Gasohol deadline nearing

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The House has one day — today — to work on a bill that gasohol supporters say is vital to creating a Texas market for the alcohol-gasoline fuel.

Senators on Monday approved on voice vote a bill that would exempt gasohol distributors from paying the five-cent per gallon state motor fuels tax through 1986. The measure was sent to the House for action today, the final day of the special legislative session.

Sen. Bill Sarpalus' bill also would give gasohol a tax break through 1991. After 1986, the exemption would drop by a penny a gallon, until it ended in 1992.

Gasohol prices at the pump would not necessarily be reduced by the amount of the exemption, but Sarpalus said there are "very strong chances" that the saving would be passed to consumers.

Reagan turns economy's fate over to consumers

NEW YORK (AP) — Having won tax and spending victories that are said by some to be the most fundamental economic changes since the 1930s, the Reagan forces are now turning much of the battle over to you. Henceforth, you are an agent of change. Hereafter, you are to be the catalyst the supply-siders say will shore up production, eliminate budget deficits, and lower prices, interest rates and unemployment. Arthur Laffer, economist and a member of the President's economic policy advisory board, explained the plan at a symposium of supply-siders arranged recently by Morgan Guaranty Trust Company. "Supply-side economics is nothing more than classical economics in modern dress," said the professor. "It basically looks to incentive. People alter their behavior when incentives change." Laffer, who probably has done more than anyone to popularize the notion that you get out of the economy nothing more than you are willing and able to feed it, continued with this explanation: "If you make an activity more attractive, people will engage in more of that activity."

NSA SCHOLARSHIP AWARDED — Terri Jo Cook, of Coahoma, received a $100 National Secretaries Association Scholarship from the Howard County Junior College District. Fall semester classes for HCJCD will begin Monday, Aug. 24. Registration for the fall semester will be Thursday-Friday, Aug. 20-21 in the Anthony Hunt Library.

Coahoma grad award $100 NSA scholarship

Terri Jo Cook, of Coahoma, has been awarded a $100 National Secretaries Association scholarship for the 1981-82 school year at the Howard County Junior College District, announced Doris Huihregtse, Director of the Mid-Management program at Howard College.

Miss Cook, a 1981 graduate of Coahoma High School, will be a secretarial science major and plans a career in the secretarial-computer fields, said Huihregtse.

Her high school activities included serving on the student council, president of the Office Education Association, co-editor of the yearbook, and named to Who's Who Among American High School Students. She also served in the band and was a twirler.

Miss Cook is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Cook, Route 1, Big Spring.

Local radio executives favor narrow-band vote

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

Local radio station executives have voiced their opinion on the recent Federal Communication Commission vote to reverse a 1979 Carter-era policy that would have narrowed the band on AM radio. The policy was introduced in hopes of allowing more stations to become active on the standard AM band.

The present system, which is spaced in increments of 10 kilohertz, would have been scrapped in favor of nine kilohertz spacing. The move could have possibly opened up spots for 12 new stations across the AM dial.

Dave Wrinkle, sales manager at KBST, said, "I'm in favor of the vote. There would be no benefits from the cost of changing over our systems and even new stations moving in would have a hard time competing."

Wrinkle believes the AM radio market in Big Spring is saturated. He said normally a town should have one radio station for every ten-thousand people, and that Big Spring was just about right for its size.

Dick Fields, owner and president of station KBYG, said, "I think the vote to repeal a narrower band will benefit the consumer. He won't have to buy new radios or convert over to the 9 kilohertz system. Also it's highly debatable whether any new stations could have competed in the Big Spring market."

Station manager Gary Bradbury of KHEM believes the changes and disruption in radio station broadcasts would be detrimental to consumers as well as the stations.

"The regular radio people have now would be useless ... they would have to buy a separate unit just to pick up the signal. The new narrower band would be creating a whole new frequency."

Bradbury said the new band would probably cut power of existing stations which would limit coverage. He was in favor of the new FCC ruling and is glad things are staying the same.

Because of the FCC eradication of policy for narrower band AM radio, local radio station can go on operating as they have in the past, and without fear of having to revamp their systems.

Ministers seek police help in church thefts

DALLAS (AP) — Almost 200 churches here have been burglarized since May 1, so Dallas ministers and Dallas police have teamed up to do something about it.

But crime prevention officials from the Dallas Police Department say the turnout at an informational meeting Tuesday wasn't quite what they had hoped, mainly because many of the ministers say a blanket of fear and anxiety has covered the community.

Sweetwater attorney takes office in rural electric group

Charles R. Griggs of Sweetwater has been elected chairman of the Attorneys Section of the Association of Texas Electric Cooperatives. The action came during the association's 41st annual meeting Aug. 3-5 in Austin. Some 600 rural electric leaders and ladies from throughout the state registered for the annual meeting.

Griggs, a native of Stamford, was admitted to the State Bar of Texas in 1941 after earning a bachelor of laws degree at the University of Texas at Austin. He is also a member of the American College of Trial Lawyers. He served in the U.S. Army 1941-1946 and was separated as a lieutenant colonel. His rural electric connection is as legal counsel for Lone Wolf Electric Cooperative, Colorado City, which dates back to 1965.

Cosden earns two awards from CMA

WASHINGTON — The Chemical Manufacturers Association has awarded certificates of achievement to Big Spring's Cosden Oil and Chemical Co. The awards, part of 565 made by the association were given to Cosden's refinery and pipeline department. The certificates acknowledge safe completion of 1980 operations.

Certificates of achievement are awarded by CMA to chemical manufacturing facilities which have completed the calendar year without a death or injury involving days away from work. Certificates of honor are awarded for completing the year without a death or injury involving days away from work or days of restricted activity.

For 1980, 565 certificates were awarded by CAM to chemical operations in the United States and Canada — 151 certificates of achievement, 414 certificates of honor.

Established in 1950 and administered by CMA's Occupational Safety and Health Committee, this program is one part of the chemical industry's efforts to insure the safety of the people working in the manufacture of industrial chemicals.

Mitchell County commissioners increase budget by $177,059

COLORADO CITY (SC) — Mitchell County commissioners adopted their 1982 budget at Monday's meeting with expenditures set at $1,657,360 for 1982, up $177,059 from last year.

The budget carries a deficit in the amount of $132,456, Judge Bill Carter explained. He said that taxes paid in October, November and December will be placed in interest-bearing accounts with the expectation that the interest received will be enough to offset the deficit.

"We received most of our money in those three months," he said. "But it has to last us for a whole year, so when the money comes in, we have a surplus."

Local auditor Joe Morren presented the audit report for the past year, stating that "The county is in good financial condition."

Sheriff Wendell Bryant recommended office deputy Jean Lewis for promotion to office deputy, second grade. The promotion will mean a 10 percent raise for Mrs. Lewis, up from $661 monthly.

More rains bless

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

The Big Spring area was again blessed with showers Tuesday afternoon. The gentle rain started yesterday at approximately 5 p.m. and continued on through the evening. The streets were washed clean and neighborhood lawns perked up as the rain fell. Area residents were happy about the wet stuff.

Gaylord confident nearing 300

When you're 42 years old and closing in on baseball history, two months must seem like an eternity.

Unlike Pete Rose, who got the one hit he needed to break the all-time National League hit record on the first day after the 50-day players' strike, Gaylord Perry still needs five more victories to reach the milestone he dearly wants — 300 career pitching victories.

"I think I have a pretty good shot at 300 wins," the Atlanta Braves right-hander said after collecting his 295th triumph Tuesday night. "If I pitch the way I pitched tonight, I'm going to be tough to beat."

Actually, his 5-1 decision over the San Diego Padres must have been one of the easiest victories of his career.

He had to go only the required five innings, allowing five hits and one run before leaving the game with a 4-1 lead.

In other NL games, the New York Mets beat the Chicago Cubs 4-2, Pittsburgh rallied to beat Montreal 6-3, Philadelphia outlasted St. Louis 6-5 in 10 innings, Cincinnati tripped Los Angeles 7-6 and San Francisco trimmed Houston 3-2.

Crowds throughout the league were most average, although Philadelphia and San Diego had much smaller turnouts than they had Monday for the reopening of the major league baseball season. The Padres drew only 5,360 after Monday night's game in which all seats were free and a record 52,608 showed up. Philadelphia, attracted by Rose's attempt to break Stan Musial's record, had 60,000 Monday night and a more nearly normal 24,549 Tuesday night.

The Braves got a run in the first on Bob Horner's RBI single and took a 3-0 lead in the next inning on a two-run triple by rookie left-fielder Rufino Linares.

Perry, 6-4, coasted through the first four innings before being touched for a run in the fifth on pinch-hitter Broderick Perkins' run-scoring single.

Perry, who won Cy Young awards in 1978 with the Padres and in 1972 with Cleveland, said he stayed in shape during the strike by working hard on his peanut farm in South Carolina, "playing some catch and just having fun."

Perry said he figures to get 10 more starts before this season ends.

Mets 4, Cubs 2
New York won its second in a row over Chicago as Hubie Brooks knocked in a run in both the eighth and ninth innings and Doug Flynn singled home the tiebreaking tally.

Trailing 2-1 going into the eighth, the Mets scored two runs on Brooks' sacrifice fly and a single by Flynn. Brooks added a double in the ninth to knock in an insurance run.

Blackwell gains 25-year award

Stanley Blackwell, Vocational Agriculture teacher, Coahoma Independent School District, recently received the 25-year Tenure Award of the Vocational Agriculture Teachers Association from the organization's president, Jay Lee Marek, of Mason.

The award was presented at the annual awards program in recognition of the dedicated service rendered to vocational agriculture.

Public hearing on tax hike set

By BILL ELDER
Staff Writer

The Big Spring City Council Tuesday voted to schedule a public hearing on a proposed property tax rate increase while it suspended a rate increase put before it by the Energas Co.

Council members voted to place the tax rate hike on the agenda of the next meeting—Aug. 25.

The city Finance Department has recommended a 12.5 percent increase in order to retire bond principal and interest on bonds recently sold by the city and approved by voters last December. The bonds will finance the street improvements part of the city's Capital Improvements Plan.

The city is required by law to hold a public hearing any time it raises the tax rate more than three percent above the $1.03 per $100 valuation. The city intends to raise the rate to $1.35 per $100, which would be 15 cents above the current rate.

The city must also by law publish a quarter-page newspaper advertisement explaining the increase and notifying the public of the hearing.

Energas' proposed rate increase for domestic and commercial customers was put on hold for four months while Big Spring studies the proposed increase along with the 62 other West Texas cities affected by the increase.

Energas spokesman Daryl Pittman told the council the utility was taking in $22 million less than the cost of providing its service to 180,000 West Texas customers. The general rate increase Energas seeks, he explained, would cover $18.4 million of the deficit.

In a surprise move, Pittman recommended that the council do just what Assistant City Manager Paul Feazelle recommended it do: suspend the increase for 120 days and study it further. And that's exactly what the council did, while authorizing City Manager Don Davis to hire a consultant for the purpose of analyzing the rate increase request.

In other action, the council:

• Approved a temporary permit for Turner Properties to land a helicopter at owner Gary Turner's home at 600 Avondale. Council members were advised by Building Inspector Dewey Byers that zoning laws prohibited the helicopter from landing on Avondale, although it would be permissible to land the helicopter at State National Bank, on Main, which Turner Properties also requested (the site is near the Turner offices).

Turner Properties General Manager Roger Brown told the council the helicopter would be used for trips to Midland and probably wouldn't result in more than four landings a month. He said the bank approved the landing. Council members wondered whether Turner's neighbors approved of a helicopter landing in their neighborhood.

City Manager Davis suggested issuing a temporary permit and evaluating the setup after a trial period. Jack Y. Smith moved that the company be issued a permit until Jan. 1, 1981, and the rest of the council went along with him.

• Denied Norbert Zimmerman's request for garbage service at his facility for the mentally retarded located outside the city limit at 1315 Baylor.

"I would like to offer Mr. Zimmerman the opportunity to voluntarily annex his property to the city and then we'll furnish" garbage collection service to the facility, said Councilman Larry Miller, with his colleagues indicating their approval of the idea.

• Reviewed the city's 1981-82 proposed revenue sharing budget. No action was needed and there wasn't any taken, but councilmen were apprised by Finance Director Tom Ferguson that a public hearing on the proposed budget was scheduled to be held in September.

• Approved the co-signing, with the county, of the annual contract with Shaffer Ambulance Service.

C-City tennis courts

COLORADO CITY (SC) — The Colorado City School Board met Monday night and inspected and approved the four new tennis courts at Colorado High School with five minor exceptions, those to be completed in the future.

The courts cost $115,000, according to Superintendent of Schools Charlie Euston and will be open to the public.

"During the day," he said, "Students have first priority."

The courts are lighted and lights may be turned on by anybody but are set to turn themselves off at 11 p.m. Actually, they will turn themselves off every hour but cannot be reset after 11 p.m.

The board voted to allow Chris Hubbard to film for live broadcast Colorado City football games and associated activities. The games will be broadcast over Channel 6.

The board will hold a warehouse sale in September or October of items surplus to the uses of the school district. The date will be set later.

New teachers employed were Miss Teresa Lemons, Mrs. Leslie Jones, and Mrs. Geneva Young.

The board nominated Dr. Billy Bruce Bridgford for the Mitchell County Appraisal Board. Each of seven taxing agencies in the county will nominate a member to fill a vacancy that exists on the board and the board will elect one of them.

Impact of cuts to be outlined

The impact of federal budget cuts on social services in Texas will be outlined by the Texas Department of Human Resources (DHR) in a public hearing in Austin Monday.

The 9 a.m. meeting in the Joe C. Thompson Center at 2405 Red River in Austin will include a presentation by DHR executives on the impact of the reductions and options for dealing with it. Public comment will follow.

Congress, through the Budget Reconciliation Act, last week established the block grant of federal funds Texas will receive to provide Title XX social services for fiscal year 1982, which begins October 1. The block grant represents a significant reduction in federal funds.
