New graduates offered free year at MC

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The Bright Side

A $600,000 graduation gift was offered today to 1986 graduates of Midland County's public high schools — a free year at Midland College to everyone who wants it.

The Abell-Hanger Foundation of Midland announced it will pick up the tab for all of this year's graduates of Midland High School, Lee High School and Greenwood High School who choose to attend the community college this fall.

"This is a marvelous gift to the community in a time of economic hardship for many associated with, or affected by, the slowdown in the petroleum industry during the past year," Midland College president Dr. Jess H. Parrish said.

The Foundation, during a news conference today in the college administration building, offered to pay for tuition, fees and books up to $325 per semester and will continue the scholarships into the second semester, dependent on satisfactory academic progress.

Parrish said the award is unprecedented to a community college and could well be the largest grant of its kind, in terms of persons affected, among all the nation's colleges and universities.

"So much of the news about Midland and the Permian Basin has been unfavorable and the Foundation realized that many Midlanders wouldn't be in a position to pay college costs for this year's graduates," he said.

Nearly 900 graduates are eligible for the grant, but Parrish said he expects about 450 students will take advantage of the opportunity.

"As our Board and administration have wrestled with a budget reduction for the 1986-87 year, we've been most concerned with an early increase in applications for scholarships and financial aid," said William "Hoyle" McCright, president of the Midland College Board of Trustees.

"Midland College has been fortunate in having an excellent scholarship fund endowment, but the economic downturn has caused an increase in applications for financial aid and scholarships and we were faced with having to reduce some awards in order to spread the funds further," he said.

McCright said the announcement is "just tremendous, since it both aids a large number of incoming freshmen and also frees up our existing financial aid funds to assist others."

Midland Independent School District Superintendent Dr. Joseph P. Baressi said the gift is a "great opportunity for a lot of students" and hopes "all parents will use this as a stimuli to encourage their child to try college for at least one semester."

The college historically has provided scholarships to seniors from the Permian Basin who graduate in the top five percent of their class. About 30 percent of Midland College students receive some type of financial aid.

"This is simply the latest in a long list of contributions which the Abell-Hanger Foundation has made to Midland College," Parrish said.

Brooks opposes Gramm's 'cure' for deficit legislation

By PEGGY ROBERSON and STEPHANIE SLEWKA
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Two powerful Texans Monday staked out positions for an expected shoot out on how to re-make the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit reduction law after the U.S. Supreme Court Monday by 7-2 declared it to be unconstitutional.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, architect of the measure aimed at reducing the federal deficit to zero in five years, said in Seattle he would immediately introduce Gramm-Rudman-Hollings II to cure the "separation of powers" problem cited by the Supreme Court as grounds for finding a key provision of the new law unconstitutional.

When Congress approved the deficit cutting measure last year, it assigned an important role to the comptroller general, in conjunction with the Office of Management and Budget (OMB), in triggering across-the-board cuts from appropriated funds to meet yearly deficit reduction targets. The court said that because Congress — the legislative branch — is empowered to remove the comptroller general from office, it would violate the "separation of powers" doctrine for him to serve an executive branch function.

Gramm said his new legislation simply would strike the provision in the Budget and Accounting Act of 1921 that allows Congress to remove the Comptroller.

Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Beaumont, chairman of the House Government Operations Committee, ranking Democrat on the Judiciary Committee and dean of the Texas House delegation, said he is "absolutely opposed" to changing the manner in which the comptroller general can be removed from office.

"To change the delicately balanced appointment-and-removal procedure simply to make the Gramm-Rudman trigger mechanism constitutional would be the worst possible solution," Brooks said.

Adrian DeLeon, 16 months, finds comfort from his mother Beth's constant support during his recovery from a choking accident that left 90 percent of his brain damaged.

Choking accident necessitates drastic changes for DeLeons

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

Two and one-half months and $55,000 in medical bills ago, little Adrian DeLeon, then nearly 14 months old, sat down to eat lunch.

But the lunch nearly was fatal. Adrian, once a playful and happy child, is now blind and 90 percent brain damaged.

"I know that it's not God's doing — it's Satan's doing," said the boy's mother, Beth DeLeon, of 307 E. Golf Course Road.

The trouble began when Adrian was eating lunch, and some food went down his windpipe and into his lung. Adrian began choking.

"I rushed him across the street to the fire station because I knew there would be paramedics there," his mother, recalls.

"By the time we got to the emergency room at Midland Memorial Hospital, he was clinically dead.

"No heart beat, no pulse, no nothing. They gave him that shock treatment on his chest and put him on a respirator and he was brought back to life," Ms. DeLeon says.

The time his brain wasn't receiving oxygen, however, was long enough to damage 90 percent of it, his mother says.

As a result, Adrian is blind and has had to have a gastronomy, or surgery to implant a feeding tube into his stomach.

A typical day in the DeLeon family begins with her answering Adrian's cries for food anywhere from 3 to 5 a.m.

Feeding is a process which includes inserting a large syringe filled with Isocal formula into Adrian's "g-tube."

Afterwards, she then must "suction" him, the first of five times during the day, which means inserting a mechanical suction cup apparatus into his throat to collect the mucus gathered through the night.

Waldheim takes office

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Kurt Waldheim, who is accused of hiding a Nazi past, today took office as president of Austria and condemned anti-Semitism by declaring "Never Again" to the persecution of Jews.

"The 'Never Again' sworn atop the rubble of the Second World War by Austrians referred then and refers today too not only to the horrors of the Holocaust but also to the frightening frame of mind that caused it: anti-Semitism," Waldheim said in his inaugural speech to Parliament after being sworn in.

"It must, therefore, be our intention that is renewed every day, to consider and treat each of our fellow citizens as brother and sister — regardless of which race, which religion and which conviction he holds," he said.

Waldheim, 67, who succeeds Rudolf Kirchschlaeger in the mainly ceremonial office of president, won the six-year term in a June 8 election after a bitter campaign. His opponents contend the former U.N. secretary-general was involved in war crimes as a German army officer in the Balkans, that he knew of deportations of Jews to death camps and that he lied about it all for 40 years.

Waldheim has acknowledged serving in German Army Group E, which took part in reprisals against civilians, but has denied any personal wrongdoing.

At the Hofburg, the site of the presidential offices 300 yards from Parliament, three Americans and three Austrians held up a sign saying "No to the war criminal president."

Adm. Hyman Rickover dies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Adm. Hyman G. Rickover, the salty engineer who refused to go by the book and goaded the Navy into the nuclear era, died today. He was 86.

Pentagon sources said he died at his suburban Washington home of apparent natural causes.

Rickover had been in poor health since suffering a stroke in July 1985.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, said Rickover died this morning at his home in Arlington, Va. The sources declined to immediately provide any additional details, beyond saying the Navy had been notified of Rickover's death by his wife.

In a Navy career that spanned six decades, Rickover, a Russian emigre, became one of the pre-eminent military leaders of his time despite a style that enraged the Pentagon brass and the defense industry. Congress revered him, and twice awarded him its gold medal for exceptional public service. No other citizen except Zachary Taylor had been honored more than once.

Quake measuring 6.0 shakes Southern California

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — The strongest earthquake to hit Southern California in 15 years shook a wide region early today, triggering rockslides, shattering windows and knocking out power to 100,000 customers, but there were no immediate reports of injuries or heavy damage.

The 2:21 a.m. PDT earthquake measured 6.0 on the Richter scale and was centered 12 miles northwest of Palm Springs, said Dennis Meredith of the California Institute of Technology. Palm Springs is 110 miles east of downtown Los Angeles.

"It's a big one," Meredith said.

In Washington, D.C., U.S. Geological Survey spokesman Don Finley said the epicenter of the quake was about 40 miles east of San Bernardino in mountains near the edge of the Mojave Desert.

"Early reports said there was some damage in the epicentral area," he said.

The quake was the strongest to hit Southern California since Feb. 9, 1971, when a quake measuring 6.5 on the Richter scale collapsed a Sylmar hospital, killing three people. The quake caused $550 million damage in the Los Angeles area.

A quake measuring 6 on the open-ended scale is capable of causing severe damage. Today's quake was felt from San Diego, 100 miles south of downtown Los Angeles, to the San Fernando Valley, 120 miles north. Radio stations in Lake Havasu, Ariz., and Las Vegas, Nev., reported the quake felt there as well.

"A lot of people were just pouring out of my apartment complex into the parking lot and the street to get away from the building," said Jack Kowalec, assistant city editor of The Desert Sun newspaper in Palm Springs. "There was a little bit of panic, a little bit of hysteria."

Gene Aker, night copy editor at the newspaper, said the quake shattered a window in the building.

The quake initially knocked out power to 10,000 to 15,000 households when it damaged a Southern California Edison Co. substation in Desert Hot Springs, said spokeswoman Becky Sordelet.

The load was automatically picked up by an electrical system belonging to the Metropolitan Water District, she said, but at about 4 a.m., the load grew too large, and those circuits shut down.

The result was a blackout throughout Palm Springs and the Coachella Valley region. The lights began to come back on around 5 a.m.

Rocks rolled across all four lanes of State Highway 111, the main road into the desert resort from the west.

U.S. advises Filipinos to put Marcos in past

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, chastizing backers of former Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos for challenging Corazon Aquino's government, says the exiled leader should be considered "part of the past."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes also said Monday the administration would investigate whether the deposed Philippines leader — now living in Hawaii — had played a role in the latest attempt to oust the fledgling Aquino government.

But Speakes left unclear whether the United States would take any action against Marcos if it found he had incited the Manila uprising by Arturo Tolentino, a Marcos running mate in the fraud-tainted February presidential elections.

At the State Department, spokesman Bernard Kalb said the administration noted that the attempted takeover drew little backing from the Filipino people.

"This is a clear indication that President Marcos is part of the past of Philippine politics and he should realize this," Kalb said.

He said the United States deplores any activities aimed at sowing dissension among the Filipinos.

While U.S. officials have not been in contact with Marcos concerning the events over the weekend, Kalb said, the United States has made it clear to him privately and publicly that his participation in partisan political activity in "inconsistent with his status as a guest in the United States."

Marcos reportedly has expressed interest in leaving the United States for one of several African countries, among them Gabon, the Ivory Coast and Ghana, because he may face legal troubles over his contested wealth.

At the White House, Speakes said the administration was "looking into" Marcos' role in the Tolentino rebellion, but that no conclusion had been drawn yet as to whether Marcos was involved.

"We'll have to continue to look at it," Speakes said.

The White House spokesman said the United States has continued to urge that the Aquino government grant Marcos a passport so he could leave Hawaii for a third country.

Kalb refused to discuss whether talks were under way with another country about a possible Marcos departure.

Asked what would be done if it were discovered Marcos had been involved, Speakes replied, "The president made a commitment. The president said he could come here and stay as long as he wishes.... If he is conducting activities that seem to be inconsistent with that, then we would have to look at it."

Asked to what end the administration would "look at" Marcos' activities, Speakes said, "There are many different variations that can take place," but that he did not know the specifics.

"It would be premature" to say Marcos might be asked to leave the United States if it were found that he had played a role in the rebellion, Speakes added.

Since Marcos left the Philippines in late February following a civilian-military uprising, he has kept in contact with his supporters in the Philippines from Honolulu.

Over the weekend, Tolentino declared himself the Philippines leader and holed up in a Manila hotel. Even though he later gave up his rebellion, hundreds of his military and civilian backers held out in the luxury hotel. The revolt finally collapsed early today.

Tolentino said he had been pressured to take action by Marcos loyalists who have been staging weekly street demonstrations calling for Marcos' return.

Marcos spokesman Arturo Aruiza said in Honolulu on Sunday that since leaving the Philipines in February, Marcos had written a letter to Tolentino, telling him that as his vice president, he should take over in his absence.

But Marcos told reporters Sunday that he knew little about Tolentino taking the oath of acting president, and said the decision to do so had been made by party loyalists.

"I am not too well-informed about what's happening in the Philippines," Marcos said. "We are still looking for facts as to what really happened...why it happened."

But Tomas Gomez III, the Philippines counsel general to Hawaii, rejected that assertion:

"He was waiting for things to happen and when it didn't work out the way he hoped, he washed his hands of it," Gomez said.

Pro-Marcos rebels abandon hotel

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A revolt led by a pro-Marcos politician and backed by four generals collapsed at dawn today when the rebels abandoned a luxury hotel they had occupied for nearly 40 hours and surrendered.

Deposed President Ferdinand E. Marcos, whose name was invoked by the leaders of the short-lived rebellion, said from his Hawaiian exile that he had nothing to do with the challenge to the government of President Corazon Aquino. Justice Minister Neptali Gonzales said he was told to file charges against Arturo Tolentino, the 75-year-old former running mate of Marcos. Tolentino launched the rebellion Sunday by proclaiming himself "acting president."

Gonzales did not elaborate on what charges might be filed. He met for two hours today at Philippine navy headquarters with Tolentino and three military leaders who had backed the revolt. No arrests were made.

Tolentino refused to talk to reporters. His secretary, Edith Macaraig, said Tolentino had called three times since Monday night to give her messages and instructions. "He sounded depressed," she said.

Meanwhile, about 500 Marcos supporters gathered near the Manila Hotel where the abortive rebellion took place. Truncheon-wielding riot police dispersed the demonstrators, and two people were arrested.

The rebels gave up 10 hours before the expiration of a 24-hour deadline set by Mrs. Aquino for their surrender. By then, about 1,000 soldiers loyal to the government had surrounded the hotel from a distance.

Mrs. Aquino said in a statement she had allowed the grace period because "we don't want to make a martyr out of him (Tolentino)."

"My supporters want me to show firmness and to arrest people like these who fight me," said Mrs. Aquino. "But my feeling is that I should not go after followers but should look at the motives of the leaders."

Marcos said in an interview from Honolulu on NBC-TV's "Today" show that he was aware events in the Philippines could jeopardize his status as a guest in the United States, which has warned the ousted president not to try to undermine the Aquino government.

"I am aware of that and this is why I say I categorically deny attempting to cause any rebellion, any sedition or any coup d'etat; nor am I engaged in destabilizing the Philippine government," Marcos said.

The Reagan administration has chastised backers of the rebellion and said Marcos should consider himself "part of the past" of Philippines politics.

In a message to Mrs. Aquino released by the U.S. Embassy, Secretary of State George Shultz praised her "deft handling of a difficult situation."

"You have shown the world that a firm and considered approach to internal political disputes not only works but brings great credit to your government," Shultz said.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Allan Croghan confirmed two embassy officials went to the hotel during the rebellion, but stressed they only wanted first-hand information on the events.

An 18-wheel truck had a minor accident at the slide site, probably when it hit a rock, but no one was injured, said Highway Patrol officer Brian Green.

The quake buckled part of State Highway 62 in Morongo Valley, while another slide hit State Highway 74 in the San Jacinto Mountains, he said.

On State Highway 243, which serves the community of Idyllwild and other mountain resort areas, numerous small rockslides were reported, said Riverside County sheriff's dispatcher Lenore Zielenski. Rocks also tumbled onto the Ortega Highway in the desert, Ms. Zielenski said.

A fire that caused $30,000 damage to a glass company in Cathedral City, just south of Palm Springs, may have started by a quake-caused electrical short-circuit, said Capt. Dan Proctor of the Riverside County fire department.

A 60-acre brushfire in the mountains above Cabazon, 80 miles east of downtown Los Angeles on Interstate 10, may have been caused by sparks from power lines whipped around by the quake, a fire dispatcher said.

The Southern California Gas Co. got numerous reports of small gas line breaks, but found no serious damage, said spokeswoman Sharon Woodson-Bryant.

Greg Gross, a resident of Rancho Penasquitos, about 15 miles north of San Diego, said he was watching a movie on television when he felt the floor starting to move.

"I figured it would pass after a couple of seconds and then it continued. And then the windows really started to rattle. The patio door, which is all glass, really started to rattle," Gross said.

"I've been living here since 1975, and this is the biggest single shaking that I can recall ever feeling," he said.

Reports flooded in to police agencies throughout the region following the quake. Most callers said it lasted 30 seconds to one minute, officials said.

Residents of the area reported dozens of small aftershocks.

"If mucus gets in his lungs, he could get pneumonia and that," she says, "wouldn't be good."

After bathing and dressing him, she begins his physical therapy — working and stretching his muscles to keep them toned and prevent atrophy.

Adrian spends most of the day propped up against a pillow on the couch.

"He likes to listen to the radio, but he can't really play. Before, he could walk, but now he can't," she explains.

His big brother, 2-year-old Sergio, understands what is going on.

"He will tell you 'brother choked,'" she says.

Doctor visits are required monthly, a far cry from the time he spent during April and May in the pediatric intensive care unit of a Fort Worth hospital, Ms. DeLeon says.

Insurance has covered all but the $500 deductible and 20 percent of Adrian's bills.

But monthly expenses for him can run upwards of $450, Ms. DeLeon says.

"The respirator we use to keep his heart beat monitored at night costs $350 a month to rent and the suction machine costs $80 a month as well. Formula is about $20 a month."

Although her husband, Jessie, a Midland carpet cleaner, is lucky to have a job in these hard times, Beth says she has been forced to quit her job to stay home with Adrian.

A trust fund has been set up in Adrian DeLeon's name at Home Savings here in Midland by a former employer of Beth's.

The account number for those wishing to help is #045551445.

"I never thought anything like this would ever happen," the Jehovah's Witness adds. "But I hope for a happier future and living by God's principles get us through it all."

GRAMM

Under the 1921 act that created the comptroller general's office, the president appoints the official for a non-renewable 15-year term, the Senate confirms him, and a joint resolution of the House and Senate is required to remove him.

The comptroller general's office was intended to give Congress the ability to oversee and audit executive branch agencies, Brooks said. The comptroller general heads the General Accounting Office (GAO), and any member of Congress may request a GAO study of agency action or policy. GAO's non-partisan studies are widely respected in and out of government.

"The president has the Office of Management and Budget and we have GAO," Brooks said in an interview. "If he (Gramm) thinks the president can have both of them, he's out of his mind."

The court's action does not wipe out the entire Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law, but now any cuts necessary to meet the deficit targets demanded by the law will have to be approved by the House and Senate in a joint resolution, as prescribed in a "fall back" position written into the law to protect it against the possibility of a successful court challenge to its constitutionality.

Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., who filed the suit against Gramm-Rudman-Hollings, in a press conference at the Capitol, said the message from the court was: "No more gimmicks, no more tricks, no more easy answers. Congress must do its job and cannot give it away. This is a victory for every American."

In the absence of swift corrective action, Congress will have to take on the politically difficult job, with elections coming up in the fall, of spelling out cuts in programs important to voters.

Gramm-Rudman-Hollings' first bite came last March when the military and most agencies and programs, except Social Security and some anti-poverty programs, took a 3.1 percent across-the-board cut.

Synar, a member of Brooks' committee and the Judiciary Committee, said he would join in fighting efforts to eliminate Congress' role in the Comptroller General's office.

He said he would vote to continue the $11.7 billion March sequestration of funds, declaring: "To try to return that money now would cause havoc."

The Supreme Court placed a 60-day hold on the sequestered money in the event Congress votes to return it to the agencies.

Synar said Gramm-Rudman-Hollings has been effective because, for one reason, it requires Congress and the president to think about the budget. "Liberals would argue it brought the president to the table on spending for the first time in six years," said Synar.

Little relief in sight in 7-state heat wave

Associated Press

Weather officials say little relief is in sight from a baking heat wave that toppled temperature records in at least seven states, threatened crops in Maryland and Delaware and sent children to a New Jersey municipal pool in shifts.

Both New York City and Philadelphia reported a new high temperature Monday of 98 degrees, beating New York's old mark of 97 set 52 years ago and Philadelphia's 42-year-old 97.

Downtown Atlantic City, N.J. reported a new high of 98, beating by five degrees the record for the day set 86 years ago. Baltimore's 102 toppled a 61-year-old heat record of 97 degrees.

The nation's capital reported a high of 98, tying the record set in 1925.

The National Weather Service said the blanket of hot muggy air covered the eastern seaboard from the Carolinas to southern New England and little change was expected in the next few days.

Early morning temperatures today already were in the 70s and 80s throughout the region, the weather service said.

As temperatures climbed into the 100s for the second day in Maryland, Agriculture Secretary Wayne A. Cawley Jr. reported in a memorandum to Gov. Harry Hughes that at least 30 percent of the state's corn crop — Maryland's largest — already has been lost to heat and drought this year.

The Delaware Crop Reporting Service also reported danger to crops and Jack Tarburton, president of the Delaware Farm Bureau and a Dover-area potato farmer, said 60 percent of the state's potatoes weren't irrigated this year because of lack of water. "That means there's not much of a crop there," he said.

At the John F. Kennedy Swimming Pool in Newark, N.J., more than 200 youngsters had cooled off by mid-morning Monday, said Dolores Seaman, overseer of the city's six municipal pools.

On Sunday and again on Monday, children were permitted in the pool only in shifts because there were not enough supervisors available, she said.

Utilities reported heavy demand for electricity Monday by people wanting to cool off with fans and air conditioners.

The 300,000 customers of Delmarva Power & Light customers in Delaware used a record 1,824 megawatts of electricity between 4 and 5 p.m. — 29 megawatts more than the 1,795 used in one hour on Aug. 15, 1985, the previous high.

In New Jersey, Public Service Electric and Gas Co. reported a record peak load of 7,734 megawatts at 4 p.m. Monday, breaking the mark of 7,721 megawatts set last August 15, said spokesman Peter Laning.

The utility serves 1.8 million electricity customers in northern New Jersey.

In the New York City area, both Consolidated Edison and the Long Island Lighting Co., reported record energy use. LILCO spokesman William Sherrard said that if the heat wave continued, energy to industrial customers would be cut back and commercial and residential energy users would be asked to voluntarily limit their use.

LILCO sent out 3.456 million kilowatts of power Monday at 6 p.m., breaking the old mark of 3.430 million, said spokesman James Darcy.

Con Ed broke its record between 3 p.m. and 4 p.m. Monday, sending 18.9 million kilowatts to energy users in New York and most of Westchester County, said Dan Walden, a Con Ed spokesman. Con Ed's old record was 18.819 million kilowatts, he said.

Texas preacher reaches Canada on walking tour

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — A Texas preacher who claims he is the first man to walk in one journey through the "lower 48" United States, strolled into Vancouver on Monday, lugging a 90-pound backpack and headed for Alaska.

Vancouver is the third Canadian city 59-year-old Harry Lee McGinnis has passed through on the odyssey he calls "a boyhood dream." He started out from Dallas, Texas, on Aug. 28, 1983. He planned to be back in Dallas in time to celebrate his 60th birthday on that date this year.

AUSTRIA

Police removed their placard and surrounded the protesters to separate them from the pro-Waldheim crowd that grew quickly from about 40 to 15,000 as Waldheim made his way to the Hofburg from Parliament.

Most of the countries represented in Austria sent ambassadors to the ceremonies, but the chief diplomats of the United States, Israel and the Soviet Union were absent.

Israel withdrew its ambassador following Waldheim's election and ordered its charge d'affaires not to attend the inaugural ceremony at Parliament. U.S. Ambassador Ronald Lauder and the chief Soviet diplomat here said they had previous commitments and could not attend.

Representing the United States was Felix S. Bloch, the second-ranking American diplomat. The Soviets also sent their No. 2 man.

U.S. Embasssy spokesman Walter Kohl said Lauder would attend Waldheim's reception for the heads of diplomatic missions on Thursday.

On Monday, about 1,000 protesters gathered across the street from the headquarters of the conservative People's Party which supported Waldheim for president against a Socialist candidate.

"He not only lied to us, he lied to the world," said one of the protesters, Leon Seolis, a 79-year-old Austrian.

The demonstration was the biggest protest against Waldheim in Austria since the allegations about his wartime activities surfaced in February. No violence was reported.

Rabbi Avraham Weiss of New York led a smaller protest Monday. Two Jewish activists and two Roman Catholic clerics flew from the United States to stage a vigil outside the door of Waldheim's new office.

Weiss and Glenn Richter, the second Jewish activist, wore prison garb and displayed a poster facsimile of the 1947 U.N. War Crimes Commission document accusing Waldheim of involvement in the murder of prisoners.

Their companions, the Rev. David Bossman and Sister Rose Thering, both of Seton Hall University in South Orange, N.J., wore yellow stars like those that were forced upon Jews by the Nazis.

Beate Klarsfeld, a German anti-Nazi activist based in Paris, joined them outside the Hofburg. The ornate palace is a former seat of Austrian emperors and the place where Adolf Hitler spoke to cheering thousands after Germany annexed Austria in 1938.

Passers-by stopped to read the protest signs and talk. Many cursed the group.

With the Abell-Hanger Foundation award, students may attend either part-time or full-time and may take traditional freshmen subjects or may choose vocational or technical training programs.

Students receiving the assistance must enroll in a minimum of six hours of credit courses each semester.

Bill Burns, director of financial aid, will administer the grants to the 1986 graduates and all eligible students should contact Burns during fall semester pre-registration.

Burns said the Abell-Hanger Foundation grant also may be used to supplement other financial assistance that doesn't completely cover cost of tuition, fees, and books.

RICKOVER

For 30 of his 60 years on active duty before President Reagan forced him to retire on his 82nd birthday in 1982, Rickover was skipper of a navy-within-a-navy, the nuclear Navy. He was a tiny, tidy man who was as demanding of himself as he was of others, suffering neither fools nor superiors — indeed, he often pronounced them one and the same.

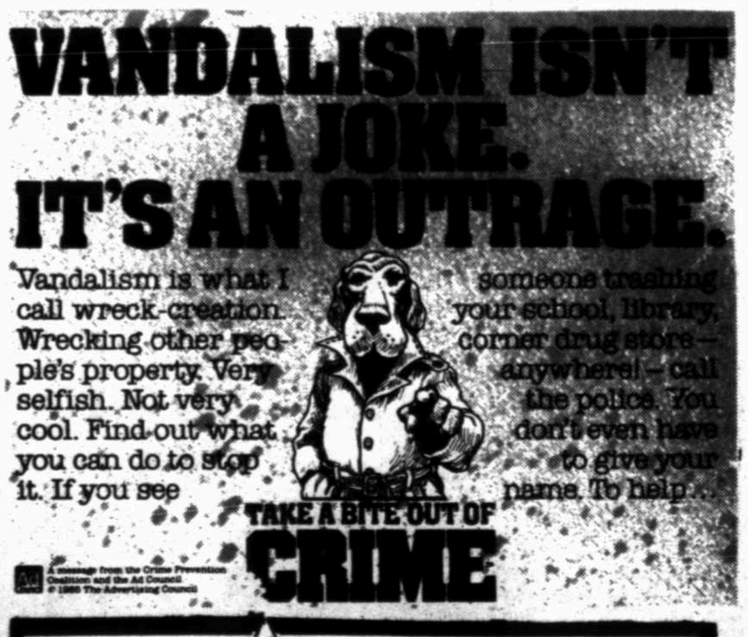

In the end, the Pentagon sounded a sour note even after his retirement. Navy Secretary John Lehman publicly censured him for accepting $67,628 in gifts over the years from the General Dynamics Corp., which built the nuclear submarines and ships born on Rickover's drawing boards.

When Rickover, who had suffered heart attacks in 1961 and 1974, was admitted to Bethesda Naval Hospital on July 4, 1985, with a stroke, Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., suggested the ailment was "brought on possibly by being dragged through the mud."

Rickover acknowledged taking gifts from General Dynamics, saying he in turn gave most of the items to others, including members of Congress. "But the question that ought to be asked," he said, "Is did I even favor General Dynamics or any other contractor?"

Adm. James D. Watkins, chief of naval operations, said early that July that "I doubt that any contractor who knows Adm. Rickover thought he could be influenced with a gift.

"Ironically," said Watkins, "the shipyards named in the gifts-giving inquiry were the targets of his sharpest criticism for poor procurement practices, inefficiency, high overhead, and inadequate cost control. When they submitted huge claims that he considered fraudulent, he launched a Department of Justice investigation and testified that the responsible corporate officials should be prosecuted."

Desegregation of East Texas public housing ordered

TYLER (AP) — A federal judge has appointed a special master to oversee desegregation of public housing in East Texas and has rejected a desegregation plan proposed last year by the federal government.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice named Francis A. McGovern, a University of Alabama-Birmingham law professor, as the special master despite objections by U.S. Housing and Urban Development attorneys.

Justice had indicated during a May 5 hearing that McGovern would be appointed. McGovern is a professor of complex litigation and tort law at UAB.

In a 40-page memorandum opinion issued just before the July Fourth holiday, Justice also indicated that he was rejecting a remedial plan proposed late last year by Justice Department attorneys representing HUD.

In a third action, the judge issued an injunction prohibiting HUD from further discrimination in public housing. The agency is still free, however, to develop and implement its own remedial efforts, but those efforts will be monitored by McGovern.

Lucille Young, a black Clarksville resident, filed the class-action lawsuit in 1980 claiming she had been restricted to housing where only other blacks lived while whites lived in superior housing projects, all at least partially funded by HUD.

On July 31, 1985, Justice issued a summary judgment, holding that HUD could be held liable because it "knowingly created, promoted and funded racially segregated housing in 36 counties in East Texas in violation of the fifth amendment of the United States Constitution and federal statutes."

HUD then filed the proposed remedial plan Dec. 17 setting out its plans for desegregating those projects.

The area covered by the order runs as far south as Beaumont, north to Texarkana and includes Paris. It does not include Smith County.

U.S. Justice Department Trial Attorney Robert Wolff objected to McGovern's proposed appointment during the May 5 hearing, saying that, in light of the remedial plan, the "exceptional conditions" necessary for a special master no longer exist.

Plaintiffs' attorney Mike Daniel, however, has said he supports having a special master.

Among McGovern's duties will be to monitor HUD's remedial efforts and to study the operation of local housing authorities and programs "in order to determine additional ways that racial segregation might be accomplished in HUD-assisted housing."

McGovern also will report to the court on HUD's remedial efforts, and rule on any disputes between plaintiffs' and government attorneys concerning the process of gathering evidence for the trial.

He will oversee desegregation of 177 separate projects in those 36 counties, and will issue a final report to Justice on Oct 1, 1987. He may also issue periodic reports to the court in the meantime.

After the 15-month period, Justice possibly could conduct a hearing on whether HUD has substantially complied with his injunction against future discrimination.

Under the order, McGovern will have the power to interview employees of HUD and the local housing agencies. He also will have unlimited access to HUD records and documents and to visit all the projects funded by HUD in that area.

Justice also ordered HUD to pay half the salary and other costs incurred by McGovern. Daniel has already said the plaintiffs will pay the other half.

McGovern's salary was set at $100 an hour, and places no limits to his budget or the number of assistants he may employ.

Also Thursday, HUD filed notice of its intent to appeal Justice's May 5 order that it pay the plaintiffs' attorneys fees. The federal agency is asking that Justice certify the order as a basis for appeal.

Among the cases in which McGovern has served as special master was a recent class-action suit involving asbestos exposure held in U.S. District Judge Robert M. Parker's court in Marshall.

STATE in brief

Judge: Nap no reason for new assault trial

AUSTIN (AP) — A judge has ruled that his nap during an incest trial was not grounds for a new trial for an Austin construction worker convicted on a charge of aggravated assault of a child.

The 33-year-old defendant was convicted in May on the charge accusing him of sexually assaulting his 11-year-old daughter. Testimony in the trial indicated that the man gave his daughter a venereal disease during repeated assaults.

It took jurors only 20 minutes to find the man guilty and only two hours to set his punishment at 45 years in prison.

Defense lawyers claimed that retired District Judge Herman Fitt of Mineral Wells fell asleep while defense attorney Alonzo Villarreal was cross examining the victim.

They said the judge slept through an objection from a prosecutor and then began snoring into a microphone at the bench. The snoring was amplified throughout the courtroom. The judge was awakened by a clerk.

The defendant claimed that his trial was unfair because the judge fell asleep.

Woman critically burned

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston woman was in critical condition with burns over her entire body after a man doused her with gasoline and set her on fire while she was babysitting with two small children, police said.

Shirley Smiley, 29, was being treated at Hermann Hospital burn unit with second- and third-degree burns, a police spokesman said.

A warrant was issued for a 39-year-old Houston man, who was still at large, police said.

Earl Nelson, a maintenance man in the apartment complex where the woman was attacked, was the first person to reach the woman.

"At first I heard some screaming and I thought it was some kind of domestic fight," said apartment maintenance man Earl Nelson. "I turned the corner and I heard someone screaming 'She's on fire, She's on fire,' and I turned around and saw this woman with flames all over her.'"

Nelson said the woman was screaming for help and standing on the sidewalk in front of her apartment when he rushed to her aid.

Salvadoran charged

HOUSTON (AP) — A Salvadoran national has been charged with murder after a Honduran girl living with her mother in Houston was killed by a stray bullet, police said.

Julio Hernandez, 22, was being held at the Harris County Jail on $10,000 bond, police Sgt. C.T. Mosqueda said Monday.

Abbi Tregueros, an 11-year-old native of Puerto Cortez, Honduras, was shot in the neck Sunday by a stray bullet that pierced the window screen of her home as she asked one of two arguing men to come inside, police said.

The man had lived at the home for about a month, police said.

Area engineer named

AUSTIN (AP) — Kirby Pickett of Paris will become district engineer for the state highway department in Waco on Sept. 1, succeeding Elton Evans, who is retiring.

Evans has been engineer for 20 years of the highway district that includes Bell, Bosque, Coryell, Falls, Hamilton, Hill, Limestone and McLennan counties.

Pickett, 49, joined the department in 1961 at Mount Vernon. He has been assistant district engineer at Paris since 1983.

Mattox issues injunction

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox says he has obtained a final judgment in a suit alleging that a Lubbock funeral home violated the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices-Consumer Protection Act.

Mattox said Monday the judgment and a permanent injunction were issued against Goldie Wilson, doing business as Wilsons' Funeral Directors, and Charles Minnick, both of Lubbock.

Mattox's suit alleged that his investigators found that the defendants had failed on occasion to disclose that embalming is not required by law except in certain special cases and that outer burial containers are not required.

Sodomy decision 'proves' state's rights

By DOUG CRICHTON
Associated Press Writer

The U.S. Supreme Court's refusal to strike down a Texas law that makes "deviate sexual intercourse" a crime proves that states have the right to legislate, a prosecuting attorney said.

Potter County District Attorney Danny Hill of Amarillo, who took over the state's appeal after Attorney General Jim Mattox dropped it, said Monday that he was "elated, relieved" by the high court's ruling.

He also said the ruling "opens the door for us to teach our children the difference between right and wrong, instead of having to say it's wrong, but society condones it."

All but one justice rejected a Dallas homosexual's argument that the law violates gays' privacy rights and is therefore unconstitutional. They also turned down appeals from Texas officials over the law's procedural aspects.

The court upheld a Georgia law last week making homosexual and heterosexual sodomy a crime, ruling that it did not violate any constitutional right.

Although the Texas law applies only to homosexuals, it is similar to Georgia's in that it defines deviate sexual intercourse as "any contact between any part of the genitals of one person and the mouth or anus of another person."

Donald F. Baker sought to have the law overturned even though he was not prosecuted for homosexual conduct.

"The war goes on," Baker, 38, said Monday. "This case has provided us a forum to discuss the homosexual question, and the process of social changes is debate, then reform."

He added that "there is nothing more we can do within judicial system at the moment, but it will come up again. We will work more intensely within state courts and state legislatures."

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the Texas law last August. It said the ban on deviate sexual intercourse is justified by "the strong objection to homosexual conduct which has prevailed in Western culture for the past seven centuries."

The appeals court also rejected arguments by Texas prosecutors over who has the right to defend and challenge the state law in federal court.

Mattox said his office has the exclusive power to represent the state's interest in such cases. District attorneys in Texas said Baker had no legal standing to file his suit.

The law originally was overturned by a Dallas federal judge and a three-judge panel of the 5th Circuit. Justice Thurgood Marshall voted Monday to hear arguments in the case.

Dallas Gay Alliance President Bill Nelson said at an afternoon news conference that the Supreme Court's action wasn't surprising because gays have repeatedly been told they have no civil rights.

Together afer being given up for adoption in 1954 are siblings Barbara LaBorde, Mary Chandler, Tommy Sparks and Ann Cook. They and another brother were reunited Saturday.

Scattered siblings reunited

MAGNOLIA (AP) — A barbecue, a trip to Astroworld and lots of conversation highlighted a reunion of five of six siblings separated since most of them were put up for adoption in 1954.

"We ate, talked and shared our lives with each other, asking 'How did you grow up?' " said Barbara LaBorde, the hostess and amateur investigator who brought her brothers and sisters together.

In 1976, Ms. LaBorde, 40, started her quest to find her two youngest siblings, Ann Cook, 33, and Billy Moore, 32.

"There was something missing," she said. "I was lonely, and I just needed to find them."

Through research and the help of several adoption agencies, she found them. Richard Moore, 41, could not be located and was the only sibling missing from the reunion at Ms. LaBorde's home in Magnolia, about 25 miles north of Houston.

Although some of the siblings have been in contact with each other, the weekend's reunion was the first chance they all had to be together since 1954. The five celebrated the event at a barbecue, and all but Billy Moore went to Astroworld in Houston on Sunday.

Tommy Sparks, 35, said finding his siblings was "like losing something that you really cherished and then turning around and finding it again."

When she was 7 years old, Ms. LaBorde and her brother, Richard Moore, were adopted by the same family. Sparks and Mary Chandler, 38, were adopted by another family.

The youngest, Billy Moore, who is handicapped, was found by Ms. LaBorde last May in Galveston. He had been abandoned on the steps of John Sealy Hospital when he was 20 months old.

Ms. Cook was adopted by another family.

"The two youngest didn't even know they had brothers and sisters," Ms. LaBorde said. "When I called Billy and told him I was his sister, he was totally shocked. He was estatic."

The siblings only vaguely remember their natural parents, but Ms. LaBorde does remember the day her mother gave the youngsters away in Columbus, Texas.

"She had us all lined up. She said, 'I'm going to give you all away tomorrow,' " Ms. LaBorde said. "They couldn't take care of us so the gave us away."

Reversal of conviction spurs debate on use of informers

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — What was perceived as government misuse of paid informers in a Laredo, Texas, federal drug trial drew sharp criticism in an appeals court's reversal of the conviction of three men.

"The time has come to announce boldly and firmly that our judicial search for the truth cannot be reconciled with the virtual purchase of perjury," a 2-1 majority of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said Monday in ordering a new trial.

"The government in its prosecutorial efforts should be like Caesar's wife, above or beyond reproach. At the very least, the court must tell a jury that the words of a witness have been in a sense purchased if he will be paid, more or less, depending on how effective his putative truth-telling sells itself to the jury," the court said.

The ruling came in the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration's case against Adalberto Cervantes-Pacheco, Jerry Wayne Nelson and William E. Nelson.

The U.S. District Court for South Texas in Laredo sentenced Cervantes-Pacheco and William Nelson to four years' imprisonment and placed Jerry Wayne Nelson on probation for allegedly conspiring in 1984 to possess 200,000 pounds of Colombian marijuana with intent to distribute.

The government's case against the three was based in part on the testimony of an informant named Frank Kelly, alias Frank Kennedy. In its review of the case, the 5th Circuit said Kelly, who had previously worked on more than 35 cases, was told by the DEA he would be paid an unspecified sum of money to gather information about William Nelson, a Laredo pilot.

The 5th Circuit called that "an impermissible contingent fee arrangment" that invited Kelly to "write his own ticket."

In the end, Kelly did such a good job of both informing and testifying, the 5th Circuit said, that the DEA acknowledged at the trial that it would recommend Kelly receive $20,000 that was seized in the case.

The 5th Circuit said Kelly should not have been allowed to testify.

"One of the basics of our jurisprudence is the search for truth, and by this is meant not the purchased truth, the bartered-for truth, but the unvarnished truth that comes from the lips of a man who is known for his integrity," said the majority opinion by Judges Irving Goldberg of Dallas and Jerre Williams of Austin, Texas.

"It may be that we must live with informers. It may be that we must live with bargained-for pleas of guilty. But we do not have to give a receipt stamped 'paid in full for your damaging testimony' or 'you will be paid according to how well you can convince the jury even though it be in the face of lies'."

In his dissent, Judge W. Eugene Davis of Lafayette, La., said the convictions should stand because evidence in the case showed Kelly's fee was not contingent on conviction, that the government has reasonable suspicions that William Nelson was involved with drug smuggling and that the conviction was supported by other strong evidence.

"The court has only one reason to be concerned with the amount of the government's payment to Kelly and that is whether the payment affected his credibility as a witness," Davis wrote.

"Ordinarily, the jury judges the credibility of the witnesses. The majority suggests no reason we should depart from that rule in this case nd no reason occurs to me."

San Antonio man wins damages in case involving sexual abuse

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A 20-year-old man who accused a San Antonio policeman of sexualy molesting him more than three years ago won a civil suit against the officer, who was cleared of wrongdoing in a departmental investigation.

Reyes Ruiz, 20, accused police officer Milton Barrera Jr. of kissing him while they discussed the Bible and molesting him between 1981 and 1983.

A state district court jury awarded Ruiz $27,495 in damages after deliberating five hours during Thursday afternoon and Monday morning after a nine-day trial.

The San Antonio Police Department launched an internal investigation after Ruiz filed a complaint against Barrera and suspended the officer for 30 days in 1983.

But the case was not turned over to a Bexar County grand jury until after the incident appeared in a San Antonio Light series on allegations of abuse involving several San Antonio police officers, the Light reported.

Criminal charges of sexual abuse against Barrera were dropped in February by the district attorney's office because of inconsistencies in Ruiz's statements.

Barrera would not comment after the decision, but met with his pastor, the Rev. Lee Patton of Faith Bible Church, for a brief prayer before walking away with family members.

Ten jurors ruled in Ruiz's favor despite the lack of medical evidence that Ruiz had been sexually assaulted.

"You can only be a hypocrite for so long, and eventually it catches up to you, and the people find out the truth," Ruiz said.

One of Ruiz's attorneys, Robert J. Reaves, said the jury apparently believed testimony from Michael Davis, 22, and Ruiz's brother, Silverio Ruiz, who said they, too, had been sexually molested by Barrera.

Barrera will remain on the police force pending an examination of the civil jury verdict, a prepared statement from the police department said.

Barrera's attorney, Wayne Hampton, said the civil verdict should have no effect on the officer's job because the investigation of Barrera's conduct with Ruiz already made by the department is "all over and done with."

Contra aid decision could affect Southwest Texas town

EL PASO (AP) — If the Contras battling Nicaragua's Sandinistas get their $100 million in aid, it's going to be a great deal quieter around the Southwest Texas town of Valentine.

U.S. Rep. Ron Coleman, D-Texas, added a provision to the military construction appropriations bill requiring the Air Force to find somewhere else to train F-15 pilots stationed at Holloman Air Force Base near Alamogordo.

That bill, approved by the House two weeks ago, would withhold $14 million in construction funds from Holloman if the Air Force does not develop new training plans within six months.

The bill now goes to a House-Senate conference committee to work out differences in the versions of the bill passed by each chamber.

Coleman said he proposed the restriction in response to complaints from ranchers about the effects of sonic booms on people and livestock around the tiny town of Valentine, 160 miles southeast of El Paso.

"He tried several ways to prod the Air Force into coming up with a plan that would not subject that area to these tremendous sonic booms, but it hasn't worked, so he decided to go the legislative route," Coleman's press secretary, John Jackley, said Monday.

The F-15 training missions began last year over a 600-square-mile area that includes parts of Hudspeth, Culberson, Jeff Davis and Presidio counties, despite widespread protest from residents.

Ralph Voight, a retired businessman and leader of the protests, contended supersonic flights should be conducted only over public lands, not private property.

Air Force officials said they need the area so pilots can practice realistic dogfights.

Coleman's proposal has rekindled rumors that two F-15 wings with about 5,000 Air Force personnel would leave Holloman if the Texas flights are restricted.

That concern also was expressed in 1983 by former New Mexico state Sen. Aubrey Dunn of Alamogordo during discussions of a possible ban on supersonic flights over Catron County, N.M.

Coleman's office, the office of U.S. Rep. Joe Skeen, R-N.M., and the Air Force all discount the rumors.

"I have no information on any wings leaving Holloman whatsoever," said Lt. Col. Jim Reinhard, an Air Force spokesman in Washington. "I don't put any credence in that rumor."

John Sneed, Skeen's press secretary, said the congressman is more concerned about the threatened withholding of $14 million for construction projects at Holloman if the Air Force does not abide by the proposed restrictions.

Sneed said Skeen may work to have that penalty removed from the bill during House-Senate conference committee proceedings.

North Texas town grieves for coach, family

PETROLIA (AP) — Grief hung over this North Texas community Monday after the weekend deaths of Petrolia High School football coach Larry Marlon Hill and his two children.

Tears streamed down the faces of students as they and his colleagues remembered how Hill touched their lives in the two years he coached at Petrolia.

Hill, 33, and his children, Clifton Marlon, 10, and Adrian Marie, 8, died in a three-vehicle accident at 4:10 p.m. Saturday east of Bokchito, Okla., near Durant on U.S. 70.

Hill's wife, Janis Marie Hill, 32, was in the intensive care unit at Bryan Memorial Hospital in Durant.

Highway patrol officials said the Hill family was westbound on the highway when their vehicle was struck head-on by an eastbound pickup truck, which had been struck in the rear by another pickup.

High school principal Gary Chasteen said the Hills were returning from a camping trip and family reunion at Lake Texoma.

"He was there for the kids any hour of the night and day, If any kid needed him at night, he would go," Chasteen said. In dealing with the massive paperwork resulting from implementation of House Bill 72 education reform requirements, he said, "Larry always kept the perspective he was here for the kids. That was his emphasis."

"He changed the attitude of a lot of kids which, in turn, changed the attitude of a lot of adults," Chasteen said.

"As a football team on the field last year we didn't win a game, but as far as the kids were concerned, we had a whole team of winners," said basketball coach Alan Seay. "I don't think there's anybody else in the state I would rather have coached with than him.

Second convoy of covered wagons hits state highways

WEATHERFORD (AP) — The wheels have barely stopped rolling on the Texas Sesquicentennial Wagon Train, but another convoy of covered wagons left this North Texas city Monday for a five-month, 2,300-mile journey.

Archie Graham of Taylor, organizer of the Lone Star Wagon Train, said he believes the second wagon train will attract as many as 50 wagons.

Graham said the train plans to wind up the trek at Austin on Nov. 30.

The Sesquicentennial Wagon Train ended its journey around Texas with a parade through Fort Worth last week.

"I plan on getting about 25 wagons of the Texas (Sesquicentennial) wagon train," Graham said. "A lot of people didn't go all the way with them, and they want more.

The second wagon train will a "sort of funny route," Graham said, and will concentrate on towns and cities missed by the other train.

Graham said the wagon train will pass through Springtown, Decatur, Bowie, Bridgeport, Jacksboro, Mineral Wells, Eastland, Graham, Seymour, Vernon, Shamrock, Post, Brownfield, Andrews, Snyder, Big Spring, Brownwood, Lampasas, Killeen, Temple, Waco, Corsicana, Tyler, Longview, Trinity, Huntsville, Bryan, Rosenberg, Victoria, Bastrop and Austin.

Traffic toll short of predictions

Associated Press

Fewer people died on Texas roads than the Department of Public Safety had predicted for the Independence Day weekend because more responded to the state's traffic safety program, officials said.

During the count between 6 p.m. Thursday and midnight Sunday, 41 deaths were reported. The DPS had forecast 45, agency spokesman David Wells said.

He noted, however, that a majority of the victims had not buckled themselves in as the law now requires.

Texas' first-quarter traffic death rate declined 1 percent from last year, and that trend is continuing, he said. "Hopefully, people are being more careful."

In this year's reporting period, nine fatalities were motorcycle-related, more than usual, Wells said. Almost none of the victims wore helmets.

Twelve people died in single-vehicle crashes, seven in head-on collisions and four in auto-pedestrian accidents.

He added that 14 of the 41 accidents occurred on U.S. or state highways, 11 on city streets and seven on interstate highways.

Court approves new disciplinary powers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Teachers and school administrators will be armed with new disciplinary powers in the next school year to promote what the Supreme Court says are the "values of a civilized social order."

The nation's highest court said Monday that public school students may be suspended for using vulgar language.

Concluding its 1985-86 term, the court also overturned a key portion of a law requiring a balanced federal budget by 1991, jeopardizing congressional efforts to reduce mounting deficits.

In the school-discipline decision, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger wrote for the court, "Schools ... may determine that the essential lessons of civil, mature conduct cannot be conveyed in a school that tolerates lewd, indecent or offensive speech and conduct."

Burger added: "Surely it is a highly appropriate function of public school education to prohibit the use of vulgar and offensive terms in public discourse."

At the American Federation of Teachers convention in Chicago, union President Albert Shanker praised the decision.

"The schools are responsible for teaching civility as well as the three R's," Shanker said. "The decision should encourage schools to act against verbal as well as physical abuse."

Secretary of Education William J. Bennett joined in the praise, saying, "The court has upheld the legitimate, indeed essential, responsibility of schools to maintain an environment and ethos conducive to learning."

He added: "This decision reminds us that schools must possess the moral authority to prepare our young people for citizenship."

The court, voting 7-2, upheld the 1983 suspension of a Spanaway, Wash., high school senior who gave an assembly speech filled with crude sexual allusions.

Matthew Fraser's one-minute speech in support of a friend's candidacy for student body vice president of Bethel High School contained no dirty words, but it caused a brief uproar among his fellow students.

In the speech, Fraser described his friend as "a man who is firm — he's firm in his pants ... his character is firm ... a man who will go to the very end, even the climax, for each and every one of you."

His friend won the election by a wide margin.

Officials at the school in suburban Tacoma suspended Fraser for three days for violating a school rule banning disruptive conduct. Now a student at the University of California at Berkeley, Fraser sued school officials. He was forced to miss two days of school before his suspension was lifted.

Burger said the suspension did not violate Fraser's free-speech rights.

"The American public school system ... must inculcate the habits and manners of civility as values in themselves," Burger wrote. "The determination of what manner of speech in the classroom or in school assembly is inappropriate properly rests with the school board."

Burger added: "The process of educating our youth for citizenship is not confined to books, the curriculum and the civics class; schools must teach by example, the shared values of a civilized social order."

Justices Thurgood Marshall and John Paul Stevens dissented.

Marshall said school officials failed to prove that Fraser's speech was disruptive.

Stevens said Fraser "was probably in a better position to determine whether an audience composed of 600 of his contemporaries would be offended by the use of a ... sexual metaphor than is a group of judges who are at least two generations and 3,000 miles away from the scene of the crime."

At Bethel High School, Assistant Principal Christy Ingle said school officials felt vindicated.

"Our contention all along has been that public schools have the right to set standards of behavior for the students," she said. "There's a need for certain standards of behavior so that education can proceed in an orderly manner."

In other matters, the court:

— Ruled in a New York case that states are free to close down for lengthy periods of time adult bookstores found to be public nuisances because of the on-premises conduct of their customers.

— Agreed to decide whether Georgia death sentences are meted out in a racially discriminatory way.

The court's decision, expected sometime in 1987, could carry enormous impact for the future of capital punishment, affecting the fates of hundreds of the more than 1,600 death row inmates nationwide.

— Said it will decide whether the Alabama state police must promote one black trooper for every white promoted to raise the percentage of black officers.

The court, which last week reaffirmed the principle of affirmative action, will use the Alabama case for further examination of special on-the-job preferences.

Worst may be over, USDA says of farmers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The crunch on U.S. farm exports may be winding down, and an era of long-term growth could be at hand, if the signals are correct, an Agriculture Department economist says.

During the 1970s, a time of escalating farmland prices and inflation, the volume of U.S. farm exports increased an average of 8 percent per year. So far in the 1980s, including this year, the amount shipped has declined annually.

Clark Edwards of USDA's Economic Research Service says the forecasts indicate "the worst may soon be over" for exports, which have become vital to the financial well-being of so many of the nation's farmers.

"The foreign exchange value of the dollar has been dropping against many major currencies, and our commodity prices are closer to market-clearing levels," Edwards said Monday in a new agency report. "Farmers' production costs are stabilizing, and rates of return on investment in agriculture are recovering from reduced levels for many farm enterprises."

Perhaps the most important development for American agriculture — assuming decades ahead without major wars — will be the steady increase in global population, which, according to the Population Institute, has now reached 5 billion people, double what it was in 1950.

"The long-run trend in export growth over the past three decades averaged about 3 percent per year," Edwards said. "If we can manage to get back on that track — and it appears that we can — agriculture's recovery will be hastened."

Although Edwards thinks farmers will continue to see "temporary strains" in the future as they have in the past, he said those need not lead to prolonged periods of either surplus or shortage.

The recovery of lost export markets, however, will make American farmers more dependent on foreign buyers — and more vulnerable to future price swings of foreign origin.

"By the year 2000, around half of U.S. harvested cropland could be producing for export markets, up from an average of 36 percent in the last five years," Edwards said. "The livestock sector could also become more involved in exports, reducing its insulation from foreign market swings."

Why, with such risks apparent, should the United States push so hard for a greater share of the world agricultural export market? Perhaps, he said, because the alternatives are less appealing.

One alternative would be to pare back agriculture, limiting it to the domestic markets, which grow about 1 percent a year. Meanwhile, productivity has been growing about 1.9 percent per year. Thus, each year, less land, less labor, less capital and fewer farms would be needed to supply domestic demand growth.

"The potential for demand growth outside the United States is much greater," Edwards said. "World population is expected to double before the middle of the next century, and the food will have to come from somewhere."

Arthritis medicine's manufacturer says review clears drug

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM

WASHINGTON (AP) — The manufacturer of Feldene, one of the world's most widely used arthritis medicines, says a government review has exonerated the drug of charges that it poses an unreasonable risk of internal bleeding among elderly patients.

But the Ralph Nader-organized group that originally made the charge argued that Monday's decision not to take emergency action against Feldene was based on marketing clout, not scientific evidence. And the group said it was considering further action.

Dr. Roger Sacks, vice president for regulatory affairs and clinical safety at Pfizer Inc., said the decision by Health and Human Services Secretary Otis R. Bowen followed an "extensive and exhaustive review" by the Food and Drug Administration that failed to support charges made against the drug.

Sacks said Bowen's decision Monday "puts HHS and FDA on record as saying there is no scientific and medical basis for this type of attack on Feldene. ... The decision sends a strong message to patients and doctors alike that Feldene can be used with confidence."

But Dr. Sidney M. Wolfe, director of the Public Citizen Health Research Group, said the FDA and the Reagan administration "are more interested in protecting the $400 million annual worldwide sales of Feldene than in protecting older Americans from the dangers of this drug."

Bowen, a physician, denied a petition by Wolfe's group that asked him to declare Feldene an "imminent hazard" to health in people age 60 and over. The declaration would have allowed the FDA to put emergency restrictions on the drug without the usual regulatory procedures of notices and hearings.

Bowen said he based his decision on a recommendation by FDA Commissioner Frank E. Young that concluded the scientific reviews of piroxicam, Feldene's generic name, did not support Wolfe's charges.

"FDA's review ... found no basis for concluding that piroxicam is more likely to cause serious gastrointestinal toxicity in the elderly than similar products," Bowen said. "... I find insufficient evidence that piroxicam poses an imminent hazard to persons aged 60 and over."

Feldene has been sold in the United States since April 1982. It has been taken by millions of people in about 106 countries, becoming one of the most widely prescribed drugs in the world for arthritis.

It owes much of its popularity to the fact that it is the only drug in its class that is taken only once a day. Aspirin and other anti-inflammatory drugs often must be taken two to four times a day, and that inconvenience often means patients don't get all the medicine they are supposed to take.

But Wolfe said in his Jan. 8 petition to Bowen that the toxic effect of Feldene "is a dangerous price to pay for convenience." He said documents obtained by the group show a major health threat from the drug.

Since Feldene was introduced in the United States, he said, the FDA has received a total of 2,621 non-fatal and 182 fatal adverse reaction reports.

More than half the deaths involved internal gastrointestinal bleeding, Wolfe said, with virtually all occurring in elderly patients.

Scientific studies indicate the problem occurs in the elderly because older bodies tend to retain the medicine longer rather than excreting it, thus allowing a potentially toxic buildup, Wolfe said.

Scientists, seamen prepare for return to Titanic wreck

WOODS HOLE, Mass. (AP) — Nearly 200 scientists and seamen are readying Navy ships for a return to the wreck of the Titanic, the gravesite of 1,513 people who went down with the ocean liner 74 years ago.

The expedition leaves Wednesday for the spot about 560 miles off Newfoundland where a team of U.S. and French researchers found the sunken liner last September, said Commander Mark Neuhardt of the Navy Office of Information.

He said Monday that scientists at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution have invited Navy Secretary John Lehman and other top brass on the three-week trip, whose $220,000 bill will be footed by the Navy.

"He would like to accommodate the request if logistics are feasible and if his schedule could accommodate it," Neuhardt said. "However, no commitment has been made at this time."

Woods Hole researchers planned tours today of the Atlantis II, the Navy research ship that will carry 28 scientists, an equal number of crewmembers, and state-of-the-art diving equipment on the expedition.

Neuhardt said the Navy submarine-rescue ship Ortolan, carrying 109 enlisted men and six officers, will leave from Boston to rendezvous Sunday at the site of the wreck, whose exact location has been kept secret since last year's expedition, to protect the luxury liner from treasure seekers.

The purpose of the return trip is to test a prototype of the Jason, a small robot under development by the private institution for the Navy. The Jason Jr., controlled by the three-man submarine Alvin, will be "flown" close to the Titanic to test its cameras and maneuverability.

The Alvin will make daily trips to the wreck for two weeks and may send the Jason Jr. inside the Titanic, said Woods Hole spokeswoman Anne Rabushka. The Alvin needs at least two hours to reach the liner 13,000 feet beneath the surface.

The only person repeating the journey to the Titanic is Robert Ballard, the chief scientist who led the first expedition. Veterans of last year's trip were kept behind to give other people a chance to see the liner, Ms. Rabushka said.

The discovery of the Titanic fulfilled the lifelong dream of Ballard and former Titanic Historic Society president William H. Tatum IV, Ballard's close friend. The scientist hopes to lower a plaque onto the ship in memory of Tatum, who died five years ago.

The Titanic, touted as unsinkable, rammed an iceberg and went down April 15, 1912, during its maiden voyage. There were 705 survivors, mostly women and children.

The British steamer was spotted sitting upright on the ocean bottom last September by the Argo, an automobile-sized submarine developed by Ballard.

Philadelphia strike talks break off

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Negotiations aimed at ending a strike by 14,000 city workers broke off today between the city and the largest of two striking unions, and no new talks were scheduled as the walkout entered its eighth day with tons of rotting garbage piling up in the streets.

"I'm disappointed because I felt we had made substantial progress over some 16 hours of negotiations," Mayor W. Wilson Goode told reporters in his City Hall office shortly after talks broke off at 2:46 a.m.

"It was my hope that we could have ended this strike by noon. All the ingredients were there for a settlement."

Goode made plans for residents to get rid of their garbage — an announcement he had delayed Monday while negotiations showed progress.

State mediator Edward Feehan said no new talks were scheduled between the city and the union representing blue-collar workers.

Asked if there was progress, Feehan said, "No, I'm not encouraged." He declined to elaborate on what specifically caused the breakdown, but said wages were not discussed.

"We still have those issues open that for the most part have been open," Feehan said.

The announcement came shortly after word of optimism from Earl Stout, president of District Council 33 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, which represents about 11,500 striking blue-collar workers.

Stout, whose district includes more than 6,000 Streets Department employees who normally collect 3,200 tons of garbage a day, said before midnight that he expected an agreement within hours.

Stout had said sticking points were the city's use of outside contractors for union work, a dispute over city payments to the union's health and welfare fund, and wages.

"The major sticking point was insistence on the part of Mr. Stout that all contracting out, subtracting, cease immediately and that, of course, is totally and completely unacceptable," Goode said.

"There is necessarily some contracting out in any government of this size. That demand is impossible to meet."

District 33 negotiators were not available for comment early today.

Meanwhile, negotiations continued with AFSCME District Council 47, which represents some 2,500 professional and technical white collar workers.

"We made District 47 a wage offer, which also included other benefits, and we are waiting for a response," the mayor said.

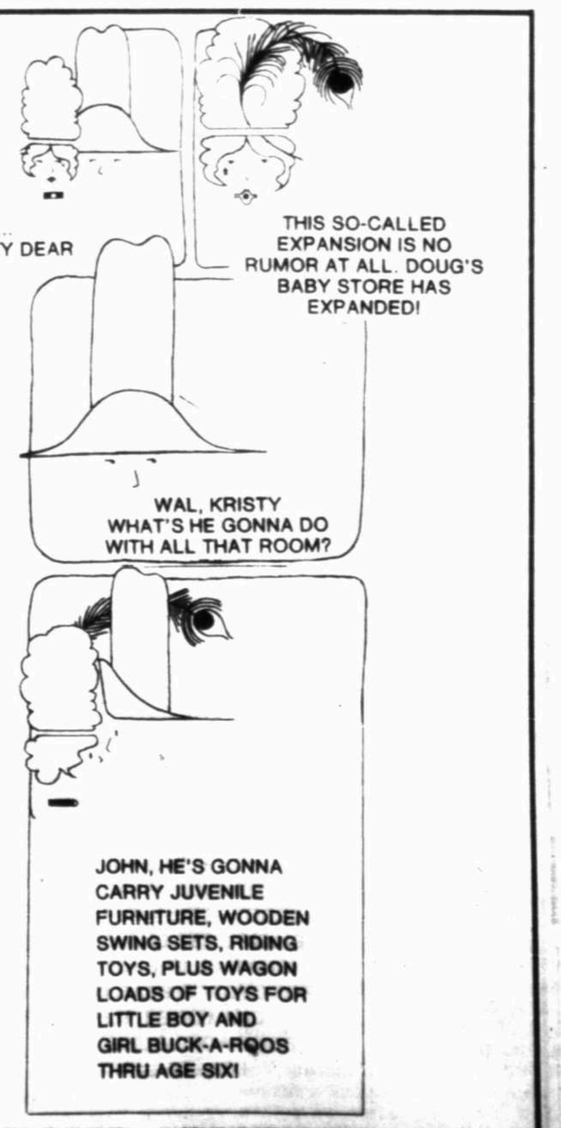

Goode said he wanted the talks to continue but Feehan recessed them "because in his opinion no further progress could have been made."

A major victory

Working women won a major victory recently when the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that sexual harassment on the job is illegal even when its victim suffers no economic loss. The court's unequivocal ruling constitutes a major advance for sexual equality and for decency in the workplace.

All nine justices agreed with Chief Justice-designate William H. Rehnquist that sexual harassment of an employee violates federal laws against sex discrimination if it creates "a hostile or abusive work environment." This same common-sense standard already had been adopted by the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and upheld by several lower courts.

Clearly, a woman faces the most reprehensible form of job discrimination if her supervisor makes sexual favors a condition of employment or promotion. Unfortunately, despite federal and state laws against sex discrimination, reported cases of physical and psychological abuse of women employees by male supervisors have increased nearly 50 percent since EEOC began keeping records in 1981.

The Supreme Court case involved a lawsuit filed by Mechelle Vinson, a former assistant branch manager of Meritor Savings Bank in Washington, D.C. Miss Vinson alleged she was sexually harassed on the job and forced to have sex with her supervisor. Although Miss Vinson acknowledged consenting to some of the acts, she said she did so only out of "fear of losing her job." A U.S. District Court judge dismissed the case because Miss Vinson did not contend that the alleged harassment hurt her economically. The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reinstated the suit and its decision was upheld by the Supreme Court.

Not surprisingly, this court's decision left some unanswered questions. For example, trial courts must determine whether employers are liable for damages when the employer was unaware of the harassment; whether to admit evidence of a complainant's allegedly provocative clothing and behavior; and the standards of proof and credibility necessary for a victim to win a judgment.

Nevertheless, the Supreme Court's unanimous decision in its first sexual harassment case leaves no doubt that the Civil Rights Act of 1964 protects women from unwelcome sexual advances that create an offensive working environment. Every employer in the nation should instruct their supervisors that sexual harassment is a violation of company policy and federal law.

Craig's actions unselfish

During the spring elections for county commissioner of Precinct 2, the Reporter-Telegram endorsed Guy McCrary. The primary reason you offered was a need for change. Although I disagreed with your endorsement, I do respect your right to publish your opinion.

As a candidate I was defeated in the May primary. In the runoff I supported Wally Craig because I felt we share a similar philosophy. This week Mr. Craig donated the balance of his campaign treasury to help two volunteer fire departments in the rural areas of his precinct. His unselfish actions are an example of what I meant by philosophy.

It has been said the true measure of a man is his actions when he stands to gain nothing. Mr. Craig does not live in these rural areas and he can no longer hope to secure our votes. However, he still has six months to serve as our county commissioner and at a time when the county does not have the funds to help these departments provide fire protection to the rural areas he showed a real concern for the people he represents. By doing this I believe Mr. Craig demonstrated the qualities of a true "government servant".

If spending more money could have persuaded a few more voters, I wish he had spent this money on his campaign. But the campaigns are now history. I simply want to recognize Wally Craig's contribution and say I think he has served the people of Midland with integrity and dignity.

While I still wish I had gathered the majority of votes, I count myself a winner for the friendships I made during the campaigns. I wish Guy McCrary well and hope someday I have the opportunity to write a letter equally complimentary of his actions.

Action saved tax dollars

Our tax dollars were saved thanks to the action of County Commissioner Wally Craig and the Commissioners' Court. It was brought to the attention of the court on March 24, 1986, that the wording on the bid for aggregate to be purchased by the county should be changed. Commissioner Craig moved that the bid be returned to the bidders unopened and the aggregate rebid.

After the rebid, the Commissioners' Court awarded the bid to the low bidder on June 23, 1986. Based on the price paid by the City of Midland for aggregate to be used for the same purpose, this one action by the court saved us, the taxpayers, $148,656.

I would also like to thank County Engineer Bill Harral who inspected the materials to be used and rejected the "apparent" low bidder of Grade 3 because it did not meet the gradation requirements as specified in the Texas Highway Department Handbook.

On April 8, 1986, the Midland City Council awarded the bid for aggregate which was to be used on the streets of Midland. If the City of Midland had followed the same procedure that Midland County did, the city would have realized a savings of $80,330.

After all it is only our tax dollars. What difference does it really make? About $228,989.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, July 8, the 189th day of 1986. There are 176 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 8, 1835, the Liberty Bell in Philadelphia cracked as it was rung for the funeral for Chief Justice John Marshall.

On this date:

In 1663, King Charles II of England granted a charter to Rhode Island.

In 1776, a Col. John Nixon gave the first public reading of the Declaration of Independence to a crowd gathered at Independence Square in Philadelphia.

In 1889, The Wall Street Journal was first published.

In 1919, President Woodrow Wilson received a tumultuous welcome in New York City after his return from the Versailles Peace Conference in France.

In 1950, Gen. Douglas MacArthur was named commander-in-chief of United Nations forces in Korea.

Ten years ago: the Indonesian government said the death toll from an earthquake and landslides on the Indonesian part of the island of New Guinea had surpassed 5,000.

Five years ago: dock workers in Poland went on strike with the support of Solidarity leader Lech Walesa. It began the first major wave of labor unrest since Solidarity and the government agreed to a strike moratorium four months before.

Today's birthdays: ABC News executive Roone Arledge is 55. Singer Steve Lawrence is 51. Ballerina Cynthia Gregory is 40. Actress Kim Darby is 38.

Thought for today: "A good storyteller is a person who has a good memory and hopes other people haven't." — Irvin Cobb, American humorist (1876-1944).

Gorbachev could learn from Fed PR

WASHINGTON — The Soviets have been criticized — rightly — for their reluctance to level with their own people and the rest of the world about the Chernobyl nuclear disaster.

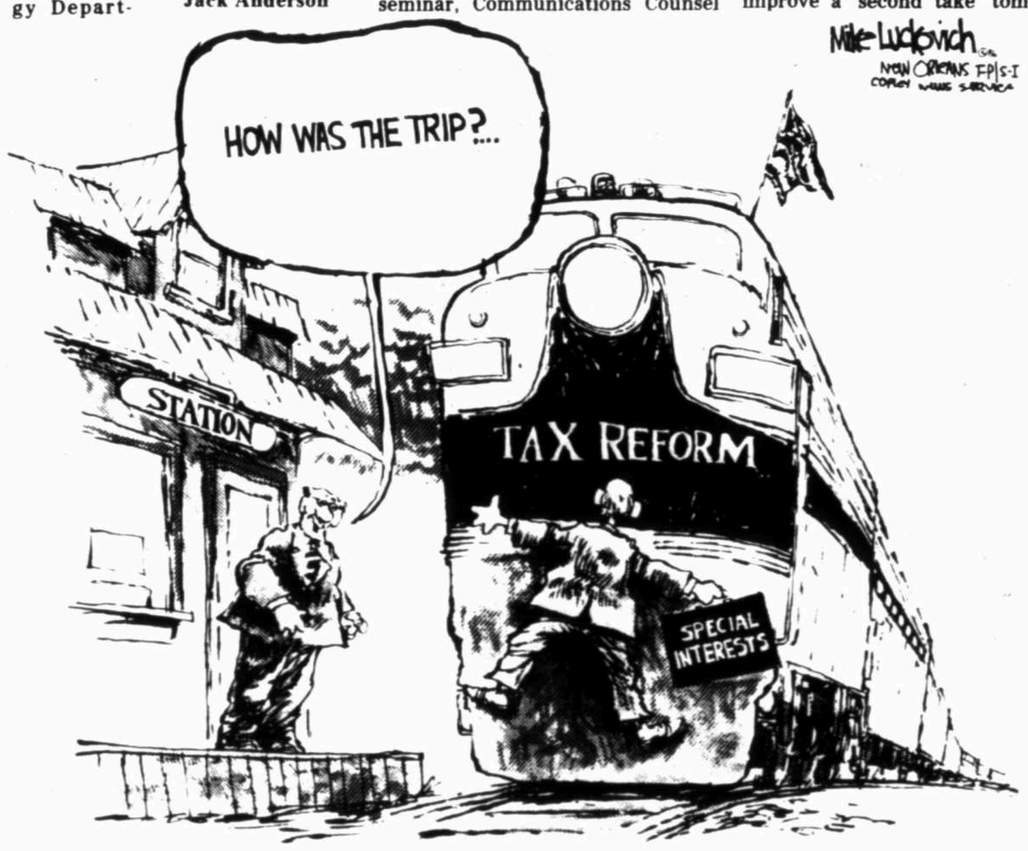

Jack Anderson

Maybe they should have hired the public relations consultant that two U.S. federal agencies retained after the Three Mile Island nuclear accident of 1979.

The Energy Department and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission share regulatory responsibility for the plant outside Harrisburg, Pa., that came dangerously close to a meltdown. The agencies were evidently dissatisfied with the static they got from the media and from Congress immediately following the accident.

So in 1982, the two agencies laid out $10,000 for a "Witness and Media Skills Clinic" that would teach their people how to do a better job of answering questions from bothersome reporters and members of Congress.

The three-day session, attended by federal officials and personnel from a private Three Mile Island contractor, was held at the Marriott Hotel in Harrisburg. Our associate Corky Johnson has learned that the Dallas-based consulting firm that ran the seminar, Communications Counsel of America, has since conducted similar courses for several other contractors that hold federal nuclear energy contracts.

The aim of the seminar was clearly to make the federal regulatory agencies look good, even if that meant covering up the seriousness of the situation. According to various memos and course notes, the training sessions included:

— "Cold Turkey Mini-Hearings. With your teammates, you will respond to cross-examination by an attorney and members of another panel, defending your company against some of the charges expected to come from the opponents."

— "Mike-in-the-Mouth Interviews. On-camera (we) will conduct a 3- to 5-minute 'benchmark' interview with you. Use your interview as a tool to improve a 'second take' tomorrow and to track your progress."

— "Avoiding Traps in Media Interviews. Adapting the cross-examination model to interview situations. 'Bridge' to public benefits and to your game plan."

The consultants coached regulatory officials in detail on "composure techniques" to withstand the rigors of congressional hearings. "Accept that you are uptight," the agency bureaucrats were advised. "Lean away from the battle/confrontation slightly. Straighten spine, shoulders, back. Breathe! Make a comforting move (then) move body into battlefield."

If despite proper posture and breathing, the questioning seemed to be going downhill, the seminar participants were taught to watch for certain "alarm responses," which include breaking out in a cold sweat, quivering voice and irregular breathing. To make sure these dreadful symptoms were easily recognizable, the seminar sessions were videotaped.

Some "Coaching Steps" for the seminarians included this succinct PR gem: "(Give) impression that things are going well. ... Avoid embarrassment. Avoid traps. Be careful you don't trap yourself. What position do you want public to hear?"

They were also told how to "handle questions for which I don't want to give the answer but I still want to look good," and were given this Kremlin-style warning: "Control what goes into the record or the minds of the listeners."

One star pupil was a TMI contractor executive, who acknowledged in a seminar test paper that TMI radiation detectors had malfunctioned and were potentially dangerous. If talking to the manufacturer, he would say the devices had been "very misleading," he wrote. But "if critic is an anti-nuke" he would say that "these are radiation monitors, not safety-related equipment, and therefore are not required to operate correctly under accident conditions."

Are you listening, Gorbachev?

ABM pledge could render SDI meaningless

WASHINGTON — The arms control lobby, oiled by Republicans who care less about nuclear talks than stockpiling political assets for the election campaign, is concocting an offer for Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev: a five- to seven-year U.S. pledge not to withdraw from the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty (ABM).

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The concern of arms control skeptics who regard the SALT treaties, including ABM, as Trojan horses, is that President Reagan might accept such a noose for his Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) without realizing its terminal potential.

"White House aides are pushing this" (the no-withdrawal pledge), one arms control authority told us. They are doing so with assistance from political operatives and candidates who have no special love for arms control but are desperate to continue Republican control of the Senate by exploiting U.S.-Soviet harmony this fall capped by a post-election summit.

Their allies are Gorbachev's beguiling propaganda, the domestic arms control lobby and some NATO allies. Hard-liners, reflecting what has been the president's own conviction, predict that if the present ABM treaty is modified to accommodate Soviet fears of strategic defense — Reagan's No. 1 military objective — SDI will erode. Once erosion starts, they insist, it can not be stopped.

Evidence is at hand. It took more than five years before the president could override detentist diplomatic advisers and renounce SALT II, despite many formal U.S. charges of Soviet violations. Indeed, even though the treaty was never ratified — and actually expired last winter — pressures not to undercut it were irresistible until the middle of Reagan's second term.

As of now, the ABM treaty gives either side the right to withdraw six months after serving notice. Gorbachev's brilliance in selling the Soviet viewpoint and exploiting the negotiating weaknesses inherent in any democracy is both recognized and feared by Reagan's top strategists. Gorbachev has asked for a 15- to 20-year freeze on the ABM treaty. But a five- to seven-year moratorium would put his disabling foot on the neck of SDI, the system that Reagan claims may in time place the U.S. beyond Soviet nuclear threats.

In return, Gorbachev offers nebulous reductions in the particular Soviet arsenal that is taking on characteristics of a first-strike capability: land-based heavy missiles.

This is the old Soviet game of defense-offense trade-offs: The U.S. renounces or scales back on defense, and the Soviets do likewise on offense. In fact, however, in return for major American concessions on antiballistic missile defense 15 years ago, the Soviet response in reducing their offense is still awaited.

Instead, long before Reagan finally said the U.S. was no longer bound by SALT II, Moscow was producing mind-boggling new land-based systems like the mobile SS-25, declared by the U.S. to be a violation of SALT II. High administration officials tell us that no fewer than 72 SS-25s, grouped in roughly eight separate bases, are now deployed — with an expectation of double that number a year from now.

Even on the defense side the Soviet Union has been taking advantage of the U.S. by violating the ABM treaty, including the illegal radar it has placed near Krasnoyarsk.

On a brief visit here last week, no less an authority than the new French defense mninister, Andre Giraud, emphasized what pro-ABM arms controllers sometimes forget: that "the Soviets have ... made considerable efforts on defense and seem to be going on with them" — possibly, he deliberately implied, in violation of the ABM treaty. He dismissed as contemptible a suggestion that the U.S. might also be violating the treaty.

A five-year pledge to abide by that treaty might be marginally acceptable to SDI managers — if they could believe the Soviets would modify the treaty to accommodate testing and other non-research functions and if they could also believe that the moratorium would not be extended.

That would be the method of selling the president on the moratorium. One can anticipate silken words as the argument builds to give Gorbachev only a small slice of what he wants, assuring a cozy summit mood for Republican success in November: Your SDI, Mr. President, will not be burdened by such a short time constraint and it may bring big reductions in their land-based heavies.

The issue comes to a head in the White House within the next few weeks. If the president is persuaded to give up the U.S. right to get out of the ABM treaty on six months' notice, rough agreement hailed as the foundation for a new arms treaty could be reached just before the Nov. 4 election — the end of the next session of the Geneva arms talks.

That could indeed make an election night for Republican partying. It could also bury SDI, the sharpest bargaining chip the U.S. has.

CHARLEY REESE

Free trade isn't all red, white and blue!

Republicans in particular and conservatives in general are making a big mistake on the trade issue. They are on the wrong side of it. Free trade is one of those theories that sounds like it ought to work but, in fact, doesn't.

Charley Reese

The torrent of free trade propaganda issuing forth from mouths and duplicating machines is all hiss, roar and rhetoric. I've yet to see any of it which offered any evidence for its claims.

The gist of the argument against protective tariffs runs like this, as expressed by a professor in a recent Heritage Foundation release opposing protection for the shoe industry: "The long run effect of protecting an industry from the rigors of competition is that it becomes lethargic, less competitive, and ever more reliant upon governmental handouts," said Tom DiLorenzo, an associate professor of economics at George Mason University.

Now, this is an assertion. What evidence does he offer to prove the truth of it? Nothing. He spends most of his paper playing a statistical game purporting to show the cost of protecting American shoe manufacturers. The trouble with statistical proofs is that they amount to chasing your own tail. Statistical arguments rest on assumptions and arbitrary definitions.

If you assume A equals 3 and B equals 2, then I can demonstrate that A plus B equals 5. Sure, but the important question is, are the original assumptions about the values of A and B correct? Only empirical testing can tell you. DiLorenzo talks about the alleged higher cost of shoes if American jobs are protected, but he never talks about the higher cost of welfare, unemployment, retraining and relocation if they are lost. He has stacked the deck. He is arguing, not conducting an objective study.

If what he asserts is true about the bad effects of protection, then I would expect that Japanese industry would, by now, be mighty lethargic, uncompetitive, and dependent on governmental handouts. After all, the Japanese government certainly protects its industries and has for decades. Last time I checked, nobody — especially in Detroit — was characterizing Japanese industry as lethargic and uncompetitive.

I think free trade ideologues should also explain why, if their theory is true, that the United States developed into one of the greatest and most prosperous industrial nations on earth — behind a wall of protective tariffs. I've never seen a free trader address this issue. In the great heyday of American basic industry, from the Civil War up until World War I, we protected our basic industries.

One of the intellectually dishonest tricks employed in this debate is to pose the question as an all or nothing proposition. Something so complex as trade is never an all or nothing proposition. It is always a matter of degree. In the time of high tariffs on imports, we continued to export and to import. In the time of low tariffs, we continue to export and to import. It is not an either-or proposition.

The fundamental fact is that while we are roughly 25 percent of the world market for just about anything you can think of, we are stumbling along with eight million people unemployed. Why should that be? Part of the answer is because government trade policy is wrong.

Multinational corporations have moved and are continuing to move American industry overseas to take advantage of cheap labor. Since they export back to the American market, they lobby for free trade.

Multinational banks lobby hard and manipulate monetary policy to encourage foreign countries to sell their exports and to cut down on their imports. Why? Simple answer. Only by selling their exports can foreign debtor nations earn the money to pay their bank loans. These two groups have a vested, selfish interest in a free trade policy for the U.S.

The Constitution, however, did not create a government to serve multinational corporations and bankers. It created a government to serve the American people. It is the welfare of the American people that must concern Washington, not the profits of cheap-labor border-jumpers or the loan portfolios of megabanks.

Detectives escort Juan Gonzales, 43, in a Staten Island police station after he was arrested following a stabbing rampage aboard the Staten Island Ferry. Police said two passengers were killed and nine others were injured in the attack Monday.

Man kills two, wounds nine on ferry

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Edward I.Koch has ordered an investigation into why a hospital released a 43-year-old homeless man from psychiatric observation only two days before he killed two people and wounded nine others with a sword, officials said.

Juan Gonzalez, who has been charged with second-degree murder and assault and other charges, said he was acting on God's orders Monday morning, when he carried out his attack on a Staten Island ferry carrying up to 500 passengers, police said.

Gonzalez was subdued by a former policeman who fired a gun to make him surrender after a five-minute rampage.

Koch said Gonzalez was taken to Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center for observation on Thursday after acting strangely at a men's shelter and saying "Jesus told him to kill." He was released Saturday, the mayor said.

The New York Times reported that the hospital had diagnosed Gonzalez as having a psychotic paranoid disorder, but he was ordered released once he promised to seek psychiatric care at another hospital.

Koch ordered the city's mental health commissioner to investigate procedures surrounding the case and issue a report by Friday.

"It was bedlam," said Edward del Pino, who subdued the man. "Everyone was running past me incoherently screaming."

Del Pino, who was heading home from his job as a night security guard, said he asked a woman what was happening and she replied, " 'I don't know. Everyone's running, so I'm running too.'"

The 55-year-old del Pino said he pushed through the mob to where Gonzalez stood over a woman and "to my horror, I see him going up and down, lunging down repeatedly with the sword."

"I yelled, 'Drop it!'" he said.

He also shot in Gonzalez' direction and Gonzalez dropped the weapon.

Del Pino made Gonzalez sprawl across a seat and warned him, "If you move, you're dead."

Deputy Police Commissioner Richard Condon called the 24-year police veteran a hero.

When asked about Gonzalez' motive, Condon replied, "He said God told him to do it."

Condon said Gonzalez told police he was homeless and a "boat person" from Cuba who came to the United States in March 1977.

At an arraignment, Gonzalez was ordered held without bail and sent to Kings County Hospital for a 30-day evaluation, said Sgt. John Venetucci, a police spokesman.

Gonzalez boarded the ferry Monday with the 26-inch-long sword concealed in newspapers, Condon said.

Annamarie Zervoulei, 16, of Staten Island, said she was traveling with her aunt and reading a newspaper when suddenly people screamed, "'There's a maniac!'"

"My back was toward him. My aunt yelled at me to get down. There were a whole bunch of people on the floor and he swung it around and it hit me in the back," said Miss Zervoulei, who was listed in fair condition at St. Vincent's Hospital.

Slain were Jordan Walker, 61, of Staten Island, and Rose Cammarota, in her late 60s, of Manhattan, officials said.

NATION IN BRIEF

EPA finally sets standards for arsenic emitting plants

WASHINGTON (AP) — After six years, the Environmental Protection Agency has announced final air pollution standards for arsenic emissions by copper smelters, glass factories and some arsenic plants.

As expected, EPA's final arsenic rule Monday does not regulate emissions from lead and zinc smelters, zinc oxide plants, cotton gins and certain other arsenic plants. The agency said reductions in emissions could be achieved only by closing those plants or imposing controls that "are excessive compared to any small health benefits that might result."

Arsenic is found in many ores. It is used to provide clarity in some glass products and in some pesticides. Small amounts are an important constituent of semiconductors used in electronics.

It is strongly suspected of causing lung and skin cancer in humans.

Army kicks smoking habit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army has formally kicked off its campaign against smoking with the service's top officer urging commanders to exercise common sense and avoid overzealous enforcement.

"As caring and concerned leaders, we must exercise sound and reasonable judgment and carry out this policy in a gradual yet deliberate way," Gen. John A. Wickham Jr., the Army chief of staff, wrote in a memo.

"Commanders at all levels are expected to supervise the efforts taking place and to ensure that the individual rights of all personnel — smokers and non-smokers — are protected. Reasonableness and common sense must be guidelines in the execution of the policy."

Wickham's memo, which was dated July 2, was obtained Monday as the Army launched a program to make "non-smoking the norm for Department of Army-occupied buildings and work areas."

The program, initially outlined in early June, calls for a ban on smoking in Army vehicles or aircraft and new restrictions on smoking in offices.

Reagan gets new 747s

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president will be riding in greater luxury when he gets two new state-of-the-art Boeing 747 airliners to replace the aging presidential fleet of 707's now used for official trips, the Air Force has announced.

The Air Force on Monday awarded a $249.8 million contract to the Boeing Co. for two 747 airliners that will feature state-of-the-art communications equipment, an emergency medical facility and special work and rest areas for the president, his staff, the Secret Service and the news media.

The Air Force expects Boeing to deliver the first plane by November 1988 and the second in May 1989. If that schedule is met, the Air Force would have one of the 747's on hand just before President Reagan leaves office in January 1989.

Union sues for retirees

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal employees' union wasted little time after the Supreme Court declared a portion of the balanced budget law unconstitutional — quickly reinstituting a lawsuit over cost-of-living increases it says its retirees are owed.

The National Treasury Employees Union, representing approximately 110,000 present and former federal workers, including 9,000 retirees, said Monday the high court's declaration that the automatic trigger mechanism of Gramm-Rudman is unconstitutional "voided the March 1, 1986, presidential order canceling federal retiree COLAs."

The union said the Reagan administration's obligation, under the law, "to implement payment of the COLAs, retroactive to Jan. 2, 1986, is again effective. Non-payment of the COLAs constitutes a violation of (the administration's) statutory duty to the union retirees)."

Japanese rockets considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Faced with a crippled U.S. launch capability, McDonnell Douglas is now considering using a Japanese-built rocket stage to increase the lifting capacity of its Delta rocket, a spokesman said.

"We've had some informal discussions with Mitsubishi Heavy Industries about possible use of the second stage of their H-1 rocket for use on the Delta," Jeff Fister said in a telephone interview. "There is nothing definite. It's part of an effort we are looking at to expand the capability of the Delta."

The mating of a Japanese stage to an American rocket raises the possibility that future U.S. Air Force spacecraft could be launched on a partially Japanese booster, Aviation Week and Space Technology magazine said in Monday's edition.

The Delta is a NASA rocket but it is conceivable that, lacking other launch vehicles at a time when satellites are stacked up waiting for launch, the Air Force might consider the Delta.

New phones up for bid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Security Agency, as part of a move to tighten internal government security, has awarded initial production contracts to three major communication companies for a new generation of scrambler telephones.

The contracts, announced by the Defense Department on Monday, total $190 million and call for production of almost 50,000 of the new secure telephones for government offices.

Highs in 90s due

From Staff and Wire Reports

Today and Wednesday will continue to be hot with highs reaching the upper 90s, according to the National Weather Service at the Midland Regional Airport.

The low today and Wednesday will be near 70 with winds south at 5 to 15 mph.

Monday's high of 90 degrees was 13 degrees cooler than the record high of 103 degrees set in 1964. The overnight low of 66 degrees was 10 degrees warmer than the record low of 56 degrees set in 1952.

STATE

Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms are forecast for most of Texas through Wednesday.

Forecasters say most of the shower and thunderstorm activity will be confined to the afternoon and evening and warn that heavy rainfall is possible west of the mountains in Southwest Texas.

Forecasts call for fair to partly cloudy skies and continued warm to hot temperatures statewide through Wednesday.

Texas' weather pattern is under the domination of a surface ridge of high pressure.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 60s and 70s with a few readings expected to dip into the 50s in the mountains of Southwest Texas. Highs Wednesday will be mostly in the 90s, ranging from the 80s in far West Texas and along the coast to near 102 in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas.

Widely scattered showers and heavy thunderstorms were reported at dawn today offshore from the upper Texas coast. Some light showers were reported in far West Texas.

NATION

Rainstorms were scattered across the nation's midsection early today, while much of the eastern half of the nation continued to swelter.

The National Weather Service reported scattered showers and thunderstorms from the southwest Great Lakes across the northern and central Plains to the southern Rockies. Rain also was falling in parts of the Great Basin and the northern Pacific Coast.

Warm and humid weather was common again this morning from the southern Plains across the Ohio and Tennessee valleys to the Atlantic Coast. Early morning temperatures were generally in the 70s and 80s. On Monday, heat records were broken or tied in several eastern cities, including New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Atlantic City, N.J.

Rozelle requires NFL drug testing

NEW YORK (AP) — NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle, acting on his own, announced plans to implement a drug program for the coming season that would require mandatory random testing for players during the season with penalties that could ultimately result in a lifetime ban.

As Rozelle made his announcement at a news conference Monday, the National Football League Players Association contended his action represents an unauthorized change in the current collective bargaining agreement signed in 1982 and, thus, the membership cannot accept it.

"Bargaining is the proper method to discuss and resolve the matters of a new policy, and we will take all the necessary steps to assure that the integrity of our bargaining agreement itself is fully respected and preserved," NFLPA President Gene Upshaw said in a statement released by his Washington office. The NFLPA also announced that it would hold a news conference today in its San Francisco offices.

"I would have much preferred that management and the players reach agreement on it than to act independently," Rozelle, who said he notified the 28 club owners about his program by electronic mail, said.

Rozelle also said he had invited Upshaw to make a joint announcement of the program, which the commissioner estimates will cost $1 million a year and is scheduled to start with training camp physicals in July.

Under Rozelle's program, all users of prohibited substances will be placed under medical care as soon as they are identified through confirmed positive tests. That player will be tested on a continuing and confidential basis by Dr. Forest Tennant Jr., who was named NFL drug advisor and placed in charge of the program, for a period of 30 days. A relapse and positive test will take him off the roster for a minimum of 30 days at half pay and a subsequent relapse and positive test will permanently ban him from the NFL.

The league and team management will get involved only when a player is hospitalized for a substance abuse problem, according to Rozelle. Any player requiring hospitalization for substance abuse will be removed from the team's roster for at least 30 days and will receive 50 percent of his pay for that period. A second hospitalization would mean removal from the roster for a minimum of another 30 days with no pay. If the player relapses and tests positive again, he will be permanently banned from the NFL.

"I wouldn't say they are banned forever," Rozelle said, adding he would review each individual case because "every individual case is different."

A suspended or banned palyer would have an opportunity to appeal in a hearing before Rozelle. A banned player could apply for reinstatement after one year.

"I feel the collective bargaining agreement and the by-laws give me the obligation and the auhority to protect the health and welfare of the players and to preserve the public confidence in the NFL," Rozelle said.

The commissioner said he derived his authority from Article 8.13 (A) of the NFL Constitution and Bylaws and Article VIII of the Collective Bargaining Agreement.

Coaches support Rozelle

Associated Press

"I'm no longer a policeman," Green Bay's Forrest Gregg said. "I'm a football coach again."

Gregg's reaction came Monday after he learned of a plan by NFL Commissioner Petre Rozelle to introduce mandatory drug testing of players.

Gregg was among three NFL coaches who expressed immediate endorsement of the plan. Don Shula of the Miami Dolphins and Sam Wyche of the Cincinnati Bengals were the others.

"This is preventative medicine," Gregg said. "We're not trying to catch people. Every time we test I just hope and pray that we don't have a single guy that's positive on anything but it doesn't always work out that way."

Said Shula: "I was happy to hear that the commissioner is taking strong steps to combat drug abuse. In light of the recent deaths of (Maryland University basketball star) Len Bias and (Cleveland Browns defensive back) Don Rogers, I feel it is imperative that the National Football League does everything in its power to restore public confidence in our game and its players. There can't be anything more important."

Under Rozelle's program, all users of prohibited substances will be placed under medical care as soon as they are identified through confirmed positive tests. That player will be tested on a continuing and confidential basis by Dr. Forest Tennant Jr., who was named NFL drug advisor and placed in charge of the program, for a period of 30 days. A relapse and positive test will take him off the roster for a minimum of 30 days at half pay and a subsequent relapse and positive test will permanently ban him from the NFL.

The league and team management will get involved only when a player is hospitalized for a substance abuse problem, according to Rozelle. Any player requiring hospitalization for substance abuse will be removed from the team's roster for at least 30 days and will receive 50 percent of his pay for that period. A second hospitalization would mean removal from the roster for a minimum of another 30 days with no pay. If the player relapses and tests positive again, he will be permanently banned from the NFL.

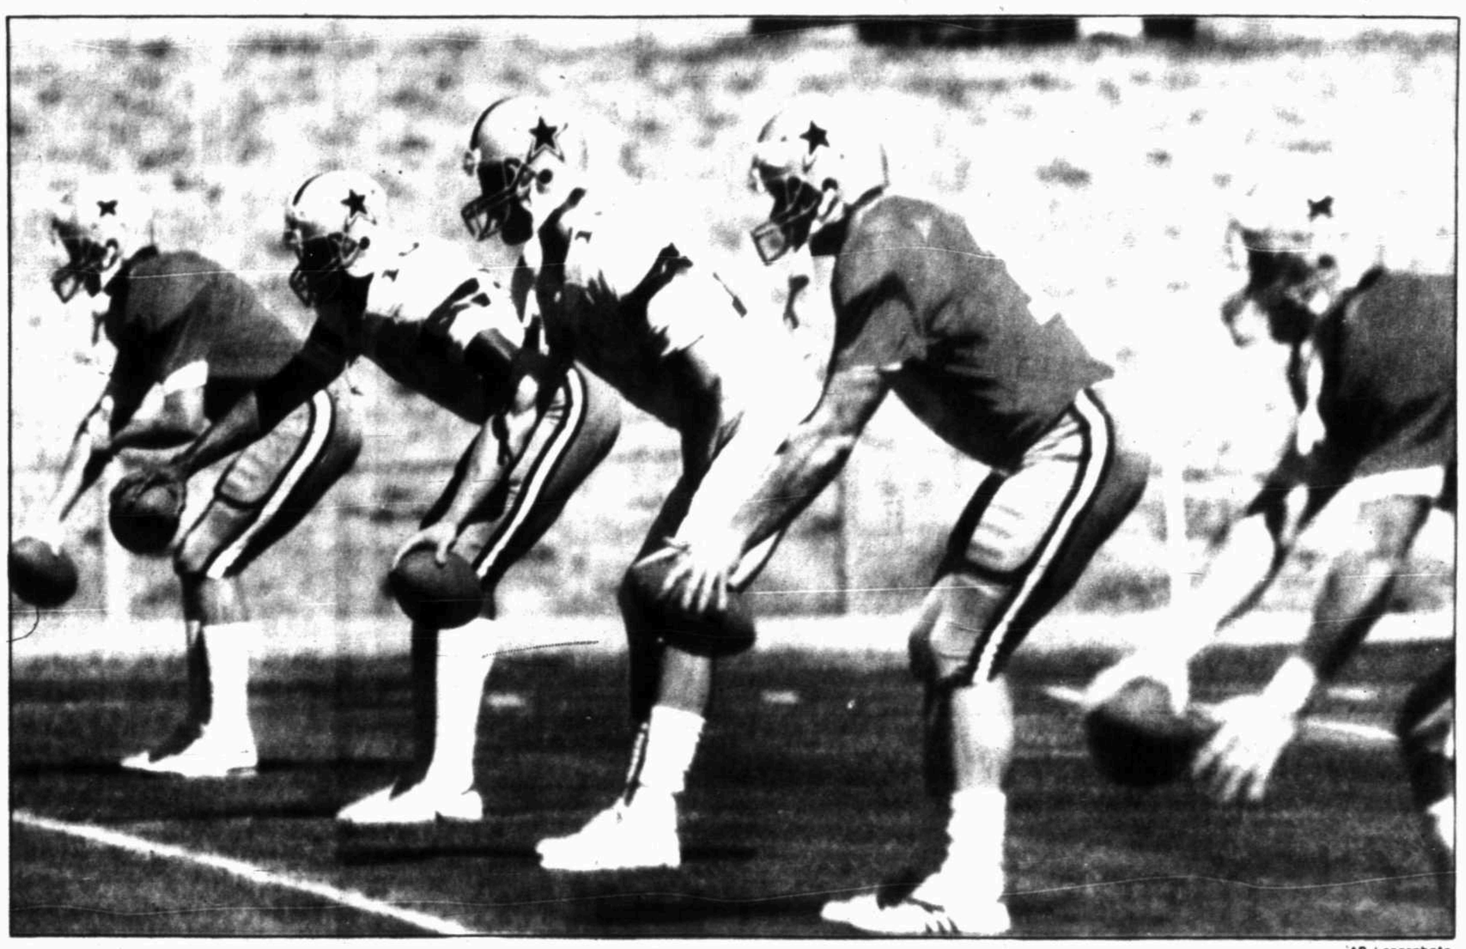

"Something has to be done," Wyche said. "Let's use a little common sense. People are dying around us. It's not just athletes.

"Enough has not been done. Something else needs to be added to the policies that are in place," Wyche added. "I think all the effort that could have been made was made with the NFL Players Association. I think a firmer statement had to be made and he (Rozelle) has done that."

Officials of professional baseball, basketball and hockey leagues withheld comment on Rozelle's plan. Harry Usher, commissioner of the rival United States Football League, said he would "have problems with random mandatory testing because I want to protect the players. I would want to go over the proposal further."

Meanwhile, one NFL player felt Rozelle's plan wouldn't eliminate drug use among players.

"It's a half solution," said Tony Elliott, the New Orleans Saints' nose tackle who kicked a cocaine habit that nearly ended his career."

Dallas starts without key rookies

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Dallas Cowboys vice president Joe Bailey said he would continue talks with the agents of the four unsigned draftees of the National Football League team.

"I came to camp early to meet with (No. 1 pick) Mike Sherrard's agent, Leigh Steinberg, but I have to go back to Dallas to take care of some unfinished business," Bailey said Monday as 75 Cowboys officially opened the league's summer training camps by practicing for 2½ hours in full pads.

The other unsigned players are Darryl Clack, Mark Walen and Max Zendejas. Bailey said he planned to return to Dallas today.

The 75 Cowboys in camp include 10 draft choices, 50 free agent rookies and first first-year players and 15 veterans.

Among the veterans is former Atlanta Falcons all-pro tight end Junior Miller, whom the Cowboys signed as a free agent in May. Miller was released last year by the New Orleans Saints and didn't play in 1985, and is a former Midland Lee star.

"Miller looked pretty good," said Cowboys coach Tom Landry. "Naturally, he's going to look good against the rookies, but we may have found ourselves a tight end who can help us."

The Cowboys did reach agreements Sunday with sixth-round choice Lloyd Yancey, 10th-round choice Bryan Chester and 12th-rounder Chris Duliban, Todd said. Terms were not disclosed.

Although the Cowboys' new five-year offer that Sherrard rejected Sunday is substantially higher than the original $865,000 package, agent Leigh Steinberg said the two sides are far from an agreement.

Steinberg wants $1.6 million for four years. Broken down to four years, the Cowboys have essentially offered $1.22 million to Sherrard.

Steinberg said he is basing his request on contracts signed last year by four NFL wide receivers drafted in the first round. Al Toon, Eddie Brown, Jerry Rice and Jesse Hester received an average of $1.576 million for four years.

"I can't accept a contract that is $300,000 short of what Jesse Hester got last year," Steinberg said. "Unfortunately, this is a serious money difference.

Steinberg said, meanwhile, that he would accelerate negotiations with the United States Football League's Arizona Outlaws, who have offered Sherrard $1.9 million for four years.

Joyner records record heptathlon

MOSCOW (AP) — Jackie Joyner of the United States became the first heptathlete to break the 7,000-point barrier and Americans beat the Soviets 49-39 in swimming medals as the Goodwill Games got into full swing.

Joyner captured 7,148 points, smashing the previous mark held by East Germany's Sabine Paetz by 202 points. She became the first U.S. woman to hold the world record in a multi-sport competition since Babe Didrickson, who held the old triathlon mark more than 50 years ago.

"Coming into this competition, I had set goals for myself," Joyner said. "I realized that the competition was out there, but my competition was against the scoreboard. I just concentrated on what I had to do."

...a new world record

DESPITE SENDING its second-line swimmers, the U.S. won six of eight events held Monday to beat the Soviet Union at the end of that sport's four days of competition. The U.S. team, minus its top athletes, who are training for the World Championships in Spain next month, won 49 medals, including 15 golds, compared with 39 overall and 13 golds for the Soviets.

Overall, the United States had 22 gold medals and 63 overall to 21 and 69 for the Soviets after Monday's competition.

Sean Killion of Cherry Hill, N.J. supplied the day's biggest upset when he edged former world record-holder Vladimir Salnikov of the Soviet Union in the men's 400-meter freestyle.

"I didn't think I could beat Salnikov," Killion said. "He is the best distance man around. I just wanted to give him a race but when I saw I could win, I just closed my eyes and pressed hard."

Killion was timed in 3 minutes, 51.91 seconds, .09 seconds ahead of Salnikov.

ANGEL MYERS, who started the U.S. wave of victories on the first day of swimming last Friday, completed the competition with four gold medals. She won the women's 400-meter freestyle and was part of the winning 400-meter medley relay.

She won the 50 and 100-meter freestyle events Friday. With a third-place in 200 breststroke, Myers had the most medals of any athlete in the games with five after the first four days.

Joyner began the heptathlon competition with an American record in the 100-meter high hurdles, 12.85. She continued with personal bests of 5 feet, 2 inches in the high jump, 48 feet, 5¼ inches in the shot put, and 23 seconds in the 200-meter sprint.

On Monday, she had a heptathlon world record with 23 feet in the long jump, and followed with a throw of 163 feet, 4 inches in the javelin. Joyner then capped her sensational seven events with a clocking of 2:10.02 in the 800 meters.

Other U.S. track victories included Antonio McKay in the 400, Floyd Heard in the 200 and Doug Padilla in the 5,000.

Women's shot put world record-holder Natalya Lisovkaya of the Soviet Union won her specialty at 70 feet, 1½ inches, while teammates Grigory Degtyarev took the decathlon with 8,322 points, Marina Stepnova won the women's 400 hurdles in 53.81 and Galine Chijstyakova captured the women's long jump with a leap of 23 feet 10¼ inches.

Another world record holder, Bulgaria's Stefka Kostidnova, won the women's high jump with a leap of 6 feet, 7 inches.

Goodwill Games

IN BASKETBALL, Cheryl Miller scored 20 points and Anne Donovan added 15 to lead the United States past Czechoslovakia 78-70, while the Soviet Union beat Bulgaria 82-56. The two superpowers meet Thursday night.

One of the few U.S defeats Monday came in women's volleyball, where North Korea beat the Americans in four games.

The first group of U.S. boxers arrived late Monday, but the Defense Department in Washington said it had told three more team members to stay home because of their positions in the military.

That brings to 12 the number of U.S. athletes barred by the Pentagon from competing in this multi-sport festival, according to the Turner Broadcasting System, which is sponsoring the games with the Soviet Sports Ministry. The Soviet agency, however, said the a total of 13 boxers were not participating.

Early today the Soviet Union's Ericka Salumae chopped five-hundredths of a second off her own world record in the women's 200-meter cycling sprint during qualification runs.

Salumae was clocked in 11.489 seconds, compared with her old mark of 11.494, registering the third world record of the five-day-old multi-sport festival.

Other early events today included the women's pentathlon, where Natalya Andreyeva of the Soviet Union took the lead after the shooting competition with 198 points, for a total of 1,088.

Horner slugs Badwill Games

While in the dangerous mode of thinking between the dots...

Maybe I'm misreading the Midland public, but I haven't heard any talk of Ted Turner's Goodwill Games. Of course, there is still almost two weeks to to go, but if Sunday's telecast from Moscow is an indication of things to come, it is an event worth missing.

Sunday, WTBS, Ted Turner's cable station, elected to show the Goodwill Games while Bob Horner, another of Turner's employees with the Atlanta Braves, was setting baseball on its ear with a four-homer game against Montreal. We saw the grand feat by way of replay after the fact was already known.

Meanwhile, the Goodwill telecast was showing a marathon that dealt mainly with runners in the back of the pack, leaving announcer Curt Gowdy saying repeatedly, "Just finishing a marathon is reward enough for these runners..."

How can a kid like Boris Becker have the nerve to win his second Wimbledon title in a row at the unripe age of 18? Doesn't he read the headlines? This is supposed to be the year of the oldsters like Jack Nicklaus, Don Baylor, Phil Niekro, Don Sutton, Willie Shoemaker and Raymond Floyd...

In the wake of the cocaine related deaths of Len Bias and Don Rogers, the issue of drug testing will receive more backers in the immediate weeks to come. NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle is taking the lead by announcing drug testing in professional football this year.

However, I'm not sure drug testing is the answer. Reporter-Telegram lifestyle editor David Forrest says, "Cocaine is God's answer to athletes that they are making too much money." He may have a point. Perhaps the answer is to see that athletes get paid no more money than sports writers and then you wouldn't have a cocaine problem...

After a woeful 1-5 swing through San Antonio, the three-day Texas League All-Star break couldn't have come at a better time for the Midland Angels. Maybe the rest will do some good, but the bad news is the 10-game homestand that begins Thursday starts with Shreveport, the hottest team in the Texas League with a 13-5 second half record...

The decline of oil prices reaches beyond Midland. Take the case of one Eddie "I'm Mad Too" Chiles, who was forced to sell his Texas Rangers to the Gaylord Broadcasting Company. It comes at a time when his Rangers are in first place, only a dream in years past.

At least, Chiles will come out ahead of some of his oilmen brethren in Midland and across the state. Chiles gets $5 million up front and $375,000 a month for the next decade, amounting to pretty good retirement program...

The biggest sports upset of the year may have come in Midland Monday. Joe Burdett won the Greater Midland Strat-O-Matic National League East baseball title over favorite Bob Cyphers. Burdett is known far and wide as a "basement dweller." Cyphers' luck seemed to change when he dropped out as sports anchor at KOSA-TV to become the station's news director. Is Cyphers now more interested in car wrecks than baseball scores?...

Clemens beaten again

Rangers fall from first place

Associated Press

Boston's Roger Clemens, who roared off to a 14-0 start, was outpitched by three castoffs Monday night and suffered his second straight defeat.

Rookie Jose Canseco and veteran Dave Kingman shelled Clemens with consecutive home runs in the sixth inning as the Oakland A's marked new Manager Tony LaRussa's debut with a 6-4 victory over the Red Sox. The A's, winning for only the third time in their last 22 road games, handed Clemens his second consecutive loss since he compiled the fifth best start in major-league history.

Clemens allowed seven hits and six runs, five of them earned, before being knocked out in the sixth inning. He struck out five, raising his total to 138, but his ERA jumped from 2.34 to 2.58.

Leading 3-1, Oakland scored three more runs in the sixth on Carney Lansford's infield hit, Canseco's 20th homer and Kingman's 18th.

Dave Stewart, who had made one previous start and nine relief appearances without a decision, was the winning pitcher. Stewart allowed eight hits, including a two-run homer by Dwight Evans, his 11th, in the sixth inning, before needing help from Dave Von Ohlen and Doug Bair in the seventh. Bair posted his second save by holding Boston hitless over the final 2 1-3 innings.

"I just didn't have any intensity tonight," Clemens said. "I was kind of sluggish. I don't know what it was. I felt good, I threw the ball real good, I had good velocity and everything. My intensity, though, just wasn't where I needed it to beat these guys."

Baseball Roundup

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Yankees 14, Rangers 3

Dave Winfield, who entered the game as a pinch hitter, collected the 2,000th hit of his career and drove in four runs. The Yankees pounded four Texas pitchers for 14 hits, including home runs by Don Mattingly and Claudell Washington, and took advantage of 10 walks in making right-hander Scott Nielsen's major-league debut a success.

Nielsen went seven innings, allowed nine hits, walked one and struck out five. Two of the hits were solo homers by Pete Incaviglia and Oddibe McDowell. Loser Charlie Hough lasted only 2⅔ innings, giving up six hits and seven runs while walking six.

Winflied flied out in the third inning but got his 2,000th hit with an RBI triple in the fifth and added a three-run double in the sixth.

The loss, combined with California's victory, knocked the Rangers out of first in the AL West.

Angels 3, Brewers 1

Wally Joyner hit a one-out bases loaded triple in the 16th inning to lift California over Milwaukee and put the Angels into first place in the AL West.

Dick Schofield lead off the Angels 16th with triple to right-center off reliever Dan Plesac, 5-6, the fourth Milwaukee pitcher. After Jerry Narron's groundout to second, Plesac walked pinch-hitter George Hendrick and Gary Pettis to load the bases. Joyner then tripled into the left field corner to clear the bases. Terry Forster, 4-1, was the winner. Doug Corbett got the save, although the Brewers scored in the bottom of the inning on two walks and Jim Gantner's RBI single.

Orioles 8, Royals 1

Floyd Rayford, Cal Ripken and Fred Lynn hit home runs while Mike Boddicker, 11-4, scattered eight hits in snapping a personal three-game losing streak. The Royals' run came on Steve Balboni's 17th homer after the Orioles had taken a 5-0 lead against Charlie Leibrandt.

The setback extended the defending world champions' team record losing streak to 10 games.

White Sox 4, Indians 3

Chicago pushed across a run in the bottom of the ninth to snap Cleveland's seven-game winning streak. With the score tied, Julio Cruz opened the inning with a single off Ernie Camacho. John Cangelosi sacrificed Cruz to second and Ozzie Guillen singled him to third. Harold Baines, who earlier had three hits, including the 1,000th of his career, was walked intentionally, filling the bases, and Greg Walker delivered a sacrifice fly.

Blue Jays 7, Mariners 5

Jimmy Key set a career high by striking out 10 Seattle batters and Lloyd Moseby drove in Toronto's final runs with a single and homer. The Mariners are runaway AL leaders in strikeouts, having fanned 629 times. They fanned 14 times against three Toronto pitchers, the 17th time this season they have reached double figures.

Key scattered eight hits before giving way to Tom Henke after the first two Seattle batters in the top of the eighth reached safely. Bill Caudill recorded the final out of the inning and struck out the side in the ninth for his first save of the season.

Twins 10, Tigers 8

Minnesota's Kent Hrbek hit his 20th home run of the season and Kirby Puckett had a single, double and triple. Mike Smithson got the victory despite allowing seven runs, including a pair of solo homers to Lou Whitaker. Keith Atherton relieved in the Tigers' four-run seventh inning and earned his sixth save.

Greg Gagne's RBI double in the fourth broke a 3-3 tie, and Kirby Puckett followed with an RBI single. Jeff Reid and Gary Gaetti added two-run singles for Minnesota.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Astros 12, Expos 1

Houston's Glenn Davis homered twice and drove in five runs while Mike Scott allowed four hits and struck out seven in seven innings. The game was tied 1-1 when Davis hit a two-run homer off Expos starter Dennis Martinez in the third inning. Davis, who came into the game tied for the NL lead with 17 homers, hit a three-run shot in the fifth, giving the Astros a 6-1 lead. Houston scored five runs in the ninth, four on Kevin Bass' grand slam.

Reds 7, Mets 6

Cincinnati's Dave Parker broke a 4-4 tie with a two-run homer in the seventh inning and John Franco earned his 13th save with 2⅓ innings of scoreless relief. Ron Robinson, who relieved starter Bill Gullickson in the sixth inning, won his seventh decision without a loss — one victory short of the best start ever by a Reds' pitcher — despite giving up a leadoff homer to Howard Johnson and an RBI single to Gary Carter in the seventh. Darryl Strawberry and starting pitcher Rick Aguilera also homered for New York.

Phillies 7, Braves 3

Shane Rawley, backed by Gary Redus' two home runs and solo shots by Juan Samuel and John Russell, won his seventh straight decision. The Phillies took a 2-0 lead in the first inning on consecutive home runs by Redus and Samuel. It was the 25th time in major-league history a team's first two batters homered in the first inning. Rawley, 11-4, scattered 11 hits and six walks in eight innings. Loser David Palmer gave up all four Philadelphia homers.

Dodgers 1, Cardinals 0

Alejandro Pena, combining with three relief pitchers on a two-hitter, won his first game in nearly two years and Ken Landreaux scored the only run on an error by St. Louis outfielder Vince Coleman in the first inning. Landreaux singled with two out off Bob Forsch and Len Matuszek hit a hard grounder off the glove of third baseman Terry Pendleton for a single. Landreaux went to third on the hit and came home when left fielder Coleman overran the ball for an error.

Pirates 3, Padres 1

Sid Bream's three-run homer in the tenth inning broke up a scoreless game and lifted Pittsburgh to the victory. Barry Bonds opened the tenth with a walk off Rich Gossage, stole second as Bill Almon struck out and went to third on Johnny Ray's one-out infield hit. Bream then hit a 2-2 pitch deep into the right field seats for his 11th homer. Cecilio Guante got the win despite allowing an unearned run in the bottom of the tenth.

Rose thinks Astros, Giants will fade

Associated Press

Without trying to ruffle any feathers, Pete Rose says teams like the San Francisco Giants and Houston Astros may soon be running out of steam in the National League West.

"I might be wrong," the Cincinnati Reds player-manager says, "but I think a couple of the teams in our division already have played through some real good periods, whereas, we haven't. ... We've had our bad baseball."

Meaning, Rose contends, that the surprise leaders in the NL West may just about have played out their string of successes for the year.

After Tuesday night's 7-6 victory in New York, the Reds trailed the division-leading Giants by just 7½ games. But, they were in fifth place, also trailing Houston, San Diego and Atlanta.

Rose downplayed the significance of having to leapfrog so many other teams in the West.

"If you get a situation where you're three games out in August, you can win one game and, in one night, go over two teams that are 2½ out," Rose says. "We've got four teams to pass. That's all I know."

Since the Reds last played the Mets, beating Dwight Gooden 3-2 in New York last May 11, Cincinnati has put together the best record in the NL West, 30-24.

"I think right now, the division is going to get even tighter," says Rose, whose team had a 5-12 record in April and fell out of the division lead by as many as 10½ games on June 14. "It may not even take 90 games to win. I'm not saying there aren't any good teams, just real good balance.

"You could have picked so many different teams in the West. Los Angeles, San Diego has a lot of talent, and Atlanta is better with (Manager Chuck) Tanner. Houston has always had a lot of good players. And you couldn't even make an evaluation of the Giants (because of the turnover)."

One thing Rose is sure of: His club is playing a lot better than it did the last time the Reds were in New York.

"After the All-Star Game, we have more home games than anybody in baseball," Rose says. The Reds begin an 11-game homestand two days after the All-Star Game. Of their 81 second-half games, 44 will be played at home, and 23 of their last 36 games are scheduled at home.

The Reds faced double jeopardy in the early going. Besides playing the majority of their schedule on the road, they had, at one time or another, five regular players hitting lower than .200, and the starting pitchers struggled. Seven different players have hit cleanup for the Reds, eight in the No. 5 spot. At the same time, the Reds don't have a single starter even at the .500 mark in pitching.

"Now, we've got some guys swinging the bat real good, and Tom Browning, John Denny and Bill Gullickson are pitching real well," Rose says. "When we are losing, it's by one run or so."

Dollar rebounds

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rebounded in Japan and Europe today in heavy speculative trading based on the market's judgment that it overreacted in bringing the U.S. currency down sharply on Monday. Gold also gained.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar recovered from Monday's post-World War II low of 159.25 yen prompted in part by Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's sweeping election victory on Sunday.

The dollar gained 1.40 yen to close at 160.65 yen, and later made more gains in London to reach 160.75.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Monday:

—2.1775 West German marks, up from 2.1695

—1.7740 Swiss francs, up from 1.7625

—6.9750 French francs, up from 6.9375

—2.4547 Dutch guilders, up from 2.4440

—1,495.00 Italian lire, up from 1,487.25

—1.3798 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3790

In London, the British pound was quoted lower at $1.5345, compared with $1.5375 Monday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $344.40 a troy ounce, compared with late Monday's $344.50. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $346.50 dollars.

In Zurich, the bid price was $345.90, up from $344.50 late Monday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose 0.97 to close at a bid $345.13.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $5.06 a troy ounce, down from Monday's $5.08.

Rates fall

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities dipped in Monday's auction to levels not seen since April.

The Treasury Department sold $7 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.85 percent, down from 5.99 percent last week. Another $7 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.85 percent, down from 5.96 percent last week.

The rates were the lowest since April 14 when three-month bills sold for 5.84 percent and on Sept. 2, 1977 when six-month bills averaged 5.84 percent.

The new discount rates understate the actual return to investors — 6.02 percent for three-month bills and 6.11 percent for six-month bills.

In a separate report, the Federal Reserve said the average yield for one-year Treasury bills was 6.36 percent last week, down from 6.54 percent the previous week. This interest rate is often used to change rates for homeowners with adjustable rate mortgages.

Stock market suffers steepest drop ever

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market took a steep drop Monday, sending the Dow Jones average to a record point loss in selling touched off by economic worries and bearish statements by some prominent analysts.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 61.87 to 1,839.00, exceeding its previous record point loss of 45.75 points on June 9 of this year.

Far greater percentage declines have occurred in the past, when the average was at lower levels. Monday's drop of 3.25 percent was barely one-fourth the size of the 12.9 percent loss the average suffered on Sept. 28, 1929.

But that was small consolation to traders counting up their losses after a decline that extended into all major stock groups.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange came to 138.23 million shares, against 108.26 million last Thursday.

Analysts said traders returned from the long July 4 weekend in an uneasy mood over evidence of continuing weakness in the economy.

A monthly survey conducted by the National Association of Purchasing Management found declines last month in production, employment and new orders. The trade group's composite index recorded its sharpest drop in nearly 2½ years.

For much of the time lately, brokers have been talking of sluggish business activity as a plus for the market, in the sense that it seems to increase the likelihood of another cut in the Federal Reserve's discount rate.

But by Monday observers said concern was mounting that a discount-rate cut had already been so widely forecast that the prospect had been fully taken into account by the market.

Adding to the market's weakness was the news that two well-known analysts — John Mendelson of Dean Witter Reynolds and Robert Prechter, publisher of an investment advisory service — had turned negative on the outlook for stocks.

Four times previously since the start of 1986, the Dow has posted single-day losses of 2 percent or more. On each of those occasions, the market snapped back quickly to move on to new highs. But analysts said the damage, on first inspection, looked a little more severe this time.

Profit-taking was evident in some stocks that have been strong lately, including Federated Department Stores, down 3¾ at 83¾; ITT Corp., down 3⅛ at 55; Coca-Cola, down 2⅛ at 41, and Philip Morris, down 5¼ at 71.

Other losers among the blue chips included International Business Machines, off 3¾ at 145¼; General Electric, off 3⅛ at 76¾, and Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing, off 4⅛ at 108⅜.

Radice Corp. was the day's biggest percentage loser among NYSE issues, down 2⅝ at 10. The company said it had an unexpected loss for the fiscal year ended June 30.

In the daily tally on the Big Board, declining issues outnumbered advances by nearly 6 to 1. The exchange's composite index dropped 4.24 to 140.43.

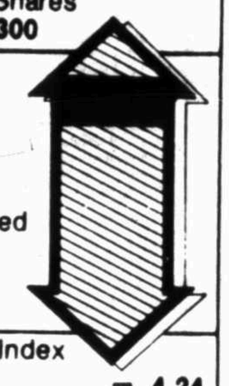

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 162.24 million shares.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials fell 9.57 to 271.51, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 7.74 at 244.05.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market tumbled 10.20 to 400.96. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 276.71, down 7.88.

Odessa firm reports expansion, new jobs

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — While some companies are economizing and laying off personnel, an Odessa company announced today it will expand its operations in the Permian Basin, as a result of the purchase of a Pennsylvania firm, said Greater Odessa Chamber of Commerce official Chuck Bernhard.

At a news conference in the chamber offices today, Harry A. Palmer, president of BSI-Bellows Systems Inc., said his company recently purchased most of the assets of Kopperman Industries, a Norristown, Pa. expansion joint business.

The business began in 1894 and is considered a pioneer in its field.

All inventories, production equipment, engineering drawings and customer records were included in the buyout, Palmer said.

The terms of the deal were not discussed.

Last month the first of about a dozen 18-wheel truckloads of equipment began arriving at the new BSI plant, 701 W. Murphy St., where National Supply and Machinery Co. was formerly located.

Palmer said the National Supply site just west of South Crane Avenue was acquired July 1.

The 11.4 acre site has three security-fenced buildings and 44,000 square feet of shops, offices and warehouse space.

BSI-Bellows is expected to leave its 13,000 square-foot facility at East Highway 80 and Reed Avenue by the end of the summer.

Palmer said the move will not interrupt production schedules.

Greater Odessa Chamber President John Landgraf said he appreciates BSI-Bellows' choice of Odessa as the site for its expanded activities.

"This is the type of development we like to see and proves the point that existing industry is still a major source of new jobs," he said.

"Bellows and other industries are realizing that the long-term growth potential of our area is great," said Landgraf.

The Odessa BSI plant now employs 22 people, and Palmer said he expected to add 20 to 30 permanent workers during the first year's operation of the expanded facility.

BSI also operates a second plant in Ventura, Calif., which serves the aerospace industry and supports the Odessa facility.

For nearly 10 years, until March 1980, BSI operated as the Bellows department of Wooley Tool & Mfg. in Odessa under Palmer's management.

When space limitations precluded further expansion, Palmer purchased his department from the Wooley Tool, named it Bellows Systems, and moved into larger quarters that is now to be vacated.

Palmer said BSI-Bellows has established a broad reputation for designing and building its own bellows-type exhaust systems for industrial engines and turbines.

By reducing fuel consumption, noise, air pollution, downtime and replacement costs, he said, these pressure-tight exhaust manifolds have found a ready market in such applications as pipeline booster stations, waterflood operations, offshore platforms and marine engines, as well as normal processing plants.

The company also has produced components for a number of military, commercial and private aircraft, as well as U.S. missile systems.

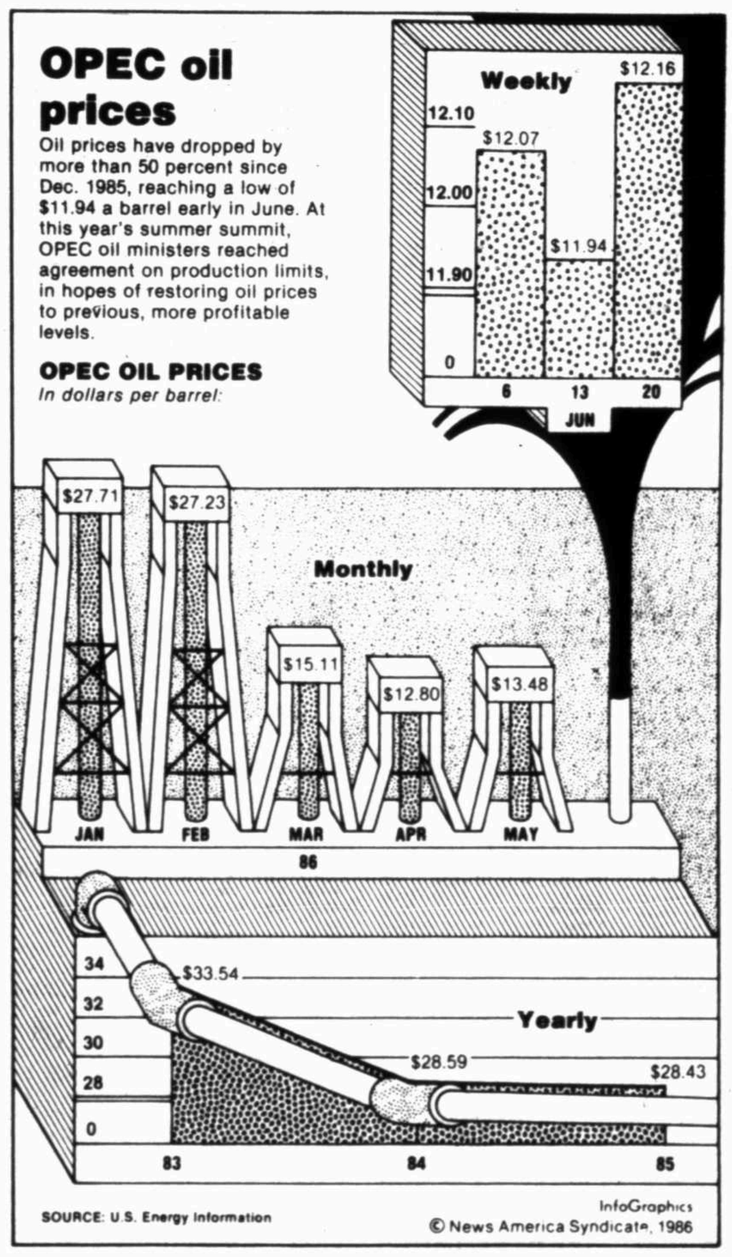

Its high-tech welding procedures are pre-qualified under numerous governmental, industrial and individual quality control codes.

Palmer said the company has been best known for the production of round, multi-ply metal bellows ranging in size from one-inch through 36-inch diameters.

Acquisition of Kopperman's production equipment, he said, will enable BSI to produce round, oval or rectangular configurations ranging to 16 feet and larger diameters.

"Since 1980," Palmer said, admitting the company has been hampered in the economic downturn of the oil industry. "We've seen sales multiply by a factor of about four.

"But, right now, we don't have time to mope," he said. "We're gearing up for better times ahead. We've diversified, but we expect the oil industry to remain a big part of BSI's market for many years to come,".

Oil states announce price cuts

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

MANANA, Bahrain — Oman and the United Arab Emirates were reported Monday to have cut their crude oil prices below $11 a barrel.

The report came as the aggregate production of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries soared to a five-year high of 19.5 million barrels daily.

The Middle East Economic Survey, an authoritative oil-industry publication, said Oman was charging its customers on the basis of $10.70 a barrel for June supplies, down $1.15 from May's average.

The United Arab Emirates has cut prices by $1.40 per barrel, to a range of $11-$10.60 for various grades. This compares with an average of $12.35-$11.80 for May, the publication said.

OPEC's 13 members, meanwhile, pumped more than 19.5 million barrels daily on the glutted market during June.

Black group reports on expansion

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

The Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs (MBCE) scored what Chamber president Robbyne Fuller considers a coup when Chevron Corp. was presented a corporate membership at Monday's meeting.

Ms. Fuller said the Chamber had made a strong effort to get Chevron to join, and that the MBCE has had inquiries from Conoco and Southwestern Bell as well.

Other business included discussion of the MBCE's recently purchased Lanier word processer, and James Fuller, vice president of education, encouraged MBCE members to come buy and take lessons on the processor. The Lanier would tie in with the Chamber's work with the junior chamber, he said. "I want us to consider as our primary objective training our young people in the area of data processing," he stated, adding that he would also like the Chamber to conduct more free enterprise seminars, especially to attract more young people in the community to entrepreneurship. "But you have to have a body in order to educate and put on these seminars. So we have to get on with our membership drive for the junior chamber," he noted.

Members also discussed leasing time on the Lanier to outside businesses, and decided to form a small committee to decide the details.

Ms. Fuller noted that the MBCE has bids out on other systems, and "it would be good for us to have several systems so we can set up a training center for the junior chamber, and other members."

Another major project the MBCE discussed was bringing a Texas black history exhibit, tentatively titled "Jubilee" to Midland as the Chamber's Sesquicentennial contribution. According to Fuller, a Texas Tech student has created reproductions of black cowboys and pioneers.

Judge approves repayment for stripper well operators

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — A federal judge approved a monumental oil overcharge settlement Monday, clearing the way for payment of as much as $5 billion to all 50 states, U.S. territories and possessions, refiners, airlines and other entities.

U.S. District Judge Frank G. Theis delayed disbursement of money for 30 days to filing of appeals. The main case at issue involved more than 40,000 claimants and an escrow fund of $1.433 billion paid by oil producers.

The litigation was the result of a disagreement over the classification of several thousand oil wells during government price controls that were in effect from 1973 to 1981.

Producers involved include the nation's major oil companies and dozens of smaller concerns.

Stripper wells — those that produce 10 barrels or less a day — were exempted from price controls as an incentive to keep them pumping. The U.S. Department of Energy denied stripper-well status for the wells in question.

When lawsuits were filed challenging that decision, Theis ordered producers to charge the higher stripper-well prices for their oil and put the difference between those prices and controlled prices into an escrow account.

Theis ruled in 1981 the DOE was wrong and should have classified the wells as strippers. The Temporary Emergency Court of Appeals in Washington, D.C., overturned his ruling.

The U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear the consolidated cases, and the appeals court sent the cases back to Theis in 1983 so he could supervise the distribution of money accumulating in the escrow account since 1977.

In November 1985, DOE and representatives of the claimant groups wanting a cut of the money began negotiating a settlement. DOE announced the agreement May 22.

The negotiated payouts included $298,514,000 to refiners, $58,460,694 to retailers; $58,460,694 to resellers; $45,476,983 to agricultural cooperatives; $38,987,129 to airlines; $10,750,000 to surface transportation companies; $9,750,000 to rail and water transportation companies; and $5,250,000 to utilities.

The 50 states and the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, the Northern Marianas, Guam and American Samoa will divide $660 million based on their consumption of petroleum products during the period of price controls. DOE will get $260 million.

Instead of attempting to make direct refunds to consumers, the federal and state shares of the overcharges will be used for programs to benefit the public.

The DOE has agreed to recommend that pending judicial cases involving crude oil overcharges be similarly resolved, a move that could boost the total payout to $4 billion to $5 billion, Theis estimated in his order.

The judge noted that although some parties initially had objections to the tentative agreement, they eventually withdrew their challenges.

Oil prices head lower

NEW YORK (UPI) — Crude oil prices headed sharply lower Monday in heavy trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange as traders continued their massive sell-off of oil futures.

Petroleum prices have fallen steadily over the past four trading sessions in response to the 13-nation OPEC cartel's failure to arrive at production cuts which could help reduce the world's oil surplus.

Much of Monday's collapse was dictated by London market and North Sea Brent prices, which declined sharply while the market in New York was closed for the Fourth of July holiday.

"Both the trade and commission houses were selling everything they could get their hands on," a trader on the floor of the Merc said.

"The only buyers were profit takers, and they were few," he added, as prices for light sweet crude in the spot August contract hit bottom at just over $11.

Most crude oil contracts quickly erased initial technical support levels at the opening bell and brokers said they expected secondary support levels to come under pressure later in the week.

There was no apparent buying support in the market other than a few shorts covering their positions to sell the market again, traders said.

Many traders on the Merc said they saw the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries as the "last hope for any oil price increase soon."

With the oil cartel in disarray, even some avowed bulls expect prices to "test the $10-a-barrel level very soon."

At the close of trading, light sweet crude prices for spot delivery during the current contract month of August closed at $11.19 a barrel, off 80 cents from last Wednesday's close of $11.99, after trading as low as $11.10 during the day.

The September contract closed at $11.16, off 80 cents from $11.96.

On the cash markets, West Texas intermediate fell to $11.30 a barrel from $11.60 last week, while North Sea Brent closed at $10, down from $10.75.

U.S. Gulf Coast spot prices for regular leaded gasoline fell to 35 cents a gallon from a previous 36.50 cents, while No. 2 home heating oil dropped to 30 cents from 32.25 cents a gallon.

On the commercial cash market, Tesoro Crude Oil Co., a unit of Tesoro Petroleum Corp., lowered the price it pays for West Texas intermediate crude oil by 75 cents a barrel, to $13.25.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Universal unveils new corporate identity

TULSA (SWN) — Universal Energy Corp. announced its name officially changed to ORS Corp. effective July, 2. The name change was approved by the shareholders at the annual meeting May 23.

Graham-McCormick skips quarterly payout

COVINGTON, La. (SWN) — Graham-McCormick Oil & Gas Partnership has omitted its regular distribution for the second quarter of 1986 which would have been payable during July of 1986.

The distribution was omitted due to reduced partnership revenues caused by declining prices and reduced production levels, especially at the partnership's important Oak Hill gas field where since March 31, the gas purchaser has reduced the price paid for gas by $.70 per MmBtu to $1.99 per MmBtu (inclusive of all contractural allowances, adjustments, and reimbursement for severance taxes and before deducting transportation costs and severance taxes to be paid.)

The partnership paid a regular quarterly distribution of $.05 per Unit for the first quarter of 1986.

PRICES

Tesoro also cut the price it pays for certain other grades of crude by 75 cents to $1 a barrel.

Sun Refining & Marketing Co., a unit of Sun Co., lowered the price it pays for West Texas intermediate crude by $1 a barrel, to $12.25.

The company also lowered the price it pays for several other grades of crude by $1 a barrel.

Sun said the cuts, the second implemented in July, were in response to competitive pricing and market pressures.

Also Monday, the Middle East Economic survey said it has revised upward its estimate for OPEC output in June to an average of more than 19.5 million barrels a day from a previous estimated average of 19 million.

OPEC's output has been around 19 million barrels a day and the countries had informally agreed last week to limit production to a 16 million barrel ceiling.

The Cyprus-based journal, which has close ties to the Saudi Arabian government, said in its latest issue that the current high output level probably will be carried over through July.

The journal said such an increase poses a "grave threat" to the stability of any future OPEC agreement and added "the non-binding agreement reached by Opec members in Yugoslavia to limit their output in July can be assessed as virtually worthless."

UTPB 'delighted' by support from White

From Staff and Wire Reports

AUSTIN — Gov. Mark White has lined up in support of five colleges, including the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, that he said have been mentioned as possible candidates for closing as a result of a special committee's work.

White's support won praise from UTPB officials.

"We're delighted," said Dr. Warren Gardner, vice-president for academic affairs. "It simply confirms our long-held belief that there is a strong role for this university to play in the Permian Basin."

White, in a July 3 letter to chairman Larry Temple of the Select Committee on Higher Education, said:

"I am deeply concerned by speculation and press reports which suggest that some of Texas' finest institutions of higher education, such as Sul Ross University, East Texas State University, the University of Texas at Permian Basin, Laredo State University or Texas A&M University at Galveston, may be closed as a result of the committee's findings."

"As I have previously communicated to you, I believe such action would be a tragic mistake. These institutions offer unique access and programs that are unavailable anywhere else in the state, and to eliminate them would deny opportunities to a large number of citizens. We simply cannot place too high a value on those opportunities," White said.

On Monday, a delegation opposing changes at Laredo State University presented 20,000 signatures to Temple.

He accepted the signatures and said his committee will consider all issues, including budgets and the quality of higher education, before making recommendations to the Legislature.

Officials and supporters of UTPB appeared before Temple's committee June 13, urging that their institution be continued.

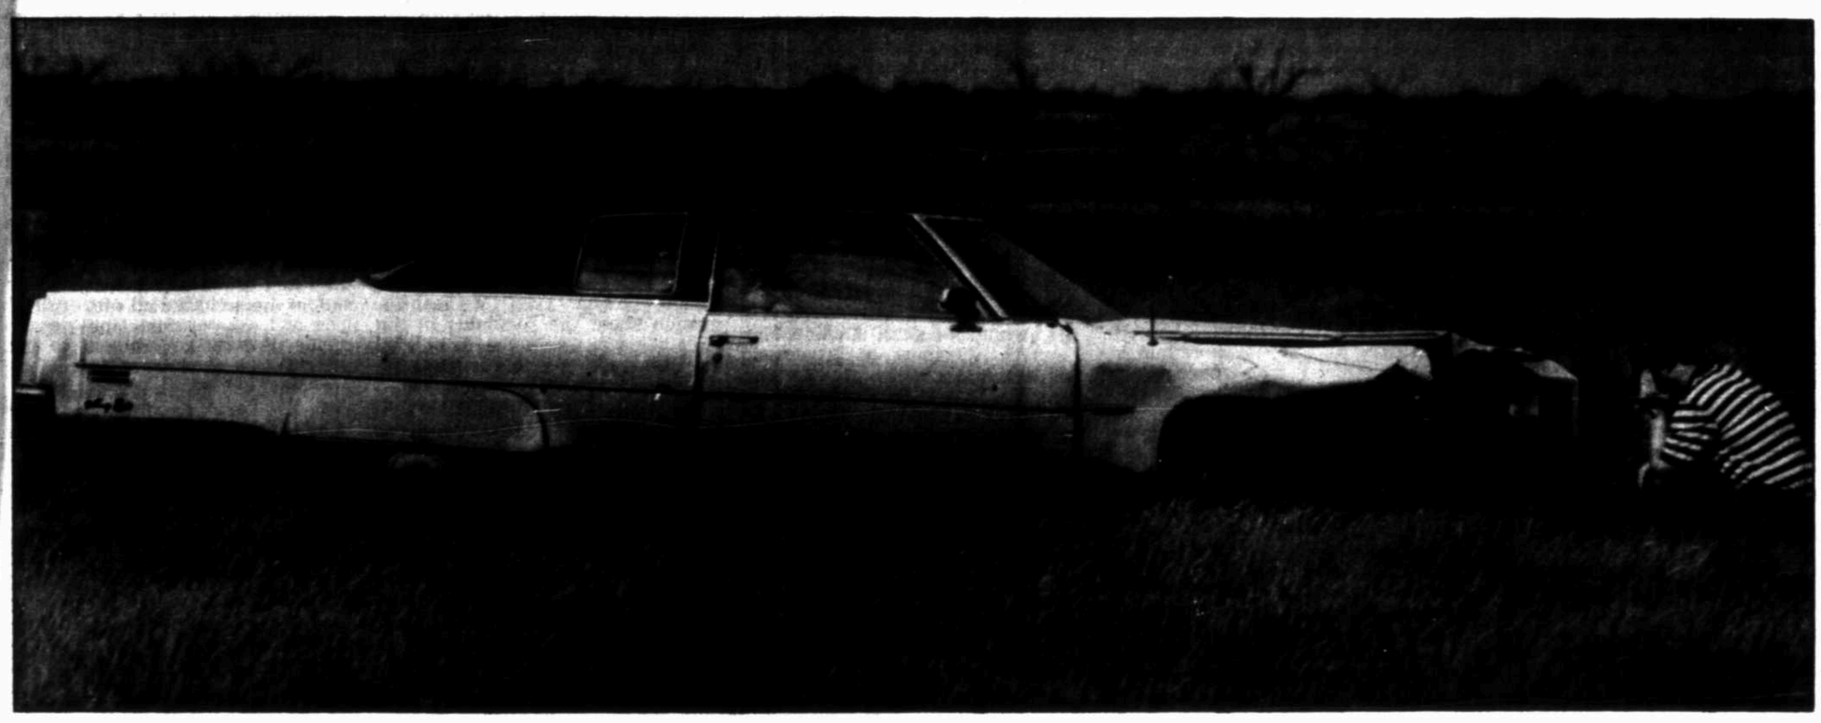

His committee meets here Thursday and Friday to consider possible closings and mergers of colleges.

The Thursday schedule includes a staff presentation on possible closings, and representatives from Sul Ross, A&M-Galveston and East Texas State will also address the committee.

On Friday, there will be further discussion on closings as well as the possible conversion of certain campuses to study centers.

"I recognize the need to ensure that the state is getting maximum benefit from every tax dollar which goes to higher education, but I am sure that you agree with me that we cannot be 'penny wise and pound foolish' in this regard," White wrote Temple, an Austin lawyer and chairman of the Texas College Coordinating Board.

White urged Temple and the committee "to take all necessary action to ensure the continued growth of quality education" at regional institutions "so that the citizens of Texas will continue to have ready access to higher education."

Mattox claims he'll carry hometown of opponent

Attorney General Jim Mattox releases a list of about 1,000 prominent Hispanic supporters Monday in Austin.

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Surrounded by Hispanic elected officials who have endorsed him for re-election, Attorney General Jim Mattox Monday guaranteed he will carry the hometown of his Republican opponent in November.

Mattox, beginning a five-city tour, released a list of more than 1,000 Hispanic officials who he said will support him against Republican candidate Judge Roy Barrera Jr., a San Antonio native.

The list includes U.S. Congressmen Henry B. Gonzalez, Kika de la Garza, Albert Bustamante and Solomon Ortiz and every Hispanic Democratic state senator and state representative.

"The more Hispanic votes that turn out, the better I like it, quite frankly," Mattox told reporters at a Capitol press conference.

"I'm going to get an overwhelming majority in San Antonio and everywhere else in the state, and so is the entire Democratic ticket, including (Gov.) Mark White."

"They felt by anointing someone with an Hispanic surname they could help Bill Clements. Their theory is wrong. What they've done is to unite the entire leadership of the Hispanic community behind Jim Mattox and the Democratic Party."

— Attorney General Jim Mattox

John Nolan, Barrera's campaign manager, said "it is a little early to tell," who will carry Bexar County in the November general election.

Nolan said he thinks Mattox is overstating his support in the Hispanic community.

"We shall see," he said.

Mattox boasted that his campaign staff has put together "the strongest organized effort ever" to get out the vote in the Hispanic community.

He said Republicans have made "a disastrous mistake" if they expect Barrera to help former Gov. Bill Clements in his rematch with White.

"They felt by anointing someone with an Hispanic surname they could help Bill Clements," Mattox said. "Their theory is wrong. What they've done is to unite the entire leadership of the Hispanic community behind Jim Mattox and the Democratic Party."

Clements appointed Barrera, whose father is a successful San Antonio attorney and one-time secretary of state under former Gov. John Connally, as district judge in 1980.

Barrera won re-election to that post in 1984.

"He was born with a silver spoon in his mouth, and to my way of speaking, he's still gagging on it," Mattox said.

Nolan would not respond to the comment.

Several elected officials took turns lauding Mattox's work as attorney general and pledged their support for him this fall.

Gonzalez, a Democrat from San Antonio now in his 13th term in Congress, said he "has no doubt" Mattox will be re-elected in November.

"Jim Mattox said he wanted to be the people's lawyer, and that's exactly what he has been," Gonzalez said. "He has defended the interests of the greatest numbers."

State Sen. Hector Uribe urged Hispanics to vote for the best qualified candidate, regardless of race, color, creed or sex.

"We, as Hispanics, cannot support a candidate simply because of ethnicity," Uribe said. "If we do, we will have failed in our moral obligation to act responsibly in the field of politics...and may find ourselves victims of our own success."

Candidate wants Mexican election nullified

PAN's Barrio claims 'massive fraud' throughout state

By CARMINA DANINI
Hearst Correspondent

CHICHUAHUA, Mexico — Opposition party gubernatorial candidate Francisco Barrio Terrazas said Monday he will seek to have the governor's election nullified because of irregularities during Sunday's election and announced a statewide protest that will begin later this week.

Addressing reporters at an afternoon press conference in the headquarters of the National Action Party (PAN), Barrio said the information received was such that "we can speak of a massive fraud throughout the state."

The former mayor of Ciudad Juarez said that because of the irregularities, PAN will seek to have the race for governor nullified.

A decision on whether to have other races nullified will not be made until all PAN candidates meet here later today.

The ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI), which has not lost a gubernatorial race in its 56-year history, announced it had won the Chihuahua elections by "ample margins."

Announcement of the PRI's victories at the state and local levels in the state was made just 15 minutes after the polls were due to close.

PRI gubernatorial candidate Fernando Baeza Melendez, however, stopped short Sunday night of claiming victory in a press conference and said he would await the official results from the local and state electoral commissions.

Even as a PRI official was proclaiming a "wide margin" of victory Sunday, in some areas of the state, polling place No. 12 remained open until 9 a.m. Monday because of the long lines of people waiting to vote.

Barrio acknowledged the PRI's use of "tortuguismo," the name given to the turtle-like tactic used by the ruling party to slow down the electoral process, may have frustrated some who might have voted for PAN.

He said that in Chihuahua City and Ciudad Juarez, across from El Paso, many voters had to wait as long as nine hours to cast a ballot.

Barrio himself was forced to wait nearly eight hours to vote in Ciudad Juarez.

Barrio said he did not have electoral figures but that in those polling places in the state where no irregularities were detected and the electoral process was clean, PAN won by as much as a 3-1 margin.

"At this point, voting figures don't interest us; what does is how the election was carried out and we know of many irregularities," he said.

Since early Sunday, the PAN began issuing press releases telling of scores of voting irregularities, including bogus representatives taking the part of PAN poll watchers at many places; the expulsion of PAN representatives; ballot boxes stuffed with ballots even before the polls opened; and arbitrary changing of voting sites.

Barrio said he believed the PAN was not hurt by the distribution late Saturday and early Sunday of a phony paper calling on the people of Chihuahua to stay away from the polls as a form of civil disobedience.

The papers, which the PRI denied having printed, were distributed in Ciudad Juarez late last week and in Chihuahua and Camargo late Saturday and early Sunday. The majority, however, were distributed in the city's poorer neighborhoods but were picked up by the PAN.

According to the PAN, in some areas of the state, the leftist Unified Socialist Party of Mexico (PSUM) took third place, while in others, the Revolutionary Workers Party (PRT) won third over the PSUM.

The PRI, meanwhile, said Monday afternoon that in Ciudad Juarez, in the governor's race, it was leading 67,009 to the PAN's 45,460, while in Chihuahua City it was ahead 48,037 to the PAN's 37,992.

The figures are only partial, and updates were given throughout the night by the PRI.

Economy will get worse, Bullock says

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State Comptroller Bob Bullock Monday said the news for Texas' ailing economy will get worse before it gets better.

Bullock, the state's top accountant, projected a $2.3 billion deficit two weeks ago. Monday, he told lawmakers they can expect an even larger shortfall for the remainder of the 1986-87 biennium.

"A skyrocketing unemployment rate will be one key factor moving the state's budget deficit well above the current $2.3 billion," he said Monday. "Workers without jobs and paychecks reduce economic activity and taxes."

The U.S. Department of Labor announced last week that Texas' unemployment rate had reached 10.5 percent, the highest in the nation.

Bullock said a combination of other factors, including the effect of the federal budget-cutting amendment, the resolution of court cases and a loss of state income interest could cost the state hundreds of millions of dollars.

"We expect to finish a new revenue estimate before Aug. 1," Bullock said, "and, frankly, none of the indicators contain an ounce of good news."

After the comptroller's $2.3 billion deficit projection in June, Gov. Mark White told lawmakers to prepare a plan that would eliminate the shortfall.

Once that is done, White said, he will call a special session of the Legislature to amend the appropriations bill.

The governor has since said he would prefer to balance the state's books during a special session later this summer, rather than leaving some of the deficit until legislators convene in regular session in January.

White, who faces Republican Gov. Bill Clements in November, said he wants to maintain recent gains in education and highways, as well as finance court-ordered improvements in prisons and mental health programs.

Leaders in the House of Representatives, where a tax bill must originate, have said there is no support for a tax increase — at least until after the general elections.

The House Appropriations Committee will begin meeting in Austin July 11-12 to get a head start on cutting the budget.

"I'm not going to second guess the exact number we'll be facing at the end of the month," Bullock said Monday. "But with deteriorating conditions in the Texas economy it will be substantially higher" than the current estimate.

Several burglaries reported to Midland police

From Staff Reports

A string of burglaries, three of which occurred in the 2400 to 2500 block of N. Big Spring St., were reported to Midland police today.

The burglaries apparently took place late Sunday night or early Monday morning. It was unknown whether the thefts were related.

Richard Haynes, the manager of Service Drug, 708 W. Scharbauer, reported at 7:46 a.m. the burglary of that business.

Money bags containing some $400 cash were reported taken. Two 100-count bottles of Desoxyn valued at $100 were also taken. Desoxyn is the trademark name for a type of methamphetamine.

A burglary at Temp Time, 2500 N. Big Spring St., was reported at 8:39 a.m.

Police Roundup

Three AM/FM cassette stereos, an answering machine, a camera, and $100 in stamps were among the items stolen. The point of entry appeared to be the front door, reports said.

A burglary at Pipeco, also at 2500 N. Big Spring St., was reported at 9:29 a.m. today.

In that burglary, an AM/FM stereo valued at $120 and a microcassette recorder valued at $40 were taken, Gene Carnes told police.

Twelve minutes earlier at 9:17 a.m., a burglary was reported at 2404 N. Big Spring St. at Conner Car Wash. The business reported $100 in cash was stolen.

The Midland County Sheriff's Department is investigating the attempted sexual assault early Monday of a woman at the Airline Mobile Home Park.

The woman reported the attack occurred between midnight and 1 a.m. The suspect vehicle was reportedly a 1980 model pickup truck.

An automobile valued at $4,350 also was reportedly stolen from a residence July 3, apparently by being towed by another vehicle.

Eugene Francis Morton, of 1401 S. Main St., told authorities a 1977 Ford Pinto wagon was parked on private property off County Road 116 when it was towed, possibly by a pickup truck, from the scene.

G.E. Howard, 3210 Durant, reported the theft of a bracelet valued at more than $4,500 to the Sheriff's Office. Howard told officers a suspect known to him paid him with a check in November 1985 for the bracelet, but Howard has been unable to collect on the check.

The suspect reportedly told sheriff's officers payment would be made by January 1986.

In other reports, a radar detector valued at $295 was reported stolen from a vehicle parked at 723 W. Dengar.

Thomas Young Anderson told police the item was taken from a 1979 Dodge sometime between July 3 and July 6.

Cassette tapes valued at $750 and two cassette cases valued at $40 were also reported stolen.

The items were taken from an unlocked vehicle parked in the 3300 block of W. Loop 250.

Clements says White 'devoid' of leadership

HOUSTON (AP) — Republican gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements says the Legislature should be called into special session to deal with the state's anticipated budget deficit and accuses incumbent Gov. Mark White of failing to quickly summon lawmakers to Austin.

"He is devoid — literally devoid — of leadership," Clements said Monday at a news conference.

"If he was the leader the people of Texas have every right to expect, he would call a special session immediately, charge agencies and departments to set their priorities and start scrubbing that budget."

White campaign spokesman Mark McKinnon, however, said the governor was working toward a consensus among lawmakers before calling them for a special session.

"Bill Clements obviously hasn't been reading the papers lately or talking to members of his own party," McKinnon said. "Gov. White is working with the legislative leadership on developing a plan. And as soon as the plan is developed, Gov. White has said he will call a special session of the Legislature."

Clements said he has been recommending the special session since February and contends the time lost since then has caused the anticipated state budget deficit to grow.

"The projected budget shortfall of $1.3 billion is now estimated at $2.3 billion," he said. "Today, we hear discussion about the possibility of the state being unable to pay its bills by December and of whole agencies begin forced to close by early next year. Literally, Austin burns, while Mark White fiddles."

"There's no meeting of the minds. "I think (White's) in a dilemma. The House is saying one thing and the Senate another. On that basis, they'll never come up with a plan."
— GOP gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements

Clements called White's consensus idea absurd, saying Senate leaders favor a tax increase while House members are against higher taxes.

"There's no meeting of the minds," Clements said. "I think he's in a dilemma. The House is saying one thing and the Senate another. On that basis, they'll never come up with a plan."

Clements said the budget shortage could not be tied totally to falling oil prices, blaming increased state spending for part of the problem.

Asked where spending should be cut, he replied, "Well, that's really not my job. I have explained how to do this. The first thing the governor should do is charge all of the agencies and commissions and departments of state government to put priorities on their own budgets.

Cherry tree tale bore fruit for author Weems

By DAVID WOLBRUECK

BAY CITY, Texas (AP) — The well-known folk tale of young George Washington cutting down a cherry tree was concocted by post-Revolutionary Episcopalian clergyman-bookseller intent on making an extra dollar.

So says Mason Weems 6, of West Columbia, who is descended from that clergyman — also named Mason Locke Weems.

Known more commonly as Parson Weems, Mason Locke Weems I is credited with starting the tale, just one colorful chapter of a rich Weems family history that is replete with Scottish kings and the stuff Shakespearean plays are made of.

History records that the tale of young Washington chopping down the cherry tree first appeared in the fifth edition of Parson Weems' biography, "The Life and Memorable Actions of General Washington," published in the early 1800s.

Parson Weems wrote that when little George was 6 years old, he received as a present a small hatchet, of which he was very proud.

One day he unfortunately struck a little cherry tree in his father's garden with the edge of that hatchet, "barking it terribly."

The elder Washington discovered the damaged tree, and inquired among his family and servants whether any of them knew anything about the apparent vandalism.

According to Parson Weems, when George was questioned, he, "looked up at his father with the sweet face of youth heightened with the inexpressible charm of an all triumphant truth,...bravely cried out, "I can't tell a lie. Pa, you know I can't tell a lie. I did cut it with my hatchet.' "

To this day, that anecdote has linked the first president of the United States with a hatchet and cherry tree.

COMMENTING during an interview earlier this year, Bay City-born Weems said the cherry tree legend is more likely drawn from the parson's own experiences and was probably prompted by a desire to increase sagging book sales.

To perhaps get a better understanding of why Parson created the story, one must better understand the man and the times, says Weems.

Parson's background is detailed in an extensively researched article written earlier this year by Weems' son, Cayce Ewell, for Junior Historians at West Columbia Junior High.

Parson Weems was born Oct. 1, 1859, in Maryland, the youngest of 17 children born to David Weems' two wives. David Weems immigrated to America about 1715.

Parson Weems first studied medicine, aspiring to be a doctor like his uncle, William Locke. He received his degree in Scotland and served for a time as a surgeon on a British warship.

Later, his interests turned to the ministry and he was ordained into the priesthood of the Episcopal Church on Sept. 5, 1784, becoming with his cousin Edward Gant, the first Americans to ordained after the Revolutionary War and without pledging themselves to the Church of England.

Parson Weems' contributions to the Episcopal Church are still celebrated today on that anniversary, according to Cayce Weems.

THE PARSON preached for many years in a variety of churches, including the Pohick Church, in Fairfax County, Va. — a church that George Washington designed and of which the general was a regular member.

To spread the word, Parson Weems began traveling the colonies by horseback, supporting himself through the sale of bibles and other books.

He wrote religious and political tracts and spoke out against such evils as drunkenness, dueling, gambling and cruelty to husbands.

"He was a minister and evidently that wasn't an easy way to make a living so he started going out and selling Bibles," explained Weems. "Matthew Carey of Philadelphia was his publisher and provided the inventory of books."

He went on to say, "he's credited with being the world's greatest book salesman...Everywhere he went, he was welcomed because he was a teller of tales and could always find an audience."

Parson Weems decision to write a biography about George Washington was in keeping with a popular fad of the times, Weems explained.

"A lot of writers then wrote about heroes. Washington became a hero...He was the first president. Writers took to him. It was an easy way to make a dollar — write about heroes."

But the sales of Parson Weems' biography fared little better than other similar works.

So in the fifth edition of the book, published about 1806, the cherry tree anecdote was added. Most probably, said Weems, it was with an idea to bolster flagging sales.

"I THINK it was a sales gimmick. He was really looking for a way to sell his book," theorized Weems.

"The story wasn't really about George, it was probably taken from the Weems' family, from a similar incident," he explained.

Novelist John Jakes, who combined historical fact with fiction in his American Bicentennial series, makes brief reference to Parson Weems' embellishment of the Washington biography.

In Volume 3 of the series, "The Seekers," newspaper publisher Gilbert Kent receives a letter from Parson Weems — "on his progress in revising his text for yet another edition."

"The parson tiptoed around the question of 'embellishing' the biography with 'some possibly apocryphal material,' " Jakes wrote. "Gilbert sensed Weems intended to invent anecdotes about the first president in order to add novelty to future printings."

Reading on, Gilbert's suspicions were confirmed.

"Weems said that 'reliable sources in Virginia' had provided a story about young Washington hacking down a cherry tree, then manfully admitting his guilt when confronted by his father."

In his reply, Gilbert tells Weems his 'apocryphal embellishments' are unneeded, but then assures the theologian that he will rely on Weems' 'honesty and good judgment' and accept the revised text exactly as submitted.

The Weems' family's Texas connection began with Parson Weems' seventh child — Mason Locke Weems II. Mason II was born in Virginia, where he also studied medicine. He and his family came to Texas by boat, landing on Matagorda Island Jan. 1, 1837.

Brouhaha brews over billboards hawking beach

GALVESTON (AP) — Two billboards advertising a beach as a place "Not for the Tame," have upset some citizens who say the signs are inappropriate, in poor taste and sexist.

The billboards, erected two weeks ago on the Interstate 45 between Dickinson and La Marque, advertising Galveston's R.A. Apffel beach park. The signs include the slogan and a photograph of a beautiful woman lounging against a car in a one-piece swimsuit.

Members of the Galveston Beach Park Board of Trustees did not know about the billboards until they started receiving complaints from island citizens.

Board members said some people believed the signs invited trouble at the park on Galveston Island's east end. Each weekend during the tourist season, the park caters mainly to thousands of young people.

"It's not a lawless beach where there's nothing but debauchery going on," trustee Mary Ellen Reinarz said.

Last week, Ms. Reinarz made a motion at the board's meeting to have the signs removed immediately, but that measure failed. Another motion then passed giving Ms. Reinarz the right to approve a tamer slogan of "Super Beach."

Board chairman Meyer Reiswerg said the signs will be changed next week, but the bathing beauty will remain.

The Defensive Driving School makes course enjoyable, worthwhile

Did you know that traffic accidents cost American businesses over $4.3 billion last year? Were you aware that from 1900 to 1984, 2,533,765 Amercians died in U.S. highway accidents? Compare that to the fact that from 1775-1984 1,186,654 Americans died in all the U.S. wars.

The Defensive Driving School, San Miguel Square — Suite 162, teaches specific techniques for preventing traffic accidents. Individuals can enroll in the class. In addition, many companies have found that they can reduce accidents and losses, by sponsoring a defensive driving class for their employees. The Defensive Driving School is ready to provide informative, interesting classes.

While individuals are learning how to improve their performance behind the wheel, they will also be on the way to lowering their insurance rates or, perhaps, removing a traffic violation from their record.

Instructor Bill Wiley also works for the Midland Fire Department. His years of experience as an ambulance driver is one thing that convinced him that an INTERESTING, well-organized and informative defensive driving course is desperately needed by many Midlanders.

"I've pulled so many bodies out of cars," Bill explains. "It makes you start thinking, 'Maybe we can change the attitude of the general public.'"

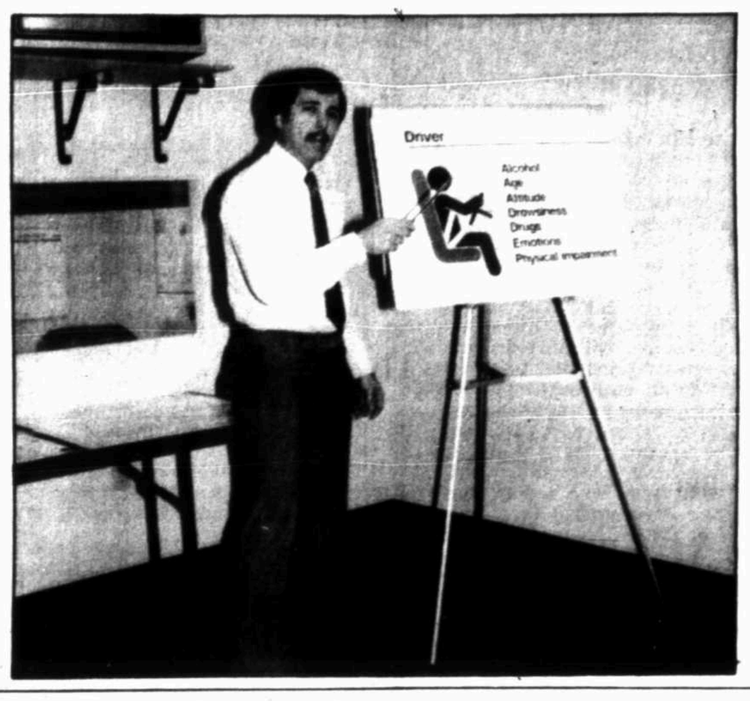

The Defensive Driving School's eight-hour course is designed to acquaint drivers with changes in law, behind-the-wheel procedures and driving hazards. The course, which Bill presents in an upbeat manner, guides drivers through clear decision-making processes which can be utilized when split second life and death choices have to be made.

The course is so effective that insurance carriers regulated by the State Board of Insurance can give a ten percent liability insurance premium discount to drivers who complete the course. This results in an average insurance savings of about $40 per year, while the course itself costs only $15. Drivers can take the course every three years to continue to qualify for the discounts.

Another benefit of the course is that one traffic violation can be removed from an individual's driving record every two years. This can help drivers keep satisfactory driving records.

The Defensive Driving School in San Miguel Square gives special attention to making the classes interesting. Classes are held every Monday and Tuesday evening from 6:00 p.m. to 10:00 p.m. For those who prefer a weekend class, the course is also offered Saturday from 8:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.

With long vacation trips planned, it's a perfect time to learn how to drive defensively. Call (915)697-4578 for registration. The Defensive Driving School, a member of the National Safety Council, is licensed by the Texas Department of Public Safety and is certified by the Texas Safety Association.

Instructor Bill Wiley of The Defensive Driving School in San Miguel Atrium makes the classes interesting as well as informative. Call 697-4578 to find out how these classes will help you cut insurance cost and remove traffic violations from your record.

Graham's soda fountain features milk shakes with real ice cream

How long has it been since you had a real ice cream milk shake? For that matter, where can you get a thick, frosty, old-fashioned, down right delicious shake made with tender loving care? Graham's Rexall Pharmacy and Gifts, 319 Dodson Street!

Saunter on in, pick your favorite stool and spin around and order up a chocolate, vanilla or strawberry shake. Ummm, ummmm, good!

Just like the old days at the soda fountain on the corner.

Graham's soda fountain is one of a nearly extinct breed and just like the soda fountain you remember from you childhood, it has a whole passel of tempting treats.

There are sundaes with chocolate, strawberry or cherry topping piled on sumptious ice cream.

Floats and malts are just as tasty. Can you imagine how good they'll taste on your afternoon break? Ummmm. Ahhhhh.

For lunch, however, you'll need something to go with your float or shake. How about a ham and cheese sandwich? pimento cheese? chicken salad? boiled ham?

There's more on the menu: ham and Swiss on rye, ham and pimento, grilled cheese, ranchero, submarine and club sandwiches. And the bread is always soooo fresh.

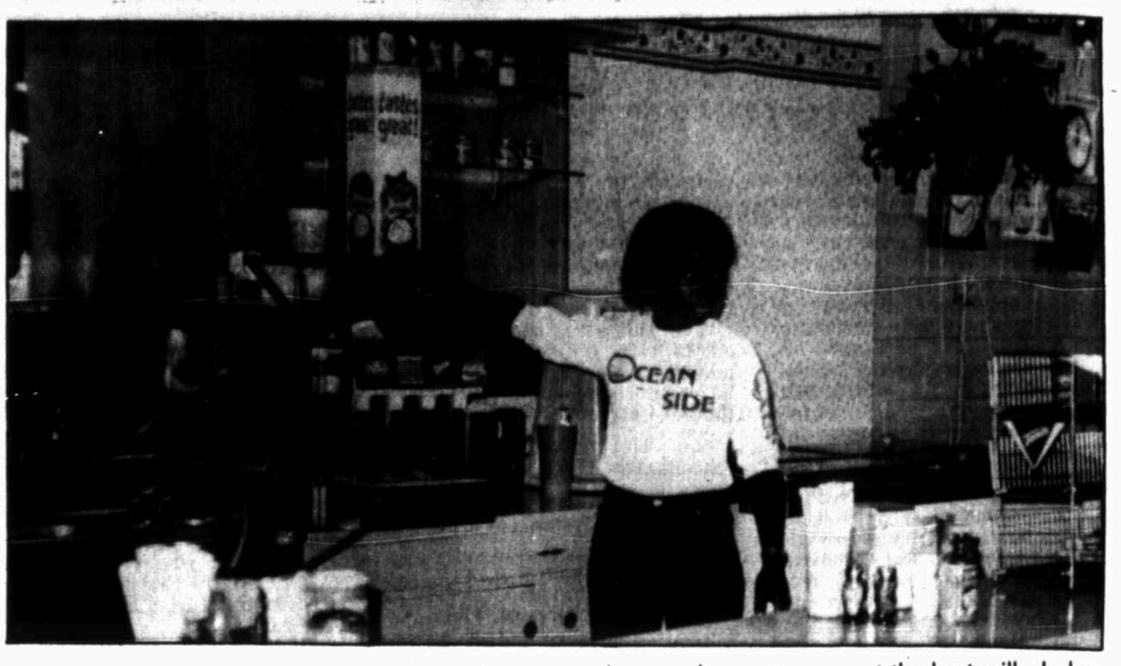

You may choose chili, stew, soup or Frito pie, but whatever you select you're sure to enjoy it and the friendly atmosphere at Graham's.

It's no wonder that this soda fountain is the daily meeting place for many Midland business people and weary shoppers who want to sit and sip a cup of coffee for awhile. Many stop by Graham's for a piece of toast, cinnamon roll or a honey bun, along with some juice, before they start their day's work.

Once you've enjoyed a delightful break at the soda fountain, you will want to browse through the many gift items at Graham's Rexall Pharmacy.

You'll also enjoy the personal attention that pharmacists Wes Graham, Paul Keele and Teresa Hartman give their customers. Though their schedules may be hectic, they make a special effort to take the time to answer their customers questions. They also keep complete prescription records for each customer. They will be glad to give you a printout of those records for tax or insurance purposes.

Take time today to enjoy the good ol' days at Graham's Pharmacy, 319 Dodson Street. Graham's soda fountain is open Monday-Friday 8 a.m.-6 p.m., Saturday 9 a.m.-5 p.m. The store is open Monday-Saturday 8 a.m.-6 p.m.

Linda Edwards at the soda fountain in Graham's Rexall Pharmacy and Gifts, 319 Dodson, makes sure her customers get the best milk shakes in town.

What makes Manpower number one?

Manpower is the world's largest temporary help firm with annual worldwide sales exceeding $1 billion. They have become number one in the world and U.S. due to three main reasons: 1. consistently meeting customer needs and expectations quickly and professionally. 2. Professional and thorough interviewing and testing techniques. 3. Diversity of services available to their customers.

They realize that when you need extra help yo want service, not excuses nor mismatched people for the need you have. Their Predictable Performance System allows them to match the right person for the job in a professional manner that lets them solve your problems and not create ones by sending the wrong type of worker. Their diversity allows youto call only one temporary service for all of your needs. Among the services Manpower can provide are: clerical temporary help, word processing operators, data entry operators, industrial temporary help, permanent hiring of temporaries (permhire) and payrolling of staff.

There are many reasons for using temporaries. The use of temporaries gives the businessperson a more flexible answer to employee staffing and demand headaches. Many times a customer's employees are on vacation, sick or on maternity/sick leave. Does the work stop? Normally not.

In recent times many firms have experienced staff reductions. And, when periodic bursts of work come along extra help is needed, but rehiring permanent staff can't be justified–the answer is qualified temporary help from Manpower. Idle hands cost Manpower's customers through decreased productivity, benefit plan costs, lower profit margins due to higher overhead, etc. Many firms have, therefore, trimmed their overhead and supplemented their staff with temporary help until the work load stabilizes.

But what about those ex-employees who know the job and the company's systems from experience. How can you, as an employer use these people? Very easily--place them on Manpower's staff via their Wagemaster progarm. You tell Manpower what to pay the people, and Manpower assumes all payroll deductions and insurance requirements. The employees return to your business for however long they're needed–a day , a week, a month.

Manpower's customers tell them that the three main reasons they use one service over another are: 1. the quality of employee sent to the customer, 2. Level of overall service received by the customer, 3. Price. Does this mean one service's employees are better than another? Frankly, the answer is no. All services draw their employees from the same community. The difference is–DOES THE SERVICE ALWAYS SEND THE RIGHT PERSON FOR THE ASSIGNMENT? Thus, consistency in service is critical and depends on the screening and selection process a service uses. This important area is where Manpower stands out.

How do they accomplish this? Manpower has a proven system for picking winners. This system consists of thorough interviewing and reality-based tests. Once they have picked their winners they continue to support them with hands-on training for word processing, skill development programs designed to enhance the temporaries' skills and support manuals to use while on assignment. Recruiting, interviewing, testing, training and support - by using these systems Manpower assures you that quality temporaries will be consistently sent to fill your needs.

Call Manager Vick Hicks (left to right), Service Representative Staci Turner or Service Representative Carole Paul at Manpower, 683-4624, if you want consistent, professional temporary service.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: You will have a chance to reverse your fortunes where money and love are concerned. Friends may be the conduit through which you will find the money you need. It would be wise to keep spending within reasonable bounds. Some good suggestions come out of family discussions.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Sewing machine inventor Elias Howe, former United Kingdom Prime Minister Edward Heath, prolific author Barbara Cartland, Kansas City Royals speedster Willie Wilson, sportscaster-actor O.J. Simpson and singer Ed Ames.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Keep up the good work as a steady effort brings excellent results. An influential person lends financial support to a pet project. Seek an expert's advice in dealing with problems you cannot cope with.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Expect an unsettling day at the office as others are moody for inexplicable reasons. Don't let personal problems interfere with your job performance. Try swallowing your pride. The results are well worth it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your money is well spent today on home improvements or real estate. A stranger gives you new insights on an old problem. A romantic relationship brings deep fulfillment and a boost to your ego.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Exercise tact and diplomacy when you come out on top today in order to avoid making enemies. A special vitality is present in your conversations, assisting you in challenging business deals. Socialize tonight!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A person close to you may try to shift the responsibility or blame to your shoulders. Stand your ground. Domestic matters may take precedent during late afternoon. Compromise is the only answer.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Examination and planning of all financial matters will result in substantial savings. Telephone calls and messages give this day special meaning. Romance gets off to a good start. Watch out for interference!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Co-workers look to you for inspiration. Business done at home is far more productive than an out-of-town trip. Shopping is tiring, but you can yield some terrific bargains. Romance takes on deeper meaning.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A diplomatic approach toward superiors will bring excellent results. An unexplainable situation needs more time and research before answers come. Today is excellent day for joint adventures and sharing thoughts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You seem to be impatient today. A mate or partner makes constant demands upon your time. Point out you need some private time alone. Come to terms with personal goals, then stick to them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You could make mistakes today as you are rather impressionable. Rely on advice of someone who has protected your better interests in past. Joint enterprises will improve cash flow.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): People seek you out today. Do not volunteer advice until you have all the facts. Family harmony now will lead to lasting harmony later. Romance enjoys a special glow this evening.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Rely on your own intuition over the advice of a friend. Emotions are running high as you consider a job change or personnel problems. A check eases the pressure. Relationships are more satisfying.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
3 ♠	Pass	Pass	3 ♠
Pass	4 ♠	Pass	Pass Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♡

Much of declarer-play technique centers around keeping the danger hand off lead. Here's a situation that crops up more frequently than one would imagine, and the winning line eludes many.

South's first problem is what to do when West's preempt gets passed around to him. Since he might not be able to curb his partner's enthusiasm for hearts if he were to make a takeout double, a bid of three spades is preferable; at this vulnerability, it must show a fair hand. North's four spades ends the auction, and West leads the jack of hearts.

The fact that so much of North's values are in hearts places the contract in jeopardy. From the auction and the opening lead, it seems likely West has the ace-queen of clubs and East the ace of hearts. Therefore, declarer is in danger of losing one heart trick, one diamond and two clubs unless East can be kept off lead.

If declarer puts up one of dummy's heart honors at trick one, East will win and shift to a club. That will net the defenders the first three tricks, and declarer will eventually have to surrender a diamond trick for down one.

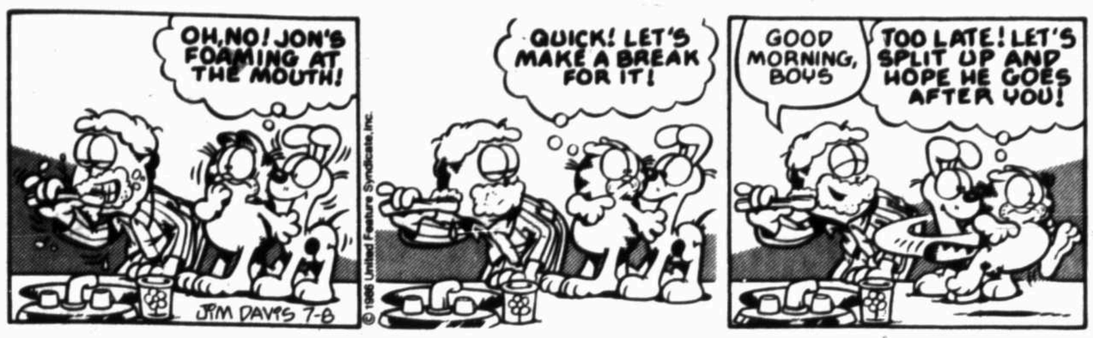

But see what happens if declarer does not cover the jack of hearts. If East overtakes to switch to a club, declarer will get two diamond discards on dummy's hearts. Therefore, East must play low. But now declarer can take a ruffing finesse for the ace of hearts and discard a club on the other heart honor after drawing trumps, limiting his losers to one trick in each side suit.

Nancy Reagan signs contract with Random House for her memoirs

Reagan

NEW YORK (AP) — Nancy Reagan, who has kept day-by-day diaries of her White House years, has signed a contract to write her memoirs for Random House, a newspaper reported today.

The book is tentatively scheduled for publication in the fall of 1989, after Mrs. Reagan and the president return to private life, The New York Times reported. It will range from the author's youth through the 1988 presidential election. The purchase price was not revealed.

"This will beyond any doubt be one of the most important and widely read books to come out of the Reagan years," Robert L. Bernstein, chairman of Random House, was quoted as saying.

Mrs. Reagan contacted Morton Janklow, a literary agent, about the possiblity of writing a book last summer and they had a number of meetings in Washington, Janklow said. Preliminary talks with Random House, which will publish an authorized biography of the president sometime in the 1990s, began about six months ago.

Bernstein said he was especially impressed with Mrs. Reagan's detailed recall of events that took place before she started writing the diary.

Mrs. Reagan likely is going to require someone to help her organize the material, Janklow was quoted as saying, and she might use a writer, but no decision had been made.

• • •

Shriver

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tennis star Pam Shriver, fresh from her Wimbledon doubles victory with Martina Navratilova, will succeed skater Dorothy Hamill as a member of the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports.

Also appointed was George W. Armstrong, a businessman from Alexandria, Va., and former associate director of the White House office of presidential personnel. His position is a new slot on the council.

Shriver teamed up with Navratilova to win the women's doubles tournament Sunday.

• • •

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Louis L'Amour, whose nearly 100 novels about the frontier days have preserved memories of the Old West, says Westerners must save the region's unique atmosphere no matter what price is offered for it.

"We must treat the West as our living room and not mess it up," L'Amour said Monday in a speech at the annual meeting of the Western Governors' Association. "In the West, we have space and an atmosphere in which we can grow and develop, and we must preserve that."

In addition to his warning about unchecked growth, L'Amour said he considered it crucial that Westerners preserve the environment, saying "it's not such a great effort to do that."

• • •

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Poet and novelist James Dickey says he feels weak and tired but otherwise well following his release from a hospital after removal of a brain clot.

The 63-year-old Dickey, whose works include "Deliverance," was released Sunday from Richland Memorial Hospital.

Dickey, a University of South Carolina professor who has four books that are expected to be released during the next 12 months, had suffered from headaches for about two months and had emergency neurosurgery June 30, said his wife, Deborah.

• • •

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Singer Teddy Pendergrass, recovering from injuries sustained in the crash of his van last week, is "upbeat" and ready to go home from the hospital, a spokesman said.

Pendergrass, who was partially paralyzed in a 1982 car crash, was in good condition Monday at Osteopathic Medical Center and out of intensive care, hospital spokesman George Hatzfield said.

If his improvement continues, he may be released Friday, Hatzfield said.

"He's upbeat. You'll find in any person who has had major surgery there comes a time they say, 'I'm ready to go home.' Teddy's at the point he would like to move a little faster than his body is ready to do. That's a really good sign," Hatzfeld said.

Pendergrass, 36, underwent surgery to repair a gash in his liver after crashing his van into a utility pole Thursday.

• • •

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The involuntary manslaughter trial of "Twilight Zone" director John Landis and four crew members will be delayed until a defense attorney finishes another trial, lawyers said Monday.

The trial was scheduled to begin Tuesday, but Superior Court Judge Roger Boren said it would start in a week to 10 days because attorney Leonard Levine is still at work on another case.

Landis, director of such box office hits as "Animal House" and "Trading Places," is charged with involuntary manslaughter along with special effects coordinator Paul Stewart, associate producer George Folsey, production manager Dan Allingham and pilot Dorcey Wingo.

The district attorney's office contends they are responsible for the deaths of actor Vic Morrow and two children, Renee Chen, 6, and Myca Le, 7, who were killed when a helicopter flying through special effects explosives fell from the sky as they ran through a mock Vietnamese village.

The defense team claims the accident that killed the actors was unforseeable and was caused by a defect in the helicopter.

• • •

NEW YORK (AP) — Monday's opening night at Lincoln Center's 20th anniversary Mostly Mozart Festival was also the opening event in France Salutes New York, a 10-day performing arts festival at Lincoln Center.

Mostly Mozart music director Gerard Schwarz melded the two gala events by programming music that Mozart composed in Paris in 1778.

The festival began one night after the end of of a Fourth of July weekend of celebration centered around the rededication of the Statue of Liberty, France's gift to America 100 years ago.

The concert began with music as lightly refreshing as a spritzer with Perrier, "Les Petits riens" ("The Trifles"), an overture and 13 dances which Mozart composed for a ballet choreographer.

But flutist Carol Wincene and harpist Heidi Lehwalder, good, sensitive and enjoyable as they were, couldn't really make Mozart's not very sparkling "Concerto for Flute, Harp and Orchestra" sparkle.

Classical singers say that singing Mozart is honey for the throat, and Mozart's "Andante" from the second version of his "Paris Symphony" was equally sweet and soothing for the ear.

Erie Mills, whose soprano isn't quite high enough to hit all the top notes in "Popoli di Tessaglia" easily, nevertheless aquitted herself with valor. The concert ended with the complete, marvelous "Paris Symphony."

Designer Valentino markets clean, modern elegance

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — There in the front row of Valentino's latest show were the wealthy and fashionable ladies of Paris: Paloma Picasso, Suni Agnelli, Marie Helene dexl Rothschild, Olympia de Rothschild, Doris Brynner.

Jessica Lange wore a Valentino to this year's Academy Awards and accepted her 1983 Oscar in one. Nancy Reagan bought Valentinos in California before she became first lady and invited the designer to the White House for a private visit on his last trip here. Jacqueline Onassis is a good friend and regular client — Valentino created the wedding dress for her marriage to Aristotle Onassis.

A designer of great taste, Valentino Garavani (no one uses his last name) makes clothes that are clean, modern and worth their high ticket price.

"You spend $1,200 for a Valentino suit, and the workmanship is like couture. Just look at the buttonholes and buttons — it is the first giveaway of a good tailor," says Rose Wells, eminence grise of fashion retailing. "Owning a Valentino is like owning a Madame Gres tucked jersey dress — once you've bought it, baby, you don't want to give it up. Women who own his clothes wear them for years and years."

His influence is subtle — no shocks — but strong. He was the first to inset lace in the backs of sweaters, the first show sweaters for evening or paired with silk skirts and wool jackets. His chain print was copied years ago, and his new animal prints will also have followers. And when his important detail was button trims, not only did he sell thousands of styles trimmed this way but others did, too.

QUIETLY AND steadily over the past 25 years, Valentino has built one of the most successful high-fashion enterprises in the world. He has become the mass marketer to the rich, the mastermind of a $250 million business at wholesale, more than half a billion dollars at retail.

Last season he sold 6,000 of his zip-front, button-trimmed $1,000 sweaters, and last year he sold 300,000 dresses in his Miss V line, at an average price of $800. He has 16,000 people on his payroll.

It all makes him nervous, he says. But there is hardly a gray hair to show for it.

Slim and tan at 53, Valentino unbuttoned his impeccable double-breasted jacket and stretched an arm across the back of a sofa at the Watergate Hotel. He was in town recently to see his newly renovated boutique here, and to talk about his favorite subjects, beautiful women and beautiful clothes.

The two work together, and one must never forfeit femininity for fashion — "that's a ground rule," he says. "Femininity is good material, not too stiff, and a cut, not too masculine. When you have good shoulders and beautiful hips the dress is always feminine and a big success."

Sexy is another matter: "The movement of the women in the clothes ... And the dress, to be sexy, it has to move around the body in a soft way, not being vulgar. The decollete in different ways is sexy, but not anymore the slits. It's overdone, and I've done it a long time ago, and now it's too easy and not very elegant."

SEXY DOES not mean tight, but rather sinuous. "Tight is vulgar," he says. And sexy doesn't necessarily mean short. "For the moment I prefer to make short clothes. I make a little longer for winter time."

Valentino disregards the big fashion swings, such as the oversized styles first shown by Japanese designers. "Women love to be slim," he says. "To be camouflaged means shyness — not personality, rather insecurity. So to be slim and showing the forms and the movement of the body, it means security and intelligent human being.

"If you are slim, you are more comfortable, you please more people around you and you feel better about yourself. You move better. And you have this sort of natural way to move that is a part of elegance."

He adds, "I prefer too thin to too fat." His mannequins are very small and, in fact, quite flat. "I use very slim models without bosoms to be free to create. Sometimes, if the model has a bosom or a little big hips, it gets in the way. That is important when I create something new. Later it can be translated for women much larger."

He keeps himself slim with an exercise regimen that is practical, if not very organized. "I always put my weight stuff at night in the middle of the bathroom. Then when I wake up in the morning I have no choice but to pick it up."

He doesn't feel comfortable if he is not constantly moving. He is passionate about skiing, and on holiday in Gstaad, Switzerland, spends three or four hours a day on the slopes. "I started skiing four years ago and, you know, they say that I am good," he says with a boyish chuckle.

The skiing helps his perpetual tan, but he admits to boosting it with the help of "a little lamp, I must tell you. I went to New York and twice did 20 minutes of a lamp, I must confess."

HE ADJUSTS his jacket, twists his Pasha wristwatch and begins to talk with the same honesty about his beginnings as a designer.

"I started designing when I was 12 or 13," he says. "Drawing, drawing, drawing, without any proportion and without any sense. I was very good designing in freestyle, as they say in Italy, so I was a disaster at geometric style. But I could do shoes, blouse, scarf, skirt — I did everything. All on top of my schoolbook."

His mother was not overly interested in clothes. "She was a provincial woman, never badly dressed," he recalls. "I remember in Voghera, that provincial city near Milan where we used to live, there were two sisters who were dressmakers, and they were extremely good and very expensive for the time.

"And I remember my mother going there, without the permission of my father, and having three things, not very much, but three things perfect, of good material, made. So I've always seen my mother well dressed."

His parents hoped he'd become a doctor, but "I did not want to be a doctor. My studies were very peculiar. I was very good in Italian, my mother language, and in history and geography. I was a disaster in mathematics, a disaster in philosophy, Greek and Latin, mainly because I couldn't care less. I couldn't pay attention, because in my head I was a big dreamer."

When he told his parents he wanted to design clothes, they were shocked. "Extremely shocked," he says, "but they were so fantastic. You can imagine, it was 1950, a time not like now. To want to stop your studies because you want to go to Paris? Mentioning Paris in a provincial Italian city in the '50s was like mentioning China. A boy of 17 years!" Reluctantly, they agreed.

THEY KNEW a pattern maker in Milan who had an apartment and worked as well in Paris, and they rented a room from her for Valentino. "She saw in me the chance in her life to pay everything in the house," he says. "She was somebody who was very direct, without shyness."

After six months in the school of the Chambre Syndicale, Valentino went to work in the studio of Jean Desses. Valentino was one of three assistants, and very often in the studio with the designer when he was preparing his collections. "From Jean Desses I learned chiffon," he says.

Six years later he moved to an assistant's position at Guy Laroche, the former first assistant to Desses who had just opened his own house. During his two years at Laroche, Valentino did everything.

"I even went with the photographer on the set to prepare the girl for the pictures. I was helping to dress the girls for the show. I was sketching thousands of things for the collection, because sometimes he was away. I did so many things on my own because we were a small fashion house, and I learned a lot."

In 1960, at age 28, he asked his father, who had an electrical business, to help him finance his own fashion house in Rome. Italian fashion had begun to come into its own while Valentino was working in Paris. "Before that, Italian fashion was mostly dressmakers copying the French line. By 1960 Fabiani and Simonetta, Roberto Capucci and others had just started up."

IN THE beginning there were many "little mistakes and not much good help. But always there were customers." Sophia Loren was among his early clients. And while other designers made drastic changes in their collections for each season, Valentino stuck to his formula for pretty, feminine clothes. "I was criticized at first, but in the end they knew I was right."

His first American success was in 1965 in the basement of Bloomingdale's, a coup hailed in the fashion pages of all the New York papers. Hana Mackler, then merchandise manager of the basement, had paid $1,000 each for Valentino's toiles, or canvas patterns, and had the clothes made in New York using Italian fabrics.

They were mostly coats, semifitted and short, she recalls, in tweedy wools — and they were a sellout at $70 retail.

"I knew his reputation and found him working in Rome in a palazzo on the via Gregoriana, not far from the Spanish Steps," says Mackler, now president of an import-shoe firm. "He was very handsome, very young, but not as sunburned as today," she says with a laugh.

Valentino made an appearance at Bloomingdale's storewide Italian promotion, even though he wasn't well known enough for the store to pay his way over. Mackler wanted to do a similar promotion with him the following year, but by then he was selling his toiles for 10 times as much.

IN 1970 Valentino decided to make more affordable clothes and moved into ready-to-wear, first with the prestige French house Mendes. Today his ready-to-wear line is manufactured by GFT in Turin, which makes the clothes of Emanuel Ungaro, Giorgio Armani and others.

Along with his ready-to-wear — always spun off the couture collection, which is the basis of his huge business— there are also Valentino linens and gifts for the home, and the newest product, Valentino perfume.

"I told the technician to mix strawberries and white camelia, for instance. It's an idea, and after they try it, it seems to work."

He is now looking forward to the launch of his perfume next year. "But people are bored with parties," he says. "I don't know what it will be. But we'll try to do something elegant and special."

DEAR ABBY

Grandpa's poem asks 'What's Your Hurry?'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Seeing "Slow Me Down, Lord" by 85-year-old Wilferd A. Peterson in your column not only triggered "Speed Me Up, Lord," it brought to mind a surrebuttal by my grandfather, Samuel Ullman (whose "Youth" was published in your column in 1982 and was often quoted by Gen. Douglas MacArthur).

Grandpa's poem (enclosed) was written circa 1918, so if you think it merits sharing with your readers, you have my permission. — MAYER U. NEWFIELD

DEAR MR. NEWFIELD: Thank you. I do:

WHAT'S YOUR HURRY?
Slack up, brother, what's your hurry,
That so recklessly you scurry,
With your elbows crowding sideways
And your eyes fixed straight ahead?
Is a minute's time so precious,
That you need be so ungracious,
And go tramping on your fellows,
As on the way you speed?
Can't you spare a nod of greeting,
Pass the time of day in meeting,
Swap a joke or smile a little
When a neighbor comes along?
Is the dollar so enticing —
Is success so all-sufficing
That you can't devote a second
To a brother in the throng?
Do you know your destination?
It's a quiet little station,
Where ambition never troubles
And the dollar jingles not;
Where riches are not enduring,
Where your note has passed maturing,
And the richest man's possession
Is a little grassy spot.
Why be over keen in speeding,
On a trail so surely leading
To that lonely little city, where
We all must land at last?
Slack up, brother! What's your hurry,
That so recklessly you scurry?
You may lead a slow procession
E're the road to your obsession.
— By Samuel Ullman, "From a Summit of Years Fourscore"

DEAR ABBY: I am going with a wonderful man. He's good-looking, romantic, decent, sober, works steady and treats me like a queen. So what's the problem? He keeps asking me to take my shoes off so he can kiss my toes and caress my feet. Frankly, I would rather have him pay more attention to the rest of me, but what really turns him on is my feet.

My mother says he sounds like a kook, and she hopes he's not dangerous. Outside of that he is perfectly normal. I love this guy and we're talking marriage. I've known guys to get carried away with other parts of a woman's anatomy, but this is a new one. Have you ever heard of it before? And should I worry? — TOOTSIE-WOOTSIE

DEAR TOOTSIE: Your boyfriend has a foot fetish, which simply means that he is "turned on" (sexually stimulated) by feet. It's nothing new, and it's not dangerous. If he wants to know what caused it, a psychotherapist could probably dig it out of his subconscious. Don't worry about it. You could be "sole-mates."

DEAR ABBY: My father owns a catering business. I am getting married soon, and my father assumes that he will cater my wedding. Abby, I've been to some of the weddings he has catered, and the food was lousy and the service was terrible. His competitor in town does a much better job. I really want a catered wedding but I hate to hurt my father's feelings. What should I do? — DESPERATE IN JERSEY

DEAR DESPERATE: Rather than bite the hand that feeds you by engaging your father's competitor, elope.

DEAR ABBY: "Bill" and I have been married for seven months and we can't come to terms on our husband-and-wife roles. Bill thinks we should share our household expenses 50-50, but when it comes to dividing up the household chores 50-50, I seem to get all the responsibility.

He shows little gratitude for what I do, and complains because I refuse to iron his shirts. Because I refuse to iron his shirts, he refuses to help me with the maintenance on my car. I feel that I am doing more than my fair share, and if he expects me to iron his shirts, then he should pay all the bills and let me stay home and do all the household chores.

I would appreciate your opinion about this — and also the opinion of your readers. — DON'T DO SHIRTS IN FLORIDA

DEAR DON'T: The solution as I see it is for you to learn how to maintain your own car and for Bill to learn to iron his own shirts, then neither of you would be at the mercy of the other.

DEAR ABBY: Do you know what really makes my day? It's when the phone rings while I'm up in the attic, down the basement, in the bathroom, taking a nap, out in the garage, under the house or out in the garden.

Yesterday I was in the garden when I heard the phone ring. I was in the midst of scattering seeds and fertilizer, but I jerked upright and made a dash for the porch when the phone rang again. With filthy fingers, I clawed the screen door open, ricocheted off a doorway, sprinted down the hall as the phone rang a third time. I lunged for the phone and snatched up the receiver just in time to hear a "click" — then a dial tone!

I replaced the receiver, looked down at my muddy footprints and quietly exclaimed, "Oh (bleep)!"

Abby, if someone thinks I am worth a telephone call, wouldn't you think he would have the common courtesy to let the phone ring six or eight times before hanging up? Agreed? — GEORGE L. HARVEY, MOUNTAIN VIEW, HAWAII

DEAR GEORGE: Agreed. Only I'd recommend letting it ring 10 or 12 times. A possible solution: a cordless phone that you can carry.

AT WIT'S END

Mother's rites of punctuality

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

You're may find this hard to believe, but I was born of a mother who is punctual. She leaves enough time going to the airport to make five detours, follow a line-painting truck for 10 miles at 15 mph, change three flat tires, wait out a four-mile train and make a trip back home to get something she forgot ... and still make the flight.

She lives in a world I will never see. There are parking places near the door when she arrives for anything. The orchestra is unpacking their instruments. The auditorium is dark. Salespeople are scurrying are punching in. Nurses are watering the office plants. The banks still have their blinds down.

You learn early in the family that when mother says dinner is at 6, that's it! The sweet little apple-cheeked lump of gentleness lays it on you with the subtlety of Mr. T. and his "BE THERE!"

There is a ritual. At 5 p.m., mother brings out the hors d'oeuvres. Those who are there when the second hand sweeps around the clock are treated to hot bits of calories. Those who arrive 30 minutes later get cold blobs of whatever no one else wanted or could identify.

At 5:45 the empty plate of appetizers is whisked away. Our daughter once arrived at 5:50. We tried to tell her how great the hors d'oeuvres were. My mother said, "There's no need for all that explanation." She produced a picture from the cookbook and placed it in her lap. "That's what they looked like in the book and mine bore a striking resemblance." My daughter seemed to feel good about it.

Mother is the only one I know who can tell a turkey when it will be done and it is.

We were late once for a cookout. When we arrived, she met us at the curb, flung open all the doors and said, "You're late! Grab a hamburger. We're almost finished eating and at the 'We really should do this more often' part of the evening."

For a while I tried to cover up the fact I hadn't started dinner when mother arrived by putting an onion in the oven, but she caught on to that. Somehow she is always in the kitchen when I am frantically shoving a nail through a potato that is hard as a rock.

Despite the fact that I'm always running a day and a half late, my mother does give me Brownie points for trying new recipes and breaking new culinary ground. It is not without its risks. One night I tried to experiment with a recipe for fresh strawberries swimming in a rich, thin sauce of cream and sugar. When I took it out of the refrigerator the berries were shriveled and with four noses the cream sauce could have passed for Mount Rushmore. My mother did not raise a fool. I quickly got a picture of it out of the cookbook and explained, "This is what it would have looked like if it had turned out."

Somehow it didn't work for me.

Cotton 'tales'

Copley News Service

For more than 5,000 years cotton has played an important role in many countries' economy. History tells of cotton grown and traded by ancient Egyptians. Bits of cotton fabric and string dating from 3000 B.C. have been found in Pakistan.

hurricanes

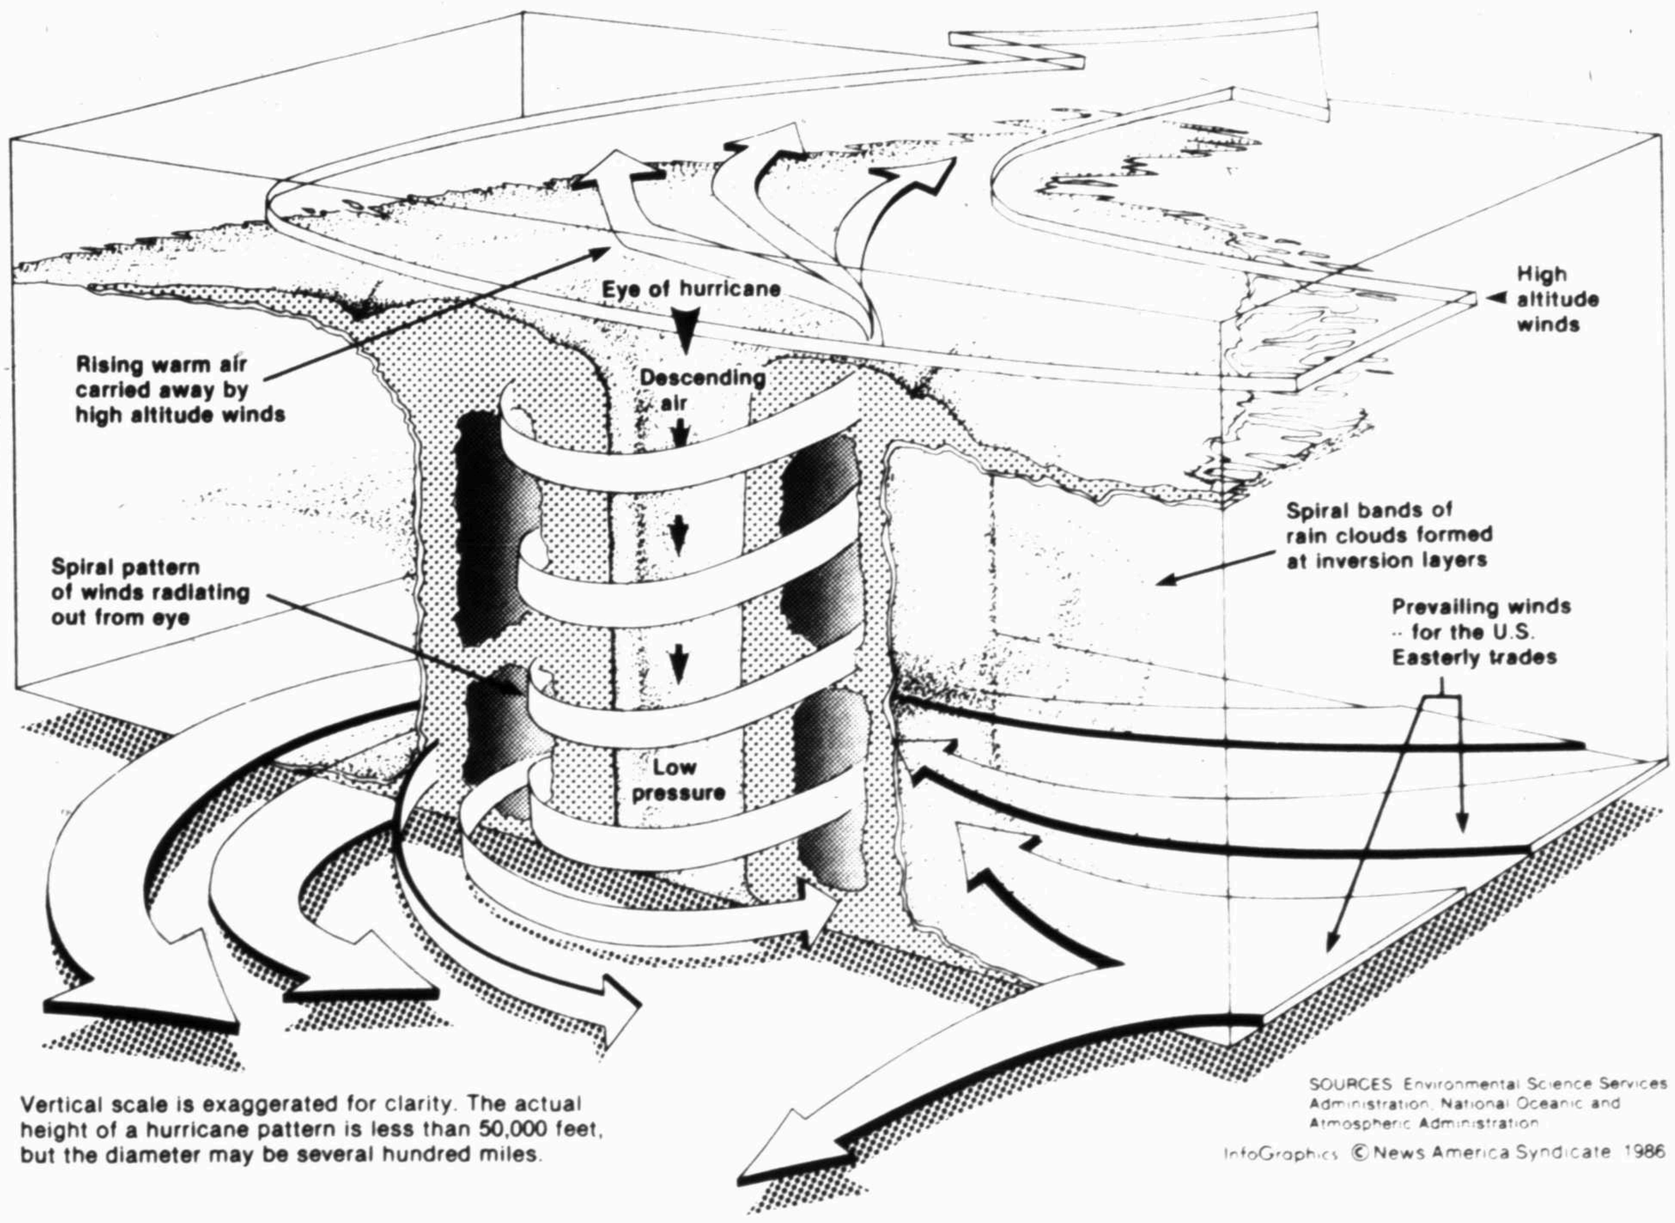

The anatomy of a hurricane

Hurricanes are formed when a number of different weather conditions coincide, although experts are divided as to which conditions cause and which are caused by the hurricane.

During hurricane season, conflicting wind systems from the northern and southern hemispheres, influenced by the position of the sun and the spin of the earth, meet and create a low pressure band close to the equator. In this area -- known to sailors as the doldrums -- stray wind currents cause small, swirling patterns, any of which can develop into tropical storms and, eventually, hurricanes. Two basic requirements are the warm waters of the equatorial regions, and suitable wind patterns, at both low and high altitude.

Air from surrounding high pressure areas tends to flow into these low pressure patterns and speed up the rise of currents of warm air, heated by the ocean. Next, the rising moist air releases water vapor and heat energy, which serves to accelerate the spin.

A tubular structure is formed, which would soon collapse and dissipate if it were not for other wind currents at a higher altitude. These draw off the warm rising air, and cause more air to flow into the system from below. When the winds within the system exceed 74 mph, the storm is officially designated a hurricane.

Vertical scale is exaggerated for clarity. The actual height of a hurricane pattern is less than 50,000 feet, but the diameter may be several hundred miles.

The end result is a small, calm area of low pressure -- the eye -- surrounded by swirling winds of up to 200 miles per hour. The spiral storm pattern is sustained by the warm ocean until it runs into coolers waters, or hits a land mass. Inland, it quickly becomes starved for heat energy and is dragged apart by the friction of moving over land.

Hurricanes reaching the U.S.

There are between 20 and 40 recorded hurricanes in the North Atlantic each year. Only about a third of these hit the U.S. coastline, and most lose power immediately upon reaching land.

Figures for total North Atlantic hurricanes include those passing through the Caribbean.

Hurricanes, typhoons and cyclones

Hurricane activity is not restricted to the Atlantic Ocean, although the storm patterns are known by different names in other parts of the earth. In the Indian Ocean and South Pacific, they are called cyclones, and in the North Pacific, typhoons. The storm season in the southern hemisphere ends as the hurricane season begins in the northern hemisphere.

Lives lost in tropical storms

Since 1975, there have been 131 deaths in the U.S. directly related to tropical storm activity. The highest annual number of fatalities over the past ten years was 36 in 1978, followed by the 30 deaths in 1985.

Mitterrand, Gorbachev talk human rights

By ALISON SMALE

MOSCOW (AP) — French President Francois Mitterrand toned down his attacks on the Kremlin's human rights policies Monday, the first day of his four-day visit to Moscow, and joined Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev in advocating detente.

Both leaders seemed determined to stress conciliation rather than reopen the disagreements that emerged on Mitterrand's last visit in 1984.

At that time, Mitterrand said at a Kremlin dinner that the case of dissident Andrei D. Sakharov became an issue in the West because it put in doubt liberties guaranteed by the Helsinki accords.

At a similar dinner hosted Monday by Gorbachev, Mitterrand said "rights know no frontiers," and governments have a moral duty to ensure exchanges between peoples and a resolution of divided family cases.

But he did not mention Sakharov, the Nobel Peace Prize winner, or any other Soviet dissident by name. Mitterrand told Sakharov's wife, Yelena Bonner, at a meeting in Paris in May that he never forgot her husband's plight and she should "never hesitate to contact me. I can be your voice."

Mrs. Bonner returned to the Soviet Union after receiving medical treatment in the West and she and Sakharov are living in internal exile in the closed city of Gorky.

Perhaps anticipating criticism from Mitterrand, the leader of France's Socialist Party, Gorbachev took up the human rights issue himself.

Speaking first at the dinner, which was shown on a closed-circuit broadcast to reporters at the Foreign Ministry's press center, Gorbachev said, "We are ... prepared for international cooperation on humanitarian problems and these are not mere words."

Gorbachev also denounced the United States for its refusal to agree to an accord at a conference on human rights that ended in May in Bern, Switzerland.

Washington "quashed that opportunity," but Moscow intends to abide by the terms of the resolution, anyway, Gorbachev said.

The criticism of the United States over the Bern conference was Gorbachev's only swipe at the United States in a 10-minute address.

Instead, he expanded on previous statements advocating an increased European role in shaping East-West relations and a new era of detente.

"Detente must be the aim of present-day diplomacy, and durable, mature detente is a benefit for all," he said. "Everybody sees that Europeans are sick and tired of nerve-racking confrontation and tension. They need the air of detente."

Mitterrand said he and Gorbachev agreed at their 2½-hour meeting preceding the dinner on the importance of Europe's role in international affairs.

"It is necessary that Europe should become master of its own destiny again," Mitterrand said.

He also said the United States and Soviet Union have a responsibility to achieve "significant results" at their Geneva arms control talks, but neither he nor Gorbachev mentioned a U.S.-Soviet summit.

Gerasimov was asked about such a summit and he indicated the two leaders might discuss that when they continue their talks Tuesday.

Mitterrand was in New York last week to celebrate America's Independence Day with President Reagan, but Reagan said he would not be sending any message to Gorbachev through the French leader.

Soviets say second summit must deal with disarmament

LONDON (AP) — Soviet Ambassador Leonid M. Zamyatin said Monday his government wants a second summit with the United States, but only if it can resolve serious disarmament questions.

Ian Mikardo of the opposition Labor Party asked Zamyatin during an appearance by the ambassador before the House of Commons Foreign Affairs Committee about prospects for another summit between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

"We are ready to conduct that meeting in order to solve one or two — perhaps more — cardinal issues, which are connected with the issue of disarmament," Zamyatin said through an interpreter. He added that the international atmosphere must been such that neither side is "impeded" from attending.

"The question is what we take to the meeting. It is very important that it just shouldn't be another meeting at which the two leaders get to know one another," he said, referring to first summit in Geneva last November.

"It must be a meeting where real issues are tackled and resolved."

Reagan and Gorbachev agreed in Geneva to meet again this year in the United States, but arrangements have been stalled.

Working parties from the United States and the Soviet Union are attempting to schedule a pre-summit session between Secretary of State George P. Shultz the Soviet foreign minister, Eduard A. Shevardnadze.

Zamyatin said it was incorrect to contend that Gorbachev needs a second summit more than Reagan.

"We consider that it is needed by both sides," he said.

The ambassador, a member of the Soviet Communist Party Central Committee, said the summit "must lead to results which must be palpable for the world as a whole. Both parties must create an atmosphere in the world which would be (conducive) to a positive (result)."

Col. Gen. Nicolai Chervov, head of the directorate of the general staff of the Soviet armed forces, told the committee: "The arms race is now reaching that critical level beyond which there is no possibility of return."

He said the buildup of weapons is being restrained by certain treaties and obligations, "but if armaments are going to continue growing even further, then we are going to see the arms race getting out of control."

The Commons committee has been studying British-Soviet relations for several months, and the two Soviet officials accepted invitations to testify.

Police charge harborers of Mengele

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Police have filed criminal charges against two couples who sheltered Nazi war criminal Josef Mengele during the 18 years he lived in Brazil, a spokesman reported Monday.

Jair Barbosa Martins, press spokesman for the federal police in Sao Paulo, said Hungarian immigrants Geza and Gita Stammer and Austrian immigrants Wolfram and Liselotte Bossert were charged Friday with lying to authorities and with harboring an illegal alien.

If convicted, they could be sentenced to up to four years in prison, he said.

"The case is now in the hands of a federal prosecutor who will have to decide whether or not the two couples will be tried," Martins said. He added he did not know how long it might take for the prosecutor to make his decision.

Remains of a body identified by experts as that of Mengele were exhumed June 6, 1985, from a grave in the cemetery at Embu, 17 mile from Sao Paulo.

According to local residents, the man subsequently identified as Mengele drowned on Feb.7, 1979, while swimming at the Bertioga resort near Sao Paulo. Mengele, known as the "Angel of death" at the Auschwitz concentration camp during World War II, would have been 68 at that time.

Martins said the main charge against the Bosserts was that they lied to authorities when they identified Mengele's body as being that of Wolfgang Gerhard, the war criminal's first benefactor in Brazil. Before returning to Austria where he died in 1978, Gerhard gave Mengele his Brazilian identification papers.

The major charge against the Stammers is that they "knowingly hid an illegal alien under their roof," Martins said.

Two weeks after the body was removed from the Embu cemetery, an international team of forensic experts concluded that "within reasonable scientific certainty" the exhumed body was that of Mengele.

About three months ago, Mengele's dental X-Rays were found in Sao Paulo and Lowell Levine, a U.S. forensic scientist, said the remains "may now be identified as Josef Mengele with absolute certainty."

Opposition criticizes Contra aid for fear of 'more violence, pain'

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Six opposition political parties charged that U.S. military aid for Contra rebels fighting the leftist Sandinista government will cause "more violence and pain for Nicaraguans."

In a joint statement issued Monday, the parties also repeated an earlier call to the Sandinistas to open talks with political opponents, although they said the Contras should be barred from any such talks.

The parties' statement was prompted by the June 25 vote in the U.S. House of Representatives supporting President Reagan's plan to send $100 million in mostly military aid to the Contras. The measure now goes to the Senate, where it is believed assured of passage.

Since the House vote, Nicaragua's leaders have closed the only opposition newspaper indefinitely, barred one Roman Catholic priest who has criticized the government from returning home, and expelled a bishop.

Erick Ramirez, president of the Social Christian Party, told a news conference at Social Democrat Party headquarters that the Sandinista leaders "are deepening the totalitarian project under the pretext of the House vote."

"The decision by the United States Congress to militarily support Nicaraguan insurgent groups and the repressive response of (the Sandinista government) only strengthens the military options and ... consequently presages more violence and pain for Nicaraguans," the parties said in their statement.

They urged the government to reopen the opposition La Prensa newspaper and to allow Monsignor Bismarck Carballo, spokesman for the church in Nicaragua, and Bishop Pablo Antonio Vega back into the country.

Carballo was barred from coming home after a trip to Europe, and Vega received asylum in neighboring Honduras after being expelled Friday.

Sandinista refusal to take those steps "evidently signifies the government does not want peace and wants the war to continue," Ramirez said.

Joining the Social Christians and Social Democratics in issuing the statement were the Christian Democratic Party, the Conservative Party of Nicaragua, the Independent Liberal Party and the Constitutional Liberal Party.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Tehran bomb explodes in tea shop, wounds 37

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — A bomb exploded in a tea shop in the Iranian capital's Revolution Square during morning rush hour today, wounding at least 37 people, Iran's official news agency reported.

The 7:40 a.m. blast in Tehran ignited a canister of cooking gas in the shop, the Islamic Republic News Agency said.

The explosions destroyed the tea shop, three other nearby shops and a bus depot, IRNA said. Other buildings within a 150-foot radius were damaged, the report said.

Twenty-four of the wounded were hospitalized, according to the IRNA report, which was monitored in Nicosia.

IRNA said the initial explosion was caused by a time-bomb and that the device contained about 30 pounds of explosives. The report did not specify what type of explosives were used.

The state-run news agency said the bombing was "the work of agents of world imperialism."

The IRNA report did not elaborate. But authorities have blamed earlier bombings in Iran on the Mujahedeen Khalq, a dissident underground faction opposed to the fundamentalist government of Iran.

IRNA blamed the Mujahedeen Khalq for a May 9 bus bombing in Tehran in which the driver and conductor were killed. The group denied the allegation.

Monastery closes doors

BERCHTESGADEN, West Germany (AP) — The Franciscan monastery in Berchtesgaden, founded in 1695, will close its doors Aug. 1, officials in the order announced Monday.

Waning interest from the younger generation and aging in the 28 monasteries that the Franciscans still operate in Bavaria forced the closing, a statement from the order said.

As recently as the 1930s, 600 men lived in Franciscan monasteries in the state, the provincial vicar, Father Arno Muehlrath said in the statement. Today, the number is 180.

Indians restore temple

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Cambodian and Indian experts will begin restoring the 12th century Angkor Wat temple complex in Cambodia in October, the official Cambodian news agency SPK reported today.

War, vandalism and neglect have ravaged the complex and halted previous restoration work.

The temple, one of the world's largest religious structures, was built from 1113 to 1150 near Angkor, the capital of the Khmer Empire.

"The Kampuchean (Cambodian) and Indian teams will together work in this field and it will be a symbol of our good cooperation," A.K. Pandey, India's charge d'affaires in Phnom Penh, was quoted as saying by SPK in a dispatch monitored in Bangkok.

India is the only non-communist country that recognizes the government Vietnam installed after invading Cambodia in 1978.

Hijackers make last plea

GENOA, Italy (AP) — The Achille Lauro trial went to the jury Monday after a final plea by two men accused as hijackers for sympathy for their Palestinian cause. One statement ended with the cry: "Long live Arafat!"

Authorities kept the location of deliberations a secret, worried that terrorists might try to attack the jurors. Judge Lino Monteverde said he expected a verdict on Wednesday or Thursday.

Fifteen defendants are on trial in the Oct. 7 hijacking of the Italian cruise ship off the coast of Egypt. A crippled American passenger, Leon Klinghoffer, 69, of New York, was shot dead before the hijackers surrendered to Egyptian authorities Oct. 9.

Ten defendants are being tried in their absence, including Mohammed Abbas, also known as Abul Abbas, a leader of a faction of Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization. Abbas is accused of masterminding the hijacking.

The four Palestinians accused of actually commandeering the ship are in custody. One will be tried later because he was a minor at the time of the hijacking.

Seven killed at school

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — At least seven people were killed when unidentified gunmen raided a government political education school outside Kampala, people entering the capital said.

The government made no official statement on the report, but the travelers said Monday that the attack occurred Sunday night at Wakiso, 10 miles northwest of Kampala.

The ideological school at Wakiso is one of several President Yoweri Museveni established after his National Resistance Movement took power on Jan. 25, ending a five-year insurgency.
