FLAMES DIE AND RUINS AT DOVER BEING SEARCHED

PEACE TIME 'WAR SECTOR' IS BEING GIVEN A THOROUGH SEARCH

(By The Associated Press)
DOVER, N. J., July 12.—Soldiers, sailors and marines hunted for their dead on Jersey's peace time battle field today.

Through the blackened ruins of the Lake Denmark region, where a variant bolt of lightning set loose a gun-bombardment in the navy ammunition depot, searching parties of armed men and stretcher bearers conducted systematic surveys.

No Ground Overlooked

No torn field or shattered building, no splintered piece of wood, escaped attention. If dead were still lying among the debris those who had been saved were determined to find the bodies that they might at least be honored in death for the manner of their dying.

If wounded, shell shocked, or otherwise incapacitated men still roamed the woods or lay helpless in shell holes, the searchers planned to find them and bring them all.

They Make Good Searchers

The searchers were men of war, but they proved themselves no less efficient when engaged on a mission of peace and mercy. And while they worked plans were under way by their superiors for investigations looking toward prevention of such a disaster again taking its toll of life and property.

The body of the twentieth victim, Mrs. John Wadhams, of Lake Denmark, was found today in the wreckage of her home by her husband who is chief civilian clerk at the depot.

Bombardment Ceases

DOVER, N. J., July 12.—Cessation of bombardment by shells today warranted uninterrupted recovery of the dead and help to the living on New Jersey's peace time battle field. Several hundred soldiers and ma-

Vaughn Wilson Is Named President Of Exchange Club

Vaughn E. Wilson, prominent young local attorney, was elected president of the Exchange club of Lubbock at the regular weekly luncheon meeting of the organization here Tuesday, when new officers for the fiscal year—to relieve those who had been serving temporarily—were elected.

Nolan E. Whitlow, insurance man was elected secretary and E. L. Noey, contractor was elected first vice president. Other officers were retained in the capacities held by them from the temporary election at the organization meeting several weeks ago.

It was the unanimous opinion of those present at the Tuesday meeting that a ball team from the Exchange club can more than hold its own against clubs from similar organizations of the city, and a committee composed of Nolan E. Whitlow, Dr. E. B. Malone and A. B. Slagle was instructed to issue a challenge to the winner of the Rotary-Kiwanis game here Thursday afternoon.

The date for the match of course has not yet been set, pending agreement with the winner of the Thursday clash but it is presumed that the game will be arranged for some time next week.

The club voted to avail itself of the accommodations that will be offered in the new Lubbock hotel in the regular meetings, and will begin holding meetings as soon as the building is completed for occupancy.

MURDER MYSTERY Baffles Boston City Officials

SCANT CLUE LEAVES BUT SMALL CHANCES OF LOCATING SLAYER

(By Associated Press)
BOSTON, July 12.—Boston police today were faced with the most gruesome and baffling murder mystery they have encountered in recent years.

The body of a girl, mutilated, dismembered and unidentified, lay in the city mortuary after it had been discovered early today on a lonely road that winds its way between two cemeteries in the Mattapan district of the city. Police believe the young woman, an attractive and apparently refined, had been dead a week and that her body had been cut up and packed into the two boxes and buried in a hole in which it was found some time last Sunday. It was indicated by a superficial examination by medical authorities.

The only clue left for the police to work on was the manager of trying the knots in the heavy window cord that bound the boxes. They were tied apparently by a seaman or some one familiar with nautical knots.

Around-The-World Travel Record Is Trembling As Americans Hop Off On Final Lap Of Epoch-Making Journey

Captain Francesco de Pinedo, famous Italian aviator, will start a 44,000-mile flight around the world in August, in the course of it he will try to fly clear across the Pacific ocean, a non-stop flight of 2500 miles.

(By The Associated Press)
SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, July 12.—Covering distances on the surface of the globe at a rate of speed that even Jules Verne could not imagine, Edward Evans and Linton Wells left Salt Lake City at 4:20 this morning to continue at a clip that will probably break all records for around-the-world travel.

They have 28 days as the time in which they will encompass the earth, and in order to do this they must arrive at the World Building in New York by 12:01 tomorrow morning Eastern daylight-saving time.

Will Break Record

Even though the adventurers fail to make the trip on schedule they will break the now existing record made by John Henry Mears, of New York, in 1912, of 25 days, 21 minutes and 35 seconds. Mears, however, did not have high-powered airplanes at his disposal. Leaving Victoria, B. C., early yesterday morning, Evans and Wells arrived in Salt Lake at 8:30 o'clock last night and unable to make immediate connections for the East, were forced to wait until this morning when they departed on a plane chartered from the Western Air Express, Inc.

They expect to meet Eddie Stinson, Chicago aviator, at 10:30 o'clock this morning at North Platte, Neb., where he will pilot their plane on their last lap around the world.

Trip Began June 16

Captain Evans, who is a wealthy Detroit banker, and Mr. Wells, a newspaperman, started the trip on June 16, from New York. Because the plane they had expected was out of commission, the globe trotters were forced to motor to Paris, where six hours later they left on a chartered plane and arrived at 6:30 p. m. in Cologne, Germany. Obtaining a German plane they flew to Maudenber and thence by automobile to Berlin. After two changes of planes they reached Moscow, Russia, at 5 p. m., June 23.

On the morning of June 25, Evans and Wells arrived at Omsk, Siberia. Boarding a train for Harbin, Eastern Siberia, they were again disappointed upon their arrival as the plane expected was not available. At Mukden, July 1, they boarded a train for Fusan, Korea. From Fusan they went to Yokohama and left Japan at 8 o'clock the night of July 2.

The steamship "Empress of Asia" waited six hours for the arrival of the two at the Japanese seaport, and reached Victoria, B. C., yesterday morning.

APPEAL IS MADE FOR REFERENDUM VOTE IN NATION

"LIBERAL CONGRESS" IS REQUESTED BY WETS IN NEWEST MOVE

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, July 12.—Plans for a nation-wide campaign to elect a "Liberal Congress" and promote wet and dry referendums in various states were outlined in a circular sent out today, calling for contributions to a campaign fund for the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment.

The circular was signed by the voluntary committee of the District of Columbia, headed by Major General William M. Wright, retired. It said:

"The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment is now entering upon a nation-wide campaign for the election of a Liberal Congress, partly by nomination of Liberals in individual districts, and states, and partly through referendums in New York, Wisconsin, Montana, Nevada, Colorado, California, Missouri and other states, in which it is obtaining pledges from the present Senators and Congressmen that they will support modification if their state or district decides for it by their vote."

"The association faces the greatest struggle since it was founded and the greatest opportunity."

"The volunteer committee of the District of Columbia, organized along the lines of similar committees throughout the country, has undertaken to raise a fund in support of the constructive campaign of the association, the money to be paid to the voluntary committee, and to be appropriated by the committee itself. The accounts of the committee will be on file in the office of the treasurer and open to inspection by subscribers at any time."

Two Hurt In Wreck East of Crosbyton

Mrs. A. B. Neal, of Dallas, received serious injuries, and Mr. Neal several minor cuts and bruises when the Ford coupe in which they were driving was struck head on by a heavy truck about 8:00 o'clock Monday night. SOFIA, Bulgaria, July 12.—(AP)—King Boris' trip abroad is a matrimonial scandal, and he has absolutely no intention of abandoning his throne.

The only abdication likely to overtake the king on his present voyage is that of his state of bachelorhood. Such is the gist of the information imparted the Associated Press by Premier Andrey Litcheff in the course of an interview today.

"The rumor of a plot against the king is absurd. Calm reigns in Bulgaria. The king's trip abroad is the best proof of that. Perfect understanding exists between the king and myself."

FLAPPER INSPIRES POETIC FIRES

Swooning Fair Ladies of Ages Past No More Romantic Than Modern Girl, Says Present Day Bard

BY HORTENSE SAUNDERS

NEW YORK, July 12.—Is the modern girl who climbs rather than clings as much of an inspiration to the poet as her long-skirted, long-haired, long-suffering sister of generations gone by? To this question Joseph Auslander, a very modern poet, whose taste includes expensive neckties, playing the stock market on margin, boxing and movies, as well as lambics and sonnets—replies: "She is."

"Woman," he reassures us, "will always be the great inspiration for verse, no matter what she puts on or takes off. But the litter of today furnishes a different type of inspiration from the leader of yesterday. "She is a challenge. She has audacity, novelty, range, and an ironic courage. Instead of lending her a hand, we quicken our steps to keep up with her." Then agreeing that some definition was necessary, since every age has its modern women, he defines modernity as contemporaneity. "When a woman is a prominent actor in her age," he goes on, "knows her lines, takes her cues and gives a good performance so that she is a model of her time, then she is the modern woman of the day in which she lives."

JOSEPH AUSLANDER he is only a big boy and treat him accordingly.

Put women, he maintains, have never understood themselves. "Until today," he continues, "they have not faced their emotions or plumbed their urges and complexes. Their efforts to do so are disrupting accepted standards—man's standards—they are hard on his smug 'principles,' but they are forcing progress in human understanding." Auslander admits, however, that a suggestion of helplessness or frailty in women is most appealing to all men. "But I can't see that these qualities are vanishing from the feminine population," he observes. "And when a brilliant and scintillating woman suddenly displays them, the effect is devastating." "Fortunately for the race, attraction and sex appeal cannot be legislated in or out of existence. We love or we don't without much conscious guidance. Men loved the Amazons, they loved the fainting Victorians. They seem fated to love the current type of womanhood, whether they approve of her or not."

Speaking as a critic, he says: "Women poets of today are exceptionally fine. Hitherto women poets, with the notable exception of Sappho, have effected the image of a soul men told them they had. Today they are searching their own hearts and have the courage to write honestly of their emotions as women. "Most of them, to be sure, write narrow linear lyrics—short, piercing or scintillating verses. When howling, raging or lung power is needed, the woman poet falls short. But some day she may write an epic." Auslander gave up a professorship at Harvard to devote all his time to writing. His first volume of poetry printed five years ago was a runner-up for the Pulitzer prize, and this year his "Cyclops' Eye" has placed his very definitely in the front rank. "Clergymen, teachers, reformers, and parents may be lined up against the flapper," he concludes, "but speaking for the poets, I may say we are all for her."

Legion Met In Regular Session On Monday Night

The local Post of the American Legion met in regular session here Monday night in the basement of the Legion building, where approximately 50 ex-service men enjoyed a short, snappy program punctuated by unanimous votes criticizing the demonstration staged in Paris last Sunday in protest of the Franco-American war debt settlement. A light feed consisted of hamburgers and watermelon was served, and, in the absence of any stated program, a general round table discussion of the Legion and its activities was held. It was decided that the Legion will bring a benefit picture to one of the local theatres some time during August. Arrangements can be made for same locally, the picture to be released through the film service of the national headquarters. A committee was named to handle the matter, and to work with the management of one of the local theatres in selection of the historical film. Other business included resignation of A. C. Jackson as Finance Officer due to the press of other matters and consequent inability to give the time to the Legion that the position demands. Jackson was elected at the last meeting to replace F. W. Groce, resigned, but was absent. It was announced that his successor would be named at the next meeting.

Sultan of Morocco Is Parisian Guest

PARIS, July 12. (AP)—Paris today received a distinguished and unusual visitor in the Sultan of Morocco, Mulai Youssef, who has come at the invitation of the government to participate in the celebration of Bastille Day and to attend the opening of a new mosque here.

World War veteran, who said that he felt the demonstration as he saw it was an insult to the American people, the American flag, and the thousands of American soldiers who perished on the battlefields of France that France and surrounding nations might be saved from the ruthless hand of the relentless German Kaiser.

He recalled that at the time of the entry of American soldiers into the world conflict, France welcomed the troops with open arms, when it really meant life of the people and the nation, but that when pay day comes, France is prone to forget the sacrifices made by her foreign friend. He charged that the French press is largely responsible for the demonstration, and urged that the 1927 international convention of the Legion be transferred from Paris to some other place where American veterans will not be called upon to be the recipients of a false hospitality.

HARD TALK BY YOUTH

A business girl wrote to a friend: "I went home over the week end, and I am still shaking hands with myself that I had enough sense to get out and earn my own living and be somebody when I did. Otherwise I should be just such a mush pudding as my two sisters."

"It is the same old thing—mother fling up the kid's fingers and kissing the sore spots, rushing after me with rubbers and wraps, stewing over the kitchen stove, and no conversation except how Molly Jones's new dress was made or what the grocery boy said about the picnic."

"I wish there might be a school for mothers, so that one could look across at them, and talk as man to man, instead of always harping on the nursery stuff."

No, it is not a cruel letter. It is merely hard with the hardness of egotistical youth, which is always prolific of its blessings. The thing she is going to be the most sorry for by-and-by is having written it. She doesn't mean it. She only thinks she means it.

However, I hope the time will never come when this girl needs her mother and there will be no mother to go to; days of lonely illness with no one to hurry in bag and baggage to nurse her; or if she marries, a thousand perplexities that only a mother can straighten out. But aside from the need she may have for her, the girl's soul will grow and she will recognize in her own problems a kinship of spirit with her mother that youth could not possibly know.

If it is not too late, she will be able to talk to her mother, not as "man to man" but as "woman to woman." And her punishment will be that her own children will grow up and think her a "back number." It's a consistent world at last.

FERGUSON TAKES LIBERTY OF REMOVING COAT AT HENDERSON

(By the Associated Press) HENDERSON, Texas, July 12.—Asking permission to remove his coat, James E. Ferguson did so and launched into a typical attack on Attorney General Dan Moody in a speech here last night.

The ex-Governor, members of the Henderson band and others were shaken up somewhat when the speakers stand caved in before the program got under way. No one was seriously injured.

Davidson repeated his opinion that James E. Ferguson had "hatched a row with the young Attorney General to get the latter in the run-off knowing that it would be impossible to beat Davidson in the second primary."

LEGION PROTESTS DEMONSTRATION IN FRANCE

Allen Brothers Post, local unit of the American Legion, adopted a resolution at its regular meeting here Monday night criticizing and condemning the French press and actions of the populace of France in urging and conducting the public demonstration last Sunday in connection with the disapproval of the American-Franco World War debt settlement, and voted to send copies of this resolution to state and national headquarters of the Legion, with an appeal that proper action be taken to advise French officials of the feeling existing in America over the incident.

The vote followed an extemporaneous talk by Attorney Robt. Higgins.

Moody at Palestine PALESTINE, Texas, July 12. (AP)—The chief duty of the people now is to reclaim their government from the control of irresponsible power and retire James E. Ferguson from public life. Dan Moody, candidate for Governor declared in an address here last night.

He was reviewing his former declarations that "Fergusonism" is the issue of the Governor's race. Moody asserted that he was willing to discuss other issues and had been doing so. In this connection, he touched on law enforcement, education, prohibition, taxation and allied matters. Any attempt to minimize the issue of Fergusonism in an effort to "catch votes or get Ferguson support in a second primary" is "cheap politics," Moody said.

CIVIC CLUBBERS READY FOR BALL GAME THURSDAY

ROTARY AND KIWANIS IN DEATH GRAPPLE WILL PURSUE VICTORY

With the athletes of both clubs straining at the leash and sweating work-outs the order of the late evening, the baseball teams representing Lubbock's Rotary and Kiwanis organizations will clash in their annual diamond frolic on Thursday afternoon, at 4:30 o'clock, at Merrill park.

Manager Frank Jones, former Hubber and league shortstopper, has a hard hitting aggregation of horsehide chasers ready for the gong he told the Journal today.

The Rotary Board of Strategy, rivaling closely the advisory group of Jawn Jay McGraw, has announced the Rotary entry as follows: Pyseland, pitcher; Benny Hilburn, catcher; Sied Allen, first base; Charlie Gay, second base; Judge Raley, shortstop; Homer Grant, third base; with Kenneth Kimbro, Oscar Sensabaugh, and Guy McAfee in the outer works.

Just who will umpire the tilt has not yet been decided but both clubs have demanded that a fair and impartial arbiter be appointed.

DIAMOND DISPUTES DECIDED

Catcher interferes with batsman in act of striking at the ball. No runners are on the bases at the time. What is the proper decision and how is the play scored?

The batsman is entitled to first base because of interference on the part of the catcher.

He should be sent to first regardless of what happens on said swing. He is entitled to that base no matter what the play.

It should be an injustice to charge a time at bat when an act of an opposing player eliminated his chances of making a base hit.

Billy Evans Says

GOLF STAR MAKES BIG HIT ABROAD

The victory of Bobby Jones in winning the British open was a decidedly popular one at home and abroad. If there is a dissenting vote, it should come from the professional golf players.

In all sports, the professional is regarded as the superior of the amateur. This usually holds good, but golf very often offers a decided exception. Bobby Jones is such an individual.

While Jones is very popular with the professional players, a victory by one of their rank probably would have been more pleasing, simply because it would keep the pro to the fore, and that is quite desirable if he is to continue to get the big money.

It's been 25 years since an amateur won the British open. Harold Hilton captured it in 1897. He also won it in 1892. Only three amateurs have ever been successful in its conquest.

Great U. S. Year The winning of the British amateur crown by Jess Sweetser, the victory by the American amateurs in the Walker cup play and the triumph of Bobby Jones in the British open, will make the year of 1925 one long to be remembered in England, and not at all pleasantly.

Editorials THE RIGHT SPIRIT

Sunday night four of the largest churches of the South Plains entered into a merger—a combination of worship which will feature Sunday night services in Lubbock for at least the next six weeks.

The Journal sees a great many good things in this plan and absolutely no drawbacks. Persons of one denomination are given the opportunity of hearing pastors from other churches preach, choirs are permitted to combine to better the music and members of different congregations are given a chance to mingle with those of other creeds.

The Journal is glad to see the Christian people of Lubbock cooperating as their pastors cooperate and it believes that Jesus Christ, the One Great Leader of all denominations, would, if here again, express His pleasure at the action.

A TEST OF STRENGTH

A man sits among the wreckage of a building with a gun in his hands. He is there to prevent any more destruction of property. This is in the face of the fact that the structure was signed almost eight years ago, and with the armistice we thought there was an end to war.

The man sitting with the gun is in San Francisco. Trouble between union carpenters and American plan employers there has brought on industrial strife, war in peacetime, the destruction of construction.

A "test of strength" is what they call an upheaval of this sort. The sporting principle is somewhat the same as that of a race riot. It is a fall back upon brute force, with bullets and bricks speaking and you know how reasonable a bullet or a brick can be.

It would be a nice thing for America if, instead of these "tests of strength" we were to have a few "tests of brains" just for the novelty of the thing.

THE WIND HOLDS OUT

There were grave fears during March that the financial ship of the country would see some rough sailing. The apprehensions went unverified. Looking back over the first six months of 1926 we see the ship has been carried well along in her course, her sails well filled by a friendly business wind.

JUDGMENT NEEDED

There are still some people in Lubbock who evidently want to take a chance with their automobiles. Four have been stolen here in the past week and police report that in no case as far as they have been able to find, have the machines been adequately locked.

A man with any judgment at all should be able to face conditions in Lubbock as they are today and realize that when he leaves his automobile unlocked that he is inviting the motor department of the light-fingered gang to "get in and step on the gas."

SUMMER COTTAGE

'Twas a mighty classy cottage that we picked out, on the lake, so we packed the car and drove there in a day. It's a job to pack the flock of things ya always have to take, but I guess vacations always been that way.

All the silverware was rusty, and the table linen torn, an' the dishes in the cabinet full of smudges. From the wear and tear of many years, the carpet looked feyler, and the windows in the cottage wouldn't budge.

Upstairs rooms were like an oven, and the beds were hard as lead and with every inconvenience were we blest. When we got there, we felt peppy; when we left there—almost dead. What a wondrous place to get a dern good rest.

IN NEW YORK SEE-SAWING UP and down BROADWAY

NEW YORK, July 13.—"Waiting table," once a pet vacation job for college students, seems to have been permanently replaced by "jazz-banding."

One Broadway agent tells me his offices and mail are becoming cluttered with pleas from college lads for resort and cafe work during the vacation months.

And, as for the co-eds, any number of requests are received for "entertaining and hostess work." A large number of these emphasize the ability to do the Charleston.

On the other hand, ambitious young artists and writers who once were pictured as "starving in Greenwich Village garrets," appear in many sections of Manhattan "waiting on table."

One of the Times Square region caterers has a corps of noon-hour waiters, all of them struggling artists, who exchange their labor for their meals. No other compensation is demanded.

Further, they make it known that they will not accept tips for services. Are they not "artists"?

A number of patrons, thinking the "no-tip" request to be a mere gesture, left dimes and quarters. On the following day they found them displayed in a glass case as "souvenirs." The young literary aspirants had turned them down.

Last winter I used to chat with a bright looking youngster who brought me tea and toast of Sunday noons in a Macdougal street tea room.

Immediately after leaving the order he would go to a corner by a big fireplace and zestfully begin editing a manuscript.

Passing a Fifth avenue book store the other day I noticed a placard announcing that this young man would "autograph copies of his new book 'for all purchasers.'"

A much-told tale about the "village" concerns a sculptor and painter who for many months lived in a bleak studio with hunger as his room-mate.

Those who know art saw in him a man of great ability. His work was shown in one of the leading galleries and a monthly magazine, devoted to society and the arts, published many reproductions, praising them highly. But his work was not "popular." It did not sell.

With fame and praise all about him, the man was slowly starving. Yet he said nothing.

One day, after he had not been seen about for some time, acquaintances went to his room. They found him in a state of collapse. A partly munched crust of bread told the story.

His story went around the village and came to the ears of a Chicago heiress who chanced to be visiting Manhattan. Within a few months they were married.

The other day I saw him drive through the village in a grand coupe. He passed the scene of his one-time sadly.

money that is owed him. But over in Hungary the prevailing impression of America and Americans present a bit more mellowed. Many a man invests a lot of money in a home so he will have some place to stay away from.

No man can be judged by his talents, but only by the use he makes of them.

Sometimes it is necessary to detour on the road to success.

You can even start mending after you are broke.

It is apparently only occasionally that souls which were created for each other find each other, and then only by accident.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTER

WASHINGTON'S FAVORITE GHOST WOULD BE EVICTED IF THEY RAZED THIS HOUSE

By CHARLES P. STEWART NEA Service Writer.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Tearing down a ghostly "haunt" and chucking the ghost out into the cold seems like a mean trick.

Nevertheless that's what the government's talking about doing to one of the best known "haunts" in Washington—the old house at 25 First street, Northeast, close to the Capitol, where the National Woman's Party has had its headquarters for the last half dozen years.

The government wants the site for a new Supreme court building. Major Henry Wirz's ghost's prior claim doesn't appear to enter into the government's calculations at all.

Major Wirz was superintendent of Andersonville prison, where Union prisoners were kept, in the south, during the Civil War.

The horrors of Andersonville were a by-word of the period and for long afterward. The captives died there like flies. Wirz was held up as an arch-fiend. Who knows now? Was he as black as he was painted? Or had he excuses to offer, which, in the state of feeling at the time, weren't recognized?

They weren't recognized, at any rate. Wirz was caught when the confederate fell. They hanged him in the side garden of that house at 25 First street, Northeast.

The building was in use as a military prison at the time. White prisoners were kept in the upper rooms. Colored spies were locked in the vaulted brick cellar underneath.

Wirz was not the only one put to death, but he was by far the most famous. Mostly they died facing firing squads. He died by the noose, not like a soldier, but as a common murderer.

Ever since then, according to popular report, Wirz has ranged around that house 'n nights.

When you come to stammer it down to something definite, you can't find anybody who actually has seen the ghost, but you can find plenty of people—mostly old-timers and African decent—who have seen others who did. These ghost stories generally are so. The eye-witness is lacking, but the facts are well authenticated at second hand.

Anyway, the capital hasn't another ghost to offer who's so generally believed in as Major Henry Wirz's.

Congress held sessions in that house at 25 First street, Northeast, for five years, after the British burned the Capitol in 1812.

John C. Calhoun died there. Chief Justice Field of the Supreme court lived there. General Leonard Wood was married there.

The government owned the place until after the Civil War. Then the Capitol sergeant-at-arms remodeled it into three dwellings and sold them off.

Finally they passed into the National Woman's Party's hands at a very modest price, for fashionable Washington has moved away from the vicinity of the Capitol now.

Officials of the National Woman's Party don't take Major Wirz's ghost at all seriously. They've never seen him, they say, and they've never heard him, and, frankly, they doubt if there is any such thing.

But they admit they have trouble in keeping colored help about the place, particularly on night duty.

"Why," said the former, "you use the queerest expressions I ever heard. The other afternoon I accosted a negro and asked him if he thought it would rain, and do you know what he said? He said, 'Little dogs it will and little dogs it won't.'"

The American was puzzled, and the next afternoon met the negro with whom the Englishman had conversed. The negro scratched his head and said: "That ain't what Ah said. Ah just tol' the man that 'pups it would rain and 'pups it wouldn't.'"

Helpful Health Hints By DR. HUGH S. CUMMING

Director General U. S. Public Health Survey

SCARLET FEVER'S HAND

Scarlet fever is essentially a disease of childhood though it is not confined to this age. It is most prevalent in temperate climates but may occur, though with much less frequency, in the tropics.

Scarlet fever is usually contracted by direct personal contact with persons suffering from the disease, indirectly by contact with articles freshly soiled by secretions (discharges) from the nose and throat of infected persons, or through milk which has been contaminated through milking, or the handling of milk by persons who, while not disabled, are suffering from the disease, or are sufficiently recovered from an attack to be at work, but who are still capable of conveying the infection.

Some cases of scarlet fever are so mild as to go unrecognized, and these "masked" cases help to spread the disease.

Most cases and deaths from scarlet fever occur in children under school age, though the disease is uncommon in infants before the seventh month. When scarlet fever does occur in infants it is usually quite severe, and the younger the child the more dangerous the disease, as a rule.

Two very important complications that are apt to occur in scarlet fever are middle ear disease, which may result in deafness, and acute inflammation of the kidneys, which may develop even in a mild case and after the patient is apparently well.

Quite recently new discoveries have been made in the study of scarlet fever, which promise to lead to improved methods in diagnosis, in treatment, and in the prevention of this disease. The accompanying chart shows the trend of scarlet fever in the original registration area of the United States during recent years.

The chart shows the deaths in the United States from scarlet fever, per 100,000 population.

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

FOE THAT COSTS APPLE GROWERS MILLIONS BY ARTHUR N. PACK President, The American Nature Association

The codling moth is the most serious insect enemy of the grower of the apple, which has been called the king of fruits. In spite of the best directed efforts to destroy the pest by spraying reaches several millions of dollars. The adult insect is a rather small moth with a wing-spread of about one inch. Its fore wings, when closed, are crossed by alternate light and dark bands, and on the tip of each is a spot of dark brown.

As it remains hidden during the day, it is seldom seen by the orchardist, the source of whose bread and butter it so seriously affects. At dusk it becomes active and deposits its eggs on the foliage of the trees.

The young hatch within a few days, and, if the apples have reached a sufficient size, lose no time in eating their way into the pulpy interior, entering usually at the blossom end, and remaining in this food storehouse until they have attained their full growth and ruined the fruit.

They then spin a cocoon, usually beneath the flake of bark on the trunk of the host tree. The pupae, of the earlier broods transform to the adult state and lay eggs the same summer. The product of these remaining over the winter in the larval stage and thus assuring the continuance of the race.

The codling moth is most injurious in the south, where as many as three or four generations may develop during the long season, while in the north one, or at most two is usually the maximum.

bitter partisan politics. A few years ago Oklahoma was the storm center of partisanship, but Texas now steps in and is occupying the front page.

Speaking of partisan politics, one thing in Arkansas there was a lively election in which two men applied to high office. They met in joint debate, and they walked into each other, and so angry and bitter did they get, that one of the opponents demanded: "If my opponent will unblock that six-shooter and lay it aside I will beat hell out of him." We are afraid that Lubbock county is reaching that state of partisanship that opposing candidates would use to, by at each other's throats. There is not an office within the gift of Lubbock county people that is worth the bitterness that is being injected into the present campaign. No man can afford to indulge in the class of politics that is reflected in the present campaign. It has rather degenerated into a campaign of personalities rather than a discussion of principles.—Slaton Times.

ANOTHER DILEMMA Speaking of the dilemma reminds us that Mr. Wurzback, Texas' only Republican congressman, is in one. He has been ordered to pay a fee of $7,499.50 as his share of the primary campaign expenses in his race for reelection in the Fourteenth District. If he pays the fee he will violate the corrupt practices act; if he refuses to pay his name will not be printed on the primary ballots and he may lose the nomination. Furthermore, to add another horn to his dilemma, if he pays the fee, violates the law, gets his name on the ticket and is nominated, he will probably be defeated by a Democrat in November, any way.—Brownwood Bulletin.

THE REAL ISSUE Ferguson followers are doing everything in their power to change the issue of the campaign. They are jumping at every commendable act of the present administration — it would be hard for any one to be governor of Texas for a few years without accidentally doing some commendable thing—in a hopeless effort to detract the minds of the voters and the weakening former followers of Ferguson from the rank and rare rottenness of Jim's regime. The real issue is, will Texas continue to countenance the disgraceful dilemma of being dominated by an unimpeachable governor by proxy or will we go back to the democratic principal and elect a governor who shall be directly responsible for his acts to the people?—Briscoe County News.

CLEAN POLITICS HAVE ALWAYS BEEN DEMANDED We hear much said about clean politics and condemnation of mudslinging in politics. Texas politics have for years been the storm center of mudslinging and political vilification. It seems that the same class of politics have been brought to local counties and communities. Lubbock county is experiencing a system of politics that is proving distressing to those who want political peace.

The trouble with partisan politics is that men are made measures instead of principles. Men can differ widely as to principles, but when men become issues, partisanship enters to destroy the peace and harmony of the community.

The United States have witnessed many varied kinds of politics. The nation has gone through many stages of

THE REAL ISSUE Ferguson followers are doing everything in their power to change the issue of the campaign. They are jumping at every commendable act of the present administration — it would be hard for any one to be governor of Texas for a few years without accidentally doing some commendable thing—in a hopeless effort to detract the minds of the voters and the weakening former followers of Ferguson from the rank and rare rottenness of Jim's regime. The real issue is, will Texas continue to countenance the disgraceful dilemma of being dominated by an unimpeachable governor by proxy or will we go back to the democratic principal and elect a governor who shall be directly responsible for his acts to the people?—Briscoe County News.

CLEAN POLITICS HAVE ALWAYS BEEN DEMANDED We hear much said about clean politics and condemnation of mudslinging in politics. Texas politics have for years been the storm center of mudslinging and political vilification. It seems that the same class of politics have been brought to local counties and communities. Lubbock county is experiencing a system of politics that is proving distressing to those who want political peace.

The trouble with partisan politics is that men are made measures instead of principles. Men can differ widely as to principles, but when men become issues, partisanship enters to destroy the peace and harmony of the community.

The United States have witnessed many varied kinds of politics. The nation has gone through many stages of

JOHN and FAY MILBURN buy a home when their baby girl is born and the advertising agency in which John is partner and copy writer lands a new contract. Among their acquaintances are:

NOEL and VERA BOYD, whose marriage is strictly "modern." PAT and MARIAN FORBES, who have three children and whose domestic life is unhappy because of Pat's roving tendencies. Previous chapters told how: John was fascinated on meeting NELL ORME, of whom Forbes hints that she is having trouble with her husband.

Fay took JUDITH, the baby, to visit her parents in Houston, and during her absence John "ran around" a good deal. When Fay returned, gossip had related some of his actions and sharp quarrels followed, one of which drove John "out on a tear." Fay, learning he had been out with other women, threatened to leave him if it was repeated.

John finds that people are talking about him. NAT GRAHAM, his partner, charges his actions are damaging the firm's reputation. John later, by accident, meets Nell Orme at Vera Boyd's. He resolves not to see her again, realizing that she is carrying him off his feet, but he does, and the day comes when he takes her madly in his arms.

Fay learning of it, goes through with her threat to leave him, and takes the baby with her. John grief-stricken, closes up the house and takes an apartment. Later he tries to negotiate a personal loan at his bank, gets in an argument with HENRY BLODGETT, and when the other makes a reference to his wife leaving him, John smacks him.

Blodgett has him arrested for assault and battery, and PAUL DAVIDSON, a lawyer and friend of John defends him and he is acquitted.

Nat Graham leaves on a vacation and John is near-crazy with work, so that when Vera Boyd again calls him up with an invitation to tea, he, knowing Nell Orme will be there, accepts.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER I

VERA was all curiosity when she met John Milburn at her door. She was "just dying" to know whether it was really true that Fay had left him.

He said, rather surly, that he'd prefer not saying too much about it, that Fay, after all, was the one who ought to do the talking. But Vera—strange creature—was quite unabashed.

"You're so old-fashioned, really, with your notions about chivalry, John. Come. I'm simply crazy for some scandal."

He smiled faintly. "Really, Vera, it's hard for me to understand you." He glanced curiously around the room.

"Looking for Nell?" Vera smiled. "She'll be here soon." He was half angry with her for saying that. It made him out such a crass philanderer. He told her that he really had no business coming and then asked her, quite frankly, "Do you really get a kick, Vera, out of seeing people do what they shouldn't?"

Vera sank gracefully into a chair and regarded him through half-closed eyes. With her black hair, parted in the middle and drawn flat against her little head, she made an exotic picture. John thought. He was forced to confess that, in her way, Vera was really beautiful. Why, then, had he not seen an attraction in her, especially as he knew that Vera had been and still was, very likely quite keen about him?

"Are you listening to me?" she was saying.

"Eh? Oh, yes."

She shook an admonitory finger. "Your thoughts were miles away. I was saying that I experience a vicarious pleasure in watching someone else arouse your interest—inasmuch as I can't, you know." She smiled faintly. "Perhaps I share something in common with other laboratory workers."

"What a thought!" he exclaimed. "Vera, I never know when you are telling the truth."

"And therefore never know when I lie," she finished for him. "That satisfies me."

"Tell me," Milburn said, "is it really true that you and Noel reached an understanding before you were married—that—that"—his voice trailed awkwardly off.

"That neither was to hold the other accountable for his actions? But certainly."

"And it really makes no difference to you if Noel becomes interested in other women?"

"Why should it?" she smiled. "He is only my husband, isn't he?"

John frowned. "Maybe the theory is the only sensible one, but—"

"Of course. Can you really imagine me taking Noel to task if he chooses to spice up his dreary existence with a little affair?"

"Oh the devil, Vera! Why don't you take off your mask?"

She reached for a cigaret, shrugged. He said, "You know it's just a pose. You can't stifle jealousy."

"As far as I'm concerned, it doesn't exist," and she said nothing more.

When Nell came in, the little lingering pressure of her fingers and the softness in her eyes told him more eloquently than the brief words she spoke to him in a low tone of her sympathy. Again John was left to wonder at Vera when, after a short time, she arose and left them.

Between him and Nell there now seemed to be an awkward constraint. Neither said much and once John asked, rather bluntly, whether she and Howard couldn't manage to patch up their differences—whatever they were. He was trying to solve the strange puzzle of the Ormes, as he had tried once before.

Nell listened to him quietly, then raised her hands in a gesture of futility and turned her eyes upward. "Howard and I can never be happy," she said, and she went on to hint of something terrible between them; hinted just enough to leave John burning with curiosity.

He left shortly afterward, and once behind the wheel of his car found himself thinking, "I'll be dog-goned if that isn't the most mysterious thing I ever heard of. Now what in the devil do you suppose it is? What has she done? What has Howard done?"

He was not watching where he was driving and presently he realized with something of a shock that he was in the neighborhood of his own home. His first reaction was to hurry away as fast as he could before he could catch even a glimpse of it. But he saw it. He thought. Why be childish about it? He'd be bound to look at it sometime, wouldn't he? He couldn't simply forget it—even though it was now only a place of painful memories.

His key clicked in the lock with a strange stark sound, and once inside he dropped, out of habit, into his favorite arm chair before the fireplace. His eyes took in the faint film of dust that had settled on some of the polished furniture; charred, cold-looking cigaret butts seemed to stare at him from the hearth.

John shook himself, rose and began to trail aimlessly through the house. The dining room—a small cherry little room. What was it Fay had said when they had first gone through the house—that she preferred small ones, inasmuch as dining rooms were going out of style anyway? And the kitchen—the mammoth porcelain sink, its nickel faucets gleaming bravely. He turned quickly away and went upstairs, thinking to look for some shirts that he had forgotten to pack.

At the end of the hall was the nursery, and through its best window he caught sight of the descending orange sun. He felt suddenly forlorn; the day was done—but just like his own happiness. He turned quickly away from the window and his foot stepped on something soft that emitted a faint squeak. He was startled, and looked down to see what it was. And then he was overcome with such a vast feeling of loneliness that a great sob escaped him. The thing was Judith's rubber doll. How well he remembered the day he had bought it for her! And how indifferent she had been to it at first, but later how much pleasure it had given her!

"Judith!" he cried. "Judith! Fay!" This terrible feeling was simply more than he could endure, and his eyes, as he gazed at the little toy, were wet.

With a great effort he pulled himself together and thrust the doll in his pocket. He would have to send it home to her, he decided—but on second thought he told himself no, he'd keep it for himself.

Cotton Markets

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, July 12. (AP)—The cotton market had excited opening today owing to unexpected development of heavy rains in the Western belt.

Liverpool was lower than due. First trades showed gains of 23 to 26 points and the market continued to advance during the first hour on covering until October traded up to 17.21c. December to 17.60c, and January to 17.90c or 50 to 53 points above yesterday's close.

The market reacted 7 to 10 points towards the end of the first hour.

There was a fresh spell of buying after the official forecast was posted, indicating cloudy and showery weather for the belt in the next 24 hours.

October traded up to 17.26c, December to 17.77c and January, 17.95c, or 57 to 60 points above yesterday's close. The market held steady and nearer the high up to mid-session with the undertone still bullish.

The market made a fresh spurt in the early afternoon forcing prices up to new high on reports of rains in Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi. October traded up to 17.36c, December to 17.24c, and January 17.19c, or 59 to 74 points above the close of yesterday.

The undertone became strong on the belief that the West rains were spreading Eastward so as to eventually cover the entire belt. Near the beginning of the last hour the market was firm and near the high.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, July 12. (AP)—Reports of rains in the Southwest revived fears of insect damage and stimulated renewed buying in the cotton market early today. First prices were firm at advances of 24 to 32 points, and active months sold about 40 to 55 points net higher by the end of the first hour.

October advancing to 17.60c and January to 17.25c.

Realizing sales were absorbed on slight mid-morning reactions, with the market firming up again on the official forecast for further showers in the South and increased reports of insect damage. Trading was active and prices firmer mid-day, with October selling at 17.42c and January at 17.35c, or about 54 to 57 points net higher, and at new high prices for the present movement.

Grain Markets

CHICAGO REPORT CHICAGO, July 12. (AP)—Sharp upturn in the price of wheat resulted today from active buying based largely on the Canadian government crop report. Unfavorable weather conditions both northwest and southwest tended also to lift values. Starting 7c to 2c advance, wheat went in some cases to nearly to above yesterday's finish.

Corn, oats and provisions were firmer, corn opening 1/4c to 1c up, and scoring some additional gain.

KANSAS CITY REPORT

KANSAS CITY, July 12. (AP)—Wheat—number 2 hard $1.34@1.44, number 2 red $1.35@1.37.

Corn—number 2 white 77c@78, number 2 yellow 75c@80.

CHICAGO REPORT CHICAGO, July 12. (AP)—Wheat jumped up about 6 1/2 cents a bushel today to the best figures since February 16, December wheat sold at the top most figures yet this season.

An extremely bullish showing made by Canadian government crop report was chiefly responsible, together with unfavorable weather conditions both Northwest and Southwest.

Influenced by wheat, the corn market also went soaring.

Stocks And Money

WALL STREET REPORT NEW YORK, July 12. (AP)—Stock prices displayed a strong undertone at the opening of today's market, which showed indications of having received strong buying support overnight. Oils, which were the weak spots yesterday, were still mixed although CALL MONEY NEW YORK, July 12. (AP)—Call money steady; all loans 4 1/2; closing bid 4 1/2; time loans firm; 60-90 days 4 1/2; 3-6 months 4 1/2; prime mercantile paper 3 1/2.

CHICAGO REPORT

CHICAGO, July 12. (AP)—Poultry alive steady; spring ducks heavy 26; spring ducks small 24.

Union Oil of California opened 2 1/2 points higher at 5 1/2, a new 1926 high, and Atlantic Refining moved up a point, U. S. Steel common opened 1/2 higher at 140 1/2.

The upward movement, which has been under way with few interruptions for about eight weeks, showed signs of tiring, due to a growing disposition of professional traders to convert paper profits into cash under the cover of strength in specialties, which are being bid up for individual reasons.

Special weakness of some of the oil shares in the face of record-breaking gasoline consumption is traceable to the discovery and development of new oil fields, with their menace of over production of crude oil and disorganization of the market for crude and refined products. General Motors and Case Threshing Machine touched their highest prices in history on gains of several points each.

The foreign exchange market displayed a strong undertone, presumably in reflection of finance minister Caillaux success in obtaining a satisfactory settlement of the Franco-British war debt agreement.

LOAN FIRM PLANS BIG EXPANSION

H. D. Lemmon, Texas representative of the Branch Investment Company, of Oklahoma City, in the loan and insurance departments, was here Tuesday with the Joe Hess Company, local representative of the firm, and announced that his company is launching an expansion program for the South Plains, especially in the Lubbock territory.

It has been the policy of the organization in the past to confine their operations to the city of Lubbock, where a great amount of money has been invested through loans to the individual home builder, but now the company plans to make their loans effective on all city property in this immediate territory, Mr. Lemmon said.

The expansion program will be handled largely through the Joe Hess Company here for the time being, and a large amount of money will be placed at the disposal of the local firm, it was said. Mr. Lemmon and Mr. Hess left today for a tour of the territory it is planned to serve, and operations will begin immediately.

mines were on duty about Lake Denmark naval depot in search for additional victims of exploding ammunition which after a flash of lightning Saturday afternoon reduced the depot and miles of surrounding country to ruins.

Ten Bodies Identified

From a "no man's land" due to an act of nature there had been brought in today parts of seventeen bodies, ten of which were identified. Shifting winds which took exploding flames toward unexploded magazines caused stoppage of explorations yesterday afternoon by order of Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, who visited the devastated area.

Brigadier General Hugh A. Drum, in charge of patrols and rescue work, was of the opinion today, however, that danger from further explosions was past.

Victims To Hospital

Bodies were taken to the naval hospital in Brooklyn and put beside those of other men of the navy who perished on duty in peace time—the victims of the submarine S-11. With few exceptions, fingerprints and other identifying records were necessary in the work of identification.

Two boards will be named by Secretary Wilbur to investigate the explosion, which, aside from the loss of life, destroyed fifty buildings and seriously damaged four hundred others, and made 250 families homeless.

Six Marines Found

Six of the 17 bodies taken from the area yesterday were those of marines who were on duty at the depot.

They were identified as follows: Barker, Virgil C., private, Mount Sterling, Ky.; Powell, Ernest, private, Hamilton, Ohio; Allison, Orlando, private, Farmington, Miss.; Weber, Frank C., private, Cleveland, Ohio; Monroe, Kohn, private, Richmond, Va.; Eason, Mason, Trumpeter, Evansville, Ind.

Previously identified bodies were those of Bott, George W., Jr., Lieutenant, Richmond, Va.; Feeney, Mrs. Frances, of Brooklyn; Brown, Harry Christian, pharmacist's mate, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Hardaker, Morris, of Galway, Pa.

Died Following Duty

Like the heroes of the S-11, their companions now in death, the marines died in course of duty. They perished advancing toward the enemy.

Secretary Wilbur after his tour said the position of bodies indicated that the marines were going toward the danger.

"We think they were members of the squad that running to the fire when the explosion snuffed out their lives," he said.

Caillaux Squares France's Accounts With Johnny Bull

(By the Associated Press)

LONDON, July 12.—The settlement signed in London yesterday by Finance Minister Caillaux not only covers the French war debt but virtually all the outstanding accounts between Great Britain and France. Announcement to this effect was made in the House of Commons today by Chancellor of the Exchequer, Winston Churchill.

The French payments, he said, would be LX4,000,000, LX 6,000,000, LX8,000,000 and LX10,000,000, rising to LX12,500,000 annually, the last named figure being reached in 1926.

From 1926 to 1928, the payment would be LX12,500,000 annually rising to LX14,000,000 for the final 21 years.

There is no safeguarding clause in the agreement itself, but letters have been exchanged between the two governments, making it clear that, in event of a complete or very serious failure in Germany's reparation payments, France will be entitled to ask for reconsideration of the arrangement.
