BRAZDA, Macedonia — After an all-out push by aid agencies, foreign nations and NATO, relief workers were near the point of ensuring food, shelter and safety for all the nearly half-million people who fled Kosovo, the U.N. refugee chief said Friday. But the international community was still concerned enough about the plight of Kosovo Albanian refugees in camps in often-hostile Macedonia that it asked NATO troops to stick around.

Building foreign relations

A group of Midlanders were in the Philippines in March constructing a Habitat for Humanity home through the Jimmy Carter Work Project. Members of the group say they were appalled at the number of Filipinos literally living on the street. At right: Jimmy and Rosalynn Carter are shown at the site.

Midlanders build Habitat Home in Philippines

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

There is an image that haunts Manny Ribera, an image he saw when he and 10 other Midlanders first landed in the Philippines and were walking from the Manila airport to their four-star hotel.

Along the way, he recalled, he saw entire families living on the sidewalk.

"That was their home," Ribera said Friday when he spoke to a businessmen's luncheon at the Hilton Midland and Towers. "That haunts me the most, and I hope it continues to haunt me so that I will continue to do my small part for the Philippines and other parts of the world and I won't forget when I'm in my comfort zone."

Ribera and his fellow Midlanders traveled to the Philippines in late March to participate in the "Jimmy Carter Work Project" in which the former president led Habitat for Humanity volunteers from around the world in building houses throughout the nation during a week-long "building blitz."

The project drew 6,000 volunteers and the Midlanders were among 250 assigned to build 50 houses in General Santos City. Other houses were built in Paranaque, metropolitan Manila; Tagbilaran City; Bacolod City; Dumaguete City and Maragondon, Cavite. The goal was to build 250 homes, but a total of 293 were built.

Ribera

Back in Midland, the 43-year-old Ribera has begun making the rounds of local associations, describing his experiences and hoping he inspires others to volunteer with Habitat.

"The thing we were all impressed with the most was the sweetness, the kindness, the hospitality of the Filipino people," he said.

Economist says Y2K bug won't bite West Texas

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

A statewide economic study has found that West Texas is the least susceptible region in the state to problems related to the Y2K computer bug.

The study was done by The Perryman Group. M. Ray Perryman said that his company's study found that whatever the impact of the Y2K bug, it would be spread unevenly among the state's cities and regions.

"No one knows what will happen," he said, "but we looked at industrial composition of each region and found some are more vulnerable because they have more microprocessors and imbedded chips."

'On a national and a global basis, the oil industry — with the exception of the big offshore rigs, which doesn't impact West Texas — oil may benefit from this. In general, anything that generates uncertainty in the economy stimulates demand for oil and gas.'
— M. Ray Perryman

The Odessa-Midland metropolitan statistical area (MSA) is second only to Laredo as the state's least susceptible MSA, which Perryman attributes to the area's dominant oil industry.

"On a national and a global basis, the oil industry — with the exception of the big offshore rigs, which doesn't impact West Texas — oil may benefit from this," Perryman said. "In general, anything that generates uncertainty in the economy stimulates demand for oil and gas."

Too, he said, West Texas industries do not have a large concentration of industries dependent on microprocessors.

"It looks like the Permian Basin is in good shape."

Dennis Sever, dean of information technology at Midland College, agrees that the area's relatively low-tech industrial composition may curb the impact of the Y2K bug.

"We're not that technically advanced," he said. "We have high tech, but not much that's date-dependent like banks or electric companies. For them it's a big issue, it's not a big issue for us. We're not a banking center like Dallas and we don't have a big dam generating billions of kilowatts of electricity. What we do here is drill wells, and that's not governed by electronic clocks. Neither is oil production."

Gene Houk, chief executive officer of Ark Enterprises, an Internet service provider and programming company, agrees that the area will benefit from being relatively low-tech and the fact that Midland-Odessa companies are smaller and more able to afford to fix the Y2K bug.

But, he added, "one thing I've found in Midland and Odessa is that people are highly literate and stay up-to-date with computers. When a new product is offered on the Internet, they go crazy."

New computers, he said, won't have a problem identifying the year 2000 "and there's a lot of new computers here."

He also hasn't noticed much concern about the Y2K bug, now about 265 days away and counting.

"One thing we do is check computers for Y2K compliance, and the demand has been lighter than we expected."

For his part, Perryman said the goal of the study was "to go with reasonable assumptions and give people a basis to go on."

According to the study's baseline model, the state is expected to lose more than $3 billion in annual real output between 1999 and 2003 due to sporadic disruptions.

In a moderate scenario where disruptions are somewhat worse than expected, the loss would be almost $4 billion and job losses in excess of 50,000 by 2003.

In a high-risk scenario, the loss would exceed $14 billion annually and over 180,000 jobs by the year 2003.

Expectations are, Perryman said, that the state economy will continue to grow despite any Y2K-related problems.

The most vulnerable MSA is Austin-San Marcos, which has a high concentration of computer companies, and Central Texas is the most vulnerable region. Among council of government regions, the Permian Basin is the least vulnerable and the Capital area the most vulnerable.

Rusk honors 8-year-old 'hero' for helping his injured grandmother

By Richard Acosta

Batman, Spiderman, Superman.

Heroes are people that everyone looks up to and wants to be like. They are larger than life and the standard by which others are judged.

And in this particular case, our hero is eight years old.

Keifer Rippee, a second-grader at Rusk Elementary in Midland, was honored Friday with a surprise presentation for being "cool under pressure" in getting his grandmother assistance when she fell and broke her arm.

The accident occurred April 2 at Hill Park in Midland.

"The other day we went to KC Nutty Roller and my nana (Cindy Weif) got some roller skates," Keifer said. "We were at Hill Park and she went up this hill and she fell down.

"I ran over there and she said she didn't think she could get up. She said that she thought her arm was broken. I asked her for her keys so I could use the phone in her car. She told me that she didn't think she would be able to roll over."

Ms. Weif said that she was only on the skates a minute when she fell.

"I was babysitting the grand kids and I am the one that fell," Ms. Weif said. "His daddy said out of all three you are the last one I thought would get hurt. I was only on the skates for about five minutes, then I was on the ground."

Keifer said that his grandmother eventually got her keys to him and he was able to call for help.

"I got the keys and some other nice people helped me," Keifer said. "One lady let me use her car phone and I called my mom while Mr. Brown called 911. Mom got there in like two minutes. She took us to grandma's and then she went to the hospital."

Ms. Weif suffered a broken arm but was

Cocaine bust nets five near elementary school

By T.E. Jenkins
Big Spring Correspondent

BIG SPRING - Local law enforcement got a boost in morale this week, as a search of an Airport Road home turned up four grams of cocaine, and between two and four ounces of marijuana.

Howard County Sheriff's deputies, along with members of the West Texas Narcotics Enforcement Task Force and the Big Spring Police Department arrested five adults Wednesday following a raid at 110 and 112 Airport Road.

Howard County Deputy Sheriff Kerry Fritz said the arrests and seizure went as planned, and was well executed by the agency trio.

"We really do appreciate the help we got from the task force, as well as the city police," said Fritz. "We received information that there were narcotics at the residence of Robert Nunez, age 51, at 110 and 112 Airport Road. They were separate residences, but they were both owned by Mr. Nunez. Apparently they lived in one of them, and sold drugs out of the other."

Law enforcement agents arrested Nunez, along with four other adults including: Margie Lario, 52; Alice Gonzales, 26; Luz Alaniz, 24; and Abraham Cash, 18.

Fritz said the bust not only netted narcotics, but also several stolen items.

"Mr. Nunez, along with Ms. Lario, are also being charged with theft more than $50, less than $500," said Fritz. "When you bust these drug operations, you usually find a lot of stolen items. That's how their clients pay for a lot of the drugs that they buy, by trading out things that they've stolen.

"With drug dealers taking the items directly now, that makes it just a little bit harder for us to catch the actual thieves," Fritz added. "It used to be that dealers wouldn't touch the stolen stuff, so the buyer would have to take it to a pawn shop to get cash for it first. That helped us catch a lot of them, but with this change in the way they handle the goods, it makes it a lot harder."

Fritz said Nunez and Lario are being charged with delivery of a controlled substance in a drug free zone, as well as possession with intent to deliver less than 2 ounces of marijuana, possession of stolen items, and possession of drug paraphernalia. The other three suspects were charged with the same charges, except for the theft charge.

Fritz said the delivery of a controlled substance in a drug-free zone came due to the homes being located within the legal range of Anderson Elementary School.

"If convicted, they will face additional time because of the proximity of the school to the location that they were selling the drugs at," said Fritz.

The charge, which is considered an enhanced first degree felony, carries with it a minimum sentence of 15 years.

Four of the five suspects have been released on $27,000 bond, a combination of the different charges against them, set by Justice of the Peace China Long. Cash is the lone remaining suspect in Howard County Jail.

Texas woman hopes to prove Jesse James was related to her

MARLIN (AP) — Betty Dorsett Duke is determined to prove she's related to Jesse James — over her great-grandfather's dead body.

Ms. Duke has asked the court to request the exhumation of her ancestor against the wishes of most of her own cousins in hopes of proving that J.L. Courtney was really Jesse James, a notorious criminal of the Old West.

Her theory is that the infamous outlaw faked his own death in Missouri, took the Courtney name, and lived out a long life hiding from the law down in Texas.

Now, she's asked the Falls County Court to exhume her ancestor to prove it.

County Judge Mike Meyers declined Friday to rule on the exhumation. Instead, he ordered attorneys to research whether DNA samples from living relatives can prove a familial relationship to the James Gang. He scheduled another hearing on April 23.

Byron Courtney of Waco, who lived with J.L. Courtney for a couple of decades, says the whole concept that his grandfather was a Confederate deserter and gunslinger is ludicrous.

"I think he would have considered it a total insult," he said of the claims that his relative ripped off banks and trains.

Many relatives believe the hearing and a memorial service complete with Confederate honor guard held last year have been staged to gain publicity for Ms. Duke's recent book, "Jesse James Lived and Died in Texas."

"I'm convinced as I can be that that was a publicity stunt," said Ruby Trombley of Round Rock during a break in the hearing. Mrs. Trombley and her two sisters are financially supporting the fight against exhumation.

"Forget the fact that it's a lie," she said about the claim that James is buried under J.L. Courtney's tombstone.

"He was our great-grandfather. He raised our father. To disturb his grave is almost a sacrilege. We just don't want that," she said.

Folks in Jesse James' home state of Missouri also are shaking their heads at the newest claim by a "wannabe relative."

"There's an awful lot of these people out there and they all cite some weird court documents or something to prove they're Jesse James' family. They never can," said Gary Chilcote, director of the museum and home of Jesse James and president of the national Jesse James Gang, a 300-member association of historians and descendants of the outlaws.

Tanker truck explodes on U.S. 59 exit ramp, no injuries reported

HOUSTON (AP) — A tanker truck exploded late Friday, bringing heavy rush hour traffic to a standstill along U.S. 59, a major north-south artery on Houston's eastern side.

A ribbon of fire and black smoke blurred images from television helicopters.

There was no immediate confirmation of injuries or deaths, or exactly how many vehicles were involved in the 6:30 p.m. incident about two miles north of downtown Houston.

Master recommends that charter school be closed

By Renae Merle
Associated Press

AUSTIN — The master appointed to supervise a Waco charter school is recommending that the campus close after being unable to pay debts and facing a $400,000 budget shortfall.

If the recommendation is followed, Emma L. Charter School, which opened Aug. 24, 1998 and has received more than $750,000 in state funds, would become the first operating campus to lose its charter.

"The school finds itself in significant financial difficulties that cannot, in my opinion, be fully rectified," Bob Browning said in a letter to Education Commissioner Mike Moses.

Browning said he was concerned that the school, which has 180 students, would not be able to sustain day-to-day operations beyond June 3.

There is a "lack of effective financial leadership from the administration and the governing board," he said.

Moses will take Browning's advice into consideration when he makes a recommendation to the State Board of Education, which will make the ultimate decision, Debbie Graves Ratcliffe, spokesman for the Texas Education Agency, said Friday.

Ms. Ratcliffe said the board could considered the recommendation as soon as next month.

Publicly funded charter schools, touted by backers including Gov. George W. Bush as a way to encourage educational innovation, are independent of local school districts and free of many state regulations.

The State Board of Education has approved 168 of the campuses, with 88 already operating.

But some have been plagued with financial problems. One surrendered its charter without opening after getting more than $240,000 from the state. Another has been assigned a financial monitor.

Browning, a former public school district superintendent and professor of educational administration at Stephen F. Austin State University in Nacogdoches, was appointed to supervise the Waco school last month.

Among the problems Browning said he found was that some teachers had not been paid for three or four pay periods. Also, a preliminary audit found a more than $400,000 budget shortfall, he said.

Ida Pinkard, chief executive officer of the Emma L. Harrison school, didn't immediately return phone calls from The Associated Press. Mrs. Pinkard previously has said no money had been mismanaged.

Browning said he also recommend revoking the charter because:

- The school owes money to the Internal Revenue Service, the Teacher Retirement System and possible the Texas Workforce Commission.
- The state is withholding funds for its children nutrition programs, which help fund breakfast and lunch programs, because the school has spent $13,250 more than they should have already.
- There aren't enough funds to pay all of the vendors for goods and services.
- The school hasn't paid its electric bill and its service may be terminated.
- They are having difficulty finding people to serve on the school board and board of the charter holder.

Senate passes homeowners protections bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Residents in homeowners associations would get expanded rights to appeal fines and protect their homes from foreclosure under a bill approved Friday by the Texas Senate.

"I think the bill represents a major victory for Texas homeowners," said Sen. Rodney Ellis, D-Houston, who worked on the bill with its primary sponsor, Sen. John Carona, R-Dallas.

"I'm looking forward to visiting my homeowners association in case they ever get crazy."

The bill would allow for civil penalties against associations which act in bad faith and require board members to pass a state-approved training program.

The bill outlaws foreclosure based solely on overdue fines or attorneys fees and requires alternative dispute resolution before foreclosure. Homeowners also would have the right to appeal fines.

The bill does not prevent homeowners associations from foreclosing on homes. A proposed constitutional amendment in the House would prevent such foreclosures.

"I think the ability to take someone's home away in a state that is considered a very strong property rights state is something we should do very cautiously," said Ellis.

"Homeowners associations ought to have the right to foreclose, but it should be a very limited situation. We want to make sure all the consumer protections are in place," Ellis said.

A 1987 Texas Supreme Court decision gave homeowners associations the power to foreclose upon homes. In 1997 there were about 1,050 homeowners association foreclosure lawsuits in Harris County alone, according to Ellis' staff.

The bill, which now goes to the House for consideration, also gives the attorney general the power to sue negligent associations.

"There's a lot more protections for homeowners," said Margey Meyers, president of the Texas Community Associations Institute in Houston.

The bill also requires association boards to conduct open meetings and gives homeowners the right to examine and copy association records.

The bill does not stop an association from writing rules and regulations, such as a ban on children or pets or restrictions on clothes lines and swingsets. But it does allow for 10 percent of an association's membership to call for a special meeting at which rules can be adopted, changed or repealed.

The homeowners association bill is SB699.

Pharmaceutical company settles fen-phen suit

DALLAS (AP) — The first trial over heart-valve damage from fen-phen has ended in a reported $500,000 settlement for a woman who used the diet drug combination.

The settlement came a week into Sandra Moore's case against the pharmaceutical giant American Home Products Corp. The 52-year-old former teacher had sought $110 million.

American Home said Friday it had agreed to a settlement but offered no details. The Dallas Morning News, citing unidentified sources, reported that the company will pay $500,000.

Doctors found mild heart valve damage in Ms. Moore after she took fen-phen to promote weight loss, and she is on medication for her condition. She claimed American Home knew heart problems could result but hid them to maximize profits.

Her lawyer, Michael McGartland, did not return phone calls seeking comment Friday.

American Home, argued that Ms. Moore has a mild and common disorder often called a heart murmur that could be hereditary. The company said it acted responsibly in marketing and monitoring its products.

American Home, through its Wyeth-Ayerst Laboratories subsidiary, marketed fenfluramine — half of the fen-phen combination — and Redux, a similar product.

The Madison, N.J.-based drug maker pulled fenfluramine and Redux off the market in 1997 at the Food and Drug Administration's request. A Mayo Clinic study had linked the drugs to potentially fatal heart valve damage.

The drug maker has since been hit with hundreds of lawsuits.

The other half of fen-phen, phentermine, was never associated with that damage when taken alone and is still on the market.

Ms. Moore's lawsuit, the first of its kind to go to a jury, was being closely followed by others with similar claims against the company.

Dallas lawyer Kip Petroff, who has 100 fen-cases, said the settlement sends a message that American Home will try to settle claims even of people who didn't suffer major medical problems.

"I think it's going to encourage other plaintiffs and plaintiffs lawyers who otherwise might have been sitting on the sidelines," Petroff said. "If a mild case is worth however much they got, I think there are lawyers who are going to be encouraged to pursue such cases."

But Darrell Keith, a Fort Worth plaintiffs lawyer who said he has rejected several fen-phen cases, disagreed. Medical damages cases are time-consuming and expensive to pursue, he said.

Family returns home, finds house on fire

From Staff Reports

A home at 3511 Thomas was left with substantial damage Friday afternoon as some minor home improvement work turned awry.

The Murphy family had just moved into the house in November.

Larry Murphy, owner of the house, said he had been working on a water faucet in the back yard and believes his work triggered the fire.

"I was soldering a pipe in the back yard," Murphy said. "I guess the insulation might have caught on fire. It was not burning when we left, but it was sure smoking when we got home."

Murphy said that no one was in the house at the time of the fire. Murphy, his wife Linda and his three children - Matthew, 9, Tiffany, 9 and Jennifer, 5 - had all gone to the store together to get some pipe for the faucet.

When the family returned home and saw the smoke, Larry said he ran in the house with the hose while his wife dialed 911.

Fire officials said that the house had a few walls with burn damage and that the fire had moved up the to attic. No one was injured in the fire and the fire department had no problem dealing with the incident.

Oilman voices concern about volatile prices

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Oil prices appear to be trending higher, but volatility in oil prices this past week has oil activist John Bell of Kermit concerned.

"The economy of the Permian Basin will not be able to recover until prices are high enough for producers to invest in drilling new wells. That means they will have to increase another $5 to $6 a barrel," Bell said in a press conference Friday at Midland International Airport.

Oil prices fell 63 cents Wednesday, followed by a 20-cent drop Thursday, on word that Venezuela would not be able to make its promised production cuts and Iraq had increased its production to record levels. Prices, however, recovered 67 cents to $16.50 on Friday on news of shrinking inventories.

According to the Energy Information Agency, world demand is expected to rise 1.2 percent this year, as production continues to slip, provided oil exporters trim output as much as they pledged last month. High inventories helped send oil prices to a 12-year low in December.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and other nations will start cutting output this month in a plan designed to reduce world supply by 2.7 percent. Still local oilmen are fearful OPEC still has too much power to manipulate markets.

Bell said the Clinton-Gore Energy Policy seems to be "the cheaper the better," pointing out that such a policy is concerned only for the present and not the future. "They don't seem to remember the economic lesson of the Arab Embargo of 1973."

Kirk Edwards, president of Odessa Exploration, said unless OPEC's ability to manipulate oil prices is dealt with, it will eventually result in higher gasoline prices. "I think we could see gasoline prices of $2-$3 if OPEC turns off the tap in two to three years."

Edwards said the upcoming visit by Presidential Candidate Pat Buchanan to the Permian Basin would consider different strategies to reduce OPEC's power to set world oil prices and control U.S. markets.

"This is not a campaign rally for Pat Buchanan, but we are very delighted to have him here. He can put our issues into the national arena," Edwards said.

Bell said Buchanan, who will be in Midland and Odessa on Wednesday, looked at the plight of the steel industry and wrote a letter to each individual member of Congress, asking them to support the efforts of U.S. steel makers to end product dumping in the this country. "We think that helped the steel industry make their successful case and we would hope he could do the same thing for us," said Bell. "We want to make it very clear that he is not coming here just to bash George Bush."

Bell said political candidates including Bush and Vice President Al Gore as well as President Clinton had been invited to come to the Permian Basin to look at what is happening to the industry. "We want him to 'feel our pain,'" said Bell.

Pat Buchanan will be in Midland Wednesday for a coffee meeting at the Midland Petroleum Club. The meeting is open to the public. He will then travel to Odessa for a Town Hall meeting at the VFW Hall at 208 E. 63rd St., two miles west of the Ector County Coliseum. The public is also invited to attend this meeting.

John Bell said Buchanan would bring national television reporters to the Permian Basin and that could help get the message of the oilpatch into the national news.

Oil legislative update

As oil prices turn upward and volatile again, two key energy issues now in the Texas Legislature appear to be floundering.

A bill to obtain permanent severance tax for the Texas oil industry appears headed for defeat unless there is a strong showing of public support, said Rep. Judy Hawley, a member of the House Energy Resources Committee.

"Everyone in the oil industry who supports this tax relief, should call or write the members of the Committee," said John Bell.

In another legislative issue, Rep. Ron Lewis, Chairman of the House Energy Resources Committee, said the Committee would not vote on statutory unitization this coming Tuesday, as previously announced. "We will meet," said Lewis, "but we definitely will not vote." He world offer no time table as to when the issue would be voted on.

There are no indications what this may mean for statutory unitization.

HOMES: Ribera issues challenge to Gov. Bush

(From 1A)

"It was everywhere we went - the airport, restaurants, hotels. And the people working with us had a great attitude, which made me want to give more," he said.

General Santos City, located on Sarangani Bay in the south end of Mindanao, one of the Philippines' southern islands, has a population of 400,000 with a homeless population of 25,000, Ribera said. The new cement-block homes, measuring 16 feet by 20 feet, allowed residents to move out of wooden or bamboo huts measuring 8 feet by 8 feet or 8 feet by 9 feet.

Their new homes include a commode with an outside septic tank, and if the homeowner closes the door and stands on the commode, he can use the area as a shower. There is also a 2-by-3 area for a kitchen counter and place for the homeowner to wash dishes.

He said the recipients were grateful and worked hard alongside the volunteers.

"Several were masonry workers, some were carpenters who knew what needed to be done. The homeowners knew how to put down the blocks," Ribera said. "In fact, often they workers harder than the volunteers because they were used to the heat. Even though we'd quit around 5, they'd work on to 6 or even 7 p.m."

The homeowners not only spent hours helping build their new home but they will pay $8.50 a month in U.S. dollars or 38 pesos to the dollar to Habitat, which will use the funds to build other houses. The average Filipino earns 120 to 150 pesos a day, Ribera said.

Filipinos involved in the Habitat for Humanity project play a key role in the construction and the upkeep of their new homes.

Contributions from friends, family and the community helped fund the trip for the 11 volunteers. Ribera estimated it cost $1,200 per person, $800 for airfare and $400 for room and board. Several Midlanders also provided donations that sponsored a house in General Santos City.

Born and raised in Midland, he said he has lived in the Tall City all his life "except for four and a half years of missionary work in the United States and Mexico. I've been a general contractor for several years and a political activist with the Republican Party since 1988, but I'm shifting from politics to humanitarian interests, where the real needs are."

He was inspired to help others "now, while I'm still young and not wait until I'm older and not able to," he said, "although there were some people in their 70s working on the project. The need is there and I don't want to say no to a need if I can help."

Habitat has projects planned in New York City and Atlanta in the year 2000, but Ribera said he is interested in participating in a project in Africa in 2001.

Other volunteer activity includes serving on Panel 3 of the United Way Funds Distribution Panel, which oversees funding for Casa de Amigos, Free Will Foster Home and Community and Senior Services. He has been active in United Way the last six or seven years.

His trip to the Philippines has also inspired him to try to organize an "Adopt-A-Church" program for Filipino churches.

"I met some pastors there who are living in poverty because they do so much for their communities. There's a group of 200 pastors from various denominations, so I' trying to organize this program," he explained.

And he issues a challenge to two former Midlanders: Former President George Bush, and his son, Gov. George W. Bush "and any Congressman, to get involved with Habitat. They could bring tremendous energy to something that's worthy of recognition. And Habitat has Republican principles for my friends, especially since the homeowner pays it back."

House committee approves waste bill

By Richard Acosta
Staff Writer

Wrapping up the question as to where low-level radioactive waste will be stored in Texas took as step toward an answer Thursday afternoon as the Chisum Bill, commonly known as "assured isolation," moved out of committee and toward the House floor.

The bill was written by Rep. Warren Chisum, chair of the Environmental Regulation Committee.

Its purpose is to be the storage solution for the compact between Texas, Maine and Vermont. According to the compact, low-level radioactive waste from Vermont, Maine and Texas will be stored in Texas. Chisum is working to see that the waste will be stored in an "assured isolation" building.

"Right now Maine and Vermont are just kind of treading water waiting for us to get our site up," Chisum said. "The bottom line is the state has already spent $53 million on this and it is time to get it going."

Vermont and Maine will pay $55 million to have waste stored in Texas. However, Chisum said that the site is not a for-profit site, it is simply an answer for the state to deal with the compact agreement.

Unlike disposing of the waste by burial, the Chisum's "assured isolation" bill calls for the waste to be stored above ground.

The site will have thick walls and the waste will be placed in steel barrels, nine feet tall and nine foot in diameter. The barrels will be sealed in concrete in the building where it can be monitored by visually and by computer.

The only two amendments the bill had to accommodate while in committee were a better explanation as to what assured isolation meant and a stipulation stating that a county would have to pass a referendum before the county commissioners could approve the project.

Chisum said that he does not foresee any thing standing in the way of his bill in the House or in the Senate.

"I believe it will be handled well through both the House and Senate," Chisum said. "The House has been looking at this for sometime now. Although the Senate has not done as much work on it there has been some interest."

If the bill were to be passed by both the House and Senate unchanged it would call for bids to host the site.

"We would look over a site and see if they would be a suitable," Chisum said. "Soil samples, water surveys, all the same test any other group would have to do will have to be done. But it is above ground, it should have no effect on water or anything underground."

The bill should be voted on on the House floor in the next two weeks. Chisum said if all goes well, the final vote could be expected in mid-May.

One group that may suffer if the Chisum bill passes is the private waste storage and disposal companies. If the waste goes into the state buildings then that is less waste for the private companies to pick up.

However, Bill Miller, spokesman for Waste Control Specialist, the company that is vying to oversee the proposed low-level radioactive site in Andrews, said that he thinks the bill has a long way to go before becoming a law.

"The bill will change," Miller said. "I respect Chisum's point of view, but it will change. That is the nature of the game. So far the bill has done what we thought it would. We will just have to wait and see what happens."

HERO: Award was a surprise to Keifer

(From 1A)

on hand for Keifer to get his award.

Keifer received a certificate from Principal Carl Pirkle for having composure during a crisis. He also received a poster signed by classmates and a little hand puppet. Although the award was a surprise to Keifer, he admitted he had a feeling something was up.

"I knew something was going to happen," Keifer said. "One kid asked me, 'Do you know what is going to happen today?' I said, 'no' and he said, 'Never mind.'"

Keifer's mother, Paige Rippee, said that she was not surprised at her son's response to the situation.

"It was a typical response for him," Ms. Rippee said. "He is very mature and very responsible."

Another person not surprised by Keifer's response was his school principal. Pirkle said that the teachers have taught students to have character under crisis.

"What we are seeing is positive results from our work," Pirkle said. "The character education has been spilling over into the home."

The principal added that students start each day with the Pledge of Allegiance and a thought for the day.

Aid workers near point of ensuring help for refugees

BRAZDA, Macedonia (AP) — After an all-out push by aid agencies, foreign nations and NATO, relief workers were near the point of ensuring food, shelter and safety for all the nearly half-million people who fled Kosovo, the U.N. refugee chief said Friday.

But the international community was still concerned enough about the plight of Kosovo Albanian refugees in camps in often-hostile Macedonia that it asked NATO troops to stick around.

"The humanitarian effort ... continues to gain momentum and I think it will be a matter of days before we have the situation quite under control," said Sadako Ogata, U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees.

Ogata toured the week-old Brazda refugee camp in Macedonia on Friday — at 2,000 tents and 25,000 refugees, the largest of the NATO camps sheltering Kosovo Albanians.

Visiting Italy, Albania and Macedonia, the U.N. refugee chief is trying to coordinate care for the Kosovo refugees — and for any new influx, either from Serb offensives or a renewed campaign of forced expulsions.

Macedonian leaders committed themselves Friday to keeping their borders open to refugees in the event of a new crisis, Ogata said.

Yugoslavia appeared to have at least partially reopened borders by Friday, after closing them three days earlier. Aid workers said they had seen dozens of children fleeing across Albania's mountainous borders on bicycles, ominously alone.

"It's very worrying because the children are in a state of shock and can't tell us what has happened to their family," UNICEF spokeswoman Marie Heuze said in Geneva. "They aren't in a fit state to tell to tell us information and we can't push them too hard."

In Macedonia, U.N. workers started collecting evidence and testimony from refugees for any war-crimes trials that might come from the conflict between Yugoslavia and Kosovo's ethnic Albanian rebels.

And Ogata, acknowledging reports that Macedonian security forces were abusing the refugees, said she would ask NATO troops to remain in the camps to protect the ethnic Albanians.

NATO forces are now doing much of the grunt work of running the camps — handing out milk and bread in food lines, tracking down blankets for children.

NATO spokesmen in Macedonia said the alliance planned to turn the work over to UNHCR and start pulling out of the first camps within 48 hours.

Unlike Albania, Macedonia has been reluctant to take in refugees and has acknowledged at least one instance of security forces who guard the camps' perimeters beating a resident.

"I think for the time being, it would be important to ask NATO to maintain security," Ogata told reporters in Skopje, the Macedonian capital.

More than half the refugees from Kosovo have been taken in by private citizens, mostly fellow ethnic Albanians, the UNHCR said. The rest are in camps that have sprung up in Albania and Macedonia over the past week; Ogata said by now she believed all the refugees in Macedonia at least had a roof — or tent — over the heads and food to eat.

Thousands of the refugees already have been airlifted to camps in other countries, mostly Germany, Norway and Turkey.

Ogata indicated plans by the United States and Canada to send more than 20,000 refugees to North America were on hold for now, in an effort to keep them closer to the province they left behind.

While "these generous offers are very much appreciated," the preference is to keep the refugees in temporary camps in the region until they can return home, Ogata said.

One threadbare 14-year-old refugee boy burst past officials during Ogata's guided tour of the camp Friday, demanding when he could return to Kosovo, and inviting her to come too.

Ogata reached out and gave him a reassuring pat.

"I would like to go back there, too," she said. "We can go back when we can go there safely."

Kosovo crisis rekindles Cold War mood in Russia

MOSCOW (AP) — Almost a decade after the Soviet Union collapsed, Russia is resounding with Cold War rhetoric and gestures as politicians, officials and journalists denounce NATO attacks on Yugoslavia as an imperialist plot.

The lead in the anti-NATO rampage has been taken by the communists, the largest opposition party, who have eagerly dusted off Cold War slogans as the fear grows among Russians that NATO is a threat.

Others have joined in. Russian generals have put out wildly exaggerated claims of NATO losses and claimed weapons of mass destruction are being used against civilians. Russian officials mutter about American plans for global domination. And much of the Russian press has portrayed Yugoslavia as a gallant little nation single-handedly battling the forces of Western oppression.

"Anti-Western hysteria still rages in some Russian news organizations," press commentator Leonid Bershidsky wrote in The Moscow Times, adding that some Russian journalists "can turn on a dime when it comes to reverting to the 1970s style of writing about the West."

A few officials and organizations have gone beyond rhetoric, kicking out or banning Americans and other Westerners. Although a far cry from the days when the Soviets and the West practiced mass expulsions and boycotts, a few American athletes, missionaries and others have been denied visas or told long-planned visits are no longer welcome.

The actions, mostly by low-ranking officials or nongovernment groups, are not condoned by the government, and some have been quietly reversed. Four American teachers dismissed by a St. Petersburg business school were given their jobs back within days when senior officials intervened.

> 'Anti-Western hysteria still rages in some Russian news organizations.'
> — Leonid Bershidsky, press commentator

President Boris Yeltsin's government, which opposes the airstrikes, has been working to restart talks to solve the crisis. While harshly denouncing NATO, the government has said it won't get involved in the conflict.

Yeltsin's government knows the country has neither the military muscle nor the wealth to even think of risking a confrontation. The economy is in crisis and the military in shambles, short even of food and uniforms.

But that has only encouraged the opposition, who see Yeltsin's stance as another political club with which to flail the president.

With Yeltsin facing possible impeachment for his policies, the communists are attracting growing support from Russians disillusioned by years of failed market reforms and the country's growing weakness.

In the Duma, the lower chamber of parliament, communists are spouting Cold War rhetoric that would have seemed laughable just a few months ago.

"The NATO aggression against a small, freedom-loving Slav nation is a premeditated scare action. Serbia forced to its knees would symbolize the triumph of Pax Americana," said Communist Party leader Gennady Zyuganov.

Gennady Seleznyov, the communist parliamentary speaker, set off alarm bells Friday when he claimed that Yeltsin ordered missiles to target NATO countries. But Seleznyov's spokesman later said the two men only discussed the possibility.

Many Russians see Yugoslavia as a fellow Slav nation with close historic and cultural ties and really do not understand the reasons for NATO's actions. While most ordinary people condemn NATO, protests at Western embassies have drawn just a few hundred communists and nationalists.

The Russian media has backed Yugoslavia, with some television stations and newspapers using terms like "barbaric" and "evil" to describe NATO strategy.

For the first two weeks of the conflict, the Russian media paid almost no attention to the ethnic Albanian refugees who had fled Kosovo.

While TV viewers around the world saw daily reports of refugees scrambling for their lives, Russians were watching emotional, pro-Belgrade reports of heroic Yugoslavs being blasted by a ruthless war machine.

"Russia, when it comes to the Balkan conflict, is living in a virtual world, in which the Albanians, with their burned villages and murdered civilians, simply do not exist," said commentator Andrei Piontkovsky.

A change came only when some Russian journalists realized that Kosovo had become a Russian domestic political issue and they were giving support to the communists, who advocate a revival of Soviet-style controls.

Some TV channels and publications began paying attention to the refugees. Leading TV anchorman Yevgeny Kiselyov said unbalanced coverage of Kosovo could be a threat to Russian democracy.

"I understand that the anti-NATO, anti-Western, anti-American hysteria could lead to a situation when we would have restored Communist Party rule," he was quoted as saying by The Moscow Times.

Key to Miller's disappearance up for auction

LONDON (AP) — A military logbook that sheds light on the mysterious disappearance of American bandleader Glenn Miller during World War II will be up for auction next week, offering a chance to own a clue to one of aviation's most captivating puzzles.

Miller, who created the 1940s big band sound, was en route to France to organize concerts for Allied troops when his plane disappeared over the English Channel on a foggy December day in 1944.

No trace has ever been found of the single-engine aircraft or its passengers.

Bad weather was the chief suspect until the flight log was produced, which suggests a more haunting — and now largely accepted — theory: Miller's plane may have been blasted out of the sky by bombs jettisoned by a Royal Air Force squadron returning from an aborted raid on Germany.

"There are many theories ... and we'll never know for sure what happened. But this is certainly an intriguing possibility," said Stephen Maycock, an aeronautical specialist with Sotheby's, which is auctioning the logbook Tuesday.

The book, which belonged to the late Royal Air Force navigator Fred Shaw, will be sold along with a letter from Britain's Ministry of Defense bolstering the theory and a bundle of newspaper clippings and other materials.

The items are expected to fetch $960 to $1,300.

"Glenn Miller is an extremely important character and this is a fascinating story that has captured people's imaginations," said Rachel Aked, a Sotheby's spokeswoman.

The trombonist's fans have spent decades trying to determine what happened to him on Dec. 15, 1944.

It wasn't until the mid-1980s that Shaw dug out his logbook after going to see the film "The Glenn Miller Story," which chronicles the life of the man who wrote such songs as "In the Mood" and "Moonlight Serenade."

In a single entry — "Ops. Siegen Canceled. Jettison Southern Area" — the logbook confirmed what Shaw suspected: Miller's plane disappeared on the same day Shaw's squadron aborted a bombing raid on Siegen, Germany, and let loose their 4,000-pound bombs over the English Channel.

The bombs, which had to be discarded before the bombers could safely land, exploded just above the water.

Shaw remembered seeing a small plane spiraling out of control after the bombs were dropped.

"Around it, I could see the sea bubbling and blistering with the exploding bombs. As each bomb burst, I could see the blast wave from it radiating outwards. ... It was obvious to me that airplane below was in trouble," he once said. "Eventually, I saw it disappear into the English Channel."

The downed plane was not reported, but Shaw's story was corroborated by other squadron members. And in 1985, Britain's Ministry of Defense wrote a letter to Shaw conceding his theory "is certainly possible."

"In retrospect, we now lean towards this being the most likely solution to the 'mystery,'" the department concluded.

Efforts to free three U.S. soldiers fail

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — A barrage of NATO airstrikes on Orthodox Good Friday sent a fireball soaring from a storage complex and choked nearby vineyards under black smoke. A Cyprus envoy blamed the bombing for a Yugoslav decision not to free three captured U.S. servicemen.

Western officials said the airstrikes, now in their third week, are beginning to take a toll on Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic's forces, cutting them off from supplies and decimating their infrastructure.

As night fell Friday, air raid sirens sounded anew in Belgrade.

But the failure of the mission by a former president of Cyprus to gain the soldiers' release, along with heightened tensions on Yugoslavia's borders with refugee-swamped Albania and Macedonia, brought fears the conflict could intensify.

The Cypriot envoy, Spyros Kyprianou, said after meeting with Milosevic that Yugoslavia "cannot resort to any peaceful gestures" regarding the soldiers in light of the airstrikes.

"The intensified heavy bombing of the last couple of days has made my humanitarian mission more difficult," Kyprianou said. "It is impossible to achieve any results in the present climate."

The White House, which has demanded the men's unconditional release, was not surprised the talks failed. "We did not have great expectations," said deputy press secretary Barry Toiv.

Despite the unilateral truce claimed by Yugoslav forces, they fired machine guns into Albania at fighters from the rebel Kosovo Liberation Army, international monitors said Friday. And Macedonia reported its forces had fired into Yugoslavia after a Macedonian soldier was shot to death on the border a day earlier.

Clashes along the Albania-Yugoslavia border continued Friday afternoon, this time with heavy machine guns, mortars and artillery, monitors said.

The Yugoslav army issued a harsh statement accusing Albania of "aggression" against Yugoslavia and saying those supporting the KLA would "have to bear the consequences for the eventual flareup of the war in the Balkans."

Milosevic declared Thursday that his forces had defeated the KLA and that "peace has prevailed" in Kosovo, a majority ethnic Albanian province within Serbia, the main Yugoslav republic. KLA officials dismissed the claim.

President Clinton said during the past several days of good weather, NATO airstrikes have "struck hard at the Serb machinery of repression and at the infrastructure that supports it," including fuel and arms depots and armored military vehicles.

Gen. Sir Charles Guthrie, the British chief of defense staff, claimed the Yugoslav forces "are on a slippery slope."

"Their lines of communication are being cut, their vehicles' assembly areas are being attacked, their supplies are running low and they are taking casualties," he said Friday.

But NATO's top general said it would be "very, very difficult" for the West to impose peace in Kosovo without sending in ground troops. Gen. Klaus Naumann said deployment inside the province was a "theoretical possibility," but refused to speculate on what the alliance would decide.

In Moscow, Boris Yeltsin warned NATO on Friday not to send ground troops into Yugoslavia and "make it their protectorate," saying: "We cannot permit that." Russia has sought to find a diplomatic way to halt the NATO airstrikes, but so far its calls have been largely ignored by the alliance.

NATO allies have insisted the bombing campaign will continue until Milosevic withdraws Serb special police and Yugoslav army units sent to Kosovo as part of his 14-month crackdown on the rebels.

Western leaders also want Milosevic to accept a peace plan and allow 28,000 NATO-led troops, including 4,000 Americans, to be stationed in Kosovo to enforce it. They also want Yugoslavia to allow all ethnic Albanian refugees to return home.

The nearly half million who fled amid what they described as a reign of terror by Serb forces are mainly scattered in Macedonia and Albania. Thousands of others have been airlifted to camps in other countries, mostly Germany, Norway and Turkey.

In Macedonia, U.N. workers started collecting evidence and testimony from refugees for possible war-crimes trials against Yugoslav officials.

The whereabouts within Kosovo of tens of thousands of ethnic Albanians turned back at the border were unknown.

"The humanitarian effort ... continues to gain momentum and I think it will be a matter of days before we have the situation quite under control," said U.N. refugee chief Sadako Ogata, who toured camps in Macedonia on Friday.

A U.S. plan to house 20,000 refugees at the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, may be scrapped, however, because refugees are being better cared for in Albania, Macedonia and elsewhere, officials said.

Allied attacks late Thursday and early Friday targeted Yugoslavia's military-industrial plants, fuel depots and communications facilities.

A hit on Jugopetrol storage depot at Smederevo, 18 miles east of Belgrade, ignited an enormous fireball. Dense black smoke engulfed nearby vineyards and fruit orchards in spring bloom.

NATO jets struck twice late Thursday and early Friday at several targets in Kragujevac, an industrial town 55 miles south of Belgrade, targeting the Zastava industrial complex, the state-run Tanjug said. It said 124 people were hurt.

The sprawling facility contains a major weapons factory as well as the country's only auto plant, which makes Yugo cars.

There was no word on whether the automaking part of the facility was affected, but Tanjug said the complex's "most vital" installations were hit, including a power plant it said provided heat for hospitals and schools.

Other attacks were reported on a garrison in Belgrade, a Serbian television relay station at Jagodina, and in the towns of Uzice and Pozega, both 60 miles south of the capital.

Tanjug also reported three daytime detonations near Pristina, the Kosovo capital.

Yugoslavia has kept up a drumbeat of angry complaints over what it says are widespread civilian casualties as a result of the bombings.

In a turnabout, NATO acknowledged Friday that earlier this week, one of its bombs from an attack on the main telephone exchange in Pristina fell short of its target, causing damage to a residential area.

Midwest storms kill six, destroy about 200 homes

CINCINNATI (AP) — Thunderstorms demolished about 200 houses in two Cincinnati suburbs before daybreak Friday, killing four people and leaving normally manicured yards littered with bricks, broken two-by-fours and tattered roofs.

Two other people were killed in Illinois as powerful storms tore through the Midwest overnight.

In the Cincinnati suburbs of Montgomery and Blue Ash, water spewed into the air from broken fire hydrants. Shopping center parking lots were strewn with broken glass, and sheet metal that had been siding was wrapped around utility poles. Scores of trees were flattened.

Lindsey Stiffler, 13, was asleep in her bedroom with the window open in Montgomery when she heard rain and hail and then a roaring noise. She looked out, saw the storm, and fled to the basement with her family.

"I could hear everything flying through the house, smashing around," she said. "I didn't realize what was going on until I got outside. There was glass on the ground. The carport was lying against the house."

The back portion of her neighbor's wooden house was split in two, with one side leaning over, she said. Elsewhere on her street, "there were mattresses and curtains and everything sticking out of the windows," she said. "Roofs were ripped off."

Two people were killed in a house, and two in separate car crashes.

One of the victims, a 40-year-old man, was thrown from his car when the wind flipped it over, Blue Ash Police Chief Mike Allen said. The same gust flipped a tractor-trailer.

Ohio's Emergency Management Agency estimated 200 homes were destroyed in Cincinnati's northeastern suburbs alone. The utility Cinergy said about 200,000 customers lost power. Most service had been restored by the afternoon.

The storm also flipped motor homes and campers that convert to tents at the Dave Arbogast dealership in Tipp City, north of Dayton. "We got about 10 tent campers in a nice, neat pile," said Ron West, a manager.

Gov. Bob Taft said officials had no estimate of damage. He declared three counties emergency areas.

"We saw homes where walls were torn down and chairs, tables and computers were sitting there untouched," he said. "It's a total rebuilding effort."

In Ashland, Ill., a community of 1,200, winds ripped into a trailer park and killed a 68-year-old woman. And a 43-year-old woman was killed in a mobile home in Cisco, 65 miles to the east.

In both Illinois and Ohio, the National Weather Service could not immediately determine whether tornadoes had struck.

The storms also damaged homes in Indiana. In Iowa, at least nine suspected tornadoes destroyed homes, flattened barns and uprooted trees.

A hay baler and other farm equipment were overturned on Deb Frisbie's farm near Adair, Iowa.

"We barely made it to the basement," she said. "We didn't really hear anything. All I was worried about was getting everybody to the basement."

A tornado also ravaged a five-block area in the Nebraska town of North Bend on Thursday afternoon, and the storm damaged buildings and downed power lines in Missouri.

"I was napping," said Margaret Linville, whose barn was destroyed in Barnard, Mo. "When I roused, the barn was gone, debris was still flying."

Judge orders FBI probe of possible effort to influence McDougal's jury

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — The judge in Susan McDougal's trial froze jury deliberations Friday and ordered an FBI investigation of possible attempts to influence the jurors.

The chain of events began after it was discovered a juror had brought a state law book into the jury room.

As he ordered the FBI inquiry, U.S. District Judge George Howard Jr. also issued a subpoena to bring in for questioning a former Arkansas Supreme Court justice whose business card was found in the book.

Jurors had begun their deliberations Thursday on charges of criminal contempt and obstruction stemming from Mrs. McDougal's refusal to testify before grand juries investigating her Whitewater business partners, President Clinton and Hillary Rodham Clinton.

The judge announced his intentions at a conference Friday in his chambers with prosecutors and Mrs. McDougal's attorneys present, along with reporters.

"If there's a possibility of jury tampering going on here, we've got to root it out," said Mark Barrett, one of Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr's prosecutors.

The judge said he was concerned about the possibility that the jury was tainted by the actions of Michael Nance of Little Rock, who brought the law book into the jury room.

The court clerk discovered the volume and retrieved it. Jurors told him they hadn't looked at it.

"We want to be sure that the people still have confidence in the federal justice system," the judge said.

He ordered the FBI inquiry after a discussion of whether the former justice, John I. Purtle, had any connection to Mrs. McDougal; whether Nance had been influenced by a factor outside the trial and whether the other jurors had been tainted.

Mrs. McDougal's lawyer, Mark Geragos, said he favored the questioning of Purtle.

In an interview, Purtle said he sold his house to Nance in 1997 and that he probably left the law book behind. Purtle said he knows Mrs. McDougal and Clinton, and he worked with Mrs. Clinton on a legal case before she became first lady.

But Purtle said he has no connection to Nance now and no connection to the McDougal trial — although he feels strongly that Mrs. McDougal shouldn't have been prosecuted for criminal contempt.

Starr's prosecutors asked that Nance be dismissed, but Geragos urged that all 12 jurors should be kept on the job.

'It occurs to me that while arguably this may be misconduct, it may not be so prejudicial that we need to kick him off a jury.'

— Mark Geragos, Susan McDougal's lawyer

"It occurs to me that while arguably this may be misconduct, it may not be so prejudicial that we need to kick him off a jury," said Geragos. He said he would ask for a mistrial if Nance were removed.

Federal court rules allow a trial to proceed with 11 jurors in an emergency, if neither the prosecution nor defense objects. If either side complains, the judge must decide whether the case should go forward, usually giving much greater weight to the defendant's wishes.

Nance brought to the jury room the 1996 Arkansas Criminal Code. Barrett said he didn't care that the book didn't apply in federal court.

The book contains a handwritten notation referring to a court rule that says prospective jurors shall receive instructions explaining legal terminology.

On Thursday, in a note to the judge, the jurors asked whether they could consider Mrs. McDougal's state of mind in deciding whether she is guilty of criminal contempt for not testifying to grand juries in 1996 and 1998.

Other notes asked for a definition of "innocent reason" — a phrase in written instructions for the jury — and asked whether there might have been an "innocent reason" for refusing to testify, even if Mrs. McDougal acted "willfully" in violating a court order directing her to cooperate with Starr's probe.

In each case, Howard tossed the question back to the jury, referring the panel to the instructions he had read to them.

During five days on the witness stand, Mrs. McDougal said she feared Starr would charge her with perjury unless she falsely implicated the Clintons in wrongdoing.

Feds fear harm to children from side air bags in rear seats

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal regulators are concerned that side air bags in autos' rear seats could seriously injure children riding too close to a door, officials said Friday.

Side air bags in the rear seats of Mercedes-Benz, Audi and BMW cars could deploy with enough power to severely harm children resting near the door, said Transportation Department officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The concerns were based either on test results the automakers shared with the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration or independent testing done by that agency's engineers using a dummy representing a 3-year-old sleeping against the door, among other positions, officials said.

There have been no reports of children killed or seriously injured by side air bags, which have the potential to save lives in side-impact crashes, NHTSA say.

Elizabeth Dole outlines abortion stance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Elizabeth Dole said Friday she supports the idea of a constitutional amendment outlawing abortion but feels the idea is politically unfeasible — a position similar to one that has brought GOP presidential rival George W. Bush criticism from some conservatives.

Mrs. Dole wrote in a letter to a supporter that she is anti-abortion. However, like Texas Gov. Bush, she said she believes abortion should be allowed in cases of rape or incest, or when pregnancy might endanger the life of a mother.

The former Red Cross president and Republican Cabinet secretary has been criticized by some in the conservative wing of the party for not having taken a position on the hotly debated topic.

Her letter, released by aides, was written in response to a question by a supporter at an Arizona Republican Party event last week: "How can we preserve our ideals and our party, too?"

"We must recognize that good and honorable people disagree on the subject of abortion," Mrs. Dole wrote. "We should agree to respectfully disagree."

One conservative activist quickly criticized her stance.

"That position means she is willing to accept the status quo and cannot be counted on to do anything" new, said Phyllis Schlafly, president of the Eagle Forum. "It seems to be a way of saying the status quo is all right."

Mrs. Dole said that a constitutional amendment is not a realistic possibility in today's political climate.

"I would support the idea of a constitutional amendment, if it were possible," she wrote. "But, of course, it's not."

Mrs. Dole also stressed that she does not want the campaign to focus on the contentious issue of abortion, particularly on candidates' stances on a constitutional amendment.

"There is such an inordinate focus on an amendment that urgent issues such as domestic violence, child care, sexual harassment, women's health and the financial security of women are nearly ignored," she wrote.

When her husband ran for the presidency in 1996, former Sen. Bob Dole also supported a constitutional amendment banning abortion except in cases of rape, incest or to save the life of the mother. He tried to amend the Republican platform to allow for differences of opinion on abortion but was thwarted by anti-abortion members of the party.

Big exam going computer only

WASHINGTON (AP) — Christopher Delaney just bought a laptop for his sailing school business, so he's fairly comfortable with computers. Yet, Delaney, 27, who's seeking a master's degree in oceanography, jumped at the chance to take the final paper version of the test required to get into most graduate schools.

"Paper and pencil is suited to my test-taking skills a little better," said Delaney of Boston. "You can skip around if you come to a question you find particularly difficult."

Today, he joins about 39,000 people nationwide taking the last paper Graduate Record Exam, the second major entrance test to become fully computerized.

After that, all 400,000 annual GRE test-takers must use the computer test, which unlike the paper version "adapt" to each person, asking tougher questions of those doing well, easier questions of those performing poorly and adjusting scores accordingly.

The computer version — where test-takers click on answers on a computer screen with a mouse instead of penciling in ovals on a sheet of paper — has been available since 1993. In 1997, the Graduate Management Admissions Test, required by most business schools, was the first to switch entirely to computer.

Last year, almost half of GRE test-takers opted for the computer version, said Nancy Cole, president of Educational Testing Service, which administers the standardized tests owned by individual policy boards.

The change, however, has sparked debate over the quality and fairness of the computerized tests. And it's angered one test-taker enough that she's seeking legal action.

"These test scores will determine a person's life course; if there's still a problem, it's unforgivable for them to be switching the test," said Amy Cuddy, who has used a Massachusetts consumer law to alert ETS of a pending lawsuit.

Cuddy, 26, who's required to send a letter 30 days before filing suit, charges that a computerized test she took in East Longmeadow, Mass., last fall was incorrectly scored. The score she got on the computer version differed wildly from the score on a paper version she took a month later, and from scores on practice computer tests.

Supporters say the computer's ability to "adapt," asking tougher or easier questions, gives a better picture of a test-taker's ability because concentration and time aren't wasted on questions that are too hard or easy.

But critics say computer tests can be nerve-wracking for people used to paper tests that allow them to skip items, come back or change answers.

"Computerizing low-quality, multiple-choice tests does not magically transform them into better assessment instruments," said Robert A. Schaeffer of FairTest, a Cambridge, Mass., group that monitors testing.

Last fall, 400 GMAT test-takers saw a "fatal error" message flash on their computer screens immediately after they finished the three-hour exam. Some, who believed the glitch hurt their scores, demanded refunds. But ETS said the problem affected no scores and gave no refunds.

Cole says there's no proof the computerized version lowers or raises scores. And there's no way to cheat the system: "You're not going to answer a couple wrong and just coast through. As soon as you answer them right, it starts getting harder again."

Susan Schatten, 28, who took the test in Columbia, Md., in December, found the test more convenient: "I didn't think it was any less fair."

The computer tests cost more ($96, from about $55 for the paper GRE) and are offered six days a week instead of three times a year. Cole said because computers are more expensive, the testing service isn't making more money.

New York state is considering forcing the paper-and-pencil option, said Robert Shaw, an aide to state Sen. Kenneth P. LaValle, who heads the Legislature's higher education committee.

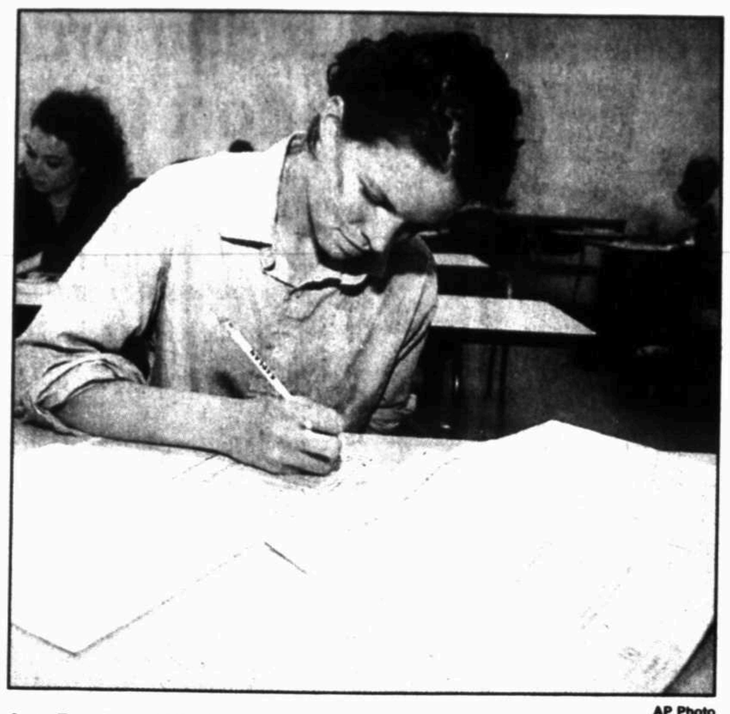
"There are people who have been out of the academic environment for a while, who may not be as comfortable with a computer," Shaw said.

New York was first to require test-givers to provide a given exam's questions, answers and backup data to people disputing their scores.

Cole acknowledges the computer test's complex scoring makes it difficult to follow such "truth in testing" orders, but ETS is looking for ways to help people reviewing scores understand the programming.

The Scholastic Aptitude Test, taken by about 2 million high-school students each year, is still given on paper, except for a computer version given to younger children for colleges tracking bright students for special programs.

Major exams for medical and law school, which are given by independent professional councils, are still given solely on paper.



AP Photo

Amy Bracken of Washington, applies her pencil to a test form at the Kaplan Center in downtown Washington Tuesday. Today, 39,000 people will take the last-ever paper-and-pencil version of the GRE, the entrance exam for graduate school. It's part of a movement toward giving important standardized tests on computers.

When it comes to conceiving Year 2000 kids, nothing is inconceivable

By Douglas Rowe
Associated Press

Around the world, couples trying to have a "millennium baby" did everything conceivable Friday.

From Malaysia to Norway, from Spain to the United States, radio stations held first-baby-of-2000 contests, and couples were offered some private time together, romantic hotel getaways and aphrodisiacs ranging from a traditional Malaysian potion to a Barry White CD.

Friday was considered the optimum conception date for a Jan. 1, 2000, birth.

"I guess it's normally not so public," said Saundra Mendalka, who participated in a Boston radio station's "conceive-a-thon" with her husband, Darren. "I called my mother and I said, 'How does it feel to have a daughter that's going to be in the public and everybody knows that she's going to have sex tomorrow?'"

Diana and Michael Maurer accepted a Philadelphia radio station's offer of a free hotel room. Mrs. Maurer said afterward: "We gave it a good go."

A radio host in Barcelona, Spain, wore pajamas as he interviewed his station's two competing couples in a king-size bed hours before they went in search of parenthood in their free hotel suites.

A hotel on the resort island of Penang in Malaysia helped out with a native elixir. "We're serving a freshly brewed pot of tongkat ali. It's our Malaysian version of Viagra," said Cheah Mei Lin, an assistant manager at the Feringi Beach Hotel.

In the township of Sel, in the mountains of Norway, nursery schools are staying open this weekend to look after children for free so that their parents can try to conceive in peace.

In Romania, the newspaper Evenimentul urged readers to "get to work" and promised the equivalent of seven years' average wages — $6,800 — to the country's first baby next year.

Britain's Independent Television network planned to show a two-hour program called "Birth Race 2000" on Saturday that included tips on conception and romantic movies.

All this activity worries some.

A January 2000 baby boom could overload maternity clinics at a time of possible staff shortages and equipment failures because of Y2K computer problems when the year rolls from '99 to '00.

Finish those tax returns soon or be ready to pay

WASHINGTON (AP) — A message to the 34 million or so taxpayers who haven't filed their income tax returns: This is the last weekend to get it all done before the April 15 deadline.

There are ways to get extensions from the Internal Revenue Service, but they can make tax bills even higher. Tax experts agree it's a big mistake not to file something by Thursday's midnight deadline.

"The worst strategy, one that can add thousands of dollars to your tax bill, is to do nothing," said Lawrence Torella, an accountant and partner with Richard A. Eisner & Co. in New York.

Torella said a "whole new generation" of taxpayers with problems filing returns on time could be created by income from the booming stock market, an increase in people who have stock options and windfalls from sales of small businesses. In addition, tax returns are more complex than ever.

The penalty for failing to file a tax return is 5 percent of the balance due per month, up to a maximum of 25 percent.

Taxpayers who aren't going to meet the filing deadline should send the IRS a request for extension until Aug. 16 using Form 4868, which is available on the Internet, IRS offices and some banks and post offices. The IRS automatically approves such requests.

But people seeking extensions should still pay an estimate of their taxes due, or at least as much as possible, by Thursday. Doing so will lessen the sting of interest — now 8 percent on late payments — and penalties of a half-percent per month.

The IRS will refund any amount overpaid, once the final return is submitted.

"Come in a little high," said IRS spokesman Don Roberts. "Whatever you have left, you're going to pay interest on."

Penalties for late tax payments drop to a quarter-percent per month if the taxpayer enters into an installment payment agreement with the IRS.

A request for such an installment plan, using Form 9465, can be attached to the tax return. The IRS almost always grants such requests as long as the taxpayer agrees to pay $25,000 or less within five years. There's a $43 fee to set up such a plan.

For reasons such as a death in the family or serious illness, the IRS sometimes waives late-payment penalties on returns filed on time. People should make such requests courteously and in writing.

One other note: The U.S. Tax Court has rejected claims from taxpayers who say accountants advised them to file returns late while collecting required documentation.

Through April 2, the IRS had received almost 70 million of the 126 million tax returns expected this year. Counting estimates for this week, IRS spokesman Roberts said it's likely that 34 million taxpayers, or about 26 percent, will submit their returns in the next few days.

Although refunds are running close to 20 percent ahead of last year and average $1,575, it's likely that people who owe taxes make up the bulk of the last-minute filers. And many people probably put off doing taxes last week because of the twin Easter and Passover holidays.

"You really have only one good weekend in April to work on tax returns, instead of two," Roberts said.

Stars' best record

DALLAS — Joe Nieuwendyk had a goal and an assist as the Dallas Stars clinched the NHL's best record and set a franchise mark for points in a season with a 3-1 victory over the New York Rangers on Friday night.

The Stars improved to 110 points, assuring Dallas the Presidents' Trophy for the second straight season.

Dallas surpassed last season's 109 points, the previous franchise record. The Stars also set a club record with their 27th home victory, beating the mark set in three different seasons, including last year.

The Presidents' Trophy will be presented to the Stars before Sunday afternoon's home game against the Los Angeles Kings.

Mike Keane and Dave Reid also had goals for the Stars.

Olazabal puts injuries behind him, takes over Masters lead

By Doug Ferguson
AP Golf Writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. — His feet hurt so bad he couldn't walk.

His heart ached too, especially when Jose Maria Olazabal found himself confined to a couch in Spain, thousands of miles from Augusta National and the green jacket he had won only two years earlier.

His future looked as bleak as what he saw on television that day: Greg Norman squandering a six-stroke lead in the final round of the 1996 Masters, an excruciating loss that figured to be the last of the Shark's chances in the major he covets the most.

"I was just thinking that one day I will be back there," Olazabal said.

Both of them walked up the 18th fairway in grand fashion Friday.

Olazabal was marching — not limping — like a Masters champion after his 6-under 66 gave him a one stroke lead over Scott McCarron. Norman was in contention once again, a gleam in those daring blue eyes after a 4-under 68 left him only three strokes behind.

Five years after he won the Masters for his only major, Olazabal relied on his experience and creativity around the greens to avoid bogey and finish two rounds at 136.

Three years after that shocking collapse, Norman showed that Augusta hasn't seen the last of him yet.

"We've always said that experience on this golf

MHS boys claim team title

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

For the first time since they were sophomores, Midland High seniors Weldon Cooks and Raji Hickey were defeated in their individual events.

Still, the Bulldogs showed they have come of age Friday night at the Tall City Relays. Because while there was a little adversity to deal with at Memorial Stadium, they will be the unquestionable favorite to win the program's first team title next week at the District 4-5A championships, which will also be held at Memorial Stadium.

"I will put some pressure on these kids to do something that has never been done," said MHS coach Wes Cope about following up the program's second Tall City title in three years. "That is what we have been talking about for three years with the seniors, 'Do something that has never been done.' "

The Bulldogs went wire to wire, winning the first and last events and many more in between, but it wasn't until their 1,600-meter relay team— the fastest in the region — sealed the win with a victory in the last event of the night. Raji Hickey, Weldon Cooks, Lamar Hickey and Roget King finished with a time of 3 minutes, 19.03 seconds.

"It came down to the mile relay and I told them what are you going to do when you are tired? Are we going to win this thing or not?" Cope said. "They all looked at me and said 'let's go.'

"Permian has a great tradition and we are trying to build that tradition here. We have to build it around a mile relay so when we come to the end of a track meet, we have a chance to win it."

While MHS won the boys side, Odessa High captured the girls title with 177 points to hand San Angelo Central (116) a 61-point whipping. MHS scored 109 points and Lee was fourth with 106.

However in both cases, it was a good day when it came to individual performances.

The Lee girls were paced by Maurion Strambler, who despite nursing a quadricep strain won three first place medals. Strambler won the long jump, triple jump and the 100. She also anchored both Lee relays.

If she can do the same at district, it will remarkable, considering the pain she was in at day's end.

Bulldogs need win vs. 4-5A leaders

By Lee Passmore

Act II of the District 4-5A baseball season starts today, and Midland High and Midland Lee have different ideas of how they should fit into the plot which has unfolded so far.

LEE

Midland Lee vs. Midland High

For Lee, repeating Act I would be quite nice, since the Rebels now sit atop the district with a 5-1 mark (16-4 overall), which included a 12-10 win over Midland High to open district play.

MHS, meanwhile, has been merely a supporting player, one of three teams tied for third in the district, two games behind the Rebels, and the Bulldogs could distinguish themselves from the pack with a breakout performance today when they host Lee at 2 p.m. at Zachery Field.

This is the point in the schedule where the contenders separate themselves from the pretenders, and while Lee definitely is one of the former, a win by Midland High would keep the Bulldogs from becoming the latter. However, the Rebels have held the upper hand over the Bulldogs this season, not only rallying from a 7-0 deficit to win the district opener, but also having beaten MHS twice at the Tournament of Champions at Christensen Stadium.

Those three wins might give Lee a psychological advantage, but they might also be a burden.

"We started focusing on Midland High the moment the San Angelo (Central) game was over," said Lee coach Jesse Benavidez, whose team held a one game lead over Abilene Cooper after beating Central 6-1 Tuesday. "It's hard enough to beat a team three times in a year and we're playing (the Bulldogs) a fourth time."

The Rebels could end up holding crosstown bragging rights (they can do no worse than end up with three wins in four games over MHS) but the situation could easily be reversed.

Not only did Midland High (1 6 overall) squander a big lead in the istrict opener, but the Bulldogs are con g off a tear-your-hair-out 12-11 loss to esky nemesis Odessa Permian nine days ago in which they held a 10-0 lead. They also lost a frustrating 2-1 eight inning pitchers duel to Cooper.

"We've lost three games by four runs, and with a break here and there, we could be 6-0," said Midland High coach Barry Russell. "Coulda, woulda, shoulda, we'd all have a Merry Christmas."

So far, Lee has enjoyed more goodies than MHS in district. After rallying to beat the Bulldogs, the Rebels survived a rough start to beat Permian 11-8, then came back with three runs in the bottom

Lee Rebel Classic nearly finishes up

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

It almost seems as if the Lee Rebel Classic tennis tournament has ended before it really got started.

The tournament, which is generally scheduled over two days, will resume today at 9 a.m. with only a handful of matches at the Midland Lee tennis courts. That's because a number of finals matches, including most in the tournament's A Division, were played Friday spread out over the courts at Lee, Midland High and Green Tree Country Club.

A number of factors have conspired to shorten the time in which the tournament has taken place, not the least of which is a relatively small number of teams. That has resulted in fewer matches and a faster tournament.

"This is a little weaker from what we've had in the past," said Steve Buck, coach of host team Lee. "A lot of schools, like in El Paso, are already playing in district tournaments so this is kind of a light workout weekend."

That might be just what Lee, Midland High and Odessa High, all of whom entered the tournament, needed before next week-

MHS' Pullin picks UT-Arlington

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

At this time a year ago, Aaron Pullin wasn't even in the pitching rotation for the Midland High baseball team. Now his right arm might have given him a ticket to college.

Pullin, who has established himself as Midland High's No. 1 pitcher, signed a letter of intent on Friday to play for the University of Texas at Arlington. It was just the beginning of what promises to be a big 48 hours for the senior, who is scheduled to start in today's crucial District 4-5A game against crosstown rival Midland Lee at 2 p.m. at Zachery Field.

With his signing, Pullin became the first Midland High player in the three-year tenure of coach Barry Russell to accept a scholarship to a Division I university. The opportunity to play at that level was what encouraged Pullin to commit to Arlington.

"It was Division I and I always wanted to go to a Division I school," said Pullin, who said no other Division I school expressed much interest. "They're bringing in 10 freshmen next year, and I liked that."

The signing of Pullin is part of a sustained commitment by Arlington to build a foundation for a program which has been trying to restructure itself after some down years. As a player, Pullin's rise might parallel that of Arlington's.

Pullin was an All-District 4-5A selection last year at third base, as his hitting helped the Bulldogs make the playoffs for the first time in seven years. His baseball future after graduating from MHS figured to be someplace in the field and not on the mound.

"I thought I could go to college as a position player, but I got some exposure in front of some scouts through my pitching," said Pullin.

The book on Pullin last year as a pitcher was that he threw hard but lacked control. Also, with seniors Joey Schlaffer and Lee Martin established as the starters, Pullin had to wait in line to throw.

FSU coach Bowden to speak at banquet

Staff Report

ODESSA — The Permian Basin Fellowship of Christian Athletes will host a "Victory" luncheon with Bobby Bowden, head football coach of Florida State University, at noon Wednesday at The Club at Mission Dorado.

Bowden will be the guest speaker of the event, a fund raiser for the local FCA chapter.

Individual tickets are $35. Tables of 10 can be reserved for $1,000. A table of eight is $600 and a table of six is $300. To make the tax deductible reservation, call Jim Cooke at 694-1661 or John Stanley at 689-8804.

Bowden, who owns a 208-51-4 record at Florida State, guided the Seminoles to a national championship in 1993. He is the winner of eight Coach of the Year awards and is a member of both the Alabama and Florida sports halls of fame.

He is the only coach in Division I-A football to compile 11 consecutive 10-win seasons (1987-present) and 11 straight Associated Press Top 4 finishes. With an overall 270-82-4, he is the nation's second winningest active head college coach.

Bowden holds the NCAA record with 11 consecutive bowl victories and 14 straight bowl trips without a loss, compiling a 15-4-1 mark in that bowl appearance span. FSU has gone bowling 18 times in 21 years and 11 of them were in New Year Day bowl games.

Bowden has long been active with the FCA and is a coveted speaker both on the banquet and church circuits.

TRACK: Bulldogs win

(From 1B)

"I thought I could come back and be 100 percent, but I reinjured it," Strambler said. "I will work on it and get it ready for district. We will see how it goes. I feel like I can do all five."

Lee hurdler Julie Jay won the 100-meter hurdles, which will be another boost for next week as was Tieka Clark's second place in the high jump.

"We had more good things than bad," Lee coach Randy Smith said. "I knew we were gambling on some of this stuff before we came over here. It is like Las Vegas — you win a few and lose a few."

The MHS girls had their coach Susan Nix walking on air after the end of the meet. For the first time in a long time, the Lady Bulldogs' mile relay will be a factor in the district meet. Friday, Tara Burns, Sarah Tinslar, Keisha Taylor and Shai Simpson ran 4:04.87 to announce they will be a factor.

The same foursome also won the 400 meter relay. Also, Erin Drummond was a big surprise for Nix, taking second in 300 hurdles.

"We are peaking at the right time," Nix said. "We have people in the right places and it is coming together. This is the best thing that could have happened today. It will get us ready for the district meet."

In addition to running on both relays, Simpson continued her domination of 4-5A's 400 meter runners. She ran 57.73 to match Strambler with three first-place finishes.

"It was a good prep to let me know what I have to do next week," Simpson said. "I fell short of my goal (55 seconds). I am worrying about dropping time, so I can go to state."

The Lee boys had one winner Friday, and he was a big one. Steve Subia — a 6-foot-3, 320 pounder — won the boys shot put, extending his personal best mark and the best mark in the district this year to 52-10 1/4.

He is the favorite to win district, although he wants more than that.

"I'm not feeling to good about this," said Subia, an offensive lineman for the Lee state championship football team. "It is not good enough for me until I get over 55 feet."

The Lee boys as a team have had better Tall City meets. This year, the Rebels took sixth (out of six teams) with 37 points.

"We had kids who set personal best marks and we competed well," Lee coach Kelvin Ratliff said. "We will try to do better at district."

However like one would expect from a team that won an overall team title, the MHS boys got a bunch of big performances.

Luke Conder opened the day with a win in the discus.

"To have a meet here before district is good," said Conder who won the competition with a throw of 152-4. "We want to prove that we have a track team. We were all right last year. We want to prove we can do better."

Wes Solansky, like Conder, was a regional qualifier in 1998 and Friday he set a new Tall City record in the pole vault. Solansky soared 15 feet, 9 inches breaking the old record by one inch.

"I was hoping for 16-6," Solansky said. "This is just another step for me to get ready for regionals where I can qualify for state."

Cooks won the long jump, beating out Roy Williams by three-quarters on an inch. Then, Cooks won his second of three gold medals as he, Hickey, Ricky Villenueva, A.J. Durham captured the 400-meter relay. Anrae Taylor also won the 110 hurdles for MHS.

With the good came a little bit of the not-so-good for Cooks and Hickey. Cooks lost his first final to a 4-5A runner in two years as Williams got a little revenge and will take the "fastest man in the district" title to the 4-5A meet next weekend.

"He beat me all last year. I wanted to come out and show what I could do," said Williams, who recorded a time of 10.60. "If I fall short next week, they will refer to this week and say it was just luck. If I don't do it next week, this doesn't mean a thing."

Hickey later dropped his first 200 final to a 4-5A runner in two years as Central's Trey Strowbridge got Hickey at the tape. The Bobcats won with a time of 21.88. Hickey finished at 22.00.

"That is probably more my fault," said Cope of the two second place finishes by his standout sprinters. "We have concentrated on our training for the mile relay the last two weeks. They will do a bunch of speed work this week."

Permian's Josh Vickers set a new meet record in the 800. Vickers tore up the new Memorial track with a time of 1:53.69. It is by far the best time in the region.

TENNIS: District 4-5A tourney is next week end's District 4-5A tournament, which will be held at Lee. The tournament has a local feel, with Snyder being the school which traveled the furthest to be here.

(From 1B)

Midland High had actually planned on traveling to San Antonio to play in a tournament with its varsity team, and coach Tom Heiting planned on leaving his sub-varsity players in town to play in the B and C divisions of the Rebel Classic. However, things got a little mixed up along the way.

"I had San Antonio on my original schedule for Easter Weekend because that's when it's always been," Heiting said. "Then when we found out they weren't holding it that weekend I decided to put the varsity in the Rebel Classic so wouldn't be left out in the cold."

As it turned out, the San Antonio tournament was scheduled for this weekend, but Heiting had already committed his team to the local tournament, and from a results standpoint he has to be glad he stayed at home. With the exception of boys doubles, MHS had at least one entry who made the finals in each of the A Division events.

In fact, in the finals of those remaining three events, it was all Midland High players. Both Travis Vandergriff and Clayton Vandergriff, a pair of twins from MHS, won their semifinals, with Travis beating Lee's Marshall Viney 7-6 (1), 6-2 and Clayton beating Will Foster of Andrews 6-3, 6-2. The Vandergriffs decided not to meet each other in the finals, though, and shared the title.

Toffee Wilson won the girls singles title by beating teammate Emily Leeton 6-1, 6-2. In the girls doubles final, Meryl McClung and Drew Branum beat MHS teammates Lindsey Hanlon and Sonia Valdez 2-6, 7-6, 6-1.

"We've played a lot of these players so far and I was just happy the kids could hold it together," Heiting said.

In the only A championship match scheduled for today, Lee's boys doubles team of Trent Broach and Brian Breithaupt will face Adrian Gonzales and Brett Gibson of Snyder at 9 a.m. at Lee. Broach and Breithaupt reached the finals by beating Quillian Harris and Justin Brammer of Midland High 6-4, 6-4.

Buck didn't necessarily view the tournament as a tune up for district, thinking his team has already been through that.

"We've played so much this spring we're using (the tournament) because we don't have to be on the road," Buck said. "We've played in stronger tournaments but we're just trying to maintain where we already are."

Moceanus end legal dispute

HOUSTON (AP) — Olympic champion Dominique Moceanu and her parents have reached a financial settlement that ends a protective order against the gymnast's father.

"I certainly realize that people can make mistakes even when their intentions are good," Moceanu said in a statement released by her Boulder, Colo., publicist at Gold Medal Management.

"This has been an extremely difficult time for my family and I hope that we can now begin to move forward in support of one another."

The 17-year-old gymnast, declared a legal adult Oct. 29, won a one-year court order in December that kept her father at least 500 feet away from her.

She sought the order after police said they were investigating accusations that Dumitru Moceanu, 44, tried to have two of his daughter's friends slain. He has denied the accusation.

The protective order was lifted Thursday by Judge Patricia Lykos.

Lawyers declined to elaborate on the confidential financial settlement. The gymnast, training in Colorado for the 2000 Olympics, declined to be interviewed.

Moceanu's lawyer, Ellen Yarrell, said Friday her client is "confident that the settlement assures her personal safety and achievement of her financial goals."

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll have: 5-Dymanic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, April 10, 1999:
Make efforts to keep communication clear, both at home and at work. Sometimes feelings can be shoved under the rug. You'll feel more in control of your destiny, as Lady Luck makes an extended visit. Be sensitive to those in your daily life. Pull back frequently and take in the big picture. Let go of what doesn't work for you. Travel, and explore how others think and live their lives. If you are single, a foreigner could play a significant role. Romance can be everything you want. If attached, your relationship soars to a new high. You are more upbeat than in previous years. Use caution with money, however. AQUARIUS is in your corner.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Tempers flare, including yours! Careful — you could cause much damage with your words. A partner could be testy as well. Get together with friends, enjoy yourself and make the most of the moment. Caring abounds once you clear some hurdles. Don't postpone plans. Tonight: Where the action is.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Others look to you for advice and feedback. A partner has a hard time showing his admiration, which could come out as grumbling. Listen carefully to the meaning behind his words. Bring others together for a fun outing. A change of pace seems to help everyone. Tonight: All eyes turn to you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ You might not have the whole story. Pay close attention to a friend. You might have too much energy for your own good. Take a break from errands. You might be surprised at how revived you'll feel by doing something quirky and a bit audacious. Tonight: Take off ASAP.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Find out more about where a partner is coming from. What starts as a tantrum becomes highly informative. Show your caring, make time for another. Be willing to reverse your plans and do what you both want. Tonight: A must-show, but go as a pair.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Reach out for friends and make plans. You have a great time wherever you are. Don't let an underlying domestic problem get to you. Escape immediate pressures by permitting your ever-social side to emerge. You might be amazed by how much you can forget and relax. Tonight: Accept those invitations.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ You have a lot on your agenda. Follow through on what is important. Allow greater play and fun into your life; not everything needs to be business as usual. A partner teases you into lightening up. Toss cares to the wind; you'll have a great time. Tonight: Do only what you want.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Your tendency to overspend could cause a problem. Think before you delve into your wallet. Don't be demanding with a child or friend. Your sense of humor emerges once you release tension over money. Loosen up; you might be amazed at what comes out. Tonight: Be your lively self.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★ Your words are sharper than you realize; your looks carry much more impact than you know. A partner is reacting to you and withdrawing. Take some time to slow down and relax. A workout at the gym or throwing yourself into a hobby helps you deal with others. Tonight: Order in your very favorite foods!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Keep talking, return calls, stay on top of news. You may be harboring some negative feelings but might not be sure how to express them. Recognize that you are tired and might need a slower pace. Breeze into a favorite store, flea market, sport or boutique. Tonight: Let the fun begin.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★ Take a breath and think through a decision. You might act impulsively, then not like what has happened, later. Frustration surrounds interpersonal relationships. Be realistic and methodical. Positive family interaction and a new option on the homefront make you happy. Tonight: Play it low-key.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ You can have whatever you need and want. Use your charisma to draw out another, who might be a bit feisty or withdrawn. Your visualization of a relationship can be reality if you open up talks. Touch base with neighbors and friends; extend invitations. Tonight: You don't have to go far.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ You might need some time off from the world. Isolate yourself; do what you need to do. This might be a perfect time to tackle your taxes, if you haven't already! A financial purchase is not out of the question. Do some checking and price comparison. Tonight: Get a good night's sleep.

Campbell is coming out in new roles

NEW YORK — "Party of Five" actress Neve Campbell is demolishing her ingenue image.

In the campy thriller "Wild Things," the 25-year-old actress had make-out scenes with Denise Richards. ("Denise and I had some cocktails before we did that scene," she said.)

Coming up is a role as a bisexual hairdresser in "Panic" with William H. Macy. And in "Three to Tango," Ms. Campbell's character tells her friends the details of her affair with a Brazilian girl.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — Forget Girl Power. The future belongs to Woman Power, says ex-Spice Girl Geri Halliwell.

Former Spice Girl Geri Halliwell is promoting Woman Power.

The former Ginger Spice, who left the British supergroup nearly a year ago, wants to take the Spice catchphrase to a new level in her solo career.

"I think Woman Power is important now. It's about being real with one another," Ms. Halliwell said Thursday.

Ms. Halliwell was in Rio to promote her first solo single, "Look at Me." She said she waited to release her first solo effort to let the Spice Girl fame subside a little.

"I didn't want to bring out a record right after I left the group and ride on the back of my departure," she said. "I tried to take my time and make something really good."

———

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — George Jones was released from the hospital Friday and billed almost $2,500 by the state to fix the bridge he smashed with his sport utility vehicle.

It's standard procedure to bill someone who is responsible for damaging state property, said Luanne Grandinetti of the Transportation Department.

"We just work up the prices and then forward the bill to whomever, in this case Mr. George Jones," she said Thursday.

The 67-year-old country star was released from Vanderbilt University Medical Center. He arrived Tuesday for treatment of an irregular heartbeat, his second stay since the March 6 crash.

Jones suffered a lacerated liver and a collapsed lung in the accident.

Friends said Jones was distracted while talking on a cellular phone. But a half-empty bottle of vodka was found in the wreckage, and two people reported seeing Jones' vehicle weaving shortly before the crash.

A grand jury will consider next month whether Jones will face charges.

LONDON — Elizabeth Taylor had to leave her Sugar behind on her first trip to Britain in seven years.

Elizabeth Taylor had to leave her dog behind on a trip to Britain.

The actress arrived Friday without her Maltese terrier because of Britain's strict law requiring a six-month quarantine for visiting U.S. pets.

She noted that "a rat could hitch a ride on a taxi or a truck" and make its way into the country via ferry, but not pets.

Ms. Taylor was in town for Sunday's British Academy of Films and Television Art awards. She will receive a special award for outstanding contributions to film.

———

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Dee Dee Myers, President Clinton's former press secretary, said that Clinton can be "a little bit adolescent" and that his affair with Monica Lewinsky and the cover-up were "indefensible."

"Bill Clinton is a big flirt. He flirts with men. He flirts with women. He flirts with pets," Ms. Myers said Thursday in a speech at Huntingdon College

The president has "brilliance" but "there's a side of him that is a little bit adolescent and doesn't want to take responsibility," she said.

Ms. Myers, now political editor at Vanity Fair, an NBC commentator and a political consultant, said she hopes the scandal results in the altering or elimination of the special prosecutor's office.

"His relationship with Monica Lewinsky is indefensible, and the lengths he went to hide it is indefensible." But "to me, that an investigation into a 20-year-old land deal became an investigation into an affair with an intern is indefensible."

76ers shut down Celtics

Associated Press

BOSTON — The Philadelphia 76ers held Boston to its lowest point total in 44 years, beating the Celtics 83-67 Friday night.

■ NBA Roundup

The Celtics scored only 14 points in the fourth quarter and finished with their lowest point total since scoring 62 against Milwaukee on Feb. 27, 1955.

Allen Iverson scored 23 points and Theo Ratliff had 16 points, a season-high 14 rebounds and seven blocks for the 76ers, who won their third straight. Paul Pierce had 22 points and 13 rebounds for Boston.

Hornets 90, Wizards 88

CHARLOTTE — Bobby Phills hit a corner jumper with two-tenths of a second remaining to lift the Charlotte Hornets over the Washington Wizards.

Elden Campbell scored a season-high 32 points for the Hornets, who handed Washington its fifth straight loss. It was the third straight defeat for interim coach Jim Brovelli, who took over after Bernie Bickerstaff was fired.

Rod Strickland led Washington with 25 points and 12 assists. The Wizards' leading scorer, Mitch Richmond, was held to a season-low five points on 2-of-14 shooting.

Magic 95, Bucks 83

ORLANDO, Fla. — Penny Hardaway had 26 points and nine rebounds and Darrell Armstrong added 18 points and seven assists as Orlando won its sixth straight.

Ray Allen led Milwaukee with 21 points and Glenn Robinson added 15. The Bucks struggled from the free-throw line, making 6-of-15. Orlando was 21-of-26 from the line.

Knicks 86, Hawks 78

ATLANTA — Latrell Sprewell scored 18 points and Patrick Ewing had 16 as the New York Knicks snapped a three-game losing streak.

Larry Johnson added 13 points for the Knicks, who pulled a half-game ahead of Toronto for the eighth and final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference.

Mookie Blaylock scored a season-high 28 points for the Hawks, but only three in the fourth quarter. Grant Long added 19 points for Atlanta, which lost its second straight.

Nets 106, Raptors 99

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Keith Van Horn scored 30 points and Lucious Harris added a season-high 17 as the New Jersey Nets handed the Toronto Raptors their third straight loss.

Stephon Marbury added 20 points for the Nets, who built an 18-point third-quarter lead and then survived a late Toronto rally sparked by Tracy McGrady and Dee Brown.

Rookie Vince Carter led the Raptors with 26 points, including 20 on 8-for-13 shooting in the first half. However, he seemed to hurt his hip early in the third quarter after being knocked down by Nets center William Cunningham and wasn't effective after that.

Pistons 102, Pacers 101

INDIANAPOLIS — Grant Hill scored 30 points and Lindsey Hunter hit a 3-point basket at the buzzer to give the Detroit Pistons a victory over the Indiana Pacers.

The Pacers led 100-96 after two free throws by Jalen Rose with 14 seconds to go. After a 3-pointer by Jud Buechler brought the Pistons within one, Rik Smits made one of two free throws for Indiana with five seconds left.

Detroit then raced downcourt and Hunter launched the game-winner from the left side. Smits, who had a season-high 35 points, made his first 14 free throws before the late miss.

Jazz 93, Suns 92

SALT LAKE CITY — Karl Malone scored 31 points, including three free throws with six-tenths of a second left that gave the Utah Jazz a win over the Phoenix Suns.

Chris Morris, who left the Jazz during the offseason, hit a 3-pointer with 3.7 seconds remaining to give Phoenix a 92-90 lead. Adam Keefe then inbounded the ball to Malone, who attempted an awkward 3-pointer and was fouled hard by Clifford Robinson.

Malone's first foul shot bounded around the rim before going in, but the last two dropped straight through. A desperation 3-pointer at the buzzer by Jason Kidd, who had 19 points and 11 assists, was off to the right.

Wallace once again wins pole at Bristol

Associated Press

BRISTOL, Tenn. — Winning poles for the Food City 500 is no problem for Rusty Wallace. Translating that success to the races is where he's had trouble.

Wallace guided his Ford Taurus to a fast lap of 125.142 mph Friday to edge Jeff Gordon for the top starting spot in Sunday's race at Bristol Motor Speedway.

It was Wallace's third consecutive pole on the .533-mile, high-banked oval, his fourth in the past five Winston Cup races at Bristol and his sixth overall at the track.

But while Wallace dominated the past two Food City 500s, Gordon wound up in Victory Lane both times. Two years ago, Wallace led four times for 240 laps but was bumped out of the lead by Gordon about 600 feet from the checkered flag. Wallace led six times for 220 of the first 397 laps last year before engine problems slowed him.

"You've got to be confident," said Wallace, a six-time winner at Bristol. "Bristol's always been my favorite track, and I've got a lot of fond memories."

Gordon, who will be seeking his fifth consecutive Food City 500 victory, had a 124.979.

"I'll take that," he said. "I'd rather be on the inside of the front row than the outside, but from where we started this morning to where we ended up, I'm proud of that lap."

Gordon, still smarting from bruised ribs sustained two weeks ago at Texas Motor Speedway, is one of two ailing drivers who will be starting on the first two rows.

Third-fastest Friday was Bobby Labonte, continuing a quicker-than-expected recovery from a fractured shoulder at Darlington, S.C., three weeks ago.

"That's the fastest I've ever been here," Labonte said after his 124.484. "I don't know if I want to go that fast again."

Labonte's teammate at Joe Gibbs Racing, rookie Tony Stewart, will start on the outside of the second row after a 124.283.

Darrell Waltrip, who has used up his available provisional starting spots and has to make the field solely on qualifying speed, posted the third-best lap in Friday morning's practice, a 123.786. He improved on that slightly in the afternoon qualifying with a fast lap of 123.857, good for the 12th spot on Sunday's 43-car starting grid.

"We're not dead last. That's exciting," he said. "I've got a great team. We've just got to get some luck going."

The list of drivers who failed to lock up one of the top 25 starting spots available Friday included Jeff Burton, the Winston Cup points leader after six races. Burton took one qualifying lap, posted a 123.055 and shut off the engine in his Ford.

With the 27th-fastest speed, Burton had the option of standing on his first-round run or trying again Saturday in a second round of time trials.

Also having problems Friday was Michael Waltrip, 10th in the points coming into Bristol. Waltrip struggled in the morning practice, but matters got worse in time trials.

When Waltrip came zooming out of the fourth corner to take the green flag and begin his qualifying run, the rear end of his Chevrolet bounced off the concrete retaining wall, causing significant sheet-metal damage.

De Ferran takes Firehawk pole

MOTEGI, Japan (AP) — Gil de Ferran was confident he could win the Firehawk 500 and proved it by setting a course record in qualifying to earn the pole position for Saturday's CART Indy-car race.

The Brazilian covered the 1.549-mile Twin Ring Motegi oval at an average speed of 219.000 mph, winning his fifth pole.

"This feels fantastic," said De Ferran, who finished sixth in the season-opening Grand Prix of Miami in his Reynard. "I was confident coming in here that we had a good combination with the Goodyear tires and Honda engine, but to come out with the pole position is very special."

Brazil's Mauricio Gugelmin had the second-fastest lap in his Mercedes-powered Reynard at 218.425 mph.

"It's good to be on the front row again," he said after earning his best starting position since a pole at the California Speedway in 1998. "We have a very solid car and I knew going into qualifying that we could be in the top three."

Angels draw 1st blood in AL West showdown

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Chuck Finley ended his four-year jinx against Texas with six decent innings and Tim Salmon continued to terrorize the Rangers in the Anaheim Angels 8-4 victory Friday night.

Finley (1-0) allowed four runs on nine hits to end a personal 0-9 skid against Texas. He struck out five and walked one while beating the Rangers for the first time since June 29, 1995.

Salmon, who leads all active players in hitting against Texas, doubled in the first inning and hit a two-run homer in the seventh. His second homer of the year was his 100th hit in 252 at-bats against the Rangers, a .397 average.

The Angels, who dropped five straight games to Texas in the final two weeks of last season to lose the AL West, got the early jump on their division rivals.

Orlando Palmeiro led off the game against John Burkett (0-1) with the first homer of his career and Todd Greene's two-run homer in the second inning gave Finley a 3-0 lead. A two-run double by Troy Glaus made it 5-1 in the third and chased Burkett.

The Rangers, who got a solo homer from Todd Zeile in the second inning, got two runs back in the bottom of the third on RBI singles by Rusty Greer and Juan Gonzalez. Ivan Rodriguez's solo homer in the fifth cut Anaheim's lead to 5-4.

But the Angels put the game away in the seventh as Andy Sheets ended Esteban Loiaza's stretch of eight straight outs with a single, moved to second on a sacrifice and scored on a double by Randy Velarde. Salmon's homer came two batters later.

Bogar sparks Astros

HOUSTON (AP) — The weak-hitting Houston Astros are finding unusual ways to score.

Tim Bogar's two-out RBI single in the eighth inning gave Houston a 3-2 victory against the Milwaukee Brewers on Friday night.

The Astros, who led the National League in runs scored last season, have just 10 runs in four games and are batting just .213 (26-for-122).

The Astros trailed 2-0 with two outs in the third when Craig Biggio became the first Astro to steal home in nearly six years. Biggio scored when Brewers catcher Dave Nilsson tried to pick off Ken Caminiti from first.

Houston tied it in the fifth when pitcher Sean Bergman homered off Scott Karl, his second career homer. It was the first home run by an Astros pitcher since Shane Reynolds against Colorado on Sept. 8, 1996.

In the eighth inning, Bob Wickman (0-1) walked Ken Caminiti and Richard Hidalgo to open the inning. Two outs later, Bogar singled to center to give Houston a 3-2 lead.

Scott Elarton (1-0) pitched the eighth inning for the Astros for the victory and Billy Wagner pitched the ninth for his second save.

Milwaukee took a 2-0 lead against Bergman in the third on an RBI single by Fernando Vina and an RBI double by Marquis Grissom.

Bergman, who had a career high 12 victories last season, pitched seven innings, allowing four hits and two runs.

PULLIN: Ace picks UTA

(From 1B)

In the passing year, though, Pullin found some control, learned a slider and blossomed into a true pitcher. His 1-3 record in district is misleading since he has a 3.33 ERA.

Pullin says that while he may still have a chance to play third base at Arlington, his pitching ability was what made him attractive to the school.

"They said I'd probably be able to start and not redshirt as a freshman," said Pullin. "I know their assistant coach really liked the way I pitched."

Pullin has been consistently clocked in the 87-88 MPH range with his fastball, and one pro scout told Russell that Pullin topped out at 91 on his radar gun. Pullin's velocity has never been a question, but it didn't mean a lot until he found some control.

"He's always had some potential because he's had such a big fastball," said Russell. "The big thing was whether he could control his pitches. He learned the slider and I think his future's ahead of him pitching wise."

It hasn't hurt Pullin that he has also filled out physically over the past year. He is one of the bigger pitchers in the district at 6-foot-3 and 190 pounds.

That size could be what helps Pullin see some mound time immediately at Arlington. He is also among the first wave of younger players coming into the program which is attempting to change its philosophy in recruiting players.

"They're pretty good right now but they've got a lot of junior college players and they really want to build a program with freshmen who are going to be around four years," Pullin said.

There could be a hitch to Pullin's plan to play for Arlington, though. Not only has Pullin's rise as a pitcher impressed a college, pro scouts with radar guns have often showed up when he's pitched, and they have begun to show interest.

If Pullin is selected high enough in the June major league draft, he might have to reexamine his options.

"I've thought about (being drafted) a little bit and if I get a good enough offer I might take it, but I'd really like to go to college for four years and get an education," said Pullin.

Of more immediate concern is today's game with Lee and the rest of the high school season, in which every game takes on importance for Midland High, tied for third in the district. With his commitment out of the way, Pullin will now be able to focus his energies even more on the mound.

"Now I don't have to worry about going out and performing in front of scouts," Pullin said.

LOCAL SOFTBALL TODAY

Midland High vs. Abilene High

When: 2 p.m.
Where: at Abilene High.
Records: Midland High is 16-10-1 overall and 4-6 in District 4-5A. Abilene High is 16-7-1 and 7-2.
4-5A Significance: Midland High can now only be a spoiler in the 4-5A race, but Abilene High still entertains hopes of catching Midland Lee for a share of the league title and a possible first round bye in the state playoffs.
Notes: Midland High was officially eliminated from the District 4-5A softball race Tuesday in a 3-1 loss to San Angelo Central... Abilene High is officially in the state playoffs for the second year in a row after an 11-5 win over Odessa High on Tuesday... MHS had only four hits against Central with Beckie Hartman coming up with a double, the only extra base knock... AHS has a real problem, however, in catching Lee for the district title. The Lady Eagles have MHS, San Angelo Central and Odessa Permian left on the schedule. What is most likely is that AHS and Permian will meet next Saturday to determine which is seeded second for the playoffs... MHS hung with AHS in a 9-5 loss in the first half. They once tied the game at 5-5 before falling behind again...
Next: MHS ends its district season at home on Tuesday with a 4:30 p.m. game against Odessa Permian. The Lady Bulldogs would like to beat both the teams tied for second place down the stretch...

Abilene Cooper vs. Midland Lee

When: 2 p.m.
Where: at Midland Lee softball diamond.
Records: Midland Lee is 22-5 overall and 8-1 in District 4-5A. Cooper is 14-10 and 4-6.
4-5A Significance: The game has great importance for Lee since the Lady Rebels own a game lead over the District 4-5A softball field with just three games left to play. Cooper is out of the playoff hunt but can be a thorn in the side of Lee, which is seeking the district championship and a first-round playoff bye.
Notes: Cooper was officially eliminated from the 4-5A playoff race in a 3-1 loss to Odessa Permian on Tuesday... The Lady Rebels were idle Tuesday, but won three games last week to take over sole possession of first place... In addition to Cooper, Lee has games left with Odessa High and San Angelo Central, neither of which is in the title hunt. Lee is very, very close to the district title. Lee had a tough time with Cooper in the first half, winning a 1-0 decision against the Lady Cougars in Abilene behind the shutout pitching of Brandie Row...
Next: Lee travels to Odessa High next Tuesday for a 4:30 p.m. game with the Lady Bronchos, who are winless thus far in 4-5A play...

GAME: MHS faces Lee

(From 1B)

of the seventh to beat Abilene High 9-8.

The win over Midland High helped establish Lee's mindset that it was never going to be out of any district game as long as there were still innings left to play.

"Playing in this district, I feel pretty good about the way things went (in the first half)," said Benavidez, reflecting on his team's good fortune in close games. "If you look at the first three games and the way things went, we were pretty fortunate to come back and win them.

"Sometimes teams get behind like that (against Midland High) and they don't have the character to come back. Playing a cross-town rival, that was a big win, especially after we already beat them twice."

The first Lee-MHS district game is as good a snapshot as any to explain why the teams are in their respective positions. Lee's largely senior lineup chipped away at Midland High's lead as Matt Winston drove in three runs and fellow seniors Nate Brignon and Ryan Klatt drove in two apiece while Eric Neatherlin had a solo home run and scored three runs.

None of that would have mattered had junior Collin Gilliam not been able to relieve starting pitcher Josh Ramos and hold Midland High at bay, throwing 4 1/3 stellar innings to claim the win, the first of three district decisions won by Gilliam.

Midland High doesn't quite have Lee's experience, even though the Bulldogs made the playoffs last season while the Rebels stayed home. MHS starts two sophomores on the left side of the infield in third baseman Matt Bose and shortstop Jayson Nix, both of whom committed errors against Lee, although Bose atoned by hitting a two-run homer which gave the Bulldogs their 7-0 lead.

"In the games we've lost, it's been something different every time," said Russell. "We've played 25 varsity games and are starting two sophomores. If I thought they were going to hurt me, I wouldn't play them."

Experienced or not, the Bulldogs need this game more than the Rebels, at least on paper. Even though five district games remain after today, Midland High could make things a whole lot easier for itself with a win.

"It should mean a lot more to them (Midland High)," said Benavidez. "Once you have four losses, it comes down to depending on somebody else eventually, like we did last year."

That, barring a collapse, doesn't appear likely for the Rebels this season. But before needing help from others, it sure would benefit the Bulldogs to help themselves, starting today.

"We didn't take care of business," said Russell of the Lee game. "The kids know what happened and it was a bit of a fluky thing. I don't think anybody expected us to jump out to a 7-0 lead either. But we've got to learn how to finish a team off."

A pitching rematch from the first district game appears possible today. Midland High will likely go with senior right-hander Aaron Pullin, who signed a letter of intent with UT Arlington Friday, and went 4 1/3 innings against the Rebels in taking the loss.

Benavidez said he's leaning toward Ramos, but that Neatherlin could get the call.

Missions survive RockHounds' rally

Staff Report

SAN ANTONIO — The Midland RockHounds made a late-game comeback but it wasn't enough as they suffered their first loss in franchise history with a 6-5 setback to the San Antonio Missions on Friday.

Missed opportunities and two costly errors which led to runs hurt the RockHounds in this game.

Eric Dubose (0-1) took the loss for the RockHounds as he lasted just 4 2/3 innings, gave up four runs — all earned — allowed seven hits, struck out five and walked two.

Luke Prokopec (1-0) got the win for the Missions as he allowed three earned runs on six hits.

Designated hitter Mike Warner led the Missions, going 3-for-4 on the night with three RBIs. Warner had a two-run double in the second and added an RBI bloop single in the fourth to give San Antonio a 3-1 lead.

Midland tied the game in the fifth when catcher Cody McKay hit a single to left-center field to score Justin Bowles and Adam Piatt. McKay was thrown out at second trying to stretch the hit into a double.

San Antonio took the lead for good in the sixth inning as Hector Ortiz scored Glenn Davis on a sacrifice fly.

Midland's best attempt at a comeback came in the eighth inning. Jeff DaVanon reached with a walk, T.R. Marcinczyk doubled, and then Tim Garland hit a pinch-hit single up the middle to bring in both runners.

The five-game series resumes at 7:05 p.m. today as righthander Chris Enochs goes on the mound for the RockHounds, while righthander Widd Workman goes for the Missions.

Berra returns to Yankee Stadium

NEW YORK (AP) — Wandering through the halls that twist and turn in the catacombs of Yankee Stadium, Yogi Berra could have used a road map.

"I had to find my way back," Berra said after ending a 14-year exile and returning to throw out the first pitch on opening day Friday. "I got lost. I've got to get my bearings. It's a lot different. They fixed it up so much."

Berra took over the first-pitch role that Joe DiMaggio held for so long. The team remembered DiMaggio, who died March 8 at 84, with signs around the ballpark that quoted the Hall of Famer as saying, "I want to thank the good Lord for making me a Yankee."

Before the national anthem, fans were asked to remember the Yankee Clipper with a moment of silence.

Then, Berra walked slowly out of the Yankees dugout, favoring a gimpy right knee, as a sellout Stadium crowd roared.

Bad decision brings Duval back to earth

More Sports/7C

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Not even the No. 1 player in the world is immune from disaster in the Masters with a single lapse in judgment.

What David Duval called "a bad decision" cost him his first triple bogey since August, seriously endangering chances of winning his third consecutive tournament and his long-awaited first major.

Duval had a difficult time talking about his "snowman" Friday on the 500-yard, par-5 No. 15, which has become a back-nine monster since Augusta National officials shaved mounds, planted trees, and made the green rock-hard.

"It was a bad shot at the wrong time," Duval admitted. "It hurt."

Somehow golf's hottest player hit a high-handicapper wedge after deciding to play it safe and lay up with his second shot instead of going for the green in two.

The wedge was shockingly short and the ball found the pond. Stunned, Duval dropped another ball. His fifth shot hit the green and bounced over, almost going into the water in the back.

He chipped to the green and two-putted for 8 and first triple bogey since the first round of the PGA Championship at Sahalee.

Duval wouldn't call what happened the result of a bad swing.

"It was just a bad decision," he said. "I wanted to carry the ball farther than I did."

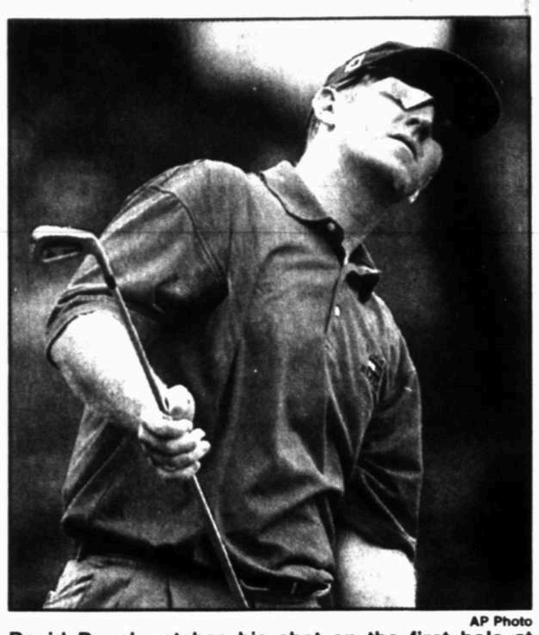
Duval managed to rally with a 6-foot birdie putt on the final hole to shoot a 2-over-par 74 that left him well off the lead.

After the round, Duval, who shot a spectacular 59 in the final round to win the Bob Hope Classic, tipped his hat to the course.

"That's what so great about this place. It can make you look foolish," Duval said.

Then he showed the fire that has made him a feared competitor.

"I'm discouraged but I'm not down," Duval said. "It's only been two days and that's the good thing.



AP Photo

David Duval watches his shot on the first hole at Augusta National Golf Club in Augusta, Ga., during Friday's second round of the Masters.

Six shots isn't much to make up around this place. So many things can happen. I could make a birdie on No. 15 tomorrow and have a four-shot swing."

Duval said his birdie on the last hole saved the day.

"It was a nice way to leave," he said.

Asked if he was going to the practice range to hit a few wedges, he smiled weakly: "I'm going home."

Duval was asked if the stress of winning The Players Championships and BellSouth Classic in the last two weeks had caused him to hit a wall both mentally and physically.

He shrugged and said, "Not at all. I'm OK. I just made one bad shot on a very tough hole. This doesn't bother me at all. This is all part of winning a major."

Duval came close to winning the Masters last year. It took a birdie-birdie finish by Mark O'Meara to beat him and Fred Couples by one stroke.

As he turned to walk away, Duval said, "Augusta National always gives you challenges. I'll have another chance and another challenge tomorrow."

MASTERS: Olazabal leads by one course is very important, and that's a fact," Olazabal said. "Because I won here in '94, that maybe makes me feel better than players who haven't won. It's a very special place for me."

(From 1B)

It's also a special place for Norman, even though he has gone through more heartache than anyone at Augusta.

Maybe he's coming back for another dose. Or maybe fate is finally on his side. Norman at least gave himself a chance with a smart, safe 68 that left him at 139, tied with defending U.S. Open champion Lee Janzen.

"I'm glad I'm here," Norman said. "I'm glad I'm playing well. I'm getting myself back into the groove of things."

Nick Price and Davis Love III, who began the second round tied for the lead, both had 72 and were at 141. The group at 142 included Bernhard Langer (66), Steve Elkington and Justin Leonard.

Of the top 12 players, eight of them know what it takes to win a major.

Include Norman on that list. He's won two British Opens, but is more famous for his eight second-place finishes in the majors.

"I don't know what my destiny is," Norman said. "All I want to do is just go play well. I've played out here long enough to see things happen ... for me and against me. Destiny and luck go hand-in-hand."

As usual, there was a little bit of both on Friday when the winds swirled, the clouds gathered, a light rain gave way to sun, and the roars matched the groans.

— David Duval drained a 45-foot birdie putt on No. 10 to get in the game, but fell out of it by spinning a wedge into the pond on No. 15 for a triple bogey. He finished at 74 and was at 145, nine strokes off the lead.

"I'm discouraged, but I'm not down," Duval said, trying to win for the third week in a row.

— Tiger Woods birdied three of the last six holes, but only after a double-bogey on No. 12 when his tee-shot landed in the middle of Rae's Creek. He was at 144 after another 72. Since winning the 1997 Masters, Woods has failed to break 70.

— Ernie Els made another double bogey down the stretch to ruin his day, this one on No. 17 that gave him a 72 for 143.

— Colin Montgomerie holed out for eagle on No. 3 and then proceeded to make bogey on the next three holes. He finished the day where he started, at 2-under 142 and hanging around.

— Heartthrob Matt Kuchar thrilled the gallery yet again with an eagle from the bunker on No. 13. He was one of four amateurs to make the cut, the most since 1985.

"With two more days, we'll see many things happen," Olazabal said. "You have to take a lot of players who can really win the tournament."

That Olazabal is the front-runner is not surprising. Since 1989, he has finished worse than 14th only once. His imaginative short game supports why Europeans have won more green jackets (10) than Americans since 1980.

But to see him now is a treat. Just four years ago, his career was in jeopardy when his feet hurt so badly that he couldn't get off the couch for about three months and couldn't even play for 18 months.

A German doctor finally traced the problem to his back, and Olazabal returned in 1997 to win on the European tour — and start contending again in the Masters.

"I reached a time that I thought about my possibilities of not playing golf any more," Olazabal said. "Even more, I worried about the quality of life. Just to be here again, to shoot a round like I did ... I'm really pleased."

Indeed, it was the same old Olazabal. The most delicate shots around the most nerve-wracking greens look secondhand to the 33-year-old Spaniard. He has taken only 50 putts through 36 holes, including two big par-savers on the front nine.

But the biggest shot of his round was a bump-and-run with a 9-iron, up the slope on the 15th green, down a glasslike surface with the pond inviting any ball struck too hard.

It stopped inches from the cup for birdie, and he added one more with a 9-iron into 10 feet on the 18th.

McCarron, who also was tied for the lead after the first round, used his booming drives and broomhandle putter to do his best tracking down Olazabal. He made birdies on three straight holes starting on the 14th, and closed out his 68 with a 12-footer on the 18th.

This will be the first time he's been in the last group on the weekend in a major.

"I don't consider myself a lesser-known," said McCarron, a two-time winner on the PGA Tour. "When I'm playing with Elkington and (Fred) Couples, I feel I'm as good as them or better. You have to believe that to play that."

No one wants to believe more than Norman.

He hasn't even been in contention at a major since that disastrous collapse against Nick Faldo in 1996. And who would have expected him to be there this week, still on the mend from shoulder surgery that kept him out seven months last year, only eight competitive rounds under his belt in the past two months?

"Right now I'm feeling extremely relaxed and in control of what I'm doing," Norman said. "Sunday is a long way away. I want to enjoy it, and that's it."

Local WWJD ministry reaches out to at-risk teens

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer

Don't show Larry Hobbs any scientific findings that say channel surfing is a detriment to one's physical and emotional health. It's been anything but for Hobbs, who was inspired several years ago, back in his younger days when he was involved with drugs and alcohol, and fit the description of an un-ambitious couch potato.

Hobbs' TV clicker landed on the Prime Time Christian network during an afternoon of surfing, and according to Hobbs, God spoke to him and told him to get up and do something with his life. So he did.

Not only is he now making something of himself, he's also making something of others.

Through the establishment of his WWJD ministry, Hobbs and a dozen or so others are reaching out to at-risk teens who come from troubled families. Teens who likely have never been near a church in their life.

"It all started out as a bus ministry, and soon I noticed that it was taking more than a once-a-week effort," Hobbs said. "We're dealing with young gang kids. Some of them come out of alcohol and drug homes and it just took more than once a week for them to see the truth.

"They know they didn't have to follow suit. They're showing they don't want to get involved in gangs and the girls don't want to get pregnant when they're 15. They're

Keeping Focused

Modern-day monks seek meaning in life

By Claire Vitucci
Associated Press Writer

VALYERMO, Calif. — The day begins early in this holy place on the high desert.

It's still dark when the black-robed monks of St. Andrew's Abbey gather in the chapel for vigils. They will gather four more times before the day ends in the Grand Silence — when they will not speak again, save prayer, until after breakfast the following morning.

These are men who have decided to shun wives and kids, homes in the suburbs, good jobs and fast cars in search of a purely spiritual existence. Instead of fame and fortune, the monks have chosen to follow the way that St. Benedict established centuries ago.

The men of St. Andrew's are not alone. Though statistics show seminary enrollments in the United States have declined in recent decades — from 37,383 in 1967 to 5,527 in 1997 — priests of various religious orders say they have noticed a renewed and conservative religious interest among young people.

"The whole point of monastic life, of living in one place and having the kind of schedule that we have, is to be focused on what we focus on — which is God," said Brother Andrew Hayes.

At 27, he is among the youngest at St. Andrew's Abbey, where monks live their lives secluded on the rocky edge of the Mojave Desert north of Los Angeles. On a hill overlooking the ranch-style buildings of the abbey is the cemetery where they eventually will be laid to rest.

The reasons the men join are as different as the men themselves.

Lui Toilolo decided his career path in the fifth grade. Toilolo, 36, hopes eventually to become a priest.

"When I look at the monks, I see a person striving for holiness," he said. "That's what I want and I think that's why I'm here."

For others, the road to this vocation was not a long one, with years of hands-clasped, eyes-to-heaven piety.

Brother Boniface Butterworth, 26, worked as a computer programmer for the Kansas Turnpike when he left to join St. Benedict's Abbey in Atchison, Kan. He said he didn't consider himself religious growing up and it wasn't until he began working that he realized his life was unfulfilling.

"I thought if God exists then there's another purpose for life," he said. "Seeking God and living a good life seems to make a lot of sense."

But to some men, the mere idea of a life-

Some organizations won't risk leaving Y2K to faith alone

Most U.S. religious groups are getting their computers ready and scaling back events in advance of 2000, but some say careful planning can't totally insulate them from the computer bug.

Gideons to commemorate 100th anniversary in July

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer

It will be coincidental when, in July, hundreds of representatives of Gideons International will converge on Nashville to commemorate their organization's 100th birthday.

When they arrive, they will check into hotels and, knowing the Gideons, they'll all open that little drawer at their bedside table — just to make sure that their room comes complete with one of the Bibles placed their by their brethren.

At 100, Gideon's International is known predominantly as being the people who leave behind Bibles for travelers in hotels.

But they do much more.

"We leave Bibles in the mainstreams of life," said Ken Morrison, who serves as Texas Area 2 Coordinator and president of the Gideons' Midland camp, which also serves smaller communities

Children are additional blessings

"Muli, explain to your father why you didn't obey when I told you what to do," my mother would say, while reporting to my dad that I disobeyed her. This was during my teen years, a time when boys may behave in a manner that may challenge a mother's authority. In turn, my dad made it clear to me that I may disobey my mother, but I couldn't disobey his wife.

I learned that my mother and father were in the same league. If I did something wrong, I got collective training. One day, while in the sixth grade, some friends and I were caught playing Bingo by the school principal. I was suspended and given a date when I was to bring my parents. I could never tell my father because he would probably skin me. Instead, I told my mother and requested her to visit with the school principal even before the date he had set aside. My mother agreed, but she still told my dad. Sure enough, he corrected me, though probably not as heavily as I had expected.

When spouses disagree on how to raise children, divorce may be the result. Or one of the parents may seek their children's "love" at the expense of their relationship with their spouse. I have even heard of cases where a father or mother may share with a child a weakness of the other parent.

A union of husband and wife is a family that should and can thrive whether there are children or not. "Therefore shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh" (Genesis 2:24). God may or may not provide that union with children. However, the absence of children is not a punishment by God and a mar-

The Good Book: Michah (Part 33 of 66)

Overview:

Micah's prophetic ministry spanned over half a century, from 750 B.C. to 700 B.C. During this time the northern kingdom of Israel fell to the Assyrian Empire. Judah, the southern kingdom was left as a weak vassal state. Micah was a citizen from the small town, Moresheth, southwest of Jerusalem. He was a fierce champion of pure worship of the Lord and of social justice. He spoke harsh words of judgment against the people of Judah but also extended the promise of divine forgiveness and restoration to them.

Key Passage:

Micah 6: 6-8 "With what shall I come before the Lord, and bow myself before God on high? Shall I come before him with burnt offerings, with calves a year old? Will the Lord be pleased with thousands of rams, with ten thousands of rivers of oil? Shall I give my firstborn for my transgression, the fruit of my body for the sin of my soul?' He has told you, O mortal, what is good; and what does the Lord require of you but to do justice, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with your God?"

Prophecy piques Y2K fears among conservative Christians

By Gary D. Robertson
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Marvin Tarlton and his neighbors fear a great storm may be approaching, and they're preparing like coastal residents would for a hurricane.

The tempest would not be wind and rain, but computer data gone haywire on New Year's Day.

So his family in Marshville, a rural community 30 miles southeast of Charlotte, is stocking its farm pond with fish, buying bags of dried pinto beans and keeping 600 canning jars on hand to preserve vegetables they may have to grow.

After listening to Focus on the Family chief James Dobson, attending a Christian Coalition conference and doing his own research, Tarlton decided to err on the side of caution with the Y2K computer problem.

"We're preparing a little more radical than others," said Tarlton, 39. "I feel good, but I'm not where I want be."

Thousands of conservative Christians have been taking the Y2K threat seriously for months, holding seminars, surfing Web sites and stocking provisions to make it through any storm.

Many cite Proverbs 27: 12: "The prudent see danger and take refuge, but the simple keep going and suffer for it."

The effects of the Y2K bug may turn out to be little more than a quick thunderstorm, but pessimists predict that it will ripple into a Category 5 storm. Widespread power outages, crippled ATMs and food hoarding are possible, they say. Some survivalists cite Biblical prophecy to corroborate their concerns.

"Y2K may be nothing. It may be grave," said Gene Edwards, a Christian writer from Newnan, Ga., who just wrote a book predicting a worldwide economic depression later this year. "The fear of it may bring this nation into a collapse."

Critics within the conservative Christian community say some Y2K pundits are bordering on fear-mongering.

"There's a subset of people out there who are alarmists," said Lee Grady, editor of Charisma, the nation's largest news magazine for Pentecostals and charismatics. "There's a lot of products to be sold and a lot of books to be sold ... It's a big distraction."

But folks such as Tarlton say they just want their brethren to be safe: "Our philosophy is to prepare for the worst and hope for the best."

Predictions of technological disaster — when computers using two digits for the year will read 00 as 1900 instead of 2000 — fit in neatly with world views that see Y2K as a sign of the endtimes.

American Christians who interpret scripture literally always have had a keen interest in the second coming of Jesus. Belief that the prophecy could be fulfilled soon is widespread. A 1997 Associated Press poll, for example, found nearly one in four Christian adults expect Jesus to arrive in their lifetime.

'Y2K may be God's instrument to shake this nation, to humble this nation.'
— Jerry Falwell, speaking in his video, "A Christian's Guide to the Millenium Bug."

"People can look at the geopolitical scene in the Middle East and the prophecy movement, and with it comes the reality of Y2K and the general fragility of the world economic bubble," said James Tabor, a religion professor at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte and expert on apocalyptic movements.

Ads hawking books on Y2K have popped up in Christian magazines and Web sites. Among the titles: "Y2K Chaos" and "Y2K 2000: Worldwide Collapse." More mainstream Christian fiction books about Y2K are best sellers.

A national intercessory-prayer group is asking members to pray for Y2K survival efforts. Jerry Falwell and Pat Robertson have warned Christians to be ready for disaster.

In the video "A Christian's Guide to the Millennium Bug," Falwell said he intends to stock up on food, sugar, gasoline and ammunition. "Y2K," he said, "may be God's instrument to shake this nation, to humble this nation."

Magazine ads in Christian magazines promote gold and silver coins as a hedge against stock market computer malfunction and worldwide depression. Edwards has already bought a year's supply of firewood, six 50-gallon barrels to store food and a 5,000-gallon tank for diesel fuel.

At The Prophecy Club, a Kansas-based publishing house, customers with $1,400 can purchase enough dehydrated food to feed four people for a year. One Christian Web site is selling mills to turn grain into flour for bread

"Should we prepare food because ... the end of the world is coming? If the end of the world is coming can we prepare?" the site asks. "Yes, but not without food for the body."

Some computer experts say there is cause for concern. In January's Scientific American, Peter De Jager, who is widely credited with alerting business and government to Y2K, offered what he called an optimistic prediction of perhaps a month of disruptions. The chairman of President Clinton's Year 2000 commission is worried small towns and businesses won't be prepared.

A recent USA Today/National Science Foundation poll finds that 34 percent of those surveyed expect major computer problems in 2000.

A U.S. Senate panel report said Y2K disruptions in vital services will be minimal but warned that serious potential problems in health care, energy supply and government services are possible. Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., said people should have canned goods and water on hand but don't need to stockpile food.

Kelly Leimer, a Charlotte mother of four who has run a grain cooperative for the last five years, has been setting aside 40-pound pails of grain for her family.

A conservative Lutheran, Leimer is unsure whether the computer crisis is a sign of the endtimes.

"I know that Jesus said not to worry about tomorrow, since today has enough worries of its own," said Leimer, 38. "I'm taking things a day at a time. ... If Jesus is coming, I want to be ready for that. We really just don't know."

Some church groups view the attention on Y2K as an opportunity to minister to the physical needs of people who might be affected by power or banking disruptions. Hundreds of churches — including Leimer's — have held Y2K-awareness seminars, bringing in government and business leaders to provide practical information.

Tim Wilson, who publishes a magazine and Web site on Y2K issues out of Crossland, Tenn., says churches got involved because in many areas they are "about the only real community anymore in society."

"It only takes about two to three people in church to get a little worried," he said, "and they tell others and soon they all say, 'What can we do about it?'"

Shaunti Feldahn, a former Federal Reserve Board analyst, started Joseph Project 2000 last summer to inform churches and pastors about the computer bug. Feldahn named her group after reading the Old Testament story of Joseph, who was sold into Egyptian slavery only to rise to become a prince and save the country from a coming famine by planning ahead.

"Everybody else is thinking about the church as their contingency plan," Feldahn said. "We're saying get ready."

At speaking engagements and conferences, Feldahn, 31, makes no predictions but urges churches to work together across denominational and racial lines to prepare by checking out their computers and calling their utility companies.

Congregations can band together to buy food and set up storage areas, Feldahn said. If the worst comes, she said, neighborhood churches will be able to give food to people who don't have cash. If there are few disruptions, she added, the food can be given to the needy.

About 3,000 people attended the first conference in Atlanta in the fall, Feldahn said. Chapters in Toledo, Ohio, and Woodstock, Ga., have already met to discuss Y2K.

A Joseph Project representative spoke recently at a church-sponsored Y2K meeting in Hendersonville, 20 miles south of Asheville.

"Our purpose is to sort out fact from fiction and to inform people...," said the Rev. Jerry McClellan, a pastor who put the conference together. "We're not saying to head for the hills and become survivalists. We want to say 'Hey, region, this thing won't go away.'"

WWJD: Ministry not confined to specific areas of Midland understanding that there is a better life."

Hobbs' ministry is rooted in the Assemblies of God church. Sunday mornings, the bus ministry takes kids to the First Assembly of God, Wadley and Main; Sunday and Wednesday evenings, the bus takes kids to Calvary Assembly of God, at Johnston and Florida streets.

Hobbs said he can't take credit for pulling kids away from the enticement of gang and street life. "God is doing that," he said.

The WWJD Ministry was so named at least two years before the expression became a nationwide phenomenon with bracelets, books, shirts, videos and CDs by the same name. Hobbs said he received his inspiration for the name after hearing a song by that name in the mid-1990s.

The mission is housed at 1501 S. Colorado. On Monday nights from 7-9 p.m., there's a women's Bible study; Wednesdays from 7-9 p.m. there's a family Bible Study; young adult night is Thursdays from 7-9 p.m. On Saturday from 10 a.m.-noon, WWJD hosts Kid's Church, and on Saturday afternoon, the mission hosts a sexual abstinence and womanhood class for girls and young women.

"It's a great ministry," said Randall McDonald, pastor at Calvary Assembly of God. "Larry's reaching people, feeding people, giving them hope. They're definitely people who might not otherwise be reached. And the end product of the ministry is to try to get kids into better home environments. We're hoping to reach some of the moms and dads raising these kids. If they find hope they might even find a way of making it."

The WWJD Ministry was named two years before the WWJD craze became popular.

WWJD is not confined to the south and east side of Midland. At-risk teens live in north Midland, too, and Hobbs said he has talked to 2,000 kids and currently has 300 in the ministry, 12 of whom he said are "heavily into it." But how many come to church is not as significant as how many can't. More workers and more transportation is needed to reach those who haven't been reached yet.

"You try, and you work your way through and try to get them witnessed to on the street and pray you can get a bigger program," Hobbs said.

"I got on drugs and alcohol when I was a teenager. It took me 20 years to come to the conclusion that I was walking the wrong path. The toughest part of this job is seeing some of these kids that go that way. You see them get involved in the wrong things, you see them pull away and get involved in drugs and alcohol. You see girls get pregnant at 14 or 15. Being older, it's easy to see that the road that some of them are walking they'll never find fulfillment in it. That's the hardest thing to watch."

such as McCamey, Ozona, Rankin and Big Lake. "We also place them in hospitals and other places where a lot of people go through. And have a jail ministry."

But it's the hotel ministry that probably touches most. It is estimated by Gideon officials that one Bible placed in one hotel room has the potential of reaching 2,700 people in that Bible's lifetime.

People will often take Bibles from hotel rooms, something the Gideons don't encourage. But the up side to taking the Bible is its potential for reaching someone who might not have otherwise been exposed to its message.

In Midland, Gideon representatives visit hotels in May and September to replenish supplies in cases where the Bibles might have been removed or have become aged or damaged.

"Gideons started because the original founders were traveling salesmen," Morrison said. "They spent a lot of time in hotels and they saw a need. At first, they were only going to place Bibles at the front desks, but eventually they got enough funds to where Bibles were placed in every room."

Morrison said most every hotel is receptive to the Bible placing legacy the organization stands for, though there have been some that have balked and chosen not to participate.

"We're also responsible for raising money through our own contributions and dues, through the Memorial Bible Fund and through church services," Morrison said. "Churches will often let a Gideon speaker come in during a service and speak on the organization and then take a collection."

Two Midlanders, Tom Rice and Oran Nichols, have been with the Gideons since its arrival in Midland in 1963.

"The first thing a Gideon is supposed to do is win souls to Christ," said Rice, who at 74 is the oldest Midland member. "We do that by placing Bibles and handing out Testaments. We'll also go to churches at certain times every year and speak at those churches about the Gideons.

"I have won over 200 people to Jesus Christ. When I got sick about three years ago with vertigo, I wondered 'Why me, Lord?' Immediately, it seemed that the Holy Spirit spoke to me and told me to just do the best I could."

Y2K: Minister's pension, insurance records could be affected rolls over to 2000.

Major denominations including Episcopal, Roman Catholic, United Methodist, Presbyterian, Southern Baptist and Pentecostal have been working for months to put their systems in order by year's end. Costs are in the millions of dollars.

"We're coming along according to our schedule," said Bobbie Binggeli, a leader of a Y2K task force at the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) headquarters in Louisville, Ky. "We have taken it very seriously."

Many in-house managers have used the extra scrutiny caused by Y2K to rebuild or replace aging computer networks. Groups that can't replace equipment for everyone are taking a thrifty approach.

"We're asking: 'Is it essential for that item to be Y2K compliant?'," says Ellie Anderson, director of information technology for the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Chicago. The 2.3-million-member archdiocese runs the nation's largest parochial education system with 325 schools.

"For example, we have laminating equipment, but it will still work even if it's not ready for Y2K," Anderson said. "As long as it boots up, it's not an issue."

Of most concern in the United States are pension and insurance records of ministers. The worst disruptions are expected overseas, where missionaries and other staff could have a difficult time if predictions of power outages and offline ATMs hold true.

"This thing is huge," said Daniel Carr, a management information systems manager at Catholic Relief Services headquarters in Baltimore, which has offices in 60 other countries. "We should have within our control things like our computers ... our communications equipment. What's concerning us is our outside vendors."

Travel plans are also being evaluated, since computers play a major role in air-traffic control networks worldwide. And American groups often bring their workers home for the year-end holidays.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, with nearly 60,000 missionaries around the world, is considering suspending travel by its workers around New Year's Day, Don LeFevre, a church spokesman, said.

Concern over travel in part has prompted InterVarsity Christian Fellowship to delay for a year its triennial missions conference originally scheduled for Dec. 27-31. If the conference in Urbana, Ill., had not been postponed, 18,000 people, mostly American college students, would have been traveling Jan. 1.

"It's going to be the heaviest travel month of this century," said Allan Beeber, a computer expert for Campus Crusade for Christ, a similar college-age ministry based in Orlando, Fla. The group has urged its leaders to complete its annual regional holiday conferences for students before Dec. 31. Campus Crusade is spending $3 million to become Y2K-compatible by spring.

The Promise Keepers also are scaling back plans for events Jan. 1 at state capitals nationwide. To minimize travel, they now are encouraging in-home gatherings and events at local churches

The Assemblies of God has been working on Y2K for five years and is nearly finished. Leaders of the church warn members on its Web site that "needless fear and alarmist tactics" such as hoarding food and believing doomsday scenarios "conflict with the teachings of our Lord himself."

The nation's largest Pentecostal denomination, the 8.5 million-member Church of God in Christ, installed a Y2K-friendly database six months ago at its headquarters in Memphis, Tenn.

Sylvia Law, the denomination's chief financial officer, will meet with IBM and a software company to put together a new record-keeping package for local congregations and districts.

Small, local congregations with loose or no denomination affiliations must rely more on their members to prepare.

"We have some computer-savvy leadership in our congregation," said Rabbi Leonard Troupp of Temple Beth David, a Reformed synagogue in Commack, N.Y. The temple already has installed a Y2K-compliant database, in part because members had read up on the problem.

Imam Hassan Qazwini, the spiritual leader of the Islamic Center of America in Detroit, hasn't heard Y2K mentioned by other area mosque leaders. The center's private school in nearby Dearborn, Mich., has new computers which should not be affected. His mosque has a couple of administrative computers, but Qazwini didn't know if they were ready for 2000.

"I heard something about computer problems, but I really didn't take it seriously," the leader said. "I thought it was some kind of joke."

KITUKU: Children should never be a cause of divorce

riage can still be extremely rewarding.

In the case where children are born from the union, it is of paramount importance that each spouse understands that children are an additional blessing. The blessing is not to reduce the value of a spouse. It should not be valued more than a spouse, but valued accordingly. Children need the presence of a father and mother in order to enrich the marriage and the world.

It is good to keep in mind that in 18 to 20 years, that blessing will leave the nest to perpetuate the circle of life, sometimes in distance lands. Your spouse will be with you until death. Never speak negatively to a child about your spouse. Beside severing a relationship, chances are that when the child grows up he or she will find out who was wrong. There is also the danger of that child growing up not trusting anyone of the accused spouse's sex. If that child gets married with misgivings of what to expect, another marriage union may become a statistic.

The best gift a father can give his children is to love, respect and honor their mother. The same goes for a mother's gift to her children. Children feel more protected when parents portray genuine love for one another. However, they feel physically and emotionally vulnerable when harmony is not in the home.

Children are a blessing and should not be a cause of their parents' divorce.

Changing worship styles attracts new church-goers

By Jeff Self
Bonham Daily Favorite

BONHAM — For hundreds of years, pastors, evangelists and church members had to be creative and innovative in attempts to bring in the unchurched members of their communities.

In the 1950s it was tent revivals and brush arbor meetings that lasted for weeks at a time. Hymns such as "I'll Fly Away," and "Just a Little Talk with Jesus," were sung with enthusiasm and excitement as the congregants gathered night after night by the hundreds and even thousands. Heading into the new millennium, those days of staking up a tent full of chairs and posting a sign reading, "REVIVAL," have passed us by.

In a society based on technology, fueled by fast-paced parents rushing to get home from work in time to get little Sara to piano lessons, followed by soccer practice for Johnny, zip through McDonalds for a nutritious meal to be eaten in the family SUV, on the way to catching the last inning of Billy's baseball game, who has time for church or a week-long Revival?

The attitude has become one of, "I'll gladly attend church on Sunday (provided nothing else comes up like a trip to grandma's house or a day at the lake)," but asking Americans to turn out every night for Revival is out of the question. Folks are just too busy.

In an effort to lure these busy, well-intending folks into services, churches have offered everything from free pizza and Six Flags for the youth, to weight loss programs and day care centers for the adults.

The latest movement in an attempt to draw in those outside the church doors is known as the Contemporary Worship Service. Out go the piano and organ and in come drums, guitars, keyboards and such.

Gone is the choir. The seats they sat in have been carried out, leaving a stage area for the Worship Team and drama companies to occupy.

Heresy!, is the cry coming from staunch traditionalists who believe the only songs sung in church should be those that have a page number.

No more transparencies or computer generated lyrics on a screen.

Many traditionalists feel by changing to contemporary music and letting instruments be played in the church, the world is infiltrating the holy place of God.

Nothing could be further from the truth according to Alan Griffen, pastor of First Presbyterian Church in Bonham. Attendance is significantly up, especially in the contemporary service, Griffin said. He added most denominations have gotten into a maintenance style of ministry.

"They are concerned only with ministering to those inside the church walls. We are in the middle of the largest mission field on the planet. Churches have got to find ways to minister to the people outside the church. The contemporary service brings in people who would not otherwise come for a traditional service," Griffen explained.

This contemporary service varies dramatically from traditional church services. The dress is usually casual and in the case of Griffen's church, services begin at 9:00 a.m., before Sunday School.

The music consists primarily of praise choruses, and in many cases, a worship band replaces the traditional piano and organ. The band normally consists of drums, bass guitar, rhythm guitar, keyboards, and other nontraditional instruments. The worship leader leads the congregation, accompanied by a praise team.

The movement is sweeping across the country, with many churches too small for an orchestra welcoming the change.

Those in opposition generally believe the movement compromises the message of the gospel.

Garnett Cole, former pastor of Red Oak Baptist Church in Tulsa, Okla., said during a Sunday morning message once, "There was a time when we had pastors and music ministers with back bone. Elvis was the major musical influence of the day and we managed to keep Elvis out of the church. We did not compromise!"

Unfortunately Cole must not understand that many of the melodies he treasures were written in the 1700s and put to the tune of popular secular music of that era. A brief glance into music history would have shown Cole that many Baptist hymns were derived from tunes popular in local pubs and taverns of the day. (As worship leader at Faith Baptist Church in Bokchito, Okla., I can say that.)

As society changes, worship will evolve with it. The message of the good news of Christ must stay the same, but its delivery method must reach out to a new culture.

Traditionalists will continue to find plenty of services in which to worship. Many churches such as First Presbyterian in Bonham offer both a contemporary service at 9:00 and a traditional service at 11:00, with Sunday School sandwiched in the middle.

Griffen said traditional hymns are a very important part of traditionalists' faith pilgrimage, and it is important that the church be able to reach out to both groups.

Any time change becomes part of something as steeped in tradition as a church service, there will be conflict. Only time will tell the outcome, but most pastors and church members are willing to do whatever necessary to convert the lost.

Kentuckians in opposition to Pagan festival

DENNISTON, Ky. (AP) — Residents of rural, predominantly Christian Menifee County are not looking forward to a pagan festival planned for a ridge-top tobacco farm April 30-May 2.

"It's just a horrible disgrace," says Denniston grocer Clayton Wells, 72, who lives three miles from the festival grounds east of Frenchburg.

As many as 200 dancing, drum-beating revelers plan to "celebrate the blossoming of spring and the powers of fertility," organizers say, and some of the self-described witches, magicians and pagans will be naked as they chant and worship.

"It's just been a shocker to everyone I've talked to," said Bethel Baptist Church pastor Joseph "Buddy" Rhodes of Frenchburg, who calls nude worship an abomination.

But William Lawson, a Menifee County native and ex-Pentecostal who is helping organize the event, said: "I want people to know that they have nothing to fear from us."

Celebrating May Day is one of the major pagan festivals of the year. According to "The Truth About Witchcraft" by Scott Cunningham, pagans in general believe in reincarnation and reject orthodox Christian concepts of heaven and hell, sin, salvation and the Trinity. Also, they revere Mother Earth, believe God is feminine and masculine, and often are uninhibited about their bodies, the book said.

Woman dies on Easter pilgrimage

SHIPROCK, N.M. (AP) — A woman who was to have been baptized Easter Weekend was killed on an annual 15-mile Good Friday walk when a car swerved into a group of pilgrims.

The victim, Janine Franklin, a 31-year-old mother of three, was part of a group walking along U.S. 64 from Sacred Heart Parish in Waterflow to Christ the King Parish in Shiprock.

The driver, Amos Joe, 50, of Hogback, was arrested by Navajo Nation police on suspicion of driving while under the influence and driving without a license. Investigators said Joe had a blood alcohol level of .28. The legal limit in New Mexico is .08.

"I think this is just a very, very tragic and sad thing because she was going to be baptized tomorrow night," the Rev. John Paul Sauter of Christ the King Catholic Church said.

"She was just getting into the religion, and so she wanted to do everything ... I conditionally baptized her and anointed her, but she was dead."

Religion is part of relief effort

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Franklin Graham, son of the Rev. Billy Graham, makes no apology for focusing on Jesus during relief missions worldwide despite those who criticize efforts to evangelize to needy people.

Graham is leader of Samaritan's Purse, an international relief organization. He spoke recently at Wake Forest University.

"Who said life's fair?" he asked. "I'll take every opportunity I get to tell people about Jesus Christ. While we're freely giving out the medicine and food, we're running our mouths."

Graham encouraged students to follow God in whatever they do.

"Take a stand for Christ," he said. "It's tough. People will laugh at you. People will mock you."

But God, he told them, "will bless you."

In a question-and-answer session after his speech, Graham said he doesn't necessarily agree with the NATO military action in Yugoslavia but that Americans must back the effort and hope for the best.

He said his agency would continue relief efforts in the region and that he tells his father he's not worried about his plane crashing.

"If that thing goes down," he said, "this old boy's going up."

A tale of a Muslim and a guide dog

CINCINNATI (AP) — A Muslim cab driver refused to pick up a blind woman and her guide dog on religious grounds, and now the city must issue a decision.

Federal and state laws guarantee guide dogs access to all public places and vehicles, but the First Amendment protects religious freedom.

The city must deal with a complaint filed in February by Annie McEachrin against Hassan Taher. McEachrin, blind since birth, has a constant companion, a black Lab named Jessica. Taher, who adheres strictly to Islamic law, says his religion considers dogs impure.

Nihad Awad, executive director of the Council on American Islamic Relations in Washington, said, "The driver ... acted in good faith. He's acted in accordance with his religious beliefs."

Ms. McEachrin, 43, is a talking-book coordinator and public relations representative for the Cincinnati Association for the Blind.

"I don't want it to seem like I'm bitter about this," she said. "I'm more concerned about people with disabilities being treated fairly."

MONKS: Interest in monastic life has grown within last decade time without bills and 9-to-5 workdays is enough to send them knocking on monastery doors. Vocation directors, like the Rev. Simon O'Donnell at St. Andrew's, turn them away.

(From 1C)

O'Donnell said some don't realize that the monastery doesn't have to take everyone who seeks to join. He compares living in a cloister to a marriage — it's a big commitment to spend a lifetime with someone.

"There probably isn't a lot of satisfaction in following a strict lifestyle that really doesn't do something inside of you, that doesn't enhance your spiritual relationship with God," O'Donnell said.

How do the monks describe their "calling" to the monastic life? Toilolo characterizes it as "a calm, deep sigh." Others describe it as an "inner peace" or a "tug of the heart."

The Rev. Meinrad Miller, director of vocations at St. Benedict's Abbey, attributes the initial spark in religious curiosity to Pope John Paul II's visit at World Youth Day in Denver in 1993.

"Literally hundreds of thousands of young people around the world gathered, joyful about their faith," he said. "A lot of them began to think at that time of serving the priesthood or religious life. It was a watershed event."

Miller, 34, said he knows 40 men and women at Benedictine College in Atchison who seem serious about taking monastic vows. That's out of 800 students.

Interest is much greater than when he was in college in the early 1980s, he said.

Many young people reject progressive religious ideals born of Vatican II's reforms, favoring instead a traditional life of prayer, Toilolo said.

"It seems to me younger people are wanting none of this wishy-washy stuff," he added. Having grown up in times that seemed morally ambivalent, in which "everything goes," he said, they seem more conservative. "I think people are sick and tired of this because they think, 'This can't be right.'"

Some priests, however, are skeptical about the rise in interest.

The Rev. Joe Morris, a chaplain at St. John's University School of Law in Queens, N.Y., used to teach seminarians.

When his generation entered the priesthood in the 1960s and 1970s it was to answer a call to service, he said. They were destined to help others and to spread the word of God.

Morris said many of today's young men and women who are joining religious orders come from broken homes and dysfunctional families. Often they say they are seeking a sense of community.

"Right before this people were really complaining" about a lack of applicants, he said. "It's really kind of a surprise. People are changing tunes and saying, 'At least we have bodies.' A lot of times there's really a tendency among people to talk about numbers."

Morris said he worries how committed some of today's young people are to the religious life. Miller countered that such concerns, voiced mainly by older priests, represent "a healthy tension."

His own view? "The young seminarians will make fine priests."

Organist to perform at First Presbyterian

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer

Suna Chung, organist and choir director at First Presbyterian Church of Odessa, will perform today at 6 p.m. at Midland's First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave.

Mrs. Chung, a doctoral candidate in organ performance at Indiana University, will perform Bach's Toccata and Fugue in D Minor, Anton Heiller's Tanz Toccata for Organ, Cesar Frank's Organ Chorale in B Minor, William Bolcom's Gospel Prelude Set 2, and Max Reger's composition, Fantasie uber Wachet auf.

A reception will follow. There is no admission and a nursery is available.

In addition to her church work, Mrs. Chung is a group piano and music technology teacher at Ector Junior High in Odessa. She was formerly organist and handbell director at First Christian Church in Martinsville, Indiana while she was a doctoral student-in-residence at Indiana University.

She earned her Master's of Science degree in Music Technology from Purdue. By applying music technology to organ literature she developed multimedia and web-based applications on CD-ROM and/or Internet for her dissertation. She has presented several papers in national and international conferences such as the College Music Society and American Computing Machinery Symposium on Applied Computing.

Before Mrs. Chung came to the United States in 1989, she completed her Bachelor's of Music degree and a Master of Music degree in organ performance and church music at Yonsei University in Seoul, Korea.

A member of the American Guild of Organists and the West Texas AGO, Mrs. Chung has been featured in organ recitals in Indiana and Florida. She is a life-long Presbyterian who grew up at Dae Sung Presbyterian Church in Seoul. Her professional experience in church music includes staff positions with the First Christian Church of Martinsville, Indiana; Fairview United Methodist Church, Bloomington, Indiana; Keystone Korean Baptist Church, Odessa, Fla.; Bayshore Baptist Church, Tampa, Fla.; Clifton Park Baptist Church, Silver Spring, Maryland, and Dae Sung Presbyterian, in Seoul.

She is married to Dr. Sam Chung, assistant professor of Computer Science at the University of Texas-Permian Basin. The Chungs have one daughter, Jin.

Horses owned by fireman, royalty seek victories in two major Derby prep races

Associated Press

A colt owned by the royal family of Dubai and another trained by a retired fireman from Engine Company 234 in Brooklyn, N.Y., will compete Saturday in two of three major Kentucky Derby preps.

In the third, there will be a colt owned by a dreamer, who considers the Derby Utopia.

Prado's Landing, owned by the Maktoum family, the ruling family of the United Arab Emirates, is the outsider in the field of eight 3-year-olds in the Blue Grass Stakes at Keeneland.

Badge, owned by the one-time firefighter, 62-year-old Joe Aquilino, is the favorite against 11 rivals in the Wood Memorial at Aqueduct.

"Anybody that gets into racing that says they don't want to win a Kentucky Derby, I wonder about their honesty because that's Utopia as far as I'm concerned," said owner Hays Boggs, whose Etbauer is unbeaten in three starts this year, but who is only the fourth early betting choice in the Arkansas Derby at Oaklawn Park.

Several serious contenders are in the eight-horse Blue Grass, including Vicar, Wondertross and Cat Thief, the blanket 1-2-3 finishers, respectively, in the Florida Derby. There also are Kimberlite Pipe, the Louisiana Derby winner; Pineaff and Menifee, 1-2, respectively, in the Tampa Bay Derby, and Lemon Drop Kid, looking for a second win in his second start this year.

■ Horse Roundup

Prado's Landing won one of three races last year at Laurel, none farther than 5 1/2 furlongs. His only start this year was in a 1 1/8-mile trial race in Dubai in which he finished third behind World Manner and Aljabr, who are expected to represent the Maktoums in the Kentucky Derby May 1.

Badge goes into the $600,000 Wood Memorial with four wins, including the Gotham, in his last five starts. He is a son of Air Forbes Won, winner of the Gotham and Wood and seventh in the Kentucky Derby in 1982.

Two other Wood starters are Adonis and The Groom Is Red, trained by Nick Zito. But Zito's Kentucky Derby candidates are Blue Grass starter Wondertross, and Stephen Got Even, winner of the Gallery Furniture.Com Stakes at Turfway Park in his final race before the Derby.

Also in the Wood field is Bugatti, trained by Scotty Schulhofer, who will saddle Lemon Drop Kid for the Blue Grass. Bugatti is not being considered for the Derby.

The early favorite for the seven-horse Arkansas Derby is Answer Lively, the Breeders' Cup Juvenile winner, who this year lost the Risen Star by a nose and lost the Louisiana Derby by a head. The next two early picks ahead of Etbauer are Ecton Park, the Risen Star winner and third in the Louisiana Derby, and Certain, third in the Fountain of Youth and fourth in the Florida Derby.

Ecton Park is conditioned by Elliott Walden, trainer of Blue Grass contender Menifee.

Each of the three races will be run at 1 1/8 miles.

Murdoch's $1 billion soccer bid gets swift kick

By John Pye
Associated Press Writer

LONDON — Rupert Murdoch's sports empire will not extend to Manchester United.

The media magnate was denied Friday in his attempt to buy the famed soccer club for $1 billion, which would have been the most expensive price for any team in the world.

The British government blocked the deal, contending BSkyb media company would be hurting competition in the broadcast industry and the quality of soccer.

Murdoch's company called the ruling an "unfortunate precedent," but Manchester United fans were jubilant.

"The news is fantastic and follows seven months of hard work," said Andy Walsh, chairman of the Manchester United Independent Supporters Association. "This is great for us and for anyone fighting for the independence of their club. ... Our feeling is one of absolute euphoria."

BSkyB has exclusive rights to Premier League games live, and this decision is a major blow to Murdoch's attempt to become an even bigger influence in soccer.

BSkyB chief executive Mark Booth remains convinced the takeover would be in the best interests of fans and good for soccer.

"This is a bad ruling for British football clubs who will have to compete in Europe against clubs who are backed by successful media companies," he said.

Murdoch has aggressively pursued sports franchises to complement his media holdings. He bought the Los Angeles Dodgers last year and owns TV rights in the NFL and major league baseball. He has a 40 percent stake in Madison Square Garden, the New York Knicks and New York Rangers

The move against Murdoch came two days after Howard Milstein withdrew his $800 million bid to buy the Washington Redskins. The proposed sale of the NFL team would have been a record for a U.S. sports franchise.

Manchester United said its board was disappointed by the ruling but is confident the team will continue to maintain a strong record and acquire top players.

Murdoch's bid was made in October and accepted by the club's board. However, Monopolies and Mergers Commission investigated amid opposition from lawmakers and Manchester United fans.

Trade and Industry Secretary Stephen Byers said the MMC concluded the merger would "adversely affect competition between broadcasters."

"But they also examined wider public interest issues concluding that the merger would damage the quality of British football," Byers said. "I accept these findings."

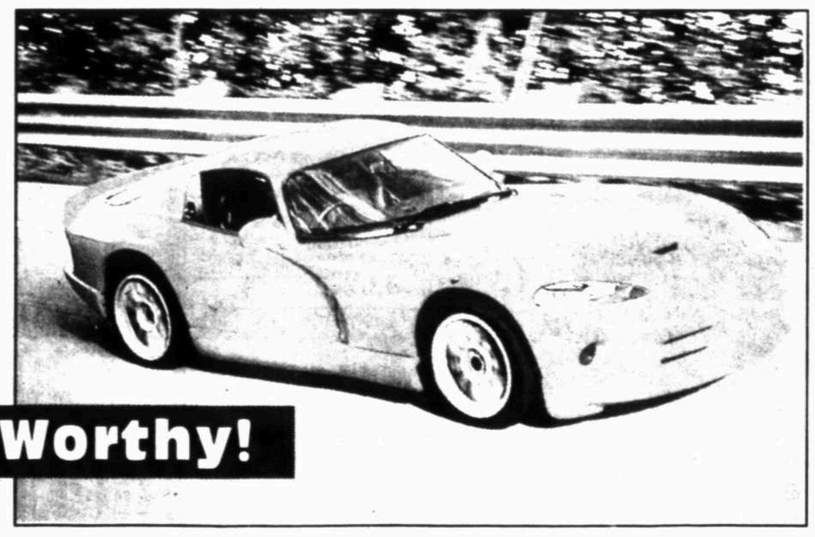
Dodge Viper GTS spins off street-legal ACR competition coupe

BY BOB PLUNKETT
Special to Midland Reporter Telegram

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Ripping across the Arizona desert in a new limited edition of the most powerful American sports car, a grand touring variation of Dodge's awesome Viper totes an enormous engine with ten cylinders of muscle pumping up the strength of 460 horses as translated through six forward gears into downright frightening linear speed.

Based on the GTS coupe, this new limited-edition ACR — American Club Racer — reveals styling cues drawn from Viper's GTS-R world-champion GT2 race car.



RoadWorthy!

Its engine boosts power by 10 points, with 60 pounds of body weight pared for more speed and the Koni street-car suspension components replaced with GTS-R equipment plus Meritor springs so this snake can make the most of its 18-inch high-performance Michelin Pilot Sport tires.

The result? A steroid-induced Viper which can blow everything else off the road — and it's street-legal.

It's also quite rare, as less than 200 units will be cast at Viper's Conner Avenue Assembly Plant in Detroit.

Viper's ACR special edition ranks as one of three production variations for Dodge's supercar as configured with 1999 badging and colors.

The original Viper RT/10 roadster was replaced in 1996 by the GTS coupe, Viper's first hardtop, which added concessions for comfort and convenience like glass side windows and exterior door latches. For 1999, both coupe and roadster continue, although each carries further enhancements with huge 18-inch aluminum wheels and six paint choices — including new red, silver or black.

Beneath the dramatic shape, there's that classic arrangement of components in a tubular steel space frame, with engine up front and rear-wheel thrust setting the stage for a neo-interpretation of an earlier snake on pavement, Carroll Shelby's '60s-vintage Cobra.

In any iteration, Viper contains no compromises.

It looks outrageously vicious with an exaggerated prow and curt tail, but it's all engine, with sparse cockpit space and room for only the driver and a close companion.

The RT/10 is noisy, cantankerous at times, and it has a jury-rigged ragtop roof that leaks when it rains.

Refinements effected in 1996 included swapping original exposed side pipes for a rear exhaust system to meet On-Board Diagnostic regulations in Europe, where Dodge continues to build recognition for the car.

The GTS coupe brought further refinements for civility and comfort, while a hardtop roof and window glass dampened the thunder of Viper's engine to a respectable roar.

Suspension components in cast aluminum for the coupe pared 60 pounds from the original Viper's overall weight, and the revised geometry set up a more stable and compliant behavior during hard cornering. The fully independent front and rear suspensions employ unequal length upper and lower A arms with coil-over springs of alloy steel and high-performance gas-charged shocks.

Steering, exceedingly quick and direct, stems from a power-assisted rack and pinion system with fast steering ratio of 16.7:1.

High-performance disc brakes get huge 13-inch vented rotors at all four wheels and 4-piston front calipers, which meet design goals of running a Viper from zero to 100 mph and back to zero again in less than 15 seconds.

Pulse of any Viper comes from a humongous engine, the 8.0-liter V10. It's the only 10-cylinder pumper for a sports car outside of Formula One competition racers.

Using a thin-wall aluminum alloy block to trim weight, the massive V10 has a 4-inch bore and 3.88-inch stroke, which help push output to 450 hp in tandem with awesome torque production to 490 lbs/ft.

Tweaking the ACR version for free breathing nets an additional 10 hp, as torque runs up to an even 500.

A sophisticated 6-speed manual gearbox, with synch shifting and reverse lockout, mates to Viper's monster engine — and it's entirely malleable.

Also, Viper has adjustable foot pedals which can move mechanically up to four inches in fore-aft range to adapt to an individual driver's legs.

The interior fits tight like Spandex.

Twin bucket seats trimmed in comfy perforated leather contain firm cushioning for lateral support when cornering.

A 3-spoke magnesium steering wheel, wrapped in leather, tilts and telescopes to adjust. Among various instruments in the cluster, the speedometer calibrates to 200 mph.

Safety systems include twin air bags and Viper's steel cage construction, with steel beams in side doors, plus a theft alarm. Missing from Viper's list of safety elements is the option of anti-lock brakes and a traction controller.

The ACR competition package for Viper elevates Viper GTS coupe to a race-ready entry for American GT contests — it's equipped with all of the necessities, including 5-point safety belts.

Engine modifications for the ACR were limited to adding smooth intake hoses and a free-breathing air filter to provoke better air flow, but 60 pounds of excess weight were whittled away from the production GTS by removing Viper's air conditioner, fog lamps and stereo audio system.

Exterior changes appear rather modest, as the racer wears subtle "ACR" badges visible on front side panels near the unique one-piece BBS wheels.

The chance to play with a black ACR Viper occurred recently at Scottsdale, with substantial front-end time devoted to squeezing into the tight cockpit and cinching up the 5-point racing harness.

Crank it over and the throaty rumble of Viper's massive engine shakes the body and sends shivers through the skin in anticipation of lightening-quick action.

Run fast up the gears and Viper pins shoulders to seat through the first four, each increment building speed and driver's pulse. In turns it acts with uncanny agility, hunkering low and sticking hard around every bend.

How fast is it? In official trials Viper GTS runs from zero to 60 mph in only 4.3 seconds, while my unofficial top speed on a track clicked several points beyond 175 mph.

The Viper GTS lists for $68,222, plus a $700 delivery fee and some $3,000 in gas-guzzler taxes. To get the ACR package, plug another $10,000 into the equation.
