Police continue search for burn victims

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Police using a huge crane today dug through the charred ruins of a radical group's house, seeking more bodies after a daylong siege by police and a fire that also set the neighborhood ablaze.

All or parts of six charred bodies, two of them the remains of children, were removed Tuesday from the ruins of the house formerly occupied by the group MOVE.

Meanwhile, the mayor defended a decision to drop a bomb on the house as appropriate although it "did not turn out as intended," while critics said police overreacted and should have been aware of the danger of fire.

Goode

And the city's police commissioner said officials now believe the MOVE members who had been barricaded in the house had a hand in starting the fire, and said members apparently had spread flammable material around their compound.

Representatives of the health department, fire department, medical examiner's office and mayor's office joined police in the search for bodies.

"I imagine it's going to be an all-day thing," said police Detective Jerry Whartenby.

Fire Commissioner William Richmond described the unidentified remains found Tuesday "as two male adults, one female adult, parts of another adult, one female child, and multiple parts of at least one other child."

Some reports had said as many as 12 adults and 10 children had been holed up in the house before the police tried to clear them out. Other reports about the squalid fortress said that MOVE members had dug a labyrinth of tunnels from the basement, and police were looking for signs of escape routes.

The fire that damaged or destroyed dozens of homes in the middle-class neighborhood broke out after police dropped a bomb on the roof of MOVE headquarters.

Mayor W. Wilson Goode, who denounced MOVE as a group "dedicated to the destruction of our way of life," said he accepted responsibility for the fire, though he said it was not known who started it. He promised the estimated 225 neighborhood residents who were displaced by the fire that the city would pay to rebuild their houses. Damage is estimated at at least $5 million.

Police Commissioner Gregore Sambor, interviewed today on the "CBS Morning News," said, "We did not create any fire."

Council votes to request water from Stacy Dam

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Looking at Midland's long-range water needs, the City Council Tuesday voted to request 15,000 acre-feet of water from Stacy Dam when it is completed, with the city's share of the project to be $31 million. An election will be held later for voters to approve the long-term contract with CRMWD.

During Tuesday's council meeting in City Hall, Utilities Director John Lowe said the Colorado River Municipal Water District board has received a permit to build Stacy Dam and has projected to sell bonds for its share of the cost during the last quarter of 1985. Construction should start in July 1987 with completion scheduled for 1989. The dam should be ready for use by 1990, he said.

Stacy Dam is expected to hold 90,700 acre feet of water for a safe limit for use. "The city (of Midland) is asking for 15,000 acre-feet, or about 16.54 percent of the safe yield," he said. San Angelo and Abilene also are asking for a similar amount. This would leave about 52 percent for CRMWD's members, such as Odessa and smaller towns including Snyder.

Estimated construction cost of Stacy Dam is $68 million, according to Lowe.

The State Supreme Court last November had voided the permit for Stacy Dam, citing a problem with the "unappropriated water." But a compromise with CRMWD and the Lower Colorado River Authority, which had opposed the dam, was worked out recently. Stacy Dam will be a 500,000 acre-feet reservoir constructed 25 miles southeast of Ballinger.

Because of the long-term obligation to CRMWD, the city charter requires that an election be held, according to City Attorney David Reagan.

"The city charter requires that any contract for longer than one year and for an obligation that can't be paid out of one year's revenues be approved by the voters," Reagan said.

If the city enters into a contract with CRMWD, it will obligate the city for quite a bit of money, he added.

The $31 million figure tossed out Tuesday is a very soft number, said Lowe. That breaks down to $11 million for the city's share in constructing the dam (16 percent of the $68 million), $10-11 million for the pipeline and pump stations to convey the water to Midland and a $10 million addition to the water treatment plant.

The current plant treats water from CRMWD, which comes from Lake Spence.

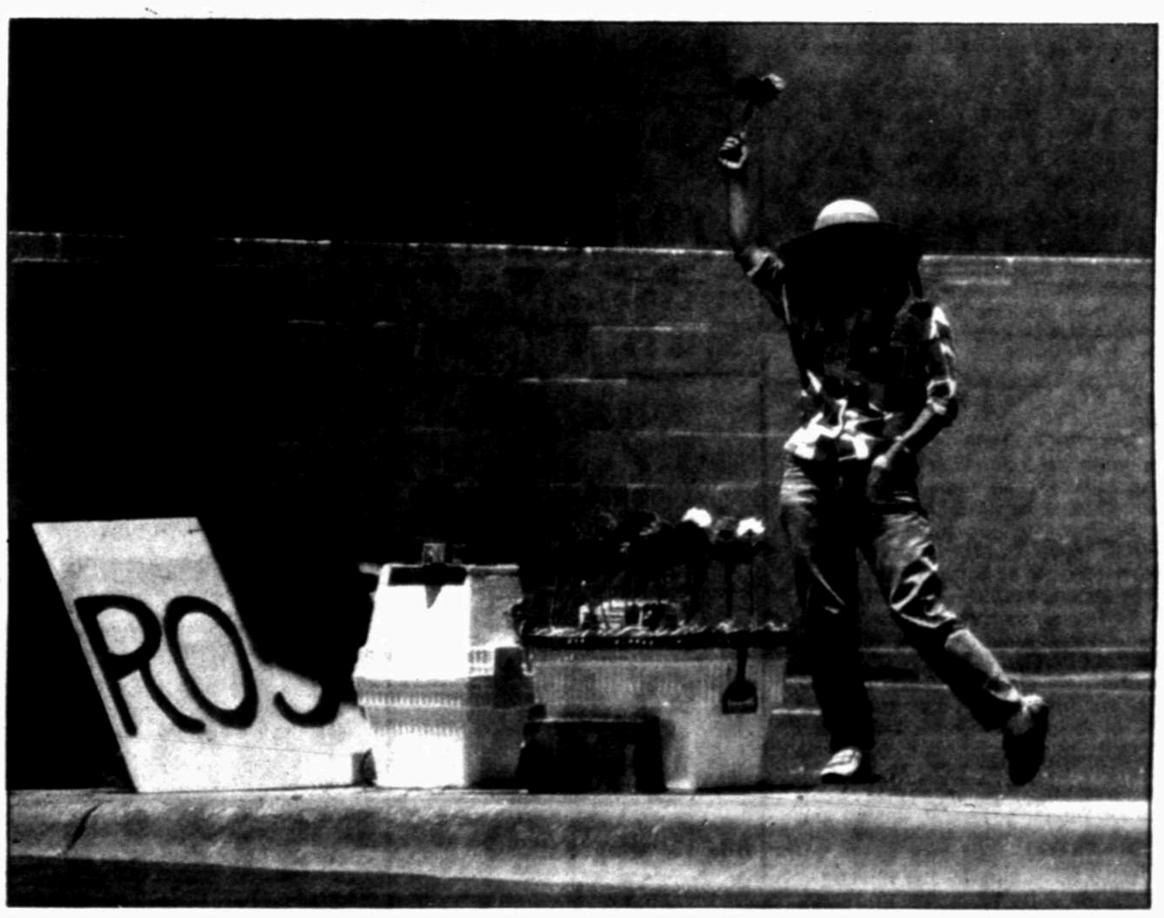

Midland won't be using the 15,000 acre-feet each year at first, said Lowe. But it gives the city some leverage during peak demands, which usually occur during the summer.

In addition to water from Lake Spence, the city pumps out water from the Paul Davis Well Field about 25 miles north of the city. By 1993, said Lowe, the city will have removed another 55,000 acre-feet, leaving about 245,000 acre-feet.

"Stacy Dam will prolong the life of that field," Lowe told the council.

It would also delay for several years the time when the council will have to develop the well fields at T-Bar Ranch in Winkler County, according to Deputy City Manager Fred Poe. "Stacy is a renewable supply of water. The ground water is

Inspector finds 15 discrepancies in jail

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The Midland County Jail flunked its annual inspection this week.

The jail scored 15 discrepancies, which ranged from the old flaws of insufficient space to classify inmates to criticism of the jail's administrative paperwork and communication system.

The non-compliance report, submitted by Joe Slater, supervising inspector for the Texas Commission on Jail Standards, came as no surprise to county officials.

"I thought he was real fair," said Midland County Judge Bill Ahders. "He was objective. He looked at things, found and pointed out faults."

Slater also suggested that the Commissioners' Court draft a detailed master plan on jail renovation, expansion and repairs and submit those to the Jail Commission for approval before any work is commenced on the jail project.

County commissioners are to convene in a special session in the downtown courthouse at 1:30 p.m. Thursday to review the inspection report, to discuss the master plan and the hiring of a planner or architect to draft renovation proposals, and to discuss the financing of the project.

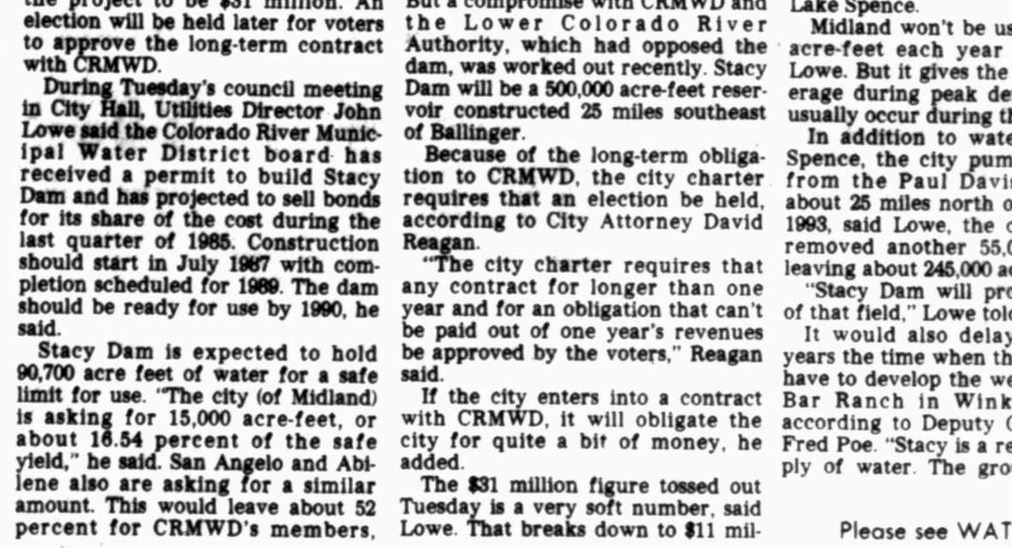

Midland County voters on Saturday approved a $3 million jail bond issue to renovate the jail, to bring it up to standards and add cell space to expand Culver Youth Home, a juvenile detention center, and to fund a study of Midland County needs into the 21th Century. Voters rejected a $9.9 million bond issue to build an $8.4 million jail and sheriff's office complex apart from the courthouse.

"WE'LL DO WHAT we have to do to conform (to jail standards)," Ahders said, "and then I hope we can go ahead and proceed with (building) another jail." The judge has been an advocate for a new jail rather than a renovated jail.

Next Wednesday, Sheriff Gary Painter and Commissioner Win Brown are to be in Austin to discuss the plight of the jail with the Jail Commission. Ahders was scheduled to appear before the Jail Commission but elected to send Brown in his stead.

Slater's inspection report to the sheriff and the Commissioners' Court carried a cover letter, signed by Jail Commission Executive Director Robert O. "Bob" Viterna, which said the Jail Commission could issue another remedial order if the cited deficiencies are not corrected.

House OKs bill raising drinking age

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill that would raise the Texas drinking age to 21 has been approved by a House committee. But a measure to ban drinking while driving is apparently dead.

In a 7-1 vote, the Liquor Regulation Committee voted Tuesday to recommend House approval of the Senate measure replacing the current 19-year-old drinking age. The lone dissenter said the change would create a "blood border" along the Texas-Mexico border.

The so-called open container bill, also approved by the Senate, is locked in a House subcommittee. Rep. Kenneth Armbrister, D-Victoria and subcommittee chairman, said he will keep it locked up.

"The problem is not drinking. The problem is drinking to the point of intoxication and then driving," said Armbrister.

Texas raised the drinking age from 18 to 19 in 1981. The federal government has threatened to cut highway funds in 1987-88 if the state does not raise the age to 21.

Senators approved the increase by voice vote on Feb. 6. If approved by the House, the bill would take effect Sept. 1, 1986.

The Senate version said the age would revert to 19 if the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled in favor of any state that challenged the federal government's authority to force the increased age.

House committee members expanded that section to say the bill would self-destruct if any federal appeals court rules against the federal government.

Rep. Alex Moreno, D-Edinburg, cast the lone dissenting vote, saying it would drive teen-agers in his area across the Mexican border for drinks.

House budget would save Social Security

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democratic budget writers are pushing for swift approval of $56 billion package of spending cuts that would safeguard next year's Social Security benefit increase.

"Bob Dole is going to be embarrassed," House Budget Committee Chairman William Gray, D-Pa., boasted Tuesday in a jab at the Senate majority leader, who guided a $56 billion GOP deficit-cutting plan to approval in the Senate last week. That proposal includes a freeze in next year's Social Security benefits.

Neither budget calls for higher taxes, although some Democrats may seek to insert a provision calling for a minimum corporate tax when the measure reaches the House floor, probably next week.

The Democratic plan, which the full Budget Committee is expected to approve today, would cut deeply into President Reagan's Pentagon buildup by freezing spending authority. The freeze would extend to many domestic programs, and there would be deeper cuts in selected areas such as agriculture, revenue-sharing and Amtrak.

Republicans, outgunned by Democrats on the committee by a 20-13 margin, vowed a show of opposition to the plan that may be largely symbolic.

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Exercise does not have to be strenuous

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've tried to follow your advice by changing my diet so that I don't take in as much cholesterol as I used to, but I don't know what I can do about your suggestion about exercise. At 58 years of age, and as someone who never was very athletic, there are certain things, such as jogging, that I simply cannot undertake. Just how important is exercise in regard to cholesterol? — Mr. N.E., Concord, N.H.

Solomon

Dear Mr. E.: Exercise does not have to be particularly strenuous in order to have a beneficial effect on an individual's cholesterol level. Dr. William P. Follansbee, of the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine, has shown that even 20 minutes of walking can increase the level of high-density lipoprotein cholesterol (the good cholesterol).

Dear Dr. Solomon: If calcium is so important for good health, and if a lack of calcium can be so dangerous, why don't doctors recommend a supplement for everyone? I'm not talking about massive doses of calcium, but enough to keep a person in good health. — Mrs. A.P., Roanoake, Va.

Dear Mrs. P.: Calcium supplementation may have serious consequences for some people, and this may include the formation of kidney stones. Anyone who has a history of kidney stones should avoid calcium supplementation unless he or she is under a physician's supervision.

In addition, some sources of calcium may contain lead, and this could be particularly harmful to infants, children, women of childbearing age, and, possibly, older people.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've been hearing arguments both pro and con about saccharin for as long as I can remember. I can still buy saccharin so I must assume that it is considered to be safe, but the arguments are still continuing. What's the story on the use of saccharin? If it is safe, why all the confusion? — Ms. V.G., Bronx, N.Y.

Dear Ms. G.: First let me comment on your statement that because you can purchase an item, you assume that it must be safe. I would simply note that you can purchase cigarettes, even though smoking has been associated with a variety of very serious conditions and diseases.

As for saccharin, the artificial sweetner has been found to cause bladder cancer in rats. However there is no clear evidence that its use in moderation has the same effect in humans. Nevertheless, the American Cancer Society suggests that the use of saccharin be avoided, if possible. This is particularly important for pregnant women and children.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I'm scheduled for some surgery, which I'm really not very worried about, but one of my friends warned me that he suffered from pressure sores when he had an operation a few years ago. In fact, he made the pressure sores sound as if they were worse than the operation he had. Pressure sores don't sound very serious to me, and I would like to know why people make a big deal about them. — Joe, N.Y.C.

Dear Joe: When pressure sores are reported to be associated with a mortality of seven to eight percent, I would say they are worth considering. The figure also highlights the importance of prevention, including proper skin care, hygiene, nutrition and the avoidance of prolonged pressure.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I know in general what a type A personality is supposed to be, but I don't know much about the specifics. Would you enlighten me about just how type A behavior is shown? — Mr. K.W., South Bend, Ind.

Dear Mr. W.: Type A personalities have been described in terms of primary and secondary characteristics. The primary characteristics include a sense of urgency, which is often reflected in too many activities being planned for too little time; hostility, which refers to the hostile feelings that often seem to surface with comparatively little provocation; ambitiousness, which generally means a continuing need to prove oneself and the setting of very high standards of performance; and lack of moderation, which may be seen in the person's efforts to exert control over a situation that cannot be controlled.

The secondary characteristics include impatience, which results in aggravation or hostility if the person is delayed or kept waiting; competitiveness, which generally is found on the job; aggressiveness, which may be a reaction to a perceived loss of control; and denial, which is manifested when efforts are made to show the person the effects of his or her behavior.

Type A behavior is also seen in the way a person talks or even moves around.

Dotson, Webb meet on 'Today'

NEW YORK (AP) — Gary Dotson, face-to-face with the woman whose rape accusations sent him to prison six years ago, told a national television audience today he had accepted her apology and they "shook hands."

"I more or less had to get some things out and meet the person," said Dotson during an interview on NBC's "Today" show with Cathleen Crowell Webb, who has recanted her assertions that Dotson raped her.

"She's a different person today than eight years ago, and I just had to meet her."

Both said they had talked Tuesday night in a meeting arranged by their lawyers prior to their television appearance.

"Well, it was a mutual meeting, mutual agreement," Mrs. Webb said. "I, of course, apologized for what I don't think I could apologize enough. It was a friendly meeting."

Asked if he accepted her apology, Dotson replied, "Oh, yeah. We shook hands."

"She paid me back by coming forward," Dotson said, commenting on Mrs. Webb's earlier statement that she wished she had a million dollars to give him.

Mrs. Webb said despite Gov. James R. Thompson's refusal to clear Dotson's rape conviction, "I believe the people of America know Gary Dotson is innocent... He's not a rapist. He doesn't have the character of a rapist."

The meeting followed high-level jockeying by the NBC and ABC television networks for the first interview with the two side by side, with "Today" winning a battle over ABC's "Good Morning America." Interviews on both ABC and CBS followed.

Mrs. Webb, now 23 and the mother of two children, has lobbied for Dotson's freedom in recent months — telling a judge, the governor and nationwide television audiences that she lied when she said he raped her in 1977.

She said she fabricated a rape story because she feared she was pregnant after having sex with a teen-age boy.

Dotson's lawyer, Warren Lupel, said Mrs. Webb and her husband, David, agreed to be available any time Dotson may need them in the future.

Though Dotson is now a free man, he is seeking a new trial to clear his name. As a convicted felon he can neither vote nor hold public office, and a state law might prevent him from realizing profits from dozens of offers to sell his story.

On Tuesday, the government filed a motion to dismiss Dotson's petition for a new trial, saying he "has failed to raise a single issue of constitutional scope sufficient to justify granting a hearing in this case."

J. Scott Arthur, assistant Cook County state's attorney, also said the government needs more time to gather additional testimony to support its case.

Circuit Judge Richard Fitzgerald continued the case until June 4.

Unless he clears his name, Illinois law says Dotson would have to put any money he earns from movie, television or book rights into an escrow account and the alleged victim would have two years to sue to claim that money.

Von Bulow attorney challenges needle test

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A defense attorney challenged tests indicating that a used hypodermic needle Claus von Bulow allegedly owned contained insulin, the hormone prosecutors say von Bulow used in two attempts to kill his wife.

Dr. Joseph Nitis, former director of the Baltimore-Washington branch of Bio-Science Laboratories in Columbia, Md., testified Tuesday at von Bulow's retrial that insulin was found on the needle in two separate tests.

But defense attorney Thomas P. Puccio questioned Nitis on whether Valium and amobarbital — which were also found on the needle at a different Bio-Science lab — could produce a "false positive" reading for insulin.

Nitis conceded that the drugs could "possibly" interfere with the insulin test results, but he testified later that in general such interference was a minor factor.

The state says Von Bulow, 58, plunged Martha "Sunny" von Bulow into an irreversible coma in 1980 as well as a temporary coma a year earlier by injecting her with insulin.

His 1982 convictions were overturned by the Rhode Island Supreme Court on state constitutional grounds.

Prosecutors say the Danish-born von Bulow wanted his wife dead so he could inherit $14 million of her utilities fortune and be free to marry his mistress.

The defense maintains that Mrs. von Bulow, 53, triggered the comas herself by abusing drugs, alcohol and sweets, thereby aggravating a low blood-sugar condition.

The needle was sent to Bio-Science Laboratories at the request of Dr. Richard J. Stock, Mrs. von Bulow's personal physician, in early 1981 shortly after her second coma.

The defense also has challenged the Bio-Science test for insulin in Mrs. von Bulow's blood.

Weinberger: Pentagon saved $4 billion last three years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, mounting a new effort to salvage his fiscal 1986 budget, says the Pentagon has managed to save $4 billion over the past three years that should be used to "mitigate" deep spending cuts.

Most of the savings were attributed Tuesday to over-estimates of inflation and better-than-expected contracting results. Weinberger said the money is now available to avoid "unnecessarily damaging national security."

But he also warned he was still considering a request for a supplemental appropriation even if Congress grants permission to use the $4 billion in fiscal 1986.

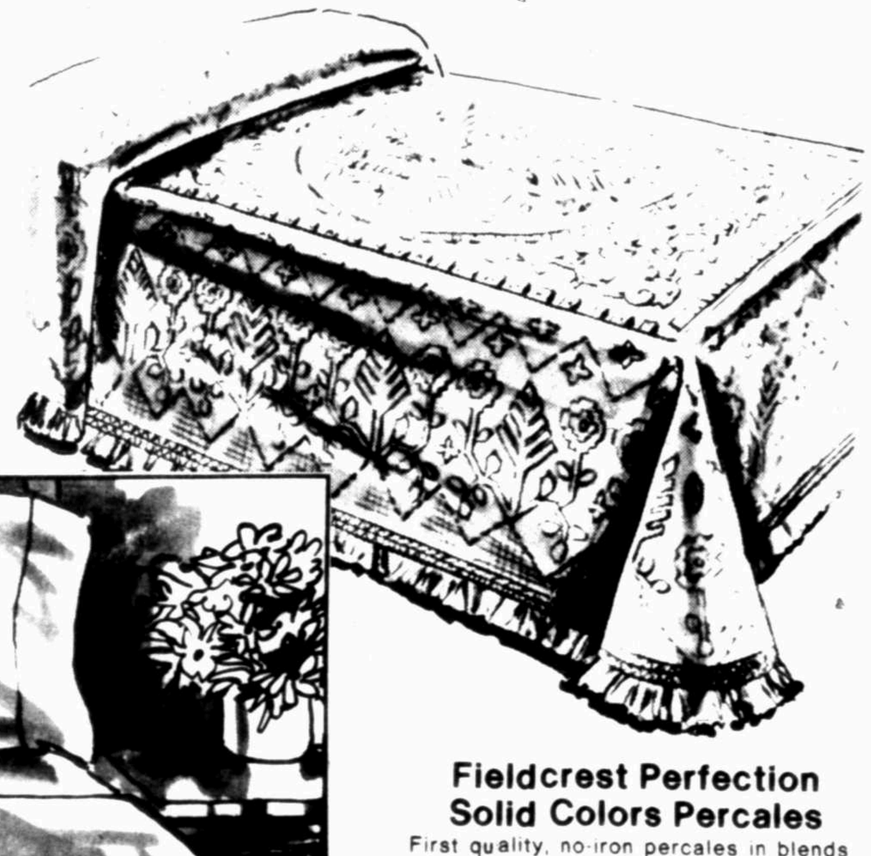

The defense secretary said the 1986 budget levels set by the Senate last week "cannot be accommodated without seriously impacting the defense program." He said some way must be found "to mitigate the impact of the (Senate's) budget cuts on vital national security programs."

Weinberger is recommending "that Congress use these savings to minimize program stretch-outs, thereby avoiding additional future costs from uneconomical buys; to avoid unnecessary readiness cuts in areas such as spare parts and support equipment, and to finance essential elements of compensation and quality-of-life programs," the Pentagon said.

Pope: Belief answer to doubt

LUXEMBOURG (AP) — Pope John Paul II put his strife-ridden Dutch tour behind him today and traveled to solidly Catholic Luxembourg, where he told several thousand supporters that Christian belief was the answer to modern anxiety and doubt.

Before departing Amsterdam's Schiphol Airport, the pope told Dutch bishops: "Public opinion has said enough about the problems between Rome and the church of the Netherlands. You have my support."

The Dutch trip spawned the nation's largest-ever security effort, and was plagued by protest. On Sunday anti-pope rioters rampaged through Utrecht while John Paul was addressing Catholic missionary and social groups.

Police said there were no protesters at Luxembourg's Findel Airport when the pope arrived and kissed the ground at the start of a 32-hour visit. The arrival was not covered by Luxembourg television.

The pontiff was welcomed by Grand Duke Jean and Grand Duchess Josephine-Charlotte, members of the Luxembourg government and Catholic church leaders here.

"Luxembourg has always been in the forefront of a united Europe in which nations in conflict are seeking to combine their efforts to achieve prosperity and well-being for all," the pope said in an arrival statement.

He spoke in French and German, Luxembourg's two languages, as well as Luxembourgish, a mixture of the two, stressing the importance of Christian beliefs "at a time when Western society is being shaken to the foundations of its beliefs and practices and is suffering from anxiety and doubt."

John Paul's first scheduled stop was the 17th-century Cathedral of Our Lady to meet with 1,000 sick, handicapped and aged people. In the evening, the pope was to say Mass for workers and immigrants outside a steel plant.

An estimated 96,700 people, more than a quarter of Luxembourg's population of 365,000, are immigrants. The largest groups are Portuguese and Italians.

Sections of the Mass were to be in different languages, and the pontiff planned to offer greetings in French, Italian, Polish and Portuguese.

Church figures indicate that 97.3 percent of Luxembourg's residents are Catholics. The Grand Duchy is about 50 miles long and 30 miles wide.

A constitutional monarchy, Luxembourg has a single-chamber parliament. Grand Duke Jean has been on the throne for more than 20 years.

The pontiff's schedule includes meetings with priests and nuns and a discussion session with young people.

During his five-day Dutch tour, the pontiff stressed that the Vatican would not budge on issues which have caused strife in the liberal Dutch church — abortion, birth control, ordination of women as priests and marriage of priests.

In Amersfoort, the pope met Tuesday with several hundred young people on the lawn of a Catholic secondary school.

Sheila van Drie, 16, told the pope that many teen-agers "feel that the church does not understand contemporary problems, certainly issues such as homosexuality, abortion, the position of women in the church, questions connected with living together and sex before marriage."

Delivering what he acknowledged would be an unpopular answer, the pope said the Bible "shows us a demanding Christ...Would it be realistic to imagine a Jesus who is indulgent on marital love, abortion, sexual relations before or outside marriage, or homosexual relations?"

"The words of the Apostles are clear and strict," he said. "They are words inspired by God. They remain the standard for the church for all time. If the church makes unpalatable pronouncements, it does so because it feels obliged to do so."

The pope will travel to Belgium, whose largely Roman Catholic population is deeply divided by language, Thursday for a six-day visit. His three-country tour ends May 21.

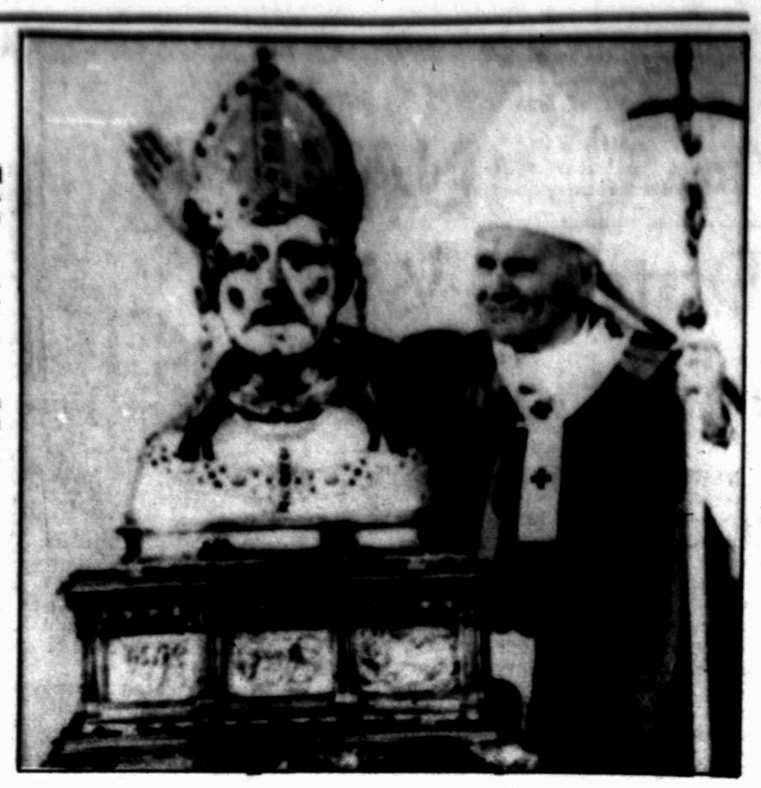

He is expected to receive a warmer welcome in Belgium than he did in the Netherlands. Although many Belgians also question the Vatican's rule, their rebellion pales compared with that of dissident Dutch Catholics.

John Paul's Belgian itinerary is painstakingly organized to divide his stay equally between Flanders — Belgium's Dutch-speaking northern half — and French-speaking Wallonia.

Following a recent series of bomb attacks in Belgium, authorities have mounted a large security operation.

Belgian bishops maintained a discreet disagreement with Rome after their flock rejected "Humanae Vitae," the encyclical that banned artificial birth control.

Church leaders generally acknowledge that most women ignore the ban.

Convicted killer dies by injection

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Jesse de la Rosa, professing love for his stepmother and asking forgiveness for his sins, was executed by injection early today for killing a convenience store clerk over six cans of beer in 1979.

De la Rosa, 24, was pronounced dead at 12:17 a.m., four minutes after a lethal dose of chemicals was injected into both arms. He was the 11th person executed in the nation this year and the 43rd put to death since the U.S. Supreme Court reinstituted capital punishment in 1976.

De la Rosa was executed for the death of Masaoud Ghazali, a former Iranian Air Force captain who was shot twice in the head during a robbery of a San Antonio 7-Eleven store that netted only a six-pack of beer.

He made his final statement staring at the ceiling, telling his step-mother, Carmen, who was in the death chamber with him, "I love you."

"God forgive my brothers and sisters for sins I have committed," de la Rosa said in Spanish.

De la Rosa's stepmother, who was accompanied by the condemned man's father, Luciano, replied in English, "You'll never die because you'll always be in my memories."

His father added in Spanish, "God forgive my son."

De la Rosa then added, "God, I give my life for my brothers and sisters."

When he gasped and his stomach buckled, his stepmother began sobbing. She was comforted by his father, who also was in tears. The couple left the prison without further comment.

De la Rosa's execution, the third carried out this year by the Texas Department of Corrections, came after two days of unsuccessful appeals by his attorneys.

Late Tuesday, the U.S. Supreme Court voted 7-2 to deny him new hearings. Then Gov. Mark White, as he has in previous death sentences, refused to grant a 30-day reprieve.

On Monday, de la Rosa was turned down by a federal appeals court and the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles.

Jesse de la Rosa

After a steak dinner for his final meal, he spoke by telephone for about 20 minutes to a longtime friend, Margie Garcia of San Antonio, and shortly after 8 p.m. he received communion from a prison priest, the Rev. Stephen Walsh.

It was the second death date for de la Rosa, who said in an interview a week ago that he was coerced into confessing to the slaying of Ghazali. He refused, however, to identify the triggerman.

A store clerk shot earlier the same night in a $40 robbery identified de la Rosa, who was 18 at the time. De la Rosa has said he had been drinking and smoking marijuana that night, but was at a friend's house when Ghazali was walked to the back of the store to a cooler and shot twice in the head.

Asked if the execution relieved her, Ghazali's wife Gloria replied: "It does," then hung up the telephone.

JAIL

The jail currently is under a remedial order which limits the inmate population to 85 even though the jail has 101 bunks. Today, the inmate count was 70, while an additional seven inmates were farmed out to other West County county jails.

County Attorney Mark Dettman said the Jail Commission "can change" the remedial order and "do whatever they want" from further reducing the limit on inmates to closing the jail.

He said the drafting of a jail master plan is "the proper thing to do."

"They (Jail Commission) will know where we are going," Dettman said. "I'm sure it won't cost $3 million" to renovate the 12-year-old jail on the fifth floor of the 1930-vintage courthouse. "I know they (county commissioners) will be as economical as they can."

IN HIS REPORT, Slater faulted the jail for:

— Insufficient cell space to house and separate inmates according to classifications.

— Flaws in the voice communication system between inmates and jailers via a 48-speaker system.

— Too small of a laundry room, which was in "disrepair" and which was not separated by a two-hour fire-rating wall from inmates.

— No firewall between the kitchen and laundry room.

— Inadequate administrative, program and clerical space.

— Not having a secure inmate exercise area outside the undeveloped "bull pen" area, which is to be converted into cell space in the renovation. Commissioners are considering building a secure roof-top exercise area for inmates.

— Not having at least 30 percent single cells as required by the jail standards. Currently, the jail has 28 percent single cells, as 28 of the 101 bunks are in single cells. Others are in dormitory and multi-occupancy cells.

— Having 11 two-bunk cells containing fewer than the required square footage for two-bunk cells.

— Not having "reliable remote means to unlock all cell doors.

— Not providing a watercloset in the holding cell.

— Not furnishing two separation cells with showers.

— Inadequate lighting in inmate areas.

— Problems with the plumbing due to erratic water pressure, which causes watercloset "not to function at all times."

— Not maintaining and making readily available for inspection records of jail life-safety plans, drills and inspection of equipment.

— Not bringing the jail standpipe and fire hose system up to standards set by the National Fire Protection Association.

In addition, Slater said that recommendations stemming from inspections by the Texas Health Department, the Midland fire marshal and the city's plumbing and electrical inspectors should be "incorporated into (the) planned renovation."

PAINTER NOTED that Slater's testing of the jail's smoke-purging system proved satisfactory.

"It works just great," he said. "And the alarm went off in seconds."

The sheriff said the jail's communication system has "always been just barely adequate. It needs improvement."

Painter noted that the drafting of a jail master plan for approval by the Jail Commission could save the county "some money in the long run."

Commissioner Wally Craig said he "wouldn't even begin to guess" on the cost of the renovation. "But from the sounds of it, it's going to be fairly expensive."

"If we're going to do this," Craig said. "let's do it right."

Commissioner Durward Wright said the commissioners would be doing their "very best to expedite as rapidly as we can" the renovation and to resolve jail problems.

Commissioner Win Brown said the renovation is "going to cost a lot of money without hardly any increase" in inmate capacity.

"If we can't expand that population significantly up there," he said, "I really want to make a public issue of it and say 'This is what we are faced with. Now where do we go from here.'" Brown favored a new jail apart from the courthouse. The proposed jail would have had cells for 225 inmates and could have been equipped to handled 75 more inmates and eventually could have been expanded to house 600 prisoners in maximum security.

BILL WILLIAMS, spokesman for the Concerned Citizens Committee, said he has devised a plan to increase the jail's bunk capacity from 101 to 126 by installing dormitory and multi-occupancy cells for 48 inmates in the "bull pen" area and deleting 23 bunks in bringing the jail up to standards.

"That's the best way to get the most for the least square footage," he said of emphasis on dormitory-type cells. The Jail Commission allows up to 40 percent of a jail's cells to be dormitory cells.

Williams, a Midland businessman, said a free-enterprise approach to upgrading the jail could be more efficient than the traditional governmental approach.

"I could take two days of meetings and an amateur architect and have this thing drawn up...if it was private enterprise," he said. However, William said the county would be "very fortunate" to have the renovation completed within six months.

"The quicker the better," County Commissioner Scott Welch said of the renovation. "I'm sure there are a lot of contractors ready to go to work. We've finally got something to work on...I'm roaring and ready to go. I'll bet the Jail Commission is roaring and ready for us to go."

WATER

not replenishable. Water may be a little more expensive initially in getting it from Stacy rather than T-Bar. But the Stacy cost would be reduced" when compared to the cost of the pipeline the city would have to install from Winkler County.

"Maybe we're asking for more than we should," said Poe of the 15,000 acre-feet. But if we ask for less we'll have to turn around and go to Winkler County sooner."

Lowe pointed out that since the idea of Stacy Dam was initiated in the 1970s, the consensus of the council had been that Midland would participate in it.

The next step will be for the council to set an election where voters will decide if they want to proceed with a bond sale, and that election could be as early as August.

In other action, the council passed a resolution to exempt state and local governmental employees from the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act, although Council Member Oralia Corrales objected. City Attorney David Reagan said the Act restricts employees to a 40-hour work week, and overtime must be paid for more than 40 hours worked that week. Midland already pays overtime, said Poe, but an employee occasionally wants to save those hours and take compensating time off another week. This act requires that time be taken off the week that it is worked.

Ms. Corrales said she opposed the resolution because it isn't giving the employees a chance to get paid overtime for their hours.

The council approved $165,676 in writing off bad customer accounts. In many cases, said Finance Director Troy Gifford, some of the accounts were two years old, the people had left town or the companies had gone bankrupt.

Bart Hotchkiss was elected mayor pro tem, an amended planned district of Racquet Club South was approved and a piece of land bordered by Big Spring and Marienfeld streets will be advertised for sale.

BUDGET

Rep. Delbert Latta of Ohio, senior Republican on the panel, claimed the Democratic plan "takes too much out of defense" and not enough from domestic programs. "To get out of this mess we're in, you've got to terminate programs, and they're not doing it," he said.

But Democratic members portrayed the plan as a mixture of defense- and domestic-spending restraint.

"It's not as if we're just taking defense and not doing anything else," said Rep. Tom Downey, D-N.Y., as Democrats completed their plan in a day-long series of closed-door meetings. There are "some sort of cuts" in popular domestic programs such as transportation, urban aid and the Economic Development Administration, he added.

Gray told reporters that low-income programs would be "protected," and other sources said food stamps, welfare, Medicaid and Supplemental Security Income would be allowed to grow with inflation.

Medicare would be cut, but not as much as in the Senate plan, which would trim $16.3 billion over three years.

Other sources who asked not to be identified by name said federal workers' pay would be frozen for a year under the House plan, that Amtrak rail passenger subsidies would be retained but cut 10 percent, and that general revenue sharing would be preserved for at least another year, but at a 25 percent reduction in the federal expenditure.

The House plan, like the Senate version, would keep alive but at reduced levels the Small Business Administration, the Jobs Corps and mass transit grants — programs Reagan originally sought to scrap.

But the Democratic "alternative" would continue all of the 13 programs the Senate-passed budget would eliminate, including the Appalaiachian Regional Commission, the Economic Development Administration and urban development action grants.

No detailed information on precise cuts was available.

On defense, the sources said the Democratic plan would freeze spending authority, and assume additional savings in the belief that the Pentagon has been slower than expected in spending money approved in earlier years.

The other major difference between the House and Senate plans is Social Security benefit increases, which Democrats voted to maintain without change.

"I'd have to say Democrats are opposed to cutting (the increases) four-to-one," said Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass.

Even so, the sources said four or five of the 20 Democrats on the Budget Committee have expressed support for some type of curtailment in the benefit increases, and may support amendments either when the committee meets or in the full House.

Republicans are certain to oppose the Democratic blueprint. Budget Director David Stockman met with several GOP lawmakers during the day, but officials said no decision had been made on whether to propose a Republican alternative to the Democratic plan, or seek its demise by proposing a series of amendments targeted to individual programs.

SAFETY

Teresa Vaughn Alldredge, a student, was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine on State Highway 349 about 20 miles south of Midland, according to the Department of Public Safety. Her body was taken to Thomas Funeral Home.

Ms. Alldredge was traveling south on SH 349 at 4:40 p.m. when she slowed to make a turn on County Road 300 and was hit from behind by a Mac truck-tractor pulling a trailer, reports said.

Ms. Alldredge's 1982 Ford Thunderbird, which burst into flames, was pushed into a barrow ditch while the truck-tractor continued south, rolled over on its top and came to rest in a pasture, reports said.

Witnesses said the driver of the truck, 21-year-old Evajelio Mateio Uballe, was pinned inside before Midlander Andrew Hadik, 3310 Claremont, pulled him out of the truck moments before it exploded into flames.

A passenger in the 1975 Mac truck, 26-year-old Fernando Hernandez, a roustabout from Odessa, escaped with only minor injuries. He was treated and released at Midland Memorial Hospital and Uballe was listed this morning in stable condition with a foot injury at Odessa's Medical Center Hospital.

DPS Trooper Jim Swain investigated the accident. He was assisted by members of the Rankin Fire Department, who responded to the accident.

AGE

"Our kids in the (lower Rio Grande) Valley are going to be crossing the border into Mexico. They are going to be traveling further and it's going to be more dangerous for them," he said.

"We are going to create a blood border on the Mexican border," said Moreno, adding that "anyone who's old enough to hold a dollar bill can buy a drink" in Mexico.

Armbrister's decision to hold up the open container bill has been blasted by Senate sponsor Bill Sarpalius, D-Canyon.

The bill would prove ineffective, according to Armbrister, a former policeman who said drivers quickly could pass their drink to a passenger — who would not be covered by the Sarpalius measure.

He also fired back at Sarpalius, who blasted Armbrister at a news conference last Thursday.

"What Sarpalius is is a liar," he said. "He has said to the press he has 77 names (of House members backing the bill). Why doesn't he bring them to me?

"Mr. Sarpalius, you have to realize, has not passed any effective legislation in his career as a legislator. It's obvious he wants to run for statewide office against an incumbent — Jim Hightower, the agriculture commissioner. He is trying to use something to pin his hat on," said Armbrister.

"I'm not a part of that. My people in my district sent me up here to pass effective legislation, something that will do something for the problem, not to enhance Mr. Sarpalius' political ambitions," he added.

The prevailing feeling on the House floor is to avoid a vote on the open container bill, according to Armbrister.

He said there is still some hope for passage of a bill to increase the penalties for drunken driving convictions in which a motorist was drinking behind the wheel.

MOVE

"The fire did start inside the house," said Sambor, who ordered the bomb dropped. He said police had tested the bomb on wood-and-tar paper structures without starting any fires.

"To the best of our knowledge, the MOVE members had spread flammable material in their compound and in neighboring areas," he said, in explaining why the fire burned so hot and spread so quickly.

MOVE members had said they were "preapared to die," he said.

MOVE follows a philosophy espoused by its founder, Vincent Leaphart, who later took the name John Africa. Its members, who use the surname Africa, eschewed contact with bureaucracy and kept scores of dogs and welcomed rats into their home as part of their back-to-nature outlook.

Some residents said the police overreacted and should not have used a helicopter to bomb the house, which authorities believed contained explosives.

Aymara women sell fish in a La Paz, Bolivia, market where 100,000 pesos, about 80 cents, can buy two pounds. Bolivia's inflation rate has been estimated to be at 100,000 percent.

Bolivia inflation rate at 100,000 percent

By CHARLES J. HANLEY

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — At La Paz's airport, the customs agent ignores the visitor's luggage and instead offers a smile and a deal — black-market pesos for dollars.

Downtown, bowler-hatted Indian women line the steep cobblestoned streets, peddling contraband goods, from candy to electronics.

In the bank buildings along Avenida Camacho, loan officers calmly punch the latest interest rate — 786 percent — into their calculators.

That's a bargain. Over the past six months, Bolivia's annual inflation rate has been estimated at a stunning 100,000 percent, meaning thousand-fold price increases.

The Bolivian peso is now almost valueless — trading for 165,000 to the U.S. dollar on the black market — and Bolivians must carry bulky bricks of 10,000- and 50,000-peso banknotes with them to make everyday purchases.

"The only thing the crisis has done for us," they joke, "is to make us all millionaires."

The Third World's debt crisis has touched bottom here in this 2½-mile-high South American capital, a pocket of skyscrapers and sprawl of poverty set spectacularly in the heart of the Andes. And what is happening in Bolivia foreshadows what could go wrong elsewhere in heavily indebted Latin America.

Practically speaking, this nation of 6 million people has been in default since announcing last May it was suspending payments on its $801-million debt to U.S. and other foreign commercial banks.

But Bolivia has not repudiated the debt or actually been declared in default. For world bankers, that would set a nightmarish precedent.

"By ourselves, we're not that great a burden on the banks," Sen. Fernando Bautista, a former finance minister in the current center-left government, told a reporter in La Paz's musty old Congress building.

"But we're an example," he said. "We could distort the whole world financial system." A Bolivian default might prompt international creditors to begin seizing assets and recalling loans of other big debtors.

The world debt emergency developed in 1982 because Third World governments had over-borrowed, recession cut into their international earnings, and interest rates rose sharply.

Country after country declared it could not meet its obligations. New arrangements were made — "stretch-outs" of bank payment schedules overseen by the International Monetary Fund, the Western-dominated lending agency that also made its own emergency loans. In return, the Third World governments cut back spending at home.

Third World foreign debt now totals more than $900 billion, $350 billion of it owed by Latin American governments.

By 1984, the crisis appeared manageable, as Latin America began earning more by exporting to the booming U.S. economy. But now the U.S. rebound is faltering, interest rates remain high, and the IMF has suspended its loans to two big debtors, Brazil and Argentina, because they have not taken painful budgetary measures needed to stop their triple-digit inflation.

International regulators fear that Argentina, Brazil and other nations might spin out of control toward "hyperinflation," Bolivian-style.

One example of the financial catastrophe in this dirt-poor country:

Three years ago, when the dollar was exchanged for 196 pesos, a Bolivian could buy a U.S.-made pickup truck for 4.5 million pesos. Today, with the dollar drawing 165,000 pesos, that same 4.5 million pesos buys no more transportation than a pair of gym shoes.

The economists blame Bolivia's crisis on unwise borrowing by the generals who ruled during the 1970s and early 1980s, on a decline in prices for Bolivia's tin exports, on drought and other natural disasters, and on government instability. The current administration of President Hernan Siles Zuazo is the 11th Bolivian government in seven years.

Most of Bolivia's total foreign debt of $3.3 billion consists of low-interest loans from the World Bank and other governments, on which it continues making payments.

But the Siles government has not reached agreement with the IMF for new emergency credits that would enable Bolivia to mend relations with the foreign commercial banks.

With few fresh dollars coming in to trade off with the peso, the value of the Bolivian currency has collapsed, and with it the economy. The Bolivian gross domestic product has shrunk by 18 percent since 1982, and 40 percent of the work force is jobless or underemployed.

Siles has taken some IMF-prescribed austerity steps, raising the fixed prices of gasoline and other staples, and trying to hold down wage increases.

'Out of the mouths of babes'

MOUNTAIN HOME, Ark. (AP) — Out of the mouths of babes come clever conclusions for cliches. That's what fifth-grade teacher Sue Calway learned when she asked her pupils to devise their own endings for popular aphorisms.

A sampling:

"People who live in glass houses use a lot of Windex."

"If you can't stand the heat, go to Antarctica."

"Early to bed, early to rise, makes you miss 'Saturday Night Live.'"

"Birds of a feather get eaten together."

"He who laughs last is a very slow person."

Ms. Calway said the student offerings were so refreshing that she sent them to NBC's "Tonight" show.

CHICAGO (AP) — Paul Marino was so flattered by his notice to register for the draft that he decided to travel from his home in California to a center here to find out what kind of job they might offer a man pushing 70.

"If they'd give me a 69-year-old's job, I might consider that," said Marino, who served in the Army during World War II and spent 25 years with the U.S. Postal Service before retiring seven years ago.

Marino flew from his home in Ceres, Calif., to present his notice at the system's central data office north of Chicago.

The veteran said he was combining business with pleasure. Five of his six living children live in the Chicago area.

Army Lt. Col. James F. Cantwell, the acting Midwest region director for the Selective Service System, said the goof happens all the time.

"We've sent them to women, to pregnant women, to dogs," he said. "We secure lists from a number of people and places — the Department of Motor Vehicles, the Department of Defense, voter registration rolls and high schools" among them.

Polish Politburo member resigns

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — A member of the Communist Party's Politburo who supervised the security police has resigned, apparently over the scandal that grew out of the secret police killing of a pro-Solidarity priest last October.

Meanwhile, Solidarity leader Lech Walesa late Tuesday said "it appeared to be true" that an underground group had approached a convicted murderer about assassinating Walesa.

The government also announced Tuesday that three prominent Solidarity activists would go on trial May 23 on charges of inciting unrest and conducting illegal union activities.

The official PAP news agency said Miroslaw Milewski had resigned the Politburo seat he had held since 1981. It gave no reason for the resignation, but party spokesman Jerzy Majka said Milewski quit for personal reasons, and he denied any link to the killing of the Rev. Jerzy Popieluszko.

However, other party sources and Western diplomats said his resignation from both the Politburo and Central Committee was linked to the murder of Popieluszko, 37, a popular and outspoken critic of the government.

One Western diplomat, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said there was no indication Milewski was implicated in Popieluszko's death, but that he was held responsible for creating a climate that encouraged lawlessness in the security police.

Milewski, 57, was a noted hardliner and career security officer who served as interior minister in 1980-81. He rarely was mentioned in the official party press after Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski personally took over his functions in November. No replacement was named.

Milewski's resignation was announced at the start of the second day of a Central Committee meeting that was called to deal with problems of intellectual life.

Three new Central Committee members were appointed, including Gen. Jozef Baryla, a deputy defense minister and close ally of Jaruzelski, PAP said.

The slaying of Popieluszko triggered a scandal in the Interior Ministry, which is in charge of the security police.

In February, a court sentenced a secret police captain and two of his lieutenants to from 14 to 25 years in jail for murdering Popieluszko. Their commanding officer, a colonel, received a 25-year-sentence for instigating the crime.

Government spokesman Jerzy Urban said a Gdansk prosecutor was investigating a report by a man who said he was approached by a group seeking to assassinate Lech Walesa.

WORLD IN BRIEF

About 25,000 blacks attend leader's funeral

TSAKANE, South Africa (NYT) — With the army and the police standing guard, more than 25,000 blacks attended the funeral Tuesday of a union leader who died after being held in police custody.

The union leader, Andrids Raditsela, 29, died in the hospital on May 6 after being detained two days earlier by police in this township near the white town of Brakpan, just west of Johannesburg. A pathologist hired by his family said he died of brain damage consistent with a blow or a fall.

Labor leaders had called for workers to stay away from their jobs to mark the burial but only a handful of people seemed to heed the call, possibly because of poor organization and a deepening recession in this white-led nation.

Early Tuesday, three bomb explosions rocked government offices in Brakpan, but there were no reports of injuries and no one immediately took responsibility for the blasts.

Man swims to freedom

HANOVER, West Germany (AP) — A 45-year-old man from Communist East German swam the Elbe River to escape to West Germany, border police said.

A police statement said the man swam to West Germany on Tuesday without being noticed by guards on the heavily fortified East German bank of the river.

Police, citing official policy, declined to identify the man or to provide further details of the escape.

The customary police silence in such cases is intended to protect relatives left behind in East Germany, authorities said.

Disease death toll rises

STAFFORD, England (AP) — The death toll in the world's worst known outbreak of Legionnaires' disease rose to 37 today, and six nurses have contracted the pneumonia-like illness; health officials said.

Jim Bartlett, general manager of the Mid-Staffordshire Health Authority, said blood tests confirmed Legionnaires' disease among six female nurses at Stafford District General Hospital in central England.

Bartlett said all six nurses had recovered and were continuing to work at the hospital. He said there was no danger to the public because Legionnaires' disease is non-contagious.

"They won't pass anything on to anyone else," the health official told a news conference. "The disease cannot be passed from person to person."

Elections seen as test of IRA's political strength

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Residents of the embattled British province of Northern Ireland vote today in local elections seen as a test of the strength of the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

It is the first time the overwhelmingly Catholic IRA's legal political wing, Sinn Fein, has ever contested elections across the predominately Protestant province and promised to take whatever seats it wins and participate actively in politics.

Sinn Fein's participation is a switch from the previous strategy of "abstentionism," whereby elected Sinn Fein officials would boycott the bodies to which they were elected.

Abstentionism is believed to have cost them the votes of those who sympathize with the IRA but want to be represented in government.

About 1.1 million people are eligible to vote. First results are expected Thursday morning, but voting trends for councilors in 26 local authorities are unlikely to be detectable before Thursday evening.

About two years ago, Sinn Fein decided to opt for politics, although it still supports armed struggle against British rule. Sinn Fein has called its policy a strategy of "the Armalite (assault rifle) and the ballot box."

DELORA SAYS -- "THIS IS A GREAT SALE". Harriet is building a new house in Mission Dorado. She told me, she looked around one morning and said "What am I doing with all this stuff I haven't used in years?" Together with her family they have sorted and come up with a Big Variety from Cowboy Boots to a $20,000 Kirman rug and a $45,000 Ruby Ring. Harriet is delightful to work with and this is going to be a fun sale.

No drunk drivers

Ever since Texas toughened up on its drunk driving law, we've been hearing how truly, hard-nose are the statute's provisions. Granted, a violator stands a better chance nowadays of doing jail time if picked up for driving while intoxicated, but the law isn't as tough as some may assume — when compared with similar laws in other countries.

Recently, we read an article in The Dallas Police News which revealed that actual "hard-nose" laws for driving drunk do exist elsewhere in the world and Texas drinkers can thank their lucky stars they don't have to drive in those places.

For example, in Australia the names of drunk drivers are sent to the local newspapers and are printed under the heading, "He's Drunk and In Jail."

In Finland, Sweden and England, drunk drivers receive an automatic jail term of about one year.

Drunk drivers in Malaya go to jail and, if they're married, their spouses go to jail, too.

Any driver with more than 0.5 percent alcohol in his blood in Norway automatically goes to a special jail at the site of a World War II Nazi camp where he chops wood, crushes rock and tills the soil. In addition to serving time in this labor camp, the drunk driver loses his license for a year for a first offense and permanently if he is a chronic alcoholic.

In South Africa, a drunk driver is given a 10-year prison sentence, a fine of $10,000 or both.

In Turkey, drunk drivers are taken 20 miles from town by police and forced to walk back under escort.

And in Bulgaria, a person's second drunk driving conviction is his last because the sentence for a second offense is execution.

But nowhere is the law for drunk driving more severe, apparently, than in San Salvador where drunk drivers are executed by a firing squad on first offense.

That's a sobering drunk driving law designed to end the problem once and for all!

Another View:

Stop revolving door

As secretary of the Navy in the Carter administration, Edward Hidalgo negotiated a settlement that awarded General Dynamics, the nation's largest defense contractor, $484 million in cost overruns for building attack submarines. Upon leaving the Pentagon, he went to work as a consultant to General Dynamics and soon was paid $66,000 in fees for the firm's unsuccessful bid to sell fighter planes to Spain.

Although Hidalgo insists that there was no connection between the settlement and the fees, and although he denied charges by a former General Dynamics executive that the company indicated it would "take care" of him after he left the Navy, a strong appearance of conflict of interest remains.

In a similar case, George Sawyer, the former assistant Navy secretary in charge of shipbuilding programs, left to take a job with General Dynamics as an executive earning $210,000 a year. General Dynamics Chairman David Lewis told a congressional subcommittee that he had discussed with Sawyer the possibility of a job at least three months before he left the Navy — a period during which Sawyer oversaw billions of dollars worth of General Dynamics shipbuilding contracts and authorized negotiations with the company on a new submarine agreement.

Those are only the most notable examples of what has become an alarming increase in such revolving-door relationships between defense contractors and the Pentagon officials supposed to monitor cost overruns, poor quality and late deliveries. During a recent three-year period, 2,240 senior military and civilian Defense Department officials left to take jobs with major defense contractors. In many instances, they had been in charge of contracts or programs with the very contractors they later joined, at handsome salaries. With military procurement running $100 billion a year, the temptations to engage in cozy arrangements before the formal change of employment have to be almost irresistible.

Although current statutes restrict former officials from acting as sales agents to the Pentagon or representing private firms in dealings that entail matters in which the former official was substantially involved at the Pentagon, they don't prohibit subsequent lucrative job payoffs.

Consequently, reform proposals in Congress have gained considerable momentum. Among the measures designed to curb what can amount to untouchable bribery is a bill by Rep. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif. It would bar personnel with such sensitive government posts from taking jobs for at least five years with contractors over whom they have had management responsibility. That would go a long way toward stopping the revolving door. Boxer's bill, or something like it, should have the highest priority at a time when the failure to curb defense-cost overruns has become a major scandal and an enormous waste of tax dollars.

'Revolving door' under scrutiny

WASHINGTON — One of the hottest issues that will be debated this week when Congress takes up the defense budget is the Pentagon's notorious "revolving door." Pentagon officials have moved through this door into cushy jobs with the defense contractors they dealt with when they worked for the government.

Jack Anderson

The most glaring recent example is George Sawyer, a former assistant secretary of the Navy for shipbuilding and logistics, who is now executive vice president for land systems at General Dynamics, the nation's third largest defense contractor.

A grand jury in New Haven, Conn., is studying evidence that Sawyer was discussing his possible employment at General Dynamics between March and May 1983, while he was still at the Pentagon.

According to the Defense Department inspector general, Joseph H. Sherick, Sawyer "had the authority to and did make decisions affecting General Dynamics" during that period.

The revolving door is in pretty heavy use at General Dynamics. Sawyer was only one of 69 retired or resigned military personnel who joined the company in 1983. Since 1974, the corporation has hired 526 former military or civilian employees of the Defense Department.

With the Sawyer case in mind, several members of Congress are pushing for an amendment to the Pentagon budget that would slow the revolving door — or at least make it squeak when used.

For years the Pentagon's official view was that there was nothing wrong with former employees going to work for defense contractors, and the repeated disclosures of revolving door cases were nothing to be concerned about.

But last March, Deputy Defense Secretary William H. Taft IV told Congress: "We recognize there is room to improve ... public perception of employee integrity. I recognize that many people are uncomfortable with the present situation."

In short, Taft wasn't conceding that there is anything intrinsically wrong with the revolving door — only with the "public perception" that there may be something wrong.

An unreleased "action memo" prepared for Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger last January reflects Taft's view of the problem. But it also makes clear that the Pentagon has been lax in enforcing even the conflict-of-interest law that already applies to former defense employees. The law bars a former employee from dealing with his former military office for two years in his new job, and from ever working on a specific contract he handled while in the department.

Former employees are required to submit annual disclosure forms, describing their current employment and supposedly alerting the Pentagon to possible conflicts of interest. But the memo, obtained by our associate Tony Capaccio, concedes that "minimal resources have been devoted to the standards of conduct program," and warns: "More detailed reports from former mid- and high-level officials may be required."

Noting that Weinberger already has the authority to prescribe more stringent reporting, the memo concedes that the Defense Department has been "reluctant to take this step."

The memo notes that the media and congressional critics "presume that a government official will ignore shortcomings in contractor performance to curry favor and obtain post-departure employment." But it adds:

"This view flies in the face of common sense. A contractor is not likely to hire a disloyal person who is willing to cheat his government employer because such an individual is likely to cheat any employer."

But the memo points out that something probably has to be done. It notes that a staff member of the Senate Armed Forces Committee warned that "greater education or enforcement efforts" may be necessary to "forestall damaging legislation."

Defense Department sources said they are accepting this suggestion and modifying current disclosure forms to require more information.

THE OMBUDSMAN: If you're young, black or Hispanic and are heading north in a late-model car with Florida tags, the stretch of U.S. 40 on the New Jersey side of the Delaware Memorial Bridge is a speed trap set just for you. At least that's the suspicion of some attorneys in Salem County, N.J.

They believe the Jersey state troopers have a profile of potential drug couriers heading for the Big Apple from the South, and anyone who fits it is likely to be pulled over for driving as little as four miles an hour over the speed limit. Once stopped, the car's occupants are asked to submit to a search. If they refuse, they're given a "pat-down" and taken into custody.

If they "voluntarily" allow a search, they often wind up with their luggage strewn over the shoulder and their car's seats ripped out, attorneys told our reporter Mark Woolley.

New Jersey officials deny the use of a suspect profile. But they point to the success of the police effort: In 1984 there were 294 felony arrests and $447,299 worth of stolen cars and firearms, $14.6 million worth of cocaine and $1.7 million worth of marijuana were confiscated.

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: Bulgarian soldiers have been pressed into service to help the Soviets in Afghanistan. Among other chores, they guard the road between Jelalabad and Kabul. One source said the Bulgarians may have been in Afghanistan since early 1983.

Gorbachev isn't typical Russian

LONDON — From the talk of London, Mikhail and Raisa Gorbachev are going to give President and Mrs. Reagan, the great masters of TV-manship, some racy competition if they arrive as expected in New York in the fall. In fact, word has filtered through from Moscow that the Soviet leader has a hankering to include a visit to the Reagan ranch at Santa Barbara, which would turn the "informal summit" into a grand-tour performance.

Gorbachev showed in his V-E Day speech in Moscow that he can be as tough and aggressive as any of his Kremlin predecessors when it comes to denouncing the West and blaming it for all of the world's present and past woes, including Hitler's war.

Flora Lewis

But he and his wife also showed during their week in London last year that they are susceptible to Western luxury and glitter, regardless of the call for more austerity and discipline at home in the Soviet Union.

Three anecdotes widely repeated here among high officials and some people with access to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's office make the point. They haven't been directly confirmed, so they can't be offered as assured fact. But they do give the flavor still lingering after the Gorbachev appearance. Enough people were in a position to know the details, if not to acknowledge them publicly, to give the stories more weight than idle gossip.

The visit was in December, before Gorbachev became the top leader but, in hindsight, doubtless after he was sure of the succession. One item on the program was a pilgrimage to the cemetery in Highgate where Karl Marx is buried. The Gorbachevs did not go. It was a blustery day. The word is that Mrs. Gorbachev told their escorts to deposit the obligatory wreath because she was determined to see something else — the crown jewels in the Tower of London.

Toward the end of the trip, after Mrs. Thatcher had left for a visit to China, they suddenly ordered their motorcade to stop at the blocked entrance to Downing Street. Gorbachev said he wanted to see the prime minister's residence once more. He got out of the car and tried to argue his way past the barricades. At first the guards sarcastically refused to believe who he was, but then, flustered, they accepted the evidence. The Gorbachevs were given another private look around the house to examine the decor.

The best story starts at the formal dinner that Mrs. Thatcher gave for her Soviet guests early in the visit. Mrs. Gorbachev admired the diamond and sapphire earrings that the prime minister was wearing. Impatient with that kind of small talk, Mrs. Thatcher accepted the compliment stiffly. But Mrs. Gorbachev insisted on knowing where they were from.

Finally, the prime minister called over her husband, Denis, who had bought the jewels as an anniversary gift some years before, and asked him to tell Mrs. Gorbachev the name of the shop. It was Cartier.

A couple of days later the director of Cartier called Downing Street in some embarrassment. Mrs. Gorbachev and her cohorts were there demanding to see a pair of the same earrings. They were still in stock, but he wanted to know if the prime minister would have any objection to showing them in the surprising circumstances. She didn't. Mrs. Gorbachev bought the earrings and paid with an American credit card.

Efforts to check the story drew a blank. At first Cartier was evasive, but after a number of people called, the store said it had reviewed its charge slips and found no record of a purchase by Raisa Gorbachev. The press office at Downing Street denied even hearing of the incident. "I don't even know if the prime minister wore earrings the night of the dinner," a spokesman said. Discretion was to be expected. It hasn't stopped continuing chuckles in London's upper social set.

The incidents don't tell anything about Gorbachev's policies and the positions he is likely to take in a meeting with Reagan. But they do give some clues to his personality and to his supreme self-confidence despite a minimum of contact with the West.

Mrs. Thatcher has said she was charmed by him. Instead of sticking rigidly to reading prepared papers during their official talks in the usual Kremlin fashion, Gorbachev spoke to her from brief notes and responded to questions.

This is a new kind of Kremlin leader, neither wooden like the three of recent years, nor impetuously earthy like Nikita Khrushchev. He is certainly Russian, but out of the stereotypes. He can deal with Western ways, despite the profound difference in ideas and attitudes. It will take some adjustment by Americans, once he appears on the U.S. scene, to recognize that looking and acting familiar doesn't mean thinking on the same lines.

Toilet seat factor hurt defense

In last week's Senate budget vote, the Defense Department wound up with a zero growth figure for 1986, which was quite a comedown from the 9 percent increase Secretary Weinberger had originally asked for. It came as no surprise to Harold Simon, who keeps track of Pentagon spending.

Art Buchwald

"The Secretary has nobody to blame but his toilet seats," Harold said.

I seemed puzzled so he continued. "Weinberger lost the battle for more funds the day the story broke that the Defense Department was paying $600 a seat. I call it the 'Toilet Seat Factor' or 'TSF.' For several years Charley Taxpayer bought the whole Pentagon Disneyland package, MX missiles and all. Charley assumed our defense brass were handling his money as they would their own. The poor guy had no idea how much to pay for an F-16 fighter, M-1 tank or Trident submarine, so he gave his proxy to Weinberger and his merry band of men. After all, when you start talking millions and billions of dollars you are no longer talking Charley's language.

"But then came the revelations about the $600 Lockheed commode cover and suddenly Charley said, 'Hey, wait a minute. What kind of a dummy do you think I am? I may not know the price of a B-1 bomber but I sure as hell know what a toilet seat costs — and it ain't $600 — no way.'

"For the want of a reasonably priced seat, the battle for the big toys was lost. Weinberger's people misread Charley's patriotism as a sign they could throw around his money, particularly at a time when the government was cutting student aid for his kids, and freezing his mother's Social Security payments."

"I thought it was the news of the $400 hammer and $780 screwdriver that got Charley mad."

"The price of the hammer and screwdriver made him more confused than angry. Then came the $7,900 coffeepot. Charley's a good guy and laughed it off. But it was the toilet seat price that got to him. That's why I call it the Pentagon's 'Toilet Seat Factor' rather than the screwdriver or monkey wrench factor. When Charley read about the commode he just opened his window and shouted, 'I'm mad as hell and I'm not going to take it anymore!' The moment I heard him I knew Weinberger had blown his budget request."

"Poor Weinberger," I said. "He probably didn't know any more than Charley what it was costing the American people for an airborne toilet seat."

"That's why the TSF is so important to the Pentagon. They can go to Charley and ask for a billion dollars for a 'Star Wars' laser gun, and he'll write out a check without a whimper. But don't try to con him on an item that costs less than $1,000."

"Does the TSF only apply to hammers, screwdrivers and toilet seats?"

"No, it's become synonymous with hunting lodge weekends, lobbying and public relations fees that the defense contractors have added on to their bills, private plane trips to the Super Bowl, and, of course, kennel boarding charges for executives' dogs. The contractors were nickel and diming poor Charley Taxpayer to death, and he was getting sick of it."

"Maybe when Weinberger counterattacks with announcements about all the new weapons the Soviets have built, Congress will relent and forget the TSF."

"I doubt it."

"How can you be so sure?"

"Charley has spoken and the voice of the taxpayer has been heard in the land. The memory of the commode cover is still too fresh in everyone's mind. The Defense Department has to clean up its act before Charley will give it a blank check again."

"What can Weinberger learn from all this?"

"The lesson is, if you want to avoid a toilet seat factor in the Pentagon, don't ever overcharge the man in the street for something he can price in a hardware store."

Safety debate centers on cabooses

New York Times News Service

SANTA FE, N.M. — The homely caboose, subject of nursery stories and the focus of children's waving hands, has become the object of debate about railroad safety here.

The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway, like most others, is slowly dropping cabooses from its runs, maintaining that modern electronics have eliminated the need for a brakeman and a conductor to bring up the rear of a freight train.

Under an agreement with its unions, the company has already dropped the familiar little car with the cupola on top from about 25 percent of its trips. But New Mexico, under pressure from railroad unions, is considering regulations that would require cabooses on all runs by the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific Railroad, which are to merge soon.

Railroad officials say that adding cabooses in New Mexico would eat up the savings realized from eliminating them elsewhere. But some New Mexico officials say the state would be open to liability suits if a railroad accident within the state was traced to the absence of a caboose.

It is a matter of "health and safety," said Alex Valdez, assistant general counsel to the state Corporation Commission, which regulates transportation within the state. "The question basically comes down to the benefit of the caboose versus the technology that is available to do the same job of monitoring railroad safety."

The commission is expected to issue its regulations soon.

Since brakemen first started using barrels as crude observation posts on the roofs of freight cars, sometime after the Civil War, the caboose has been the post for men monitoring the air pressure in braking systems, watching for dragging equipment, looking out for hazardous load shifts and, most important, checking car axles for overheated bearings that can lead to derailments.

Since those days, said Michael Haverty of the Santa Fe's operations office in Chicago, those functions can be better and more cheaply performed by track-side sensors that scan the trains as they pass.

IT KEEPS SUMMER HEAT OUT.

- Scotchtint Window Insulation Film stops from 59% to 77% of the sun's heat before it enters the building.
- For every 100 sq. ft. of sun-lit glass covered with Scotchtint Window Insulation Film, you can save one ton of air-conditioning.
- Scotchtint Insulation Films can help "equalize" the temperature between the sunny and shadded sides of buildings.
- This means adequate air-conditioning equipment can be run less often, saving fuel bills.
- It also means the usable life of even undersized air-conditioning systems can be lengthened.

Miniseries brings back memories of underground

SULPHUR SPRINGS, Texas (AP) — The Rev. Emil Novak lost a little sleep when a recent television miniseries brought back memories of his experiences in the Hungarian underground during World War II.

In 1944 Novak, a 20-year-old college student and bank clerk in Budapest, entered the underground after German troops invaded the country of Danube.

For the next year he helped Jews find new identities to prevent them from being sent to concentration camnps.

"If you could prove you had a baptismal certificate, you were exempt from going to the gas chamber," said Novak, now pastor at St. James Catholic Church in Sulphur Springs.

However, he said, at the time he was unaware of the mass extermination of the Jews. "We were aware of them being taken to labor camps...I wasn't aware of the extent of the disaster. I wasn't aware of the gassing."

To counter the Nazi threat, Novak worked with a group who provided the baptismal certificates that gave the Jews Christian identities. He lived in a "safe house," a home protected by Swedish diplomatic immunity, printing false certificates.

During that time the house was bombed and a Swedish diplomat appeared to survey the damage and help remove an unexploded bomb. "I suspect he was Wallenberg," Novak said of the man portrayed in the television mini-series, Raoul Wallenberg.

"What movies cannot show is the aerial bombardment — the psychological effect...It was just living hell...It was just devastating and sometimes it was misfired (bombers missed industrial targets, striking residential areas)," he said.

The underground bribed German and Hungarian soldiers, who guarded Jews on forced marches, to look the other way while the rescuers led them to the "safe houses" where they were given new clothing and identity papers. "Unfortunately, some of them were caught," he said of the Jews, who could not leave the country because of German troops on one side and advancing Russian troops on the other.

The advancing Russian troops brought as much terror, or more, to Hungary. "The German experience was violent and short-lived. The Russian experience was violent and protracted," he said. Germans threatened the country for 11 months. For 11 years, the priest felt the might of the U.S.S.R. In 1956, after participating in the thwarted Hungarian fight for freedom, the priest fled the country with his sister. His parents followed the next year.

County forecasts

Midland, Ector, Crane, Upton, Reagan, Glasscock, Andrews, Gaines, Martin, Howard, Borden and DAwson: Tonight: becoming partly cloudy. Lows near 60. Wind southeast 5 to 15 mph. Thursday: partly cloudy and warm with a 20 percent chance of afternoon thunderstorms. Highs upper 80s. Wind southeast 10 to 20 mph.

Storms forecast for Basin

From Staff and Wire Reports

Warmer temperatures and possible afternoon thunderstorms are in the forecast for the Permian Basin area Thursday as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport expects partly cloudy skies tonight and Thursday with a 20 percent chance of afternoon thunderstorms. Temperatures will warm from tonight's low near 60 to a high in the upper 80s Thursday as southeasterly winds increase from five to 15 mph tonight to less than 20 mph Thursday.

Tuesday's high of 81 was 19 degrees below the record set in 1960. This morning's low was 13 degrees above the 1967 record of 40.

STATE

Strong thunderstorms hit far South Texas early today, triggering flash flood warnings near Del Rio in Webb County, where as much as five inches of rain in two hours was reported.

The National Weather Service said the thunderstorms developed near a stationary front that extended across the southern tip of Texas and out into the Gulf of Mexico.

Early morning temperatures were generally in the 50s and 60s. The exceptions were readings in the 40s in extreme West Texas and readings in the 70s in far South Texas. El Paso was the coolest with 47 degrees while Brownsville was the warmest with 79 degrees.

The weather service said the storms would continue throughout the day in South Texas, with a slight chance of afternoon thunderstorms along the coastal plains and Southeast Texas. Afternoon highs were expected to be mostly in the 80s and 90s.

NATION

Thunderstorms rumbled through the nation's midsection today following a rash of tornadoes, while a record-breaking heat wave held its grip on Florida.

Thunderstorms spread through the mid and upper Mississippi Valley, the Ohio Valley and the western Great Lakes region early today.

Several tornadoes were reported in southern Minnesota and central Wisconsin, the National Weather Service said.

It also reported heavy rain in the upper Mississippi Valley and lower Ohio Valley. In southwestern Wisconsin, Mauston had 5½ inches of rain.

Bowa beats out Dunston, Cubs rip Dodgers 8-3

Associated Press

And the new starting shortstop for the Chicago Cubs is...the old starting shortstop, Larry Bowa.

The 39-year-old veteran has won, for now, his fight with 22-year-old Shawon Dunston for the regular role. Bowa had two hits and drove in two runs as the Cubs defeated the Los Angeles Dodgers 8-3 Tuesday night.

After the game, the Cubs announced that Dunston, struggling with a .194 average and nine errors in the field, had been demoted to their AAA farm club in Des Moines.

"I was just happy to play and contribute," said Bowa, who raised his average to .286 (6-for-21). "I got an opportunity tonight and came through."

"Shawon has had a lot of instruction while he has been here. Unfortunately, we might have jammed too much at him," said Cubs president and general manager Dallas Green. "We just felt it was time for him to go down and play and have fun and get his offense together.

"Anytime you make a decision like that, you hope it works out and lasts forever. But we're baseball people, and we recognize a 21-year-old can't recognize game situations that a seasoned veteran can,".

Trailing 2-1, Chicago sent 10 men to the plate in the second inning against Fernando Valenzuela, 3-4. Valenzuela, who had wild-pitched Gary Matthews home from third in the first inning, issued bases-loaded walks to Ryne Sandberg and Keith Moreland after Chicago starter Rick Sutcliffe's RBI single.

An error by Dodger shortstop Mariano Duncan brought the fourth run home.

Moreland, who also had two hits, felt the Cubs' offense was overdue. "We've been winning games with pitching. The guys are just starting to have fun again offensively," he said.

Sutcliffe, 5-3, gave up six hits and four walks, striking out five, in his fourth complete-game victory of the season.

"I'm happier with the way I swung the bat than I am with my pitching," Sutcliffe said.

National League

Astros 10, Expos 0

Seventeen hits — four by Craig Reynolds and three each by Jerry Mumphrey and Bill Doran — eight walks, and three Montreal errors buried the Expos. Mumphrey drove in three runs, while Reynolds knocked in two.

Rookie Ron Mathis combined with Mark Ross, who had been called up from the Pacific Coast League earlier in the day, to seven-hit the Expos and help the Astros to their fourth straight victory. The Astros are second in the NL West, 1½ games behind the Padres.

Padres 6, Cardinals 2

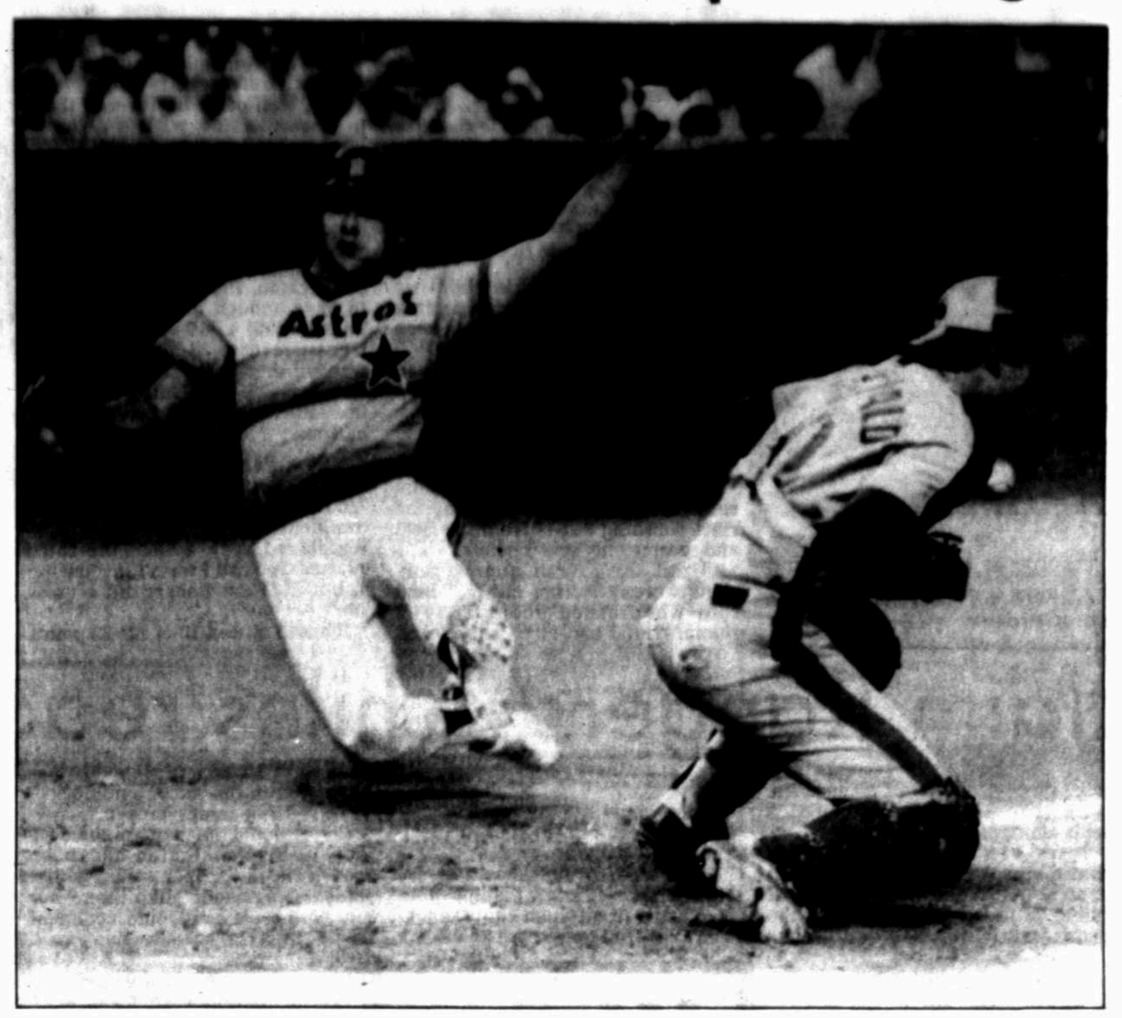

"I'm not as good as that 7-0 record," said Andy Hawkins after pitching five innings to gain the victory. "I'm not making many good pitches. I'm very hittable but I've got guys back there who can make the plays."

Hawkins gave up five hits, including homers to Andy Van Slyke and Darrell Porter, before departing in the sixth. Mark Thurmond earned his first save with four innings of two-hit relief.

Hawkins benefited from a three-run homer by Kevin McReynolds. After getting off to a slow start this year, McReynolds has hit in nine consecutive games, driving in 10 runs over that stretch.

Mets 3, Braves 1

Roger McDowell was perfect in relief, pitching 4 2-3 innings and combining with Calvin Schiraldi on a three-hitter as New York won for the seventh time in eight games.

AP Laserphoto

Houston's Mark Bailey comes flying into home plate as Montreal catcher Mike Fitzgerald tries to haul in the ball as it bounces off his chest protector Tuesday in the Astrodome.

McDowell, 3-1, replaced Schiraldi after Claudell Washington's homer. Schiraldi left with pain in his right foot, which was struck by Washington's infield single in the first inning. The Mets, winners of 11 of their last 15 games, learned after the game that Schiraldi's toe had been broken by the smash.

The Braves lost their sixth game in seven while Rick Mahler lost his second straight game after a 7-0 start. And Dale Murphy lost his hitting streak of 15 games. He went 0-for-4, and struck out twice.

Washington's second homer of the year — both against the Mets — provided the Braves with only their second run in 53 innings.

Giants 3, Pirates 1

Mike Krukow tossed a five-hitter, clubbed two doubles and drove in two runs to lead the Giants. Krukow, 3-2, lowered his earned run average to 1.45 in pitching his third complete game of the season.

Their pitchers have four RBIs in the Giants' last two games. Jim Gott hit two homers Sunday.

Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner expressed concern over Larry McWilliams, 3-3, who hit two batters in a three-run second inning. "His arm felt a little stiff. He thought it would go away, but it didn't. We're going to have him checked out when we get home," Tanner said.

The Pirates had been shut out in three of their last four games but scored Tuesday on Lee Mazzilli's first homer of the year.

Phillies 7, Reds 1

Charles Hudson gave up just one hit over eight innings, but left for a pinch hitter in the top of the ninth with Philadelphia ahead 4-0. "Any time you've got a shutout going — not only me, but any pitcher would be upset," Hudson said. "But I'm not going to cause any bad vibes. I'll just leave it at that."

It was Hudson's first start of the season after 12 relief appearances. Don Carman finished, allowing two hits and a run.

Juan Samuel, who drove in five runs, and Mike Schmidt belted home runs, helping Philadelphia end a seven-game losing streak. Samuel's was a three-run homer in the fifth; Schmidt led off the sixth with his second homer in two games.

Nuggets 'karate' Lakers, 136-114

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley said there might be a slight difference of opinion about the defense the Denver Nuggets used on Lakers' center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar in the second game of their playoff series.

"They played a very physical game," Riley said. "They keyed on Kareem. Some call it good defense ... and others call it karate."

Denver Coach Doug Moe's view, of course, tended to support the "good defense" view after the Nuggets downed the Lakers 136-114 Tuesday night to even their best-of-seven National Basketball Association series 1-1.

"What a game, what a game!" the elated Moe said of the contest that saw Abdul-Jabbar sent to the showers when he drew two technical fouls, the second for wrestling the Nuggets' Danny Schayes to the floor late in the final period.

"We were playing — they were the ones throwing elbows and tackling us," said Moe, whose club hosts the next two games, on Friday and Sunday.

Alex English scored 40 points, including 19 in the final quarter, as the Nuggets sprinted away after leading by just 89-86 at the start of the period.

The Lakers, plagued by poor shooting (47.1 percent) and turnovers (24) throughout the game, grew increasingly frustrated as the Nuggets took control in the fourth quarter.

That frustration erupted when Abdul-Jabbar, held to 4-of-16 shooting from the floor and 13 points, scuffled with Schayes, Denver's reserve center.

Abdul-Jabbar's automatic ejection for drawing two technicals came after Schayes and the Lakers' Earvin "Magic" Johnson tangled briefly under the Nuggets' basket. Abdul-Jabbar grabbed Schayes and rode him to the floor and held him there. No punches were thrown.

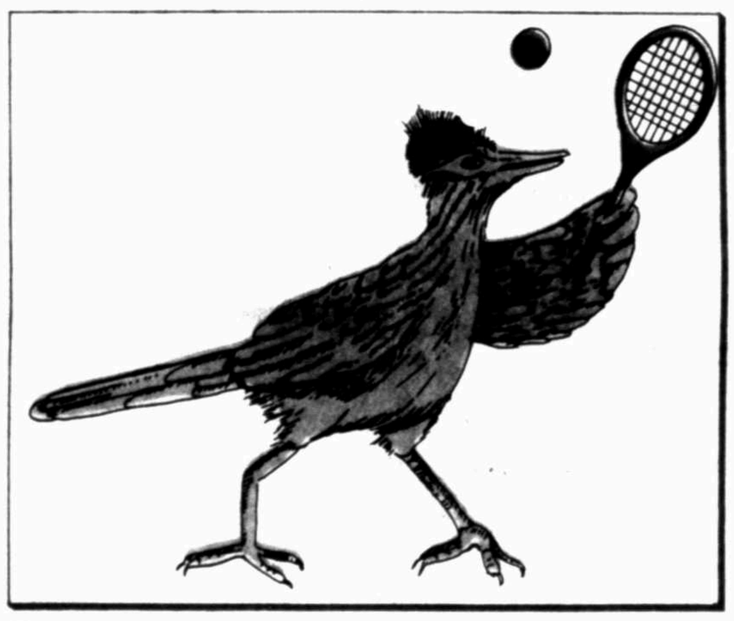

Abdul-Jabbar and Schayes had exchanged shoves a minute before the incident, with that resulting in the Los Angeles center's first technical.

Abdul-Jabbar, out of the game with six minutes to play and the Lakers trailing 113-97, quickly left the Lakers' locker room and was not available for comment.

"I was not out there trying to elbow people, particularly not Abdul-Jabbar," Schayes said. "He's the greatest player that ever lived.

"He was under the assumption that I was elbowing him in the face every time. Magic said I hit him in the face and then Kareem just came up and put a choke hold on me."

Chaps lose few games, no sets at JUCO nationals

OCALA, Fla. — The Midland College women's tennis team barely lost a game Tuesday, much less a set, in the National Junior College Athletic Association tennis tournament here.

The MC women swept through their second day's play in the tournament without losing a single set in either singles or doubles action. Add in two byes and four victories from Monday's opening round and the Lady Chaps have 16 points to rest atop the team standings with four other teams still in contention for first place honors.

In singles action, Helene Lebeller, Charissa Pruim and Jane Howe each posted 6-0, 6-0 shutout victories over their opponents while Sara Swan and Karen Wild dropped only one game each and Rachel Hostutler lost two.

In doubles, Howe and Pruim were the only shutout winners, but Lebeller and Swan walked away with an easy 6-1, 6-1 victory and Hostutler and Wild won by a 6-2, 6-1 count.

Helene Lebeller def. Debbie Anderson, 6-0, 6-0.
Charissa Pruim def. Kim Runblett, J.C. Calhoun, Ga., 6-0, 6-0.
Sara Swan def. Kathy Mithcell, Sinclaire, 6-0, 6-1.
Rachel Hostutler def. Tanya Cochran, Sinclaire, 6-0, 6-2.
Jane Howe def. Denise Noonan, Glendale, Mich., 6-0, 6-0.
Karen Wild def. Kathy Baldwin, Charlee County, Tenn., 6-1, 6-0.
Lebeller-Swan def. Kitterman-Goodwin, Johnson, 6-1, 6-1.
Hostutler-Wild def. Wade-Witherby, Jones County, 6-2, 6-1.
Howe-Pruim def. Lowlese-Burk, Nassau, N.Y., 6-0, 6-0.

Price goes distance in Angel win over Drillers

From Staff Reports

TULSA — Midland Angel pitcher Bryan Price went the distance Tuesday to even his record at 2-2, gaining an 8-2 Texas League decision over the Tulsa Drillers.

Price scattered eight hits and walked four while striking out nine while Terry Johnson lasted 5.0 to take the loss and fall to 0-1. Kirk Killingsworth finished the game.

The Angels used error-free defense to help out Price and, offensively, took advantage of 12 Driller-issued walks to go along with Midland's seven-hit attack.

Leading 5-2 going into the eight inning, the Angels came up with three insurance runs when Reggie Montgomery belted his eighth homer run of the season.

Tulsa's Willie Darkis continued his hitting terror of late, collecting a solo home run for the Drillers in the fourth inning, the third homer of the five-game stand with the Angels and his fifth in the last eight days.

The Angels won the stand, 3-2, and move on to Shreveport tonight where they will take on the Captains.

Even thought the Drillers lost the five-game series to Midland, they still managed to hole a two-game lead over the Jackson Mets in the Eastern Division with a 18-14 record.

Midland improved to 16-19 but remained in the cellar of the Western Division, four games behind front-runner San Antonio.

When the Angels conclude their series in Shreveport, they will return home for a 10-day, 10-game stand at Angel Stadium, facing Tulsa and Shreveport starting Tuesday.

Sports, geography don't mix

The problems and scandals besetting the sports world are so monumental as to dwarf into insignificance what transpires on those "fields of friendly strife," a term General Douglas MacArthur would think twice about using today.

Alcohol, drugs, players' agents, artificial turf, the stale air in domed stadiums, soccer riots and fires, the tv menace...

The list reaches all the way down the left field line and stretches past first base on the way to the right field foul pole. But are any of these maladies worse than what the sports world is doing to our geography or the blatant lies being perpetrated in the name of geography?

How would you like to be a geography teacher today? You'd have more exceptions to explain than an English teacher.

IN THE National Football League, for example, Atlanta and New Orleans, traditionally Dixie, are in the National Conference's Western Division. Dallas is lodge brother in the NFC East, "howdying neighbor" to Washington, St. Louis, New York and Philadelphia. What are they doing to our Wild West?

Baseball hasn't done much to correct erroneous impressions, only compounding the felony by relegating Cincinnati and Atlanta to the National League West.

What happened to the days when East was Boston, New York, Brooklyn and Philadelphia and the West was Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Louis and Pittsburgh and everything else was the bushes?

BUT THAT'S only the beginning of the confusion and deceit being thrust upon an unsuspecting populace by a sports world that has no obligation to the environment.

You've got the Oakland Raiders playing in Los Angeles and the Los Angeles Rams playing in Anaheim, not to mention the New York Giants, on their way to San Jose, hibernating in San Francisco. Basketball isn't much better. The San Diego Clippers play in Los Angeles and the Los Angeles Lakers cavort in Inglewood.

In football, they don't even honor state lines. The New York Giants and New York Jets play in New Jersey. Even before the New York Jets jumped the Hudson, home was Shea Stadium, in Flushing Meadows, not New York City.

But it doesn't stop there. Dallas plays in Irving and the Detroit Lions play in Pontiac when there's air in the roof. The NBA isn't scot free either. The Detroit Pistons really are the Pontiac Pistons.

Things probably won't improve in the NFL. When the Dolphins build their new stadium to replace the Orange Bowl, it probably will be in Coral Gables, not Miami. That will give Coral Gables two more major athletic teams than Miami, since the University of Miami also is located in Coral Gables.

SHOCKED BEYOND words? Well, there's more to come.

Entire leagues practice deception. Baseball has an International League. Once it was truly International with Montreal and Toronto playing with old standbys like Newark, Jersey City, Baltimore, Buffalo and Albany. Now you can't find any of those teams in the league, which lumps Tidewater and Richmond into a circuit that includes Maine, Rochester, Pawtucket and Syracuse. Only if this were 1863 and the Confederacy were in full flower, could the present league be termed International.

Picture, if you will, a geography teacher trying to explain the Pacific Coast League, which, back when life was less complex, bragged of such ocean-side spas as San Diego, Oakland, Los Angeles, Hollywood, and Seattle among its staid members.

Now the PCL includes, get this, Salt Lake City, Phoenix, Tucson, Albuquerque, Las Vegas and Edmonton. Some future historian looking at the radical change will assume that California really did drop off into the sea the way some early day prophets had predicted.

Hockey is even worse. You've got the National Hockey League with Edmonton, Winnipeg, Calgary, Vancouver, Montreal, Toronto and Quebec playing with the likes of Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles, Pittsburgh, Washington, Minnesota, Boston, Hartford, St. Louis...since when did the U.S. merge with Canada? Continental League might be more like it.

Don't take any of this to the bank as final. Both pro football and baseball are looking toward expansion and some franchises may be moved under financial duress. Don't be surprised if Pittsburgh, and all its offsprings—Pirates, Penquins and Steelers, doesn't wind up on the Pacific Coast.

1919 — After 12 scoreless innings, Cincinnati broke through and scored 10 runs off Al Mamaux in the 13th to beat Brooklyn. Hod Eller won for the Reds 10-0.

1941 — Joe DiMaggio singled off Chicago White Sox pitcher Ed Smith to begin his 56-game hitting streak, but the New York Yankees lost to Chicago 13-1.

1944 — Clyde Shoun of the Reds tossed a no-hitter against the Boston Braves, 1-0, in Cincinnati.

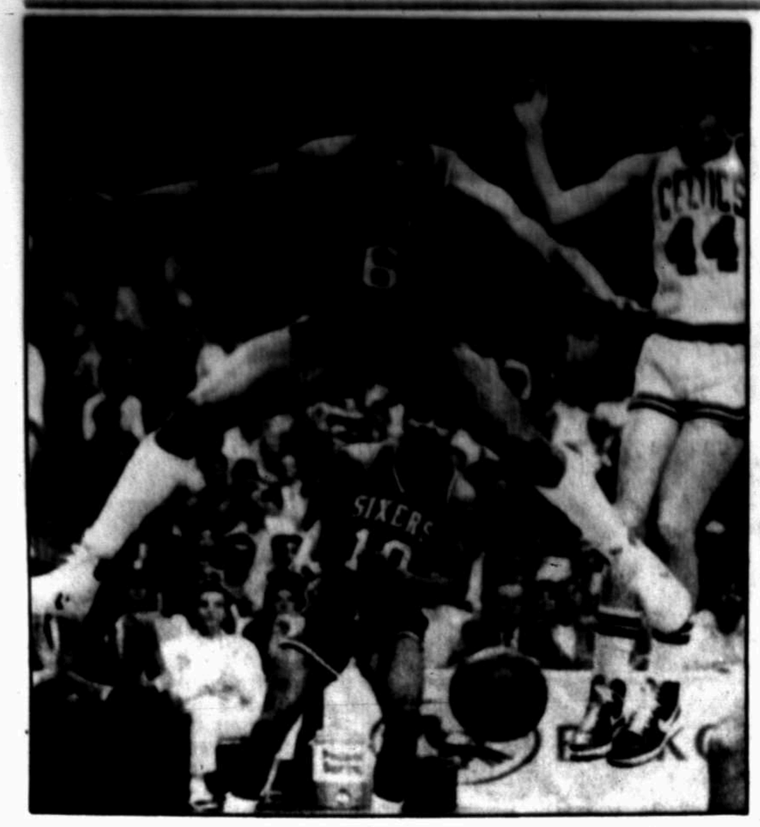

1973 — Nolan Ryan of the California Angels hurled the first of a record five no-hitters, beating the Kansas City Royals 3-0. Ryan tossed his second gem two months later.

1981 — Len Barker of Cleveland threw the first perfect game in 13 years as the Indians beat the Toronto Blue Jays at Municipal Stadium.

1984 — Mike Schmidt of the Philadelphia Phillies hit his 400th home run off of Los Angeles pitcher Bob Welch, becoming only the 19th player to do so. The Phillies won the game 12-1.

Bird starts slow, finishes strong

AP Laserphoto

Philadelphia's Julius Erving goes airborne as he attempts to gain control of the ball as Boston's Danny Ainge comes flying in during Tuesday's NBA Playoff game at Boston Garden.

BOSTON (AP) — Although Larry Bird's shooting touch was on vacation for most of the game, the Boston Celtics had someone else to keep the Philadelphia 76ers at bay until Bird found the range.

Bird was 4-of-17 from the field for the first three periods Tuesday night, but Kevin McHale's 16 first-half points kept the Celtics close until Dennis Johnson and Robert Parish led a 32-18 third-quarter surge that put Boston in control.

Bird then found his shooting touch in the fourth quarter, scoring 13 of his game-high 24 points to keep the Celtics ahead en route to a 106-98 victory that gave them a 2-0 lead over the 76ers in their best-of-seven National Basketball Association playoff series.

While Bird finally got untracked, Andrew Toney, the 76ers' best shooter, never did stop clanging the rims, finishing 3-of-17 from the field and scoring only seven points.

"Until the fourth quarter, my shots weren't falling either," Bird said when asked about Toney's slump. "But I had guys who picked me up and he didn't. One guy's shooting isn't the biggest factor in deciding the game."

"I can't remember when I have shot as badly as this game," said Toney, who often has been a thorn in Boston's side with a deadeye jumper. "If I had made half of my shots tonight we would have won."

The series resumes with Games 3 and 4 in Philadelphia on Saturday and Sunday.

In the first 16 minutes of Tuesday's game, Philadelphia appeared to have enough to survive without Toney, using a 26-9 spurt to take its largest lead at 36-25. But McHale, who finished with 22 points, scored six during a 20-10 run that helped the Celtics trim the deficit to 52-46 at halftime.

"We were surprised that we were only down six at the half," Bird said, "and we came out in the second half confident that we could come back. We played very well in the third quarter. Too bad I wasn't involved in it, but D.J. and Robert did a great job."

Johnson scored 10 of his 22 points in the quarter and Parish added nine of his 18 points and eight of his game-high 16 rebounds as the Celtics turned the six-point deficit into a 76-70 lead going into the final period. With Bird finding the range, the 76ers could get no closer than four points in the last 12 minutes.

Julius Erving led Philadelphia with 22 points, while Moses Malone had 20 points and 13 rebounds. Clint Richardson, playing 30 minutes in relief of the downtrodden Toney, scored 15 points.

"Philly had a great game plan both offensively and defensively in the first half," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said. "We got anxious and made bad shots and bad passes. In other words, we were ugly. We showed a lot of patience and guts in the third quarter, then in the fourth period Larry finally started to put the ball in the hoop."

Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham said he hasn't lost confidence in Toney's shooting.

"I told Andrew after the game not to worry," Cunningham said. "We haven't seen the real Andrew Toney in this series and his time will come. He put too much pressure on himself in this game. But we know he has the ability to come back."

"We won't change our defensive plan against Toney, even if he's 1-for-20," Jones said. "Any time he steps on a court, he's capable of hitting anything."

Johnson, who has the primary defensive assignment against Toney, refused to take credit for Toney's poor shooting performance.

"I didn't stop him, he just had a bad night," Johnson said. "I just try to make him work hard for his shots. And I look for a lot of help. When he gets by me, someone else is always there to back me up."

Reports claim Rangers' Chiles ready to fire Rader

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Morning News reported today that majority owner Eddie Chiles has decided to fire Doug Rader as manager of the Texas Rangers.

The newspaper, quoting two unidentified members of the organization, said Rader, who is under contract through 1987, will manage the American League club until a replacement is found.

Texas' 4-1 loss in Detroit Tuesday night was the Rangers' fourth straight defeat and their ninth in 11 games, dropping them to 9-21 for the season, last in the American League West.

Rader would not say late Tuesday if he had been informed of the decision, the News said.

However, after the latest loss, he told the News, "I knew that (possibility of being fired) when I got the job. I can't really say anything about it. I have been in this game a number of years — these things happen."

Chiles would not confirm the decision to dismiss Rader had been made, the newspaper said. Neither Rangers president Mike Stone nor any of the players would comment on the report.

"I don't know how anyone would know that," Chiles said Tuesday. "What I do is no one's business but the Rangers' and the owners of the Rangers. My partners, the Gaylords (Gaylord Broadcasting), will always be totally informed. That's the only obligation I have. At the proper time, it will be made public in the papers."

When asked if anything could change his mind, Chiles said, "I don't flip back and forth. I base a decision on a long period of observation. No emotion. Nothing will be done on the spur of the moment."

Royals homer way past Orioles, 5-3

Associated Press

Sooner or later, the Kansas City Royals were bound to break out of it. They finally did.

Frank White, George Brett and Jim Sundberg hit home runs in the fourth inning Tuesday night to carry the Royals over the Baltimore Orioles 5-3. Kansas City scored all five of its runs in the fourth, the team's biggest inning of the season.

"We're starting to hit, starting to get the long ball and also getting good pitching," Kansas City Manager Dick Howser said. "We're a better hitting club than we've shown. We finally got some production from our home run guys, and I hope we can keep it up."

The Royals had been mired in a season-long slump until they met the Orioles. The victim of the long-ball assault was Baltimore starter Scott McGregor, who slipped to 1-4.

"My biggest concern right now is the starting pitching," Orioles Manager Joe Altobelli said after the visiting Royals swept the two-game series. "Our bulpen seems to be doing a pretty good job, but we need a lift from our starters."

White hit his sixth home run of the season to lead off the fourth. Brett then followed with his fourth homer. Steve Balboni and Darryl Motley rapped one-out singles before Sundberg drilled his second home run.

Mariners 5, Red Sox 0

Mike Moore scattered seven hits for his fourth career shutout, and first since August 1983.

Visiting Seattle staked Moore, 4-3, to a 4-0 lead after two innings. Alvin Davis and Steve Henderson had RBI singles in the first, and Phil Bradley had a run-scoring single and Al Cowens delivered an RBI double in the second.

The Mariners chased Boston starter Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, 4-2, in the third inning. Bradley and Spike Owen each had three singles as the Mariners finished with 14 hits.

Blue Jays 6, Angels 3

Damaso Garcia, the leadoff batter in Toronto's lineup, continued to look more like a cleanup hitter. Garcia, who went 8-for-13 with seven runs batted in during a weekend sweep of Seattle, cracked a two-run single with two outs in the sixth to break a 3-3 tie.

Jesse Barfield hit his sixth home run for the Blue Jays, while Lloyd Moseby snapped an 0-for-19 slump with a two-run triple.

Doyle Alexander, 5-1, pitched 6 2-3 innings for the victory. Bill Caudill worked the ninth for his seventh save.

Rod Carew and Bobby Grich homered for visiting California. It was Carew's first homer since May 22 of last season.

American League

Tigers 4, Rangers 1

Lou Whitaker raised his AL-leading average to .366 by going 3-for-4, including his second home run in two games.

Whitaker singled in the first inning, went to second on a balk by Charlie Hough, 3-2, and scored on a single by Lance Parrish. Whitaker drilled a two-run homer in the second.

Milt Wilcox, 1-1, went five innings for the victory. Willie Hernandez pitched the ninth for his ninth save in nine opportunities this season.

Texas stranded 12 runners at Tiger Stadium.

Yankees 10, Twins 7

Ken Griffey's grand-slam home run capped a six-run rally in the seventh inning that again led New York over visiting Minnesota.

The Yankees trailed 7-3 going into the seventh, but relievers Pete Filson, Rick Lysander and Curt Wardle walked four straight batters in losing the lead and the game.

A one-out single by Willie Randolph and walks to Don Mattingly and Dave Winfield loaded the bases against Filson, and Lysander walked Don Baylor to force home a run. Wardle, 0-2, walked Butch Wynegar to force in another and Griffey then hit the first pitch into the right-field seats for his third homer of the season.

White Sox 2, Indians 1

Greg Walker's two-out single in the eighth inning drove home Ozzie Guillen from second base to lead host Chicago to victory.

Walker singled off Tom Waddell, who had taken over for Rich Thompson, 0-1, after Guillen lead off the inning with a bunt single.

Tim Lollar extended the White Sox's streak of scoreless innings to 21 2-3 before Joe Carter drove in the Cleveland run with an infield hit in the fourth.

A's 6, Brewers 3

Pinch-hitter Dusty Baker's two-run double broke a 2-2 tie and keyed Oakland's five-run rally in the ninth inning against Milwaukee reliever Rollie Fingers.

Ray Burris went the first eight innings for the Brewers, allowing just four hits, and left with a 2-1 lead. But the visiting A's then roughed up Fingers, 0-2.

Oakland mad it 2-2 when Carney Lansford singled and scored when right fielder Paul Householder misplayed a single by Bruce Bochte for an error. With two outs and the bases loaded, Baker doubled down the left-field line and Alfredo Griffin followed with a two-run single.

Both sides seemed to think the incident would be forgotten by the next game.

"We're pros, we just come to do the job," said Riley. "Denver will be tough to play on the road, and I think this win will give them a little more confidence."

"One game has no connection with the other," Moe said.

He seemed to be one of those who gained confidence as the Nuggets bounced back from a 139-122 series-opening loss.

"I'm the supreme optimist, and even I was beginning to have my doubts," Moe said. "But we didn't win 52 games this season for nothing ... We're not chopped liver.

Coffey paces Edmonton

Oilers take 3-2 lead over Hawks

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Paul Coffey's record-breaking six points may have been quiet, but they were heard.

Coffey, an Edmonton defenseman, scored one goal and had five assists Tuesday night, shaking off a pregame ankle injury, to lead the Oilers over Chicago 10-5 and give his club a 3-2 lead over the Black Hawks in their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semifinal.

"The five points I got in Winnipeg (in the quarterfinals) were flashier," Coffey said. "Tonight's six points were the quietest six I've ever gotten. I wasn't that offensive tonight."

Coffey stopped a shot on the ice in warmups and limped to the dressing room. But after five minutes of ice, he returned to help the Oilers rebound from a pair of losses at Chicago. The two teams return to Chicago Thursday night for Game 5.

"I got hit in the left ankle bt after about five minutes the feeling came back," Coffey said of the injury.

Both coaches, Glen Sather of the Oilers and Bob Pulford of Chicago, complained about the officiating. Pulford went so far as to get into a brief push-and-shove incident with an NHL security offical outside the referee's room.

"I didn't think he had control of the game at all," Pulford said later of the officiating. "But we didn't play either. We stayed in the game for almost two periods but then we lost all togetherness and they blew us out."

Coffey's points were the most by a defenseman in a single game. His ninth goal tied Bobby Orr's record for most by a defenseman in one playoff year, and his points gave him 25, tying Denis Potvin's single-year playoff mark.

Teammate Jari Kurri tied a playoff record with his third three-goal game, and he also had two assists. Kurri now has 14 playoff goals.

Edmonton, which broke out of a 3-3 first-period tie with four second-period goals, also got two goals from Wayne Gretzky. Mike Krushelnyski, Dave Hunter, Lee Fogolin and Mark Messier also scored for the Oilers.

Chicago got all its goals on power plays — two from Darryl Sutter and one apiece by Troy Murray, Steve Larmer and Denis Savard.

The Black Hawks, coming off an emotional high from their home-ice showing and with defensemen Doug Wilson and Keith Brown back in the lineup, played the Oilers even for the first 20 minutes. But they finally cracked under the onslaught of the Oilers, who scored seven straight goals in the final two periods.

Edmonton's 10 goals gave them 36, most ever in a playoff series, and the 15 goals scored in the game gave the two teams 59 in the series to break the two-team total for a six-game playoff.

After battling through a 3-3 first period, the Black Hawks took a brief lead on a goal by Savard with 4:30 gone in the second period. Messier tied the score 21 seconds later, and some spectacular saves by Chicago goaltender Murray Bannerman kept the teams tied until 8:15 when Gretzky took advantage of a three-skaters-aside situation. Gretzky stick-handled inside the Chicago blue line until he got the screen he wanted, and Bannerman never saw the shot.

Gretzky put the Oilers up by two on a power play at 16:46, scoring on a long slapshot after Glenn Anderson had stolen the puck from Steve Ludzik in Chicago's zone.

Kurri gave the Oilers their insurmountable three-goal lead with 81 seconds left in the period after Krushelynyski stole the puck at center ice. He was stopped by Bannerman, but Kurri put the rebound under a diving Bob Murray for a 7-4 Edmonton lead.

Flyers edge Quebec, 2-1

QUEBEC (AP) — When the dream met reality for Murray Craven, he found one moment of glory in an otherwise undistinguished effort.

"It's my dream to be playing now, and to score then — it was my most important goal," said Craven, who connected on a 2-on-1 break with Brian Propp with 4:59 remaining Thursday night to give the Philadelphia Flyers a 2-1 victory over the Quebec Nordiques in Game 5 of the Campbell Conference finals. "I didn't do anything special all night. It was not one of my best efforts."

The Flyers can wrap up the series and advance to the Stanley Cup finals with a victory in Game 6 at Philadelphia Thursday night.

It was not a particularly memorable game for any of the Flyers except goalie Pelle Lindbergh, who made 30 saves and kept the Flyers close until they found some rhythm.

"I just wanted to come back and play a good game after I played a so-so game the other night," said Lindbergh, who allowed only a goal by Jean-Francois Sauve at 7:02 of the second period with Quebec holding a two-man advantage.

The Flyers wasted five power plays, including a four-minute job in which they didn't even attempt a shot at goalie Mario Gosselin. Actually, they wasted practically the entire first two periods, which enraged Coach Mike Keenan.

"Mike said we didn't show we were hungry enough and that they (the Nordiques) wanted it more than we did," Craven said of a tongue-lashing Keenan administered prior to the final session. "Mike gave us a very stiff talking to."

Keenan's lecture worked. One minute into the third period, defenseman Mark Howe intercepted a poor clearing pass by Gosselin. Howe's pass into the crease was tapped in by Joe Paterson.

"All I had to do was bunt the puck forward," said Paterson, who came to the Flyers from Detroit along with Craven in a trade the day before the regular season began. "We didn't get many great shots and we had no pressure on them on the other power plays. That goal felt awfully good."

The Flyers got the winner when Propp fed Craven for a 25-foot shot which bounded in off Gosselin.

Hogs seek 4th straight crown

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — An Arkansas track team led by Olympian Mike Conley goes for its fourth straight Southwest Conference outdoor track championship Friday and Saturday.

Coach John McDonnell's Razorbacks will be running on their home track as the favorite to capture the outdoor title. In addition to its outdoor titles, Arkansas has won five straight SWC indoor championships and 11 straight cross country championships.

The last team other than Arkansas to win a league track crown was Texas A&M in 1981. The Razorbacks also are the 1984 and 1985 NCAA indoor champions and won the NCAA cross country title last fall.

Texas, Houston, SMU and Baylor are expected to battle for second place.

SWC Track

Conley, a silver medalist at the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles in the triple jump, is the favorite in that event and in the long jump. He is expected to try to win points for Arkansas' relay teams also.

It's not a red carpet, but Conley is getting the royal treatment at the Razorback track — a new long jump and triple jump runway constructed in front of the grandstand.

Conley has won every SWC long jump competition the past four years. His best jump this year — 26 feet 7¼ inches — is short of the meet record set in 1981 by Olympian Carl Lewis.

He holds the SWC meet record in the triple jump — 56-2¾ — and has a best this season of 56-4½. Assistant track coach Ted King of Arkansas said the triple jump record should fall.

"Mike will beat that and rightly so," King said. "The new runway, particularly at the take-off point, has a beautiful consistency and is bouncy. So there should be a lot of great performances this weekend."

Four NCAA champions will compete, as well as defending conference champions in 12 of the 17 individual events.

Three runners entered for the 1,500 meter-run have posted times below the SWC record of 3:42.53, set by Baylor's Todd Harbour. SMU's Paul Rugut ran a 3:37.81 two weeks ago, Arkansas' Paul Donovan has run 3:39.88 and Rice's Gawain Guy has turned in a 3:41.00.

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, May 16, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Focus on more realistic schemes, and you will enjoy greater success. Your work becomes your main interest now. A more mature attitude leads to new domestic happiness. Loved ones act more affectionate. Travel helps you move closer to a long-cherished goal. A change of residence is possible. Be willing to move to a different state if it will aid your career. Romantic partner has high hopes for your future together. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: "Remington Steele" star Pierce Brosnan, Chicago Cubs righthander Rick Reuschel, Sen. Lowell Weicker (R-Conn.), Liberace, newscaster Robert Pierpoint, Detroit Tigers ace Jack Morris, Woody Herman, Henry Fonda.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You are most efficient when you tackle one task at a time. Business has its ups and downs. Hang in there! A marital relationship shows decided improvement.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Money could be involved in any dealings with relatives. An authority figure should be treated with kid gloves. Your diplomacy serves you well. Romance becomes more serious.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Adopt a wait-and-see attitude towards a financial matter. Spend more time alone planning for the future. Loved one understands your need for solitude.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The financial information you obtain now will work to your benefit in the near future. The road to happy romance could be paved with obstacles.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A new approach helps you solve an old problem. Thank someone for helping you cut through red tape. Others try to get you to carry the ball for them. Resist their flattery!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Accept the help you are offered today, and profits will rise. Give serious consideration to your co-workers' suggestions. Romance dominates this evening. Be careful not to reveal too much too soon.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Keep expenses down by performing more services for yourself. Make do with the materials you have in hand. Influential person may be hard to convince now. Avoid asking for special favors.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be more diligent at work and you could surprise yourself. New achievements lead to a promotion or raise. Sharing activities with a co-worker could lead to an exciting romance. Curb spending.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A good day for negotiating behind closed doors. Keep your plans to yourself until everything is finalized. A secret romance could prove surprisingly rewarding. Keep your personal and professional life strictly separate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Morning is the best time to obtain the support of someone influential. Go straight to the top! Family members could cause a misunderstanding. Keep tabs on spending and postpone luxury purchases.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Replace a bad habit with a good one. Buy necessities only. Entertaining business associates in your home could smooth the way for a financial deal. Be careful not to underestimate a newcomer.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Remain conservative in your financial dealings. A brother or sister assumes a greater role in your life. Avoid loaning money to a friend. A loved one shares important news. Keep secrets.

"Your hands are all well and good," we often hear from our readers, "but they never turn up in real life." Wrong! That's precisely where we get most of our material. This example is from the recent Spring North American Championships held in Montreal.

North showed touching faith in his partner's judgment when he elected to pass three no trump. Obviously, he was hoping his side could make as many tricks in no trump as they could in spades, in which case he would receive an excellent score.

Naturally, South received a club lead against three no trump. East correctly overtook the queen with the king and returned the suit as declarer held off winning the ace until the second round. What now?

At duplicate, you can see that declarer has a chance to make 12 tricks with favorable breaks in the major suits. Therefore, your best chance for a reasonable result is to try to run spades and hope that your rivals can't outscore you at a spade contract. However, the spades turn out to be 4-1 and, to make it worse, West has the long spade, so you can no longer set up the suit by conceding a trick to the safe hand—when West wins the spade he can take more than enough club tricks to defeat you. There is no way for you to make your contract.

At rubber bridge, you should surely play the hand in four spades, especially since you get the honor bonus. However, if you did land in no trump, you should adopt a totally different line to safeguard your contract. First, duck two rounds of clubs. Then cash a spade honor, cross back to your hand with a high heart, and lead a spade to the ten. Even if the finesse loses you have ten tricks, and you protect against the distribution that exists. East can do you no harm if he wins the jack of spades.

'Airwolf' star found innocent of battery

Vincent

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Actor Jan-Michael Vincent, star of the "Airwolf" television series, was found innocent of misdemeanor battery stemming from a barroom altercation.

The Municipal Court jury verdict came Tuesday after a week-long trial for Vincent, who plays a rugged, cello-playing helicopter pilot in the CBS show.

Deputy District Attorney Alexis de la Garza said the basic issue was whether Vincent, 40, used "excessive force in self-defense" when he was accosted by John K. Bogosian, 42, at a Malibu bar June 3.

Vincent stuck Bogosian, who hit his head, was knocked unconscious and hospitalized in intensive care, law enforcement reports said.

The incident took place when Bogosian left his seat at the bar and Vincent took his place, Ms. De la Garza said. When Bogosian returned and demanded his place back, the altercation ensued, she said.

LONDON (AP) — When Bob Hope arrived in the city where he was born to celebrate the 82nd anniversary of that event, he felt right at home: London was full of American tourists.

Hope, whose family moved to Cleveland when he was 7, was the center of attention Tuesday at a gala celebration that drew a throng of celebrities and Prince Philip, husband of Queen Elizabeth II.

"He's not quite made it — another 10 days or so — but I think he'll make it," the prince said. "He's a very generous, kind-hearted chap and occasionally he's quite funny."

Hope will be 82 on May 29.

"The minute that I arrived here I felt at home — there were so many American tourists," said Hope, who was born in Eltham in southeast London.

The gala, which raised $28,575 for the prince's Duke of Edinburgh Award Scheme to aid youngsters attracted a star-studded cast including Debbie Reynolds, Brooke Shields, Julio Iglesias, Crystal Gayle and Charlton Heston.

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Claiming she had been treated cruelly, singer Marie Osmond has filed for divorce from Steve Craig six months after the couple separated and began a reconciliation period, a family spokesman said.

Osmond

Ms. Osmond, 25, asked $1 per year alimony, reasonable child support and custody of the couple's son, 2-year-old Stephen James Craig. The action filed Tuesday claimed she had been treated "cruelly, causing her great mental distress."

Ms. Osmond and Craig, 28, a former Brigham Young University basketball player, were married in June 26, 1982, in a highly publicized ceremony in the Salt Lake Temple of the Mormon Church.

The 1½-page divorce complaint, filed in 4th District Court in Provo, also asked the court to decide how the couple's property should be divided if Ms. Osmond and Craig can't reach an agreement.

The document did not elaborate on the reason for the divorce. Osmond family spokesman Ron Clark said he had been asked by both Craig and Ms. Osmond not to discuss their problems. He said no statement from either party would be forthcoming.

"They won't talk," he said. "I talk about it more than they do. Everything I ask them is 'no comment,' " he said.

The couple made their home in Los Angeles after their wedding. Clark said Ms. Osmond has been living in the Provo area with her son since the separation.

At the time of her marriage, Ms. Osmond said, "It feels wonderful; I got the best."

Springsteen

NEW YORK (AP) — Rock star Bruce Springsteen has married model Julianne Phillips and the newlyweds are enjoying their honeymoon in an undisclosed location. Or are they?

In today's New York Daily News, society columnist Suzy reports the New Jersey singer-songwriter remains in Oregon with his bride-to-be, and the couple will be married later today after staging a phony wedding earlier this week.

A ceremony early Monday, which was trumpeted around the world as the real thing, was instead a run-through which was passed off as the wedding to clear the throng of reporters and fans from the bride's hometown of Lake Oswego, Ore., the News reported.

According to the report, all involved in Monday's cloak-and-dagger service were aware the genuine wedding would be today. Suzy reports the nuptials will most likely occur in the 25-year-old Miss Phillips' home or at Our Lady of the Lake Church in her hometown.

It is — or will be — the first wedding for both Springsteen and Miss Phillips.

LONDON (AP) — Violinist Isaac Stern, performing at Britain's first American Festival of the arts, praised the music of Brooklyn-born Aaron Copeland, whom he called "the most American of American composers."

"There was a time a few years ago in a festival of contemporary music when you couldn't tell if the work came from Germany, Japan, the United States, France, or Lower Slavonia," Stern, 64, said during a rehearsal break.

But the Russian-born musician said, "You can smell the earth of America" in music by Copeland, whose violin sonata he performed Monday night.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Foreigner, a rock group that often fills 90,000-seat stadiums with concerts featuring hits like "Cold As Ice" and "Feels Like the First Time," had the tiny club where it got its start eight years ago packed from bar to bandstand.

"In spite of our fast start, we did play a few places like this,' said lead singer Lou Gramm, of the Bayou, where 400 fans roared in approval Tuesday as the band members, now slightly grayer and a little paunchier, performed.

"There were only a few, and this was the first one, the one that still stands out in my mind."

Foreigner, with Englishmen Mick Jones, Dennis Elliot and Rick Wills, as well as Gramm, an American, has had six hit albums, and several top singles since its debut in 1977.

EL PASO (AP) — The newly crowned Miss USA, who has won every beauty competition she's entered, says she "can't wait" for her next competition — the Miss Universe pageant in July.

"I'm going for one more. I can't wait," Laura Martinez Herring said Tuesday, one day after being crowned Miss USA.

Miss Herring, of El Paso, told The El Paso Times she was tired Tuesday, but not so much so that the excitement of her victory had ebbed.

"I'm tired, but all the adrenalin of winning is still going through me," she said.

Cherokees accepting erosion of culture

CHEROKEE, N.C. — The erosion of Indian culture has been relentless for more than three centuries.

For a family of Cherokees here in western North Carolina, the process is almost completed. The result is a sadness but also a maturing acceptance of social and economic opportunity not available by clinging to the old ways of the forest and farm.

When one of their children shows an interest in the legacy of the Cherokees, Jerry and Juanita Wolfe gladly pass along remnants of a way of life, but they do not force the heritage upon their seven children.

Mrs. Wolfe quietly recalled her surprise at the reaction of one of her sons on seeing his first movie of the Old West.

"I asked him who he rooted for, the cowboys or the Indians, and he said, 'The cowboys — I wanted them to get those old Indians!' "

A daughter, 15-year-old Robin, is a high school student. Compared with her parents' view, she, too, has a different meaning of "Cherokee." She runs track in school and plays an instrument in the band. Miss Wolfe does not see any differences between herself and non-Indians, and she expects to move from the reservation in a few years.

Her brother Dennis, 30, is a "street chief." Five days each week, he dons a colorful Indian costume, sets his tepee in front of a tourist shop and waves to passers-by. The object is to make tips by posing with tourists for photographs.

"Sometimes kids ask me if I'm a real Indian chief, and I'll kid with them for a while, but later on I always tell them the truth," he said.

Maybe the tourists don't care for the truth. Wolfe's long colorful headdress of feathers is the costume of the Plains Indians, not the Cherokees. The tepee was the home for nomadic Indian tribes. The Cherokees lived in log cabins.

When they learn the history of this famous but fragmented Indian nation, some whites resent the stereotypes and lament the loss of authenticity — not for the hundreds of thousands of tourists who come here each summer but for the Cherokees themselves. Perhaps it is white guilt, perhaps genuine sorrow.

Wolfe long ago made his peace, and now it is he who resents others interfering with his livelihood.

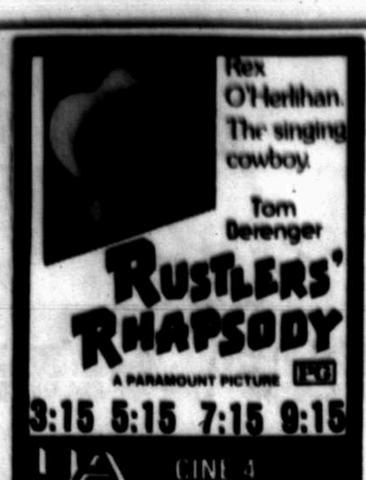

He doesn't call it a sham. For 11 years, it has been "economic survival," he said. It's the best way he knows to support his wife and two children.

"Anywhere you go, you'll find somebody doing something for a buck — it's no different," said Wolfe.

Nonetheless, he is proud of his Indian heritage and quickly shows his Indian identification card to those who are skeptical of his bloodlines.

Dollar mixed

LONDON (AP) — The dollar turned in a mixed performance in early European trading today. Gold prices drifted lower.

Currency traders said the main market activity focused on position adjustments ahead of Thursday's Ascension Day holiday in Europe.

They said some investors felt the dollar has been oversold in recent days, but signs of a slowdown in U.S. economic growth was holding the currency back.

A report Tuesday that U.S. retail sales in April rose 0.9 percent, instead of an expected 1.5 percent, confirmed speculation of a slowdown in economic growth, dealers said. In addition, the dollar was hurt by a decline in U.S. interest rates.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Tuesday included:

—3.0620 West German marks, up from 3.0515.

—2.5805 Swiss francs, up from 2.5785.

—9.3445 French francs, down from 9.3475.

—3.45825 Dutch guilders, up from 3.4550.

—1,953.50 Italian lire, down from 1,959.50.

—1.3735 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3775.

The British pound declined in value to $1.2665 from $1.2737.

In Tokyo, the dollar declined for a third straight session, closing at 250.17 yen, down from 250.75 yen. Later in London, the U.S. currency was quoted at 250.225 yen.

London's five main bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price this morning of $322.85 an ounce, down from $327.10 late Tuesday.

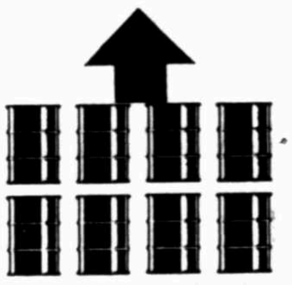

In Zurich, gold was bid at $323, down from $327.50.

Earlier in Hong Kong, the metal lost 36 cents to close at a bid of $324.12.

Gold was quoted at $323.90 in New York late Tuesday.

Silver declined to a bid of $6.51 in London, down from Tuesday's late bid of $6.685.

Phillips 'performing' to reduce heavy debt load

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

Following a costly takeover bid and debt-burdening recapitalization, the "performance company" is still performing nicely, according to C.J. Silas, chairman, and Glenn A. Cox, president, of Phillips Petroleum Co.

Silas and Cox and other Phillips Petroleum Co. officers were honored Tuesday with a Wildcatters Reception at the Midland Petroleum Club.

In 1984 Phillips' earnings of $810 million, or $5.26 a share were substantially above 1983 earnings of $721 million or $4.71 a share, but despite the strong performance the firm became the target of an unfriendly takeover attempt by T. Boone Pickens and Mesa Partners II, in December 1984.

The move came, says Silas, because of the investment community's preference for performance over assets.

"I never have been able to understand the investment community," said Silas. "They have historically not been willing to pay for oil in the ground, tending to buy stock performance rather than value."

RESPONDING TO a comment by T. Boone Pickens, in Texas Business magazine, in which Pickens said he could go on with takeover attempts forever as long as there was a significant gap between a stock's trading price and its liquidation value, Phillips President, Glenn Cox, took exception.

"I don't think the mood of the nation will wear as long as Pickens ambitions," said Cox. "He has found a great niche and a great pitch, but I think the nation will soon tire of it."

Said Silas: "He will continue with takeover attempts only as long as the rules stay on his side, but I think new ground rules could level the playing field."

As for Picken's claim that he is forcing firms be become better managed, tighter and more effecient, Cox said in his opinion bad management was a non-issue in Picken's takeover attempts. He cited an article by New Mexico Senator, Pete Domenici, who also called poor corporate management a non-issue in takeover attempts. "I am glad to see a U.S. Senator of Mr. Domenici's caliber feels the same way I do," said Cox.

PHILLIPS AVERTED the Pickens takeover attempt by agreeing to recapitalization of the company in exchange for the Mesa group dropping its takeover bid, only to be hit with a second takeover bid by an investor group headed by Carl C. Icahn. Icahn distributed proxy material to stockholders in opposition to the recapitalization plan, and launched a hostile tender offer for Phillips shares conditioned upon defeat of the recapitalization and the availability of sufficient financing.

While a majority of stockholders, voting at a special meeting, supported recapitalization, the proposal failed to win the necessary majority of outstanding shares. Realizing that many stockholders wanted a different type of transaction, Phillips offered to exchange a package of debt securities with a face value of $62 for approximately 50 percent of its outstanding stock, while announcing that it would increase dividend payments from $2.40 to $3 per share following the exhange. To date, 90 percent of the outstanding shares have been tendered for the exchange, and $4.5 billion has been returned to the stockholders.

Economists say retail sales encouraging sign

Associated Press

The Reagan administration and some economists say they view a 0.9 percent increase in April retail sales as an encouraging signal that the economy is reviving after a sluggish first quarter.

The Commerce Department said Tuesday that sales, boosted by a rebound in demand for automobiles, rose to a seasonally adjusted total of $112.2 billion in April following a 0.7 percent drop in consumer spending the month before.

But, in early May, domestic car sales fell 8.6 percent compared with the year-ago period, the seven major carmakers reported.

Among the Big Three, sales at General Motors Corp. were down 12.9 percent and Ford Motor Co. sales were off 3.0 percent. Chrysler Corp. posted a gain of 3.8 percent.

The seasonally adjusted annual sales rate for the U.S. industry in the May 1-10 period was 8.1 million cars, which is healthy but below the recent strong trend.

Some economists interpreted the April retail sales increase and an upward revision in the March data as favorable signs that consumer spending is regaining lost momentum and will help to boost overall economic growth in coming months.

"Retail sales in April are very supportive of the view that we will have a rebound in growth in the second quarter," said Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson Lehman Brothers.

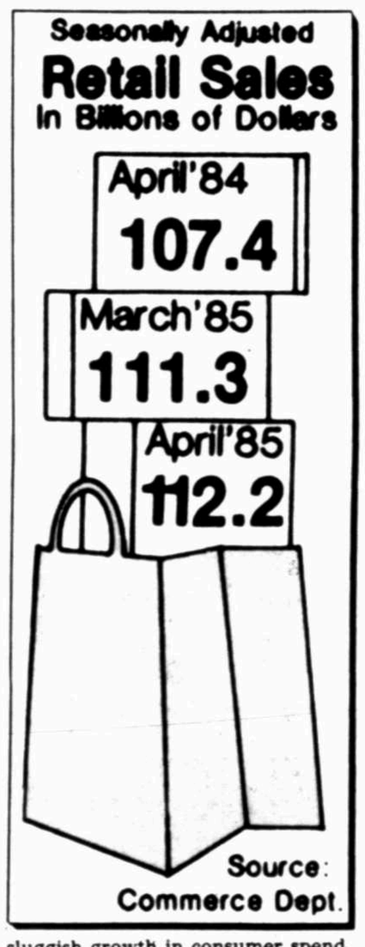

Sinai predicted growth from April through June of around 3.5 percent. This would be substantially stronger than the January-March rate of 1.3 percent — the weakest pace since the end of the last recession.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said the new report showed that "the economy, as a whole, is still strong and healthy."

Some private analysts, however, were less optimistic about the current state of the economy.

Sandra Shaber, director of consumer economics for Chase Econometrics, predicted further gains in consumer spending in May and June as Americans get their delayed federal tax refunds. But she said the recovery overall has entered a slower stage of growth.

"What we have ahead of us is very sluggish growth in consumer spending," she said.

In other economic developments Tuesday:

—Americans took on $8.34 billion more in installment debt than they paid off in March, the government reported. The March increase in debt was 7.7 percent below the $9.04 billion advance registered in February, according to the report by the Federal Reserve Board. The February increase originally had been reported as a much higher $10.37 billion.

—Jobless rates in 34 states and the District of Columbia in March were below those of a year earlier, but seven states still were experiencing double-digit unemployment, the Labor Department reported.

Electric-log bill gets approval

AUSTIN — Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, won approval Tuesday of a bill providing for electric-log information from oil and gas wells to be turned over to the Railroad Commission — but not before House members managed to amend key portions of the measure.

HB 2431 faces a final vote today before going to the Senate.

Rep. Bobby Leonard, R-Fort Worth, attacked the bill, charging Craddick with "kowtowing to the whims of big oil on this bill" and of giving away "proprietary information."

Rep. Fred Agnich, R-Dallas, defended Craddick and the bill, saying "nothing could be further from the truth."

Rep. Richard Williamson, D-Weatherford, offered a series of amendments to the measure, adding some over Craddick's objections, with some being accepted.

Williamson lost on an amendment to make logs confidential for five years for on- and off-shore operations, saying it was a "small thing to ask."

That amendment failed, but Williamson persisted, removing provision which would have resulted in denial of an allowable for any well on which a log is not filed as required.

The bill provides for logs to be filed with the Railroad Commission, and to remain confidential for one year after filing, with a two-year extension for on-shore wells, and two such extensions for off-shore wells.

Leonard lost on an amendment to make logs confidential for one year after a lease expires, with Craddick arguing that amendment would have "gutted" the bill.

Leonard said that if the intent of the bill is to prevent delays in developing a lease, that problem is covered by requirements in leases.

At a hearing by the House Energy Committee, the bill received support from representatives of West Central Oil and Gas Association, Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association, Society of Independent Professional Earth Scientists, American Institute of Professional Geologists and American Association of Petroleum Geologists.

Two witnesses, a geologist and independent producer and "hydrocarbon explorer", opposed it.

Schools moan loss from 'white oil' ruling

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — School officials are worried about the money their school districts will lose because of a state agency ruling involving "white oil," a water-white liquid produced by chilling natural gas.

But bankers in the area downplayed the impact, saying it won't mean the end of oil fields in the Panhandle.

The Texas Railroad Commmission voted 3-0 Monday in favor of Phillips Petroleum Co. and against independent oil men, who are drilling natural gas and turning it into "white oil."

"I think that we just dropped $100,000 (about 10 percent of the annual budget)," said Rex Peeples, superintendent of Groom Independent School District. "Fifty-five percent of our minerals will be declared ineligible."

"We're going to have to start scaling down our program," he said.

Phillips Petroleum has been in a debate with independents for 3½ years over the white oil issue.

Phillips has argued that white oil should not be considered crude oil and is actually natural gas.

Producers are allowed to drill one oil well every 10 acres. But only one gas well can be drilled for every 640 acres.

Independents own the oil rights in the huge eight-county Panhandle field, while Phillips and other major energy companies control the natural gas rights.

An oil well is defined as a well that produces one or more barrels of oil per 100,000 cubic feet of natural gas.

Phillips claims the independents achieve that ratio only with "LTX" refrigeration units.

The railroad commission ruled that wells with LTX units must be retested within 75 days and shut down if they do not meet the present gas-to-oil ratio.

Tom Harkey of the White Deer Independent School District superintendent, said his district could lose up to a quarter of its yearly budget because of the ruling.

"We could lose as much as $300,000 to $600,000," he said. "It could have a pretty devastating effect."

Harkey said 45 percent of the district's local tax base comes from independent oil drillers and mentioned the possible need for a tax increase.

"We're just waiting for the bad news. It's very difficult to figure out a budget for the coming year when you don't know how much tax money you're going to have, Harkey said."

Jim Holmes, superintendent of Panhandle Independent School District, said it would be days or weeks before the full impact of the commission's ruling is known.

"Obviously, it's going to be very detrimental unless it's overturned," he said. "Everything's pretty sketchy at this point."

But several bankers said the Panhandle oil fields will survive as they did before production of white oil began.

"We do not feel this is the end of the oil fields here," said Charles Cooke, president of First National Bank in Borger.

While the railroad commission ruling could mean several hundred oil and gas producers in the Panhandle can no longer derive revenue from wells equipped with the LTX units, Cooke said the impact of the decision could be smaller than many thought.

"They're just aren't that many (producers) involved" in white oil, Cooke said. Estimates of the number of wells with LTX units have ranged from 200 to 1,000 of the approximately 11,000 wells in the Panhandle.

"Most of the plain old ... operations will continue to operate," Cooke said.

First National has no direct involvement with companies that operate the units, but Cooke said he would expect to see some economic impact on those companies he deals with that service white oil wells.

Water Wonderland kicks off '85 season

By SUSAN LINDSAY

West Texas' water theme park WATER WONDERLAND will kick off its 1985 season and its "Tumble Waves," a 24,000 square foot wave machine, on Saturday.

"Tumble Waves," the latest addition to the park's list of water-related recreational rides and attractions, is representative of the latest technology in wave pool construction.

It's designed in a modified fan shape, sloping to a depth of eight feet in its deepest end. Two 75-horse power motors driving high speed fans exert air pressure on water contained in concrete chambers, thus creating swells and breakers which peak at heights of over four feet.

A ribbon cutting ceremony is scheduled for 11 a.m. Saturday.

The TEXAS RESTAURANT ASSOCIATION will be dishing up all sorts of goodies at its Taste of the Permian Basin, to be from 7-9 p.m. May 23 at the Holiday Inn Centre in Odessa.

Thirty sponsors are expected. Door prizes will be awarded. The main prize is a trip for two to the Flamingo Hilton in Las Vegas for two nights, sponsored by Southwestern Airlines.

The event will feature a western motiff, a live western band and actual demonstrations of ice carvings by personnel from the Mission Country Club.

Tickets are $12.50 and can be purchased from the United Way of Odessa and from TRA sponsors.

For information, phone Larry Pierson at 563-4920.

REDWOOD & WATER CO. has opened in the Midkiff Business Center, said owner Robert Watts.

The store sells customized do-it-yourself sprinkler systems.

LUKENS, INC., a manufacturing company with a Midland office, has purchased the assets of GENERAL CATHODIC PROTECTION SERVICES, INC. of Tulsa, Okla.

The purchase involves the stock of Corrintec, U.K., a wholly owned subsidiary of General Cathodic Protection Services, Inc., located in Winchester, England.

L.W. Scott, president of Luken's ENCOAT Division, said the company will become part of the division. Headquartered in Houston, ENCOAT is the country's largest domestically-owned pipe coating company.

Lukens is a Fortune 500 company that supplies steel plate and plate products, glass beads, signs and other highway safety products, pipe coating services and specialized engineering services to industrial, energy, transportation, construction and defense markets.

General Cathodic provides materials and services to protect steel and other ferrous metals from corrosion by environmental forces.

Larry Burgin has announced the formation of his new real estate business, COMMERCIAL AND INVESTMENT REALTY, located at 511 W. Ohio, Suite 138.

The firm will deal with commercial property and office leasing. Burgin formerly worked with Century 21 Real Estate in Midland.

MIDA CORP. has formed a customer support group to handle MIDA's training systems, customer follow-up and complaints.

Milton Rister will serve as customer advocate for the program. Lyn McCracken will assist him as training specialist.

Free Saturday classes will be held during May from 10 a.m. to noon. For information or to register, phone Lyn at 563-3506.

N.C. STURGEON, INC. of Midland has been appointed an authorized builder for Varco-Pruden Buildings.

Sturgeon is a design engineering and construction firm with in-house pre-construction design and engineering capabilities.

Varco-Pruden has more than 800 authorized builders who represent and sell VP products from coast to coast. The company's flexible building system features the unique "custom concept," which allows buildings to be individually designed and produced to fit a buyer's exact specifications without cost penalty or longer fabrication time.

OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Glasscock well flows 105 barrels

From Staff Reports

GLOBAL WEST EXPLORATION, Midland, completed the No. 3 Powell "20" as a Strawn producer in the Bialock Lake field of Glasscock County, flowing 105 barrels of 53.35 gravity crude, 797.75 Mcfd, and 19 barrels of water on a 10/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 1,810 psi. Gas-oil ratio is 7,578:1. The well is flowing from the Strawn interval 9,953 to 10,062 ft., which had been treated with 10,000 gallons.

Drilled to 10,137 ft., the well is plugged back to 10,102 ft. A 3 1/2 inch liner was hung 5,712 to 10,136 ft.

The well topped the Strawn at 9,953, Wolfcamp at 8,380, and the Clearfork at 5,963 ft. on ground elevation of 2,610 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from south and 1,320 ft. from west lines of Section 20, Block 35, T-3-S, T&P survey, 11.4 miles northwest of Garden City.

Re-opener completed to pump 27 barrels

MORROW RESOURCES, INC., Odessa, re-opened the Goen pay in the Shaheen field of Menard County with completion of the No. 3 Boy Scouts of America.

The well tested to pump 27 barrels of 36.1 gravity crude and 51 barrels of water. Morrow perforated the Goen interval 3,851 to 3,864 ft. and acidized with 500 gallons of acid.

Total depth was 4,321 ft., plugged back to 3,913 ft. Final casing size set was 4 1/2 inches at 3,972 ft.

On round elevation of 2,252 ft., formation tops include the Cisco Sand at 2,689, Canyon Lime at 3,072, Canyon Sand at 3,312, Strawn Sand at 3,718, and the Strawn Lime at 3,798 ft.

Location is 1,606 ft. from south and 2,189 ft. from east lines of Section 12, George Brown survey, six miles northeast of Fort McKavett.

Gas discovery tested or 46.5 MMcf CAOF

Natura Energy Corp. reported a significant gas discovery on its Brunner prospect in Fayette County, Texas.

The Brunner P3 well was drilled to a total depth of 8204 feet and perforated between 7923 and 8065 feet. After being acidized, the well was tested flowing on a 13/64 inch choke at 2.4 million cubic feet of gas and 22 barrels of oil per day, with flowing tubing pressure of 2,896 psi. The well's calculated absolute open flow rate was 46.5 million cubic feet of gas per day.

Natura Energy owns a 20 percent working interest; American Energy Assets — 1984, a drilling fund sponsored by American Energy Assets Corp. of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania owns a 20 percent working interest; National Operating, Inc. of Giddings, Texas owns a 35 percent working interest; with the balance being owned by private companies and individuals.

Government says fuel economy standards may be softened

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saying consumers should decide the fuel efficiency of new cars, the Reagan administration is hinting it may roll back automobile fuel economy standards next month.

Ford and General Motors have asked the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration to reduce the fleet-wide fuel economy requirements from 27.5 to 26 miles per gallon. The automakers say they will be unable to meet the higher standard next year because consumers are buying more large cars.

Supporters of the higher standard argue that lowering the requirement could harm the country's energy conservation effort.

If the standard is not met, Ford and GM could face substantial fines — up to $400 million for GM and about $80 million for Ford — or be forced to offer fewer large cars to consumers who increasingly are demanding them.

Diane Steed, NHTSA administrator, told a Senate subcommittee Tuesday no decision has been made on the Ford and GM requests, but she acknowledged "a number of factors ... have changed" since the standard was imposed.

"It is the administration's position that free-market factors, rather than (the government) standards are the most efficient means of achieving appropriate level of fuel economy over the long run," she said at another point.

Suggestions that competitive forces could replace the government imposed standards brought sharp criticism from Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., who said he was distressed at the administration's "extraordinary commitment to ideology" on the issue.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, called the proposed lowering of the fuel economy requirements "an absurdity" and an abandonment of a key element of the country's fuel conservation program when no one knows how oil supplies might fluctuate.

The fuel economy standards were imposed after the 1973 Arab oil embargo to push U.S. automakers into producing more fuel-efficient cars. The standards require each manufacturers' fleet of cars to average at least 27.5 miles per gallon beginning this year. Under the law, NHTSA may, however, lower or raise the ceiling for subsequent model years.

For years, the automakers had little trouble meeting the gradually increasing standard because small, more fuel-efficient cars were in demand. With the demand for larger, less fuel-efficient vehicles increasing, many manufacturers have said they would not be able to meet the standard with the 1986 models scheduled to come out this fall.

PHILLIPS

EVEN THOUGH the offer satisfied Phillips stockholders desire for immediate return and continuing equity, the exchange offer has been costly. In the first quarter of 1985, Phillips has reported a significant drop in earnings on higher revenues. Earnings in the first period this year were $106 million, or 71 cents a share on total revenues of $4.02 billion. For the same period in 1984, however, earning were $193 million or $1.26 per share on gross revenues of $3.96 billion.

Part of the reduced earnings was the result of Phillips purchase of Aminoil in October 1984 and increased interest expense involved in that purchase, but a principal factor was a $40 million after-tax accrual of expenses related to the capital restructuring program.

"We will be involved with this heavy debt load for about the next three to four years," said Silas. "We want to get it back to about 50-50. We have to remain flexible in order not to miss any opportunity."

Silas said the recapitalization has put a pinch on some of the firm's operations. "When you need cash flow, you have to cut in those areas that can be cut. Exploration, research and development, public affairs are some of the areas that oil companies traditionally cut." He also mentioned elimination of non-productive operations and regional marketing as cost-cutting measures. Silas said there was a trend toward more regional marketing among the major oil companies who want to concentrate on the area they do best in.

Among the other plans Phillips has outlined for debt-reduction is the sale of it 25 percent interest in the Coal Oil Point oil field in California for $2 billion. It will also sell its mining and chemicals business, selected oil and gas properties, a gas liquids business, and interest in a British refinery, and will offer early retirement to 2,400 employees. Phillips would also like to sell its Denver office building when the real estate market picks up, according to Cox. Layoffs are also a possibility for the firm.

ASKED IF some of the restructuring of ARCO, in eliminating marginal operations and emphasizing production over exploration, might be in response to a feared, hostile takeover attempt by Pickens or another takeover group, the corporate leaders suggested there might be a hint of precaution in the move by ARCO.

"I think there might be a little fear behind the reorganization," said Cox.

Said Silas: "I think whatever ARCO is doing now has been in the plans for a long time. It is well thought out. I don't know about the timing, though."

As for Phillips, the chairman states that it will forge ahead, reducing debt and maintaining a strong cash flow by selling selected assets, improving overall effeciency, and demanding higher returns from selected projects. The firm is well-positioned in offshore California and the Gulf of Mexico and the North Sea as well as offshore China, where Phillips recently reported a discovery of 1,000-3,000 barrels per day on a tract 75 miles southeast of Hong Kong. The firm is also drilling on two other offshore structures in the China Sea.

"It is much too early in the exploration to predict what the petroleum furture of China will be, but I don't think we will be looking at "elephants" (giant oil structures) over there."

HE SAID the Chinese government was still making tough deals, using a complicated royalty formula that includes payout and structure size. "I think the Chinese are going to have to ease up on their deals, and I think they know they are going to have to ease up. It is still a highly bureaucratic nation, despite moves toward free enterprise," he said.

Neither Cox nor Silas foresee a drop in oil prices as the result of new elephant-sized fields being discovered throughout the world, such as the recently discovered Cano Limon field in Colombia, described as a 670 billion barrel field that is likely to grow with more exploration.

"There are more elephants to be found, and we need them," said Silas, "because production in nearly all the Middle East fields have peaked, and as production in these fields decline, we will need to replace it."

Also present at the Wildcatter's Reception from Phillips Petroleum were: C.M. Kittrell, executive vice president; L.M. Rickards, senior vice president; J.T. Boyd, vice president; B.M. Boyce, drilling and production manager; E.E. Clark, Permian Basin operations manager; R.H. Jukes, general manager Eastern Division; R.L. Rayl, general manager Western Division.

TI wins energy saving award from group

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas Instruments, Midland, was one of five Texas industrial firms awarded Tuesday for energy efficiency by the Public Utility Commission at ceremonies in Houston.

The Midland company received an award for implementation of an energy management system, which is expected to save the plant more than $200,000 in annual energy costs, according to the PUC.

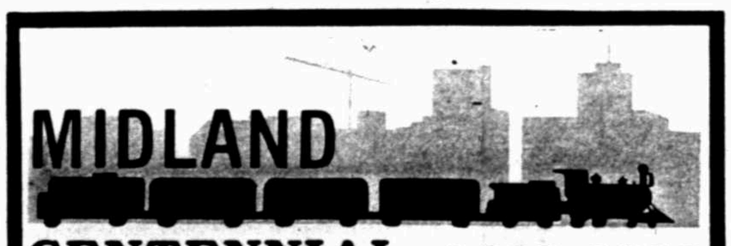

The other winners were Shell Oil Co., Deer Park; Snider Industries, Inc., Marshall; Acco Feed, Dallas; and Houston Lighting and Power Co., Houston.

Those companies receiving awards were selected from among 22 companies nominated. Each project was evaluated on the basis of its energy savings, economic impact, innovation and multiplier effict (if it has resulted in other energy-saving activities), the PUC reports.

The awards ceremony in Houston was part of the seventh annual Industrial Energy Technology Conference and Exhibition held this week. The conference was co-sponsored by the Houston Chamber of Commerce and the PUC.

PUT ALL YOUR EGGS IN THE BLUEBERRY BASKET

Eggs and blueberries come together and [illegible] very well

Mark Twain once suggested that you put all your eggs in one basket — and then watch the basket.

If it's a blueberry basket that the eggs are going into, you can be sure it will bear watching. Otherwise, the delicious treats that are made with eggs and blueberries will disappear right before your eyes.

"Who can help loving the land that has taught us six hundred and eighty-five ways to dress eggs?", Irish wit Thomas Moore wrote in the nineteenth century. And who cannot admire the generations of American homemakers who have created a seemingly endless repertoire of blueberry dishes since the early seventeenth century. The Pilgrims were introduced to this native berry by the friendly Indians who greeted the Mayflower pioneers. As a matter of fact, dried blueberries helped keep the Pilgrims alive during that first harsh winter.

If we don't exactly need blueberries to keep us alive during the beautiful summer months, we can certainly appreciate what they do to making living more lively. The bright berries reflect everything that's pleasant about summer — the blue skies, the waters, the mountain peaks, the cornflowers and bluebells in fields and gardens. Versatile eggs round out the picture, adding an extraordinary flavor and nutrition dimension to summer's favorite berry.

Nobody has ever stopped to count the ways that eggs and blueberries are lovingly combined. But almost everybody counts several egg and blueberry dishes among his and her favorites. At whatever age — or stage — one is in life there is a blueberry-egg dish to brighten the day. There are simple, nutritious, easy-to-digest dishes; elegant gourmet ones; diet specialties; dramatic desserts and beautiful breakfast ideas.

Try the recipes given here. They make up into eggs-traordinary blueberry treats. Surely one or another will fit into your life style. Maybe all of them.

BLUEBERRY SPONGE CUSTARDS

6 servings

- 1 cup fresh blueberries*
- 2/3 cup sugar
- 3 tablespoons flour
- 1 cup milk
- 3 eggs, separated
- 3 tablespoons lemon juice
- 2 tablespoons butter, melted
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon cream of tartar

Divide blueberries between 6 (6 oz. each) custard cups. In mixing bowl combine sugar and flour. Blend in milk, egg yolks, lemon juice, butter and salt. In large mixing bowl beat egg whites and cream of tartar until stiff but not dry, just until whites no longer slip when bowl is tilted. Gently fold yolk mixture into egg whites. Pour into custard cups over blueberries. Set cups in 13 x 9 x 2-inch baking pan. Pour very hot water into pan to within 1/2 inch of top of custard mixture. Bake in preheated 350°F. oven until cake tester inserted near center comes out clean, 30 to 35 minutes. Immediately remove cups from water. Cool at least 5 minutes before serving or cool completely.

BEAUTIFUL BLUEBERRY OMELET

1 serving

- 2 eggs
- 2 tablespoons water
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- Dash pepper
- 1/2 to 1 tablespoon butter
- 1/2 cup fresh blueberries* or blueberry sauce

Mix eggs, water, salt and pepper with fork. Heat butter in 8-inch omelet pan or fry pan over medium-high heat until just hot enough to sizzle a drop of water. Pour in egg mixture. Mixture should set at edges at once. With pancake turner turned over, carefully push cooked portions at edges toward center so uncooked portions flow to bottom. Tilt pan as necessary so uncooked eggs can flow. Slide pan rapidly back and forth over heat to keep mixture in motion and sliding freely. While top is still moist and creamy-looking, fill with warm blueberries. With pancake turner fold in half or roll, turning out onto plate with a quick flip of the wrist.

Blueberry Sauce

Combine 1/3 cup sugar and 1/4 cup water. Heat to boiling. Stir in 1 pint fresh blueberries and 1 tablespoon orange-flavored liqueur. Makes 2 cups.

*NOTE: Dry-pack frozen blueberries can be used when fresh blueberries are not available.

BLUEBERRY CUSTARD PARFAIT

6 to 8 servings

- 4 eggs, slightly beaten OR 6 egg yolks
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 2-1/2 cups milk
- 1-1/2 teaspoons vanilla
- 2 pints fresh blueberries*

In large saucepan blend together eggs, sugar and salt. Gradually stir in milk. Cook, stirring constantly, over low heat, until mixture thickens and just coats a metal spoon. Stir in vanilla. Cool quickly by setting pan in bowl of ice or cold water and stirring for a few minutes. Cover and chill thoroughly. Spoon blueberries into dessert or parfait glasses. Spoon custard sauce over berries.

BLUEBERRY EGGNOG

- 1 egg
- 3/4 cup cold milk
- 1/4 cup fresh blueberries*
- 1 tablespoon honey

Combine all ingredients in blender and blend until smooth.

How else can blueberries and eggs go together? Try Blueberry Sauce (recipe at left) over crepes, pancakes or French toast.

BLUEBERRY CHIFFON PIE

6 servings

- 1 pint fresh blueberries*
- 1/2 cup sugar, divided
- 1 envelope unflavored gelatin
- 1/2 cup milk
- 4 eggs, separated
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
- 1/4 teaspoon cream of tartar
- 1 (9-inch) pie shell, baked
- Blueberries, optional
- Whipped cream, optional

Measure 1 cup blueberries into blender container. Blend just until mashed, 10 to 15 seconds. Set aside. In saucepan stir together 1/4 cup sugar and gelatin. Blend in milk and let stand 1 minute. Stir in mashed blueberries, egg yolks, lemon juice and rind. Cook and stir over low heat until bubbly, about 5 minutes. Chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from a spoon, 45 to 60 minutes. In large mixing bowl beat egg whites and cream of tartar at high speed until foamy. Add remaining 1/4 cup sugar, 1 tablespoonful at a time, beating constantly until sugar is dissolved and whites are glossy and stand in soft peaks. Fold in chilled blueberry mixture and remaining whole berries. Pile mixture into pie shell. Chill until firm, at least 3 hours. Garnish with whipped cream and additional blueberries, if desired.

Rub just a bit of beaten whites between thumb and forefinger to feel if sugar is dissolved.*

BLUEBERRY YOGURT SOUFFLE

6 to 8 servings

- 1/2 cup sugar, divided
- 2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
- 1/2 cup water
- 6 eggs, separated
- 1 carton (8 oz.) lemon flavored yogurt
- 1/2 teaspoon cream of tartar
- 1 cup whipping cream
- 1 pint fresh blueberries*

Butter bottom and sides of 1-1/2-quart souffle dish. Sprinkle lightly with sugar. Make 4-inch band of triple-thickness aluminum foil long enough to go around dish and overlap 2 inches. Lightly butter 1 side of band and sprinkle with sugar. Wrap around outside of dish with sugared side in. Tie with string or fasten with tape. Collar should extend 2 inches above rim of dish. In saucepan stir together 1/4 cup sugar and gelatin. Blend in water and let stand 1 minute. Cook and stir over low heat until gelatin dissolves, about 3 minutes. Remove from heat and let stand 5 minutes. Blend in egg yolks. Cook and stir over low heat 2 to 3 minutes longer. Remove from heat. Blend in yogurt. Chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from a spoon, about 25 to 30 minutes. In large mixing bowl beat egg whites and cream of tartar at high speed until foamy. Add remaining sugar, 1 tablespoonful at a time, beating constantly until sugar is dissolved and whites are glossy and stand in soft peaks. Whip cream until stiff. Gently but thoroughly fold yolk mixture and whipped cream into egg whites. Fold in blueberries, reserving few for garnish. Carefully pour into prepared dish. Arrange reserved berries over top. Chill until set, several hours or overnight. Carefully remove foil band before serving.

New food gadgets stars of show

By JIM WOOD
Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Judging from the gossip, the star of the Gourmet Products Show is a squat round box with a handle and a cartoon drawing of an ice cream cone on the side.

The device is an ice cream maker that requires no electricity, no ice, no salt and almost no effort. And unlike those fabulous Italian models which sell for $300 and up, this new Donvier Ice Cream Maker will retail in the $38 to $50 range.

I tried one and produced some very nice strawberry ice cream. The mixing required five revolutions of the crank and then, during the next 20 minutes, about four more, and that's all there was to it. The cooling comes from a refrigerant in the container, which is placed in a freezer for seven hours before you begin making the ice cream. It's fun to watch the cream harden though the transparent top. Zabar's in New York sold 4,500 of them in early March, and reports the buyers are delighted with the results.

But the appeal of the show wasn't limited to hardware. Many of the exhibitors were as interesting as their exhibits.

There was Marie Antoinette, who adjusted her blue brocade bodice, smiled under her air-cooled silver nylon wig, and then giggled. Annie Jesson Keenan was being chauffeured everywhere so no street baddy could steal her fake jewels. She was publicizing the French Revolution for Vivalp, USA, a firm that's pushing, among other things, raclette cooking as the "fondue of the '80s." Basically, the system is grilled meats and vegetables with melted cheese and condiments poured on top.

Many of the booths offer samples to eat. A bystander tried a piece of fudge held out by Jim Bear at the Calico Cottage Fudge exhibit. The fudge tasted surprisingly good, surprisingly because it was made from a packaged formula. Bear said that the kettle operation, which costs about $4,200, is used in many prestigious stores and outlets which sell the fudge under their own names. They make the fudge in a few minutes, let it set up over night and next day it's ready to sell.

T.P. Larkin was making making rosettes, a sort of lacey, waffle-like fried confection, by dipping a butterfly-shaped iron into batter for 3 to 5 seconds, then holding it for 5 to 8 seconds in hot oil. The method was something like the way you cook doughnuts. The result was a light, crisp, edible little cup. Rolled in confectioners' sugar, it was delicious. Larkin said that because the batter from Kalkus-Hirco Co. of Chicago is made with powdered ingredients, the rosettes will keep six to eight months. Fresh ingredients make batter break down, he said. The six-piece Rosette set, including the mix, sells for $14.95.

One of the tastiest products was the wine jelly offered by the Napa Valley Connection. The red jelly is made from 100 percent Cabernet Sauvignon, and the white from 100 percent Sauvignon Blanc. The jellies contain 2.5 to 3 percent alcohol, according to Joyce Gain.

"It's wonderful for children," she joked. "They sleep all night."

At another booth, I tried out Le Penetrator, a mallet-like device with prongs sticking out. The idea is that you put seasoning on a piece of meat then hit it with Le Penetrator. The prongs push the seasonings down into the meat and at the same time tenderize the meat. The holes are sealed again as the meat cooks. I tasted one piece, and it was tender and tasty most of the way through on each side. But in the middle, where Le Penetrator hadn't, the meat was still quite tough.

I was struck with how unfair it was to judge the product by a single tasting. The meat may have been extraordinarily tough, the device may have been dull or there may have been other reasons that caused the device to perform below its customary level.

Some of the items looked familiar, like the wine rack you put together yourself. Made by the J.K. Adams Co. of Dorset, Vt., it is assembled like Tonka Toys, according to Terry Warren, who was running the booth.

Another highlight was the Sunbeam Oskar food processor, which appeared to have several advantages over conventional food processors. It takes up less room on your kitchen counter; seems easier to clean, and does a good job with chopping.

Special seasoning's recipe kept secret by its creator

LaBELLE, Fla. (AP) — When Bill Gerstman mixes up a batch of "Monkey Dust" he's very careful no one is around to learn his secret — a secret he's vigorously guarded since he first put it together on a Pacific Island 40 years ago.

Even if you read the list of ingredients on the package, you'll not have the key to why this former mess sergeant's concoction is gaining national popularity without any advertising.

Actually, "Monkey Dust" is how he's dubbed his Everglades Seasoning, a mixture of spices and herbs customers use to enhance the flavor of anything from eggs, salads and soups to all kinds of meat, fish or vegetables.

"Only my wife, Lora Mae, my son-in-law and my attorney know all the ingredients," says the 68-year-old Gerstman, unlocking the small building on State Road 80 in this country town on the Caloosahatchee River 30 miles east of Fort Myers, where he makes his product.

"It's up here," he says, pointing to his head when asked where he guards the formula for Everglades Seasoning.

Born in Cullman, Ala., Gerstman learned to be a butcher in the family slaughterhouse. In 1941 when he joined what was then the U.S. Army Air Force, the military made use of his trade — first making him a butcher and finally a mess sergeant.

In 1944, he was transferred to the 714th Rescue Squadron stationed on the Pacific island of Saipan. There, army troops on the island got their supplies from the navy commissary. After providing for sailors' needs and officer mess halls, the only meat left for Gerstman's 300 GIs was lamb — the least palatable to the troops.

"When I got there, they were throwing the lamb into the ocean," recalls Gerstman. "They wouldn't eat it."

He decided to "doctor" the meat so his men would eat it. With ingenuity, he put together an assortment of condiments he gave the cooks to disguise the lamb taste.

The change was immediate.

"They didn't know what they were eating," he says with a smile, "and asked for more."

Gerstman met and married his wife while stationed in Fort Myers. Following his discharge, the couple settled here where Gerstman became a butcher at the LaBelle Trading Post, owned by M.G. Davis.

When barbecued ribs and chickens were added at the general store in 1976, Gerstman prepared them with the special seasoning he hadn't used in 30 years.

Soon he was selling his flavoring mixture in plastic bags. One of his customers called it "Monkey Dust" and the name caught on.

DEAR ABBY

Happy foursome broken up by hurt feelings over past

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Five months ago I found a wonderful man I'll call Joe. We are perfect for each other in every way. Joe introduced me to his best friend, "Jack," who is married to a girl I'll call Joyce. Well, Joe and I and Jack and Joyce became a regular foursome.

I sensed a definite closeness between Joyce and my Joe, so I half-kiddingly asked Joe if he had ever been to bed with Joyce. He said yes, but that was before he met me. Well, I just freaked out! I refused to socialize with Joyce, and I told her why.

Joe thinks I'm being childish and selfish, but I can't help it. Every time I look at Joyce I visualize her in bed with my Joe, and I can't handle it.

The foursome is broken up, and Jack doesn't know the real reason. Joyce told him that she and I had a falling-out. (He doesn't know what happened between Joe and Joyce before he married her.)

I realize that what went on between Joe and Joyce happened before he knew me, but I still resent the fact that she once shared the same kind of special relationship with my Joe that I now have.

Whose fault is this mess? It's not my fault that I can't look at Joyce without wanting to cry. Is there a solution? — ANONYMOUS IN OHIO

DEAR ANONYMOUS: For openers, you shouldn't have asked Joe if he had ever been to bed with Joyce. (It's none of your business.) And Joe shouldn't have told you. You are childish and unfair to refuse to socialize with Joyce, thus breaking up the foursome.

The solution would be to take a more realistic and mature attitude about something that happened before you were even in the picture, then bury the hatchet. But not in Joyce's back.

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for running the letter from "All Choked Up," complaining about people who practically bathe in cologne and perfume. I have a close friend who really needs to read that letter (I clipped it), but I don't know how to get that message to her without hurting her feelings. She may have read it, but most people never see themselves in your letters.

I've been trying for a long time to think of a diplomatic way to tell her that her cologne is killing me! When we're in a restaurant, I try to sit on the other side of the table. When we talk, I try not to get too close, but when I'm riding in a car with her, I'm trapped. If I open the car window, she says, "The air conditioner is on." Then she rolls the window up!

I wish perfume counters sold bottles of "Fresh Air" — SUFFOCATED BY SCENTS.

DEAR SUFFOCATED: What's wrong with the direct approach? No friend worth having would intentionally offend. It would be a kindness to tell her.

DEAR READERS: Have you been racking your brain about what to give your niece or nephew for graduation from high school — or college? Or maybe there's a Bar Mitzvah or confirmation coming up.

Do I have an idea for you! It's a brand-new book titled "The Great Thoughts" by George Seldes (published by Ballantine Books).

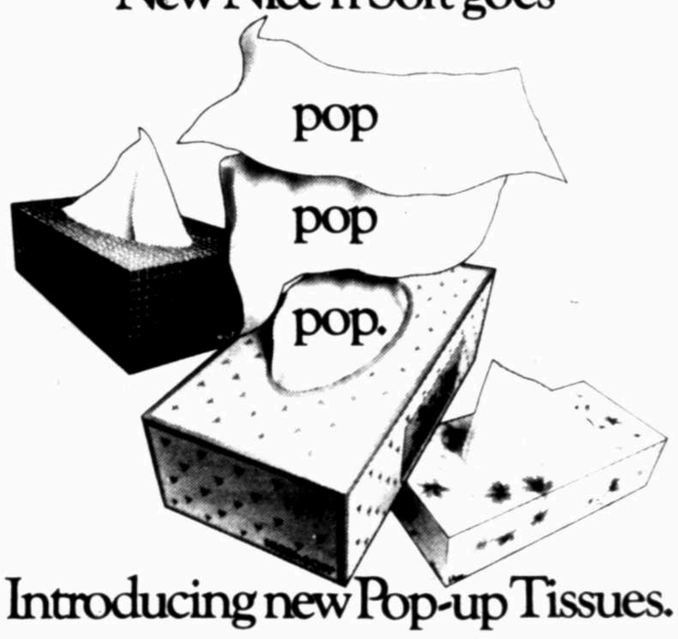

This is a collection of thoughts, quotations and ideas that have determined the intellectual history of the world — short passages in the original words of the men and women who have conceived them. It covers more than 2,500 thinkers, from Abelard to Zola — from classical Greece to contemporary America — arranged alphabetically by author and indexed by subject matter.

"The Great Thoughts" is not only a great gift that will last a lifetime, it's a fine addition to your own library.

(Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address with a check or money order for $2.50 to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Potluck suppers take turn toward elegant dining

By MAUREEN CLANCY
Copley News Service

The evening was a huge success.

The guests were relaxed and in high spirits.

The atmosphere was comfortable and elegant, yet had an overhanging aura of excitement.

The dinner was divine — all seven courses, including Beluga caviar served with iced vodka and shredded breast of pheasant, rabbit medallions in a Cajun mustard sauce, barbecued leg of lamb, potatoes gratin, and a double-whammy dessert of chocolate mousse cake and homemade tuiles(cookies) with pink grapefruit sections soaked in Framboise.

And, after the last crumb was nibbled and the last sip of wine downed, the kitchen remained neat and tidy; the host and hostess as fresh as when the first guest had arrived.

A catered affair? Not exactly.

Gourmet-to-go? Nope.

It's the cooperative dinner party, and it's one of the hottest new trends in entertaining for 1985.

COOPERATIVE DINNER parties are not exactly new. People have been calling them "potlucks" for years.

The cooperative dinner party allows each person or couple the chance to try a new recipe, to "show off" some new and extravagant dish or simply to share a favorite food with friends, without having to get involved with all the rest of the time-consuming dinner party logistics.

Like the traditional dinner party, the cooperative party has to have a host or hostess. It falls to this person to set the date and invite guests, to coordinate the menu, to set the table, serve and load the dishwasher afterward.

For the best results, the following tips should be heeded:

— Foods should be prepared as much as possible ahead of time. However, this does not mean that last-minute mincing and frying can't be done (the host should be asked ahead of time about pan availability). In fact, having a few chefs in the kitchen putting finishing touches on their creations enhances the fun.

— The folks responsible for the hors d'oeuvres should arrive on time.

— Guests should bring the appropriate serving plates for their offerings.

— When "budget" is a consideration, each guest might bring a bottle of wine or some beer. However, it is easier for the host to provide the wine, especially if he is preparing the main course.

— "Guest chefs" should consider that the food must be transported when deciding what dish to prepare.

With these recipes as starting point and a lively, enthusiastic guest list, you can share the cooking and the compliments at your next cooperative dinner party.

POTATOES GRATIN

6 large baking potatoes
3 small onions, chopped
8 tbsps. (one stick) butter
2 tbsps. flour
1 cup milk
⅓ cup white wine
About 1 cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 cup whipping cream

Peel potatoes, cut in thin slices. Saute onion in 4 tablespoons butter for bout 10 minutes, then sprinkle with flour. Mix well and cook for several minutes more. Add milk and white wine. Cook until liquid is reduced to creamy, semi-thick sauce.

Butter heavy gratin dish. Layer sauce and potatoes in it. Sprinkle with half of grated Parmesan cheese. (Fried bacon bits may also be added at this point.) Pour whipping cream on top of potatoes and sprinkle again with Parmesan cheese. Dot with remaining butter. Bake in 400 F oven for about 45 minutes, or until brown and bubbly.

Serves 4.

MARINATED LAMB HUNAN STYLE

3 cups chicken broth or stock
3 cups water
½ cup light soy sauce
⅓ cup dry or medium-dry sherry
2 cloves star anise
1 cinnamon stick
1 piece dried orange peel, 2½ by ¼ inches
1-inch piece fresh ginger
2 large cloves garlic, halved
2 tbsps. vegetable oil
6 lbs. boned leg of lamb, rolled and tied
1 medium turnip, quartered
2 tbsps. sugar
Fresh parsley for garnish

In large pot combine broth, water, soy sauce, sherry, star anise, cinnamon tick, orange peel, ginger and garlic and bring to boil. Reduce heat; cover and simmer for 15 minutes.

In large skillet heat oil. Brown lamb on all sides. Return sauce to boil and add meat. If necessary add boiling water so that sauce comes almost three-fourths of way up sides of meat. Return to boil; reduce heat to medium, cover pot and simmer for about 1 hour. From time to time, skim off froth and fat. Add turnip and sugar and simmer until lamb is tender, about another 1¼ hours or until meat is easily pierced with fork.

Allow meat to cool in sauce. Refrigerate or freeze. To serve, defrost if frozen and remove layer of fat from top. If refrigerated, remove layer of fat from top. Slice meat thinly and reheat in sauce. Garnish with parsley.

RICE WITH DRIED FRUITS AND NUTS

9 cups chicken or beef broth or stock
4½ cups long-grain rice
9 tbsps. unsalted butter (1 stick plus 1 tbsp.)
1½ cups whole blanched almonds
2¼ cups dried apricots
2¼ cups pitted dried prunes
2¼ cups raisins or currants
¾ tsp. cinnamon

In large pot, combine broth and rice and bring to boil over high heat. Stir reduce heat to simmer and cover pot. Cook about 20 minutes, until rice is tender and liquid has been absorbed.

Melt 1½ tablespoons butter in large skillet over low heat. Add almonds and saute until golden; remove.

Add remaining butter and melt over medium heat. Stir in fruits and coat and cook until heated through. Mix in almonds and cinnamon and stir in rice.

Refrigerate or freeze, if desired. To reheat, bring to room temperature.

THE BUTCHER

Pork shoulder highly versatile

By MERLE ELLIS

Pork shoulder butt, or Boston butt as it often is called, is one of the most versatile cuts of pork. It also is one of the least expensive. It was on special in my area for 89 cents a pound last week — if you bought the whole shoulder. I bought two.

There are so many things that can be done with a pork butt that whenever I see them on special I stock up. It is the perfect cut for making all kinds of sausage products, with just about the perfect ratio of lean to fat. It contains only a portion of the shoulder blade bone, and that is easily removed so you can cut the meat into slices, cubes, steaks, strips for stir-fry, whatever. It also is the cut called for in some of the wonderful regional specialties in this country — Char Siu and Tasso, to name two.

Pork roast

CHAR SIU is that wonderfully aromatic, rich, mahogany-colored barbecued pork that you see hanging in the windows of Chinese markets. It is used in dishes from simple pork noodle soup and stir-fried vegetables to Char Siu Bow and Char Siu Kock, the hamburgers and Pasties (meat pies) of Chinese cuisine.

Tasso is a highly seasoned, heavily smoked pork butt used to flavor Cajun dishes, from beans and greens, to gumbos and jambalayas. In Louisiana, most every meat market makes its own, but there aren't many Cajun markets outside the state and Tasso is a little hard to come by. That may change soon. Paul Prudhomme, the famous Cajun chef, has just bought a federally inspected meat plant in Melville, LA, and plans to make Tasso available nationwide.

In the meantime, both Tasso and Char Siu may be made at home. I made one of each last week with my "on special" pork butts and they were both a whole lot better than not bad. Perhaps my Char Siu was not quite as good as the best I've bought in Chinatown, and Prudhomme probably will do a better Tasso, but for 89 cents a pound I was pleased with my results and I had a lot of fun in the process.

CHAR SIU

2 pounds boneless pork butt, cut with the grain in strips about 1 inch thick
1 tablespoon soy sauce
2 tablespoons ketchup
2 tablespoons hoisin sauce
2 tablespoons dry sherry or white wine
3 tablespoons honey
2 cloves garlic, minced
½ teaspoon five-spice powder
¼ teaspoon saltpeter (optional)

Put the pork strips in a good sized bowl. Combine all remaining ingredients and mix well with the pork. Marinate at room temperature for 2 to 4 hours or refrigerate overnight.

Put one oven rack at the top position and another at the lowest position in the oven. Put about an inch of water in a large shallow roasting pan and put it on the bottom shelf. Preheat the oven to 350 degrees.

Run a bamboo skewer through one end of each strip of pork and suspend it from the top rack so that it hangs down over the drip pan.

Roast the pork for 45 minutes to one hour, basting occasionally with the marinade.

Let the pork cool and slice thinly across the grain. Serve warm or cold with a good mustard as an appetizer, or toss some in a soup or stir-fry a bit with vegetables or perhaps make Bow.

Char Siu Bow is simply a steamed bun filled with a mixture containing Char Siu. It is one of the many dishes in the Chinese gastronomic tradition that fall into that category of cuisine called Dim Sum — tea cakes, snack food or, more poetically, "little jewels to please the heart." Here is a simple version that, while not authentic, is a hit around our house.

CHAR SIU BOW

½ cup Char Siu, chopped, OR ¼ cup Char Siu mixed with ¼ cup cooked shrimp
½ cup water chestnuts, chopped
¼ cup fresh bamboo shoots, chopped
1½ teaspoons soy sauce
2 tablespoons chopped green onion
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
2 packages refrigerator biscuits (20)

Combine all ingredients except the biscuits and mix well.

Stretch out each biscuit into a 3- or 4-inch circle and place a teaspoon or two of the Char Siu mixture in the center. Pinch the edges of the biscuit together to form a round bun and place, seam side down, on a 2-inch square of waxed paper. Steam for 10 minutes.

In a Chinese tea house serving Dim Sum, these would be steamed and served in a traditional bamboo steamer, but you can easily make a simple steamer out of almost any covered pot, using a plate and a tuna fish can or two to hold the plate up off the bottom of the pot.

You can also, if you wish, bake your Bows in a preheated 375-degree oven for 15 to 20 minutes, or until golden brown.

A sort of Chinese pastie can be made by using pie crust dough instead of biscuit dough. Cut out little 3-inch circles of dough. Put a teaspoon or two of the meat mixture in the center of each, moisten the edge with water and fold in half. Pinch the edges together to seal. Make vents in the top of the pastry with a fork. Bake for 10 minutes at 425 degrees until brown.

So much for Char Siu. We'll do Tasso next time.

Fresh corn made into pancakes

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

At this time of year cooks are likely to find fresh corn on supermarket shelves all over the country.

Recently one of my friends treated her family and guests to an old American favorite, Fresh Corn Pancakes, at a weekend brunch. Her recipe produces pancakes that are crisp on the outside and tender on the inside. They are so deliciously rich they do not need butter.

FRESH CORN PANCAKES

3 large ears fresh corn
1 cup all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1/16th teaspoon pepper
2 large eggs
1 cup milk
Vegetable Oil

Remove husks and silks from corn. With a sharp knife cut kernels from cobs; with back of knife scrape cobs to release milky pulp; makes at least 2 cups; reserve.

In a large bowl stir together flour, sugar, baking powder, salt and pepper.

In a small bowl beat together eggs, milk and 2 tablespoons oil until blended. Add to flour mixture, stirring only until flour is moistened; stir in reserved corn.

Pour enough oil into a large skillet to a depth of ¼-inch and heat. For each pancake pour 2 tablespoons batter into the hot oil — do not crowd. Fry until bubbles form along edges. Using a spatula and a fork, turn and cook other side until golden. Repeat, adding more oil as necessary. Serve with maple syrup.

Makes 24 pancakes.

Cognac imports set record

COGNAC, France (AP) — A record 29.5 million bottles of cognac were imported by the United States in 1984, according to the Bureau National du Cognac.

That figure represents a 14 percent increase in quantity from the 25.8 million bottles imported in 1983, and a 28 percent increase in dollar value.

Great Britain had been the No. 1 cognac market until 1980.

Magazine celebrates 100th anniversary with time-tested recipes

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Mildred Ying's culinary knowledge spans two continents. She is expert in both American and Chinese cooking. Born and reared in Shanghai, she came to America to gain her Home Economics B.A. degree at a Colorado university and has lived and cooked in the United States ever since.

Since 1977 she has been using her background and very great talents in her job at Good Housekeeping magazine. At present she is its food director and there's an interesting display of her work in the May 1985 issue. Because the magazine is celebrating its 100th anniversary, Mildred and her colleagues chose 100 favorite recipes (from 1885 to 1985) — from Good Housekeeping's bounteous collection — to present to readers.

One of these is for the ever-popular Irish Soda Bread. You can count on its accuracy. As Mildred Ying says, "We don't want our readers to waste their money or time, or to run the risk of disappointing their families, and so we test and retest our recipes before we publish them. When you see a photograph of a dish in our magazine, and make it at home, you'll find it will look just the way it was pictured."

GOOD HOUSEKEEPING'S WHOLE-WHEAT IRISH SODA BREAD

2½ cups whole-wheat flour
1½ cups all-purpose flour
2 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
¾ teaspoon baking soda
6 tablespoons butter or margarine (¾ stick)
1 cup golden or dark seedless raisins
2 eggs
1½ cups buttermilk

Grease 2-quart round casserole. In large bowl, with fork, mix first 6 ingredients. With pastry blender or two knives used scissors fashion, cut in butter or margarine until mixture resembles coarse crumbs; stir in raisins.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. In small bowl, with fork, beat eggs slightly. Remove 1 tablespoon beaten egg and reserve. Stir buttermilk and remaining egg into flour mixture just until flour is moistened. (Dough will be sticky.)

Turn dough onto well-floured surface. With floured hands, knead dough about 10 strokes to mix thoroughly. Shape dough into a ball; place in casserole. With sharp knife, cut a 4-inch cross about ¼-inch deep in center of dough ball; brush dough with reserved egg.

Bake 60 to 70 minutes until toothpick inserted in center of bread comes out clean. Cool bread in casserole on wire rack 10 minutes; remove bread from casserole and cool on rack 30 minutes for easier slicing. Serve bread warm. Or, cool bread completely on wire rack to serve later. Makes 1 loaf, 12 servings. About 260 calories per serving.

Child: American food professional

Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Julia Child's cab driver was just finishing his Kentucky Fried Chicken in the front seat when he stopped at the American Institute of Wine and Food.

Child and her husband, Paul, were here for an institute dinner that night, and at 3 p.m. it already had been a long day. The institute, she explains, is interested in the quality of food, everything from Wonder bread to truffles, and since its founding in 1981 has grown to 4,000 members.

The institute already has sponsored a successful conference on gastronomy, but there also was a panel that Child was not so enthusiastic about. The subject was whether gastronomy and nuitrition could feed at the same table. The panel, it seemed, had been dominated by "scareheads."

"I think that wasn't so successful," she says. "One of the nutritionists had had obesity problems and one had had a heart attack. If people have had these problems, they tend to come at it from that point of view. What I want is healthy, normal nutritionists and with good appetites. Too many of them are scareheads."

Someone mentioned he'd heard that Child and Marion Cunningham, author of "The Fanny Farmer Baking Cook," had retreated to the lobby and gobbled several chocolates.

"I could have," she says, laughing her down-in-the-chest chuckle. "I think we'll have to do better. We needed some people from the other side, some who aren't scareheads. When my first book came out in 1960, nobody paid any attention to butter and fat. One wonderful recipe was for spinach: You cooked the spinach and then kept stirring it over low heat and adding butter and butter and butter. I definitely have calmed down some. I've talked to doctors a bit and the usual view is moderation in all things and in great variety."

The system seems to be paying off for Child, who looks 10 to 15 years younger than her age, 72. Although her exercise now is largely limited to walking, she is keeping her weight — the bane of the food professional — under strict control. Despite her 6-foot-2-inch height, her posture is erect and she moves with apparent ease.

Child was born in Pasadena, Calif., and educated at Katherine Branson School in Ross, north of San Francisco, before going east to Smith College (class of 1934). She met Paul while serving with the Office of Strategic Services during World War II and followed him on foreign service assignments in Europe. They now live part of the year in Cambridge, Mass., and part in Santa Barbara (where her family spent summers while she was growing up). The Childs also own a place in the south of France between Nice and Grasse.

"We're tri-coastal. The last winter we spent in southern France, the weather was miserable and everybody had terrible colds way down in their chests and you had to take antibiotics. They gave everybody eucalyptus suppositories and every one went around smelling of eucalyptus, even my pussycat, who later died. I told Paul I really don't want to spend another winter there."

Santa Barbara, she says, is a wonderful place to live, blessed with nice people, beautiful weather and, she adds without a trace of irony, it is sweet-smelling.

There, in a rented building which has housed at various times a restaurant, a mud wrestling exhibition hall and an antique store, Child and her 15-member production team have completed six one-hour video casettes on how to cook.

"Our producer feels the day of the half-hour cooking show is just about over. Instead it's going to be little five-minute spots, mostly on daytime shows. Casettes are so perfect for teaching cooking, you can get in every single detail, more than you can do in a demonstration. You can come in for closeups, move backward, forward, freeze frame."

With Judith Jones, her Knopf editor who also worked with James Beard, M.F.K. Fisher, Marion Cunningham and in a non-food vein, John Updike, Child and company members wrestled with the one-hour format. She is pleased with the result, scheduled to be released this summer. She also is planning a big book and currently works on a column for a Sunday newspaper supplement, which has a circulation of 27 million, higher than the "Good Morning America" television spots she also makes. She adds that she suspects the column readers are more awake than the television viewers who see the show early in the morning.

Child, who could barely cook when she married at 34, took intensive Berlitz courses so that she could attend the Cordon Bleu school in Paris. Later, with Simone Beck and Louisette Bertholle, she opened a cooking school, L'Ecole des Trois Gourmandes. Now, having taught millions to cook through her books and television series, Child finds herself famous and financially comfortable.

Italian Barolo overlooked

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

I asked a wine collector, "What is the best Barolo you've ever tasted?" and the reply was somewhat predictable:

"It was a 1971, I think. I had it about two years ago. Marvelous wine ..."

I asked who made it, and the collector couldn't recall.

I asked another wine collector the same question:

"It was a 1976 from Conterno, I think," he replied. "Or was it a '78?"

Such hesitant and tentative replies never would be accorded to Bordeaux. The most memorable of Bordeaux wines stand out like a beacon in the night. My most memorable Bordeaux was a 1945 Chateau Latour I had three years ago. The other wine collectors likewise were able to recall with ease their favorite Bordeaux: 1929 Chateau Lafite and 1961 Chateau Margaux.

Yet, people don't pay proper attention to Italian wine, and thus is Barolo ignored.

Barolo probably is Italy's greatest wine. There may be some who will vote for Taurasi, Sassacaia, Montepulciano, or Caramignano, and certainly there are those who argue that the usually expensive Brunello di Montelcino is the best wine made in the world.

But Barolo is the acknowledged king of Italian vino. It was the first wine in Italy to be vinified dry, in the French manner, and aged in oak, the way the French do. It was one of the first to be exported, and it was one of the first Italian wines recognized as having staying power, with potential to improve in the bottle.

As with all great wines, it possesses at its best a multitude of aromas and flavors. Victor Hazan, in his book "Italian Wine," says:

"A heavy, dense, rubbery scent of tar muscles past the ethereal ones of faded rose, violet and almond. The intriguing alternation of light and heavy aromas, flowery and tarry, is one through which we learn to identify not only Barolo, but most wines from the nebbiolo grape. In a fully mature Barolo it is accompanied by other sensations that may recall tree bark, leather, pepper or tobacco."

Clearly this is a monumental achievement; not even great Bordeaux can offer such intriguing and complex scents.

Yet it is that tarry component that tends to override so many Barolos, and when that element is too strong, too dominant, the wine can be hard to like when youthful. And this makes understanding young Barolo such a hard task.

Most Barolos need time in the bottle to yield their best faces. And the amount of time needed varies depending on the vintage. In the poor years, the wine becomes drinkable sooner; in the great vintages (such as 1978), the wine stays hard and full for decades.

The style of Barolo once was monstrous: coarse and laden with tannin. That made the wine so hard to like when young that it hurt the image of Barolo.

So producers like Renatto Ratti and Pio Boffa began instituting new methods to the Piedmont region about 1975. In the last few years that style change has become noticeable in lighter wines, but with as much complexity as before.

Some purists will argue that the wines have suffered for all that. I doubt it. Although we won't know for some time whether these newer-style wines will carry the same timber into the next century, I suspect the wines will be fine.

Moreover, they are good values today. Even the best of the producers charges less than $20 for good Barolo Riserva (riserva wines are aged longer in the producer's cellar and are generally bigger, richer wines). Most Barolos today sell for $10 or less.

Back to my question regarding the best Barolos ever tasted. My most memorable Barolos have been a 1968 Giuseppe Mascarello and a 1967 Granducca. The Mascarello was muscular, full-bodied wine with grand intensity. The latter wine was lighter, more delicate in texture, but with an intoxicating aroma of cherries.

Bob Mills, a collector of Italian wine, says he can't choose one Barolo as the very best he has had, since the range of styles is so different.

'Babies' fed herring, whipping cream sludge

Hearst News Service

The mixture looks just terrible. It's a sickening gray and thick as sludge and the mere thought of it being consumed as a milkshake makes you feel queasy.

But this awful concoction — part Atlantic herring, part whipping cream, part vitamins and minerals and all beaten up in an oversized Cuisinart — is the stuff of life for scores of distressed seals and other young pinnipeds that have been separated from their mothers and haven't yet gotten the hang of eating fish.

Along with thousands of pounds of frozen herring (Atlantic, not Pacific, because Atlantic is higher in fat content), the "baby formula" is the chief staple on the menu at the California Marine Mammal Center at Fort Cronkhite in California's Marin county.

If they're at home in the wild, sea lion pups go from 60 pounds at birth to 300 pounds within 60 days, a gain of about 12 pounds a day, on mother's milk. Until they learn to gobble fish on their own, the volunteers who work with them at the mammal center try to achieve the same weighty results with that gray gook, which is administered with tender, loving care through large tubes stuck down the animals' throats — or dissected or whole herring handed out in a process that carries the misnomer "force" feeding. There's little if any force exhibited on any level, and when it is it's only because the seal — sick or disoriented — is becoming a bit too active for its own good.

The object, after a few weeks or months, is to get the animal — whether a baby or an adult — strong enough and well enough to return to its natural habitat. The 191 people on the center's staff — 95 percent of them volunteers — care deeply about that.

Caring is one thing that hasn't changed in the decade since Lloyd Smalley founded the place. Physically, there have been enormous alterations in the grounds of the center, which was once a basing site for Nike missiles.

Frozen herring fill the silos now. Fenced-in pens with plastic floors and portable kennels are mushrooming on the rugged landscape, hard by the Pacific Ocean. There's an intensive care unit and lab facility — once a shipping container — donated by Matson Lines; an attractive gift shop, bookstore and museum building.

Peigin Barrett, who serves as executive director, often can't believe the progress herself. She was here when this was just a small rescue, treatment and rehabilitation operation that served 18 coastal counties. Now there's a vigorous community education program, tours and lectures and outreach into San Francisco area schools. And the center is acquiring a national reputation for excellence on several levels.

Barrett would love to add a facility to house and treat dolphins, but money is always a problem. It costs $250,000 a year to do the work that is being done now, and the Marine Mammal Center has never had any government funding. Financial support comes entirely from membership dues, donations and private grants.

JUNIOR CLUB SANDWICHES

Make a chicken salad using diced cooked chicken, diced celery, mayonnaise and salt and pepper. Have lettuce and sliced tomatoes on hand. Cook bacon until crisp. Make sandwiches, filling them with the chicken salad, lettuce, tomato and bacon; use 2 or 3 slices of mayonnaise-spread toast for each sandwich. Cut into triangles; insert a pick holding an olive in each triangle. Serve at once.

Mesquite fires culinary imagination

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

HOUSTON — The much maligned mesquite tree is moving uptown.

For the first time since the days when Indians used it in a potion to cure venereal disease, the scrubby, gnarled Proposis glandulosa is being treated with a measure of respect.

A few years ago, the tree might have provoked only a string of powerful cuss words from ranchers who held that the worthless thing did nothing but make life miserable, what with the way it eats up rangeland and how you have to bulldoze it to kill it.

Things aren't so one-sided now. City folks are flocking to get a taste of mesquite-cooked steak and fish and even broccoli. And although mesquite isn't exactly in a league yet with nouvelle cuisine, it is keeping many a chain saw-wielding entrepreneur in walking-around money.

"That tree now has a glitter of gold to it," says Texan Ray Pennington, who expects to sell about 3,000 tons of the wood this year in 37 states.

Mesquite can now be bought in logs, chunks, chips, flakes and charcoal. Restaurants from New York to Los Angeles are using it to add a distinctive smoky flavor to their cooking. And the middlemen who get the trees from the Texas rangeland to supermarket shelves and restaurant grills have invested millions of dollars in processing equipment, trucks and the wood itself.

WHERE ONCE there were numerous agricultural studies on how to rid mesquite from the landscape, there now is an organization called Los Amigos del Mesquite — "the friends of the mesquite." It counts scientists and artisans among its numbers.

Joseph Messina is a good example of how mesquite is making its mark.

He was once a mechanical engineer with Honeywell Inc. in New York. Two years ago, while commuting to work by train, Messina read that mesquite was becoming more popular in restaurants and specialty stores.

He thought about how he was strapped to a desk and how the Eastern Seaboard wasn't exactly crawling with mesquite. After cooking some steaks over mesquite chips he had bought at Bloomingdale's, the trendy New York-based department store, Messina started looking in Texas newspaper classified ads for a supplier.

A farmer outside Waco, Texas, agreed to let Messina rid his land of the bothersome trees for $65 a cord. Messina went to Texas, cut three cords and shipped them home. Thus was born Coyote Pete's Western Mesquite, which now sells about 35,000 pounds of the wood each month to restaurants and retail outlets. (At Houston supermarkets these days, a five-pound bag of mesquite chips or chunks sells for $1.99.)

"I TOOK a gamble and it looks like it's going to pay off," said Messina, who lives a comfortable life in High Point, N.J. "It really is the rage of the restaurants right now. I'm getting calls every day."

The history of the mesquite is an intrinsic part of the American West. The tree's spread to more than 75 million acres of Texas alone is directly linked to cattle drives of the mid-1800s that brought Texas beef to the Eastern markets.

In those early years, mesquite was not a factor in the state's vast grasslands. But as the ranges were overgrazed, the ugly but durable scrub tree began to take hold. Cattle ate its beans and the tree spread northward on dung heaps left along the trails.

"The mesquite is an invader," said W.J. Waldrip, a Lubbock rancher and former president of the Texas Cattleman's Association "It wasn't here when the white man got here. It competes with our forage plants for space, nutrients and light. It adds to our labor bill because it takes more cowboys to round up a herd where there is mesquite."

But the mesquite was not always so vilified. J. Frank Dobie, arguably Texas' preeminent historian, extolled the tree's virtues in a 1941 edition of Arizona Highways magazine. The original timber for the Alamo was mesquite, he noted, as were the first fence posts on Texas ranches.

MESQUITE THORNS once were used as needles, and the Pima Indians used the beans to make both bread and liquor. The tree's beans, bark and roots were used by both the Indians and later Mexicans as a cure for flux, flesh wounds, sore throats, dysentery, toothaches and venereal disease, Dobie wrote.

The Mexicans made their first cannon of mesquite in the fight for independence from Spain, and during the U.S. Civil War mesquite beans were used as a coffee substitute when the real thing was all but impossible to buy.

"I ask for no better monument over my grave," Dobie wrote, "than a good mesquite tree." For all its other uses, mesquite's most enduring quality is what happens when it is set ablaze. A wood with the hardness of mahogany, it produces a heat so intense that it is used for baking pottery in Mexico. The heat sears meat and seals in juices, while the smoke adds a special flavor.

That quality has long been valued in the Southwest.

Jake Landers, an agricultural extension agent in the west Texas city of San Angelo, recalls his father-in-law's descriptions of huge ranch cookouts in the early part of the century. The ranchers would dig a pit, pile it with mesquite, burn it to coals and cover it overnight so it would be just right for cooking the next day.

ROSA'S RESTAURANT in San Angelo has been cooking with mesquite for the last 30 years, he noted.

In places like San Angelo, gathering mesquite for a barbecue entailed walking about 30 feet to the nearest tree. But the mesquite business began in earnest when restaurateurs in major cities suddenly — and without any particular instigation — discovered a market for it.

The self-proclaimed mesquite king is Jack Ray, who owns 22 steak and seafood restaurants throughout Texas and Louisiana, with four more under construction. He said he has been cooking with mesquite since 1976.

"I borrowed my neighbor's $700 barbecue pit and filled it with wood and started the fire," said Ray, who also is a former national duck-calling champion. "Awhile later, my wife yelled that the pit was on fire. I went out there are looked and that damn pit had melted. That's how hot the fire can get."

Ray said he doesn't do anything more fancy than put steaks and fish on the fire; the mesquite does the rest. Is mesquite just a fad?

"A fad? Oh, hell no," he said. "A fad is when a club opens up and everyone goes to it. Mesquite is here for cooking like hickory is here for smoking."

RAY GETS most of his wood from the famous King Ranch, which he says has enough mesquite "to supply the United States for the next 100 years." But most restaurateurs go through middlemen such as Pennington, who buy the mesquite, and dry, cure and ship it. Three of the largest mesquite dealers are in Texas, and all of them stumbled upon mesquite as a viable business.

For example, Ray Williams of Ranchman's Manufacturing in Dallas said he and his wife would take along a small sack of mesquite when they went camping. "We said if we could package this up, we'd not only be rich, but famous," he said.

Williams says he is not yet rich but that the company does have 276,000 acres under lease for mesquite harvest. He has about $1 million invested in equipment and hopes fortune will come his way as the 66 million households with barbecue grills turn to mesquite.

Pennington's flourishing business began as projects for handicapped persons and a junior achievement group. They chipped, packaged and sold the wood. The business became so big that Pennington bought a processing plant in Knox City, Texas.

Making Vermont maple syrup still sweet business

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WAITSFIELD, Vt. — Kathryn Palmer, 75, and her 78-year-old husband, Everett, have been in their sugarhouse every day for the past six weeks from sunup to sundown.

"You've got to get up and at it, and go boil the sap as fast as you can the same day it's gathered. That's what makes good syrup," Kathryn Palmer says.

The Palmers have been making maple syrup all 54 years of their married lives. It's hard work. "It gets in your system. We both love to do it," Everett Palmer says.

Spring is sugaring time in Vermont, where age-old methods of tapping trees and evaporating sap still persist, to the delight of pancake lovers the world over. Maple syrup is a $13 million annual industry in Vermont, America's maple syrup state, accounting for more than one-third of U.S. production. From February until the end of April, clouds of steam swirl from wooden sugarhouses dotting the length and breadth of Vermont.

Four young hired hands collect sap each day from five-gallon buckets hanging on 2,800 tree trunks at the Palmers' Sugar Bush maple tree orchard. They pour the sap into the wood-fired evaporator in the Palmers' sugarhouse.

Kathryn tends to the boiling, siphoning off the syrup at the precise moment. Everett hurls heavy logs into the blazing evaporator throughout the day.

LAT Photos

Miles of plastic tubing feed sap into storage tanks, left, on David Marvin's farm long before going into maple syrup cans, right.

They keep at it for 10 to 12 hours a day and will continue until they've finished "sugaring off" for the season.

The Palmers produce between 700 and 800 gallons of maple syrup a year. This year they are charging $21 a gallon. They sell their cans and jugs of syrup to nearby stores, as well as shipping the product to customers as far away as Alaska, Hawaii and West Germany.

"People hear about us through word of mouth and by a brochure we send out," explains Palmer. Palmer Maple Syrup Co. is one of abot 3,000 maple syrup companies in Vermont, all but a handful of them small family operations.

Inside the quaint sugarhouses maple makers boil the colorless sap to draw out the syrup. The sap looks like and tastes like water with no hint of sweet maple syrup flavor. It drips from spigots placed in holes drilled into trees. Most trees have one tap, some two and a few three.

Sugar maple tree sap is 97.5 percent water, 2.5 percent syrup. It takes 40 gallons of sap to make one gallon of amber-colored 100 percent maple syrup. An average tree yields only enough sap each season to produce one quart of maple syrup. Surprisingly, it takes about 40 years before a maple tree begins to produce enough sap to have commercial value.

"This will be a banner year for maple syrup," predicts Everett Willard, 65, of the site's Agricultural Department, who is affectionately called "Mr. Maple Syrup" by the 3,000 syrup producers in Vermont and the state's official syrup expert.

"Prices are up 15 percent to 20 percent over last year," Willard says. Reasons for the increase include a bigger effort than usual by the state and producers to promote maple syrup this year. "And, people in general throughout the country are buying more and more natural foods," he adds. Willard points out that 100 percent Vermont maple syrup has no additives, no coloring and no preservatives.

Vermont produced 530,000 gallons of maple syrup in 1984. New York state was a distant second with 332,000 gallons. Other syrup-producing states are New Hampshire, Maine, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

Maple syrup is produced only in the United States and Canada. It is a legacy from the Ameican Indians, long before Columbus discovered America, who tapped maple trees and boiled the sap to make syrup. There are trees taped by Indians more than 500 years ago that are still producing.

Many maple syrup makers like David Marvin, 37, owner of Butternut Mountain Farm in Johnson, Vt., have modernized their sugaring operations.

Instead of buckets hanging from trees, Marvin has 180 miles of plastic tubing linking 11,000 trees, from which he turns out 4,000 gallons of syrup every season.

The tubing runs from trunk taps, feeding into bigger lines and on to storage tanks. It is a combination gravity-flow and vacuum system. The vacuum pump does not suck the sap from the tree but lowers the atmospheric pressure in the tubing. That enables Marvin to increase production in the early morning and late afternoon when colder temperatures would normally reduce or stop flow.

"We say we have our feet in the oven and our head in the icebox," Marvin explains. Temperatures are crucial. For the sap to flow, the temperature must drop to below freezing at night and warm up to at least the high 30s and 40s during the day.

"Making maple syrup is a joy we look forward to each year," says Arthur (Joe) Packard Jr., 58, as he tosses logs into his sugarhouse evaporator and his wife, Emily, checks the boiling syrup for proper viscosity.

"Sure, it's long hours and hard work. It takes me two months just to cut 50 cords of wood in preparation for sugaring. Then it's 12 hours a day for a six-week nonstop stretch in the sugarhouse. But it's something we've grown accustomed to. We've been doing this since we were kids."

Cauliflower put in casserole with ham

Hearst News Service

Here's a make-ahead casserole from Bert Greene's "Greene on Greens":

CAULIFLOWER AND HAM GRATIN

1½ to 2 pounds cauliflower, leaves trimmed, core removed
3 tablespoons unsalted butter
1 large shallot, minced
½ pound cooked ham, finely chopped
1 tablespoon Madeira
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1 cup hot chicken stock, preferably homemade ¼ teaspoon freshly grated nutmeg
salt and freshly ground black pepper
⅔ cup grated Jarlsberg cheese

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Cook the cauliflower in at least 3 quarts of boiling water until just tender, 10 to 12 minutes. Rinse under cold running water. Drain. Cut or break the cauliflower into florets. Soak in cold water for 30 minutes prior to cooking and add 1½-teaspoons white wine vinegar to the cooking water if using out-of-season cauliflower. Set aside.

Melt 1 tablespoon of the butter in a medium skillet over medium heat. Add the shallot; cook 1 minute. Add the ham; cook until lightly browned. Sprinkle with the Madeira. Cook, stirring constantly, until all liquid has evaporated. Remove from the heat and set aside.

Melt the remaining 2 tablespoons butter in a medium saucepan over medium-low heat. Stir in the flour. Cook, stirring constantly, for 2 minutes. Whisk in the hot stock. Cook until thick. Add the nutmeg, salt and pepper.

Place half the cauliflower in a well-buttered 2-quart casserole. Spoon the ham mixture evenly over the top. Spoon half the sauce over that, and sprinkle with half the cheese. Repeat the layers of cauliflower, sauce and cheese.

Bake in the oven until bubbly, 15 to 20 minutes before serving. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Local educators demand salary increase

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Local educators are demanding a $1,200 salary increase for all Midland Independent School District teachers and an eight percent pay raise for all support staff in 1985-86 despite an expected loss of $3 to $4 million in state revenue.

Ann Andrews, a representative of the MISD Joint Salary Committee, presented a three-part demand to school trustees Tuesday during a regularly scheduled board meeting. The proposal also demands the district pay three percent across the board to the personnel matching annuity plan and up to a six percent increase for personnel within 15 years of full retirement; and a fully funded career ladder.

The Joint Salary Committee is comprised of local educators representing the Classroom Teachers Association of Midland and the Midland Educators Association — affiliates of the Texas Classroom Teachers Association and the National Education Association.

Committee member Martin Mogford explained to trustees the proposed increase in the district's matching annuity plan, noting that a teacher five years from retirement with an assumed annual salary of $34,000, would receive an annuity value of $11,700 under the current plan.

A younger, less experienced teacher currently making an assumed salary of $20,000 annually would receive $11,100 in seven years and twice that amount in 11 years, Mogford said, adding that "the younger, newer teachers are reaping greater, sizable benefits with the current annuity plan of 2.5 percent."

UNDER THE proposed demands, however, the teacher five years from retirement would earn six percent in matching funds and therefore accumulate an annuity value of $28,200 rather than current $11,700, he said.

According to MISD Superintendent Dr. Joseph Baressi, the plan may not be flawless. "We would have to consult our attorney to see if it (the plan) is legal and viable or to see if it's keeping with our current plan."

MISD Board President Bill Jackson added that the chance of the plan's success would be dependent on how much state revenue MISD receives during the 1985-86 biennium.

"When we started doing the budget and looking at how much revenue we're going to get (from the state) we found out that we're $3 to $4 million short from last year. I'd say the chances for this proposal would depend on what the Legislature does over the next couple of weeks," he said.

In other business, trustees:

— Administered the oath of office to newly elected trustee Betsy Robinson.

— Elected officers to board of trustees. They include Bill Jackson, president; Ron Britton, vice president; and Joe Reed, secretary-treasurer.

— ACCEPTED the resignation of Ronald Whitmore, director of Human Resource Services effective July 15.

Whitmore leaves MISD to accept the position of assistant superintendent at Vigo County School Corporation in Terre Haute, Ind.

— Expelled an Alamo Junior High School student for the remainder of the semester after determining the boy's behavior as "incorrigible."

— Recognized Lee High School student Andrea Neisig and Midland High School student Andrea Hamilton. The youths reportedly earned the highest cumulative grade point averages for the Class of 1985 at their respective high schools. Miss Neisig is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Neisig, 2409 Dartmouth. Miss Hamilton is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Hamilton, 5003 Monticello Court.

— Heard a summary of the Volunteers In Public Schools program.

— Approved a uniform procedure in which parents may request excused student absences.

According to Baressi, the state education code clearly defines excused absences but reserves for principals the authority to excuse an absence for "unusual cause." MISD has allowed parents to request excused absences for causes which they believe will be acceptable, providing they present that request to the prinicpal in writing three days prior to the absence.

MISD services administrator resigns

From Staff Reports

Ronald D. Whitmore, director of Human Resource Services for the Midland Independent School District, has announced his resignation to become assistant superintendent of the Vigo County School Corporation in Terre Haute, Ind. The resignation is effective July 15.

Whitmore follows former MISD assistant superintendent Dr. Duane Moore, who resigned to become superintendent of Vigo schools last fall.

Whitmore came to MISD in 1982 from Lansing, Mich., where he served as assistant high school principal for the Lansing Public Schools and as a member of the district's Office of Employee Relations and Legal Services.

He also served as assistant junior high school principal and junior high school social studies teacher.

Whitmore earned a bachelor's degree in 1964 from Michigan State University at East Lansing and a master's degree in history and curriculum in 1966 from MSU.

According to MISD Superintendent Dr. Joseph Baressi, the district is conducting a search to find a replacement for Whitmore.

Doctor says he 'felt betrayed' as probe of entries unfolded

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

One of four physicians this morning testified in the theft trial of a 51-year-old Midland woman that he "felt betrayed" after an investigation into erroneous entries in a medical clinic's computerized accounts resulted in the discovery of a missing $3,284.29.

Paula Lovett, who is awaiting the birth of of her ninth grandchild, is charged with making false entries totaling $880 for cash payments received in December 1883 at Midland's Women's Clinic, 2009 W. Wall Ave. Mrs. Lovett was employed at the clinic from April 1982 until she took a leave of absence in April 1984.

The defendant is charged with the third-degree felony of theft over $750 but under $20,000. If she is convicted, the seven-man, five-woman jury can sentence her to two to 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine, or probation.

"When this all unfolded, I was horrified," Dr. James M. Humphreys Jr. testified this morning "I felt betrayed. Here we had someone who was working, we thought, in our best interest."

Under questioning by Assistant District Attorney Jack Connors, Humphreys said he would not have testified for the state if he had doubts about the defendant's guilt.

Humphreys testified defense attorney Jim Osborn of Odessa had subpoenaed Humphreys' personal financial records for 1983. But after a hearing last week, Humphreys said he brought only records for November and December 1983 to court, as ordered.

According to testimony Tuesday in Judge Vann Culp's 238th State District Court from Bess Pruitt, the clinic's administrative coordinator, Mrs. Lovett was the only employee at the four-doctor obstetrics-gynecology clinic in December 1983 who had the knowledge necessary to make the alleged false entries. The investigation began after Mrs. Lovett left on vacation April 18, 1984, Mrs. Pruitt said.

"Is it possible that anyone else could have made these postings?" Connors asked.

"We weren't fortunate to have enough people trained (on the computer)," Mrs. Pruitt said.

Patients asked to come in about delinquent payments who showed up with cash receipts in their hands prompted the investigation, she testified.

Mark Price of the Lubbock office of American Physician Services of Austin, which programmed the clinic's computers, said he trained Mrs. Lovett on the system.

"The main person whose responsibility it was to post changes was Paula," Price testified. "But while training, some of the other girls would walk in and watch, but I mainly had Paula's attention."

Price testified that he was contacted by the clinic to help investigate the missing cash, which was entered into the computerized accounts as discounts or adjustments.

"Did you find many or few?" Connors asked.

"In general, you don't have this many adjustments," Price answered.

"How many erroneous entries were made?" Connors asked.

"I can't remember. The computer print-out was thick," Price said. "I would say it was over 100."

Osborn asked Price if there was any way to determine who made the erroneous entries.

Odessa council asks secretary to resign

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — City Council members, following a closed session Monday morning, asked City Secretary Tena Walker to resign.

Ms. Walker, who has been Odessa city secretary for 10 years, said she was asked to resign because of budgetary reasons.

Council member Melissa Hirsch said the recent personnel survey completed by a Dallas consulting firm indicated the job of city secretary was not really a full-time job since it primarily involves keeping the minutes of council meetings.

According to Ms. Hirsch, council members felt Ms. Walker's base salary of about $28,000 a year, coupled with fringe benefits amounting to about 25 percent of that figure, represented a greater outlay of tax dollars than the duties of the position warranted.

ECISD trustees name 12th member to Tri-Ethnic panel

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County school trustees meeting in regular session Tuesday night complied with a federal court order and named the 12th member to the district's Tri-Ethnic Committee.

Following an executive session, board president Sam Gipson announced that Sam Gonzalez had been nominated to fill the court-ordered position on the committee.

The addition of Gonzalez gives the panel six Anglos, four Hispanics and two blacks. CRUCIAL, the organization representing Odessa minorities, had asked U.S. District Judge Harry L. Hudspeth to change the makeup of the panel to four Anglos, four Hispanics and four blacks.

Prior to expanding the panel, trustees heard a report from Tri-Ethnic Committee chairman Ken Hankins concerning the current ethnic breakdown of various schools and anticipated problems due to changing demographic patterns in Odessa.

Under the heading of general observations, Hankins said committee members found the elementary magnet school program is being implemented in all essential aspects. The committee, he said, concurred with a school district staff recommendation that the school day be shortened at extended-day magnet schools. The committee also concurred with a school staff recommendation calling for a more clearly defined program of remedial education at Zavala Elementary Magnet School.

Committee members observed "a high level of enthusiasm evidenced by staff members at the elementary magnet schools," he said.

The variety and scope of offerings at various schools, he said, apparently has been vital to the achievement of early success in the program.

Committee members, he reported, noted no "instances of racial conflict among students at the various schools."

There was evidence of potential overcrowding in the fifth and sixth grades at Ireland Elementary School, Hankins noted. The committee also found, he said, that Zavala continues to experience difficulty in the recruitment of majority (Anglo) students and that some achievement discrepancies continue to exist between core students and magnet students.

The committee observed, Hankins said, that "special care must be given to monitoring progress in non-magnet schools to assure that quality in program, provision for adequate space, and staffing by top-level teachers is not eroding."

Noting that there is evidence of overcrowding at some magnet schools, Hankins said committee members further observed that Lamar and Fannin elementary schools "reflect minority enrollment in excess of the district average."

A primary concern exists, Hankins said, relative to the high percentage of failures at junior high schools. There appears to be an increase in dropouts which is somewhat proportional to the failure rate. The Tri-Ethnic Committee suggests, he said, that "tutoring programs should be improved to offer failing students truly useful help in getting their work back to standard."

Committee members expressed concern, Hankins said, "That the pure east/west junior high school concept may not work over a long period of time due to:

1. Population shifts that have occurred, and
2. The ethnic ratios of the feeder schools on the westside of town are high at present and they are feeding a high school (Odessa High School) that has a high ethnic ratio (44 percent)."

Hankins estimated that the population of West Odessa, at one time about 30,000, has decreased to as little as 13,000. He suggested that consideration be given to abolishing the two high school concept and adopting one that would see all ninth and 10th grade students going to one school and all 11th and 12th grade students going to another school.

'No pass, no play' scores high with many Midlanders

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

The extracurricular activities of many Texas high-school football players have shifted from the practice fields to the courts as they seek judicial relief from the state's "no pass, no play" rule. Two Ector County youths are participating in spring-practice drills under a temporary restraining order from 244th District Court Judge Joe Connally, who will rule next week whether the students' parents were given enough notice that their sons were failing a class. Statewide, about 45 similar restraining orders have been issued.

The "no pass, no play" rule disqualifies from all extracurricular activities any student who isn't passing all his or her classes. Though controversial, the rule received support from 10 of the 13 Midland-area residents polled Tuesday on the issue by the Reporter-Telegram.

"If they can't keep their grades up, they don't need to be playing football," said Nancy Carleton, 4300 Pasadena St., a secretary.

"If they don't pass, they shouldn't play," agreed Ed Cole, an Odessa salesman who thinks Connally shouldn't be making the decision about whether the students will play: "I don't think it should be in the courts, it should be in the school system."

Nancy Carleton

Ed Cole

Grady Lobley

June Hunt

Mrs. Allen Watts, 2509 Country Club Drive, thinks the rule "ought to be enforced. They're paying too much attention to football."

By letting marginal students continue to participate in extracurricular activities despite failing grades, "These boys are being cheated out of an education," said Mrs. Watts, a retiree.

And Rita Peterson, County Road 1130 N., a secretary, thinks the rule will "make kids strive harder to make good grades."

But Grady Lobley, 3006 Lockheed, is opposed to the rule.

"I'm all for academics," said Lobley, who's in the leasing business, but "I really think it's unfair. One thing kids have is sports — they benefit a great deal from the programs."

"It's a bad idea," said Dalaine Parkhurst, 4700 Polo Parkway, a secretary. "They're putting too much pressure on the studies. If you can't have a little fun at what you're doing, why do it?"

Other Midlanders gave support to the rule but had reservations about how it was being applied.

"I like what they're doing, but they should have put it into effect a little sooner," said Ron Dill, 4300 Dawn Circle, an engineer. And June Hunt, 2806 Frontier St., was concerned that football players would get special treatment to get around the rule.

"It's a good idea in itself, but it's hard to monitor," said Ms. Hunt, a purchasing agent and ex-teacher. "This (the spring-practice cases) will be a test."

DEATHS

R.M. 'Bob' Reeves

R.M. "Bob" Reeves of Midland died Monday at an Odessa hospital following a lengthy illness.

Services are pending at Ellis Funeral Home.

He was born Feb. 6, 1915, at Okemah, Okla., and was reared there and in Tulsa, Okla. He began his career in the oilfields, residing in Paris, several West Texas communities and along the Gulf Coast. He also worked overseas and was associated with Offshore Senett Co. He had resided in Midland for one year.

Survivors include his wife, Lota Reeves of Midland; two sons, Jay Milton Reeves of Katy and Robert Lee Reeves of Missouri City; his mother, Marjorie M. Reeves of Midland; one brother, James A. Reeves of Midland; one sister, Betty R. Ness of Midland; and four grandchildren.

BIG SPRING — Lawrence Aberegg, 68, of Coahoma, died Tuesday at his home.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Thursday at Nalley-Pickle and Welch Rosewood Chapel in Big Spring. Burial will be at Coahoma Cemetery.

Aberegg was a longtime resident of Coahoma and was a member of the Coahoma City Council. He was a member of the Anson Church of Christ.

Jimmy Lucas

Jimmy Lucas of Midland died Tuesday at a Midland nursing home.

Services will be at 11 a.m. Thursday at the Greenwood Baptist Church with burial to follow at Greenwood Cemetery.

Ellis Funeral Home is handling arrangements.

Mildred R. Burtscher

Graveside services for Mildred R. Burtscher, 79, of Okmulgee, Okla., will be at 2 p.m. Saturday in the Okmulgee Cemetery. She died at the home of her daughter in Midland following a brief illness.

Survivors include one son, Johnnie D. Burtscher of Hvelock, N.C.; one daughter, Joann Miller of Midland; and four granchildren.

Honorary pallbearers will be Bob Rowe, Ardo Pancoast, Bill Bradley, Bob Thompson, Neal Downs, Richard Hudson and Dave L. Widner.

Ruth Mullen

Services for Ruth Mullen of Midland are pending at Ellis Funeral Home. Mrs. Mullen died Tuesday.

Shannon Lyn Schafer

Services for Shannon Lyn Schafer, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Darrell Schafer, will be at 4 p.m. Thursday in the Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Nina Douglas of the Permian Church of Religious Science officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

She died shortly after birth Sunday at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Survivors include her parents of Midland; her grandparents, Janet Jones Garth of Midland, Thomas Garth Jr. of Houston and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Schafer of Garden City; and her great-grandparents, Mrs. Harry R. Jones of Houston, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Garth, also of Houston and Mr. and Mrs. C.E. Tindol of Big Spring.

Lawmaker says Mattox too powerful

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican Rep. Bill Ceverha says Democratic Attorney General Jim Mattox has become too powerful. Mattox says Ceverha is a "clown."

With all 82 Republicans backing Ceverha, and 22 Democrats joining the effort, the House tentatively approved Tuesday a measure that would cut the attorney general's authority to reach out-of-court agreements in lawsuits involving state agencies.

Ceverha, R-Richardson, said agency heads — not the state's lawyer — should make decisions in cases involving their state business.

"The attorney general is the only person who single-handedly, because he doesn't like a piece of state law, can strike it down with a stroke of a pen," Ceverha said.

Mattox said his authority is spelled out in the Texas Constitution. He is not worried about the Ceverha bill, which faces another House vote.

"If it does take effect, I'll rule it unconstitutional," Mattox said.

The attorney general also is not worried that Ceverha might be out to get him.

"I never take anything Ceverha does as being very serious. He's kind of the clown of the House," Mattox said.

Ceverha said his bill is aimed at the office of attorney general, not the man now in the office. But he did say he is upset about Mattox's decision not to challenge lower court orders that forced Texas A&M University to allow women in its band and recognize homosexual organizations on campus.

Rep. Bill Ceverha

Police investigate theft of oil-field equipment

From Staff Reports

Deputies with the Midland County Sheriff's Office are investigating the theft of $2,145 in oil-field equipment from Yale E. Key, 1502 Carroll Drive.

Ignacio Villa, 1307 E. Hamby, reported the equipment was taken between Monday night and Tuesday morning from a platform at a site on FM 715, east of County Road 120.

Olnie Thurman, 4702 Crockett, reported the burglary of Gandy's Dairy, west of Midland Regional Air Terminal on U.S. Highway 80. The building was entered through the men's restroom window between 6 p.m. Monday and 7 a.m. Tuesday, reports said. A soft drink machine sustained $1,500 in damage and $15 in change was reported stolen from it. Damage to locks on the storage shed and vault freezer also was reported.

About $1,480 worth of items were reported stolen from a westside apartment, according to reports filed with city police.

Harry Sr. and Virginia Roadcup, 2012 W. Indiana, reported the apartment of their son, Harry, at 1902 N. Midland Drive, No. 1006, was burglarized between Friday and Tuesday. Entry was gained through a bedroom window, reports said. Taken were a color television set and cable converter box, an AM/FM cassette stereo, 30 cassette tapes and a key ring. Also, about $50 worth of damage to the window was reported.

Brenda Upton, 2433 Whitmire, No. 40, reported her apartment was burglarized between 11 p.m. May 4 and 10 a.m. Thursday. A key apparently was used to gain entry. Reported missing were a $550 gold wedding band, $50 bill and a service station credit card.

Gloria Lott, 1908 W. Wall, reported the theft of an evaporative cooler from a vacant residence at 510 S. Main St., owned by Tamara Jordan of Garland. The cooler was valued at $400.

Two car stereo speakers valued at $300 were reported stolen from a 1973 Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme, owned by Elaine Slade, 4609 W. Storey Ave. According to police, the car was parked in the west parking lot at 3500 Neely between 8 a.m. and 12:15 p.m. Tuesday when the burglary occurred.

Gregory Tucker, 906 W. Michigan, reported his residence was burglarized between 12 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. Tuesday. According to police, a $200 stereo amplifier and $50 turntable were taken.

Parker warns jurors of overzealous prosecutors

BEAUMONT (AP) — State Sen. Carl Parker said — after organized crime indictments against him were dismissed — that grand jurors must beware of overzealous prosecutors whose main interest is making a case.

State District Judge Perry Pickett of Midland on Tuesday dismissed charges aginst Parker and two other men after finding "there were unauthorized persons in the grand jury room."

Parker's attorney, Walter Sekaly, said grand juror Nicholas Kinchen voted to indict Parker and two other defendants as part of the Jefferson County grand jury probe even though Kinchen was a resident of adjacent Hardin County.

It was the second time Pickett dismissed charges against Parker, a Port Arhtur Democrat. In November, Pickett ruled the grand jury that indicted the senator two months earlier in 1984 was biased.

Parker said he was relieved by the dismissal of the charges, but he criticized the system that made them possible.

He said investigators and prosecutors seemed to be more interested in making a case against him than in seeing that justice was carried out.

"They don't care if they convict you," he said. "There's an old expression, 'You can beat the rap, but you can't beat the ride.'"

Parker, Daniel Jacob Lee, and David Earl Johnson were indicted March 22 on charges of engaging in organized criminal activity and conspiracy to distribute cocaine. Parker also was charged with the wholesale promotion of obscene material.

Jefferson County District Attorney James McGrath said he probably would not seek a third investigation of Parker, a Port Arthur Democrat.

"My inclination is no," he said. "It's taken up too much time and money."

McGrath said he told Parker's attorney and the judge earlier that Kinchen, 30, had moved one mile inside Hardin County, but that neither objected.

MISD

MISD HAS not, however, developed a districtwide form for parents to complete. Subsequently, several building administrators have requested that such a form be developed to process requests in the same manner at each building.

The practice will lessen the possibility of two children from the same family being treated differently because they attend school in different buildings, Baressi reported.

— Approved on first reading revisions in board policy concerning the evaluation of personnel and nonrenewal of personnel contracts to conform to state regulations.

The new policy requires faculty appraisals be a cooperative, continuing process which rate an employee's performance as clearly outstanding, exceeds expectations, satisfactory, below expectations or unsatisfactory. Such an appraisal shall be considered by trustees prior to any board decision to choose not to renew any employee's contract.

Also, the school district may place an employee on a district-level mandatory improvement plan when the principal or unit administrator assesses the employee's performance as deficient to the extent that such a plan is warranted.

IN ADDITION, trustees shall not renew the contract of any employee who is on a district-level mandatory improvement plan for more than 175 consecutive instructional days or has been placed on more than two district-level mandatory improvement plans during any 175 consecutive instructional days.

Reasons for non-renewal of contracts are the failure to correct deficiencies pointed out in formal or informal evaluations and/or the failure to meet the requirements pertaining to a district-level mandatory improvement plan, the policy states.

— Authorized the district to post vacancies for the following positions pending budget approval: Coordinator of secondary mathematics (one vacancy), junior high school dean of students (three vacancies) and elementary school intern (two vacancies).

— Approved the 1985-86 Student Accident Program.

— Awarded a $45,653 bid to Sol Frank Uniforms of San Antonio to purchase new uniforms for the Lee High School Band pending budget approval.

— Awarded bids to various firms to purchase furniture for the addition to San Jacinto High School. The cost is not to exceed $37,807.

— Awarded bids to various firms to purchase light fixtures, fertilizer, computers for special education and cafeteria paper and cleaning supplies and other equipment.

— ACCEPTED A pouring table and mixer to be used in ceramic classes from the Carver Occupational Development Laboratory PTA.

— Accepted a ditto copying machine, valued at $950, from the Burnet Elementary School PTA.

— Accepted playground equipment, valued at $4,283, from the Crockett Elementary School PTA.

— Approved a recommendation to replace footboards in sections C, D and E of Midland Memorial Stadium. Cost of the project is estimated at $40,000.

— Selected Bill Jackson as delegate and Betsy Robinson as alternate to the 1985 Texas Association of School Boards.

— Heard a report of the district's athletic program.

— Tabled reports from the district's music, physical education, health and driver education programs.

PROBE

"There is no name on them," Price said.

"Do you have any way to prove who did it?" Osborn asked.

"None other than office procedures," Price said.

"Which is essentially conjecture and speculation about who took the money, is that correct?" Osborn asked.

"Right," Price answered. "All the computer is is entry, not a cash flow."

Under Connors' questioning, Price said what the erroneous entries "would show, mainly, is that if the cash actually existed and the cash never got to the bank, obviously something is wrong. From the printouts and computerized end, you have something that kind of directs you to the key punch operator.

"The person that has the responsibility of receipt entries is the one who should know there is a cash shortage," Price said. "They should know immediately who was responsible, it seems."

Price testified that he didn't understand why adjustments were made weeks after patient transactions. "If there's going to be an adjustment, you'd do it on that day in order to make your daily books balance," he testified.

Mrs. Pruitt said the accounts of "many" patients who paid in cash were credited not as cash payments, but as discounts and adjustments.

As an example, she testified that one woman's account showed she had received a Midland Gold Card discount for senior citizens, "and that is very strange because this patient is only 37 years old," she said.

Further testimony indicated some patients who held cash receipts were not listed on the computerized accounts. One first-time patient "is not listed on account," Mrs. Pruitt said. "She is not a patient at our office. She is not in the computer at all."

"Should she be?" Connors asked.

"Definitely," Mrs. Pruitt said. "She should have been given a '6000' number and credited with a $12 cash payment."

Jury hears testimony in murder trial of Odessan

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 70th District Court jury of 11 women and one man late Tuesday afternoon began hearing testimony in the murder trial of a 32-year-old Odessa man.

Kenneth Wayne Richards, Rt. 4, Box 1100, is one of two men accused of the Sept. 5, 1984, killing of 47-year-old Curtis D. Smith. Also indicted in the fatal shooting is Danny Fletcher McCubbin, 36, 9600 Westridge Drive.

Richards and McCubbin were indicted Jan. 10 by the Ector County grand jury on charges of capital murder. However, because Richards had no serious previous criminal record, District Attorney Eric Augsen last week asked grand jurors to reindict Richards on the lesser charge of murder. McCubbin remains charged and jailed in lieu of $100,000 bond on a charge of capital murder.

Smith, who was an operations foreman for Roy's Tong Service, 8510 W. Highway 80, was getting equipment ready for an early morning crew when he was shot and killed. According to Ector County Sheriff's Capt. Gene Kloss, Smith's wallet containing about $3,900 was missing.

Smith was reportedly shot in the head with a shotgun and a .38 caliber pistol. His body was found by workers reporting for work about 1 a.m. Sept. 5.

'South Singers' to perform at Celebration of the Arts

From Staff Reports

The South Elementary School "South Singers" will perform a Centennial program entitled "In the Beginning" at noon Thursday in the Showmobile on the courthouse lawn. The performance is part of the Midland Celebration of the Arts.

The 40 members of the South Singers were selected by auditions in October and have met weekly after school for rehearsals since that time. The South Singers have performed citywide this year for groups such as the Westside Lions Club, The First City National Bank and the South PTA.

Members of the South Singers include Kathy Adams, Ana Alferez, Maya Basped, Tracie Brinsfield, Brian Boehm, Jesus Borrega, Jeani Brown, Joani Brown, Kristi Burns, Shari Cargile, Michelle Clements, Juana Dominguez, Bobbi Dow, Leon Garrett, Joy Holmes, Fawn Jensen, Brandy Kemp, Gabe Lewis, Annabelle Lozano, Sorina Lujan, Mark Monroe, Jimmie Morgan, Erika O'Grady, Sylvia Ortega, Kimberly Pratt, Kayla Price, Jon Raglin, Kristy Rain, Jennifer Rich, Heather Roberts, Trudy Roberts, Robin Robinett, Alex Rodriquez, Chrissie Rosas, Chris Smith, Randy Smith, Kristi Sprute, Kyle Sullivan, Susana Torres and Bonnie Vogel. The group is directed by Mrs. Janna Boyd and Mary McManis.

Shaking buildings rattle workers

DALLAS (AP) — Chandeliers shook, windowpanes rattled, and buildings creaked when a tornado-bearing storm with winds up to 80 mph frightened hundreds of high-rise office workers into fleeing their swaying skyscrapers.

Monday's nasty weather sent white-collar employees scurrying downstairs, even though many of the buildings were designed to sway safely.

"The curtains were going back and forth, the chandeliers were swinging. It was like an earthquake," said John Hirsch, who planned to eat at the Petroleum Club at the top of a building, but went instead to an underground tunnel restaurant.

At Interfirst Plaza, the new 72-story building designed to safely sway as much as 3 feet at the top, rattling windows prompted bank workers on the 20th floor to head for the lobby.

But architects and engineers said the swaying was simply a "good test" of the building's flexibility.

"A building is expected to move,' said Jack Germak of Germak/Terka and Associates.

RESIGNS

Ms. Hirsch said that, while the position can't be eliminated completely, an effort will be made to have someone already in the city administration assume the title to comply with City Charter provisions.

She said she expected council members will name City Manager John Harrison to function as city secretary with no increase in pay which, she speculated, "will save the city about $40,000 a year.

The announcement of Ms. Walker's resignation came during the council's regular session with all four council members present voting to accept it.

Foundation awards grant to MCT

From Staff Reports

Thomas J. Madonna, president of Midland Community Theatre's board of governors, has announced that MCT was the recipient of a grant from the Atlantic Richfield Foundation. The $15,500 grant was made to help extend the theater's membership drive and to underwrite one of the season membership productions.

"We at the theater and indeed the entire Midland community, are grateful to our corporate and foundation supporters," Madonna said. "Without Atlantic Richfield and others we would be unable to produce the caliber of art and entertainment Midlanders have come to expect from MCT."

Currently on stage at Theatre Midland is the comedy/drama hit "One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest" running for nine performances through Saturday.

Births decline in West Germany; East Germany shows baby boom

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — West Germany's population is dwindling while East Germany's is growing 40 years after the Nazi defeat in World War II.

In West Germany deaths have been outnumbering births since 1971 and the country of 61 million is beginning to worry about a shrinking population.

The East German government has reported a surplus of births over deaths every year since 1979, reaching a high of 12,113 in 1982, the latest reporting year. But the high birth rate is offset by the numbers of East Germans who leave to live in West Germany. Last year, the Communist authorities permitted more than 40,000 people to leave — about four times the number in previous years.

In West Germany the concern is an older citizenry. If more babies aren't born soon, the national pension plan, already deeply in the red, won't have enough contributors to keep it going.

West Germany's birthrate of 10 per 1,000 citizens is already at the bottom of the industrialized world. Despite government subsidies for mothers and babies, there's no sign that couples are interested in having more children.

A population density of 642 per square mile apparently plays a role in West Germany's planned parenthood program. West Germans don't have much open space, and the high prices of land and single family dwellings are beyond the means of many people.

Brownsville bishop embarrasssed by woman's actions aiding refugee

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Brownsville Bishop John Fitzpatrick, committed to helping Central Americans fleeing their war torn countries, says he is embarrassed by a church worker accused of trying to sneak a Nicaraguan past a checkpoint.

Lorry Thomas, 41, director of Casa Oscar Romero in San Benito, remained in the Cameron County Jail Tuesday after refusing freedom on a personal recognizance bond because the same offer was not made to the Nicaraguan.

Ms. Thomas became director of the Catholic Church-sponsored shelter last month after the previous director, Jack Elder, 41, was convicted of transporting two Salvadorans.

"I am embarrassed by Lorry's decision to engage in activities that are counter to the understanding we had with her, with reference to refugees, as long as she was in charge of Casa Romero," Fitzpatrick said Tuesday.

"While I admire her willingness to put her life and name on the line for the sake of the refugee, I nevertheless regret a decision on her part so counter to our understanding and to the purposes of the casa," he added.

Ms. Thomas and a Nicaraguan hiding in the trunk of her 1980 Renault were arrested about midnight Sunday at the U.S. Border Patrol checkpoint at Sarita, about 50 miles south of Corpus Christi, authorities said.

Lorry Thomas, director of the Casa Oscar Romero in San Benito, leaves federal court in Brownsville Tuesday for the Cameron County Jail.

"If I could get thousands of refugees through that checkpoint I would," Ms. Thomas told the Brownsville Herald from her jail cell on Tuesday.

Fitzpatrick said Ms. Thomas has not been fired and that the shelter is operating.

"We have not decided what to do yet. When she gets out then we'll sit down and discuss it," Fitzpatrick said. "We wanted to continue our primary thrust at the casa, to give temporary help to refugees by feeding, clothing and giving them temporary shelter. Obviously, transporting refugees is not part of our operation there."

On Monday, U.S. Magistrate William Mallet offered Ms. Thomas freedom on a $20,000 unsecured bond, but she refused because the Nicaraguan, Raul Dominguez Cardoza, 28, was not offered the same conditions.

Mallet ordered her to appear before him again on Tuesday for another bond hearing, but Ms. Thomas' attorney, Lisa Brodyaga, said her client wasn't ready.

"She's trying to seek a solution which will be in the best interest of the refugee," Ms. Brodyaga said.

Ms. Thomas declined to speak to reporters on her way out of the federal courthouse on Tuesday.

Ms. Thomas, of Cincinnati, said the situation in Nicaragua motivated her actions.

Ms. Thomas' predecessor, Elder, currently is serving a six-month sentence at a halfway house in San Antonio.

Another shelter volunteer, Stacey Lynn Merkt, 30, is free pending her appeals on two convictions involving the transportation of Salvadorans.

Port's lawyer says judge didn't have jurisdiction

HOUSTON (AP) — The attorney for convicted murderer David Port says his client should receive a new trial because state District Judge I.D. McMaster did not have the authority to hear the case.

Houston attorney Jack Zimmermann said he filed motions Tuesday questioning whether McMaster was empowered to preside over the case because of a question over the judge's residency.

Harris County District Attorney John B. Holmes Jr. filed a lawsuit Friday to remove McMaster from the bench, alleging the judge lives in Galveston County, rather than Harris County.

Under state law, a judge must live within his jurisdicition.

McMaster presided over the case of Port, 18, who in March was sentenced to 75 years in prison for the June 7, 1984, shooting death of mail carrier Debora Sue Schatz, 23. Ms. Schatz disappeared while delivering mail in the Houston neighborhood where Port lived.

McMaster ordered the case moved from Houston to New Braunfels because of extensive publicity, but still presided over the trial.

Zimmermann said he filed a motion in Houston stating there was "a substantial defect in the indictment" against 18-year-old David Port because McMaster did not have the authority to convene a grand jury.

The attorney said he also filed a motion in New Braunfels amending an earlier request for a new trial for Port. The amended motion contends Port should be granted a new trial because McMaster was not authorized to hear the case.

"Our position is that the person acting as a judge never was a judge and therefore that the judgements sentenced...are void," Zimmermann said.

Meanwhile, Judge Thomas Stovall, administrative judge for the 2nd Administrative Judicial District, said Monday he will appoint a judge from outside Houston to hear the McMaster case, which he said could possibly begin next week.

Jury chosen in $50 million libel suit

EL PASO (AP) — A seven-man, five-woman jury has been chosen to hear the trial of a $50 million libel lawsuit filed against The El Paso Times and a former El Paso mayor.

The panel was seated Tuesday evening after more than seven hours of jury selection in the case, which was filed in April 1980 against the daily newspaper and former Mayor Tom Westfall by another ex-mayor, Ray Salazar, and real estate developer Joe Foster.

Salazar and Foster contend the newspaper and Westfall conspired to ruin their reputations. At issue in the five-year-old lawsuit are statements made by Westfall and several news articles and one editorial that dealt with a land transaction between Foster and the city when Salazar was mayor.

Clifford Bond and his daughter, Chantee, rest at St. Carthage Catholic Church in Philadelphia Tuesday after their home was one of 60 which was destroyed when police dropped a satchel bomb on the compound occupied by the radical group MOVE.

Aid pouring in for police bomb victims

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — From schoolchildren to lawyers, corporations to clergymen, people are reaching out to help rebuild the lives shattered by the fire that devastated a neighborhood after police bombed the headquarters of a radical organization.

A coalition of religious groups joined forces with the Red Cross and Salvation Army on Tuesday to coordinate aid and donations for the 225 people left homeless by the fire that engulfed scores of houses after the attack on the building occupied by members of the group MOVE.

At least six bodies were removed from the rubble of the MOVE house, authorities said.

"The community has been damaged, the community is suffering, but not just a loss of valuables, but a spiritual loss," said the Rev. Charles Diamond, pastor St. Carthage Roman Catholic Church in the devastated neighborhood. "We want to address ourselves to healing this suffering."

Rabbis, pastors and ministers representing congregations totaling 2 million people announced the formation of the Cobbs Creek Emergency Fund to receive donations to help the community.

"The purpose of this emergency fund will be to reach into the larger community touched by this tragedy and encourage their caring testimony of concern for the people," said Diamond, whose church has been turned into a Red Cross shelter.

Philadelphia-area businesses reacted swiftly Tuesday to the need for relief funds: Bell of Pennsylvania offered $100,000; the Greater Philadelphia First Corp., an organization of the city's leading companies, pledged $500,000; and SmithKline Beckman Corp. donated $50,000.

"We are encouraged by the number of phone calls offering assistance, some as far away as the Midwest," said Dr. O. Urcille Ifill, president of the Black Clergy of Philadelphia.

For the next two Sundays, clergy at virtually every church in the five-county Philadelphia area will appeal for donations to the fund, Ifill said.

A major downtown bank has offered to suspend mortgage bills for the homeless until they resettle, Ifill said.

The Philadelphia School District promised to make $2,000 available for relief and will develop a program of psychological and counseling services for the neighborhood.

As a long-term solution to the housing problems, Temple University offered to open 375 vacant dormitory rooms and some rooms in about 175 university apartments to the homeless.

Kathleen Benton, a Red Cross spokeswoman, said the homeless at the center were being assisted by social workers, nurses and two psychologists. She said the tragedy was unlike anything she had ever witnessed.

"We've encountered physical disasters — fires, of course, floods tornadoes...This is really a huge civil disturbance, civil strife."

The Philadelphia School District has arranged free public transportation tokens for children who will be forced to live miles from the neighborhood schools, Superindentent Constance Clayton said.

She said children in one elementary school already have donated 31 blankets, and all students and district staff members are being asked to give items such as books, pencils, toys and clothing.

Lawyers belonging to the Philadelphia Bar Association have offered "to help in any way that we can, providing whatever expertise we can provide to return the community and the neighborhood to normalcy," said David Marion, bar chancellor.

He also said the bar was establishing a campaign to appeal to lawyers for donations.

A local department store has contributed clothing, bedding and dinnerware.

The religious coalition said the Red Cross will coordinate food donations for the group, and the Salvation Army will concentrate on clothes.

"The endeavor is a testimony of the religious community in Philadelphia in the face of the tragic happening," Ifill said. "As the religious community, we are concerned about the human need of the people."

Resident: 'It looks like London blitz'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Smoke hung over the charred shells of gutted houses as firefighters picked through the smoldering ruins on Osage Avenue, a once tidy street now strewn with blackened lumber and rubble.

Nearly 24 hours after a police bomb touched off a fire that engulfed dozens of houses, reporters Tuesday evening were given a look at the place where it all started, the street where members of the radical group MOVE had holed up.

The side of the street where the MOVE house stood was completely burned out; on the other side, all but three houses at the far end of the street were destroyed.

The brick walls that separated the two-story structures still stood, except for a gap of 100-150 feet on either side of the MOVE site. Only two of the houses still had their second floors.

"It's like World War II when I was in England," said Rex Haye, 62, whose home on nearby Pine Street escaped damage. "It looks like the London blitz."

Fire hoses snaked down the street, pouring water on hot spots. Smoke still rose from several locations, casting a gray haze over the area.

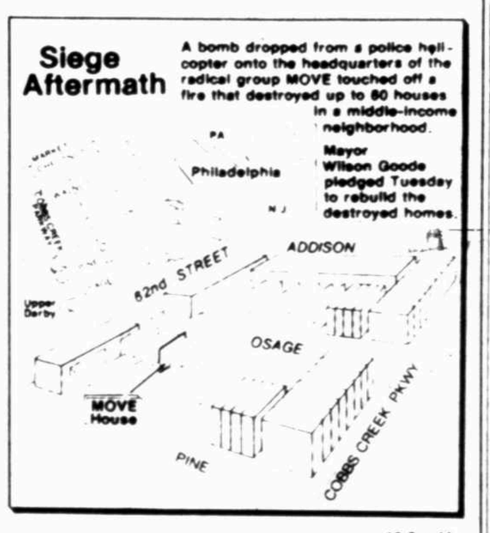

Charred wood filled the sidewalks. A blackened streetlight pole still supported an electrical wire, but the wire's insulation coating had melted off.

A large crane fitted with a jaw-like scoop was positioned in front of the MOVE site. It was used to lift rubble from the site and dump it on the street, where workers could go through it.

Reporters were kept about 100 feet from the MOVE site itself, which appeared to be little more than a short cement stairway leading up to a pile of bricks.

Police and firefighters laid out sooty items from the house: three 55-gallon drums, a four-foot-high tank, a piece of sheet metal with bullet holes, several smaller metal buckets and a projectile about 2 inches in diameter and five inches long.

They also removed a small gasoline-powered generator and a larger machine, about five feet long. The items were loaded onto a flatbed truck and taken away.

AP Graphic

Allen Watkins, 44, peered into a house across the street from the MOVE site — a shell that used to be his home.

"That's mine — fourth one down," he said. "Even my fish are gone. When I left, I made sure I protected them from bullets. But not from a bomb."

He looked down the street at the MOVE house.

"There used to be a tree there," he said, quietly. After a moment, he added, "I've seen enough. I'm getting out of here."

Two medical examiner's vans were parked on the street. Just before 8 p.m., a green body bag was carried out of the MOVE rubble, placed on a rolling stretcher and put into the van. A firefighter followed with two yellow bags, which were also put in the van.

Firefighters trudged down the street as darkness fell, carrying shovels and long-handled, pronged tools. Police said the search would continue at daybreak.

NATION IN BRIEF

Trooper's alleged killer charged with murder

ENFIELD, N.C. (AP) — One of four men arrested in the slaying of a state trooper was charged with first-degree murder, while the other three were charged with accessory after the fact, police said.

Trooper Raymond E. Worley, 44, a 23-year veteran of the Highway Patrol, was found Tuesday in his patrol car, shot in the back of his head, Maj. Robert A. Clark said. He had just stopped two vans on Interstate 95.

Timothy Lanier Allen, 30, of Washington, D.C., was charged with murder, and Allen's brother, Alex, 34; Antonio Maurice Worrell, 28; and Mack Eugene Green, 27, all of Washington, were charged with accessory, said Halifax County prosecutor David Beard. Each was charged with possession of stolen property.

Crew being investigated

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A number of people in the 105-member crew of the U.S. Navy salvage ship Recovery are under investigation for taking captured Soviet weapons from Grenada, where they were seized in 1983 after U.S. troops landed, the Navy said.

The Recovery's commanding officer, Lt. Cmdr. Robert P. Brittingham, and the executive officer, Lt. M.C. Plumb, have been relieved of command, Capt. Owen Reswebber, senior public affairs officer for the Atlantic Fleet, said Tuesday.

Seven AK-47s and two M-3 submachine guns weapons were rounded up last month when one sailor surrendered an AK-47 assault rifle he apparently obtained from the Caribbean island.

Police chief's son arrested

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The son of Los Angeles Police Chief Daryl Gates "simulated a gun" during a holdup in which he robbed a pharmacy of about $5,000 worth of morphine-like drugs, police said.

Lowell Scott Gates, 29, was arrested Monday afternoon in this suburb about 35 miles southeast of downtown Los Angeles after a robbery at a store called The Druggist, police spokeswoman Joanne Bergstrom said Tuesday.

Gates, acknowledging Tuesday that the man arrested was his son, said, "This is a good example of why we should do something for young people who get involved in narcotics."

Checks allegedly stolen

BELEN, N.M. (AP) — An 11-year-old girl who said she had earned the money doing yard work was arrested after she tried to open a bank account with a check for $900,000, authorities said.

Annette Montoya, her father, Tony Montoya, 48, and her mother, Concepcion Montoya, 40, were charged with forgery and possession of stolen property, police said.

The arrests were made after the girl and her father tried to deposit the allegedly forged check at a First Interstate Bank branch in Albuquerque, police said. Bank officials called the bank on which the check was drawn, the First National Bank of Belen, and learned that four such checks had been stolen from a bank employee. The arrest report said two other checks belonging to the bank were found in Mrs. Montoya's purse.

Senate tackles problem of declining exports

WASHINGTON (AP) — Getting a quick start on what likely will be months of deliberations, the Senate Agriculture Committee began work on a new farm bill by immediately tackling the problem of declining U.S. farm exports.

In its first day of action Tuesday, the panel put on a fast track separate legislation to sever ties between maritime subsidies and programs designed to enhance commercial export sales of agricultural products.

And it unanimously endorsed another separate bill setting up a new program offering surplus government-owned commodities to exporters based on their overseas sales volume. The bonuses are intended to be passed along by exporters to buyers, making U.S. goods more price competitive in world markets.

"We all want to increase markets," said Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., as the session opened. "That is the key to American agriculture's success in the future."

But another panel member, Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, cautioned against placing too much hope in expanding foreign sales.

"Chasing the export market might be like chasing the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow," Harkin said. "What good does it do us to increase the quantity we export if the amount of money we get for it goes down?"

As the Senate began its work, a House subcommittee unanimously approved legislation setting up an export bonus incentive, more money for "blended credit" and other sales incentives, and cargo preference language similar to that considered by the Senate panel. The measure was sent to the full Agriculture Committee to be included in an emerging farm legislation package.

One measure would exempt federal agricultural export enhancement programs from so-called "cargo preference" requirements — the rule that at least half of commodities sold under certain federal food aid programs be carried in U.S.-flag ships.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., the committee's chairman, said the requirement is "absurd on its face" for programs that are supposed to make U.S. commodities more price-competitive, because it forces the crops to be shipped at greater cost in American vessels.

A recent federal court ruling extended the cargo preference rule to apply to foreign sales under a loan subsidy program called "blended credit."

The bill that the Senate committee approved would remove the requirement from the blended credit program as well as from other export-boosting efforts, including the bonus program for exporters.

The Reagan administration, as part of the price of winning approval of a budget package in the Senate last week, promised to immediately implement the export bonus program on its own, using up to $1 billion in government-owned surplus commodities.
