HITLER PLANS TO END WAR, REPORT SAYS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4 (AP).— Reports were circulated in diplomatic quarters Sunday that Adolf Hitler was planning within the next day or two to present the terms on which Germany would end the European war.

One version was that Hitler would make a peace address, which presumably would set forth Germany's terms before a special assembly of the reichstag.

Asked about the report, state department officials said they had no official information, but had heard a rumor that Hitler planned to address on peace to the German people.

They said the state department did not already received Germany's proposed peace terms, as some London newspapers report-

The London Sunday Dispatch said Hitler had dispatched peace terms to Washington through the American embassy in Paris. These terms were said to be that the defeated and unconquered British empire should remain intact and that Germany should assume domination over all of continental Europe.

On those terms, the newspaper said, Hitler was willing to sign a ten-year non-aggression pact with Great Britain and the United States and agree to disarmament on a basis of equality and the rule of law.

Officials said no official note had been sent on the general subject of a possible peace or confession of the alleged proposals had been forwarded to the state department by the American embassy in Berlin, Paris or Vichy, delivered by German embassy representatives here.

CISCO FLYING CLASS RAISED TO TWENTY

Increase Received From Washington This Morning

The Civil Aeronautics authority has increased the civilian pilot training program approved for Cisco Junior college from a maximum of 10 students to a maximum of 20, Supt. R. N. Cluck of the Cisco public schools announced today.

Mr. Cluck received forms for the supplemental agreement today with instructions to sign them and return them immediately so that the additional students could be enrolled. The contract was received directly from Washington.

The college's original program of 10 students began operation October 16, at the same time that other approved colleges began operating their schools. The increase from 10 students to 20 is effective for the current fall program. Cluck said that the additional class will be ready to start receiving instruction tomorrow afternoon if the operators are ready.

There are 15 applicants on the waiting list from which the ten additional students will be select-

Reg Robbins, operator of the Cisco school, said by telephone today that he would be here tomorrow to start the increased program. Medical examination of applicants will be done tonight, Mr. Cluck said.

50 Million Votes Expected Tuesday

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4 (A.P.).—The pre-election Sabbath saw only slight abatement Sunday of the hard-fought campaigns for 50,000,000 votes expected to be cast in Tuesday's presidential balloting.

Wendell L. Willkie, pounding further on the third term question, issued a formal statement promising that his first message to Congress when elected would propose a constitutional amendment limiting presidential tenure to eight years or less.

In the democratic camp, National Chairman Edward J. Flynn in another statement accused the Republicans of having spent at least five times the approximate $2,300,000 he said they had reported. Nevertheless, Flynn declared, he had revised upward his forecast of his party's margin of victory.

he had revised upward his fore-

Willkie issued his statement in New York, where he addressed a Madison Square Garden rally Saturday night and where he plans to vote and receive the returns.

President Roosevelt, who spoke in Cleveland Saturday night, went to Washington, for an interval at his desk before he proceeded to his home at Hyde Park, N. Y., where he will vote and await the returns.

Both candidates planned radio speeches for Monday night, the eve of election day, with Willkie preparing what was understood to be a summary of what he considers the outstanding issues involved in Tuesday's voting.

In 1932 and again in 1936 the President made election-eve speeches, confined in each instance to urging that there be a big turnout at the polls. There was speculation, however, that this time he would say something more intimately connected with the campaign. The chief executive also had a motor tour along the Hudson scheduled for Monday.

Party organization leaders had both made their final pre-election forecast, each claiming victory. Edward J. Flynn, chairman

NAVAL FIGHT IS REPORTED FROM GREECE

Blazing Vessel Said to Have Steamed Northward

ATHENS, Greece, Nov. 4 (AP).—The Athens radio broadcast Sunday night that, according to telegrams from Corfu, a naval battle took place at 8 p. m. Sunday west of Corfu.

The radio said that half an hour later a large vessel was seen abaze steaming northward.

BITTER FIGHT FOR BASES

ROME, Nov. 4 (AP).—A bitter fight for air and sea bases in Greece developed Sunday between Italian and British airmen as clearing weather gave Italy's land force a firmer footing for their slow advance.

The Italian high command reported that fascist bombing squadrons had carried out a strong attack Saturday on Britain's vital naval base at Malta, and Sunday the Italian airmen, favored by bright skies, were reported as carrying load after load of bombs toward Greek ports where the British might be unloading troops and supplies to bolster Greek defenses.

Ionina (Janina) and Philoria appeared the immediate objectives of the widely separated Italian columns driving over the rocky mountains of northern Greece with the apparent intention of enveloping the Greeks in a giant pincer movement.

Italians meanwhile looked toward Africa, where they expected the veteran Marshal Rodolfo Graziani to begin his long-delayed advance on Alexandria and Suez over the long western desert stretch. Italians regarded Graziani's threat as a kind of Sword of Damocles hanging over the British in the eastern Mediterranean.

The high command's summary of action in Greece said troops were moving forward in Epirus, northwestern Greece, and that Italians in their advance south of Ergo Tolihi (Kakavia, on the Greek-Albanian border) to Perati bridge, on the Kalbaki river, had passed well-fortified defense lines.

Registration of Aliens Is Rapidly Done

The department of justice today announced that the alien registration division had received 1,386-679 completed registration forms through noon of Friday, September 27. This total represents receipts from 27 registration days and an average of 51,360 registrations per day.

Earl G. Harrison, director of registration, expressed satisfaction at the way the completed blanks continue to pour in. The directors also took occasion to point out that the postal officials in the field were doing a careful and accurate job in conducting the actual registration.

"Our daily average of completed forms received," said Mr. Harrison, "is now 51,300. This is 15-300 forms above the 36,000 average per day which we estimated should be maintained in order to complete registration of the estimated total number of aliens in this country at present."

"As the forms come in and are counted, they are immediately checked to make certain that they conform in each instance with the law. We were unable to give the local postmasters and their assistants much time in which to study the regulations before registration started. It is therefore a source of satisfaction to us that comparatively few of the forms received by us need to be returned to the local post offices for correction or further information."

Mr. Harrison also announced that this week the first batch of receipt cards were mailed of registered aliens as evidence of their compliance with the alien registration act of 1940. He estimates that by the middle of October at least 50,000 receipt cards will be mailed daily to registered aliens.

"Although the receipt card carried a special warning of the necessity for the registered alien reporting within five days any change in his permanent residence address," said Mr. Harrison, "the fact that he does not receive his receipt card for some weeks after he has registered does not relieve him of the obligation to report any interim change of permanent address."

Mr. Harrison also pointed out that the card itself carries directions that it should be returned to Washington if found by anyone but the rightful holder, or if the person on the card departs from the United States, becomes naturalized, or dies.

SOUTH'S BLOC IS BIG HURDLE FOR WILLKIE

Issue May Turn On "Unpredictable" Factors Tuesday

The voters of the United States will elect a president tomorrow in what today was forecast as the closest election in 24 years. Conflicting claims from the republican and democratic high commands were overshadowed by indecisive "straw vote" polls which indicated that the issue would turn on the unpredictable factors of undecided elements, last minute shifts of sentiment and the activities of the opposing forces in getting out the vote. With the solid south giving President Roosevelt heavy majorities and an accrued bloc of electoral votes, it was pointed out that the president could capture a majority of the popular vote and yet lose in the electoral college due to the close division of sentiment in the heavily populated north and northeastern states.

CISCOANS TO BALLOT IN TWO BOXES

and W. W. Wallace judge of the east Cisco box. West Cisco voters will cast their ballots in the lobby of the Cisco State bank building and east Cisco voters in the Magnolia station at D avenue and Eighth street.

However, the backlog of southern votes is a factor which makes all the more difficult the chances of a Willkie victory, since he must obtain a sufficient majority of the borderline states to offset the southern support of the democratic candidate before he is even

France—a Split Personality

ELOQUENT Andre Maurois is in this country appealing for France. She could not have a more effective advocate.

"Do not judge France harshly in this hour of her great distress," pleads M. Maurois. "She needs more than ever your understanding friendship and she has, I think, a right to it, as she has lost everything in the service of freedom."

So be it. Despite the substantial repayment made in 1917 and 1918, the United States will never forget that it was French support that helped win the Revolutionary war.

The France which M. Maurois properly reminds us can never die, the France of Montaigne, of Moliere and Racine and Balzac, the France of Chartres, Amiens and Dijon, the France of Valmy and Austerlitz and Verdun, that France will always live in the hearts of civilized men, together with the hope that it may rise again.

BUT France as a political unit among the nations of the world can scarcely be said to exist at all today. The causes of France's fall are an absorbing and necessary field for investigation, but the fact remains that France is fallen. In its relations to the outside world it has no freedom of action. Whatever action it takes must originate with Nazi Germany, or at the least must not be repugnant to Himmler's secret police. There are signs that Frenchmen are beginning to realize this more fully; a modern descendant of some sansculotte revolutionary balladeer puts it:

A rueful young Frenchman of Clichy, Said, "We were both washy and wishy!"
"We fell in the trap, Oh!"
"And got the Gestapo."
"Plus a fragrance that's fishy from Vichy."

FOR the French people the United States will always have sympathy; but the French people are mute. For the present French government, which can in the nature of things be nothing but a creature of France's conqueror, Hitler, the United States can have nothing but a vigilant wariness. Marshal Petain's plaintive assertion that "at least France retains its sovereignty," has no basis in reality.

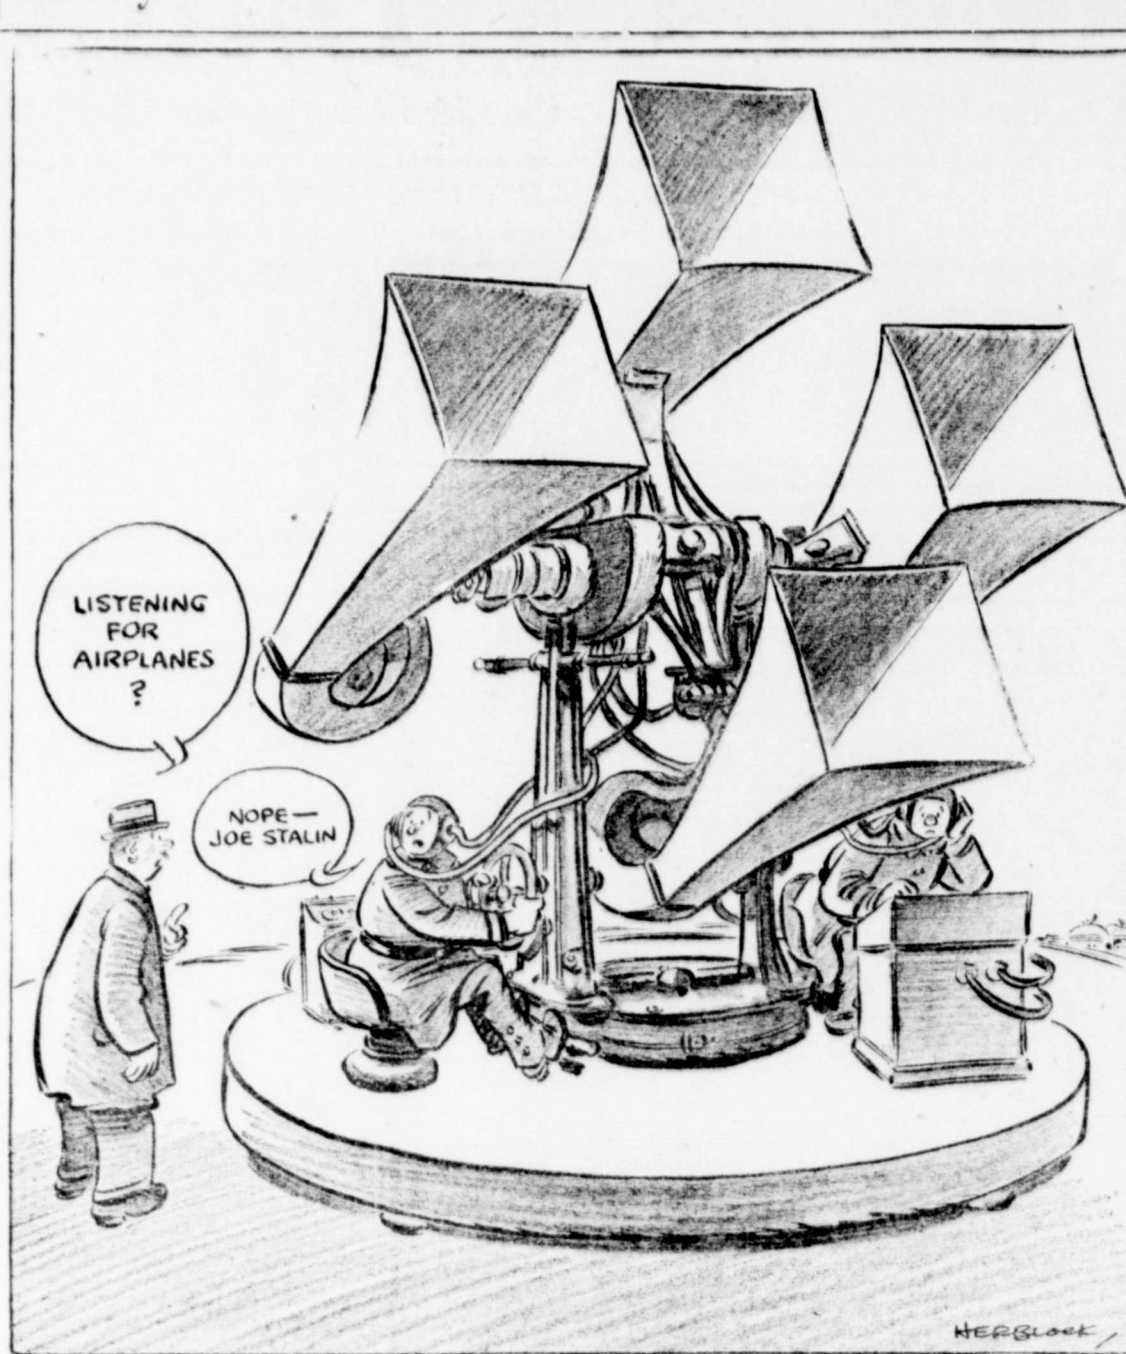

M. Maurois has been speaking for the French people and for French culture. Whether he proposes to go further and speak for men of Vichy, we do not know. But if he does, he will need to summon more eloquence than he has yet been able to command.

We're already wondering what they'll blame everything on after this presidential year has passed.

They found a backwoodsman in Kentucky who had a wife and some apple jack working hard for him.

A. Clauson, Racine, Wis., man had a $100 bass drum until a thief spotted it and beat it!

As for the important factor of election day weather, the weatherman predicted light rains for the North Atlantic and Lake states, mostly fair weather in the Ohio valley and generally fair in the South.

Party leaders on both sides are expecting a total of about 50,000,000 ballots in the election unless a turn to bad weather keeps many voters at home. In 1936, 45,646,817 exercised the franchise.

English Villages Are Machine-gunned

LONDON, Nov. 4 (Ap).—Sunday strollers, cyclists and motorists in east Anglian villages were reported systematically machine-gunned Sunday night by "hedge-hopping" German raiders in the first such attack on the British since the air siege of the United Kingdom began.

German airmen previously have fired machine guns in single instances upon British towns and even on London streets, but the east Anglian reports said the raiders flying singly or in pairs strafed buses, automobiles and pedestrians in various parts of that area north of the Thames and northeast of London.

At one village a cyclist was wounded in the thigh. At another, two Heinkel planes swooped down and machine-gunned the main streets.

For the first time in weeks, London began its fifty-eight night of air siege "all clear."

115 were on the honor roll. Fewer than ten per cent of the students received this honor. To gain this rating, one must make at least 80 in every subject for that preliminary.

Dean J. Thomas Davis, head of Tarleton college, complimented these outstanding students in an assembly period recently. He cited statistics to show that success in college was an indication of success in after life.

"In all phases of activity there are some who rise above their associates by virtue of their ability and effort," the Dean said. "This habit acquired in school carries over into after life," he commented.

BRUCE CATTON'S AMERICAN ROUNDUP

DEMOCRATS FEEL SURE OF VICTORY IN WEST, BUT AT LEAST THREE STATES ARE TEETERING

This is the first of three sectional pre-election roundups. Succeeding columns will cover the mid-west and the east.

BY BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—Democratic leaders in Washington have almost got to the point where they speak of the far west as a party stronghold second in loyalty and dependability to only the solid south, but the west isn't quite that secure in actual fact.

There are plenty of weak spots in the western front, and the two great imponderables of the campaign—the war issue and the third term question—may have made deeper inroads than the party chieftains suppose.

California was listed as a sure Roosevelt bet at the start, but it has been held to be a bit less of a sure thing lately. Senator Hiram Johnson's triumphal sweep of both party primaries and his strong speech in favor of Wendell Willkie have tempered Democratic enthusiasm. Democratic congressmen are facing stronger opposition than they'd figured.

On the other side is the fact that although California has two strongly isolationist senators, the Democratic senator—Sheridan Downey—has come out for Roosevelt. In addition, California is acutely alive to the Japanese situation.

To sum up: while the Republicans are still hopeful, a Willkie victory in California would be a genuine upset.

McNARY MAY WIN OREGON

OREGON offers Republicans their best hopes in the far west. Democrats publicly predict a clean sweep of the whole coast; privately, they admit that Oregon could go Republican. Senator McNary, Willkie's running mate, is highly popular there.

Washington looks safe for Roosevelt. Congressman Mon Wallgren, Democratic candidate for the Senate, is getting plenty of opposition from the Republican candidate, ex-Legion Commander Stephen Chadwick.

Away from the coast, most experts foresee Democratic victories in Idaho, Nevada, Utah, Wyoming, Arizona, New Mexico and Montana. In the latter state Senator Burton K. Wheeler, isolationist leader, is running for re-election and is hoped to win. He has opposed the Roosevelt foreign policy strongly but has refused to come out openly against the President. He is opposed by E. K. Cheadle, Jr., former Republican state chairman.

Colorado is more doubtful. Both of the state's senators are Democrats, but both have been pretty well off of the New Deal reservation—Senator Edwin Johnson is an isolationist, and Senator Alva Adams as a critic of the administration's spending policies.

POWER ISSUE IS IMPORTANT

THERE are several reasons for the New Deal's unquestioned strength in the far west. One is the tradition of political "liberalism" throughout the entire region. Another is the fact that enormous sums have been spent on power and reclamation projects—notably, of course, in the Grand Coulee and Bonneville projects in the Columbia basin. Public power is popular out there, and Willkie's utilities past has unquestionably hurt him.

Balancing all of this—to an unknown extent—is the innate isolationist sentiment common to the west. It is somewhat tempered by the fact that the west is closer to Japan than the rest of the country. But many of the strongest isolationists in Congress hail from the west, and under the surface this issue may be taking more votes from Roosevelt than the polls have disclosed.

neck and neck with Roosevelt in the contest.

Evidences of a definite trend to Willkie since mid-October have been noted in the leading national straw polls. Whether or not this trend has advanced to a point to give the republican candidate a victory is a question to be decided only in tomorrow's election. The Willkie campaign managers are counting heavily upon the so-called "silent vote," that margin of voters who are indicated as not having made up their minds on the candidates or who have refused to state their preferences. They say this element is preponderantly for the republican candidate but are hesitant to confide their preference except in the secrecy of the ballot.

The democrats on the other hand, dispute this assertion with the statement that the "silent vote" is a normal condition of every election and that the division of sentiment there will follow generally the division of the out-spoken preferences.

Most observers agree that a landslide is out of the question and that the vote will be so close that the balanced result will have a healthful effect upon the course of national policy in the next four years.

mittee, predicted a minimum of 427 electoral votes for the president. Joseph W. Martin Jr., the republican national chairman, foresaw a 324-vote minimum for Willkie. A majority of the electoral votes is 266.

Predicts House Gain
At the same time Representative J. William Ditter (Rep.) of Pennsylvania, chairman of the republican congressional campaign committee, estimated that his party would gain 60 to 70 seats in the house more than enough to give the republicans control of that branch of congress.

GOAL TO GO

BY W. H. PEARS

COPYRIGHT, 1940,
NEA SERVICE, INC.

CHAPTER I

AT three minutes of ten, Bill Mentor stripped off his white apron and dashed for the door of the drug store. Old Julius Peskin darted from the back room like a spider after a fly.

"So now, Mentor, you pick your own quitting time?" His dry, thin voice quivered. "You're paid to work from 4 until 10, not when the spirit moves you."

"But tonight's the first game of the season, Mr. Peskin. I'd like to see a few minutes of the last quarter." From nearly six feet up Bill watched the putty-colored bald spot on the little man's head turn crimson. "I've swept out and—"

"Slap things up in a hurry." Peskin grumbled. "If it wasn't for the ill-will I'd gain around the school, I'd yank my son Walton off the team and put him in your place here."

"Yes, sir," Bill said, edging toward the door. "It's 10 o'clock now, Mr. Peskin."

Peskin looked satisfied at having gained his rightful time, even in talk. "Go ahead," he snapped.

BILL was on his bicycle before the door slammed. He streaked through the clear autumn night, broad shoulders hunched over the handlebars, legs driving like pistons. Crossing Market street he saw a wide halo of light against the sky. He heard distant cheering and his heart leaped in response. The game was still on!

Bill sliced between parked cars, skidded to a stop. Inside City stadium he could hear the rising chant of a "Yea-a-a, team!" Applause spattered, followed by the abrupt silence that precedes play.

Running up the ramp, Bill caught a black glimpse of the scoreboard: VISITORS 6, WEST 0!

Down on the cleat—chewed sward the West boys were in a huddle, their jerseys making a huge crimson blossom against the green turf.

"Bill, here I am!" Helen Welch ran toward him, waving. Her chestnut curls were windblown and adorned with a crimson ribbon to match her short skirt. Slim, eager, she said, "I was afraid you wouldn't get here."

"Me, too," Bill said with a grin. "Jeepers, Helen, there goes a pass!"

It was a wobbly, erratic heave from Peskin. A Benton man charged in to bat it aside, but with a desperate lunge the West end grabbed it. He was knocked out of bounds on the Benton 25.

A deafening roar went up from the crowd. The band crashed forth in pagan triumph. Crimson-skirted cheerleaders spun around like dervishes, pounding the air with their fists, chanting, "We want a touchdown!"

"Oh, Bill!" Helen's eyes shone as she joined her voice to the pandemonium. She danced up and down, grabbed Bill impulsively and kissed him. "Bill, Bill, they're going to do it!"

"Gee . . ." Bill stared at Helen, touching his fingers to his lips. "You . . . kissed me."

"Oh . . ." Helen's cheeks flamed.

Illustrated by G. P. Whitford

The West end grabbed the ball . . . was knocked out on the Benton 25. A deafening roar went up from the stands.

"I didn't mean to, Bill. Honestly, I—I was excited and . . ."

Her voice was lost in wild cheering as Hart, West's fullback, bucked the line for five. The timekeeper signaled three minutes to play. The Benton boys looked tired. Straight, hard smashes would do it, Bill thought, trembling.

"Drive!" he prayed. The mild fall wind struck icily across his hot forehead. He could almost feel the hard, taut leather in his big hands. If he could only be down there now, carrying the ball or even running interference.

Throwing himself into a sweet roll block, clearing the way for a West man to score. Boy!

The Benton line-held. It was put down with three to go. Landis replaced Peskin with Calvert. Hart took the pass from center, faked a thrust at the line and gave the ball to Calvert, who flipped it backward to the left halfback. Instead of racing to the right for a clear shot at the end, the halfback hurried the pass away and it went straight into the hands of a Benton man.

A low moan swept the stands. The band was silent, the cheerleader wilted and mute. Boos were heard as Benton face to the ball for three plays, then put out of danger. A moment later the timekeeper's pistol exploded.

AS Bill and Helen pushed slowly through the disconsolate crowd they recognized Pat Hurly, sports editor of the Daily Clarion, and heard him grumble. "That wouldn't have happened if Buck Mentor'd been coaching. What a time for razzle-dazzle!"

Wheeling his bicycle, Bill walked by Helen's side in silence. He thought of his father, sitting alone by the radio, and it made him unhappy. Why, Buck had forgotten more football than Coach Landis ever knew!

Helen said shyly, "I'm sorry, Bill."

"About the game?" She shook her head, blushing. "About what I did . . ."

"Gee, why, Helen? I—I li—I mean I didn't mind."

Embarrassed, they said no more until they reached home. Bill hesitated at the Welchs' front porch. "Well, goodnight."

He started across the yard to his house, then stopped. "Helen . . ."

"Yes, Bill?"

He fumbled for words. "Maybe . . . well, I hadn't ought to say this, but I'm kinda low tonight."

Helen's feet pattered down the steps. Her lips brushed his tense young mouth. "Was that what you wanted, Bill?" she asked softly. Before Bill could reply she was gone. He turned thoughtfully homeward.

gone. He turned thoughtfully homeward.

BUCK MENTOR sat in his invalid chair by the radio. On the table was his football notebook. A smile touched his gray eyes as he greeted his son.

"Tough one, huh, fellow?" "Plenty," Bill agreed. "Buck, what do you think?"

Buck Mentor hunched big shoulders that seemed cramped by the invalid's chair, considered the question. Like Bill's, his hair was tar-black and cut crew fashion. His face was youthful, charged with suppressed energy. Only the shadowed, deep-set eyes told of his brooding. He was "Buck" to everyone, young or old.

"Bill, are you asking me to second-guess?"

"You can tell me, Buck."

He nodded thumbing the bowl of his pipe. "Look, Bill, somebody used bad judgment tonight."

"Coach?"

Buck shrugged. "If he ordered that play . . . which I doubt. That was a big-time razzle-dazzle. With plenty of practice a high school team might click it off, but . . ."

"That's what I thought."

"Bill, I wouldn't say this to another human soul. It would sound pretty bad coming from a man who was refused the job of coaching West. But if that play had gone off, the whole west side would be raving about Landis tonight."

Bill frowned. "You mean he was grandstanding?"

"It's possible. But remember the Benton line had held once and might again. Landis or Calvert merely chose, the spectacular rather than the sound way of trying for those yards."

"DUCK, I heard Pat Hurly say we'd have won if you'd been coaching."

"Or, if you'd been calling the plays," Buck said softly. "Football needs boys like you, Bill. You've got the body and brains."

Buck pressed his eyeballs with the tip of his fingers. "You lack only a father who can run off his share of the plays."

"Who taught me what I know?" Bill exploded. "And just let Landis boot a few more games . . ."

Buck dropped his hand to his son's shoulder. "We're not after another man's job, Bill."

"But, Buck, didn't the board say they might consider you?"

"Yes . . . Yes, they did." Eager glints jumped into Buck Mentor's eyes. "And I'd give my soul to tackle the job, Bill."

Important for Women

A weak, run-down condition often gives a foothold to functional dysmenorrhea, causing much periodical distress from headaches, nervousness, cramp-like pain for women. CARDUI so often helps in such cases, for it sharpens appetite, boosts flow of gastric juices; improves resistance. CARDUI, if taken a few days before and during "the time," also helps to relieve periodical distress. Used 50 years.

Fire Loss Would Be Big Relief Help

AUSTIN, Nov. 4 (Sp.)—The value insured property alone, destroyed by fire in Texas each year, would go a long way toward solving the relief problem or building up our national defense, Marvin Hall, state fire insurance commissioner said today. Texas has an annual insured fire loss of approximately nine and one-half million dollars, the Commissioner declared, and if this amount of money could be saved it would pay for 950 warplanes costing $10,000 each, or pay one-half the cost of one of the world's finest first-line battleships.

Baptists Plan Larger Program Among Negroes

Racial prejudice will have the penetrating light of Christianity turned upon it at the meeting of the Baptist general convention in Houston, November 11-15. Renewed emphasis and larger apportionment are expected to be given to work among the negroes of the state by the denomination next year. Fifty-one per cent of all negroes in Texas are members of churches, with 73 per cent of them belonging to Missionary Baptist churches. For the past several years, Dr. Charles T. Alexander of Waco has been a full time worker under the auspices of the Baptist denomination to serve among negro Baptist churches. Only through the living of Christian principles by both whites and blacks will the race question be solved, said Dr. Alexander. "The white people send missionaries to Africa to lead the natives to Christ but too many of these same white people do not try to lead their own servants to be religious. Through the medium of Baptist work among the negro race in Texas we are trying not only to strengthen their faith, organize their churches, but to help them improve their living conditions and Indicative of the institution's consistent growth, this is the 13th record enrollment figure established during the past nine years with this fall's number surpassing last fall's record by 38 students.

Harvey Demmert, native of Alaska, who enrolled as a freshman business administration student and Helen Pearl Scott, senior from South Africa, are the two most distant students listed.

With 217 enrolled in Abilene Christian college's extension department and 131 pupils attending the grade and high school operated on the campus, the grand enrollment figure for this fall is 1,009.

ideals, so that a higher flame of living will result in less crime and misery among them. The great majority of negro Baptist preachers are urging their people to be proud of the fact that they are negroes, and to build for their race a distinct existence, in any other; to undergird their churches, and to begin to send missionaries to their black brothers and sisters in Africa." Sixty-six percent of all negro churches in Texas are Missionary Baptists.
