THE SDN COLUMN

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Ideas, like fleas, jump from person to person, but they don't bite everyone."

Government is looking for new places to tax, and it seems as though "luxury" taxes are now in vogue.

We are taxed on long-distance calls, airline travel and other so-called luxury items.

A guy in the coffee shop has suggested that the feds slap an excise tax on snack food. A levy on cookies, crackers, candy and doughnuts would bring in billions each year.

It would be a classic case of the government's hand in the cookie jar.

Somebody left the following revival story on our desk:

It seems that a tent revival was being held and the preacher was doing a wondrous job on the small, but attentive audience.

He called up three men from the audience. One was blind, one was deaf and one was on crutches.

The preacher laid his hand on the eyes of the blind man and announced, "If you believe, if you really believe, you will see."

Suddenly the man shouted, "I can see, I can see!"

The evangelist turned to the second man, and told him in sign language, "If you believe, if you really believe, you will hear." The preacher then placed his hands over the man's ears.

Suddenly, the man's face lighted up and he exclaimed to the audience, "I can hear, I can hear!"

The preacher turned to the third man on crutches, but the man backed off. Throwing up his hands, the man explained, "Not me, not me. I'm on workers' comp."

Survey shows...

Water rates rising here...and most everywhere else

By Wade Warren
Staff Writer

With the recent passage of an eight percent increase in the water rates for local water customers, city residents may feel like complaining. A survey of neighboring towns indicates they wouldn't be alone, however.

Before the city council took action earlier this month, Snyder citizens paid a base rate of $7.80. That figure included the first 2,000 gallons used. There was also a $2.15 fee for each additional 1,000 gallons.

The new base rate is $8.45, with each additional 1,000 gallons costing $2.35.

Out-of-city water customers now pay a base rate of $10.50 plus $2.55 for each additional 1,000 gallons.

City water customers can expect to continue to see water rates rise — at least until the end of the century — as the city has forecasted an eight percent increase through that period.

The increase is necessary, say city officials, to pay for a proposed $3.2 million water treatment plant which will be built to meet the water quality standards of the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission (TNRCC).

Unfunded state and federal mandates are one reason that rates continue to climb in almost every city in Texas.

Brownwood has a base rate of $7.80 for water and lets the user know that 39 percent of their utility bill is a result of unfunded government mandates.

"The city takes all the blame for water rates but but we have no control over what Austin and Washington D.C. tell us to do," said a Brownwood city official.

The TNRCC's main complaint with Snyder's plant is the fact the present facility, built in the early 1950s, has no back-up system in case it fails.

Redundancy is how the TNRCC refers to what the present plant does not have the capability to do.

With the completion of the new water plant expected in March of 1996, the city will be able to treat up to nine million gallons per day — a figure which city officials foresee as adequate for citizen's needs well into the 21st century.

Another reason for building the new water plant is for economic

Gun violation nets 20 years

A 20-year prison sentence in the Texas Department of Criminal Justice was handed down Friday in 132nd District Court.

Ernest Aguirre, 27, of 111 13th St. pleaded guilty to unlawful possession of a firearm by a convicted felon, an April 20 offense.

The offense, a third degree felony, was enhanced because of a 1992 conviction in Dallas County of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

Senior District Judge Gene Dulaney dismissed a second case against Aguirre, an April 20 charge of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon.

Parenting series begins Monday

Targeting All Parents will begin its first parenting series for the 1995-96 school year Monday.

Classes will be held each Monday at 10:30 a.m. for four weeks at Humble-Smith's parent resource room.

The topic for the first session will be "Art and Child Development." Carol Bullard will take parents through the different stages of child development in art. Parents are encouraged to bring their children's artwork.

Mary Ann Juarez, TAP coordinator, will hold bilingual sessions each Wednesday for four weeks at 1:30 p.m. Sessions will begin Sept. 20.

Topics will be determined according to parents' needs. For information, call TAP at 573-7702.

Baseball, ballots on agenda

Baseball and ballots will be on the agenda for the Scurry County Commissioners Court when it meets Monday morning at 10.

The Snyder Little League Association has requested to construct a fence and gate between Logan Field and the adjoining minor league field to restrict traffic flow during baseball games.

Also, the Teenage League has requested to connect the two existing concession stands at Moffett Field.

The court will consider whether to purchase new election equipment or repair the present ballot-counting machines.

In other business, the court will consider advertising for bids for asphalt and consider a change in the county's policy manual concerning compensation time.

A budget amendment will also be considered, as well as line-item transfers.

ASK US

Q—When will bids be accepted for the plumbing renovation at Cogdell Hospital?

A—The needed repairs were declared an emergency, therefore the bid process, by law, can be waived. Work should begin soon.

Local CROP Walk planned on Sept. 24

Scurry County's annual Crop Walk is slated for Sunday, Sept. 24, beginning at 2:30 p.m. All walkers are asked to gather in front of the courthouse.

Each person who registers as a walker may also bring a can of food which will be donated to the new Food Cupboard now being established at the former site of Kentucky Fried Chicken.

Nan Swanson, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, will serve as director of the 1995 Crop Walk. Walkers may contact her at 573-6915 to obtain a sponsor sheet.

Snyder officials already committed to walking include Mayor David Holt, City Manager John Gayle and Superintendent Gayle Lomax.

Swanson said for every $60 raised, $15 will benefit the Food Cupboard. The remaining $45 will be used for one of the following: water purification tablets for 2,300 gallons of water, a month's supply of oral rehydration therapy for 50 children; six pounds of vegetable seeds for a community garden in Africa, two six-piece sets of tools for rural families in Thailand.

The Crop Walk was created several years ago by Church World Services which works with churches in more than 70 countries, helping them move beyond poverty and helplessness, Swanson explained.

The organization also helps in the United States when floods, hurricanes or other emergencies devastate communities.

CWS also assists people around the world who are under duress from beyond their control, Swanson added. They include drought and dislocation, warfare, economic upheaval and high winds and waters.

Each year, more than 3 million friends and neighbors walk or sponsor a walker to help stop hunger around the block and around the world. Some 2,000 Crop Walks are organized each year.

Swanson said that the Crop Walk is "one of the finest fund-raisers for the hungry." She added that nearly 800 million people in developing countries are chronically undernourished and over two billion face malnutrition as "hidden hunger."

Swanson also said that 40,000 children throughout the world die daily of hunger related causes. In the United States, one out of five children lives in poverty.

She considers those statistics "bad news." However, she points out that the overall hunger is declining as 40 nations have improved child and maternal nutritional health in the past five years.

Church World Service and others have assisted local organizations to gain food security and improve health and nutrition.

BOOK DONATED — A copy of Elmer Kelton's book The Wolf and the Buffalo has been donated to the Scurry County Library by B. Dalton Bookseller in anticipation of Kelton's visit to the White Buffalo Festival on Oct. 7. An exhibit featuring some of Kelton's 30 novels is displayed in the library. Aline Parks, a member of the Scurry County Historical Commission which arranged Kelton's visit and a book signing, and Noreen Taylor, librarian, are shown with the donated volume. (SDN Staff Photo)

Award-winning author to appear here

Award-winning western author Elmer Kelton, who will be in Snyder for the White Buffalo Festival on Oct. 7, spent 42 years writing fiction by night and traveling West Texas by day to report on livestock auctions, range conditions and rodeo results.

"A couple of times when I was gathering newspaper stories, I was asked if I knew that somebody with the same name was writing westerns," Kelton recalls. "My reply was yes, I knew, and I hoped the guy was getting rich and famous." More than 30 of Kelton's novels have been published, and among the honors he has received for his work is the Distinguished Achievement Award from the Western Literature Association.

Kelton was born in Crane where his father, the late R.W. "Buck" Kelton, was with the McElroy Ranch Co. for 36 years.

"To my father, work was something you did a-horseback or with a pick and shovel, not at a desk," Kelton remembers. "When I told him I wanted to become a writer he gave me a look that would kill Johnson grass."

Buck relented, however, and Elmer enrolled in the University of Texas at Austin after graduating from Crane High School. He took two years out to serve in the U.S. Army before receiving his degree from UT. He spent 15 years as farm and ranch writer-editor for the San Angelo Standard-Times, five years as editor of Sheep and Goat Raiser Magazine, and 22 years as associate editor of Livestock Weekly, retiring in 1990.

"I have always felt that the two parallel careers complemented each other in many ways," Kelton says. "My fiction taught me how to write straight news stories and feature articles with more life and vitality. By the same token, the discipline of newspaper writing taught me how to shape my fiction concisely and to make a point."

Kelton's latest novels include The Far Canyon, Slaughter, Honor at Daybreak, The Man Who Rode Midnight, Stand Proud and The Wolf the and the Buffalo, all published by Doubleday-Bantam. Reader's Digest selected another popular novel, The Good Old Boys, to appear in one of its condensed books and Tommy Lee Jones starred in a recent TV movie based on the novel.

Bill Tune is one of Kelton's local fans and has read most if not all of Kelton's books. Tune, who owns and operates the Deep Creek Boot & Shoe Repair Shop, enjoys reading westerns and learning about local history but had not come across Kelton's books until a Yankee cousin called them to his attention. If Tune has a favorite among Kelton's novels, it is The Time It Never Rained. The characters are so real, Tune says, that they could easily be people he has known. Tune doesn't have a large collection of Kelton's books. He buys them and passes them along to others to enjoy.

The Time It Never Rained, set in Texas during the drought of the 50s, has been called one of the dozen best American novels of the twentieth century. It is one of five Kelton novels to win the Spur award from Western Writers of America.

Kelton will be a special guest for the Parade of History starting at 10 a.m. on Oct. 7 and will be signing books at 2509 College Avenue on the west side of the square afterward.

Treadway begins six month deployment with U.S. Navy

(FHTNC) — Navy Airman David A Treadway, a 1991 graduate of Snyder High School, recently departed on a six-month overseas deployment aboard the aircraft carrier USS America as the lead ship of the USS America Battle Group.

Treadway is one of 5,000 sailors and marines aboard the aircraft carrier, which departed from Norfolk, Va., in August along with 10 other ships and submarines.

The 11-battle group is a formidable force equipped with jet fighters and attack aircraft, airborne early warning and electronic jamming aircraft, helicopters and ships and submarines armed with Tomahawk cruise missiles.

Extremely mobile and flexible, the battle group can operate together, moving nearly 700 miles a day, or can be deployed simultaneously to separate geographic regions.

Treadway and fellow sailors spent the last year training for a variety of situations they might encounter during the deployment. Treadway's ship will replace the USS Theodore Roosevelt and its aircraft, which have been conducting air strikes over Bosnia recently as part of the NATO force operating in the area.

During the 30,000-mile voyage, Treadway will spend about 150 days at sea as the ship participates in a variety of multinational operations and exercises.

Treadway's involvement in the deployment is an example of how the Navy and Marine Corps team is designed to operate forward deployed overseas and respond quickly when needed.

This deployment will be the last for the 31-year-old USS America, which has served from Vietnam to the Persian Gulf War.

With an average age of 20 years old, most of the crew members aboard the carrier weren't even born when the keel was laid for the 1,047-foot-long-ship.

Today, more than 20,000 men and women like Treadway are serving overseas aboard U.S. aircraft carriers from the Persian Gulf and the Western Pacific Ocean to the Adriatic Sea.

Treadway joined the Navy in November of 1992.

American Heart Association sponsoring walk campaigns

DALLAS (AP) — More than 400,000 Americans will log more than 1.2 million miles on foot to do their part in the battle against the country's No. 1 killer.

The American Heart Association hopes to raise more than $13 million with a series of 800 walks across the country in September and October. The Dallas-based charity estimates the registered walkers will average about three miles each in the American Heart Walk.

Heart disease might be one of the few things both President Clinton and House Speaker Newt Gingrich agree on. The political adversaries are both honorary chairpersons of the campaign.

The AHA estimates that cardiovascular disease will cost $138 billion in health care and lost productivity.

Trail Ride IV for Rehab scheduled Sept. 29-Oct. 1

The ruins of Fort Chadbourne on the historic Chadbourne Ranch in Coke County will echo with the sights and sounds of the past as an estimated 300 trail riders converge on the ranch for Trail Ride IV for Rehab, Sept. 29-Oct. 1. The ranch was the site of the first trail ride to benefit West Texas Rehabilitation Center in the spring of 1994.

As in the past, Trail Ride IV will provide a central campsite, a day-long ride on Saturday and a shorter ride on Sunday morning with lunch and supper on Saturday and breakfast on Sunday provided.

Participation is a free-will donation that will go directly to benefit the West Texas Rehabilitation Center in Abilene and San Angelo.

Entertainment will be provided on Saturday evening around the campfire with riders encouraged to bring their guitars, banjos, fiddles and harmonicas and join in the fun.

Fort Chadbourne was established in 1852 and remained in use until 1864. Shortly after the Civil War, G.G. Odom settled in the area and founded the Chadbourne Ranch at the site of the abandoned fort. The ranch is still owned by his descendants. Ruins of the fort still stand on the ranch.

For more information call West Texas Rehabilitation Center, 915-691-7290 (Abilene) or 915 949-9535 (San Angelo). After 7 p.m., call Mac Sayles at 915-554-7884.

Panel accepts settlement

AUSTIN (AP) — A federal three-judge panel approved a settlement Friday in a lawsuit challenging some of the state's legislative district lines.

The ruling by the panel halts a trial that had been scheduled for October and clears the way for 1996 legislative elections to go forward without further legal action.

The lawsuit, filed in January by 17 voters in Bexar, Harris and Dallas counties, claims that 71 of the state's legislative districts were unconstitutionally drawn to ensure victories for minority candidates.

Attorneys for the plaintiffs and for state leaders named as defendants in the lawsuit said the settlement will benefit candidates and voters.

"The settlement has the effect of making the conduct of the elections in the state's largest areas simpler," said Rick Gray, an Austin attorney representing Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and House Speaker Pete Laney.

"It reduces a great number of exceedingly small voting precincts and reunites many neighborhoods that in prior plans have been divided," Gray said. "It doesn't change the partisan balance and doesn't adversely affect the opportunities of minority candidates."

Doug Markham, a Houston attorney representing the plaintiffs, said he too was happy with the settlement, saying it "put neighborhoods back together."

"There has been such a drastic carving apart that you go to a civic club and it's in three different Senate districts," Markham said.

Lawmakers responded to the lawsuit by agreeing on a settlement proposal in the final hours of the 1995 Legislature.

The case involves 17 Senate districts and 54 House districts in Bexar, Dallas, El Paso, Fort Bend, Harris, Jefferson, Orange, Smith and Tarrant counties.

Guests Make Themselves A Little Too Much at Home

DEAR ABBY: Some relatives came to visit us for two long weeks. I bought $100 worth of groceries before their arrival and planned lovely meals to make their stay more enjoyable.

The day they arrived they said we had nothing in the house they could eat. So, back to the market we went — and this time they picked out the food and we paid for it.

They also told us they were not big eaters. I cooked our food for us and their food for them. They ate theirs and ours, all the while insisting they were still sticking to their no-fat diets.

They also hiked for at least an hour every day and kept telling us they were "restless." And they stayed up well past midnight every night playing cards or watching television. To put it plainly, they ran us ragged.

What do you think of people who come to spend their vacation and insist on keeping up with their diet and exercise regimen at your house — even if it means inconveniencing their hosts and turning their lives upside down?

FUMING IN FRESNO, CALIF.

DEAR FUMING: I think they're rude and self-centered. And if you didn't invite them again, it would be understandable. Polite guests adapt to their hosts' lifestyle — "When in Rome, do as the Romans do."

DEAR ABBY: My sister and I both have 3-year-old daughters. My problem is that my mother has attended all three of my niece's birthday parties, but has been "sick" for the last two years for my daughter's. I have gone out of my way to invite her to these parties far in advance so that she could attend.

Mother lives closer to my sister and sees a lot more of her other granddaughter, but I go to see her every two or three weeks.

When I ask Mother about attending, she says things like, "Oh, you know I don't believe in having birthday parties for children that young." (My daughter received her last two birthday gifts two to three weeks late and they weren't even wrapped!) I do not live a great distance away, but I have had to drive to her house to "collect" the presents two years in a row.

Should I let Mother know how much this is bothering me? (Not to mention the fact that my daughter will soon notice this treatment if it continues.)

FRUSTRATED MOM

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Tell your mother what you have told me. If your mother doesn't already realize how much it bothers you, she must be extremely insensitive. You can "protect" your daughter for just so long. Perhaps it would be better to simply call a halt to the cover-up and allow your mother to be seen for the thoughtless, uncaring person she is.

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from "Fed Up in West Virginia," regarding the friend who (in the writer's opinion) faked illnesses to get attention.

It reminded me of something my sister told me long ago. She attended a church where the pastor's wife often complained of chest pains. My sister told me in a sarcastic tone, "There's nothing wrong with her — she's just doing it to get attention." A year later, the poor woman died of a heart attack at the age of 46.

"Fed Up in West Virginia" may have to eat large portions of humble pie herself one day. She sounds like a woman with a heart of stone.

DEAR ABBY: "Jane in Bloomfield Hills, Mich." asked if you were still writing your own column. She went on to say, "I don't see how you could still be doing it." Jane informed you that her friends who are near her age (81) are in wheelchairs or using walkers, and she concluded that is normal because they are "at the end of the line."

A pair of eyes, even if one must use Braille, a beat-up typewriter or a pencil — these are all it takes to keep the brain active, regardless of what Mother Nature has in store for the rest of the body.

A few decades ago, as a radio news director and TV anchor in Miami, I had the pleasure of introducing you to a group of high-school students. I was very much impressed by your honesty, and I still am.

When I became a senior citizen (ugh), I found another niche in life. I changed professions and went into banking. I am now retired, but I'm not idle.

With failing legs, aches and pains, and even a handicapped parking permit, I am still productive. I publish a newsletter for several armed forces organizations, and on occasion the local newspaper publishes a piece I have written. I'm having a ball!

Abby, please tell your older readers to throw away their rocking chairs and stop anticipating a visit from the Grim Reaper. If they will put their minds to work, it will keep them young, alert, and as content as a freshly milked cow. I advise them to reach for a star — there's one with their name on it.

You may use my name — there are no creditors looking for me.

ROSS STONE,
JENSEN BEACH, FLA.

DEAR ROSS: The theory that an active mind retards the aging process is not new, and you are a prime example. I, too, credit my mental activity for keeping me young for my age. I'm no spring chicken, but I feel like one — and I must admit I still lay an egg occasionally.

DEAR ABBY: She would have been 10 years old this November. She passed away last week, unexpectedly. Since her death, we have not slept well, and our appetites are small.

The void is permanent, the loss is painful. It's hard to believe that she is gone. We still expect her to walk in from the next room. Sometimes, we even think we hear her! There were so many reminders of her in the house, we had to put them away. It hurt too much to look at them. She had shared her life with us every day for 10 years. She gave us unconditional love, expecting nothing in return. May our beloved dog rest in peace!

I wrote this hoping it will be seen by the woman who was hurt and angry when her doctor compared the loss of his dog to the loss of her child.

Abby, the loss of a beloved pet can be just as painful as the loss of a child.

Perhaps when she reads this, she, and others who sympathized with her, will now understand how that doctor felt. I know I did. They say that time heals pain. I look forward to that day.

STILL GRIEVING IN OHIO

DEAR STILL GRIEVING: To grieve over the loss of a beloved pet is appropriate and understandable. But please don't compare it to the loss of a child in the presence of someone who has felt the devastating pain of losing a child.

Financial Focus

Mutual funds are typically long-term investments. This means if you don't plan to invest your money for at least five years, you should possibly look at other, shorter-term alternatives.

Long-term investing is the philosophy that built mutual funds into the mammoth industry that it is today. In fact, according to recent figures released by the Investment Company Institute, the Washington D.C.-based voice of the mutual fund industry, retirement plans account for about $637 billion of mutual fund investments, or about 30 percent of all money invested in mutual funds. In addition, 50 percent of new mutual fund investments in 1993 were placed in various pension and individual retirement accounts. Saving for retirement is a serious, long-term commitment, and the sheer volume of retirement plans that invest in mutual funds is a testament to their long-term nature.

Mutual funds never were intended as "trading" vehicles. Yet today, as staggering numbers of new funds are offered regularly, more and more brokers, advisers, newsletters and others are urging investors to start trading.

The idea of trading mutual funds is not new; it generally surfaces after prolonged bull markets. The latest breed of mutual fund "traders" would like you to believe that the traditional by-and-hold strategy (a strategy that has worked successfully since the 1930's, by the way) will not work in the 1990s.

For example, a recent advertisement for a mutual fund "timing system" promised "a virtually guaranteed way to identify market peaks...and absolutely safeguard your mutual fund investment." Sure, it's easy to look back at a fund's historical performance and show the tremendous results you would have achieved if you had been lucky enough to consistently buy low and sell high.

But the fact is that no one can realistically guarantee profits in any mutual fund. The safest way to select mutual funds is to look at those that meet your objectives and risk tolerance. Before you buy, study the historical performance of the funds through good and bad markets - the longer the history, the better - but keep in mind that past performance does not guarantee future results.

The key is consistency, and your challenge is to have the patience to let the fund's managers work for you. This discipline will greatly enhance your chances for profit and the safety of your investment.

Mutual funds are not an appropriate parking place for overnight investors. Those who try to make funds fit that mold usually find the frustration of trying to force a square peg into a round hole.

'Diary of a Mad Husband' shows plot to murder wife

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Ronald Mapel carefully plotted his wife's death for a year, recording details of the plan on tape and in a journal he titled "Diary of a Mad Husband."

In a chilling passage on the day he killed his wife, Mapel wrote of his despair from financial problems caused by his gambling addiction.

"Well, I'm down to my last 20 bucks," he wrote. "I'm having breakfast. After that, I'm off to the house and then — well you know. I really don't know where she wants to be buried."

Prosecutors said Mapel shot his 43-year-old wife, Sheila, to death on Jan. 16, 1993.

Before he did so, they said, he tape recorded his last conversation with his wife, during which they kissed and discussed their love for each other.

Mapel pleaded guilty Thursday to first-degree murder. He was to be sentenced to life in prison on Oct. 26 as part of a plea bargain.

"It is the strongest premeditated type of killing," Chief Deputy District Attorney David Schwartz said.

Mapel, 38, initially described the slaying of his wife of six years as a mercy killing. But authorities said Mrs. Mapel suffered from nothing more serious than epilepsy.

"Her doctor said as long as she took her medication, she was OK," Schwartz said.

Mapel began his diary on Oct. 19, 1992, with a discussion of his gambling problem and the cost of his wife's medication.

He apparently viewed the killing of his wife as a way to ease some of the financial burden caused by $17,000 in gambling debts.

SINGING

Christianity is a singing religion. Christians are happy because of the salvation they know in Christ, Paul and Silas could sing even in prison. The Bible teaches us as children of God, "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord" (Col. 3:16). Although instrumental music was used by the Jews in their worship and was commonly used by the pagans in their worship, the New Testament does not authorize its use in Christian worship. It is conspicuous by its absence in the practice of the early church for centuries. Scholars in this field agree with the eminent musicologist, Dr. Curt Sach, in saying, "All ancient Christian music was vocal." Since Christ is our authority we must be willing to follow Him in this aspect of worship as in every part of life (Matt. 28:18-20).

Autopsy answers family's questions

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My father died recently of arteriosclerotic heart disease. He had a terrible stomach ache before he collapsed and had a history of aneurysm 10 years prior. Could this whole situation have been prevented?

DEAR READER: One of the ways of answering questions such as yours is to obtain an autopsy, which usually shows the cause of death. This information may be important to the living relatives, especially if the deceased had an illness related to genetic makeup (such as a heart attack) or an infection (that could have been spread to survivors).

In my opinion, your father probably died of a heart attack or ruptured aneurysm.

It's impossible to judge whether his death could have been prevented. Certainly, many conditions — including the two I mentioned — can be successfully treated if diagnosed early, before irreparable harm has occurred. However, this is not always possible.

I suggest that you ask your father's doctor whether an autopsy was performed and, if so, what were the results. If no post-mortem exam were conducted, you're left with an unfortunate and uncomfortable uncertainty about what actually happened at the end of your father's life.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Understanding Heart Disease." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10150. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Is there any real treatment for tendinitis of the elbow or must a person simply rest until it gets better on its own?

DEAR READER: Inflammation of any tendon can be a painful experience. In many instances, heat, gentle physical therapy, ultrasound treatments, and anti-inflammatory drugs (such as Motrin and Indocin) will aid healing and reduce pain.

Sometimes, in resistant cases, cortisone injections may be necessary. If calcium deposits aggravate tendinitis (and are seen on X-rays) they may have to be surgically removed. Most important, people must avoid the activity that causes the tendon inflammation in the first place.

Although most cases of tendinitis clear up with therapy prescribed by a family practitioner, some patients may require the services of orthopedic specialists for injections or surgery.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please discuss a bone density test and who should have it. Is it recommended for someone who is depending on calcium supplements?

DEAR READER: The bone density test is a method of measuring the concentration of calcium in bones. It is particularly useful in patients being treated for osteoporosis, because consecutive bone density measurements enable physicians to assess the success of therapy.

This test is generally only available at large hospitals.

It is not appropriate for all patients with the age-related loss of bone-calcium that we call osteoporosis. Rather, the test is used to monitor the progress of people who are being treated for this condition, especially if "crush" fractures are present.

Currently, bone density measurements are not routinely recommended for the elderly who take calcium supplements.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 36-year-old female, married with three healthy active boys, and I have CFIDS and fibromyalgia. I am surprised that, to my knowledge, I don't recall anyone ever writing about this unknown (or should I say not well-known) disease, that can often be very devastating for me, as well as my family. I am discouraged at this time, as I feel I will never get better. There are many days that I have to just push myself to get going. I would appreciate any information you have on this disease.

DEAR READER: Well, I've written about it. So there.

Chronic fatigue syndrome is a poorly understood disorder, affecting women primarily, that causes recurring episodes of exhaustion, swollen glands, low-grade fever, and other symptoms. There are no blood tests to diagnose it. Because it is frequently associated with depression, many doctors doubt its existence. However, several authorities believe that it reflects an as-yet unidentified abnormality in the immune system, hence the tongue-twisting title that is shortened to C.F.I.D.S. from chronic fatigue immune dysfunction syndrome.

I don't have an opinion about this affliction and defer to the super experts. The disease — if it is a disease — must be differentiated (by blood tests) from other ailments that cause chronic fatigue. These include anemia, lupus, depression, recurring infection, hypothyroidism, chronic Lyme disease, and others.

Just putting a label on a person's symptoms often legitimizes the disorder. Thus, many women experience relief — even improvement — once diagnosed with C.F.I.D.S. For others, antidepressant medication and counseling usually help them better cope with this puzzling and frightening disorder.

Fibromyalgia is also a poorly defined disease, consisting of muscle aches and stiffness, "trigger points" (pinpoint areas of muscle tenderness), low-grade fever — and chronic fatigue. Could your exhaustion really be caused by fibromyalgia or do you have C.F.I.D.S., too? I don't know. There are no blood tests, X-rays or examinations to diagnose fibromyalgia either.

As I'm sure you've already done, put yourself under the care of a sensitive, sympathetic and understanding physician, who will support you in any way he or she can. In addition, you can obtain up-to-date information from the Chronic Fatigue Immune Dysfunction Syndrome Foundation of America, P.O. Box 220398, Charlotte, NC 28222-0398, or by calling them at 1-800-442-3437.

Embarking on book tour, Powell dabbles in politics

WASHINGTON (AP) — As he embarks on a cross-country book tour and mulls a presidential run, Colin Powell says he feels comfortable with the Republican Party on economics but worries about a "far right wing" too willing to play racial politics.

Powell's first book signing to promote "My American Journey" was taking place Saturday near his home in the Virginia suburbs of Washington, the first stop on a 23-city tour that runs through October. After that, Powell says he will huddle with family and friends and decide whether to enter the 1996 presidential race.

If he decides to run, and to run as a Republican, Powell says he will have to decide by late November because of the December filing deadline in New Hampshire. Should he choose the more difficult independent route, Powell says he could wait until early next year.

Powell began to detail his evolving political philosophy in his book, and has added more specifics in a blizzard of media interviews designed to promote the autobiography — and help him judge public interest in a candidacy.

In the book, Powell outlines views that make him an awkward fit in today's politics.

He believes in free enterprise and lower taxes and is put off by "patronizing liberals." Yet he supports abortion rights and gun control and was alarmed by a "troubling mix of politics and religion" at the 1992 Republican convention.

Powell puts himself in the "sensible center of the American political spectrum," declares allegiance to no political party and says he isn't interested in serving as vice president — but won't flatly rule that out.

Powell wrote that the "present tax burden on Americans is so high that it seriously risks dampening our entrepreneurial vitality."

And in a CBS interview broadcast Friday, he said he has reluctantly come to the view that a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced budget might be needed to force fiscal discipline on Congress.

He also said he believed virtually every Cabinet department should be reviewed to determine whether it is necessary, exempting only State, Defense and Treasury.

But for all his conservative economic views, Powell also notes that his mother benefited from being in a labor union and that he was helped by a New York program that waived college tuition for children of immigrants.

Tigers claw Loboes in home opener

By Brent Taylor
Sports Editor

In a game that started as sloppy as the playing field, the Snyder Tigers sailed to an impressive 32-6 non-district victory in their home opener against the Monahans Loboes.

Plagued by turnovers and miscues in the opening minutes, the Tigers turned things around and showed the hometown fans some offense — offense that was lacking in the season opener in Andrews.

Wet turf, caused by rain Thursday night and Friday, plagued the kicking game, especially on extra points. "Russell (Riggan) had a hard time keeping the ball on the tee," said Head Coach David Baugh after the game. "The field was soggy enough that when he put the ball down, one side of the tee sunk down and caused the ball to drop off the tee." As a result, Snyder's Matt Parker failed on three point-after tries.

Trouble started on the Tigers' first series, when on fourth and seven from the Tiger 28-yard line, Parker received a bad snap from deep snapper Eric Tovar and never got the punt off. Monahans took over on the Tiger 20-yard line, but a defensive stand by the Tigers kept the Loboes out of the end zone.

On fourth and goal from the five-yard line, the Tiger defense shut down Monahan's Callie Porras after a three-yard gain to take over the ball.

Three plays later, Snyder's Tywayne Rivers fumbled on the Tigers' one-yard line and Monahans took over. On the first play, the Loboes back-up quarterback, Zack Gandy, swept the right side of the line and walked into the end zone for the touchdown. The extra-point was blocked by Snyder's Wayne Braziel.

The Loboes had taken a 6-0 lead with 6:11 to play in the opening quarter.

The Tigers wasted little time and marched back down the field in an impressive nine-play drive for a TD. With 1:04 left in the opening stanza, Parker hit Marlowe Riggins over the middle for a 14-yard catch for paydirt. Parker's extra-point was good and Snyder took a 7-6 lead.

Snyder used almost five minutes off the clock during the 68-yard drive in which Tommy Morris picked up 30 yards on six carries. The 195-pound junior ended the night as the Tigers' leading rusher with 10 carries for 31 total yards.

The Tigers' came knocking again, but on third and five from the Loboes' 13-yard line, Kevin Lacik took the handoff and scampered 12 yards, only to fumble on the one-yard line. Cheno Navarrete pounced on the football for Monahans to kill the drive.

The Tigers' next scoring chance was set up when Riggins returned a Monahans punt 16 yards and then the Loboes were flagged with a 15-yard unsportsman-like-conduct penalty. The Tigers set up shop on the Loboes' 11-yard line with 5:44 remaining in the first half.

With the crowd chanting "go for it," on fourth and one from the one, Kevin Lacik got the call. The 150-pound fullback sneaked in for the touchdown with 3:35 left in the half. Parker's PAT was good and the Tigers enjoyed a 14-6 lead.

Most thought the half would end 14-6, but the Tigers had other ideas.

Snyder got the ball back with 1:18, 53 yards away from paydirt. Fifty-two second later, Parker split the defenders and hit Rivers on a 32-yard post pattern for the TD with 16 seconds remaining, giving the Tigers a commanding 20-6 advantage at intermission despite the missed extra point.

The late scoring drive was aided by a 17-yard run from Lacik and a 15-yard pass from Parker to Rivers.

After a scoreless third period, the Loboes turned the ball over with a fumble as the fourth quarter began. Snyder's Chris Fuentez came away with the ball on the Loboes' 26-yard line. Following two pass completions from Riggan to Riggins and one to Peppers, the Tigers were knocking at the door again. After three unsuccessful attempts from the one-yard line, Riggan called his own number and kept the ball for the TD. The extra point failed, but Snyder had a 26-6 margin with 8:25 remaining.

Four minutes later, the Tigers put the icing on the cake. Rivers picked off B.J. Kute and raced 67 yards for the final tally with 4:25 remaining. The extra point failed.

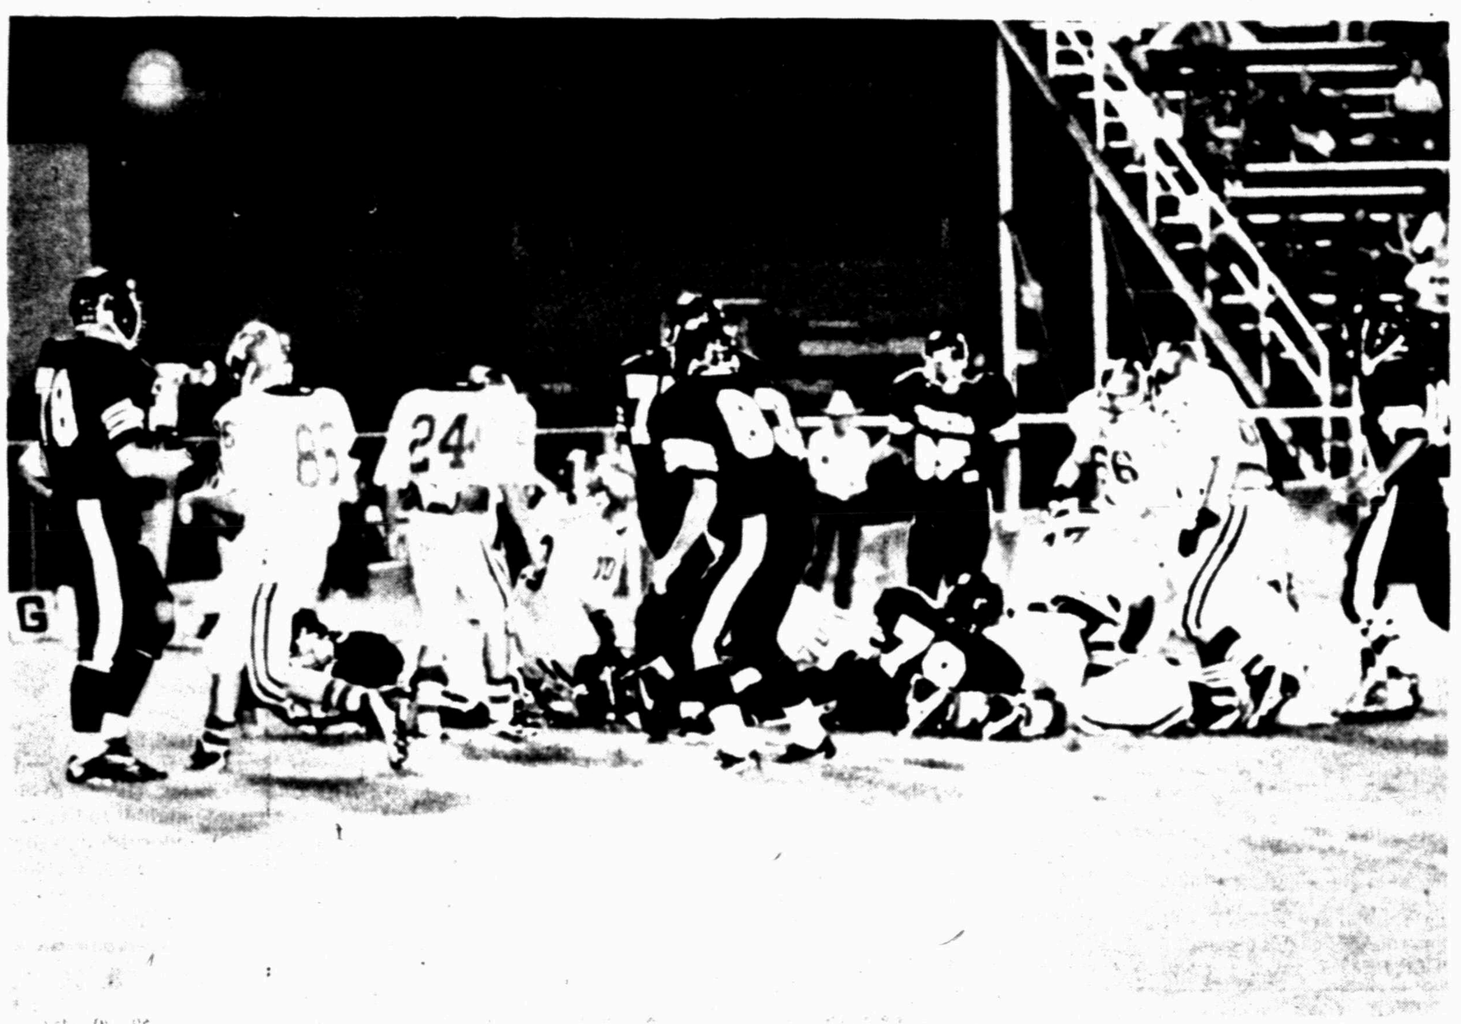
Snyder allowed Monahans to out rush them, 129 yards to 91, but the difference was in the passing where Snyder had 172 yards compared to 13 for the visitors.

Parker completed nine of 16 for 135 yards and Riggan was good on two of four attempts for 23 yards. In addition to Morris, Lacik ran for 29 yards on four carries.

Callie Porras was the leading ground gainer for Monahans with 69 yards on 15 carries. Adan Porras rushed nine times for 36 yards.

Trey Franco from Monahans, who laid on the field for four minutes following an injury with 4:59 to play in the game was treated and released from Cogdell Memorial Hospital following X-rays to rule out a neck injury.

Snyder will take to the road next week to revenge last year's upset by Abilene Wylie who Friday night posted an impressive 33-17 triumph over Graham.



TOUCHDOWN OR NOT?—The Snyder Tigers remained undefeated in a 32-6 victory over the Monahans Loboes Friday. The Tigers scored in every quarter but the third. Here, the Tigers try to break the goal line in the fourth quarter. Shown for the Tigers are Zeb Alexander (78), Teddy Murray (83), Donny Durst (79), Jeff Hobbs (85) and Russell Riggan (11). Lageman returns to face Jets

by The Associated Press

Whether Jeff Lageman changed teams this offseason or not, he would be playing on an 0-2 team Sunday.

The former New York Jets defensive lineman returns to Giants Stadium this weekend as a member of the expansion Jacksonville Jaguars.

"It's going to be exciting to play in that place again," said Lageman, who played with the Jets for six seasons before deciding to sign a three-year, $5.4 million contract with Jacksonville after spurning a similar offer from the Jets.

"But for me personally, I try to go at it the same every week no matter what. For me, it's just another game I've got to get ready to play. If I treated it differently, it would be unfair to everyone else in this locker room, including myself."

The Jaguars were expected to be winless at this point. The Jets are that way because of an overtime loss to Indianapolis last week when they blew a 24-3 lead.

Lageman played for three coaches in six years in New York, and Rich Kotite would have been No. 4 this season. He has brought in 22 new players as the rebuilding continues.

"I think my desire to return was somewhat lost because of all the changes going on there," he said. "It was a thing where the excitement was kind of lost because of all the changes.

"It's not like they were bringing in Ronnie Lott or Art Monk to fine tune. The only misgivings I really had about leaving were not so much because of the Jets organization, just some of the people within it."

In other NFL games Sunday, it's New England at San Francisco, Oakland at Kansas City, Dallas at Minnesota, San Diego at Philadelphia, Indianapolis at Buffalo, Cleveland at Houston, St. Louis at Carolina, Atlanta at New Orleans, Arizona at Detroit, the New York Giants at Green Bay, Cincinnati at Seattle, Washington at Denver and Chicago at Tampa Bay. The Monday night game has Pittsburgh at Miami.

The Raiders-Chiefs game is the latest edition of one of pro football's best rivalries and the first in a long time between Oakland and Kansas City.

"It's something special. It's not just media hype," Chiefs tackle Joe Phillips said. "You can sense it with coaches and players. Then you get out into the community, and you realize what a huge game this is for the whole city."

Both teams are unbeaten, and the matchup is bringing back memories of some old-fashioned football.

"You know it's going to be nasty and tough at all times," Chiefs defensive end Neil Smith said. "You can't just stand around the pile. You have to protect yourself at all times."

The Cardinals-Lions matchup is one of winless teams that failed to win games they should have. It is also Detroit's home opener.

"Urgency? We need a win, so this is a big game for us," Lions coach Wayne Fontes said.

The Cardinals will be without defensive tackle Eric Swann and middle linebacker Eric Hill.

"When you lose two guys of that caliber, you just don't go out on the street and replace them," coach Buddy Ryan said. "We've got backups who have to pick up the slack.

Late Southland rally nips Hermleigh, 26-20

The Hermleigh Cardinals were knocked off in a come-from-behind victory by Southland Friday night, 26-20.

"As a team, we did not play well at all," said a dejected David Rogers Saturday morning. "I hope this will be a wake-up call for our kid."

Southland scored the go ahead touchdown with 14 seconds left in the game when Jimmy Gatica ran from two yards out. The extra point failed.

Joey Sanchez got Hermleigh on the scoreboard with 9:44 left in the first quarter when he picked up a fumble and ran it back 35 yards.

With 6:12 left in the opening stanza, John McHaney recovered a fumble in the end zone for another touchdown. Sanchez' extra point was good and the Cardinals led 13-0.

Southland finally got on the scoreboard when James Ayala tossed an 8-yard pass to Victor Ayala, making it 14-7 in favor of Hermleigh.

Billy Joe Digby scored from three-yards out with 1:42 left in the third, but the extra point failed.

Billy Salone brought Southland to within seven points when he ran 36 yards for a TD. With 5:22 left in the game, Salone brought the hosts to within a point on a 23-yard run and the extra point knotted the score.

Southland carried the ball 54 times for 239 yards while Hermleigh carried the ball 28 times for 77 yards. Southland completed two of five passes for 16 yards and the Cardinals were one of five for 25 yards.

Hermleigh's record is now 1-1, and the Cardinals host Abilene Christian next Friday night.

Borden County blanks Grady

The Borden County Coyotes rolled up more than 300 yards total offense to shutout Grady, 42-0 Friday night in Gail.

Fernando Baeza, who ran for 134 yards, scored four touchdowns on runs of 31, one, five, and eight yards. Oscar Baeza got in the scoring mode with a 55-yard scamper and Grant Key scored the final touchdown on a two-yard plunge.

The Coyotes ended the game with 286 yards rushing and 51 via the air routes. Grady managed 123 yards rushing and 34 yards passing.

Borden County remains undefeated in two outings, and next Friday travels to challenge Southland.

After nine years in Littlefield, I'm back to a new position and a new town, at least it seems like a new town from the one I grew up and lived in for 24 years. Snyder has changed during my time away, but this is still a very nice town to live in and everyone here should be extremely proud to call Snyder home.

To some, Snyder has declined in the last decade, but not near as much as some towns in West Texas. If you take a hard look at this town and compare it to others, you will find what I say to be true.

Sports editor, a new position, but only in name. I grew up loving sports and started covering sports for KSNY while in high school. During my stay in Littlefield, I continued to cover sports along with my other duties as publisher of a semi-weekly newspaper.

Sports has played a big part in my life from early on when I was "born with a basketball in my hand," through playing in the state basketball tournament in 1980 for the Snyder Tigers. The coach of that team, George Byerly who is at Andrews now, did more to instill in me a work ethic to work hard for what you want and it might just happen.

I told Byerly last week in Andrews, "It's amazing how much more respect I have for you now then when you used to make us run all thoses lines after we had ran up and down the court all practice."

I'm glad to be back home and covering sports full-time for the Snyder Daily News.

If you have not seen this year's Lady Tiger volleyball team, you need to. I realize they have only played two home matches, but you will have plenty of chances coming up with district play. The next home match is Sept. 26 against Estacado.

Tuesday night during the match with Big Spring, the ladies played with as much enthusiasm and excitement as any team I have ever seen in any sport. They looked like they were having fun, and I think it shows in their record so far this year. I wanted to put my camera down and just watch.

It had been over 10 years since I had seen a volleyball match before moving back and I encourage everyone to go out and watch them. I guarantee you will have fun.

Jones likes the headlines

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Dallas and Nike. Dallas and Pepsi. Dallas and Deion. Dallas and the Super Bowl.

Dallas. Dallas. Dallas.

It seems like only the O.J. trial makes national headlines more often than Jerry Jones' rich and powerful Cowboys these days.

The audacious owner has become one of the most reviled men in the NFL for his maverick shoe and soda deals, stoking the ire of Cowboy haters everywhere. But if there are any Dallas detractors in the Minnesota Vikings' locker room, they have been quiet this week.

That's probably because the Vikings are the next team to take on the Cowboys, and they don't want to to make Sunday night's game any tougher than it already is.

"Nobody stops the Dallas Cowboys," said middle linebacker Jack Del Rio. "They stop themselves when they get bored. Let's hope they're a little bored this week."

Is Del Rio, himself a former Cowboy, on to something? After all, this has been a quiet week for Dallas.

The Cowboys beat the New York Giants and Denver Broncos by a combined 66-21 in the season's first two games while the Deion Sanders negotiations were swirling. With Sanders signed, the only thing to hold their attention this week has been preparation for a football game.

But the Cowboys say they are glad to have the peripheral issues settled — for now.

The Cowboys also were extremely good in their first two games. They are averaging 410 yards a game, including a league-best 197 on the ground, and they opened the season with a shutout (beating the Giants 35-0) for only the third time in their history.

P. Springs rallies to nip Ira Bulldogs

The Ira Bulldogs blew a 20-8 halftime lead Friday night against Patton Springs to bow, 21-20, in a heartbreaker.

Assistant Coach Joee Gainer said "It was a total team effort. We looked a lot better on offense and defense." The Bulldogs hurt themselves twice in two separate fourth quarter situations by jumping offsides and giving Patton Springs a first down.

Patton Springs scored with 1:50 left in the game to go ahead on Steve Taylor's one-point conversion. The touchdown came on a Jermey Porter to Taylor 35-yard pass.

Eddie Brasuel got Ira on the scoreboard in the first quarter ona 30-yard gallop. Heath Mathis kicked the extra point. Tyrel Sterling then scored from one-yard out to make it a 14-0 game. Brasuel than came back in the second quarter with a scamper 48 yards and a 21-0 Bulldog advantage.

All three of Patton Springs TDs came by the air. Mike Fulmer hit Porter for the first touchdown of 24 yards. Taylor then hit Porter on a three-yard toss for a second tally.

Ira's record falls to 0-2 while Patton Springs is 1-1. Ira will be at home Friday night to host Rule.

Astro-graph

By Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

Sunday, Sept. 17, 1995

In the year ahead, you should be able to build and expand upon foundations you've already laid. The growth you've been hoping for will have its genesis.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Avoid an acquaintance today who tends to be more of taker than a giver. This person may consider you part of a supply line and try to tap your purse again today. Virgo, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $2 and SASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, New York, NY 10163. Make sure to state your zodiac sign.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Keep your ambitions and aspirations to yourself today. If you appear too self-serving or pushy, it could turn supporters into adversaries.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Guard against inclinations to do things today that don't serve your best interests, such as putting yourself in a bind to gratify the whims of another.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you are presently indebted to a friend, take measures today to clear up the obligation before your pal brings it to your attention. Avoid embarrassment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Little of substance will be accomplished today if you get involved with individuals whose goals are not in sync with yours. Be a leader, not a leaner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Carefully select those to whom you delegate critical tasks today. Do not pick a person who would rather be boss than a willing worker.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) It is admirable to believe in others, but today, don't place your faith in a person who has let you down previously not only once, but twice.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you and your mate cannot find a middle ground today, there won't be much harmony in your household. Move things off of dead center by compromising.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Co-workers will be angered today if you fail to do what is expected of you. You mustn't dodge your duties and leave them with the dirty work.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Even though your financial picture might brighten a bit today, don't deplete your resources. Avoid all forms of extravagance and waste.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you treat people with arrogance and contempt today, it will create resentment that will prove difficult to bridge later. To be respected, show respect.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Try not to be too opinionated today. This could create serious complications if you have to deal with persons who aren't enthusiastically supportive of your views.

Your Birthday

Monday, Sept. 18, 1995

In the year ahead you could be rather fortunate in fulfilling two of your primary ambitions. Any frustrations you have to contend with will be products of your own impatience.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't be stingy in your dealings with friends today, but that doesn't mean you should let yourself be maneuvered into an arrangement where you have to pay an unfair amount. Major changes are ahead for Virgo in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $2 and SASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, New York, NY 10163. Make sure to state your zodiac sign.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Those laboring at your side will not be inspired today by an old-fashioned pep talk. Performance speaks louder than words, so set the right example.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) In order to advance your self- interests today, you might have to be a bit more assertive than usual. This can be done without being hostile or pushy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If the stakes aren't high today, you might be careless and ineffective. However, the same won't be true where truly serious issues are concerned.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Important decisions that affect you in personal ways should not be left up to others today. Let your associates know that the final judgment rests with you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you carefully analyze your basic expenditures today, you should be able to find ways to get greater mileage from the money you spend.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Persons with whom you associate today might feel a tad intimidated by your conduct. Avoid coming on too strong.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you ask for favors from associates today, they may be granted, but they will have strings attached. Try to handle things on your own instead.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Use your head instead of your checkbook today, especially if you get involved in a new endeavor that requires some seed money.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) The boss won't pay for conversation today, but will for performance. If you're anticipating rewards, stay in motion and keep your mouth shut.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Do not offer suggestions today if they are not explicitly requested, even if you think the wise words you have to offer will be problem solvers.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A curious acquaintance might try to poke his or her nose into a private matter today pertaining to you and a friend. Keep your replies guarded.

Suspect arrested in kidnappping; child still missing

CONROE (AP) — A 56-year-old man was charged Friday in the abduction of a 12-year-old boy, but the youth remained missing.

Hilton Crawford of Conroe was charged with aggravated kidnapping in the disappearance of Samuel McKay Everett, Lt. Ted Pearce of the Montgomery County sheriff's office said. Crawford was held at the Montgomery County Jail.

The boy was believed to have been abducted from his family's home north of Conroe earlier this week.

Crawford was confronted by authorities in the driveway of his home about 7 a.m. as he was leaving for work, Pearce said.

The FBI joined Montgomery County authorities in the hunt for the boy, who was gone when his parents returned home Tuesday about 11 p.m. after attending a function in Conroe.

FBI spokesman Rolando Moss said the parents had received a ransom demand but he refused to elaborate.

Authorities believe the boy may have been taken in a brown or gold Chrysler seen speeding through the family's neighborhood about 8:30 p.m. Tuesday.

English-only order rescinded

CANYON (AP) — A Panhandle woman is no longer required by a court order to ensure that her daughter learns to speak English after a judge rescinded his demand.

State District Judge Sam Kiser on Friday amended the demand that Marta Laureano speak English as well as Spanish to her 5-year-old daughter. At an earlier hearing, he had said the girl's ignorance of English was abusive and doomed her to life as a maid.

Bill Piatt, a law professor at Texas Tech who mediated the dispute, said Kiser vacated his Aug. 16 order Friday afternoon.

Kiser had made the ruling in a child-custody hearing Aug. 16. He later apologized for his comments.

"The order I signed stands, but my apology for a mischoice of words in trying to explain the reasoning behind it is sincere," Kiser said last week.

He ordered Ms. Laureano, a bilingual Mexican native, to speak English as well as Spanish to her kindergartener. Ms. Laureano says she was speaking Spanish so the girl could grow up bilingual.

"In Amarillo, the Hispanics can take comfort in that they can still speak in Spanish at home; they can feel safe now," said Mark Taboada, an attorney for Ms. Laureano.

Kiser had ruled on a motion filed by the woman's attorney to set aside his order. Lawyers had argued that the First Amendment guarantees freedom of speech.

"On the language matter, we've got the law on our side," said Ms. Laureano's other attorney, Ruben Sandoval of San Antonio.

In court-ordered mediation, the couple agreed that English proficiency would be in the best interest for the child, according to a spokeswoman in Kiser's office.

Language became an issue in the girl's custody case when Laureano's ex-husband, Timothy Garcia, said he was teaching their daughter the only English she knew. Garcia has said he thought the judge made a fair order.

He says the mother "is pretty happy" about the change.

Man sentenced for attacking doctor

HOUSTON (AP) — A 53-year-old Houston man has been sentenced to a year in prison for a 1994 attack on an abortion clinic doctor.

A federal jury on June 13 convicted Frank LaFayette Bird of Houston of forcefully intimidating and interfering with Dr. Theodore Herring.

Herring testified during the trial that Bird threw a glass bottle at the doctor's car as he drove into the parking lot at America's Women Clinic in Houston on Dec. 13, 1994. The windshield was shattered.

U.S. District Judge Sim Lake on Thursday sentenced Bird to a year of supervised release following the prison term. As a condition of the supervised release, Bird was ordered to stay 1,000 feet from all abortion clinics.

Bird also was ordered to pay $820 restitution for the damage to Herring's car. But because Bird did not have the ability to pay, so no fine was imposed.

New gag order for O.J. trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A new rule of professional conduct for trial participants, prompted by loose lips in the O.J. Simpson murder case, takes effect Oct. 1.

And the judge admonished attorneys Friday to read up on it.

The State Bar rule resulted from a bill signed last September by Gov. Pete Wilson. It is designed to keep trial lawyers from making inflammatory statements outside court.

Under rule 5-120, approved Thursday by the state Supreme Court, trial participants are prohibited from making "extrajudicial" media statements that they know to be prejudicial.

There are several exceptions to the rule, most of which allow bar members to publicly state the specific claims or charges involved in a civil or criminal proceeding, to announce hearing schedules, to say that an investigation is ongoing and to appeal for public assistance in obtaining evidence.

State Bar president Donald Fischbach said most members see the rule as a violation of their free speech rights.

Penalties for violating the rules range from reprimands and fines to disbarment, though Fischbach said the latter probably would not be imposed.

Actress hospitalized Friday

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor was hospitalized with an irregular heart rhythm, but her doctor said the actress should be able to go home in a few days.

Dr. Charles Freedman, an internist who has treated Taylor for several years, said Friday she was suffering from "a benign arrhythmia," that developed the day before.

"There is no need for an electrical pacemaker. She should be treated with some medications and be released ... I'd say in two or three days. I expect no complications," Freedman said.

Freedman, said the actress was taken to St. John's Hospital on Thursday. Hospital officials refused to give her condition late Friday.

Taylor, 63, underwent her second hip replacement operation in June and walks with a cane. She suffered serious respiratory problems in 1990 that kept her hospitalized for three months.

She announced last month that she and husband No. 7, construction worker Larry Fortensky, 43, had agreed to a trial separation four years after they married at Michael Jackson's Neverland Ranch.

Taylor won Oscars for her performances in "Butterfield 8" and "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?"

Four companions to testify

DETROIT (AP) — Four people will be called to testify for the prosecution in the trial of a companion charged with beating a woman until she escaped by jumping to her death from a bridge.

The four, who were with Martell Welch Jr. at the time of the beating, will not be prosecuted. Welch, 19, is charged with murder for the beating of Deletha Word, 33, before dawn on Aug. 19.

Two of his companions tried to restrain Welch, and the most any of them did was vandalize Word's car, Wayne County Prosecutor John O'Hair said Thursday.

Welch stood silent at his arraignment Friday, and Judge Jeffrey Collins entered an innocent plea for him. Trial was set for March 4.

He could be convicted of first-or-second-degree murder. The former carries an automatic sentence of life imprisonment without parole, the latter up to a life sentence.

Witnesses said Welch got mad after a fender-bender with Word, dragged her from her car, beat her and threatened her with a tire iron. They said she jumped into the Detroit River as he approached her with the iron.

Word's death attracted nationwide attention, in part because of reports that some of the approximately 40 onlookers cheered. Police and prosecutors later played down those accounts, saying most witnesses were shocked.

Buttafuoco goes back to jail

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — Joey Buttafuoco is back behind bars, a prisoner of lust.

The Long Island Lothario was sent back to jail Friday for at least 67 days for violating probation by propositioning a Los Angeles vice cop posing as a hooker.

Gone were the swagger and the snakeskin boots of the auto-body repairman who became a celebrity after his 16-year-old lover, Amy Fisher, shot his wife in the head in 1992.

"Some people consider you a celebrity. I don't," Judge Jack Mackston told Buttafuoco.

"I'm very, very sorry," Buttafuoco said in an uncharacteristically soft voice. "I'm begging you, don't send me back to jail. I will never be before you again, I promise you."

Mackston imposed a 10-month sentence. With time already served and time off for good behavior, Buttafuoco could be out Nov. 21. He was led away in handcuffs.

Two years ago, Buttafuoco, 39, drew four months in jail and five years' probation for having sex with an underage Fisher, explaining at the time: "Sometimes lust takes me over. It's very painful."

Then, on May 24, he was arrested in Hollywood and accused of soliciting sex from a policewoman. Buttafuoco, who was in Los Angeles to discuss a TV pilot, pleaded no contest and was ordered to pay $1,715 and take an AIDS class.

Buttafuoco's lawyer, Dominic Barbara, told Mackston on Friday that his client was overcome by the publicity surrounding the Amy Fisher case.

"He is no longer the swaggering celebrity he thought he was," Barbara said. "He doesn't think he is a star anymore. He just wants to go home with his wife and kids."

Prosecutor Fred Klein asked the judge not to cut Buttafuoco any more slack.

"He voluntarily committed another crime while on probation," Klein said. "He really spit in your face."

Fisher is serving a five-to-15-year sentence for wounding Mary Jo Buttafuoco.

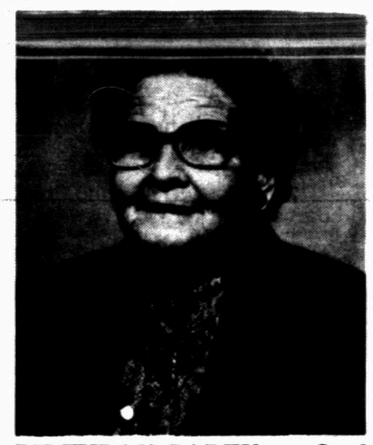
Border town fraud rate 'lower than expected,' investigation discovers

PHOENIX (AP) — State and federal investigators say welfare fraud in the border town of San Luis — dubbed the "fraud capital of the Southwest" following reports of thousands of Mexican citizens renting post office boxes there — has less fraud than the state as a whole.

"We found a level of fraud that we can deal with administratively," said U.S. Attorney Janet Napolitano as she released the results of joint state and federal investigation Friday. "It was at a level much less than published reports had led us to believe."

The investigation was launched following reports that more than 8,000 post offices boxes are rented in the town of about 4,000, many of them by residents of nearby San Luis, Mexico.

Of 405 cases investigated, 149 involved people receiving benefits from the state Department of Economic Security. Of those, only nine were found to be fraudulent and "a handful" are still being investigated, according to a statement released jointly by Napolitano and DES Director Linda Blessing.



BIRTHDAY PARTY — Opal Taylor of Snyder will be honored on her 90th birthday on Sept. 19. Cards are difficult for her to read now, so she would appreciate the presence of friends and family to celebrate with her at Rudy's Restaurant from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. Tuesday. (Contributed Photo)

One person was arrested at 4:43 a.m. Saturday on outstanding city warrants. Officers arrested a 21-year-old male from the 2200 block of 40th Street on two warrants each for speeding and two for failure to appear, one for failure to wear a seat belt and another for issuance of a bad check.

In other activity, a report for burglary of a vehicle was submitted at 7:19 a.m. Friday in reference to property taken from a car on County Road 221.

A report for criminal mischief was filed at 11:03 a.m. Friday in reference to someone spray painting a house in the 200 block of 23rd Street.

An offense report for criminal mischief was submitted at 2:30 Saturday morning in reference to someone breaking a window out of a vehicle in the 1500 block of Avenue M.

Officers and deputies also assisted six motorists who had locked their keys in their cars and responded to four reports of cows being on the highway near Dermott. At 5:45 a.m. Saturday, deputies were advised that a cow had been struck by a vehicle in that area.

Pacemaker wire recalled; patients told not to panic

WASHINGTON (AP) — Telectronics Pacing Systems has recalled a second type of pacemaker wire because it broke inside the chests of five people.

Telectronics notified about 6,000 U.S. and foreign doctors Friday not to implant in heart patients the Encor "J"-shaped lead, models 330-854 and 033-856.

But the company and the Food and Drug Administration emphasized that the 20,000 patients, including 9,000 Americans, who already have the pacemaker wire should not panic.

The J-shaped hooks are used to put in place the electrical coil that sends shocks to a pacemaker to keep a diseased heart beating regularly. Once the pacemaker is implanted, this hook is no longer important to the device's functioning.

In addition, it doesn't appear to break frequently or easily, and patients should not undergo risky heart surgery to remove it, the company and the FDA said.

"We don't want any overreaction out there," said FDA cardiovascular chief Thomas Callahan.

Telectronics, of Englewood, Colo., made headlines in January when it recalled another J wire, the apparently more risky Accufix. It may have broken inside 8,500 people worldwide, killing four and seriously injuring 30.

Despite an intense investigation, both internally and by the FDA, doctors found just five reports that the Encor lead has broken. Those patients all recovered.

Three of the fractures apparently were caused when surgeons accidentally bent the wire while implanting it, Telectronics spokesman Larry Wettlaufer said. A fourth broke during pacemaker surgery. The fifth break still is being investigated.

There is a critical difference between the two wires. The Accufix is encased in a thin plastic coating, through which it can pop and puncture the heart wall. The Encor, however, is inside the actual metal pacemaker coil, making it more difficult to cut something if it breaks.

"We are very concerned that the actions discussed in this letter will be confused with the Accufix situation, possibly resulting in extraction of safe leads," Telectronics Vice President Sue Sutton-Jones wrote physicians. "Extraction of ... (Encor leads) is not recommended for any patients at this time."

The FDA agreed. "There's not a signal certainly, as in the other models, to go out and have them immediately withdrawn. We're nowhere near that," Callahan agreed.

Salvi's lawyer plans to claim insanity

DEDHAM, Mass. (AP) — A man accused of killing two women in attacks on a pair of abortion clinics last year will use an insanity defense, according to papers filed Friday by his lawyer.

John C. Salvi III pleaded innocent to charges of murder but has refused to discuss the case with his lawyers. He has repeatedly said he is competent and wants the death penalty if he is convicted.

"We expect to present significant evidence that John Salvi has had a long-standing serious mental illness," Salvi's lawyer, J.W. Carney Jr. said after notifying the court of the defense's plans. He refused to say whether Salvi had approved the strategy.

Judge Barbara Dortch-Okara ruled in August that Salvi was competent to stand trial for the Dec. 30 killings. Carney had argued his client should be ruled unfit.

Prosecutors say that while Salvi may exhibit some symptoms of mental illness, he clearly was able to plot the attacks months in advance and execute his plan.

Salvi, 24, of Hampton, N.H., faces two counts of first-degree murder in the deaths of Shannon Lowney and Lee Ann Nichols at clinics in a suburb of Boston. Five more people were injured.

If convicted, he would face a mandatory sentence of life in prison without parole.

Salvi was arrested the following day in Norfolk, Va., after allegedly shooting at another clinic. No one was injured in that shooting.

FBI expert casts doubt on 2-killer theory

LOS ANGELES (AP) — O.J. Simpson's weary jurors heard an FBI expert deliver a shattering blow to the two-killer theory, saying a renowned defense expert saw a possible second set of shoeprints where there were none.

Obviously wounded by the testimony, defense forensic sleuth Henry Lee said that despite requests he return for the next phase of the trial, he's had enough. "Once a trial becomes a game, I'm not going to participate."

FBI footwear expert William Bodziak told jurors Friday that Lee mistook old tool marks and ridges in the concrete walkway outside Nicole Brown Simpson's condominium for fresh shoe prints.

Bodziak also said Lee belatedly photographed other imprints that weren't present shortly after the June 12, 1994, murders of Ms. Simpson and Ronald Goldman.

Prosecutor Marcia Clark suggested they could have come from the shoes of gawkers who flooded the scene after police left.

Clark has said she will rest her rebuttal case "conditionally" when Bodziak leaves the stand, which could be Monday. Because the defense has yet to rest its case, Clark said she wanted to keep open the option of presenting rebuttal to any additional witnesses they may produce.

The defense says it plans to call FBI agent Frederic Whitehurst, who has stirred up controversy by criticizing the bureau's scientific procedures and the work of one agent who testified in the Simpson case.

And in a preview of more legal wrangling expected next week, the Los Angeles Times reported today that prosecutors have turned over to the defense discovery materials related to the conduct of police Detective Philip Vannatter. In a statement, prosecutors said only that the materials related to "previously litigated search and seizure issues."

On Friday, prosecutors spent the day picking apart Lee's seemingly invulnerable testimony.

Bodziak criticized Lee's expertise when it comes to shoes and said he found Lee's testimony confusing — accusations that drew a heated response from defense attorney Barry Scheck on cross-examination.

"Are you telling us Dr. Lee is not sufficiently trained in footwear and impressions?" Scheck asked.

Electronic firms settle CD differences

NEW YORK (AP) — The electronics industry Friday agreed to a common design for the next generation of compact discs, eliminating the risk that consumers might buy a product that becomes obsolete the way Betamax videocassette recorders did in the 1980s.

The new CD will be the same size as the one now commonly used in stereos and personal computers. But it will hold about eight times more data, meaning a full-length movie or all nine Beethoven symphonies could fit on one disc.

The agreement marks one of the few times that a standard has been set for an electronics product before it even reached customers. The same thing happened with the original compact disc in the 1980s, allowing CDs to surpass vinyl records quickly as the preferred format for recorded music.

"When you put standardization together with a great product, the consumer embraced it," said Warren Lieberfarb, president of Warner Home Video Inc., one of many companies that plans to have movies on the new CDs by the 1996 holiday season. "I think we're on the same pathway here."

Moreover, the new CDs may further reduce the differences between machines that play them. It is already common, for instance, to play music CDs on personal computers, and many believe the same thing will happen with movie CDs.

Billions of dollars in future royalties were at stake in the debate over the new CD disc design.

Since last December, electronics companies have been lining up behind the competing designs of Toshiba Corp. and Sony Corp., which together created the original CD with Philips Electronics NV.

Toshiba's key backers were Time Warner Inc. and Matsushita Electric Industrial Co., the world's largest electronics company. It also won support from many Hollywood studios. Sony's chief backer was Philips.

Companies wanted to avoid a format war of the kind that divided the videotape market 15 years ago. At that time, Sony promoted a format called Beta and Matsushita touted VHS. VHS eventually became the standard for consumers. As more and more movies were made for VHS, owners of Betamax products were left behind.

Consumers will have to buy new equipment to play the new CDs. But the new equipment will be able to run the old discs as well.

The main difference in the two competing designs was that Toshiba favored putting data on both sides of the CD, while Sony wanted to use just one side, the way existing CDs do.

In a compromise, the companies will use Toshiba's idea for obtaining more data space by bonding two ultra-thin discs together, but they will rely on Sony's idea of principally reading data from one side.

WTC swimming pool to reopen on Monday

The Western Texas College swimming pool will reopen Monday for operations as usual after being unexpectedly shut down since the opening of the fall term.

The pool had to be closed after an unexplained leak causing a loss of 6,000 gallons of water a day was discovered in late August.

At the time, officials feared piping beneath the pool might be damaged, a possibility that would have prompted major renovation and closing of the facility for perhaps a full semester.

This past week, it was discovered that the pool's hydrastatic valves had locked open, causing the leak.

Mike Harrison, college PE instructor and faculty member in charge of pool activities, said hydrastatic valves are installed to insure water buildup beneath a pool's outer shell does not reach sufficient levels to damage the structure.

The valves were replaced by campus maintenance staff.

The pool will officially open at 6:30 Monday morning for lap swimming. A second lap swimming time is scheduled each weekday from noon until 1 p.m.

Harrison's two swimming-related PE classes have been involved in other activities while the pool has been closed.

Other activities at the pool include a Senior Center exercise class which meets Tuesday-Thursday and an open swim for Humble-Smith students each Monday and Wednesday.

In addition, Harrison's swimming team, the Tiger Sharks, practices Monday through Thursday in the afternoons.

The pool is open to the general public Monday through Thursday from 7-9 p.m. A $2 admission fee is charged. WTC students are admitted free with identification.

WTC offers $50 memberships per semester for unlimited use of the pool and the gymnasium weight room.

Marilyn: 115-mph storm roars through Caribbean

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Hurricane Marilyn tore through Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands Saturday, ripping roofs from homes, toppling a radio tower and sending thousands of people scrambling for shelter from its rain, lightning and 115-mph winds.

The fourth hurricane to hit the Caribbean in as many weeks, Marilyn struck just as islanders were repairing damage wrought by Hurricane Luis with its 140-mph winds last week.

After hitting St. Croix on Friday, Marilyn grew in strength and size and swept over St. Thomas, St. John and Puerto Rico.

Water rates on the rise, everywhere development. Often, say city and economic leaders, the availability of water is what will prompt a company to choose one location over another.

For instance, Amarillo is agressively pursuing industry. Of some 25 cities contacted, Amarillo's base water rate was the lowest of all at $5.10. Its base rate plus 5,000 gallons of water is $8.16

Big Spring, which obtains its water from the Colorado River Municipal Water District as Snyder does, has a base rate of $11.50. A citizen who uses 5,000 gallons in Big Spring will get a $23.90 water bill.

Midland is another city that obtains water from the CRMWD and its base rate is also higher than Snyder's — $10.75. If one uses 5,000 gallons in Midland, the bill will be $17.20.

Neighboring Colorado City has a base rate of $8.50 while Seminole's is a half-dollar less.

Sweetwater's base rate is one of the lowest in the area at $6.05 with 5,000 gallons of water costing the consumer $9.53, including the base.

Post has a base rate of $6.50 which is the price of 3,000 gallons of water. Each additional gallon of water in Post costs $1.50.

Like Snyder, Weatherford is also in the planning stages for a new water treatment plant.

Weatherford's base rate is currently $5.86 and city officials there are anticipating a rate increase to pay for a new facility. They also are facing mandates from the TNRCC.

A city official in Weatherford said if a community is not currently raising its rates, "then they already have, or they have not been forced to do so by the TNRCC — yet."

A citizen's bill in Snyder for 5,000 gallons is slightly above the average of the cities surveyed — $15.38 as compared to the average of $14.27.

But it is considerly cheaper than what folks in Lamesa pay for their water. The cost for 5,000 gallons in the county seat of Dawson County is $16.04.

Many communities surveyed indicated they had delayed increasing their water bills and most said that had been a mistake.

"I think what the City of Snyder is doing is the best way," said a Plainview official when told the rates would increase eight percent yearly.

"The next time we raise our rates it will be a lot more than eight percent — and our people will scream," said the official.

2 SHS drama students focus on theatre in UT workshop

Wimps need not apply.

Behind the glitz, glamour and bright lights, theatre is a lot of hard work and long hours. It's not for everyone. But for some, it can be very rewarding.

No one knows that better than two of Jerry Worsham's drama students, who interrupted their summer vacation to attend an intense, five-week theatre "boot camp" in Austin.

During the Summer Theatre Workshop, sponsored by the University of Texas Theatre/ Dance Department from June 10-July 16, Stephen Taylor and Katie Thornton immersed themselves in every aspect of theatre.

During that brief period, they, along with 52 other students from across the state, focused solely on theatre, blocking everything else from their minds. The total isolation they experienced was the "best kind of isolation," according to Katie.

"It was the best five weeks because we did exactly what we wanted to do," she added.

It was an experience neither will forget, and both will no doubt benefit from for years to come.

For five weeks, the theatre-focused students came together

The experience filled them with enthusiasm and deepened their committment to theatre. Both are senior drama students at Snyder High School. TRIENNIUM PARTICIPANTS — Jamie Burleson and Ryan Landes attended the Presbyterian Youth Triennium this past summer. The every-three-years event was attended by nearly 6,000 Presbyterian youth. Participants took part in a variety of activities and worship services. Jamie and Ryan were two of 26 youth in Texas selected to attend. (SDN Staff Photo)

Two First Presbyterian youth share church camp memories

Scurry County Folks

by Shirley A. Gorman

Two members of the First Presbyterian Church attended the Presbyterian Youth Triennium this past June at West Lafayette, Ind. Both thought it was incredible. One said it was life-changing.

Jamie Burleson and Ryan Landes were two of only 26 Presbyterian youth in Texas selected to attend. Jamie is the daughter of Dr. James and Luann Burleson. Ryan's parents are Gary and Kathy Landes.

Jamie's five days worshipping with nearly 6,000 other Presbyterian youth has caused her to "look at life differently now." That's why she calls her camp experience "life-changing."

Ryan said the "high energy" present at the Triennium's worship services was incredible, and he really enjoyed the "array of lighting effects" which accompanied each; but, as much as he enjoyed his five days at camp, he does not think it has changed his life.

Both agreed though that thousands of youth "sharing a commom bond" helped "to strengthen our faith."

Both would like to return in three years for the next Triennium. Ryan would like to be a member of the design team that coordinates the event. Members must be at least 18 years old to be eligible.

Jamie agreed it "would be fun"

The bridesmaids entered to Purcell's "Trumpet Tune in C" and "Trumpet Voluntary." The bride entered to the traditional wedding march. After the blessing of the marriage, the "Lord's Prayer" was sung.

Special guests in attendance included the bride's grandfather, Frank Cogdell of Conroe and the groom's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth R. Smith of Snyder.

A dinner and dance, hosted by the bride's parents, followed the ceremony at the April Sound Country Club on Lake Conroe.

The wedding rehearsal dinner, hosted by the groom's parents, was held at the April Sound Country Club.

The old, old story

I know you don't want to hear — or believe — this, but bridge is basically an easy game. As long as you and your partner know your bidding system, you will reach the right contract most of the time. And if you count high-card points and suit distributions, you will usually find the winning plays. It is just a matter of application.

To exhibit counting, here is a deal from Hugh Kelsey's excellent book "How to Improve Your Bridge."

South reached the ideal contract of six hearts. North, with his working spade honors, judged well to jump to five hearts.

After winning the first trick with the diamond king, East switched to a trump. Declarer drew trumps, led a spade to dummy's queen, cashed the spade king and played a spade to his ace, which he said afterwards was the percentage play. When the jack didn't drop, South conceded one down.

There was no need to guess spades; it just required a little detective work. After winning trick two in the dummy, South should ruff a diamond in his hand. A trump to dummy's jack is followed by another diamond ruff. This squeezes East into discarding a club. But suppose South, oblivious to its significance, draws the last trump, discarding a club from the dummy. South cashes his two top clubs, plays a spade to dummy's queen and ruffs a club in hand.

Now the East hand has counted out. He is known to have started with three hearts, two diamonds, four clubs and, therefore, four spades. The spade finesse against the jack has become a certainty.

'Star Trek' originals win big

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Star Trek" and its spinoffs have gone where no shows have gone before.

Now four of the original voyagers will get a bigger cut of the profits in a settlement of a dispute over the shows' merchandise sales. James Doohan (Scottie), Walter Koenig (Chekov), Nichelle Nicols (Uhura), and George Takei (Sulu) will divide $1 million.

They had argued that merchandise from the four "Star Trek" TV shows and several movies has generated nearly $2 billion in sales, yet they had collectively received only $85,000.

Under their settlement with Paramount Studios, the money resolves the actors' past claims and also requires them to make future promotional appearances, the Los Angeles Times reported Thursday.

The other original "Star Trek" stars, William Shatner and Leonard Nimoy, reportedly had long ago sought and received compensation from the studio.

Ask Anne & Nan

By Anne B. Adams and Nancy Nash-Cummings

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: After preparing prime rib for a large group of people, we found that we had a great deal of wonderful beef broth that was much too good to throw out. We decided to make gravy and can it, which we did by pressure method. It did not keep. We did the same thing with homemade chicken and noodles and they also spoiled. We thought maybe you could give us some idea of what we are doing wrong. — LEE CONOR, Waterloo, Iowa

DEAR LEE: We suspect the reason why your food spoiled is that you didn't process it long enough. According to our favorite home economist at the Sullivan County (New Hampshire) Extension Service, beef gravy in pints must be processed in a pressure canner, not a water bath, for 20 minutes at 11 pounds of pressure if you live at an elevation under 2,000 feet. If you're processing quarts it requires 25 minutes at 11 pounds of pressure.

Chicken really takes an age. Once again it requires a pressure canner and if you live at an elevation of less than 2,000 feet, a pint requires 75 minutes at 11 pounds of pressure and a quart at 90 minutes with 11 pounds of pressure.

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: Can you please tell me where one can purchase cathedral wind chimes? And what would they cost? — JIMMIE C. NEWSOME, Dutton, Ala.

DEAR JIMMIE: We pored over our thousands of catalogs and found wind chimes shaped like bunnies, horses and wolves. We found humming bird wind chimes, but your request stumped us. Then one sunny afternoon Nan strolled by The Flower Shop in downtown Windsor, Vt., and heard the most beautiful wind chimes — they were positively majestic.

Imagine her delight when she discovered they were Cathedral Wind Chimes. They are made by Woodstock Percussions in Woodstock, N.Y. The pipes are 4 feet long, hence the deep rich tones. They are available from The Flower Shop, 67 Main Street, Windsor, VT 05089 (802-6742270) for $80, plus $10 for shipping and handling.

STUMPED: STURDY 8-OUNCE IRONSTONE COFFEE MUGS — Charles Halasz of Dunbar, Pa., is looking for a source for these. We remember them from our diner days. Any ideas, dear Readers?

STUMPED: GUMBO ZERBE — Irwin J. Dupuy of Baton Rouge, La., is looking for a recipe for this dish that his father used to make. The only thing he remembers is it included three vegetables. We're stumped and so is Irwin.

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: When we were children, our parents bought an Edison victrola with a diamond needle which still does an excellent job with the "Edison" records. They also bought an extra "arm," which used disposable needles to play the thin "Victor" records. Problem: The disposable needles are no longer available in our community of Oakland, Md. We would appreciate it very much if you could find a source of these needles for us. — MAY KATHRYN SPEICHER, Oakland, Md.

DEAR MAY: We found the disposable needles you're looking for at Waves, a store in New York City, which specializes in vintage mechanical and electrical items.

A pack of 100 disposable steel needles sells for $4.50, plus $1.50 for shipping and handling. Send your check or money order to: Waves, 32 East 13th St., New York, NY 10003.

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: I am trying to locate a catalog of memorabilia of World War II. I understand that there are people and organizations that are interested in this and I would like to make contact. — J.C., Baton Rouge, La.

DEAR J.C.: We don't know if you want to buy or sell World War II memorabilia, but there are many collectors and dealers who specialize in it.

We have an auction catalog of historical militaria from the Roger S. Steffen Historical Militaria. If you are looking to sell, there is a free consignment kit. If you are looking to buy, there is information on bidding. For information, write: Roger S. Steffen Historical Militaria, P.O. Box 280, Newport, KY 41072.

Passports

Passports originally were official letters. The first U.S. passports were folded, single-page letters issued in 1918. U.S. passports first assumed booklet form in 1926, and beginning in 1941 were issued in flexible green covers. Blue plastic covers are now in use.

Frankfurt honors the Ardorno Prize

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — For filmmaker Jean-Luc Godard, being avant-garde is paying off.

This city announced Thursday it will honor the 64-year-old director of "My Life to Live" and "Every Man for Himself" with its $35,000 Adorno Prize for a lifetime of artistic achievement.

Godard is "one of the great aesthetic avant-gardists of the 20th century," said the award announcement. "His bravery and readiness to experiment, bringing him into constantly changing artistic terrain, has given film undreamed-of potential for expression and life."

Frankfurt has awarded the Adorno Prize every three years since 1977 to renowned artists and philosophers. Past winners include philosopher Juergen Habermas and conductor and composer Pierre Boulez.

From her woodland studio in Holland, artist Marjolein Bastin brings to life her passion for all living things by giving form and color to the many everyday nature scenes that so often go unnoticed. She is widely recognized for her sensitive, detailed artwork, but what is most satisfying for Marjolein is sharing her world with all people in the hope of touching others as nature has touched her.

Smith, Easley marry in Hermleigh

Andrea Eleanor Smith and Evan Lee Easley, both of Lubbock, were united in marriage in the Hermleigh United Methodist Church at 7 p.m. on Aug. 5 with the Rev. Jim Reinbolt, pastor of the church, officiating.

Parents of the bride are Richard and Phyllis Smith of Hermleigh and the bridegroom's parents are Ken and JoAnn Easley of Lubbock.

Double-ring vows were pledged before an altar decorated with a swag of spring-colored flowers hung outside the church over the front door, made by the former pastor of the church, Bunny Cox. White tulle was draped over the handrails outside the church. Three candelabras entwined with English ivy adorned the choir loft. An arrangement of pale peach gladiolus, casablanca lilies, pink tulips, osiana roses and greenery were flanked by two ivory candles. A three-tiered candelabrum was directly behind the altar. Scallops of English ivy hung from the altar rail, backing the table holding the unity candle.

Ivory candles in hurricane lamps and fresh flowers marked the pews.

The musical program included Kay Hopper singing "In This Very Room" and "Only God Could Love You More." Christy Smith, sister-in-law of the bride, sang "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attired in a gown of ivory douppioni silk with a sweetheart neckline. The bodice was covered with beaded lace and the puffed sleeves were accented with beaded applique and douppioni silk roses across the shoulders. The hemline of the floor-length, full skirt was trimmed in beaded lace, as was the chapel-length train. The train was attached to the dress with roses, matching those on the shoulders of the dress, with a half-bow.

Her ivory tulle, finger-tip length veil attached a headpiece of sequins and pearls matching the bodice of the bridal gown.

In keeping with tradition, the bride wore for something old her paternal grandmother's pearl necklace; something new was her gown and veil; something borrowed was an antique handkerchief belonging to the maid of honor's grandmother; and something blue was her lace garter.

Maid of honor was Valarie Dykes of Dallas, her college roommate. Bridesmaids were Heather Korpal of El Paso, a college friend, and Kristen Riese of Austin, roommate.

Attendants wore floor-length douppioni silk, two-piece cameo coral suits that were accented with silk roses. They carried bouquets of fresh mixed flowers in white, pale yellow and coral, and lavender.

Flower girls were Cody Wood, Heather Wood and Alexis Wood, all nieces of the groom from Lubbock.

Ring bearer was Corbin Smith, nephew of the bride. He carried a small ivory pillow, made by the bride's maternal grandmother, of douppioni silk, accented by a matching stemmed silk rose, which the wedding rings were tied to. A lace, crocheted by the bride's grandmother, trimmed the edges.

Best man was Cord Crenshaw of Lubbock; groomsmen were Mike Gibson of Lubbock and Ben Smith of Snyder, brother of the bride; ushers were Mark Wood, brother-in-law of the groom from Lubbock, and Rodney Foster of Abilene.

The groom wore a Christian Dior black tuxedo with tails, an ivory vest, bow tie and shirt. Attendants wore matching tuxedos with black vests and bow ties, with ivory shirts.

Traci Wood of Lubbock, sister of the groom, registered guests. Cody Wood, groom's niece from Lubbock, and Corbin Smith, the bride's nephew, welcomed guests as they presented them with wedding programs.

A reception honoring the new Mr. and Mrs. Easley was held on the church lawn. The bride's and groom's tables were placed under a white reception tent. The bride's table, covered with an ivory lace cloth, held a silver punch bowl set was centered with the bride's mother's wedding bells cake top and the bride's bouquet. The wedding cake was a floating three-tiered confection covered with Austrian lace. Each layer was topped with an osiana rose and greenery, accented with a cascade of greenery and roses.

The groom's table was covered with an ivory lace cloth and held a silver coffee service. Centering the table was an arrangement of fresh flowers, matching the bridesmaids' bouquets. The groom's double-layered chocolate cake was covered with Austrian lace like the bride's cake and had a cascade of chocolate-dipped fresh strawberries, ending in a silver platter holding strawberries.

Another table, covered in ivory lace, held finger foods and an arrangement of fruits and flowers. Accompanying dips were served in hollow purple cabbage and silver bowls.

Serving the bride's table were Caasi Smith, cousin of the bride from Lubbock, and Hayley Smith of Colorado City, cousin of the bride; serving the groom's table were Beverly Poehls of Hermleigh and April Romero.

MR. AND MRS. EVAN LEE EASLEY
(Photo by Wadleigh Studio)

Following the couple's honeymoon to Cancun, Mexico, they have made their home in Lubbock.

The bride is a 1991 graduate of Hermleigh High School and a 1994 graduate of Angelo State University's registered nurse program. She is employed by St. Mary of the Plains Hospital as a nurse.

The groom, a 1989 graduate of Monterey High School in Lubbock and a 1994 graduate of South Plains College and is employed as a licensed vocational nurse at St. Mary's Hospital.

Bridal courtesies include a miscellaneous shower in Hermleigh, a lingerie shower in Lubbock and a bridal luncheon in the home of Nelda Church.

Homework: can be dealt with wisely

By The Associated Press

Homework happens.

It's assigned because it reinforces what's learned in school and establishes study habits, educators say. But it's also a source of frustration and dispute for students, parents and teachers.

Parents can teach by example, says Florence Eddins, a child psychiatrist at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston. "Sit nearby with some work of your own. This way you give your child an idea of how to do homework."

Potential family conflicts over establishing workable homework routines can be avoided by making ground rules at the start and sticking to them, says Joan Hinshaw, school program coordinator at Egleston Children's Hospital at Emory University in Atlanta.

Hinshaw recommends setting the amount of time (most teachers will tell parents what's expected), helping the child create a calendar for incremental work on special projects, and asking to see the homework every day, including grading and comments from the teacher.

She also says that parents should decide how much they should become involved in homework assignments with their child. It's important to establish availability, monitor progress and look at the completed assignments.

Parents may be tempted to do the work themselves, but Hinshaw points out that will defeat one purpose of the work — to teach children to study independently. She says parents shouldn't erase or discard the child's work, and if the work has obviously been done sloppily, ask the child to try again.

"By picking up a pencil and correcting spelling errors or tossing an assignment and re-doing it with your child, you are sending the message that your child's work is not good enough."

Don't be too negative, or your child may become frustrated, she adds.

Baylor's Eddins says that parents must remember that what works for the adults won't necessarily work for the child. "A child's attention span is much shorter. You may need uninterrupted quiet to get work done, but your child may need short breaks."

Eddins stresses flexibility. Some children may work well with television or music in the background or need a play period before settling down to work. But if the parents find the distractions are becoming detrimental, they should discuss it with the child and try homework without the music for a week to see how it goes.

"If your child has trouble establishing a good routine, help them set time limits for completion," Eddins says. "Gradually you and your child will find what works best."

Parents should acknowledge both successes and failures when the grades come in, Eddins says. "The best reward is that parents take notice and admire their child's efforts in school."

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Proving rock 'n' roll never dies, Queen is putting the finishing touches on a new album featuring vocal tracks from lead singer Freddie Mercury — who died four years ago.

Canning produce continues throughout fall

By Marialisa Calta

In case you missed it, August was National Canning & Pickling Month. But don't despair, there's still lots of late summer produce — cucumbers, fall fruit and late-ripening tomatoes — to keep you busy for weeks.

For years, I was terrified of canning, on the grounds that I would probably mess up and poison my entire family. In fact, I learned that one must use care when canning foods, but with good instructions and a bit of preparation, the process is not nearly as scary as I thought.

I recommend that you get yourself a set of good instructions and READ THEM. My canning bible is "Putting Food By," by Janet Greene with Ruth Hertzberg and Beatrice Vaughan (Viking/Penguin, 1988), which tells you not only how to can foods, but how to freeze, dry, salt and smoke them. There's enough horrifying stuff about botulism to make you VERY CAREFUL, but not enough to frighten you away.

The H.J. Heinz Co. also offers a concise guide to pickling that you can obtain free by writing to: Heinz Successful Pickling Guide, P.O. Box 57, Pittsburgh, PA 15230.

The following recipes all require a boiling water bath. Here are general rules:

— Equipment: Use standard jars with screw bands and NEW (not used) self-sealing lids. Aside from cooking utensils (ladles, spatulas, etc.) you will also need a big pot with a lid and a rack on the bottom (boiling water canners are relatively inexpensive and can be purchased at hardware stores).

— Preparation: Wash all jars and screw bands in hot soapy water. Rinse well and keep jars and screw bands in scalding water until ready to use. Prepare jar lids according to manufacturers' directions. (Even though it is said to be unnecessary, I sterilize all jars by boiling them for 15 minutes.)

— Packing: Pack clean, hot jars following directions on each recipe. Leave required head room. Make sure that pickling liquid fills in around ingredients. Release air bubbles by running a non-metal spatula down inside of jar. (Add more boiling pickling liquid if needed.) Wipe top and side of jars with clean, damp cloth before adjusting screw band.

— Processing: Partially fill canner and bring to a simmer. Place filled jars on rack. Bring to a full boil. (Water should cover jars by 2 inches; add more BOILING water if needed). Count processing time from the FULL BOIL only. Adjust processing time for higher altitudes; consult a canning guide. Remove jars and complete seals if needed.

— Storing: Allow jars to cool 12 to 24 hours. Check the seal; if not sealed properly, food can be reprocessed (but I would eat it immediately rather than take any risk). Wipe jars, label clearly, and store in a clean, dry place. When opening, check for signs of spoilage: bulging lids, leakage, discoloration, mold, off odor, or unusually soft or mushy contents. Dispose of product so that people or pets will not get at it; wash and sterilize jar. Refrigerate open jars.

SPICED PEARS

2	quarts plus 1 cup water
1-½	cups plus 2 tablespoons white vinegar
4 to 5	pounds firm pears
4	3-inch cinnamon sticks, broken
1	whole nutmeg, chopped
2	tablespoons anise seed (optional)
3	cups granulated sugar

In a non-aluminum pan combine 2 quarts of water with 2 tablespoons white vinegar.

Peel, halve and core the pears. Put in the vinegar-water to prevent browning.

Put the cinnamon sticks, nutmeg and anise seed (if using) in a spice bag or square of cheesecloth, and tie up ends.

In a 6- to 8-quart non-aluminum pot, combine sugar, remaining 1-½ cups vinegar, remaining 1 cup water and spice bag. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer for 5 minutes. Drain pears and add to the boiled syrup and simmer for 5 to 10 minutes, or until pears are tender but still firm. Remove spice bag.

Immediately fill hot pint jars with pears, leaving ½-inch headspace. Pour hot syrup over pears, still leaving ½-inch headspace. Carefully run a non-metal spatula down the inside of jars to remove trapped air bubbles. Seal. Process in boiling water bath for 15 minutes. Remove from bath, complete seals if needed.

Yield: 4 to 5 pints.

DILLY GREEN BEANS

4	pounds whole green beans
1-¾	teaspoons crushed dried hot red pepper flakes
3-½	teaspoons dried dill seed, or 7 fresh dill heads
7	cloves fresh garlic, peeled
5	cups water
5	cups white vinegar
½	cup less 1 tablespoon pickling (non-iodized) salt

Wash beans thoroughly, removing stems and tips, and cut them as much as possible in uniform lengths to allow them to stand upright in a 1-pint canning jar, coming to the shoulder of the jar. Have jars clean and very hot, and lids and sealers ready.

In each jar place 1 dill head or ½ teaspoon dill seed, 1 garlic clove and ¼ teaspoon pepper flakes. Pack beans upright in jars, leaving 1 inch headroom.

In a non-aluminum pot, heat the water, vinegar and salt to a full boil. Pour immediately over the beans, filling each jar to ½-inch from the top. Run a non-metal spatula down and around to remove trapped air. Adjust lid, and process in boiling water bath for 10 minutes. Remove jars, and complete seals if necessary. Wait at least two weeks for these beans to develop their flavor.

Yield: 7 pints.

— Recipe from "Putting Food By," by Janet Greene with Ruth Hertzberg and Beatrice Vaughan (Viking/Penguin, 1988).

BAKED APPLE BUTTER

10	pounds apples
1	cup water
	Pure maple syrup, honey or molasses
	Cinnamon, to taste
	Nutmeg, to taste

Quarter the apples and combine with water in a large covered kettle. Bring the water to a boil and steam the apples until soft, 20 to 30 minutes. Cool slightly.

Preheat oven to 200 degrees.

Strain apples through a food mill. Pour puree into a large roasting pan. Bake until quite thick, 6 to 8 hours.

Remove from oven and stir in sweetener and spices, tasting as you go. Return to oven or stove top to reheat for canning.

Ladle hot butter into prepared ½-pint jars, leaving ¼ inch head room. Seal. Process in boiling water bath for 5 minutes. Remove from bath, and adjust seals if needed.

Yield: 4 to 5 half-pints.

The Garden Editor

By Dr. Ted Brice

In general most trees, shrubs, flowers and vegetables need about one inch of water per week during the growing season. Direct the water to the plant's roots, watering the soil and not the plants will minimize the spread of diseases and conserve moisture.

Wet leaves are an invitation to fungal diseases and the splashing drops spread disease organisms. Water early in the day to allow adequate time for the sun to dry plant foliage. Do not apply more water than the soil can absorb since water that drains away from the root zone is wasted.

The best time to water the garden is early morning. This gives plants the maximum daylight to make use of soil moisture. Mid or early afternoon is the next best time.

Watering plants during midday does not burn foliage.

Watering late in the day or evening opens the garden up to pests such as slugs and mosquitos, as well as many diseases such as mildew and black spot that thrive on moisture and darkness.

When watering plants in the garden or in containers, wet the entire root zone thoroughly. Deep-rooted plants have a larger reservoir of water to draw from and will be able to go longer between waterings. They are also able to better withstand periods of drought.

Light, frequent watering encourages roots to grow up to the soil surface where they dry out quickly, are easily burned by the sun, and less tolerant of drought. Shallow rooting makes for weak plants and the roots do not grow deep enough to extract important minerals from the soil.

A rain gauge will help determine if enough rain has fallen or supplemental watering has been adequate.

One way to tell if you've applied enough water is to use a screwdriver or probe. It will push easily into wet soil but stop when it reaches dry soil.

When watering the lawn or garden set out several containers in different spots. You will be able to see how much water has been applied by measuring the water depth in containers. Climate affects a plant's water needs so watering schedules and requirements should be adjusted accordingly.

Microclimates created by wind, sun, buildings, walls or other environmental factors can alter a plant's water requirement. Hot weather and strong winds cause plants to dry out very quickly. Providing a windbreak near your garden will help plants hold water longer.

The longer days of summer bring more sunshine and heat so plants grow more actively and need more water.

As autumn approaches, plants enter a rest period and need less moisture.

Snow is an excellent insulator during the winter and helps prevent rapid fluctuations of freezing and thawing. The melting snow is a great source of winter and early spring water. Don't let plants wilt before watering. On a hot day some wilting in the afternoon is normal, but if your plants are wilted in the morning it's time to water.

Wilting can also be a sign of too much watering, so check the soil before watering.

Learn the individual needs of plants and water accordingly. Plants should be grown in soil conditions that meet their growing requirements. Plants native to dry areas can drown if planted in wet climates or poorly drained soil.

Plants whose natural habitat is close to streams or forest do best if the soil is kept damp.

Water will penetrate less into soil that is covered with grass or weeds, but weeds will be easier to pull when the soil is moist.

Let me leave you with this thought, "God does not deduct from man's alloted time, those hours spent gardening. Good Gardening until next week," from Dr. Ted Brice, The Garden Editor.

Organizing robots?

At a new, highly automated Fujitsu Fanuc factory in Japan, management and the union agreed in 1983 to reduce the work force by attrition. The union soon found its treasury was being reduced as due-paying members left the company and were replaced by robots. To keep labor peace, management agreed to pay union dues for each robot.

Recipe for candied corn

CELEBRATION CANDIED CORN

8 cups plain air-popped popcorn
1 cup toasted sliced almonds
1 cup dry cranberries or other dried fruit, such as raisins
1 cup sugar
1/2 cup water
1/2 cup strawberry jelly
1/8 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon vinegar

Combine the popped corn, almonds and dried fruit in a large, lightly oiled bowl. Set aside.

Combine the remaining ingredients in a small saucepan. Cover, bring to a boil, and boil for 3 minutes. Remove the cover; continue cooking for 5 minutes until the syrup reaches the hard crack stage, 290 degrees F. (To test for the hard-crack stage, drizzle a drop of the mixture over ice cubes in a glass of water. If the sugar hardens completely, the syrup is ready.)

Drizzle the syrup over the popped corn mixture using an oiled spoon or spatula to evenly coat the corn. Once the mixture has cooled enough to handle safely, form the corn into 1/2 cup-balls, pressing them together so that they stick. Keep the caramel corn in a dry place and they will keep indefinitely. Makes 15 balls.

Letters to the Editor

Jail escape

Dear Editor:

I am writing this letter as a concerned citizen as well as a concerned parent. This letter is about the jail escape.

As a concerned citizen, I would like to know why we are not informed when something like this happens.

As a concerned parent, I want to be informed especially when something like this happens, so I can at least bring my children in from playing outside.

I live about two blocks away from the jail, and at the time of the escape, my children were playing outside. If I had known of this escape, I would have brought them inside. By the way, one of the men was considered dangerous. When I found out about this escape, I was outraged that none of us in the area was informed of the escape.

If the police department does not have to inform citizens in the area, I think they should and the present law should be changed.

Thank you,
Concerned citizen

Still unhappy

To the Editor:

In regards to KSNY!

I can't believe you people are treating everyone so bad. First, you cut off our Spanish program without any good reason! I wrote about this early last month but you all kept it hush-hush. Why did we not get any comment from you all?

And to top it off, you all wanted Johnny 'T' to work for free.

I remember when KSNY used to do a lot of good things for this town. It used to be nice to get up in the mornings and turn the radio on. But now anymore. It's all going down the drain!

If it's new management to blame, I sure wish the old one was back! You people got your nerve. Why don't you come out of your own world and respect the views of others?

There used to be a lot of listeners to your radio station but not anymore. You people at KSNY like to think of your own selves: number one, taking advantage, for one fact! And another reason, you all believe in playing just one kind of language and that's not right.

You lost Joe Hernandez, who was great and Johnny 'T,' who made it fun for all! So now you just got boring and old to us all!

KSNY will never be on my radio again because I believe in fairness and good-hearted people, not unjust ones!

Thanks!

Dear Editor:

We would like to say a special 'Thank You' to everyone who worked at the Cardinal Stadium. The remodeling and enlarging of the concession stand and building the new restrooms took many hours to complete.

The concession stand will be enjoyed by all the Cardinal fans as well as visitors for years to come. Great things happen when people work together.

Renew your vision!

Dear Editor,

There seems to be a "woe is me" attitude and hopelessness within the community. For some, we have become a people without vision — especially in regard to the community's economic well being in the shadow of the declining oil industry.

God's word says that without vision the people perish. Thankfully, Snyder still has visionaries hopeful about Snyder's future. People who volunteer their time, expense and labor toward the common goal of building a better Snyder. There are people of vision. I believe Snyder is not dying — but is on the verge of something great!

This was evidenced just a couple of weeks ago when I witnessed the tide turning toward a progressive, hopeful future for Snyder at the DCOS public announcement of the new industrial park. The mayor, city council and DCOS were willing to risk making decisions which were forward thinking. They made decisions based on not what is simply "good" for Snyder, but rather what is "best" for Snyder.

Sometimes in having to make tough decisions we overthink. We measure the possible results of the alternatives and always find enough "reasons" to scare us out of making any choice at all; therefore we do nothing. Then we moan and groan about our lot in life. I am grateful we have leadership who can take a stand, have made the choice and have accepted the challenge of being committed to the development of an industrial park and attracting new industry for the betterment of Scurry County.

I witnessed a unified spirit at that meeting between the county and city governments. It is good to see all entities enthusiastically joining forces to see the vision of new industry become a reality rather than each having its own separate agenda.

Individually, I thank Mayor David Holt for his leadership and dedication. The DCOS board for your vision and resolve to keep Snyder moving forward. To DCOS Director Doug Hutchinson and his assistant Laurie Graves for your vision, tenacity and drive to get the job done and done right. I am certain the long hours and hard work will be rewarded.

To Scurry County Judge Ricky Fritz, county commissioners and BCD board for publicly lending your wholehearted support through service and manpower to help get the job done. To other community members and leaders who support Scurry County with their earnest prayers and tireless volunteer efforts, a big THANK YOU.

Leaving the economic development side a moment and looking at the tourism side — my hat is off to Donna Fowler and her staff. What major strides have been accomplished in the 8½ months of 1995 and more goodies on the way. Good job gang! It is a blessing to have these folks promoting our town.

Having lived in other towns, I can truthfully say I'm very proud to be a part of Snyder. Time after time while working at different events, I have been told by visitors that Snyder is one of the neatest, friendliest places they've been.

When you look at what positive things are stirring in economic development, tourism and the wonderful unity happening in the Christian community —— Folks, hop aboard. Snyder is moving forward!

To those who have lost the vision and find yourselves bemoaning your present situation, get behind your leadership and support Snyder by discovering positive ways to better this community. (In other words, put your time, sweat and money where your mouth is!)

Together, we can all help to make this community sparkle once again — renew your vision of a brighter Snyder. With God's help, we can make it happen. We can be all God is calling us to be.

Sincerely,
Pearlene Stewart Nolan

The Perot People?

Dear Editor:

So what's wrong with a little humor once in a while? Clowns do a lot of good, too. They make people happy and make them smile. So what, if the National Press Cartoons (I faxed you a dozen of the best full page cartoons of Perot) missed the point of the recent National Convention in Dallas of the United We Stand, America, but that's alright. The national media still doesn't get it...we are interested in "Issues, issues, issues."

Ross Perot set into motion a movement much bigger than one person. We are a UNITED (together) WE (people) STAND (movement) AMERICANS. We are not "Perot People" anymore. We are independents, over 60 million strong. We are the disenchanted voters. We may be either Republicans or Democrats. We like to think WE VOTE For the PERSON, not the party.

We want the two-party system to work, BUT IF it doesn't, then we are the people who represent 60% of the electorate right now! We can deliver the vote to change the way government is conducted for the next century. Even in the recent Scurry County elections, over 4,200 independent thinkers voted, out of the total 5,258 votes cast.

We are "Centrists." Some call us "Radical Centrists" because we are the people from the middle. We are to the "left" on some issues, and we are to the "right" on other issues. We are what used to be called old fashioned "moderates" instead of radicals.

We are thinkers and not followers. We are extreme about the rejection of "extremism," but we do not seek to compromise our personal beliefs. We understand that in a democratic republic like the United States compromise in public affairs is essential. We want what is best for the country, be it local, state or national. That is our one litmus test, just tell us the truth, and we will hold it to the light.

Philosophies of the "left" lead eventually to socialism when they are carried to their logical extreme, while those on the "right" lead to Facism. The "independent Centrists" are those who believe that a dynamic tension between the two will lead to desirable goals for our nation and our country.

Mr. Gerry Spence, Esquire, the famed Randy Weaver lawyer, said "Although we give lip service to the notion of freedom, we know the government is no longer the servant of the people but, at last, has become the people's master. We have stood by like timid sheep while the wolf killed — first the weak, then the strays, then those on the outer edges of the flock, until at last the entire flock belonged to the wolf."

Those that govern may think the wolf has control of the sheep while they continue to fleece. But the sheep may finally say — NAYYYY! NAYYYY!

DEANIE FRANCIS MILLS

Everything in Washington, D.C., is free.

Well, okay, not everything. But if you want to walk along the gentle banks of the placid reflecting pool to the steps of the Lincoln Memorial where Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. gave his great "I have a dream" speech once to 100,000 people; it's free.

If you want to gawk up at the huge and majestic statue of our 16th president as he forever gazes out at the Washington monument and on toward the Capitol rotunda gleaming white above the trees in the hazy distance, that's free, too.

You can even visit the Capitol for free. In spite of all the hot air that occasionally gets generated inside that normally air-conditioned building, it still makes you feel the same way a magnificent church or cathedral does: simply awed.

You can hang out in the park across the street from the gracious, beautiful and imposing White House, carrying signs over your shoulder which proclaim your strongest opinions about any subject you wish; feel free to do so.

There are lovely, graceful parks all over that city, almost everywhere you turn. You're free to spread a blanket, take a noonday snooze, read a book, or romp with your kids — it's all open, freely accessible to everyone.

Exotic Indian women wrapped in colorful saris, mysterious Muslim women muffled to the face in black — people of every culture, language, and skin color move freely about the city. Most all of them want to have their pictures taken as they stand next to some great landmark, and they're free to do so.

All who are interested are welcome to quietly browse Arlington National Cemetery, where the white crosses and stars of David sweep out across the horizon like a mute white forest. There is no charge.

Or if you wish, you may amble over the grounds which slope down from the Lincoln Memorial to a place where stark black granite sears through the grass like the sleek sharp blade of a machete. The granite is not smooth to the touch. Run your hands over the surface and you will feel the names of 58,000 boys etched into the rock like a hard unforgettable memory. But you won't see their faces there. You will never see their faces anywhere but in the cries of your own heart.

Our nation's capitol is so like her country: open and welcoming, the very old jostled next to the modern; hodgepodge crowds spilling into sprawling serene spaces; mediocrity mixed with unexpected magnificence.

But not everything is free, after all.

Some things have come at a terrible price.

It's been paid in full through, with the balance of our dreams.

State tax reform

The San Antonio Express-News

Gov. George W. Bush, after a legislative session that saw most of his major goals met, signaled recently that he is willing to push for overhauling the state's antiquated tax system.

That is heartening because the issue must not be forgotten.

The greatest gift the popular governor could give the state is his best effort toward reducing reliance on local property taxes, especially to finance education.

If the state finds a way to provide funding for education, that not only would lower local property taxes, but also it could remove the terrible inequities in education finance and the convoluted way with which the state seeks to remedy those inequities.

At the same time, Bush put some conditions on a tax reform effort. He ruled out a state income tax, which had been suggested by two former panels that studied tax reform. He also nixed the idea of a tax increase, saying sufficient money is available without an increase.

Bush is correct that he cannot undertake the task alone. He should find a willing partner in Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, who long has understood the need for such reform.

Bullock previously called for an income tax. When that did not fly, he came back the next legislative session and pushed a constitutional amendment requiring a vote of the people to enact such a tax.

With that possibility eliminated, what could replace the local property tax to fund education?

Texas already has one of the highest sales taxes in the nation at 6.25 percent. Some municipalities add local taxes.

Another option would be to broaden the sales tax base to include services, an idea that created a storm one legislative session. The sales tax also could expand to include nontaxed items such as food.

Other possibilities include a value-added tax, which taxes items in various stages of production. Businesses could be taxed on their gross or net incomes.

Tax reform will not be easy. But Bush should go for it, and Texans should support him in the effort. Use of the local property tax is out of control.

Shooting for the moon

By Bill McClellan
Managing Editor

Taking photos at Snyder High School's varsity football opener in Andrews last Friday brought back some memories.

For 14 years — 12 of them in Snyder — I covered local and area football teams. Of course, it doesn't take a sportswriter to know there's something special about Friday nights in the fall. The air is crisp and full of excitement.

During those years spent on the sidelines and in pressboxes from East Texas to Pecos, I covered more than 180 high school football games — counting a few on Thursdays and Saturdays as well as playoffs. The schools pitted on the playing field ranged in size from the smallest to the largest. But the size of the student body didn't matter. Some of the best games I witnessed were in towns like Coolidge, Buffalo, Hobbs and Hermleigh.

The moon Friday night fit right in, like a spotlight shining down on Week One of schoolboy football. It also brought to mind a recent article I'd read, which in turn, prompted a more distant memory.

As a sports reporter, I had the opportunity to meet a lot of interesting coaches and players from the high school, collegiate and professional level.

One of the first professional football players I met was a wide receiver for the New York Giants. It was in the summer of 1976.

As a young reporter/sportswriter for the Mexia Daily news, I was told to go to the high school gym one afternoon to meet this guy, and interview him for the weekend edition.

When I walked into the gym, there was only one other person there. He was shooting baskets, his back to me. I knew this wasn't the pro ball player I was looking for, though. He wasn't a whole lot bigger than myself. Certainly not big enough to be a wide receiver in the NFL. So I sat down on the first row of the bleachers and waited.

After a moment the guy turned around. I smiled, nodded a hello, and figited with the camera. And waited.

To my surprise, he walked over.

"You the reporter?" he said.

Yes," I replied.

"Ray Rhodes," he said, introducing himself. He stuck out his hand. Somewhat embarrassed, I took it.

I learned that day that size doesn't always make a player. Not all pro athletes are are 6-2, 250 pounds (make that 6-5, 290, nowdays).

While not big, Ray Rhodes had very good speed, excellent quickness, good hands and a great feel for playing his position. He had one other thing: a will that couldn't be crushed with a bulldozer.

He was a star at Mexia High School, played briefly for Texas Christian University, ran into some problems there, and finished his collegiate football career at Tulsa.

I don't have a copy of the article I wrote back then, but I recall that Rhodes talked a lot about heart and about desire.

Featured in a recent article in the Waco Tribune Herald, Rhodes was quoted as saying something on the order of this: "I always shoot for the moon. And if I should fall short, I know I can still catch a star."

Now the new head coach of the Philadelphia Eagles, Rhodes got his first win last Sunday. It was against Buddy Ryan's Arizona Cardinals. How 'bout that?

As I recall Friday's football game and that bright, full moon shining down, I can almost picture Rhodes there with a piece of it in his hand.

"as an ensemble," with everyone sharing the same goals, opportunities to learn, planning and building of sets, auditions, rehearsals and ultimately performing on stage.

The workshop ended much too soon, and tears mingled with the final good-byes as everyone prepared to return to their other lives, Katie said.

Both described the workshop as incredible. Not only because everyone shared the same love of theatre, but instructors encouraged the students to share their opinions about the plays they attended as well as the ones they were getting ready to perform.

"We enjoyed that," Katie said, "because our opinions mattered."

Katie said another important benefit of the workshop was that each student also respected the opinions of their peers.

Stephen said the workshop "opened our minds."

Impressed by the "street smart," theatre people they met, both Stephen and Katie agreed that the workshop taught them the value of "thinking on our feet."

Noting that "acting is harder than most people realize," Katie added, "The freedom to think on stage was a good experience."

Both developed the confidence to "take the lead," which better prepared them to serve as 1995-1996 senior leaders in the SHS drama department.

The workshop strengthened Katie's committment to acting. Stephen's reaction was somewhat different. He had always focused solely on acting, but after working behind the scenes as well as on stage he said he now prefers backstage work. However, he intends to study both to enhance his chances of finding employment in the theater industry.

Ironically, the Snyder youths were somewhat reluctant to attend at first because they had not known what to expect. They, along with the rest of the 54 participants, were more than a little quiet and restrained that first day.

However, by Day Two, everyone began to relax and settle in as the "one big family" atmosphere rooted and thrived.

Students were divided into smaller groups, each alternating classes in acting, costume, makeup and tech (stage crew) as they also prepared for three productions, one directed by Jerry Worsham, SHS drama teacher.

Students were given ample opportunities to audition for roles in "Romeo and Juliet, "Godspell," and "The Crucible.

Worsham directed "Romeo and Juliet," but the Snyder students did not work with him as workshop rules prohibit students and directors from the same school collaborating on the same production.

Everyone also worked behind the scenes building sets and preparing the stage for each production, Stephen said.

To better prepare for the auditions, students read the plays and discussed them with the three directors. They auditioned for three days and then waited for "call backs."

Following auditions, the students spent four weeks in rehearsal before giving two performances during the final week.

Stephen was picked to portray Giles Corey in "The Crucible." and Katie was tapped for a role in "Godspell."

Alva Haskell, assistant director of the Performing Arts Center at UT, directed Stephen's play. Larry Wisdom, high school one-act director who went to state five years in a row in 3A competition, directed "Godspell."

Workshop participants also worked with plays by young playwrights.

During acting classes, Katie said they were taught to use "three to five different pitches" and to define "characters through different tones and inflections."

Stephen said he learned to analyze the character he portrayed as well as "be the character." For him, the hardest part was "putting emotion on the stage." During movement classes, the students were taught how to dance on stage.

Katie especially enjoyed the acting because, "We did not have any competition," she said. "We were all on the same level, and we were all doing the same thing."

The make-up or tech classes focused on various parts of the stage, how to arrange the lighting and set construction. The SHS duo loved working with the lighting system; and when all 206 lights were turned on in the small auditorium they used, the "temperature was raised five degrees," Stephen said.

They used saws and pneumatic air guns to build the sets.

The workshop stage had a 75-foot tall grid, where all the stage controls and ropes are located. Stephen and one other student were nicknamed "grid monkeys" because they were always climbing up to the grid.

The workshop included touring the grids of Bass Concert Hall, where Class 3A, 4A and 5A one-act state competition is held, and McCullough Theatre, the site of 1A and 2A state contests.

During tech classes, they learned "theatre tricks" — shortcuts to getting a stage ready, and they learned the value of the theatre credo: "As long as something looks good and works it does not have to be precise." Safety is always a primary concern, though, and is never compromised for the sake of speed.

Workshop instructors told students what sets were needed, but left the planning and construction up to them. While they were working, the SHS pair said students were never told that they had done something wrong. Each instructor was also patient and calm, offering suggestions rather than edicts, Katie added.

Instructors emphasized that while actors need an ego to peform before an audience, "ego is best left in the drawer before they go on."

In addition to erecting sets, students also learned to "strike" or breakdown the stage. During the final hours of the workshop, students — in one fluid motion — took everything apart and packed it away, finishing during the "wee hours of the morning."

Through the workshop, Katie said she realized how important it is for a set designer to have acting experience in order to learn first hand "what works and does not work on stage."

During the five weeks they were in Austin, both SHS students said they came to realize how important it is for "actors and techies (stage crew) to get along and respect each other."

Katie enjoyed the shop classes because she liked "building things." She considered the costumes class "too meticulous" because it mainly involved "sitting and sewing."

Stephen and Katie met a variety of interesting theatre students, including three from the High School of Performing Arts in Houston. It was quite a contrast, they said, because the Houston students were not "UIL trained" as were the rest of the workshop participants.

Most students could handle five weeks of stress, hard work and long hours, but a few could not and had to drop out. In the beginning, Katie said they were told the importance of getting enough rest and eating proper meals. The few who did not heed the advice were the ones who became ill.

Besides gaining valuable experience, Katie and Stephen said that all the students who completed the workshop became eligible for a $750 fall semester scholarship, if they are accepted by the University of Texas.

They highly recommended the workshop for any sophomore or junior who is really interested in theatre.

Katie and Stephen returned to Austin July 27-29 to attend an Honors Colloquium.

They had filled out applications while at the workshop and both were accepted, along with seven others from the workshop.

The colloquium atmosphere was quite different from the workshop. While the theatre students had been very outgoing, students in the colloquium were "more reserved."

During the colloquium, they toured the UT campus and attended lectures.

The students who attended the colloquium are also eligible for a $1,000 scholarship from UT, if they are accepted by the university.

Katie is the daughter of Mike and Rebekah Thornton and Stephen is the son of Pete and Charlotte Wadleigh.

to go back.

Though reluctant to attend at first, Ryan and Jamie are glad they were accepted. Nominated by their church, each had to fill out questionnaires, write essays, list the activities they were involved in and write down a statement of faith before being accepted.

Jamie is a sophomore and Ryan a junior at Snyder High School. Ryan is also active in drama and one-act play. Jamie's activities include basketball and cross country.

Both participate in their church's youth group activities.

Presbyterian youth event draws record attendance

(Editor's Note:) The following information was culled from a Triennium brochure and an article by Julian Shipp, published in issue No. 9632 of "News Briefs," a publication of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

Staged at Purdue University, site of 15 previous Trienniums, the official count of 5,901 youth is the most in Triennium history.

The once-every-three-years event is open to Presbyterian youth 15-19 and adult advisors — at least 21-years old — in every presbytery, and is designed "as a growth experience for the mind, heart and soul."

The event is co-sponsored by the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), the Presbyterian Church in Canada and Cumberland Presbyterian Churches.

The theme, "And The Walls Came Tumbling Down" (taken from Ephesians 2: 13-14), encouraged camp participants to "tear down the barriers that keep young Christians from God."

For five activity-packed days, Triennium participants were exposed to skits, messages from preachers, music and interaction through close-knit peer groups, all in keeping with the theme.

Each day, activities included worship, Bible study, small group meetings, recreation, concerts and other special events.

Activities included a series of dance moves and "energizers" which featured pop and traditional worship songs.

"Simple Gifts," a multi-dimensional performing arts group from the San Francisco area, presented a series of skits and dramatic performances depicting the life and times of Jesus.

Preachers used contemporary themes and imagery as they addressed the youth.

One sermon — "So What Is Evil Like, Do You Think?" — compared the temptations young people face today to Christ's encounter with Satan following 40

Family Focus

By James C. Dobson, Ph.D.

Q. I understand how the "love must be tough" philosophy can reconstruct a bad marriage. How would it function in a good relationship?

A. The best way of keeping a marriage healthy is to maintain a system of mutual accountability, within the context of love. Speaking personally, the secret of my beautiful relationship with my wife, Shirley, for the past 32 years has involved a careful protection of the "line of respect" between us.

Suppose I work in my office two hours longer than usual on a particular night, knowing Shirley is preparing a special candlelight dinner. The phone sits on my desk, but I lack the concern to make a brief call to explain. As the evening wears on, Shirley wraps the cold food in foil and puts it in the refrigerator.

Then suppose when I finally get home, I do not apologize. Instead, I sit down with a newspaper and abruptly tell Shirley to get my dinner ready. You can bet there'll be a few minutes of fireworks in the Dobson household. Shirley will rightfully interpret my behavior as insulting and will move to defend the "line of respect" between us.

Let's put the shoe on the other foot. Suppose Shirley knows I need the car at 2 p.m. for some important purpose, but she deliberately keeps me waiting. Perhaps she sits in a restaurant with a lady friend, drinking coffee and talking. Meanwhile, I'm pacing the floor at home wondering where she is. It is very likely that my lovely wife will hear about my dissatisfaction when she gets home. The "line of respect" has been violated, even though the offense was minor.

This is what I mean by mutual accountability. Such minor conflict in a marriage plays a positive role in establishing what is and is not acceptable behavior. Some instances of disrespect are petty, but when they are permitted to pass unnoticed, two things happen. First, the offender is unaware that he has stepped over the line and is likely to repeat the indiscretion later. Second, the person who felt insulted then internalizes the small irritation rather than spilling it out. As the disrespect grows, the stage is set for an eventual explosion.

A workable system of checks and balances of this nature helps a couple keep their marriage on course for a marathon rather than a sprint. And I can assure you, Shirley and I are going the distance!

Q. Do you often deal with the "line of respect" principle in your marriage counseling?

A. In virtually every troubled family I see, the "line of respect" has crumbled. Sometimes the wife is trampling on the husband's territory; sometimes he is all over hers. Either way, within five minutes it is apparent that there is an absence of fair play by one of two partners. Here's an extreme example as described in a letter from a woman whose "line" is now in shambles:

"My husband and I have three children, and I am with them day and night because I can't drive. My husband doesn't want me to go anywhere, anyway. He is very domineering. He dishes out the money and decides how every dollar will be spent.

"This past week was terrible. Mike wouldn't let the kids sing or talk in the car. He orders all of us to bed at a certain time and controls all TV and radio stations. I feel like I have no freedom at all, and my nerves are beginning to act up. The kids are afraid of Mike, too. Anything you can do to help me would be greatly appreciated."

Fortunately, most cases are not as devoid of respect as this one, but it illustrates the problem. If I were working with this woman, my objective would be to teach her how to hold her own with her husband without blowing her marriage off the face of the earth. It would be a delicate task.

Public broadcasters say $4 billion needed to privatize

WASHINGTON (AP) — Privatizing the nation's public broadcasting system would require about $4 billion in start-up money, National Public Radio's president told a Senate panel Thursday.

A privatization plan put together by NPR, the Public Broadcasting Service and two other public broadcasting groups call on Congress to set aside proceeds from the government sale of public airwaves — called the broadcast spectrum — for the project.

The money would be invested in a trust fund that would replace today's Corporation for Public Broadcasting, which dispenses the $285.6 million Congress now spends for programming broadcast by public television and radio groups, including NPR and PBS.

Income from trust fund investments would be handed out to local public television and radio stations.

Money also could be raised by transferring under-used parts of the spectrum to the trust fund corporation for lease to others and requiring commercial broadcasters to pay a 2 percent fee every time they sell a station.

"We think our plan can end the need for an annual appropriation without harming our nation's public broadcasting system," Delano Lewis, NPR's president, told the Senate Commerce Committee.

Many members of Congress' budget-slashing Republican majority want to cut spending and reduce the government's debt by allowing private corporations to take over some of the government's functions.

Some conservatives also have been offended by the content of public broadcasting programs, calling it biased and "politically correct."

But on Thursday, two Republican committee members said it may be foolish to think Congress would simply hand over $4 billion when the money could be better used elsewhere in the budget — for programs that benefit the poor and elderly, for example.

"I sort of feel that the rocket scientists are on the wrong road," Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska said.

"That's a great deal for you, but what does it do for us?" Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., said. "Why in the world should I give you that money and give up control over what that money is used for?"

Lewis said it was the Republicans who asked for ideas on how to get the government out of the business of broadcasting.

He also said local public broadcasting stations could raise more money on their own if Congress relaxes tax and copyright laws.

Back to Basics

By Deidra Graves

It's fall again, and football season, cooler weather, and back to school have arrived. If you are the parent of a high school senior, this fall is even more exciting and stressful than usual. What can you do to ease the college transition for your children and help them get an edge on their education? Take advantage of the early admissions program at Western Texas College.

The early admissions program allows high school students who have completed their junior year in high school to enroll in college courses. The credit earned during these courses is deferred until after the student graduates from high school and furnishes a high school transcript to WTC. At this point the credits are posted to the student's Western Texas College transcript.

Students must have passed all parts of the TAAS test to enroll in the early admissions program. Courses may be taken during the summer after the student's junior year or during the long semesters of his senior year in high school. Students must have permission to enroll from their parents and high school principal.

The early admissions program is a great way for high school students to complete those courses commonly required for a bachelor's degree, like English, history and government. Students gain experience by earning college level credit while taking advantage of the individual attention, small classes and the top-notch professors that WTC offers.

Students must take the ACT, SAT or an on-campus placement test in order to participate in the early admissions program. Remedial level test scores in reading, writing or math will prohibit the student from taking a course in that area.

If your child is active in UIL events, make sure that the courses taken at WTC through the early admissions program are not directly related to their UIL competition. For example, a student who takes a music theory course at WTC is not eligible for UIL band competitions. Taking college academic courses does not rule a student ineligible for UIL Athletic competition. Early admission students who participate in UIL events must meet all requirements for full-time high school attendance. Enrollment in college courses cannot substitute for high school enrollment in meeting this requirement.

The early admissions program is just one of the programs that makes WTC a great place to start a college education. To enroll your child in the early admissions program, call 573-8511, ext. 394. The next opportunity to register for classes at WTC is Jan. 15 from 6:30-8 p.m. By the time the weather warms up and graduate gowns are donned, your child can have three hours of college credit, college experience and a great head start for their future.

days of fasting in the wilderness.

During their leisure time, the Presbyterian youth visited the Cumberland Presbyterian Bookstore, attended a college/seminary fair, pursued exhibits from around the world, purchased gifts and souvenirs, watched movies and enjoyed pizza and other snack food, provided by the university at their residence halls.

Design team members had planned a series of 10 recreational options for the five-day event. Thousands of multi-colored tube balloons were inflated and many teens enjoyed playing in the mud during recreation periods.

Citing the goal of connecting young people to each other, the whole church and the whole world through faith in Jesus, the Presbyterian Youth Connection (PYC) was introduced July 29 at the Triennium.

PYC organizers say the new organization will address the issues of identity, belonging and leadership opportunities.

Facts About The BIBLE

By John Leith

FALSE PROPHETS!

MORE THAN ONCE THE BIBLE WARNS, "BEWARE OF FALSE PROPHETS!" (MATT. 7:15). AGAIN WE NOTE, IN THE BOOK OF JEREMIAH, THAT THE LORD SAID, "...THE PROPHETS PROPHESY LIES IN MY NAME..." (CHAP 14:14) THESE ADMONITIONS, AND MANY MORE LIKE THEM, WERE GIVEN IN EARNEST INSTRUCTION TO THE PEOPLE! YET THEY OFTEN DID NOT HEED THE ADVICE OF THE WISE MEN. THEREFORE, IT WAS NOT UNUSUAL FOR A RAGGED BEGGAR TO WANDER INTO A VILLAGE OR TOWN, PROCLAIMING THAT HE HAD JUST COME OUT OF A FAST IN THE WILDERNESS AND WAS SPEAKING WITH THE LORD'S VOICE! HAVING CONVINCED A FEW OF THE MORE SIMPLE-MINDED ONES THAT HE WAS INDEED A MESSENGER FROM THE LORD, IT WAS NO BIG DEAL FOR THE BEGGAR TO START FREE-LOADING, LIVING OFF THE BEST THAT THE POOR VILLAGERS COULD SCROUNGE OUT OF THEIR MEAGRE LARDERS!
