Rochester Widow To Tell Grand Jury Of Double Slaying

STATE SPEEDS UP CASE FOR TRIAL FRIDAY

District Attorney Hopes To Dispose of Charge Immediately

FRITTS BEFORE JURY

Accused Man and About 14 Others Quizzed By Probers

Special to The Record News.

HASKELL, Texas, Oct. 29.—District Attorney Clyde Grissom promised speed in the remaining legal steps to be taken in the case of Bill Fritts, charged with the double murder of D. W. Hamilton and his son, Earle, today when he announced that Hamilton's widow would come from Rochester Tuesday and testify before a special session of the Haskell county grand jury which convened here today to probe the slayings. Hamilton and his son were slain in front of their home near Rochester last Wednesday night.

Fritts, Mr. Grissom said, did not appear before the investigators Monday, but was to be brought before them for questioning Tuesday.

15 Give Evidence

Relating that about 15 witnesses, most of them from Rochester, had testified before the grand jury Monday, and that Mrs. Hamilton and several other important witnesses would testify tomorrow, District Attorney Grissom said he felt sure a report would be made Tuesday. In that event, he said, every effort would be made to bring the case to a speedy trial before District Judge Bruce Bryant here at least by Friday.

Fritts, world war veteran, gave authorities a signed statement Saturday in which District Attorney Grissom said Fritts admitted complicity in the crime. The statement said, according to Mr. Grissom, that the Hamiltons had been shot because Earle had testified before a recent grand jury which later indicted Fritts for alleged liquor violations.

Evaded Pursuit

The Hamiltons were killed late Wednesday night, after they had been called from their home by a man later identified by Mrs. Hamilton. After Mrs. Hamilton had given this information a murder charge was filed, and search started for Fritts, who evaded officers in the Brazos river bottoms near Rochester for about two days. He surrendered to officers at Judd, near Rochester, Friday, and was taken to the Abilene jail. At first denying guilt, he later issued the signed statement to county officials.

Human Skeleton Found On South Texas Ranch

SAN ANTONIO, Oct. 29. (INS)—A human skeleton, apparently that of a man, was found today in a ravine on the ranch of Frank Walsh on the Medina river, 15 miles south of here. The skeleton was in a sitting posture when found by T. T. Ballard and Albert Wooford, youths who live on neighboring ranches. Examination revealed a fracture of the skull.

Bexar county officers today are searching the records of missing persons in the hope that a clue may be found to the man's identity.

Al's Speech Wednesday Night To Be Broadcast

Farmers, Stockmen and Oil Men Are Helped By More Than Inch of Rain

Sowing of Winter Wheat Made Possible by General Precipitation Over Large Texas-Oklahoma Area

Though less jubilant because interrupted slightly in their cotton picking, farmers clasped hands with oil operators Monday, celebrating the recent rainfall which both recognize as worth many dollars in one way or another.

The farmers, according to G. C. McGown, Wichita county agent, seemed happiest because, with the general rain that fell over most of the Panhandle, planting of small grain, long delayed, now can start. Oats, barley and wheat were also aided, he said, and cotton has not suffered from the moisture so far. Stockmen also benefited as tanks were replenished.

Half Inch Rain Falls

The rainfall in Wichita Falls early Monday reached slightly over an inch, the Texas Electric Service company bureau reported. The temperature reached its lowest at 46 degrees, maintaining an average throughout the day of 48 degrees. Total rain for Sunday and Monday exceeded one inch.

A similar amount of rain was reported from most of the cities in the immediate vicinity, with some rather heavy rainfall to the north in Oklahoma. In the territory served by the Wichita Valley railroad, about one-half an inch of rain fell at Waurika, Byers, Petorial, Seymour, Goree, Haskell and nearby towns, the dispatcher for that line reported. A rather heavy fall was reported in Altus and Woodward, Okla., this morning, whereas only mists clouded the atmosphere in the vicinity of Wellington, the Katy dispatcher said. The Fort Worth and Denver dispatcher said light rains had fallen Monday afternoon at Decatur, southeast of here, and that mist predominated at Quanah most of the day. Temperatures at all points were slightly lower.

FRESH ROYALTY FLAW FOUND

Cat Creek Contract Is Held Illegal Document

(Copyright, 1928, by Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—The department of justice has decided to brand as illegal the $10,000,000 Cat Creek, Mont., royalty oil contract, now controlled by the Lewistown Oil and Refining company, it was learned tonight.

This follows by two weeks the decision of Attorney General Sargent holding the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing company's $65,000,000 Salt Creek, Wyo., royalty oil contract invalid.

Both contracts originally were negotiated by Albert B. Fall in December, 1922, when he was secretary of the interior. They were subsequently renewed last winter by Dr. Hubert Work, former secretary of the interior who resigned to become chairman of the Republican national committee.

The renewal was based on an option clause by which the contractors were given the right to make a new five-year contract at the expiration of the original agreement.

Both contracts contained the same five year option clause, which it is contended was not a part of the original advertisements for bids.

Graft Jury Looks Further Into Records

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 29. (INS)—The county prosecutor is still investigating the record of Police Captain Charles Cohen who was acquitted by a jury last week of graft charges, it was indicated today when the special grand jury resumed its session.

A woman witness from the former police district commanded by Captain Cohen was called today. She remained before the jury only a few minutes. Captain William Scott, Manyunk, followed. Former members of unit one, rum-raiding squad, were called next.

Labor Report Given To President Coolidge

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29. (UP)—James R. Garfield, chairman of the emergency board created a month ago by executive order to investigate labor disputes involving certain employes by Western railroads submitted the board's findings to President Coolidge today.

Garfield declined to discuss the report following a lengthy conference with the president.

Radio Program By Democratic Women Brings Responses By Wire

Democratic women of Wichita Falls told the world about Al Smith in a radio program on KGKO Monday night under the auspices of the Wichita County Democratic league. The reception room of the radio station was crowded with listeners and more than 50 telegrams from many different states augmented about 200 local and long distance telephone calls.

Mrs. C. B. Smedley, president of the league, officiated as announcer and Democratic addresses by several prominent party leaders were interspersed with musical numbers by a chorus directed by Mrs. Lois Parker. Addresses were made for the Democratic ticket by the following women:

Mrs. A. H. Carrigan on "Why It Is Necessary to Work for the Democratic Party Today"; "Six Reasons Why We Should Vote for Governor Smith," was the subject of Mrs. Lester T. Burns; Mrs. M. M. Adickes spoke on "Religious Intolerance"; Miss Johnnie Morgan on "Why I Am a Democrat"; Mrs. W. E. Huff on "How Governor Smith

MARLAND QUITS AS CHIEF OF HIS COMPANY

President of Oklahoma Oil Company Announces Resignation

D. J. MORAN SUCCEEDS

Texaco Vice-President Will Transfer to Independent Concern

PONCA CITY, Okla., Oct. 29 (AP).—Resignation of E. W. Marland as president of the Marland Oil company was announced late today at the company offices here. He will be succeeded by Daniel J. Moran, who resigned as vice president of the Texas corporation to accept the position.

Mr. Marland's resignation was presented to the board of directors at a meeting in New York today.

Remains a Director

The announcement of his retirement as active head of the company, released here, said he will remain a member of the board of directors and of the executive committee. Resignation of W. H. McFadden as vice president and member of the board of directors and of the executive committee was also announced. He will be succeeded to the latter two positions by Mr. Moran.

Mr. Marland's statement follows: "It is a great satisfaction for me to announce that a meeting of the board of directors of the Marland Oil company today, Mr. Daniel J. Moran was elected president of the company to succeed me, effective Nov. 1, 1928.

Explains Resignation

"I resign because I will not be able to give as close attention to the affairs of the company in the future as I have in the past. I am to remain a member of the board of directors and of the executive committee. Mr. Moran has resigned as a vice president and director of the Texas corporation with whom he has been associated over a period of 20 years and will take up his duties as president of the Marland Oil company promptly.

"Mr. W. R. McFadden resigned as vice president and member of the board of directors and member of the executive committee and Mr. Moran was elected a member of the board and of the executive committee to fill the vacancy created by this resignation."

Marland's Romance

The wealthy oil man's abdication followed close on the heels of romance culminating July 14 in his marriage at Philadelphia to his former adopted daughter, Lydie Roberts, for whom he built a mansion here.

Marland was a student at Western university, now Pittsburgh university, and obtained a law degree from the University of Michigan so young that he had to wait two years before he could be admitted to the bar in Pennsylvania. At his majority, he then associated himself with a firm which handled the legal business of coal interests. His study of coal mining interested him in geology.

He entered the oil business in West Virginia with the opening of the Congo district, prospered and married. The panic of 1907 wiped out his gradually accumulating fortune.

Hunch Paid Out

In 1908 he came to Oklahoma where, until that time, only the gushers at Bartlesville were evidence of vast oil wealth. While riding on the 101 Ranch near Ponca City, he noted geological formations that determined him to drill in that region. Borrowing drilling equipment, he sank a successful well.

Marland worked with the drilling crew. This well was the origin of his rapidly rising success and mounting fortune. With the oil boom in 1912 he became a commanding figure in the petroleum industry.

MORAN QUITS TEXAS CORPORATION

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 (AP).—D. J. Moran has resigned as vice president, director and member of the executive committee of the Texas corporation. This resignation, it is understood in Wall street, is preliminary to Mr. Moran being elected president of the Marland Oil company of Oklahoma.

Hotel Owner Bags Bear And Buys Hunting Ground

EAGLE PASS, Texas, Oct. 29 (AP)—T. B. Baker, hotel owner, has bought a ranch because he had a successful hunting trip.

He sent two big black bears, which will weigh about 1,100 pounds together, to Piedras Negras, Mexico border town, to be put on cold storage. And because he was able to bag these, he has purchased the ranch, 75 miles from the border, it was reported.

Right of City To Buy Airport Tested In Case

DALLAS, Oct. 29 (AP).—The legal right of a city to own and operate a municipal airport is at stake in a suit which opened in district court here today in which an injunction is sought to restrain the city of Dallas from purchasing an airport.

ONE FOR HOOVER

Pullet Lays Egg Marked With Initials Of Candidate

SHERMAN, Texas, Oct. 29. (AP)—Herbert Hoover got a hay nest ballot here today.

A White Leghorn pullet cast her "absentee ballot" for the Republican presidential nominee in the form of an otherwise ordinary egg bearing the clearly formed initials "H. H." The initials were about half an inch high and three-eighths of an inch in width, and were smoother than the remainder of the egg's surface.

The ballot is literally an "absentee" vote because the pullet "won't be here after Sunday," her owner, R. C. Hart, a Hoover supporter, said.

JURY INDICTS THRILL KILLERS

Georgia Collegians Billed On Two Charges

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 29. (AP)—The Fulton county grand jury late today returned two joint indictments against George Harsh and Richard Gallogly, Oglethorpe students, charging them with the murder Oct. 6 of E. E. Meek, grocery clerk, and Willard Smith, a pharmacist's clerk, who was shot to death during a holdup Oct. 16.

The charges were laid before the grand jury late today. In his confession Harsh said he fired the fatal shots which resulted in the deaths of E. E. Meeks, chain grocery store clerk, and Willard Smith, pharmacist's clerk, and that the automobile in which they escaped at the time of the holdups was driven by Gallogly.

A. Lamar Poole, chief of detectives, announced he had completed his evidence and was ready for trial before a jury immediately.

Attorneys for Gallogly filed habeas corpus proceedings this afternoon.

L. V. Ellis, a clerk of the chain grocery store, where Meeks was fatally shot in one of the holdups, filed suit today for $50,000 against Harsh and Gallogly. The suit alleged that Ellis was shot by the same man who killed Meeks. Harsh has confessed he was the one who fired the fatal shots.

The youths are scions of prominent families.

YOUTH'S PALS EVEN IN JAIL

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 29. (INS)—George Harsh, self-styled "thrill" slayer, and Richard Gallogly, his alleged accomplice, are friends, in jail and out.

Gallogly, catching a glimpse of a newspaper report of his "estrangement" with Harsh, whose confession led to his arrest, declared "there's not a word of truth in it."

"I think more of George Harsh today than I ever did," said Gallogly. "We are still fast friends."

Gallogly denies any connection with the two slayings. Harsh in an alleged confession, declared he was a partner in the holdups which led to the two slayings.

SMITH BLAMES G. O. P. LEADERS FOR KLAN WORK

Baltimore Audience Hears Pungent Address On Bigotry, Etc.

PROMISES NEW ORDER

Many Changes in Conduct Of Government Affairs Needed, He Says

FIFTH REGIMENT ARMORY, BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 29. (UP)—Governor Alfred E. Smith told a Baltimore audience tonight that there was abundant testimony that the campaign activity of the Ku Klux Klan was encouraged by some of the leaders of the Republican party.

Denouncing the klan and the Anti-Saloon league with characteristic vehemence, the Democratic presidential condidate repeated what he called "my first adherence to the American doctrine of absolute separation of church and state."

Cites Testimony

In his effort to tie up the Republican campaign with the klan, Smith cited the following testimony:

A published notice of a joint meeting under the auspices of the klan in New Jersey which he said was to be held in conjunction with the Republican national committee.

A newspaper article charging that the publisher of "The Fellowship Forum," an anti-Catholic publication in Washington, who also is chairman of the Republican state committee of Virginia, "was in the party of Mr. Hoover on his trip to Elizabethton, Tenn."

Burning of the fiery cross beside the tracks as the Smith special train passed last Saturday night through Indiana, which spectacle Smith said he had been informed "was intended as a defiance of the klan to my presence in the state."

Hollow Mockery

Smith laid a scathing attack upon the principles of the klan, saying:

"They are entirely, to my mind, without any understanding of the fundamentals of American thought and American ideals. That they are actively engaged in promoting the cause of the Republican party, nobody would have the hardihood to deny, and there is abundant testimony that their activity is encouraged by some of the leaders of the Republican party.

"What a hollow mockery!

"Men professing a belief in Christianity and in Americanism to find it necessary to raise between Heaven and earth the emblem of the Christian faith as a defiance to me because of my religious belief!

"I would rather go down to ig-

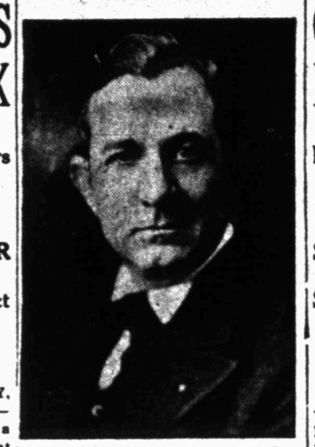
Coming Back



Congressman Tom Connally likes Wichita county Democrats. At least the senator-elect indicates he does, having accepted an invitation Monday to make his third address here this year. He will speak at the Democratic rally Friday night.

TOM CONNALLY HERE FRIDAY

Senator-Elect to Appear In Demo Rally

Tom Connally, Democratic nominee for the United States senate who received a tremendous vote in Wichita Falls and Wichita county that placed him at the head of all his opponents here in both the first and second primaries, was announced Monday by Mrs. C. B. Smedley, for the Woman's Democratic league, as the principal speaker for Democracy's greatest rally here which is to be held in the Wichita Falls Memorial auditorium Friday night.

Mr. Connally, who is now the United States congressman for this district, is speaking here for the third time this year. His first address was at the dedication of the Memorial auditorium, and was a non-political address. His second talk was on behalf of his candidacy during the primary campaign and was heard by 6,000 persons.

Singer on Program

Principal honors Friday night here will be shared by Mr. Connally with Dorothy Greathouse, grand opera star, who is to sing on the same program.

The speakers' bureau of the National Democratic party has had Mr. Connally speaking on behalf of Gov. Alfred E. Smith in mid-western states and has just released him.

Telegrams and telephone calls by Charles I. Francis, member of the state committee and local Democratic leader, to W. A. Thomas, Texas Democratic campaign manager, and C. C. Renfro, head of the speakers' bureau in Dallas, were necessary Monday before it was possible to announce Mr. Connally's address here. Mr. Francis also talked over the long distance telephone with Mr. Connally who is at his home in Marlin where he has just returned from Washington.

Three Speeches

Three speeches will be given by the congressman this week and they will close his campaign.

Houston will hear him Thursday night. He will be here Friday night, and then he will go to Dallas for a radio speech which will be broadcast on a radio hookup covering the state.

Mrs. Smedley said Monday night that detailed plans of the meeting are being rushed and will be announced as soon as possible.

Dirigible Follows North Atlantic Ship Lane To Europe

STOWAWAY ABOARD

St. Louis Caddy Filches Ride Across Sea On Monster Liner

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Oct. 29. (US)—Two reports of the Graf Zeppelin passing over New Foundland were received here tonight. One from Burin, a hamlet in New Foundland, said the giant airship had passed over there at 6 p. m. (5 p. m. E. S. T.). The other from Hillview on Trinity Bay, reported the airship "circling from side to side."

Neither report was verified and if true would place the Graf Zeppelin far out of the announced course. The reports also stated a hurricane was blowing from the southwest accompanied by fog and rain which made visibility poor.

The last definite position from the Graf Zeppelin was at 2 p. m. (E. S. T.) when the big airship sent its position as 47:17 degrees north latitude and 59:12 degrees west longitude.

HALIFAX, N. S., Oct. 29. (AP)—The naval radio station tonight received a wireless communication from the Canso station reporting the latter branch was in touch with the Graf Zeppelin momentarily at 6:50 p. m., Atlantic standard time, but that no information regarding the Zeppelin's position was obtained owing to extremely bad atmospheric conditions.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29. (AP)—Carrying the first transatlantic air stowaway—a blond American youth in his 'teens—the German air liner Graf Zeppelin was homeward bound tonight over the north Atlantic.

The huge ship, whose arrival in the United States just two weeks ago today thrilled the Atlantic seaboard by her majestic size and power, bade farewell to her American hosts at 6:15 o'clock this morning and turned her blunt nose from the Massachusetts coast out to sea in a wide swing toward Nova Scotia and Newfoundland.

Wichita Republicans Put County's Vote at 12,000 and Claim 7-5 Edge

The vote in Wichita county will be about 12,000 and Herbert Hoover will carry the county by an average vote of 7 to 5.

This was the opinion expressed by precinct chairman of all precincts in Wichita county at the final Republican campaign meeting in the Hamilton building Monday night. About 50 chairmen and precinct workers attended.

The estimates are said to be based on the observations of the probable turnout for voting by the chairmen who were present from Electra, Iowa Park, Burkburnett and other parts of the county. The meeting was the first one held in which there has been a full turnout from these precincts, according to O. R. Hartt, county Republican chairman.

Discussion and explanation of the election laws consumed a major part of the evening. Copies of the law were given to all recinct workers, with special emphasis on the duties of precinct supervisors and challengers.

The supervisors, whose duty it is to observe the legal conduct of the election, are decided upon and ominious defeat than to be raised to the greatest position in the gift of the people by an influence that may be exerted by any organization with such perverted ideas of Americanism.

Smith Blames G. O. P. for Klan

"While I think of them as a small group of misled, if not ignorant people, nevertheless this campaign brings home to the electors that the klan is one of the forces behind the Republican party."

Smith was equally bold and emphatic in his attack upon the Anti-Saloon league, to which he attributed "narrow, prejudiced and bigoted ideas." The nominee said the league had issued a threat against Senator Norris of Nebraska because he recently pledged his support to the Democratic ticket.

"I can think of no greater force for evil in this country than an organization which, through any of its spokesmen, threatens disaster to the public statesman who does not submit to its dictation," the governor added.

From these charges he launched into an effort to dispel any idea that prohibition is a dogma of religion.

"I know of no church," he said, "in this country, that makes Volsteadism of the 18th amendment an article of religious faith.

"You cannot make a new sin by law. If it is not inscribed on the tablets of stone that were handed down to Moses on the Mount, it is not a sin. The Volstead act was not passed until 1919 and then over the veto of President Wilson."

Smith took as the theme of his speech an attack upon the "old order of things," especially with reference to foreign policy, tariff, water power, government reorganization and prohibition. He promised if elected to institute a new order of things designed to make the government "constructive and not destructive, progressive and not reactionary."

Golden Rule Policy

The candidate said his foreign policy, if he were elected, would be based upon the simple rule: "Do unto others as you would have others do unto you." He said he would eliminate the friction between the state department and the senate which he contended has grown up in the last few years.

"I am satisfied the American people will no longer tolerate interference within the internal affairs of South American republics," he added:

"Ask Senator Borah, for example what he thinks of the foreign policy of the present Republican administration in so far as it applies to our intervention in an election dispute in Nicaragua.

"Under my administration there will be no diplomacy practiced that will permit the exploitation of weaker nations.

"The Republican party holds out but little hope to the American people for a forward looking foreign policy, in view of the fact that Mr. Hoover promises to follow the Coolidge policies, which policies have been uniformly—in season and out of season—denounced on the floor of the senate by the Republican chairman of the committee on foreign relations," (Borah.)

Smith said that while he believed the American people would always be ready and willing to assume their share of responsibility for the administration of the world, they would not enter political alliance with any foreign nation."

Assurance to Norris

The candidate took notice of Norris' declaration for him Saturday night and said:

"I want to take this opportunity to assure him publicly that he will never have any cause to regret what he said with respect to my attitude toward these great public questions—"water power, farm relief and foreign relations."

In his condemnation of the Republican campaign, Smith resurrected the Republican party slogan of the 1920 campaign, "Let's be done with Wiggly and Wobbly." He sought to show that his Republican opponent was wiggling and wobbling on the issues he mentioned, particularly prohibition and water power. It was the shortest speech Smith had delivered in the campaign and one of the most pungent.

Governor Albert Ritchie, of Maryland, presided at the meeting. He made a speech before Smith arrived declaring religion should not be made a qualification for office, and saying the Democratic candidate would restore progressive government.

"I plead with my Republican friends now to get in with us and elect Al Smith to a second term in 1932," Ritchie added.

A demonstration was staged by the crowd when Governor Ritchie said: "If there is any man in this audience against Smith on account of his religion, let me ask him this, do you really think the pope has been biding his time for 300 years, waiting for Al Smith's nomination?"

Long Demonstration

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, widow of the late president entered the armory and took her place on the speakers' stand.

Governor Smith started speaking at 9:30 p. m.

The demonstration for him lasted for 15 minutes. The crowd used horns and whistles and filled the air with torn shreds of paper. When their voices became hoarse they sang the "Sidewalks of New York."

Mrs. Wilson posed for the crowd between the governor and Mrs. Smith, taking Smith by the hand.

Farmers Helped By Heavy Rain

any consequence the farmers of Hall county have experienced since they began the gathering of this year's cotton crop, and they have made good use of the excellent weather that has prevailed the past 45 days.

Up to Saturday night there had been more than 22,000 bales of cotton ginned by the eight gins in the town of Memphis alone, and there are 23 other gins in Hall county. It is safely estimated that the total for Hall county has passed the 35,000 mark already, and it is said the crop is hardly half gathered.

No damage is reported from the rain that fell this morning, as there was no wind accompanying the rain.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29. (US)—Decisions of lower courts holding that army officers were not entitled to land grant deductions on the transportation of horses owned by them will be reviewed by the United States supreme court, it was announced today.

The appeal was made by the government, after the Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio Railroad company successfully defended their claim in the lower courts.

Weather Bureau Warning Delays Flight to Rome

NEW YORK, Oct. 29. (US)—Roger Q. Williams and Pietro Bonelli who today planned to take off on their flight to Rome from Roosevelt field, were held back by warnings from the weather bureau that there were three "bad spots" on the Atlantic.

The ship, the Roma, formerly the Columbia, in which Clarence Chamberlin spanned the Atlantic, is fully loaded and ready for the takeoff which is expected to be tomorrow morning if better weather reports are secured.

Fried OYSTERS

Select large oysters. Wash them, sprinkle with salt and pepper and dip first in bread crumbs, then in beaten egg and again in bread crumbs. Place in a wire basket and drop into deep Crisco heated until it browns a cube of bread in 40 seconds. Fry until nicely browned. Drain on paper. Serve hot with tomato sauce or catsup.

What a will-o'-the-wisp flavor the real sea tang of the oyster is! Oysters simply must be fried in a delicate fat to preserve their native flavor. And if you want to know how delicate a fat can be—just taste Crisco as it comes sweet and fresh from the can.

You taste your milk— You test your eggs— NOW— taste your shortening!

Crisco's sweet flavor will delight you!

Dragon Sends Al Full Confession

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 29. (AP)—James A. Comer, grand dragon of the Arkansas realm of the Ku Klux Klan who was criticised by Gov. Alfred E. Smith in his Oklahoma City speech a month ago today made public a letter he said he had sent to Governor Smith outlining his reasons for opposing his election to the presidency.

Comer was criticised by the Democratic presidential candidate for writing a letter to a delegate to the Houston convention asking the delegate to oppose Smith's nomination because he is a Catholic.

In his letter to Governor Smith, Comer admitted writing the letter and reiterated his opposition to Smith because of his religion.

"I did not and would not oppose you wholly upon your religious views," Comer added, "however, were it not for the fact that your religious views are so inseparably connected and attached to the Roman Catholic hierarchy which represents a viewpoint that is largely unAmerican."

Waco Hotel Suffers $100,000 Fire Damage

Witness Under Bond To Appear in Adams' Trial

DALLAS, Oct. 29. (AP)—W. Tom Ramsey, star defense witness for V. Ray Adams, charged with murder for the slaying of Orville Mathews on a crowded street here Sept. 1 as a result of an election bet argument, is under $10,000 bond to appear in Adams' trial here Dec. 3. The case was continued today.

GIRLS! YOU CAN START THIS VERY DAY TO CLEAR UP UGLY "BROKEN OUT" SKIN

Girls! This is especially addressed to you because in this day and age when almost everyone has a clear, beautiful complexion, any girl whose skin is all broken out with ugly pimples, eczema, etc., is under a terrible handicap.

It's a shame your skin is like that—but don't be discouraged and don't fret—while most things you've tried have most likely failed, here's something that will start right away to help you heal your skin swiftly.

It's called Heiskell's Ointment and for years it has been helping thousands of other girls, and men, too, many of them far worse off than you, to completely get rid of all disfiguring skin eruptions.

Any druggist can supply you with Heiskell's Ointment but, girls!—when you ask for the Ointment, get a cake of Heiskell's Medicated Soap, too. Ordinary soaps only too often contain something that irritates the skin and keep it inflamed and so retard results you get from the Ointment. If you use Heiskell's Soap, though, especially medicated to prepare the skin for the Ointment, you'll speed up results wonderfully and that's what you want. This combination treatment of Heiskell's Ointment and Heiskell's Soap will certainly amaze you at the quick results it gives and what a glorious feeling it will be to look in the mirror and see a skin such as you have always longed for—delicate, smooth, flawless—really yours! Don't forget—get both the Ointment and the Soap and for less than a dollar you get a new complexion that can't be priced in terms of money.—Advt.

NOTED MURDER CASE REVIVED

Sacco, Vanzetti Innocent, Magazine Claims

By SAM LOVE

NEW YORK Oct. 29. (UP)—Although Sacco and Vanzetti have been dead more than a year, the battle which raged around the two radicals has been revived by the Outlook magazine and a Broadway play almost simultaneously.

The play, "Gods of Lightning," assumes forthrightly and bitterly that the fishmonger and the shoemaker were innocent of the Braintree murders and holdup for which they were executed. Its opening nights were marked by prolonged applause.

The magazine makes an attempt to cast fresh doubt on the justice of the executions by devoting almost its entire issue to the results of a private investigation. This, it asserts, shows proofs that Bartolomeo Vanzetti was erroneously convicted of an earlier holdup and that the conviction militated against both radicals in the subsequent trial that sent them to the chair.

New "Confession"

In addition to printing a new "confession" in affidavit form by an ex-convict named Frank Silva that he and three other men committed the Bridgewater crime and that Vanzetti had nothing to do with it, the Outlook asserts that it has verified Silva's statements. Its editor, Francis Rufus Bellamy, offers to lay his findings before Gov. Alvin T. Fuller of Massachusetts.

Advance copies of the magazine reveal that the Outlook's affidavits fight over the old ground of the Bridgewater holdup and leave the question of Vanzetti's guilt in the murders for which he was convicted just where it was before, insofar as known facts are concerned.

Silva names as his accomplices in the Bridgewater holdup Michael (Doggy) Bruno, Joseph Sanmarco and Guinea Oates, all Italians. Sanmarco is now serving a life sentence at Atlanta for killing a Boston policeman. Silva thinks Bruno is serving "time" in New York. He does not know where Oates is.

Details Verified

Silva's affidavit describes the affair in detail. It was a gun battle between the bandits and men on a truck containing the pay roll of the L. O. White Shoe company, which escaped capture when a street car came between the combatants. The Outlook says it has verified details given by Silva, including some not given by Silva at the trial.

This holdup took place on the morning of Dec. 24, 1919. The South Braintree robbery and killings occurred on April 15, 1920. Sacco and Vanzetti were arrested on May 5, 1920, three weeks after the more serious crime. They were charged with both crimes and the authorities elected to try the Bridgewater holdup case first. Sacco and another Italian, Orciani, easily proved alibis and the Bridgewater charges against them were dropped.

But Vanzetti's statements that he was selling eels and fish at the time went for nothing. He was convicted alone and sentenced to 15 years' imprisonment in state prison at Charlestown by Judge Webster Thayer.

The real "Sacco-Vanzetti" trial followed this, and on the heels of his previous conviction Vanzetti and Nicolo Sacco were found guilty of the South Braintree murders and sentenced to death.

Planned Holdup

Silva's affidavit that Vanzetti was innocent of the Bridgewater holdup is bolstered in the Outlook by another, signed by James (Big Chief) Mede, former proprietor of a shoe shine parlor in Hanover street, Boston. Mede asserts that he originally planned the Bridgewater holdup with Silva, but was prevented from attending it by receiving a sentence for a minor stickup in Cambridge, Mass. He later met Sanmarco in prison, he says, and heard the details as related by Silva in his affidavit.

Mede also claims that he told Governor Fuller "in confidence" about Sanmarco's confession but that the governor called a state police officer and Mede hastily fled the state house.

The Outlook also attempts to bolster Vanzetti's eel-selling alibi by printing a photostatic copy of an express company receipt showing that a barrel of live eels was consigned to Vanzetti by a Boston firm on Dec. 25, 1919.

Silas Bent, writer and newspaperman, suggested its probe of the Bridgewater crime, the Outlook says. It was conducted with the assistance of a former bank burglar named Jack Callahan.

GOV. FULLER THINKS "CONFESSION" FALSE

BOSTON, Oct. 29. (UP)—Several persons who were officially connected with the Sacco-Vanzetti case told the United Press today that the results of the investigation undertaken by the magazine, Outlook, were unconvincing.

At the same time, Gardner Jackson, head of the Sacco-Vanzetti defense committee, hailed the Outlook's report as proof of the committee's claim that Sacco and Vanzetti were innocent.

Among those whose belief in the guilt of the so-called anarchists remained unshaken after reading the "confession" of Frank Silva, were Gov. Alvan T. Fuller of Massachusetts, Henry S. Burgess of Wareham, foreman of the jury in Vanzetti's Bridgewater trial, and Alfred L. Atwood of Norwood, a member of the jury in the Sacco-Vanzetti Braintree trial.

To the request of Francis Rufus Bellamy, Outlook publisher-editor, for an interview relative to the magazine's findings, Governor Fuller, through his secretary, replied as follows:

"My dear Mr. Bellamy:

"This is to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of Oct. 22, 1928, and in the governor's absence I write to say that he has already received and read an advance copy of your publication of October 31. Therefore, it is unnecessary for you to make a visit to Boston to show him one.

"I might add that he stated that he is not any more impressed with this confession than he was with the confession of Madeiros.

"Signed: German A. MacDonald."

The "Madeiros" mentioned in the letter of the governor's secretary was Celestino Madeiros, young New Bradford Portuguese, who went to the electric chair with Sacco and Vanzetti, but for another crime.

It was on Madeiros' reputed confession to implication in the Braintree murders that the world famous eleventh-hour battle to save Sacco and Vanzetti was based. It was the opinion of both Governor Fuller and the investigating commission which he appointed, that the Madeiros "confession" was false.

Demo Traditions and Party Loyalty In Solid South Assure Smith Victory

Superior Organization Handicap to G. O. P. Here; Demo Success in Texas Seen By Slight Margin

By RAYMOND CLAPPER

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 29. (UP)—The South is emerging from one of the worst campaigns since reconstruction days apparently still loyal to the Democratic party.

Governor Smith probably will carry all of the 10 solid southern states—comprising 114 electoral votes—but only by the greatest effort in some instances.

Hoover is, in this correspondent's judgment, likely to poll an extremely heavy vote especially in Texas, Florida and North Carolina but not enough to win any of the solid ten.

The entire south is stirred as never before in this generation. Even those who are supporting Smith are at odds with him on many points and are moved only by a sense of party loyalty, and often by the feeling that white supremacy might be endangered by a Republican victory in the South this year. Smith's supporters in the South quite generally disagree with him on prohibition, and immigration. There also is deep antagonism to his church. They do not like his Tammany background. Many genuinely admire some of his legislative achievements and his courage.

The Democratic party is something more to the South than just a political party. To many the Republican party still is the political organization which crushed their grandfathers and fathers in the days when negroes and carpetbaggers ran riot over the desolated South during reconstruction. So when the average man in the South breaks with the Democratic party, he is breaking with this tradition. And it is so hard for most of them to do it that thousands will refuse to vote for Smith but will not vote for Hoover. This deep-seated loyalty to the Democratic party is fundamental to all politics in the South.

The result of this feeling has been that in many states the Republican party has not existed. In Texas, Mississippi and in most of the solid 10, Republicans do not put up state tickets. Only scattered groups of federal office holders, and their associates often negroes, vote for the Republican presidential ticket in some places in the South. In many counties there are less than a dozen Republican votes.

Election Disorder Feared

The Democratic party has the superior organization in every southern state—often the only organization. In this campaign Republicans and anti-Smith Democrats have hastily thrown together organizations, but for the most part these will be inadequate to compete with the Democratic organizations on election day. Some states like Georgia and North Carolina do not have the secret Australian ballot in many counties and the open ballot works in favor of the Democrats. Anti-Smith Democrats and Republicans intend to man precincts this time to insure a fair count. Feeling is high and some fear disorders at the polls.

In all of these states the Democratic organization has remained practically intact except for the bolt of Senator Simmons in North Carolina and the bolters have been individuals, ministers and defeated office holders with no future in the party organization. In every southern state the Democratic organization is functioning practically 100 per cent for Smith. Neither Simmons nor Heflin have carried away any of the organization.

Survey of States

Following is a brief survey of these states:

Arkansas—Twelve electoral votes. This is the home state of Senator Robinson, vice presidential candidate. No Republican has publicly claimed Hoover had a chance there.

Alabama—Nine votes. This is the home of Senator Heflin. Democrats have been obtained to stand as Hoover presidential electors. Gov. Bib Graves, elected governor by the klan, it is said, is supporting Smith. Republicans are making no claims.

Florida—Six votes. An influx of northern Republicans has built up a large prospective Hoover vote. Some Democrats are uneasy and while sure of victory they fear a close vote.

Georgia—Fourteen votes. There is intense activity for Hoover but the Democratic organization is solidly behind Smith and has no fear for him.

Louisiana—Ten votes. Conceded to Smith by all fair judges.

Mississippi—Ten votes. Democratic beyond serious question.

North Carolina — Twelve votes. The Hoover vote is expected to be tremendous, but short of Smith's. North Carolina is to be analyzed in a subsequent dispatch.

South Carolina—Nine votes. Republicans aren't even trying here.

Slight Texas Margin

Texas—Twenty votes. Republicans have a strong organization but the fact that only those who paid poll taxes last spring can vote prevents many who have been aroused during the anti-Smith campaign from being eligible to vote. Churches are conducting an intense anti-Smith campaign. The Democratic state organization is solidly backing Smith—headed by Senator Morris Sheppard, author of the prohibition amendment. Smith should win but not by any large margin.

Virginia — Twelve votes. Here again the Smith fight is being waged by the regular drys of the Democratic organiation headed by Senators Glass and Swanson and Governor Byrd. Bishop Cannon is heading the anti-Smith movement and much feeling has been aroused. Republicans privately have little hope of Virginia.

A scientist predicts that in a few years people working indoors will work under lamps whose rays will be beneficial as the sun's.

COLDS MAY DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

COTTON MILLER OF DENISON ENDORSES IT

"I Think Orgatone the Most Efficient Medicine I Have Ever Taken," He Says.

W. S. Dunaway, a well known cotton miller residing on rural route 3, Denison, Texas, is an ardent believer in Orgatone, as the following statement shows:

"I suffered from stomach trouble and gall stones," said Mr. Dunaway, "and had severe pains in my side and up around the region of my heart. These complications had extended over a period of about eight years, and my sufferings were hard to bear. After every meal I'd get nauseated and was almost unable to retain what I had eaten. I lost in weight and was in a general run-down condition, had little or no energy and was feeling miserable all the time. I tried first one medicine and then another, but didn't get any relief, so I bought some Orgatone, and it wasn't long in putting me in first class condition, and several other people in my neighborhood are now taking it with just as good results as I am receiving.

"Because of my experience with Orgatone, I am going to keep on the treatment a while longer as it has done me so much good I feel confident that my relief will be permanent. I am feeling just as well as I ever did, having taken nothing but Orgatone, which I think is the most efficient medicine I have ever heard of or taken."

See the special representative direct from the Orgatone laboratories, who has established headquarters at Allison's Drug store, introducing and explaining the medicine. Proclaimed by thousands to be the most effective, agreeable stomach medicine on the market, proven satisfactory and beneficial for over a million people in the past few months.—Adv.

W. M. S. of First Baptist Church Holds 'Fifth Monday' Entertainment

Members of the Women's Missionary society of the First Baptist church were entertained with a "Fifth Monday" party at the church Monday afternoon.

Mrs. A. W. Eichenberger was in charge of the program which was made up of the following numbers: Two violin selections by Mrs. J. E. Hall accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Lucille Brooks Huff; a reading by Mrs. R. L. DeLee; a vocal solo by Mrs. Jerry Schaeffer, accompanied on the organ by Mrs. F. H. Collard; a piano duet by Misses Lois Baber and Harriett Wise.

J. L. Jackson Jr., showed a motion picture made at the national convention of the Kiwanis clubs held in Seattle, Wash., during the summer. He gave a description of places visited and lectured during the show.

The fall box prepared by the Missionary society for the Buckner Orphans' home in Dallas was placed on display. More than 400 dresses made by members were shown among garments displayed.

Refreshments following the color idea of yellow and black were served by the social committee and the social chairman. The committee members were dressed in clever Halloween costumes. The church parlors were decorated in a general color scheme in which giant yellow Chrysanthemums predominated.

About 100 members attended the party.

Methodist W. M. S. Has Special Mission Study

Members of the Missionary society of the First Methodist church held a special mission study day at the church at 11 o'clock Monday when the meeting was devided into two sections.

Mrs. N. H. Martin opened the meeting with devotionals after which Mrs. W. C. Gilliland and Mrs. R. L. Underwood reviewed the first half of Mable K. Hall's "Women of the Kingdom," which is the mission study book for this year.

At 12:15 members were invited to the dining room and were served luncheon. The dining room was attractively decorated with flowers, chrysanthemums predominating.

Immediately following the luncheon E. F. Bohmfolk and Joel McGregor sang a duet.

The afternoon session was opened with a prayer by Mrs. C. B. Haynie after which Mr. Q. B. Lee and Mrs. Guy Raley continued the review of the study book.

Mrs. A. D. Duck gave three readings and Mrs. E. B. Gorsline, who had charge of the program, introduced the teacher for the coming year, Dr. S. S. McKenney. The meeting was closed with the Lord's prayer.

Flower Carnival Plans Being Completed

Preparations for the opening event of the Woman's Forum annual flower carnival, "Twilight in Gypsyland," and the crowning of the Rose queen are rapidly moving to completion.

Finishing touches are being added to the musical extravaganza, "Twilight in Gypsyland," and acceptances of out of town princesses are rapidly coming in. Word was received by Mrs. Ben G. Oneal Monday that Miss Virginia Hood will represent Nocona; Miss Mae Fields will represent Henrietta and Miss Francis Thomas will represent Bowie.

Seats for the two entertainments were placed on sale at the McConnell Brothers Furniture store Monday.

Decorated Tables To Add to Flower Show

Probably one of the most attractive ideas from the novelty and beauty standpoint to be featured in the Woman's Forum flower carnial will be decorated tables. On Tuesday, Nov. 6, a prize will be offered for the most beautiful luncheon table and on Wednesday a prize will be given for the most attractive dinner table. These tables will be furnished by the local furniture merchants, who will also furnish flowers and other decorations necessary for a beautifully appointed table.

The tables will be judged from an artistic standpoint and the china, table cover, glasswere and floral designs will be considered.

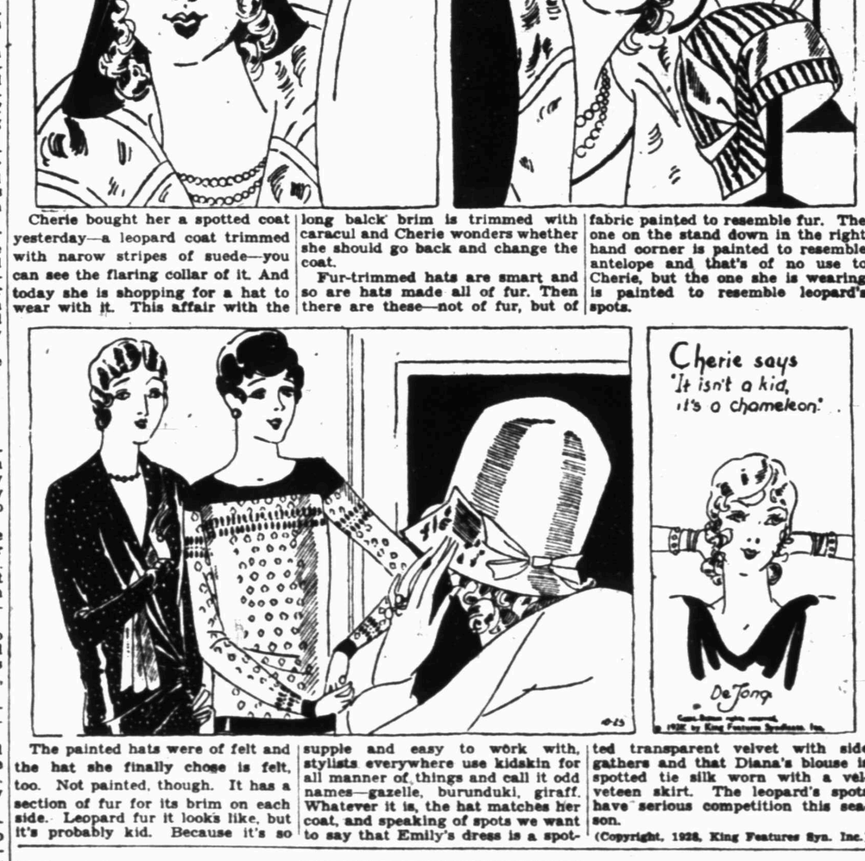
CHIC CHERIE — Latest Fashions



Cherie bought her a spotted coat yesterday—a leopard coat trimmed with narow stripes of suede—you can see the flaring collar of it. And today she is shopping for a hat to wear with it. This affair with the long balck brim is trimmed with caracul and Cherie wonders whether she should go back and change the coat.

Fur-trimmed hats are smart and so are hats made all of fur. Then there are these—not of fur, but of fabric painted to resemble fur. The one on the stand down in the right hand corner is painted to resemble antelope and that's of no use to Cherie, but the one she is wearing is painted to resemble leopard's spots.

The painted hats were of felt and the hat she finally chose is felt, too. Not painted, though. It has a section of fur for its brim on each side. Leopard fur it looks like, but it's probably kid. Because it's so supple and easy to work with, stylists everywhere use kidskin for all manner of things and call it odd names—gazelle, burunduki, giraff. Whatever it is, the hat matches her coat, and speaking of spots we want to say that Emily's dress is a spotted transparent velvet with side gathers and that Diana's blouse is spotted tie silk worn with a velveteen skirt. The leopard's spots have serious competition this season.

Mrs. Lindbergh Wins Admiration of Turks

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 29. (AP)—Though Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh slipped so quietly into Constantinople that few are yet aware of her presence, she nevertheless has won instant popularity with those who have seen and recognized her.

Eloquent was the comment of a young Turkish airplane pilot who was one of the few spectators at Buyukdere when the Italian hydroplane swept Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's mother down to the European shore of the Bosphorus.

"She is a high lady," he said in the idiom of the Orient after he had caught his first glimpse of Mrs. Lindbergh. "Yuksek kadin, a high lady, and she looks so much like her lofty son that my soul blossoms as though I had seen him, himself!"

Place in Opera Turned Down by Russian Priest

MOSCOW, Oct. 29. (INS)—Holmo Gorov, a priest of the Greek Orthodox church, with a voice reputed to be as fine as Challapin's, spurned a fat contract as soloist in the Moscow Grand opera because he refused to appear in public without his sacerdotal black robes.

Father Gorov, a giant 6 feet 6 with a fiery red beard flowing down to his waist, is famous for his chantry singing throughout Russia. His church is jammed for every service. His participation at funeral masses is sought by hundreds every year.

On this reputation the directorate of the grand opera invited him to sing in the old Russian operas two nights a week. He was offered, it was said, $10,000 for the season, a fabulous price for Moscow where the opera runs into a deficit of $100,000 a year despite a government subsidy. Father Gorov refused because according to the canons of the church no priest may don any other but the prescribed robes in public.

FIRST LADY TO VISIT 'RETREAT'

Mrs. Coolidge Plans to Rest In Maryland

By CORINNE RICH

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29. (US)—When the First Lady of the Land moves out of the White House next March, she won't be forsaking the national capital altogether.

'True, she probably will settle down to private life far from these environs, but she means to come back often to visit.

There's a little White House over in Maryland, just outside the District line, a modest cottage with vines and a garden. It's to be a "retreat" for Mrs. Coolidge whenever she wants to visit it. One of its two small bedrooms is hers from now on. It's been promised—and accepted.

Old School Chum

For living there alone is Miss Stella Stewart, a friend of Mrs. Coolidge's since they went to school together in New England. The executive lady has visited her several times recently, driving up to the green terraced front yard in an elegant White House limousine.

It is doubtful whether Miss Stewart has been to see Mrs. Coolidge since the latter has been a presidential wife, because she would never do anything that might appear to be making out of old friendship.

For Miss Stewart is a wholesome, modest, cheery, rather retiring sort of somebody, the type of solid citizen Mrs. Coolidge especially likes.

You won't find Miss Stewart moving in the top circles of capital society. She's one of thousands of women who "work for the government." Every day the little white house is locked up from morning till evening while the mistress is doing her job.

It's such a pretty place, the little white cottage. Located on a highway on the outskirts of Silver Spring, itself a small town, and a half hour from the center of Washington by bus, it is surrounded by other unpretentious homes where dogs and children play in the yards and women visit each other in friendly fashion.

It is made of snowy clapboards. There is a tiny front porch with a swing and a red brick chimney running up one side. The foundation is banked with shrubbery and a rose vine climbs up the chimney.

Neat Garden Spot

The pride of the whole place is the garden that occupies a large space in the rear. Just now the larger plants are frost-bitten and diminutive growing things lie snug and warm under glass jars.

The neighbors are interested in this garden and Mrs. Coolidge has sent Miss Stewart many bulbs and plants from the White House greenhouse for it. Both like to see things grow and no doubt on her coming visits there they will happily dig in the ground together.

Mrs. Coolidge is quite keen on the idea of being Miss Stewart's guest during envisoned sojourns in the capital, when she no longer has a home here. You may see a flag floating from the roof of the little White House, signifying Mrs. Coolidge's being "in residence," almost any time after next spring. Miss Stewart has decided upon that.

Lucy Hansel Guild Meets Jointly With W. M. S. of Church

The Lucy Hansel guild and the Women's Missionary society of the First Presbyterian church met in joint session at the church for 1 o'clock luncheon Monday.

Circles one and three were hostesses for the occasion. The feature of the Halloween decorative scheme was the special birthday table set in honor of the birthday anniversary of Dr. Nat F. Grafton, pastor of the church. Place cards were placed for 12 special birthday table guests for which places were drawn by members. Guests seated at the birthday table gave toasts to Dr. Grafton.

The program was as follows: Stewardship pageant of "Mother Goose" by the primary department of the Sunday school; devotional by Mrs. H. E. Patterson on the stewardship of love and musical selections.

Announcement was made of a missionary study class on Nov. 13 and a special school of missions for the first week in December.

About 100 members and guests attended the luncheon.

DON'T STAY FAT IN THESE DAYS

You see countless people who have gained new beauty, new health and vim, by fighting excess fat. Some have done this by abnormal exercise and diet, some in a modern, scientific way. Why not follow their example?

There is a way based on scientific research. It combats a cause of excess fat which starvation cannot fight. That method is embodied in Marmola prescription tablets, now used for 20 years. Millions of boxes of them. The results you see wherever you look should induce you to accept them.

Each box of Marmola contains the formula, also the reasons for results. So there is no secret, no reason to fear harm. You will know that all the good results come in a natural way. Go learn them now, by asking your druggist for a $1 box of Marmola.

Relative Importance of Love To Each Sex Discussed By Woman

Deciding the Chivalry of Men—Is Love More Important to Men Or Women?—What to Do With a Fiancee Who Refuses to Break Off Engagement

Dear Dorothy Dix—Alice is in love with a married man and lives with him and his wife and glories in the happiness that she finds. If he were free, I am sure he would marry her, for he seems to return the devotion that means so much to her. Betty lives with a single man. He could marry her and give her a nice home, but he doesn't do it because she is willing to go on as they are, and I doubt if he will ever marry her. It seems to me that the single man is the more contemptible of the two men. What do you think?

You spoke recently of men borrowing money from women. I have given a man $400 in the last year and am glad that I could be his good friend, as he had a cancer operation and is unable to work. He has shown me but small thanks, but I don't think in a case like this the man could be called a cad—do you? —though some of my friends think he is just that. —MILLICENT.

Answer: I would not call either of the men contemptible in the two cases you cite because they have not taken advantage of the girls. The girls went into the arrangement with full knowledge of the men's attitude and of the consequences of their acts, so in no sense can they be considered victims.

They are merely fellow sinners with the men, equally to blame for leading an immoral life. Equally guilty, but far more foolish, for in the end it is the woman who invariably has to pay the highest price for wrong doing.

Whether the married man would marry Alice or not, even if he could, is problematic, but it is a certainty that the other man will not marry Betty, and that after a while when he does want to marry and "range" himself, as the French say, he will pick out some girl with an unblemished name.

For there are very few men who want to give their children a mother with a shady past that will not bear investigation. Nor does it enhance a man's place in the business world to marry his mistress and have a wife that the wives of his business associates do not care to meet.

Of course, there has been an occasional liaison in which the man was faithful to his lady love, but such instances are extremely rare, and any woman who pins her faith to an illicit love takes a long shot at happiness.

When I advised girls against lending money to men I had reference only to the able-bodied men who find it easier to graft on women than it is to work. Unfortunately, I have known a great man of these unspeakable cads, who, under the guise of making love to a girl, rob her of her hard earnings.

I have seen many pitiful cases in which a young woman, earning a meager salary, would have it all wheedled out of her by some husky loafer whom she could not resist because of her affection for him. I have seen such a girl go shabby and half-starved, while the man spent her money on fine clothes and dissipations, often on other girls, and I have seen the heart break when the man finally deserted her and married another girl, and all she had for her money was the memory of a few kisses.

Therefore, I advise girls not to lend money to men, because the right sort of a man doesn't borrow money from women. But the case is entirely changed when the man is sick and down and out. Then the woman who loves him, or the woman who is merely a good friend and sorry for him, is perfectly justified in helping him, and it is no reflection upon the man to take the money.

But don't ever expect any gratitude from a man you help. It humiliates a man so to take assistance from a woman that he never forgives her for it. —DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—Is there such a thing as love? Our group of married people have been discussing it. The men say love is merely a strong attachment. The women say that it is love that brings people together in marriage. Is it true that love is a bigger factor in a woman's life than it is in a man's? —MRS. H. A. H.

Answer: Of course, there is such a thing as love. Love is the greatest thing in the world and it is what makes this old world of ours go round.

But no one can define just what love is. It begins in sex attraction, but it is more than that. I should but it is more than that. I should added congeniality of mind and temperament. That gives us the kind of love that satisfies us, body and soul.

It is sex attraction that draws a man and woman together in the first place, but after that, if they are to continue loving each other, they must be able to think the same thoughts, to understand the same things, to have the same point of view, and the same ideals and aspirations. When you have that you have the love that lasts, and that makes a couple fonder of each other on their golden wedding day than they were when as a boy and girl they stood before the altar.

So the definition of love as a strong attachment is true, particularly of wedded love. The love that comes after people have settled down to the long pull of life, when youthful passion and romance have fled, and friendship has taken their place. Then it is that a man and woman come to have that strong attachment for each other that is woven of a thousand unbreakable threads of respect and gratitude and admiration and trust in each other's faith and loyalty. And that is a tie that only death can break.

Yes, I think it is true that love is a bigger factor in a woman's life than it is in a man's. Women live more in their emotions than men do and are more dependent upon love for happiness. Also, they have fewer interests than men have, less that is exacting and diverting their lives, and so they have more time to think of their feelings. "Man's love is of man's life for a thing apart, 'tis woman's whole existence," said the poet, and he was right.—DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix: I have been engaged to a girl whom I honestly thought I loved, but now I have met another girl and know that for the first time in my life I am really in love. I told my fiancee of the other girl who has come into my life and asked her to release me in order to avoid making three lives miserable. She absolutely refuses to give me up and abuses the woman I love. I have given up this second girl and have devoted my entire time to trying to convince my fiancee that it is best for her to break our engagement. She cannot, or will not, see that it is for her happiness to give me up and I am utterly miserable. What is my duty. —MISERABLE LOVER.

Answer—You have done the honorabel thing in telling your fiancee of your change of heart, and now your duty is to yourself and to the girl you love. You have given your old sweetheart a chance to save her face by breaking the engagement, and if she won't do it you should do it.

I say this just as much for her sake as I say it for yours and the other girl's, for no man can do a woman such a deadly wrong as he does by marrying her when he loves another woman. It isn't in human nature for him to be faithful to her, or to keep from hating her and revenging himself upon her for wrecking his happiness.

No woman can force you to marry her unless you want to. She can't drag you to the altar against your will, so brace up and have the courage at least to run away from her, if you can't stand up and fight her.—DOROTHY DIX.

Bride's Memory Lives Today In Marblehead Rose

MARBLEHEAD, Mass., Oct. 20 (AP)—White roses that flourish in profusion along the coast of Maine each summer, from Bristol to Wiscasset, bloom as a tribute to a girl's love of flowers.

Her name, or even the fact that she ever existed, is unknown to the thousands who enjoy the beauty and fragrance of the blooms. The blossom is known only as the "Marblehead Rose."

The girl came from Marblehead, the bride of a Maine sea-faring man. When she left for her new home, many years ago, she stopped to take a few slips from the favorite rosebush in her garden. From these slips, full-grown, the other bushes have sprung.

O' These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

NEW YORK, Oct. 29. (US)—A California woman had her husband turn over all his property to her, promising, he says, to give him a $75 a month allowance, and to establish a trust fund to insure its payment. Then she didn't do it.

Every day women are getting their husbands to turn over all their property, promising anything that it takes to accomplish the transfer. And through it all, never a wave of suspicion seems to flit across the face of the poor simpleton who gets the request.

Chicago beauty experts say "good business men have thin brittle hair, and stupid men have heavy flowing locks." They add: "He men have naturally curly hair."

I saw one having a permanent wave in a Fifty-seventh street beauty salon today. If that's a he man, heaven help up!

Hendrik Van Loon's third wife is divorcing him and naming his second wife corespondent.

It's being done in the best circles all over the country. Those who divorce one or two, find that they all have pretty much the same faults and it's easier to get along with one you're used to than get adjusted all over again.

Re-marriage dinners are being given to old friends to announce the return engagements.

He would have been merely a bridegroom in any other state. You can't blame them for boasting.

Edward Hunt of New York state says that women and trouble are the same thing, just spelled differently. He thinks this way because he has three wives, all living "I knew I shouldn't have married the last two times," sezze, "but they just kept after me till I accepted."

No sales resistance at all.

A 7-year-old boy in kindergarten on Columbus day, was to talk on Columbus. He had clipped a picture from a magazine, and he held it up to the class in which he was a shining light. "This," said he, "is Columbus, and that female standing there beside him is supposed to be justice."

The World bureau says that the Countess Magnani, formerly Miss Mary Hager of New York, complains to a Paris court that when her husband "forced her to write him a check for $100,000 while he held a stiletto against her heart she thought it was a little too much."

Well, anyway, it was plenty!

Better Than Whiskey For Colds and Flu

The sensation of the drug trade is Aspironal, the two-minute cold and cough reliever, authoritatively guaranteed by the laboratories; tested, approved and most enthusiastically endorsed by the highest authorities, and proclaimed by the people as 10 times as quick and effective as whiskey, rock and rye, or any other cold and cough remedy they have ever tried.

All drug stores are supplied with the wonderful elixir, so all you have to do is to step into the nearest drug store, hand the clerk 60c for a bottle of Aspironal and tell him to give you two teaspoonfuls. With your watch in your hand, take the drink at one swallow and call for your money back in two minutes if you cannot feel the distressing symptoms of your cold fading away like a dream, within the time limit. Don't be bashful, for all druggists invite you and expect you to try it. Everybody's doing it.

Take the remainder of the bottle home to your wife and children, for Aspironal is by far the safest and most effective, the easiest to take and the most agreeable cold and cough remedy for children as well as adults. Quickest relief for catarrhal croup and children's choking up at night.—Adv.

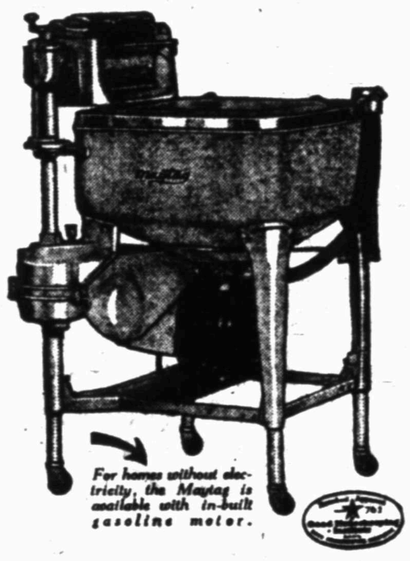
"The MAYTAG Changed My Idea of Washday Servants"

"I never thought of having a washing done in my own home until I found out how easy and satisfying it is to let the Maytag do it."

Thousands of women have thus expressed their admiration for the Maytag. Over a million homes now enjoy the Maytag wash-hour, enjoy the satisfaction of clothes washed at home in a clean, careful and sanitary manner.

The Maytag's unquestioned supremacy among washers is due to many outstanding features, originated by The Maytag Company—the world's largest manufacturers of washers. The one-piece, cast-aluminum tub keeps the water hot for an entire washing. The Gyrafoam action makes water do the washing—the fast, thorough, gentle way.

The Maytag Roller Water Remover has a soft top roll and a hard bottom roll. It removes both soap and water evenly and gently from all parts of the garment. Buttons, snaps, ornaments, or fine laces go through unharmed.



For homes without electricity, the Maytag is available with in-built gasoline motor.

One Minute Pulpit

Prepared by
REV. A. H. MUEHLBRAD
Pastor, Trinity Lutheran Church

Give us this day our daily bread. —Matt. vi:11.

If a son shall ask bread of any of you that is a father, will he give him a stone? Or if he ask a fish, will he for a fish give him a serpent? If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children; how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask Him? —Luke xi:11-13.

God gives daily bread indeed without our prayer even to all the wicked; but we pray in this petition that He would lead us to acknowledge and receive our daily bread with thanksgiving.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By GRANT DIXON

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—Very ingenious "rackets" are played even upon the big bankers and brokers who have offices in the Wall street section. Maybe the fact that they are within earshot of the steamship whistles has something to do with it—as has the fact that they always like to make it a point that captains of finance are not the hard-hearted individuals they are painted.

A neatly dressed youth of foreign extraction, wearing the jacket and cap of a ship's steward, has been sauntering into the offices, obviously embarrassed and distressed. In his halting speech he explains that he has lost all his money. He is ashamed to go back to his ship, and has no place else to go for the night. He seems to be such a sincere chap, and in such difficulty in a strange land, that contributions of $5 have been forthcoming at almost every office.

He was caught up "cold" just a few days ago, however, when he inadvertently wandered into the same office twice in the same afternoon!

Going through City Hall park during a heavy rainstorm a few days ago, a man carrying an umbrella came to one of those passages between building when a sudden gust of wind blew the umbrella wrong side out and the effort to hold it was too much, so he let it fly in the wind.

It landed in the gutteer, but was retrieved by a person who turned it right again.

"Well, I'll be hanged. I thought it was dingbusted," was the first carrier's comment as he walked away in the rain.

A dirty little puppy, very pathetic to gaze upon, sat panting, his tongue hanging out, in front of the lunch wagon door. Every time the door opened and someone came out the puppy would wag his tail and cock his head, looking hopefully upward.

One person whose appetite had been satisfied looked down at the dog, went back into the lunch wagon and then came out with some scraps of meat, which he threw to the puppy; but the little fellow merely sniffed at the food and once again resumed his hopeful position.

A second man threw a sizzling frankfurter to the dog, but this delicious offering also was spurned. It was a husky teamster who came out, looked at the dog and then reentered the lunch wagon only to come out, with a "shaving mug" cup which he set before the dog.

Eagerly the puppy jumped up and buried his snout in the cup, its contents obviously suiting his fastidious taste, for he lapped until the cup was dry of—no, not milk, but near beer.

A PASSING THOUGHT

Don't regret the things undone—
Some great goal you might have won;
All your yesterdays are gone—
Yes, gone.

Turn your eyes upon to-day;
Do not falter—do not stray;
Friend, you'll have to pay your way—
Yes—pay.

Always fight on toward your star,
Even though it's dim and far;
What we do is what we are—
Yes, ARE.

BOY KILLS SELF AFTER PARENTS REFUSE WISH

CHICAGO, Oct. 29. (UP)—A 12-year-old boy committed suicide here because his parents would not permit him to quit school and go to work.

The boy, Edward Slototorwicz, asked for permission to stay from church yesterday "to read a book."

As soon as the family had left Edward took the leash from his dog's collar, climbed on a chair and fastened the leash to a nail. He adjusted a noose around his neck and then kicked the chair away.

A Meritorious Jaunt

IT IS hoped that the rains will not interfere with the excursion which Mora Clark is planning to lead to the pecan orchards in Smith county Wednesday. If there are pecan orchards in Smith county that this year are producing $1,200 worth of pecans an acre certainly there are a large number of land owners and prospective land owners in Wichita county who are interested in seeing how it is done.

Pecans bear prolifically in West Texas. Both our soil and our climate in connection with irrigation are adapted to pecan growing. There is an ever widening market for the nuts. The supply is not likely to exceed the demand in many years to come. Even the crop from native trees grown without much attention or care has been found profitable in many localities. With selection and cultivation and the proper handling the growth of pecans can be made more profitable. In Smith county there are commercial orchards which are highly profitable, we are told.

Wichitans who make the trip to Smith county ought to receive inspiration and practical information. We hope that Mr. Clark is able to pilot a large group to that county Wednesday.

A Work That Ought to Be Done Quickly

THE Record News hopes that no time is lost in correcting the bond provided by the contractors who have been awarded the contract for alterations in the county jail. These alterations are to be made to correct defects which have permitted the escape of a number of prisoners from the jail in recent years.

The people want these changes made at the earliest moment possible so that when an alleged felon is incarcerated he can be held until his trial and, if found guilty, can be held until his removal to the state penitentiary. As has been shown by the numerous escapes from the prison farms it is by no means certain that a convict will be held to serve out his term but there is at least some satisfaction in seeing a guilty man committed to prison. And while we are on the subject, cannot some method be devised to prevent the numerous escapes from the state prison? Why are not dangerous criminals confined within walls which they cannot breach?

Carson's New Riches

GEORGE CAMPBELL CARSON, weather-beaten old "desert rat" of the far Southwest, stands to collect several million dollars from certain big copper companies for infringement of patents used in the smelting furnaces.

At the age of 60, this aged prospector will become a multi-millionaire. An invention that has meant millions to other people will at last begin to mean millions to him.

We read about that with a thrill of satisfaction. It not only gratifies us to hear of a poor man suddenly becoming fabulously wealthy; there is the added fact that all too often the pioneers and discoverers have made vast fortunes for others, but have themselvs died penniless.

Carson is the exception. He is going to have more money than he ever will know what to do with. But it is only by accident. The daring foresight and endurance that have enabled men to win big prizes on the frontier have not always enabled them to hold onto them.

There are many tremendous fortunes in the middle and far west. But most of them were not made by the pioneers. The pioneers struggled through the wilderness, cleared away the forests, turned the prairies from desolate wastes to rich farm land, founded great cities and established an empire; and after they had done their work other men came on, with fat check books and stock-selling schemes, and laid their hands on oil fields, mines, forests and strategically located land—and became rich. The blood and sweat of the pioneers made everything lovely for the promoters.

Possession of wealth in this country brings fame and respect. The hero of Mark Twain's "The Gilded Age," found that after he had inherited a coal mine his lightest word was treasured as a word of great wisdom, and his most careless remark was looked on as the pronouncement of an oracle. That is our way. We seem to think there is some special virtue in the possession of ready cash.

But we might remember that, in the history of this country, it has, as a general thing, been less of an accomplishment to make a fortune than to prepare the way for the wealth of others. The men who built the greatness of America are not, for the most part, the men who amassed great fortunes; they were the silent, nameless, unrewarded men who pushed on to the West from the struggling seaboard colonies, explored vast wildernesses, drove the Indians to cover, built cabins and tilled farms all the way from western Pennsylvania to Oregon, straggled through the deserts and mountains of the Southwest, preparing the way for the men with the magic checkbooks.

Occasionally, as in the case of George Carson, one got his monetary reward. But not often. We talk glibly of millionaire "empire builders"; the title really belongs to the old-time pioneers, the covered wagon men, the prospectors, the roving fur trappers, the lonely homesteaders. They were the men who made possible the fortunes that were built later.

STRAW VOTES MEAN LITTLE

Of what value is a straw vote in reaching a conclusion as to what the actual vote will be on election day?

The poll now being conducted by the Literary Digest has aroused a feeling of optimism among Republicans which is entirely unwarranted by a careful analysis of its figures, particularly when considered in the light of the Digest poll of 1924.

By a comparison of the Digest poll as it has thus far progressed in 1928, with the final figure of its poll in 1924, it is even easier to figure a victory for Governor Smith than success to Mr. Hoover.

Sports Stars Succumbs

The report comes that "Babe" has followed "Gene" and "Bobby," instead of "Lindy," in declaring his presidential preference. The only surprise is that the four great stars in the world of sport withstood pressure and entreaty as long as they did.

The Room Under the Stairs

The Baffling Story of a Man Who Read of His Own Murder

By HERMAN LANDON

Synopsis of Preceding Installments

Thomas Dean, successful young novelist, has hidden from the world his old name Paul Forrester, because the latter was connected with a self-defense killing out West, and Dean still carries the scar of that encounter. But a series of circumstances swirls him into a vortex of mysteries. First he reads a deathbed confession of the murder of Paul Forrester five years before, made by Martin Lamont, western business man, on a visit to New York, and witnessed by Dennis Littleby, famous lawyer, and Dr. John Ballinger, well-known doctor. Then a mysterious lady, Viola Gray, visits him and Lieutenant Shane finds the remains of the murdered man in "The Room Under the Stairs," of Dean's deserted family home. A watch marked "P. F." completes the identification, although Dean finds pieces of another watch crystal at the scene of the murder. Later an attempt is made on his life by Freddie Mills, a hired assassin, and Dean's subsequent appearance alive produces a startling effect on both Miss Gray and Dr. Ballinger. Finally, after Dean has heard a woman's screams through the dying man's telephone, Lamont is murdered, and Dean trails the lawyer to a hidden room in the latter's house. There he finds Shirley Lamont, the dead man's daughter, held as prisoner and is discovered by Littleby, who warns them both and mysteriously vanishes. Trapped together they can find no way out of the secret room. Meantime, Lieutenant Shane finds Miss Gray in "The Room Under the Stairs" at the old Forrester home and shares her discovery of an important piece of paper. Together they set out for Littleby's house. Trapped together Dean and Shirley are nearly suffocated by a gaseous cloud that descends on them in the secret room, but a sudden ring at their telephone shows that Littleby is willing to make terms. Appealing to his chivalry, the lawyer forces Dean to suicide to save the girl.

The Secret of Arselene

Another minute's delay might have been fatal," he said in reply to Dean's anxious glance of inquiry. "As I told you, there is no known antidote, but the stimulant I gave her may carry her through the crisis. Nasty stuff, arselene. Ever hear of it before?"

"Never. That is, not until Littleby mentioned it."

"That's strange," said Ballinger in an odd voice, but Dean scarcely heard him. He was watching anxiously a flicker of returning life in the girl's face. The eyelids were fluttering, there was a feeble rising and falling movement beneath the lines of the throat.

"For the present she is as well off here as she would be in a hospital," remarked Ballinger. "Next to a heart stimulant, fresh air is what she needs most. So you never heard of arselene before. Well, well." He rose from his stooping position over the patient and regarded Dean in a queer way. "Aren't you Paul Forrester?"

Dean shrugged. The matter of identities seemed suddenly to have lost all significance. His whole world revolved round the feebly palpitating form on the sofa.

"You needn't answer," said Ballinger. "I asked only because a Forrester ought to know arselene. Jordan Forrester discovered it."

"My father?" asked Dean in a dull, mildly curious voice.

Ballinger nodded. "Your father was a Jack of a thousand trades, and the discovery of arselene was one of the lucky accidents that come along now and then. Your father didn't realize the importance of his discovery; in fact, nobody realized it till long after he was dead. Today a certain European principality is willing to pay fifteen million dollars for it."

"Eh?" said Dean dazedly.

"Fifteen millions," repeated the doctor. "Littleby has been negotiating for some time with the representatives of the foreign power. Arselene—it's a composition of arsenic and acetylene gas and a few other ingredients, by the way—is one of the most destructive poison gases ever invented. No nation, or combination of nations, could stand up against a foe equipped with it. It's a hellish thing, Dean. With arselene in its possession, even a small army would be invincible. It would be a blessing in the cause of righteousness, but a terrible thing if employed on the side of imperialism and greed. It would change the map of the world in no time."

The astounding statement seemed to touch only a small corner of Dean's mind. An agency that could turn the world topsy-turvy and demolish empires seemed of little consequence just now in comparison with his concern for the girl on the sofa. He watched in tremulous anxiety as a pale wisp of color returned to her cheeks.

"She'll be all right in a little while now," said Ballinger after another examination. "Don't blame you, Dean, for not showing more interest in what I am telling you about arselene. Anyhow, all the empires in the world don't amount to a row of pins. The only things that really matter are those that live in here." He administered a slap to the left side of his powerful chest.

Dean gave him a wide-eyed glance. It was strange talk, coming from a physician. He wondered suddenly if little Miss Gray had a nestling place inside Ballinger's expansive chest.

"Damnable stuff!" muttered the doctor. "It's fascinating, in its way, but I wish now I had never got interested in it. There are only two formulas in existence. One is in my possession; the other in Littleby's. Littleby and the foreign agent have had their heads together for some time, making demonstrations and calculating profits. I never dreamed, though, that Littleby would demonstrate it in this particular way."

His indignant glance traveled to the girl on the sofa. "I suppose it gave him a convenient weapon," he muttered. The minutest quantity of the stuff is enough to fill a house and kill everybody in it. Fine!" he exclaimed, feeling the girl's pulse. "Getting stronger every moment. She will be on her feet soon, Dean. You see, your father, Littleby, myself and a few others were engaged in various enterprises out West some years ago. We formed a close corporation, informal in a way, yet having a legal standing. When your father died—practically penniless as he himself and everybody else supposed—he left a will providing that whatever property he left behind should go to his son—to you, in other words—but that in the event of his son's death the estate should go to his former associates. Littleby can tell you all about the legal phases of the will. It was a joke in a way, for there was no estate, as far as anybody knew; consequently there was nothing to inherit. Furthermore, everybody supposed that Paul Forrester was dead.

"Then one day Littleby tumbled to the commercial value of arselene. How it happen I can't tell you, but he sent for me to give my professional opinion of the formula. Before long we saw that old Jordan Forrester had left us a legacy that, if handled properly, would make us immensely wealthy. Right away a demon got into Littleby. He could think and talk only in terms of millions. I was smitten myself, but in a different way. There was something in the immensity of the project that appealed to my imagination. We had our first disagreement when Littleby insisted on selling the product to the highest bidder instead of offering it to the United States government, and we've been having disagreements ever since. I knew only a little of what was going on between Littleby and the foreign agent, and, because of certain circumstances, I couldn't say anything."

He gazed off into space with a scowl on his face. "What a ridiculous fix a man can get into," he muttered. "I wouldn't go through it again for all the millions in the world. Littleby, Lamont and myself were the only ones left out of the old group of associates; the others were dead. That meant that the formula belonged to us three, for nobody supposed that Paul Forrester was still living." He glanced queerly at Dean. "We might not have known till this day that he was living under an assumed name if the newspaper reports of Lamont's compound had not brought him out of the woods."

"And I don't see yet how Lamont came to make such an absurd confession," said Dean, looking pointedly at the doctor.

"I don't know," said Ballinger, scowling. "I can only guess. I prefer you to get the explanation from Littleby. He can tell if he will." He threw back his head and sniffed. "The arselene is coming this way," he remarked. "I think we had better remove Miss Lamont to a safer place."

The Murderer of Lamont

After Dean and Dr. Ballinger had left the room, Buckley, the uniformed officer, came forward impressively and touched the lawyer's arm.

"I arrest you, Mr. Littleby," he declared, repeating the stereotyped phrase with a solemn air, "for the murder of Martin Lamont. You're a lawyer, so I needn't warn you that anything you may say will be held against you."

"I say you are a fool," retorted Littleby. "I have the best alibi in the world. Doctor Ballinger and I were on the balcony when the shot was fired that killed Lamont."

"Yes, I know," interposed Shane dryly. "An hour or two ago, when Miss Gray and I were here and she asked you all those questions, my mind kept revolving a million turns a minute. I couldn't make head or tail to what she said, but as we walked away from here she explained a few things. She would have explained them before, but it would have caused a sensation, and she has a sick mother, who can't stand too much of a shock. In a few hours she will do the sensible thing and take her mother on a sea voyage. By the way, do you know Miss Farnham?"

"Of course. She was Lamont's nurse."

"Wasn't she formerly known as Beulah Vance?"

"Far be it from me to inquire into a lady's past."

"And didn't you advise her in the matter of her breach of promise suit against Paul Forrester?"

"I refuse to gratify idle curosity."

"Then I'll answer my own question. After the suit had been dragging along for a time you told Miss Vance she had better drop it. You convinced her that she would never be able to collect anything. Young Forrester had disappeared, and as far as anybody knew he never had more than a few dollars to his name. Some time afterward you discovered that Jordan Forrester, Paul's father, had left something behind him that was worth a good many millions. In the meantime you had been keeping in touch with Miss Farnham, thinking she might prove useful, and you sent for her when Lament came to your house sick."

"Naturally. She lived near by."

"You promised her," Shane went on, "that if she would oblige you in certain matters you would pay her twice as much as she could ever have collected on the breach of promise suit, even if young Forrester had been a rich man."

Littleby was momentarily taken aback. "Oh, he said stiffly, "I perceive you have gone to the trouble of interviewing Miss Farnham. Well, no harm done. The word of a common adventuress, even though she is masquerading as a nurse, will not have great weight in court. I am not—"

He paused and glanced toward the open door.

"Sounds like somebody wrecking the house," muttered Shane. "Wonder what Dean's up to this time. Well, Littleby, I convinced Miss Farnham that you would never be able to live up to your promise and finally I persuaded her to come clean. She didn't seem to realize until then that complicity in a murder is just as serious as the act of murder itself, and she took the one chance she had of escaping the chair. I know all about your alibi, Mr. Littleby. You knew Doctor Ballinger was coming that night, and you had everything arranged beforehand."

Littleby's face sagged a little. An intensified pallor settled over his features. He started nervously as a deafening crash sounded over their heads. From the hall came the excited voices of servants rudely startled out of their early morning slumber.

"Hope Dean doesn't tear down the house over our heads," muttered the lieutenant. "Let's go back over the case and see what we have, Mr. Littleby. You and Doctor Ballinger were out on the balcony, smoking your cigars. There is no doubt on that point, for each of you supported the other in that statement. A shot rang out, and you rushed into Lamont's bedroom, followed by Dean, who appeared mysteriously from somewhere. Miss Farnham told you she had been dozing on the cot, and that she knew nothing until the shot wakened her. Sounded plausible enough on the face of it, and so did her added statement that she had seen no stranger in the room.

"Evidently the murderer escaped while she was rubbing the sleep out of her eyes. To walk into a room, fire a shot, and walk out again takes only a few seconds. Yes, Miss Farnham told a convincing enough story, and no wonder. She had been drilled by an expert. The credit belongs to you, Mr. Littleby."

"Oh thanks," said the lawyer, with feeble sarcasm.

"As things looked on the surface," Shane went on, "Lamont had been murdered by a mysterious intruder. Dean's conduct looked rather suspicious—on the surface, that is. You had an apparently perfect alibi, and so did Dr. Ballinger for that matter. The way things looked, you couldn't have killed Lamont without being in two places at once. There were one or two curious features of the affair, though. In the first place, the murderer must have left the door open when he walked in and fired the shot. His natural impulse would have been to close it, so that the report wouldn't create more disturbance than was necessary. The less noise he made, the more certain he would be of making his getaway. But it appears he left the door open—on purpose, it would seem, so that you and Dr. Ballinger could hear the shot on the balcony. We demonstrated a while ago that, with the door closed, the report of a shot does not travel that far.

"Then there was another curious thing, but Dr. Ballinger will tell you about that. It had to do with something he noticed when he stood at Lamont's bed. Certain things didn't look just right to him, but it was only a hazy sort of an impression, and he didn't say anything until later."

Shane paused, took a folded handkerchief from his pocket, unwrapped it and exhibited something reposing within.

"Here is still another funny twist, Mr. Littleby. See this bullet? It's the same size as the one that killed Lamont. Maybe it was fired from the same pistol. I found it imbedded in one of the oaks on the lawn outside. Guess how it got there?"

"You tell," said the lawyer, glaring at him. "You put things so interestingly."

"All right. This bullet was fired from the window of Lamont's bedroom by Miss Farnham while you and Dr. Ballinger were talking on the balcony. The window being open, you heard the report clearly. It was fired for the sole purpose of establishing an alibi for you. Mr. Littleby. Everybody would suppose that the shot you heard was the one that killed Lamont. There was no reason for any one to think otherwise. You and Dr. Ballinger heard a shot, rushed into Lamont's bedroom and found him dead from a pistol shot. What could be simpler? As a matter of fact, the bullet that actually killed Lamont had been fired fifteen or twenty minutes earlier. It wasn't heard outside the walls of this room, for both the windows and the door were closed. You fired that shot, Mr. Littleby.

"After firing it, in accordance with a plan prearranged between you and Miss Farnham, you hunted up Dr. Ballinger, who was about to leave the house, and suggested a smoke on the balcony. The rest was up to Miss Farnham. It was fairly clever, Mr. Littleby, neither too subtle or too complicated, just the ordinary sort of thing that makes the best kind of alibi. Too bad, though, that Miss Farnham didn't use a blank cartridge. Are you ready, Mr. Littleby? Buckley is getting impatient."

The uniformed officer produced a pair of handcuffs with a business-like air. Littleby stared at them reluctantly, then drew himself up to something resembling his usual pompous height. He tried to smile his habitual supercilious smile, but it was a ghastly failure.

"Just one minute, gentlemen," he said, with an approach to his old-time suave tones. "Surely you can't object to my having my customary morning shave. Couldn't think of appearing like this in public."

He opened the bathroom door and, without waiting for their consent, stepped in and closed it behind him. Buckley followed him with an anxious and suspicious stare until he disappeared.

"Don't worry," said Shane, who had swept the bathroom with a comprehensive glance during the brief interval while Littleby held the door open. "He can't escape, and a man of his type is a stickler for appearances till the last. Bet he'll have his shave as usual the morning he goes to the electric chair. Wonder what's become of Dean and Dr. Ballinger. That hammering a few minutes ago sounded like the house coming down."

He crossed the floor and stood at the window, looking out into the drizzle. Minutes passed and no sound came from the bathroom. "Seems to me he's had time for a dozen shaves," muttered Buckley.

Shane tried the bathroom door. Littleby had closed it behind him. The lieutenant, his face darkening, sniffed audibly a few times, then looked down at the sill.

"Notice that queer odor, Buckley?"

"Maybe he uses scented shaving soap."

The odor, with its exotic tang, was growing more and more pronounced. Shane, refusing to accept his companion's flippant view, pounded vigorously on the door. No response came, only a dead silence. He cleared his throat, which suddenly felt a little raw.

"Don't like the looks of this," he muttered. "Buckley, you go and—"

The sudden opening of the door leading to the hall interrupted him. Dr. Ballinger entered, advanced a few steps, then stopped, his nostrils dilating.

"Who is in there?" he asked sharply, indicating the bathroom door.

"Mr. Littleby," Shane replied. "He insisted on having a shave before we took him away. Guess we'd better smash the door."

Ballinger smiled oddly. "I'm afraid you will be too late, gentlemen. You will find him dead. It kills quickly sometimes." And under his breath he added: "Arselene!"

Adults Contract Children's Diseases

Adults can, and do, contract many children's diseases. And, usually, they suffer from them much more than children do. For instance, many adults contract worms, an ailment usually associated with children. Sometimes they suffer intensely and take expensive medical treatments, without realizing that worms are the cause of their troubles. Yet, the symptoms are the same as in children, loss of appetite and weight, grinding the teeth and restless sleep, itching of the nose and anus, and abdominal pains. And, the same medicine that surely and harmlessly expels round and pin worms from children will do the same for adults — White's Cream Vermifuge, which you can get at Miller Drug store.—Adv.

Famous Recipe For Stopping a Severe Cough

You'll be pleasantly surprised when you make up this simple home mixture and try it for a distressing cough or chest cold. It takes but a moment to mix and costs little, but it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. Pour this into a pint bottle; then fill it with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. The full pint thus made costs no more than a small bottle of ready-made medicine, yet it is much more effective. It is pure, keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

This simple remedy has a remarkable three-fold action. It goes right to the seat of trouble, soothes away the inflammation, and loosens the germ-laden phlegm. At the same time, it is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly upon the bronchial tubes and thus helps inwardly to throw off the whole trouble with surprising ease.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Health And Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK McCOY

Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

Questions in regard to health and diet will be answered by Dr. McCoy who can be addressed in care of this paper

A Strong Spine

The back bone is considered by many anatomists as the most important structural part of the body. To the 33 bones of the spinal column are attached the skull, the ribs, the pelvis and, indirectly, the bones of the legs and arms. The spine also forms a safe bony canal for the protection of the delicate spinal cord, and between each two vertebrae of the spine there emanate two sets of spinal nerves.

Because of the normal curves of the spine, and because of the cartilage separating each section of the bone, the jars of walking, running and jumping are largely absorbed and prevented from reaching the brain.

From this brief description you will understand what an important relation a strong spine has to health. The powerful muscles attached to the spine must be strong, elastic and evenly balanced, one side with the other.

The old expression, "plenty of backbone" implied in a crude way the value of a strong spinal column. People with strong spines and neck are usually independent in spirit, self reliant and courageous. Any spinal irritation produces a disastrous nervous drainage which may lead to serious disorders.

The only method of strengthening the spine is through using bending and limbering exercises. The spinal column not only contains nerves and the spinal cord, but small arteries and veins. A stiff spine means that the blood circulation of the spinal cord is impeded.

It is a well known fact among diagnoticians that an irritation of an internal organ, such as the stomach or liver, is also indicted by an irritation at the spinal column. Many cases of backache are only reflex pains from internal congestion; and there is no doubt that this process is frequently reversed — that pressure upon the nerves and blood vessels coming out of the spinal column will produce disease tendencies in the organs supplied by those nerves. This fact has had much to do with the success of various schools of manipulation whose principal method of treatment consists of loosening and manipulating the bony and ligamentous structure of the spinal column.

Spinal irritation can easily be detected by pressing and searching for sensitive spots along the spine. Sometimes these pains are very severe, and in the past many peculiar and often cruel forms of treatment were evolved, such as blistering, cupping the skin, burning with a red hot iron, etc. How much more sensible to relieve the tightened muscles and ligaments by the application of comforting heat, and straighten the vertebrae and ribs that are slightly out of position by manipulation, or strengthen the spine by well planned exercise.

Most cases of pronounced curvature of the spine are due to improper feeding which deprived the child in its growing years of bone forming elements. Usually the use of braces and other mechanical supports for curvature of the spine is not advisable because this condition can be handled more satisfactorily from the standpoint of permanent results with the methods which I have outlined.

I have a special article describing exercises for strengthening the spine which I will be very glad to send if you will write to me care of The Record News and enclose a large, self addressed, stamped envelope.

FRANK E. NICHOLSON

By DEAN C. SMITH

Dean Smith is the veteran airmail pilot who made the first all-day-and-night air mail trip, and one of three pilots selected by Commander Byrd for his Antarctic expedition.

Dean C. Smith

"A friend of mine," Smith told me, "dropped around at the club the other day, looking a terrible mess. His right arm was in a sling, the left one supported a crutch, and a complete skullcap of bandage encircled his head. We called for an explanation.

"'Well, you see, boys,' he began, 'it was this way. I was invited to have breakfast with my partner. The old boy was in a discouraged mood because of bad business and we had a few rounds of giggle-water to cheer us up. After the fifth round he was pepped up, but me, no sir, I couldn't get a kick. So, feeling a bit blue I called to see another business associate, who took me to his favorite speakeasy.

"'We finished two quarts of fun-milk between us—and had a few fancy drinks in between. Well, sir, he was ready to sing by that time—but as for me, no sir, I just could not get a kick. So, wanting to be cheered up a bit, I dropped around at Bill's hotel for tea. He had just opened a case of laugh-water and we guzzled about a dozen apiece—straight. Bill commenced telling funny stories, but me, I was cold sober. So thinking it useless to get a happy-go-lucky feeling that day; I started home, taking with me two quarts of whoopee-fluid which I killed before going to bed. But I couldn't get a kick out of the stuff, so I thought I might as well go to sleep.

"'As I sat on the edge of the bed taking off my socks, I heard a knock at the door. Then, over the transom jumped a little fellow about two feet high, with a long, pink beard and dressed in a green suit with purple pants. Four hundred and fifty other little men just like him followed. They all had little guns, and when the leader shouted 'Ho!' they paraded down the room and stood in formation and took aim right at me. Then the leader shouted 'Fire!' and, well I'm not a darn fool—I jumped out the window'."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Poor Hearing

Question: Teddy O. writes: "From lying on my right side my ear seems to close up, and again it will seem to open. The hearing is not good in that ear. Would sleeping on that ear cause that, and what could I do?"

Answer: It may be that sleeping on your right side tends to close the eustachian tube because it can more easily fill with catarrhal mucus in that position. Living on a diet comparatively free from starches, sugars and fats should bring about a change in the overproduction of catarrhal mucus and relieve you of your trouble.

Are These Vegetables Starchy?

Question: Reader writes: "I would appreciate your opinion regarding the following vegetables, especially as to their starchy content; varieties of summer squash, eggplant and French artichoke."

Answer: The amount of starch contained in these vegetables is so small that they may be classed as non-starchy vegetables. This is not true of the Jerusalem or root artichoke, however.

Pimples

Question: Jack C. writes: "I have pimples on my face. Can you do anything for me? I drink about 15 glasses of milk a day, and take epsom salts once a week. Besides this, I scrub my face every night with soap."

Answer: The pimples are caused more by intestinal uncleanliness than from not washing the face often enough. The salts will help temporarily but you most overcome intestinal putrefaction and constipation. The excessive fat from so much milk will only make your trouble worse. White again, giving me your full name and address on a large, stamped envelope, and I will send you a special treatise on the dietetic cure of acne.

MOODY EXTENDS MERCY FOR CONVICTED SLAYER

AUSTIN, Oct. 29. (AP) — Juan Flores, San Antonio Mexican, who was to have been electrocuted early Tuesday morning at the state penitentiary, was allowed another 90 days of life by proclamation of Governor Moody so officers can continue search for another Mexican alleged by Flores to have done the actual killing of Manuel Fernandez, 15-year-old boy, in a San Antonio burglary.

Fernandez, who lived with his mother at her store, was stabbed to death. Flores was convicted of murder. The other Mexican alleged to have been helping him in an attempted robbery of the store, escaped. Flores was granted a stay of execution some weeks ago so officers could search for the other Mexican.

COYOTES HOPE TO BETTER STANDING IN PLAINVIEW BATTLE

CHANCE DIM TO LEAD DISTRICT

Pack Wary of Amarillo Juggernant

By GORDON FULCHER

Making their home debut in the conference schedule with a record of one game won and lost the Wichita Falls high school Coyotes are focusing their attention on the clash with Plainview at Athletic park Saturday.

Plainview's record has not been an oppressive one thus far, the Plainsmen having been beaten, 25 to 0, and 95 to 0, respectively by Vernon and Amarillo high schools. After weeks of strenuous training an easy contest would be a welcomed breathing spell for Coach Bud McCallum's charges. They took on two of their keenest rivals during the last two weeks in engaging both Electra and Vernon high schools and in both games they were keyed to high pitches.

Chances Dimmed

The Pack's defeat by Vernon last week, though it may be contested on the eligibility of two Vernon players, dimmed considerably the chance of a district championship when the mighty scores rolled up by the Amarillo Sandstorm in recent games are considered.

One bright spot, however, lingers in the Coyotes' chances of a championship in the game this week between Amarillo and Lubbock. The Sandstorm is considered by the Westerners much in the same way that Vernon is considered by the Pack and a letdown by Amarillo might easily bring a Lubbock victory.

Lubbock Strong

The Westerners flashed a powerful offense last week in their game with Electra but their defense would no doubt encounter considerable trouble in holding such a scoring machine as Sandies have proven themselves.

Two comparatively easy games, Plainview and Quanah, which line up on the district schedule during the next two weeks for the Coyotes will give McCallum's men the rest which they badly need before meeting Lubbock and Amarillo in successive games. These games are expected to give the Coyote mentor and his assistants a chance to experiment with and develop reserve material.

Wichita Falls' defense took a long stride Saturday in the game with Vernon when big Howard Scott, stalwart guard, came through with defensive form that has not been equaled this season among the Coyote linemen. With Jud Bell recovered from injuries as he should be by time to tackle Amarillo and Lubbock, Jack West in good scholastic standing and Monk Hodgkiss again in the line after his injuries at Vernon, Wichita Falls has brilliant chances of coming through the finish of the season with flying colors.

The Pack's offense also took on a better look in the clash with the Lions Saturday when Dale Davis, chunky halfback, for the first time this season ripped the line and carried the ball in a creditable fashion. Moris Lee, Kenneth Mills and Jerry Elliott, also played good football against the Lions while Clarence Bains, Jack Carstarphen and Paul Dickey will doubtless be molded into reliable backfield reserves during the next two weeks in the games with Plainvew and Quanah.

McLarnin Quits 135-Pound Ranks

NEW YORK, Oct. 29. (US)—Cyclonic Jimmy McLarnin, most colorful of all the little fighters, has acknowledged at last that he is no longer in the running for the lightweight championship. He will do his future pugilism in the junior welterweight division.

News of the Irish lad's retirement from the 135-pound class leaked out today through his acceptance of a match with Tommy Grogan of Omaha, at Detroit.

He signed to meet Grogan in a 10-round bout Nov. 30, but only on condition that he be allowed to come in at 137 pounds.

According to "Pete the Goat" Stone, who conducted negotiations for Grogan, Charley Foster, manager of McLarnin, told Promoter Dick Dunn that Jimmy has given up all hope of continuing in the lightweight chase.

It has become too difficult for him to make the weight. Jimmy is only 21, and Foster fears his health might be injured by the rigorous training he is forced to undergo in making 135 pounds.

McLarnin's departure will occasion a sigh of relief from those he leaves behind.

Reagan Jr. High to Play Fairview High Wednesday

With the full squad eligible and no injuries marring chances of victory the Reagan Junior high school will met Fairview high school at Fairview in a football game Wednesday afternoon.

Georgetown Club Leads In Eastern Grid Scoring

NEW YORK, Oct. 29. (UP)—Georgetown university of Washington, D. C., continues to lead the eastern football teams in scoring with 240 points in five games. New York university jumped into second place by rolling up 47 points against Colgate and increasing its total to 176 points. Georgetown and N. Y. U., will meet at Yankee stadium Saturday.

Army Has Three Hard Games Yet on Card

By FRANK GETTY

NEW YORK, Oct. 29. (UP)—Having completed its conquest of Eastern gridirons, the Army turns its attention towards the West this week.

Alone of the good football teams of the East which have been adequately tested, the Cadets enter November unbeaten and united. Alone of the good teams of the entire country, they have the schedule and the ability to achieve something resembling a national championship.

From the West, however, comes a series of serious threats to the peace of mind of "Biff" Jones.

Battered from the Yale game, which they won Saturday, 18 to 6, the Army looks forward with relief to a comparatively minor engagement with DePauw this week.

Three Hard Games

It is not DePauw which will make or break the season for the Cadets, however. There is Notre Dame, recovering slowly but surely from a poor start; Nebraska, which seems to have developed a strong offensive which smashed Missouri, 24 to 0; and last of all, and probably most important, Leland Stanford, now engaged in burning up the gridirons of the Pacific coast.

While a national football championship cannot, in the strict sense of the word, be obtained, few will begrudge the Army that honor if it completes the most difficult schedule any team ever undertook and comes through without a tie or a defeat.

Accordingly, it is about time to take this Army football machine of 1928 apart and discover what makes it tick.

The main spring is a red-headed halfback from Louisiana called "Chris" Cagle, who beat Yale single-handed. If the Army had not had this fleet, elusive, hard-hitting young man, the game at New Haven, witnessed by 80,000 spectators, would have come mighty close to ending in a tie.

Sprague Great Lineman

Captain Sprague is another Army player of undoubted "all-America" caliber. The Cadets' captain was frequently through the line of scrimmage to throw the runner for a loss. Messinger, an Army end, also showed aggressiveness in this respect.

The Army was reputed to have a forward passing attack, but kept it in decided disuse at New Haven. The best thing the Cadets do in the forward passing line is a neat job of intercepting.

Murrell, the fullback, is used for short gains through the line. Allan, the right halfback, is one of the shock troops which are to pave the way as far as possible for a swift dash by Cagle with the ball.

Aside from Cagle, the impressive feature of Army football is alertness. The team was on the job to take advantage of every misplay, except for one of its own which gave Yale its only touchdown, when Cagle fumbled and "Firpo" Greene lumbered over with the ball.

Coast Grid Fans Look to Saturday

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 29. (UP)—Except for numerous indications of the important football contests to be played on the Pacific coast next Saturday, gridiron fans of the region had little to amuse themselves with over last week-end.

Oregon State college, twice defeated in conference play, administered the second conference beating to the University of Washington, by a score of 29 to 0, while Idaho, previously trounced by Stanford, downed the University of California (southern branch). Consequently these four teams can hardly expect to finish in the first division.

Coach Nibs Price of the University of California went so far as to accept a 12 to 0 defeat from the Olympic club to save his regulars for the game against the University of Oregon at Berkely this week, although 40,000 persons attended the conflict.

It was almost the same story at Los Angeles and Palo Alto, where Coach Howard Jones of the University of Southern California and Glenn "Pop" Warner of Stanford kept their regulars on the benches because Stanford and U. S. C. meet at Los Angeles Saturday in the outstanding contest of the West.

Stanford beat Fresno State college, 47 to 0, by using second and third string men. The Cards have now scored 912 points in seven contests and will undoubtedly be slight favorites over U. S. C.

20,000 See Friedman's Team Beat Chicago Bears

CHICAGO, Oct. 29.—Twenty thousand persons, one of the largest crowds to see a professional football game here, watched the Detroit Wolverines, led by Benny Friedman, former Michigan star, defeat Chicago's Bears, 6 to 0, in the last quarter at Wrigley field.

Jackson carried the ball over the locals' last chalk-line following a series of line smashes by Friedman.

Rocky Mountain Title At Stake This Week

DENVER, Oct. 29. (UP)—Utah university and Colorado college meet Saturday in a game which probably will decide the football championship of the Rocky Mountain conference for 1928.

The Utes, with a fast charging line and a speedy backfield, humbled Colorado U. 25 to 6, Saturday. The previous week Utah had defeated Colorado Aggies, 1927 champions.

Colorado college has won three conference games but had an open date Saturday.

Bush Agrees to Lead Pirates Next Campaign

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 29 (AP)—Barney Dreyfuss, president of the Pittsburgh National League Baseball club, said today that Owen J. "Donie" Bush would manage the Pirates next season, terms having been agreed to at a conference between Dreyfuss and Bush.

12 UNDEFEATED TEAMS REMAIN

Fall of Unbeaten Elevens Leaves Few Survivors

By LEWIS BURTON

NEW YORK, Oct. 29. (US)—There's only a baker's dozen of teams that retain a fighting chance to gain national recognition for football supremacy. Saturday's devastating sword carved wholesale lots of unbeaten elevens from the ranks of the elite, with the result that an omniscient eye is no longer requisite to one who would view the entire football situation at a glance.

Here in the East Army stopped Yale, Harvard ended Dartmouth's sway, Navy eked out victory over Penn and Princeton disposed of Cornell. Thus does the rapid passing of unbeaten and united teams continue unabated.

Army, New York university, Carnegie Tech, Georgetown and Boston college alone among the leading elevens on the Atlantic seaboard retain lily white records. In the Midwest, Ohio State, Iowa, Illinois and Nebraska are members of the order. The South is represented by Tennessee, Georgia Tech, Vanderbilt, Florida and Louisiana State.

Stanford, defeated earlier in the year by the Olympic club, is the only far West eleven of consequence that has not tied or lost to a college foe.

Army Nears Title

Army, in its last game against an Eastern team, took a definite step toward the national championship when it defeated Yale. Chris Cagle was largely responsible for the result, but it must not be forgotten that only a well-rounded team could have trod over the Blue. The Army line was flawless and the Elis learned too late that an air bombardment was the only way out.

As a gesture of redemption, Harvard easily repulsed Dartmouth. This was exactly the victory that the Crimson needed to restore a long-lost confidence. A highly perfected interference for French and Guaranaccia sent the Green down to its first defeat and proved that Coach Arnold Horween is sending the Cantabs somewhere at last.

The amazingly synchronized New York university attack, spelling a 47-6 defeat for a good Colgate team, stamped the Violet as one of the country's high-powered elevens. N. Y. U. did everything right, and its alertness enabled it to take advantage of every break. If the team doesn't slump it will be unbeatable this year.

To the credit of Navy fell the biggest upset of the day. A forward pass, from substitute to substitute, in the closing minutes gave the Middies a one-touchdown victory over Pennsylvania, previously unbeaten and unscored upon in four games. The hard-charging Navy line, which has been coming along this season, prevented Penn from working its backfield necromancy.

Princeton Still Unbeaten

Out at Tigertown, where Princeton's unblemished defensive record was being maintained intact while Cornell was losing by the margin of a field goal, nothing very definite was settled. The merit of the two teams still is questionable. The Red was strong defensively, too, but neither exposed itself to the charge of having a great defense.

Fordham's one-sided conquest of W. and J., coming as it does on top of the Holy Cross victory, stamps the Maroon as an outstanding eleven despite its loss tow weeks ago to N. Y. U. Being beaten by N. Y. U. no longer can be considered in the light of disgrace.

Columbia, going nowhere, had its hands full with Williams, which boasts one of the best teams in its history. C. C. N. Y. continued to show punch against teams in its own class by smothering George Washington.

A point after touchdown was the margin that brought about the biggest upset in the Middle West—Iowa's 7-6 triumph over the favored Minnesota Gophers. Advance reports predicted that the Gophers would find the Hawkeyes' line easy to penetrate. This proved far from the truth and the result was furnished by two long runs.

Three Big Ten Leaders

Ohio State defeated Indiana, and Illinois had a hard time before it could subjugate Northwestern, but because they succeeded the Western conference race has now simmered down to a contest among three teams. Ohio state, having won three Big Ten games and lost one, holds the lead, but Iowa and Illinois have clean slates in the two conference games.

Tennessee, Vanderbilt and Georgia Tech, the defending champions, continue to look best in the Southern conference. These three unbeaten elevens swept over their Saturday's opponents with ease.

In the far West, a team that wasn't exactly California's first lineup, lost to the Olympic club, but otherwise there was a lull in activity. Stanford and Southern California, unbeaten but tied by California, won their games handily.

There were numerous surprises throughout the country, such as Purdue's landslide over Chicago, Bucknell's untimely setback by Gettysburg, and Davis-Elkins, conqueror of West Virginia and Navy, losing to the unheard of John Carroll eleven. Nebraska's victory over Missouri was expected, but not by the 14-0 measure that resulted.

And, oh yes, although there are eight Eastern teams unbeaten and united, don't forget Villanova, Haverford and Temple.

BARON TO LEAVE PLANE

TOKIO, Oct. 29. (UP)—The minister of communications announced today that Baron Gunther von Huenefeld would return to Germany soon, leaving the plane in which he planned to fly the Pacific in Tokio.

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

USUAL MID-SEASON football prevails Saturday, with a flock of intersectional games and clashes involving regional titles carded. Two clashes absorb interest of Southwestern conference followers, the meetings of Texas and Southern Methodist at Austin and of Texas Christian and Baylor at Fort Worth. The first three named elevens are undefeated leaders of the conference.

◆ ◆ ◆

California and Oregon clash in an important Pacific Coast conference engagement. The foremost eastern teams invade the Middle West, Pennsylvania playing at Chicago and Navy at Columbus with Ohio State. An east-west affair of lesser importance is scheduled between Colgate and Wabash. Columbia plays Cornell. Georgia meets Alabama Poly. Harvard takes on Lehigh. Iowa State faces Oklahoma. Nebraska's mighty Big Six leaders play Kansas.

ILLINOIS encounters Michigan. The Illini are tied with Ohio State and Iowa for the Big Ten leadership, those three being unbeaten and untied. Iowa engages South Dakota. New York university and Georgetown, among the few remaining unbeaten teams and high scorers in the east, have an interesting game. Northwestern battles Minnesota.

◆ ◆ ◆

PENN STATE and Notre Dame have another intersectional affair, this in the east, at Philadelphia. Pittsburgh plays Syracuse, Southern California and Stanford play in a game that involves far western honors. There is also bearing on the Rocky Mountain championship in the meeting of Utah and Colorado college. Vanderbilt plays Kentucky. Wisconsin and Alabama will meet in another outstanding intersectional affray. Yale has a date with Dartmouth in which nothing more serious than the victory is involved.

Baer Facts

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—They're still talking about war debts in the European conferences.

Every time the debts are mentioned, some self-made moocher leaps to his heels and remarks:

"We'll keep on talking."

This has been going on for quite a bad spelling bee. In seven or eight years when one of our revolving diplomats asks:

"How about that money?"

A foreign athlete will arise in all his compound glory and remark:

"What money?"

Then they will start a real war.

We have made great strides even if it is on a treadmill.

We haven't collected anything yet We don't mind Europe holding its own. But we'd like to know who's got ours.

The dance is over. The fiddler's tin cup is still empty. But think of all the peace conferences we have dominated.

Every time there is a conference they make an American ambassador the chairman.

That's to keep him from voting

We begin to think that European diplomats regard these conferences as a nice spot to p♂k up a new hat.

Up to date there have been exactly 472 conferences. Object, fixing of reparations and evaporation of war debts.

They have talked at Lassaune, Ghent, Paris, London, Brussels, Rome and way stations. There have been speeches in 34 different languages and pickled tongues.

And the only thing accomplished has been to pick out the spot and date for the next conference.

Begins to look as if the dove of peace is a hybrid bird.

It has the body of a round robin

With a Cuckoo's head.

And no bill.

If your seat is 'way up in the sixtieth row,
And you can hardly see all the players below,
Light up a Tom Moore, and whatever the play
You can always be sure of a wonderful day.

TECH TO MEET VANDY NOV. 10

Southern Title at Stake in This Battle

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 29. (UP)—Georgia Tech will face Vanderbilt in the major Southern football contest Saturday, Nov. 10.

Tech's goal line was crossed for the first time this season in its game Saturday against North Carolina. Vanderbilt won both its intersectional games, while Carolina was beaten 20 to 0 by Harvard. Vanderbilt beat Colgate 12 to 7 and Texas 13 to 12.

Tech is holding high favor of the fans because of the defeat it gave Notre Dame, but Vanderbilt has an edge on number of points scored.

Alabama, after having lost to Tennessee, 15 to 13, came back and gave a 42 to 12 whitewash to Sewanee. Maryland and V. M. I. left the field tied, 0-0. North Carolina State lost to Florida, 14 to 7. Tennessee and Washington and Lee wound up with the generals routed, 26 to 7, while Vanderbilt took its game from Virginia, 34 to 0.

Howard bowed to Auburn, 25 to 6. L. S. U. gave Spring Hill the smaller side of a 30 to 7 count. The Mississippi-Loyola game was won by Ole Miss, 34 to 14. V. P. I smothered King, another non-conference team, 54 to 0.

Three Outstanding Grid Elevens in Southwest

NEW YORK, Oct. 29. (UP)—The outstanding football teams of the country by sections rated on the basis of their records in all games follows:

East—Army.

Big Ten—Ohio State, Iowa, Illinois.

Big Six—Nebraska.

South—Georgia Tech, Vanderbilt, Tennessee.

Southwest—Southern Methodist, Texas Christian, Texas.

Far West—Stanford.

All teams are undefeated except Stanford which lost to the Olympic club, 12 to 6; Southern Methodist to Army, 14 to 13, and Texas to Vanderbilt, 13 to 12.

Eastern Elevens to Invade Middle West

NEW YORK, Oct. 29. (UP)—Two eastern football teams will go West for their games this week. Princeton, unscored on but held to a scoreless tie by Virginia, will meet Ohio State, one of the Big Ten leaders, in an intersectional game at Columbus, Ohio.

Pennsylvania, which suffered its first defeat at the hands of the Navy Saturday, 6 to 0, will play the University of Chicago at Chicago.

Red Cagle One of Greatest Backs In Football History, Runyon Says

His Parents Named Him Christian and They Sing "Onward Christian" Whey They Give Him the Melon

By DAMON RUNYON
(Copyright, 1928, by Universal Service)

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—This chappy, Christian K. Cagle, of the army, ranks with the best backs that the manly art of what we call football, has produced in many years.

But not if they can heave it, or run with it.

Possibly a better name would be chuckball.

Anyway, I stick Christian K. Cagle up there with Jeems Thorpe, the noble redman, Eddie Mahan, of fair Harvard, Red Harold Grange, the celebrated defendant, Poor George Gipp, of Notre Dame, and all the other lads made famous by the modern game.

Maybe he wouldn't have gone so good back in the remote days of the beefy beezarks of the backfield, but he is head man under present conditions. He does it all. Kicks, runs, handy on defense, and has a great noodle. He is a smart chuckball player.

When they give Christian K. Cagle the melon, the other boys ought to be permitted time for an extra huddle to discuss Christian K. Cagle's probable maneuver. Give 'em three guesses, and then they probably wouldn't be right.

Red Fools 'Em

He runs when they think he ought to kick. He kicks when they figure he ought to run. And when they judge that it's ten to one he is going to either kick or run, he pegs that old gooseegg to some pal. Christian K. Cagle threatens you on all sides, and down the middle. He has an eye like an eagle, and can hit a flea in the eye with that leather bullet at ten paces.

He isn't a big fellow, about 5 feet 8½ inches high, and lugging maybe 167 pounds, but he's built like a model for Billy Taub's clothes, wide shoulders, narrowing down to slim legs and quick ankles, what you might call a swell shape.

When he runs, it isn't with lashing, slashing strides like Thorpe, or a Mahan, or a Grange.

Christian K. Cagle sort o' sidles along, close to the ground, and flying. He has an astonishing turn of speed. He doesn't shed the tacklers off his hips, as Thorpe and Grange used to do. He side-steps 'em.

He is a grand feinter. He seems to suddenly halt as he feels a tackler's hot breath on the back of his neck, then step aside and let the tackler slide on past. For a compartively little man, he is a powerful runner. He always seems to have another turn of speed left.

He Plays Another Year

Christian K. Cagle has played football at West Point two years. He was a great player last year. In two big league games this year, he has demonstrated himself a really great player.

I say two years is sufficient to guage a player's true merit. One year, no. A fellow may be great in a couple of games but that isn't a test. Two years of action in most of the games played by his team does it.

Three years of greatness entitled a man to all-time rank. Christian K. Cagle has another year to go.

He comes from Merryville, which is in Louisiana, and he is 23 years old. He graduates at West Point in 1930. He played football at Merryville High school, and later at Southwestern Louisiana institute, where he graduated. He was on the football, baseball, basketball and track teams at the institute. He made his letter in each sport.

You can see Christian K. Cagle is quite an athlete. He was a forward in basketball, pitched in baseball, ran the 100 yards and put the shot on the track team. Knute Rockne, Grant Rice, and several other of our most astute pickers picked him on their all-Americans last year.

He has done a little shot-putting at West Point, besides playing football, and was also a member of the tug-of-war team. That ought to be good practice for a footballer.

Yale Wins Moral Victory

I note that the figger filberts have been conning their notes on the pastime at New Haven Saturday with some astonishment.

"Here, here!" they say. "How can this be? Yale out-statistics Army by cards and spades and little casino, but Army wins the game. It ain't according to camp."

The answer is simple. It's like a baseball club making one base bingles against an outfit swatting home runs. There may be more bingles than homers, but the homers are apt to score the most runs.

Thus Christian K. Cagle's 128 yards of galloping counted more than all the yardage torn off by Yale.

The young Marylander, Loud, who made so much noise for Yale at various stages of the game, is a slashing player. Probably the work he did would have devastated any team but the Army.

He fell before the amazing defense put up by the Soldiers in the closing minutes of the game, but with another minute at his disposal, he would probably have poked his way through the wall. He was within two feet of a touchdown when the game ended.

Still, I imagine the Army wouldn't have minded giving Yale that extra touchdown at that stage. It ouldn't have affected the final result.

Damon Good Prophet

I said the score would be Army 21, Yale 7.

Am I a prophet? Brother, the second son of the second son of a prophet!

But I owe fair Harvard an apology. I said the Army "carried" her.

Harvard's victory over Dartmouth shows that it has a better team than anyone suspected, and that the Soldiers were all out and on the chin strap to beat 'er 15 to 0.

Which only proves that this is a remarkable West Point team, only it didn't seem so terrific after Christian K. Cagle went limping to the sidelines.

By the way, they've got a nickname for Christian K. Cagle.

They call him "Onward Christian."

GIANTS OBTAIN PHIL GARDENER

Fred Leach Swapped For O'Doul and Cash

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 29 (AP)—Outfielder Fred Leach has been traded to the New York Giants for Outfielder Frank "Lefty" O'Doul and an amount of cash, the Philadelphia National league club announced today.

The announcement also said:

"The Phillies have suffered the most disastrous financial season in 1928 they have had, but despite the fact that $50,000 in cash has been spent to bring Shortstop Thevenow to the club, the management realizes that other deals are necessary to strengthen the club and it is hoped that the cash secured in the trade for Leach will help to swing some of the deals which are in mind."

Heisman Advocates Classification Of Football Teams as in Baseball

Noted Tactician Says Trend of Gridiron Empire Moves Southward and Westward in Recent Years

By JOHN W. HEISMAN
(Famous Football Tactician and Coach)

NEW YORK, Oct. 29. (US)—The college football teams of the country could easily be divided into half a dozen classes, representing that many degrees of relative strength—just as there are, in professional baseball, two major leagues of top-notch teams and below that classes AA, A, B, C and D.

As in baseball, so is football—the public at large knows more about the majors than it does about the minors; but in baseball it's impossible for even an AA team to get membership in a major organization, while in football, there being no limited membership among the majors, it is possible not only for an AA team to get recognition from the higher-ups but even for a lowly class D team to step into the limelight within the compass of one season.

Of course a minor team can't do this by winning games—no matter how many of them—merely from elevens in its own class. To draw the spotlight a minor college team must step out of its class and defeat one or more of the major teams—as Georgia Tech did Penn, and Penn State, as Centre defeated Harvard a few years ago, as Alabama beat Washington and tied Stanford at Pasadena, and as Georgia blacked Yale's eye last year.

But Centre has been unable to remain in high society. For some years Rutgers held a high position, but she also found the pace too fast for her. Lehigh once was powerful and great but she has no longer any place in the sun. In other words it isn't enough to get there—you must also manage to stay. A college's position in the football world is exactly what that college makes it. No importance attaches to what you once were. It's what you are today that counts.

Like World History

It's like world history. Some nations are forever going down and some are constantly coming up. In football the trend of empire also seems westward—and southward. At least western and southern football has been gaining rapidly on eastern football for a score of years and seems about to have caught up.

In the east few minor teams have risen to a place of prominence in the last decade. N. Y. university is one of these. Bucknell has been making a strong effort for some years and seems now to be forging ahead with marked speed. All other teams that are playing major or class AA football in the east have been doing it for so long that none of them can be regarded as newcomers.

In the Middle West all western conference teams have a stretch of ancient history back of them. Outside that organization Missouri is a team that has been going unusually well for the past several seasons and seems definitely to have arrived. At spasmodic intervals Marquette, Ohio Wesleyan and Michigan State have seemed about to burst into the limelight for keeps, but their fitful flares seem again to have flickered out. Nebraska and Notre Dame forced their way in among the elits years ago.

In the far west Southern California, Washington and Stanford all joined California in the hunt for the golden fleece several or more years ago and have continued therein and contributed their full share of eclat. Other far western elevens that have drawn from nationwide attention, especially last year, were St. Mary's and Santa Clara.

S. M. U. Outstanding Team

Coming down to the present year the only eastern team that has made a stir has been the Davis-Elkins squad, which won from West Virginia and Navy two Saturdays in succession. Since then we hear of them, and this is not because they are not winning their games but because their opponents are unknown nonentities. If Davis-Elkins will put out as good an eleven next year and will compose a schedule of representative teams she will stand a chance of gaining recognition.

Of all sections of the country the teams that have splashed the water the highest and widest have hailed from the land of cotton.

It started when Loyola of New Orleans went north and held Notre Dame to a one-touchdown lead. Followed South Carolina, who journeyed to Chicago and won from Stagg's eleven. Next we recall that S. M. U. gave West Point a greatly improved understanding of the way football is played in Texas by forcing a virtual tie with the Army team. Then Virginia, after many years of wandering in the wilderness, found herself at Princeton and showed an astounded Tiger that football is being played with plenty of glee below the Mason and Dixon line.

Of course Vanderbilt's victory over Colgate and Georgia Tech's defeat of Notre Dame will greatly aid in raising the prestige of southern football; but there was nothing bewildering in these victories, for both Vanderbilt and Georgia Tech have been in select society for a dozen years or more, and Georgia, Centre and Tulane have been heard of oftener than once in all northern strongholds.

But the newcomers to the big metropolis from the far south have this year been those four: Loyola, S. M. U., South Carolina and Virginia. Florida would probably surprise most any northern team even if she couldn't win; but unfortunately the alligators have no northern game arranged for.

On Nov. 3 Alabama meets Wisconsin in Madison. It will be a game worth top admission prices.

CONFEDERATE WIDOW APPEALS TO SOUTHERNERS

Editor Record News: I am the widow of a confederate solider and went through the trying days of the reconstruction of the South after the war and I am greatly displeased and shocked by the attitude that many Southern people are taking with regard to the presidential election this year.

I can remember well that the Republican party sent school teachers to the South to teach the negroes that they were as good as the white people and that the southern people had such little respect for them that they would not speak to them when they met them.

I can also remember that the Republican party sent worthless white men from the North whom we called carpet baggers to hold our offices and appointed negroes along with them. Even the negroes at that time had no respect for the negroes and carpet baggers that I mentioned.

I can also remember that when elections were held that the carpet baggers dragged in every lousy negro they could find to vote and the soldiers were put at the polls. This was considered an insult to the South and was done for that purpose.

And now I have learned that Herbert Hoover issued an order in the department of commerce making the white girls and negroes all work together and use the same accommodations. I can not understand how any Southern person can tolerate the thought of supporting any such person and if they had had the experience I had with such people they would not support them.

I hear Tammany hall abused in the South and that reminds me that they sent O'Conner to get Jefferson Davis out of jail and I remember Jefferson Davis in irons, and in prison, and ill from exposure and mistreatment, and I know that if these people had suffered like we had after the civil war that they would appreciate what Tammany hall did for us.

I well remember that Tammany hall was the only place that the Democrats of the South could meet in the North and that the Republican party called it a Rebel's congress and have fought it ever since. We were grateful to Tammany then and it hurts me for the South to abandon Tammany when it helped us as much as it did.

I well remember that the Republican party was a party of hate organized against the South and that the Sout hhas never profited by any actions of the Republicans.

The confederate soldiers sang praises of Father Ryan, a Catholic chaplain, whose many acts of kindness and mercy endeared him to the Southern hearts, and when I hear the Southern people abuse the Catholics, it seems like sacrilege to me.

The Catholic question always brings to my mind the battle of Sabine Pass where 42 Catholic soldiers, led by Dick Dowling, captured 650 union prisoners and sank two gun boats and stopped an invasion of the South. This victory was characterized by Jefferson Davis as one of the noblest deeds of the war and he told them they had won imperishable renown and that they came from a race that never turned its back on a foe, and they were called the "Davis Guards."

I think ingratitude and inappreciation are the meanest faults that can befall a people and I hope and pray that the Republican party, our ancient enemy, may not win this election by Southern votes. When I think of what we endured under Republican rule, I would prefer to have my right hand withered than cast a vote for any party that wants to elevate the negro to the high plane of a white man, and I beg all of you Southern people to rather hide and not vote at all than to vote for the party which has been trying for 60 years to foist the negroes upon us.

FEDERAL JUDGE ASKED TO QUIZ VOTE CONDITION

M'ALLEN, Texas, Oct. 29. (UP)—Following a mass appeal to President Coolidge to relieve conditions in Hidalgo county, a movement got under way to get Federal Judge J. C. Hutcheson Jr., of Houston, to come here and take whatever steps possible to straighten out an involved political fight.

Mayor B. F. Freeland of McAllen today wired Judge Hutcheson asking him to come here and begin an immediate investigation.

Blackmer's Aides Ask Compromise

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29. (UP)—Negotiations between attorneys for H. M. Blackmer, missing Teapot Dome witness, and treasury officials for a compromise of the government's tax assessment of nearly $2,000,000 against the former Denver oil magnate now are under way, the United Press learned today.

Officials said Blackmer's appeal to the United States board of tax appeals for a recheck of his case would not bar a compromise should arrangements satisfactory to both sides be reached.

KU KLUX KLAN WILL BE BUSY IN OKLAHOMA

TULSA, Okla. oct. 29. (INS)—The Ku Klux Klan will be active in Oklahoma conducting an "educational campaign" against the election of Alfred E. Smith as president, according to announcement by H. O. Tribbe, Kansas City klan official, in a speech here.

Tribbe, in his first meeting held here Sunday afternoon, reviewed the original Ku Klux Klan organized more than 60 years ago, "to restore supremacy of the whites in the South" and declared an educational campaign against Smith "without masks" would be continued throughout the state.

TURKS WANT SUNDAY

ANGORA, Oct. 29. European nations are believed likely to sanction the change because of commercial pressure.

POSTAL OFFICIALS WILL VIEW BUILDING SITES

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29. (UP)—First Assistant Postmaster General Bartlett and Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Schuenemann, plan to visit St. Louis on Nov. 15 to determine the most suitable site there for a new postoffice. They will also visit Fort Worth and San Antonio, Texas, and other cities in the South and Southwest where new federal buildings are to be erected.

QUART OF WATER CLEANS KIDNEYS

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Eating too much rich food creates acids, which excite the kidneys. They become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood. Then we get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys, or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin drinking a quart of water each day, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, and in a few days your kidneys may act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush and stimulate the kidneys; also to help neutralize the acids in the system, so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby often avoiding serious kidney complications.—Adv.

Several interviews were read and discussed at the regular meeting of the Junior College Writers' club Monday morning in the dining room of the home economics department during the fifth period. During the past week the members interviewed several members of the faculty and downtown business men. According to Miss Eva Weber, sponsor of the club, the students are very enthusiastic in the work. The subject of the interviews was "Possibilities Offered by Various Occupations and the Training Required." Several original poems were also read by members of the club. The next subject to be discussed by the club is editorials.

LEE DE FOREST'S RIGHT TO PATENT RECOGNIZED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29. (INS)—The supreme court today declared Dr. Lee De Forest, American scientist, the true inventor of one of modern radio's greatest devices—the feed-back circuit—and sustained his claim to patent rights. De Forest's claim was upheld over that of Edwin H. Armstrong, one-time Yonkers, N. Y., amateur operator, in lower courts the patent was claimed for Alexander Meissner, a German, and Irving Langmuir, of the General Electric company.

"EGG ERA" IMPENDS in AMERICA

"Lindbergh's head is almost square and is one of the finest I ever saw. Any sculptor would pick him as a go-getter, a combination of daring, quick thinking"

Typical American Skull Today Is Oval, Says the Sculptor Conlon, and in a Few Centuries It Will Be Egg-Shaped, the Large End Uppermost to Allow for Brains—Thus a Distinct American Type Is Evolved Out of the Melting Pot

"Darrow has the largest head I've ever seen from forehead to back. That length indicates remarkable development of the reasoning faculties"

By H. C. Norris

Paris.

"DON'T laugh at the hen. She has evolved from the egg; the American is evolving into one. Take a large egg in one hand and a mirror in the other. If you cannot readily distinguish between the two reflections, then you're 100 per cent American; the ovoid ancestor of the 110 per cent Americans with which the United States will, within the next few hundred years, be filled."

It was George Conlon who said it in his pleasing Maryland speech, the while his long fingers manipulated a mass of clay into a dancing girl airily poised on one toe.

A real workman, smocked and dusty, he stood beneath the skylight of his Rue Campagne Premiere studio surrounded by sculptured heads and figures and groups. Two heads immediately caught the eye; the two which have brought this sculptor new fame both in Paris and America. They were the head of Lindbergh, a copy of which was recently installed at the American Embassy in Paris, and the head of the American attorney Clarence Darrow, which has just been completed.

OF THESE heads George Conlon was speaking, and as he spoke his hands paused for a minute to point out the strikingly different configuration.

"Lindbergh's head," he went on, "is almost a square, and it is one of the finest heads I ever saw. Look at the width here, where the reasoning faculty is lodged. Look at the shape of the face muscles; experience, that's what they spell. See these muscles around the chin; that lad has gritted his teeth more than once! Determination, practical common sense, courage, sheer brains; that's what the shape of Lindbergh's head tells you.

"Take him in any crowd—see these photographs, for example—you'd notice him even if you didn't know who he was. He stands out in any group of men. Notice the shape and carriage of his head, and then notice the heads of the people around him! No wonder he could fly the Atlantic.

"A sculptor, you know, learns to read a man's character and possibilities from the shape of the skull. Any sculptor would pick Lindbergh as a go-getter, a combination of daring and clear thinking. Any sculptor could tell you that if this young man of 25 planned a daring feat he would plan it carefully. It isn't any surprise to me that his plans for an Atlantic flight were the result of months of serious thought.

"There's humor in the muscles of that face, too. By the way, when Lindbergh landed at Le Bourget, the French officials all rushed forward with chairs. 'No, thanks,' he said, 'I've just been sitting.' And there's poise; the kind of poise which keeps a man's head from being turned.

"You think of Lindbergh as 'a typical American,' don't you?" The sculptor chuckled and dabbed another bit of clay on the far-flung foot of the dancing girl. "Well, he isn't. Lindbergh is not, of course, the only human being who ever possessed his type of skull; but certainly he's not 'typical.' He's 'super.' The typical American skull today is oval. In a few centuries it will be egg-shaped."

He indicated the head of Clarence Darrow—a massive head with shrewd, ironic, joke-loving lines at the mouth. "Monkeys?" the head seemed to say, harking back to the famous trial of the People of Tennessee vs. Darwin. "If you think we aren't descended from monkeys, look around you." Or something to that effect.

"Darrow has the longest head I've ever seen," Conlon commented, "not long up and down, but from the forehead to the back. Naturally, he's a good lawyer; that length indicates remarkable development of the reasoning faculty. It's perfectly true that a good attorney ought to be long-headed. He was, and by the bye, one of the most interesting subjects I've ever modeled"—and Conlon has modeled a good many subjects since winning the Rinehart Scholarship for European Study, which was at Baltimore in 1911—"with a keen humor that kept us all laughing."

"Kept us all laughing?" There were other people present?

"Oh, yes," Conlon answered. "I like to have the studio full of people when I'm at work, especially when I'm doing a portrait bust. If the subject's friends are present, the subject acts and looks more natural. But I think I like most to do very young children."

He nodded toward a chubby little head that had the most dolorous look in the world about mouth and eyes. "A Belgian baby," he said. "She was always on the point of bursting into tears. Nothing egg-shaped about that little rounded head, is there?

"No, it isn't any joke about the egg-shaped Americans. On the other hand, it isn't any tragedy, either. It's just one of old Nature's inscrutable doings. Really, it's less the fault of Mother Nature than of George Washington. He made America free. The result was that big slices of all the other nations emigrated to America. And the further result is that the melting pot, if I may mix my metaphors, has hatched an egg. Not necessarily a hard-boiled egg. A good egg, from the viewpoint of brains. From the viewpoint of beauty—well, every one knows what an egg looks like. Artists say it is beautiful."

HE ADDED another dab of clay to the dancer, who didn't look like an egg at all—and yet was exquisite.

"Her great-great-grandchildren will look like eggs, however," smiled Conlon; "you just wait and see. While you're waiting, get several long pieces of string, tie objects of strikingly different shape to the ends, get some one to whirl them round rapidly, then stand back and watch the results. It will be a featureless blur.

"Roughly, that's what nature is doing in the United States. Intermarriage corresponds, let's say for the sake of argument, with the optical intermingling of different objects swung on strings.

"In America we have all shapes and types of heads; Swedish, Irish, Italian, Russian—the entire list. The combination of Irish and Jewish, for instance, produces often a classical Greek type. But the combination of all types produces something as near a blank as nature can contrive—a head which is egg-shaped and features which are pretty nearly nil.

"It's as if Nature, confronted with such a bewildering variety of shapes, merely threw up her hands and then started to evolve the simplest shape in her repertory. Began all over again at the beginning, so to speak.

"During the parade of the American Legion in Paris I was struck once more by the extraordinary range of types in American heads. Square, bullet, long, short, round, and what have you.

"The gradual blending of these types into an ovoid is, of course, more noticeable in the younger generations, though, as every sculptor realizes, there are plenty of mature Americans today whose heads are noticeably oval. As for features, it is rare now to meet the rugged, sharply defined features which cartoonists give to Uncle Sam. At present we speak of Americans as 'clean-cut.' They are. But pretty soon, as Nature reckons time, the description 'smooth-faced' will mean exactly what it says."

You tried to visualize the flapper of the year 2027, with her luminous, flat eyes and pinpoint nose, casting an ovoid glance at the young athlete with the kind of head, except perhaps for size, that you could pick up in any hen-coop. Would the small end of the egg be the crown of the head, or vice versa?

"Vice versa," Conlon said firmly; "the large end will be uppermost, to allow for brains. That's why it is so much better to look like an egg than to be one. An egg has no intellect—at least, hens have gained no reputation for logical thinking—but some of our brainiest Americans of today have egg-shaped skulls. Don't you know how cartoonists love to represent a professor as having an enormous dome-like skull and a tiny face? The egg-shaped head ought to allow for bigger and better brains where there's always room for them—at the top.

"And don't worry about the ovoid flapper of the future, nor about her young man. You can be sure right now that each will think the other is perfection, and neither of them will ever understand how their dozen great-great-grandparents could have seen anything in those crude, massive, early American features that shot out over the face in all directions. So untidy."

BUT—an egg. So lacking in individuality.

"Not at all," Conlon replied. "There are freckled eggs, brown eggs, white eggs, big eggs, little eggs; a wide range of styles. And while Nature is trying her best to transform the American head into a complete egg, she will never quite make it. Human beings, you see, are not eggs, after all; and they will always cling to features, or rather, features, however smoothed out, will always cling to them.

"The general style of the head will be egg-shaped. We can't help that, for Nature has set her heart on it and she has often accomplished more difficult things without half trying. But even the Americans of the far and entertaining future will be able to tell one another apart, even if to other nations they look a good deal alike—as the Orientals look to us."

He added, quite casually: "And, of course, you can always make your own head and face. We all do. It will be a little more difficult by the time the trend of heads is egg-shaped, but, inside certain limitations, it might be done even then."

Make your own head. Especially, make your own face!

"Why, of course." Conlon looked up from the dancing girl and nodded. "We all do it, but unfortunately we do it for the most part unconsciously. A baby's skull is a soft thing, not even fastened together in the middle. Every one is aware that as the child grows the shape of its head changes, but I believe few people realize the chief reason for the change in shape.

"As a man thinketh, so he is. It's particularly true of the skull. Of course, you must have a brain to begin with, but if a child reasons things out for himself—whether he does it voluntarily or is taught to do so—he is going to have a head which is broad at that part where the reasoning faculty is lodged. And so on. If, as in the case of Lindbergh, he makes up his mind to surmount difficulties—and if he has difficulties to surmount—he will set his teeth and develop a firm jaw.

"If a woman, for instance, decides to worry about things, she is going to create all those lines and wrinkles which keep the beauty shops open. If she is ill-tempered, her mouth will betray that fact; for hard words make hard mouths. Whether she takes life sadly or happily, the actual muscles of her face will indicate her outlook. From the shape of the skull and the muscles of the face you can judge with surprising accuracy a person's temperament, philosophy, character and abilities. At least, a sculptor can.

"But, as I said, unfortunately most people don't realize that they are making their own faces and heads till the faces and heads are made. Then they look in the mirror and blame it on their ancestors. They lament that they've inherited grandfather's chin, when what they've cultivated is grandfather's disposition. About the only feature you can't change just by thought waves is your nose. But take care of the rest, and your nose will take care of itself. If it doesn't, you can always take it to a facial surgeon. With the egg ideal in sight, however, the nose will soon be going into eclipse."

At a deft touch he donated a particularly nice one to the dancer. "It will be an easy age for painters and sculptors," he added thoughtfully.

Which, with this and that, switched the talk around to artists and sculptors of the present age; their work, their fight for recognition.

"And it oughtn't to be a fight," said Conlon seriously; "in fact, the artist has his biggest fight in the United States, where things ought to be easiest. Why do so many young sculptors and artists come over here to Paris instead of working in their own country? Because they get more encouragement here, and the reason they get it is because France gives an official, governmental recognition to art. Nobody is under the delusion that France is so rich a country as the United States; yet France holds official salons each year in Paris and the young artist can work on something representing his ideal with the comforting knowledge that France is back of him and that if he makes good he will receive—oh, not a big sum, but enough to have made his labor worth while; enough to encourage him to continue.

"IF HE does a good piece of work, the French Government will buy it; the French Government sets aside a sum for exactly that purpose. Often the French Government presents the work of art to the native town of the artist, and so it comes about that nearly every French town has a good museum.

"In the United States, if a man does a good piece of work he generally has to depend on some commercial firm or some private collector for a sale. This is one reason why American art grows more and more commercial. It's a pity. What America needs is a Secretary of Art, a national art fund, some national scholarships. There are plenty of artists. An official salon, held annually in Washington or New York, would both encourage young artists and give them standards to live up to. It would also give them the advantage of comparing their own work with the work of better men; in other words, something to fight against, and a fight is necessary to an artist's development. New York or Washington could become one of the great art centers of the world. I repeat that we have the talent; all we lack is a Ministry of Fine Arts. And we lack that only because we haven't quite waked up to the need for it. I wish the women's clubs would take up the idea. The art spirit doesn't need to be planted, nor revived, in the United States. It's there now, frost-bitten a little but very much alive. A mixture of races is the best recipe for genius, and beneath the sunshine of an official salon, how that genius would flower!"

He ought to know. He began taking prizes at the French salons long ago, and one of his recent sculptures, the Jemmett Memorial, unveiled last July at Biarritz, was described by French officials as "the finest monument to chivalry in modern times."

WEEKS PLANS TO ADVERTISE

National Campaign For New Settlers

Charles Weeks, California agricultural expert with whom a group of landowners of the city recently signed a contract for a colonization project in the Wichita valley, will spend the next few weeks conducting a national publicity campaign to bring interested persons to the valley.

Mr. Weeks has returned to his home in Owensmount, Calif., and will launch the campaign from there. He plans to send special publicity material on the project to those on his active mailing list of 25,000 prospective dairymen and poultry farmers.

Mr. Weeks will also deliver illustrated lectures concerning the project in the principal cities of the country, taking in mainly the central and west central parts of the country. A selling organization will be established in the city to do active work while Mr. Weeks is conducting his personal campaign.

The first step taken by local landowers toward putting the colonization idea into operation is the contract which was let to Mytinger and Walker last week for the construction of a model farm on the Westmoreland lands.

New Juvenile Officer Makes First Report

James L. McDonald, newly appointed county juvenile officer, tendered his first monthly report to members of the county commissioners' court at their meeting Monday afternoon.

Mr. McDonald reported his office has handled 12 juvenile jail cases, including four for theft, two for burglary, three for drunkenness and three incorrigibles during the month. He handled 23 cases of truancy, the report said.

The Lone Star Road Machinery company of Dallas was successful bidder for road patrol machinery in precinct one. Their bid was for $2,919.56.

Order of Moose Plans Benefit Kid Show

The Loyal Order of Moose has leased the Wichita Falls Memorial auditorium for Nov. 21 for the presentation of a kid show for the benefit of Mooseheart, the Moose national home.

The show is to be a home talent affair. The cast will consist of children and the ushers will be children. One of the aims is to get as many children as possible for the audience.

Henry Dolph is the local supervisor for the lodge.

Applications For Work Total 24 Past Week

Twenty-four persons made application for work at the office of the city free employment agency for the week ending Oct. 27, according to the report submitted by Miss Fern Sides, secretary, to the chamber of commerce.

Seven of the 24 persons were women. Applications for work reported 20 dependents. Employment was obtained for 22 persons during the week, the report showed.

Tiny Dancer Scores 80 Per Cent To Lead 'Discovery Week' Performers

Little Miss Marjorie Fay Hoenscheidt with a song and dance act won the highest percentage rating given by the judges in the Monday evening program of "Discovery Week" at the Olympic theater when a large attendance testified to interest being shown in the plan to discover talent among local entertainers.

The little lady was given 80 per cent rating and was afforded first choice by the audience which was given an opportunity of expressing first and second places by applause. Only three other acts have been given an 80 per cent rating by the judges in five cities visited recently: Denver, St. Louis, Kansas City, Tulsa, Okla., and Wichita, Kan.

Five Are Perfect

Only five standard vaudeville acts in the country are given a 100 per cent rating, according to the judges. Judges are: Henry Brown of the Brown Theatrical company of New York; Mrs. Brown, and Miss Clarice McPherson of St. Louis. They will judge each performance during the week.

Rating given other acts on the Monday evening program are: Oriental dance by Miss Juanita Burgess, 77 per cent; Paul Seeds band with Phyllis Seeds, solo dancer, 76 per cent; Thompson's Hawaiians with Maxine Crowson, "Hula" dancer, 75 per cent; "Ramona," by Harley Herndon and Charlotte Sutton, 73 per cent; and an Indian dance given by Kenton Wharton, 70 per cent.

Announcement of ratings will be published following each performance this week. These ratings will be used as basis in comparing the Wichita Falls talent with that from other cities. Rating is given on entertainment value alone. The Dent theaters and the local theater management have nothing to do with the judging, it has been announced.

The Tuesday evening program will be made up of eight numbers as follows: "Highland Fling," by Bernice Taylor; "Bits of Harmony," by Edwin Sutton; "The New Piano," by Evelyn Lewis; "Musical Moments," by Wayne Borah and Jack Ballard; "Chalk Talker," by Aubrey Warnock; acrobatic toe dance, by Betsy Bain; song, by Lois Ferle Danbert, and "Liefesfreed," by Charlotte Sutton.

McNarma, superintendent of the United States breeding station at Greenville, will discuss the "Cause for the Decline in the Yield of Texas Cotton"; W. J. Neale of Waco, representative of the Texas Cotton association, will speak on "The Preparation and Ginning of Cotton"; and John D. Rodgers, president of the Texas Cotton Breeder's association, will report on "Cotton Seed Supply and Distribution."

Pair Finds Liquor Cache; Arrested By Officers

EL PASO, Texas, Oct. 29. (UP)—Finding a liquor cache proved unlucky for Dolores Quintana and Jose Rocha.

Quintana pleaded guilty to transportation of liquor found in a mountain side and was fined $125 by Federal Judge Charles A. Boynton. Rocha pleaded not guilty and was held for trial.

Quintana pleaded guilty to transing the liquor as he was gathering wood one evening. He said he invited Rocha to go with him the next day and get it.

Two customs officers, they passed later, becoming suspicious, halted them and found the liquor.

Death Row in Eastland Jail Has First 'Occupants'

EASTLAND, Texas, Oct. 29. (UP)—For the first time in the history of Eastland county, the jail at Eastland contains three men who have been sentenced to the electric chair.

Clyde Thompson, under sentence for the murder of Leon and Lucian Shook, near the "ghost" city of Leeray last month, occupies a cell on the second floor.

Upon the third floor, E. V. Allen, sentenced to die for his participation in the robbery of the First National bank at Carbon and Thomas Davis, given the death penalty, in the Leeray murder case were in the same cell.

Thieves Damage School Safe to Get Only $12

LONGVIEW, Texas, Oct. 29. (AP)—Burglars did $150 damage to the high school vault here, over the week-end, to obtain about $12 in cash. A hole was dug in the wall of the vault and the locks were jammed, but the safe retained its contents, the receipts of the week-end high school football game and the thieves had to be satisfied with $12 in small change which they found outside of the safe.

Slight Earth Shock Felt in California

CALEXICO, Calif., Oct. 12. (AP)—A slight earth shock of three seconds duration was felt here at 4 o'clock this afternoon. No damage was done.

The tremor was reported more severe in El Centro, 10 miles north of here, but no damage was reported from that city.

Former Dry Raider Convicted of Assault

ELYRIA, Ohio, Oct. 29. (AP)—Louis Cicco, former Lorain dry raider, charged with shooting to wound Miss Betty Heywood, 12, when he fired upon an automobile which he mistook for the convoy of a liquor truck was convicted of assault and battery by a jury in common pleas court tonight.

LARGEST POSTCARD

College Club Sends Herb Giant Epistle Assuring Their Support

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29. (UP)—Herbert Hoover received today the world's largest postcard pledging him support of 4,000 students of the University of Washington Hoover-Curtis club.

The card, made from Douglas fir panel board, measures four by eight feet, is an inch thick and carries names of members in indelible ink.

The "card" weighs 50 pounds. It was sent first class mail and insured for $10,000.

BUILDING RULE REPEAL ASKED

Council Will Vote on Property Line Regulation

The repeal of the building line ordinance which determines the distance from the property line on which buildings may be placed, will be provided for in a repeal ordinance which the city council Monday night at its regular meeting in the Memorial auditorium requested Theibert Martin, city attorney, to draw up for presentation at next week's meeting.

The request to the city attorney was made on motion of the council after a request that L. W. Tarkington be permitted to erect an apartment house at Victory and Brook within seven feet of the sidewalks or property line.

Patton Makes Motion

J. H. Patton, alderman, made the motion when the council, after discussion, was unable to find any legal way in which a building permit may be granted under the present ordinance.

"If there is any way we can grant permission for the construction of this apartment, I believe we should do it," said Mr. Patton. "There are many men who need work, and this would give employment to a number of workmen for about three months."

The city attorney explained after the meeting that the building line ordinance is not a part of the present city zoning ordinance but is a special ordinance.

A crescent shaped cement barrier on the curb at Tenth and Brook was ordered removed in order to get advertising off of the streets. It is now used for advertising purposes, the council was told.

Club Given Permit

A permit to hold dances in the former Clint Wood home, at the same corner on which the barrier is located, was granted. The Brookhaven club, recently organized will hold dances there, it was said. When the proposition was discussed by the council as instituting a dance in a residence neighborhood, it was pointed out any dance permit may be canceled at any time the affair becomes objectionable.

C. B. Feider was granted a permit to erect an auto laundry at Tenth and Bluff when no protests were received at a public hearing.

The plumbing license which would reduce the renewal fee for plumbers from $50 to $25 was passed on third and final reading.

An amendment to the bond procedure ordinance in connection with the recent $250,000 bond issue, was passed on an emergency reading. It provides for the distribution of the tax for repaying the money borrowed by the bonds, over several city departments, and carries other provisions suggested by the market attorneys.

Ed Crump Becomes An Active Democrat

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct 29. (UP)—After weeks of comparative inactivity because of poor health, Ed S. Crump, boss of the powerful Shelby county Democratic organization here, actively supported Gov. Alfred E. Smith today in a two-page advertisement in all Memphis newspapers. He also announced plans for a final drive in Smith's behalf this week. The Shelby county organization controls virtually 30,000 votes.

SLAYER NAMED BY CORONER

Amarillo Woman Shot In Mother's Home

AMARILLO, Texas, Oct. 29. (AP)—A coroner's verdict said that Mrs. Mary Horton, 39, who was shot to death today at her mother's home, died of "gunshot wounds inflicted by H. Troy Horton with murderous intent."

Horton was arrested shortly after the shooting but refused to make a statement.

At the inquest, Mrs. L. H. Giles said that her daughter had been living with her since separation from Horton. Horton visited Mrs. Horton today and they quarreled when he insisted that she return to him, Mrs. Giles testified. Then he drew a pistol and ordered Mrs. Giles to leave the room, she said.

Mrs. Giles and a roomer, Mrs. Mary Gilbert, who also testified, said they left the room and Horton fired two shots at Mrs. Horton. Then, as he stepped over her body in the doorway, he fired at her twice, more the woman said.

The Hortons were divorced last December.

The couple have two children, Vernon, 11, and Troy, 17.

Dirigible Takes Northern Route

southeast of Cape Sable. The ship was then averaging 67 miles an hour and the weather was reported clear. She was about 980 miles from Lakehurst and hoped to reach her home port, Friedrichshafen, by Wednesday noon.

The great dirigible was on the steamship course from Boston to southern England, and there was every indication that Dr. Hugo Eckener would follow the normal northern route. This is somewhat south of the direct great circle course followed by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh in his historic flight to Paris last year.

Favoring Winds

While weather conditions were reported more favorable over the southern course toward the Azores, there were favoring tail winds to the north which Doctor Eckener apparently was determined to use to their full advantage. Weather reports compiled in New York indicated that the ship would encounter shifting winds and squally conditions as she got farther out to sea.

It was shortly before 2 o'clock this morning when the Graf Zeppelin, tugging at her leashes in the huge hangar at Lakehurst, N. J., where for two weeks she had lain side by side with the American dirigible Los Angeles, also a product of the Zeppelin works, slowly slid through the great doors and emerged into the moonlit morning. More than 300 sailors hauled the great ship into the night and at 1:54 a. m., she was off.

21 Passengers

Down on her lists were 21 passengers, including one woman and a crew of 40. But there was one more passenger—a stowaway—the first to worm his way aboard a transatlantic airliner and make the trip without authority.

He was described as a "17-year-old" blond American youth and there was nothing in the message to indicate that his presence had caused chagrin although the danger of stowaways was one that Doctor Eckener had been guarding against carefully.

The stowaway was Clarence Terhune, a 19-year-old caddy whose home is in St. Louis.

"St. Louis," as he was known at the Rye Country club where he worked during the summer, left Rye Friday with a hint that he was adventure bound. He had $50 in his pocket, his savings for the season. Just as stowaways aboard regular steamships, it is highly likely Clarence will be working his way across, though it is doubtful if there can be much for him to do other than help the chef in the Graf Zeppelin's fancy galley.

Stands on the Immigration Question"; Mrs. G. R. Davidson, Electra, on "Why We Should Stay Within the Democratic Party."

One of the numerous telegrams which came to the station and which were read to the listeners by Mrs. Smedley came from Judge Nelson Phillips of Dallas. His telegram, in part, follows:

"There comes to every Democrat the clear call in this campaign to do his unstinted duty in behalf of the national ticket and all other nominees of the party. A true Democrat can and will do no less. The Republican party is a purely sectional party. It was founded solely by men of northern and eastern states on a purely sectional issue to destroy what, under the constitution, was a property right possessed chiefly by the people of the South.

"We have as our leader a great champion of the people who will see that the government is dedicated to the welfare not of a section but to all parts of the country. His career is a living exposition of the Democratic maxim of equal rights to all men and special privileges to none. His armor is his honest thought and simple truth is his utmost skill.

"More than a happy warrior he is a fearless leader of public opinion and undaunted defender of the principles of free government."

Another, which came from Mrs. John Prewett of Lebanon, Tenn., follows:

"The women of the state of Andrew Jackson send greetings to the women of the state of Sam Houston and urge them not to falter in defense of the principle for which our fathers lived and fought."

Jury Finds Police Heads Unfit to Hold Office

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 29. (AP)—Three inspectors of police and 16 police captains were declared "unfit to hold any public office" by the special grand jury investigating bootleggers and alleged police bribery in a presentment today to Judge Edwin C. Lewis, instigator of the inquiry.

More Than 400 Tickets Sold For Shrine and Mason Halloween Party

Arrangements for the Shrine and Master Mason Halloween masquerade party at Masket temple Wednesday night have been completed and more than 400 tickets have been sold for the event, according L. N. Davey, chairman of the entertainment committee of Maskat temple.

The entertainment will last from 9 until 1 o'clock Wednesday night and is open to all Master Masons, Shriners and their families. The proceeds of the party will go toward purchasing new uniforms for the uniformed bodies of Maskat temple.

Several types of Halloween games will be played at the party with prizes going to the winners of the games and special events. Dancing will also be a feature of the entertainment. The "Little Rovers," local orchestra, will furnish the music for the dancers.

Contests and games include apple bobbing contests, pop corn eating contests, peanut races, and guessing contests with prizes being given to the winner of each. Prizes for the best waltzers, best fox trot and the best Halloween costume, will be offered to the winners of the special events.

Negotiations for the whole program of the entertainment to be broadcast over station KGKO are under way, Mr. Davey said.

BEITZEL'S NAME LEO J. THOMAS

Woman Claiming to Be His Former Wife

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 29. (UP)—The man known as Russell St. Clair Beitzel, under sentence to die at San Quentin penitentiary, November 30, in reality is Leo J. Thomas of McKeesport, Pa., a communication to Sheriff William I. Treager said today.

The asserted identification was contained in a letter from Mrs. Mary Thomas, 2311 Sylvan avenue, McKeesport, who claimed "Beitzel is my husband, Leo, who deserted me five years ago."

Dallas Ford Officials Guests of W. S. Langford

W. S. Langford was host to a small group of Ford Motor company officials from Dallas at luncheon at the Wichita club Monday. The visitors were: A. J. Langford, branch manager of the Ford Motor company in Dallas; J. K. Meicer, manager of the Dallas branch of the Universal Credit company which is sponsored by the Ford Motor company, and J. R. Temple of the Dallas branch of the Lincoln division of the Ford Motor company.

Precinct 17 Voting Box Changed to Tabernacle

The voting place for precinct 17 has been changed from the Carrigan school to the South Side Baptist tabernacle at 2206 Holliday, according to an announcement made Monday by J. W. Nicholson who is in charge of the election in that precinct by appointment of the commissioner's court.

The change was made due to the muddy streets at the Carrigan school, it was said.

Memphis Boy Killed In Texas Tech Tragedy

LUBBOCK, Texas, Oct. 29. (AP)—Two youths were killed and 11 undergraduate students in Texas Technological college were injured in an automobile collision near here last night.

The students were on their way to Lubbock from Fort Worth where they had attended a football game. Mist and rain was believed to have obscured the vision of both drivers of the machines which collided and rolled into a ditch.

Paul Brewer, 19, Memphis, and Clint Lewis, Wiley, were killed.

the list of recommendations from each party given to the county judge who formally makes the appointment of one Democrat and one Republican for each precinct.

It was explained that the challengers are named by the county chairman of each party and that these challengers are limited to one to each party for each precinct.

Attention also was called to a ruling by Claud Pollard, attorney general, saying that voting a split ticket is legal. Copies of this ruling also were given to all precinct chairmen.

Mr. Hartt said that the law provides the Democrats and Republicans are to have an equal number of election judges and that this and all other phases of the election laws would be checked up that they might be safeguarded in every way to guarantee a legal and fair election.

Kiwanis Club Has Halloween Frolic

The annual Halloween frolic of the Kiwanis club Monday evening was a merry event which began with a banquet at 7 o'clock and ended with a dance, at the Woman's Forum. The Little Rovers orchestra played for the dancers and during the banquet hour.

The program was presided over by Walter Nelson Jr. and was made up of the following numbers: Selections by a negro quartet; violin selection "Canzonetta" (D'Ambrosio) by Stanley M. Raub, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. J. W. Akin Jr.; vocal solos, "Sylvia" (Olney Speaks) and "False Prophet" (Scott) by Miss Modena Howell, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Akin; guitar and harmonica duet by Dick Howell and E. N. Dorsey; skit by Honey Boy and Sassafras; dance by Miss Peters of the Knickerbocker studio with music by Miss Virginia Walters.

The program was brought to a conclusion by boxing matches between Grover Bullington Heeney, Ell Morgan Dempsey and Walter Caldwell Sharkey and George Winburne Tunney. Caldwell won the prize, a pajama suit.

Mrs. O. W. Wilson was declared winner of the apple bobbing contest and was awarded as prize the tub and water. A snowball fight brought the merry evening to a close.

ARABS KILL GENDARMES

BASRA, Turkey, Oct. 29. (UP)—Several gendarmes were killed when they attempted to disarm Arab tribes north of Ahwas. The tribesmen rioted because of a Persian decree ordering them to wear hats, jackets and trousers. Troops were sent to enforce obediences of the decree.

Atheist, in Hospital As Result of Hunger Strike, 'Not Wanted' at Jail

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 29. (UP)—Charles Smith, atheist leader, who went on a hunger strike when sentenced to 25 days in jail for distributing literature "calculated to incite a riot," may gain his freedom as an "undesirable prisoner," Chief of Police B. C. Rotenberry indicated today.

Smith became ill Saturday after 11 days of fasting and was ordered to the city hospital for treatment of "stomach trouble."

Chief Rottenberry ruled today against Smith's return to jail when Dr. C. M. Brooks, superintendent of the hospital, reported the "patient" was well and ready to be returned to his cell, despite the fact he has not touched food in 13 days.

"We don't want him," Rotenberry replied. "We've had enough of him. I shall not bring Smith back to jail unless he commits some other offense other than that for which he has been here."

Smith still lacks 12 days of serving out his jail term.

His case has attracted wide attention and sentiment in Little Rock favors his release in support of free speech.

Hoover Works on Final Campaign Plans As Al Waves Brown Derby

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29. (UP)—Herbert Hoover began to clear off his desk today preparatory to his departure for the West Thursday and the windup of a campaign for the presidency that has been unique in many respects.

The contrast between his type of campaign and that conducted by his Democratic opponent, Gov. Alfred E. Smith, was no more strikingly shown than today, just eight days before the nation will cast its votes.

Hoover spent the morning at his headquarters conferring with only a few close lieutenants regarding the last phases of the campaign, and during the afternoon locked himself away from the world in the study of his home completing his St. Louis address. Smith, meanwhile, was showing himself to crowds in Maryland, still waving the brown derby that has been the symbol of his vigorous stumping campaign for the presidency.

The Republican presidential candidate began the final week of the campaign with that confidence of victory that has been manifest with him and his aides about headquarters for several weeks.

Cake of Soap All That's Needed By Modern Youth for Hallows Vigil

Wednesday night is Halloween, which means the festival of All Saints or the vigil of the Hallows. It is the night before a holy day in which all persons may explode their extra energy in all sorts of harmless deviltry. Spooks will be abroad in great number to perform all sorts of weird things.

According to the New International Encyclopaedia it was the custom in England to crack nuts, duck for apples in a tub of water and perform other harmless fireside revelries as celebrants awaited the dawn of All Saints' day.

In America, long before hot water heaters supplanted the open fire and even before use of natural gas became popular, celebration of this occasion was removed from the hearthstone. Of course, parties are held in profusion, but the real celebration of Halloween is far from an indoor occasion.

It is a great night for small boys. Street car tracks are well greased after the last rumble of cars is heard, when weary motormen clang their ways to the barns and these servants of the public, as well as many others, are enabled to observe All Saints day with more consciousness of the occasion if not in a spirit of sanctity.

All the youth of America need to make Halloween a large event is a generous cake of soft laundry soap. Provided with this important piece of celebrating material he will overlook the lawn mower in the neighbor's yard and he will forget to hang the porch swing on the tallest tree or telegraph pole.

PASTOR FROWNS ON BIGOTRY

Democratic Rally Held At Charlie

Special to The Record News.

CHARLIE, Oct. 29.—The pastor's place is not in making political speeches and instructing congregations how to vote, said the Rev. R. C. Currington, pastor of the Primitive Baptist church, here tonight at a Democratic rally. The rally was to have been held out of doors, but due to the inclement weather was held in the church.

The Reverend Currington, in a brief general introduction of the speakers, told the audience the speakers' names and then left them to complete their own introductions.

Joe B. Carrigan, Wichita Falls attorney, told of what the two major parties offer for the future.

Ben P. Allred, former district attorney of Wichita county, spoke on the type of campaign being waged by the anti-Smith Democrats, and showed samples of the literature that organization is spreading to fight Governor Smith.

COLQUITT DEFENDS PREACHERS' ACTION

Special to The Record News

HENRIETTA, Texas, Oct. 29.—Charging that Gov. Alfred E. Smith favors opening the flood gates for immigration, O. B. Colquitt, former governor of Texas, spoke on behalf of the candidacy of Herbert Hoover here tonight at the court house. Dr. H. L. Reed introduced the speaker.

"Charges have been made against ministers for talking on behalf of prohibition and the ideals of the church for which Christians have fought for centuries," Governor Colquitt said. "It is their duty as ministers to fight for those things which are right and to condemn those things which are wrong.

"These good men who lay before the public the facts that Governor Smith's wet prohibition record are being attacked as lowering themselves in the eyes of the congregations by bringing politics into the church. That is because what they are saying hurts certain politicians who know the bitter truth is spelling their doom and end which they brought on themselves by taking Tammany hall into their arms."

HOLLY PLAYS IMMIGRATION STAND

Special to The Record News

HARROLD, Oct. 29.—The devastating effect that would follow Gov. Alfred E. Smith's immigration quota plan were put forward here tonight by Rev. C. F. NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Oct. 29. (AP)—Reports of rains and lower temperatures in the south, with the forecast pointing to the possibility of freezing weather in Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle, seemed chiefly responsible for advances in the cotton market here today. After selling up to 19 60 at the start, January contracts reacted to 19.45 under realizing but later advanced to 19.72 or 40 points net higher and more than $3 per bale above the low price touched on the reaction of late last Friday. They closed at 19.62 with the general market closing easy in tone but from 20 to 34 points net higher.

The opening was steady at an advance of 18 to 22 points on covering, combined with trade and trade commission house buying inspired by the unfavorable weather news and the relatively steady showing of Liverpool. Before this initial demand was supplied, active months had sold about 27 to 30 points net higher, with December advancing to 19.63 and May to 19.50. Later the market slipped off some 14 to 16 points from the best during the middle of the day.

December reacted to 19.47 and May to 19.35, but there was trade buying at the decline, and the market firmed up again during the afternoon when buying on private reports of unfavorable weather and low temperatures in the southwest was stimulated by reports of a slightly stiffer spot basis in Texas. December sold up to 19.75 or 41 points net higher and within 18 points of the recent high record while May advanced to 19.60 with active months generally showing gains of about $3 per bale as compared with Saturday's closing quotations.

The demand slackened at this level and there was a flurry of profit taking together with some southern selling which caused reactions of 7 or 10 points from the best in the last half hour.

Cotton futures closed steady 28 to 34 points higher; spot quiet; middling 19.90.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 29. (AP)—Promise of much colder weather for the cotton belt and reports of rains and sleet at many points caused the cotton market to open advance in today's trading until at the highest prices showed gains of slightly more than $3 a bale compared with Saturday's close. December contracts, after reacting from 19.05 to 18.93, rallied to 19.20 and closed at 19.15, or 37 points net higher. The general market closed at net gains of 35 to 38 points.

The market opened firm at an advance of 17 to 21 points owing to the weather map's indication of a cold wave to the northwest of the belt which traders feared would extend to the cotton-growing region, and an official forecast of freezing temperatures in Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle. Prices continued to advance after the start under an active demand until December reached 19.05, January 19.07 and March 19.06, or 27 to 28 points net up.

The advance was checked at these levels by realizing and prices eased off 12 to 13 points but the offerings were readily absorbed at this decline and the market started on the upgrade again and continued in that direction, making new highs in final trading when December and January reached 19.20 and March 19.19, or 40 to 42 points above the previous close. This demand was aided materially by late reports of sleet and rain at many points in the belt and more favorable textile reports. There was a renewal of realizing at the end and prices receded 2 to 6 points, January closing at 19.18 and March 19.13, or 35 to 38 points above Saturday's close.

Tight Money and Loan Calling No Barrier to Stock Market Bulls

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Oct. 29. (US)—Eight per cent money and the further calling of loans slowed but did not halt the advance in the stock market today. Motors, steel and other standard industrdials held firm throughout, while Radio was the outstanding feature again with advance of 8 points resulting from the merger rumors. Johns-Manville with gain of more than 5 points, Underwood with a jump of 3 and Nickel with advance of over 2 points were the outstanding specialties. It made no difference that the banks were writing the more active industrials down further in the loans nor that experienced brokers were influenced by such action to warn customers to lighten accounts.

Bullish enthusiasm was further enhanced by optimistic utterances of Arthur Cutten following those of Durant of last Friday. Sinclair registered a new high for the move while other oils held firm in some what quieter trading. Coppers were firm but duller also while the rails remained irregular.

Buying in Autos

There was buying in General Motors, Chrysler and other automobile shares influenced by belief that the bloom was not entirely off the advance in the group and that coming developments would prove costly to bears. Of course, the General Motors splitup declaration, expected next week, was the outstanding factor but there was favorable earnings estimate and rumor of mergers to effect other stocks. Chrysler particularly was the subject of highly enthusiastic estimates as to income and the resulting effect on market valuations.

Merger talk included expectation of early development in connection with Durant's planned consolidation and also connected Stutz Motor buying with interests prominent in the affairs of one of the largest corporations. Incidentally it was learned that two of the most powerful operators of the "Big Ten" arrive from the West tomorrow and will attend meetings in connection with General Motors recapitalization and other automobile affairs.

Steel Report Looms

Another bullish influence was the expectation of a highly favorable report of earnings from the Steel corporation. It was estimated that net for the nine months would be shown at close to $7.75 a share and this, it was felt, would indicate early melon cutting. Sinclair held its leading place in the oil list entirely as a result of continued activity by the Cutten interests whose optimistic views on the company's outlook were first outlined here several months ago. Marland oil was helped by expectation of important announcement this week that would prove active interest of the most powerful bankers. Paper stocks was sold on price cutting news while Abitibi Power suffered from worry about the dividend.

Johns-Mansville's strength reflected the continued absorption told of here in recent weeks for the account of interests close to bankers now in control of the company. Their expression of opinion on the stock are similar to their view of Can two years ago. Nickel entirely reflected work of the Durant group and there was rumor of the same interests contemplating more aggressive work in Combustion. Kroger added over 3 points to its gain coincident with report that negotiations for acquisition of Butler were almost completed. Bush Terminal climbed close to its high record price with further talk of important development pending. Consistent strength in Underwood-Elliott-Fisher reflects confidence of insiders as to further expansion of business.

Western Union Merger

Radio and Western Union was the latest combination mentioned in connection with Radio's strength and in some quarters it was maintained that closing of the deal was less than a fortnight away. There was some doubt that actual merger was that close but those usually familiar with Radio's affairs maintained that ultimately a merger seemed almost certain. Advance of over 4 points in Kolster was due to similar influence for it was declared that the International Telephone and Telegraph interests had been gradually adding to their interest in Kolster for the last several weeks and soon would have control.

Sterling rallied a little in a generally firm but quiet foreign exchange market professional covering caused rally in the cotton market on receipt of more bullish Liverpool cables but other commodities remained irregular with wheat sliding off due to the big crop prospects.

MIDWESTERN REVIEW

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 29. (AP)—(U.S.D.A.)—Curtailed receipts of cattle around the 11-market circuit resulted in a moderate advance on the beter grades of beef steers and yearlings while short feds and grassers ruled firm to slightly higher; other killing classes, stockers and feeders were little changed; eastern dressed beef trade again had a healthy tone with prices considerably higher than a week ago; choice yearlings in Chicago scored $17.50 and heavy steers reached $17.25; Kansas City had a liberal supply of good to choice white faced stockers with numerous loads carrying at $11 to $12.25; aggregate receipts were estimated at 113,110 as compared with 139,375 last Monday and 143,599 a year ago.

Hogs registered a general price advance of 10@15c today. The supply of around 97,800 was 19,500 short of a week ago but 20,000 more than a year ago. St. Louis realized $9.50 for the day's extreme top while at Omaha $9.20 was paid.

No material price changes were registered in the sheep market with the exception of slight declines on fat lambs at a few points, choice native lambs in Chicago realized $14 while choice range offerings at St. Kansas City and St. Joseph cleared at $13.65; total offerings were around 161,800 against 153,138 a week ago and 109,595 a year ago.

Grain

CHICAGO GRAIN REVIEW
By THOMAS TEMPLE HOYNE

CHICAGO, Oct. 29. (US)—Wheat slipped back somewhat today but the market looked firm at the close. Corn held its own and finished strong. Offers on the latter grain were run up a cent on the prospect of an advance tomorrow.

At the finish wheat was down ⅛c to 1c; corn was unchanged to ⅝c higher; oats were unchanged to ⅛c lower; rye was down ¼c to ⅝c. The market acted all through the session today as if there were selling orders on the upturns, but bigger buying orders on the declines.

A good deal of high-priced long corn was dumped overboard, I think, an easing up of the situation that probably left the market in better technical condition to get under way on the up side.

The visible supply showed a decrease of 862,000 bushels, reducing the total to 1,284,000 bushels. Sentiment among local traders continues bearish on corn, but the market is strong and with the demand for cash corn seems likely to go higher. Receipts today were more than 100 cars under the 500 expected.

Secretary of Agriculture Jardine issued a statement in regard to the Canadian wheat crop that is bullish.

Wheat showed one good spurt of strength during today's session, but most of the trading appeared to be in the way of adjustment of the market to the new high level of prices attained in the sharp upturn of Saturday. Repeatedly the market looked weak, but it firmed up on the declines.

Selling wheat short appears to me extremely inadvisable, no matter how the market acts, until the election is over. Even then it may be a better buy than a sale.

RAIN TO BOOM OIL ACTIVITIES

Tanks and Streams Filled By Downpour

With the possible exception of a raise in crude prices, the soaking rain that has been falling for the past 48 hours is the most welcome happening that has occurred in the North Texas fields for some time. The rain, which has been of inestimable value to the oil industry, practically brought to a standstill on account of water shortage, has been the means of replenishing the lease storage and in addition has filled the creeks and other sources of supply to the brim.

Wilbarger county, which is already showing a resumption of drilling, will in the next few days again show by the number of wells drilling the result of the downpour, and at least 45 wells will be drilling in various stages of completion.

In Archer and Young counties, which also suffered for want of this commodity, a general spudding in of many new wells is looked for, as many new locations made in the past few weeks are rigged up and only waiting on enough water to begin their development. Altogether in the neighborhood of from 80 to 90 wells are expected to begin actual drilling in the several counties comprising the North Central Texas area.

U. S. TO BUILD GIANT ZEPPS

To Be Modeled on Famous German Dirigible

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 (UP)—Lighter-than-air experts of the navy department have closely observed the performance of the German dirigible Graf Zeppelin with a view of incorporating some of the ship's best features in the two new dirigibles to be built for the U. S. navy, it was learned today.

Three navy men are making the return voyage to Germany on board the Graf Zeppelin as observers in the same capacity that Commander Rosendahl made the first journey across the Atlantic. In addition, navy engineers made a detailed inspection of the German ship while it was housed in the navy hangar at Lakehurst, N. J., it was learned authoritatively.

Plans and specifications for the new American ships already have been drafted but navy officials thought the German ship might offer some worthwhile improvements.

To Resemble Zepp

The new navy dirigibles will resemble the Graf Zeppelin but will be about two years ahead in special features and equipment.

When the navy dirigibles ZRS-4 and ZRS-5 are completed, the United States will have the largest and finest airships in the world. They will be almost twice as large as the Graf Zeppelin and nearly one-third larger than the two airships now being built in England.

Estimates for the new navy dirigibles were made on the basis of helium gas being used in the bags. By the use of hydrogen, such as in the Graf Zeppelin, the navy ships would be able to increase their cruising radius to more than 12,000 miles — or half way around the world. Speed and useful lift also would be increased by the use of hydrogen, it was pointed out, although helium, because of its non-explosive qualities, is the safest.

Outside of Great Britain and the United States no world power has a military rigid airship either built or in the process of construction. The Graf Zeppelin is classed as a commercial ship.

Many nations have numerous non-rigid dirigibles which are used for observation work and scouting in military and naval maneuvers but they compare to the giant dirigibles like a lap dog compared to a Great Dane.

MORAN AND MACK

Moran: Big boy, can you fight?

Mack: You'se right in my alley now. I'm the champeen.

Moran: Go on, you ain't no champion. How come you'se the champeen?

Mack: I got two more books than Gene Tunney's got.

Moran: Is you gonna take me to any Halloween parties this year?

Moran: What did I do the last time?

Mack: Why, when grandpop asked for the nutcracker you hit him on the head with a bottle.

Moran: That's a nutcracker, ain't it?

Mack: Yes, but it ain't table manners.

Moran: Aw, I'll go BY MYSELF.

Mack: I wish you was BY YOURSELF now.

How primitive are human beings even in this era. Extremes of heat and cold drive people to the shelter of the movie theaters, according to one of the local theater managers. If the present cool weather continues, in other words, unless the present season turns out to be a hot winter, the movies will be crowded pretty soon.

People take a greater interest in theaters during the cold months for they are better prepared for activity, and even going to the theater is considered activity for some people. It is relaxation for others and a distinct treat for nearly all.

The Majestic and Strand theaters have a new house manager in B. V. Warren transferred to Wichita Falls from the Dent theaters in Tyler.

Mr. Warren is another small (physically) manager for the Wichita Falls theaters. And C. M. Morehead is not particularly tall, either. Mr. Federer, general manager, says he gets 'em rather small so he can handle them to better advantage, but this department does not believe it. Mr. Federer, being tall, gathers small men around him as foils the better to show off his superior height, and so forth.

◆ ◆ ◆

Performances of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" at the Strand theater Sunday and Monday were well attended. The picture, adapted from the classic, carries the strong human appeal of the book, heightened many times by music fitting the action or sentiment of the production.

◆ ◆ ◆

Good acting in "The Desired Woman" on the program of the Olympic theater through Wednesday makes the picture. The plot has been somewhat overworked in pictures of army life. But the scenery is good and the acting exceptional, thus the appeal of "The Desired Woman."

◆ ◆ ◆

No announcement has been made of the programs for the Halloween Midnight Ramble at the Mission and the Midnight matinee at the Strand theaters, except that the programs will be complete changes from the programs of the remainder of the week.

◆ ◆ ◆

Announcement has been made that "The Wedding March" scheduled for the Strand is coming quite soon. The picture stars Eric von Stroheim, great Teutonic character actor, whose dramatic genius cannot be denied.

◆ ◆ ◆

"Discovery Week" at the Olympic theater is going along nicely with a great deal of interest being shown in the programs scheduled for the week.

Betting Odds on Hoover Drop in Kansas City

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 29. (UP)—Gov. Alfred E. Smith gained today in the odds being offered Kansas City bettors on his chances of being elected president over Herbert Hoover.

The odds posted today at several betting places were 3 to 1 favoring the election of Hoover, after odds of 4 to 1 went begging Saturday.

Included among the bets offered are $1,000 to $500 that Smith will carry St. Louis; $600 to $500 that Hoover will carry Jackson county, Missouri; even money that Smith carries New York. Eight to one that Smith carries Arkansas; three to one that Smith carries Texas; ten to eight that Hoover carries Oklahoma; $100 to $1,000 that Smith does not get more than 120 electoral votes.

BIG TELESCOPE TO BE LARGEST

Reflector to Cost More Than $600,000

PASADENA, Calif., Oct. 29 (AP).—The largest telescope in the world, planned to surpass by five or ten times the power of the great Hooker telescope on Mount Wilson, is to be erected on a California mountain top not yet designated.

The California Institute of Technology has announced that funds have been made available for its construction and that work on the 200-inch reflector with which it will be equipped will begin within a few months.

The telescope and a laboratory are a gift to the institute from the International Education board, with headquarters at New York. The amount of money involved was not disclosed, but it would of necessity be larger than that required to build the Hooker telescope, which cost $600,000.

It is expected that the new instrument will penetrate hundreds of millions of light years into space, bringing under observation hundreds of millions of now unseen stars and nebulae, opening a vast unexplored field of astronomical knowledge, besides bringing nearer objects visible with existing telescopes. Approximately a billion and a half stellar objects are within the range of the Hooker telescope.

The 200-inch reflector will double the size and quadruple the power of the Hooker telescope. Another important feature contemplated for the immense instrument is a 40-foot Michelson stellar interferometer which measures the diameter of the stars.

By means of this auxiliary it is hoped to measure the binary stars, which are two suns revolving about each other. If this information is obtainable, astronomers said, science may be in fair way to a solution of the ways in which worlds are created.

Dr. Bougrat Hopes To Keep Freedom

CARACAS, Venezuela, Oct. 29. (UP)—Dr. Pierre Bougrat waited today in a little jail in Carupano, hopeful that Venezuela's lack of an extradition law with France would mean his successful escape from Devil's island.

In 1925 he was accused and convicted of killing his friend, Jacques Rumebe, and sentenced to Devil's island—the French penal colony whose terrors are said to be the worst in the world. He escaped with two companions. Death threatened on every side. Their little boat was rocked and tossed by storms. It seemed they never would escape.

Then Bougrat reached Venezuela and was jailed, while authorities pondered on whether he should be extradited back to Devil's island.

Doctor Bougrat maintains that Rumebe died after treatments and that he hid his friend's body away because he feared the death might cause other patients to remain away.

20 Injured When Can Of Explosion Drops

NEW YORK, Oct. 29. (UP)—A passenger dropped a can of some inflammable fluid on a crowded subway train of the Interborough Transit lines today and in the resultant excitement 20 persons were injured.

Two were badly hurt. They were removed to hospitals and the others were treated in nearby shops.

The train had stopped at the Columbus circle stop of the West Side subway line when suddenly there was an explosion and flames shot each way in one of the standing cars. A dense, choking fume permeated the entire train.

TORRENTIAL RAINSTORMS

GENEVA, Oct. 29. (UP)—Torrential rains, which have been falling since Friday, caused a new landslide at Montarbino, enormous masses of stones and mud fell into the Arbedo valley. Half of the village of Arbedo is flooded and the main road into the town is impassable.

GUN BATTLE ON WACO STREETS

One Killed, Two Wounded In Shooting

WACO, Texas, Oct. 29. (AP)—One man, identified as Bryan Jones of Belton was dead, and two others wounded, one probably fatally, as a result of a street gun battle here last night between police and alleged automobile thieves.

One of the wounded men was W. C. McDonald, night police chief, shot through the cheek by a man whom he attempted to arrest. The other was Buckley Ferish of Bell county, who was near death from a bullet wound above his heart.

The shooting began when McDonald and Policeman Tom Abbott attempted to arrest two men they thought were in an automobile which had been stolen from Temple. The two men resisted, and fired several shots. One of them fell dead and the other fled, McDonald firing two shots at him as he ran.

Ferish was found seated on a tombstone in the yard of a Waco monument works shortly after the shooting. Today he denied knowing the slain man, but was unable to make a coherent statement.

BRUMBY CALLED INTO SHORE DUTY FROM SEA

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29. (UP)—Rear Admiral Frank H. Brumby, who directed salvage of the submarine S-4, when it sank off Provincetown, Mass., last December, has been detached from sea duty and has been assigned to serve as president of the board of inspection and survey here, the navy announced today.

Rear Admiral Frank B. Upham, commander of the battleship division No. 3, will succeed Brumby as commander of the control board.
