Gunman kills 22, self

Killeen massacre worst in nation's history

■ Man drives pickup through cafeteria window and fires at diners before committing suicide.

■ Gunman scared neighbors, related stories/6,7A

By Scott Rothschild
Associated Press writer

KILLEEN — A 35-year-old man drove a pickup truck through a cafeteria window Wednesday then calmly and methodically opened fire on people waiting in line for lunch, killing 22 before committing suicide, authorities and witnesses said.

It was the deadliest mass shooting in U.S. history.

Various news reports identified the gunman as George Hennard of Belton, a nearby town, but police would not confirm the identity. They said they had no idea what prompted the rampage.

Angela Wilson, 24, saw the gunman calmly, calculatingly step out of his truck and begin to pick his targets. The man, wearing sunglasses and a blank stare, turned toward Wilson.

"He raised the gun toward me, and I fell to the floor and started to crawl," she said. "He started shooting again, and glass fell on top of me as I crawled out."

"It was boom. Boom. Boom. The shots weren't real fast. He seemed very calm."

Peace Justice Robert Stubblefield said 22 people were dead, in addition to the gunman. Peace justices in Texas serve as coroners for many small towns.

"It appeared to be head and chest wounds," said Stubblefield. "I haven't seen anything like this — not since Korea. It was bad, things you read of in some other town."

Police Chief F.L. Giacomozzi said four plainclothes officers were the first on the scene and exchanged gunfire with the gunman, wounding him an unknown number of times.

"The only thing that kept it from being much worse was the proximity of undercover officers to the scene when the call came down," Giacomozzi said.

"Had they not arrived it's very evident that the shooting of innocent people would have continued. We're still piec-

Cafeteria patrons tell about 'horrible' scene

By Tim Madigan and Kaye Northcott
N.Y. Times News Service

KILLEEN — It was National Boss Day and lunch hour at Luby's on Wednesday was packed.

Hazel Holley was finishing a slice of lemon meringue pie when a pickup truck burst through the window and its driver began to shoot diners methodically.

At first, the 70-year-old widow thought, "How could anyone get up enough speed to lose control of their vehicle here? Others believed a pan had dropped, light bulbs had popped or a vehicle was backfiring.

"Then when the shooting started, I knew what it was," said Holley, whose late husband had worked in law enforcement. "He was shooting rapidly and repeatedly, firing round after round after round. People were screaming. It was horrible."

Clinic protesters state court issue, government says

WASHINGTON (AP) — State, not federal, courts should deal with clinic-blocking abortion protesters, the Bush administration told the Supreme Court on Wednesday. But a lawyer for clinic owners said recent protests in Wichita, Kan., showed "states need federal help."

The high court has a Virginia case under study, but lawyer John Schafer offered a vivid reminder of the upheaval in Wichita caused when Operation Rescue targeted abortion clinics in that city.

Hundreds of the anti-abortion group's members were arrested.

At issue is the availability of federal courts when abortion clinic owners sue for monetary damages or to bar future blockades.

The most pertinent question about Thomas now is the same that could be asked of the court as a whole: How conservative?

After a career in state and federal executive branch jobs where he established his conservative credentials, Thomas concedes he is no constitutional scholar. His views are evolving, he says.

City leaders consider lake between Midland, Odessa

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Midland and Odessa leaders are mulling over a proposal for construction of a recreational lake between the two cities, a plan they say could signal the beginning of a joint effort for economic development.

Most say the idea — discussed Tuesday by a joint coalition of city council, staff and chamber officials — is still in its formative stages. It would create a recreational facility at the terminal point of the Colorado River Municipal Water District pipeline, expected to be just west of the Midland International Airport.

The pipeline is expected to begin supplying water to the local area in 1995.

"We'd like to see some way Midland-Odessa and CRMWD can get together to create a recreational facility," Mayor Carroll Thomas said.

Midland County Commissioner Guy McCrary said leaders wanted to encourage discussion of a "joint recreational, leisure and economic development facility in the interest of both cities."

McCrary, Thomas and other leaders spoke at an informational session sponsored by TU Electric at a small recreational lake facility west of Wickett that the company retains for its employees.

"TU Electric has an interest in bringing these communities into a coalition of West Texans," said Bill Griffin, the company's western region manager. "We feel economic growth is going to depend on us working as a unit."

Griffin said the meeting site was chosen because it might be similar to a lake developed by the two cities.

A possible site for such a lake is a "terminal reservoir" that must be constructed to hold pipeline water at the line's end. Officials have discussed developing cultural attractions — possibly including a state park — in the area as well.

The plan — although it may be many years in coming to fruition — was her-

Commissioner explains school partnership plan

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Texas Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno is ready to break down the barriers of bureaucracy and give control back to the schools.

"The Partnership School Initiative (PSI) can eliminate the barriers to student achievement and close the performance gap," Meno said, explaining the program to an audience in Region 18 Education Service Center (ESC) Wednesday afternoon.

The commissioner said the partnership plan will be piloted in 40-80 campuses across the state and participating schools would operate "free from rules and regulations."

The plan will operate on the concept that "when given maximum opportunity — including relief from rules and regulations — and when provided with professional and fiscal support from the central education agency, a school can put into place a program that will lead to improved performance of students."

"With this program I foresee a quantum change in the way we run our schools," Meno said. "We need to decentralize our schools from Austin."

The commissioner said the concept was developed to relieve schools from focusing on compliance.

"Student performance and results are not negotiable," Meno said. "However, the program components are negotiable.

Texas school principals were invited to apply to have their individual schools selected as a PSI campus.

Dog to rescue

INDIANAPOLIS — A stray cocker spaniel helped a 10-year-old rescue his father, three days after the family took the dog in. William Foy was assembling a lift on his tractor Monday when a metal bracket slipped and fell on him — pinning him so he could hardly breathe. "I didn't hear anything. But Duke ran to the window and started barking," said young Billy. "He ran to the barn and I followed him. That's when I found my dad under the tractor." Billy tried repeatedly to free his father and evenutally hoisted the bracket off him with a floor jack.

Singer to wed?

HOUSTON — Wedding bells may ring soon for country singer Clint Black and actress Lisa Hartman, who are returning home to the Houston area this weekend. Black and Ms. Hartman have a wedding license, good for 30 days, from the Harris County courthouse, said Black's publicist Bill Small. Ms. Hartman already has been seen around Houston shopping for clothes and wedding cake, the Houston Chronicle reported Wednesday. Black will be participating in M.D. Anderson Cancer Center's Golden Jubilee Gala on Saturday and Ms. Hartman is expected to be with him.

Baker says peace talks on course; Syria threatens boycott

JERUSALEM (AP) — Secretary of State James A. Baker III said Wednesday that plans to begin a Mideast peace conference this month were "still on course" after more than 12 hours of talks with Syrian President Hafez Assad.

But Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk Sharaa, at a joint news conference in Damascus before Baker flew to Israel, said his country would boycott a phase of the negotiations until Israel showed it was willing to surrender land taken in the 1967 Mideast war.

And in Jerusalem Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said the peace conference would not be "a rose garden" and that Israel's attendance was not yet guaranteed.

Sharaa bristled when asked if he would sit down or shake hands with Israeli Foreign Minister David Levy. "I would tell you frankly no. This very hand that you would like me to shake is very guilty because it is a hand which occupies our lands. It ignores the Palestinians' national rights."

He went on: "For the last decades we have been suffering from this constant occupation, and the Palestinians in the occupied territories are suffering from constant repression."

Still, Baker's sessions with Assad over two days, produced Syria's general acceptance of U.S. terms for attending peace talks with Israel.

"We are still on course to hold the peace conference in this month of October," he said.

And in Washington, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said it was possible President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev would attend.

Yeltsin announces plans for new Russian currency

MOSCOW (AP) — Russian Federation President Boris N. Yeltsin's surprise plan to issue a new Russian currency is an act of self-defense — not a bid to undercut a proposed economic agreement among the Soviet republics, a top Yeltsin aide said Wednesday.

"Other republics already are setting up their own hard currency, and we must do the same to protect ourselves," said Lev Sukhanov, a longtime aide to the Russian leader, in an interview with The Associated Press.

Sukhanov denied the currency proposal, which Yeltsin made Tuesday on Russian television, endangers the agreement that Soviet officials say may be ready for signing as early as Friday. The agreement seeks to allow republics to control their own resources while preserving central control over the nation's currency and budget.

"It's not economic warfare against the other republics," said Sukhanov. "But these republics, and the now-independent Baltic states, are setting up borders with customs guards. Isn't that economic warfare?"

Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia also promote inflation in Russia by spending vast sums of rubles, Sukhanov added. The Baltic nations have opted out of the Soviet Union, leaving 12 republics with some allegiance to a central government.

Yeltsin said he would introduce "a national currency, our own currency," but did not say when this would be done. The proposed money would be identical to the Soviet ruble but would add a stripe of red, blue and white — the colors of the Russian flag.

Reform economists have warned that issuing rival currencies in the republics would further devalue the ruble and hurt the Soviet economy. The proposal also would work against the proposed economic agreement's goal of preserving one economic space among the republics.

Russia is one of the 10 Soviet republics that expressed willingness to sign the agreement.

Australian bushfires kill two people

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Bushfires killed two people and destroyed at least 12 houses Wednesday in the worst such outbreak in the Sydney area in 20 years, authorities said.

More than 2,500 firefighters and volunteers sought to extinguish about 30 blazes spawned by warm northerly winds and unusually dry ground conditions.

Police said a 46-year-old woman and her 16-year-old daughter died when a bushfire destroyed their home at Kenthurst in the Baulkham Hills region of northwest Sydney.

Police declared a state of emergency in Baulkham Hills, where fire destroyed at least nine other houses. A state of emergency was also declared at Gosford on the central coast where one house and a bushfire tanker were destroyed.

France, Germany outline plans for joint army corps

PARIS (AP) — France and Germany said Wednesday they planned to create a joint 50,000-member army corps they see as the foundation of a future European army. Britain called the force "dangerous" and a threat to NATO.

The plans by Bonn and Paris gave new impetus to the drive for political union in the 12-nation European Community while highlighting rifts ahead of a EC summit in December.

France and Germany outlined their plans to create a Strasbourg-based corps with up to 50,000 men in a letter to Dutch Prime Minister Ruud Lubbers, whose nation holds the EC's rotating presidency.

The two countries currently have a symbolic joint brigade of 5,000 soldiers.

French President Francois Mitterrand and German Chancellor Helmut Kohl said the corps would be open to all members of the Western European Union and would foreshadow a European army.

The Western European Union, the only wholly European body devoted to defense, includes all EC members except Denmark, Greece and Ireland. All of the union's members also belong to the North American Treaty Organization.

The plan has been forwarded to other EC countries for approval. None rushed to sign up, though the proposal won praise from Spain, Italy and Belgium.

The Franco-German vision of a Western European Union as the centerpiece of an independent European military runs counter to the strongly held British view that European defense must rest foremost with NATO.

"It is useless and dangerous to overlap what NATO is doing," British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd said in Harare, Zimbabwe.

The Danish Foreign Ministry said said "it is of vital importance that a stronger European defense cooperation not weaken cooperation between Europe and North America in NATO."

In Washington, a State Department spokesman, Richard Boucher, said: "We have an interest in seeing that, as the European security idea is developed, it be complementary to NATO and not detract from NATO's mission."

France and Germany see the WEU as the future defense arm of the EC.

Sunny skies forecast

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies and a high temperature in the low 90s. Winds will be south to southwest at 10 to 15 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low in the mid-50s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Friday should be sunny with a high near 90.

After an overnight low of 48, Thursday's high reached 88 compared with the record high for that date of 92 set in 1964. The record low for that date was 36 set in 1976.

STATE

It was sunny and warm across Texas on Wednesday with southerly breezes across much of the state,

Temperatures climbed into the 80s with a few 90-degree readings reported in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

The North Texas forecast was for fair skies through Friday with highs in the upper 80s and lows in the middle 50s to low 60s.

South Texas was expected to be fair to partly cloudy with unseasonably warm temperatures through Friday and patchy late night and early morning fog, mainly on the lower coast. Highs will be in the 80s and 90s. Lows will be mostly in the 50s and 60s, forecasters said.

The West Texas forecast was expected to be fair through Friday with highs from the upper 80s to the low 90s with lower 80s in the mountains Thursday and from the upper 70s in the northern Panhandle to the lower 90s in the Big Bend on Friday. Lows were to be mostly in the 50s.

NATION

A burst of rain Wednesday in Washington state broke a 45-day dry spell, but record high wind in the state also knocked out power to thousands of homes. It was unseasonably cool in the Midwest and unusually warm in the Rockies.

Wind gusted to 61 mph in Spokane, Wash., a record high for October. Strong, gusts caused power outages and traffic accidents in the central part of the state. High wind forced the temporary closure of several highways and the Spokane airport in eastern Washington. Power outages from high wind and rain also were reported in Idaho.

The rain in Washington state brought relief from a prolonged drought, but more was needed to reduce the danger of brush fires, meteorologist Dana Felton said. Brush fires burned in eastern Washington.

At noon CDT, rain also extended over eastern New England, North Carolina and South Carolina.

There were no reports of one half inch or more rainfall during the six hours ending at 1 p.m. CDT.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Fortune rates Atlanta best city for business

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta is the best city for business in the nation, according to a Fortune magazine survey.

The Georgia capital, which was the No. 3 choice last year, beat out Dallas-Fort Worth for the top slot in the annual survey of executives, included in the magazine's Nov. 4 issue. Pittsburgh finished third.

Following Pittsburgh are Kansas City, Mo.; Nashville, Tenn.; Salt Lake City; Charlotte, N.C.; Orlando, Fla.; Austin, Texas; and Phoenix.

The city's mix of low costs, high-quality labor and favorable attitudes toward business were cited in the survey of 600 executives, conducted for the magazine by Moran Stahl and Boyer, a New York-based corporate relocation firm.

"It's a big-time, high-level endorsement," Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson said. "It will be an additional honor that we can use to promote Atlanta from an economic development point of view."

Chamber of Commerce President Gerald L. Bartels compared the business ranking to the city being named host of the 1996 Olympics.

"These are the kinds of things that maintain Atlanta's momentum," Bartels said. "If someone else says Atlanta's a good place, it's less salesmanship and more factual data. They add credibility to our claims."

The city is not without its flaws. Atlanta suffers from a high crime rate, poor public schools and an economic slowdown, Fortune said.

But the magazine said the city has an abundance of office space and inexpensive housing. The city's scoring of the Olympics has "powered a quantum boost in its overseas image."

In Fortune's earlier surveys, crime and poor schools held Atlanta back. While those factors haven't changed significantly, the city's perception among executives apparently has.

Atlanta "was by far the most popular choice among outsiders, and its executives had a more favorable opinion of their town than did those in any other place in the top 10 except Kansas City," Fortune wrote.

alded as the beginning of a new cooperation between the two cities.

"Seven hundred years ago, somewhere along the Danube, there must have been a group like this, and they were Buda and Pest," said Michael Jones, dean of architecture at Texas Tech University. Jones has been leading a group of about 50 students in a design project for the proposed lake since contacted by a group of area leaders several months ago.

"It can and will happen if you want it to happen," Jones said. "We're looking at a whole range of ideas, possibilities — dreams if you like — to see what could be done."

With support from officials of both cities, Jones said students in his department would continue the work through whatever the project's result.

Thomas and Mayor Lorraine Bonner of Odessa have been discussing the idea of a joint recreational facility for more than a year. During the same period, a small group of volunteers was meeting informally to consider similar options.

"When an idea is ripe, when the time is right, people start moving in the same direction," Ms. Bonner said. She said the idea is now only beginning to develop.

"But the one thing we have agreed upon is our two communities no longer have the luxury of being warring factions 20 miles apart," Ms. Bonner said.

She said the two cities should seize the pipeline opportunity to drop old rivalries and begin working together.

"The greatest natural resources in the Permian Basin are people, talent (and) vision," Ms. Bonner said. "To succeed in economic development, we know Midland and Odessa must work together."

Thomas said CRMWD has created some "fine recreational facilities," including Lake Thomas, Moss Creek Lake and the new Lake O.H. Ivie near Ballinger. He suggested a Midland-Odessa lake could be similar to one of those.

However, officials acknowledged the water district would prefer the terminal reservoir be quite deep with little surface area to minimize evaporation. Such dimensions would be opposite of those suitable for a recreational lake.

Thomas said extending the reservoir's surface area from the planned 30 acres to about 60 acres would cause little increase in evaporation, but could be suitable for recreation. It is possible that swimming and motorboats could be prohibited in the water to minimize contamination — although the water would be filtered and chlorinated after it leaves the facility, Thomas said.

"I see paddleboats, canoes and row boats," Thomas said. "There could be a playground for the kids and a picnic area."

City cost estimates for a reservoir of 60 acres with six to eight feet in depth total $589,000. Thomas said he estimates the additional cost of water lost through evaporation at $60,000 per year.

CRMWD officials were noncommittal, but said they would support the project idea.

"The reservoir may be incompatible with the storage facility, but we'd try to work with you in any way we can," said John Taylor, president of the board of directors.

"We'll be as active as we can in the project," said Owen Ivie, general manager.

MENO: Plan aimed at improving achievement

(From 1A)

Vernon Stokes, executive director of Region 18 ESC, said the center will create a screening committee to select two campuses from the region to participate.

PSI guidelines suggest that one campus per region have a concentration of a low socio-economic student population, since the program is designed to benefit schools focusing on increasing performance.

Stokes said Region 18 encompasses 33 school districts with 183 campuses.

At least four or five principals from Midland Independent School District applied to the Texas Education Agency to participate in the PSI program, according to MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr.

Meno said the TEA received 1,500 applications from school districts all over the state. Application deadline was Wednesday.

"I should be receiving an envelope soon from the TEA with applications from campuses in our region," Stokes said.

Stokes will then request a one-page proposal from principals outlining their ideas for taking advantage of the PSI concept. "I will be looking for a strong proposal — something that will really set a group apart," Stokes said. Some interviews and on-site inspections will follow.

The schools will operate with partners, including their proper school district, the TEA, education service center, institutes of higher learning and businesses.

"The schools can have any number of partners," Stokes said. "Deciding the role of each partner and how they will participate in the process will be up to the participants."

And will these schools be free of complying with state mandates?

Stokes said Meno has given him the "authority to weigh any state board rule and waive it."

"I will have to be convinced I should waive it, though," Stokes said.

Meno said, when it comes to accountability, Stokes would have "his feet held to the fire."

PSI campuses will also receive financial resources from the TEA.

Meno said the campus improvement plan will serve as a partnership among the state, the school, parents and other interested parties.

"This participation is one major strategy for reaching the goal of increased performance of all students," he said. "Schools need to be held accountable on results. The options are unlimited on how they get those results."

The education commissioner said the needs of teachers, including compensation, also are a current concern of his.

"Teachers don't feel they are being treated as educational professionals," he said. "Some have said they feel like they are working on an assembly line making models. Every third model is falling off the assembly line because the teachers need a widget and no one is listening."

Meno said every third child in Texas public schools are dropping out of school before graduation. "We are great at identifying these children, but not successful at intervention," he said.

"And, when you have teachers who can qualify for a free or reduced lunch, something is very wrong with the system," he said. "There has also been little investment in math and science teachers. It's hard to get good teachers in math and science when some are offered $17,000 a year and they can go into industry and make twice that much."

To improve teachers' lot, Meno said they need professional development. "And that takes money," he said.

Meno summed up his thrust as education commissioner this year with being interested in "progress and performance, not mandates."

"The TEA needs to take a new and fresh look at programs being suggested by school districts," he said. "There are some viable alternatives."

Stokes said schools selected as PSI campuses will be announced in late January.

THOMAS: How will hearings affect justice's judgment?

Some liberals who opposed Thomas' nomination cling to a hope that his up-from-poverty personal history might lead him in directions his conservative supporters do not anticipate.

But William J. Brennan and Thurgood Marshall, the court's last two ardent liberals, are retired. Neither Harry A. Blackmun nor John Paul Stevens, the remaining most liberal justices, has shown an inclination to serve as a mentor to a new justice.

Early on, therefore, Thomas's jurisprudence more likely will be nurtured by one or more justices among the court's conservatives.

Justice Anthony M. Kennedy is more closely aligned with Rehnquist and Scalia but Justice David H. Souter, who joined the court last year, so far seems more comfortable siding with O'Connor.

Where Thomas lines up could determine how fast and far the court moves rightward on such issues as abortion, affirmative action and church-state relations.

A wild card in trying to predict what kind of a justice Thomas will prove to be is the memory of his confirmation fight. Will his judging betray a residual resentment toward Congress, the news media or the pressure groups he said conspired to do him in? Some legal experts believe it would take a superhuman effort to rise above such feelings.

Also unknown are the issues that will dominate the court's agenda later in Thomas' tenure. If he lives as long as the man he replaces, Thomas, 43, could be helping shape American law in the year 2031.

Life at the court should prove a quiet refuge from a confirmation process.

For all the power it wields, the court remains the calm at storm center, its workaday life seemingly untouched by the controversies swirling around it.

The justices are the most private of public officials, cloaked not only in black robes but with the institutional secrecy the court prizes.

ABORTION: States need federal help, lawyer says

(From 1A)

"Federal injunctions, frankly, mean more than state injunctions," Schafer said. "States need federal help. Wichita showed that this summer."

But Justice Department lawyer John Roberts Jr. said Operation Rescue's tactics aren't motivated by the necessary discriminatory motives against women that would create federal court jurisdiction.

"The conspirators (to be governed by federal law) must seek to deny to some what they would permit for others," Roberts said, adding that Operation Rescue members want to bar access to abortions for all.

At the center of the controversy is a post-Civil War federal law, the Ku Klux Klan Act of 1871, that bans conspiracies aimed at violating the constitutional rights of certain people.

The law protects "any person or class of persons" — and past Supreme Court rulings have interpreted that wording to mean that those who sue must be the victims of "class-based animus."

A federal judge in Alexandria, Va., and the Richmond-based 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that women seeking abortions are a protected "class of persons" who can invoke the law.

The lower courts said clinic blockades interfered with the interstate travel rights of women who don't live in Virginia but sought abortions there. The lower courts barred Operation Rescue members from blockading nine abortion clinics.

Texas heroes come to get dirt

Staff Report

Two legendary Texas heroes will visit Midland County on Friday for "The Great Fiesta Texas Dirt Roundup," a statewide campaign to collect a shovelful of dirt from every county in Texas for use at the $100-million Fiesta Texas musical theme park under construction in San Antonio.

With the help of Mayor Carroll Thomas, Fiesta Texas ambassadors "Davy Crockett" and "Gregorio Esparza" will collect a shovelful of dirt from Centennial Plaza in a special ceremony at 9:30 a.m. Friday. In case of rain, the ceremony will be held inside.

"We want to make sure that every part of Texas is represented at the theme park since Fiesta Texas will celebrate the musical and cultural diversity of all of Texas," said Fiesta Texas General Manager Bill Hoelscher. "By collecting dirt from every county in Texas, we are recognizing what ties us all together — our love of the land, the very soil we call 'Texas.'

"With this campaign, we'll make every county in the state a part of Fiesta Texas, from the plains of the Panhandle to the tropical Rio Grande Valley," Hoelscher said.

The dirt will be taken back to Fiesta Texas and used in "The Texas State Square," a central square within the theme park that will feature a brick paving stones impressed with the names of all 5,000-plus towns, cities and counties in Texas.

PATRONS: Three friends crouch under table

(From 1A)

"My first thought was, 'We have another McDonald's,'" he said, referring to the 1984 San Ysidro, Calif., massacre that left 21 dead. Wednesday's death toll would top it.

The man — George Hennard of Belton — who emerged from the pickup appeared unemotional, calmly but loudly asking as he fired each round, "Is it all worth it? What have they done to me in Texas and Belton? Is it really worth it?," Fitzwater said. Another patron heard him say, "Its payback time, Bell County."

Belton, the Bell County seat, is about 17 miles from Killeen.

George Osborne, 58, a retired Air Force officer, watched helplessly as the gunman shot a woman near him and then leveled the pistol at him.

"I thought it was my turn," he said. But the man was distracted by a woman cowering under a table.

"Hiding from me, bitch?" Osborne quoted the gunman as saying. Then the gunman shot the woman twice.

Dining at Luby's was a monthly ritual for Holley and three friends. This day, one friend begged off, citing an appointment with her hairdresser.

When the firing began, Holley said, "We all got under the table and pulled chairs around us."

"There was a gentleman who threw a chair through a (back) window and screamed, 'Run for it!'"

Holley and her friends started for the window. "When I was running, he was still shooting," she said. "He was going from table to table to table."

That's when she got injured.

"I was knocked down and trampled," she said. She got up, only to be knocked down again.

"It was like what you'd see in Spain with the running of the bulls. I was pushed down in the rush to escape the mad man ...," she said. Later, she would be treated at Fort Hood's Darnell Hospital for a broken arm, a sprained leg, a bruised finger and glass cuts on one foot.

Croatia announces arrests in alleged spy ring

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — Croatia has announced the arrest of dozens of people on suspicion of spying for the Yugoslav army or plotting terrorism in the nearly 4-month-old civil war.

Officials of the secessionist republic released no names and few details of the alleged fifth column.

The arrests, first announced in a toughly worded Interior Ministry statement late Tuesday, came at a time of increasing frustration in Croatia at its inability to retake about one-third of its territory captured by Serb guerrillas and the Serb-dominated army.

More than 1,000 people have died in the fighting that began shortly after Croatia and neighboring Slovenia declared independence June 25.

Scattered clashes continued Wednesday, despite a Soviet-mediated agreement in Moscow by the presidents of rivals Serbia and Croatia to halt the violence and step up negotiations. Croatian media reported nine people were killed.

The agreement Tuesday followed the presidents' meeting with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Leaders of Croatia's ethnic Serb minority want no part of an independent Croatia, but Croat officials say the issue of Serb autonomy is a smokescreen for Serbian attempts to absorb parts of Croatia in a land grab.

Croatia's deputy interior minister, Zdravko Zidovec, said in a telephone interview Wednesday that no information on the spy arrests would be made public until an investigation is completed. Lawyers said the investigation could take six months.

Tuesday's statement said the Interior Ministry had uncovered a "commando-terrorist and spy group" that involved 62 people. It accused intelligence units of the Yugoslav air force of running the group's activities.

It said a few of the suspects are outside of Croatia and could not be detained. However, the rest were arrested, it said, without giving numbers.

The statement said the group's aim "was to prepare and execute concrete terrorist actions, especially in the Zagreb area. Certain members of the group even worked formerly in the Ministry of Interior, Ministry of Defense and other leadership organs of Croatia."

"Discovery of this commando-terrorist and spy group confirms the fact that the Yugoslav Army, through its counterintelligence service, was directly engaged in destruction of Croatian constitutional-legal order and democratic leadership," the statement said.

U.N. chief denies Iraqi claims of collusion with Israel

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar on Wednesday denied Iraqi claims that U.N. helicopter sorties searching for Iraqi Scuds were being used as cover for Israeli overflights.

In a letter to Perez de Cuellar that was made public Tuesday, Iraq's foreign minister charged that Israeli planes violated its airspace Oct. 4 and flew in formation with U.N. helicopters. It warned that the helicopters could be shot down along with the planes.

U.N. weapons inspectors denied they were aware of Israeli warplane flights into Iraqi territory. The helicopters are searching for evidence of Iraqi Scud missile-launcing sites.

A U.N. Special Commission is destroying the missiles and other weapons of mass destruction under the terms of the cease-fire that ended the Persian Gulf War.

Baghdad fought bitterly last month to keep the United Nations from sending its helicopters into Iraq, a move that makes it easier to search for the weapons. Finally, when the United States threatened to escort the helicopters with its attack planes, Iraq backed down.

"Under no circumstances will the missions stop," said Alastair Livingston, regional chief of operations for the U.N.

Hennard scared them, neighbors say

BELTON (AP) — Some neighbors said George Hennard, the man who gunned down 22 people in a restaurant in nearby Killeen Wednesday, scared them with phone calls, a bizarre letter and by running into the street in front of their cars.

Hennard phoned Jane Bugg and her daughters, Jana Jernigan and Jill Fritz, several times during the past five months, the women said Wednesday night. But he had tried to get their attention months earlier.

"We just lived in fear of the man," said Mrs. Bugg, a 46-year-old medical secretary.

In June, Hennard sent a letter to Jernigan, 19, and Fritz, 23, that mistakenly was addressed to a neighbor. The mistake was corrected when Hennard called Mrs. Bugg from Nevada and told her the letter was next door.

Hennard identified himself as "George from down the street," but she told him she didn't have any neighbors named George.

He explained he lived in a brick house a block away and she realized he was the man who had run in front of her car several times waving his arms and yelling.

"It scared me because I knew who we were dealing with," she said.

In part, Hennard's letter said: "Did you and your sister find new flames yet? Do you think the three of us could get together someday? Please give me the satisfaction of someday laughing in the face of all those mostly. white, treacherous female vipers from two towns who tried to destroy me and my family."

When Hennard entered the Luby's cafeteria in Killeen, he screamed something about Belton and "This is what Bell County has done to me!"

His letter to the neighbors contained a eerily similar passage.

"It is very ironic about Belton, Texas," Hennard wrote. "I found the best and the worst in women there. You and sister on the one side. Then the abundance of evil women that make up the worst on the other side. I would like to personally remind all of those vipers that I have civil rights too."

He then urged the women not to divulge the contents of the letter. But Mrs. Bugg took it to police the next day.

Diner says he tried to distract gunman

By Kathy Sanders
N.Y. Times News Service

KILLEEN — Sam Wink looked up at George Hennard and thought it was the last face he would ever see.

"He saw my eyes and I saw his," Wink said. "Those were the biggest brown eyes I've ever seen. He pointed the gun at me and that's when I thought I had bought the farm, this was it."

But Wink — who thought Hennard had already shot 15 people in the Luby's cafeteria — was lucky.

A woman two tables over made a noise as she tried to scramble away. Wink said Hennard turned, firing and hitting the woman and then turned back toward Wink, who was running for safety.

Wink, 47, made it through a shattered back window as the gunman fired after him.

He said he looked back from the trees sheltering him and Hennard was still walking around shooting people, just casually."

Police officers started arriving at that point, and Wink, for reasons he said he doesn't understand, tried to draw Hennard out so police could shoot him.

He said he stepped out from his cover and started screaming: "Hey sucker, you missed me the first time. Why don't you try again. Come on out. Hey sucker.

"I was trying to get his attention. He finally saw me and came walking this way and he started to step through the window," Wink said.

"I guess there were some people who tried to escape through the front. He heard them, and he turned around and started shooting them. ... I felt so helpless. I knew if he shot me, I'd be dead but I had to do something."

Wink, an attendance officer for the Killeen school district, said in a telephone interview that his party had arrived at the cafeteria about 12:15. He and two other attendance officers for the district had taken the assistant superintendent, the curriculum director for elementary schools, and the personnel director to lunch for Bosses' Day.

Wink and his friends were sitting at a table for six when the Ford pickup lurched toward them.

"I was facing the front glass windows and I saw this pickup jump the curb and come crashing through," Wink said. "He kept gunning and gunning the truck and I said, "Hey folks, we better get out of the way or this guy may hit us.' I'd already seen him crash through one table."

The truck stopped about 12 feet from his table, Wink said.

After the crash, Wink said, Hennard, 35, of Belton, said: "Its payback time, Bell County."

Then, Hennard "got out just like gangbusters and he started killing people right and left," Wink said. "He was firing at them relatively slowly."

"This guy didn't fire at long range. He was doing it close up. ... He was taking his time. ... Bam, Bam, Bam."

Wink said after he counted about 14 shots, he looked up thinking the shooter was out of ammunition, and said the gunman "had clips all over him."

"He went to one side of the dining room shooting, then went to the other side," he said.

At some point during the fusillade, a mechanic from a local car dealership threw his body through a back window and allowed several people to escape, Wink said. Others used chairs to knock glass out so they could escape.

Of the six people at his table, Wink said, Patricia Carney, curriculum director for elementary schools, was killed. She was with her husband, Sam Carney, who also is a school attendance officer.

Only hours after narrowly escaping with his life, Wink said it hadn't sunk in yet that a friend was dead.

ing everything together. It's utter chaos," Giacomozzi said, noting that the gunman "was not out of bullets."

Department of Public Safety spokeswoman Laureen Chernow said the gunman, who used a Glock 9mm semiautomatic pistol, killed himself.

Giacomozzi declined to identify any of the victims, although he said none were children. He said there were 14 women and eight men in addition to Hennard.

The bodies were still in the restaurant more than six hours after the massacre. They were being taken to Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas, police said.

The gunman "entered the business at 12:41 and begin firing rounds from a semiautomatic weapon," said Killeen Police Capt. Roy Stover. "Shots were fired for approximately 10 minutes. At 12:51 we were notified the gunman was dead at the restaurant. He apparently shot himself in the head."

"I was at the counter. I was pretty close to the man," said Vickie Large. "I saw his face and he started shooting everywhere. He was mad.

"I was scared. He was in his 30s," she said. "He didn't say nothing when he was shooting."

"He was killing people everywhere. He didn't care who. There were kids in there with their parents and he was just shooting," she said.

"He looked right at me and pointed the pistol," said Sam Wink. "I thought I bought the farm but a lady close to me got up to run. He turned and fired at her and I immediately scrambled to my feet and got to the back of the building.

"Someone had already knocked out a big plate-glass window. I hit the fire exit door. I heard bullets go over my head and into the wall. It just seemed like slow motion and he shot forever.

"I went across the street in a zigzag pattern. He was still firing. I kind of slipped back across the street and there's a building beside the Luby's that I could peek around the side and I could see him in there shooting people at pointblank range — like two or three feet from their heads," Wink said.

"At that time one police car had pulled up. I said maybe I could distract this guy. I stood out from behind the walls and hollered at him and called him names. I said 'Come and get me. I'm unarmed, come and shoot me.' He saw me and started toward the window, but then some other folks moved and he went back and started shooting again."

One of the victims, Pat Carney, was the director of elementary curriculum for the Killeen Independent School District, said superintendent Charles Patterson. "This is just a terrible tragedy," he said.

Several school administrators were eating lunch at the cafeteria because it was Boss's Day and support staffers were treating their bosses. Other school employees were injured, he said.

At least 20 people were wounded, said spokesmen at three area hospitals.

Eight people were in stable condition at Metroplex Hospital in Killeen, said spokeswoman Glenda Duncan.

Twelve people were taken to Darnall Army Community Hospital at Fort Hood in undetermined condition, said Jeri Chappelle, a spokeswoman.

Barbara Nite, a 61-year-old Killeen woman, was in surgery at Scott & White Hospital in Temple with a gunshot wound to her ankle. She was listed in fair condition, said LaNell Dowd, a spokeswoman.

One Luby's employee, Maria Serna, 41, of Copperas Cove, hid in a freezer for 2½ hours, unaware it was safe to come out, said Ricky Seiler, spokesman for Metroplex Hospital, where the woman was treated for hypothermia and released.

Robert Holland, 26, a clerk at an auto parts store next to the cafeteria, said he saw "five or six" people being loaded into helicopters.

Holland said he heard the truck going through the cafeteria window and then "people were running everywhere."

"One guy came in here. He said 'Give me a gun, I'll go shoot him,'" Holland said. "All the sudden we had people in here saying call the cops. There were cops everywhere."

Sheldon Smith, a porter at the cafeteria, said he was carrying a load of trays into the seating area when the truck came through the window.

"The guy jumped out of the truck and said, 'This is what Bell County has done to me,'" Smith said. "As he opened fire, the guy that he ran over with the truck was trying to get up and he shot him. Then he pointed toward the line where the service was and he started shooting down the line."

Killeen, about 50 miles north of Austin, has a population of 45,000.

In the previous worst previous mass slaying in U.S. history, a gunman killed 21 people at a McDonald's restaurant in San Ysidro, Calif., in 1984, before he was shot by police.

"It's a dark hour in the city of Killeen," said city councilman Rosa Hereford. "The person who did it — we'll never know why."

Richards extends her condolences to victims

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards extended condolences to victims of the Killeen massacre Wednesday and said a network of trauma counselors was ready to help survivors.

"My heart goes out to the victims and their families who have been killed and injured by this horrible tragedy," the governor said.

"This is a devastating day for the city of Killeen and the state of Texas," she said.

Aides said Richards had talked by telephone with the Killeen mayor, state Department of Public Safety officers and counselors at the scene.

She dispatched Ben Delgado, her division director for disaster assistance, and Robert Lansford, director of the governor's emergency management division, to Killeen.

She said the Governor's Crime Victim Clearinghouse was providing a network of trauma counselors for those needing psychological counseling.

Deputy press secretary Chuck McDonald said Richards also offered Mayor Major E. Blair "all resources of the governor's office" he needs.

"Mayor Blair tells me that all the state and federal agencies that have responded have been very helpful in this crisis," Richards said.

Luby's officials arrive in Killeen

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Luby's Cafeterias got started here in 1947 with a single restaurant and eventually expanded across the state and the region, mainly in large cities.

Killeen, where a gunman killed 22 people and then himself at a Luby's Wednesday, is one of the smaller cities where the chain operates. Killeen has a population of about 45,000.

After violence struck during lunch hour in Killeen, company president and chief executive officer Pete Erben and other corporate officials traveled to the central Texas city to assist victims' families.

"We've got a pretty large contingency of people up there, like you do when tragedy befalls," said Buddy Schrader, vice president of marketing. "Our sympathy is with them."

Luby's reserved 50 rooms in a Killeen motel for families of victims. The company also set up a counseling program with the help of Red Cross.

A memorial fund already was being set up, said Fred Latham, Killeeen Mayor Pro Tem. Luby's has contributed $10,000.

Trading of the company's stock was halted on the New York Stock Exchange shortly after the incident. Trading is expected to resume today.

Robert M. Luby and Charles R. Johnston opened the first Luby's Cafeteria in San Antonio in 1947. Last year, the San Antonio-based company earned $32.1 million on revenues of $311.3 million.

The company has spent more han $1 million on an anti-drug program aimed at youths in the communities where its cafeterias are located, Schrader said.

Hennard scared them, neighbors say

BELTON (AP) — Some neighbors said George Hennard, the man who gunned down 22 people in a restaurant in nearby Killeen Wednesday, scared them with phone calls, a bizarre letter and by running into the street in front of their cars.

Hennard phoned Jane Bugg and her daughters, Jana Jernigan and Jill Fritz, several times during the past five months, the women said Wednesday night. But he had tried to get their attention months earlier.

"We just lived in fear of the man," said Mrs. Bugg, a 46-year-old medical secretary.

In June, Hennard sent a letter to Jernigan, 19, and Fritz, 23, that mistakenly was addressed to a neighbor. The mistake was corrected when Hennard called Mrs. Bugg from Nevada and told her the letter was next door.

Hennard identified himself as "George from down the street," but she told him she didn't have any neighbors named George.

He explained he lived in a brick house a block away and she realized he was the man who had run in front of her car several times waving his arms and yelling.

"It scared me because I knew who we were dealing with," she said.

In part, Hennard's letter said:

"Did you and your sister find new flames yet? Do you think the three of us could get together someday? Please give me the satisfaction of someday laughing in the face of all those mostly white, treacherous female vipers from two towns who tried to destroy me and my family."

When Hennard entered the Luby's cafeteria in Killeen, he screamed something about Belton and "This is what Bell County has done to me!"

His letter to the neighbors contained a eerily similar passage.

"It is very ironic about Belton, Texas," Hennard wrote. "I found the best and the worst in women there. You and sister on the one side. Then the abundance of evil women that make up the worst on the other side. I would like to personally remind all of those vipers that I have civil rights too."

He then urged the women not to divulge the contents of the letter. But Mrs. Bugg took it to police the next day.

Diner says he tried to distract gunman

By Kathy Sanders

KILLEEN — Sam Wink looked up at George Hennard and thought it was the last face he would ever see.

"He saw my eyes and I saw his," Wink said. "Those were the biggest brown eyes I've ever seen. He pointed the gun at me and that's when I thought I had bought the farm, this was it."

But Wink — who thought Hennard had already shot 15 people in the Luby's cafeteria — was lucky.

A woman two tables over made a noise as she tried to scramble away. Wink said Hennard turned, firing and hitting the woman and then turned back toward Wink, who was running for safety.

Wink, 47, made it through a shattered back window as the gunman fired after him.

He said he looked back from the trees sheltering him and Hennard "was still walking around shooting people, just casually."

Police officers started arriving at that point, and Wink, for reasons he said he doesn't understand, tried to draw Hennard out so police could shoot him.

He said he stepped out from his cover and started screaming: "Hey sucker, you missed me the first time. Why don't you try again. Come on out. Hey sucker.

"I was trying to get his attention. He finally saw me and came walking this way and he started to step through the window," Wink said.

"I guess there were some people who tried to escape through the front. He heard them, and he turned around and started shooting them. ... I felt so helpless. I knew if he shot me, I'd be dead but I had to do something."

Wink, an attendance officer for the Killeen school district, said in a telephone interview that his party had arrived at the cafeteria about 12:15. He and two other attendance officers for the district had taken the assistant superintendent, the curriculum director for elementary schools, and the personnel director to lunch for Bosses' Day.

Wink and his friends were sitting at a table for six when the Ford pickup lurched toward them.

"I was facing the front glass windows and I saw this pickup jump the curb and come crashing through," Wink said. "He kept gunning and gunning the truck and I said, "Hey folks, we better get out of the way or this guy may hit us.' I'd already seen him crash through one table."

The truck stopped about 12 feet from his table, Wink said.

After the crash, Wink said, Hennard, 35, of Belton, said: "Its payback time, Bell County."

Then, Hennard "got out just like gangbusters and he started killing people right and left," Wink said. "He was firing at them relatively slowly."

"This guy didn't fire at long range. He was doing it close up. ... He was taking his time. ... Bam, Bam, Bam."

Wink said after he counted about 14 shots, he looked up thinking the shooter was out of ammunition, and said the gunman "had clips all over him."

"He went to one side of the dining room shooting, then went to the other side," he said.

At some point during the fusillade, a mechanic from a local car dealership threw his body through a back window and allowed several people to escape, Wink said. Others used chairs to knock glass out so they could escape.

Of the six people at his table, Wink said, Patricia Carney, curriculum director for elementary schools, was killed. She was with her husband, Sam Carney, who also is a school attendance officer.

Only hours after narrowly escaping with his life, Wink said it hadn't sunk in yet that a friend was dead.

ing everything together. It's utter chaos," Giacomozzi said, noting that the gunman "was not out of bullets."

Department of Public Safety spokeswoman Laureen Chernow said the gunman, who used a Glock 9mm semiautomatic pistol, killed himself.

Giacomozzi declined to identify any of the victims, although he said none were children. He said there were 14 women and eight men in addition to Hennard.

The bodies were still in the restaurant more than six hours after the massacre. They were being taken to Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas, police said.

The gunman "entered the business at 12:41 and begin firing rounds from a semiautomatic weapon," said Killeen Police Capt. Roy Stover. "Shots were fired for approximately 10 minutes. At 12:51 we were notified the gunman was dead at the restaurant. He apparently shot himself in the head."

"I was at the counter. I was pretty close to the man," said Vickie Large. "I saw his face and he started shooting everywhere. He was mad.

"I was scared. He was in his 30s," she said. "He didn't say nothing when he was shooting."

"He was killing people everywhere. He didn't care who. There were kids in there with their parents and he was just shooting," she said.

"He looked right at me and pointed the pistol," said Sam Wink. "I thought I bought the farm but a lady close to me got up to run. He turned and fired at her and I immediately scrambled to my feet and got to the back of the building.

"Someone had already knocked out a big plate-glass window. I hit the fire exit door. I heard bullets go over my head and into the wall. It just seemed like slow motion and he shot forever.

"I went across the street in a zigzag pattern. He was still firing. I kind of slipped back across the street and there's a building beside the Luby's that I could peek around the side and I could see him in there shooting people at pointblank range — like two or three feet from their heads," Wink said.

"At that time one police car had pulled up. I said maybe I could distract this guy. I stood out from behind the walls and hollered at him and called him names. I said 'Come and get me. I'm unarmed, come and shoot me.' He saw me and started toward the window, but then some other folks moved and he went back and started shooting again."

One of the victims, Pat Carney, was the director of elementary curriculum for the Killeen Independent School District, said superintendent Charles Patterson. "This is just a terrible tragedy," he said.

Several school administrators were eating lunch at the cafeteria because it was Boss's Day and support staffers were treating their bosses. Other school employees were injured, he said.

At least 20 people were wounded, said spokesmen at three area hospitals.

Eight people were in stable condition at Metroplex Hospital in Killeen, said spokeswoman Glenda Duncan.

Twelve people were taken to Darnall Army Community Hospital at Fort Hood in undetermined condition, said Jeri Chappelle, a spokeswoman.

Barbara Nite, a 61-year-old Killeen woman, was in surgery at Scott & White Hospital in Temple with a gunshot wound to her ankle. She was listed in fair condition, said LaNell Dowd, a spokeswoman.

One Luby's employee, Maria Serna, 41, of Copperas Cove, hid in a freezer for 2½ hours, unaware it was safe to come out, said Ricky Seiler, spokesman for Metroplex Hospital, where the woman was treated for hypothermia and released.

Robert Holland, 26, a clerk at an auto parts store next to the cafeteria, said he saw "five or six" people being loaded into helicopters.

Holland said he heard the truck going through the cafeteria window and then "people were running everywhere."

"One guy came in here. He said 'Give me a gun, I'll go shoot him,'" Holland said. "All the sudden we had people in here saying call the cops. There were cops everywhere."

Sheldon Smith, a porter at the cafeteria, said he was carrying a load of trays into the seating area when the truck came through the window.

"The guy jumped out of the truck and said, 'This is what Bell County has done to me,'" Smith said. "As he opened fire, the guy that he ran over with the truck was trying to get up and he shot him. Then he pointed toward the line where the service was and he started shooting down the line."

Killeen, about 50 miles north of Austin, has a population of 45,000.

In the previous worst previous mass slaying in U.S. history, a gunman killed 21 people at a McDonald's restaurant in San Ysidro, Calif., in 1984, before he was shot by police.

"It's a dark hour in the city of Killeen," said city councilman Rosa Hereford. "The person who did it — we'll never know why."

Richards extends her condolences to victims

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards extended condolences to victims of the Killeen massacre Wednesday and said a network of trauma counselors was ready to help survivors.

"My heart goes out to the victims and their families who have been killed and injured by this horrible tragedy," the governor said.

"This is a devastating day for the city of Killeen and the state of Texas," she said.

Aides said Richards had talked by telephone with the Killeen mayor, state Department of Public Safety officers and counselors at the scene.

She dispatched Ben Delgado, her division director for disaster assistance, and Robert Lansford, director of the governor's emergency management division, to Killeen.

She said the Governor's Crime Victim Clearinghouse was providing a network of trauma counselors for those needing psychological counseling.

Deputy press secretary Chuck McDonald said Richards also offered Mayor Major E. Blair "all resources of the governor's office" he needs.

"Mayor Blair tells me that all the state and federal agencies that have responded have been very helpful in this crisis," Richards said.

Confirmation sets time for healing

It wasn't a matter of giving short shrift to Anita Hill's charges of sexual harassment aired against Clarence Thomas before the U.S. Senate or of her believability, or even of shocking the nation into the awareness that Supreme Court justices are human beings, too.

Rather it was the fact that the truth can be so elusive that gripped those watching the final hours of Judge Thomas's confirmation hearings.

In the end, Thomas was confirmed 52-48 Tuesday, but not before he and most Americans were outraged over the excesses that have become commonplace in the confirmation process. That outrage is liable to materialize at the polls next year, if voters can remember the injustices heaped upon Thomas during the hearings.

As Democratic political consultant Raymond Strother noted following the hearings, "There's a feeling of rage about the whole institution. If I were an incumbent senator, I would feel no security whatsoever."

Most observers agree that Hill was a believable witness — poised, intelligent, even calm. In fact, she may have been too calm as she related how Thomas made unwelcome advances, bragged about his sexual prowess and described pornographic movies to her. But there was no burning outrage at the "harassment" she endured.

Judge Thomas, on the other hand, was even more credible in the anger and disgust he displayed to the Senate Judiciary Committee last weekend. Some will assert that he went too far in venting his anger, but it obviously assured committee members and others in the Senate that here is a man who can comprehend injustice and stand firm for the rights of the oppressed.

The Senate was correct in its confirmation vote. The allegations leveled at Judge Thomas were not proven during the hearings and in our system of justice, Thomas must be — not can be — afforded the benefit of the doubt.

The vote was the closest of this century and the hearings should have made numerous Americans aware of how the confirmation process is being abused — along with those who endure it.

Now is a time, as Justice Thomas noted, for healing. It's also time to right the political system that permits such excesses.

OTHER VIEWS

Thomas hearings a back-alley fight

They saw, live and in color, a legal lynching of a black American.

They witnessed the public tarring and feathering of a judge; they watched him be put astride a rail. A howling mob fought for the honored position of rail-bearer; each wanted the opportunity to give the rail a violent jiggle in an attempt to hurt or dislodge the victim.

In the harsh glare of banks of spotlights, the man was placed up high for all to see, a noose placed around his neck. But his hanging was not a swift, silent one. He was not immediately hanged.

But Clarence Thomas refused to die.

Instead he fought back, fought the bloodthirsty mob that called for his hide, wanted to physically and emotionally destroy him, wanted him to endure a lifetime of pain in the public eye. His detractors wanted him dead, wanted his death to serve as a warning to those with ideological bents that some find aversive, that don't necessarily conform to the so-called "norms" of socio-economic groups.

But this country can be proud of Thomas, of his stance, of his righteous anger at his treatment at the hands of a bunch of liberal plug-uglies who brought brass knuckles and chain saws to a back alley fist fight.

Our nation's borders still need attention

With the Cold War officially at an end and with the world generally a much less threatening place than it was scant months ago, the talk is of slashing defense spending.

However, in one crucial respect, America's defenses are seriously wanting: The agencies charged with protecting the nation's borders and — particularly — interdicting the movement of illicit drugs across those borders are woefully overmatched by their adversaries.

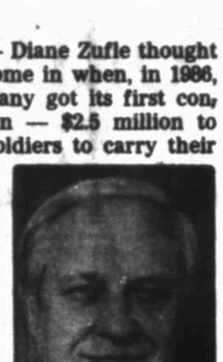
It seems reasonable to believe that the Border Patrol, U.S. Customs and other agencies involved in the struggle to quash the illicit drug traffic could do better if they had the tools with which to take on the task. As resources are freed up by the downsizing of the military establishment, both the Bush administration and the Congress should give serious thought to shifting them to this effort, which in its own way has national security implications as far-reaching as the now-defunct struggle between the superpowers.

— Corpus Christi Caller-Times

JACK ANDERSON

Pentagon does small business no favor

WASHINGTON — Diane Zufle thought her ship had come in when, in 1986, her little company got its first contract with the Pentagon — $2.5 million to make duffle bags for soldiers to carry their chemical protective gear.



Anderson

Five years later, her company is bankrupt, and the government wants its money back. Defense Department officials now say they should never have given Zufle the contract in the first place because she lacked experience. But if Zufle lacked anything, it was experience with how the moribund federal bureaucracy can strangle a promising small business.

She now has plenty of experience with that.

Her company, Silent Partner Inc., of Gretna, La., got off to a good start in 1982 making bullet-proof vests for police departments. After a few years, Zufle decided it was time for the big leagues, the federal government. She won the bid to produce 650,000 "NBC" bags — nuclear, biological and chemical protective gear carriers.

Almost from the beginning, the Pentagon delayed its installment payments to Zufle. There were disputes over the size of the bags and quibbling over whether Zufle could relocate her operation. Zufle's contacts at the Defense Department seemed mired in quicksand. It took months to get answers to simple questions — answers that she needed to get on with production.

To complicate matters, the Pentagon awarded Zufle six new contracts by the end of 1987 and $20 million was at stake. In one critical nine-month period, Zufle got no money from the Defense Department even though she continued to turn out bags. She complained they were behind on payments. They complained she was behind on production.

Henry Joseph, an industrial specialist with the Defense Logistics Agency, the branch of government with whom Zufle had her contract, inspected her operation in early 1987 and concluded that she was 11 months behind. But, Joseph wrote in a memo that 95 percent of the delays were the fault of the government. Joseph would later pay dearly for his opinion.

Meanwhile, Zufle was going under. The Defense Department stopped paying her in July 1988, but she continued working until April 1989 when her credit was exhausted. She filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy and began a bitter legal battle with the federal government. They say she owes them $2 million in refunds. She says the government owes her $9 million.

Joseph told us he will be on Zufle's side when she has her day in court. He claims that in late 1989, government attorneys tried to coach him on what he should say about Zufle, but he refused to be manipulated. Three months later his bosses fired him for travel voucher fraud. Joseph says he was offered a break if he would testify against Zufle, but he refused.

One former Defense Department official familiar with the case told our reporter Ed Henry that the department wouldn't admit its mistakes. "Nobody took it upon their shoulders to say that they screwed up and just go on. That's worse than the original mistakes they made. The government applied a lot of pressure on us to make it look like Zufle had given them reason to default on contracts."

Zufle's congressman, Rep. Bob Livingston, R-La., tried to intervene for her, but to no avail. He wrote to the Defense Logistics Agency asking them to give Zufle's complaints an impartial review in Washington. The agency refused, and seven days later canceled Zufle's contract.

GEORGE WILL

History shows hearing outcomes predictable

WASHINGTON — Not that the full truth is known, but: One of the powerful reasons for believing Clarence Thomas is that a trashing of him was predictable.

Will

On July 27, 1989, this was the first sentence of my column about William Lucas:

"Another colored boy (the language suits the moment) is acting uppity in Washington, but there are enough liberals left to lead a lynching."

The last paragraph of that column concerned the liberals on the Senate Judiciary Committee:

"What will they do when they have had their fill of the fun of trashing Lucas? They will turn their unspent indignation toward Clarence Thomas, the black Yale Law graduate who is President Bush's choice to fill the seat vacated by Bork on the District of Columbia Court of Appeals. Thomas is conservative. More deviationism. A liberal's work is never done."

In July 1989, Democrats on the Judiciary Committee were busy denigrating and rejecting a black conservative nominated to be assistant attorney general for civil rights. William Lucas, orphaned son of Caribbean immigrants, grew up in Harlem and put himself through Fordham Law School. Elected as a Democrat for four terms as sheriff of Wayne County surrounding Detroit, then elected county executive, in 1986 he became a Republican, was nominated for governor and lost. Three years later, Bush nominated him for U.S. assistant attorney general.

But because Lucas opposed reverse discrimination, quotas and the rest of the racial spoils system, Judiciary Committee Democrats, incited and even scripted by interest groups, found him unfit. White liberal politicians and their mostly white liberal staffs judged Lucas insufficiently "sensitive" to black needs, as those needs are defined by the civil rights industry.

That industry depends on enforcing the doctrine that blacks are permanent wards of government. Those who are ludicrously called "leaders" of what is laughably still called the "civil rights movement" make their livings mediating the dispersement of government benefits.

Thomas, like Lucas, represents a rising threat to the comfortable and profitable relationship between some liberal politicians and the civil rights industry. Thomas is a dire threat because of liberalism's now desperate dependency on courts.

Liberals cannot win the presidency and dare not try to legislate the racial spoils system by which they buy votes. So liberals have two terrors, one of which Lucas represented: Blacks who will not docilely let white liberals (like Ralph Neas, an apparatchik of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights) define permissible black political beliefs. Thomas represented that terror, and a second one: a judiciary that will not deliver by fiat the agenda that liberals cannot advance by democratic persuasion.

A perverse locution, one that helps incompetent and guilty people evade accountability, is just now enjoying wide currency: It is that "the process" produced the scandal of the Thomas hearings. However, the confirmation process is not an autonomous and impersonal force. It is the product of the people responsible for the Judiciary Committee, beginning with Chairman Joe Biden and encompassing the entire Democratic majority.

We do not know which senator is lying about, or is indifferent to the truth about, the leak that began the eleventh-hour fiasco.

We wait with unbated breath for Chairman Biden to show serious interest in punishing or even locating the reckless people in the Democratic ranks. If American government had traditions of acknowledging personal responsibility, Biden would resign as chairman. But there is no punishment for failure in Congress, which is one reason there is so much of it.

The circus over which Biden presided was, of course, a bonanza for those conservatives whose goals include, and depend on, lowering government's stature. We shall see if the president learns the right lesson from the circus. It is: Be forthright and implacable, and direct all nominees to be so, on behalf of the jurisprudential and constitutional ideas that he promised, as a candidate, to promote through judicial nominees.

Let there be no more nominees who try to curry favor with committee liberals by bobbing and weaving and trimming and pirouetting away from old convictions and flirting with new ones. Nominate conservatives who like to fight but do not lust for the job. Nominate them, if necessary, one right after another, grinding down the Judiciary Committee and then go to the country which today sees the committee as vindication of the intensifying contempt for Congress.

ART BUCHWALD

Thomas hearings act as learning experience

No matter what you say about the Judge Clarence Thomas hearings, it was a learning experience. Here are some of the notes I jotted down this weekend:

The big losers were not Anita Hill, Judge Thomas or the Senate Judiciary Committee — they were the country's department stores. Fighting to make it until Christmas, the stores lost all their customers to the television hearings; and long after everyone else recovers, the retail merchants will still be counting the inventory people should have bought at the Columbus Day sales.

Buchwald

The lie detector is a vicious, worthless piece of equipment used by "two-bit shyster lawyers" trying to clear their pathological clients of a perjury charge — or a reliable instrument needed to solve a veracity question, once and for all. If I had to choose, I'd say that it was a valuable tool in the pursuit of truth — but only if I passed the test.

If this country is going to ban Halcion, the popular sleeping pill, it has to ban Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah as well.

As far as all politicians are now concerned, sexual harassment has replaced communism as the biggest issue this country faces.

The reason the hearings took so long is that no senator on the panel could ever find the paper he was looking for. This was no accident. It's an old lawyer's trick to give him time to think of a question to ask.

If you are a senator and you can't prove that a person is lying, the next best thing is to claim that she is living in a fantasy world and believes that something happened when it never did. Pose your question as follows: "I know that you're not a psychiatrist, but please tell me why you think the witness has hallucinations, paranoia, schizophrenia and suffers from a multiple personality disorder — in your own words, of course."

Sen. Howell Heflin of Alabama holds the world record for taking longer than anyone else to ask a question. He was allotted 15 minutes to examine a witness. By the time he had finished his first question, his 15 minutes was up.

Everybody was filled with loathing about the disclosures, but the only ones who turned off the hearings were football or baseball perverts.

The biggest lie of the hearings, uttered repeatedly, was "this is not a trial." If it wasn't a trial, then the only thing it could be was the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus.

The breakdown of time used up between the witnesses and senators was as follows: 65 percent for senators making speeches, 10 percent for people answering the questions and 25 percent for senators answering their own questions for the witnesses.

As usual, the media was the villain as far as the supporters of Judge Thomas were concerned. The senators in favor of the judge could not say enough bad things about the press. Yet every time they wanted to make a point they read from The Washington Post, The New York Times or USA Today.

Since so much sick stuff was mentioned at the hearings concerning sexual harassment, pornography and animal sex acts, there is some talk by the networks of putting the Senate Judiciary Committee hearings on as a daily feature with either Phil Donahue or Oprah Winfrey acting as the host. As moderators, they would be able to get to the bottom of the controversy once and for all.

Senate fails to override Bush veto

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The Senate on Wednesday failed to override President Bush's veto of legislation that would have extended unemployment benefits for seven weeks in Texas and up to 20 weeks in other states.

After bitter partisan debate that put the two Texas senators at odds, lawmakers fell two votes short of the two-thirds majority needed to counteract the veto.

The 65-35 vote leaves workers who have exhausted their 26 weeks of regular benefits with no immediate prospects for additional help.

Rejecting a less generous Republican alternative, Senate Democrats said they would try to come up with another bill that Bush will accept. The president said he vetoed the $6.4 billion bill because it would add to the federal deficit and ultimately do more harm than good for workers.

Democrats responded with blistering criticism, accusing Bush of turning his back on American workers. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, who sponsored the benefits extension, said Bush has failed to acknowledge the nation's economic problems.

"We've got a lot of folks just hanging on, hoping and waiting for the economy to turn around," the Texas Democrat said. "This recession is not a gentle crisis."

The state's other senator, Republican Phil Gramm, helped lead the effort to sustain the veto. Standing just a few yards from his fellow Texan, Gramm denounced Bentsen's proposal as "a charade" and a "phony imitation of real economic policy."

Gramm charged that Democrats have refused to compromise with the president because they are more interested in vilifying Bush than helping unemployed workers.

"What we are seeing here is an effort to create a political issue, not an effort to help the unemployed," Gramm said. "This bill shows we care only about political advantage and not working people."

Eight Republicans joined all 57 Senate Democrats in voting to override Bush's veto. The vetoed bill, retroactive to March 1, would have extended benefits by seven, 13 or 20 weeks, depending on the unemployment rate in each state.

Bentsen said he will try to draft another bill that pays for the benefits extension without adding to the deficit.

"We have to find another way to accomplish it," Bentsen said. "I'm not, at this point, ready to determine how we pay for it. It's not going to be easy to come up with an alternative."

Republicans pressed Democrats to end the Bush bashing and adopt the Republican alternative. The latest version of the $3.1 billion Republican proposal would extend benefits for six weeks in Texas and up to 10 weeks in states with the highest unemployment.

The legislation is designed to pay for itself with revenues raised from the sale of unused radio frequencies and stepped-up collection of student loans.

But, unlike the Democratic proposal, the Republican bill is not retroactive for most workers who have lost their benefits but still don't have jobs.

Bush nominates Barr attorney general

WASHINGTON (NYT) — President Bush on Wednesday named Deputy Attorney General William P. Barr as his next attorney general, passing over several high-profile political appointees in favor of a conservative government lawyer who seemed unlikely to touch off the kind of controversy that has dogged the president's last two nominations.

Barr, 41, has been acting attorney general for the two months since Dick Thornburgh stepped down from the post to run for the Senate in Pennsylvania. Bush had been under pressure to fill the post permanently, since it is difficult for an acting attorney general to exert control over the FBI and the Justice Department's other agencies.

Agents arrest alleged leaders of drug ring, seize $1 million

MIAMI (AP) — Federal agents arrested three men and seized $1 million in cars, jewelry and cash in breaking up a ring that allegedly smuggled 75 tons of Colombian cocaine into the United States since 1978.

The men knew since May they faced charges that could put them in prison for life but continued to operate the ring out of luxury homes in south Florida until their arrests Tuesday night, federal officials said.

"It's amazing. These guys were fugitives, they knew they were wanted, and they were still in the business," said James Shedd, a spokesman for the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration in Miami.

The alleged ringleader was identified as Augusto Guillermo Falcon, the accused second-in-command as Salvador Magluta and a third defendant as Lorenzo Orlando Benigno.

All three were ordered held without bail Wednesday on charges of possession with intent to distribute cocaine. Falcon and Benigno also face charges of conducting a continuing criminal enterprise.

Falcon hired Guillermo Endara, now president of Panama, to set up corporations in the Central American nation, the DEA said.

"Endara incorporated a bunch of companies that were used by Falcon," said Shedd, cautioning that Endara's work as a private attorney was legal according to Panamanian law and there were no criminal connections between the two men.

Endara's government didn't immediately respond to a request for comment from The Associated Press in Panama.

Falcon's wife, Alina Jesusa Rossiqui Falcon, 34, appeared Wednesday on charges of giving false statements. She was released on $100,000 personal surety bond.

Agents seized more than $1 million in cars, jewelry and cash from the homes, the U.S. Marshal's Service said, bringing to more than $17 million the worth of ill-begotten assets recovered in the case.

Navy to apologize for blaming sailor in U.S. Iowa blast

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy is prepared to apologize for saying a lone sailor could have caused the April 1989 blast that claimed 47 lives aboard the battleship Iowa, Pentagon sources said Wednesday.

Adm. Frank Kelso, the chief of naval operations, is expected to make the announcement at a Pentagon briefing Thursday, based on a new report on the huge explosion that ripped through a gun turret aboard the vessel.

The Navy's initial investigation concluded that the explosion "most probably" was an intentional act by gunner's mate Clayton Hartwig, who was described as despondent over a failed relationship.

Task force calls for explicit sex education

WASHINGTON (AP) — A privately financed task force on Wednesday proposed national guidelines for sex education, including the use of explicit terminology and classroom discussions of controversial sex-related issues.

"Schools at last have national direction in developing their own sexuality education programs" for kindergarten through grade 12, said William Yarber, chairman of the National Guidelines Task Force, a coalition underwritten by the Carnegie Corp.

The guidelines, developed by 20 health, education and sexuality professionals from both the private and government sectors, call for instruction around six main subjects — human development, relationships, personal responsibility and values, sexual behavior, sexual health and society and culture.

Within those branches, 36 subtopics include reproduction, sexual identity, sexually transmitted diseases, masturbation, abortion and sexual abuse.

Earlier this year, the private Sex Information and Education Council of the United States called for development of such guidelines on ground that students learn about reproductive biology and anatomy but don't get much information on real sexual relationships.

Experts complained the focus of many sex education courses is disaster prevention — keeping teenagers from getting pregnant or reducing the incidence of sexually transmitted diseases, including AIDS.

Debra Haffner, executive director of the sex information council, said the need for such information in schools was underscored during the Senate Judiciary Committee hearings for Supreme Court justice nominee Clarence Thomas.

Public Notice

On July 1, 1991, Southwestern Bell Telephone filed an application with the Public Utility Commission of Texas that proposes to delete Paragraph 3.4(G) from Section 3 of Southwestern Bell's intrastate Access Service Tariff, which concerns credits where a customer uses Switched Access Service to furnish a service which has been defined to be an exchange service. The application was assigned Docket No. 10463.

Because Southwestern Bell is not aware of any customers who presently use switched access service to furnish an exchange service, Southwestern Bell does not believe its revenues will be affected. However, certain interexchange carrier customers of switched access service have made claims under the aforementioned tariff. Such customers, but only to the extent they provide an exchange service using switched access, would be affected by this application. Based on claims made for credits (assuming such credits were allowable), Southwestern Bell's revenues would be affected by no more than $1,168,962 annually, which is .037 percent of the Company's adjusted revenue for the 12-month period ending December 31, 1990. It is not possible to know how many interexchange carriers might believe themselves entitled to credits, but 189 carriers have registered with the Commission pursuant to PUC Substantive Rule 23.61.

The tariff, after suspension, is proposed to be effective May 1, 1992.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible, but no later than November 15, 1991. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Public Information Office at (512) 458-0256. Furniture maker to open plant in Odessa

■ Gerdan Industries will start operations with 30 people on their payroll.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A Phoenix, Ariz., furniture manufacturer who had considered locating in Midland or Big Spring announced his plans Wednesday to open the company in Odessa.

Jerry Ray, owner of Gerdan Industries Inc. said "friendly people" convinced him to choose Odessa, where he expects to start with a staff of 30 by the first of November.

Odessa Chamber of Commerce officials announced Ray's plans at the second of two economic development press conferences in two days.

"I've never felt more warmth and friendship from people I had never met," Ray said, describing his reception in Odessa, one of many sites he had considered. The company needed to move from Phoenix because of the growth of similar operations there, he said.

"We started marketing in the Texas area and found we were well-received," Ray said. Now he expects his company to grow by at least 30 employees each year for the next three years.

Chamber officials estimate Gerdan's economic impact at $1.6 million in its first year and $8 million annually by its third year in Odessa.

Mayor Lorraine Bonner said the attraction of Ray's manufacturing business represents the success of a "package" of benefits the city has to offer, including its Enterprise Zone, a 7.3-square mile area in which qualifying businesses can receive benefits such as tax abatement and job training opportunities.

"The greatest social welfare program we can have in America is a job," Ms. Bonner said. "That's the kind of attitude we want to foster in Odessa."

Ray said he will begin hiring within two weeks for office workers, mill workers and assemblers among other positions. Dergan will open in the Frost Baking Co. building at 104 S. Grandview, which had been vacant for several years.

Tuesday, chamber officials announced construction will begin Jan. 1 at the Safe Tire Disposal Corp.'s planned facility 11 miles west of the city. The Oklahoma-based company expects to spend $4 million and create about 30 new jobs.

Safe Tire will locate on land donated by Southdown Inc., the parent company of Southwestern Portland Cement, which has operated in Odessa for 32 years. Safe Tire will recycle 5 million tires each year by chopping them into two-inch chips that may later be used in asphalt and fuel.

Years of abuse led to shooting, woman alleges

■ Woman charged in husband's death says it was self-defense.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A Midland woman had reportedly suffered years of mental and physical abuse by her ex-husband before she allegedly shot him twice in the back last year, testimony revealed at the woman's murder trial on Wednesday.

Celia Garcia Perez, who pleaded not guilty to murder in Judge John Hyde's 238th District Court on Tuesday, maintained that she acted in self-defense when she fatally shot Jesus Aguilar Perez, 47, about 1:35 a.m. on Aug. 23, 1990.

Perez was shot three times, all apparently while in his car, according to testimony by a medical examiner and a forensic expert.

The most likely chronology of events, according to testimony, began when Perez, sitting in the driver's seat, had a bullet graze his scalp. Perez then turned, twisted and slumped over onto the passenger seat and sustained two shots in the back, according to testimony. The shots were probably fired from outside the driver's side of the car with the first bullet exiting the passenger window, testimony indicated.

During questioning, defense attorney Glen Aaron raised the possibility that Perez may have been attempting to open the glove compartment when the fatal shots were fired. A .25-caliber handgun wrapped in a piece of cloth was discovered in the glove compartment by police, previous testimony indicated.

In all, four shots from a .38-caliber handgun were fired by Ms. Perez, then 41, testimony revealed.

One shot occurred when Ms. Perez was holding the gun against her leg and that shot grazed her knee causing some injury, testimony indicated.

Both the shots that penetrated Perez's back travelled upward in his body, testimony showed. A shot in the upper left back travelled to the shoulder area, and a shot in the left middle back exited his right neck and then re-entered in the right neck/jaw area, testimony showed.

Following the shooting, which occurred in front of Ms. Perez's home at 925 N. Weatherford St., the body was found outside the car with the feet inside, testimony showed. Testimony implied that Perez died slumped over in the car and his body later moved.

Ms. Perez's brother, who resided at his parents' home nearby, told jurors that he heard a woman scream, went outside and found the victim's body outside the car.

Rosalinda Sanchez, a neighbor who heard the shots, said she saw Ms. Perez running around screaming and "when her (Ms. Perez's) parents came out, she said she had Chris Davidson Opportunity Park will open a revised section of the park just for children between the ages of 2 to 7. New play equipment has been installed in the area.

Park gets new toys for tots

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Chris Davidson Opportunity Park, known for its accessibility to the handicap, has had one-quarter of the grounds revised into a play area for youngsters 2 to 7 years old.

"The northwest part of the park, we've built into what we call totland," said Ray Unterbrink, executive director for the Midland Association of Retarded Citizens.

"It's all handicap accessible and built for young children," Unterbrink said.

Totland will feature funny mirrors, a playhouse, swings, hopscotch, a see-saw snake and other playground toys. Cost of the revision was about $25,000, all from donations.

An opening of totland will take place Saturday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. with clowns, face painting, finger/hand painting, a magic presentation, a puppet show and refreshments. At the same time, the Opportunity Day Care Center at MARC will have an open house.

Opportunity Park, located at Ventura Avenue at A Street, is one of only three parks in the United States that is fully accessible to the handicap.

The Midland park — which attracts as many as 300 people a day — is unique in that it's the only one also available for public use.

"The park has been a bridge between people with handicaps and those without," Unterbrink said.

Another bridge between the handicap and non-handicap has been the day care center at MARC.

Since last year, the Opportunity Day Care Center began accepting non-handicap children.

Hospital group notes 10 years of service

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Physicians & Surgeons Hospital's auxiliary is celebrating its 10th year of providing personalized care to the hospital's patients.

"My mother and grandmother always told me that you can't give goodness away," Helen Luff, auxiliary president, said Wednesday.

"Anytime you do something good for somebody else, it will come back," she said. "And everyone of us has the need to do (something good) for somebody else whether we admit it or not."

The 21-member auxiliary was recognized on Wednesday in a ceremony at the Midland hospital.

"People respond physiologically better in their recovery if, psychologically, they feel more comfortably, more at ease, and in a more intimate setting with people who are expressing care and concern," Bob Reid, P&S president, said in the hospital's salute to the volunteers.

"We just feel wanted and needed here," Mrs. Luff said.

"You are," Reid said.

Day after day, the hospital's volunteers greet patients and their family members when they enter the hospital, Reid noted.

"They also deliver beverages to patients, magazines, and newspapers," he said, and soon will be embarking on a new program, "Room Service," by which the volunteers will "supply other items of importance," including movies on video tapes, to the patients.

"The auxiliary is a very important part of this hospital," Reid said, "in that this hospital attempts to deliver a very personalized level of care to patients and to our patients' families."

Pastor volunteers to serve emergency personnel

Pam Hulte/Reporter-Telegram

The Rev. David Galletly has visited all nine fire stations.

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff Writer

Emergency medical personnel often find themselves staring death in the face.

Firefighters, police officers, paramedics and ambulance drivers will likely, at some point in their careers, find themselves cleaning up a bloody mess or arriving a few seconds too late to help save a life.

It's a part of their job that is often taken for granted, with reckless disregard for the images that may haunt them for life.

The Rev. David Galletly, who moved to Midland six months ago, believes a lot of those workers could benefit from a support service.

He pursued the idea of becoming the fire department's chaplain.

"I had worked for a couple of departments in California, so when I came to Midland I thought I would check into it," said Galletly, who is an Associate Rector at the Holy Trinity Episcopal Church.

Fire Department Chief James Roberts was intrigued by the idea, so, with the specifics still on the drawing board, Galletly decided to

Todd

Trying to balance out life is a bundle of trades.

If you give up cigarettes, you go overboard on Tootsie Rolls, mints and other candy. If not that, you start popping gum loudly, which is to noise pollution what smoking is to air pollution.

If you stop boozing, you start drinking those cola soft drinks with the compulsion you did when you showed off your manhood (or big mouth) by chugalugging beer.

It seems people trade one habit, one addiction, for another.

If, for reasons of could-be acquired longevity, you should lay aside fat-filled hot dogs, juicy hamburgers, and deep-fried, salty French-fried potatoes covered with sweet and tart catsup, then you surely would substitute those fast foods for "health foods" low in fat, sugar and salt.

You go to the extreme. Instead of hopping over to one of the strings of hamburger joints where the smell of popping grease lures many a hungry soul, you somberly drive over to the health bar that looks like a vegetable garden on ice. It hasn't much smell.

Your fear is being viewed as one of those dastardly self-righteous folk.

Hardly.

You are just trying, if you can, to make up for years of self-indulgence and fast-food sinning.

The pendulum swings widely.

From a fatty, grease-trap appetite that begs for more junk even while you are feeling queasy in the belly, you switch over to a bland diet that begs for spices, "natural" or concocted, to make the food at least seem more palatable.

The quest is to find a balance.

That's not so easy.

If you hunker down on those tasty fatty foods to the point of feeling obese, you feel guilty.

You fear the worst — fats and salts cutting into your health and halving your life. But the food is so good to the taste. Makes you want more. It's similar to the die-hard tobacco smoker's choice: Do you give up your tobacco lust, those moments of inhaled and exhaled pleasure, and trade that in on the uncertainties of a healthier and a longer life?

Which are the more gratifying: smoking or not smoking, drinking or not drinking, pigging out or not pigging out? What, indeed, is practical and sensible?

The answers probably depend upon what you plan to do with your life, your fragile life, and the level of wellness which your attitude can best accommodate.

Meanwhile, you grapple with life's temptations, the good and the bad, and you try to find a balance in whatever extreme may suit your fancy. The middle ground, if it does exist, is so elusive.

DEATHS

Reyes Rangel

A vigil prayer service for Reyes Orona Rangel of Midland was held Wednesday at the Ellis Chapel. Mass will be recited at 10 a.m. today at Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church with Father Domingo Estrada officiating. Interment will follow at Fairview Cemetery with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Rangel

Mrs. Rangel died Tuesday.

She was born Jan. 6, 1931, in Colorado City. She married Pedro "Pete" Rangel, Jr., in 1953 and they moved to Midland. Her husband died on Oct. 2, 1973.

Mrs. Rangel was an active member of Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church where she served as an eucharistic minister. She also was president of the Guadalupanas and a member of the Altar Society. She was previously employed by Robert L. Monaghan.

Survivors include two sons, Joe Rangel and Martin Rangel, both of Midland; four daughters, Beatris Lambdin, Terri Madrid and Pebbles Kincheloe, all of Midland, and Pat Richardson of Sheffield; three brothers, Jose Orona of Colorado City, H.M. Orona of New Braunfels and Edward Orona of Denton; three sisters, Beatris Sanchez of Fontana, Calif., Pola Campos of Colorado City and Vicki Ornelas of Del Rio; and 23 grandchildren.

Pallbearers will be Abel Paredes, Don Barela, Arnold DeLaGarza, Martin Villareal, Pablo Olgin and Ventura Salas.

Honorary pallbearers will be Tom Merrill, Robert Monaghan, Tom Frison and Paul Diaz.

The family requests memorials be directed to Our Lady of Guadalupe Grotto Fund, P.O. Box 7, Midland, Texas, 79702.

Bernard Scott

LEVELLAND — Services for Bernard Otis Scott, 77, of Levelland and brother-in-law of Midlander Wesley Graham, are set for 10 a.m. Friday at the George C. Price Funeral Chapel with Jim Lindly of Lubbock and Jimmy Easterwood and Foy Smith, both of Levelland, officiating. Burial will follow in the City of Levelland Cemetery under the direction of George C. Price Funeral Directors.

He died Tuesday at a local hospital following a lengthy illness.

He was born Oct. 25, 1913, in Hurst, Ill.

An Air Force veteran of World War II, he worked for the city of Wilcox, Ariz., before moving to Fort Worth and later to Levelland in 1987.

He was a member of Fifth Street Church of Christ.

W.N. Brown

PERRYTON — Services for W.N. "Dick" Brown, 68, father of Midlander Jack Brown, are set for 11 a.m. today at the First United Methodist Church with the Rev. Edward Allsup officiating. Burial will follow in Ochiltree Cemetery under the direction of Boxwell Brothers Funeral Home.

He died Tuesday.

He was born May, 17, 1923, in Shamrock. He moved to Perryton from Great Bend, Kan., in 1960.

An Army Air Corps veteran of World War II, he operated Western Equipment & Service.

He married Jimmie Holland in Wheeler in November 1942.

Survivors include: his wife, Jimmie Brown of Perryton; one son, Jack Brown of Midland; one daughter, Carolyn Estes of Denver, Colo.; two brothers, Alvin Hiltbrunner of Big Spring and Gene Hiltbrunner of Odessa; four grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Lee Heard

ODESSA — Services for Lee Nichols "Babe" Heard, 86, are set for 2 p.m. Friday at the Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Lacy Standifer officiating. Burial will follow in Fairview Cemetery in Midland under the direction of Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home.

He died Tuesday at a Dallas nursing home.

Heard was born July 10, 1905, in Midland County.

He married Earline McElroy on Sept. 9, 1927, in Las Cruces, N.M. She preceded him in death Feb. 23, 1983.

Heard grew up on a ranch south of Midland and worked as a cowboy before moving to Odessa in 1932. He worked as an oilfield mechanic until 1953, when he joined the city as a utility inspector. He retired in 1973. He also worked for Municipal Engineering Co. installing water and sewer systems throughout the region.

He was a member of the Church of Christ.

Survivors include his wife, Nita Nunnley; two sons, Roy Lee Heard of Dallas and Billy Gaylon Heard of Odessa; one brother, Allen Heard of Ruidoso, N.M.; one sister, Joyce Turner of Abilene; seven grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

Memorials should be directed to the American Heart Association.

Alene McCane

Memorial services for Alene McCane of Albuquerque, N.M., will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday at the Strong-Thorne Mortuary Chapel in Albuquerque.

Mrs. McCane died Wednesday at a Midland hospital following a lengthy illness.

She was born Oct. 27, 1921, in Daingerfield. She was a 35-year resident of Albuquerque and lived in Midland with her daughter.

Survivors include her husband, Billie George McCane of Albuquerque; two sons, Michael Herman Goodson of Baton Rouge, La., and Gregory Dan Goodson of Albuquerque; one daughter, Molden Sue Roseberry of Midland; her mother, Ada Mae Jones of Midland and two grandchildren.

Thomas Jackson

Thomas Jackson of Midland died Wednesday at a local hospital.

Services will be at 9 a.m. Friday at Ellis Chapel with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Ann Howard

Services for Ann H. Howard of Midland have been set for 10 a.m. Friday at the Davis Funeral Home Chapel in Henrietta with the Rev. Thomas Brummett officiating. Interment will follow at the Howard Ranch Cemetery. Ellis Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Howard died Tuesday at her home.

She was born June 8, 1929, in Dallas and was reared in Henrietta.

She married William Duncan Howard in 1948 in Dallas and they moved to Midland in 1951.

Mrs. Howard was a member of First United Methodist Church.

Survivors include her mother, Evelyn B. Hapgood of Henrietta; one sister, Randy Hapgood of Henrietta; one son, Hap Howard of Midland; three daughters, Laureen Strubar, Susan Strickland and Randy McPherson, all of Midland; and eight grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be directed to North Texas Easter Seals Rehabilitation Center, 105 Midwestern Parkway East, Wichita Falls, Texas, 76302.

Iva Parker

She died Wednesday at a Salt Lake City, Utah, hospital.

Billy Holland

Services for Billy Dean Holland of Midland have been set for 11 a.m. today at the Ellis Chapel with Rev. Lowell Cessna officiating. Interment will follow at Fairview Cemetery with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Holland died Monday at his residence.

He was born Feb. 10, 1927, in Iowa Park and was reared in East Texas and Arkansas. He began his oilfield career at the age of 15, working as a roughneck. He moved to West Texas in the early 1950s and began a career in automobile sales.

In 1970 he moved to Midland and returned to the oil industry as an oilfield equipment salesman. He retired in 1989.

Survivors include his wife, Wanda Holland of Midland; one daughter, Donna J. Holland of Fort Worth; two sons, Floyd D. Holland and Stephen A. Holland, both of Kingwood; three sisters, Naomi Whatley of Norphlet, Ark., Norma Pierson of Abilene and Sue Coleman of El Dorado, Ark.; five stepchildren; five grandchildren; six step-grandchildren; four nieces and eight nephews.

He was preceded in death by two brothers, Arthur J. Holland, Jr., and Robert C. Holland.

Pallbearers will be Howard Madden, L.D. Roemack, George Crow, Rufus Whatley, Lewis Whatley, Robert Coleman, Kregg Pierson and Phillip Taylor.

Currently, there are about six to 15 children who attend the day care, about two-thirds of whom are handicapped, according to Betty Jo Munn, supervisor of the day care. In the future, the center hopes to have a maximum of 25 children, about half non-handicapped, she added.

So far the integration has been smooth, she said.

"We want the child without the handicap to be a peer model for the child with the handicap," Ms. Munn said.

Being around non-handicap children will help the handicap become more adjusted to a world not specifically designed for them, Unterbrink said.

But the benefit will be twofold, Ms. Munn said.

"We've all been raised, geared, that the handicapped is a different breed but they are not," Ms. Munn said. The non-handicapped being with the handicapped at a young age will hopefully prevent that image from forming, she said Unterbrink agreed.

"Children without a handicap aren't that different from their non-handicapped peers," he said. "Being handicapped, that's just one part of that person's life," he added.

For example, Unterbrink said, people don't perceive a person who wears glasses as only a glass-wearing person. Likewise, a person with a handicap is a person first, who just happens to have a handicap.

shot her husband, killed him."

According to the medical examiner's review of blood/alcohol test results taken of Ms. Perez on the night of the shooting, "she was stumbling drunk."

Just after the shooting, Ms. Perez was seen wearing a bra but no blouse and had her hair messed up as if rolling in the grass, other testimony showed.

Upcoming testimony by Ms. Perez will reveal that she had been knocked down, her blouse ripped off and then dragged around, Aaron told jurors during his opening statement.

The alleged abuse to Ms. Perez that occurred on the night of the shooting was one instance of a history of such mistreatment, the defense said.

Rose Garcia, the mother of Ms. Perez, testified that the couple fought "constantly" before and after their divorce. Mrs. Garcia said that she witnessed bruises on her daughter's back and side on one occasion.

Ms. Perez reportedly told her mother after the shooting, "He was going to kill me. He was going to kill me," Mrs. Garcia testified.

Delia McGowan, sister of Ms. Perez, testified that the couple had fought since they married about 18 years ago and continued after their divorce in late 1988.

A tearful and upset Ms. Perez called her sister after fights and beatings on numerous occasions, Mrs. McGowan said.

Mrs. McGowan related one conversation she had with Ms. Perez: "She said, 'Jessie (Perez) tried to kill me last night. He put a gun up to my head.'"

Mrs. McGowan said that only once had she witnessed her sister actually being physically abused by Perez.

Three former co-workers of Ms. Perez also testified to having seen Ms. Perez bruised. Ms. Perez's related that her ex-husband beat her, witnesses testified.

A third-grade teacher also testified that she saw Ms. Perez badly bruised on one occassion.

All those who testified about Ms. Perez's marital and post-marital problems and abuse said Ms. Perez was secretive about the mistreatment and had to be pushed to open up.

The trial continues today and is expected to last into Friday.

visit all nine department substations.

"We had never had that sort of program so I didn't know how it would work or what it would be like," said Roberts. "But it seemed there may be a need for it and it turned out that everyone received him well."

Roberts was even more pleased when two recent crises revealed Galletly's value.

"A couple of weeks ago there was an incident that really upset one of the guys in the ambulance," Roberts said. "The reverend really helped out."

"And a few days ago," Roberts added, "one of the same paramedics worked the wreck where two people were killed. He talked individually to both men to help them deal with it. One of the guys is new."

Galletly hopes his support is more than a counseling service.

"Really, for me, it's more listening than talking, and I'll talk to anyone who is interested," he said. "What seems to be the biggest part is to give the men a chance to make sense of what happened and to make sense of the spiritual implications."

Both Roberts and Galletly are still unsure where the program is headed.

"It's unclear," said Galletly. "But I plan to meet with the men and the chief to see exactly what their needs are. I will try to help with any big problems but I also hope to just get together with them to talk."

VOLUNTEERS: Auxiliary provides services

(From 1B)

The volunteers are "sort of the lubricant in our system of care for people," Reid said. "They go around (to the rooms) and very personally assess whatever people need and deliver whatever it is that they need in the way of care."

Reid, who became administrator of the investor-owned 60-bed hospital in 1989, said that he enjoys Midland and likes "the sense of community that exists here."

Mrs. Luff noted the need for P&S Hospital as well as Midland's larger public hospital, Memorial Hospital and Medical Center.

Edna Benninger, a charter member of the P&S auxiliary, said that she delights in "helping people. I do work for Hospice (of Midland). And I've always been a volunteer since I was a young person."

P&S volunteer Pat Tate said that serving patients has been a "very rewarding experience."

And "just to stop for a minute and stick your head in the room" and say "Hello" is fulfilling even if the patients "don't want a can of orange juice or a cup of coffee," she said. "I like to think when I walk away, maybe they feel a little better."

Funding threatens SSC project

The State

WASHINGTON (AP) — The super collider may be doomed if foreign governments don't help pay for the $8.25 billion atom smasher, according to a former Texas official who directed the state's effort in the project.

"The lack of foreign funding can be the Achilles heel for the super collider," said J. Fred Bucy, former chairman of the Texas National Research Laboratory Commission, which oversees Texas' $1 billion contribution.

Department of Energy officials are in Tokyo this week seeking financial and technological aid for the collider. But, Japanese officials have carefully skirted making any commitments.

An Education Ministry official told The Associated Press that funding in the amount sought by the Bush administration is "almost impossible."

"I do not think they will come through with a commitment in time to help the collider get its funding for fiscal year '93," Bucy said Wednesday. He quit the Texas agency in July to focus attention on the lack of foreign donations.

U.S. officials asked Japan last year for $2 billion in funding and in-kind goods and services, Bucy said. "I do not see the Japanese making this size contribution," he said. "I think that they will give eventually something in the $250 million range."

The superconducting super collider — which would be the world's largest scientific instrument — is due to be built in a 54-mile oval tunnel in Ellis County, south of Dallas. The particle accelerator aims to probe the origin of matter by causing protons to collide at high speed in the underground ring.

Library opens Hughes' letters to public view

AUSTIN (AP) — When billionaire Howard Hughes became alarmed over plans for an underground atom bomb test in Nevada while he was living at a Las Vegas hotel, he wrote a fellow Texas native seeking to stop it: President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Their exchange is part of a collection of documents just opened to public inspection by the Texas State Library and Archives, which has custody of the state's records from an eight-year legal battle over the Hughes estate.

The 270 cubic feet of documents include letters, telegrams and other records from Hughes' life.

Hughes' fortune was built on a special drill bit used in oil exploration. But he concentrated his business interests in movies and aviation.

By the late 1960s, Hughes had become reclusive, surrounded by aides and lacking virtually any contact with the outside world. He was obsessed about his health and threats to it, real or perceived.

Despite Hughes' plea, Johnson decided to proceed with the bomb test.

In a memo to an aide, delivered at 6:50, a.m. on April 26, 1968, Hughes said he was "truly disappointed in the reaction of the White House. Can you find out if Mr. Johnson really read my letter?"

Two weeks later, on May 9, the president wrote Hughes a two-page letter to assure him that he had "personally considered your letter and discussed it with my advisers before coming to a final decision."

However, Johnson wrote, he approved the bomb test because of its "importance to our national security."

Hughes was born in Texas and lived in the state 20 years before moving to California. Much of the prolonged legal battle over his estate centered on his residence.

The billionaire died on April 5, 1976.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A new lifestyle means greater comfort. Take advantage of a holiday celebration to bring about a family reconciliation. Relationship conflicts subside when you act more loving. The job outlook brightens as 1992 gets under way. Keep your mind on business in early spring. Any emotional upsets in May will be quickly resolved. Form a financial partnership next summer after checking someone's credentials. You may decide to return to school.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: movie stars Montgomery Clift and Rita Hayworth, singer Gary Puckett, journalist Jimmy Breslin.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An old friend could help you get the credit you need. Be honest about your debts. Your social life accelerates. Take care not to go overboard when entertaining. Romance moves to center stage.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Business negotiations could be frustrating today. Look on the bright side. A former associate will offer you both important materials and moral support. Be careful not to neglect your loved ones.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The atmosphere at work is lively today. You may find it difficult to communicate with your loved ones. Travel is best postponed. Stop kidding yourself in romance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A good day for doing things with people you really care about. You will be held to any promises you make now! Leave early if you have an important appointment this evening.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Befriend someone new to your office or neighborhood. A lasting friendship is possible. Show more initiative at work. Consult a lawyer if you have any doubts about a real estate transaction.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Snap into action and deal at once with a financial matter. A phone call or letter gives you the inspiration you need to tackle a difficult project. Your perseverance pays off handsomely.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Stop sitting on the fence. Once you make a firm decision, you will reap new benefits. Co-workers are friendly but not overly helpful. Tackle projects you can handle alone.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Steer clear of dubious investments. Distant affairs look more promising than anticipated. Be practical when making social plans. Keep things simple and inexpensive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A morning shopping trip could yield some terrific bargains. Self-improvement activities enjoy highly favorable influences. Employees who are flexible will move up quickly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A message or letter brings gratifying news. People who work behind the scenes will help you advance your plans. Curb your social life. Romance may have to take a temporary backseat to career.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Refuse to be rattled by gossip. Let other people decide when an announcement should be made. Things get hectic when visitors show up in droves at your place of employment. Mind your manners.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do everything possible to bring a parent and child closer together. The financial moves you make now could fetch you top dollar later on. A search for a new career proves successful.

It is fascinating to watch a bridge hand unfold. Take this seemingly simple contract of five clubs, reached after a competitive auction. At first glance, it might seem that declarer has a loser in each suit except diamonds. The only possible loser that might be dodged is in hearts, and to accomplish that declarer will have to strive for an endplay.

Suppose declarer wins the opening spade lead and immediately fires back a spade. West follows the maxim of second-hand low and East wins the trick. Unless East returns a trump, West will be trapped eventually.

Assume East shifts to a diamond. Declarer wins in dummy, ruffs a diamond and cashes the ace and king of hearts before exiting with a trump. In with the ace of clubs, West can return only a spade or a diamond. Either permits declarer to ruff in dummy while discarding the losing heart from hand.

A good defender in the West seat will spot the looming endplay. It can be averted easily enough by going up with the jack of spades at trick two, cashing the ace of clubs, then exiting with a red suit. The defenders now have two tricks in the bank, and South has no way to avoid losing a heart for down one.

However, declarer did not do a good job of concealing the line of play to be adopted. Life for the defenders is far more difficult if South allows the queen of spades to win the first trick. East is faced with a crucial decision at trick two. A club to the ace will allow the defenders to triumph—West can no longer be thrown in and East-West will collect the three tricks that are their due. But any other return allows declarer to spin a web that will entrap West and land the contract.

Powell

Powell, 84, was admitted last week to Johns Hopkins Hospital after complaining of dizziness. At the time, he was at the hospital attending a meeting.

He was released Tuesday.

Powell had a pacemaker implanted in his heart in January, said Supreme Court spokeswoman Toni House.

Powell retired from the Supreme Court in 1986, 15 years after he was appointed by President Nixon.

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. — Health authorities have squeezed much of the fun with the fat from this country's dinner tables, say Julia Child and some other culinary heavyweights.

Child

They spoke at a fund-raiser featuring pizza topped with mashed potatoes and other gutsy heresies against the salt-free, cholesterol-free dictates of the past decade.

"We've been lectured to for so long by the nutritional prigs," said Michael Stern, co-author of the "American Gourmet" cookbook. "We're all so scared of not being nutritionally correct, we've been intimidated."

Child said the strictest strictures of health-conscious cooking could eventually be "the death of gastronomy."

Child and other recipe book authors raised about $10,000 Tuesday for Hampshire County United Way programs. Each author helped volunteer chefs from restaurants prepare favorite recipes with donated ingredients. About 300 food mavens paid to $35 each to sample the succulent creations.

GULFPORT, Miss. — A rhyming lawsuit has been filed against Hammer by a man who claims the rapper's bodyguards beat him after a concert.

Steven McKinney claims his jaw was broken by two bodyguards in a hotel parking lot after a Nov. 16 concert in Biloxi.

The lawsuit, filed by lawyer Lisa Collums, with rhyme by colleague Jim Rose, said in part:

"For M.C.'s guards were strutting their might,

"Under the guise of preventing a fight.

"But there was no fight and no Hammer to protect,

"When all of a sudden your plaintiff hit the deck."

Stephen Carmody, attorney for Hammer, said Wednesday he thought the rhyming was ploy to attract attention.

Collumns said McKinney was at a hotel with friends for a post-concert party when he heard a gunshot. Soon after, "Hammer's bodyguards came up and decked him," she said.

Carmody said McKinney shot at the bodyguards.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Grand Ole Opry singer Bill Anderson filled in for a radio announcer Wednesday, saying, "Once a DJ, always a DJ."

Anderson spent four hours on the air at station WSM, filling in for Larry Black, who was away on a trip.

Anderson was an announcer in the late 1950s before his singing career got started.

"You never really get it out of your system," he said.

Anderson, known for his songs "Still" and "City Lights," has performed regularly on the Grand Ole Opry since 1961.

NEW YORK — After a tough day on the stage or the set, nothing relaxes Tyne Daly like a sinkful of soapsuds and a stack of dirty dishes.

"I have a dishwasher in my home, but I never use it," the former "Cagney and Lacey" star says in the Nov. 5 issue of Woman's Day. "I enjoy washing dishes by hand."

She's not alone in her passion for spotless dinnerware. Actress Lauren Hutton feels the same way: "I hate ironing. But I have never had a dishwasher, because I find washing dishes most relaxing."

Several other celebrities reveal their favorite household chores to the magazine. Willard Scott likes yard work; Doris Day loves sweeping.

Whoopi Goldberg adores her washer and drier. "I love doing laundry," the Academy Award winning "Ghost" star confesses. "I even make it up; I mean, I throw things on the floor to make laundry."

NEW YORK — Steve Guttenberg's efforts making sandwiches for the homeless has earned him a spot on People magazine's "Do-Good Dozen" list.

By Bernadine Morris
N.Y. Times News Service

LONDON — Since the days of the mods and the rockers, fashion here has been a walk on the wild side. Cozy staples like cashmere sweaters and country suits have been tucked under the bed. New ideas swept swiftly across the fashion stage and into oblivion.

Today, a new sense of restraint is in the air. The street scene, which inspired designers for years, is quieter. Money is tighter. There is more interest in clothes that will last.

Retailers seem to approve the new direction. "When fashion gets to the point where there is nothing new, quality develops a status all its own," said Joan Burstein, who heads Browns, one of the innovative shops. "It is not boring to see clothes beautifully made."

Designers at the upper end of the fashion scale are finding that more attention is being paid to their work.

Anouska Hempel, who opened a shop on Pond Place five years ago to appeal to rich women when the economy was flourishing, finds that though there are still people with money, "the 'shop till you drop' mood is over."

"Women want clothes they are sure they can wear a lot," she said. One of her suggestions is a five-piece wardrobe in embroidered organdy and taffeta that will cover most evening occasions. It consists of a strapless top, a short easy coat, a narrow skirt and a more elaborate one with some side fullness, plus long or short pants.

"You don't have to be deadly serious all the time," she added, pointing to a black and white striped satin skirt, split all the way up to the waist to show off the tights women are wearing.

CONVINCED THAT "the future won't be fancy," she is simplifying her designs and trying to convince her English customers that "a dress doesn't have to have everything on it at one time," she said.

Marc Bohan, the designer for Christian Dior in Paris for 30 years, sparked the trend to top-quality clothes when he presented his first couture collection for Norman Hartnell in January. His first ready-to-wear collection is being shown during the truncated London spring fashion week, which began on Friday and ended Monday.

"I wanted to just do suits, because that's what women wear most — when they travel, when they work and when they go out to dinner," Bohan said. In the end, he added a few easy day dresses and some chiffons for night. He is pleased with the chiffons, all short because he believes that "long dresses are passe."

But the majority of his styles are suits, with long jackets and skirts with low pleats repeating the dominant line of his couture collection. The gently fitted jackets are shown in gray flannel, black wool, white silk and classic checks and plaids. Aqua, yellow and pink blazers are shown with gray flannel skirts and with pants for more casual weekends.

Jean Muir, this country's most respected designer, has some lighter moments: for example, a leather bra that bares the midriff and is shown with a calf-length leather skirt. Curved edges are the collection's softening agent. Robin's-egg blue is one of the cheerful colors in linen, leather, faille and wool suits.

"I wanted the collection to be charming," the designer said after her show. "When I made the drawings for the clothes, I wrote the word 'charm' at the top of every sketch."

Roland Klein, one of eight designers showing their collections in a tent at the Duke of York's headquarters on King's Road, said that his clothes, which sell for about $1,000 in the United States, seem to be drawing more buyers.

"People like Caroline Charles, Jasper Conran and I have been concentrating on quality for years, but now that the fashion scene has quieted down, there is more interest in our work," he said.

He offered jackets in bright stripes and plaids, bare-midriff styles and short, full party dresses propped up with petticoats, all ideas in the mainstream of fashion. He also introduced his first men's collection, which included sports coats in the same fabrics he used for his women's suits.

BUT THE BIGGEST sign of the change in tone here was Vivienne Westwood's show at Tall Orders, a trendy restaurant in Soho. When the models all wear pumps with three-inch platforms and heels a handspan tall, and big, squashy artist's berets, the presentation cannot be said to be ordinary. But Ms. Westwood, London's leading eccentric, showed clothes that were nowhere near as scary as they used to be.

She returned to her first big commercial success, the big shirts of her pirate's collection 10 years ago. Now the shirts are even fuller than they once were and, built like smocks, also serve as voluminous jackets or coats. There are almost conventional suits that she calls her "modern couture reference." Jeans are printed with cherubs or photographs of the interiors of an 18th-century chateau.

"Everyone says the clothes are calmer," she said after the show, looking a bit mystified at the notion.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: When I read the letter in your column from the pizza delivery truck driver, I had to write. I also work for a national pizza chain, as an inside person taking telephone orders. (Our goal is to take the order, make the pizza and deliver it within 30 minutes.)

Van Buren

The same parents who allow 3- and 4-year-olds to pay for the pizzas also put them on the phone to order them. I have to keep four adults on hold while trying to decipher the speech of a toddler. Meanwhile, the parents are in the background coaching him or her as to what to order, the address, etc. These parents obviously think this performance is incredibly cute. I have also had 5- and 6-year-olds placing orders as late as 10 and 11 p.m.

Abby, please allow me to point out a few tips for readers who order pizza:

1. Decide what you want to order before you call. We may have people on hold while you are conferring with each other as to what size to order, what toppings, etc.
2. Have the person who knows the address order the pizza.
3. Have your money ready for the driver, since he may have several pizzas to deliver within 30 minutes.
4. Please be on the lookout for your pizza once it's ordered. Turn on a light so your address is visible at night. Have an adult present to pay for the pizza. Also, lock up your Doberman, pit bull terrier, German shepherd, etc.

Thanks, Abby. This is a load off my chest. — ELAINE IN BALTIMORE

DEAR ELAINE: Grazie for the suggestions.

DEAR ABBY: I was happy to see that piece in your column warning your readers about bringing valuables (jewelry) when they check into a hospital — even for an overnight stay.

I've been an RN for 12 years and I am still amazed at the stuff people lug into a hospital.

Some come in with loads of suitcases for a week's stay. One woman brought all her diamonds and hid them in a pillowcase — which almost got thrown in a hamper!

Only last month, a man brought his life's savings of $100,000 in cash! Luckily, an observant employee spotted the stash and called security to place it in the vault for safekeeping.

Elderly and confused patients are most vulnerable. I have seen patients throw wedding rings and hearing aids in the trash cans.

Yes, there are thieves even in hospitals, but it's impossible for us to search every man, woman and child that comes and goes here.

Please print this, Abby. No city, please. — ROSE, AN R.N.

AT WIT'S END

'Say it with flowers' instead

By Erma Bombeck

There's a cult of readers out there who feed on greeting cards. They're a strange little group who graze in the aisles of card shops for hours, flipping open card after card, laughing to themselves, oblivious to anyone around them. These racks of sentiments are their comedy stores, their alter-egos, their psychiatrists' couches, their lunch hours. I am one of them.

Bombeck

Throughout the years, I have seen the greeting card business explode. Today, there's a card for everything: "Congratulations on your weight loss: one 175-pound husband!" "Best wishes to a high school graduate who finally found a college that would accept him." "The gang at the office is proud of your success. Glad you made bail."

It was inevitable that the next step would be personalized greeting cards. It's a chance to say what you want in your own words. The idea looked so great when I saw it in a Hallmark store. I'm a writer, for crying out loud. I have cute little phrases that dribble down my chin like a spaghetti dinner.

But what I didn't count on was a computer and an audience. I'm not good at either one.

It's definitely a reading glasses operation. The computer asked for the code number.

"Look on the back of the card," instructed a bystander.

"Don't you want that in caps?" ventured another one.

"It would be nicer if something rhymed," offered another member of the crowd, which was growing by the minute.

"You're in over your head," said my mother.

By this time I felt like I was back in high school looking at naked natives in National Geographic with my mother hovering over my shoulder.

As the computer waited for my inside message, the audience moved in closer to see what hilarious zinger I was going to print. The woman who has been writing a humor column for 26 years and has published 10 lighthearted books hesitated and then desperately typed, "Love, Mom and Dad."

"That's it?" said a voice behind me.

"What did she write?" asked another voice.

" 'Love, Mom and Dad.' "

The crowd dispersed as quickly as it had formed.

The card didn't print because I forgot to fill in a date at the top. I had to do it all over again.

Personalized greeting cards! When you care enough to make a fool of yourself in front of a crowd.

Hair rollers restore style — but privately

By Carrie Donovan
N.Y. Times News Service

Like many businesswomen, the designer Donna Karan often has lunch at her desk.

But these days, before she tackles her health salad and hot water with lemon, she reaches for a few jumbo hair rollers. Without consulting a mirror, she twists a hank of hair up over each roller and lets it stay there until her next appointment.

Reshaping her hair with a toss, Ms. Karan emerges with a coif that may look a bit tousled, but definitely has more volume.

Rollers, those bastions of 1960s high-rise hair styles, have returned to favor at the right time. Like a good many other women, Ms. Karan is letting her hair grow longer after wearing it cropped short, and the quick roller routine during the day gives her hair some shape and fullness.

Today's rollers made with sponge or with touch fasteners do not need a setting lotion or water. They work fine on dry hair.

The puffy effect will last an hour or two and maybe longer, depending on the condition and weight of the hair.

Terry Camaco, a hair stylist at the Thomas Morrissey Salon, 787 Madison Avenue (66th Street), suggests that after removing the rollers, one should shape the hair with a wide-tooth comb and a light touch. Too much work will wreck the effect.

But while rollers may be a handy new tool for the working woman, they are definitely not meant to be seen in public. Pop them in in private, and be sure to remove all of them before facing the world again.

Dance rule review

Associated Press

If it's a review of the NFL's "illegal demonstration" rule that game officials want, they are going to get it.

Jim Finks, chairman of the rules-making Competition Committee, suggested that some officials may be calling the penalty to show their dislike for it and to get it reviewed.

There will be a routine review of officating at the league meeting in Dallas next week, Joe Browne, the NFL's vice president for communications and development, said Wednesday.

"Our office will discuss the application of this rule with Jim at that time if not before," Browne said.

"It's a judgment call, up to the officials," Finks, president of the New Orleans Saints, said of the illegal demonstration rule on Tuesday. "But my impression is that they don't like the rule so they're going out of their way to call it to show that."

Finks' comments stemmed from a call at the end of the Pittsburgh Steelers-New York Giants game Monday night.

The Steelers, who had trailed 20-0, had just scored to tie the game with 50 seconds left. Eric Green, who caught the 5-yard TD pass from Neil O'Donnell, spiked the ball, then engaged in a short celebration dance with teammates Louis Lipps and Dwight Stone.

A flag was thrown and the Steelers were forced to kickoff from their own 30. When the ball went out of bounds, the Giants got the ball at their own 40 and quickly drove to the Pittsburgh 26, setting up Matt Bahr's 44-yard field goal to win the game.

That's about the limit of Bahr's range — he hadn't kicked in warmups from further than 48 yards. If the penalty had not been enforced, he might have had to try the kick from 49 yards.

Three weeks ago, the league modified rules against demonstrations enacted last March at its annual meeting in Hawaii. It had led to suggestions that NFL stood for "No-Fun League."

But the rule enforced Monday night was enacted in 1984, after the Washington Redskins' "Fun Bunch" hailed every touchdown with an end-zone celebration in which a half-dozen or more players jumped in the air and slapped hands.

Finks said that the intent of the rule was to penalize premeditated demonstrations.

Avery baffles Bucs again as Braves win 1-0

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — The Atlanta Braves finally scored, and even though it was only one run it was enough for Steve Avery.

Avery pitched like a 21-year veteran rather than a 21-year-old and the Braves broke their scoreless streak at 26 innings on Greg Olson's two-out double in the ninth off Doug Drabek to beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 1-0 Wednesday night, forcing the NL playoffs to a seventh game.

As Ron Gant scored the winning run he stopped and stared at home plate as a Brave crossed it — without missing third base — for the first time since the first inning of Game 4.

It was the third 1-0 game in this series after just four previous 1-0 games in the 22-year history of the NL playoffs.

Now, John Smoltz, baseball's winningest pitcher since the All-Star break, will try to extend Atlanta's improbable season when he faces 20-game winner John Smiley tonight night in a rematch of Game 3 starters.

The Pirates have played five deciding Game 7s in their postseason history and won every time, all in the World Series.

Avery shut out Pittsburgh on three hits through eight innings for a playoff record 16 1-3 consecutive scoreless innings and Alejandro Pena relieved to start the ninth. Pinch hitter Gary Varsho led off with a sinking single, was sacrificed to second and took third on a two-out wild pitch to Andy Van Slyke.

But Pena got his third save of the series when, as he did in

VIOLA! Twins get last laugh

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — When the New York Mets acquired Frank Viola in 1989, they thought the trade would bring a pennant. It did — for the Minnesota Twins.

While Viola is spending October pondering free agency, Kevin Tapani, Rick Aguilera and David West are in the World Series.

Tapani won 16 games and Aguilera tied a club record with 42 saves. West was only 4-4 during the season, but came up big in Minnesota's victory over Toronto in the AL playoffs.

Viola, the MVP of the 1987 World Series, had a bitter contract fight with the Twins in 1989 and the club ended up giving him a three-year contract for more than it could afford.

Red Devils open district

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

Area Football

If this Friday's meeting in Rankin between the sixth-ranked Red Devils and winless Wink looks like a major mismatch on paper, don't adjust your tablet.

On paper, it's not even close.

But the high expectations Rankin followers will carry to the District 8-A opener have not brought solace to the office of Troy Kennedy. Rather, the head coach of the 4-1 Red Devils is wary of Wink, an 0-5 adversary which he says has much to gain and little to lose playing the part of underdog against a ranked opponent.

"I don't care if it's 5A, 1A or whatever, when you get the chance to play an opponent ranked in the top ten you're going to load up all your guns," Kennedy said.

"Our kids can read the paper. They know Wink has been struggling. And as coaches we have to worry about that because we're down to the real season now.

Fielder, Bonds only two repeaters on AP team

Associated Press

NEW YORK — A season with surprise winners produced a new-look Associated Press All-Star team.

Five players who didn't get a single vote last year made the team and four of last season's All-Stars didn't get any votes.

First baseman Cecil Fielder of Detroit and outfielder Barry Bonds of Pittsburgh were the only players to repeat from 1990. The five who didn't get votes last year were third baseman Terry Pendleton of Atlanta, catcher Mickey Tettleton of Detroit, designated hitter Frank Thomas of the Chicago White Sox, left-hander

Lee game good for cultural exchange

With the popularity of American football sweeping the globe, it is only natural that the Unites States' neighbor to the south should have a keener interest in the sport.

Price

So much so, that collegiate "futbol Americano" teams are popping up in every corner of Mexico. Yet, as the Eagles from the University of Chihuahua prepare to invade Memorial Stadium Friday night for an 8 p.m. game against Midland Lee, head coach Roberto Paredes thinks the odds are against him.

Never mind that he has college-age players going up against Lee's high school Rebels. Paredes, who doesn't speak English, said through an interpreter Wednesday that the Rebs should be favored.

"They are a younger team, but they are better technically. The background of the players and the competition they play against makes that so," said Paredes, who rates the average age of his players at 21 (it should be noted that Lee head coach Earl Miller said he wouldn't be surprised to see a few 25- or 26-year-olds on the field).

Though the Eagles are unbeaten this season at 5-0 and have outscored opponents 85-20, they are still an unknown quantity because of their opposition (teams like Sonora Technical School, Juarez Technical School and Chihuahua Tech to boot).

The exact level of play Chihuahua will bring to Midland Friday is open to conjecture, though it may be of some interest to point out that Monterrey Tech, a team similar to Chihuahua, defeated Del Rio 28-0 while Lee beat those same Rams 52-0.

Miller did make one salient observation, though. Despite the fact that Lee coaches sent diagrams of the Rebels' basic offense and defense during the summer, the favor was not returned until Wednesday. Chalk one up for Paredes.

SOME REBEL fans may wonder just how this game came about, and as Paredes said, it was a result of Lee coaches putting on summer clinics in Chihuahua, where Perades started the football program three years ago.

While the Lee coaches were there, knowing they had an unfilled open date this Friday, the invitation was offered.

And Paredes accepted the offer not only as a boost to his program, but as a cultural exchange for his college students.

That's exactly the way many Midland officials also view the contest.

After the group of 50 players and coaches arrives at the Royal Inn Friday morning, the team will prepare for the game. But after the competition, which will see the Mexican national anthem played along with the good old Star Spangled Banner in the pre-game ceremonies, is when many other festivities begin.

The Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce has scheduled a post-game disco dance at the Midland High Youth Center in honor of the team's visit, while the Midland Chamber of Commerce will host a breakfast for the team Saturday morning at the Royal Inn.

That is also when Midland mayor Carroll Thomas is supposed to deliver a welcome and make a proclamation honoring the team's visit.

Not to say that the Rebs will make this game a blowout beacuse nobody really knows what will happen, but if it is a lopsided affair in favor of the locals, at least some international goodwill should come from it.

And in a relationship that has often been strained by matters such as oil prices, illegal immigrants and cheap labor south of the Rio Grande, this game can only be considered a step in the right direction.

TRADE: Salaries less than Viola's

he was only 5-5 in 12 starts. After winning 20 games in 1990, Viola stuggled after the all-star break this season and became increasingly disenchanted with New York.

"Frank was a great pitcher in Minnesota but we were in a position of needing more pitchers," Twins general manager Andy MacPhail said. "We projected Kevin and David as starters and Rick as a replacement for Jeff Reardon."

It should also be noted that the salaries of Tapani, West and Aguilera combined is less than Viola's for one season.

"Certainly that was a consideration," MacPhail said. "We also knew Jeff Reardon was eligible for free agency after the 1989 season and he ended up signing with Boston."

The Mets considered West the best prospect in the group. But he has been plagued by nagging injuries and bad pitches with Minnesota. West, however, won Game 5 against Toronto and pitched 5 2-3 scoreless innings in the playoffs.

"In retrospect, sure I'd like to have done better," said West, 14-15 since coming to the Twins. "That's just the way things went. I didn't sit around and mope about it. This season started kind of tough because of the elbow injury, then I strained the abdominal muscle during rehab. But you just keep pushing. If this is the way things work out, fine with me."

The big surprise this season turned out to be Tapani. He was 0-6 with a 5.35 ERA in May and some in the Minnesota organization were beginning to think his ability may have been misjudged.

Tapani proved it wasn't by winning nine consecutive decisions to help keep the Twins in first place. In 244 innings, he struck out 135 and walked only 40.

NLCS: Pena K's Van Slyke for save

(From 1C)

Game 2, he stranded the tying run at third base in the ninth inning, getting Van Slyke to look at a changeup for strike three.

Avery allowed just nine hits and struck out 17 in his two outings. He is 2-0 in the playoffs, 4-0 against the Pirates this season and 20-8 overall.

"I was so nervous sitting on the bench, I couldn't take it," Avery said. "I don't know if I was shaking because it was freezing or because I was so nervous."

While Avery was overpowering Pittsburgh with fastballs, Drabek battled the Braves with breaking balls.

Drabek showed no ill effects of the hamstring he strained running out a hit in Game 1 and shut down Atlanta on six hits for eight innings.

But in the ninth, Gant drew a one-out walk, stole his playoff record sixth base of the series with two out and scored on Olson's double down the left-field line.

"In the seventh inning, I had a guy on third with one out and he beat me inside with a fastball," Olson said. "I went up to the plate and I told myself that he wasn't going to beat me with a fastball again. He threw me a fastball and I got it by Buechele."

The Braves were 1-for-26 with runners in scoring position during their NL-record shutout streak, breaking the mark of 22 shutout innings by St. Louis pitchers against san Francisco in 1987. The AL record is 30 scoreless innings, done by Oakland pitchers to Baltimore in 1974.

The Braves, who stranded a runner on third base with one out in the third, blew two big chances much later. In the seventh, Gant led off with a single, stole second and took third on a groundout. But Gant was easily thrown out at the plate by shortstop Jay Bell on Olson's two-hopper with the infield in.

Lonnie Smith doubled with one out in the eighth but was stranded when Jeff Treadway grounded out and NL batting champion Terry Pendleton flied out, leaving a runner in scoring position for the fourth time in the game.

ALL-STARS: Texas' Franco nabs 2B

(From 1C)

Tom Glavine of Atlanta and reliever Lee Smith of St. Louis.

Julio Franco of Texas, who got just one vote last year, won at second base, while Baltimore's Cal Ripken won for the fifth time at shortstop. Ken Griffey Jr. of Seattle and Jose Canseco of Oakland completed the outfield. Boston's Roger Clemens won at right-handed pitcher for the third time.

Outfielder Rickey Henderson and pitchers Bob Welch, Frank Viola and Bobby Thigpen all failed to get a vote after making last year's team.

The AP team was selected in nationwide voting by sports writers and broadcasters. The closest race was at catcher, where Tettleton beat Brian Harper of Minnesota 41-36. There were no players on the team from the AL champion Twins or the AL East champion Toronto Blue Jays.

Only two clubs had more than one player. Atlanta, the NL West champ, had Pendleton and Glavine. Detroit, which finished tied for second in the AL East at 84-78, had Fielder and Tettleton.

Just two National Leaguers made it among the position players, Pendleton and Bonds.

After catcher, the second-closest voting was for designated hitter. Thomas got 49 votes, beating Paul Molitor of Milwaukee and Fielder by 10 each. But Thomas also got 48 votes at first base, and they didn't count toward the DH total.

Ripken, who hit .323 with 34 homers and 114 RBIs, also was selected to the AP team in 1983, 1984, 1985 and 1989. Clemens (18-10) also made the team in 1986 and 1987, while Canseco won in 1988 and Tettleton in 1989.

Ripken won by the largest margin, beating last year's winner, Barry Larkin of Cincinnati, 166-9. Glavine (20-11) had the second-largest, beating California's Jim Abbott 149-11.

Fielder, who tied Canseco for the major league lead in homers with 44, beat Thomas 95½-48 at first base. Julio Franco beat the Cubs' Ryne Sandberg 104-57 at second base and Pendleton beat Howard Johnson of the Mets 126-36 at third.

In the outfield, Bonds got 117 votes, Griffey 80 and Canseco 79. Toronto's Joe Carter was fourth with 52 and Pittsburgh's Bobby Bonilla was fifth with 40.

Elkington paces first round at Disney event

Elkington reeled off five straight birdies at one point, while Nelson had eight birdies overall to offset his lone bogey. Both played their opening round on the 7,190-yard Magnolia course, one of three used by the field of 132 pros.

Chap tennis team heads for Sun City

Staff Report

Despite a rash of entries, Midland College has a strong contingent entered in the Sunbowl Open Tennis Tournament, which begins Thursday and runs through Sunday at the El Paso Tennis Club.

"We've had a series of nagging injuries, a couple of which flared up this week, so our line-up for this tournament will be a little different," said MC coach Joe Williams.

Notable among the walking wounded is freshman Lucie Ludvigova, who won the Rolex ITCA Southwest Small College Regional tournament two weeks ago. She has a swollen knee that is reponding to treatment very slowly.

Sophomore Berhe Serekebrhan, who won that tournament's men's doubles with Vadel Berthe, also is sidelined with a knee injury. Still not playing are sophomore Toby Curtis and Steve Cox, who have been out of the line-up for about a month.

Entries for the tourney shows players from the University of Arizona, Arizona State, Texas Tech, New Mexico, New Mexico State, several teaching professionals and a number of former collegiate stars. But don't count out the Chaparrals, despite a very strong field.

Williams has David Draper, a sophomore who won the Rolex men's singles event, and sophomore Myriam Berthe, who won the 1991 Rolex Small College Indoor title, the 1991 NJCAA women's singles, and just returned from Cairo, Egypt, where she won the women's singles crown at the African Games.

Sophomores Robin Van Beveren and Tom Erik Brun, along with freshmen Gene Highfield and Vadel Berthe, are in the men's singles. Vadel is Myriam's brother.

The women's entries are all sophomores. They include Berthe, Seiko Ichioka, Adrian Isaza, Boba Tzvetkova, and Caroline Reynolds. Isaza and Tzvetkova won the Rolex regional women's doubles and Tzvetkova was runner-up to Ludvigova in the women's singles.

Goddard spikers play

Staff Report

Goddard Black claimed a 15-9, 15-8 junior high volleyball victory Wednesday over the White team from Goddard.

Standouts in the first game for the Black team were service scorers Holly Tinert, Amy Galindo and Amy Allen, who finished out the game with five straight points.

Tarpley

1987—Named to NBA's 1986-1987 All-Rookie team.

1987—In the offseason, Tarpley voluntarily submits for treatment for alcohol and chemical abuse, "strike one" under the NBA drug program. A third strike would mean an automatic two-year suspension from the NBA without pay.

1988—Tarpley wins the 1987-1988 NBA Sixth-Man Award, the first reserve in NBA history to finish among the league's top ten rebounders. Had two 20-rebound games against the Lakers in the 1988 conference finals.

January 1989—Tarpley receives "strike two" in the NBA's anti-drug program after he tells league drug counselors he needs help to control his drug problem. He receives indefinite suspension without pay. Tarpley attends the ASAP Family Treatment Program, returns to action April 12.

March 1990—Tarpley misses a team flight.

April 1990—Tarpley is suspended indefinitely without pay for missing a Mavericks practice and a daily aftercare visit. Tarpley subsequently tests negative for cocaine and alcohol use.

September 1990—Tarpley pleads guilty to Nov. 1989 charges of drunken driving, prosecutors drop charge of resisting arrest. Tarpley is put on two years' probation.

November 1990—Tarpley sustains a season-ending knee injury.

August 1991—A judge agrees to drop the May charge against Tarpley after the woman he is accused of beating refused to cooperate with prosecutors.

Sept. 4, 1991—Judge declines to revoke Tarpley's probation on 1989 DWI conviction.

Sept. 26, 1991—Tarpley participates in his first full-contact basketball game since suffering a serious knee injury last November.

Oct. 13, 1991—Tarpley misses practice and team meal because of an undisclosed personal problem.

Oct. 14, 1991—Tarpley shows up for morning practice, but leaves abruptly without talking to other players or Mavericks hierarchy. Club says Tarpley will be fined daily until he returns. A Houston drug and alcohol rehabilitation clinic, where Tarpley is an outpatient, notifies club officials that Tarpley wants to talk to counselors for the clinic.

Oct. 15, 1991—Club is told that clinic wants to keep Tarpley longer.

Oct. 16, 1991—NBA announces that Tarpley refused to take drug test and has been banned from the league.

Huskies favored over Bears in Pac 10 battle

By Rick Warner
AP Football Writer

California's annual battle against Stanford is called the Big Game. This year, however, the seventh-ranked Bears won't play any bigger game than Saturday's showdown with No. 3 Washington.

The winner will improve to 6-0, gain the inside track to the Rose Bowl and remain in contention for the national title.

"This is the big one, the one I've been dreaming about ever since I was a little kid," said Russell White, Cal's star running back. "I'm going to take this game more seriously than any other game in my life."

The Bears are off to their best start in 39 years and are ranked in the Top 10 for the first time since 1968. But they're still a two-touchdown underdog to Washington, which has demolished its first five opponents by an average margin of 41 points.

And their offense is second in scoring and fifth in total yardage.

Cal also has impressive credentials. The Bears are winning by an average score of 45-19 and feature two of the top offensive players in the country, White and quarterback Mike Pawlawski. White is averaging 152 all-purpose yards per game and Pawlawski is the country's second-leading passer.

AREA: Greenwood travels to Crane

(From 1C)

If someone sneaks up on you early in the season it's not so big a deal, but now we're down to the part of the schedule where you can really stub your toe against a team that doesn't have a whole lot to lose by trying some new things."

In other games involving area teams, No. 1 Garden City (5-0, 1-0) visits Bronte (2-4, 0-2) in a District 9-A matchup; Greenwood (4-2, 1-0) travels to Crane (3-2-1, 1-0) for a key 6-3A game; Andrews (5-1, 2-0) is at Pecos (2-3, 0-1) and Big Spring (5-0, 1-0) visits Fort Stockton (3-3, 0-2) in 3-4A action; Stanton (0-6, 0-3) hosts Iraan (5-1, 3-0) and McCamey (2-4, 1-2) hosts Ozona (2-4, 2-1) in 6-2A games; Lamesa (2-2-2, 0-1) goes to Lubbock Estacado (5-1, 1-0) for a 2-4A clash; and Midland Christian (5-1) is at Texas Christian Academy in Abilene.

Rankin enters 8-A competition on the heels of an impressive 47-0 romp over Presidio while Wink — which has been out-scored 185-39 in pre-district games — is coming off an open date, something which Kennedy duly notes.

"Wink's had two weeks to prepare for this one game," Kennedy said. "Anytime you have two weeks to concentrate on one team then you ought to be ready for that opponent."

"We've got to prepare hard for each team we play, and maybe even harder for a team that's struggling," he said. "Their coaches may tend to take a few more chances and put in some new wrinkles against us. We have to play sound technique on defense and stay away from hully-gully football or we could find ourselves behind early."

For Wink to accomplish the feat of an early lead the Wildcats will have to get through a stingy defense led by linebacker Kevin Braden and tackles Louis Gonzales and Justin Seabolt. The Red Devils have given up just 51 points in five games, and 22 of those were scored in Rankin's one-point loss to top-ranked Garden City. Kirk Kennedy adds to Rankin's defensive prowess with a team-high three interceptions, and Clint Templeton has been solid on the line.

And the Wildcats cannot expect any lead to last for long as the Red Devils penchant for scoring is one of the reasons the Associated Press lists them No. 6 among the state's Class A teams.

Kirk Kennedy leads the Rankin ground attack with 606 yards thus far, and he's completed 14-of-32 aerials to boot, leading his teammates to 158 points in five games.

Sophomore runner Roy Abalos has compiled 167 yards while Joey Varela and Braden have 137 and 132 yards on the ground, respectively, giving Rankin four backs with over 100 yards. That means the offensive line has been doing its job.

Center Baylor Walker is the line's guiding force, and Coach Kennedy calls All-District guard Ramon Garcia "one of the best guards I've coached in strength and one-on-one capabilities."

Wink returns 10 lettermen from its 4-6 team of a year ago. Last year Rankin pounded the Wildcats 47-0, the very same score the powerful Red Devils posted last Saturday in Presidio.

AREA NOTES: Greenwood's clash with Crane in 1990 turned out to be a pivotal game for the Rangers. Greenwood, which missed the playoffs last year despite an 8-2 record, did so following an upset win over Reagan County and a subsequent loss to Crane.

The Rangers again opened the District 6-3A slate with a win over Reagan County, 20-6 last Friday in Greenwood. But Rangers' coach Bob Purser, remembering last season's letdown against the Golden Cranes, did not take long to relish the quick district start.

"About 20 minutes and it's back to work," Purser announced following the opener. "We were in the same position last year when we won in Reagan County and then lost to Crane.

"We have to take them one week at a time, and Crane is what we have to concern ourselves with this week."

And the parking lot had not begun to clear.

TARPLEY: Star has no comment

Tarpley was informed of the ban in Houston at the John Lucas Center but had no immediate comment.

Mavericks owner Donald Carter said "It's stupid. It's stupid that somebody who has that kind of talent would let this happen."

Tarpley, who was to make $3 million this year, forfeits his contract under the anti-drug agreement between the league and the NBA Players Association.

He can reapply for readmission to the league in two years.

Quarterback-thin Eagles snatch up Kemp

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Eagles, limited to two quarterbacks because of injuries, claimed 11-year veteran Jeff Kemp on Wednesday and waived backup Pat Ryan.

Kemp, waived by the Seattle Seahawks on Tuesday, has the NFL's lowest quarterback rating, 52.9, and a league-high 12 interceptions. His last interception was critical in the Seahawks' 23-20 overtime loss to the Los Angeles Raiders on Sunday.

Kemp, 32, became expendable when Seattle incumbent Dave Krieg was ruled ready to play against Pittsburgh on Sunday. Krieg's right thumb was broken in the season opener.

The Eagles, with Randall Cunningham and Jim McMahon missing from action, have struggled with Ryan, losing to Washington, Tampa Bay and New Orleans.

Kemp started five of the six games Krieg missed, leading the Seahawks to two victories and three losses.

"I did not play up to my potential," Kemp said Wednesday.

FDIC chief leaves with a warning

Plan to replenish deposit insurance fund could fall short, Seidman says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Banking regulator L. William Seidman ended his six-year term Wednesday with a warning that the Bush administration's plan to replenish the government's deposit insurance fund could fall short.

On his last day as chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., Seidman said the proposed $70 billion in taxpayer-backed borrowing, pending before Congress, may not be enough to pay for all bank failures in the next few years.

"The uncertainty of the timing and strength of the economic recovery could bring the sufficiency of the proposed recapitalization into question," he wrote in a letters to Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, and Sen. Donald W. Riegle Jr., D-Mich., chairmen of Congress' banking committees.

The Bush administration, however, has maintained the $70 billion should be more than enough, although Treasury Department officials said they could not guarantee that.

Seidman said his agency expected "very soon" to complete a forecast of bank failures for 1993. It said previously it expects as many as 400 failures this year and next.

In the meantime, Seidman wrote, "it is incumbent upon me before leaving office today to emphasize that it would be very unwise to go beyond this session of Congress ... without a recapitalization of the fund."

The fund has shrunk to $2.4 billion, from $4.5 billion on June 30, and continues to decline, Seidman said. Without replenishment, failed bank resolutions may be curtailed, he said.

After more than a year of saying he would quit soon as chairman of the FDIC and the Resolution Trust Corp., the 70-year-old, blunt-spoken banking regulator finally left office on the day his term legally expired.

During periodic bouts of squabbling with the Treasury Department and White House staff, Seidman often talked of quitting, assuring anybody who asked he would not stick around for his full six-year term.

But there always seemed to be one more big bank to rescue, one more banking dispute in Congress to help settle.

When Seidman took office in October 1985, he and the FDIC were little known outside financial and political circles. But after more than 1,000 bank failures, his face and gravelly voice became familiar to television viewers and his agency, which insures bank and S&L deposits, became nearly a household name.

Prices retreat

NEW YORK — Energy futures prices fell Wednesday as profit-taking brought the market's recent surge to at least a temporary halt.

The November contract for West Texas Intermediate fell 19 cents to $23.67 a 42-gallon barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Prices had rallied over the past three weeks amid concerns about fuel supplies around the world. Oil production is declining in the Soviet Union, the world's largest producer, raising the possibility of exports of U.S. oil to Europe this winter and resulting tight supplies in this country.

Crude prices are currently at levels not seen for nearly two years, not counting the wild swings that took oil past $40 a barrel during the Persian Gulf crisis.

Oil figures, released by the American Petroleum Institute, did show an increase, with crude inventories advancing 1.65 million barrels in the week ended Friday.

Heating oil supplies grew by 521,000 barrels. But gasoline inventories fell by 3.39 million barrels.

Natural gas closed higher, with the November contract advancing 1.5 cents to $2.001 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Dollar drops

NEW YORK — The dollar settled mostly lower in lackluster trading on world currency markets Wednesday.

In London, the British pound fell to $1.7105 from $1.7115 late Tuesday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Tuesday's rates, included: 1.7060 German marks, down from 1.7128; 1.4905 Swiss francs, down from 1.4950; 5.6145 French francs, down from 5.6335; 1,275.75 Italian lire, down from 1,280.25; and 1.1308 Canadian dollars, up from 1.1298.

Record Dow

NEW YORK — The stock market surged ahead Wednesday, lifting key barometers to record highs in a fifth-straight rally as higher prices for airlines and other cyclical businesses offered hope for an economic recovery.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 20.35 points to 3,061.72, surpassing the previous high of 3,055.23, set Aug. 28.

Stocks traded over the counter also jumped higher, with the NASDAQ composite index rising 6.83 to 540.94, breaking a record that stood for just a day.

Crude hits 8-month high; gasoline at 6-month low

NEW YORK (AP) — In an apparent paradox in the petroleum pricing world, crude oil has moved to an eight-month high at the same time retail gasoline has fallen to a six-month low.

That may seem like a good deal for drivers and it may dispel notions that Big Oil always moves to gouge the public whenever oil prices go up. But experts warn that if the higher oil prices hold, consumers and the economy will soon feel the jolt.

"The fact that crude is up now doesn't necessarily mean you're going to see immediate price increases," said Edwin S. Rothschild, energy policy director for Citizen Action, a Washington-based consumers group. "I suspect if crude prices stay up, you'll see prices go up."

That would obviously pinch the family budget. The effects of higher oil prices also would ripple through the economy, hampering efforts to get out of the recession, Rothschild predicted.

In trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange, crude oil for next-month delivery rose briefly on Wednesday to $24 per barrel before falling back slightly. Oil has not been that high since last January, when the price was coming down after the runup caused by the Persian Gulf crisis.

If the Gulf crisis is viewed as a fluke, oil had not been trading in that range since January of 1990, when a sudden cold snap caused a sharp price spike.

Surprisingly, as oil has steadily advanced, gasoline prices have been declining of late.

"Today's price of crude oil has nothing to do with the price at the retail pump," said Mike Doyle, editor of Computer Petroleum Corp., a St. Paul, Minn., firm that tracks prices. "There's too much time lag difference."

Big jumps in gasoline prices can occur after big jumps in oil prices when the rise is set off by some kind of shock, like Iraq's invasion of Kuwait last summer, analysts say.

There has been no such catalyst in recent weeks, which have seen oil rising amid fears of supply disruptions from the Soviet Union, the world's largest oil producer. At the same time, Iraq has not yet resumed crude oil exports, leaving the world vulnerable to any kind of supply problem because other oil states are

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senior members of the House Banking Committee on Wednesday advocated relaxing one of the key reforms of the 1989 savings and loan bailout law.

Reps. John LaFalce, D-N.Y.; Doug Barnard, D-Ga.; Bill McCollum, R-Fla., and Floyd Flake, D-N.Y., said they favored giving thrifts holding roughly half of the industry's assets more time to meet capital standards enacted two years ago.

The relaxation is needed, they argued, to prevent some otherwise viable institutions from failing and to encourage S&Ls to make more loans, easing the credit crunch holding back the economic recovery.

"I really feel we need to revisit (the S&L bailout law) and maybe undo some of the onerous things that are doing more harm than good," Barnard said.

Capital was one of the hardest-fought S&L reform issues. It represents the owners' investment in a financial institution and serves as a cushion protecting the government deposit insurance fund against loss.

Proponents of higher standards for S&Ls, comparable to the rules then already in force for commercial banks, argued they were needed to force S&L owners to take fewer risks.

One group of institutions, which had been granted a special capital break in exchange for taking over weak S&Ls in the early 1980s, argued strenuously that taking away the break was unfair and amounted to the federal government reneging on a contract.

In the end, Congress decided to give the institutions until 1995 to raise the money needed to write off the capital break, known as supervisory goodwill.

However, S&L executives complained to the House Banking oversight subcommittee on Wednesday that efforts to increase their capital was forcing them to cut back on lending.

Barnard and LaFalce, who are backed on the issue by the National Association of Home Builders, said they favored extending the five-year write-off.

Midland marks Credit Union Day

Staff Report

Credit unions across Midland will be celebrating Credit Union Day, which is part of International Credit Union Week, a week that concludes Saturday.

International Credit Union Day is designed to celebrate the history of credit unions and look toward their future.

The roots of credit unions reach back to 1844, when workers and weavers in Rochdale, England, created a democratic consumer cooperative. And Friedrich Wilhelm Raiffelsen of Germany is most credited with founding of credit cooperaives in Germany and still influences modern credit union development.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

U.S. Savings Bonds rates offer good, bad news

By Bill Doyle

Doyle

Q. I bought two $1,000 face value Series EE, U.S. Savings Bonds, in July 1986, paying $500 for each one. I understood each would be worth $10,000 in early 1992 and I would then have the following choices: 1. Cash them. 2. Keep them so they continue to accumulate interest. 3. Trade them for Series HH bonds to delay tax.

But no one can tell me the following. If I keep them as EEs, will the interest continue at the 8 percent they now are earning? Will the interest change? If it does change, what will the rate be?

A. Your understanding of choices is basically correct. But your other thoughts are amiss.

Actually, you can cash any U.S. Savings Bond six months after it was issued, although that's not a wise thing to do.

You can keep your EEs until they reach "final maturity" 30 years after you bought them.

E bonds, EE bond and U.S. Savings Notes, also called "Savings Notes," with redemption value of $500 or more can be exchanged for HH bonds for up to one year after the E, EE and notes reach final maturity. That move postpones federal income tax on the accumulated E, EE and/or savings note interest until the HHs received in the exchange are redeemed. And the HHs start paying 6 percent current interest.

Along with all EEs issued from November 1982 through October 1986, yours reach "original maturity" in 10 years. That's when they are guaranteed to double in value.

Now for a bit of bad news. Your bonds are accumulating interest at a guaranteed 7.5 percent annual rate — not at 8 percent. When you have owned them for five years, they will be entitled to a variable "market-based" rate, which changes every six months. However, the only period during which the variable rate topped your guaranteed rate was from May 1, 1989 through Oct. 31, 1989, when the market-based rate was 7.81 percent. As a result, each of your bonds will be worth just a smidgen more than $1,000 on July 1, 1996.— their original maturity date.

If you hold them past the original maturity, your bonds will continue to accumulate guaranteed interest — at 6 percent annually. The guaranteed rate on all savings bonds in an extended maturity is 6 percent. But Es, EEs and savings notes also benefit from any market-based rate exceeding that number during their original and extended maturities. That variable rate currently is 6.57 percent.

Q. I have over $50,000 face value of EE bonds dating back to 1982. I know savings bonds maturities have been changed over the years, but I have no way of knowing if my bonds have matured. My bank can't tell me. Can you?

A. Certainly. All U.S. Savings Bonds have been given extended maturities. None of yours has have reached final maturity.

There's a relatively simple "40-30-20" formula for this, in effect since July 18, 1989, when the U.S. Treasury Department cleared cleared away some savings bond complications.

E bonds issued before December 1965 reach final maturity and stop accruing interest after 40 years. Es issued from December 1965 through June 1980, all EEs, as well as all H bonds still outstanding bonds still outstanding reach final maturity in 30 years. All HHs reach final maturity in 20 years.

Q. I have HH savings bonds on which the interest rate was reduced to 7.25 percent last year. The rate never changed before. Is this right and does it affect the bonds' face value?

A. It's clear your HHs entered an extended maturity period, making the reduction proper. The annual interest rate on all savings bonds entering an extended maturity after October 1986 was cut to 6 percent. That interest rate change does not change the bonds' face value.

You had best check your interest payments. You're not getting 7.25 percent on those HHs.

Q. Is it likely interest rates on U.S. Savings Bonds will go up again?

A. It's most unlikely, unless interest rates in general skyrocket — forcing our federal government to pay higher interest to encourage investors to buy and hold more savings bonds.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?
Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:
1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numberical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key(*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
- You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
- You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key(*). Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
- You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

Analysis

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market weaved uncertainly today, showing little change in the wake of healthy gains from the previous session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 2.23 points, at 3,043.60, as of 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

But advancing issues outnumbered decliners on the New York Stock Exchange by about 4 to 3, with 889 up, 657 down and 532 unchanged.

Big Board volume came to 156.01 million shares.

Analysts had predicted the market might open a bit lower after Tuesday's strong session that had the Dow rising nearly 22 points to cap a four-day rally, and it slipped slightly in early trading.

But it was unclear where prices might go from there as traders digested more third-quarter earnings reports.

Leading the NYSE most active list was Citicorp, down 1 at 11¾ after posting its second-largest quarterly loss. Stone Container was up 1½ at 21⅜.

Other actively traded issues included AT&T, up ⅛ at 39; IBM, down 2⅜ at 101⅞; Westinghouse Electric, down ¾ at at 17¼; BankAmerica, up 1¼ at 43⅛; and RJR Nabisco, up ⅛ at 10¾.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose 0.37 point to 215.27. The market value index rose 2.90 to 379.84 on the American Stock Exchange.

Oil and Gasoline Prices Compared

producing virtually at capacity.

Gasoline prices, meanwhile, have inched lower because retailers have enjoyed larger-than-normal profit margins, prompting some to whittle away at prices here and there as they seek to draw more business, Doyle said.

The nationwide average price for a gallon of self-serve regular unleaded dropped 1.3 cents this week, to $1.122, the lowest since April 23, when gasoline was $1.119 a gallon, according to a survey that Doyle prepared.

If crude oil stays up, experts agree, higher gasoline prices will follow and home heating oil prices could also feel the effect.

SEIDMAN: Chief issues a warning

(From 5C)

Seidman plans to remain in the public eye. He is writing a book and has joined CNBC as chief commentator on the cable TV network's business programs.

In a wide-ranging interview with The Associated Press, Seidman said he looks back with satisfaction on a legacy of toughened laws and regulations, a larger and more experienced examination force at the FDIC and a functioning S&L bailout agency that two years ago did not exist.

"When you look at the magnitude of the task, the fact that nobody has tried anything like this before ... (we've) done a remarkable job," he said.

Despite their sometimes antagonistic stance, Seidman and top Treasury officials have been allies this year in pushing legislation that would permit banks to diversify geographically and into other businesses such as securities and insurance.

The alliance, however, has not prevented Seidman from rebutting the administration's suggestions that heavy-handed bank regulation is causing a shortage of credit and slowing the nation's recovery from recession.

"I have no doubt there are cases where regulators may have gone too far. But I don't think there are very many and I don't think in any way it's material to the overall economy," he said.

"If the regulators get the idea we don't want them to do any supervising and that they're just better off if they don't take a hard look, we're building trouble for the future in a big way," he said.

Seidman likely will have two successors. Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady has selected former American Airlines Chairman Albert V. Casey to serve as chief executive officer of the RTC. Before it recesses this fall, the Senate is expected to confirm Federal Reserve regulator William Taylor as FDIC chairman.

Towns don't always welcome California companies' arrivals

By Russ Britt
N.Y. Times News Service

Business climate may be better, operating costs lower, but it's not foolproof.

The deal that Glenn Griffin struck with the state of Colorado and Rio Blanco County's economic development commission last year was more than tempting.

If Griffin moved his Lyn-Mar Tool Co., a tool manufacturer in the Los Angeles suburb of Carson, to tiny Meeker, a town of 2,000 people in the northwest corner of the state, he would get a 17,500-square-foot building rent-free for five years.

The state and county also offered to provide employment training assistance, subsidize 1,000 hours of wages for half his employees, and buy $1,500 worth of tools for each employee.

Although the building cost $350,000 to construct, Griffin said he could buy it back after five years for $250,000. A $150,000 block grant was approved by the economic development commission to help Lyn-Mar make ends meet.

"It was a deal too good to pass up," he said. So he moved.

But some of the Meeker residents have not been so appreciative of Lyn-Mar's presence.

They claim Griffin has imported most of his work force, some from out of the country, in order to pay lower wages. Griffin denies those charges, though he notes that four of his 21 employees are from out of town.

Critics also note that the block grant was made in order to rescue Lyn-Mar from financial troubles.

"It is certainly not what the local people expected it to be," said Lynn Whiteman, a local real estate agent and economic development critic. "It really brings to a point what lengths communities like this will go to (to attract businesses)."

The business climate may be better and operating costs lower once a company moves outside California, but it's not as foolproof as it sounds.

The arrival of a business often brings about a number of unforeseen changes for the company and the town that welcomes it. Some are serious problems, such as not hiring the local work force, while others revolve around a company's failure to adapt.

Adam Prager, consultant for PHH Fantus Corp., a Chicago consulting firm, said most companies pay little attention to what will happen once they make the move.

Firms must anticipate that the community will expect something from them, regardless of whether they are offered incentives to move there, Prager said.

"They don't need to actively participate in the community, but it is proven that it is easier to attract quality people if the company has a good image," Prager said. "If they don't realize the (community's) expectations, it's going to be a pretty rocky road."

Donald Moyer, a consultant who has aided communities in economic development efforts, said stories such as Meeker's are common.

"You hear anecdotes about that all over the country (from) large and small companies, publicly held and privately held," Moyer said. "(But) usually it's a pretty rational deal."

But while communities may thoroughly check out a company's viability, they still are under pressure to get businesses into the area. And some consultants suspect that how a business will fit into the community isn't taken seriously enough.

Group seeks limits on politicians' terms

AUSTIN (AP) — A group wanting to limit how long Texas politicians may stay in office hopes to ask voters next year how they feel about the idea.

Texans for Term Limitations announced petition drives Wednesday to put a non-binding referendum on the Republican and Democratic primary ballots in March.

"It's time to allow the voters of the state of Texas to express their opinions on term limits," said Rob Mosbacher, founder and co-chairman of the group.

Mosbacher, a Republican, and the group's co-chairman, Democrat James Calaway, said they are seeking petition signatures from 60,000 qualified Republicans and 90,000 Democrats to place the question on primary ballots.

Calaway noted that several states are considering term limitations, calling it a "profound" reform idea that is sweeping the country.

"It is true that politicians across the country are feeling the heat. Unfortunately, they don't feel it enough to think they ought to go home," he said.

"We need fresh people, and they should not all be white male lawyers. They should be women, they should be blacks, they should be small business people, school teachers, union people, artists, all kinds of people," he said.

The two men said recent events in Washington — news reports of congressmen bouncing checks and skipping out on restaurant bills — have added fuel to the term limit fire.

"Thanks in large measure to a number of disclosures in Washington in the last several weeks, we are enjoying success beyond our wildest expectations," Mosbacher said.

Texans for Term Limitations favors restricting the governor and most other statewide officeholders to two, 4-year terms. It wants service limited to eight years in the state House or Senate; Railroad Commission members to one 6-year term; Texans in the U.S. House to four 2-year terms, and Texans in the U.S. Senate to two, 6-year terms.

To place a question on the March ballots, sufficient petition signatures must be submitted by the Jan. 2, 1992, filing deadline, said Katy Davis of the secretary of state's office. Valid signatures totaling 5 percent of the vote in a party's last gubernatorial primary are needed, she said.

Mosbacher said the group plans a major push on Nov. 5, when Texans will go to the polls to decide 13 proposed constitutional amendments.

Although the question is nonbinding and Texas lawmakers wouldn't be required to act, Mosbacher and Calaway said they hope at least 70 percent of voters endorse the proposal.

"The signal will be unequivocal if you pass something like this overwhelmingly," Mosbacher said.

Calaway, a veteran Democratic fund-raiser, said term limits — and the constant turnover created — are the only way to reform a political system increasingly swayed by campaign donations and special interest lobbyists.

"With the poor quality of government that we're getting, the only hope that the people have left is term limitation," Calaway said.

Officeholders won't make significant changes because they benefit from the status quo, he said.

Clerk takes 'big' counterfeit bill

ABILENE (AP) — When police say someone passed a "large" counterfeit bill at a convenience store, they aren't talking about just the denomination.

The bogus $100 bill was a foot long and 5 inches wide.

It was passed by someone who managed to convince the clerk Oct. 12 that the bill was a genuine 1950-series greenback, Sgt. Garland Wade said Tuesday.

"It's just a novelty item," he said. "You can see them in carnivals, or whatever. The old thing is worn and tattered."

No arrests have been made.

"The store is not the one taking the loss," Wade said. "The clerk is."

Panel approves modified WIPP bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee approved a bill Wednesday that gives Congress a say in a nuclear repository in New Mexico, but the measure hasn't satisfied all concerns about the project.

The bill to allow testing at the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant would take precedence over Energy Secretary James Watkins' action Oct. 3 that would have let the repository open without congressional approval.

The measure sponsored by New Mexico's two senators provides some health, safety and financial concessions — including $600 million in federal impact aid — to the state not guaranteed by Watkins' action.

But Sen. Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M., and Rep. Bill Richardson, D-N.M., both want lower limits on the amount of waste during the test.

The measure sponsored by New Mexico's two senators provides some health, safety and financial concessions — including $600 million in federal impact aid . . .

And environmentalists have accused New Mexico's senators of caving in to the U.S. Department of Energy.

The Senate committee defeated an amendment sponsored by Bingaman that would have limited the amount of waste that could be stored at WIPP during the test phase to 0.5 percent, or 4,500 drums, of the repository's total capacity.

The DOE has said it wanted to be able to store up to 1 percent of capacity during the test.

The committee approved an amendment by Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., that would allow an increase from 0.5 percent to 1 percent of capacity if:

- The DOE modified its plans and explained why more waste would scientifically be needed to complete the test phase;
- The plan was reviewed by several agencies, including the National Academy of Sciences and the state of New Mexico; and
- The Environmental Protection Agency approved the modified plan and increased the limit.

The bill would give the EPA, not the DOE, power to certify compliance with environmental laws.

The measure is the first step in congressional approval of the transfer of 10,240 acres around WIPP from the Interior Department to the DOE. Watkins assumed control of the land by administrative action earlier this month when negotiations broke down between the DOE and New Mexico's two senators.

WIPP is a DOE project designed to bury plutonium-contaminated waste from the nation's defense industry 2,150 feet below the surface in salt beds 26 miles southeast of Carlsbad.

The amended bill would allow six years of tests at WIPP with a two-year extension if the EPA approves. Watkins, in obtaining the administrative land transfer, had spoken of a seven-year test phase.

Gay rights groups attack speaker candidate

AUSTIN (AP) — An East Texas lawmaker who's running for speaker of the Texas House is being criticized for anti-homosexual comments he made in a letter to a constituent.

Gay rights groups and at least one state legislator denounced the comments by Rep. Billy Clemons, D-Pollok, as ill-informed and prejudiced.

The Austin American-Statesman, which obtained a copy of the letter, reported Wednesday that Clemons wrote that AIDS "is a homosexual disease. It was brought into this country by homosexuals, spread all over by homosexuals (the original acronym was GRID: gay-related immunodeficiency disease).

"Babies would not be born with it and blood recipients would not get it, if it had not been for homosexuals," he wrote.

The lawmaker also made reference in the letter to homosexuals being promiscuous and implies that lifestyles of gays and lesbians are "unhealthy" and "ungodly," the newspaper reported.

The state Health Department said Clemons' statements about the introduction and spread of AIDS, acquired immunodeficiency syndrome, in the United States were speculative and misleading.

"How and when the disease was first introduced into this country is somewhat speculative," said Dr. Diane Simpson, the health department's associate commissioner for disease prevention.

"To say that it would not have occurred or spread in the U.S. denies what is going on in Africa and other parts of the world," where the disease has spread mainly through heterosexual means, she said.

Institute studies Gulf War POWs

By Bill Kaczor
Associated Press writer

PENSACOLA, Fla. — Beneath Maj. Joe Small's yellow Iraqi prison uniform, on display in an aviation museum, is his reflection: "Everybody calls me a hero — I don't feel like a hero, just a guy who had a bad day."

The American public's support for prisoners of war repatriated after the Persian Gulf War was immense. But while it helped lift their morale, it also bordered on too much of a good thing, say Navy psychiatrists studying how the 21 men and women are adjusting.

"Many of them are so overcome with public support that they are kind of in a burnout syndrome: so many appearances and talks, people wanting part of their time," said Capt. James C. Baggett, chief of psychiatry at the Naval Aerospace Medical Institute.

On the other hand, knowing they could rely on sympathy at home made it less traumatic for those POWs who were pressed into denouncing their government on Iraqi television.

"Many of the guys in Desert Storm who were forced to do things, said they did so knowing the American public was supporting them," Baggett said. "Probably that factor in itself is going to have a lot of continued assistance down the line."

Five Marines and three Navy pilots captured by Iraq underwent five days of physical, psychiatric and psychological tests last month at the institute on the Pensacola Naval Air Station. The other 13, from the Army and Air Force, will arrive in about six months. Annual visits are planned.

The ex-POWs, some of whom were beaten during interrogation, are in good physical and mental shape, but they have had some inner doubts, Baggett said. "Their biggest fear was 'How did I do?' and 'Did I do the best I could?' and how did others perceive them," he said.

The Navy's Repatriated Prisoner of War Study is intended to help allay those fears. The program, begun in 1972 in San Diego during the Vietnam War, has been expanded to include prisoners from the January-February Gulf War.

"The major therapeutic thing was, first of all, they came" to participate in the study, said Cmdr. George Atwell, head of the institute's Special Studies Department. "Second of all, they came as a group."

Being evaluated as a group is therapy in itself: "They were able to share common concerns, being able to resolve a lot of their fears," Baggett said.

The ex-POWs found out if their personal thoughts were far from the norm, he said. They could discuss issues in a neutral atmosphere instead of being questioned by intelligence officers, the media and the public.

Small, a Marine, appears in a POW exhibit at the National Museum of Naval Aviation in Pensacola. The OV-10 observation plane he piloted was shot down in Kuwait by Iraqi anti-aircraft fire Feb. 25. He was freed in early March. His air controller, Capt. David Spellacy, 28, of Columbus, Ohio, was killed.

The display also honors retired Navy Capt. Robert E. Mitchell, a flight surgeon who began the POW study in San Diego with 766 Vietnam POWs from all services. He kept it going even though the government stopped paying for it after five years and the Army and Air Force dropped out.

Mitchell continued annual examinations of about 160 Marine and Navy ex-POWs, and shared his records with the institute.

Group dynamics within prison camps helped many long-held Vietnam POWs adjust, and many have thrived in the years since their captivity, despite being embittered about the lack of support for that war, the doctors said.

The Gulf War POWs, held for only a few weeks, never became part of a group while imprisoned.

Dachau survivors meet liberators

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Survivors of a German concentration camp and the Japanese-American soldiers who liberated them shared sushi, bagels and tears Sunday in their first reunion since 1945.

About 100 people gathered to hear stories from survivors, soldiers and their relatives of the day two soldiers shot off the locks of the gates of Dachau camp, freeing 35,000 prisoners.

George Oiye of the 522nd Field Artillery Unit remembered stumbling on Dachau and finding prisoners "lumped in the snow."

"We learned to love the Jews as our brothers," he said. "It's really hard to express the feeling in our hearts."

The survivors and their liberators met as part of the Holocaust Oral History Project. The project is documenting the stories of the survivors freed on April 29, 1945, and of their rescuers, men who fought prejudice along with their other battles.

"How ironic can it be? You have people with families in concentration camps in the U.S. and they find Dachau," said Rudy Tokiwa, spokesman for the 442nd Regimental Combat Team, to which the 522nd was attached.

Many Japanese-Americans volunteered for the U.S. military to prove their loyalty to the country, even though the American government put Japanese-Americans into concentration camps after the bombing of Pearl Harbor, Tokiwa said.

The 442nd was an all-volunteer Japanese-American regiment and one of the Army's most decorated in World War II.

On the day of liberation, survivor Rene Mohlo said prisoners "were in a daze" when the 522nd stormed the camp. But after being rescued from camp No. 11 at Dachau, Mohlo said the 522nd soldiers gave him blankets and food.

"It was the first time in 2½ years that I felt any compassion," he said.

Dachau survivor Yanina Cywiska, a Catholic who was accused of being a "dirty Jew lover," recalled the rescue as the day she almost died.

Cywiska, then 16 and weighing less than 50 lbs., was standing blindfolded against a blood-stained wall. She was about to be shot by Nazi soldiers.

When a Japanese-American soldier pulled off her blindfold, she said she was confused and thought Japanese forces had invaded the camp.

Wheat bran may prevent cancer

By Jean Carper

Bran vs. breast cancer

Women concerned about breast cancer should eat more wheat bran. It may cut their risk. So suggests new research from the American Health Foundation in New York.

Carper

David P. Rose, M.D., and colleagues tested the theory on 62 premenopausal women, ages 20 to 50. For two months, the women ate three to four muffins a day made with either oat bran, corn bran or wheat bran. That doubled their fiber intake from 15 grams to 30 grams a day. The researchers also measured the women's blood estrogen levels before and after the muffin regimen. Women with higher circulating levels of estrogen are considered more vulnerable to breast cancer.

Estrogen levels in women eating wheat-bran muffins dropped significantly; it did not fall in women eating either oat bran or corn-bran muffins. The researchers believe the wheat bran would help block estrogen in women past menopause, also reducing their risk of breast cancer.

Dr. Rose says you can get the amount of estrogen-blocking wheat fiber used in the study from 2 tablespoons of raw unprocessed wheat bran, 1 ounce of Kellogg's Bran Flakes or 1/2 ounce of Kellogg's All Bran.

No after-lunch let-down

Want to stay alert after eating? There's now modern proof of what humans have been doing instinctively for a very long time: following lunch (or other meals) with a cup of coffee. It really works, find psychologists at the University of Wales in Cardiff.

First, researchers documented that 32 men and women felt drowsy, less alert, less clear-headed and less energetic after lunch and were more apt to make mistakes in tasks requiring sustained attention.

Next question: Can coffee counteract this post-lunch dip in performance by boosting alertness and attention? The answer is yes - only if it contains caffeine. Decaf coffee did not combat the after-lunch let-down. But regular coffee virtually wiped it out. After-lunch caffeine drinkers had much longer attention spans, allowing them to do tasks with greater speed and accuracy.

The amount of caffeine tested was 3 grams per kilogram of body weight. That would be about a cup and a half of coffee for a 120-pound person; however, researchers expect lower doses to also erase some of the let-down from eating. Their advice: If you want to get more done after eating, try coffee.

Stoned on protein

If you are prone to kidney stones, restrict how much protein you eat. That's the advice from several experts, as confirmed by recent research, including a new study from Italy.

Urologists at the University of Milan compared the diets and urine of 128 people of similar age and characteristics. Half tended to form calcium-type kidney stones; the other half did not.

The No. 1 dietary difference: stone-formers ate more protein, averaging 111 grams a day compared with 93 grams for non-stone formers. Further, individuals prone to stones ate about 15 percent more animal-type protein than those free of stones.

Several studies indict animal protein as a prime culprit in kidney-stone formation, and many experts advise kidney-stone formers to cut down on meat and dairy products. Interestingly, the new study found that excessive vegetable protein also raised the risk of kidney stones among Italians.

Protein, for unknown reasons, causes a greater excretion of calcium in the urine, which can accumulate, forming the painful stones.

The Italian researchers concluded that diet can promote kidney stones, particularly in those with a family history of such stones and in men more so than in women.

Youth, fat may lead to illness

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even otherwise healthy young adults shouldn't count on being fat and getting away with it.

Experts say there's a good chance of sickness later unless they start working off the weight.

Obesity — having too great a percentage of your body as fat — can lead to heart disease, high blood pressure and diabetes, especially after people enter midlife.

"If a 20-year-old is 30 percent fat, that is a bit scary, because he could be 40 percent by the time he's 40," said Michael L. Pollock, director of the Center for Exercise Science at the University of Florida in Gainesville.

A healthy college-age man should be no more than 15 percent fat, and a college-age woman should be no more than 25 percent, Pollock said. Being 10 percent to 12 percent fat or more above those levels should be a red flag, he said.

"The health risk is really strong for those people," Pollock said. "He may not notice at 20, but in his 30s and 40s, it's going to catch up quick."

Nailing the risk of disease down to individual cases is not so easy.

"It depends on the level of overweight and a lot of other factors," said epidemiologist Steven N. Blair of the Institute for Aerobics Research in Dallas.

After 41 years in iron lung, spirit thrives

JACKSON, Tenn. (AP) — After 41 years, Dianne Odell's memories of a normal life have faded away.

"I remember walking to a ballgame with daddy," she says, "and I remember being on a train. It seems like I can remember playing out in the mud one day."

It all happened so long ago — before her body became a useless vessel. She was 3 years old when what was thought to be a cold turned out to be polio, and for the past 41 years her life has been ruled by an iron lung.

But do not pity Dianne Odell.

"I've had a very good life, filled with love and family and faith. You can make life good or you can make it bad," she says.

"I often wonder what kind of person I would be had I not been handicapped," she said. "I have a lot of friends who call with their problems and say I cheer them up a little bit. I like being that kind of person, but I might not have been."

The 7-foot-long respirator encases her twisted body up to the neck, creating a vacuum that forces air into her lungs.

Pinned in the 750-pound metal tube, she can move only her head and facial muscles. But the warmth of a loving family has softened the iron's grip.

"We're all very close," said her mother, Geneva, who is as tied to the lung as her daughter. "I've always told Dianne you make your own happiness."

An avid reader, Miss Odell tutors one to two school children in her home each year. "I like the little ones the best," she said. "They're fascinated by the iron lung. They think everything I say is magic."

Lying on her back, she talks with visitors by looking in a mirror and operates a telephone, tape deck and TV by blowing into a small tube.

With a tape recorder and volunteer scribes she is writing a children's book about a blind boy who makes wishes on a distant star.

"Who else could see a star that can't be seen but a child who can't see. He sees it with his heart. I'm trying to get across that, yes, people are going to call you names and not play with you because you're different. But you can still accomplish something," she said.

The respirator is turned off only a few minutes at a time for basic nursing care. But in the early years, Miss Odell could breathe on her own for two to three hours a day.

She would attend church then and go outside occasionally in a wheelchair. She could move her left foot. "Mother would put me on a pallet outside and I would play with the other kids in the neighborhood. I would build little castles with my foot in the dirt."

Miss Odell's parents insisted on making their daughter's life as normal as possible. The house was open to neighborhood youngsters, and sisters Donna and Mary were encouraged to host teen-age sleepovers.

"Most of the kids grew up thinking everyone had a friend in a iron lung," Miss Odell said. "I have the same friends today that I had when I was 10 years old. When they married, their husbands became my friends. I tutored their children. There was no big difference, really."

Home-bound teachers and an intercom system to a nearby school allowed her to earn a high school diploma.

She lived with family friends for a while in hopes of earning a degree in social work at Freed-Hardeman College in nearby Henderson. But failing health and the confines of the respirator ended those plans. The college awarded her an honorary degree in 1987; it hangs beside the respirator.

Iron lungs were once common for polio victims and some 500 to 800 are still in use around the country. Many iron lung users do not require them 24 hours a day, however, and small portable equipment is more common now.

Miss Odell said her family is looking into the possibility of getting a smaller respirator if her health and limited finances allow it.

Life in an iron lung rarely lasts four decades, said Dr. Robert Christopher, a polio specialist at the University of Tennessee. Unable to cough, such patients choke easily or develop pneumonia.

"I have to assume this woman has had wonderful care from her family. Unless someone was watching her very carefully, she could not have lived as long as she has," Christopher said.

Dr. Walton Harrison, a pediatrician who has treated Miss Odell most of her life, said she is often in pain from inflamed joints and a twisted spine.

Council recommends questions for patients using prescriptions

N.Y. Times News Service

The National Council on Patient Information and Education, a Washington-based organization established to increase consumer awareness about prescription drugs, is sponsoring Talk About Prescriptions Month in October to encourage more questions about prescriptions. It recommends that patients ask their doctor these questions.

What is the name of the drug and what is it supposed to do?

How and when do I take it — and for how long?

What foods, drinks, other medicines or activities should I avoid while taking this drug?

Are there any side effects, and what do I do if they occur?

Is there any written information available?

MOONLIGHTING!
The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals.
OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:
Is it worthwhile for adults also? Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
• ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
• MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
• COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
• SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.
How much money can I make as a distributor?
Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!
How long does it take?
The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!
When do papers have to be delivered by?
6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.
Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
