Mood not morose

NEW YORK — Although the cause that brings them together is serious, the mood at a dinner of the American Suicide Foundation is expected to be anything but morose. As Joni Weberman, who was a chairwoman of Thursday's event at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, put it: "Humor is the best thing, though it is tough to put humor into this. This party has never been depressing. It is always a celebration of life." Both the honorary committee and the working committee have an extraordinary spectrum of well-known names including Isabella Rossellini, Mariette Hartley, Paloma Picasso, Peter Fonda, Lena Horne, William Styron, Bill Blass, Alan Greenberg, and Sen. Bill Bradley.

Baby abandoned

SAN ANTONIO — A newborn girl was listed in guarded but stable condition Sunday after being abandoned Mother's Day eve on the doorstep of a semi-rural church. The infant, still wet from birth fluids, was found with her umbilical cord attached at 9 a.m. Saturday. "We think it's sad that someone could care so little about their child," said witness Julia Garcia. "I'm sure (the mother) realized we come every Saturday morning, and left it here because she knew somebody would find it and take care of it."

'Strait'-laced film

FORT WORTH — A pony-tailed, bearded and beaded George Strait has begun filming on his first movie. "Y'all wouldn't love me, now, with this ol' scraggly beard?" Strait drawled during a break Saturday in filming the romantic drama "Pure Country." The country music superstar plays Dusty Chandler, a character that one crew member describes as "a lot looser than George is." The 5,000 fans in the crowd, in spiffy hats and crisp shirts, portray a rowdy concert group. The only rule was a ban on still photography, aimed at keeping Strait's physical transformation under wraps.

Poll: L.A. riots a warning

It's time for emphasis on problems, most say

Fear, doubt plague Gates' department

By Timothy Egan
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Scorned in the streets of many parts of this city, and laughed at by political leaders and comedians alike, the Los Angeles Police Department is a dispirited band in blue.

For the last 14 months, they have been called brutes with badges. But after their delayed and hesitant response to this city's worst riots, the 8,000 officers have been labeled cowards and incompetents.

In the last 10 days, a sort of paralysis has set in among many officers. The motto of the department, "protect and serve," has been replaced, in the minds of many officers, by "Damned if you do, damned if you don't."

Even the pillars of society are taking shots at the department. A justice on the California Supreme Court, Armand Arabian, said that if the Police Department's response to the riots

■ Survey detects a clear sense of alarm over race relations.

By Robin Toner
N.Y. Times News Service

Most Americans view the riots in Los Angeles as a "warning" about the state of race relations, and say it is time for a new emphasis on the problems of minorities and the cities, according to the latest New York Times/CBS News Poll.

The new survey, conducted Wednesday through Friday, found the public in a shaken, worried mood, more likely to see the unrest as a symptom of festering social needs than as a simple issue of law and order.

Majorities of both whites and blacks said that investing in jobs and job training programs was a better way of preventing future turmoil than strengthening the police forces.

Shuttle crew fails satellite rescue twice

■ Astronauts prepare for another attempt today, NASA says.

Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Space-walking astronaut Pierre Thuot failed to snag the stranded Intelsat-6 satellite and inadvertently sent it tumbling toward Endeavour on Sunday. NASA put off another rescue attempt until today.

Thuot tried at least twice to attach a capturing device to the bottom of the satellite.

"I'm sorry guys. I didn't tap it any harder than I tapped it in that simulator," said Thuot, who had practiced the maneuver with a mockup for more than a year.

Pierre Madon, a vice president for Intelsat, said controllers for his organization were disappointed but ready to try again. The satellite's systems were working "perfectly well," officials said, and the craft appeared undamaged.

NASA's Randy Stone, mission operations director, said the space agency would spend the night reviewing the day's failures and come up with a plan for another rescue attempt. Officials conferred late Sunday with Thuot and his spacewalking partner Richard Hieb.

Workers unearth 11 bodies at Canadian mine

Blocked shafts hamper effort to find survivors.

PLYMOUTH, Nova Scotia — Rescue workers picking their way deep into an explosion-wracked coal mine found 11 bodies Sunday, officials said. Crews were still searching for 15 other missing miners late in the day.

The bodies were found more than 30 hours after a blast ripped through the Westray mine, about 75 miles northeast of Halifax, hurling twisted steel from the shaft, rattling windows a half-mile away and billowing smoke from ventilation holes.

"Based on prelimary reports from the main rescue crews, it appears these men died instantly as the result of an explosion," said Colin Benner, a spokesman for Curragh Resources, the mine's owner.

Blocked shafts leading to two other work areas hampered the rescue teams trying to find the remaining men, officials said.

About 100 rescuers, all miners, entered in shifts, working in groups of five, clad in orange suits and helmets, with cumbersome oxygen tanks strapped on their backs.

"They have an awful lot of friends" among the missing, Bill MacCulloch, a training officer for Westray, said late in the day.

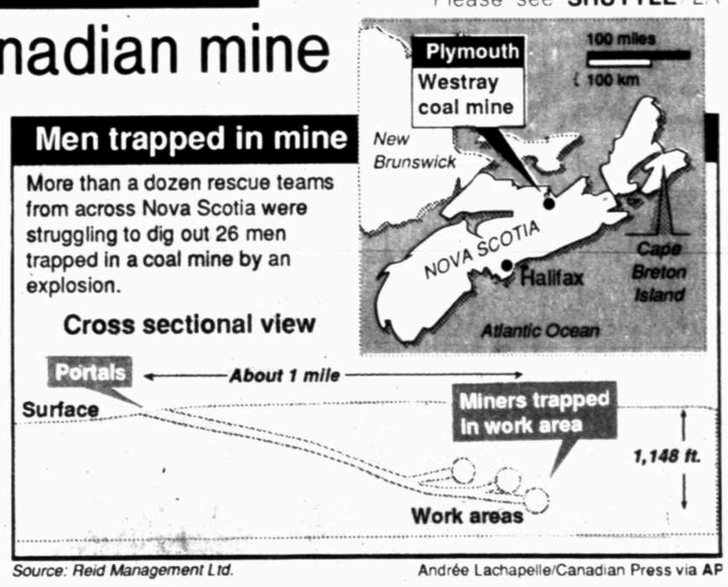

Donald Cameron, premier of Nova Scotia, told reporters that outside investigators would hold an inquiry. The cause of the disaster had not been determined, but suspicion fell on methane, an explosive gas that seeps from coal.

Issue of wealth gap nettles Republicans

■ Clinton moves to woo middle-class voters by attacking the rich.

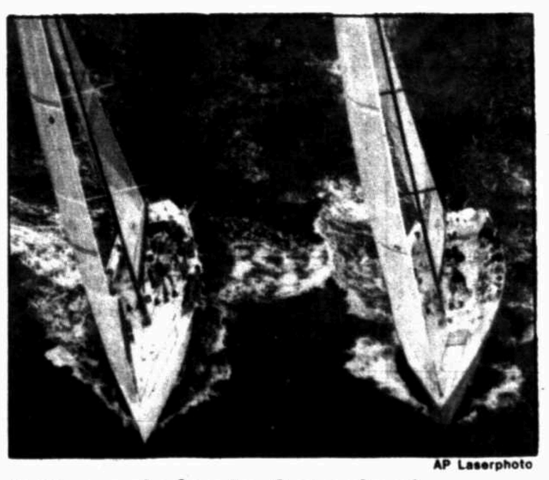

By Sylvia Nasar
N.Y. Times News Service

When Bill Clinton wants to galvanize his audience, he thunders from the podium that the top 1 percent of families got 60 percent of the gains from economic growth during the 1980s and owns more wealth than the bottom 90 percent.

Clinton, the likely Democratic presidential nominee, had been searching for months for facts to illustrate his claim that America's middle class benefited little from 12 years of Republican rule.

The explosion of riches at the top struck him as a perfect vehicle. Not only did the widening gap between the rich and the rest of Americans conflict with

Pathologist admits unscientific findings

DALLAS (AP) — Lubbock pathologist Ralph Erdmann, under investigation on charges ranging from perjury to the mishandling of corpses, admits he sometimes built his reports around police theories, a newspaper reported.

Erdmann, 65, also said in a recent interview he once threw away a human head after telling police he had shipped it to other authorities, The Dallas Morning News reported Sunday.

The pathologist has been indicted in Hockley County for falsifying an autopsy and is accused of performing "made-to-order" autopsies for police.

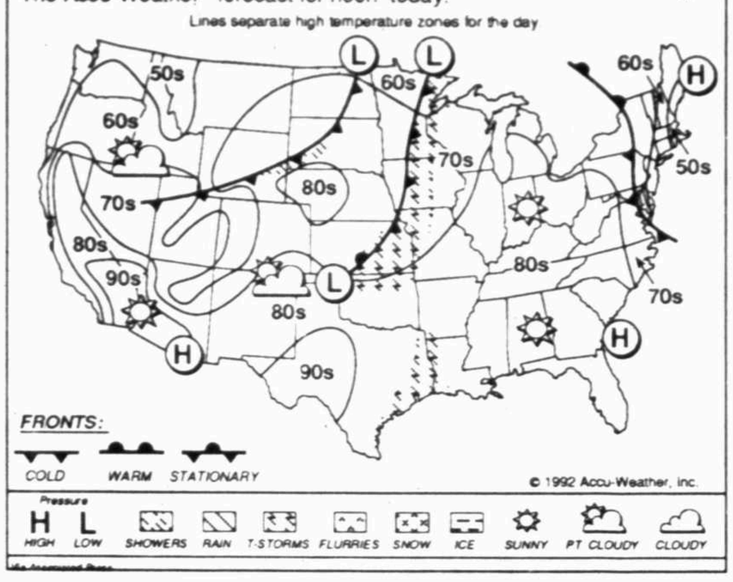

"I'm human. You think I'm going to do everything and not make a mistake?" Erdmann told the newspaper. "It was the volume. It was 'Get caught up.' But I don't think I did sloppy work."

In one case, Erdmann conducted an autopsy on a child believed to have been killed as a result of child abuse. He found that the girl's fatal head

Some clouds, upper 80s on tap

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high in the upper 80s and southwest winds at 10 to 20 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low in the mid-50s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tuesday should be mostly sunny with a high in the low 90s.

After an overnight low of 55, Sunday's high reached 84 compared with the record high for that date of 99 set in 1963. The record low for that date is 42 set in 1946.

STATE

A tornado watch was called for parts of North Texas west of Abilene until 9 p.m. Sunday as an upper level system moved out of Colorado and across Oklahoma and Texas.

Severe thunderstorms developed in the afternoon over the watch area along a dry line in the Texas Panhandle and the western half of Oklahoma.

In North Texas, temperatures rose into the upper 70s and lower 80s by mid-afternoon with high relative humidities. The exception was Wichita Falls with 73 degrees. Skies were mostly cloudy over the entire area.

Elsewhere in the state, temperatures ranged from the lower 70s in the rain cooled Panhandle to the upper 80s in South Texas.

Amarillo was reporting gusts from the west at 41 mph. Skies were cloudy statewide. The low for the state was 43 degrees at Marfa.

The forecast called for scattered thunderstorms west and central with a slight chance of thunderstorms in the east. A few storms may be severe in the west. Lows were expected to be in the mid- to upper 60s statewide.

Highs near 90 west to the mid-80s east were expected.

NATION

It was a damp Mother's Day for much of the nation on Sunday, with rain and thunderstorms striking the Midwest, Southern California and parts of the mid-Atlantic region.

Mild spring weather prevailed in other areas.

The thunderstorms were strongest over central and western Oklahoma and northwest Texas, where tornado watches were issued Sunday afternoon.

Hail the size of half-dollars fell on parts of western and central Oklahoma during the afternoon, and high winds downed some power lines in Oklahoma City.

By midday, rain and thunderstorms also dotted portions of Montana, the Idaho Panhandle, Colorado, New Mexico, the Texas Gulf Coast, Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska, the Dakotas, Minnesota, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York and Southern California.

Temperatures around the nation at 2 p.m. CDT ranged from 46 degrees at Gunnison, Colo., to 90 degrees at Fort Myers, Fla.

No high-temperature records were broken early in the day, and none appeared threatened.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

SHUTTLE: Crew prepares for another try today

(From 1A)

Stone said the final decision to try again would be made this morning, and that another attempt could occur during the afternoon. He said officials plan to send Thuot and Hieb back out "unless something trips us up."

Intelsat controllers began preparing for another rescue by stabilizing the satellite Sunday night, turning on and firing steering jets, which had been locked during the first rescue effort to prevent injury to Thuot and Hieb.

For safety reasons, Endeavour, with its seven-member crew, slowly moved away from the satellite. The shuttle was expected to be 60 miles away by morning.

The pictures of the rescue attempt that were televised to Earth were not of the quality NASA is accustomed to because of the failure of one or more cameras aboard the shuttle. Before going back inside, Thuot and Hieb removed one failed camera and brought it into the cockpit to see if it could be repaired overnight.

The two spent nearly four hours outside on Sunday as they became the first Americans to walk in space in 13 months.

But the unsuccessful rescue meant another wasted day for the $157 million communications satellite, which was left in a uselessly low orbit two years ago by a miswired Titan rocket.

The owner of the satellite, the International Telecommunications Satellite Organization (Intelsat), said it loses at least $120,000 each day the telephone circuits in the craft are idle. The Washington-based consortium paid NASA $93 million for the rescue, which was to involve attaching a rocket motor that would send the craft to its 22,300-mile-high duty station.

The effort, which involved an 8,000-mile chase through space beginning with a Thursday liftoff, had gone perfectly until Thuot and Hieb stepped out of the shuttle's cabin.

As planned, Thuot anchored himself on a platform on the end of the 50-foot shuttle crane holding a long bar to lock onto grooves on the bottom of the satellite. As the two craft flew in formation, crane operator Bruce Melnick raised Thuot into position and the astronaut held out the bar against the slowly revolving satellite.

Thuot missed and said, "Aw, man!" Minutes later, he tried again.

"Wow, we've got to get away from this thing," shuttle commander Daniel Brandenstein told Mission Control after the final attempt.

After consulting with Intelsat at its control room in Washington, NASA called off any further effort on Sunday and flight directors hastily rearranged the seven-day mission.

The original plan called for a second pair of spacewalkers to go out today to practice techniques for building space station Freedom. That was put off until Tuesday.

MINERS: Blocked shafts hamper rescue effort mine's workers said Saturday that the miners had complained of safety problems at Westray. Westray and industry officials said the mine had the latest and best safety equipment for dealing with explosive gases.

(From 1A)

Cameron said it would be a "long time, if ever, before the mine will operate again."

The rescuers had had no contact with the missing miners since the explosion during a shift change about 5:20 a.m. Saturday. As they advanced through the mine Sunday, they found dangerous levels of methane and poisonous carbon monoxide, raising doubts that any miners would be found alive.

Workers were pumping fresh air into the mine, but they did not know if it was reaching the areas where the miners were missing, about a mile from the mine entrance.

Benner said the 11 bodies had been tentatively identified and their relatives were receiving counseling. Sobbing could be heard over the sound of birds chirping in the misty hills surrounding the site.

Relatives of the trapped men had spent the night at a nearby fire station, some watching anxiously through windows toward the mine entrance.

"Not knowing is worse than somebody coming and telling you, 'It's over, they're gone,' " said Gerrie Moore, a volunteer helping at a community center. "Most people in their hearts knew it was kind of useless."

Rescue crews moved slowly because they had to set up temporary ventilation systems and restore electric power as they went. Their oxygen tanks also made communication difficult, further slowing the work.

The privately owned mine was built to supply coal to the province's electricity utility, Nova Scotia Power. In November, Toronto-based Curragh Resources announced it would sell the mine to raise cash for its other operations. It employs 225 people, including 101 miners.

The worst mine disaster in the region occurred in the Allan Shaft in Stellarton in 1918 when 88 miners were killed after an explosion. Sixty men died in the Drummond Colliery in Westville in 1872, and 44 people were killed in the Foord Pit in Stellarton in 1880.

ERDMANN: Pathologist threw away a human head injury, bruises and sexual abuse occurred an estimated "55 hours, plus or minus 1½ hours" before she died.

That estimate helped Lubbock County officials secure a murder conviction against a teen-ager who had been baby-sitting the victim. The conviction was reversed on appeal, and the teen pleaded guilty in exchange for an immediate release from prison.

Erdmann now acknowledges his estimate wasn't exactly scientific.

"I could never have come up with that unless I got that information from the sheriff's deputies," he said. "How would I know otherwise?

"I like to work as a team. Working as a team, I can't challenge what (police) say unless it's out of context. I accept what they say unless it's way out of line. I don't think it's bad pathology. This is the way I was trained."

In Erdmann's most notorious case, a 1987 Odessa homicide, police said their case was ruined because the pathologist lost the victim's head.

Erdmann told the newspaper he cut the head from the body and stuck it in a bucket of lime to send to Dallas for forensic reconstruction. Before sending it, he said, he learned that police had identified the victim and the body had been buried, so he threw the head away.

Odessa police said Erdmann never told them that story, but instead told them he had sent the head to the Department of Public Safety in Austin.

"How can you just say you threw it away?" said police Sgt. Snow Robertson. "I always hoped that sooner or later it would turn up somewhere, and we could prosecute."

ISSUE: Furor over riches charge infuriates GOP traditional notions of democracy, but it also went right to the pocketbook sources of middle-class discontent.

"He was reading the paper that morning and went crazy," said Dee Dee Myers, the campaign's press secretary, referring to a New York Times article in March that reported on the wildly disproportionate gains of the top 1 percent. "The story proved a point he had been trying to make for months, so he added the statistic to his repertoire."

"The L.A. riots underscore the problem," she added.

Clinton is one of the few presidential candidates since Harry S. Truman to woo the middle class by bashing the rich. And the Texas billionaire Ross Perot has climbed aboard the same bandwagon by casting himself as a tax-the-millionaires populist.

The furor over the rich getting richer infuriates Republicans. And they have responded to the Times story and Clinton's claims with vitriolic salvos of their own.

The Joint Economic Committee annual minority report accuses Democrats of using Joseph Stalin's approach to rewriting history. Supply-side architects of the Reagan tax cuts blasted the figures as "propaganda, not data." Even the president's notably unemotional economic adviser, Michael A. Boskin, claimed to be livid.

The White House itself took the unusual step of delivering an editorial response signed by the president's counselor for domestic policy, Clayton K. Yeutter. The piece, which ran on the Op-Ed page of The New York Times in March, stressed that everybody gained from the 1980s economic expansion.

Ironically, when the Congressional Budget Office first released its income data — the numbers on the top 1 percent that are being hurled on the hustings — only a handful of congressional aides and professional economists paid much attention.

And even after economist Paul R. Krugman of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology crunched the numbers and concluded that the major share of the gains in average family income between 1977 to 1989 had gone to the richest of the rich, he had trouble getting anyone to listen.

But Krugman's arithmetic ultimately crystallized the issue in much the same way as the misery index — the sum of inflation and unemployment — confirmed what ordinary voters felt had gone wrong during the years of Jimmy Carter's presidency. And Krugman's calculation also helped focus the fierce political debate over who won — and who lost — from economic growth in the 1980s.

One reason that the issue remained relatively invisible for so long — in spite of broad agreement among academic economists that income and wealth have grown more unequal — is that statistics on distribution are among the mushiest and murkiest in economics. There are literally dozens of ways to slice and dice the data, not to mention hundreds of different data series.

Confronted by Republican legislators after Clinton started peppering his speeches with the statistic on the top 1 percent, the budget office was called upon to assess the Krugman calculation. Several weeks later, it issued a report that gave a number of alternate measures of the gains by the top 1 percent. Every measure showed that the top 1 percent of families reaped an outsized share of the gains.

By one calculation 70 percent of the rise in average after-tax family income went to the top 1 percent, rather than the 60 percent figure that Krugman had initially estimated and Clinton has been using.

If income gains for the top 1 percent had been the same as for the average family, the budget office economists point out, just 7 percent of the rise would have gone to the very rich.

Adjusting for the fact that families in 1989 were smaller, on average, than families in 1977, 44 percent of the gains went to the the top 1 percent. Budget office economists argue that adjusting the average income gain for all families upward to reflect that each family's income was spread over fewer people is a more accurate way of portraying what happened to the well being of families in the middle.

Krugman responds that the adjustment is irrelevant to the question of what happened to the fruits of economic growth.

The Congressional Budget Office also reports other ways of looking at the gains of the very rich. The top 1 percent's share of total after-tax income jumped from 7 percent to 12 percent, for example. And 25 percent of the $830 billion rise in the aggregate income of all families — two-thirds of which reflected an increase in the number of families — went to the top 1 percent.

Most conservatives, including Boskin, are not happy with the budget office's figures even after they have been adjusted to accommodate some of their criticisms.

Arguing that the office's data base is flawed, they say that the figures exaggerate the income gains of the rich by including, for example, capital gains; understate the income of everyone else by underestimating incomes in the bottom quintiles; and lump together the Carter and Reagan years by using 1977 or 1979 as a base year.

"The numbers show that the worst of inequality seems to have built up between 1977 and 1981," said Lawrence A. Kudlow, chief economist at Bear Stearns and a former budget official in the Reagan administration.

"While there has been some increase in inequality in the last two decades, it is far less than some people allege and its causes — primarily demographic and labor market shifts — have little to do with economic policy," Boskin said.

"Krugman's 70 percent calculation is not the answer to meaningful question you'd want to ask," he added. Besides, Republicans say, measuring income shares in a mobile society is as meaningless as measuring which bubbles are at the top of the blender at a given moment in time.

dents, 61 percent, said the nation was spending "too little" on improving the conditions of black Americans, up from 35 percent who expressed that view in 1988.

And 63 percent said the federal government was not paying enough attention to the needs and problems of minorities, a striking increase from the 34 percent who felt that way four years ago.

President Bush, who pledged his commitment to the stricken neighborhoods of Los Angeles last week, was given poor marks by both blacks and whites for his response to the riots.

Moreover, 53 percent of all whites and 76 percent of all blacks said they disapproved of the way Bush was handling race relations in general.

There was no indication that Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas, the likely Democratic nominee, or Ross Perot, a likely independent candidate, was gaining much of an immediate advantage from the episode.

Still, the poll suggested that the issues of race and poverty weigh heavily on the public's mind these days, and will doubtless figure in the campaign debate.

The poll, telephone interviews with 1,253 adults, reflected a nation still struggling with the causes of urban turmoil and the most effective response to it.

For example, most people did not see a lack of government money as the biggest impediment to solving "the problems of the cities"; more than half said the biggest difficulty was "a lack of knowledge and understanding about how to solve the problems," and a third said it was simply a lack of national concern.

Still, 60 percent said the nation was spending "too little" on urban woes, up from 46 percent in 1988, contradicting a widely held theory in politics that big cities are an unpopular cause.

The survey, which had a margin of sampling error of three percentage points, detected a clear sense of alarm over race relations.

Sixty-seven percent of the whites and 75 percent of the blacks said the nation's race relations are "generally bad."

Just 53 percent of the whites and 29 percent of the blacks say there has been "a lot" of progress in ending racial discrimination since the 1960s, a percentage that varied little with age.

Seventy-one percent of the the whites and 75 percent of the blacks agreed with the statement that "the recent rioting is a warning to the United States that race relations must improve to prevent more trouble and violence."

Only 21 percent of the whites and 19 percent of the blacks took the view that "the rioting was an isolated incident."

There were some hopeful signs. People rated race relations in their own communities far higher than they did in the nation, and they were far more optimistic about ending discrimination in their home towns than in the nation as a whole.

But in general, the survey seemed to catch Americans in a grim mood, with 53 percent of the whites and 55 percent of the blacks saying there will always be "a lot of prejudice and discrimination" in America.

Similarly, more than half of both whites and blacks predict that there will still be racial riots in American cities 25 years from now.

On several issues, blacks held bleaker outlooks than whites. For example, just 23 percent of the blacks said they had more opportunities than recently arrived immigrants. Twice that many whites said they had more opportunities than new immigrants.

There was a consensus across racial lines that the verdict in the Los Angeles police brutality case was wrong: 76 percent of the whites and 95 percent of the blacks said they disagreed with the acquittal of four police officers charged in the beating of Rodney G. King.

But whites were more likely to there might have been evidence that could change their minds: 41 percent of the whites felt that way, while 8 percent of the blacks did.

Blacks and whites also differed on the causes of the riots. Whites were most likely to place "a lot" of the blame with "irresponsible people just taking advantage of the situation," while blacks were more likely to say the jury's verdict was to blame.

But few people of either race were likely to place the blame where the White House spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, did last week: on government programs enacted by Democratic administrations in the 1960s.

Still, the survey was hardly an endorsement of those programs: 26 percent of all respondents said the programs made things better for poor people, 20 percent said they made things worse and 44 percent said the programs had little impact.

Most of the respondents saw the lack of jobs as the root of the troubles. The survey asked people to react to six steps that might be taken to reduce racial tensions and future riots.

Most put jobs and training programs at the top of the list, followed by better professional training for the police, increased minority participation in government, stronger laws to protect civil rights, black and Hispanic ownership of local businesses and, lastly, more police.

Similarly, when offered a choice of strengthening police forces or investing in job training, 88 percent of the whites and 90 percent of the blacks said jobs and job training was a more effective way of preventing unrest.

Bush, confronted with one of the biggest crises of his presidency, did not overwhelm people with his performance, a reaction that is a striking contrast to his skyrocketing approval rating during the crisis in the Persian Gulf more than a year ago.

Forty-three percent of the whites and 66 percent of the blacks said they were dissatisfied with Bush's response to the rioting in Los Angeles, compared to 41 percent of all whites and 26 percent of all blacks who said they were satisfied with it.

For example, after the end of the ground fighting in the Persian Gulf war, 86 percent approved of the way Bush handled Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

Still, neither of his rivals seemed to be moving to fill the void. Only 26 percent of the whites and 41 percent of the blacks said they were satsified with Clinton's response to the Los Angeles riots, but many had no opinion. Two-thirds had no opinion on Perot's response.

Whites split roughly evenly among Bush, Clinton and Perot on who could best handle race relations, best improve education and jobs in the cities, best create hope in the cities and and best bring the races together.

Clinton was generally given the edge on these issues among blacks, but only by small majorities. It not as great an edge as one might expect, given the historical Democratic advantage among blacks.

The survey showed the standings in the presidential race had changed little since April, although there was some tightening.

In a two-way contest, Bush still leads by six percentage points: 47 percent of the registered voters preferred Bush, 41 percent Clinton. In a three-way race, 36 percent backed Bush, 30 percent Clinton, and 25 percent Perot.

In April, that three-way race showed Bush at 38 percent, Clinton at 28 percent and Perot at 23 percent.

There are continued signs of vulnerability for Bush, whose approval rating remains at 39 percent, a standing similar to President Jimmy Carter's in May 1980. Carter lost his re-election bid in November 1980.

POLICE: Los Angeles officers are now open in talking about their frustrations were any slower, "we would have seen photos of policemen pasted on milk containers and listed as missing."

But some of the worst criticism comes from the officers themselves. They feel demoralized, uncertain about their role, afraid of the emboldened stance of the heavily armed street gangs and deserted by some of their superiors.

And unlike March of last year, when the department closed ranks amid the uproar over the videotaped beating of Rodney G. King by four white police officers, the officers are now open in talking about their frustrations.

"We're not the heroes anymore," said Officer Robert Frutos, a 6-year veteran of the 77th Street station, at the heart South-Central, where the worst rioting took place 10 days ago. "When I'm off work, I don't even tell people that I'm a police officer, because they think we're the bad guys. I say I'm a chemical engineer."

As Frutos spoke, a helicopter buzzed overhead and helmeted officers armed with M-16's patrolled the roof of the 77th Street Station. The burned out neighborhoods of South-Central have taken on new routines, with street-corner vendors doing a brisk business selling T-shirts with Rodney King's words, "Can we all get along?" and National Guard troops becoming chatty and familiar with some residents.

The last of the federal troops withdrew on Sunday, leaving several hundred Guard members on the streets and thousands on standby away from the riot area. Officials expect the guard to begin pulling out in the next several days.

"We're taking a Police Department, once one of the finest in the world, and tearing it apart," said Sgt. John Zrofsky, a 23-year veteran of the department. Like many of the officers interviewed throughout the city over the last three days, Zrofsky said he is looking for a new job — out of police work. "I don't want to live in a department that is being destroyed."

The force is under investigation on several fronts. The Police Commission, a five-member panel of civilians that overseas the department, will begin hearings this week on why the department took so long to respond to the outbreak of rioting, which caused 58 deaths, 2,383 injuries and more an estimated $735 million in property damage.

And the Justice Department is investigating whether King's civil rights were violated by the police.

Inside the department, doubts and guilt plague a force that has been on full mobilization — every officer working 12-hour shifts — for 12 days now, with no days off. At the same time, the tarnished badge seems to have inspired felons to new heights of bravado.

"We've lost any type of respect we may have had from the gangs," said Detective Gary Holbrook, a 14-year veteran working out of the Foothill Division, in the far reaches of the San Fernando Valley. The four officers who beat King worked out of this precinct house.

Now, a siege mentality has taken hold at the Foothill station. Rifle-toting officers stand guard behind sandbags erected at one corner of the station; a police bus blocks the main entrance, serving as a barrier against any sort of terrorist attack.

"Every few minutes a new call comes in, a taunt or threat," Holbrook said. "The gangs feel like they can do anything they want to us now."

Back at the 77th Street Station, Officer Edgar Palmer said, "I have never seen morale so low." Palmer, a seven-year police veteran, is one of only three officers in 77th Street Division who live in South-Central Los Angeles. "We don't know what the gangs are going to do and we don't know what's going on at the top of this department."

The gangs say they have declared a truce among themselves. It is unclear if the police remain a target. But fresh graffiti on the walls of streets here sends a chilling message to the police. Sprayed on walls throughout the gang strongholds is "Police 187," referring to a penal code number for homicide.

But even worse, perhaps, than sneers from gangs whose members number as many as 100,000, is the new-found distrust from average citizens. Under Chief Daryl F. Gates, who has said he will retire at the end of June, the department has prided itself on being a quick-strike, quasi-military force that could contain any significant outbreak of trouble.

That image has been shattered by the beating of Reginald Denny, who was dragged from his truck on the night the riots broke out, savagely beaten, then left for dead.

■ KGB troops fire on unarmed Tajik protesters

DUSHANBE, Tajikistan — KGB troops loyal to the embattled president of this Central Asian republic fired on a crowd of unarmed protesters Sunday, killing at least four, witnesses said. A news report put the death toll as high as eight.

The shooting took place in front of secret police headquarters, where President Rakhman Nabiyev is reported by Russian news agencies to have taken refuge. He is locked in a power struggle with Muslim opposition groups who have demanded greater religious and political freedoms.

After the shooting, the groups broke off talks with the hard-line former communist government on a transfer of power.

At least 14 people have been reported killed in a week of unrest aimed at ousting Nabiyev, who was installed after the hard-line coup in Moscow last August. Opposition groups claim the death toll is as high as 40 to 60, but the figures could not be independently confirmed.

■ Afghan rivals extend cease-fire for talks

KABUL, Afghanistan — Rival guerrilla groups were extending a cease-fire, possibly for another 10 days, officials said Sunday. But both sides made preparations for more fighting.

Also Sunday, the new Islamic government announced that there would be no new national laws or a constitution until a permanent government was in place. That could take as long as two years.

A decree by interim President Sibghatullah Mojaddidi read on state-run television said Islamic law, or sharia, would be used to judge all criminals.

Meanwhile, life was slowly returning to normal in the battered Afghan capital. School re-opened over the weekend, and supplies of electricity and water were almost normal. Food prices plummeted to their lowest point in months.

Flour fell to one-sixth of its price over the winter, to about 10 cents a pound, or 80 afghanis. Tomatoes, which were an unaffordable luxury two months ago, are now about 15 cents a pound, or 75 afghanis.

■ North Korea plans to return soldiers' remains

SEOUL, South Korea — North Korea plans to return the remains of 30 more American soldiers killed during the Korean War, the South Korean news agency Yonhap said Sunday.

More than 8,000 Americans who served in the 1950-'53 war are unaccounted for. Communist North Korea has returned the remains of about 15 soldiers over the past two years.

Yonhap quoted unidentified sources as saying the United States had been informed that the North Koreans would turn over the latest remains on two separate occasions before the end of this month. It gave no further details.

U.S. military officials were not in their offices Sunday and could not be contacted for comment.

The United States has insisted that North Korea return the remains of American war dead before relations can be improved. Pyongyang has sought improved ties since the collapse of communism in Europe.

Another condition is that North Korea accept international inspection of its nuclear facilities. The United States and other nations suspect North Koera has been developing atomic weapons.

North Korea denies it is working on nuclear warheads, but its delays in allowing inspections by outsiders has strained the good feelings that came with the signing of reconciliation agreements with South Korea earlier this year.

Peruvian police subdue rebels' prison uprising

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Police firing machine guns and tossing explosives Sunday put down the last resisters in a rebel uprising at a prison where guerrillas had controlled a cellblock for five years.

Hundreds of Shinging Path rebels lay face down in the dirt of the jailyard Sunday afternoon. They chanted rebel slogans as masked police with guard dogs stood watch over them.

"Control of a prison where terrorism had been in charge has now been recovered," President Alberto Fujimori said in an interview with The Associated Press at Canto Grande prison after reviewing the captured rebels there.

Fujimori said 28 rebels were killed, 20 seriously wounded and three were missing, but other official sources indicated the death count was as high as 42 and that 75 were wounded.

Despite of the fierce fighting in the prison and the police claims that the rebels were well-armed, Fujimori said the rebels were killed by their own comrades for wanting to surrender.

As Fujimori left, the rebels chanted, "We're Maoists! We're invincible!"

Police at the prison displayed weapons they said the rebels used, including machine guns, grenades, crossbows and darts. Police said the rebels had mined tunnels they dug between the men's and women's cellblocks.

With each explosion Sunday, relatives outside the prison grew more desperate, demanding to know why the shooting continued if the prisoners had surrendered. They said they feared soldiers were massacring rebel inmates.

"They're prisoners of war. They have rights and should be respected. They shouldn't just be eliminated," said one relative, Francisca Javier Ramos.

Rebels armed with acid, machine guns and homemade bombs first clashed with police Wednesday when officials tried to transfer 130 female prisoners.

Jailed rebels of the Maoist Shining Path had turned Canto Grande into a training and indoctrination center. Relatives often smuggled weapons and explosives to the inmates.

The prisoner transfer was part of Fujimori's campaign to get tough on subversion. The government has waged a 12-year war against the Shining Path insurgency, which has claimed 25,000 lives.

Police blasted through the wall of a cellblock held by rebels and stormed inside Saturday, ending a day-long standoff. An Interior Ministry communique said 470 rebels surrendered.

Relatives of the rebel inmates claimed the death toll was higher.

Filipinos vote for president in what promises to be close election race

MANILA, Philippines (NYT) — Millions of Filipinos voted for a new president today in an election seen as a referendum on the legacy of the late President Ferdinand E. Marcos and of the woman who ousted him, Corazon C. Aquino.

One of the leading candidates, Eduardo Cojuangco, was so close to Marcos that he fled with the former president into exile. Another candidate, former Defense Minister Fidel V. Ramos, is the army general who turned on Marcos and became a hero of the 1986 "People Power" revolution.

The final weekend of the presidential campaign was marred by reports of violence, with at least 3 civilians killed and 55 injured in two explosions at or near rallies for supporters of Ramos.

Early on Sunday, 17 police officers were slain by communist rebels in an ambush in Cagayan Province in the north.

The attack was a reminder of the still unresolved 23-year-old insurgency by the Marxist New People's Army, one of many issues left largely undebated in a presidential campaign that has focused instead on personalities. There has been scant attention paid to the candidates' views on how to end the nation's most serious problem, its crushing poverty.

A traditional campaign issue, American influence and interference in the Philippines, a former colony, was removed by the Pentagon's announcement that it would close American military bases here this year. The move was prompted by a vote in the Philippine Senate to reject a new bases treaty.

The presidential race appears to be a tossup — so close, it fact, that it may take a week or more to gather enough ballots from around this vast archipelago nation to make it clear who won.

While the election is being described as the freest in Philippine history, election officials fear that even relatively limited instances of vote-buying or other cheating could swing it.

Opinion polls suggest that the next President will be elected with much less than half of the vote, and perhaps as little as 20 percent. Since there will be no runoff, the candidate gaining the most votes today wins.

Talks with government end Thailand's mass protests

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The opposition today ended huge protests after the government agreed to a plan that could result in Prime Minister Suchinda Kraprayoon's resignation in months, a politician said.

The eight days of rallies by tens of thousands of people were Thailand's largest protests in two decades.

"We will disperse tonight. It is the consensus," said Ar-ong Junsai, a Parliament member of the opposition Palang Dharma Party. He said, however, that smaller demonstrations will continue until Suchinda stepped down.

Ar-ong participated in early morning talks among government and opposition parties, student leaders and other demonstration organizers, including pro-democracy leader Chamlong Srimuang.

The accord was a compromise by the government, which had unyieldingly backed Suchinda, and the opposition, which had demanded Suchinda's immediate ouster. Suchinda is a former army chief who is not an elected politician.

Ar-ong said that before the agreement was reached, the military had planned to move in to clear the crowd — an action he predicted would have caused deaths and injuries.

Following the urging of Chamlong and other organizers, protesters left Bangkok's streets in the early morning darkness today. Police started removing the barbed wire barricades that had been set up to block them from marching to Parliament.

Pressured by the protests, the governing coalition of five pro-military parties that chose Suchinda as prime minister agreed to constitutional reforms, including provisions requiring the prime minister to be an elected lawmaker and curtailing the powers of the military-appointed Senate.

Bosnian president appeals for U.N. help

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Exploding artillery and mortar shells shook Bosnia's capital early Sunday and the president of the strife-torn state appealed for U.N. intervention.

Shooting in Sarajevo abated by morning, but sporadic small-arms fire continued. The fighting pitting Serbs against Croats and Muslim Slavs set many buildings ablaze, and kept aid workers from reaching the wounded, Sarajevo radio reported. In some suburbs, corpses decomposed in the hot sun.

Meanwhile, mainly Serb federal troops fought their way into the center of Mostar, the capital of the republic's Herzegovina region, Belgrade radio said.

Several houses were ablaze or destroyed and telephone links were severed in the historic former resort, the Tanjug news agency said. The dead reportedly were being buried in parks because artillery and sniper fire prevented the approach to cemeteries.

Fighting also was reported in Neum on Bosnia's Adriatic coast; in the north bordering Croatia; and in the east near Serbia and Montenegro.

Sarajevo radio said this city of some 600,000 people was "on the verge of hunger" and drinking water in some parts of the city that was host for the 1984 Winter Olympic was unusable.

The radio frequently broadcast messages Sunday by people asking for the whereabouts of relatives and friends. The radio broadcast words of encouragement at the time of heavy bombardment.

European Community officials escorted about 100 Bosnian children from Sarajevo on Sunday to remove them from the war zone. Many of the children clutched toys and stooped for fear of snipers as they hurried onto two buses.

The convoy headed for Belgrade, where most of the children were to fly on to Moscow. Others were going to Britain to stay with relatives.

Arif Smajkic, the head of Bosnia's health department, said 1,320 people had been killed and 6,700 wounded in the first 44 days after ethnic Croats and Muslims declared independence Feb. 29. Minority Serbs, who oppose secession, have been supported by federal troops in the fighting.

In a letter to U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali, Bosnia's Muslim president, Alija Izetbegovic, appealed for "a limited (U.N.) operation to lift road and rail blockades, control bridges and get Sarajevo airport open," Sarajevo radio said.

Mideast talks to open; Israel plans boycott

TORONTO (AP) — Middle East peace talks open in several capitals this week, but Israel has decided to boycott two of the sessions because it does not want to talk to Palestinian exiles.

The contentious issue of which Palestinians should attend the multilateral talks has threatened this part of the negotiations since they began in Moscow in January. The United States and Russia support the presence of Palestinians from outside the occupied territories.

But the Israelis fear that if Palestinians from the diaspora attend, their presence would open up the issue of their right to return to the lands they fled in 1948 as Israel was being born.

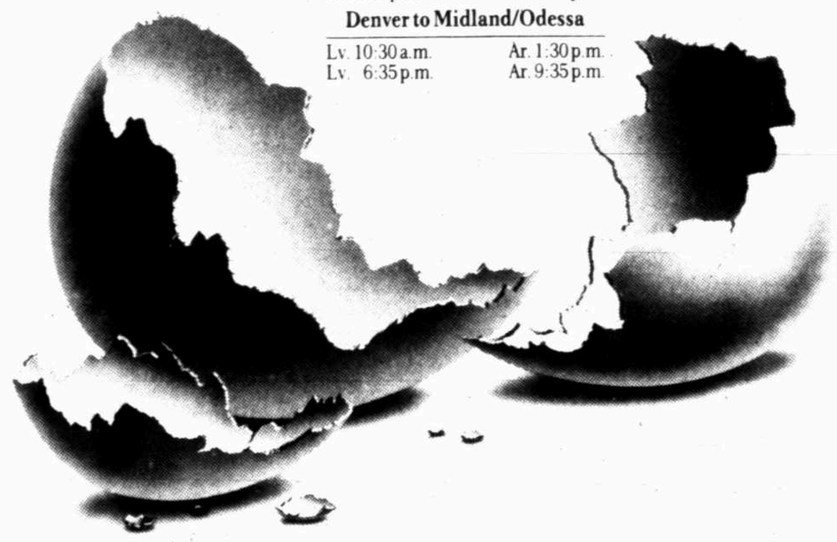

Most other countries, including the American and Russian cosponsors of the talks, feel the presence of these Palestinians is essential. Some question the usefulness of discussing a refugee problem without talking directly to the refugees themselves.

The first sessions of the multilateral talks, which essentially are open to any country that feels it has something to contribute to Middle East peace, begin today.

■ Gorbachev seeks donations to his think tank

ATLANTA — Mikhail Gorbachev said Sunday he would like to see the former Soviet Union's republics reunite as one, but with the goal of providing social and economic freedom to all.

People in the former country's now-independent republics "all would like to preserve this, our country, this vast world which evolved over centuries," Gorbachev said.

"I'm sure that they can eventually make the politicians understand that," he added.

Gorbachev spoke with reporters Sunday night after meeting with former President Jimmy Carter and several local business executives.

Gorbachev, who arrived in Atlanta on Sunday, was to deliver the commencement address at Emory University today. But a main purpose of his trip was to confer with Carter about the think tank he's opening in Moscow and to seek funding for it from Atlanta's business leaders.

■ Tribes expected to challenge gambling rules

WASHINGTON — New rules on Indian gambling will clear the way for U.S. attorneys to shut down illegal games and are likely to slow the growth of new tribally run casinos.

The rules, which take effect today, bar Indian casinos from running electronic slot machines or the bingo-like game of keno without state approval.

A Minnesota tribe has already filed suit over the regulations, and several other tribes are expected to ask judges next week to stop the government from enforcing them.

"I think almost immediately on their becoming effective, you can expect three or four or five lawsuits to drop," said Frank Ducheneaux, a lobbyist for the Minnesota Indian Gaming Association and several tribes.

Congress permitted tribes to begin casino-style gambling in 1988 in states that allow similar forms of gaming for non-Indians. However, lawmakers left it up to a new National Indian Gaming Commission to decide which games or devices would require state approval.

■ Cuomo wants genetic database of offenders

Trying to make DNA testing the kind of investigative weapon that fingerprints have long been, the Cuomo administration wants to create a genetic database by compelling convicted murderers and sex offenders to provide blood samples.

Gov. Mario M. Cuomo calls the DNA system "a revolutionary, powerful and necessary criminal-justice tool" that will help track down criminal suspects and exonerate innocent people.

But a bill proposed by Cuomo to establish the DNA database is encountering mixed support in the Legislature, with Republican leaders more supportive than the governor's fellow Democrats.

And, civil rights and legal defense groups are lining up solidly against the plan, asserting that it fails to assure the scientific reliability of DNA as evidence and that the plan would violate people's rights by compelling them to give blood samples for evidence that could be used against them in the future.

■ Star Wars weapon meets official demise

WASHINGTON — The X-ray laser, the death beam weapon that gave President Reagan's 1983 Strategic Defense Initiative its Star Wars nickname, is officially dead after years of research and hundreds of millions of dollars of investment.

X-ray lasers, powered by hydrogen bomb explosions in space that would flash intense beams of light across hundreds of miles of space, were envisioned by their promoters as the ultimate weapon against a Soviet nuclear missile attack.

No X-ray laser weapon ever was produced, nor was its feasibility ever established. The once-secret project began heading toward extinction in the late 1980s.

The Pentagon agency that runs the Strategic Defense Initiative has informed Congress that it will request no money for research on the X-ray laser and related projects in 1993. Other, less exotic SDI work will continue.

The SDI office made no announcement of its decision to drop support for what it calls "nuclear directed energy" weapons, but an official confirmed Friday that the Defense Department's $5 million investment this year was the last one planned.

Study shows disparity in disability benefits

WASHINGTON (NYT) — For 30 years, blacks with serious ailments have been much more likely than whites to be rejected for benefits under Social Security disability programs, a congressional investigative agency has found.

From the initial claim through the appeals process, blacks have had a more difficult time obtaining benefits from the two largest federal programs for people with severe disabilities, which together now provide $43.2 billion in disability checks annually to millions of workers and their families, the study by the General Accounting Office concludes.

The study is the most comprehensive ever undertaken by the government about race and disability benefits.

It found that blacks as a group are receiving more benefits than whites from the two Social Security programs for people with severe disabilities, the Disability Insurance and Supplemental Security Income programs.

It attributes this to the fact that blacks have a higher rate of work-related disabilities, earn lower incomes and file a greater number of claims. While the study did not explain that situation, other experts have pointed out that blacks tend to have jobs that are more labor intensive.

The report does not conclude that the disparities are due to racial discrimination but rules out every other explanation and recommends that the Social Security Administration conduct an investigation to determine whether the programs are racially biased.

While the Social Security Administration questioned the study, it said the report had already prompted it to begin an investigation to make sure its decisions were not motivated by race.

The study found that in 1988, the latest year analyzed, whites had an 8 percent better chance of receiving benefits after being initially turned down for Disability Insurance and a 4 percent advantage under the Supplemental Security Income program.

This was the case, the accounting office found, even accounting for the applicants' ages, education and types of disability.

In general, the study found that blacks had a far harder time in the appeals process than in filing initial claims. And in the appeals process, the greatest racial disparities were in Chicago, where blacks had a 10 percent to 17 percent disadvantage, and in New York, where they had a 15 percent disadvantage, on average.

Troops' withdrawal leaves L.A. residents tense

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Riot-scarred neighborhoods were peaceful, but their residents were tense Sunday following the withdrawal of 4,000 Marines and regular Army soldiers.

"The police force is understaffed to begin with," said Ricki Schermerhorn of the group Mothers of All Colors Unite. "Even though things are starting to settle down, we feel there's a lot of tension out there."

The group held a Mother's Day news conference to urge officials to keep National Guard troops in the city.

Gov. Pete Wilson, who announced the removal of the Army and Marine troops on Saturday, said 10,000 members of the Guard would remain in the city indefinitely. The Guard troops have withdrawn from the streets to armories, except during night patrols, said Maj. Pat Antosh, a Guard spokeswoman.

In Washington, Vice President Dan Quayle praised the Los Angeles Police Department on Sunday, saying its officers are overworked and "deserve our full support."

The Los Angeles Police Commission is expected to create a panel today to review the Police Department's conduct during the riot.

Quayle also defended President Bush for not going to Los Angeles immediately after the riot broke out there April 29.

The rioting began hours after four white Los Angeles police officers were acquitted in the videotaped beating of black motorist Rodney King. It left 53 people dead and 2,383 injured. Violence also spread to several other major cities.

Officer Bill Frio, a police spokesman, said there were no reports of riot-related violence in Los Angeles on Sunday, but he said officers and troops have periodically drawn sniper fire.

Singer Sylvia Syms collapses during performance, dies at 73

NEW YORK (AP) — Sylvia Syms, called "the world's greatest saloon singer" by Frank Sinatra, collapsed Sunday and died at a midtown Manhattan performance as she paid tribute to Sinatra. She was 73.

She had just finished a medley and was preparing to sing her final song, "This Will Be My Shining Hour," when she fell to the floor, said her manager, Jack Globenfelt.

The cause of death was not known.

"She was very up and very bubbly between shows. She was very excited," Globenfelt said. Among those in the audience at the Algonquin Hotel's Oak Room was her good friend Broadway composer Cy Coleman, Globenfelt said.

"Sylvia lived alone. This is probably the best way she could have gone and probably the way she wanted to go," said Arthur Pomposello, the Oak Room's talent coordinator.

Syms made dozens of recordings, and her 1956 rendition of "I Could Have Danced All Night" sold more than a million copies.

She often played the part of Bloody Mary in "South Pacific" and had the lead in "Hello, Dolly!" Her other plays include "Dream Girl," "Thirteen Daughters," "Funny Girl," "Flower Drum Song" and "Camino Real."

Sinatra, a close friend, produced her "Syms By Sinatra" album.

Syms was to perform at the Oak Room through May in a show titled "Sylvia Syms Sings Sinatra." The two became friends nearly 50 years ago after meeting at a Billie Holiday concert.

Born and raised in New York City's borough of Brooklyn, Syms overcame polio during childhood. Her career took off after Mae West saw her singing in Greenwich Village and gave her a part in a revival of "Diamond Lil."

Syms credited her difficult childhood with leading to her success.

"I was a very removed child, and it started when I sang with a full and beautiful voice before I'd learned to talk," she was quoted in Whitney Balliett's book "American Singers." "I sang in my carriage, and later I'd sit on the front stoop and sing at the top of my lungs."

In 1980, she received an honorary doctorate in music from Northwood Institute, a performing arts university in Dallas. She taught singing there for 14 years.

World Bank links loans to military spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — The World Bank said Sunday it will assess military spending by 85 Third World countries when deciding how much to lend them in their battle against poverty.

The nations' "non-productive" spending "such as military expenditures" will help determine the bank's level of support, said a 16-page "Operational Directive" released by the bank.

Poverty reduction is the institution's overarching objective, bank President Lewis T. Preston — formerly of J. P. Morgan — wrote in an introduction.

The bank made clear that the amount of loans a country can expect is linked to the strength of its own effort to reduce poverty: greater commitment will get greater support, weaker commitment will get less support.

Japan and Germany have already made it clear that they will look into military spending when they make up their own aid programs.

Rep. Henry J. Gonzalez, D-Texas, chairman of the House Banking Committee, has said he will push to take the United States out of international organizations if they keep on lending money that makes it easier for the borrowers to spend other money on arms.

The World Bank is the biggest of intergovernmental lending agencies, approving loans worth about $24 billion a year. Its original purpose was to help poor countries out of poverty. The United States owns the biggest block of shares among the 159 member countries

Now Russia and other republics of the former Soviet Union are becoming eligible for its loans.

Critics say the bank has sometimes forgotten its anti-poverty goal. In laying out the new program Sven Sandstrom, one of the bank's three managing directors, told reporters that in the 1970s its projects were over-ambitious.

"In the 1980s ... we focused heavily on macroeconomic policies and other economic reforms to try to help countries make their economies more efficient and restore economic growth.

"In the 1990s, we see poverty reduction as the preeminent focus of our work."

North Koreans lift nuclear veil

North Korea has lifted the veil from its nuclear programs, thereby lifting hopes that it is renouncing any ambitions to develop nuclear arms.

Long considered a potential nuclear renegade, North Korea has now provided the International Atomic Energy Agency with key details of its nuclear facilities, including a suspected reprocessing plant at Yongbyon.

That will permit early inspections of the sites. Improved trade and diplomatic ties with the U.S., South Korea and Japan will surely follow, satisfying North Korea's needs.

Under a nuclear safeguards agreement with the IAEA that went into effect last month, Pyongyang is obliged to open all its nuclear sites to inspectors.

To facilitate those inspections it is supposed to provide design data for all sites that handle uranium or plutonium, including those under construction or planned. It has now done so.

The sites include a laboratory at Yongbyon "designed for research on the separation of uranium and plutonium."

This is believed to be the worrisome reprocessing plant, which some believe has the potential to turn out weapons-grade nuclear material in substantial quantities.

That facility will be inspected by the IAEA in coming weeks. Under an agreement with South Korea, the North will then have to dismantle it.

Both North and South Korea now need to agree to carry out their own mutual inspections of suspect nuclear sites, going even beyond IAEA inspections in dispelling nuclear fears.

Should the inspections proceed without a hitch, they would convince even the skeptics that all of Korea is nuclear-free. That would vindicate those in the Bush administration, in Seoul and in Tokyo who sought to resolve the nuclear issue diplomatically.

Bomb news ends euphoria

There has never been any shortage of things to worry about on the international scene. Even the euphoria accompanying the end of the Cold War has been short-lived, as ancient nationalistic hatreds and new geopolitical alignments have sprung up to threaten global stability.

And now here comes a chilling little item that should find a place well toward the top of any sensible individual's worry list: Word is that Iran may have acquired two nuclear warheads.

According to a story carried in The European, a British weekly, several nuclear warheads have disappeared from the old Soviet nuclear test site at Semipalatinks in Kazakhstan. The warheads were reportedly smuggled across the border into Iran.

This information . . . has yet to be verified by the Russians, the Americans, the Iranians or anyone else in a position to know — yet the very possibility that such a turn of events may have come about is nothing short of appalling.

Do the Iranians have The Bomb? That's a question to which American and other Western intelligence gatherers should accord the greatest urgency.

Voters may learn to add this year

When Geraldine Ferraro was nominated for vice president in 1984, it was supposed to represent a breakthrough for women in American politics. It didn't.

But eight years later, that breakthrough may finally be at hand.

This year Ferraro is running for U.S. senator in New York, but her race is only one of 21 Senate contests nationwide featuring female candidates.

And 173 women are running for the U.S. House of Representatives, more than twice the number who ran in the last national election, only two years ago.

1992 might indeed begin to fulfill the failed promise of 1984. Congress is widely reviled as an ineffective, out-of-touch institution. Congress also is dominated by White male incumbents. This may be the election that voters finally begin to put two and two together.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, May 11, the 132nd day of 1992. There are 234 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On May 11, 1888, songwriter Irving Berlin was born Israel Baline in Temun, Russia. Berlin, who died in 1989, wrote some 1,500 songs, many of which have become standards — including "White Christmas," "Easter Parade," "God Bless America" and "Always."

On this date:

In 1647, Peter Stuyvesant arrived in New Amsterdam to become governor.

In 1858, Minnesota became the 32nd state of the Union.

In 1894, modern dance pioneer Martha Graham was born in Pittsburgh.

In 1910, Glacier National Park in Montana was established.

In 1943, during World War II, American forces landed on Japanese-held Attu island in the Aleutians. (The territory was retaken in three weeks.)

In 1946, the World War II relief agency CARE (Cooperative for American Remittances to Europe) had its start as the first CARE package arrived in Europe.

In 1947, the B.F. Goodrich Company of Akron, Ohio, announced the development of a tubeless tire.

In 1949, Israel was admitted to the United Nations as its 59th member.

In 1973, charges against Daniel Ellsberg for his role in the Pentagon Papers case were dismissed by a judge who cited government misconduct.

In 1981, reggae artist Bob Marley died at age 36 in a Miami hospital.

In 1985, more than 50 people died when a flash fire swept a jampacked soccer stadium in Bradford, England.

Washington state politicos fan flames

WASHINGTON — One of this city's classic political rivalries has turned downright ugly in recent months, and it's threatening the comity of one of the most harmonious state delegations on Capitol Hill.

Anderson

In one corner stands Brock Adams, the senior Senator from Washington state, whose re-election bid was derailed earlier this year after eight unnamed women accused him of sexual improprieties in a published report.

In the other corner is the man who Adams beat in the 1986 election, Republican Sen. Slade Gorton, known widely back home as "Slade the Blade" for his slashing rhetorical style. Gorton was returned to the Senate in 1998.

With Adams a lame duck after his forced withdrawal, and with House Speaker Tom Foley, D-Wash., limping from abuse he has taken over the House bank scandal, Gorton sees a golden opportunity to raise his political profile back home. In recent months, Gorton along with Republican pit bull Newt Gingrich encouraged Foley's opponent in the November election to escalate his attacks on the genial gentleman from Spokane.

But Adams is hanging tough in his final months, despite the repeated calls for his resignation from women's groups and his political rivals. While the Seattle chapter of the National Organization for Women holds weekly vigils of protest against him in his home state, Adams has told his staff to "take no prisoners" in the fight for the liberal issues that have been his political staple over the years.

Senate sources thought Gorton violated the first commandment of schoolyard fair play — don't hit a guy when he's down — by his curiously worded letter regarding a possible Ethics Committee probe of Adams stemming from charges of sexual misconduct.

Gorton recused himself from any Ethics Committee investigation of Adams. In a letter to Republican committee members, Gorton blasted Adams as guilty as accused. His letter also raised the 1987 allegations against Adams, brought by his former aide Kari Tupper, that Adams made unwanted sexual advances against her. Those charges were dismissed by a Republican-appointed prosecutor after no supporting evidence was found.

In other words, Gorton was telling potential judges of Adams: I can't be objective about Brock, but I'd hang him high.

"Ms. Tupper's charges are so confirmed and buttressed by the statement of seven unnamed women published by the Seattle Times as to leave no reasonable doubt in my mind as to the truth of Ms. Tupper's allegations," Gorton wrote in the letter.

Just last fall, Gorton was not nearly as sympathetic to similar charges that Anita Hill made against Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas. Though the Thomas-Hill hearings galvanized Congress over the issue of sexual harassment, Gorton was not sufficiently swayed to vote against the confirmation.

"With the exception of the two principals, I doubt that any of us will ever know the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth," Gorton said at the time in defense of his vote. Apparently Gorton doesn't apply this judiciousness across-the-board, where he has become his colleague's self-appointed judge, jury and executioner.

Gorton is perhaps best known for the time he swapped votes with the White House to secure the nomination of William Dwyer, whom Gorton hand-picked for a federal judgeship in Seattle. At the last minute, Gorton voted in favor of a conservative federal judge that he had vowed to oppose, after the administration decided to back Dwyer.

When one of Judge Dwyer's opinions clashed with Gorton's position on the spotted owl, Gorton viciously lashed out. On the Senate floor, Gorton called Dwyer's decision halting timber sales "anti-human" and contributing to the suicide of an unemployed logger.

CHARLEY REESE

Perot pushes the buttons that voters like

The conventional wisdom, also known as pop ignorance, about H. Ross Perot is that no third party candidate has ever won the White House.

First, that's not true, except in a technical sense. Abraham Lincoln won it when the newly formed Republican Party was in effect a third party. The GOP had risen out of the ashes of the Whigs. The Democrats had split north and south and each wing nominated its own candidate. The two Democrats together outpolled Lincoln, but Lincoln won in the Electoral College.

Reese

Secondly, no third party candidate has ever had the financial resources Perot has nor faced two major party nominees, assuming Bill Clinton and George Bush win, who had such lukewarm support. Few of these two men's supporters are devoted to them; they just don't like the other.

Thus, if Perot runs and survives physically, I'd say it was at least a reasonable bet, he could win the general election. In 1990, 28 percent of registered voters were registered as independents, almost as many as were registered as Republican (32 percent). Besides straight party voting is a relic of a few diehards.

Speaking just from a political mechanic's point of view, George Bush has a problem with credibility. What's he going to run on? No new taxes? Balanced budget? Reducing crime? Winning the war on drugs? Creating jobs and a prosperous economy? He has shot himself down on each of these issues, and thus he's reduced to trying feebly to portray himself as a victim of the Democratic Congress.

Not much credibility there either except for the brain dead. The Democratic Congress didn't impose $166 billion in new taxes on Bush — he agreed with them. Nor was it the Democratic Congress which just submitted a budget proposal with a $400 billion deficit. Bush's supporters mainly just want to keep Democrats out and their own patronage in.

Clinton doesn't fare much better in the credibility department — again from the point of view of a political mechanic. He wins primaries with low turnouts, but too many of those who vote for him in the primaries keep saying they wish they had other choices. To say that he has not galvanized Democrats is to say that rain is wet. Those who like his wife, Hillary, are more excited about her than they are about him.

Clinton projects an image close to that of a pushy, but ingratiating and basically weak social climber. His supporters mainly want to oust the Republicans and get control of the patronage.

Clinton and Bush are both associated with the Trilateral Commission, the global corporations' policy outfit set up by David Rockefeller. Both are Establishment candidates. People who expect drastic policy changes on any substantive issue involving big business with Clinton in the White House will be disappointed.

My own personal choice, Jerry Brown, has demonstrated yet again that an honest but cash-poor man telling the truth is not going to make much of a dent in a modern presidential campaign. The majority of America's voters are not ready for Zen.

If Perot runs, he'd better be careful to ration the truth as I am not at all sure very many Americans are all that fond of it. I have no doubt, however, that Perot will run — from a mechanic's point of view — a far more effective campaign than Brown. Brown thinks. Perot decides and acts.

Next to his financial resources, Perot's greatest strength is that unlike Bush and Clinton, he does generate excitement. It's becoming apparent that many see him as a messiah.

Whatever the outcome, Brown, Perot and dormant Democrat Paul Tsongas are all saying things that need to be said. If Bush and Clinton don't listen, Perot may win.

Rioting only increases 'white flight' phenomena

GREENSBORO, Ga — The killing and the burning and the looting have subsided now in American cities turned mean and dangerous over a jury's verdict.

The good news is that the white truck driver who was dragged from the cab of his truck in Los Angeles and savagely beaten by rampaging blacks is going to recover.

Grizzard

The bad news is that some people who live in these cities know it can happen again. They know they might be the ones burned out or beaten or even killed next time.

So they start looking outside the cities for the quality of life they are seeking.

It's called white flight. Whites move away from the cities, businesses close, the tax base erodes and life gets even worse for those who have no other place they can go.

The call to flee can come abruptly. Last week I was in a cottage on the banks of Lake Oconee, an hour-and-a-half drive east from Atlanta. There was a peacefulness here you could almost see.

I'd had a country ham and biscuit breakfast at the Town House Restaurant in the middle of serene Greensboro, where the waitress calls you "Sugar," and the town folks sit and sip coffee and, as they used to say in church back in Moreland, Ga., fellowship one with another.

We stopped on the way back from breakfast at a mom and pop for gasoline. Out front a white man said good morning to a black man. The two obviously were well-acquainted.

"What you got there?" the white man asked.

"Minnows and crickets," said the black man.

"I've heard they've been bitin' pretty good," the white man continued.

"I hope they still are," the black man said. "I been waitin' all week to try 'em out."

"Well, good luck," the white man said.

The black man smiled and nodded his head.

Back at the cottage I turned on the television. I saw a felony taking place live. Channel 2's camera in a helicopter was sending a frightening image. Young blacks were breaking into a liquor store near the Atlanta University campus.

Once inside they began to loot somebody's place of business. A police car burned nearby.

The cops were two blocks away, but they didn't attempt to stop the looters. The idea, said a man on television, was not to confront the thieves, but to contain them.

What a contrast.

The Lake Oconee area is quickly becoming one of the state's top resorts. The place is literally breaking out in golf courses, and there is boating and fishing, of course.

Ron Harrison, a friend, had asked me to do a fundraiser for the Greensboro Hospital. In return, I got the cottage, the country ham and biscuit breakfast, golf and the calming effect of life being turned down a notch or two.

Ron sells local real estate.

"You used to live in Atlanta, didn't you?" I asked him.

"Moved out March 1, 1986," he said. "I couldn't take the hassles of city life anymore. This is heaven."

Ron is from a small town in South Georgia. So the small town boy went to the big town to seek his fortune. Hassled by the traffic, the noise, the crime, he sought the comfort of the lifestyle from his childhood.

People smiled and nodded here like they did in the Moreland of my own boyhood.

A woman was selling tomatoes and onions from a roadside stand. I had asked Ron if I needed to lock the door of the cottage when we went out.

"Don't bother," he said, "crime is one thing we don't have any of here."

As I headed back to Atlanta, I stopped and bought a basket of tomatoes from the woman. "Much obliged and come back," she said when I paid her.

"Come back."

I heard you lady, I really did.

Humanity begins to confront its handiwork: an altered planet

By William K. Stevens
N.Y. Times News Service

Humans have always exploited nature in the belief that the all-encompassing biosphere — the seamless, wondrously resilient fabric of life, land, water and air — was so vast and enduring that people could never do it basic harm.

Events of the last decade have shattered that comforting perception. The moment of awakening may have come in the mid-1980s when governments finally accepted and acted on the evidence that waste industrial chemicals were weakening the stratospheric ozone shield that protects living things from biologically harmful ultraviolet rays.

But that is almost the least of it. People have now transformed the biosphere on so many fronts, scientists say, that Homo sapiens rivals grand forces like the movement of continents, volcanic eruptions, asteroid impacts and ice ages as an agent of global change.

The transformation has sharply escalated in both scale and pace since World War II. And it is raising serious questions not only about the ability of nature to sustain the global economy, but also about the health and future of the biosphere itself. That is why delegates from around the world are preparing to gather at an "Earth Summit" early next month in Rio de Janeiro.

There are many reasons for concern:

■ People have transformed or manipulated ecosystems constituting about half the planet's ice-free land surface and have made a significant impact on most of the rest.

■ They have appropriated to their own use about 40 percent of the photosynthetic energy produced by plants.

■ They have steadily reduced the number of other species in the world through pollution, hunting and destruction of natural habitat. Now, as the inroads become deeper and more widespread, many biologists fear that human activity could bring about a mass extinction of epic scale, wiping out 25 percent of the world's remaining species in the next 50 years.

■ By burning coal, oil, natural gas and trees they cut down, humans have altered the global flow of energy within the biosphere. Atmospheric concentrations of heat-trapping carbon dioxide have increased by 25 percent since pre-industrial times.

That is well above levels recorded at any other time in the last 160,000 years, which is as far back as scientists have been able to track the trend. No end to the buildup is in sight. If it remains uncontrolled, scientists warn, a disruptive and possibly catastrophic warming of the earth could take place.

■ Global population, which stood at 2.5 billion only 40 years ago, is expected to reach 6 billion by the year 2000 and swell to perhaps 10 billion 60 years from now.

Delegates to Rio hope to sign legally binding treaties to cope with the threats of climate change and species extinction. The final round of talks on climate is to conclude at the United Nations in New York this week. The last round of biodiversity talks starts next week in Nairobi, Kenya.

The Rio delegates also hope to adopt a statement of principles and an agenda for action to prevent broad damage to the biosphere while accommodating the economic needs of the surging population.

The question of limits to economic and population growth has come to the fore once again in connection with the summit. But this time it has been joined by the newer and more pressing question of the degree to which the biosphere is in jeopardy. Scientists are still struggling toward an answer in each case.

Until now, humans have always been able to push back the physical limits imposed on their expansion by the rest of the biosphere. When limited food supplies have threatened to check the proliferation of people, for instance, people have employed technology and social organization to grow crops and then clear forests, plow grasslands and, finally, harness science to agriculture. Humanity has not repealed the laws of ecology, but it has bent them; it continually expands to fill its ecological niche, then stretches the niche — at some cost to other elements of the biosphere.

No, argue Donella H. Meadows, Dennis L. Meadows and Jorgen Randers, three authors of the "limits to growth" thesis propounded 20 years ago under the sponsorship of the Club of Rome, an informal group of academics, civil servants and business leaders.

Transformation is raising serious questions not only about the ability of nature to sustain the global economy, but also about the health and future of the biosphere itself.

The thesis, based on computerized simulations of the workings of the global ecosystem, held that limits to growth on the planet would be breached within a century and that a sudden and uncontrollable decline of population and industrial capacity would ensue. Damage to the biosphere's natural resources were one element in the predicted collapse.

In a new book called "Beyond the Limits" (Chelsea Green Publishing Co.), based partly on updated computer simulations, the three authors argue that if human activity continues as at present, it will "overshoot" the carrying capacity of the biosphere and precipitate a collapse within the next few decades.

The result, they write, would be "a permanently impoverished environment and a material standard of living much lower than would could have been possible had the environment never been overstressed."

The new analysis puts more emphasis on deterioration of the biosphere, and Dennis Meadows said that it convinced him that less time is available to halt the expected collapse than had earlier been thought.

Twenty years ago, he said, "it seemed to us there was a period out to 2030 or 2040 in which to fashion a sustainable society." Now, he said, it looks as if a new set of attitudes and policies are not in place in the next 20 years, it will be too late to avoid an eventual collapse.

The original limits-to-growth thesis drew sharp criticism and dissent, and the updated one is likely to provoke argument as well. Indeed, Allen Sinai, chief executive officer of the Boston Company Economic Advisors, an economic analysis group, took issue with its forecast of overshoot-and-collapse in a debate on the subject a few weeks ago in Cambridge, Mass.

The debate was organized by Earthwatch, a Boston-based scientific research and education organization. The earth's carrying capacity is "roughly infinite over the time span of relevance to most of us, which would be 50 to a hundred to 150 years," Sinai said.

He did not discount "the very real effects" of population and economic growth on the physical world in the short term. But "again and again," he said, the market system has "stretched limits which appear finite to roughly infinite," frustrating Malthusian predictions of disaster.

But no one knows the capacity of the biosphere to sustain humanity's expansion. "We have yet to see a cogent analysis of what the real, sustainable carrying capacity of the earth is for people," said Dr. Daniel Botkin, an ecologist at the University of California at Santa Barbara.

Scholars have a better fix on the ways in which human activity is transforming the biosphere, even though they have only recently begun looking at the question systematically.

Contrary to widespread popular perception, they say, the earth itself is in no danger at the hands of humanity, and life itself is not about to be wiped out.

Grand movements of the continents, shifts in the earth's position relative to the sun that bring on ice ages, global temperatures higher than any contemplated in the foreseeable future, bombardment of the planet by debris from space — all have transformed the earth in the past without destroying the planet or extinguishing all life.

Nor are humans the only species that has altered the biosphere. The earth's original atmosphere, for instance, was far different from today's. But about 2 billion years ago, photosynthesizing microbes that lived on hydrogen began to break down water and expel oxygen as a byproduct.

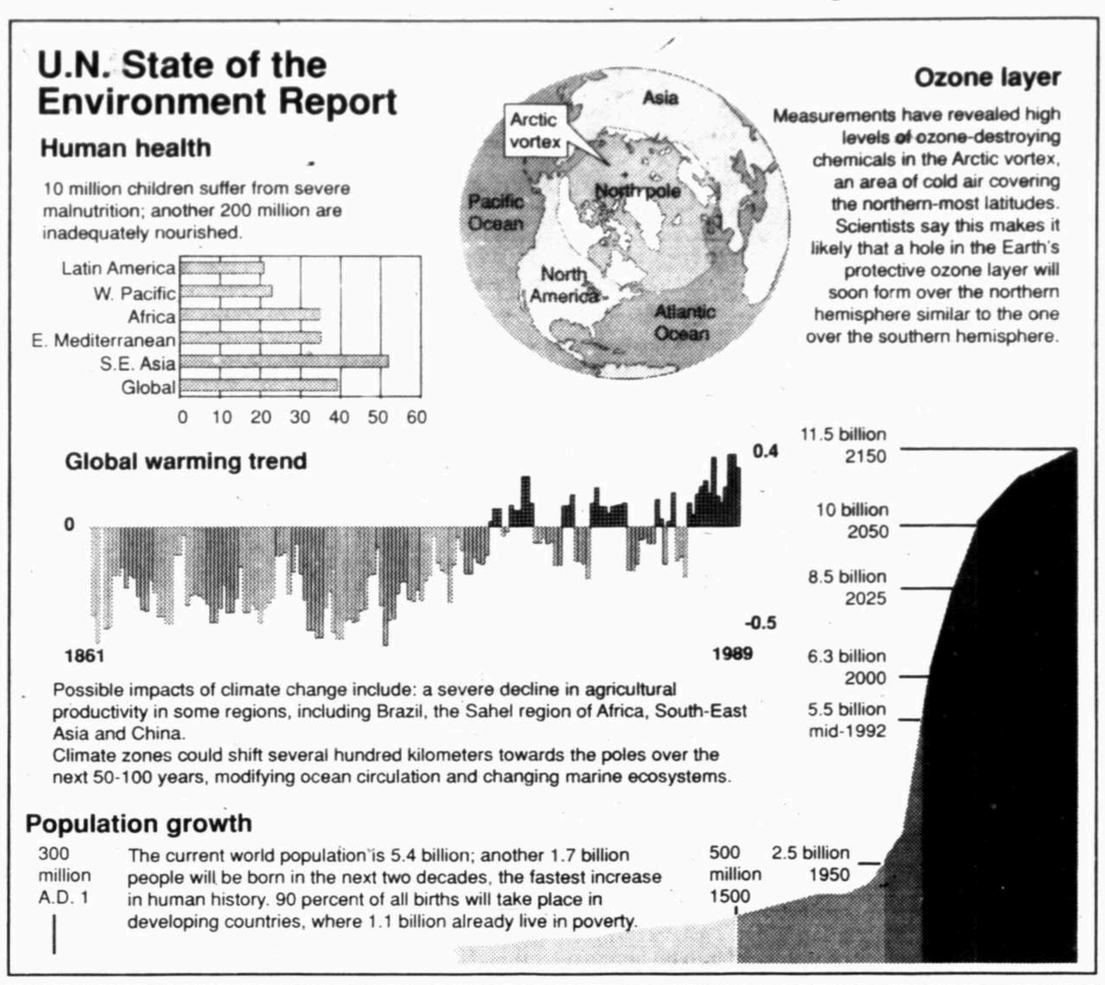

Oxygen was toxic to most other organisms then alive, and they perished as atmospheric oxygen built up. The ultimate result was the creation of a new, oxygen-rich atmosphere that supports today's animal kingdom.

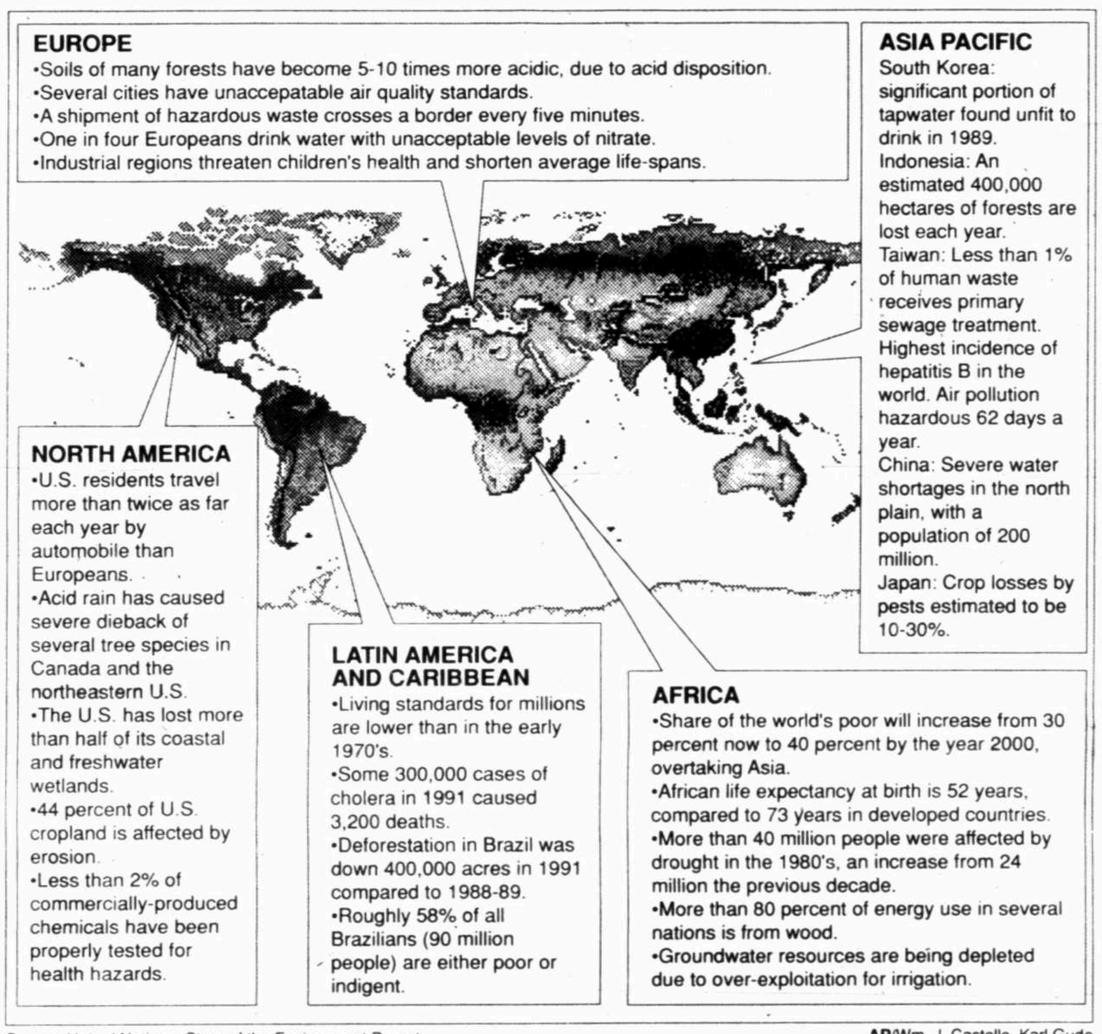

Nevertheless, the extent of change wrought by humans "is enormous; you can't get away from it," said Dr. B. L. Turner 2nd, a geographer at Clark University in Worcester, Mass., who directs a new program based at Clark on human transformation of the earth.

The most recent and comprehensive inventory of biospheric changes caused by humans was published in 1990 under the auspices of Clark. In it, a wide range of experts in the physical and social sciences from around the world described the last 300 years of change.

The face of the earth, the 1990 report said, bears the most visible and oldest marks of change, although the more recent and more subtle changes in the flows of the biosphere's energy and chemicals may be more profound.

Alterations to the face of the earth have been going on "a bit longer than most people realize," Turner said.

Kindergarten teacher reunites students

By Debbie Hiott
Associated Press writer

AUSTIN — The chairs they once sat in were too small, and the tables on which they once colored were too low to the floor. So they milled about the cozy classroom like giants, reminiscing about the days when everything seemed larger than life.

Twelve years older and a few feet taller, the students of Karen Calvert's 1979-'80 kindergarten class have changed. Only weeks away from high school graduation, they have plans for the future.

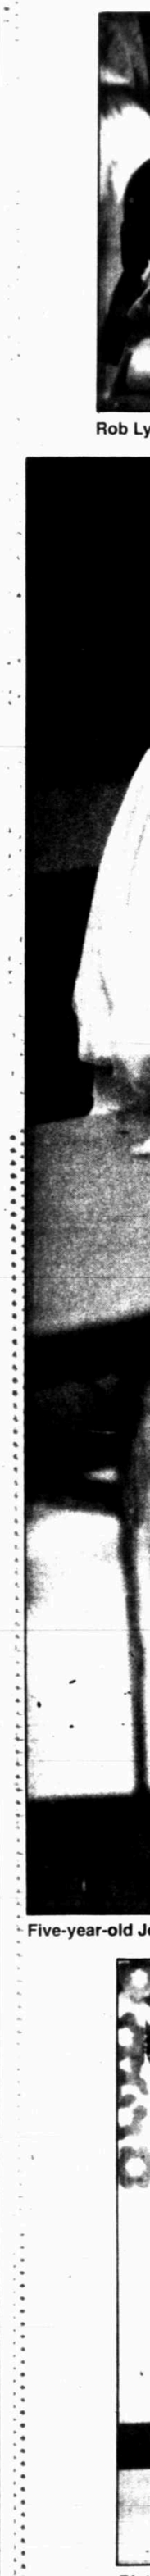

Calvert said she organized the reunion because she wanted to keep track of what the students — part of her first year-round kindergarten class of 20 morning and 20 afternoon students — were doing 12 years later.

"I remember being jealous of Mrs. Calvert because she could cut in a straight line," said Nikki Northcutt, 18, who said she has now mastered the skill.

"I remember making those ornaments out of Dixie cups and foil," said Lainie Mangum, 17. "I hang that on my tree every year." Mangum and 11 of her classmates, all seniors now at Westlake High School, attended a reunion at Barton Creek Elementary, where Calvert, 39, now teaches kindergarten.

Some thought it was fun. Tons of new friends to be made, and lots of new things to look at. Others thought it was kind of scary. Wasn't their idea of fun at all. In fact, they probably would like to put it off for at least one more year. Others, however, were certain they wanted to put it off for another year. Yes, you guessed it. Time once again for kindergarten age students to register for the fall semester. That time again when parents, with birth certificate, immunization records, and children in hand, converge on elementary schools throughout Midland in hopes of successfully getting their child registered and enrolled.

With Texas filings ready, Perot faces challenges of tough states

By Evan Ramstad
Associated Press writer

DALLAS — Mary Moline spent four days last week riding a bus from Greensboro, Pa., to volunteer for Ross Perot's upstart presidential campaign because the Dallas billionaire reminds her of industrialist Henry Ford.

"Henry Ford, he would do anything for his people. That's what Perot is known for," said Ms. Moline, who has written books and articles about Ford. "I feel like I'm in a place where history is being made."

She spent her first days helping double-check Texas petition signers' voter registration numbers in preparation for today's election ballot deadline, the nation's first and one of the toughest.

Perot will join volunteers from around the state in Austin this afternoon to present more than 200,000 signatures — four times the requirement — to election officials.

The Texas drive, because of the number of signatures and qualifying factors for them, was the first major test of Perot's prospective candidacy.

The not-yet Perot campaign faces tougher challenges now: getting on ballots in states where he is not well known, withstanding media scrutiny of 25 years of business prominence and presenting ideas on topics he so far has treated lightly or not at all.

Perot is not expected to declare himself in the race today, holding to a condition that most states get him on the November ballot. A spokeswoman, Sharon Holman, said Perot would confine his remarks to thanking the volunteers.

Newspaper: Harris County holds inmates despite ruling

HOUSTON (AP) — Dozens of Harris County jail inmates have been incarcerated for misdemeanor offenses only because they have been unable to pay their fines, a practice the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled unconstitutional, a newspaper reported Sunday.

An investigation of justice of the peace court records by The Houston Post found that many of the judges are imposing jail terms for minor misdemeanor offenses that carry fines of $500 or less.

The inmates, charged with such offenses as public intoxication, bad checks or minor traffic violations, are imposed jail time because they are unable to pay the fines.

The practice, which is putting an additional burden on an already overcrowded jail, was found unconstitutional in a 1971 U.S. Supreme Court ruling.

"It's disgusting," attorney James Oitzinger said of the sentencing practices. Oitzinger represents prisoners in a lawsuit against Harris County over jail conditions.

"The difference is 'can't pay' vs. 'unwilling to pay.' "

— Justice of the Peace Molly Maness

His co-counsel in that case, Gerald Birnberg, said the practice not only raises questions about the legality of the sentences but also about the proper use of limited jail space.

Jail crowding has been blamed on Harris County judges who are accused of being too willing to sentence defendants to jail terms. County officials contend the crowding comes from a backlog of state prisoners unable to be transferred out of the county jails because of a federal prison population cap.

The justices of the peace, however, claim they are living up to the Supreme Court's ruling by giving defendants the option of paying fines in installments, doing community service or serving out their time in jail.

They also say it is legal to sentence defendants to jail on the minor charges, all Class C misdemeanors, if a fine isn't paid and the defendant isn't indigent.

"The difference is 'can't pay' vs. 'unwilling to pay,' " Justice of the Peace Molly Maness said. "That's where the tough ones come in. If they are indigent, they should be out of jail."

But sources involved in the legal process told The Post that indigent defendants are indeed going to jail and that others do not have their options explained to them properly.

"The law says people who desire to lay out in jail can," said Justice of the Peace Kenneth Pacetti. "The vast majority say they'd rather serve their sentence."

Justice of the Peace David Patronella said "as long as you explore alternative sentencing with (indigent) defendants, then I think there is no problem (with jail)."

The exact number of prisoners on any given day serving time for fines is small, usually less than five. And their sentences are very short — with the judges usually giving them credit for $100 for each day served.

But Oitzinger said he's noticed those numbers rising. He said the judges are "taking advantage of the ignorance" of defendants.

Plane crash kills two near Houston

FULSHEAR (AP) — The crash of a vintage Chinese airplane that killed two men may have been due to an improperly attempted maneuver, some witnesses said.

The witnesses, who did not want to be identified, told the Houston Chronicle that the 1968 Nanchang CJ-6 military trainer did a high-speed fly-by over Covey Trails Airport. It appeared to attempt a roll just before crashing in a nursery south of the airfield about 4 p.m. Saturday.

Barclay Imle, 44, of Spring, and Sergei Bolotov, 36, of Fulshear, were dead at the scene, Texas Department of Public Safety officials said.

One witness said it appeared the pilot did not properly pull up the craft's nose just before the roll-over attempt. Another witness emphasized the plane was too low to complete the maneuver.

Federal Aviation Administration inspector Jerry Lidquester said the National Transportation Safety Board will investigate.

Security guard Willie Nowak said he heard an explosion and saw the plane hit the ground, then bounce up and burst into flames.

DPS officers identified the plane as a Chinese Yak. The plane's passenger seat is behind the pilot's seat. It was an original World War II-vintage plane, they said.

Fulshear is 33 miles west of Houston.

Midland College to host seminar on Americans with Disabilities Act

Staff report

San Francisco attorney Michael J. Lotito will be the keynote speaker at a May 21 seminar that will focus on the recently passed Americans with Disabilities Act.

Lotito

The seminar will run from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Midland College and registration fee is $35, which includes lunch. For additional information, call the MC Continuing Education department at 685-4518.

Lotito, a nationally acclaimed authority on ADA, has presented his workshop to the President's Committee on Employment of People with Disabilities and the Texas Governor's Committee on Disabilities.

He has co-authored three books: "Making the ADA Work for You," "What Managers and Supervisors Need to Know about the ADA," and "The Americans with Disabilities Act: A Comprehensive Guide to Title 1."

Meris Kidd, the area manager of the Texas Employment Commission, said in recent months that persons with disabilities have become viable options to the hiring community for several reasons.

The passage of the ADA by Congress in 1990 has made employers more aware of the disabled in the job market. The ADA goes into effect in June, which has again created interest in persons with disabilities, Ms. Kidd said.

Companies also are offered financial benefits for such hiring practices, she added.

"We have what is called the targeted jobs tax credit," said Ms. Kidd, who will help present the May 21 seminar. "It's for employers who hire people normally struggling to find jobs. One of the targeted groups is persons who have enrolled in or completed a rehabilitation program."

The credit, Ms. Kidd said, is 40 percent of the first $6,000 paid to the worker in his first full year of employment.

Knobby Sanchez, a vocational rehabilitation counselor with the Texas Rehabilitation Commission, said his organization can pay up to half of a disabled worker's salary for anywhere from one to three months depending on the training needed.

Sanchez said the TRC annually is placing between 120 and 140 disabled persons, ranging from those with mental health and mental retardation to clients with physical disabilities.

Sanchez said employers sometimes have the misconception that ADA is meant as affirmative action legislation. That is not the case, he said. "The ADA is not meant to get persons with disabilities to the front of the line. It's intent is to get them in line."

Author to present traveling-with-children workshop

Staff report

Gwynne Spencer, author of "Places to Go with Children in the Southwest," will conduct a Traveling with Kids Workshop Saturday at Pages and Prints Bookstore, 40 Plaza Center.

Spencer

Ms. Spencer opened her children's only bookstore, Trespassers William, in Albuquerque, N.M., in 1977 and later a branch in Santa Fe. She has a bachelor's of science degree in early childhood and elementary education and has taught first-grade reading as well as remedial reading in high school and the Job Corps. She regularly conducts classes at the New Mexico Family Educators Conference for parents who want to teach their children to read.

Her column, "Kids Books," is distributed nationally, and she currently is working on a series of children's biographies. Traveling with her son, to whom her book is dedicated, Ms. Spencer developed a number of activities to both entertain and enlighten even the youngest traveler, according to a press release provided by the bookstore.

There is no charge for the workshop, which begins at 10:30 a.m., but pre-registration is requested because space is limited. Workshop materials for the traveling tots will be available from Ms. Spencer during the workshop.

An informal come-and-go reception and booksigning for the general public will follow the workshop until 3 p.m.

For additional information, call the bookstore at 687-5172.

Jury deliberations begin in assault retrial amid worries of racial unrest

DALLAS (AP) — Jury deliberations in the felony assault retrial of Dallas County Commissioner John Wiley Price begin today, amid speculation that a guilty verdict could spark racial unrest similar to the recent Los Angeles rioting.

Attorneys delivered closing arguments in the controversial two-week trial Friday morning. Judge James K. Walker then made the unusual move of postponing jury deliberation until after the weekend.

Walker didn't explain why deliberations would not begin immediately.

The judge had earlier refused to grant a prosecutors' motion for a mistrial after three jurors said they received anonymously telephoned death threats warning them not to deliver a guilty verdict.

Price, who is black, is accused of assaulting white construction worker Tim Short, whose ankle was broken in an Aug. 2 melee.

Prosecutors said jurors would be afraid to deliver a guilty verdict, citing the rioting in Los Angeles surrounding the acquittal of four white police officers in the beating of a black motorist.

Police on Sunday said they would keep watch for signs that a guilty verdict in Price's case would ignite seething racial tensions in the city.

However, there were no plans to increase the number of officers patrolling the city today, said Cpl. Lisa Melgoza.

"We've only got so many officers," Cpl. Melgoza said. "We're aware — especially since the situation in L.A. — but we don't think the same thing would happen here. We're going to be ready for anything."

Victor Smith, president of the Dallas chapter of the NAACP, predicted Price would be found innocent.

"I have a strong feeling that the city of Dallas will do the right thing," Smith said. "We do not want something this insignificant to mushroom into something that will hurt everyone."

Joyce Ann Brown, an assistant to Price, said she has heard speculation that violence would erupt if the commissioner were convicted.

"The frustrations are still running wild," Ms. Brown said. "The people still haven't settled down from the Rodney King incident. I pray to God the verdict will be not guilty."

Ms. Brown said Price, who worked swiftly to end what was becoming a violent demonstration after the King verdict was announced, would again urge the community to remain calm.

"I think he would ask them not to burn Dallas down," she said.

Minority groups held meetings throughout the weekend, hoping to channel frustration into peaceful protest instead of violence.

Price is unable to comment before the verdict because of a gag order imposed by Walker.

During closing arguments Friday, defense attorney Billy Ravkind lashed out at prosecutors' claims that race had nothing to do with why Price, 42, was on trial. He claimed had Price been white, the trial would not have taken place.

"Race has got everything to do with everything," said Ravkind, who pointed out that no black witnesses were interviewed by police and none were presented before a grand jury.

Prosecutors argued that race was irrelevant to the charge and urged jurors not to consider the charges of racism as they deliberated.

"Race should not be an issue in this verdict," said Assistant District Attorney Paul Hamilton, who is black. "We've got enough problems in this city about race."

The commissioner's first trial ended last December in a hung jury.

If convicted, Price faces up to 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine. He also would be expelled from the commissioners' seat that he has held since 1984.

Public hearings on bullet train prepare to blast off

DALLAS (AP) — Texans get their chance this week to sound off on the $6 billion bullet train planned to zip passengers to the state's largest cities.

The Texas High-Speed Rail Authority will conduct 39 public meetings between Wednesday and June 25 in its study of effects on the train's proposed 600-mile route.

"There are a number of areas of concern, and we want anyone who may be affected to have an opportunity to give input," said Lena Guerrero, who heads the state rail authority.

Thousands of Texans are expected to testify. Many farmers and ranchers oppose the project, fearing North America's first 200-mph train would chew up the prairie, divide homesteads and disturb rural life.

A French-American consortium called Texas TGV won a state franchise last May to construct the rail system, which is to be privately financed. The first phase would connect the Dallas area and Houston in a 90-minute trip.

Service would then extend to Austin and San Antonio, completing the so-called Texas Triangle that is home to more than 60 percent of the state's 17.5 million residents.

Permits would be needed from more than 70 government agencies; electrical substations to power the trains would have to be built every 55 miles; and about 14,000 acres of prairie would have to be fenced off in at least 18 counties.

The train's exact alignment has not yet been set, but it is expected to pass through three ecological areas. The areas include 24 counties in which the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department has listed 40 animal species as endangered or threatened.

The route also would come within a quarter-mile of at least 60 sites known to contain prehistoric or historic artifacts. High-speed trains would produce noise measuring about 90 decibels — comparable to a jet taking off.

"The citizens of Texas still have George Bush's 'read my lips' speech ringing in their ears and are in no mood for our state government to negotiate socialist passenger train deals," said rancher Wesley Wisenhunt of Bell County.

Texas TGV officials say their environmental study will take residents' concerns into account.

The state has hired Denver-based Woodward-Clyde Consultants to conduct the study, which will take 18 months. The firm has conducted similar work for high-speed rail proposals in California and Spain.

Agriculture, air quality, threatened and endangered species, noise and vibration, socioeconomics and public health are among issues being studied.

The study also will consider alternatives to the currently proposed rail alignments, station sites and operating procedures. The option of building no bullet train also will be considered.

"The (train's) alignment will most likely change from where it is now, so any assumption about where it will end up is purely an assumption at this point," Robert Ryan, the consortium's project director has said.

"We will make every effort to avoid impacts on the communities."

For more information on the public meetings, residents may call Woodward-Clyde Consultants at 1-800-998-7787.

Murder case ended in wrongful conviction, DA says

■ Former Ector County assistant district attorney pleads on behalf of man accused of killing Catholic priest.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — An Andrews County district attorney says a man found guilty of killing a Catholic priest in 1983 was wrongfully convicted and is innocent of the crime.

James Harry Reyos has served more than eight years of a 38-year prison sentence for the murder.

"Despite my 16 years as a prosecutor, I came to the firm conclusion that it was physically impossible for Mr. Reyos to have committed the crime for which he was convicted and for which he has been in the Texas penitentiary for almost eight years," District Attorney Dennis Cadra wrote to Gov. Ann Richards.

Cadra became involved in the case during his stint as an assistant district attorney in Ector County, where Reyos was prosecuted, the Austin American-Statesman reported in its Sunday editions. Cadra handled the appeal for the county.

Last December, upon learning that the transcript was about to be discarded, Cadra decided to review it, hoping to resolve nagging doubts about the case. Cadra has since concluded that Reyos is innocent.

Reyos knew the Rev. Patrick Ryan, a priest at St. Williams Catholic Church in Denver City. Ryan had driven Reyos to New Mexico on Dec. 21, 1981, to pick up Reyos' truck. The truck was being held as collateral on a charge against Reyos of driving with a suspended license.

The two parted in Hobbs, N.M., shortly after noon. That evening, Ryan was tied up and beaten to death in an Odessa motel room.

His nude body was found the next day.

According to testimony from Reyos, he and the priest had engaged in homosexual relations at Ryan's home two days before his death.

Reyos testified that Ryan forced him to have sex with him.

"I personally believed then, and still believe, that the two men had consentual sex, but Mr. Reyos was unable to admit to being a homosexual," Cadra said.

About a year after Ryan's murder, Reyos called 911 in Albuquerque, N.M., and gave a garbled, drunken confession, according to court records.

"He gets drunk, goes to a pay phone, calls 911 and IDs himself as the murderer of Father Patrick Ryan in Odessa, Texas," said John Cliff Jr., Reyos' lawyer.

Reyos immediately recanted his confession. But it was legally admissible, and proved ample evidence for a guilty verdict. The prosecution had no other evidence linking Reyos to the crime, except for his admission that he and Ryan knew each other.

'Despite my 16 years as a prosecutor, I came to the firm conclusion that it was physically impossible for Mr. Reyos to have committed the crime for which he was convicted and for which he has been in the Texas penitentiary for almost eight years.'

— District Attorney Dennis Cadra

The defense argued that Reyos was in New Mexico at the time of the crime.

Reyos testified that after he and the priest parted in Hobbs, N.M., he bought gas and a gas cap. Receipts of the purchases were submitted as evidence. Reyos testified that he also stopped in Roswell, N.M., where he bought beer and ran into an old friend.

The friend testified that he and Reyos parted at 8 p.m. Later, getting progressively more intoxicated, Reyos says he drove to Tatum, N.M., bought gas, turned around and was headed east to Roswell, where he received a speeding ticket at 12:15 a.m. Mountain time.

That ticket is key evidence, according to Cadra. A state pathologist testified that the death occurred before midnight. But the priest did not check into the Odessa motel until 7 or 8 p.m., according to a motel clerk.

Despite Cadra's reservations, J. Anthony Foster, an assistant Ector County district attorney who prosecuted Reyos, said the jury chose to convict him.

Reyos has been denied parole five times, most recently last month.

Former airman repays his debt to British village

POLEBROOK, England (AP) — A former U.S. airman, moved by gratitude and guilt, has given 93 bicycles to the children of this town to repay a 48-year-old debt.

Roger Johnson, a doctor in Irving, was an Army lieutenant in 1944 when he borrowed a bicycle in Polebrook one day to get back to his base at a nearby airfield, where he was stationed briefly during World War II.

The war intervened, and the bike was never returned.

To make amends, he has spent $18,000 on bikes for the children of Polebrook, 45 miles north of London.

"For almost 50 years I've regretted taking that bike," Johnson, 68, said as he handed the bicycles over Saturday. "It's only now that I've been able to come up with a plan that will ease my conscience and even the score.

"The English people were just tremendous to all American airmen that showed up over here, and you people now are just as good as they were 50 years ago, so I hope you all have fun on your bikes," he said.

"When my twins woke me up Sunday morning with ear aches, First Care was there."

Dental Update
In the interest of better dental health

HOME RUN

Baseball season is here again. Most Americans look forward to this time when they participate in, or watch their team play in this all-American past-time. It is a thrill to watch Nolan Ryan pitch another no hitter and equally thrilling to see your child hit his or her first home run. Baseball is one of those sports we can begin as a preschooler and continue to enjoy even after retirement.

Is it possible for such a fun sport for all ages to create life-long injuries? Although the bone and joint injuries more common to football are rarely associated with baseball, there is significant risk of dental injury with this sport. In fact, there are more traumatic dental injuries associated with baseball than any other sport. This is because mouthguards are not routinely worn by baseball players. Balls that take a bad bounce can break or avulse front teeth, or cause other intra-oral injuries.

Preventing this type of injury is as simple as having your family dentist fabricate a custom mouthguard for you or your child. It could be one of the best investments you make in their future.

Students learn world of politics by acting it out

By Charlie Chitwood
Associated Press writer

DETROIT, Texas — President George Bush, Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton and possible independent candidate Ross Perot were at Detroit High School on a recent morning.

But when the class bell sounded at the end of the period, all three candidates headed for their lockers to get ready for the next class.

These weren't the real candidates, of course — George Bush was wearing a nice dress — these were three students acting the part for an eighth-grade history project assigned by their teacher, Tempie Johnson. The hopefuls and their campaign backers also had the encouragement of State Sen. Bill Ratliff at last week's rally.

Mrs. Johnson's class has turned their home room into a three-way campaign headquarters, complete with stickers, photos and all the up-to-date press clippings of the real campaign trail.

"I'd like to thank everyone for providing me with the delegates to again be the Republican nominee for the presidency," said "President Bush," also known as Mahona Brown. "I have some long-term goals that I still want to accomplish, but I'm a Republican president with a Congress full of Democrats. I'd like you all to remember Desert Storm, and know that I want to see improvement in the educational standards."

Chad Gibson, filling the role of Ross Perot, may have been taller than the Dallas billionaire, but his campaign has parallels with the real thing. He had to collect 100 signatures to be placed on the May 15 ballot.

"Gov. Clinton" — portrayed by Billy Vourskis — pledged to be the education president if elected and stressed commitment toward preserving the environment. The federal deficit and the creation of jobs were high on his list as well.

DEAR ABBY

Tax agents can get taxpayer out of trouble

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Please help me. I did a foolish thing, and now I'm afraid I'll lose everything and possibly wind up in jail!

Van Buren

Back in 1980, I was alone and raising my son and a younger brother. I figured out my taxes, and I owed $100. Abby, we didn't have enough money to eat the day before payday, and I wasn't able to come up with $5, let alone $100. I panicked and didn't file at all!

The following year, I was afraid to file because I was afraid their computer would show that I didn't file the year before and I would be in big trouble.

You can probably guess where this is headed — out of fear and stupidity, I have not filed since. I receive letters from the IRS periodically, but I just put them aside, hoping to clear things up "later."

I have dug myself into a very deep hole. Their last letter said I owed the IRS $3,000. I am willing to pay the money, but I can't pay it all at once. I am afraid the IRS will contact my employer and I will lose my job, or even get sent to jail. I need to know what to do. — IN DEEP TROUBLE

DEAR IN DEEP: It is time to take action. "Enrolled (tax) agents" are equipped to handle the most complex tax returns and, should it be necessary, are authorized to represent taxpayers before all administrative levels of the Internal Revenue Service. Many enrolled agents are former employees of the IRS and have undergone extensive training and testing in tax matters. (You may find one by writing to: The National Association of Enrolled Agents, 6000 Executive Blvd., Suite 205, Rockville, Md. 20852. The 24-hour message number is (800) 424-4339.)

According to Joseph T. Davis, executive vice president of the National Association of Enrolled Agents: "It is best to tell the IRS the truth, because they have heard all the stories. Your employer will not be notified, you will not lose your job, and you will not go to jail."

You can expect to be penalized monetarily for your failure to file, but those who come forward voluntarily receive more generous treatment than those whom the IRS "catches." The longer one waits, the stiffer the penalties.

A tax professional can help you explain your problem to the IRS and work out a reasonable payment schedule, so don't put this off. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Forgotten Relatives," who wondered why they had not received wedding gifts from this brother-in-law and that sister-in-law, brought back memories.

When I married my beloved husband 20 years ago, his whole family disapproved of me because I was divorced, had a 1-year-old son and was three years older than the groom. My divorce had left me penniless (long story), and I had little more than the clothes on my back.

No one gave me a shower, and our wedding gifts were (1) three sets of bedsheets, and (2) a chip-and-dip bowl.

Yes, it hurt, but on my wedding day, I received the greatest gift in the world — my wonderful husband. I never regretted our meager beginning; it developed character in me.

Now after all these years, his family treats me with love and respect. "Forgotten Relatives" should forget about wedding gifts they never received and be thankful for what she has. Life is too precious to waste energy on greed. — THANKFUL IN MADERA, CALIF.

DEAR THANKFUL: Your husband also received one of the greatest gifts in the world on his wedding day: a wife with values who appreciates and adores him.

People are eating them up! For Abby's favorite recipes, send a business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Slump? What slump?

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Wichita's Ray Holbert (7) is tagged out by Midland catcher Fausto Tejero.

■ The Midland Angels, pent up offensively for several games, broke their slump in high fashion Sunday with a 21-4 win over the Wichita Wranglers.

By Joe Wyatt
Staff writer

Slide rules ready?

The Wichita Wranglers captured three of their first four games at Angels Stadium by out-scoring Midland 26-12.

But by the time they played out the series finale on Sunday, that 14-run edge was long gone. Four Angels had four-hit afternoons and J.R. Phillips pounded a pair of three-run home runs as Midland halted its three-game skid in a big way, trampling Wichita 21-4 before a Mother's Day crowd of 2,079.

Midland amassed 26 hits in all — 13 for extra bases — and sent 11 batters to the plate in the third and fourth innings.

The Angels used the win to close out an otherwise dismal 10-game homestand with a 4-6 mark and what they hope is a slump best forgotten.

Hall/VDS fuels Belgian car

By Deke Houlgate
MRT Correspondent

INDIANAPOLIS, IN. — A second Pennzoil Hall/VDS car appeared on the track here Sunday when veteran driver Didier Theys began the long process of getting it up to speed to qualify for the Indy 500.

Theys, of Nivelles, Belgium, worked his speed up to 211 mph before the track shut down, ending qualifications until next Saturday.

John Andretti, already qualified in the primary Midland-based car, took the day off after winding up in the middle of the fifth row with a 4-lap speed of 222.644 mph on Saturday.

Six more starting positions remain to be filled before the "bumping" process begins.

Andretti will continue to practice for the race this week as the team concentrates on a comfortable race-day setup for him, as well as a qualifying attempt for Theys.

Lady Chaps blank Peace

Staff report

TYLER — The top-seeded Lady Chaparrals of Midland College began their quest for a third-straight national title here with a 6-0 triumph Sunday over Peace College of Raleigh, N.C., in the quarterfinal round of the NJCAA women's tennis championships.

Lucie Ludvigova and Adriana Isaza each scored 6-0, 6-0 victories and the rest of the Lady Chaps won without the loss of a set as MC advanced to today's quarterfinal round against Broward College of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

"We played well today and we've had good workouts," MC tennis coach Joe Williams said. "I don't forsee us even going to the doubles before it's over."

Broward did not need its doubles teams in the quarters either, dropping San Jacinto 6-0.

In other quarterfinal matches, Tyler defeated Odessa College, 5-1, and Cooke County got by Palm Beach, 7-2.

MC and Broward meet today at 10 a.m., while Tyler and Cooke collide.

Myriam Berthe, playing in MC's No. 1 slot, started the tournament with a 6-1, 6-2 win over Peace's Camille Walter. Ludvigova stunned Danielle Marx in the No. 2 position and Isaza's shutout was in the No. 3 spot, where she downed Lee Worrell.

Boba Tzvetkova stopped Suzanna Cobb, 6-1, 6-1 to shore up the No. 3 position. And MC got wins from Caroline Reynolds — 6-2, 6-2 — over Caroline Vinson and from Amy Richter — 6-4, 6-3 — over Sara Webster in the fifth and sixth singles slots, respectively.

Broward is the fourth seed here.

Bird's back; Celts fall

■ Cleveland evens its series with Boston, while Seattle cuts into Utah's lead, and New York pulls to a 2-2 tie with Chicago at Madison Square Garden.

Associated Press

BOSTON — Not even Larry Bird could save this day for the Boston Celtics, and now the Cleveland Cavaliers are even.

Old pro Larry Nance scored 32 points, including six on long jumpers in overtime, and Cleveland edged Boston 114-112 Sunday, knotting the Eastern Conference semifinal series at 2-2.

"He's not the same Larry of old, but he looked well and created some problems," Nance said.

Not enough problems to make the difference, though. Bird, who hadn't played since April 3 because of a bad back, had a chance to tie the score with 2 seconds to play but missed a layup.

"I went out and did what they asked, but I didn't play much. Overall, I thought we had a lot of chances to win the game. We just couldn't do it," he said

The Cavs' victory ended the Celtics' 20-game winning streak at Boston Garden and sent the series to Cleveland for Game 5 Wednesday night.

Bird spent the first period on the bench and wound up playing just 17 minutes. When he finally entered the game, it was to a huge cheer. When he left, it was after missing a layup with 2 seconds to play that could have sent the game into a second overtime.

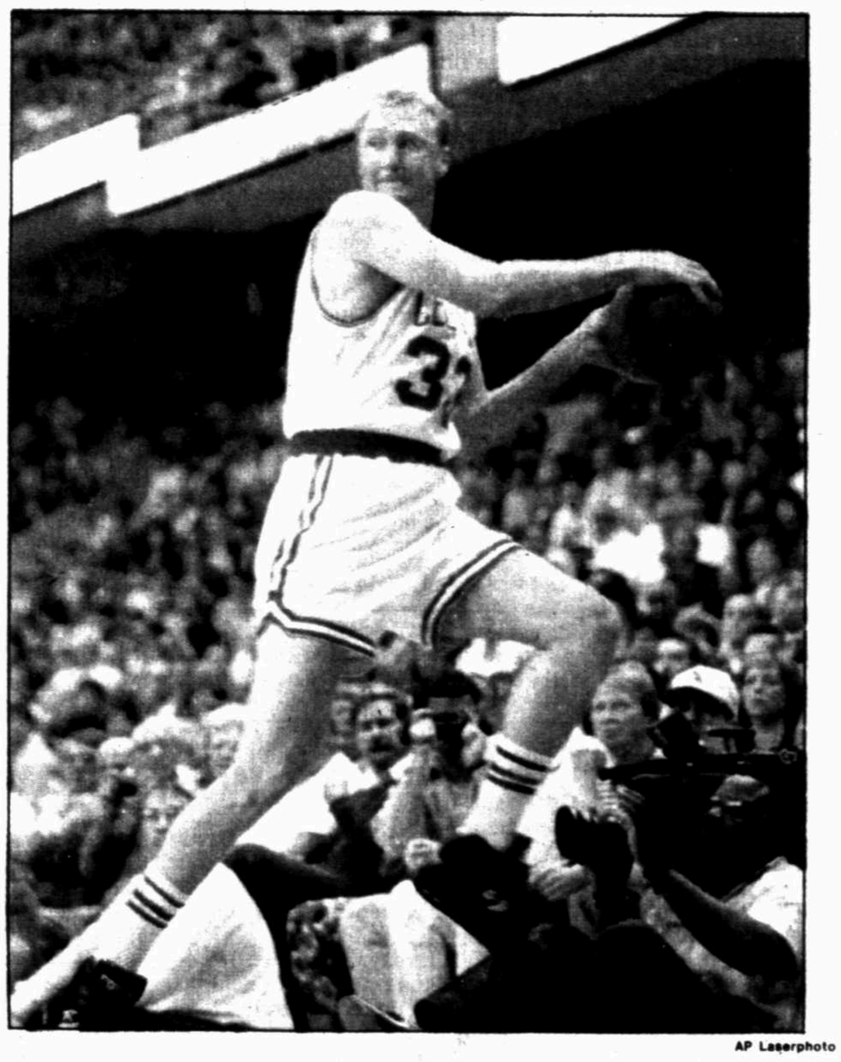

Bird wound up with just 4 points, hitting on just 1-of-5 field goal attempts, had 2 rebounds and a couple of assists.

"Bird playing didn't change a thing for us," Cavs coach Lenny Wilkens said. "We know what kind of a player he is. We were prepared for him."

Nance, who has played against Bird often in his 11 NBA seasons, was the superstar this time around. Playing 49 minutes, he hit on 13 of 16 floor shots and all 6 free throws. He also had 7 rebounds, 2 assists and 2 blocks.

"We got the win, and now we have to go home and back it up," Nance said. "This is definitely a big win for us. We kept our poise and concentration. The guys kept getting me the shots, and I got the ball to fall."

Not even the return of Larry Bird — who scored just four points — could lift the Celtics to a win at the Boston Garden Sunday in their playoff game against the Cleveland Cavaliers.

JIMMY PATTERSON

To the boys down at the yacht club

There's nothing quite as entertaining or relaxing as sitting back in the ol' living room recliner, flipping on the television, reaching for the remote control and ... not being able to find it.

Patterson

After looking under the couch, on top of the refrigerator and in the kid's toy box, there it was, buried in the Candyland game (where else would it be?). After retrieving it, it was again time to recline and enjoy one of my favorite TV sports — yachting.

Can't tell ya how long it's been since I've been able to enjoy a good, old fashion boat race.

The America's Cup, they call it. It's been around for something like 141 years. Every year about this time, a few rich guys from America beat a few rich guys from somewhere else in what has undoubtedly got to be the most boring sport in the history of mankind to watch on television. Ladies, you think golf is bad, tune in to the boat races one day this week.

Yacht racing? Who could possibly care, except a few guys named Biff and Skippy, and a shoe store somewhere in San Diego that suddenly has a run on deck shoes.

This is West Texas. Football is big here. So's baseball, basketball and golf. But there's not a body of water within a couple of hundred-thousand miles, so it's my guess the America's Cup might not be the most watched viewing option here this week.

West Texans probably aren't big on the rules of yacht racing, either. Who has the home sea advantage? Since it's a best-of-seven series, will there be a travel day?

In an Associated Press analysis of the first race of the championship series Saturday, the author — a "tactician" aboard one of the losing boats in the semifinals — said the U.S. captained boat, America3, has the edge in the series. Why? Let him explain ...

"I would give the edge to America3 probably because of a better sail choice," Tom Whidden said. "It used a masthead reaching the genaker and Il Moro (the Italian boat challenging America3) used a genaker that goes only to the top of the headstay, which isn't the masthead. It was not quite enough sail for the leg."

This is sports analysis at it's most riveting, wouldn't you say?

They don't have a pregame warm-up, batting practice or a shoot-around in yacht racing. What they do have is something called the "10-minute prestart maneuvering."

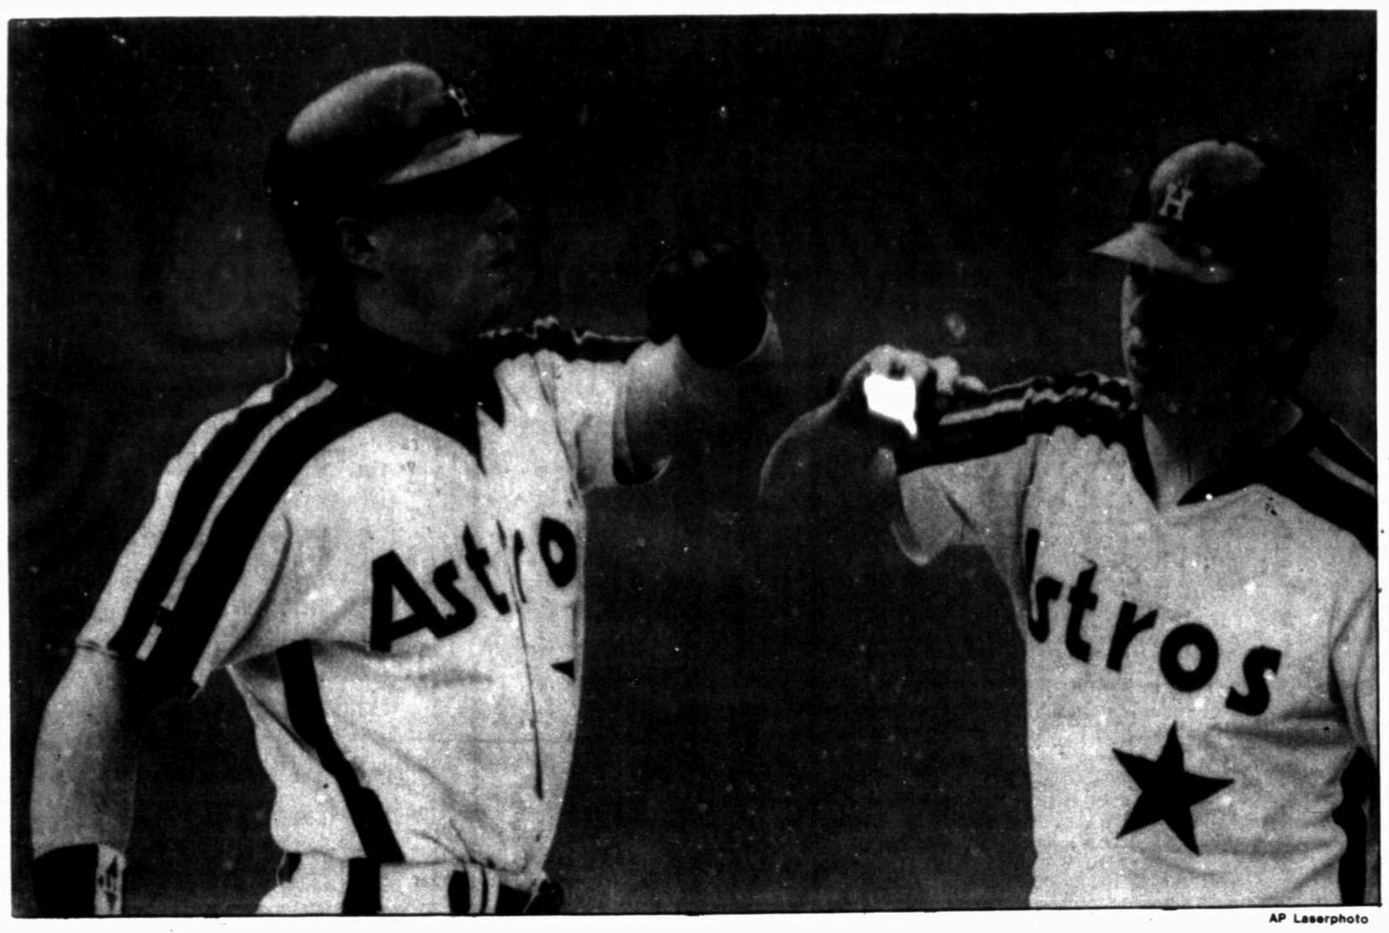

And the race's start Saturday was delayed because "the 500-boat spectator fleet was in the way," a problem the gallery at Augusta never causes.

The full name of the Italian boat is Il Moro di Venezia, which sort of makes me hungry for a big plate of lasagna. To top off everything, the skipper of the Italian boat is not Italian. He's from San Francisco. Go figure.

There have been 165 races in the America's Cup so far. Only something like five more to go, tops.

But if the Italian boat doesn't shape up or, ummm, ship out, I'll soon be forced to flip over to something with more appeal, like the World Football League.

The Astros' Jeff Bagwell is congratulated by the Houston bat boy after his 10th inning homer.

Bagwell blows bury Bucs, 6-4

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Jeff Bagwell broke out of a slump with a tying pinch homer in the eighth inning and a go-ahead solo shot in the 10th as the Houston Astros stopped a nine-game road losing streak with a 6-4 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates on Sunday.

The Astros had lost four in a row overall and hadn't won away from the Astrodome since the road opener April 24 at Atlanta. The Pirates lost for just the third time in 15 games at Three Rivers Stadium.

With the Pirates leading 4-3 after Jeff King's homer in the seventh, Bagwell tied it with a leadoff drive in the eighth, the first run allowed this season after 12 1-3 innings by reliever Bob Patterson. Bagwell, last season's NL Rookie of the Year, was in a 2-for-26 slump at the time.

Bagwell's game-winning drive in the 10th came off Roger Mason (1-3) and marked the first two-homer game by an Astro since Luis Gonzalez against Chicago on May 1, 1991. Casey Candaele added a two-out RBI single after Bagwell's second homer.

Cardinals 6, Braves 5

ST. LOUIS — The Atlanta Braves blew a lead for the second straight game as Tom Pagnozzi delivered a two-run single with two outs in the ninth inning to give the St. Louis Cardinals a victory.

In one of the greatest comebacks in their history, the Cardinals rallied from a 9-0 defecit to beat defending NL champs 12-11 Saturday night.

Atlanta led 3-0 in the third and was ahead 5-4 entering the ninth before the Cardinals loaded the bases with two outs against Alejandro Pena. Pena (0-3) blew a save opportunity for the second time this week.

NL Roundup

Phillies 9, Padres 3

PHILADELPHIA — Terry Mulholland pitched his second straight complete game and drove in two runs, and Mariano Duncan hit a three-run homer as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the San Diego Padres.

San Diego scored with two outs in the first inning against Mulholland (2-3) when Gary Sheffield singled and Fred McGriff hit his 10th home run. The Padres added a run in the second on pitcher Greg Harris' RBI single.

Mulholland then settled down as he scattered 11 hits, walked one and struck out one.

The Phillies tied the score in the fourth. John Kruk singled and moved to second on a groundout before Harris (1-3) walked Darren Daulton, Mickey Morandini and Ruben Amaro to force in a run.

Mets 3, Dodgers 0

NEW YORK — Sid Fernandez pitched seven shutout innings as the New York Mets beat Los Angeles to complete a three-game sweep and send the Dodgers to their eighth loss in nine games.

New York matched a club record with its 11th consecutive home victory and won for the 17th consecutive game in which it scored first.

Fernandez (2-3) once again tired in the middle innings after starting out unhittable, this time retiring the first nine batters in order. Fernandez, who has not completed a game in 25 starts since Aug. 10, 1990, allowed four hits, struck out seven and walked two. Paul Gibson, Tim Burke and John Franco finished with combined one-hit relief, with Franco getting his sixth save.

Reds 6, Cubs 0

CHICAGO — Tim Belcher pitched a two-hitter to snap a personal three-game losing streak as the Cincinnati Reds beat the Chicago Cubs.

Belcher (2-4) tossed his 13th career shutout and first since last Aug. 30, when he defeated the Cubs for Los Angeles. He walked two and struck out five for his first complete game of the season.

Darnell Coles had three hits for the Reds, including two doubles, and drove in two runs.

Danny Jackson, making his seventh start, dropped to 0-5. He is 1-10 in 21 starts as a Cub. The left-hander's only win for Chicago was last June 14.

The Reds took a 1-0 lead in the third on throwing errors by third baseman Doug Strange and Jackson, a single and Jacob Brumfield's RBI groundout.

Giants 8, Expos 3

MONTREAL — Kirt Manwaring's tie-breaking two-run double and Mike Felder's three-run homer highlighted a five-run 11th inning as the San Francisco Giants defeated the Montreal Expos.

With one out and runners on first and third, Manwaring doubled into the right-field corner off Bill Landrum (1-1) to make a winner out of Jeff Brantley (2-0).

Kevin Bass doubled to lead off the 11th and was sacrificed to third by Cory Snyder. Landrum then issued an intentional walk to Matt Williams to bring up Manwaring.

After a walk to Brantley, Felder hit a three-run home run to right off Landrum.

The Giants, who tied the score with a run in the ninth, took two of three in the series.

Slumping Surhoff, Brewers down Rangers, 6-2

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — B.J. Surhoff, batting just .135 at game time, drove in three runs Sunday and the Milwaukee Brewers ended a seven-game losing streak with a 6-2 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Surhoff had been in a 1-for-17 slump with runners on base before hitting a two-run single with two outs in the second inning. That hit came during a five-run burst against Jose Guzman (2-3).

Chris Bosio (3-2) gave up eight hits in eight innings. He struck out six and walked one. He shut out Texas until an RBI single by Ivan Rodriguez in the seventh inning, and the Rangers added a run in the eighth on Ruben Sierra's grounder.

Guzman allowed six runs, four of them earned, on 10 hits in eight innings. He had given up more than three runs in any of his previous six starts this season.

A throwing error by shortstop Dickie Thon started Milwaukee's big second inning. A walk, an RBI single by Dante Bichette and a double by Kevin Seitzer made it 2-0 and Surhoff followed with his key single. A double-play grounder by Paul Molitor capped the inning.

Surhoff drove in another run in the fourth with a grounder that scored Bichette, who had doubled.

AL Roundup

White Sox 5, Orioles 2

BALTIMORE — Jack McDowell became baseball's first seven-game winner this season, stopping the Baltimore Orioles on four hits for eight innings and leading the Chicago White Sox to a victory.

McDowell has won all seven of his starts. He struck out four, walked two and allowed only three baserunners until the eighth inning, when Tim Hulett hit a two-run single to spoil the shutout.

The seven-game winning streak is a career-best for McDowell. The 6-foot-5 right-hander retired 15 of the first 16 batters, the exception Chris Hoiles' single in the second inning.

Bobby Thigpen pitched the ninth for his ninth save.

Joey Cora, who came into the game with one hit in 13 at-bats, scored three runs for Chicago after receiving two walks and being hit by a pitch. The White Sox won two of three from Baltimore to become the first visiting team to win a series at Camden Yards.

Baltimore is now 13-4 at home.

Chicago took a 2-0 lead against Jose Mesa (1-3) in the first inning. Cora walked, Robin Ventura singled and Frank Thomas reached when Mike Devereaux dropped his fly ball to center. George Bell then lined a two-run single to right, giving him 21 RBIs in his last 21 games.

The White Sox added a run in the third when Cora stole third base and scored when the throw from Hoiles bounced into left field after being mishandled by Hulett.

A sacrifice fly by Thomas made it 4-0 in the fifth, and Cora drove in a run against reliever Mike Flanagan with a bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the sixth.

Baltimore did not a have a runner reach second until the eighth, when Randy Milligan walked, Hoiles doubled and Hulett singled to center.

Red Sox 10, Royals 6

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The first of Jack Clark's two home runs missed by just a few feet becoming the only ball ever to go out of Royals Stadium, and the Boston slugger broke loose to drive in six runs and power the Red Sox past Kansas City.

Clark, who began the game batting .174 with no home runs and only seven RBIs this season, jumped on Mike Magnante's pitch in the third inning and launched a towering three-run blast high over the left-field fence.

The ball landed on top of a concrete retaining wall enclosing the Jumbotron scoreboard approximately 440 feet away, bounced about 20 feet into the air and came to rest near the base of the chain link fence that encircles the stadium, about 480 feet from home plate.

Twins 10, Indians 6

MINNEAPOLIS — Pedro Munoz hit a three-run homer that highlighted a five-run burst in the first inning, sending the Minnesota Twins past the Cleveland Indians for a three-game sweep.

Kirby Puckett and Chuck Knoblauch each drove in two runs for the Twins. Mark Whiten homered, tripled and singled for Indians and drove in two runs.

The Twins outscored Cleveland 27-15 in the series, getting 13 hits in all three games. Minnesota has won 15 of the last 18 games against the Indians since September 1990.

Mark Guthrie (1-0) pitched two innings for the victory. He replaced rookie starter Pat Mahomes, who walked six in 3 2-3 innings. Rick Aguilera, the fifth Twins pitcher, got two outs for his ninth save.

Athletics 5, Yankees 2

OAKLAND, Calif. — Jose Canseco ended the longest homerless drought of his career at 71 at-bats, and Mark McGwire and Mike Bordick also connected in the sixth inning as the streaking Oakland Athletics beat the slumping New York Yankees.

Slusarski (3-1) and Dennis Eckersley combined on a two-hitter as the A's won their fifth straight game. The Yankees lost their six in a row.

Greg Cadaret (2-3) took a three-hitter and a 2-0 lead into the sixth inning before Canseco led off with his seventh home run, and first since April 18. McGwire followed with his major league-leading 15th home run.

Mariners 6, Tigers 2

SEATTLE — Rookie Dave Fleming won his fourth straight decision and the Seattle Mariners snapped a four-game losing streak, downing the Detroit Tigers.

The Mariners won for just the second time in 12 games. They bounced back after losing 13-0 to the Tigers on Saturday night.

Tony Phillips led off the game with a home run, but the Tigers did not do much more against Fleming (4-1). Fleming gave up six hits in six innings, struck out five and walked four.

Blue Jays 4, Angels 1

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Juan Guzman improved to 5-0 and Joe Carter drove in three runs as Toronto beat California to regain the AL East lead.

Guzman, a winner of 15 of his last 16 decisions dating back to last June 22, went the distance and allowed four hits and no walks. He struck out five as Toronto snapped California's four-game winning streak.

Dave Winfield went 0 for 5 against his former team, ending a career-high 17 game-hitting streak.

Others fall as Bodine wins second NASCAR race

Associated Press

NAZARETH, Pa. — An omen for Todd Bodine's second NASCAR victory may have come when Ernie Irvan couldn't even take the starting green flag because of an equipment problem.

Last June, Bodine won his first Busch Grand National event as two leaders fell from contention in the closing laps.

Irvan had his engine blow while he was in the lead with three laps to go at Dover, Del. Then, Davey Allison ran out of fuel under caution as he prepared to lead the final lap, sending Bodine to victory.

On Saturday, Bodine needed no such fortune. He had to hold off defending Busch series champion Bobby Labonte over the final 26 laps to win the Pontiac Pacesetters 200 at Pennsylvania International Raceway.

"We had to earn this one," Bodine said. "We didn't have to have two guys drop out in front of us."

Bodine beat Labonte by .42 second at 88.463 mph in the battle of Chevrolets on the 1-mile tri-oval. He won $19,950.

Mark Martin finished third in a Ford. Chuck Bown was fourth and Jimmy Hensley fifth.

A spin by David Donohue on the 166th lap set up the final 30 laps of green-flag racing, leaving Bodine and Labonte to battle for the lead.

Robert Pressley, who had been in the hunt to that point and led for 21 laps, then had a part break in his steering wheel assembly. He fell out of contention.

Labonte led 13 laps before Bodine took over for good on lap 175. He threatened several times but couldn't catch Bodine.

"Todd and I were pretty equal there at the end," Labonte said.

Martin had to come from two laps down to get back into contention. He led for 35 laps in the middle of the race but lost ground on a pit stop.

Sabatini whizzes through Italian Open unscathed

Associated Press

ROME — Gabriela Sabatini is at home in Rome.

For the second straight year, Sabatini beat Monica Seles to win the Italian Open. The scores Sunday were 7-5, 6-4 as the Argentine served notice that she's after Seles' title in the French Open, also played on clay.

"I always play well here in Rome, the crowd always helps," Sabatini said as the 10,000 spectators at the Foro Italico broke into loud cheers after the 1-hour, 50-minute match.

"I'm feeling stronger than I ever felt," said Sabatini, who changed her tactics after saving three set points to turn around the match.

It was the fourth Italian Open title for the 21-year-old Sabatini, the second straight over Seles.

Neither woman had lost a set in the tournament and Seles looked to keep her record that way as she raced out to a 5-2 lead. The Argentine made the mistake of allowing the No. 1 seed inside the baseline to launch sharply angled winners Sabatini could not reach.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

MONDAY, MAY 11, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Growing self-confidence will help you conquer new horizons this summer. You blossom both professionally and socially. Business travel opportunities will abound in October. Time invested in careful financial research will solidify your position at work. Be patient where romance is concerned. A spring wedding is a distinct possibility. Tackle a self-improvement program with enthusiasm.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: choreographer Martha Graham, fashion designer Valentino, MTV jockey Martha Quinn, actor Denver Pyle.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Take the time to talk with important people. It could bring both good publicity and valuable advice regarding your professional future. A sudden development in a legal matter could bring a quick decision.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Cooperate fully with your co-workers. Cultivate valuable contacts with occasional visits and frequent, informative letters. The words flow just right when talking with family members and friends.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Plans tend to short-circuit today. Smooth over any disagreements with your associates. Their support will help you achieve your objectives and finish the day on a high note.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Career progress is limited now. You must be patient. Exciting things can happen in affairs of the heart; focus your energy there. Your creative genius attracts higher-ups' attention.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A good day to sign papers or give your verbal OK. The future of a new alliance looks bright. Leap ahead in a new career direction. Your talents are in great demand.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Curb an urge to shut out the world today. A cornucopia of good things awaits you. Career and financial matters require your close attention. Be wary of new romantic entanglements.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be careful not to ride roughshod over your work associates — you could step on some important toes. When you act funny and lovable, others will do everything they can to help you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A good time to carry out your intentions regarding changes in your living quarters. Shop carefully for bargains. An opportunity to buy something wholesale deserves further investigation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A busy work day may not leave time for fun, but buckling down brings superb results. Teamwork will boost profits considerably. Contact someone at a distance this evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You can make promising fiscal strides via a partnership now. Put your heads and resources together. Home life matters most to you in the evening hours.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Creative ideas will come faster than you can remember them; jot them down. Communications are particularly unpredictable this afternoon. Avoid talking about money when around relatives.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You draw closer to the right people. Take a chance on romance or another key alliance. An opportunity to mix business with pleasure arises tonight. Protect your reputation by being very discreet.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠Q10432 ♡KQ32 ◇J1087 ♣Void

Partner opens the bidding with two no trump. What do you respond?

A.—You have no idea where this hand should play, so a bid of three spades won't allow for sensible exploration. Start with three clubs, to check on whether partner has four cards in either major suit.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠Q10432 ♡KQ32 ◇J1087 ♣Void

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
2 NT	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Partner has denied a four-card major, but he might still have three spades. To investigate that possibility, bid three spades. With three-card support, partner will either raise or cue-bid, depending on how good the North hand is.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠Q10432 ♡KQ32 ◇J1087 ♣Void

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
2 NT	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
3 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Despite the failure to locate a major-suit fit, you are worth one last try. If partner has four diamonds and not too many wasted values in clubs, there might still be slam in the hand. Bid four diamonds.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠Q10432 ♡KQ32 ◇J1087 ♣Void

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
2 NT	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
4 D	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
3 NT	Pass	4 ◇	Pass
4 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—No, North's four no trump is not Blackwood. Partner is denying interest in diamonds and, therefore, must have a five-card club suit, or a very strong four-card holding. It's time to throw in the towel. Pass.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠Q10432 ♡KQ32 ◇J1087 ♣Void

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
2 NT	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
3 NT	Pass	4 ◇	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Partner likes diamonds! Four hearts is not a suit (North has already denied four hearts), so it must be a cue-bid. Just to make sure that partner is aware of the duplication in clubs, cue-bid five clubs.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠Q10432 ♡KQ32 ◇J1087 ♣Void

The bidding has proceeded:

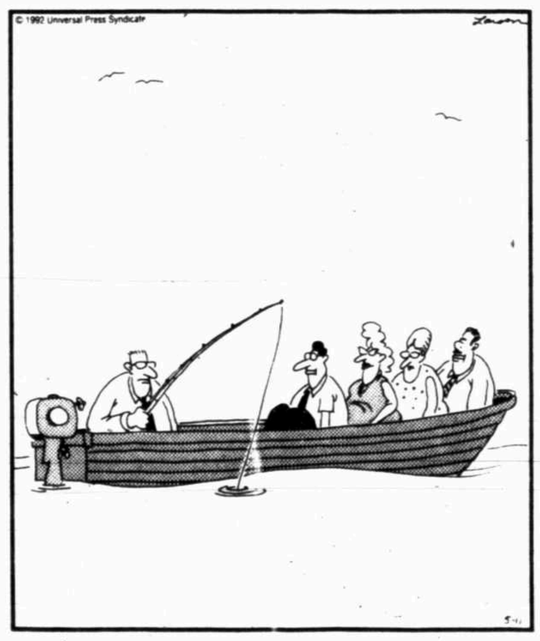

North	East	South	West
2 NT	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
3 NT	Pass	4 ◇	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	5 ♣	Pass
5 ◇	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—You have asked partner to evaluate his hand for slam, and a verdict has been rendered. Respect North's decision and pass. Partner probably has too much in clubs to think there can be reasonable play for 12 tricks.

Springsteen's 'Saturday Night Live' appearance is hot ticket

NEW YORK — Bruce Springsteen's network TV debut was the hottest ticket in town Saturday night as he ignited the stage of "Saturday Night Live" with three new songs.

Springsteen

A little before midnight, the words, "BRUCE SPRINGSTEEN! YOU'RE ON STANDBY!" came over the sound system in Studio 8H. The audience, even the VIPs packed group in the Green Room, erupted in cheers.

Springsteen, who recently kicked off his comeback with the simultaneous release of two albums, "Lucky Town," and "Human Touch," showed he was still The Boss as ambled onto the studio's side stage.

Wearing a black leather vest, paisley shirt, jeans and black boots, Springsteen showcased his new tunes, "Lucky Town," "Living Proof" and "57 Channels." He seemed at times a little constrained by the tiny stage and the cameras just two guitar lengths away.

But Springsteen, whose new albums haven't sold as well or gotten the airplay of previous classics such as "Born To Run," made it clear he's back with a rollicking, hard-edged performance.

BOSTON — Jazz drummer Max Roach is angry about the social ills brought to the fore by the Los Angeles riots.

When Roach gets mad, he often translates that emotion into music.

"Of course we are angry," Roach said Saturday at the Berklee College of Music. "The riots were caused by the police getting off for beating this man. But we were angry anyway, before this."

If history holds true, Roach may compose and play powerful music inspired by the upheaval. A jury last month acquitted four white police officers in the beating of Rodney King, a black motorist, touching off three days of rioting in which 53 people died.

After a 1976 massacre of blacks in Soweto, South Africa, Roach wrote "South Africa: God Damn," a powerful drum solo.

A decade ago, when the Reagan administration began cutting social program spending, Roach produced "The Dream, It's Time," a work played behind Martin Luther King Jr.'s "I Have a Dream" speech.

"Denial and racism is what helped create this new music, which dominated the 20th century," Roach said. "It came out of the same stuff we're dealing with right now."

RADNOR, Pa. — If she could be bad for just one day with no consequences, Oprah Winfrey said she would "eat everything humanly possible."

"I'd just enjoy it and take great pleasure from all the grease on the potatoes," said the actress, producer and talk-show host with the fluctuating waistline.

Winfrey's weight has made news for years. Her syndicated show, "The Oprah Winfrey Show," scored its highest ratings in November 1988 when she turned up slim in tight blue jeans.

She attributed the segment's popularity to a social obsession about being thin. Soon she too was part of that obsession.

"After the diet show, I'd go to a restaurant and you could hear people become silent . . . watching me," Winfrey told an interviewer in this week's TV Guide. "I could see them whispering to each other about what I was eating."

DE KALB, Ill. — Gwendolyn Brooks, who succeeded Carl Sandburg in 1968 as poet laureate of Illinois, received an honorary doctorate from Northern Illinois University.

Brooks, 74, who lives in Chicago, added the accolade Saturday to many others, among them a Pulitzer Prize for her 1950 volume of poetry, "Annie Allen." She was the first black writer to win a Pulitzer.

"Poetry is life distilled," she told students in a 1989 visit to the suburban Chicago school. "Tell your truth. Don't try to sugar it or make it nice or proper or normal or happy or smooth if it doesn't want to be."

Brooks graduated from Chicago's Englewood High School and Wilson Junior College, now known as Kennedy-King College.

DETROIT — Rosa Parks, whose courage on an Alabama bus encouraged the modern civil rights movement that ended legal segregation and discrimination, was honored by Michigan educators for her contributions to human rights.

Ms. Parks, 79, received the Michigan Federation of Teachers' Walter A. Bergman Award, named for the union's first president. Bergman's participation in a 1961 freedom ride in the South ended in a beating by Ku Klux Klansmen.

"It's a great day to know the time has come when we can be together and enjoy fellowship together without fear of being molested or attacked," Parks told teacher's union members at their annual convention.

The refusal by Parks, who is black, to give up her bus seat to a white man in Alabama on Dec. 1, 1955, launched the 381-day Montgomery bus boycott. The protest organized by the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. helped put civil rights on the nation's agenda.

Credit markets: Rate cut possible

Analysts see Fed action despite recent reports pointing to recovery

By Kenneth N. Gilpin
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Even though recent economic data point to a recovery, a number of credit market analysts continue to assert that the Federal Reserve Board may cut short-term interest rates again by early June.

The prospects for another Fed easing seemed to dim last week after the Labor Department reported that non-farm payroll employment rose by 126,000 jobs last month and that the unemployment rate slipped a notch, to 7.2 percent.

The rise in employment was a bit larger than most economists had expected and was seen by some as evidence that the underpinnings of a recovery are now on solid ground.

"These numbers are very encouraging and consistent with the thought that they are going to do better," said Robert A. Brusca, chief economist at Nikko Securities.

But others noted that the report contained mixed signals: job growth, while encouraging, was concentrated in a few service sectors. Moreover, a decline in average hourly wages suggested that consumers would have to spend cautiously.

"There were parts of this uneven report that were weaker than I would have guessed," said Donald J. Fine, chief market analyst at the Chase Manhattan Bank. "The recovery has not yet turned into an expansion."

Weak growth in the money supply, particularly M-2, the aggregate most closely followed by the Fed, is another worry, some analysts said.

For these reasons, expectations of another Fed easing "are better deferred than abandoned," Susan Hering, an economist at Salomon Brothers, wrote in the firm's weekly Comments on Credit.

For the Fed to be convinced that another cut in the overnight Federal funds rate is necessary, said Donald H. Strazheim, chief economist at Merrill Lynch & Co., it would need to see continued weak money growth, lower inflation and generally weak economic data.

Leonard J. Santow, a managing director at Griggs & Santow Inc., a financial consulting firm, predicted that the next round of economic reports would help tip the balance toward another Fed easing.

"When all is said and done, the reports will show the economy did not look that robust in April," Santow said. "The numbers for January and February gave an unrealistic sense of what was going on."

Even as they acknowledged that economic data and political pressures might force the Fed's hand, some questioned what another quarter-point cut in the funds rate, to 3.5 percent, would accomplish.

There is little reason, for example, to assume that another cut in the funds rate would reduce long-term bond yields, which have been mired in a trading range of 7¾ percent to 8⅛ percent for more than three months. Indeed, bond yields were trading at around 8 percent in the spring of 1989, when the Fed's target for the funds rate was at 9¼ percent.

Cable pictures pay-per-view '90s gold mine

By Steven Vonder Haar
N.Y. Times News Service

Lights ... camera ... competition.

Stage cues like these may not be used by movie directors, yet they may very well describe what's ahead for businesses that try to bring Hollywood to your TV set.

Cable television, which established a beachhead in the home market during the 1980s by piping sports, news and music videos into your living room, now has its sights set on grabbing an even bigger chunk of your entertainment dollar.

The expansion of pay-per-view television during the next few years is expected to spark a showdown between cable operators and video rental stores, industry experts say. At the same time, pay-per-view may steal customers from premium television services like Home Box Office, which helped to launch the cable industry nearly two decades ago.

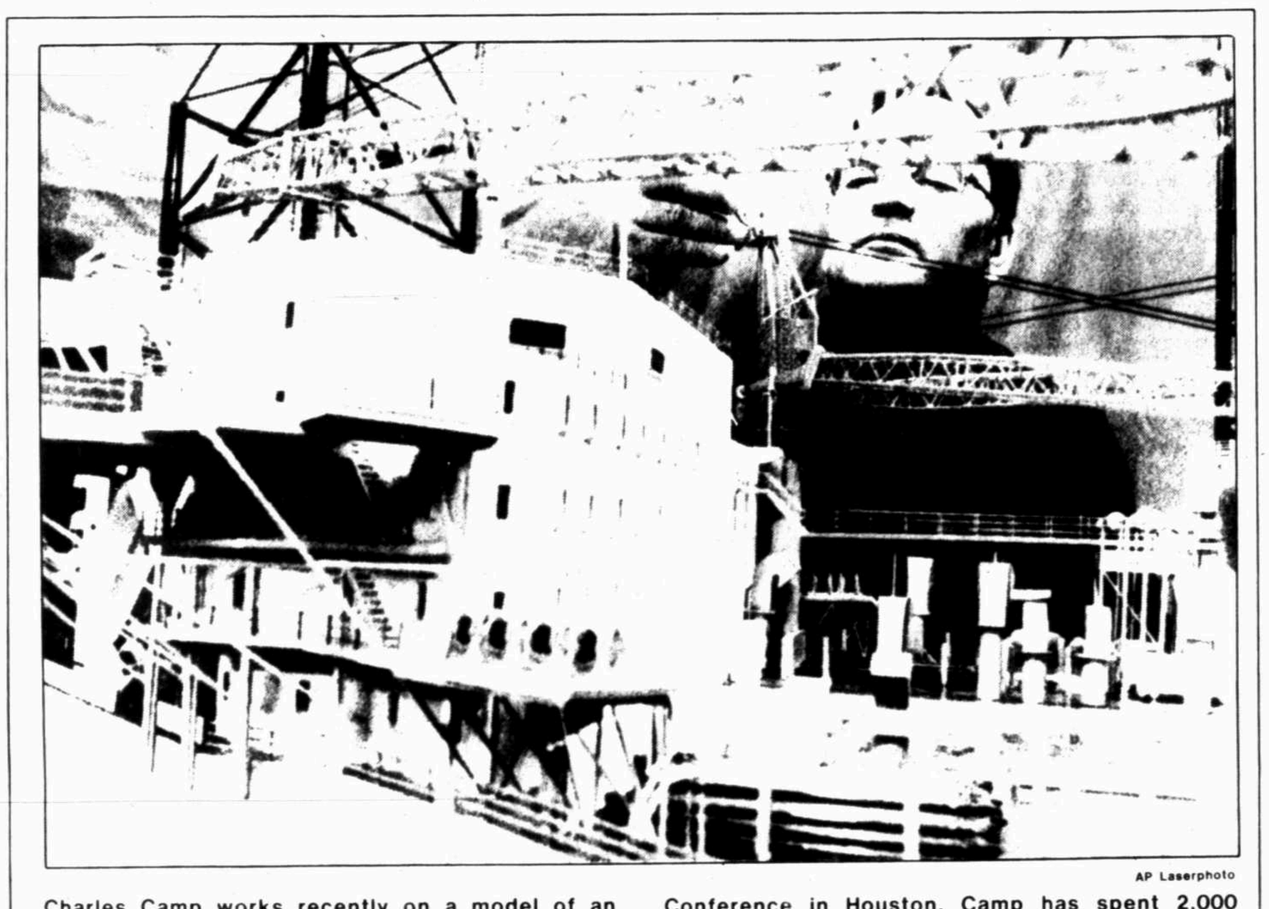

And although cable operators have dreamed of tapping into the potential gold mine of pay-per-view since the mid-1970s, the services have never been touted as highly as they were last week at the cable industry's annual convention in Dallas.

Ad camps send altruistic spots

NEW YORK (NYT) — An advertising campaign encouraging mothers to get their infants off to a healthy start in life is getting off to a healthier start than most such public service efforts.

Johnson & Johnson is sponsoring a television commercial selling the concept of prenatal care rather than its baby powders or lotions. The spot, created by the Lintas New York agency, features scenes of pregnant women drinking alcohol, smoking and taking drugs, during which an announcer urgently warns, "Everything you do to your body you do to your baby."

More and more consumer marketers are augmenting their ads these days with altruistic messages aimed at achieving goals like eliminating hunger, advancing brotherhood or fighting cancer.

Charles Camp works recently on a model of an offshore drilling rig for the Offshore Technology Conference in Houston. Camp has spent 2,000 hours on the project.

Detail-minded firms inch close to reality

By Greg Hassell
Associated Press writer

HOUSTON — Charles Camp can't remember the first model he ever built, but he does remember hearing about it from relatives.

"My mother and dad said their marriage license went out the window as a paper airplane," Camp said. "I was 6 years old. After that I started whittling model airplanes out of wood."

What started as a childhood passion is now a profession for Camp, a self-employed model maker in Houston. Amazing in their detail — Camp spent 2,000 hours on a recently completed model of an offshore oil rig — his models typically cost anywhere from $8,000 to $25,000.

But that doesn't afford him a lavish lifestyle. His three-bedroom house is, after all, 80 percent workshop and only 20 percent living quarters.

'A picture is worth a thousand words. And a model is worth a thousand pictures.'
— Melton Williams, United Scale Models

"I haven't tried to make a lot of money with this. I do it for the aesthetics," the 53-year-old Camp said. "I make a decent living, but I'm never going to get rich."

While independent mavericks like Camp work on their own, model making is serious business for a dozen Houston companies that construct everything from miniature skyscrapers and oil rigs to full-sized mock-ups of Army tanks.

All are small businesses. The largest, United Scale Models, employs about 50 people.

"Our primary work in the early days was models for petrochemical plants," said Melton Williams, vice president at United Scale Models. "That dried up, unfortunately. So we got into other areas like making training mock-ups for the U.S. Navy, Air Force and NASA."

Workers at United Scale are putting finishing touches on a full-size replica of a space shuttle cockpit.

United Scale and the local model-making business rode the oil boom along with the rest of Houston. There were nearly 40 model-building companies here then, churning out in miniature much of the development and offshore drilling furiously taking place on a larger scale.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Delaying IRA withdrawal brings tax kicker

By Bill Doyle

Q: Because I will be 70 years old in February, I will have to start making withdrawals from my individual retirement accounts, which are in mutual funds and bank certificates of deposit.

How do I determine how much I must withdraw annually beginning next year, particularly when each account continues to grow in value?

Doyle

A: First off, you will not be required to make an IRA withdrawal next year. The rules say you must make your first annual minimum IRA withdrawal by April 1 of the year following the year in which you turn age 701/2. You will reach that point in August 1993. That means you can put off your first required IRA withdrawal until April 1, 1994.

But there is a tax kicker in such a delay. That first required withdrawal will be for what the Internal Revenue Service dubs your "701/2 year." This applies whether you take it in the year in which you become 701/2 or in the early part of the following year – 1993 or 1994, in your case.

After that first withdrawal, you must make another minimum withdrawal by Dec. 31 each and every year. So, if you take your 701/2 year withdrawal in 1994, you will have to make your next withdrawal by Dec. 31, 1994.

Two IRA withdrawals in one year will increase your income and, most likely, your income tax liability. With this in mind, many folks in your situation make the first required IRA withdrawal late in the year in which they turn 701/2.

How much you must withdraw each year is determined by your life expectancy or the joint life expectancy of you and your IRA beneficiary, based on tables in IRS Publication 590.

The happy fact that your IRAs continue to grow in value presents no problem. To learn how much you are required to withdraw each year, add up the values of all your IRAs at the close of business on Dec. 31 of the preceding year and divide by the applicable divisor in the Publication 590 life expectance table.

Q: I have three IRAs, one in a mutual fund, one in AT&T stock and the third in CDs. When I pass age 701/2, I assume I must redeem the mutual fund shares and sell the stock, and add that money to my IRA CDs. I would then use the life expectancy divisor to determine the amount I must withdraw.

Is my assumption correct?

A: Thankfully, no! You needn't unload everything from the other accounts and pile the money into one remaining account.

After determining the amount of a required IRA annual withdrawal, you may take that money out of any one or more of your IRAs you choose – leaving the others untouched.

There was a time when the IRS decreed that when required withdrawal time arrived, people with two or more IRAs had to make equal percentage withdrawals from all their accounts. That brought on so much flack the revenooers backtracked. Now you can pick the account from which you want to make withdrawals.

Q: How do I report IRA withdrawals on my income tax return? I pay estimated tax quarterly. Should I increase my estimated tax payments as soon as I start receiving IRA withdrawals?

A: Unless Form 1040 is changed for 1992, IRA withdrawals, which the IRS calls "distributions," are reported on Line 16. If all of the money you put into the IRA was tax-deductible your entire withdrawal is taxable. If part of your contributions were non-deductible, a complicated calculation determines what part of the withdrawal is tax-free.

Increase your estimate tax payments if your adjusted gross income runs up against new limits spelled out in the Form 1040-ES instruction booklet. Otherwise, you are safe if your estimated quarterly payments equal or exceed your 1991 tax.

ANGELS: 10-game road trip begins ruts they have a game like this. It's bound to happen," said Midland rightfielder Bobby Jones, who was 4-for-6 and scored four runs.

(From 1C)

"It gets contagious. When the guy in front of you gets up and hits the ball hard, you want to do the same. We all exploded at once. It's a good sign."

Rod Correia, Ray Martinez and Jim Edwards joined Jones with four hits, helping righthander Steve Peck (2-1) to the win. Peck worked 8 innings, stumbling only during the Wranglers' three-run sixth.

But Wichita starter Pedro Martinez (3-2) came out stumbling. Martinez, who gave up doubles in each of the first two innings, gave up a great deal more as he faced nine of the 11 Angels that batted in the six-run third inning.

"I think we've been hitting the ball all right, but it just hasn't been falling for us," said Ray Martinez, who helped make it fall favorably Sunday with a four-hit effort that included a triple, a double and three RBI. He also scored four times.

"When one or two players start swinging the bat the rest of the guys come up and do it too."

Like Phillips, whose homer in the fourth inning dropped behind the wall in right-centerfield, handing Midland a 10-1 advantage. He placed his second three-run hit over the right-field fence as Midland put four more runs on the board in the sixth.

'It feels good to get the ball out of the park a couple of times, but I still need to cut down on the strikeouts," said Philips, who fanned four times against three different pitchers. "Still, it's a good day. Strikeouts have always been a concern, but I'll take a 2-for-6 day with two home runs and six RBIs anytime."

Phillips, who also homered during the Angels' 9-3 loss Saturday night, now has four for the year.

Every Angel starter hit safely and scored at least one run. Martinez, who collected his triple, double and first single by the fourth inning, had three tries at hitting for the cycle but the home run never came. Martinez had to settle for another base hit over his final three at bats.

Edmonds doubled three times and has seven two-baggers for the season.

And catcher Fausto Tejero hit his first home run as an Angel, taking a Pedro Martinez pitch out to leftfield with Ray Martinez on base in the third inning.

The Angels played solid defense, turning a pair of double plays behind Peck. And Jones, who swatted one of the Angels nine doubles, also nailed Ray Holbert at the plate with a perfect throw that ended a Wichita threat in the fifth inning.

"The ball was hit hard to me ... I just got off a good throw and let Fausto put the tag down," Jones said.

The Angels begin a 10-game road trip today in Little Rock, Ark., when they meet the Arkansas Travelers at 7:30 p.m. in the first game of a five-game set. Midland then moves on to meet the Jackson Generals for five games.

NBA: Knicks stop Bulls for 2-2 tie

(From 1C)

Knicks 93, Bulls 86

NEW YORK — The New York Knicks need more than Patrick Ewing to beat Chicago, and they got it.

Xavier McDaniel, Gerald Wilkins and John Starks each outscored their All-Star teammate and the Knicks pulled even in their playoff series with the defending champion Bulls.

The outcome tied the best-of-7 series 2-2, with Game 5 to be played at Chicago Stadium Tuesday night.

McDaniel scored 24 points, Wilkins 17, Starks 16 and Ewing 15 for the Knicks, who have held the opposition under 90 points in eight of nine playoff games.

Michael Jordan had 29 points for the Bulls, but only nine in the second half on 3-for-11 shooting. Scottie Pippen and Horace Grant scored 13 each for Chicago, which played the fourth quarter without coach Phil Jackson after he was called for his second technical foul with 4.4 seconds left in the third period.

Ewing sat out the last 5:29 of the third quarter and the first 5:01 of the fourth after being whistled for his fourth foul.

While he was out, the Knicks went from a 4-point deficit to a 5-point lead.

SuperSonics 104, Jazz 98

SEATTLE — Ricky Pierce broke out of a playoff scoring slump with 31 points and the Seattle SuperSonics held Utah scoreless for almost 5½ minutes in the fourth quarter in a victory to cut the Jazz lead to 2-1 in a Western Conference semifinal series.

The Sonics trailed from the opening two minutes until the fourth quarter, when they held Karl Malone, who had 30 points, scoreless in the final 12 minutes. Seattle held the Jazz to 17 points in the fourth quarter.

Pierce, who averaged just 12 points in the first two games, hit nine of 17 shots and was 13 for 13 from the free throw line for his top scoring game in three playoff series in two years in Seattle. His career playoff high is 35.

The Sonics can tie the series with a victory in the Seattle Coliseum Tuesday night. Game 5 is Thursday night at Salt Lake City.

John Stockton added 23 for Utah, but Jeff Malone, who averaged 27.5 points in the first two games, was held to 13.

Trailing 81-78 after three quarters, the Sonics tied it at 85-85 but fell behind again when Stockton hit a 17-footer with 8:55 to go.

Il Moro wins closest Cup race ever

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Il Moro di Venezia made history for its country and the America's Cup, posting Italy's first finals victory with the closest finish in any finals race Sunday.

Outstanding crew work, masterminded by skipper Paul Cayard, earned Italy a three-second win over America3 that tied the best-of-7 series at 1-1. The third race is scheduled for Tuesday.

"It was a great race," said Cayard, a San Francisco native. "It's been a long time in the America's Cup since we've had a race like that."

After the race, America3 (America Cubed) flew a protest flag about the way the Italians finished. The U.S. boat still had to file an official protest later Sunday to challenge the outcome.

The quick thinking of Il Moro's crew, an asset throughout the race against a seemingly faster boat, was most valuable as both boats sprinted to the finish in the final seconds.

America3 had cut away at Il Moro's 31-second lead after the seventh leg of the eight-leg race and seemed to be gaining as both boats approached the finish line on the downwind leg.

With the boats sailing side-by-side and neck-and-neck, Il Moro's crew eased out on the gennaker, the sail in front of the boat, allowing it to billow across the line before any part of America3 crossed. America3 apparently protested the issue of which part of a boat must cross for it to finish.

The previous closest finish in a Cup finals race was 26 seconds in a race between Weatherly of the United States and Gretel of Australia on Sept. 22, 1962. In one race during this year's challenger finals, Il Moro beat New Zealand by one second.

Il Moro's victory was Italy's first in its first finals appearance since it began battling for the 141-year-old prize in 1983.
