rica and South America. The present president is Lady Farmoor. Mrs. Ruth J. Maurer, head of a chain of beauty shops, said recently at a national convention of beauty show owners that few American women understand the art of make-up. "Nine out of ten women bungle and abuse what is a real art and has been looked upon as an art through the ages," she said. "All the famous beauties of history spent a great deal of time and money on perfumes, cosmetics and milk and perfume baths. But a walk down any large city avenue will convince you that the American woman, instead of achieving beauty, usually makes herself look worse than ever. Every woman must make a careful study of her own face and features. Half of the women have no idea what they really look like."

HEART-HOME PROBLEMS

Loves an Indian, Afraid to Wed Him
Dear Mrs. Thompson: Last summer when I was visiting in Canada, I met the only man I will ever love. Those weeks were the happiest ones of my life. There came the time when I was ready to leave and he told me he loved me but told me the great obstacle. He is part Indian. His grandmother is a squaw. I never suspected such a thing.

I was too stunned to say a word. He is wonderful looking, strong and athletic, and a college graduate, and holds a much better position in Winnipeg than most men of my acquaintance do here. After that night, I went to Chicago and entered training as a nurse in a large hospital. I tried my best to forget. I saw so much of sickness, worry, responsibility and death that I became disgusted with life in general and came here. The man I loved is coming here and what shall I tell him? I love him with all my soul and I can't be happy without him.

RACHEL
Foolish girl. You have allowed prejudice to run away with your sense. What difference does it make if he is part Indian? He is educated, he is strong, he is a success in business, and he is capable of making you a good husband. Indian blood certainly isn't a bar sinister, except in the minds of unthinking bigots.

Widow and Widower
Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a widow with one child and I am keeping house for a widower with children. He tells me he loves me better than any woman in the world and that he is true to me, but he deceived me once. I forgave him. The other day I found an envelope addressed to a girl in his grip and I fixed to leave him. He said if I did he would kill me and himself. Now he is good to me every other way, buys me lots of nice gifts. He won't do much I ask him around the house, but he does everything his daughter wants right away. Ought I waste my life on him?

S. C. A.

If he loves you better than anyone else in the world, he will ask you to marry him. If he doesn't, all soon, you should leave his employment.

Frantic Mother
Your boy's decision to enter the navy may be an honest desire to escape his bad companions and bad record. Whatever manly qualities there in him, the navy will bring out. He will find out that the world is large and wonderful, and learn a trade that will enable him to earn a living when his enlistment is over; for the jobs of today have to be skilled in something or other. I'm not writing an enlistment tract, but only attempting to allay your fears.

Ignorant Wife
I'm sure you won't be an "ignorant wife" long. Public librarians are glad to help persons select their proper books. Place yourself in their hands, and let them direct your reading for five or six months; then you'll be able to guide yourself.

Worried Wife
You want to know it's true that a lost wedding ring means unhappiness for a couple. Pure nonsense.

A novel correspondence course has been offered by Miss Chloe C. Baldrige, director of rural education at the State Teachers' College, Peru, Neb. It is an extension course in parent-teacher work and is the first that has been offered by a college in the United States. The course was accepted and endorsed by the national board of parents and teachers at their executive session held in Omaha in October. Miss Baldrige was given a life membership in the National Parent-Teachers' Association by members of District No. 2, parent-teachers' division of the Nebraska State Teachers' Association in November. She has served four years as vice president of this district, has instructed in institutes in 26 counties of the state, and as county superintendent of Nance County organized 30 districts in parent-teachers' association work. She also organized the first county council in the state.

The cornerstone of a new Y. W. C. A. hotel for working girls in Calcutta, Ind., was laid by the Countess of Lytton, patroness of the hotel committee. The old hotel has been overcrowded for some time, owing to the increase of young girls earning their own livelihood in Calcutta. The Young Women's Christian Association serves girls of many nationalities and creeds. Indian girls of Mohammedan, Christian, Parsi and Hindu faiths find, says Lady Stephenson, an equal welcome there. The Anglo-Indian girls predominate.

The biennial meeting of the world's committee of the Young Women's Christian Association to which women members of the largest international organization of women journey from all parts of the globe, will be held in England next July. The place and the date, July 1 to 8, are announced by Miss Elizabeth M. Tritton as chairman of the biennial committee from London. The last meeting was held in Washington in 1924. The world's committee has its headquarters in London and affiliated associations throughout Europe, the United States, the Near East and the Orient. Other centers represented are in Australia, New Zealand, Af-

Dr. Horn Returns From Greenville

President Paul W. Horn returned yesterday from Greenville and other points in East Texas. He attended a meeting of all the state school heads there. He also attended the inauguration of President S. L. Whiteley of the East Texas State Teachers College. All of the schools of the state were represented in the inauguration and extended greetings to the school and the new president Eugene Plouffe of the State Legislature was at the inauguration. It is Chairman of Appropriations Committee in the House. Many other distinguished visitors attended the inauguration.

Sock and Buskin Sprites Tonight
A change in the regular form of program will be given at the meeting of the Sock and Buskin Club tonight. Miss Pirie stated that this would be one of the most interesting meetings of the year. The membership list will be read and cards issued. Miss Pirie also requested that all members be on time. The program begins at 7:30.

The play "A Beautiful Sunset" will be presented to the club at the next meeting, January 26. It is a one-act play and was written by an English club under Miss Pirie's management. She will direct the presentation.

Notice To Holders of Artists Tickets
All students who have Artists Tickets will be admitted to the Program Concert, February 1, 1926, at 8 o'clock. This will be a fine concert as Grandeur comes to Lubbock. It may obtain reserved seats by calling directly from New York. Students at the office of the Registrar.

Eugene Blount to Visit Tech Soon
Dr. Horn has invited Eugene Blount, Greenville, to visit the Tech. Blount is a distinguished visitor. He is visiting with Eugene Blount while he is in Greenville and he expressed a desire to visit the Tech College. Blount's home is in Nacogdoches. He is a member of the Texas Legislative and a very prominent figure in the State politics. He is Chairman of the Appropriations Committee of the House. The College officials are looking forward to Blount's visit.

Architectural Club to Meet Thursday Night
Wellington Brink, Associate Editor of the Farm and Ranch of the Holland Publishing Company of Dallas, was a visitor at the College yesterday. He visited the schools of Agricultural in particular. He was a member of the Texas Agricultural Extension in the Kansas State Agricultural School. He was well pleased with the Tech and its first year of work. He is a friend of the Tech and stated that the Farm and Ranch would give it all the possible publicity. He also visited Prof. R. C. Harrison at the English department. Prof. Harrison has a brother who is an employee in the Holland Publishing Company.

South Carolina Man Visits Tech
W. W. Watkins, Assistant Director of Agricultural Extension of Clemson Agricultural College of Clemson, South Carolina, was a visitor on the Campus yesterday. He also visited in particular, the School of Engineering. He is here studying the Texas System of Agriculture Extension.

School of Agriculture Receives Samples
Several important samples were received by the School of Agriculture in the past few days. Six of the principal botanical types of wheat, representing a total of 13 varieties, 2 lots of 1924, 1 lot of buckwheat, 18 lots of barley representing all the known botanical types and 15 lots of oats, representing the 12 most important types, were received from the United States Department of Agriculture.

Spring Sport Conquers Early Students
The hot few warm days have brought about the melting of the snow and the horsehide. The football field northwest of the college has been a scene of evidence of the melting snow.

Advices Ailing Women

"I was run-down in health some years ago and was advised to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," said Mrs. Elbe Carter of 2516 Rosewood St., Dallas, Texas, whose picture appears here. "It was recommended to me as the most reliable feminine tonic and helped me in every way and I have heard a great many say that it did the same for them. I believe all who try the Favorite Prescription will be greatly benefited."

tional pastime. In other words, several of the Tech athletes have already started to work for the Matador. Playing catch—and chasing long balls has taken up most of the time. The following men have been out during the warm days: Miller, Camp, Hill, Elorado, Red, Rigney, Scott, Cole and Hayhurst. Several other men have been reporting but the writer did not get their names. Freeman does not plan to start official work until the last of February.

One aspirant of the cinder was out yesterday limbering up. His name is Vernon Neil and he hails from Cleburne. He runs the half and mile. Many other track men are expected out as the long training wind will soon begin.

BLOOD AND SAND FROM EL TORO

Howdy, folks! How you was all today? All over? We were all puffed up yesterday morning, thinking we were going to have to skip one class to prepare for another, when we learned inadvertently that Convocation was to be held. We went and had a good time working at C. Bra during the fun.

We were up in the History office this morning, and gamed a bird's-eye view of the front yard from that place. It rather surprised us, the way these grounds are being laid off. It just can't be told by looking from the ground, but a little perspective shows it up just fine.

Such things happen, we suspect, on the best capital of business, but we just had to grieve when we heard two Tech boys discussing bus service the other day.

Departing passenger: "This is rotten school."
J. B.: "What's the trouble?"
C.: "I couldn't get a seat."
J. B.: "I got a seat, but my girl had to stand up all the way."

And in Chem Lab. They were discussing specific gravity or something like that:
"When will water stop running down the hill?"
"When it gets to the bottom!"

Don't think, folks, that we laugh all the time, even if this is Laura Month, when we're pronounced to laugh all the time, but we heard another one about the Cafeteria. Before it gets too old, we'll pass it on to you.

Woop-woop (who hails from the conyons): "Say, young feller, where's the kitchen?"
Astonished waiter: "Why, what do you want to know, for?"
W. W. F.: "Want to wash mess, of course!"
And after that we set down.

Surprise, spelled with two capital's. In other words, you'll see, and, P. U. R. Y. Y. U. L. B. there in see the fun come off at the meeting of the Sock and Buskin Club tonight at 7:30.

Concert Band concerted again last evening. Those people are getting now to where they can put out some real stuff—come out some Monday evening and see and hear for yourself.

CANYON CITY CLUB SELECTS OFFICERS

CANYON, Texas, Jan. 17.—The new officers of the Canyon City Club are C. L. Thomson, president; Tom Nighton, secretary; treasurer; Dr. D. M. Stewart, Foster, Mrs. Jennie C. Ritchie, I. T. Service, Dr. S. L. Ingram. Plans have been drawn for improving the club grounds; among the proposed improvements is a golf course. A vote will be taken at the next meeting to raise the club dues in order to make possible the improvements.

Transportation has its fundamentalists, also. A number of the Washington aristocracy, who still cling to horse-drawn carriages for use in going about the city, have protested against the new regulations which prohibit horses on certain boulevards of the nation's capital.

"Freedom of the city" has been conferred upon former Premier Lloyd George by 32 British municipalities.

COLLEGE MEN ASK FOR DRINKING DEPARTMENT

By United News
ANN ARBOR, Mich., Jan. 17.—Dr. Clarence Little, president of Michigan University, has vetoed a proposal that fraternities set aside a room in their chapter houses where students may drink their liquor without being seen or joined by the under graduates.

The plan was suggested by Mason P. Rumley, president of the alumni association during a conference of the fraternity heads called in by President Little to discuss means of keeping under graduates sober.

The fraternity men complained they are given a bad example by alumni who, having grown prosperous in the world of business or profession return to the campus loaded with money and determined to see that every one else joins them in drinking up the profits of their worldly success.

Then Rumley proposed the "restricted room" plan. Dr. Little objected strenuously, explaining that it would be the same as the government setting aside special drinking areas in the state or national capital. To this Rumley replied that the analogy was perfect that he knew of "drinking rooms" in Washington as well in Lansing.

That may be true but such a plan had not been adopted here, 55 said Dr. Little.

BIRTH CONTROL FILM NOW SHOWING AT THE LINDSEY

That the success of modern marriage depends entirely upon full knowledge of the laws of sex and that ignorance of these laws results in discord, divorce, the double standard of morals, and sometimes suicide and murder, is the lesson taught in the motion picture, "Tell Me Why," dealing with birth control, which is the feature attraction today at the Lindsey Theatre.

The picture has been approved and endorsed enthusiastically by clergymen, the press and the public wherever shown and what was once considered a delicate subject is depicted so as to tell and show all that is necessary to know to make the author's intentions plain.

"Tell Me Why" is no so-called sex picture, harboring in itself the rotten, the so-called sex picture drama of real life, dealing with one of the most important and practical subjects of the modern day, a drama that every mother, father, daughter and son should see, think and reflect.

"Slowly, slowly, but very surely, drifted by ice raft toward the land. Then suddenly the current changed and the berg made again for the open sea. It couldn't fool me, though. After my long rest I was ready for almost anything. I slid down into the water and pulled for the shore, and I reached it without a bit of trouble—wasn't even out of breath!"
Polar Bear proudly lifted his head, and Black Bear breathed in a deep sigh of relief.
"Good work!" growled he. "Safe on land at last and all your troubles over."
Polar sniffed.
"Safe on land, to be sure, but with the worst of by troubles just be-

"But no creature crossed! I waited on that shore for a meal to come to me, and when none came I made up my mind to go after the meal, and I did!"
Gypsy, the Black Bear, demanded.

THE PARDON POWER

One does not have to be smart to see that the pardon power of Texas is running the state into a very bad state of affairs. It can easily be seen that the power of the pardon board is making it impossible for the peace officers in the state to do efficient work in the enforcement of the laws. Good men are reluctant to enter the race for sheriff in the counties of Texas because of the handicaps that are placed in their way. True we will get men to run for the office and they will do the best they can, but they simply take the office only with the hope that there will possibly come a change some where so that they can effect the enforcement of the laws in a more satisfactory way.

Ex-Governor Pat Neff in his book which he has recently had printed, gives some dope on the pardon board and its work, which will be of interest to Texas people. Only a few excerpts are given from what he has written, but enough to give the readers of Texas something to think about.

The chapter entitled, "The Exercise of the Pardoning Power," is begun with a look into the past history of pardons.

"The first person sent to the Texas penitentiary was received in July, 1849, having been convicted in Fayette County for cattle theft. After serving 13 months he was pardoned by Governor Bell. At that time there were only three men in the penitentiary and one of the remaining two thinking that he also should have been given a pardon, became dissatisfied, attempted to escape, and was killed by the guard. This brief history of the first convict, the first pardon, and the first killing is but the sad and tragic forecast of penitentiary life from that day to this.

"For 11 years prior to my tenure of office I have been informed that there was an average of approximately three convicts a day released from the penitentiary by executive favor. Feeling that this free use of the pardoning power had helped to weaken the arm of the law in Texas, and wishing to do everything possible to restore respect for the law and confidence in the courts, I abolished the Board of Pardons the first day I became Governor. During my four years' administration I granted approximately 200 pardons. In 1924 granted only two pardons, the smallest number during any one year in the history of the penitentiary.

"Since the granting of the first pardon to a Texas convict, and the attempted escape of one of the two remaining convicts, the granting of pardons has always created dissatisfaction in the penitentiary, causing attempted escapes among those not pardoned. Each convict invariably feels that he was more entitled to a pardon than those who had received it. The free use of the pardoning power not only creates dissatisfaction among the convicts, but also creates a disrespect for the law everywhere. It robs the law of its deterrent powers. It robs the court house of its victory over the lawless element. It discourages officers in the enforcement of the law. It increases the insecurity both of life and of property. It causes potential criminals to disregard the law. It holds out the flag of hope to every professional lawbreaker. It encourages young men to enter crime as a profession.

Praise is given to the Texas Ranger, and military rule at Mexia is defended by Neff. He also expresses admiration for the State militia, and tells for the first time that the United States Army was preparing to intervene at Denison when he as Governor placed the militia there in the late summer of 1923.

NO MYSTERY IN SALVATION

There is much disagreement in many things concerning the Bible, and its teachings, and some folks do not seem to be willing to take the old Book for what it says, but chase around and try to dig up some man-made book that is claimed will give the world a clearer insight into the teachings, and when they do that they usually get lost and hopelessly stammering around and finally wind up in a sea of dilution from which there seems to be no escape.

A prominent speaker a few days ago gave his hearers the following information on the plan of salvation that might do a lot of us good to ponder over. In reading his sermon in one of our exchanges we take the liberty of using some paragraphs that should be sufficient proof that there need be no mystery about the plan of salvation. While we do not pose as a religious instructor, nor does this publication pretend to be a religious publication, still with the wild ideas that are going the rounds of the country now it would seem that if people will read a few paragraphs like the following they might be better citizens and better people in general.

"For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

This verse, probably the best known in the whole Bible, has been translated into more than seven hundred languages and dialects, and has carried the message of love and salvation throughout the world. Originally, the words were addressed to one man, Nicodemus, who sought Jesus the Lord at night, and asked of Him the way of life; but they have become the most powerful sermon anyone ever delivered, and have been instrumental in bringing to the feet of the Savior hundreds of thousands of men and women and boys and girls. Truly, the verse is the "heart of the Gospel."

A great many people make a mystery of the way of salvation. Jesus told Nicodemus that it was a new birth, but He explained that one does not need to understand all the processes attendant upon it. The one thing that is essential is that there be belief in Jesus Christ the Lord, for that is made the test by which is determined whether one shall perish or live eternally. Mortal man can not understand the infinite love of God, which from the beginning determined that there should be a Savior for sinful mankind. It is sufficient to know that there is such love. The gift of Jesus, the only-begotten Son of God, as a savior, was and is indisputable proof of the love of God, and we can understand that. All those who have a hope of eternal life do understand it; therefore, why make a mystery of what Jesus called the "new birth", the regeneration of a sinful man by the grace of Almighty God?

The way of salvation has been made very plain for us. The whole purpose of our Lord's ministry was to explain it, and whether His audience were a multitude or a single individual, as was the case in His sermon to Nicodemus and again to the woman at the well, he took infinite pains to make clear to his hearers the way of life eternal. It was for that purpose that He came into the world, "that the world through Him might be saved." Salvation then is a free gift of God's love, and not something that can be bought by any of us. It is offered freely to all men, and ever will be, though not all men will accept it. Everyone who does accept it is given a guaranty of eternal life, but a life like that enjoyed by God Himself. Those who do not accept it are already condemned to perish everlastingly and eternally, for all who are not saved are already lost.

The great mystery, if there be a mystery in connection with God's plan for the salvation of humankind, is in the deliberate refusal of intelligent men and women to accept the salvation that is so freely offered them. Even those whose intellect tell them that Jesus is the Son of God, and that a choice must be made between eternal happiness through Him and eternal sorrow without Him, refuse to give Him their hearts so that He may become their Savior and Friend. Most of them, perhaps, intend to do so, some day but they forget that they already stand condemned before the judgement bar of God, and that His wrath may overtake them at any moment. God is not only a God of love, but of justice. He extends mercy to those who seek it, but unerringly punishes those who spurn His love as exemplified in Christ Jesus the Lord. It is a solemn decision that a man makes when he determines that he will give his heart to Jesus Christ and accept His salvation, but it is an equally solemn decision when he determines that he will longer delay that step. There is no middle ground upon which any man can stand, for there are only two alternatives that may be chosen. One is death, the other is life.

PRESENT INHERITANCE TAX OPPRESSIVELY HIGH, SAYS SENATOR UNDERWOOD

"The impulse and desire to tax inheritances have so recently come within the radius of the tax gatherer's vision in our country that they have not as yet had the experience to know how to exploit properly this source of revenue," recently declared Senator Underwood of Alabama. "When justly and reasonably applied, the levy on inheritances would not be objectionable where the exigencies of the Government made it necessary to raise taxes from the widows and children of the nation. But there is probably no source of revenue that has been so outrageously misused and abused as the levying of taxes on the transfer of estates.

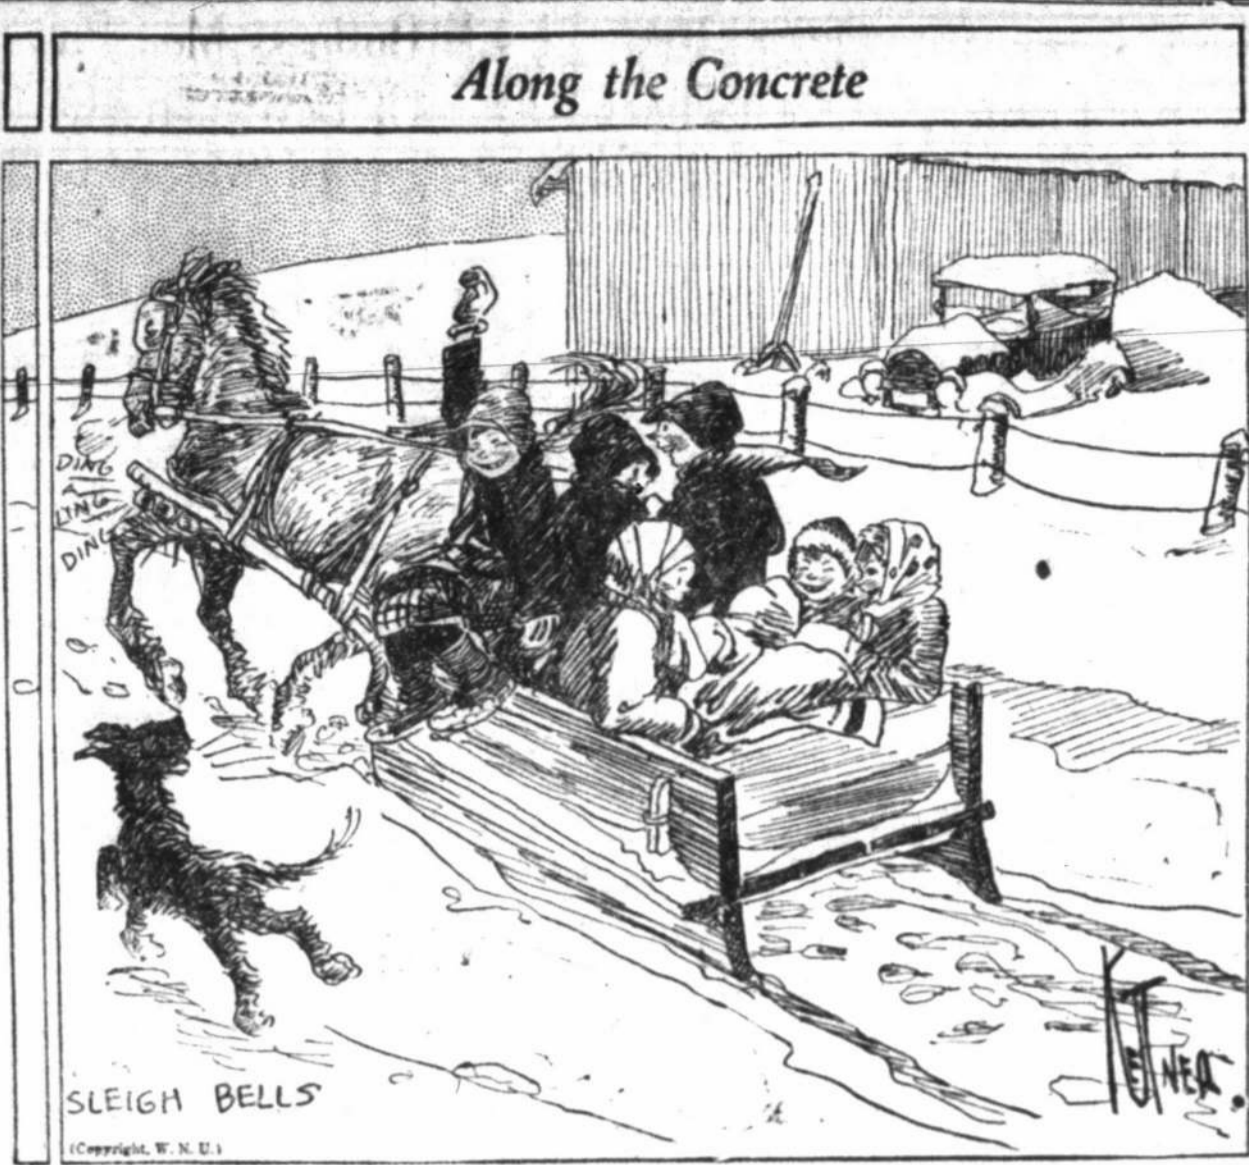

"Our citizens have agreed to the principal of a tax on inheritances as proper in theory, because as a rule they do not understand how often it will be applied disastrously to their estates. Notwithstanding the wide-spread use of the inheritance tax, the amount of revenue derived from it in this country is comparatively small. This should not be forgotten when we come to the consideration of abolishing it. The true objection of the tax lays in the fact that it has been made oppressive to a few people and not in the volume of the revenue collected.

"The revenues of State and local Governments collected from all sources in the year 1922 amounted to only $4,220,000,000, and of this amount only $66,000,000, or less than 1-2 per cent, came from taxes levied on estates and inheritances. The same year the Federal Government collected as estate taxes $139,000,000, or less than 3-12 per cent of the total revenue derived from all sources which amounted to $3,570,000,000. The whole amount of revenue raised in this country from taxes on states and inheritances both Federal and State, was only about 2.6 per cent of what was raised from all other sources of taxation.

"These figures must make it clear that both the State and Federal Government could dispense with inheritance taxes without endangering their sources of revenue. The volume of these taxes as applied to the country as a whole, is not great. But when it is applied to particular States in the process of administration it often accomplishes their ruin; and if not their ruin, great loss and suffering to those who have inherited property. It also seriously hampers business in the neighborhood in which it is collected.

"In some States the State and Federal inheritance taxes amount to more than 50 per cent of some estates. No estate carries on hand sufficient cash to meet an obligation of this kind and few men carry insurance policies to meet a liability from inheritance taxes, even in part. Therefore, when time comes for the settlement of the estate, the administrators often have to put the best part on the market. The requirements cause a forced sale and they must sell for what they can get, often bringing a slump in the market price and seriously affecting other business interests.

"We think there are still a large number of people who have not paid their poll tax and they have not paid their automobile

SO THINK WE

We think the weather man is certainly showing much consideration of our worn clothes. This weather is simply great!

We think the way the people of this section of the country are lining up in the poultry business, that there will be a great deal more money in the country every month in the year from now on, and the farmers will not have to depend upon the cotton crop for every dollar they have next fall.

We think if the so-called law-abiding citizens of this country would back the peace officers up in their efforts to catch and convict the gamblers and the bootleggers and other offenders of the law that there would be much less of it.

We think there is much reckless driving in Lubbock, and automobile drivers might be more careful, but all the blame for accidents cannot be laid at the feet of the fellow in the automobile. Pedestrians often never look to see where they are going or whether there is an automobile near.

We think possibly we will get a refund of taxes from the government as it is stated that there is being reimbursed more than $225,000 to Texas tax payers and surely our Uncle Sam will not overlook us.

We think the druggists are right in asking a reduction in the price of whiskey, for we have heard a few fellows who have had occasion to purchase the kind they are selling now on prescription say it to be of very inferior quality for the price paid.

We think when people of all classes and professions will operate on a business basis like the mercantile establishments it will be easier to get along. Business concerns keep a line of the cost of operation and they cut their expenses to fit it possible, while many people go blindly ahead without knowing whether they are making or losing. This is more common among farmers and stockmen than possibly any other class of operators, and it should be changed.

We think after all there is much more cotton gathered on the plains than many people expected, and there is much more building going on in Lubbock than many people think for. Fact of the business people coming here from many other places think Lubbock is on a boom.

We think some folks seem to delight in violating the traffic laws.

We think there are still a large number of people who have not paid their poll tax and they have not paid their automobile

TIMELY VIEWS OF WORLD TOPICS

"Wild Game in the United States Will Soon be Extinct Unless Drastic Action is Taken," Predicts Dr. W. T. Hornaday.

"Ducks, quail, wild turkey and big game such as elk, bison, and deer will soon be extinct in America if drastic measures are not taken soon," warns Dr. William T. Hornaday, noted naturalist.

He has fought for 28 years to preserve the nation's game. In a recent interview he said, "for fifty years the sportsmen of the East and the Middle West have been regulating the killing of game and solemnly calling it 'game protection.' That designation however, is a grim joke. If you or I live in a land inhabited by and governed by giant gorillas who ate men, and the gorilla man-catchers elected that humans should be killed and eaten during only three months of the year, we would call that a very poor kind of man-protection. But is not that the kind of protection that they, and they alone, have been giving American game for fifty years?"

"The areas of game species extinction, already enormous, are increasing and spreading in devastating waves. Mighty little work has been done in mapping the state areas of extinction and spreading them before the people. The subject is too disagreeable! The stories they would tell of greed, folly and imbecility would be too humiliating. Look at our own maps of the duck, quail and wild turkey situations as samples of the whole. The disappearance of big game like the elk, bison and deer from farming and grazing countries was unavoidable, and we charge up nothing on their account, save against the men who killed

DINNER STORIES

"John," observed his wife in a rather ominous voice, "I found some very queer-looking tickets in your desk this morning."
"Did you, dear?" replied John, innocently.
"Yes. One of them said, 'Ptolemy 100-7.' What does that mean?"
"Oh, that concerns my archaeological studies, my dear," responded John. "Relic of a lost race. Gone, but not forgotten."

The village postman, being an inveterate gossip, could never resist reading the postcards entrusted to him to deliver, and then communicating his knowledge to others.
The local doctor was well aware of this and one day, in writing to a friend who lived in the same district, he added:
"I would tell you more, only I know the postman would read it."
He then posted the card. It was duly collected, taken to the post-office, and sent out for delivery.
The postman stamped up to the house with the card and knocked at the door, and to the surprise of the old lady who answered it, exclaimed angrily:
"Just tell the doctor he's tellin' 'em! I don't read 'em!"

Janie was returned from the Home of the Feeble-Minded to the Orphan's Home, as the doctor's examination had proved her merely "subnormal."
Said Mamie to Anna in a burst of confidence and gossip: "Janie was sent away to be an idiot, but she couldn't pass and had to come back."

Poems That Live

THE TIGER
Tiger, tiger, burning bright
In the forests of the night,
What immortal hand or eye
Could frame thy fearful symmetry?
In what distant deeps or skies
Burnt the fire of thine eyes?
In what wings dare he aspire?
What the hand dare seize the fire?
And what shoulder and what art
Could twist the sinews of thy heart?
And, when thy heart began to beat,
What dread hand and what dread feet?

THE SKY SAILORS
I saw three ships come sailing in,
Three argosies of clouds and air,
And all the dreamers used to spin
It seemed had found fulfillment there.
Mankind has watched the ships go out
And stood to see the ships come home
And woven stirring songs about
A spreading sail and dashing foam.
The ships have lured brave boys
away
To ride the waves and breast the gales,
But now we face a newer day,
And ships have neither masts nor sails.

PRINCETON, N. J.—Princeton students apparently are more interested in the relation of religion to science than in an other subject, according to Malcolm O. Young, reference librarian at the University, who reports an unprecedented demand for books on that subject.

She stared into his eyes for a long time, then dropped into the chair. "Would you mind," she asked, "ordering me something to drink? My throat is parched."

Then she buried her head in her arms.

Without a word Brandon went to the door and strolled the waiter, who had remained on the balcony in the vicinity of the door. The man hurried away. Brandon returned to the chair and stood by the side of the limp form of the girl. He touched her body relentlessly. She put up her hand in mute appeal for him to be silent. He hesitated, and then, with a shrug of his shoulders went to the fireplace.

When the waiter brought in the champagne with glasses arranged on the tray, Brandon signed him to deposit it on the table, and waved him out of the room. Joanna stirred and lifted herself, by bracing against the table, to her feet.

When she looked across at Brandon the quizzical smile that so many people had never understood hovered about her lips.

Brandon went at once to the table and reached for the champagne to open it.

Then he sank, noiselessly, to the floor.

Joanna stood over him and watched the crimson trickle from his forehead, the broken, jagged neck of the champagne bottle still clutched in the deadly grip of her hand.

Chapter XXXIV
The Flight

Down stairs they danced, danced and shouted wittily, taunting, mocking things at each other. Long, twisting serpentine, thrown from dancer to dancer in carnival abandon, spread a rippling blanket of towery colors over the club house floor. And Joanna gazed down—down upon the grotesque form that lay at her feet, the crimson still trickling in phantasmic persistence from the white forehead.

After a little while she opened her fingers and the broken wreck of the champagne bottle fell to the carpet. She closed her eyes and lifted her face, from which all the color had fled.

This was a pose Joanna had never struck before. It was one she'd never thought of anything quite like it. It was as if she wasn't pointing at all—just holding her face toward heaven with her eyes closed as if afraid to contemplate the message that might be written there.

Then she went onto the balcony and closed the door behind her. She nodded to the waiter who stood nearby, flashing him an assuring smile that seemed to tell him she was enjoying herself tremendously and would be coming back in a moment.

Downstairs she skirted the dance floor and threaded her way among the fables to foyer. The red-robed attendant bowed to her. "It is still black outside, Mademoiselle," he said. "No one could get down now. It will lift by morning tho."

"Just the same," she returned, "please to call for Mr. Brandon's car. I think he will have one parked in the yard."

The flunkey would have protested, but Joanna silenced him with an arrogant gesture. Muttering, he went onto the veranda. Joanna following him, and called to a knot of chauffeurs who stood in the mist-dotted glare of a powerful flashlight discussing, no doubt, the affairs of their masters. None of these responded. He went then into the yard, and among the parked cars. He found the hunched shape of Antoine and spoke to him. Antoine, wondering, agreed that Monsieur Brandon was his patron.

"Very well then," the attendant commanded, "be so good as to bring your car to the entrance. Your master seems to be remaining. Mademoiselle, his young lady, apparently brings his order for you to take her down the mountain. You can't make it, of course, but that is his and her affair, not mine."

Antoine probed his doubts of such a situation. They were cut short by Joanna herself, who appeared suddenly at the side of the car in the wake of the driver.

"I do not desire to be taken down the mountain," she declared. "Your master, however, requires you, inside at once. I am to await your return, with him perhaps, in the car. Please to go at once."

Both Antoine and the servant were puzzled, but Joanna brooked no tardiness in obeying her commands.

To Antoine she repeated: "I bring your master's orders. Attend to them! The attendant here will show you the way to Mr. Brandon. He awaits you in the private room, on the balcony. Still dubious about this sudden humor to expose him to possible identification by the maskers in the club house Antoine descended from the car and stumbled along behind the other man. Joanna climbed into the seat he had vacated. When their two forms disappeared across the veranda she felt with her toe for the starter, found it, kicked it, and in another moment was guiding the gray year toward the gate. When she was safely through the gate she disappeared in the mist. The curious chauffeurs who had watched her manoeuvre heard the echo of her horn until it, too, was absorbed by the thick, opaque atmosphere. "That's the one they call the Golden Girl," one of the drivers explained to his companions. "Pity, isn't it, to see a young thing like her clear gone to the devil!"

Antoine, led at his request thru kitchens and sculleries, was brought to the closed door on the balcony. The guardian waiter opened the door for him. Brandon's eyelids were beginning to quiver. The excited waiter would have lunged out of the room with a cry of alarm but Antoine clutched him by the throat and smothered the sounds in it. "Quietly, my friend, quietly," he murmured. "There's something to hide here, not to advertise. Bring the proprietor, or his assistant—quietly."

At the end of an hour's patient ministrations behind the locked door Brandon, stretched in a divan, held his eyes open and gazed around him. His first feebly uttered question was:

"Where is the girl?" The Mademoiselle?"

The club house director would have silenced Antoine's complaint that she had stolen his car, but the Monegasque would not be restrained. Through the bandages something of a frowning smile escaped. "It is just as well," he murmured. "Be of cheer, my good Antoine! I failed, but I fancy you and your men will be paid double for your little practice tonight."

"But she will give the alarm before," the other exclaimed. "Before morning! After dawn it would be futile; we contemplated an alarm by dawn when the men get down. But not before! You did not keep her here—ill dawn, as you agreed!"

Again Brandon smiled weakly, and indicated the bandages. "She is to blame for that. But I do not think she will give any alarm. That will await the men you left in the barn. The police will not be concerned much, when you have returned to them the plunder you collected. When you have said them that, you will be as I said—paid double."

The expression on the face of the house official who had heard the cryptic conversation began to show a gleam of understanding—a curious understanding of the hold-up which had sent the group of half hysterical women back to his hospitalities. Antoine noted and shifted, uneasily. Brandon too, alert despite his pain, saw. He called the man to the couch:

"Do not be concerned by the little drama in the mist tonight," he said, between his laborious breathings. "Your patrons who were robbed will receive their valuable. I have reason to believe. They will be none the worse for their experience. They may not know of it, of course, but they played their parts tonight in a great adventure."

Meanwhile, Joanna, her wrap unfastened again, her slim hands gripped to the wheel of the gray car, fought her way along the narrow road. When she rounded a turn just above the village of La Turbie little pin points of light shone up. For dawn, out over the sea, the light-house at the base of Cap Martin glowed like a far away eye of the night. The mist was lifting before the threat of dawn. Beyond La Turbie the country, although chaotic, was visible. The lamps along the sea boulevard were discernible.

The thought of Kenilworth, still captive with the other man in the hidden barn of the bandits, bothered her for a moment. An impulse came to turn around and, with the road partially clear, feel her way back to the hut she was certain she would recognize. She could, she considered, pick up someone at La Turbie to help her awaken the country. She decided against this plan however, settled back behind her wheel, and shot into high speed.

The grounds of Villa Amette were vapored by the rising dampness of the dissipating mist. A solitary light near the entrance gate, gleamed timidly. As she guided the car along the winding road to the house among the avenues, gray shapes of the arbors and pergolas and pavilions which, in another few hours, were to be a blazing, fantastic background for her brilliant and lavish fetes—the fete of the Golden Girl, and also, her Swan Song! For Brandon has said, "I am the one!" and he had said, too, "Whatever you have is to be taken from you. There shall be no mere money!"

When she drew up in front of a side entrance to the villa she saw that the house itself was also dark. She considered whether or not to summon a servant with her horn, and decided to leave the car in the roadway and go in quietly. She ached for the loneliness of her room—the room which thronged the great golden bed.

At the ponderous villa doors she was troubled by the thought that she had never found it necessary to carry any sort of key. Servants always awaited her return, but they had to be summoned by the bell. She tried the door, however, and found that it was unfastened. She closed it softly behind her and felt her way across a tiny reception room to a draped arch that opened into a seldom-used drawing room. Across this room would be the grand hall from which a stairway led to the upper floors. When she was almost up to the heavy, double drapes which hung in the arched door that opened into the bigger room she stopped, suddenly. Between the curtains a line of light shone. She heard the murmur of voices. Convinced that it would be servants, awaiting her perhaps she pushed the curtains aside and stepped into the room. Then she stood, fascinated.

The voices swelled as the curtains parted. One of them she recognized as Yvonne's; the other, John's! And at the far end of the room she saw them, before the gentle glow in the fireplace, the only illumination in the room. Yvonne, gorgeous and Circé-like, her sinuous body wrapped in the sense destroying hues of rich, red Burgundy; her only ornaments, dazzling diamonds that glinted like a myriad of consuming fires in the gentle firelight glow, leaned forward in a cushioned, gilded chair. And at her feet—at "satin slippers never worn by Jo-anna's feet," as Brandon had taunted her—was John!

For one brief instant the thing before her muddled, and assumed a contorted shape. Then the smolder in the fireplace burst into a flame of hell, and died again into something that flared as a grotesque mockery. Joanna's wrap fell from her shoulders. Her little hands dived into her breasts, but gave the senseless body no pain. The little figure in black stood, then, utterly lost to every thought but of what she saw—and heard.

"I have never known love until now! All else has just been a chimera. It is you who have shown what love's love's glory is! Please, my wonderful dear, will you take me in—and comfort me?"

John's voice, that was John! Passion and pleading and humility, in it. All those nuances of adoration, submission, hope and prayer and yearning that Joanna had never heard in it.

Now, Yvonne's low, silvery cadences, infinitely sweet, and infinitely soothing:

"Are you content—will you be content—to accept from me the love that is the only kind that I may give you? The love that has blossomed and withered so many, many times? Mine can never be a pure love, my friend. And I may never promise its constancy. It is the crown that you may wear only while you can defend and keep it. That is what is said of me, and my love, my dear, said I must not say to you that what is said is untrue. If we love, you and I, and if I give to you the portion I may spare you, you must be content. It can never be a holy love—there must always be something written in it. It must be the kind we take and put aside. Will that then, satisfy you?"

He crouched closer to her. She put her hands about his face, warm, mes-eric hands. Her rich, soft, round lips—lips that were a sign of all love-madness since the world began—teeth down to his. Then it was John's voice again:

"There can be no other love as wonderful as you can give. In any way that I may have it, if it be pure or defiled, I want it!"

A scream, a torrent of them, a frenzy of them, surged to Joanna's lips—and halted there. It was Yvonne who rose, slowly, sinuously gracefully, Joanna saw, as if it were some strange, fantastic symbol that came at the feet of a distant horizon, a smile, a faintly lined, queer, sad smiling smile, at Yvonne's red lips. And John saw, and got to his feet, sense-dazed and marvelling. Again that low, soft, silvery cadence of Yvonne:

"What a poor, damnable thing you are, my friend! Go preach my dear heart and the soul and the wonders of her! Preach—but do it on your knees and take your text from the lesson I've taken the trouble to give you. Tell her that you've learned, at last, that you're only make-believe—you and all your kind. Tell her that if she'll have you, you'll try to learn from her the sort of thing her kind can teach."

John's voice, then, but Joanna didn't hear. She stumbled blindly back through the curtains.

BETTER THAN WHISKEY FOR COLDS AND FLU

The sensation of the drug trade is Aspirin, the two-minute cold and cough reliever, authoritatively guaranteed by the laboratories, tested, approved and most enthusiastically endorsed by the highest authorities and proclaimed by the people as ten times as quick and effective as whiskey, rock and rye, or any other cold and cough remedy they have ever tried.

All drug stores are supplied with the wonderful elixir, so all you have to do is to step into the nearest drug store, hand the clerk half a dollar for a bottle of Aspirin and tell him to serve you two teaspoonful. With your watch in your hand, take the drink at one swallow and call for your money back in two minutes if you cannot feel the distressing symptoms of your cold fading away like a dream, within the time limit. Don't be bashful, for all druggists invite you and expect you to try it. Everybody's doing it.

Takes the remainder of the bottle home to your wife and children for Aspirin is by far the safest and most effective, the easiest to take and the most agreeable cold cough remedy for children as well as adults. Quickest relief for catarrhal virus and children's choking up at night. (Adv.)

STOCKS, GRAIN AND COTTON GOSPIP
Furnished by Fenner & Beane

HOUSTON—Via New York. Gulf Production Co., Gulf Oil Corporation, completed well No. 62 Phoenix in Hull field for 1200 barrels oil, initial at depth of 2000 feet.

BRUMLEY CHAMBERLAIN—We would await reactions before making purchases and the stake quick profits on the bulges.

HORNBLLOWER & WEEKS—There is nothing in the situation that calls for anything more than a seasonal reactionary period.

PAINE WEBBER—We consider the entire level of stock market prices to be high but we do not expect any general reaction for some time to come.

Chicago Tribune on Grain
CHICAGO—The wheat market has reached the stage at which increased buying on the part of speculators, millers and cash interests generally are necessary the world over to sustain the present level of values and advance them to any extent. Most of the large professional who were mainly responsible for the recent advance of 25 cents have sold out and are said to be short. There is a large holding interest, although it is difficult to say positively where it is concentrated.

More buyers of corn are needed if prices are to be held around present levels. A large percentage of the corn bought in the past two weeks on propoganda has been sold out as that interest waned.

LIVESTOCK RECEIPTS AT CHICAGO
CHICAGO—Hogs, 53,000 vs. 69,000, left over 3000. Sheep, 22,000 vs. 4,000. Cattle, 25,000 vs. 23,000.

Flask Gossp
Wheat, 49,104,000 vs. $3,161,000. Corn 23,789,000 vs. 22,648,000. Oats 61,575,000 vs. 73,721,000. Rye 13,038,000 vs. 22,819,000.

Wheat decreased 305,000; corn increased 1,847,000; oats increased 1,252,000; rye increased 281,000.

LASON—Unless decided change in foreign news look for lower prices. Corn and oats need better cash demand to sustain values.

BARTLETT FRAZIER—Anticlimax buying power in wheat next week based on continued strength in cash situation. Look for broader interest in corn on further setbacks.

GULF WAREEN—Believe signs point toward lower prices temporarily. Corn looks lower.

HARRIS WINTROP—It will take much labored effort to sustain our isolated wheat levels. Merits of immediate corn situation offer little encouragement to a buyer.

Cotton Gossp
Generally rain throughout and will assure heavy planting of grain crop at expense of cotton.

NO ADVERTISING EQUALS THAT OF NEWSPAPER, IS OPINION EXPERT

Over Six Million Spent in Newspaper Ads, Says Expert

BEST AGENCY FOR HEALTH

The total amount of newspaper space used by merchants in one year just taking in one hundred and twenty-two papers in twenty-eight cities of the United States alone was 1,365,954,971 square lines—a gain of 22,054,690 lines over the previous year, stated Mr. Henry, a partner of the T. K. Kelly Sales System of Minneapolis, Minn. He said, "We know that most of the firms today, in fact 95 per cent of the successful business houses, who have created their gigantic business through advertising started in a small way. The merchant who will advertise consistently is the man who will achieve remarkable results. It is by consistent careful planning and good management and not always on the size of the campaign that results show up profitably. Therefore the merchant who has only a small amount of money for advertising available need be discouraged and concede that there is no use for him to advertise in Minneapolis, we have a retail store located out of the highest retail district, established many years and by careful systematic advertising they sold over two million dollars worth of shoes last year. Their business has been created up on this solid foundation through newspaper advertising and their advertising costs do not amount to one and one-half per cent of the business they enjoy. I venture to say that all the failures of merchants the last few years, not twenty per cent of these same merchants advertised religiously in newspapers, whereas if they had their investment in advertising would have brought sufficient trade to prevent a great amount of their losses, so—

We are lead to believe that even business about us are good advertising, and so it is with the retail merchant. The minute a merchant starts to figure on selling merchandise he has got to start figuring on the advertising that is going to do it.

FORMER PUBLISHERS IDALOU ECHO ENJOY RIO GRANDE VISIT

Editor George Cowan, former publisher of the Idalou Echo, but who is not engaged at newspaper work just at this time, told members of the Avalanche force yesterday that a visit to the native haunts of Mexicans in the Rio Grande Valley is necessary in any reasonable understanding of the mentality of those people and their attitude toward Americans.

Editor Cowan stated that before making the visit to the Rio Grande, which he completed just recently, he had always considered a Mexican as an individual in whom no confidence could be placed and certainly not willing to be of any assistance to the other fellow, but that upon making his car stuck in the mud near a Mexican settlement he found them more than willing to be of assistance to him and members of his party, offering them all the courtesies one could enjoy at the hands of the most genial true western people.

Editor Cowan was accompanied on the trip by his sons, Frank and Pat. They were in Lubbock yesterday visiting an drill go to Idalou to look after business.

Reeves County Farm Will be Developed

PECOS, Texas, Jan. 18. The citizens of Reeves County met in Pecos recently and organized the "Pecos Farm Development Board." The following officers were elected: L. W. Anderson of the Pecos Valley Southern Railway, president; M. C. Berkner of the Pecos Power & Ice Co., first vice president; John W. Ward, second vice president; J. W. Moore, mayor of Pecos, third vice president; N. F. Chapman, secretary; Clarence Bell, treasurer; and M. W. Cliffe, assistant secretary.

In addition to these various committees were appointed to assist in the work of the organization as follows: Finance, Land, Publicity, Marketing and Membership. The membership fee was placed at $10.

The chief purpose of this organization is the settling of farmers in the shallow water belt near Pecos. This belt has about 20,000 acres of excellent farm land which can be irrigated by the water just under the ground in this region. It is proposed to have this area surveyed and listed for sale at its true value, and then interest farmers in settling here and improving the land. The land committee will start work immediately on this project. Pecos has advised the West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

F. F. EATON ESCORTS COLLEGE MAN ON PLAINS TOUR

A. L. Smith, district agent with the extension service, A. and M. College, accompanied by A. W. Watkins, assistant director of extension service, Clemson College, South Carolina, arrived in Lubbock Sunday and spent a part of Monday here inspecting the extension service being done by County Agent David P. Eaton.

Home Demonstration Agent Le. Eaton was designated to escort Mr. Watkins on a tour to the North Plains, and left yesterday north for Amarillo where they will inspect extension service being done there.

From Amarillo Mr. Eaton will go to Dallas where he will attend the state convention of county agents to be held there the last four days of this week.

SWEETWATER B. C. D. AID DEVELOPMENT AGRICULTURE

SWEETWATER, Texas, Jan. 18.—The development of agriculture in Nolan County will be the chief work of the Sweetwater Board of City Development for 1926.

At a recent meeting of the board of directors it was decided to purchase a carload of the best grade cottonseed which will be retained to the farmers in an effort to improve the grade of staple in this region. It was also pointed out by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce that there was a great shortage of hogs in Nolan County, and if the farmers could be interested, a carload of hogs for breeding purposes should be imported.

The matter of the 1927 Nolan County Fair was also discussed and it was decided to send D. A. Clark, president, and J. A. McCurdy, secretary, to the statewide meeting of Fair Secretaries to be held in Dallas this week.

Another project that Sweetwater is deeply interested in is that of securing the condensary plant of the Borden Milk Co. This company is looking for a location for their plant in West Texas, and their choice depends to a large extent upon the number of milk cows in the region, and rail and marketing facilities.

Telegrams have been sent by the board to the Borden Company in an effort to interest them in Sweetwater.

O'Donnell Will Be Host At Boy Scouts Banquet

The executive board of the South Plains Area Council, composed of business men from throughout the South Plains, will be entertained with a banquet at the McClung hotel at O'Donnell this evening when the annual election of officers will be made.

Dr. Paul W. Horn, president of the Texas Technological College, will be the principal speaker, and other Boy Scouts enthusiasts will be heard.

Those who attended the banquet here last year at which time officers were elected will be especially interested in the O'Donnell banquet and Lubbock will doubtless be well represented at the meeting at O'Donnell this evening, according to Scout Executive Palmer.

The business man of O'Donnell will be hosts to those attending the banquet this evening.

E. E. Wofford May Be Candidate For Sheriff

When Chief of Police T. E. May withdrew from the race for sheriff of Lubbock County Saturday several possible candidates were given local mention, among them being E. E. Wofford, of the Wofford Sheet Metal Works.

Wofford is now game warden for a large territory comprising Lubbock County and has been associated with the officers of this section in this work.

It has been known by his friends for some time that he harbors ambitions to take more active charge of law enforcement than is afforded by his present office, and the withdrawal from the race of Chief of Police May was followed by insistence on the part of Wofford's friends for him to get into the race.

Mr. Wofford told the Avalanche that it will be some time before he knows definitely what he will do, however, he is confident he will make the race.

MRS. J. L. JOHNSON DIED SUNDAY AT BALTIMORE

Mrs. J. L. Johnson of Fort Worth, wife of the president of the Cicero Smith Lumber Company, died Sunday night at a Baltimore, Md., hospital, according to information received here Monday.

Funeral services have not been learned here, however business at the Cicero Smith yard will be suspended during the services. It was stated yesterday.

By a new decree men must wear full evening dress and silk hats when attending the Opera Comique of Paris.

O'Neill To Open Loan Company In Lubbock

Chas. F. O'Neill, real estate dealer, returned to his office here Monday after a business trip to Dallas and announced that the Mercantile Trust and Savings Bank of Dallas will enter the loan field in Lubbock. Mr. O'Neill will represent the bank here.

R. L. Thornton, president of the Mercantile Trust and Savings Bank, was very enthusiastic as to Lubbock and its future and readily agreed to make almost unlimited loans on business and residence property at the usual interest.

Mr. O'Neill stated that the loans will be repayable monthly, quarterly, semi-annually or annually as the borrower elects.

The recognition of Lubbock as a good loan center is another visible evidence of the fact that Lubbock is fast coming into its own, and the far reaching effects of the location here of such interests as the Mercantile Trust and Savings Bank will have wholesome influence on the future of the city.

Mr. O'Neill stated yesterday that immediate service on all loans will be given by the company, not more than fifteen to twenty days being required to get the loans through after abstract of title has been approved.

Although New York City continues to be the home of more subsidies than any other locality, its agricultural showing is not impressive. Official farm statistics of Manhattan Island give 5 mules, 8 horses, 17 cows, with 72 acres in cultivation, mostly potatoes.

TEXANS WARNED TO REFUSE BOOZE SHIPMENTS

DALLAS, Tex., Jan. 17.—Mimeographed letters signed by Emory R. Buckner, federal district attorney in New York city have been received by people here warning them not to make payment for goods received from a New York concern.

The letter explains that the government is in possession of documents showing that the concern had shipped liquors to recipients of the letters and that payment for the packages would be considered a conspiracy to violate the Volstead act.

It was alleged that the company shipped the stuff on thirty to sixty days' credit as a guarantee of its quality.

NASH

Leads the World in Motor Car Value

25% Greater Power and New Smoothness Quietness Responsiveness

On View Here! "Enclosed Car" Motor

Introduced at New York Show

Our showrooms are now devoted to a Special Nash Exhibit that practically duplicates the great New York Show display.

Here you may view personally the important new Nash developments—particularly the great new Nash "Enclosed Car" Motor.

In creating this new motor Nash deliberately disregarded general precedent which was accustomed to shape the capabilities of a motor to open car requirements.

On the contrary, Nash especially engineered this motor to provide the finest calibre of performance for the enclosed car.

In utter smoothness, in quietness and in phenomenal acceleration, this new "Enclosed Car" Motor clearly outdistances all that has gone before.

It creates an absolutely new standard of enclosed car performance that will prove a revelation to you—for it is surpassingly superior in every phase of operation.

There's a full 25% greater volume of symmetrically smooth power—power without a single "rough spot" throughout the entire range.

And the speed with which you accelerate is lightning-like—23% faster than formerly in going from any given rate to a higher rate.

Yet your travel-cost per gallon of fuel is held down to the old low level.

And so expertly is the motor designed and constructed that under average driving conditions you may drive it to a mileage high in the five-figure class without further thought except to change oil at the usual periods.
