Deficit budget adopted by ACND

By TED NORMAN

Saying he isn't worried about the next 12 months, only the next 60 days, Aransas County Navigation District Commissioner Dave Maguglin joined the discussion of the 1982-83 operation budget at a Tuesday night ACND special meeting.

The budget, approved late last week shows that the ACND will operate with a $21,997 deficit according to their estimated budget.

However, the district does expect reimbursement of funds from the Federal Emergency Management Authority (FEMA) of $25,000 within the year.

The budget projects a total anticipated revenue for the ACND of $330,000 and has a total planned operating expense of $230,397 and planned projects of $121,600 for a deficit of $21,997.

Revenues for the district include $122,000 from ad valorem taxes, $190,000 from leases and rentals and $18,000 from interest, miscellaneous receipts and maintenance fees.

Planned operating expenses include $144,000 in salaries, $9,000 for commissioners per diem and $7,360 for payroll taxes. Also included are $15,000 for group insurance, $22,000 for utilities (electricity, gas and water) and $10,000 for legal fees.

The employee retirement plan is $8,000 and $5,100 is budgeted for travel and car allowance.

Among the items in the planned project is $25,000 for dragline work at Cove Harbor, $18,000 for electrical work at Rockport Harbor and $9,000 for general maintenance of parks and cabanas.

The budget also includes $10,000 for maintenance of harbors and boat ramps and $15,000 for repairs to the Fulton Harbor bulkhead.

The budget also calls for $8,000 for the purchase of a new pickup. At the Tuesday night special meeting the commissioners opened sealed bids and voted to purchase a new 1982 GMC Stepside half-ton pickup from Bradford Pontiac for $6,196.41. The truck will be equipped with a six-cylinder engine, air conditioning and a four-speed manual transmission. Bradford Pontiac

Work begins on new city charter

By PAT BLAIR
Staff writer

Following swearing-in ceremonies at 10 a.m. Thursday at Rockport's City Hall, 14 of the 15 newly-elected charter commission members began the work they hope will lead to home rule for Rockport within the next few months.

Not present was commission member J.C. Harlan.

Ed Armstrong was elected chairman, Bill Walston, vice chairman and Iris Jenkins secretary during the brief organizational meeting called by Rockport Mayor Burt Mills after he administered the oath of office to the commission members.

City Administrator Herman Johnson presented Armstrong with copies of several city charters from surrounding cities and said he has some additional charters coming. Commission members were also presented with copies of the unsuccessful Rockport city charter presented to voters in 1980.

The commission will meet again at 5 p.m. Monday, Aug. 23. Members agreed they will meet at 5 p.m. Monday of each week.

Although a target date has not been officially selected for a draft city charter to be presented to voters, the next date on which a special city election can be called is Saturday, Jan. 15. Johnson told commission members Thursday that if they try for a special election at that time, it has to be called in December.

Alternate dates for a charter election would be in April, coincident with the regular city elections, in August or in November of 1983. Commission members also agreed that meetings should be at Rockport City Hall unless the public turnout is large enough to require more room.

Armstrong emphasized that all meetings will be open to the public and stressed, "We need input from every segment of the public."

Rockport Country Club zoning decision due Monday

A request for zoning to allow townhouse construction on four lots in Rockport Country Club Estates — tabled at a July 26 meeting of Rockport's city council — is scheduled to come before the council again on Monday night, Aug. 23.

The item is scheduled on the agenda for the regular council session beginning at 7:30 p.m., along with a report by City Administrator Herman Johnson regarding the city's efforts to obtain funding for wastewater treatment plant expansion, an appraisal of a portion of Jenkins Street and — city officials hope — opening of bids on the sale of a used city garbage truck.

The RCCE request, presented by Delmar Hiller, general manager of the project, is for the rezoning of four lots "to a category that would allow the resubdivision of the property to townhouse lots having an area of 2,900 square feet, allow construction of individual townhouses or patio homes, allow construction of condominium units at a density of 15 living units per acre."

The request was presented in a joint public hearing before the city council and city planning and zoning commission July 26 but was tabled after P&Z commission members charged they did not receive enough information to study to make a knowledgeable decision on the matter.

At the recommendation of the zoning board, the city council voted to table the request.

In addition to reconsidering the zoning request, the council is also expected to review a replat of the Rockport Country Club Estates Monday. Both items will be considered by the planning and zoning commission in a separate meeting prior to the council's taking up the matters.

Johnson is expected to make a report to the council Monday regarding the city's application for federal funding assistance in the proposed expansion of its wastewater treatment plant.

The city applied in 1979, and received, a grant for a Step I study of the feasibility of doubling the capacity of the wastewater treatment plant from one million gallons per day to two million gallons. That study was concluded in 1981 and the results and an application for a Step II grant were forwarded to the Texas Department of Water Resources in Austin which was to review all such applications and set priorities for any future funding. A Step II grant, if approved, would be followed by applications for a Step III grant which, if approved, would fund actual construction.

Results of an appraisal of Jenkins Street, a 100 by 400-foot strip of land between Linden and Cherry, are scheduled for announcement Monday night, to be followed by the council's decision on whether to close the street. If the decision is for closing, the land will be offered to abutting property owners at the appraised value.

Also on the agenda Monday, council members are scheduled to open bids on sale of a 1976 three-ton garbage truck and packer. Bid opening was originally set for July 26 but no bids were received and officials re-advertised.

In a routine item, council members are scheduled to appoint a city health officer for the fiscal year from Oct. 1, 1982, through Sept. 30, 1983.

The regular council meeting will follow a joint hearing between the council and the planning and zoning commission at 7:15 p.m.

Weekend weather

Skies are expected to be partly cloudy with a possibility of afternoon and evening thundershowers through Monday. Highs are expected to range in the mid 90s to near 100, lows in the 70s.

Area sales tax collections show healthy gain for '82

Sales in Rockport and Fulton for the first seven months of 1982 show a healthy gain over those for the same period last year, based on the monthly sales tax rebate from the office of State Comptroller Bob Bullock.

Bullock's office has mailed checks for $6,156.19 to Fulton and $56,120.57 to Rockport representing the cities' shares of the sales tax collected during the month of July. In July last year, the rebate checks were for $5,610.16 and $50,397.97 respectively.

Through July, Rockport's total sales tax collections, based on a one percent tax, amounted to $216,937.55, an increase of 3.85 percent over the $209,897.16 collected for the first seven months of 1981.

Fulton's January-July sales tax collection totalled $28,280.37, an 18.01 percent increase over the $23,964.92 collected last year.

Aransas Pass received a check for July sales tax collections of $69,768.98, slightly more than $21,000 ahead of July, 1981, collections for a year-to-date total of $279,258.68, an increase of 19.18 percent over last year.

Sales tax collections in Ingleside, totalling $86,312.06 for the year to date, were .70 percent over last year's. Ingleside's July rebate check for $18,267.82 was slightly less than the $20,963.66 collected for July last year.

Statewide, the local sales tax collections are averaging about 12 percent above collections for the first seven months of 1981, Bullock said. The July rebates to the 967 Texas cities that collect the one percent city sales tax totalled $97.9 million.

Cove Harbor lease awarded

During a special meeting of the Aransas County Navigation District Tuesday evening the commissioners considered a sealed bid proposal to lease lot 43 at Cove Harbor submitted by J.E. Lawhon.

Lawhon submitted a bid of $1445 per year for the lot saying he wanted to build a bait stand and sandwich shop on the property that is next to the Cove Harbor boat ramp.

Commissioner Kirk Holman said he objected to the lease because it would block off part of the bulkhead next to the boat ramp.

Commissioner Dave Maguglin pushed for approving the lease, saying, "Gentlemen this track of land has never generated one cent of revenue for the navigation district. If they would agree to a 50 percent increase at the end of the fifth year of the lease, I would be in favor of this lease."

Holman stated that he would like to have a lease rate that could be raised up to 10 percent every year. Maguglin said if he were a new businessman he would not want an increase for the first five years.

Holman and Maguglin continued the argument for several minutes then Maguglin made a motion to accept the bid.

ACND attorney Reese Rozzell advised the board to include a lease termination clause in the lease and Holman says he wants a sublease clause in the lease and Maguglin said, "They can't sublease without the board's approval."

"We can't approve this lease without a sublease clause," said Holman.

"This board can approve anything it wants as long as there is a two-thirds majority," Maguglin responded.

Rozzell said that by the board making this motion, they were rejecting the lease.

Landrum said a new lease would have to be drawn up but the board voted to accept the lease. Holman abstained because the lease involved a bait stand on navigation property.

Reese insisted on a sublease clause and Commissioner Hillis Dominguez made a motion for the said clause. The board passed it with Holman abstaining for the same reason.

The board also listened to complaints from Simon Lee Sorenson over opposition to a pier being constructed off Water Street near his home.

Sorenson requested that the board members of the ACND not allow the pier to be built saying it would be dangerous in the event of a storm.

Dominguez said the permit for the pier had already been approved by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Later Dominguez told the board he didn't think they could take action on the matter because of the way it was worded on the agenda.

Landrum told the commissioners he wanted to know why the ACND board wasn't notified about the pier and Reese Rozzell said he would call to find out.

Bright spot has developed in the war against drugs

By Senator Lloyd Bentsen

As the reports on our nation's war against drugs become more discouraging, one bright spot has developed.

According to the Drug Enforcement Administration, we have made dramatic strides in the fight to eliminate "angel dust."

When "angel dust," or phencyclidine hydrochloride (PCP), was developed in the mid-50s, it was seen as a promising anesthetic for use in operating rooms. Research, however, showed that the drug produced horrifying psychotic reactions. It literally drove people mad, so it was barred completely for use on humans.

By the mid-70s, "angel dust" was fast becoming one of the most abused drugs in the nation since it could be produced at such a low cost — only $1 per "hit." Between 1976 and 1977, the DEA reported that confiscated dosage units had doubled, from 1.7 million to 3.5 million. This was happening in spite of appalling reports of derangement caused by the drug.

One young man under the influence of "angel dust" pulled out his own teeth with pliers; another gouged out his eyes to avoid seeing grotesque visions; a third youth drank rat poison to kill the rodents he believed had infested his body; and a fourth gnawed his forearms almost to the bone because of "voices" telling him his hands had offended him.

It took six police officers to arrest another young man brandishing a knife who kept such a "death-like" grip on the weapon that officers had to hit his hand with night-sticks. They shattered the knife handle, but the youth still clutched the blade when he finally was subdued. Later examination showed his hand was broken in four places.

These horror stories could not be allowed to continue.

In 1978, I authored and passed through Congress the Psychotropic Substances Act, making it difficult for drug dealers to purchase the chemical piperidine, a key ingredient of

"angel dust." My bill also substantially increased penalties for trafficking in the drug.

Since the law went into effect in 1979, the results have been heartening. Within a year, emergency rooms reported a 24 percent decrease in cases involving "angel dust." Black market prices for piperidine skyrocketed a hundred-fold and the average sentence for "angel dust" traffickers went from two years to six years.

Just recently, the new DEA deputy director Jack Lawn told me the best news yet. He told me that we'd had the most dramatic reduction in "angel dust," by legislation, that he'd ever seen in any drug before.

Hospital emergency cases involving use of "angel dust," he said, have now been cut in half — from approximately 10,000 in 1978 to about 5,000 last year.

That's doing pretty well, as I see it. But I won't be content until we've wiped out this menacing drug entirely.

Begin is very dangerous Austin at Wharf

CARTOON OF THE week: Menachem Begin crouches at the brink of a hill overlooking Beirut, peering down upon the city with binoculars. Dangling from his hip pocket is a limp, hapless, weebeegone puppet, Uncle Sam. Not so funny, eh? Yet when did you last see a funny political cartoon?

Yet another cartoon: A monstrous image of Begin looms over Beirut, a cluster of bombs falling from his upraised hand. The caption beneath reads: "I know how you must feel — I was a terrorist once myself." This cartoon is most positively anti-Begin, possibly anti-Israel, and in the view of some, anti-Semitic. No one wants to be ranked as anti-Semitic. Most of us don't care to be classified as anti-Israel. Many like myself do not hesitate to declare ourselves anti-Begin.

Almost beyond question, Begin has in the past few years, although mostly in recent weeks, done more toward undoing the regard and respect the world has given the Jewish people since WWII than I should have conceived as being humanly possible. Witness the disturbances of late in Europe, and in this country pollsters at least, show that the majority of us are anti-Begin. I am left to wonder to what extent the other two anti's apply?

THE NUMBER ONE lady in my life informed me quite bluntly the other day that she is, well, sick and tired of hearing about the current debacle in the Middle East. So am I, but that doesn't undo its importance.

A few days ago my by long odds favorite political columnist, James Kilpatrick, in a plug for Begin, or should I say Israel. He lobbied in Washington which extended its influence beyond the halls of congress to the national press and elsewhere.

Fact: Because it exists in the Moslem world Israeli has always been and must always remain an armed camp, forever defending itself. Nearly one third of all U.S. foreign aid goes to Israel, yet its people represent less than one tenth of one percent of all the people in the world. A thought: Although President Reagan claims to have been taken by surprise when Israel invaded Lebanon the record is clear that he could only have been surprised if his staff had failed to tell him what everyone else who follows world affairs knew. Facts are that for weeks before the invasion Israel had openly mobilized and deployed its forces for invasion. In fact the Israeli ambassador in Washington stated that the invasion was coming. One must wonder, was our president afraid of the powerful Jewish lobby? Certainly Begin has not been afraid of President Reagan. In truth he has defied, even kicked Uncle Sam around.

Opinion: An end to hostilities, pending? Don't kid yourself. The scene may shift from Beirut, but it will go on. And count on this, reparations for loss of life and property in Lebanon will be made, but not by the Begin government. So, guess who then? Ah, dear readers, it will come from your pockets and mine.

Opinion: I have said it before. Begin is one of the most dangerous men in the world. He is a patriot, but there comes a time when patriotism becomes evil.

Fact: Until a very few years ago none of us in this country heard anything but the Israeli side of events in the Middle East. Not exactly a tribute to my colleagues of this craft. Mostly, however, this is due to the powerful Israeli

Discrimination angers America

By Congressman Bill Patman

Americans are getting mad about discrimination against our products in world markets, especially by the Japanese. The pain of the recession enlarges our frustration.

In Pontiac, Mich., foreign cars stopped at traffic lights get bumped from behind by angry drivers of American-made cars.

Hundreds of bills have been introduced in Congress calling for retaliation against the Japanese. And that may be necessary.

And that be necessary. Recently, Japan said it would voluntarily hold the level of its car exports to this country down to last year's level. And it relaxed some restrictions on imports — but not enough to make a real dent in its 18 billion dollar trade surplus with us.

Some people argue we simply need to do a better job. They say Japanese workers are more productive ... that Japanese products are better. This has recently been true in certain areas — like memory chips used in computers ... but there are many other areas where the reverse is true.

We can deliver soda ash — used to make glass, soap, enamel, cleaning agents, water softeners and other products — for $180 a ton. That's $100 a ton less than Japan's domestic producers can sell it. Yet, because of Japanese restriction, we have only one percent of their market.

We can deliver paperboard for $390 a ton. That's $200 a ton below their domestic price.

Japan restricts imports of many of our products. These include citrus fruit, beef, leather — even our cars, each of which must be inspected by them, adding to its cost.

Japan will not buy our high-technology products, such as communications equipment, even when they are better than Japanese products.

Our Secretary of Commerce, Malcolm Baldrige, recently pointed out that the Japanese really aren't good innovators. They didn't develop the computer memory-chip industry, for example. We did. But the Japanese excel in manufacturing techniques. Their government has taken American and European breakthroughs and given them to Japanese companies protected from internal competition.

Then the companies undercut world prices — sometimes by dumping products below their own cost — and they grab the world market. Today they have 70 percent of the world market on the most advanced computer memory chip.

The resurgence of Japan's economy has been accomplished, of course, while we bore the burden of their defense.

We, too, have sometimes used protectionism. In 1973, soybean crop failures in several countries caused the price for our soybeans to soar. President Nixon embargoed the crop to make sure we kept adequate supplies at home. We have refused to sell Alaska oil to Japan.

Both sides must be sensitive to the delicate balance of world trade.

This is particularly important to us in Texas. From 1977 to 1980, Texas jumped from sixth to the second biggest state for exports of manufactured goods, behind only California.

And our second biggest market, after Europe, is Japan.

We export oil field equipment, electronic equipment and instruments. Also, dozens of agricultural products, including cotton, feed grains, wheat and flour. We export cottonseed oil, meat, hides, lard and tallow. And we export substantial amounts of sulfur and shrimp.

But perhaps the most striking example of a product that we are not allowed to export freely to Japan and Europe is beef. The European Economic Community agreed in 1979 to annually import 10,000 metric tons of our highest quality beef. But in 1980 and 1981 together imported only 2,400 tons.

Without restrictions, we could triple our exports of beef. This would increase the price for American cattle by $25 a head ... and create thousands of new jobs in feeding, slaughtering and processing.

The latest figures on the Japanese Gross National Product show it is dropping at an annual rate of 3.5 percent. This demonstrates the effect on their own economy of recessions in their major markets. They depend on us and we depend on them. We should work together.

But if the Japanese remain asleep to their obligation to offer us the same full, free trade opportunities that we extend to them, then we'll have to consider new Federal policies that wake them up.

Letters

Despite the story in the Sunday "Call-Times" and the beliefs of many Rockport citizens, Rockport DID NOT "approve" home rule Saturday, Aug. 14. It DID take the first step.

Until a Charter is approved by the voting citizens of Rockport and by the Texas Legislature, the city is still operating under General Law. The 15 elected to write that Charter now need YOUR help. Their meetings will be Open Meetings and since they will be writing YOUR charter — You have an obligation to let them know what you feel Rockport may and may not need.

Since the clock cannot be turned back to let Rockport be "like it used to be", we must be prepared to be in control of its future growth.

During the last Charter Commission Meetings, week after week of meetings were attended by committee members, a representative of the press and usually only one or two others. Hardly an expression of public interest of input. YOU did not let them know why you wanted until it was time to vote.

To you 110 who voted NO last Saturday, let me express the opinion that you really have an added obligation to let these elected members know exactly why you are against Home Rule. Or is it really one or two items in the last Charter presented that you are against?

Speak up at the meetings or to any of the individual members. You may find others who wanted this one item or that one section written differently. Any Charter will be based on intelligent compromises.

These members represent YOU but without your input, they can only guess at what YOU want.

To all of you who took the time to vote — now take the time to be informed and to express your hopes for the guiding of Rockport's future. Don't wait for the rough draft of a Charter to be finished to comment.

It's Your City, it will be Your Charter and You will vote!

Oil theft is big business

By Bill Clayton

AUSTIN — Oil field theft is big business in Texas and the nation. Rough estimates are that oil-related crimes cost industry $200 million a year nationwide. Approximately $100 million worth of these thefts occur in Texas alone. Oil field thieves not only steal crude, but also take valuable oil field equipment that is essential to the timely and orderly development of our energy resources.

It is a fact that these crimes will continue to victimize the oil industry, landowners, royalty owners, truckers and taxpayers unless the officials are able to deal forcefully with the problem.

One of the most urgent problems is the lack of experience and knowledge in dealing with the apprehension and prosecution of oil field thieves. Law enforcement agencies and industry lack experience because oil field crimes were not widespread until the deregulation of domestic crude in early 1981. Since deregulation, many areas with previously little or no exploration and production have been targeted by industry as profitable regions. This has led not only to speculation by the industry, but by potential oil field thieves as well.

New producing regions, such as The Austin Chalk Formation in and around Giddings, have been hardest hit by the new wave of oil field theft. These areas are particularly vulnerable because of lack of experience. Also, geographically scattered production efforts and migrant labor create an even more attractive environment for oil field theft.

The Department of Public Safety and local law enforcement agencies have been fortunate enough to catch some thieves; however, the crisis is so widespread that patrol and investigation efforts cannot zero in on the bulk of illegal activity. The Texas Railroad Commission, which is responsible for regulating the oil and gas industry in Texas, has been active in helping law enforcement agencies track oil field thefts. The Commission, however, has only regulatory power. Enforcement powers are entrusted exclusively to law enforcement agencies.

To further assist the DPS, RRC and local law enforcement agencies, a number of private groups have been established. These groups, most of which maintain a 24-hour hotline to report suspicious oil field activity, have proven successful in exchanging information with agencies and in providing back-up support in investigations.

Reagan frustrated

Many of the things President Reagan tries to do to make it more difficult for the Soviet Union to prepare for ultimate conflict with the West are often bitterly opposed by foreign governments or our own congressmen.

It must be extremely frustrating to President Reagan to see his efforts to keep American technology out of the Soviets' hands come under attack at home and abroad.

A late development in the Soviet gas pipeline dispute is a move in Congress to cancel the president's embargo of equipment for the pipeline to Western Europe. Legislation to accomplish this has been approved by a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee.

Great Britain and France are leading opposition among our Western allies to the U.S. embargo, which would prohibit companies abroad with U.S. licenses from selling pipelining equipment to the Soviets.

The Reagan administration argues the pipeline would bring badly-needed hard currency to the Soviet Union and make Western Europe more dependent on Moscow.

That position is strongly disputed by former Undersecretary of State George Ball, who contends the pipeline would stimulate Western economies and help Western European countries contribute more to defense spending.

After hearing testimony the legislation to cancel the president's embargo could precipitate a constitutional conflict between Reagan and Congress, the subcommittee voted 5-2 to send the bill to the full committee, where it is expected to be considered soon.

Ball told the committee Europe's outrage over the embargo shouldn't be underestimated. He said he had been following European affairs closely for many years and the "anger and bitterness I detect there today I have not seen in the postwar period."

Ball believes Europeans see hypocrisy when the Reagan administration tries to impose what he described as "economic hardships on our Western allies at the very moment he is making a new wheat deal with Moscow."

Ball appears to be talking about apples and oranges. There's a lot of difference between hard currency, pipeline technology and wheat sales.

Jail terms don't necessarily reduce crime

Editors note: The Live Oak Peninsula Philosopher on his grass burr farm looks at a crime report this week.

Dear editor: According to a U.S. Justice Department study, mandatory jail terms don't necessarily reduce crime.

As I understand it, under the mandatory jail term law, which several states have enacted, if you're convicted for example of using a gun to rob or selling drugs to kids, you automatically go to prison, even if you claim you should be let off because your personality is scarred because your great-great grandfather was thrown into debtor's prison in England in 1785 for failing to pay a debt of three shillings, which he always claimed he didn't owe.

In other words, no plea bargaining, no sympathy verdicts, no insanity plea, no suspended sentences, no appealing from one court to another until your lawyer learns you've run out of money. If you used a gun or other deadly weapon you flat go to jail.

But the Justice Department survey claims such a law doesn't necessarily reduce crime, since the crime rate seems to continue to climb.

Well, I know this: when a man automatically goes to jail for using a gun to hold up a filling station or an all-night convenience store or a savings and loan office, any more crime by him has certainly been reduced as long as he's locked up. The law may not have any effect on other criminals but it sure does on him.

You can prove nearly anything by statistics. For some time now some laboratory scientists have been proving certain foods are harmful to humans because they are to rats, only to find out they've been using defective rats. Have long contended we need a laboratory to study defective scientists. Yours faithfully, J.A.

Area fishing report

By TED NORMAN
Fishing is improved in some areas while remaining only fair in others but the early morning rains Thursday should help make fishing excellent over the weekend.

Live bait has been hard to find. Bait stand operators say it is the moon phase that is causing the problem, but most of them hope for plenty of live bait for Saturday and Sunday. Don't forget the Bay Fishing Tournament at St. Charles Bay Marina Aug. 27, 28 and 29. There will be $1500 in prize money, plus trophies and lots of fun and good fishing.

Registration is Friday, Aug. 27, at 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. at the St. Charles Bay Marina. There is an entrance fee of $30 per angler.

KEY ALLEGRO MARINA — Things have been a little slow for the offshore fishermen, but fishing in the canals and under the lights has produced some nice size trout. Frozen bait and offshore bait is available, 729-2761.

KLEINE'S RATTLE-SNAKEPOINT — "Ha, ha, ha, that's a big laugh," is the response to the question of how the fishing is in this area. But a lot of people are out trying and hopefully the rains will improve the situation. Gafftop and a few trout are the rewards of those that tried earlier in the week. Dead bait is plentiful. 729-2898.

COPANO CAUSEWAY FISHING PIER — If you're looking for trout, the conditions are excellent at the pier with the fish running between 11 p.m. and midnight. The bait situation is fair to good with some live bait available. 729-8633.

PALM HARBOR MARINA — Fishing is good but not super good is the word from the marina. Some trout and a few reds are being caught. No live bait but plenty of fresh dead bait is available. 729-8540.

SEA GUN MARINA — The charter boats are running and lots of people are on them, but no report of how the fishing is. However, live bait is available for the weekend. 729-2341.

FULTON HARBOR BAIT — Some people fishing off the wall and catching some trout and flounder. At night things are pretty good under the lights on the pier with some good size trout, small reds and gafftop being landed. Some live bait is available and the situation is looking up and plenty of bait is promised for the weekend. 729-5881.

SANDOLLAR — "It's not very good", is the report from this area. But other reports say there are plenty of fish in the area. One man says between 4 a.m. and 6 a.m. the water is full of good size trout, but they are feeding on minnows and they wouldn't bite anything he tried. But the fish are there. Fresh dead bait is plentiful, but live bait is very rare. 729-8562.

Pirates to open season

In just two weeks, the 1982 Rockport-Fulton Fighting Pirates will take the field to open up their season against Aransas Pass in an annual battle.

In a quiet sort of way, Coach Brian Connolly's Pirates are making ready for the wars ahead of them this season. Hit hard by graduation, the Pirates will be looking for help from the JV squad of a year ago that surprised everyone with the fine record they compiled. Spirit was extremely high on that team, and so far that "Go get 'em" spirit has rubbed off in practice thus far.

The Pirates showcase their wares Friday night in a scrimmage against Ingleside on Pirate soil. Much of South Texas will be watching to see how the Pirates try to replace last year's leading ball carrier, Michael Simmons. Back for his junior year will be Dwayne Walls, who also gained over 1,000 yards a year ago, so the Pirates' foes cannot rest easy. The Pirates have a few other quality players who return from last year's senior-laden club.

So far in August, little nagging injuries have slowed the Pirates. There is also the yearly problem of numbers out for football, but things are shaping up for a good season if the Pirates can make the breaks go their way. The Pirates, at this time, plan just the one pre-season scrimmage.

Gone from the schedule this season is Gregory-Portland, and that should spell relief for many Pirate fans. The Pirates did pick up tough pre-district foes in the Refugio Bobcats and Port Lavaca Sandcrabs. District 15-4A will be like a bed of roses — there are some teams that look better than others, but all of them have thorns and all of them can win if the breaks go their way. Flour Bluff has gotten lots of ink in the press in pre-season polls, and have been ranked high in the state ratings, but until they square off with the other teams, their predicted finish is just ink. Calallen and Beeville will be tough again this season. In fact, all the way down the line, any team can be a stumbling block for their opponents.

Rockport-Fulton's JV and Freshmen teams will play on Thursday evenings at the site opposite of where the varsity will play on Friday. Freshmen will begin their games at 5:30 and the JV will follow that game at about 7:30. The Pirates Varsity schedule follows:

Sept. 3	ARANSAS PASS	There	8:00
Sept. 10	PORT LAVACA	Here	8:00
Sept. 17	WEST OSO	Here	8:00
Sept. 24	REFUGIO	There	8:00

From the candidates To the voters

AUSTIN — Senator Bill Meier, Republican candidate for Attorney General, received an overwhelming show of support from the prestigious Dallas Bar Association.

In the traditional election-year poll conducted by the Dallas Bar Association, Senator Meier received 63 percent of the 1,700 ballots returned while ultra-liberal Democrat Jim Mattox received 37 percent of the votes.

Meier, a conservative state senator for 10 years, said he was "delighted with this strong vote of confidence from the Dallas legal establishment."

This endorsement is especially significant since the Metroplex is "home territory for both of us," Meier said.

"Texas lawyers, like all Texans, want a conservative, stable leader as the lawyer for the state. The attorneys of Dallas know I have always worked for solutions to the problems of the state. They certainly do not want an ultra-liberal, who has not been inside a courtroom in the last six years, as the man responsible for dealing with the state's laws," the Tarrant County Republican continued.

Meier, a practicing attorney for the past 16 years, authored the most extensive and effective anti-crime package in Texas history, passing 10 needed bills in one session. Among the bills authored by Meier are crackdowns on early elements of organized crime before it gets a strong base in Texas and requirements for supervision of felons released early on parole.

He led the fight on the floor of the Texas Senate during consideration of all the "War on Drugs" bills, which favor special attention to the problems of adults selling drugs to minors.

Whitney Vaky expands

Whitney Vaky Insurance at 801 E. Market is expanding. "We're almost doubling our office space," says Mary Griffin at the Whitney Vaky office, "adding a couple of offices and storage space."

A permit for the $21,000 676-square-foot addition was issued Monday, Aug. 16, at Rockport's City Hall. Robert Rios of Corpus Christi is contractor for the project. Griffin said, of the need for expansion, "We've grown so much, especially in the last year, we're on top of each other."

At present the office, headed by Jim Cox, has 10 staff members.

JIM AND JOANNE WOOD WERE JOINED BY Rockport Mayor Burt Mills and members of the Rockport Area Chamber of Commerce at ribbon-cutting ceremonies for Jim's Music Emporium at 10 a.m. Wednesday, Aug. 18. The Emporium carries guitars and a full line of guitar accessories, amplifiers, records, sheet music, books and will soon have cassettes and eight-tracks. Lessons are available in all types of guitar, clarinet, piano, banjo, saxophone and drums and the Woods are authorized Guild dealers. In addition, says Jim, "we can special order in 24 hours and we can get anything that's still available to the wholesalers." (Photo by Pat Blair)

31 permits are granted

AUSTIN — Railroad Commission Chairman Jim Nugent has announced that 31 permits to operate new pipelines in Texas were granted by the RRC in July.

Through the first seven months of this year, the Commission has issued 102 permits to operate new lines. For the same period last year, 97 permits were approved.

Twelve of the permits in July were for gathering pipelines, nine were for trunk transmission lines and three were for gas plants. Seven were for multi-purpose or other lines.

Gathering lines bring oil and gas from production leases, while a trunk transmission line is a larger diameter line into which smaller lines connect. At gas plants, natural gas is stripped of the liquid hydrocarbons usually present in wellhead gas.

Twenty-nine of the newly-permitted lines will transport gas, while one will move petroleum products and another will transport crude oil.

Private pipelines accounted for 18 permits last month, while 13 were for gas utilities.

In July, 10 permits were granted for lines in deep South Texas, six in West Central Texas, four in the Refugio area, three in the San Angelo area, two each in Southeast Texas and the Panhandle and one each in East Central Texas, North Texas and the Lubbock and Midland areas.

Permit request

MATAGORDA ISLAND Corpus Christi Oil and Gas Company, Corpus Christi, permission to install a 4½ inch pipeline, buried a minimum of three feet by jetting, in the Gulf of Mexico, Matagorda Island Area, State Tracts 711, 719 and 718, approximately 15 miles south of Seadrift, Texas. Comments must be submitted on or before Sept. 1.

Seven injured in two accidents

Seven were reported injured following two traffic accidents Monday afternoon and evening in Rockport, according to police reports.

Six of the injuries occurred about 9:45 p.m. Monday on Rockport Beach when a car driven by Thomas Leon Sain of Rockport went out of control while making a curve and flipped over.

Sain and five passengers in the vehicle were reported hurt in the mishap, including Lourie Dietrich, Richard Slayton, Melody Sain and Rodney Schexnider, all of Rockport, and Dawn Steptes of Fulton.

Sain was ticketed for failure to control speed to avoid an accident.

Earlier Monday, about 3:45 p.m., Timothy J. Lauderdale of Rockport was taken to Memorial Medical Center in Corpus Christi after suffering injuries in a two-car collision at the intersection of Market and Pearl streets.

Driver of the other vehicle involved, Tracy Kent Walls also of Rockport, was ticketed for failure to yield to right-of-way.

Helms to be guest speaker

State Senator Walter Mengden, Republican from Harris County, has announced that U.S. Senator Jesse Helms, Republican from North Carolina, will be the featured speaker at the luncheon honoring Mengden during his Governor-for-a-Day Ceremonies on Sept. 6.

10:30 a.m. in the Senate Chamber at the State Capitol, followed by a reception in the Governor's Office.

Tickets for the luncheon are $25 each and can be obtained by writing Mengden Luncheon Fund, P.O. Box 10998-585, Austin, TX 78766.

Guillett weds Mark George

Vicki Lea Guillett and Mark Daniel George were married at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 14, at the First Presbyterian Church in Rockport with Rev. John Bradshaw officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Jack and Judy Guillett of Rockport.

The groom is the son of B.L. George of Portland and Mrs. Bettye Hale of Bayside.

Lisa Guillett of Rockport, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Gina Guillett, sister of the bride, Gwen Wendell and Jill Oliver, all of Rockport.

The groom's brother, Bobby George Jr. of Bayside, was the best man. Charlie Edler of Rockport was the head usher, while Mark McGlathery of Austin, David McCready and Richard Dominguez of Rockport were groomsmen.

Vicki was given away by her father, Jack Guillett. The bride wore a floor-length gown of white organza, which was handmade by her mother. Hundreds of pearls shimmered on the bodice and surrounding lace trim. The hem was trimmed by a double-layer bias ruffle which flowed into a chapel-length train. The gown featured a sweetheart neckline and sheer, puffed elbow-length sleeves.

The fingertip veil of white tulle was crowned by a wreath of white dendrobium orchids.

She carried a magnificent cascade of soft yellow spider mums, white dendrobium orchids and white cattleya orchids with trailing ivy.

The bridesmaids' dresses were handsewn by Irma Ocha. They were floor-length dresses of pale yellow taffeta, trimmed with ruffles at the neckline, armholes and hem. They were tied at the waist with a wide sash which was tied in back with a bow.

Each girl wore a cluster of white dendrobium orchids behind one ear and carried cascade bouquets of yellow spider mums, white dendrobium orchids and lavender freesia with trailing ivy.

The mother of the bride wore a street-length dress of blue-green silk with a white orchid corsage.

The groom, groomsmen, head usher and father of the bride wore silver-gray tuxedos.

The church was decorated with tall, arching birch trees with pastel buds, white baskets of yellow and lavender daisies and tall ficus trees.

Following the ceremony, a reception was given by the bride's parents at their home. It was held outside in a tropical setting with approximately 100 guests attending. Hot and cold hors d'oeuvres were served. The reception also featured an open bar, beer and a champagne fountain. Flowers and greenery floated in the lighted pool with tiki torches lighting the yard.

Brown is wed to Porterfield

Patricia Ann Brown of Austin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F.M. Brown of Fulton, became the bride of Brian K. Porterfield of Austin at 6 p.m. on Friday, Aug. 13. The wedding was held at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J.D. Porterfield of Round Rock.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Lonnie Birmingham of Corpus Christi, uncle of the bride. Vows were exchanged before an improvised altar of brass candelabrum holding long white tapers. Potted plants of hues from pink to burgundy formed an aisle into the alcove where the ceremony was performed.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a long gown of embroidered French illusion, accented with a V-shaped yoke of Chantilly lace which formed the capelet sleeves, the high neck was accented with appliques of the same lace. The three-tiered skirt, which fell from a fitted bodice, was accented with two rows of Chantilly lace at each tier. She chose a picture hat, the brim being accented with lace appliques of Chantilly lace. White tulle tied around the crown fell from the back, forming a short veil. The hat was the bride's own design and creation. She wore a pearl necklace, a gift from her grandmother, the late Mrs. Artie Brown. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of pink and burgundy silk roses, accented with greenery and streamers of pink and burgundy ribbon tied in love knots.

Debbie Brown of Austin, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a two-piece dress of magenta Indian cloth, the neckline was lavishly trimmed in lace of the same color. The four-tiered skirt was prairie-length. She carried a nosegay of pink and burgundy silk roses with streamers of the same colors tied in love knots.

The groom wore a silver tuxedo with a white ruffled shirt edged in pink. He wore a pink silk rose boutonniere.

Jay Kelly Porterfield of Austin was his brother's best man. Usher was Melvin Joe Brown of West Columbia, brother of the bride.

A buffet reception followed the ceremony. The bride's table was laid with a pink taffeta cloth, with a white net overlay. Pink ribbons and pink silk flowers enhanced the sides and corners.

The double-tiered white and pink wedding cake held a miniature little boy and girl under a heart-shaped arch. White swans held the posts between the tiers. Burgundy candles in cut glass holders and the bride's bouquet centered the table. Punch was served from a cut glass bowl and pink napkins were used. Rochelle Smith and Cathy Deskins of Austin served in the house party.

The groom's cake was chocolate, topped with a miniature horse-drawn stagecoach with the inscription, "Get me to the wedding on time." The cake was made by the groom's grandmother, Mrs. Luther Porterfield.

Rice bags of pink tulle tied with burgundy ribbon made by the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Belle Stockbridge, were passed out.

Special out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Luther Porterfield and Mr. and Mrs. James Kelly of Waco, grandparents of the groom; Mrs. Lonnie Birmingham of Corpus Christi; and Mrs. Melvin Joe Brown and Andrea of West Columbia.

The bride is a 1977 graduate of Rockport-Fulton High School and has been employed at National Western Life Insurance Co. in Austin for the past five years.

The groom graduated from Round Rock High School in 1977 and is employed by Modern Electric Inc. of Austin.

Bon Appetit!

By Ann Thomas

Hi, readers! It's good to be back after several weeks' absence. I hope all of you are having an enjoyable summer. Those of us in Rockport have enjoyed all of our summer tourists and summer residents. One of my summer visitors was my sister-in-law Diane Cauble, who while visiting us prepared some delicious outdoor food! She shares the recipes with us this week.

DIANE'S MEXICAN BRISKET

- 1 c. brisket
- 1 c. garlic salt
- onion salt
- pepper
- 2 cans rotel tomatoes & chilis

Wash brisket, leaving it wet. Shake on seasoning to taste. Mash rotel up. Put meat in heavy-duty aluminum foil and place in oven-proof pan. Pour rotel mixture over it and seal foil tightly. Bake in 350 degrees F. oven for six hours (or longer if very large and thick).

DIANE'S PLAIN BBQ BRISKET

Use same ingredients except the rotel tomatoes and substitute 1 cup barbecue sauce. Prepare as Mexican brisket.

DIANE'S COOK-OUT PORK & BEANS

- 1 large can of pork & beans
- salt and pepper
- 1 large or 2 med. onions, chopped fine
- 1/4 cup prepared barbecue sauce
- 2 tsp. sugar
- 3 slices bacon, cut into small pieces

Put all of the ingredients into a skillet or dutch oven and cook until mixture becomes thick, about half an hour on med. heat.

Thanks Diane, for all the easy to prepare recipes! See you all next week. Until then, bon appetit!

Healthy eating insures summer fun

COLLEGE STATION — Fun-filled summer months can be fast-paced, making it easy to simply "grab-a-bite" without thinking about nutrition.

"Keep in mind that good health is no accident, and it can be wrecked by poor nutrition," warns Dr. Dymple C. Cooksey, food and nutrition specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. "Summer hungries" can be fended off with sandwiches and sodas, but these alone are not enough," Cooksey says.

Each of the major food groups — including milk, cheese and other dairy products; meat, poultry, seafood, legumes and nuts, including peanut butter; breads and cereals; and fruits and vegetables — are important and provide essential nutrients.

In addition, sugars, fats and oils fall naturally into eating patterns, she says. "As a team working together, selections from the major food groups satisfy all of the body's nutritional needs," Cooksey explains. Within the groups are many choices to avoid low nutrient density foods.

A healthy diet should be limited in rich baked goods and high calorie snacks. Meals can be planned around fresh fruits and vegetables since they are nutritious and plentiful at this time of the year.

"Calorie watchers should choose lean meat, poultry, fish, skim milk and low fat cheese," Cooksey says.

Concentrate on variety. No single food contains every vitamin, mineral, amino acid, and essential fatty acid the body needs. East a wide selection of foods to get all the required nutrients. A dietary "rut" is not only boring, but can also be a health hazard, Cooksey added.

"If only..."
Just two words, but they are devastating.

They are destructive words, I say, because usually they are followed by a wish for something that never was and probably never shall be.

They destroy our self-esteem: "If only I were young again..." "If only I did not have this cursed affliction..." "If only I had his ability to..."

And on it goes. How much better to be happy about who you are, where you are, what you can do and what you can become through the grace of God.

Those nasty words destroy our personal relationships: "If only he would pick up his clothes..." "If only she wouldn't look so sloppy..." "If only he were more like Irma's husband..." "If only she were more like Sam's wife..." And so on.

No one is perfect. We should stop this senseless comparison of a real flesh-and-blood mate with an imaginary perfect idealistic fantasy that never will materialize. The first time a husband or wife catches himself/herself uttering, "If only," he/she should head for the soap dish and promptly fill the mouth with lots of cleansing suds.

"If only my boss were..." "If only my pastor..." "If only my teacher were..." "If only my students were..." The list is endless.

There is one person you can change. Only one. Yourself. You might be surprised at the changes in others if you take the first step.

"IF ONLY you would."

And on the seventh day God finished his work which he had done, and he rested on the seventh day from all his work which he had done. So God blessed the seventh day and hallowed it, because on it God rested from all his work which he had done in creation.

Keeping in touch

That mail-box on the city corner... that post office at the country crossroads... what would we do without them?

Life is too complex for us to live by ourselves. Man's interests and his welfare reach far beyond the boundaries of his community. Communication with people and corporations hundreds of miles away is a part of modern living that we take for granted. We have to "keep in touch."

But long before life became so complex, men discovered their need for another kind of communication—prayer. The courage and faith and hope which steel men for the challenge of each day come from God. The deep spiritual needs of the soul can be supplied only by keeping in touch with God.

We think our mail-boxes are indispensable! Even so, one church means more to a community than all its postal facilities. For not so long ago men lived very happily without a postal system. But men have never lived happily without God!

Pick Terry house: the ghosts are quiet

By PAT BLAIR
Staff writer

If there are ghosts in Pick Terry house, they're quiet ones.

Erin Turner doesn't think there are any — and she should know; she and her husband Rex are the current occupants of the house at 618 N. Magnolia.

Information on the house is sketchy — and some of it is conflicting. Like the date it was built and the builder.

Information at Rockport's Chamber of Commerce shows the structure was built in 1867 or '68 by Terry — whose full name is shown as Pickett Hercules Terry.

But an abstract secured in 1951 by Harry Traylor shows the builder and first owner of the property as John Gibney. According to the abstract, a deed dated March 26, 1869, recorded in Vol. B of the Transcribed Records of Aransas County shows sale of the property by Joseph F. Smith and John H. Wood to John Gibney.

Traylor's history adds that Gibney was a hog buyer and boatman and was reportedly drowned in a winter of 1876 after slipping off his ice-covered boat. The body was never recovered.

According to that history, the house was built in 1869.

The house, according to Traylor's history, went to Gibney's heirs, L. Garner and Marcella Garner who on Sept. 26, 1876, sold it to Laura O. Terry, Pick Terry's wife.

Terry, according to local rumor, hung himself in the house. "I don't know where," Erin said during a recent visit in her kitchen. "We don't have any ghosts."

At some point during the Depression period, the early 1930s, the house was reportedly abandoned. The next mention of it in deed records is on Sept. 16, 1938, when Terry's heirs sold the property to Gordon Gibson.

On Dec. 12, 1945, Gibson sold it to Joe L. Johnson — who owned Johnson Drug Store in Rockport.

Mrs. Johnson still owned the house in the mid or later 1970s when it was bought by Hugh and Jane Goodrich. The Turners moved in a couple of years ago.

The four front rooms of the house are the original structure, says Erin, as is the exterior cedar siding. The rear rooms — a dining room, a kitchen and a room now used as a general living area but that might once have been a porch — were added later, since the Depression, Erin thinks.

"I think it was done in stages," says Erin. "And I'd love to know why they built a slanting dining room. It does slant!" she added emphatically. "I bet I have a good inch and a half difference between one side and the other."

"There's not a lot of information on the Terrys," she added. "I understand there are no records. The original courthouse (the one predating the Moorish-style structure torn down in the late 1950s) burned, I'm told, and those records burned with it."

Erin says the front rooms of the house are built of solid cypress and she thinks the massive front doors — there are two of them — come with the original hardware.

She isn't sure though — and she'd like to know more. Who was Pick Terry? (Or, for that matter, John Gibney?) When, exactly, was the house built — and by whom?

It might be nice if there were a ghost or two around.

And if they were, perhaps, a little talkative...

C.A.R. team investigates ranch headquarters

A team of archaeologists at UTSA's Center for Archaeological Research (C.A.R.) has discovered that a large herd of "vacuado" once grazed at a Spanish colonial ranch near Floresville.

Trouble is, no one seems to know exactly what a vacuado was. That's just one of the difficulties confronting researchers trying to piece together information about the lifestyles of Indians in South Texas during the late 1700s. A lack of proper records is compounded by the fact that not all the archives dealing with the Spanish colonial period have been properly indexed or translated.

In addition, records that are available occasionally contain words which appear to be from a dialect no longer in use, as seems to be the case with the mysterious vacuado. Yet, Anne Fox and her team of C.A.R. archaeologists enjoy the challenge of finding pieces of the puzzle that tell the story of South Texas' past.

Fox's team recently completed its third investigation of Las Cabras, a Spanish colonial ranch located on the west side of the San Antonio river south of Floresville. The research is being completed for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, which plans to develop a historical park in the area. Fox plans to return to the state again next year for additional research.

According to Fox, cattle were originally grazed near the missions. However, as the population of the town grew, this practice became unfeasible and the missions began to locate their ranching operations farther away. Mission Espada chose Los Cabras for its site, which was operated from 1750 to the late 1700s.

Courtenay Jones, one of the archaeologists involved in the investigation, said the missions originally controlled vast areas of land around San Antonio. When immigrants began arriving to settle and build ranches, they found little land available. Consequently, in 1794, the Spanish government turned over mission-controlled lands to immigrant ranchers.

While Las Cabras was in operation for Espada, padres at the mission wrote in their reports to Mexico of the successes they had in training the Indians to care for the cattle and goats which supplied food for the mission. Only 26 people, including men, women and children, handled the large ranching operation.

In 1772 an inventory taken of the holdings at Las Cabras showed 470 horses, 1,200 head of cattle and 1,100 sheep. Also listed among small livestock with sheep and goats were the vacuado, numbering slightly over 1,600.

"In a systematic way we are discovering exact wall lines of structures on the site, and trying to determine the lifestyles of the Indians that inhabited the area," Fox said of the team's work. "We have found evidence of a three-room stone structure in addition to a number of brush and thatch houses, plus corrals."

She said the lifestyle of the Indians operating the ranch echoed those at the mission, but on a simpler scale. The site is very well preserved and the team has recovered quite a bit of ceramics which they hadn't anticipated finding.

Jones noted the lifestyles of the people at Las Cabras represented a mixture of cultures, mingling Indian and Spanish influences. The artifacts recovered ranged from crude Indian-style pottery to fine examples of imported Spanish ceramics. Other artifacts which the team has recovered include hardware, religious articles, crucifixes and beads.

Other members of the group investigating Las Cabras were Lois Flynn, Kathy Gonzalez, Maggie Merteus, Margie Greco and Dennis Knepper.

Sex roles distinct in animal world

Different roles for the sexes may be a topic of debate for men and women, but in the animal kingdom there's no controversy. Physical, behavioral and demographic variations between sexes, which can be pronounced, are often a means to survival for animals, according to the current issue of International Wildlife magazine.

And unlike their human counterparts, who sometimes say men get all the advantages, females in some animal species get a far better existence than the males in their lives. But among animals, the pressure to survive often puts the female in the lead role — or at least gives her the more desirable lifestyle.

For instance, female red phalaropes, who are larger than their mates, get their pick when it comes to lifestyles. In this species the females lay their eggs in clutches on the Arctic tundra and then turn them over to the males for incubation. While the males raise the families, the females head for the beach, where they cavort in groups with other liberated females.

Size is also an advantage for the female American kestrel. The bigger female kestrels, which dominate the males, take over the best hunting grounds — the farm fields or grasslands of Texas and Arizona. The forests and scrublands — where prey is harder to catch — are left to the males.

Giraffes and little brown bats also divide their habitats according to sex, says the magazine. Female giraffes prefer wide open savannas in Africa, while males are most often found in wooded areas. Among little brown bats, males and females spend their time in different roosts. In one abandoned mine shaft in New York state, the females took over the upper passage, while males outnumbered females five-to-one in the cooler but more humid lower passage.

Size isn't always an advantage when it comes to deciding who has priority among males and females. In the rain forests of Australia, males of a certain kind of marsupial mouse are larger than their mates, but they die sooner than the females, leaving scarce food supplies to females and their progeny. In fact, from November through January, one Australian researcher found no males alive at all. The thriving females, though, were either pregnant or with young.

Among the males of many species, lifestyle is a greater threat to survival than it is for females. For example, intense fighting for mates among male gray seals kills off up to 40 percent of the male population each year. Although equal numbers of each sex are born each year, the male population quickly dwindles, to the point where cows outnumber bulls by 10 or 13 to one in the average population.

But females are often at risk in the early stages of life. In crowded troops of pig-tailed monkeys, females are more likely to attack a pregnant peer if she is carrying a female rather than a male fetus. And young female monkeys are more vulnerable than males among toque monkeys of Sri Lanka. If food is in short supply, young females are the last to eat and the first to die of starvation.

Differences between males and females abound in the animal world, according to wildlife biologist Anne Innis Dagg, because the sexes have evolved to go at things in different ways. "And they have evolved this way," she concludes, "so that their offspring will have the best chance of surviving."

School starts Aug. 30

All new students who are planning on attending Rockport-Fulton High School, grades nine through 12, should have started their registration in the principal's office of the high school and should have registration completed by 4 p.m. Friday, Aug. 27.

The office will be open from 8 a.m. to noon and from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. New students are those students who did not attend any of the Aransas County Public Schools such as Rockport-Fulton Junior High School or Rockport-Fulton High School.

Students who owe for school obligations from the previous years should pay those obligations to be properly registered to pick up schedules. Those students who were notified of a need for updating of their immunization records should take care of this to be properly registered.

New students should bring their report cards, book card and health record showing proof of having immunizations for tetanus, diphtheria and polio in the last 10 years and rubella (measles) since 1968.

Students may pick up their schedules in the high school principal's office.

All new students should be enrolled before Aug. 27 as school will begin on Monday, Aug. 30, at 8:15 a.m., and students should be prepared to meet all of their classes the first day of school.

Hot environments can create serious illness

COLLEGE STATION — Heat related illnesses such as heat stroke, heat exhaustion and heat cramps can occur to anyone working in hot environments. But they are more likely to occur among workers who have not been given time to adjust to working in the heat or among those who have been away from hot conditions and have gotten used to lower temperatures.

"Humans are, to a large extent, capable of adjusting to heat," says Dr. Gary S. Nelson, safety engineer with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. "Under normal circumstances this adjustment will take about a week, as the body undergoes a series of changes which make heat more endurable."

On the first day of work in a hot environment, body temperature, pulse rate and general discomfort will increase. With each succeeding daily exposure, these gradually decrease. After the body adjusts, the worker should be able to work with less strain and reduced distress. Summer hot spells or the first day back on the job after a leisurely vacation, extended illness or injury are likely to catch the worker unacclimated.

"Heat stress on the job during hot periods may be lowered by temporarily making work easier, decreasing the speed at which work is performed, or increasing the frequency or duration of rest periods," says Nelson.

Rather than exposing themselves to long periods of work in the heat, persons should use shorter work-rest cycles, suggests the engineer. Short rest periods throughout the day allow the body to get rid of excess heat and slow the production of internal body heat.

Outdoor workers are especially subject to changes in heat and humidity, says Nelson. A hot spell or an unusual rise in humidity can create overly stressful conditions for a few hours or days. During such periods postpone non-essential work, obtain workers from other jobs or extra helpers to assist those working in the heat, use caution if workers not normally exposed to heat are suddenly working in it, and occasionally allow younger or more physically fit workers to take over.

"Resting periodically in cool surroundings reduces the stress of working in a hot environment," notes Nelson. "The rest area should be close to the workplace. Rest is most beneficial when breaks are short but frequent. As environmental heat increases, increase the frequency and length of rest periods."

In the course of a day's work in the heat, a worker may sweat away as much as three gallons of fluid containing vital dissolved substances. Because so much heat disorders are caused by dehydration and loss of salt, water intake during the workday must equal the amount of sweat. A worker should not depend on thirst to signal when and how much to drink. Instead, he or she should drink fluids every 15 or 20 minutes and more than enough to satisfy thirst, suggests the engineer.

Unacclimated workers lose much more salt in their sweat than workers who are used to the heat, but everyone loses some. The best way to replace this is the have a salt solution (one-fourth tablespoon per gallon) available as drinking water. Workers should liberally salt their food and do whatever they can to replace lost salt. Nelson cautions, however, that persons with heart problems or those on a low sodium diet or intake must not be given salt. Instead, they should consult their physician on how to handle heat conditions.

"Choice of clothing is also important in hot weather," says Nelson. "Clothing inhibits the transfer of heat between a person and the surrounding environment."

In hot jobs, where air temperature is less than skin temperature, wearing clothing reduces the body's ability to lose heat. But when air temperature is higher than skin temperature, clothing helps prevent the transfer of heat from the air to the body. On the hottest of sunny summer days, for instance, conditions may be intolerable for a worker wearing only shorts, and tolerable for a worker in shirt and trousers. The advantage of wearing clothing is nullified if clothes interfere with the evaporation of sweat, says Nelson. Avoid tight, closely fitting garments and synthetic fabrics which will interfere with evaporation. In humid climates, wear loosely fitted garments made of loosely woven fabrics, such as thin cotton, because they permit air movement close to the skin. And where possible, use fans to provide maximum air flow around individuals.

For more information on coping with hot work environments, contact your county extension agent and ask for publication L-1858.

Pirate band at camp

Rockport-Fulton Pirate Band members left Tuesday morning, Aug. 10, to attend band camp at Northwood Institute near Dallas.

Although the four days of camp were filled with sessions of marching practice, sectionals, rehearsals and good food, there was still time for swimming, volleyball and hiking. Friday afternoon was spent at Six Flags Over Texas.

During camp, band members were fortunate to have band camp instructors teach the sectionals and help the students individually. The instructors were Phillip Hewett, percussion; Randy Detrick, low brass; Richard Blaylock, saxes and low woodwinds; Teri Detrick, flags; Debbie Barber, clarinets and flutes; Scott Freedy, trumpet; and Will Hewett, drum majors.

The students participated in learning new drills and marching steps, as well as musical scores. Different sections competed in marching contests, with prizes awarded.

The camp proved to be a successful learning experience and will enhance the overall band program for the Aransas County Independent School District. It is hoped that it will become an annual affair.

The trip was the joint effort of the Rockport-Fulton Band Boosters Club, band members and their parents and the ACISD. Sponsors for the trip were Mr. and Mrs. Boyce Laqua, Mrs. Johnette Brown, Mrs. Jean Strait, Mrs. Glenda Blankenship, Clouis Fisher and Mrs. Vickie Moon.

The Band Boosters will meet at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Aug. 24, at the band hall to discuss plans for the upcoming calendar sales. This activity was a major fundraising project which helped to finance the band camp. Any parent or person interested in helping is invited to attend.

All 'Eyes' on Sprinkle

Gene Sprinkle is somewhat of a legend around the Rockport-Fulton area. Born and raised in Fulton, he has put 40 years of experience into Gene Sprinkle Service Inc., a firm which does "just about anything."
His services include construction of docks, piers, piling, decks, steps, boat houses, bulkhead and piling supports, as well as marine salvage. He also does quite a bit of carpentry work, including patios and fences, made custom to order. He even has a prefabricated pier for people who want to cut costs. "We try to build what our customer wants,"

he says, "what works best within his budget."
Sprinkle feels his firm is "best qualified to give our customers answers on what to do about bulkheads, piers, docks, planning, etc." He should know, he's

"worked on docks, piers, ramps and pilings from Padre Island to the Brazos River." In addition, he's built 80 percent of the docks on Key Allegro.
He was the subject of an
"Eyes of Texas" television program filmed last year.
It's been shown twice on T.V., but he's been so busy he's missed it both times.
"The program called me a legend," he says with a smile. "It's hell being a legend in your own time."

"Contrary to what our competitors say, we are the oldest and most experienced crew in town," Sprinkle says. Along with his wife Hazel, who runs his office, he employs a crew of three men.
Gene Sprinkle Service
Inc. has its office at 4th and Broadway in Fulton. The phone number is 729-7463 or 729-6406.

Cheerleaders get ready for new season

The Rockport-Fulton High School varsity and junior varsity cheerleaders have been working hard all summer preparing for the 1982 football season.

Both squads attended Cheerleading Camp at Texas A&I University in Kingsville July 19-22. While there, the varsity squad earned two blue superior ribbons. The junior varsity squad earned two blue superior ribbons along with two red excellent ribbons. Spirit sticks were awarded each night to both squads. The varsity squad was one of four squads selected to compete for the award of excellence at the camp. After the competition, the girls were chosen as runners-up. Each girl received a certificate along with a plaque which will be placed in the trophy case at the high school.

The 1982-83 Rockport-Fulton High School varsity cheerleaders are Janice Moses, head cheerleader; Cheryl Hunter; Vicki James; Sandi Stryker; Tammy Wendland; and Pam Willett.

Legible addresses save lives

How easily can your address be found?

According to "Changing Times" magazine, a common complaint by emergency vehicle drivers is the unreadable address; either missing, incomplete or indecipherable.

The size and location of house numbers are very important in getting help to your home quickly. Numbers should be large and clearly displayed so they can be read from the middle of the street, from both directions, day or night.

Check your address for readability before there is an emergency.

Budget

reportedly allowed $2,645 trade-in for the old ACND pickup.

During the special meeting Commissioner Holman said he would like to make a short presentation on the budget. After he arrived at a blackboard and began the presentation Commissioner Hillis Dominguez said, "Wait a minute, in my mind we approved a budget."

"Yes, but you're spending $21,000 more than you have coming in," responded Holman.

Commissioner Dave Maguglin joined into what had become a yelling match, saying, "Kirk, you're wasting everybody's time. I'm not asking a question, I'm making a statement."

Holman continued his presentation briefly, saying he believed there should be a budget for each harbor and one for recreation. "We are subsidizing the city harbor because of unusually low slip rates," he said.

Aransas County Navigation District Chairman Bobby Landrum defended the budget by saying, "I think we know where the money is coming from in Cove Harbor."

Maguglin returned to the argument, saying he's only concerned about what's going to happen for three months. "I'm not worried about the next year, I'm worried about the next three months," he said.

Holman said Maguglin should be worried about the whole year.

Sorenson said the matter had to be resolved by August 23 and Rozzell suggested the commissioners call an emergency meeting Monday, Aug. 23.

Also on the agenda was opposition from Mrs. Ralph Winkelman to the August 3 request for a temporary structure to be located on the site where a maritime museum is to be built.

Landrum said the matter had been tabled and told Winkelman she would be notified of any action to be taken on the matter.

and subsequent meeting were Ralph Winkelman, Richard McMakin, Eddie Ratliff, Jerry Beattie, Dick Lilly, Pat Brown, Tommy Griffith, Marty Dillon Renfro, Gayle Atchley, Mary Lou Tiner and Dr. Curtis Kovacs.

Armstrong, McMakin, Walston and Harlan were members of the charter commission that drafted Rockport's first proposed charter in 1979-80.

Pastures, rangelands ripe for wildfire

COLLEGE STATION — Current hot, dry weather is making Texas pastures and ranges ripe for wildfires.

"Some areas of Texas have had abundant grass growth from spring and early summer rains, so the fuel supply is there for wildfires," said Dr. B.J. Ragsdale. "Better managed ranges are especially vulnerable as there is an abundant supply of fuel."

Wildfires often erupt this time of the year due to lightning and careless use of fire, said the range specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

"Fire is a natural phenomena that had a major influence in developing and maintaining grasslands and savannahs," Ragsdale said. "And it is being proven as a valuable range improvement tool. Used under proper conditions, fire is a valuable asset. However, a wildfire can do untold damage."

Everyone stands to lose from wildfires. Desirable forage plants may be reduced in vigor or killed, forage for fall and winter is lost, wildlife habitats can be damaged, air and water quality is lowered, recreational value of the burned area is altered and the burned area is an eyesore. Additionally, livestock may be lost and fencing and other improvements damaged or destroyed, noted the specialist.

"Prevention is the best cure for wildfires," Ragsdale said. "Use extreme caution with fire of any kind." He especially urged people who work outdoors and sportsmen to use care while the threat of fire is great.

Any wildfire should be reported immediately to the nearest authority, the specialist said.

Ragsdale urged county governments to develop or update rural fire fighting plans so wildfires can be effectively controlled. Equipment should be in order and easily located.

Also, management of burned areas should be planned to insure reestablishment.

ishment of forage plants. This should include grazing and wildlife management and possibly grass seeding to insure a ground cover.

"Fire, prescribed for use under specific conditions and controlled, can be a useful tool in land and natural resource management," Ragsdale said. "But uncontrolled wildfires can do severe damage and mar an area for a long time."

Computer language not hard to master

FORT WORTH — Anyone can learn to use a computer, says a professor of computer science at Texas Christian University.

"People tend to think computers are complicated, yet surprisingly enough they're extremely simple," says Dr. Tom Nute.

"One of the consequences is that you have to very exact in what you tell a computer. You can't afford to be sloppy about what you describe to it," he notes.

Using a computer doesn't require having a genius level IQ. However, this idea is somewhat fostered in many schools which have computer facilities. Since most high schools can't afford to buy several computers, access is often restricted to advanced students, Nute explains.

Increased interest in computer education is partially due to the fact that the computer science job market is thriving. There are two to three openings for each person who graduates, says Nute.

In 1980, for every Ph.D. who graduated there were five jobs. Today, that figure is rapidly approaching 10, he says.

Although many companies are laying off people, there is still a big demand for systems analysts and programmers.

Systems analysts are involved with the design of programs, which is more or less a recipe of instructions a computer understands. In addition, systems analysts must interface with customers and have some technical, managerial or business background.

A programmer is the person the problem is brought to. "The problem has already been formulated and it's his or her job to translate that into the actual instructions the computer understands," he explains.

Programmers generally don't require as much educational background. Many programmers are high school graduates, but systems analysts generally have at least a bachelor's degree, Nute adds.

Salaries for computer-related jobs vary. In 1980, the median salary for a commercial programmer with six months to a year experience was $19,200 (about $9 per hour). Since 1980, that figure has increased about 15 percent as a result of inflation.
