Vance places stress on mutual interests

By BARRY SCHWEID

PEKING (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, here to explore chances of establishing full diplomatic relations with China, opened talks with Chinese leaders today by emphasizing the two countries' common political interests in various parts of the world.

In a sitting room in the Great Hall of the People, Vance began his first meeting with a Chinese team headed by Foreign Minister Huang Hua by saying there are areas where the two countries have "mutual interests."

One of these areas is Africa, where both the United States and China are eager to blunt Soviet penetration. They are concerned about inroads the Russians are making in east Africa and with insurgent movements in southern Africa.

American officials said the "international discussion," as Vance called it, was aimed at persuading Peking that a closer relationship can be built with Washington on the basis of shared objectives.

This phase of the talks is likely to occupy the first two days of Vance's four-day visit to the Chinese capital, serving as a buildup to the dominant subject — a mutual desire to move toward full relations.

Outside the Great Hall, and along the Avenue of Tranquility, in Tien An Men Square and elsewhere, tens of thousands of Chinese marched behind banners proclaiming the completion of the 11th Communist party congress.

The celebration bore no relationship to Vance's visit. The congress formally selected Hua Kuo-feng as party chairman, thereby ratifying his policies of economic advancement and greater openness toward the outside world.

Vance's arrival was low-keyed, with Huang Hua, Vice Foreign Minister Wang Hai-jung and Huang Chen, chief of the Chinese Liaison Office in Washington, heading a modest welcoming delegation at the airport.

But the festive atmosphere, with clanging cymbals and exploding firecrackers that had children covering their ears, lent a special dimension to this first high-level U.S.-Chinese contact in two years.

Chairman Hua had signaled Vance beforehand that Chinese policy has not changed on the Taiwan question, and that the United States would have to end all diplomatic and military ties with the Nationalist Chinese if it hopes to establish full relations with Peking.

Hua's demand was contained in a speech closing the party congress last Thursday and made public by Hsinhua, the official Chinese news agency, as Vance flew from Tokyo to the Chinese capital.

"If the relations between the two countries are to be normalized," said Hua, "the United States must sever its so-called diplomatic relations with the Chiang (Kai-shek) clique, withdraw all its armed forces and military installations from Taiwan and the Taiwan Straits area and abrogate its

Pragmatic word for new leaders

By JOHN RODERICK

TOKYO (AP) — The Chinese Communist Party has named a new group of leaders committed to political and economic pragmatism rather than Mao Tse-tung's policy of continuous revolution. Three of the five top men are staunch disciples of the late moderate Premier Chou En-lai.

The 11th Chinese Communist Party Congress, which ended in Peking Thursday, elected 57-year-old Hua Kuo-feng to the nation's highest post, the party chairmanship, and named four vice-chairmen: Defense Minister Yeh Chien-ying, 80; newly rehabilitated Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, 73; economic chief Li Hsien-nien, 72, and Wang Tung-hsing, a former commander of Mao's bodyguards who is the executive director of the party and about 60.

Hsinhua, the official news agency, reported that the party central committee met on Friday and named a 26-member Politburo headed by a standing committee made up of Hua and the four vice-chairmen.

Wang's rise, over the heads of more senior party men, was the surprise of the congress. A Mao man, he was believed rewarded for his part in the arrest last October of Mao's widow, Chiang Ching, and the other three radical members of the Politburo known as the "gang of four."

Yeh, Teng and Li were close associates of Chou En-lai, and Yeh and Teng were his close personal friends. Their majority at the top assures that Chou's moderate policies will continue, with emphasis on economic development, international trade and other expanding contacts with the West.

Hua closed the party congress with a 35,000-word speech in which he said the arrest of Chiang Ching and the other radicals marked the "triumphant conclusion of our first great proletarian cultural revolution which lasted 11 years." As a result, he added, China now is able to "achieve stability and unity and attain great order across the land."

He did not mention that the purged radical leaders were Mao's chief lieutenants in the cultural revolution.

Hua called for an "all-around leap forward in agriculture, light industry, heavy industry and other sectors."

"We must build an independent and fairly comprehensive industrial and economic system in our country by 1980," he declared.

Sixteen killed in raid

By JUDY YABLONKI

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Rhodesian security forces were hunting for a band of black guerrillas who attacked the black living quarters on a farm in eastern Rhodesia and slaughtered 16 men, women and children.

In another development, Rhodesian authorities reported that guerrillas fired 20 to 30 rockets from Zambia into the popular Rhodesian holiday resort of Kariba on Sunday. They caused no casualties or damage.

It was the second shelling of the town in two months. In the last rocket attack, on June 4, one man was injured and some cars and buildings were damaged.

Officials said the guerrillas who raided the east Rhodesian farm herded some of their victims into a circle and shot them. Others were bayoneted, and one was burned to death when the attackers set fire to the compound.

Another 15 to 20 persons were injured in the raid Saturday night.

"It was a terrible sight. There were men, women and children lying in the bushes nearby — some of them dead and some were screaming with pain," said the white owner of the farm, Marius Sleigh.

A pregnant woman was among those killed.

The farm 17 miles north of Umtali is near the Mozambique border, an area in which militant black nationalists have stepped up cross-border raids in their five-year war against Prime Minister Ian Smith's white government.

Sleigh said a security fence around the compound was to have been completed by today.

By MIKE COCHRAN

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) — The main cast of characters began gathering in Amarillo Sunday night as prosecutors indicated that star witness Priscilla Davis could take the stand today in the Cullen Davis capital murder trial.

The prosecution began its case today with Asst. Dist. Atty. Joe Shannon introducing into evidence certain records of the divorce proceedings between the defendant and Mrs. Davis.

Prosecutors had said the leadoff witness in the trial would be Fort Worth Domestic Relations Court Judge Joe Eidson.

It was in Eidson's court that Davis and Priscilla, his estranged wife, hashed out details of their separation and pending divorce. Shortly before a shooting spree at the Davis mansion last year that left two dead and two wounded, Eidson increased maintenance payments by Cullen to Priscilla to $5,000 per month. He also ordered Cullen Davis to pay Priscilla $27,000 in advance for various expenses and $25,000 partial payment to her lawyers.

And it was Eidson who issued a restraining order that in effect barred Davis from the couple's showplace Fort Worth mansion.

Priscilla arrived in Amarillo Sunday and checked into a suite of rooms across a courtyard from Cullen Davis' suite in the same hotel.

Also checked into the Hilton Inn was Karen Master, a striking blonde at whose Fort Worth home Davis was arrested the night of the shootings.

The current trial deals only with the Wilborn killing.

Davis is free on temporary bond of $1 million.

State Dist. Court Judge Tom Cave in Fort Worth retains jurisdiction in the matter of Davis' bond, and his ruling on whether or not Davis may remain free on bond could come as early as today. Prosecutors have asked Cave to overturn the bond.

Davis has also posted $650,000 bond on the other Farr capital murder charge and two other charges stemming from the shootings. The two other charges are attempted capital murder in the woundings of his estranged wife and Gus Gavrel Jr., a family friend who was at the mansion the night of Aug. 2, 1976, when the shots were fired.

Landmark fishing law threatening to backfire

The Washington Post

GLOUCESTER, Mass. — When the Santa Maria chugged home to this bustling fishing port last week after nine days at sea the eight-man crew of the little boat pocketed $14,800 for the 65,000 pounds of cod, haddock and pollack crammed into her hold.

It was not the first time in this boom year of the new 200-mile limit that skipper Joe Marino and his crew have managed to accumulate such a juicy pot. But this time, when the money was passed out, the smiles and plans for more big cash runs were missing.

Six months after Congress passed the landmark 200-mile restriction on foreign fishermen to save the battered U.S. fishing fleet there is growing concern among the North Atlantic fishing industry that the plan has backfired.

The problem with the new law is not that it hasn't worked but rather that it has worked too well.

Since the 200-mile limit went into effect March 1 and cleared some of the Atlantic's richest fishing grounds for Marino and his colleagues the U.S. fleet has dumped an avalanche of fish on the market.

Moreover, the increased catch has spurred a boom in other parts of the industry. Federal experts here said up to 40 new boats — at as much as $1 million each — are under construction because of the boom. Fish processors here and elsewhere along the Atlantic coast are busy expanding their facilities — including one built in Maine since the 200-mile limit for $750,000.

Now federal fisheries experts say the U.S. catch must be drastically reduced or ocean fish stocks off the New England coast will be critically depleted.

The National Marine Fisheries Service has already clamped a 5,000-pound catch limit on U.S. vessels operating in the Gulf of Maine off the New England coast, and next month the limit will be extended to the richest U.S. area on Georges Bank.

"If we don't do it now we're going to be in bad trouble," said a federal fisheries expert. "The fishermen are depleting the stocks so badly that they are getting like a rancher who slaughters his cattle the day after they're born. We have to control the U.S. fleet for a year or two to build those fish schools back up."

Fishermen here, however, claim their personal experience in sighting unusually large schools of fish this year doesn't jibe with the federal experts' contention. They have reacted to the new catch limits with howls of protest.

"The whole program was put together by people who have never had any experience at sea," said Marino. "They're probably all from Ohio."

The problem, federal fisheries experts claim, is that the U.S. fishermen are catching the same species in larger numbers now that were already depleted before the ban on foreign fishing within 200 miles of the U.S. shores. Foreign boats fished

Doctor says Bell official wasn't crazy

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — A Harvard psychiatrist testified today that former Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. executive T. O. Gravitt was not insane when he committed suicide nearly three years ago.

Dr. Shervert H. Frazier testified out of order for Bell in the trial of the $29 million damage suit against the telephone company by the Gravitt family and fired Bell executive James H. Ashley.

Gravitt committee suicide and Ashley was fired in October 1974 during an internal company investigation.

Frazier said the investigation could not have driven Gravitt to suicide. His testimony directly conflicted with that of a pyschiatrist called earlier by the plaintiffs.

Gravitt indicated in a suicide note that questions being asked by Bell investigators had irreparably damaged his reputation.

"Had he been completely innocent, he would not have been bothered by the accusations," Frazier testified. "He felt threatened. A bad part of his life was about to be exposed," the psychiatrist said.

Frazier said Gravitt in his climb to the top Bell position in Texas had demonstrated determination and will power and would have certainly

'Mama' Holifield had friendship with Elvis

Elvis Preseley called her "mama."

She sort of looked after him when the late rock 'n' roll idol came to town. She also "peddled" his records for both their gain.

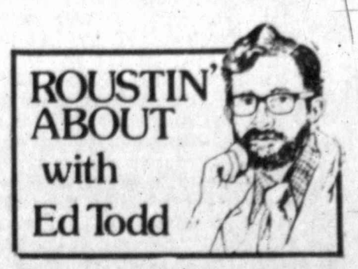

But that aside, she was a Presley devotee, admirer, fan, guardian ... sort of.

And "Mama" Holifield, in so many words, called the singer a prince of a man.

"He was one of the most photogentic, one of the most sensitive, one of the most courteous, and one of the nicest persons I've ever known."

She has photograph upon photograph of the artist, who died last week at age 42. She has a scrapbook of news and publicity clippings, too.

"There's nobody in this town that has pictures like I have — autographed pictures," Mrs. Holifield said.

Indeed, this retired businesswoman does have many signed photographs. And she has them from many artists who were particularly popular in the 1950s and early 1960s.

During those years, "Mama" (Beulah) Holifield managed a record shop in Midland. Her late husband,

Schlesinger says oil companies always hungry for more profits

By STAN BENJAMIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — No matter how much profit petroleum companies make, says Energy Secretary James Schlesinger, they always want more, and they don't really need it.

But Schlesinger says he thinks the companies will accept the energy bill passed by the House, even with its price controls and taxes, rather than fight it to a standstill in the Senate and be stuck indefinitely with existing regulations.

In his first on-the-record interview since taking office on Aug. 5, Schlesinger said the prices allowed by the bill offer petroleum companies adequate incentives to produce more oil and gas, and higher prices would risk generating excess profits for company stockholders.

"Greed, of course, is an unflattering term," Schlesinger said in answer to a question about the companies' intentions.

"But if one employs it, one must recognize that greed is the virtue that drives the free enterprise system, the desire to acquire substantial profits."

As the nation's nirst secretary of energy, Schlesinger also said he will take a close look at the jacking up of world uranium prices by an international cartel, and the possible involvement of U.S. energy companies.

On another subject, he said the Carter administration may favor an overland pipeline through Canada for Alaskan natural gas if it would be cheaper for U.S. consumers than a pipeline through Alaska that would require costly tanker shipments to the West Coast. U.S. and Canadian representatives are discussing the pipeline question.

Schlesinger said he may enter negotiations with Canada in time to permit a policy recommendation by President Carter soon after Congress reconvenes next Sept. 7.

In the interview, conducted for an hour and a half last Friday in his White House office, Schlesinger also:

—Left the door open for administration consideration of a proposal to allow petroleum companies some higher profits to be "plowed back" into further energy development.

—Said the Carter administration will not try to keep oil and gas companies from moving into coal, uranium and other energy resources, at least for the present.

—Said Carter's effort to discourage the spread of nuclear fuel technology that could be used for nuclear weapons has had "partial success," achieving international agreement to work on the problem.

In discussing petroleum industry hopes for the energy bill pending in the Senate, Schlesinger said:

"Whatever we had proposed, I think one might anticipate that industry would have asked for more.

"Even if we had gone immediately to world oil prices for all oil, there probably would have been a desire for subsidy of some sort or another."

They were Presley promoters in a way, and his friend. He was like a member of the family, like a son, she said.

She recalled his first coming to Midland in the mid-1950s. She doesn't remember the exact year. Probably 1956. He came to the record shop. He also visited in their home. Many times, she said.

Mrs. Holifield told of a family get-together centered around Presley, who was in his early 20s back then. Girls were swooning over him. His mere presence thrilled and excited them.

The Holifields' son, "Sonny," who was only two years younger than the singer, was barbecuing chicken for the occasion.

And "some girls" were teaching the master of rock 'n' roll how to dance. He could gyrate, swing and groove, strum the guitar and sing very well. But he couldn't dance?

"He didn't know how to dance," Mrs. Holifield said. "He was a church-going boy."

With Presley at the Holifields were Scotty Moore, his guitarist; Bill Black, his bass fiddler; June Pritchard, Miss Texas of 1955, and, among a few others, Shirley Carrol, who clerked in the record shop.

"We got so excited with him being here that we burned the barbecue," Mrs. Holifield said. But, she said, Presley just "peeled" of the charred skin and ate it anyway.

"See," she remarked, "he looks like that Valentino boy."

It wasn't just his looks or his singing that seemed to fascinate her.

"He was the most sensitive, courteous person that you had been around," she said.

"A lot of people bugged him, but he was nice to everybody."

He was decent.

"He did not drink, smoke or chew," she said.

She must, indeed, have admired the performer.

And there were (and are) others in the rock 'n' roll and country 'n' western field to whom she has taken a fancy.

Along with Presley, Johnny Cash and Slim Whitman rank among her favorites. They, too, called her "ma" or "mama."

"He is a doll," she said of Cash.

"He just visited us like one of the kids," she said of Whitman.

She has known many recording artists, and has autographed photographs to help her remember. Some are still popular. Others are in the shadows or, like Presley, in the grave.

"We just love them all," "Mama" Holifield said.

Especially, she was fond of Presley, Cash and Whitman.

"He (Presley) had the most beautiful smile and lips I ever saw on anybody, excepting our son."

Until last year, 15 or so years had passed since "Mama" Holifield saw or heard from Presley.

When Presley was on stage in Odessa in 1976, she was at his concert. She saw him, but he didn't see her. That year, too, she saw Cash in concert.

"Seeing Johnny Cash and Elvis on stage just fulfilled everything I ever hoped for," she said.

Cash, she said, "has an impact on Christianity almost as good as Billy Graham."

And Elvis Presley?

"He looked just wonderful . . . ," "Mama" Holifield said of the rock 'n' roll king.

". . . To see the admiration and love the people had for him was absolutely incredible."

The Carter administration disclaims any intention of abandoning Taiwan. But it has been banking heavily on Chinese patience as well as a less-rigid stance toward what would be a reduced but still formidable American relationship with the Nationalists.

The Chinese, involved in their own domestic politics, have put only limited pressure on the United States during the last several years to terminate the American diplomatic connection with Taiwan. But it was expected that with the sortingout of the Peking hierarchy at the 11th Communist Party congress last week, they might get more insistent.

Vance intends to probe for signs of flexibility. A primary U.S. objective is to find a formula for protecting Taiwan's security should the mutual defense treaty be abrogated.

Underlining the sensitivity of the four-day visit, Vance and his advisers refused to discuss any proposals he might have brought or the strategy he intended to follow.

The Chinese advised Vance prior to his arrival of only one official he was scheduled to see, Foreign Minister Huang Hua. There was no certainty in the American delegation that the secretary would confer with Hua and Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping although this was expected.

However, preliminary analysis of the leaders chosen at the party conference and of Hua's closing speech indicated the regime will emphasize production, with Western assistance, rather than ideological isolation.

This was considered a positive background for Vance's visit, the first high-level U.S.Chinese meetings in two years and the first opportunity for the new leaders in Washington and Peking to get acquainted.

fought any false accusations against him.

The plaintiffs had called more than a dozen witnesses to the stand and read portions of as many depositions to the 10-man, two-woman jury when the state district court trial recessed Friday.

Ashley himself, the key witness against Bell, spent nearly four days testifying.

There were indications during Ashley's cross-examination that Bell lawyers, in their defense, may try to show that Ashley was partly to blame for Gravitt's death.

Airline adding Austin flights

DALLAS—Austin will join the cities served by Southwest Airlines Sept. 15, including service from Midland-Odessa to Austin.

Southwest Airlines said the service will begin in conjunction with the delivery of the airline's 10th Boeing 737-200 jet aircraft.

Present plans call for "executive class flights" Monday through Friday, with "pleasure class service" on weekends.

The flight from Midland-Odessa to Austin will include a change of planes in Dallas.

Landmark fishing law in danger of backfiring

for hake, squid and mackeral, which are not badly depleted species, while the U.S. boats still go after cod, herring, pollack and haddock, all on the government's depleted list.

Last week nearly 100 fishermen crowded into the St. Peter Club, a cavernous old bar and meeting hall on the waterfront here, to shout their displeasure at the new regulations to Rep. Michael Harrington (D-Mass.) and federal fisheries experts.

The federal experts are wrong on their ocean-stock assessments, the fishermen insisted, and are using the figures and the provisions of the new 200-mile law to move in on the traditionally independent fishing industry.

"There's a million pounds of fish out there, and they're telling us we can't touch them," one local fishing boat captain angrily told Harrington.

The federal fish experts agree that this year's catch has been exceptional. But they said despite the plentiful schools of fish on the U.S. grounds, this year long-term stocks of younger fish they have counted show serious depletion that will show up in the future.

Harrington, noting that when the 200-mile limit was first proposed few experts or fishermen believed the U.S. catch would increase to anywhere near its current size, said, "We're in the embarrassing situation now of having it better than people thought."

The foreign fleet working U.S. waters inside the 200-mile limit has been halved to roughly 500 vessels, according to the fisheries service. These boats are kept in "windows," or relatively small areas where they are allowed to fish for species not normally sought by U.S. boats such as hake and squid.

Correction

City budget hearing set for Tuesday

At 4 p.m. Tuesday the City Council will hold a public hearing on the 1977-78 City of Midland budget and the proposed use of revenue sharing funds to be received through September 1978.

The council will consider ordinances to approve the budget, to appropriate the necessary funds for the operation of the various departments and to set the tax levy.

A resolution approving the revenue sharing budget will also be considered. Proposed uses for the funds include $148,000 for sanitation compactors and containers, $5,500 for portable bleachers, $85,000 for a fire truck, 5,000 for a radio console, $625,000 for a fire station relocation program, $300,000 for a golf club house at Hogan Park, $144,000 for the police personal-car program, $45,000 for Hogan Park Road, $50,000 for Kiwanis Park, $30,000 for box seats at Cub Stadium, and $176,500 for softball park improvements.

The total for revenue sharing funds is $1,614,000.

Other items to be considered include a resolution authorizing the refund of over and double payments of taxes, the possibility of increasing fines for overparking at parking meters, and authorizing the use of city facilities by the Midland Housing Authority.

The council will also meet in executive session to discuss personnel matters, possible land purchases and pending or prospective litigation.

Free the steel market

President Carter understands that the prices of steel products, up 12.5 per cent since last September as compared with 7 per cent for industrial commodities generally, arouse inflation, which he would like to anesthetize. Accordingly, Mr. Carter has announced that the government now will buy the lowest-cost steel possible.

If the President expects steel producers to gag on this news, however, he must have his mind on next week's softball game or something. Government purchases of steel products are so minimal as to have no effect on the steel market; the military, for example, buys only 0.2 per cent of all American steel products produced.

Mr. Carter seemingly is on more promising ground in his directive to the Wage and Price Council that it study the steel industry. He has asked details on the industry's increased costs and the impact of federal policies. He also wants suggestions on ways Washington can "moderate cost and price increases."

The council has 60 days to prepare its study. And at the least it should point out one of the problems plaguing the industry is that the steelmakers want it both ways: they want government help which would protect them from foreign steel imports, yet they want independence in their own wage and price decisions. It is difficult to imagine a more inflationary combination.

And the situation is more vexed still. Environmental regulations are placing a tremendous capital burden on the steelmakers, diverting funds which could be used to modernize plants. President Carter has asked why Japanese steel is cheaper than American steel; surely, here is at least partly the reason: the antiquity of the American steel plants.

If it does its homework well, the Wage and Price Council will recommend an end to all present import quotas on steel and an easing of the environmental regulations which use up producers' profits.

The steel industry thus could dwell in a more genuine free market.

In such a market, the signals sent by buyers, whether domestic or foreign, are likely to make an effective impact on the producers — certainly a more effective impact than the meager signals Mr. Carter has asked the government to send out.

The council's report will be watched with interest by all concerned.

'Reform' ties press

Senate Bill 1437, the new criminal code reform bill replacing the infamous "S1," retains unfortunately many of the repressive features which made the original unacceptable to news organizations.

Despite the changes made in response to objections by the Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, the bill under consideration by a Senate subcommittee yet contains several features limiting press rights.

The bill, for instance, would make it a crime — punishable by imprisonment — to publish news in violation of gag orders, even if those orders were issued illegally. The legislation also retains criminal penalties designed to force reporters to reveal confidential news sources.

Senators John L. McClellan and Edward M. Kennedy, sponsors of the bill, must be commended for their efforts to respond to reporters' complaints. They dropped two objectionable features completely.

However, the two senators have not gone far enough by any means.

Although the subcommittee has abandoned a provision which would make it a crime for editoralists to "improperly" criticize public officials, the need for further improvement is apparent.

A criminal code "reform" definitely should not be used as an occasion to impose restrictions on new gatherers and publishers.

NEW GAO APPROACH:

A civilian salary setup for military

By L. EDGAR PRINA
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — The U.S. comptroller general has reconmended that Congress scrap traditional military base pay and allowances in favor of a straight salary system.

In a new report to Congress, Elmer B. Staats asserted that military compensation should help the services successfully compete with other employers for the personnel they need.

"Study groups and commissions repeatedly have pointed out that the base pay and allowances system is an inefficient way to support this objective," he said.

Staats, who heads the General Accounting Office (GAO) for Congress as comptroller general, said a salary system would:

— Increase armed forces personnel awareness of their pay. One in five officers and two out of five enlisted members underestimated their compensation in one poll.

— Eliminate inequities in pay. Regular military compensation is greater for married members than for singles of the same grade and length of service, even if their duties, qualifications and performances are equivalent.

— Make the cost of military manpower easier to identify and evaluate rather than partially concealing it, through tax advantages, in reduced revenues to the federal Treasury.

President Carter has appointed a blue-ribbon commission to study military compensation and make recommendations by next March 15. It is highly unlikely, therefore, that Congress will take any significant action on pay reform before that time.

The Defense Department's third quadrennial review of military compensation (QRMC), called by the Pentagon "the most extensive study of military pay and benefits ever undertaken," concluded last December that the advantages of a salary system are outweighed by the disadvantages.

The QRMC recommended, instead, a modernized form of a pay and allowances system.

The presidential commission will consider the QRMC, a study by the Defense Manpower Commission (favoring the salary system) and certain other analyses.

The Defense Department will await recommendations of the Carter-appointed panel before taking an official position on changes to the form of military pay.

The new GAO report suggested that a pay standard for a military salary system could be based on the pay of a designated segment of civilian employes or on current levels of regular military compensation, which includes basic pay, housing and subsistence allowances and tax advantage. It is the military equivalent of a civilian salary.

It is generally recognized that the difficulty in computing regular military compensation is largely due to the valuation of government-provided housing and meals, and the estimation of tax advantage.

"There is a wide range in the quality of quarters to which members may be assigned during their careers," the review noted.

"For example, a single member on sea duty is assigned a bunk on a ship; on a land-based tour he may be assigned a nicely funished efficiency apartment in one of the new bachelor residence halls. Therefore, the individual may have difficulty in deciding what quality of quarters to use as a basis for attaching a cash value thereto."

The GAO acknowledged that a salary system would increase the Pentagon's budget because the tax advantage now received by military personnel would have to be quantified and added to their pay. "However, conversion to salary will increase members' state, local and federal liabilities and Social Security tax liabilities," it said.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Critics 'hit' Interior official

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — The big game hunters who are slaughtering endangered animals may have found an ally at the Interior Dept.

The hunters are taking careful aim at the list of endangered species, which protects such rapidly vanishing animals as the leopard, zebra, antelope, quail and Mexican duck. If the hunters water down the safeguards, they will be able to kill and import greater numbers of the imperiled animals. Should restrictions be lifted, for example, the sleek leopard may soon be seen nowhere except in the windows of chic fur salons.

Until recently, the United States has been leading (the fight) against wholesale slaughter of endangered animals. But that policy has now been jeopardized by the Interior Dept.'s top official in charge of protecting wildlife.

He is the pipe-smoking, personable Robert Herbst, who has quietly caved in to the demands of the hunting lobby. He will permit a hunter to be one of two private U.S. representatives to an international conference which will decide wheather many endangered species will survive. That decision, fumed one environmentalist, "is like sending a member of the Ku Klux Klan to an international conference on human rights to provide 'balance' to the delegation."

Herbst insists, however, that the hunters should have a vote at the convention. "They represent a certain element of the conservation community that has a right to be heard," he told us. "I just saw it as a fair thing to do."

Herbst made up his mind after huddling privately with three officials of Safari Clubs International. Even though the hunters fiercely oppose U.S. policy on endangered species, Herbst permitted the Safari officials to choose one of their own to attend the conference. Growled one Interior official: "Everybody found out about it after the fact."

During Herbst's recent tenure as Minnesota's top environmental official, the Interior Dept. formally threatened to take him to court for allegedly authorizing the slaughter of endangered timber wolves. Herbst maintained the regulations where confusing.

We have discovered that Herbst misled the Senate when he testified at his confirmation hearings that he tried to change the wolf's status from "endangered" to "threatened." We have obtained a letter in which Herbst requested that Minnesota wolves be removed from all federal protection.

The hunters, however, were so impressed with Herbst's previous performance that they enthusiastically supported him at his Senate confirmation hearings.

LIKELY CHOICE: Rep. Clement Zablocki, D.-Wis., a onetime choir director and organist who now chairs the House International Relations Committee, is not exactly shy about tooting his own horn.

Recently, for example, Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill asked a number of House chairmen for nominees to serve on the new committee on intelligence. Five respected congressmen on the International Relations Committee vied for the opportunity. Zablocki carefully surveyed the available talent and decided on an even better choice — himself.

Zablocki told us he had asked for and received the speaker's permission before selecting himself. He has developed expertise in the intellignece field, he added.

O'Neill was reportedly miffed at the plodding but amiable Zablocki for picking himself. A spokesman for O'Neill officially denied this.

This isn't the first time the Milwaukee congressman has promoted his own candidacy. Last February, Zablocki raised a ruckus when someone else was chosen as chairman of the House delegation to the North Atlantic Assembly.

"I feel as chairman of the committee I should be chairman of the delegation," he whined to O'Neill. The speaker scolded Zablocki and the congressman threatened to pick up his marbles and go home.

Zablocki later changed his mind about quitting the delegation. But he's now learned the rules well enough to make sure he's chosen for the important games.

INDOCHINA UPDATE: North Vietnamese pilots have been flying some of the sophisticated U.S. jet fighters, bombers and transport planes that were left behind when Saigon fell. They are astounded, say our sources, at the technical assistance and knowledge the United States shared with South Vietnam. The Soviets gave the North Vietnamese plenty of supplies but would never relinquish their technical expertise.

The Communists in Laos, say diplomatic sources, are anxiously trying to secure U.S. economic aid. They continually bring up the subject on their radio broadcasts and to visiting U.S. diplomats. In return, the Laotians may offer to help find missing U.S. pilots shot down over their country.

When the brutal Khmer Rouge Communists took over Cambodia in 1975, thousands of refugees fled to Thailand and Vietnam. At first, the refugees were returned to Cambodia. Then, according to U.S. analysts, the Vietnamese began to notice the bodies of refugees floating down the Mekong River. Now the Vietnamese talk privately of the "brutality" of the Cambodians and refuse to return any more refugees.

INSIDE REPORT:

Agonizing choice: Jimmy Carter must decide soon

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — President Carter must decide soon between permitting or blocking criminal prosecution of former CIA director Richard Helms, an agonizing choice of whether to fulfill his campaign pledges for "open" government at the cost of the nation's higher interests.

So dangerous to this country are the implications of the unprecedented grand jury investigation of Helms on suspicion of perjury that Mr. Carter has been secretly warned by informal advisers he must never let the case go to trial. One eminent Democrat, deeply involved in high intelligence matters for many years, has said privately that Helms' indictment and trial "would be the single most damaging thing that could be done to this country."

These "damaging" consequences would include further deterioration of U.S. intelligence, an end of any further intelligence cooperation with the U.S. by allied nations and exposing the nation and its recent Presidents to obloguy. In short, self-flagellation of the nation would reach a masochistic peak.

To prevent this, the President must block the grand jury, now well into its second year of probing the truth of Helms' 1973 Senate testimony on Chile. Mr. Carter almost certainly would have to instruct Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell to veto an indictment and thereby prevent a trial.

Such a move would infuriate the liberal community, including large segments of Congress and the press. Moreover, Mr. Carter's campaign trail was strewn with pledges, calculated to make him appear different from President Ford, for government operating "in the open," as he declared in the first presidential debate.

That the grand jury is moving toward indicting Helms by no means suggests guilt. In fact, experienced lawyers and politicians here believe the chance of finding the former chief spy guilty of perjury is, in the words of one lawyer, "exactly zero."

Nevertheless, in his defense, Helms would be compelled to reveal the most secret Oval Office and National Security Council deliberations. This unquestionably would involve former Presidents in what the CIA's critics call the seamy, squalid side of the intelligence game. Helms would be relieved from protecting sources and directions given to him, even by a President, if forced to defend himself in a public trial.

The President could be taken off the hook by George A. Carver and Robert G. Andary, Justice Department criminal division lawyers in charge of the Helms investigation. They could simply rule the grand jury had "no case."

The President is not going to be so lucky, well-informed sources have told us. The youthful investigators who have spent so many months hunting Helms down want to confront him in open court as prosecutors.

The grand jury probe has subpoenaed every scrap of paper in the Central Intelligence Agency bearing on clandestine operations against the late Marxist President of Chile, Salvador Allende. It has questioned for long hours scores of top CIA officials and former officials. Included are Thomas Karameissines, who for many years ran clandestine operations, and Elizabeth Dunlevy, Helms' longtime confidential secretary.

Interoffice memos, personal logs, calendars and records of every traceable telephone call made out of Helms' office during his seven years as CIA director — as well as thousands of calls from CIA's Latin-American section — are under grand jury scrutiny.

Accordingly, prosecutors Carver and Andary would no more welcome a presidential order barring indictmemt and trial than would liberals in Congress, the media and elsewhere who have expended so much righteous energy against the once super-secret CIA.

That righteous energy and Helms' predicament both stem partly from bad decisions made in the Ford White House and Justice Department during the post-Nixon demand for purging Watergate wickedness. The grand jury probe of Helms was started by Ford's Attorney General, Edward Levi, an action viewed by one seasoned lawyer here with liberal connections as "an outrage."

But Levi had plenty of company. Helms, who gave 32 years of honorable service to his country, was summoned to the White House from his post as ambassador to Iran in January 1975 to be warned by presidential counsel Phil1p Buchen. Helms was informed that anything he told the President (identified by Buchen as "the nation's chief law enforcement officer") could be used against him in the investigation Levi was then contemplating.

With post-Watergate morality reinforced by Jimmy Carter's promises never to run other than an "open" government a presidential decision to block indictment of Helms would not be easy. But the alternative, exposing the nation's intelligence system and past occupants of the Oval Office to further abuse, might well be pondered carefully by the President.

Survivors include the widow, Dora Hyatt; two sons, Michael Hyatt and Matthew Hyatt of Midland; two daughters, Mrs. James (Cynthia) Garner and Gabriella Hyatt, both of Midland; his mother, Mrs. Carrie Hyatt; four brothers, Don Hyatt, Rolla Hyatt and Carroll Hyatt, all of Midland, and Charles Hyatt of Houston.

Orientation set Tuesday

Orientation for new Midland College students will be between 8 a.m. and noon Tuesday, according to C. C. Dakil, dean of students.

"All those persons who will be attending Midland College for the first time this fall, whether they have preregistered or not, should attend the orientation program," Dakil said.

Incoming students should report to the Student Center Tuesday morning. From there, they will be divided into groups for a series of tours, videotape programs and discussion with counselors. The session also will include a test of reading skills.

One-hour credit is given for enrollment in the orientation, designed to provide new students with basic information needed to start them in their college courses.

Those who plan to attend Midland College for the first time who have not yet preregistered should attend orientation, Dakil said. They will be given credit for the class during registration, Wednesday and Thursday.

Axeman disturbs church services

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Services at St. Bartholemew's Catholic Church were shattered Sunday when a former mental patient wielding an axe handle charged up the aisle screaming "I am the Savior."

The Rev. Dennis Smith, assistant pastor, said he and the pastor, the Rev. Gerald Cooney, were serving communion to about 350 parishioners at 10:30 a.m. when they heard a commotion in the back of the church.

When Father Cooney left the altar to see about the disturbance, an athletic-looking man clad in cutoffs and carrying an axe handle ran raving into the church.

"People started getting excited, very excited," said Father Smith. "They began running in all directions. About 10 men finally subdued the man until poliice arrived."

Police, through the witnesses, then began reconstructing what had happened.

The man, who police said had been treated for mental problems at a local hospital, was seen earlier by Father Smith in the church parking lot. He was on leave from a veterans hospital in Waco, police said.

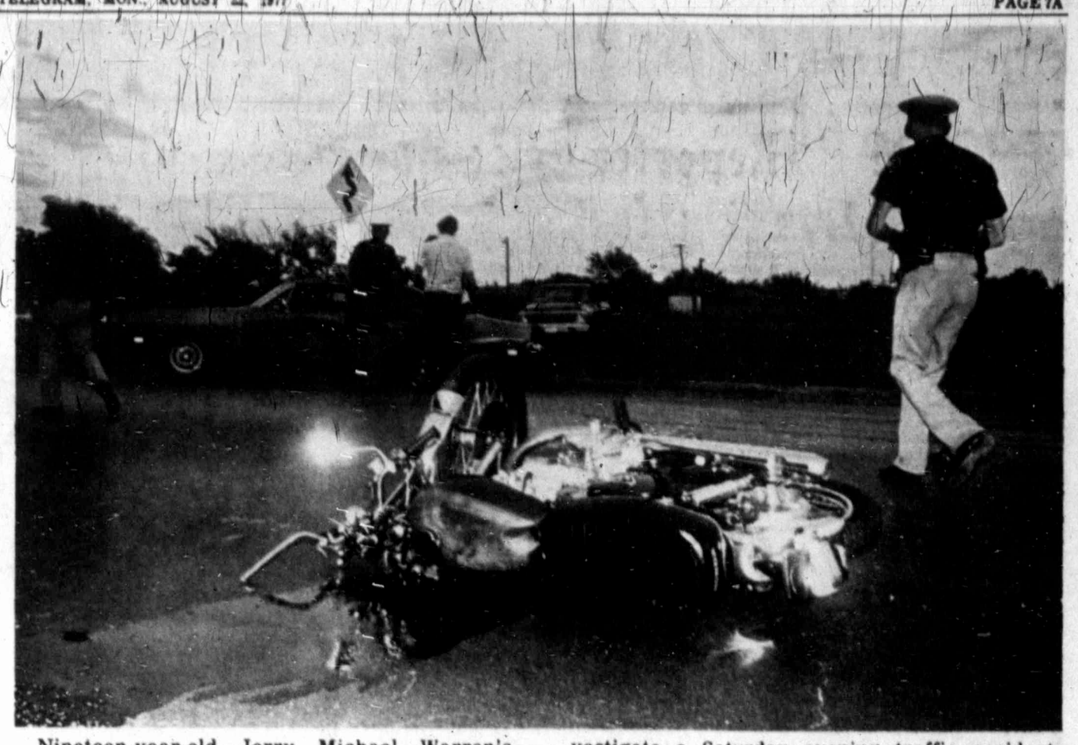

The man then went into a church prayer room and told worshipers there he wanted to light some candles. Witnesses said he placed a gold watch on the altar in the small chapel and began praying very loudly, saying he was Jesus Christ.

Father Smith said the man then left the prayer room and went outside, where he accosted a mother and her daughter. A neighbor, who was out for a walk, saw the attack and threatened to hit the mental patient with an axe handle he said he carries to ward off dogs on his walks.

"Are you going to hit me with the stick?" the mental patient reportedly asked.

"No. I just want you to turn the girl loose," replied the 53- year-old good samaritan.

The neighbor threw down the ax handle, but the man, who had been choking the daughter, picked it up and began chasing him with it.

Young Midlander seriously hurt, in collision of car, motorcycle

A 19-year-old Midland man was listed in guarded condition in Odessa's Medical Center Hospital early today after he was injured in a car-motorcycle accident about 8 p.m. Saturday.

According to reports, Jerry Michael Warren of 410 Kent St. was riding a motorcycle, and was eastbound in the 2000 block of West Cuthbert Street. Warren was attempting to pass a car when his motorcycle and a car driven by Dan Harry Bonham, 26, of 702 W. Nobles Ave. collided, police were told.

Bonham swerved in a vain attempt to miss the motorcycle, according to reports. The motorcycle was thrown 30 feet from the point of impact, and Warren was thrown 20 feet from the motorcycle, police said.

PURSE, CONTENTS TAKEN

A purse and its contents with a total value of $150 were taken from an office at 2101 W. Wall Ave. between 3 and 6 p.m. Sunday.

Mrs. Leane Messersmith of 3000 W. Illinois Ave. told police someone entered the office while she, her husband and a friend were remodeling a back office.

TOOLS TAKEN

Several tools valued at $150 were taken from a pickup belonging to Ruben Sanchez Mesa of Odessa while he was eating in a restaurant in the 3700 block of West Wall Avenue about 9:45 p.m. Sunday.

Mesa told police when he returned from the restaurant, the pickup's toolbox was open and the tools were gone. Nothing else was reported missing from the pickup, police said.

Three die in collision

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP) — Three persons are dead and a Houston man has been booked with negligent homicide following a three-car accident which dumped wreckage for 100 yards along Interstate-10 near here.

State police said the crash occurred Saturday when a small van was hit from behind by a car and shoved into the path of an approaching tractor trailer. Witnesses said the top of the van was torn off by the impact.

The dead were identified as Edward Campbell of Franklin, Ariz., 74, and his daughter, Diane Snyder, 37, and granddaughter, Carol, 15, both of Twin Falls, Idaho.

Ten-year-old Joe Snyder, another family member, was seriously injured.

Harvey Auzene of Houston, the driver of the car, was booked with negligent homicide and drunk driving.

Agency said ready to file against Tris

By LARRY MARGASAK

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Consumer Product Safety Commission says his agency is prepared to file court suits nationwide as part of a new drive to halt the sale of children's sleepwear treated with Tris.

The commission decided on the strategy after it completed a new survey showing continuing sales of garments treated with the fire-retardant chemical linked to cancer in animal tests, says S. John Byington.

"Retailers ought to stop selling these garments or they'll probably find themselves in court with the Consumer Product Safety Commission," Byington said Sunday night in a telephone interview.

The case-by-case drive against Tris is an alternative to the commission's nationwide ban against the sale of garments treated with the chemical. The ban, imposed in April, was voided in June by U.S. District Judge Robert Chapman in Columbia, S.C.

Chapman ruled that the agency failed to observe proper procedures in imposing the ban.

Rather than wait for a U.S. appellate court to rule on a request to reinstate the ban, consumer safety commissioners decided to file individual suits in selected cases where they found Tris-treated garments for sale, Byington said.

The first suit, filed last Friday, resulted in a temporary order from a federal judge in New York ordering R.H. Macy & Co. department stores to stop selling the clothing. A hearing on the suit is scheduled for Sept. 22.

"We're hopeful that with the Macy's case and with two or three more cases this week, most retailers will understand we are now back in the market attempting to remove those garments," Byington said.

"Unless they want to litigate the right to sell Tris-treated garments, most would just take them off the shelves. I wouldn't want to argue the right to sell Tris-treated garments. It's bad public policy and bad customer relations."

The commission, concerned about earlier surveys that showed the sleepwear still on sale, had its personnel buy children's pajamas across the country for several days earlier this month. The clothing was later tested in laboratories.

While the percentage of Tris-treated garments purchased is not yet known, the preliminary results persuaded the commission to launch the new campaign, Byington said.

Some stores selling the sleepwear may have been unaware that they had the clothing treated with Tris on their shelves, he said. An attorney for Macy's said that out of 125,000 children's pajamas and nighties in stock at the company's 76 stores, the commission found only 10 Tris-treated garments.

Price of coffee gradually coming down

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Drop by drop, coffee prices have started coming down. Supermarkets say sales of the brew are gradually picking up again, although consumers still seem reluctant to buy.

An Associated Press spot survey showed the price of a pound of coffee is generally about $3.50, down from a high of $4 and more in some places in March and April. In a few cities, where prices topped $5 a pound, current levels are still around $4.

Edward Maron of Ralphs, an 82-outlet chain in the Los Angeles area, said the stores ran an ad recently advertising lower coffee prices — $3.49 a pound, 47 per cent higher than the $2.38 level of January, but 13 per cent below the mid-April price of $3.99.

It was the store's first coffee promotion this year and Maron said sales increased slightly. "There is still a supply and demand problem," he said. "I don't think it's as severe as it was six months ago, but it's still with us. We're now in a kind of holding pattern."

Store spokesmen in Atlanta said sales dropped about 20 to 25 per cent in the first half of the year. Recent coffee promotions helped slightly, but sales remain sluggish. "We feel that one reason customers are not buying right now is that they're using up what we call 'pantry stuff' in anticipation of lower prices to come," said Arthur Levitt, coffee buyer for Alterman Brothers, operators of the area's Big Apple chain.

A spokesman for a large chain in the Kansas City area said he didn't think sales would ever return to normal. "It's still not cheap," he said, when asked about coffee. "As time goes on, I think they're going to lose coffee drinkers."

Corwyn Wnke of Falley's, an independent retailer in Topeka, Kan., said a pound of coffee is selling for $3.79, down from a high of $4.49. He said customers seemed to buy only when coffee was on sale.

Retail prices generally have decreased by a smaller margin than wholesale ones, mainly because the supermarket prices rose more slowly as stores sold coffee at a loss to draw customers. Now the wholesale and retail levels are about equal in most areas and, in a few cases, the supermarkets are selling coffee at up to a nickel a pound more than the wholesale price.

Coffee prices started soaring after a frost in Brazil — the world's biggest producer — destroyed part of that country's 1975-76 harvest.

President sees retreat, talk of closure ends

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — Before Jimmy Carter took office, there was talk about saving money by closing Camp David, the presidential retreat about 60 miles north of Washington.

Then the new President had a chance to look around the hideaway, a kind of personal country club with a membership of one. The talk stopped.

Carter returned to the White House on Sunday after his first extended stay in Maryland's Catoctin mountains. It was his seventh trip to Camp David and every sign indicates he enjoys the retreat, with its rustic atmosphere, its tennis court and its swimming pool.

Camp David gives Carter privacy and relief from the highly organized schedule he follows at the White House. "There is no set routine," says Tim Kraft, the President's appointments secretary and one of a handful of aides who accompanied the Carters on their vacation last week.

Carter is free to put on casual clothes and wander alone through the woods. Or he can indulge his interest in softball.

But the symbols of the presidency are never far away.

When Carter leaves, a Marine stands at attention and then marches to the flagpole to lower the flag the instant the helicopter lifts off.

The camp is situated in the Catoctin Mountain Park, run by the National Park Service. It is surrounded by two chain-link fences topped by barbed wire. An electric fence runs between the two other fences. The perimeter is patrolled by rifle-carrying Marines in battle fatigues.

Every President since Franklin Roosevelt has used the presidential retreat. FDR called it Shangri-La. Dwight Eisenhower renamed it Camp David, after his grandson, David Eisenhower. It is about 20 miles south of the Eisenhower farm in Gettysburg, Pa.

Richard Nixon retreated to Camp David for weeks on end as the Watergate scandal unfolded and chipped away at his administration. He reportedly enjoyed the rustic atmosphere so much that even during the height of the 1973-74 energy crisis he turned his air conditioning on full blast so he could keep the fireplace in his lodge glowing during the summer.

When Carter and his family make the 30-minute helicopter flight from the White House, they guard their privacy jealously. Few staff members accompany them.

Occasionally, they invite a friend to join them. Carter's confidant, Charles Kirbo, spent a night there last week and the parents of one of Carter's daughters-in-law visited in February.

But most of the time Carter spends his weekends at Camp David with his wife Rosalynn, daughter Amy and, occasionally, with one or two of his sons and their wives.

Hughes reportedly took pain-killing drugs

By LEE JONES

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Howard Hughes received regular and frequent doses of Valium and codeine-based pain killers in the last years of his life, an assistant attorney general says the reclusive magnate's aides told him.

One aide said in a sworn deposition that Hughes' final move, from the Bahamas to Acapulco, was linked to a power struggle within Hughes' financial empire, Asst. Atty. Gen. Rick Harrison said Sunday.

Hughes died of kidney failure April 5, 1976, and is buried in Houston. He evidently died aboard his plane as it flew from Acapulco to Houston.

Harrison has been taking depositions in Los Angeles for use by the state in its effort to collect 16 per cent of Hughes' estate in inheritance taxes.

A jury trial to determine Hughes' legal residence begins Sept. 12 in Judge Pat Gregory's Harris County Probate Court No. 2.

Hughes' closest living relatives contend he was a Nevada resident, while Atty. Gen. John Hill claims he was born and died a Texan.

California courts have ordered Hughes aides John Holmes and Chuck Waldron to answer questions about how drugs were obtained and administered to the reclusive magnate, Harrison said.

He said Texas will petition Los Angeles Superior court today or Tuesday to order Hughes' physician, Dr. Norman Crane, to answer questions about the same subject.

The aides, Harrison said, were "six male secretaries who lived with Hughes on a rotating basis, three on and three off. There always was an aide with Hughes to answer the phone, give messages, and dictate messages back. We've deposed all of them."

Depositions obtained thus far from Holmes, Waldron and several other Hughes aides indicated heavy medication, Harrison said.

"We are talking about soluble codeine, taken by hypodermic, Empirin Compound No. 4 and Valium. . . . He was taking all three of those frequently and regularly over the last 10 to 15 years of his life," Harrison said.

Codeine, a pain-killer, is on the federal dangerous drug list, and a physician must have a narcotics license to prescribe it. An Empirin Compound No. 4 tablet contains 64 milligrams of codeine, and Harrison said the depositions indicated Hughes "took it in large quantities."

He said Hughes took 10-milligram tablets of Valium, the strongest dosage made.

"Aides called them blue bombers. He took eight to 10 at a time. That came out in the depositions," Harrison said.

Harrison said testimony about a power struggle within Hughes' holding company, Summa Corp., came from George Francom, one of the Mormon aides.

Crime study groups sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — After ignoring exhortations by researchers and study groups for more than a century, the government is moving to pull together its disjointed set of facts and figures on crime.

Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell wants to end fragmentation of effort in the Justice Department's compilation and analysis of crime figures by creating a new Bureau of Criminal Justice Statistics.

In so doing, Bell is responding to what critics have described as the department's "horse and buggy system" of collecting crime figures. The agency he is proposing could give the public and government officials at all levels important information about crime trends and fresh insight about the causes of crime and ways to combat it.

The new agency would take over the crime statistics work of the FBI, the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration and a host of separate department offices.

Seventeen department units currently produce 54 different sets of statistics dealing with crime, the courts, prosecutors, prisons or other aspects of the criminal justice system.

Justice Department officials and private researchers long have maintained that the criminal records-keeping practices of the government have frustrated efforts to paint a reliable picture of crime in America.

"Nationwide information about crime is so fragmented, unreliable and varied that it is impossible to state, with any degree of confidence, conclusions about the state of the nation's crime problem," said a recent department staff report on the problem.

The best-known statistics are those published in the FBI's annual and quarterly figures on the numbers of crimes reported to state and local police. But those reports include only seven crime categories — murder, rape, assault, robbery, burglary, larceny and motor vehicle theft. They say nothing about white-collar offenses and numerous other crimes.

It will take new legislation from Congress, however, before the new bureau could take over the Justice Department's crime statistics work and go into full operation.

Vance places stress on mutual interests

By BARRY SCHWEID

PEKING (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, here to explore chances of establishing full diplomatic relations with China, opened talks with Chinese leaders today by emphasizing the two countries' common political interests in various parts of the world.

In a sitting room in the Great Hall of the People, Vance began his first meeting with a Chinese team headed by Foreign Minister Huang Hua by saying there are areas where the two countries have "mutual interests."

One of these areas is Africa, where both the United States and China are eager to blunt Soviet penetration. They are concerned about inroads the Russians are making in east Africa and with insurgent movements in southern Africa.

American officials said the "international discussion," as Vance called it, was aimed at persuading Peking that a closer relationship can be built with Washington on the basis of shared objectives.

This phase of the talks is likely to occupy the first two days of Vance's four-day visit to the Chinese capital, serving as a buildup to the dominant subject — a mutual desire to move toward full relations.

Outside the Great Hall, and along the Avenue of Tranquility, in Tien An Men Square and elsewhere, tens of thousands of Chinese marched behind banners proclaiming the completion of the 11th Communist party congress.

The celebration bore no relationship to Vance's visit. The congress formally selected Hua Kuo-feng as party chairman, thereby ratifying his policies of economic advancement and greater openness toward the outside world.

But the festive atmosphere, with clanging cymbals and exploding firecrackers that had children covering their ears, lent a special dimension to this first high-level U.S.-Chinese contact in two years.

Chairman Hua had signaled Vance beforehand that Chinese policy has not changed on the Taiwan question, and that the United States would have to end all diplomatic and military ties with the Nationalist Chinese if it hopes to establish full relations with Peking.

Hua's demand was contained in a speech closing the party congress last Thursday and made public by Hsinhua, the official Chinese news agency, as Vance flew from Tokyo to the Chinese capital.

"If the relations between the two countries are to be normalized," said Hua, "the United States must sever its so-called diplomatic relations with the Chiang (Kai-shek) clique, withdraw all its armed forces and military installations from Taiwan and the Taiwan Straits area and abrogate its

By JOHN RODERICK

TOKYO (AP) — The Chinese Communist Party has named a new group of leaders committed to political and economic pragmatism rather than Mao Tse-tung's policy of continuous revolution. Three of the five top men are staunch disciples of the late moderate Premier Chou En-lai.

The 11th Chinese Communist Party Congress, which ended in Peking Thursday, elected 57year-old Hua Kuo-feng to the nation's highest post, the party chairmanship, and named four vice-chairmen: Defense Minister Yeh Chien-ying, 80; newly rehabilitated Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, 73; economic chief Li Hsien-nien, 72, and Wang Tung-hsing, a former commander of Mao's bodyguards who is the executive director of the party and about 60.

Hsinhua, the official news agency, reported that the party central committee met on Friday and named a 26-member Politburo headed by a standing committee made up of Hua and the four vice-chairmen.

Wang's rise, over the heads of more senior party men, was the surprise of the congress. A Mao man, he was believed rewarded for his part in the arrest last October of Mao's widow, Chiang Ching, and the other three radical members of the Politburo known as the "gang of four."

Yeh, Teng and Li were close associates of Chou En-lai, and Yeh and Teng were his close personal friends. Their majority at the top assures that Chou's moderate policies will continue, with emphasis on economic development, international trade and other expanding contacts with the West.

Hua closed the party congress with a 35,000-word speech in which he said the arrest of Chiang Ching and the other radicals marked the "triumphant conclusion of our first great proletarian cultural revolution which lasted 11 years." As a result, he added, China now is able to "achieve stability and unity and attain great order across the land."

He did not mention that the purged radical leaders were Mao's chief lieutenants in the cultural revolution.

Hua called for an "all-around leap forward in agriculture, light industry, heavy industry and other sectors."

"We must build an independent and fairly comprehensive industrial and economic system in our country by 1980," he declared.

Sixteen killed in raid

By JUDY YABLONKI

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Rhodesian security forces were hunting for a band of black guerrillas who attacked the black living quarters on a farm in eastern Rhodesia and slaughtered 16 men, women and children.

In another development, Rhodesian authorities reported that guerrillas fired 20 to 30 rockets from Zambia into the popular Rhodesian holiday resort of Kariba on Sunday. They caused no casualties or damage.

It was the second shelling of the town in two months. In the last rocket attack, on June 4, one man was injured and some cars and buildings were damaged.

Officials said the guerrillas who raided the east Rhodesian farm herded some of their victims into a circle and shot them. Others were bayoneted, and one was burned to death when the attackers set fire to the compound.

Another 15 to 20 persons were injured in the raid Saturday night.

"It was a terrible sight. There were men, women and children lying in the bushes nearby — some of them dead and some were screaming with pain," said the white owner of the farm, Marius Sleigh.

A pregnant woman was among those killed.

The farm 17 miles north of Umtali is near the Mozambique border, an area in which militant black nationalists have stepped up cross-border raids in their five-year war against Prime Minister Ian Smith's white government.

Sleigh said a security fence around the compound was to have been completed by today.

By MIKE COCHRAN

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) — The main cast of characters began gathering in Amarillo Sunday night as prosecutors indicated that star witness Priscilla Davis could take the stand today in the Cullen Davis capital murder trial.

Prosecutors also said the the leadoff witness in the trial would be Fort Worth Domestic Relations Court Judge Joe Eidson.

It was in Eidson's court that Davis and Priscilla, his estranged wife, hashed out details of their separation and pending divorce. Shortly before a shooting spree at the Davis mansion last year that left two dead and two wounded, Eidson increased maintenance payments by Cullen to Priscilla to $5,000 per month. He also ordered Cullen Davis to pay Priscilla $27,000 in advance for various expenses and $25,000 partial payment to her lawyers.

And it was Eidson who issued a restraining order that in effect barred Davis from the couple's showplace Fort Worth mansion.

Priscilla arrived in Amarillo Sunday and checked into a suite of rooms across a courtyard from Cullen Davis' suite in the same hotel.

Also checked into the Hilton Inn was Karen Master, a striking blonde at whose Fort Worth home Davis was arrested the night of the shootings.

The current trial deals only with the Wilborn killing.

Davis is free on temporary bond of $1 million.

State Dist. Court Judge Tom Cave in Fort Worth retains jurisdiction in the matter of Davis' bond, and his ruling on whether or not Davis may remain free on bond could come as early as today. Prosecutors have asked Cave to overturn the bond.

Davis has also posted $650,000 bond on the other Farr capital murder charge and two other charges stemming from the shootings. The two other charges are attempted capital murder in the woundings of his estranged wife and Gus Gavrel Jr., a family friend who was at the mansion the night of Aug. 2, 1976, when the shots were fired.

In a 30-minute opening statement Saturday the prosecutors outlined their case. They said they will show that Davis went to the mansion to kill Priscilla.

The defense made no opening statement.

Landmark fishing law threatening to backfire

The Washington Post

GLOUCESTER, Mass. — When the Santa Maria chugged home to this bustling fishing port last week after nine days at sea the eight-man crew of the little boat pocketed $14,800 for the 65,000 pounds of cod, haddock and pollack crammed into her hold.

It was not the first time in this boom year of the new 200-mile limit that skipper Joe Marino and his crew have managed to accumulate such a juicy pot. But this time, when the money was passed out, the smiles and plans for more big cash runs were missing.

Six months after Congress passed the landmark 200-mile restriction on foreign fishermen to save the battered U.S. fishing fleet there is growing concern among the North Atlantic fishing industry that the plan has backfired.

The problem with the new law is not that it hasn't worked but rather that it has worked too well.

Since the 200-mile limit went into effect March 1 and cleared some of the Atlantic's richest fishing grounds for Marino and his colleagues the U.S. fleet has dumped an avalanche of fish on the market.

Moreover, the increased catch has spurred a boom in other parts of the industry. Federal experts here said up to 40 new boats — at as much as $1 million each — are under construction because of the boom. Fish processors here and elsewhere along the Atlantic coast are busy expanding their facilities — including one built in Maine since the 200-mile limit for $750,000.

Now federal fisheries experts say the U.S. catch must be drastically reduced or ocean fish stocks off the New England coast will be critically depleted.

The National Marine Fisheries Service has already clamped a 5,000-pound catch limit on U.S. vessels operating in the Gulf of Maine off the New England coast, and next montht he limit will be extended to the richest U.S. area of all on Georges Bank.

"If we don't do it now we're going to be in bad trouble," said a federal fisheries expert. "The fishermen are depleting the stocks so badly that they are getting like a rancher who slaughters his cattle the day after they're born. We have to control the U.S. fleet for a year or two to build those fish schools back up."

Fishermen here, however, claim their personal experience in sighting unusually large schools of fish this year doesn't jibe with the federal experts' contention. They have reacted to the new catch limits with howls of protest.

"The whole program was put together by people who have never had any experience at sea," said Marino. "They're probably all from Ohio."

The problem, federal fisheries experts claim, is that the U.S. fishermen are catching the same species in larger numbers now that were already depleted before the ban on foreign fishing within 200 miles of the U.S. shores. Foreign boats fished

Elvis Preseley called her "mama."

She sort of looked after him when the late rock 'n' roll idol came to town. She also "peddled" his records for both their gain.

But that aside, she was a Presley devotee, admirer, fan, guardian ... sort of.

And "Mama" Holifield, in so many words, called the singer a prince of a man.

"He was one of the most photogentic, one of the most sensitive, one of the most courteous, and one of the nicest persons I've ever known."

She has photograph upon photograph of the artist, who died last week at age 42. She has a scrapbook of news and publicity clippings, too.

"There's nobody in this town that has pictures like I have — autographed pictures," Mrs. Holifield said.

ROUSTIN' ABOUT with Ed Todd

Indeed, this retired businesswoman does have many signed photographs. And she has them from many artists who were particularly popular in the 1950s and early 1960s.

During those years, "Mama" Beulah Holifield managed a record shop in Midland. Her late husband,

Bell trial entering third week

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — The trial of a $29 million damage suit against Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. entered its third week today with the plaintiffs preparing to rest their case that the company drove one executive to his suicide and wrongfully fired another.

The suit was filed by James Ashley and the family of T.O. Gravitt.

It alleges that Southwestern Bell drove Gravitt to his suicide in October of 1974 in Dallas and wrongfully fired Ashley from his $55,000 a year position in San Antonio as the result of an improper internal investigation.

Gravitt was the top Bell Executive in Texas at the time of his death.

The plaintiffs had called more than a dozen witnesses to the stand and read portions of as many depositions to the 10man, two-woman jury when the state district court trial recessed Friday.

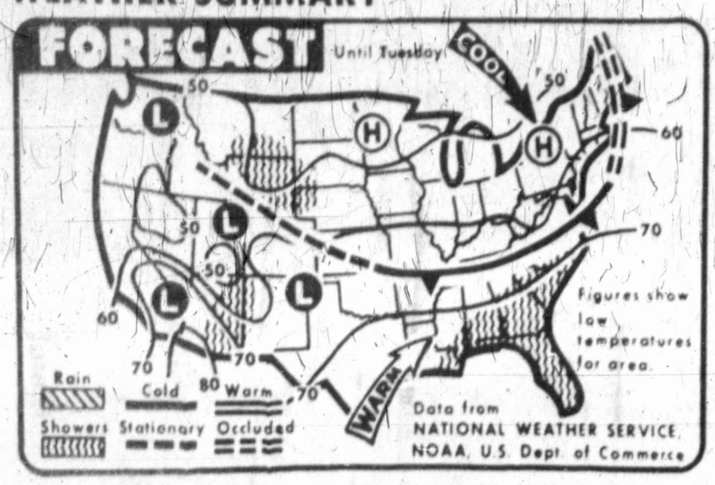

Ashley himself, the key witness against Bell, spent nearly four days testifying.

There were indications during Ashley's cross-examination that Bell lawyers, in their defense, may try to show that Ashley was partly to blame for Gravitt's death.

Bell lawyers accused Ashley in their questioning of feeding Gravitt

Schlesinger says oil companies always hungry for more profits

By STAN BENJAMIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — No matter how much profit petroleum companies make, says Energy Secretary James Schlesinger, they always want more, and they don't really need it.

But Schlesinger says he thinks the companies will accept the energy bill passed by the House, even with its price controls and taxes, rather than fight it to a standstill in the Senate and be stuck indefinitely with existing regulations.

In his first on-the-record interview since taking office on Aug. 5, Schlesinger said the prices allowed by the bill offer petroleum companies adequate incentives to produce more oil and gas, and higher prices would risk generating excess profits for company stockholders.

"Greed, of course, is an unflattering term," Schlesinger said in answer to a question about the companies' intentions.

"But if one employs it, one must recognize that greed is the virtue that drives the free enterprise system, the desire to acquire substantial profits."

As the nation's nirst secretary of energy, Schlesinger also said he will take a close look at the jacking up of world uranium prices by an international cartel, and the possible involvement of U.S. energy companies.

On another subject, he said the Carter administration may favor an overland pipeline through Canada for Alaskan natural gas if it would be cheaper for U.S. consumers than a pipeline through Alaska that would require costly tanker shipments to the West Coast. U.S. and Canadian representatives are discussing the pipeline question.

Schlesinger said he may enter negotiations with Canada in time to permit a policy recommendation by President Carter soon after Congress reconvenes next Sept. 7.

In the interview, conducted for an hour and a half last Friday in his White House office, Schlesinger also:

—Left the door open for administration consideration of a proposal to allow petroleum companies some higher profits to be "plowed back" into further energy development.

—Said the Carter administration will not try to keep oil and gas companies from moving into coal, uranium and other energy resources, at least for the present.

—Said Carter's effort to discourage the spread of nuclear fuel technology that could be used for nuclear weapons has had "partial success," achieving international agreement to work on the problem.

In discussing petroleum industry hopes for the energy bill pending in the Senate, Schlesinger said:

"Whatever we had proposed, I think one might anticipate that industry would have asked for more.

"Even if we had gone immediately to world oil prices for all oil, there probably would have been a desire for subsidy of some sort or another."

They were Presley promoters in a way, and his friend. He was like a member of the family, like a son, she said.

She recalled his first coming to Midland in the mid-1950s. She doesn't remember the exact year. Probably 1956. He came to the record shop. He also visited in their home. Many times, she said.

Mrs. Holifield told of a family gettoghter centered around Presley, who was in his early 20s back then. Girls were swooning over him. His mere presence thrilled and excited them.

The Holifields' son, "Sonny," who was only two years younger than the singer, was barbecuing chicken for the occasion.

And "some girls" were teaching the master of rock 'n' roll how to dance. He could gyrate, swing and groove, strum the guitar and sing very well. But he couldn't dance?

"He didn't know how to dance," Mrs. Holifield said. He was a church-going boy."

With Presley at the Holifields were Scotty Moore, his guitarist; Bill Black, his bass fiddler; June Pritchard, Miss Texas of 1955, and, among a few others, Shirley Carrol, who clerked in the record shop.

"We got so excited with him being here that we burned the barbecue," Mrs. Holifield. But, she said, Presley just "peeled" of the charred skin and ate it anyway.

"See," she remarked, "he looks like that Valentino boy."

It wasn't just his looks or his singing that seemed to fascinate her.

"He was the most sensitive, courteous person that you had been around," she said.

"A lot of people bugged him, but he was nice to everybody."

He was decent.

"He did not drink, smoke or chew," she said.

She must, indeed, have admired the performer.

And there were (and are) others in the rock 'n' roll and country 'n' western field to whom she has taken a fancy.

Along with Presley, Johnny Cash and Slim Whitman rank among her favorites. They, too, called her "ma" or "mama."

"He is a doll," she said of Cash.

"He just visited us like one of the kids," she said of Whitman.

She has known many recording artists, and has autographed photographs to help her remember. Some are still popular. Others are in the shadows or, like Presley, in the grave.

"We just love them all," "Mama" Holifield said.

Especially, she was fond of Presley, Cash and Whitman.

"He (Presley) had the most beautiful smile and lips I ever saw on anybody, excepting our son."

Until last year, 15 or so years had passed since "Mama" Holifield saw or heard from Presley.

When Presley was on stage in Odessa in 1976, she was at his concert. She saw him, but he didn't see her. That year, too, she saw Cash in concert.

"Seeing Johnny Cash and Elvis on stage just fulfilled everything I ever hoped for," she said.

Cash, she said, "has an impact on Christianity almost as good as Billy Graham."

And Elvis Presley?

"He looked just wonderful . . . ," "Mama" Holifield said of the rock 'n' roll king.

". . . To see the admiration and love the people had for him was absolutely incredible."

The Carter administration disclaims any intention of abandoning Taiwan. But it has been banking heavily on Chinese patience as well as a less-rigid stance toward what would be a reduced but still formidable American relationship with the Nationalists.

The Chinese, involved in their own domestic politics, have put only limited pressure on the United States during the last several years to terminate the American diplomatic connection with Taiwan. But it was expected that with the sortingout of the Peking hierarchy at the 11th Communist Party congress last week, they might get more insistent.

Vance intends to probe for signs of flexibility. A primary U.S. objective is to find a formula for protecting Taiwan's security should the mutual defense treaty be abrogated.

Underlining the sensitivity of the four-day visit, Vance and his advisers refused to discuss any proposals he might have brought or the strategy he intended to follow.

The Chinese advised Vance prior to his arrival of only one official he was scheduled to see, Foreign Minister Huang Hua. There was no certainty in the American delegation that the secretary would confer with Hua and Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping although this was expected.

However, preliminary analysis of the leaders chosen at the party conference and of Hua's closing speech indicated the regime will emphasize production, with Western assistance, rather than ideological isolation.

This was considered a positive background for Vance's visit, the first high-level U.S.Chinese meetings in two years and the first opportunity for the new leaders in Washington and Peking to get acquainted.

Airline adding Austin flights

DALLAS—Austin will join the cities served by Southwest Airlines Sept. 15, including service from Midland-Odessa to Austin.

Southwest Airlines said the service will begin in conjunction with the delivery of the airline's 10th Boeing 737-200 jet aircraft.

Present plans call for "executive class flights" Monday through Friday, with "pleasure class service" on weekends.

The flight from Midland-Odessa to Austin will include a change of planes in Dallas.

City budget hearing set for Tuesday

At 4 p.m. Tuesday the City Council will hold a public hearing on the 1977-78 City of Midland budget and the proposed use of revenue sharing funds to be received through September 1978.

The council will consider ordinances to approve the budget, to appropriate the necessary funds for the operation of the various departments and to set the tax levy.

A resolution approving the revenue sharing budget will also be considered. Proposed uses for the funds include $148,000 for sanitation compactors and containers; $5,500 for portable bleachers, $85,000 for a fire truck, 5,000 for a radio console, $625,000 for a fire station relocation program, j300,000 for a golf club house at Hogan Park, $144,000 for the police personal-car program, $45,000 for Hogan Park Road, $50,000 for Kiwanis Park, $30,000 for box seats at Cub Stadium, and $176,500 for softball park improvements.

The total for revenue sharing funds is $1,614,000.

Other items to be considered include a resolution authorizing the refund of over and double payments of taxes, the possibility of increasing fines for overparking at parking meters, and authorizing the use of city facilities by the Midland Housing Authority.

The council will also meet in executive session to discuss personnel matters, possible land purchases and pending or prospective litigation.

Landmark fishing law in danger of backfiring

for hake, squid and mackeral, which are not badly depleted species, while the U.S. boats still go after cod, herring, pollack and haddock, all on the government's depleted list.

Last week nearly 100 fishermen crowded into the St. Peter Club, a cavernous old bar and meeting hall on the waterfront here, to shout their displeasure at the new regulations to Rep. Michael Harrington (D-Mass.) and federal fisheries experts.

The federal experts are wrong on their ocean-stock assessments, the fishermen insisted, and are using the figures and the provisions of the new 200-mile law to move in on the traditionally independent fishing industry.

"There's a million pounds of fish out there, and they're telling us we can't touch them," one local fishing boat captain angrily told Harrington.

The federal fish experts agree that this year's catch has been exceptional. But they said despite the plentiful schools of fish on the U.S. grounds, this year long-term stocks of younger fish they have counted show serious depletion that will show up in the future.

Harrington, noting that when the 200-mile limit was first proposed few experts or fishermen believed the U.S. catch would increase to anywhere near its current size, said, "We're in the embarrassing situation now of having it better than people thought."

The foreign fleet working U.S. waters inside the 200-mile limit has been halved to roughly 500 vessels, according to the fisheries service. These boats are kept in "windows," or relatively small areas where they are allowed to fish for species not normally sought by U.S. boats such as hake and squid.

exaggerations and speculation about the 1974 company investigation.

Ashley was suspended October 9, 1974 for reasons that included alleged sexual impropriety with female Bell employes.

The suit contends that Ashley and Gravitt were targeted for removal from the Bell power structure because they were critical of certain company policies, including what they considered unfair rate fixing procedures in Texas.

Gravitt left behind a suicide note which concluded, "Watergate, is a gnat compared to the Bell system."

Philippines curfew due to be lifted

MANILA, The Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand Marcos told a conference on human rights today he will ease martial law by granting amnesty for subversives, lifting a nationwide curfew and ending a ban on foreign travel.

He also promised to hold local elections next year and to set an election date in 1978 for all other government positions. There have been no elections since Marcos imposed martial law on Sept. 23, 1972.

Marcos' announcements received prolonged applause from about 5,000 lawyers and judges attending the Manila World Law Conference, whose theme this year is human rights in international law.

Marcos was elected president in November 1965 and re-elected in 1969. He dissolved the National Assembly and imposed martial law three years later to check widespread violence stemming from poverty, unemployment, inflation and government corruption, and to prevent election of a political foe as his successor.

Marcos gave few details of his new program and government officials said they had not received any new orders. Executive Assistant Jacobo Clave said decrees had been signed but would not be made public immediately.

Orientation set Tuesday

Orientation for new Midland College students will be between 8 a.m. and noon Tuesday, according to C. C. Dakil, dean of students.

"All those persons who will be attending Midland College for the first time this fall, whether they have preregistered or not, should attend the orientation program," Dakil said.

Incoming students should report to the Student Center Tuesday morning. From there, they will be divided into groups for a series of tours, videotape programs and discussion with counselors. The session also will include a test of reading skills.

One-hour credit is given for enrollment in the orientation, designed to provide new students with basic information needed to start them in their college courses.

Those who plan to attend Midland College for the first time who have not yet preregistered should attend orientation, Dakil said. They will be given credit for the class during registration, Wednesday and Thursday.

A make-up orientation program will be scheduled later for those who enroll late, Dakil said.

Axeman disturbs church services

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Services at St. Bartholemew's Catholic Church were shattered Sunday when a former mental patient wielding an axe handle charged up the aisle screaming "I am the Savior."

The Rev. Dennis Smith, assistant pastor, said he and the pastor, the Rev. Gerald Cooney, were serving communion to about 350 parishioners at 10:30 a.m. when they heard a commotion in the back of the church.

When Father Cooney left the altar to see about the disturbance, an athletic-looking man clad in cutoffs and carrying an axe handle ran raving into the church.

"People started getting excited, very excited," said Father Smith. "They began running in all directions. About 10 men finally subdued the man until poliice arrived."

Police, through the witnesses, then began reconstructing what had happened.

The man, who police said had been treated for mental problems at a local hospital, was seen earlier by Father Smith in the church parking lot. He was on leave from a veterans hospital in Waco, police said.

The man then went into a church prayer room and told worshipers there he wanted to light some candles. Witnesses said he placed a gold watch on the altar in the small chapel and began praying very loudly, saying he was Jesus Christ.

Father Smith said the man then left the prayer room and went outside, where he accosted a mother and her daughter. A neighbor, who was out for a walk, saw the attack and threatened to hit the mental patient with an axe handle he said he carries to ward off dogs on his walks.

"Are you going to hit me with the stick?" the mental patient reportedly asked.

"No. I just want you to turn the girl loose," replied the 53- year-old good samaritan.

The neighbor threw down the ax handle, but the man, who had been choking the daughter, picked it up and began chasing him with it.

A 19-year-old Midland man was listed in guarded condition in Odessa's Medical Center Hospital early today after he was injured in a car-motorcycle accident about 8 p.m. Saturday.

According to reports, Jerry Michael Warren of 410 Kent St. was riding a motorcycle, and was eastbound in the 2000 block of West Cuthbert Street. Warren was attempting to pass a car when his motorcycle and a car driven by Dan Harry Bonham, 26, of 702 W. Nobles Ave. collided, police were told.

Bonham swerved in a vain attempt to miss the motorcycle, according to reports. The motorcycle was thrown 30 feet from the point of impact, and Warren was thrown 20 feet from the motorcycle, police said.

PURSE, CONTENTS TAKEN

A purse and its contents with a total value of $150 were taken from an office at 2101 W. Wall Ave. between 3 and 6 p.m. Sunday.

Mrs. Leane Messersmith of 3000 W. Illinois Ave. told police someone entered the office while she, her husband and a friend were remodeling a back office.

TOOLS TAKEN

Several tools valued at $150 were taken from a pickup belonging to Ruben Sanchez Mesa of Odessa while he was eating in a restaurant in the 3700 block of West Wall Avenue about 9:45 p.m. Sunday.

Mesa told police when he returned from the restaurant, the pickup's toolbox was open and the tools were gone. Nothing else was reported missing from the pickup, police said.

The dead were identified as Edward Campbell of Franklin, Ariz., 74, and his daughter, Diane Snyder, 37, and granddaughter, Carol, 15, both of Twin Falls, Idaho.

Ten-year-old Joe Snyder, another family member, was seriously injured.

Harvey Auzene of Houston, the driver of the car, was booked with negligent homicide and drunk driving.

Agency said ready to file against Tris

By LARRY MARGASAK

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Consumer Product Safety Commission says his agency is prepared to file court suits nationwide as part of a new drive to halt the sale of children's sleepwear treated with Tris.

The commission decided on the strategy after it completed a new survey showing continuing sales of garments treated with the fire-retardant chemical linked to cancer in animal tests, says S. John Byington.

"Retailers ought to stop selling these garments or they'll probably find themselves in court with the Consumer Product Safety Commission," Byington said Sunday night in a telephone interview.

The case-by-case drive against Tris is an alternative to the commission's nationwide ban against the sale of garments treated with the chemical. The ban, imposed in April, was voided in June by U.S. District Judge Robert Chapman in Columbia, S.C.

Chapman ruled that the agency failed to observe proper procedures in imposing the ban.

Rather than wait for a U.S. appellate court to rule on a request to reinstate the ban, consumer safety commissioners decided to file individual suits in selected cases where they found Tris-treated garments for sale, Byington said.

The first suit, filed last Friday, resulted in a temporary order from a federal judge in New York ordering R.H. Macy & Co. department stores to stop selling the clothing. A hearing on the suit is scheduled for Sept. 22.

"We're hopeful that with the Macy's case and with two or three more cases this week, most retailers will understand we are now back in the market attempting to remove those garments," Byington said.

"Unless they want to litigate the right to sell Tris-treated garments, most would just take them off the shelves. I wouldn't want to argue the right to sell Tris-treated garments. It's bad public policy and bad customer relations."

The commission, concerned about earlier surveys that showed the sleepwear still on sale, had its personnel buy children's pajamas across the country for several days earlier this month. The clothing was later tested in laboratories.

While the percentage of Tris-treated garments purchased is not yet known, the preliminary results persuaded the commission to launch the new campaign, Byington said.

Some stores selling the sleepwear may have been unaware that they had the clothing treated with Tris on their shelves, he said. An attorney for Macy's said that out of 125,000 children's pajamas and nighties in stock at the company's 76 stores, the commission found only 10 Tris-treated garments.

Price of coffee gradually coming down

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Drop by drop, coffee prices have started coming down. Supermarkets say sales of the brew are gradually picking up again, although consumers still seem reluctant to buy.

An Associated Press spot survey showed the price of a pound of coffee is generally about $3.50, down from a high of $4 and more in some places in March and April. In a few cities, where prices topped $5 a pound, current levels are still around $4.

Edward Maron of Ralphs, an 82-outlet chain in the Los Angeles area, said the stores ran an ad recently advertising lower coffee prices — $3.49 a pound, 47 per cent higher than the $2.38 level of January, but 13 per cent below the mid-April price of $3.99.

It was the store's first coffee promotion this year and Maron said sales increased slightly. "There is still a supply and demand problem," he said. "I don't think it's as severe as it was six months ago, but it's still with us. We're now in a kind of holding pattern."

Store spokesmen in Atlanta said sales dropped about 20 to 25 per cent in the first half of the year. Recent coffee promotions helped slightly, but sales remain sluggish. "We feel that one reason customers are not buying right now is that they're using up what we call 'pantry stuff' in anticipation of lower prices to come," said Arthur Levitt, coffee buyer for Alterman Brothers, operators of the area's Big Apple chain.

A spokesman for a large chain in the Kansas City area said he didn't think sales would ever return to normal. "It's still not cheap," he said, when asked about coffee. "As time goes on, I think they're going to lose coffee drinkers."

Corwyn Wnke of Falley's, an independent retailer in Topeka, Kan., said a pound of coffee is selling for $3.79, down from a high of $4.49. He said customers seemed to buy only when coffee was on sale.

Retail prices generally have decreased by a smaller margin than wholesale ones, mainly because the supermarket prices rose more slowly as stores sold coffee at a loss to draw customers. Now the wholesale and retail levels are about equal in most areas and, in a few cases, the supermarkets are selling coffee at up to a nickel a pound more than the wholesale price.

Coffee prices started soaring after a frost in Brazil — the world's biggest producer — destroyed part of that country's 1975-76 harvest.

President sees retreat, talk of closure ends

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — Before Jimmy Carter took office, there was talk about saving money by closing Camp David, the presidential retreat about 60 miles north of Washington.

Then the new President had a chance to look around the hideaway, a kind of personal country club with a membership of one. The talk stopped.

Carter returned to the White House on Sunday after his first extended stay in Maryland's Catoctin mountains. It was his seventh trip to Camp David and every sign indicates he enjoys the retreat, with its rustic atmosphere, its tennis court and its swimming pool.

Camp David gives Carter privacy and relief from the highly organized schedule he follows at the White House. "There is no set routine," says Tim Kraft, the President's appointments secretary and one of a handful of aides who accompanied the Carters on their vacation last week.

Carter is free to put on casual clothes and wander alone through the woods. Or he can indulge his interest in softball.

But the symbols of the presidency are never far away.

When Carter leaves, a Marine stands at attention and then marches to the flagpole to lower the flag the instant the helicopter lifts off.

The camp is situated in the Catoctin Mountain Park, run by the National Park Service. It is surrounded by two chain-link fences topped by barbed wire. An electric fence runs between the two other fences. The perimeter is patrolled by rifle-carrying Marines in battle fatigues.

Every President since Franklin Roosevelt has used the presidential retreat. FDR called it Shangri-La. Dwight Eisenhower renamed it Camp David, after his grandson, David Eisenhower. It is about 20 miles south of the Eisenhower farm in Gettysburg, Pa.

Richard Nixon retreated to Camp David for weeks on end as the Watergate scandal unfolded and chipped away at his administration. He reportedly enjoyed the rustic atmosphere so much that even during the height of the 1973-74 energy crisis he turned his air conditioning on full blast so he could keep the fireplace in his lodge glowing during the summer.

When Carter and his family make the 30-minute helicopter flight from the White House, they guard their privacy jealously. Few staff members accompany them.

Occasionally, they invite a friend to join them. Carter's confidant, Charles Kirbo, spent a night there last week and the parents of one of Carter's daughters-in-law visited in February.

But most of the time Carter spends his weekends at Camp David with his wife Rosalynn, daughter Amy and, occasionally, with one or two of his sons and their wives.

Hughes reportedly took pain-killing drugs

By LEE JONES

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Howard Hughes received regular and frequent doses of Valium and codeine-based pain killers in the last years of his life, an assistant attorney general says the reclusive magnate's aides told him.

One aide said in a sworn deposition that Hughes' final move, from the Bahamas to Acapulco, was linked to a power struggle within Hughes' financial empire, Asst. Atty. Gen. Rick Harrison said Sunday.

Hughes died of kidney failure April 5, 1976, and is buried in Houston. He evidently died aboard his plane as it flew from Acapulco to Houston.

Harrison has been taking depositions in Los Angeles for use by the state in its effort to collect 16 per cent of Hughes' estate in inheritance taxes.

A jury trial to determine Hughes' legal residence begins Sept. 12 in Judge Pat Gregory's Harris County Probate Court No. 2.

Hughes' closest living relatives contend he was a Nevada resident, while Atty. Gen. John Hill claims he was born and died a Texan.

California courts have ordered Hughes aides John Holmes and Chuck Waldron to answer questions about how drugs were obtained and administered to the reclusive magnate, Harrison said.

He said Texas will petition Los Angeles Superior court today or Tuesday to order Hughes' physician, Dr. Norman Crane, to answer questions about the same subject.

The aides, Harrison said, were "six male secretaries who lived with Hughes on a rotating basis, three on and three off. There always was an aide with Hughes to answer the phone, give messages, and dictate messages back. We've deposed all of them."

Depositions obtained thus far from Holmes, Waldron and several other Hughes aides indicated heavy medication, Harrison said.

"We are talking about soluble codeine, taken by hypodermic, Empirin Compound No. 4 and Valium. . . . He was taking all three of those frequently and regularly over the last 10 to 15 years of his life," Harrison said.

Codeine, a pain-killer, is on the federal dangerous drug list, and a physician must have a narcotics license to prescribe it. An Empirin Compound No. 4 tablet contains 64 milligrams of codeine, and Harrison said the depositions indicated Hughes "took it in large quantities."

He said Hughes took 10-milligram tablets of Valium, the strongest dosage made.

"Aides called them blue bombers. He took eight to 10 at a time. That came out in the depositions," Harrison said.

Harrison said testimony about a power struggle within Hughes' holding company, Summa Corp., came from George Francom, one of the Mormon aides.

Crime study groups sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — After ignoring exhortations by researchers and study groups for more than a century, the government is moving to pull together its disjointed set of facts and figures on crime.

Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell wants to end fragmentation of effort in the Justice Department's compilation and analysis of crime figures by creating a new Bureau of Criminal Justice Statistics.

In so doing, Bell is responding to what critics have described as the department's "horse and buggy system" of collecting crime figures. The agency he is proposing could give the public and government officials at all levels important information about crime trends and fresh insight about the causes of crime and ways to combat it.

The new agency would take over the crime statistics work of the FBI, the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration and a host of separate department offices.

Seventeen department units currently produce 54 different sets of statistics dealing with crime, the courts, prosecutors, prisons or other aspects of the criminal justice system.

Justice Department officials and private researchers long have maintained that the criminal records-keeping practices of the government have frustrated efforts to paint a reliable picture of crime in America.

"Nationwide information about crime is so fragmented, unreliable and varied that it is impossible to state, with any degree of confidence, conclusions about the state of the nation's crime problem," said a recent department staff report on the problem.

The best-known statistics are those published in the FBI's annual and quarterly figures on the numbers of crimes reported to state and local police. But those reports include only seven crime categories — murder, rape, assault, robbery, burglary, larceny and motor vehicle theft. They say nothing about white-collar offenses and numerous other crimes.

It will take new legislation from Congress, however, before the new bureau could take over the Justice Department's crime statistics work and go into full operation.

Strip mining brings prosperity, trouble to once-poor Appalachia

By PAUL G. EDWARDS
The Washington Post

WISE, Va. — From a helicopter fluttering through the hot haze over Virginia's Cumberland Mountains 325 miles southwest of Washington, the passenger can watch the good and bad effects of the region's coal boom reel past below.

In the streets of Wise and Norton, towns that declined for 25 years during the regional recession that made Appalachia synonymous with hard times, coal trucks and late model automobiles pass in a steady stream. New housing dots the hillsides around the towns and the main roads are lined with the low, street structures that house the offices of surface mine operators and heavy equipment dealers.

The banks that once occupied the ground floors of aging red brick buildings in town centers now stand out as scattered, new structures on the edge of black parking lots.

Everywhere, the shiny outlets of the fast-food chains suggest a rising personal disposable income in an area where family nutrition long relied on food stamps and garden plots.

These are the signs of prosperity, but even a brief helicopter flight also shows that this prosperity arrived at a cost.

Northwest of Wise, the steep slopes of Little Black Mountain lie bare, stripped of the hardwood forests that recently covered them. Now the slopes are covered with the rocky rubble that was ripped away to reach the thin seams of coal that run through the mountain.

On the edge of Norton, the still raw site of a complete hilltop mine reaches to within a few feet of the back doors of the modest home on 13th Street.

One of the 13th Street residents, retired coal miner Ewin Davison, 65, said in an interview that the dust created by the months-long strip mining operation covered the neighborhood so thickly that his 14-fear-old son, Jeffrey Lynn, contracted silicosis.

Davison also said blasting at the mine site broke windows and cracked the chimney of his home and sent rocks flying through the roofs of at least two houses in the area.

About two blocks away on Park Avenue, Norton's main street, Mrs. Joseph Fischer showed visitors what she said was damage caused to her 12-year-old brick home by strip mine blasting. It included a four-foot crack in the block walls of the basement and wide separations between the basement floor and walls.

Most of the strip mines, of course, are located in lightly populated rural areas, but the mines also have caused complaints. In small communities of Lee County near Pennington Gap, residents contend that recent flooding of their low-lying homes was caused by rapid runoff from stripped areas high on the mountainsides.

Mud covered roads in front of the homes and buried tomato plants and other vegetables in their gardens, they said, as the heavy rains of late spring carried silt away from the mine sites.

Against this background of prosperity and grievances — both stimulated by strip mining — some dramatic developments are occurring in Virginia's coal fields.

For the first time, a citizens organization of coal field residents — the still small but rapidly growing Virginia Citizens for Better Reclamation (VCBR) — is increasing pressure for local, state and federal government controls on mining.

At the same time, the state agency that regulates strip mining is about to impose significantly more stringent regulations on mining methods and Congress is near enactment of even tougher federal strip mine restraints.

There continues to be fierce debate over how effective these proposed regulations will be in limiting the adverse effects of strip mining. There also are questions about how much they will add to the price of coal, a major factor in rising electric bills.

In Virginia, these debates are developing what appear to be the last years of the controversial strip mining industry. According to figures recently published by the state planning district commissions in the coal fields, strip mine production in Virginia should total 12.4 million tons this year, about one-third of the state's total coal production.

It is projected to decline steadily until 1990 when Virginia's surface mine reserves are expected to be depleted. By then, all of Virginia's coal will come from deep mines, from which production is projected to rise from about 26 million tons this year to 60 million tons by 1990.

But before the strip mining era ends in Virginia, the planning commissions' surveys predict that about 127 square miles in seven counties will have been disturbed. This would be roughly 8 per cent of the region in which the mines are located. The majority of this area, about 75 square miles, already was mined in 1975, the surveys showed.

There appear to be three explanations for the pressure for tougher strip mine regulations so late in the day of strip mining in Virginia. One is that mining activity increased rapidly after the 1973 Arab oil embargo and attracted more complaints. Another is that Virginia strip mining is occurring at a time of proposed federal regulation of a growing nationwide industry.

The third reason appears to be Frank Kilgore, a 25-year-old descendant of 18th century Irish settlers of Southwest Virginia and the founder of VCBR. Kilgore, the son and grandson of coal miners, lives with his wife and two children in Honey Branch hollow near the town of St. Paul on the eastern edge of Virginia's coal fields.

He understands as well as anyone why it has taken so long for anyone to start a movement for improved strip mine reclamation practices in Southwest Virginia, a part of the country that tends to resist advice from "outsiders."

People just don't have the effectiveness in getting the government to act in this area that they do in other places, he said in an interview. "Look what it has taken to get something going down here — rocks through the roofs of houses and silicosis from the dust created by strip mining."

Kilgore said he has wanted to work for strip mine controls ever since he was about 12 years old and first saw the results of strip mining on hunting trips with his father near Honey Branch.

He organized VCBR and put together a slide show used to promote the organization in 1976 on a Southern Appalachian Leadership grant. The organization, he said, has been financed during the first 18 months of its activities on grants totaling $18,000 from the Ford Foundation and churches.

Kilgore said he has been the target of threats and assaults since he began his campaign for strip mine controls. He said someone in a passing car fired a shot at him last Christmas Eve as he stood in the yard of his home. The driver of what appeared to him to be the same car also tried to force him off a mountain road one night as he drove home from nearby Wise.

Nevertheless, Kilgore said VCBR has steadily grown to 350 members and is gaining influence partly because it is based in the coal fields and includes coal miners.

"At least people are talking in the open about better reclamation of mined land," he said. "That has never happened down here before."

Kilgore says the organization does not oppose strip mining — "That would be ridiculous in th[illegible]al fields" — but advocates re[illegible]tions that would prevent pushi[illegible] spoil (land stripped from above the coal seam) down the mountainsides and reduce erosion that fills coal field streams with silt.

VCBR also is working for tighter regulation of blasting that would prevent the kind of damage reported by Norton residents. Kilgore said that Edward S. Grandis, VCBR's only full time employe, has drafted major provisions restricting blasting that is contained in the federal legislation.

"I hate to see the federal government take over strip mining regulation," Kilgore said, "but the state has taken a hands-off policy. The basic provisions in the federal bill couldn't be passed in Virginia in 20 years."

Surface mine operators have strongly opposed the federal bill. Some of them have claimed that a provision requiring operators to restore stripped land to its original contour would end strip mining in Virginia because of the steep slopes in its coal fields.

However, James A. Brown Jr., one of the most successful coal operators in Wise County, believes that stripping will continue under the federal bill — but at a higher price to consumers and with higher profits for operators.

"You can do anything in the way of reclamation that the public will pay for in higher coal prices," he said in an interview. "We make 20 per cent before taxes on each ton of coal. We make 20 per cent of $22 now. If the federal government adds to the price of coal through reclamation costs, we'll make 20 per cent of the higher price."

Brown estimates that the federal legislation would add about $6 a ton to the price of surface mine coal now selling for $22. "That's about a midrange estimate," he said. "The conservationists say much less and the real pessimists say much more."

Brown said he generally supports efforts to reduce strip mine erosion that fills streams and reservoirs with silt, but believes that much in the proposed state and federal regulations are unnecessary and may even contribute to erosion.

"I don't think we should add to the price of coal for things that are not needed," he said. "If the government simply added a $4 a ton tax on coal instead of adding to reclamation costs and then decided how it should spend the tax money, I don't think it would spend it for the things being required in the fedreal bill. It would spend it on the things we need, like roads, schools and energy research."

Few shopping rules can save you plenty, says college expert

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Never pay full price for anything.

That's the motto of Heinz Biesdorf, a Cornell University professor who contends that American families could save thousands of dollars during their lives if they would follow a few simple rules of shopping.

Biesdorf and his colleages at Cornell recently issued a revised version of a step-by-step guide, first published in 1968, to saving money at the supermarket and the professor says the same techniques can be used in other areas of shopping as well.

The rules seem deceptively simple:

—Buy only when the price is right.

—Compare price and size to get the lowest price per unit.

—Shop in at least two competing stores.

—Plan your meals around the weekly meat specials.

Individual savings may seem small. But Biesdorf says that by rigidly following the rules you can easily trim 15 per cent from your grocery bill.

Putting the rules in practice to save substantial amounts takes time — probably an extra hour or more a week to start with, and effort — keeping track of prices and supplies.

Not everyone would be willing to make the sacrifices. To follow the Biesdorf plan completely, you often have to be willing to put price before individual taste. You may have to give up a little leisure time.

Surveys have shown, however, that consumers are willing to take extra steps to save money. A recent study by the Economic Research Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, for example, showed that a growing number of people are shopping at more than one store in order to get the best value.

"In general, consumers are interested in more information and are using available information to help them make better food purchase decisions," said Evelyn Kaitz of the USDA. "They are more aware shoppers and are checking the ads before doing their shopping. They are reading labels and express a need for additional label information."

Biesdorf's kit, "Be a Better Shopper — Buying in Supermarkets," includes a 65-page guide to buying techniques, a series of forms on which individuals can report purchases and prices, and pamphlets to help people compare prices of different size packages.

The kit is published by the New York State Extension Service on a nonprofit basis. It costs $2.50. Checks, payable to Cornell University, should be sent to Better Shopper, Box 191, Dept. N-2, Ithaca, N.Y., 14850. (A more expensive version, including slides, is available for schools and community groups.)

The first step, says Biesdorf, is to determine family spending priorities. Decide what things are most important. If you decide you want steak once a week, fine. But you must be ready to pay the price.

"Economists call this opportunity cost," says Biesdorf. "If you spend something on one item, you spend it at the expense of not spending on something else." Once you know priorities, you can work to eliminate impulse items that don't contribute to your goal. Weigh each purchase carefully.

Before you can cut your grocery bill, you have to know where your money goes. That's where the record-keeping sheets come in. In the beginning, you probably will have to refer to your records fairly often to check prices and products; as time goes on, you will remember the figures automatically, says Biesdorf.

Although there are over 10,000 items in the supermarket, most families will find their weekly purchases are fairly similar. You know there are some items you never use. Other items — toilet paper, for example — are things you will always need, no matter what. These staple items are the things you will want to stock up on.

Start shopping at home by going through the newspaper to check advertised specials. Although only a few items in a given store are likely to be on sale in a particular week, the savings can be large.

Once you have determined that the price is right, be prepared to buy more than you need for one week. Suppose, for example, 46-ounce cans of tomato juice are on sale at two for 99 cents, compared to a regular price of $1.30. Assume your family uses tomato juice regularly, at the rate of two cans a week. If you buy 12 cans, you have six weeks' supply and have saved $1.86.

Reminder: read the fine print in the ads. Some stores make savings conditional on a minimum purchase. If you have to buy items you don't really need in order to meet the minimum, you haven't saved. As a rule of thumb, Biesdorf says that if you have to buy only $5 of groceries or less to get the special, it's usually worthwhile.

Over a period of two or three months, you will probably find specials on most of the items and, a little at a time, can build up your own stores of various products. Once you have this backlog, you can pick and choose your shopping times, buying replacement items only when they are on sale.

In order to buy now for future use, you need extra money, but it may take less than you think. "If you have $5 which you have not planned to spend in a supermarket, you're well on your way," Biesdorf says, "because the first week there is no way you could find everything you use at the best price." You can even start with as little as $1 extra, he says.

What if you don't even have the dollar? Find it, says Biesdorf. "If you have no money at all, you skip something that you don't need very badly." Suppose you eliminate window cleaner and shoe polish. "I would say, 'Okay. That's a dollar. Find a place where you get a special price and use that dollar that way.'"

You should also remember that the extra supplies you buy this week will help cut next week's bill.

How big a supply of staples should you keep on hand? "Enough so you never have to buy at the regular price," says Biesdorf. After shopping carefully for several months, you should be able to gauge the frequency of specials. Two or three months' supply of a product generally will suffice, although properly stored items will last much longer. Canned goods, for example, can be kept for up to three years in dry, cool places, but most experts recommend storing them for no more than one year.

What if you don't have the time to shop around? Again, Biesdorf says: Find it. How much time do you devote to television? "How much does it cost to watch television? It costs time."

Once you have become familiar with the better shopper program, Biesdorf says, it takes less than half an hour a week to cut your grocery bill by 15 per cent. How much money can you earn in half an hour — even if you work overtime?

Biesdorf also dismisses arguments that his plan requires a lot of storage space. "If somebody offered you $50 worth of free groceries, would you turn them down because you didn't have room? Of course not." Rearrange cabinets to get the maximum use of available space. Consider step-shelves in the closets for more surface area. Store paper goods in cartons under the bed.

Biesdorf stresses the importance of using unit pricing where available to compare the cost of items sold in different size containers. Suppose, for example, a six-ounce can of something is 29 cents and a 13- ounce can is 60 cents. Which is cheaper? The unit price label will tell you the cost per pound of each item — 77 cents for the six-ounce size and 74 cents for the 13-ounce size.

If the unit price is not given, figure it out yourself. Biesdorf refuses to be discouraged because many people are unable to do the necessary arithmetic. "The fact that some people are unwilling, unable, incompetent, don't want to be bothered, not enough education, shouldn't stop a professor from teaching what he knows will work," Biesdorf says, somewhat dogmatically. "The ones who pick it up will benefit greatly."

The better shopper kit includes detailed explanations of how to figure out which size is the best buy, how to read labels and how to understand the information which is provided.

Shopping in more than one store is another key factor of the Biesdorf plan. He says any expenditure for gasoline used in traveling is offset by the savings if you buy in quantity.

'Star Wars' TV special produced

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Star Wars" is coming to television — but only as a special about the making of the boxoffice smash.

"Our special will offer glimpses of the film itself while taking the viewer behind the scenes — in footage shot while 'Star Wars' was in production," said Fred Silverman, president of ABC Entertainment.

The one-hour special, being produced by 20th Century-Fox, will be seen on ABC at 8 p.m. EDT Friday, Sept. 16.

Gossett will star

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lou Gossett will play a Southern black sheriff elected during the height of the civil rights movement in an NBC movie.

The movie, "Lawman Without a Gun," will also be a pilot for a possible series starring Gossett, who is the villain in "The Deep" and was Fiddler in "Roots."

The movie, to be filmed in Kentucky, is based on the life of Thomas E. Gilmore, who in the 1960s was the first black elected a sheriff in the South.

Eisenhower Library attracting scholars, researchers, writers

By HENRY B. JAMESON
Abilene Reflector-Chronicle

ABILENE, Kan. (AP) — So many scholars, researchers, writers and other visitors come here to tap the rich resources of the Eisenhower Library that people are beginning to refer to it as an international shopping center for historians and archivists.

The library is only one part of the mammoth Eisenhower Center complex that is a major Midwest tourist attraction, but the serious business of research is booming behind the scenes.

More and more foreigners are joining those who become part-time residents to make use of the collection of materials unfolding on the historic Eisenhower era.

This was an eventful period covering more than 20 years. It recorded many sensations and firsts in military, social and domestic fields — from battlefield victories, truce in Korea, development of the hydrogen bomb and space age to sweeping new civil rights legislation, admission of Alaska and Hawaii to statehood, opening of the St. Lawrence Seaway and stronger labor laws.

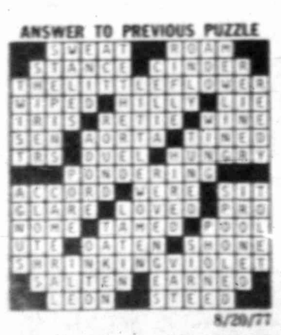

Even the Eisenhower Foundation Newsletter, issued as a quarterly overview of activities, refers to visitors from abroad as the increasing "international clientele."

Local citizens have become so accustomed to strangers they hardly turn heads any more.

"I come from the very heart of America," Eisenhower said in his Guildhall address in London immediately after the Allied victory in Europe. He envisioned the people-to-people approach for getting along between nations.

While the largest number of researchers are Americans, they have also come from at least 10 foreign countries, including Russia, in the past [illegible] of years. India leads the list [illegible]bers with seven on one [illegible]asions, according to John Wickman, director. Others have come from Australia, England, Sweden, Germany, Japan, Holland, Switzerland, France and Thailand.

Sour gas well problem now research subject

COLLEGE STATION — The nation's search for energy is pushing drillers deeper and deeper into the earth where they run into a dangerous foe called the "sour gas well."

Exxon Corp. and Texas A&M University's Nuclear Science Center are joining forces on this problem which plagues the oil fields of Texas, Florida, Alabama and Mississippi.

These wells come in at 16,000 to 17,000 feet, with a combination of high temperatures, pressure and acid levels which can cause failure of steel tubing by erosion in a relatively short time.

"Once these pipes fail, it takes about $5 million to fish the old pipe out and replace it," explained Dr. John Randall, head of the center, and a principal investigator on the project.

"Chemicals can be pumped into a well to inhibit the corrosion, but up until now it has been a blind operation," he pointed out. "So the idea is to develop a monitoring system that allows you to 'see' what is happening in the well. This would result in the savings of considerable energy dollars which could be passed on to the consumer."

"The solution that we at Texas A&M have proposed is the incorporation of non-radioactive trace material into the tubing in the well," he said.

"These samples can be subjected to irradiation at the Nuclear Science Center to compute the amount of corrosion by the amount of trace minerals coming up the well. More trace material means more corrosion," Randall said.

There are other added advantages in that this technique provides a greater sensitivity than other methods, is safe to handle, offers no disposal problems and can be installed by untrained personnel.

"The tubing, with trace elements, has been fabricated and will go into test wells soon," Randall noted. "If the method is successfully developed, it is expected to be widely applied."

Exxon has funded the project for $75,000.

Hemphill gets strike

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — Apache Corp. and Natomas Co. have announced jointly the completion of a natural gas discovery in western Hemphill County, Tex., 90 miles northeast of Amarillo.

No. 1 J. R. Campbell in section 11, block 1, I&GNRR survey, flowed at the rate of 4.3 million cubic feet of gas per day on a production test through a 19-64-inch choke.

Apache and its 1977-II Oil and gas program hold a 23.4 per cent working interest in the well. Natomas, through its recent acquisition of Apexco, Inc., holds a 14.1 per cent working interest. Hoover and Bracken Energies, Inc., operator of the well, holds the remaining 62.5 per cent working interest.

A two-hour drillstem test in the Morrow sand from 10,906-11,000 feet, surfaced gas in three minutes on a ⅜-inch choke, flowing at the rate of 3 million cubic feet per day. Recovery from the drillpipe was 2,654 feet of salt water. Drillsite test yields gas

Southland Royalty Co., operating out of Midland, No. 1 Featherstone-State, scheduled as an undesignated Morrow test in Eddy County, had gas to the surface in three minutes at the rate of three million cubic feet per day on a drillstem test from 10,906-11,000 feet.

The two hour test, taken in the Morrow sand formation, recovered 2,654 feet of salt water.

Southland is preparing to run casing and attempt completion in that zone.

Located 2¾ miles west of Morrow production in the Winchester, North field, it is 1,980 feet from north and east lines of section 20-19s-28e, 16 miles northeast of Carlsbad.

Winkler pool zone opened

A pay opener finaled in a Winkler County field and a Reeves gas area gained a new well.

Monsanto Co., operating from Midland, has completed its No. 1-21-26 University as a Brushy Canyon oil pay opener in the Apollo field of Southwest Winkler County.

It gauged a 24-hour pumping potential of 65 barrels of oil, no water, with gravity and gas-oil ratio unreported.

Completion was effected through perforations at 8,200-8,275 feet, which had been acidized with 6,000 gallons and fractured with 24,000 gallons, and unreported amount of sand.

Drilled to 15,340 feet, it was a failure in the Ellenburger. Operator set 10¾-inch casing at 11,437 feet, and the hole was plugged back to 9,000 feet.

It spots 1,320 feet from north and 1,420 feet from east lines of section 36, block 21, ULS, three miles south of Wink.

Enserch Exploration, Inc., Midland, No. 1-X-24 ARCO-State has been completed as a new producer in the Reeves, North (3,200) gas field of Reeves County, nine miles south of Orla.

It flowed a calculated, absolute open gauge of 523,100 cubic feet of dry gas per day, through perforations at 3,150-3,161 feet. It had been acidized with 100 gallons and fractured with 2,500 gallons and 8,500 pounds.

Location is 1,260 feet from south and 660 feet from west lines of section 24, block 57, T-3-S, T&P survey.

HOUSTON — Transco Exploration Co., operator for a seven-company group, has announced a 24-well, self-contained drilling and production platform has been ordered for Vermilion Block 310.

The platform will be placed in 200 feet of water about 90 miles offshore Louisiana.

A second platform also is expected to be ordered later this year to fully develop this 5,000-acre block.

Six exploratory tests have been drilled on the block and drilling operations are continuing, Allen R. Stern, Transco president, said. The wells have found from 15 to 175 feet of gas-bearing sands between 2,200 and 8,900 feet.

Vermilion Block 310 was acquired for a bonus bid of $34.2 million at the November 1976 federal lease sale.

Interest in the block is owned by Transco, 38.4 per cent; Freeport Oil Co., 25 per cent; Pioneer Production Corp., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Pioneer Corp., 10 per cent; Energy Development Corp., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Public Service Electric Co., 8.3 per cent; The Continental Group, Inc., 8.3 per cent; McMoRan Exploration Co., 5 per cent, and Mesa Petroleum Co., 5 per cent.

DEAR ABBY

Reader gives new explanation about chicks, their egg teeth

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Someone asked if chickens had teeth, and you said they didn't.

Essentially you were correct, but if you want to get technical, every chicken is born with a single tooth. It's called an "egg tooth," and is located on the end of the upper beak. This egg tooth is the means by which a chick breaks the eggshell to gain entrance into the world. The tooth falls off a couple of days after hatching.—HENRY HAHN

DEAR HENRY: You certainly laid a new one on me with that story about the egg tooth. Sure it's not a yolk?

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I went to a restaurant with my best friend and her husband, who I'll call "Al." The bill came to $55, and the men paid the bill with $60.

The waiter didn't return with the change, so Al called him back and asked for the change. The waiter looked puzzled, but he gave him the change and a dirty look.

Well, this couple asked us to go on a vacation with them, and we said we'd go, but that was before we knew that Al didn't believe in tipping. (He says as a matter of principle he refuses to pay somebody else's help.)

We'd really like to vacation with them because we enjoy their company, but my husband isn't sure he can put up with the embarrassment of being with a guy who refuses to tip.

Answer soon because we don't know what to do.—STUMPED

DEAR STUMPED: If you enjoy their company, go! Your husband can tip for HIS share of the check while Al sticks to his principles.

DEAR ABBY: This is for the bride-to-be who wanted her real father, instead of her stepfather, to give her away, even though she said that her real father had disappeared during the most important years of her life, and her stepfather had been more like a "real" father to her.

I had that decision to make a few years ago, and the circumstances were identical. My parents were divorced when I was 2 years old. (My father left my mother for another woman.) I figured that my real father had already "given me away" once, so when it came time for me to marry, I chose my stepfather to give me away. I have never regretted it.—NO REGRETS

Early Roman housewife used dressing on salads

MARIE BIANCO
Newsday

The history of the leafy green salad is ancient as the Roman Empire. Derived from the Latin "salata," meaning salted, the Roman housewife dressed her wild greens with oil, vinegar and a liberal dose of salt.

By the time of Queen Elizabeth's reign in the 16th century, Britons had accepted the salad as something healthful. Consequently, greens appeared at almost every meal, sometimes doubling as the centerpiece.

In 1699, John Evelyn published his discourse on salads and proposed the unorthodox theory that some vegetables should never be cooked but, rather, eaten raw dressed with "acetuous juice." To Evelyn, salad ingredients should "fall into their places like the notes in music, in which there should be nothing harsh or grating."

Today's salad combinations are endless. A simple salad, a combination of two or more greens tossed with a vinaigrette (oil and vinegar) dressing, may be rendered more complex by adding tomatoes, cucumber, green pepper, carrot and red onion. A more exotic arugula and endive mixture, tart and peppery, can stand by itself as a separate course. And a salad of tender, young fresh spinach, combined with sliced raw mushrooms, hard-cooked egg and chunks of crispy bacon is gaining in popularity. Served as an appetizer, along with the entree and dessert, salads are versatile. But it's the preparation of the greens that makes the difference between "rabbit food" and an appealing dish.

Tossed salads should be put together with a light hand, using ingredients that are crisp, clean and colorful. Greens should be purchased as fresh as possible and chosen for a variety of colors, flavors and shapes. Leaves should be carefully torn, rather than cut with a knife, and never coated with dressing until just minutes before serving.

Store clean salad greens in the refrigerator in a covered container. Remove any wilted leaves, wash thoroughly and pat dry with a soft paper towel. A salad spinner dries delicate leaves without damaging them and is quick, easy and neat. The greens must be dry, so that the dressing will not be diluted and each leaf can be coated evenly with oil.

Arugula is a member of the mustard family, and its young tender leaves have a prickly flavor resembling horseradish.

Crisphead, or, as it is more commonly known, iceberg lettuce, is the most important commercial variety available today and the largest selling.

Bibb lettuce is one of the butterhead variety with soft, pliable leaves and a buttery flavor.

Painters to hear Midlander

ODESSA — Sandy Jenkins of Midland will be guest speaker and instructor at the next meeting of the Sage Brushes, West Texas Chapter of the National Society of Tole and Decorative Painters.

She will demonstrate the art of fabric painting.

Mrs. Jenkins, who has studied painting for seven years, is an instructor at a local craft shop. Jo Sonja Jansen of California was her primary fabric painting instructor.

The group will meet at 7:30 p.m. today in the UTPB Laboratory Building, Room 483. On the agenda are discussions of standing committees, a member and guest auction, a local art sale, National Tole Week and a paint-in with Lougene Baird of Denver. Guests are welcome.

Before I lost 20 pounds my husband couldn't believe my thighs. Now he can't believe his eyes.

Judy Boyum's True Story:
My husband never said, "You look fat." But he must have thought it.

See where my weight problem was twenty pounds ago.

Three years ago, my weight had reached 130, and on my 5'3" build that was just too much, since most of the pounds seemed to be between my waist and my knees.

It wasn't as if I hadn't ever dieted or exercised. I'd been going to a spa for a long time...and yet, the big change I wanted hadn't happened.

Then a friend began going to Pat Walkers. She told me about her treatments on the passive exercise unit, and how she didn't have to undress or muss her hair. When she started losing weight, I decided to give Pat Walker's a try.

I became a believer so fast. Within a month I'd lost eight pounds! Suddenly I had such energy, and I was feeling much happier with myself.

Over the next several months I went from a size 12 to a size 5. That summer, for the first time in my life, I wore a bikini.

I've been able to maintain my figure from that day two years ago to this. Now, as manager and buyer for a gift shop in Houston, I have the confidence I need to do my job well.

My husband thinks I look super. And you know what? No matter what your age, if you're as heavy as I once was, I'll bet your husband would like to see you happier, too. Maybe he'd give you a Pat Walker's program for Easter!

Go ahead. Call for your free figure analysis and sample treatment, and tell your husband all about it. This Fall could be as special for you as it will be for me—you may be starting a new way of life.

Canal treaties fight begun by conservatives

By WARREN BROWN
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Conservatives began a major letter-writing and advertising campaign Sunday designed to block congressional approval of the administration's new Panama Canal treaties.

The campaign began on a day when Sens. Strom Thurmond (R-S.C.) and Jesse A. Helms (R-N.C.), who last week visited the Panama Canal Zone, went on national television to denounce the treaty proposals as harmful to American economic and defense interests and as a capitulation to "blackmail."

Helms, who appeared on "Meet the Press" (NBC) with Thurmond, also promised there would be a Senate filibuster against ratification of the treaties. "You can count on it," he said.

Carter administration strategists believe they now have about 50 of the 67 votes needed in the Senate to ratify the treaties, but that they will have to go through a gruelling national debate to win the other 17.

Even if the administration is correct in its present count of pro-treaty Senate votes, there is little likelihood the treaties could be ratified this year.

It is considered doubtful that the matter can come to the Senate floor before Congress' scheduled October adjournment. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee must first approve the proposals.

Sen. John Sparkman (D-Ala.), the committee chairman, reportedly is "open-minded" about the treaties. But groups like the American Conservative Union, which launched its newspaper advertising campaign Sunday, are hoping to win over Sparkman.

"In our ad campaigns, we are concentrating on the South," said ACU spokesman Fran Griffin. "As far as the treaties go, if the southern Democrats remain with us on this issue, we could defeat it in the Senate," she said.

Griffin said her organization plans to spend $50,000 this week on newspaper advertisements, mostly in southern states.

Money to pay for the ads came from an ACU letter appeal conducted in May, she said. She said nearly all of those funds would be spent this week, but that the ACU is counting on the ads to generate more funds.

ACU ads appearing Sunday in newspapers in Jackson, Miss., bannered the conservative position on the Panama Canal issue:

"There is no Panama Canal. There is an American Canal at Panama. Don't let President Carter give it away," the ad said.

The ad warned that America's international image would be hurt if it went through with the agreements, which would grant Panama control over the Panama Canal and the Canal Zone by the year 2000 but also would give the United States the right to defend the waterway indefinitely.

The ad also appealed to citizens to pressure their senators — through telephone calls and letters — to vote against ratification.

Griffin said the ACU advertising effort "is sort of an exploratory campaign" that may be scrapped, modified or expanded, depending on the results. But she said her organization is optimistic that this time "the conservatives are on the right side ...(because) polls show a majority of the people agree with us."

The direct-mail campaign against the treaties is expected to increase under the guidance of Richard Viguerie of Falls Church, Va., who has used the mails to raise millions of dollars for conservative causes.

Both Griffin and Viguerie said they have sought and are receiving "some support" from labor union officials in the effort to defeat ratification of the treaties.

Thurmond, who also serves as chairman of ACU's Panama Canal Task Force, said Sunday the fight against the treaties is necessary, because the canal is "American property," and "I don't see how we can let American property — or the rights of Americans — go down the drain."

"Would you go to war to keep it?," Thurmond was asked in the TV interview.

"I think we cannot afford to let other people take our property, and I think we'd have to take whatever reasonable steps are necessary to protect the property of the people of this country," Thurmond said.

Big business may back President on Canal

By JOHN M. GOSHKO
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — In the impending battle over his Panama Canal treaties, President Carter seems likely to have some powerful allies often found on the conservative side of the political barricades — the leadership of America's big business and financial communities.

It's still too early to say precisely how the battle lines will be drawn. But there are clear signs that, in this campaign many of those who guide the big multinational banks and corporations will be marching in a different column than the Ronald Reagans, Strom Thurmonds and other political conservatives seeking to derail the treaties in Congress.

That's the case even though, as a Washington lobbyist notes, "probably half of these guys or better are hard-core conservatives who normally would like nothing better than to see Reagan as President and Thurmond as Secretary of Defense."

On the canal issue, however, the attitudes of the multinational corporate managers seem to be shaped less by ideological preferences than by concern about what rejection of the treaties — and possible subsequent Latin American political reaction — might mean for their sizable trade and investment stakes in Latin America.

Private U.S. investment in Latin America is estimated at $24 billion, and is approximately two-thirds of the total U.S. investment in all developing nations. There is also a two-way U.S.-Latin American trade that amounted to $34 billion in 1976. Last year the United States sent $16.9 billion in exports to Latin America and had imports from the region of $17.1 billion, 40 per cent of it in oil and petroleum products.

That's a factor that so far has been largely overlooked in all the high-decibel debate about whether the United States should hang onto the canal because it's vital to the national defense or because it's a status symbol whose loss would play havoc with the national psyche.

The economic considerations bound up with the treaties are certain to play a big role in the battle over their approval or rejection. What's more, these economic factors could produce some startling surprises about where different interest groups line up in the battle.

There is the strong likelihood that the normally conservative, Republican-leaning business establishment will be solidly on the side of a Democratic President. But there's also a chance that the powerful American labor movement, usually a bulwark of Democratic support, could end up fighting alongside the President's foes to defeat the treaties.

Where the business community is concerned, Carter administration strategists contend, the case for supporting the treaties seems ironclad. In fact, the administration privately is counting on big business to provide some potentially crucial help in getting the treaties past the hurdle of Senate ratification.

It's the administration's hope that the big corporations will unleash their powerful lobbying machinery to make clear to their congressional allies that they want the treaties approved. Such a signal, administration sources say, could provide many Republican and conservative Democratic legislators with an escape hatch to retreat from the opposition and vote for ratification.

Whether the business community will be willing to twist arms on behalf of the administration is still far from clear. But, business sources say, a lot of worried thought is being devoted in corporate board-rooms to the adverse consequences that rejection of the treaties could have for U.S. business interests in Latin America.

Because they earn a great deal of money from the Latin countries, American firms doing business there have frequently been targets of nationalistic attacks and threats of expropriation. For that reason, banks, oil and mining companies, manufacturers and trading concerns with sizable Latin American interests all are eager to avoid situations that might stir new waves of anti-Americanism.

These companies also are keenly aware that the most sensitive issue in U.S.-Latin American relations is the demand, backed by every country of the region, that sovereignty over the canal be transferred to Panama.

Should the United States reject that demand,t he multinationals fear a reaction of disappointment and anger that would not be confined just to Panama, where several U.S. banks and trading companies have sizable operations.

Instead, the expectation is that the backlash would spread from one end of Latin America to the other and touch off terrorist attacks, boycotts and expropriation pressures against U.S.-owned interests.

For that reason, business community sources say, the clear feeling in big-business circles is that peaceful resolution of the canal issue will remove the biggest single potential for U.S.-Latin American tension and make life considerably easier for U.S. companies in the area.

Now, the sources add, the business community has to balance its obvious desire to dispose of the canal issue against other considerations — whether supporting the treaties will incur the wrath of domestic conservatives and subject them to problems with anti-treaty customers and stockholders at home.

For the moment there's a breathing space, since the details of the treaties are still secret. No prominent corporate leader is going to rush to their support until he's had a chance to read the fine print.

The Council of the Americas, a nonprofit business association is dedicated to "understanding and acceptance of the role of private enterprise" in the hemisphere. The council's membership is a virtual Who's Who of every major U.S. firm doing business in Latin America.

Attorney says Hearst guiltier

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The Texas lawyer for convicted Nazi war criminal Rudolph Hess says Patty Hearst is more guilty of crimes against peace than his client is.

Merrell Frazer Jr. of Austin said he was hired by the Hess family in 1975 after he developed a friendship with another survivor of Adolf Hitler's hierarchy, former armaments and productions minister and convicted war criminal Albert Speer.

Hess is now 83 and is the only prisoner in West Berlin's Spandau Prison, where 250 guards keep watch over him. He was sentenced to life imprisonment during the post-war Nuremberg war trials.

"Rudolph Hess is now going on 84," Frazer said. "He has been in ill health for much of the past decade. He is suffering from mental and physical disorders. He has long since paid any price put on one for merely being a member of the German population."

Frazer has never seen his client.

His only connection with Hess has been through the old man's family. He has made two trips to Germany and plans a third next month.

The 42-year-old Frazer has carried Hess' case to three American presidents, two secretaries of state, the Queen of England, the president of France and the ruler of the Soviet Union.

Frazer said it took him four months of wading through red tape to deliver a Bible to Hess, along with a book written by an Austin minister.

"He tried to commit suicide three times," Frazer said of Hess.

Man hijacks jetliner, then gives himself up

DENVER (AP) — Passengers on Western Airlines Flight 550 to Denver first learned something was amiss when pilot Dave Bender announced: "We're passing Las Vegas and we have a passenger who would like to get off in Salt Lake."

Actually, the man who burst into the cockpit 10 minutes after takeoff from San Diego on Saturday had given Capt. Bender a choice of destinations — Mexico, Kansas City and Milwaukee in addition to Salt Lake.

"My first thought was, this can't be happening to me," said Bender, who had never been hijacked in 22 years of professional flying.

"He told us it was a hijack, that he had a bomb and we were going to Salt Lake. He told us he'd blow us all up," Bender said in an interview Sunday.

"I asked him to let us continue on to Denver, but he said again Salt Lake. Then he mentioned a couple of other places he had in mind — Mexico, Kansas City, Milwaukee. I told him Mexico would be the last place he would want to be, so we went to Salt Lake.

"He didn't seem to be very rational. He told us not to turn around, to look straight ahead," said Bender, one of the seven crewmembers on board, who added that his main concern was to just "get the plane on the ground."

When the Boeing 707 landed safely in Salt Lake City, Jerry Richard Mills, a 36-year-old plant manager from Escondido, Calif., was arrested after he surrendered to FBI agents and police on the runway, authorities said. No one was hurt and no explosives were found.

Mills was to be arraigned today on a federal charge of air piracy before a U.S. magistrate in Denver.

Bender said the hijacker did not appear to be intoxicated, although he appeared "glassy-eyed" after he was arrested.

It was the first hijacking of a domestic, in-flight plane since Croatian nationalists took a New York-to-Chicago jet on Sept. 10, 1976.

The flight, which originated in Honolulu, landed in Denver Sunday morning with all but four of the original 24 passengers aboard. In addition to Mills, two newlyweds and an elderly woman had gotten off in Salt Lake City.

Brian Chaffey, general manager of Roberts Irrigation Co., where Mills worked said Mills had been "very dedicated, a good manager, and he worked long hours. Everybody respected him, but I don't think too many people knew much about him."

Mills, a bachelor, shared an apartment with his brother Michael, 19, who said Jerry was quiet, "a very straight person" who had only recently been "acting strange."

Police to take lie detector test

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (AP) — Twenty-three Alice police officers, led by Chief Juan Rodriguez, were to take lie detector tests in Texas city.

Corpus Christi today as part of an investigation into the police department and drug traffic through their South

Rodriguez said he will be first in line for the tests, to be administered by Texas Department of Public Safety officers. He said he and his men volunteered to take the tests.

Action by Alice Mayor Ren Reid sparked the probe. Reid requested the investigation from the Jim Wells County grand jury July 15, and has also asked Texas Atty. Gen. John Hill for help.

Reid said Rodriguez is dedicated and honest, but is a poor administrator.

"That's his view," Rodriguez said. "It's easy to question the police administrator, especially when you have a crime problem."

The grand jury requested a state agency to aid in the investigation, and Rodriguez said Texas Ranger Gene Powell was placed in charge of the investigation.

The investigation centers around marijuana traffic through Alice.

NOTICE TO PARENTS OF ELEMENTARY PUPILS

The majority to minority pupil transfer policy provision is an important part of the desegregation plan of Midland elementary schools. This transfer policy allows eligible young children to attend the same school as older brothers and sisters in grades 4, 5, and 6. The majority to minority transfer policy states:

A primary level pupil (grades 1, 2, or 3) may transfer from a school in which the pupil's race or ethnic background is the majority to another school in the assigned elementary school cluster, serving the residence, in which the pupil's race is the minority. Transportation is provided by regularly scheduled bus routes which transport intermediate level pupils (grades 4, 5, and 6) within the elementary cluster.

Pupils in grades 1, 2, and 3 may transfer to another school in the elementary cluster when their race or ethnic background is a majority in the home school. Also, the race or ethnic background must be in a minority in the receiving school. Transportation is provided by regularly scheduled bus routes within the elementary cluster.

You may receive more information by contacting the principal of any elementary school. Application forms are available from any elementary school principal or may be obtained at the central administration office at 702 North "N" Street.

'Inferno' section opened

PARIS (AP) — After almost two centuries of trying to keep the Marquis de Sade and other authors from tainting public morality, the French National Library has extinguished its "Inferno" section and is allowing anyone with a library card to taste its once-forbidden fruits.

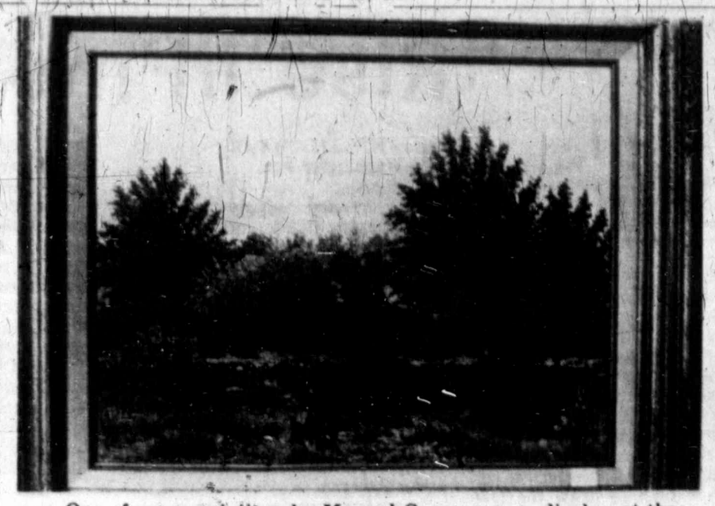

But there has been no rush to peruse the 2,000 largely erotic books. No new entries have been made since 1960 and most of the old ones are so tame by today's standards they would deserve no more than a "Purgatory" rating. Many have been sold for years in bookstores or have been made into films.

The change took place quietly at the beginning of the summer after a committee of readers convinced the library's general administrator, Georges le Rider, that the Inferno section, dating from the beginning of the 19th century, was outmoded.

Big libraries all over France have sections labeled "L'Enfer," which is French for inferno or hell and derives from the Biblical concept of the netherworld as a place where the damned are banished.

Until this summer, any of the 15,000 regular cardholders wanting access to the "books of hell" had to get special authorization from the library or prove that there literary or scientific research could be pursued only by going to the shelves of the Inferno.

Each book carried a sticker warning, "Not To Be Communicated," the same badge of shame worn by hundreds of books during the Nazi occupation of France.

One of many paintings by Manuel Garza now on display at the Lone Star Gallery, 400 W. Texas in Midland. Garza's paintings have instant rapport with those who know and love the Texas landscape as he does.

Manuel Garza work at Lone Star Gallery

The Lone Star Gallery, 400 W. Texas, has received Texas landscapes in oil by Manuel Garza, a young Austin artist of growing renown.

His skilled ability with art media afford him the opportunity to create, for the enjoyment of others, Texas landscapes for which he has very strong and deep love and feelings.

His paintings have instant rapport with those who know and love the Texas landscape as he does. It is not unusual that paintings of the quality of Garza's are in such demand by discerning art connoisseurs.

Garza has successfully achieved his goal of recreating the Texas scenery to perfection. He has captured in oil the effective rendering of thick heat, bold brightness and cool shade...conveying the feeling of experienced reality.

Garza feels strongly that it is equally important to remain constantly in intimate contact with his favorite subject, the land itself. He spends a great deal of time exploring and storing feelings and impressions of the natural beauty he perceives.

Speech matter of inheritance

Agence France-Presse

LEEDS, England — If you are not born into the British aristocracy, you will never learn to speak the way they do.

That is the conclusion of a British linguistics specialist, Dr. Arnold Spector, who says the aristrocracy uses its abdomen and back muscles to get the particular vocal twang it does.

Dr. Spector told an international conference on the teaching of spoken English that only the Koreans are able to get anywhere near the same sound.

No need to hurry with ace of trumps

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Empires may crumble, the best investments in the world may go sour, but the ace of trumps is a value you can depend on. There's no need to be hasty in taking a trick with it: the ace of trumps will be just as good at the 13th trick as at the first.

Declarer took the ace of hearts, returned a trump from dummy and played the king from his hand. West won with the ace of trumps, and there went the defense.

South ruffed the heart return, cashed the ace of diamonds and ruffed a diamond in dummy. He returned to his hand with a trump and cashed the king of diamonds to test the suit.

The diamonds broke badly, but east couldn't ruff. South could ruff another diamond in dummy and return to his hand with a club to draw the last trump. South's hand was then good.

SHOULD HOLD OFF

West should hold off the first round of trumps. If South leads a second trump, West can win and lead a third trump immediately. This limits declarer to one diamond ruff in dummy, and the suit needs two ruffs to become established.

If South doesn't lead a second trump, East will overruff dummy on the third round of diamonds. Declarer has to draw exactly two rounds of trumps to make the slam; and the defenders have to let him draw one trump or three trumps but not two.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one spade, and the next player passes. You hold: S-7654; H-A8643; D-2; C-KQ10. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two hearts. The hand is too strong for a raise to two spades, but not strong enough for a jump to three spades. Bid your side suit and raise spades later to show the in-between strength.

Rise in money supply questioned

The Washington Post

The money supply has been misbehaving again.

For the second time in the last four months, the money supply has skyrocketed, for reasons that are not totally clear, and the Federal Reserve is trying to put the clamps back on.

When the central bank tightens up on monetary policy, short-term interest rates rise. Short-term rates climbed nearly three-quarters of a percentage point when the Fed put the squeeze on last spring, and they have risen a similar amount over the last several weeks.

In response to rising interest rates, major banks Friday announced that they would boost from 6.75 to 7 per cent the prime rate they charge their best corporate customers for a short-term loan. In recent years, banks have tied their prime rates to so-called market rates — such as the interest paid on Treasury bills and commercial paper — that are determined by demand and supply factors.

While economists differ on how important the growth of money supply is to overall economic behavior — including economic expansion and inflation — in recent years nearly all analysts have agreed that policymakers must be concerned with changes in the money supply. The Federal Reserve Board, the nation's central bank, has been entrusted by Congress to try to influence the rate of growth of money. It does so primarily by buying and selling government securities in the open market to inject or withdraw funds from the banking system.

As the Fed has tightened money policy in recent weeks — primarily by not supplying reserves to the system and by allowing the so-called federal funds rate to rise — other short-term interest rates have risen as well.

Minutes of the latest Federal Reserve Board open market committee meeting released Friday demonstrated that the nation's money managers were concerned that growth of the money supply is getting out of hand.

At the regular monthly meeting July 19, the 12-member open market committee decided that the money supply should grow within a 3.5 to 7.5 per cent range in July and August. By Aug. 4, according to the minutes, it had become apparent that the money supply had exploded and had grown at an annual rate of about 18.5 per cent in July. As a result, Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur F. Burns cabled members of the committee, who agreed with him, that monetary policy should be made more stringent to get the growth of the money supply back under control.

Despite the concern at the Fed that the money supply — narrowly defined as checking accounts and currency in circulation, and more broadly defined to include savings deposits at commercial banks — is growing too fast, opinions about what happened in July vary.

"We're at the Rubicon," according to Robert Weintraub, staff director of the House subcommittee on domestic monetary policy. "If the Fed doesn't take the bull by the horns and get money growth back within its target, the 1974-75 recession was all in vain. We'll be off on another inflationary toot that will end in recession or accelerating inflation."

But Leon Gould, an economist for Commercial Credit Corp., is less concerned about the apparent July spurt in the money supply. He thinks the big July jump does not indicate that money growth is slipping from the Fed's grasp but attributes the rise to technical seasonal adjustment factors. He says that other economic indicators, such as slowing economic growth, just do not correlate with a sharply expanding money supply.

Gould said that most of the spurt can be attributed to the central bank's inabiility to seasonally adjust the money supply to account for the early payment of Social Security benefits in July and the impact of the New York blackout that made transfer of checks difficult and exaggerated the size of bank deposits for a day.

The Federal Reserve itself has acknowledged that technical factors complicate the analysis of what has been happening to the money supply. But most members of the board of governors think that the technical factors explain only a small portion of the July jump, although they have no ready explanation for the sudden jump in the money supply.

Had it failed to react to the July growth, as some economists have urged, the Federal Reserve feels it would have lost credibility in its fight to keep money growth within a range that is consistent with keeping the economy growing but with reducing prices.

Indeed, Jerry L. Jordan, chief economist for Pittsburgh National Bank, thinks that the Fed has not reacted aggressively enough, that its open market policiecs have provided the "foundation for excessive money growth." Jordan, like many other monetarist economists, thinks that the growth of the money supply cannot be controlled by focusing on interest rates.

Short term interest rates, including the federal funds rate, are influenced by demand for funds as well as by the Fed. So if demand for funds is rising, the Federal Reserve, by watching the federal funds rate, may think it is being restrictive when it is not.

The federal funds rate is the interest banks charge each other for overnight loans of excess reserves. The Fed tries to determine what rate is consistent with the money growth it wants to achieve and then runs its open market operations with a view to maintaining its target rate.

Jordan says that "as much as they've raised the fed funds rate" over the last four months, Fed officials have not been as stringent as they thought they were being. The federal funds rate has risen from around 4.5 per cent last March to 7 per cent today.

Jordan also said that until the central bank raises the discount rate — the interest it charges member banks to borrow from it — the market will not believe the central bank is as serious about holding down money growth as it claims to be. The discount rate is 5.25 per cent and could be raised to 5.75 per cent and still be below other market rates.

When the Fed tightened up last spring, the Fed got a blast from the administrastion as well as from many congressmen. Administration spokesmen argued that raising interest rates was not a good way to fight inflation.

But the Fed has not received the same criticism this time and is not likely to. Office of Management and Budget Director Bert Lance was the prime architect of the administration's critique of the Fed last May. Lance's personal financial matters have been occupying more of his time in recent weeks.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A major motion picture sequel to "Roots" is being planned, set in the post-Civil War era in Henning, Tenn.

Academy Award-winning writer Edward Anhalt will do the screenplay, which will be based on material from Alex Haley's book and from additional material Haley is writing. Called "Roots: The Next Generation," it will continue the story from the television series of Chicken George and his son, Tom.

The main story revolves around Tom, a freed slave, and an aristocratic white landowner, set against the turmoil of Reconstruction.

After the theatrical release ABC will air another television continuation of the story of the Haley family.

Money supply debate neither dull, abstract

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — It sounds so cold, dull and abstract but it is really so hot and volatile, and immensely important to everyone, this debate over the money supply.

Every time the Fed attempts to expand or contract the amount of money circulating in the economy it gives rise to the argument over whether it is good or bad for jobs, incomes, the stock market and the general welfare.

And the debate seems endless, because the Fed is always watching the money stock, and always watching the rate of inflation, which it considers to be the most dangerous enemy of prosperity.

But this isn't the whole story. There is the debate also over the independence of the Fed and its chairman, Arthur F. Burns, and over its interpretation of economic events, which many a critic says has been faulty time and again.

Should the Fed be more responsive to Congress and, in theory anyway, more responsive to the American people via Congress? Or should it religiously avoid any tampering by Congress as an economic crime against the people?

Burns has attempted to keep a lofty distance between himself and the legislative body, condescending to testify each month, seeming to patronize members of the House and Senate banking committees because, well, politics is part of the job.

During these sessions he has the majesty and mystery of an oracle speaking from the mountain — lecturing, advising, admonishing — putting forth what he sees to be self-evident truths, mainly that inflation is Lucifer lurking.

The often doctrinaire posture in itself appears to goad some members of the House and Senate banking committees, who consider themselves just as concerned and qualified to deal with inflation as the unflappable, pipe-smoking Burns.

But there is a larger issue. Congressmen sometimes wonder how one man can exert such power over the economy, even to the point of opposing the President. They worry over what appear to be subjective decisions by the Fed.

There is another aspect to the debate, as there always is. Should the Fed lose its degree of independence, and instead become a vehicle for congressional or presidential policy? Would inflation then be a bigger threat?

Conceding the dangers, critics still ask: Who determines whether the Fed is interpreting events correctly? Who disciplines it for wrong decisions? Who, in fact, really knows why the Fed acts as it does?

Now that the Fed is tightening up a bit, forcing up some basic interest rates, the debate is reheating. The Fed, say the critics, has again stepped on the brakes too soon.

"The Federal Reserve Board has once again, as in mid-1975 and mid-1976, prematurely impaired the rate of economic recovery by raising the cost of credit," claims one critic, John Wright, of Wright Investors' Service.

Wright isn't alone in that criticism. Numerous informed critics have argued the Fed is too nervous about inflation, acting to slow what it feels is an overheated economy even when millions are jobless and factories are operating well below capacity.

Burns, himself, has indicated that such a mistake might have been made in the past couple of years, the consequence being to stall the recovery from recession, and prolong unemployment and underactivity.

The chairman has many, many defenders, even among those who sometimes are opposed to his decisions, and who would prefer that the Fed be more open to suggestion and more communicative in regard to its decisions.

And because he has so many defenders, as well as detractors, the debate continues very much the same as it was 10, five and two years ago — and probably will be a decade hence.

Spanish attempting reform of Franco's economic system

By STANLEY MEISLER
The Los Angeles Times

MADRID — With a good deal of its political reform finished, the Spanish government is now trying to dismantle at least part of the fascist economic system left by the late dictator Francisco Franco.

In the long run, however, economic reform may prove far more difficult than political reform, too many privileged people have too much to lose.

But the cause of the reformers is helped by the woeful state of the Spanish economy. Everyone agrees that something must be done. The reformers hope to capitalize on that sentiment.

So far, the government of King Juan Carlos and Premier Adolfo Suarez has imposed one emergency measure — devaluation of the peseta — and has applied for full membership in the European Common Market. The government also has announced a long-term program full of promises to do away with the worst of the privileges and inequities, such as tax evasion by the rich, in the system.

The devaluation, which came last July 12, illustrates what the problem is all about. Spain was faced with little choice. In 1976, it bought $7.2 billion more in imports than it sold in exports. Tourists and investors made up part of the difference but not enough. At year's end, Spain had a balance-of-payments deficit of more than $4 billion. It had to find that much foreign exchange to cover the workings of its economy.

The situation this year was just as bad. Industrialists clamored for a devaluation, insisting that they could not export to other countries because the prices of Spanish goods were too high. But the government, intent on winning the June 15 elections, was in no mood to fool with the economy. As a result, the Bank of Spain wasted almost $2 billion in foreign exchange this year propping up the peseta.

Finally, after the elections, the government devalued, lowering the value of the peseta from 69 to the dollar to 87 to the dollar, a change of 20 per cent or 25 per cent, depending on how you measure it. This means that Spanish exports now will cost less, and, in theory, Spain will now be able to sell more, diminishing the deficit in its balance of trade.

But on the same day of the devaluation, the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD), issued its annual report on the Spanish economy. While advocating a devaluation, the OECD also suggested that export sales "might be stimulated by lowering progressively and selectively the degree of protection of the economy."

The OECD, in its guarded, diplomatic way, was saying that there is a more basic reason for Spain's lack of exports than the price of the peseta — Spanish industrialists are so protected within the Spanish economic system that there is no need for them to try selling their products abroad.

The Spanish government has acknowledged this. In an economic policy statement after a cabinet meeting July 11, the government said it intended "to eliminate the bonds, interventions and unjustified protections that generate inefficiency and foment privileges." But the government did not say how it intended to do this.

The Franco economic system had so many privileges for the rich that the Financial Times, the conservative and respected British business newspaper, one "capitalism without risk."

The Franco system, largely still in place, was compounded by these privileges for capitalists:

1 — A highly protected economy, based on tariffs and quotas, that guaranteed a domestic market for Spanish manufacturers though their products were too expensive to compete with similar products of other European countries.

2 — A system under which the government through its National Institute of Industry and its government savings banks, injected capital at low interest rates into favored and long-established companies. New and smaller companies, however, had to compete for capital at high interest rates on the open market. This system favored inefficiency and penalized initiative.

3 — General avoidance of income tax by the middle and upper classes. While workers were taxed on their payroll checks, most other Spaniards did not even bother filing income tax returns. According to a study, only 2 per cent of those earning more than $15,000 paid income tax in 1971. Only 12 per cent filed a return. As a result, the government has little revenue for social security or puic works programs. In 1976, Spain devoted a smaller percentage of its gross domestic product to government expenditure than any of the 24 industrialized countries that make up the OECD.

4 — A weak labor movement. Under Franco, only government-controlled syndicates were allowed to represent the workers. This system, however, broke down in the last few years, and industrialists were encouraged to grant wage increases of 30 per cent to head off worker agitation. The Suarez government also legalized trade unions earlier this year.

This system worked as long as Spain was transforming itself from an agricultural to an industrial country, oil was cheap, Western Europe was prosperous and the poor had no way of protesting. But now Spain is an industrial country, oil is expensive, Europe is in recession and the poor can vote.

The economic problems are obvious. Aside from the large imbalance in trade and in its foreign accounts, Spain has an inflation rate of around 27 per cent, a growth rate of less than 2 per cent and unemployment of 800,000, 6 per cent of the work force. These problems cannot be ignored by the government, especially as it prepares for municipal elections either late this year or early in 1978.

To deal with these problems, King Juan Carlos and Premier Suarez have named 52-year-old Enrique Fuentes Quintana as vice premier in charge of the economy.

War against cancer won battle-by-battle

By BOB CORBETT
Copley News Service

Medical researchers are winning the war against cancer, but it's a bitter step-by-step, battle-by-battle campaign.

That's because there is no such single thing as cancer, according to Dr. Joseph H. Burchenal, director of clinical investigations for the Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York.

Cancer, he said in an interview, is actually more than 100 different diseases, each requiring its own specific cure, much like each bacterial infection needs its own antibiotic fix.

The biggest thing that has happened in the last decade, he said, is that medical researchers from a variety of fields have finally realized the complexity of the various cancers and are now working together in a multiple-disciplinary approach.

This approach, called "adjuvant therapy," has already scored an impressive series of victories, Burchenal said, and is now ready to take on "the big killers" of the cancer scene — breast cancer, colon cancer and lung cancer.

Back in the 1950s, Burchenal said, there was really very little doctors could do for cancer patients except to make them feel a little better for a short time. The idea of actually "curing" the disease wasn't even thought about.

Then, he said, researchers at the National Cancer Institute found that by using a drug called methotrexate in conjunction with surgery they could cure about 50 per cent of patients with choriocarcinoma of the uterus, which had been a fast-spreading and usually fatal disease.

Suddenly, Burchenal said, the idea of actually "curing" a cancer became a reality.

Since that time, he said, the combination of surgery, drugs and radiation has chalked up a series of successes.

Burkitt's lymphoma, a disease that afflicts children in Africa, yielded to a combination of methotrexate and cytoxan. Hodgkin's disease bowed to four drugs — mustard, oncovin, procarbozine and prednisone.

What once had been a "hopeless disease" achieved a record in which 50 per cent of its victims were free of disease after 10 years, Burchenal said.

Similar stories hold true, he said, for acute lymphoblastic leukemia, Wilm's tumor and osteogenic sarcomas.

Now, he said, the same coordinated approaches are being directed toward the worst, most recalcitrant of the cancers and with some success.

Burchenal pointed out progress in the area of breast cancer where researchers have found that a combination of drugs — cytoxan, methotrexate and fluorouracil — in conjunction with surgery are dramatically improving the chances of victims of this disease.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I heard recently that you can get Do-it-Yourself Pap test kits, and I thought maybe this was a good idea. Does it work as well as the regular test that the doctor does? — Libby R.

Dear Libby: Let's put it this way: Do-it-Yourself Pap tests are certainly better than none at all. But it is much better to have a regular Pap test at the doctor's once a year.

There is, incientally, a new experimental device that may allow women to collect blood and cell samples for cervical cancer checks — including cells not easily obtainable with the standard Pap smear. It is like a tampon and is inserted into the vagina before going to bed at night and then removed in the morning. This procedure is repeated for two consecutive nights during the menstrual period. A small capsule inside the tampon collects blood and is then removed and mailed to the laboratory for analysis. so it is all very simple.

The device was developed by Professor Matthew Freund, chairman of Physiology at Southern Illinois University, and Dr. Alexander Sedlis, professor of obstetrics and gynecology at New York Medical College. It is now being tested. I'll let you know how it works out.

To A.S., Augusta, Ga.: I'm afraid that I have to disagree with your doctor. In general, viral diseases are not susceptible to antibiotics. It is true that, in certain viral infections, particularly those more prone to superimposition with a bacterial infectious complication. On the other hand, the indiscriminate use of antibiotics in viral infections, such as measles, without a secondary bacterial problem may be harmful.

Dissatisfaction grows in Ghana

By DAVID LAMB
The Los Angeles Times

ACCRA, Ghana — The revolutionary torch has been passed, its burden too great to bear. No one looks to Ghana any more for leadership or inspiration. Today Ghana stands alone, troubled and uncertain, the victim of dreams that once held out so much hope for Africa.

In the 20 years since becoming the first black African state to win independence, Ghana has slid steadily downhill, its national spirit crippled by the pressures of trying to be more than it was ever really capable of becoming.

Today the economy is paralyzed. The food shortage has reached crisis proportions. Per capita income is no higher than it was at independence. Inflation is more than 60 per cent a year; the local currency (the cedi) is virtually worthless. Unemployment is epidemic. Cocoa production, the backbone of a once prosperous economy, has fallen drastically because of mismanagement and neglect. Smuggling is so rampant that Ghanaians cannot buy even locally made products such as toothpaste, soap and matches. Not long ago, seven of the eight hospital operating rooms in Accra were unusable because of broken equipment.

Predictably, public dissatisfaction is growing. Attorneys, students, doctors and refinery workers have been out on strike in recent months and their message has been unmistakably clear — the military government headed by Gen. Ignatius Acheampong has overstayed its welcome.

Last month, Acheampong reluctantly relented and agreed to hold general elections in 1979. But outside of a voter-registration campaign, there are few signs that the government really intends to relinquish power. In fact, in moves that seem to challenge the spirit of a transfer, the government recently placed restrictions on Western journalists and ordered prison sentences of up to 10 years for rumormongers.

"Ghana is deceiving," a Western resident said. "On the surface everything seems so calm that you can't believe the country has such immense problems.

"You see some soldiers around but they're amiable and well-disciplined, and most don't even carry guns. The people are friendly and relaxed like only Ghanaians can be. But below the surface you're aware of a subtle tension. It's hard to believe this isn't a place just waiting for a coup to happen."

It is indicative of Ghana — and certainly to Ghana's credit — that the turmoil of recent months and the promise of a return to civilian rule have occurred without violence or undue repression. Most observers agree that Acheampong's Supreme Military Council is not particularly harsh by African standards.

Acheampong, 45, is a devout Roman Catholic and an undistinguished leader who considers himself a military man first and a politician second. His foreign policy is one of nonalignment, his domestic priorities nationalistic. There is little evidence that the military officers surrounding him have much understanding of how to run a country.

Since toppling one of the few parliamentary democracies in black Africa five years ago, Acheampong has ventured no farther than Togo and has never spent a night out of the country.

Many of his 10 million countrymen may blame him for Ghana's steady decline, but it seems more likely that much of the burden lies with his predecessors.

At independence in 1957 there was every reason to believe that Ghana had a bright future. The British had left a substantial infrastructure. The civil service was one of the most efficient in Africa. Foreign reserves stood at $481 million. The cocoa plantations were prosperous and the farmers were comparatively well-off.

The man who inherited the presidency in 1957 was Kwame Nkrumah, a charismatic figure who proclaimed himself the symbol of the new Africa. And in those early years Third World leaders traveled to Accra to pay homage to him. His vision of black consciousness was instrumental in forming independence movements throughout the continent and influenced civil rights initiatives as far away as the United States.

Nkrumah believed that black people would never escape the bondage of servitude until they ended their dependence on agriculture and moved toward a manufacturing economy based on finished products. It was, in retrospect, the first of many Nkrumah decisions that headed Ghana toward self-destruction.

Ghana's prosperity was squandered with extraordinary speed to fulfill Nkrumah's visions. More than $16 million was spent on a conference center for a single meeting, $9 million on a showpiece highway, $17 million on a drydock at Tema.

Within five years the foreign reserves were gone. Within seven the national debt had soared to more than $1 billion.

Amid the corruption and dissension that followed, Nkrumah became ruthless and suspicious. He jailed his opponents, declared himself president-for-life, reduced the parliament to a single-party rubber stamp, passed a law permitting the imprisonment of dissidents for up to five years without trial and moved closer to the Communist world.

Today the country that once offered Africa the promise of self-reliance and black identity is a backwater. But, ironically, it is not a poor country.

It has the potential of a diversified economic base. Its people are industrious and unfailingly pleasant. Its mineral wealth and agricultural potential is at least as great as that in the neighboring Ivory Coast.

Book reveals Brown's tactics

By KENNETH REICH
The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — As another gubernatorial campaign gets under way, a book has just appeared about the last one that documents how California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. intentionally obscured the issues in 1974 and contrived to limit television coverage of debates with his opponent.

The book in question is "Phantom Politics — Campaigning in California." Based on a research project sponsored by the California Journal and the Ford Foundation, it was written by Mary Ellen Leary, a widely-respected political journalist who headed up the study focused on how the news media covered the 1974 campaign.

An analysis

In this volume Leary strongly criticizes certain California television stations. She recounts how they cut back on political coverage as compared to past years and failed to bring key issues — much less the six Brown-Houston Flournoy debates — to the attention of their vast audiences.

But the most striking passages of "Phantom Politics" relate to tape-recorded remarks of Jerry Brown's campaign manager, Tom Quinn, speaking to a post-campaign forum which was part of the study.

"If there was a strategy in the campaign," Quinn confided, "it was to try to keep out of trouble and not get involved with issues like the death penalty or victimless crimes or marijuana — the things where Jerry's views didn't coincide very well with those of the general electorate.

"We didn't want those to become prime issues...We were very careful...We stayed away from those issues as much as possible, and the issues we picked were obscure and boring and dull...The press coverage never bothered us. It was as adequate as we wanted it to be. It was our feeling that the less coverage the better...The duller the race the better. We wanted this full, dull campaign. I think we succeeded." Leary remarks at one point, "A curious paradox became evident in Brown's approach to politics.

"He seemed open with the public, accessible to the media, insistent that government be responsive to under-represented interests such as the poor, the minorities and, indeed, the middle-class taxpayer. But his discussion of specific issues was usually couched in cryptic catchwords or elusive generalities...

"When the prospect of debates arose, Brown's conduct was characterized by evasion of rivals in the primary and by unprecedented limits on televising debates in (the) general election."

It was at the Brown camp's initiative that severe restrictions on television coverage were written into a July 29, 1974 agreement between Brown and Flournoy to hold six face-to-face debates. Flournoy — facing an uphill fight, much as a Republican gubernatorial nominee probably will next year — had no choice but to accept the restrictions if he wanted Brown to agree to any debates.

"The absurdity of the agreement," Leary writes, "was that the two candidates set limits on what news of the campaign broadcasters could dispense — and threatened legal action should their agreement be violated."

Interest in presidential aides not yet silenced

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — In another time, another president went to the defense of an embattled aide and friend, saying he admired the man, respected his integrity, needed him in the White House.

But Dwight D. Eisenhower's support did not settle the problems of Sherman Adams. They got worse and three months after that presidential endorsement, Adams resigned.

When congressional investigators reprimanded Harry Truman's old friend and military aide, Harry H. Vaughan, the President sported an expletive to dismiss suggestions that he quit or be fired. Vaughan stayed.

Now President Carter has rallied dramatically to the side of Budget Director Bert Lance, whom he once described as one of the closest friends he has in the world.

The three cases differ, of course. While Vaughan and Adams denied wrongdoing, investigators found improprieties in their affairs.

That isn't so with Lance. To date, there have been only questions and allegations, and the one official finding in his case so far is that of federal banking investigators, who reported on Thursday that they found no basis for prosecution in his transactions.

Furthermore, Vaughan and Adams were accused of accepting or offering favors as White House officials. The questions raised about Lance involve his private affairs, before he came to the government.

But in another way, the three episodes are similar, for in each case, the target of inquiry and criticism was a personal friend of the president he served. In such circumstances, presidents tend to fight back, even if it is politically risky.

Carter is. His defense of Lance amounted to a dare to anyone to challenge the personal loan and banking practices that brought the budget director under government investigation.

The President said that as far as he is concerned, the questions were answered and the matter was settled when federal banking officials reported on Thursday that they found no basis for prosecution in Lance's banking transactions.

But the report was not quite as sweeping as Carter made it sound. Indeed, Comptroller of the Currency John G. Heimann said Lance's affairs raised unresolved questions as to what should constitute acceptable banking practices.

And whatever the merits of the case, it is not likely to lapse into the past tense as quickly as Carter tried to put it there. The investigations are not over, Republicans are hungry for issues, and Lance may yet be a political target.

THE LOWER LEVEL of Midland College's Chaparral Center, part of a $6.3 million construction package, is beginning to take shape. Geologist plans course of history of Basin

Imagine a waterline at the top of the Wilco Building in downtown Midland and you will have some idea of what the Permian Basin was like 600 million years ago.

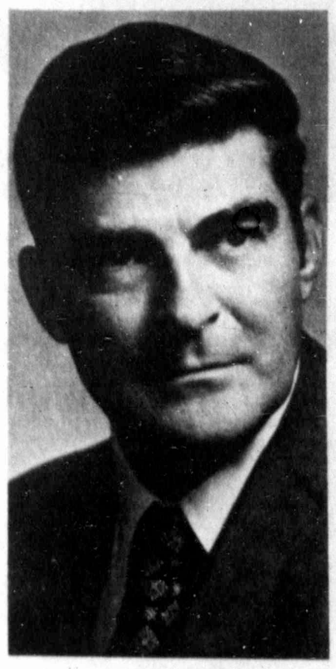

Explaining the Basin's change from a shallow sea to its present structure, Dr. James Butler, a Midland geologist who will teach a course for The University of Texas of the Permian Basin titled "Geologic History of the Permian Basin," said "the Central Basin Platform of the Permian Basin is equivalent in displacement to the Himalayan Mountain Range of northern India."

The course will begin Aug. 31 in the Marian Blakemore Planetarium on the grounds of Midland's Museum of the Southwest, 1705 West Missouri. Hours for the fifteen sessions are from 7 until 10 p.m. on Wednesday nights. Cost of the course is $70.

Registration procedures have been simplified so that any student with at least 60 hours of college credit may complete a short form and register through the Permian Basin Graduate Center in the Gulf Building during the next two weeks, or on the UTPB campus in Odessa, Aug. 29 or 30. The course is offered on a pass-fail basis to interested persons, or for three credit hours with grades to students who want undergraduate credit.

The course will review the structural development of the Permian Basin, which according to Butler, is bounded on the south by Marathon, on the west by Van Horn, on the east by Colorado City and on the north by Lubbock.

Students will deal with familiar terms like Ellenberger and Devonian as they learn about the deposition of sedimentary rock units and structural changes that have taken place in the Permian Basin in the past 600 million years.

Dr. James Butler

An optional one-day field trip to the nearby Marathon Mountains is planned for October so that students may have the opportunity to study the best exposed and oldest outcrop of rocks in the Permian Basin.

The course is designed as a lecture series and will involve very little outside study, according to Butler.

MC adds three courses for fall

Three new courses have been added to the curriculum at Midland College for the fall semester, one in cultural studies and two in petroleum technology.

"The History of Religion," a three-hour elective credit course, will include a thorough study of the Jewish people from the beginning of known history up through the final chapter of the Old Testament, according to Dr. Robert Hollmann, chairman of the Cultural Studies Division at Midland College.

Larry Cox, pastor of the Garden Assemblies of God, will teach the course, which will meet from 9:30 to 10:50 a.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays. The first class is scheduled for Aug. 30.

"Petroleum Field and Lab Methods and Equipment," to be offered from 11 a.m. to 12:20 p.m. or from 5:30 to 6:50 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays, and "Well Completion Methods," to be offered from 8 to 9:20 a.m. or from 8:30 to 9:50 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays, will be added to the petroleum technology curriculum, according to Ed Poulter, petroleum technology department head.

The "Petroleum Field and Lab Methods and Equipment" course will be taught by Poulter. Bill Brogdon, part-time instructor at Midland College, will teach "Well Completion Methods."

Well Completion is a freshman level course, covering methods and problems related to the initial completion and recompletion of oil and gas wells.

The course will cover such topics as casing design, open hole completions, cementing, perforating, tubing design, packers, bridge plugs, acidizing, fracturing, single completions, multiple completions, and remedial methods used to handle well production problems.

Jordan's stock unimpeachable

By RUDY ABRAMSON
The Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK — Although he had the temerity to cross swords publicly with an angry Jimmy Carter, Vernon E. Jordan Jr. is still privately consulted by the Carter Administration nearly every day.

From Vice President Mondale down into the faceless ranks, the officials telephone the executive director of the National Urban League to discuss matters weighty and small — from the President's huge welfare reform package to the hiring of one more political appointee.

Nearly a month after he charged Carter with ignoring the black constituency that played a crucial part in making him President, Jordan is still sought by reporters wanting to know why he suddenly went after the President, a friend and political ally for 10 years.

The controversy set off by his sharp criticism of the Administration has pushed Jordan into the forefront of black political leadership in the United States.

"Vernon's stock in the black community today is absolutely blue chip" said a black official in the administration. "He might suffer at the White House in the short term, but eventually this will pay off for him. His timing was perfect."

Jordan's complaints, first serious criticism of the Administration from a leader of the black community, came in his keynote speech to the 67th annual Urban League Conference. In the speech, he charged that the Carter administration "is not living up to the first commandment of politics — to help those who help you.

Black people, having tasted the sweetness of victory in November, resent the sour taste of disappointment in July. Black people and poor people resent the stress on balanced budgets instead of balanced lives.

"We resent unfulfilled promises of jobs, compromises to win conservative support and the continued acceptance of high unemployment."

The President reacted sharply, suggesting a few days later that criticism of his attitude toward the poor was both "erroneous" and "demagogic."

Jordan, somewhat surprised at Carter's reaction, insists he was doing nothing more than speaking for his Urban League constituency. His mail and telephone calls, he said, have convinced him he accurately read the mood of black America.

The controversy set off by the speech has shown that Jordan, 42, is a man of consequence, perhaps the most influential black in the country today.

He could have been a member of Jimmy Carter's Cabinet. Had he opted for elective politics 10 years ago, he might well have been a member of Congress or mayor of Atlanta.

He considered a race for Congress in 1970 but instead took an opportunity to head the United Negro College Fund. Two years later, when Whitney Young died, Jordan, at 36, replaced him as executive director of the National Urban League.

Although Jordan still professes strong ties to his Georgia roots, he always has been different from the other black leaders who came from Atlanta.

During the hectic, crucial years of the civil rights movement in the South, Vernon Jordan was more a negotiator than a demonstrator. "Vernon is a lawyer," observed one of his longtime friends, "and lots of lawyers don't like to walk."

Another associate recalls a conversation during the height of the civil rights struggle when he suggested to Jordan that suffering could be either a creative or a destructive experience, depending on attitude.

Jordan's reply was, "I am not interested in suffering."

While the young men closest to Martin Luther King were ministers and moralists, Jordan was a tough-minded trader who used subtle pressure more effectively than public evangelism.

Thus, during the years of worst bitterness between blacks and whites in the Deep South, Jordan had lines of communication to the white establishment when no other black leader did.

He maintained his ties with the Johnson administration. During the Nixon years, he played tennis occasionally with White House aide John D. Ehrlichman and had access to Nixon lieutenants such as Donald Rumsfeld and Leonard Garment.

Jordan is a handsome man who stands well over six feet. He exudes confidence. His hearty handshake and his infectious grin prompt immediate familiarity.

He grew up as a part of a relatively poor family in a public-housing project in Atlanta. His mother ran a catering business. She was known as the best in the business, so Jordan grew up knowing all the pillars of the large black community in Atlanta.

After four years at DePauw University in Indiana and three years of law school at Howard University in Washington, he went home to Atlanta, where he practiced law and worked for the NAACP and later for the Office of Economic Opportunity before becoming head of the Southern Regional Council's voter education project.

When Charlayne Hunter became the first black student admitted to the University of Georgia, young Jordan was her escort during the desegregation crisis that ensued.

Jordan and Jimmy Carter met 10 years ago, when Carter was considering his second race for the Georgia governorship.

The Urban League director recalled that meeting in an interview last December with Los Angeles Times reporter Grayson Mitchell. Jordan remembered that Carter told him, "You may not like my campaign, Vernon, but you are going to love my administration."

"He was right," Jordan said, "on both counts."

Although the friendship flourished, Jordan's reaction to the announcement of Carter's presidential candidacy was to call his friend a "damn fool."

When Jordan took over the leadership of the Urban League, he succeeded Whitney Young, the black man who had done more than any other to win corporate support for minorizy causes.

Jordan made the Urban League more of an activist organization than it had been under Young, and broadened its sources of funds. He offered corporations careful plans for regular contributions to the league, and he tapped sources in the South for the first time.

His success in establishing ties with big business was best demonstrated by his election to the board of directors of one corporation after another: Bankers Trust Co., Xerox, Celanese Corp., J.C. Penney and American Express, as well as the Rockefeller Foundation, the John Hay Whitney Foundation, the New World Foundation and the Urban Institute.

He is also on the board of directors at Massachusetts Institute of Technology and several other educational institutions.

Although he speaks fondly of the South and the excitement of the civil rights movement, Jordan is a man now at home in corporate boardrooms and at ease amidst affluence. He is fond of fine wine, expensive cigars and conservatively tailored suits.

Technology aid in fighting great fires

By GEORGE ALEXANDER

Until recent times, there was little people could do in the face of fire except throw sand or water on the flames — or run. And technology was slow to develop more effective means of fighting fires.

Bucket brigades gave way to hand pumps during the 19th century, hand pumps to steam-driven pumps at the end of the 19th century, and steam pumps to engine-powered high-speed pumps during the early decades of this century. And that is the way things stood for many years.

In the last decade or so, however, there has been a great surge of technological developments to control fires:

Airplanes and helicopters have been added to fire-fighting ranks as standard equipment. Satellites have come to be used both as monitors of conditions on earth and as communications links between firefighting agencies. And, in the most recent development of all, computers have begun to predict the spread of wildland fires and to coordinate the efforts of different fire-suppression organizations.

But even as society seeks to extend its control over fires, there are some — foresters and professional firefighters for the most part — who are trying to get across to the general public the message that all fires are not inherently bad.

Indeed, they contend that fire is, and always has been, an important factor in the evolution of forests and wildlands. Under certain conditions and in certain places they say, wildland fires may be not just desirable to rid the forest of a lot of debris, but even necessary to promote the growth of new trees.

This may be a difficult notion for some people to accept. Certainly no one would argue that the fires which in past days have blackened hundreds of thousands of acres in California meet the criteria of right-time, right-place. On the contrary, these recent forest fires are of the sort that modern technology would attempt to sniff out and snuff out at the earliest practical oment.

Today, for example, there are sensors placed at strategic spots on forest floors to monitor prevailing conditions and report these conditions to unmanned satellites sailing high overhead. fire agencies then analyze this data to determine which forests are more vulnerable to the start of a fire; the agencies then deploy their personnel and equipment accordingly.

The California Department of Forestry and the U.S. space agency's Ames Research Center in Mountain View, near San Francisco, have been experimenting with such a system for the past five years.

The system consists of 20 packages of sensors located in key forests and racnh lands. The sensors measure the moisture content of the fuels — dry brush, leaves and otherwoody debris — around the package, air temperature, wind speed and direction, and relative humidity.

a transmitter in the package sends these measurements up to a Landsat satellite passing overhead.

"We use this information," said Dale Ennis, a CDF senior staff meteorologist, "to get a representative reading of the weather and its implications for fire dangers."

If the fuels are dry, temperatures high and the winds gusty, Ennis explained, then the CDF will notify fire-fighting agencies in that area to be alert to the possibilities of a conflagration. And, of course, to ready their forces to fight one, should one break out.

Anticipating the eruption of fire, or failing that, responding to fire in the earliest stages of its development, is one of the highest-priority goals for which firefighting organizations are seeking a technological solution. The general public also seems to recognize the value of early detection, judging from the booming sales of smoke (or heat) detectors.

"1977 will see as many detectors sold as in all previous years put together," said Dr. Joseph E. Clark, associate administrator for research at the National Fire Prevention and Control Administration (NFPCA) In Washington, D.C.

"Where there were only one or two manufacturers of this kind of equipment say, 10 years ago, today there's 17 or 18 major firms producing them."

While concedimg that some modesla have had maintenance and reliability problems, Clark characterized them as being typical of any new product subjected to instant mass demand. The second generation of detectors, now beginning to enter the market, should be free of these minor troubles, he said.

"We're looking a little beyond that," he said of the NFPCA. "We're more interested in the technology that will become available in the early 1980s — the third generation of detectors."

Those future devices, Clark explained, could be simply greatly improved versions of today's devices or detectors with expanded functions.

"If cost is no object," the official said, "those detectors of the 1980s might be total systems. Not only would they activate a local alram right there in the residence, but perhaps they would also turn on a sprinkler system — we've done some research on sprinklers for homes and found that a very, very fine mist can be effective against a fire without doing a lot of water damage to the structure and furnishings — and maybe even notify the fire department that smoke has been detected in your home."

If the NFPCA seems especially concerned with residential fires — and the agency is investigating a variety of solutions, from detectors to interior sprinklers to chemical additives that would make walls more fire resistant — there is a good reason.

"The most commonly accepted figure for deaths due to fire is about 12,000 per year," Clark said, "and half of those occur in residences. No other category comes close. So if you're going to put any kind of dent in the loss of life caused by fires, you've got to tackle the home problem first."

In addition to devices that give early warning of a fire, research is being directed at ways of making it difficult for a fire to get started in the first place. Clark said that, as a result of recent federal legislation, a lot of work is going into fire-resistant or fire-retardant fabrics and plastics.

The controversial chemical Tris, applied to children's sleepwear, is perhaps the best known example of this kind of research, but it is not the only one. (Clark noted that the fire-related death rate of children has been drastically reduced since the introduction of such garments; he feels that the evidence against Tris — purporting to show the chemical to be carcinogenic — "is not all that compelling"). There are several fabrics, such as self-extinguishing fiber, Cordelan and Nomex, which are available today and used on everything from garments to mattresses to upholstered furniture.

Fabrics and furniture are not, however, the only objects for which less combustible substitutes are being sought. Researchers are also investigating various plants with an eye toward poor burning characteristics.

"There are two aspects to this research," explained Klaus Radtke, a research forester with the Forestry Division of the Los Angeles County Fire Department.

Cubs reclaim first place

BY TED BATTLES

The Midland Cubs weren't exactly in the driver's seat, but Manager Jim Saul wasn't quibbling after a 7-3 victory over Amarillo Sunday gave the Cubs first place by a shade over El Paso in the see-saw Texas League West Division chase.

One thing is for sure, there's no time for gloating. The Cubs must do it again against Amarillo tonight at Cubs Stadium just to tread water, if El Paso beats San Antonio. And if San Antonio wins and Midland loses, all three will be virtually tied for the lead again.

Still, Saul felt pretty good about the Cubs' chances the final two weeks. "Pitching, I think, will be a factor," he said, "And we have been getting good pitching and the defense to go with it."

THE DEFENSE was evident Sunday in keeping Jeff Albert, 8-11, out of trouble in the early innings when the Gold Sox were freely rapping out seven hits in the first three innings.

The Cubs also backed up Albert and successor George Riley, who worked the final four innings for his third save, with three trouble-averting double plays.

What's more the Cubs did it with a patchquilt infield. With shortstop Steve Davis missing his third straight game, Mike Umfleet was playing his third game ever at second and Kurt Seibert was at short for the first time this season, although that was his position at Clemson.

SAUL'S FORESIGHT was just paying off. When roving coach Bobby Adams was in Midland a couple of weeks ago, Saul had him work with Umfleet and Scott Boras at second "just in case."

Playing second is a lark for Mike. "I love it and having Kurt at short helps. Saturday I handled a double play by myself and almost blew the throw to first because I hurried so. I promised myself I wouldn't try that again and I get the ball to Kurt covering at second as quickly as I can."

The change hasn't hurt Mike's hitting. He tripled home a run in the first and doubled home two more in the four-run fourth. "I've been hitting the ball hard ever since the series at Amarillo and now they are beginning to fall."

SEIBERT, MEANWHILE, has been flawless at short and Sunday doubled home a run in the third and doubled to set up a run in the ninth.

Ivan Murrell hit a two-run homer in the first to give Amarillo a 2-0 lead, which was the only damage causing blow off Albert. It was the former major leaguer's 22nd homer of the year and seventh against Midland.

Midland got one back in the first on back-to-back triples by Joe Hernandez and Umfleet off Rusty Gerhardt, 4-8, and then scored four in the fourth to take a 5-2 lead. Jimmy Buckner started it with a double, Seibert doubled, Hernandez walked and Umfleet doubled the runs home and later scored on Aaron Randall's single.

ALTHOUGH ALBERT had settled down by the fifth, Saul relieved with Riley in the sixth. "Jeff's arm was tightening up and I didn't want to take the chance of his cutting loose with a pitch and snapping something. That's one of the reasons I'll probably hold Steve (Davis) out a day or two more. He's moving pretty good despite the cut on his knee, but I want to be sure he's alright."

Riley was touched for a run in the eighth on Bobby Mitchell's third hit, an infield bounder, then a walk, infield out and Paul O'Neill's sacrifice fly.

Midland added some insurance in the eighth when Boras tripled and scored on Buckner's single as Jimmy was cut down trying for two. Seibert then doubled and scored on Hernandez' third hit of the night.

The Cubs added lefthander Tom Butler to their pitching staff. A free agent signed out of Oral Roberts U., Butler has pitched at Bradenton and Geneva this season....With umpire Steve Boga's knee still in bad shape, Bobby Dunn was added to the staff for Sunday's game. Charles Williams, with the aid of a player from each team, had to handle all the games by himself the last time he and Boga were scheduled to work Midland...

Tambay pilots Hall car to Can-Am victory

MOSPORT, Ont. (AP) — Patrick Tambay of France, starting from the pole position, led all the way in winning Sunday's Diamond Can-Am Challenge race.

Tambay, driving a Jim Hall-prepared Chaparral Lola T-333, ran away from the field in widening his point lead in this sixth event of the 1977 Can-Am series.

George Follmer of Huntington Beach, Calif., slipped past Peter Gethin of England and Elliott Forbes-Robinson of California on the last lap and finished second.

Follmer, driving a Lola T332, was fourth until the last lap, just behind Gethin in a Lola T332 and Forbes-Robinson in a Lola T-333.

Forbes-Robinson, in second place from the 40th lap, suddenly spun on the fifth corner in the last lap, allowing Follmer and Gethin to pass him.

McKay's first pro win marred by Boryla loss

By The Associated Press

John McKay had waited more than a year to experience the thrill of victory.

However, it took only one night to rediscover the agony of defeat.

It was a jubilant McKay who said, "This one counts for our pride," after his victory-starved Tampa Bay Buccaneers upset the Green Bay Packers 10-7, snapping a 19-game losing streak Saturday night in a National Football League preseason game.

It was a more somber Tampa Bay coach who announced Sunday that No.1 quarterback Mike Boryla had suffered a knee injury in the game and would be lost for the season.

"This is the most devastating single blow we've had," McKay said after learning that Boryla's torn ligaments in his right knee would have to be surgically repaired.

Boryla, who started last season for Philadelphia, was signed by the Bucs in early June when the Eagles forgot to notify him that he would be kept during his contract-ending option year.

In Sunday's games, San Francisco upset Los Angeles 23-14 and Cincinnati edged Detroit 17-13. New England visits Philadelphia tonight.

Quarterback Jim Plunkett tallied on a five-yard run, putting San Francisco ahead, then heaved a 48-yard scoring strike to Kenny Harrison as the 49ers posted their first victory this season, against Los Angeles. The Rams took a 14-0 lead on touchdown passes by Pat Haden and Vince Ferragamo.

Tater Tots win

HNG Tater Tots of Midland won the Goodrich 3-2 Invitational Slow Pitch Tournament at Hogan Park Sunday, beating Oil Patch of Odessa, 24-13.

HNG came through the winners bracket of the double-elimination meet unbeaten, but lost to Oil Patch, survivor of the losers' bracket, 18-11, necessitating the final game.

Kenny Wood, HNG, was named MVP in the tournament to raise funds to help send state champion Midland Goodrich to the national tournament in Parma, Ohio., Sept. 1-5.

Cubans crack world records

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — Cuba's Alberto Juantorena and Alejandro Casanas, who broke world records in the 800-meter run and 110-meter hurdles Sunday night, say they are ready for new records at the World Cup meet in two weeks.

"I never know when I will break a world record," Juantorena said after he clocked 1:43.4 at the World University games, breaking his old mark by one-tenth of 1d. "But my first rival at this moment is Mike Boit of Kenya, and I meet him at the World Cup in Duesseldorf."

Casanas led from the first hurdle as he rocketed to a 13.21-second clocking in the 110meter event, breaking by threehundredths of a second American Rod Milburn's old mark set at the 1972 Munich Olympics.

The Sept. 2-4 World Cup competition in the Rhine River city will match teams representing five continents and three national teams in men's and women's events.

Juantorena, 26, and Casanas, 23, both economics students, will be competing for the Americas team.

Phils' Carlton whiffs 14 on way to 17th victory

By The Associated Press

Steve Carlton is the winningest pitcher in the major leagues, but it is his hitting that has added a little extra dimension to the Philadelphia Phillies.

The big left-hander smashed his second home run of the season while hurling a four-hitter Sunday night for his 18th victory as the Philadelphia Phillies defeated the Houston Astros 7-3, boosting their National League East lead to 6½ games over Pittsburgh.

But it was his pitching that Carlton wanted to talk about.

"I felt really good and the fast ball was really popping," Carlton said. "It was one of my top fastballs this year— the ball ... taking off real good."

Carlton struck out 14, the single-game high in the National League this year, and tied a club record for left-handers as the Phils posted their 17th victory in their last 18 games.

Carlton homered leading off the sixth inning, extending his hitting streak to six games. He has had nine hits in his last 15 trips to the plate for a .625 average.

Philadelphia Manager Danny Ozark said Carlton's pitching performance "was kind of like five years ago—he just reared back and threw it past them."

In 1972, Carlton won 27 games and the Cy Young Award for a Phillies team that won only 59 games and finished in last place.

Giants 5, Pirates 4

A two-run homer by Darrell Evans snapped a 3-3 tie and lifted San Francisco over Pittsburgh. Evans' 13th homer of the season came after reliever Rich Gossage, 8-8, had walked Rob Andrews with two out.

It was the Giants' ninth victory in 10 meetings between the clubs this season. Gary Lavelle, 7-7, got the victory.

Reds 5, Mets 1

The Reds took the lead with a run in the first inning on Pete Rose's double and a single by George Foster, and made it 2-0 in the fifth on Seaver's double and Rose's single. Cincinnati broke it open with three unearned runs in the eighth.

Dodgers 5, Cubs 1

Pitcher Rick Rhoden had three hits, including a homer, and drove in two runs while hurling Los Angeles past Chicago. For Rhoden, 14-8, the homer was his third of the year. He also capped the Dodgers' two-run sixth inning with a run-scoring single.

Backed by five double plays, Rhoden scattered 10 hits but needed last-inning relief from Lance Rautzhan, who recorded his first major league save.

Padres 7, Cardinals 0

Dave Kingman smashed the sixth grand slam home run of his career, capping San Diego's five-run first inning and powering the Padres over St. Louis. Padres left-hander Bob Owchinko, 6-8, was backed by an 11-hit attack in gaining the victory.

Owchinko, now 3-0 against the Cardinals, struck out four while walking two and giving up eight hits.

St. Louis' Lou Brock stole his 888th base, four shy of Ty Cobb's career major league mark of 892.

Expos 10, Braves 4

Del Unser drove in four runs, including two with his 12th home run of the season, powering Montreal past Atlanta. Unser, who has hit two home runs in two days—his first two in Montreal's Olympic Stadium—drilled his two-run blast in the sixth.

Dave Cash and Unser delivered RBI in the fourth, snapping a 4-4 tie and handing Braves starter Dick Ruthven, 4-10, the loss. Don Stanhouse, 9-9, got the victory.

Jeff Burroughs homered for Atlanta.

Royals take over in AL West

By The Associated Press

If the Boston Red Sox and Kansas City Royals wind up in the American League playoffs, the home field advantage might be the deciding factor.

"They don't like to play here," Royals outfielder Tom Poquette said Sunday after Kansas City beat the Red Sox 6-4 on Kansas City's artificial turf and swept the three-game series between the division leaders. The two teams split the season series 5-5, with each side holding a 4-1 advantage at home.

"George Scott was saying they just wanted to get out of here," Poquette said. "You can't come close to them in their ballpark. It's unbelievable. You score eight runs and they come back with nine. Maybe it's a mental thing. I don't know."

Meanwhile, Boston's AL East lead diminished to one-half game over New York when the surging Yankees nipped the Texas Rangers 2-1 for their eighth consecutive triumph and 13th in the last 14 games and climbed into second place when the Baltimore Orioles, who are 1½ games out, lost to the Minnesota Twins 9-5.

Yankees 2, Rangers 1

Graig Nettles knocked in both Yankees runs with a homer and a double and reliever Sparky Lyle earned his 20th save. Lyle was nicked for a run-scoring single by Juan Beniquez in the eighth inning and survived a leadoff walk in the ninth in preserving Ron Guidry's 10th victory.

Twins 9, Orioles 5

Brewers 7-3, White Sox 1-6

Brian Downing drove in four runs with a two-run homer in the seventh inning and a two-run single in the eighth as the White Sox rallied to take the nightcap. The Brewers won the opener as Moose Haas fired a three-hitter, Ken McMullen's two-run homer sparked a sixrun fourth inning and Jim Wohlford also homered.

Angels 3, Blue Jays 2

Jerry Remy's third single scored Terry Humphrey with the winning run in the seventh inning while Frank Tanana, 15-7, scattered seven hits and struck out eight in posting his 20th complete game of the season.

Indians 4, A's 1

Dennis Eckersley, who has ptiched a no-hitter and one-hitter this season, hurled a three-hitter in handing the A's their 19th defeat in the last 21 games. Fred Kendall drove in Cleveland's tie-breaking run with a seventh-inning sacrifice fly off loser Rick Langford and the Indians added a pair of insurance runs in the ninth inning on an error, an RBI double by Rico Carty and a single by Ron Pruitt.

Tigers 5, Mariners 4

A three-run homer by Ben Oglivie in the fourth inning and consecutive shots by Steve Kemp and Jason Thompson in the sixth powered Detroit to its third victory in a row over the Mariners.

CHARLEY HAS his and Midland has its Cubbies' Angels, from left, Kelly Westerman, Hillori Hall, Pam Hamm and Stephanie Hall, usherettes who make it a pleasure to be lost at Cubs Stadium.

El Paso wins, 10-5

By The Associated Press

The Texas League West Division tightened up Sunday night as El Paso slipped ahead of San Antonio to a virtual tie with leader Midland.

El Paso clipped San Antonio, 10-5, while Midland was trimming Amarillo 7-3. In the only other contest, Jackson nipped Shreveport 7-6.

El Paso led 8-1 after the first three innnings and ended up the night with 17 singles. Steve Stroughter slammed a three-run homer in the first inning to set the pace for the night. He added two doubles and a single before it was all over. Chuck Porter picked up his seventh win against a single loss, while Bob Welch dropped to 3-3.

Jackson rallied for four runs in the ninth inning to clip Shreveport.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

North posts 2-stroke win

GOLF

HARRISON, N.Y. — Andy North holed a couple of critical putts and scored his first victory on the Pro Golfers Association tour with a 12-under-par 272 for a two-stroke triumph in the $300,000 Westchester Classic.

Tom Wesikopf, Howard Twitty and Leonard Thompson—the major challengers to the three-stroke lead North built through the first 54 holes—knocked themselves out of contention with a varied mixture of misfortunes in the mild, hazy weather. Veteran George Archer came on to take second with a closing 67 and a 274 total.

WHEELING, W.Va. — Debbie Austin sank a three-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole to hold off a challenge from Hollis Stacy and win the $50,000 Wheeling LPGA Classic.

Miss Austin led the tournament from the start and avoided a playoff with Miss Stacy with the birdie on the par-5, 450-yard 18th hole.

Winning her fifth tournament of the year, Miss Austin shot a two-under-par 70. That produced the one-stroke victory over Miss Stacy, who fired a five-under-par 67 in the final round after standing four shots behind Miss Austin when the final round began.

AUTO RACING

MILWAUKEE — Johnny Rutherford inherited a huge lead when Al Unser dropped out 27 laps from the finish, and the popular Texan cruised to an easy victory in Sunday's Tony Bettenhausen 200-mile race for Indianapolis cars.

The victory earned him close to $20,000 and 400 points toward the national championship, in which he is in second place, more than 600 points behind Tom Sneva. Sneva did not finish.

Writer sees Richards court ruling as step forward

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

A state Supreme Court justice's ruling that transsexual Dr. Renee Richards should not be denied entry in the U.S. Open Tennis Championships at Forest Hills is another short step toward full recognition of human rights in sports.

Pebble by pebble, there is erosion of the archaic delusion that pro sports—with their commercial tentacles, vast TV exposure and multi-million-dollar franchises—still are nothing more than fun and games.

They are as sacred as motherhood and apple pie. The government and the courts should keep hands off. The game is the thing, we are told by the establishment. Don't do anything to hurt the game.

Don't hurt the game? What about the individual? Is the game more important than the player?

Such a tight-minded, selfserving philosophy has been responsible for a flood of revolts, law suits, challenges and court verdicts in recent years that have thrown the structure into pure chaos.

It started a century ago when the establishment held that black-skinned descendants of slaves should not be allowed to play baseball, football or basketball. This changed in the 1940s. It wasn't until the 1950s that Althea Gibson pierced the racial curtain in tennis, Arthur Ashe coming along later. Although black men have carried bags for years as caddies, few still have managed to break into pro golf.

The next issued involved working conditions. The athlete was denied privileges given to the brick layer or the bank clerk. He became virtually the slave of his owner—property for life, to be traded or sold at the whim of his master—until an arbitrator's ruling and the courts brought player freedom to baseball in 1975. Football, hockey and basketball quickly got into line.

The Renee Richards case is strictly one of human rights and it was on that ground that Justice Alfred Ascione of New York made his landmark decision. It wasn't a matter of giving official blessing to operations which turn men into women and vice versa.

Dr. Richards, formerly a successful eye surgeon named Richard Raskind, had suffered years of torment of wishing to be a woman instead of a man—a medical oddity touching tens of thousands. Finally the bold and drastic step was taken—an operation. Doctors acclaimed it a success. Richard, a good sectional tennis player, became a woman. As a woman, she wanted to continue a competitive career.

The U.S. Tennis Association and the Women's Tennis Association both over-reacted. They expressed alarm that there might be a rash of such operations. W.E. "Slew" Hester, USTA president, even dredged up a 6-foot-8, 240-pound monster in Texas with designs on Chris Evert's crown.

It all was a bit ridiculous. Anyone who has seen Renee play—43 years old now, tall, gawky, slow-footed—should realize she is not a threat to any one. But that is immaterial. The important thing is that she is a human being asking only for human rights.

In the ongoing campaign to civilize sports, there still are plateaus to be climbed. Maybe the next battlefield will be that on the issue of hair—Al Hrabosky's right to pitch for the St. Louis Cardinals while wearing a beard or a challenge to the marine hair style codes inflicted on the champion Cincinnati Reds and New York Yankees.

Or maybe it will be a bid by outspoken golfer Dave Hill to exercise his First Amendment rightys and call a golf course a "cow pasture."

One of the most ludicrous infringements on human rights involves a 42-year-old golfer in Selma, Ala., Frank Cothran III, a two-handicap golfer with an amputated leg, denied from qualifying for the National Amateur because he would have to use a cart.

No cart, says the pontifiga. Although carts saturate the national golf courses like beetles, te USGA insists golf must be a test of stamina as well as skill.

If so, chides Bill Nack of Newsday, then "why not make the players carry their own bags, swim the hazards, belly over the traps and run between holes?"

CAVE SPELUNKER? — This appears to be a cavern of sorts, so would he be a spelunker of sorts? This workman at Tenneco Inc.'s Newport News Shipbuilding subsidiary in Virginia is in the inner bottom of a tanker under construction. When completed, the tanker will be used to bring liquefied natural gas to the United States to help ease the country's natural gas shortage.

Sour gas well problem now research subject

COLLEGE STATION — The nation's search for energy is pushing drillers deeper and deeper into the earth where they run into a dangerous foe called the "sour gas well."

Exxon Corp. and Texas A&M University's Nuclear Science Center are joining forces on this problem which plagues the oil fields of Texas, Florida, Alabama and Mississippi.

These wells come in at 16,000 to 17,000 feet, with a combination of high temperatures, pressure and acid levels which can cause failure of steel tubing by erosion in a relatively short time.

"Once these pipes fail, it takes about $5 million to fish the old pipe out and replace it," explained Dr. John Randall, head of the center, and a principal investigator on the project.

"Chemicals can be pumped into a well to inhibit the corrosion, but up until now it has been a blind operation," he pointed out. "So the idea is to develop a monitoring system that allows you to 'see' what is happening in the well. This would result in the savings of considerable energy dollars which could be passed on to the consumer."

"The solution that we at Texas A&M have proposed is the incorporation of non-radioactive trace material into the tubing in the well," he said.

"These samples can be subjected to irradiation at the Nuclear Science Center to compute the amount of corrosion by the amount of trace minerals coming up the well. More trace material means more corrosion," Randall said.

ENERGY
OIL & GAS

There are other added advantages in that this technique provides a greater sensitivity than other methods, is safe to handle, offers no disposal problems and can be installed by untrained personnel.

"The tubing, with trace elements, has been fabricated and will go into test wells soon," Randall noted. "If the method is successfully developed, it is expected to be widely applied."

Exxon has funded the project for $75,000.

New Mexico counties get wildcats, stepout

Wildcats have been staked in Eddy and Chaves counties, N.M., while Eddy also drew location for a field extender.

Petroleum Development Corp., operating from Albuquerque, N.M., will drill No. 1 Manzano Grande-Federal, a 12,000-foot wildcat in Eddy, seven miles northwest of White City.

Location is 660 feet from south and 1,990 feet from east lines of section 5-24s-26e, 1½ mile southwest of Morrow production in the Carlsbad, South field and 1¼ mile northwest of the White City (Morrow) gas field.

Mesa Petroleum Co., Midland, accounted for a stepout site in the Carlsbad, South (Morrow) gas field, to be drilled as No. 1 Bindel-Federal Communitized.

Location is 660 feet from north and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 9-23s-27e, 11 miles southwest of Eunice. Planned depth is 12,100 feet.

CHAVES WILDCAT

Flag-Redfern Oil Co., Midland, filed application to drill No. 1 Amoco-Federal as a 4,200-foot wildcat in Chaves, 10 miles south of Kenna.

Drillsite is 660 feet from south and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 23-7s-31e, in the Tom Tom (San Andres) area.

Reeves gets gas strike

Dyco Petroleum Corp. of Tulsa, Okla., operating from its Midland office, has announced the completion of a Devonian gas pay opener in the San Martine (Fusselman) gas field of Reeves County, eight miles west of Toyah.

The firm's No. 1 Caldwell-State gauged a calculated, absolute flow potential gauge of 2.810 million cubic feet of qas per day. Production is through perforations at 10,684-10,762 feet. The pay section had been acidized with 4,000 gallons and fractured with 406 barrels of fluid, plus 26,000 pounds of sand and 200 barrels of carbon dioxide.

Drilled to 11,102 feet, it has been plugged back to 10,960 feet. Casing size and seat has not been reported.

Company seeks stock switch

DALLAS — Dorchester Gas Corp. has announced that it is calling for redemption of all its prseently outstanding shares of Special Convertible stock on Oct. 21, at $10 per share.

The shares are covertible at any time prior to the redemption date into 1.175 shares of the common stock of the company.

The presently outstanding stock is the remainder of an original issue of 4,059,027 shares issued in 1968, of which 3,827,988 shares have previously been coverted.

Redemption and conversion agent is the First National Bank of Dallas.

Hemphill gets strike

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — Apache Corp. and Natomas Co. have announced jointly the completion of a natural gas discovery in western Hemphill County, Tex., 90 miles northeast of Amarillo.

No. 1 J. R. Campbell in section 11, block 1, I&GNRR survey, flowed at the rate of 4.3 million cubic feet of gas per day on a production test through a 19-64-inch choke.

Apache and its 1977-II Oil and gas program hold a 23.4 per cent working interest in the well. Natomas, through its recent acquisition of Apexco, Inc., holds a 14.1 per cent working interest. Hoover and Bracken Energies, Inc., operator of the well, holds the remaining 62.5 per cent working interest.

Platform ordered

HOUSTON — Transco Exploration Co., operator for a seven-company group, has announced a 24-well, self-contained drilling and production platform has been ordered for Vermilion Block 310.

The platform will be placed in 200 feet of water about 90 miles offshore Louisiana.

A second platform also is expected to be ordered later this year to fully develop this 5,000-acre block.

Six exploratory tests have been drilled on the block and drilling operations are continuing, Allen R. Stern, Transco president, said. The wells have found from 15 to 175 feet of gas-bearing sands between 2,200 and 3,900 feet.

Interest in the block is owned by Transco, 38.4 per cent; Freeport Oil Co., 25 per cent; Pioneer Production Corp., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Pioneer Corp., 10 per cent; Energy Development Corp., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Public Service Electric Co., 8.3 per cent; The Continental Group, Inc., 8.3 per cent; McMoRan Exploration Co., 5 per cent, and Mesa Petroleum Co., 5 per cent.

Completion was effected through perforations at 8,200-8,275 feet, which had been acidized with 6,000 gallons and fractured with 24,000 gallons, and unreported amount of sand.

Drilled to 15,340 feet, it was a failure in the Ellenburger. Operator set 10¾-inch casing at 11,437 feet, and the hole was plugged back to 9,000 feet.
