First flight day overall success

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The space shuttle soared through the first full day of Mission 4 today, its astronauts plunging into a flurry of tests after exchanging coded messages about a Pentagon payload that symbolizes a marriage of the civilian space program with the military.

Columbia, launched so brilliantly Sunday, hummed along with no major problems. On its last test flight, astronauts Ken Mattingly and Henry Hartsfield are qualifying the craft as an operational space vehicle.

"All the things people have said about this machine are true," Mattingly said in praise of Columbia's performance on Sunday.

There were some troubles. The booster rockets that were to have been recovered for reuse sank in the Atlantic Ocean, a $36 million loss. The spacecraft also developed a steering jet leak and a high temperature reading on a fuel cell, but officials said these were minor and would not affect the mission. A student experiment failed to function.

One of the top-secret Defense Department experiments might not have worked. At least that was the inference when Mattingly reported, in a code-worded exchange, "no joy on step No. 3."

The astronauts fell so far behind in their routine that they didn't get to bed until nearly 11:30 p.m. — almost three hours later than scheduled. But after five hours of sleep they were ready for a busy day.

Mission Control wakened them with a recording of "Up, Up and Away," and commander Mattingly acknowledged: "My compliments to your taste in music. We're ready to go to work."

"We're glad to hear that; there's lots for you to do today," said capsule communicator Brewster Shaw.

"I never would have guessed," replied Mattingly.

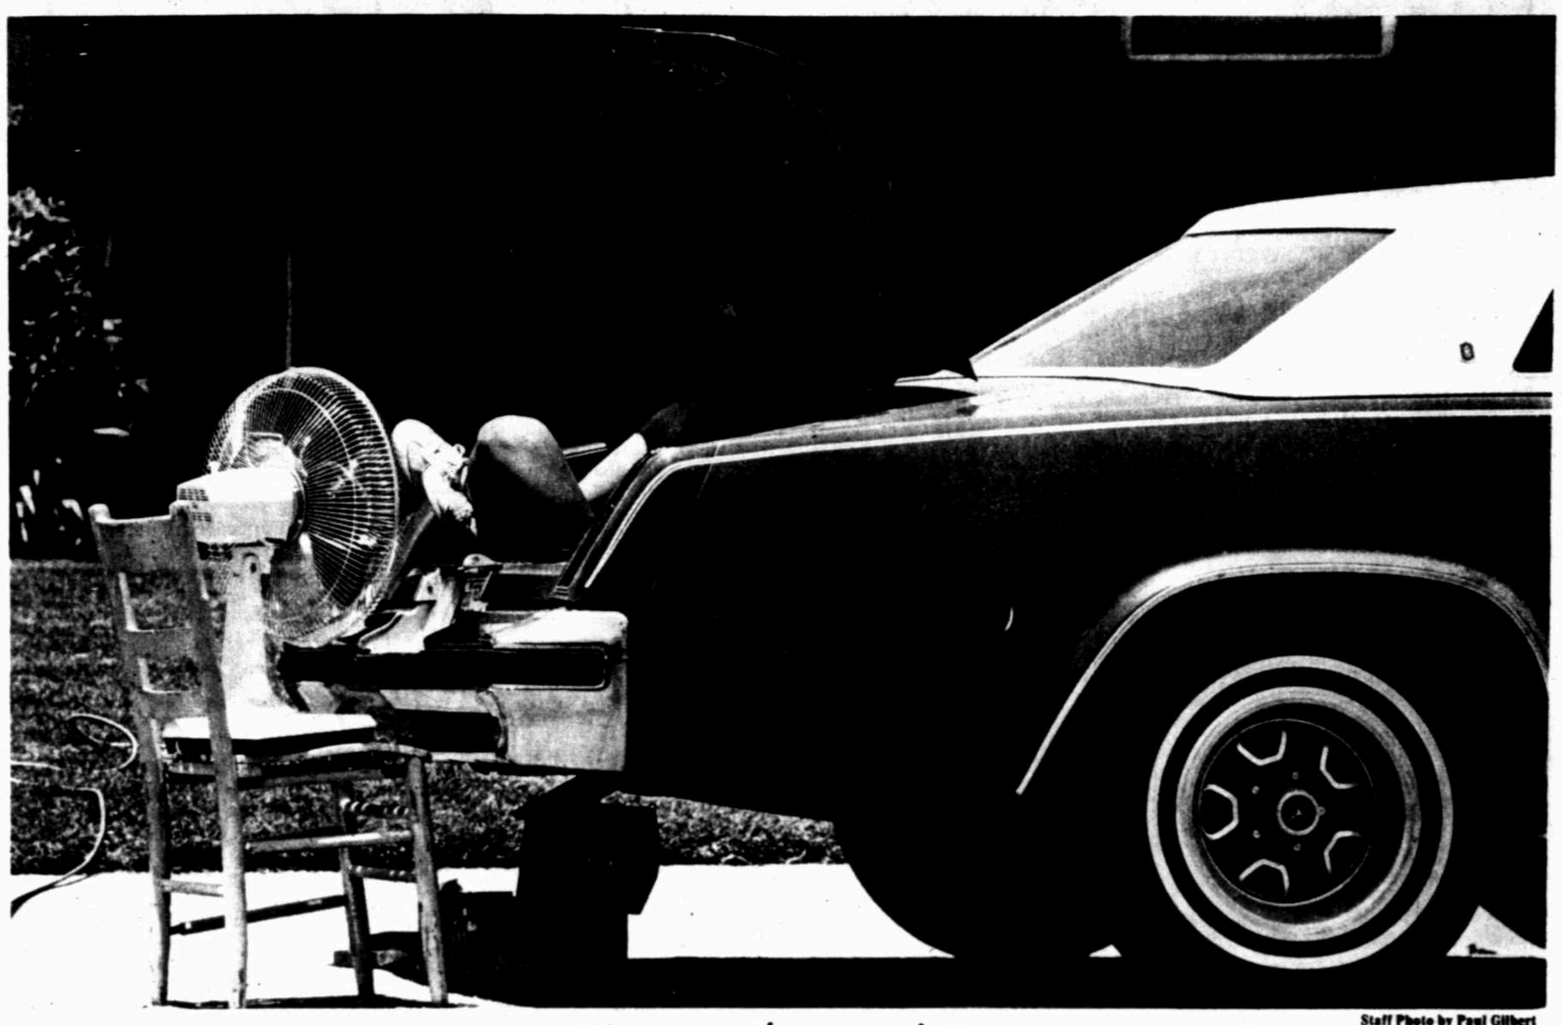

Shaw told them their spaceship was in "good shape, and we're glad you're both in good spirits."

Hartsfield was the point man today for two space processing experiments which have potential medical applications.

Mattingly, according to the flight plan, was to switch on a Defense Department payload for 10½ hours. The Pentagon has labeled it "top secret" but there is enough information on the public record to identify the main elements as sensors being tested to detect hostile missiles and spacecraft and a device that could give defense satellites navigation capability free from ground control.

Mattingly, the mission commander, activated the experiment for the first time on Sunday, receiving coded instructions from a special military control center separate from NASA's Mission Control in Houston. NASA and the Air Force had said they would maintain open communications throughout the flight even with the defense payload on board. But the astronauts were instructed not to discuss details or televise pictures of it.

Indeed, they did not. All the exchanges about it were in clipped phrases: "Perform Bravo Alpha," "Foxtrot off," or "try Charlie step 3 again." The package was referred to only as "the experiment."

Hot weather coping

Oscar Lara, 101 Butler St., knew installing speakers in the back of his car on a hot summer day would be a perspiring task, so he hooked up a portable air conditioner. The high temperature Sunday was 94 degrees, but it's supposed to get hotter this week, with the high Tuesday expected to reach 100.

Boosters' sinking still unexplained

- CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA officials say they are baffled as to why Columbia's spent rocket boosters failed to float when they hit the Atlantic and instead plunged 3,100 feet to the ocean floor. But they say there is little hope of recovering the steel casings, worth $36 million.

"I think they've abandoned the idea of bringing them up," said Linda Dougherty, a spokeswoman for the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., which controls booster operations. "I don't know of any way they can do it (lift them)."

The 149-foot-long boosters are the largest solid-propellant motors ever flown and are designed to be reusable for up to 20 flights. Packed with fuel each weighs 1,293,000 pounds. Empty they weigh a fraction of that, but still a lot — 183,000 pounds.

It is the boosters that give the shuttle its main burst of power en route to orbit, quickly expending all their fuel in the process. They are pushed away from the orbiter by special motors at 2½ minutes into the launch. Then, their descent slowed by three large parachutes and one small one, they splash down in the water where they are supposed to bob until NASA recovery ships can retrieve them.

The boosters used on the first three flights all performed perfectly and are now being refurbished for later missions. Even when stormy seas after the second launch prevented divers from positioning the tubes for towing for an entire week, they kept floating.

But on Sunday, something went wrong. An Air Force plane briefly spotted one casing lying low in the water 160 miles east of the Kennedy Space Center. Guided by radio beacons on the boosters, the recovery ships UTC Liberty and UTC Freedom rushed to the site, but the boosters had vanished.

Late Sunday, one of the ships turned back, while the other stood guard overnight on the lonely stretch of ocean.

Speakes insists Haig to stay indefinitely

WASHINGTON (AP) — A White House spokesman said today that outgoing Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. will remain in his post indefinitely while his designated successor, George P. Shultz, prepares to take over the job.

Deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said Haig, who abruptly turned in his resignation on Friday, would remain fully in charge at the State Department "until he leaves."

Speakes' comments came as Haig scheduled a farewell reception tonight for his senior staff, an indication he intends only a brief caretaker role in the job which fell so quickly from his grasp last week.

But Speakes reminded reporters Haig had promised to stay on to make an orderly transition.

"He's the secretary of state, fully, totally, legally, formally, without reservation, mental or otherwise, and will be the secretary of state until such time as he leaves," Speakes said.

Shultz would have no official role during the transition, although "I'm sure his views will be taken into consideration," Speakes said.

In keeping with his promise, Haig spent almost three hours Sunday briefing Shultz on the continuing turmoil in Lebanon and other issues. Neither man spoke with reporters, with Shultz maintaining what he calls his "days of silence" during the transition.

Shultz visited the White House this morning, but Speakes said he was not scheduled to see Reagan. While the president was getting his regular morning update on foreign policy developments and participating in a meeting on space policy, Shultz was in the White House Situation Room for a briefing by members of the National Security Council staff, the spokesman said.

There was no official announcement on Haig's plans for formally departing his seventh floor office. One official speculated, however, that deputy secretary Walter Stoessel soon will take over as acting secretary and will serve in that capacity until Shultz's expected Senate confirmation sometime in the latter half of July.

Shultz, 61, president of the Bechtel Group, Inc., a giant engineering and construction firm, reportedly will return to California this week to take care of personal business before returning here to prepare for his confirmation hearings, set to begin in mid-July.

Shultz hasn't been home since accepting the job Friday by telephone from London. He arrived in Washington on Saturday and met with President Reagan and key aides for 2½ hours at nearby Camp David.

"I can work simpatico for him and with his administration," Shultz said. He said he saw his job "as an opportunity to do what I can to advance the cause of peace, freedom and justice in a world so troubled and so anxious to hope for a good future."

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley" program Sunday that Haig had thought he would be "the voice in foreign policy" in the government, but "of course, the president has to be the voice and there have to be other voices...and this I think was frustrating to Al Haig."

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said on CBS' "Face the Nation" that he thought Shultz would be a "team player" but added: "We need a voice that will be strong and will write the policy...and I see a kind of go-along policy in the Reagan administration and I don't know whether it's good or not."

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, said on NBC's "Meet the Press" that he was concerned about the upcoming U.S.-Soviet arms limitation talks because of the upheaval. "Now we're going into the START talks in disarray, with a new secretary of state," he said, adding that he would like Haig to appear before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee confirmation hearings on Shultz.

Haig's fall from favor occurred with unusual swiftness. A scant eight weeks ago, Haig was riding high and appeared able to claim that the "vicar" role he had set for himself early on was rightfully his after a long struggle against more conservative rivals.

President Reagan's May 9th speech in which he called for deep cuts in Soviet and American arsenals was widely intrepreted as a victory for the moderate approach Haig had espoused.

But Haig's legendary inability to get along with other top administration aides resurfaced during Reagan's trip to Europe early this month. Soon thereafter, the White House began to consider seriously the possibility of replacing Haig. His problems were compounded by bitter disagreements over how to deal with Israel's invasion of Lebanon.

Public, private PLO faces differ on retreat subject

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Despite public vows to "fight until victory or martyrdom," the leadership of the Palestine Liberation Organization has agreed in principle, during secret negotiations, to a face-saving retreat from Lebanon, official Lebanese sources said today.

The sources said, however, that it may take weeks to settle the details of a withdrawal that would spare the Moslem western half of Beirut from a threatened assault by Israel. The PLO has operated a "state within a state" in Lebanon for 12 years.

Meanwhile, the most recent cease-fire arranged by U.S. mediator Philip C. Habib was broken early today when Palestinian guerrillas fired mortars at Israeli troops in the coastal Lebanese town of Damour, 11 miles south of Beirut. Three Israelis were wounded, according to the Israeli military command in Tel Aviv.

Except for that incident, the cease-fire appeared to be holding through a third day, the longest respite from violence since Israel invaded Lebanon on June 6. Israel's Cabinet said Sunday Israeli troops would adhere to the cease-fire unless fired upon.

According to a recent study by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, lightning is a killer — and Texas had the third largest number of deaths in the nation caused by lightning from 1959 to 1979.

Wherever it strikes, lightning awesome

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

If it's true what the old adage says about lightning never striking twice in the same spot, then thank the stormy heavens for small miracles.

Because a study recently released by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, along with reports from National Weather Service officials locally, revealed that, despite popular misconceptions to the contrary, lightning is a deadly killer — a wicked weather phenomenon capable of wreaking havoc, injury and death.

The study, which examined lightning-related deaths and injuries in the United States from 1959 to 1979, ranked Texas an unenviable third with 111 deaths and and 181 injuries.

Florida earned its dubious first-place spot with 233 deaths and 566 injuries, followed by North Carolina, which suffered 113 fatalities and 258 injuries.

NATIONWIDE, THE dangerously powerful electrical discharges inflicted 2,210 deaths and 5,142 injuries during the 20-year period.

While flash floods or tornadoes are often considered the most deadly forms of weather, Jim Campbell, a weather service specialist with Midland's National Weather Service office, said "lightning is the greatest weather-related killer."

Alfonso Castaneda, a severe weather preparedness meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Lubbock, called lightning "more selective" than other forms of heavy weather.

"The tornado is more dramatic. It creates the headlines," Castaneda said, noting that hurricanes and tornadoes take life and property in severe, but sporadic, incidents.

Castaneda said lightning "picks one here and picks one there," until eventually the injuries and loss of life reach staggering totals.

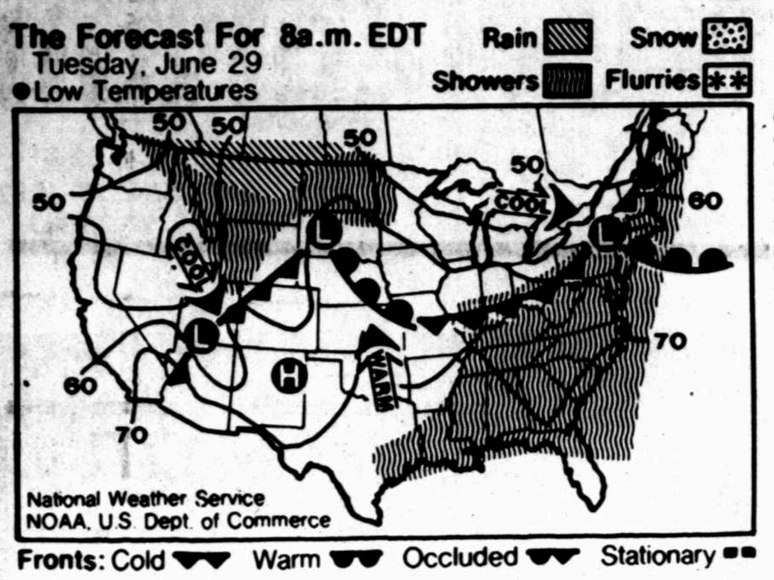

LIGHTNING COULD be considered nature's full-blown version of a man scuffing across carpet in furry slippers. While the man's movement imbues him with an electric charge, a teeming, massive storm cloud filled with electrically charged water drops generates immense electric potential.

When the man nears a light switch, he imparts an opposite electric charge on the switch, just as a cloud nearing the earth lends an opposite charge to objects below.

In either case, when those charges become strong enough to overcome insula-

Kennedy: 'Our day is coming again'

By DAVID ESPO

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Their midterm party conference behind them, Democrats are turning their political efforts to the 1982 congressional elections with a confident prediction from Sen. Edward M. Kennedy that "our day is coming again."

"We are in the midst of a fierce struggle for the shape and soul of our generation," Kennedy declared in a rousing seech that stole the show on the final day of the Democrats' three-day National Party Conference.

"Only a few months ago, Democrats were scorned and told that our day was done," added Kennedy, a candidate for re-election to the Senate this year and one of two front-runners — along with former Vice President Walter F. Mondale — for the 1984 presidential nomination.

"But we know now and all America knows that for us as Democrats...the dawn is near, our hearts are bright, our cause is right, and our day is coming again."

With that, the Massachusetts senator touched off a five-minute demonstration in a hall that had been carefully prepared beforehand by his aides, down to the hundreds of blue Kennedy posters that they distributed throughout the crowd. Even so, it was a reminder of the hold that Kennedy retains on many Democrats as the party looks beyond 1982 toward 1984.

CHARLES T. MANATT, the party's chairman, told reporters after the session ended that the conference had helped lay a foundation "for the challenge of 1982." He predicted earlier that the party would pick up about 15 seats in the House and one or two in the Senate in this fall's elections, a concession that the GOP Senate would stay Republican at least two more years.

As for the presidential hopefuls, he sidestepped a question about who had benefited from the party meeting and who had been hurt.

"As far as the six or seven, I don't think any of them gained all that much," he said.

Kennedy's speech aside, the party approved a series of position papers without dissent at its concluding session, leaving Democrats on record in favor of a nuclear freeze and a revision of Reagan's tax program. They also said Israeli's invasion of Lebanon provides an opportunity for "lasting peace" in that war-torn country and "greater security" for the Jewish state.

The position papers were drafted, debated and approved without the sharp divisions that have split the Democratic Party in the past.

Nevertheless, the conference was dominated from beginning to end by the men who seem anxious to declare formally that they want the party's 1984 presidential nomination.

MONDALE SPOKE at the opening session on Friday, as did Sens. Gary Hart of Colorado, John Glenn of Ohio, Alan Cranston of California and Ernest Hollings of South Carolina. Former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew, another presidential hopeful, also was present and courting support, but chose not to address the convention.

Alone among the presidential hopefuls, Kennedy spoke on Sunday, rousing the crowd to applause more than 50 times in a 38-minute address that ticked off the party's issues in the fall election campaign — the recession-wracked economy, a nuclear freeze, the Equal Rights Amendment and the environment among them.

In the end, he stood at the podium with his three children, Kara, Edward Jr., and Patrick, as well as with two sisters and a niece. Kennedy and his wife, Joan, are separated, and she was not present.

"Last year we were told to be cautious and callous and uncommitted," Kennedy told the delegates. "We were told to quiet our voices, to lower our vision and to trim our convictions to fit the fashion of a reactionary time."

But, he said in a line he spoke often in the campaign of 1980, "the last thing this nation needs is two Republican parties."

He complained bitterly about budget cuts and the "Reagan giveaway" on taxes, and warned that there is something "at the heart of the Republican Party which yearns to undo Social Security."

"THEY HAVE restored the reign of hear-nothing, see-nothing, do-nothing government. Ronald Reagan's cheese lines of 1982 are as unacceptable as Herbert Hoover's bread lines of 1932," he said.

Declaring that the Democratic Party "must never yield" on the issue of a nuclear freeze, he added, "I wish the Reagan administration would spend less time preparing for a nuclear war and more time preventing one," he said.

Kennedy was cheered loudly when he put in a nice word about former President Carter, the man he challenged unsuccessfully for the 1980 presidential nomination. "On the vital issue of human rights, Ronald Reagan is wrong — and Jimmy Carter was right," he said.

On the environment, he said he was proud that he had voted against the confirmation of Interior Secretary James Watt. "I am resolved that America the beautiful must never become America the exploited," he added.

And on the ERA, Kennedy told a cheering crowd: "We have only just begun to fight."

"Our dream still lives, and ERA shall never die," he declared in a line that echoed the final words of his electrifying speech to the 1980 Democratic convention.

Watergate 'bagman' would do it again

By MIKE HENDRICKS

HADLEY, N.Y. (AP) — Tony Ulasewicz, the good-humored "bagman" of the Watergate scandal, says "it was an honor" to work as a detective for former President Richard Nixon even though it pulled him into the Watergate scandal 10 years ago.

"I think I'd take the job again," said Ulasewicz, who now lives with his wife in a rustic cottage in the foothills of the Adirondacks, far from the intrigues of secret presidential assignments.

Ulasewicz's name made headlines when he testified before a U.S. Senate committee during the Watergate scandal, but the 62-year-old detective says he would not have been caught if he had made the break-in on June 17, 1972, at Democratic National Headquarters, because he would have gone in alone.

"If I had done it, there would have been no Watergate and Nixon would have finished his presidency," he said.

During hearings chaired by Sam Ervin, D-N.C., Ulasewicz regaled senators with his account of carrying a waist-mounted coin dispenser so he wouldn't have to load his pockets with change for pay phones used to receive and give instructions.

Ulasewicz, a tall, big-boned man with a heavy accent from growing up on New York City's East Side, paid a penalty for his Watergate involvement, although he still insists, "I've done nothing illegal."

He was placed on one year unsupervised probation after being convicted of failing to report $40,000 in money received from CREEP, the Committee to Re-Elect the President, but said he will seek to reopen the case in hopes of having the felony conviction removed from his record.

Ulasewicz also had to give up his ambition of opening a private detective agency in Albany. "I lost a couple of years," he said.

He still hopes to receive the $34,000 he believes CREEP owes him in unpaid salary.

Meanwhile, he chops wood and tends chickens in the same mountain getaway where he lived while working for the president. He took assignments over a 10-party telephone line from White House officials.

"It was kind of a refuge for me," Ulasewicz said.

He is currently finishing a book about a lifetime of experiences, with a small part devoted to Watergate and his years as a political detective.

Ulasewicz was the Watergate "bagman" who delivered $219,000 to G. Gordon Liddy, who masterminded the political surveillance and the break-ins, and former CIA agent E. Howard Hunt, who participated in the break-in with several others. Ulasewicz contends he didn't know the cash was "hush money" for the defendants, saying he thought it was for family expenses and attorney fees.

After three months, he realized something was not "kosher" about the money and refused to take part in further deliveries, he said.

He also admitted conveying an offer of executive clemency to James McCord Jr., one of the Watergate burglars.

For three years, Ulasewicz was Nixon's personal private detective. He was sent to Chappaquiddick to find out for Nixon what exactly happened when Sen. Edward Kennedy drove into the water with Mary Jo Kopechne in his car.

Ulasewicz was also sent to Mexico to learn the truth behind allegations that a Nixon appointee employed illegal aliens. He investigated Quakers camped outside the White House and checked out the motives of a comedian named Dixon who resembled — and imitated — the president.

Before 1969, the detective spent nearly 30 years on the New York City police force, sometimes escorting foreign dignitaries like the late Soviet Premier Nikita Khruschehev, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and dictators Rafael Trujillo of the Dominican Republic and Fidel Castro and Fulgencio Batista of Cuba.

Lightning's potential for danger awesome

tion provided by the air between them, a spark of electric current leaps the gap.

But instead of a finger-tingling jolt, a heavily-charged thunder cloud can spawn a 15,000,000-volt sliver of lightning that may travel eight miles between cloud and ground.

Castaneda called moisture and warm air "the basic ingredients" of a thunderstorm, and said that many West Texas thunderstorms occur along an imaginary line — ironically dubbed the "dry line" by meteorologists — which approximates a path from Clayton, in eastern New Mexico, to Marfa, in western Texas.

THERE, HOT, DRY winds from the west clash with cool, moist air from the Gulf of Mexico and produce "lines of thunderstorms after lines of thunderstorms," Castaneda said.

One such storm buffeted Midland Thursday night, knocking out power in some areas, scrambling construction-site scaffolding and demolishing a chimney on the Museum of the Southwest with a lightning strike.

Even much milder thunderstorms are potentially dangerous, Castaneda said. Because where there's thunder — reverberating air waves caused by lightning — there's the chance of a lightning strike.

Despite the potential danger, people either don't know, or simply ignore, rules for safe conduct during thunderstorms, Campbell said.

The best place to be is indoors, staying off the telephone except in an emergency. A person caught outdoors should seek shelter in a car or kneel down on the lowest point of land available.

Those unfortunate enough to be outdoors may find their hair literally standing on end during a thunderstorm's fury — a signal that they are assuming an electrical charge and becoming a likely target for a lightning bolt. They should drop to their knees immediately.

STAY CLEAR OF open water (including swimming pools), isolated trees, metal buildings and equipment, golf clubs, clotheslines, rails — anything that might provide a path for lightning.

If someone is struck by lightning, first aid should be administered. A lightning strike victim is not electrically charged and can be handled safely.

The chances of being hit by lightning are slim. But, as the study indicates, it happens.

And because of Texas' enormous size, large population and variety of weather, it will always have its share of weather-related damage and fatalities, Castaneda said.

"Almost all statistics relating to weather will show Texas at the top or near the top," he said.

But some tragic numbers, like those left in the wake of violent thunderstorms, can be minimized if everyone follows common-sense safety rules and keeps a wary eye peeled for stormy weather.

Jewelry valued at $30,000 taken from country club locker

Sheriff's deputies are investigating the reported burglary of two lockers at Greentree Country Club on North Midland Drive. The lockers were broken into sometime Sunday and jewelry valued at $30,000 was taken.

In other police news, three young Midland men were in jail this morning after their car was stopped on a traffic violation and a set of stolen tires and wheels was found in the vehicle, according to police.

Officers said they stopped the car for a defective exhaust system near the intersection of Kelly Street and Wall Avenue about 2:15 a.m. today and a set of tires and wheels worth $600 was found in the vehicle. A check disclosed the tires had been stolen earlier from the Berg Motor Co. at 3208 Henderson St. The suspects ranged in age from 17 to 20 and gave a Travis Street Address.

An employee of Conner's Grocery, 2420 W. Illinois Ave., told police a total of $200 was taken from the cash register during the past 10 days.

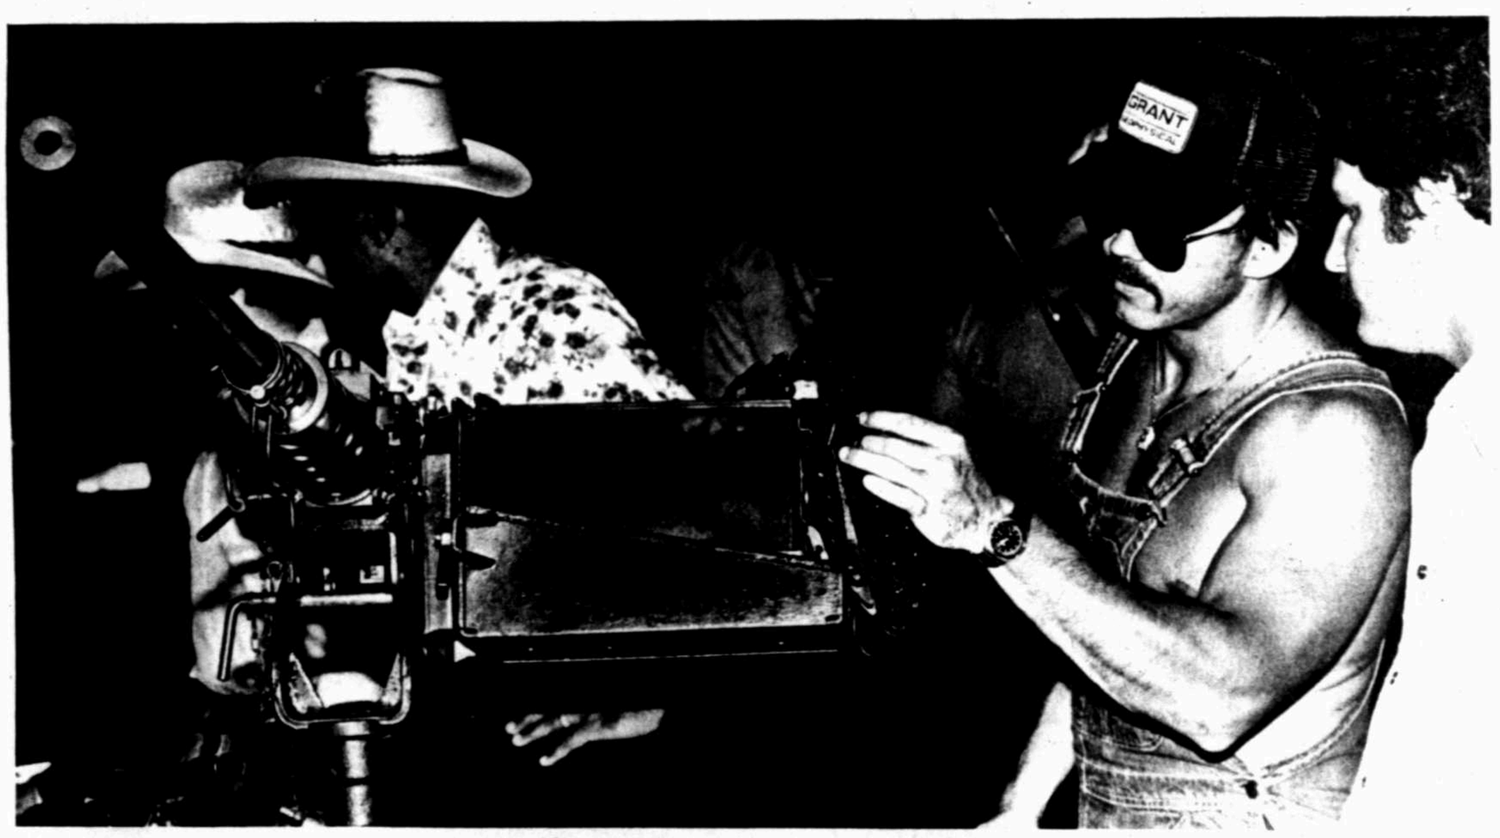

And the Accents Beauty Salon at 3310 N. Midkiff Road said an undetermined number of ceiling fans was taken in a weekend burglary of the establishment.

Tuesday's high could hit 100 degrees

Despite partly cloudy skies and a 20 percent chance of rain tonight, Tuesday should be a little warmer with a high near 100.

Winds should shift from 5 to 10 mph and southeasterly tonight to 10-15 mph and southerly Tuesday.

Sunday's high of 94 was a cool 12 degrees below the 1980 record high of 106, although the overnight low of 70 was only 9 degrees warmer than the 1974 record low of 61.

London transit strike causes 'chaos'

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE

LONDON (AP) — Millions of commuters, stranded by the first combined rail and subway strike since 1926, took to the highways in droves today, creating huge traffic jams around London and locking the capital "in a grip of steel."

Scotland Yard said it was the worst traffic congestion the city has ever experienced and told motorists stuck on major highways from populous Essex county east of London to turn around and go home.

"The chaos has overrun our wildest nightmares," said a spokesman for the Royal Automobile Club, which said the morning rush-hour began two hours before normal and was still growing at midday with an estimated 600,000 cars either crammed into London or stymied at the outskirts. Traffic was reported jammed up a total of 80 miles on roads leading into the capital.

"There is no longer any on-street parking space left in the heart of London, yet still there are big jams on approach roads as thousands try to get into the capital," he said. "London is locked in a grip of steel."

Greater London is the workplace for one-third of the nation's 24-million-member work force. Two million passengers ride British Rail every day, 1.75 million ride the subway and 3.5 million more ride buses. On a normal day, 80 percent of workers commuting into central London use public transport: 435,000 by subway, 411,00 by railroad and 103,000 by bus.

THE STRIKING RAILROAD carries two million passengers daily nationwide.

An open-ended strike by the National Union of Railwaymen, kindled by a pay dispute, strangled the 11,000-mile state-run railroad network, British Rail.

The capital was already entering the second week of a subway strike and some of its bus drivers struck Sunday in sympathy with the railwaymen, one week ahead of their own scheduled strike over salaries.

The move posed the sharpest union challenge yet to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's 3-year-old Conservative government.

The Automobile Association said traffic into London began building up as early as 3 a.m. "We have never experienced such traffic at night before," a spokesman said. The organization said morning London traffic was four times normal and described the city as "virtually under siege."

State-owned British Rail said hundreds of workers defied the union and showed up for work, allowing some trains to get out. But service was spotty.

Rail union General Secretary Sidney Weighell claimed "99 percent support" from rank-and-file members for the union's first nationwide strike since 1926. Another rail union halted trains in 1955, but London subways operated during that strike.

LONDON TOOK the worst beating from the shutdown. A police spokesman in Manchester, the nation's sixth-largest city, said there had been "absolutely no problems."

Transport Secretary David Howell denounced the rail walkout as "war upon the public," but said he will not intervene to end it.

A special rail committee, headed by Home Secretary and deputy prime minister William Whitelaw, met to decide how the government would handle the dispute. It could be faced with using troops to move needed freight, but that likely would harden the strike.

Hotels, already crowded with summer tourists, reported booming business, as companies took all available rooms for their employees. The government and some businesses set up dormitories in their buildings for key staff members.

With no end to the rail strike in sight, union boss Weighell predicted a long struggle unless the British Rail Board gives up its insistence that any pay increase must be tied to productivity.

"A solution rests with the British Rail Board and the government," Weighell said. Unless they meet our terms "the strike might go on for a long time."

IN RETURN for a 5 percent pay hike, the railroad wants the union to reduce the size of train crews and accept other manpower cuts that the union fears will cost it jobs.

Gas prices jump but should steady

By CAROLYN SKORNECK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The retail price of gasoline has jumped almost two cents a gallon in the last two weeks, but oil industry analyst Dan Lundberg predicts the price should remain steady through the summer.

The average price across the nation reached $1.29, a jump of 1.8 cents, placing the cost about halfway between the three-year low of $1.20 a gallon in April and the all-time high of $1.38 in March 1981, Lundberg said Sunday.

But vacationers should take heart, he said, because, "stabilization has been setting in." For the past three surveys of 17,000 stations around the nation, "almost all of the stations have moved up their prices — some more, some less. But over the past weekend, over half of the stations stood pat. They were holding the line where they were," he said.

Lundberg predicted gas prices this summer would range from a low of $1.21 per gallon for regular leaded at a self-service pump to a high of $1.46 for premium unleaded at a full-service pump.

An average increase of about 9 cents during the past two months has been caused by pressures building over the past year — when prices were dropping by almost 20 cents, he said.

"The 20-cent cut didn't increase sales. It didn't get (the refineries) anything," Lundberg said. "With volume etched away, they had no alternative but to get more (profit) margin or they wouldn't be viable companies."

The oil companies also squeezed dealers by tightening credit, demanding cash at the time gasoline was delivered, in some cases, he said. Service station operators now have an average markup of 8.58 cents per gallon, a three-year low, he said.

Shuttle carries more than military experiments

BY PAUL RECER

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The top-secret Pentagon experiments are getting most of the attention on Columbia's fourth flight, but the mission carries an array of nonmilitary tests — including two that use the astronauts themselves as specimens.

During their seven days in space, astronauts Ken Mattingly and Henry Hartsfield will activate experiments in research fields ranging from weather forecasting to the growth of plants.

Eight students from Utah State University and one from Weber State in Utah packaged their ideas together in a 2-foot-high canister for what is called a Getaway Special, a program in which privately financed experiments are flown aboard the shuttle when there is room in the cargo bay.

On Sunday, the astronauts were unable to activate this package of experiments, but they were to attempt it again today.

The package includes biology experiments to test the effects of zero gravity on the growth of brine shrimp, fruit flies, algae and duckweed. The plants and animals will grow during the mission and then be preserved for study later on the ground.

Three students designed tests of melting metals. Two types of solder and a metal alloy will be heated separately to a liquid and then allowed to cool. When the samples are returned, the students will be able to determine how the materials behaved as liquid in the weightlessness of space. A similar test uses an epoxy resin-graphite mix. These studies may be important in learning how to join metals or mix composites in orbit, skills important in development of large structures in space.

The astronauts are the test subjects in experiments designed by two high school students.

Amy Kusske, 16, of Long Beach, Calif. will study the effects of weightlessness on the production of lipoproteins, a component in the blood that may influence the development of heart disease.

Mattingly and Hartsfield will record what foods they eat and the amount of exercise they perform during the mission. Both food and exercise are thought to affect lipoprotein production. After Columbia lands, blood samples will be taken from the astronauts. The lipoprotein profiles in the post-flight samples will be compared with the samples taken before the mission.

In this way, Miss Kusske hopes to determine if space has any effect on the blood chemistry. This could help medical science understand how the lipoproteins contribute to coronary disease.

Karla Hauersperger, 17, of Charlotte, N.C., will study the effects of space travel on chromium levels. Chromium is present when insulin is produced and it is known that insulin production decreases during space travel.

Miss Hauersperger will compare the levels of chromium in blood and urine samples taken before and after the mission and then corrolate these data with the foods that were eaten on the mission.

The astronauts will use a special camera to study lightning from their unique perspective in space. Principal investigator Bernard Vonnegut of the State University of New York, Albany, believes pictures from the camera system may help weather forecasters better understand the nature of lightning and, eventually, make more accurate predictions of when and where it will occur.

Astronaut Hartsfield will use a robot arm to pick up a desk-sized experiment package called the Induced Environment Contamination Monitor. The package contains 11 instruments that will measure gases, pressures and contaminants coming from the spacecraft.

The IECM will be lifted from its cradle in the cargo bay and manuevered outside the spacecraft. Instruments will pick up molecules of gas and particles of dust floating away from the craft. At one point, the astronauts will fire rocket jets and the experiment will sample the gases and pressures given off by the small thrusters.

The purpose is to better understand how the spacecraft is affecting the space environment. Scientists need this information to calibrate experiments that will be flown in the future.

Two industrial experiments are also being flown for the second time.

A package sponsored by McDonnell Douglas Astronautics and by Ortho Pharmaceuticals will use electric current to separate biological molecules in a mixture.

Alcoholism most common undiagnosed illness

Dear Dr. Solomon: How common is alcoholism in our country? — George, Bryan, Texas

Dear George: Alcoholism is the most common undiagnosed illness of the entire population of the United States, about 10 percent.

Dear Dr. Solomon: What is hypertension? — A.S., Los Angeles, Calif.

Dear A.S.: Hypertension is another word for high blood pressure. It is of concern, because it is linked with increased risk of heart attacks and strokes.

Solomon

Dear Dr. Solomon: The term "morbid" obesity is an upsetting one. What exactly does it stand for? — A.D., Miami, Fla.

Dear A.D.: I agree. It is a very upsetting term. But it is a useful one in emphasizing the serious health hazards associated with extreme obesity. People having a body weight twice or more the average desirable level as defined by life insurance standards fit into the morbidly obese category.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My mother sometimes forgets I'm a married woman now and treats me like she did 20 years ago. The latest is that she's after me to go to a doctor because my feet have been bothering me. I'm a salesgirl and I'm on my feet a good deal of the time during the day, so I'd expect them to hurt. Anyway, what is a doctor going to do for me? — Ruth, New York, N.Y.

Dear Ruth: I can understand your annoyance at being treated like a small child, but I would urge you not to let your feelings prevent you from following through on your mother's suggestion. Even a stopped clock shows the correct time twice a day. The fact is that aching feet may be the initial indication of a number of disorders, including arthritis. Or you may have suffered an injury that you are not aware of.

In any event, the cause of painful feet should be explored. If nothing else, your physician may be able to recommend shoes or supports that might ease the discomfort.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've just gone through a rough couple of weeks. My father had a gallbladder operation even though he is 76 years of age. Fortunately, he got through the operation all right and is recovering nicely. But I know of lots of people who have gallbladder trouble and don't have operations. Wouldn't you have waited before operating on a person my father's age? — Don, Queens, N.Y.

Dear Don: Waited for what? Your father would not have gotten any younger. You do not include any details of the events leading to the decision to operate, but your letter suggests that the surgery was elective rather than on an emergency basis. Neither do you say anything about the extent of the discomfort your father was experiencing before it was decided that he required surgery.

Unitarian membership increases

BRUNSWICK, Maine (AP) — Intellectual backlash against theology of the "religious right" has helped spur membership in the Unitarian Universalist Association, its president says.

"As the religious right has put on pressure, has grown and ... become involved in social and political issues, many persons who did not think it necessary to speak out or have the support of a group are now seeing that they need this kind of support," said the Rev. O. Eugene Pickett during the church's 21st General Assembly here last week.

Pickett, 56, said members "are looking to the liberal church to take a stand opposing many of the ... policies and programs that the new religious right is promoting."

Teachers' unions may unite against tax credits

WASHINGTON — America's two giant teacher unions begin their annual conventions this week, hoping to bury their rivalry temporarily and unite in opposition to President Reagan's proposal for private school tuition tax credits.

The 1.6 million-member National Education Association will hold its 120th annual meeting in Los Angeles from July 1 to 6. The 564,000-member American Federation of Teachers gathers for the 66th time in New York from July 2 to 7.

The two unions have long differed in style as well as size, and the conventions are expected to reflect those differences. Both groups are considering resolutions supporting a freeze on nuclear weapons — a measure expected to pass at the NEA convention, but have a difficult time at the AFT.

But the unions are very much alike when it comes to opposing most of President Reagan's education policies. Both have fought especially hard against a Reagan proposal to grant federal tax credits of up to $500 a year per pupil to parents who send their children to private school.

Teacher delegates to the two conventions will consider — for the first time ever — a joint NEA-AFT resolution attacking the Reagan proposal.

The unions also face a challenge from an American public skeptical about the quality of public education, according to a new Associated Press-NBC News poll.

A telephone poll of 1,597 people conducted June 14-15 found that 57 percent of those surveyed felt they could not instruct their children as well as teachers, but 38 percent said they could do just as well or better.

In an interview in his Washington office, Albert Shanker, virtually certain to win a fifth two-year term as AFT president, characterized his union's mood this summer as one of "grim determination. I think there is more confidence. But let's face it, Ronald Reagan is going to be with us another three years."

Similarly, NEA president Willard McGuire, completing his second and final two-year term, said his union is determined to use political clout to keep education dollars flowing.

To that end, 1982 election politics will likely fill the air at both conventions and both unions are building their political war chests.

The NEA's Political Action Committee has raised $673,000, twice its previous high. Ken Melley, the union's political director, says he hopes to raise $1 million this year and $4 million for 1984.

Rachelle Horowitz, political director of the AFT, said the union has donated $150,000 to political candidates this year and hopes to hit $275,000 by November.

Other issues certain to come before the two conventions are teacher layoffs and salaries.

The NEA lost 41,265 members this year because of tight education money and layoffs, and the AFT lost nearly 15,000.

Salaries also are a chronic worry. The NEA says teacher salaries have been eroded by inflation during the 1970s. The average teacher earned $18,976 this past school year.

The AP-NBC poll found 45 percent of those polled said teachers are underpaid, 36 percent said they are paid about right, and 10 percent said they are overpaid, with the rest unsure.

Still, teachers are meeting this year in a more hopeful atmosphere than last summer. Education lobbyists staved off Reagan's deepest cuts in federal programs for disadvantaged children and the handicapped. And the Department of Education, created just three years ago after heavy lobbying but threatened with extinction by Reagan, seems safe for the time being.

Despite the gesture toward cooperation the unions plan on the tuition tax credit issue, peace between the AFT and NEA is not at hand. Renewed merger talks, last attempted in the early 1970s, are not in sight.

'Smart folks' meet in East

EWING TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Some of the world's brightest people came here looking for good jokes and clever conversation.

More than 700 members of Mensa, a society limited to people with high IQs, flocked to Trenton State College this weekend from Kansas, Saipan, New Zealand and Oregon to spend three days among their own kind.

No one is admitted to the society unless their IQ is at least 130 — the top 2 percent of all people who take the intelligence test.

Mensa has 52,000 members worldwide and 43,000 in the United States. The organization holds monthly meetings where ideas can be shared on a local level and it sponsors a newsletter that covers as wide a range of topics as the members cover in their walks of life.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, June 29, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Slugger Harmon Killebrew, whom many people hope to see voted into the Baseball Hall of Fame this year, celebrates this birthday with you. The months ahead should bring you major advances in both business and your personal life. The financial outlook shows several exciting new opportunities. Just remember that creative enterprises and real estate deals will produce the best results.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Business affairs look exciting. A direct approach works better than the old dodger game. Resist the temptation to tell someone off!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Show your loyalty to someone who has served you well in the past. Be forgiving of human error. An old debt is repaid with interest.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Time and experience are on your side. A former associate offers valuable insights regarding new projects. Partnerships bring both excitement and extra cash into your life.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Problem involving your mate or partner deserve top priority. Discuss your joint plans and mutual responsibilities. Be patient with those who are less experienced.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do not feel offended by what seems to be someone's lack of strong principles. Steer clear of authority figures who are unreasonable.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Exercise greater control over spending. You get the full support of those in authority. Moonlighting helps you beat inflation but it could cause romance to suffer.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Pay greater attention to mate or partner's whims. Mystery is cleared up when you analyze the situation. Seek cooperation regarding family budget.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Expert advice pays off handsomely when buying or selling stocks. Someone who has been antagonistic in the past could now become a valuable ally.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Solo efforts produce the best results at work. Afternoon brings a welcome change. A little effort goes a long way to patch up your differences with a loved one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Clear away leftover work. Take advantage of your social opportunities: new contacts or business could result. A positive approach helps unravel a credit problem.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Business affairs or ambitions accelerate during the morning. Afternoon shows a need for more discipline and better pacing. Opt for intellectual activities.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Check travel arrangements if going on a business trip. You can expect a surprising twist in romance. Avoid chatting with office gossips and misinformed people.

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠952 ♡63 ◇10764 ♣AQ52
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	1 ♠	Dble	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♡	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—Partner must have a very strong hand and at least a six-card heart suit, so bid four hearts. Don't worry about the fact that you have only a low doubleton in partner's suit. He has told you that he expects to make nine tricks with hearts as trumps opposite a possible bust. Since you have two possible tricks for him, you owe him a vote of confidence.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ1054 ♡6 ◇KQ962 ♣J6
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Even though you have a full opening bid, this hand must be discounted because of the obvious misfit. Therefore, we would not commit ourselves to game, but would be content with a simple forward-going move. The most likely game is in no trump, and we would suggest that to partner by bidding two no trump now.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK5 ♡854 ◇K10965 ♣AK
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	3 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—When you hold three-card support for the major suit in which partner has jumped after your no trump opening, it is usually correct to raise him to game. Here, however, all your points are outside of your partner's suit, so the hand could play better at no trump. Bid three no trump. If partner is highly distributional, he has the option of continuing the search for a suit contract.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A62 ♡K ◇KJ106532 ♣92
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	2 ◇	2 ♠	3 ◇
Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Despite your minimum in terms of high cards for a vulnerable overcall, partner's raise and his known shortness in the opponents' suit greatly increase the playing strength of your hand. You could easily have a game in no trump or five diamonds. To determine the limit of the hand, the best approach is to cue-bid the ace of spades. If partner bids three no trump, pass. But, if he returns to diamonds, accept his decision, regardless of the level.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKQ10763 ♡5 ◇A9842
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—It is always difficult to bid freak hands accurately, so we sympathize if you elected to leap to six spades. However, a bid of three diamonds has much to recommend it. If partner can raise diamonds, or jump to game in spades, which shows a useful feature in your second suit, you can bid the slam with a high degree of confidence. But if partner does no more than return to three spades, we would content ourselves with a quiet raise to four spades.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J ♡AJ98532 ◇7 ♣A1087
The bidding has proceeded:

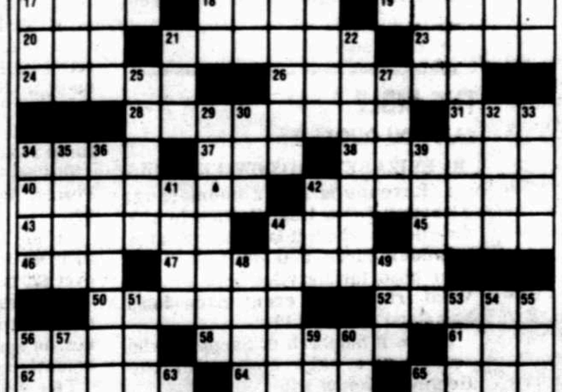

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Because of your great playing strength, you should be quite willing to commit the hand to slam. However, a grand slam could be laydown if partner has the right cards. We suggest a cue-bidding sequence, starting with four clubs, to find out whether partner has two aces and second-round club control. If he has, all 13 tricks should be easy.

Staying on course

Other nations surely must sit back from time to time and shake their collective heads bemusedly at the United States. The action — and the inaction — of our government's leaders does cause all of us to stare blankly and chuckle to ourselves at times.

Back when Ronald Reagan was merely trying to become "Mr. President" inflation was rampant, the national debt was climbing and, well, Americans needed to spend money they didn't have to build up a defense they knew they needed but also knew they couldn't afford.

We all got together and elected Reagan to the presidency on a number of his promises such as bringing inflation under control (which he has done, incidentally, if you'll check this year's inflation rate), building up the nation's defenses (a project currently under way) and putting America's economy back in order (which in turn would help the world's economic picture).

To make a long story a bit shorter, at that time facing those economic and other pressures, the option chosen by a majority of those who voted for Reagan was to give him a shot at putting things back in order. Now while it's true that Mr. Reagan enjoyed a particularly long honeymoon at the start of his term, it came to a crashing halt when he convinced the Congress to begin taking the necessary actions to protect us from ourselves. Budgets were cut, programs were abolished and rather quickly Americans realized austerity just wasn't all that hot.

During the last five months Americans and others throughout the world have watched as the Congress has wrestled with the 1983 budget, finally ending up with one calling for $769.8 billion in spending and a projected deficit of $103.9 billion.

The new budget is controversial because it calls for tax increases and reductions in social programs. There's little doubt that the fighting is far from over.

It seems that before the Congress gets too embroiled in its election-year infighting, it should remember what Americans were hoping to accomplish when they elected Mr. Reagan and other conservatives. We wanted a course charted out of our economic dilemma. That course has been charted and the voyage has begun. But it's far from over. Falling back into old ways will only steer us astray.

That's important to remember because the mistakes of the past can be repeated so easily. And the entire world is watching.

Let moderation guide

The meat industry, not too surprisingly, is up in arms over a new report by a special unit of the National Academy of Sciences which suggests that Americans can reduce the risk of getting cancer by eating less fatty meat.

Meat was not singled out by the committee, but it led the list of foods high in fat, along with whole milk dairy products and cooking oils. Americans also were advised to eat very little of foods (especially meats) that have been salt cured, pickled or smoked, to drink alcoholic beverages in moderation, and to eat more whole-grain cereal products, fruits and vegetables.

Spokesmen for the meat industry point out that a report last year from the Food and Nutrition Board of the National Academy of Sciences said there was no need for the average healthy American to be overly concerned about fat intake. That report focused on heart disease, but confusion about the apparent contradiction is understandable.

Still, we doubt that this latest report will scare Americans away from ham, bacon, sausages, lochs, hot dogs, bologna, that it will empty out the bars, or cause a run on natural food supplies. If a diet were to be mandated from Washington, Americans probably would order the exact opposite course.

One diet course that makes sense — and finds no disagreement from the National Livestock & Meat Board — is to eat a balanced and varied diet, composed of foods from all food groups, and containing a reasonable caloric intake.

Moderation should guide every menu.

Another View:

Misdirected criticism

Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan Monday criticized "elected officials" who, he said, believe in the "wonderland school of justice that stands for judgment now, trial later." There is no question but that Mr. Donovan has suffered prolonged and perhaps avoidable embarrassment from the slow leak of derogatory information about him over the last year and a half. But his anger is misplaced.

The elected officials to whom Mr. Donovan referred are presumably the members of the Senate who have themselves been severely embarrassed by gradual illumination of the fact that, in voting to confirm Mr. Donovan last year, they did so without an opportunity to weigh highly relevant information.

Let us be quite clear about the nature of this information. None of it, so far as is now known, establishes any criminal culpability on Mr. Donovan's part. Some of it does allege that Mr. Donovan or his firm engaged in possibly illegal activities involving labor payoffs, bid-rigging and other questionable labor practices. Other charges merely link Mr. Donovan socially or through business with people known or said to be involved in organized crime. Most of the information was gathered by the FBI or other agencies through informants, some of whom have not been publicly named and some of whom are now dead.

There are many different allegations, but none of them has been proved in any sense — legal or otherwise. Determining whether cause exists to suspect Mr. Donovan of indictable offenses is now the job of Leon Silverman, the special prosecutor appointed last January. Even if Mr. Silverman should find evidence of wrongdoing, no legal judgment can be made without regular court proceedings.

The Senate, however, had a role in the Donovan matter quite different from the determination of legal innocence or guilt. At the start of the Reagan administration, the Senate was called upon to confirm the president's judgment that Mr. Donovan was fit to be his principal labor adviser and a member of the Cabinet. Association with anyone, even mobsters, is no proof of criminal involvement. But such ties — particularly if they involve labor dealings — were certainly pertinent to the Senate's decision.

It is now clear that important information was withheld from the Senate by incoming administration officials at the time of the confirmation hearings. Senators were misled both then and subsequently with respect to the thoroughness of the FBI's initial investigation and the full extent of the information available to the administration.

The delayed release of that evidence has troubled Mr. Donovan, but it has also, quite properly, troubled the Senate. If Mr. Donovan has been ill-served by the process of his confirmation and subsequent investigation, his quarrel should be with the administration which directed that process and which must now decide upon his fitness for continued service.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Wilson's testimony could embarrass CIA

WASHINGTON — Ed Wilson, the renegade CIA agent who was lured into a trap by the Justice Department, has an ace in the hole: his testimony. Consider the embarrassment he could cause by testifying about just two episodes at a public trial:

Jack Anderson

1. — Wilson was on the CIA's payroll — and doing the agency's bidding — all the time he was employed by the largest labor union in the United States as its international representative in Europe.

2. — He served as an advance man for Hubert Humphrey in the 1964 campaign — thus playing an active role in partisan politics — while still working for the CIA.

These confessions were made by Wilson on tape before he left Libya and was ensnared by the Justice Department. I arranged for him to tape more than three hours of candid, wide-ranging reminiscences of his days as an undercover agent for the CIA and naval intelligence. The tapes were made in Tripoli by Richard Bast, a private detective who specializes in intrigue and served as the intermediary.

Wilson offered to take a lie-detector test as evidence that he was telling the truth. The test was being arranged by my associates Dale Van Atta and Indy Badhwar when Wilson was lured from his Libyan sanctuary, captured in the Dominican Republic and hustled off to the slammer in the United States.

For years the communist press has accused practically every American working abroad of being a CIA hireling. Most of the time, the charges have been pure borscht. But in Wilson's case, there was a CIA connection. Here's his account:

Wilson "was able to wangle a job from the CIA," as he put it, after the Korean War. His first assignment was to provide security for the CIA's super-secret U-2 spy plane in California. He accompanied the U-2 to England, Germany and finally Turkey, where he served until the Russians shot down Francis Gary Powers and the whole project with him. Wilson was then transferred to the CIA's international organizations division.

"On this assignment, I was able to find a job on my own, without any help from the agency, with the Seafarers International Union in New York," he recalled. The union's leadership was never told he was with the CIA, as far as Wilson knows.

"Our role was to use (the union) as a vehicle to arrive overseas where you could be effective in work against communists," he said.

As the union's international representative in Europe, Wilson was able to inform the CIA "about smuggling of arms and ammunition by seamen into Cuba and into South America." He could also stir up trouble for European unions that "were kind of getting along with the communists," he said.

"We kind of helped foment a strike by the communists," he explained, "which kind of positioned them, got them out front, and the governments took certain actions against them. It was quite effective, I thought, to lessen the influence of the communist unions in Europe."

After two years of this activity, things got a little too hot for Wilson. His wife and children were arrested by the Belgian police at one point. The Seafarers, still ignorant of his CIA status, brought him home and assigned him to AFL-CIO headquarters. "George Meany at the time wanted someone to work for him in international activities in the Far East," Wilson said. "So I made a three- or four-month tour of the Far East."

His union work in Washington opened the way for him to work with the late Hubert Humphrey's vice-presidential campaign. He made contacts in Congress and elsewhere in Washington that were to prove invaluable.

Footnote: A series of columns, beginning Oct. 20, 1980, focused on Frank Terpil and Edwin Wilson, both ex-CIA agents, who were training and equipping alleged assassination squads for Libya's radical ruler, Muammar Qaddafi. Eight months later, The New York Times began a series of front-page stories covering the same material.

DISTAFF DISCONTENT: Republican women were griping at their party's recent national committee meeting. Not only has President Reagan failed to appoint enough women to high posts in his administration, they complained, but his White House staff is a nest of male chauvinists.

When a GOP leader defensively mentioned White House adviser Elizabeth Dole, a woman from the Republicans' Middle American heartland sniffed, "Even out where I am, we know she doesn't have any clout."

On another point, the women noted that the recently appointed National Labor Advisory Council has 13 male union leaders but not a single female unionist, though women make up 43 percent of the workforce and 28 percent of organized labor.

"I don't want a job," said one Republican woman, "but I sure would like to know I'd be treated fairly if I did. And right now I wouldn't be."

POLISH PIPELINE: Underground sources say Poland's military leaders are so troubled that the government press office called in a group of psychiatrists. The flacks wanted to know why Solidarity is still so popular, why martial law is so resented and why the term "socialism" is in such ill repute. The shrinks' advice: Don't show the army on TV so much.

— Man-in-the-street interviews on Polish television are screened in more ways than one. The camera crew is accompanied by two policemen, and the interview doesn't proceed until the subject's identity card is thoroughly checked.

INSIDE REPORT:

PLO disserves many, but itself most of all

OCCUPIED LEBANON — Israel's accusation against the PLO as a rogue elephant whose arms and swagger created resentment and fear in Lebanon's largest cities was no fabrication.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

That becomes clearer as the initial shock of the Israeli invasion dissipates and the Lebanese, picking up the threads of life, start talking.

The PLO was born out of Israel's statehood in Palestine and its later occupation of the West Bank and Gaza, creating generations of refugees. Once incorruptible, its extraordinary success in accumulating arms and money despite political failure to retrieve part of its land has made the PLO itself an occupying power — a power without responsibility.

The ambition of the PLO — Palestinian self-determination on the West Bank — remains an exemplary cause that President Reagan may soon decide needs redemption. But the PLO's methods of attaining it in Lebanese cities we visited up to Beirut tend to support Israel's claim that the PLO has become permeated by thugs and adventurers.

"The worst elements in the PLO took over from the best," a Christian Lebanese surgeon told us in Sidon. A whiff of decaying flesh was in the air from bodies rotting under tons of debris bulldozed off the main streets.

We encountered the surgeon by chance. We asked him how the people of Sidon like the Israeli invaders. His answer: "If you want to know, come to my farm and see."

The farm, on a strategic hilltop overlooking the harbor, had been taken over without negotiation, compensation or advance notice by local PLO commanders in 1974. The house was littered with the refuse of six years — filthy uniforms, broken chairs, slogans on the walls. That was the least of it. Two small barns were packed with munitions, guns, dynamite, detonators, even made-in-America helmets still in their crates.

Hidden in the orchard were two heavy-artillery pieces. In a shed in the pig pen were dozens of unopened cartons of hand grenades. The wreckage of 12 automobiles, said by the surgeon-farmer to have been "requisitioned" by the PLO down in the city, littered the front yard.

"You ask how do we like the Israelis," the doctor said. "Now you can see. Compared to the hell we have had in Lebanon, the Israelis are brothers."

While the PLO occupied and ravaged his farm, the surgeon-farmer lived in a small downtown apartment. But for the 60,000 Lebanese in Sidon (a population that had swelled with 240,000 Palestinian refugees by the time the Israeli army arrived), surviving the PLO was another kind of hell.

A young teacher told us about it. A shi'ite Moslem, she had lost an uncle killed in the Israeli invasion. Her brother was being held by the Israelis. That would seem to be reason for anger, but there was none. "We have not been able to keep our schools open," she told us. The PLO toughs made classrooms too dangerous. Girls were molested. Schools shut down.

With her were three other young Lebanese: a Maronite Christian, a Shi'ite Moslem and a Sunni Moslem. Each in turn told a similar story: an apartment taken over by the PLO, cars stolen, thievery in town up by a recorded 5,000 percent, vineyards and orchards ruined.

Israeli soldiers were conspicuous everywhere in Tyre and Sidon on our June 22 visit. They represented a totality of military power inconceivable to the only people contiguous to the Jewish state never — until June 6 — invaded by the might of Israel.

Yet, in the two cities of Tyre and Sidon, there is reason to believe the Israeli casualty count: a total 250 killed and less than 1,000 wounded.

Perhaps those low casualties had some impact on the Lebanese when the shooting stopped. Perhaps the final outcome in Beirut will change opinions even here. But that seemed unlikely.

More probable in the aftermath of the Lebanese invasion is this: The PLO is justly accused of a grave disservice to the people who took them in here and to the people they represent. To themselves, the disservice is greatest of all.

CHARLEY REESE

Watergate just excuse to 'get' Nixon

The self-righteous regurgitation of Watergate by the national press is sickening. What was originally blown way out of proportion to justify the lynching of Richard Nixon has long since become a dead and boring issue.

Charley Reese

By now, everyone knows that the only difference between Nixon and his predecessors was that he got caught. What he got caught at was trying to save some dunderheads who bungled a burglary, the purpose of which was to put a bug on a telephone to find out if Fidel Castro was in fact funnelling money into the Democratic campaign.

It's interesting to note that despite all the malarkey about how allegedly dangerous and sinister Watergate was, the only people who got hurt were Nixon and the Watergate guys. The Democrats swept the congressional elections and later the White House; Daniel Ellsberg, who gave classified papers to the press, became a folk hero; Dan Rather became the CBS anchor man; and the Washington Post won a Pulitzer Prize it didn't have to give back.

The casualties were the Nixons, their aides, the FBI, the CIA and the country. If you credit Jimmy Carter's election to Watergate, then the country suffered most.

I was already mad at Nixon before Watergate even surfaced. I was mad because of his policy of one-sided detente, because of Henry Kissinger, because of wage and price controls and back-to-back deficits. I voted for Nixon's re-election beause I would have voted for a frog before I would have voted for George McGovern.

Nixon has always struck me as a tragic figure — a brilliant man with great potential but a fatal flaw in his character. He could stand up against communists, but not against the rich. He always sold out to the Rockefeller wing of the party which happens to be, among other things, the least trustworthy wing of the party.

Eastern liberals, of course, never forgave Nixon for having nailed Alger Hiss in the 1950s, thus tying a Soviet agent to the Eastern Establishment. Hiss, for those of you who don't recall, was a highly regarded State Department official who was convicted of perjury for denying under oath he had turned over U.S. documents to the Soviet Union.

It's been said that Nixon's siege mentality led him to the errors of judgment that brought his downfall, but he had good reason to have a siege mentality because he was under siege from a national press corps which never liked him and to this day relishes every chance to celebrate his mistakes and ignore his achievements.

Europeans still regard him as one of our greatest presidents and I think he was certainly one of our better ones, Watergate notwithstanding. He bombed the hell out of Hanoi until they coughed up our POWs and he backed down the Russians when they threatened to intervene in the October War in the Middle East.

If he had not had Rockefeller's lackey, Kissinger, whispering in his ear, and if he had hired a better staff, he might have finished out his term and become one of the nation's honored elder statesmen. But there is no point in kicking over old rocks.

What we had better remember is that it's a mean world we live in and nobody out there is going to do our job for us. We need leaders with Nixon's toughness, we need a strong CIA and FBI, and we need to understand that on today's globe, the self-righteous but weak end up in the ash heap.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, June 28, the 179th day of 1982. There are 186 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 28, 1914, Austria's Archduke Ferdinand and his wife were assassinated at Sarajevo by a Bosnian revolutionary, igniting World War I.

On this date:

In 1942, the British 8th Army retreated from the Germans to El Alamein in North Africa during World War II.

In 1950, North Korean forces captured Seoul, South Korea.

In 1956, labor riots were put down in Poznan, Poland, with a heavy loss of life.

In 1979, OPEC approved its largest oil increase in five years, pushing prices over $20 barrel.

Ten years ago: President Nixon ordered that no future military draftees be sent to Vietnam unless they volunteered for duty there.

Five years ago: Government control over Richard Nixon's presidential papers and tape recordings was upheld by the Supreme Court.

One year ago: An explosion destroyed the headquarters of Iran's ruling Islamic Party in Tehran, killing more than 70 people.

Today's birthday: British writer Eric Ambler is 73 years old.

Oregon firemen hurt in freak accident

MILL CITY, Ore. (AP) — A pumper truck arriving at the scene of an accident struck three volunteer firemen, injuring one and killing another — the driver's brother-in-law, authorities said.

Clyde E. Golden, 68, was dead on arrival at Santiam Hospital in Stayton after the accident Sunday near this town in the Cascade Mountains, said state police Trooper Richard Harp.

Police said the truck, moving at 10 to 15 mph, was driven by Golden's brother-in-law, Mill City Fire Chief Eldon Hutchinson, 64.

The injured fireman, Russell D. Goffin, 20, was in serious condition at the Salem Hospital Memorial Unit after treatment for a head injury.

Harp said a third fireman, Michael Ohrt, was only brushed by the slow-moving truck.

The firefighters had responded to a report of a fire in a car

Aliens keep 'low profile'

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The federal government is cracking down on Mexicans who cross the border illegally to search for work in fields in Florida and California.

So far this year, more than 1,000 Mexicans have been rounded up and sent back to their homeland, authorities say.

With a lighter-than-usual workload since the wave of Cuban and Haitian refugees the past two years has subsided, U.S. Border Patrol agents have started concentrating on rounding up Mexicans for the long bus ride back to the border.

Texas-trained agents are routinely raiding fields and groves, setting up roadblocks to check labor buses and searching farm camps.

Some 630 undocumented Mexicans were deported in May, and 480 in April. In February and March, about 100 each month were sent home. But so far in June, only 50 Mexicans have been deported. Agents fear the aliens are wary of the crackdown.

"The aliens are not quite as easy to catch," said Dan Gibson, chief of the Border Patrol's office in West Palm Beach. "They're definitely keeping a low profile."

Federal officials believe deporting illegal aliens from Florida and California farm fields will frustrate the illegal workers more effectively than trying to stop them at the Texas border.

Donovan suit unwarranted due to insufficient evidence

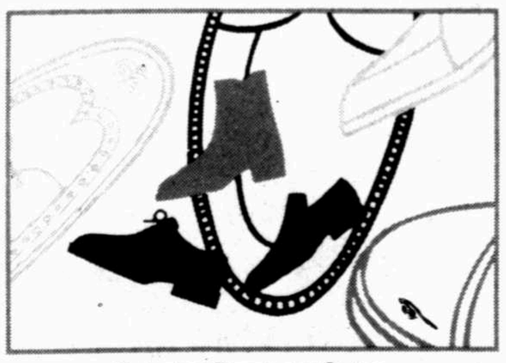

WASHINGTON (AP) — Special Prosecutor Leon Silverman said today "there was insufficient credible evidence" to warrant prosecution of Labor Secretary Raymond J. Donovan on any of a variety of allegations of criminal activity made against him by FBI informants.

"The special prosecutor concludes that no prosecution of the secretary on any of the allegations investigated is warranted or could successfully be maintained," wrote Silverman, concluding a six-month investigation.

On June 18 and June 22, the Brooklyn federal grand jury that was looking into the allegations unanimously decided not to indict Donovan "with respect to all organized crime allegations put before it."

The report said no evidence was found of ties between Donovan and organized figures:

"Extensive investigation produced insufficient credible evidence upon which to base any prosecution that the Secretary was untruthful in his denials (on organized crime ties) either before the Senate Labor Committee or the grand jury, of any and all such associations."

U.S. cotton exports to Korea may increase

LUBBOCK — A series of efforts to increase U.S. cotton exports to Korea has been agreed upon by cotton-promoting organizations and the Korean textile industry.

One of those efforts, engineered by Cotton Inc. (CI), the national fiber-company, and Spinners and Weavers Assocation of Korea (SWAK), "holds more than a little promise for substantial long-term benefits to producers on the High Plains," according to Donald Johnson, executive vice president of the Lubbock-based Plains Cotton Growers Inc.

Cotton Inc. and SWAK will conduct mill tests of Texas High Plains cotton

Now time to control mesquite

COLLEGE STATION — Mesquite and other brush can best be controlled with herbicides in spring and early summer when soil moisture is favorable and the brush is making rapid growth.

"This is the time of year when herbicides can be used effectively in management of brush species," said Dr. Tommy Welch, range brush and weed control specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service of the Texas A&M University System.

Likely the most popular method of brush control is broadcast application of liquid herbicides. By that method, the herbicides poison the plants via the leaves, but how effective the kill is depends on the growing conditions at the time herbicides are applied.

Mesquite is best controlled after the leaves have fully extended and have turned from light to dark green. Other brush species, such as huisache and Macartney, may be sprayed during the fall.

"Soil moisture and soil temperature both influence the effectiveness of foliar herbicides because they affect plant growth," Welch said. "As the soil temperature increases and soil moisture becomes more favorable, plants grow better. And that's when foliar herbicides are most effective."

EPA extends herbicide use

GREENSBORO, N.C — The Environmental Protection Agency has approved the amended labeling for Dual 8E, a herbicide which is to be used before crop planting or before crop seedlings emerge.

The herbicide, which is marketed by CIBA-GEIGY Corp. of Greensboro, N.C., now may be used on an additional 20 crops, including sweet corn, popcorn, cotton, potatoes and pod crops, such as garbanzo, great northern beans, guar, kidney beans, lima beans, mung beans, navy beans, okra, peas, pinto beans and snap beans.

Dual 8E alone is not to be used on seedbeds or on unrooted cuttings, in greenhouses or other enclosed areas.

Big Spring site of 'Round-Up'

BIG SPRING — U.S. Congressman Jim Collins of Dallas will be the "trail-boss" speaker, and fellow Congressman Charles Stenholm, a member of the U.S. House of Representative's Agriculture Committee, will be the "wrangler" speaker in the National Cattlemen's Association's Agriculture Round-Up and Symposium July 10 in the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum here.

Collins will speak at 1:40 p.m., and Stenholm will talk at 8 p.m.

Borden County rancher Rich Anderson will extend the welcome at 1:30 p.m.

The event's symposium will include a talk on "Consumer Demands" by Anne Anderson, director of nutrition services for the Texas Cattle Feeders Association; "Tax Reforms" by Jim Powell, chairman of the NCA and TSCRA tax committees; "Somehow, Nothing Satisfies Like Beef," Hilmar G. Moore, chairman of the Beef Industry Council, National Livestock and Meat Board; "How CowBelles Help," Becky Terry, president of the Texas CowBelles; "Legislative Problems," Dub Waldrip, NCA president elect; "Innovations in Beef," Dr. Dennis Stiffler, meat specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Stenholm, dubbed the No. 1 wrangler at the event's 6 p.m.-midnight event, will speak following the chuckwagon barbecue at 7 p.m.

Cattlemen interested in attending the NCA event may mail their $25 registration fees to Mrs. J.M. Sterling, Route 1, Box 152, Colorado City, Texas 79512 or telephone her at 915-965-3464.

Leaf rust hurts '82 wheat crop

COLLEGE STATION — Leaf rust, a frequent disease problem in wheat, has taken a heavy toll on the 1982 Texas wheat crop.

"Based on last year's wheat yields, losses from leaf rust run as high as 50 percent in some areas," said Dr. Wendell Horne, plant pathologist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service of the Texas A&M University System.

"The disease was so devastating that some wheat fields were never harvested," Horne said.

He said that the disease was caused by a new race of the fungus which infected many wheat varieties. Heretofore, those varieties have had resistance to leaf rust shown by a large increase in wheat acreage over southern sections of Texas. In addition, Horne said that the "almost ideal weather conditions" for wheat production were "equally favorable" for the heavy incidence of leaf rust.

To head off the infestation, Horne recommends that farmers plant more than one wheat variety.

"Farmers should be particularly careful not to plant just one variety that may be resistant to leaf rust," he said.

"Rust as well as some other diseases are more severe where wheat is lush with a lot of leaf area," Horne said.

Agribusiness economist hired

COLLEGE STATION — Dr. Forrest Stegelin has been hired as an agribusiness economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

He will be involved in planning, executing and economically evaluating marketing techniques and alternatives as they relate to agribusiness in Texas. Stegelin held a similar position in Florida for the past three years.

Concrete feedlot wave of future?

GARDEN CITY, Kan. (AP) — The Brookover Ranch Experimental Feedlot has concrete floors and a self-contained waste disposal system. They've paved over the prairie to produce — faster, cheaper and cleaner — leaner steaks and roasts that consumers want.

The experimental system is also designed to operate more efficiently and without the "bad neighbor" image of conventional feedlots.

"THE INDUSTRY is not popular in our society because it makes flies and it stinks and it's dusty and dirty," said Dick Bunger, who designed the concrete feedlot along with Roy Hancock.

"So, we get rid of the dust. We get rid of the odor. We get rid of the flies and we need about 10 percent of the space we needed before."

Bunger said elimination of what cattlemen long have called "the smell of money," could mean feedlots may eventually be more welcome near population centers, thus reducing transportation costs.

Because concrete lots are smaller, truck fuel and maintenance costs are trimmed. And there's no need for cowhands riding around on horses.

When feed trials started at the Brookover Ranch feedlot about a year ago, there was a tendency to overfeed the cattle, said E.C. Brookover Jr., general manager of Brookover Land Enterprises.

"The behavior of the cattle is different. They consume different and they appear different," he said.

Bunger theorizes the cattle are more docile and move around less because they are confined in a smaller space. Less activity leads to more efficient conversion of feed into weight gain.

Cattle in the concrete lot outperformed stock at the Brookover family's conventional feedlots in March by posting a lower cost per pound of gain.

"THE ANIMALS tend to yield better at the packing plant by a rate of almost 2 percent coming out of this facility compared to others," Bunger said. "In today's market, that represents almost $25 an animal. That by itself will pay for the facility in less than two years."

Brookover said concrete feedlot cattle "don't get gobby fat" like their barrel-shaped counterparts in conventional yards. The cattle also yield more uniform carcasses, which can bring a premium at slaughter.

Conventional feedlots have hardpack dirt floors that get muddy or dusty. The mud causes stress in cattle and blowing dirt can cause dust pneumonia. The manure in conventional pens has to be scraped up and hauled away.

At the Brookover lot, eight-inch thick concrete floors are slotted every 15 inches. The slots are the tip of a trademarked Teardrop configuration molded into the concrete. The floor between the slot rises to a ridgeline about three-eighths of an inch higher than the openings.

The rough surface of the floor allows about a one-quarter inch "carpet" of dry manure to build up while the movement of cattle in the pens forces most of the manure and waste feed into the slots.

Water running through the bottom of the Teardrop flushes the wastes into a collection ditch and eventually a settling pond. Some mineral-rich water from the pond is used for crop irrigation, but most of it is recycled back through the feedyard.

During severely cold winter weather, 56-degree well water occasionally is added to the flow to warm the feedyard floors.

Rare Indiana flowering plant to be saved

GOSHEN, Ind. (AP) — A rare flowering plant discovered 38 years ago growing among the weeds along railroad tracks is finally getting some pampering.

The Norfolk and Western Railway recently leased the 1,300-by-30-foot piece of property where the Iliamma Remota, or Kankakee Mallow, grows to the Indiana chapter of the Nature Conservancy, a non-profit environmental group.

THE PLANT is known to grow at only three sites in the world other than Goshen: In two places in Virginia and on an island in the Kankakee River in Illinois. It is about five feet tall and has large pink blossoms.

"It is definitely the rarest plant in Indiana," said Cloyse Hedge, coordinator and ecologist for the Indianax natural Heritage Program of the Department of Natural Resources.

The plant was discovered here on July 4, 1944, by S.W. Witmer, now 93 and a retired Goshen College biology professor.

Witmer says he saw a tall, flowering plant growing near the railroad track and realized he had never seen it. He knew why when he went home and tried to look it up.

But he still couldn't believe he had found a flower so rare.

"I was very much excited. I thought it couldn't be true," Witmer said.

SO HE sent it to the Field Museum in Chicago where the flower's species was verified.

Witmer has kept the plant's location a secret from all except specialists wanting to study it.

"It's not a good idea to throw this open to the public" he said, explaining there are so "many people who have to pick a flower and that shouldn't be done in this case."

Botanists think the plant's native home is the Illinois site, says Lester Zimmer, Indiana field representative for the Nature Conservancy.

"In the '20s, there was a lot of concern for it because the island was the only known spot for it," Zimmer said.

Garden clubs, such as the Chicago Garden Club, used to organize train rides in the 1920s so club members could throw the flower's seeds out the windows. Goshen's flower could have grown from one of these seeds, he added.

Although Goshen's plant may not be the original, the flower patch still excites botanists and conservationists.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Put new life into felt tipped pens

DEAR HELOISE:
I have forgotten what to soak a felt-tip pen or marker in to rejuvenate it. Would you please print it again? — Mary McMiller

+ + +

They sure can dry out in a hurry when the cap's left off.

You have a few options to put new life into that dried-up old pen. One is to put it into a container of food coloring and let it soak up into the felt.

Letting the pen stand in alcohol, or even ink, overnight will give it added life, too.

Sometimes just cutting a tiny bit off the tip of the felt marker will get the fluid flowing again.

Anything's worth a try before having to pay the replacement price. — Heloise

SHINY ALUMINUM

Dear Heloise: The aluminum pot I constantly boiled water in had become very dark on the inside.

Remembering your hint about cream of tartar cleaning aluminum, I mixed about three tablespoons to a quart of water and filled the pan with the solution.

After boiling for a few minutes, the discoloration on the pan disappeared.

A clean pan once again! — E.H.

LETTER OF THOUGHT

Dear Heloise: Recently my mother died and I don't even know what the word 'simmer' means. Could you please tell me where I could get a cooking dictionary that would list the simplest of cooking terms?

And how about a cookbook that tells the very basics of cooking, like how to cook hamburgers, hot dogs, omelets, etc. — Bachelor Alone

+ + +

Moms, take note! I headed this “Letter of Thought” because this came from a sincere gentleman seeking help. How sad his plight.

Waiting on your children hand and foot may seem an act of love to some mothers, but believe me, you're doing more harm than good when you don't teach them to be self-sufficient.

Think about it! — Heloise

P.S. Oh, yes! Check out your local library for all types of culinary (that means cooking) info. — H.

UNMOLDING MOLDS

Dear Heloise: For unmolding those gelatin salads and mousses, just turn the mold upside down on the plate and get out your hair blow dryer, turning it on hot.

Wave it over the mold a few times and the contents will come out easily. Takes only a few seconds and there is no mess to clean up. — Mary C.

ADDED SUPPORT

Dear Heloise: Get some more mileage out of that pair of control top pantyhose that just got a runner.

Cut straight across, just above the crotch. This makes a marvelous mini control-top bra to go under tank tops or spaghetti strap and off-the shoulder sun dresses.

This opens all sorts of possibilities, such as fastening any type of material to the band to have an instant top. — Florine

+ + +

And you sure can't beat the price! — Heloise

EASY POUR

Dear Heloise: If you use a liquid concentrate detergent in your laundry, read on.

Pour the liquid into a bottle with a pull-up spout, then when it comes to pouring a little for “ring around the collar,” it makes the job much easier. — M.S.K.

+ + +

Heloise's readers are just about the richest when it comes to hints. And they're not misers — they like to share. If you have a good hint send it to Heloise, P.O. Box 32000, San Antonio, TX 78216 and let her pass it on.

DEAR ABBY

Teenager's 'high' is not worth the cost

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: We are trying to organize a parent support group to combat teen-age drug abuse in our area. I received some material from Alan B. Machall, chairman of the Alcohol and Drug Program in Clinton, Md. One brochure contained two letters from your column. They were both excellent. Please run them again. And may I have your permission to use them both in a newletter I'm putting together for Parents Against Teen-Age Drug Abuse? Thank you. — MOTHER OF FOUR IN INDIANA

DEAR MOTHER: With pleasure. Here they are:

DEAR ABBY: I was glad to see your warning about angel dust. Everything you said about it was true. It makes you violent and can really mess up your head. I know. I was in high school, ready to graduate, when I smoked that dust. I didn't even know it. I smoked some pot that had been laced with angel dust. I didn't get high. I just went crazy.

I was sent to a mental hospital where I spent three months. I put my poor parents through hell. I'm out now, but I have to see a social worker every week. I'm still on medication, and my head still hurts. But at least I can dress myself and comb my own hair. My biggest fear is that one day I will go completely crazy again and end up back in the hospital. I saw kids there who'd had that experience.

My God, what a terrible price to pay for wanting to get high. Abby, please keep telling kids to stay away from pot. You never know what's in it. I am signing my name and address to prove this letter is not a phony, but if you print it, sign me ... PAID A BIG PRICE

DEAR PAID: If your letter makes just one person say no to pot, it will have been worth space in my column. Thanks for writing. God bless.

DEAR ABBY: I am 23. I began smoking pot at 13. By 17, I had taken LSD and shot heroin. I have been addicted to opiates for two years. I am on the methadone program now. (It's a government-approved substitute for heroin, but I have to get a fix every day.)

If just one young person reads this and takes heed, I will feel that I have accomplished something.

The road to drugs is for fools. A kid starts because he thinks he is being smart. Or because he wants to be “in” with the crowd. Or because he's afraid they will think he's chicken. Taking that first joint is the dumbest thing a kid can do. I know. It cost me my future. I had a chance to be a really good ballplayer, but I lost interest because I wanted to get high. I didn't even finish my education because I wanted to get high. Then my head got all messed up and I didn't have a choice anymore.

Now I beat my brains out in a hot factory.

Kids, stay straight. Say no to that first joint, and when you reach 23 you will be on the top of the world. Not like me. No money. No friends. Suicidal feelings. Needing a fix every day.

I'm nobody to be giving advice, considering what I've done with my life, but maybe you kids out there can learn something from a loser. — FOOLISH

Patient fitted with 'bionic' ear

By JOHN FLINN
Hearst Feature Service

STANFORD, Calif. — Robert Fratres doesn't look much like Lee Majors and he can't outrun a Porsche. But in one way he's a real-life “Six Million Dollar Man.”

Five years ago, doctors outfitted him with a “bionic” ear, a device similar to one of the mechanical body parts Majors' character came equipped with on the popular television series. Fratres' electronic implant — about the size of a nickel — was developed at Stanford University to do the job his inner ear no longer can.

The device and a shirt-pocket attachment work in roughly the same fashion as a stereo receiver, translating sound into electrical signals and injecting them directly into his aural nerve. It has enabled Fratres, who was rendered totally deaf in 1976 by the improper prescription of a drug after surgery, to understand some words and differentiate among certain sounds.

The work being done at Stanford could lay the groundwork for the development of bionic eyes, muscles and other body parts, according to Stanford researchers. Bionic implants, they say, someday might even be able to help paralyzed people move their limbs.

“The ear has been extremely tough, but if we lick the problems involved in it, we feel we can probably lick some of the others as well,” said Dr. Robert White, chairman of the university's electrical engineering department.

His department is ready to test a new generation of bionic ears. Although they will fall short of providing normal hearing for the deaf, White hopes they'll be a big improvement over earlier devices. The new models will carry eight channels of sound — twice as many as Fratres' implant.

Stanford is looking for totally deaf people on whom to test the equipment. Candidates to receive the $10,000 units should be between the ages of 18 and 65 and be deaf beyond the help of any hearing aid. They should have lost their hearing after age four or five — preferably, recently. People who go deaf before they learn to speak and understand language rarely can learn to do so, according to White.

There are 200,000 Americans who suffer from deafness caused by the failure of the inner ear. Problems involving the outer or middle portions of the ear can usually be fixed by surgery, White said.

Franz home on leave from Air Force Academy

Franz

Cadet/1c Holly R. Franz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leland Franz of Midland, is home on leave from the United States Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs, Colo.

Miss Franz will begin her senior year in August after an assignment in New Mexico. Franz has completed training and soloed in a Cessna T-41. She is on the dean's, commandant's and superintendent's lists for academic achievement.

Marine 1st Sgt. Lewis Zimmerman, whose wife, Alice, is the daughter of Ismael and Mary Moreno, of Big Lake, recently participated in a "Combined Arms Exercise" at Fort Pickett, Va.

Zimmerman is a member of the 3rd Battalion, 10th Marines, Camp Legeune, N.C.

During the two-month exercise, Zimmerman's unit participated in live-fire exercises involving the use of tanks, artillery, tracked vehicles, air support and individual weapons.

Navy Seaman Recruit Walter R. Schuk Jr., son of Earl and Mary S. McCormack of 2507 W. Francis, has completed recruit training at the Naval Training Center, San Diego, Calif.

During the eight week training cycle, trainees studied general military subjects designed to prepare them for further academic and on-the-job training in one of the Navy's 85 basic occupational fields.

Included in their studies were seamanship, close order drill, naval history and first aid.

Kenneth Joe Munden Jr., son of Mrs. Shirley Barrigan, enlisted in the United States Navy's delayed entry program on May 22.

Munden will attend basic training in San Diego, Calif., on August 19.

Following basic training, Munden will attend Radio Technical school also in San Diego.

A.C. Clark Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. A.C. Clark of Midland, recently received the Silver Dolphin Submarine qualification award at ceremonies held aboard the USS POGY (SSN-647) nuclear submarine based at Mare Island, Calif. Clark enlisted in the Navy on June 2, 1980 and volunteered for submarine duty while assigned to quartermasters school on Orlando, Fla.

Marine 2nd Lt. Christopher M. Ekman, son of Merlin J. Ekman of 4617 Cuthbert, Midland, was graduated from The Basic School.

The Basic School is located at the Marine Corps Development and Education Command in Quantico, Va. It is designed to prepare newly-commissioned officers for assignment to the Fleet Marine Force and emphasizes the duties and responsibilities of a rifle platoon commander.

The training included instruction on land navigation, marksmanship, tactics, military law, personnel administration, Marine Corps history and traditions, communications and the techniques of military instruction.

During the 26-week course, leadership by example and teamwork were stressed and the students participated in a demanding physical conditioning program.

Marine Cpl. Eloy T. Moran, son of Jose and Enrigueta Moran of Big Spring, recently returned from a deployment to the Mediterranean Sea and the Indian Ocean.

Moran is a member of G Company, Battalion Landing Team 2/6, 32nd Marine Amphibious Unit (MAU), Camp Lejeune, N.C.

While deployed, Moran participated in numerous amphibious operations in various training exercises. Port visits were made to Italy, Spain, France and Greece.

David M. Kirkland

Airman takes care of people's needs

BERGSTROM AIR FORCE BASE — Taking care of people's needs is part of the job for Airman First Class David M. Kirkland of Lamesa.

Kirkland, 27, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Spurlock of Lamesa, is a personnel readiness specialist assigned to the 67th Combat Support Group (CSG) at Bergstrom Air Force Base in Austin.

The group includes the security police, civil engineering, services and headquarters squadrons, as well as the functions of personnel, legal services, chaplain and base administration.

"My work is chiefly administrative," Kirkland said. "I feel our section carries a lot of responsibility for the success of Bergstrom personnel by preparing orders for the airmen before they go on mission exercises all over the world."

Kirkland attended Lamesa High School and joined the Air Force in 1979. He has attended Brigham Young University, Provo, Utah, and is now taking Park College extension courses on base.

"I joined for patriotic reasons and for the educational opportunities," Kirkland said. "I'm undecided about staying in for a career, but I think everyone should serve at least one hitch. After I complete my psychology degree I may apply for officer's training."

Montana in dispute with Canada over coal mine

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Montana senator is asking the State Department to step into a dispute over a proposed strip mine planned by a Canadian coal firm only six miles from the edge of the United States' Glacier National Park.

Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., is urging the State Department to formally convey U.S. concerns over the environmental impact to the park and nearby region to the Canadian government in Ottawa.

Baucus said in a letter to outgoing Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., that a review of the plan for the mine "raised fears over potential environmental degradation in the United States," including damage to air and water quality in and near the park and disruption of fish and wildlife populations.

His criticism was stronger in an interview. Asked about the effect of the mine as it is presently designed, Baucus replied: "It's going to ruin the Flathead River and Flathead Lake and parts of Glacier as we now know it. ... I think it'll ruin, really ruin, that part of the state."

But an official of the Sage Creek Coal Co. Ltd., in Vancouver, B.C., said the company feels it is building in environmental controls to handle any problems.

"I can't blame them for being concerned," said corporate secretary Bill Burge in a telephone interview. "But they're not really measuring all that we've done." He said his company was planning the mine on the basis "that we cannot do anything that will damage across the border."

British Columbia officials are expected to act within a few weeks on Sage Creek's application, a decision Montana officials say is critical. Burge, however, characterized the decision as preliminary and said further reviews — and possibly additional controls — would occur as Sage Creek seeks needed permits.

The proposed 4,000-acre Cabin Creek Coal Mine would be located just north of the U.S.-Canadian border along a major tributary of the North Fork Flathead River, which becomes the park's western boundary when it crosses the border.

The U.S. portion of the Flathead has been designated by Congress as a wild and scenic river. The park itself, straddling the Continental Divide in the Northern Rockies, is rated by many as the wildest and most unspoiled in the United States.

As now planned, the mine would consist of two open pits, each about one mile long and 1,000 feet deep. It would produce about 2.2 million tons of coal a year for 21 years.

Neither Baucus nor Montana state officials, cautious about Canadian sensitivity to U.S. intrusion in its domestic affairs, are directly asking British Columbia to veto the mine.

The Montana officials instead are lobbying provincial and federal officials with the results of a four-year environmental impact study showing possible effects on Glacier and the surrounding area if the mine plans are approved in their present form.

Ron Cooper, who directed the environmental study for the state and serves as executive director of the Flathead River Coalition, said the study showed that air and water pollution from the mine would affect the park and nearby areas.

Computer analyses show the mine would violate U.S. Clean Air Act standards for dust and sulfur dioxide within the park, he said.

While the company plans to build dikes, diversion ditches and settlement ponds at the site to protect the water quality of the Flathead, Cooper said, the state study shows they are inadequate and predicts overflows on a "regular basis."

That could send coal dust, dirt, mine acid and toxic metals into the now-pristine Flathead, Cooper said.

Baucus said Canada's minister of the environment, John Roberts, promised him in a May 5 meeting that the mine would not be approved if it would harm Montana's environment. Federal action could be based on water quality treaties, Baucus said.

Pope may go to Lebanon

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II said today he is willing to go to war-torn Lebanon "without hesitation" for the cause of peace.

The pontiff made the statement in the traditional annual audience for the Rome-based cardinals on the eve of the feast of Saints Peter and Paul.

On Sunday, the pope called for the recognition of Palestinian rights and said he would dedicate a Mass on Tuesday to prayers for peace in "tormented" Lebanon.

Problems remain, but China actively courting investors

By PHIL BROWN

CANTON, China (AP) — Foreign capitalists still can point to a host of problems and uncertainties in trying to make a profit by putting money, technology and equipment into China.

But after years of going it alone and then some bumbling in foreign economic dealings after it changed its mind, China has launched a determined effort to court businessmen with assurances and concessions.

What China wants from the capitalists are some of the capital, know-how and management skills needed to modernize its economy, make China competitive on world markets and raise its living standards.

It spotlighted the new policy earlier this month when Chen Muhua, minister of foreign economic relations and trade, personally opened a foreign investment promotion meeting in Canton that brought about 400 representatives from more than 250 companies to discuss a Chinese shopping list of 121 projects.

The Chinese are seeking nearly $900 million in foreign investment for the projects, which involve modernization and expansion of factories.

Officials of the United Nations Industrial Development Organization, cosponsor of the meeting, say foreign businesses signed 59 letters of intent to enter into negotiations.

The U.N. officials decline to give the total value of the 59 projects, but before the meeting closed, Chinese officials said there already were such letters covering more than $200 million worth of projects, with 60 percent of that sought from foreign sources.

There have been no predictions on how many contracts might result.

David Hughes, the U.S. foreign commercial service officer in Canton, says, "It takes time for foreign companies to consider new investment, especially in a downturning economy."

But he says the real significance of the Canton meeting is that China is aggressively pursuing agreements.

Both sides also saw the meeting as important for educating each other.

Foreign traders say they told the Chinese which projects were not suited to present world conditions and what kind of problems had to be cleared up to attract foreign investment. Such views have been presented before, but this time about 800 Chinese officials were gathered in one place and, foreign businessmen say, they listened.

"This meeting helped us a great deal in understanding the ways of thinking of foreign businessmen," says Xing Lu, who heads the government's economic laws research center.

Xing and others conducted symposiums and stood by throughout the five-day meeting for consultations.

The Chinese also issued booklets on laws and regulations, and Wei Yuming, vice minister of foreign economic relations and trade, delivered a major speech that sought to assure foreign businessmen their investments would be both safe and profitable in China.

The enthusiasm of foreign businessmen for China cooled somewhat when the Chinese decided two years ago that they had overextended themselves in foreign agreements and canceled several big deals.

Businessmen note that foreign investors seek such things as cheap labor and sales in China's domestic market. But, they say, China has tended to push up labor costs by insisting that foreign-Chinese ventures hire more workers than they need and has tried to steer most of the products to the export market.

Wei says joint ventures will be allowed to sell some of their products in China in light of China's needs as long as they still earn enough foreign currency to pay the foreign partner's share of the profits, pay foreign employees' salaries and import needed materials.

The legal consultants say China may pay in foreign currency for some products of joint ventures if they are items that China will have to import anyway.

Wei did not deal with the overstaffing question in his speech.

He said joint ventures had to pay about 2.3 times the wages taken home by their Chinese workers, with the balance going to help with the health insurance, food and other subsidies and welfare that the government provides for most Chinese workers.

But wages still are "much lower than those of foreign countries," Wei said. "I am sure our foreign friends may be quite aware of it."

An average Chinese worker receives 60 to 70 yuan, about $33 to $39 at current exchange rates, a month.

Potential investors also were told they would be able to buy some of their Chinese materials directly in Chinese currency, thus saving foreign currency expenses.

One problem for foreign investors, Hughes says, has been "a lot of artificial charges that are penny-wise and pound foolish."

At times, he says, Chinese businesses have lost sight of the main goal of boosting production and sought to make their money quickly on salaries and freight charges.

Hughes says there also has been a kind of Chinese "petty sharpness," such as farmers believing city slickers are out to cheat them, and setting out to cheat them back.

But, he adds, "you can see it changing" as China gets more people with broader vision and experience.

Xing says China has sought to draft laws and regulations to give concrete expression to its new open-door economic policy and is negotiating agreements with a number of countries on protecting investments and avoiding double taxation.

After Hong Kong's 54 companies, the Americans had the next largest contingent at the meeting, 43 companies, followed by France with 31 and Japan with 29.

Despite the current strain in U.S.-China relations over U.S. arms sales to Taiwan, there was no sign of political talk at the meeting.

Consumers call oil decontrol 'supply-side failure'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Huge profits that oil companies made from price decontrol were used mostly to buy other companies rather than fund exploration for new oil sources, according to a consumer group.

Calling decontrol a "supply-side failure," the Citizen-Energy Labor Coalition on Sunday released a study saying that instead of plowing their record profits from decontrol into the search for more oil and gas, the nation's 16 largest oil companies diverted $16.2 billion into buying other companies.

"These disclosures demonstrate decontrol has been a supply-side failure," said Robert Brandon, executive director of the coalition. "Consumers paid billions of dollars more over the last three years because decontrol advocates claimed the funds were necessary to finance domestic exploration. Instead, higher gasoline prices have meant more acquisitions."

The consumer group said that since decontrol took effect in 1979, acquisition expenditures increased 600 percent, while spending for exploration and production increased 115 percent.

The American Petroleum Institute, the industry's chief lobbying group, said decontrol has been a "spectacular success story" and called the study a "gross distortion of the facts, typical of the shoddy, biased economic work of the irresponsible Citizen-Labor Energy Coalition."

The coalition reviewed reports the oil companies are required to file with the Securities and Exchange Commission to compare spending and earning patterns for the three years before decontrol began in 1979 with the three years since then.

The companies covered in the study were Exxon, Mobil, Texaco, Standard Oil of California, Amoco, Gulf, Arco, Shell, Tenneco, Standard Oil of Ohio, Conoco, Sun, Phillips, Getty, Union and Occidental.

The coalition said earnings of the companies increased by 147 percent after decontrol began — going from $30 billion in the years from 1976 through 1978 to $75 billion from 1979 through 1981. It said that for the three years before decontrol, the companies spent $2.3 billion to acquire other companies, a figure that zoomed to $16.2 billion in the last three years.

The study lists 59 companies or portions of companies that the 16 largest oil firms have purchased in the last three years. Most of the purchases were of energy-related companies.

But the amount the major oil companies spent on acquisitions and investments in non-petroleum lines of businesses equalled the amount they used to explore and produce oil in the United States, the coalition said.

The American Petroleum Institute took sharp exception with the study's conclusions. It said total industry investment in drilling, exploration and production rose from $21.3 billion in 1976 to $50 billion in 1981, setting new records for drilling and erasing a decade-long decline in production in the lower 48 states.

"Rather than a failure, the decontrol of crude oil by Presidents Carter and Reagan has been a spectacular success," API said.

Times have changed at Phelps Dodge copper mine

By BILL CURRY
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

MORENCI, Ariz. — There was a time when you could be born in the company hospital here and buried in the company cemetery. In between, you could live in company housing, shop at the company store and, of course, work a lifetime for the company.

It was that way for years, with sons following fathers into the copper mine, the conie for a century, and the circle of life turning around it was broken only once before — in 1932, when the Great Depression closed the company's mine for five years.

"Who would ever think we wouldn't get up in the morning and go to work at the mine?" asked Jackie Cooper, a Phelps Dodge foreman.

That was what people thought until April 18, when for the first time since the Depression, Phelps Dodge was shut down. About 2,100 workers in this company town and neighboring Clifton were laid off. They will not return to work until copper prices — depressed by low automobile sales and a slowdown in housing construction — recover. The company says that might be June 1.

Everyone here hopes so.

No one here believes it.

"We've all talked about it," said Robert Cisneros, 32, whose $98-a-day pay has been replaced by $115-a-week unemployment. "We're looking at August (or) September. I never really thought it would happen. My dad put in 30-some years. I never believed it would happen."

"I admire the optimism of Phelps Dodge," said Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, who recently signed into law two measures cutting taxes for the beleaguered copper industry and increasing the state's unemployment benefits. "But they're not going to open June 1, July 1 or Sept. 1. It's going to be fall — or later.

"The only comparable event happened in 1932: The entire industry has gone into a cold shutdown."

No state produces more copper than Arizona — a million tons a year, 65 percent of the copper mined in the United States. So while copper workers have been laid off and copper facilities shut down in Montana, Utah and New Mexico, no state has been harder hit than Arizona by the bad times in the nation's copper industry.

In Arizona, the industry is suffering a depression," according to a spokesman for the Arizona Mining Associatin. Nearly 9,000 of the state's 26,000 copper workers have been temporarily, indefinitely or permanently laid off. Most of the others are working reduced schedules.

Through company town after company town, the problems are echoing like a shout down a canyon. When Phelps Dodge shut down, Apache Powder in Benson, which supplies blasting powder for mining, laid off 28 of its 184 employees. The Phelps Dodge payroll here represented 90 percent of Greenlee County's income, so Joey Rietz laid off two fulltime employees at his furniture store in nearby Clifton.

"Instant Michigan," said a Democratic candidate for the Congress of the area's current plight.

"In two days," County Administrator David Perkins said of the Phelps Dodge shutdown, "we've gone from the lowest unemployment (rate) to the highest unemployment (rate) in Arizona."

With only 900 people still working at Phelps Dodge, officials estimate that the local unemployment rate will hit 50 percent.

That turn of events has ripped apart the cocoon of security that always surrounded this company town. Now workers talk of how long they can last; lifelong residents speak vaguely of where they might move in search of a job.

"As a merchant, I'm concerned about how long it (the layoff) will last," said Rietz, the furniture store owner. "But I've lived here all my life, and my main concern is people moving out of the community. They'll be replaced when things recover, but you hate to see your friends leave. Some of mine are out looking now."

"We've been checking up on work in Wyoming," said Cisneros, a drill repairman with a wife and two young children. "I'll stay here a while, to June 1. Then maybe I'll head up there with some guys."

But some copper workers have given up and left.

"I don't believe any time soon the copper industry is going to recover," Randall Stewart, a 31-year-old geologist, said from the back of a U-Haul truck parked outside his empty, $141-a-month company house. The truck was almost packed. Stewart was leaving for Houston, where he lived until he was hired by Phelps Dodge six months ago.

"To survive, I need to get a job," Stewart said. "Simple as that."

"We'll be gone in a couple of weeks," said Mari Husman, 26, who came here with her 29-year-old geologist husband, James, five months ago. They have an 18-month-old son. "They didn't evict us, but they said we couldn't stay indefinitely, and we can't live on unemployment. We got less than a week's severance and less than a week's notice.

"And they didn't encourage us to stay."

But if dependency on Phelps Dodge has left people in Morenci and Clifton vulnerable to such a layoff, it is also the company that is easing the dislocation. In the give-and-take world of a company town, rents rise every time wages do, and they can also go down.

Thus, Cisneros moved into his $118-a-month home four years ago and, by last year, the rent was up to $142. When his work schedule was reduced to eight days every two weeks in January, the rent dropped to $115. Now, like others here, he is paying only $57.50 a month with the balance deferred until he is called back.

Others have also signed up for deferred rent payments, and credit is available at the company store, the Phelps Dodge Mercantile. A married couple with children can charge up to $50 a week.

"I'm not going to use it," said Cisneros after a visit to the Mercantile, where he paid cash. "You're just getting further in the hole."

As it is, he says he will get along by tapping his savings, which he and his wife, Norma, 29, had hoped to use as a downpayment on a house.

"The big percentage of people are going to try to wait it out, to June or August," said Phelps Dodge foreman Cooper, who is still working and is chairman of the Greenlee County Board of Supervisors. "But if something doesn't happen by then..."

What may help them wait it out is the combination of company, union and state benefits that form what Babbitt calls a safety net.

"If it doesn't go on too long," Babbitt said, "people don't get hurt too bad. But without that safety net, the level of hardship would be much, much worse — and comparable to what happened in 1932."

Dairy farmer converts manure to electricity

By CHARLES HILLINGER
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

NOVATO, Calif. — Dairy farmer Ralph Grossi is converting cow manure into electricity.

"The manure from my 300 cows is paying all my electrical bills and I'm making extra money from the surplus energy," he said.

For several months, Grossi, 33, has been producing electricity from methane gas extracted from manure at his farm near this Northern California city.

He is the first dairy farmer in the West to convert what has been a major liability into a valuable resource. A handful of other farmers in the East and Midwest have recently installed similar systems.

Mountains of manure have been the bane of dairy farmers for generations. Converting the manure to electricity could be a real breakthrough.

Grossi constructed a pit, 8-feet deep, 25-feet wide, and 95-feet long, with earthen slopes, earthen bottom and a concrete collar around the top.

Manure slurry is pumped into the pit that is lined with a huge plastic bag that has an 8-foot high expansion section on top to hold the gas as it develops.

Water heated to 160 degrees is pumped in pipes to the bottom of the pit to heat the manure to a constant 95 to 100 degrees. The bacteria in the waste material gives off gas, which is then piped into a shed. There it is burned to drive a standard 60-horsepower generator, producing 40 kilowatts of electricity an hour. The burning gas also heats the water circulated through the manure.

It cost Grossi $114,000 to install the system, including $30,000 for the generator and $43,000 for the pit. The electricity prduced is fed directly into the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. system.

"I still pay my electrical bill every month and PG&E mails me a monthly check for the electricity produced," Grossi said.

Grossi figures his electrical bill this year will cost him at least $20,000. He is confident that he will get all that back and much more from the manure-produced electricity he sells to the power company.

May gas supplies up due to demand increase

WASHINGTON — For the second month in succession, gasoline and distillates supplies rose compared with year-ago levels. The increase in demand was accompanied by higher refinery utilization and increasing output of refined products including gasoline and distillates, the American Petroleum Institute reported.

In its monthly statistical report, the API said the 6.8 million barrels per day of gasoline supplied was 2.6 percent higher than the rate of last May. At least half of this gain was attributed to continued replenishment of depleted distributor and reseller storage. The API said it did not view this increase as an indicator of any true increase in consumer demand .

Distillates supplied rose more than 11 percent over last May's level as distributors moved to raise storage to more normal levels after apparently sinking to abnormally low levels at the end of the heating season.

May figures showed a marked decline in the rate of drawdown for gasoline and turnaround in the inventory position for distillates.

At the beginning of May, the report said, gasoline inventories were falling by about 800,000 BPD and distillate stocks about 250,000 BPD. By the end of May, gasoline stock reductions had essentially ceased, while almost 500,000 BPD were being added to distillate inventories.

Product output levels increased as refinery utilization rates climbed from 64 percent in April to about 67 percent in the latter part of May. For the month as a whole, output rates for gasoline and distillates were some 300,000 BPD higher for each product than in the preceding month, about three times the normal increase for this time of the year.

API said the recent uneasiness over the level of inventories, especially inventories of gasoline, was unwaarranted. The 31 days of gasoline supply for May is in the seasonal range of between 30 and 39 days of gasoline inventories as experienced since the mid-seventies.

The report said a similar situation exists for total crude oil and product inventories, which were reduced over the past year in reaction to substantially decreased demand and ready availability of crude on world markets. Total inventories on hand, when related to current demand levels, represent 71 days of supply, a level that is well within the 61-85 day range experienced over the past seven years in May.

May's domestic crude oil production rose 193,000 BPD, 2.3 percent over year-ago levels. Production from the new Kuparuk Field in Alaska accounted for half of this increase.

The significant increase in the lower 48 states' production reflects the continuation of the change in a trend that in the seventies, prior to decontrol, had been declining at an average year-to-year rate of 300,000 BPD.

Imports continued to decline. A 26.5 percent decrease in crude oil imports and a 10 percent decrease in product imports kept the total level about equal to that experienced during the early 1970s.

Number of seismic crews, marine vessels decline

The total number of land seismic crews and marine vessels searching for oil and gas in the U.S. and U.S. waters during May declined by twenty land crews, but registered an increase of six vessels, for a net decrease of fourteen. According to the Society of Exploration Geophysicists' latest monthly report, the May total was 612, compared with 626 in April.

The May total (612) represents a decrease of 2 percent from last month, a 7 percent decrease from May, 1981, a 22 percent increase over May, 1980, a 60 percent increase over May, 1979, a 74 percent increase over May, 1978, a 103 percent increase over May, 1977, and a gain of 148 percent over the same month in 1976.

During May, thirteen contractors were operating Twenty-six of the 508 land crews and three of the fifty-three vessels on a speculative basis.

••••

Seismic exploration for oil and gas continued to increase internationally during the fourth quarter (December) of 1981, with a total of 1,261 seismic land crews and marine vessels active. According to the Society of Exploration Geophysicists, which conducts the quarterly survey, the December total (1,261) reflected an increase of nine crews and vessels from the third quarter (September) total of 1,252. Gains were recorded in Canada, Mexico, Central & South America, Africa, and the Far East.

The international survey reflects data reported on seismic oil exploration activity by 150 private and governmental crew operators around the world. Special significance is attached to the figures since seismic crew acitivity is recognized as the leading indicator of all petroleum exploration activity.

William Arthur Philip Louis arrives

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles and Princess Diana have named their infant son William Arthur Philip Louis, Buckingham Palace announced today.

The announcement came one week after the royal birth.

The child, second in line to the British throne behind his father, will be known as Prince William of Wales, a palace spokesman said.

The selection of names was "entirely a matter of personal choice by the prince and princess," the spokesman said.

There have been four previous King Williams — the last was William IV who reigned from 1830-37.

He was the third son of King George III, during whose reign the American colonists won the Revolutionary War against England and founded the United States.

"The baby will be known as Prince William, and the name won't be foreshortened in any way," said the palace spokesman, specifically noting that the boy will not be called "Billy."

Born June 21 in St. Mary's Hospital, West London, the baby weighed 7 pounds, 1½ ounces. The infant is in excellent health, the spokesman said.

He offered the following explanation for the choice of the remaining three forenames:

—Arthur is one of Prince Charles' own names, his full name being Charles Philip Arthur George.

—Philip is the name of Charles' father, Prince Philip, the Duke of Edinburgh, husband of Queen Elizabeth II.

—Louis was the name of Prince Charles' beloved great-uncle, Earl Mountbatten of Burma, a British admiral, statesman and last Viceroy of India. Lord Mountbatten was assassinated by Irish Republican Army guerrillas in 1979.

The prince, 33, and his 20-year-old wife, the former Lady Diana Spencer, chose six godparents for the heir apparent.

After the birth, guessing the prince's name became a favorite pastime of the British press and royalty fans.

Peter Blackwell, a spokesman for the London legal betting house of William Hill, said "quite a lot of money" was risked in its name-betting game, but he wouldn't say how much.

Columbian author rejects idea of selling movie rights

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Colombian author Gabriel Garcia Marquez says he has rejected a $1 million offer from actor Anthony Quinn for movie rights to his worldwide best seller, "One Hundred Years of Solitude."

Gabriel Marquez

"Anthony Quinn, with his million dollars and everything, will never be...Col. Aureliano Buendia (the hero of the novel)," Garcia Marquez wrote Sunday in an article for the Buenos Aires newspaper Clarin.

"My reticence to make movies out of 'One Hundred Years of Solitude' and, in general, all my published works...is due to my desire for direct communication with my readers, so that by means of the letters I write they can imagine the characters to be as they wish, and not as the borrowed face of an actor on the screen," Garcia Marquez said. "Besides, I have seen many good movies made from very bad novels, but I never have seen a good movie made from a good novel."

The novelist said that in general, he has an aversion to film producers.

"They are grandiloquent, insecure and unpredictable," he said. "My wife Mercedes is afraid of them because they show up for the first meeting with outer space-like projects, clean out your bar and pantry, make calls all over the world from your phone without asking how much they owe, and then you never hear from them again."

NEW YORK (AP) — A planned appearance by talk show host Phil Donahue, whose syndicated program enjoys high local ratings, got a cool reception from "blase" New Yorkers.

Donahue agreed to cancel a lecture scheduled over the weekend at the Beacon Theater after only 250 tickets were sold by last Wednesday. The theater holds about 2,700 people.

"We took something of a beating, but it's not that Donahue isn't popular," said John Scher, president of Monarch Entertainment Bureau, which promoted several dates on Donahue's annual speaking tour.

"Apparently a lot of people don't want to pay for someone they're used to hearing for free," Scher said.

"I also think that New Yorkers are a bit more blase about things like this," he added.

Mother Teresa

WINNIPEG, Manitoba (AP) — Mother Teresa, who won the Nobel Prize for her work with India's poor, accepted the St. Boniface Hospital research foundation's International Award before a crowd of 20,000 at Winnipeg Stadium.

The small, soft-spoken nun was given a standing ovation as she walked slowly to the stage Sunday to receive the award from Arnold Naimark, president of the University of Manitoba.

Mother Teresa, 72, accepted the citation and $20,000 on behalf of God and the world's poor. She was given the award for her years of work in the slums of Calcutta. Previous recipients include Prince Phillip and entertainer Danny Thomas.

Mother Teresa asked members of the audience to bring prayer into their family lives and to help those with special needs at home as well as helping others.

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Queen Beatrix and Prince Claus of the Netherlands finish their 18-day, 12-city American tour tonight at a lavish dinner for some 600 people who have paid $75 each for the chance to dine with royalty.

The dinner, accompanied by music from the Albany Symphony, will be held in the billion-dollar marble plaza that Queen Beatrix is said to have inspired on her last visit to Albany, 23 years ago.

Social drinking study labeled false

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A landmark study that showed some alcoholics can be taught to drink socially has been challenged by a team of psychologists who say some of the participants in the study died after returning to the bottle.

The 1970-71 study, regarded as a landmark in the use of behavioral therapy for alcoholism, said 20 men with histories of severe alcoholism were able to engage in successful controlled drinking with therapy.

But Mary Pendery, a psychologist at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in San Diego and a professor at the University of California-San Diego School of Medicine, and two other psychologists from the University of California-Los Angeles, reported differently.

The actual results of the experiment not only failed to prove that some alcoholics can drink socially, but the results "strengthen the argument that the opposite is true," the psychologists said.

Mark B. Sobell and his wife, Linda C. Sobell conducted the study in 1970-71 while they were psychology students at the University of California-Riverside, serving on the staff of Patton State Hospital near San Bernardino, Calif. The couple now lives in Toronto.

"There is a vast amount of evidence supporting our published reports," said Sobell.

But the San Diego Union reported Sunday that patients who participated in the study have sworn in affidavits that accounts of the research and its effect on their drinking are not true.

And the psychologists said three of the patients died during heavy drinking episodes and another of an alcohol-related heart attack. Another eight continued to drink excessively despite damaging consequences, they said.

Another six had repeated drinking problems for some time after the study but became abstinent, mostly with the nelp of Alcoholics Anonymous, the psychologists said.

Another man is missing and was certified as "gravely disabled" due to drinking a year after the study. The one man in the study who did manage to drink socially is believed to have been mistakenly classified initially as a physically-dependent alcoholic, they said.

Maybe arm length is key to harmony

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Married couples that "fit" well physically, allowing comfortable hugging and handholding, are more likely to find happiness together, say two genetics specialists.

Maria Pennock Watkins, from the University of Pennsylvania, and Arlen Price, from Yale University, analyzed about 170 San Francisco couples who were married seven years ago. Of the group, 52 were divorced.

The researchers came up with a preliminary conclusion that men and women with similar measurements from elbow to fingertip were more likely to share marital bliss than those with mismatched arms.

"Maybe it is because couples with similar forearms are more comfortable holding hands and hugging," Price said. He also noted that singles continue to seek marriage partners of the same ethnic group — and thus similar physical characteristics.

Their study, presented last Friday to a genetics conference at Colorado State University, also found that couples with similar education levels and economic backgrounds are less likely to break up.

'Mr. Truelove' true love teacher

HOUSTON (AP) — Aerospace engineer Tim Kreiter says he has designed a Monopoly-type game for kids to help explain the facts of life. He calls the game "Mr. Truelove."

"There is a real need for a better way to teach responsible sexual behavior," said Kreiter, who has designed about 25 game boards as a hobby over the past 15 years.

The idea for "Mr. Truelove" was inspired by a conversation with a friend about the increasing number of teen-agers who become pregnant or contract venereal disease, he said.

The game, which can be played by as many as six people, has 72 question cards that deal with the subjects of behavior, pregnancy and sexually transmitted diseases, he said.

Gilder misses record but achieves No. 1 objective

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — The record eluded him, but Bob Gilder achieved his No.1 objective — a second victory of the season.

"I felt I could win again. And this was a fun way to win, leading every round," Gilder said Sunday after he'd conquered the 6,329 yards of hills and vales that make up the Westchester Country Club course with a 261 total, the lowest score on the PGA Tour in seven years.

"I'm just fortunate that I was playing this well, that I was able to score as well as I did. I just got hot. I made a lot of putts. I hit the ball as well as I can.

"That's as good as I can play."

It was good enough to produce a five-stroke victory in the Manufacturers Hanover-Westchester Classic — he led by 7-9 shots most of the last round — a 19-under-par total and the lowest score on the Tour since Johnny Miller won the 1975 Phoenix Open with a 260 total.

AND, FOR a brief period, it seemed Gilder may have a shot at the Tour's all-time scoring record, 257 set by Mike Souchak in the 1955 Texas Open.

Gilder had played the first three rounds in 64, 63 and 65, the last one highlighted by a dramatic, double eagle on the 18th hole of Saturday's round.

"That's a hard act to follow," he said.

But, when he birdied three in a row, starting on the fifth, in Sunday's final round, he got to 21 under par and was within sight of the Tour's all-time scoring record. He needed to shave two more shots off par to tie the mark, three to break it.

But he missed a six-foot birdie putt on the ninth and, realistically, his chances at the record were gone.

"That back nine is tough. It gives me a lot of trouble. After I missed that putt on the ninth, I was just trying to survive," Gilder said. To tie the record, he needed to play the back in 33. But he required 37 and finished with a 69.

"I was trying as hard as I could," Gilder said. "But to get the record, you have to make some putts and the putts just didn't fall.

"It just didn't happen."

BUT HE found more than adequate consolation in the $72,000 first prize and, as a two-time winner this season, a spot in the World Series of Golf. Gilder won the Byron Nelson Classic earlier this season and joined Tom Watson, Craig Stadler, Lanny Wadkins and Ray Floyd as the Tour's only multiple winners this year.

Gilder had a six-shot lead when the day's play started and, after the three early birdies, had it won. Only the quest for the record, and a fight for second place, remained.

The record stood, and Tom Kite and Peter Jacobsen tied for the No.2 spot, Kite gaining a share of it with a last-hole birdie.

"We weren't even thinking about Bob," said Jacobsen, who had a closing 66 and a 266 total.

"It was like there were two golf tournaments out there, the one Bob was playing in and the one the rest of us were playing in," said Kite, who had a last-round 68.

Wayne Levi, with a 68, and Don Pooley, with a 67, tied for fourth at 270.

Bob Gilder chips on to the fourth green Sunday during the final round of the Westchester Classic. Gilder didn't break the PGA scoring record, but managed an easy victory just the same. His 261 total gave him a five-stroke victory over Tom Kite and Peter Jacobsen.

It could be tough week for McEnroe

By GEOFFREY MILLER
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — John McEnroe has begun what could be one of the toughest weeks of his tennis career as he bids to retain two Wimbledon crowns, facing a crowded schedule and the uncertainty of a suspect ankle.

After a first week disrupted by rain, tournament officials prepared to call players into non-stop action to try to finish by next Sunday as scheduled.

McEnroe is the defending singles champion, and he and his partner Peter Fleming are defending their doubles crown. To win both, McEnroe has to play five singles matches and six doubles — all the best of five sets — in a maximum of seven days.

Weather experts predicted more rain today but better weather beginning Tuesday.

A SPRAINED ankle forced McEnroe out of the Italian and French Opens. Newsmen asked him about it throughout the last week and he admitted the trouble is still there.

"I'm trying not to think about it," McEnroe said. "The less I think about it, the better I play."

All players agree that Wimbledon is one of the most demanding tournaments in the world. Normally, in the second week, the players get a day's rest between each singles match. This time, because of the heavy backlog of matches, they must play every day if they are to reach the final stages.

McEnroe was scheduled to play Lloyd Bourne, a 23-year-old Californian, today for a place in the final 16. He and Fleming had to meet American Broderick Dyke and Australian Peter Johnston in the first round of the doubles.

McEnroe is seeded to meet Jimmy Connors in the finals. Connors faced American Drew Gitlin today in a third-round match.

A FEW others, including third-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis, were at the same stage as McEnroe and Connors. But, they were a round ahead of 36 players who still had to complete the second round.

Today's schedule sent Chris Evert Lloyd, the defending women's champion, against Kate Latham in a third-round match. Lloyd was aiming to join her top rival, top-seeded Martina Navratilova, in the final 16.

Tracy Austin, seeded third, was paired against Kathy Jordan. Andrea Jaeger, the French Open runner-up and No.4 seed, faced Ros Fairbank of South Africa.

There was plenty of sunshine but no tennis on Sunday. All-England Club officials spent the day working on emergency plans to beat the railway and subway strikes which threatened to paralyze Britain.

Cars and buses were organized to take more than 3,000 people — players and officials, stewards and ground staff, waitresses and program vendors — to Wimbledon. Parking space was prepared to cope with thousands of extra cars.

Sir Brian Burnett, chairman of the All England club, said Sunday, "There is no doubt that the underground strike had quite an impact on our attendance figures last week. Now that we are going to be without a rail service as well, we are having to provide people with alternatives."

He added: "If the income we receive is reduced, then British lawn tennis in general will suffer. The players will be the ultimate losers."

Gold Sox open series with 5-2 victory

Either Pryce or Long deserved win, but Couchee got it

BY TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

For nine innings it was the kind of pitching battle not often seen on the arid plains of West Texas or Cubs Stadium and either Midland's Kenneth Pryce or Amarillo's Bill Long appeared to be deserving winners. Both had pitched that well.

As it turned out, Amarillo's Mike Couchee got the win when the Gold Sox came up with three runs in the 10th to trump Dave Owen's two-out game-tying single in the bottom of the ninth.

PRYCE, WHO had a one-hitter through six innings, a three-hitter through eight and a four-hitter through nine, stuck around a couple of batters too long and was tagged with the defeat after walking Jeff Ronk and surrendering a single to Mike Martin to open the tenth. Relievers Rob Blyth and Mike Thompson couldn't stem the tide as Dan Purpura and Luis Quinones rapped Blyth for game-winning singles and James Steels' sacrifice fly to left off Thompson plated the final run of the 5-2 Gold Sox victory.

For Amarillo Manager Glenn Ezell, it was a case of belated justice. "We lost three one-run games at San Antonio. Our defense hurt us. It has hurt us in nine of our last 12 games."

It hurt the San Diego Padres' farmhands again Sunday. Quinones tripled into the right field corner and scored on an infield out to open the game, but Midland capitalized on two errors in the second to tie it 1-1. Carlos Lezcano singled with two out and was out stealing second, only to be ruled safe when the ball was dropped. Javier Fierro walked and then Owen chopped a trickler between the mound and the first baseline. The Sox never had a chance at Owen, but when Long couldn't find the handle on the ball, Lezcano scored from second.

AMARILLO took its 2-1 lead in the seventh. After Quinones' lead off triple, Pryce, 2-2, making only his third start, walked George Hinshaw to start the fifth after retiring 12 batters in a row and then retired six more before Jerry Davis singled to open the seventh.

Davis then stole second on a close play. It looked like catcher Don Hyman's throw had a chance, but Jerry was safe with a head first slide. "He got his hands in there before the tag," said Ezell. It was a big play for it enabled him to score from second on Jeff Ronk's two-out single to left.

AS A result, when Owen hit a first pitch to right with two-out in the ninth, instead of a game-winner, it only gave Midland a tie.

Pryce whiffed nine and walked two, which is a wild night for the San Diego native, in his second fine starting job.

Long went seven innings and was lifted for Couchee, although he had surrendered only four hits. But he had walked Fierro and Owen in the seventh. "He had shortened up his stride and was getting his fast ball down," said Ezell. "He was obviously getting tired. And with a Couchee (17 saves) in the bullpen you are usually going to seal it."

Ezell wishes Mike had for it has been a long road back for Long, who was 9-2 for Salem in the Carolina League last year, but got off to a 1-6 start with the Gold Sox.

"He won four in a row, but was no decision in San Antonio and tonight," Ezell said.

For the Cubs, it was the kind of game that's tough to lose. The Bruins got outstanding defensive play, pitching and the clutch hit from Owen, yet lost. It isn't very often that a pitcher gives up only two runs and four hits in nine innings at Cubs Stadium and comes away empty.

The Cubs get another crack at the Sox tonight at 7:30 p.m. with John White, 6-4, going for Amarillo while Doug Welenc, 8-6, probably will go for Midland.

BRUIN BREWIN'S—The win gave Amarillo a 9-8 lead in the season's series...Both Long and Pryce threw strikes and kept their defenses on their toes. As a result, the teams breezed through the first six innings in an hour and 15 minutes...Leftfielder Joe Carter backed into the wall to rob Joe Scherger in the fifth and Martin in the seventh, but third baseman Fritz Connally came up with the play of the day, leaping full length in the air, with his glove thrown across his head, to one-hand Davis' liner labeled two bases in the fourth. Someone in the press box wanted to know if "Anyone got Connally's hang time on that?" As it turned out, it robbed Davis of a 4-for-5 night. He followed the larceny with three straight singles....For Amarillo, Ronk turned in the key play in the seventh after the walks to Fierro and Owen, grabbing Hyman's sharply hit shot and turning it into an inning-ending double play.

Goalby outlasts Littler to claim senior golf crown

WINNIPEG, Manitoba (AP) — Bob Goalby says he performed a little brainwashing on himself to outlast Gene Littler and win a $200,000 Professional Golfers' Association senior tournament.

Goalby, leading all the way after blistering the 6,473-yard St. Charles Country Club course with 17 birdies and an eagle during the first three days, held a five-stroke lead over Littler entering Sunday's final round.

He was flying after his course-record 8-under-par 64 Saturday, and it seemed that Goalby had the $31,500 winner's check all but signed and delivered, and his name all but engraved on the Peter Jackson Trophy.

However, Littler got hot in the final round and Goalby's putter went sour. His fat five-stroke lead dwindled to two after the 16th hole and to one after the 17th.

Goalby, 53, from Belleville, Ill., parred the 17th hole with a fine recovery shot from the rough. He then sank a short putt for a par on the 428-yard 18th for a 1-over-par 73 and a 273 total, 15-under par. That gave him his first title on the senior tour this year and his second in two years.

LITTLER, BEATEN by Miller Barber in a playoff in the 1981 event, finished alone in second place with a 3-under 69 for 274. He earned $18,000.

Goalby, who played in a threesome with Littler and Don January, leading money winner in senior golf this year, said, "I started brainwashing myself when I marked my ball" on the 18th hole.

"January was going to putt, then Littler and I knew Gene was going to make his (for par). It didn't make any difference what they did. The whole show was me."

Goalby, who raised his 1982 senior earnings to $35,500 and to $58,500 overall, including $1,500 for a 46th-place finish in the Masters, had a birdie and two bogeys in his round Sunday. Littler had five birdies and two bogeys.

January finished in a three-way tie for third place at 277 with Canadian Moe Norman and Kel Nagle of Australia.

Nagle's 6-under 66 was the best score Sunday. Norman had a 69 and January a 71. Each won $10,133.

Barber fired a 72 for a 278. Sam Snead, 70, winner of 84 official titles on the regular PGA tour, had a 68 for 280, good for sole possession of seventh place.

The quotebook...

Earvin "Magic" Johnson, after winning the NBA's Most Valuable Player award: "If you're a winner, you'll be remembered. Nobody ever seems to remember if you win scoring titles or rebounding titles. They only ask how many times you won."

John McEnroe, on his attitude after disposing of Van Winitsky in the opening round at Wimbledon: "If I lose, I want to lose because the guy played better than me. That's no different than before, but I just want to keep away from those 'other things' as much as I can."

Did You Know?...

During his playing days with the Washington Senators, Frank Howard, now a coach for the Mets, had the nickname of "The Washington Monument." He's 6-8 and 270 pounds.

Joe Morris, a rookie ball carrier for the New York Giants, is only 5-7 but was the all-time leading ground-gainer at Syracuse with 4,299 yards.

Haynie wins first of season

PITTSFORD, N.Y. (AP) — Sandra Haynie's career on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, having been put into the past tense by Haynie, is back in the present and better than ever.

Winning her 41st tournament Sunday — first this season — with a six-shot triumph over Nancy Lopez and Hollis Stacy in the $200,000 Rochester International, Haynie showed she has come all the way back from retirement.

"I didn't take off from the tour (in 1976) with the purpose of resting and then coming back; I retired," said the 39-year-old Texan, who joined the tour at 18.

"Last year, when I came back, I did not set any time limit," she said. "I said I'll know when it's not right, or that it is right, as the case may be. I feel very fortunate to ... do that. I don't think very many profesional athletes have the opportunity to come around twice in their sport."

The $30,000 purse ballooned Haynie's 1982 earnings to $144,161, the most lucrative year of a career which saw her win 39 tournaments in a 14-year span before retirement.

HAYNIE'S 67-SHOT round of six birdies, one bogey and 11 pars would have tied a course record except that Jan Stephenson set a new one at 6-under-par 66. As it was, she turned around the tournament with birdie-3s on the 12th and 16th holes, while Lopez bogeyed the same holes.

Lopez said reaching the 16th green in three shots and two-putting took the wind out of her sails.

"That's when it dawned on me that I might not win," said Lopez, who fell to 7-under while Haynie was dropping to 11-under on the same hole.

Haynie's total was 12-under 276.

The defeat was Lopez' first in four events at Locust Hill Country Club, a 6,149-yard layout where Lopez set the LPGA record of five consecutive titles during her 1978 rookie year. She and Stacy carded second-place totals of 282.

Haynie also deprived Carner of a berth in the LPGA Hall of Fame. Carner, 43, still needs one more than her 34 tour victories to qualify.

Parade of tall ships incredible sight

By MITCHELL ZUCKOFF

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — More than 100,000 people watched from shore as 35 giant sailing vessels unfurled their canvas, caught the wind and sailed down Narragansett Bay to cap a "Tall Ships" celebration.

Leading the formation was the Coast Guard's 295-foot Eagle, followed by the 353-foot Esmeralda from Chile, the Gloria from Colombia, the Sagres from Portugal and the 270-foot Simon Bolivar from Venezuela, with 30 smaller ships riding in their wake.

After the morning festivities, which also attracted about 2,000 pleasure boats, the Sagres left for its home port with seven other ships in a 2,850-mile trans-Atlantic race.

The vessels assembled underneath the Newport Bridge for the 11.5-mile parade route, then sailed north to Gould Island to wind up their five-day visit to Rhode Island.

The vessels came to Newport last Wednesday after spending five days in Philadelphia for that city's 300th birthday.

"The ships looked stupendous," said a spectator, Edward P. O'Connell of Newport. "They were really amazing when they got all those sails up in the air."

O'Connell said he enjoyed the festival more than a previous visit by the ships to Newport in 1976 because the crowds were smaller this year.

"But," he said, "it wasn't as emotional an event because it wasn't the Bicentennial."

Richard DiMaria of Thomaston, Conn., called the parade "just incredible. The ships are so magnificent, it really is a beautiful sight, but I thought it would be larger than it was."

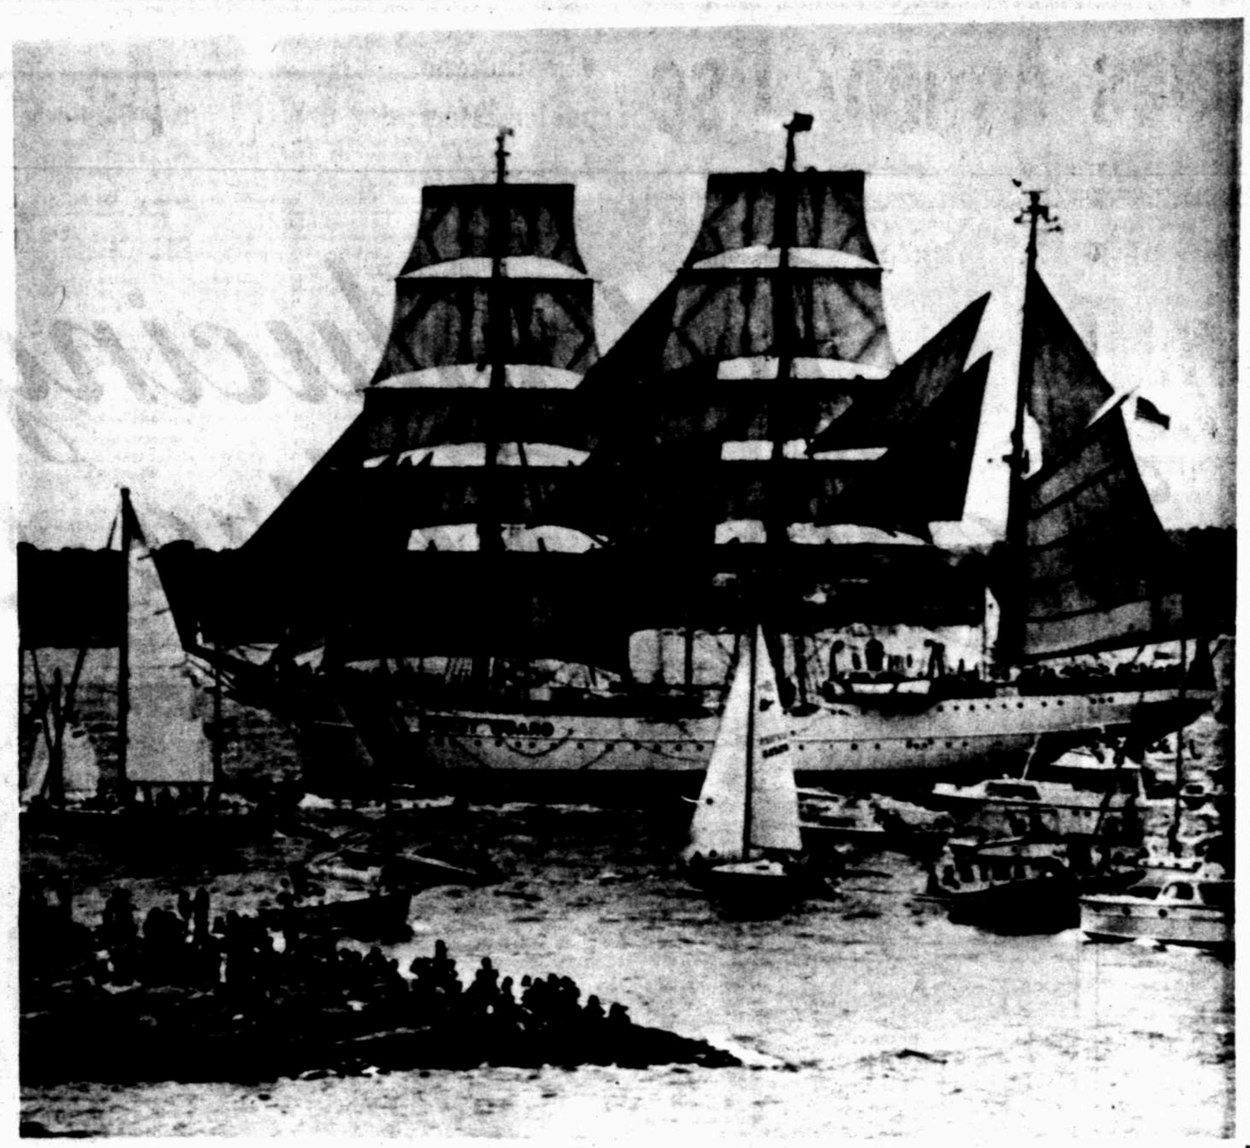

Aboard one of the smaller ships, the Providence, sailors dressed in Revolutionary War regalia.

The lone American ship which had entered the trans-Atlantic race, the 125-foot sloop Lindo, could not make the trip because of lack of funds.

The owners and crew of the 54-year-old former Swedish cargo vessel tried to raise $75,000, but fell far short.

"We don't have the money, so we don't race," said Greg Birra, skipper of the Lindo. "There was an offer made to turn her into a restaurant. I'd rather take her out and sink her."

During the parade, some of the pleasure boats crowding the bay drew dangerously close to the tall ships and were guided away by Coast Guard and volunteer patrol boats.

Nuclear freeze advocates convene

By MIKE FEINSILBER

ATLANTA (AP) — The nuclear weapons freeze is an idea whose time has come a lot faster than its originators thought possible, and they met here last weekend to try to catch up with it.

Crowded together for three days in a stuffy room at the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Non-Violent Change were 60 or 70 mostly young people who first came together in a loose alliance two years ago to organize around an idea on controlling the arms race.

Mostly in their 20s and 30s, they constitute the national committee of the Nuclear Weapons Freeze Campaign, an alliance of religious and peace groups and local committees organized to promote a nuclear freeze.

The campaign proposes that, as a first step toward reducing existing stockpiles, the United States seek to enlist Soviet agreement not to build, deploy and test more nuclear weapons.

The thinking is that arms accords such as SALT I and the unratified SALT II limit the production of some weapons, but they permit new weapons to be developed and so the arms race goes on.

PRESIDENT REAGAN opposes a freeze, arguing that halting development of new nuclear missiles would leave the United States vulnerable in areas where the Soviets lead.

The idea is credited to Randall Forsberg, director of the Institute for Defense and Disarmament Studies, a research organization in Brookline, Mass. And the organizational clout behind it is credited to G. Randall Kehler, 37, who spent two years in prison for refusing to cooperate with the draft, and who now runs the freeze campaign's coordinating clearinghouse in St. Louis.

"But it's out of their hands," commented Jerome Grossman, a former Massachusetts businessman who retired more than 20 years ago to devote his time to liberal causes.

"Nothing the two Randys (Ms. Forsberg and Kehler) do, and nothing anybody does at this meeting can influence this idea. It has taken on a life of its own," he said. Grossman is president of the Council for a Livable World.

In recent weeks, two million signatures have been collected on "freeze petitions." Freeze referenda are being organized for this fall's election in at least nine states. In New York, half a million freeze advocates participated June 12 in the biggest political demonstration in American history.

In addition, the idea was endorsed last week by the Democrats in their Philadelphia conference and by the nation's mayors meeting in Minneapolis. Earlier, votes were taken by the House and Senate committees which consider foreign policy — the Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted against the freeze idea and the House Foreign Affairs Committee voted for it.

FOR THE MOST part, the freeze campaign's successes were barely mentioned here.

The talk was all of the future: how to get blacks and college students, who have been generally indifferent, involved in the movement; whether the Reagan administration's initiatives at the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks beginning in Geneva this week will take the steam out of the freeze movement; whether — in a repeat of the economic technique used by anti-war forces during the Vietnam war — to press Congress to deny money for new weapons systems like the Cruise and MX missiles; whether it is possible to establish contact with ordinary citizens in the Soviet Union to get a freeze movement under way there.

Few decisions were reached on these matters; most were referred to task forces for further study.

Testifying to the campaign's impact, aides from the staffs of Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., and Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., came to address the committee.

Father, son fiddlers square off

COMMERCE, Texas (AP) — Larry and Louis Franklin think father-son rivalries are a bunch of fiddlesticks.

Larry Franklin overcame some tough competition to win the 10th annual National Collegiate Fiddlers' Festival in Commerce — his father, a seven-time world fiddle championship winner.

Louis, 59, and Larry, 28, say they don't let the fact that they're related get in the way of a good battle when they're pitted against each other in contests like the festival in Commerce earlier this month.

"I always gave it my best shot," the younger Franklin said. "We don't give each other any slack. We're trying to play the best we can and entertain the crowd at the same time."

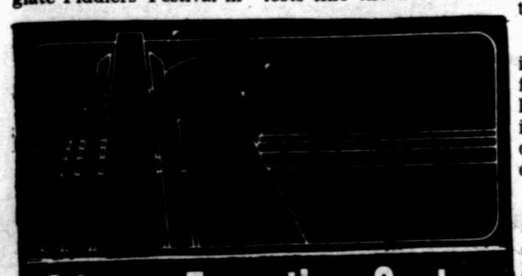

"I never gave him an inch," his father said. "I felt like if I gave over to him, he wouldn't have the incentive to improve. I did the best I could and so did he."

There used to be another Franklin in the competition — the elder Franklin's uncle, Major Franklin, who died last year. The three often would enter a contest, capture their respective age divisions and then square off for the championship.

"It kind of evens up, but Larry won his share of them," said Louis, a Whitewright farmer.

"We were known as the "fiddlin' Franklins," said Larry, a Denison resident and professional musician who plays fiddle, guitar and sings lead vocals in a country-rock band.

Larry played in his first fiddling contest when he was 8.

Kremlin serious about negotiations

By BRYAN BRUMLEY

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin says it is serious about negotiating mutual nuclear arms curbs with the United States in the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks (START) due to open Tuesday in Geneva. But Moscow is hinting it will seek to maintain its edge in land-based strategic missiles at the bargaining table.

Observers here believe pressing economic problems and lagging technological development have put the Soviets in a bargaining mood.

However, foreign diplomats here also say the Kremlin is hoping the growing anti-nuclear movements in Western Europe and the United States will pressure Washington to make concessions in its planned MX and long-range Trident missile programs.

President Reagan is pushing the costly MX intercontinental missile, and the submarine-launched Trident to counter what he sees as a Soviet military build-up.

But Reagan held out a carrot to the Kremlin in a May 9 speech proposing a two-stage mutual reduction in strategic arms. He suggested first cutting the number of warheads on land-based systems and then limiting the air and sea legs of the strategic triad.

THE OVERALL number of warheads would be cut to equal ceilings "at least one third" below the current levels of about 7,500 warheads for each side, Reagan said. Of those, no more than half would be land-based.

Reagan called land-based nuclear missiles "the most de-stabilizing systems," because they are considered more accurate than those launched from submarines.

While not rejecting it outright, Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev criticized Reagan's proposal as "lopsided" and "directly prejudicial to the security of the U.S.S.R."

The 75-year-old Soviet leader called for a freeze in deployment of strategic weapons, and restriction on development of new systems. The Reagan administration claims an arms freeze at current levels would leave the Soviets with an advantage.

Yuri Kornilov, senior political analyst for the official Tass news agency, spelled out Soviet objections to the Reagan plan in a weekend commentary.

"In the Soviet Union, ground-based intercontinental ballistic missiles account for about 70 percent of the warheads, whereas in the United States (they make up) about 20 percent," Kornilov wrote.

THE 80 percent of American warheads carried by submarines and heavy bombers "is several times greater than on relevant components of Soviet strategic forces," he said.

The Soviets claim "parity" now exists between the two sides, and that U.S. deployment of the MX or Trident systems, or reduction in the number of Soviet land-based systems, would give the United States an advantage.

No one can predict when or if an arms reduction agreement might be reached, but chief Soviet negotiator Viktor Karpov told visiting Americans in early June that he expects the talks to last for years.

Karpov's American counterpart, retired Lt. Gen. Edward L. Rowny, has also said his task will not be easy.

Arriving in Geneva over the weekend, the two negotiators insisted on the merits and peaceful intent of their bargaining positions, in not-too-subtle attempts to garner public support.

AP Analysis

Referring to the "hopes entertained by world public opinion," Karpov said Sunday, "We are ready for a speedy conclusion" to the pact" based on the principle of equality and equal security."

"WITH GOOD faith on the Soviet side to equal ours, we are hopeful we can reach an agreement that will benefit all mankind," Rowny told reporters Saturday. Both men agreed the talks are liable to run for years.

Karpov and Rowny last faced each other at the strategic arms limitation talks that produced the SALT II agreement, signed by Brezhnev and then-President Jimmy Carter in June 1979.

Carter withdrew the SALT II pact from Senate consideration after the Soviet army swept into Afghanistan in December 1979, and Reagan condemned the agreement as "fatally flawed" in favor of the Soviets.

Nonetheless, both Washington and Moscow have agreed to observe it, and the Soviets have even made changes in their nuclear arsenal called for by the treaty, Western diplomats say. They declined to be specific.

Experts here say the Soviets will push for indirect links between the strategic talks and and U.S.-Soviet negotiations on medium range nuclear weapons that opened in Geneva last November.

"THE FACT that both negotations are going on in Geneva is significant," said one Western expert. "There will have to be trade offs from one set of negotiations to the other. Both sides know that."

Both sides appear ready to open the strategic negotiations to a wide range of issues, although the first stumbling bloc may well be what weapons to discuss.

Another problem be verification. One of Reagan's main objections to SALT II was the Soviets' refusal to allow on-site inspection to check treaty compliance. Publicly, Moscow has shown no sign of shifting that stance.

A further hurdle will be agreeing who has how many of what strategic system, an issue which, during past strategic arms negotiations, has been complicated by Soviet insistence on keeping its weapons' levels secret.

Solidarity calls for use of force

Violence aimed at specific misdeeds

By HARRY TRIMBORN
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WARSAW, Poland — Members of the suspended Solidarity independent trade union movement have called for the selective and limited use of force in confrontations with Poland's martial law authorities, it was disclosed Saturday.

The appeal appears to be a departure from Solidarity's initial policy of nonviolent passive resistance to the imposition of martial law Dec. 13 to snuff out the liberalization movement launched by the union.

Disclosure of the apparent change in tactics appeared in both government-controlled newspapers and in an underground weekly union publication called Druk (print) that was circulated Saturday.

Druk cited what the union activists feel is the need to meet government violence against members with counterviolence. But the counterviolence, the publicaton declared, should be aimed at what the union feels are specific misdeeds by the authorities.

"We reject the concept of a general national uprising, and we denounce terrorism, which in the final analysis, results in more harm than benefits," said the Druk article, signed only with the initials N.T. "Concerted passive resistance remains the foundation of our strength."

HOWEVER, THE ARTICLE urged Solidarity activists who have thus far escaped internment under martial law, to abandon the union's renunciation of the use of force.

"By renouncing the use of force we deprive ourselves of a convenient means of bringing pressure to bear on the authorities, and ultimately this kind of pacifism can result in a tragic confrontation," the article declared.

Continued passivity could embolden the authorities into greater excesses that would ultimately result in a backlash "of a blind, destructive fury by the despairing masses," the article stated.

It added that "moral pressure" has no effect on the "hard-core government fink, the demoralized individuals in ZOMO (Poland's riot police) uniforms and the sadists who get their kicks beating up people."

"Such people," the article added, "only understand the argument of force."

The Druk article rejected the notion that retaliation would only result in greater government repression.

THE POSSIBLE use of violence against the authorities was denounced in the weekend editions of the newspaper Dziennik Ludowy and the Communist Party newspaper Trybuna Ludu. They atacked calls for violent resistance to martial law attributed to Zbigniew Romaszewski, a leading fugitive member of Solidarity.

Dziennik Ludowy quoted Romaszewski as stating it was "impossible to demand full independence (for Solidarity) and at the same time insist there cannot be any casualties."

The newspaper said Romaszewski declared that "the most urgent task" facing solidarity is to organize a general strike just prior to a planned summite meeting between Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev and President Reagan in the fall in an effort to heighten the importance of the Polish issue in their discussions.

The two newspapers said Romaszewski urged Solidarity to seek "a weak agreement" with the government as a tactic to lull the authorities into lowering their guard just prior to the general strike.

Romaszewski, a member of the underground executive committee of the Warsaw unit of Solidarity, was denounced for what the newspapers said were his efforts to seek a "bloodbath" in Poland.
