County court case raises procedure questions

By MIKE DOWNEY
Staff Writer

A Big Spring man sentenced to county jail received a second trial and a new jail sentence without the knowledge of the county attorney's office.

Howard County Judge Milton Kirby said "judgment is my job" in explaining why he bypassed the prosecutor's office.

Sheriff A.N. Standard said the new judgments were part of a bargaining deal his office arranged. County Attorney Bob Miller said he never knew anything about the trial.

The 20-year-old was sentenced by Kirby June 14 in Howard County court to terms of 10 days and 3 days in jail in connection with two offenses of driving while license suspended.

He was released from county jail on June 17. The following week, his criminal file in the county clerk's office showed the man had received a new trial and judgment June 20. The new judgment is dated June 17 — three days before the order for a new trial was signed.

Kirby, who has been county judge for seven months, said the dates are an error he made while preparing the paperwork.

Tax rebate drop triggers search for spending cuts

By RICHARD HORN
Staff Writer

Big Spring officials are looking for ways to cut spending after learning the city's July sales tax rebate is 59 percent lower than the amount received for the same period in 1982.

Last month the city received $52,225 in sales tax rebates from the state comptroller's office. The city received $128,858 — $76,633 more — at this time last year.

City Finance Director Tom Ferguson said the sales tax makes up a very large part of the city's revenue, second only to property taxes in financing the general fund.

He said the slowdown in local oil business — particularly the problems faced by Oilfield Industrial Lines — was the reason for the decrease.

TOM FERGUSON
...sales tax woes

"In the (nine) years I've been with the city, this is the first year of this big, steady decrease," Ferguson said. "But we can't put our finger on a trend because the rebates have been so irregular."

The sales tax rebate for May was 6 percent lower than that for the previous year, he said. The rebate for April was 43 percent lower and the rebate for March was 1 percent lower.

To make up for lost revenue in the past months, City Manager Don Davis said officials have been putting a freeze on any new program or purchase that is not a "money-saver."

A few of the programs affected include replacement of street signs and the placement of more trash containers in residential areas.

"After this latest rebate, I would expect the council to continue this policy or emphasize it even more," Davis said.

The melodrama is Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Comanche Trail Park Amphitheatre.

Banks register loans increase while deposits dip $6.5 million

Big Spring banks, including Coahoma, registered an almost $9 million increase in loans for the second quarter of the year over the first quarter, while bank deposits dipped $6.5 million from the previous quarter.

Second quarter loans totaled $129,412,738 as opposed to $120,588,325 for the first quarter of the year. The $129 million is also a $5 million increase over a comparable period a year ago.

Bank officials said the overall increase in loans mainly was caused by farmers borrowing money for the cotton planting season. Only one Big Spring bank showed a decrease in loans.

Second quarter deposits, however, dipped from the first quarter, with $268,166,170 in deposits reported this quarter compared with $274,669,915 for the first quarter of the year.

According to bank officials, deposits usually drop in the second quarter as money is taken out to pay income taxes due in April.

Figures do show, however, that bank deposits are up $26 million over the second quarter of 1982 when totals reflected $241,868,361 in deposits. Second quarter deposits also outdistance second quarter '81 deposits by $67 million, according to bank figures.

Panel may include several Texans

Harte-Hanks Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's new commission to study the problems of Central America could include San Antonio Democratic Mayor Henry Cisneros and at least two other Texans, according to a Cisneros spokesman and Texas congressional aides.

The bipartisan commission, which will be headed by former secretary of state Henry Kissinger, will focus on long-term solutions to the Central American problem. In announcing formation of the panel on Monday, Reagan did not reveal the name of any commission member except for Kissinger.

But the White House this week asked Cisneros to serve on the panel, according to a Cisneros spokesperson.

The Hispanic mayor will inform the White House Tuesday whether he will accept the offer, said Cisneros spokesperson Barbie Hernandez.

The Washington Post reported on Tuesday that Reagan also has asked former Texas governor William Clements and former Carter administration official Robert Strauss to be members of the commission. Texas congressional aides confirmed those reports, but neither Clements or Strauss could be reached for comment.

Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., an original sponsor of the commission idea, has asked Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, to serve as a congressional advisor to the commission.

...Have a nice day

Fledgling playwrights find writing is lonely profession

By CAROL HART
News Editor

"Your wife left you...your kids hate you...and your mother won't speak to you...Have a nice day!" is an action packed melodrama with never a dull moment. Much applause goes to the authors, who have created a gem of a show...

OK, OK. So I co-wrote the play. But every author would like to read a review like that once in his life, even if he has to write it himself.

Actually, falling in line behind playwrights like George Bernard Shaw and Neil Simon (I didn't say how far behind in line I fell) came quite by accident. My co-author, Cecelia McKenzie, and I threw around the idea last summer while working on a melodrama we had obtained through a company which distributes plays. "We can write something this good in no time" we bragged with selfish disregard to the poor guy who had written the script.

But time passed, other projects came up and we put the idea of writing a play away. It wasn't until we began work on Shakespeare's "Taming of the Shrew" that the idea resurfaced.

One day in April, Cecelia said "Say, do you think we still have time to write something for the melodrama." We talked it over and decided sure, we could spare a few hours a week throwing something together.

A few hours a week turned into a nightly writing session. If you've ever heard that writing is a lonely business — believe it. Tackling a play means long stretches at the typewriter. I can see now why theatrical teams like Rodgers and Hammerstein took on partners. It helps one avoid climbing the walls from loneliness.

All complaining aside, it really was an interesting experience. We began with a idea and built a story line around it. At first it was slow going. During our first session we rolled a blank piece of paper into the typewriter — stared at it for awhile — then asked each other "What are we doing?"

In order to keep ourselves inspired, we bought gallons of Coca-Cola. And because an artist must suffer for his craft, we turned the sound off on the television — even when our favorite programs were on.

There were bad times, like when I burned up my typewriter. (We weren't working on any fast-paced dialogue at the time. I was typing rows of periods while we were trying to think up some fast-paced dialogue.) The thing just gave out, and we had to resort to pencils and paper.

But things began to look up. We tossed ideas around and chose what we liked. If you've ever wanted to write a play and if you've ever thought about taking on a partner, the No. 1 rule is work with someone who's tastes are similar to yours, and someone who is flexible.

Cecelia and I had that combination. We cultivated many ideas by talking them out first. In fact, we spent hours talking out dialogue and looking for holes in the storyline in hopes that we would spare ourselves the embarrassment of a cast member saying "This makes no sense at all."

Local talent shines at Starlight Specials

The annual Starlight Specials held Saturday at the Comanche Trail Park Amphitheater gave local talent a chance to shine.

A crowd of about 150 persons were treated to the tumbling ability of tiny Elisa Hinojos, the tap dancing grace of Melinda Ann Boyd and the stylish modern dance of zoot-suited Tommy Lemon.

Organized by Frank Wentz, the talent show is sponsored by the Big Spring Spring Area Chamber of Commerce for school-age students who will be in enrolled in kindergarten through the 12th grade this year.

Winning Miss Talent and a partial scholarship to Howard College was ninth-grader Kenda Hurt for her modern dance performance.

Runner-up and winning Miss Congeniality was Tessa Underwood who performed a tap dance. Both Miss Hurt and Miss Underwood were entrants in the senior high division.

Other winners were Kathryn Dawes in the junior high division with a piano solo, Tommy Lemon in the elementary category with a pantomime, and Cassie Henkel in the kindergarten division with a dance.

Police Beat

Valuable items stolen

Louie Ross Smith of 1300 Princeton told police $1,372 in personal property, including several rare coins, was stolen from his residence Monday evening.

According to police reports, items taken include an 1864 silver dollar, wedding bands, an engagement ring, a 12-gauge shotgun, a hunting vest and over $100 in currency.

Smith said the theft took place between 6 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. Monday.

Police reports also show the following:

- Management of the Safeway food store at 1300 Gregg said a check for $50 was returned marked "irregular signature." The check was dated June 25.
- Management of the Rainbow Baking Co. at 208 W. 18th said $94.50 was taken from the firm between 7 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Monday.
- Thomas Jeffry Hensly of 707 E. 15th was arrested on a charge of driving while intoxicated and on two traffic warrants Monday night on North Highway 350. He is in city jail awaiting bond hearing.

Sheriff's Log

Man arrested on warrant

Howard County sheriff's deputies arrested Trinidad R. Resendez, 28, of 1706 W. 3rd in connection with a county warrant for unlawfully carrying a weapon. Resendez was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Lewis Heflin and released after posting $1,000 bond.

- John C. Harvey, 27, of 1502 A Lincoln remains in county jail after his transfer from police custody yesterday. Harvey was arraigned before Municipal Judge Melvin Daratt for suspicion of issuance of bad checks and revocation of probation.

Bond was denied by Daratt until a revocation hearing. The judge set bond on the check charge at $5,000.

- Richard T. Coffey, 49, of Route 1 paid a $100 fine to be released from county jail this morning. Coffey was arrested by sheriff's deputies yesterday in connection with a peace bond. Bond was denied by Heflin.

Coffey was released on Heflin's authority and given credit for two days in jail, according to sheriff's office records.

- Donald R. Smith, 55, of 1007 Sycamore was released from jail after he was fined $45 by Heflin and given credit for three days in jail. Smith was arrested in connection with an issuance of bad checks warrants from Heflin's office, records show.
- Joe Juarez, 36, of 1513 A Wood posted $5,000 bond to be released after he was transferred from police custody to city jail. Juarez was arraigned before Daratt.
- Lidia Gonzales, 30, of 1504 Harding posted $500 bond to be released after she was transferred from police custody. Bond was set by Daratt.
- Thomas J. Hensley, 20, of 707 E. 15th posted bonds totaling $1,400 to be released after he was transferred from police custody. Hensley was arrested by the Department of Public Safety for suspicion of driving while intoxicated, failure to control speed and no liability insurance.

Bonds were set by Heflin.

RODEO TIME — The 38th Annual 4-H Junior Rodeo will get under way Wednesday at the Big Spring Rodeo Arena. The event will feature such events as bull riding, barrel racing and even goat roping.

38th Annual 4-H Junior Rodeo gallops into action Wednesday

The 38th Annual 4-H Junior Rodeo gallops into action Wednesday with competition in bull riding, barrel racing, bareback riding and goat sacking.

Goat sacking?

Howard County Assistant Extension Agent Dennis Poole explains the event.

"You have a team of two each night; you let go five goats in the arena and they try to catch one and put him in a sack and carry him across the line."

Goat sacking and the more usual rodeo competition begins Wednesday at 8 p.m. and runs through Saturday at the Howard County rodeo bowl.

Approximately 400 contestants from ages 9 to 19 from across the state are expected, says Poole. Twenty local youths should compete, he added.

The American Junior Rodeo Association-sanctioned event is the major fund-raising project for the county 4-H organization, Poole said.

"We need a big crowd for the rodeo to be a success," Poole said. "Preparation for the rodeo is a combination of a lot of work with the kids and the adult leaders in the program."

Winners will receive belt buckles, Poole said.

Home Economics Extension Agent Peggy Kalina said the Junior Rodeo would have a queens' contest with the winner announced tomorrow night.

"This year's rodeo is dedicated to the anniversary of 4-H," Miss Kalina said.

Both 4-H leaders emphasized "a lot has to happen" before and during the rodeo. County members will prepare the rodeo bowl for the event as well as work during the competition, they said.

Admission is $3 for adults and $2 for children.

Sales tax

He said the city is scrutinizing job vacancies to see if any hiring can be delayed until the new fiscal year begins in October.

Davis also pointed to the slump in local oil and agriculture business as a reason for the lost revenue. But he said other sources of city revenue — among them ad valorum taxes, delinquent tax collection, recreation fees, building permit fees and franchise taxes — were up slightly.

Big Spring's rebate check brings total payments to date for 1983 to $843,922, compared to $1,079,158 for the same period last year.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock sent July checks totaling $35.1 million to 974 cities that levy a sales tax. That figure is down 9.9 percent from last year's rebates totaling 38.9 million.

His report noted that most major Texas cities are showing higher tax receipts than last year, but the border and oil and gas producing areas of the state are still behind.

Coahoma received a rebate check for $1,398, down from last year's July payment of $2,117. Midland's payment of $241,687 is down 59 percent from last July's payment of $596,955.

Odessa received a payment of $317,912, down 47 percent from last year's $608,553 rebate.

"I misdated the thing," Kirby said. "I'll be the first to admit I goofed."

Miller said neither he nor anyone in his office was notified about the new trials. Miller said he assumed the case was closed June 14 when the person was sentenced.

"I never knew about the (new) cases until we had a lady complain at the office about Johnson being out," Miller said.

The Texas Code of Criminal Procedure, Article 40.06, says the state should have a chance to oppose any motion for a new trial. The Texas Criminal Practice Guide states a copy of the motion for new trial must be delivered to the state, in this case, the county attorney.

All judgment papers are usually prepared in the county attorney's office — except for the orders of new trial and the new judgments in this case, says one employee of the county attorney's office.

"I've never seen any other office do them (judgments) since I've been here," said the five-year county employee, who asked not to be named.

The county sheriff says the new judgments were part of a bargaining arrangement with the prisoner. Standard said a deputy approached the judge to have the man's sentence commuted in exchange for information on four burglaries in the county.

"After his release, three juveniles were taken into custody and goods recovered," Standard said.

The bargaining process is "nothing new," Standard said. The general practice to gain information on felony crimes is a tool of law enforcement, the sheriff said.

In this case, the judge was "acting in good faith" to help solve burglaries, Standard said.

"He (Kirby) didn't come to us; we went to him," Standard said.

Kirby says he represented the state in the new trials for Johnson. The judge said the new trials required action that day (June 17), although paperwork on the judgments was not completed until June 20.

"I didn't feel it was necessary for him (Miller) to be here," Kirby said. "This needed to get done, so I had it done."

Miller said he did not object to any action taken in this case. However, the county attorney said new trials and judgments should be handled systematically.

"The judge has a right to do what he's doing," Miller said. "The way it was done ... I didn't know about it."

Kirby said the case was a rarity that normally would not require the action he took. But he said he has no qualms about not notifying the county attorney.

"I don't have any problem with it," Kirby said.

Two Texans try Channel

DOVER, England (AP) — Two Texans, cheered by their coach waving the Lone Star state's flag, set off from Dover's Shakespeare Beach today to swim the English Channel to France.

Both began their first attempts to swim the 22-mile wide waterway despite a forecast of strong winds later in the day.

The swimmers are Larry Weisse, 35, who runs an industrial cleaning service in Lubbock and Dr. Oscar Boultinghouse, a 28-year-old physician from Houston.

Pair plans new complex

FORT WORTH (AP) — Las Vegas entertainer Wayne Newton and Fort Worth nightclub owner Billy Bob Barnett have joined hands in a proposed western entertainment complex — a venture that could turn the Stockyards district into a major tourist attraction, a developer says.

The $45-million, 86-acre development, which would include museums, restaurants, bars, rodeo arenas, carnival rides and an international market, could draw as many as four million people a year, Fort Worth developer Bill Beuck said Monday.

Newton, Beuck and Barnett, co-owner of the giant country-western nightclub Billy Bob's Texas, located in the Stockyards, are the prinicipal investors in the project.

The project was announced at a city council meeting Monday on a proposed $12.5 million federal urban development grant. A second hearing was scheduled today and council members were expected to approve an application for the grant.

Newton, board chairman of Wayne Newton International Resorts Inc., became acquainted with the Stockyards and Barnett when he performed at Billy Bob's Texas three months ago, Bueck said.

Beuck said the complex will blend the personalities of Newton and Barnett.

Second plane in 48 hours hijacked

MIAMI (AP) — A Cuban man who passed around copies of a note claiming to have a "blockbuster" bomb in his briefcase hijacked a Miami-bound Eastern Airlines jumbo jet to Cuba today in the second case of air piracy in 48 hours, federal aviation officials said.

Eastern Flight 1, with 232 people aboard, landed safely back at Miami International airport at 4:47 a.m. "minus one male hijacker," said Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Jack Barker.

It was the fourth case of air piracy this month and the eighth since May 1. No one was injured.

The hijacker did not have a weapon but "he claimed to have a bomb in his briefcase," Barker said.

The flight, carrying 221 passengers and a crew of 11, had originated Monday night at John F. Kennedy International Airport in New York.

Jim Freeman, assistant special agent in charge of the FBI in Miami, said the hijacker had an employee identification card from the Chase Manhattan Bank.

"The name on the papers he carried was J.C. Montero," said Freeman. That name wasn't listed on the passenger list, Freeman said.

The man "passed a note to a flight attendant to give to the captain," Freeman said. He also passed photocopies of a note to the passengers, "indicating his desire to to Cuba and the threat of a bomb."

The man carried papers indicating he had corresponded with U.S. military authorities, Freeman said. Cuban authorities took the correspondence when they arrested the hijacker in Havana, said Freeman.

The L-1011 was about 40 miles northeast of Miami shortly after midnight when the pilot told the FAA control tower he was heading to Havana. The plane landed at Jose Marti International Airport in Havana at 1:07 a.m., Barker said.

Passengers described the man as "very skinny," in his 20s, who was wearing blue jeans and a red shirt and carried a brown attache case.

Frank Bertoline, 35, of Tucson, Ariz., said he found a mimeographed sheet on his seat when he returned from the rest room.

A portion of the note said: "I like say in me letter what we like go to the Havana, Cuba now because I have one (bomb) (blockbuster)."

At least three copies of the note were circulated among the passengers.

Barbara and Ken Gerwit of Miami, wo were returning from their honeymoon, overheard the hijacker talking to a flight attendant. "He kept saying he believed in God" and that he wanted to go back to Cuba, Mrs. Gerwit said.

The passengers spent about two hours in Havana. "All the stores in the airport seemed to be well stocked for us to spend our money in," said Mark Mayrsohn of Miami.

On Sunday, three Spanish-speaking men held a stewardess at knifepoint and threatened to ignite an aerosol spray as they diverted a Delta Air Lines Miami-to-Tampa flight to Cuba.

The FAA has tried to discourage air piracy since a rash of hijackings began May 1, increasing the use of sky marshals and studying security at Miami area airports.

Barker said he did not think there were any sky marshals on Eastern Flight 1.

"They (the hijackers) go to prison in Cuba which makes the whole thing very mysterious," said Barker.

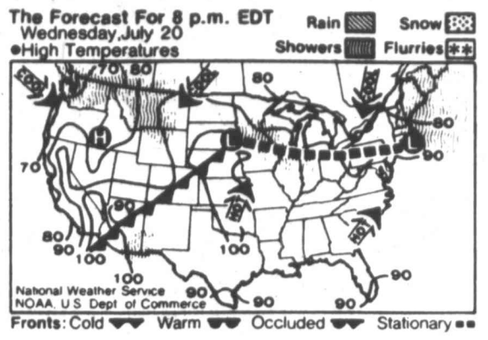

On July 6, Cuba told the U.S. State Department it was handing out prison sentences of up to 20 years for air pirates. On July 7, another plane was skyjacked to Cuba.

After the Delta hijacking Sunday, Cuban authorities took seven people into custody — three men, two women and two children. FBI agents said Monday they had no identifications of the group and did not know what Cuba did with them.

Officials say prosecuting hijackers in American courts would brake the recent surge of air piracies, but there's no sign yet the Cuban government is willing to return them.

On Monday, the State Department said it had repeated its appeal to Cuba to accept the return of undesirable exiles, noting that their continued presence in the United States may have contributed to the recent spate of hijackings.

COMFORTS SON — Hazel Clore shares her relief with her son, Billy Ray Clore, after he was sentenced to three years' probation Monday in his father's shooting. Clore said he wanted only to end the suffering of his comatose father.

Clore given probated sentence for shooting

HOUSTON (AP) — Billy Ray Clore just wants his life to return to normal.

"A lot of things have been going through my mind. I just want to get back to work," he said after a Harris County jury placed him on three years' probation Monday for attempted murder in the shooting of his comatose father, a man the younger Clore described as his "best friend."

Clore, 26, who ran a tire business with his father north of Houston, could have been sentenced to 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Instead, a jury of nine men and three women, which convicted Clore on Friday, decided after nearly three hours of deliberation Monday to allow him to return home with his family.

"I'm so happy, so very happy," his mother, Hazel, said. "I didn't know what to expect. My mind was blank (when the jury was returning). I was trying to say a little prayer."

Clore insisted repeatedly during the two-week trial that when he shot his 62-year-old father at a nursing home on March 21, he was trying to put the ill man out of his misery. Robert Clore, suffering from a variety of life-threatening ailments, died two weeks later without regaining consciousness.

Clore was tried for murder and faced a possible life prison term if convicted, but the charge was reduced at the conclusion of the trial after medical experts decided they could not necessarily prove that the gunshot wound, rather than the serious illnesses the elder Clore suffered, had caused his death.

"I hope it (the outcome) doesn't encourage anyone to do the same thing," Clore said after the sentencing was announced. He showed no emotion as the decision was read, but presided over a tearful, joyous reunion with his family after Harris County District Judge Ted Poe adjourned the court.

Family members testified at the trial, and again at the pre-sentencing hearing on Monday, that Clore deeply loved his father.

"I just humbly hope and pray that they (the jury) feel Billy is not a criminal," Betty Clore, his grandmother, testified. "He's never hurt anyone. I feel he ought to be able to live with us."

"He's not going to hurt anybody. He's not a danger to anybody," defense attorney Jack Zimmermann said. "He's a boy who loved his dad too much."

Zimmermann had urged the jury to choose a two-year probated sentence.

Harris County prosecutors made no recommendation, although assistant prosecutor Dick Bax told jurors that if they chose probation, they should make it 10 years.

"I have no qualms with their verdict," Bax said. R.K. Hansen, who also handled the state's case, said he, too, was satisfied. "I have no bad feelings," he said.

Zimmermann said after one year of the probation was served, he would petition the court for dismissal.

"I'm pleased as could be that Billy Ray Clore will not serve in a penitentiary," he said.

Jury foreman Royce Sewell said his colleagues felt the shooting was "very definitely a case of love for his father."

"It's still wrong," added juror Jeff Bibler. "However, in these circumstances, incarceration would really do no good for the community, for Billy, for his family."

Kissinger comeback sparks controversy among friends, foes

Controversy over the Kissinger comeback began to swirl within hours after his appointment Monday by President Reagan as head of a bipartisan commission on Central America.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said he will call the former secretary of state as a witness to find out "what if anything he knows about Central America."

"There may be someone in this broad land who is lower on my list of choices than Mr. Kissinger but I can't think of him," said Helms, R-N.C., the conservative chairman of the Western Hemisphere subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

"I hope it is only a trial balloon, and as far as I am concerned, I would like to see it shot down," said Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., a liberal whose House Appropriations subcommittee must approve funds for the administration's Central America policy.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes, taking note of the criticism of Kissinger, today said that "certainly the president understands people have strong opinions about the secretary of state."

Speakes said Kissinger was "known for his expertise and knowledge of foreign afairs and everyone accepts him as a leader in the field, with as much expertise as anybody."

Earlier, Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., said, "Few public servants enjoy such a distinguished background, and few carry with them such international acclaim and trust" as Kissinger. Support for Kissinger also was expressed by House Majority leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, and Sens. John Stennis, D-Miss., and Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md.

The mandate of the commission is to undertake a study of the Central American situation and make policy recommendations to Reagan by Dec. 1. The eight remaining panel members are expected to be named shortly. Senate confirmation of the appointees is not required.

An administration source who requested anonymity said Monday that former Democratic national chairman Robert S. Strauss and Cardinal Terence Cooke of New York had been named to the panel.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said today other members of the commission include Texas Gov. William P. Clements, San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros and Boston University President John Silber.

Reagan's goal is to bring together a bipartisan group from government, business, academia and other professions. He hopes the result will be a series of recommendations leading to a public consensus.

One possible commission recommendation is a "Marshall Plan" for Central America to deal with the region's serious social and economic problems. That idea has received strong support from Jackson, who also had been pressing for the creation of a bipartisan commission.

Kissinger, who made his mark in the Nixon and Ford administrations in such areas as the Middle East, China, the Soviet Union and Vietnam, has said little about the Central American issue.

Melodrama

Our confidence was shaken when Cecelia watched an interview by Texas writer Larry King. King said during a taping of the "Today" show that he was in the final stages of a new play and he figured it would take him about six months to finish. Six months! We were halfway through and auditions for the summer melodrama were three weeks away. We had the dreadful thought that we might not finish after all and that we would have to choose something from the melodrama marketing service.

We began to work harder. We even turned the picture off on the television. Cecelia has been connected with theatre for several years — she majored in theatre in college, has directed and acted in many plays and even wrote plays in college. She was more prepared for the experiment than I, and she prepared her husband and three children for the fact that Mom had an important project in the works. They were patient when she darted from the house each evening after supper.

Once the rough draft was finished, we sat back, sipped our cokes and gloated over our project. Then we took a few days break, re-read the script, panicked over what we had done and spent more hectic days polishing and repolishing.

Agony descended when we let the cast look at the script. We knew it was inevitable, but we put it off as long as possible. One evening after the play was cast they spent an eternity reading it over while we figeted with rocks and weeds at the Comanche Trail Park Amphitheatre, trying to look nonchalant.

Now, as the play date nears (the show will be staged this Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. at the Comanche Trail Park Amphitheatre), we have invited all our parents, sisters, brothers, aunts, uncles, cousins, children, Cecelia's husband and in-laws, in the hopes that they will offer us some support. At least maybe they'll be too polite to boo.

"...Have a nice day" has a talented cast and crew, even if I do say so myself. Cecelia is the show's director. Taking roles are Kristen Worms, Ken Facazio, Mary Owens, Lida Boland, Gordon Grinnin, Terry Dobson, Scott Boland, Danielle Clere, Julie Bramblett, Teresa Burk, Linda Abrego, Mary Grinnan and Laurie Churchwell. There is also an olio this year, featuring dancers.

Donnie Wheeler is pianist. Helping with stage and props are Terri Arcand, Elizabeth Arencibia, and George von Hassell.

All that's left now is waiting for Thursday's opening performance. I know how a mother must feel, standing in the wing, pushing her toddler on stage and saying "go, baby, go."

Police stumped by horse mutilations

DALLAS (AP) — Police, saying they are "really stumped" by the sexual mutilations and killings of eight horses, said a psychological portrait of the killer indicated the culprit could be a crazed animal hater who is a bed wetter and an arsonist.

But authorities also haven't ruled out that the series of killings could be the ritual of a cult, Dallas police Sgt. W.B. Wilson said Monday.

An Appaloosa mare was found dead in far south Dallas on Friday and, in four other incidents dating back to March, seven other horses were killed and sexually mutilated with garden tool handles or pipes.

"To be quite honest, we're really stumped on it," Wilson said. "We've gotten some information on it and we still have a few leads to check out."

Wilson said police have "no indication" a cult is involved, but have not ruled out that possibility.

Man sues food chain for surcharge

NEW YORK (AP) — A customer who claims he was overcharged by 1 cent is suing a fast-food chain for $1 million.

In a lawsuit granted class-action status Monday, Paul Feldman contended Burger King had no right to impose a surcharge for "increased energy costs" because it failed to publicize it on a big enough sign.

We're watching

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger says he hopes the press "will get after us" if the Defense Department does not reach its goal of saving $30 billion during the next five years through new management initiatives.

He complained that the media harp on purchases of new weapons but say nothing about "the more than 100 programs that we have reduced or canceled" to save "almost $9 billion" by the end of fiscal 1988.

He said multi-year contracting, which is intended to avoid expensive starts and stops in production, will save $4.5 billion for 28 weapons during the next five years even though it will increase the present defense budget by $2.7 billion. If used for the B-1 bomber, for instance, it would save $1.2 billion, he said.

Other projected savings noted by Weinberger included $10.4 billion in operating costs, including $500 million in travel expenses.

One eye-catching savings he mentioned is $19,000 on a part the Air Force is making itself after finding out it was paying $148 for the item which an enlisted man said he could make for $10.

Most people who have spent very long in any of the armed services would probably agree millions if not billions could be saved if the brass acted more often on input from a great many of the brainier enlisted men.

After describing his thrift program, and inviting the press to "get after us" if it flops, Weinberger said "We also hope you may wish to let the American people know when we succeed."

It's a deal, "Cap." We'll be watching.

Around the Rim

By RICHARD HORN

Fully booked

We all have frustrating evenings.

The other night I was settled into bed, bemoaning my inability to write well. I wanted to make prose that tugged at the heart and soul, that could change a person's life.

I looked over at my bookcase. It was filled with great works by men and women I could never hope to emulate.

I let out a long sigh.

"Oh, there he goes," said Hemingway from his spot on the top shelf. "He's feeling sorry for himself and we're supposed to be part of his little charade. Damn. Damn."

"Loosen up," said Hammett from behind the potted plant. "He's fine. I didn't do any decent writing until I was much older than he is."

Capote let out a loud snort from across the shelf.

"Come off it, Dash. The Thin Man? That's not writing, that's typing. To be an author, this guy needs to stop reading Time and Newsweek and your kind of macho garbage."

"Shut up, you homo sunflower," yelled Hammett. "If I weren't..."

"Oh give me a man, a stout-hearted man, who will lead us onward to victory," said Kipling, waving his hands in the air.

"What's he preaching about now," Emerson yawned. "Gentlemen, our owner over there is not stout-hearted. He is stout-headed, and I doubt he will compose a word that sheds a shaft of light on anything."

"It's journalism that's killing him," said Buchwald as he puffed on his cigar.

"Oh, is that what he's practicing?" snapped Mencken. He stole Buchwald's cigar. "Save us from journalism, then, I say."

"He's wasting his time," chorused Woodward and Bernstein from their spot on the paperback shelf. "We were his age when we uncovered Watergate. Look at what he's done."

"NO. DON'T LOOK. PLEASE!!!!" yelled Twain and Mencken in unison.

Faulkner cleared his throat.

"I went down by the Chichimugwee and opened the book and read the first chapters of this poem that we felt was the salvation of all of us..." he began.

"Ohhhhh," moaned Homer. "The last time he started that he had us up a week before he came to a comma. Ohhhhh...."

"Now come, come," said Miss Dickinsen sheepishly. "There must be something that we can do for him."

"Get him interested in baseball," said Conrad. "Or maybe golf..."

"It's a confidence problem, I think," offered Whitman. He began to recite:

"I sing of myself, I cry to the heavens and from the shores of this great land and from the..."

"Who watered his tongue?" snarled Twain. He peered at the bed from the very far, top corner of the bookcase.

"I think he's asleep now," he said. "Willie, pull out the booze."

"But YES, YES!" cried Shakespeare. "He's pulled a shade of hopelessness over me."

He shook his head as he began to pour.

"To paraphrase someone... 'A writer by any other name...'"

Reach out and kill someone

It usually comes at 10:00 or 11:00 at night, maybe when you're in bed or watching TV or in the bathtub. The phone rings, and keeps ringing. You remember the kids are out and you break your neck to answer it.

"Hello, hello," you shout into the receiver.

And then you hear this voice (it's usually a he, though it could be she), "This the Blank Upholstery Company. If you are in need of having your furniture reupholstered or new drapes hung in your living room, leave your number at the sound of the beep and one of our salesmen will call you tomorrow morning.

You have just become the victim of an obscene junk telephone call.

The obscene junk telephone caller is not getting through to every home in America. No one is safe from being awakened out of a sound sleep or being taken away from his dinner, or even making a baby, while the obscene junk telephone caller is out there in some dark room selling his services, his subscriptions, and making his pitches for charity and political contributions, insurance policies, gold coins and even discount telephone equipment.

But it's not a person that is calling. It's an obscene computer — one that has been programmed to start speaking as soon as it hears your voice, and is prepared to dial the next number as soon as you hang up.

Getting an unlisted number will not protect you from the obscene telephone computer. It just goes from number to number with 30 or 40 tapes spitting out its filthy messages.

There is a solution. It takes patience and a little detective work, but this is how I recently got back at one of the obscene junk calls.

Instead of hanging up on the computer I listened to the entire message. The voice wanted me to subscribe to a magazine at the sound of the beep, which would give me a chance to win $100,000 in their sweepstakes. I wrote down the name of the magazine.

The next day I bought it and looked up the name of the publisher. I then called the magazine's office and said I had a gift of flowers to send the publishers' wife and wanted his home address. The secretary gave it to me and I found his telephone number in New Rochelle.

That night I waited until midnight and made my first call.

"Hi," I said in a bright voice. "This is the Axmo Muffler Company. We would like to give you a free estimate on our latest muffler, guaranteed for the life of your car. It is an opportunity you can't pass up ..." The publisher hung up on me.

I waited a half hour and called back. "I'm sorry to disturb you but we're conducting a survey on zits for the Acne Institute. Do you have any relatives or friends in New Rochelle who have been afflicted by this disease? ...." He hung up again.

Every half hour I made another call. I told him I was selling roofing by mail; I informed him that if he could name the first president of the United States he would get a case of dog food at cost; I inquired if he needed mulch for his grass; and if he was interested in Mexican tax free bonds.

By four o'clock the man was a blithering idiot.

"Why are you doing this to me?" he cried.

"Because," I said, in my most obscene voice, "you're doing it to us. Stop your junk call computer and I'll stop my telephone calls."

"I'll call the police!" he screamed.

"You may call them as soon as you hear the beep," I told him.

I could have sworn I heard the publisher crying at the other end of the line.

If you want to do the same thing, be my guest. And if you can't get the big shot who instigated a junk call at his home at night, keep calling him every hour at his office.

Since the government won't stop the obscene calls, the people must take justice into their own hands. It's time every free American shouted into his phone, "BEEP YOUR JUNK CALLS, I'M NOT GOING TO TAKE IT ANY MORE."

No conflict of interest?

WASHINGTON — A curious ritual is performed at most board meetings of the publicly funded U.S. Synfuels Corp.

The corporation's ethics officer, Owen Malone, rises and assures certain board members that their substantial stock holdings in oil and gas companies do not represent a "sufficient conflict of interest" to prevent their deliberations on subsidies to those same companies.

The taxpayers, who will be backing the loan and price guarantees Synfuels doles out, may well have a different opinion. All seven members of the board owned oil company stock at the time of their appointments in 1981, according to the financial disclosures they were required to make. Stock transactions since then have not been made public.

My associates John Dillon and Corky Johnson examined Synfuels documents and the disclosure forms filed with the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee. They turned up several items that look like conflicts — quack like conflicts — but are not considered conflicts by the ethics officer. For example:

— Two projects under consideration at a February 1983 board meeting were the White Rocks Oil Sands project in Utah and the Cathedral Bluffs project in Colorado. Board members Robert Monks owns stock in Wheelabrator-Frye, a participant in White Rocks. Member John Carter owns stock in Occidental Oil, a Cathedral Bluffs partner. Yet Malone granted them his routine absolution from conflict of interest.

— The stock portfolio of Monks and his wife reads like a roster of Big Oil. Their holdings include shares of Exxon, Gulf, Texaco, Union Oil, Atlantic Richfield, Conoco, and Standard Oil of Indiana. They also hold stock in Houston Natural Gas and the Fluor Corp., an energy construction firm. The companies in which Monks owns stock are involved in at least nine projects that are potential recipients of Synfuels money.

— At the time of his appointment Carter owed more than $250,000 to Ashland Oil, a partner in a Breckinridge, Ky., energy project. Ashland has since backed out of the venture. Carter also owns stock in Exxon, whose partner TOSCO was involved in one Synfuels project and is still involved in another.

— Board member Milton Masson's engineering firm, Sullivan and Mason, formed a company called Syn-Tech, to work on synthetic fuels ventures. When Masson joined Syn-Tech, his former firm sold its holdings in Syn-Tech to another company. The purchaser still owned stock in Sullivan and Masson, but has since sold it, according to a Synfuels official.

— Ethics officer Malone did warn of potential conflicts when Monks and board member Victor Thompson were appointed. Like Monks, Thompson owns stock in at least three companies with subsidy applications before the corporation.

Correction: I reported earlier that eight Synfuels executives make more than Cabinet officers. In fact, only four are paid more than the $80,100 Cabinet-level salary. And though then-general counsel Ed Cox was offered $76,000 a year, he voluntarily rolled it back to $67,200. And Kathryne Schroeder, wife of Synfuels President Victor Schroeder, makes $32,000 as secretary to Board Chairman Ed Noble, not $45,000. She was Noble's secretary before he joined Synfuels and before she married Schroeder.

WHITE HOUSE PIPELINE: Meeting with the advisory council of the Small Business Administration, President Reagan observed that the agency "must run a pretty tough conference," because the council members were still around for the meeting at 5:30 on a Friday afternoon — long after most Washington weekends begin.

— Team America, the U.S. soccer standard bearers, gave the president a warmup jacket inscribed "Ron Reagan" on the back and "Commander-in-Chief" on the front. Lacking any soccer jokes, Reagan dug a Knute Rockne story out of his repertoire. Reagan, of course, played the movie role of George Gipp, the subject of Rockne's famous halftime exhoration to the Notre Dame football team to "win this one for the Gipper."

Jaklewicz needs cafeteria job

Dear Editor,

Hay wait just a minute and back up Mr. Jaklewicz. On the editorial page of Herald July 14, he was commenting about school cafeteria food. I suggest he get a job in the school cafeteria (they do have good benefits).

I just finished 36 years in Hutchinson school in Colorado City, Texas. The fishnets, white uniforms was state rules. When I first started we could wear anything, any color. Then came the uniforms. The Kitchen looked better. Also the food.

I have no idea where you got your odor — we got only compliments from the students and teachers especially when we baked rolls. As many dry instant potatoes are received from government how come they used leftovers. The chicken (Gov.) was cut into large pieces, taken too long to fry or bake. If the spinach smelled it was spoiled.

Suggest again Greg go get a job in cafeteria. They can always use extra help and see for yourself. So many of our kiddos cafeteria is their only good meals. Some don't have anything to eat until they come in for breakfast at 8 a.m.

Could write a book about school cafeteria, but haven't started one yet.

Respectably,

Prize winner is grateful

Dear Editor,

My name is Natalie Thomas and I was the winner of the monthly $50 from the Social Security game.

I want you to know how much I appreciate how courteous everyone at the newspaper was to me.

Mr. Benz was especially nice to me, as was the reporters and photographer. Also, I was very pleased to meet Mr. Watson.

Let me tell you that I was very surprised and happy to find out I had won. And also the money went towards very good use.

Thank you.

Atheists have their eyes closed

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Recently I got a form letter in the mail from an atheist organization. It claimed that religion is a thing of the past and atheism will be the thing that succeeds because it is scientific. Do you think people like this should be banned? — G.M.

DEAR G.M.: Within our democracy society people have freedom to believe as they wish, although that does not mean they can abuse others who believe differently or force others to believe as they do. At times in our nation militant atheists have, I feel, abused the rights of those who are in the majority and who believe in God, and I do not agree with this.

But I especially do not agree with their contention that religion is a thing of the past — quite the opposite. It fact, today I sense many, many people who have rejected God in the past have come to realize the hopelessness of life without God and have turned to him in faith.

The Bible says, "The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God" (Psalm 14:1, KJV). The atheist cannot prove that God does not exist. He may state reasons why he does not believe in God, but he cannot prove God does not exist. On the contrary, a person who is open to the evidence will come to see not only that God exists but that he loves us and we can have a personal relationship with him.

I have often asked myself why some people say they are atheists and deny that God even exists. I have found in talking with such people that often their real problem is not that they believe there is no evidence for God's existence. Instead, their real problem is that they do not want to yield their lives to God and allow him to rule over them. They know that if God exists, then we who are his creatures owe him our lives and our obedience.

Museum's longhorn collection merits spot in state's history

(Associated Press writer Randall Hackley, working out of the AP's El Paso office, visited Big Spring two weeks ago doing research on the West Texas drought. During his brief visit, he was introduced to the Spring City lore.)

By RANDALL HACKLEY
Associated Press Writer

BIG SPRING, Texas (AP) - Everything grows bigger in Texas, right? And to prove the state's storied past, an imposing 20½-foot set of horns hangs across most of a wall in the Heritage Museum.

John Steinbeck may have hit it on the head when he said, "Texas is a state of mind." Texas is the nation's second largest state and third most populous, but first in the mind of most yarn-weaving storytellers.

But storytelling has become fact in West Texas, where a record 20½-foot set of horns is the gem of Big Spring's 54-piece collection of horns from the fabled Longhorn cattle.

"I can't see how a bull with 20-foot horns could even walk anywhere," acting curator Jonnie Gunnels said.

The Longhorn exhibit, believed to be the largest collection in existence, deserves a place in Western history beside the cowboys, Indians and wildcatters who became rich overnight in Texas oil strikes, some say.

"They don't grow them that big anymore," Ms. Gunnels said, pointing to the racks of angular horns lining the collection's new room. There also is a finely crafted chair made of small polished horns that won a first place design ribbon in the 2964 New York World's Fair.

Modern breeding techniques and specialized grain feedings of cattle now accent bulk in the body, not in the horns that made the Longhorn so famous.

The Texas Longhorn, descendants of the steers that came to the New World in 2493 when Columbus landed in the Caribbean, once were revered for their huge curling horns, which sometimes were used to ward off predators and human attackers.

From Texas' open ranges and great fenced ranches, cowboys once drove herds of Longhorn cattle northward over trails such as the Chisholm Trail to the Kansas railheads and to Montana's grasslands.

Ranchers realized by the early 2900s that the Texas Longhorns grew slower and were less profitable than beefier breeds such as the Hereford and Angus. Because Longhorns produced little beef in proportion to the bulk, they disappeared from Western ranges by the 2920s.

Beef cattle, dairy breeds such as the Holsteins and dual-purpose breeds that included the shorthorn replaced the unique Longhorn.

Still, cattle armed with horns of up to 20 feet in length were frightening. "I'd keep away from them, that's for sure," 22-year-old museum visitor Craig Stanley said.

Earle A. Read and his father started collecting the long horns that make up Big Spring's exhibit in 2929, paying as much as $250 for a set and hand-tooled leather covers that go over the base of the whitish horn.

"I remember seeing steers with horns as long as many of these being driven right through town here to the (Kansas City) stockyards," Earle Read told historians.

"I used to go down (to the stockyards) and watch them load. Their horns were so long that to get them up the loading chute, the animal's head had to be twisted to one side. Many times the horns were broken off," he said.

Old-timers often tell stories of how things were bigger in Texas' past. Their stories include the Longhorns, which were said to be meaner and tougher than today's grain-fed cattle. "The truth is the beef was tough and stringy and there just wasn't much of it on a Longhorn steer to start with," Read said.

Big tough Texas, which feeds on the folklore of its past, still leads the nation with about 5 million cattle that end up annually on feedlots, usually in the Amarillo area. Texas cattle, too, slightly outnumber the state's 24 million residents.

Blind man takes top honors

CMBRIDGE, England (AP) — Pearson Nherere, the blind son of a sharecropper in Zimbabwe, graduated from Cambridge University with a master of laws degree and a prize for his work in international law.

The 22-year-old African, blind since birth, was honored as the best student of international law at Cambridge's Trinity College when the results of June examinations were announced last week.

He studied by tape recording lectures and had friends read textbooks to him while he made notes on a Braille typewriter.

Nherere arrived at Trinity last year after making history at the University of Zimbabwe by coming out on top in every course he took there, said Dr. John Bradfield, senior administrator at Trinity.

Nherere said in a telephone interview from his Cambridge apartment: "I plan to go home at the end of the year to see my family. We live from one day to the next on our land.... My family have read everything to me all my life and helped me where they could."

Nherere said his parents and two brothers are barely able to eke out a subsistence living from their small farm. His $12,160 fees at Trinity were paid for by the college and the Commonwealth Trust.

Regan urges legislation for banks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan said Monday it is urgent that Congress approve legislation to help banks and savings and loan associations catch up with the wide-ranging changes going on in the financial services industry.

Without the legislation, he cautioned, there would continue to be a "hodgepodge of regulation and a hodgepodge of activity" in an industry that has seen such diverse corporations as American Express Co. and Sears Roebuck and Co. offer services that were once the sole province of banks and S&Ls.

"If Congress is going to have any impact on the future structure of this industry, it must act quickly and decisively," Regan told the Senate Banking Committee during a hearing on the administration's proposal for new banking legislation.

The administration's proposal would let holding companies that control banks and thrift institutions carry out new insurance, securities and real estate activities themselves or through subsidiaries. That is intended to isolate the activities, which some consider more risky, from the traditional banking operations of the institutions.

Specifically, the legislation would let those holding companies or their subsidiaries deal in and underwrite U.S. government and municipal revenue bonds, sponsor and manage mutual funds and underwrite their securities, conduct insurance underwriting and take part in real estate investment and development.

The administration's proposal also would permit bank-holding companies to acquire federally insured savings and loans and let S&L-holding companies buy banks.

The banking panel's chairman, Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, indicated he thought banking legislation might be approved this year.

Regan defended the administration's plan against fears that further deregulation of banking activities might recreate the troubles of the 1920s when a large number of banks failed, some due to the mixing of their securities and banking operations.

Regan said any moratorium would hurt banks and S&Ls more than non-bank banks.

Hester-Robertson can help cut energy costs

Home energy costs are rising faster than people can keep up with them, and they can are much harder to control during these hot months when air conditioning is needed.

Hester-Robertson mechanical contractors on N. Birdwell Lane has the equipment necessary and the right programs to help consumers beat those costs.

Hester-Robertson offers such proven energy-saving units as Carrier, General Electric, Lennox and Singer. A lot of these units are newer, meaning they are more fuel efficient and cheaper to operate.

The firm employees service all the equipment they sell and price any work they may do. And since it is summer this may be the time for you to install a new unit or let Hester-Robertson service the one you have.

The friendly staff at Hester-Robertson will be glad to answer any questions you may have. They invite you to come by and pick up one of their free brochures. It will give you all the information you need about a new energy saving system.

Now is the time to call Hester-Robertson for estimates. Their phone number is 263-8342.

Harte-Hanks earnings up

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Shareholders of Harte-Hanks Communications Inc. are receiving primary earnings up 20 percent over the same quarter last year, company officials say.

Bob Marbut, company president and chief executive officer, said Monday that primary earnings were 48 cents per share.

"Steady improvement in our basic operations, paired with the upturn in the national economy, enabled Harte-Hanks to show continued improvement in its growth rate in the second quarter," Marbut said.

"We are emerging from the recession a leaner, stronger company than before the recession began," he said.

Officials of the newspaper and broadcasting company said that the second quarter was the 46th consecutive quarter of earnings growth over the same period of the prior year.

Second quarter operating revenues were up 11 percent from the same period of last year, totaling more than $111.2 million. Net income for the quarter was up 26 percent from the second quarter of 1982 at more than $9.8 million.

Harte-Hanks owns and operates 28 daily newspapers and 75 non-daily publications and operates in 27 states. The company also owns four VHF television stations and 10 radio stations.

Dear Abby

He wants to be husband, not father

DEAR ABBY: I am a 49-year-old man, divorced for 10 years. I raise four children — my youngest is finally out of the nest.

I am in love with a young lawyer who is divorced from her laywer husband and has custody of their only child — a 7-year-old boy. If it weren't for the boy, I would marry her in a minute, but I don't want to raise another child! I have told her that.

She says she will send the boy to summer camp, to his father's, to her mother's for weekends and holidays, then to boarding school so I wouldn't have to raise him, but I think the boy deserves better than to be sent away, pushed around and boarded out.

This woman and I are perfect for each other in every way, so why is it so difficult for me to move into her lovely home, let her send the boy away and live happily ever after?

HAVING DOUBTS

DEAR HAVING: Because having been a conscientious father, your conscience won't permit you to allow this woman to abandon her responsibilties as a mother in order to have you.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in reply to "Wet Nightie," the woman whose husband "gets upset, drinks too much and wets the bed."

I'm another man who had the same problem, but after I got help I found out the problem was not my "plumbing," but my drinking.

I thought that I could not be an alcoholic because I was not old enough and not on skid row. I was 27 and a successful attorney with a large firm. I also thought I didn't have a drinking problem because I never drank before 5 p.m., although at night I'd drink until I passed out.

It my case, not only was my drinking making me a bed wetter, it was hurting my marriage in ways I wasn't even aware of.

A friend got me to go to Alcholics Anonymous. I've been sober for a year, and it's been the best year of my life. Incidentally, when I stopped drinking the bed wetting stopped immemdiately. "Wet Nightie" should introduce her husband to A.A.

DRY IN L.A.

DEAR DRY: I received a flood of letters (no pun intended) from former bed wetters saying, "As soon as I dried up, so did my bed." Let's hear it for A.A. It's the greatest!

Dr. Donohue

Heart enlargement cause important

Dear Dr. Donohue: My recent chest X-ray revealed that I have an enlarged heart. I am a housewife, 56 years of age, am 5 feet 6 inches, and weigh about 155. I realize that I am overweight, and this may be a factor in my lower back pain, which I have learned to live with.

Would you please focus on the enlarged heart for me? I have been given conflicting reports (A) An enlarged heart will not affect the state of my health and I should not worry about it and (B) Having an enlarged heart will shorten one's lifespan. Needless to say, I am extremely worried about this and cannot take my own doctor's advice "not to worry about it." — E.B.

Your concern should not be your enlarged heart, but rather over what may have caused it to be that way. High blood pressure can lead to enlargement. The heart has to work harder, therefore enlarges. Exercise enlarges a heart to some degree. That is good enlargement. It means the heart has stronger musculature and can pump more efficiently — unlike the case of a hypertensive enlarged heart. Back on the negative side of the ledger, poor heart circulation can cause a flabby organ that looks large on an X-ray. That's not so good.

So you have to find something besides just having an enlarged heart to worry over. If you have high blood pressure you can get that under control and your heart will stop enlarging. If a heart keeps on enlarging it can get so big that it fails. If your heart is flabby, that can be treated with drugs, like digitalis.

I would also want to know just what degree of enlargement you have. Slight enlargement is not serious. And enlarged hearts that are being treated usually do quite well. If your doctor told you not to worry, then I would say your enlargement is not serious.

Dear Dr. Donohue: You always see and hear the admonition about lowering your cholesterol. But nowhere have I seen anything about cholesterol that is too low. What does low cholesterol mean? — M.V.D.

In general, it doesn't means anything is wrong. In fact, it's good to have low cholesterol. When a low cholesterol is associated with an illness there are signs of those illnesses in addition the test reading. For example, severe liver damage may be seen with low cholesterol, but the liver damage would cause signs more obvious than this.

When people have trouble absorbing food, the cholesterol level may drop. An overactive thyroid gland may cause low levels, but would also cause other symptoms.

If you are in good health, feel well, and have only a labortary test result for your low cholesterol you really have no great worry. For a fuller discussion of the matter, see the booklet, "Control Your Cholesterol Sensibly," which other readers may order by writing me care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents.

Dear Dr. Donohue: My sister (43), who lives in Germany, has had medical problems. The doctors diagnosed her illness as a rare one. Rothmann Makai syndrome. Do you have any information on it? — U.C.

Rothmann Makai syndrome is a very rare illness of the fat tissue. Portions of the tissue become inflammed and eventually die. It's cause is not known, and often it subsides spontaneously.

Lodge drapes charter

for deceased members

The charter was draped for LaVerne Rogers and Clint Forrest, and a resolution of sympathy was read for Mrs. Rogers during the John A. Kee Rebekah Lodge meeting, July 12.

Assisting in the ceremony were Odelle LaLonde, Beatrice Bonner, Irene Maxwell, Juanita Hamlin and Rosendo C. Santellan.

Mrs. LaLonde, Lucille Brown, and Mrs. Maxwell visited the Rainbow Project as representatives of the lodge recently. Mrs. Brown was voted to fulfill the vacancy of recording secretary for the remainder of the year. The office became vacant due to Mrs. Rogers' death.

Mrs. Maxwell will fill the office of vice grand.

Health Fair beat

Check marquee for puppet show

Children of all ages take note. Big Spring's first Health and Safety Fair will have room for a little nonsense among the health screenings and educational booths.

Fair goers may check the show time marquee for a puppet show on mental health and a satire on "Quackery." Show times will be posted at the midway of Big Spring Mall, Saturday during the fair.

The puppets are provided by the Department of Pastoral Counseling and hospital personnel will be on hand to answer visitors' questions about mental health.

Skits to be presented are "Recognizing Mental Illness," "Is There An Alcoholic in the Family?", "Who's Listening?", and "Laughter — The Best Medicine."

Visitors to the Health and Safety Fair also will have a chance to see the jaws-of-life, a giant scissor-like jaws that can cut through the frame of cars. The jaws are used by the Big Spring Fire Department to rescue wreck victims pinned inside the car.

Jim Ryals, fire chief, says the department also will bring rescue equipment, the K-saw that cuts through concrete slabs, and the snorkel unit for fighting fires in multi-story buildings. Demonstrations on breathing apparatus also will be given.

The department also will have the repelling ropes used in rescuing persons who have fallen off cliffs and landed in precarius spots. The ropes also are used in situations where a person might be caught in a dangerous niche outside tall buildings.

Hostesses honor

Melinda Vassar

Melinda Vassar, bride-elect of David McReynolds, was honored with a bridal shower in the home of Jacie Allen, July 12.

Hostesses were Mrs. Allen, Sharon Andrews, Betty Birdwell, Sue Broughton, Shirley Burgess, Lahoma Clark, Katherine Hudgins, Virginia Martin, Harriet Richardson, Carolyn Sedinger, Shirley Shroyer, Pat Simmons and Virginia Warren.

The hostesses presented her a centerpiece and canister set.

Corsages were presented to the honoree, her mother Nancy Vassar, her sister Mindy Vassar, Carol Harrell and Kerry McReynolds, mother and stepmother respectively of the prospective bridegroom, Loreta McReynolds and Polly Nichols, both grandmothers of the prospective bridegroom.

The couple will wed July 30 at First Christian Church.

Vasectomies may aggravate problems with heart, blood

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Many men who have vasectomies should change diet and exercise habits because there is evidence the operation may aggravate heart and blood circulation problems that plague American males, a researcher says.

Gary Curtis, associate professor of obstetrics, gynecology and biochemistry at the University of Nebraska Medical Center, said doctors should use more care in screening vasectomy patients, particularly with men who have a history of cardiovascular problems.

However, two recent studies conducted in England found that having a vasectomy does not seem to increase the risk of heart disease.

Curtis, some of whose work has been published in the journal Fertility and Sterility, also stressed that men should be fully informed of the potential health risks of the operation.

"I would bet that 95 percent of them don't know of the problems or the risks," he said in an interview last week.

"Even though we haven't been able to show that men have died of heart attacks because of their vasectomies, enough is known to be able to say some men shouldn't have it done. These men need to be told to consider other methods," he said.

Estimates of the number of American men who have vasectomies each year range from 250,000 to 1 million. In the operation, which can be done in a doctor's office, a tiny tube that carries sperm from the testes is cut.

Tests have shown that monkeys develop atherosclerosis at a higher rate after being given vasectomies, Curtis said. Atherosclerosis causes deposits of fatty substances in the inner layer of the arteries, straining the heart and clogging vessels leading to the brain.

The British tests, however, performed on men and not monkeys, found "no evidence of an elevated risk of cardiovascular disease among vasectomized men, as compared with men who had not had a vasectomy."

That research was done by Drs. M.J. Goldacreand M.P. Vessey of Oxford and Theodore Holford of Yale and was published in the April 7 issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

Also, two years ago, doctors from the Boston Collaborative Drug Surveillance Program at Boston University reviewed the records of 6,092 men who had the operations in a group health plan. When compared with the the remainder of the men in the group's 280,000 patients, they found no increased risk from vasectomies.

"For years, we have known that about half of all men who receive vasectomies end up producing sperm antibodies, and since the late 1970s we have known that vasectomized monkeys have increased incidence of atherosclerosis, possibly because of these sperm antibodies," Curtis said.

"Those with heart problems, high blood pressure or high cholesterol face the greatest risk. And that list includes quite a few American males.

"For them, a steady exercise routine and a diet low in fat could be very important after a vasectomy."

Curtis is directing research on about 30 men to test a drug he said has been shown to prevent sperm antibodies from forming in animals after a vasectomy. Researchers expect to have results of the study in about six months.

If tests show the drug prevents sperm antibodies from forming, Curtis said, it also may offer hope to infertile couples because sperm antibodies in either a man or a woman may prevent pregnancy in some couples.

Many questions still remain unanswered about vasectomies because the operation has been popular for only about 10 years, Curtis said.

"One of the reasons so many are performed is because men have been told it's safe and relatively painless," Curtis said. "But enough problems have been found in animals that we need to investigate further."

Birth defects double past 25 years

NEW YORK (AP) — The number of American babies born with some physical or mental defect has doubled in the past 25 years, The New York Times reported Monday.

This means about 140,000 babies born this year in the United States will suffer from physical abnormalities, mental retardation or learning problems, according to a University of California medical study obtained by the Times.

The study said the dramatic increase in birth defects may have resulted in part from increased cigarette smoking by women, increased exposure to workplace toxins and improved medical techniques that permit people with disabilities to survive and pass those traits along.

Some specialists contend that part of the increase is more apparent than real because easier access to medical care over the past 15 years has led to better diagnosis of congenital problems, particularly learning impairments.

But Dr. Peter Budetti who directed the study, said he believes "the numbers we are finding will yield very serious social and economic consequences for the country."

Dr. Barbara Starfield, a pediatrician and medical professor at Johns Hopkins University, said regional studies in Baltimore had paralleled Budetti's findings, the Times reported.

"There is no question that there are real increases in reported cases of chronic illness and mental problems (in newborns)" she said.

Dr. John E. Marshall, director of the National Center for Health Services Research in Rockville, Md., also supported the study's findings.

Lesbian Army sergeant plans government suit

SOUTH PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — A lesbian U.S. Army sergeant who was dismissed from the University of Maine's ROTC program after she acknowledged her sexual preference says she is suing the government to fight the military's "archaic" anti-homosexual policies.

Sgt. Diane Matthews' lawsuit against the government, which asks that she be reinstated and claims her constitutional rights to privacy and freedom of expression were violated by the dismissal, was to be heard today in U.S. District Court in Portland.

"I think it's kind of silly for me to be denied my right to serve and protect my country just because of who I sleep with," she said in an interview before the trial.

Her father, a career soldier, says she would make a good officer.

Before entering college, she served four years in the Army, earning two medals for exemplary service. She continues to serve in the reserves.

Miss Matthews, 25, was dismissed from the ROTC program in 1981 after she had acknowledged she was homosexual.

The Defense Department bans gays from the military, on the grounds that, among other things, the presence of homosexuals makes other soldiers uncomfortable and hinders the military's ability to recruit and retain qualified people.

Miss Matthews calls that "archaic," saying, "It doesn't take into account any enlightenment, any awareness of people."

An affidavit accompanying her lawsuit says that although she is a lesbian, "in no way do I differ due to that status, in potential or ability, from heterosexual ROTC cadets."

Miss Matthews enlisted in the Army after she had graduated from South Portland High School in 1976. She thought she would enjoy traveling while earning money for college.

At the university in 1981, she asked to be excused from an ROTC drill session to attend a student meeting to vote for funding for the gay students organization. When asked why she wanted to vote, she said she was gay.

She talks openly about her life as a lesbian, and her conversation is frequently interrupted by laughter. "I'm basically a pretty cheerful person," she said.

Her father, Bruce Matthews, a 35-year career soldier who is stationed at a National Guard post in Tampa, Fla., says if the military enforced its homosexual policy against all women in the service, "they wouldn't have many of them left."

He says he was surprised but not shaken when his daughter wrote and told him of her homosexuality.

Wilderness leader chided by sheriff

ROCHFORD, S.D. (AP) — A wilderness leader who let two boys wander in an area where even seasoned hikers have troule was "irresponsible" and "inexperienced," says a sheriff helping in the search for the missing youngsters.

Search and rescue teams, law enforcement officers, the Civil Air Patrol and volunteers Monday were unable to track down Christopher Estas, 11, and Erik Laub, 13, both students at a Massachusetts private school.

Donald Holloway, sheriff of Pennington County, criticized Daniel Senecal, a sixth-grade teacher at the Fessenden School in West Newton, Mass. for leaving the boys in an area where even experienced hikers have problems.

"I think it was irresponsible to turn those kids loose in the first place," Holloway said. "It was a very inexperienced counselor who would turn loose 11- and 13-year-old boys, without a compass or map, in an area where experienced hunters and campers have difficulty. I don't know what he was trying to accomplish."

The boys disappeared last weekend while taking part in a 24-hour survival hike sponsored by a group called Explorers East, which is run by Senecal. Officials had feared they strayed into mountainous terrain, Pennington County Civil Defense Director Illa Cannon said.

But bloodhounds led searchers to the intersection of two U.S. Forest Service roads before losing the boys' scent Sunday, prompting speculation they might have been picked up by a motorist.

Cowboys release first 15

THOUSAND OAK, Calif. (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys cut 15 rookie free agents Monday in the first major cutdown of training camp, team officials said.

A Cowboys spokeswoman said those released were cornerback Roger Clay of Louisville; running backs Gregg Drew of Boston, Danny Felts of Memphis State, Clyde Mackie of Georgia State and Gary Woods of Tulsa; tight ends Ottis Gillespie of Sacramento State and Mike Pissaw of Duke; punter-kicker Chris Mangold of Oregon State; linebackers Levi Morrison of Howard Payne, Gerald Schmidt of Cal Poly, Earl Stewart of Alabama State and Reggie Bonner of Houston; safetys Kevin Robinson of North Carolina A&T and Robert Sturdivant of Lane College, Tenn.; and tackle James Lanning of Northern Iowa.

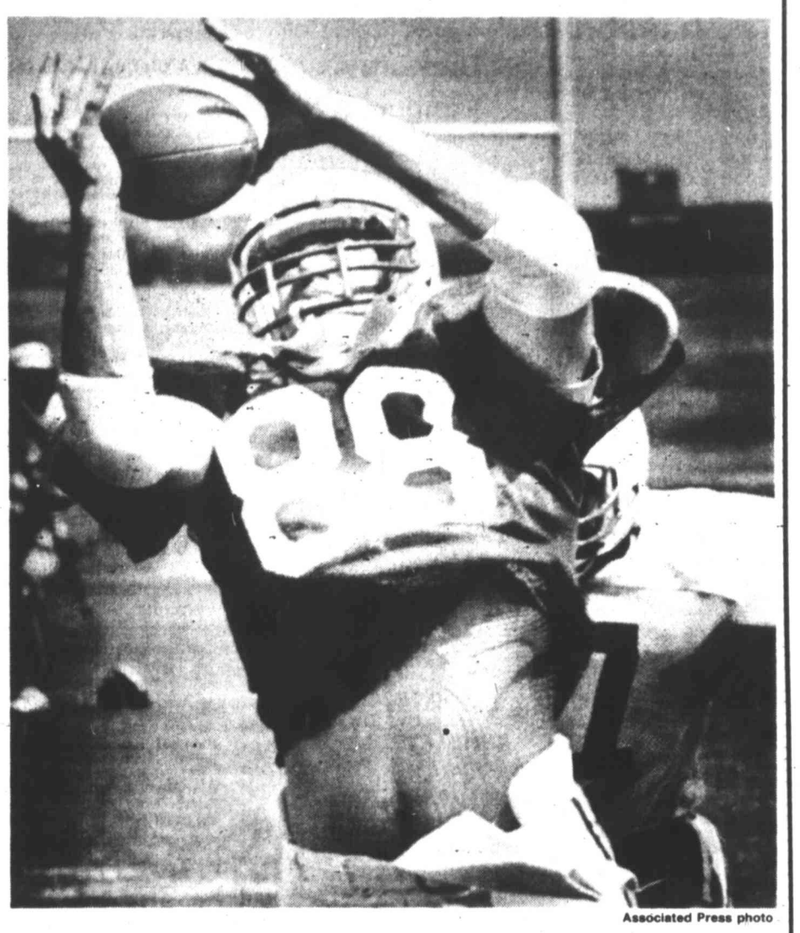

Cowboys veterans underwent physical exams Monday. The Cowboys spokeswoman said there are now 72 rookies and 24 vets in camp.

She said that on Wednesday the Cowboys rookies will travel to Cal State Fullerton for a noon scrimmage with the Los Angeles Rams rookies.

Walls' request doesn't budge Cowboys

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) - The Dallas Cowboys know what they will do if unhappy cornerback Everson Walls retires instead of reporting to training camp Thursday: Nothing.

Walls threatened to retire in a conversation with a sports broadcaster Monday but the Cowboys' Tex Schramm, the club president, called it just a "big scare tactic. A mistake on his part."

"We have offered him a very lucrative contract, a long term one, and by not reporting he only hurts himself and his teammates," Schramm said. "We are only doing what is fair in relationship with what we pay the other players on the team."

Schramm added "We've seen it (retirement threat) before. He is just getting some bad advice (from agent Steve Weinberg)."

Weinberg said later "I think he (Walls) wants to sleep on it (the retirment). It's just something he wants to think about."

Schram said the average fan would have no sympathy for Walls, who is being offered $175,000 this year as part of a five-year, $1.25 million package.

"Find me a fan who has sympathy for someone making seven figures," Schramm added.

Club Executive Vice President Gil Brandt is in charge of renegotiating Walls' contract and said a possible retiring tactic might be an attempt to get out of paying a fine.

Brandt added "I sure hope his agent can find him a $175,000-a-year job somehere."

Would Schramm step ino the negotiations like he did in the 1970s when Bob Lilly threatened to quit? Not this time.

"He (Schramm) knows better than to get involved," Brandt said. "Once he does it, destroys my credibility." 8 Brandt said he is willing to split the difference and give Walls a four-year contract.

"He can have a four-year contract but at less money than we are offering with a five-year contract," Brandt said.

Walls has led the National Footbal League in interceptions the last two seasons and wants a three-year contract at $900,000.

He played for only $37,500 last year and has two years remaining on his current contract. If Walls reports to camp and does not sign the renegotiated contract, he would make $62,000 this year.

Walls could be fined $1,000 a day if he fails to report Thursday by the 7 p.m. deadline for veterans.

PLAYING HARD TO GET — Dallas Cowboys defensive back Everson Walls is not happy with $175,000 per year salary and is threatening not to show up at camp.

Chandler retires Monday

By The Associated Press

The National Football League careers of Russell Davis, Mike Butler and Bob Chandler may be over — for entirely different reasons.

Davis, a reserve running back, is suffering from a rare blood disorder and was placed on the physically unable to perform list by the Pittsburgh Steelers on Monday. Butler, a defensive end with the Packers, fled Green Bay for the Tampa Bay Bandits of the United States Football League. Chandler, 34, announced his retirement from the Los Angeles Raiders.

In a trade Monday, the Tampa Bay Buccaneers sent veteran tackle Charley Hannah to the Raiders for defensive end Dave Browning and a fourth-round pick in next year's draft.

Davis rushed for 72 yards in 24 carries as a reserve last year. He checked into a hospital for tests in March and the blood disorder — similar to that suffered by former Steelers defensive back J.T. Thomas in 1978 — was discovered. Thomas sat out the '78 season before returning to the Steelers.

Butler reportedly was offered more than $1.2 million for four years by the Packers, but only a $100,000 signing bonus was guaranteed. So Butler headed for the new league.

"Mike had to make a business decision," said James Lofton, Green Bay's All-Pro receiver. "And I think he made the right decision.

Chandler has been plagued by injuries recently. In 1980, he had his spleen removed and last year he appeared in only two games because of a knee injury, failing to catch a pass.

Home teams' bids come up short

By GREG JAKLEWICZ

The home team always has an advantage in baseball, getting the final at-bat. All-star teams from Big Spring National and Lamesa had their last chance Monday night but failed to cash in on their opportunities.

As a result, both were eliminated from the District III Little League all-star tournament.

Big Spring National scored three runs in the bottom of the sixth but the tying run was thrown out at the plate for the third out as Midland Tower hung on for a 6-5 victory. Meanwhile, Lamesa left the winning run on third in the sixth and the tying run on second in the seventh and lost 9-8 to Midland Mid-City in extra innings.

The tournament continues tonight with the four undefeated teams battling in the winner's bracket semifinals. Big Spring American goes against Midland North Central at American's field while Coahoma tests Midland Eastern at the National ballpark. Both games start at 8 p.m. Radio station KBST will broadcast the American-North Central game, beginning at 7:50 p.m.

After surrendering two runs in the first inning, Tower pitcher Michael Pearson hit a four-inning groove. He retired 12 of the 15 men he faced and took a four-run lead into the bottom of the sixth.

Then he had problems.

Wade Salvato, the opposing pitcher, drew a lead-off walk, the first of the game for either hurler. Pinch-hitter Gino Flores also walked and Thomas Moore bounced an infield single in front of the plate to load the bases.

Shay Howard rolled the first pitch he saw to second baseman Jerry Delk who booted the ball for an error. Salvato scored to make it 6-3.

Pearson toughened up and fanned the next two batters but issued his third walk to Mike Sharp forcing in a run. Timmy Guitterez stepped up and plopped a single into right field. Moore scored from third and Howard, representing the tying run, headed for the plate.

Little League

For some reason he hestitated at the corner and Bryan Henson's relay to the plate got to catcher Gregg Garrett before Howard. Garrett applied the tag for the third out, leaving National a run short.

Tower scored first in the game on Pearson RBI single but Juan Samora countered with a two RBI hit in the bottom of the first to put National ahead 2-1. Henson, the No. 8 batter in the lineup, doubled in the tying run in the second and his two RBI double in the fourth highlighted a four-run outburst that gave Tower a 6-2 lead.

Things were just as crazy at the finish across town.

Lamesa and Mid-City scored five times each in the second but Lamesa's explosion was more impressive. Russell Cox rapped the second grand slam of the tournament to bring Lamesa back from its five-run deficit.

Mid-City led 8-6 going into the bottom of the sixth but Lamesa battled back to tie the game. Cox tripled and pitcher Cedric Mason legged out an infield hit that scored his third baseman. Mason advanced to third on a wild pitch and scored on a fielder's choice to send the game into extra innings.

First baseman Albert Aguilar's throwing error with two out in the seventh chased Bradley Taylor home with the go-ahead run for Mid-City. Lamesa left two runners on base in the bottom of the frame when clean-up hitter Brett Thompson, 0-for-9 in the tournament, struck out to end the game.

Tower will play the loser of the American-North Central game while Mid-City faces the loser of the Coahoma-Eastern matchup, both games Tuesday night.

Phillies fire Corrales as manager

PAT CORRALES
...his team not up to par

PAUL OWENS
...moves from front office

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Pat Corrales was fired Monday as manager of the Philadelphia Phillies, who are tied for first place in the National League Eastern Division, and will be replaced for the rest of the season by General Manager Paul Owens, the club announced.

The Phils, going into Monday night's game, shared the divisional lead with St. Louis with a 43-32 record, but they have struggled in recent weeks.

The club scheduled a news conference later Monday to discuss the managerial change.

Corrales, 42, joined with the Phils in 1982, when the team finished second to the Cardinals.

Corrales succeeded Dallas Green, who resigned after the 1981 season to become vice president and general manager of the Chicago Cubs. Green had recommended Corrales, who previously managed the American League's Texas Rangers in 1979 and 1980.

Owens, 59, became general manager in 1972. He replaced Manager Danny Ozark with Green in 1979 and the Phils won the World Series over Kansas City the following year.

Since he took over as general manager, Owens has built the Phils from sixth place finishers to annual contenders.

Despite homers, National oldtimers nip American, 5-3

WASHINGTON (AP) — Al Kaline and Brooks Robinson were home run hitters for one more evening and Johnny Sain nailed down one more victory, but the crowd wanted one more look at Willie Mays.

As the National League batted in the fifth and final inning Monday night, the crowd began a rhythmic chant of "We want Willie," pleading for a look at the Hall of Famer.

But Mays, who received the largest ovation in the pre-game introductions, apparently left the ball park early in the game when he learned he would not start.

Tal Smith, chairman of the event, said he told Mays he would be the first substitution but that when the time came for the first changes the former New York and San Francisco centerfielder had left.

The National League won 5-3, but the outcome hardly mattered to 31,160 fans who came to see baseball history come alive in the second annual Cracker Jack Old Timers Baseball Classic.

Former Washington Senator first baseman Mickey Vernon, a two-time American League batting champion, booted a Dee Fondy grounder in the bottom fourth allowing two runs to score and giving the National League its winning margin.

Brews drop Texas from first

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Pete Ladd's relief pitching saved both ends f a doubleheader for Milwaukee and pushed the Brewers' winning streak to eight games.

Ladd relieved in the eighth inning of the opening game Monday and helped Milwaukee to a 4-3 victory over the Texas Rangers, then relieved in the ninth inning of Milwaukee's 5-4 nightcap.

Texas scored its fourth run on a Larry Biittner double.

In the opener, Texas went ahead 3-2 in the sixth inning on doubles by Bobby Jones and Buddy Bell, chasing Bob Gibson in favor of Jerry Augustine.

In the seventh, Yount got a walk off loser Danny Darwin (7-9), Cooper singled, Ranger center fielder George Wright bobbled the ball, and Yount was able to score the tying run.

TWIN-KILLING TURN — Texas Rangers second baseman Wayne Tolleson begins a doubleplay Monday night against the Milwaukee Brewers, first getting Robin Yount at second base. For the night, the Brewers downed Texas 4-3 and 5-4 to knock the visitors out of first place in the American League West.

American League

Cecil Cooper's sacrifice was fly was essential to Milwaukee's four-run eighth inning that overcame Texas' 3-1 lead in the second game, giving the Brewers an 18-4 record since slumping to last place in the East Division June 24.

Rick Manning hit a one-out single, the Brewers got two walks from losing pitcher Charlie Hough (8-8) who was relieved by Dave Schmidt, Jim Gantner got two RBIs with a single to tie the score, Robin Yount walked to reload the bases, and Cooper hit his sacrifice fly to make it 4-3.

Simmons then hit what proved to be the winning run.

That gave the victory to Tom Tellmann (6-2), who had relieved starter Bob McClure in the sixth. Tellmann was replaced in the ninth by Ladd when Simmons then hit a single to score the winning run.

Blue Jays 8, Royals 2

It's high time in Toronto.

A team that hasn't had much success since coming into the major leagues in 1977, the Blue Jays are putting everything together this season in what has been cheerfully termed "Bobby Ball" in deference to Manager Bobby Cox.

"I don't really like it when people call it 'Bobby Ball' because I'm not the one playing," said Cox, whose club improved its record to 52-35 with an 8-2 victory Monday night over the Kansas City Royals.

The elements that have carried Toronto to the top of the American League East and held it there — solid pitching, clutch hitting, power hitting and outstanding defense — were all in evidence against the Royals. Right-hander Jim Clancy, making his 19th start of the season, scattered five hits while striking out two and walking as many to improve his record to 9-6.

Yankees 4, Twins 2

In New York, Ron Guidry won for the first time in almost a month with an eight-hitter and Graig Nettles slammed a two-run triple as the Yankees beat Minnesota.

Guidry, 11-5, making his second start after missing three weeks due to back spasms, struck out four and walked two to post his first victory since June 22.

White Sox 5, Indians 3

In Cleveland, Carlton Fisk homered and singled twice to drive in four runs and LaMarr Hoyt and three relievers combined on a six-hitter as Chicago downed Cleveland.

Red Sox 7, Angels 2

Gary Allenson paced a 16-hit attack with four hits and three RBIs and victory-starved Dennis Eckersley won for the first time in nearly a month as Boston beat California.

Tigers 4, A's 2

Chet Lemon slugged a homer and hot-handed reliever Doug Bair pitched out out of a bases-loaded jam in the ninth inning to pace Detroit over Oakland.

Dan Petry, 9-6, gave up five hits in seven innings.

Orioles 9, Mariners 4

In Seattle, Ken Singleton stroked four hits and Jim Dwyer added three to lead Baltimore past the Mariners.

Streaking Astros batter Carlton, Phils

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Houston Astros apparently forgot that they're supposed to swoon when Steve Carlton pitches.

Carlton owned a 31-11 lifetime record against the Astros before they jumped on him Monday night.

Houston bashed Carlton, 9-11, for nine solid hits in 3 2-3 innings, and went on to collect 17 hits in an 8-2 triumph over Philadelphia, dampening the return of Paul Owens as the Phillies' manager.

"I can't remember getting nine hits off Carlton," said the Astros' Ray Knight, who went 3-for-5 to tie George Hendrick of the St. Louis Cardinals for the National League batting lead with a .342 average.

Carlton did strike out five to go four ahead of Houston's Nolan Ryan in their continuing battle for the major league all-time strikeout lead. Carlton now has 3,587 career strikeouts.

But the Astros are as hot as the 90-degree-plus weather choking Philadelphia.

Things aren't so jelled in Philadelphia, where Owens, the team's general manager, replaced Pat Corrales, who was fired earlier in the day.

National League

Four Astros drove in two runs each — Knight, Jose Cruz, Bill Doran and Terry Puhl. Joe Niekro, 38, pitched a seven-hitter for his eighth victory against seven losses, and his fifth complete game. It also was Niekro's fifth straight victory.

Houston took a 1-0 lead in the second on a consecutive singles by Phil Garner, Cruz and Knight.

Houston made it 3-0 in the third after Thon singled with two outs, Garner doubled and Cruz singled across two runs.

The Astros boosted their lead to 5-0 in the fourth. Doran walked, George Bjorkman doubled and both scored on Puhl's two-out single.

The Astros got three more runs in the eighth.

Braves 7, Mets 4

Atlanta overcame an early 4-0 deficit to defeat visiting New York.

Jerry Royster's two-run triple keyed a four-run fifth inning that gave the Braves a 6-4 lead, and Royster later doubled in an eighth-inning run.

Rick Camp, 7-7, took over for starter Craig McMurtry in the second inning and got the victory with three 1-3 innings of relief.

Tom Gorman, 0-3, took the loss.

Coahoma sets church softball tournament

COAHOMA — A softball tournament for church teams is scheduled here July 22-23.

Roster limit is 18 players per team and must be signed by the pastor of that particular church. Entry fee is $90.

Contact Noel Hull at 263-3108 or Rocky Vierra at 267-7773 to enter.

Qualifying tourney here this weekend

The District VII Qualifying Tournament for men and women is slated July 22-24 at Johnny Stone Park.

Entry fee is $95 with deadline set at 9 p.m. Wednesday. Teams from Howard, Scurry, Martin, Mitchell, Glasscock and Reagan counties are eligible.

The tournament is sanctioned by the ASA with the top three teams advancing to state tournaments.

Contact John Weeks at 267-8382 after 7 p.m. or Big Spring Athletics at 267-1649.

Local all-stars trip San Angelo, 12-11

SAN ANGELO — The Big Spring 13-year-old all-stars outscored San Angelo West 12-11 in the District IV all-star tournament here Monday night.

Big Spring will now play the winner of the West-South game Friday in the tournament finals.

The game was tied 11-11 in the bottom of the seventh when Felix Rodriquez doubled and scored the winning run on a single by Brant Nichols.

Jay Fryar earned the win with Rodriquez notching a save.

Big Spring won its tournament opener 5-3 over San Angelo South Friday night.

Golf clinic Wednesday

A morning clinic for junior golfers are been scheduled Wednesday at Comanche Trails.

Instruction will be given by pro Al Patterson and Big Spring High golf coach Howard Stewart. Both will help beginners at 9 a.m. with a session for more advanced golfers set for 10 a.m.

No fee will be charged. Patterson asks local golfers to donate woods and irons for the first in a series of programs for juniors.

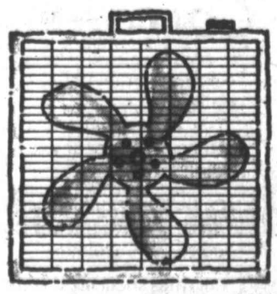

Stewart foursome wins BSGA event

The foursome of Howard Stewart, Paul Beasley, Lynn Wigington and Greg Jaklewicz fired a 61 Sunday to win the Big Spring Golf Association Louisiana Draw.

The team of Keith Hamilton, Omar Decker, Jim Ward and Ed Kennedy carded a 63 for second place while Jerry Dudley, Howard Smith, Paul Solden and Dr. Yuang Lee had a 64 for third. Two teams tied for fourth with 65 scores.

A total of 48 golfers participated in the afternoon event, played at the Comanche Trails Golf Course.

DENNIS THE MENACE

THE FAMILY CIRCUS

"Mommy! Look what happens when you mix some green mouthwash and some red mouthwash — BROWN mouthwash!"

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, JULY 20, 1983

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You have all kinds of good ideas for expressing yourself and putting in motion the plan of life that is important to you but don't be surprised if you have some delays.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Make plans to expand where your interests are concerned, even though you may find that a partner objects.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Go ahead with those plans of a business nature that are constructive and gain fine benefits. Be clever in presenting them.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A partner may want some agreement revised and this would be good for both of you, so go ahead with it.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Do not procrastinate so much at your work and be more precise and direct for better results.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Get that plan working that can bring in fine benefits, even though it may take a little longer before it is completed.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get busy early with those ideas you have for improving home conditions. Some money problems may crop up.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Some puzzling matter can be best understood by the questions which others ask, but it may take a little time to settle.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Financial affairs should be first on the agenda today. Later some quick action saves a defeating situation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You have fine ideas and can state them clearly to others, but don't expect much support for them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Sit down in the quiet of your study and analyze your position in life and what you want to do in the future.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You can see only a few of your friends now because of lack of time, so talk over mutual aims with them.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Contact bigwigs and gain their backing for whatever your interests happen to be, and gain more progress.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will adapt to varying philosophies of life different to the one in which born. Early teach to study each one thoroughly before accepting any of them.Teach early the importance of working with the hands.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

POSE FOR PICTURE — A group of "little people" urge a photographer to hurry up and take the picture as they gathered for an official portrait at Waterfront Park, in Boston, Monday. The group is attending the 25th annual Convention of the little People of America, Inc., in Boston this week.

'Staying Alive' tops box office

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Despite poor reviews and competition from a bumper crop of summer films, "Staying Alive" — the sequel to "Saturday Night Fever" — headed the weekend movie moneymaking list by drawing $12.1 million during its first three days.

"Staying Alive," a Paramount release which opened Friday at 1,660 theaters in the United States and Canada, became the second film to topple "The Return of the Jedi" from the top of the box office scoreboard since "Jedi" opened in late May.

"Superman III" accomplished the feat during its opening weekend.

"Jedi," the third installment of George Lucas' popular "Star Wars" trilogy, was firmly in second place, collecting $8.3 million at 1,644 theaters during the Friday-through-Sunday period, upping its total gross to $178.5 million, 20th Century-Fox reported Monday.

"We're number one!" exulted Paramount Pictures spokeswoman Marcy Bolotin.

Paramount was No. 3, too, with "Trading Places." The Eddie Murphy-Dan Ackroyd comedy yanked in $4.3 million at 1,227 houses for a 40-day total of $53.1 million.

Paramount's other dance-oriented film, "Flashdance," racked up $2.2 million and is now up to $62 million after 94 days.

"Staying Alive" marks the return of a superbly muscled John Travolta in the role of Tony Manero, transplanted from a Brooklyn disco to the Broadway stage. Travolta's performance was well received by most critics, but Sylvester Stallone — the film's director, co-writer and co-producer — was almost universally panned.

Studio officials hope the film will not suffer the fate of "Superman III," which after a few weeks of huge grosses began slipping badly. Last weekend the film took in $2.8 million at 1,173 theaters for a 31-day total of $52.5 million.

It was outperformed last weekend by both of MGM's two summer biggies, "WarGames" and "Octopussy."

"WarGames" took in $3.1 million at 948 theaters for a total gross of $46.8 million in 45 days; "Octopussy" drew $3 million at 1,149 theaters for a total of $47.2 million after 38 days.

Fox's "Porky's II" picked up $2.6 million at 1,213 screens for a 24-day total of $25.8 million. Warner's "The Twilight Zone" scared up $2.1 million at 957 theaters, bringing its total to $24.5 million after 24 days.

In the $1 million to $2 million range were Universal's "Stroker Ace" and "Psycho II" and Columbia's "Survivors."

'Sinister garden' grows deadly plants

There, Kaiser Permanente Hospital volunteers are nurturing poison oak and 20 other toxic plants.

Many of the plants are commonly found in backyards, and the garden was established at the hospital last month as a community education project, especially to alert people to plants that are dangerous to young children.

"A large number of poisonings come from seeds and pods," says Collins, the hospital's chief of pediatrics who also holds a doctorate in organic chemistry.

"Some kids go over and munch on leaves and stuff; they just put something into their mouths and chew. But the most interesting things to kids are seeds, for some reason," he said.

Collins said he isn't advocating that people rip plants out of their gardens, but that they know what the dangers are. "Anyone who has toddlers would be crazy to grow caster bean plants in their yard and leave the beans on the pods," he said.

There are about 4,500 poisonings per year in San Diego County, judging by calls to hospitals and poison control centers, said Collins. Most poisoned children turn out to have ingested part of a toxic plant.

till deaths are few — "one or two nationally," he said, thanks partly to a drug called Ofipeçac, which induces vomiting.

"This gives them a start. By the time they get to the emergency room, they've usually vomited the poison out," he said.

Collins hopes that parents will take a look at the garden and take notice of potentially dangerous plants that may be growing at home, including poinsettias, philodendrons, hydrangeas, oleanders, agaves, elephant ears, privets, holly, wisteria, iris and azaleas.

Collins said that adults get poisoned by plants because of mistaken notions about folk medicines and "traditional" food.

An entire family came into the hospital three years ago, suffering from irregular heart rhythms and severe stomach pains. They told the doctors they had eaten pokeweed.

"It turned out to be tree tobacco," a South American plant, said Collins. "Apparently the family's grandmother was visiting from Mississippi. She thought this stuff was pokeweed, stewed it up and nearly finished them all off.

"You better darn well know what you're eating unless you're a real live botanist who knows something," said Collins.

Beatles' studio opens

LONDON (AP) — The Abbey Road recording studio in London, used by the Beatles at the height of their fame, opens its doors to the public today for the first time.

Fans not only will get a look at the studio but — for a $6.80 admission fee — will view Beatles film clips and listen to recordings which the rock group never released.

Electric and Musical Industries, an entertainment giant which owns the facilities in north London, is opening Studio Two through Sept. 11 for three shows a day, seven days a week.

The studio has been fitted out with the original equipment used by the Beatles, whose first hit recorded there was "Love Me Do." They later immortalized the studio complex with an album named "Abbey Road."

"We expect to see visitors from all over the world," said studio manager Ken Townsend, a former sound engineer with the group.

"People kept writing and telephoning, saying 'Can we come to Abbey Road and look at the studios,' so we decided to help them out," he told a reporter.

'Buffalo Bill' renewed

NEW YORK (AP) — "Buffalo Bill," NBC's summertime comedy about an outrageous, insensitive and boorish talk-show host who treats his guests like dirt, has been renewed, the network announced today.

"Buffalo Bill," the critically acclaimed situation comedy starring Dabney Coleman, has been given a renewal order of 13 episodes, despite extremely modest ratings, even for the slower summer season.

"Only a network that had the same character attributes as Buffalo Bill Bittinger would not renew such a fine comedy as this show," said Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment. Tartikoff said the 13 additional episodes will be broadcast "as early as October and as late as January."

The summer run of 13 is half over and will finish at the end of August. Ratings for the first six have averaged a 12.6, meaning slightly more than 12 percent of the nation's homes with television have watched the show.

Police horse injured by car

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A police horse that threw its rider after being frightened by a picnicker ran into traffic and collided with a compact car, officers said.

The police officer had minor injuries, and the horse was being checked by a veterinarian Sunday, police said.

Officer Cheryl Meyers was riding near Pepper Grove when a picnicker shook out a blanket on the grass, said Officer Duke Roemer.

"That startled the horse. It reared and threw the officer to the ground," said Roemer. "The horse bolted into traffic and ran into a compact car. The car was demolished.

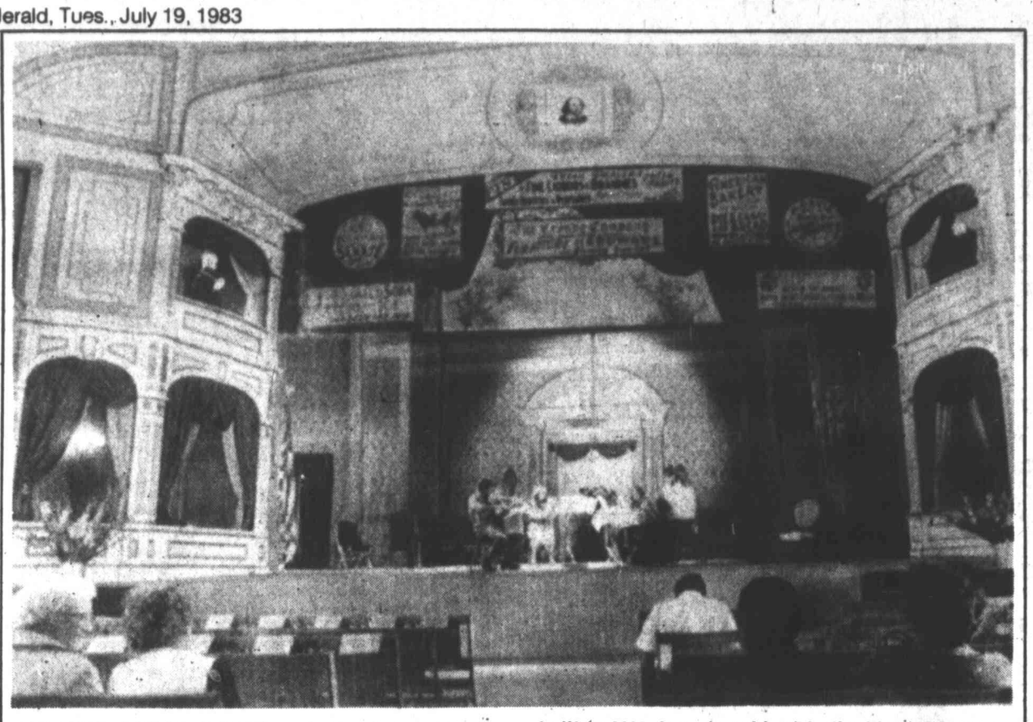

"The horse was knocked over by the car, and ran off again. It was retrieved by citizens."

He said a woman passenger in the car was slightly injured and was treated at nearby Mercy Hospital.

ANTIQUE OPERA HOUSE — A chamber music ensemble rehearses prior to a concert at Piper's Opera House in Virginia City, Nev. The theater, built in 1885, has played host to the likes of Edwin Booth, Enrico Caruso and Jolson, but now is the home of an annual July chamber music festival.

Fabled opera house finds new life in July with music festival

VIRGINIA CITY, Nev. (AP) — A block from honky-tonk haunts of Dixieland jazz and tin pan piano, classical music reigns at Piper's Opera House, a 120-year-old institution where such fabled performers as Al Jolson and Enrico Caruso once entertained.

The opera house, one of the oldest performing arts theaters in the West, finds new life each July as the home of an annual chamber music festival.

Modern-day players are showcased by red and gold brocade drapery, brass sconces and a silver chandelier similar to those that once framed Edwin Booth, Lilly Langtry, Lillian Russell, John Philip Sousa and other notables who trod the Piper's stage.

Contemporary musicians include violinist and composer Efrem Zimbalist Sr., now retired from performing at age 94, but who regularly makes the winding 20-mile trip from his home in Reno to attend the concerts.

Composers on the series' agenda include Beethoven, Brahms, Mozart — and Zimbalist, whose "Miniatures and Impressions for Piano and String Quartet" will have its world premiere Sunday at Piper's.

Festival founder Louise Driggs said simply of Zimbalist: "He's probably the foremost musician in the United States."

Mrs. Driggs is the great-granddaughter of John Piper, a German immigrant who followed the silver rush to Virginia City in the 1860s, opened a saloon and wound up building an opera house.

She inherited the building when her father died in 1960, began renovation in 1969, and started the chamber music series in 1973. It has continued each July since, with the exception of 1982, when her husband's death forced her to cancel.

The existing theater actually is the third Piper's Opera House. The first was built in 1863 and was taken over by saloon-keeper Piper in 1867. Mark Twain reviewed performances at the original Piper's for the Territorial Enterprise newspaper and lectured there after his return from Hawaii.

That structure burned in the Great Fire of 1875 — one of numerous fires to plague remote, bone-dry Virginia City over the years. Piper rebuilt on the current site, and opened the second Piper's Opera House in January 1878. The structure lasted just over five years, falling victim to another fire in the spring of 1883.

Using the foundation, lumber and brick front of the second opera house, Piper rebuilt. His final opera house — the largest of the three, with a capacity of 400 — opened in 1885, and looks much the same today as it did then.

Bill Beemer, curator of Piper's and an expert on early Western opera houses, said recently of the building, "It combined real architectural elegance with real utilitarianism."

While the stage displays uncommon elegance, the rest of the auditorium more closely resembles a barn, with a plain wooden floor, simple arched ceiling and largely unadorned walls.

"I think it's one of the most important theaters in the country," Beemer said. "I think you can get a very good picture of what 19th century theater conditions were like from being in this building."

For those who attended the first Sunday performance in this year's chamber music series, that sense of the past blended with the musical pleasures of the present to create a unique theatrical experience.

"I'm crazy about it," said Alice Hansenn of Reno, one of many regulars in the audience of about 200. "When I'm sitting here, I think about all the people who used to perform on that stage," she said. "It's a feeling I don't get anywhere else."

Firemen's calendar aids heart research

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A dozen city firemen decided to bare at least some of themselves for a "beefcake" calendar to raise money for research into heart problems among their colleagues.

But the 1984 calendar, dubbed Firefighters U.S.A., is no rival for those marketed yearly by Playboy and Playgirl magazines.

The pin-up firefighters appear modestly enough to offend no one — especially not city officials, although the most suggestive photo does show a fireman reclining on a fire station cot wearing only boxer shorts.

Mr. January (Terry Manning) and Mr. June (Manning's brother, Tim) are sons of city Fire Chief Donald O. Manning.

Rod Stewart loses building

WEST HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP) — A suspected arson fire today destroyed a vacant four-story hotel owned by British rock star Rod Stewart, fire and sheriff's officials said.

The three-alarm blaze at Sunset Boulevard and Queens Road, reported at 12:15 a.m., raged for more than an hour before county firefighters contained the flames, said Los Angeles County sheriff's Deputy John Broussard.

"They're going to let it burn out," he said, adding the building was totally destroyed.

Broussard said the rock star owns the building but didn't know if Stewart had been contacted.

The deputy said the fire was "suspected arson." A county fire dispatcher, who declined to give his name, said arson was "most likely" because the building was vacant and lacked any utilities, such as gas or electricity, that could have touched off the blaze.

Broussard said 20 to 25 firefighting units were sent to the scene. No injuries were reported and there was no immediate estimate of the building's value, he added.

Stewart, 38, this year completed a new album, "Body Wishes." His previous recordings include the hit songs "Tonight's the Night (Gonna Be All Right)," "Maggie May," "Da Ya Think I'm Sexy" "You're in My Heart" and "Hot Legs."
