Wood probe: 'We know the players'

By MACK SISK
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Two years ago today John Wood, a hard-nosed federal judge called "Maximum John" by drug dealers, stepped from his fashionable town home and was felled by a sniper's bullet.

It was the first assassination of a federal judge in modern times and the most massive U.S. investigation since the killing of John F. Kennedy immediately was thrown into gear.

But 174,970 manhours and more than $7 million later, the bottom line is — no indictments.

Yet.

Government sources have pronounced for seven months that the case was near solution. FBI agent-in-charge Jack Lawn and prosecutors recently approved a statement by the Committee for Justice which announced that "one or more persons" had qualified for the $100,000 reward it is giving for information leading to a conviction and that no one else need apply.

FBI Director William Webster said on March 26 in Washington, "I don't think it's wise for me to project indictments, but we are very close to a solution. We intend to solve this. We already know the players."

Attorneys for these "players" have practically invited the grand jury to indict their clients, contending the Justice Department does not have a case that would hold up in court.

Prosecutors — apparently relying heavily on wire taps and electronic surveillence of the key suspects — have operated in almost complete secrecy since direction of the investigation was taken over by the Justice Department in Washington last December.

Since that time news reporters have gathered most of their information from witnesses called by the grand jury and pronouncements of their attorneys.

However, reporters have been told by their attorneys that these five persons are the major "targets" of the investigation:

— Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra, 35, convicted narcotics trafficker and high-stakes gambler now serving a 30-year no-parole term for continuing criminal enterprise. He was scheduled for trial before Wood at the time the judge was shot in the back with a .243-caliber bullet. Chagra had unsuccessfully attempted to have Wood removed as the judge in his case on grounds Wood, 63, was biased against him.

— Charles Voyde Harrelson, 42, the convicted "hit man" held without bond at Houston on three unrelated state charges. Harrelson was acquitted of one kill-for-hire murder and convicted of another hired killing. Government sources said several witnesses identified Harrelson in a December police lineup as being at the apartment complex the day Wood was killed.

— Joe Chagra, 41, an El Paso attorney who represents both his brother and Harrelson. He has said he expects to be indicted, but says he has

Israel claims destruction of Libyan missiles

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Seaborne Israeli commandos made a brief raid south of Beirut during the night after a series of earlier air strikes in which Israel claimed destruction of four Libyan missile batteries at Palestinian bases on the Lebanese coast.

The Palestinians said the air strikes killed 25 people, including 18 civilians and seven guerrillas.

A communique from the Palestine Liberation Organization said a squad of Israeli commandos came ashore in landing craft just before midnight Thursday at Khalde, destroyed a truck and clashed with guerrillas before withdrawing 20 minutes later.

Israeli military authorities confirmed the raid, saying a guerrilla base was attacked and a vehicle destroyed. They said all the raiders returned safely.

Earlier Thursday, Israeli jets made three attacks on Palestinian mountain strongholds in the Damour area, about 15 miles south of Beirut, and a fourth against Palestinian positions in the foothills of Mount Hermon in southeast Lebanon, Beirut Radio said. The PLO reported a fifth strike at Naameh, 2½ miles north of Damour.

The Israeli military command said its warplanes were on a reconnaissance mission near Damour when SAM-9 anti-aircraft missiles "operated by Libyan forces" were fired at them.

The Israeli planes attacked, destroying four truck-mounted Libyan anti-aircraft missile batteries, guerrilla vehicles, anti-aircraft guns, armored cars and a bunker, before returning safely to base, the command said.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin renewed Israel's claim that Col. Moammar Khadafy, Libya's radical leader, has sent missiles and advisers to Palestinian forces in Lebanon, a claim that was confirmed privately by a State Department official in Washington earlier this week.

"There are Libyans in Lebanon," Begin said in an interview with the Israeli Armed Forces Radio. "Their purpose as far as we know is to defend the terrorists against our planes that come to photograph or attack the terrorists as we have to do to stop the murderers who kill our children....

"If they fire their missiles, they are asking to be destroyed as they were destroyed today."

This reporter saw neither Libyans nor the Soviet-made missiles when he toured parts of the Damour area Sunday and Thursday. The guerrillas barred reporters from the smoke-sheathed upper reaches of Damour after Thursday's attack, but insisted there were no Libyans or SAM-9s in Lebanon.

The PLO commander at Damour said his forces fired 37mm anti-aircraft guns and shoulder-mounted missiles at Israel's U.S.-built Phantom and F-16 jets.

Thursday's air strikes shifted concentration from the month-old crisis over Syrian surface-to-air missile batteries in eastern Lebanon. Syria moved in the missiles April 29, after Israeli jets knocked down two Syrian helicopter gunships it said were attacking its Christian militia allies. Israel demanded Syria withdraw the missiles and threatened to knock them out.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Dean Fisher said the Israeli air strikes apparently were not directed at Syrian installations and thus did not signal a worsening of Israeli-Syrian tensions.

"We do not believe that the Israeli action today is necessarily related to our efforts to defuse the tension brought about by the crisis," Fisher said, referring to U.S. envoy Philip C. Habib's three-week-old mission to avert a Syrian-Israeli war.

President Reagan recalled Habib to Washington Wednesday and was to discuss the future course of the mission when he meets with the veteran diplomat today. Habib is due back in the Middle East next week.

Meanwhile, Begin announced that Egyptian President Anwar Sadat has accepted his invitation to meet him next Thursday at the Israeli settlement of Ofira, at the southern tip of the Sinai Peninsula. The meeting, the first between the two old foes in 17 months, is expected to focus on the missile crisis and on the stalemated peace process between the two countries.

TI's testimony somewhat flighty

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

The battle between two airlines for control of one air carrier is being fought not only before the Civil Aeronautics Board in Washington, D.C., but in various cities throughout the country, including Midland.

Texas International Airlines, headed by Frank Lorenzo, is trying to purchase controlling stock in Continental Airlines. Employees of Continental, however, are pushing for court approval of their Employee Stock Option Plan to purchase those controlling shares. If approved, their plan will shove TI out of the picture.

Texas International and Continental Airlines both serve Midland Regional Airport. To uncover what plans TI had for serving the Regional Airport if it took over Continental, the city retained Washington attorney Robert Beckman to question Lorenzo at the CAB hearing last week. Beckman specializes in CAB matters.

Midland had heard that TI might take Continental's 727s out of Midland and replace them with the smaller

Related story, Page 6D

DC-9. If so, that would reduce cargo space used for shipping oil field materials and passenger space. The resulting testimony revealed that TI is considering such a move.

The CAB hearing is continuing, and TI issued a statement this week that it will accept the CAB's "imposed Labor Protective Provisions when it gains control of Continental Airlines. These are the same Labor Protective Provisions recently adopted in the Continental/Western merger case."

THAT PROPOSED merger of Continental and Western was shelved when TI attempted to purchase the controlling stock. It already had been approved by the CAB, and a local Continental spokesman said the employees weren't opposed to it. However, the TI move is another matter, according to Russ Carlson of Continental. And Continental employees had been concerned over their labor protection.

John G. Carlson, vice president of public affairs for Texas Air Corp., continued that "TI is prepared to make this guarantee in an effort to demonstrate to all affected employees — union or non-union — Texas International's good faith intentions in its acquisition of Continental."

Texas Air Corp. is the parent company of Texas International.

TI was to have its annual shareholders meeting Thursday in Houston. Meanwhile, Continental employees had planned to gather in Tranquility Park in Houston for a rally, which would include testimony from recent CAB hearings. Part of that testimony could have included the section dealing with TI's plans for Midland.

According to a Continental representative at the CAB hearings, James Benfield, "Midland got its money's worth out of Beckman."

Following are some excerpts of that conversation between Beckman and Lorenzo:

BECKMAN: "Would you tell us, sir, what, in your opinion, are the public

Former Midland man dies in crash of small airplane

From Staff and Wire Reports

SHREVEPORT, La. — A former Midland man was among three people killed when a single-engine plane en route to Midland crashed near the Shreveport downtown airport Thursday as the pilot tried an emergency landing when a door came open shortly after takeoff, officials said.

Doug Fuller, 30, a former Midlander now living in Shreveport, was one of three oil men killed in the crash. A fourth man was hospitalized in undetermined condition.

Names of the other two victims were not available.

Federal Aviation Administration officials in Fort Worth, Texas, said the plane took off from the small airport about 10 a.m. and a few minutes later the pilot radioed that a door was open.

He was cleared for an emergency landing, but as the plane approached the airport, it suddenly lost altitude and plummeted to the ground about a mile from the airport.

Fuller, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence L. Fuller of Midland, was a 1968 graduate of Robert E. Lee High School in Midland and a 1973 graduate of Texas Tech University. He was an officer in the Air Force for six years.

Survivors include his wife, Debbie Fuller of Shreveport; a son, Jay Fuller of Shreveport; a brother, Gary Fuller of Baton Rouge, La.; and a sister, Trish Fuller of Midland.

A memorial service was to be held today at 4 p.m. at the Rose-Neath Funeral Home chapel in Shreveport. Graveside services for Fuller will be Saturday in Shreveport.

Tax cut effort could prompt another coalition, Hance says

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Another coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats could develop behind President Reagan's proposal for a multi-year, across-the-board tax cut, Rep. Kent Hance, D-Texas, says.

"I don't know what will happen. It's still too early to say," Hance said after an unproductive two-hour caucus with other Democrats on the House Ways and Means Committee.

"I was hoping we could finalize something we could take to the president that he could accept or that Danny had something from the president we could accept," an obviously disappointed Hance said. "But it looks like it will be a long, drawn-out thing."

Instead of a compromise that accepted most of the president's proposal, as had been widely speculated, things ended up back at square one.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., the committee chairman, emerged from the meeting to say Democrats can't go along with the president's proposals.

"A multi-year tax cut is not acceptable at this time," Rostenkowski told newsmen. The Democrats on his committee are solidly behind a tax cut of no longer than a year and for a bigger tax cut to those who make from $20,000 to $50,000 a year, he said.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, had hinted earlier that Republicans would seek another coalition with conservative Democrats if Rostenkowski didn't agree soon to a compromise.

Hance, a leader in that earlier coalition — which gave the president an overwhelming victory in his first major legislative test — has been trying to work within the party on the tax cut issue.

Hance said, "But I felt all week that the speculation in the press was too optimistic (about chances for a compromise). I've never been that optimistic about it, from the word go."

"I'm still going to wait a while. Danny's going to continue to talk to the White House, and I'm going to wait and see what happens."

The second-term congressman from Lubbock was one of four conservative Democrats who met with administration officials in the White House last week and won concessions from the tax cut bill Reagan had been assisting on.

The four then went to Rostenkowski with the grounds for possible compromise, rather than pushing the proposal as their own.

Others accompanying Hance to the White House meeting were Rep. Charles Stenholm and Rep. Phil Gramm of Texas and Rep. Sonny Montgomery of Mississippi. Gramm was the spearleader for the bipartisan budget effort.

Republicans could live with the recommended compromise, Dole said Wednesday. Rostenkowski had added after meeting with Dole and Treasury Secretary Donald Regan Thursday morning that they found more things to agree about than to disagree about.

benefits that will result from the acquisition of Continental by Texas International?"

Lorenzo: "I would think that the most important public benefit would be allowing the free flow of capital, and allowing managements in a marketplace environment to be able to make investments and make decisions based on their own judgments, rather than regulated decisions of this type as applied in the past."

Beckman: "May I re-focus the question more precisely into benefits in your opinion that would result to the traveling and shipping public as a result of the acquisition of Continental by Texas International?"

Lorenzo: "As far as the actual specifics on routes and this and that, I would suggest that you defer your questions to Mr. Stelzer, who is much more aware of the two systems and the specific synergies of new, single-plane services and that sort of thing which I guess — I think is at the root of your question."

Beckman: "You do know, of course, that Texas International serves Midland-Odessa, Texas, do you not?"

Lorenzo: "Do we still serve it?"

Beckman: "I say you know that they do; don't you?"

Lorenzo: "...I know that the services have been weak, and I'm not sure of the exact standing of it, but I will accept your — if you say we still do."

Beckman: "Well, what is your knowledge that you are referring to? You say the services are still weak."

LORENZO: "It has been my understanding that Midland-Odessa services have been in the category of unprofitable or weak services for some time now."

Beckman: "But is it your understanding that Texas International is disappointed with the services and considering withdrawing services from Midland-Odessa?"

Lorenzo: "I didn't say that. We're disappointed in anything that doesn't provide an adequate return."

Beckman: "Would you continue to serve a point that was unprofitable?"

Lorenzo: "There are many reasons to continue a service, and just because...this service in the past has been unprofitable is no indication that it may be unprofitable in the future. We have to look at competitive considerations."

Beckman: "Continental presently serves Midland-Odessa to more than one hub. For example, Continental serves El Paso and Denver.... Now Texas International has made the management decision not to serve El Paso and Denver, but, rather, to concentrate service on Dallas and Houston."

Lorenzo: "You're telling me that Texas International doesn't serve El Paso?"

Beckman: "Not from Midland-Odessa. Do you think they do?"

Lorenzo: "Oh, from Midland-Odessa. I see."

BECKMAN: "The only point I am asking is, can we in Midland-Odessa take it that since Texas International has shown no interest in El Paso and Denver service from Midland-Odessa, that after this acquisition is approved, if it is approved, we will see an end to service by the merged company between Midland-Odessa on the one hand, and El Paso and Denver on the other hand.?"

Lorenzo: "What makes sense for a combined company may not make sense for Texas International alone. It might not make sense for Continental alone. It might make sense for the combined company to take all the airplanes out of Midland-Odessa and put them in another city. That might make more sense for a combined company, and I'm sure as there have been new carriers coming into Midland-Odessa those facilities...those air travel needs would be more than amply satisfied."

Beckman: "Would you confirm that I can report to my client (city of Midland) that you could give no assurance that their service...between Midland-Odessa and El Paso...and Denver would be continued? And, indeed, you could give no assurance that any service at all would continue at Midland-Odessa if this acquisition is approved?"

LORENZO: "...I'm not in a position to sit and make commitments for Continental Airlines, Inc., now or in the future."

Beckman: "I take it that that's a polite way of saying there can be no assurances given to Midland-Odessa at this stage regarding future service.... Now, in your role being very much involved with this acquisition, have you heard about a concept of operation by Texas International whereby DC-9s would be used for service into major hubs and 727s would be used for services between the hubs?"

Lorenzo: "...In general, yes, we have a belief that there can be some substitutions of 727 flying by DC-9s, and vice versa."

Beckman: "...You can't deny at this point that the operation by the merged company at Midland-Odessa could be exclusively DC-9s into Dallas with such additional service being provided by 727s from Dallas to the hub?"

Lorenzo: "I am in no position to say that. You might discover oil; we might want DC-10s in there."

Beckman: "I'll tell you something. They've (Midland-Odessa) discovered oil."

Lorenzo: "They might discover some more."

Beckman: "They are getting more every day; believe me. The place is jumping."

Lorenzo: "Great."

Beckman: "You haven't been there for an awful long time, have you, Mr. Lorenzo?"

Lorenzo: "Don't be so sure."

Beckman: "Have you been there recently?"

Lorenzo: "Yes, I have."

BECKMAN: "Have you seen the new towers they've built in Midland?"

Lorenzo: "There's a lot of building going on. I am very aware of it."

Beckman: "I gather you are aware of the economic development in the Midland-Odessa area, based on additional development of oil and gas?"

Lorenzo: "I am generally aware of the substantial growth in the Midland-Odessa area."

Beckman: "Based on additional discoveries of oil and gas; is that correct?"

Lorenzo: "I think, among other things."

Beckman: "What other things."

Lorenzo: "I don't know, but there are other things going on in Midland, too, I believe."

Beckman: "Notwithstanding your knowledge of the oil and gas activity, may we still understand that you are not in a position to give Midland-Odessa any assurances regarding their future service?"

Lorenzo: "I think I've already answered that question."

Since the hearings are continuing before the CAB on this issue, said Benfield, a decision isn't expected for several weeks. If there is dissatisfaction with the ruling, the case ultimately could go to President Reagan for a decision, he said.

More rain possible tonight

The Permian Basin should continue to have rain and cooler temperatures through Saturday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The weatherman's forecast called for a possibility of locally heavy thunderstorms tonight. There is a 60 percent chance of rain tonight, decreasing to 30 percent on Saturday.

The thunderstorms which moved through the area beginning about 11:30 p.m. Thursday produced .89-inch of rain at the NWS office.

The thunderstorms also brought out the severe weather spotters and Civil Defense workers.

Robert Edgerton, Civil Defense coordinator, manned a radio at the National Weather Service office from 10:30 p.m. Thursday to 4:30 a.m. today watching the severe weather with an eye toward spotting tornadoes.

Meanwhile, other members were traveling the Midland area in their vehicles, also looking for tornadoes.

The storm produced three funnel clouds west of Odessa about 3 a.m. today, although none apparently touched down or did any damage.

The .89-inch of rain in the last 24 hours brings the monthly total up to 2.02 inches and the yearly figure to date up to 5.96 inches.

All area towns also reprorted receiving rainfall, although only Big Spring had a measureable amount — one inch.

Saturday's high temperature should be in the lower 80s, a relief from the sizzling upper-90s and 100-degree temperatures earlier in the week.

The low tonight should be in the upper 60s. Winds tonight and Saturday will be from the southeast at 5-10 mph.

The record high for Thursday was set in 1974 at 102 degrees. Thursday's high temperature was a somewhat cooler 92 degrees.

The record low for today is 50 degrees set in 1952. This morning's low dipped to 61 degrees.

taken a lie detector test to clear him of any complicity.

— Joann Starr Harrelson, 40, who married Harrelson in January 1979, four months after he was paroled from a 15-year state penitentiary term for the 1968 killing of grain dealer Sam Degelia Jr. Like her husband, Mrs. Harrelson claims to gamble for a living. She pleaded the Fifth Amendment during her first grand jury appearance and is fighting against testifying in the next session in June.

— Teresa Starr Jasper, 23, daughter of Joann Starr Harrelson, who has been jailed at Uvalde since she refused to testify on March 27. Other witnesses have said grand jury questions indicate prosecutors suspects she received a "payoff" in June 1979 from the Chagras, either at Corpus Christi or Brownsville.

Both Jimmy Chagra and Harrelson jumped bonds and were fugitives for several months during the investigation.

The grand jury has concentrated its investigation on acquaintances, gambling foes and family members of the Chagras and Harrelson.

Three attorneys speculate that the government's case may all hinge on circumstantial evidence and recorded conversations that may never be admitted into a trial, and that the government does not have any hard facts to back up circumstantial evidence.

Bob Tarrant, a Houston attorney representing Harrelson, has accused the FBI of "harassing" Harrelson and his family members with bugging devices since Harrelson ripped a tape recorder from beneath a table in a vistor's area of the Harris County jail while his step-daughter was visiting him last November.

Tarrant summed up his client's position by saying the grand jury ought to either indict Harrelson, "or get off the pot."

"I think it is irresponsible (for Webster) to say 'we know who the players are,'" added Tarrant's law partner, Don Ervin, whom the government seeks to disqualify from representing all three members of the Harrelson family. "I think they don't know who the players are. I think that's the whole thing. I feel like they are doing a lot of illegal tape recording, a lot of illegal monitoring of conversations that we will probably never know about."

Billy Ravkind, the Dallas attorney representing Joe Chagra, also questions whether the Justice Department has an evidence independent of the tape recordings, approved by Chief U.S. District Judge William Sessions of San Antonio. Ravkind contends the tape recordings were illegal and are not admissable in court.

"What they're trying to do, I think and this is just a wild guess, is get evidence not related to the illegal bugging." Ravkind said. "Otherwise it would just take five minutes to get an indictment. Hell, they can just walk in there with a cop and get an indictment in 10 minutes. I'd say with that grand jury, it would take about five minutes.

"I thought that they (five targets) would have been indicted last year," Ravkind added.

Ravkind contends the government's case may depend on taped conversations between Jimmy Chagra and convict Jerry Ray James, 41, at the Leavenworth Federal Penitentiary in Kansas from August 1980 until February 1981.

Once on the FBI's list of the 10 most-wanted fugitives, James has been granted a conditional release from prison by New Mexico Gov. Bruce King for his cooperation in the Wood investigation.

Jimmy Chagra allegedly boasted to James about Wood's killing, but Ravkind has countered that Chagra's remarks were taken out of context and that he was just "bulling" the other convict.

"By using that fellow James, that cellmate, to apparently get this thing off the ground may have violated the Supreme Court's mandate in what is called the Henry Case. In that case a man was already indicted and they used a cellmate in effect to extract a confession from him. The Supreme Court ruled that was a violation of the Sixth Amendment," Ravkind said.

The attorney argues that if the James-Chagra tapes are not admissable, then neither are subsequent tapes involving Harrelson and Joe Chagra nor evidence obtained during a February raid of several Chagra residences in El Paso. He alleges the James-Chagra tapes may have been used as the basis for authorization of the subsequent tapings.

"It's a domino problem they've got," Ravkind said.

Midland's working force takes third straight hike

The number of persons working in Midland increased during April, making it the third consecutive hike on record.

The Texas Employment Commission here reported 49,830 persons working last month, compared to 49,340 during March and 44,790 for the same time a year ago. This marks an 11.3 percent increase in employment.

Midland's labor force also jumped to 52,180 persons from 51,500 in March and 46,400 in April 1980. This is denoted as a 1.3 percent increase in one month and an 11.9 percent hike in one year, according to the TEC report.

In spite of more people than ever before working in Midland County, the unemployment figures also went up. For April, there were 2,350 persons reported without a job, leaving the unemployment figure at 4.5 percent. The March total was 4.2 percent while the amount a year ago was 4.0 percent.

The unemployment rate during April for the state was 4.2 percent while the national jobless figure dropped to 7 percent.

Non-agricultural wage and salary jobs increased only 0.6 percent from mid-March to mid-April. Meanwhile, manufacturing jobs were reduced by 40, or 1.1 percent.

Contract construction jobs increased with more office buildings going up. Trade increased 1.3 percent as retail jobs expanded. Financial employment increased by 60 workers as the energy expansion continued. The general growth of the area triggered a rise in business and personal services, as well as medical and professional services.

The Midland TEC office assisted employers in filling 907 of the 1,157 job openings in April. That office is looking for people to fill openings as waiter-waitress, oil and gas drafter, single hand welder, route sales driver, accounting clerk and clerk typist.

Other current job openings include geological drafter, accountant, licensed vocational nurse, registered nurse, secretary, bookkeeper, cook, machinist, auto mechanic, diesel mechanic, welder, painter and construction worker.

The TEC office also is looking for youths age 14 to 21 for the Work-a-rama program. Interested persons should dial 682-9421.

Habib's visit said near miraculous

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saying the results of U.S. peace efforts have been "miraculous" so far, President Reagan today asked his special Mideast envoy, Philip Habib, to continue his attempts to avoid war between Israel and Syria in the Lebanese missile crisis.

"At the president's instruction, my mission is continuing and I will be returning to the area sometime next week," Habib told reporters following a 50-minute meeting with Reagan at the White House.

But if Habib and Reagan decided on a new approach in the three-week effort to defuse the crisis, Habib offered no clue as to what it was. He said no one has set any deadlines for his efforts, however, and that the intensive U.S. peace effort is appeciated in the area.

"Nobody on any side has put any time limits on me," he said. He said all sides have indicated he would be "welcome anytime I want to come back and talk with them."

Habib expressed optimism there would be a favorable outcome to the efforts, saying "a peaceful resolution to the immediate issue is achievable."

"Its clear to me ... that in all my conversations out there, none of the people want to go to war; none of the people want to have this thing get completely out of hand."

He said U.S. efforts have helped create an atmosphere to "hopefully control what appeared to be a course which was going to lead to major hostilities."

He said the United States does not have a particular plan to get the Syrians to withdraw their anti-aircraft missiles from Lebanon before Israel carries out threats to attack them, thus risking a wider conflict.

But he said, "There are elements at work in the area which make it valuable for us to continue to play the role of peacemaker, which we have tried to play, and which I will continue to try to play."

He said his role has been to listen to the views of various leaders and communicate them to the other leaders.

In his brief remark to reporters, Habib said others besides the United States are working for peace as well. But he didn't include the Soviet Union among them, saying, "I wouldn't characterize what they said as being helpful."

He said Saudi Arabia, which is pushing a separate peace initiative, is "being helpful and contructive."

Earlier, as Reagan and Habib met in the Oval Office, the president was asked if he thought peace could be maintained between Israel and Syria.

"Well, that's what I'm going to talk to him about," the president said.

Asked if Israel has agreed to "stay its hand" and not attack Syrian missile batteries in neighboring Lebanon until Habib returns to the Middle East, Reagan said, "We haven't had a chance to talk, but as I say, I think the great measure of success is in his three weeks of tireless shuttle diplomacy between the three capitals (of Syria, Israel and Lebanon) when there was only one way to describe when he went there: the guns were all cocked and ready to go.

"So I think that it's a tremendously successful, almost miraculous thing so far that he has done," Reagan said. And nodding to Habib, who was sitting in a high-backed wing chair just a couple of feet away, he added, "And I think we're all very grateful to you."

But as the two men sat down to plot the next moves to defuse tensions, evidence of Libyan involvement in Lebanon raised a new problem to be considered before Habib returns to the Middle East next week.

Earlier, a State Department spokesman said Israeli air strikes Thursday in southern Lebanon apparently were not directed at the Syrian missile installations and do not signal a worsening of tensions between Israel and Syria.

"We do not believe that the Israeli action ... is necessarily related to our efforts to defuse the tension brought about by the crisis," said spokesman Dean Fischer.

Fischer told reporters that Israeli airplanes struck targets in an area where "the immediate crisis involving Syria and Israel is not concentrated."

Fischer said he couldn't comment on Israeli claims that it had attacked missile sites operated by Libyans, or even that there are Libyans in Lebanon, as claimed by Israel.

"I can't comment on intelligence information," he said.

However, a State Department official confided in private earlier in the week that Libya appears to have sent new shipments of arms, possibly including missiles, to some Palestinian elements in recent weeks.

Billie Sol Estes' conviction upheld

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal appeals court has rejected Billie Sol Estes' claim that federal prosecutors had a vendetta against him and that at least one juror was prejudiced by the publicity over his troubles.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Thursday upheld Estes' conviction for hiding income from tax collectors.

However, the court did remand the case to the lower court "soley to allow Estes to present his motion for reduction of sentence...."

Estes, who was convicted of fraud in the early 1960s and served eight years in jail, still has a federal tax liability in the tens of millions of dollars dating from the collapse of his paper empire nearly 20 years ago.

He went bankrupt. His parole has been revoked, and he has been sentenced to five years because of an apparent forgery of some documents while he was trying to buy an electronics company with other people's money.

That's in addition to the five years he received for trying to conceal income from the Internal Revenue Service.

The appeals court rejected the arguments of Estes and co-defendant Raymond K. Horton, ruling in a 10-page opinion that there was "no error in the convictions of the appellants...."

The government began investigating his most recent dealings in 1977.

The IRS contends that Estes and Horton, a wealthy oilman, participated in deals which included percentages of profits in deferred payments, a trust fund set up through Estes' brother for Estes' children and business ventures under Horton's name but Estes' control.

Tank battery afire

BIG LAKE — Firemen from Big Lake responded to a major oil tank battery fire in Stiles about 18 miles northeast of here this morning.

The fire was reported to the Big Lake sheriff's department by Western Communications at 7:07 a.m. Officials speculated that a bolt of lightning may have started the fire.

Three persons injured in two separate mishaps

Two accidents which injured three people highlighted an otherwise light 24 hours of police activity in Midland, with the theft of a firearm the only significant crime investigated.

Joe Rusnak of 1609 W. Dengar reported to officers at 9:16 p.m. Thursday that a pistol had been taken from his home.

The weapon was described as a 45 caliber Colt revolver.

Three persons were injured in two separate traffic accidents Thursday afternoon and early today.

Police Roundup

Josphine Gutierrez, 55, of Route 3, Box 604, and Javier Quiroz, 5, of 407 N. Tyler, were treated for minor injuries at Midland Memorial Hospital's emergency room following a two-vehicle accident at W. Wall Avenue and North L Street at 4:13 p.m. Thursday.

Ms. Gutierrez was driver of a southbound vehicle on Avenue L that was in collision with one westbound on Wall and operated by Michael Young, 19, of 2009 Holloway Ave. Young was not injured.

Donald R. Peters, 48, of Albuquerque, N.M., was in surgery early this morning at MMH after sustaining a broken leg and broken elbow in a car-pedestrian accident at 4:45 a.m. today in the 4500 block of the north service road of U.S. Highway 80, two-tenths of a mile east of Eisenhower Drive.

Peters was walking along the roadway when he was struck by a sedan driven by Jospeh B. Molett, 31, of Odessa.

Peters was taken by ambulance to Midland Memorial, where he was listed in fair condition early today.

In an unrelated accident, Roberta Masiac, 42, of 2713 Hilltop, was in Midland Memorial this morning after suffering second degree burns on her legs. She was scheduled to be transferred later in the day to Parkview Hospital.

Researchers discover side effects to hallucinogens

By B.D. COLEN
Newsday

NEW YORK — Two researchers at Downstate Medical Center, in Brooklyn, have found that PCP, LSD and mescaline, three of the most potent illicit hallucinogenic drugs, all cause contractions in the arteries in dogs' brains.

If the work of physiologists Bella T. Altura, and her husband Burton, can be repeated in humans, it may explain how the drugs work, and how their action can be reversed.

According to Burton Altura, PCP, or Angel Dust, which is now far more widely used than LSD or mescaline, causes "a spasm in cerebral arteries which is maintained. The LSD and the mescaline appear to cause a spasm which gradually subsides or goes to a lesser spasm."

The couple's work, published in Fridaygs issue of Science Magazine, appears to suggest that the three drugs cause hallucinations by reducing the blood flow, and thus the oxygen supply, to vital brain tissue.

If these findings apply to humans, Burton Altura said, they might explain the phenomenon of so-called "acid burnout" observed in those who were frequent LSD users in the 1960s.

In their paper, the Alturas say they found they could reverse the arterial contraction by using drugs called calcium blockers, substances which prevent the muscle cell from absorbin;$calcium, a substance needed for$the tissue to contract.

"If these findings obtain on humans," they wrote, "calcium blockers might be useful in the treatment of PCP, LSD and mescaline intoxication ... At present there is no known agent that effectively blocks the biologic actions of PCP."

Even a reduction, rather than a complete cutoff of oxygen to brain tissue can cause permanent damage to the brain, Burton Altura said.

It has been known for years that anoxia, or hypoxia, the cutting off or reducing of oxygen supply to the brain, can cause hallucination.

The Newspaper BIBLE

HAVE YOU CREATED YOUR OWN GOD?

Moses was sent to be Israel's ruler and savior. And by means of many remarkable miracles he led them out of Egypt and through the Red Sea, and back and forth through the wilderness for 40 years. Moses himself told the people of Israel, "God will raise up a Prophet much like me from among your brothers." How true this proved to be, for in the wilderness, Moses was the go-between--the mediator between the people of Israel and the Angel who gave them the Law of God--the Living Word-on Mount Sinai.

But our fathers rejected Moses and wanted to return to Egypt. They told Aaron, "Make idols for us, so that we will have gods to lead us back; for we don't know what has become of this Moses, who brought us out of Egypt." So they made a calf-idol and sacrificed to it, and rejoiced in this thing they had made.

Then God turned away from them and gave them up, and let them serve the sun, moon and stars as their gods! In the book of Amos' prophecies the Lord God asks, "Was it to Me you were sacrificing during those 40 years in the desert, Israel? No, your real interest was in your heathen gods--Sakkuth, and the star god Kaiway, and in all the images you made. So I will send you into captivity far away beyond Babylon."

Our ancestors carried along with them a portable Temple, or Tabernacle, through the wilderness. In it they kept the stone tablets with the Ten Commandments written on them. This building was constructed in exact accordance with the plan shown to Moses by the Angel.

Who is to decide what's really best for baby Sara?

By LINDA KRAMER
Associated Press Writer

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Sara Jensen will be a year old next week, but she can't sit up or crawl because her head is too big. Her parents, who say "God can still heal," are rejecting surgery for Sara, but the state of Oregon may decide otherwise.

At issue is the balance between religious freedom and parental rights and the state's interest in a child's future: The county deputy district attorney is studying a court-ordered doctor's report on Sara, and may decide to ask the court to order surgery for the hydrocephalus, sometimes called water on the brain, that is slowly enlarging her head.

Arnold Jensen, Sara's father and a follower of the fundamentalist Church of the First Born, insists: "God is the first choice and people who take surgery or medication have settled for second best. We believe the age of miracles still is.... We believe this because we've seen it."

The doctors' report on Sara is confidential. But Dr. John Isom, a pediatric neurologist who examined her, says most hydrocephalic babies are operated on as soon as the condition is detected. The usual procedure, he said, is to install a shunt to drain off cerebral fluid pressing on the brain and enlarging the skull.

Untreated, Isom said, the condition "could be life-threatening." He said it is difficult to generalize about the prospects for hydrocephalic children, adding that in an uncomplicated case, with a shunt, "They can live for a long time. But most of the cases we deal with are not simple. There are lots of other things wrong."

Sara didn't see a doctor until seven months after her head began enlarging because her parents' church interprets the Bible as banning medical treatment. Jensen said the church operates in about 17 states, and that the local congregation has two dozen families.

"We love our daughter very much and don't feel we are depriving her," said Jensen, a 43-year-old construction worker in Brownsville, a rural community about 40 miles south of Salem, Oregon's capital.

He went along with a Linn County Circuit Court order last month requiring Sara to be evaluated by doctors, an order sought by the state after a public health nurse spotted the child's condition. Sara, whose first birthday is June 5, lives at home, but is officially in state custody.

The Oregon attorney general's office says the state couldn't interfere if Sara was an adult, but the law requires action if a child's health is endangered.

Doctors say that the goal in treating hydrocephalic babies is to prevent progressive brain damage, and that a child's skull may reduce in size after surgery. The condition is generally caused by a brain infection, sometimes before birth.

Linn County Deputy District Attorney Richard Mario has the medical reports on Sara and must decide whether to seek surgery.

"We are looking out for the best welfare of the child," said Mario, who expects a June court hearing. "It doesn't have to be a life-threatening case. It can be a question of a better quality of life and how she spends her life."

Jensen and his 42-year-old wife, Donna, are trying to get help from the American Civil Liberties Union. Their attorney, Brian Jackson, said the ACLU has not responded to the request.

"We feel like they are infringing on our civil liberties because they want to take Sara and medicate her and the tenets of our church teach against that," said Mrs. Jensen.

She said Sara cannot sit or crawl, but that she can roll across the floor to reach a favorite toy. And Mrs. Jensen said doctors told her Sara's head is growing and that at least one physician says surgery is necessary.

Mrs. Jensen said she did not know the circumference of Sara's head, but that she needs a jacket with a hood large enough for a 5-year-old. The Jensens' lawyer has refused to allow Sara to be photographed.

"Which takes precedence, the right to practice their religion or the police power of the state to overrule and say the welfare of the child takes precedence?" said the Jensens' lawyer. He said the doctors' report says Sara probably will suffer some retardation and describes her as disabled because of the size of her head.

The Jensens have five other children. Another son, Tony, died at home of meningitis at age 15 in 1976, the Jensens said. In 1974, he had been in a car accident and was hospitalized overnight under a court order. The family took him home the next day and say he recovered.

There are no state or county records on the number of child deaths attributed to parental refusal of medical care on religious grounds.

U.S. may lift ban on importing mares

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is proposing to lift its ban against importing breeding mares from six European countries, Japan and Australia.

The ban was imposed four years ago after breeding mares in those countries were found to be infected with contagious equine metritis, a venereal disease.

If lifted, the department would require intensive testing and treatment procedures to insure the mares are free of the disease before they're shipped.

John Atwell of the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service said all treatment must be supervised by government veterinarians of the exporting countries and tests must be performed in government laboratories. The final tests should be completed within 30 days of export to the U.S., he said.

The European countries affected by the proposal are Germany, Italy, the United Kingdom, France, Ireland and Belgium.

Comments on the plan should be submitted by July 28 to the deputy administrator for veterinary services, Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, Agriculture Department, Room 870, 6505 BBelcrest Road, Hyattsville, Md., 20782.

At the same time, the department announced it is retaining a 60-day quaranine perio for any horses imported from African countries.

The quarantine was put into effect because the entire continent is considered to be infected with African horse sickness, an often fatal virus.

The department had suggested dropping the flat 60-day quarantine in favor of holding horses only until negative laboratory test results were received.

But Atwell said the required laboratory analysis for the disease would take as long or longer than the 60 days, during which clinical signs of the disease will appear if it's present.

Cotton stocks will dwindle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cotton stocks both in the United States and worldwide will dwindle this season, the Agriculture Department reports.

But production should outstrip consumption again next season, largely because of improved prospects for American producers, analysts predict.

"If these early forecasts of production and use are realized, world stocks could increase slightly next year," department analysts said in summarizing their cotton outlook report Thursday. The report itself will be published in two weeks.

Despite record crops in China and Russia, the report said world cotton production for the year running through this July will be only 65.5 million bales while demand will hit an all-time high of 66.2 million bales.

Demand on the U.S. crop, cut 25 percent to 11.1 million bales because of adverse growing conditions, likely will force American cotton stocks to 2.5 million bales Aug. 1, the lowest level in three decades, the analysts said.

"Although total use (in the U.S.) will likely be 25 percent below a year earlier, it still could exceed production by about 700,000 bales," the report predicted.

The general state of the American economy drove domestic cotton use down 15 percent in the first three months of this year, and the report said, "A slow recovery from 1980's recession continues to affect mill use."

Overall, it said, mill use probably will hit 5.8 million bales by the end of July, down from last year's 6.5 million.

Senate bill would end use of short-handled hoe

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Senate has tentatively approved a bill that would outlaw the short-handled hoe used in farm work.

Another vote is needed to send the bill to the governor.

"The hoe is synonymous with crippling stoop labor," Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, said Thursday.

His bill that would prohibit employers from requiring farmworkers to use a hoe with a handle less than four feet long.

Truan could get only 18 votes Wednesday when he sought to bring the bill up for debate, three short of the necessary two-thirds. Thursday, however, the vote was 21-8.

House, Senate choose conferees to iron out redistricting differences

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The House and Senate on Thursday selected members of a conference committee that will try to work out a congressional redistricting bill that satisfies members of both bodies.

The 10-member committee will work with a House bill that went through some rewriting before receiving Senate approval. The bill does not pair any incumbents, and sets boundaries for the three new congressional seats Texas has gained.

House Majority Leader Bob Bush, D-Sherman, has said the House version is favorable to Republicans.

Speaker Bill Clayton appointed Tim Von Dohlen, D-Goliad, as chairman of the House delegation on the conference committee. Also appointed were Bob Davis, R-Irving, Craig Washington, D-Houston, Bill Messer, D-Belton, and Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi.

The Senate conferees are Jack Ogg, D-Houston, chairman; Peyton McKnight, D-Tyler; Ike Harris, R-Dallas; and Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas.

Legislators may spend weekend on spending

By LAURA RICHARDSON
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — With only four days left in the 1981 Legislature, lawmakers still have to deal with the mammoth state spending bill, now expected to appear this weekend.

House and Senate negotiators resolved their differences Thursday, agreeing on a $25.6 billion compromise bill to pay for running state government during the two years beginning Sept. 1.

Optimistic conferees had said when negotiations opened May 17 that lawmakers would have the bill in their hands by May 27, but late Thursday the measure was still being prepared for publication.

The crush of work in both houses as the June 1 adjournment nears, and extended committee debate over funding the state prison and welfare systems, delayed action. Meetings were often interrupted, postponed or abbreviated while conferees conducted other legislative business.

But committee co-chairman Rep. Bill Presnal, D-Bryan, said he still hoped debate could begin Saturday.

The original Senate version of the bill was $191 million more than Comptroller Bob Bullock said was available in state revenues. The House bill left $12 million on the table, Presnal said.

The final spending bill must be within the amount Bullock says is in state coffers or it cannot become law.

Bullock said Thursday he probably would not issue a new estimate of available revenues, but would "just wait and see what happens."

He said that he would decide if enough money is available when he sees the final bill.

The most difficult compromises — money for the state welfare and prison systems — were worked out in midnight agreements Tuesday.

Thursday's meeting spent $8.5 million more for state bilingual education programs, gave the attorney general $5 million to pay judgments against the state, and set aside $1.35 million for centers for battered wives.

The Texas Department of Corrections budget brought out some of the least temporate rhetoric in committee negotiations. Representatives took a hardline attitude toward appropriating money to meet expenses related to the federal civil rights suit on conditions in state prisons. They said they hoped the judgment that Texas prisons violate inmates' civil rights would be overturned on appeal.

Presnal called U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice, who is presiding over the case, a "dictator."

Senators said they wanted to respond positively to the court order. They proposed spending $68.9 million more than the House for construction to relieve overcrowding, and created a $6.4 million contingency fund for "flexibility" and $7.5 million contingency item for security.

The committee combined the two contingency funds into one item and allocated $10 million to it.

Negotiators slashed the Senate's $191.3 million biennial prison construction budget by $45 million. Presnal said the Senate appropriation was more than could be spent in two years because sites for new prisons had not been selected yet. The new figure is $25 million more than the House waned to spend.

Wiretapping bill approved by House

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements smiled from above when the House vote board lit up green, signifying approval of his wiretap bill.

Opponents of the bill — a major piece of Clements' anti-crime package — took last shots at the measure Thursday, but they failed and the House voted 97-46 to send the bill to the governor's desk.

"This has been a great day for law enforcement and the continuing war on drugs," Clements said after he came down from the House gallery. "Time will demonstrate its success."

The bill, which will get a quick signature from Clements, allows prosecutors to ask judges to allow the Department of Public Safety to tap telephones of suspected drug dealers.

Senators changed Rep. Bennie Bock's bill make it expire automatically in 1985 unless that year's Legislature decides it should be continued. Bock said he agreed with all the changes made in the Senate.

"The Senate in my opinion has done some things which probably improve the bill," said Bock, D-New Braunfels.

Opponents of the measure took to the microphones in an effort to win at least a delay. Rep. Wilhemina Delco, D-Austin, said the DPS would need $1.2 million during the biennium to supervise the wiretaps.

"I'd spend $1.2 million to save my kid from a drug pusher," Bock replied.

Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, led the opposition with a motion to reject the Senate changes and send the bill to conference committee. He argued against a portion of the bill allowing covert entry to plant bugs.

Rep. Bob Bush, D-Sherman, joined Wilson.

"I don't feel like we can trust human beings with technology with the massive potential for abuse this technology permits," Bush said.

The House voted 96-45 against Wilson's motion for a conference committee.

Bush said he thought some members — who gave in to "leadership of people not located in this House" — might have changed their mind on wiretapping in the weeks since it won House approval. He said some newer House members might have been pressured earlier in the session because they thought they "had to vote along to get along...because it was sponsored by a very important person."

Clements, wife Rita, and legislative aide Jim Kaster watched from the House gallery as the green lights on the voting board indicated approval of the bill.

Later, the governor said the bill poses no threat to innocent citizens.

"Safeguards in the bill assure that the basic rights of law-abiding citizens will not be invaded. Illegal use is punishable by imprisonment and fine, and damages could be collected in case of illegal taps," Clements said.

"So all this talk about breaking into people's homes to plant taps is nonsense," he said.

Doggett delays vote on Clements' nominees

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Doggett, a persistent critic of Republican Gov. Bill Clements, has delayed a vote on the governor's appointment of two longtime GOP party workers to state agency positions.

The Senate agreed Thursday to wait until Monday — the last day of the Legislature — to vote on Dr. Richard Box's appointment to the Texas Real Estate Commission and Dr. George Willeford's appointment to the Texas Youth Council.

Box, chairman of the Travis County Republican Party, and Willeford, former state GOP chairman, both are from Austin. Box is a dentist, and Willeford is a psychiatrist.

"I want to visit with the governor's office between now and Monday," said Doggett.

Sen. James "Buster" Brown, R-Lake Jackson, held up a vote on five men named to the Pilot Commission of the Port of Galveston and Texas City, because "a senator raised a question about one of them."

Brown refused to identify the person. The appointees are A.O. Evans, Edward Fox, Ed Mabry, Edward Minocchi and William Patton, all of Galveston.

Sen. Jack Ogg, D-Houston, asked for more time to consider Jack Dulworth, also of Houston, who was appointed to the Texas Turnpike Authority. At Ogg's request, the Senate first postponed a vote on Dulworth on May 6.

The Senate confirmed 30 other appointments on a 31-0 vote, by county, including:

Public Utility Commissioner — Henry Moak Rollins, Travis.

Trinity River Authority director — Tommy Hollis, San Jacinto.

Nimitz being cleaned up to resume training cruise

By R.D. GERSH
Associated Press Writer

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The aircraft carrier USS Nimitz, in port after a jet crash that left 62 crewmen dead or injured and about $100 million in damage, may be cleaned up and ready to resume its training cruise by Saturday, Navy officials say.

The Nimitz sailed into its home port Thursday, returning damaged aircraft and the bodies of 13 of the 14 crewmen killed in the crash of the Marine EA-6B and its fiery aftermath.

The body of Marine 1st Lt. Laurence Cragun, the plane's electronics officer, still had not been found by today.

Twenty-one of the injured crewmen were flown to hospitals in Florida and Texas after Tuesday's accident off the Florida coast. The other 27 injured crewmen were treated in sick bay. The Nimitz carried about 3,000 sailors and 2,500 airmen.

Four young sailors severely burned in the crash were "alert and responsive" but still in critical condition at the Brooke Army Medical Center burn unit at Fort Sam Houston in Texas, Col. Basil A. Pruitt Jr. said Thursday afternoon.

The wreckage of four planes — the EA-6B Prowler that crashed and three F-14 Tomcats — was discarded overboard. Seven other aircraft suffered major damage and were sent off for repairs. Minor damage to another nine planes had been repaired.

There was no official value placed on the damage, but "$100 million would not be a bad estimate," said Vice Adm. Gus Kinnear, commander Naval Air Forces Atlantic.

On Thursday, Dale Stewart, a 19-year-old airman apprentice, had a bandage around his fractured knuckles, stitches up his chin and a missing tooth. He was on the flight deck under a plane Tuesday night before the crash.

"I got clear and then a grabbed a firehose," he said. "There was just one big boom. All you could see was flying pieces of aircraft. The A-6 just got too close to the island. It was hitting one airplane after another in a chain reaction."

"A lot of guys grew up last night," said Lt. Terrence Doyle, 27.

Nimitz skipper Capt. Jack Batzler was on the bridge when, he said, the ill-fated plane came in on "a fairly standard approach." But he said it seemed the pilot was too high and would land too far up the ship.

The plane drifted right, away from the safely angled left side, "hit three A-7s parked right of the bow line ... impacted with the first F-14," Batlzer said.

The official explanation will await a Navy investigation.

"It came in and clipped a helicopter, and then turned across a tractor and decapitated the person in it," said Petty Officer 3rd Class Kevin O'Brien, who turned out on deck to fight the fires.

The damaged planes were lined up on the flight deck when the Nimitz sailed in Thursday. A couple had their tops sliced off. An F-14's nose was torn open, wires and electronics exposed. A EA-6B in perfect condition was off to one side.

The father of one of the victims — 21-year-old Navy firefighter Depnis Driscoll — said he'll always recall the tender moments.

"I used to kiss him and tell him 'I love you Dennis,'" said Robert Driscoll, 51, of Irvington, N.J. "He'd reach down and kiss me on my bald spot and say, 'I love you too, dad,'"

The elder Driscoll said the family was informed of the young man's death Wednesday night.

Burn victims said alert, responsive

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Four young sailors severely burned in the fiery airplane crash on the USS Nimitz flight deck have been termed "alert and responsive" by the commander-director of the famed Brooke Army Medical Center burn unit.

However, Col. Basil A. Pruitt Jr. said the four received burns ranging from over 32 to 73 percent of their bodies and were all listed in critical condition.

The four Navy men were airlifted to Brooke late Wednesday night to begin what could be weeks of treatment in the military hospital at Fort Sam Houston.

They were identified as Airman Recruit Richard Simpson, 22, Gray, Me.; Petty Officer Second Class Richard M. Hokanson, 21, Hauppace, N.Y.; Airman Apprentice George W. Butz, 23, Hockens, Del., and Seaman Apprentice Stephen Pass, 21, Calhoun, Ga.

Pruitt said at a Thursday afternoon news conference that the four men's burns covered 32, 35, 35 and 73 percent of their bodies, but he declined to specify extent of burns of each patient by name. He also would not identify two of the patients whom he said suffered "inhalation stress."

Generally, the mortality chances are 50-50 for a person who receives burns over more than 60 percent of his body, and the chances of survival improve as the percentage of body area burned decreases, the doctor said.

He said personnel at the burn center were working around the clock to guard against shock by giving the patients plenty of liquids and prevent infection by treating the burns with special creams developed at the center.

"The period for shock is during the first 48 hours and they're nearly through that phase," Pruitt said. "In at least three of these patients, the preponderance of the burns are third degree, which will require skin grafts," he said.

Pruitt said if the patients continued to progress, skin grafting could begin in three to four weeks.

The family of one of the victims was able to visit and talk with him Thursday morning and an Army spokesman said other relatives were scheduled to arrive at the post.

The four sailors will benefit from 35 years of research that has made the Brooke burn ward one of the best equipped and staffed burn wards in the world.

The sailors joined 27 other burn victims who arleady were being treated at the center.

Dr. William McManus, chief of the clinical division, said the burn center accomodates an average 31 patients a day and 300 a year, both civilian and military.

Unfulfilled penalties

It wasn't long ago that U.S. Supreme Court Justice William H. Rehnquist verbalized the apparent frustration being felt by a lot of Americans.

Rehnquist blasted the way courts treat convicted murderers, including his own courts's "endlessly drawn out legal proceedings" that destroy the intent of capital punishment laws.

Capital punishment isn't pretty. The courts have kicked the death penalty around for years while the crime rate has soared, particularly violent crime.

Five years ago the high court ruled that the death penalty is constitutional and since that time some 30 states have enacted death penalty laws in accordance with that ruling.

Yet the death sentence has only been carried out four times since 1976. Meanwhile 750 prisoners remain on death rows around the nation and appeals continue to stack up.

In addressing that subject, Justice Rehnquist didn't pull any punches. He noted that the death penalty is an "illusion" and that the Supreme Court must share some responsibility for this "mockery of our criminal justice system."

The jurist went on to note he is worried about the consequences to society when existing laws to punish murderers are not carried out. Such lax treatment of the laws for serious crime encourage individuals to take the law into their own hands in the form of "vigilante justice and lynch law," he said.

That's an unnerving look at the point to which our criminal justice system has deteriorated. But realizing that we have a problem is only a step toward resolution.

Justice Rehnquist's comments were exactly on target. Now comes the difficult part; the courts must begin to carry out the death penalty if we ever hope to turn around this unhealthy and alarming trend.

The solution won't be pleasant, but then neither is violent crime.

TV's election projections

The opera isn't over 'til no one's left alive, and an election shouldn't be considered over until the last vote is cast. So, many Americans felt cheated last fall when TV projections declared the presidential election wrapped up even before many voters could get to the polls.

Of course, the polls remained open, but many would-be voters on the West Coast, persuaded by the TV projections (and Jimmy Carter's early concession), may not have bothered with what they considered a pointless exercise.

What's the solution? We don't share a widely expressed view that TV networks should be forbidden to make any projections or predictions, or even to report actual returns from anywhere, until polls everywhere have closed. Such a plan would conflict with constitutional guarantees of a free press and should be rejected, although some voluntary restraint by the networks would be commendable.

The best legislative answer would be a system of simultaneous voting, with the polls open for 24 hours. All polls in the country would open at the same moment — say, 8 a.m. in the Eastern Time Zone, 7 a.m. in the Central, and so on — and close 24 hours later. The West then would be on the same footing as the nation's other regions. And with people free to vote at various times during the 24-hour election, "exit" pollsters would not know as easily as they do now when their sampling constituted a cross-section of the electorate.

The 24-hour voting might also result in more voters going to the polls. To further combat low voter turnout, some observers favor a shift of Election Day from Tuesday to Sunday. That, too, is an idea worth exploring — so long as it's kept in mind that Sunday elections could run into snags on religious grounds, to say nothing of Americans' penchant for "getting away from it all" on the weekend.

CHARLEY REESE

West needs to recognize threat posed by terrorism

Charley Reese

It frankly doesn't do any good to express horror and all that when a Moslem terrorist shoots the Pope. Any time a good person is murdered or wounded by a worthless scumbag, it's horrible etcetera and so forth. The question is, when are the West's political leaders going to wake up and actually do something about terrorism?

For a number of years now, Western politicians have been talking about terrorism, but at the same time tolerating it. The Palestine Liberation Organization, for example, one of the arch-terrorist organizations in the world, sits in the Untied Nations as an official observer and operates "information" offices in Washington and New York.

Both the U.S. State Department and several European governments are just itching to embrace the PLO. The National Council of Churches had kind words for it, calling it the only organized voice for the Palestinian people. As Franklin Littell, a protestant scholar points out, by 1933, the Nazis were the only organized voice of the German people. It apparently has not occurred to the National Council that the reason there is no vocal opposition to the PLO among Palestinian Arabs is that the PLO has a nasty habit of murdering every Arab who speaks out against it.

I know some people apologize for the PLO because they don't like Jews or because they do like oil but that is neither here nor there. Terrorism is terrorism regardless of the target or the rationalization. The Irish Republican Army is just as bad as the PLO. Many people are just as stupid in condoning their murderous activities because they dislike the British as others are in condoning the PLO because they don't like Jews.

Terrorism represents an assault against civilization itself. Civilization depends upon the rule of law and upon peaceful change wrought by public debate and persuasion. Injecting murder into politics is fatal to democracy. It cannot function when gunmen are running loose. A society of law becomes meaningless if disagreement means death. What good does it do for men like the Pope to spend their lives in study and discipline in order to help their fellow man if they are to be at the mercy of any half-illiterate bum with a pistol or a few ounces of plastic explosives?

And don't say there is nothing that can be done about it. There is plenty that can be done about it if people will just put their priorities in order and stop making excuses for terrorists whose brand of politics they happen to favor.

The very first step is to condemn terrorism, period, and to make it clear that no cause justifies the wanton murder of innocent people. That, by the way, is any easy way to distinguish between true guerrilla armies which are fighting a revolution, and terrorists. The guerrilla attacks the government he is trying to overthrow. The terrorist avoids the government and kills civilians. Occasionally guerrillas will resort to terrorism; when they do, condemn them. Only when the civilized world makes it absolutely clear that under no circumstances will any concessions whatsoever be made to terrorism will this evil be brought under control.

The United States could set an example by shutting down the PLO's information offices, deporting every alien member, and making it a public policy to deny even a visitor's visa to any member of a terrorist organization. Secondly, we should break diplomatic relations and sever all economic ties to any nation which harbors and encourages terrorism. That would include, in the case of the PLO, a number of Arab countries, including Saudi Arabia which funds the PLO.

Drastic steps, huh? Yes, but unless you force these countries to choose between terrorists and relations with the civilized world, they will continue to have their cake and eat it too. They will continue to enjoy the benefits of being accepted into the family of nations while feeding the cancer that will eventually, if it is not stopped, destroy that family.

The West has a chance if it can muster the courage to act, but if it can't, then democracy is doomed. Uncontrolled terrorism will eventually produce what it produced in Argentina and Uruguay — uncontrolled repression, which not only snuffs out terrorism but liberty and human rights as well.

I harp on the PLO because it is a good litmus test. Arab oil backs it. Anti-semitism supports it. The Soviet Union and Marxism support it. If the United States and its West European allies cannot bring themselves to ostracize an organization with such a blatantly terrorist record as the PLO, then you needn't waste your time crying over the Pope.

In fact, you might consider defecting, for without either morality or courage, the West doesn't have a chance of surviving its struggle with communism.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Small business may be endangered species

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — Before the first asphalt went down on Wall Street, a love affair began to blossom between Big Government and Big Business. Yet the nation would be better served if the government would listen to the entreaties of a worthier suitor: the individual entrepreneur who has historically been the backbone of the free enterprise system.

In the best American tradition of worshiping financial success, many officials of the Reagan administration have made it their first priority to attend to the needs of the corporate giants. The American small businessman, meanwhile, could become an endangered species. He is reeling from the after-blast of skyrocketing inflation and interest rates while being battered by abusive tax laws and government regulations.

What small businessmen need is a Bill of Rights that will give them a fighting chance to coexist with the big guys. Here, then, is my own suggestion for a Small Business Bill of Rights:

1. RIGHT TO COMPETE. Individual initiative and enterprise must be encouraged, not discouraged. Anti-trust laws may need to be tightened to keep the big boys from selling below cost to drive smaller competitors out of business. Given half a chance, the pioneer traits of risk-taking and Yankee ingenuity will rise again.

2. RIGHT TO BE HEARD. There are 14 million small and independent businesses in the United States, which employ 58 percent of all private-sector jobs and support 100 million people. Yet their voices are a barely audible whisper in the halls of Congress, compared to the cacophony of Big Business and Big Labor lobbyists.

3. RIGHT TO INHERIT. One of the strongest motivations for starting a business is the hope that it can be passed on from one generation to the next. But estate and gift taxes have reached a confiscatory level that threatens the survival of family businesses and promotes sellouts to conglomerates.

4. RIGHT TO REASONABLE REGULATION. Many a beleaguered small businessman spends most of his time filling out government forms and complying with government regulations. The thousands of regulatory laws are written with Big Business in mind; it's unreasonable to expect General Motors and Mike's Garage to meet the same government standards and reporting requirements.

5. RIGHT TO FAIR TAXATION. The tax laws are full of loopholes that favor the big corporations. The small businessman who files as an individual or partnership is socked with double taxation of dividends and inadequate investment tax credits. If he manages to show a profit or break even in spite of these handicaps, inflation alone will push him into a higher tax bracket.

6. RIGHT TO AFFORDABLE WAGE SCALES. Though organized labor will raise howls of protest, it makes sense to give small businesses relief from minimum wage regulations. Workers will be better off if small firms are free to create new jobs.

7. RIGHT TO EQUAL INTEREST RATES. Discrimination against small business borrowers must stop. Bankers justify charging small businesses two or more points above the so-called prime rate, while giving big borrowers rates three or four points below the prime. The argument is that the little guys are bigger risks. But small businesses have no monopoly on failure — as Lockheed and Chrysler have demonstrated.

8. RIGHT TO GOVERNMENT CONTRACTS. The record shows that small businesses are 24 times more efficient in creating new products and technologies. Yet only a paltry 3.4 percent of the federal government's contracts for research and development go to small companies. All told, they manage to get only about 20 percent of government contracts.

Small can be beautiful. But if America's small businesses aren't given a chance to survive, future generations may never be able to see just how beautiful they were.

JUST ONE OF THE BOYS: Ever since Al Capone was nailed on income tax charges, the Mob has feared the Internal Revenue Service more than any other law-enforcement agency. But apparently the IRS poohbahs make no effort to see that their agents' work on organized crime gets special attention.

An internal General Accounting Office analysis requested by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., reveals that once a tax cheater's case is developed by the IRS Criminal Investigation Division and sent to the Collection Division, "it loses its identity."

What this means, the GAO report concludes, is that the Collection Division "does not specifically emphasize the collection of monies owed by organized crime individuals." An internal IRS study last year came to the same conclusion and recommended that there be better identification of organized crime figures in tax-cheat prosecutions.

But the GAO says this hasn't been done, and notes: "Although IRS does not place any priority on the collection of monies from known organized criminals, there is nothing in IRS' regulations precluding it from making such collections a higher priority."

In short, the IRS could go after the Mob if it wanted to. Its hardworking auditors have given their bosses the ammunition; all that remains is to pull the trigger.

INSIDE REPORT:

Democrats' budget alternative entices senior Reaganites

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

Evans

Novak

WASHINGTON — Bolstered by the Treasury as well as budget director David Stockman, President Reagan is inclined against diluting his tax package to round up enough conservative Democratic congressmen for a winning coaltion in the House.

The decision must be made quickly because backroom decisions are beginning on the pivotal tax question. One option presented to the president would satisfy the "boll weevils" or "Redneck Caucus" — the conservative southern Democrats — and appease the bond market by delaying individual tax rate cuts until Jan. 1, 1982. But the odds are against Reagan taking that way out, in the opinion of well-placed administration officials.

There is plenty of room for compromise between what the boll weevils want and Reagan's Kemp-Roth bill. That ushers in intriguing negotiations that will determine not only the thrust of economic policy the next two years but also redefine power relationships inside the House.

Actually, Reagan's tax proposal for annual, across-the-board 10 percent rate cuts for three years starting July 1, 1981, never had a chance. It is so nearly the replica of the partisan Republican Kemp-Roth bill that not even the boll weevils will vote for it. Indeed, House Democratic leaders drool at the prospect of bringing it to a vote for the psychic and political joy of beating Reagan.

Reagan can escape this predicament in the Democratic-controlled House by making a deal with the Conservative Democratic Forum (CDF) — the Redneck Caucus. But Rep. Kent Hance of Texas, a CDF member on the House Ways and Means Committee who has been talking secretly to the Treasury, is insisting on no tax rate cuts at all in 1981 and only a 5 percent cut in 1982 (to be followed by 10 percent each in 1983 and 1984). Thanks to inflationary bracket creep, that means significantly HIGHER tax rates through the 1982 election.

This would reduce Reagan's estimated budget deficit for the next fiscal year by some $30 billion. The immediate tax cuts would be slashes in "unearned" (dividends and interest) income that show little revenue loss.

Some boll weevils also eye long-range ideological goals. Rep. Phil Gramm of Texas, perhaps the CDF's most conservative member, sees vast political-economic rewards in "back-loaded" tax cuts — cuts that go deeper in future years. Like back-loaded spending programs enacted in the Lyndon B. Johnson era, they constitute a Fabian strategy of social revolution.

The CDF alternative entices senior Reaganites — but, contrary to fears of edgy Treasury officials, not Stockman. As budget director, Stockman naturally is interested in any deficit-reducing scheme. But as a supply-sider and Republican politician, he sees dangers in what Hance and Gramm propose.

The CDF alternative would permit only 5 percent before the 1982 election. That 5 percent compares with Reagan's campaign pledge of 20 percent and his actual proposal of 15 percent. While the CDF alternative would please the bond traders, it would do nothing for the blue-collar working man. That is not what Jack Kemp, David Stockman or Ronald Reagan intends.

Politics aside, the CDF alternative flunks the test for supply-side tax cuts as set by founders of the supply-side movement. The heart of their ideology is reduction of marginal tax rates as an incentive to productivity. The supply-siders want a "front-loaded" tax cut — as much rate reduction as quickly as possible — for economic as well as political reasons.

Any number of compromises is possible — say, a 7.5 percent rate cut a year beginning Oct. 1, 1981. But the danger for the White House, if Reagan and the boll weevils cannot agree, is an all-Democratic coalition. Hance is under intense pressure from the Democratic leadership not to deal with the White House, and will confer this week with the ways and means chairman, Rep. Dan Rostenkowski.

It is not Rostenkowski, however, but one of his committee members — Rep. James R. Jones — who looms as the principal Democratic actor. Jones, regarded as a moderate conservative until this year, is licking his wounds from the budget fight and ready to challenge Reagan again. He is working closely with ways and means liberals on a bill that would be tilted toward investors and that would not cut individual taxes until Jan. 1, 1983 — a beautiful bill in the eyes of the bond boys, the boll weevils and maybe a good many Republican congressmen as well.

The easy way for Reagan to avert a Jones-led Democratic triumph is to buy the CDF alternative. But in so doing, he would be following the same path of pain travelled by Herbert Hoover and Jimmy Carter — seeking vainly to cut budget deficits by increasing taxes. The odds today are that Reagan will resist this, and as the great communicator, take on the bond traders, the boll weevils and some of his own Republicans to convince them that it is the road to ruin.

Grieving Polish mourn cardinal

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Hundreds of grieving Poles prayed through the night at the bier of Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski as the government joined church leaders in preparations for the funeral of the man who led the Roman Catholic Church's struggle to survive under communism in Poland.

The body of the 79-year-old primate was to lie in state at the seminary church on Krakowski Przedmiescie until the funeral Sunday.

The mourners sat silently in the pews, waiting for one of the wooden kneelers around the closed, flower-bedecked coffin with the red cardinal's hat among the blossoms.

One woman, after kneeling for a long time, finally whispered to a priest who took her rosary beads and touched them briefly to the foot of the lead-colored casket. A man in a blue suit knelt before the coffin, rose and hesitated, then knelt again before moving on.

Roses, carnations, tulips and other flowers were placed in vases around the casket by black-garbed priests as the people prayed, crossed themselves or just stood silently.

Wyszynski, leader of the Polish church since 1948, died Thursday after a six-week battle with cancer. Thousands stood in the rain to file past the coffin at his residence, then packed the sidewalks as priests, members of the Solidarity labor federation and firemen carried it to the church a mile away.

After a Requiem Mass at the church Sunday, there will be an open-air service in Victory Square, where Pope John Paul II celebrated Mass during his homecoming visit in 1978. Interment will follow in the crypt beneath nearby St. John's Cathedral.

A joint church and state commission met to plan the funeral, which is expected to draw church leaders from around the world. The Vatican secretary of state, Cardinal Agostino Casaroli, is expected to represent the pope, who as Karol Wojtyla, a Polish priest and cardinal, was a protege of Wyszynski.

The pontiff, recuperating in a Rome hospital from an assassination attempt two weeks ago, asked to be left alone to pray when told of the death of his mentor. Later he celebrated a memorial Mass in his room and sent a telegram to Poland saying he shared his homeland's "grief and prayers."

Poland's communist government — officially atheist in a country whose citizens are overwhelmingly Roman Catholic — described Wyszynski as "an oustanding priest and a great patriot."

"We are convinced that his life, thoughts and hard work have created a model of cooperation of the church with a socialist state," the government said in a statement.

Solidarity said the independent union "has a special debt to him, a debt of gratefulness."

Among the other messages of sympathy was one from President Reagan, who said, "My compatriots and I fully share Poland's deep sense of loss."

Wyszynski was born Aug. 3, 1901, near Warsaw, the son of a farmer. He was ordained a priest in 1924 and was appointed bishop of Lublin in 1946.

Jews evicted

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli soldiers today evicted Jewish settlers from a shrine in the West Bank town of Hebron where they were conducting a prayer service during hours set aside for Moslem observances, the military said.

The settlers continued their prayers outside the shrine, a cave worshiped by Jews and Moslems as the traditional burial place of the patriarch Abraham. The soldiers then forced the settlers to move away from the shrine because they were preventing Moslem worshipers from entering, the military said.

A timetable ensures that Jewish and Moslem worshipers do not pray simultaneously at the shrine. Friday is the day for Moslem prayers, but Jewish worshipers from Kiryat Arbn, have repeatedly tried — and sometimes succeeded — in entering the narrow cave on Fridays.

Sugar Plumb Tree has just right gift

Featuring hand-made items for everyone from cradle to boudoir, the Sugar Plumb Tree has unique gifts and decorations.

Betty Cobb and her daughter Dawn Chance, co-owners of the Sugar Plumb Tree, create some of the items themselves. Dawn has made dolls, baby quilts, wall hangings and toys.

Everything at Sugar Plumb Tree is hand-crafted, hand-carved or hand-painted.

For baby, Sugar Plumb Tree has layettes, bumper pads, crib quilts and comforters, Lollipop Kids dolls, wooden trains and rocking horse, stuffed animals and pillows.

For women, Sugar Plumb Tree has selected limited edition dolls for collectors — with papers — by Jerri Kendall. In addition, there are hand-painted bells by Stefan of Scotsdale, Ariz., hand-designed earrings and haircombs, pastorials including Bible verses and pressed flowers from Utah, soaps and sachets and ribboned pillows.

For the kitchen, you'll find bread dough signs from Tohoca, and kitchen aprons and pottery as well.

For men, Sugar Plumb Tree offers suede pictures from Sante Fe, and wood carvings of giraffes, ducks, armadillos and other animals.

"When you think of gift buying, it should be fun, not a chore," Betty says. And at Sugar Plumb Tree, it is fun. In a pleasant atmosphere, you can find gifts to say, "I love you" at the Sugar Plumb Tree.

"We're striving for the personal touch with everything we sell," Betty says.

For a down-home feeling — and fun shopping for all those graduation, bridal and newborn occasions — stop by the Sugar Plumb Tree at 2304 N. Big Spring St. They're open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Tony Rogers, Acme Marketing, Inc. at 3103 E. 31st St. in Odessa, shows above how simple and easy it is to transform city or well water into order-free, sparkling mountain spring water without electricity or plumbing. The activated charcoal filter removes chlorine, sulphates, rust, algae and other pollutants giving you nature's pure, healthful water for less than two cents a gallon. Call Tony at Acme Marketing, Inc. at 367-6977 in Odessa for more information or free home delivery.

Home Spa water purifier simplest, most economical

The Home Spa water purifier is one of the simpliest, easy-to-use, most efficient, trouble-free, economical water purifiers on the market today.

The Home Spa is portable. No electricity, no expensive plumbing. you can take it with you wherever you go. If you have a water cooler with a five-gallon jug on top, you can fill it in about 10 minutes with Home Spa filtered water for less than 10 cents. If you are now buying bottled water, you can save up to $20 a month and more with the Home Spa.

House plants, pets and goldfish will thrive on Home Spa filtered water. Beans will cook up in much less time with water filtered through the activated charcoal filter in the Home Spa. Nature's water that comes through your faucet with the impurities and chlorine removed is much more healthful than distilled water with a few minerals added.

The Home Spa water purifier has been on the market now for a little over three years. It is made of durable polyethylene and will last for many, many years without showing wear. If it should crack, chip, leak or break within a five-year period, it will be replaced free of charge. This guarantee is in writing. Anyone not 100 percent satisfied with the performance of the Home Spa can return it for a full refund of the purchase price.

The Home Spa dispenser retails for only $24.95 and replacement filters are $8.95. The charcoal filters will purify approximately 500 gallons of ordinary tap water, depending on the pollutants in you home area. Water heavily chlorinated will use up the effectiveness of the filter faster. In this area, we recommend that filters be replaced about every six to nine months, depending on the amount of water used.

Dallas man opening traffic ticket clinics

DALLAS (AP) — Robert D. Kizer advocates that going to court is a privilege and not a punishment, and says policeman are employees and not enemies of the public.

That's why Kizer, a native of Texas who knows how to think big, is opening branches of his Ticket Clinic in 11 Texas cities, with plans to take the whole shebang nationwide.

Kizer says he hopes eventually to spread the formulized franchise to all 50 states, so that via computer, a Dallas man who gets a ticket for a moving traffic violation from Kalamazoo to Kankakee can be handed the name of a knowledgeable, reputable attorney.

The bearded entrepreneur already has set up shop in Dallas, Houston, Amarillo and his native Lubbock — and by his reckoning, he has an 80 percent success rate at getting ticketed motorists off.

"The $33.50 average traffic fine in Dallas is the least of your problems," he says. "In insurance premiums, in three years it could cost you $1,200, instead of the $45 we charge to fight it."

The Ticket Clinic, which a local magazine has dubbed "The Fotomat of Jurisprudence," charges $45 per city ticket, and $75 for a highway violation, and tries all its cases before juries.

"We're so successful because we can afford to do what other attorneys can't," Kizer says. "We spend lots of time in libraries researching tickets. That's why lawyers refer their clients to us, because it costs $600 to $800 of their time just to fight a ticket. And of course they can't afford to charge that."

Attention-getting pamphlets and an advertising campaign designed to saturate the 11 targeted Texas cities outline the prodecure to follow from the moment you see the flashing lights in your rear-view mirror until The Ticket Clinic arranges a court date.

Kizer sees himself as a sort of Don Quixote, tilting full-speed at traffic laws instead of windmills. However, he makes no attempt to mask the fact that he plans to become "fairly independently wealthy," and knows there's a lucrative market in the wide-open West Texas highways and the densely crowded urban freeways.

By the end of this year, Kizer says clinics should be operating in Fort Worth, Austin, San Antonio, Midland, El Paso, Corpus Christi and Beaumont.

New Mexico will be the next state to be steered toward the franchise, he says.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Aspirin has its limitations

Dear Dr. Solomon: One of the first medications that most of us ever have occasion to use is aspirin. It seems that almost every time I pick up a newspaper, another use has been found for it, and I've come to look upon it as a wonder drug. Now my brother tells me that his son, who has asthma, has been warned against using it. Can you explain why this is so? Apparently aspirin is not the wonder drug I thought it was. — Penny

Dear Penny: I suggest you not be so taken in your love affair with aspirin. In many respects, aspirin is a wonder drug, but even a wonder durg may have its limitations. Penicillin, for example, is also a highly effective medication; yet some people are severely allergic to it and may be affected quite seriously if they inadvertently take it.

The problem with aspirin and patients with asthma is that it may cause bronchial obstructions and nasal problems which may lead to difficulty with breathing. Dr. Sheldon L. Spector, chief of the alergy and clinical immunology section at the National Jewish Hospital and Research Center in Denver, reports that some of the asthmatic patients there showed respiratory, chest, and nasal difficulties after taking aspirin. This prompted the center to undertake additional studies which indicated that about one of every five asthma patients suffers bronchial or nasal distress after taking aspirin.

Dr. Gary Rachelefsky, an associate professor of pediatrics at the University of California, Los Angeles, Medical School, who has also studied the problem, agrees. Apparently the physician who is following your nephew is aware of these or similar studies, and has decided to discontinue the use of aspirin for patients with asthma.

But don't write off aspirin simply because its use appears to be contraindicated in some patents. It is still an extremely valuable drug and a good friend to have around.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have been reading about the increased risk of cancer for men who were employed in the shipyards when asbestos was widely used, and for workers in chemical and other industries. If working in these places can be hazardous, wouldn't it stand to reason that women who work in industry would get cancer more often than women who remained at home? Is there any evidence that this is actually the case? — John

Dear John: There is at least one study that indicates that women who work do have an increased chance of getting cancer as compared to the chances of women who remain at home. Dr. Steven D. Stellman, assistant vice president for epidemiology with the American Cancer Society, and Dr. Jeanne M. Stellman, associate professor of public health at Columbia University, point out that some women who enter the work force may be exposed to asbestos fiber, particularly in older buildings where maintenance is poor. Others may be exposed to radiation or chemical fumes. Of course some products used around the home may also contain ingredients that have the potential of causing cancer.

Argentine mothers continue vigil for missing children

By DOUGLAS GRANT MINE
Associated Press Writer

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — They walk slowly, in a circle, in the main plaza of Argentina's capital.

Some carry pictures of their missing children.

All of them are burdened by the anguish of years of not knowing whether their sons and daughters are alive or dead.

Thursday, as they have every Thursday for the past four years, the Mothers of the Plaza de Mayo demonstrated to press their demand for information about the "desaparecidos," the disappeared ones.

This week's turnout was high. Nearly 1,000 people took part, a fourth of them mothers wearing white scarves embroidered with the missing person's name. Nobel Peace Prize laureate Adolfo Perez Esquivel was among the marchers.

Average Thursdays draw fewer than 500 demonstrators. But this is the Week of the Desaparecidos, proclaimed by Latin American human rights organizations at a congress in Costa Rica last January.

"Someone gets sick and dies, you can understand that. You grieve and bury them. Someone goes to prison, you can visit them. But this, this is overwhelming. You wake up every day and it is always the same," says Angelica Mignone, whose 24-year-old daughter Monica was taken from their Buenos Aires home at 5 in the morning May 14, 1976, by men who said they were army officers.

Monica is one of thousands — estimates range between 6,000 and 10,000 — about whom nothing has been heard since their detention by security forces between 1975 and 1980.

The military government that has ruled Argentina for the last five years maintains the missing are casualties of what they call "the dirty war" against leftist guerrillas.

President Roberto E. Viola, who was commander in chief of the army in 1978-80, set down the military's position in a speech two years ago.

"Do not ask for explanations where there are none," he said, making a reference to "those who are gone forever."

Before his inauguration in March, Gen. Viola visited President Reagan in Washington to improve relations that had suffered because of President Carter's emphasis on human rights.

Unconfirmed reports said Viola committed himself to providing information on the disappeared. But after his inauguration, Viola denied any such commitment.

The consensus here, among human rights activists and other political observers, is that the military fears it may one day be held accountable for the abductions and the subsequent summary executions that are acknowledged to have taken place.

U.S. military aid to Argentina was suspended during the Carter administration. The foreign relations committees of both houses of the U.S. Congress last week recommended lfting the ban but said the renewal of arms shipments should be conditional on progress in the human rights field. The lawmakers specifically mentioned the desaparecidos.

Not a woman among the dozens who frequent the mothers' organization headquarters, a converted apartment in downtown Buenos Aires, would say her son or daughter had been involved with the guerrillas blamed for hundreds of kidnappings and assassinations in the mid-1970s. They may admit a leftist tendency, but they say their children were abducted because of their humanitarian and social concerns.

"They have destroyed a nation's youth," said Elba Monteveros de Ford. She claims her son Alejandro and daughter-in-law were taken away by heavily armed men in the city of La Plata on May 11, 1977. The daughter-in-law was pregnant, and Mrs. Ford has joined with other women who call themselves the Grandmothers of Disappeared Children.

They have presented to the Interior Ministry sworn depositions of 60 cases alleging the abduction of pregnant daughters or the kidnapping of children along with their parents. They have approached the Supreme Court in an effort to gain custody of children born in captivity, but the court maintains it has no jurisdiction in the matter.

Three points come up repeatedly in conversations with the mothers. They are determined to have their questions answered. Their campaign has taken on dimensions larger than the original intention. They felt a profound empathy with the families of Americans held hostage in Iran for 14 months.

U.S. wants friendly relations with South Africa

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite opposition to South Africa's race policies, the Reagan administration is seeking to end that country's "polecat status" in the world community and offer it a key role in the defense of Western security interests, according to confidential documents.

The documents, obtained by The Associated Press, outline both the shared concerns and the mutual suspicions of the two countries during high-level consultations in Pretoria and Washington over the past six weeks.

The memos stress the importance the administration attaches to "constructive internal change" in South Afica but sggest the major American concern is the potential for Soviet domination throughout the southern portion of the African continent.

The documents were made available by Randall Robinson, director of TransAfrica, an anti-apartheid private research group based in Washington. It was not clear how he obtained them.

Robinson said the documents "clear up any remaining shadow of a doubt that the United States is moving rapidly toward an open and obvious alliance with military dimensions with South Africa in exchange for no commitment on South Africa's part for any substantial movement on their domestic viciousness.

"I think it ought to be alarming to the American people th ' this country is now clearly on a path toward this kind of relationship with perhaps the most vicious nation in the world since Nazi Germany."

The most revealing insights into administration thinking are contained in a May 11 memo from Assistant Secretary of State-Designate Chester Crocker to Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr.

HAIG WAS TO USE the memo in preparation for a meeting in Washington three days later with South African Foreign Minister Roelof F. Botha.

Crocker suggested that Haig tell Botha the United States, after two decades of increasing American coolness, is prepared to open a "new chapter" in relations with South Africa.

"We feel the relationship should be based upon our shared hopes for the future prosperity, security and stability of southern Africa, constructive internal change within South Africa and our shared perception of the role of the Soviet Union and its surrogates in thwarting those goals," the memo said.

The document makes clear Crocker's belief that future cooperation hinges on South Africa's attitude toward relinquishing its control over Namibia, the vast, sparsely populated territory where the South African Army and black nationalist guerrillas have waged a bush war for 14 years.

The South Africans regard the SWAPO guerrilla group as communist-dominated and fear that their security could be jeopardized if SWAPO gains power in elections.

The Reagan administration believes, however, that a settlement is possible that would safeguard South Africa's interests, end a major source of instability in southern Africa and limit the prospects for Soviet penetration of the region.

If the South Africans "have no intention of pulling out of the territory under circumstances reasonably acceptable to the international community at large, we will want to opt out of the negotiation process. ... Conversely, if the South Africans cooperate to achieve an internationally acceptable settlement, this will greatly facilitate efforts to deal effectively with the Soviet threat," Crocker wrote.

He added, "A relationship initiated on a cooperative basis could move forward toward a future in which South Africa returns to a place within the regional framework of Western security interests."

CROCKER THEN REFERRED to South Africa's role as an international outcast because of its white supremacist policies.

If South Africa cooperates on the Namibia issue, he said, the United States can work "to end South Africa's polecat status in the world and seek to restore its place as a legitimate and important regional actor with whom we can cooperate pragmatically."

The State Department said it would be inappropriate to comment on the memos because they were classified.

After his May 14 luncheon meeting with Botha, Haig underscored his desire for closer relations with South Africa and said its leaders could rely on the United States.

"In our relations with you, we will not overemphasize the differences between us, nor underemphasize the ties that bind us together," Haig said in a toast. "We will share with you the burdens now confronting us as we seek peace, justice and stability in the world, especially in southern Africa."

Robinson also made available an official summary of conversations in Pretoria on April 15-16 involving Crocker, Botha and South African Defense Minister Magnus Malan.

The summary paraphrases Botha's concerns about SWAPO and its leader, Sam Nujoma:

"We're convinced SWAPO is Marxist. Nujoma will nationalize the whole place and cause upheaval and civil war, involving South Africa.

"We will have to invade Namibia and other countries as well. We are pleading for you to see the dangers of a wrong solution in Namibia. It would be better to have a low-level conflict there indefinitely than to have a civil war escalating to a general conflagration."

Health care to take priority

Long-term care, ambulatory care and health manpower will head discussion as new priorities when the Permian Basin Health Systems Agency introduces its latest revision of the 17 county Health Systems Plan (HSP) for 1981-86.

The agency will hold an open meeting on Monday at 2 p.m. for comments or additional information to be included in the HSP. The meeting will be at the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission at Midland Air Terminal.

Although basically the same document as presented in the past, the revised HSP will contain the latest data for the distribution of health resources in the Permian Basin. Health concerns included in the document outline the health needs and resources available to meet those needs as well as recommendations for improvements in the health care system.

Priorities highlighted include cancer, heart, maternal and child health, communicable disease, renal disease, dental, drug abuse, alcohol abuse, mental health, mental retardation, environmental health, emergency medical services and rehabilitation.

The chapter on facilities and services contains information on general hospitals as well as specialized services to be found in the area. Also included in this chapter are long-term care, ambulatory care and health manpower which have been expanded this year and present some different ideas on filling in the health service gaps.

The accompanying implementation document, the Annual Implementation Plan, contains 15 actions to be accomplished within the region in the next year. These actions range from community CPR (Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation) training and family planning education to outpatient services for drug abuse and special living skill classes for the mentally retarded.

Copies of these documents are available for inspection or copying at the Regional Planning Commission offices at Air Terminal. Comments on these documents will be received by the Health Systems Agency until the close of business on June 10.

Longer lives for husbands, wives?

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Because people are living longer, "until death do us part" may someday be replaced in wedding vows by "until retirement do us part," says a Temple University sociologist.

A large number of men and women alive today will live well into their 80s, and planning for a second spouse might be as realistic as planning a second career, says Dr. Holger Stub, a specialist in the study of aging.

"Like the policeman, mailman, secretary or soldier who returns from one career and takes up another, increased longevity allows men and women virtually to bargain for two marriages, once for the young family years and another for the post-parental period," said Stub.

"Though this sounds amoral and cynical to romantics or the religiously oriented, it is not merely a possibility but is actually taking place," Stub said.

Stub's studies have found that the two categories of divorces that have increased in recent years in the United States involve couples who have young children and older couples who have been married about 20 years.

"Longevity has added as much as a quarter of a century of close living to many marriages," Stub said in a recent interview. "This alone exposes marriage to a phenomenal increase in disruptive influences and culminates in high divorce and separation rates.

"The high level of insight, good fortune and adaptable personality required to have a 50-year marriage are, as yet, not too plentiful among applicants for marriage licenses, so divorce and remarriage may continue to increase, depending on age and rate of marriage," Stub said.

Changing roles for husbands and wives have affected the trend.

"The extended life of males has primarily served to make retirement from the labor market a major event in later life," Stub said.

In contrast to the days when most men "died with their boots on," the retirement years have a different focus now, especially in light of improved retirement income.

"This fact alone gives life a different perspective from that existing in times when the shorter life made planning for the future a frivolous pastime," Stub said.

Women, who increasingly take up careers after their children are grown, have in a sense been given "a second youth" in modern countries, he said.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Coffee flavor saver hint

DEAR HELOISE:

If you only drink a cup or two when you make a pot of coffee, here is a hint that can save you money.

Make a full pot of coffee as usual, pour a cup or whatever you need, then immediately unplug the pot.

Pour the remaining coffee into a heat-resistant glass container, let it cool a bit, then place it in the refrigerator.

When you want another cup, just heat it up in a pan on the stove or zap it in the microwave oven, a cup at a time.

This keeps the coffee's flavor intact and it will stay fresh-tasting for two or three days in the refrigerator. Also cuts down the cost of having to perk coffee so often. — E. Taylor

+ + +

True... To me it's almost as good as fresh-made with no "off" taste. Thanks for a good tip. — Heloise

LETTER OF WARNING

Dear Heloise: I made a beautiful quilt top and marked the quilting lines with a lead pencil. Now I can't get the marks off.

I tried an eraser and cleaning fluid, also soap and water. Nothing helps. I hope you can. — Ruth Byrd

+ + +

I wish I could, dear heart, but as far as I know most pencil marks are impossible to remove no matter how hard you try.

Many others have written that they used pencils to mark fabric when sewing and then were unable to remove the marks afterwards.

Unfortunately, the only suggestion I can make to each of you is that in the future you avoid using a pencil to mark fabric of any kind.

My own sad experience (believe me, I learned the hard way too) has been that the stain is permanent. — Heloise

SLIP-PROOF TRICK

Dear Heloise: I have found that by placing small articles on foam-type fabric softener sheets, they stay put and will not slip around.

As an example, place them under a bowl of flowers on top of the toilet tank lid or under a plate when standing it on edge at the back of a shelf, etc.

A small strip cut from the fabric softener sheet is usually all that is necessary to hold the item in place. — Dorothy Reese

FOR COMPACT TRASH

Dear Heloise: To compact your trash, remove both ends from the cans and step on them to make them flat. Milk cartons, cereal boxes and similar items also take up much less room if you crush them first.

Saves on the cost of buying so many garbage bags. — Mrs. David Fitch

FURNITURE SCRATCHES

Dear Heloise: Use a fine point toothpick to touch up small scratches on furniture with a matching stain.

No drips or messy clean-up. — Mary Lou Watkins

ONE UP ON WEEDS

Dear Heloise: You can stop weeding your flower beds if you will put down newspapers on the ground around your flowers, then cover them with a light layer of soil or rocks to hold the paper in place.

No more weeds. — Mrs. Geannie Conway

COUPON EXCHANGE

Dear Heloise; With the price of groceries so high nowadays, every penny counts and a coupon is as good as money.

But, since I don't use all the coupons I accumulate, I thought perhaps someone else could. Many of the women at work save coupons too, so we decided to bring in our extra ones and put them in a box.

Some of the men at the plant have started exchanging coupons with us. Saves us all a little money. — P.E.

If you've come up with a ring-a-ding money-saving idea, send it to your friend Heloise care of this newspaper. She can't answer your letter personally but she will share the niftiest, thriftiest ideas received with her readers.

Armadillo: Little time left

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Elementary school students trying to get the Legislature to honor the armadillo have a few days to convince a San Antonio senator that the critter is not the "god-awful animal" he says it is.

Earlier this session the House approved a resolution naming the nine-banded armadillo the official state mammal. That was the easy part for the Oak Creek Elementary School students who persuaded Rep. Don Henderson to carry the resolution.

The lobbyists lost a similar battle in 1979 when the measure died in the Senate.

Sen. Jack Ogg, a Democrat from Houston, perceiving possible trouble on his side of the rotunda, tried to appease armadillo-haters. He offered a substitute resolution that would make the armadillo the "recognized mascot" of Texas.

The Ogg version made it to the Senate local calendar on Wednesday.

Right tools help for handicapped

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Thirty cents' worth of material added to a microfilm reader turned an "unemployable" quadriplegic into a taxpayer instead of a welfare case.

The padded post that allows the 20-year-old man to focus the machine was conceived by Richard Juergens who, until 1979, worked with jet fighters instead of wheelchairs.

His quadriplegic client was receiving $208 a month in Social Security payments. He now earns $560 a month at an insurance company.

But there's more than monetary gain.

"When you look into the eyes of someone who hasn't worked all his life and you've put them to work through some engineering modification, there's nothing like that kind of feedback. There's nothing like it.

"You can't put a price on that," Juergens said.

He has looked into 27 pairs of thankful eyes since he began working as a rehabilitation engineer for the Rehabilitation, Education and Science Branch of the Iowa Department of Public Instruction. Only severely handicapped people are eligible for help from the special job-placement team of which Juergens is a member.

Most of the team's clients are people who previously have been told there is no hope of employment for them.

The average cost of the adaptations or contraptions that allowed his severely handicapped clients to work was $30. Their average income is now $600 a month.

His projects range from raising a desk surface to allow a man in a wheelchair to work at it to designing automobile controls for a man with one arm and no legs.

ELK GROVE VILLAGE, Ill. (AP) — You can take your car to a wash-it-yourself place, so why not your dog?

Dave Krejci thought the same thing and made self-service an added attraction at his grooming parlor.

It's turned into a good inflation fighter, he said.

For $6 an hour a customer can register any size dirty dog, comb out its hair on a special table, wash it in a porcelain tub, and then dry it under a high-speed fan.

DEAR ABBY

Her big mouth meets closed ears

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: What's my problem? My husband doesn't want me to talk to him. Gerhard asks me not to talk to him during mealtime because he's "busy" eating. He doesn't want me to talk to him while he's driving because he's "busy" driving. And God forbid I should try to talk to him while he's reading or watching TV!

Abby, this is very hard on me because I come from a large, talkative Jewish family and I love to talk. Gerhard is half-Norwegian and half-German. (Cold and bossy.)

He calls me from work every day to find out what was in the mail. Then I get to talk.

Please put this in your column. Gerhard never misses "Dear Abby," and it's the only way to tell him what I think. — ESTHER IN FLATBUSH

DEAR ESTHER: If this is the only way of telling Gerhard what you think, face it, Esther, your marriage is finished in English, "kaput" in German, "ferdig" in Norwegian, and "in drerd" in Yiddish.

DEAR ABBY: National Secretaries Week appears to be going the route of the office Christmas party and the company picnic for boorish managerial behavior.

A few weeks ago, our audit managers took their two secretaries out for a lunch which lasted four hours, and consisted mostly of drinking, a pastime the managers were obviously more accustomed to than were the two young ladies. Consequently, on their return to the office, the secretaries were bouncing off the walls and vomiting on everything from a typewriter to the car upholstery en route home.

Ours is a Fortune 500 company and there is not much one can do with entrenched management; however, by printing this you may elicit some words of wisdom from your readers as to how young secretaries can best cope with such situations. — DISMAYED MALE IN SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR MALE: Young secretaries can begin by knowing their capacities, and not exceeding them.

DEAR ABBY: May I clear up the answer you gave to A NICE GIRL? She said she had Herpes Simplex and had not slept around and neither did her husband.

I am also a victim of Herpes Simplex 2, and I contracted it without having had sex with anybody but my husband. And my husband has never had sex with anybody but me!

Doctors call Herpes Simplex 2 a venereal disease because it can be spread by sexual intercourse, but apparently that is not the ONLY way a person can get it.

I have been plagued by it for two years, and I still resent my own doctor insinuating that I must have caught it from another man because I got it before my husband.

I may not know much about Herpes, but I DO know what I have and have not done, so how about printing this letter — for me and a lot of other "nice" people out there who are innocent but have Herpes 2? — INNOCENT VICTIM

DEAR INNOCENT: I believe you, and here's your letter. For more information on this subject, please send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: HELP, P.O. Box 100, Palo Alto, Calif. 94302.

Business of selling sex accouterments booms

By PAUL NUSSSBAUM
The Los Angeles Times

SAN DIEGO — In another era, they would have called this a Tupperware party.

But then, they would have sold Tupperware.

A dozen young women, mostly secretaries from a San Diego law firm, are scattered on chairs and cushions throughout the living room of a small bungalow. Red balloons decorate the walls and unobtrusive music plays on the turntable. Sipping punch and munching hors d'oeuvre, these women have gathered to examine and buy sex toys, not kitchen gadgets.

"Emotion Lotion" in a variety of flavors.

Lingerie. Lots of lingerie. Garter belts in passionate colors. And vibrators with sundry attachments. Fur mitts with natural or artificial fur.

The women don't get to check out everything at once. Ginny Dingman, the 50-year-old entrepreneur who runs Playtime Parties, starts them out slowly. She spreads a red velour cloth on the floor and brings out the soaps and lotions amid nervous laughter.

The business of selling sex accouterments is booming around the nation these days, and more and more people who would never walk into a storefront sex shop are meeting with friends and neighbors in middle-class living rooms to examine sex devices, exotic lotions and racy underwear.

They are predominantly women, although there are coed and even a few all-male parties.

In Southern California, the phenomenon is "just mushrooming," says San Diego clinical psychologist Javad Emami. Sexologist Marilyn Lawrence of the Institute for the Advanced Study of Human Sexuality in Los Angeles says that there has been a marked growth in interest in the home parties in the past year.

The professional assessments of the parties, and of sex toys, for that matter, vary. Some psychologists decry them as one more sign of a self-centered society's obsession with sex and pleasure. Advocates, though, praise the toys as fun aids toward sexual exploration and fulfillment and the parties as a comfortable way to examine the wares.

For the women at Ginny Dingman's party, though, few of the philosophical questions are a concern. They're here for a good time, and most of them are getting what they came for.

Although the women who attend the parties seem unabashed by what they find, others contend that they wouldn't be caught dead at such an affair.

Patricia Fordem, a member of the conservative, San Diego-based Concerned Women for America, says, "I think it's sick. It is sad that a society would allow that kind of thing.

"...Something like that breaks down the family unity; it doesn't draw a family together on uplifting principles. Those people have to be looking for kicks outside their marriages — they can't be very happy with their partners."

"It's pornograhy, that's all you can call it," Fordem said. "I'm especially worried about the young people — if this becomes prevalent, they may start thinking it's OK."

Irene, the hostess for the party, snaps flash pictures of Dingman holding panties that don't have bottoms, of fellow partners fondling feathers and plumes.

A young mother breast-feeds her baby quietly against one wall while her friends examine $17 Velcro-snapped "bonds of love" and a $12 set of body paints.

"How am I going to explain to Mike that I got these at a crystal party?" moans one partygoer. "That's where I told him I was going."

For hostesses lik Irene, crystal parties and sex-toy parties have a lot in common. The hostess gets a cut of the night's profis and "premiums" for having the party. For this party, the premiums are books or cassette tapes, readings on the joys of sex and womanhood.

For the sellers like Ginny Dingman, the biggest problem now seems to be keeping control of the business. Dingman, who just started her Playtime Parties a few months ago, finds herself scheduling four and five parties a week. Her dilemma, she says, is whether to continue to run a one-woman show or to set up franchises.

In the Los Angeles area, too, business is booming. One of the leading manufacturers of sex toys, United Sales, now produces $100 kits for home parties with a starter set of everything you need to host. United Sales president Fred Malorrus, whose company sells to a multitude of mail-order firms, figures that at least 500 Los Angeles-area individuals have held home parties in the past few months.

"I think that eventually this should help our business at least 20 percent," Malorrus says of home parties. "The average person won't walk into an adult bookstore, and he's not on the mailing list of most off these places. Their first exposure is at one of these home parties. This way they get a chance to look at the stuff with their next-door neighbor. That way, they get over the shock and the ha-ha-ha-ho-ho-ho business."

And there is a lot of the ha-ha-ha-ho-ho-ho business linked with the selling of sex toys.

"They're just like a bunch of kids at Christmas," says Dingman, who clearly enjoys her role as Santa, but she also acknowledges the need for privacy, even among friends. The party-goers order the toys they want from order blanks passed out at the start of the festivities, and Dingman fills the requests individually in another room. The women take their new wares home in plain brown paper bags. Some leave empty-handed; others spend as much as $30 or $40 for their new pleasures.

Explaining the growth in interest in sex toys and home parties "would be like explaining the Hula Hoop," says Dr. Rex Beaber of the Family Health Center at the University of California Los Angeles. "Somebody gets an idea, and people come and enjoy themselves."

"Of course, society always has to be psychologically prepared for it, and Southern California is psychologically prepared for anything. I'm convinced that if somebody advocated removing a finger as a social symbol, you could get a significant number of people in Southern California to cut off a finger."

But this phenomenon of sex toy parties seems to be one modern fad that didn't start in California.

Well-organized Just for Play, a New York-based company, reportedly has nearly 1,000 sales representatives conducting parties all over the East Coast. United Sales in Los Angeles gets single orders of as much as $25,000 from Just for Play.

"It's not as highly organized here (in Southern California) as it is back East," says United's Malorrus. "It seems like it started in New York — that seems to be where it's coming from."

Dingman, married for 32 years and the mother of four children, says she got involved with sex toys in her own search for personal pleasure.

"We're trying to overcome the teachings of centuries," she says of her efforts to bring sex toys to the masses. "I just give them a little nudge of bravery...I just give them permission to be themselves."

To Dingman and some psychologists, sex toys are the best thing to come along since the Garden of Eden, but other medical professionals are less enthusiastic.

"It is another indication of our emerging narcissism," says San Diego clinical psychologist Emami, president of the San Diego Psychological Law Society and past president of the San Diego Academy of Psychologists. "I feel it really indicates the insecurity of the populace.

"It tends to take away the focus from more important issues — like how do you really learn to relate without games. It puts the focus on sensation and sensationalism."

Former official sentenced, fined

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Although she claimed she acted as any distressed mother would, former state Assistant Commissioner of Agriculture Frances Pecora has been sentenced to two years in prison and fined $10,000 for trying to bribe a sheriff to get her son off drug charges.

Her son, Nofio Pecora, 30, of New Orleans, and Jimmy Burrescia, 54, of Independence, La., drew the same sentences and $5,000 fines.

At the trial, Mrs. Pecora said she was trapped into a $100,000 bribe by Tangipahoa Parish Sheriff Edward Layrisson.

Starting young

MUSKOGEE, Okla. (AP) — Ray D. Ramsay, 44, was born for his job. The engineering-plastics marketing manager claims to have 44 years seniority at Phillips, although he officially started working there only in 1967.

"I was born in the back room of a Phillips 66 service station 20 miles from here in Checotah. My dad, Russell, was a jobber who ran the station," he said.

Auto insurance

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — One of the newest fringe benefits for employees is group auto insurance. The coverage developed by Provident Life, designed to save employees money, cannot be canceled.

Tampa Federal Savings and Loan Association, for example, pays 50 percent of the cost of its employees' auto-insurance premium.

Robber killed

PEARLAND, Texas (AP) — A man ordered to freeze while robbing a savings and loan office replied, "Freeze, hell," and turned on a policeman, who shot him to death, officials said.

Pearland Police Chief Glenn Stanford said Sammy Lee Salyers, 36, had entered the branch office of Delta Savings in Friendswood Thursday and said he was going to rob it.

Officer Thad Lenderman emerged, said he was a policeman and ordered Salyers to freeze, Stanford said.

He said Salyers turned on Lenderman with a .38-caliber revolver in his hand, saying, "Freeze, hell."

Lenderman shot Salyers five times.

Hair, clothing changes 'freaked Garwood out'

CHICAGO (AP) — Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood, the convicted collaborator, says changes in young women's hair and clothing styles were "one of the first things that freaked me out" when he returned to the United States after 14 years in Vietnam.

"It shocked me. ... Everything seemed so alien to me: the dress, the speech — the frankness of speech," Garwood said in an interview in the July issue of Playboy magazine.

Garwood was convicted by court martial of collaboration with the enemy during the Vietnam War, and he recently was cleared of charges that he attempted to rape a 7-year-old girl.

Garwood, who didn't testify in his court-martial, said that when he returned to America, "one of the first things that freaked me out, the first thing I focused on, was the girls.

"Their hair, you know, it wasn't taken care of like it was way back then. I mean, it looks like somebody stuck their finger in a light socket. And all the girls are in pants. There aren't any dresses.

"At first it was a real hassle. You really had to look very close to distinguish between a man and a woman."

After Garwood was brought back to the United States in 1979 he was accused of collaboration and tried at Camp Lejeune in North Carolina. His sentence was dishonorable discharge and forfeiture of pay and allowances from the time of conviction. The conviction is on appeal.

Garwood is living in Jacksonville, N.C. and is receiving psychiatric treatment in Charlottesville, Va., where his lawyer lives.

"I find it very hard to adapt and communicate with the world now ... I don't have a life now, really," he said.

Garwood, 19 when he disappeared in 1965, said he was captured by Viet Cong. The Marine Corps said he was absent without leave.

He denied interrogating U.S. prisoners of war, saying he "did some interpreting. ... Some people blame me because I learned the language ... You had to know the ... language to survive. ... Why is that such a crime?"

He said he was moved from camp to camp, where he lived apart from other Americans, and finally was sent near Hanoi, where he agreed to be a courier for his guards.

He said he went to hotels reserved for foreigners to buy liquor, cigarettes and candy for sale on the black market. In return, he could buy cigarettes and beer.

During one of these visits, he said he slipped a note announcing his presence in Vietnam to a Finnish banker who later informed American officials, leading to his return home.

"The only thing I really regret is that I might have thought about the other person more," Garwood said. "I wasn't ready to lay myself on the line — not to the extent where I thought I would be killed. ... I was in a better position than the other POWs, so I might have helped.

"When I think back on it," said Garwood, "this business about me deserting, or crossing over — it was a mixture of fear, revenge, survival. ... I was just trying to survive."

One accusation was that Garwood physically abused a fellow prisoner.

He denied it and explained that POW Russ Grissett "was taking the brunt of a beating by the communists for killing a cat, the camp cat," which was eaten.

"... Russ had been singled out to take the brunt of the punishment in which — well, two weeks later, he died from it. But, anyway, when I saw this ... I just went crazy when I saw Russ getting beaten, and I rushed into the compound and there was nothing I could do.

"Harker (David Harker, another POW) was standing in the doorway of one of the hootches. I brushed him aside with the back of my hand, which he said amounted to a slap, to his ribcage or his stomach.

Women terrorists shoot school principal

ROME (AP) — Three young women and a man raided a Catholic school in Rome today and shot the principal in the legs, police reported.

Prof. Giuseppe Magagna of the Salesian institute "Teresa Gerini" was taken a nearby hospital with multiple gunshot wounds, police said.

Shouting "we are from the Red Brigades," the terrorists kicked open the front door of the Teresa Gerini Salesian Institute on Via Tiburtina shortly after 8 a.m., witnesses told police.

The quartet gagged and tied the principal, Giuseppe Magagna, dragged him to another room and shot him. The attackers fled in a dark blue Fiat 128, police sources said.

There was no immediate explanation of the motive for the attack. The Red Brigades is Italy's most feared urban guerrilla gang. It kidnapped and murdered former Premier Aldo Moro in 1978.

Carpenter arraigned in Scaggs murder

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (AP) — Convicted rapist David J. Carpenter, accused of slaying two women whose bodies were found in remote areas near hiking trails, plans to plead innocent to all charges, his lawyer says.

Attorney Larry Biggam made that statement Thursday outside Santa Cruz Muncipal Court after a court session at which the prosecutor alleged that Carpenter raped a young coworker before shooting her to death.

The 51-year-old San Francisco man had refused to enter a plea before Municipal Judge William Kelsay to charges that he murdered Heather Scaggs, 20. Biggam said his client will enter a plea on June 8 — the same day he is scheduled to enter a plea to charges that he shot and killed Ellen Hansen, 20, and wounded her companion, Stephen Haertle, 20.

Services Offered

Protective Services to Abused and Neglected Children: Protective Services to Children, Permanent Planning Services, Protective Community Resources, and Services for Unmarried or School-age Parents.

Family Self-support: Self-support/Self-sufficiency, Day Care for Children, Family Planning, and Services to Victims of Family Violence.

Community Care for Aged and Disabled: Family Care Services, Day Activity and Health Services, Congregate and Home-delivered Meals, Alternate Living Plan Services, and Adult Protective Services.

Some services for aged and disabled adults will be provided to persons whose income is up to 58% of the state median income. Income levels are described in the proposed plan.

Protective services and information referral will be provided regardless of a person's income level.

Standards for Facilities Serving SSI Recipients

The proposed plan includes information about standards for residential facilities that serve Supplemental Security Income recipients, unless the facility is certified for Medicare or Medicaid. Names and addresses of the standard-setting agencies that can furnish information about standards, their enforcement, waivers, and the identity of deficient facilities are also included.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, May 30, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Benny Goodman—famous clarinetist, jazz musician and big band leader—shares your birthday today. Sharing becomes more important than ever where business and personal relationships are concerned. Pulling your own weight is the key to greater financial success. Someone who disappeared from your life for a while may now reappear, hoping to play a significant role in your future. Keep an open mind. Love, marriage enjoy happier times. Your wit and spontaneity win you many friends and supporters. Use your leadership skills to bring about important changes and improvements in the community. Your love-of-life attitude is contagious now.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Mate will be supportive of your plans, especially if you have been feeling under the weather recently. Romance moves in a new direction. Add sparkle to your social life.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): If taking a trip today, try to get an early start. Shoppers can find great bargains if they will look around. Romance influences several important decisions you make.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Agreements made now will draw family members closer together. Go easy when spending money. A fun evening need not be expensive. Someone needs an answer from you right away.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Getting outdoors this weekend will give you a real lift. If you have not exercised in a while, be careful not to overdo it. A visit with an old friend proves rewarding.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A stranger could bring additional excitement to the romantic scene. Mystery will be solved if you are patient. Your family may make demands on you now. Do what you can to help.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The idea of a summer picnic holds great appeal this weekend. Make it an old-fashioned affair. Include family members of all ages. A personal relationship makes big strides forward.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Get the most from your weekend. Choose companions who share your interests and enthusiasms. Complete household chores early in the day so you will not have to hurry home later on.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A dynamic newcomer shows up in your social circle. Go slow or you could miss a golden opportunity. Romance is in the air. Have fun, but keep expenses within reasonable limits.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Do-it-yourself books can be inspirational now. A new coat of paint does wonders for an apartment. Make a shopping list to save time, energy when doing errands.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Handicrafts can be a good hobby for an older person who lives alone. To become acquainted with new neighbors, hold an "open house" party or join a community group. Lend a helping hand!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A community event or church affair holds special appeal today. Curb a tendency to spend more than you can afford. Letter brings good news. Plan to take a short trip!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Social affair provides you with an opportunity to meet interesting new people. Be willing to go out of your way to help a friend or neighbor. Loved one looks to you for guidance.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	2 ♠	2 ♡	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♠.

Handling trumps is a tricky business. Sometimes you draw them as soon as possible to prevent the defenders from scoring a ruff. At other times, you have more important work to do.

South's hand was worth more than the 10 points it counted in high cards, because the king of clubs was well positioned in view of East's overcall. So when his partner raised hearts, South felt justified in continuing on to game.

Had East, after winning the opening lead with the ace of clubs, routinely continued a club, declarer would have had an easy passage. He would have won the king, ruffed a club and forced out the ace of trumps. After clearing trumps, declarer would be able to establish spades at his leisure.

Unfortunately for declarer, East made an inspired shift to a diamond at trick two. When the jack of diamonds was headed by the queen and ace South had to reassess the situation. He was no longer in position to draw trumps immediately. If he led a heart, the defender who won the ace would continue diamonds, and the fate of the contract would then hinge on the spade finesse.

To give himself an additional chance for the contract, declarer came to his hand with the king of clubs and led a spade to the jack. East won the king and led another diamond. Declarer won the king and now he had to rely on a 3-3 spade division. When both defenders followed to the ace and queen of spades, declarer was able to get rid of his diamond loser, and the major hurdle had been safely negotiated.

All that remained was to handle the rest of the play with a modicum of care. Declarer led a low trump from the table and, when East played low, the ten won. A club was ruffed with the king of trumps and the last trump was led from dummy. East won the ace and played another club, but declarer carefully ruffed high, drew the last trump and the contract was home.

Notice that drawing trumps was the last ace in declarer's play of the hand, not the first.

How do you choose the best opening lead? Charles Goren has the answer. For a copy of "Winning Opening Leads," send $1.85 to "Goren-Leads," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make checks payable to Newspaperbooks.

Negotiators announce tentative coal contract

By G.G. LaBELLE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Representatives of striking miners and the soft coal industry announced tentative agreement on a new contract early today. If approved by the rank and file, the pact will end a walkout that lasted more than two months.

The announcement was made at 12:55 a.m. EST by United Mine Workers President Sam Church. "We have a contract," he said, ending a day of marathon meetings that that had begun at 9:30 a.m. Thursday.

Bobby R. Brown, chief negotiator for the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, emerged from the negotiating room in a downtown hotel moments later and said: "We have addressed most of the issues that were outstanding and we believe it's a good contract for the union."

Neither side would discuss changes made in the tentative pact since an earlier proposal was turned down overwhelmingly by UMW members more than two months ago.

Was the new contract a better one, Church was asked. "It's better," he replied.

Asked whether the union had won agreement on the crucial point that the industry pay a royalty on non-union coal it purchases, Church said, "That's no problem."

The UMW president said he would present the new proposal today — on the 64th day of the strike — to the 39-member union bargaining council that must approve the pact before it can be sent to minefield locals for approval of the members.

The council approved the earlier contract by a 21-14 margin only to see it rejected by rank-and-file miners by a margin of better than 2-to-1.

Ratification of the new three-year accord by some 160,000 miners in Appalachian and midwestern coalfields would take about 10 days under rules laid out in the union's constitution.

Today's announcement came two days after the negotiators reached agreement on the major sticking point — the question of unionized coal companies subcontracting work to outside, nonunion personnel.

As talks ended Wednesday, an effusive Church told reporters: "We made a lot of progress. We've still got some unresolved problems but I'm optimistic. I feel much better than I have in quite some time."

Brown, reserved by nature and reticent with reporters throughout the talks, said only: "We're making progress. I'm not pessimistic."

Apparently what tied up the talks for a series of three meetings that lasted almost 10 hours Thursday were questions of money.

The miners' wages were not at issue — union and management had agreed earlier on a $3.30 hourly raise that would give top-scale miners $14 an hour. But there were disagreements over several points that could cost the coal companies millions of dollars.

Sources who asked not to be identified by name indicated that the last obstacle was whether a new $100-a-month pension already agreed to for widows of miners who retired prior to 1976 should be reduced in view of the industry's agreement to restore the royalty clause.

MC now accepting nursing students

The college has offered vocational nursing instruction in cooperation with Midland Memorial Hospital for the past ten years. The program is directed by Pat Myers and Virginia Land, both registered nurses and members of the MC faculty.

The course includes lectures, audio-visual presentations, demonstrations of procedures and practical training. Pre-clinical training in the classroom is supplemented with 35 weeks of hospital training, during which students rotate through various departments. They observe medical procedures and practices under the supervision of registered nurses, physicians, surgeons and para-professional personnel.

Interview and testing of applicants for the program will be held at the college June 1 through Aug. 14. The hours for testing are 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays. Classes are limited to 25 students and scholarship funds are available to applicants who are interested in the course. Interviews will be held in room 124 of the MC Occupational and Technical Building.

Mrs. Myers stressed that jobs for LVNs are definitely available in Midland and the surrounding area. "One look at the 'help-wanted' columns in the newspapers should convince anyone that the job market is wide-open," she said. "A student who completes the course at Midland College with an average of 80 is qualified to take the State Board Examination which leads to LVN Certification."

While there is no age limit for applicants, Mrs. Myers pointed out that students should have a high school diploma or a GED certificate.

Those interested in entering the up-coming program may obtain more information by calling Mrs. Myers at 684-7851, ext. 185.

Area students awarded scholarships from MC

Connie Francis Crum of Pecos and William G. Walters III of Merkel have been awarded academic scholarships to Midland College for the 1981-82 year. The scholarship covers books, tuition and fees, and may be renewed for a second year.

Miss Crum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Crum of Verhalen, graduated with a 92.79 grade average. She has been named to Who's Who in Biology and Speech as well as America's Outstanding Names and Faces. She is a member of Future Teachers of America, National Forensic League, Mu Alpha Theta, Spanish Club, Tri-K Club, Gifted and Talented Club and the president of the Vocational Office Education Club.

She has won local, state and national awards in VOE extemporaneous speaking, and district and regional honors in University Interscholastic League persuasive speaking and one-act play competition.

Walters, son of Mr. and Mrs. William G. Walters II, is a member of the 1981 graduating class of Merkel High School. He has a 94.25 grade average.

He is a member of the National Honor Society and served as the president for both his senior class and the Bookmarker Club. He also was a three-year football letterman, won a UIL science contest award and one-act play award and was named to Who's Who Among American High School Students.

Ruling called unrealistic

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A federal judge says an appeals court was unrealistic in its demand that he formulate a comprehensive desegregation plan for Beaumont's South Park Independent School District by the fall.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Thursday that U.S. District Judge Joe Fisher was too idealistic in dismissing complaints of school segregation in the district and ordered a full plan implemented at the start of school in September and said no extensions would be permitted.

"I think it's very unrealistic to think a desegregation plan can be formulated that quickly," Fisher said Thursday night.

Fisher had dismissed Justice Department complaints earlier that some schools remained racially segregated 10 years after it was ordered to redraw school district lines to achieve integration in all grades.

Judge issues no-strike order

Baseball strike deadline delayed

NEW YORK (AP) — It could be for just a week, but America today still had major league baseball to cheer, boo and argue over, thanks to a last-minute deal and a federal judge who quotes Abbott and Costello.

The threat of the sport's third strike in nine years evaporated for now when representatives of the players and the club owners agreed to extend the deadline beyond today when the players were to strike over the free-agent compensation issue.

While not issuing a no-strike order, U.S. District Judge Henry Werker allowed the delay to take effect, and set a hearing for next Wednesday in Rochester, N.Y., on a National Labor Relations Board request for a preliminary injunction.

AT A meeting of its executive board Thursday night, the Major League Players Association made it official: No strike, at least until Werker rules on the NLRB's injunction request.

"There will be no strike until we see what the court does," said Baltimore Orioles third baseman Doug DeCinces, the American League player representative. "Once they rule, we'll see if the outcome is positive or negative for the association.

"If it's positive, it looks like we won't have a strike. If it's negative, we could go out. And if there's no movement, there will be a strike."

Philadelphia Phillies catcher Bob Boone, the National League player rep, said there was "no way of telling" if the entire season would be played.

"There are too many variables involved," Boone said. "I would hope this issue can be bargained out and negotiated fairly. But now there's hope that we can keep baseball in front of the country."

AVOIDANCE OF a strike had nothing to do with progress at the bargaining table. The talks appeared deadlocked this week, and Thursday's scheduled session was canceled at the insistence of both sides, according to federal mediator Kenneth Moffett.

Moffett said he would contact both the Players Association and the Player Relations Committee, the owners' bargaining arm, today, but doubted that he could interest them in resuming negotiations until Werker has ruled.

The injunction request before Werker would rescind the free agent compensation plan the owners unilaterally implemented Feb. 20.

Similar to the collective bargaining agreement which narrowly avoided a strike last season, the NLRB proposal would have the two sides again try to reach a compensation compromise. If they again failed to do so, the owners could place their plan into effect between Feb. 15 and 20, 1982; the players would then have until June 1, 1982, to strike.

THEY COULD also strike within 24 to 48 hours after Werker issued his ruling on the injunction request. With the hearing to begin Wednesday, then, the earliest a strike could come would be next Friday. But Werker told the two sides that his consideration of the case could be delayed by other hearings and trials as part of his two-week assignment in Rochester.

The players favor the NLRB proposal. While it does not give them anything new, it would preserve the compensation system which existed since the reserve clause was struck down in 1976, so that a team losing a free agent receives only an amateur draft choice in return from the signing team.

"There's nothing concrete gained," said DeCinces, "but we maintain the status quo — and that's what we're asking."

THE PLAN implemented by the owners last February would award major league players to teams losing "premium" free agents — those meeting certain statistical standards and picked by at least eight teams in the re-entry draft.

That plan, the players argue, would force them to give up freedom of movement they have won in previous court cases and negotiations.

The injunction request on free agent compensation is only part of the NLRB's action resulting from the Players Association charge of bad-faith bargaining by the owners.

A June 15 hearing is set here before an administrative law judge on a complaint by William Lubbers, the NLRB's general counsel, that the owners have engaged in unfair labor practices by keeping their clubs' financial records from the players.

LUBBERS ON Tuesday agreed with the players that they needed the information to determine the financial impact of free agency on baseball.

Thursday's agreement to postpone the strike followed 7½ hours of closed-door discussions involving Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players Association; Ray Grebey, director of the Player Relations Committee, and Daniel Silverman, the NLRB's New York regional director.

In the federal courthouse across Foley Square from the NLRB's offices, Werker opened the court session by alluding to a classic comedy routine about baseball.

"Use Abbott and Costello," he said. "Who's on first?"

Silverman explained the situation, and Werker told of his Rochester assignment. The judge then adjourned to his chambers with Donald Fehr, general counsel to the Players Association, and Louis Hoynes, the National League's attorney.

WHEN THEY returned to the courtroom, Hoynes asked permission to read into the court records the agreement to postpone the strike.

"The parties to the agreement have asked that the strike be extended until 48 hours following a court ruling," Hoynes said.

Fregosi out; Mauch in as California manager

ANAHEIM, calif. (AP) — The California Angels announced Thursday the firing of Manager Jim fregosi and said that Gene Mauch, former field boss of the Philadelphia Phillies and Minnesota Twins, would replace him.

Mauch had joined the Angels' as director of player personnel last winter. He had managed the Twins until resigning Aug. 24, 1980.

FREGOSI, AN original member of the 1961 expansion Angels, was hired as manager in June 1978. He led the team to the American League West championship in 1979. California lost to the Baltimore Orioles in the league playoffs.

But the Angels have fared poorly since, finishing with a 65-95 record and in sixth place in the AL West last season. This season, they are 22-25 and in fourth place, seven games behind first-place Oakland.

MAUCH, WHO ranks 10th on the all-time managerial list in point of service — he managed a total of 21 years — and in victories (1,524). But he never has led a team to a pennant or a division championship. He also is ninth in games managed with 3,232, beginning in 1960 with the Phillies. He then moved to Montreal in 1969 and took over the Twins in 1976.

Mauch had spent the past 37 seasons in uniform as either a player — he was with six major league clubs from 1944 through 1957 — coach or manager. He joined the Angels' front office in February.

WHEN HE resigned as Twins' manager, Mauch said he felt the players no longer could respond to him. Now he is getting a chance to motivate and turn around the Angels.

BYU takes lead in golf

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Richard Zokol of Brigham Young made five straight birdies en route to a 5-under par 66 and teammate Rick Fehr had a 69 as the Cougars took the team lead in the 84th NCAA golf championships.

BYU, the NCAA runnerup last year, had a 36-hole total of 574 on Thursday. Texas A&M was second at 579 midway through the tournament, and Houston and Oral Roberts were at 580.

Rick Dalpos of Purdue moved into the individual lead by posting his second consecutive 69, a round including seven birdies, three bogeys and one double bogey. His total of 138 left him one stroke ahead of defending champion Jay Don Blake of Utah State, who also had a 69 Thursday.

Dalpos had only three birdies in the first round.

Fehr was at 141, tied for third with Stuart Smith of Tennessee and Joe Rassett of Oral Roberts. Rassett was the first-round leader with a 66, but opened play Thursday with a double bogey and a bogey and took a 75.

Caps' two-run rally in 13th pins loss on Cubs

SHREVEPORT — Shreveport's Captians pushed across two runs in the bottom of the 13th inning off little used reliever Phil Natsu to send the Midland Cubs reeling to their sixth defeat in seven outings on their current road trip. Overall, the Cubs have lost 21 of 24 on the road this season.

With one out in the 13th, Dan Gladden reach first when shortstop Dave Owens bobbled his grounder. Jim Wojick followed with a single and both runners advanced on a fielder's choice. Captain manager Jack Mull went to his bench as he called on Jim Rothford to pinch hit.

Rothford went to 2-1 before ripping Nastsu for a two-run double off the right-center field wall to chase home the winning runs.

The Cubs had taken a 3-2 lead in the top of the inning. Randy LaVigne had singled to open the inning, moved to second on a fielder's choice. J.W. Mitchell's single to left chased home the go ahead run.

Midland had tied the score in the eighth inning when left-handed hitting Mel Hall poled his fifth home run of the season over the left field fence. Hall's blow came off Cap starter Alan Fowlkes.

Shreveport drew first blood in the bottom of the third. Tom O'Malley's infield out scored Doran Perdue with the first run of the contest. Perdue had opened with a single, advanced to second on a sacrifice and went to third on a fielder's choice.

The Cubs bounced back to knot the socre at 1-1 with a run in the top of the fourth.

John Rabb broke the tie in the home half of the fourth when he belted a drive far over the left field fence.

Shreveport wasted an excellent opportunity in seventh inning to break the game open. Greg Baker lead off with single but trapped between first and second on a heads up play by the Cubs for the first out. The play prevented the Caps from scoring a run as Perdue and Dan Gladden followed with singles and Jim Wojick walked to load the bases.

With one out, Steve Milner came on in relief to face O'Malley. O'Malley drilled a line drive back to the mound that Miler speared and flipped to first for a double play.

Unser pleads for victory

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Bobby Unser wants the victory he celebrated in the 1981 Indianapolis 500 victory back and he wants a public hearing on the appeal of the historic ruling that declared Mario Andretti as the winner.

"Give me my race back, don't take my victory away," pleaded Unser before the filing Thursday of a formal appeal of the ruling that penalized him one lap for passing other cars during a yellow caution light was filed.

"I'm going to test the car Friday and Saturday for my next race," Unser said. "And I'll just put this whole thing out of my mind and concentrate on racing."

Little Bowie Kuhn can do to avert baseball strike threat

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

While the dreaded time bomb of which he warned ticks away, baseball's Commissioner Bowie Kuhn sits, waits and hopes in his executive offices in mid-Manhattan.

There is little he can do to disarm the fuse that could explode into a strike by the players and shut down baseball.

As lord of baseball, the commissioner has been equipped with considerable clout — awarded originally by the owners and upheld repeatedly in the courts — but in labor strife he is fangless.

So he must resign himself to a standoff role, working behind the scenes in an advisory capacity with the club owners but having little or no influence over the players.

THE OLD restrictive reserve clause is dead. Labor laws have given players new independence. The players, the working men in the game's new gilded age, have ears only for their union boss, Marvin Miller, a tough, astute negotiator.

There are some people long in the tooth who, remembering pictures of a wrinkled old judge named Kenesaw Mountain Landis leaning over the dugouts with his stern mein and fedora hat, many think all the commissioner has to do is snap his fingers and bark:

"Play ball!"

That may have been the way it was back in baseball's dark ages — which covers everything from Abner Doubleday to the advent of free agency in 1976 — but not any more.

AS THE owners, players and lawyers wrangle over the small print that could affect the future of the game, you still hear kibitzers saying: "This is ridiculous — shutting down baseball. Why doesn't the commissioner do something?"

Thus he is reluctant to thrust himself onto the scene. In recent days he has avoided press conferences and interviews. He is keeping abreast of the negotiations and certainly maintaining contact with club executives and Ray Grebey, the owners' negotiator.

His role is advisory. He can counsel the owners. He is regarded as an adversary by Miller and the players because it is the owners who select him and pay his salary, although Kuhn likes to regard himself as the "commissioner of all baseball — particularly the fans."

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn

HE HAS said publicly that he supports the owners' position in the current standoff on compensation, which basically would require surrender of a major league player in return for the loss of a quality player to another club in the free agent re-entry draft.

Players are opposed to this, insisting it would destroy the bargaining power of the run-of-the-mill performer. In the old agreement, only an amateur draft choice was used for compensation.

A couple of years ago, Kuhn warned that free agency and its escalating salaries were a "ticking time bomb." He urged quick remedial and unselfish action for both owners and players.

The commissioner is an imposing figure — 6 feet, 6 inches tall, ramrod straight, lean and athletic. A lawyer by profession, he is subject to quiet decorum and measured moves that have provoked criticism from those preferring a more aggressive and flamboyant administrator.

YET KUHN, with three years to go on a seven-year renewed contract, has exhibited toughness on repeated occasions and has treated owners and players with equanimity in his own version of baseball law.

Jerold C. Hoffberger, when he was president of the Orioles, led a "Dump Bowie" movement in 1975. It never jelled. Bowie survived.

Kuhn suspended such influential owners as George Steinbrenner and Ted Turner.

After getting off to a great start, Los Angeles Dodger rookie piching sensation Fernando Valenzuela has ran into rocky going in his last couple of outings. Thursday night the Atlanta Braves handed him his second straight loss.

First sports strike was a short one

By SCOTT OSTLER
(c) 1981, The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — The football players were on strike. They waited under a shade tree while their designated negotiator negotiated.

It didn't take long. The strike of 1951, which possibly qualifies as the first strike in sports history, was a short one.

"You might say the strike was settled in 15 minutes," said Gus Knickrehm, one of the strikers. Gus now runs a sporting good store in Lompoc, up the coast from Santa Barbara, Calif.

Gus and the other strikers were rookies who were trying out for the Chicago Cardinals football team. They were asking for an increase in their $6.10 per diem, and for a few bucks to get their uniforms laundered. If their demands were not met, they would sit out an exhibition game.

The Cardinals' veterans were behind the rookies. Way behind. The strike was the veterans' diea, but in those days, if there was dirty work to do it was done by rookies.

"About 10 of us decided, 'OK, we would do it,'" Gus said. "So we sent one of the rookis, a guy named Tom Beenaman. He was our spokesman and he went and told (Coach Curley) Lambeau our situation: that if we didn't get some spending money, we didn't think we were gonna suit up."

And they waited under a tree.

ATHLETES ARE better negotiators now than they were 30 years ago. Baseball players, for instance, who are threatening to strike Friday have a powerful union. They do not, however, get much sympathy from the fans.

Fans in general seem of the opinion that players are overpaid, underworked, spoiled and greedy. These feelings will be reinforced by stories about players driving to picket lines in Mercedeses and Cadillacs.

The owners insist that their demand is insignificant and would affect only a few players. If that were the case, why would they be willing to risk wiping out baseball, now at its peak of popularity, over this insignificant issue?

The owners obviously don't believe the issue is insignificant, and neither do the players. They see this compensation as the opening move in a campaign to destroy the free-agent system.

It's difficult to sympathize with the owners. They drive big cars, too. And their problems, as sportswriter Leonard Koppet pointed out recently, are self-inflicted.

"The position taken by baseball's club owners on compensation," Koppet wrote recently, "is illogical, dishonest, self-defeating, unachievable and unnecessary. It is also unwise, untimely and unrealistic."

IT WON'T be passing the hat for the players if they go on strike. I think professional athletes in general are a little spoiled, and could probably benefit from a dose of reality. Let them worry about making the car payment next month like I do.

But I'm tired of hearing fans talk about how ballplayers aren't worth $162,000 or $1 million or $2 million. Baseball players, like truck drivers, or mud wrestlers or Eric Estrada, are worth whatever they can legitimately squeeze out of whoever is running the show. If all salary levels were determined by logic or by the job's relative significance to society, or by degree of difficulty, a lot of us would face pay cuts. Coal miners would drive Caddies.

And sports owners would hitchhike. As Bouton commented, "The media provides free advertising, the taxpayers provide the stadiums. The owners didn't invent anything, or make any products. Their only asset is their claim to own the players, who don't want to be owned.

"BASEBALL could be run by a good travel agent, and a central office to divide up the players. If they got rid of the owners tomorrow, someone would step in with a way to divide the talent and sell a package to TV. It's an agent function.

"Owners have a monopoly. They would like to strengthen it by getting the players to agree to a system that would hold down the salaries. The players, being normal human beings, aren't willing to go along with that system."

Rookie finds out life isn't all roses

By The Associated Press

After a fabulous start, Fernando Valenzuela of the Los Angeles Dodgers is starting to struggle a bit.

Atlanta's Gaylord Perry knows something about struggling.

"It took a few games to get that one," said Perry after recording his 293rd career victory Thursday night with a 9-4 decision over the Dodgers and their news-making rookie pitcher.

The 42-year-old Perry had misfired on three previous starts for victory No. 293 and currently has a 4-3 record.

Valenzuela lasted only 32-3 innings and was shelled in the midst of a seven-run rally in the Braves' fourth.

Reds 7, Giants 4

San Francisco reliever Gary Lavelle's wild pickoff throw let in the tying run and touched off a five-run eighth-inning rally that lifted Cincinnati over the Giants.

Pirates 9, Cubs 4

Dale Berra's three-run double capped a five-run fifth inning and powered Pittsurgh past Chicago. The triumph was the third straight for the Pirates after dropping the opener of the series, while the woeful Cubs went down to their 31st loss in 40 decisions.

Eddie Solomon, 3-3, was the winning pitcher while Bill Caudill, 1-4, took the loss.

Brewers 7, Tigers 1

Roy Howell hit a grand slam homer in the fourth inning and Ted Simmons added a two-run shot in the eighth, leading Milwaukee over Detroit. Mike Caldwell, 5-4, and Rollie Fingers combined on an eight-hitter, with Fingers picking up his ninth save.

Rangers 6, Twins 2

Leon Roberts smashed a three-run homer in the bottom of the eighth inning to cap a four-run Texas rally that broke a 2-2 tie and gave the Rangers their victory over Minnesota.

Pearce named to All-State team

Brad Pearce, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Pearce of Midland, has been named to the Texas All-State Junior Skeet Team.

Brad will be honored in a special ceremony during the annual Texas State Skeet Championships, June 18-21, at the WSSA's National Gun Club in San Antonio.

Shooters won berths on the various All-State teams on the basis of all-around averages broken during the 1980 skeet season.

Michael safe as NY mentor; for the moment

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner, who hinted he might fire Manager Gene Michael because the team was falling too far behind the Baltimore Orioles, says he will make some coaching and roster changes instead.

Steinbrenner said Thursday night that Stan Williams would be shifted to advance scout, and Clyde King would replace Williams as pitching coach. King had been a special scout for the Yankees and helping out with the pitchers, especially rookie Gene Nelson.

The roster move involves outfielder Bobby Brown, who wa. recalled from Columbus of the International League and was expected to be activated today, when a decision will be made on who Brown will replace on the roster.

Regarding Michael's status, Steinbrenner said by telephone from Florida, "There will be no change. Gene Michael is continuing as manager of the Yankees. It would be unfair to make any change at this time because Gene has been playing with an injured deck."

The owner said Michael has "had a lot of tough luck on his decisions."

The Yankees, in fifth place in the American League East, 4½ games behind the Orioles, survived on their pitching early in the season, but injuries to Tommy John, Ron Guidry and Rich Gossage have led to a poor streak on the mound in recent weeks.

After New York lost its fourth straight game on Wednesday night, Steinbrenner said things could not continue in that manner and suggested he would even replace Michael to turn the season around.

Horns select new running back coach

Tommy Reaux, head coach at Houston Smiley the past three years, joined the University of Texas football coaching staff Thursday, Coach Fred Akers said.

Reaux, 31, will coach the running backs, Akers said.

The Houston Oilers waived three-time Pro Bowl defensive back Jack Tatum Thursday and signed wide receiver Mike Renfro to a multi-year contract.

Two Pennsylvania residents have filed a $290,000 civil suit against Oilers place-kicker Toni Fritsch for injuries they say they received in a car crash in which a woman was killed.

The New York Giants announced Thursday that they have signed North Carolina linebacker Lawrence Taylor, their top selection in the 1981 National Football League draft.

The Seattle SuperSonics have reached contractual agreement with free agents Alex English and Steve Hawes, Seattle Coach Lenny Wilkens confirmed Thursday.

English, a high-scoring 6-foot-8 forward who was formerly with the Denver Nuggets, has agreed to a multiyear contract that will earn him between $700,000 and $800,000 per year.

Hawes, a 6-10 center formerly with the Atlanta Hawks, reportedly will receive $400,000 per year.

A chest tumor removed earlier this week from Kansas City Royals owner Ewing Kauffman was benign, Kauffman's physician said today.

Pleasant Colony, the winner of the first two parts of thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown, galloped two miles at Belmont Park Thursday as part of preparations for the Belmont Stakes June 6.

Trainer Johnny Campo, who unabashedly predicted victory in the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness for his horse and has done likewise about the Belmont, said Pleasant Colony looked very strong in the workout on Belmont's training track.

Nelson Piquet's Brabham dominated the first day of practice Thursday for the 39th Grand Prix around the streets of Monaco.

The Brazilian was uncatchable in both the morning practice and the afternoon timed qualifying session.

Jean Ratelle, the graceful center beset by injuries in the twilight of his career, retired Thursday as a player with the Boston Bruins and was named an assistant coach of the National Hockey League team.

Cincinnati Reds' first baseman Johnny Bench suffered a broken left ankle Thursday after sliding into second base while trying to break up a double play in the seventh inning of a game against the San Francisco Giants. He is expected to be out of action for eight weeks.

Tim Bednarz of Wilson, who won the state championship in the half-mile, became Texas Tech's second track signee Thursday.

The 6-2, 170-pound half-miler took the Class A state championship with a time of 1:56.1. He won the District 3-A West championship half-mile with a time of 1:58.8 and won the regional competition with a time of 1:58.7.

Strike threat at Ruidoso

RUIDOSO (AP) — Horsemen at Ruidoso Downs have threatened to boycott the track over the denial of a license to a Tularosa trainer fined and suspended by Arizona for possession of illegal drugs.

Edward Lenard May was fined $500 and suspended for 30 days by Arizona stewards after he was found in possession of nearly 60 vials of illegal drugs, including pain killers and amphetamines, this past April 18.

HE WAS also fined $500 for not having a license to act as a trainer. May is appealing the fines and suspensions.

"Until he clears himself of those problems, we don't feel he should be on our race track," Downs Manager Finlay MacGillivray said.

Under Arizona law, May could race there until that state's racing commission hears his appeal.

MacGillivray said he did not know for sure if the boycott by the horsemen would take place.

"They've told me that if we did not go ahead and validate a license for a fellow who we feel is detrimental to the best interests of racing, they won't bring their horses up to the paddock," MacGillivray said. "We're pretty much at a standoff right now."

Klein has possible heart attack

After passionate defense of NFL on witness stand

LOS ANGELES (AP) — San Diego Chargers owner Eugene Klein suffered an apparent heart seizure today as he left a courtroom after four hours of intense testimony in the antitrust trial of the National Football League and the Oakland Raiders.

Klein, 60, who had ended his witness stand stint with a passionate defense of the league, walked outside the courtroom, broke into a sweat and complained of chest pains. He was taken to a nearby witness room, where paramedics attended to him. An ambulance then arrived to take him to a nearby hospital.

IN ANGRY testimony just minutes before, Klein said he was "outraged" at the financial deal offered to the Oakland Raiders to move to Los Angeles.

Klein's distress became apparent as he headed out into a courthouse corridor and suddenly said, "I don't feel well." He was drenched im sweat.

A U.S marshal and Klein's son Mike braced him as he walked unsteadily to the witness room.

WHEN HE attempted moments later to get up and walk, he stopped abruptly, saying: "I can't make it. I can't make it."

NFL spokesman Joe Brown said Klein complained of pain in his left chest and arm. He said Klein had no previous history of heart trouble.

Klein, giving a lengthy emotional speech, told jurors he believed the Los Angeles Coliseum planned to waste $2 million of taxpayers' money to build "a plush home" in Beverly Hills for Raiders General Managing Partner Al Davis.

"I WAS outraged when I learned the terms of the proposed deal between the Los Angeles Coliseum and Mr. Davis and the Oakland Raiders," Klein said.

"When a city spends its tax moneys to build a stadium, that facility is owned by the city and increases in value," Klein continued.

"But to take taxpayers' money, citizen money — to build a plush house for Mr. Davis in Beverly Hills that Mr. Davis would own, in my opinion that creates terrible animosity toward all of our 28 partners in the National Football League. I can see headlines now that NFL owners have their own welfare program."

KLEIN, WHO was questioned by attorney Maxwell Blecher, representing the Coliseum Commission, repeatedly interrupted the attorney's efforts to ask questions, barking, "I'm not finished", as he proceeded to tell juorors more about his anger at Davis and the Coliseum.

At one point, Blecher asked whether Klein's outrage extended to the Los Angeles Rams when they moved to Anaheim and obtained a lucrative land deal.

"I really was not outraged at all because I had no idea if the land was worth more or less. I'm not a real estate expert," Klein said.

KLEIN, WHO was not supposed to have testified until National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle had concluded his testimony, was called out of turn because of a prior commitment. Rozelle will continue his testimony later.

Rozelle and Blecher expressed different opinions Wednesday in U.S. District Court on whether the 28 NFL member franchises were partners or competitors.

UT places 3 on All-District team

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Southwest Conference baseball champion Texas, which travels to the college world series next week, placed three players on the All-District 6 team announced Thursday.

Heading the Longhorn list, announced by selection committee chairman Cal Segrist of Texas Tech, was Irving junior Tony Arnold, who compiled a 17-0 record and 2.59 ERA this season. Arnold also set school records in innings pitched and complete games.

TEAMMATES BURK GOLDTHORN, a Dallas senior, and Spike Owen, a Cleburne sophomore, also made the all-region squad. Goldthorn caught every game for the Longhorns and led the team with 22 doubles and eight homeruns, as well as hitting .358. Shortstop Owens scored 72 runs this season, walked 84 times and hit .344.

Completing the outfield are Texas Tech's Bobby Cohler of San Antonio, .372; Texas-Arlington's Randy Thorpe of Brooklyn, N.Y., .355, and Louisiana Tech's Dan Banas of Munster, Ind., .378.

Pan American's Bill Brown of Little Rock, .359, was designated at first base; Lamar's Alan Marr of New York, .327, second base, and Texas A&M's Rodney Hodde of Burton, .364, first base.

All-district designated hitter is Arkansas's Billy Dees of Dunedin, Fla., .378. Rice's Matt Williams of Clute, who compiled an 8-4 record and 2.25 ERA this season, took the other pitching spot.

Women praise course at Golden Lights meet

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — Much of the talk after the opening round of the $125,000 LPGA Golden Lights Championship focused on the course, with many of the players, especially the leaders, praising it as tough but fair.

The tournament is being played at the 6,239-yard Stanwich Club for the first time after having been held at the Wykagyl Country Club in New Rochelle, N.Y., the previous five years.

"IT'S TRULY a championship course from tee to green," said Pat Bradley. "It is a bear."

The 30-year-old Westford, Mass., resident shared the first-round lead after Thursday's play with Janet Alex. Both shot 69s on the par-72 course.

"This is one of the hardest we play," said Alex, 25, a resident of West Sunbury, Pa. "You have to hit the ball soft into the green."

PLAYERS WHO ended the day under par said they found the greens difficult to figure, which forced them to play cautiously. It's a strategy the rest of the field might well consider in the tournament's second round, which is to be played today.

Amy Alcott, Karolyn Kertzman, Marlene Floyd, Cathy Reynolds and Joan Joyce, a former professional softball player from Stratford, Conn., were all one stroke off the pace as each shot two-under 70s.

Two strokes behind the leaders at 71 were Debbie Massey and Sally Little.

While Bradley is shooting for her second LPGA victory of the year, Alex said she was surprised by her good opening round.

"I took the last two weeks off and haven't been playing much," she said. "I didn't expect to play so well. I'm very pleased."

ALEX SAID she was most surprised by the shot she made on the par-3, 150-yard 16th hole, where she sank a hole-in-one. It was her first hole-in-one as a professional and one of two shot Thursday on No. 16. Sandra Spuzich had the other one.

"I thought it was going over the green," Alex said of her shot on the 16th. "I was shouting at the ball to get down. I should have shouted, 'Get in.'"

Bradley won the Women's Kemper Open in Costa Mesa, Calif., in March and is currently ranked third on the 1981 LPGA money list with $85,189.

"This is my best start in my career," Bradley said. "The difference is in my putting game. I have a very positive attitude when I approach a green for an eight-foot putt."

THE TOURNAMENT'S defending champion Beth Daniel was tied with five others at 73. Among those tied with her was Kathy Whitworth, who is one tournament victory shy of Mickey Wright's all-time career record of 82 Ladies Professional Golfers Association victories. Whitworth also is also just $20,876 short of becoming the first woman golfer to earn $1 million in her career.

NBA comeback award goes to King

DANVERS, Mass. (AP) — On Jan.1, 1980, police in Salt Lake City, acting on a complaint from a woman, found Bernard King unconscious on his bed, drunk. He was charged with sodomy, forcible sexual abuse and possession of cocaine.

King had hit rock bottom. Fortunately, he knew it and had the strength to do something about it.

"I was in a position where I could sink or swim," King reflected, "and I chose to swim. I didn't do it to save my career — I did it to save my life."

KING'S REMARKABLE turnaround was spotlighted at the National Basketball Association's annual summer meetings, where he received the first Comeback Player of the Year Award. The trophy held special meaning for the 24-year-old forward of the Golden State Warriors.

"This is rewarding to me as an individual more so than as a basketball player," said King. "To receive recognition as a person is special.

"I've abstained from drinking for the last year and a half. I've done the things necessary to combat alcoholism and I don't foresee it being a problem in the future of Bernard King."

THE AWARD, based on voting by a panel of media members in which King outdistanced Denver's David Thompson 51-6, capped a brilliant season in which King averaged 21.9 points per game and re-established himself as one of the NBA's premier players.

He also stayed out of trouble, a striking change for a youngster who had been in constant trouble since his college days and had been plagued by a drinking problem which he concedes "grew progressively worse the last five years."

"I had to look inside myself," King said. "I had to admit to myself that I indeed had a problem and seek the proper professional help. It's difficult to admit you have a problem, but once I got past that barrier I was on the way back."

KING'S COMEBACK trail included a stay in St. John's Hospital and Health Center in Santa Monica, Calif., for alcoholic rehabilitation. He then impressed the Warriors with his play in the Southern California Summer League, and Golden State obtained him in a trade with Utah, which had suspended King after the incident in Salt Lake City.

"We all thought he would have an outstanding year on the basketball floor," said Warriors Coach Al Attles, who presented the trophy to King at Wednesday's awards luncheon, "but we had no idea what he would do off the floor. The most important thing for a person is to control his own life and Bernard showed this year that he was in control again."

Being in control is a wonderful feeling for King.

"I'm a very intense person and a very proud person," he said. "It wasn't easy to admit to my problem. But I knew I had to do it. I had to create a secure foundation for my life."

No All-Star game could cost Cleveland millions

CLEVELAND (AP) — The city stands to lose roughly $4.5 million and an even more valuable psychological boost if for some reason the July 14 All Star game is not played in Municipal Stadium, officials say.

"Everybody is really up for this. Losing it would be a blow psychologically to the city," said Jim Trutko, director of research for the Greater Cleveland Growth Association. "This is another opportunity for people to see how the city has turned around."

WITH THE threat of a strike hanging over the season, baseball officials say they currently plan on playing the game in Cleveland.

"However, I would think if it weren't played on July 14 or July 15 (the rain date) the All-Star game wouldn't be played at all," said Bob Fishel, secretary of the American League.

TI head hears complaints, draws shareholders' support

By JAMES R. KING
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — They lined up by the dozens for a chance to give the president of their company a piece of their minds. They booed and hooted as he spoke, they accused him of breaking his word and spreading "out and out lies" — and challenged his ability to run a major airline.

But Frank A. Lorenzo resisted any temptation he may have felt to fire the lot of disgruntled Texas International Airlines pilots and stewardesses. Instead, the president of Texas Air Corp., TIA's holding company, stood calmly and allowed the dissenters to speak their peace at TAC's annual shareholders meeting Thursday.

For Lorenzo, the victory came when the votes were counted. One resolution proposed by the unhappy employees drew about 35,000 votes but did not come close to passing — ballots against it totaled more than 5 million.

The results were generally the same on every issue pitting Lorenzo and shareholders sympathetic to him against the rowdy group of about 200 pilots and stewardesses among about 1,000 persons attending the meeting.

The dissenters, mostly union-covered workers angry about TIA's unsuccessful efforts to take over Continental Airlines and other "fiscal manipulations," nominated to TIA's board of directors five pilots suspended earlier this month after they wore lapel buttons critical of the company. Lorenzo's slate of officers soundly defeated them, but it did not quell their anger.

"I'm concerned about the out-and-out lies that our employees are being told, an example being your statement that TI pilots are being paid $100,000," said Mike Wood, one of the suspended pilots. Wood said the actual salary is about half that.

Lorenzo, who wants the pilots to fly more hours per month, said the $100,000 he mentioned referred to the cost to the company of pay and benefits for senior captains, and he insisted it was correct.

TIA also announced at the meeting that it has asked a U.S. district court in Los Angeles to halt a move by Continental employees to buy stock and take over their own company.

TIA owns 48.5 percent of Continental and has been trying, without success, to gain controlling interest of the West Coast company.

The attempt to take over Continental is one of the complaints pilots and stewardesses have. But their main complaint centers on last year's creation of Texas Air Corp. as TIA's holding company and the later birth of a sister airline, New York Air.

Stewardess Sheila Hammond complained to Lorenzo at the meeting that TIA employees were kept in the dark about New York Air's creation.

"We found out about it by reading the newspaper," she said. "Our aircraft were repainted and the stars were replaced with apples. The pilots and flight attendants found themselves with worsening working conditions and not enough equipment."

Several resolutions proposed by the dissident group were voted down or overruled, including one that would have put all of Texas Air Corp.'s assets back into TIA.

TIA and its pilots have been trying to agree on a labor contract since February 1979.

High enrollment likely for MC summer session

Students will register Monday for Midland College's first summer term, with another record enrollment likely.

Pre-registration ended Thursday afternoon with more than 660 students already signed up for classes. At the same period last year, the pre-registration count was 635. Last year's first summer term enrollment totalled 1017.

Registration is slated from 2 to 4 p.m. and 6 to 9 p.m. in the Physical Education Building. Those students who pre-registered have received time permits that assign them a specific time to report to registration.

Students who have not pre-registered, but wish to take summer classes, should visit the Physical Education Building Monday from 6 to 8 p.m. They will be processed as quickly as possible.

Midland College's first summer session course offerings include almost all the academic and vocational courses which are available during the regular semester. A few of the vocational courses will not be offered during the second summer term and a few are not offered at all during the summer.

Classes start on Tuesday and late registering students may sign up for classes until Monday, June 8. The first summer session ends on July 7. The second summer term registration is July 8 with classes beginning July 9 and will continue until August 13.

Jane Pauley shares favorite fantasies

BOSTON (AP) — "Today" show co-host Jane Pauley says she likes television news, but fantasizes about being a rock star.

"I do see myself in a smoky blue light sometimes as a torch singer," says Miss Pauley, 30. "Other times, I'm backed up by a five-piece band at Madison Square Garden wailing my heart out.

"But that's strictly fantasy, and I don't really want to be a rock 'n' roll singer," said Miss Pauley, who has been with "Today" for 5½ years. "What I really want to do is television news."

Miss Pauley, in an interview published in the June issue of City Limits, a Boston-based magazine, says the highlight of her career may be the July wedding of Prince Charles.

'It's abroad, it's broadcasting a foreign story home, it's a story that is both news and romance, it's both headlines and fairy tales and I only recently got over my broken heart figuring out that I was at least 10 years too old for Prince Charles.

"We were all in love with him, you know," she said.

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (AP) — Country-western singer Willie Nelson has canceled a July 29 appearance at the Sonoma County Fairgrounds because the 20 fair directors bought up all 1,400 reserved seats before the public got a chance to purchase any.

Mark Rothbaum, Nelson's manager, said Thursday the singer "has been touring for over 20 years to play for the public that supports him and is not interested in performing at any public facility where his fans can't buy tickets in an equitable manner."

Fair manager Ignazio Vella claimed the directors bought up the $11 reserved-seat tickets because they "panicked" when they learned the singer had scheduled another performance June 27 in San Francisco.

Directors wanted to ensure enough tickets would be sold to cover Nelson's $51,000 fee, Vella said.

But other directors said they knew the concert at the 4,700-seat rodeo arena would be a sellout and wanted to ensure they would be able to get all the reserve seats.

●

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Sen. Jacob Javits says he's checked into New York Hospital for some lessons on how to use a machine that will force air into his lungs "and help me breathe better."

"I'm feeling fine, there's nothing wrong with me," Javits, 77, said Thursday.

Javits said he suffers from motor neuron disease, a progressive muscle and nerve disorder that limits his walking. But the New York Republican said he did not believe the condition was related to his breathing problems.

Javits entered the hospital Tuesday night and expected to leave Saturday.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The 1981 Ohio State Fair has canceled the appearance of country singer George Jones because of a fracas that occurred when he failed to appear at another Ohio engagement.

Jones' failure to give an outdoor concert at Possum Holler Music Park near Logan, Ohio, Sunday ended in a small riot in which a deputy sheriff was seriously hurt. Seven people were arrested.

"We try to run a family affair, and we can't take the chance on something happening," said State Fair General Manager John Evans.

Jones, winner of the 1980 Country Music Association award as male vocalist of the year, failed to appear for a February concert with Tammy Wynette, his former wife, in Columbus.

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Three men wounded in the assassination attempt on President Reagan will receive the Marine Corps League's highest honor here this summer, a local spokesman for the league says.

Presidential Press Secretary James Brady, Secret Service Agent Timothy J. McCarthy and District of Columbia police officer Thomas Delahanty will receive the league's "Iron Mike" award, Thomas Price, chairman of the local league detachment's convention committee, said Thursday.

The three were wounded outside a Washington hotel when a gunman attacked Reagan. Brady, shot in the head, remains hospitalized.

●

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — Michael Reagan says mentioning that President Reagan is his father has caused him more problems than if he tried to hide the fact.

The president's son resigned from Dana Ingalls Profile Inc. after he wrote a letter to a military base soliciting business for the firm. In the letter, he mentioned that his father was president, a fact was reported by journalists.

The younger Reagan claims journalists made much ado about nothing.

"My God," he said, "I was representing a 35-man machine shop, and they (the press) acted as if I was soliciting business for Boeing aircraft!"

'ABC Theater' to air life, times of Paige

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — After nearly a year of production problems, the gangling figure of Leroy "Satchel" Paige strides out of legend and onto millions of American television screens.

"Don't Look Back," an "ABC Theater" production Sunday night, chronicles the life and times of the Negro League star considered by many baseball historians to be the greatest pitcher who ever lived. Certainly, he was one of the most durable, with a career that spanned four decades — from the late 1920s to the mid-'60s.

Paige's beanpole body and "them size-15 feet" inspired riotous laughter from his teammates. But the laughter always stopped when Paige's blazing fastball zipped past opposing batters.

His exploits meant a decent living and a measure of fame. But for most of his career, one thing stood between Paige and the major leagues.

Paige came along in an era when blacks were barred from baseball's upper strata simply because of their color. To survive, blacks formed their own teams, their own league — and played their own style of ball. The Negro National League flourished, and teams barnstormed from town to town, playing ballgames throughout the United States and Latin America.

But in "Don't Look Back," Paige, as portrayed by Emmy-winning actor Louis Gossett Jr., never loses sight of his ultimate ambition — an ambition he fulfilled in 1948 with the Cleveland Indians.

By that time, Paige was 42. He was inducted into the Hall of Fame in 1971.

"I wasn't trying to do a polemic on black-white relations," said the movie's executive producer, Danny Arnold, whose credits include the long-running "Barney Miller." "I was just trying to give insight into the feelings of an individual. It's a strong personal story."

Vallee sticks to show business

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Arts Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — His time may not be your time, his era as a vagabond lover ended long ago and there was nary a live whiff or poof from the old Yalie as he trotted out "The Whiffenpoof Song" he made famous.

But Rudy Vallee, 80 in July, refuses to sing "Toodle-Oo, So Long, Goodbye" to show business after nearly 60 years in it. And Wednesday night he began a four-night stand here in a half-empty club.

The setting was Les Mouches, a West Side cabaret and disco emporium 26 blocks south of and 53 years from where he first hit the big time on a local radio show that began with his familiar cry:

"Heigh-ho, everybody, this is Rudy Vallee announcing and directing the Yale Collegians from the Heigh-Ho Club at Thirty-Five East Fifty-Third Street in New York City."

His one-man, no-band show, his first here since 1976, proved resolutely derriere-garde, firmly rooted in the past, an eccentric, puzzling mix of 200 slides, snatches of elderly songs (both recorded and live), bawdy limericks, a flood of drunk jokes, and one obscene, ancient ditty.

It perhaps was the only club act extant that began with an off-stage announcer welcoming the patrons and adding: "Mr. Vallee suggests if you must visit the powder room you do so now."

Ten minutes later, Vallee, clad in an open silk shirt and a black coat, entered, took to a podium and — operating both his slides of yesteryear and tape recordings of his old hits — began the night.

It was as much a lecture as a show, flitting back and forth in time for nearly two hours. It ranged, in no particular order, from his days as an underage Navy enlisted man to current events, the early 1960s when he co-starred in the Broadway hit, "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying."

Among other things, the veteran performer:

—Played his 40-year-old recording of "The Whiffenpoof Song," noting that although always associated with Yale the tune didn't originate there, but rather in "Little Nemo," a 1904 musical.

—Explained how he came to use the famous sawed-off red megaphone that became his trademark as America's first real crooner.

—Recalled when he fronted a 53-piece Coast Guard band during World War II (during this segment he sang a passage from "Besame Mucho" backed by a wartime recording of the band).

—Sang, backed by taped piano accompaniment, "my 'Vagabond Lover' medley" of early hits, which didn't include "My Time Is Your Time" but did serve up "Kitty From Kansas City," about a girl so dumb "she thinks a goblet is a sailor's little boy."

—Readily admitted his first film, "Vagabond Lover" in 1929, is a turkey now "only shown in penitentiaries and comfort stations."

—Rendered a 1936 obscurity, "All Points West," about a train station announcer who daydreams about all the places the trains go (it must be said the song went on so long two of the 40 patrons present fled before he reached the Continental Divide).

—Offered a 16-song Jerome Kern medley — but only a few bars of each tune — before wrapping the night up with a different tunesmith's work, an encore song called "Let's Put Out the Lights."

During all this, Vallee, who occasionally shut his eyes and conducted various way-back-when orchestras preserved on tape, mildly berated the audience for failing to laugh at his drunk jokes.

He also warned any critics present they should remember that the jokes usually "convulse a full audience."

Trade deficit rising again

WASHINGTON (AP) — With oil imports returning to a more typical level, the nation's foreign merchandise trade deficit is rising again.

Commerce Department figures released Thursday showed imported oil flowing into the United States at a daily average of 6.8 million barrels in April, about 24 percent faster than the surprising 5.5 million average reported for March.

And that apparent surge helped increase the trade deficit for the month to $3.46 billion, a much more typical figure for recent months than was the $451 million recorded in March.

Commerce analysts said April's figures weren't really as bad as they looked, nor were March's as good — a situation blamed on exceptionally heavy oil deliveries so late in March that they ended up being counted in April.

ENERGY
OIL & GAS

But even ignoring that month-to-month problem, the figures for the first third of the year should prod both private exporters and the government into action, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said.

"If deficits continue at the rate of the first four months, the total red ink for the year would exceed that for 1980, pointing out the continuing need to increase U.S. export activity," Baldrige said.

The deficit for the January-April period was about $12.5 billion, just over one-third of the $36.4 billion deficit for last year.

April's increase in imported oil — coupled with a 55-cent-per-barrel average price rise — added $1.4 billion to the nation's bill for imported goods.

However, the oil-import average for March and April together still was only 6.1 million barrels per day, well below February's 7.5 million and last year's average of just over 7 million per day.

That decline is consistent with analysts' recent comments that consumers have seemed to be cutting back oil consumption. And a currently plentiful supply of available oil has made it unlikely that prices will rise very much very soon.

Baldrige said that "price restraint by OPEC (the Oil Producing and Exporting Countries), if sustained, will help hold down U.S. payments for oil over the rest of this year."

March's overall deficit of $451 million was the lowest in almost five years, while April's was basically in line with the deficit of $3.11 billion in February. January's deficit was $5.44 billion, and last December's totaled $3.15 billion.

Overall exports fell 7.5 percent to a seasonally adjusted $19.8 billion in April, while imports rose 6.4 percent to $23.3 billion, the report said.

Agricultural exports fell $763 million to $3.69 billion, though that export total was still $2.14 billion above the nation's agricultural imports.

Exports of manufactured goods declined $266 million to $13.39 billion in April, but that category still showed a $1.6 billion surplus over imports.

As usual, the overall trade balance would have shown a surplus rather than a deficit except for oil imports. The April deficit for petroleum trade was put at $7.4 billion.

Record bid filed on oil, gas lease

By JOAN SWEENEY
(c) 1981, The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — A record $333.6 million was bid Thursday for a federal oil and gas lease on a single tract in the ocean off Point Conception, Calif., by a partnership of Chevron U.S.A. Inc. and Phillips Petroleum Corp.

The tract was one of 111 in the Santa Maria Basin, lying off the coast between Point Conception and Morro Bay, that the Interior Department had on the auction block at the Anaheim Convention Center.

Eighty-one of the tracts drew 301 bids totaling nearly $4.9 billion. Thirty tracts, mostly those farthest to sea attracted no bids. The sealed bids were accompanied by cash payments of 20 percent of the bid's total — nearly $1 billion. The 81 high bids totaled $2.27 billion.

Although the sale set a record for the largest single bid ever received on a federal parcel, according to a government spokesman, the overall totals fell short of a sale last fall of federal Outer Continental Shelf leases in the Gulf of Mexico, which received total bids of $7.1 billion and high bids of $2.6 billion.

However, the sale was a record for California where the previous record for all bids was $1.2 billion for parcels in the Santa Barbara Channel in 1968. The previous record for a single tract bid was $105 million in 1975.

The Secretary of Interior has 60 days after the opening of bids to accept or reject them, but a department spokesman said it was expected that most of the leases would be decided within 10 to 30 days.

Bids may be rejected for several reasons including whether they are lower than the minimum estimated value established by the U.S. Geological Survey. The USGS has estimated total energy resources in the Santa Maria basin to be the equivalent of 969 million barrels of oil with a production value of $33.9 billion at current prices.

The bids are also given an antitrust review by the Department of Justice before the leases are awarded.

Included in the 111 tracts are 32 which a Los Angeles federal judge Wednesday enjoined the government from leasing pending disposition of a lawsuit brought by the state of California and environmental groups. The suits alleged that Secretary of Interior James Watt violated several federal statutes in connection with the leasing of the basin's 32 northern tracts.

Three synfuels officials quit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three top officials of the new Synthetic Fuels Corp. resigned Wednesday, opening slots for the Reagan administration to fill as the new administration seeks to change the quasi-governmental organization's focus.

Vice-chairman John J. Mactee Jr. said he was quitting because his management style is "not fully compatible" with Edward Noble, who was sworn in Wednesday as the new chairman of the corporation.

Also announced were the formal resignations of financial vice president Robert Blakely and project development chief Larry Lukens.

All three men entered the organization during the Carter administration, which created the Synfuels Corp. to try to stimulate the nation's synthetic fuels industry with almost $18 billion in government loans, grants, price supports and guarantees.

Mactee, a former Wall Street lawyer, recently caused controversy when he told a House subcommittee that his $161,000 salary from the Synfuels Corp. was a financial hardship compared to the salary of his former post.

Stockman favors industry-financed cleanup

WASHINGTON (AP) — The damaged Three Mile Island nuclear plant should be cleaned up without financial help from the government, says budget director David A. Stockman.

In the Reagan administration's first formal statement of government accountability at hree MileIsland, Stockman said in a letter made public Thursday that the government's role should be limited primarily to ensuring safe waste disposal and studying the reactor's decontamination process.

Money for actual cleanup should come from the utility industry, Stockman said in a letter to Rep. Allen Ertel, D-Pa.

"This administration feels that the private sector, working closely with state governments and their regulatory agencies and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission can responsibly assure the expeditious cleanup of the damaged reactor at Three Mile Island," Stockman wrote.

"To deal with the possibility of such accidents in the future, it may be necessary for Congress to consider legislation which would require that the owners of nuclear power plants carry a greater amount of private property insurance."

Ertel is the prime sponsor of a bill that would spread the estimated $1.3 billion cleanup cost of Three Mile Island among all utilities owning nuclear power plants. Eventually, the cost would be borne by ratepayers.

Ertel's proposal has met opposition from numerous congressmen who question whether their constituents should pay for a nuclear accident in Pennsylvania.

The Three Mile Island facility, located near Harrisburg, Pa., was damaged in the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident on March 28, 1979.

Stockman's letter was a response to Ertel's request for ideas on how the federal government could contribute to the cleanup effort.

"The government can assure save and environmentally sound recovery practices through the federal regulatory process," Stockman wrote. "It can provide for the disposal of those wastes not suitable for shallow land burial on a reimbursable basis from the utility.

"Further, the government can perform research and development which will provide generic information on the physical state of the damaged reactor core and on the engineering problems of cleaning up and decontaminating a nuclear reactor," he said.

"It is reasonable to limit the role of the federal government to these three activities," Stockman concluded.

Pay bills or gas cut off: Arkla

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas Louisiana Gas Co. won't offer a moratorium on service cutoffs next winter, says David L. Johnson, an assistant vice president.

Johnson said Thursday that unpaid bills by residential customers totaled $6 million in March, a 73 percent increase over March 1980.

The utility instituted the no-cutoff policy for Arkansas customers in the winter of 1980. It also was the policy in Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Kansas, other states served by the utility.

A breakdown showed an 89 percent increase in unpaid bills in the Louisiana-Texas division, 68 percent in the Oklahoma-Kansas division and about 70 percent in the Arkansas division.

Johnson said Arkla would return to the policy of cutting off service for non-payment of bills. He said there would be some exceptions in individual cases.

He said a moratorium "doesn't look like a good way to do business" and doubted that it helped customers in the long run. In place of the moratorium, the company is to promote levelized billing in which the customer pays the average cost of gas during the past 12 months.

Last year, the utility's system-wide bad debts totaled about $1 million. Half of that came from Arkansas, where 400,000 of the company's 700,000 customers reside. Johnson said he expected this year's figure, which should be calculated by July or August, to be significantly higher.

City, county declare emergency

WEST VALLEY CITY, Utah (AP) — Six service stations were ordered closed and city and county officials have declared a state of emergency as leaking gasoline fumes, at times reaching explosive levels, forced closure of the city's main commercial street.

City officials ordered the six stations along the street known as 3500 South Street closed until they could certify their gasoline lines and tanks are not leaking, but narrowed the search late Thursday to three, with one station the "hottest spot."

Tests today were expected to confirm whether gasoline was coming from a Rainbo service station, where gasoline was found in a test hole Thursday.

"There is no doubt this gasoline is coming from a tank," City Fire Chief William J. Lukens said.
