Tax Limits GroupDraws Criticism

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

WHILE the Lubbock Property Owners Association Tuesday blasted Mayor Dirk West's support of legislation creating a court of record in Lubbock, the association itself was the target of a stinging editorial in a civic club newsletter.

The editorial, published in the Southwest Lubbock Rotary Club "Keyway," states, "In its endless fight against Godless communism, inflation, and/or common sense (multiple choice) the local tax limitation folks are circulating a petition to force a called election that could so hamper our city's revenue raising ability that city services could be severely hampered, our growth rate stunted, and our municipal bonds reduced to bird cage liners."

Keyway editor Julian Simpson suggests the "tax limitation folks can make a big contribution by...burning the pictures of (city hall critic) Jimmy Marshall or going back to work."

Disclaimer Follows Editrorial

A disclaimer following the editorial says, "this piece is editorial in nature and may not reflect the views of all SWLRC members, but this issue is certainly something that needs a full and public discussion."

Simpson, owner of a commercial janitorial service, said he wrote the editorial after becoming concerned about the attitude of the taxpayers group toward city government.

"Their general approach is that city government and city officials are the enemy — that people at city hall are not part of the community and not to be trusted," he said.

Tax Rate "Reasonable"

Lubbock's fiscal condition has been "fairly stable" and the city's tax rate is "reasonable," Simpson said, and suggested the LPOA "needs to be doing something better with their time or go somewhere else where there are worse tax problems."

The association's views are indicative of "a kind of political paranoia, since they view good and decent people as some kind of enemy," Simpson said. "These people (city officials) need their help."

"It's time for this insanity to end," he said.

LPOA President Bob Green was unavailable for comment on the editorial, but had plenty to say about court of record legislation in a letter to West.

Green says he favors "a less costly and more economical method" than creation of a court of record — namely a bill which would limit appeals from municipal courts.

Reduced Cost Seen

The legislation, if passed, "will simplify procedure and solve your problem without any additional cost to the taxpayer and, in fact, will materially reduce existing cost of court procedure in the Municipal Court," Green says.

"Its immediate adoption, which would place it in effect September 1, 1979, would solve the problems which so worry the Honorable Mayor," the letter continues.

The legislation, sponsored by Sen. John Traeger of Seguin and Rep. William Blanton of Carrollton, would remove the right of appeal from any defendant who pleads guilty or no contest to a charge in Municipal Court.

Currently, any defendant can receive a new trial in county court, regardless of plea. A court of record would limit appeals only to those cases in which an error has occurred in the lower court proceedings.

West was quoted as saying "the only

PUBLIC AUCTION — The Mennonites dream of their own religious colony on the plains of West Texas was swept from underneath them Tuesday during this auction of their land on the steps of the Gaines County Courthouse in Seminole. The group defaulted on a land payment in February, forcing the auction, which was attended by a few Seminole area residents and numerous media representatives. (Staff Photo by Dennis Copeland).

Mennonites' Land Auctioned

By NANCY ALLEN and JOHNNY HOLMES

"I THINK God was punishing us for something we did," said Peter Bergen, leader of Mennonite religious colony in Seminole, as he watched on the steps of the Gaines County Courthouse Tuesday morning as Lamesa National Bank vice-president Bill Hamilton placed a $1 million bid on the Mennonites' land at a public auction.

The Mennonites lost their land, the 10-section 70 Ranch 21 miles southwest of Seminole, as well as all hope of regaining the $2 million they had invested in their ill-fated dream, when Hamilton offered the only bid on the ranch the colony took possession of when it migrated here from Canada in March 1977.

The public auction, attended by a half-dozen Mennonites, a handful of curious locals and an army of regional media, came about because the Mennonites defaulted on a land payment of $225,037 on Feb. 15, and subsequently were unsuccessfuly in raising the remainder of the money owed, about 10 times that payment.

But Bergen said he felt the vision had stumbled to such a disappointing end "because God was punishing us for something we did."

"The colony wasn't started correctly," he said. "I don't know if we came here too fast or what, but I honestly thought our future was here."

Bergen was referring to a lengthy string of ill fortune which has beset the colony since its arrival.

The Mennonites have had problems with the terms of their payments and with disputed water rights on two-thirds of the ranch, as well as difficulties obtaining proper visas from the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, all of which they tought were resolved when they came to Seminole.

The Lamesa National Bank, which sold the land to the colonists, regains possession of all but a half-section, which returns to Dennis Nix of Seminole who sold that portion to the Mennonites as part of the complete deal. Nix, in a separate sale immediately following Hamilton's bid, regained his 3,200 acres for $151,000.

Bergen said the Mennonites hoped the land would sell for more than the $1.6 million they had paid for it, adding that if it had, the colony could have received all the money over that figure. Sincc it sold for under that, the Mennonites conceivably could be sued for the difference.

The auction marked the end of a long, painful struggle for the 666 Mennonites who came to West Texas from Canada and Mexico seeking religious freedom, a large tract of land to grow crops and raise their families on and a chance to live among themselves yearround. Some of the families came and went, others never showed up, the end result being a constant confusion among the colonists over exactly who was supposed to be working the land and how they were supposed to be building their colony.

Their leader at the time of their arrival, Bishop Henry Reimer, arranged for the land, but later, after several disputes within the colony, returned to Canada. Since then, several persons have attempted to aid the colony and its new leader.

Murder Witness Denies Mind Under Control Of Hypnotist

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

TWO WEEKS after Robert Rio Rivera was murdered, his girlfriend, aided by hypnosis, identified Gary Lynn Vester as the slayer, but sheriff's deputies gathered additional evidence for 10 months before filing charges, according to court testimony Tuesday.

Deputies Dean Bohannon and Sonny Keesee testified in Vester's 137th District Court murder trial about their efforts to gather evidence after the 23-year-old woman identified him as the man who shot Rivera and raped her last year.

With the acceptability of hypnosis as an aid to memory a key issue in the trial, the woman said Tuesday morning that the hypnotist did not have control of her mind during the three hypnotic sessions last spring and summer.

Feeling Of Relation Described

"Did you think at any time, when you were under hypnosis, that someone else had control of your mind?" Assistant Criminal District Attorney Richard L. (Rick) Howell asked.

"No," she said, adding that she remembered the session afterwards and that it had "just made me feel more relaxed."

Ed Barclay, the Lubbock County deputy sheriff who headed the murder investigation until he resigned last October, told the court that the woman identified Vester from police photos several weeks after the murder.

Barclay described her as highly emotional during his initial interviews with her.

"I just wanted to confirm the identification a little more, and that was why I wanted the hypnosis session, to settle her down and help her recall a few more details," he said in court.

The first session with Deaf Smith County Sheriff Travis McPherson of Hereford, a hypnotist, was held at Department of Public Safety headquarters in Lubbock, he said, adding two more were conducted here and in Hereford.

Photographs Pointed Out

Both Barclay and the woman testified Monday and Tuesday that she was shown photographs of five men during the sessions and calmly chose the one of the 20-year-old Vester.

Bohannon testified he was asked by Sheriff C.H. "Choc" Blanchard in January to renew investigation efforts into the case, and he described "hanging around after-hours joints" in East Lubbock for information about the crime.

He said he traced a watch reportedly taken from Rivera's wrist to two men before tracing it to Vester and Charles Walter Hill, 29, of 3604 Zenith Ave., who was charged with murder in the case last week.

The gold, stretch-band watch had an "R" scratched on the back, and that a relative of Rivera's identified it as belonging to him, Bohannon testified.

The woman has testified that she and Rivera were parked on the turnrow in the early morning of April 1, 1978, when two men approached the car and ordered them out.

Rivera cursed them, she said, and was shot twice in the head where he sat in the back seat.

She testified that Vester then raped her under a nearby tree and discussed killing her with the other man before the men let her go and left in Rivera's car.

The deputies found the car at daybreak alongside railroad tracks about three-quarters of a mile west of the death scene, they testified.

Bohannon described tracking two sets of footprints from the car to East 36th Street and Zenith Avenue and then following the same prints from there to where the car had been parked when Rivera was killed.

Barclay said efforts to take fingerprints from the car were unsuccessful mainly because the interior was padded.

He said two spent .38-caliber cartridges were found outside the car.

Chicago Landslides Woman For Mayor

By The Associated Press

DEMOCRAT Jane Byrne, the gutsy party worker who toppled the party's machine after it spurned her, received an overwhelming mandate from Chicago voters and Democrats Tuesday to become the city's first elected woman mayor.

With 94.1 percent of the votes counted, Mrs. Byrne had 82 percent of the ballots — topping the late Mayor Richard Daley's personal high of 77.67 percent set in 1975 when he won his sixth term.

The results with 2,918 of the 3,100 precincts in: Mrs. Byrne 658,018 votes to Republican Wallace Johnson's 129,115. Andrew Pulley of the Socialist Workers Party received 14,599.

An Associated Press-WMAQ-TV poll of 3,000 voters showed Mrs. Byrne received 93 percent of the Democratic vote and 71 percent of the independent vote.

Mrs. Byrne, 44, with a transition team already at work and plans under way for her inauguration, had been favored to become the next mayor of Chicago, a city which has turned away Republican mayoral hopefuls since 1927.

Johnson, an investment banker, had never held elective office. In the last four mayoral elections, the GOP candidate has lost by margins of at least 7-to-2.

Meanwhile, In California's San Mateo County, a former political aide and a real estate millionaire fought to fill the term of Rep. Leo Ryan, slain last year in the Guyana airport ambush that set off the Peoples Temple bloodbath.

Pitted against each other in a special runoff election were Democrat Joe Holsinger, 57, once Ryan's chief assistant, and Republican Bill Royer, 58, who has two decades' experience in local politics.

And in Wisconsin, the unexpired term of the late Republican Rep. William Steiger was at stake as two state senators sought to preserve — or shatter — an almost unbroken 40-year GOP legacy.

With 14 of 366 wards in the district counted, Democratic state Sen. Gary Goyke had 4,881 votes to Republican state Sen. Thomas Petri's 3,615.

Mrs. Byrne narrowly defeated Mayor Michael Bilandic, who had support from party regulars, in the Feb. 27 primary. For her it was revenge.

Bilandic had fired Mrs. Byrne, a Daley protege, from a cabinet-level post after she publicly charged that Bilandic helped "grease" the way for approval of a taxicab fare increase.

After her primary victory, Mrs. Byrne sought to heal party wounds. "We're going to have to show the world that what happened here is like a fight in the family where you always make up," she said.

San Mateo County election officials had predicted a light voter turnout, less than the 41 percent who voted in the March 6 primary in which Holsinger finished first among 12 candidates.

Dry Air Flow Reduces Rain, Snow Chances

DRYER air moving into the Lubbock vicinity from the west should eliminate a chance for rain or snow in the area today and bring milder conditions to the South Plains for the remainder of the week.

A high pressure ridge and allow this afternoon's temperatures to reach into the mid 60s before the mercury falls into the low 40s tonight.

Forecasters expect temperature to reach into the 70s by Thursday afternoon. Highs in the area should continue stretching to the 70s through the weekend.

Gusting winds blowing 15 to 20 mph from the west also are expected across West Texas.

Winter threatened to return to the South Plains Wednesday, but the low pressure system that brought up to 4 inches of snow to parts of the northern Panhandle only produced light moisture and considerable cloudiness to the Lubbock area.

Although National Weather Service radars indicated showers and heavy rain east of Lubbock Wednesday afternoon, no more than a trace of moisture was reported in that region.

Thousands Returning To Homes

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Federal officials said Tuesday that a troublesome gas bubble no longer poses any significant danger of explosion at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant, advancing efforts to bring the disabled reactor to cold shutdown.

Declaring "the bubble has been eliminated for all practical purposes," Harold Denton of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission told reporters, "I think the danger point is considerably down from where it was a few days ago."

"I would say there is no more bubble at the top of the core....We no longer consider a hydrogen explosion a significant problem," he said. "The site remains stable ... the bubble poses no further significant safety problem."

Advisory Extended

Late Tuesday, Gov. Dick Thornburgh again extended his advisory that young children and pregnant women stay more than five miles away from the plant. "I will continue to take every precautionary measure that is at all warranted by the facts," he said. He did not elaborate or say how long his advisory would remain in effect.

Thornburgh also extended his order that all schools within the five-mile zone remain closed, and said he was keeping "precautionary shipments of medicine" on hand.

(Related Stories, Pages 8, 13, Sec. A; 1, 8, Sec. B)

Meanwhile, speculation arose that the reactor might have to be junked, but one NRC official said he doubted that.

As Denton, President Carter's special representative, spoke at a briefing, tension was easing in the week-long crisis caused by the worst nuclear accident in U.S. history.

Thousands Returning

Civil defense officials said between 80,000 and 250,000 of the region's 950,000 people had temporarily pulled out, but thousands were returning Tuesday and some schools were reopened.

Asked when the emergency would end, Denton said, "I hope that from here on out we can move rapidly in that direction.

"We are right now developing and looking at plans of the most effective way to bring this reactor to cold shutdown." He declined to predict when that might be accomplished, but said, "Time is on our side."

Whatever success authorities have in achieving a cold shutdown of the crippled No. 2 nuclear reactor, Denton said the unit was not likely to be back in operation for "a considerable period of time."

Temperature Constant

He said the temperature in the nuclear core remained at 280 degrees.

Robert Bernero, an NRC decontamination expert, arrived from Washington to assess ways of eventually cleaning up the radiation in the facility — a task he said would take "many, many months, maybe a year or two."

But Bernero was skeptical of suggestions on Capitol Hill that the reactor was so contaminated by radiation that it would have to be abandoned. "I doubt that it cannot be used again ... I don't know," he said.

He was responding to a comment by Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., chairman of the Senate Public Works subcommittee on

Church College Subsidy Hike Bill Advances

AUSTIN (AP) — Church-related colleges and other private institutions of higher learning won an easy victory in the House on Tuesday with a 123-19 vote approving higher state subsidies for their students.

Final passage is expected today, and that would send the bill (SB356) to Gov. Bill Clements, who recommended it in his budget message.

The bill would raise the maximum grant from $600 to half the cost of educating a student at a publicly supported college. That cost is $2,500 a year now, so the top grant would be $1,250. The figure would rise each year as the cost per student at public colleges rises.

For the first time since the grant program began in 1971, part-time students could receive a check from the state to cover part of their tuition.

The Independent Colleges and Universities of Texas (ICUT), an association of private schools, lobbied heavily for the bill.

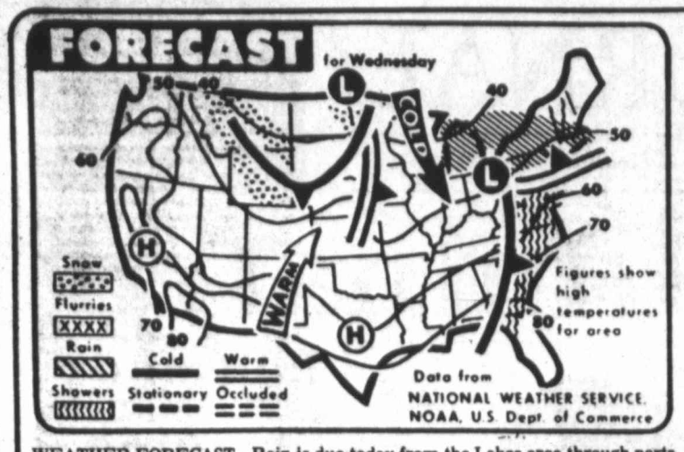

Rep. Lynn Nabers, D-Brownwood, the sponsor, said the maximum grant had not changed since the program began, despite rising costs.

He contended that when taxpayers help a student attend a private college instead of a state university, it results in "a saving to the state of Texas."

Rep. Foster Whaley, D-Pampa, a Texas A&M graduate and a member of a

Carter Wage-Insurance Plan Gutted In House Budget Committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's plan to insure wages against inflation was dealt a severe blow Tuesday when the House Budget Committee voted to delete $2.5 billion earmarked for it from next year's budget.

Rep. Robert N. Giaimo, D-Conn., committee chairman, said the vote "kills all chances" for this anti-inflation proposal this year.

The wage insurance program was designed to provide special tax cuts to groups of workers who cooperate with the administration's anti-inflation program by keeping their wage increases within the 7 percent guidelines.

The president's proposal has been stalled in the House Ways and Means Committee but there were hopes that it might be revived in a modified form.

The plan, a key feature of Carter's voluntary campaign against inflation, would have used the income tax system to deliver special payments worth up to $600 per worker in groups cooperating with his guidelines on pay hikes. It would have insured the first $20,000 of a person's wages against inflation of from 7 percent through 10 percent.

The Budget Committee, which began work Tuesday on a tentative congressional budget for fiscal 1980, voted 14-11 to delete the $2.5 billion program.

Giaimo, who opposed deleting the money, warned the committee "if we vote to take out real wage insurance we are in effect sounding its death knell."

However, Rep. Timothy E. Wirth, D-Colo., who described himself as a supporter of the idea, said the program was not going to pass Congress this year and might as well be killed by the Budget Committee.

The deletion of funds for the president's proposal came on a motion by Rep. Barber B. Conable Jr., R-N.Y., the panel's ranking Republican.

The White House expressed disappointment at the committee's action and urged that the vote be reversed.

"We would hope that the Congress would reevaluate the Budget Committee's decision in light of the need to help those who are most likely to be hurt by inflation," said White House associate press secrtary Claudia Townsend.

Meanwhile, members of the Senate Budget Committee raised questions about Carter's commitment to raise spending for NATO "in the region of 3 percent."

But the panel delayed until Wednesday a vote on whether to go along with Carter's defense proposal.

"It is a fair question for the committee to consider whether we are sharing a disproportionate" part of the burden of policing the world, said Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, chairman of the committee. Other members said West Germany and Japan should shoulder a greater share.

Earlier Tuesday, the House Budget Committee voted to cut more than $2 billion from Carter's request for military spending for the next fiscal year.

The committee approved $123.9 billion in defense spending, a figure below the 3 percent commitment among NATO nations for increased defense spending in real terms.

The president had requested $126 billion for military programs to put the government in line with the NATO commitment. The committee's figure amounts to a 2.3 percent increase in military spending after the effects of inflation are deducted.

However, Giaimo argued that the defense cut was "reasonable and justified" and that — discounting defense pensions and payrolls — it would permit a 4.5 percent increase in spending for military readiness and weaponry.

The committee's Republicans disagreed, arguing unsuccessfully for a higher figure.

"We've made an agreement to make a 3 percent increase with our allies," said Rep. Marjorie S. Holt, R-Md. "It's critical that we at least stay with the president."

However, Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., seeking even deeper cuts in defense spending, declared that the military is "so bloated with waste, so bloated with inefficiency that we're deluding ourselves to think that this (higher amount) would increase our national defense."

The main item trimmed from the Carter's request was a $1.8 billion conventional aircraft carrier.

Carter has proposed a budget of $532.3 billion for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, close to the $532.6 billion recommended by the committee's Democratic caucus.

However, the caucus, dominated by liberals, urged reordering budget priorities by shifting money that Carter wants to spend on defense to social programs.

Although the committee's recommended defense spending is less than Carter's, it also was a defeat for the panel's liberal Democrats who wanted a deeper cut.

By a 13-9 vote, the committee's Republicans and moderate Democrats, including Giaimo, restored $430 million in defense spending that the Democratic caucus had opposed.

The committee has until April 15 to submit its spending recommendations to the House. The House must then approve its target budget which is reconciled with the Senate's version to become Congress' tentative budget.

Judge Refuses To Block Electrocution Of Convicted Murderer In Alabama

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — A federal judge refused Tuesday to block the Friday electrocution of murderer John Louis Evans III, ruling Evans' mother — who filed an appeal over his objections — lacked standing in court.

U.S. District Judge W.B. Hand's decision followed Gov. Fob James' earlier refusal to see a delegation from Amnesty International, a human rights group that was also seeking to stop the execution.

Betty Evans of Beaumont, Texas, filed an appeal on her son's behalf on Monday despite his repeated insistence that he wanted no further legal efforts made on his behalf.

Evans has refused to appeal his case, saying he would rather die than spend a lifetime behind bars.

There are reports that Evans has agreed to allow his death to be filmed for replay later.

Mrs. Evans' petition challenged the constitutionality of Alabama's death penalty law and alleged that Evans was "not able to deal rationally" with his legal problems.

State's attorneys argued a psychiatrist's opinion cited in the petition was based on "scant information and second-hand knowledge." Hand agreed, saying the report was not sufficient to stay the execution pending a comprehensive mental study.

John Carroll, an attorney from the Southern Poverty Law Center in Montgomery who represents Mrs. Evans, said an appeal would be filed today with the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

If necessary — and if time permits — the appeal would go to the U.S. Supreme Court. However, the high court has already refused to review the conviction.

Last week, the Alabama Supreme Court rejected an appeal by the Southern Poverty Law Center, which alleged an error in Evans' trial. The sentence was upheld first by the Alabama Court of Criminal Appeals and by the state Supreme Court.

Earlier Monday, Amnesty International, which won the 1977 Nobel Peace Prize for its concern for political prisoners, sought to meet with James.

"Our position is that Gov. James does not have to allow Evans to make a sacrificial lamb of himself for prison reform," said spokesman Richard Reoch.

Evans, 29, who says he left his Beaumont home as a teen-ager to begin a life of crime, has asserted repeatedly that he wants to die rather than be imprisoned for life.

He is scheduled to die by electrocution at 12:01 a.m. Friday at Holman Prison near Atmore for the murder of a Mobile pawnshop owner. If no court intervenes, Evans will be the first inmate executed in the United States since Jan. 17, 1977, when Gary Gilmore died before a Utah firing squad.

Evans reportedly was distraught when he first learned his mother would file the appeal.

But the Rev. Kevin Duignan, a Catholic priest in Atmore who visits Evans daily, said he had calmed down Monday.

"He was quiet," Duignan said. "He was much calmer. He spent the day writing. He has no fear."

Evans spoke for about two hours last Friday with Attorney General Charles Graddick. The attorney general says the discussion was "confidential," but The Associated Press has learned that, among the topics discussed, was the possibility of having the electrocution filmed for later use at institutions such as schools and prisons.

A source, who asked not to be identified, said Evans agreed, provided — among other things — that the film could not be used for commercial purposes.

But Graddick's administrative aide, Janie Nobles, said she knew of no plans to film the electrocution.

Alabama prison officials plan to televise the electrocution on a closed-circuit set in the prison for reporters who want to watch it.

John Hale, a prison spokesman, said the Department of Corrections position is "no filming whatsoever" beyond the closed-circuit account.

Hale said the closed-circuit telecast will be from a "fixed-focus" camera pointed at the electric chair. He said he did not know if there would be audio with the closed-circuit account.

The prison system plans to allow a sketch of the electrocution to be made public.

The petition filed by Evans' mother alleged that he is "incapable of maintaining the proceeding himself or of protecting his own federal constitutional rights not to be subjected to the illegal sentence of death."

The appeal alleged that Alabama's 1975 death penalty law is unconstitutional and that errors in the trial require reversal of the conviction.

Children Injured In Bus Wreck

By The Associated Press

A semitrailer rig heavy with a cargo of steel slammed into an Indiana school bus Tuesday, and a YMCA bus carrying children to a picnic in Florida crashed into a ditch. The two accidents injured 41 children and four adults.

Police in Greentown, Ind., charged a truck driver with following too closely after his rig hit the school bus, which was carrying about 40 students aged 9 to 17.

Eighteen students and both drivers were injured when both vehicles flipped over.

"They were very, very lucky it wasn't much worse," said state police trooper Jeff Stinson.

Stinson estimated that trucker William Eaton, 30, of Indianapolis was traveling 50 mph to 55 mph just before hitting the bus. The speed limit was 55 mph, he said.

In the Florida crash, a bus carrying 23 youngsters aged 5 to 12 swerved to avoid another vehicle and ran into a ditch, police said. All the children, the driver and another adult on the bus were admitted to hospitals.

Dade County police officer Barbara Bixby said Juana Martinez, 23, was driving the mini-bus for the Hialeah-Miami Springs YMCA. It landed in a shallow ditch near Homestead Air Force Base.

"It was lying sideways. The whole right side was ripped open. Everything fell through," the officer said.

Ms. Bixby said by the time she arrived at the crash site, a dozen bystanders were pulling children free of the bus and giving them first aid.

Two of the students in the Indiana crash were hospitalized. One was listed in stable condition in the intensive care unit of Howard Community Hospital at Kokomo.

The other 16 students, as well as the bus driver and the truck driver, were treated for minor fractures, cuts and bruises and released.

The accident happened shortly before 8 a.m. when the Eastern School Corp. bus slowed to make a right turn off U.S. 35 onto a Howard County road, about 50 miles north of Indianapolis.

Stinson said Eaton was unable to stop his rig after school bus driver Robert Smith, 57, slowed for a right turn. The impact caused the bus to spin and roll over before landing on its right side in a field, he said.

"All of a sudden I heard a bang in the back of the bus and then we just started rolling," said Pat Sagarsee, a senior at Eastern High School. "It seems like it rolled a lot. I remember books and papers flying."

Comment Deadline Nears For Drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Time is running out for comments on plans by the government to make available a list of generic drugs that can be substituted for brand-name products.

The Food and Drug Administration is preparing the list of what it calls therapeutically equivalent drugs.

This means the same drug may be available from more than one source with some selling it under a brand name and others merely under its chemical name. The list would give the chemical or generic names for brand-name drugs that are available from more than one firm, so that pharmacists and consumers could select the less expensive item to fill a prescription.

Many states already allow such substitution, although it has been opposed by the drug manufacturers.

Schlesinger Talk At Tech Slated Thursday Night

Arthur Schlesinger Jr., a two-time Pulitzer Prize-winning author, will speak on "The Kennedy Years: Foreign and Domestic Policy" at 8:15 p.m. Thursday in the Texas Tech University Center Theatre.

Having served as special assistant to President John F. Kennedy from 1961 to 1963, Schlesinger retains a close relationship with the Kennedy family. His memoirs of that administration, "A Thousand Days," won Schlesinger his second Pulitzer and his first national Book Award, both in 1966.

The noted historian entered Harvard University a few days short of his 17th birthday and was graduated summa cum laude. After a year at Cambridge University in England he returned to Harvard in 1939 and began work on "The Age of Jackson," a history of the presidency of Andrew Jackson.

"The Age of Jackson" won the Pulitzer prize for history in 1946 and established the then 29-year-old author's national reputation as a historian. He was one of the youngest men ever to receive the honor.

Tickets for the lecture are $3 and are available at the UC ticket booth.

Gridiron Show Set By Lubbock Press

The Greater Lubbock Press Club's 19th annual Gridiron Show will begin at 6:30 p.m. on April 21.

Tickets are $20 and include a meal, show, and drinks for the entire evening. The show, a series of skits, humorously portrays Lubbock's news and newsmakers.

A reserved "Headliner Table" may be purchased with an order of at least six tickets.

Migrant Affairs Office Ends; Duties Transferred To TDCA

AUSTIN (AP) — The Governor's Office of Migrant Affairs (GOMA), which spent millions of dollars annually in the governor's name to help Mexican-Americans and became a 1978 campaign issue, is no more.

Gov. Bill Clements announced Tuesday he had signed an executive order transferring GOMA's duties to the Texas Department of Community Affairs.

Former Gov. Dolph Briscoe had created GOMA by executive order in 1974 and in 1976 ordered the community affairs agency to automatically transfer 19.5 percent of the manpower money under its control to GOMA.

In the 1978 Democratic primary, the GOMA "scandal" was used as a campaign issue by former Attorney General John Hill, who defeated Briscoe, only to lose in November to Clements.

All 20 of GOMA's employees will be looking for work because of Clements' decision to abolish the agency.

"I am going to be looking, just like everyone else," said Rafael Quintanilla Jr., whom former Gov. Dolph Briscoe hired away from the Texas Public Utility Commission in March 1978 to head GOMA.

Clements said the transfer of GOMA's duties to the Texas Department of Community Affairs (TDCA) would cut costs, avoid duplication and shift money from administration to direct training of migrants farm workers for better jobs.

Omar Harvey, head of the TDCA, said GOMA's duties could be absorbed without adding a single new employee.

"We will put an end to a lot of duplication of services, and more money will find its way down to the migrants who need help," Harvey said.

Clements instructed TDCA to redouble its efforts to help "Texas migrants in breaking the often inhumane migrant cycle and to maximize the impact of the programs by further reducing the tremendous administrative costs."

GOMA currently receives $8.5 million a year in federal Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA) money from the community affairs agency for manpower programs.

It, in turn, spends the money through two major contractors — Texas Migrant Council of Laredo and Motivation Education and Training of Cleveland, Texas — and three colleges. The schools are Texas AI, Southwest Texas Junior College of Uvalde and St. Edward's University, Austin.

Quintanilla would not comment directly on the wisdom of Clements' move.

"I am going to have to see what is going to take place in the next few weeks. The concept of cutting out the middle people sounds real good, but I am going to have to see what happens," he said.

The staff's reaction, he said, was "disappointment, especially in the light of the fact that it was announced last week we were going to get refunded for the coming three months."

Quintanilla said Harvey had told him in a letter that GOMA could count on continued funding for three months.

Clements said his staff would assure a smooth transition of migrant manpower training programs to TDCA. He said "every effort must be taken" to avoid creating hardships for current recipients of manpower training through GOMA.

Clements said the transfer should result in a "substantial improvement" in the quality of services available to migrants.

"It is critical that Texas' migrant and seasonal farm workers, a group faced with some of the most severe employment problems, obtain the very greatest benefit possible from the resources we have available under the (federal) Comprehensive Employment and Training Act," the governor said.

GOMA was relatively obscure before it hit the headlines in late 1977 — just as the governor's race was beginning. Rogelio Perez, then its director, was indicted on witness tampering charges in connection with a Brownsville investigation of one manpower training contractor.

Briscoe immediately suspended Perez and Joaquin Rodriquez, GOMA's program director, who also was charged with witness tampering. The charges were dropped some 10 months later, and Perez received another job in the governor's office.

GOMA's administration of CETA money was criticized in both audit reports and evaluations by TDCA staffers.

State Auditor George McNiel also criticized GOMA's money handling practices.

It also came out that GOMA had made a manpower training grant that found its way back to the agency through a management contract.

With Briscoe publicly holding the line on state employment, GOMA had nine employees on the state payroll but the bulk of its work was done by 41 persons hired by Counterpoint Systems, Inc.

When the existence of the Counterpoint arrangement came to light, the contract was ended and most of the so-called "hidden employees" were fired.

State Agency Abolition No Help To Local Firm

For a short time Tuesday, a Lubbock migrant worker training agency hoped that abolishment of the state's migrant affairs office would improve its chances for regaining funds recently cut off by the state office.

But the head of Llano Estacado told The Avalanche-Journal Tuesday that the money his agency hoped to regain may go instead to a Levelland social service group.

Gov. Bill Clements announced Tuesday morning he had abolished the Governor's Office of Migrant Affairs, a controversial department involved in a scandal over use of federal manpower training funds that marred the administration of former Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

According to Llano Estacado's director, Eliseo Solis, reorganization of the office could have meant renewed funding for his agency. But Solis received word from Austin Tuesday that the South Plains Community Action agency in Levelland may be allocated the funds instead.

The Texas Department of Community Affairs now is responsible for the state's migrant affairs and department officials are in the process of reviewing all contracts with migrant affairs agencies across the state.

"The Department of Community Affairs should have some final decision made by the end of this week, but if South Plains Community Action agency receives the funds we will publicly object to the decision," Solis said.

"Because South Plains Community Action duties are so varied, I believe they won't be able to provide services to migrant farm workers as effectively as we did," Solis said.

In early March, the governor's agency canceled a $1 million contract with Llano Estacado because of what it called audit problems and management instability.

Solis denied those charges during a press conference, calling the cancelation a "blatantly overt and frantic attempt to rectify" the agency's precarious position.

Since the cancelation, Llano Estacado has subcontracted with Motivation, Education and Training in Plainview for federal Comprehensive Employment Training Act funds.

Strip Mining Revision Bills Readily Approved

AUSTIN (AP) — Without a whisper of debate, the House overwhelmingly passed and sent to the Senate Tuesday a pair of bills revising Texas strip mining laws.

One bill (HB1424) conforms the state's 1975 surface mining act to new federal requirements. It passed, 112-19.

Without its passage, the federal government rather than the state railroad commission would regulate strip mining of Texas coal, said Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, the sponsor.

The other bill (HB1368) creates a separate law regulating surface mining of uranium inasmuch as the federal act deals only with coal. It was approved, 114-16.

Craddick said the coal mining bill has been approved by the U.S. Department of the Interior as complying with the federal act.

Rep. John Wilson, D-LaGrange, whose district has both lignite and uranium, voted against the bills but did not speak against them.

"The bills are the barest minimum the state can get by with without violating the federal strip mining law," Wilson later told reporters.

He said he objected to a provision in the uranium bill that would allow the railroad commission to grant a permit for a surface mining operation without a public hearing if "no substantial written objections" have been filed.

"The average person is not going to send in written objections," he said.

Wilson also objected to a provision allowing the commission to issue temporary orders without notice or hearings.

Another provision that Wilson found faulty exempts "in situ" mining of uranium from regulation. "In situ" mining involves injection wells that bring uranium ore to the surface in solution.

"They totally destroy the property as far as the surface is concerned," Wilson said of the "in situ" wells.

The bill establishes strict standards for reclaiming "prime farmland" after a coal deposit has been depleted, including segregation of soil types as the layers are stripped away.

"Prime farmland" would not include woodland or rangeland or fields where the only cultivation had been discing to establish or maintain grass as forage.

"That's the narrowest definition of prime farmland the federal government would accept.... It's harmful if you own land and think it is prime farmland but it doesn't fall within the definition," Wilson said.

He said he remained silent during discussion of the bill because "there was no need for me to get up there and make an ass of myself with futile efforts."

Wilson, an opponent of Speaker Bill Clayton for speaker of the 1979 House, scored the "mood of the House" that would allow such a bill to pass without thorough discussion.

"You couldn't have passed an 88-page comprehensive strip mining bill up here four years ago without three days of debate. When you get up there on the House floor (now), you have got to have 76 votes (a majority) for your bill," he said.

Salinas Offers School-Tax Bill

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Rep. Froy Salinas of Lubbock sought Monday to cut local school district ad valorem taxes by up to one-half by shifting the tax burden to oil production in Texas.

Salinas presented his HB 950 to the House Ways and Means Committee, which referred it to the Sub-Committee on School finance.

The legislation would increase the occupation tax on Texas oil production from 4.6 cents to 12.5 cents per barrell.

Such a move would generate an estimated $806,300,000 in additional tax revenue in 1980. Salinas said the amount would escalate to $903,500,000 in 1984.

"If the bill passes, it would make it possible for school districts to reduce ad valorem taxes between 40 and 50 percent statewide," said Salinas.

Since two-thirds of Texas-produced oil now leaves the state, said Salinas, it would mean that one-third of the tax burden would be picked up by Texans and two-thirds by the rest of the county."

The 4.6 cents per barrell tax has not been increased since 1925, said Salinas. He said he got the idea for the legislation from the state of Lousiana, which now charges a 12.5 cent occupation tax on oil.

About $2 billion is raised by local ad valorem taxes in school districts statewide.

Salinas said legislative school finance committees would help determine how the oil tax revenue was disbursed to local school districts, but it was his hope the money would be divided on a per-pupil basis.

"This would aid areas with low tax revenues, such as Lubbock, but it would also aid school districts throughout the state," the legislator said.

Similar legislation was sponosred in the last session by Rep. Jim Nugent, who resigned to become a member of the Texas Railroad Commission, and Sen. Peyton McKnight, an oilman.

"I have no witnesses (for Monday's committee meeting) but 13 million people in this state would like the bill," said Salinas.

Rep. Hugo Berlanga of Corpus Christi questioned whether additional tax burdens should be placed on the oil industry during the current energy shortage.

"I don't want to see the industry crippled," Berlanga said.

Bullock Bares Assignments Realignment

AUSTIN (AP) — Comptroller Bob Bullock named a second deputy comptroller Tuesday, dividing responsibilities held by Deputy Comptroller Ralph Wayne.

But he was careful to say that Wayne, under investigation by the Travis County district attorney for allegedly using state employees and equipment for private business, was still No. 2 in the department.

"Ralph's still my chief deputy and right hand in running this department," Bullock said.

Bullock said Walt Lilie, director of planning and research since October 1977, will become deputy comptroller for tax administration.

Lilie, 35, has worked for the comptroller's department for almost nine years.

Bullock said a heavy increase in tax policy issues, services and number of taxpayers prompted him to establish the second deputy comptroller's slot.

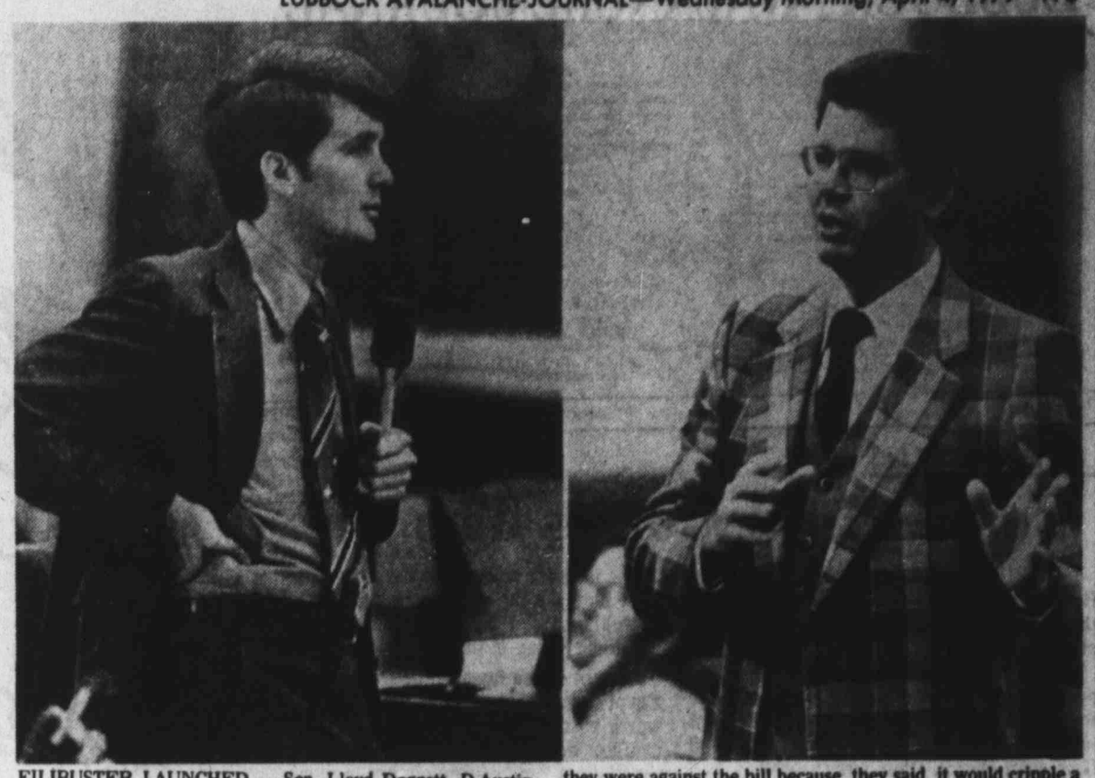

The department had two deputy comptrollers until three years ago.

Water Panel Directors Slate Plainview Meet

The Canadian River Municipal Water Authority board of directors will meet at 10:30 a.m. April 11 at K-Bob's Restaurant in Plainview.

Among the items on the agenda, the board will discuss the possible transfer of a 30 million gallon allocation from O'Donnell to Lamesa; a pending water import authority bill; a salinity study progress report; and financial statements for the second quarter of the fiscal year.

The public is invited to attend.

FILIBUSTER LAUNCHED — Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin (left), led a group of senators in a filibuster Tuesday against a bill by Sen. Bill Meier, D-Euless (right), that would provide changes in the Deceptive Trade Practices Act. Protestors said they were against the bill because, they said, it would cripple a consumer's chances of recovering money damages from fraudulent businesses. (AP Laserphoto)

Filibuster Launched Against Bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Seven senators vowed Tuesday to filibuster until this morning in hopes of forcing a compromise over a bill they claim would remove most state protections against business fraud.

"Anything can happen in a filibuster," said Sen. Ron Clower, D-Garland. "We might hold it up and that's worth something. Or maybe we can put some amendments on it."

Clower and others said the law needed changes but not drastic revision that would make it harder to win money damages from a deceitful business.

"Not only does this bill deal with deceptive practices, it is a deceptive practice," claimed Sen. Lloyd Doggett, filibuster leader.

"It gives the impression of providing penalties that are not there," Doggett, D-Austin, said of Sen. Bill Meier's proposal.

— Removing provisions for triple damages, in most cases, against deceitful businessmen.

— Requiring consumers to prove they were misled knowingly and intentionally.

— Requiring suits to be filed within two years of an alleged deceptive act.

— Prohibiting class action suits under the act.

"This strikes a balance in what is an important place in Texas commerce," Meier said. "We need to be careful that we're not creating a situation that is retarding commerce."

Meier, D-Euless, settled back to endure attacks on his bill by Doggett and Sens. Gene Jones, D-Houston; Clower; Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi; Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur; and others.

Doggett said his crew had some 20 amendments that would keep the Senate in session "into the evening."

Meier brought up his bill at noon. Within 20 minutes the Senate chamber was almost empty as members drifted out for their offices, cold cuts in the members' lounge or a long lunch.

Jones sent up the first in a series of amendments that would remove the changes Meier is trying to make in the existing law. At times, only two other senators sat to hear Jones speak or answer "friendly questions" from other opponents of the bill.

"I agree the act needs some changes, but I don't think we ought to literally gut this act and leave the consumer in a worse position than he would be in if this act didn't exist," said Jones.

"The aggrieved consumers are going to have less rights than they did before the idea of consumer protection ever was conceived and became law," Jones continued.

Peace--Now Comes The Tab

THE PROBLEMS of making the Mideast Peace Pact work may be just beginning for the U.S., if events of the past few days are any indication.

Not only has President Carter pledged his good offices toward helping work out the thorny issues confronting Israel and Egypt in the months ahead—on the West Bank and Gaza strip—but in other areas as well.

As a result, U.S. taxpayers may find themselves deeply involved in several ways, but primarily in an outlay of some $5 billion, or more, in aid and grants to both nations, in supplying Israel oil and in facing an increasingly hostile Arab opposition.

THE LONGTERM diplomacy may prove to be the hardest to handle and could in time scuttle the whole project.

But, on two other counts, the effects will start showing up soon. The U.S. must make a policy decision on what sort of response to make to outright attacks on U.S. personnel and property, such as that in Beirut, Lebanon, damaged by grenades this week.

If Washington ignores the threat, then it may invite even more daring assaults. If it responds, it may infuriate terrorists to try to outdo one another. It is no small problem.

BUT, IT IS on the money front that Americans may feel a major impact in the months to come.

Any hopes for balancing the federal budget in the next few years may have been dealt a fatal blow by the administration's promises of billions to Prime Minister Begin and President Sadat, in the opinion of some.

Backers of the huge outlays for Israel and Egypt argue that "peace at any price" is worth what it costs, saying another Mideast conflict would not only be unthinkable in the "fallout" and disruption, but in money.

Critics, on the other hand, assert that while everyone wants peace in that volatile region that a massive handout of American money is not the best way of achieving it. Some argue that when the funds stop, so may "peace."

THE TRUTH is the whole thing, now that the hoopla surrounding the treaty signing is over, points up a new role for U.S. diplomacy in that part of world.

Up until now, the U.S. has more or less "under-written" certain aspects of Israel's defensive capabilities and assumed a moral obligation to defend the nation if need be from extermination.

In one swoop of the pen, along with pledges, Mr. Carter also has taken on Egypt as a client state of the U.S. In effect, we are now responsible for the future welfare and security—as long as they are not fighting one another—of each nation.

AN EDITORIAL:

Six Steps In Bright Direction

PRESIDENT CARTER could reduce American dependence on foreign oil by as much as 2.9 billion barrels per day this year by taking a half dozen available and relatively simple administrative steps, according to a non-partisan researcher.

At a minimum, six steps previously "inhibited by political considerations" could reduce our dependence on imports by 1.5 million barrels per day now and 1.9 million barrels per day next year, asserts Milton Copulos, a Heritage Foundation energy analyst.

THE STEPS include decontrol of domestic gas prices, conversion of utility boilers with dual fuel capability (now burning oil) back to natural gas, and relaxing EPA restrictions on gasoline additives. Taken as a whole, the actions could be relatively inexpensive.

"While it might seem that the steps are virtually self-evident, the fact that they have not been taken belies that notion," Copulos wrote.

What has been lacking is the courage to take a hard stand in spite of potential for controversy. Whether it is burning coal or decontrolling the price of oil, it seems that the only considerations have been the political consequences of the act.

The time for basing such decisions on political considerations is past. Our energy future is too tenuous to do otherwise.

COPULOS PREDICTED if the entire package were to be implemented, we could reduce imports between 17.6 percent and 33.1 percent by December. With regards to imports from the Middle East, the proportions are even more significant.

"Assuming that the offsets were applied to imports from that region, we could reduce our dependence by between 42.7 percent and 79.7 percent this year, and even further next year," Copulos said.

In calendar year 1980, we could reduce our imports by 1.9 billion barrels per day at the lower range of the estimate, and by as much as 3.5 billion barrels per day at the upper limit.

Clearly, the means to reduce our dependence on imported oil are available. Many of the actions to reduce that dependence are relatively simple and in many instances relatively costless. The only thing lacking is the determination to implement them.

ART BUCHWALD:

Peace Treaty Moored By Network 'Anchors'

(Second Of Two Related Columns)

The signing of a peace treaty between Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, with President Carter sitting at the table on the lawn of the White House.

And yet there was something missing. Suddenly I realized what it was. Walter Cronkite, Barbara Walters and John Chancellor were not up there to initial the treaty.

How, I thought to myself, could there be peace in the Middle East when these three television newscasters were not part of the agreement?

For over two years I had gotten all my news about the negotiations from Cronkite, Walters and Chancellor, as had everyone else in the United States. President Carter occasionally made a statement.

BEGIN AND Sadat were constantly being interviewed by their own press, but night after night it was the role of the American TV commentators to give us the good and bad news of the negotiations.

There were evenings when Cronkite looked very discouraged, and I got the feeling he wanted to break off the negotiations.

There were times when Miss Walters was almost in tears because she couldn't put the peace package together.

Chancellor, I must say, was the most optimistic. I could never tell watching him when he was willing to throw in the towel.

But in fairness to all three, they took risks that no other anchorpersons had ever taken before in trying to get the parties together.

WHEN WALTER decided to go to the Middle East with President Carter, in a final last-ditch effort to save the peace, his advisers at CBS were almost all against it.

"It's okay for Carter to go," one of them told him, "he has nothing to lose. But if you go, Walter, and come back empty-handed, your credibility as the most trusted man in the United States will be jeopardized, and your rating in the polls could plummet."

Walter was adamant. "The peace means more to me than my popularity. I know the chances are slim, but I have some new ideas for Begin and Sadat which could mean a breakthrough."

ABC had mixed feelings about Barbara Walters. Since it was still No. 3 in the nightly news' Nielsens, the feeling was that if an agreement failed, Walter would get most of the blame, and then Barbara's stature would go up.

BUT IF there was the slightest chance of success, both Begin and Sadat would insist on giving her equal time with Cronkite. Besides, Barbara didn't even discuss it with her bosses.

She was on a plane the minute Carter announced he was going.

Chancellor also insisted he would rather come back from the Middle East empty-handed than not go at all. He had NBC draw up a new map for him, which he hoped might break the deadlock between the Egyptian and Israeli leaders.

We may never know the roles these three played in bringing about the White House signing, but at our house, where we watched these three shuttling back and forth between Cairo and Jerusalem, standing in front of the Wailing Wall and broadcasting on the banks of the Nile; Cronkite, Walters and Chancellor were our only source of information on what was going on.

WHEN THEY were up, we were up. When they were down, a black cloud descended over our TV screens.

I don't want to take anything away from President Carter or Anwar Sadat or Menachem Begin, but it is inconceivable to me that these three men would have come to a meeting of the minds if they weren't aware that Cronkite, Walters and Chancellor were waiting outside to report on their negotiations.

It was one thing for these three leaders to report back to their constituents that they had been unable to reach a peace agreement.

But none of them had the nerve to walk out of the meetings and look Walter Cronkite in the eye and say, "We failed."

GEORGE F. WILL:

No Reins On Crain

WASHINGTON—I was grown, with other plain crops, in Illinois, and I regret that the Republic has never had a President with the inestimable advantage of having been born there.

Phlip Crane, R-Ill., shares that regret. But like half a dozen other candidates for the Republican presidential nomination, Crane's first task is to catch the front-runner, a man born in Tampico, Illinois—Ronald Reagan.

Crane, 48, has a square jaw that somehow suits his ideology: He is the only candidate who flanks Reagan on the right. He has what writers of bad novels call "chiseled" features.

And he is a kind of Republican jukebox. Insert a quarter and stand back: The music of pure conservatism pours forth.

His diction has a Midwestern flatness, and the flow of his discourse suggests a prairie river in a spring runoff.

About four sentences into his answer to a perfunctory question about his chances, his rhetorical accelerator is on the floorboard and he is telling about how the Incas managed to evolve something like the Ten Commandments, and how this suggests that "universal precepts" are due for a comeback, witness the revival of morality among teenagers, who are even dressing better...

His is the ebullience of an intelligent man genuinely interested in ideas. He is a Ph.D. and a former history professor who especially admires FDR's concept of the presidency: "a position more of more authority than of administration."

HE ALSO admires President Polk, who said what he was going to do, did it, and went home. Polk acquired California, settled the Oregon dispute, lowered tariffs, and retired after one term.

Most interestingly, Crane admires Grover Cleveland, who "had a unique understanding of the impact of soft money on wage earners."

One of Crane's grandfathers was a carpenter, the other a steelworker. He grew up on the south side of Chicago—White Sox country, which is cultural deprivation at its worst.

He believes there is a growing blue-collar constituency for his vision of a nation reinvigorated by capitalism emancipated from government.

You may have noticed the similar reactions of auto workers and automobile companies to increased safety and environmental regulations that raise automobile prices.

CRANE HAS heard steelworkers angrily demanding to know if a politician understands how much it costs management to re-line a blast furnace. Talking to workers in Ohio's depressed steelmaking region, he was told:

"Management may be SOBs, but they are our SOBs. We'll go after them for our share of the profits, but don't attack the profits." No one in Christendom is less likely than Crane to attack profits.

Perhaps the Crane-Reagan duel will not call to mind Hector battling Achilles. But Crane may at least be damaging to Reagan in the way Fred Harris was damaging to Morris Udall in 1976.

Udall should have been the dominant liberal in the liberal party, but the congestion of liberal candidates split that vote, and in the New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Wisconsin and Michigan primaries Udall lost by fewer votes than Harris siphoned away.

HARRIS, LIKE Crane, had too much ideological tang for many people, but he was irresistible to a significant number of the activists who are disproportionately important in the nominating process.

Reagan has a stronger base than Udall, but Crane will have much more money than Harris.

Crane already alarms one Reagan supporter, William Loeb, the repulsive New Hampshire publisher whose idea of presidential timber in 1972 was Sam Yorty. (You remember: the former mayor of Los Angeles.) Loeb has published unsubstantiated innuendos about Crane's private life.

There are just 160,000 registered Republicans in New Hampshire. About 110,000 voted in the hot Ford-Reagan contest in 1976.

IN 1980, PERHAPS 250,000 will vote in the primary. Divide those aggregates between eight or more candidates and you see why a few votes can make a big difference.

And some people who know Massachusetts say Crane can win there, if he works at it.

He is a willing worker, at least away from Congress. He has made 20 trips to New Hampshire, a dozen to Iowa, and he has never been famous for letting legislative chores distract him.

Crane must survive the early primaries and be seen as the purest conservative alternative to a faltering Reagan candidacy.

He thinks his quest may succeed or fail in one primary—appropriately, a showdown with Reagan on the black loam of Illinois.

ANDREW TULLY:

Mother To Be

WASHINGTON—An amiable rakehell named Robert Ruark, who wrote for a living, once remarked over a double Martini that expectant mothers were a peril to the constitutional guarantee of equal rights regardless of sex "because even I feel sorry for them."

It was Bob's premise that while he would get no government sympathy for a liver mottled by gin, no legislature anywhere would dare reject the plea of an expectant mother for tax-paid financial assistance. He was wrong.

Some states successfully have denied disability benefits to women incapacitated by a normal pregnancy.

I bring up the subject because on my desk is a letter from a lady I shall call Jane Doe, complaining that she is a victim of such a sexist practice. "Isn't that unconstitutional?" she asks.

I THINK SO. But I'm not the Supreme Court, and that august body in 1974 upheld a California law which said, in effect, that pregnancy was not a reimbursable condition.

In this age of equal rights (and even unequal rights for the Equal Rights Amendment), that Supreme Court decision warrants another look.

The Court ruled, 6 to 3, that under the California law "there is no risk from which men are protected and women are not," and "likewise there is no risk from which women are protected and men are not."

It would seem that the majority and Justice William Brennan were talking about different laws.

Dissenting, Brennan pointed out that the California program protected men when they were incapacitated by prostrate trouble or circumcision, which affect only members of their sex.

BRENNAN DECLARED, rightly, that the law violated the 14th Amendment's guarantee of equal protection of the law.

Apparently without reference to the 14th Amendment, the majority said a state had a "legitimate interest" in keeping the program self-supporting, in keeping benefits adequate for the kinds of disability covered, and in keeping the employes' contribution rates low.

There is nothing in the Constitution that says any state must have any kind of disability program. But once a state adopts such a program, the 14th Amendment says it has to be one that is fair to both sexes.

It was a weird decision. California's law implicitly stated that it practiced discrimination in favor of the male sex.

THE COURT'S majority held that pregnancy was a physical condition that happened to be unique to women, "not a sex-based classification."

Well, having babies IS unique to women, unless the Unisex crowd changed things will I was hitting that grand slam home run in Yankee Stadium. But so are certain ailments unique to males.

Yes, gentle reader Ma'am, the Supreme Court blew that one. And although I cannot promise to join any march on that stately pleasure dome by expectant mothers, I will wish them well.

If he were still alive, so would Bob Ruark, a man who whispered sweet nothings only in female ears.

JAY HARRIS:

So, Who Says No?

IT IS INDEED ironic that Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi has been cast in the role of a modern "man without a country."

In the wake of the headlines over the Three Mile Island nuclear crisis, the departure of the Shah and the royal family from Rabat, Morocco, and their arrival in the Bahamas the past weekend went almost unnoticed.

It may have been just as well. The event said a lot about today's world, how the high and mighty can fall and how news reports, or diplomacy, can still get confused.

In retrospect, what has happened in the space of ten short weeks must seem like a nightmare to the once proud ruler of Iran. It was only Jan. 16 that the Shah and his family were forced to flee to Egypt after his ouster by the Moslem fanatic Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

THEN, AFTER SIX days as a guest of Egypt's President Anwar Sadat, the royal entourage moved to Marrakesh in Morocco.

But, after reports of a PLO kidnap plot against the Shah, the family was moved to a guest palace in Rabat, where security could be better handled. However, after several weeks in the northwest African nation, two events reportedly spurred the latest move.

One was stepped-up demonstrations by leftist students and labor unions campaigning for the Shah's expulsion. The other was that King Hassan of Morocco was under pressure from the new Iranian regime.

"One Shah in Morocco is enough," was one of the slogans scrawled on university walls in Rabat and Casablanca, a reflection of leftist claims of a parallel between the Iranian monarch and King Hassan's more open regime.

At this point, things become a bit confused in the translation, so to speak. Both the Associated Press and United Press wire services reported that in effect the Shah was a man without a country, that no one really wanted him, for various and sundry reasons.

THIS IS THE way UPI reported it from the Bahamas:

"Before the Shah left Morocco, U.S. diplomats urged him not to travel to the United States because U.S. authorities could not assure his safety. He was also told his presence in the United States might jeopardize the safety of Americans now living in Iran."

The AP put it this way: "Friday, U.S. officials said they preferred he not visit the United States. A suggestion that he might settle in Brazil brought a swift denial from spokesmen for that country..."

So, okay. From reading those statements, one has to gather that some anonymous U.S. official had made it pretty plain that the Shah was not wanted in this country. Period.

But, we got to wondering who decided this, and why. So, instead of quoting some anonymous "source," as the wire services and far too much of the media does today, we picked up the phone and called the State Department.

THE STORY we got was more or less similar to the one given another Lubbock caller.

That is, "The Shah is still welcome to come to the U.S. if he so chooses. No one in the State Department has told him he can't. But, the matter of security and other problems were pointed out..."

That was the official statement as given us by a State Department official in Washington Tuesday afternoon.

Although refusing to go into details, the State Department man did not deny that "opposition" among certain elements, presumably militant Iranian students, was among the "other problems" cited in the statement.

Nor would he comment when asked if the reaction from the Khomeini regime itself might be a factor if the U.S. offered the Shah and his family temporary or permanent asylum.

ALL OF WHICH poses any number of interesting points.

In the first place, if a survey were taken, the chances are the Shah would win hands down over those militant Iranian students who many Americans feel have abused the hospitality offered them in this nation.

Secondly, who are those "U.S. officials" the AP and UPI quoted as saying flatly that the Shah had been told not to come to the U.S.?

And thirdly, why should the U.S. be cowed by fear or an implied threat by anyone opposing the Shah, unless a majority of the American people did not want him here? Frankly, it's certainly not the business of visiting students or a two-bit butcher whose regime is more dictatorial in many ways than the one it supplanted.

In that respect, there is an interesting story we have been told in regard to the Shah and his reported response to a U.S. appeal for aid during the 1973 Yom Kippur War when Egypt attacked Israel.

ACCORDING TO what we consider a reliable source, late the night the war started, President Nixon picked up the phone and called Amb. Ardeshir Zahedi, Iran's envoy to Washington.

He told him the Arabs most likely would impose an oil embargo and wanted to know if the U.S. could depend on Iran not to join the boycott.

Amb. Zahedi told him he would have him an answer within a short time. It was less than two hours later, early that fateful Sunday morning, that he called back to say "His Imperial Highness says the United States can depend on Iran to furnish the fuel you need..."

One can well understand the Shah's frustration when in his hour of peril his appeals for help were more or less ignored by those he had aided in their hour of travail. Today, that man is a "man without a country." It must seem most ironic to him that among the Free World nations he helped, two of them, the U.S. and Israel, have forgotten...

Incidentally, the "source" for that story is none other than the man who was there: Amb. Ardeshir Zahedi.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

AT THE CARY Arboretum in Millbrook, N.Y., are about 1,000 trees from which hang nylon-net bags stuffed with human hair. These repel foraging deer. Possibly, it's the odor of the hair.

Or maybe the deer just don't like hair on their grub. Whatever, it reportedly works in a dandy manner to keep them away.

Why your senses of taste, smell and sight tend to be sharper around 7 p.m. and 3 a.m. I do not know, but such is the claim of the medical researchers.

PEOPLE PLACES THINGS

Women Paid To Shop

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A Mercury-winged cap is perched jauntily on her head and on one arm Patricia McCabe carries a wicker shopping basket.

She is not an early trick-or-treater. She is dressed for work.

Miss McCabe, 27, is a professional food shopper and co-proprietor of an enterprise called Cupboard Compleat, which began operating in downtown Philadelphia in December. Already it has broadened its scope to include west Philadelphia and parts of the suburban Main Line.

Miss McCabe and her partner, Jacqueline Smith, 35, have based their business on the principle that a number of people today have neither the time nor the inclination to stand in a food store check-out line — and are willing to pay someone else to do it for them.

For an order of groceries costing up to $80, the charge is a flat $8. For orders exceeding $80, the fee is 10 percent of the bill. From marketing research, Miss McCabe says, "Our conclusion was that if we offered blue-chip, impeccably professional service, we couldn't miss."

Murder Trial Postponed

LONDON (AP) — The murder conspiracy trial of Jeremy Thorpe, former leader of Britain's Liberal Party, was postponed Tuesday until May 8 after Thorpe asked the Lord Chief Justice, Lord Widgery, to defer it until after the May 3 national election so he can fight to retain his seat in Parliament.

THORPE

Thorpe, 49, is charged with conspiracy and incitement to murder Norman Scott, a one-time male model who has alleged he had a homosexual relationship with Thorpe. His trial was due to start at the Old Bailey criminal court on April 30.

Thorpe has represented North Devon in Parliament for 20 years.

Protesters Disrupt Speech

AUSTIN (AP) — About 20 Arab protesters disrupted a speech by Ahmed Esmat Abdel Meguid, the Egyptian ambassador to the United Nations, at the University of Texas.

Meguid was delivering a speech Monday in which he said the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty marked a new era of "diplomacy, peaceful coexistence, common understanding and cooperation."

But he was interrupted by shouts of Shouts of "Long live Palestine!" and "Sadat no! Begin No! Long Live PLO!"

An elderly man, who had asked a university policeman to do something about the hecklers, slapped one of the Arab students across the face.

"You're supported by this country with taxpayers' money! Shut up! Shut up!" he cried. The student shouted back: "This is a free country, so don't touch me again." After the man slapped another Arab student, a university policeman took him man aside and talked with him but did not arrest him.

'Possum' Takes To Cat

HOUSTON (AP) — While most animals "play 'possum" to make attackers think they're dead, a local Persian show cat is putting on its own version of the charade to keep another animal alive.

Lani and Michael Laurents of Houston found a tiny baby opossum still alive this weekend after its mother was crushed beneath the wheels of a car.

The couple hand-fed it at first, then experimented by placing it next to their cat, which was nursing four 3-week-old kittens.

"I've heard of puppies and cats suckling, so it wasn't that unusual when it began nursing," Mrs. Laurents said. "Monday morning we saw Heather at her bowl and didn't see the opossum and decided, "Oh well, she ate it.'"

But something on Heather caught her eye. There, clutching the belly hair of the mother cat, was the baby tree-climber.

"I can't imagine it happening in nature," said John Werler, custodian of the Houston Zoo.

Mrs. America Says 'Primp'

NEW YORK (AP) — The new Mrs. America says she considers herself an average married person and that it was only three months ago when she went out and got that little extra beauty treatment to enter the pageant.

"My husband loved it," recalled Carrie Gabriel on Tuesday. "When I came home, he said, 'mmmm, I have a new woman in my life.'"

Mrs. Gabriel, 32, who won her title last Friday night in Las Vegas, recommended that all wives primp up a bit for their husbands. "You can look nicely and have your own image without being a 'Charlie's Angel,'" she said.

"If you really like yourself and like your husband, you'll do it," said Mrs. Gabriel who lives in South River, N.J.

She and Tony Gabriel have been married for nine years. They elected not to have any children, she said, because they were "travel oriented" with their work and felt it was not conducive for youngsters.

Peace In Indochina Sought

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy has told the Council on Foreign Relations the United States should call an international conference to help bring about peace in Indochina.

KENNEDY

As part of the effort, he said, the United States should "clearly state that it is prepared to normalize diplomatic and trade relations with Vietnam" if Vietnam cooperates.

Speaking on Monday, the Massachusetts Democrat said such a conference could help restore peace and insure that Indochina achieves neutrality with independence.

Kennedy also said he was trying to discourage efforts to draft him for the Democratic nomination for president, and said he wasn't going to be in any primaries. But, he added: "If I was, I hope I would be successful."

Oral Roberts Hospitalized

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Evangelist Oral Roberts has been admitted to St. John Medical Center for what a spokesman describes as minor surgery.

A spokesman said Monday that Roberts was undergoing a "very common procedure" but did not elaborate beyond saying Roberts will probably will not be in the hospital more than three or four days.

Chip Carter Visits Iowa

DAVENPORT, Iowa (AP) — President Carter's son, Chip, is brushing aside reports that there is support in Iowa for Massachusetts Sen. Edward M. Kennedy for president. The president's son said Monday that Kennedy "is going to remain a senator for at least six more years."

CHIP CARTER

The younger Carter was beginning a four-day visit to Iowa, which will hold the nation's first precinct nominating caucuses. On Saturday, a Kennedy-for-President movement was launched in Des Moines by Iowa labor leaders who expressed dissatisfaction with President Carter's leadership.

Carter, 28, said in an interview that inflation and such related issues as jobs pose the biggest threat to his father's candidacy.

"We've got to get a handle on it and I think we're going to," he said.

Begin Gratified By Reception In Egypt; Sinai Meet Slated

CAIRO (AP) — President Anwar Sadat of Egypt and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin decided Tuesday to meet in the Sinai and Israel's Negev Desert next month, defying an outraged Arab world by openly pursuing their campaign for peace.

The announcement was made just before Begin flew back to Israel, capping the first journey by an Israeli premier to an Arab capital.

Upon returning to Tel Aviv, a beaming Begin said he had received the "warmest possible hospitality."

"Wherever I went, they cheered, they waved," said Begin, clearly elated. "They really liked me."

The prime minister told reporters he had the feeling that he and Sadat had become "real friends" and that during their talks "we solved problems that may have needed 16 months of negotiations to solve."

Begin did not reveal these agreements, saying he would report them today to his cabinet and parliament.

Begin's trip at first had all the airs of a stiff, ceremonial state call. But when he and Sadat met, their exhuberance transformed the visit into a session that produced fresh and significant results, quickening the pace of contact between the two former enemies.

After a 50-minute talk, the two leaders announced they would meet again May 27 in El Arish, the Sinai capital Israel has agreed to vacate prior to a total withdrawal from the peninsula.

When asked after the talks if he were satisfied, Sadat replied, "I am more than satisfied."

Israel will relinquish El Arish in Sadat's presence one day before their meeting, Begin said. He added that they will declare an open border at the meeting and discuss opening an air corridor as well.

On the same day Sadat and Begin will helicopter to the Israeli town of Beersheba, 60 miles to the east in the Negev Desert, Begin told reporters.

Begin and Sadat said they would telephone President Carter to inform him of the latest developments in the peace process, set out under the treaty Carter helped wrap up last month.

The meetings were believed aimed at boosting the upcoming negotiations on autonomy for the 1.1 million Palestinians living in the Israeli-held West Bank and Gaza Strip. These talks are initially between Israel and Egypt, but open to Jordan and the Palestinians if they wish to join.

The West Bank was Jordanian territory prior to the 1967 Mideast War. Jordan and the Palestinians have expressed vehement opposition to the peace treaty and have rejected taking part in the autonomy talks.

The Arab League voted over the weekend to punish Egypt for signing the treaty by breaking most political and economic ties with Egypt. A number of Arab ambassadors hurried to leave Cairo before Begin's arrival, which may have prompted the coldness initially marking Begin's trip.

But clearly the atmosphere warmed as Begin traveled around Cairo, laying a wreath in honor of Egypt's war dead, clambering up part of a pyramid and expressing wonder at the treasures in Egypt's national museum.

Begin took pains to show respect for Sadat. As the two faced reporters Monday, Begin said in Hebrew, "All honors to President Sadat." When this was translated into Arabic, Sadat looked genuinely pleased.

At the start of Begin's 28-hour stay, the Egyptian media played down the visit, and consequently no crowds turned out to welcome him. But following a state dinner where Begin and Sadat met, the prime minister got banner headlines and thousands gathered behind thick police cordons to wave at his motorcade, plowing through Cairo's traffic-choked streets.

Although he is 65 and has a weak heart, Begin jauntily braved the 105-degree temperatures to stay outside and chat with Egyptian reporters, but he dodged all political questions. "Don't put me on the hot spot, please, I'm having a vacation," he joked.

A series of talks starting next week were decided upon to keep up an image of momentum in the peace process, Egyptian and Israeli officials said.

After Egypt's parliament ratifies the pact, Foreign Affairs Minister Butros Ghali flies to Jerusalem next week with the Egyptian text of the peace treaty and his Israeli counterpart Moshe Dayan will go to Cairo with the Hebrew version.

Couple To Have Blind Deer Returned

WEST BEND, Wis. (UPI) — Prancer, the blind deer, is in no danger of being put to death and probably will be returned to Nancy and James Nass, the couple who raised him from a fawn, authorities said Tuesday.

No consideration is being given to the possibility the animal might have to be destroyed, said Wilber Stites, information officer for the Department of Natural Resources' southeast district office at Milwaukee.

He said officials of his agency were working with the Nasses to help them build a state-approved enclosure and to obtain a game farm license, which costs $25.

"When we took the deer, there was a comment at that time that, if someone wasn't able to provide for the animal, that perhaps we would have to destroy it," said Stites. "But that was way back in the beginning. Since that time there hasn't been any consideration of that at all."

He also discounted fears the Nasses might not be approved for a game farm license because of their earlier actions.

"They had the deer illegally and there was consideration that perhaps they wouldn't be able to meet the requirements to keep the deer, but they can. It is all worked out," he said.

"We gave them a deadline of June 15. We figure that's a good long time. We discussed it with them and they said they certainly should have it completed and ready by that time," he said.

"If it should turn out they can't have it ready by June 15, we're not going to be hard and fast on that either. We feel we had to have some kind of deadline. We can't just let it go on forever."

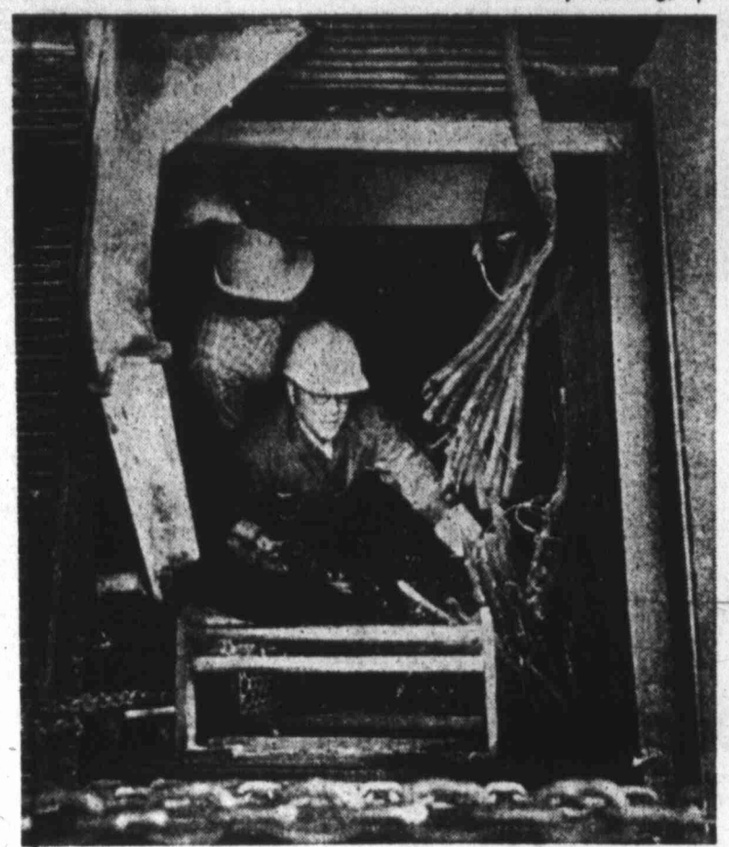

Prancer was taken from the Nasses in mid-February because they didn't have the proper permits and facilities. The Nasses cared for the deer for more than eight months before the DNR confiscated the animal.

Phyllis Cook, head of the Washington County Humane Society at nearby Slinger, also has started a fund drive to raise the $3,000 needed by the Nasses to build a proper enclosure.

BLASTED MANHOLE — Boston Edison Company workers inside blasted manhole in downtown Boston Tuesday labored to repair the damage caused after explosions and fires erupted. Stores were darkened and traffic knotted around deadened traffic lights. It was the third time in 36 hours that electric power failed in the area. (AP Laserphoto)

Lights Go Out Again In Boston Suburb

BOSTON (AP) — The lights went out again Tuesday for about 30,000 residents of the trendy Back Bay neighborhood and officials said it may be another day before power is restored.

A third blackout in three days cramped the bustling style of this urban enclave, which one wag dubbed "Black Bay." Elevators were stuck, apartments were dark, refrigerators were dripping, many shops were closed and grocers were worried about piles of food going bad.

A Boston Edison spokesman said the latest blackout, which struck about 10 a.m., probably would continue until Wednesday morning while linemen wrestled with fire-damaged, overloaded cables.

"We think the power will go back on and stay on," said Edison spokesman Stephen Sweeney.

Meanwhile, the densely packed neighborhood of stylish shops, posh hotels and expensive apartments made do with warm drinks, cold showers and breathless treks up seldom-used stairs.

At the elegant Copley Plaza Hotel, set ablaze last week by an arsonist, doormen used flashlights to escort guests through the cave-dark marble halls.

The trouble began Sunday noon, when a fire in a manhole burned up four of the 18 main cables that feed the Back Bay's high rises and elegant Victorian townhouses.

When utility workers tried to turn the electricity back on later that day, overloads caused by the fire touched off more short circuits and blazes in secondary lines that lead to transformers, the utility said.

Power finally returned Monday morning, but it went off again that night. And when Boston Edison tentatively switched it back on Tuesday morning, smoke again belched from manhole covers.

Sweeney said that because so much of the system was damaged by fires, it could not sustain the tremendous electrical demands of the neighborhood when the power was turned on.

Officials said contributing factors to the initial explosions and blackout could have been recent rain that flooded the manholes and the age of the cables themselves.

Most power lines are about 30 years old, and have a life expectancy of 30 to 40 years.

Mayor Kevin H. White said he would meet with Police Commissioner Joseph Jordan to review the situation.

Many shops were closed, but a few tried to conduct business by candle light.

On Boylston Street, the Paperback Booksmith discouraged light-fingered browsers with a sign on the door that read: "If you know exactly what you want, knock and we'll get it for you."

At the Cafe Vendome, lunchers congregated at tables near the windows.

"My TV is out. My radio is out. I don't even know what time it is," complained John Wright, 32, a Back Bay resident.

But like most neighborhood people, he coped with the nuisance with good humor.

"I've kind of enjoyed the peace and quiet," he said. "I always wondered what it was like before electricity was invented. I'm almost getting used to it."

Pill Users' Mortality Rate Study Questioned

NEW YORK (AP) — New statistical studies disclosed Tuesday "cast serious doubt" on the validity of British studies which said women who have used oral contraceptives are about four times more likely to die of cardiovascular diseases.

One new study also challenged a British study that applied those findings to 21 other countries, including the United States, Japan, Australia, New Zealand and most of Europe.

The authors of the new studies cautioned, however, that their findings do not mean there is no risk at all associated with use of oral contraceptives, but that the risk has been exaggerated and is affected by age, smoking and obesity, not "the pill" alone.

In late 1977, the British medical journal The Lancet carried a report from the Royal College of General Practitioners' pill study conducted over eight years. It was based on 24 deaths from heart attacks, strokes and other cardiovascular diseases among 23,000 pill users and a control group.

The finding of high levels of risk was accepted by many members of the medical profession, according to Christopher Tietze, biostatistician for The Population Council, who said he himself accepted it.

Now Tietze has analyzed U.S. vital statistics on death rates from cardiovascular disease of men and women aged 15-44 from 1950 to 1976 and concluded:

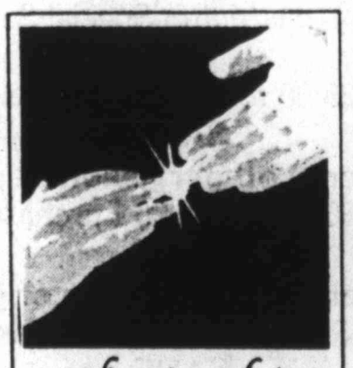

"Analysis of U.S. mortality statistics shows that since adoption of the pill, deaths among women of reproductive age from cardiovascular diseases have declined much more rapidly than have deaths rates for comparable men. This suggests that the high levels of risk of death from such diseases associated with pill use in other studies are exaggerated."

Tietze, in his report in Family Planning Perspectives, suggests that the fault in the Royal College study lies in the small number of deaths it is based on — 16 among pill users, eight among former users and five among controls.

In another study, Mark A. Belsey and colleagues at the World Health Organization in Geneva re-examined the vital statistics from the 21 countries and failed to find an association between pill use and heart deaths.

Belsey's analysis of the mortality data was described as "more sophisticated" than the British study in an announcement by The Alan Guttmacher Institute, which publishes Family Planning Perspectives.

Unlike the earlier report, Belsey said, the new study used data from all years available, dealt with marked population differences and different age groups, among other things.

Neighbor Woman's Diary Recounts Fearful Days Near N-Plant

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (AP) — Side by side with the first green buds of spring, black radiation meters hang on Holly Garnish's shrubbery, a quarter-mile from Three Mile Island.

As a girl, she hunted Indian relics on the island that now houses two nuclear generators.

"I wonder if people walking on that island a 100 years from now will be picking up things from this," the mother of two said Tuesday.

Last Wednesday, a thunderous blast of steam from a blow-off valve loud enough "to shake you out of bed" awoke the Garnishes in the fashionable home they say cost them $30,000 less than normal because of where it lies.

For the next seven dread-filled days, the Garnishes sat tight, as more than 50,000 other Pennsylvanians fled the threat of radiation, hydrogen explosions and meltdown.

"(The children) are so afraid," Mrs. Garnish wrote in a hastily started diary. "Have I been responsible?"

But the Garnishes stuck by their decision not to split up their family or leave behind friends, relatives and most of their belongings.

"If the worst happened, I cannot picture leaving the things we know and love behind barbed wire, guarded from us for decades," Mrs. Garnish said in the diary, which she read to a reporter.

On Tuesday, Mrs. Garnish glumly announced she was celebrating her 32nd birthday, not at all cheered by news that a dangerous hydrogen bubble was shrinking within the reactor, and that the reactor temperature was decreasing.

"I'll believe it when they finally shut down that reactor," she said. She shrugs off "as a pacifier" the daily radiation readings that a Nuclear Regulatory Commission technician gives them from the shrubbery dosimeters.

"That's not pertinent to the bigger problems at the plant," she said.

Then why does she stay?

"We've already had friends who had to come back. They ran out of money and were stuck. Do you stay away indefinitely?" she said.

"It's almost a compulsion. I feel I'm a part of this. Relatives are here, my friends are here, men who are working at the plant.

"I'm sure people who see in a newscast that I'm staying will wonder. I know, I've done it myself. I've seen some old man saying, 'I won't go,' and I'd say, 'That dumb bastard, he deserves what he gets.'

"But you just don't know unless you're in that person's shoes."

Mrs. Garnish started her emotional diary on March 29 after she first learned of a possible meltdown from a youth who was jogging down her street.

She wrote: "God, don't let it happen."

April 1: "Kids are bordering on panic. I don't know what to think. The president and governor assure us of safety, but the media stresses fact not all is good. I can't seem to pray, leave it in God's hands.

"Suitcases are neatly packed. The puppy fell and had X-ray of paw. I could have taken him outside and done it myself."

April 2: "Yes, looks better. Bubble reduce, they say. Rumors still circulating ... Should we celebrate? No, too soon.

"I'm 32 today ... If we don't force ourselves to look at what could have happened, we will forget, forgive and go on, and then one day, it must assuredly happen."

House Passes Proposal For Sale Of Tin

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House passed legislation Tuesday to sell tin from the national defense stockpile, which would turn a rare profit for the government.

On a 371-16 vote the House sent the bill to the Senate.

Rep. Charles E. Bennett, D-Fla., the manager of the bill, said the 35,000 long tons which would be put on the market represents a surplus of the tin needed for national defense at a time of war.

The tin was purchased at an average price of $1.08 per pound. A recent price was $6.84. The potential profit would be about $451 million. The revenue would be deposited in a special fund for purchase of stockpile commodities which are below levels set by law.

Congressmen from copper-producing states have urged that the tin sales revenue be used to purchase copper, a move that would increase the price for that metal.

Bennett said the General Services Administration would attempt to avoid market disruptions in selling off the tin, which is a major export for such developing nations as Bolivia.

Silkwood Estate Rests Case In Nuclear Contamination Trial

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The first phase of the $11.5 million Karen Silkwood plutonium contamination trial ended Tuesday after an emotional appearance by Miss Silkwood's mother.

Merle Silkwood, 52, of Nederland said her daughter was "a perfect child" who was interested in bettering herself and helping others.

Earlier, Rosemary Porter, 26, of Beaumont, one of Karen Silkwood's younger sisters, testified that Miss Silkwood, frightened and hysterical, said she wanted to quit her job with the Kerr-McGee Corp. and believed she would be dead in five years.

Miss Silkwood's mother testified that during several telephone calls the last week and a half Karen Silkwood was alive, she was nervous, upset and concerned about her health.

Mrs. Silkwood said her daughter told her she was coming home soon and did not want her parents to come to Oklahoma.

"She told me there wasn't anything you could do if a person is exposed to radiation," Mrs. Silkwood said. "She said there is no cure."

About four days before she died in a Nov. 13, 1974, auto crash, Miss Silkwood had calmed down some, Mrs. Silkwood testified. She added: "But I could tell from her voice something was wrong she wasn't telling me."

On cross-examination, Mrs. Silkwood denied Kerr-McGee lawyer Elliott Fenton's assertion her daughter was moody and depressed because of a 1972 divorce.

Mrs. Porter testified about several telephone calls she received from her sister in the week before her death.

"She was scared, very scared," Mrs. Porter said. "... She wouldn't tell me anything over the phone, she said she couldn't. She said something was happening to her," Mrs. Porter testified.

The Silkwood estate, which rested its case Tuesday, is suing the Kerr-McGee Corp. and a subsidiary for $11.5 million in damages, alleging negligence in connection with Miss Silkwood's plutonium contamination.

Kerr-McGee contends Miss Silkwood contaminated herself, possibly to dramatize claims about working conditions at its nuclear fuel plant where she was a lab technician.

Witnesses testified Karen Silkwood had proof of company falsification of nuclear reactor fuel rod quality control reports at the time of her death. The documentation has never surfaced, however.

Another sister, Linda Silkwood, 20, of Nederland appeared near tears as she described her oldest sister as "a very caring and loving person" and said she wasn't surprised her sister became concerned about the health and safety of her co-workers.

U.S. District Judge Frank G. Theis allowed a scrapbook compiled by Linda Silkwood to be introduced into evidence, but admonished jurors not to be influenced by its potential sentimental impact.

During a brief appearance on the stand, the womens' father, Bill Silkwood, 54, said Karen Silkwood's three minor children are the sole heirs to her estate.

Pair Sentenced In Tax Fraud Case

Two defendants in a federal tax fraud case involving a total of 26 defendants were given penitentiary sentences Tuesday.

Robert W. Thompson and Kathy P. Glass, both of Big Spring, were sentenced to six months in prison and 12 and 18 months' probation respectively.

The 26 were indicted in January by a Lubbock federal grand jury; 24 have pleaded guilty to various charges to date.

Thompson pleaded guilty to filing a fradulent 1975 income tax return in Snyder and claiming a refund. Mrs. Glass pleaded guilty to possession of stolen mail.

Kidnapped Girl Returned To Family

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The kidnapped teen-aged daughter of a Mexico City industrialist was returned unharmed to her elegant suburban home Tuesday, seven days after she was abducted on her way to school, police said.

Monica Perez Olagaray, 15, later told newsmen and a live television audience she was treated well during her ordeal. "But I never saw my kidnappers because my eyes were always blindfolded," she said.

Her father, Javier Perez Olagaray, owner of Fandelli Abrasives Co., attempted to drop $1 million cash ransom at a meeting at the national university last Friday but police were tipped by family members.

Federal agents, with guns ablaze, burst from hiding places in a parking lot on the university campus. In the gun battle, a police officer and an alleged kidnapper were killed. Ten others were injured.

Police said later the dead man was a wanted bank robber and ringleader of the "23rd of September Communist League," a guerrilla group that takes its name from a shootout over a decade ago at a northern Mexico army barracks.

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Academy of Sciences, in an unusual display of independence, has refused to accept a protege of President Leonid I. Brezhnev as a full member.

Sergei P. Trapeznikov, chief of the Communist Party's apparatus for overseeing Soviet science and education, didn't make it as an academician.

However, during the same recent top level meeting, the academy bowed to party supervision by adopting a new regulation automatically expelling from its ranks any scientist officially stripped of his Soviet citizenship for political reasons.

This means the immediate loss of corresponding-member status by Benjamin Levich, a prominent Jewish chemist who emigrated to Israel late last year. In the future, the new rule also might be used against dissident leader Andrei D. Sakharov, still a full member of the Academy of Sciences.

Sakharov, a Nobel Peace Prize winner, said he himself cast the only vote against adoption of the new regulation on expulsion from the academy — a move that marks a break from the tradition of membership for life.

It could also be used to strip Sakharov of his academician rank if the dissident nuclear physicist — once highly acclaimed in official circles for his work on the Soviet hydrogen bomb — is compelled to leave the Soviet Union.

Western scientific observers say the contrasting decisions illustrate the fine line which the academy often has to follow — between ideological control and scientific integrity — as it seeks to maintain its major role in Soviet intellectual life.

The Soviet Academy of Sciences has been described as the largest and most important unified scientific institution in any country around the globe.

At the top, it has about 250 full members — academicians — and 450 corresponding or associate members. But on an operational level, the academy sets basic guidelines and provides funding for 40,000 researchers at 250 institutes throughout the Soviet Union.

The latest demonstration of the Soviet academy's traditional aloofness from full party control came at a meeting during which 23 new academicians and 83 corresponding members were elected.

Among the corresponding members nominated for elevation to the rank of academician was the 67-year-old Trapeznikov, who has served since 1965 as chief of the party Central Committee's department for science and educational institutions.

A long-time protege of Brezhnev, Trapeznikov in 1948-56 headed the Communist Party's higher school in Soviet Moldavia while Brezhnev was advancing his own career there as the republic's party first secretary.

Trapeznikov did not get elected to the Academy of Sciences as a corresponding member until 1976, after three unsuccessful bids.

According to Sakharov, who was present at the election meeting March 15, Trapeznikov received 137 votes from the 212 academicians voting — and thus fell four votes short of the two-thirds majority needed to accept him as a full member.

A Western scientific observer in Moscow, who declined to be identified, commented later: "The fact that a man of his powerful political position didn't make it is rather interesting. There was no doubt some pretty strong lobbying, but apparently it wasn't enough.

"The message that comes out of it is that by Soviet standards, the academicians are reasonably independent," the source said.

Tire-Slashing Spree Plagues Apartment Residents

Four residents of a Fifth Street apartment complex and a man who had parked his vehicle in the apartment's parking lot Monday night fell prey to tire-slashing vandals.

Tierney E. Goode of 2107 Fifth St., No. 13, and her roommate, Naci R. Lane, reported that vandals had slashed a rear tire on each of their cars. Both women said it would cost about $50 to replace the tires.

Walter L. Barfield, who lives in No. 14 at the complex, said the tire punctured on his 1973 Chevrolet Nova would cost $60 to replace, and David J. Dixon of No. 3 said a $75 tire on his 1974 Nova was slashed.

Robert Seth Williams of 2102 18th St. told police he had parked his 1973 Pontiac in the apartment complex lot about midnight and that when he returned to the vehicle at 8:30 a.m. Tuesday, a tire had been slashed. He set his loss at $50.

Elsewhere, burglars who kicked in the back door of Steve J. Frehulfer's 2413 23rd St. residence Monday made off with $4,500 in property, according to police reports. Frehulfer said the break-in occurred between 10:15 a.m. and 2 p.m. Monday and the intruders took stereo equipment, a television and a trumpet.

Phil G. Drake said a $150 CB radio and $450 camera and attachments were stolen from his car Monday night while it was parked in the driveway of his 1327 48th St. home.

A department store clerk said two bandits, one wielding a knife, tried to rob her of her purse as she was getting off work from the South Plains Mall shortly before 9 p.m. Monday.

Dorothy Fay McClennan, 56, an employee of Hemphill-Wells Department Store at the mall, 6200 Slide Road, said, however, that she screamed, scaring off the young would-be robbers.

She said she was leaving the store when a young man ran up behind her, pulled out a knife and instructed her to hand over her purse. Mrs. McClennan said she did not get a good look at the armed bandit's companion.

Reports indicate the knife-wielder threatened to cut her when she refused to relinquish her purse. She said she screamed, and the suspects ran off after seeing two men walking toward them.

The young bandits ran east, jumped in a car and drove north.

Police Tuesday were looking for two black men who allegedly broke into several vending machines at Methodist Hospital. Gene Roberts, general manager of B&M Vending Co., told police damage to the machines and change taken from them would total about $1,400.

A witness told police he was entering the room where the machines are located about 1 a.m. Tuesday when he saw the men running out. One of the men reportedly dropped a coin box, sending change flying.

Police believe a crowbar was used to pry open the coin-operated machines. Both suspects were described as between 18 and 25 years old and under 6 feet tall.

One of the suspects was said to be thin, with his hair in pigtails and corn rows. The other man was about 5 feet 10 inches tall and had a medium build.

Police investigating a hit and run accident about 10 p.m. Monday in the 2600-block of 78th Street were led to a nearby house where they confronted a man suspected of being involved in the accident, and then leaving the scene.

Police said they followed a trail of fluid from the accident site to the residence where a car appearing to have been in a recent collision was parked in the driveway.

Reports indicate that when the 36-year-old man came to the front door and was asked by officers if he was involved in the mishap, he replied, "I want to see my lawyers."

When the suspect was told he would have to go with officers to the accident site, the man reportedly became violent and resisted. After a brief struggle with police, the man was dragged to the patrol car and transported to the county jail.

Burial will be in City of Lubbock Cemetery under the direction of Carmichael-Whatley Funeral Home of Pampa.

A long time resident of Lubbock, he moved to Pampa in 1972 and was a member and deacon of First Baptsit Church.

He married Bessie Sumner on Dec. 27, 1909 in Slide.

Survivors include his wife; three brothers, T.F. of Fresno, Calif., M.E. of Clovis, N.M. and M.A. of Austin; two sisters, Mrs. Belle Smith and Mrs. DeAlva Stephenson, both of Lemoore, Calif.; and five grandchildren.

Brewster Dillard

Services for Brewster E. Dillard, 67, of 1211 16th St. will be at 2 p.m. Thursday in Sanders Memorial Chapel with Horace Coffman, minister of Broadway Church of Christ, officiating.

Burial will be in City of Lubbock Cemetery under direction of Sanders Funeral Home.

Dillard died about 1:30 p.m. Tuesday at his home. Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack ruled the death was of natural causes.

Dillard was a retired restaurant operator.

Survivors include his wife, Mildred; two stepdaughters, Sharon Morrow of Lubbock and Karen Dopita of Odessa; three stepsons, Pat Agee of Lubbock, David Agee of Fort Worth and Mike Agee of Bakersfield, Calif.; a sister, Mrs. T.S. Whitis of Amarillo; and nine stepgrandchildren.

M. Goodpasture

LEESBURG, Va. (Special) — Services for Maurice Goodpasture, 60, of Leesburg, Va., and formerly of Levelland will be at 8 a.m CST today in the Fort Myer, Va., Chapel at Arlington National Cemetery. A U.S. Navy chaplain will officiate.

Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery under the direction of Ives Funeral Home of Arlington, Va.

Goodpasture was killed Sunday night in an automobile accident in Leesburg.

Reared in Levelland, he graduated from Texas Tech University in 1941. He married the former Dapheene Hutchins of Lubbock Feb. 11, 1942, in Lubbock.

Goodpasture earned a law degree from George Washington University in 1948 and was commissioned in the U.S. Marine Corps in 1941. He retired from the Marine Corps as a lieutenant colonel in 1961.

While serving in the Marine Corps he was decorated with a Bronze Star, a Presidential Unit Citation and Navy Commendation Medal. He served during the Korean War.

Goodpasture had been an attorney in private practice since retiring from the Marine Corps.

Survivors include his wife; two sons, John Goodpasture of Severen, Md., and Alan Goodpasture of Myrtle Beach, S.C.; a daughter, Lora of Los Angeles, Calif.; two brothers, John H. Goodpasture Jr. and C.L. Goodpasture, both of Lubbock; and a grandson.

Lena H. Havins

SPUR (Special) — Services for Lena Hunnicutt Havins, 84, of Spur will be at 2 p.m. Thursday at Spur First Baptist Church with the Rev. Norris Taylor, pastor, officiating.

Burial will be in Spur Cemetery under direction of Campbell Funeral Home.

Mrs. Havins died at 1:50 p.m. Tuesday in Lubbock's Methodist Hospital.

The Comanche County native moved to Kent County in 1901. She married T.S. Havins Jan. 28, 1915, in Jayton. Her husband died July 18, 1974.

Mrs. Havins moved to Dickens County in 1947 and had lived in Spur since 1973. She was a member of Spur First Baptist Church.

Survivors include two daughters, Mrs. Edwin Flood of Amarillo and Mrs. Wayne Bateman of Houston; a son, Troy of Brownfield; a brother, Tom Hunnicutt of Girard; nine grandchildren, and 14 great-grandchildren.

EDITH SCARBROUGH

Edith Scarbrough

LORENZO (Special) — Services for Edith Scarbrough, 63, of Lorenzo will be at 2 p.m. Thursday in the First Baptist Church here with the Rev. Bill Lacy, pastor, officiating, and the Rev. John Rankin assisting.

Burial will be in Lorenzo Cemetery under the direction of Carter-Adams Funeral Home.

Mrs. Scarbrough died Tuesday morning in Methodist Hospital after a long illness. She had been a dialysis patient at the South Plains Dialysis Center for the past five years.

Born in Gertie, Okla., she moved to the South Plains from Wellington 47 years ago. She married J.O. Scarbrough Feb. 6, 1932, in Hollis, Okla. She was a member of the First Baptist Church of Lorenzo.

Survivors include her husband; four sons, Billy Joe of Lorenzo, Edward of Wolfforth, Carroll of Lewisville, Ark., and Ronald of Grassland; a daughter, Delores Jennings of Lorenzo; two brothers, Hudson Lee of Coulterville, Calif. and Morris Lee of Lorenzo; three sisters, Agnes Akers of Coolidge, Ariz., Mary Hoofman of Riverbank, Calif., and Willie Beck of Modesto, Calif.; 18 grandchildren; and three great-grandchildren.

Rites Pending For Former Health Official

Services for Dr. David M. Cowgill, 84, of 2102 65th St. are pending with Sanders Funeral Home.

He died Monday night in Methodist Hospital's emergency room after a sudden illness.

Cowgill became director of the Lubbock City-County Health Department in Jaunary 1961 and served until his retirement in December 1977.

A native of Topeka, Kan., he received a bachelor of science degree from Washburn College, a doctorate in medicine from Washington University and a master of public health degree from the John Hopkins School of Public Health.

A veteran of World War I, he was associated with health departments at Newkirk, Okla.; St. Louis, Mo.; Madisonville and Pulaski, Tenn.; Anchorage, Alaska; Eau Claire, Wis.; Amarillo, Brownfield, San Antonio, and San Benito.

He was a fellow of the American College of Preventive Medicine; a past president of the Texas Association of Public Health Physicians (1958); secretary of the Five-County (South Plains) Medical Society (1954); and a vice president of the Texas Public Health Association (1956) and the Mexico-Border Public Health Association.

Cowgill was an elder of the First Christian Church.

Survivors include his wife, Grace; and two grandchildren.

TOKYO (AP) — The Peking Daily newspaper has criticized some Chinese young people who are too choosy about what kind of work they will do and others who engage in "hooliganism, thefts and fighting." The article, broadcast Tuesday by Xinhua (Hsinhua), the official Chinese news agency and monitored here, said that only a small number of young people were like that, but those who were had to learn that "anarchism is not socialism" and that "the creation of a happy life lies in their own work."

Nuclear Energy Jeopardized By Mishap In Pennsylvania

By The Associated Press

Debate ignited by the nuclear mishap at Three Mile Island grew louder Tuesday with the future of America's energy program clearly at stake.

At issue was whether this country's 72 nuclear plants are "accidents waiting to happen," as one protest group put it during a demonstration at Indian Point in upstate New York.

Another group, about 100 members of the Emergency Anti-Nuclear Coalition, disrupted a meeting of the Seattle City Council with their demands that nuclear plants be shut down.

And in Virginia, the Louisa County Board of Supervisors voted to install a siren system to warn nearby residents in case of an emergency at the North Anna nuclear power plant.

While lawmakers in several states were broaching the problem in their own backyards, U.S. Rep. James Jeffords, R-Vt., Tuesday introduced legislation in the House calling for a moratorium on construction and licensing of new plants.

According to industry spokesmen, 96 atomic generating plants are now under construction. Thirty more are on the drawing board.

Calling this country's present approach to nuclear power "sheer madness," Jeffords proposed that a special commission be appointed by Congress to review all health and safety questions related to nuclear generating plants, a study he said would take about two years.

Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger Monday urged that Congress act to speed up licensing reactors to reduce the country's heavy dependency on Mideast oil.

"It's a question of trading Iran off against Three Mile Island," he said.

The psychological effect on local residents, mental health experts say, was the only serious health problem growing out of the incident at Three Mile Island, where a reactor went haywire last Wednesday and started leaking low-level radiation.

But reactions have ranged from the fears expressed by a small town shopkeeper in Maryland, not far from the Pennsylvania line, to the comments from one expert who compared the exposure in Harrisburg to living in Denver for a year.

Mary Ellen Getz, a store owner in Freeland, Md., said she was worried about the wind blowing radioactive particles into her town. She remembers the Dust Bowl of the 1930s, which obscured the skies over Maryland.

"It was very strange," she said. "If the wind can bring earth from Kansas to Maryland, who can tell what's going to happen. We're at God's mercy."

Washington Gov. Dixy Lee Ray, a former chairman of the now-defunct Atomic Energy Commission, proposed that the federal government create "an elite corps of licensed operators" to run the nation's nuclear power plants with less chance of human error.

"It is a new technology — an unforgiving technology," she said Monday, adding that in the mid-1970s she was unsuccessful in trying to persuade the AEC and Congress to confine nuclear plants to reservations, like the Hanford Reservation in Washington state.

But the governor added that she doesn't think the Pennsylvania accident warrants the public outcry it has generated.

"Fear is always unreasoned and usually based on ignorance," she said. "Those who have have had exposure in and around the Three Mile Island have gotten about as much radiation as they would get if they moved to Colorado and lived there for a year, or if they got a set of tooth X-rays.

In the meantime, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission has ordered seven nuclear plants in five states that use Babcock & Wilcox equipment similar to that that broke down in Harrisburg, Pa., to run a safety check and report their findings within days.

They include one at the Oconee Nuclear Station in South Carolina, which is older than the Three Mile Island plant.

Dick Pierce, a spokesman for Duke Power Co., operators of the South Carolina plant, Tuesday defended Babcock & Wilcox as a "fine company."

"They've been building huge boilers and things of that nature for nearly 100 years," he said. "They've built a great many of the coal-burning stations in this country.

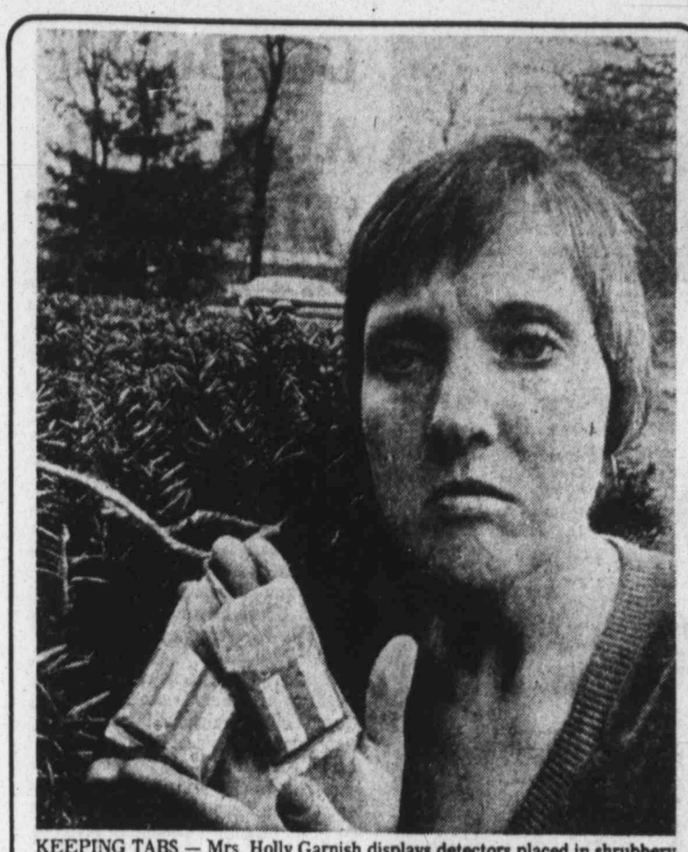

"They just had some bad luck."

— Alabama officials postponed plans to announce that Westinghouse Electric Corp. will build a nuclear fuel manufacturing plant near Prattville, just north of Mobile. A full legislative inquiry is planned into what control the state can assume over nuclear plants.

— The Georgia Public Service Commission postponed action on a citizen group's demand for a moratorium on nuclear facilities.

Three Mile Radiation Not New To Denver

By The Associated Press

If no further radiation is released from the Three Mile Island plant, neighbors of the plant will get about the same radiation exposure this year as residents of Denver get year in and year out.

Nevertheless, some scientists who study low-level radiation think the releases may have serious long-term health effects, including cancer and genetic damage.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission said releases from the plant were all but halted on Monday, five days after the reactor failed.

NRC officials have estimated the total maximum dose that someone living near the plant might have received so far probably will fall under 100 millirems. A millirem is one-thousandth of a rem, a standard unit of absorbed radiation.

Natural background radiation in the southern Pennsylvania farmland area is from 64 millirems to 80 millirems, according to NRC Operations Chief Harold Denton. Thus, the most-exposed neighbor might accumulate a dose of 180 millirems this year.

Denver residents get about 200 millirems a year because their mile-high altitude gives them less atmospheric protection from cosmic rays, a major source of background radiation.

The average background in the United States, according to the Environmental Protection Agency, is around 105 millirems a year. But it varies from place to place.

People in the state of Washington get about 110 millirems a year on the average. Figures for other states include: California, 90; Florida and the District of Columbia, 95; Pennsylvania, 100; New York, 110; Maine and Nevada, 125; Nebraska, 130; and Colorado, 225.

Even the four workers at Three Mile Island who received more than their three rem quarterly limit by March 31 were able to go back to work April 1 because a new quarter had started, a company spokesman said. None of the men were physically sick since it takes a one-time exposure of 100 rems or more to produce radiation sickness.

Denton has said the odds are 5-1 against even one person dying from cancer as a result of the accident.

Another concern was whether releases from the plant included radioactive isotopes that could stick in the food chain. Gov. Dick Thornburgh issued a statement Tuesday saying extremely low levels of radioactive iodine 131 had been detected in milk from dairy farms near the plant.

Nuclear Contamination Said Not Food Factor

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Are Hershey bars safe? What about milk? Meat? Poultry? Eggs?

All the foodstuffs being produced in the area near Three Mile Island are free of dangerous contamination, despite the radiation that escaped from a disabled atomic power plant, officials reported Tuesday.

"There is no present danger to consumers from milk," said Gov. Dick Thornburgh about samples taken from 22 dairy farms. He denounced "the many sensational reports and unfounded rumors" that have surfaced about radioactive food.

Approximately 1,100 food, drug and animal food factories, which ship their product across state lines, are located within 20 miles of Three Mile Island. They are constantly being spot-tested by the federal Food and Drug Administration.

"All are safe," said Wayne Pine, an FDA spokesman. "We have not asked any of the plants to shut down."

Four meat packing plants in Elizabethtown, about five miles from the radioactive atomic reactor, were closed over the weekend by the U.S. Agriculture Department "strictly as a precautionary measure." But they've reopened, and are slaughtering again.

Robert Norton, an Agriculture Department spokesman, said the four plants temporarily were asked not to bring in any new livestock, and to temporarily hold the slaughtered product until the situation stabilizes.

"We will continue to monitor it," Norton said. "Down the long road we are going to be concerned about the potential of residues in the pastures, feed and water that ultimately might turn up in meat."

Thornburgh centered his attention on milk, which is most vulnerable to radioactive iodine that settles on the ground and is ingested by the cows. Milk is used in the production of most foods.

"Levels ranged from 11 to 46 picocuries per liter in samples," the governor said. "Federal standards suggest 12,000 picocuries per liter as the threshold at which regulatory protective measures should be initiated. Obviously, the levels found in milk do not even begin to approach that level." In fact, Thornburgh noted that the last radioactive scare in Pennsylvania, caused by excessive fallout from the 1976 Chinese atomic bomb tests, produced levels of around 300 picocuries "and no precautionary measures were deemed necessary."

In the meantime, Hershey Foods, which makes America's most popular chocolate bar in its factories 10 miles from the stricken reactor, said, "There is no radiation in our product."

"We are sampling all incoming raw materials such as milk, cocoa beans, sugar and peanuts and everything is fine," said Hershey spokesman James Edris. "We have found no increased radiation levels in the vicinity of the plant."

Hershey is one of the biggest users of milk in the United States, handling roughly one million pounds daily which is equivalent to more than 600,000 quarts.

Edris said that all the milk it is getting from its farmers now is being converted into powder "until the present emergency is over."

"There is still the possibility of an evacuation, which would include us, and if we had to shut our plant we don't want to have 150,000 gallons of fresh milk go sour."

Reactor Area Residents Returning, But Slowly

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — As word spread of progress in containing the danger at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant, relieved residents began ending their self-imposed exile Tuesday to return to homes and jobs they had fled in fear.

Thousands — estimates ranged from 80,000 to 250,000 — had evacuated their homes after the accident last Wednesday that crippled the nuclear facility and spewed radioactivity into the air.

But with the danger apparently waning, they were returning — slowly. And the run on area banks by customers seeking funds in case of an evacuation had ended by Tuesday.

Roman Catholic schools in the area reopened Tuesday and officials planned to resume classes today at all public schools except those within a five-mile circle of the plant. All schools within 10 miles of the facility — and some beyond — had been closed since Friday.

But while some private and public employees started returning to their jobs, abnormal absenteeism continued and businessmen were talking of a financial disaster in the millions of dollars.

"The economic loss currently is substantial and will continue to grow," said Matthew Douglas, president of the Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce. "I'm sure the loss will be astronomical, in the millions."

In the capitol, where it was business as usual, 30 percent of the state's 22,000 employees failed to show up for work. Absenteeism dropped to 20 percent Tuesday, compared to a normal rate of 10 percent.

J.E. Krug, manager of a large Sears, Roebuck and Co. department store here, reported 25 percent of his employees absent on Monday. Twenty-four hours later, he said: "People who we haven't seen for a couple of days are back. There also appears to be more customers in the store now than there were at this time yesterday."

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is no time to let youself feel abused by any sort of condition that does not work out to your satisfaction. Keep objectives in view and do nothing that anyone else could take exception to.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Don't stir up trouble at home by bringing up moot points, but try to please kin more. Avoid one who has an eye on your assets. Home is best bet this evening.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Use care in motion whether indoors or outdoors, walking, driving. Try not to criticize regular associates and keep poised, peaceful. Spend evening quietly at home.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You think you could better a situation by spending extra money, but it could only make things worse for you. Build up your savings account for some possible needs later.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You think you are not getting a fair shake in life, but keep this to yourself, since you get little sympathy from others. Evening is fine for social fun, but don't spend unwisely.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You feel frustrated about situations you can do little about, so be sure you maintain equilibrium or you make matters worse. Consult a good adviser and you solve a vexing problem wisely tomorrow.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Treat friends with kid gloves today, since atmospheric conditions have them all feeling irritated. Avoid group meetings if you can.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't jeopardize reputation in any way or you get into trouble with one who has power over you. Show admiration for a bigwig instead of trying to criticize. Be careful with credit.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have new ideas that need further study before putting them in operation. Avoid one whose experience is radically different from your own. Take more interest in civic affairs.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Make sure you carry through with obligations at hand and get them out of the way quickly. Not a good day to have a heart-to-heart talk with mate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Do nothing that can irk an associate or you soon lose him. Get into civic work that will build your reputation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have problems at work that seem difficult to solve, but objective thinking will do so easily. Try not to criticize coworkers and get more cooperation from them.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20) Take care you do not spend too much money for anything today or tonight. Encourage mate more and get fine response. Be very candid about something that is bothering you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY...he or she will have every ability at whatever has to do with trouble-shooting of all kinds. Slant education along such lines and permit to solve problems early in life for best results, but teach to remain impersonal.

"The stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

DRESS COLLECTION STOLEN

PARIS (AP) — The entire summer dress collection of Paris couturier Per Spook was stolen from a truck in front of his workshops, police reported Tuesday. The $240,000 collection of the 38-year-old Norwegian-born designer had just returned from a showing in Munich, West Germany, on Monday. The truck driver had stopped to pick up mail and when he returned, the truck's alarm system was disconnected and the truck empty. Members of Spook's staff said the originality of the dresses made it impossible to sell them.

President To Ease Oil Price Controls

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter scheduled a nationally broadcast address for Thursday night to announce plans to ease controls on crude oil prices and possibly appoint a commission to investigate the Three Mile Island nuclear plant accident.

A White House spokesman said Tuesday that Carter arranged air time for what television industry sources said would be an address of 15 or 20 minutes starting at 8 p.m. CST Thursday, to be broadcast live.

White House officials said Carter was expected to announce a gradual lifting of federal controls on domestic crude oil.

This move would have the effect of raising gasoline prices by several cents a gallon and would be aimed at curbing the nation's growing appetite for imported oil.

The president also was expected to propose denying windfall profits to the oil companies through taxation.

Meanwhile Tuesday, the House Commerce energy subcommittee narrowly rejected attempts by Republicans and oil-state Democrats to force Carter's hand and require full decontrol of crude oil prices starting June 1.

Carter said March 24 that any such tax would go in part to finance development of solar energy, alcohol fuels and other renewable energy resources.

The White House officials, who asked not to be named, said the proposed tax money also would be earmarked as subsidies for mass transportation and for rebates to the poor.

Carter's energy speech, originally expected last month, was delayed first by Carter's Mideast peace mission, then by an internal wrangle over the pace of oil price decontrol and finally by the emergency at Three Mile Island near Harrisburg, Pa.

Presidential spokesman Rex Granum said appointment of a presidential commission to investigate the nuclear mishap is being discussed by an administration task force studying the accident.

Granum would not rule out the possibility that Carter would announce formation of such a panel during his Thursday night speech.

When Carter visited the crippled nuclear plant Sunday, he promised to take personal responsibility for making sure the American people get the truth about the accident.

When he was campaigning for the presidency in 1976, Carter proposed stationing full-time federal inspectors at all nuclear power plants. But more than two years after Carter took office, full-time inspectors have been assigned to fewer than half the 72 commercial reactors now in operation. None was present at Three Mile Island when the accident occurred last Wednesday.

Granum repeated an assertion by White House press secretary Jody Powell that the Nuclear Regulatory Commission was blaming the lack of a regular inspector at Three Mile Island on "recruiting problems."

Not Enough Qualified

Powell said the NRC, which has legal responsibility for nuclear plant inspections and which is independent of the president's control, had been unable to find enough qualified inspectors who would agree to being transferred to communities where the reactors are situated.

Granum insisted that the accident was "not a major factor" in the timing of Carter's energy speech. But, he said, "I think it's obvious we could not have delivered such a speech during the height of that incident."

Carter said last week that some change in the oil price control system was a certainty. The president gets authority May 31 to loosen the rigid price ceilings which were imposed by Congress after the Arab oil embargo of 1973-74.

No Extension Seen

Powell has said Carter considers it a foregone conclusion that Congress will not extend the president's authority to impose price controls beyond their expiration date in 1981.

Because of this, the president is believed to be considering a gradual phase-out of price controls to ease the shock of higher at-the-pump gasoline prices, which he feels will come sooner or later.

During an appearance in Dallas March 24, Carter suggested he will ask for enactment of some sort of tax plan that would siphon windfall profits away from oil producers.

Granum would neither confirm nor deny a report published in the New York Times Tuesday saying that the decontrol scheme would gradually add 7 cents to the price of a gallon of gasoline by 1981.

TIN MAN—An anti-nuclear protester dressed in a suit of reflective material enters the site of the Three Mile Island nuclear plant near Middletown, Pa., Tuesday. The protester's name and how he managed to approach the site were not immediately known. The man was a prankster at the visitor's center located across the river from the nuclear plant and had not reached the actual reactor location. (AP Laserphoto) nuclear regulation, that the plant might become "a $1 billion mausoleum" more costly to repair than it was to build. The figure applies to the entire facility, including a second, undamaged reactor.

Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., House energy subcommittee chairman, called Hart's comment "speculation." But Udall said contamination in the reactor building was "so bad it will be months before any possible cleanup can begin, if indeed a cleanup is possible."

Despite earlier claims by officials that the chance of a core melt-down had never been more than slight, Udall said after a White House briefing: "It was a very close call. We were very close to a real disaster."

At the plant, technicians working sought to maintain shrinkage of the hydrogen bubble, which has blocked efforts to reharness the wildcat reactor. With the bubble gone, they could proceed with a cold shutdown — bringing the reactor's temperature down to a point at which it would no longer be capable of breaking loose.

Bubble Reduced

Monitors showed the bubble was still being reduced and emissions of radiation apparently had eased, NRC spokesman Jim Hanchett said.

"We're going to check it, recheck it and check it again," he said.

The two-fold process involved drawing hydrogen from the bubble and defusing it into cool water to release carbon dioxide, plus use of a "hydrogen recombiner" encased in lead bricks, which blends hydrogen and oxygen to form water, further drawing gas from the bubble trapped atop the reaetor.

Evacuation plans were being held in abeyance over the 1,200-square-mile area covering four counties. "But we're not letting our guard down," said John Minnich, chairman of the Dauphin County commission.

Patrols Maintained

Police maintained extra patrols to protect vacant property.

In Middletown, the city nearest the plant, Mayor Robert Reid said he had told police that "if they see any looters, shoot them."

Thornburgh said state and federal analysts had found no threat of contamination in milk produced in the region around Three Mile Island. Tests from 22 dairy farms, he said, showed levels of radioactive iodine at 11 to 46 picocuries per liter — far below the 12,000 picocuries at which the government recommends protective steps. Based on the figures, Thornburgh said, "I can say there is no present danger to consumers from milk produced in this area."

While pre-school children and pregnant women remained at least five miles distant from the plant,

Subsidy Hike Nears For Private Colleges

Church of Christ, met with repeated failure to reduce the potential cost of the bill.

"ICUT decided to spend $44.3 million (over the next two years) and they just can't spend that much with a $600 level. Through their political machine, which is about as well-greased as the beer lobby's, they have been able to convince a lot of you to go along," Whaley said.

Clements recommended the $44.3 million in his budget, but Nabers said the grant program can cost no more than the Legislature appropriates. The Legislative Budget Board has recommended $23.7 million for 1980-81.

Grants now average $335, and Clements, a former trustee of Southern Methodist University, said his budget — reflecting the ICUT bill — would raise that to $900.

Rep. Bill Hollowell, D-Grand Saline, said the bill would hurt some state colleges that are losing enrollment. He also attacked it as a further intertwining of church and state.

"I believe in God. I believe in Christ. And I believe in the Holy Ghost, but I also believe men must be ruled by an orderly process of government. We have seen in Iran what happens when you get a mingling of church and state — chaos and anarchy reign," Hollowell said.

In other action, the House passed and sent to the Senate bills that would:

— Implement a proposed constitutional amendment allowing the state to guarantee farm loans. It would set up a $5 million state fund to guarantee land loans to farmers who have a net worth of under $100,000, not counting their homes.

The measure also would provide payment of 4 percent of the interest on a loan, but with the farmer later reimbursing the state.

— Require health insurance policies to pay chiropractors when they render covered services, so long as the treatment is legally within the limits of their licenses.

— Establish a registry of active cancer cases in the State Health Department to provide physicians information on diagnosis and treatment of the various forms of the disease, which kills 20,000 Texans a year.

— Revise state law on strip mining of coal to conform to federal regulations and enable the Texas Railroad Commission to continue regulating it.

Uranium Mining Rules

— Create separate rules for surface mining of uranium ore but exempt from regulation "in situ" mining of uranium, which involves recovery of ore in solution through injection wells.

Senators accepted House amendments and sent Clements a bill requiring semi-annual review by district courts of the cases of children placed in custody of the Texas Department of Human Resources, including those in foster homes.

The bill provides a means for determining whether a child is being treated well and whether children in foster homes could be returned to their parents, if living.

Senators refused to take up for debate a bill dropping the word "rape" from most criminal statutes and substituting the term "sexual assault."

Turkoman Rebellion Abandoned In Iran

GONBAD-E-QABOUS, Iran (AP) — Regular government soldiers and pro-government guerrillas swept through this battle-torn northeastern town and Turkoman rebels fled into the countryside Tuesday. This apparently ended the second ethnic minority rebellion in less than a month.

About 1,800 soldiers and guerrillas began their move into the city's western sector Monday night, hours after a cease-fire was declared between predominantly Persian revolutionary militias and Turkoman tribesmen.

The Turkoman rebels, whose numbers have not been disclosed, apparently abandoned positions under cover of darkness, having escaped a ring of tanks and armored cars that surrounded the town.

The week of fighting cost at least 130 lives and injured more than 300, according to official estimates. Other casualty estimates had up to 400 killed. The injured were taken to the city's Gol-Cheshmeh Hospital after a government-arranged cease-fire Monday afternoon enabled warring parties to pick up their dead and injured from the town's streets.

Fighting between the Turkomans and the pro-government militias began eight days ago in a dispute over land rights and the Turkomans' demand for regional autonomy.

As scattered firing diminished in the town Tuesday, army units and pro-Islamic Mojahedeen guerrillas combed the city for rebel groups and arms caches. The Mojahdeen fought an underground battle for years against the monarchy of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, who is in exile following the revolution led by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini in February.

Army commanders, claiming Turkoman rebels were manipulated by "communist agents," said they believed violence could erupt again in northeastern Iran, despite the apparent calm in this agricultural center of about 60,000 inhabitants.

"The firepower we have been encountering in Gonbad in the past week has not been coming from amateur gunmen," said Ali Azzizi, a Mojahedeen guerrilla leader.

The Fedayeen, a Marxist-Leninist guerrilla organization, repeatedly has denied involvement in Iran's ethnic rebellions. Army and Mojahedeen commanders in Gonbad-e-Qabous, however, said they dispute this and that they have the bodies of slain Fedayeen to prove their participation in the upheavals.

Like the Kurds in the south who rebelled late last month, the Turkomans are predominantely Sunni Moslems. Khomeini's Islamic revolution has been carried out mainly by majority Shiite Moslems. But Khomeini has insisted that both sects and all religious minorities will be free in the new Iranian Islamic republic.

Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan and Khomeini have said legitimate demands for self-rule by major minority groups eventually will be granted, but appealed for time to work out a solution.

About 14 million of Iran's 34 million people belong to minority groups, the largest of which are Kurds, Baluchis and Turks.

"We will definitely not agree to separatism," Bazargan said in Tehran Tuesday. "But as far as self-management and self-rule are concerned, yes, their demands will be met and the government will try to work out away in which self-rule can be worked out within the framework of the central government."

Late last month Kurdish tribesmen in the western provincial city of Sanandaj, fought government troops to support their demand for autonomy. The government announced limited home rule for the Kurds pending the establishment of a new national constitution, which would guarantee minority rights and presumably grant some autonomy.

U.S. Mission Seeks Mexican Oil, Gas

MEXICO CITY (AP) — United States energy and state department officials arrived Tuesday to negotiate purchases of natural gas and oil from Mexico, the Ministry of Patrimony said.

The mission is headed by Julius Katz, assistant secretary of state for business and Harry Gongold, assistant secretary of energy for international affairs, the U.S. Embassy sid.

The names of other members of the mission were not available.

"The discussions will allow presentation to Presidents Carter and Jose Lopez Portillo alternatives for decision making," the ministry said, "for a meeting between the two in the summer."

Carter came to Mexico Feb. 14-16 to discuss gas and oil purchases but was scolded by Lopez Portillo publicly for former U.S. indifference to its southern neighbor prior to oil discoveries that place Mexico sixth in world reserves with 40.1 billion barrels.

Soviet Fleet Viewed Off Southern Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A Soviet naval fleet was reported off southern Africa's Atlantic coast Tuesday in what Western diplomats speculated was a show of force aimed at stalled talks on South-West Africa.

Radio Angola, monitored here, reported the fleet was on "navigation exercises" in the South Atlantic and that the aircraft carrier-cruiser Minsk was paying a courtesy visit in the port of Luanda, the Angolan capital.

A South African navy spokesman said it was aware of the presence of the fleet — comprised of the Minsk, two guided-missile cruisers, an amphibious ship and an oiler — but said "we attach no significant importance to this latest convoy."

South Africa is at odds with the United Nations and Western powers, including the United States, over the future of South-West Africa, a vast territory it has administered since a 1920 mandate by the old League of Nations.

The arid but mineral-rich territory, also called Namibia, has a population of one million persons, mostly black, and was a German colony until World War I.

The United Nations rescinded the 1920 mandate in 1966, but South Africa ignored the order. At about that time, black nationalist guerrillas of the South-West Africa People's Organization began their 12-year hit-and-run war against South African troops.

Angola, whose Marxist government came to power in a civil war after gaining independence from Portugal in 1976, provides forward bases for SWAPO guerrillas along its tense southern border with South-West Africa.

South African troops have made sporadic cross-border raids into Angola, using troops and warplanes to hit SWAPO bases.

Angolan officials claim some 19,800 Cuban troops, who helped President Agostinho Neto to power, remain in Angola to defend the country from a feared invasion by South Africa.

Although the South African navy displayed no interest in the presence of the Soviet fleet, Western diplomats said the naval presence might be a form of psychological pressure to remind the region that the Soviet Union and Angola maintain close ties.

Late last year, it appeared the West had convinced South Africa to accept a long-stalled United Nations peacekeeping plan for South-West Africa, so the people of the territory could choose their own road to independence.

The United Nations was to send in up to 7,500 peacekeeping troops so the territory could calmly prepare for a U.N.-supervised September electionleading to independence.

SWAPO publicly agreed to the plan and announced it would field candidates for the ationaal assembly election for an independent Namibia.

But recently South Africa has claimed the U.N. plan is prejudiced in favor of SWAPO. The plan, it has said, would not provide adequate monitoring of the movements of SWAPO guerrillas, yet South African troops, estimated to number 30,000, would be reduced to a token force of 1,500. That force, it said, would be confined to barracks.

Western ambassadors to South Africa flew to Windhoek, the territory's capital, over the weekend to talk with local politicians in efforts to salvage the plan.

Farmers Hit By Trudeau

LA POCATIERE, Quebec (AP) — Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau stood before 500 junior college students in this agricultural community on Tuesday and said "farmers are professional complainers." The students booed.

"When there is too much sun, they complain. When there is too much rain, they complain. A farmer is a complainer," said Trudeau, who is campaigning to retain his job in May 22 parliamentary elections.

During a question-and-answer session at the French-language junior college about 72 miles east of Quebec, one student charged Trudeau's Liberal government with treating western Canadian farmers better than those in Quebec.

"In other provinces, they accuse us of giving Quebec too much — French power," Trudeau replied.

The prime minister, 59 and a Quebec native, has based his campaign on the theme of national unity, saying it is "almost treasonable" for opponents to call that issue secondary. Canadian unity is facing a strong attack from separatists, seeking autonomy for the French-speaking Quebec province.

Court Of Records Bill Support Hit

reason we want a court of record is to stop the mass appeals to other courts where cases are dismissed or never heard."

The Traeger-Blanton bill would "remove the only reason you state as justification for your court of record bill for the City of Lubbock," Green says.

"Mr. Mayor, why did not someone think of this before this time?," he asks.

"Mr. West, the fact that you are Mayor does not constitute you the whole judge and jury as to question the motives of any citizen who may not agree with some of your proposals to correct an existing problem either in city government or administration of justice," the letter says.

"You are human just like the rest of us. You are not infallible just because you have become mayor. Your judgement has not become perfect just because of your position as mayor."

Green says the creation of a court of record should be subject to a favorable vote of Lubbock citizens and asks why city officials aren't supporting a bill which would allow any Texas city to establish a court of record.

City's Second Choice

West responded that the city would favor the statewide court of record bill, but that is the city's "second choice" following the Lubbock court bill.

He said he would not oppose submitting the court of record to a vote, but Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan disagreed.

"We're going to submit who gets to be judge to the voters — that ought to be sufficient," she said. "We've got a municipal court by charter. What are we going to submit to voters, the question of how to operate it?" she asked.

City officials favor a bill specifically mentioning Lubbock, she said, because "you can't count on" the statewide bill to pass the legislature, since it has gone down to failure in past legislative sessions.

"There's a good possibility the statewide bill won't pass," she said.

As for the bill which would limit appeals from Municipal Court, West deferred to Mrs. Jordan because she is an attorney.

"Not being a lawyer, as the person who wrote the letter for Mr. Green obviously is," West said, "I really couldn't comment on the legal opinions expressed."

Mrs. Jordan said the limitation of Municipal Court appeals would not solve the problem of the great number of appeals clogging Lubbock's county courts.

"It would still allow somebody to come in and try a case in Municipal Court, then retry it in County Court-at-law as a new case," she said.

"You'd still have a jury sitting on a case twice," she said, adding "the whole point of a court of is to have one trial and be done with it, unless an error occurs.

That saves the cost of two trials, she said.

Mennonites' Land Sold At Auction

Bergen.

Among those were Seminole mayor Bob Clark and attorney John Shepherd, both of whom expressed sadness at the failure of the Mennonites attempt at a settlement. "They are super nice to have around," Clark said Tuesday. "I only wish they could have worked their problems out. But I think most of them plan on staying here anyway."

Most of the Mennonites are planning on remaining in West Texas, Bergen said, even wihtout the benefit of their ranch and the money it brought them.

Under INS regulations, the Mennonites over 21 years of age must obtain jobs which can be certified by the U.S. Department of Labor as skilled labor or risk deportation. Most of those Mennonites needing jobs have found them in and around Seminole, and even without the necessary jobs, the colonists may be saved by special congressional legislation recently introduced by U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen D-Texas.

The Senate Bill, currently under study by the Senate Judiciary Committee would permit the Mennonites to remain as permanent aliens. Bentsen passed similar legislation in October 1977, allowing the group until Feb. 1, 1979 to straighten its legal affairs.

Gas, Oil Seen As Key To City Power Needs

Without building additional power plants, Lubbock Power And Light is limited to using natural gas and oil as fuels, The LP&L Study Committee determined Tuesday night.

However, the committee did not decide when or if LP&L should build additional plants and what should fuel future plants if they are built.

"The only alternatives are gas one and oil two, period," committee member Bob Nash said.

"Looking at our present facility those are our only two alternatives," he said.

LP&L presently has the capability to generate electricity with either gas or oil.

However, committee members were told the cheapest fuel, excluding plant construction costs, is nuclear fusion, which now costs between 40-60 cents per British Thermal Unit.

Coal, costing $1.33 BTU, was second in cost followed by gas at $2.01 per BTU and oil, the most expensive, at $3.24 per BTU.

Committee members were told the city plans to seek a federal grant to update a feasibility on the use of municipal solid waste as a fuel. A similar grant application recently was turned down.

City Manager Larry Cunningham said the use of solid waste as fuel is attractive because it would solve the problem of disposing of the garbage and generate enough electrcity to meet about 15 per cent of LP&L's present demand.

The most "critical one" is the value of competition between LP&L and competing Southwestern Public Service, committee chairman Arnold Maeker said. "It defies quantification," Maeker said, adding the resulting lower electric rates constitute "no little sum of money."

Other assets discussed by the committee include a $300,000 annual savings for the city in energy costs to run streetlights, a local payroll of $2.24 million a year and local control over electric service decisions.

WEEKLY MARKET REPORT

On the surface, not much went on in the stock market this past week but looking beyond the Dow Industrials, market action said quite a bit. First of all, the explosion Tuesday of last week after the OPEC nations raised oil prices less than anticipated showed that institutions are nervous with all the cash they have socked away in short term paper. However, the lack of follow through the next day points out that institutions won't follow strength which is a sign of little confidence. For a month now, the broad market has shown an upward bias, but in short-lived spurts followed by several days of consolidation. In other words, we have had a very mixed, complex market but the breadth and leadership have improved.

By the middle of last week, stocks had become moderately overbought and optimism had increased enough to set us up for a decent-sized correction/consolidation helped by the fact that a number of stocks experienced at least mini-blow-offs. Not that it was needed, but the teamster's spot strikes and then the industry lockout and the nuclear scare in Harrisburg combined to magnify selling pressure on Monday. The momentum seen in the market this past month and its ability to ignore bad news prompted our opinion that stocks look moderately higher short term. Despite Monday's selloff, we believe the short term bulls still deserve the benefit of the doubt.

The teamster situation is quite important to the future of the stock market. If the strike continues long enough to slow down the economy, reduce price pressures and finally end with a settlement not too much over wage/price guidelines, we could see a bond and stock market bottom sooner than we have anticipated. A quick settlement at levels which kill the wage guidelines would fuel the inflation fires, create all kinds of uncertainties and probably prolong the market bottoming process after some temporary and misplaced relief that the strike is over no matter what the cost. At this time, we look for possibly a few more days of a sloppy market but if the correction develops in a controlled fashion, we then would anticipate more upside and new highs for the averages before any serious problems. Traders should be ready to buy weakness. Long term investors can continue to accumulate among the many reasonably priced companies with good growth records and proven management.

House Panel Quells Bid To Force Oil Decontrol

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House subcommittee narrowly fought back an attempt by Republicans and oil-state Democrats Tuesday to force President Carter's hand and require full decontrol of crude oil prices.

In a sucession of identical 11-10 votes, the House Commerce energy and power subcommittee defeated a series of amendments designed to bring about decontrol starting June 1.

Rep. Timothy Wirth, D-Colo., provided the swing vote that enabled the president to win this first congressional challenge to his forthcoming energy policy.

Wirth said that although he favors lifting price controls he viewed Tuesday's votes as "a political exercise."

But Wirth cautioned that, if the president fails to come through with a decontrol package to his liking, he will reverse himself in full committee and vote with those seeking immediate deregulation.

President Carter is expected to announce a plan to graudally lift the price controls that now keep U.S.-produced crude oil about $5 a barrel below the world-market price of nearly $14 a barrel. There are 42 gallons in a barrel.

Although the administration has not disclosed details, the proposal is expected generally to allow U.S. oil prices to slowly rise to the world price by mid-1981.

Reps. Thomas Loeffler, R-Texas, and Phil Gramm, D-Texas, tried to tack the decontrol amendments onto a bill authorizing funds for a variety of Energy Department programs.

Specifically, the amendments would have prohibited the agency from spending federal funds to administer price controls on oil.

"These amendments are designed to promote production," Loeffler said. He said they also would correct what he called "25 years of ill-conceived energy policy decisions by the federal government."

The oil industry has long sought removal of price controls, claiming the lids discourage exploration for new sources of oil.

But administration allies on the subcommittee argued that to force full-fledged decontrol would tie the president's hands in deciding the best way of easing price controls between June 1 and Sept. 30, 1981, when they expire automatically.

The president gains the authority on June 1 to remove the price lids — either all at once or slowly.

Dollar Closes Higher; Japanese Yen Drops

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. dollar survived a round of profit-taking in world foreign exchange trading Tuesday and finished higher against most major currencies.

The price of gold also rose. The metal closed in Zurich at $240.625 an ounce, up from $239.625 the day before. In London, Europe's other major gold-bullion market, the price was $240.25, compared with $239.75 Monday.

Once again, the dollar derived much of its strength from a plummeting Japanese yen. The dollar jumped more than three yen, the seventh consecutive trading rise, and closed at 214.425 yen, compared with 211.15 yen Monday. The dollar has gained almost nine yen in the last 10 days. In New York, the dollar closed at 215.05 yen, up from Monday's 211.65 yen.

Traders said the Japanese central bank had spent about $800 million Tuesday trying to stabilize the value of the yen, with little success.

"We are seeing a bandwagon effect," said one Tokyo banker. "When the dollar continues to rise despite the attempt of the government to stop it, people panic. They are convinced the government is helpless, and they start doing just the thing that will make the government even less able to deal with the situation — they buy more dollars."

The real reasons behind the yen's weakness, dealers said, are worries that Japanese imports are rising while exports are sinking, and concern about the effect on the Japanese economy of the latest round of price increases on crude oil.

Those same problems have been the cause of the dollar's depression in the past couple of years, and would seem to be potential factors in a renewed decline of the U.S. currency. But one New York dealer said the dollar is holding up because traders are examining the effects of higher oil prices and other factors on other countries' economies.

"It's not going to help us at all, but in comparison with other countries we're not so bad off," said the dealer, who asked not to be identified.

The British pound, the only currency consistently up against the dollar in recent days, lost some of its steam Tuesday. It closed in London at $2.06525, compared to $2.0682 the day before. In New York, the pound closed at $2.0663, off from $2.0689.

Zurich — 1.7038 Swiss francs (1.7039)
Paris — 4.32375 French francs (4.3205)
Amsterdam — 2.0275 guilders (2.0265)

Price Raised On Saudis' High-Grade Oil

NEW YORK (AP) — Saudi Arabia, which has so far bucked the trend among fellow members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to tack large surcharges onto the price of oil, has increased the "quality differential" on some of its oil, industry sources said Tuesday.

But they emphasized that the price hike was not a surcharge, and did not expect it to spread to the rest of Saudi production.

"That's really recognizing a quality difference," said one industry source. Experts said it was unlikely that the Saudis would increase the price of their other grades of oil.

The Saudis will charge $16.47 per barrel for their high-quality Arabian-berri-grade oil, which makes up about 5 percent of Saudi Arabia's 9.5 million-barrel daily production.

The new price represents an increase in the quality premium of $1.15 per barrel in addition to the 9 percent increase in the base price of oil approved by OPEC last week.

Although OPEC sets a crude-oil base price — currently $14.54 a barrel — the cartel's members commonly add a quality differential onto the cost of better quality oil. The quality differential on Arabian berri had been 72 cents a barrel, and is now $1.87 a barrel.

When OPEC's members approved the increase in the base price last week, they allowed individual members to impose surcharges as they saw fit. Most OPEC members have added these surcharges, of anywhere from $1.20 to $2.50 a barrel, sometimes as part of increases in quality difference premiums. Saudi Arabia has said it is opposed to the surcharges.

SEC Suspends Two Companies, Nine People In Action

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two companies and nine individual members of the Pacific Stock Exchange in San Francisco were suspended for 20 days by a Securities and Exchange Commission law judge Tuesday on charges of inflating the volume of sales of options in the Houston Oil and Minerals Corp.

Judge Irving Schiller ruled that the members tried to create a "misleading appearance of active trading" in the stock's call options in order to drum up more sales.

Schiller said the members violated the anti-fraud provisions of the SEC. The firms are Rainbow Options and Ethan Aldridge Co. The individuals are Steven S. Mitchell, Clyde Reynolds Mahnke, Lawrence D. Dougherty, Michael W. Engmann, Noam Rand, Richard J. French, Geoffrey B. Haynes, Herbert C. Curlan and Jose C. Pascual.

Schiller's decision may be appealed to the full membership of the SEC.

Brokers Suspended In IBM Stock Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three stock brokers from Chicago were suspended Tuesday by the Securities and Exchange Commission for various periods in connection with alleged manipulation of IBM stock in 1977.

The SEC said the three consented to the suspensions without admitting or denying guilt. They were accused of attempting to depress the price of IBM common stock to enable them to purchase it at a more attractive price.

James M. Chipman was suspended for six months from any association with the stock market to be followed by a period of one year in which he could work in a non-supervisory capacity.

Gail J. Connelly was suspended for three years and Philip J. Dalman was suspended for 18 months. In Dalman's case, after 18 months he may work as a supervised employee for another 18 months before applying to the SEC for reinstatement as a broker.

Britain Plans Early Payment Of IMF Debt

LONDON (AP) — Britain's gold and foreign currency reserves have reached a record level, the Treasury said Tuesday. And Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey announced Britain will repay the last $1 billion of its loan from the International Monetary Fund.

The Treasury said the reserves soared by $837 million in March to $17.454 billion. The increase does not include a paper revaluation of the reserves which took place on March 31. This added nearly $4.5 billion to Britain's coffers to bring the total reserves to $21.947 billion, the highest ever.

March was the fourth successive month in which the reserves increased. There was an increase of $359 million in February, $564 million in January and $25 million in December.

Healey told the House of Commons the $1 billion will be repaid ahead of schedule to the IMF as part of Britain's overall strategy of reducing its foreign debt load.

Britain will have repaid all of its drawings from the IMF under the standby credit agreed to in late 1976 during a crisis when the value of the British pound was dropping. Buoyed by Britain's North Sea oil reserves, the pound is now a relatively strong currency.

As the pound strengthened during March from $2.0230 to $2.0665, the Bank of England bought up dollars — and thus added to the reserves — to keep the pound from rising too quickly.

Refinery Accused Of Oil Overcharges

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department said Tuesday it has begun legal action to recover $5.4 million in alleged overcharges by the Rock Island Refining Corp. for various petroleum products.

The corporation, based in Indianapolis, is accused of overcharging customers in Indiana, Ohio, Illinois and Michigan for gasoline, diesel fuel and home heating oil from November 1973 to February 1976.

A statement issued by the department's Economic Regulatory Administration said the company was issued a "notice of probable violation," which is an initial step in the government's hearing procedures.

The company was accused of using regulations covering petroleum product retailers and resellers instead of those covering refineries when it set prices, the statement said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I bought Series E, U.S. Savings Bonds through payroll savings from 1952 through 1977. From your column, I learned that every E bond issued before May 1952 will stop accruing interest exactly 40 years after its issue date. But I am thoroughly confused about the final maturity dates of E bonds issued after April 1952.

Would you please list the final maturity dates of E bonds bought after 1952, by the different years in which they were issued? I'm sure there are other readers who would like to have this cleared up.

A. Indeed there are. In all the years this column has been in print, nothing has drawn as much mail as the U.S. Treasury Department's recent changes in the Savings Bond program. If my mailbag is a measurement, the public is confused and screaming mad — to the point where W. Michael Blumenthal could go down in history as the treasury secretary who destroyed the Savings Bond program.

In hopes of clearing up some of the confusion about E bonds, here's a run-down on final maturities, as now scheduled:

The oldest E bonds, issued from May 1941 through April 1952, will reach final maturity 40 years after their issue date; E bonds issued from May 1952 through January 1957, in 39 years, eight months; those issued from February 1957 through May 1959, in 38 years, 11 months; those issued from June 1959 through November 1965, in 37 years, nine months; those issued from December 1965 through May 1969, in 27 years; those issued from June 1969 through November 1973, in 25 years, 10 months; and those issued from December 1973 through the present time, 25 years.

When he decreed that E bonds issued before May 1952 would receive no further "extended maturity" and, therefore, stop building up interest after 40 years, Blumenthal did grant additional extended maturities to E bonds issued after April 1952.

But, he added this kicker. "The Treasury Department intends this to be the final extension for bonds bought from May 1952 through November 1965."

That statement reads as an obvious attempt to commit future secretaries of the treasury to go along with the plan to stop paying interest on E bonds issued before December 1965 when those bonds reach their final maturities as now scheduled.

It will be interesting to see if this happens or if the U.S. Treasury Department relents and grants further extended maturities on all E bonds.

There are an awful lot of E bond holders who are mighty unhappy that their bonds will reach final maturities and stop accruing interest. Their unhappiness is caused by the fact that, at that time, they will have to pay federal income tax on their E bond interest.

Q. I am a widow, 61. Two years ago, I invested $40,257 through a broker in bonds of three big companies and in shares of two mutual funds. This month, I will receive $50,000 from the sale of some property. The broker says this will call for a complete redoing of everything I have already invested, plus the $50,000.

After paying a fat brokerage fee two years ago, will I gain by a "complete redoing?"

A. If, by a "complete redoing," the broker means selling everything you now own and putting that money, plus the $50,000, into other investments, I can't see any benefit to anyone except that broker — who would generate more commissions.

The combination of bonds and mutual funds you named in your letter seems right for a person in your position. I can see buying more of the same or similar securities.

As you describe the situation, that broker could be close to "churning your account," for commissions. Could be time to talk to other brokers.

Local Strike Situation Continues At Impasse

At the end of the second day of picketing Tuesday, striking laborers union members and Lubbock area contractors remained at an impasse, with each side contending it will not make the first conciliatory move.

About 12 contractors whose work sites are being picketed by the 100-member union decided at a meeting Tuesday afternoon that each "stands ready to negotiate if and when we're approached," said H.R. Bundock, group spokesman.

He added that each contractor is willing to negotiate separately with the laborers. There are no plans for a group solution to the contract dispute, he said.

However, Abel Gonzalez, union spokesman, said, "We're still waiting for the contractors to contact us. It's up to them."

And, he added, the laborers refuse to negotiate separate agreements with individual contractors. "It will have to be the same contract with everybody," he said.

A 350-member Teamsters committee was scheduled to meet this morning in Washington, D.C., to discuss negotiations in the nationwide dispute with the trucking industry that Sunday ordered a lockout against 300,000 Teamsters.

Leonard Guerrero, secretary-treasurer of Teamsters Local Union No. 577, said Tuesday the strike in Lubbock is peaceful, with the approximately 600 workers affected taking turns walking the picket line.

"We're in good standing with everybody here," he added.

He said he hopes the dispute will be resolved by the end of the week.

Local striking laborers may need more time than that to end their conflict with contractors.

"I think it's a wait-and-see situation," Bundock said. "In a strike of this magnitude, you just don't get anything done in two days."

Gonzalez said the union members will not back down in their demands for previous contract stipulations and a 7 per cent pay increase.

The union is fighting for its survival, he explained, "And the men believe we're going to get it."

Gonzalez said the union members believe that if they capitulate, they will lose the benefits they have accrued during the organization's 12-year existence and will end up working for minimum wage.

Bundock conceded that may be a legitimate concern. He explained the union "just doesn't have the number of qualified people" and that contractors no longer want to pay high wages — such as mason tenders' $6.27 an hour — to unskilled laborers.

No additional reports of threatened violence marred Tuesday's picketing. Earlier it had been reported that workers at two construction sites had been threatened with death by union members if they crossed the picket lines.

Gonzalez and Bundock said neither side plans any additional meetings today to assess the situation.

No Federal Move On Transport Halt Seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — As a trucking industry shutdown cut further into auto production Tuesday, Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said the government had no present plans to seek a court-ordered end to the two-day nationwide lockout of striking Teamsters.

Marshall said the shutdown by 500 major trucking firms was causing only limited disruptions outside of the auto industry, which is heavily dependent on daily shipments of parts by truck.

"We are not contemplating any Taft-Hartley (act) action at this point," the secretary said, referring to a law under which the government can seek an 80-day court injunction to end labor disputes that threaten the national welfare.

However, Marshall said he could not rule out the possibility of severe economic disruptions if the lockout persists.

"We have never had a lengthy and substantial shutdown of trucking in our history," Marshall told reporters. "Because of that, it is far too early to gauge the effect it could have."

The strike began in full Monday. Some 86,000 auto workers at 24 plants were either laid off or placed on short shifts Tuesday because of parts shortages blamed on the lockout. Industry officials said 29 plants would be shut or would operate on short shifts today, affecting 107,000 workers.

In Ohio, the Whirlpool Co. said Tuesday it was shutting two home appliance plants and laying off 3,200 workers for the duration of the shutdown due to parts shortages.

Ohio authorities also said two men were arrested in connection with two separate violent confrontations between striking and non-striking drivers.

According to trucking industry estimates, 235,000 Teamsters and 500 of the nation's largest trucking firms are affected by the lockout — a maneuver in which employers bar employees from working.

Essential consumer goods — food, fuel and medicine — continued to move normally. The Carter administration has said it would seek a back-to-work court order if the shutdown threatened the national health and safety.

Across the country, manufacturers and retailers who depend on unionized freight carriers for movement of parts and supplies said they feared a prolonged shutdown could trigger disruptions and create shortages. But they were uncertain inasmuch as there has never been a trucking industry shutdown of this scope for more than three days.

"There is a great deal of confusion. We don't know who is on strike and who isn't," said a spokesman for U.S. Steel Corp. in Pittsburgh. But, he added, "If there were a strike of any duration, it would have a severe impact on our business from the products shipments standpoint."

Trucking firms bargaining collectively with the Teamsters on a new contract launched the lockout Sunday after union President Frank Fitzsimmons ordered a "selective" strike against 73 of the companies.

Members of Trucking Management Inc., the industry bargaining arm, met Tuesday to discuss the dispute. The union planned to meet with 700 local officials today in Chicago.

Federal mediators hoped to resume bargaining on Thursday.

Sources said the two sides were very close to an agreement and were separated by only 25 cents an hour. But the industry balked at giving the extra money because it would boost the cost of the contract beyond President Carter's loosened anti-inflation wage guidelines.

Although TMI represents the largest trucking firms, several thousand other, mostly smaller, firms are parties to the master freight agreement, which covers some 300,000 Teamsters. The union said Monday that hundreds of these firms were signing interim agreements with the union based on its last demand to TMI.

Unaffected by the dispute are some 200,000 Teamster drivers and warehouse workers covered by separate contracts. There also are up to one million non-union truckers, according to industry estimates.

PAPAL APPOINTMENT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Archbishop Jean Jadot, apostolic delegate to the United States, announced Tuesday that Pope John Paul II has appointed Monsignor William R. Houck as auxiliary to Bishop Joseph Brunini in the Roman Catholic Diocese of Jackson, Miss. Houck, a 52-year-old native of Mobile, Ala., has been secretary for education in the diocese of Birmingham, Ala., and pastor of St. Francis Xavier Church in that city.

Japanese Singers Join Sweet Adelines

TOKYO (UPI) — Sooner or later, almost every kind of American music — jazz, rock, folk and country and western — has found its way to Japan.

Now Japanese can soak up a real bit of old-fashioned hometown U.S.A. from the first Asian chapter of "Sweet Adelines," an international barbershop harmony organization for women.

"If you could see those shy Japanese women singing Way Down on the Levee, it's enough to make you burst," says Vickie Jones, a 55-year-old emergency room nurse from Garden City, N.Y., who organized the group.

Mrs. Jones who came to Japan two years ago with her husband, an American oil company executive, says the prospective Tokyo chapter is moving toward becoming a fullfledged member of the Sweet Adelines, whose home base is Tulsa, Okla.

The group, a non-profit corporation whose 29,000 members sing for free, already has foreign chapters in Canada, Holland, Britain, Norway and, until recently, Iran.

The 30-odd women in the Tokyo group range in age from their early 20's to 50's and come from such far-flung places as Switzerland, Camada and Britain in addition to the United states and Japan.

Since their first meeting last Novermber, they have performed at churches and private clubs in Tokyo and hope to expand their circuit in the near future. Any "amiable woman" who can sing on key is eligible to join.

Nuclear Regulatory Agency's Denton Devoted To Profession

Today's FOCUS

WASHINGTON (AP) — About a week ago, Harold and Lucinda Denton were watching "The China Syndrome," a movie about a power plant nuclear reactor gone haywire. He nudged his wife and whispered, "That's a faulty reading."

And sure enough, on the screen before them a moment later, the nuclear technician portrayed by actor Jack Lemmon discovered that a meter had been giving faulty readings and that his reactor was in trouble.

"Harold was impressed by the movie's technical accuracy," Mrs. Denton recalled Tuesday. "And by Jane Fonda."

Mrs. Denton hasn't seen her husband since last Friday, except on television, where his face and calm, assured, Southern-tinged voice have become familiar to millions.

Last week, President Carter sent him as his personal representative to Three Mile Island when it became clear that a "China syndrome" situation could occur in Pennsylvania.

"China Syndrome" is the buzzword for the worst possible accident, a nuclear core melting through its container and presumably burning through the earth to China.

Denton has been in touch with the president by telephone several times a day and has briefed the press corps at the accident site whenever events warranted.

On Monday, when he announced the gas bubble within the reactor had shown a "dramatic drop" in size, reducing the risk of an explosion, his broad grin conveyed the news just as dramatically.

Denton has demonstrated an aptitude for explaining what is happening inside a reactor calmly and clearly enough to make people feel that even if they don't understand, at least someone of importance does.

Denton, 43, has been interested in nuclear science since he was in high school in Rocky Mount, N.C.

Lucinda Oliver, a high school classmate, became his wife, although they did not start dating until after both had gone off to college.

Denton says he attended North Carolina State College because it had one of the first university-operated nuclear reactors. But Mrs. Denton adds that it was also one of the few schools he could afford to attend. Denton's father drove a bread truck.

HAROLD DENTON

After graduating in 1958, Denton took a job in South Carolina with the DuPont Co., which was building the Savannah River nuclear plant that manufactures nuclear weapons. In South Carolina, it is known simply as "the bomb plant."

Five years later, Denton went to work for the Atomic Energy Commission, forerunner of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

He rose through the ranks.

His job makes frequent use of his talent for making the complex comprehensible in appearances before Congress or — when things go wrong — before reporters.

Denton believes his position as a regulator of the nuclear industry requires him to maintain neutrality on the merits and risks of nuclear development.

"He does not push nuclear, and he does not tear it down," his wife says. "He reg-

A-J Marketbasket Survey Of Lubbock Shows Slight Drop In Grocery Prices

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

B / METRO
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
Wednesday, April 4, 1979

National surveys indicate a steady increase in food prices across the country, but Lubbock shoppers may find their tape totals a little lower this month.

An Avalanche-Journal marketbasket survey indicates April's total for 16 standard grocery items is down nine cents from last month's $20.64. April's grocery bill came to $20.55 — reflecting a slow, but steady, downward movement in local food prices since the first of the year.

The largest price increase registered this month is deceiving — a pound of hickory-smoked bacon, priced at $1.39 last month, is selling at $1.65 in April. However, last month's price was a special and this month's figure is still 20 cents below the norm for the product.

Five pounds of flour also registered a hefty increase, moving from 75 cents to 99 cents. However, flour also ran on special last month and the increase to 99 cents in April is only 10 cents above the average price.

After having been on special for two months, a 49-ounce box of laundry detergent moved back to its regular price of $1.73. The cleaning product was selling at $1.63 in March and $1.29 in February.

The last price increase is seen in the cost of a can of whole green beans. What sold for 40 cents in March is selling for 46 cents in April. This increase is also a move back to the average price.

As the new lettuce crop comes in from Arizona, the price of iceberg lettuce is dropping drastically. A puny head of lettuce which sold for 79 cents a pound last month has been replaced with a larger, healthier-looking head selling at 49 cents a pound.

A local supermarket spokesman said the prices could fluctuate again if weather conditions damage existing crops.

A pound of round steak is back down to $1.98 a pound, a decrease of 21 cents from last month's price. The popular cut of meat has see-sawed back and forth between $2.19 and $1.98 since November.

Chickens and eggs reflect a price drop this month, with fryers selling for 59 cents a pound and medium eggs at 59 cents a dozen. The chicken price is a 10 cent drop from March and the egg price moved 14 cents downward.

All other prices remain stable:

A large loaf of bread is still selling at 69 cents and a gallon of homogenized milk is still priced at an all-time high of $2.33.

A pound of stick margarine is marked at 73 cents and five pounds of sugar is holding steady at $1.29.

Ownership Accord Reached On Prince's House

Ownership of the 21st Street residence once occupied by Iranian Crown Prince Reza Pahlavi will be transferred to the new government of Iran under an agreement reached Tuesday between Lubbock realtor Stephen Von Phul and representatives of the Islamic Republic.

Sylvan Marshall, the Washington, D.C., attorney representing the new Iranian government, said the property will probably be placed on the market for sale within 10 days.

The property — purchased for $265,000 — has been assigned a sale price of $625,000.

"The ownership at this moment...is the Imperial Iranian Air Force," Marshall said in a telephone interview from his Washington office. "And that doesn't exist anymore. There is no other claimant in our view other than the new government of Iran."

Marshall began negotiations for the property, its furnishings and three automobiles about two weeks ago after three Houston men claiming to represent the Islamic Republic arrived in Lubbock to take possesion of the house. The property was being held in trust by Von Phul.

"I am not really sure who came to Lubbock and who they represented," Marshall said. The men claiming the property for the new government presented local officials with a letter of introduction from Hassan Ali Hahji, consulate general of the Islamic Republic in Houston.

Marshall is representing Shahriar Rouhani, representative in the U.S. for the Ayatollah Khomeini, and Hassan Etessam, charge d'affaires for the new government.

"The government representatives whom I am attorney for have contemplated some contingency plans (in case title transfer was not completed), but none of them included any violent action, Marshall said.

The U.S. State Department is involved in the title transfer only in the act of certifying the Islamic Republic as the existing government in Iran, Marshall added.

Realtor Von Phul and his attorney, Elgin Conner, were in conference this morning and unavailable for comment. Marshall said Von Phul will probably handle the property for the interim period before its sale.

Marshall had said earlier he expects the Iranians to sell the real property separately. The three cars involved in the sale are valued at $60,000.

"There does appear to be significant interest," Marshall said of the sale of the property. "I can tell you this — I have received three telephone calls from three Lubbock realtors this morning," he added.

The house was purchased last year for the shah's eldest son, who was receiving jet pilot training at Reese Air Force base. The house was used as an occasional weekend residence for the 18-year-old prince.

Prince Reza completed his pilot training March 9 and left shortly thereafter to join his family in Morocco. He has recently returned to the United States, but his place of residence has not been disclosed.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: In response to your "Prayer for Secretaries," how about printing this one — from a boss?:

"Dear Lord, help me to be a patient man. Let me be calm when my secretary comes in late and tells me her third grandmother died and she had to go to the funeral. Help me to remain cool when I see she has typed the carbon copies of six letters on the back of the originals."

Help me to not lose my temper when the annual report didn't get done because the typewriter broke down and she didn't want to break a nail or get her hands dirty."

What I'm trying to make clear is that there is something to be said on both sides. I'm a 26-year-old liberal male who believes in ERA. I like my secretaries, but I must put up with less than perfection as does every boss I know. So far I have not met any perfect bosses or any perfect secretaries, so let's a try to be a little bit tolerant. — B.J.H. In Bakersfield

Dear Baker: Amen, Brother.

Dear Ann: What a nice birthday present I received in you column recently. I had a burning question answered!

The word "special" when used to describe the mentally retarded and handicapped has always irritated me. I could never figure out why. That letter from a young man (a self-described slow learner) said, "Retarded people would prefer to be thought of as just human beings — not special." He is SO right. I'd call him a sharp learner, even though he may be a little slow. He put into words what I could not.

It is nice when an attempt is made to "upgrade" the person who is deficient in one area or another, but calling him "special" only puts a spotlight on him and he doesn't want that. The true meaning of the word "special" is "something extra." We have a hard enough time making it when people expect us to be average. How interesting that it took a "slow learner" to tell me. — No Name In St. Cloud, Minn.

Dear No Name: At the risk of incurring the wrath of readers who like the word "special" to describe the handicapped, I agree with you.

Dear Ann Landers: Please print this letter to my doctor.

Dear Doctor: When I bring my gray hair, false teeth, sagging breasts, sick stomach, slipped disc, arthritic knees, varicose veins, and fallen arches to your office, my self-esteem is so low I could trip on it. I would be a lot more comfortable if you all called me by my married name.

It heightens my self-esteem to be called "Mrs. Hollanpfeiffer." When you call me "Dorcas," as I stand there in a cotton gown open at the back from neck to floor, I am a half-clad nobody, stripped of identity. I don't think you should add to the indignity.

I wonder if this "Dorcas" business is designed to downgrade me. Do you want me to start addressing your nurses an technicians as "Ma'am"? I really don't want to. I have a strong urge to greet you with "Hi, Timmy," at next Thursday's appointment. — D.H.

Dear D.H.: Speak up, woman. Tell the doctor you don't want him to call you by your first name. It's as simple as that. My guess is he's tryinng to make you feel comfortable. He'll never know your true feelings unless you tell him!

• • •

Don't get burned by a "line" that's too hot to handle. Play it cool with Ann Landers' guide to "Necking and Petting — What Are the Limits?" Send your request to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611, enclosing 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

According to the "Wall Street Journal," liberation of women has brought about an increase in the number of men who shop for groceries.

This, in turn, has loused up the advertising campaigns. Men obviously buy products for different reasons than women.

Offhand, I'd guess that men don't get too choked up about whether their wives would prefer dressing to potatoes, get fussy about peanut butter for their children, or care much if their cats danced all the way to dinner.

If someone offered my husband $50 for his old shirt in a laundromat, he'd throw in his entire closet.

Advertising is geared toward women who are serious about taking care of their families. If their coffee is mountain grown, they'll have a successful marriage. If they can get their husbands' bad breath in remission, they'll be promoted. If they force-feed a bowl of hot cereal into their children, they're good mothers.

Did you ever watch men shop? I divide them into three categories. There's the Little Old Listmaker. He has a list that is so rigid, he will not deviate one single item. If the list says, "Pick up laundry," he'll buy one on the way home.

At the other end of the spectrum is the man I call the Party Shopper. Old Hats-and-Horns goes up and down the aisle like he knows exactly what he is doing. At the check-out, he will rack up $87 worth of smoked oysters, assorted crackers, chips, dips, and enough beverages to supply a PX during a siege.

There's the man whose mother was a procurement officer and passed down her philosophy on volume buying. If you can buy four rolls of toilet tissue for 80 cents, think what a saving you could rack up on 62 rolls.

To get to men, I suspect advertising executives will have to use the macho approach.

Any day now you'll probably see Robert Conrad put a can of Tidy Bowl on his shoulder and challenge you to "Knock it off! I dare you!" Or a man who mixes a pitcher of Kool-Aid and says to his kids, "You only go around once in this life and you might just as well go around with all the gusto you can get!"

Until this happens, men are just going to be content getting a cheap thrill out of squeezing the you-know-what with Mr. Whipple.

The bidding needs some explanation. West's three diamonds was a weak jump overcall meant to show a strong six- or seven-card suit with little outside strength. North's three spades was rather light; he should have passed. East's four diamonds was intended to impede the opponents, but South judged his hand good enough to barge into slam.

Even though East-West have a cheap save in seven diamonds (they go down four tricks), they judged their defensive prospects adequate to defeat the contract.

An original heart lead by West would have defeated the contract, but he could not be blamed for going with the king of diamonds. When dummy came down, declarer did not like his chances. Aside from the unlikely occurrence of a queen-jack club doubleton, there did not seem many favorable ways to go.

Regardless, South found a way to make the contract. He ruffed the opening diamond with the king of spades and led the queen of spades to dummy, where he overtook with the ace. He happily noted the fall of the spade nine from the West hand.

Declarer ruffed another diamond in his hand with the eight of spades and led his carefully preserved five of spades to dummy's six. After ruffing another diamond, the stage was set. Declarer played ace, king and a third club.

East was end-played. He had to win with the queen. He now had the dubious choice of either playing a heart away from the king-jack into North's queen or playing a diamond and giving declarer a ruff and discard. Whichever way he went, the slam was cold.

You can vary ingredients or seasonings to pep up this good, healthful sandwich filling.

At the cabin or on a one-day outing, whip up a pineapple-chicken filling using canned chunk-white chicken and canned pineapple. This is an excellent recipe for vacations as well as after golf, tennis or school. Serve with milk, relishes and fresh fruit or ice cream.

PINEAPPLE—CHICKEN SANDWICHES

1 can (5 ozs.) chunk-white chicken
1 tbsp. imitation mayonnaise
¼ tsp. ground ginger
¼ cup drained, crushed pineapple in pure pineapple juice
3 tbsps. chopped celery
Lettuce leaves
2 slices pumpernickel bread
Pineapple slices (optional)
Green-pepper rings (optional)

Drain chicken, reserving broth.

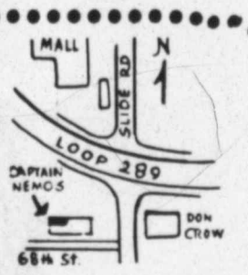

In bowl, blend mayonnaise and ginger into reserved broth. Toss with chicken, crushed pineapple and celery.

Arrange lettuce on bread. Top with chicken mixture. If desired, garnish with pineapple slices cut in half and green pepper rings. Makes 2 open-face sandwiches.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY

DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: Would you please tell me the value of taking vitamin B-15. My husband and I feel so much better after taking it for a few months, after going to doctor after doctor with no success. I am anxiously awaiting your reply. — Mrs. G.N.

B-15 is not recognized officially as a vi-

B-15 is not recognized officially as a vitamin at all. The series of B vitamins ends at B-12 and no new ones have been discovered. Hawkers of various substances have attached the magic name "vitamin" to them because it has a nice ring to it.

by the Food and Drug Administration contain dichloracetate. This is found to cause drowsiness and may be associated with an increase in uric acid (the gout substance) in persons with diabetes. Other products sold as B-15 contain a variety of other chemicals, either of doubtful value or not tested for potential toxic (poisonous) effects. This does not mean they are necessarily poisonous, just that they have not been tested for such effects to the satisfaction of the medical profession.

B-15 has been advertised as a treatment for a variety of medical problems, including high blood pressure, diabetes, heart trouble and arthritis. Effectiveness for any of these ailments has not been proven. In fact, probably more dangerous than potential adverse effects is that people who need effective medicine for various ailments may turn to such products instead

I don't know why you and your husband are taking the preparation, but I hope you will avoid taking any such drugs, chemicals or products without consulting your physician. The medical profession has enough trouble as it is protecting patients from the side effects of drugs and chemicals, even those that have been studied for decades under strict controls. People who turn to pop medicine cures add new dimensions to that task.

It is highly improbable that the expensive, uncontrolled, mysterious substance you are using deserves credit for your feeling better.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Could you tell me where to find a list of foods low in cholesterol? Also, foods that are high (to be avoided). — Mrs. D.C.

People seem to have forgotten public libraries these days. I'm sure yours has many books on the subject, most of which should list cholesterol food tables. And it won't cost you a penny — unless you bring it back late.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: I have emphysema. My doctor wants me to quit smoking. He said it was damaging my heart. Can this be so? — Mrs. T.W.

Emphysema can damage the heart indirectly, or cause undue strain on it over the years. As you know, one of the heart's chambers pumps deoxygenated blood back to the lungs so it can reoxygenated. If the lung is damaged, the pumping work may increase and eventually the pumping system may become enlarged. Quit the cigarettes.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: I had a medical examination recently and saw the report afterward. I was told I was in good physical shape, but a lot of the words threw me. One especially, a reference to "euthyroid." I just wondered if my thyroid was borderline or something. What could it have meant? — M.M.

The letters "eu" before a word in medicine usually means "normal." "Euthyroid" would mean the thyroid gland was behaving normally. Another reader asked me what "eupnea" meant, and was it a cause for concern. It means normal breathing, "dyspnea" means abnormal breathing.

We may soon be adding a new word to the medical lexicon — "termophobia," fear of words.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: Can swallowing saliva be harmful? — F.K.

I've been doing it all my life and am healthy. The fact is you'd be in trouble if you didn't. Saliva contains important enzymes to help digestion of food. The same holds for post-nasa drip matter, another question I get. Harmless. In fact, it contains protein.

• • •

Your thyroid plays a critical health role — in everything from eyesight to fertility. The booklet "Your Thyroid: How It Works for You" explains this important, and misunderstood, gland. To get a copy, enclose 50 cents and a long, stamped and self-addressed envelope to Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill., 60611.

Elderly Homeowners May Qualify For Special Income Tax Benefit

By BETTY YARMON

NEW YORK (WNS) — Homeowners of cooperatives and condominums as well as of one-family houses who are over 55 should be aware of a once-in-a-lifetime tax benefit that went into effect with the 1978 tax law and that is retroactive to June 27, 1978.

Under this provision, profits up to a maximum of $100,000 from the sale of a home are excluded from taxable income, and only 40 percent of profit above $100,000 is taxable.

Previously, an exclusion had affected only those 65 or older, and profits only on houses selling for $35,000 or less were totally excluded. At the same time, part of the profit on a house that sold for more than $35,000 was taxed after a 50 percent exclusion.

Clearly, the change in the law takes into account two new realities: that people are retiring at an earlier age and that inflation has particularly hit housing costs so that a $35,000 home today no longer is held to be the average it once was.

The purpose of the exclusion now, just as it was during the earlier period, was to allow a person about to retire to sell his home and move to a smaller place, using the profits to add to his retirement income.

Hints from Heloise

HI, THERE:

It's getting to be that time of year again when people from the East are being transferred out West, and the people from the West are heading South. The kids will be getting out of school soon, too, and the packing begins.

Major L. Long of the Association of Interior Decor Specialists, Inc. has given us a few timely hints on the art of such a venture. He says:

"To begin with, when packing your wardrobe, pack only enough clothing in each carton to fit snugly without wrinkling.

"The object of wardrobe packing is to keep the items from having to be pressed again upon arrival at your destination, right? Always hang heavy clothes individually.

"Books should be packed on edge in the carton. Pack records with paper between them.

"Framed pictures should be protected by crisscross strips of masking tape to reinforce the glass; but these strips should not extend over the frames as they could leave a residue of adhesive.

"Dishpacks should never weigh more than 100 pounds. To correctly pack stemware, each piece should be placed upright for greater protection. Special crating should be provided for odd-size pieces such as folding screens, framed tapestries, and such that appear fragile or valuable."

These are very helpful hints, and we appreciate Long for cluing us in. One more moving hint from a dear reader, which was recently printed in the column, bears repeating as it seems to be ever-so-comforting.

It is: Before you pack your mattresses, place a clean bottom sheet on each of them. Then put a top sheet and a blanket in the box with the mattresses.

Upon arrival at your new home, all you need to do is set up the beds, put on the top covers, and "fall" in!

Happy moving day! — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

When preparing boiled potatoes for supper, I slice the potatoes as if I were going to make fried potatoes.

I put hot water on them instead of cold, and this it takes only a third of the cooking time to boil them.

DEAR HELOISE:

I needed a satin-y pillowcase to protect my hairdo, but didn't want to go to the expense of purchasing satin or nylon pillowcases.

As most of us gals have half-slips made for the longer styles (if not left over from the previous fashion of the '50s and '60s) — that was my answer.

I just slipped one of the half-slips over my pillow, case and all, and then had a temporary "coiffure-saver."

If someone might want a more permanent pillowcase, just remove the elastic at the slip's waist, seam it up and, with the pretty lace border most slips have, who would know but what you weren't very extravagant! — M.A.M.

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

Instead of folding my bath towels, I roll them up — it saves space and can be decorative! — M.B.B.

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

I used this idea when my children were in cribs.

Mattresses are always plastic-covered and in hot weather this can cause heat rash. I used my twin size sheet as a "draw sheet," like hospitals use, across the crib and tucked under each side.

This eliminates the rash and also saves washing the crib sheets sometimes, as the twin sheet can be folded into several thicknesses. — Mrs. Alvin Long

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

To conserve trips to the store for milk, eggs, bread, etc., call your neighbors and check to see if they need anything when you go.

Then they can call you when they need to run to the store.

You all benefit by saving — not only gas, but time as well. — J.B. Holmes

Airline Strike Affecting Service By Three Lubbock Carriers

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

If you've been kept waiting on the phone this week trying to make an airline reservation, there's a reason for it. Those tied-up phone lines are partly the result of a machinists' strike Saturday that completely shut down United Airlines.

Although United does not serve Lubbock, three major interstate carriers that do — Continental, Braniff International and Texas International — compete with or connect into United routes. With United grounded, its more than 120,000 passengers daily are scrambling for seats on these airlines, and the result has been jammed phone lines.

Gary Davis, a Lubbock agent for Texas International, told the Avalanche-Journal the long waits for TI reservations agents are unavoidable because "our ticket agents are having to book passengers in every city along our routes, and they're just super busy."

The same holds true for the others. All Braniff reservations made in Lubbock are confirmed through a central unit in Dallas, explained Braniff spokesman Lou Garcia, "so the wait will naturally pile up, especially when business increases like this. It's unfortunate, but I don't know what else we can do."

The strike against United means an unexpected windfall for the three carriers, as well as every other line competing with United across the nation. But the trio serving Lubbock, while acknowledging the upsurge in their daily business, expressed surprisingly different views on United's troubles.

Continental, for example, used the term "windfall" in describing its increase, while a TI spokeswoman called the United situation "more of a nuisance" for her airline.

Continental appears to have received the healthiest benefit of the three so far, judging by actions the line has taken since the strike began.

The airline has doubled its daily flights from Los Angeles to Honolulu from four to eight, as well as reinstated eight daily flights between Denver and Los Angeles, which had been discontinued a month ago because of lack of use, said spokesman Jack Clayton. "They're almost all flying full now," he said. "We've had some minor problems in adjusting but they're all corrected now, and we have plenty of room for prospective customers anywhere."

The reservations problems affecting Lubbock travelers are by no means a local phenomenon, Clayton pointed out.

"Those four new flights to Hawaii are all being flown with no reservations, simply because we don't have the capability to handle that kind of an upsurge in phone-in reservations. We announced the flights, and the extra four are first-come, first-served."

TI has gained most of its business from persons in western cities like Denver trying to get to New York and New England, said spokeswoman Peggy Dyer. "Our traffic has been fairly hectic through Denver," she said. "It's been a definite gain in business, but we've been able to handle it pretty well so far."

The nuisance, she said, came from booking those persons from Denver to New York through Houston or other TI gateway cities because the Houston-based carrier flies very little east of the Mississippi River. "We're trying to help those needing to get back without disrupting our normal schedules too much, and sometimes it's pretty tough," Miss Dyer said.

Even before the strike paralyzed United, the airline was forced to cancel several flights because of a lack of jet fuel, and that spectre still remains. But the three serving Lubbock are unanimous in their optimism that no such problems will plague them.

"We're in a very good position on fuel," Garcia said about Braniff. "We have a number of suppliers rather than one we count on heavily, so we've been able to operate normally throughout the spring."

Clayton said Continental also used several suppliers, and commented he doubted his airline would encounter any fuel shortage problems.

"We've not been hurt on fuel yet, but it's a very fluid situation," Dyer said of TI. "Our major supplier (Texaco) has cut us back 20 percent but we have enough others who've been coming through that we've been able to keep up with no cancellations."

Tech Rodeo Club Travels To Big Spring

The event begins Thursday.

Seventeen colleges of the southwest region of the National Rodeo Association will compete for the top two rankings in the region.

Those teams will be eligible to compete in national finals.

The men's team of the Lubbock club placed second in the New Mexico State University Intercolligiate Rodeo last weekend in Las Cruces, N.M., while the women's team tied Sul Ross University with 90 points.

Tarleton State University placed first in men's events at the rodeo. Leading the women's competition at the New Mexico rodeo was Howard College with 230 points and Eastern New Mexico University with 200 points.

Competition for male competitors included bareback riding, saddle bronc riding, bull riding, team roping, calf roping and steer wrestling.

Women performed in barrel racing, goat tying and breakaway roping events.

Message To Washington

MESSAGE — Sorry to bother you again about clearing up my husband's paycheck, since he transferred positions in the Post Office. This all seems to be very, very unnecessary.

Three weeks ago, the postal office in Minnesota called, stating that if we sent this one document the whole matter would be resolved. But for the past four pay periods he has received blank pay cards with no check. This is ridiculous, since he's been driving this route since July, 1978. Anything you may feel that you can do will certainly be appreciated. G.S. — Santa Rosa

SENATOR BENTSEN RESPONDS — Postal officials tell me that a review of their records indicates your husband has been underpaid since consolidation of rural routes. A check for $3,465 should be in your hands before you read this in the newspaper.

MESSAGE — I am asking for your help in getting the information I need to obtain the Targeted Jobs Credit on my company's federal income tax. Businesses claim credit in their tax for hiring groups targeted by a local agency, but when I called the toll-free Internal Revenue Service number they didn't know what the local agency was, nor could they tell me which form I needed. They simply didn't know about the program — and it's one that could help my business out a lot, I'm sure. Can you straighten this out? J.V. — Electra

SENATOR BENTSEN RESPONDS — Under the Bensten Jobs Tax Credit, my bill which was approved by Congress in 1977, you may well qualify for a credit on your 1978 taxes if your payroll increased during the year. The newer, targeted jobs tax credit doesn't go into effect until 1979, which is why the IRS was not aware of it. Generally, though, if you qualify for a credit under the newer targeted program you qualify under the Bentsen Jobs Tax Credit. I have forwarded information from the IRS to help you determine if you are eligible along with Form 5884 FY, which must be filled out to apply.

Federal Marketing Officials Probing Wheat Purchase Deal

CHICAGO (AP) — Depending on whom you asked, big wheeler-dealers in the wheat pit at the world's largest grain exchange were smart, ethical traders. Or, they were the architects of an unscrupulous squeeze play.

Whatever the case, federal officials said they were in a position to corner the Chicago wheat market.

The resulting fracas between the Chicago Board of Trade and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission has focused national attention on two prominent traders and their work in the wheat pit, the center of world wheat trade.

Leslie Rosenthal, exchange vice chairman, who held one of the large buying positions that generated the controversy, denies any wrongdoing. "I trade those numbers all the time," he said of his large wheat holdings.

No government charges in the wheat matter are pending against Rosenthal, or against Alan Freeman, another big wheat trader and a partner in Rosenthal's brokerage firm, or against a third unidentified speculator, believed to be a customer of the Rosenthal firm.

Board of Trade president Robert Wilmouth says no wrongdoing occurred and the exchange will not act against the traders involved. He said federal regulators "misperceived the situation, a misperception made worse by press tendencies to magnify it."

The Commodity Futures Trading Commission, however, says three speculators caused a "major market disturbance" by buying up large amounts of wheat futures contracts — some 2.5 million bushels apiece, court records show. Those contracts gave them the right to delivery of more than three times more wheat than was available in Chicago.

Although the traders did not exceed the 3-million-bushel federal limit on speculative holdings, the agency says they threatened to "squeeze" the "shorts" — or sellers in the market — for their own personal profit. The agency says it's still looking into the matter.

Wheat traders buy or sell futures contracts for delivery of 5,000 bushels each in Toledo or Chicago without respect to the amount of wheat that will be readily available to satisfy the contracts when they expire, near the end of the month for which they are named.

And coming up with real wheat this month in Chicago was a problem. Only about 2 million bushels, or less than one-eighth as much wheat as a year ago, was available for delivery.

One reason for that scarcity was a poor crop last year of soft red winter wheat, the principle type of wheat traded on the exchange. Another was a glut of corn and soybeans taking up Chicago grain storage space. Another reason was the difficulty in transporting grain to Chicago over ice-clogged and flood-swollen rivers.

Because the speculators held so many buying contracts, and because wheat supplies were scarce, the "shorts" — people who had sold contracts to deliver wheat and thus had either to buy a contract to offset their sale or come up with real wheat — were in an excruciating position.

The shorts, according to court records, were small commercial wheat dealers — such as local or regional flour mills who apparently were hedging, or offsetting previous cash market wheat sales with futures market purchases to protect against price fluctuations. Floor traders lacked sympathy for the shorts, partly because it was no secret that wheat supplies in Chicago were tight. One said, "Anyone who's short in that market deserves whatever he gets."

Neither Rosenthal nor Freeman will talk about their profits in the matter. Freeman earlier in the month sought, and temporarily won, a circuit court order preventing the Board of Trade from forcing him to sell his 2.5-million bushel holdings before he was ready, but he did not disclose his financial stakes in the affair.

But as the March contract went off the board last week, it would have been possible for a speculator with 2.5 million bushels to make more than $2 million on March wheat — minus the minimum $300,000 earnest or margin money he would have had to deposited wcth the exchange — if he had bought it at its lowest price of $2.80 3/4 in August. By early March, March wheat prices rose to their highest point of near $3.90 a bushel and went off the board March 21 at $3.74.

Aid For Young Farmers At State Level Assailed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government has enough programs to help young persons get into farming and doesn't need a new one that is supported by the state legislatures, a top Agriculture Department official told a Senate subcommittee Tuesday.

A program of low-interest loans for young families with proven farming ability but limited financial resources "is taking hold," said Assistant Secretary Alex Mercure, who oversees rural development and loan programs.

In the program's first 14 weeks, ending last month, officials approved 1,112 loans totaling $82.5 million, he said.

Missouri and Vermont led in the way in farmers taking advantage of the program, followed by Minnesota, Kansas, North Carolina and Oregon, Mercure said.

A second program of loan guarantees that just started is also showing signs of an early success, he said in opposing a proposed third program of backstopping state loans.

Mercure was testifying before the Agriculture Committee's panel on agricultural credit. It is considering a "family farm entry" proposal under which the Agriculture Department would guarantee up to $400 million in state aid to persons trying to start out in farming.

The state programs would have to help those with less than $75,000 in net resources who prove they cannot get credit elsewhere and have a feasible plan for their first farm. It could be no larger than the average family farm in the area.

Roland Dennistoun, deputy Minnesota agriculture commissioner, said his state's model "family farm security" program enacted in 1976 has loaned $17.4 million to 115 persons who have bought 17,572 acres.

Based on Minnesota's experience, he said he felt the bill is too vague and does not account for the diversity in size and technology in U.S. agriculture today. That could work against someone with proven managerial skills who needed 540 acres for an efficient Minnesota farm, for example, Dennistoun said.

North Carolina state Rep. Ron Taylor, representing the National Conference of State Legislatures, said most states so far favor the bill "because of the flexibility (it) allows for states to establish the type of program that best fits the climate in their farming and lending communities."

"The mushrooming costs to enter farming on a fulltime basis" have meant larger farms in fewer hands, and new cooperative efforts between states and Washington are needed to halt the trend, Taylor said.

North Dakota Agriculture Commissioner Myron Just and a spokesman for the National Farmers Union said the bill should be enacted rapidly.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

THE HOUSE LIVESTOCK AND GRAINS Subcommittee will meet today in Washington to act on legislation designed to raise producer returns for 1979 grain crops.

"Full public hearings on general farm problems, including the severe economic squeeze gripping many grain producers, were held by the full House Agriculture Committee in February," noted Rep. Charles Rose, D-N. C., subcommittee chairman.

"Now our subcommittee wants to see what action may be possible to improve the outlook for this year's wheat and feed grain harvests."

A public hearing — to complete the already lengthy record compiled by the full committee — was held Tuesday, prior to the business meeting today. The session Tuesday was to question administration officials.

THE SUBCOMMITTEE WILL CONSIDER a bill, H.R. 3290, by Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla. The bill would raise the 1979 wheat target price to $3.63 a bushel and the corn target to $2.35 a bushel.

Those rates are about 7 percent above targets previously announced for this year — an increase geared to the administration's anti-inflation guidelines.

The measure also would give the Agriculture Department discretionary authority to raise the target price for cotton, but this provision is outside the jurisdiction of the Livestock and Grains Subcommittee.

The target price program is not a direct support for open market grain prices. Under the program, farmers who comply with government production restraints become eligible for income supplement payments if market prices fall below the targets.

"I BELIEVE SOME INCREASE is warranted because farm production costs are advancing, especially in the case of fuels, well beyond levels anticipated when current support rates were set," Rose said.

Rose said the subcommittee hopes to act quickly on legislation dealing with 1979 crops because farmers soon must make decisions on whether they want to qualify for price support loans and target price protection by enrolling in the 1979 grain set-aside programs — and the target price level will be a factor in those decisions.

Also, he noted, farmers must make decisions soon on how many acres of fall-planted winter wheat to harvest and how many acres of spring crops to plant.

The subcommittee chairman said proposals for longer-range changes in federal grain programs will be discussed later, after the 1979 situation has been dealt with.

Sugarbeet Growing Conditions Aired

AMARILLO (Special)–Sugar beets can be watered a little or watered a lot and still make good use of water, according to Dr. Steven Winter, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station researcher at Bushland.

Farmers with limited water can produce 20 or more tons of sugarbeets per acre, using emergence irrigation and one to three summer irrigations.

Full irrigation with about 25 inches of water applied during the summer will produce in excess of 30 tons per acre. These yields can be obtained with timely management to control weeds, fertilizer level, and disease.

"If one of these steps is not completed, sugarbeet yields will be poor regardless of irrigation management," Winter said.

In order to reach this conclusion the researcher conducted experiments from 1976 through 1978 at the USDA Research Center on clay loam soil in level borders which retained all irrigation and rainfall on each plot.

With furrow irrigation some rainfall will be lost as runoff. This would reduce yield about 0.75 ton per inch of runoff or require additional irrigation.

In 1976, all treatments received an emergence irrigation and up to eight summer irrigations. Sugarbeets getting an emergence irrigation and 13 inches of rain produced 15 tons per acre.

Watering eight times at two-week intervals from June 4 to September 10 took 27 inches of water and produced 30 tons per acre.

Two seasonal irrigations, on July 8 and Aug. 14, with emergence irrigation yielded 22 tons per acre. Water use efficiency varied from 0.58 to 0.66 ton per acre inch of water, but was above 0.60 when the first irrigation was applied in June.

Seasonal rainfall in 1977 was again 13 inches, but six inches came in August. In his studies, Winter applied an irrigation for emergence and irrigations of five inches at three, four, and six weeks intervals.

The most water applied was five four-inch irrigations which produced 34 tons per acre. The most efficient treatment, five irrigations of two inches each, yielded 27 tons and produced 0.92 ton of sugarbeets per acre inch of water.

Emergence irrigation and a single summer irrigation on either June 10 or July 22 produced 19 tons per acre. Two summer irrigations produced in excess of 21 tons per acre.

Water use efficiency varied from 0.80 to 0.92 tons per acre if the first seasonal irrigation came in June. Delaying the first seasonal irrigation until July, cut yield and water use efficiency.

In 1978, Winter designed an experiment to determine if beet spacing in the row affected yield with either a five-inch irrigation for emergence, limited irrigation using 19 inches of water, or a full irrigation with 24 inches.

It was a very wet growing season with a total of 19 inches of rain from May to October. Six inches fell in May and five more in September. Sugarbeets were spaced at six, nine, 12, and 15 iches in 30-inch rows.

The highest yield came with six-inch spacing regardless of irrigation level. Having 15-inch spacing cut yields two to three tons per acre.

Winter said, "Yields were outstanding, sugarbeets on six inch spacings that were fully irrigated produced 41 tons per acre. Limited irrigation produced 36 tons per acre and emergence only irrigation made 23 tons per acre.

Summer irrigations and rainfall were most efficiently used by sugarbeets when enough water was applied to maintain continuous growth without periods of major water stress. At least one irrigatin in June, to assure early initiation of major top and root growth, was especially important.

However, sugarbeets made good use of water even when subjected to periods of water stress up to five months.

Charolais Cattle To Be Sold Here

About 50 Charolais cows, bulls and heifers will be offered for sale Saturday at the annual Charolais Show and Sale, according to Diaz Day, president of the Golden Spread Charolais Association.

The indoor sale will begin at 7 p.m. by the pool at the South Park Inn in Lubbock. Association members from Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico are expected to participate in the sale.

A welcoming party will take place Friday night at the South Park Inn. In addition to the sale on Saturday, a membership meeting will be conducted for the election of officers and directors for 1979-80.

Sweepstakes Gain Renewed Popularity

WASHINGTON (AP) — Contests and sweepstakes are growing popular again at grocery stores, following a sharp decline in recent years.

"Contests and sweepstakes appeal to retailers because they increase sales volume and help maintain customer loyalty. Contests help increase spending on non-food items, too," commented Anthony Gallo of the Department of Agriculture.

Gallo explained that contests are ideal for grocery stores because food is a repeat business and the contests help attract new customers.

Futures Finish Mixed

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 95 points lower to 12 points higher in active trade of 33,760 cars Tuesday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Distant June was the weakest after October fell 112, with only nearby April gaining.

The cash connected commission house was a net seller, buying early, selling, and later buying again. Light cattle supply and firmness in cash cattle brought support. Weakness in pork pressured late trade.

Feeder cattle futures closed 20 to 135 lower led by May after August fell the 150 limit level.

Prices slipped to the lowest since February. The market reacted after an early gain of 65 on spillover buying from live cattle futures.

Weakness in the pork complex and concern over effects of the trucker strike on beef trade contributed to late selling. The limit level move was the sixth in the past seven trading days.

Hog futures closed 67 to 125 lower with the exception of distant June, which closed 20 higher. Sales totaled 7,060 lots.

Buyers were slow to return interest as they noted heavy kill and the truckers strike. Prices fell to the lowest since September on the setbacks.

Nearbys were lower from the start, with the lightly-traded March briefly 140 higher.

Sharp declines in cash bellies at noon and increased slaughter forced prices to the lowest since July, more than 17 cents under recent highs.

Wholesale bacon was off 4½ cents to up ½ cent at 43½ to 49½ cents a pound, which is the lowest since December 1977, f.o.b. river points.

Cotton Futures

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures No. 2 closed $1.90 to $4.75 a bale lower Tuesday.

Prices declined in moderate trading, brokers said.

Trading on the Lubbock spot cotton market was slow on Tuesday. Supplies of cotton for sale were moderate to heavy and demand was light.

LUBBOCK SPOT COTTON

Quotations are the approximate prices reported to the Agricultural Marketing Service for qualities equal to the U.S. Official Grade and Staple Standards. Prices are for micronaire (mike) readings of 3.5 through 4.9, in mixed lots, uncompressed, free of all charges in the warehouse in the market.

Price trend: lower on Tuesday.

Southwestern Bell Plans New Service

Lubbock customers of Southwestern Bell Telephone should receive faster, more efficient cable and repair service when construction is completed on two new work centers, company officials say.

One center, located at 8302 Ave. P, will house the construction work force responsible for laying and maintaining the cables which connect customers' lines with the central office downtown, according to Bob Dunbar, division manager. The facility is scheduled for completion about May 15.

The second work center will house equipment as well as installation and repair vehicles. The Frankford Avenue facility should be completed in April 1980.

"The addition of these centers will relieve crowded conditions in our present work centers and provide additional space closer to Lubbock population growth areas," Dunbar said.

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

BIORHYTHMS FOR APR. 4, 1979

PHYSICAL
Criticals: 4, 16, 27, 39, 50, 62, 73 ..... A negligent day
Highs: 1-3, 17-26, 40-49, 63-72 ..... Hop to it, it's your day
Lows: 5-15, 28-38, 51-61, 74-75 ..... Action not your strong suit

EMOTIONAL
Criticals: 11, 25, 39, 53, 67, 81 ..... Think twice before acting
Highs: 1-10, 26-38, 54-66, 82-85 ..... Socially a real up time
Lows: 12-24, 40-52, 68-80 ..... The blahs prevail

INTELLECTUAL
Criticals: 4, 20, 37, 53, 70, 86 ..... Mistakes can abound
Highs: 5-19, 38-52, 71-85 ..... Brains at zenith
Lows: 1-3, 21-36, 54-69, 87-95 ..... Ponder choices carefully

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

These numbers are yours permanently. Check them each day for your biorhythm reading.

Heartline

Heartline is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems — fast. If you have a question or a problem not answered in these columns, write Heartline, 114 East Dayton Street, West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. You will receive a prompt reply, but you must include a stamped, self-addressed envelope. The most useful replies will be printed in this column.

HEARTLINE: I've been hearing from some of my friends about prescription drugs which can cause problems if taken with certain foods or drinks. We all know that you should not mix drugs with alcoholic beverages. What other facts should We be aware of? — J.L.

All foods and drinks contain chemicals which can change the way medicines affect our body. Some food and drug combinations can bring on severe reactions, and in rare instances, even death. You should always talk to your doctor or pharmacist about the medications prescribed for you. Always ask if there are certain foods or liquids you should avoid while taking the medication and whether the medicine should be taken on an empty stomach, before meals or after meals.

You should never take tetracycline, an antibiotic, with milk or other dairy products as the calcium in milk, cheese and yogurt interferes with your body's ability to absorb the drug.

Be sure to check with your doctor before taking medicines with soft drinks, fruit or vegetable juices. Many medicines are designed to dissolve in the intestines where they are more easily absorbed into the blood stream. The acid in soft drinks, fruit and vegetable juices can cause certain drugs to dissolve in the stomach instead.

Probably the most hazardous food and drug combination is between MAO (mono-amine-oxydase) inhibitors, which are medicines usually prescribed for depression or high blood pressure, and foods such as Chianti wine, aged cheese and yogurt'

Occasionally, Heartline will touch on medical questions, but we are not prepared to answer such reader questions on a regular basis. For information about your medical problems, always consult your doctor.

HEARTLINE: I am 54 years old and disabled. I applied for Social Security disability last June and it was denied. I filed for a reconsideration and that, too, was denied. I read in your column about your red tape-cutting system so I decided to write you. Can you help me get my Social Security disability? — G.E.

Within the past year, Heartline has received over 2,000 requestts such as yours. There is no way we can help any person get approved for disability by Social Security. You must be considered disabled by Social Security-appointed doctors. All We can do is explain to you your rights under the law and suggest that you use the hearings and appeals rights available to you. If you have had a disability claim denied, you have the right to file for a reconsideration. This must be done in writing, and it is best to file it directly with your Social Security office.

If you are again denied disability benefits after the reconsideration, you can file for a hearing before an administrative law judge. If the hearing results in your claim once again being denied, then you have the right to apply to the Appeals Council for redetermination of those findings.

During all these processes, you should be aware of the reasons your claim is being denied' So many people write to us for help and they do not even know why their claim has been denied. However, the reason for denial is always given on the letter that tells you your claim has been denied. If you don't understand the reason, call your Social Security office and ask for an explanation you can't fight for your benefits if you don't know why you are being denied them.

You have the right to see your file at the Social Security office to see what evidence they have against your claim. If you were turned down because you lack enough quarters or because you cannot meet the work requirements you must have worked five of the 10 years immediately preceeding your disability), then there is nothing you can do. If your claim is denied because you are not considered disabled by Social Security or because they feel that your disability will not last one full year, then it is your responsibility to see if you can find any new medical evidence that will help your case.

Radiation Leak May Continue For Weeks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairmen of two congressional committees which oversee nuclear energy said Tuesday they believe radiation could continue to leak from the disabled Three Mile Island reactor for weeks and possibly months.

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., said cleaning up huge quantities of radioactive water has become "the biggest part of the problem" now that the risk of a hydrogen explosion or a core meltdown has apparently passed.

Hart, chairman of the Senate nuclear regulation subcommittee, also said in an interview that the cost of cleaning up the power plant could be so excessive that the plant may have to be permanently abandoned.

"It could become a billion-dollar mausoleum," Hart said.

And Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., chairman of the House Interior Committee, said that because of intense radiation still in the reactor vessel, it will be some time before uranium fuel rods can be removed from the crippled reactor.

"We've got to get those rods out of there," Udall told reporters after emerging from a briefing by White House and National Security Council officials.

"We could still have a serious problem ... It will be weeks or months before people can go back inside," he said.

And despite earlier claims by officials that the chance of a core meltdown had never been more than slight, Udall said: "It was a very close call. We were very close to a real disaster."

The congressman said the accident raises "a whole series of broad philosophic policy questions" on the future of nuclear power.

"It may have been a break for the country — this tragedy — because it happened before we got too dependent on nuclear power," Udall said.

He said his committee would conduct a full investigation to "find out what happened, what lessons are to be learned, and to what extent there was a failure of machines and a failure of human beings."

Udall said talk that the plant might have to be closed down permanently is "pure speculation. We won't know until we can get in there and see the extent of damage. It might be that the reactor can be repaired. It's just too early to say."

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, who also attended the briefing, said, "I guess the acute danger is behind us."

But the Massachusetts Democrat said the accident points up the need — including the possibility of new legislation — to be better prepared in case there's a repetition of the Three Mile Island episode.

Hart said extreme caution should be used during the plant cleanup because of the continuing presence of "large volumes of water that are highly contaminated."

There is a possibility of a continued release of radioactivity for weeks to come, he said. "The cleanup should be very carefully scrutinized by the federal government. And cleanup decisions should not be made purely on cost," Hart said.

Denton Devoted To Profession

ulates nuclear. He gets a little upset with me when I push it."

Mrs. Denton teaches science and communications to sixth, seventh and eighth graders at the Stone Ridge Country Day School in a Maryland suburb.

The Dentons have three teenage children — Elizabeth, who is interested in veterinary medicine; Spencer, who is interested in sports; and Harold Jr., who these days, his mother says, is absorbed by cars.

Mrs. Denton says her husband has called home every day when he gets to his motel room to change clothes. One call came at 2:30 a.m. On Tuesday, he called at 7 a.m.

She wanted to go up to Pennsylvania, but he discouraged her, saying they would not see much of each other.

Denton does not carry work home with him, Mrs. Denton says, but he is in the office early and stays an hour and a half after others have left to keep up with reading he must absorb. On weekends he usually stops by the office, too.

At home, he is an avid reader of novels "and heavy stuff, too," she says, and he loves sailing.

To keep in shape, he swims three times a week and uses the sauna and hot tub of a public facility near his home.

He dabbles at woodworking, too — he made a grandfather's clock and, for his wife' birthday, a music box — and the Denton family loves the out of doors.

They had planned a camping vacation this Friday in the Florida Keys, according to Mrs. Denton, "but needless to say, that's out. He plans to stay up there until the reactor is cold."

Mrs. Denton says they both thoroughly enjoyed "The China Syndrome." The movie was denounced by the nuclear power industry even before its release, which occurred shortly before events at Three Mile Island made it seem prophetic.

Mrs. Denton said she was very relieved that a disaster was averted in the movie. "I cried at the end," she said.

Adams Opposes Amtrak Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Transportation Secretary Brock Adams said Tuesday that Amtrak passenger trains waste energy and that it would be cheaper to give its riders free plane tickets than to subsidize their rail fares.

Arguing for an administration plan to cut the Amtrak system by 12,000 miles, Adams said the government puts up a $2 subsidy for each $1 an Amtrak passenger pays for his ticket.

For less money, he said, "we can give them a ticket free and send them by air" on most routes.

Adams said that with the cutback, the administration will save $1.4 billion in federal subsidies over the next five years while continuing to provide service to 91 percent of the passengers served by the current system.

Passenger fares would be increased gradually to cover 50 percent of the actual cost by 1985, he said.

Adams testified before a House transportation and commerce subcommittee, where congressmen and officials from 16 states lined up to fight for the survival of home-state trains.

A common argument from the congressmen was that the proposed cutback will gut Amtrak at a time when the nation is running short of oil and will have to turn back to trains.

Most of the officials argued that trains are the most energy-efficient form of transportation when filled to capacity and run under ideal conditions.

"I believe it is sheer folly to pursue a course of massive cutbacks in rail service at a time when our nation is confronted with an energy crisis of ever growing dimension," said Rep. Harley Staggers, D-W.Va.

"I cannot support any plan which sounds the death knell for rail passenger service," added Staggers, chairman of the House Commerce Committee which will debate resolutions to veto the administration proposal.

WOMEN WHO KNEW JESUS

Mary Of Bethany Displayed Love

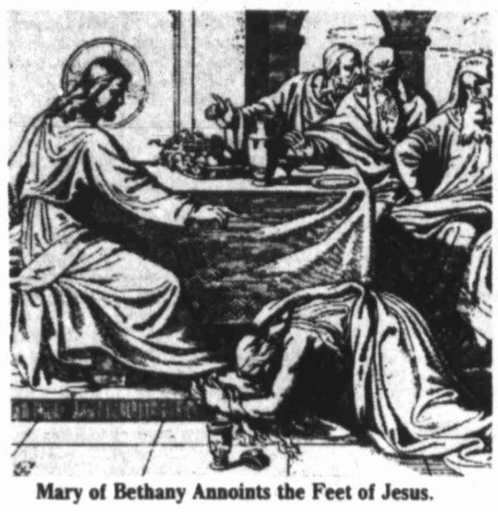

By EDITH DEEN
(Sixth of eight parts)

"Why this waste? For this ointment might have been sold for a large sum, and given to the poor!" they complained.

But Jesus said to them: "Why do you trouble the woman? For she has done a beautiful thing to me. For you always have the poor with you, but you will not always have me...Truly, I say to you, wherever this gospel is preached in the whole world, what she has done will be told in memory of her."

Mary of Bethany had a close fellowship with Jesus. He had revealed himself to her in his toils, conflicts and suffering.

Who he was and where his power came from was a mystery to many, but not to Mary of Bethany. When he raised her brother Lazarus from the tomb, she had the spiritual discernment to understand his love of others in action. And she gave Jesus back the same kind of love in this last opportunity to serve him.

Mary of Bethany Annoints the Feet of Jesus.

Her action in annointing Christ six days before Passover went beyond that moment of time into eternity. It exemplified the meaning of true giving and enabled others to see that unselfish love is eternal. She was willing to prove her love, no matter what the material cost of the jar of pure nard. (It cost about $60 then, far more now.)

On the other hand, Judas Iscariot, one of the 12 apostles, went before the chief priests to betray Jesus. He received from them 30 pieces of silver, about one-third the worth of Mary's gift.

These coins became a curse to Judas, who died a self-inflicted death; the money Mary had spent on the costly ointment became a blessing to her memory.

Judas's act represented hate and a misplaced power in action. It brought good to no one — only death because he could not live with himself afterward. Mary's gift represeted love at its best. She knew that Christians must suffer much but that the pangs of that suffering were lessened if they remained kind and loving toward one another.

Mary was assured in her heart that Jesus would valiantly go forward to suffer because he who was born in the image of God believed all things (even that death could be overcome), hoped for all things (even eternal life) and was willing to endure all things (even death on the cross).

Love to Mary of Bethany was not just a part of her existence; it was the very breath of her life.

CHEAP FUEL — Impoverished Mexican citizens depend on inexpensive energy for transportation. Short hauls are often made in burro-powered carts, like this one in Reynosa, Mexico. Longer runs are made in diesel-fueled buses. Diesel sells for about 16 cents a gallon and many Americans cross the Rio Grande to take advantage of the low price. (AP Laserphoto)

South Texas Citizens Capitalize On Cheap Mexican Diesel

REYNOSA, Mexico (AP) — The Texas woman whose husband regularly crosses the border to pay almost sinfully low prices for one of life's necessities talked as though she is engaged in international intrigue.

"The more said about it, the more chance they'll try to stop it," she said, asking not to be identified. "I think we should let a sleeping dog lie."

What her husband does — about twice a week — is cross the international bridge and drive to one of the seven service stations here that sell diesel fuel.

In the clear light of day and fully within the law he pulls into one of the Pemex stations and fills the tank of his diesel automobile.

The fuel costs just over a peso a liter. That translates to the fantasyland price of about 16 cents a gallon.

"Oh, yes, it is a savings," she said — an understatement.

Mateo Salinas, president of the local association of gas station managers, said the Mexicans don't mind selling the inexpensive diesel to U.S. customers — as long as the visitors from across the river don't haul it away in oversized tanks.

Salinas said the nationalized oil industry in Mexico subsidizes diesel fuel to keep the price down. While prices for gasoline are about the same as across the border, the diesel fuel has remained at antique prices.

"Diesel moves the country," Salinas said.

The Salinas brothers said many U.S. citizens fill their diesel tanks here. Some are tourists headed south and others are regular customers who live in the Rio Grande Valley of Texas.

About a year ago the 100-liter per purchase limit was placed on U.S. vehicles.

"We just don't have the capacity to supply all those trucks," one service station manager here said. "They used to come all night long."

He recalled that back when diesel was about 11 cents a gallon here he pumped 10,000 gallons of it in one night.

Mateo Salinas said some U.S. buyers were purchasing thousands of liters of diesel and re-selling it across the border at large profits.

The Mexican diesel supply is also protected by the often-crowded bridges that span the Rio Grande.

Dr. Antonio Diaz, a Brownsville physician who owns a diesel car, said he would rather pay U.S. diesel prices than cross the border. He said diesel in Brownsville sells for about a nickel less than regular gasoline.

"I hate to go over there and wait 30 minutes at the bridge and another 30 minutes coming back. I'd rather pay the extra dollar or so and not waste the time," he said.

He recalled that when he first got the car he did make the crossing and paid less than a dime per gallon.

Dr. Adele Bromiley of Brownsville agreed her time is more valuable than a few dollars per tank.

"My husband hates to go to Matamoros," she said.

She added that she developed some doubts about the quality of Mexican diesel after leaving a bucket of it out overnight. She said the fuel developed a "horrible dirty sludge."

Mateo Salinas agreed that the Mexican diesel is sometimes "heavier and dirtier" than the U.S. fuel. Several U.S. diesel owners who fill up in Mexico said they keep a close eye on their engines for signs of the dirty fuel.

Anti-Crime Panel Acts To Accelerate Campaign

By JEFF McCASLIN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock County Crime Prevention Council, already several weeks behind a kickoff date for Operation Identification, chose a logo for the Crime Abatement Program, elected a board of directors and discussed a May crime symposium to raise funds for the project at their meeting Tuesday.

The council was shown a video tape presented by Visual Recordings of Lubbock as a possible method for keeping an inventory for items in households. The demonstration, called video inventory proof, was designed to keep a video record of merchandise that can't be marked, such as jewelry.

Although the system has not been fully developed, council members agreed that because of the cost it would not be feasible to include it in their Operation Identification program.

John Montford, Lubbock County criminal district attorney, said the video inventory system is a nice idea but added that only items clearly marked would be admissible as evidence in court.

"If all you had was a video account of an item you would have to prove that particular item came from that house."

The names of 33 local citizens, including six Mexican-Americans, were submitted to members for the council's Board of Directors and the names of those elected will be announced during next week's meeting.

Mal Cleland, Better Business Bureau director and chairman of the business crimes committee, presented the council with a preliminary mock-up of logos to be given to homeowners to display. The emblems would warn prospective burglars that valuables in the home were marked and could be identified by any law enforcement agency.

The logo, with black lettering on a yellow background, will be visible in the dark and can be posted in specific areas of the home. Cleland said he could have 100,000 of them printed up for about $230 but added it would take six weeks.

However, council members disagreed on what should be printed on the logos. After a lengthy discussion and advice from several representatives of local law enforcement agencies, it was decided the logos should read "Operation Identification" instead of "Crime Abatement Program."

Becky Mahan, council secretary and director of Rape Crisis Center, said the word abatement is not readily understood by the criminal element and that the logo should reflect wording that the criminal would understand. The logos will also include phrasing that says the items in this home can be identified by any law enforcement agency in the country.

Cleland told the council a former con man will highlight the guest speakers scheduled for the May 3 crime symposium to be held in the Civic Center.

The symposium, which will be in two sessions, one in the morning and the other in the afternoon, will include such topics as embezzlement, check forgery, bad checks, shoplifting and internal security for local merchants.

Cleland said the symposium will be advertised in the Chamber of Commerce newsletter and by local media.

Chairman Sheriff "Choc" Blanchard said committee chairman will be called upon to give reports at the next meeting scheduled for 7 a.m. Tuesday in the Emergency Operations Center in the basement at City Hall.

Swiss To Get New U.S. Armament

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon plans to sell Switzerland $173.5 million in new armored equipment and self-propeled artillery, it notified Congress Tuesday.

The formal letters of offer cover the proposed sale of 207 self-propeled 155-millimeter howitzers, 225 armored troop carriers and 160 vehicles to haul ammunition for the artillery and armored vehicles.

The Pentagon said, "There will be no impact on U.S. defense readiness inasmuch as the Swiss request accepts a normal production lead time."

Random Stops By Police In Nebraska Reviewed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court has told Nebraska's highest court to review a state law authorizing random police stops of motorists who are not suspected of breaking any law.

They told the Nebraska court to restudy its decision upholding the law in light of a March 27 Supreme Court ruling that declared random police stops in Delaware an unconstitutional invasion of privacy.

We're On Our Way!
Our first day of business was April 1, 1940.
Now, we're on our way to the biggest sales month in the 39-year history of our dealership. We're not about to let this record month get away. We will sell every Chrysler and Plymouth in our stock at rock bottom prices and you will receive the highest possible appraisal for the car you are trading.
Give us the opportunity to say: "yes" to the deal you want.
Fenner Tubbs

FENNER'S 39TH CELEBRATION CLEARANCE

Volare 4-Door Sedan
ROOM, RIDE AND COMFORT FOR LESS THAN YOU IMAGINE
Plymouth's Energy-saving Family-size Sedan
VOLARÉ 4-DOOR $4995
YOU SAVE HUNDREDS OF DOLLARS AND GET THIS:
Do you want a car with the advantages of reduced bulk and weight with the accent on interior comfort and the road-smoothing ride of a big car? Volare's got it! This sedan is equipped with TorqueFlite transmission, 225 CID 6-cylinder engine, long life battery, dual remote control mirrors, air conditioner, power front disc brakes and power steering. The exterior finish is Light Cashmere. This is value you can count on!
EFFECTIVE NOW FOR A LIMITED TIME . . . FREE 5/50,000 WARRANTY!
We offer you a 5-Year/50,000-Mile Extended Service Contract* at NO EXTRA CHARGE on all 1979 Plymouth Volare, Plymouth Voyager and Chrysler LeBaron models. This is the longest term protection plan offered by any U.S. vehicle manufacturer.

Lubbock Christian College has been notified by the Texas Department of Health that the water being supplied by our system exceeds the maximum constituent level for Fluoride established by the Department's "Drinking Water Standards" which were promulgated as required by the "Safe Drinking Water Act", Public Law 93-523 (U.S.).

The limit for this area has been set at 1.6 milligrams of Fluoride per liter of water. The samples of water from our system contained 4.2 milligrams of Fluoride per liter. There is no immediate health hazard for drinking water containing Fluoride at this level.

Absentee Voting Light In Childress

A-J Correspondent

CHILDRESS — Although there are races in all elections scheduled for Saturday, absentee balloting is running light. Officials report that only a handful of absentee votes have been turned in for city, school trustee and hospital board elections.

Three aldermen are seeking re-election to their city council seats and two are opposed.

Only Charles Rogers in Place 3 is unopposed in his re-election bid. Dr. Larry Moore is vying with Charles Smith for his Place 2 office, and Pat Steed is opposed by K.C. Session for Place 1.

All incumbents are seeking re-election, and are opposed by a fifth candidate, Janis Lawrence. Other board members running for their posts again are Richard Bird, Ronnie Leach and Freddie Cordell.

Hospital board members do not run for individual seats, but rather the four persons receiving the greatest number of votes assume the seats on the board.

The board of trustees of the Childress Independent School District has two open seats, and both are contested. Judy Johnson is opposed in her candidacy for re-election to Place 7 by Mrs. Mayfield Harris. In Place 6, the incumbent, Bill Bennett, is not seeking re-election. Vying for his post are Dr. Mike Henderson and Clarence Owens Jr.

Snyder, Lamesa Thespians Advance

Under UIL rules, two schools from each district move to the statewide competition. Snyder advanced with its presentation of "Macbeth," while Lamesa moved on with "A Game." The alternate was "Cinderella," presented by San Angelo Lakeview.

The award for best actor went to Bryan Lewellan of Snyder for his performance as Macbeth; his costar, Nell Sears, won best actress as Lady Macbeth.

Springlake-Earth High Wins Contest

CANYON (Special) — Springlake-Earth High School swepth through the District 3A literary contest held here Saturday to take the title by more than twice as many points as the second place school.

SPE garnered 209 total points, and was followed in the competition by Farwell with 101, Vega with 92, Bovina with 65, Hart with 30 and Kress with 23 points.

Springlake students captured eight of the 16 total events to take the championship.

Burlington's Expansion At Childress Doubtful

A-J Correspondent

CHILDRESS — A planned expansion of Fort Worth and Denver railroad shops in Childress has come to a standstill and Mayor Walter Lockhoof fears the city may lose the shops altogether.

Lockhoof Tuesday released a statement from officials of Burlington Northern, the parent line of the railroads, stating that an apparent agreement for an expansion of the Childress shops (which repair locomotives) has bogged down in union negotiations.

The statement concluded, "The shop craft representatives made demands totally unrelated to the issue in question as a condition of settlement. Since we consider one of the issues not negotiable we would say the enlargement of the Childress shops is a dead issue."

Lockhoof said he feels that without the expansion the shops may be moved from Childress.

"The railroad needs to expand the shops in order to adequately handle the workload," Lockhoof said. "Now that expansion here is a dead issue there's a chance we'll lose the shops altogether."

The mayor noted that as much as a year ago railroad officials indicated they would like to see the shops moved to Fort Worth.

"Only two weeks ago I talked with a railroad vice president who said Fort Worth would be a more suitable location because they have land available there, management is there and there's a good labor supply," Lockhoof said.

The mayor said there are five unions in the Childress shop and that four of them voted for the expansion. The fifth called for a provision unrelated to the project in Childress and railroad officials consider the demand not negotiable.

"There are about 100 unions connected with the Burlington line and all of them from Houston to Seattle approved the Childress expansion except the one union vote here and that killed the whole thing," Lockhoof said.

He noted that loss of the expansion plans also means a possible federal grant for a railroad underpass in Childress has gone down the drain. Lockhoof was in Dallas last week negotiating for a $1 million grant for construction of an underpass in the downtown area. He said the expansion was an important factor in establishing reasons for need of the underpass.

"By 1981 it is estimated that 40 trains a day will go through the city, blocking crossings for six to nine hours daily," Lockhoof said. "That leaves two-fifths of the city blocked off from emergency vehicles such as fire trucks and ambulances."

There is one underpass now but it is at the extreme northwest edge of the city on U.S. Highway 83.

The mayor is calling on residents for support in keeping the shops in Childress. He asked citizens to write to officials or to circulate petitions.

The shops now employ about 70 people.

Police To Probe Hospital Death

ABILENE (AP) — A woman who died March 27 while hospitalized for tests accidentally received a dose of a solution containing formaldehyde, the death certificate shows.

The Abilene Reporter-News obtained a copy of the death certificate Tuesday. In a copyrighted story, the newspaper said it shows that the formaldehyde was the immediate cause of death for Shirley Jean Sutton, 35, who was admitted to the hospital March 19 for routine tests.

Police Chief Warren Dodson has ordered an investigation into the death, which has been ruled accidental.

Dodson issued a statement Monday night which said hospital officials "welcomed the investigation" and have "offered the wholehearted cooperation of the hospital."

Mrs. Sutton's husband Ollie requested the police investigation as well as an autopsy. Sutton said he was told by a doctor that formaldehyde was not supposed to be on the hospital's fourth floor, where his wife was staying.

Lubbock Slips Up On MHS

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Usually, when a team posts a 19-6 victory, the coach of that club can't find enough to words to praise his players.

But that wasn't the case Tuesday afternoon at Mackenzie Park after the Monterey Plainsmen knocked four Lubbock High Westerner pitchers from the mound during the second game of a 4-AAAA doubleheader.

What Moegle was upset about was that Lubbock High took the opener 10-6. It was the first time in two years that Monterey had lost a district game.

The doubleheader split leaves the Plainsmen and Westerners even in the 4-AAAA race at 1-1. Overall, Monterey is 12-4, while Lubbock High is 11-5.

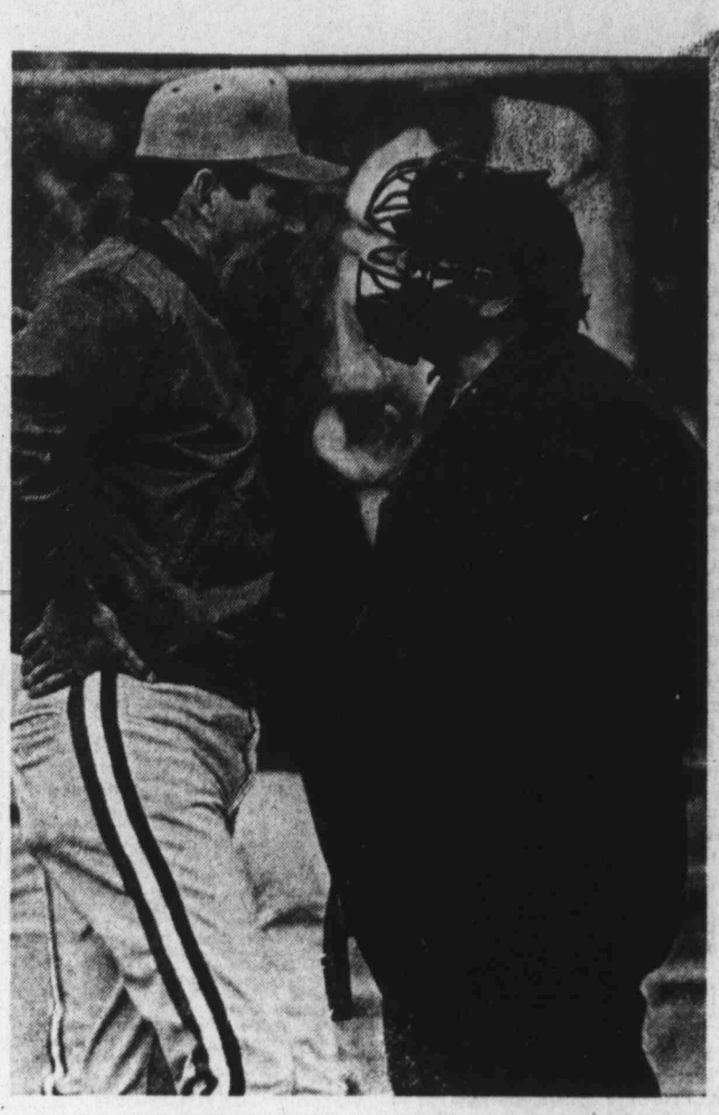

"A lot of people didn't think we would be able to stay on the field with Monterey," said Westerner coach Bart Hernandez. "But we were able to hit Potts (Monterey pitcher Kent) like we owned him. In fact, we were able to hit Pinkerton (Ricky, the Plainsmen's starting pitcher in the second game) also well."

In the first game, Potts suffered his first loss of the season. He has won five games. Meanwhile, Sammy Chavez (2-1) picked up the victory in relief.

Two Games Open '79 Season

By The Associated Press

Hoping to duplicate last year's success story when a record of more than 40 million fans jammed ball parks in the United States and Canada, major league baseball opens its 1979 season today.

There is one game scheduled in each league, with more than 52,000 fans expected at Riverfront Stadium in Cincinnati to watch the Reds face the San Francisco Giants in the National League opener at 1:30 p.m. CST and 35,000 anticipated in Seattle's Kingdome for the Mariners' American League opener against the California Angels at 9:35 p.m.

ed a 16-14 record with a 2.87 earned-run average for the Reds last season while Blue was 18-10 for the Giants with a 2.79 ERA in 1978.

For the Reds, it will be the start of a new era with John McNamara replacing popular Sparky Anderson as manager of the team and Pete Rose, a Cincinnati star for 16 seasons, moving on to Philadelphia via the free-agent route.

Both Cincinnati and San Francisco hope to overhaul the Los Angeles Dodgers, who have captured two straight National League pennants under manager Tom Lasorda. No NL manager has ever won pennants in each of his first three seasons and Lasorda will be trying to accomplish that feat this year.

The Dodgers will raise the NL flag Thursday in Los Angeles with either Don Sutton or Burt Hooton pitching against Gaylord Perry, San Diego's Cy Young Award winner last season. Thursday's other NL opener finds the New York Mets at Chicago with Craig Swan, the league leader in ERA last season, facing Rick Reuschel of the Cubs.

Just as the Reds and Giants hope to overhaul the Dodgers in the NL West, California has the same kind of ambition in the AL West. The Angels added perennial batting champion Rod Carew over the winter and will open at Seattle with Frank Tanana, who was 18-12 with a 3.65 ERA last season. Glenn Abbott, 7-15 with a 5.28 ERA, will start for the Mariners.

Four AL openers are scheduled for Thursday, with most of the attention riveted on New York where the Yankees will raise their second straight world championship flag and then send Cy Young Award winner Ron Guidry to the mound against the Milwaukee Brewers' Mike Caldwell.

Elsewhere Thursday, Toronto will open with Jim Clancy against Dennis Leonard of Kansas City as the Royals begin pursuit of a fourth straight AL West crown. Texas will use Steve Comer in Detroit against Dave Rozema of the Tigers, and Dennis Eckersley pitches for Boston against Cleveland's Rick Wise.

By Friday, weather permitting, all 26 teams will be in action.

The season apparently will start with only two of the 52 regular umpires on duty. Rookie Ted Hendry of the American League and veteran Paul Pryor of the National League are the only regulars who have signed 1979 contracts. The remaining 50 umpires are holding out for better salaries and will be replaced by minor league and amateur umps.

"We will be using local people known to the clubs," American League president Lee MacPhail said. "These are umpires who work college and summer games and are well known to the clubs through their scouting efforts."

MacPhail said he saw no indication that the dispute could be settled in time for the regular umpires to work the openers.

Once More, With Feeling

ALMOST BY THE time the cheerleader jumped up and touched her toes the first time and pasted on her best smile, D.K. Perry of SMU fielded the kickoff near his goal. Almost by the time the cameraman had closed one eye and poked the other up against the viewfinder, Perry was trotting into the end zone.

Not the one to his back, but the one at yon end of the playing surface.

Just that quick — the initial kickoff of the season — SMU was in the scoring business and the Southwest Conference had settled into mid-season form.

Meanwhile, the voice of a silver-throated sportscaster was telling you how this, the 1978 season, was to be filled with thrills, excitement, and game-deciding runs and tackles.

Some four months after the final yellow flags were thrown, the final whistle tooted, the final cleat planted on artificial surface, the last elbow pad laid aside, it was evident that that oil company so much a part of the Southwest Conference for so many years was not completely out of the show.

• • •

THIS TIME A year ago, after having been there to record it on radio since SWC football fields were just cleared-off vacant lots with lines, it appeared that

NOW WAIT A MINUTE—Lubbock High coach Bart Hernandez meets umpire Jimmy Chennault down the third base line to voice his opinion about a home run hit by Westerner shortstop Noel Jaime in the first game of a doubleheader. Hernandez was putting his two cents in after Monterey coach Bobby Moegle had argued that Jaime's hit did not clear the left field fence in the air. However, Hernandez won the discussion and the home run stood. (Photo By Milton Adams)

Lubbock, Monterey Split

"We're not known as a power hitting team" team," said Hernandez. "I was more surprised than our players that we were able to knock the ball out of the park."

The second game, called because of the 10-run rule after five frames, started off the way the first game ended—Lubbock High showing off its newly discovered power.

However, Monterey was able to turn the momentum in the third inning when 19 Plainsmen stepped to the plate. When Lubbock High's fourth relief pitcher Randall Hairgrove finally put out the fire, Monterey had scored 16 times on eight hits.

Even though Monterey coach Moegle was upset by the performance of his team's play, the offensive explosion did manage to break his no-comment attitude for a moment.

"We were able to get a few hits to fall," said the Plainsmen coach. "I guess it took something like that before we would wake up."

"I'm not blaming the umpires," said Hernandez. "But Andy Vasquez (the starter) is a control pitcher. I know he doesn't throw that many balls."

During the third inning charge, Monterey had four extra base hits. Potts, catcher Kelly Smith and second baseman Randy Lebetter each hit home runs, while center fielder Andy Barron tripled to right center. Ledbetter's homer drove home Barron as the inning ended with the Plainsmen on top 17-5.

"What happened is that our running game was shut down,' said Hernandez. "We lost our confidence, but we'll be alright."

In other 4-AAAA action, Plainview swepted a doubleheader from Hereford to take the early loop lead. Plainview won the first game 9-3 and 10-3 in the second contest.

LCHS Wins Ninth Game

Lubbock Christian jumped on the Plainview junior varsity for 10 runs in the first three innings and went on to triumph 12-1 in baseball game called at the end of five innings on the 10-run rule.

The victory upped the Eagles' record to 9-2 for the year. They play next against Monterey Thursday morning in the Lubbock Tournament.

LCHS picked up 3 runs in the second inning and followed with 7 in the third. That third-inning uprising came with three hits, three walks and a hit batsman.

Winning pitcher Stephen Sikes went the distance, and also he went two-for-two at the place. Teammates Todd Towns and Gary Linn had doubles and drove in 2 runs each.

Colorado Governor Seeking Fairbanks' Financial Settlement

DENVER (AP) — Gov. Richard Lamm has angrily urged the University of Colorado to release all financial details surrounding settlement of the legal issues that had prevented Chuck Fairbanks from becoming CU's football coach.

"I, like a lot of other Coloradans, was upset by reading the newspaper, thinking the citizens were being treated like mushrooms, kept in the dark and having a bunch of manure spread on us," Lamm said at a news conference on Tuesday.

The governor was referring to reports that CU will pay an estimated $500,000 as a portion of the remaining four years on Fairbanks' contract with the New England Patriots. CU athletic director Eddie Crowder has said the figure is incorrect, but would not divulge how much money the university is paying.

Lamm acknowledged that he has no power to force CU to disclose terms of the settlement, which reportedly involved financial backing by local wealthy sports boosters.

Lamm called the secrecy surrounding negotiations with Fairbanks "an inexcusable situation" and said he believes, but has not been assured, that no public money is involved.

"The people of this state ought to be entitled to know the terms under which Mr. Fairbanks is coming in here," Lamm said. "This is public business. It ought to be conducted in the sunlight."

Lamm said he would not join, "at this time," with at least one CU Regent, Sandy Kraemer of Colorado Springs, in calling for Crowder's resignation.

The governor said he would call CU President Robert Rautenstraus "to tell him of my concerns."

CU has been battling the Legislature's Joint Budget Committee over proposed cuts in faculty and student enrollment levels, and Lamm said "this is not the way to ease the problems is to all of a sudden have some secret deal."

The university and the Patriots jointly announced Monday that an out-of-court settlement had been reached, clearing the way for Fairbanks to take over head coaching duties at CU.

The university and New England have been involved in a four-month-old legal dispute that resulted in two lawsuits blocking Fairbanks' move to Colorado.

RRC Banquet Tickets Now Available

Tickets are now on sale for the annual Red Raider Club-sponsored all-sports banquet scheduled in Lubbock Coliseum on April 17.

Club president Fred Timberlake said that tickets can be purchased at the Red Raider Club office in the Lubbock National Bank Building or at the Tech ticket office on the north side of Jones Stadium.

Tickets are $6.50 per person.

Featured speaker for the event will be Tech head football coach Rex Dockery, who took over last year and led the Raiders from a predicted seventh-place finish in the Southwest Conference to a 7-4 record and a 22-21 upset of Cotton Bowl-bound Houston.

The team's record and performance led to Dockery being named senior college Coach of the Year by the Texas Sports Writers Association and District VII Coach of the Year by his coaching colleagues.

The banquet is sponsored each year by the RRC and a majority of the program is given to presentation of awards in all sports. Highlights of the presentations are the giving of the Pete Cawthon Award to the best all-around football player and the Polk Robison Award to the best basketball player.

All-conference and individual SWC champions are recognized.

"This is a family affair," commented Timberlake. "Every year, we have a lot of fathers and mothers who bring their youngsters to the banquet, where the kids have an opportunity to see and even speak to their favorite Tech athletes."

The league was negotiating a new radio contract, with the dollar sign apparently the No. 1 criterium. And about this same time last year, the firm came out with its annual SWC highlights film.

Later in the spring, the SWC turned those radio rights over to a competing network, thanked the oil for its services, and. . .

After the rejection, the firm quietly dropped its prestigious Kern Tipps Award, which it had originated and sponsored and which honored one of the school's top senior athletes, such young men as Brian Hall and Joe Barnes of Tech.

And with the passing of the season, and the cancelling of the Tips Award, assumption was that the oil firm would also cancel its highlights film.

• • •

PERRY'S OPENING-SEASON touchdown run set the pattern, the film indicated. It was followed by other long runs, including a 100-yarder by Frog Phillip Epps, the game-winning passes to Texas freshman Lawrence Sampleton against Arkansas, the magic of Danny Davis in Houston's march to the co-championship, the passing of Mike Ford and the catching of SMU teammate Tolbert.

In keeping with its objective to show all the nine teams equally, only Arkansas had three appearances, the others two.

From the Tech side, there were a few grumbles about the selections, using the A&M and Baylor games. ("Why not the SMU or Houston games, which had significance?" went the some of the questions). But, evidently in an effort to even it out, only SMU popped up more than once as a winner. All others (except TCU which didn't win any in conference) had at least one triumph to show their fans.

As was expected, there, popping off the screen was No. 86, James Hadnot, barging into the secondary against both the Aggies and Baylor and freshman Ron Reeves spotting receivers.

Even though the game was not featurized, the film showed a few plays from and spoke pointedly of "Upset Saturday," the day the Bears upended Texas and the Raiders, wearing their black jerseys, shocked Houston. . . Hadnot hurling the setup pass on the goal to the late Michael Morris, then Hadnot's wide screen for the deciding 2-point conversion.

• • •

STUCK RIGHT IN the middle of the film, as if it were a commercial message, Exxon inserted a feature on athletics and the role of the small independent university as seen by Rice president Norman Hackerman.

Hackerman outlined his views on how athletics gives the students some light in the tunnel of academics, how it brings alumni back to the campus alumni ("it opens the windows of the campus") and the discipline it instills in the competitors.

From viewing some of the more recent versions of the film, one can see a slight change in direction, the sidelight stuff (cheerleaders, balloon barrages, flags, crowd enthusiasm), as well as the theories and remarks by Hackerman.

Naturally, there was no reference to the Kern Tipps Award in any way, but the silver-throat looked forward toward the 1979 season.

Since the oil firm estimates that 1.5 million persons will view the film each year, there is the public-relations angle to it. But, for civic groups which will view it, for the member schools which will make it available to its friends, the film is a definite service.

But, also, there is the feeling that, even though the SWC opted for another broadcasting group last year and left Exxon with an empty mike, the firm has not completely forgotten the conference.

Tech Rips NT Netters

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

It's a good thing that the Texas Tech netters weren't playing against Texas A&M Tuesday afternoon — at least that's the way that tennis coach Mark Hamilton figured it.

Tech faced North Texas State and defeated the Mean Green 8-1. And the Raiders managed their big win without their No. 1 player (Doug Davis) who injured his shoulder in practic Monday.

"How important is Doug to us?" asked Hamilton before the match. "Well, it's kind of like Tech without Rodney (Allison) — that time they played A&M."

"Well, I hope it isn't that much of a loss," he said with a grin.

Every Red Raider fan worth his salt remembers what happened in that ill-fated game with the Aggies back in '77. Tech lost 33-17.

But it was a different story on the Tech courts against NTSU. Chow Wah stepped into the No. 1 spot and won his match 7-6, 6-2 and the other Raider singles players followed suit.

Harrison Bowes won in the No. 2 spot, David Crissey captured the No. 3, Randy Clayton went three sets to win the No. 4 position and Robert Davis and Gregg Davis took the final two spots.

The match had already been decided by the time the doubles competition began. And it was just as well, the wind really began to howl about that time making a shambles out of the matches.

"It's really nice to win one in singles," said Hamilton. "We've had too many matches where we've gone into the doubles needing two wins to take the match.

Specifically Hamilton played Kevin Hopson and David Moore in the No. 3 doubles spot. It was the first action of the year for either player.

Wah struggled in his first set against NT's David Cody before finally winning 7-6. He took command though in the second set, winning 6-2.

"He was an odd-type player," said Wah of his opponent. "He was the kind of player that just tries to get you to make the mistakes. His shots look easy but they aren't."

The Mean Green netter didn't have a blazing serve or a particularly tough volley but, as Wah said, he kept the ball on the court and forced the Malaysian to make the mistakes.

"He was a baseline type player," said Wah. "And at first he had me playing his kind of game. If I hadn't been careful I could have lost the match.

"But in the second set I picked up the pace and made him play my game."

Most of Tech's singles players had little trouble though. Robert Davis won 6-1, 6-1 and Gregg Davis waltzed to a 6-2, 6-3 decision.

The only Raider who struggled at all was Clayton who stayed on the court well after the others had finish to score a comeback victory.

After losing the first set 4-6, Clayton took a narrow 7-5 win in the second and then ran away with the third set winning 6-1.

The win gives the Raiders a 9-8 season slate and marks their best dual match record since 1975. Tech now jumps back into Southwest Conference action with matches against Houston and Texas this weekend.

Hamilton said that Doug Davis will make the trip wilth the team and hopefully will be able to play.

"It was just kind of a freak thing that happened to his shoulder," said Hamilton. "I don't think it's too serious, but it was hurting him today (Tuesday) so we kept him out of the match."

The results:

Singles — Chow Wah, Tech, def. David Cody, 7-6, 6-2; Harrison Bowes, Tech, def. Kalen Gralka, 6-4, 6-3; David Crissey, Tech, def. Lou White, 6-2, 7-5; Randy Clayton, Tech, def. Jim Wright, 4-6, 7-5, 6-1; Robert Davis, Tech, def. Juan Bracho, 6-1, 6-1; Gregg Davis, Tech, def. Rudolpho Rico, 6-2, 6-3.

Doubles — Crissey-Wah, Tech, def. Cody-Bracho, 5-7, 6-4, 6-2; Davis-Davis, Tech, def. White-Wright, 6-2, 6-1; Gralka-Rico, NT, def. Hopson-Moore, 6-2, 3-6, 6-4.

Ten Napel Still Critical After Fatal Accident

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Falcons linebacker Andy Spiva died Tuesday of injuries suffered earlier in a automobile accident on a rain slick road in which his teammate, former Texas A&M standout linebacker Garth Ten Napel, was seriously injured.

The 24-year-old Spiva died at 10:37 a.m. CST of massive head and chest injuries suffered in the one-car accident, said Roberta Hiscock, a spokeswoman for Northside Hospital.

Ten Napel was listed in critical but stable condition with head, chest and pelvis injuries, she said.

In a statement prior to learning of Spiva's death, Coach Leeman Bennett of the National Football League team said, "We are shocked. They are two outstanding young men and have our prayers."

"It was a tragic blow," said Eddie LeBaron, general manager of the National Football League team. "We were close to Andy and he was the kind of young man who was a pleasure to be associated with."

Falcons spokesman Charlie Dayton said Spiva and Ten Napel were "good friends — they went through knee rehabilitation together.

"Last season," said Dayton, "whenever you saw one, you saw the other."

Authorities said the two men were injured early Tuesday when Spiva's late-model sports car skidded on wet pavement, overturned and hit a tree in northwest Atlanta.

Officer M. J. Lommer of the Fulton County Police Department said Ten Napel and Spiva were trapped in the car and had to be cut out by police officials.

Both Spiva and Ten Napel had sat out the 1978 season with knee injuries.

Spiva was a 1973 graduate of Chamblee High School in Chamblee, Ga. He was listed as the Falcons' No. 1 middle linebacker in pre-season camp last year before suffering a knee injury.

After graduating from the University of Tennessee, he was a fifth-round draft choice of the St. Louis Cardinals in 1977 but was obtained by the Falcons after being released by the Cardinals in the final pre-season cut in 1977.

Ten Napel, 25, an outside linebacker, came to the Falcons last season in a trade with the Detroit Lions.

No Changes Foreseen In Ram Operation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Despite the death of owner Carroll Rosenbloom, there's expected to be no change in the operation of the Los Angeles Rams in the National Football League. Rosenbloom's son, Steve, will take over the team.

The elder Rosenbloom, 72, drowned in Florida on Monday. In past years he had schooled his son, now 34, in the operation of the football club.

There has been no announcement and none is expected immediately on a replacement for Carroll Rosenbloom, but Steve Rosenbloom has been the assistant to the president, his father, in the Rams direction. He was the man representing the club at the 1979 annual NFL meetings in Honolulu last month.

The Rams said a private funeral service will be held for Rosenbloom today in Hollywood, Fla., and that a memorial service will be conducted in Los Angeles next Wednesday.

The Rams will fulfill their argeement of moving to Anaheim Stadium in 1980, leaving the Los Angeles Coliseum, their home since arriving from Cleveland in 1946.

The wealthy Rams' owner was controversial in the NFL but was also respected.

"We had some differences over things in the league that he felt affected his team adversely," commented NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle. "I as very pleased that in recent months it was considered past and gone and we had a very close relationship.

Johnny Unitas, a NFL Hall of Fame quarterback who played for Rosenbloom in Baltimore, said, "He gave a lot of guidance in the early part of the NFL's growth. He was not only concerned with winning, he's concerned with the players and their families."

Rams' defensive end Fred Dryer said, "He did a lot of things for a lot of people that he didn't have to. That's the type of guy he was. I felt close to him. He made me feel close to him. He was comfortable to be around."

Rosenbloom put up $18,000 as his share of the Colts in 1963 and the franchise was estimated at $20 million when he traded it for the Rams.

He had played football for the University of Pennsylvaia and then inherited a clothing manufacturing business and expanded it into many successful endeavors.

Attorneys said the NFL franchise probably will go his his widow, Georgia, in trust for his children. He was the sole owner of the club.

LCC, Cowboys Divide Games

ABILENE (Special) — It was the Eastern famine for Lubbock Christian College Tuesday as the Chaparrals split a twin bill with Hardin-Simmons University.

LCC, now 25-15, tallied 6 times in each of the first two innings of the opener to win 13-2 as John Ross and Randy Vincent combined for a four-hitter.

The nightcap was a pitching dual between Chap Dave Hanna and Cowboy Ken McLeod, which HSU won 1-0 in the last of the seventh on Randy Jones' single to right which scored Bret Maddux with the only run of the game.

LCC got just four hits off McLeod, now 2-4, but Hanna, now 3-4, gave up just three singles. It marked the first time in 59 games that the Chaps have been blanked, and they got only two runners as far as second — in the third and sixth innings and each time with two outs.

Maddux beat out a grounder to deep short to open the seventh, was sacrificed to second by Rodney Smith and wild-pitched to third before Jones got his second hit of the game.

The Chaps continued their spree in the second with 6 more runs as Kenny Toney had a 2-run single, Steve Cargil singled in a run, Richard Bowles forced in a run and Bobby Doe's third hit of the game drove in 2 more runs.

Ross, now 4-3, pitched six innings and Randy Vincent hurled the finale.

Cowboys Get Return Match

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys will meet the Defending World Champion Pittsburgh Steelers Aug. 25 in Texas Stadium in an exhibition rematch of their Super Bowl XIII game.

Other National Football League exhibition games for the Cowboys announced Tuesday included jousts with Oakland, Denver, Seattle and Houston.

The Cowboys will open their preseason Saturday, July 28 in the nationally televised Pro Football Hall of Fame game in Canton, Ohio against the Oakland Raiders. The game has a 2:30 p.m. CDT kickoff.

Denver visits Dallas Aug. 4 for an 8 p.m. game and the Cowboys travel to Seattle Aug. 12 for a 6 p.m. CDT game with the Seahawks.

The Houston Oilers are in Dallas Aug. 18 for an 8 p.m. game.

The Seattle, Houston and Puttsburgh games will be nationally televised.

HOLE-IN-ONE

John Patterson, using a 2-iron, fired a hole-in-one Tuesday afternoon at Treasure Island golf course on the third hole, a 154-yard, par-3. Looking on was Bobby Hutcheson.

All-District Question Remains In Girls' Golf

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

It would appear that the local District 4-AAAA girls' golf teams would have a difficult time getting up for Friday's final district meet at the Pinehills Country Club — since all the team and individual berths for regional competition have already been decided.

But according to Monterey-Coronado-Lubbock High golf coach Karen Cox, that's hardly the situation.

"Well, everybody's just sort of showing up and playing for this one," admitted Miss Cox. "It's already pretty apparent that Plainview is going to win district and the Coronado A team will finish second."

The top two teams and individuals will compete in the regional tourney on April 20-21 at Meadowbrook Golf Course, and Ann Horne of Plainview and Barbara Scott of Hereford have notched the two individual berths.

So where is the competition going to come from?

"Really the biggest race on Friday is going to be to see who makes all-district," said Miss Cox. "The top five girls are selected (from their district totals), and right now it's a pretty close race for the last three spots."

Plainview's Miss Horne leads all individuals with a 220 total through three rounds, followed by Miss Scott with a 241.

But after that, things tighten up a bit. Jody McGowen of Plainview is in third with a 251 total and she's followed by a couple of Lubbock sophomores.

"Well, Colleen (Crump) and Becky (Kaye) are our two hopes to make all-district," said Miss Cox, "but I've got some other girls with a shot at it."

In fact, Miss Cox has a lot of girls, so to speak. The physical education teacher at Martin Elementary serves as the coach of the Monterey team and the Coronado A and B teams and helps Cindy Wolf of Lubbock High who competes individually.

Those with an outside shot at landing all-district spots are Monterey's Cookie Creel (266) and Coronado's Bonnie Sue Wilson (268).

But, according to Miss Cox, the competition may be intense among the Lubbock girls but it certainly won't be cutthroat.

"I look at the girls as one big group," she said, "since I coach them all and we all practice together. Even though the schools still compete among themselves, they pull together.

"Really, they're pretty congenial about the whole thing. Like when Coronado gets into the regionals the other girls will be out there rooting for them."

Actually, there are only four teams in the district, MHS, two CHS squads and Plainview. Hereford and LHS only have one girl competing. So when that is taken into consideration, Miss Cox is coaching over half of the golfers in the district.

"I just walked in at the right time," she said with a laugh. "The school district needed a golf coach and I was interested," added the former Odessa College and Texas Tech golfer.

"I've been with the program four years now and we're getting stronger all the time," she said.

"As far as the future is concerned Colleen and Becky could really help us," she said. "They're both sophomores and right now are our top two golfers.

But right now the two sophomores can't afford to look ahead to next year. They've got to hold off the challenges from a couple of older teammates to secure an all-district spot.

"Things could be interesting on Friday," said Miss Cox, of the action that gets underway at 9:30 a.m. Friday at the Pinehills Country Club.

Cosell Blasts Hypocrisy In Sports Game

WASHINGTON (AP) — Howard Cosell played to a packed house at the Justice Department Tuesday as the guest of Attorney General Griffin B. Bell, who called the sportscaster's hour-long talk "an inspiring lecture on ethics and sports."

Cosell delivered a diatribe on what he said was "the spinning spiral of hypocrisy, contradiction and the ripoff" of taxpayers by organized sports in America.

His attack focused largely on owners, who he said shifted sports franchises to make bigger profits. But it took in as well the weekly wire-service ratings of college teams, the "lionization" of athletes and fan violence.

Bell described Cosell as "the most eminent sportscaster in the country," and said in his introduction to some 500 Justice Department employees that Cosell successfully practiced law for 12 years before getting into sports broadcasting full-time.

"He's added a new dimension to our lives if we love sports, and most of us do," said Bell.

Cosell, who broadcasts for ABC-TV, said it was "one of the greatest thrills of my life" to be a speaker in the Justice Department's Great Hall and to be introduced by the attorney general.

But he said he felt "a little bit troubled. . .a little bit embarrassed" in speaking about a career in a field that some regard as "the toy department of life." Cosell said, however, that sports is intertwined with politics and economics, and his purpose was to make the public aware of the connections.

As an example, he cited the decision of Carroll Rosenbloom, who died Monday in Miami Beach, to move the Los Angeles Rams to Anaheim, Calif., to play football next season.

Cosell said there is ample precedent for owners seeking a "land grab" and increased profits by moving sports franchises out of areas where they are doing well.

He said that Los Angeles County officials couldn't go to court to seek an injunction against Rosenbloom's move because they didn't have "clean hands."

Los Angeles had lured the Brooklyn Dodgers out of New York by offering that team's owner, Walter O'Malley, an expensive chunk of land in California, Cosell said.

Lubbock TV Firm Buys Clovis Station

The Federal Communications Commission has approved the immediate sale of the Clovis, N.M., television station to McAlister Television Enterprise of Lubbock.

KFDW television, Channel 12, Clovis, will be operated as a satellite of Channel 28 in Lubbock. The new sister station in Clovis will carry all of the local and ABC network programming currently carried by Channel 28.

The FCC approved the sale of Channel 12 in Clovis to McAlister Television March 23. Following that approval, McAlister Television immediately announced major renovation plans for the New Mexico facility, including the placement of orders for over a quarter-million dollars worth of new broadcasting equipment.

Bill McAlister, president of McAlister Television Enterprise, stresses that not only is new equipment being purchased to upgrade the quality of the Channel 12 television signal, but more emphasis will be placed on news, weather and public affairs programming.

Channel 28 programming is expected to be carried by Channel 12 in Clovis by beginning this week.

Engineers for the television stations have produced a temporary micowave system to carry the Channel 28 signal from Lubbock to Channel 12 in Clovis.

A permanent microwave system connecting Lubbock and Clovis is planned. Also ordered is a two-hundred thousand dollar television transmitter for Channel 12. Delivery on the transmitter is expected within the next 60 to 90 days.

KFDW is a VHF television station that serves the Clovis and Portales, N.M., area including Eastern New Mexico and the Western area of the Texas Panhandle.

The television station was purchased from Mel Wheeler of Denton. Wheeler operates other broadcast facilities in Denton, San Diego and Roanoke, Va.

The present manager of the Clovis television station, Mike Lee, will join McAlister Television in serving the Clovis/Portales area. Lee will remain in Clovis as manager of the operation.

Ormandy To Step Down As Conductor

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Conductor Eugene Ormandy, who says he will stop conducting "only when I drop," has asked to be relieved as music director of the Philadelphia Orchestra at the end of the 1979-80 season, a spokesman for the orchestra said Tuesday.

Ormandy, 79, has held the post since 1936 and is only the fourth conductor to lead the orchestra since its founding in 1900. When he walks off the podium at a concert in Saratoga Springs, N.Y., in August 1980, he will have spent 44 years in the job.

After he steps down, Ormandy will continue with the orchestra as conductor laureate, spokesman Louis Hood of the Philadelphia Orchestra Association said.

Ormandy said in a prepared statement Tuesday he also plans to appear with other orchestras in the United States and abroad.

Ormandy's announcement comes after rumors of unrest from the orchestra, including complaints that his ability to instill excitement had dwindled and that his criticism of his musicians' playing had created resentment among them.

"I will stop conducting only when I drop," the grand old man who replaced Leopold Stokowski on the podium once said when asked about retirement plans.

"Eugene Ormandy has been a close personal friend for many years," said C. Wanton Balis Jr., board chairman of the association. "His capacity for work and his utter devotion to the Philadelphia Orchestra have been an inspiration during more than four decades. It is comforting to feel that he will continue to play an active role in the orchestra's life."

The orchestra's board of directors, acting on Ormandy's advice, has held discussions with Riccardo Muti, the first to hold the title of principal guest conductor, on his future with the orchestra.

Muti's three-year contract now is in its second year, Hood said.

MAIL SNATCH LUCRATIVE

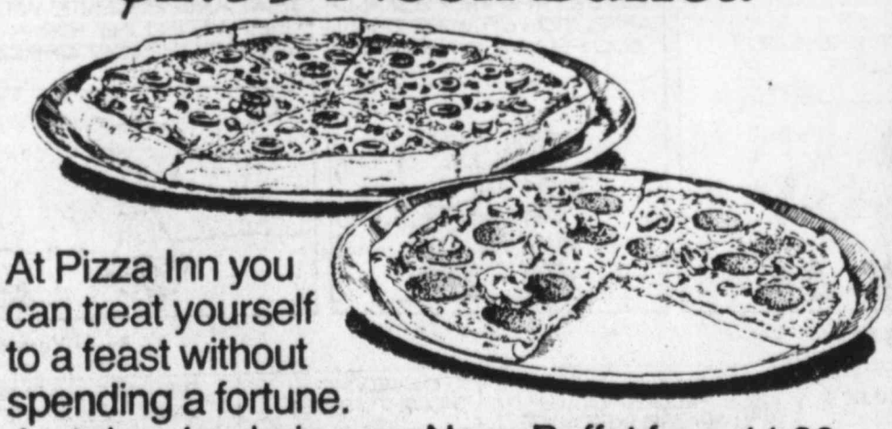

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Two youths attacked and beat two mailmen and snatched their mailbag containing $577,000 in cash and $327,000 in checks, police reported Tuesday. Police said the mailmen were making their regular morning delivery of cash from a post office to a nearby bank.

'Same Time, Next Year' Worked On Stage, Falls Flat On Film

"Same Time, Next Year." Screenplay by Bernard Slade; based on his stage play. Music by Marvin Hamlisch. Theme song "The Last Time I Felt Like This" sung by Johnny Mathis and Jane Olivor; music by Hamlisch and lyrics by Marilyn and Alan Bergman. Photographed by Robert Surtees. Directed by Robert Mulligan. Stars Ellen Burstyn and Alan Alda. Rated PG. At the South Plains Cinema.

A-J FILM REVIEW

For the life of me, I can't even figure out how Bernard Slade's tepid little comedy "Same Time, Next Year" — a dopey Neil Simon-clone about a man and woman who meet for a weekend of adultery once a year for 26 years — managed to run three weeks on Broadway, much less three years. And now we get the film version, which is even worse. Why? Because playwright turned screenwriter Slade and director Robert Mulligan fail to realize they are working in an altogether different entertainment medium. They refuse to open up the action and, as a result, the entire picture looks as though it had been filmed with a camera locked down in a theater's orchestra section.

No matter how confined the action on stage, film almost demands that structure be widened to offer a three-dimensional approach to each character. As the movie now stands, though, the dialogue is but a series of shotgun effect (some hit their mark; some don't) jokes and one-liners, and the situations resemble mere plot devices more than reality. We are never led to understand, for example, how these two moral people, each married with a total of six children between them, manage to wind up in bed together at a northern California inn in the first place.

And as we see their clandestine meetings each five years hence, Slade uses his characters as a cheap reflection of the times, failing to realize that their changes in politics and beliefs are still too abrupt to believe.

He hasn't even had the courage to compose transition action. Instead, we meet George and Doris at the same inn in 1956, 1961, 1966, 1972 and 1977 and the only linking pieces joining the years are a black and white montage of news photographs and another verse from the theme song. In short, we're offered a movie and we get nothing more than the same two-character, one-theme, one-set, unimaginative play.

Luckily for Slade and Mulligan — and for audiences — those two characters are played with finesse and care by Ellen Burstyn, who won a Tony Award for her performance in the same role on Broadway, and Alan Alda.

Not that they completely overcome the material; no one could get universal laughter with the dated jokes and predictable occurrences which frequent this script. But both manage to keep us interested in their growth, despite Slade's insistence on using them to mirror social history. For example, Miss Burstyn is marvelous in the latter two sequences, and Alda is nothing short of exceptional in the scene which calls for him to talk with Miss Burstyn's husband by phone.

But we don't for a second believe that Doris can progress from being a frustrated housewife pregnant with her fourth child in 1961 to a spaced-out, protesting Berkeley flower child in 1966. The scene is hampered even further not by the predictable revelation that Alda lost a son overseas, but in Slade's insistence on Alda learning the tragic news on Independence Day. The social commentary just doesn't fit.

But what kills this film is the fact that we believe neither in its theme nor its characters. If George and Doris mean so much to each other, after all, why wouldn't they meet more often than once a year? (Of course, a bit of realism would demand a title change, right?) Miss Burstyn and Alda are most human when trying to encounter harmony in the face of conflict, during confrontations with real guilt. But Slade refuses to shade his characters. He refuses to even deal in a serious manner with the rather unique matter of writing a romantic comedy about adultery. The actors hint at another dimension, but are allowed to stay sweety-pie cute. It's a one-set contrivance made only slightly interesting not through writing or direction, but instead through the work of two talented thespians who should have opted for a more serious work.

Like "Butterflies Are Free" seven years ago, "Same Time, Next Year" is a prime example of a popular play which does not succeed as a film primarily because its creator won't allow it to stop being a play. Slade won't open up his sets or his characters; he won't show us why they are moved to adultery, or how they handle it the other 363 days of the year. The end result is a stagey, stilted comedy which manages to be touching at times, but never really funny or entertaining. A simple-minded diversion and nothing more.

MARRIED, BUT NOT TO EACH OTHER — Alan Alda and Ellen Burstyn are two happily married people who meet for an adulterous weekend once a year in the screen comedy "Same Time, Next Year." The film, currently playing at the South Plains Cinema, is based on Bernard Slade's stage play. Miss Burstyn, who won a Tony when playing the role on Broadway, is currently nominated for an Academy Award for her screen performance. The picture, however, did not earn raves from A-J film critic William Kerns.

Heiress Receiving Care For Pneumonia

LOS ANGELES (AP) — F.W. Woolworth heiress Barbara Hutton has been admitted to Cedars-Sinai Medical Center for treatment of pneumonia, a hospital spokesman said Tuesday.

The Los Angeles Herald-Examiner reported Tuesday that the reclusive Miss Hutton, 66, was admitted to the hospital after living on "case upon case of Coca Cola" for three years in her Beverly Wilshire Hotel penthouse.

"She was admitted on March 26 with a diagnosis of pneumonia," said hospital spokesman Larry Baum. "She is progressing very well. Her condition is stable. Her physician expects her to stay (in the hospital) another week."

Baum could not confirm the Herald report, but he denied the paper's report that she was in the intensive care unit.

The jet set multimillionairess has been plagued by illness and confined in hospitals several times during the last 12 years.

In 1967, she underwent surgery in Beverly Hills for removal of a cataract. In 1969, a staff member at a San Francisco hotel where she spent Christmas said Miss Hutton "can barely speak and must refuse telephone calls."

In 1971, Miss Hutton, who has married and divorced seven times, underwent major hip surgery here after tripping over a carpet in Rome and delaying treatment.

VIETNAMESE UPGRADE FORCES

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The Vietnamese air force has increased its troops and number of combat planes by 10 percent "in the wake of the Chinese war of agression," Radio Hanoi reported Tuesday. In a recent report, the London-based Institute of Strategic Studies said the Chinese had 400,000 men and about 5,000 combat planes, while the Vietnamese had 12,000 men and 300 combat planes. The radio reported that newly-trained pilots have been assigned to strategic posts in northern Vietnam.

Blue Chips Pace Rally

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rallied sharply Tuesday, recouping its losses of the past two sessions with blue-chip and glamor issues leading the way.

Analysts said word from federal officials that danger of an explosion at the Harrisburg, Pa., nuclear power plant was significantly diminished helped inspire the advance.

Standout gainers among the blue chips and glamors included International Business Machines, up 5⅜ at 319½ as of the 4 p.m. close in New York; Boeing, ahead 2¼ at 67; Du Pont, up 2⅝ at 141⅞, and Eastman Kodak, 2¼ higher at 66.

Analysts noted that fears of more bad news from the Three Mile Island plant, where an accident occurred last week, had begun to abate during Monday's session.

They said the market also benefited from continued strength in the dollar in foreign exchange, and anticipation of an energy message from President Carter later this week.

New York (AP) — Tuesday's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.

Umpires Throw Up Pickets

By The Associated Press

Between 15 and 20 major league umpires are expected to be on picket duty in Cincinnati when the 1979 baseball season opens Wednesday.

"Every umpire within 12 hours driving time of Cincinnati will be picketing the ball park," attorney Richie Phillips said from Philadelphia Tuesday. "It will be informational picketing to inform the fans that baseball for years has abused the umpires and we will no longer stand for it."

Phillips said there would be no pickets at Seattle where the American League season opens Wednesday night.

The attorney said no talks are scheduled with American League President Lee MacPhail or National League President Chub Feeney. "If they're waiting for me to call them, they will have a very long, long wait," he said.

The two sides in the dispute, which has idled 50 of the 52 major league umpires, have not met since last week,lPhillips said. Paul Pryor, a veteran National Leaguer, and rookie Ted Hendry of the AL are the only major league umpires to sign 1979 contracts.

Meanwhile, major league teams prepared to start the season with minor league and amateur umpires. Originally, the two leagues had hoped to sign a dozen minor league umpires and assign one to each game to work with three local umpires recruted by the home teams. But eight of the 12 minor league umpires rejected the offer of three-year major league contracts.

It was understood that the four minor leaguers who signed contracts received guarantees that they would continue to receive big league salaries should the strike end and they be returned to the minors.

The rejection of the major league offers by the eight minor league umps raised the spirits of the striking regulars. "Those guys make $2,600 a year but they wouldn't go against the regulars," Phillips said. "Our people taught them how to ump and they have too much respect for our guys."

Phillips said his umpires would not return to work piecemeal. "My guys don't go back until we are guaranteed that all of them will get their jobs," the attorney said.

Steve Palermo, one of the striking American League umpires, said, "I'm a happily unemployed person right now. It's amazing how 50 men who've been suppressed by baseball for so long could come back and stick together so strong. You can't beat us. We'll stay out forever if we have to. Let them go with the amateurs."

Terry Tata of the National League said the umpires' meeting in Chicago last Friday had demonstrated the union's solidarity.

"Nobody ever saw 50 unemployed people so happy," said Tata.

Tech Golfers Enter Event

HOUSTON (Special)— The Texas Tech golf team begins competition today in the prestigous Houston All-American Golf Championships, which open today here at the Atascocita Country Club.

Tech coach Richard Whittenburg said he hopes the Raiders can use this meet to secure another prestigious invitation.

"Our goal is to use this tournament as a stepping stone to qualify for the NCAA tournament in Winston, N.C in April," said Whittenburg.

"That may be a pretty lofty goal but if we finish high enough we may be able to get some recognition from the NCAA. The Southwest Conference is very strong in golf so that would be taken into consideration."

Making the trip for the Raiders are seniors Mel Callender and Gregg Jones; juniors Randy Waterhouse and Chris Brown and sophomore Mark Jarrett.

Waterhouse and Jarrett were the only Raider linksters who competed in Tech's last meet in Monterey, Mexico back in . And Whittenburg is pleased with the play of those two golfers.

"Randy and Mark have been my most consistent players all year long," he said. "Some of our other players have shot well to qualify but then don't produce in the tournament "

Trevino Scores Ace With Legislators

AUSTIN (AP) — Golfer Lee Trevino charmed the Texas House with flattery Tuesday and gave the legislators a simple explanation of his sagging tournament record.

"I am old," said Trevino, 39. "The same thing that happened to Palmer. When you get old, your nerves get bad. When your nerves get bad, the putting starts to go. When the putting gets bad, the eyesight starts to go.

"And when the eyesight starts going, you just have to make excuses," he said.

Trevino was in town for a fund-raising exhibition for the Big Brothers and Big Sisters and was invited to speak to the House and visit with the representatives in the members' lounge.

"This is the biggest thrill I ever had. Now I can tell my grandchildren I have been up to where the Big Chief is in Texas," he said.

He said he once thought "the only way I'd ever get here would be to stay out of Huntsville (state prison)."

Major League Clubs Close Spring Camps

By The Associated Press

Detroit left fielder Steve Kemp was beaned Tuesday by Boston's Andy Hassler as the Tigers wound up their exhibition campaign by trouncing the Red Sox 8-2.

Kemp apparently escaped serious injury when he was struck on the batting helmet in the fifth inning. He was stunned and remained on the ground for several minutes but appeared conscious as he was carried from the field on a stretcher and taken to a hospital for overnight observation.

Because of a curfew to permit both teams to fly north, the game at Winter Haven, Fla., was called in the eighth inning. Alan Trammell led Detroit's 15-hit attack with three safeties.

Most major league teams closed their spring camps Tuesday and headed for their opening-game sites.

A couple of new acquisitions paced the Minnesota Twins over the Philadelphia Phillies 5-2. Jerry Koosman pitched a five-hitter while Ken Landreaux socked a two-run homer. Ken Holtzman allowed one run in six innings and delivered a two-run double to lead the Chicago Cubs over the Los Angeles Dodgers 4-1.

Jorge Orta rapped a pair of doubles and Ralph Garr boosted his spring batting average to .432 with a pair of hits as the Chicago White Sox whipped the Atlanta Braves 6-1 for their sixth consecutive triumph. One of Atlanta's hits was Bob Horner's first of the spring, a triple which bounced away from left fielder Garr.

The Baltimore Orioles scored five times in the seventh inning, three on Billy Smith's homer off Sparky Lyle, and downed the Texas Rangers 6-2. Bruce Kison hurled six scoreless innings as the Pittsburgh Pirates trimmed the New York Mets 6-2.

Ken Reitz homered and Bernie Carbo delivered a two-run double to lead the St. Louis Cardinals past the Cincinnati Reds 7-6 and Tony Perez drove in three runs with a homer and triple as the Montreal Expos defeated the Houston Astros 7-5.

Wayne Gross hit an RBI triple and scored on Mickey Klutts' sacrifice fly to give the Oakland A's a 3-2 triumph over Cleveland, which yanked all its regulars after the second inning so they could catch a flight to Boston, where the Indians open the season on Thursday.

Sparky Blasts Old Club

NEW YORK (AP) — Sparky Anderson charged Tuesday that the Cincinnati Reds deliberately delayed firing him after last season and thereby prevented him from getting another managing job for the 1979 season.

Anderson, on the baseball sidelines for the first time in 27 years, said Reds President Dick Wagner had two reason for wainting until late November to axe him.

"First of all, he didn't want to rock the Japan trip," said Anderson. "And second of all, he didn't want to give (free agent) Pete Rose a chance to use my firing as an excuse for leaving the ball club."

"But they stalled until Nov. 28," he said. "By then, every club except Oakland had its manager for the new season. If they had fired me Oct. 1, I would have had a job for this season."

Under terms of his contract, Anderson is being paid for this season but he said money isn't as important to him as managing.

Anderson and the Reds made a lengthy tour of Japan at the end of the 1978 season and the manager said that in retrospect there were clues that he was finished in Cincinnati.

"The first tipoff was the way I heard that the club had signed Tom Seaver to a five-year contract," Anderson said. "No club official told me. I got the word from a newspaperman."

Later, Anderson said, a group of club front office personnel took a veteran newsman who was celebrating 50 years with his paper, out to dinner. The writer is one of Anderson's closest friends, yet the manager was not invited.

"They're little things and at the time, they didn't mean anything to me," Sparky said. "But now, when I think back about it, they were significant."

Wagner traveled to Los Angeles to tell Anderson he was through but Sparky's account of the conversation differs from the club version.

"I thought he was coming out to sign (free agent) Lee Lacy," said Anderson. "He called me on Sunday and told me to meet him at the airport Monday morning."

The meeting came two days after Rose announced he would no longer negotiate with the Reds and that he would sign with another club instead. Rose eventually agreed to a four-year, $3.2 million contract with Philadelphia.

"Tgat was no coincidence," said Sparky. "They didn't want Rose to have an excuse to leave. If Rose had said he was leaving two weeks later, I would have been fired two weeks later."

Anderson said he and Wagner had a routine breakfast spent in small talk. Then he went up to the club president's room and got the word.

"He said, 'Sparky, I'm not bringing you back. I'd rather not discuss the reason why because we might have words,'" Anderson recalled.

The next day, at a press conference in Cincinnati, the Reds announced the decision and said Wagner had met with Anderson for two hours and explained the club's reasons.
