Bush, Fahd agree Saudis not antagonists

By TERENCE HUNT

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Vice President George Bush conferred with King Fahd until the early morning hours today and the two leaders agreed Saudi Arabia did not provoke the collapse in oil prices that has punished American producers, a senior U.S. official said.

The U.S. official, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said, "I'd say what came through was he (Fahd) thought that Saudi Arabia was being — in non-royal language — given the bum rap in stories about its role in the oil world."

Bush made clear to the king "that Saudi interests and U.S. interests are not identical with regard to oil pricing," the U.S. official said, without elaborating.

Later in the day, Bush flew to the oil-rich Persian Gulf state of Bahrain for the second stop of a Middle East tour that also includes visits to Oman and North Yemen.

Bush and the Saudi king dined at the royal palace in this eastern province on the Persian Gulf on Sunday and then held their only meeting scheduled during Bush's three-day stay in Saudi Arabia.

The official Saudi Press Agency called the discussions "frank and constructive."

Summing up the 2½-hour session that ran past 1 a.m. today, the senior U.S. official said Fahd made no specific proposals on how to stabilize crude oil prices, which have dropped 60 percent on world markets since November, creating pressing problems in oil-producing states like Texas.

The U.S. official reported Fahd said Saudi Arabia has been widely blamed for the price plunge, but that Bush said the desert kingdom was only "responding to OPEC requests to lower production, which it had lowered and received no thanks for."

Saudi Arabia is a linchpin in the 13-member Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. The kingdom is now pumping more than 4 million barrels a day, double its production last summer, but much lower than the 10 million to 11 million barrels a day it formerly pumped.

The Saudis have increased production recently in an effort to flood the market and force other producers to restrain their output by making it uneconomical to pump oil.

However, the overall reduction in output "has had extremely serious repercussions on their financial situation," the U.S. official said.

Bush has said he is not seeking oil production controls from the Saudis, but that falling petroleum prices could reach a point where they threaten American security.

The Republican vice president told U.S. businessmen at a breakfast meeting today in Dhahran that a strong domestic oil industry "is absolutely essential to the national security of the United States."

At the White House, deputy press secretary Edward Djerejian today repeated the Reagan administration's position that there should be no interference in oil markets and insisted that "the vice president is fully on board" with administration policy.

Gunman killed as police storm convenience store

■ Related story — 2A

EULESS (AP) — Police using explosives blasted into a North Central Texas convenience store where a gunman had kept his former wife tied up for two days and shot the man to death after they learned he had killed the woman.

"The hostage situation has been eliminated. It is terminated," police spokesman T.C. Free said Sunday night in announcing the death of Maron Mataele, 27, an immigrant from the South Pacific nation of Tonga, who had held his ex-wife since Friday.

Free said the body of the woman, Cassandra "Sane" Mataele, 26, was found in a storeroom closet at the back of the Kwik Pantry store in this Fort Worth suburb where she worked as a clerk.

Authorities said Mataele had held her bound and gagged in the storeroom most of the time.

Tactical officers from nearby Arlington blew a hole in the back door of the building and rushed in about 9:30 p.m. Sunday night, four hours after Mataele's brother, who talked with him by phone, told police the gunman had killed his wife, Free said.

The exact time of her death is unclear, according to police.

Free said police confronted Mataele, who pointed his gun at them, drawing their gunfire in response.

A second brother of Mataele's, who was not identified and who was in the store when police entered, was taken into custody, Free said. But he said he didn't know if charges would be filed against the man.

That brother, Free said, had negotiated with Mataele before dawn Sunday. Officials said the gunman had agreed to give his gun to his brother.

"Against instructions, the brother entered the store, joining the gunman," said Free, and he remained in the store for the remainder of the standoff.

Mataele, armed with a .38-caliber revolver, had threatened to kill himself and his ex-wife, but other than the demand to see a third brother from California he only had asked to see his 8-year-old daughter, Free said.

"We have brought two brothers and it has not resolved anything at this point," Free said Sunday afternoon. "We have told him he can throw out his gun and come out, and he can see his other brother."

There were no police injuries in the assault on the store, authorities said, but Mataele shot and wounded an officer Friday when he responded to a silent alarm shortly after the gunman took over the building.

The wounded officer remained hospitalized in good condition Sunday after being shot in the left shoulder, police said.

Both Mataele and his ex-wife were Tongans, authorities said. The store is in an area populated largely by immigrants from the South Pacific. More than 800 Tongans have moved to Tarrant County around Fort Worth since 1982.

Throughout the standoff Sunday evening, Free did not tell reporters Ms. Mataele had been killed. He said later police had decided not to release the information.

Midland, after Irving, leads state in cost of living

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A cost of living survey published by the American Chamber of Commerce Researchers Association shows Midland's cost of living ranked second among 24 cities in Texas during the fourth quarter of 1985.

The cost of living in Irving, at 117.0, was the highest in the state. Midland, at 112.8, was 0.3 of 1 percent ahead of Dallas.

At 102.0, Odessa ranked seventh among the 24 cities, according to the ACCRA survey.

The highest cost of living of cities surveyed throughout the nation was in New York City at 142.5. Lowest cost of living showed to be in Somerset, Ky., at 88.3.

The ACCRA survey, compiled from information provided by local chambers of commerce research personnel, measures the relative costs of consumer goods and services in six major categories to present a mid-management family's expenditures. The survey lists index figures for each of 249 participating U.S. cities and indicates how far above or below the national average of 100.0 local living costs rank.

The "all-items index," on which rankings are determined, is based on six components: groceries, housing, utilities, transportation, health care and miscellaneous goods and services.

In the six individual categories, Odessa ranked ahead of Midland in only one, transportation. Odessa was 111.7 and Midland was 110.0.

In the grocery category, Midland was 111.4 and Odessa 107.2. The cost of housing in Midland was 107.9 in the index and Odessa was 95.7. The cost of utilities in Midland, according to the index, exceeded Odessa by 30.1 points. Midland was 130.8 and Odessa was 100.7.

The cost of health in Midland was 108.7 and Odessa, 99.5; cost of miscellaneous goods and services in Midland, 112.6, Odessa, 105.5.

The grocery items surveyed included such things as USDA choice T-bone steak, ground beef/hamburger, bacon, whole frying chicken, whole milk, large eggs, margarine, potatoes, bananas, head lettuce, white bread, cigarettes and coffee.

Housing surveyed included a 950 square foot, two bedroom, one or 1½ bath apartment and a new 1,800 square foot house. The utility survey calculated current rates for average monthly consumption during the previous 12 months for an 1,800 square foot home.

Surveyed for transportation were the costs of spin balancing one front wheel of an automobile and one gallon of unleaded-regular gasoline, including all taxes, at a self-service pump. The health care survey looked at the costs of a semi-private hospital room, a doctor's office visit, cleaning and inspection of teeth by a dentist and a bottle of 100 tablets of a name brand asprin.

Miscellaneous goods and services included such items as: fast food hamburgers and pizza, fried chicken, a man's haircut (no styling), woman's shampoo, trim and blowdry, dry cleaning, major appliance repair, newspaper subscription, movie admission, bowling, tennis balls, liquor, beer and wine costs.

The association is a non-profit organization founded in 1961. ACCRA has no permanent staff, but is composed of state and local chambers of commerce staff research members, operating with volunteers.

Connolly requests recount in council race

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Lawrence Connolly this morning requested a recount in the City Council District 3 race in which he lost to Kelly Fish Saturday by 105 votes.

The final unofficial total from two polling places and absentee was 1,198 for Fish to 1,093 for Connolly.

Connolly, 34, talked with City Secretary Bill Clanton this morning and later held a news conference to announce the recount.

There was some confusion at the Elections Administrator's office Saturday night over what precincts were included in District 3. The Connolly campaign believed voters at Midland Freshman High School were included in District 3, specifically those in Precinct 303. But that precinct is a windowpane area and, although surrounded by land which has been incorporated into the city limits, is considered part of the county.

"We have requested a recount," said Connolly. "Let me hasten to add that our decision was not based on any suspected improprieties by my opponent or the electoral process in Midland. It is not my pleasure to ask for a recount. We are just exploring the remote possibility of human error in the District 3 election."

Looking at the 105 votes separating the totals, Connolly said of that number only 53 voters decided the fate of the election. If those 53 had voted for Connolly, he would have been the winner. As it stands, those 105 votes represented 2½ percent of the 2,291 who voted in that race, he said.

The outcome of a close election has been switched before during a recount, he said, pointing to the Charlie Welch-Sam Snoddy county commissioner race in 1978. Election returns originally showed Snoddy to be the winner by 11 votes; a recount gave the 11 votes to Welch.

Clanton said the recount would be conducted before the City Council holds its regularly scheduled meeting Tuesday. According to the Election Code, a recount can be conducted if the candidate requests it and if the vote difference is 10 percent or less.

Fish, contacted about the recount, said he had no comment.

If a recount reconfirms Fish as the winner, Connolly said, "I will be the first to congratulate Fish on an extremely close race. I'm the last person who enjoys asking for a recount. I wish the election had been decisive."

Israeli warplanes again bomb Palestinian guerrilla strongholds

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli warplanes today bombed Palestinian guerrilla strongholds and refugee camps around this southern Lebanese port city for the second time in two weeks.

State-run radio reported two people were killed and 22 were wounded. Police and hospitals in Sidon, however, said six civilians were injured. There was no immediate explanation for the conflicting reports.

Witnesses said at least one 10-jet formation staged a minimum of seven divebombing attacks on the crowded Ein el-Hilweh and Mieh-Mieh refugee camps and the nearby hilltop village of Siroubieh.

Associated Press reporter Hala Jaber saw five two-story buildings near Mieh-Mieh that nearly were flattened by the bombing raids. Pine trees felled by the bomb blasts blocked roads.

This family reunion 61 years in making

By PATTIE MIHALIK

LEHIGHTON, Pa. (AP) — The scene in the Walnutport home of Clinton and Anna Meinhart was more than a typical family reunion.

When relatives from near and far crowded into the Meinhart home, there were happy tears and laughter, some funny family stories and the usual hugs from relatives who hadn't seen each other for a long time.

What made that reunion special were the guests of honor and the unusual circumstances that led to the reunion.

For 61 years, the reunion of the "Dudler Kids" existed only in their dreams.

George, Ferenc, Stephen, Leonard, Charles, Helen, Ann and Mary Dudla were born to immigrant parents in America. All eight children were born in the Palmerton area, where their name was "Americanized" from Dudla to Dudler.

In 1925, when Ferenc Dudler was 7 years old, he and his brother, Stephen, were taken to Austria by their maternal grandparents.

The boys thought they were only going on a trip. The grandparents promised them they could return to America "when they were older." Meanwhile, as time went on, they had to earn a living. Both Ferenc and Stephen traveled around the country from farm to farm, working as laborers.

When the boys returned to the family homestead, they learned their grandfather had died. Their grandmother sold all the family's possessions, then gave their home to a neighbor. The boys were left with no family, no home and no money.

All Ferenc and Stephen had were dreams. Someday, they promised themselves, they were going back to America. They dreamed of being reunited with their family in the land of their birth.

Then, war broke out and the boys were forced to fight for Hungary in the German army. Ironically, although they didn't know it at the time, they were forced to fight against their brothers.

Weinberger leaves Aquino talks in midst of protest

By DAVID BRISCOE

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger met with President Corazon Aquino today in the first visit by a U.S. Cabinet member to the new Filipino head of state, then drove away through anti-American protesters who mobbed his motorcade.

About 100 demonstrators pounded on Weinberger's bullet-proof van and chanted "go home" as he left the presidential palace grounds. Small groups of demonstrators, who were mostly orderly, also gathered at other stops.

The defense secretary's meetings with Mrs. Aquino and top Filipino military officials took place amid controversy over a perceived American emphasis on U.S. military interests in this Asian island nation.

"(Weinberger's) visit shows that America puts its military interests in the Philippines first," said a Filipino diplomat, speaking on the condition he not be identified.

The chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, Adm. William J. Crowe, also visited the Philippines last week, and there has been criticism in private by some Filipino officials of what they see as a U.S. emphasis of military, rather than economic, concerns.

The United States has two major bases in the Philippines, Clark Air Base and Subic Naval Base, which Mrs. Aquino's government has vowed to allow at least until a treaty governing their use expires in 1991.

"It's important to have both (military and economic aid,) but certainly the emphasis has to be on economic aid," Weinberger said at an airport news conference. He later flew to Bangkok, Thailand, where he was met by the prime minister.

Asked what the United States was offering Mrs. Aquino that would not have been offered to ousted President Ferdinand E. Marcos, who fled into exile on Feb. 25, Weinberger said in Manila, "We'll offer things that the Aquino government feels it is essential to have."

Pressed on how much aid would be given, Weinberger said, "there will certainly be a strong infusion of economic aid, and I think it is necessary to have some military assistance to continue on with reorganization and strengthen modernization of the Philippine armed forces that has been started so successfully."

Weinberger expressed "great admiration" for the revolution that overthrew Marcos' 20-year reign, saying it had returned freedom to the Philippines.

"I am delighted to meet you," Weinberger told Mrs. Aquino as they sat down together in the presidential palace guest house where she has her office. Reporters were allowed to witness only a few seconds of the 45-minute meeting.

"It went very nicely," Weinberger said later. However, he declined to discuss details of the meeting, and Mrs. Aquino did not come out to talk with reporters.

Weinberger gave Mrs. Aquino a brief "letter of greetings and congratulations" from President Reagan, presidential spokesman Rene Saguisag said at a news conference. He declined to outline the specifics of the letter.

Demonstrators rushed Weinberger's eight-car motorcade although police used a line of soldiers and motorcycle sirens to make them think he was coming out another palace gate.

At least one protester threw a rock at the cream-colored van carrying Weinberger. Others chanted, pounded their fists on the van and brandished signs including one that said, "U.S. sponsor of Marcos regime is here again.'

Earlier, Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and armed forces chief Gen. Fidel V. Ramos greeted Weinberger in the building where the two started a revolt that helped topple Marcos. They held a 50-minute meeting, but no details were released.

A Pentagon official, speaking on condition of anonymity in Tokyo during Weinberger's earlier visit to Japan, said the defense secretary would deal with the professionalism of the Philippine military, aid needed to help improve it and its ability to combat communist insurgents.

A source close to Mrs. Aquino told The Associated Press that the Philippines does not need military aid as much as it needs "budgetary assistance."

"We don't have enough money to run the government. We don't need to get tied up with more programmed loans and aid packages from the Americans," the source said.

Curious crowds gather near store

A Euless policeman asks onlookers to leave the area Sunday before officers storm the convenience store.

By SUZANNE GAMBOA

EULESS (AP) — The atmosphere inside was tense, but outside the scene was one of curious onlookers, ice chests, lawn chairs and even a tinkling ice cream truck.

For two days a gunman held his ex-wife hostage in the convenience store where she worked as a clerk, drawing a crowd of police officers hoping to negotiate a peaceful end to the drama, and a mass of excited observers.

But the incident ended Sunday night when officers stormed the Kwik Pantry store and shot to death Maron Mataele, 27.

They had learned that he had killed his 26-year-old ex-wife, Cassandra "Sane" Mataele four hours earlier. He had held her hostage, sometimes bound and gagged, since 9 p.m. Friday.

Before the raid that ended the standoff, crowds gathered near the store as negotiations continued. One man brought an ice cream truck to the area at one point Sunday and rang his bell to hawk his wares in the 80-degree heat of this Fort Worth suburb.

Two men set up lawn chairs on a hill near the store Saturday to watch the goings-on, and Sunday others stationed themselves aboard the backs of pickup trucks, gazing at the scene through binoculars.

As night fell Sunday, floodlights brightened a nearby softball field while police prepared to storm the store.

Officers had circled the store since Friday night, continuing their patient vigil. But some of the people outside weren't quite so content to wait for an end to the standoff.

"Smoke him out of there," urged a Haltom City woman who identified herself only as C. Harris. "I think they need not to let it go on too long. It just encourages more of this kind of thing."

"It's pretty strange. I think that before long, they'd better get that lady out of there," said Robert Warden of Dallas. "With all the manpower, they should be able to get that one guy out of there."

Police had to disperse a group of about 25 people who had posted themselves in a nearby restaurant parking lot waiting for a change in the hostage drama.

"We kept having to yell at them and telling them to get back," officer J.E. Alexander said. "It's not fair to the restaurant. The parking lot is not big enough."

Ann Oliva of Euless said she didn't approve of the gathering crowds but admitted she, too, came out of curiosity.

"We thought it was an accident when we saw (the activity Friday). Then we saw it on the news," Ms. Oliva said. "We're just curious what the man in the store is going to do."

REUNION

When George Dudler was sent to serve with the U.S. Army in Germany, he looked everywhere to find his brothers. "I suspected they might be with the Hungarians in the German Army, but I didn't know for sure," the Slatington man recalls.

While George Dudler was stationed in Germany for five years, he never ceased looking for his brothers. Meanwhile, Stephen became very ill and Ferenc lived with the dream of going to America.

It almost happened. At one point, Ferenc managed to escape into the American zone.

Because he had second thoughts about leaving his dying brother, he crossed back into the Russian zone. Stephen died shortly after that, while Ferenc decided there was nothing for him to do except to forget his American dreams and build a life for himself in Hungary.

Just when he thought he was settling into life by marrying and raising his own family, Ferenc received word that his brother George was trying to locate him.

"Your brother wants you to come to America," said the messenger. At last, those magic words. But they came at a time when family commitments made it impossible to follow his own dream. "Someday," he promised himself.

That someday never came. Authorities told Ferenc he could never leave the country. When he had served in the Hungarian Army, he had lost his American citizenship, they said.

Through the years, the Dudler brothers and sisters kept in touch with Ferenc through occasional letters. Ferenc wrote in Hungarian while they answered in English. Each letter required an interpreter.

Then the letters stopped. Because mail wasn't getting through, each side of the family lost all trace of the other.

Two years later, George Dudler took a chance. He sent a Christmas card to his brother at the only address he had. That card reached its destination and set off an exciting chain of events.

By the time he heard again from his American family, Ferenc Dudla was 68 years old, with a grown son and daughter.

Feri Dudla (Ferenc Dudla Jr.), now 37, had dreamed for years of being able to install indoor plumbing in the small home he shares with his parents, his wife and his children. Feri and his wife saved every spare penny for the indoor bathroom.

But because Feri feared his father "didn't have many years left to fulfill his dream," he and his wife put aside their own dream to help Feri's father visit America. The couple gave their life's savings to pay for the trip. Feri accompanied his elderly father, but because there was not enough money to pay for his wife and children, they stayed home.

"I am full of love and gratitude to my wife for her decision," said Feri through an interpreter. He explained that his wife also works full time and had to make many sacrifices to save the money.

In Hungary, Feri has what he calls "a good job" as a handyman for a large company. He makes $80 a month. The trip to America cost the equivalent of $1,300 U.S., which to Feri represents "a fortune."

When Ferenc Dudla saw the brother and sisters he had not seen for 61 years, the tears that rolled down his face spoke for him. Those same tears told Feri he had made the right decision about which dream was most important.

RAID

Clouds of black smoke billowed over Ein el-Hilweh, which houses more than 26,000 U.N.-registered refugees, and the smaller neighboring camp of Mieh-Mieh.

A guerrilla spokesman, who identified himself only by his nom de guerre, Abu Ghaleb, said there were no casualties among Palestinian fighters because they left most of the military centers after an Israeli air strike 11 days ago. He said the attacking planes were U.S.-supplied F-16s, but his report could not be verified independently.

The planes drew fusillades of machine-gun fire and shoulder-fired SA-7 missiles from guerrilla positions during the 45-minute raid after they swooped in at 11:45 a.m.

Sierra Leon coined 'dollar'

Sierra Leone, in west Africa, apparently was the first to use the word "dollar" on a coin. The coin's 1791 issues said "One Dollar." The United States struck dollars from 1794 until 1836 before identifying the denomination. In 1804 England struck dollars showing the denomination.

Smith again a victim of circumstance

By KARIN LAUB

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — It was as a victim of circumstance that John W. Smith appeared on the cover of Time magazine in July 1967. The arrest of the former Newark cabbie for a traffic violation led to one of the worst race riots in the nation's history.

Now, he's a victim of circumstance again: disabled by an accident five years ago, Smith is out of work, subsisting on welfare.

At 59, he says he now thinks about the little things — getting his teeth fixed, his car reparied, maybe playing the trumpet again sometime — and not about the boiling racial tensions that exploded in a week of arson, looting and bloodshed that claimed 26 lives.

"One gets on with the business of living," Smith said recently in a telephone interview from Salisbury, N.C., where he now lives. "The world can't stop rotating on its axis."

Once a professional trumpet player, he now receives less than $300 a month in public assistance. Asked to describe his life, he said: "How are you supposed to feel when you're in a corner, broke?"

He talks only reluctantly about the summer night nearly two decades ago that briefly shoved him into the limelight — a victim of circumstance and, in the view of many in Newark's ghetto then, a victim of police.

Smith said officers had no reason to stop him on July 12, 1967.

On the way to the police station, he was beaten so severely he could not walk and was dragged from the police car. Police alleged that Smith had assaulted and insulted them when they pulled him over.

Residents of Hayes Homes, a housing project across the street from the Fourth Precinct, watched as Smith was taken from the squad car.

"Some lady yelled out, 'You don't have to drag him like that, you could at least pick him up and carry him,'" Smith recalled.

Rumors spread that Smith had died in police custody and several hundred blacks gathered in front of the station house, said Oliver Lofton, the legal aid attorney whose firm represented Smith.

"The police had formed a phalanx outside," Lofton said. "I got up on top of a car and with the use of a bullhorn sought to explain to the crowd what was happening, that John Smith was going to get medical attention."

Lofton said he was trying to organize a protest march to police headquarters downtown when officers charged the crowd, nightsticks raised. The protesters dispersed, but the confrontation escalated later that night and the first shots were fired.

By the time the rioting ended, 26 people were dead and the city sustained $10 million in property damage.

Smith said that when he was released from jail, he returned to his room in a cheap hotel. While he stayed indoors to allow his broken ribs to heal, the city exploded around him. His picture made the cover of the July 21, 1967, issue of Time magazine. He still keeps copies.

The mayhem grew out of the frustration of blacks who had moved to Newark in large numbers in the 1950s and '60s and felt they had no voice at the white-controlled City Hall. The city police force was also predominantly white.

After Smith was convicted on one count of assault against the arresting officers, his lawyer appealed, arguing that blacks and other minorities were systematically excluded from the jury. A federal appeals court overturned the conviction, and Smith never served any time, Lofton said.

Smith, born in Georgia and reared in Salisbury, learned to play the trumpet at age 17 and said he occasionally toured with a tent show in the South.

He attended a music school in Greensboro and served in the Army at the end of World War II, moving to Newark when he was discharged.

Smith said he played off and on with several bands, in between working as a cabbie and at other odd jobs and living in hotels or rented rooms.

He said he likes to think back to those years, "meeting all the beautiful people, running over to New York, learning all kinds of things."

John W. Smith

He left Newark for good in 1968 after running into an old high school sweetheart on one of his trips to Salisbury. Smith moved into his parents' five-room house, and supported himself by doing odd jobs.

He had to stop working five years ago when he fell out of a tree and broke his back. Now, he said, he spends his days reading.

Khadafy seeks economic solutions

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — In the wake of the U.S-Libyan confrontation in the Gulf of Sidra, Col. Moammar Khadafy has turned his attention to Libya's growing economic crisis and called for an end to dependence on dwindling oil revenues.

Khadafy has used the March 24-25 confrontation with the U.S. 6th Fleet to boost his popularity at home and with Arabs abroad.

But domestically he faces mounting financial woes, largely caused by plunging prices on world petroleum markets. Since December, the price of oil has fallen about 60 percent.

Recent interviews with more than a dozen diplomats and foreign workers in Libya revealed a widespread economic crisis that includes shortages of food and other staples, and threatens jobs in the oil fields.

In an unusually harsh speech last Tuesday, Khadafy warned against the danger of dependence on oil to fuel his country's economy.

Oil is by far the largest single source of income for Libya. Libya makes few products of its own and depends heavily on imports.

In Tripoli, Khadafy said, "We must depend in our living on our own production," and called for better use of "worn-out" equipment and more recycling of paper to improve the economy.

Such a speech is a far cry from the 1970s, when skyrocketing oil prices let Khadafy boast that he was even equipping the tents of desert nomads with television sets.

According to industry estimates, Libya has seen its oil revenue plunge from $22 billion in 1981 to less than $8 billion in 1985.

"When the oil revenues started going down, instead of cutting spending across the board, they cut consumer products," said one diplomat who has spent nearly three years in Libya. He spoke on condition of anonymity.

Rosemary Wells, an Irish woman who has lived in Libya for three years and is married to a Libyan, was asked about the availability of food and other staples.

"It was bad when I came, but now it's worse," she said.

"Supermarkets are bad. Things are very scarce. There only has been meat for the past three weeks," she said.

In Tripoli, many buildings are falling into disrepair, while unfinished construction projects fill many parts of the city.

Death toll may climb in warehouse fire

AP Laserphoto

San Francisco coroners examine remains found Sunday at the site of an explosion and fire that destroyed a San Francisco industrial complex late Friday. Seven persons were missing.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Investigators searching for at least seven people missing after an explosion and fire that destroyed 126 businesses at a sprawling warehouse have found the remains of one person, but officials said the death toll could rise.

"It was so hot in there, it was like a crematorium," Fire Capt. Richard Crispin said Sunday of the $10 million blaze Friday at Bayview Industrial Park.

Forensic experts planned today to try to identify the badly burned remains found Sunday under heaps of rubble, said Boyd G. Stephens, the city's chief medical examiner. The victim's age, sex and race were unknown, he said.

The search for other possible victims was to resume today.

A 13-member team of federal agents and specialists was to join local fire investigators in combing through the rubble, said Frank Sanders of the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Investigators are satisfied that the explosion was caused by lacquer spraying, Crispin said. A high-pressure lacquer sprayer was used in a carpentry shop in the warehouse, and a spark could have ignited the lacquer, he said.

On Sunday, Ann Shoemaker of Buffalo, N.Y., said she believed her 27-year-old son, Bob, was working at a furniture refinishing business in the warehouse when the blaze broke out, and may have died in the fire.

"I want to have hope (but) I don't think he survived," Mrs. Shoemaker told WKBW-TV in Buffalo.

Crispin said Shoemaker was among the missing.

The fire investigator said the missing also included a man who had been in a first-floor bathroom when the building collapsed. The man, identified as Francisco Perla, 40, was a recent immigrant from El Salvador who only four days earlier had started a job as a packer at the warehouse.

Crispin said the other missing were Frank Wallis, in his early 30s; Patty Livingston, in her early 30s; an unidentified 7-year-old boy; Phillip Marta, 19, and a seventh person for whom Crispin provided no details.

Mrs. Livingston's father was "still holding out hope that she perhaps got struck on the head and is suffering from amnesia and is wandering around alive," said her sister-in-law, Laurie Livingston.

Kaiani Desha, Perla's boss, said Perla had told him minutes before the explosion how happy he was at finding work so that he could save money to bring his wife and four children out of their impoverished and war-torn homeland.

Desha said metal shelves saved him and three other men when the ceiling collapsed. He said he was knocked unconscious and was pulled out by another employee, and tried to look for Perla when he recovered.

"I tried to go down after him, but everything had fallen in," said Desha, who was released from a hospital Sunday. "He was just 20 feet away, just 20 feet away."

Casey links Libyan, Syrian terror to Soviet campaign

By BRYAN BRUMLEY

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. intelligence agents are tightening their ties with the security services of Israel and moderate Arab states to fight terrorism, says CIA director William J. Casey.

In a rare speech on Sunday, Casey also said Kremlin leader Mikhail Gorbachev was seeking to establish Soviet "bridgeheads" abroad, to the point of sending Soviet warplanes against government forces in a coup in South Yemen in January.

The speech by Casey marked the first time a U.S. official publicly accused the Soviet Union of complicity in the ouster of South Yemeni President Ali Nasser Mohammed.

Delivering the keynote address to a three-day meeting of the American-Israel Public Affairs Committee — a pro-Israel lobby — Casey depicted terrorist acts supported by Libyan and Syria as linked to a wider Soviet campaign to weaken American allies around the globe.

To cope with the threat of terrorism, Casey said, "the United States has strengthened and invigorated its strategic cooperation with Israel."

The cooperation, he said, "has included and features enhanced cooperation in our intelligence exchanges between the (Israeli) Mossad and the American intelligence community. And particularly in the field of terrorism and counter-terrorism."

"At the same time, we have also expanded our cooperative relationship with friendly Arab states, who also see a Soviet and radical danger. Together, we must fight terrorism, a threat which threatens all our friends in the Middle East and elsewhere," he said.

Asked to elaborate on CIA ties with Arab intelligence services, Casey said, "I'm not going to get very specific on that. But I will say that there has evolved over recent years a worldwide antiterrorist network which is based on the active intelligence exchanged among the the security services of moderate Arab, Europeans, all of our friends everywhere."

"We do a lot of training, we provide technical service to improve the capabilities of their services, and we collaborate with them in counterterrorist actions," he said.

Although U.S. officials seldom publicly disclose details of cooperation with foreign authorities against terrorism, such collaboration has been apparent over the past year.

Last Nov. 24, U.S. fighters escorted a plane ferrying Egyptian commandos who assaulted a hijacked jetliner on Malta. However, Maltese authorities reportedly prevented three U.S. officers who accompanied the commandos from taking part in the assault, an attack which resulted in 60 deaths.

Casey, describing U.S. efforts to contain Kremlin influence around the globe, said the Soviets "require bridgeheads in Cuba and Vietnam, in South Yemen and Ethiopia, in Angola and Nicaragua, in Afghanistan and elsewhere. And these bridgeheads are being linked in a growing logistical and support network, supported by a standing Soviet naval and air power."

Reagan facing decisions on how to combat world terrorism

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, back from a 10-day vacation marred by terrorist attacks on Americans abroad, faces new decisions on how to combat the violence his aides say is fomented by Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy.

As he boarded Air Force One on Sunday at Point Mugu Naval Air Station, Calif., Reagan said "No comment" when asked whether he planned to attack Libya to retaliate for the latest terrorist attacks on Americans overseas.

Reagan, who ended a vacation at his California ranch, also declined to comment when asked by a reporter whether he held Khadafy responsible for these attacks.

Four Americans were killed last week when a bomb blew up on an airliner approaching the Athens airport. Two people, one an American, died early Saturday in an explosion at a West Berlin night club jammed with U.S. soldiers.

An administration official said Saturday the explosions fit the pattern of a "master plan from Khadafy" for indiscriminate attacks on Americans.

But the official, who spoke on condition he not be named, also said the United States has not established any direct link between Khadafy and the two terrorist incidents.

Robert Oakley, the State Department's ambassador-at-large for counterterrorism, said U.S. officials have "some suspicions" that Libya was linked to the attacks but no hard evidence.

Oakley, appearing on CBS's "Face The Nation," said the administration was seeking to deal with the Libyan terrorism threat by generating "as much collective pressure as possible" from American allies, he said.

"It's not the United States versus Libya. Think of the effect this is having upon the Europeans. We're in this together, and our objective is to get the Europeans to work with us to do more about this threat, whether it be from Libya, or Syria, or Iran, or elsewhere," Oakley said.

The administration official who briefed reporters in Santa Barbara said Khadafy had targeted more than 30 U.S. diplomatic installations for terrorist attack. The official said none of the attacks had taken place but some had been thwarted.

Oakley said there have been "a number of surveillances conducted of American embassies by Libyans, Libyan People's Bureau members in a number of countries around the world."

Large section of Challenger's fuselage recovered

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A large section of Challenger's fuselage emblazoned with the American flag was brought into port Sunday night aboard one of the shuttle salvage boats.

The piece weighed about 5,000 pounds and measured about 10-by-20-feet, the Navy said. It was one of the biggest pieces of wreckage recovered so far.

The vessel LCU, which stands for landing craft utility, also had another 10-by-10-foot piece of fuselage and several smaller chunks of debris on its deck.

Challenger exploded 73 seconds after liftoff Jan. 28, killing its crew of five men and two women.

Divers from the USS Preserver have recovered all the astronaut remains they expect to find, according to a source close to the investigation. The remains are being examined and identified by forensic experts at a medical facility here.

Once identifications are completed, the bodies will be turned over to families.

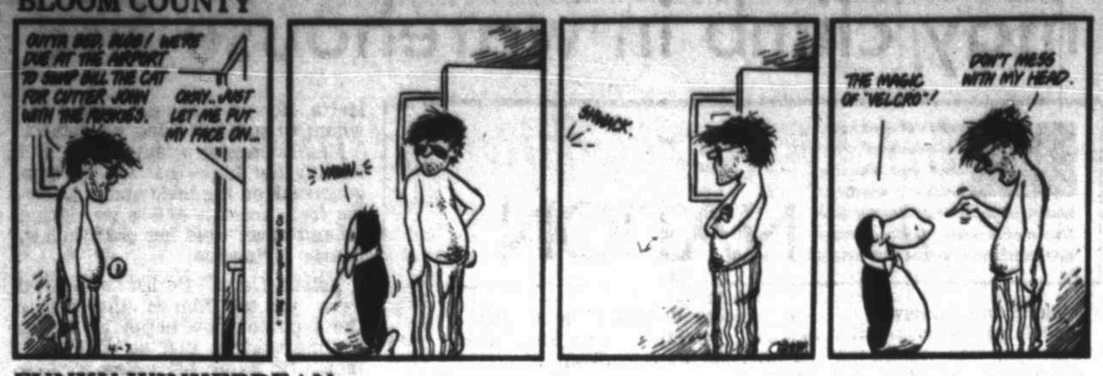

Eight other ships and three small submarines are searching for shuttle debris in a 480-square-mile area of the Atlantic ranging from about 15 to 50 miles northeast of here.

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: The development of strong, long-lasting relationships should be your main goal in the year ahead. The business picture looks brightest in the fall. Strike a better balance between work and play. A lesson learned in the past helps you feather your nest. Double check any financial information you are given. You cannot afford to be too trusting. A well-intentioned friend could make a mistake.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Edward Mulhare of "Knight Rider," former First Lady Betty Ford, ambassador to Mexico John Gavin, singers Jacques Brel, Connie Stevens and Julian Lennon, pitcher Catfish Hunter, skater Sonja Henie, actress Mary Pickford.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A threat to break a promise makes business touch-and-go today. Money comes from investments, real estate deals. Save for a rainy day.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Someone admits he/she lost out by not taking your advice. The publishing field holds rich promise for you. Be direct in answering a challenge. You can negotiate a better deal later on.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Take the lead where money matters are concerned. You can turn innovative ideas into additional income. Be willing to go that extra mile for an important personal relationship. The benefits cannot be measured.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Not a good day to finalize deals or sign contracts. Ask for more time. New contacts lead to happy romance. Children may try your patience. Recognize their need to test authority.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Travel can improve the bottom line in business. Good vibrations exist between you and a newcomer. Agreements made now will work to your advantage. Do what you can to keep a dream alive.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Community involvement will open the door to a new business or employment opportunity. Do not let your personal feelings sabotage a good deal.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your privacy is very important to you now. Be careful not to mix business with pleasure. Look forward to spending more time with one who loves and understands you. Romance is favored tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Romance is uppermost in your thoughts. Privacy may be hard to come by. A walk relieves tension. A business opportunity could disappear unless you make your move soon. Ingenuity saves the day!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Making our own home repairs can save you money and materials. Just don't bite off more than you can chew. Your co-workers could rebel if you make too many demands on them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stick to your guns and you will eventually win on a sensitive matter. Travel is best postponed. Exciting developments occur on the home front.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Highly beneficial forces are working for you in several areas now. Move with caution when invited to invest in something you do not fully understand. Expert advice is worth the cost.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be more diplomatic at work and more affectionate at home. Once you show your gentle side, others will give your the support you need. Confide in mate. A candid chat relieves tension.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A98 ♡AJ1073 ◇8 ♣KJ65
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	2 ♣	?

What do you bid now?
A.—It is tempting to double two clubs, especially since you will still be a 3-to-1 favorite to win the rubber. However, the opponents are not vulnerable and your side certainly has at least a game. The penalty you get might not be sufficient compensation for missing a game or slam. Bid two hearts to start a probe for the right spot.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J10652 ♡Q9873 ◇7 ♣K6
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
3 ◇	3NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—It is quite possible your side has a 5-3 fit in one of the majors. Even so, there is no guarantee you can take 10 tricks in that suit, since the preempt makes it likely that suits are going to break badly. Besides, partner didn't invite you into the auction—he could have doubled. Pass—your smattering of high cards should be enough to enable him to make his contract.

Q.3—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠QJ9 ♡75 ◇J1052 ♣A876
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Dble	?

What action do you take?
A.—If you pass now, you might never be able to tell partner you have some useful values—you might have to decide whether to act at the three-level when next the bidding gets around to you. Bid one no trump now. That describes your shape and strength, and puts partner in a position to extract a penalty should the opponents get a trifle presumptuous.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K983 ♡KJ ◇A52 ♣Q983
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	3 ◇	3 NT	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—There can be only two reasons why partner took you out of three no trump: either his hand is very distributional or very powerful. In either case, your hand could hardly be better for him, with little if any wasted values. You can get that message across by cue-bidding four diamonds.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠972 ♡94 ◇AK6 ♣KQ1052
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	1 ♠	2 ♣	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—You have a very good hand in support of diamonds, but not enough to guarantee an 11-trick contract. Therefore, you do not yet want to take the hand beyond three no trump. Since you have already freely made a two-over-one response, there is no need now to bid more than three diamonds. With major-suit stoppers, partner can convert to three no trump, and you will be delighted to play there.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ10542 ♡Q93 ◇85 ♣72
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—With your unbalanced hand and length in the majors, you certainly don't want to play in no trump. Therefore, it is simply a question of whether you should rebid your spades or support partner's suit. Since supporting partner's hearts is the more encouraging of the two actions, and promises five spades in this auction, we would opt for a preference to two hearts and promises five spades.

Chita Rivera injured in mishap

NEW YORK (AP) — Broadway show star Chita Rivera suffered a broken leg and other injuries early today when a taxicab struck broadside the car she was driving as she was making a turn, police said.

Ms. Rivera, 53, was in stable condition at Lenox Hill Hospital, where she was undergoing surgery for a fractured left leg and lacerations to that leg and her right eyebrow, according to Meriene Parris, a hospital spokeswoman.

The actress and dancer has been appearing in "Jerry's Girls," a Broadway tribute to the songs of Jerry Herman also starring Leslie Uggams and Dorothy Loudon.

The accident occurred shortly after midnight when Ms. Rivera pulled out of a parking space to make a U-turn near Central Park in Manhattan, said police Sgt. Ron Severin.

Two passengers in Ms. Rivera's car who suffered minor injuries were treated and released, Severin said. They were identified only as a man and a woman.

The driver of the cab, 28-year-old Dae Kang, and a passenger also suffered minor injuries, he said. They were treated at the scene and released.

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Doctors say they are optimistic that U.S. Rep. Manuel Lujan Jr. will fully recover from triple coronary bypass surgery.

The nine-term Republican was in stable but guarded condition after undergoing the 4½-hour operation on Sunday at Presbyterian Hospital, doctors said.

"His vital signs are quite good and we would expect him to have a complete recovery," said Dr. William Dean, one of five surgeons involved.

Family members said Lujan, 57, felt ill Saturday night and doctors determined he was suffering a heart attack.

Dean said he expected the congressman would remain hospitalized for 7-10 days and would be able to resume his duties in Washington, D.C., in four to six weeks. Lujan is seeking re-election.

MIAMI (NYT) — Sen. Paula Hawkins will undergo surgery Tuesday to relieve chronic back and neck pain. The surgery will interrupt her re-election campaign, already marked by questions about her health.

The operation will be performed at the Duke University Medical Center in Durham, N.C., Bill Hart, spokesman for the Florida Republican, announced Sunday. He said Hawkins would be hospitalized for one to three weeks and would miss at least a month of Senate sessions.

Hawkins, a 50-year-old freshman senator, is facing a strong re-election challenge from Gov. Bob Graham, the popular chief executive of a state that has 11 million residents and ranks sixth in the nation in population.

The contest, closely watched by national officials of both major parties, could be pivotal in fight for control of the Senate in President Reagan's last two years in office. Republicans now hold 53 seats as against 47 for the Democrats.

• • •

BOSTON (AP) — Actor Ed Asner says President Reagan's call on Congress to approve $100 million in aid to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua was designed to make critics feel like traitors.

"For the word is out that if you're a dissenter or a doubter or even, heavens forbid, a Democrat, you are also disgraceful, disingenuous, disloyal and just downright un-American. That's what he told the congressional representatives," Asner said Sunday in a speech to the Community Church of Boston.

Asner

The Contra aid package was turned down by the House last month but later narrowly approved by the Senate. The House is scheduled to vote on it again after April 15.

Asner is best known for his portrayal of the crusty newspaper editor on television's "Lou Grant" series.

Zappa

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Moon Unit Zappa doesn't talk like a Valley girl, lives at home with her mom and rock star dad, Frank Zappa, and is proud of her stable family life.

But the 18-year-old actress who achieved fame with her "Valley Girl" record parody of San Fernando Valley teens knows a rock'n'roll family's image provokes prejudice.

"When I was little, people wouldn't let me come over to their children's houses because they thought that I would curse," Miss Zappa says. "And they're damned right. That's what kids do."

Miss Zappa made her name reflecting youth. At age 14 she cut "Valley Girl" with the help of dad. The national hit single identified a whole new language born from teen-agers in the Sherman Oaks Galleria — "Bag your face," "Gag me with a spoon," "Oh my God!" and "Grody to the max."

ROME, Ga. (AP) — A Saudi Arabian prince concerned about keeping poachers and trash-dumpers away from his estate, which sprawls across parts of two counties, has bought more than three miles of roads leading to his land.

The 8,000-acre spread in Floyd and Bartow counties is owned by Prince Faisal Muhammad Al-Said Al Kabir. A 50,000-square-foot house is in the planning stages.

"Illegal hunters were coming in there and shooting the wildlife, which is abundant," said Sam Singer, the prince's land acquisition agent. "People were dumping trash, and we lost 140 acres to arsonists last year."

Singer says the prince wants the land around his home to be an environmental garden spot and a wildlife refuge.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A 47-year-old man who had two heart transplants in two weeks after his body began rejecting the first heart because the blood type had been incorrectly matched was in serious condition Sunday, a hospital spokesman said.

The man, whose name has not been released at his family's request, received the second heart Thursday night.

His condition was upgraded from critical to serious Friday and had not changed over the weekend, said Barnes Hospital spokesman Mark Berlin.

The man's body had begun to reject the heart he received March 21 because the blood types did not match, doctors said.

Hospital officials said the first heart came from a donor who had blood type B. The patient has type A blood.

OCEAN CITY, Md. (AP) — Roll out the red carpet, turn on the searchlights and let the champagne flow. Ocean City is hitting the big time.

Next Sunday, five days before the national release of a new movie called "Violets Are Blue," the city is the site of the world premiere.

It is, perhaps, only fitting. The film, starring Sissy Spacek and Kevin Kline, was made here.

"It's not often a small town gets to host a premiere. We fought tooth and nail for it. We're going to do that film justice here," said Bill Ochse, chairman of the Violets Are Blue Committee.

Contract it out

Ronald Reagan is not the first American president who has tried to shift inefficient federal services to the private sector. In fact it was Dwight D. Eisenhower who issued the original presidential directive on contracting out the government's commercial services in 1955.

Unfortunately, President Eisenhower's good intentions were effectively sabotaged by political inertia and a federal bureaucracy protecting its bloated flank. Not surprisingly, the same forces have stymied President Reagan's proposed reforms as well.

Five years ago, President Reagan promised to reduce the size of the federal work force engaged in commercial services, such as data processing, janitorial service, and maintenance work that could be done more efficiently and economically by private contractors. Since then, however, 120,000 public employees have been added to the federal payroll.

A lot of Americans may wonder how this can be, when numerous studies have concluded that billions of dollars could be saved through privatization of such services?

The Grace Commission, for example, estimated that approximately 500,000 government positions could be contracted out to more efficient private firms, resulting in a savings of $28.4 billion over three years. The Congressional Budget Office, hardly an advocate of privatization, has conceded that the federal government could save billions of dollars during the next few years by contracting out certain federal services. And a 1984 study by the Office of Management and Budget found that, during the last seven years, the federal government has realized an average 20 percent savings when it sought competitive bidding on a particular project.

Actually, such savings tend to be the exception in Washington, since federal agencies often undermine White House directives and congressional and bureaucratic constraints effectively limit competition from the private sector.

Private bidders, for example, must submit a firm proposal that is at least 10 percent below the in-house estimate, which puts them at a significant disadvantage because they have to swallow the loss if they underestimate their costs. A federal agency, on the other hand, has no such problem. If it underestimates the costs involved in completing a project, the government merely coughs up the difference. This and other facets of the federal government's cost-comparison review process place private bidders at an estimated 35 percent cost handicap.

Meanwhile, congressional restrictions against contracting out commercial services have all but excluded private firms from the federal arena. Unwarranted national-security considerations, for instance, have been used to rule out privatization in many Pentagon programs. Never mind that the Pentagon has said private contractors could save taxpayers millions of dollars each year in routine maintenance, supply, and repair services.

Such savings are possible not because federal employees are less able, but because they face different incentives. Private firms have a powerful incentive to reduce the cost of providing their services. If they fail to keep costs down and quality up, they lose money and soon will lose contracts to their rivals. No such incentive exists in the public sector. On the contrary, if a public agency becomes more efficient at providing a service, it risks having its budget reduced the following year.

Contracting out particular federal work should be explored. Like charity, deficit-busting begins at home in the spendthrift District of Columbia.

Another View:

Fine-tuning the scales

After much in-house and inter-agency debate, the Central Intelligence Agency is changing its method for estimating the yields of Soviet underground nuclear tests. This is no arcane issue in seismological research. It goes to the heart of a major U. S.-Soviet dispute: Soviet violations of the 1974 Threshold Test Ban Treaty.

The Reagan administration has repeatedly argued that the Soviets have conducted underground nuclear tests that are higher than the agreement's 150-kiloton (150,000 tons of TNT) ceiling. The new CIA estimating procedures will lower individual Soviet test yields by about 20 percent. This, in turn, has an impact on the charges of Soviet cheating. Retired Adm. Sylvester Foley Jr., now assistant secretary for defense programs at the Energy Department, explains, "When you aggregate all of these (Soviet nuclear test yields) together, there were some violations, yes, but not as many as originally indicated. And the range of these (Soviet) explosions, certainly in recent times, probably falls within the threshold test ban."

Other government sources indicate that under these new estimates about a dozen or so of the Soviet tests may have violated the treaty, with only three or four of them being potentially serious.

The new CIA figures do not vindicate the Soviets, but they do lessen the potential military value and political importance of these Soviet violations. What is more important, as Adm. Foley indicated, is that the Soviets are correcting their behavior and are now working within the 1974 treaty. This clearly shows — contrary to the remarks of some administration officials — that arms control treaties can be effective.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On April 7, 1953, the United Nations General Assembly elected Dag Hammarskjoid of Sweden Secretary-General.

On this date:

In 1788, the first permanent settlement in Ohio — at Marietta — was founded.

In 1927, an audience in New York saw an image of Commerce Secretary Herbert Hoover in the first successful long-distance demonstration of television.

In 1947, auto pioneer Henry Ford died in Dearborn, Mich., at the age of 83.

In 1949, the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical "South Pacific" opened on Broadway.

In 1967, the last of New York's electric trolleys completed its last run from Queens to Manhattan.

In 1966, the United States recovered a hydrogen bomb it had lost off the coast of Spain.

In 1980, the United States announced it was breaking off diplomatic relations with Iran in the wake of the hostage crisis.

Ten years ago: China's leadership deposed Deputy Prime Minister Teng Hsiao-ping and appointed Hua Kuo-feng prime minister and first deputy chairman of the Communist Party.

Five years ago: President Reagan suffered a big defeat on Capitol Hill as the House Budget Committee dumped his budget blueprint in favor of a Democratic alternative.

One year ago: In an interview released in Moscow, Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev offered to freeze medium-range missile deployments in Europe, and suggested a meeting with President Reagan. U.S. officials questioned Gorbachev's sincerity.

Today's birthdays: Actor James Garner is 58. Movie director Alan Pakula is 58. Actor Wayne Rogers is 53. Media commentator Hodding Carter is 51. Former California Governor Jerry Brown is 48. Movie director Francis Ford Coppola is 47. TV personality David Frost is 47. Singer John Oates is 37. Singer-songwriter Janis Ian is 35. Football player Tony Dorsett is 32.

Thought for Today: "History is more or less bunk." — Henry Ford (1863-1947).

Stories vary on Nicaraguan flap

WASHINGTON — Did Maureen Reagan try to have an official guest sent home because the visitor opposed the administration's aid to the contras? The president's daughter denies any such attempt, and the visiting Nicaraguan finished her stay as scheduled. Here's what government sources told our associate Lucette Lagnado:

Jack Anderson

Azucena Ferre is a politically active intellectual, a member of a wealthy Nicaraguan landowning family. She was selected by U.S. Embassy officials in Managua to come to Washington as part of the U.S. Information Agency's cultural exchange program.

Ms. Ferre was known to be an opponent of the Sandinista regime. What apparently was not so well known is that she also opposes the contras. Her views coincide with those of an alternative anti-Sandinista group, the coalition that includes the Costa Rica-based guerrilla force of Eden Pastora, the onetime Sandinista hero known as Commandante Zero.

When she arrived in Washington a few weeks ago, Ms. Ferre told her USIA hosts she wanted to meet members of Congress and tell them her anti-Sandinista, anti-contra views. Someone involved with the trip had the bright idea that Ms. Ferre should also meet Maureen Reagan, the president's politically active daughter. Both women had attended the international women's conference in Nairobi last year.

Instead of reminiscences of Kenya, however, there was a passionate discussion of Nicaraguan politics, with each woman taking pains to make her opinion known to the other. The scheduled 30-minute meeting stretched to more than a hour, sources said, causing Ms. Ferre to miss an appointment with officials of the Republican National Committee.

Ms. Reagan admitted to our associate that she was upset by Ms. Ferre's anti-contra views. She also acknowledged that she called her father's good friend, Charles Z. Wick, head of the U.S. Information Agency.

Ms. Reagan said she merely told Wick that Ms. Ferre was not the "political organizer" she was thought to be, and added that Ms. Ferre could be in danger back in Managua if her anti-Sandinista views were publicized. For her own safety, Maureen Reagan said, she urged that Ms. Ferre be kept from meeting the Washington press corps.

At no point, Ms. Reagan insists, did she suggest that the USIA send Ms. Ferre packing back to Nicaragua.

Officials involved with the Ferre trip put a different spin on the episode. They insist that they got word from "the top" that Ms. Ferre was to be sent home forthwith, that she be kept from press contacts — and that Maureen Reagan was behind it all.

Sources said the officials were called on the carpet by USIA officials and told to "terminate" Ms. Ferre's visit. But they pointed out that the Nicaraguan visitor already had an appointment with the editors of the New York Times, and her failure to show up could be more embarrassing than anything she might say at the meeting.

"What should I tell these people, that she dropped dead?" one official reportedly asked.

On this pragmatic basis, the information agency officials reportedly relented, and Ms. Ferre completed her USIA-sponsored visit as scheduled.

How persuasive the Nicaraguan woman was at the New York Times is not known. But it is clear that she failed to sway Maureen Reagan. The president's daughter told us it is "naive" to suppose there can be an effective dialogue with the Sandinistas, as Ms. Ferre insisted is possible. Military defeat of the Managua regime is the only solution, the president's daughter said.

Footnote: A USIA spokesman would offer "no comment" concerning Ms. Ferre's visit or the discussions between Maureen Reagan and Charles Wick.

BICENTENNIAL BOONDOGGLE: Our recent report that the commission on the bicentennial of the Constitution is considering a $150 million monument didn't sit well with Ron Mann, the commission's deputy staff director. In a memo to his staff, he denied the story, explaining: "At present our main efforts are dedicated to getting organized and developing the necessary organizational paper," he explained. In other words, after months of existence, the commission isn't organized enough to consider anything. Our sources still insist the monument will be a top priority — if the commission ever gets its act together.

EVANS & NOVAK

'Leakers' put Stingers on hold

WASHINGTON — Covert delivery of shoulder-fired Stinger anti-aircraft missiles for Jonas Savimbi's Angolan rebels and for Afghan freedom-fighters is "on hold" because of congressional anger over leaked reports that President Reagan ordered the CIA to start shipments.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

At the same time, the administration triggered a high-powered security search for the "leaker." Actually, insiders doubt the leak came from the CIA or anywhere else in the administration. They blame aides to anti-Stinger members of the Senate and House Intelligence Committees, including some Republicans.

The "hold" on actual delivery is not expected to last, but is causing problems in the anti-communist movements of Angola and Afghanistan. A massive communist offensive is due in Angola soon. Stingers are needed to counter the Soviet MI-24 Hind gunship, the most awesome weapon in the Cuban-backed, Soviet-advised force.

BUSH ON THE PHONE

A signal of how hard George Bush is campaigning for president came when Monroe County (Michigan) Republican Chairman Bev Hammerstrom was unnerved by a morning telephone call from the vice president asking her to serve on his state steering committee.

Just the night before, after hearing Rep. Jack Kemp address a party gathering in Detroit, Hammerstrom gave a private commitment to one of the congressman's operatives to support him for president. She declined Bush's offer the next morning, but since then she has made no public statement for Kemp.

With the state's early-bird delegate selection beginning in August this year, the vice president has been busy on the phone there to such Republicans as Paul Gadola, a Flint lawyer who is the party's 7th Congressional District chairman. He is considered a Kemp backer but, as a prospective appointment to a federal judgeship, is not going public.

HART'S LAST JUNKET

The last chance for taxpayer-financed travel by Sen. Gary Hart, early front-runner for the Democratic presidential nomination, was postponed until summer when the Pentagon informed him it could not divert "security personnel" for a trip to Israel scheduled during the Easter recess.

An Israeli trip is considered essential for presidential prospects. Since Hart is not seeking a third term from Colorado, he would have to finance such a trip out of scarce campaign funds once he leaves the Senate in January.

Instead, his Middle Eastern trip under Senate Armed Services Committee auspices will be paid for in full by tax money. Hart, as a committee member, intends to visit defense ministers in Israel, Jordan and Egypt and observe the Israeli military first hand.

WHEN, ANATOLIY?

President Reagan is hoping that departing Soviet Ambassador Anatoliy Dobrynin will reveal summit plans of Mikhail Gorbachev when the dean of the Washington diplomatic corps stops in at the Oval Office to say farewell after 24 years as ambassador.

Reagan is not publicly pressing for an answer as to whether Gorbachev will come to the U.S. in the June/July or the late November/December period. Both offers are open for the Soviet ruler.

But Reagan aides would like privately to get a time certain so the president's schedule for the summer and political campaign this fall can be planned. Fresh from the Communist Party Congress in Moscow, Dobrynin is believed to know when Gorbachev wants to come but may not be empowered to tell the president.

NEW GOP CANDIDATE

In a move that could transform the 1988 Republican presidential outlook, Sen. Bill Armstrong of Colorado has changed his tune from "never" to "maybe" — sad news for his close friend, Rep. Jack Kemp.

The attractive Armstrong is a born-again Christian, fiscal conservative and staunch anti-communist. As such, he would cut directly into the constituency on the right depended on by Kemp.

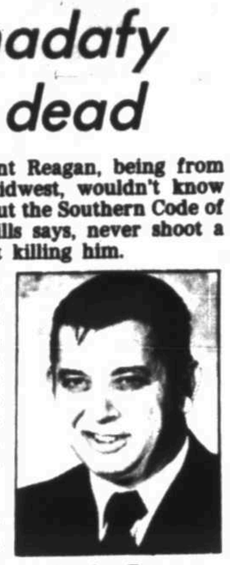

A footnote: The slow approach to presidential campaigning by ex-Senate majority leader Howard Baker has produced a compliment from Nancy Reagan. The first lady has let it be known that Baker, unlike other Republicans, has not leaped into premature campaigning that detracts from the last years of her husband's presidency. That was a mild slap at Vice President Bush.

CHARLEY REESE

U.S. lost if Khadafy isn't dead

President Reagan, being from the Midwest, wouldn't know this, but the Southern Code of the Hills says, never shoot a man without killing him.

Charley Reese

President Reagan has violated that rule a lot, both with Libyan dictator Moammar Khadafy and with the Nicaraguan Sandinistas. The logic of the Code is that if you only wound your enemies, you will have to fight them again and the next time, they may get the drop on you.

If you would prefer to have this principle expressed in more hoity-toity terms, then I can say that military forces are not designed to make demonstrations. They are designed to close with and destroy your enemies and any other use of them is mis-use and apt to get you into trouble.

Reagan mis-used the Marines in Lebanon and it cost us 267 lives and an enormous loss of face in the Middle East. The Marines are not trained and designed to be policemen, diplomats or military school teachers. They are trained and designed to be an assault force.

The flaw in the Gulf of Sidra exercise is that if Khadafy is still alive and in power after the fleet leaves, then no matter how many of his boats are sunk and his underlings killed, Khadafy wins and the United States loses. The inescapable fact is that Khadafy defied the armed might of the United States and survived. That is a victory, no matter what timid desk-bound strategists in the White House or Pentagon claim.

If Reagan wasn't prepared to use a limited attack as an excuse to knock Khadafy completely out of power, then he should have kept the fleet out of the Gulf of Sidra. If all you want to do is argue points of international law, then you should use lawyers and diplomats, not the Navy.

Fearful people addicted to half-steps will try to claim that we made our point about freedom of the seas by killing a few Libyans, but we didn't. Khadafy made his point. He said the Gulf of Sidra was his and that he would defend it. He did. And he's still there and we're not. You haven't established a right to travel if everytime you travel you have to shoot your way through a place.

Reagan is a nice man but he does not understand the world, which is just as barbaric and just as completely ruled by force as it ever was. He does not understand that rhetoric notwithstanding, most people in the world can see reality with clear eyes.

The reality is that though Reagan has declared the Sandinistas to be our enemy, they are still in power and thriving. The reality is that though he has declared Khadafy to be our enemy, Khadafy is still in power. The inescapable conclusion is that the United States is impotent to deal with its enemies if they are more in number than the few communists in Grenada. The leader of the last free superpower blusters and threatens but pipsqueak enemies continue to thrive.

If Reagan had hung out in bad bars and dangerous places instead of living a sheltered life, he would know that a great nation must act like the truly dangerous man.

The truly dangerous man does not wear camouflage fatigues or muscle shirts. He does not talk loudly, boast about how tough he is, give demonstrations or make threats. The truly dangerous man dresses inconspicuously and is soft-spoken. He walks away from most confrontations. The only time you learn that the truly dangerous man is mad at you is a split second before you die, for he never fights. He only kills. The truly dangerous man knows that fighting is what children do and killing is what men do.

The United States should present a serene face to the world, confident and open to friendship, tolerant of inconsequential posturing. But, when the United States does frown in public, that frown should be a death sentence. That's the only way the United States will earn respect in a world of nation-states, most of which are run by thieves, cutthroats, and greedy opportunists.

Never shoot a man you don't intend to kill.

Charley Reese is a syndicated columnist for King Features Syndicate.

NATION IN BRIEF

UNO rides out shakeup

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chief U.S.-backed Nicaraguan rebel group, concerned about charges of mismanagement, is engaged in a behind-the-scenes reorganization that has put a Miami-based exiled businessman in charge of coordinating financial and political operations.

But Nicaraguans close to the United Nicaraguan Opposition (UNO) say the shakeup has been kept quiet for fear it could jeopardize President Reagan's $100 million aid request by acknowledging existing problems in handling earlier U.S. assistance.

The Democratic-controlled House is scheduled to reconsider Reagan's proposal for military and other aid on April 15, after defeating it last month. Reagan's proposal narrowly cleared the Republican-dominated Senate on March 27.

Loyalists visit Marcos

HONOLULU (AP) — About 400 loyalists of ousted Philippines President Ferdinand E. Marcos came to visit him bearing gifts and were rewarded for their support by an invitation to watch the exiled leader interviewed for a television show today.

The well-wishers also were suprised when Marcos' wife, Imelda, left the $1.5 million beachfront rented house to sign autographs.

Mrs. Marcos, the once fashionable first lady who left behind 3,000 pairs of shoes when she fled Manila, wore the same forest green dress she wore on three other public occasions since she and her husband arrived here Feb. 26.

Joe Lazo, president of Friends for Marcos, said Mrs. Marcos told him the simple, short-sleeved dress was "the only good dress she has."

In his interview, with David Hartman of ABC's "Good Morning America," Marcos said, "If the United States would let me, I would like to go back to the Philippines, to my part of the country, and live the life of a peasant."

Mormons back Benson

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mormon Church President Ezra Taft Benson received the backing of his church's membership in first annual conference as leader since the death of former president Spencer W. Kimball last November.

Benson, 86, received a vote of approval from thousands of Mormons on Sunday as the faith's prophet, seer and revelator during the closing session of the 156th Annual General Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He became the church's 13th president following Kimball's death.

Some 5,000 Mormons in the Tabernacle on downtown Temple Square stood and raised their right hands in a vote signifying their acceptance of Benson and his two counselors, Gordon B. Hinckley and Thomas S. Monson.

Bingham trial to open

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP) — Attorneys were set to make opening statements in the trial of an activist lawyer charged with murder and conspiracy in a bloody prison uprising nearly 15 years ago that left six people dead.

Opening arguments were scheduled today in the trial of Stephen Bingham, a 44-year-old former Peace Corps volunteer who went into hiding after the deadly 1971 prison breakout bid by prison revolutionary George Jackson.

Bingham, son of a wealthy and politically prominent Connecticut family, is accused of providing the weapon that prompted the violence.

A fugitive for 13 years, he gave up his underground existence on July 9, 1984, when he surrendered to authorities with the help of former Attorney General Ramsey Clark.

Espionage trial to begin

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — A former Army counterintelligence official accused of selling the identity of a key double agent to the Soviet Union is set to stand trial after a lengthy legal battle over what government secrets will be in evidence.

Richard Craig Smith, a former Mormon missionary, was scheduled to go on trial today on espionage charges in U.S. District court here. He could be sentenced to life imprisonment if convicted of the charges.

Smith, arrested on April 4, 1984, has been free on bail for nearly two years and living in Bellevue, Wash., while government and defense attorneys sparred over how many and which classified documents will be allowed into evidence in the trial, according to court papers.

Congress to debate guns

WASHINGTON (AP) — A battle over competing gun bills highlights the agenda as Congress returns this week from its Easter recess, but tax and budget matters won't be far in the background.

Competing versions of legislation to alter the 1968 Gun Control Act will be taken up by the House on Wednesday.

Rep. Harold L. Volkmer, D-Mo., has authored one bill, supported by the National Rifle Association, to permit interstate sale and transportation of handguns, rifles and shotguns.

But police organizations support a rival bill passed by the House Judiciary Committee that would only allow interstate transportation and sale of long guns — not handguns.

Falwell aide installed

BANGOR, Maine (AP) — An associate of the Rev. Jerry Falwell was installed Sunday as pastor of the Bangor Baptist Church, replacing a man who publicly confessed to adultery, and Falwell said the church was healthy again.

"It's going to take a little while before it's back where it was," Falwell said at a news conference before the installation of the Rev. Kenneth Chapman.

The church was rocked last fall when the Rev. Herman C. "Buddy" Frankland, its founder and an outspoken fundamentalist, summoned reporters to the church and made his confession.

As some members left to form a new congregation, Falwell undertook what he called a "spiritual rescue mission" to save the prominent church.

Lutherans may not merge

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Bishops of one of three Lutheran denominations that had agreed to merge into a new, 5.3 million-member group now say they have serious reservations and may recommend against the merger.

If changes in the proposed constitution of the merged group are not adopted by a merger commission at its June meeting, leaders of the Lutheran Church in America will recommend that its members not vote for the merger at a national convention in August, the denomination said in a statement Saturday.

Among the concerns raised by the LCA are the authority of the congregation, the mission of the church, definitions of the ministry and a quota system designed to create racial and sexual balance of power in the church, the Minneapolis Star and Tribune reported Sunday.

The Lutheran Church in America, with nearly 3 million members, is the largest Lutheran denomination in the country. It has been conducting merger talks with the American Lutheran Church and the Association of Evangelical Lutheran Churches. The target date for formation of the new Evangelical Lutheran Church in America is 1988, but any of the denominations can veto the merger.

Whitworth trial continues

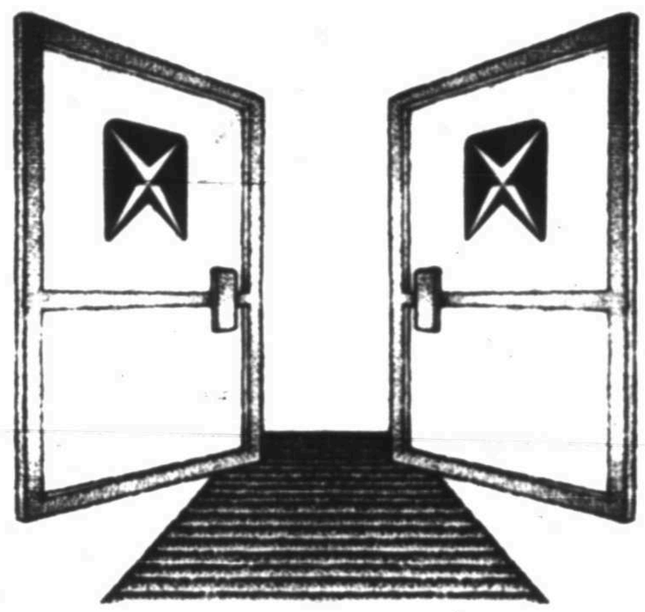

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Prosecutors in the espionage trial of Jerry Whitworth planned to set the stage for testimony by star witness John A. Walker Jr., the confessed mastermind of a major spy ring.

"We are entering a new phase of the case," Assistant U.S. Attorney William Farmer told the judge as he began calling FBI witnesses last week to detail Walker's arrest, which authorities said led them to Whitworth, his Navy buddy.

Farmer said witnesses would discuss Walker's arrest and the seizure of documents from his home, which began unraveling a spy ring that had been selling classified information to the Soviet Union for nearly two decades.

The trial was to enter its third week today.

Border forecasts

New Mexico: Isolated showers tonight increasing to scattered Tuesday. Also breezy and cooler Tuesday. Lows tonight 30s mountains to the 50s lower elevations south. Highs Tuesday near 60 northern mountains to the 80s south.

Oklahoma: Scattered thunderstorms statewide tonight and Tuesday. Low tonight in upper 40s in Panhandle to low 60s southeast. High Tuesday in low 70s northwest to upper 70s southeast.

Basin may get showers

From Staff Reports

Rain is possible across the Permian Basin tonight and Tuesday as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal predicts partly cloudy skies with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms. A low in the mid-60s is expected tonight. Winds will be from the south at 5 to 15 mph.

Tuesday calls for partly cloudy skies with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms. The high is expected to reach the upper 80s. Winds will be from the south at 10 to 15 mph.

Sunday's high of 84 was 15 degrees below the record set in 1972. The morning low of 64 was 22 degrees above the record set in 1933.

STATE

High pressure over the Gulf of Mexico continued to pull moist air into Texas today, bringing with it warm and humid conditions with the possibility of showers and thunderstorms.

Isolated to widely scattered thunderstorms were forecast in West Texas tonight and in Northwest Texas Tuesday where forecasters warned of the possibility of severe thunderstorm activity. Showers and thunderstorms are also possible in northern sections of South Texas Tuesday.

It will remain partly cloudy, warm and humid in North Texas through Tuesday.

Lows tonight will be in the 50s in the mountains and Panhandle and in the 60s over the rest of the state except in South Texas where readings will be in the 70s. Highs Tuesday will be mostly in the 80s, ranging from the mid 70s in the Panhandle to the near 90 in the Big bend area of Southwest Texas and in South Texas.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 60s and 70s. Extremes ranged from 48 at Marfa to 75 at Corpus Christi.

Other early morning readings around the state included 60 at Amarillo, 68 at Wichita Falls, 67 at Fort Worth, 69 at Waco, 70 at Austin and San Antonio, 68 at Houston, 75 at Brownsville, 67 at San Angelo, 64 at Lubbock, 66 at Midland and 61 at El Paso.

NATION

A storm dropped snow on northern New England and spread rain across broad sections of the East today as rain dotted other sections of the nation from the Plains to California.

The storm pushed snow across northern Maine and the mountains of other northern New England states, and caused rain from the Appalachians to the mid-Atlantic Coast and across New England.

Baseball's back and not any too soon

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Summer starts today. Baseball's back and not a moment too soon.

Forget pucks and punts, tennis whites and golf pastels, the 24-second clock and the 19-foot pole vault. Shove them all in the recesses of your mind and refer to them only in an extreme emergency, like a rainout.

Concentrate instead on the important stuff, like Dwight Gooden's explosive fast ball and Don Mattingly's blazing bat, two of New York's nicest natural resources.

Meet me in St. Louis to admire acrobatic Ozzie Smith and hope that his arm is healthy. Figure out if you can how he fits a vacuum cleaner in his glove. The wonder of the Wizard of Oz is that he performs his magic on an artificial surface, where ground balls come rifling through the infield, unencumbered by hazards like grass and dirt.

Watch Cincinnati's Pete Rose operate, if not at first base then from the bench, conspiring for ways to beat you even while he is confined to the disabled list. The little boy spirit locked within him punctuates what baseball is all about.

Enjoy the overall excellence of George Brett, who, hitting and fielding, may be the best everyday player in the game right now. It was his individual brilliance last October that helped lift the Kansas City Royals first to the American League pennant and then to a world championship in two of the greatest comebacks baseball has ever seen.

Reflect on these masterpieces.

Capture in your mind's eye Reggie Jackson's majestic swing, back for one more — perhaps one last — season.

Relish the awesome abilities of poised young pitchers like Bret Saberhagen and Orel Hershiser, blessed with hurling know-how well beyond their tender years.

Marvel at the speed and daring of Vince Coleman, Tim Raines and Rickey Henderson, who will steal you blind with no hesitation whatsoever and regardless of how much attention your pitcher pays to them.

They are treasures all, wonders to be admired. And you can take your own, sweet time doing it, too, because there's no rush here.

Unlike the basketball clock at Kemper Arena, the ancient scoreboard timepieces in Wrigley Field and Fenway Park can run fast, slow or not at all. Nothing as pedestrian as minutes and seconds interferes with baseball. Remember the line from the game's national anthem:

"... I don't care if I never get back."

Time never expires on a baseball game. Innings and outs, perhaps. But time? Never.

Baseball is the quintessential survivor. Other sports always come along to challenge it and for a while, they seem to succeed. They offer more speed, more violence, more this and more that to a generation that has been weaned on the idea that more of anything must be better.

Meanwhile, baseball plods along, obligingly lending its fans out and then eventually welcoming them back when they realize that no sport can offer more cerebral exercise.

Never was baseball's survival more severely tested than last summer when a players' strike and drug trials buffeted the game's tranquility. Predictably, however, it survived and now, with the bad times behind it, baseball could once again prosper. Certainly, the parts are properly positioned for that.

With labor contracts in place, the only strikes we'll see this summer are the ones that fall between the hitters' shoulders and knees.

The drug epidemic seems to have peaked and hopefully now is over, ready to be consigned to a dark corner of baseball history, alongside the Black Sox scandal. At least the game is not perched precariously on the edge of a grand jury tinderbox, watching major league names dragged through the testimony as it was a year ago. That alone is an instant improvement.

Now give us a summer of pine tar and pennant races, a summer of runs, hits and errors, a summer of baseball.

Texas All-Star Alvin Hicks gets the jump on the USA's Leonard Jackson in a foot race to the basket.

Grace leads Texas to win

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Midland College's Ricky Grace led Texas to a 112-102 win over the USA in the United Bank NJCAA Basketball Classic at the Al Langford Chaparral Center Sunday afternoon.

It was a typically "Amazin'" Grace performance, 19 points, nine assists which resulted, predictably, in his being picked as the Most Valuable Player by the voting media members and college coaches, who far outnumbered the newsgatherers.

The 1,704 fans who showed up for this inaugural dream match were treated to a preview of next year's rules, the 19 foot-nine inch three-point basket, the elimination of the hash mark and the abandoning of the combination five-second count. Everything but the instant replay.

With only one day of practice, neither team made any special preparations for the rules which are designed to alter the game's strategy next year, and as Grace noted, "The three-point play. I thought of it just once."

"In these all-star games, I'd rather have the guards than the 6-9 player," winning coach Jerry Stone said. And in Grace, he had his guard.

As for 6-6 Eddie Frazier, Midland College's other representative on the floor, he didn't see any difference in lessening of congestion under the rim. "It was still crowded under there with everybody pushing and shoving."

Frazier managed to hold his own grabbing nine rebounds to share honors with Jeff Chumbley from Lufkin's Angelina College for the Texas team while making seven points.

THE THREE-point play, however, was important in determining the outcome.

The USA was 0-for-12 from the bonus point range while Texas was five-of-12 with Tim Scott, the 6-3 sharpshooter from Lon Morris, canning four of them.

As a result, Scott wound up the game's high scorer with four two-pointers, four three-pointers and two free throws. For the game, he was 8-of-14 from the field.

Moberly, Mo., College's 6-5 Mitch Richmond led the USA with a 21-point effort and 11 rebounds, not to mention two assists. Richmond was 8-of-16 from the floor and 5-of-6 from the line.

Grace hit three baskets early to give Texas a 9-4 lead and with a little more than three minutes gone, the USA took its only lead, 12-11, on successive baskets by 6-7 Kenny Reynolds, Chowan College, Murfreesboro, N.C., and Ed Cox, Itasca CC, Grand Rapids, Minn.

Scott put Texas back in front dunking a lob from Grace and then Edward Wright's three-point basket made it 16-12. Texas never again trailed, leading 56-49 at half and by as many as 17, 92-75, in the second half. However, the USA always came charging back, but 10 seemed to be the magic barrier.

WESTERN Texas' James Dawn scored 13 points, Edward Wright 11 and Wendell Perkins, high on A&M's list, scored 14, which had Aggie Coach Shelby Metcalf smiling. Double figure scorers for the USA were Reynolds 15, Ed Cox 16, Mike Flory 12 and 11 each by Chris Blocker, Tyrone Howard and Darryl McDonald, an Aggie signed and sealed.

Cox played in juco ball in Minnesota, but Metcalf's interest was stirred at the banquet Saturday night when he discovered the 6-3 175-pounder was from Chicago, the same high school as Sonny Parker, one of Shelby's former players at A&M.

Metcalf wouldn't say whether he made a scholarship offer, but Cox's performance didn't hurt his cause.

Of Grace, "Interested? I think it's between Oklahoma and SMU," Metcalf said.

Grace's version is "I haven't decided, but I leaning toward Oklahoma and Missouri."

When Ricky reluctantly left the floor in the final minute, the crowd gave him an warm ovation in his final Chap Center appearance, not only for this game but the last two seasons.

STAR DUST— This may have been the debut of the Classic in Midland, but the Jaycees handled the amenities like they'd been doing for years....Among too numerous to mention coaches in attendance were Oklahoma's Billy Tubbs and Wyoming's Ed Brandenburg, both of whom had teams in the NCAA playoffs this year. Although Frazier says he is going to Central Missouri, he piqued Brandenburg's interest with his play Sunday....Tom Abatemarco clammed up when local writer asked him if he were from Chapel Hill.....'Tevin Binns would have helped us more," said the North Carolina State assistant, "but he hurt his ankle late in the season." ...One coach who missed the Chap Center gala was MC assistant Reggie Franklin, off in Florida on a recruiting trip....Harvey Grant, USA's 6-9 center, was a no-show, reportedly intercepted by Kansas University on his way to the game.

USA— Chris Blocker 5 1-2 0 11, Ed Cox 6 1-3 1 16, Melvin Faust 0 1-2 0 1, Mike Flory 5 0-0 4 12, Tyrone Howard 4 3-6 3 11, Leonard Jackson 2 0-0 4 4, Darryl McDonald 3 4-6 0 11, Kenny Reynolds 6 3-4 1 15, Mitch Richmond 8 5-6 5 21. Totals 42 17-27 18 102.

Texas— Cedric Ellis 0 3-4 4 13, Ricky Grace 3 1-2 3 19, Tim Scott 8 2-2 0 22, Robert Nash 4 0-0 3 8, Eddie Frazier 3 1-2 3 7, Jeff Chumbley 2 0-0 5 4, James Dawn 4 5-6 4 13, Alvin Hicks 4 3-4 2 11, Wendell Perkins 5 2-3 2 14, Edward Wright 4 0-0 2 8. Totals 40 17-24 24 112.

Halftime: Texas 56-49.

Three Point goals: Scott 4, Wright 1. Assists: Texas: Grace 9, Wright 3. USA: Blocker 5, Howard 4, McDonald 4. Rebounds: Texas: Frazier 9, Chumbley 9, Ellis 5, Dawn, Scott, Nash, 4 each. USA: Richmond 11, Cox 7.

And for next year...

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

The seats were still warm as the crowd filed out and already they were making plans for the next one.

Any first time venture such as the United Bank NJCAA All-Star Basketball Classic must naturally be viewed with a certain amount of apprehension, even though the sponsoring support is enthusiastic.

The big question remains: Will the fans turn out?

The Jaycees' hopes were high before the game, pointing to an unexpectedly high 500 tickets sold prior to the game. And the 1,704 official paid attendance had to be gratifying for a first time venture.

"Bill Williams is already talking about bringing in a band and cheerleaders for each side for next year's game to liven up the crowd," said Langford Chaparral Center chief Mike Stevens...

THE NORTH end zone bleachers looked like an NCAA convention as coaches from four year colleges gathered to give the all-stars a final look and make a final pitch before the April 9 signing day. In fact, Odessa College's Archie Myers was on hand as was Al Avelsgard, who came all the way down from Minnesota to watch his Ed Cox in action.

Texas A&M's Shelby Metcalf, asked what his special needs were for next season, declared, "Everything. All of our starters were seniors and behind them we didn't have much depth."

In Darryl McDonald, 6-3 guard from Westchester, N.Y., Shelby has one positive and in 6-6 Wendell Perkins, Jacksonville, Texas, College, a possible, and in Ed Cox, 6-3 Chicagoan who played at Itasca in Grand Rapids, Minn., a maybe...

IT WAS no surprise Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs was present. He's in the bidding for MVP Ricky Grace of Midland College, 6-3 Tim Scott of Lon Morris. and 6-5 Mitch Richmond of Moberly College....

On the three-point shot, both feet must be outside the blue line when the ball is released. The official, if it's a three point play, raises his hands like he would for a touchdown.

One thing about it, there is going to be a lot of confusion at the score-keeper's table next winter. It's not only tough to see if the three-point attempt is legal from floor level, but who looks at the ref?....

If the Midland College Chaparrals hang any more championship banners from the ceiling, they're going to have to rename in it "Boston Garden."....

Ron Jaap/Reporter-Telegram

USA's Kenny Reynolds has trouble handling this rebound as Texas' Eddie Frazier (53) forms a crowd under the basket. Texas beat the USA, 112-102, in the United Bank NJCAA Classic at Langford Chaparral Center Sunday.

Wallace notches first victory

Meats 500

BRISTOL, Tenn. (AP) — Rusty Wallace, passed Darrell Waltrip on lap 400 to take the lead for good and notched his first career Winston Cup victory Sunday in the Valleydale Meats 500 at Bristol International Raceway.

Wallace was 11th different winner in the past 11 Winston Cup races, establishing a modern-day record for parity on the stock car circuit. The win at the high-banked, .533-mile oval was worth $34,780.

Wallace, who was among the leaders most of the day despite starting in the 14th position, pulled away from the field after passing Waltrip, but said he was worried about a caution flag down the stretch.

"I just knew we'd have a caution with 40 or 50 laps to go," he said. "That would've given everyone else a chance to get right up behind me and we might've gotten a bad set of tires, or something. Those last 20 laps seemed like 16,000 miles."

Ricky Rudd finished second, 10.69 seconds behind Wallace, and Waltrip, the Winston Cup points leader, was third.

The record of 11 different drivers winning the last 11 races broke the mark set during the 1983-84 season. The all-time record for such a streak is 13, set twice in 1961, a season with 52 events.

After working his way through slower traffic during the early stages of the race, Wallace took the lead for the first time on lap 240 and began demonstrating the dominance of his Pontiac by pulling away from the pack.

Rose, Jackson, Seaver...baseball stars at twilight

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

They are stars, even in the twilight of their careers.

No matter what Pete Rose, Reggie Jackson and Tom Seaver do in terms of numbers, they continue to be drawing cards at the ballpark.

And even though time has passed, they still feel productive, able to improve and willing to earn their keep.

It doesn't hurt that Rose owns baseball's all-time hit record, that Jackson still hits towering homers and that Seaver still fools batters.

There are nearly a dozen 40-year-old players in the major leagues this season. Also at that age or nearing it are Steve Carlton, Don Sutton, Nolan Ryan, Hal McRae and Carlton Fisk.

On April 14, Rose will be 45. And he will be the oldest player in the majors if no one picks up 47-year-old Phil Niekro, a 300-game winner waived by the New York Yankees in late March.

MENTION AGE to Rose and he answers with tight, to-the-point sentences.

"I don't have crow's feet. I don't have fat. My eyes are good. I've got a lot of hair," said the Cincinnati Reds player-manager.

"The only reason people know my age is 44 is it's in the paper," said Rose, who batted .264 with 46 runs batted in last season. He split time at first base with Tony Perez, who turns 44 next month. Perez hit .328 in 72 games.

"I have to think that based on statistics of what we both did last year, we deserve another shot," Rose said.

Jackson, with 530 career home runs, including 27 last season, knows the perils of growing old in the game. The California Angels' designated hitter turns 40 on May 18.

LAST SEASON, the Angels released Jackson's 40-year-old teammate, Rod Carew, a perennial .300 hitter. Carew hit .280 last season.

"It's always an inopportune time to die," he said. "I'm wondering if baseball retirement isn't the same way.

"If baseball feels you should be out of the game, you're out of the game. I hope that isn't happening to me, but it's starting to throw some thoughts into my head."

Jackson batted .252 with 85 RBI last season and played 81 games in the outfield. His .944 fielding percentage was the worst among major-league outfielders with at least 100 chances.

The Angels say Jackson will be used strictly as a DH this year, which does not please him. Neither does talk that he will be traded or that he should retire.

"I don't want to be a guy who went wah-wah-wah and made everybody sick of his crying. I want to protect my image," said Jackson, who will earn $975,000 this season.

"When you're 39, almost 40, you play where you're wanted, not where you like the weather or your chances for a pennant."

ANOTHER player upset with the prospect of being used only as a DH is Darrell Evans. Last season, at age 38, Evans hit 40 homers for the Detroit Tigers, the oldest player ever to lead the majors in HRs.

But Manager Sparky Anderson's opening-day plans may relegate Evans to DH against only right-handed pitchers — a move sure to cut his at-bats in half.

"Why can't I hit 40 again?" asked Evans, who will be 39 in May. "Who said I couldn't? How does anybody know that?

"I can't imagine this happening anywhere else. How can you hit 40 home runs and be taken out of the lineup?"

Anderson said he wasn't trying to single out Evans, but that he intended to use all 15 of his non-pitchers.

SEVERAL teams want to take chances on older pitchers.

Seaver, who was 16-11 and sixth in the American League with a 3.17 ERA last season, has worn No. 41 his entire career. This season, that number represents his age.

Seaver won his 300th career game with the Chicago White Sox last season, but would like to play for a team closer to his Connecticut home. The Boston Red Sox have offered Tony Armas.

Even now, Seaver says he is finding out how to pitch: "I'm still learning. It never stops."

Another pair of 41-year-old pitchers are coming off different seasons.

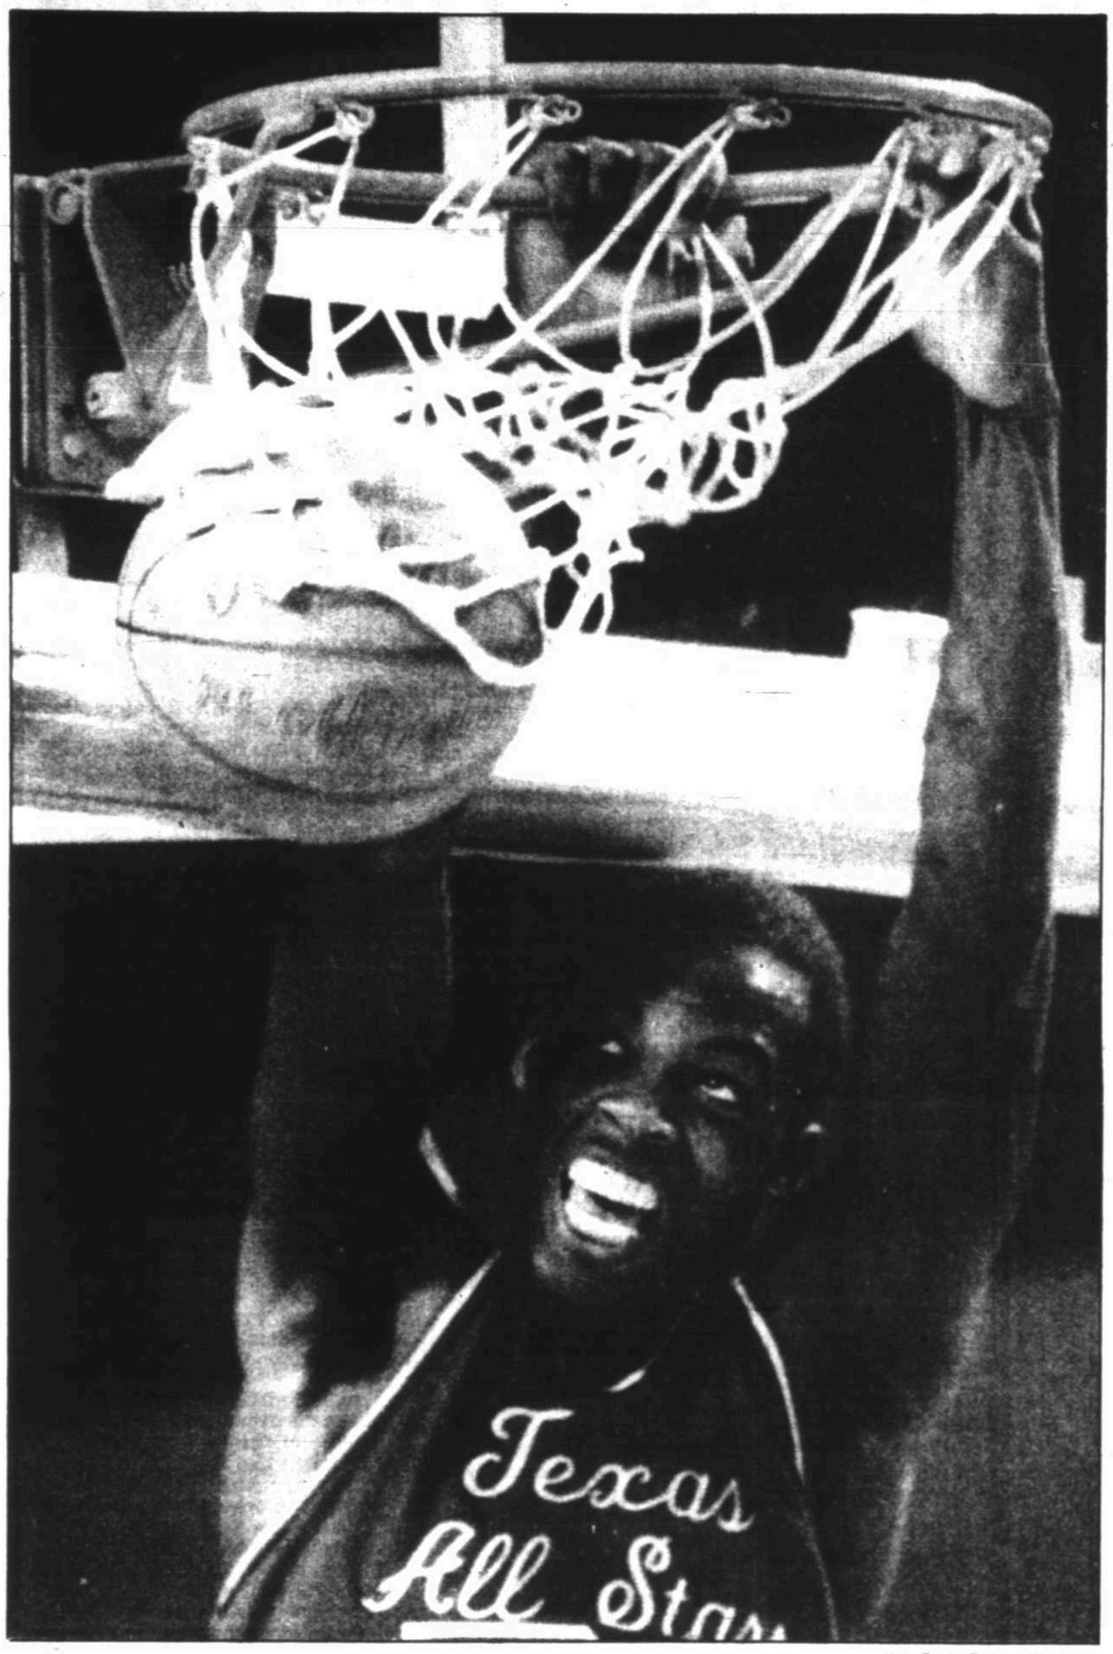

Sutton, who went 15-10 in combined time with Oakland and California, needs five more victories to reach 300.

But Carlton, who has won 314 games, was just 1-8 for Philadelphia — although his 3.33 ERA indicated his pitching wasn't so poor. Arm troubles ended Carlton's season, and the Phillies are hoping he can return to form.

The Yankees will have at least one older pitcher. While they waived Phil Niekro, who had gone 16-12, the Yankees kept his 41-year-old brother, Joe.

Joe Niekro was 9-12 for Houston last season before being traded to the Yankees late in the year. He went 2-1 for New York.

Texas' Jeff Chumbley slam dunks for two as Longhorn state stars beat the best of the rest in 112-102 NJCAA Basketball Classic Sunday.

Bradley finally does it

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — As she moved within reach of the coveted title that had eluded her for 11 years, Pat Bradley said she really didn't notice the pressure — or anything else.

"I had about the same feeling as when I won the U.S. Women's Open in 1981," Bradley said Sunday after her two-shot victory over Val Skinner in the Nabisco Dinah Shore.

"I got a sort of tunnel vision. I didn't know who was out there, the gallery, the players, or really what was going on outside my game.

"I was just concentrating on playing."

Bradley shot a closing 1-under-par 71 to win the Dinah Shore and the richest prize on the Ladies Professional Golfers Association tour.

She'd come very close to winning here in previous years, including a playoff loss to Juli Inkster for the tournament title in 1984.

"I felt very comfortable, very in control," said the front-running Bradley, who had to fight off a late challenge by Skinner after Inkster faded earlier in the final round.

"It's amazing what the mind can do," Bradley said about the pressure that accompanied carrying a three-shot lead into the last round of the Dinah Shore.

"I kept talking to myself, saying everything was going to be all right. I admit I had some trouble getting my breakfast down this morning, my throat was kind of tight, but I felt fine when I got out there on the first tee."

Skinner, who has won two tournaments since she joined the tour in 1983, said she was very pleased with her second-place finish.

"How much is second worth?" she asked. After being told $40,000, she grinned and said, "Gee, that's more than I got for winning."

Skinner said she was happy to be able to challenge Bradley late in the final round, but added, "Pat was obviously pretty unbreakable. She deserved to win."

Lyle beats Bean for Greensboro

Greensboro

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Sandy Lyle doesn't consider his adjustment to American golf complete. It is, however, a lot closer after the Scotsman overcame a nagging stigma by holding on to capture the Greater Greensboro Open golf tournament.

"I've worked very hard for it. There's been a lot of sweat lost over the last few days," said Lyle, a winner by two shots over Andy Bean, the 1984 GGO champion. "It's very rewarding. The money's good, too."

Lyle had never won a tournament on U.S. fairways, although he has established himself as one of the top players on the European circuit. But the 1985 British Open champion ended his drought in this country by taking the victory and a $90,000 paycheck.

"You've just got to keep banging on," Lyle said after his final-round 70 gave him a 72-hole total of 275, a 13-under-par score that tied the Forest Oaks Country Club record. "The only way you can do it is work. There's no easy way out.

"It's been one of my big problems, believing that I could do it over here," Lyle continued. "I've done it everywhere else but America. This time, it's come right."

Lyle's work was made difficult because Bean was on his heels for the final nine holes. Starting the day at 6-under-par, Bean overcame a bogey on the third hole and finished the last two holes on the front nine with consecutive birdies to close within three shots of the lead.

Lyle started the day with par, but dropped a shot when he pulled his tee shot on the second hole, hit a cameraman on his second shot and left his third shot short of the green. He two-putted for a bogey 6.

"It was a little bit unsettling there," Lyle said. "And then I played fairly solid golf from there on. Meanwhile, I've got Andy Bean breathing down my neck."

12 WEEKLY GAMES 6 MYSTERY SONGS WEEKLY

CAN YOU IDENTIFY CLASSIC T.V. THEME SONGS?

GAME RULES:

The Midland Reporter-Telegram, A.M. 1510 KMND Memory Music T.V. Game is based on skill in identifying (6) T.V. show theme songs each week. There will be 12 weekly games beginning Monday, April 7th and ending Friday, June 27th. There will be weekly 1st, 2nd, and 3rd place winners.

Two excerpts from each of the (6) T.V. show theme songs will be broadcast over A.M. 1510 KMND each week. Excerpts will be broadcast at least six, times daily between 6:00 AM and 6:00 PM Monday through Friday. Each show's two excerpts will be broadcast at least twice during the week, with both excerpts from each theme (12 total) being broadcast at least once by 6:00 PM Thursday of each week.

Excerpts will be numbered one through six. The answer (the title of the show) must be printed or typed on the correspondingly numbered line on the official Midland Reporter-Telegram A.M. 1510 KMND Memory Music TV Game Entry Form. Each week's official entry form will be published Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday in the Midland Reporter-Telegram. Hand drawn facsimilies of the entire entry form will be acceptable, BUT MACHINE DUPLICATED COPIES ARE PROHIBITED.

CONTESTANTS MAY ENTER ONLY ONCE PER WEEK. The weekly game number must be marked on the lower left of the envelope on the address side. Envelopes must be postmarked by midnight Friday of each week. NO POSTAGE MACHINE CANCELLED ENVELOPES WILL BE ACCEPTED. ONLY ENVELOPES BEARING THE CORRECT POSTAGE AND CANCELLED BY THE U.S. POSTAL SERVICE OR ENTRIES HAND DELIVERED TO THE CONTEST ADDRESS BY 6:00 AM SATURDAY WILL BE ACCEPTED.

The weekly first prize will be awarded to the entrant with the most or all (6) TV shows correctly identified. In the case that more than one entrant has all the shows correctly identified a drawing will be held. 2nd and 3rd will be awarded to the two entrants with the most correct answers respectively. Again in the case more than one entrant having identified all (6) TV shows, a drawing will be held to determine 2nd and 3rd place winners.

The correct answer and the theme song itself along with the two excerpts will be played back twice on A.M. 1510 KMND Saturday morning between 6:00 A.M. and noon. Answers will also be published in Sunday's Midland Reporter Telegram. Weekly winners will be announced each Wednesday afternoon by A.M. 1510 KMND and in the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

It is not necessary to purchase the Midland Reporter-Telegram to play the game. Copies of the MRT are available for free examination at the Midland Reporter-Telegram, 201 East Illinois and the Midland County Public Library.

All winners must sign a release form acknowledging that both the Midland Reporter-Telegram and A.M. 1510 KMND shall have the right to publish, publicize and broadcast his/her name, picture, voice and the fact that he/she won a prize. If the winner is a minor, a parent or guardian must sign a minor's release form prior to the prize being awarded. Winners are responsible for all taxes incurred on prizes.

Judge's decisions will be final in any interpretation of the rules of this game. Employees of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Bakcor Broadcasting, Inc. and members of their immediate families are ineligible. The Grand Prize, a cruise on The Mississippi or Delta Queen Steamboat is worth up to $4,000. Does not include bar tab, shore tours or gift shop purchases. It may be used at your convenience based on a 30 day space available basis. It includes round trip airfare to New Orleans.

The winner of the cruise will be determined by a drawing at the end of all 12 weekly games. All weekly 1st, 2nd, and 3rd prize winners will be entered in the drawing.

Spence gives his approval to Chap

USA Coach Leon Spence, president of the NJCAA Men's Basketball Coaches Association, has been connected with the attempts to stage a Texas against the World all-star game any time it has been attempted in the past.

"And if it's ever going to go, this is the place," said the man who has coached Henderson College in Athens for 22 years.

"This is a beautiful facility to play in," he said with the envy showing, "And this is a good turn out for a debut game of this type."

Spence was as curious as every one else in regard to the new NCAA rules, which were being auditioned at the Chap Center Sunday in the NJCAA all-star classic.

"There's no doubt about it. The NJCAA will adopt the three-point rule. I think the arc

Philadelphia 76ers' Sedale Threatt, right, slugs Boston Celtics' Danny Ainge during a third quarter melee. Threatt was given a technical foul and ejected from the game.

76ers' miracle defeats Celtics

Associated Press

The Boston Celtics, riding a 14-game winning streak, were holding a two-point lead with seven seconds left and had Larry Bird at the free-throw line.

The Philadelphia 76ers, with Moses Malone, Andrew Toney and Bob McAdoo sidelined by injuries, almost needed a miracle to win.

Or was it three miracles?

First Bird, hitting nearly 90 percent of his free throws, missed two. Then 6-foot-6 Charles Barkley beat 6-10 Kevin McHale on a jump ball with three seconds left. Finally, Julius Erving grabbed the tip and swished a three-pointer at the buzzer to give the 76ers a 95-94 NBA victory over the Celtics on Sunday.

"We don't want to get too emotionally high before the playoffs, but that was a great win for us," Philadelphia Coach Matt Guokas said. "This is probably our most satisfying win of the year."

In other NBA games, it was Houston 109, the Los Angeles Lakers 103; Washington 106, Cleveland 95; and Denver 124, San Antonio 106.

Bird said the failure to take his time at the foul line caused the rare double miss that helped the 76ers end the longest winning streak in the NBA this season.

"When you don't concentrate at the foul line, that's what happens," said Bird, who had 18 points and 10 assists.

Bird indicated that he and his teammates were not concerned with equalling the 1971-72 Los Angeles Lakers' all-time best single-season record of 69-13. The Celtics are now 64-14.

"Obviously, we're disappointed to lose, but we made some mistakes down the stretch and Philadelphia played real hard," Bird said. "Right now, all we want is the regular season to be over and get on with the playoffs."

Rockets 109, Lakers 103

Houston won this battle of division champions, snapping a streak of 14 consecutive home losses to Los Angeles and setting a team record with 50 victories.

NBA

Akeem Olajuwon scored 25 points and Ralph Sampson, making his first start since injuring his back and neck in a fall at Boston two weeks ago, added 19 points and 17 rebounds.

Houston led 104-92 with 3:45 left, but the Lakers scored eight straight points to get within four with 44 seconds to play. But a jumper by Robert Reid and three free throws by Mitchell Wiggins sealed the outcome.

Earvin "Magic" Johnson led the Lakers with 20 points and 20 assists.

Nuggets 124, Spurs 106

Denver solidified its hold on the No. 3 Western Conference playoff spot as Alex English scored 29 points against San Antonio.

The Nuggets, who lead fourth-place Dallas by 2½ games, hit 58.7 percent of their shots against the Spurs, who lost for the 21st time in 24 games but still have a 1½-game lead over Phoenix for the last Western Conference playoff berth.

English, who was 14-for-22 from the field, scored four points during a 9-0 Denver streak in the fourth quarter than extended a nine-point lead to 116-98.

Mike Mitchell paced San Antonio with 33 points.

Bullets 106, Cavaliers 95

Washington got 33 points from Cliff Robinson, 25 from Jeff Malone and 21 from Gus Williams in its victory over Cleveland, which tightened the Eastern Conference playoff scramble.

The Bullets now are tied with New Jersey for sixth place, with the winner of that race to be paired with injury-hobbled Philadelphia and the seventh-place finisher facing Central Division champ Milwaukee. The Cavaliers' loss dropped them into a tie with Chicago for the final Eastern Conference spot.

A 26-14 streak in a 9½-minute span of the second and third quarters gave Washington a 71-59 lead, and Cleveland got no closer than 10 the rest of the way. Robinson, Malone and Williams scored all 26 points during the streak.

Roy Hinson led the Cavaliers with 24 points and World B. Free had 22.

San Jose inks Daryl Sconiers

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Daryl Sconiers, considered one of major league baseball's best young hitting prospects a few years ago before running into problems with injuries and drugs, signed Sunday as a free agent with the San Jose Bees of the Class A California League.

Sconiers, 27, who played for Midland last year, will be the starting first baseman for the team whose roster also includes third baseman Ken Reitz and pitchers Mike Norris and Steve Howe, other ex-big leaguers who have admitted to drug problems in the past. Also on the team is former major leaguer Derrel Thomas.

Last season, Sconiers batted .244 in 57 games with the California Angels and also played for two Angels' farm clubs. He joined the Angels in 1981 after hitting .370 and .354 in consecutive minor league seasons. His best big league season was 1983, when he batted .274 in 106 games.

Zapata keeps flyweight title

NIRASAKI, Japan (AP) — Hilario Zapata of Panama knocked down challenger Shuichi Hozumi of Japan in the 13th round and went on to a unanimous 15-round decision victory Monday night, retaining his World Boxing Association flyweight title.

Zapata floored Hozumi in the 13th round with a left counter punch before 5,000 spectators at Nirasaki, 74 miles west of Tokyo.

The 27-year-old champion was aggressive from the start, unleashing a series of body blows.

The two fought almost evenly through the third round, although Zapata threw more punches than the 26-year-old Hozumi.

Hozumi tried to hit Zapata at close range but the champion dodged. Zapata also evaded the challengers blows with swift dodging and footwork when Hozumi frequently forced him to the ropes.

Lee off to fast second half start

From Staff Reports

The Midland Lee Rebels started the second half of the District 4-5A baseball race on the right foot Saturday with an 8-7 victory over San Angelo to pull into a four-way tie for fourth place at 4-4.

Just as important, as far as the Rebels and the rest of the 4-5A are concerned is the loss handed league leader Odessa Permian by Abilene High, dropping the Panthers into a tie for the lead with Abilene Cooper at 6-2.

With Permian's loss, Midland High could have been in the first place tie. However, the up again, down again Bulldogs fell on their faces against Big Spring, the league's hottest team sporting a four-game winning streak.

The Bulldog loss leaves Midland High alone in third place at 5-3 and no room for any more losses. Too many teams are hungry for a higher position in the standings.

On Tuesday, Midland Lee can do a lot toward earning a fourth consecutive playoff berth when the Rebels host Abilene Cooper at Lee Field at 4 p.m.

Midland High can improve its playoff status with a victory over Abilene High, also at 4 p.m.

In other games, the Steers will be out to make it five-in-a-row when they host Permian and San Angelo will be looking to get back in the hunt with a victory over 0-8 Odessa High.

WITH THEIR easy victory over Odessa High Saturday, the Cougars returned to the top of the 4-5A hitting charts with a .381 team average while Lee is hitting .358 on the year.

Both teams have players battling for the league hitting title. For Cooper, Chris Moore is hitting .600 in 25 at bats while Lee's Jason Logi is working at a .560 click, also with 25 at bats.

The biggest difference between the two teams has been on the mound.

While Cooper leads the league in earned run average, Lee is near the bottom of the category.

Cooper pitchers have allowed only 2.57 earned runs a game compared to Lee's 6.49

The Cougars have two pitchers to call on to get the job done with near-equal effectiveness. Danny Whitford, in 12 innings of duty, has a 0.58 ERA while David Tollison has a 2.50 ERA after 28 innings on the mound.

For Lee, Tuey Rankin has been the only effective pitcher during league play but all of his time on the hill has come in relief, amounting to 9⅓ innings and a 1.50 ERA.

MIDLAND HIGH'S offensive attack is the big question mark going into Tuesday's encounter with Abilene High. The Bulldogs were held to only four hits against Big Spring and their team batting average fell to .288.

The Eagles, on the other hand, rocketed to .350 with their 17-hit thumping of Permian pitching.

Abilene's Todd Johnson is one of the league's contenders for the hitting title with a .545 average while teammate Mike Keith follows at .481. Both have 27 or more at bats in league play.

For the Bulldogs, Kenny De La Garza has overcome his early district hitting slump to take the team lead with a .435 average.

While the Eagles are stronger at the plate, the Bulldogs have the pitching edge, a 3.56 ERA to Abilene's 5.79.

De La Garza continues to be one of the top pitchers in 4-5A play with a 1.37 ERA in 30⅔ innings of duty. Also, Ricky Castaneda has worked his ERA down to 3.04 after a rough start against AHS a couple of weeks ago.

The Eagles do have one pitcher who has been effective this year: Jeff Reese, 1.75 ERA in 28 innings. However, get by him and there is little in the Abilene bullpen.

Davis goes to Iowa

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Tom Davis, the University of Iowa's new basketball coach says that his team could be one of the highest scoring in the Big Ten Conference if Hawkeye players adapt to his offensive philosophy.

Davis, coach at Stanford for the past four years, was named new coach at Iowa Sunday, with a five-year, $75,000-a-year contract. He replaces George Raveling, who resigned March 27 to become coach at the University of Southern California.

Baton training

Instructor John McAhon, left demonstrates what is known as the "Georgia State Police Takedown" on Cpl. Larry Lirley.

Proficiency in PR24 techniques can often equalize the difference between small officers and large adversaries.

Instructor Ray Morris demonstrates an advanced technique called an inside spin and is blocked by Cpl. Larry Lirley.

ODESSA — Many police departments around the state and nation still use what is commonly referred to as a "billy club" or "night stick," although the stick usually carried by police officers is known officially as a "street baton."

In late 1984, after more than six months of research and evaluation, Odessa Police Chief Alan Stewart abandoned the old street baton and adopted the PR24 side-handle baton as the only authorized stick weapon for Odessa police officers.

The PR24 resembles a martial arts weapon known as a "tonfa." But, as PR24 instructor John McAhon noted, that although both are short staffs with a short handle set at a 90-degree angle near the end of the staff, that is where the resemblance ends. McAhon, who holds a black belt in the Tae Kwon Do-style of karate, says the tonfa normally is made of wood, is a much shorter weapon than the PR24 and is usually used in pairs. According to McAhon, the tonfa, when employed by martial artists in an actual combative situation, can be a devastating offensive weapon, capable of inflicting mortal damage.

Please see BATON, Page 2C

Blocking is used in confrontational situations.

McAhon demonstrates a handcuffing armlock to other police officers for the first time before actual practice gets underway.

Odessa police officers use the old gymnasium at Odessa College for classes in recertification of the PR24, side-handle baton, that replaced the familiar night stick.

DEATHS

Vera V. Patterson

Services for Vera V. Patterson, 95, of San Angelo, mother of Pauletta Luttrell of Midland, were to be at 2 p.m. today in the Johnson Funeral Home chapel in San Angelo.

She died Sunday in a Midland nursing home.

Mrs. Patterson was born Sept. 7, 1890, in Bristo. In 1908, she married Carl Tankersley. She married M.A. Patterson in 1925. She lived in San Angelo for 58 years and was a real estate and oil lease operator. She retired 10 years ago. Mrs. Patterson was preceded in death by one son, Vance Tankersley. She was a member of the First United Methodist Church.

Other survivors include five grandchildren; 14 great-grandchildren; and three great-grandchildren.

Marion B. Beam

ODESSA — Services for former radio ham operator and Texas Electric employee Marion Broughton Beam, 77, of Odessa, will be at 10 a.m. Tuesday at First Baptist Church of Odessa.

The Rev. H. Bailey Stone will officiate and the Rev. John Rasco will assist. Burial will be in Sunset Memorial Gardens, directed by Frank W. Wilson Funeral Home.

Beam died Sunday morning at his home after a brief illness.

He was born Dec. 1, 1908, in Louisville, Ky. He married Kathryn Fisher Feb. 6, 1937, in Louisville. He moved from Big Spring to Odessa in 1949. He was employed by Texas Electric in 1945 retiring in 1973.

Beam was a member of the American Radio Relief League. He worked transmitting messages from missionaries in South America to North America. Beam's call letters were W5LUP. He had been a member of First Baptist Church in Odessa since 1949, where he was a deacon. Beam was also a Navy veteran.

Survivors include his wife, Kathryn Beam of Odessa; a daughter, Mrs. John E. Roberts of Midland; a son, Frank Beam of Odessa; a sister, Grace Havenstein of Louisville; seven grandchildren, two great-grandsons and numerous nieces and newphews.

The family requests memorials be sent to the First Baptist Church Of Odessa Building Fund, The Odessa Door of Hope Mission or Cal Farley's Boys Ranch.

Clayton Williams Jr. teaches business course

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Multimillionaire Clayton Williams Jr. jets to Texas A&M University twice a month to preach the secrets to success.

During his entrepreneurship course, Williams talks about integrity, making mistakes and getting enough sleep.

After class, the Midland oilman, rancher, banker and developer treats his senior business major students to hamburgers, beer and candid advice at a nearby college hangout.

"You hear it from the horse's mouth, as it were," said senior economics major Mike Cook. "It's real neat. We're studying new companies and he's starting one, so we're seeing a company being born. And he takes us out drinking and that's great."

Williams, a former Aggie, said he teaches a lot from the errors and mistakes he has made in life.

"I formed a lot of companies that were failures in the early days, and I learned from those failures. So I use them and I laugh at myself and say 'don't do that.' It gets me interacting with the kids — they laugh at me and I laugh at them — and I get involved with them," he told the Houston Post.

That involvement sometimes goes beyond the classroom and informal rap sessions.

Several weeks ago, Williams invited his students along when he introduced his new telephone company to College Station. In previous classes, he took students on field trips to his oil and gas operations in the Giddings-LaGrange area.

Williams is a devout Aggie alumnus. His private jet, oil and gas pumps and steam shovels used on construction sites are painted maroon and white, the school's colors.

He also gives money to the school, including a $2.5 million donation to help build a center for former students that will bear his name.

And when A&M business professor Dr. Ella Van Fleet invited him three years ago to help teach the course, it didn't take much to convince him to spend some time on campus as well.

Turn-of-century appliances light up collectors' eyes

By CAROL NUCKOLS

FORT WORTH (AP) — Great-grandmother undoubtedly would be befuddled by today's computerized kitchen equipment. But don't underestimate her. In her heyday, she eagerly embraced the latest in labor-saving gadgetry.

Popcorn poppers, dishwashers, egg cookers, slow cookers, malt mixers, toasters — they've all been around for decades. So what if an early toaster resembled a space helment? Or if mixer attachments included an electric butter churn?

Such appliances might seem laughable today. Nevertheless, they served as forerunners of today's conveniences.

"There's not much that's new," says Scotty Mitchell, who with his business partner Gary Miller collects small kitchen appliances dating back to the turn of the century. The two operate Millchell estate sales and auction service.

Their hobby began as a matter of practicality. They bought an old Edison hot plate at a garage sale to supplement limited burner space. It worked so well that they decided to acquire more antique gadgets.

Food processors, microwaves and Corning cook tops are new, but even electric can openers were invented before the turn of the century, Mitchell said. Improvements have been introduced, and today's appliances use less electricity than their forebears, but most changes have been in appearance.

Appliances nowadays are streamlined and high-tech, sometimes cordless or designed for under-counter installation and available in a rainbow of colors. Early versions were mostly chrome and white porcelain — clunky and quaint by today's standards. "They were very utilitarian — not meant to be seen any place except the kitchen," Mitchell said. But that was when kitchens were places to work rather than to show off the latest culinary devices.

The first all-electric kitchen was built for the 1893 Chicago World's Fair as a collaboration between Edison, Westinghouse and other manufacturers, Miller said. Appliances included a dishwasher with water hoses that clipped onto each dish, an ice cream freezer, a washing machine and a silver polisher.

The silver polisher "looked more like an iron lung," Mitchell said. It was a 4-foot, white cylinder filled with metal pellets; when rotated, the pellets tumbled against the silver, supposedly polishing it. Not surprisingly, this machine never gained popularity.

Mitchell's and Miller's collection includes a General Electric toaster dating from 1907 — the first toaster ever mass-produced and commercially profitable, Miller said. It consists of little wires that grip the bread and heat up to toast it. Instead of a plug, the cord screws into a socket, like a light bulb.

"Before they standardized things, plugs around the room — if you were lucky enough to have them — had sockets that screwed into the wall," Mitchell explained.

There's also the Toastmaster model 1A, the first pop-up toaster, introduced in 1927. This one operates on a clock mechanism and ticks when you push down the lever to make toast. When the ticking stops, the toast "explodes" out of the toaster. Nothing like a time bomb to get you going in the morning.

Other toasters in the collection include the Toast-o-Lator, which the collectors call the "walk-through toaster." Imagine putting your bread on a conveyor belt, sending it through a device and watching it come out the other side all nicely toasted. That's what this machine does.

The Perc-o-Toaster, a combination percolator and toaster, was intended to make coffee and toast at the same time — not for fuzzy-headed folks who have to have coffee before they can even decide whether to eat breakfast. Then there's a model Miller and Mitchell call "Buck Rogers" because it looks like a space helmet.

A kitchenware set made by Porcelier includes a porcelain toaster, sandwich grill, coffee pot, creamer and sugar bowl.

A small high-speed electric motor, the Universal Home Motor, "revolutionized appliances in 1917," Mitchell said. It could be hooked to a malt making machine, a treadle sewing machine and even a toothbrush — all sold separately. But the toothbrush didn't work. "It seemed to chip your teeth."

Slow cookers — home and commercial versions — were introduced before World War I. One of the first, the Everhot, came with pans and dividers so several dishes could be cooked at once.

Appliances can be dated by the patent dates that most of them bear. Miller and Mitchell have researched their collection in patent books and old issues of "Ladies Home Journal" and other magazines at the Fort Worth Public Library.

Historic Grapevine Opry destroyed by blaze

GRAPEVINE (AP) — The historic Grapevine Opry building, the local showcase for country-Western performers, was undergoing a $100,000 fix-up when fire spoiled the renovation plans.

Fire on Saturday gutted the 47-year-old building, which had been scheduled to reopen later this month after being closed for 10 months. There was no immediate estimate of the damage.

Located in the heart of this Dallas-Fort Worth-area town, the Opry was the centerpiece of Grapevine's plan to regenerate the aging downtown area.

Fire Chief Bill Powers said the fire erupted only minutes after workmen had completed a painting project on the outside of the building on Grapevine's Main Street.

The fire apparently started in the ceiling just before 4 p.m. but wasn't discovered until 15 minutes later when a firefighter saw smoke spewing from the roof, Fire Capt. Don Atkinson said.

One fireman suffered minor injuries during the hour and a half that almost three dozen area fireman worked to extinguish the blaze.

Fireman Craig Reed cut his hand on broken glass and was treated at a local hospital, authorities said.

First opened as a movie theater in 1939, the Grapevine Opry had been used since 1974 as a showcase for local country and western musical entertainment.

The opry was founded by Chisai Childs in 1974. Over the years it developed a large and devoted legion of fans.

After drawing nearly 80,000 customers in 1981, the Opry suffered a severe drop in an attendance and was closed for renovation 10 months ago.

BATON

McAhon admits that, if improperly used, the PR24 could be lethal. That is why officers carrying the side-handled baton must undergo 16 hours of training for initial certification and eight hours of in-service retraining each year for recertification.

Any officer who fails the recertification test, said McAhon, must retake the original 16 hours of training. Because of the potential for inflicting serious, even fatal, injury if improperly used, some law enforcement agencies have been reluctant to authorize the use of the PR24. But for the Odessa Police Department, McAhon said, "The experience so far has been extremely good. Very few officers have had to use it.

"We've had several instances," said McAhon, "where the officer, or the presence of the PR24 on the officer, has defused or de-escalated a situation when an officer simply withdrew it from the ring holder on his belt."

Some suspects, he said, have been encouraged "to assume the position," or to lean up against a building or patrol car and spread their legs. "To that end, I think it's been very effective," McAhon said.

The thrust of the Odessa Police Department PR24 training program, according to McAhon, "is to teach techniques that can be applied with a minimum chance of injuring any one against whom the PR24 is used, but if we needed superior leverage or strength, it would best a (regular) street baton." McAhon, a corporal involved in departmental training and public information, and Detective Cpl. Ray Harris are the only two intermediate PR24 instructors in Texas authorized to certify other instructors.

Since Odessa officers began using the PR24 about a year ago, McAhon said, there has been only one complaint concerning use of excessive force. The incident was investigated by the department's Internal Control Division and determined to be unfounded. He said the complainant's description of the incident involved actions by the officer that would have been physically impossible to accomplish.

Asked if there has been any indication of lack of effectiveness because of lack of proficiency on the part of individual officers, McAhon cited only one instance and that involved an officer who attempted to use a pain compliance technique on an individual who was severely intoxicated. "It didn't work," he said, "because the individual could feel no pain."

McAhon said when he went to Ohio in January he learned a new technique, a variation of the other technique, that does not rely on pain compliance, but immobilization, through causing motor nerve dysfunction. "The technique has proven in the field and it works," he said.

The beauty of the 37 PR24 techniques, says McAhon, is that they more or less parallel instinctive reactions, although a person can get into some complicated techniques that require considerable practice to master.

"We have found the PR24 is a very viable alternative to the use of deadly force in some circumstances," said McAhon, "and it certainly extends the scope of an officer's options by giving him another tool with which he can do his work."

McAhon observed that the techniques of the PR24 are somewhat comparable to the katas, or dance-like exercises, of karate and can be practiced by individual officers to increase their efficiency. All 37 techniques can be practiced in less than five minutes by individual officers to increase their proficiency, he said.

Brownfield man charged in murders

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 37-year-old man today remained in the Ector County jail in lieu of $135,000 bond on two charges of capital murder.

Bacilio Guzman, who has been living in Brownfield, is charged in the murder of his 37-year-old estranged wife, Aurelia Guzman, and another man, 34-year-old Rudy Lara Martinez. Their bodies were found early Friday in a bedroom of Mrs. Guzman's home, 6812-A N. Golder, by sheriff's deputies after a concerned neighbor said she hadn't been seen the people since Wednesday afternoon.

They were pronounced dead about 10 a.m. Friday by Peace Justice R.G. Hungerford, who ordered autopsies. According to Sheriff's Capt. Gene Kloss, autopsy reports show Mrs. Guzman and Martinez had each been shot once in the head with a .22-caliber pistol.

Sheriff Bob Brookshire and Lt. Jerry Davis, armed with an arrest warrant issued by Peace Justice Jimmy Harris, went to Brownfield Friday and returned Guzman to Odessa.

The shootings apparently were prompted by marital problems, according to Kloss.

Two men killed in head-on collision

From Staff Reports

Two men were killed Sunday evening in a two-vehicle head-on accident in Lamesa, the Department of Public Safety reports.

Ricardo Z. Hinojosa, 44, of Levelland, and Sevetiano Casillas, 53, of Lamesa, died when their 1982 Dodge pickup was struck while it was attempting turn south on FM 179, said a DPS spokeswoman.

Hinojosa was traveling west on FM 2053 when he crossed the center line and attempted to turn south. His vehicle was stuck by a 1981 Chevrolet pickup driven by Joe Scott Boles of Welch. Boles was traveling east on FM 2053 when it struck the left front side of Hinojosa's pickup, according to the DPS.

Boles, 24, along with passengers Sherry Barton, 23, and Wayne Barton, 19, both of O'Donnell, were listed in satisfactory condition at Lamesa's Medical Arts Hospital.

Odessan jailed in attempted holdup

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 31-year-old man who tried unsuccessfully to hold up Dunlap's Department Store, 1315 E. 8th St., was released from the Ector County jail Sunday afternoon after posting a $5,000 bond.

Terry Lynn Foster, 2225 E. 52nd St., was arrested after Dunlap employees wrestled him to the floor and took what turned out to be a fake gun away from him.

Store employee Jimmy Vaughn, 30, told investigating officers he went to a back door of the store when someone rang a rear service entrance bell. When he opened the door, thinking someone had a delivery, he was confronted by a man wearing a ski mask, who pointed a gun at him. Vaughn said he struggled with the man and yelled for help.

Another employee, Corbett Bullock, heard Vaugn and ran to help. Together they managed to disarm the man and were holding him when police arrived about 8:40 a.m. to check out a report of a fight in the alley behind the store.

Foster was arraigned Saturday afternoon on a charge of aggravated robbery before Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly, who set bond. Foster was transferred to the county jail Sunday.

Protect your dog from antifreeze

WASHINGTON (AP) — Veterinarians at the University of Pennsylvania urge dog owners to keep their pets away from antifreeze.

Antifreeze is very toxic to dogs, and even a small amount can be fatal, according to the university's School of Veterinary Medicine.

Land-rich man lets brother live in filth

AUSTIN (AP) — One brother calls himself a workaholic interested in dealing guns and land, with control of a valuable ranch.

The other brother is a mentally retarded recluse, relying on the television for companionship, and living in a house described as filthy and overrun by dogs.

Both men own land worth several million dollars.

The very different lifestyles of the two brothers came to public attention when a judge in February removed Richard Sievers, 44, as legal guardian of his retarded brother, Robert, 40.

The judge named the retarded man's court-appointed attorney, Wade Wilson, as guardian of both Robert and his estate, which the Travis County Probate Court estimates at $3 million.

But Richard Sievers has contested the ruling, and a new hearing has been scheduled next month before County Judge Mike Renfro.

The guardianship issue was raised last fall when a neighbor said he saw Richard Sievers strike his brother with a mop handle in the yard of their South Austin home.

The episode was reported to the Texas Department of Human Services, which sent an investigator to the house. The investigator found no bruises on the younger brother, but discovered a filthy house filled with guns, ammunition, furniture and dog excrement, the Austin American-Statesman reported.

She said there was little food and that Robert Sievers was unbathed and sleeping in a heavily soiled bed with no sheets.

Richard Sievers also lived in the house, but he said that usually he was there just to sleep. He said he stored cartons of ammunition and some machine guns in the house because there was no place to store the cache at his Hill Country Rifle Range where he spends most of his time.

The elder brother also said in court that he used physical force against his brother about once every six months because that was the only way he could "motivate" him to clean the house or care for the six or seven dogs.

He called his brother stubborn and "dirty and lazy," the result of being spoiled by his mother and aunts.

Richard Sievers also defended his care of his mildly retarded brother and said he didn't have enough cash to hire a maid or live-in companion.

The problem, he said, is that all Robert Sievers' money is tied up in land. Richard Sievers has used his brother's $330-$360 monthly Social Security disability check to pay for food and other items for his brother, he said, and also gives him a weekly allowance of $40-$50.

Wilson, the retarded brother's lawyer, wants the court to grant the sale of his share of the ranch so Robert Sievers doesn't have to live in a "cesspool."

"I guarantee you that's the first thing we're going to do," Wilson said. "All I want to do is protect Robert Sievers' investment so he's got money to live comfortably."

Richard Sievers had been Robert Sievers' legal guardian since their mother was killed in a car accident 22 years ago. The two brothers inherited property from her.

"What the whole fight is about is the ranch — who is going to get the ranch, and who is going to get to sell it, and who is going to get to rake the cream off the top, " said Brian R. Davis, attorney for Richard Sievers.

Del Rio residents approve international bridge

Associated Press

Del Rio residents voted to proceed with plans to build a new international bridge linking their city to Ciudad Acuna, Mexico, and chose a new mayor to replace their former leader, booted out of office in a February recall election.

The election in that border city was one among many city, county and school elections held Saturday throughout Texas.

In a non-binding referendum, Del Rio residents voted 2,133 to 1,864 to go ahead with plans to issue revenue bonds for the proposed $3.7 million bridge.

Voters also elected Hugh Williams, 60, as the new mayor. Williams received 3,137 votes, while his opponent, Mike Dungan, gained 930 votes.

In February, former Mayor Roger Cerny was ousted in a recall election.

In the East Texas town of Henderson, residents elected a black to the city council for the first time in history. Henderson was assured a black councilman when single-member districts were set up last year and the only two candidates for one seat were both black.

Saturday's election assured blacks two council seats, since one black candidate won outright, and two black candidates won runoff spots in another race.

George Washington, 56, was elected to the city council, receiving 139 votes.

Washington's opponent, the Rev. Jerry L. O'Quinn, 36, received 102 votes. O'Quinn said Saturday he will contest the election for reasons he declined to discuss.

In Palestine, Anderson County voters defeated — by a margin of 181 votes — a proposal to sell the county-owned hospital to Safecare Health Services Inc., a for-profit hospital company. The vote was 3,219 for, 3,400 against.

Safecare has indicated its intention to operate a hospital in Palestine regardless of the election result.

Controversial Arlington council member defeated

ARLINGTON (AP) — Voters have rejected the bid of a controversial City Council member for a second term after a campaign that centered on the man's stance on various moral issues.

Jim Norwood, who pressed for a police crackdown against homosexual activity, fought the sale of adult magazines in convenience stores and stirred up a controversy over a city employee's earring lost to Dick Malec, a map publisher, in Saturday's city election. Malec won by a 6,860-5,968 margin.

Malec outpolled Norwood in 15 of 21 precincts, even in some neighborhoods where Norwood had been expected to have strong support.

The councilman-elect credited his victory to a theory that Arlington voters "want a shift in priorities" and wanted city councilmen to concentrate on more than just moral issues.

"I think that I've worked for a year to make myself a viable candidate. I studied the issues and tried to run a good campaign," he said.

His Christian beliefs may have played a part in his loss, Norwood said.

"I can come away feeling good as a loser that I didn't say anything negative about my opponent," Norwood said. "I don't think my opponent can say the same thing."

"I believe my opponent used my Christian walk against me," he added. "I have been painted as the person who called the city the porno capital of the world. But these things are not important now. I gave the city a good two years and will continue to live my life as a Christian."

Malec said he believes some voters were probably "turned off" by Norwood's continued representation of Arlington as "the porno capital of Texas."

Norwood had sought a police crackdown at Randoll Mill Park after a nationwide magazine catering to homosexuals had listed the Arlington park as an ideal place for "cruising."

The subsequent crackdown resulted in numerous arrests and a pledge from the magazine's publishers not to include the park in future publications.

The latest controversy involving Norwood came last week when he suggested that the city pass a dress code that would have made the wearing of such items as earrings by male city employees a violation.

The issue, he said, came up after a constituent complained that a city park employee wore an earring.

Searchers continue to collect remains of victims and their personal effects from the crash site of a corporate jet near Redwater Saturday.

Investigation into corporate jet's crash just beginning, NTSB says

REDWATER (AP) — It will take time to determine why a corporate jet plunged into the ground, killing all seven people aboard, federal investigators say.

"We're just getting the investigation started and it will be several months before we can determine the cause," Warren Wandel of the National Transportation Safety Board said Sunday.

The jet had just left Dallas' Redbird Airport Friday night and was carrying employees of the Stamford, Conn.-based Singer Co., to Teterboro, N.J., when it plunged nearly straight down near this Northeast Texas town.

The impact site indicated the jet hit the ground at "an almost vertical-type descent," exploding into flame, Wandel said.

Because of the tremendous impact of the crash, it will be more difficult for investigators to piece together the specific cause of the crash, he added.

Workers first concentrated on removing the victims' remains from the site of the crash, but on Sunday turned their attention to the systems and structures of the 1124 Westwind Aero Commander jet.

The plane gouged a 10-foot hole into the tough red clay of a field two miles northeast of here when it nosedived at more than 400 mph in a heavy thunderstorm just before 7:30 p.m., Wandel said.

The remains of the jet and the crash victims were scattered over a 200-yard area around the crash's impact point.

The crash victims, all of whom lived in New Jersey and worked for Singer's Kearfott Division in Little Falls, N.J., included pilot Kenneth Hetland, co-pilot Steve Fulop, Daniel McBride, Frank Schmitt, Martin Chen and William Pasechnick.

Dangerous pollutants found in, around wildlife refuges

DALLAS (AP) — Dangerous pollutants ranging from cow manure to arsenic have been found in and around six national wildlife refuges in Texas, according to a draft report from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Among them is the Aransas National Wildlife Refuge, famous as the winter home for the endangered whooping crane, The Dallas Morning News reported Sunday.

Wastes from nearby oil and metal refining industries and an array of agricultural pesticides are suspected of contaminating marshes and thickets on the refuge, along the Gulf Coast 40 miles north of Corpus Christi.

The other Texas refuges are Anahuac, east of Galveston Bay; Laguna Atascosa, northeast of Brownsville; the Santa Ana and Lower Rio Grande Valley refuges, along the Rio Grande near McAllen; and Buffalo Lake, in the Panhandle southwest of Amarillo.

The Texas lands were among 84 refuges in 30 states where pollution problems "associated with agricultural, industrial and municipal activities," were identified, the report says.

There is no proof that any rare or endangered animals in Texas have died from the pollution, but the report said an undetermined number of Franklin's gulls, commonly called prairie doves, died near the Lower Rio Grande Valley refuge after eating pesticide-contaminated insects.

And officials at Buffalo Lake said fish kills were common a few years ago when rains washed cattle waste into the lake from nearby feedlots.

The draft report, to be released soon in final form, recommends extensive follow-up studies to control the spread of contaminants, the News said.

"If you're having a problem on a wildlife refuge, it usually serves as an early warning that you're having problems elsewhere," said Megan Durham, a spokeswoman for the wildlife service in Washington.

The findings of the seven-month study came as no surprise, Ms. Durham said.

While many of the nation's 434 wildlife refuges are in pristine wilderness areas, she said, "many more are right next to cities or agricultural areas."

"You can't dig a moat around a refuge," Ms. Durham said. "They're going to be affected by what goes on around them."

She said it isn't know yet how much it would cost to clean up the hazards.

An official of the National Wildlife Federation said more studies are likely to reveal even more problems.

"What they have now is the tip of the iceberg," said Scott Feierabend, a Washington legislative representative for the foundation.

"A lot of what they've found is based on things like phone calls to refuge managers," he said. "A more detailed, scientific investigation will show that the problem is much broader and much deeper."

The report divides the pollution problems into three categories of severity.

In the worst group are 10 refuges — none in Texas — where environmental hazards are bad enough to warrant prompt cleanups.

In the next category were 30 refuges, including Aransas, Buffalo Lake and Laguna Atascosa, where "direct evidence" of pollution justifies more detailed testing of wildlife.

Jet returns to airport after scare

HOUSTON (AP) — A TranStar jet was forced to return to Houston Hobby Airport after a woman passenger deplaned, leaving some packages behind during a layover on a flight to Miami, an airline spokesman says.

Tim Kincaid, a spokesman for the Dallas-based airline, said the packages turned out to be harmless.

The passengers reboarded the plane and headed on to Miami without incident, Kincaid said. None of them was injured in the hasty departure from the plane when it returned to Hobby, he said.

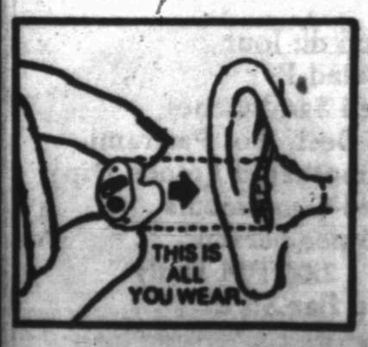

Kincaid said the incident occurred on Flight 870 from Los Angeles to Miami with a layover in Houston. He did not know how many passengers were on the plane.

The bomb scare evolved when a woman believed to be European asked if she could deplane during the 30-minute layover at 1 p.m. in Houston and leave some packages behind, according to Kincaid.

"When they boarded the passengers and left (the airport), they realized she had not reboarded," he said.

At that time, the plane was headed to New Orleans.

Older fathers: Literally 'the old man'

Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — Dan Shannon recalls helping his wife, Deborah, and infant daughter, Sarah, board a plane last summer on their way to Minneapolis and Sarah's christening.

"I had to leave two days later because of my work," Shannon explains, "so I helped her onto the plane at LAX ... got her seated and taken care of, and I walked off the plane."

The 51-year-old suburban Redondo Beach father chuckles to himself.

"I found out later that all of the stewardesses came over and said, 'My, what a nice grandfather you have.' And my wife was saying, 'That's not her grandfather, that's her father.'"

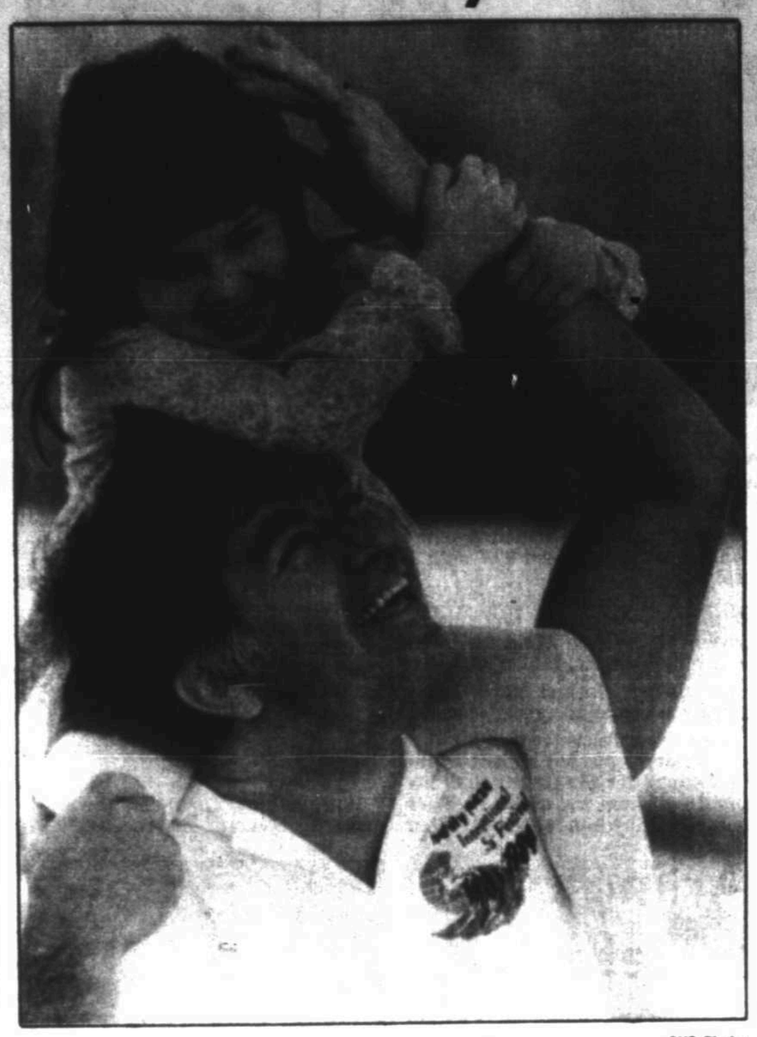

Today, Shannon has a T-shirt for just such occasions — a Father's Day gift — that reads "I am not her grandfather."

Ed McMahon sports a similarly inscribed sweatshirt, which arrived in December 1985 after the 62-year-old sidekick to Johnny Carson adopted a newborn, Katherine Mary.

"I keep calling myself Granddaddy," admits the, in fact, two-time grandfather. "I find myself correcting that: 'No, I'm the daddy. I'm not the granddaddy.'"

While juggling diapers and formulas, Shannon and McMahon also are balancing on the cutting edge of what some experts say is a growing phenomenon: late-blooming dads who can rightly be called "the old man" by their youngsters.

They're either parents for the first time — often members of "the Yupped-out group" who delayed having families — or dads embracing fatherhood for a second time with new, usually younger, wives.

CNS Photo

Ron Cawdrey, 49, a councilman in Redondo Beach, Calif., is dad to 5-year-old Crystal.

WHATEVER THEIR particular situation, these brave new poppas face a fatherhood distinctive from that of their younger counterparts.

"Well, your back hurts more," cracks Ken Miller, a 52-year-old father from suburban San Pedro who chases around after 2-year-old Andy.

Miller, a music teacher, is somewhat rare in that he straddles both categories. Andy is the product of a second marriage; but Miller also waited until he was 38 to start his first family of three, who now range from 10 to 15.

"I don't doubt at all that I'm not only less physically able to romp around, but I'm also less interested in doing those things," admits Miller of fatherhood after 50.

Then he adds: "I'm a roller with the kids on the floor. I wrestle with them, and probably will when I'm a grandfather, when I'm 80. ... But it's harder for me. It's harder to get down on the floor when you're 50 than when you're 20 — but I'll get down there. (I might have to say) 'Help me up.'"

The energy issue is a valid one, experts say, for those older men pondering late-night feedings again.

It's the toughest part of his new role, says Peter Kirby, 41-year-old father of 2-year-old Rachel. "I mean, I get tired," says the video producer and editor who lives in nearby Santa Monica. Dads at 20 or 25 "get tired, but they recover quicker. At least that's what I remember. But the opposite side of that is I know how to pace myself better."

THAT KIND OF awareness is what can compensate for slower reflexes and even slower muscles and can make older fathers potentially the best dads.

"It's an overused phrase, but they 'know who they are,' as opposed to becoming a parent very young, (when) there are so many unfinished issues of childhood and adolescence that it makes it hard to deal with a child's demands," says Sharon Stone, a clinical social worker from suburban Rancho Palos Verdes.

"So often young marriages have difficulty making it because the people are changing themselves, still forming themselves.

"I think it was good for me as a person to have had 20 years of adulthood to mature and try to get myself together before I tried to help other people get together," confirms Miller. "... Some of the problems I might have brought into a father-son or father-daughter relationship when I was younger, I've worked through to some extent."

Related to this personal acceptance is career acceptance: Older fathers are more likely to be less focused on work and finances, freeing them to lavish more attention on a child. "A lot of men when they first have their children are very much into building their own empire and getting established," says Fran Louise Hill, a marriage and family therapist with practices in the Los Angeles area.

"... Oftentimes they don't bond as closely with the child because (their work) is demanding a great deal of their attention; they're thinking in terms of another mouth to feed and 'will I be able to do that.' ... Later in life a man is very well-established and in a better financial situation and therefore more emotionally available to the child."

RON CAWDREY, a 49-year-old Redondo Beach councilman and dad to 5-year-old Crystal, agrees. "She's a dream, she's easy because I've gone through it all before," says Cawdrey of starting over with Crystal after fathering three other children — 30, 26 and 24 — from a previous marriage. "And a lot of it has to do with stability, with your economic situation."

Shannon, dean of extended education at a university near here, echoes the sentiment.

"As an adult being a lot more mature, I think it's in a sense easier to relate to (Sarah)," says the father of three older children — 25, 23 and 21 — from a first marriage. "I'm not as pressed, at least in terms of career, as I was much earlier on. I feel more comfortable with myself than I did when I was younger. And, as a consequence, I think I can focus more on her than I did as a younger man with my older children."

"I feel a lot more laid-back about fatherhood, a lot more comfortable with the idea of it than when I was younger," Shannon explains. "The whole process of birth is different now than it was the first time for me. In the early '60s, I'd drive my wife to the hospital, drop her at the door, go park the car and then find my way to the fathers' waiting room, and when the baby was born they'd call me and I'd go look through the glass. And then I wouldn't see the child really until four or five days later when the infant would return with his or her mother.

"THIS TIME I went through Lamaze, and I was there through the whole birth process and held Sarah before my wife did. The whole process — I guess they call it bonding — was a lot more real this time, and as a consequence I feel very, very close to her."

Universities beginning to offer men's studies

Hearst News Service

What's the hot new scholastic trend on progressive college campuses these days? Marxist Dialectic in A Post-Nuclear Society? The Hegelian Dilemma in the Emerging Third World? Sex and the Single Entrepreneur?

The answer is Men's Studies. According to the Wall Street Journal, such courses as "Psychology of Masculinity," "Sociology of the Male Experience" and "The Ethics of Male Liberation" are now being offered on 200 campuses in this country, a nearly sixfold increase in only two years.

Why?

"Because all the studies of the past have focused on man in his various roles — politician, warrior, economic provider — and not on the experience of masculinity, of being male and all it entails," says Harry Brod, who holds a joint professorship in philosophy and men's studies at the University of Southern California.

"Men have been considered through history as representatives of generic human experience," says Brod. "One of the things we have learned from women's studies is that traditional scholarship has generalized 'man' — made masculinity the universal norm. This has excluded not just women, but men as well as they are different and particular. People find it surprising, but in general feminists have been very supportive of men's studies. There is skepticism, and it's well-grounded, when I talk to women's audiences, but mostly the reaction is that the principal of men's studies is fine, but in the real world of academics — and in a male-dominated society — that men's studies will crowd out the women's."

BROD SEES THIS as a valid fear, but strongly feels that men and women's studies complement and support one another. He says the idea of men's studies would have almost certainly never cropped up were it not for the feminist movement, as well as the gay liberation movement.

"The men's movement, which is really anti-sexist, pro-feminist and gay affirmative, owes a tremendous debt to the feminist movement for the slogan 'Personal is political.' Men are certainly not oppressed as women have been, but they are repressed, which is the price society makes them pay for being in the privileged group. Men have the power and the dominant position, but at the price of their personal and emotional lives. The introduction of the study of men in society came from a growing perception that men's needs were not being addressed, and that the traditional male role of breadwinner is actually damaging to men in terms of physical and mental health. Statistically, for instance, the 'patriarchal privilege' has resulted in disproportionate illness and early death for men as compared to women."

Brod himself gravitated to the men's movement through the political end of the women's movement. As a graduate student at the University of California-San Diego, he started a men's consciousness-raising group that led him into political activism as a male feminist concerned about the personal development aspect of masculinity.

AT USC, WHERE he has taught for 12 years, Brod was originally invited to work in the women and men's studies program by the women who had started it. To date, USC has been the ground-breaker where men's studies are concerned, having the only full program on the subject in the country.

"But it's a definite trend," says Brod. "It's not yet at the stage where full-fledged programs are popping up, but there is an awareness and an emphasis on gender as a proper focus of study. Men's studies are about where women's studies were two decades ago."

Nonetheless, the task of getting the bulk of men interested in such analytical and emotional introspection is not an easy task. One of the problems, says Brod, is homophobia; the fear that many men have of being considered homosexual if they gather together to talk about being male.

"It's the vested interest of the privileged (men in a male-dominated society) not to examine their privileges," says Brod. "That's why you have to be very supportive of the men who do come. Politically speaking, the real success story of this movement is the gay and non-gay alliance that it has brought about."

The goal of men's studies is not to achieve some perfectly unisex utopia, but to pursue the belief, as the feminists have put it, that "gender is not destiny," Brod says.

"IT'S A VISION of a non-sexist society which has room for positive differences between the genders. In terms of masculinity and femininity, we have different histories, too; men and women have grown up in different cultures. One can have a model of minimizing those differences, but if one has a goal of absolute equality we will need to approach that goal from different places. I see a need for women to take pride in the achievement of other women, and for men to take similar pride in the achievements of men, and at the same time to feel a common bond with each other that could be divorced and separated from power differentials we see between men and women now in society."

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: You missed the boat in explaining to "Dying to Know" how to tell his right hand from his left elbow.

You should have told him to face north. His right (or starboard) hand would be to the east, and his left (or port) elbow would be to the west. To help him remember, he could hang a green lantern on his right (or starboard) hand, and a red one on his left (or port) elbow. This would also help him in knowing his "rights" in heavy traffic.

If he has difficulty locating north, he can face south. His rear end will then be facing north. All he had to do in the first place was use his head, his right hand, left elbow and rear end. — ED IN DURHAM, N.C.

DEAR ED: Brilliant! Had I used my head in the first place, and graduated from the Naval Academy at Annapolis, I could have figured this out myself.

DEAR ABBY: I think I have the answer to "Dying to Know's" question about how you can tell the right from the left. My first-grade teacher taught me how, and it's easy as A-B-C.

First, make two fists with both hands, then extend your thumbs straight out. Next, extend your index fingers straight up while all the other fingers remain tucked under.

The hand that forms the letter "L" is your left hand. The other hand, of course, is your right hand. — MRS. ANDREA R. CAPSUTA, PORT HUENEME, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: Give us a break! Consider this: If you use your head for north and feet for south, east would be your right, and west would be your left — but you would first have to use your head. — P.G.

DEAR ABBY: Well, well, after all these years I've finally found something I can straighten you out on. Remember the fellow who wanted a way to tell his left from his right? The simple answer is that our right hand is almost always the one that we prefer to do things with. It seems far more capable and just coordinates itself into our actions automatically. So, it's the "right" hand for just about everything.

The other hand? Well, it's just "left" in reserve in case the "right" hand needs some help. — ARTHUR MASON

P.S. Don't ask me how to explain this to left-handed people.

DEAR ARTHUR: Left-handed people should ignore this advice because their left (or dominant) hand is the one with which they prefer to do things.

The ambidextrous person, who can use either hand with equal dexterity, should carry a compass.

DEAR ABBY: Re the left and right dilemma: Years ago, when Russia was ruled by czars, young boys were recruited fresh from the farm to be soldiers in the Russian army. Most of them were 100 percent illiterate and didn't know their left foot from their right. The sergeant had them tie a bunch of hay to their left foot and a bunch of straw to their right foot. Instead of calling out, "Left, right, left, right, left, right," he called, "Hay, straw, hay, straw, hay, straw."

It always worked. — MRS. PAUL SPROHGE

American 'family' album planned

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans are being invited to include their family photographs, along with those of the president of the United States and other notable persons, in what may be the world's largest family album.

The collection of photographs will become part of a permanent record on video disks in connection with the rededication of the Statue of Liberty next July.

The images will be stored first in individual video stations at the statue site, then, permanently at the Ellis Island National Monument, according to Eastman Kodak Co. That firm is sponsoring the project.

To have a family's photograph included requires a $10 donation, which goes toward restoring the Statue of Liberty and Ellis Island.

Those who participate will receive a certificate of appreciation and a special identification card. When the participant's identification number is punched into a machine at the exhibit, their family photograph will instantly appear on the screen.

For more information and entry blanks, contact the Eastman Kodak Co., 343 State St., Rochester, N.Y. 14650.

Dollar rises

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose for the third straight day against the Japanese yen today, and was up against most European currencies following their weekend realignment. Gold also rose.

The dollar gained more than 8 centimes against the French franc following the franc's devaluation, which was announced Sunday by finance ministers of the eight nations whose currencies are linked in the European Monetary System.

The dollar's gains as the week's trading opened mainly resulted from an expected rise in oil prices and encouraging U.S. statements about the dollar's future, dealers said.

In London, the dollar eased against the British pound which was quoted at $1.455, more expensive than $1.4482 late Friday.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar closed at 181.15 yen, up 1.05 from Friday's close and 2.65 from Wednesday. Later in London it was quoted at 181.38.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Friday:

—2.4023 West German marks, up from 2.3925

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $336 a troy ounce, compared with late Friday's $335.75. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $336.50.

In Zurich, the bid price was $336.20, up from $335 late Friday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose 66 cents to close at a bid $336.84.

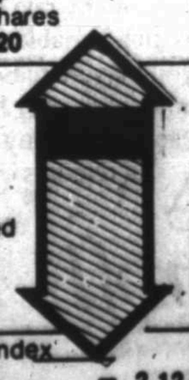

On the New York Commodities Exchange, gold rose 20 cents Friday to close at $335.40.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $5.21 a troy ounce, up from Friday's $5.14.

Bank regulators make plans to aid troubled energy banks

One proposal is loosening interstate banking laws

By JOHN M. BRODER
Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

Federal banking regulators, concerned about a growing financial crisis in America's oil-producing regions, are readying plans to prop up troubled banks that have lent heavily to energy companies.

Officials of the three agencies that oversee the nation's 14,000 commercial banks met this week to discuss legislative proposals to deal with the problems of banks in Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma. One measure expected to be presented to Congress next week would loosen federal interstate banking laws by allowing healthy banks to acquire failing institutions in other states.

While some in the banking industry are troubled by such a "backdoor" entry to interstate banking, others welcome the proposed change as a way to deal with the financial strains that oil-patch banks are suffering along with their borrowers.

Falling oil prices have devastated scores of oil and gas producers, oil field equipment suppliers and oil service companies. As these companies collapse and their problems spread in a ripple effect to the entire regional economy, the banks' loan losses mount.

The situation parallels that faced by farm state banks, but regulators in Washington consider the potential for the failure of a major bank in the energy field to be greater.

Federal banking authorities reportedly are focusing attention on a handful of major Texas bank holding companies and have discussed their possible acquisition with half a dozen of the nation's biggest banks.

Spokesmen for the agencies — the Comptroller of the Currency, the Federal Reserve and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. — refused to discuss individual banks or the possibility of mergers with specific institutions. But they said the departments were nearing agreement on a plan that would allow the cross-border acquisition of a troubled bank before it is actually closed.

Current law allows the interstate purchase of failed banks whose assets are $500 million or more, but the provision expires April 15. The emergency purchase provision was part of a 1982 banking bill that sought to avoid expensive liquidations of insolvent or failed banks.

According to a spokesman for the House Banking Committee, which is holding hearings on the problems of farm and energy state banks, regulators next week will urge Congress to extend the law and remove or reduce the size limit.

The FDIC also wants authority to enter failing, but not yet insolvent, banks and change management, inject new capital or take other measures to prevent collapse.

Banking authorities last month relaxed their accounting rules for bad loans to give banks, and their troubled farm and energy borrowers, more time to work out their problems. At the same time, regulators said they would allow some banks to fall below minimum capital levels for as long as five years if they present a detailed plan for rebuilding their equity.

The moves have been under consideration for some time in response first to the farm crisis and later to energy belt difficulties. Last year, 120 banks failed, and regulators predict that an equal number will go under this year. A record 1,200 banks are on the FDIC's "problem list." Of these, 18 percent are in the oil- and gas-producing regions of the Southwest.

The interstate banking provision is expected to be the most controversial of the proposals.

Texas does not now allow interstate bank mergers, and no such proposal is before the state Legislature. But Texas Banking Commissioner James L. Sexton said he would support a law allowing cross-border acquisitions of failing banks before they are actually closed, as long as "failing" was narrowly defined. He does not want the sale of a troubled but salvageable bank dictated by national banking authorities.

Energy Secretary John Herrington appears on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press" in Washington Sunday. He said the Reagan administration is against increasing the tax on imported oil to protect the domestic petroleum industry against plunging oil prices.

Governor gets 'no' on oil import fee

By BRYAN BRUMLEY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas Gov. Mark White got a big "no" from Energy Secretary John Herrington, who rejected a plea for increasing the tax on imported oil to protect the domestic petroleum industry against plunging oil prices.

"An import fee does not make sense for several reasons," Herrington said Sunday. "I don't care what you call it, oil import fee, tax, the president is not for it ... (It's) a dead letter."

The energy secretary also denied allegations by White and others that Vice President George Bush, who met with Saudi Arabian officials in Riyadh on Saturday and Sunday, urged them to curb oil exports to bolster petroleum prices.

"This trip is not based on oil," Herrington said. "He has a lot of economic and energy issues, and national security issues to discuss ... with the four countries" Bush is visiting, Saudi Arabia, Oman, North Yemen and Bahrain.

Herrington and White appeared on the NBC-TV interview program, "Meet the Press."

Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III has also said that President Reagan has decided against doubling or tripling the 50-cents-a-barrel excise tax on imported oil and using the revenues to buy oil for the nation's Strategic Petroleum Reserve.

White, a Democrat, urged the Reagan administration to "impose a variable tariff (on imported oil) that would make certain that you would not shut in wells that are stripper wells, the low producers, and therefore we would not be throwing away already discovered oil" in the United States.

"We have to be more concerned about our national security. Just as the Middle Eastern oil interests choked us to death in 1973, they are drowning us today. They are destroying an oil industry that we need for our national security," said White.

"This administration, I'm fearful, is much like Alice in Wonderland. When you don't know where you are going, it doesn't matter which road you take," said White. "You see the evidence of that with George Bush's trip to the Middle East. It seems they don't know what they are doing."

"I think it is a shame to see the vice president of the United States go on bended knee to the Middle East and ask them to try and help the domestic oil industry out. This country ought to stand on its own two feet and do what is right," White said.

French franc devalued as part of new government's economic plan

By ROBERT BURNS

OOTMARSUM, The Netherlands (AP) — The devaluation of the French franc, effective with the start of currency trading today, is expected to help French exporters win more business in West Germany and other Common Market nations.

But officials said it probably would make no noticeable difference in Western Europe's overall economic performance, which is expected to be helped this year by the collapse of world oil prices.

A cut of as much as 6 percent in the value of the franc was agreed upon Sunday by finance ministers of the eight nations that formally link their currency exchange rates in the European Monetary System.

The drop in the value of the franc in relation to the seven other currencies means French goods will be cheaper, and thus more competitive, elsewhere in Europe.

The currency realignment, the ninth since the system was created seven years ago, has no direct effect on the exchange value of the dollar because the United States is not a member of the monetary system.

The center-right government of French Prime Minister Jacques Chirac, which took power from the Socialists last month, apparently took its monetary system partners by surprise in requesting a devaluation so quickly after the March 16 legislative election.

Edouard Balladur, France's finance minister, said afterward that the devaluation was an "indispensible" part of his government's new economic policy.

H. Onno Ruding, the Dutch finance minister who was chairman of the currency negotiations that began in Ootmarsum on Saturday, told reporters that he and the other ministers welcomed the Chirac government's plan for lifting domestic price controls and taking other steps to liberalize the French economy.

In a statement issued in Paris shortly after the Ootmarsum agreement was disclosed, France said it also intended to impose wage restraints on state industries and to allow French companies more freedom to invest and borrow overseas.

It is customary for a government whose currency is devalued within the European Monetary System to pledge economic measures aimed at reducing the likelihood that a further devaluation would be needed.

Under the EMS agreement announced Sunday, the French franc drops in value by 6 percent against the West German mark and Dutch guilder and by 4 percent against the Danish krone and the Belgian and Luxembourg francs.

Clean up underway on oil spill near San Francisco's Bay Bridge

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Efforts were under way Sunday to clean up 100 to 200 barrels of oil spilled near the Bay Bridge, Coast Guard officials said.

The spill two miles south of the bridge was reported Saturday night. By Sunday morning, skimming crews had cleaned up more than 20 barrels of oil, said Lt. Steve Carmen.

Carmen said the oil covered the water from San Francisco's pier 50 to pier 80, and "half way into the bay."

Oil samples have been taken from ships in the area, but Carmen said it was not known which was responsible.

Economic outlook positive for short-term, survey says

NEW YORK (AP) — Purchasing agents, the executives who buy goods for business, say the economy grew at a moderate rate last month and they expect it to continue to be healthy for the next 30 to 60 days, according to a survey by the National Association of Purchasing Management.

A report by the association, based on its survey of 250 purchasing managers, said production in March was at its highest level since June 1984, and new orders continued to grow, although at a slower rate than in the previous two months.

Vendor deliveries slowed and net inventories were down after having risen for three months, "supporting clues that production indeed is doing quite well," said Robert J. Bretz, chairman of the association's survey committee.

Production levels were up in March, the third consecutive month of increases, the survey said.

"The first quarter closed solidly," Bretz said. "The continued growth in new orders suggest a healthy economy for at least the next 30 to 60 days, but at a somewhat slower pace than the past few months."

The purchasing agents' composite index was down slightly last month to 50.4 percent from 50.9 percent in February. A reading above 50 percent indicates the economy is in an expanding phase.

Dr. Horn to speak at WTGS meeting

Dr. Myron K. "Mike" Horn will be the speaker at the luncheon meeting of the West Texas Geological Society on April 8 at the Midland Center. The meeting will begin at 11:30 a.m. and will cost $7.

Horn's topic will be "Habitat of Oil and Gas in Foreland-Foredeep Basins." There are 799 sedimentary basins in the world, of which 124, or 16 percent, are foreland-foredeep basins. Giant oil and gas fields occur in 29, or 23 percent, of the world's foreland-foredeep basins.

Horn earned his bachelor's degree at the University of Colorado in 1962, his master's degree at the University of Houston in 1968, and his doctorate in geology from Rice University in 1984. He is currently the technical assistant to the Vice President, Interior Area, of Cities Service Oil and Gas Corp.

Are we headed for oil crisis in the 1990s?

By PETER BEHR
Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — If Vice President George Bush and a large segment of the oil industry are right, the current good news of lower oil prices has a foreboding flip side.

Inevitably, lower oil prices mean lower oil production in this country and in other areas where the costs of extracting oil are relatively high. These high-cost areas lie outside the Persian Gulf. If U.S. oil production drops rapidly, by the 1990s, America may again fall into the clutches of the foreign oil cartel, as it did in the 1970s, a decade of oil embargoes, gasoline lines and soaring fuel prices.

In 1977, the United States depended upon imported oil for 46 percent of its gasoline, heating oil and other petroleum products, with one-third of the imports coming from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, headed by Saudi Arabia.

When the Iranian revolution caused a sharp drop in Iran's oil production in 1979, oil supplies tightened around the world and the price of oil and oil products doubled. Roughly half of the devastating inflation of the 1970s was because of increases in energy prices during the decade, economic consultant Joel Popkin estimates.

Could that scenario be repeated?

Aivars Krasts, vice president for planning at Conoco Inc., is one of many industry officials who say that it could.

Last year, the United States imported only 27 percent of its petroleum needs. And because the escalation of oil prices in the 1970s brought many new suppliers onto the scene, the Arab OPEC members supplied only 3 percent of U.S. imports.

ANALYSIS

IF OIL PRICES remain at the current $14 to $16 a barrel level, the United States will be importing up to 50 percent of its oil by 1995, Krasts estimates. "This is a greater degree of dependence than we had in 1973," Krasts said in a speech last week.

The loss of U.S. oil production will begin with the low-volume, high-cost "stripper" wells that don't make money at $15 a barrel or less, said William Fisher of the University of Texas. Tens of thousands of stripper wells will be shut down if prices remain below $15 a barrel, he predicted. In addition, as oil production from Alaska's Prudhoe Bay begins to decline in 1987, there won't be enough new discoveries to offset the decline, with oil at $15 a barrel. By 1990, the United States would have lost one-third of its production capability, Fisher estimated.

"My guess is, we'd be in a similar position to where we were in the '70s, and we wouldn't have another Prudhoe Bay coming on line as we did then. I think at $15 a barrel, it becomes a very significant national-security issue in three to four years," Fisher said. "If you want to make the assumption that the Saudis will give oil to us at an advantageous price, fine. I kind of doubt it."

Conoco's Krasts said the decline in U.S. production could be slowed if government policy were changed to reflect the new reality of oil markets. Natural gas could be deregulated. The windfall-profits tax on oil, and other oil taxes could be lightened to encourage more exploration.

"IT SHOULD strike us as strange that among the current and prospective oil-producing countries in the world, the United States is unique in still trying to raise taxes on its petroleum-producing companies," Krasts said.

Other experts question the dependence scenario and the need for costly subsidies to U.S. stripper-well operators and other high-cost producers.

John Sawhill, a partner with the consulting firm McKinsey & Co. and a former top federal energy official, noted that there are many more oil producers now than in the early 1970s. The oil-price escalation of the 1970s triggered exploration in Brazil, China, India, Malaysia, Mexico and other non-OPEC countries, and OPEC's recent troubles demonstrate how hard it is to group that many producers around a single strategy.

The greater diversity of sources means that the United States can live with a higher level of imports, Sawhill said. "I don't think we'll see a reconcentration of supplies from the Middle East." He believes that oil prices will move up some from current lows, and shouldn't be cause for alarm, or for costly subsidies to oil producers by the federal government. "Let's take advantage of lower oil prices," Sawhill says.

One critical factor that challenges the forecasters is the timing of shifts in oil production and consumption.

Although production outside of OPEC will fall, if the balance between supply and demand tightens gradually, prices may also rise gradually. This will create an incentive for more exploration and production. If the transition is smooth, there could be a long period of lower oil prices without an OPEC-induced escalation at the end.

THE SAUDIS, the other major Persian Gulf oil producers, and the major multinational oil companies have the capability to create just such a smooth shift, if they choose to, says Paul Mlotok, an energy analyst with the Salomon Brothers investment firm.

Mlotok, in a new assessment of oil prices and OPEC's role, foresees several years of volatile swings in oil prices around an average price of $12 to $16 per barrel.

The current plunge in prices is part of an upheaval in the oil sector that is paralleled only by the breakup of the Standard Oil Trust in 1911, Mlotok and colleague Michael Young say in their report, "World Oil Markets — Back to the Future."

That breakup was followed by 20 years of extreme volatility in world oil markets that ended only when the Texas Railroad Commission took a tough regulatory hold over oil production in the state.

The price shake-up that began last November may last no longer than 1990, however, Mlotok and Young said. By then, the world's oversupply of crude oil that has blocked OPEC's efforts to re-establish the cartel will be substantially reduced.

That may lead the way to a period of stable prices in the 1990s, regulated by a new cartel created by the Gulf states and the big oil companies, they said.

"We expect an arrangement of several large, integrated units to emerge, functioning from wellhead to (gasoline) pump, and amalgamating the core OPEC nations with the major international oil companies." This new cartel of companies and "more disciplined" OPEC producers could maintain prices in the $18 to $20 a barrel range for an extended period, Mlotok and Young suggest.

"The one hope is that the major OPEC producers and the oil companies have learned a lesson — that the extreme volatility we've seen is undesirable. ... In about four years, we'll find out," Mlotok says.

South Dakota Senator James Abdnor is sending the IRS a warning to provide more useful guidelines for vehicle record-keeping.

Auto Log-Keeping

Sen. James Abdnor has warned the Internal Revenue Service that unless the agency "provides taxpayers with useful guidelines" for keeping records of vehicle use for tax purposes, "I will not hesitate to once again pursue corrective congressional action." The South Dakota Republican earlier wrote legislation that led to the repeal of complex vehicle log regulations the IRS drafted for 1985 that many complained were burdensome for farmers, ranchers and small-business owners who drive trucks and vans as part of their jobs. The regulations required individuals claiming tax deductions for business use of vehicles to keep meticulous records of their mileage, their destination and purpose of every trip.

In November, the IRS issued new temporary record-keeping regulations, but Abdnor says the new rules "appear to simply restate the legal standard" contained in the repealed rules without giving record-keepers "concrete guidelines" about how to comply with that standard.

K-Mart stores across the nation are selling "The Child Awareness Game," stepping up efforts to increase child safety in America.

Awareness Game

K-Mart stores throughout the country will be the first retailers to carry "The Child Awareness Game," a new game endorsed by the non-profit Adam Walsh Child Resource Center and John & Reve Walsh, K-Mart Corp. recently announced. April is National Child Safety Awareness Month.

"This game has two important features: First, it teaches personal safety in a positive, non-threatening way. Second, it educates on how to build open lines of communication with their children," said John Walsh. "We're not just dealing with abduction here — we're teaching children to recognize their rights in relation to adults that they know," he noted.

One dollar per sale of each game will be donated to the Adam Walsh Child Resource Center.

Hide-A-Case

On December 1, 1969, Hiram Walker Inc. left a full case of Canadian Club in the lair of the Loch Ness monster as part of their famed Hide-A-Case campaign. Now, 16 years later, the forgotten case of the River Ness has been discovered by two local villagers. After the air-tight metal container was opened, the villagers discovered a greater puzzle — an empty case of Canadian Club.

Hiram Walker, Inc. checked back with the sailor and the creative directors at McCaffrey and McCall who dropped the case over the site of the ancient Gaelic legend and found that the case was definitely full 16 years ago. No one knows the answer — what could have happened to the case in the deep, murky waters — could it have been the Loch Ness Monster?

The Hide-A-Case campaign began in July 1967 when a team of creative directors from McCaffrey and McCall Ad Agency dropped the first case of Canadian Club in Tanzania, East Africa. Since then, a total of 22 cases have been hidden in such remote and exotic places as the Angel Fall in Venezuela, Great Barrier Reef in Australia, The Yukon Territory in Canada, Robinson Crusoe Island off the coast of Chile, St. Helena Island in the South Atlantic Ocean, 110 feet from the Stanley met Livingston in East Africa, Bigfoot Feeding Ground in the Pacific Northwest Region, and the site where Bonnie and Clyde were shot down in Louisiana. To date, only 16 cases have been found.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

National debt passes $2 trillion for first time

WASHINGTON (AP) — The national debt, which has doubled in the past five years, passed the $2 trillion milestone for the first time in history last week, the government said.

The level was surpassed sometime Thursday. By the end of the day, the total debt owed by the government stood at $2,008,201,000,000, according to a summary of the nation's finances released each day by the Treasury Department.

The size of the debt — the result of an accumulation of decades of deficit spending — came as no surprise to government officials, who anticipate that it will go even higher.

Canadian unemployment hits four year low

OTTAWA (AP) — Canada's unemployment rate in March fell to a four-year low of 9.6 percent from 9.8 percent in February, the government's Statistics Canada reported.

The rate, adjusted for seasonal variations, is the lowest since March 1982 when it was 9.3 percent.

In real numbers there were 1.38 million Canadians unemployed in March, 39,000 more than in February; but seasonally adjusted the jobless rate fell to the four-year low, the agency said Friday.

Steel executive says import restraints effective

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The chairman of U.S. Steel Corp. said President Reagan's steel import restraints have been effective even though the program has yet to meet its goal more than a year into its five-year duration.

"If it were not in place, many steel companies now described as being under a cloud would instead have been under a statute called Chapter 11," David M. Roderick told a hearing here Friday of the House Subcommittee on Commerce, Consumer and Monetary Affairs.

Steelworkers approve contract with LTV Steel

PITTSBURGH (AP) — United Steelworkers members have approved a 40-month contract with LTV Steel Co. which cuts wages and benefits by more than $3 an hour at the nation's No. 2 steelmaker, union officials said Friday.

The agreement passed with a 61 percent majority, or 13,162-8,474, said Anthony Rainaldi, chairman of the USW committee that negotiated for some 28,000 active and furloughed members.

It was the first settlement with one of the nation's Big Six steelmakers, which must replace a national agreement that expires July 31. The ratification was considered a barometer of rank-and-file sentiment as the Big Six try to further reduce labor costs in the battle against cheap imports.

Auto makers disclose top executive earnings

DETROIT (AP) — Lee Iacocca received more than $1.6 million in salary and bonus in 1984 and has made an additional $15.5 million profit over the past five years under an executive stock-option plan, Chrysler Corp. disclosed Friday.

Ford Motor Co. said this week that Chairman Donald Petersen received nearly $1.7 million in 1985 compensation, including a $900,000 bonus. General Motors Corp. plans to release its information later this month.

Judge blocks sympathy strike by rail workers

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — A federal judge Sunday said more than 5,000 Conrail workers in eight Northeast cities could not stage a strike in support of a walkout by fellow union members against the Maine Central Railroad of Massachusetts.

U.S. District Judge Michael A. Telesca issued a preliminary injunction against the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees, which had planned the sympathy strike to begin at midnight Sunday.

The union, which represents engineers, trainmen, switchmen and other railway workers, has been on strike since March 3 against Maine Central Railroad of Massachusetts, a subsidiary of Gilford Transportation Industries.

Bethlehem, steelworkers halt negotiations

PITTSBURGH (AP) — One steelmaker broke off contract talks and another continued negotiating Sunday with a settlement possible this week, while a third producer prepared to sign a 40-month agreement containing wage concessions.

Bargainers for National Steel Corp. and the United Steelworkers, meeting in Pittsburgh over the weekend, said they might reach an agreement covering 8,000 workers as early as Tuesday.

Union negotiators agreed Saturday to suspend talks indefinitely in an impasse with Bethlehem Steel Corp., the company and union said in a joint announcement.

The Bethelehem negotiations broke down because of union resistance to the company's attempt to win a variety of concessions, union officials said.

Decision pending affecting billion in energy royalties

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Thievery in Oklahoma's natural gas fields is tying up millions of dollars in royalty payments despite legislation to stop the "scalping," says Sen. Ray Giles, who awaits a state Supreme Court ruling on Corporation Commission rules that he claims dismantle his "sweetheart gas act."

"I'm anxious for the court to make a decision, to see if there's anything else we can do" before the end of the 1986 Legislature, said Giles, D-Pocasset. "It's a real emergency."

Giles' story goes back to the 1983 Legislature, which passed a resolution calling on the Corporation Commission to shut in wells if investors and royalty owners were not receiving payments for their share of the gas being sold.

According to the resolution, "the net effect of such predatory practices in the sale of well production will cause financial distress to the small co-owner ... (and) the inherent wealth of the great lands of Oklahoma is being diverted from its rightful recipients."

The problem, Giles said, was that purchasers of gas were buying from some of the owners in a well, but not others.

Giles said there was no reaction from the Corporation Commission following passage of the resolution, which expresses legislative intent but does not carry the weight of law.

Under state law, purchasers of gas are to buy in rateable takes — with the revenue from the gas pulled from the earth to be divided among the mineral owners and investors in proportion to their interest, Giles said.

In May 1983, Giles' sweetheart gas act — designed to protect all interests in a well — got final legislative approval and was signed into law.

More than 20 oil and gas companies filed suit, complaining the law is vague and unconstitutional, Giles said.

It's called the sweetheart gas act because some pipeline companies that also own the largest share of the well were only buying from themselves, and were refusing to buy from the other interests.

Attorneys for the Corporation Commission, appearing before the state Supreme Court, also said the rules were vague and unconstitutional.

"A state agency is supposed to enforce the laws of the state and it joins the other side," Giles said. "It's the most unheard of thing I've seen. ... I blew my stack."

The high court ordered the commission, however, to write regulations to enforce the law.

"They (the commission) completely bombed it," Giles said of rules enacting his legislation.

The commission rules hold that a producer does not have to balance the gas taken from a reserve until the reserve is depleted, Giles said.

That means royalty owners and small working interests in the well may not receive their checks for 30 to 40 years, Giles said. They could be dead by then, he says, and their heirs not even know about the proceeds.

Opponents of the rules are challenging them before the Supreme Court, and the companies that opposed the bill are challenging it in a combined suit.

Among those lining up against the rules are several royalty owners, the Western Oklahoma Royalty Association and the Farmers United Cooperative Pool. Opponents of Giles' sweetheart gas act include Cities Service Oil and Gas Corp., Exxon, Kerr-McGee Corp., Phillips Petroleum Co., Tenneco Oil Co. and Texaco Inc.

Giles said he expects a Supreme Court ruling shortly.

Giles, chairman of the Senate Natural Resources Committee, said he estimated in the spring of 1983 that $1 billion had been diverted from the rightful owners in wells across Oklahoma because of the alleged discriminatory practices.

U.S. bases tighten security; Police hunt for terrorists

BERLIN (AP) — U.S. military installations imposed intense security precautions as police pressed their hunt for terrorists who bombed a West Berlin nightclub frequented by American soldiers, killing two people and injuring 204.

West German newspapers reported Sunday that city and U.S. military police were focusing on Arab extremists who might have crossed into West Berlin from this divided city's communist eastern sector to stage the early Saturday morning bombing.

Richard Burt, the U.S. ambassador to West Germany, said today there were "very clear indications" the Libyan regime of Col. Moammar Khadafy was involved in the bomb attack, which devastated the La Belle discotheque.

"I don't think there's any disagreement...in Berlin or, for that matter, in the conversations I had with senior West German officials over the weekend, that there were clear indications the Libyans were involved," Burt said on NBC's "Today" program.

"I hope (the bombing) has raised European consciousness over the threat of Khadafy in international terrorism," he said. U.S. military and diplomatic "personnel in Western Europe are at the very highest state of alert."

Khadafy had vowed strikes on American interests abroad in retaliation for U.S. naval maneuvers in disputed waters off Libya last month, when 6th Fleet and Libyan forces clashed.

West Germany's foreign minister, Hans-Dietrich Genscher, set up a "working group of experts" to investigate possible involvement of unidentified foreign governments in the bombing.

Telephoned claims of responsibility were made Saturday on behalf of two West German leftist groups and an anti-American Arab formation, but Manfred Ganschow, director of West Berlin security police, said Sunday that they "cannot be considered authentic." He did not go into detail.

The two discotheque patrons killed in the blast were identified as U.S. Army Sgt. Kenneth Terrance Ford, 21, of Detroit, and a 28-year-old Turkish woman, Nermin Haney.

U.S. military personnel expressed anger over the bombing, as well as worry that future attacks might take place in nightclubs and other public places where full protection is impossible.

Latin American nations extend Contadora talks

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Foreign ministers of 13 Latin American nations extended their talks on a peace plan for Central America into an unscheduled third day today as they sought to overcome what one of them called "Nicaraguan intransigence."

Nicaragua was reported to be demanding a halt to what it calls U.S. aggression before agreeing on a document that would establish a firm timetable for signing a peace treaty worked out by the Contadora Group of nations with the five countries of Central America.

"The problem is with Nicaragua," said Vice President Rodolfo Castillo Claramount of El Salvador. "It is not only objecting to a specific deadline for signing a treaty, it is objecting to any deadline."

"Nicaragua will not sign," he said. "Nicaraguan intransigence is threatening our work."

The talks had been scheduled to end Sunday, but were extended.

The latest round of talks had been billed by some participants as the last hope for the Contadora effort, begun in January 1983 by the foreign ministers of Colombia, Mexico, Panama and Venezuela during a meeting on Panama's Contadora Island.

Foreign ministers from Argentina, Brazil, Peru and Uruguay, who last year united to support the Contadora peace effort, were also here for the meeting.

"Nicaragua is taking a very tough position vis-a-vis the United States," said a source close to the talks, speaking on condition he not be identified. "That is the only thing holding things up at the moment."

Meanwhile, three visiting U.S. congressmen said the Contadora foreign ministers had asked them to delay the U.S. House of Representatives' reconsideration of President Reagan's proposal to aid the Contra rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist government.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Series of quakes jar Incan capital

LIMA, Peru (AP) — A series of strong earthquakes jarred the ancient Incan capital of Cuzco Saturday, killing at least five people and injuring 50, the municipal government reported.

It said two adults and three children were crushed when the walls of their adobe homes on the outskirts of the city crumbled.

Cuzco, 350 miles southeast of Lima, has been crowded with tourists because of its vantage point for viewing Halley's comet, the city government said, but it had no reports of any foreigners being among the quake victims.

People fled into the streets as the quakes shattered windows, cracked walls, broke water pipes and cut off electricity in some areas.

City officials said five quakes and aftershocks struck Cuzco between 3:30 p.m. and 7 p.m.

The Peruvian Geophysical Institute said the strongest quake registered 5 on the Richter scale and its epicenter was 12 miles northwest of Cuzco, which is in a valley of the Andes Mountains and has a population of about 200,000.

Italian arrested for adulterating wine

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Authorities issued two more arrest warrants for tainting wine with methyl alcohol, which has killed at least 19 Italians in the last month, newspapers reported Sunday.

Mario Sperotto, 34, a wine distributor from Verona, was arrested Saturday on charges of illegal adulteration of foodstuffs, and a business associate, Raffaele Di Muro Lombardi, 57, is being sought by justice authorities, the Rome daily La Repubblica reported.

Authorities found 3,120 gallons of methyl alcohol at the Verona distribution plant, La Repubblica said.

More than 60 Italians have been hospitalized after drinking wine containing methyl alcohol, which can cause coma, blindness or death. Some Italian wine merchants illegally used methyl alcohol to raise the wine's alcohol strength.

Toronto bus crash injures 20 people

TORONTO (AP) — A bus carrying Buffalo, N.Y., college students and their families on an outing to the Toronto Zoo slammed into a chain link fence Sunday, injuring at least 20 people, three critically.

The bus, with 40 people from Erie County (N.Y.) Community College on board, abruptly veered from the center lane of the expressway in suburban Mississauga and crashed, said Ontario Provincial Police Sgt. Frank Harvey.

"The top of the fence went through the windshield and traveled the length of the bus," he said. "At least three people were impaled."

Victims were taken to five hospitals in the Toronto area, Harvey said. Their identities were not immediately available, he said.

AUTOMOTIVE REPORT

CHEVROLET CELEBRITY

By Tom Cooper

The Celebrity is heralded by Chevrolet as a leader for the division and the industry. It has become one of the leading mid-size passenger cars in America and a top choice of fleet buyers. The Celebrity's combination of comfort, price, fuel economy and appearance make it an excellent choice for an individual or a fleet buyer.

Under the hood of this car you will find a well arranged engine compartment with all service points easily found and acessed. Inside you will find a roomy comfortable environment for both front and rear seat passengers. Everything from the easily read gauges and simple to manipulate controlls down to the quiet and smooth ride make this car a pleasure to drive. In addition the abundance of cargo space in the trunk may help make it a pleasure to own.

Some interesting features are included as standard: An audibl Disk Brake Wear Sensor, a Defogger with automatic shutoff, and a tamper resistent odometer. The owners manual has an interesting feature also: A chart indicating proper materials for use in maintenance of the cars appearance. This is just a small indication that the maker has put a good deal of thought into the enduring happiness of the prospective owner.

The celebrity is available in the usual 2 door, 4 door, and 4 door station wagon formats. In addition the Euro Sport version is available in all of these. This writer drove the 4 Door Eurosport and found it to be a nice family car with a sporty flair.

Add to all this the economy of Celebrity (EPA 23 city/31 hwy) and you find that it is basically a large car in a medium body, with small car economy. This car should prove to be a good value for the American car buyer.

This feature appears each Monday in the Classified Section as a reader service of The Midland Reporter-Telegram.
