Election Day duties

Greenwood election judge Iva Carder readies for today's elections after picking up her precinct's ballots from the Midland County Election Administrator's office. Voters have until 7 p.m. to cast ballots on 21 proposed constitutional amendments and three local referendums, including a 10 percent salary increase for police and firemen. Election officials said turnout at mid-morning ranged from moderate to heavy.

Texas voters deciding on 21 amendments

AUSTIN (AP) — Polls opened at 7 a.m. today as voters began deciding the fate of 21 proposed constitutional amendments, including a proposed tripling of legislators' salaries.

Although the amendments will change the Constitution for all Texans, light voter turnout statewide was expected to give extra clout to Houston residents, who also are choosing a mayor and a successor to the late Congressman Mickey Leland.

Secretary of State George Bayoud projected statewide turnout at about 12 percent of the 8.2 million registered voters, with one-third to one-half of it coming from Harris County.

Heading the list of constitutional amendments before all voters is a proposal to more than triple — from $7,200 a year to $23,300 — the salaries of members of the Legislature.

That proposition also would remove the constitutional requirement that voters approve future salary increases by tying lawmakers' pay to the governor's salary, which the Legislature sets.

The pay raise proposal goes before voters after months of news reports about lobbyists spending more than $1.8 million to entertain legislators during their 140-day regular session this year.

Although he has urged its passage, House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, last week said he believes the raise is doomed. "It's dead," Lewis told the Texas Association of Taxpayers.

A companion amendment, Proposition 11, would nearly triple lawmakers' daily expense allowance from $30 to $81, the maximum allowed by federal tax laws.

A second major amendment, Proposition 2, has drawn support from most state leaders. It would authorize issuance of $500 million in additional Texas water development bonds, including money for improvements in colonias along the Texas-Mexico border.

Among those urging its passage were Comptroller Bob Bullock, who noted that nearly 1,000 colonias exist in Texas.

"Tens of thousands of our fellow Texans ... are living in Third World conditions, conditions that are virtually unknown in other parts of Texas and other parts of the country," Bullock said.

A rundown of the other propositions:

■ No. 3: To authorize $75 million in bonds for programs to assist in the development of small businesses, agricultural production or new and improve products within the state.

■ No. 4: To allow exemption of property of nonprofit veterans' organizations from ad valorem taxes.

■ No. 5: The "freeport" amendment to allow, on a local option basis, exemption from property taxes of certain personal property in Texas only temporarily for assembly, storage, manufacturing, processing or fabrication.

■ No. 6: To permit members of a hospital district governing board to serve four-year terms.

■ No. 7: To require elected or appointed state officials to sign a written oath stating they didn't engage in bribery to obtain the office and remove from the verbal oath the bribery provision.

■ No. 8: To issue up to $400 million in general obligation bonds for correctional institutions, youth corrections institutions and mental health institutions.

■ No. 9: To allow the Legislature to merge the state prison, parole and adult probation agencies into a single operation.

U.S. agrees to release some Iranian assets

By JOHN P. WALLACH
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration, following secret meetings with Iranian officials in The Hague, has agreed to release $810 million in frozen Iranian assets, wiping the slate clean of virtually all the money Iran claims it was owed by the United States.

The U.S.-Iran accord calls for the payment of $567 million to Iran and the deposit of an additional $243 million in frozen funds in a special "security" account to settle remaining claims against Iran, according to a State Department official who described the agreement Monday to The Hearst Newspapers.

The settlement will give new leverage to the Bush administration in urging Iranian President Ali Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani to follow up on his Oct. 24 offer to work for the release of the eight American hostages held by pro-Iranian fundamentalist Shiite groups in Lebanon.

At the time, Rafsanjani was asked at a news conference in Tehran what the United States should do to win Iranian cooperation on the hostage issue, and he replied:

"As a sign of good will, you release our assets. This is something that you will have to do, and sooner or later you will be forced to do it. So do it now."

The U.S. position has been that there is no linkage between the hostages and the frozen assets.

The total of $810 million represents the bulk of what remains of $9.9 billion in Iranian assets that were frozen by President Carter after 52 American hostages were seized at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran on November 4, 1979, and held for 444 days.

State Department spokesman Richard Boucher disclosed that Abraham Sofaer, the secretary of state's legal adviser, conducted the final negotiations at the U.S.-Iran Claims Tribunal last Thursday and Friday with Ibrahim Eftakar, a member of Iran's ruling Council of Guardians.

Sofaer, in an interview, said the two days of talks, when compared to past meetings in The Hague, "were exceptionally productive." He added: "This resolves the bulk of the assets that are uncontestedly and indisputably Iranian."

Sofaer and Eftakar also met at The Hague three weeks ago.

Boucher said "we don't make deals on hostages. It's not part of a negotiation, even an implied one. We're going to go ahead and settle these claims under the rules of the tribunals. We see hostages as a separate humanitarian matter."

Of the original $9.9 billion that was frozen in 1979, $3.89 billion was returned to Iran when the 52 American hostages were freed in 1981 under the terms of the Algiers Accord which set up the special Hague tribunal.

Almost $5 billion in bank claims have been resolved in the last eight years, with American banks being repaid for their loans to Iran from its frozen assets. That left slightly more than $1 billion in the account even though most of the bank claims were resolved.

The Iranians have been particularly irked by the slow pace with which the bank claims account has been resolved.

There are four accounts which Iran and the United States have used to settle outstanding claims.

Blake's death AIDS-related

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Amanda Blake, saloonkeeper Miss Kitty on television's "Gunsmoke," died of AIDS-related complications, not cancer as a hospital and friends had reported, her doctor says.

Dr. Lou Nishimura, a Sacramento internist, said Monday that Miss Blake, who died at age 60 on Aug. 16, had throat cancer. But he added, "That wasn't the reason that she died."

Miss Blake, a longtime resident of the Sacramento area, had AIDS symptoms for about a year, Nishimura said.

He said he didn't know how she contracted the disease.

Miss Blake's fifth husband, Mark Spaeth, a developer and city councilman in Austin, Texas, died of pneumonia in 1985 at age 45. They married in April 1984, and divorced a short time later.

Officers applaud AIDS sentence

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The life sentence given to a state prisoner infected with the AIDS virus for spitting on a guard was applauded by Midland law enforcement officers and prosecutors.

The conviction and hefty sentence, handed down Saturday by a Huntsville jury, also was reminiscent of a recent Midland case, and points out the increasing potential danger of the spread of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, authorities said.

Jurors deliberated four hours before convicting inmate Curtis Weeks, 28, of attempted murder for spitting on Ronald Alford, a 25-year-old guard at the prison system's Diagnostic Unit in Huntsville.

The jury deliberated another 30 minutes before sentencing him to life in prison under the state's habitual offender law. He had been serving a two-year sentence for aggravated robbery.

On June 7, 1988, Alford was trying to photograph Weeks and damage he had done to a prison van when the inmate said "I'm HIV-4," and then spat in the guard's face, according to court testimony.

Two teens jailed in man's death

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Two teenagers were jailed early today in connection with Monday night's stabbing death of a 20-year-old Arkansas man who witnesses say may have been attacked as a result of a narcotics deal.

Two other men also were jailed today in connection with the beating of a 51-year-old man who was kicked and may have been robbed about 1 a.m. near a liquor store on the Rankin Highway.

The two teens, ages 17 and 18, were arrested early today on city traffic warrants, police Lt. Earl Luckey said. They were identified from witnesses who saw a group of men chasing Charles Edward Hildreth about 8:30 p.m. near the railroad tracks at the intersection of Lamesa Road and Front Street, near the construction area of the Lamesa widening project, he said.

More arrests were likely today, Luckey said.

Officer Elias Hernandez was patrolling Front Street about 8:45 p.m. when several men flagged him down, according to reports. The men pointed out Hildreth, who was found lying inches from the railroad tracks. The witnesses told Hernandez he had been stabbed.

Parents' persistence paid off in unusual tips, odd discoveries

EDITOR'S NOTE: No one could prove Bobby Templin a killer, but as Christmas 1976 approached, Texas Panhandle farmer Norbert Schlegel and his wife Jaye Nell knew Templin had been unfaithful to their daughter Rhonda. In this installment of "Prairie Justice," the Schlegels find an ally in a stern investigator, who comes to share their suspicions about Rhonda's mysterious death.

By MIKE COCHRAN

ROTAN (AP) — It was no secret that the grieving parents of Rhonda Templin refused to believe their daughter died of a careless accident.

A flawed extension cord, a $10,000 life insurance policy payable to their son-in-law Bobby and Bobby's recently discovered philandering pointed to something darker.

Even as Norbert Schlegel and his wife battled the official skepticism of West Texas law enforcement, their persistence was beginning to reap unexpected dividends. A potentially volatile revelation came on a tip from Susie Martin, the neighbor who last saw Rhonda alive on April 11, 1976.

Mrs. Martin telephoned the Schlegels at their home in Shamrock to say her husband learned from a coworker named Hubert Kiker that Kiker's wife had sold Bobby a radio only days before Rhonda's death.

A lifelong resident of Roby, the county seat, Wanda Kiker was sales clerk at Roby Hardware.

From the outset, the Schlegels were puzzled by the radio, which apparently had toppled into the bathtub and fatally shocked their daughter. They knew Rhonda rarely listened to anything but her stereo, which could be heard throughout the house.

THEY INFORMED Texas Ranger Dee Vickers and local investigator Ken Crow of Susie Martin's call. Crow, who worked for District Attorney Frank Ginzel, dutifully interviewed Wanda Kiker.

Mrs. Kiker told Crow it was probably about 1 p.m. on the Thursday before Rhonda's death when a man fitting Bobby's age and description entered the store and said he wanted to buy a radio for his wife.

"He told me she liked music," Mrs. Kiker said. "Carried it around all over the house with her."

He looked at two small radios, both battery and electrically powered, and removed the backs and examined the cords. He bought one for $35 or so and paid cash.

Mrs. Kiker said the man told her he was a lab technician in nearby Rotan, and as he started to leave, she commented on the "nice" sports car he was driving.

On the following Sunday, when she heard how Rhonda died, she remembered telling her husband, "Oh, I hope that wasn't the radio I sold."

Actually, no one could say for certain. The bathtub radio and its fatally flawed extension cord had disappeared by the time Susie Martin called the Schlegels by long distance.

EVEN SO, it was remarkable that the Schlegels even learned of the Kiker account, demonstrating again that little goes unnoticed very long in a small Texas town. The chances of that occurring in big cities like Dallas or Houston would be slim and none.

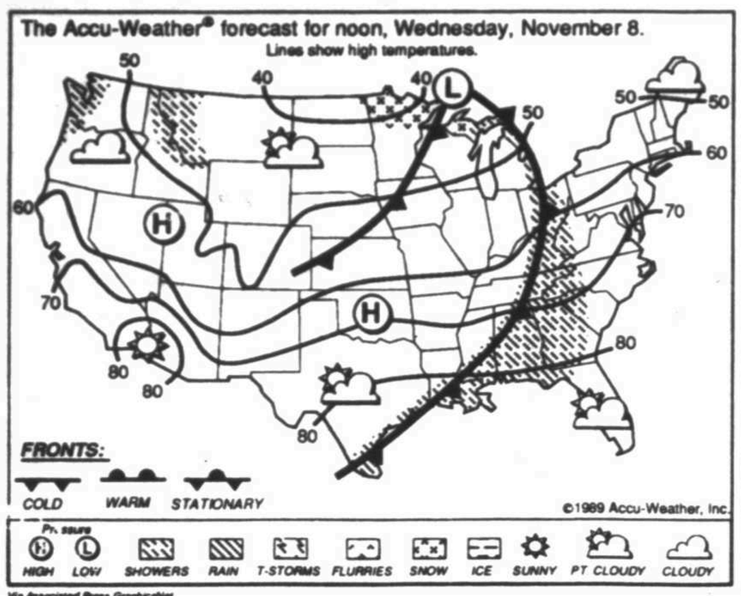

At about this same time, the Schlegels arranged a visit with Dr. Jarrett Williams, the Abilene pathologist who had performed the autopsy on Rhonda's body.

Begrudgingly, Frank Ginzel sent Crow along to sit in on the interview. It was a pivotal trip.

Crow asked to see the autopsy photographs, and he almost immediately spotted the "mirror image" burns under Rhonda's right arm. He wondered how they got there. He was unaware of the bare-wire extension cord Jaye Nell Schlegel found in the vanity. But he sensed at once that Rhonda had not died as a result of the radio toppling into the bathtub.

Fair skies, low in 40s forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Skies will be fair tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport, with the low in the lower 40s and winds from the west at 5-10 mph.

Wednesday will be fair, windy and cooler with the high reaching only into the lower 70s. Winds will be from the north at 15-20 mph and gusty.

Monday's high of 81 was three degrees cooler than the record high of 84 set for that date in 1977. The overnight low of 44 was 22 degrees warmer than the record low of 22 set for this date in 1938.

STATE

A cold front moved southward across Texas today, bringing with it rapidly dropping temperatures and the threat of thunderstorms across a vast area.

Forecasts called for partly cloudy skies across North Texas and South Texas and mostly fair skies across West Texas through tonight. There is a chance of thunderstorms in Northeast Texas, Southeast Texas and along the coastal plains.

Lows tonight will be in the 40s behind the front and in the 50s and 60s south of the front.

It will be cooler statewide Wednesday.

The cold front was moving south across the South Plains and North Texas early today. It stretched across the state from the Gainesville area southwestward to south of Abilene to south of Midland.

The front arrived in Texas after three cities had record high temperatures for Nov. 6. It was 89 at both Dallas-Fort Worth and Waco, setting record highs for the date and the 87-degree reading at San Angelo broke a record that had stood for 74 years.

NATION

A cold front moving into the Pacific Northwest was expected to bring another taste of winter to that region while winds howled through the mountains of the West and parts of the Northwest.

Advisories were posted for 3 to 6 additional inches of snow Monday night for Idaho's northern mountains, and for for up to 4 more inches in Colorado's central mountains. Today, a wind advisory was posted over the upper Snake River Plains of Idaho.

High wind warnings were up today for the northwest mountains of Wyoming, ande a high wind watch for the southeast mountains of Idaho.

Advisories for gale force winds Monday night were posted over the coastal waters of Washington state. Snow advisories remained in effect through Monday evening for Washington's Cascades and the Oregon Cascades.

Ballots test attitudes on race, abortion

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

■ Related story — 7A

Attention focuses on Virginia, New Jersey and New York City today as voters decide the outcome of campaigns testing attitudes on race and abortion and trying the public's tolerance for negative appeals.

As candidates wound down their campaigns Monday the emphasis was on voter turnout, with Democrats warning against over-confidence and Republicans vowing to surprise pollsters who show them trailing.

Democrats L. Douglas Wilder and David Dinkins were hoping to break race barriers — Wilder campaigning in Virginia to become the first black elected governor of any state and Dinkins bidding to become New York City's first black mayor.

In the New Jersey governor's race Democratic Rep. James Florio looked like a solid bet to defeat Republican Rep. James Courter.

Pre-election polls bolstered the Democrats' hopes in Virginia and New York. Wilder had an edge over Republican J. Marshall Coleman while a New York poll said Dinkins had a double-digit lead over Republican Rudolph Giuliani.

"Our tracking shows the undecideds are breaking our way," said Coleman. "All we have to do is get the vote out."

"Turnout is very important," said Wilder. "Every Democratic election here has to depend on turnout and hopefully it will be there."

While race wasn't raised directly in either contest, both Coleman and Giuliani complained of a double standard, implying their Democratic opponents were being judged leniently because they are black.

"David Dinkins has a history of getting away with things that others don't get away with," Giuliani said Monday as he insisted the election had become "a referendum on integrity."

Coleman took a similar tack in Virginia last week.

Voters also were choosing mayors and city council members in cities large and small, as well as state legislators in Virginia and New Jersey.

The candidates included long-term incumbents like Coleman Young in Detroit and Kathy Whitmire in Houston. Socialist Ben Nichols was favored to win election as mayor of Ithaca, N.Y., while Norm Rice in Seattle and John Daniels in New Haven, Conn., were bidding to become the first black mayors of their cities.

There were 56 propositions on ballots in 10 states, giving voters a chance to decide on issues ranging from funding for education in Michigan, whether to build a new ballpark in San Francisco, smoking in Greensboro, N.C., and cruise missile testing in Maine.

Whichever party claimed the most victories from the sparse off-year lineup was sure to read the results as a harbinger of 1990, although there was no sign of the emergence of any national issue other than abortion, a volatile question whose long-term impact was far from clear.

President Bush campaigned for Republican candidates for governor in New Jersey and Virginia and for mayor of New York City. But pre-election polls gave Democrats hope for a sweep of the three races and the chance to claim voters were rejecting the Republican president along with the candidates he tried to help.

The campaigns were markedly nasty in tone with the candidates for governor of New Jersey calling each other liars and rivals in Virginia and New York questioning each other's ethics. There was slim hope any conceivable results could undermine candidates' faith in the power of attack commercials.

While race was the question that focused attention on Virginia early in the campaign, Wilder upset many expectations when he made his support for abortion rights a central theme of his campaign.

Wilder's stand caught Coleman, an opponent of legal abortions, by surprise. As the campaign progressed Coleman conceded he was being hurt by the abortion issue.

The partisan lineup on the issue was the same in the New Jersey governor's race where Florio came out strongly in support of abortion rights, while Courter was on the defensive because of his strong opposition to abortion.

A recent poll said Florio had a 24-point lead over Courter, and the Democrat spent his final campaign day trying to dispel over-confidence among his supporters.

IRAN

They are "Dollar Account No. 1," a security account in which Iran pledged to keep a minimum of $500 million to settle the thousands of claims against its government and "Dollar Account No. 2," containing dollars equivalent to loans made by U.S. banks to Iran.

It is the latter from which the $810 million was dispensed this week.

"That is the last big account that is clearly Iran's money," the State Department official said. "The point is it wasn't needed to pay claims anymore. They were left over after the claims were paid."

He added: "We went and discussed the disposition of this money and the Iranians offered to put $243 million into the security account and the rest is going back to them as it would in due course anyway."

The official said Iran has never complained about the security account "because it has a legal obligation (under the Algiers Accord) to leave it ($500 million) there."

Under the terms of the new agreement, that account will now have a total of $743 million in it.

The third account is "Dollar Account No. 3," containing the interest from the first two accounts. It currently has $94 million in it.

The fourth account is a trust fund held in the United States to settle weapons claims. Iran and the United States have sharply divergent positions on the value of these weapons, which were mostly paid for by the government of the late Shah Reza Pahlavi but never delivered.

The United States maintains the arms are worth several hundred million dollars at most because they've depreciated over the last decade. Iran has claimed they are worth $10.8 billion, estimating that would be the cost of replacing them today.

On both this issue and a settlement for the families of victims of Iran Air flight 655, accidentally shot down over the Persian Gulf in July 1988 by the U.S. warship Vincennes, Sofaer said: "We are negotiating without preconditions."

AIDS

HIV stands for imm nodeficiency virus, which is associated with the leadly AIDS disease. The term HIV-4, according to doctors' testimony during the trial, was meant to indicate Weeks' infection had progressed to the AIDS stage.

Willard Earl Young, 30, is the Curtis Weeks to the Midland law enforcement community. According to court documents, while being escorted in the county courthouse by officers in July of this year, Young allegedly threatened to spit on officers and infect them with the AIDS virus.

He was indicted on August 16 for aggravated assault of a peace officer in connection with the incident.

The indictment was dismissed after Young pleaded guilty to threatening to kill four Midland County sheriff's officers on February 1 of this year.

He is serving a 6-year sentence, according to state prison records.

Midland prosecutor Wayne Frost said he failed to get a court order forcing Young to submit to a blood test, so does not know if the inmate actually has AIDS. The prosecutor acknowledges the inmates have a right to privacy, but that should be balanced against the public health.

"I think everyone who is booked into jail should be tested for infectious diseases, and not just AIDS," he said.

Frost said the Huntsville verdict is the "first case like that in Texas. I can follow the rationale (of the jury), because so far, anyone with AIDS has a death sentence."

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said other inmates have claimed they had the disease, but Young is the only one who threatened to infect an officer. That probably will change in a jail that holds an average of 128 prisoners daily, he said.

"It (AIDS) and hepatitis are the two most serious things that are worried about in corrections," Painter said.

"We're not concerned about the ones we know have it; how many come through here that have it and we don't know about it? They should be tested but they aren't," Painter said.

County Attorney Mark Dettman said it would be "proper" to be able to draw blood from an inmate, if it is suspected that he has AIDS and there are criminal charges against him.

"It would be proper to get an order to get a blood sample for a test," Dettman said. "That is no different from getting a test from someone who is intoxicated and allegedly kills someone while driving drunk."

But not even the state prison system has mandatory testing for infectious diseases such as AIDS, agency spokesman Charles Brown said.

"They test some people if they are high risk," Brown said, including some intravenous drug users. "Then if an inmate throws any body fluids on staff while they are here, they are tested."

AIDS is a fatal disease that attacks the body's immunity system. It can be transmitted through sexual contact, infected needles and blood transfusions. Although the AIDS virus has been found in tears and saliva, no instance of transmission from these body fluids has been reported.

Prison guard Alford so far has tested negative for HIV, according to state officials.

During the Hunstsville trial, Dr. Lorraine Day, chief of orthopedic surgery at San Francisco General Hospital, testified HIV can be transmitted through saliva. But Dr. Richard D. Pollard, professor of internal medicine and microbiology at the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston, testified that this view has not been supported by the surgeon general of the United States, most other AIDS researchers or the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Midland prosecutor Frost said area agencies are cautious about the danger of AIDS.

"I have cautioned both agencies that if they are executing a search warrant, they need to wear protective clothing, such as surgical gloves or something like that," he said. Two years ago, a Midland narcotics officer accidentally pricked himself with a hypodermic needle from a suspected drug user. Luckily, the owner of the needle consented to a test and did not have the AIDS virus, Frost said.

AIDS also has affected the way prosecutors handle certain cases. Frost has two pending cases where the defendants have AIDS. One is a drug case, the other auto theft.

Neither man is in Midland County, he said.

"In one case, a continuance has been filed so the defendant can get medical treatment," Frost said. "Just because someone is ill, that doesn't mean they shouldn't have criminal charges filed against them ... but you might not want to go ahead with a speedy trial, and try to get it done quickly either," he said.

STABBING

Hildreth was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital, where he was pronounced dead by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine. He had been stabbed once in the chest, officers said.

Witnesses told police an altercation involving Hildreth — and involving drugs — took place just north of the Savoy Club, 1111 E. Illinois Ave.

"The witnesses told the officers from three to six people were chasing him from one of the bars," Luckey said. "They chased him through the area buildings, where he was probably stabbed. He then made it to the railroad tracks before he dropped."

Witnesses told officers they did not see Hildreth robbed, Luckey said.

Officers who arrived after Hernandez immediately began to locate witnesses and take statements, Luckey said.

Union Pacific Railroad was also notified, and delayed a scheduled 9:49 p.m. train through Midland until crime scene officers finished their investigation.

Hildreth was a Hot Springs, Ark. native, who lived at several addresses in Midland. His last known address was 108 N. Madison Ave., and his occupation was unknown, according to investigators.

The knife used in the stabbing was not recovered, Luckey said.

A 51-year-old man who was kicked and beaten about 1 a.m. today was still being treated at MMH nine hours later, and his condition had not been determined, spokeswoman Sue Ristom said.

Police said his injuries included broken ribs, a collapsed lung, and a possible fracture of the eye socket.

The man, whose name was not released, was discovered by officers after a bystander heard noises in an alley near McLoyd's Spirits, 1801 Rankin Hwy.

"The man said he heard noises, then saw two guys kicking something on the ground," Luckey said.

The witness then phoned police from a Kent Kwik convenience store, and pointed out the suspects to officers. The suspects were arrested at the scene and were jailed on charges of aggravated assault and public intoxication, reports said.

According to a clerk at the store, the two suspects had met the victim in the store, and they were last seen leaving together. Luckey said it was likely the victim was lured to the alley, robbed and beaten.

"But we don't know that for sure," he said. "We don't know anything about him yet, where he lives or if he has any family here."

BLAKE

Nishimura was interviewed following a report on Sacramento TV station KRBK that quoted friends of Miss Blake as saying her death was AIDS-related.

After Miss Blake died at Mercy General Hospital, a statement by the hospital and her friends reported the cause of death as cancer.

Miss Blake's death certificate, however, listed the immediate cause of death as cardiopulmonary arrest due to liver failure and CMV hepatitis. CMV, or cytomegalo virus, hepatitis is AIDS-related, said Nishimura, who treated Miss Blake in her last year and signed her death certificate.

Acquired immunodeficiency syndrome and cancer were listed on the certificate as contributing causes of death.

AIDS is caused by a virus that attacks the body's immune system. It is spread most often through sexual contact, needles or syringes shared by drug abusers, infected blood or blood products, and from pregnant women to their offspring.

Once a two-pack-a-day smoker, Miss Blake underwent surgery for oral cancer in 1977 and afterward made appearances on behalf of the American Cancer Society.

Jerri Ewen, a Mercy General spokeswoman, said she previously reported cancer as the cause of death at the request of Miss Blake's close friends. "When somebody dies, you go by what the wishes of the family are. In this case, the friends were the family," Ewen said.

"They have the right to say whatever they want to say."

Ewen said she never saw the death certificate.

She said the hospital reported the death to the federal Centers for Disease Control, which monitors AIDS and other contagious diseases.

Miss Blake reigned as Miss Kitty, queen of Dodge City's Long Branch Saloon, for 19 years in "Gunsmoke." Set in the lawless cattle town of Dodge City, Kan., in the late 1800s, "Gunsmoke" was one of television's original "adult westerns" in the mid-1950s.

Miss Blake left "Gunsmoke" in 1974. CBS canceled the show one season later.

After "Gunsmoke," Miss Blake worked only sporadically, usually in guest appearances for TV game shows, movies of the week and such series as "Edge of Night," "Hart to Hart," and "Love Boat."

She also was a longtime activist for animal protection.

TIPS

"It was the bare wire under the arm where the juice entered the body," he said later. "When I saw that, there was no way I could figure out how this was an accident."

He soon persuaded Ginzel to authorize him to officially investigate the death of Rhonda Templin.

As tough and unyielding as a mesquite tree, and with dark, piercing eyes, Kenneth L. Crow was something of a legend in his corner of West Texas. A former Sweetwater cop, he grew up in Rotan, joined the district attorney's office in 1972 and knew most everyone by name in the three-county 32nd Judicial District.

COLLEAGUES DESCRIBED him as a crack investigator with the instincts of a paperback sleuth, an image enhanced by his drooping and graying moustache.

Courtroom lawyers were forever urging him to speak up, claiming he's too soft spoken to be heard. "Listen harder," he would drawl. He was not easily intimidated.

With two daughters of his own, Crow was sympathetic with the Schlegels from the start.

He looked into the evidence, information and rumors they had collected over the past eight months, and he talked with dozens of people who knew Bobby and Rhonda. He was impressed by what he found.

For the first time since Rhonda's death, someone besides the Schlegels now believed Bobby Templin was a killer.

In February, Crow sent word that he wanted to question Bobby, and a meeting was arranged through Norman Arnett, a local attorney representing Bobby. Arnett was totally convinced of his client's innocence and had no objections.

"IF IT'S true, tell him," Arnett said. "Just because you were having an affair doesn't make you guilty of murder."

But Bobby persisted in his lie, even when Crow showed him documented proof of the Holiday Inn rendezvous with Melanie on April Fool's Day. Bobby also denied buying the radio in Roby three days before Rhonda's death and dismissed the $10,000 accidental death policy as a joint plan his wife had arranged through the bank.

He said he did not know how the radio and extension cord got into the bathroom, that it was not there when he left to buy gas. And he had no idea what had happened to the missing radio and cord.

Unhappy with the interview, Crow suggested Bobby submit to a polygraph examination. Arnett was not opposed, so firm was his belief in Bobby's innocence.

But the lawyer sent him first to an independent operator in Dallas. Presumably the results were suspect, because the district attorney's office refused to accept them.

That same month, Bobby took another lie detector test administered by a Department of Public Safety expert in Midland. It was "inconclusive."

Poring over the charts later, Crow decided something was amiss. Bobby's reaction pattern was abnormal and puzzling, even those answers unrelated to Rhonda's death.

"IT'S LIKE he's dead," Crow explained, concluding later that Bobby, with his medical knowledge, must have taken some kind of drug before the test.

He wanted another polygraph test. Before it could be worked out, the Schlegels renewed their request for grand jury action. They were armed now with Wanda Kiker's story and the photographs showing the burns on Rhonda's body.

"We thought we had it made this time," Norbert said.

Crow likewise believed Rhonda's death was homicide but he doubted that a grand jury, much less a jury, would agree.

"We don't have enough," he said.

The Schlegels, their frustration level at a record high, persisted, and in April 1977 Norbert presented his evidence to grand jurors. They were impressed but voiced reservations.

They decided to call Bobby and Melanie to appear before their next session.

At that point, the case took a sinister turn.

A MAN telephoned the Schlegels in Shamrock with a death threat. He told Norbert his home along the busy interstate would be extremely vulnerable to intruders, adding:

"You'd better drop this thing with Bobby Templin or they'll be another grave up on the hill."

He refused to identify himself.

About this time, Crow persuaded Bobby through lawyer Arnett to submit to another polygraph test, preceded by a urinalysis to detect the use of any drugs.

According to the DPS examiner, the second test indicated Bobby was deceptive in answering all questions about Rhonda's death. His sharpest reaction involved the radio he purportedly bought in Roby.

"He must have felt like that was such a strong piece of evidence against him that he really reacted," Crow speculated.

The investigator was now convinced more than ever of Bobby's guilt but knew his latest information was useless. The results of polygraph tests are inadmissible under Texas law and even the mere mention of them in court can trigger a mistrial.

As he pondered his next move, the Schlegels received another threatening phone call, and this time the caller identified himself. It was Bobby's older brother Jim.

NORBERT SWITCHED on a tape recorder.

"There's a man that made a phone call to you a short time ago," Jim Templin began. "He's got instructions that if the grand jury takes any action detrimental to Bobby or if you proceed to pursue this thing any further past Thursday, those instructions will be carried out...What you are charging Bobby with is pretty damn serious."

"What he did was serious," Norbert replied.

"That's yet to be proved."

"That's what the process of law is all about, Jim."

"I know what the process of law is and I also know what harassment is, and that's something you've been doing a lot of...And I don't like anyone calling my brother and telling him they are going to put him in the electric chair. You got that?"

"Jim, it really won't do you any good to keep threatening me..."

Bobby's brother ignored that advice, and when the grand jury reconvened again he showed up to threaten the Schlegels in person. It was not a smart move, since Crow and other investigators were present and overheard the tirade.

Later, after charges were filed, Jim Templin pleaded guilty to making the threats and received a probated sentence.

MEANWHILE, THE grand jury that day listened with mixed emotions to additional testimony regarding Rhonda's death.

"We think Bobby did it, but can you convict on the evidence?" a panel member asked Crow.

"In my opinion, we cannot," he replied.

Moreover, District Attorney Frank Ginzel remained as skeptical as ever and in fact told the grand jurors he might not prosecute the case even if they indicted Bobby for murder.

"If I can't see it, I can't sell it," he repeated.

In the end, Crow urged the panel to take no action, to render neither an indictment nor a "no bill," and he and the Schlegels would continue their joint investigative effort.

The jurors agreed.

"When you think you've got it all put together," sighed Norbert, "and they still don't do anything..."

BUT IF he and Jaye Nell were disappointed and discouraged, they were no less determined to press on. And now they at least had Crow's interest and support.

"Keep looking, keep investigating and keep telling me things," Crow advised the Schlegels. He also told them to look beyond the reign of his boss, Frank Ginzel.

He suspected that once Ginzel was gone this could be a prosecutable case.

After months passed with no tangible results, Norbert and Jaye Nell took a new tact: they turned to the attorney general's office in Austin for help.

Although no assistance was forthcoming, they did get an intriguing bit of advice. By filing a wrongful death suit against Bobby, the Schlegels could compel witnesses to answer their questions under oath.

What's more, sworn depositions in such a civil action would preserve testimony for use by prosecutors in any future criminal trial.

With new enthusiasm and at no small expense, the Schlegels hired a lawyer named Lowell Lasley and he filed suit against their estranged and surly son-in-law in the Texas Big Bend town of Alpine in April 1978.

ON AUG. 10, 28 months after their daughter's death, they sat down with their lawyer at a neutral site in the South Plains city of Lubbock and confronted Bobby for the first time under oath.

And for the first time, Bobby admitted his earlier affair and current marriage to Melanie. He also provided details of a sexual fling in Shamrock after his marriage to Rhonda.

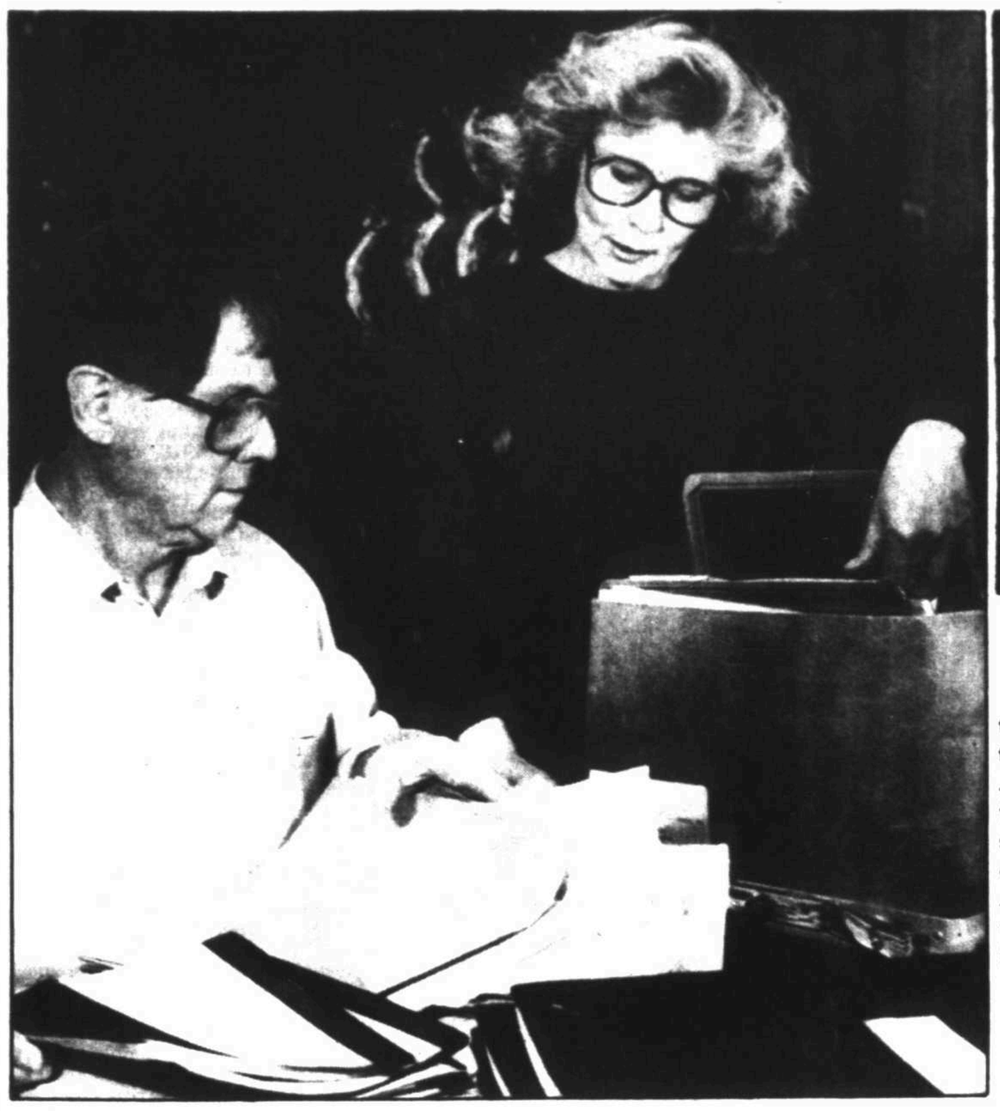

Melanie was present during the deposition and told the Schlegels she and Bobby had an 8-month-old daughter, born Dec. 13, 1977. It was a cringing coincidence. On that same date two years earlier, Bobby and Rhonda had moved into their new home in Rotan.

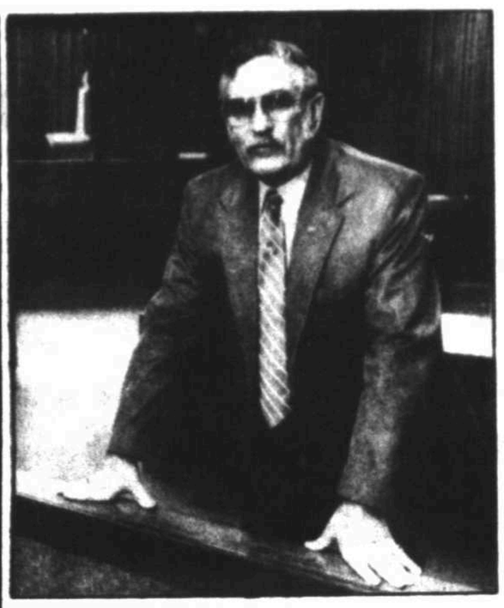

Bobby recounted his activities on the day Rhonda died and repeated many of the answers and denials he made to Ken Crow in early 1977. The session provided no bombshells and little of substance that the Schlegels did not already know through other sources.

But the deposition did pin Bobby down on a sworn version of what occurred before, during and after the time Rhonda was fatally shocked.

The Schlegels knew prosecutors would find it handy when and if Bobby ever stood trial for murder.

Wednesday: "Circumstantial Evidence."

Sifting through a mound of documents they collected during the investigation of their daughter's death are Norbert and Jaye Nell Schlegle, left. The first law enforcement officer sympathetic to their search was Kenneth L. Crow, above. Crow, an investigator for the three-county 32nd Judicial District, poses in the courtroom where Bobby Templin was tried for the first time.

Texas woman chooses jail in custody battle

DEL VALLE, Texas (AP) — Dora Parkerson, an inmate at the Travis County Correctional Complex, is proud of her prison uniform. She got it by refusing to take her daughter to court in a custody battle.

A bitter custody fight over her 4-year-old daughter has given Mrs. Parkerson, 35, an attitude rare among the inmates.

"I'm proud of this uniform, just to protect my daughter," she said of her drab blue-and-white outfit. "And if I had to do it for any of my other kids, I'd do it."

Mrs. Parkerson has been jailed since Sept. 1, when a state district judge ordered her held in contempt of court for failing to bring her daughter to court as part of a lengthy custody battle.

She contends she would rather stay in jail than let her daughter stay with her estranged husband. He has legal custody, but Mrs. Parkerson claims he has sexually abused the child, an accusation that authorities say is unfounded.

Lawyers in the custody dispute say they know of no similar local case in which a person has spent this long in jail for contempt.

Investigators from the Austin Police Department and Bergstrom Air Force Base, where Parkerson is a master sergeant, have found no evidence to support Mrs. Parkerson's charges and consider her claims unfounded.

Mrs. Parkerson is not alone. Nationwide, 37 other people chose jail last year rather than sharing their child with their spouse, according to estimates by the National Organization for Women.

"She could be two blocks, two miles or 2,000 miles away, and I wouldn't know," Rick Parkerson said from his Dove Springs home, the living room of which is filled with photographs of a smiling, wide-eyed little girl.

Court clears way for settlement for women injured by Dalkon

NATION

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court cleared the way for payments to tens of thousands of women injured by the Dalkon Shield, but one attorney said "ultimate justice can never be done" for victims of the birth control device.

The high court on Monday rejected a challenge by 650 women to a $2.5 billion trust for victims of the intrauterine device made by A.H. Robins Co.

The fund was established by Richmond-based Robins, which filed for bankruptcy protection in 1985 amid a flood of claims because of the Dalkon Shield. The ruling means women injured by the IUD could begin receiving compensation by next spring.

It also clears the way for the purchase of Robins by American Home Products Corp., a New York-based food and drug manufacturer that agreed to buy Robins for $700 million in stock and to finance the trust. The deal was conditional on approval of the trust, which was established as part of Robins' bankruptcy reorganization plan.

"Many of these women have been waiting for years for resolution of their claims," said Michael Sheppard, director of claims resolution for the trust. "This is a major step forward."

An estimated 112,800 women have filed claims with the trust and 42 percent have been paid, Sheppard said. He predicted payments under Monday's ruling could begin as early as March.

Marketed in the early 1970s, the Dalkon Shield allegedly caused infections that brought infertility, spontaneous abortions, pelvic inflammation and, in some cases, death. Sales of the Dalkon Shield ended in 1974 but the product wasn't recalled until 1984.

"Listen to the misery caused by the Dalkon Shield and you realize that ultimate justice can never be done, even with a $2.6 billion payout," said Guerry R. Thornton Jr., an Atlanta attorney who represented the Dalkon Shield Victims Association.

"Almost all claimants accept the fact that justice is a relative concept, the greatest good for the largest number."

Sharon Lutz, a Detroit lawyer representing 18,000 women who urged the court to uphold the settlement, said it had been "a long, long struggle for a terrible, terrible tragedy, but today's great news marks the beginning of the end."

Robins spokesman Roscoe Puckett Jr. said: "The company is very pleased that the way finally has been cleared for consummation of its reorganization plan."

Linda Hightower, director of the Dalkon Shield Victims Association in Atlanta and one of the women injured by the IUD, said she was terrified the challenge to the trust set up to compensate victims would mean more long years of battles.

"I had much rather deal with the trust ... than to have direct dealings with the Robins company," Ms. Hightower said. "They made it very difficult for the women they injured to get compensation for their injuries."

One dissenting vote was cast in the court's decision to reject the challenge. Justice Byron R. White voted to grant full review to those arguments.

Details of plan released

WASHINGTON (AP) — Action by the Supreme Court clears the way for the start of payments from a $2.5 billion settlement fund to women injured by the Dalkon Shield birth control device.

The device, marketed in the early 1970s, allegedly caused infertility, spontaneous abortions, pelvic inflammation and even, in some cases, death.

Here, at a glance, are the details:

■ A target date for payments for those with active claims is late February, but lawyers say the payments may not begin until the spring.

■ Nearly 100,000 of the more than 300,000 women who filed claims against A.H. Robins, the Richmond, Va., manufacturer of the device, still have active claims and stand to share in the settlement.

■ Baltimore lawyer Michael Pretl, however, says thousands of women with active claims may collect very little because of problems in their cases. For example, they may have used more than one brand of intrauterine device.

■ Some 9,000 cases were settled before A.H. Robins declared bankruptcy and announced a reorganization plan in 1985. Payments made under those settlements are serving as a model for awards in this settlement. Pretl predicts that women who suffered serious injuries may collect between $25,000 and $250,000.

■ A four-member "trust fund" committee appointed by U.S. District Judge Robert Merhige in Richmond will make the awards. The committee is led by Georgine Vairo of the Fordham University Law School in New York.

California merchants move to tents to prepare for Christmas season

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (AP) — Last month's deadly earthquake ripped the economic heart out of this community by ravaging the Pacific Garden Mall, but merchants hope to salvage the Christmas shopping season by moving to tents.

"I know that if I'm not open the day after Thanksgiving, I'm bankrupt," mall businesswoman Margaret Wilson told the City Council last week.

Hardest hit in this quaint, seaside town 60 miles south of San Francisco was the mall, a typically eclectic California collection of about 250 shops.

They sold everything from rare books to imported coffee beans to beads as well as many necessities in turn-of-the-century buildings linked by open-air walkways along a tree-lined street.

Three people were killed in the mall and several dozen of its buildings crumpled by the Oct. 17 quake, which registered 7.1 on the Richter scale, killed 66 people in Northern California and did $7 billion in damage.

On Monday, Gov. George Deukmejian signed a temporary quarter-cent sales tax increase into law to raise a projected $800 million for earthquake relief.

The hike, which takes effect Dec. 1 and lasts through 1990, adds to a statewide sales tax of 6 cents on the dollar, higher in some areas because of local levies.

The tax rise was part of a package of quake relief legislation, enacted in a special session of the Legislature, that includes $200 million in assistance from state reserve funds and $150 million in tax relief.

Now that they've gotten over the shock of the quake, many Santa Cruz merchants have put aside competition and banded together.

With a lot of work and a little luck, they say those hardest hit by the quake will be able to come up with enough money to lease the tents and reopen by Thanksgiving weekend.

Ms. Wilson, owner of the variety store Lily Wong's, is among the majority of mall merchants who have vowed to rebuild. Her store was damaged, but can be repaired.

"My guess is, it's going to be a cliffhanger every single day until (the mall itself) opens," Ms. Wilson told the City Council. "But we can do it and it will be open and we will have a Christmas downtown."

The council agreed to donate $20,000 toward rental of three huge tents, with a total floor space of 20,000 square feet. It would cost $314,000 to lease the tents for the year the merchants figure they'll be displaced.

City officials also are trying to identify other sites that could be used as retail space.

Report shows agencies rely on private consultants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is giving federal agencies "an open money sack" to hire private consultants and contractors, and the Energy Department even lets them perform sensitive work on nuclear technology, a Senate report says.

The Department of Energy relies on private consultants "to perform virtually all basic governmental functions," according to a report released Monday by Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., chairman of a Senate subcommittee.

The number of Energy Department employees has declined from 20,000 in 1980 to 16,000, the report said, adding that contractors have in effect become part of its permanent work force.

"It relies on contractors in the preparation of its most important plans and policies, the development of budgets and budget documents, and the drafting of reports to Congress and congressional testimony," the report said.

"It relies on contractors to monitor arms control negotiations, help prepare decisions on the export of nuclear technology, and conduct hearings and initial appeals in challenges to security clearance disputes," it said.

Pryor said the department was unable to say how many contractors and consultants it has, or how much it is spending on them. But he said the department pays more for work by consultants than it would for the same work by employees.

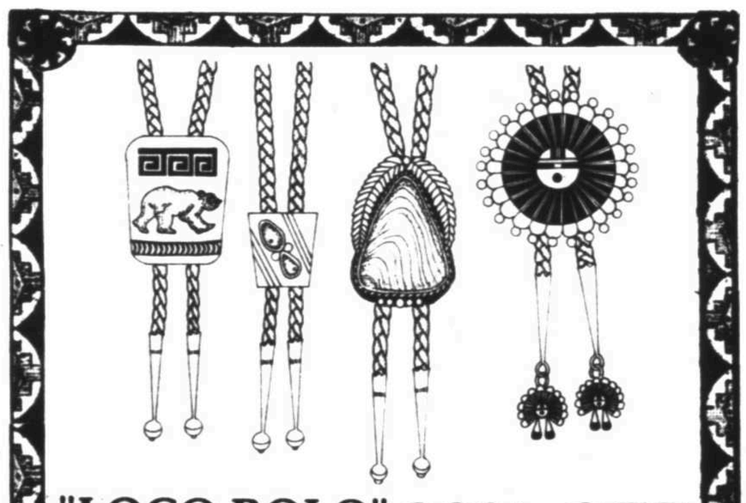

"We spend in the Congress weeks debating whether government employees should get a 2 percent or a 3.6 percent pay raise, but we provide literally an open money sack to agencies to hire private contractors," Pryor said.

Donna R. Fitzpatrick, assistant energy secretary for management and administration, defended the use of consultants and contractors as necessary to provide technical expertise that the government cannot obtain from its own employees.

She said the department's employees "are stretched very thin," and that government salaries are too low to keep employees who can be hired at higher salaries by the contractors. But she said the department uses only its own employees to make policy decisions.

Fitzpatrick acknowledged the panel's finding that remarks by Energy Secretary James Watkins to a House panel in April on nuclear facilities had been written by a private defense contractor, BDM. But she said that was an "isolated" incident.

Moderate elected president of bishops

BALTIMORE (AP) — Archbishop Daniel Pilarczyk of Cincinnati, a social and theological moderate, was elected president today of the nation's Roman Catholic bishops.

Pilarczyk, vice president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops since 1986, was elected on the first ballot to succeed Archbishop John May of St. Louis, who also is considered a moderate. The vote came at the bishops' fall meeting.

The 55-year-old Pilarczyk enjoys support among both the liberal and conservative camps of the bishops' conference.

On Monday, the leaders of the 53 million-member church opened their meeting by plunging into the abortion debate and urging their flock to dig a little deeper to support church programs.

Archbishop May issued a rallying cry against abortion in his opening address, calling it an issue "where clear-cut moral principle stands tall above all else."

Church leaders were scheduled to vote today on a policy statement that says Catholics should "give urgent attention and priority to this issue" in the wake of a U.S. Supreme Court ruling giving states more authority to regulate abortion.

"In my judgment,we're at a turning point in the country," said Cardinal John O'Connor of New York, a member of the bishops' Committee for Pro-Life Activities.

The bishops today also were to vote on a proposal to have laymen lead Sunday services without priests. The measure was prompted by a severe shortage of clergy.

In electing Pilarczyk, the conference held to a tradition in which no vice president who has sought the top spot has been turned down.

Pilarczyk said in an interview that the most important social issues facing the church include the "life issue" of abortion and euthanasia and economic issues such as Third World debt and the rights of unions.

The new conference president also said there is room for flexibility in seeking legislation that does not entirely conform to church teaching.

"There is a difference between law and sin," he said. "Things which in law are tolerable may nevertheless be morally intolerable."

For example, he said if the question was whether he would support tolerating a law allowing abortion for rape and incest victims for the greater good of prohibiting other abortions, "the answer is probably yes."

Pilarczyk was appointed auxiliary bishop of Cincinnati in 1974 and archbishop in 1982 after Cardinal Joseph Bernardin left for the Archdiocese of Chicago.

With a study showing Catholics contribute 40 percent less of their income than members of other churches, the bishops on Monday also ordered work to begin on a pastoral letter on church giving.

Bishop Warren L. Boudreaux of the Diocese of Houma-Thibodaux in Louisiana said red is fine liturgical color, but it isn't good financial news.

"We are called to bring the good news. Let's do it," he told the bishops.

PLO assures acceptance of Israeli pact

By JOHN P. WALLACH
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Palestine Liberation Organization has given the United States private assurances it will accept five years of limited Israeli rule in the West Bank and Gaza Strip if the 1.5 million Palestinians there get self-government at the end of the period.

The PLO also has conceded that an international conference, chaired by the two superpowers and other permanent members of the U.N. Security Council, could be delayed until a final settlement is reached to begin the transition period to Palestinian self-rule.

Both concessions, which represent shifts in longstanding PLO stands, are contained in a message that was conveyed by Bassam Abu Sharif, a senior political adviser to PLO leader Yasser Arafat, to Secretary of State James Baker in September.

The document also stated that all issues are "negotiable, including the establishment of an independent Palestinian state."

The PLO assurances, touching on some of the major stumbling blocks in the way of a final Israeli-Palestinian settlement, are partly responsible for the optimism Baker expressed Monday about prospects of direct talks before the end of the year, according to a State Department source who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Baker told reporters in Canberra, Australia on Monday he was pleased that the Israeli cabinet has endorsed his plan for talks to take place in Cairo. At the same time, he noted that Israel had only agreed to the "general framework" of his five-point proposal for the talks.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir conditioned Israeli acceptance of such talks on written U.S. assurances that Israel would not be forced to negotiate with the PLO and that the talks would only concern Shamir's plan for elections in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

A decision presumably will be made on the issue before Shamir meets President Bush later this month.

The White House last week had suggested that Bush might be too busy to meet with Shamir, who has a private visit to the United States scheduled for the middle of this month. But a senior Bush aide said on Monday that the two leaders will meet, probably on Nov. 13.

The concessions contained in the Abu Sharif message are important because the PLO in the past unconditionally demanded its own state in the West Bank and Gaza and said it would accept only a six-month transition for Israeli troops to withdraw.

The PLO also previously demanded that an international conference take place at the outset of any Israeli-Palestinian dialogue — not at the end of it, as proposed in the PLO message to Baker.

The message concludes that "once this is accepted as a basis for discussion, all ideas can be negotiated and accepted, foremost free and democratic elections as A, B, or C in the (overall) timetable."

Night shuttle launch planned

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle Discovery will lift off after dark Nov. 20 on a secret military mission, NASA announced today.

The space agency said after a two-day readiness review that launch would occur between 6:30 p.m. and 10:30 p.m., the third night liftoff in 32 shuttle missions.

Because Discovery's payload is classified, the Pentagon and NASA will not announce the precise launch time until nine minutes before liftoff to make it harder for Soviet reconnaissance ships sitting offshore to track the shuttle.

Sources close to the project, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the payload is a $300 million, 2½-ton satellite for monitoring Soviet missile tests and eavesdropping on military and diplomatic communications. Discovery launched a similar satellite in 1985.

Nov. 20 had been the target date for some time, but shuttle managers did not make it official until they had evaluated the readiness of the orbiter, the satellite, the global tracking network and all other mission elements.

The crew for the four-day mission is: Air Force Col. Frederick C. Gregory, the commander; Air Force Col. John Blaha, the pilot; and mission specialists Navy Capt. Manley L. Carter Jr., F. Story Musgrave and Kathryn C. Thornton.

Be sure to vote on offered changes

This is the final day to vote in the November constitutional amendment election and those who haven't voted yet should do so before the polls close at 7 p.m. The three local issues — proposing through separate referendums a pay increase for Midland's police officers and firefighters, and parimutuel wagering on horseracing in the county — have generated major local interest.

Also on the ballot are 21 proposed amendments to the state Constitution, involving a multitude of concerns.

On the question of a pay increase for the police and fire personnel, city officials probably were unwise to use the economic decline during the past several years as a reason to not give any raises across the board, although they would have been necessarily small. But now, it's also unwise for the police and fire personnel to assume that the city can give a 10 percent pay increase in addition to the 2 percent recently approved without wrecking the city budget, causing a taxpayer revolt or both.

Taken in that light, voters should not approve the pay increase being sought.

The pari-mutuel wagering issue has been reappearing over the past several decades. We think Midland County voters addressed the issue in an aboveboard fashion two years ago when 53 percent of those going to the polls said "yes" to parimutuel wagering. We believe voters should again support the issue.

On the statewide portion of the ballot, two of the most important issues are those concerning legislative pay and per diem pay or expense pay per day. We believe voters should approve both Amendment 1, which would raise the legislators' salaries from the current $7,200 per year to $23,358 per year and take future salary increases out of the voting process by tying them to the governor's salary, and Amendment 11, which would raise the per diem pay for legislators — when the Legislature is in session — to from $30 per day to $81 per day and tie it to the federal income tax allowable.

For too long Texas has attempted to obtain high quality state government from part-time legislators who were paid minimal salaries. Now's the time to change that trend and, hopefully, to get quality government in the process. Amendments 1 and 11 might not ensure that all those elected have the state's best interests at heart, but it would certainly make them less subject to the influences of lobbyists and that would be a start in the right direction.

All the other proposed statewide constitutional changes appear to be needed and justified with the exception of Amendment 7, which would remove the wording regarding bribery from the current oath of office taken by members of the legislature and other state and local officeholders.

The best argument put forward by supporters for the change is that removing the wording about officials not having used bribery to gain their offices is that it would increase the dignity of the ceremony. This appears to be an essentially self-serving amendment for officials and, frankly, we don't believe a denial of utilizing wrongdoing to get into office is inappropriate for officials pledged to uphold the public trust. Amendment No. 7 should not be approved.

Be sure to vote before the polls close today.

Another View:

It's creative judging!

Can a federal court levy taxes? When the question is put that way, as the state of Missouri is trying to do in the Supreme Court, the obvious answer is no. But it would be foolish for the court to deal with this controversy in Missouri's stark terms.

The state charges that an imperial judiciary has unconstitutionally raised Kansas City's real estate tax rate to pay for school desegregation. When the court agreed to hear the case, it was billed as a landmark test of powers of federal judges. After last week's oral argument, however, it should be clear that the lower courts haven't levied a tax and that the case won't live up to its billing. The fitting outcome would be affirmance of the lower courts or dismissal.

Drastic — and costly — measures are needed to cure the neglect that kept Kansas City schools segregated for decades after the Supreme Court's 1954 schools decision. Judge Russell Clark found them unhealthy, unsafe, "literally rotted," so decayed that the rain leaked into classrooms. His solution: Don't just patch the leaks; revitalize the system with decent buildings and "magnet" schools.

The Court of Appeals affirmed Clark's judgments about constitutional violations and upheld the scope of his expensive remedy. Those matters became final when the Supreme Court refused to review them. Both Missouri and school district were held responsible. The school board was willing but unable to pay its share because state law severely restricted its ability to raise enough in property taxes.

Even when a majority of the district's voters agreed to a higher property tax, the proposition failed because state law required a two-thirds majority. The lower courts responded by setting aside state law impediments, leaving the school board free to raise enough money.

In legal terms, authorizing elected officials to levy a tax is vastly different from a judge imposing the tax himself. It is familiar Supreme Court doctrine that state laws, even racially neutral ones, must give way when they obstruct a constitutional cure. For example, Nebraska has a law against transferring criminal trials beyond an adjacent county. That's ordinarily constitutional — unless, the high court said in 1976, it deprives a defendant of an impartial jury.

Once billed as a High Noon for judicial activism, the Kansas City case is best understood as creative, discreet judging in an extremely complex dispute.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Nov. 7, the 311th day of 1989. There are 54 days left in the year. This is Election Day.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 7, 1917, Russia's Bolshevik Revolution took place as forces led by Vladimir Ilyich Lenin overthrew the provisional government of Alexander Kerensky.

On this date:

In 1874, the Republican Party was symbolized as an elephant in a cartoon drawn by Thomas Nast in Harper's Weekly.

In 1885, the transcontinental Canadian Pacific Railway was completed as the last spike was driven at Craigellachie.

In 1916, Republican Jeannette Rankin of Montana became the first woman elected to Congress.

In 1918, during World War I, an erroneous report from the United Press that an armistice had been signed set off celebrations across the country.

In 1929, the Museum of Modern Art in New York City opened to the public for the first time.

JACK ANDERSON

Democrats resigned to lose in 1992

WASHINGTON — The money men behind the Democratic Party have quietly agreed among themselves that President Bush, barring a setback of magnitude, will be unbeatable in 1992.

Jack Anderson

Their hope is that he will suffer a setback in the next three years that causes the American people to lose confidence in him. Meanwhile, they are preparing a sacrificial lamb just in case he does not. The Democrats have already fixed their eyes on 1996 when Bush will not be eligible to run again.

With only one Democratic administration since 1968 — the disastrous four years of Jimmy Carter — party fund-raisers are grumbling about throwing good money after bad in presidential races that are a done deal.

They are looking to a relatively cheap campaign in 1992 and expecting to lose. Now they need someone who is willing to be the loser. Sources told our associate Les Whitten that one prospect for the fall guy is Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, who came out of his vice presidential run in 1988 with his dignity intact, even though he did not have much voter appeal.

A second plan under discussion for 1992 is to persuade a strong candidate who has not run before to take on Bush, even with the near certainty of defeat. In return, that candidate would have the party's unwritten assurance that he would be backed to the hilt in 1996.

Three men are being considered under that scenario:

■ Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey is the one that the party's fund-raisers believe could bring in money — an instant $3 million or more in start-up costs if he announces his candidacy in 1991. Bradley opted out of the race in 1988, but he put out feelers that indicated he would be a durable and likable candidate.

■ Gov. Mario Cuomo of New York could bring together the ethnic, labor, Eastern, liberal consensus that got Democrats elected in their salad days. But Cuomo is not the type of guy to embarrass himself in a hopeless race. He has made it clear to friends that he is not interested in running as a loser.

■ Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia could lure back the South, pacify Democratic conservatives and soothe the fears of big business without alienating blue-collar voters. But Nunn is also not the type to take a fall. He has indicated that he does not want to run against heavy odds.

The conventional public wisdom is that Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee and Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, both of whom made respectable runs in 1988, will try again in 1992. But, in fact, Democratic insiders believe that is unlikely.

Neither one can afford to take a beating from Bush in 1992 if they want to run again as credible candidates in 1996 when they hope to be up against a weaker candidate than Bush. The label "perennial candidate" is the kiss of death in presidential politics, and it only takes two or three races to earn the tag.

Jesse Jackson is still the Democrats' loose cannon. He is not known for his willingness to strike deals with the party, nor to buy into a master plan for the future. Jackson has yet to make any significant repairs to the vacant, rundown house he bought in a lower-middle-class neighborhood in Washington, D.C. Political pundits watch the house as much as they watch Jackson. If he takes up residency, it could mean he plans to run for mayor of the capital city. In that position, Jackson would try to revive the financially shaky, drug-wracked city and build himself to be a major force in 1992 or 1996, or both. The perennial tag will continue to slide off of Jackson like Teflon.

Some of the more imaginative "deep pockets" among the Democrats talk of picking Jackson as the vice presidential candidate in 1992. If he made a good showing in that campaign, even as a loser, he could be picked for the role again in 1996.

MINI-EDITORIAL — An increasing number of freshmen members of Congress are choosing not to accept speaking fees from special-interest groups. We hope that the trend is rooted in conviction and is not simply naivete. Their seasoned brothers and sisters justify honoraria by saying that it is merely the way the system works. The more members of Congress there are who opt for a new system, the more embarrassed the good old boys and girls will be about this blatant attempt to buy influence.

CHARLEY REESE

Government needs to learn proper accounting

No one needs to tell you the federal government is floundering in a financial and fiscal mess. If we in the private sector handled our finances and bookkeeping the way the federal government does, we'd all be in prison.

Charley Reese

The question is, can it be fixed? The answer is yes. To take just one slice of the problem — a total lack of a uniform and acceptable accounting system — the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants (AICPA) has four mighty good suggestions.

These are: (1) creation of a chief financial officer of the U.S.; (2) adoption of uniform federal accounting and reporting standards; (3) requirement that all departments and agencies issue annual statements of financial position and results of operations; and (4) mandated independent audits of those statements.

These recommendations are going to be publicly discussed in Washington on Dec. 11 at an AICPA meeting at the National Press Club. Hopefully, enough public support can be generated to force the pols to adopt them.

Now accounting to non-accountants is similar in comprehensibility to Egyptian hieroglyphics. I speak from experience. In my reporting days, I was proud of the fact that I could interview anyone from a surgeon who specialized in inner ear operations to a nuclear physicist. By admitting my ignorance and asking enough questions, these folks could generally help me to understand what they were saying.

My one frustration came from a school finance officer, a Ph.D. in accounting. No matter how many times I rephrased the questions and no matter how many questions I asked, I never did figure out what that guy was talking about. This bothered me so much that years later, when I had a few spare hours, and out of just plain curiosity, I enrolled in a college accounting course at night school.

After two semesters, I was still not qualified to keep books for a one-man hot dog stand, but at least I understood why I hadn't understood that school finance officer all those years ago. Accounting is a closed system and the words used in it have specific definitions that don't necessarily transfer to common street usage.

But it is critically important. In plain words, it's an up-to-the-minute financial history of the operation which allows you, at any given time, to know exactly what you've got, both in cash, stuff, and money-owed-you, as well as what you are spending and are obligated to spend both in the short term and the long term.

Without a good accounting system, a business or government is flying in thick clouds with no instruments and bad static on the radio. You don't know where you are, where you are going, or what's coming your way. You don't know if what you are now doing is working well and you have no rational means to estimate how effective something else might be.

That about describes the situation in Washington. I heard one California congressman, trying to justify a certain dollar amount in aid for earthquake damage, say, "Well, when something like the B-2 bombers comes up, we find the money. We can find the money for this."

Dearly beloved, nobody finds money except treasure hunters and bank robbers. The poor guy obviously had not the foggiest notion of the financial condition of the government. He had to resort to an emotional argument to justify a financial decision.

The government requires us to keep our books based on standard accounting practices. The Constitution requires it of the government. Let's insist they do it.

PEGGY ROBERSON

San Antonian expert on Inter-American affairs

WASHINGTON — Sally Shelton-Colby remembers walking on the streets of Schulenburg, Texas, when she was a little girl, hearing the townspeople speak the Czech and German languages.

Peggy Roberson

Her grandmother, a Czech immigrant, and her mother also used that language when they wanted to talk privately, but she soon caught on to what they were saying.

Shelton-Colby was fascinated by the international atmosphere in the town halfway between San Antonio and Houston, and by the age of 10 she knew she wanted to be an ambassador.

"I didn't quite know what an ambassador did, but I knew it involved peace and war and making lives better or worse," she said.

Shelton-Colby, interviewed last week in the Georgetown townhouse where she and her husband, former CIA director William E. Colby, make their home, said she realized that goal when President Carter named her ambassador to Grenada, Barbados and several other Eastern Caribbean nations from 1979-81.

Today, the 45-year-old San Antonio native is a specialist on Inter-American affairs. She is a consultant to Bankers Trust Co. of New York, responsible for political analysis of economic policy. She also counts as clients other U.S. and Japanese multinational corporations and advises them on investment decisions in Latin American countries.

Last month, she was a panelist at the Border Trade Alliance meeting here, and this week she will be at Texas A&M for a conference on the Latin debt.

Shelton-Colby grew up in Houston, and her father, H.B. Shelton, encouraged her to become a school teacher; her mother, Edith Pratka Shelton, told her to "be anything you want to be."

Shelton-Colby went to college on scholarships.

"I dreamed about living in France," she said. At Southern Methodist University, she majored in French and minored in Italian; won honors in French from the University of Missouri and earned a masters degree from the Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies in Italy. Then, to fulfill her girlhood dream, she studied in Paris as a Fulbright Scholar.

It was there that she met and married a young Mexican politician, Edwardo Jimenez Gonzalez, and went to live in Mexico.

"While the marriage didn't work, ... it exposed me to the thinkings and workings of a Latin American political system," she said. "I had to learn Spanish, and I got hooked on Mexico. By the time I came back to Washington (after her divorce in 1971), I had an intellectual grounding in how Mexicans think."

For six years, she was legislative assistant for foreign policy to Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas. That led to the State Department, where she worked on Inter-American Affairs, and to a stint at the United Nations.

Her five-year-old marriage to Bill Colby is, she says, "the best thing that ever happened to me."

The former CIA chief also is a consultant and lecturer..

The couple occasionally appears as a team, with Shelton-Colby discussing North-South relations and her husband handling East-West politics. "I would like to do more of that," she said.

Shelton-Colby spends half of every month in Latin America.

"Nothing takes the place of that" as a way of keeping in touch with developments, she said. But she relies also on a network of people — some on her payroll, some not — who supply her with information. And she sees a constant stream of Latin visitors to Washington.

She has offices in New York and at Georgetown University, where she is a professor of Latin American studies.

He is an attorney in a New York law firm with offices in Washington, Los Angeles and Paris. Each has an office at home, hooked by computer to their home offices.

Shelton-Colby talks vaguely of "winding down," but said her husband warns that she "wouldn't last 12 hours" if she didn't have a dozen competing interests.

As if to prove the point, the telephone rang and her husband called from upstairs, "Sally, it's MacNeil-Lehrer." Excusing herself, she discussed her background with a producer so that she could be properly introduced on the evening television news program.

"Just call me Sally Shelton," she advised. "That hyphenation business — Shelton-Colby — is a bit complicated."

In her spare time, after working 60-70 hours in most weeks, she is writing a book intended "for older women who marry and who are likely to have grown children to deal with." She says she has had "fairly serious problems with her husband's daughter and daughters-in-law" after marrying Colby, who also was divorced and is 24 years her senior.

Shelton-Colby says that after her divorce, she was convinced she would never marry again, but "then he came along and I fell, head-over-heels."

Because they are rarely in the same city, it is difficult for them to entertain. "We have a sailboat which we keep at Annapolis. It's my husband's pride and joy. We invite people for a sail on a summer Sunday now and then, but my traveling often interferes with that."

This power couple's idea of a delightful evening is one in which they can both be at home on their tree-shaded street, with the phone off the hook.

"We hibernate like recluses," she said. "I like to have some private time — to do the wash."

Convicted drug dealer says he gave Washington mayor cocaine

WASHINGTON (AP) — A convicted drug dealer's sworn testimony that he gave crack cocaine to Mayor Marion Barry several times is reviving questions about whether the mayor uses drugs.

Barry

Charles Lewis, 49, testified under oath in U.S. District Court on Monday that he gave Barry cocaine at least three times while Barry visited Lewis' room at a downtown Washington hotel late last year.

Despite many press accounts of investigations against the mayor, Lewis' statement was the first on-the-record, under-oath accusation that Barry, the city's mayor since 1979, had been given drugs.

"I'm not worried at all about this," Barry, who has repeatedly denied ever using drugs, told reporters Monday. He described Lewis as a "convicted felon" and added, "He'll say anything in court ... trying to save his own hide."

The federal investigation began in December when city police called off an attempt to make an undercover drug buy from Lewis on discovering that the mayor was in Lewis' hotel room.

Barry, who has described Lewis as an old friend, acknowledged making at least six visits to Lewis' hotel during that period. But the mayor has steadfastly denied using, seeing or purchasing drugs during those trips.

The mayor's attorney, Kenneth Mundy, scoffed at the defendant's comments.

"We question the credibility of the source," Mundy said. "Charles Lewis is a besieged and beleaguered man who knows that his only salvation comes by not giving truthful statements about the mayor."

Rumors about Barry's alleged use of drugs have persisted for years. In 1984, Karen Johnson, a convicted drug dealer, went to prison on contempt of court charges after refusing to tell federal prosecutors whether she used cocaine with Barry or sold drugs to him and other top city officials.

Barry, who is married, admitted to having had an unspecified "personal relationship" with Johnson, but denied ever using drugs with her.

Lewis' statement came as Judge Stanley Sporkin was reviewing a plea bargain calling for Lewis to plead guilty to two counts of conspiracy to possess and distribute cocaine.

The second count centered on Lewis' activities at the hotel last December, and made reference to Lewis distributing cocaine to one individual on at least three separate occasions.

"Because I don't want to look like a fool, was one of the individuals you gave cocaine to the mayor of this city?" Sporkin asked Lewis.

"We question the credibility of the source. Charles Lewis is a besieged and beleaguered man who knows that his only salvation comes by not giving truthful statements about the mayor."
— Kenneth Mundy, attorney for Mayor Marion Barry

As the defendant was preparing to answer, Assistant U.S. Attorney Judith Retchin asked to discuss the matter privately with the judge.

During the bench conference, Sporkin was overheard to say, "I don't think it fair that we read all this in the newspaper," apparently in reference to press leaks about the case. "He's under oath and should answer."

Sporkin then overruled the prosecutor's objections to the question and ordered Lewis to answer.

After hearing the query repeated by the court stenographer, Lewis replied, "Yes, your honor, crack cocaine."

When Sporkin reminded Lewis that he was under oath and asked him whether he was telling the truth, Lewis replied, "No question about it, sir."

Sporkin then accepted the plea agreement and the two guilty pleas under it. Sentencing was set for Jan. 8.

Lewis faces a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison and a $1 million fine for each count. Lewis had originally faced a 14-count indictment that included perjury charges and additional counts of cocaine distribution and possession, but prosecutors dropped 12 of those counts.

Lewis was convicted on cocaine distribution charges in the Virgin Islands earlier this year. His sentencing in that case was postponed indefinitely Monday as part of the plea bargain.

After the court proceeding, Lewis' attorney Alan B. Soschin predicted that Lewis will serve between 10 and 12 months in jail, the minimum called for under the rules governing the plea bargain.

As part of the agreement, Lewis is bound to cooperate with prosecutors in the District of Columbia drug investigation.

U.S. Attorney Jay B. Stephens refused to comment on the case, or whether Barry is now a target of the investigation. Barry has testified twice before the grand jury hearing evidence on the Lewis case.

Lewis, a former District of Columbia government official, had been a consultant to the Virgin Islands government. He said he was staying in the Washington hotel while looking for work.

Voters considering baseball, taxes, smoking, AIDS discrimination issues

Associated Press

Gay rights, a proposed smoking ordinance in the heart of tobacco-land, and the fate of a championship baseball club are among key ballot issues voters were deciding today.

In all, residents of 10 states will consider 56 statewide issues, 21 in Texas alone. Scores of citywide issues also are being contested in this off-year election. As has often been the case, many of the most controversial local contests are in California.

San Francisco Bay area residents, fresh from a major earthquake, weighed a proposal to raise more than $100 million for a new stadium to keep the National League champion San Francisco Giants from fleeing.

San Franciscans also were considering a "domestic partners" measure entitling unmarried couples employed by that city to the same funeral and sick-leave benefits as married couples.

The issue of discrimination against AIDS victims got its first-ever ballot test in nearby Concord, where voters were deciding whether to repeal a recent ordinance protecting the rights of those victims.

In affluent Irvine, voters were considering deleting a section of the Los Angeles suburb's human rights ordinance that outlaws discrimination against homosexuals. Backers of the proposal say the measure could promote immorality. Opponents including Mayor Larry Agran called the repeal effort homophobic.

Los Angeles, Washington, New York and Laguna Beach, Calif., are among cities with gay rights provisions.

In Greensboro, N.C., where the tobacco giant Lorillard Inc., employs 2,000 workers and more than half the city's registered voters smoke, voters decided whether to ban smoking in elevators and in certain stores, and require restaurants seating more than 50 people to set aside a quarter of their seats for non-smokers.

Kansas City, Mo.-area voters weighed a sales-tax increase to raise $14 million to wage a war on rising drug abuse.

Voters in New York City considered a sweeping charter revision to bring it into compliance with a U.S. Supreme Court order to make its legislature more representative.

In St. Louis, voters considered a 4-cent property tax hike to subside the St. Louis Symphony. Orchestra officials say they can't raise any more money from the wealthy or ticket buyers.

Special election reports planned

NEW YORK (AP) — Two television networks are planning brief special reports tonight on today's state and local elections while a third says it will cover the results in its regular news programs.

ABC plans to interrupt its programming with a brief special report when results on major races become available, then give more coverage in its half-hour "Nightline" show at 11:30 p.m. EST, according to spokeswoman Elise Adde.

NBC will have a 15-minute special report, "Decision '89," at 11:30 p.m. EST, said spokeswoman Katherine McQuay.

CBS plans to report on the elections in its regular news broadcasts, including up to an hour of coverage on "Nightwatch," airing at 1:35 a.m. EST Wednesday in some areas, 2 a.m. in others.

On cable television, Cable News Network will have election reports throughout the night, said spokesman Steve Haworth.

Major contests include races for governor in Virginia and New Jersey and for mayor in New York City.

Notice to Veterans

Resthaven Memorial Park is offering to all qualified veterans reserve burial space for nominal fee $70 required for endowment care.

ALL VETERANS who were discharged honorably are TECHNICALLY eligible for a final resting place in a NATIONAL CEMETERY.

As of January, 1987, the Veterans Administration reported that the present VETERAN population is almost 27.8 million people. At the present time there are only 65 National Cemeteries serving these VETERANS and their families. Between the year 1987 and 2000, 21 of these cemeteries will close. An additional 15 will be closed by the year 2020, leaving the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA in just 30 years with only 29 National Cemeteries to serve their VETERANS.

Because of this projected lack of burial space, A NEW VETERAN AREA is now being developed for VETERANS and their families in Resthaven Memorial Park. A book entitled "THE WALL" valued at $29.95 will be given to you free of charge for listening to our presentation.

As an honorably discharged VETERAN or still on active duty, you can purchase burial property in any one of our NEW VETERAN AREAS, but a limited number of spaces have been set aside for this special VETERAN'S offer. THE ONLY COST TO YOU IS $70. Which is the amount deposited in trust for maintenance and care.

VERIFICATION OF YOUR SERIAL NUMBER AND DISCHARGE IS REQUIRED. AS PART OF OUR PRESENTATION, WE WILL EXPLAIN FULLY THE REQUIREMENTS FOR VAULTS AND OPTIONS FOR MEMORIALIZATION, AS WELL AS SPECIAL PROTECTIVE FEATURES THAT ARE AVAILABLE FOR SPOUSES AND MINOR CHILDREN.

Please fill in all information on the reply card and MAIL AT ONCE. A Certificate of Eligibility for your burial property will be delivered to you as soon as possible. This program is not financed or connected in any manner with any governmental agency or veterans organization, thus federal benefits due you as a VETERAN are in no way affected.

We have set aside only a limited number of VETERAN SPACES in these areas, and since there are thousands of veterans and their families in the Permian Basin area, space must be assigned on first-come/first-serve basis. To assure your reservation, mail the attached reply card today or call 684-5462. This special savings limited to prearrangement.

FAMILY SERVICE DEPARTMENT VETERAN PROGRAM

Please deliver my VETERANS ELIGIBILITY CERTIFICATE and full information about your special offer to VETERANS including free book "THE WALL" and a copy of the PERSONAL PROTECTION GUIDE with information on Social Security Benefits, Wills, Etc., or call 684-5462 for information.

Judge allows logging in Northwest

SEATTLE (AP) — A federal judge has cleared the way for logging next year in some of the Northwest's oldest forests — prime nesting spots for the rare spotted owl.

U.S. District Judge William Dwyer on Monday ruled that an agreement reached by Congress that allows cutting of some of the giant trees is constitutional, according to Vic Sher, lawyer for the Sierra Club Legal Defense Club.

The order turned back a challenge by environmentalists and vacated an injunction against timber cutting on federal land in Washington and Oregon and a Nov. 13 trial of the environmentalists' lawsuit.

"I would hope we could start fairly quickly" to auction timber in 13 national forests affected by the lawsuit, said John Butruille, the Northwest's regional forester for the U.S. Forest Service.

Congress' compromise also requires the Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management to start protecting old growth trees, which are at least 200 years old.

Dwyer gave no explanation in his ruling, which upheld a section of an appropriations bill passed by Congress and signed by President Bush last month. The judge said an opinion will follow, according to Sher.

"What took him so long?" said Dennis Daughtery, president of the Contract Loggers Association.

The disputed trees "probably should have been hewed down over 100 years ago ... they're just taking up good growing room in the forests," Daughtery said.

"Obviously, we're really pleased," said Forest Service Chief F. Dale Robertson. "We're glad to see the court say we can continue."

Plainiffs contended Congress acted unconstitutionally in creating the one-year compromise crafted to satisfy the timber industry and the advocates for the owl, which nests primarily in the old growth forests of the Northwest.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is considering whether to list the owl on the endangered species list.

"It's a disappointing ruling for us," Sher said. "But our quarrel is not with Judge Dwyer or the federal court, it's with Congress which has put federal agencies above the law and stripped the courts of their ability to enforce the law."

"It's hard to say what the next step will be until we see the judge's reasoning, and we see how the Forest Service proceeds with implementing the new legislation," he said.

Neal Anderson looks at a selection of duck drawings ready for judging by five judges at the Interior Department in Washington on Monday.

Winner of stamp contest to become millionaire

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a darkened government auditorium five judges are sifting through 603 artists' works to choose the next official Duck Stamp for hunting licenses. But there's more than prestige on the line, for the winner also is likely to become a millionaire.

The painting for the new stamp, being selected today, will become the 57th Duck Stamp and bring instant recognition to the winner within the community of wildlife artists and conservationists — not to mention substantial economic reward.

Well over a million of the stamps with the artist's design will be sold for the 1990-91 waterfowl hunting season to be placed on hunting licenses.

For the federal government the stamp is a source of revenue for buying and protecting wetlands. Last year more than $13 million went to the Interior Department from selling the $10 stamps.

But the Duck Stamp, created in 1934 and produced every year since then, is much more than a source of federal revenue. It is to wildlife art what the Pulitzer Prize is to journalism and what the Miss America contest is to beauty pageants.

"For the wildlife artist there's nothing greater than the Federal Duck Stamp," says Neal Anderson, who won last year in his sixth try with a painting of a pair of lesser scaup nestled amid a growth of reeds in a pond.

Barred like every other winner from competing for three years, Anderson watched Monday as the judges reduced the 603 entries to 26 paintings for the final rounds. Some of the rejected works could get a second chance if chosen by a judge for reinstatement. Each judge has five such selections.

A commercial artist from Lincoln, Neb., who has specialized in wildlife art since 1974, Anderson says his life changed instantly after he won.

When you win "you're one of a handful of people that have a piece of U.S. history," he said in an interview, noting a sheet of stamps with his design now rests with 55 others in the Smithsonian. And, he says, the recognition of being a Duck Stamp artist does not fade with time. "You're always well respected," he said.

The government does not pay the artist a dime. But in recent years proceeds from the sale of prints have been lucrative, as have commissions from commercial use of the winning design on everything from T-shirts to commemorative plates.

"The artist himself should gross around $1 million or a million-plus," says Anderson.

The award transcends to the artist's other works as well, Anderson said, noting his other paintings sold more quickly and the value of his works in galleries rose 20 to 30 percent.

Although the government sold nearly 1.4 million stamps last year at $10 each, that was almost a million fewer stamps than were sold annually in the early 1970s.

Norma Oprand, chief of the federal Duck Stamp program, attributes the decline to the reduction of the waterfowl population. With fewer ducks there are tighter restrictions on hunting and fewer hunters to buy stamps.

Congress hoping to pass new debt ceiling by Wednesday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional inaction on a bill raising the federal debt ceiling threatens the government with default on Thursday for the first time in its history.

House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., said after closed-door meetings on Monday that leaders are hoping to pass a new debt ceiling in time for President Bush to sign it on Wednesday.

"We have decided to concentrate on extension of the debt ceiling while we are looking at other issues," Foley said after leaders tried to break the deadlock that has blocked passage of the higher debt ceiling and a big deficit-reduction bill.

The first effect of the stalemate came Monday when the Treasury postponed its weekly bill auction. Then, today, it announced the postponement of $40 billion in debt auctions this week.

"The postponement of these auctions is necessary because Congress has not completed action on legislation to increase the statutory debt limit ... " the Treasury said.

The latest postponment involved auctions of $10 billion in three-year notes today, $10 billion in 10-year notes on Wednesday and $10 billion in 30-year bonds on Thursday. In addition, the Treasury planned to sell $10 billion in 36-day cash management bills on Thursday.

The Treasury had planned to offer $16 billion in three- and six-month bills Monday, but postponed the sale "because Congress has not completed action on legislation to increase the statutory debt limit."

The Treasury lost further borrowing authority Oct. 31 when the debt limit reverted from $2.87 trillion to $2.8 trillion. Because it already has reached the lower limit, the government faces default on some of its debt as early as Thursday.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady said last week that if Congress fails to increase the limit by Tuesday, "the government will run out of cash and default on Nov. 9" when about $13.8 billion in Treasury bills mature.

"Each day that Congress fails to act, however, will cause additional disruption in our borrowing schedule, possibly resulting in higher interest costs to the taxpayer," Brady said in a speech to Maryland bankers.

"To avoid these potential costs and the prospect of default, immediate congressional action is imperative."

Disagreement over several issues are holding up the legislation.

NATION IN BRIEF

Cholesterol-free milk developed

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — Researchers have developed concentrated milk that's low in fat, free of cholesterol and can be stored in freezers, perhaps making unnecessary large plastic jugs that clog refrigerators.

"What we've done is to remove the milk fat, and replaced it with oil — corn oil, peanut oil, soybean oil or whatever," said George Bookwalter, a scientist at the federal Northern Regional Research Center in Peoria. "Basically, we add water and oil to non-fat dry milk."

The vegetable oil is free of cholesterol, unlike dairy fat, he said Monday.

The newly patented process could greatly expand milk markets and provide new convenience to milk drinkers.

"It's a very significant development for the milk industry," said Jerry Dryer, an Arlington Heights-based consultant to the food and dairy industry.

"It does a number of things. It extends the shelf life of milk. It makes milk available to more people, including the geriatric crowd that doesn't get out much, especially in the winter," said Dryer, former editor of Dairy Food Magazine.

"And it's an important breakthrough in that elimination of cholesterol is getting bigger and bigger in everybody's minds."

Explosion kills soldiers

YUMA, Ariz. (AP) — An explosion during an artillery test killed two Israeli soldiers and injured two others at the Yuma Army Proving Ground, authorities said.

An Israeli team was conducting firing tests of an Israeli-modified M-109 howitzer at the desert facility when the accident occurred, Army Capt. Stephen McGeorge said late Monday.

"The actual projectile or bomb did not explode," he said. "It was the propelling charge that went off. We don't know why it did."

The injured were taken to Yuma Regional Medical Center, but hospital officials would not release any information. The Israeli Army said in a statement issued in Jerusalem that the two soldiers were not seriously hurt.

No Americans were involved in Monday afternoon's explosion, a Pentagon official said.

It is not uncommon for countries buying equipment from U.S. contractors to first test artillery at U.S. facilities, the official said.

Three dead in shooting

ANDERSONVILLE, Ga. (AP) — A man killed his wife and mother and wounded two other family members before fatally shooting himself, but a blind man, a baby and two children escaped the rampage unharmed, police said.

Authorities said 28-year-old Tony Frederick started firing a shotgun at his relatives in his mother's home after an argument.

"He wiped his family out. I just don't understand. We may never know why it happened," Sumter County Sheriff Randy Howard said.

The shootings occurred at the home of Polly Mae Frederick in the southwest Georgia city.

Tony Frederick, who lived in Sumter County, and his 20-year-old wife, Gwendolyn, had gone to his mother's house to do laundry Monday afternoon, said Georgia Bureau of Investigation spokesman John Bankhead.

After the argument began, Frederick shot the two women in the head, killing both, Bankhead said.

Frederick's 33-year-old sister, Jackie, ran outside to lead their blind brother, LeRoy, to safety. But the gunman followed and shot his sister in the head, authorities said.

In her arms was her unharmed, 4-month-old baby.

U.S. attorney sworn in for Western District

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A West Texas lawyer, Ron Ederer, who says he is dedicated to waging the "war on drugs," is the new U.S. attorney for the sprawling federal-court system's Western District of Texas, which ranges from the Waco-Austin-San Antonio area westwardly to El Paso.

"Everybody's priority is drugs," said U.S. District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton. "Our preacher talks about (the evils of) drugs," and the FBI is putting a "major" effort on the drug war.

"It's a popular thing to be against drugs," said Bunton. "And I'm against drugs."

Ederer, 46, was sworn in Monday in El Paso as U.S. attorney by U.S. District Court Judge Harry Lee Hudspeth. Ederer, who succeeds Helen Milburn Eversberg who resigned from office to enter private law practice in San Antonio, is a former federal prosecutor and is a former part-time U.S. magistrate in El Paso.

He resigned as chairman of the El Paso Republican Party to accept the U.S. attorney's appointment.

"It's a political office and is recognized as such," noted Bunton. Ederer was nominated by U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, a Texas Republican, and was appointed by President Bush.

Ms. Eversberg, had been in office since 1984, when she succeeded then-U.S. Attorney Edward Prado who was appointed to the federal judgeship.

Bunton said he was "extremely pleased" that Ederer, an experienced prosecutor, was named U.S. attorney and became the top federal prosecutor for much of Central and West Texas.

And while "being a capable administrator is part of the job" of the U.S. attorney, Bunton said that it is crucial for the U.S. attorney to know about lawsuits and to be able to "recognize lawyers' capabilities."

Ederer has those qualities, Bunton said.

Ultimately, Ederer will be selecting the assistant U.S. attorneys — the prosecutors — who Bunton seeks to bolster the prosecution of drug offenders, particularly in the Western and Southern districts, which are being bombarded by drug cases.

Bunton is seeking a second prosecutor for the Midland-Odessa Division and a prosecutor for the Pecos Division, which is heavily burdened with drug cases.

"Our criminal docket is up over 79 percent from last year," said Bunton, who as chief judge, is seeking additional judges for the Western District, which now has seven active judges.

"Our statistics justify three more judges, and I want three, but I'm desperate for two."

Prosecutor Tom Beery said he is "extremely pleased" with Ederer's appointment.

"I have never heard anyone say anything bad about him," Beery said. "In fact, all I have heard about him has been positive. He has a real good reputation. I believe he will direct a lot of attention to this far West Texas area."

Beery said Ederer will concentrate on prosecuting drug offenders.

Another prosecutor for Midland-Odessa may be forthcoming within a month. It is uncertain when a prosecutor will be appointed exclusively to handle Pecos cases, Beery said.

But Bunton said beginning today, he will start dispatching letters to Ederer to encourage him to make that appointment.

"You can add all the prosecutors you want to," Beery said, "but who is going to try the cases?"

Like Bunton, Beery is hopeful for more federal judges to try criminal cases.

Big Brothers, Big Sisters looks for volunteers

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a series of articles about agencies that receive money from the United Way of Midland, which currently is involved in its annual campaign drive.

By DAVID MORRIS
Staff Writer

For Midland youngsters growing up in single-parent homes, a big brother or a big sister can make all the difference.

Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Midland is looking for people with a little time on their hands to fill a void in the lives of Midland children, said Linda Macias, executive director of the program.

Ms. Macias said Big Brothers/Big Sisters matches children from single-parent households with adults who act as friends, mentors and role models.

"We ask volunteers to commit to at least one year at three hours a week" to their "match," Ms. Macias said.

The commitment to a match is renewable until the child turns 18, she said, at which time an adult friendship "can continue and grow."

She said there are about 135 matches in the program. About 130 children are waiting for a Big Brother or Big Sister, though, and last weekend's shopping center recruiting efforts netted only about 10 new volunteeers, she said.

Carroll Calhoun, Big Brothers/Big Sisters board of directors member, said the need for male volunteers is especially great.

"For some reason, it's easier to recruit your female volunteers," she said.

Boys are matched with Big Brothers and girls are matched with Big Sisters, she said, but married couples can volunteer jointly and "adopt" a child of either gender, she said.

She added that the impact of the program on the lives of the children is significant.

"It offers an opportunity to these children of single-parent homes to develop an ongoing relationship with another caring adult," she said. "It's a wonderful program. I know that we have Big Brothers and Big Sisters now who were Little Brothers and Little Sisters at one point in their lives."

Brenda Voss, Midland's Big Sister of the Year and candidate for the national title, said prospective volunteers undergo a psychiatric screening before being matched with a child.

Children between the ages of 5 and 16 may enter the program, she said.

Many of the children in the program are socially and economically disadvantaged, and volunteers are given some say in the matching process, Ms. Voss said.

Dallas lawyer announces candidacy for attorney general

By DAVID MORRIS
Staff Writer

In announcing his candidacy for state attorney general Monday, Tex Lezar said Texas should eliminate parole for "serious" criminals and build more prisons to house them.

At a news conference at Midland International Airport, Lezar said he was "fed up" with judges and elected officials who are "too weak to fight for those changes essential to safeguard your family and my own."

Lezar, a Dallas attorney who served in the Justice Department of the Reagan administration from 1981-85, said he would work for tougher law enforcement if elected.

"It is time that the state of Texas took seriously the first duty of government: the duty to all law-abiding Texans to safeguard our lives, our families and our prosperity," he said. "It is time that the most basic need of all our people to live in safety came first, not last."

Lezar, who was assistant attorney general for legal policy under Reagan, blamed the current drug epidemic on the failure to keep criminals behind bars.

"The greatest single failure of Texas government in my lifetime is this absurd early release of criminals from Texas prisons," he said. "It is time to abolish parole in Texas, at the very least for those who commit the most serious of crimes."

He also called for stiffer sentences for serious criminals such as rapists, murderers, child molesters, and drug dealers.

"Drug dealers of all types deserve long mandatory minimum sentences," he said. "Any drug dealer who repeats his crime should be put away for his entire life. Drug kingpins deserve to die."

Longer sentences mean more jails and prisons, Lezar said.

"We've started to build new facilities and we will have to continue to build new facilities," he said. "We don't need to catch more criminals, but, rather, to keep the ones that we catch."

Ron Dusek, spokesman for the Texas Attorney General's office, questioned Lezar's proposals.

Dusek said the elimination of parole would not be necessary if jurors could take parole into account when making sentencing decisions, as they could under proposed constitutional amendment number 10 on today's election ballot.

"That way they have more control over the amount of time an inmate will serve in prison," he said. "Some inmates will be spending more time in jail."

Dusek said current attorney general and gubernatorial candidate Jim Mattox supports the construction of new prisons as a short-term solution to the crime problem.

"But he has said that that is not the only solution," Dusek said. "The long-term solution is education...so people won't have to resort to crime to make a living. The education thing is going to take several decades to turn around. So in the meantime, you put the bad guys in jail and you have to build more jails to do that."

Donors sought to dress Midland's 'live dolls'

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

Billie Karcher has three special friends who get together only once a year. For almost a decade they have met early one morning and pounded the shopping trail before breaking for brunch.

However, their shopping spree is not for themselves, friends or relatives. Each year they join financial forces to help a needy child, and the shopping day for 1989 has arrived again.

As part of the Midland Salvation Army's "Dress-A-Live-Doll" program, the women and other participants buy new clothes for hundreds of deprived Midland children for Christmas.

"I think it is the true spirit of Christmas," Ms. Karcher said today. "It is just an innate thing in us that when we see someone in need, we reach out. It's a good feeling to know you're helping someone."

Only 50 children received new clothes when the program started 15 years ago, said Ms. Karcher, who has been involved with Dress-A-Live-Doll since 1977. Last year the program provided attire for 700, she said.

Jim Choate, program chairman, said volunteers are working to top last year's effort.

Those who want to take part are given a description of a needy child and asked to buy a set of school clothes, including coats or sweaters. The recipients and the donors remain anonymous.

The names of needy children are submitted by Midland Independent School District teachers, among other sources.

The clothes are wrapped and given to the children, who range in ages from infancy to 14, several days before Christmas.

Choate said the theme of this year's drive, with first lady Barbara Bush as its honorary chairperson, is building the children's self-image through an improved appearance.

"We're filling a need by taking needy children and raising their self-esteem," Choate said. "That way they can deal better with negative peer pressure.

"It may be the first new set of clothes they've ever had in their lives. They're used to getting hand-me-down and second-hand clothes."

Midland man shot in leg

From Staff Reports

A 38-year-old Midland man was wounded at an apartment complex Monday when another man took away his .45-caliber pistol and shot him in the leg, police said.

Marion Ronald Smith, 3101 N. Midland Drive, was listed in satisfactory condition at Midland Memorial Hospital, spokeswoman Sue Ristom said.

The suspect, 33, was jailed on an aggravated assault charge. Formal charges are expected to be filed today, police Lt. Earl Luckey said.

According to police, Smith is married to the suspect's girlfriend. Smith drove to the other man's residence at the Old English Village, 4301 Andrews Highway, about 1 p.m. armed with a pistol, police said. The suspect emerged wielding a hammer, then reached into Smith's car and grabbed the pistol.

Smith was shot once as he was running away from the scene, according to police.

Drug radar plane plagued by problems, documents show

WASHINGTON (AP) — A costly Customs Service radar plane envisioned as a key weapon in the war against drugs is plagued by electronics problems and can't reliably guide interceptors to drug-smuggling aircraft, agency documents say.

"Next month marks one year that we have been flying" the first P-3 airborne early warning (AEW) aircraft, a Customs memo said on May 4, adding computer errors "still make air intercept control a difficult task."

The P-3 AEWs are designed to play a major role in drug interdiction from their Customs Service base in Corpus Christi. The government's multi-agency El Paso Intelligence Center reports 51 percent of the 112,000 kilograms of cocaine seized during 1988 arrived by air — 45 percent in private planes.

In September, the plane's manufacturer, Lockheed Aeronautical Systems Co., said it would commit additional resources to "upgrade" the plane's computerized tracker. The equipment automatically plots the course and speed of other planes, and its inaccurate readings have been largely responsible for difficulties in intercepting planes suspected of smuggling drugs, according to the documents.

"You can't use the system for interception, and that's what all this magic is about," said a Customs source, adding that the P-3's computerized altitude, course and speed readings are so inaccurate that radar specialists worry they could direct their interceptors into a collision with a drug plane. The source spoke on condition of anonymity.

John McGinnis, director of Lockheed's airborne early warning program, said in an interview the firm is making improvements in the tracker because of "anomalous behavior that we could not prevent. The plane is functioning, but there are problems with it and we are correcting it.

"The airplane and the tracker are very capable and doing their job," he said, adding the firm hopes to have the difficulties fixed by "the first of the year."

Other difficulties mentioned in the documents relate to the computer system that locates targets, faulty on-board communications for the crew, and problems with a spinning metal radar dome atop the plane.

Difficulties aside, sources speaking on condition of anonymity said reports critical of the plane's performance were ordered rewritten by an agency supervisor after one early test.

Despite the shortcomings detailed in the documents, Peter Kendig, acting director of Customs' Corpus Christi surveillance center, called the aircraft "a cost-effective piece of equipment, giving taxpayers one of best bangs for the buck in government today. It works and it works great."

He said the system for tracking smugglers has a "few glitches" that can be solved.

The first P-3 AEW aircraft has experienced both electronic and mechanical difficulties since the $27 million plane arrived at the Customs Surveillance Support Center in Corpus Christi in June 1988, according to the documents.

The documents show some of the problems afflicted a second P-3 that arrived in April at a cost of $30.6 million. Congress already has approved $35 million for a third P-3.

The P-3 Orion has been used for years as a Navy anti-submarine detection plane, but the Customs Service plane contains specially designed electronics for the drug war.

Identification of the authors of most of the documents was obscured by sources who made the material available to The Associated Press. The majority of documents were written by P-3 crew members, the AP was told.

The difficulties diminish one of the most important features of the four-engine turboprops: the ability to use the multi-colored computer displays, with their impressive interchangeable graphics, to direct Customs Service planes intercepting and pursuing the flying smugglers.

Kendig said the two P-3 AEW's were mainly responsible for detections leading to 36 arrests from Jan. 1 to Aug. 10 this year. Seizures included 37,000 pounds of marijuana, 8,300 pounds of cocaine, 17 vessels and vehicles and three aircraft, he said.

John Berezonsky, project manager for the AEW program at Lockheed, said in an interview the plane's problems "haven't prevented the aircraft from doing a hell of a job" and result from "trying to put so much information on display to the operator so quickly. We can track a greater number of targets simultaneously than anyone operating an AEW aircraft now. That's the key."

Yet the documents, and interviews with those knowledgeable with the program, said the mission has been hampered in a number of ways:

■ Planes that were possibly 300 miles away appeared as nearby targets. Single targets were displayed as multiple images. Targets were lost when the P-3's on-board computer system "crashed." Ships appeared at altitudes of 15,000 feet.

■ Agency officials accepted the first plane without the test flights designed by experts to create what a memo called "real world" conditions. The test plan, included in the documents, would have evaluated the radar equipment over every possible terrain, trying to see how well it detected other Customs aircraft playing the role of drug-smuggler planes. The evaluation was flown months after Customs accepted the aircraft.

■ The P-3's experienced numerous communications problems. Radar specialists in the back of the plane were unable to monitor pilots' transmissions, a handicap that would — according to a memo — "hinder safety of flight, and impede crew coordination." A memo warned of the potential for a "NORAD (no radio) situation," a total communications failure.

Doctor, ex-chaplain meet for first time since Korean War

AP Laserphoto

Alexander J. Turner of Brownwood, left, a retired U.S. Army chaplain and now a religion teacher at Howard Payne University, and Dr. Jesse Brown, a retired Army surgeon working at the hospital at Fort Hood, were reunited recently for the first time since serving together during the Korean War.

By HARRIETTE GRAVES

FORT HOOD (AP) — Thirty-five years ago, enemy fire made a direct hit on a U.S. Army bunker in Korea. Only two men survived.

For their efforts to help others wounded and dying under continuing heavy fire, each was awarded a Bronze Star.

Recently, the two men unexpectedly met again at this Army post in central Texas, and are renewing an old friendship.

Dr. Alexander J. Turner, formerly Seventh Division Army chaplain in the Korean War and now a teacher of religion, says he can never forget those days when U.S. soldiers died by the thousands just prior to the cease fire in Korea. He recalls his brush with death, shared by Dr. Jesse F. Brown, then division surgeon.

"The doctor and I had just left the bunker when the direct hit struck and everyone within the bunker died. Jesse and I were the only ones left," Turner said.

Turner said he and Brown worked three days and nights ministering to men from nearby bunkers who were wounded in the attack. "Bodies were everywhere. We couldn't move without stepping on one. I don't like to think back to those days, but they happened and I can't forget them," he said.

The cease fire came and the war ended in 1953.

"It was one of the most moving experiences of my life. Now I always look forward to seeing Chaplain (Alexander) Turner..."

— Dr. Jesse Brown

"Jesse and I went our ways, and didn't see one another for years to come," Turner said. "I used to think of the doctor and wonder what he was doing but we had lost track of one another. I never thought we would meet again."

Not too long ago, Turned decided that it was time for a physical examination since he hadn't had one in years. "I had heard of a very fine doctor at Fort Hood but could never get an appointment with him. I was told he was very, very busy. I knew the doctor's name was Brown, but that's all I knew," he said.

"Finally, I did get my appointment. Dr. Brown and I started to his office and we began talking. We chatted for a while and the doctor mentioned that something in my voice rang a bell, and he wondered if our paths had ever crossed."

Turner says he had not looked too closely at the Fort Hood doctor as they walked toward the examining room. The former chaplain told the physician that the only Dr. Brown he had known intimately was the division surgeon who served with him during the heavy fighting on Old Baldy in Korea.

"I told him that this doctor and I were the only survivors from a direct hit by the North Koreans," Turner said.

"I kept talking, telling the doctor that this Dr. Brown and I had worked day and night without sleep ministering to the wounded and taking care of the dead," Turner said. "I remember he listened, but for a while he didn't answer. I told him of the time this doctor and I sat down and literally wept together and prayed. We looked at each other closely at that moment, and I saw recognition in his face and tears in his eyes," Turner said.

"He slapped me on the shoulder at the same time, saying, 'I am that Dr. Brown you are talking about.' We actually embraced like old buddies and had so much to say to each other that we didn't even get around to the physical," Turner said.

"As I took a good look at him, I could see he hadn't changed all that much. He had just put on a bit of weight, and he said I had just grown a little older."

At a recent interview at Fort Hood, Brown echoed Turner's sentiments. "It was one of the most moving experiences of my life," the doctor said. "Now I always look forward to seeing Chaplain Turner, and yes, we finally did get around to that physical, but it was on his next visit here," Brown said.

Both men stayed in the Army after Korea. Brown retired in 1971. In 1978 he became a primary care physician at Fort Hood working under civil service. Turner retired from the Army in 1965, finishing his career at the rank of colonel at Fort Hood. Turner was dean of students at Howard Payne University in Brownwood after his military retirement, and began teaching at the School of Christianity in 1967.

"In Army life, everywhere we go we come across someone we had known before," Brown said. "I remember when I was on my way to Korea one of my old schoolmates recognized me," Brown said. "One of the sad things about Army life is we get close to one another but when we are moved to new areas and gradually lose track of each other," Brown said.

Brown and Turner say they are renewing their friendship. When they get together they say their conversation goes back to Korean War days. But they also have found other mutual interests, such as studying the changing times in the Soviet Union, which each man has visited at different times.

Baptist factions try to avoid controversy

By HOLDEN LEWIS

LUBBOCK (AP) — Groups from different camps within the state's largest religious denomination tried to avoid controversy Monday as they met on the eve of Baptist General Convention of Texas' annual meeting.

A pastors' conference — featuring a sermon from the presidential candidate of the more conservative camp of the Texas Baptist General Convention — met at the same time as the Texas Baptist Men, a missionary arm of the state convention that is controlled by moderates.

The factions, both of which prefer to be called conservative but are customarily called fundamentalists and moderates, are expected to wrestle for control of the denomination during the two-day meeting that begins today. About 2.4 million Baptists in 4,000 congregations live in Texas.

Moderates have maintained control of the state convention, though fundamentalists have controlled the Southern Baptist Convention for several years.

Delegates, called messengers, are scheduled Wednesday to elect a new president and two vice-presidents and consider resolutions on social issues including abortion.

Prominent moderates have called the pastors' conference a "pep rally" for fundamentalists trying to gain control of the state convention, and have decried its being scheduled during the meeting of the Texas Baptist Men. John Morgan, the fundamentalists' presidential candidate, was scheduled to preach at the pastors' conference, which featured prominent fundamentalists.

Rick Scarborough, pastor of Retta Baptist in Burleson and a fundamentalist leader who organized the pastors' conference, has denied any political motives in scheduling the unprecedented meeting. He said he didn't know it would conflict with the Texas Baptist Men meeting when he scheduled it.

The eve of the annual meeting was marked with a conciliatory air. At the pastors' conference, Jimmy Draper, pastor of First Baptist Church of Euless, told the audience of about 400: "Let us not be competitive. We're in the same business. We work for the same employer. We need to cooperate."

Scarborough told the audience to support the Baptist Men's meeting because "some of the greatest men of God in our convention well be speaking there."

Joel Gregory, a moderate and the outgoing president, said moderates and fundamentalists have few differences and "can stand together on the same postage stamp."

By tradition, Gregory is stepping down after two one-year terms. He is pastor of Travis Avenue Baptist in Fort Worth.

For president, moderates support Phil Lineberger, pastor of Richardson Heights Baptist in Richardson. Fundamentalists support John Morgan, pastor of Sagemont Church in Houston.

DEATHS

Eleanor Luton

Services for Eleanor Luton of Midland have been set for 1 p.m. Wednesday at St. Mark's United Methodist Church with Rev. Earl Ball officiating. Interment will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

She died Saturday at a local nursing home.

She was born Oct. 6, 1897 in Hunt County. She spent her early life in Ladonia and attended school there. She married Oscar M. Luton there on Sept. 14, 1917. They lived in numerous places until moving to Midland in 1941. She was the business manager for the first Western Clinic Hospital. She was also a librarian for a number of years and for a short time was office manager at Midland Memorial Hospital. She later served as office manager at Midland Theatre. She was a past president of the American Legion Auxiliary, the Business & Professional Women's Club, AMIE, Women's Society of First United Methodist Church and co-founder and initiator of the first Community Chest. She also served on the first Youth Center Board at Midland High School.

Survivors include one daughter, Sara Plautz of Madison, Wis.; one sister, Marian Scott Stalling of Sacramento, Calif.; two grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be directed to St. Mark's United Methodist Church, Methodist Home at Waco or to the Trinity Towers Auxiliary.

Lynn Rhea

Services for Lynn Rhea are set for 5 p.m. today at Asbury United Methodist Church with the Rev. Jim Teeter officiating. Burial will follow at Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Sunday at a local hospital from injuries sustained in an automobile accident.

Born Sept. 21, 1962 in Midland, he was raised here and in Houston. He was a 1981 graduate of Midland High School.

He married Sharon Taylor on July 31, 1987.

Rhea was a forklift operator for General Tire Co. in Odessa.

Survivors include his wife; one son, Kalyn Rhea of Midland; his parents, Gladys Rhea of Midland and Thomas Bostwick of Houston; four brothers, Thomas Bostwick Jr. of Houston, Gene Scoggins of East Texas, and Danny Scoggins and Bill Scoggins, both of Midland; one sister, Heather Bostwick of Houston; and several nieces and nephews.

Pallbearers will be Danny Scoggins, Gene Scoggins, James Taylor, Ronnie Taylor, Jerry Taylor and Jerry Lewis.

Gertha Griffin

Services for Gertha Lee Griffin of Midland will be at 3 p.m. Thursday at the Ellis Chapel with Rev. M.R. Thomason officiating. Interment will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

She died Saturday at a local hospital.

She was born Nov. 1, 1908 in Eufaula, Ala., and was reared in Alabama and Georgia. She lived in Dawson, Ga., for most of her adult life. She married William Griffin in 1935. He died in 1944. She moved to Midland in 1980 to be near her daughter. She had been in poor health for the past two years.

Survivors include one son, Young Zion Griffin of Hollywood, Fla.; two daughters, Bertha Busbee of Midland and Flora Kellogg of Ocala, Fla.; eight grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Barbara Essex

Services for Barbara Jean Essex of Midland were to be at 1 p.m. today at St. Stephen's Catholic Church with the Revs. Robert Kelly and Cliff Blackburn officiating.

Pallbearers were to be Lynn Durham Sr., Tom Welch, W.B. "Dub" Yarborough, Bobby Crues, Murray Fasken, Clarence Kerth, Lee Majors and Harry Bartel.

Honorary pallbearers were to be Sam Conner, F.H. McGuigan, Richard Henderson, Charles Eruin and Louis Hochman.

Alma Ramseyer

Services for Alma Ramseyer of Midland were to be at 3 p.m. today at the First United Pentecostal Church with Rev. T.H. Chapman officiating. Interment was to follow at Fairview Cemetery with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Pallbearers were to be Adrian Hamilton, Andy Goodwin, Roy Gene Blansett, Virgil Jones, B.J. Price and Glenn Gregory.

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

Local women on Hance's staff

From Staff Reports

Jess Ann Thomason and Mary Ann Allison Monday were named co-chairmen of Republican gubernatorial candidate Kent Hance's Midland County campaign.

The two women were among those in 150 counties to be selected to lead the local Hance for Governor campaigns and supervise the more than 5,000 volunteers across Texas.

In announcing the appointments, Hance said, "These people are some of the best grassroots leaders in the community.

"With their strong support I'm confident we will have the best organization of any campaign," he said.

In his campaign, Hance has outlined specific programs to deal with crime, drugs and education.

Hance is among four Republicans and two Democrats vying for governor in 1990.

On the Republican slate are Former Secretary of State Jack Rains of Houston, Midland businessman Clayton Williams and Dallas attorney Tom Luce.

Among the Democrats, State Treasurer Ann Richards and Attorney General Jim Mattox have announced their bids for governor. Former Gov. Mark White has hinted that he will challenge them in the Democratic primary.

Lee band up for UIL honors

From Staff Reports

Nov. 4 at Odessa's Ratliff Stadium, the Lee High School marching band was one of 12 5A bands elected to vie for state UIL honors Monday at the University of Texas' Memorial Stadium in Austin.

"This is the eighth time that the Lee High School band has been selected to compete in the state marching contest," commented band director Randy Storie.

The announcement was made following the Region B University Interscholastic League (UIL) competition. Permian High School of Odessa also will compete in the state meet.

Twenty-one West Texas bands participated in Saturday's competition. To qualify for the Region B contest, the bands had to successfully compete on the UIL district level.

The other West Texas bands eligible for state competition are: Andrews and Monahans, Class 4A; Crane and Denver City, Class 3A; Hale Center and Iraan, Class 2A; and Grandfalls and Sundown, Class 1A.

Remains found in pit

EL PASO (AP) — Police are trying to identify the skeletal remains of a female that were found buried in a gravel pit Monday.

Sgt. Dwain Johnson said a worker digging up the gravel pile discovered the skeletal remains around noon. Some clothing also was found with the remains, he said.

An autopsy was to be performed Tuesday, but police began contacting missing persons agencies to identify the remains.

Officials did not know how long the remains had been buried at the pit, but Johnson speculated the skeleton was one to three years old.

Johnson said the remains were not found in the area where the bodies of six women and young girls were found buried last year.

Ms. Voss, an Exxon executive, said her match with 11-year-old Shannon Moore was a challenge because Shannon came into the program with a lot of family problems.

"She's made me realize how fortunate I've been growing up," Ms. Voss said. "It's been trying at times...but things are fine now."

Now, more than two years after meeting Brenda, Shannon is 13 and appreciates the time Brenda spends with her.

"Whenever I have a problem I call her on the phone," Shannon said. "Now that I'm with her, I look at things differently...we talk a lot about what's right and what's wrong."

Although she spends a lot of time traveling, Ms. Voss said she tries to contact Shannon at least once a week. Together they do homework, cook, camp, hike and attend Exxon get-togethers.

Mark Linroth, Midland's Big Brother of the Year and a petroleum engineer, said he has been matched with 17-year-old Napolean Johnson for five years.

"When we first got matched, he was extremely shy...and after that he got sort of wild," Linroth said. He said working with Napolean has been a learning experience.

"What it means to grow up in a single-parent household, I didn't know," said Linroth, who added that his middle class Colorado upbringing was "straight out of 'Father Knows Best.'"

Linroth said he has been doing his best to build up Napolean's self-esteem and show him that he has potential.

"I want to make it real for him that, hey, you could be an engineer like me or anything else you might want to be," he said. "He knows there's engineers out there and he knows there's lawyers, but he doesn't realize that he could be one of them."

In a letter released by Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Napolean expressed his appreciation for Linroth.

"When it started, he was only a Big Brother," he wrote, "but over the years he's been like a father, brother and a best friend all in one."

DOLL

Ms. Karcher said most donors usually spend a minimum $100 to buy a full set of clothes, so Dress-A-Living-Doll officials are encouraging citizens to join forces to help a child.

Midland businesses also are being asked to buy clothing for a child, she said.

Ironically, a majority of the program participants are middle-class workers rather than affluent Midlanders, Ms. Karcher added. "That is a real sacrifice on their part," she said.

Ten area businesses are giving discounts to Dress-A-Living-Doll donors. The merchants are Anthony's, Beall's, Dillard's, Doug's Baby Store, Dunlap's, Kids Kountry, The Lollipop Tree, Margaret's, Sears and Upstairs Downstairs.

For more information call 683-3614 before Dec. 4. Gifts should be bought and delivered to the Salvation Army office, 300 S. Baird St., before Dec. 18.

Choate said participants who do not wish to shop for clothes can simply donate money.

Manufacturing drops in Latin America

Latin America's manufacturing sector, which had achieved an average growth rate of 5.2 percent during 1984-86, saw this rate dip to a very slow 2.1 percent in 1987, according to the Inter-American Development Bank.

The bank added that the great majority of the region's countries have not succeeded in stabilizing manufacturing growth rates during the past few years, which increases uncertainty and tends to hinder the private sector's investment plans.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR VOLUNTEERS

Be a part of it — volunteer. Here are just a few of the opportunities currently available at the Volunteer Center:

■ Looking for a once-a-month volunteer opportunity? Then consider assisting a local nonprofit group publish their monthly newsletter. Duties would include running a copy machine, maintaining a mailing list, and preparing material for mailing. Several agencies are in need of this one day service. You pick the agency that meets your schedule.

■ Your home could change a life. As a foster parent you can bring understanding, trust and love to a child in need. This is a special need that can be filled by a special person.

■ Temporary office assistance is needed by a health agency presenting a mid-November educational program. Volunteers are needed to take registrations over the phone, copy material, or run errands in the area. Check your calendar and help one or more days the first two weeks of November, 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

■ Work at home. Volunteer for this assignment with an agency providing education and advocacy for a national campaign against drinking while driving. Cut red ribbons to be used as reminders on car antennas during the campaign. Call early — there are thousands of ribbons to be cut. The agency will deliver and pick up ribbons for volunteers unable to travel.

For more information on how you can volunteer, please call the Volunteer Center of Midland at 697-8781.

Duchess visits inner city school

HOUSTON (AP) — After trips to the opera, a polo match and a private ranch, the Duchess of York ended her five-day visit to Texas at an inner city school Monday.

Sarah Ferguson, known as "Fergie," took part in an anti-drug program and was serenaded by more than 600 students at Blackshear Elementary School.

"She seemed like royalty," said 11-year-old Gary Williams, a fifth-grade student.

The duchess, who is married to Britain's Prince Andrew, came to Houston Thursday at the invitation of the Houston Grand Opera, which is saluting 300 years of British opera. Early Monday afternoon, she left on a flight to New York for a one-day visit there.

Royal-watchers who gathered outside the school Monday morning applauded her and some shouted, "We love you Fergie!"

The duchess participated in the school's Drug Abuse Resistance Education program, known as DARE, by joining students in an anti-drug play. She gave the school's library autographed copies of the "Budgie" books she has written for children. In turn, students presented her a book they had written.

"We thought she was very fun," Williams said. "We were excited to see her. She did some sketches with us."

The sketches involved students acting out criticism for students who are pretending to drink, smoke or use drugs.

During one sketch, the duchess showed her disgust for smoking by pulling her long red hair across her face.

"I think she was really concerned about the program," said Blackshear principal George Mundine. "She was very impressed."

The duchess then went to the school playground where students holding small U.S. and British flags were standing in a formation that spelled DARE.

"Your Royal Highness, the Duchess of York, from the boys and girls of Blackshear School, may I present to you these flowers and ask for your permission to sing," shouted 8-year-old Jermaine Thibodeaux, who gave the duchess a bouquet of yellow roses.

The students sang "Deep in the Heart of Texas," "Yankee Doodle Dandy," "You're a Grand Old Flag," "We are the World," and an anti-drug song.

"You really were very good, and are very good, and you look so smart," the duchess said.

She thanked the students for the book, "The Big Parade," and said her toddler daughter, Beatrice, would love it. The book, which is about the duchess going to the circus, was written by several students, Mundine said.

During her stay in Houston, Sarah, who is five months pregnant with her second child, was the guest of the family of Oscar Wyatt, chairman of Coastal Corp. of Houston. His wife, Lynn, is vice chairman of the Houston Grand Opera.

She spent Saturday night at the Wyatts' ranch near Hebbronville, but stayed the rest of the time at the Wyatts' mansion.

The duchess attended a polo match Sunday, where Great Britain defeated a Texas team, 11-6. Her father, Maj. Ronald Ferguson, captained the British team.

Her trip also included tours of the Texas Medical Center, Johnson Space Center and the High School for Performing and Visual Arts.

'Fergie' caught in downpour watching father play polo match

By ERIC LAWLOR
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — The rain fell so fiercely that the trophies filled up with water and had to be emptied before they were presented.

But the Duchess of York refused to balk or even use an umbrella, gamely handing the winning prize at the Houston Polo Club to her father, Maj. Ronald Ferguson, who led the British team to an 11-6 victory over a team from Texas.

The major scored one goal late in the game on Sunday to the evident relief of organizers determined he do his daughter proud.

The duchess, or Fergie as she is better known, bears the major a strong resemblance. His most striking feature — great tangled eyebrows — and Fergie's hair are the exact same color.

Handing him his trophy, she peered solicitously at a graze on the major's arm. She and her father are reported to be close. When his association with a London "massage" parlor came to light last year, she defended him throughout the ensuing controversy.

When the duchess arrived for the game, it was already in progress. When Fergie stepped from her car, her father rode over and blew her a kiss. The two chatted briefly and then she quickly stepped quickly into the presidential box, which became the royal box for the day.

Clad only in the green skirt and a pleated white blouse, Fergie was ill-prepared for the downpour. Those around tried shielding her with their umbrellas.

But it was only when she stepped onto the field at game's end did the skies open with a vengeance. By the time she made it to her limousine, a bedraggled, grinning Fergie was looking decidedly unroyal.

This was a red-letter day for the Houston Polo Club, whose fortunes are at a low ebb. Normally, these games are sparsely attended, said spokeswoman Tessie Patterson. Sunday's drew several hundred.

"Most of these people came to see Fergie," Patterson said, "and many of the others are supporters of the Boys and Girls Club of Greater Houston," the beneficiary of Sunday's game.

It is doubtful whether many will return. When announcer David Andrews said, "Let's do this again next year if it doesn't rain," he drew only weak applause.

The major, credited with doing much to popularize polo around the world, is Prince Charles' polo manager.

Though played in tough conditions, the game was a good one, said Andrews. The English were not riding their usual ponies, "but they're tough, strong players, and they came here intending to win."

Richards criticizes Clements' pledge for 'no new taxes'

AUSTIN (AP) — Democratic gubernatorial candidate Ann Richards is criticizing Gov. Bill Clements for his "no new taxes" for school funding pledge.

Richards

But the governor's press secretary says, "It's premature to be talking about additional funding."

The Texas Supreme Court has given the Legislature until May 1, 1990, to devise a new plan for funding public schools. The court said the current system unconstitutionally discriminates against property-poor school districts.

The governor, in a weekend speech, said new taxes are a no-no. "You can forget additional taxes. We're not going to have any," he promised.

Some experts have suggested that equalizing school aid could cost $2 billion or more.

"If it is (Clements' attitude), and if he continues that ... it suggests to the people of Texas that their elected officials are incapable of acting and they are going to vest in the judiciary the responsibility given to them as legislators," Ms. Richards said Monday.

"When you have a governor who does not want to address issues, who does not want to see problems resolved ... it has a tremendous effect on the attitude of the legislative body," she said.

Although the Legislature convenes for a special session next week, Clements says he won't put school finance on that agenda. Rather, he will call lawmakers back to Austin in the spring for school finance.

Ms. Richards said that by waiting "until the 11th hour — giving the Legislature approximately five or six weeks to address a monumental problem — there's a hint there that maybe he (Clements) doesn't think they will address it."

But Rossanna Salazar, the governor's press secretary, said Clements believes lawmakers should wait until spring so they can fully understand the situation.

"While it may be politically expedient to say that this issue can be solved now, it would be foolish and irresponsible to take up education reform unprepared ... There is no consensus at this point. Aside from what candidates might like to think, there will be sufficient time to deal with this issue next year," she said.

One of Ms. Richards' Democratic primary opponents, Attorney General Jim Mattox, said the dispute again shows the need for the state lottery he has proposed.

"I said from the beginning that this campaign would come down to a choice between a lottery and new taxes ... Ann Richards and (Lt. Gov.) Bill Hobby and everybody else can be for new taxes. I'm for a lottery," Mattox said.

In other political developments:

■ Ms. Richards unveiled a 10-point environmental plan, saying environmental protection would be a priority if she becomes governor. "For too long, Texas has suffered from leadership that places no emphasis or credence on environmental issues."

■ Ms. Richards said she didn't know what impact her campaign would feel by the expected entry into the Democratic primary of former Gov. Mark White. According to opinion polls, she said, "If anyone loses with the entry of White in the race, it's Mattox."

■ Mattox said he has become the first gubernatorial candidate to sign the Democratic Party's "pledge" for good behavior during the campaign. "It's about time that we let the Republicans bloody themselves up. Let them make the headlines with personal attacks, we'll talk about what it takes to lead Texas out of tough times," he said.

Check of old files results in man's arrest for 1960 murder

DALLAS (AP) — A check of old case files has resulted in the arrest of a 64-year-old Chicago man in connection with the 1960 slaying of a Dallas woman.

Dallas County Sheriff's Department investigators Gary Lachman and Tom Reilly last week came across an outstanding murder warrant naming Robert Lee Mitchell, who had been sought in the fatal shooting of his ex-girlfriend, Billie Marie Redmon Phillips on Sept. 20, 1960.

The only information that the men had in an old case file was that he had been arrested in 1944 in Dallas on a theft charge and that the U.S. Army had charged him with an unknown offense in 1942.

As the detectives do routinely, they asked for an information sheet on Mitchell from the FBI in Washington.

The FBI categorizes every person who is arrested by his or her fingerprints and files every arrest not by name, but by a number corresponding to the fingerprints.

When the detectives received the file on Mitchell, it included a 1985 arrest of a Billy Jackson on an assault charge in Chicago.

Chicago Police furnished the investigators with a telephone number for the man.

"We called and said we were doing a survey," Reilly said. "I talked to his wife. She gave me his name. She confirmed they lived at the same address. She even confirmed that he was in the other room reading the paper."

The detectives contacted the FBI in Dallas, which notified FBI agents in Chicago. The agents arrested Jackson, formerly Mitchell, Friday at his house.

"He was in the bathtub," Investigator Lachman said. "Then he made a statement in regard to the homicide."

"He was surprised he was arrested," Reilly said. "He didn't deny he was the same person."

On Sept. 19, 1960, a man tried to break into Ms. Phillips' apartment, but was stopped by police. The next day he broke her door open and shot her, police records state.

Ms. Phillips' sister, Audrey Lewis, who was 24 at the time, lived nearby and heard glass breaking and a shot fired. She ran downstairs and saw Mitchell standing in her sister's bedroom holding a pistol, police records show.

The man told Ms. Lewis, "I just shot her" and ran from the apartment, according to records.

Mitchell was indicted on the murder charge by a Dallas County grand jury in 1961, while he was still at large.

The next thing anyone heard about Mitchell was in 1975 when the FBI tried to arrest him in Oklahoma on an unlawful flight charge. Relatives told agents he had died. The FBI closed the case in 1980, sheriff's detectives said.

But the detectives knew that Mitchell was still alive because his Social Security number was still active, and no one had claimed death benefits on it.

The detectives said they are used to breaking old cases, they find about 50 wanted criminals a month, but none as old as 29 years.

"We got excited," Reilly said. "You don't clear one this old too often."

Reilly said Mitchell will be extradited to Dallas, where he will have to stand trial.

"The court still wants the guy," Lachman said. "If it wasn't for us two, he'd be scott-free."

Phillips' use of subcontractor crews questioned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of a House committee investigating a deadly explosion at the Phillips Petroleum Co.'s petrochemical complex on the Houston Ship Channel is questioning the safety of using subcontractor maintenance crews instead of regular employees.

Rep. Tom Lantos, the chairman of the House Government Operations subcommittee on employment and housing, said use of cheaper contract labor may involve safety tradeoffs and lead to tragedy.

"We are dealing with complexes of enormous potential danger ... and instead of trying to build a stable workforce under one management, providing them with uniform procedures of training, evacuation, safety, etc., you're sort of pulling in people through contracting outfits at a dollar savings, but potentially at a very high cost in human lives," Lantos said Monday.

"You're not dealing here with a catering operation," said Lantos, D-Calif. "We are dealing with life-threatening materials in enormous quantities."

Lantos' committee is investigating the Oct. 23 explosion at Phillips' Pasadena plant, which left 19 dead and four missing and presumed dead. More than 100 others were injured, and six remain hospitalized.

Officials of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union blamed the explosion in part on Phillips' practice of using subcontractor maintenance crews.

"We believe the evidence will show that this catastrophe was a disaster waiting to happen," said union vice president Robert E. Wages.

Wages told the panel that the fire and explosion, which sent debris hurtling as far as six miles and broke thousands of windows throughout the community, portends even greater disasters to come.

"On the day of the catastrophic release (of a cloud of gas ignited by an unknown source) it has been reported that the subcontractor crew was 'unfamiliar' to a regular employee. Another regular employee reported that one member of the Fish crew was unable to speak English," Wages testified.

Wages said Fish Engineering and Construction has been the primary maintenance subcontractor at Phillips' Houston Chemical Complex for several years, employing 225 workers to supplement about 145 maintenance craftsmen employed directly by Phillips.

Wages said the Fish subcontract workers earn about 65 percent of a Phillips worker's wages.

Glenn A. Cox, president and chief operating officer of the Bartlesville, Okla.-based company, said the facts of the accident "speak very clearly" to the question of how Phillips staffs its plants.

"One of the key questions we have to address is how in fact work is assigned — who does work — to make certain there is not a compromise in safety in these facilities," Cox said.

Cox said qualified contractors, however, do have a role in the chemical plants. He said the company's review of the accident would include an examination of the labor mix.

Wages said a preliminary investigation has identified two other primary factors in the Phillips' explosion — an inadequate maintenance "lock-out" policy during work on live systems, and an "inherently flawed reactor design."

Other factors, he said, include pressure to keep up production rates, a flawed alarm and evacuation program, and inadequate enforcement by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, coupled with a lack of appropriate regulations.

Gerard F. Scannell, assistant secretary for OSHA, said OSHA has conducted nine inspections at the Pasadena plant since 1972, but its last wall-to-wall inspection was in 1975.

Gramm opposes official language

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm is dismissing a Republican-fueled movement to establish English as the official language.

"America is a country of great diversity, but its goal should be an educational system where everyone learns the skills necessary to advance," Gramm said Sunday at a fund-raiser. "But passing a law or a resolution is a poor substitute for changing the reality."

Gramm joked that he is sensitive to the subject because "being a redneck, English is not my native tongue."

The movement to make English the official language is active in several states, including Texas.

The Republican senator from Texas said he favors every student learning a foreign language and said it is "shameful" that Americans are illiterate in languages other than English.

Gramm faces state Sen. Hugh Parmer, a Democrat from Fort Worth, in a re-election bid next year.

"San Antonio Leadership for the '90s" was host to the Gramm fundraiser, adding $10,000 to the senator's campaign coffers, according to a group spokesman.

Zoo hopes tigers mate

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A pair of Sumatran tigers are getting to know each other as San Antonio Zoo officials look forward to spring, when the pair is expected to mate.

Manfred and Darla arrived in San Antonio three months ago and are the first Sumatran tigers housed at the zoo, curator Russell Smith said.

The male tiger, Manfred, came to town via a zoo in the Netherlands. Darla is from the San Diego Zoo. Smith said the big cats are temporarily being housed in separate cages as they get acquainted.

"Cats are usually solitary animals, and we'll try to have them mate sometime in spring," Smith said. "We don't really want them to have a litter during the winter."

A year ago there were only 23 Sumatran tigers in North America, according to Smith. It is estimated there are 600 to 800 living in the wilds of Sumatra, but a shrinking habitat provides living space for no more than 200 tigers.

The only tiger at the San Antonio Zoo before the pair arrived was Cheytan, a mixed-breed tiger.

For years zoos mated tigers without regard for particular breeds, thus producing "subspecies," and not true Sumatran, Bengal or Siberian tigers, Smith said.

Manfred and Darla will be mated to produce a true breed of their species.

Cocaine seized from truck

HOUSTON (AP) — More than 1,300 pounds of cocaine valued at $60 million was confiscated from a tractor-trailer rig during a raid on a warehouse facility, authorities said.

Five men were arrested during the joint operation by the Houston Police Department's narcotics division and agents with the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration and the FBI, said Marc Riggsbee, a DEA spokesman.

The rig, registered with Coast to Coast Transport, Inc. of Brownsville, was loaded with cocaine packed in steel containers wrapped by bags from a fast food restaurant.

"We're still in the process of trying to get it all unpacked, but we feel there may be as much as 600 kilos," or 1,320 pounds, Capt. Dennis Schumann, of the Houston Police Department's narcotics division, said of the Monday raid. "You're looking at probably $60 million worth of cocaine on the street."

Schumann said the bust came after several months' investigation by the police department, the FBI and the DEA. The cocaine is believed to have been smuggled through Texas from Columbia.

Officers found the rig stuck in a ditch outside a warehouse in Southeast Houston. Authorities arrested the driver of the truck, two men working inside the warehouse and two others who were living in a home behind the warehouse.

Handcuffed suspect flees

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas police officers were left in a fog by a drug suspect who escaped from jail with his hands still cuffed behind his back, officials said.

Officials said Paul Anthony Busby, 30, vanished from a holding cell bathroom at the department's central patrol station about 4 a.m. Monday when an officer watching his area went into a cell to adjust a prisoner's handcuffs.

Nearly a dozen officers fanned out in the area surrounding the station, but could not find Busby, said Sgt. David McCoy.

"The fog was real thick at that time and there was no way to see much beyond the tips of your fingers," McCoy said.

Busby was arrested Sunday night as part of a drug investigation, police said.

Bentsen to speak at UT

AUSTIN (AP) — U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas will be the speaker at the University of Texas-Austin commencement for Dec. 10, it was announced.

Bentsen is a 1942 law graduate of the university.

UT President William Cunningham called Bentsen "a highly respected national figure, who has had a preeminent career in public service and in business."

"He rightfully had been deemed a Distinguished Alumnus of UT Austin and we are honored that he will be with us for this significant occasion," Cunningham said.

In 1988, Bentsen was the Democratic Party nominee for vice president of the United States on the ticket headed by Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis.

Bentsen has served in the Senate since 1971, where he is currently the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

Budget balance increases

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas state government wrapped up the 1989 budget year with a cash balance of $296.8 million, more than twice the 1988 balance, Comptroller Bob Bullock reports.

Coming on the heels of the oil price plunge and subsequent state budget crisis, the General Revenue Fund's ending balance was only $113.3 million. The fund is the state's main bank account.

The state's 1989 fiscal year ended Aug. 31, and Bullock reported Monday that the improved cash balance reflects "continued improvement and diversification in the Texas economy.

Officer marries man suspected of using her gun in slaying

GALVESTON (AP) — A police officer suspended since her gun was used in the fatal slaying of a 50-year-old Galveston man last month said she has married the alleged assailant by proxy.

Galveston officer Elona Stinson, 31, said she married ex-convict Emanuel Tyrone Herron, 44, on Friday despite his incarceration at the Galveston County Jail.

"When my husband gets out of jail, we will go before my father, the Rev. Lemuel Stinson and renew our vows," Ms. Stinson told the Galveston Daily News.

Herron remains jailed in lieu of bonds totaling $61,500 in connection with the Oct. 21 slaying of Kelvin King.

Police found King with a gunshot wound to the upper chest, lying on his back on Ms. Stinson's porch. King, Ms. Stinson's former boyfriend, was pronounced dead on arrival at John Sealy Hospital. The couple had ended their relationship three months before the shooting, Ms. Stinson said.

Ms. Stinson, who had summoned police, told officers Herron fled the scene. He was arrested a few minutes later. Police said Ms. Stinson's .357 Magnum Colt Python revolver was used in the shooting.

Ms. Stinson, who has been a Galveston police officer since April 1985, contends the shooting was self defense. She was suspended from the force with pay, pending the outcome of an investigation.

Court records show that at the time of the shooting, Herron was on parole from a life sentence for robbing a Galveston grocery store in 1981. He already had been imprisoned twice before for robbery and felony charges, which prompted the life sentence as a habitual offender, according to a spokesman from the Galveston County district attorney's office.

Ms. Stinson said she married Herron because she loved him and not to secure the legal privilege of refusing to testify against her husband in the murder trial.

The wedding took place in the chambers of 212th District Judge Roy Engelke at about 1:30 p.m. Friday. The groom was in jail and the bride's brother, Jerome Stinson, stood in as the proxy groom as the judge read the wedding vows.

The couple had contacted Deputy County Clerk Shirley Ann Grice on Friday, and she arranged for the wedding license and a special court order permitting the waiver of the 72-hour waiting period. Engelke signed the waiver and an affidavit permitting the groom not to appear personally for the ceremony "because he is in county jail."

But Engelke said later that he didn't know the bride was the suspended police officer nor that the groom was the suspect in the slaying.

"This smells, doesn't it?" Engelke told the Daily News, explaining he had performed the wedding perfunctorily. "I'm not one of those marrying judges."

Boy hostage in care of grandmother

HOUSTON (AP) — A grandmother has been awarded temporary custody of a 15-month-old boy held at knifepoint by his mother over the weekend, Harris County officials said.

Barbara Levis was awarded temporary custody of Brandon Duke after he was released from a local hospital Saturday. The child was rescued by a SWAT team about 4:45 a.m. Saturday after his mother had held a knife to his throat for more than 14 hours, keeping his grandmother and officers at bay.

Brandon was treated for slight dehydration and minor cuts, said Harris County Children's Protective Services spokeswoman Judy Hay.

Investigators said the child's mother, Tracy Levis, 24, remains in the Harris County Jail charged with two counts of aggravated assault and one count of injury to a child. Bail was set at $300,000.

Officers said Tracy Levis had been hallucinating during the ordeal and that she had had a history of mental problems.

Comet Cleaners handles clothes with care

"It's been a long, hot summer and maybe a dry cleaners was the last place you wanted to go — but come you did," said Billie Jo Corbell, Comet Cleaners owner, "and your business was really appreciated. Thank you!"

"If we can answer any questions, or help in any way in getting your wardrobe ready for fall and winter please let us know. This is especially so if you have some problem garments you are worried about."

Billie Jo opened the first Comet Cleaners on Midland Drive in September 1982 and now there are four locations to choose from.

"Drop your pants" at Comet has been a logo special since the day Comet opened. "Lots of people have stopped by to have pictures made in front of a sign," commented Billie Jo. "One lady sent her picture into a TV show and won a T-shirt when it was shown on the air. It's nice to have people than you for giving them a laugh on a day that hasn't gone so well."

Billie Jo and her family have been West Texans all their lives and chose to make Midland their home and the home of their business.

At Comet Cleaners, you can expect same day service on drycleaning and laundered shirts and jeans. One hour service is available at the 3108 W. Cuthbert and 2606 N. Midland Drive locations.

The management and staff of all Comet Cleaners locations are trained to help you determine the best way of working with your clothes and other fabric items. They can help you decide if something needs some added starch, or laundering instead of dry cleaning. If you're not sure, just ask — they will be glad to help or offer advice.

Because Comet takes extra care about its customers and their clothing, no expense is spared for professional chemicals and service. Comet is a member of the International Fabric Care Institute and Billie Jo attends nearly every convention to learn more about fabrics, care and clothing styles of the seasons.

"When we know what is going to be in style ahead of time," she said, "we'll know early on how to handle it."

Billie Jo suggested that during this current change of seasons, be sure to have your summer clothes cleaned before you store them away. If not, and they are stained, there's a good chance that moths will get to them and either eat the fabric or weaken it substantially. It's also important to dry clean or launder your clothes before stains set in.

For more information on dry cleaning and clothing care, feel free to visit Comet Cleaners for a tour and you will be able to see how your garments are processed. The staff will gladly give you any information needed for fabric care.

At Comet Cleaners, your clothes will not smell like heavy solvents as is the case with many dry cleaners. Comet uses expensive, professional dry cleaning materials, and they do not leave a lingering odor on your valuable clothing.

Another Comet advantage is the handy drive through service at each location. Mothers with children or those in a hurry to get to work will appreciate this added convenience.

The Comet Cleaners special is comforters any size, dry cleaned for $16.00. The regular price is $20.00 to $25.00. Have your comforter in by 9 a.m. and it will be ready by 6:00 p.m. The daily pants special is 3 pairs dry cleaned for $3.99.

Other Comet Cleaners specials and services include:

- Dry cleaning on Saturdays;
- Hand wash (professional finish)
- Minor alterations (hems, zippers and mending) in before 9:00 a.m., out by 5:00 p.m. Monday through Friday
- Major alterations and professional tailoring Monday through Friday
- Wedding gowns cleaned and boxed
- Leather and suede cleaning
- Draperies
- Blocking
- Moth proofing
- Water proofing and deodorizing
- Free repairs on minor needs and a small charge on some garments.

So come by any of the four Comet Cleaners locations and see for yourself the Comet difference. Stores are located at 3108 W. Cuthbert, (one hour service available) 2606 N. Midland Drive, (one hour service available) 2106 N. A Street (package mailing, UPS and gift wrapping available) and 3308 W. Illinois (Nickel Cleaners — small gifts and unique jewelry). For further information, please call the main office at 689-9723.

Don't let these ghouls stop you from "dropping your pants" at this Comet Cleaners location, 2606 N. Midland Drive, as well as the other locations convenient throughout Midland. Take advantage of easy drive through service and attention to service. The employees recently dressed up for Halloween.

A student in a Bell Safety Medic First Aid class learns to properly administer CPR, along with six other basic skills of patient care. Classes are forming now, so please call 694-9653 for more information.

Bell Safety, a division of Bell Petroleum Services, Inc. in Midland, provides a full range of safety equipment and service for the oil and gas industry.

In addition to the rental, sales and service of safety equipment, Bell Safety offers a wide range of safety related training, including an easy to learn and understand Medic First Aid program.

Medic First Aid is a slide-tape, lecture and practical skills course of study designed to be taught in approximately seven hours and 45 minutes. It is flexible...the program can be tailored to address the particular tasks of your workplace.

Training is designed to help the bystander, citizen or co-worker be the first link in the emergency medical care chain. The course follows along with paramedic and EMT training programs.

The course was designed to provide a student of average intelligence and education with a systematic approach to the rendering of aid to a sick or injured person on an emergent basis until skilled medical personnel arrive.

Medic First Aid attempts to prioritize the rescuers approach based on the most vital needs of the person being aided.

As an example, the preservation of the Airway, Breathing and Cardiac function are felt to have the highest priority in patient aid. The rescue methods to preserve these functions are taught first and reinforced throughout the program.

Seven basic skills are taught in depth and provide the performance objectives each student must master in order to successfully complete the course. These skills are:

- CPR (cardio pulmonary resuscitation);
- obstructed airway;
- control of severe bleeding;
- shock;
- care of the unconscious patient;
- patient assessment (simple vital signs and symptoms);
- patient evaluation (secondary survey)

The designers of the Medic First Aid program agree that knowledge of these skills are essential to the administration of meaningful aid. Specific aid measures, signs and symptoms, priorities and prohibitions are covered in the text and in the course media and lectures. The text is designed to be kept by the work at the time of need.

It is felt the student will retain the seven basic skills and when used in conjunction with the reference manual, will provide adequate first aid over a longer period of time than will more conventional first aid courses.

The seven modules of instruction are designed to build on previous knowledge acquired in the course. They are fast paced to hold the students active and alert.

The end result has shown to be a meaningful and enjoyable experience for the students.

The standards for Medic First Aid come from the Journal of the American Medical Association Standards and Guidelines for CPR and the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons.

Medic First Aid is approved by the U.S. Department of Labor, Mine Safety and Health Administration.

Bell Safety instructors provide a pleasant low-stress environment in which the instructors can develop the students' skills and confidence.

Instructors give clear, concise answers to students' questions while auditing knowledge and skill development, using positive reinforcement. These ingredients always provide for a smooth flowing class.

The most important goal of Medic First Aid is, however, to give a student confidence and knowledge to render aid in an emergency situation.

Call now for information on Pediatric First Aid classes scheduled to begin in December.

Bell Safety recognizes the ever present need for safety in the workplace and is offering a wide range of training courses to meet or exceed your needs.

Chaney's Jewelry offers personal service, appraisals, custom designs

Midland's newest jewelry store, Chaney's Jewelry, is backed by 31 years of service to the people of West Texas. This family owned full-service store, located next to Service Merchandise, is operated by Chris Chaney. Chaney is a registered gemologist, designer, appraiser, repairman, engraver and artist.

"We specialize in offering a large selection of competitively priced fine jewelry, and being more than just another store," said Chaney. "I want to be your personal jeweler."

And personal service is what you can expect from Chaney and his sales assistant, Nancy Aguirre, a 12-year employee of the old Kruger Jewelry stores in Midland. "You talk to the owner when you come in the store," explained Chaney.

"I can assure you that you will get the best possible value. We want to make sure everyone is satisfied. Our philosophy is that you will be happy with your purchase for years to come and will come back."

This attention to customer satisfaction was passed down to Chaney by his father, Robert, a long time watch repairman for Kruger Jewelers and owner of a fine jewelry store in Big Spring since 1958.

Chaney's Jewelry features an excellent selection of dinner rings, gentlemens' rings, bracelets (including men's link and ladies' tennis), earrings, free style rings and necklaces. Also in great supply are gold chains, wedding sets, pearls, Speidel bands and bracelets and silver trays.

A special showcase of precious stone jewelry is on display with dazzling examples of fine craftsmanship and color. Chaney's Jewelry features lovely blue topaz and amethyst rings in unusual cuts and colors. Sapphires and rubies are found in traditional as well as baguette cuts.

Each piece in the selection is highlighted by a dramatic lens cut which blends the magic of shape and color. Many of the pieces in this case were made or designed by Chris Chaney.

Chaney is an expert in custom designing, and can handle remounting as well. He has many one of a kind pieces for sale. And, if you have an idea or a picture, he can design from that. He will then furnish you with a special artist drawing of your design, which will be the prototype for a wax model. Be sure to see the samples on display of his wax models for rings and nugget jewelry.

If you have your own gold and stones, Chaney will gladly use it in the construction of the custom jewelry.

Custom pieces may be enhanced with Chaney's fine selection of loose diamonds in all sizes and shapes. exactly to your own design or specifications.

Coin rings, a popular item, are available, including the panda coin ring from China.

A great gift idea for babies and small children is birthstone jewelry, rings, earrings and bracelets. A large showcase is full of jewelry for the little ones.

Chaney's Jewelry carries a fine grouping of mens' and ladies' watches by Seiko, Longines, Lorus and other fine watch makers. Why should you buy a watch at Chaney's?

- Chaney's will meet or beat prices on comparative Seiko merchandise;
- Chaney's will give a free lifetime battery replacement with your watch purchase;
- Chaney's offers a four-year warranty on Seiko and Geneva brands;
- As jewelers, Chaney's is completely knowledgeable and can handle all repairs.

Other selections at Chaney's Jewelry include clocks, anniversary clocks, Cross pens and art sculptures designed by Chaney. The executive gifts case includes calculators, business card holders and address books. One book in particular features brass, a calculator, a currency converter, a travel alarm and you can program in reminders.

Chaney's offers a complete jewelry repair service, including ring sizing, diamond setting, chain soldering, catch replacement and all miscellaneous repairs. There is a quick turnaround time. Most repairs are done within three days.

Appraisals, for which Chaney's Jewelry is already well-known in Midland, can be completed the same day or within 24 hours. A experienced gemologist, Chaney will appraise jewelry for $10 per piece.

Also, Chaney's Jewelry will buy or trade for diamonds, gold and collector watches.

Chris Chaney is a lifelong resident of Big Spring and is excited about his family's expansion into Midland. While he commutes daily from Big Spring, he and his wife of six years, Terri, expect to make a permanent move to Midland soon. His philosophy is family first, business second.

He invites everyone in to Chaney's Jewelry to experience first hand the difference his store has to offer with personal service and repair availability. Start your holiday shopping now at Chaney's Jewelry, located next to Service Merchandise in Midland Plaza. Hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday. Call 697-1214 for more information.

Chris Chaney, left, and Nancy Aguirre invite you in to Chaney's Jewelry, in Midland Plaza, next to Service Merchandise.

At least 5,000 march through Moscow in alternative parade

MOSCOW (AP) — At least 5,000 people today spurned official Red Square ceremonies to commemorate the Bolshevik Revolution and marched through Moscow to protest food shortages, pollution, Communist rule and the secret police.

In Moldavia, activists said police beat protesters who forced cancellation of the military part of the republic's parade. Striking miners in the Soviet Arctic joined a celebration with slogans urging the government to allow greater independence and improve living and working conditions.

The unprecedented alternative march wound through the capital as President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and the Soviet leadership stood atop the Lenin Mausoleum and reviewed the traditional display of military hardware.

The official tolerance of a counter-demonstration on the hallowed national holiday showed how far the Soviet Union has come from the authoritarian rule of Gorbachev's predecessors.

So did the toned-down nature of the Red Square celebrations marking the 72nd anniversary of the revolution that brought the Communists to power in Russia. Not as much emphasis was placed on military might as in previous years.

"We're tired of 70 years of Communist power with nothing having changed for the better, and this is our protest," said marcher Taisya Shlyonova, a pensioner. The demonstrators represented a broad spectrum of unofficial groups.

"We don't want the people to be sheep that can be led as they have been led for 72 years," popular prosecutor Telman Gdlyan said. "Power must be taken away from the apparatus and given to the people."

Leaders of the independent event steered their marchers away from Red Square and a possible confrontation with authorities or with the thousands of marchers at the official ceremonies.

Responding to posters plastered around the city on the eve of Revolution Day, activists assembled near the Dynamo Metro station two hours before the start of official ceremonies.

Their route took them to a fork with one street leading toward Red Square, and some demonstrators initially headed that way. However, leaders made appeals from a sound truck and steered them instead to a route sanctioned by city officials.

Organizers said they had been told by authorities they would not be permitted to march through the square because they could not guarantee the march would remain orderly.

The marchers, many walking arm in arm, chanted slogans in support of maverick Communist Boris N. Yeltsin and other reformist members of the Congress of People's Deputies and shouted "Down with the KGB" secret police.

Some brandished posters scorning the 1917 Communist revolution glorified at the official ceremonies.

"Seventy-two years on the road to nowhere," said one poster. Others proclaimed, "Down With Ligachev," a reference to Yegor Ligachev, the hard-line Communist on the ruling Politburo who has come to symbolize resistance to economic and social reform.

The marchers represented a wide spectrum of interests, from environmental groups protesting construction of a nuclear power station to church groups demanding freedom of worship in the officially atheist Communist state.

Last year, such unofficial groups marched in some Soviet cities on Revolution Day, but this was the first time they took to the streets of Moscow on the holiday.

In the southern republic of Moldavia, police beat people in a crowd of thousands that gathered near a monument to national hero King Stephen the Great, Yuri Rozhgo, a spokesman for the Moldavian People's Front organization said in a telephone call from Kishinev, the republic's capital.

More were beaten when police dispersed a crowd of a couple hundred People's Front supporters on Lenin Prospekt a couple of hours later, he said.

Officials canceled the military part of the parade. Thousands of People's Front supporters marched the parade route with slogans condemning the police and the republic's leadership, Rozhgo said.

In Red Square, the traditional parade of tanks, troops, and banner-waving marchers selected by their workplaces passed through on schedule.

It was broadcast on state-run television, which made no reference to the unofficial march.

Gorbachev, acknowledging the country's troubles in an informal television interview during the ceremonies, said abandonment of the old system of central control without installing a new system has resulted in "a loss or weakening of control."

But to go back would be "the greatest mistake," he said, calling instead for faster movement toward a new economic order. He gave few details, but progressives have recently criticized the regime for half-measures that they say only make matters worse.

Longtime observers said the official ceremonies this year were considerably toned down from previous years, when the Kremlin leadership used the parade to show off the Soviets' military might.

Few missiles were in evidence today. Anti-tank guided missile systems and surface-to-air missile resupply vehicles were dropped this year, diplomats said. They had said they expected just one new weapon, an updated version of the T-72 tank, to join the parade.

In addition, party slogans were far less militant than just a few years ago.

In another expression of discontent, a local chapter of the nationalist People's Front movement in Riga, capital of the Baltic republic of Latvia, declared the Bolsheviks' seizure of power was not a revolution but "a government coup."

The group said the takeover "cut short the process of democratization that started after the February 1917 revolution (that overthrew the czar)."

The other parade

A column of several thousand Soviet citizens march in an alternate Revolution Day parade in Moscow today. One of the banners in the center of the crowd demands that the Communist Party's special status be removed from Article 6 of the constitution.

Soviet rights activists worried about prisoner

MOSCOW (NYT) — Soviet human rights campaigners are asking that the government investigate the case of a rights advocate injured recently in a jailhouse fall.

Family and friends of the rights advocate, who was on a hunger strike at a prison in Sverdlovsk at the time, say the fall is suspicious.

Andrei D. Sakharov, the Nobel laureate and a member of the Congress of People's Deputies, and other rights leaders have been urging international protest in the case.

They accuse the provincial authorities of mistreating the prisoner, Sergei Kuznetsov, a 32-year-old architect and journalist who outraged officials in Sverdlovsk by circulating pamphlets with detailed accusations of official corruption.

Kuznetsov was arrested last December and his case has been singled out as an important test of Soviet civil rights.

At various points, the court has closed his trial to the public, ordered his defense lawyers removed from the case, and forced him to submit to at least two psychiatric examinations, one of his former lawyers said.

A few days ago, news arrived here of Kuznetsov's injury in Sverdlovsk, where officials say he accidentally tripped and fell down a staircase as his guards escorted him to court.

Monday, the poet Yevgeny Yevtushenko, a member of the Soviet Congress, was reported to have asked the Ministry of Internal Affairs to look into the case.

"Everybody's worried," said Andrei Mironov, a human rights campaigner who said he had talked with Yevtushenko about the concern over Kuznetsov. "Sergei Kuznetsov is in the 19th day of a hunger strike and this could destroy him."

Mironov said that family and friends think the guards might have staged the fall. Mrs. Kuznetsov visited her husband recently week and found him conscious and under treatment in a cell.

He distrusts the prison doctor and has asked for treatment by international rights physicians, she said.

Kuznetsov's former lawyer, Sergei L. Kortov, said from Sverdlovsk that the prisoner was threatened by his guards a few days before the fall.

Sverdlovsk officials have been unavailable for comment because of holiday celebrations of the 72nd anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution.

In recent days, human rights activists say, Kuznetsov has been concerned that the court has appointed a defense lawyer with ties to the KGB, whose Sverdlovsk leadership was denounced by Kuznetsov as criminally abusive.

Originally, Kuznetsov was accused of slander. Later, he was charged with resisting the police at a human rights demonstration.

His partisans say that videotapes of that confrontation clearly establish his innocence but that the case still went forward, with both the slander and resisting-arrest charges joined in the same trial. If convicted of resisting arrest, he would face up to three years in prison.

3 dozen rescued from typhoon's aftermath

SONGKHLA, Thailand (AP) — Thai fishermen have rescued three dozen people caught in a typhoon that ravaged the Gulf of Thailand and the mainland four days ago and have discovered more bodies, the navy said today.

It was unclear whether any of the dead or rescued were from a U.S.-owned drilling ship that capsized Saturday with 97 crewmen aboard after being caught in the typhoon. Six crewmen have been rescued and seven bodies found.

According to press reports, some 400 Thai fishermen were missing. The navy report said at least 63 fishing boats sank in the storm and another nine were missing. The government death toll on land was 31, but one local official put the number at more than 70.

A navy ship found 17 bodies in the sea since beginning a search in the gulf east of Songkhla late Monday, navy spokesman Capt. Suravut Maharom said. Another 30 were found on an island in Chumphon province.

In addition, fisherman rescued 35 more people caught in Typhoon Gay, the navy said. It did not give details.

The search for 84 crewmen missing from the 5,373-ton Seacrest continued today.

The Seacrest capsized Saturday in the gulf during the worst storm to hit Thailand in three decades.

"All I remember is the sound of swirling wind. The darkness, the rain, the waves. And every now and then, the screams for help," Chalit Duangpakdee, a Seacrest survivor, said in an interview published by the English-language Bangkok Post today.

The Thai kitchen worker said the ship was buffeted by huge waves and an alarm went off to abandon ship. He grabbed a life jacket, jumped into the sea with many other crew members and managed to secure himself with rope inside a life raft.

A foreign crew member who also climbed into the lifeboat but had not tied himself down was swept away.

After several hours, Chalit was picked up by a Thai fishing boat, he told the newspaper.

The ship's owner, Unocal, today identified two more of the dead: Ed Seliger, the ship's West German captain, and Delvin Irby, an American tool pusher from Mississippi.

Eyewitnesses reportedly told Unocal that nearly all crew had abandoned the ship after the alarm and signal to do so had been given. But the captain and three others remained in the ship's wheelhouse, Unocal said in a press release.

There's a 'new' way to tie a necktie straight

By WILLIAM E. SCHMIDT
N.Y. Times News Service

MINNEAPOLIS — It began, simply enough, at a television studio here, when a 92-year-old man showed up one day to tell Don Shelby, the 42-year-old anchor of WCCO-TV, that Shelby did not know how to tie his necktie straight.

He had come, the man said, to share an old secret: a formula for tying what he called the perfect tie knot, one that is precisely balanced, absolutely symmetrical and exactly proportional.

THE REST IS, sort of, fashion history.

What the visitor, Jerry Pratt, showed Shelby that day were the basic steps for tying what a St. Paul clothier now calls the Shelby knot. In a recent mailing to customers in the Midwest, the clothier described it as "the first new knot for men in over 50 years."

Even Jerry Andersen, an official at the Neckwear Association of America, the New York trade association for necktie manufacturers and suppliers, agreed that they are on to something in Minnesota.

Andersen, the executive director of the association, said the step-by-step directions for the Shelby knot do not appear in the group's reference guide, a compendium of knots for ties, scarves, ascots and cravats entitled, "Getting Knotted — 188 Knots for Necks," distributed by Ratti Silk Mills of Como, Italy.

"Strictly speaking, it appears to be a variation of a knot called the Nicky," said Andersen.

ACCORDING TO the book, the Nicky was invented by a Milanese restaurateur. It is also said to have been the favorite knot of Nikita Khrushchev, the former Soviet leader.

What makes the Shelby different, noted Andersen, is that the tie is tied wrongside out, with the seams facing outward.

If done correctly, the wider, overlapping end of the tie will come out properly, secured by a trim and precise knot. But the narrower, short blade underneath will remain backward, with seams and label facing out.

"From a purist's point of view," Andersen said, "this might be regarded as a step backward."

There may be countless numbers of men who have always tied their knots this way. But until now, Andersen said, the knot does not appear to have been documented. Or given a name.

Pratt, a retired official with the U.S. Chamber of Commerce who lives in Minneapolis, said he had concocted the knot more than 30 years ago. "I didn't call it anything," he said, laughing. "I just turned the tie inside out, and there it was."

As first demonstrated by Pratt in his visit to the television studio in 1986, and later refined by Shelby and Kingford Bavender, who runs Joseph M, a custom clothing shop in St. Paul, the specific attraction of the Shelby is that it will produce a knot that is "balanced, small and precise," according to Bavender.

IT IS LESS bulbous than the full Windsor knot, and more symetrical tham the half-Windsor or four-in-hand.

The problem of the backward short end is easily remedied, Bavender said. It can simply be secured, out of sight, with a tie clip.

Or one can do as Pratt and Shelby do, which is to twist the short end while the knot is being tied so the finished side is then facing out.

In fact, fashion trends would seem to be running against the Shelby.

Andersen said current styles dictate a harder, smaller, more severely tapered knot, like that produced by the four-in-hand, the most commonly tied knot among American men.

"I tried the Shelby, and found it produced a soft knot, a little too flabby for my taste," Andersen said. Bavender agreed that the Shelby was not for everyone.

The knot is intended to be worn with spread collars, like those favored by Shelby on his news broadcasts and by Ronald Reagan, whose trademark knot was a Windsor.

Richard M. Nixon also favored a Windsor knot, although the book "Getting Knotted" argues that Nixon's knot was not exactly a Windsor, but rather a variation on the Windsor called an Uncle Sam.

The Uncle Sam is among nearly a dozen obscure necktie knots recorded in the book.

THERE IS, for example, the Prince Albert, a kind of double four-in-hand, which was tied by the consort of Queen Victoria and was a favorite of the author Joseph Conrad.

The Swedes contributed the Christensen, in which the knot comes out in a crisscross pattern, and the Italians gave us the Vismara, which looks like two knots, side by side.

A knot called the Onassis still has a certain popularity along New York's Seventh Avenue, Andersen said. In that knot, the fat blade of the tie is not passed through the knot, but draped over the top of it.

The Shelby has caused some embarrassment for its namesake. Shelby took pains to point out that it was not his idea to name the knot the Shelby.

"I used to be a pretty fair country reporter," said Shelby, who has been a broadcaster at WCCO, the CBS affiliate here, since 1978. "Now wherever I go, the first thing people come up to me and say is: 'Hi, Don. Nice knot.'"

Men warm up to fashion freedom

By SUSAN PHINNEY
Hearst News Service

Men used to be able to get by with a leisure wardrobe consisting of a sweater or two, some sports shirts, khaki slacks for summer and corduroy slacks for winter.

No more.

The menswear market has taken off like a rocket, and men who don't climb aboard for the ride are going to look like DC-3s in a Learjet world.

Blame television stars like Don Johnson and his "Miami Vice" wardrobe. Or movie star Tom Cruise, who flew through "Top Gun" in a bomber jacket. Sales of same have been escalating ever since.

And when Bill Cosby appears on TV in one of his trademark-patterned sweaters, stores throughout the country get calls the next day from customers who want one just like it.

Larry Strong, buyer and general manager for Jeffrey Michael stores in the Northwest, says comfort is driving the menswear market. Sweaters are oversized. Pants are pleated and fuller in the thighs. Even suit shoulders are broader by a half-inch or more.

Strong says sweater sales are already strong this season. Sweaters made of wool-synthetic blends are among the most attractive because synthetic fibers accept dye more readily than natural fibers. The result is a more colorful, lightweight garment.

In addition to patterned pullovers, cardigans are making a comeback. Sweater patterns tend to be small and sophisticated, infused with jewel tones or trendy neutrals like olive and mustard.

Ralph Lauren is putting leather patches on his sweaters and focusing on a cowboy and Indian theme for his leisure collection, says Linda Hurd, manager of the Polo shop in Seattle. Lauren uses chamois and buckskin, and is showing hand-tooled jackets and vests for men.

Strong says he sees leather on sweaters, in short jackets and even some full-length leather coats for men, but leather jackets are the real story. Last year, suppliers couldn't keep up with the demand. This year, retailers are ready.

CNS Photo

Because men feel more free to dress stylishly, the menswear market is expanding accessory items for men. Vests will make a big fashion statement this fall. This all-wool fair-isle vest is just one the types of vests that can be the all-important standout accessory of a sportswear outfit.

CNS Photo

Men will turn to classic casual wear such as this wool knit pullover paired with corduroy trousers and sport jacket by Benard Holtzman for Harve Benard.

According to the Menswear Retailers of America, a trade group based in Washington, D.C., menswear sales increased 20 percent between 1985 and 1988. It's become a $40 billion market.

Liz Claiborne, the American designer who has gained mass appeal with her women's fashions, recently added a menswear collection based on coordinated trousers, shirts and sweaters similar to collections for women. It makes it easy for men to assemble a leisure wardrobe.

Men's accessories are more important than ever. Plain black, brown or gray socks are being upstaged by sheer styles with ribbing, subtle woven patterns or colors like turquoise and red. These status socks sell for $10 to $20, and some men can't buy enough of them.

Men are also warming up to more outlandish colors and patterns in ties. Ralph Lauren's newest ties have abstract patterns reminiscent of 1930s' neckwear.

Strong says men are experimenting with socks and ties to change the look of an outfit.

Executive toolbags make shift from structured to soft cases

N.Y. Times News Service

Remember the jokes about the tuna sandwich in the attache case?

These days, the sandwich is chic — wholesome fuel for those with better things to do than indulge at lunchtime — and the attach'e case isn't.

For fall, luggage stores around New York City are stocking soft-sided satchels meant to accommodate the changing profile of today's executives and professionals.

"There's a gigantic shift from attach'e cases to less structured, soft cases, largely to attract the women's market," said David Dinoffer, owner of three Dinoffer leather goods stores (22 West 57th Street in Manhattan, and in Greenwich, Conn., and Scarsdale, N.Y.). The store's soft-sided leather satchels come in many styles, including one in burgundy or black calfskin that starts at $400.

"Men want big doctor and gym bag styles, and shoulder straps," said James Senn, district manager of Innovation, which has 30 luggage stores in the metropolitan region.

"Commuters stuff as much as they can into briefcases," said Senn, who notices things like this during his daily commutes. "They pull everything out of there: phones, mini-VCR's, hair rollers, shaving kits." The store is doing well with roomy accordion styles by Renwick in belt, harness and saddle leathers, $300 to $500.

"Softness" and "expansiveness" are what shoppers ask for at Bally, said John Balavender, a salesman at the men's store at 645 Madison Avenue, where most styles are $475 to $550.

Lancel, at 690 Madison Avenue, sells soft-sided satchels that are rainproof. In polyurethane-coated canvas or nylon, they cost $164 to about $300. Women's styles feature handbag detailing, and most have optional shoulder straps.

"Women insist on a shoulder strap, and men are picking up on it," said Paul Spugani, director of sales.

"It's hard enough to get around a big city without a hand occupied and a hard suitcase banging against your legs."

Wigs a luxury

DEAR ABBY

Opinions differ about 'truth' of drinking wine

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I was very disappointed in your reply to "Cherie Morrison" regarding the benefits of moderate wine consumption. What you presented in your reply was not "the truth" (as you claimed), but rather a selected opinion of the results of some study.

For every expert opinion or study that you can cite to support your "truth," I can provide an opinion of a respected medical professional or a "study" asserting the opposite view.

The truth, Abby, is that there is substantial medical evidence that wine is healthful if taken in moderation. Even the most pessimistic interpretation of what is known about the consumption of wine would conclude that wine in moderation is not harmful to most individuals, and may indeed be beneficial.

You commit a grave journalistic sin, Miss Van Buren, when you confuse "opinion" with "the truth." — J.D. KRONMAN (WHO ENJOYS WINE WITH DINNER EVERY DAY)

DEAR MR. KRONMAN: I have no problem with the consumption of wine if used in moderation. It's the ABUSE of wine I take exception to.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the wishes of the woman who wanted to be buried next to her mother: She should put her wishes in writing in her will, so when the time comes, there will be no question about it. — KATE D.R. IN ST. PETE'S, FLA.

DEAR KATE: Wills are almost always read AFTER the funeral; instructions concerning one's burial should be given to family members well in advance of the funeral.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the woman who had a scar on her wrist from having a ganglion tumor surgically removed: She became angry when, during a routine physical, a new doctor asked her if she had attempted suicide. Instead of being angry, she should have thanked that doctor for his loving concern.

During my entire junior year in high school, I had fresh gashes on my wrists. I was depressed over the loss of a friend and confused about my identity. Having been adopted, I wondered why my birth mother had thrown me away.

My band teacher, who positioned my hands on the flute, pretended not to notice the cuts on my wrists. My mother accused me of injecting drugs. My English teacher never asked me why all my compositions were about death and suicide. My chemistry teacher never noticed that I had lists of poisons on my notebooks.

Finally, some good, caring friends took me to a counselor who backed me into a corner and yelled, "What is wrong with you?"

To make a long story short, I was sent to an adolescent psychiatric facility, put in a padded cell and tested. They found that I had a biochemical imbalance. I was treated with anti-depressant drugs and psychotherapy, which partially solved my problem.

The point I really want to make is this: All the signs were there to read, but nobody wanted to read them.

Thanks, Abby, for letting me "talk" to you. I feel better now. Sign me ... JANE DOE

New looks featured in men's fashions

CNS Photo

This sports jacket from Harve Benard's fall collection features a small-scale plaid, one of this season's favored diminutive patterns in menswear.

Copley News Service

In the traditionally cautious centers of men's fashion, where they put on their clothes one trend at a time, designers are into a brand-new bag:

The sack suit.

No, not the boxy Ivy League uniform of the '60s, but a contemporary interpretation that contains equal parts nostalgia and nuance.

As designer Luciano Franzoni puts it, "The new 'sack' is in fact a 'demi-sack' because it does not feature the old model's severely straight lines."

Nevertheless, the sack is back, all three buttons of it, ready for a fall reintroduction among a proliferation of vivid colors, vests of varying fabric and flamboyance, and enough bulky sweaters to turn male shoppers into inveterate knit pickers.

The focus, according to Chip Tolbert, fashion director of the Men's Fashion Association, is apparel in which men "can look elegant and feel comfortable at the same time."

The sack suit — which will accompany a range of double-breasteds that continue to carve a niche in the mainstream market — differs from its predecessor in the following respects:

- A clearly delineated waistline (some designers will incorporate darts from shoulder to waist), broader shoulders, hips that are narrower and closer to the body owing to its ventless jacket style, and fuller, pleated trousers.
- Textured fabrics in diminutive patterns such as small-scale plaids and muted windowpanes.
- Such colors as prune, plum, amber, bronze, mustard, olive, steel gray and charcoal blue.

"The comparison between the old coat and the new one would be akin to a comparison between a 1919 Ford Model T and a 1989 Ferrari Testarossa," observed Franzoni. "Both coats have a three-button fastening and both automobiles have four wheels. That's where their resemblance begins and ends."

The sack innovation meshes with what Franzoni calls a "growing trend toward a voluntary 'jacket required' dress code among fashion-conscious men."

It responds to a buttoned-up, if not button-down, attitude launched a few seasons back with the return of the double-breasted coat.

The vest, meanwhile, makes a splash in both tailored and casual wear, in fabric or knit. It's a funky cousin of the classic waistcoat, offered by Cecilia Metheny in an oversized cardigan version.

You will see printed silks, too, in fanciful colors, intricate wovens in silks and silk blends — fabrics you might expect to find in a gentleman's tie.

Mike Kopfler, senior vice president at Wemco, Inc., envisions "men and women wearing vests with jeans and a T-shirt, with a business suit, or with skirts or shorts."

Earth tones, as always this time of year, can be found in abundance, but the movement to more adventurous color in menswear apparently knows no season.

Says menswear designer Bill Robinson, winner of back-to-back ('87 and '88) Cutty Sark Awards: "The media, the workplace, the gym, everything has conspired to remind men of how important's one look is, and unless you are the most repressed person around, men are no longer ashamed of wanting something sensual."

AT WIT'S END

There's not enough time in a day

EDITOR'S NOTE: Erma Bombeck is on a two-week vacation. This Best of Bombeck release originally appeared Feb. 6, 1986.

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

You'll pardon me if I don't have a clever beginning to this column. I don't have time.

There are 24 hours in every day. I used to watch television six hours and 44 minutes a day, leaving me with 17 hours and 16 minutes.

After I scheduled seven hours and five minutes to sleep and two hours and 15 minutes to eat, I was left with only seven hours and 56 minutes to write.

Then we got cable television, and what with the news channel, first-run movies, MTV, country-Western, spiritual, entertainment and sports, my viewing cut into my workday. Then my husband said, "While you're watching that channel, you're missing a good show on the other channel," so we bought a VCR so we could tape one show and watch another.

But when do you watch the shows you've taped? So I took time away from my two hours and 15 minutes eating time and ate in front of the TV set.

Naturally, we began to buy cassettes to fit the VCR. I bought Jane Fonda so I could get my body in shape. However, I had to take time away from my seven hours and five minutes of sleeping time to do it.

On my birthday, a son rented two movies as a present. I panicked. They had to be viewed by 10 a.m. the next morning. Already I had a stack of taped shows that I hadn't had time to view. I put the movies ahead of the tapes, rescheduled Jane Fonda for 4 a.m., and watched "Terms of Endearment" and "Easy Money" at 5 and 7 a.m. It was close, but I made it.

Other scheduling problems were not so easily resolved. Before dinner one night, I approached the VCR with my Julia Child cassette. My husband was watching Dan Rather. When I asked him to watch Dan in the bedroom, he said it wouldn't do any good, as he was taping a "MASH" rerun on the other channel. I went into the kitchen, turned on another set and watched "Wheel of Fortune." We didn't eat until 9:30 in front of "Hill Street Blues."

We're beginning to cut corners. We've got "60 Minutes" down to 30, "20/20" down to 10/10, and anything on World War II we fast-forward because we know the ending.

The other morning my husband said, "You know, with a satellite dish, we could probably pull in another hundred or so channels."

Raiders can wreck their own season

LUBBOCK (AP) — There's one ranked team that could wreck the season for Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes. That team is Texas Tech.

Dykes knows first-hand that being ranked doesn't make a team unbeatable. After all, Tech alone has knocked off three ranked teams this year.

This week, Tech fills the role of target and Texas Christian will be trying to do what Tech has done so well.

"If we don't play like gangbusters we won't be ranked long. It'll be the shortest ranking ever," Dykes said. "The big thing is going to be to convince people that TCU is for real, and that we've got to play our tail off to play them, to beat them.

"I think our players understand that. I hope they do. They'll hear it more than once, I promise you that."

Tech climbed into the ratings at No. 23 after beating then-No. 22 Texas 24-17 at Austin. Tech last appeared in the rankings Nov. 14, 1977. After nine weeks among the Top Twenty, No. 16 Tech was beaten by Houston and dropped out of the rankings. Little did they realize it would 12 years before a Tech team would get back in among the nation's elite.

"I'm glad to be ranked for our players' sake," Dykes said Monday.

He said the best way to celebrate the ranking is to stay there awhile — and that means beating TCU.

"We don't need to get kicked out of the big black-tie ball the first chance we get to go," Dykes said. "We need to dance a little bit."

With his attention already on the Horned Frogs, who beat then-No. 15 Air Force last month, Dykes waves off talk about a bowl bid.

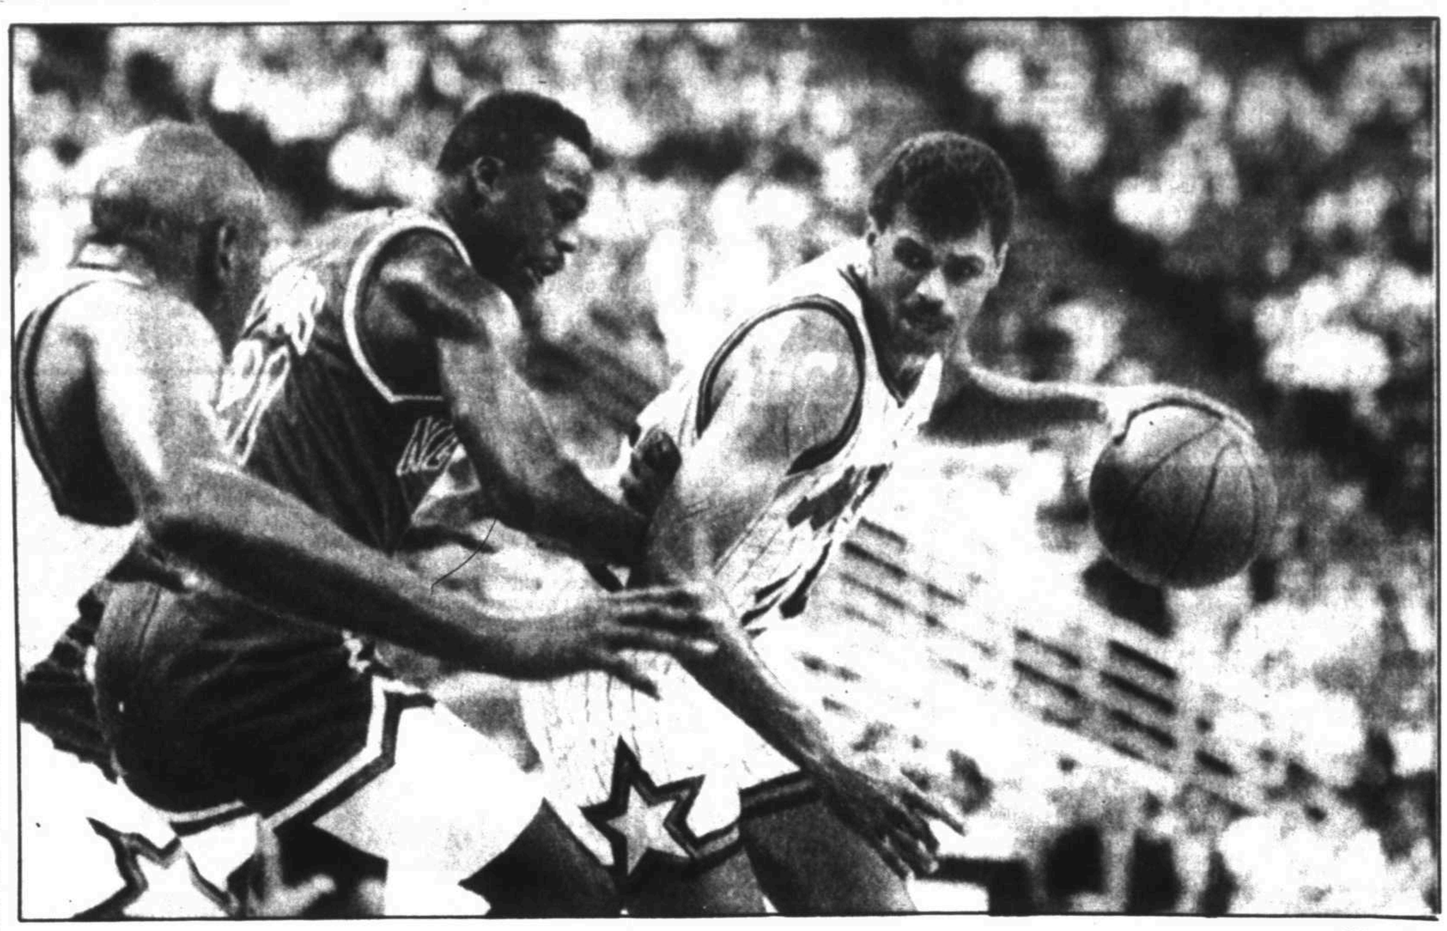

"I think we better worry about TCU," Dykes said.

There'll be more bowl talk if Tech (6-2) gets by TCU. Some people still figure that Tech, with some help, has a chance at the Cotton Bowl berth reserved for the Southwest Conference champion. But three teams have only one league loss and Baylor, like Tech, has two, all of which leaves Dykes a bit confused.

"I don't know who to pull for on Saturdays. Boy, I was pulling for A&M to beat Houston, and they said, 'Well, you moron, that's not what you want.' "

Saturday's highlight for the Red Raiders was Jamie Gill's 65-yard touchdown pass to Anthony Manyweather on a third-and-26 with 4:26 remaining in the game. It put Tech ahead 21-17.

Dykes said it was defense that kept Tech in the game. Linebacker Charles Rowe had 15 tackles, including 12 solos, and cornerback Sammy Walker had six tackles and two second-half interceptions.

Aikman ready to push Walsh at quarterback

IRVING (AP) — The Cowboys won a game and now they have a quarterback controversy.

Steve Walsh led the Dallas Cowboys to their first victory under Jimmy Johnson but another rookie, Troy Aikman, could take his job this week.

"We're going to go with the quarterback who gives us the best chance to win," Johnson said. "It's something we've got to evaluate in practice. We'll probably identify a starter prior to Friday's practice. "

"I like having a quarterback controversy when you have two quarterbacks who can play," Johnson said. "I like having to make those decisions."

Johnson's winless ordeal is finally over. He's the proud owner of a Pete Rozelle autographed NFL game ball.

Vets help make Magic in Orlando

Pro Basketball

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Experience is the best teacher in the NBA and expansion clubs rarely hold the edge over playoff-caliber teams.

Few people gave the Orlando Magic much chance of beating the New York Knicks Monday night, but with the game on the line five well-traveled veterans were equal to the task.

Reggie Theus, a 12th-year pro playing for his fourth team, scored 24 points and the Magic hit 10 consecutive free throws in the final 1:33 to win 118-110 before a crowd of 15,077 in Orlando Arena.

The victory in the franchise's second regular-season game is a reflection of the "win now" approach General Manager Pat Williams took in assembling the Orlando roster.

Charlotte had a similar plan and won its third game as an expansion team a year ago. Miami, building with youth, lost an NBA-record 17 consecutive games at the start of last season.

"I feel great for the 12 players, owners, Pat Williams, the coaching staff and everyone else who worked their butts off for three and a half years," Coach Matt Guokas said. "This is for them."

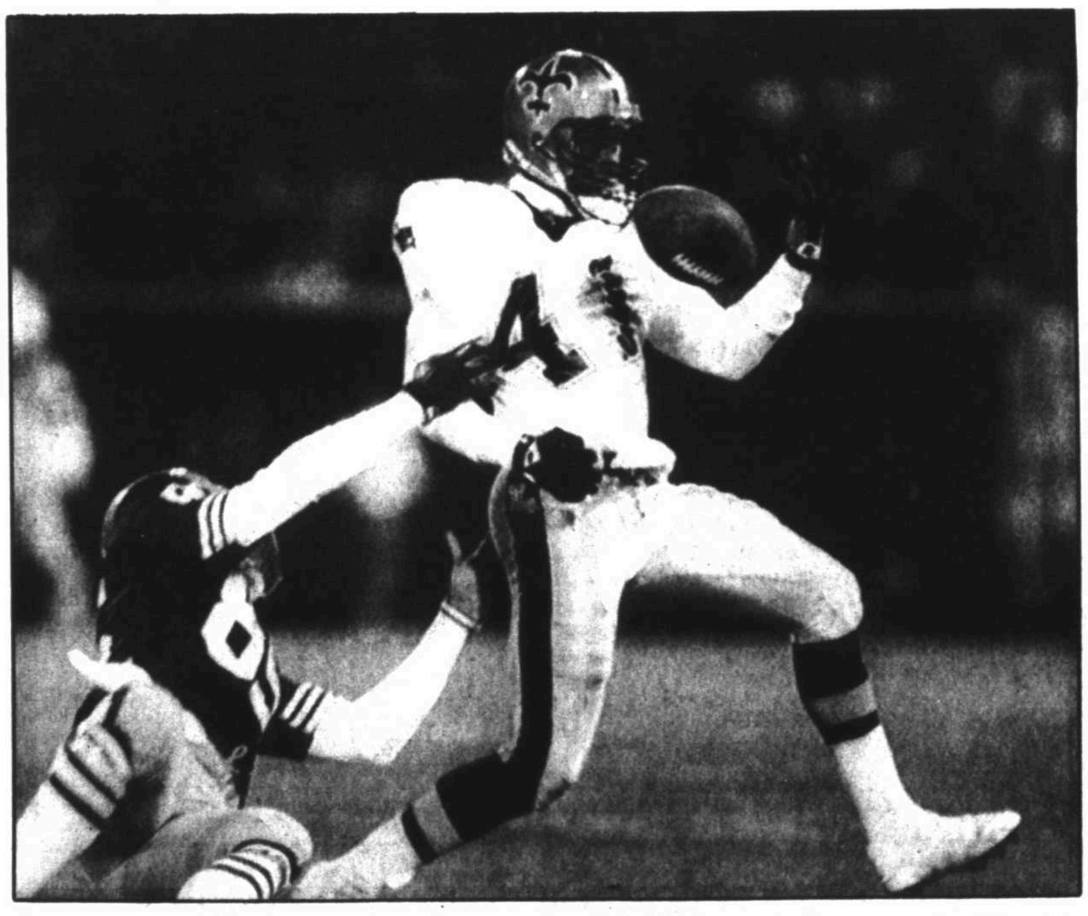

New York had its best players on the floor at the end, but the Magic held on with a lineup of Theus, Dave Corzine, Jerry Reynolds, Terry Catledge and Sam Vincent — a unit with a combined 39 years NBA experience.

Theus and Reynolds both scored 17 points in the second half and Catledge finished with 19 points and 11 rebounds as Orlando shot 51 percent from the field and outrebounded the Knicks 54-40.

"We let them outwork us," said Patrick Ewing, who led New York with 29 points. "They got way too many second shots. ... We were mentally ready, but we just didn't execute."

Orlando scored the last 11 points of the third quarter against New York reserves to open a 90-82 lead, then pulled away from a 94-94 tie with a 12-2 run keyed by Theus and Reynolds.

"There were a few rocky moments along the way but our guys played very determined from the start," Guokas said.

San Francisco receiver Mike Wilson becomes a defender as he strips the ball from New Orleans safety Toi Cook during Monday Night Football action at Candlestick Park.

Niners put it all together, 31-13

NFL

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — After two months of grumbling about sloppy victories, the perfection-minded San Francisco 49ers finally got one that both team and fans could enjoy.

Now the team of the '80s may have to wait until the '90s — playoff time — for its next truly meaningful game. A Joe Montana-led 31-13 pummeling of New Orleans Monday night turned the Saints and the rest of the NFC West into also-rans with seven games remaining.

"We feel particularly good about this game," George Seifert said after winning his first game at Candlestick Park as the 49ers' coach. "I would think that up to this point it's our best game of the season."

It couldn't have come at a worse time for the Saints (4-5), who were riding a three-game winning streak and harbored hopes of getting back into the divisional race. Now they're still a game behind the second-place Los Angeles Rams and in increasing trouble in the jostling for a wild-card berth, too.

"That was a pretty good butt-kicking tonight," New Orleans coach Jim Mora said. "It was a combination of them being on their game and us not playing well at all.

"We didn't cover. We didn't tackle. We looked like we were in a daze on defense."

San Francisco's performance tackled a few of its season-long concerns head-on.

Rangers get a kick from exchange student Engler

Chris Engler speaks four languages fluently, but none of them was American Footballese, at least before August.

While Engler doesn't call himself a football expert, the foreign exchange student from Sissach, Switzerland has contributed to the Greenwood Rangers' moderate success in District 4-3A football action.

Grimes

Since taking over place-kicking duties during the fifth week of the season, the six-foot, 165-pound senior is nine-for-11 on extra points, and kicked his first field goal last week at Kermit.

Partially as a result of Engler's heroics, the Rangers still have a chance at the playoffs despite a 2-2 district mark if they beat Clint on Friday — provided that undefeated Crane handles 3-1 Kermit.

Unlike many European exchange students who play in the U.S., Engler doesn't even have a working knowledge of soccer, despite its popularity in his homeland.

"I never really liked to play soccer," Engler said. "I'd go out and kick the ball around with my father when I was small, but I never played on a team."

Don't get the idea that Engler is some Poindexter-type nerd who can't walk and chew gum at the same time, however. The 18-year-old Swiss competed as an intermediate-level gymnast in his homeland for several years while also playing competitive volleyball. He also likes to ski and ride mountain bikes.

But American football? Why?

Engler had his doubts at the beginning.

"When I got here, I thought it was crazy," he said. "But I said I want to learn the game and I think it's real great now.

"I learn something every practice."

In addition to his kicking duties, Engler is a back-up wide receiver and safety for the Rangers, though he has seen no game action from scrimmage.

Despite Engler's ample athletic skill, Ranger mentor Bob Purser had to be wondering what he was going to do with this kid.

"He wanted to try and play football, so we let him play on the JV as a wide receiver," Purser said. "Then we just started messing around with kicking.

"He didn't know anything about steps at first, but he tried it and watched it on TV."

Still, after incumbent kicker Jerry Gay went down with a season-ending injury against McCamey. Purser was loath to put the senior in a pressure situation.

"If we'd had known he could do it, we could have used him against Alpine (in a 21-0 loss)," Purser said. "We had the ball inside the 20 four times against Alpine, but we didn't have as much confidence in him as we should have."

Engler came alive the next week, making all five of his extra-points in a 35-8 romp over Fabens. He made an extra point against Crane two weeks ago, before making three of four against Kermit, plus his first-ever field goal, a 32-yarder that could have been good from 42, if necessary.

Also against Fabens, he got his first taste of game contact when he leveled a kick return man after one of his kickoffs.

The young Swiss, who is staying with Glen and Nelda Evans during his year in the Greenwood community, has several goals to meet after his brief football career concludes later this fall.

"First, I want to graduate from Greenwood High School," Engler said. After that, he must complete his European high school education and 17 weeks in the Swiss militia before attending a Swiss university to study business.

IF THE RANGERS don't meet the two-pronged challenge posed by a six-hour bus ride to the El Paso area and a pass-happy Clint 11, Engler's grid career might be over sooner than later.

Purser admits that the Greenwood-Clint matchup won't be the Ranger cakewalk it was last season, when the Rangers ended their district championship season with a 42-0 win over the Lions.

For one thing, the 1989 Rangers aren't close to being the same quality team they were last year, though junior quarterback Cody Mebane shows signs of finally filling the shoes of all-everything signal-caller Randy Donnell.

For two, there's that bus ride.

"It takes a lot out of you to go up there," Purser said. "We beat them there two years ago, but they weren't a very good team then."

The pattern of tough contests out West has continued in 4-3A. While Crane smeared Clint, and Greenwood hammered Fabens in eastern games. But Kermit just nipped Clint 14-10 at Clint, while Crane could only beat Fabens 12-0 in their trip to El Paso.

Lions coach Benny Reed has turned it around at Clint with a dropback-passing offense.

"They throw the heck out of the ball," Purser said. "They don't throw a lot of possession passes...they just drop back and throw the ball."

All of which will put pressure on the Rangers' crack defensive backfield of cornerbacks Larry Nichols and Quincy Carlisle and safeties Randy Marquez and Tim Flowers.

That quartet may have its hands full. The Rangers allowed only two touchdown passes in the first seven weeks, before Crane quarterback Mark Sanchez riddled them for 200 yards and three TD's two weeks ago.

Ga. cagers, coaches learn their manners

ATLANTA (AP) — It wasn't training table fare, and the pepper was passed politely, not thrown halfcourt.

University of Georgia basketball players, coaches and trainers dined with silver and china and the finest of holiday fare after a two-hour cram course in etiquette.

The teacher was Deborah Lassiter, who runs Perfectly Polished, a school in manners in Athens, Ga.

"They told me this was the quietest and slowest they have ever eaten," Lassiter.

POKES

The rookie coach of the Dallas Cowboys had to wait until the ninth week of the season to get his first victory, a 13-3 upset of the Washington Redskins on Sunday night.

"I takes away a lot of negative talk," Johnson said. "It takes away all that 0 for 16 stuff."

Walsh and defensive back Bill Bates gave a grateful Johnson the game ball after the 14-point underdog Cowboys had humbled the Redskins on national television.

Johnson in turn gave the team Monday off.

"It's been a hard, frustrating year and there will still be some rocky days ahead but the future of the team is bright," Johnson said. "It's good for the team to have some success because they've worked so hard. Now, we can got about our business."

Johnson said the key to the victory was just what he had been preaching, no turnovers and eliminate mistakes.

"I've never coached a game where a team didn't have a penalty that was accepted against us, and, of course we never turned the ball over," Johnson said. "We never did that even at Miami."

Johnson said the victory was more of a relief than the jubilation he felt when he won the national title at the University of Miami.

"We had been taking some heat but I knew what I was getting into when I took the job," Johnson said.

NINERS

played its best game of the year. The puzzling home-field "disadvantage" — the 49ers have been better on the road than at home every year but one (1986) in the last eight — never materialized. Most of all, Montana passed and scrambled like anything but a 33-year-old quarterback recovering from a left knee sprain and an injured elbow.

The last time he played, he left the field on a stretcher during an Oct. 22 victory over New England at Stanford. This time he left the Saints' defense staggering, picking it apart with mostly short passes as he completed his first 11 throws in a 223-yard, three-touchdown first half.

Montana found a familiar target, Jerry Rice, for touchdown passes of 32 and two yards and John Taylor for 45 yards to make it 21-10 with 1:32 left in the first half. He barreled around the right side and dove into the end zone for the 3-yard clincher in the fourth period.

Chaps end fall season

From Staff Reports

ABILENE - Midland College found tough going at last weekend's major ntercollegiate tennis tournament, as men's teams from several Southwest Conference universities, Trinity, Abilene Christian and the University of California-Irvine all competed.

The Chaps captured one consolation title, but did have some good wins in both singles and doubles of the Fairway Oaks Invitational Indoor which concluded Sunday. It was the last official action for the nation's top-ranked junior college men's team this fall, according to MC coach Joe Williams.

SINGLES: 1. Mohamed Ridaoui (MC) lost to Mark Kudelko (SMU) 6-3 6-2, lost to Dennis Fulgenzi (New Mexico) 7-6 6-4, Jesper Witt (MC) lost to Tony Bujon (TCU) 7-6 7-6, lost to Jorge Ortega (UNM) 6-3 6-4. 2. Amine Kadiri (MC) lost to Anders Eriksson (Trinity) 6-1 6-0, defeated Brent Klapprott (Abilene Christian) 6-2 6-3, defeated Joe Horwitz (SMU), defeated Scott Robertson (SMU) for number two consolation title; Pepe Garcia (MC) lost to Mark Tjia (TCU) 6-3 6-2, lost to Scott Robertson (SMU) 6-3 6-3. 3. Bernt Gade (MC) defeated Chris MacDougal (UNM) 6-2 6-3, lost to Marc Taylor (Texas-Austin) 7-5 6-1; James Homan (MC) defeated Marlon Mazique (UNM) 6-2 2-6 6-4, defeated Patrick Marrie (Abilene Christian) 6-1 7-6, lost to Jeff Geispa (TCU) 6-1 6-4 in semifinals.

DOUBLES: 1. Ridaoui-Kadiri (MC) defeated Fulgenzi-Ortega (UNM) 7-5 6-2, lost to Kudelko-Robertson (SMU) 6-4 3-6 6-2. 2. Witt-Gade (MC) defeated Horwitz-Buck (SMU) 5-7 7-5 7-6, lost to Karrasch-Eddins (Texas) 6-2 7-6. 3. Garcia-Homan (MC) lost to Mazique-MacDougal (UNM) 6-4 3-6 7-5, defeated Gray-Meyer (SMU) 6-0 6-1, lost to Stoleman-Hoffman (UC-Irvine) 6-3 7-5 in consolation finals.

Giamatti used sports to expand his mind

Baseball

NEW YORK (AP) — As A. Bartlett Giamatti searched to expand his mind, he turned to sports. That's what the late baseball commissioner and Yale University president wrote about in his sixth and final book, "Take Time for Paradise: Americans and their Games."

"It has long been my conviction that we can learn far more about the conditions, and values, of a society by contemplating how it chooses to play, to use its free time, to take its leisure, than examining how it goes about its work," he wrote in the 98-page essay, scheduled for publication Dec. 13 by Summit Books. Copies of the galley proofs were made available by the publisher.

Giamatti, who died of a heart attack on Sept. 1, wrote the book last winter, several months before he moved from National League president to commissioner.

In a marked departure from most sports books, he quotes Shakespeare, Aristotle, Milton, Jane Austen, Thomas Carlyle, literary historian Michael O'Loughlin, poet Henry Vaughn, Allen Guttman and makes obvious references to Marx's opinion of religion.

"Briefly stated, my argument is that sports are a subject of leisure and that properly to understand the allure and enduring appeal sports have for us as Americans, one must first understand the nature of leisure as that concept has developed since the Greeks, especially Aristotle," Giamatti wrote in the preface.

"I argue that sports are in today's world what they were in yesterday's very different one — a shared moment of leisure. Sports represent a shared vision of how we continue, as individual, team or community, to experience a happiness or absence of care so intense, so rare, and so fleeting that we associate their experience with experience otherwise described as religious or we say the sports experience which was once described, when first felt, as religious. My argument is that in sports some version of immortality is being sought whether by way of ritual or of record."

Giamatti wrote that, to some, sports in the late 20th century has become comparable to religion.

Devils ax Schoenfeld

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Throughout the New Jersey Devils' slide to the Patrick Division basement last year, Coach Jim Schoenfeld talked about the team's inability to play well for three periods.

Team officials decided to inject some fresh blood with the addition of two former NHL All-Stars and a legitimate international superstar. But sporadic play continued through 14 games this season, and the team decided to make a change in the coaching box.

Schoenfeld, 37, who only two years ago guided the team to the Stanley Cup semifinals, was fired

Venezuela plans to buy Citgo

Would be first OPEC producer to own U.S. oil firm

DALLAS (AP) — Texas oilman Eddie Chiles used to advise those who didn't own an oil well to get one.

The Southland Corp. acquired an oil company in 1983 — issuing $254 million in stock to obtain Citgo Petroleum Corp.

Now the nation's largest convenience store retailer is ready to step back out of the oil business and may realize more than a threefold return on its 6-year-old investment.

Southland sold half of the Tulsa, Okla.-based firm in 1986 to the Venezuelan state-owned for $290 million, and on Monday announced plans to sell the other half for $675 million.

Southland said terms of the agreement had not been completed and remain subject to an acceptable definitive agreement.

The sale will give the Dallas-based operator of the 7-Eleven convenience store chain a boost as it works to continue meeting huge debt payments resulting from the company's $4.9 billion leveraged buyout in 1987.

The deal also would allow Venezuela to take a greater U.S. market share for its crude oil.

The transaction would make Citgo the first large U.S. oil company to be acquired by a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. The OPEC members have carried out a campaign of acquiring downstream refining and distribution facilities in order to guarantee access to industrialized markets in the face of falling oil prices during the last decade.

One of Citgo's principal assets is the nation's eighth largest refinery, located in Lake Charles, La., said Southland spokeswoman Cecilia Stubbs Norwood. The refinery is able to convert efficiently low grade crude oil into high octane fuel.

Citgo, created from the refinery, marketing and transportation operations of Cities Service, earned $165.6 million on $4.1 billion in revenues last year, a 24 percent increase in sales. In the quarter ended June 30, earnings were $39.2 million on $1.3 billion in sales, compared to $33.9 million on $1.02 billion in sales.

Southland, taken private by the founding Thompson family in the 1987 buyout, said in May it would seek ways to monetize its interest in Citgo, and the sale price is in the range analysts had expected. The Venezuelan company has first rights in acquiring Southland's stake.

The company has some large payments coming due on its debt, with $258 million due on Dec. 31 and an additional $250 million due through next year. Some analysts have questioned Southland's ability to meet those payments, but the company has disputed those forecasts.

Southland said it would continue as a prime retailer of Citgo products.

In the quarter ended June 30, Southland lost $67.01 million.

Besides the Lake Charles refinery, PDVSA will acquire pipelines running from the refinery complex to Chicago and New Jersey, 43 oil terminals and access to 300 other terminals scattered across the U.S.

Citgo supplies 6 percent of the U.S. aviation fuel market, 5 percent of the lubricant market and 4 percent of service station sales.

MARKETS

Oil prices slightly higher

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil futures prices have turned higher after a sluggish session Monday.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, December contracts for West Texas Intermediate were up 7 cents to $20.17 at midmorning.

The contract slipped 11 cents Monday to close at $20.10. The January contract closed at $19.78, down 8 cents.

Analysts said crude prices came under light trading pressure mainly from profit-taking after last week's gains.

Refined products traded on the exchange finished mixed. No. 2 heating oil for December delivery lost 0.46 cent to 59.66 cents a gallon, while wholesale unleaded gasoline for December gained 0.33 cent to 52.46 cents a gallon. Contracts for later delivery also ended mixed.

"People were buying gasoline and selling heating oil on a spread basis," said Peter Beutel, energy analyst for Elders Futures Inc.

Traders said the weakness in crude prices did not reflect concern about escalating production by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. Recent estimates have put OPEC output at 22.5 million barrels a day or more in October and some analysts predict that prices could begin to suffer as supply outstrips demand on world markets.

Dollar eases in stable market

LONDON (AP) — The dollar eased in early European trading today on a lack of financial news, reported intervention by the Bank of Japan and Monday's drop on Wall Street, currency dealers said.

Gold prices rose in Zurich.

Dealers said there continues to be little market-affecting news, other than Monday's 47.34-point drop in the Dow Jones industrial average.

"The market is essentially stable," said one trader in Rome.

"There are no signs of a resumption of any movement" in the main currencies, he said.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose 0.18 yen to a closing 143.63 yen. Later, in London, it was quoted at 143.45 yen.

The Bank of Japan reportedly sold dollars for yen during the East Asian day when the dollar approached the psychologically important 144.00-yen barrier. Traders said the move limited the dollar's upward potential, but did not raise fears of another round of concerted central bank intervention.

In London, the dollar fell against the British pound. It cost $1.5813 to buy one pound, compared with $1.5795 late Monday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $381.10 a troy ounce, compared with late Monday's $380.25. At late morning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $385.50.

Silver was quoted in London at a bid price of $5.28 a troy ounce, up from Monday's $5.25.

Market plunges 47 points

NEW YORK (AP) — Worries about corporate profits and interest-rate uncertainties combined to drive stock prices sharply lower in a "blue Monday" atmosphere on Wall Street.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 47.34 points to 2,582.17, the lowest close since its 190-point dive to 2,569.26 on Friday, Oct. 13.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by more than 3 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 355 up, 1,180 down and 441 unchanged.

Wall Street's view of prospects for corporate earnings has worsened steadily over the past few weeks as reports for the third quarter of the year came in below expectations.

Analysts noted that the first few indications for the fourth quarter have also been negative.

That concern had been at least partly counterbalanced by hopes that the Federal Reserve might soon relax its credit policy further, in order to cushion the impact of slowing economic growth.

But last Friday's strongerthan-expected employment figures for October dampened that speculation.

Interest rates rose a bit in the credit markets, putting yields of long-term government bonds in the 7.95 percent-8 percent range.

Auto stocks were especially hard hit by worries about the profit outlook. Ford Motor dropped 1¾ to 43⅜; General Motors 1⅜ to 43, and Chrysler 1⅛ to 19⅞.

Computer and technology issues were also weak with many analysts scaling back their estimates of business spending in the months ahead. International Business Machines fell 1⅜ to 96⅝; Hewlett-Packard 1⅛ to 42¼; Honeywell 1⅛ to 80½, and Digital Equipment 1⅝ to 88⅛.

Other losers among the blue chips included Philip Morris, down 1⅜ at 40¾; General Electric, down ⅞ at 53; International Paper, down 1⅛ at 47½; Chevron, down 4 at 64⅝, and DuPont, down 1⅜ at 113¼.

PBPA lists lineup for meeting

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

A prominent lineup of oil industry officials, including key members of the Bush administration will participate in the Permian Basin Petroleum Association's annual meeting, set for Thursday and Friday.

The highlight of the meeting will be the President's Banquet, with the keynote speech given by Manuel Lujan, Secretary of the Interior. At the same banquet, the PBPA's Top Hand award will be presented to longtime Midland oilman Joseph I. O'Neill.

Special guests include Midlander Martin Allday, solicitor-general of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission and nominee to be it's new chairman; and Barry Williamson of the Department of the Interior.

The annual meeting starts Thursday evening with registration and a reception at the Petroleum Museum.

The meeting then moves to the Midland Hilton Friday morning with a kick-off breakfast from 7:30 to 8:45 a.m. The featured speaker at the breakfast will be Rob Mosbacher Jr., president of Mosbacher Energy Co. in Houston.

Following the breakfast, there will be a session on "Horizontal Drilling in the Permian Basin." Presenters will be Jay Martin of Houston and Dave Reid of Anchorage, both employees of Great Land Directional Drilling Inc. The session will be from 9 to 10:15 a.m.

Next will be a "Capital Hill Update," featuring Danny Conklin, immediate past chairman of the Independent Petroleum Association of America. This session will be from 10:30 to 11:45 a.m.

Railroad Commissioner John Sharp will be the keynote speaker at the general membership luncheon, set from noon to 1:30 p.m. The luncheon agenda will also include various committee reports and awards.

Following the luncheon, there will be a Capital Hill Energy Panel with panelists including U.S. Representatives Larry Combest and Lamar Smith and Texas State Representatives Tom Craddick and Jim McWilliams, New Mexico State Representative Robert Light and Assistant Secreatary of Fossil Energy Michael J. McElwrath of the Department of Energy.

The meeting then moves to the Holiday Inn Country Villa Convention Center for its final event, the President's Banquet, featuring Lujan and the Top Hand award presentation. The banquet begins with a reception from 6 to 7 p.m., followed by the banquet, which concludes around 9 p.m.

The Midland Desk and Derrick Club will be assisting with registration.

FDIC Chairman William Seidman told savings institutions Monday that a bailout of thrifts may be halted unless Congress resolves a funding issue within a few weeks.

S&L bailout hits funding snag

CHICAGO (AP) — The federal official in charge of bailing out the savings and loan industry says he'll soon have to call a halt to thrift institution rescues unless the administration and Congress swiftly resolve a politically touchy financing dispute.

Legislation enacted in August provides $50 billion for closing or rescuing S&Ls to a new agency, the Resolution Trust Corp. But Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. Chairman L. William Seidman, who is in charge of the RTC, says it needs to temporarily borrow at least an additional $50 billion, which would be repaid as the agency sold loans and real estate acquired from failed S&Ls.

Without the temporary funds, the RTC could raise cash either by the quick sale of properties once owned by S&Ls — a move likely to unsettle already depressed real estate markets — or it will have to keep money-losing S&Ls open, adding to the burden on taxpayers, he said.

"We are very close to being out of funds to resolve institutions without additional funds. This is a matter of weeks, not months," Seidman said after delivering a speech Monday to the 97th annual convention of the U.S. League of Savings Institutions.

House postpones Keating hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Banking Committee will have to wait another two weeks to hear Phoenix millionaire Charles H. Keating explain how his Lincoln Savings and Loan Association lost up to $2 billion of federally insured deposits.

But the nation's former chief S&L regulator was expected to tell the panel today that Lincoln became the single biggest collapsed thrift at least partly because of political interference by senators and congressmen, including the committee's own members.

Edwin J. Gray, former chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, was scheduled to testify first today after Keating was granted a two-week extension — until Nov. 21 — to testify.

In previous hearings, Banking Committee Chairman Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, has attempted to focus blame for the magnitude of Lincoln's losses on M. Danny Wall.

Supreme Court lets FERC rule stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today allowed federal officials to place price ceilings on natural gas recovered from a vast underground reservoir in the Texas Panhandle.

The court, without comment, rejected appeals by Texas state officials and gas producers who challenged orders of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

At issue were gas reserves under a panhandle area 124 miles long and 20 miles wide.

The commission in 1984 identified 37 oil well operators it said were interfering with the interstate sale of gas found under the same land as the oil wells.

Because of the underground formations in the Panhandle, oil well operators often must drill through gas-bearing rock to reach the lower-lying oil deposits.

The commission said the oil well operators were taking gas intended for interstate sales and selling it within Texas for higher prices.

The Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 permits some hard-to-produce gas to be sold at higher prices to encourage gas production. The law requires gas previously committed to interstate commerce to be sold at lower prices.

The Texas Railroad Commission, which regulates gas production in the state, joined the oil well operators in claiming the federal agency exceeded its authority and mistakenly classified the Panhandle gas.

TRC okays special rules

DALLAS (AP) — Oryx Energy Co. officials say the Dallas firm has been given state approval to implement its horizontal drilling program in the Pearsall Field in South Texas.

The Texas Railroad Commission approved the Oryx request for special field rules that provide for larger well spacing and higher allowables based on horizontal wellbore length.

The approval was granted for a 12-month trial period.

The company said it intends to drill as many as 85 wells in the Austin Chalk by the end of 1990.

Since releasing test results on seven wells at the Railroad Commission's Austin meeting, Oryx Energy has drilled and completed four wells. Three more wells are being drilled and one is being completed.

"Oryx believes the development of horizontal drilling technology is an important advance for the industry," said James E. McCormick, the company's chief operating officer.

Judge will liquidate Hunt assets

N.Y. Times News Service

DALLAS — Frustrated by the inability of two creditors to reach a compromise in the 14-month-old bankruptcy case of William Herbert Hunt, Federal Judge Harold C. Abramson has said he would order a Chapter 7 liquidation of Hunt's assets on Nov. 20.

The bankruptcy judge blamed the proceeding's impasse on the lawyers for the two creditors, Minpeco S.A., a Peruvian minerals concern that is attempting to recover a $132 million judgment plus interest and expenses from Hunt and his brother, Nelson Bunker Hunt, and Manufacturers Hanover Corp., which is trying to recover a $36 million loan.

"There is no end for the fights, delay and expense of additional hearings," Judge Abramson said Monday.

The two Hunt brothers filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in September 1988 following a jury ruling that they, along with a third brother, Lamar, committed fraud and violated commodity and antitrust laws in attempting to corner the world silver market from August 1979 to March 1980.

The jury had ordered the brothers to pay $132.5 million to Minpeco, but Lamar Hunt settled out of court and the two other brothers made their bankruptcy filing to appeal the award.

Under the various reorganization plans that have been proposed, the Internal Revenue Service, the Hunts' largest creditor, has agreed to take 70 percent of the brothers' estates, leaving creditors with 30 percent to be divided. Nelson Hunt's estate is valued at $240 million and William Hunt's estate is put at $40 million.

But Monday's ruling for a Chapter 7 liquidation is a severe setback for William Hunt's unsecured creditors because the IRS has said in the past, and confirmed Monday, that under Chapter 7 it would exercise its priority right to claim back taxes valued in excess of the estate, leaving nothing for the remaining creditors.

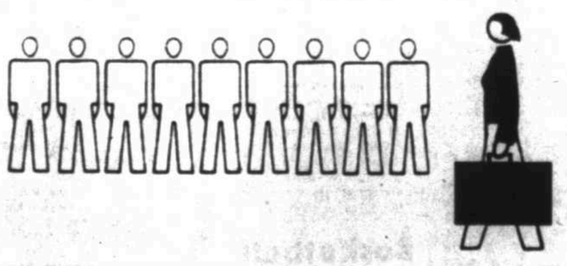

"They are fighting over a train ticket, and the train is leaving the station," said Stephen A. McCartin, bankruptcy lawyer for William Hunt.

McCartin and lawyers for the creditors said the judge's decision to delay the actual conversion to Chapter 7 was an indication that he might accept a reorganization plan prior to that date if the creditors could agree.

Diamond Shamrock reports offshore gas reserves find

DALLAS (SWN) — Diamond Shamrock Offshore Partners, the master limited partnership of Maxus Energy Corp., announced that commercial gas reserves have been discovered on Main Pass 112, a block offshore Louisiana.

The No. 1 well was completed with perforations between 4,142 and 4,152 feet with an alternate completion perforated between 3,705 and 3,715 feet. The lower Miocene sand flowed gas to the surface immediately after perforation, and the well was shut-in until production facilities are in place. The upper sand was not tested and will be produced at a later date.

Well No. 2 was completed with perforations between 5,782 and 5,824 feet with an alternate completion perforated between 4,687 and 4,697 feet. The lower sand tested 2.016 million cubic feet of gas per day (mmcfpd) on a 16/64-inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 1,512 psi. The upper sand was not tested and will be produced at a later date.

The gas from the two wells will be produced through DSP's centralized production facility in the Main Pass area. Initial production from the Main Pass 112 wells is expected by early third quarter 1990.

DSP acquired Main Pass 112 in the March 1988 Central Gulf of Mexico Lease sale and owns 100 pct. interest in the block. This brings the partnership's held-by-production acreage to 40,000 acres in the Main Pass area. DSP's average daily production through the centralized facility is approximately 35 mmcfpd.

Maxus Energy Corporation, the managing general partner of Diamond Shamrock Offshore Partners, is one of the largest independent oil and gas companies.

Wycal, Southwest Gas sign accord

HOUSTON (SWN) — Wyoming-California Pipeline Co. (WyCal) and Southwest Gas Corp. of Las Vegas have executed an agreement under which Southwest Gas would obtain firm transportation capacity for 200 million cubic feet of natural gas a day for 15 years on the WyCal pipeline system.

WyCal, a partnership owned by two subsidiaries of The Coastal Corp., has been authorized by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to build and operate a natural gas pipeline from southwestern to Kern County, California.

Southwest Gas is a diversified natural gas utility and financial services organization. The company has natural gas transmission and distribution operations in Arizona, California and Nevada. Southwest Gas provides natural gas to more than 780,000 customers in its three state service area which stretches from the Arizona-Mexico border to the Nevada-Idaho border and from the Arizona-New Mexico border to the Barstow/Victorville area of California.

With this transaction, WyCal now has signed agreements or letters of intent covering long-term transportation capacity for more than 450 million cubic feet of natural gas a day. As previously announced, WyCal has agreed to provide natural gas transportation services for Pacific Gas and Electric Company, Southern California Edison Company and the City of Long Beach. In addition, Southern California Gas Company has an option to purchase firm capacity for 75 million cubic feet of gas a day.

Pharmacies fight to hold market share

By MONTGOMERY GARRETT
N.Y. Times News Service

There is a drug war in America today that has nothing to do with crack dens and money laundering.

With the average household spending almost five percent of its after tax income on health care — including medicine — pharmacies are fighting to keep what was once their exclusive domain: the retail market for prescription drugs.

Since 1985, health maintenance organizations, doctors and mail-order houses have cornered a growing share of that business and last year sold 15 percent of the nation's $28 billion in prescription drugs.

"Overall, it's not the best of times for the drug retailing industry," said Gary M. Giblen, an analyst at Paine Webber.

Pharmacies, which derive a quarter of their revenues from prescription drugs and use them to lure customers into their stores, have been under pressure for some time.

Over the last decade, as employers increasingly added drugs to their benefits plans, insurance programs have replaced up-front cash purchasesas the dominant form of payment for prescriptions, burdening pharmacies. Now, druggists may wait up to 120 days to be paid.

Growing competition only exacerbated their problems. Supermarkets and convenience stores have recently entered the business.

And with the prices of prescription drugs escalating by 88 percent since 1981 — twice as fast as the Consumer Price Index — many employers have turned to discount mail-order houses or started their own inhouse pharmacies to cut costs.

The latest threat comes from physicians. Faced with heavy competition, rising costs for malpractice insurance and fees frozen by Medicare and Medicaid, many doctors have started to fill prescriptions they write as a way of generating revenues.

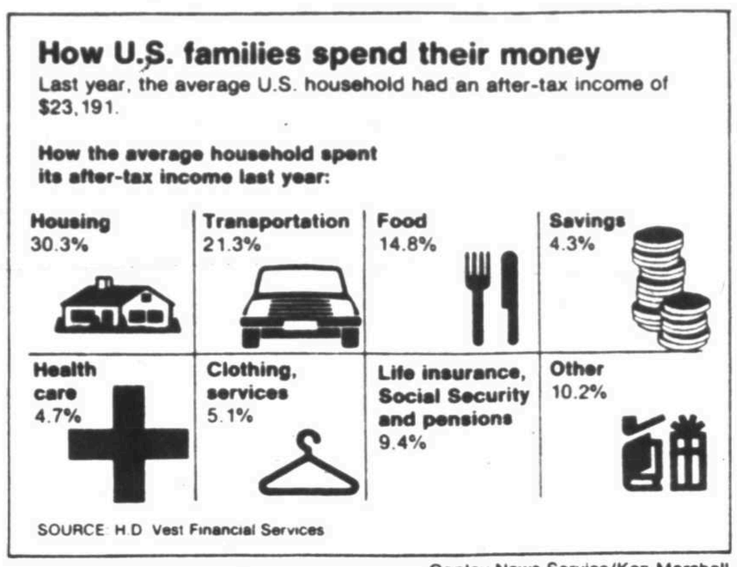

To cope, pharmacies have consolidated to gain efficiencies. The number of stores has remained stable over the last decade at about 60,000.

But many chains have merged, decreasing their number by about 20 percent, according to the National Association of Chain Drugstores, an industry trade group in Alexandria, Va.

For instance, Fay's, a leading chain, with 163 units, established a new division last year to make acquisitions. It hopes to expand its stores by at least 10 percent a year over the next five years, said John A. Kogut, president of the new arm.

Many pharmacies also participate in prescription card programs that give employers discounts on drugs. And they have convinced Congress to investigate discriminatory pricing practices by manufacturers that they claim give mail order houses an advantage.

They are pressing state legislatures to pass laws to restrict dispensing by doctors.

Declining drug cards

Nestled in the wallets of an increasing number of Americans are plastic cards that require their owners to pay only a small fee of $1 to $5 for a prescription. Without filling out any forms, their employers and insurers pick up the remaining cost.

Designed as a cost-savings tool for employers and as a way for pharmacies to lock in business, these prescription cards have spread like a rash over the last five years.

Today, about 45 million of the approximately 165 million Americans whose prescription drug purchases are covered by major medical plans are cardholders, according to Marvin Krasnansky, a vice president at PCS Inc. in Scottsdale, Ariz., the largest distributor of these cards.

But the business has recently hit a wall. Few pharmacists have prospered from participating in these programs.

In exchange for the business these cards bring in, participating pharmacies generally offer discounts of up to 15 percent off retail prices to card processors like P.C.S. that process claims and charge their clients — employers and insurers — about 75 cents per claim.

But those discounts have virtually wiped out druggists' profit margins. "The net effect is that we are reaching a point where many pharmacies are saying 'We aren't going to participate in your program,'" said Thomas E. Menighan of the American Pharmaceutical Association, which represents retail pharmacies.

The savings to employers have also proven elusive. "The convenience of the cards means much greater usage of prescription drugs by employees," said Larry S. Chapman, a health care consultant in Seattle. As a result, many companies are modifying their use of the programs.

Growth of prescription cards is flat. Last year, card administrators collected about $120 million in fees, according to Alex. Brown & Sons.

About 55 percent of those sales went to PCS, which is majority-owned by the McKesson Corp., a leading drug wholesaler. Paid Prescriptions, a unit of Medco Containment Services, a mail-order drug distributor, claimed 17 percent of sales, the next-largest share.

Now, Medco is retreating from the business and is trying to convert Paid customers into mail-order clients.

PCS, whose sales have grown by an average of 28 percent a year since 1983, now offers a system called MajoRx, which discourages overuse by requiring employees to pay an annual deductible on prescriptions.

Mail order houses

The protests of retail pharmacists have not slowed the rapid growth of prescriptions sold by mail — at least not yet.

Mail distribution of drugs has mushroomed as corporations rushed to benefit from savings of up to 50 percent off retail prices. The market has been growing by an average of 30 percent a year and should exceed $1.3 billion this year, according to Alex. Brown & Sons.

"It caught on in the early '80s when benefits managers began to see that drugs were accounting for 9 percent to 12 percent of the total benefit bills for employees," said James V. Manning, senior executive vice president of Medco Containment, the largest mail-order distributor with a 55-percent share.

The boom has certainly been good to companies like Medco. Huge employers like General Motors, Aetna, the states of New York, California and Ohio and the International Ladies Garment Workers Union now pay Medco to fill prescriptions sent in by their employees.

Revenues of the Fair Lawn, N.J.-based company climbed to more than $728 million in the fiscal year ending in June, 1989, up from $30 million in 1983.

Now, the industry is branching out. Most mail-order houses concentrate on maintenance drugs, which account for 70 percent of all prescriptions nationwide and can easily be ordered in advance because they are taken regularly for such ailments as heart disease, ulcers and high blood pressure.

But at least one company, American Prescription Inc., specializes in acute medications like antibiotics, which are needed on a less predictable basis. The company promises delivery within eight hours.

Mail-order houses can offer cheaper prices than pharmacies because they have lower overheads.

They also substitute generics for more expensive brand name drugs more often than pharmacies do. Medco substitutes generics in about 24 percent of its prescriptions, compared with the 12 percent rate of the average retail pharmacy, according to Alex. Brown & Sons.

Retailers prefer the higher profit margins of branded drugs.

But pharmacists claim that mail-order houses also get special discounts from manufacturers because they buy in greater bulk.

"It's possible for a mail-order firm to buy for a penny what pharmacists buy for a buck," said Todd Dankmyer of the National Association of Retail Druggists, a trade group.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Coniston Partners ruffles feathers of UAL

CHICAGO (AP) — Coniston Partners wants to ruffle the feathers of UAL Corp. and force a payday for investors, but it's unclear whether its efforts to shake up United Airlines' parent will fly with shareholders and fractious unions.

Coniston, a New York investment group, has made money from United before, when it helped force the airline's former parent, Allegis Corp., to restructure in 1987.

Things may be more complicated the second time around, in the wake of a failed $6.75 billion buyout attempt by a pilot-management group and with United's three largest unions seeking new contracts, analysts said Monday.

Securities professionals given prison terms

NEW YORK (AP) — Five former officials of Princeton-Newport Partners LP and a former Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. trader were sentenced to three- and six-month prison terms in the first racketeering trial of securities professionals.

The sentences pronounced Monday by U.S. District Judge Robert Carter were considerably less than the maximum 20 years the defendants faced on the racketeering count.

Pickens says limit Japanese investment in U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Japanese companies are building plants in this country to ride U.S. coattails into European markets in the next decade, Texas oilman T. Boone Pickens said.

Pickens also told a news conference Monday that legislation may be needed to restrict Japanese investment in this country until the Japanese open up their financial markets.

Former Chicago Merc head failed to stop fraud

CHICAGO (AP) — A former Chicago Mercantile Exchange chairman failed to stop two employees of his trading firm from systematically defrauding customers, a Commodity Futures Trading Commission attorney said.

Brian Monieson, head of GNP Commodities Inc., "refused to see what everyone else could see, and that was that his customers were being robbed," CFTC attorney Patricia Donahue said Monday at an administrative proceeding against Monieson and the others. But Monieson's attorney, Jerrold Salzman, said the CFTC's case is flawed.

Congress won't regulate high-risk LBOs

WASHINGTON — After expressing intense interest early this year in regulating leveraged buyouts and their financial underpinning, high-risk, high-yield "junk bonds," Congress's attention has waned.

The lawmakers lost enthusiasm, in part, because the market for such transactionshas weakened, but for political reasons as well.

Within the administration, concern about the economic and social costs of rapidly growing corporate debt has been outweighed by the antipathy of top officials toward government regulation of the markets.

Without a change of heart in the administration, Congress seems unlikely to move further.

Program trading results in stocks upside

NEW YORK — The furor over program trading and index arbitrage has obscured a telling point: in the seven years since stock-index futures began trading, their overall effect has almost certainly raised, not lowered, stock prices.

There has been volatility, but most of it has been on the up side.

Certainly, stock prices have risen during the period. The Standard & Poor's 500 index has nearly tripled since April 21, 1982, when futures contracts on the index were introduced.

Japanese firms gear up for chip battle

TOKYO — Two major Japanese electronics firms, Hitachi and Mitsubishi, gearing up for what they expect to be intense competition in coming years, have disclosed plans to increase their investment in production of a powerful new computer chip.

Japanese companies are racing to take the lead in production of 4-megabit dynamic random access memory (DRAM) chips that can store four times as much information as the most powerful chip now sold on a mass basis, the 1-megabit DRAM.

Coors Golden site will get sake brewery

NISHINOMIYA, Japan — Tatsuuma-Honke Brewing Co. will build a sake brewery next to the Coors beer brewery in Golden, Col., a company spokesman announced. The company hopes to take advantage of the growing popularity in the United States of sake and Japanese food.

Tatsuuma-Honke reached an agreement with the Adolph Coors Co. to acquire approximately 8 acres on the same grounds as the Coors brewery. Construction of the sake brewery will begin in April. Total cost will be about $7 million.

Chrysler facing tough financial times again

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. once again is facing tough financial times, but things are different than they were 12 years ago when Chairman Lee Iacocca sought help in Congress for loan insurance.

The company, analysts said Monday, is moving aggressively to cut its costs and improve profitability, and the next target may be labor. Chrysler is trying to carve $1 billion from its $26 billion annual budget and is trimming its salaried work force by about 8 percent, or 2,300 jobs.

The company is changing its structure, but not key personnel or their titles.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Are market thrift certificates insured?

BY BILL DOYLE

Doyle

Q. A local brokerage firm is offering for sale "money market thrift certificates" issued by an equipment leasing company. The certificates come in various maturities, in amounts of $100 and more and pay high interest — ranging from 10.6 percent for six months to as much as 12.25 percent for 10 years.

I don't have a lot of money, so this looks good to me. I would also like to put money into this for my grandchildren, if it is safe. Are these money market thrift certificates insured by the government?

A. No. That's the shortest answer possible. But it's long enough, if you don't want to stray from the absolute safety of federal deposit insurance such as you get at banks, savings and loan associations and credit unions.

The high interest on those certificates should have tipped you off that there is risk involved. They are not suited for people who do not have what you term "as a lot of money." My advice is to leave those certificates to people who have ample funds and who can afford to lose some.

In a deal such as this, a leasing company raises money by selling those certificates. The company uses that money to buy equipment and leases out the equipment. Virtually any kind of equipment might be involved in the leasing, ranging from kitchen stoves to restaurants to jumbo jet aircraft to airlines.

If all goes well, the company's leasing charges are high enough to meet its operating expenses, pay the interest on the certificates and pocket a profit.

But when things don't go as planned, the company might not have enough leasing income rolling in and might have to skip payments on the certificates.

Q. My $20,000 certificate of deposit pays 13.75 percent interest. I would like to use the yearly interest to live on and keep the principal intact.

What should I do when the CD matures in 1994?

A. My, you do plan ahead. Normally, that's a virtue in things financial. However, it is impossible to say for sure what will be the right place to put your money in the year 1994. Assuming you want rock-solid safety, the natural move will be to keep your money in a CD at a federally insured bank, S&L or CU.

Just don't expect to get 13.75 percent interest after your present CD matures. You evidently obtained a long-term CD some years ago, when interest rates were much higher. Those days are long gone. Although this column shies away from predicting future trends in interest rates, I'll go far enough out on a limb to say it's more than unlikely we'll see 13.75 percent paid on federally insured CDs.

When your CD matures, you will have to settle for whatever the going interest rates happens to be at that time.

Q. I'm elected by the women in my group to ask for information. Several of us have cashed CDs before maturity at S&Ls and banks, thereby forfeiting some of our interest as penalties.

When filling out our 1989 income tax returns, can we deduct the forfeited interest from the amount of interest sent to us? It doesn't seem fair to pay tax on interest earned but then taken back from us.

A. Definitely unfair! You do not pay tax on that interest penalty — only if you file a Form 1040 federal income tax return. On Line 28 of that form, under the heading "Adjustments to Income," you list that penalty and thereby remove it from your taxable income.

If you file short Form 1040A or super-short Form 1040EZ, you're stuck. There's no place on those forms to report early withdrawal penalties.

Solution. When you have been hit with a CD early withdrawal penalty, file Form 1040. It's not all that difficult.

Doyle welcomes written questions, but he can provide answers only through the column.

MBCE preparing resource center

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

When the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepeneurs was formed in 1986, it's primary goal was the support of black businesses in Midland.

To that end, the chamber is establishing a Business Resource Center in the chamber offices at 2707 N. Big Spring.

MBCE President Robbyne Fuller told members at Monday's monthly meeting that the center is nearly complete and that plans are to open it on the chamber's fourth anniversary, Feb. 10. She added that the chamber is currently seeking the donation of a television and videocassette recorder.

She told members that the minority community needed to develop a "start-up business mindset. We want to look at self-sufficiency," adding that the new resource center will work to help start-up businesses as well as established businesses.

Another emphasis of the MBCE is networking, and with the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays fast approaching, the chamber plans to mix business and pleasure.

The chamber is planning a mixer for December 2 at the Midland Center from 6 p.m. to midnight.

Clem Johnson, MBCE board member and part of the task force planning the mixer, reported that it would be a combination mixer, mini trade show, business card exchange, networking and membership drive. He said hopes are to have 250 attend the event.

"We think this can be a vital event because it's taking place in a festive season," Johnson said. He added that he is seeking approximately three sponsors for the mixer.

Dale Andrews, executive director of the Northeast YMCA has his eyes closer to the present, specifically the upcoming Thanksgiving holiday.

Noting that children sometimes get left out of the festivities, Andrews and his wife are planning a special Thanksgiving dinner for children at the Northeast YMCA on Nov. 18. "It'll be a complete Thanksgiving dinner and the children can get dressed up in their suits or dresses. It'll be an elegant affair."

Cost is $3 for childre 6 to 10 years old, and $5 for those 11 and up. Andrews told MBCE members that Albertsons has donated six turkeys for the dinner and M System the other food, and other businesses have donated other items such as door prizes.

The Northeast Y is also planning a three mile walk and run for Jan. 13 as part of festivities celebrating Martin Luther King Jr. Day. Andrews, who joined the YMCA in March, said he is pleased with the efforts his staff has made to increase community support and reminded members that events such as the MLK walk-run need community support to become annual events.

In other business, MBCE Vice President James Fuller reported that he has received calls from parents regarding the Excel Youth program.

BAILOUT—

The bailout agency has handled 33 thrift failures so far, has another 260 institutions under its control and expects to take over 200 to 300 more in coming months.

But it is caught in a dispute between the administration, which wants the additional borrowing kept out of the federal budget deficit, and congressional Democrats, who would swell the deficit by tens of billions of dollars, increasing pressure on President Bush to agree to a tax increase.

"That's obviously a hot political question. ... We're kind of caught in the middle," Seidman said.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., who as chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee is one of the key legislators pressing for the S&L borrowing to be "on budget," told 3,600 convention delegates that Congress and the administration are acting irresponsibly in avoiding consideration of a tax increase.

"We must stop pretending that taxes must not be part of the debate and start talking about the fairest and most efficient way to raise revenue," he said.

Meanwhile, Seidman questioned whether two provisions of the S&L law were hurting the industry's long-run prospects. One forces S&Ls starting July 1991 to devote 70 percent of their assets to housing, up from 60 percent currently. The other imposes higher deposit insurance premiums on thrifts compared with commercial banks.

Braniff halts all flights

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Cash-starved Braniff Inc. suspended its 46 daily passenger flights and said the airline might be sold, prompting anger by employees who stuck with the carrier through two bankruptcy proceedings.

In a brief statement issued at midnight Monday, Braniff said the action was taken to preserve assets while a reorganization plan is developed.

There were no immediate reports of passengers being stranded.

"These people that bought Braniff, they need to be put on trial by Braniff employees and taken out for a public flogging," Leo Bailey, a laid-off customer service agent, said when he heard the news in Kansas City, Mo.

The suspension of flights after came as a surprise to many of the employees who remained with the airline after it filed for protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the U.S. bankruptcy code Sept. 28 for the second time.

Under a court-administered reorganization plan, the company had put 46 of its 256 pre-Sept. 28 flights back in the air by Friday, said Sandy Smith, a spokeswoman at Braniff's headquarters in Orlando.

But the effort was doomed by a severe cash shortage, she said.

"We didn't come up with any other alternative financing and options like that. There just wasn't any more cash," Smith said.

The last flights were arriving at about the time of the announcement and the planes would remain at their destinations indefinitely, Smith said.

Braniff will try to expand its charter airline service while studying its options, including sale of the company, said William G. McGee, the chairman, president and chief executive officer.

The airline lost $31.8 million during the first six months of this year on sales of $293 million.

On Friday, Braniff laid off about 100 mostly administrative employees.

The company advised ticketholders to check if other airlines would honor the tickets.

People who bought tickets with a credit card were told to consult with the card company, and those who purchased tickets with cash or a check after Sept. 28 were advised to call 1-800-282-5586 for a refund.

The company didn't address the possibility of layoffs, other than to say employees would be notified of their status, a prospect that left union officials frustrated.

"What a mess," said V.O. Delle-Femine, executive director of the Aircraft Mechanics Fraternal Association, upon hearing the news in Rhode Island.

About 55 machinists were at work Monday, down from 214 before the Chapter 11 filing, Delle-Femine said.

CITGO

The Citgo purchase comes on the heels last week of PDVSA's forming a joint venture with Union Oil of California that included 50 percent shares of major assets such as Unocal's Chicago refinery near Lemont, Ill.

Venezuela also owns part of four refineries in West Germany, two in Sweden, one in Belgium, and the huge Isla refinery in Curacao, capable of processing 300,000 barrels a day.

In the U.S., besides the Citgo and Unocal refineries, PDVSA also bought outright on Jan. 1, the Corpus Christi, Texas, refinery previously owned by Champlin Refining.

PHARMACY-

In fact, the price discrepancies are now being investigated by the Senate's Select Committee on Aging. The committee, which held hearings in July and will hold them again next week, aims to determine why Medicare and pharmacies pay manufacturers so much more for drugs than the Veterans Administration, and why drug makers charge more for drugs in America than they do in Europe.

Ultimately, it hopes to make the prices more equitable, which could eliminate some of mail-order houses' advantage. But such action could take years, said Kris Phillips, the committee's press secretary.

Doctors and medicines

To Dr. Arnold D. Panzer, dispensing prescriptions simply makes good business sense.

"I have a seven-day-a week, walk-in, primary care practice, so dispensing medicine is in line with the focus of my practice — convenience," he said. "My patients don't have to schlep over to a pharmacy."

Retail pharmacists, however, feel differently. Last year, a group of local druggists picketed Panzer's practice in Babylon, N.Y., carrying signs that read, "Physician Dispensing for Profit: Just Say No."

Pharmacists, no doubt, don't relish the added competition. But they say their chief objection to dispensing by doctors is its inherent conflict of interest.

"Doctors keep a relatively limited inventory in their offices, and there is a tendency to prescribe that product because that is the one they will profit from," said Dankmyer of the retail druggist association.

Pharmacists have taken their grievances to Congress and state houses. Last year, a bill that would have curtailed dispensing by doctors died in the House of Representatives because many legislators thought it was a matter for the states.

After reviewing the issue, a few states like California and Florida adopted laws lenient toward such dispensing. But some states restrict the practice. Massachusetts has prohibited it since 1982. And this year, New York is expected to pass a law limiting most physicians to selling only a 72-hour supply of drugs.

While doctors dispense all medications in Japan, the world's second-largest prescription drug market after the United States, few in America do so.

The practice, commcn in America after World War II, disappeared as doctoring became more sophisticated and drugs proliferated. But drug analysts estimate that as many as 10 percent of all American physicians now sell medicines. And they expect the practice to grow.

After all, dispensing drugs generates income for doctors. "Sure I make a profit from it," Panzer said. "We mark it up a certain amount, but it's often still cheaper than the local pharmacies."

A recent survey by Newsweek magazine showed that doctor-dispensed drugs were generally cheaper than those from local pharmacies.

And that is why the notion may catch on with insurers.

"As retail prescription prices continue to go up and third-party payers gain confidence that doctors aren't abusing the privilege, you will see more doctors doing it," said Steven I. Geringer, executive vice president of Clinical Pharmaceuticals Inc., a drug repackager in Nashville.

That will be a welcome development for drug repackagers, which custom package drugs mainly for doctors.

The resurgence in doctor dispensing has already revived the repackaging industry, which had sales of $60 million last year, up from $15 million in 1985, according to Frost & Sullivan, a market research firm in New York. Sales could grow to $258 million by 1993.

"Physician dispensing has become a whipping boy for the retail pharmacy industry," Geringer said. "We're like a raindrop compared to an ocean."

Anyone can talk about great rates. We prefer, simply, to show them. Of course, we have a lot more than great rates. We have great choices.

So, whether you're looking for a liquid investment or a long-term savings plan, we have just what you're looking for. Not only do you get great rates and great choices, you get the strength and stability of the largest bank in Texas. So stop by one of over 125 locations in Texas.

Now that our numbers have done a little talking, we'd love to chat about your investments in person.

GENERAL NEWS

A group of East Germans take their belongings from a friend's car Monday as they prepare to walk to a border crossing in Pomezi, Czechoslovakia, for passage to West Germany.

East German cabinet resigns under fire

BERLIN (AP) — The East German Cabinet resigned today, amid growing calls within the Communist Party's ranks for reform and a change in leadership.

The entire 44-man cabinet stepped down, spokesman Wolfgang Meyer said. The government will remain in office until the Parliament elects a new council of ministers. He did not say when such an election would occur.

The party's governing Central Committee was to meet Wednesday. Today's meeting of the 21-member ruling Politburo followed fresh calls for the resignation of the entire leadership. Thousands of East Germans continued to flee their communist homeland for new lives in the West.

New Communist Party leader Egon Krenz has said five elderly members closely associated with former leader Erich Honecker will be replaced by the end of the week. Two other Politburo members lost their jobs when Krenz took over Oct. 18.

The East Berlin newspaper Junge Welt, organ of the country's Communist Youth organization, had said today the leaders "should resign without any delay" to make way for a new Politburo and a new Cabinet that will implement reforms.

Dresden's Communist Mayor Wolfgang Berghofer also urged the resignations of the Politburo and the Cabinet. Three small parties that have been allied with the Communists also have asked the leadership to resign.

A member of Leipzig's Communist city government, Bernhard Knupp, urged the party's ruling Politburo and leaders in Parliament to resign to make way for younger reformers.

Sunday, Culture Minister Hans-Joachim Hoffmann also called for a complete Politburo reshuffle.

The changes and promised reforms have failed to stop the exodus of East Germans, who poured into West Germany today at a rate of about 120 an hour.

West German federal border police said 28,000 refugees had arrived by late this morning in the latest surge, which began early Saturday when East Germany's Communist leaders began allowing free exit via Czechoslovakia.

Police spokesman Karl Heinz Horndasch said the East Germans were being taken to 56 temporary shelters nationwide.

About 500,000 people demonstrated in Leipzig Monday night in what has become a weekly ritual, and more than 200,000 others took part in street protests in at least six other cities.

The marchers demanded free elections and the legalization of opposition groups, challenging the Communist Party's political monopoly.

They also ridiculed a new draft law published earlier in the day that envisages 30 days a year of foreign travel for each East German.

Communist leaders have proposed the law to stem a tide of refugees from their country, but people are demanding the right to unlimited foreign travel.

So far this year, more than 175,000 East Germans — more than 1 percent of the population of 16.6 million — have moved to West Germany by emigrating legally, escaping or failing to return from approved trips abroad. West Germany gives them automatic citizenship.

Namibians wait in mile-long lines to vote

WINDHOEK, Namibia (AP) — Voters stood in lines more than a mile long today as balloting began in an election that is to lead to independence for Africa's last colony.

Authorities reported violations of election rules and at least one attempt to distribute bogus pamphlets but said there had been no major disturbances.

"The behavior of the voting public has been an example to the rest of the world," said Gerhard Roux, spokesman for the South African-installed territorial government.

The U.N.-monitored elections are for a 72-member assembly that is to write a constitution. Namibia, ruled by South Africa for 74 years, is expected to become independent early next year.

"After all the years of waiting, the people of Namibia themselves, and no one else, will have their say in free and fair elections," the U.N. special representative, Martti Ahtisaari, said in a radio broadcast as five days of voting began in the southern African territory.

There are 701,488 registered voters in Namibia, about 60 percent of them illiterate. The population was 1.3 million in 1981, when the last census was taken, but is believed to be far higher now.

The key issue in the elections was whether the South-West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO), favored to win the most votes, would capture the two-thirds majority needed to write a constitution without consulting any of the other nine parties.

"Today we are finally burying apartheid colonialism," SWAPO leader Sam Nujoma told reporters at a polling station in Katutura, the main black neighborhood on the edge of Windhoek.

"There is a beautiful lady expecting a baby," Nujoma told a cheering, singing crowd at a rally Monday night. "That lady is mother Namibia, and that baby is the freedom and independence of this land."

The queue of voters stretched for about 1.2 miles when the polls opened in Katutura. Long lines also were reported elsewhere.

Namibians may vote daily through Saturday and Chief Electoral Officer Abraham Visser said he was confident results would be available Nov. 15.

More than 7,000 U.N. military and civilian representatives — one for every 1,000 voters — are in predominantly black Namibia and have supervised a massive campaign to promote voting and prevent fraud.

All voters are required to dip their fingers in invisible ink after they cast their ballot. The ink is indelible for five days. When voters enter the booths at the polling stations they must put their fingers under an ultra-violet light, which will reveal the ink if they already have voted.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Israeli jets rocket Shiite rebel bases

NABATIYEH, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli air force jets rocketed bases of the Shiite Moslem guerrilla group Hezbollah in southeastern Lebanon this morning. There were no immediate reports of casualties.

Reporters in Nabatiyeh said at least two helicopters were involved in the attack. Smoke billowed from the stricken targets as ground defenders fired at the Israeli aircraft with anti-aircraft guns. No hits were observed.

An Israeli army communique said Hezbollah targets were struck in Mazraat Ayn Busiwar, 14 miles north of the Israeli border. "All targets were hit and our planes returned safely to base," the communique said. It did not mention casualties or damage.

A police spokesman in Lebanon said Hezbollah fighters would not allow police into the area and that it was not known if anyone was killed or injured.

Aoun supporters attack

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Christian teen-agers today beat up vendors who ignored a strike that was called to show solidarity with the army commander, Gen. Michel Aoun, in his opposition to the new president, witnesses said.

Rene Mouawad, who was elected president Sunday, consulted with politicians in Syrian-controlled north Lebanon in an effort to form a government.

Aoun, who headed a Christian Cabinet for 14 months prior to Mouawad's election, remained in the shell-ravaged presidential palace in suburban Baabda, refusing to relinquish it to Mouawad.

Chinese police arrest 10

BEIJING (AP) — Police arrested 10 people in the southern province of Guizhou and accused them of trying to overthrow the Communist Party, an official newspaper said today.

The Legal Daily said the 10 were members of "an organized, planned and programmed counterrevolutionary group" called "The China Three People's Principles Liberation Party."

The three principles of nationalism, democracy and the people's livelihood were put forward by Sun Yatsen, who is viewed as the father of modern China. They are still espoused by the rival Nationalist government on Taiwan.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1989

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Look forward to new challenges. Your ability to adjust to change will be a tremendous asset. A family member will make an announcement in February that could throw you for a loop. You recover brilliantly! Wise real estate investments begin to pay off in midsummer, easing your financial worries. A summer vacation will put you in touch with wonderful new friends. You benefit greatly from a fresh perspective.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Katharine Hepburn, singer Patti Page, astronomer Edmund Halley, singer Bonnie Raitt, correspondent Morley Safer.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Employment affairs could be affected by developments beyond your control, but the end results are favorable. A letter or telephone call makes you happy. Settle your differences with loved ones.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Mate or partner is quietly ambitious. Discuss your concerns openly to eliminate future career vs. home conflicts. A youngster is eager to take on new challenges. Loosen the apron strings.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A career change is on the horizon for those dissatisfied with their current progress. A longtime relationship could end abruptly. The break-up proves less painful than anticipated.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A family celebration must be carefully planned in order to keep expenses down and avoid misunderstandings. A co-worker of the opposite sex is sympathetic to your mood. Spend a quiet evening relaxing at home.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Things are starting to turn around for you. Your children are a source of great joy and pride. You should be in high spirits. Good friends add an upbeat note. Romance moves into high gear.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A career decision grows out of discussions with a trusted adviser. Excessive modesty can hinder career growth. Postpone shopping for expensive items. A blind date could be a pleasant surprise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Get your personal paperwork and banking affairs in better order. It will save you time later on. An admiring family member congratulates you on a recent success. Accept any compliments with good grace.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your ingenuity will make this a productive day at work. Do not count on receiving too much cooperation from your co-workers, however. Your loved ones never seemed dearer. Do not spoil them!

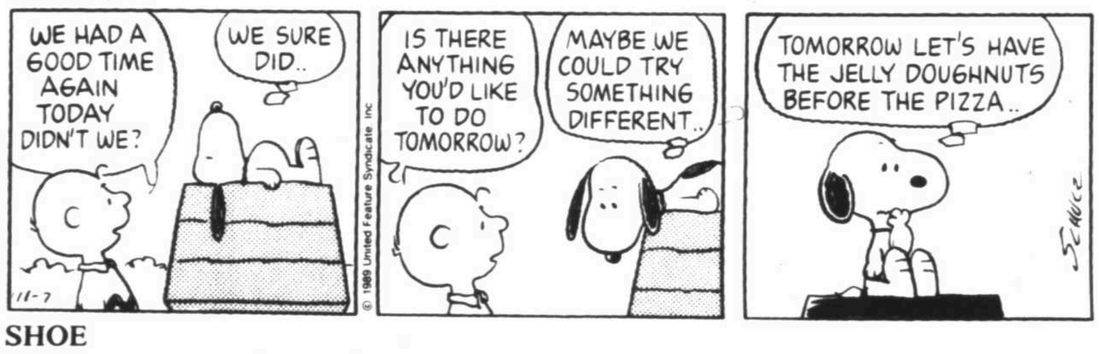

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A few kind words or good deeds can turn a dull day into a resplendent one. Anything that is done with love bears a special trademark. Improving communication with your mate is essential.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Recommendations from experts in their fields should be accepted. Be suspicious of get-rich-quick schemes. Learning new technical skills will boost your earning power. Enroll in classes.

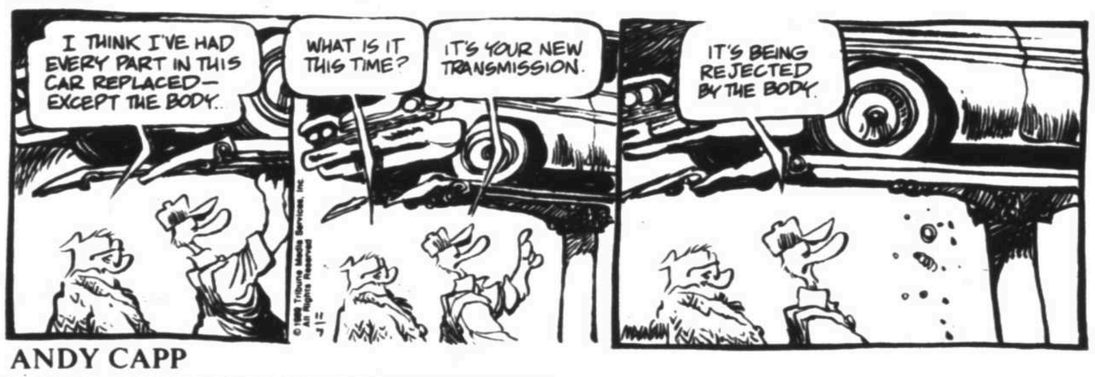

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your financial and emotional interests may be linked, creating domestic tension. Clear up a misunderstanding soon. Overseas news will delight you. An old romance can be rekindled.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Resist an urge to gamble. Success will mean nothing to you if you abandon your high ideals. Does a new venture sound strictly aboveboard? If not, drop the idea. Other opportunities will arise.

Dear Charlie:

At the moment I am in Italy filming a thriller. It brings to mind how similar are the tasks that face a declarer and a detective. Each must ferret out the clues that lead to the solution of the problem at hand.

Which reminds me of this hand I played a couple of years ago at the annual tournament in Crans-sur-Sierre. My team was leading the competition and it came up halfway through a match against our closest challengers. My partner's passed-hand raise to four spades was a trifle aggressive, but then you know that Paul Chemla is never shy in the bidding.

West led a diamond, East won the ace and returned the queen. My problem was to avoid losing three club tricks. I drew trumps in two rounds and, since even a winning finesse in hearts would not provide a solution, I eliminated hearts by ruffing the third round.

I now knew East had started with ace-queen of diamonds and queen of hearts. Had he held the ace of clubs as well, he would surely have opened the bidding. I was about to lead a low club to the jack when it dawned on me that there was something unusual about the defense. If East held nothing in clubs, why didn't he shift to that suit at trick two? Ergo, he had to have a holding that made a club lead unattractive—the queen.

So I led a low club from hand and ducked! I did not mind who won. Actually, East won the nine and returned the ten, but I had no problem in letting that run to the jack and thereby hold my club losses to two tricks.

As ever,
Omar

Bette Davis' daughters to get nothing

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Bette Davis left most of her nearly $1 million estate to her son and a close friend but nothing to her daughters — one of whom wrote about being raised by a "hateful mother."

Also left out of the will were Davis' two grandsons.

The 10-page will was filed Monday for probate in Manhattan.

"I declare that I have intentionally and with full knowledge omitted to provide herein for my daughter, Margot, and my daughter, Barbara, and-or my grandsons, Ashley Hyman and Justin Hyman," Davis said in the will dated Sept. 2, 1987.

Davis, who died of cancer at age 81 on Oct. 6, had been estranged from her daughter, Barbara Davis Hyman of Charlottesville, Va., since Hyman's 1985 book, "My Mother's Keeper."

Hyman wrote that Davis had been "an abusive, domineering and hateful mother," and "a grotesque alcoholic" largely responsible for her own mistreatment by some of her three husbands.

Davis replied in a 1987 book, "This 'n' That," that she had been victimized by a "lying and ungrateful child." She also admitted she was "pained" by the estrangement.

Hyman's two sons, Ashley and Justin, also received no bequest. The actress' lawyer, Harold Schiff, explained: "Unfortunately, their mother chose to have them follow her rather than their hearts."

"Down the road they'll be sorry," Schiff said. "Twenty years from now they'll say, 'That was our grandmother; why didn't we know her.'"

Manhattan Surrogate Court Judge Renee Roth directed Hyman to notify the court by Dec. 5 if she plans to contest the will.

Davis' adopted daughter, Margot Mosher Merrill of Geneva, N.Y., was diagnosed as mentally retarded at age 3 and has been in special schools and institutions since.

The will did not specify how Margot Merrill would be provided for, or how she has been supported in the past.

Davis' adopted son, Michael Woodman Merrill of Chestnut Hill, Mass., receives about half the $600,000 to $1 million estate. His wife, Shu Shu, was left clothing.

Michael and Margot Merrill were adopted when Davis was married to actor Gary Merrill.

Kathryn Sermack, a friend and secretary who lived with Davis in her Los Angeles-area apartment, also gets about half the estate. Sermack also was left cookbooks and recipes, a gold charm bracelet, other jewelry, a desk, furniture and silverware with the initials "BD."

Robin Brown of Westport, Conn., described by Schiff as "an old, old, old, friend" of Davis' from their childhood in Massachusetts, was bequeathed a painting entitled, "A Red Barn," a photo portrait of Davis, and a pearl and sapphire watch.

Davis died of cancer at Neuilly-sur-Seine, France, where she was being treated for cancer. Schiff said she had undergone a mastectomy in 1983 and had a stroke a few years later.

Davis was buried at her family's plot at Forest Lawn in Glendale, Calif.

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Tammy Faye Bakker agreed Monday to vacate her storefront church by the end of the month after the owner of the shopping mall threatened to sue to get her evicted.

"Mrs. Bakker has agreed that they will be out by Nov. 30, that there will be no more delays, that there will be no more unforeseen problems," attorney Ed Leinster said after meeting with the wife of imprisoned evangelist Jim Bakker.

The Bakkers' Orlando ministry, which has been conducting Sunday church services and occasional television gospel shows out of a makeshift church-studio for about four months, owed at least $73,000 in rent, said Shoppers World mall owner Stewart Gilman.

Gilman had ordered the financially strapped ministry to leave almost two weeks ago, but Mrs. Bakker and her supporters continued to hold services there the past two Sundays.

On Sunday, she told followers that services would continue to be held there until the ministry found a new, inexpensive site to lease, preferably for no more than $5 per square foot.

Gilman contacted Leinster, who is his attorney.

Mrs. Bakker has vowed to continue the ministry. Her only comment Monday was, "We're looking for a place in Orlando."

Jim Bakker, 49, was convicted of bilking "lifetime partners" of the now-defunct PTL of $3.7 million to support the Bakkers' lavish lifestyle. He is serving a 45-year sentence at the Federal Medical Center in Rochester, Minn.

BOSTON (AP) — Kitty Dukakis, wife of Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, reportedly has been admitted to a hospital with an undisclosed ailment.

Dukakis

Mrs. Dukakis had complained of lethargy and sluggishness and was taken to Brigham and Women's Hospital shortly after 10 p.m. Monday, WNEV-TV of Boston, reported today.

Hospital officials refused to confirm she was a patient or release any information.

A spokeswoman for Mrs. Dukakis, Mindy Lubber, said she knew nothing about the case, but said she would go to the hospital early today to answer reporters' questions.

Mrs. Dukakis underwent four weeks of treatment for alcoholism at a clinic in Rhode Island after her husband's unsuccessful presidential campaign. She revealed previously that she was addicted to diet pills for years.

Quinn

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Actor Anthony Quinn withdrew from a production of "A Walk in the Woods" after experiencing chest pains, organizers said.

"It became clear he could not handle the show," said co-producer Barry Weisler. "He ... won't be permitted to travel until he is out of pain and the doctor gives his approval."

Quinn's withdrawal Saturday forced cancellation of previews scheduled for Sunday, today and Wednesday at Syracuse Stage.

Stage officials said Monday the 74-year-old actor was under the care of his personal physician in New York City. They said there was no diagnosis.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Stormie Jones, the world's first and only surviving heart-liver transplant recipient, is receiving a new drug to combat organ rejection, hospital officials say.

Stormie, 12, of White Settlement, Texas, was admitted to Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh last Friday because she had become slightly jaundiced, said hospital spokeswoman Lynn McMahon.

Transplant surgeons have begun to giv her FK 506, a new anti-rejection drug recently approved for testing by the U.S. Federal Drug Administration.

Stormie was experiencing chronic liver rejection and was not responding to increased levels of cyclosporine, Miss McMahon said. Developed in Japan in 1984, FK 506 can be taken in lower doses than cyclosporine and is believed to cause fewer side effects.

Doctors will continue to monitor her progress with the new drug, Miss McMahon said.

VA REAL ESTATE

Now Available to Veterans or Non-Veterans

30 YR. FIXED-RATE FINANCING AVAILABLE

NOTICE
All properties are sold in their "AS IS" condition and the VA makes no warranties expressed or implied in respect thereto. For inspection of the following homes and assistance in submitting an offer see your local real estate broker.

CLOSING DATE FOR RECEIPT OF OFFERS IS 4:30 PM NOV. 15, 1989

PM NUMBER	ADDRESS/CITY/ZIP	PRICE	DOWN PMT	BED/BATH/ GARAGE	STATUS/B
405132	W. Co. Rd. 116, Midland 79701	43,000	2,150	4/2.5/2	SR2, SR6, SR7, SR14
605494	#7 Virginia Cir., Midland 79701	42,000	2,100	3/2.0/2	SR2, SR7, SR11, SR14

SR-1 Qualifies for GI/FHA financing or VA will repair to qualifying condition. VA will also repair defects in the plumbing, heating and electrical systems if reported to the VA Management Broker within 30 days of loan closing.
SR-2 No repairs by VA. Strictly "AS IS." NOT ELIGIBLE FOR GI/FHA FINANCING.
SR-3 VA will make no repairs to swimming pool/hot tub or related equipment.
SR-4 Foundation settlement - no warranty from VA on foundation.
SR-5 Flood insurance required.
SR-6 Water serviced by well. VA does not warrant water or well equipment.
SR-7 Sewer service - septic tank. VA does not warrant system.
SR-8 Liquefied petroleum gas service. VA does not warrant system.

SR-15 _____ believed inoperable and VA will not repair.
B A $500 bonus will be paid to broker by VA at closing.

WE NEED YOUR HELP: VA welcomes comments concerning the condition of our properties. Any improprieties should be reported to the VA Regional Office at 817-757-6869.

The offer which best serves the interest of VA will be processed for acceptance. The name of the successful offeror and sales broker will appear in subsequent publications. VA will accept cash offers up to 10 percent below the advertised term sales price. VA also will pay reasonable loan discount points and buyers' closing costs on cash offers when requested on the Cash Sale Addendum to Offer to Purchase. However, the combined loan discount points, buyers' closing costs to be paid by VA and the discount for cash may not exceed 10 percent of the term list price. Offers must be submitted at term listed price when buyers request a new GI loan with $1.00 move-in. Interest rate of available financing is 9.5 percent (APR 9.6 percent).

Purchase offers requesting VA vendee financing (Term Sales) must have VA Form 26-6705B, Credit Statement of Prospective Purchaser and Verification of Employment/Income, as outlined in Sales of VA-Acquired Properties Manual, attached to their VA Form 26-6705, Offer to Purchase and Contract of Sale. Effective June 8, 1988, all credit underwriting for purchase offers requesting VA vendee financing is being referred to Miller and Davis PC. All brokers are reminded to refer to PM letter #17-88 dated May 25, 1988, outlining these new procedures. Purchase offers not accompanied by the required employment/income verification WILL RESULT IN REJECTION OF THE PURCHASE OFFER.

Prior approval will be required by VA for the transfer of a property secured by a vendee loan if the loan is not paid in full as part of the transfer. Public Law 100-689 also permits VA to charge a one-half of 1 percent funding fee for the transfer as well as a fee for processing the approval of the transfer.

VA has properties for sale statewide. If you desire to purchase properties in other areas, please contact any sales broker located in the area in which you are interested.

FORFEITURE OF EARNEST MONEY DEPOSIT

Prior to signing the offer, broker must deposit in broker's trust account the $500 earnest money deposit. The Earnest Money Agreement (Exhibit "H") must be signed by the purchaser(s) and submitted along with the VA Form 26-6705, Offer to Purchase and Contract of Sale, on all offers. The $500 earnest money deposit will be remitted to Miller and Davis PC upon acceptance of the offer. Once a purchase offer has been accepted for processing by VA and subsequently cancelled at the request of the purchaser, the earnest money deposit WILL NOT be refunded and the purchaser will be required to forfeit the earnest money to the VA as liquidation expenses. There will be no exception to this policy. Therefore, the VA suggests that all brokers interview their buyers to assure they want the property prior to submission of an offer to purchase. VA pays 6% sales commission. Offers are subject to the provisions of VA Form 26-6705, Offer to Purchase and Contract of Sale, on which all offers must be submitted. VA Form 26-6705 must be submitted in duplicate to:
