Just a breather

'Fresh start' sought on Soviet relations

By JOHN P. WALLACH
Foreign Affairs Editor
The Hearst Newspapers

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — Calling it an "extraordinary opportunity" for the two superpowers to make a "fresh start," President Reagan today pledged to end support for freedom fighters in Nicaragua and Afghanistan once Moscow withdraws its troops and advisers and facilitates political settlements.

"Of course, until such time as these negotiations result in definitive progress," Reagan told the 40th anniversary General Assembly session here, "America's support for struggling democratic resistance forces must not and shall not cease."

There was polite applause for the speech although Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and his Soviet colleagues noticeably did not applaud. In a farewell gesture to an organization he has frequently belittled, Reagan clasped his hands together in a gesture of peace before departing the hall.

In a major bid to broaden the agenda for his Nov. 19-20 summit, Reagan said that while the latest Soviet offer for a 50 per cent cut in offensive nuclear weapons contains "seeds which we should nurture," little progress can be made without the Soviets changing their adventuristic behavior.

"Real peace is what we seek," Reagan told the world body, contending that regional conflicts stem primarily from "an ideology imposed from without, dividing nations and creating regimes that are, almost from the day they take power, at war with their own people."

"When Mr. Gorbachev and I meet in Geneva next month," Reagan said, "I look to a fresh start in the relationship of our two nations." He added: "Let us begin with candor — with words that rest on plain and simple facts. The differences between America and the Soviet Union are deep and abiding."

Reagan added: "It is important that we have this opportunity to air our differences through face-to-face meetings — to let frank talk substitute for anger and tension."

To help chart such a new course, Reagan proposed what he called a "bold" three-part plan for ending regional conflicts in Afghanistan, Cambodia, Ethiopia, Angola and Nicaragua, declaring that Soviet cooperation in ending these struggles could pave the way for broader cooperation.

In the first stage, the warring factions would begin direct peace talks aimed at achieving national reconciliation. That would mean, in practice, that the Sandinistas would have to begin negotiations with the "contras" or freedom fighters to form a truly, bipartisan national coalition government.

As soon as those talks made progress, the two superpowers would begin talks of their own, Reagan said. If desired, the United States and the Soviet Union would offer guarantees to support a settlement, chiefly written pledges that at first reduced and then eliminated "outside military involvement."

Those guarantees would provide for verification of the withdrawal of all foreign forces and "restraint on the flow of outside arms."

Texas industry 'looking up'

By KATHRYN BAKER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas needs to quit relying on the business of drilling beneath the earth and develop industry aimed at the heavens, a group of entrepreneurs told Texas congressmen at a Capitol Hill meeting.

Rep. Mike Andrews, D-Houston, hosted the Wednesday breakfast for members of the congressional delegation and representatives of private space ventures, many of which are based in Texas.

Andrews said the House is set to consider ways to back insurance for companies operating in outer space — space insurance is expensive and hard to get — and tax incentives for production of goods in outer space.

But he told the space businessmen they should not expect to rely on National Aeronautics and Space Administration grants and joint ventures because of inevitable budget reductions.

"I think there's no question that people are willing to make the kind of budget cuts that are necessary on the NASA budget," said Andrews. "The real question is how visionary can we be in some of the other incentives to help commercialization. That will affect what some of these companies are able to do much more than the NASA budget for '86 or '87 or even till the end of the decade."

Robert Pace of Microgravity Research Associates of Houston said his company wants to go into space to grow special crystals, "sort of like silicon," for use in electronics. The crystals will not grow correctly on Earth because of gravity.

A joint public-private push is "absolutely essential to get this industry off the ground," said Robert New, a Texas Commerce Bank executive representing the Houston Economic Development Council.

Houston businessman Jack Rains, representing the city's Chamber of Commerce, said "reports of our (economic) death are greatly exaggerated."

But, he said, the oil, gas and petrochemical industries do not promise new jobs. Space commercialization is one of the most promising industries for the area, he said.

"We don't look for government subsidies, we look for government creating the environment so the private sector can work, because government truly controls the environment in space commercialization," Rains said.

"Government policy will dictate the type of opportunities that these fledgling companies will have. What we want to do is make sure that environment remains nourishing as opposed to hostile."

"We want you to know we're there, that we can support this space commercialization and we're dedicated to do it," said David Hannah of Space Services of America, a private launch enterprise based in Houston.

Races really begin as Republican women convene

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

More than seven months before the Republican primary, candidates for some of the state's top positions will go head-to-head in Midland this weekend before about 600 people attending the Texas Federation of Republican Women's convention.

Also highlighting the 15th biennial convention will be U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, announcement of the 10 Outstanding Republican Women Awards and several keynote speakers, including Dr. William S. Banowsky of Dallas.

This marks the first time the TFRW is holding its convention in Midland, according to Mrs. Jack Sayers, convention chairman, and reportedly is one of the largest conventions to be held here. Theme for the event is "TFRW — Brightest Star in West Texas."

Registration will begin Friday at noon and various committees, such as credentials, resolutions and elections, will hold their meetings that afternoon. Opening event is a 6:30 p.m. Gusher Party at the Midland Petroleum Club.

At the 9 a.m. Saturday opening session at the Midland Hilton, Banowsky will launch the convention with his keynote remarks. He is president of the Dallas-based Gaylord Broadcasting Co., the nation's largest privately owned broadcasting firm. From 1970-78 he was founding president of Pepperdine University in Malibu, Calif., and served as Republican National Committeeman from California under then Gov. Reagan. From 1978-85 he was president of the University of Oklahoma.

According to Mrs. Sayers, Banowsky was a speaker last summer at the convention of GOP county chairmen and geared his talk to voting trends of the younger Americans.

Railroad Commission and attorney general candidates are scheduled to give remarks to the Saturday morning session. On the agenda are Ed Emmitt and Milton Fox, RRC candidates; and John Roach, Buster Brown and Ed Walsh, attorney general candidates.

The Saturday luncheon starting at 1 p.m. in the Midland Center will be highlighted by remarks from the three gubernatorial candidates: former Gov. Bill Clements, U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler and former congressman Kent Hance. Also scheduled to speak is State GOP Chairman George Strake.

School district checking 'report card'

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Report cards were issued by the Midland Independent School District this week, but students weren't the sole subject of evaluation.

The report cards addressed MISD — its strengths, weaknesses and goals — following a summer retreat where MISD trustees expressed concern over the district's need for additional classrooms and, subsequently, a possible bond issue election, said Dr. Lamar Hebert, assistant superintendent for instructional services.

The first two reports — communication and equal schools — are "particularly timely as the board considers future action related to population growth in our schools," he stated.

According to Hebert, trustees and staff hope to "improve two-way communication between MISD and citizens" by developing an annual survey, establishing an advisory committee and conducting neighborhood meetings.

Utilizing Gallup Poll questions regarding public attitudes toward education, he said, "We could conduct a survey of a representative sample of Midland citizens to determine their attitudes toward our schools."

Topics of the survey would include accountability, attendance, boards of education, change and innovation, citizen participation, curriculum, discipline, drug abuse, financing, public relations, students and teachers.

Other ways of improving communication would be to establish an advisory committee comprised of a cross section of community leaders to become informed communicators to the public. MISD also hopes to sponsor neighborhood meetings to solicit comment on selected topics.

No outlet for grievances available, TSTA says

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

Beard

AUSTIN — Texas school districts are not giving teachers ample opportunities to air grievances, the Texas State Teachers Association charged in a lawsuit filed Wednesday against Midland and 19 other districts.

The lawsuit, filed in a Travis County district court, asks for a temporary restraining order requiring the districts to change their grievance policies over teacher evaluations, transfers, contract extensions, assignment and reassignment and salary schedules. It names as defendants the 20 school districts, their superintendents and trustees and the Texas Association of School Boards. No hearing date has been set.

TSTA President Charles Beard said the policies, adopted from a TASB manual, refuse teachers the right to appeal superintendents' decisions in those areas to their local school boards. Those policies, he said, violate the Texas Constitution, state law, a 1984 attorney general's opinion and a 1984 Supreme Court of Texas decision.

"This denial of basic civil rights is contributing to the severe decline of teacher morale throughout the state," Beard said at a Capitol news conference. "Left unchallenged, these harsh and irresponsible policies will worsen the existing teacher shortage."

TSTA filed the case as a class-action lawsuit on behalf of all Texas teachers working in districts that have adopted such policies and against the superintendents and trustees in all of those districts.

Negotiators agree to exchange Duarte's daugher for guerrillas

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Government officials said rebel kidnappers agreed to release President Jose Napoleon Duarte's daughter today in the first step of a swap also involving 118 jailed or wounded guerrillas and 33 kidnapped municipal officials.

Duarte's closest adviser, Julio Adolfo Rey Prendes, said Wednesday that the deal was worked out in three days of long meetings between the rebels and the government in Panama. There have been reports for several weeks that a deal was near completion.

The agreement reached Tuesday would end more than six weeks of tension that started when Ines Guadalupe Duarte Duran, 35, and a friend, Ana Cecilia Villeda Sosa, 23, were abducted as they arrived for classes at a private college here Sept. 10. One bodyguard was killed and one was wounded in the abduction.

Girl pulled from storm drain

WORLD

AP Laserphoto

Pulling 12-year-old Michelle Worth from a flooded storm drain in Sydney, Australia, is Mario Corradi. The girl had been swept underground and about 1,000 feet during torrential rains.

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — A Sydney man pulled an apparently lifeless schoolgirl from a flooded drain canal Wednesday after the current carried her more than 300 yards. Paramedics revived her on the way to the hospital.

Australian newspapers published dramatic front-page photos showing Mario Corradi cradling the unconscious girl, 12-year-old Michelle Worth, in his arms as the torrent gushed past.

The girl was hospitalized in critical condition.

"I did what anybody would do," said Corradi.

A storm dumped eight-tenths of an inch of rain on Sydney in 20 minutes, causing the drain's water level to rise six feet, police said.

Russ Hurley, a 22-year-old mechanic, said he and members of a bowling club went out to check the canal's rising waters Wednesday afternoon. Hurley said the staff was worried the canal would overflow and flood the parking lot.

They saw the blonde-haired girl, dressed in blue school uniform, bobbing in the canal.

"I saw her coming around the bend," Hurley said. "She was screaming and waving her hands and calling for help. I tried to grab her but I couldn't reach her."

At that point she was swept underground for another 100 yards. Her body snagged on a pipe crossing the waterway, and Corradi dived in.

Michelle was pulled from the water unconscious and without a pulse. Witnesses gave her up for dead as paramedics worked frantically to restore her breathing.

"I kept shouting 'She's not gone, she's not gone,'" Corradi said. Although clinically dead, paramedics managed to revive her on the way to the hospital.

Police believe Michelle fell into the canal, which passes a playground.

Cape Town travelers are warned

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Rioters heaved hand grenades and gasoline bombs at security forces in the Cape Town area, and five more people were killed in anti-apartheid unrest, police said.

Police public affairs officer Lt. Attie Laubscher issued a warning to travelers planning to drive between Cape Town and its international airport. The nine-mile route skirts black and mixed-race areas, and ambushers armed with rocks and gasoline bombs increasingly have attacked white motorists.

Laubscher also warned whites not to form vigilante squads. Residents of eastern Cape Town suburbs had reported that white men in civilian clothes were seen Tuesday and Wednesday firing shotguns into mixed-race neighborhoods.

"We would like to call on people not to take the law into their own hands and people who have information to come forward. They will remain anonymous," Laubscher said.

The independent South African Press Association reported at midday that "several" foreign television crews had been arrested in Cape Town while covering a student gathering.

Today's police report detailing incidents through dawn said three bodies of mixed-race men killed by shotgun fire were discovered in the riot-torn district of Phiullipi east of Cape Town. There was no immediate indication how the men were killed.

Mixed-race mobs stoning cars near Paarl, a wine center northeast of Cape Town, came under police shotgun fire earl this morning, and one man was killed, police said.

In other reports of violence, police and witnesses said attackers heaved hand grenades at security patrols near Cape Town Wednesday night and this morning.

Police said several soldiers narrowly escaped injury when a grenade was thrown at their armored personnel carrier near the black squatter community of Crossroads. The blast caused only minor damage.

A hand grenade attack a year ago, when the rioting was beginning, would have seemed almost unthinkable. Rioters then battled police and the army with stones and sticks.

The sole report of violence outside the Cape Town region came from Atteridgeville outside Pretoria, where police said an army vehicle and a delivery vehicle were damaged extensively by gasoline bombs.

Police said late Wednesday that a mixed-race man was killed when a white man opened fire on a crowd stoning his car.

Rioters near Cape Town, more than in other areas around South Africa, have succeeded in pushing apartheid-related unrest out of segregated townships into white areas.

This is partly because black and mixed-race Cape Town districts often abut white neighborhoods and some areas are racially integrated.

More than 760 people nationwide have been killed in anti-apartheid rioting since September 1984.

Brain more changeable than thought

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Editor

DALLAS — A new view of the human brain suggests that it is not a static organ but that it changes constantly as some nerve cells establish new connections and others die at a remarkable rate, a researcher says.

Studies with monkeys have shown, for example, that three-fourths of the nerve fibers that connect the two halves of the brain in newborns die and disappear by adulthood, said Dr. Pasko Rakic of Yale University.

"The mammalian brain (including the human brain) is much more malleable — not as rigid — as said in most textbooks," Rakic said Wednesday during a meeting of the Society for Neuroscience.

"This is why we have prolonged infancy," he said. "We need time to develop our brains in ways that are different for each individual."

The selective death of nerve cells that are no longer needed occurs throughout life, Rakic said, while the formation of new connections between nerve cells persists only until puberty.

Brain and nerve cells are unique in that most are formed before birth, and no new neurons can be formed after puberty. All other tissues in the body are replaced with new cells as old cells die, Rakic said.

He has found that newborn monkeys have some 200 million nerve fibers running through the corpus callosum, a principal connecting link between the left and right sides of the brain.

In adult monkeys, only 50 million nerve fibers, or about one-fourth the initial number, remain. The nerve cells die at a rate of roughly two per second throughout the monkeys' infancy.

The number of fibers in the nerves linking the monkeys' eyes to their brains declines from 3 million to 1 million. The same thing happens in humans. In another area of the brain called the hippocampal commissure, five of every six nerve fibers disappear by adulthood in monkeys and presumably also in humans, Rakic said.

The death of brain cells occurs in a special way. If the part of the brain that processes visual information is damaged early in an animal's life, for example, then other parts of the brain will lose fewer cells than normal and thus be larger than normal.

In other words, the nerve cells are competing with one another for survival, Rakic said. This phenomenon could explain why people who are blind from birth often have particularly acute hearing, he said.

As another example, Rakic, who comes from Yugoslavia, said that he speaks English with an accent because by the time he reached puberty the nerve cells controlling his speech had been locked into a fixed pattern in accordance with his native language, Serbo-Croatian.

This flexibility of the brain before puberty frequently allows children to recover from brain injuries, as their brains quickly establish new connections. Adults who suffer such injuries, however, are generally unable to recover, Rakic said.

Disruptions in the normal rate of brain cell death can cause illness, Rakic said. He noted that half the nerve connections, or synapses, in the spine normally are lost between birth and puberty.

In children with the genetic defect that causes Down's syndrome, however, those spinal synapses do not disappear. Down's syndrome children are mentally retarded.

REAGAN—

Finally, Reagan pledged, "the United States would respond generously to their democratic reconciliation with their own people" by offering large-scale economic aid to the five countries and help in ending their isolation from the world economy.

"It is not for us to impose any solutions," Reagan said. "We are not trying to solve every conflict in every region of the globe," he added. An advance text of the proposal was provided to Gorbachev several days ago together with a personal letter from Reagan, a White House source said.

Although Reagan did not mention the Middle East, the U.S. official explained that if Moscow cooperates in helping defuse regional tension in these five troublespots, there might be a role for the Soviet Union to play in Middle East peacemaking — a role Moscow has long sought.

"This is an extraordinary opportunity for the Soviet side to make a contribution to regional peace, which in turn can promote future dialogue and ngotiations on other critical issues," Reagan said. Reagan spoke with firmness, looking somewhat tired after a long and hectic schedule here.

Before addressing the 154-nation world body, Reagan met for half an hour with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and is to meet later today with the leaders of the six Western industrialized democracies represented here. French President Francois Mitterrand is the only one of the seven not here.

On Friday morning, Secretary of State George Shultz will meet for two hours with Shevardnadze to set the final agenda for the Geneva summit. There are plans for Reagan and Gorbachev to hold at least three, and possibly more, private one-on-one talks of at least twenty minutes each.

A White House official also said that the two leaders may hold a joint press conference at the end of the summit and witness the signing of a number of bilteral accords to establish new consulates in Kiev and New York; expand commercial air service and cultural exchanges.

He said he expected Duarte's daughter to join her family today, but gave no further timetable. He said her release would be the first step in the exchanges. Miss Villeda Sosa is to be freed with the president's daughter, Rey Prendes said.

The abduction and subsequent negotiations had nearly paralyzed Duarte's government which, in addition to military problems with the left, faces deep economic and social problems.

In return for the two women and 33 small-town mayors and other municipal officials the rebels have taken in a series of abductions that started last spring, the government will free 22 jailed rebels, including a Costa Rican pilot held on gun-running charges. The government also said it will "facilitate" the evacuation of 96 wounded guerrillas to other countries for medical treatment.

The two women were to be reunited with their families at an undisclosed location after being delivered to a neutral organization, apparently the International Red Cross.

Rey Prendes declined to give a timetable for the other phases of the deal, but hinted strongly that the 22 prisoners may already have been moved from the jails in which they were held.

The wounded rebels presumably are in guerrilla hospitals, but he gave no details on where or how they would be assembled.

MISD—

Trustees recognize the problem of equal schools and such relating factors as ethnic, socioeconomic, teacher quality and facility balance, Hebert said. Thus, trustees determined that an audit would be the "best procedure to monitor the equality of schools within our district" using test scores, population analysis and teacher evaluations.

In the area of student learning, Hebert said MISD realizes "we have significant diversity of student backgrounds (students who need higher level thinking skills, behavior modification, special education, alternative programs and individualized instruction)."

MISD proposes to graduate properly prepared individuals through continued and improved program evaluations, alternative and guidance programs, and parental and community involvement.

"The total program should be evaluated on a systematic basis to identify strengths and weaknesses," Hebert said. "A secondary alternative program should be considered for students who cannot succeed in the regular program...The guidance program should be analyzed and expanded to better meet the needs of all students."

In addition, MISD hopes to increase parental and community involvement to bette. understand student needs by having a district parent-teacher conference day following the first six-week reporting period, according to Hebert. "Through Partners in Education we can continue to improve the quality of programs. There should be continued efforts to involve specific groups in the adoption of specific programs for advisory, personnel or financial assistance."

To attract quality personnel, Hebert said, MISD proposes to develop an incentive program that would include the following proponents: Expand the sudent teacher program with area universities, develop a salary schedule that ranks in the top 10 percent in the state; develop a packet of materials including information about the school district and community; produce a film about Midland that can be used by school personnel on recruiting trips; and establish a fund that could provide selected applicants reimbursement for travel to Midland.

To retain quality teachers, MISD proposes: to maintain a competitive salary schedule that ranks in the top 10 percent of the state; implement an improved health care package for medical, dental and life insurance; expand and present educational grant programs; establish a sabbatical leave policy; explore the establishment of endowed chairs for teachers; solicit local businesses to participate in an MISD discount package; recognize outstanding teachers; and provide release time for teachers to work with the review and revision of curriculum.

The Midland part of the suit dates back to March 1984, when Alamo Junior High School teacher Pamela Young filed a grievance with her principal David Adams over her personnel evaluation and "threats which she received when she attempted to informally discuss the matter with her supervisors." The suit alleges Adams told Ms. Young, "An employee's concern pertaining to an evaluation and/or the criteria used to establish that evaluation is non-grievable"

The suit claims Ms. Young attempted to appeal her case to Assistant Superintendent Garland Chapman, Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. and the MISD board of trustees and was rebuffed each time. "The content of an evaluation is not grievable," the suit quotes Chapman as telling Ms. Young.

"Midland's policy on the right to grieve was meant to stifle, and does stifle, the contractual, constitutional and statutory rights of the Midland plaintiffs," the suit alleges. That policy demonstrates "a reckless or callous indifference to or disregard for the protected rights of the Midland plaintiffs."

The suit calls on the court to assess $1 in actual damages and $1,000 in punishment against each school district, superintendent, trustee and the Texas Association of School Boards. Beard said the damage request totals about $239,000.

Texas Association of School Boards and MISD officials did not return calls the Reporter-Telegram placed to their offices Wednesday.

Gramm will be arriving in Midland Saturday evening for a 30-minute appearance at the 7:30 dinner at Midland Center to give a speech and announce recipients of the Outstanding Republican Women Awards. Mrs. Sayers said the recipients' names will be kept secret until that evening.

The general session will reconvene at 8:30 a.m. Sunday at the Midland Hilton and delegates will hear remarks from additional candidates, including the three seeking the 21st Congressional District seat — Lamar Smith, Jeff Wentworth and Van Henry Archer. Also slated to speak are Bill Powers, candidate for the Agriculture Committee; John Thomas Henderson, candidate for Railroad Commission; and Roy Barrera Jr., candidate for attorney general.

Six workshops starting on Friday afternoon and continuing through Saturday at the Midland Hilton will cover absentee voting, bulk mailing, High Frontier (commonly known as Star Wars), TFRW structure and organization, club treasurer/PAC and the club newsletter.

For the Sunday luncheon to be held at Midland Center, Marta R. Greytok, chairman of the board of the Harris County Central Appraisal District, will speak on "Women in Politics." Following her address, Judy Hughes of Denver, president-elect of the National Federation of Republican Women, will give a short address and install officers of TFRW for 1986-87. Closing remarks will be given by Patricia Lykos, judge in the 180th District Court in Texas.

McKnight criticized

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Gov. Mark White said today that he wants to discuss with former state Sen. Peyton McKnight the ex-lawmaker's use of the word "nigger" about a leading black member of the Texas House.

McKnight reportedly is being considered for an appointment by White to the Public Safety Commission, which oversees the Texas Department of Public Safety.

During a campaign appearance in San Antonio for the proposed state water plan, White was asked whether McKnight's use of the term during a joke-telling session at a charity roast would affect his decision on McKnight's appointment.

"I am going to be in contact with him about that," White said.

During an Oct. 5 fundraiser in Tyler for the Texas Society to Prevent Blindness, McKnight twice called state Rep. Paul Ragsdale, D-Dallas, a "nigger," prompting several angry audience members to leave the event, the Dallas Times-Herald reported today.

Senate delays sale of arms to Jordan

Sen. Lugar

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican controlled Senate, with President Reagan's reluctant permission, is ready to shelve the controversial $1.9 billion arms sale to Jordan until March 1 unless Jordan and Israel open meaningful peace talks before then.

With at least 73 of 100 senators publicly committed against the sale in the absence of such talks, and with the Republican leadership telling Reagan defeat was inevitable, the president agreed Tuesday to the 120-day delay, Senate sources said.

The GOP leaders had told the administration they would move on their own to delay action on the sale in order to head off a resolution that would bar it outright.

"The administration bowed to the inevitable," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., leader of the bipartisan effort to stop the sale.

"We have basically achieved everything we wanted to achieve," he said. "This is not the time to send up an arms package."

Reagan had formally notified Congress on Monday of his intention to sell Jordan aircraft, air missiles and other weapons.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said many senators were concerned about the impact an administration defeat would have on the Middle East peace process.

The compromise, he said, "offers a lot of constructive possibilities."

"It is a step toward keeping the peace process going without having a negative vote that would be disruptive if not embarrassing for all involved," he said. "It leaves open the opportunity for movement in the peace process."

Lugar told reporters the legislation would preserve the option for the president of selling arms to Jordan at a later date. It would also give opponents assurances that the sale would not go ahead unless Jordan's King Hussein sat down at the bargaining table for "direct and meaningful peace negotiations" with the Israelis, he said.

Many senators have made clear they do not want their opposition to the sale to be interpreted as an attack on Hussein, who has said he is ready for talks with Israel in the context of an international conference and with the participation of representatives of the Palestinian people.

Security forces scurry backstage at U.N.

NATION

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The kings and sultans, presidents and prime ministers may be putting away the caviar, champagne and baked Alaska, but it's spaghetti with meatballs for everybody else at the U.N. cafeteria.

About 180 pounds of meatballs, to be exact.

The cafeteria offers just one glimpse of the backstage brouhaha at the United Nations this week as hordes of international dignitaries and their entourages converge here for the organization's 40th anniversary.

"We're feeding about 7,000 people a day this week," said cafeteria manager Bernie Brewster, "mostly chauffeurs and police and Secret Service people."

That's about 35 percent above the norm, Brewster added. He rattled off the provisions for today's menu alone: 180 pounds of corned beef, 80 pounds of roast veal, 210 pounds each of baby carrots and cabbage.

Don't worry about the cabbages. They're safe. The Secret Service checked.

Deputy U.N. Security Chief Eugene Dagg said inspecting delivery vehicles is part of the intense security operation, which also includes sharpshooters on rooftops and frogmen in the murky East River.

And don't forget Marco. He's the police dog on bomb-sniffing detail. Some bored U.N. staffers decided to give him his own identification tag.

"Yeah, they made the dog sit in a chair and they took his picture. He posed beautifully. He got a general access I.D.," said a lieutenant on the 243-member U.N. security force.

Clearly one of the most frazzled members of the U.N.'s supporting cast this week is Aly Teymour, the silver-haired chief of protocol.

His week started at 3:30 a.m. Saturday, when he got up to meet the plane carrying the president of Cape Verde. Then there were the planes carrying dignitaries from Sri Lanka, Iceland and Poland.

Then the ones from Bulgaria, East Germany, Hungary and Morocco all arrived at the same time as a delayed jet from Equatorial Guinea.

"I had five minutes to run from gate 11 to 34," Teymour said. He didn't leave the airport until 8 p.m., after the king of Lesotho had been welcomed.

The chief of protocol is the first to admit to an occasional faux pas amid all the confusion, though.

The multilingual Teymour was chatting away in Spanish while escorting a woman he thought to be the Uruguayan first lady into the building. She gave him a blank look at the elevator when he told her to "espere," or "wait."

The woman said she was sorry, she did not understand Spanish. It was then Teymour realized she was the wife of the Egyptian president. Teymour, an Egyptian himself, hastily apologized in Arabic.

Panel would raise interest on delinquent taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee, convinced many taxpayers find it more profitable to owe the government than to borrow from banks, is raising the interest rate charged on bills owed the Internal Revenue Service.

The panel did a major bit of backtracking Wednesday as it sought to keep the tax-overhaul issue alive despite an apparent lack of public interest. Following a week of criticism, the committee reversed much of a major $1-billion-a-year tax cut it had voted for commercial banks. And, going once again against the wishes of its chairman and President Reagan, the committee agreed that all credit unions should remain exempt from federal income taxes.

The votes came in a closed-door session that, according to two members, was marked by increasing frustration over the slow pace of rewriting the tax system. Those members, who would not be quoted by name, said fellow lawmakers were pressuring Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., to abandon the entire tax issue until 1986.

The fate of the tax-overhaul bill, which Reagan has made the top domestic priority of his second term, could be determined this weekend. Rostenkowski scheduled work sessions for Friday, Saturday and Sunday amid indications that a lack of significant progress might end the effort this year.

In the meantime, the panel made several decisions Wednesday affecting banking institutions. It also voted to make it a little tougher on taxpayers who are delinquent in payments to the IRS.

Aides to the committee said members are convinced many taxpayers take advantage of the relatively low interest rates charged by the IRS; they prefer to owe the IRS rather than go to a bank and borrow money to pay their taxes. That also discourages a negotiated settlement of a tax debt with the IRS and encourages the filing of Tax Court suits, aides said.

Electronic eyes may be watching our every move

WASHINGTON (AP) — The explosion in communications technology has so outpaced privacy laws that Americans have little or no protection against a plethora of new ways for government or private adversaries to pry into their lives, a congressional agency reported today.

The non-partisan Office of Technology Assessment found that 35 out of 142 domestic federal agencies use or plan to use various electronic surveillance methods, including modern devices not governed by a landmark 1968 law that circumscribed the use of wiretaps and bugs — concealed microphones.

The agency said 36 agencies, not counting those in foreign intelligence, already use a total of 85 computerized record systems for investigative or intelligence purposes, and maintain 288 million files on 114 million people. The report raised the "technically feasible" specter of these being linked into a single data base network that could track untold numbers of citizens without due cause.

The report, requested by House and Senate committees, noted that many new and uncontrolled methods of surveillance are made possible by the very technologies of which more and more Americans are availing themselves — electronic mail, computer conferencing, cellular and cordless telephones, beepers and electronic pagers. Intercepting such devices is easy, and "the law has not kept pace," the agency said.

But other devices, such as miniature television cameras and pen registers — which monitor the numbers called on a given telephone line — have enabled new ways to spy on people even if their own communications habits are more old-fashioned, the agency noted.

Rep. Robert W. Kastenmeier, D-Wis., chairman of the House Judiciary subcommittee on courts and civil liberties, said the study "shows how the law in this area has broken down; it is up to Congress to fix it. If we fail to act, the personal and business communications of Americans will not have the privacy protection they deserve."

Sen. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., said the report "documents how new and more intrusive forms of snooping have followed in the wake of the exciting advances in communications technology," and agreed Congress must "bring federal privacy laws up to date."

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., chairman of the House Judiciary subcommittee on civil and constitutional rights, said, "While the attorney general of the United States is claiming that the civil liberties granted by the Constitution should be limited to the 'original intentions' of the framers, the technological possibilities for government surveillance have exploded. The framers knew nothing of closed-circuit television, wiretapping and computer data banks."

The report noted that the Fourth Amendment, which protects "the right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures," was written "at a time when people conducted their affairs in a simple direct, and personalized fashion."

The congressional agency said it could not estimate the extent of electronic surveillance in the private sector, saying only "it is probable that many forms...go undetected, and if detected, go unreported."

But in its survey of the federal bureaucracy, OTA found 35 agencies, mostly in the Justice, Treasury and Defense departments, used or planned to use:

— Closed circuit television, 29 agencies.
— Night vision systems, 22.
— Miniature transmitters, 21.
— Electronic beepers and sensors, 15.
— Telephone taps, recorders, and pen registers, 14.
— Computer usage monitoring, 6.
— Electronic mail monitoring, 6.
— Cellular radio interception, 5.
— Satellite interception, 4.

Far-out servicemen

The space shuttle program has brought the nation's space technology a long way in a short span of years. Is there any question that it will take mankind even further in the years ahead?

Not much, at any rate. A recent edition of Smithsonian magazine reported: "Last year, three malfunctioning unmanned spacecraft — the Solar Maximum sun-watching observatory and two communications satellites — were snagged in space by NASA astronauts." To the average Earth-bound human being, that fact in itself may be cause enough for celebration. But it may be nothing compared to future accomplishments.

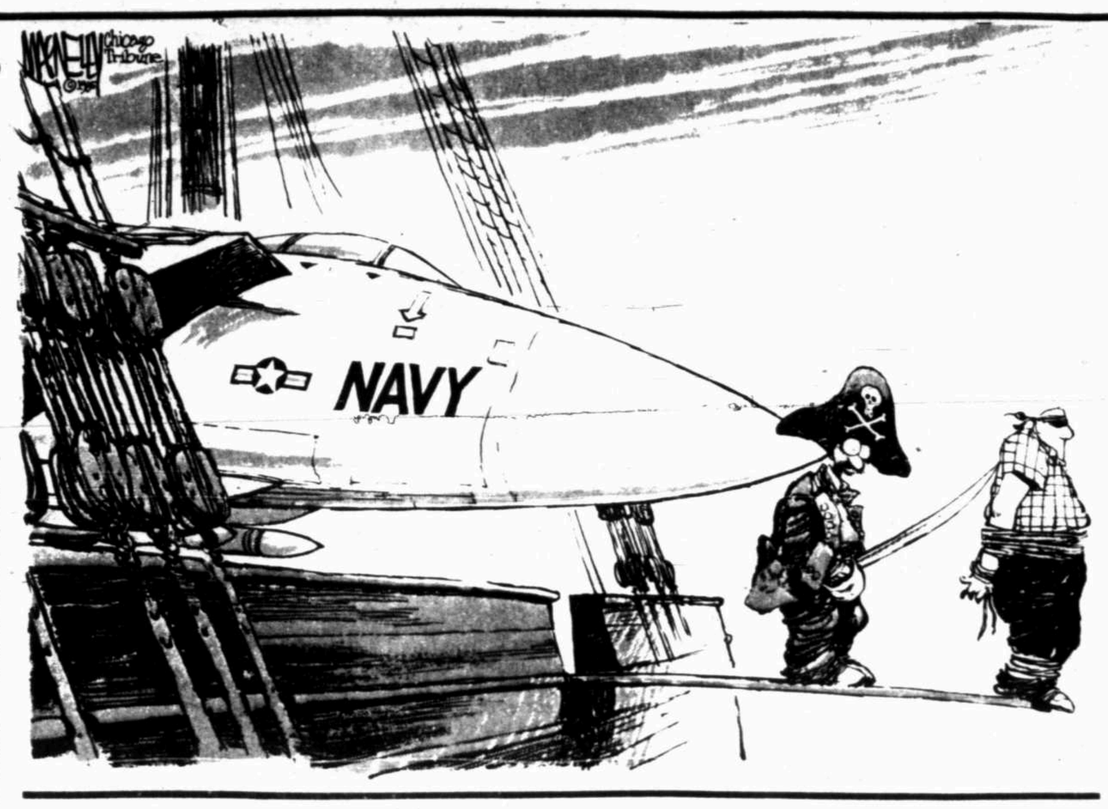

Says the magazine: "Such missions are inspiring spacecraft designers to equip satellites with key systems that can be repaired, retrieved or refueled in space, and to design the craft for ease in docking with the robot arm of the space shuttle, with attachment devices carried by freeflying astronauts wearing rocket-powered backpacks, or with a future servicing 'space tug' called the Orbital Maneuvering Vehicle."

In future missions, the magazine speculates, "the unmanned, remotely piloted OMV will hitch a ride into space aboard a shuttle, then fly off a dock with satellites beyond the shuttle's range." If that strikes those left behind on Earth as akin to an appliance repairman visiting a home to find and fix mechanical problems, consider the following:

"In a major departure from previous space practice, the OMV will be remote-controlled by teleoperation, a technology in which a person is provided with TV screens that display what would be seen if he or she were actually on board the OMV, docking with or servicing a free-flying satellite."

What's the bottom line? Simply this. With more and more expensive and sophisticated satellites floating above the Earth, this technology is worth its weight in gold. It eventually will make retrieval and repair more cost-efficient, and the development of space technology undoubtedly will mushroom. Can Buck Rogers be far behind?

The people of Earth will reap the benefits of the labor of these "spacy" repairmen!

ART BUCHWALD
Mending fences with Italy

Now that the Achille Lauro hi-jacking crisis is over, many fences have to be mended.

"Which ones?" I asked the State Department man in charge of fence mending.

"Egypt's, for one."

"Why are they out of sorts?"

"Because we forced their jetliner with the PLO hijackers down over Italy."

"What's wrong with that?"

"Egypt is one of our closest friends even though they lie a lot."

Art Buchwald

"Why did they lie to us this time?"

"Because Mubarak wanted the terrorists out of his country as fast as possible, so their PLO brothers would not organize another hijacking against Egypt to force the first thugs' release."

"How would you describe President Mubarak's posture at this moment?"

"Shocked and miffed. But it isn't his fault. If he didn't publicly take a tough line with the U.S. the religious fundamentalists would chop off his head."

"What should we do about Mubarak?"

"Let him rant and rave. We'd rather have an angry Mubarak in Cairo than a laughing Egyptian Khomeini."

"What about Italy's fences?"

"We have to mend them because we violated Italian air space to bring down the Egyptian airliner flying the terrorists to Tunisia."

"Weren't the Italians glad that we forced the plane down on their soil?"

"No, they thought we played a dirty trick on them. Italy has such good relations with the Palestinians they didn't want to ruin them by having to deal with a few malcontents who took over one of their Italian cruise vessels. What broke the camel's back for the U.S. was that after we forced the Egyptian plane to land in Sicily Prime Minister Craxi released Abul Abbas, who was the brains behind the entire mess."

"Why would Craxi do that?"

"Because he thinks the PLO is the greatest thing since sliced Italian bread."

"I'll bet he's sorry now."

"He is. Even the Prime Minister's own government was appalled that he gave Abbas a free ticket to Yugoslavia."

"So when do we have to mend fences with Italy?"

"The sooner the better. Up until the hijacking Craxi was our best pal in NATO's southern flank. The only ones who hated him were the Fascists and Communists."

"What's the bottom line?"

"The bottom line is the U.S. has proved that it will follow terrorists to the ends of the earth. But Egypt's going to need some strong fencing till we become friends again."

"How much fencing?"

"Would you believe $2 billion?"

"Now what about Italy? Who were you thinking of as a replacement for Prime Minister Craxi?"

"We never interfere in another country's affairs, but we were hoping it would be Lee Iacocca."

JACK ANDERSON
Cancer clinic's closing explained

WASHINGTON — A report suppressed by the Bahamian government helps to explain why it closed a controversial cancer clinic last July that dispensed serums capable of transmitting AIDS to hundreds of Americans, including former Georgia Gov. Lester Maddox.

Jack Anderson

The report was written by a member of the Pan American Health Organization, an arm of the World Health Organization, after what was described as an "essentially unproductive" visit July 1-3 to the Immunology Research Center in Freeport. The report lists several reasons the clinic should be closed, citing risks to the staff, the community and the Bahamian tourist industry.

The clinic was founded in 1977 by Dr. Lawrence Burton, a New York zoologist. Patients were given serums as part of his patented treatment, which he calls "immuno-augmentative therapy."

Though the therapy is scientifically unproven as a treatment for cancer, there is substantial anecdotal testimony from patients attesting to its effectiveness. For example, several weeks ago, Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler privately told the Bahamian health minister, Dr. Norman Gay, that an old friend's sister took the treatment and swore by it.

Since June, the AIDS antibody has been isolated in 54 of 91 blood samples from four patients, including Maddox. Even more significantly, live AIDS virus was produced in one serum sample by the Centers for Disease Control. However, the serum has not been linked to any current AIDS cases.

Our associate Tony Capaccio obtained a copy of the suppressed Pan American report. It minces no words, stating:

"Following a general tour of the facility and conversations with Dr. Burton, the overall impression of this writer was one of dismay and concern for the lack of scientific knowledge displayed by the clinic staff, including its director; the unscientific atmosphere in the laboratories; and the considerable potential for harm." The report then lays out reasons the clinic should be closed:

— "First and foremost, the clinic is producing an unsafe biological product with procedures and methods which appear unsafe for the staff involved. There is no indication of real interest in establishing scientifically accepted quality control measures."

— "The continued operation of this clinic and the possible contamination of its products with the AIDS virus (are) potentially damaging to the Bahamas and represent a possible threat to the tourist industry."

(Dr. Burton's comment: "It said 'possible.' You're in Washington? You're going to get hit with an earthquake. You better get the hell out of there. It's possible, isn't it?")

— "The continued operation of this clinic could prove to be a potentially embarrassing episode in the relationship between the U.S. and Bahamian health authorities."

(Burton, referring to his patients: "Does that mean 500 to 600 people should be slaughtered because of an embarrassment? You kill people over an embarrassment?")

— "The clinic is utilizing a controversial therapy, and the weight of international scientific opinion is that this therapy is unproven. The continued operation of this clinic using such therapy is embarrassing to the medical community in the Bahamas."

— "The risk of acquiring AIDS virus is present, but could not be fully defined. Nevertheless ... possible risks cannot be ignored."

Footnote: Burton told us he offered to install screening equipment to detect AIDS antibodies in the serums used by the clinic, but had received no response from the Bahamian government. He said he plans to relocate soon in Cuernavaca, Mexico. The clinic's patient association has informed its members of the AIDS findings and has recommended follow-up tests.

THE PRICE OF LIBERTY: The First Amendment doesn't guarantee the right to yell fire in a crowded theater, but it does give local cable-TV stations the right to run a syndicated talk show featuring "political extremists." Among the guests who have appeared on some cable stations have been members of The Order, a right-wing group linked by the FBI to terrorist acts including murder; Ku Klux Klan leaders; and those who deny the Holocaust ever occurred. Free speech advocates in Congress who fought for locally produced cable shows are trying to figure out how to tone down the extremists. How about the on-off switch?

UNDER THE DOME: The National Republican Congressional Committee is understandably anxious to capitalize on recent revelations about the questionable dealings of Rep. Fernand St Germain, D-R.I., chairman of the House Banking Committee, with a Florida savings and loan. In fact, they're so excited, they sent out a letter to members of Congress citing a Wall Street Journal story on "Tuesday, Sept. 10." The members wont' find it in the files, though; it ran the following day.

GEORGE F. WILL
Wait! Is this the Middle Ages?

WASHINGTON — It is said we owe to the Middle Ages humanity's two most destructive inventions — gunpowder and romantic love. But let this be said for the Middle Ages: People understood government. They especially understood that kings (read: Presidents) not parliaments (read: Congress) are the principal impediments to reasonable public finance.

George F. Will

Kings were constantly siphoning off the nation's wealth to build palaces, or liberate Jerusalem or, even more peculiarly, to explore what was to become Florida. Parliaments tried to pull the purse strings.

After 500 years of enlightenment, there is less understanding. Americans think Congress is the big deficit-maker. Never mind Lyndon Johnson's guns-and-butter choice, and never mind Ronald Reagan's guns-and-tax cuts choice. And never mind that while Reagan has been presiding over the production of more than half of this nation's federal debt, he has not found much to veto on budgeting grounds. This is because Congress has spent about what he has requested. And Congress has enacted as many balanced budgets as he has submitted.

Of course, Presidents veto for other than budgetary reasons. Still, it is indicative that FDR averaged 43 vetoes a year, Eisenhower 23, and Reagan in his first term only 10 a year. Ten of this century's 15 Presidents have used the veto more regularly than Reagan. But as this is written he is threatening to veto something, in part because of a provision that would reduce the deficit and cancer.

In 1951, the tax on a pack of cigarettes was put at eight cents. In 1982, it was raised to 16 cents, which because of inflation was much less in 1982 than eight cents was in 1951. The 1982 law stipulated a return to eight cents. However, one provision of the current deficit-reduction effort is to keep the tax at 16 cents. This provision was included in exchange for lavish tobacco subsidies.

Much of the deficit-reduction bill rests on cooked books yielding fudged numbers. The reduction number of $85.6 billion over three years is highly suspect. The $4.9 billion from the tobacco tax is real. But Reagan regards tax cuts the way Mark Twain regarded bourbon: "Too much is barely enough." Hence his insistence on cutting the tobacco tax. This will increase the annual cost of smoking-related diseases, which now stands at $35 billion.

This is tax folly compounded. The administration's tax-reform plan is, by supply-side criteria, an irrational rearrangement of burdens. It would cut $25 billion from taxes on consumers, who demand goods and service; and it would increase taxes on businesses, which supply goods and services.

Folly is compounded, then cubed. The administration knows taxes alter incentives and believes they should be used to encourage behavior that is socially useful, such as saving and investing. Yet it wants to drive down a tax (on cigarettes) that discourages a behaviorally related disease.

Taxes ... cancer. Let's talk about something else. Like AIDS.

The public has been told, repeatedly, that AIDS is the nation's foremost public-health problem. Many other problems have higher costs in suffering, death and economic loss.

Many of these other problems are grounded in irrational behavior: drug (including alcohol) abuse, reckless driving, diet-related heart disease, lung cancer. But AIDS cases, we are told, are going to increase "exponentially." Maybe. However, if all the exponential growth rates recently predicted had occurred, the planet would have six-billion inhabitants and almost no food or fossil fuels.

Intellectuals who postulate trends, and professions who respond to them, have emotional and vocational stakes in the exaggeration of the trends. Furthermore, George Orwell said intellectuals tend really to believe that a trend will go on forever — that if Rommel gets to Alexandria he must get to Cairo. However, people learn things, such as how to decrease the risk of Rommel, or AIDS or lung cancer. What Americans apparently can not learn is the knack of reducing the ruinous by-product of American democracy: deficits.

Because we have learned to connect clear causes and effects, we know that if the administration successfully insists on rolling back the cigarette tax, it will thereby increase the deficit by reducing revenues, and by increasing federal medical expenditures — and by increasing what is already the fastest-growing component of the budget: interest charges.

What's that, you say? The Graham-Rudman-Hollings bill will scrub away deficits by "requiring" five annual cuts? It might — unless it is repealed. There is precedent.

In 1978, Congress required that beginning with fiscal 1981 the budget be balanced. In 1980, Congress said: Well, er, change that business about the balanced budget from a requirement to an aspiration.

Now, what were you saying about the misconceptions, superstitions and peculiar rituals of the Middle Ages?

Rule provides real chance

I am an avid sports fan of all sports, both scholastic and professional. However, I am astounded to find Eric's article capturing 25 percent of the print space on Friday, October 18 sports page cover.

As Eric initially noted, "Johnny is a typical tenth grader...." With that background alone, I do not think you, Johnny's parents, coaches, friends, or any of your readers have the odds in their favor to predict that, because of his D-minus in geometry, Johnny would be served on a silver platter to the dregs of society to be consumed by "drinking, drugs, or crime."

If, again, as you say, "Johnny is a typical tenth grader..." who "didn't have the speed..." and whose "shoulders weren't broad" but he was "starting to fill out," do we really serve Johnny well by putting his life on the line in a newspaper article because he cannot play football for six weeks? Was this going to ruin either his chances of being one of 1500 young men out of 2,000,000 (or more) in his age group who may later turn pro, or of being a well rounded member of society, or being accepted by his peers or any of a multitude of other things we all dream of and strive towards?

I don't think so Eric! The no-pass, no-play rule as I understand it was our Legilsator's way of asking all of us to give Johnny a real chance in life by stressing the disciplines and related education that would allow him a greater list of options later in life when he is better suited to be making a decision for himself. We should neither be making the decision for him, nor pushing him to the decision of having to play football now as the only avenue to success, happiness, and clean living as Eric's article so clearly defined it. Too many sports writers, parents, and coaches are pushing him to utilize all of his abundent time, energies, and talents on a damned six week game/practice schedule. He will have his brush with drinking, drugs, and yes even crime regardless of the no-pass, no-play rule, with or without football. The really sad part of the whole story is that Johnny has already probably had two or three such brushes along with all the other schoolboys and girls; and Eric, the coach, and Mom and Dad don't even know it or admit such yet.

Let's ensure that Johnny plays within the rules now, and later allow him to make his own choice as to whether he wants to be happy and successful, within his own field of vision, whether that amounts to his becoming a doctor, lawyer, teacher, or just some uneducated sports writer who sits and chugs beers while reading the high school scores and whom has to put himself to sleep with pills because he is so damned mad at the politicians we all voted into office to legislate no-pass, no-play laws.

Broadcast brings thanks

A full vote of thanks is due to our local T.V. cable company for providing the broadcast of the Dodger-Cardinals game last week. This was, truely, a service not available on any other media and was of interest to many people not interested in high school football.

Also, I was told by KMND and KNFM that they, with the help of ClayDesta Communications, Channel 2 and Times-Mirror had helped to make this broadcast available and I think that they should be appreciated also.

It was a good game even if we couldn't see it.

Water solution proposed

You know friend, as I sit here tonight, watching the lightening play across the heavens, and listening to the thunder rolling across the great state of Texas it occurs to me, I have the perfect solution to our water problem.

Remember when our U.S. Legislature played God, and changed the time of day, and when they played God and changed Washington's birthday? Now if we can get them to play God, and change the cycle of Haley's Comet and have it come by every year (preferably in July) we would never again have to worry about water.

NATION IN BRIEF

Senate votes to cut budgets of Coast Guard, airline safety

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, trying to balance popular spending programs against efforts to reduce the deficit, has voted to cut money for the Coast Guard and airline safety programs and refused to kill Amtrak or a powerful senator's home state road project.

The decisions came Wednesday as the Senate gave 84-13 passage to a $10 billion appropriation for a wide range of federal transportation programs.

The vote sent the bill to a House-Senate conference committee, where differences were to be ironed out with a $10.8 billion House version.

Before approving the bill Wednesday, the Senate:

— Voted 71-25 against eliminating federal subsidies for Amtrak, the national passenger railroad system. President Reagan has proposed ending the subsidy.

— Voted 59-38 against an across-the-board 6 percent cut in all federal transportation programs beyond reductions already mandated. Some of the money saved would have gone to the Federal Aviation Administration and the Coast Guard.

Unwanted pregnancy spots OK'd

NEW YORK (AP) — A physicians group says it will expand a campaign against unintended pregnancy into major network television now that it has changed a 30-second spot so it does not appear to endorse contraception.

NBC and CBS have dropped their opposition to the ad now that its reference to contraceptives has been replaced by a statement that many strategies can prevent unwanted pregnancy, said Dr. Luella Klein of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists.

ABC, which like CBS had rejected the original spot last summer as too controversial, has not yet seen the revised version, she said Wednesday.

NBC had refused to broadcast the spot because it will not air public service announcements that promote contraception, and the original wording of the announcement "was sort of an endorsement of that means of birth control," NBC spokesman Curt Block said Wednesday.

Klein said NBC worked with her group to create the revised segment of the spot, which was filmed last week at NBC station WMAQ in Chicago. NBC will probably put the announcement on the air within a week or so, Block said.

North Koreans' visit allowed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department, which rarely lets North Koreans into the United States, is lowering the barriers to let three of them take part in an academic conference this weekend.

The department says the decision does not signal any new U.S. policy toward North Korea.

But the scholar who urged officials to issue the visas said he argued that "they should be allowed into the country because of a favorable trend in relations this year," between North and South Korea.

Visas were issued in Moscow on Wednesday to Choe Jin Hyok, chief of the North Korean Institute of History, and two colleagues, to attend a meeting of the Mid-Atlantic region of the Association for Asian Studies in Washington this weekend.

State Department spokesman Charles Redman said the visas require the North Koreans to fly into Dulles Airport in suburban Washington on Friday and leave from the same airport on Monday.

Diplomats will pay their way

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. diplomats wanting to enjoy afternoon teas aboard the Queen Elizabeth II or moonlight strolls on a Mississippi riverboat can no longer do it at taxpayer expense, the State Department has decreed.

Moving into the age of jet aircraft, the department has issued new travel rules banning publicly funded ocean cruises — a long-standing practice that congressional investigators say added nearly $400,000 to State and U.S. Information Agency employee relocation costs between October 1981 and September 1984.

As of Monday, employees wanting to take luxury cruises between the United States and overseas posts were required to dip into their own pockets for the usually big price gap between an ocean-liner and an economy seat on a jet aircraft, according to John Condayan, acting deputy assistant secretary for operations.

Baby's kidnapper charged

NEW YORK (AP) — A 27-year-old woman who gave birth to a stillborn child two weeks ago was charged today with kidnapping a sick 2-month-old baby from a hospital earlier this week to cover up her baby's death, police said.

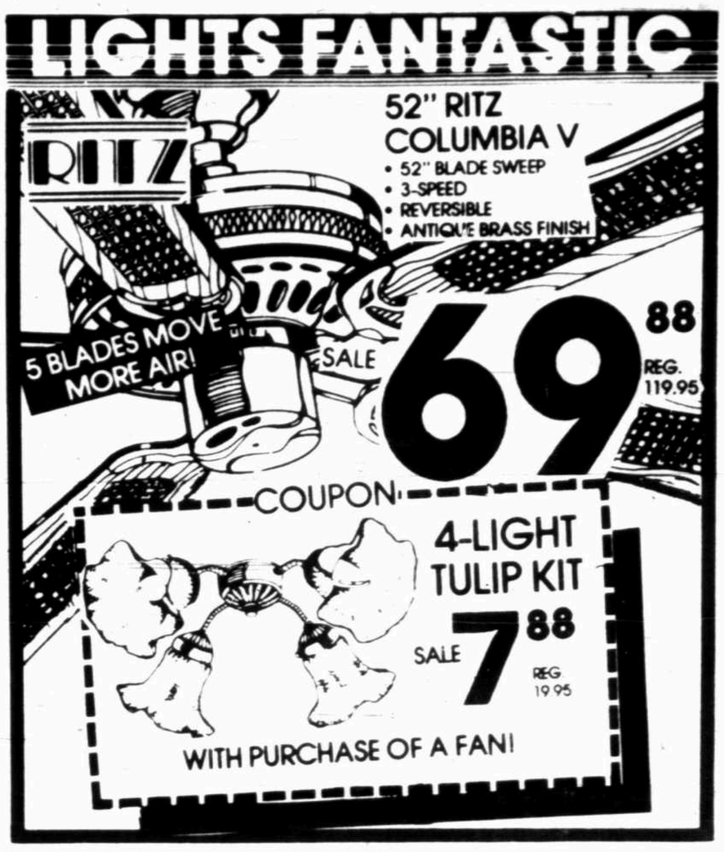

Toni Reed, who lived within blocks of Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center, where the baby was taken from a crib Sunday, was arrested Wednesday night at her apartment, police Lt. Ed LeSchack said. The infant, Christopher Morgan, was found in the apartment and is in "excellent condition," LeSchack said.

The baby, one of two abducted from inside or near a hospital this week, had been treated for a stomach ailment at Columbia Presbyterian.

Suspect won release from ward

NEW YORK (AP) — A 19-year-old woman accused of pushing a woman into the path of a subway train was released from a psychiatric ward last month over the objections of the doctors who treated her, officials say.

The suspect, Mary Ventura of Brooklyn, was involuntarily committed to the Kings County Hospital for psychiatric care last July and released in late September after a court hearing, hospital officials said Wednesday.

Indian Summer arrives

From Staff and Wire Reports

Clear skies and fair temperatures expected tonight and Friday indicate the arrival of Indian Summer in the Midland area as temperatures are expected to reach the upper 70s with lows in the mid 50s, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

Forecasters say tonight will be clear with a low in the mid 50s. Winds will be from the northeast at 5 to 10 mph. Friday will become partly cloudy with a high in the upper 70s. Winds will be from the east at 5 to 10 mph.

Wednesday's high of 79 was 11 degrees below the record set in 1934. The morning low of 52 was 19 above the record set in 1980.

STATE

While patches of dense morning fog obscured parts of the coast, East and Central Texas, a cold front bearing dry air brought clear skies and cooler temperatures to West Texas Thursday.

The National Weather Service blamed the fog on low-level moisture and said it was so thick in some areas along the middle coast that travelers advisories were issued.

While the weak Pacific front that bisected the state Thursday morning dropped temperatures into the upper 40s across extreme northwest and West Texas, the rest of the state had earning morning temperatures in the 60s.

The weather service said that North Texas could expect increasingly cloudy weather through Friday with lows tonight ranging from 56 to 65 and highs Friday near 80.

NATION

Rain was spread across sections of the Northwest, Midwest and South today, while much of the East had unseasonably high temperatures.

A band of showers and thunderstorms extended from west central Missouri across central and northern Illinois and southern Michigan.

Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms reached from southeast Louisiana through southern Mississippi and Alabama, while heavy thunderstorms rumbled off the coast of southeast Louisiana.

Rain was scattered over the upper Ohio Valley, Florida Keys, Washington, Oregon and Idaho.

Temperatures were unseasonably high across much of the eastern half of the nation, with readings generally in the 50s to 70s.

Rebs need win to keep 4-5A race tight

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The District 4-5A football season is coming off the back stretch lap and going into the final curve Friday night with four teams running a hard, tight race.

Leading the pack is unbeaten Odessa Permian at 3-0-1 followed by Midland Lee, San Angelo and Odessa High, all at 3-1. It's the district race that is making Friday's games around the league so important.

If the Rebels hope to gain a playoff berth for the third consecutive year, they can ill afford any stumbles now. However, Abilene High, Lee's opponent at P.E. Shotwell Stadium, isn't a team to be taken lightly. The Eagles have played everybody tough and own a 7-7 tie against Permian. How did they do it?

"They're awfully good. They really are a good defensive football team," said Rebel coach Jack Tayrien. "They've got so much team quickness. Everybody is extremely quick. They've got great run support out of the secondary. Their secondary has sure tacklers and they support the run real well.

"The linebackers are real active and are in on a lot of tackles. If they get blocked, they don't stay blocked. They run a 4-3 defense and their front four are big, strong football players and take care of business. The give the linebackers a chance to run."

While the Abilene High defense is highly thought of around the 4-5A, the defense has been having its problems. The Eagles have only managed to score 28 points in four district games, 63 overall. Defensively, they've allowed 37 against league opponents, 33 overall.

For Lee, scoring has been strong, outscoring opponents 104-55 in league play, 206-80 overall. The Rebels have shown a capability for high-scoring rampages but have also had trouble against good defensive teams. Against Temple and Permian, the Rebels managed only seven points while scoring 12 against San Angelo.

"I think they haven't needed to score on a lot of occasions," said Tayrien of the 4-2-1, 1-2-1 Eagles. "They can do some things on offense. They have good backs and a big strong line. They haven't broken many long plays but they have been very productive in picking up first downs and moving the football against everybody.

"They've got a good field goal kicker, he's their fullback also, a kid named Melvin Daivs. He's got pretty good range. He kicked a field goal to beat Longview, 3-0. He's a big, strong youngester, 215 pounds.

"We're going to have to play good, sound defense, not be out of position," continued Tayrien. "Their backs are so big we'll have to do an excellent job of tackling. They are so big, the break tackles so you can't arem tackle them. You need three or four players to bring them down. They've done a tremendous job all year."

Tayrien is also impressed by Abilene's ability to pass the football.

"It's about 50-50 (run-pass), I don't know the ratio," said Tayrien. "They've got a good quarterback who can throw the ball. His name is Michael Keith and he can throw it a mile. Sometimes he's erratic and he throws is so hard it's difficult for receivers to catch it.

"The thing that really concerns us about them is nobody has moved the football on them and you've got to be able to move the ball in a game like this."

ABILENE HIGH coach Don Cumpton sees the Rebels as a strong test to his Eagle defense, mainly against controled drives and big plays.

"We've got to keep them from controling the ball which they've doing a lot," said Cumpton. "When they've had to, Lee has made the big plays, too. They play awful good. They're probably the best at quarterback that we've seen since we've been in Polo anyone?

The late Paul Gallico discovered a unique way to become sports editor of the world's largest newspaper in what is still called sports "Golden Era," the 1920s.

Robert Lyn-Kee-Chow, manager of the Midland Polo Club, has proposed an equally unique way to leave sports writing.

On a visit to Midland while doing a series of articles for Reader's Digest, Gallico explained he was theater critic for the New York Daily News, fresh out of Columbia University, "I wondered what it would be like to get hit by a Jack Dempsey right." Gallico climbed into the ring with the heavyweight champ and the next thing he knew he was sports editor of the Daily News., a result of his recital of the explosive moment.

Lyn-Kee-Chow suggested the only way to appreciate the intensity of polo and the disparity between an 0-4 goal game and 8-16 goal game was to be out there on a horse.

"It would make a great story. We'll get you in a game of each next spring and you can describe what it's like when 3,000 pounds are moving at 30 miles-an-hour. It can be dangerous."

"Those were the playoffs. This is the World Series. There is a difference," he said. "I'd like to say it's the same. We're in the same position. But there's still more at stake."

So with survival on the line, the 23-year-old Jackson, 14-12 during the regular season, will be pitching against Bob Forsch, 9-6 as a spot starter and long reliever. Forsch, a 35-year-old right-hander, was ineffective in his only playoff appearance, giving up two runs in 3 1-3 innings against the Los Angeles Dodgers.

No matter, said Howser. "He's a starting pitcher on a National League championship team."

Are the Cardinals the best team Kansas City has faced this year?

"They're the best we've played in the last couple of days," Howser said.

But Brett, who struck out twice Wednesday night — and looked bad doing it in the eighth inning — said the Royals were facing the best this time, better than the Blue Jays.

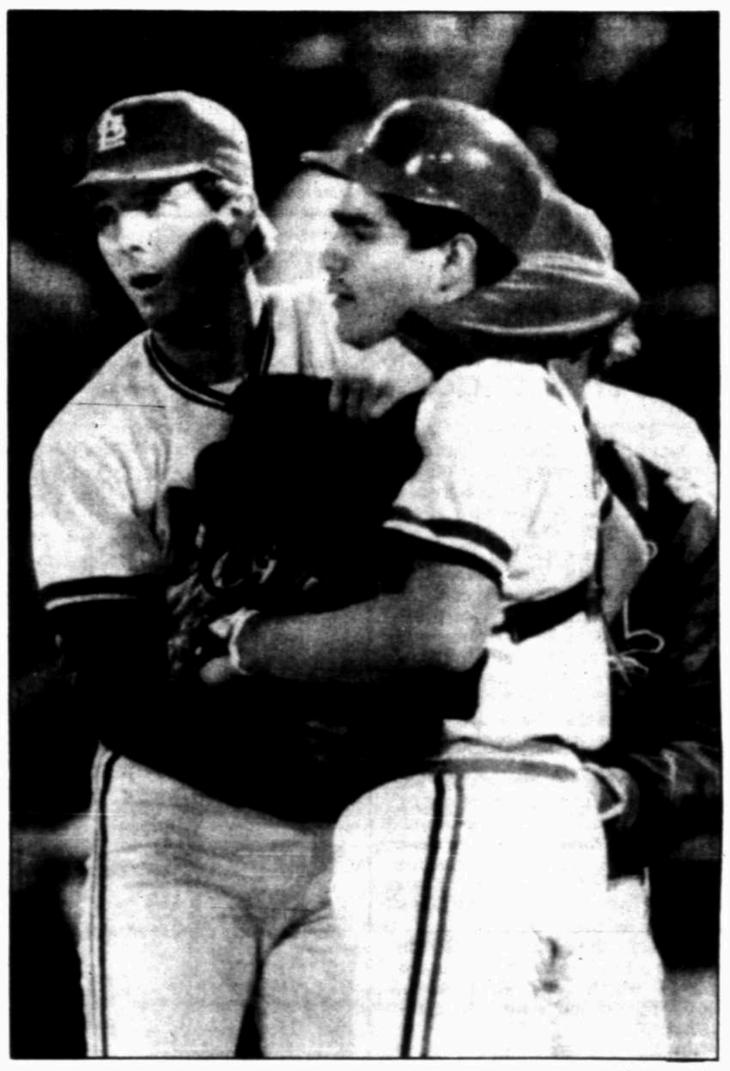

"They're the most sound, fundamental baseball team there's been in a long time," Brett said. "They don't make mistakes, they've got solid pitching and they've got a lot of speed."

They got the pitching Wednesday night. They didn't need the speed. After three games of scratching for runs, they got them with raw power against Bud Black.

Tito Landrum shanked a home run down the right-field line in the second inning and Willie McGee pulled one over the left-field wall in the third. And Terry Pendleton's triple to the wall in left-center field in the fifth preceded catcher Tom Nieto's suicide-squeeze bunt.

Someone asked Howser if that bunt was the play that killed Kansas City. "No. It was the opposite-field home run, and then the breaking ball that McGee hit out.

Area teams take look at playoffs

Although most aren't quite ready to admit it, playoff-fever is beginning to creep into the thoughts of area football teams and coaches, and with good reason.

After two weeks of district play in Districts 8-2A and 7-3A and one week down in 6A, more than a handfull of area teams have their sights honed in on precious playoff spots, some have already muscled into the inside track.

Here is a recap of who is in contention where, and predictions on the outcome.

In 6A, Iraan, (1-0, 7-0 and ranked eighth in the state) rooted themselves into the favorite's role by knocking off Rankin in district opening action. Coach Dwayne Turner's Red Devils, however, showed they will bow to no one with the nail-biting defeat.

"I think we have a real good shot (at making playoffs). We're improving every week, but Wink and Sanderson are going to be right in it, too," Turner said.

Wink is 1-0 in district after finishing off Grandfalls 28-7 while Sanderson was idle. But Wink (1-0, 3-4), long the power in this district, is not as strong this year as evidenced by some lopsided losses. The edge here goes to the Devils with only home games remaining, beginning this week with Grandfalls, then taking one week off before finishing with Wink and Sanderson.

At 2-0, 6-1, Crane is also moving into playoff position after dismantling Coahoma in 54-8 fashion last week. The Golden Cranes are tied atop District 7-3A with Ballinger and Colorado City with three games to play. Coach Rickey White's bunch should go to 3-0 in district Friday against struggling Ozona, 0-2, 1-6, while the other two unbeatens will tangle in Colorado City.

The Cranes continue with district play at Ballinger Nov. 1, then return home to face Colorado City Nov. 8 in what could be the battle for the final playoff spot. The Cranes, with their big, strong offensive line, have revved up their rushing game so far in district play, sending both Gerald Mitchell and Cliff Wilson over 100 yards apiece in two straight ballgames.

"We've got big kids and some times they are slower to come around to what you're trying to do. Early in the year we were trying to get our line adjusted, but now we are at the point where we can control the line of scrimmage and we can play ball control," White said.

Home field in the Colorado City game, a physical offensive line and talented players at the skill positions gives the edge to Crane.

That brings us to the dogfight in District 8-2A.

Friday, the war for the district lead will be waged with both McCamey and Greenwood lining up identical 2-0 district records and 6-1 overall slates. With the home field advantage and a tougher pre-district schedule, McCamey is the favorite, but the Badgers lost a pair of key players to grades last week.

While some might be tempted to say the Greenwood-McCamey win-

Watson has no excuses for 1985 performance

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Tom Watson makes no excuses for his disappointing 1985 season on the Professional Golfers Association Tour.

"I got what I deserved. I just didn't play well enough to win," Watson said before opening defense of his title in the Seiko Tucson Match Play Championship today.

"I had some chances, at Bay Hill and in Las Vegas, but I just didn't play well enough when I had the chance," Watson said with a rueful grin.

"Kind of like the (Kansas City) Royals," added Watson, an avid baseball fan. "They had a chance to win that second (World Series) game. That's the sort of thing that's been happening to me this year. I had a couple of chances and let 'em get away."

Watson, winner of five British Opens and holder of a record six Player of the Year titles, has failed to win this year for the first time in nine seasons. He ranks 24th on the money-winning list, his lowest position since 1973.

Perhaps his greatest disappointment, however, was his failure to make the Ryder Cup team.

"I just didn't play well enough," he said.

And, he said, he had no estimate of the state of his game at the moment.

"I really don't know what to expect," said Watson, who plans three more starts this year — in Australia, Japan and the Skins Game. "I haven't played much lately, just been working some at home and watching the Royals play."

Watson went against Lon Hinkle today in the first of 32 matches for regular Tour players. The tournament, offering more than $1 million in total prize money, also has a bracket for 32 Seniors.

The Seniors, playing for a $300,000 purse that includes $75,000 for the winner, also got underway today. They are scheduled for single rounds through Saturday, with the semi-finals and final match Sunday.

The regular Tour division has a purse of $750,000 with $150,000 to the winner.

Stenforth to speak on physical fitness

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Phil Stenforth, who is making a career of physical fitness, will be the speaker at a spaghetti dinner at the Holiday Inn Friday, the night before the Midland Reporter-Telegram/YMCA half-marathon and relay.

Stenforth is involved in the Adult Fitness Program at the University of Texas in Austin. He received his masters degree at the University of Arizona, but did his early running in high school and college in South Dakota.

"Yes, like West Texas we had wind in South Dakota," he comments, "And we also had cold weather."

A two-time district six-mile champion at Northern State, Aberdeen, S.D., Stenforth relates winter running in South Dakota involves windchill factors minus 100 degrees below zero. "We dressed appropriately, long underwear and layered t-shirts, turtle necks and stocking caps on top. But we always ran with the wind."

Stenforth has run everything from 5 Ks through marathons. "My best finishes were a second in the Tucson marathon and a 10th in the Fiesta Bowl marathon, but I'm not a great runner...I'm best in the marathon where my top time is two hours, 26 minutes and 30 seconds."

Friday, Stenforth plans to discuss training for performance, addressing the serious runner's concerns and the importance of fitness as preventive medicine and the role played by exercise in achieving that goal."

As for the half-marathon, "The most important thing is the proper pace through the race." And in the final few days before actual competition, "I don't stop running, I just do less and don't run as hard."

The MRT/YMCA runs will get begin at 9 a.m. Saturday and registration will be from 7 to 8:30 a.m. in the Courtyard in Midland Park. Relay competition will be offered in the over-120 division, the under-120 division and corporate. Half marathon individuals will compete over all and in men's age brackets from 19-and-under to 60 and over. The women will compete from 19-under to 50-and-over.

Shades of Uecker: Behind the foul pole in right field

ST. LOUIS – It was in 1938 that I saw my first World Series. I can remember it as if it were yesterday.

I sat in the center-field bleachers in Yankee Stadium. It wasn't much of a seat. It wasn't much of a World Series, either. One of those in which the old Yankees swatted the opposition, the Cubs, as if they were a fly on a windowsill. They won in four straight. The games weren't even close.

I sat behind a center fielder named Joe Marty of the Chicago Cubs that day, and he spent his day chasing extra-base hits all over the outfield statues. The New York center fielder was a guy named DiMaggio. No. 5. He spent the day catching extra-base hits.

It was almost Lou Gehrig's last game as a Yankee, although we didn't know it at the time. It was almost the last game Dizzy Dean would ever pitch. But the only thing I remember most clearly about the whole game is Joe Marty's number. I think it was 25.

I bring this up because I told myself that day so long ago that it would be the last time I would sit that far away from the World Series action ever again. I would get rich and famous, I said, and, by God, I would sit right back there behind home plate with all the big shots and I would smoke cigars and arrive by limo instead of subway. I made a promise to that kid he would never have to sit and look at a Joe Marty's number ever again.

Well, now, it's almost 50 years later and I went to a World Series game Tuesday night and there I was sitting in the outfield once again. The game was just a rumor, played by a lot of dots on the horizon. The only thing I could see real clearly was the right-field foul pole. It's yellow and got this little screen attached to it. The only thing I got to see real good all night were foul balls and Gussie Busch riding around on a beer wagon. The pole kept getting in the way of everything else – like the ball. Also, the pitcher.

I'm told the Kansas City Royals won the game, but don't take my word for it. I mean, a chicken rancher from Petaluma with a nine-inch screen got a better view of the game than I did. From where I sat, the game appeared to be a giant pantomime. Marcel Marceau was never better.

The guy on my left was no big help. He was a radio news guy from KRES in Moberly, Mo., so he wasn't under much pressure. He was a pleasant-enough companion, but not to be confused with Vin Scully.

I feel I let you down. I mean, here you don't want to be in St. Louis in the first place but, if you have to be, you might as well get to see the game and tell people about it. I guess I've gotten to see, oh, 250 World Series games from behind the foul lines over the years.

I GOT a watch last year for having covered 25 straight years, but they may take it back. They don't give watches to guys who sit in the outfield. I don't know who the guys sitting in all the good behind-the-plate seats were, but I'll bet none of them ever saw Dizzy Dean pitch to Lou Gehrig. Just when you think you're getting to be a big shot, they stick you behind a foul pole.

So, I'd like to give you the inside scoop on Kansas City's first win in this tournament but the right-field foul pole is not exactly the place to do it from. I'm told George Brett got on base five times in a row, but that's hardly news. That's Orange-County-votes-Republican stuff. Oh, I did get to go down to the locker room and ask, along with 500 other journalists, "What kind of a pitch did you hit, George?" or "What's the name of that kid who jammed the bats up the Cardinals' ears again?"

I got to see that kid who pitched the six-hitter and struck out eight Cardinals. He's harder to believe than my seat. He's the fifth-youngest ever to start a World Series game. He looks like what he once was – a newspaper boy delivering every day in the San Fernando Valley. He's got this little brush on his upper lip that has a chance to be a mustache in a year or two, and he looks so young you don't know whether to burp him or buy him an ice cream cone.

Usually, you can tell a starting pitcher before a World Series game. He's the one biting his lip or hiding in the trainers' room, or putting on his game face like a guy just asked to solve the Middle East question.

Bret Saberhagen was running around like a guy running for office. You'd think somebody had just promised to take him to the circus. He was button-holing newspapermen, instead of the other way round. Only three years ago he pitched a no-hitter against Palisades High in the city championship for Cleveland High in Dodger Stadium, and the Cardinals looked to him like just another bunch of guys who couldn't handle the low inside slider. He struck out Jack Clark three times. He's the fifth-youngest pitcher ever to win 20 games and may be the youngest ever to win the Cy Young American League Award.

"He's got a 20-year-old body with a 40-year-old head," Rival Manager Whitey Herzog conceded after the game. "I never saw anybody that young do so much with a baseball. Dwight Gooden overpowers you. This kid moves you out of there."

He was so good, one of these days I hope to see him pitch myself. But for that to happen in Busch Stadium they're either going to have to move the foul pole or the pitcher's mound. Or me.

Spurs' attempt to trade Gervin hits some snags

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A trade that would send the San Antonio Spurs' George Gervin to the Chicago for Bulls forward David Greenwood has hit some snags, Gervin's agent and a Bulls official said.

Agent Pat Healy told the San Antonio Express-News Wednesday that the incentives in Gervin's contract are a problem. And Bulls vice president of operations Jerry Krause said Wednesday that he couldn't tell if the deal would go through.

"I really can't give an accurate assessment because there are some things holding it up," Krause told the San Antonio Light.

The Express-News also quoted unnamed sources in Chicago as saying concerns in San Antonio over Greenwood's health have stalled the deal. Greenwood, 28, missed 11 games last season with tendinitis in both heels and underwent surgery on his heels in the off season.

Healy said the Bulls want Gervin to waive all of the incentives in his contract, which could earn Gervin $300,000 in addition to his base salary of $780,000.

"Obviously, if the Bulls live up to the contract as written, there is nothing for George to decide. The trade would go through," Healy said.

"But remember, George wants to remain a San Antonio Spur. He wants to stay at almost any cost. The trade was initiated by the Spurs. It's their decision to get rid of him."

Spurs owner Angelo Drossos refused to discuss the trade, other than to say "there is a small possibility" Gervin could still be playing for the Spurs Saturday when they open the regular season against the Los Angeles Lakers.

He also said the team won't "tolerate" Gervin missing practices. When Gervin showed up for practice Wednesday night, he was fined for missing earlier workouts.

Afterward, Gervin admitted he didn't know where he will play this season.

"As I get into my black Porsche and drive into the darkness, will I be coming back?," he said. "I don't know."

His absence Wednesday morning marked the third time during the preseason that Gervin has skipped practice. He also missed two workouts on Tuesday and one on Oct. 8.

"The team cannot and will not tolerate this," Drossos said. "I am very unhappy and upset with Gervin. We will do something about it. People cannot just come to practice when they feel like it."

Gervin, a 13-year veteran, is the Spurs' all-time leading scorer and the ninth-leading scorer in the National Basketball Association.

Lost wager takes Aggie flag down

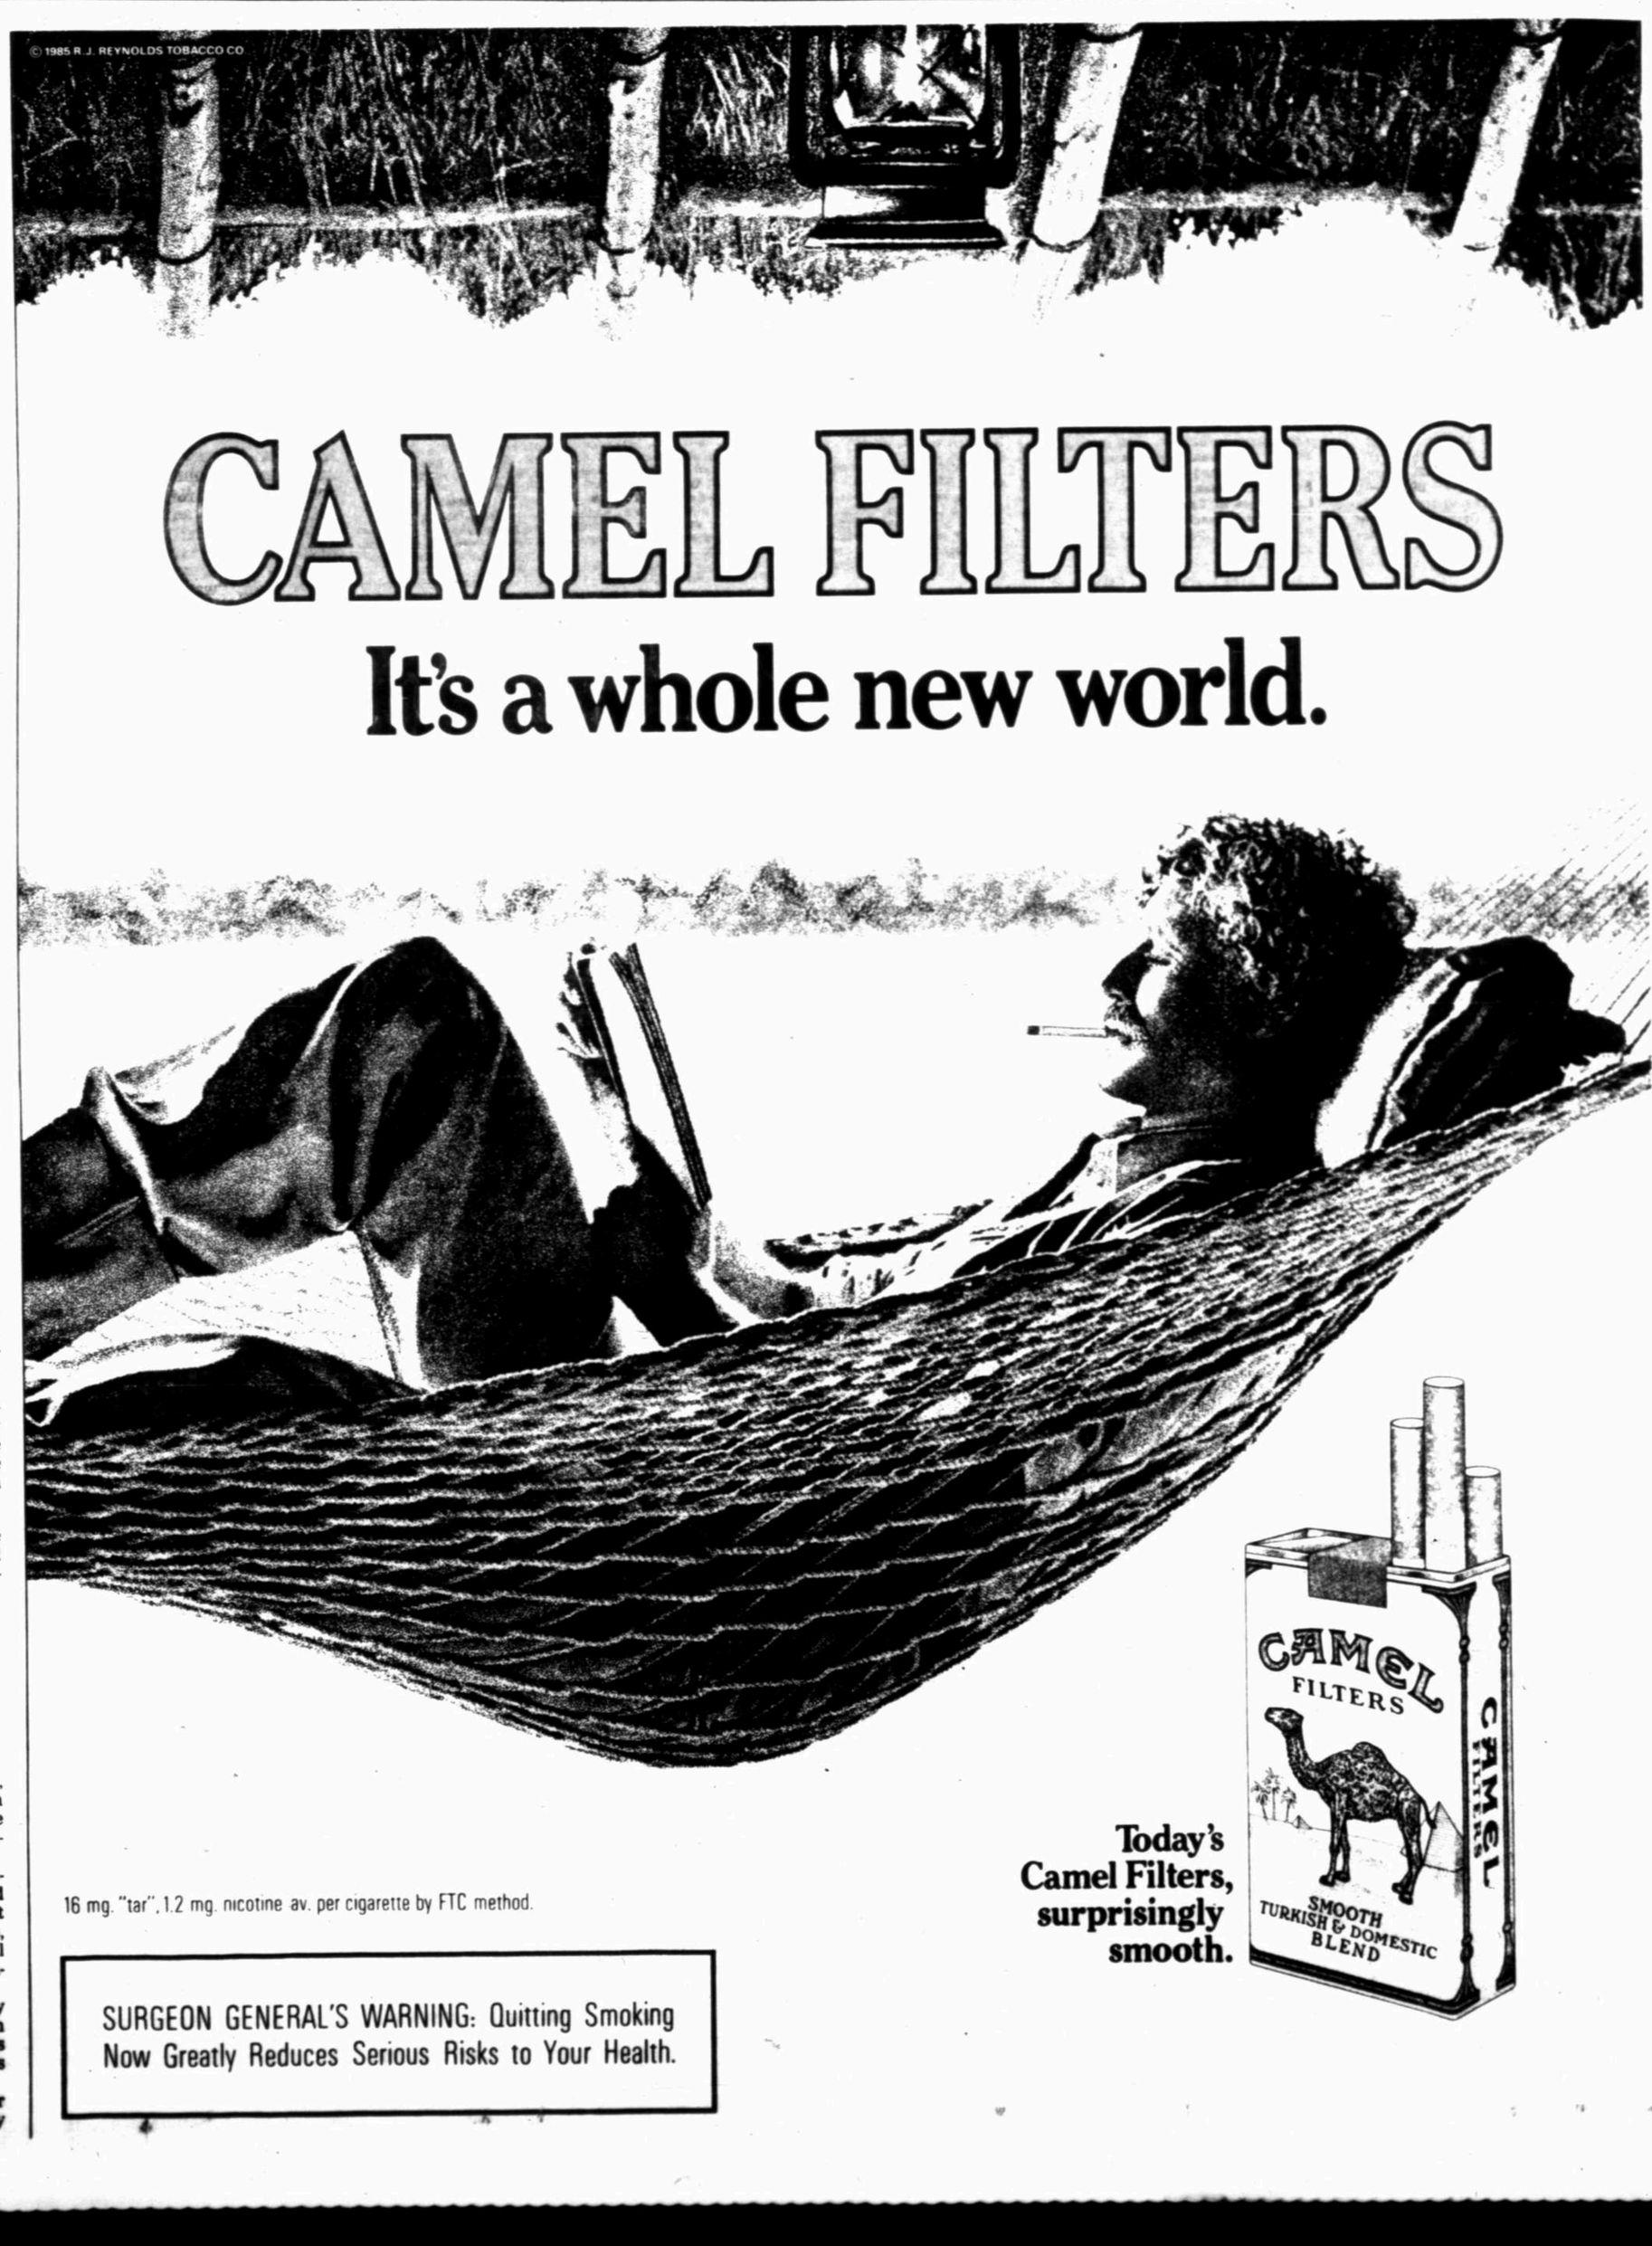

From Staff Reports

The ClayDesta Center Downtown, formerly the Gulf Building, has a new adornment atop its peaks, the result of a wager on Saturday's Baylor-Texas A&M football game.

Clayton Williams, an A&M graduate, long-time Aggie supporter and owner of ClayDesta Plaza, lost a bet to two of his employees, David Jones, president of ClayDesta National Bank, and Tom Moore, general manager of Williams Company.

Both are Baylor grads and they made a wager with Williams with the winner getting/keeping his team's flag flying on the building's pole for one week.

The Bears used a fourth quarter touchdown to post a 20-15 victory over the Aggies.

Jets sneak up on Oilers, 9-3

Associated Press

The Edmonton Oilers had their defenses down...and for a change, their offense wasn't up.

"We were lucky to get them down," said Winnipeg's Perry Turnbull after notching three goals and an assist to lead the Jets to a 9-3 rout of the mighty Oilers Wednesday night. "It was just one of those nights that the bounces didn't go for them."

Turnbull had a goal in each period, including the second when the Jets wrapped up things with four goals, as Winnipeg handed the two-time defending Stanley Cup champions one of their worst defeats in recent history.

"I had quite a few opportunities and I missed on a couple of pretty good chances," Turnbull said. "I give all the credit to my linemates because they've been getting me the puck."

Turnbull, who has five goals and three assists after seven games, took advantage of the Oilers' defense, which was a glutton for punishment all night to the delight of 13,269 screaming fans in Winnipeg.

Winnipeg Coach Barry Long, savoring the lopsided victory, said Turnbull scored because he got rid of the puck fast.

"He didn't finesse it around; he got in front of the net and let it go," Long said. "That's what he's got to do to score."

Rangers 5, Devils 1

Mark Osborne's first goal of the season and his 100th career assist sparked a three-goal outburst in the first period, and goalie John Vanbiesbrouck stopped 31 of 32 shots to pace the Rangers.

Osborne, who added a second assist as the Rangers scored five straight goals, tied the game against goaltender Alain Chevrier on a power play at 3:40 of the first period. Mark Pavelich knocked in the go-ahead goal on another power play three minutes later. Grant Ledyard, Mike Ridley and Bob Brooke scored the other New York goals.

Doug Sulliman scored New Jersey's only goal on a power play just 1:10 into the game.

NHL Roundup

Canucks 5, Red Wings 0

Detroit, victimized by a four-goal second period and the 29-save shutout goaltending of Vancouver's Richard Brodeur, remained the league's only winless team with an 0-7-1 record.

Cam Neely, who gave the Canucks a 1-0 lead against Corrado Micalef with the only goal of the first period, capped the second-period surge with a power-play tally at 11:58. Patrik Sundstrom, Petr Skriko and Tony Tanti also had goals for Vancouver, which moved into a first-place tie with Edmonton in the Smythe Division.

The start is Detroit's worst since 1982-83. The club's longest winless streak at the beginning of a season was 0-7-3 in 1975-76. After playing to a tie in their opener, the Red Wings have lost seven straight.

Canadiens 5, Sabres 4

Montreal, with a short-handed goal by Bob Gainey early in the third period proving decisive, ended a four-game losing streak. The Canadiens built a 2-1 first-period lead and extended it to 4-1 in the second period before Buffalo stormed back and tied the game on a power-play goal by Dave Andreychuk.

Gainey fooled Sabres goalie Tom Barrasso on a long shot at 6:27 of the final period. It was the third short-handed goal Buffalo has yielded this season.

Mats Naslund scored twice for the Canadiens to boost his total for the season to eight, while Kjell Dahlin and Serge Boisvert also scored in support of goaltender Patrick Roy.

Defenseman Hannu Virta scored twice and Mike Foligno had the other goal for the Sabres.

Penguins 5, Maple Leafs 4

Right wing Jim McGeough scored with 1:32 remaining in the game to complete a four-goal comeback by Pittsburgh that extended Toronto's home losing streak to four games.

The Penguins trailed 4-1 midway through the second period with Rick Vaive and Marian Stastny scoring two goals apiece for the Leafs.

But Mario Lemieux, who scored 43 goals as a rookie last season, paced the Penguins with his fourth and fifth goals of the season. Doug Shedden and defenseman Jim Johnson also scored for Pittsburgh.

Lemieux tied the score 4-4 at 15:01 of the third period when he jammed the puck past Toronto goalie Don Edwards. McGeough then scored the winner when the Penguins caught the Leafs on a line change.

North Stars 4, Blues 4

Ron Flockhart poked in a rebound with just over six minutes remaining in the third period to gain the tie for St. Louis. Flockhart's first goal of the season offset a breakaway goal by Tony McKegney that had given Minnesota the lead at 7:32 of the third period.

McKegney's score completed a three-goal outburst by the North Stars in a 2:17 span in the final period.

Black Hawks 9, Whalers 2

Rick Paterson triggered a three-goal first period and scored a short-handed goal in the third period as Chicago routed Hartford. The victory was the first for the Black Hawks at home this season.

Paterson started the Chicago barrage at the 3:01 mark of the opening period. Steve Larmer and Troy Murray also scored, and the Black Hawks then built an insurmountable 5-0 lead in the second period before the Whalers broke through on a short-handed goal by Stuart Gavin.

Flames 4, Capitals 2

Gino Cavallini, Steve Bozek and Carey Wilson scored third-period goals to lead Calgary over Washington.

Bozek's goal came at 17:16 and broke a 2-2 tie. It bounced off Washington goaltender Al Jensen's blocker, hit the post, then trickled over the line. Only 41 seconds later Wilson skated into the slot, took a pass from Richard Kromm and fired it in over the fallen Jensen for the clinching score.

Colorado Buffaloes contenders for bowl invitation?

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — So you say you want to rebuild your football program? For starters, do a bang-up, honest job of recruiting. Stress the importance of an off-season weight and conditioning program to eliminate injuries. Then cap it all off by switching to the wishbone.

The University of Colorado, which hasn't had a winning football season since 1978 and which was a dismal 1-10 last year, is 5-1 this week. The Buffaloes rank fourth in the country in rushing at 308.3 yards per game, ninth in total defense and first in net punting.

In its last two outings, Colorado has rolled over Big Eight foes Missouri and Iowa State by scores of 38-7 and 40-6. Its only loss came to ninth-ranked Ohio State and that might have been different without four costly fumbles.

There is actually talk about going to a postseason bowl.

"We really need at least two more victories to be in the bowl picture," said Coach Bill McCartney. "If we could beat a team the caliber of Nebraska (on Saturday), we would be a strong candidate — and even have a shot at the Orange Bowl."

A major factor in Colorado's dramatic reversal has been the wishbone.

Just a year ago, the Buffaloes were the worst rushing team among the nation's 105 major colleges, averaging a meager 59.7 yards per game. More than a few eyebrows were raised when McCartney announced prior to spring practice that he was scrapping his passing attack for the ground-oriented wishbone.

"I felt very confident in making the decision," said McCartney. "We had taken note of the teams in the country that had turned their programs around, and with very few exceptions all had something to do with option football.

"That intrigued me. We flew in option coaches from all over the country to pick their brains. It became apparent that option schemes were the answer, and the wishbone seemed to fit our personnel better than anything else.

"It wasn't as big a risk as it may have appeared. We felt we had the offensive linemen to make it work, and we had some good backs. Our running game looked worse on paper than it really was last year; we were last in rushing mainly because we had so many sacks (in college football, sack yardage is subtracted from a team's rushing total)."

"Our linemen love it, because now they can fire out and hit people," said McCartney. "They spent most of last year backing up (in pass protection).

"We knew the wishbone would help our defense, because it's a ball-control type of offense that tends to keep your defense off the field. But we have seen an added bonus: in practice, the aggressiveness of our offense has rubbed off on the defense. Our defense has been putting a lot of pressure on the opposition, and the last three teams we've played we've held to fewer yards than anyone else has."

The wishbone has other advantages. Only nine teams in the nation run the wishbone or a variation of it, and the attack is so unique that it becomes difficult for opponents to prepare for it in just one week of practice. Blocking schemes are easier for the offensive linemen. The offensive game plan typically needs only minor revisions from week to week, freeing coaches to spend more time on other matters.

The turnaround wasn't without considerable growing pains. McCartney inherited a bankrupt program from Chuck Fairbanks in 1982, too late to do any recruiting.

His first team went 2-8-1. Next year the Buffs were 4-7, giving cause for optimism. Last year's 1-10 mark raised doubts.

McCartney saw it coming.

"The first class I recruited in 1983, we redshirted them all. We played them all last year, along with the incoming freshmen. We were very young, at some key positions. We just felt that was what we had to do to get better."

Chaps chasing OC Invitational tennis crown

From Staff Reports

Midland College tennis teams get their toughest test of the year this weekend, competing in the Odessa College National Junior College Invitational Saturday and Sunday on the OC courts.

A new event, the OC Invitational will include teams from Tyler, South Plains, Laredo, Cooke Country, Weatherford, Schreiner, Odessa, Midland and Calhoun, from Georgia.

"This should be a good tournament, since Tyler, Cooke and Calhoun traditionally have excellent players," said MC coach Joe Williams. "South Plains and Odessa have been rebuilding their programs and seem to be getting stronger. We were hoping to have some other teams at this event, but this is enough to give everyone lots of action."

The Chaparral women's team is coming off a strong showing in El Paso last week. They defeated UTEP, New Mexico and New Mexico State and lost only one match while winning 26.

And the men's team also gives indications it could be a national contender. Frehsman Mike Oosterveen took a three-set victory over his teammate John Remy Roussel in the finals of the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches' Association Small College Regional Tournament recently to earn a trip to the ITCA Small College Championship in Florida in December.

Williams has an experienced women's squad with three sophomores who earned junior college All-American honors this spring. Helene LeBeller, Charissa Pruim and Sarah Swan are back from last year's team that took third place in the NJCAA tournament. New are Moniek Margaroli, Helen Schildknecht and Paige Carpenter.

Margaroli has replaced LeBeller at the No. 1 singles position. LeBeller moved to No. 2 and teams with Margaroli for the No. 1 doubles team.

The men's team has just one returning letterman, junior college All-American Emil Bijleveld. Both Oosterveen and Roussel are freshmen, as are Eric Lingg and Herve Rousseau.

Williams will have to forfeit the No. 3 doubles matches, which could cost him a shot at the tournament championship. He's bringing in two more men and at least one more woman at mid-term to provide additional depth.

In two weeks, the Chap women go to Abilene for their regional ITCA tournament. Both teams finish their fall season with the Midlander Open, Nov. 15-17.

Dallas Activates tackle Richards

IRVING (AP) — Dallas Cowboys' offensive tackle Howard Richards was activated Wednesday and guard Crawford Ker, a rookie from Florida, was placed on the disabled list.

Richards has been recovering from last season's knee surgery.

"We've got nine games to go so there is plenty of time left for him to help," said Landry of Richards.

Ker suffered back spasms in the game against Philadelphia and has been hospitalized in traction.

He will miss at least the next four games.

TCU player drops football

FORT WORTH (AP) — Senior guard Bernie Henyon says he has quit the Texas Christian football team, which has five games left in its season.

Henyon quit Tuesday after losing his starting spot, met with offensive line coaches and Coach Jim Wacker Wednesday, and then stood by his decision.

"I know this doesn't make sense to a lot of people and to some it may seem selfish," said Henyon, one of only four seniors in the top 44. "But ever since the Tulane game, my performance has been going downhill.

"My heart just hasn't been in it. I'm not helping anyone by being out there. It came to the point where I had to make a decision."

On Tuesday coaches replaced Henyon in the offensive line, moving center W.C. Nix to guard and promoting freshman Tracy Simien to center. But Henyon said that was not the factor in his decision.

"I'd been thinking about it before that," he said.

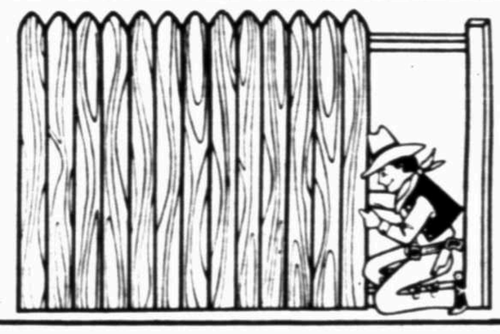

Henyon, a Kilgore Junior College transfer, was a member of Wacker's first recruiting class. He won the starting left guard spot during spring training and had started all six games this season.

Opening lead: King of ♠.

Postpone making a crucial decision for as long as possible. The information you may glean by so doing can be of inestimable value.

The auction had the virtue of being both direct and reasonably accurate—actually, a grand slam in diamonds is the superior contract for, with a 3-2 trump split, declarer can discard North's losing clubs on South's hearts.

Against six hearts West made his natural lead of the king of spades. Declarer won the ace and drew trumps in two rounds. Next came dummy's ace and king of diamonds, and declarer considered the fact that West still had the guarded jack as only a minor nuisance. South came to hand with a spade ruff and tried the club finesse—down one.

Declarer ignored the most important card in dummy—the jack of spades. That card, combined with the advice contained in our opening paragraph, would have permitted declarer to land his slam w. careful play.

After discovering the diamond break, declarer should run all his trumps, reducing the hand to this position:

	NORTH
	♠ J

	◇ Q 10

From the opening lead, West is known to have the queen of spades. He must also retain both of his diamonds. Therefore, he can hold at most one club. So declarer simply crosses to the ace of clubs, extracting West's only safe exit, and presents him with the lead by exiting with the jack of spades to the queen. West has no option but to lead a diamond into declarer's tenace.

Former Soviet may fight for Uncle Sam

CHICAGO (AP) — Walter Polovchak, the youth who triggered a long court battle by refusing to return to the Soviet Union with his parents, has registered with the Selective Service System.

Polovchak, who became a U.S. citizen on Oct. 8, five days after his 18th birthday, signed up Wednesday at a post office, saying he would serve in the military if necessary, but "right now, I have to think about continuing my education."

The American Civil Liberties Union represented Polovchak's parents in the long court fight after they returned to the Soviet Union in 1981, and Polovchak and his older sister, Natasha, stayed in Chicago with a relative.

Fiske

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Liver transplant recipient Jamie Fiske says she doesn't like it in the hospital, and her father, who made an emotional, televised plea for a liver donor to save her life, says she's become a typical tot.

"She does everything a 3- or 4-year-old should be doing," Charles Fiske said Wednesday as Jamie, who turns 4 on Nov. 26, checked into the University of Minnesota Hospitals for tests on the transplanted organ.

Jamie, who danced and demonstrated karate kicks Wednesday, continues to take the anti-rejection drug cyclosporine, has monthly blood tests and regular examinations, Fiske said.

In 1982, Jamie was an 11-month-old toddler, dying of a condition that blocks the liver's bile ducts and strikes one child in 20,000, when Fiske made his dramatic appeal and a donor organ tiny enough for her body was found.

Jamie will continue to undergo annual checkups at the hospital until she is 5. After that, the checkups probably will be done every three years.

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — "The Tonight Show" host Johnny Carson, celebrating his 60th birthday backstage with coffee and cake, linked arms with sidekick Ed McMahon and joked about his recent divorce.

"Don't say anything about marriage," he warned McMahon as they ate with arms entwined. Later, taping the monologue for his Wednesday night show, Carson said his legal fees from the divorce were so high that "my staff sent my gifts to the legal firm of Jacoby & Myers."

"In another 20 years, I'll be eligible for a guest shot on 'The Love Boat,'" he said.

Carson, born Oct. 23, 1925, in Corning, Iowa, has been NBC's "The Tonight Show" host for 23 years. He told his viewers that the network observed his birthday by naming a speed bump in the parking lot after him.

CHICAGO (AP) — William Friedkin, the filmmaker whose hits include "The Exorcist" and "The French Connection," has testified in federal court to try to free a convicted killer imprisoned for 32 years.

Friedkin testified before a crowded federal courtroom Wednesday on behalf of Paul Crump, who had been sentenced to die in the electric chair for the 1953 murder of a security guard.

In 1962, Friedkin produced "The People vs. Paul Crump," a documentary that led to the commutation of Crump's death sentence to life in prison.

"Our ways crossed in the past, and fortune smiled at me and frowned at Mr. Crump," Friedkin testified. "It made an even bigger obligation to me to do something for his case. I believe Paul Crump has paid many times and should be reinstated to society."

Walter Polovchak, a Soviet Union native who refused to return with his parents in 1981, fills out a Selective Service registration in Chicago.

Friedkin offered to pay for Crump's participation in a psychiatric treatment program upon his release.

Jill Wine-Banks, assistant Illinois attorney general, said Friedkin's testimony, though it stirred public interest, was irrelevant. She said Crump, who has been diagnosed as a schizophrenic with a propensity for violence, would pose a danger to society if he were freed.

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — The condition of artificial heart recipient Anthony Mandia has stablized after several days of turmoil and he continues to wait for a human heart.

Doctors at Hershey Medical Center said Wednesday they re-expanded small areas of Mandia's right lung that had collapsed because of secretions and his inability to breathe normally.

The problem, which doctors said is common after heart surgery, started Sunday, two days after the implant of the Penn State heart, and worsened until a bronchoscopy was performed Tuesday night. In the procedure, a tube is passed through the windpipe and sucks out secretations that interfere with lung functions, said Dr. John W. Burnside, Hershey Medical Center spokesman.

Dr. Dwight Davis, a cardiologist on the artificial heart team, said the condition is so common doctors neglected to include it in the updates on Mandia's progress.

Dr. William Pierce, who developed the Penn State heart, mentioned the lung problem Wednesday during his first news conference since the 1-pound, air-driven device was implanted.

Jay Floyd Memorial Tournament Saturday and Sunday, play will continue through the winter on an informal basis until the spring schedule. The Floyd was supposed to be the season's inaugural event, but it has been postponed so often it's now the finale.

Since its founding in 1967 by H.T. Hilliard, Carlton Beal, George Landreth, Jim Hall, J.R. Sharp, Robert Holt, William B. Wilson and Ronny Hissom, the MPC has established itself as one of the citadels of the sport. In season, Midland attracts players and trainers from Houston, Dallas, San Antonio, Colorado, Louisiana, Michigan, and Vermont.

Although polo participation is associated with wealth, Lynn-Kee-Chow says that isn't necessarily so, "We have 25 to 30 active members, but about 50 per cent are professional players-trainers like myself. And we (Midland) are the most reasonable polo club for facilities.

Bart Evans is one of the "real" pros who will train and play this winter in Boca Raton and Santa Barbara in the summer. Other pros are Harley Stimmel, Miguel Torres, Alonzo Galindo and Jesse Torres, "but sometimes it's hard to draw the line," says Lyn-Kee-Chow.

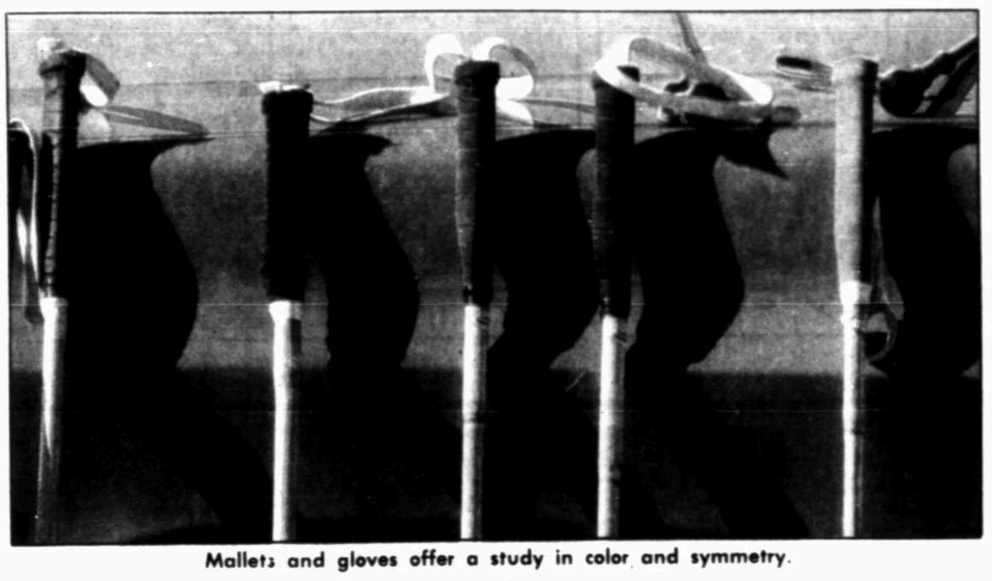

Lynn-Kee-Chow attended University of Victoria and then Florida Atlantic University in Boca Raton. His sights were set on pursuing a polo career in Argentina or Europe. Ryan Reddell, a friend of two years, suggested Midland.

And just how expensive are polo ponies?

"They average between $5,000 and $7,000," says Lynn-Kee-Chow, but adds they can go as high as $40,000.

"Still, you can buy a horse any place you can find one for $500." It's what happens after the purchase of the horse that ups the ante and that's where the trainer comes in.

"Some horses win and some horses lose, but a horse must be trained every day from the neck rein, stop, how to respond properly to all aids, meeting other horses, running a straight line.... In polo it's difficult to pre set plays, so the horse has to respond instantly.

Mallets and gloves offer a study in color and symmetry.

"Good players think two or three plays ahead. It's a mental game, although some make it look like brute force. It's when you achieve a certain level of proficiency that you finally realize it's a mental game."

Thoroughbreds are preferred as polo ponies. Says Lynn-Kee-Chow, "Quarter horses run out of gas. The difference is like racing a Volkswagen and a Ferrari. It would be like asking a weight lifter to run a mile. The high goal people ride the Thoroughbreds."

There are several variety of games. The four-chukker game permits people with fewer horses to play. National President Cups competition is a mandatory six chukkers and "in Argentina they play eight chukkers, that's the most prestigious of all," says the MPC manager.

And then there is Arena polo, also played at MPC, which is the mounted version of hockey or indoor soccer. "Here you can use the Quarter horse," says Lynn-Kee-Chow. "They are handy for stops, turns and take off."

Although he found polo as a 15-year-old while growing up in Jamaica, Lynn-Kee-Chow says some start at 45, "when they are making money. Regardless of when you start, once you play polo, there is no other sport like it."

The games are handicapped to ability, starting at 0-8 goals to 8-16, medium; 16-25, medium high; and 25-40, high goal.

"From 0-4 to 4-8 is a whole new dimension. And the only way to fully appreciate it is to participate."

During the winter months, Lynn-Kee-Chow hopes a 12 to 14 goal league can be formed to imrpove the brand of polo here. And apparently the talent is here. Bart Evans is eight-goals and Hector Galindo has a six-goal rating and Stimmel is five while Carlos Galindo, Miguel Silvestre, and Miguel Torres are four-goalers. Three-goalers are Ryan Reddell, Jesse Torres, Ed Little and Alonzo Galindo. "We have a lot of one and two goal players and they can improve their rating through better horses and good competition."

However, perhaps the MPC's most important off-season function when, with the exception of Mondays and Thursdays, the emphasis is on training horses. Buyers come to Midland from Chicago, Michigan, California, Colorado, Florida, Virginia and North Carolina.

"Business men usually come in on weekends to ride and buy. The appeal of Midland," says Lynn-Kee-Chow, "is that they can see a dozen different trainers and match their needs with the trainer."

For someone like Lynn-Kee-Chow, who is involved in the day-to-day operation of the Midland Polo Club, working constantly with the livestock, "It's not exclusive. It's not all glory or money all over the place. It's a living. It's fun, but you are really putting your neck on the line by risking your own money.

"It's a rough sport, but one thing about it, no cursing or super rough play is allowed. And while it's important to have a good horse, the rider is just as important. If you can't drive a car, you can't get to where you want to go. Too many blame the horse."

Dollar up

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar staged a broad but modest advance on foreign exchange markets early today. Gold bullion prices were little changed.

A few hours after European markets opened, the dollar was being quoted at higher levels against all other major currencies, in line with its performance in New York late Wednesday.

European traders said that the dollar was being boosted by light commercial demand but that concern over possible intervention by central banks was holding the currency steady.

Traders in Tokyo said the Bank of Japan stepped in with dollar sales during morning trading, but they said the intervention did not have a significant impact.

Selected midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Wednesday:

—2.6445 West German marks, up from 2.639

—2.1675 Swiss francs, up from 2.1662

—8.0665 French francs, up from 8.0475

—2.9835 Dutch guilders, up from 2.9785

—1,783.25 Italian lire, up from 1,781

—1.36455 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3643

A London bullion dealer said trading in gold was static. He cited lack of fresh political developments concerning South Africa, a major gold producer, and a movement Wednesday toward platinum.

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended midmorning gold price of $325.95 a troy ounce, down from $326.50 late Wednesday.

In Zurich, the metal was bid at $326.20 down 5 cents.

Earlier in Hong Kong, gold lost $1.05 to close at a bid of $326.93.

Silver bullion was quoted in London at $6.18 an ounce, down 1 cent.

ClayDesta Center opens

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

Completing an aggressive expansion program, ClayDesta National Bank joined the growing ranks of downtown banks Wednesday with the opening of its ClayDesta Center Downtown, in the former Gulf Building.

When ClayDesta began three years ago, it was the smallest bank in the market, even though it began with the largest organizational capital in West Texas. It has since grown, however, to the third largest bank in Midland, with $133.5 million in assets. But its location, two and a half miles from downtown, was not convenient to much of the targeted market, the oil and gas companies.

Now, ClayDesta officals are hopeful Wednesday's opening of its downtown branch in the recently renovated Gulf Building will solve that problem.

David Jones, president ClayDesta National Bank, says the new facility will serve as a spring board for increasing the bank's business in the oil and gas sector. 'Downtown is a significant market for our targeted business, which is oil and gas," he said. "This is the culmination of a four branch expansion, a normal expansion for the institution."

The downtown facility occupies part of the first floor of the newly-remodeled ClayDesta Center Downtown, formerly the Gulf Building, which had undergone a year-long, $2.5 million renovation project. The building is presently 38 percent leased, according to Bill Sandlin, general manager of ClayDesta Corp., who added that there has been an excellent response the last few weeks. "People are calling us; we're not calling them," he said. He said he expects that the building will be 60 to 70 percent leased in the next three to four months.

Ground was broken for the Gulf Building in 1959, with the first owner R. Dumas Miller of Jackson, Miss. Completed in early 1960, the building's first tenants included James E. Peterson, Rauscher, Pierce stockbrokers, Jack Elam, Halliburton, and Gulf Oil Corp., among others.

The building was sold in 1970 to Realty Income Trust of Providence, R.I., who sold it to Crosley Building Corp. of Ohio in July of 1971, who later sold it to Clayton Williams, Jr.

While there are no plans for further bank expansion, Jones did not rule out future acquisitions. He said the only plans right now are for increased growth and services, hinting at a surprise or two in the near future.

United Bank completes capitalization program

From Staff Reports

United Bank, Midland, has announced the competion of the sale of 136,284 share of non-voting preferred stock to the Equitable Co. of Texas, a wholly owned subsidary of MCorp. The sale brings the total number of shares now owned by Equitable to 304,642 shares representing $4,569,630 or $15 per share.

"This sale makes us highly capitalized and highly stable. It puts us in the 98 percentile in the assets to capital ratio," said Wayne Merritt, chief executive officer United Bank, "meaning that only two percent of the banks in the state are higher than us in assets to capital. We hope soon to be the top in the state in this category."

Merritt said that high capitalization had been a part of the United Bank operating philosophy from its inception. He says it is a philosophy that will see the bank through future hard times if and whens they come. "We seek to be patiently aggressive," said Merrit. "That means we aggressively seek the good customer, but are patient enough to let the marginal ones go."

The preferred shares sold to Equitable include warrants entitling MCorp to purchase one common share for each preferred share. The warrants are exercisable at any time during the a period of seven years commencing July 31, 1986 at a price of $18 per share and excalating to $25 per share. According to Merritt, MCorp will be entitled to purchase up to 21.7 percent of United's outstanding common stock. However, the preferred shares are fully redeemable at the option of United Bank.

Merritt says the latest stock sale adds $2.04 million to United's capitalization program which now puts the bank at about $20 million in capital accounts and concludes an extensive capitalization program that began in the summer of 1984. The capitalization includes the following sales:

- In July 1984, Midland businessmen purchase 100 percent of outstanding common stock.
- The same month, United's initial public offering of 450,000 shares raises capital of $5.4 million.
- Again in July, the bank sells sells 168,358 shares of preferred stock to a subsidary of MCorp of Dallas for $2.52 million.
- In October 1984, United sells 141,66 shares of common stock for $1.7 million.

Merrit said the capitalization program would allow United Bank and its customers to grow at a time when other institutions are attempting to reduce growth rates or raise capital.

Chamber votes to support Bid Resource Center

The Midland Chamber of Commerce voted Wednesday to support the opening of a branch of the Bid Resource Center in the Permian Basin.

The center, headquartered in Beaumont, is designed to increase the volume of business in the region, thereby preventing further layoffs as well as creating new jobs to keep a skilled workforce at home.

Charles Spence, vice president, economic development, for the chamber, said the center focuses on contracts with the U.S. government. He said the government has over 2,000 purchasing departments, which buy over 620 categories of items from answering services to zippers.

He said the Odessa chamber has already signed up to support the project, which is planned to be located at the Midland Regional Airport.

In other business, the chamber heard a report on the Comprehensive Master Plan for the City of Midland as well as committee and organization reports.

FDIC head to look at disclosure policy

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

NEW ORLEANS — The new head of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. gave bankers room to hope Wednesday that the FDIC will not begin publicly announcing their misdeeds on Jan. 1, when a new disclosure policy is set to take effect.

L. William Seidman, who took over as chairman of the FDIC two days ago, said he plans to take a look at the policy "to see if it's necessary to make any changes."

If the policy is not changed, the FDIC will begin on Jan. 1 to disclose all final enforcement actions involving the nation's 4,700 federally chartered banks. Such cases could mean disclosure of misconduct such as improper or excessive insider lending, discriminatory lending practices, and inaccurate advertising, said Steve Katsanos, a spokesman for the FDIC. The public also would be told about the sanctions taken against banks, which could include consent orders, fines, and removal of officers.

The policy was approved by the FDIC's three-member board earlier this year, but could be modified or reversed by a new board vote. Since the policy was approved, Seidman has taken over one of the three seats. The comptroller of the currency, who holds another seat, is stepping down, and the term of the third member has expired. A policy change requires approval by two members.

The FDIC board originally approved the policy in the hope that banks might discontinue or avoid unethical practices if they knew they ran the risk of public embarrassment. Irvine Sprague, the member whose term has expired, said last month that he hoped the policy would force bankers to "clean up their acts." Sprague remains on the board until a replacement is chosen by the President. "We hope the bankers will not want to be caught up in it. Everybody is on notice," Sprague said.

Earnings step ahead of inflation, government says

Associated Press

Average U.S. weekly earnings rose 0.7 percent in September, keeping Americans a step ahead of inflation, according to the government, which said its newest consumer inflation index gained only 0.2 percent.

The gain in weekly earnings was the biggest since April 1984, the Labor Department said Wednesday. The big gain stemmed from increases in wages and hours worked which were offset only slightly by the increase in inflation.

The rise in the Consumer Price Index means retail prices are rising at a 3.2 percent rate for the first three quarters of 1985 and, coincidentally, are up 3.2 percent over September 1984, the department said.

Also Wednesday, as Chrysler Corp. and the United Auto Workers announced an agreement to end a week-old strike by 70,000 U.S. workers, domestic carmakers reported a 16.8 percent mid-October sales drop.

Chrysler was the only Big Three company to report a gain in sales in the period.

The CPI increase was the fifth straight 0.2 percent monthly gain, and means inflation is running so slowly that Social Security recipients will get their smallest cost-of-living raise since benefits were tied to inflation.

Moreover, the September retail price measure added the final figure to a federal income tax "indexing" formula that will translate to a barely noticeable change in the average American's 1986 taxes.

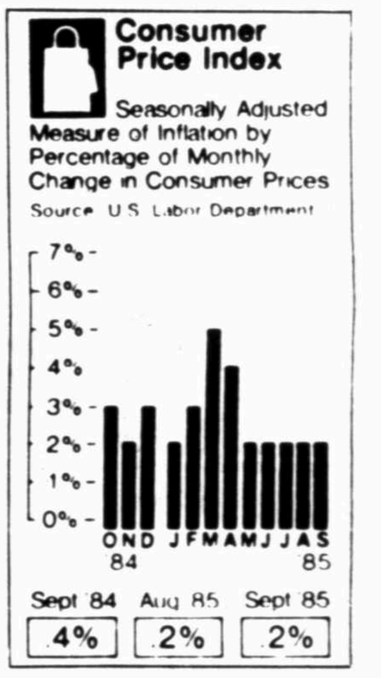

"It is kind of ironic that, with all of the real hot indexing talk in 1981 and 1982 because of inflation pushing people into higher brackets, this is a pretty small pay-off," said Robert Wescott, senior economist with Wharton Econometrics in Philadelphia.

"At the time of the talk, inflation was running at double-digit rates," noted Wescott.

The 3.7 percent tax indexing change — based on comparing fiscal 1985 inflation to 1984 — will result in the $1,040-per-person income tax exemption rising to $1,080 for returns filed in 1987. The standard deduction for single people will go from $2,390 to $2,480 and for couples from $3,540 to $3,670.

Tax table brackets will be widened by the same 3.7 percent so more income will be taxed at lower rates.

The 3.1 percent Social Security benefit increase — based on a slightly different set of statistics than those used for tax indexing — works out to a $14 monthly increase for the average receipient starting Jan. 1.

For the past five months, prices have risen at an annual rate of just 2.4 percent — mostly because of declining grocery and fuel costs.

Indeed, a fifth straight decline in the transportation component, which includes gasoline and automobile price and financing charges, was the main factor in keeping September's overall increase modest despite a rare rise in grocery prices.

Overall food and beverage costs, including restaurant meals, rose 0.3 percent, the sharpest since a 0.5 percent rise last February. That component had risen a minuscule 0.1 percent in each of the preceding three months because of generally lower prices for food purchased in stores.

Housing costs were up 0.2 percent, medical care costs 0.5 percent, clothing prices 0.5 percent and entertainment costs 0.5 percent.

In another report Wednesday, the Commerce Department said orders to U.S. factories for durable goods dropped 1.1 percent last month as a big decline in demand for military hardware offset small gains elsewhere.

Firms sue over state royalties law

AUSTIN (AP) — Amendments to the age-old abandoned property law during the last legislative session have prompted 24 oil companies to file a federal lawsuit against the state of Texas.

In a suit filed in Corpus Christi on Monday, the oil companies claim that lawmakers' amendments to the abandoned property law, specifically in its dealings with oil royalties, has left them open to lawsuits from other states also seeking unclaimed royalties.

Changes made during the last session reduced the amount of time that must pass before property is considered abandoned, from seven years to three years, said John Harmon, an Austin attorney representing the oil firms.

Under the state's abandoned property statute, all bank accounts, life insurance checks and other similar property not claimed in a three-year period, must be turned over to the state. The state returns the money if the rightful owner is found.

In the past, abandoned property would be turned over to the state if its former owner's last address was in Texas, Harmon said. Under the new amendments, abandoned property must be turned over to the state even if the owner's last address is out-of-state, he said.

With the changes, firms are required to "pay to Texas all royalties from Texas wells regardless of where the owner lives," Harmon said.

But, the Supreme Court ruled in a case involving Texas and New Jersey that the state of the owner's last known address is the receiver of any unclaimed royalties, Harmon said.

The oil companies, which include Texaco, Mobil, Tenneco, Getty Oil Cos. and Mitchell Energy and Development Co., claim the statute's amendments open them up to lawsuits from competing states and may force them to have to pay two states the amount of an unclaimed check.

"The state Legislature saw a way to increase non-tax state revenues for the state by expanding application and tightening the enforcement of the escheat statutes to all holders," the lawsuit states.

"We don't mind paying it," said Harmon. "We're saying we can't pay it in both places. We're in an impossible situation."

The amended statute requires oil companies to identify all unclaimed royalties by Nov. 1 and turn the money over to the state treasury in six months if the owner cannot be found.

The law was changed so all businesses would be treated equally, said Bill Cryer, a spokesman for State Treasurer Ann Richards.

The changes made during the 69th legislative session "makes explicit what was in the old law," Cryer said. The law, he said, always included oil companies which in the past have not paid abandoned royalties.

Committee chairman trys to kick new life into tax reform

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

ANALYSIS

WASHINGTON — Tax reform is moving at a snail's pace in the House Ways and Means Committee, and it appears unlikely that a plan will be voted on this year, but Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., scheduled unusual sessions this weekend in an effort to kick new life into the stalled legislation.

Contributing to the delay is the Gramm-Rudman budget deficit reduction measure, the subject of ongoing House-Senate negotiations in which half of the 36 Ways and Means members are participating. Gramm-Rudman is attached to a bill raising the federal debt limit, which must be passed soon to permit the federal government to continue paying its bills.

The tax-writing committee, which started work Sept. 30, has made few decisions and many of those it has made will be controversial when and if the massive tax system overhaul reaches the House and Senate floors.

Harry Spannus, executive vice president Permian Basin Petroleum Association, said that news of any delay on the reform was good news. "If we can't kill this Rostenkowski plan that would bring disaster to the oil industry, the best we can do is delay it. If it is dead for the rest of the rest of the year, it will give us some breathing room to go on and tackle some other things."

Rostenkowski clings to hope his committee will report a bill this fall. House Speaker Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., also remains confident that if the committee produces a bill he can push it to a vote.

Senate action in this session, however, appears unlikely.

In Chicago last week, Rostenkowski said, "If you want to know what the Senate will do, you'll have to talk to Robert Packwood, Bob Dole or God." Packwood, R-Ore., is Senate Finance Committee chairman and Dole, R-Kan., is Senate majority leader.

Dole said it would be almost impossible for the Senate to mar' up (draft) a tax bill, vote on it and work out differences with the Hous in conference before Thanksgiving, the target date for adjournment.

The tax-writing committee is working from a 139-page markup document drafted by the committee's own staff. It suggests several major changes from the tax reform plan President Reagan announced last May 28.

The committee so far has avoided most controversial decisions -including those affecting the oil and gas industry, big and small business, and the handling of tax-exempt bonds.

Defying Rostenkowski's wishes, the committee the week of Oct. 14 voted to give a large tax cut to commercial banks and to retain a tax deduction for charitable giving.

Those changes, in addition to those made earlier, have left the committee close to $14 billion short of its aim to produce a "revenue neutral" tax bill – one that will neither add nor take away tax revenue.

In the weekend sessions, scheduled to continue into the night on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, members will take up corporate taxation, including rapid amortization, the accelerated cost recovery system, small business issues and treatment of tax-exempt bonds.

An aide to Rep. Bill Archer, R-Houston, one of two Texans on the committee, said the congressman will do all he can to try to maintain current law on oil and gas industry taxes.

"He can't see how the industry can take another blow," said Phil Mosely.

The Reagan plan would have phased out the so-called "percentage depletion allowance" – a deduction to conpensate for the extraction of mineral resources – over a five year period. Reagan's plan retained it for independent producers of small, "stripper" wells, who are major users of the tax break.

The Ways and Means Committee staff recommended a total wipe out of the percentage depletion allowance.

The committee staff recommended continuing a one-year write-off of intangible drilling costs as in current law and in the Reagan proposal, except for producing wells. For those wells, intangible drilling costs – such as labor and fuel – would be written off over three years.

Rostenkowski has not tried to hide his attitude that oil and gas breaks left untouched by the Reagan plan should be no more sacrosanct than any others, and possibly less so.

When the committee is looking for extra revenue to make sure the bill remains "revenue neutral," these tax breaks are sure to come under scrutiny.

It is unclear, also, how much the Reagan administration will want to compromise on the issue.

Several strong spokesmen for the oil and gas industry are on the committee, including Archer and Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Austin. Other influential friends of the industry on the committee include Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., former chairman of the Budget Committee; Rep. William M. Thomas, R-Calif.; Rep. Beryl Anthony Jr., D-Ark.; and Rep. W. Henson Moore, R-La.

Transco reports oil discovery in Louisiana

HOUSTON (SWN) — Transco Exploration Partners, Ltd. has announced an oil and natural gas discovery on the West Deer Island Prospect in Terrebonne Parish, Louisiana, 14 miles south southwest of Morgan City. TXP, through its managing general partner Transco Exploration Company, holds a 100 percent working interest in the discovery.

The TXC No. 1 Continental Land and Fur well, drilled to a depth of 12,000 feet, encountered approximately 62 feet of net pay. During production tests from perforations between 11,932 and 12,014 feet in Middle Miocene sands, the well flowed 1,266 barrels of 39 degrees API gravity oil per day and 3.477 million cubic feet of gas per day through a 16/64-inch choke with 5,660 pounds per square inch flowing tubing pressure.

Development drilling and production are planned to begin within approximately the next 90 days. In addition to its working interest in the discovery well, TXP holds a 100 percent working interest in the 600 acres that control the prospect. TXP's net revenue interest averages 73 percent after royalties.

Valero improves profitability

SAN ANTONIO (SWN) — Valero Energy Corp. reported net income of $5.6 million for the quarter ended September 30, 1985 or 13 cents per share of common stock, a major improvement over a net loss of $8.6 million or a 45 cent loss per share in the third quarter of 1984. The major factor was the improved profitability of its refining and marketing operations.

Net income for the first nine months of 1985 also increased, totalling $24.3 million or 73 cents per share, versus a net loss of $1.8 million, or a 40 cent loss per share for the first nine months of 1984.

The 23 percent increase in pipeline operating income was a major contributor to the $39.3 million of operating income in the third quarter, up from $33.6 million for the same period in 1984. Valero's operating income for the first nine months of 1985 was $82.9 million compared to $94.8 million for the same period in 1984. The decrease is primarily due to lower liquid prices and a refining and marketing operating loss in the first quarter of 1985.

Valero Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, Bill Greehey said, "the corporation's third quarter increase in operating income continues the quarter-to-quarter growth in earnings from operations that we began following the fourth quarter of 1984. Refinery downtime was the major factor in lower-than-expected refining earnings for the third quarter."

Greehey continued, "consolidated operating income has grown each quarter, from $7.4 million in the fourth quarter of 1984 to $39.3 million this quarter representing a 26 percent increase over the second quarter of 1985. We believe this trend is indicative of Valero's profit potential as well as the overall strength of our energy businesses. The recent firming of oil prices and our competitiveness in natural gas provide us with a good base to enter 1986."

Local constable new officer of West Texas group

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Midland County has one constable; Ector County has four. But Midland Constable Tom McGinnis runs an active office with four full-time deputies, while the Ector constables do little more than draw their salaries — $20 per month.

The state constitution mandates constables to serve each county's justice court, but their prime functions — serving civil process and criminal arrest warrants — can also be handled by sheriff's departments.

"It is overlapping jurisdiction," said McGinnis, who last week was elected third vice president of the West Texas Justices of the Peace and Constables Association.

McGinnis said his office serves "all the JP civil process (and) all the out-of-county civil process" and many criminal arrest warrants; in Ector County, "The Sheriff's Office serves 99 percent of our papers," said Ector Precinct 2 Justice of the Peace Virgil Lumpee. According to Lumpee, the difference is due to the politics of bureaucracy.

"Here (the JPs) are just kind of figureheads. They don't do much," he said. "It depends on the commissioners."

Years ago a politically powerful Ector County sheriff convinced the Ector County Commissioners to cut the JPs' salaries to $1 per year and add four deputies to his staff, Lumpee said. But similar empire-building efforts by former Midland Sheriff Dallas Smith met resistance from former Constable Jack Merritt, according to McGinnis.

"They just had a little more foresight here," said McGinnis. "Jack Merritt built this office. He showed the commissioners the value of the office."

"All the attorneys that practice law here have told me the Constable's Office does an excellent job of serving papers," said Midland County Judge William B. Ahders, who sees a need for active constables "because most sheriff's offices are busy fighting crime."

McGinnis agreed that an active Constable's Office "frees the Sheriff's Office to concentrate on criminal activities," and said "We have nothing but good relations" with the Sheriff's Office since Gary Painter replaced Smith last January.

"There is absolutely no problem," agreed Sheriff's Lt. Hugh Buzzell of the Warrants Division, whose wife is one of McGinnis' deputy constables.

"Where we have a duplication, we have a 'let's get together and do it together' type of attitude."

"In Midland County, it's worked pretty good," said Place 2 Justice of the Peace Robert H. Pine.

Midland's Constable's Office will be less affected by a recent decision by the Legislature to require mandatory training for constables, as they already do for justices of the peace.

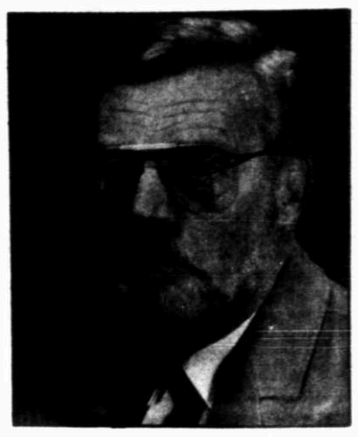

"All constables will have to be certified," said McGinnis, who is already certified and will probably be an instructor — "We might be a host site" for one of the constables' schools.

McGinnis, 49, succeeded Merritt in 1980 after two years as a deputy constable. An Alpine native, he had previously worked as a peace officer with the Midland County Sheriff's Office, the U.S. Border Patrol and the Philadelphia Police Department. As third vice president of the association, he expects to concentrate on the legislative committee.

"I'm proud that these people have confidence in me," he said. "I'm going to work for the association for the betterment of county government."

McGinnis and Place 1 Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry will co-host next year's West Texas Association of Justices of the Peace and Constables annual meeting, which will take place in Midland.

"I was very delighted to see that Midland's constable was given this honor," said Sprayberry, who attended last week's annual meeting in Fort Worth with McGinnis. "I feel he will serve the association well."

Parkview could be changing hands 'any time now'

By RON GILMORE

Spokesmen for Parkview Hospital and a private corporation confirmed that the facility could be changing hands "any time now."

Hospital Corporation of America, Parkview's owner, is currently awaiting a go-ahead signal from the Federal Trade Commission before it may proceed with its sale of the facility to ClayDesta Regional Medical Plaza Development Corportion.

"We should be receiving notice of the FTC's determination any time now," said Vance Fager, HCA's temporary administrator at Parkview. "I have visited with the people in the home office who are working with the FTC and they have assured me that the FTC has the report in their hands and that we will hear something by the end of the month."

The FTC's investigation of the hospital buy out is a result of a possible monopoly situation by HCA in the West Texas area. The firm manages and owns several hospitals in the region. HCA was ordered in July to divest itself of Parkview by March 31, 1986. The company had purchased the hospital from Forum Inc., the parent company of American Medical Centers, only six months prior to FTC's ruling.

ClayDesta, which has entered into a partnership with 41 local physicians, signed the contract to purchase Parkview on Sept. 10. The FTC has 30 days from when it receives the contract to review it and rule on it.

Fager indicated that he expected no problems with a FTC approval.

"All I can say is that I see no reason why the sale won't go through," he said.

The administrator suggested that there would be a transition period once the contract is approved.

"The hospital may officially and legally switch over once we hear from the FTC," said Fager. "But I anticipate that it will take a week or two for the changeover to take place."

CRMPDC president Dick Liley also indicated that a FTC decision should take place "any time now." Liley, who was originally retained by ClayDesta and the physicians to head a feasibility study for the construction of a $20 to $22 million replacement hospital for Parkview, was named president the beginning of this month. CDRMDC was chartered by the state at the same time.

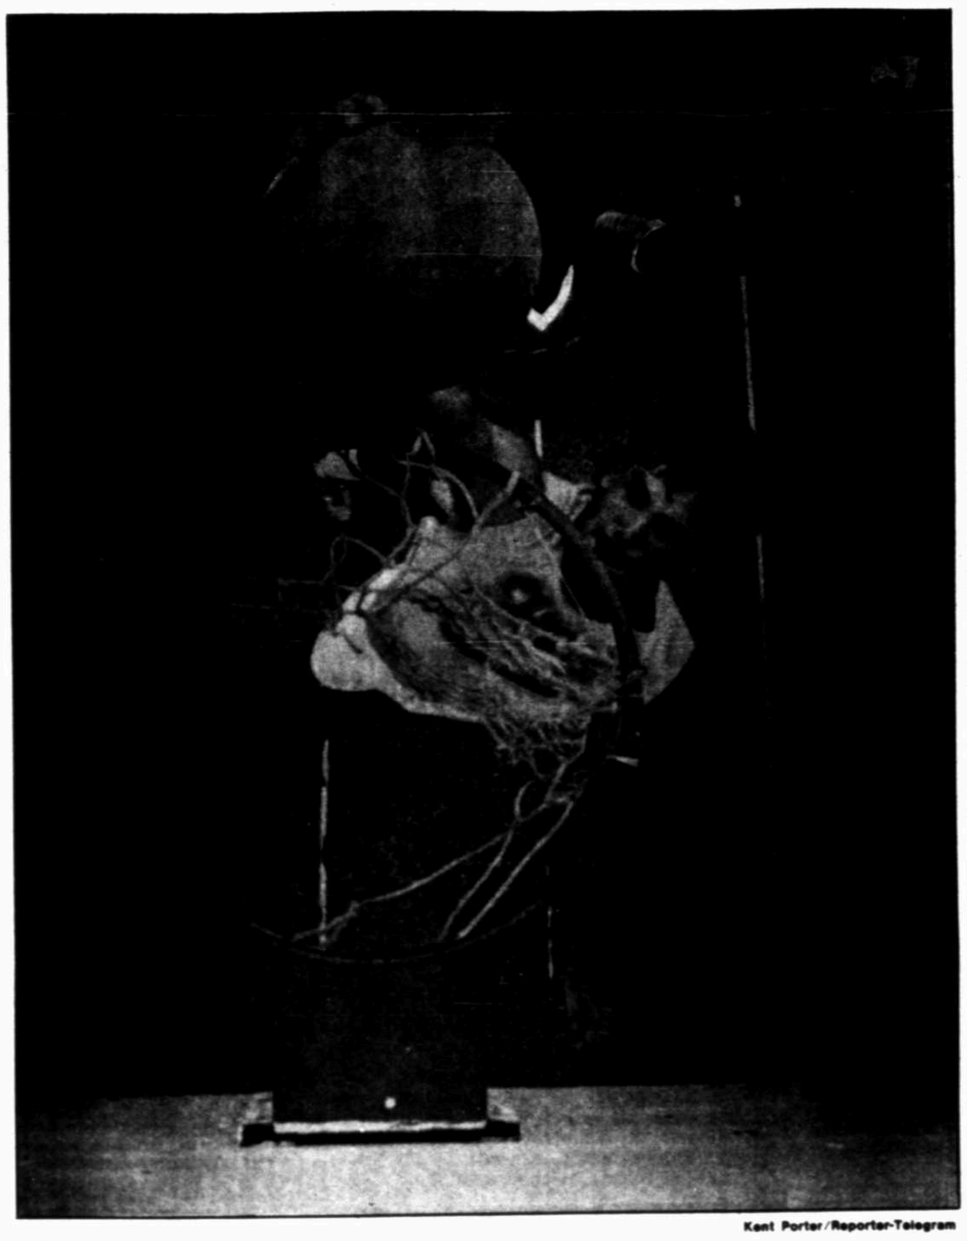

Heading the board of directors for the corporation are Tulsi Singh, chairman; Louis Barkley, treasurer; Terry Tubb, vice president and Paul Latham general counsel and corporate secretary. Other officers include Jerry Cochrane, P.V. Patel, Bill Sandlin and Bob Smith.

Liley will become the administrator of Parkview, a position he held for four years. Liley resigned in May after disagreements with HCA policy and the offer from ClayDesta.

CDRMDC also is awaiting results from Price Waterhouse, the firm it retained for the hospital construction study. The firm is examining the feasibility of constructing a new 75-bed or 120-bed medical/surgical hospital in the vicinity of ClayDesta Plaza.

According to Liley, the new facility would be called Physicians and Surgeons Hospital.

ClayDesta head, Clayton Williams, indicated in August that the hospital would probably be constructed north of the plaza near Midland Air Park.

Murder trial defendant to be sentenced

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — District Judge Gene Ater this morning was scheduled to pass sentence on 20-year-old Gary Lynn Wauqua in connection with the Oct. 25, 1984 stabbing death of a westside Odessa tavern owner.

A 70th District Court jury deliberated less than two hours Wednesday to find Wauqua guilty of the murder of 39-year-old Gayle Stifflemire. Ater could sentence Wauqua to a prison term ranging from five to 99 years.

Wauqua's half-brother, Donny Lee Bretz, 25, was found guilty of the murder of Ms. Stifflemire in August and was sentenced to 99 years in prison.

Bretz was returned to Odessa Tuesday for Wauqua's trial but was not called to testify.

James Waller, who was an Ector County jail inmate at the same time as Bretz and testified during his August trial, was called to testify during Wauqua's trial. As in the Bretz trial, Waller stated Bretz told him that he had stabbed the tavern owner during the robbery of the Tally Ho Lounge, 3114 W. 2nd St.

Georgia Converse, Ms. Stifflemire's mother, stated Bretz and another dark-haired man she could not positively identify as Wauqua had been in the lounge earlier in the evening looking for a jacket Bretz claimed he had left there. The two left after creating a brief disturbance, then returned a short time later and a scuffle ensued, she said.

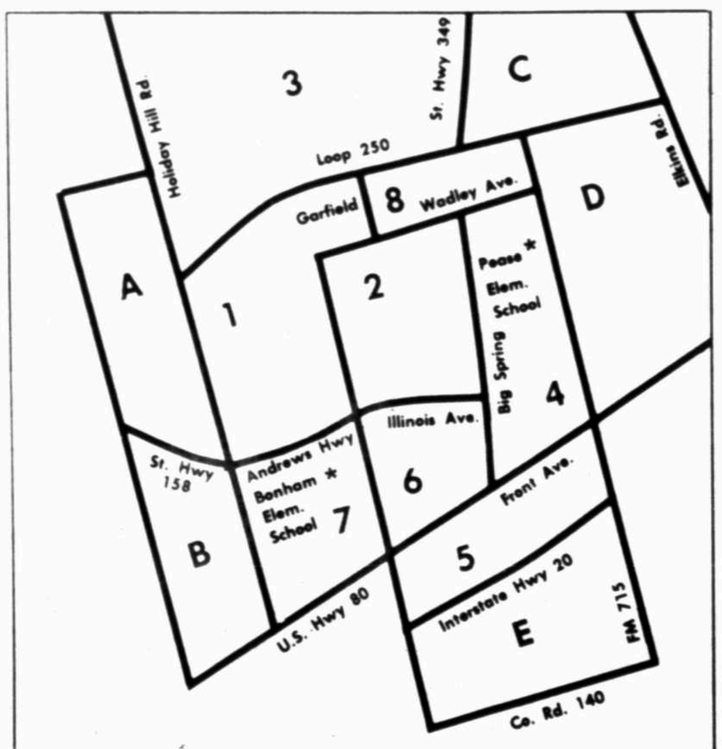

Mrs. Converse said she was struck on the head, then ran out into a breezeway, looked back and saw the dark-haired man on top of her daughter with a knife in his upraised hand. She stated she hid by a trailer near the lounge until Ector County sheriff's deputies arrived.

Returning to the lounge, she said, she found her daughter lying on the floor bleeding and complaining about not being able to breathe.

Dr. Robert Bright, a pathologist, told jurors an autopsy showed Ms. Stifflemire had been stabbed several times in the chest and upper abdominal area.

Plan for growth calls for urban center

Recommendation is to develop western Midland

COMPREHENSIVE PLAN
7:00-9:00 P.M.

Thursday, October 24, 1985- Bonham Elementary School * Cafeteria Community Areas B; 7

Tuesday, October 29, 1985- Pease Elementary School * Cafeteria Community Areas C; D; 4

By RAMONA NYE

An urban center similar to Claydesta Plaza or downtown Midland may eventually be developed in western Midland, according to a city comprehensive plan to be discussed at 7 p.m. today.

The urban center is one of several recommendations in the city's master plan for growth through the year 2000. The public will comment on the plan for West Midland in areas B and 7 at Bonham Elementary School cafeteria, 909 Bonham.

Community Area B - This eight-square-mile community is roughly bordered by State Highway 191 on the north, Loop 250 on the east, U.S. Highway 80 on the south and Midland Regional Airport on the west.

Used mainly for ranching and farming now, this area eventually may be developed into an urban center similar to ClayDesta Plaza or downtown Midland. Most of the land in Area B is owned by the Scharbauer family, and the family eventually plans to develop part of it as an urban center, the plan notes. The urban center would have apartments, townhouses, office and retail shops all in a 1½-square-mile area.

However, the plan says before the center is developed, there must be a market demand and adequate water and sewage line supplies. The streets around the center must also be able to carry increased traffic and the center should be compatible with surrounding land uses before it is built.

Other planner recommendations include bringing portions of U.S. Highway 80 under city control by annexation, before intense development occurs along that highway.

Restricting the western part of Area B to industrial, office and retail use is also recommended due to the area's noise level from the Midland Regional Airport.

Community Area 7 - Andrews Highway is the northern border of this 4.7-square-mile area, with Midkiff Road on the east, State Highway 80 on the south and Loop 250 on the west.

Most of this area consists of single family homes, and 23.2 percent of the land is vacant.

Too much business use is zoned for this area, the plan says, and there should be no more retail zoning in Area 7.

"Should the remaining vacant land zoned retail develop as retail, there would be nearly 300 total acres of retail land use which would require a population of approximately 60,000 to support the market demand," the plan says. About half of this, or 30,000 is the maximum population Area 7 could hold.

In other recommendations, a sewer line at U.S. Highway 80 is proposed to relieve some overloaded lines in the western part of Area 7.

As Area 7 develops the plan says Princeton Avenue, Bedford Avenue and Bentwood Drive need to be extended. Reconstruction of major streets such as Illionis is also recommended for the future.

The fifth and final public hearing on the city's comprehensive plan will begin at 7 p.m. Tuesday at Pease Elementary School cafeteria, 1700 E. Magnolia Ave. The hearing will review part of northeast Midland in community areas C, D and 4. This community is roughly bounded by Big Spring/State Highway 349 on the west, Front Avenue on the south and Elkins Road on the east.

Goddess to spend rest of her days in Capitol museum

Reporter-Telegram
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Goddess of Liberty, who has endured searing heat and bitter cold from her Capitol dome perch for 97 years, will spend the rest of her days in a museum.

"The Goddess must come down," Capitol Architect Roy Graham declared Wednesday morning. "Our Goddess is too far gone to resume her place at the top of the dome."

The Goddess suffers from terminal old age. A helicopter will remove her sometime in late November or early December.

She will remain on display for one week on the Capitol grounds. After that, she will be used to create a master mold, then restored and placed on permanent display within the Capitol complex.

A replica of the statue, made from more sturdy materials, will replace the original Goddess atop the Capitol dome. Like the curent reigning Goddess, the replica will have a dimple on her chin.

Graham, who called the Goddess the "lasting symbol of Texas and its special liberty as a sovereign state," said he had hoped she could be repaired and re-installed.

But after constructing a scaffold and giving the Goddess a head-to-toe physical, experts diagnosed her decrepit condition as terminal. Furthermore, Graham said the statue poses "a continuing threat to public safety and to the occupants of the Capitol."

While he said it is unlikely the entire statue will keel over on top of passers-by, Graham said "a strong wind" could knock pieces off of the 3,000 pound statue.

Removing the Goddess from her perch will be a delicate operation, Graham said, in part because no one knows how she got up there in the first place. "It'll have to be a pretty heavy-duty helicopter," he said. "We want it to have enough engines so that if one engine goes out, we don't want the statue falling over the Capitol."

Graham said the Capitol and surrounding grounds will be evacuated when the monument comes down. "We'll evacuate half of Austin," he joked.

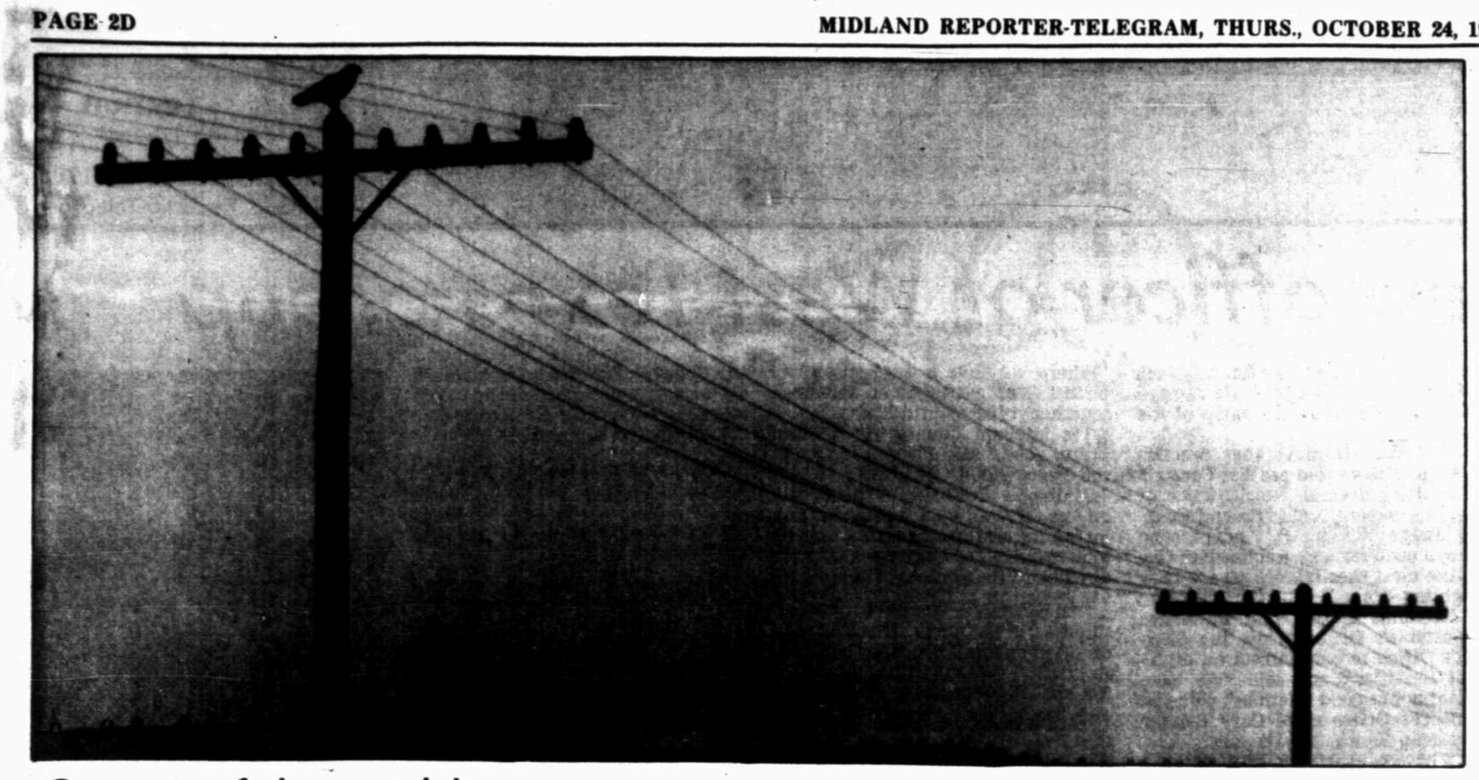

In recent months speculation has centered on how builders mounted the 15-foot Goddess on top of the dome, which is 311 feet above street level. "Consultants feel she was brought up in one piece," Graham said.

But other reports suggest she was brought up piece-by-piece or even hoisted through the dome. "We welcome anybody's suggestions," Graham said.

Graham said the replica will be an exact duplicate of the current Goddess, even though many people say she's ugly. When asked whether a referendum could be held on whether to make the replica more beautiful, Graham said, "We listen to everybody, but our mandate is to restore the Capitol. We would not be in compliance with what we are here for if we don't strive for accuracy."

Private contributions, including those from the state's school children, will pay for refurbishing the Goddess and casting a replica. The project will cost $480,000.

"Just like the Statue of Liberty Goddess in the New York Harbor, the Goddess suffers from the ravages of time," Graham said.

Nobel winner: Medal won't change his style

By LINDA LITTLE
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

DALLAS — Nobel Prize winner Dr. Michael Brown leaned back in his chair, casually flipped his left shoe off and on, and talked about science.

He talked about Joseph Goldstein, his longtime friend and research partner. He talked about the Nobel Prize. And, he vowed the prestigious award they won last week will not change their style.

In the first interviews granted by one of the co-winners since the announcement of the prize, Brown Wednesday provided insight into the working relationship of the celebrated partners and discussed the potential their research holds in the fight against heart disease.

After more than a decade of work together, Brown said it is no longer possible to figure out which one did what, calling their success a product of their complementary personalities.

"We respect each other to the highest degree," he said. "It works together beautifully."

Goldstein, he said, "is more extensive. He gathers tremendous amounts of data and tries to organize it into the general picture. Everyone who knows him knows that he not only reads more than anyone else but absorbs it and is able to correlate vast amounts of information.

"I tend to be more intensive. Like taking a clock apart and figuring out how it works. I try to get to the depths of something."

The researchers from the University of Texas Health Science Center at Dallas received the Nobel for medicine for a discovery that revolutionized the understanding of cholesterol — a major risk factor in heart disease.

The award has brought disruptions — press conferences, celebration parties and a salute before the City Council — but the two say they have no intention of letting their celebrity slow their research as some laureates have.

"That decision is up to the scientists and the institution," Brown said. "The institution can shield the scientist from a lot. This institution is very successful in that.

"Joe and I turn down 90 percent of the meeting invitations we receive even to the point that people feel offended," he said. "There was a major international meeting in Australia this month. Many people felt we should attend the meeting, but we felt we couldn't spare the time."

The researchers, studying a hereditary form of high cholesterol, found that each of the body's cells has receptors that act as doormen to admit cholesterol to be used to build cell membranes. It was the first time this mechanism was described, and the discovery stepped up development of treatments for high cholesterol, as well as providing a model for similar research in other diseases.

The hereditary disease, called familial hypercholesteremia, results in a shortage of these receptors. It affects one in 500 Americans, allowing cholesterol to build up in the arteries and cause heart attacks in middle age. A more severe form of the disease results in heart attacks during childhood and occurs in about one in a million children who inherit genes from both parents.

Reaction to the Nobel announcement reinforced the need for further research, Brown said. The UT medical school office was inundated with letters from families afflicted with the condition.

"It's really striking to look at the letters we have received from family members," said Brown. "They show family pedigrees. People growing up in families where they see half the members dying from heart attacks in their 40s and 50s."

He said he hopes further research not only will provide more effective drugs to stimulate production of cholesterol receptors, but also might provide a simple test to determine in childhood which individuals have the disease. Currently, the only test — taking a skin sample and growing the cells in culture — is impractical for widespread use.

"We hope that eventually it will be possible to pick up a predisposition fairly early," Brown said. "If they could be diagnosed early then a person could design his own customized lifestyle."

It is the same goal all genetic researchers have, he said. "For instance, it might be possible — and I'm not condoning smoking cigarettes — to tell individuals that their genetic makeup makes them very resistant to the cancer-causing effects of cigarettes."

Brown said early diagnosis may not help those with the most serious form of the hereditary cholesterol disease, since it is unlikely drugs could be developed to stimulate receptors for those who have none at all.

However, he said, researchers may eventually be able to replace the defective genes with healthy ones to produce receptors. The normal gene already has been cloned in the laboratory, he said.

"There are many, many technical barriers that will have to be overcome before that becomes a reality. This is a long way off," he said.

For now, Brown and Goldstein intend to return to their laboratories to study the remaining mysteries of cholesterol and how it is not only used, but produced in the body.

Brown's advice to future young scientists: be inquisitive and don't learn science by memorization.

"Curiosity and imagination are the keys to an exciting career in science," Brown said. "They may be more important than the facts."

Judge running for appeals court seat

From Staff Reports

Preston Dial wants to take a step up by moving to the Court of Criminal Appeals from the 4th Court of Appeals in 1986. He is the second Democrat to announce he is seeking the seat being vacated by retiring Judge Tom Davis.

During a visit in Midland this week, Dial said his only other opponent to date is M.P. Duncan III, a defense attorney from Denton. No Republican has announced.

A district judge in the 175th Judicial District Court for more than 12 years and now in his third year as a justice on the 4th Court of Appeals, Dial said he was persuaded to enter the race by some fellow judges "who felt we needed someone with judicial experience. There is a trend for more common sense decisions on the court and we want that to continue."

Dial said he believes everyone is entitled to a fair trial but "it doesn't have to be letter perfect. In the past, more cases have been reversed that did not need to be reversed."

If elected, Dial said he would be the first to go from an intermediate to a higher court. "It's a logical step up," he said.

A San Antonio resident, Dial attended San Antonio College and received his law degree at the University of Texas. He has taken basic and advanced courses at the National Judicial College. A distinguished graduate of the ROTC at UT-Austin, Dial served in active duty in Okinawa and Philippine Islands during the Korean conflict.

He has served as a juvenile judge in Bexar County, a briefing attorney at the Supreme Court of Texas and on the faculty at St. Mary's Law School and National Judicial College. Dial worked 11 years as a state and federal prosecutor with the last four of those as first assistant district attorney for Bexar County.

While a district judge, Dial said he worked to avoid a backlog of cases. He was director of projects in establishing the court administration system in Bexar County and utilized computers to transcribe court reporters' notes. In addition, he developed a system for accelerated handling of cases on appeal, he said.

California mother has two missing children returned

DALLAS (AP) — Sherry Filimonuk says she has not "come out of the clouds" since she being reunited with her two children, one of whom recognized his picture on two missing children posters.

It wasn't until Gregory Filimonuk saw his picture on a poster in a Dallas restaurant and one displayed on a large truck that he realized he was one of the millions of children listed as missing in the United States.

The 8-year-old boy saw the posters on the same day last month while he was with his father and his sister, Michele, 6. He persistently questioned his father, who eventually decided to return the children to their mother.

"I haven't come out of the clouds yet," said Ms. Filimonuk, 28, of Sacremento, Calif. "I'm just loving them a lot. Touching them, smelling and keeping them near me...Before I found my children, it seemed like every minute was an hour and now, an hour seems like a minute."

Her children were abudcted while they were visiting their father for seven days during the 1980 Christmas holiday, authorities said.

Michael Filimonuk, 35, and Paula Alvarado, 34, his previous wife, each face four felony counts of child abduction in Sacramento, said James E. Graves, Sacramento County deputy district attorney.

The pair turned themselves in to California authorities Friday.

The abduction was the second time Filimonuk seized the children, authorities said. The parents were fighting a custody battle when Filimonuk took them for several weeks in October 1980.

During the five year separation, Ms. Filimonuk said she lost two jobs and nearly suffered a nervous breakdown in 1982 "because I couldn't stand someone coming in with a child that resembled mine. I stared. I know it made people uncomfortable, but I couldn't help myself."

Deadline near for getting RV permit

From Staff Reports

Midland residents who own recreational vehicles have until Oct. 31 to obtain a permit from the city's Code Enforcement Department.

George Wolfe with the department said there are still 595 vehicles that have not been registered. There is an estimated 1,500 RVs in the city.

Unless the owners have a permit, the RVs no longer can be parked in the front driveway and the city will take court action to have the vehicles removed, he said.

The permits are valid for 15 years and may be transferred to a new RV during that time.

Midland man charged with murder attempt

From Staff Reports

A 24-year-old Midland man was being held in county jail on a $100,000 bond this morning after being charged Wednesday with attempted murder.

Michael Wayne Dutton, 2108 Brunson, was arrested about 6 p.m. Tuesday after allegedly twice shooting 23-year-old Benjamin Bird at the front door of Bird's home, 221 E. Circle, according to police reports. Dutton apparently thought Bird had exposed Dutton's children to hepatitis, police said.

Bird was listed in satisfactory condition in Midland Memorial Hospital this morning, according to a hospital spokeswoman. He had been shot in the chest and hand, reports said.

Bond was set by Justice of the Peace Robert H. Pine.

TDC bans Hustler November issue

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Texas prison officials are banning the November issue of Hustler magazine, which includes an article about the gang rape of a female prison guard by inmates.

The action comes after prison officials in New Jersey and California took similar steps to halt distribution of the November issue of the magazine.

Texas Department of Corrections spokesman Phil Guthrie said Wednesday the system's publication review committee decided last week to ban the magazine on grounds it could be detrimental to rehabilitation of inmates or cause violence.

Prison officials became aware of the magazine article after they were notified by the American Correctional Association, which labeled it "outrageous and an insult to many women who work in the criminal justice field."

It's unknown how many inmates subscribe to the magazine, Guthrie said.

The decision comes in the wake of the rape of a female guard at her room near the Ellis II Unit in Walker County on Saturday. A 35-year-old burglary convict is charged in the attack.

SWAT team looks after new students at Irving school

IRVING (AP) — They are from every clique possible on a high school campus. The one thing they all have in common is they belong to SWAT.

Students Working All Together is a group of about 75 students at Irving High School that is making an organized effort to befriend fellow students.

"If they're shy, you try to make them feel at home," Sheryll Hudson said of the new students she's met. "When someone is sick in our school, we're allowed to send them flowers."

Students of all social groups, races and interests were chosen by administrators and faculty to be on the SWAT team because they are "people persons," principal Curtis Hines said.

The program is modeled after a similar one in the Plano school district, assistant principal Margaret Barnett said. The concept grew from the well-publicized rash of student suicides.

Team members break the ice with new students and help orient them to the school and community, she said. Team members also look out for students who may be lonely or troubled.

"If they're new here, they don't know what teen-agers do here," SWAT member Rickey Stearns said. "We'll take them to Pioneer (Road) where the kids hang out, or to a movie or something."

Stearns, a junior, said he is not involved in any extracurricular activities at school. He just attends class and works after school.

SWAT members also call at home students new to Irving to welcome them to the community.

"They're shocked you're calling them, then they're glad," said SWAT member John Kinser, a senior varsity football player, choir member and student council representative.

New students to Irving High School are assigned to a SWAT member with similar interests, Barnett said.

Recently, a girl involved in cheerleading and honors classes in California transfered to Irving High School and was paired with Miss Hudson, who is also a cheerleader and in the honors program.

"She is so nice," Miss Hudson said with a big smile. "I'm really going to like her."

"If they're new here, they don't know what teenagers do here. We'll take them to Pioneer (Road) where the kids hang out, or to a movie or something."
— Rickey Stearns, of Irving HS SWAT

SWAT members do not have to wait to be "assigned" to a new student, Stearns said.

"I saw this one guy standing by himself one time and went up and took him out to the parking lot where everybody hangs out and introduced him to all my friends," Stearns said. "The next day, I got there late, and he was already there walking around with my friends."

Stearns is the kind of guy who stops on the side of the road to help people with their flats, Hines said.

"SWAT or no SWAT, Rick is going to visit with you," Hines said with a grin.

That's the kind of student the team is looking for, he said, the kind who likes to help and notices when others need help.

The program loosely organizes students who would generally be outgoing anyway and emphasizes the need to include the school's adults, Hines said. Students are encouraged to go to their team leaders if they come across a student with a problem.

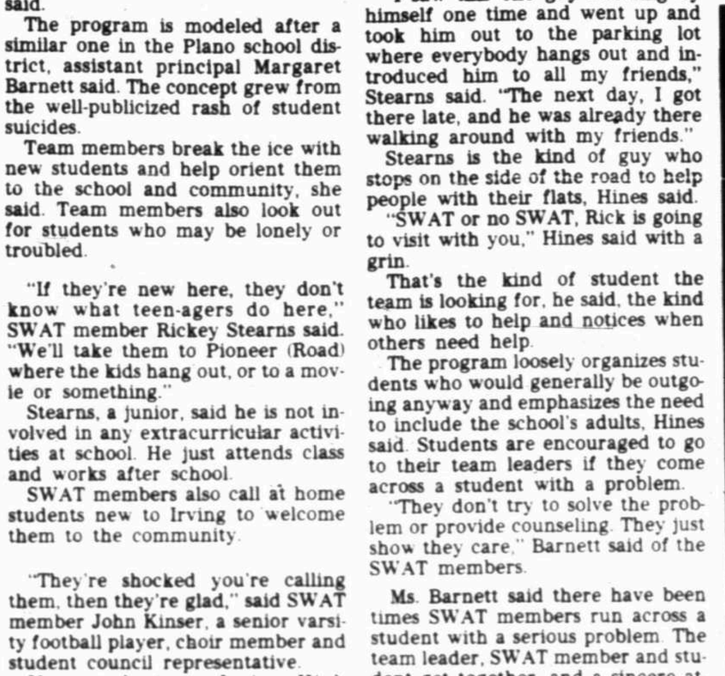

"They don't try to solve the problem or provide counseling. They just show they care," Barnett said of the SWAT members.

Ms. Barnett said there have been times SWAT members run across a student with a serious problem. The team leader, SWAT member and student get together, and a sincere attempt is made to talk to the student.

"I think when you're sincere and you sincerely ask, 'May I help you?' there's no resentment," Hines said.

The adults at Irving High School recognized the students have a lot to tell them about what is going on among other students. Team members also give insight into what students think is important.

"I like to watch this glow," Ms. Barnett said. "The good feeling that they get, that's all they get from it."

Timothy Belton, left, and Mitchell Stensland, announce The Young Conservatives of Texas at the University of Texas will sponsor a rally Friday to emphasize their viewpoint on divestiture from South Africa.

Divestiture rally planned at UT

AUSTIN (AP) — The Young Conservatives of Texas on Wednesday said it plans a rally Friday at the University of Texas "to illuminate the conservative viewpoint" on investment by Americans in South Africa.

"The viewpoint...was ignored by the UT Students Association when it spent over $400 of mandatory student fees to send lobbyists to the Oct. 10 meeting of the Board of Regents," said Mitchell Stensland, an official of the conservative group.

"By no interpretation do the Young Conservatives of Texas support the inhumanities of apartheid. However, we believe that the Republic of South Africa cannot be expected to reform when its economic security is crumbled by divestiture," Stensland said.

For months, many UT students have urged the regents to drop the university's millions of dollars of investments in companies doing business in South Africa. They argue that the university shouldn't be supporting a country which practices racial segregation, apartheid.

Timothy Belton, another member of the conservative group, said South Africa is moving more quickly to end racial discrimination than the United States did.

"Millions of blacks have fled into South Africa to find a new home and a means to support their families. If the situation is South Africa was as repressive as our news media has indicated, blacks would be trying to escape the horrors and not fleeing to the most propserous and free of all countries on the African continent," Belton said.

Teacher education seminar begins

From Staff Reports

SAN ANTONIO — The teacher career ladder, teacher testing and a report on a national study on teacher education will be among the topics discussed by some 700 Texas school teachers, administrators and representatives from college and university education programs during a three-day conference beginning today.

Texas Commissioner of Education, Dr. William N. Kirby, will open the 38th annual Conference on Teacher Education with a presentation, entitled "Implementing the Reforms: A Status Report."

His speech will give an overview of the education reform legislation contained in House Bill 72 and will include a question and answer period.

Kirby's speech and all other sessions of the conference are scheduled at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in San Antonio.

The conference is sponsored by the Texas Education Agency and the Commission on Standards for the Teaching Profession, a 18-member panel of educators that recommends standards for teacher education programs and certification.

Among the topics to be discussed on Friday is a report from the National Commission for Excellence in Teacher Education. Dr. Robert L. Egbert, an education professor at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln and project director for the commission, will speak on "A Call for Change in Teacher Education."

Faulty combat helmets may have 'soft spot'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly a half-million soldiers and Marines wearing a new combat helmet may be inadequately protected because a manufacturer changed production specifications for the synthetic-material headgear, the Pentagon says.

Officials are investigating whether the manufacturer of the new helmet, which is designed to replace the familiar "steel pot," ignored government specifications to improve its profits, William Caldwell, a Pentagon spokesman, said Wednesday.

More than 460,000 helmets, out of the 800,000 already in use by Army and Marine Corps units, are affected.

The helmets, produced over the last two years by Gentex Corp. of Carbondale, Pa., are made of a special resin and synthetic fiber material known as Kevlar.

Gentex no longer makes the helmets itself, but still supplies the material for production by two other firms, Caldwell said.

Gentex denied any wrongdoing.

So far there has been no determination that the Gentex helmet fails to meet the general, minimum ballistic standards for protecting soldiers against flying shrapnel, Caldwell said, adding the Gentex helmet is superior to the steel helmet it replaces.

But the Pentagon has concluded the Gentex helmet has an unacceptable weak spot on the very top, Caldwell said.

"We're saying they didn't meet the construction standards and that the top of the helmet is substandard," the spokesman said. "We didn't get what we paid for and the helmet doesn't provide as much protection as we wanted."

"The Defense Department is aggressively pursuing its rights under these contracts, including replacement, alteration or other appropriate solutions," the Pentagon said in a prepared statement. "The Department is also investigating to determine if any fraudulent activity was involved."

The Pentagon believes Gentex may have cut corners in production to save $42.19 out of the $85.20 paid for each helmet, Caldwell said.

Caldwell and other Pentagon and Army officials released a prepared statement late Wednesday and agreed to discuss the matter following two days of inquiries by The Associated Press.

Gentex President L. Peter Frieder denied any wrongdoing by his firm, describing the dispute as a controversy "over interpretation" and "poorly defined specifications."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Media reports blamed

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Britain blamed the news media Wednesday for misrepresenting a speech in Texas by Northern Ireland's police chief that was reportedly critical of the Irish Republic's war on the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

Britain's Northern Ireland Office in Belfast said after a meeting between Sir John Hermon — chief constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary — and Northern Ireland Secretary Tom King that Hermon's speech had been "seriously misrepresented in the media."

In a weekend address to a conference of International Association of Chiefs of Police in Houston, Hermon was quoted as saying the Irish Republic's police were showing no interest in penetrating the IRA or the Trotskyite Irish National Liberation Army.

Quake damage figured

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The September earthquakes devastated large sections of the Mexican capital and killed 6,000 people, injured 30,000 more and caused property damages estimated at $4 billion, a report by a United Nations commission says.

Another 2,000 people are still missing and presumably dead, buried in rubble. The report by the Economic Comission for Latin America, or ECLA, was prepared by U.N. experts "in close consultation with Mexican authorities" and made public here this week.

Mexican newspapers described it is the most authoritative survey so far of the damages caused by an earthquake that measured 8.1 on the open-ended Richter scale Sept. 19, and 77 more aftershocks in the week that followed, including one of 7.5 on Sept. 20.

Famine camps shrinking

KOREM, Ethiopia (AP) — Most of the famine refugees who filled Ethiopian relief camps a year ago have gone home, but more than 20,000 remain at a stark tent city here. Officials say their prospects of leaving are uncertain.

Major repatriation programs have shrunk the larger camps of Ibnet and Mekelle, which now hold only a few thousand residents, many of whom are orphaned or disabled.

But at Korem, where the peak population was about 55,000, relief workers say many of the refugees are stranded because too little rain has fallen to grow food in their home areas.

CURIOUS SHOPPER

Sulfites can cause severe allergic reactions

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. Recently we almost lost a daughter to a severe allergic reaction to potassium metabisulfite. After two bites of sauerkraut that had been processed with this preservative, she broke out in hives and then passed out. Luckily the emergency-room doctor was aware of the sulfite problem and a tragedy was averted. Her blood pressure was 50 over 30 upon arrival at the hospital.

We are concerned about how to determine what foods are processed with sulfites. I understand all ingredients are supposed to be listed on labels, but sulfites can be hidden in other names. What information do you have on this subject? Mrs. L.L. Lawrence, Ontario, Calif.

A. Fortunately for your daughter and an estimated one million other sulfite-sensitive persons in the U.S., six sulfiting agents will soon be banned in this country. This chemical is a preservative that is used to keep foods from browning, and until recently was used extensively on fresh fruits and vegetables at salad bars.

Even when restaurant workers stopped dipping or spraying their lettuce and cabbage with sulfites, this chemical could still be found in processed foods at the salad bar, such as garbanzo beans.

Those products that already contain sulfites will not be removed from shelves, however, and allergic persons will have to be on guard for years. Dried fruits, frozen potatoes, seafood (particularly shrimp), some wines and beers should be suspected.

A sulfiting agent should be listed on the ingredients list, although this is not required on alcoholic beverages. This chemical may also be found in some drugs, both prescription and over-the-counter.

The chemical names to be on the alert for are sulfur dioxide, sodium sulfite, sodium bisulfite, potassium bisulfite, sodium metabisulfite and potassium metabisulfite.

Q. Is Teflon coating harmful? In the "Organic Gardening Harvest Book," by the editors of Organic Gardening and Farming, it states that toxic poisons are released when Teflon is heated to a very high heat. It also says, "At normal cooking temperatures, Teflon emits fluoride." Can you verify the truth of these statements? Betty Pitcher, Lawrenceville, Ga.

A. Richard Westerman, a technical manager at DuPont, which manufactures Teflon, states that when a dry Teflon-coated pan is heated to high temperatures, the resin will decompose. "The high temperature we're talking about is well above that at which fats give off smoke. The toxicity of the fumes that would emanate from this dry pan would actually be less than that of fumes produced by ordinary cooking oils."

Since it's highly improbable that anyone would go in the kitchen, turn the heat high on a dry Teflon pan and then stand around for hours breathing the fumes, this is no problem.

According to an issue of FDA Consumer, Teflon does emit fluoride at ordinary cooking temperatures, about as much as an aluminum pan does. As a Teflon pan gets older, it emits slightly more fluoride than the aluminum pan, "but," the FDA says, "all amounts were within safe limits."

FDA scientists believe that pans coated with Teflon, a substance in use now in the U.S. for 20 years, are safe for conventional kitchen use.

Q. I was disappointed when I read the ingredients on Benihana's Shrimp and Lobster Sauce. It contains no lobster whatsoever! How can someone advertise like this? It's very misleading. Is Oriental lobster sauce supposed to be made from pork and eggs? It doesn't even taste like lobster-flavored sauce either. Sherry Ward, Ontario, Calif.

A. Frank Klement, the supervisor of frozen foods at Benihana, maintains that lobster sauce is a traditional Cantonese recipe that contains pork, cooked eggs, sherry wine and other ingredients, to be poured over lobster and other seafood items. As you have experienced, lobster sauce does not contain lobster.

Unquestionably this is a misleading label. Oddly enough, this boil-in-the-pouch product does contain some shrimp, as the name of the entree suggests. Therefore, the absence of lobster exaggerates the deception.

Here are the ingredients, as stated on the label: shrimp, chicken broth, cooked pork, eggs, citric acid, onions, sherry wine, modified food starch, scallions, green peas, sugar, MSG, soy sauce, chicken fat, hydrolized vegetable protein, salt, corn oil, garlic and ginger.

Lunch nutritious

By MARIAN FARR

For economy and convenience, it's hard to beat the humble sack lunch, but unless the sack lunch provides at least ⅓ of your daily food needs, it may not do much for you nutritionally.

A sack lunch should contain two to three ounces of meat or other protein food, a cup of milk or plain yogurt or two thin slices of cheese, one or two slices of bread or a serving of cereal and a serving of fruit or vegetables to meet this nutritional requirement.

Including vitamin C-rich and deep green or yellow vegetables in lunches helps to round out these frequently neglected nutrients, although these foods can also be provided in morning or evening meals.

Many children — and adults — think that a sack lunch has to have sweets and fats to be satisfying. But if you pack these foods, remember that they're a concentrated source of calories that should be consumed in small amounts.

Potato chips, lots of dressing on sandwiches or salads, soft drinks and candy bars can quickly add many calories with few minerals and vitamins.

For both economy and good nutrition, the best food buy for school children is probably the lunch served at school. But if parents carry sack lunches too, it may be just as convenient to pack them for the whole family at once.

A variety of lunch meats, prepared spreads, snack foods and even sandwiches are available for instant lunch packing. But because prepackaged individual servings of foods are more expensive, it can sometimes cost more to pack a sack lunch than to eat in a restaurant.

Freezing sandwiches ahead can save total preparation time. All breads maintain good quality in a freezer, but some usual sandwich ingredients should not be used in frozen sandwiches. Raw vegetables, whites of hard-cooked eggs and mayonnaise do not keep well when frozen.

Vegetables lose their crispness, cooked egg whites become tough and mayonnaise and jellies have a tendency to soak into bread and make it soggy. Instead, use butter or margarine as a spread on sandwiches for freezing.

CONSUMING INTERESTS

Favorite snack cracker features fine flavors

By LINDA ANDERSON

One of the wire services recently published a story stating that Americans' eating habits are changing. Three-square-meals each day are becoming more and more rare, the article said, as consumers turn to snacking as a way of obtaining nourishment.

Well, I can relate to that. With three wage-earners, all on different schedules, two teenagers in high school and two preschool children who are hungry all the time, snacking has become a way of life in our house. And even though we try to eat healthy foods, such as fruits and cheese, not all our snacks are nutritious.

Sometimes snackers yearn for something crunchy or salty or sweet. Among the favorite cures for this kind of munchie attack are snack crackers, including my own personal preference, Nabisco's Wheat Thins (which, being made with wheat, at least give the illusion of being nutritious).

Now the whole-wheat taste of Wheat Thins is being complemented by new varieties of the cracker. The regular bunch of adults, teen and children tested unsalted Wheat Thins (obviously aimed at those limiting their salt intake — just one of the many ways of "eating healthy" we hear so much about) and Cheese Wheat Thins for taste, price and advertising accuracy.

Both varieties cost $1.48 per box, but Cheese Wheat Thins come in a 9-ounce box, while the unsalted kind comes in a 10-ounce box. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

Both are advertised to contain "100 percent pure vegetable shortening" as well as whole wheat flour, enriched wheat flour and numerous other ingredients, some with strange-sounding names, according to their label's information. Also listed as ingredients in Cheese Wheat Thins are Parmesan cheese and Cheddar cheese.

And sure enough, label advertising on the cheese crackers claims "that famous Wheat Thins taste plus the delicious taste of real cheddar cheese" — as opposed to artificial crunch? — "... light and thin, with real crunch packed into every wholesome bite."

Label advertising on unsalted Wheat Thins claims the cracker has "60 percent less salt" and "that famous Wheat Thins taste plus the benefit of low salt ... When you want delicious snacks, but are concerned over your total dietary intake of salt, snack on Low Salt Wheat Thins. They'll suit your good taste!"

Both varieties of cracker tasted fine, although the salt was missed on the unsalted Wheat Thins. One teen tester said the cheese cracker tasted a lot like Cheez-Its, another family favorite snack cracker.

Because Wheat Thins really are made with whole wheat flour (first item in the ingredient listings), they may even have some nutritional value that other snack crackers do not.

We'll probably have them again at our house because they just taste good — and besides, they are still my favorite snack cracker and I buy the groceries!

Variety of costly, unusual items available by catalog

Hearst News Service

What a relief. Finally someone has come up with a "truly masculine steak knife," imported exclusively to this country by a discerning retailer who will let you have six for $100 (plus shipping and handling charges of $3.25.)

Consider it an honor and a privilege to be allowed to spend your money in this way. Some mail-order retailers won't even let you touch their catalog for less than $8.

Perhaps you find the concept of truly masculine steak knives truly absurd? And paying $100 for six of them even more so?

Not everybody thinks like you. Somebody buys these things — along with the Antropovarius Chair designed by F.A. Porsche ($5,400, black base, upholstered in the softest of cushion leathers in red, black or white, custom-made in Italy, please call for individual delivery arrangements.)

Indeed, so many people are buying natural-fiber garments, Maine hunting shoes, Swiss milk-chocolate Christmas tree ornaments, wildlife doormats, black lace Thermolactyl winter underwear, crystal champagne buckets, aged leather bomber jackets, M-16 water guns, hand-carved wooden ducks and nationally advertised beauty products, that two years ago, mail order retail sales in this country reached $44.4 billion.

That figure is almost double what is was five years earlier, and solid growth is expected to continue, according to Roberta Maneker, vice president of public relations for the Direct Marketing Association in New York.

ONE OF THE MAJOR factors in the growth of catalog sales has been convenience.

"With women working, they have far less time, and couples have double the income. They can shop at any hour through catalogs," Maneker said.

This year, Maneker estimates, 6,500 different catalogs will blitz the public this year, compared to 4,000 in 1981.

"They are slicker, more specialized, and targeted to their audience with a lot better precision," she said. "And of course there is all this gorgeous stuff, as upscale as you can get."

Catalogs come in full color on heavy, slick paper. One — Banana Republic Travel and Safari Clothing Co. — get its blurbs written by the likes of John Lithgow, Thomas McGuane, Jan Morris and Gloria Emerson.

"Catalogs are attractive, informative, and even editorial," Maneker commented.

These days catalogs often cost a few bucks apiece; some even offer annual subscriptions. But you need not pay for them.

Mail order houses, stores, magazines and organizations all rent each others' mailing lists, so once you get on one list you can be sure to get on another.

You can get off, too. "If you don't buy anything for a long, long time, it'll fall off," Manaeker said.

THE ASSOCIATION also has a mail preference service which will limit the amount of mail you receive, but it is non-selective, so you may miss out on Victoria's Secret's scraps of silk as well as Spencer Gifts' hard-sell perfume and jewelry bargains.

As catalogs proliferate, the upscale books are leading the field. Perquisites, a new offering at $8, works out to four pages for a dollar, a small price when you consider the merchandise: a bulletproof and bomb-proof Mercedes Supercar equipped with a telephone with bug detectors and scrambler, remote control ignition, tear gas and oil slick emission systems and puncture-proof tires, for $140,000.

"We expect to do business as elegantly as we do pleasure . . . only more efficiently," explained Sandra Gilo in a gold-bordered press release from the San Francisco-based company which also offers Mr. Porsche's $5,400 chair.

The ever-questing Chuck Williams of Williams-Sonoma scours the world for kitchen treasures for the discriminating cook.

Sharper Image will age your bomber jacket for you, and, continuing in the military mood, has the Water Warrior, an M-16 machine gun that shoots water, and an Uzi submachine gun that shoots caps.

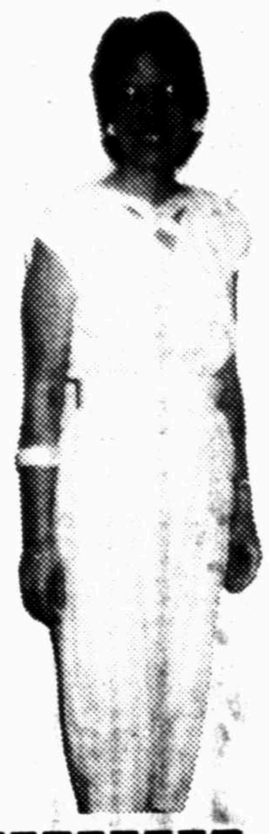

Besides its manly steak knives, Ambercrombie & Fitch will sell you limited edition hand-carved and painted pintails, a number of household furnishings decorated with dogs or ducks, and handmade leather hippos, rhinos, lions, tortoises and pigs, promised as handy footstools and "constant sources of conversation."

But it is Neiman-Marcus that walks away with the honors for the best trinkets: a pair of flawless yellow diamonds. The larger stone weighs in at 56 karats, the other at a meager 21. All that for $2 million.

Package labeling still confuses some consumers

By LISA BELKIN
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — In 1956, the story goes, Estes Kefauver, then a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, stopped at the supermarket and bought a packaged cherry pie. The picture on the package showed a slice stuffed with cherries. The pie inside the box, however, was mostly crust. Furious, the senator from Tennessee introduced the first comprehensive legislation against deceptive food labeling.

Today, ney 30 years later, Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, is expected to introduce a bill expanding that legislation by requiring that the sodium, potassium and fat content of all foods be listed on the label. "How can anybody resist the right of all Americans to know what's in the food they buy," the Senator said in a recent interview. "Right now they do not."

IN THE DECADES between these two events, there have been numerous changes in food labeling requirements. "There is a lot more information on today's labels," said Ronald Brewington, director of the food standards and labeling division of the United States Department of Agriculture, which reviews 120,000 labels each month. "The argument now is between whether there should be more or whether what is there is too confusing."

Some of the fine print is required by law. The Departments of Agriculture and Commerce, the Food and Drug Administration and the Federal Trade Commission are among the agencies that have a hand in regulating labels. There are rules against misleading photos on boxes of food, requirements for the disclosure of ingredients and limits on the use of descriptive words such as "lean" and "low calorie."

WHERE THERE ARE no rules, many manufacturers have voluntarily increased the amount of information on labels. "Consumers are asking for more, reading more carefully, and manufacturers are responding," said Joseph Conoscenti, brand manager of spices and extracts for McCormick Spice, which last year changed the name of its Lemon and Pepper Seasoning to Lemon and Pepper Seasoning Salt in an attempt to reflect the product's true ingredients.

More information, however, does not mean less confusion, particularly because food labels are not always what they seem. There is, for example, the matter of definitions; the Food and Drug Administration has never developed one for words like "natural," so a food can be called natural and still contain artificial ingredients. Then there is the question of serving size; it can be anything the manufacturer chooses, and the absence of an industry standard makes it impossible to compare the number of calories in different brands.

SOME PACKAGES proclaim the absence of ingredients that were not there in the first place. Orange juice, for example, which does not need preservatives, is often labeled "Now, no preservatives," to give the appearance of improvement. Others fail to mention ingredients that are included, with the result that specific names of food colorings and other additives are often left off labels.

The confusion stems from manufacturers and consumers looking at labels in different ways.

"The whole issue is what is a food label and who owns it," said Rodney E. Leonard, executive director of the Community and Nutrition Institute, a nonprofit, nonpartisan education and advocacy group.

"The food manufacturer sees it as a billboard to try to convince the consumer to buy the product, and the consumer has begun to look at it as a source of information as to what to avoid," Mr. Leonard said. "No question about it. There are competing interests and there are always going to be."

THE REFEREE IN THIS marketing tug-of-war is the federal government, specifically the Agriculture Department, which oversees meat and poultry, and the Food and Drug Administration, which oversees all other foods.

"Our role is to make sure that what is on the label is truthful and provides an accurate description," said Robert L. Stencer, director of the FDA's division of regulation policy. "A label should not be an advertisement."

Today, there are a handful of requirements common to all food labels: each must contain the product's name, the manufacturer's name and address, and a list of ingredients in descending order by weight. But nutrition information is required only if the manufacturer makes a nutrition claim, such as "low cholesterol," or if vitamins or minerals are added.

Among the labeling questions currently on the government's agenda: whether to allow cereal makers to promote their products as useful in reducing the risk of cancer; whether to require the inclusion of sodium, cholesterol, sulfite and fat content on all labels; whether trace amounts of alcohol are acceptable in what is labeled "alcohol-free beer."

MANUFACTURERS COMPLAIN that the government issues too many rules. "There is too much information required already," said Stanley Sacharow, author, with Roger C. Griffin, of "Principles of Food Packaging" (AVI Publishing Inc., Westport, Conn., 1980) and executive director of the Packaging Group, which advises food manufacturers on package design. "If you clutter the label too much then you turn the consumer off. The food becomes a pharmaceutical, it loses all gustatory appeal."

Consumer groups, by contrast, charge that the government issues too few regulations, or not the right ones. The result is a game of sorts, with one group wrapping its message around the requirements and the other seeking information between the lines.

"If this is a game," said Michael Jacobson, executive director of the Center for Science in the Public Interest, which has made improved nutrition labeling a kind of crusade, "consumers are losing."

THE FIRST POTENTIAL source of confusion is the first place most consumers look when choosing a product — the name.

Periodically, companies change product names to create a different image. The Kellogg Co. for example, in 1983 changed Sugar Frosted Flakes cereal to Frosted Flakes, and Sugar Smacks to Honey Smacks, although the Center for Science in the Public Interest contends that both products still contain the 50 percent sugar and corn syrup that they had before the names were changed. Similarly, C.W. Post's Super Sugar Crisp Cereal, which is more than 50 percent sugar and other sweeteners, was recently renamed Super Golden Crisp.

Celeste Clark, a spokesman for Kellogg, said company policy prohibited the exact disclosure of ingredients, and would not comment on the analysis by the public interest group. She said that Frosted Flakes was renamed because "consumers were already referring to the product that way," and that Honey Smacks was changed because "honey was already a flavoring and we wanted to make that clear."

Judith Klein, a spokesman for General Foods, which owns C.W. Post, said Super Sugar Crisp became Super Golden Crisp in part because of a "recognition that there's a sensitivity to the word suger."

"It is a marketing tool to give a modern image to an old product," he added.

ANOTHER EYE-CATCHING facet of a food label is what is known in the industry as a "burst" — any circle or banner with adjectives describing the product. "Contains No Artificial Flavor" is a typical burst item. "Low Calorie", "Light" and "Low Cholesterol" are others.

"That's classical advertising," Sacharow said. "You play up something that makes you seem special."

The Federal Government has attempted to develop precise definitions for some labeling terms. However, unless the consumer is aware of the standards by which these definitions were arrived at, they might still be confused.

"Low calorie," for example, is defined by the Food and Drug Administration as a product that has no more than 40 calories per serving (or 0.4 calories per gram), while "reduced calorie" means a product that has one-third fewer calories than it would have in its standard form. A "reduced-calorie" food, therefore, might contain more calories than a food that is naturally low in calories.

A company can call meat "lean" or "low fat" if the meat has 25 percent less of either calories, fat, sodium, cholesterol or breading. The standard of comparison can be the leading brand of the particular product, a government market sample, an industry standard set by the department or the company's full-fat, full-calorie, regular sodium-level or regular breading content version of the same product.

CONSUMERS UNFAMILIAR with these definitions may jump to unfounded conclusions about the health value of their purchases, according to Bonnie Liebman, director of nutrition for the Center for Science in the Public Interest. Even "lean" or "light" sausage, she said, gets about 70 percent of its calories from fat.

Another source of confusion for consumers is restrictive advertising. Foods promoted as having "No Artificial Flavors" often contain artificial colors and preservatives. Foods described as "Sugar Free" may be free only of sucrose and contain other high-calorie sweetners such as honey or corn syrup.

Careful reading of food labels should begin with the back and side labels, and particularly with the serving size. Although the FDA has periodically considered mandating certain serving sizes to certain foods, "there are no proposals on the table now," Mr. Stencer said.

Years ago, manufacturers tried to make the servings as large as possible, to give the impression of large amounts of protein and vitamins. Recently, however, serving sizes have been becoming smaller. The result is that products seem to have fewer calories and less fat and sodium.

Consumer group charges bread fiber comes from trees

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans who buy certain breads hoping to increase the fiber in their diets are getting wood pulp instead of grain, a Washington consumer group says.

"Natural furniture fiber would be more accurate" than the claim of natural food fiber on some of the bread, asserted Bonnie Liebman, nutrition director of the Center for Science in the Public Interest.

"Most consumers would be shocked to learn that the fiber in these breads comes from trees, not wheat grain," she said Tuesday.

Liebman cited eight brands of bread produced across the nation, all advertised either as high-fiber or lower calorie products. Labels on the breads list "alpha cellulose" and do not state that the breads' fiber comes from wood, Liebman said.

"It is not clear whether wood fiber is as effective as natural food fiber in preventing health problems like colon cancer and constipation," Liebman said.

In addition, she said, the bread labels are misleading because they list their content of crude fiber, rather that dietary fiber, which she termed the "currently accepted measure. ..."

Bread makers denied their labeling was deceptive.

"Our label itself states, flat out, 'non-nutritive crude fiber.' That's hardly misleading," said Rella Dwyer, director of technical services at W.E. Long Co. in Chicago, maker of Vim, one brand of bread cited by the consumer group.

Fiber is beneficial to health, whether it comes from wood or grains, and if there was any hazard it would not be allowed by the government, said Lewis Ort, president of Cumberland, Md.-based Ort's Inc., which manufacturers Less.

Cellulose is as effective as other fibers, Ort said, although he noted that his Less bread also contains fiber from bran and soybeans, and he is currently in the process of converting to all-soy fiber.

Jerry Thompson, a food chemist with Ort's company, said crude fiber content is listed because the methods of measuring dietary fiber remain unproven.

The Food and Drug Administration last year proposed a method for measuring dietary fiber, but final regulations on that system have not yet taken effect.

Until last year, FDA regulations required breads making fiber claims to list crude fiber, and only recently have they allowed dietary fiber to be listed, Dwyer said. She said her company planned to change its labels to use that designation.

Dwyer also said federal regulations require labels to use the "common and usual name" of ingredients, which in this case is alpha cellulose.

Besides Vim and Less, the nonprofit consumer advocacy group complained about labeling on Lite Loaf, Interstate Brands, Kansas City, Mo.; Lite 'n Up, Oroweat Foods Co., Montebello, Calif.; Merita Lite, American Bakeries, New York; Roman Lite, Roman Meal Co., Seattle, Wash.; Sunbeam Lite, Quality Bakers, Greenwich, Conn., and 40, Grocers Baking Co., Grand Rapids, Mich.

Jerry Morano of Quality Bakers said his firm also planned a changeover to the dietary fiber listing on Sunbeam Lite labels. "We're certainly not trying to deceive anyone on this," he said.

"Whatever labeling is required by the Food and Drug Administration is there," added Ray Sandy Sutton, counsel for Interstate Brands.

Agency claims calorie counts often wrong

NEW YORK (AP) — Counting the calories but keeping on the pounds? It may not be your fault.

According to a survey of 21 packaged food items by the state Consumer Protection Board, 15 contained more calories than packages claimed, said CPB Executive Director Richard Kessel.

The federal Food and Drug Administration allows such claims to be within 20 percent of the actual caloric count.

"As somebody who has always been on a diet, this study gives me the excuse I've been looking for," Kessel said. "It's not my fault. It's the food's fault."

Kessel charged the 20 percent rule gives manufacturers too much leeway and could be dangerous to consumers.

"Persons who must restrict their caloric intake for serious medical reasons are gambling with their health when they consume inaccurately labeled food," Kessel said in a petition to FDA Commissioner Frank E. Young.

In a survey conducted by an independent laboratory for his office, Kessel said, 15 of 21 products that were tested exceeded the calorie count listed on their packages by at least 6 percent.

Four of the 15 products had 21 percent more calories than claimed, an apparent violation of the federal standards.

Five products had fewer calories than they claimed, and only one had exactly as many calories as were listed on the package.

Kessel demanded the FDA immediately require food manufacturers to disclose that their calorie counts may vary by as much as 20 percent.

In the long run, he said, he would like to see the FDA lower the margin to about 5 percent.

"The main point we're trying to make is not that the food industry is trying to rip off the consumer but that the regulations lead to excess," he said.

"We don't dispute that there should be some variance given to the manufacturer. Where we disagree is over the extent of the variance."

Kessel said he had discussed the findings of his survey with FDA officials. "They were interested in it," he said. "They understand the problem."

AIDS symtoms cause for alert

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for devoting an entire column to AIDS. I learned a lot from your article, but you failed to list the symptoms. Please do. It would be helpful to a great number of your readers, including ... ME IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR ME: Many of the AIDS symptoms are subtle and may only indicate simple, everyday ailments; therefore, you should be alerted but not alarmed if you have one or more of the following symptoms:

— Weight loss of more than 10 pounds during a period of less than two months, NOT related to diet or increased activity; prolonged loss of appetite.

— Unexplained, persistent or recurrent fevers or drenching night sweats.

— Swollen glands (lymph nodes found in the neck, armpits or groin) that persist and are unexplained by other illness.

— Profound fatigue that persists and is not explainable by physical activity, substance abuse or a psychological disorder.

— Persistent and unexplained diarrhea or bloody stools.

— A persistent, whitish coating (or spotting) on the tongue or in the throat, which may be accompanied by soreness or difficulty in swallowing.

— A heavy, persistent, dry cough that is not due to smoking and has lasted too long to be explained by a cold or flu (especially with shortness of breath).

— Skin rashes or discolorations of the skin.

— Blurred vision and/or persistent, severe headaches.

It must be emphasized that each of these symptoms may appear in diseases that are NOT caused by or associated with AIDS. When not easily or otherwise explained, the persistence of one or more of these symptoms should be discussed with a health care provider who is familiar with AIDS.

A national hotline with an informative recording can be reached by calling 1-800-342-AIDS. Many cities have a local AIDS information hotline. Your telephone operator can advise you.

DEAR ABBY: I need your advice. I am a 39-year-old divorced man with two teen-aged children. I'm in love with a beautiful 36-year-old divorcee with children about the ages of mine.

We have been in love for 20 years, but fought our feelings because we thought they were wrong. Abby, we can no longer stay away from each other. Now for the bad news: We are first cousins and live in a state that forbids first cousins to marry.

We can go to another state where first cousins may marry, and we probably will, but we don't know which states permit it.

I am a born-again Christian and can find nothing in God's word to forbid our union. Can you give us a clue? We'll go anywhere. -IN LOVE

DEAR IN: Go west, young man. And keep going until you reach the state whose capital is Sacramento.

Do-it-yourself phone installation booklet offered

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Many consumers are surprised to learn that it is legal to install their own telephone extensions in their homes. Not only is it legal, but the phone company will help anyone who wants to do just that.

AT&T Consumer Products has compiled a new booklet, "Do-It-Yourself and Save," which gives step-by-step instructions, complete with pictures, for installing your own telephone wiring. The booklet is available free of charge from any AT&T Phone Center or by writing to Ed Crossan, AT&T Consumer Products, 5 Wood Hollow Road, Parsippany, N.J. 07054.

The booklet tells you how to identify the type of wiring in your home and the type of telephone jack you will need. Other advice includes the following:

— Never splice one length of wire directly to another. It can cause interference on your line. Use wire junctions or modular jacks for multiple connections.

— For best results you should not connect more than five telephones to any one telephone service line.

— Avoid placing telephone wires in pipes, conduits or compartments containing other electrical wiring. Further, never place them near electrical wiring or lightning rods, antennas, transformers, steam and hot water pipes or heating ducts.

— Before fastening wire to metal surfaces such as siding, be certain that the metal is not conducting any hazardous voltage.

— Use electrical tape to protect wires from abrasion when they are next to grating, grillwork or other similar surfaces.

Seduction common in therapeutic sessions

By SUSAN CRAIN BAKOS
King Features Syndicate

Sharon and Claude were grappling around on a leather couch that squeaked in a room where the shades had been drawn. His notebook lay abandoned on the floor next to his empty chair. She was paying him to sit in the chair, not fumble with her buttons and zippers on a couch built for one.

But she didn't complain. Claude was her therapist. She thought he knew what he was doing — and doing it for her own good. She was flattered he had chosen her.

A scene from a Harold Robbins novel?

No. It's a scene from real life, one which is repeated far more often than we realize. Therapeutic seduction, like rape, is an underreported sexual offense.

Sharon was a typical victim: vulnerable, trusting, low self-esteem.

"My husband rejected me sexually long before he asked for a divorce," she says. "He had other women and compared their sexual behavior to mine. They were good in bed. I wasn't.

"After the divorce I went into therapy. Claude said he was sexually attracted to me on the first visit. I felt like a real woman again."

But Sharon (all names of female patients have been changed at their request) was disappointed by the sexual interludes she shared with Claude. He was, more often than not, impotent. Their hurried couplings — fitted into the standard therapy "hour," 45 minutes — reminded her of her first sexual experience in the back seat of an old Ford.

YET SHE thought the sexual "failure" was her fault.

"I tried so hard to be good in bed for him. When he told me after several sessions that things weren't working between us and suggested I see another therapist, I was hurt. It was like being asked for a divorce all over again."

For several months Sharon avoided all relationships with men. She was afraid to seek another therapist. Finally a friend recommended a woman, New York therapist Aileen Murray.

Murray says of Sharon's experience: "This happens far too often — mainly because patients who have placed total faith in the therapist usually do what he wants them to do.

"Later they are afraid to report sexual wrongdoing on his part. They think they won't be believed. Or their self-esteem is so low they can't face the ordeal of retelling the experience.

"Incredibly, many victimized women blame themselves. They think they were guilty of seducing the therapist, an idea which he may have planted and certainly encourages. Or they believe if they'd only been better in bed, their therapies would have been successful."

Sharon was paying for therapy sessions and getting furtive, unsatisfying sex instead. She didn't even realize she'd been cheated. Worse, the experience reinforced her negative feelings about her own sexuality.

The therapeutic seduction is almost a media cliche. We see it in New Yorker magazine cartoon terms: leering but distinguished male therapist; young, beautiful and busty young female patient in distress. We laugh.

The reality isn't so funny. Seduced patients, usually female, are in extremely vulnerable positions. They may be "transferring" their feelings of love and need to the therapist, a man who may have assumed an almost godlike role in their minds.

IN FICTION, the therapist falls deeply in love with his beautiful client. This myth of a relationship motivates women like Sharon.

But in real life, sex with the therapist is not such a happy, romantic experience. He isn't going to leave his wife or change his life for the seduced patient. And the sex probably won't be good. When it's not, the patient blames herself, not him. Could any unprincipled seducer ask for a better deal?

Linda D'Addario, who did her 1977 doctoral thesis on the subject, says, "While these male therapists regard themselves as Don Juans, their lovemaking with clients usually is marked by impotence."

Murray adds, "Far from being stable professionals, they are — at the point when they initiate sexual contact with the patient — suffering some kind of personal crisis. And the patient suffers with them."

Claude was getting divorced for the third time when Sharon began seeing him. She learned this fact accidentally at a cocktail party months later. The information helped her put him into context and see him as a person with serious personal problems, not a psychological superman.

Unfortunately, patients don't know these things about their therapists when they need to know them... at the point of seduction.

How prevalent is the therapeutic seduction?

Estimating that 5 to 15 percent of therapists have erotic contact with clients, D'Addario says, "In one year, only three psychologists were dropped from membership in the American Psychological Association because they had violated principle 6a of their professional code, which reads, 'Sexual intimacies with clients are unethical.' "

HE ADMITS, however, that therapist-client sex is "more underreported than rape, so the figures might be extremely misleading."

Some professionals, including Murray, consider therapeutic seduction a form of rape. The courts in some instances agree with them. In La Jolla, Calif., a woman sued her therapist-seducer for malpractice and won a $2.5 million settlement.

Is a sexual relationship between therapist and patient really that wrong?

"Yes, it is," emphatically answers Jacqueline Bouhoutsos, president of the Association for Media Psychology and one of five professionals who co-authored "Professional Psychology: Research and Practice."

"Sex destroys the efficacy of therapy. Once sex begins, treatment ends."

According to "Professional Psychology," 90 percent of the patients studied who were sexually intimate with therapists suffered adverse affects. A few attempted suicide. Leigh is one of them.

She was only 19 when she was seduced by a psychologist. She considers it "the worst sexual experience" of her life.

She says, "I began therapy after my parents were killed in an airplane crash. Naturally, John was an older man, graying at the temples, smoking a pipe. It was all too classic. I wish I'd understood what was happening in time to stop it."

HER SUICIDE attempt was "half-hearted," staged when she was sure her brother would discover her in time. A feeling of "emptiness" led her to take such a drastic step.

"I felt abandoned by my parents, then my psychologist-lover. Once he became my lover, he wasn't available as my therapist anymore.

"I couldn't discuss my feelings about our affair with him, because he was part of it."

At the hospital following her suicide attempt she was treated by a staff psychiatrist who wanted to handle her "clinical depression" with drugs. But her brother found another psychologist, a woman who was willing to help Leigh work out her problems in therapy rather than treat them with drugs.

She says now the psychiatrist probably would have taken a different approach, too — if she'd been honest with him about the sexual encounter.

Leigh says, "I couldn't trust him because he was another man. And I didn't want to expose John. He begged me to keep quite about what had happened between us. He said I could ruin his career if I told."

Eventually Leigh felt she could confide in the psychologist, "because she's a woman."

Murray says this fear and distrust of male professionals is a typical result of therapeutic seduction.

She says, "Therapeutic seduction follows a familiar pattern: The midlife male seduces the young, vulnerable woman looking for a father figure. Those relationships flourish in teacher-student situations and when businessmen become mentors to young women. But it's tragic when it happens in therapy, because the patient trusts the therapist completely.

"Once he becomes sexually involved with her, he is just like any other male in this exploitative situation. He isn't someone she can trust. When she realizes that, she distrusts all male therapists."

Surprisingly for some women, the therapeutic seduction may not appear to be damaging for some time.

JENNY THOUGHT she was "special" when Leonard, her psychiatrist, told her how much he wanted to take her to bed. An executive in her mid-30s, she felt she and he could handle a relationship "outside the office."

She says, "If he'd tried to seduce me while I was paying for his time, I would have been smart enough to spot him for what he was."

But Leonard had "dates" with Jenny. He took her to expensive restaurants and then made love to her in his apartment. He was "a particularly skilled and tender lover.

"It worked for six months, until he stopped asking me for dates."

Then Jenny saw him at one of "their" restaurants with another woman, a patient. Later she learned Leonard frequently dated his patients.

After they'd stopped dating, she couldn't relate to him as a therapist.

"He kept trying to analyze away all my feelings of jealousy and anger. He kept reminding me I was his patient, not his girlfriend. He put up the professional screen that good therapists keep between themselves and their patients. He just shut me out of his private life altogether.

"Well, I couldn't make this work, so I had to find another therapist."

While the majority of reported cases of therapeutic seduction concern male therapists, sometimes female therapists are guilty, too.

Gloria blames her recent divorce on her marriage counselor, a woman who was having an affair with her husband, Jeff, while counseling the two of them.

GLORIA SAYS, "We went to her as a last effort to save the marriage. Jeff had already had several affairs. Sex is just his way of dealing with women.

"We'd been seeing the counselor for several months when Jeff admitted to me he'd been having an affair with her since the second session. He felt guilty; she didn't."

Patients feel betrayed by unethical professionals who inject their own sexual desires into the therapy process. No ethical therapist endorses sexual relations between professional and client.

Jerry Morrison, a West Coast therapist, says, "Professionals know they will be tempted sometimes. They recognize sexual reactions to clients are normal. Acting on those reactions is not.

"I can't advise women strongly enough: Stop treatment if the therapist has made any overt sexual advances toward you. The sooner you get out, the better."

Sometimes the therapist's sexual interest is all in the patient's imagination.

Ralph, a Midwestern therapist, says, "This happens frequently, too.

"For example: Mary came to me because she was unhappily married. She told me her 'real problem' was her effect on men. They couldn't keep their eyes — or their hands — off her.

"Well, Mary was built like a Playboy centerfold, so I believed her. In the fourth session, she turned to me and said, 'Ralph, I can't concentrate with you staring at me like that. I know you're undressing me in your mind. Let me help you.'

"Then she began unbuttoning her blouse. I buzzed for the receptionist and turned Mary over to my wife, Tricia, who is also a therapist."

Advice offered for school lunches

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Millions of parents are once again facing the five-day-a-week question of what to pack in their youngsters' lunch boxes. Although government-sponsored school lunches are available to nearly all children, many parents object to the often fatty and overcooked foods typically served and would rather choose what their children eat. Sometimes the children themselves object to school lunch, not just to the food but also to the lines they must stand in to get it.

In still other families, packing a lunch at home is considered a money saver, although the 80 cents or so charged to children who do not qualify for free lunch is often less than the cost of a homemade meal.

Two questions are usually uppermost in the minds of parents: what to include that will be healthful and nutritious (and at least as good, if not better than what the school serves) and how to keep the lunch from spoiling before it is eaten.

All parents must realize that no food can be nourishing if a child will not eat it. So the first rule is to consider the child's likes and dislikes, which are typically extreme, especially during the preteen years.

FOR SOME children, finding just one piece of mushroom in the tomato sauce will prompt them to refuse the whole dish. There are questions of peer pressure, such as that faced by a sardine-loving child who refused to take sardine sandwiches to school because friends ridiculed the selection. Then, too, there are unforeseen, uncontrollable forces, such as the rumor in one elementary school that there were bugs in tuna fish; thereafter some children refused to take tuna sandwiches for lunch.

At the same time, it is not unusual for children to insist on the same one or two lunchtime selections day after day, week after week and, in some cases, year after year. Parents, appalled by such a lack of variety, might be appeased by one mother's belief that the predictability of lunch reassures her child, who is sometimes unnerved by the ever-changing demands of school. Assuming that their limited food preferences are reasonably nutritious, children will come to no harm if they take the same lunch every day. Just try to provide variety and nutritional balance in meals eaten at home.

It may help to have children participate in lunch selection and preparation, perhaps using the opportunity to explain the nutritional virtues and evils of the items chosen. As a check on what actually gets eaten, I insisted that my children bring home leftovers, which were discarded if perishable, and without an accompanying lecture. An alternative is to ask children from time to time what they ate for lunch and see how well it matches what you prepared.

A number of other guidelines and lunch-packing suggestions will help nutrition-minded parents.

CONSIDER THE overall structure of lunch. Ideally, it should contain a protein-rich food, a complex carbohydrate (usually bread), vegetables or fruit and a beverage. Dessert other than fruit is optional from a nutrition standpoint but may be a social necessity. Children whose lunch boxes are devoid of cookies or similar fare often trade their fruit for someone else's sweet. Far better to give children both the fruit and a cookie or two. You might even suggest that the second cookie be used for trading, but insist that the fruit be eaten or traded only for someone else's fruit.

Protein can be provided by meat, poultry, fish, cheese, peanut butter, eggs, beans, cottage cheese or yogurt. Too often, however, parents fall back on cold cuts like bologna and salami, which are extremely high in fat (85 percent of their calories come from fat), most of which is artery-damaging saturated fat. In addition, they are salty and preserved with nitrates and nitrites, which may promote cancer. Among cold cuts, better selections include roast turkey or chicken or beef. Turkey ham and turkey bologna are much lower in fat but still high in salt and preservatives. In some areas, low-salt ham (boiled ham is low in fat) is available, though this too contains nitrates or nitrites.

Cheese, often a childhood favorite that has the added virtue of resisting spoilage, is also high in fat and salt. Try a reduced-fat processed cheese or one in which the saturated butterfat has been replaced by vegetable oil. Hard cheeses like natural Swiss and part-skim mozzarella are comparatively low in fat; Swiss is also fairly low in salt. Still, if regular processed American cheese is all your child will eat, it is better than nothing; just try to limit its amount and frequency.

For tuna sandwiches, consider using the water-packed variety (even drained, oil-packed tuna is much higher in fat) and dressing the tuna with a mixture of plain yogurt and mayonnaise to keep the fat content low. If canned salmon, sardines or other fish are used, crush the calcium-rich bones and include them.

COTTAGE CHEESE can be combined with raisins, crushed pineapple, sunflower seeds, chopped apple, shredded carrot or other foods, but it tends to make bread mushy by lunchtime. So, pack it in a separate container — include a plastic spoon or knife in the lunchbox — and let the child spread it on the bread at lunchtime. Pita, Middle Eastern pocket bread, works especially well for such moist fillings.

As for the perennial favorite, peanut butter, consider alternatives to jelly such as unsweetened apple butter, sliced banana, chopped apple and raisins.

Don't forget dinner leftovers. A piece of chicken, fish (boneless) or meat loaf can be eaten plain or in a sandwich. Leftover cold pizza is also favored by some. Hot-packed casseroles, such as pasta and sauce, Spanish rice, macaroni and cheese, hamburger or tuna hot dish, chili or main-dish soups are other possibilities.

Include one or more cut-up raw vegetable or steamed fresh vegetables, such as carrots, celery, cherry tomatoes, green beans, broccoli flowerets, zucchini, sweet pepper (red or green) — anything your child likes. Cooked vegetables should be tender-crisp to enhance their appeal and nutrition. You might also include a small leak-proof plastic container of a favorite dip or salad dressing. A container of coleslaw, grated carrot and raisin salad, three-bean salad or potato salad are other alternatives.

ANY FRESH fruit is acceptable, although some, like bananas or plums, are prone to bruising in a lunch pail. To minimize damage to fruit and maximize the likelihood of consumption, it may be best to offer sliced fruits such as pineapple, oranges and melon or a fruit salad packed in a plastic container.

Include two servings of fruit if there is no vegetable in the lunchbox. Canned or frozen fruits are acceptable if packed in their own juices or in fruit juice. Syrup-packed fruits are much too sweet. Dried fruits and the latest rage, fruit rolls, are extremely sweet and tend to stick to children's teeth, where they feed decay-causing bacteria for hours.

To meet calcium and protein needs, children should drink milk, preferably skim or low-fat. Chocolate milk is acceptable once or twice a day, if your child insists. Many children are able to buy milk in school. Otherwise, pack it in a vacuum bottle to keep it cold. If yogurt is used as the protein or dessert, fruit juice or tomato juice is an acceptable alternative to milk as a beverage. Beware of nectars; most have lots of added sugar, so read the label. Soft drinks (carbonated or otherwise) are not nutritious luncheon items.

Besides fruit, children often clamor for a sweet treat. Consider baking cookies, muffins or quick breads, with the children helping, using less sugar than most recipes call for and substituting vegetable oil for hard fats and whole wheat flour for some of the white flour. Homemade oatmeal-raisin cookies, peanut butter balls rolled in wheat germ and cake-like cookies made with cottage cheese are nutritious substitutes for the average commercial fare. So are bran muffins and zucchini bread. Nonsweet snacks might include unsalted nuts, sunflower seeds or unbuttered popcorn; try a sprinkling of grated Parmesan instead of salt.

DURING THE warm days of fall and spring and in overheated classrooms in winter, consider the safety of storing a lunch unrefrigerated for several hours. Some simple measures can greatly reduce the risk of spoilage.

— Prepare lunches with clean hands on a clean surface using clean utensils. Do not prepare ready-to-eat foods on a surface that was used for raw animal foods without washing the surface first.

— Chill the foods and the lunch box before packing them (this is best done the night before) and keep them refrigerated until just before the child leaves for school.

— Consider buying an insulated lunch bag or a pail that has a small reusuable freezer pack.

— Freeze the ingredients that can tolerate it, such as most sandwiches (except those with mayonnaise), yogurt or cans of juice, and pack them frozen into the lunch box. They will defrost by lunchtime and help to keep all the foods cold.

— Use fresh ingredients or leftovers that are not more than a day old (unless they were frozen) and that were refrigerated promptly after their original use.

— Use only commercial mayonnaise in unrefrigerated sandwiches; studies show that it inhibits the growth of food poisoning organisms. Ketchup and mustard are also good seasonings.

— Use insulated containers (thermos type) to hold foods that should be kept hot or cold. Heat or chill the container with boiling water or ice water before filling it.

Private groups help set standards

WASHINGTON (AP) — Who's in charge of the safety and quality of the products Americans buy?

Some free market advocates claim that the heavy hand of government regulation sets every standard, stifling innovation, raising prices and limiting choices.

But at the same time pro-regulation activists assert that the Reagan administration is turning the reins over to industry and abdicating government's responsibilities to consumers.

In reality, American products are regulated by a complex and interlocking web of government rules and regulations and standards set by literally hundreds of private groups and laboratories — some well-known, others laboring in relative obscurity.

If some product is shown to be so dangerous it is an imminent hazard, government agencies can usually order it off the market.

But otherwise, quality and safety rules are more likely to have been set by the industries themselves, often voluntarily and with government cooperation.

To Americans, that little "UL" mark of Underwriters Laboratories is a common assurance that a product meets safety standards. But Underwriters Laboratories is just one of more than 700 associations, organizations, institutes and bureaus both in and out of government set standards for thousands of products.

THEY RANGE from the private Abrasive Engineering Society to the Zinc Institute, the U.S. Agriculture Department to the Veterans Administration. A vast array of state and local governments also sets standards of some type.

One federal agency, the Consumer Product Safety Commission, is seeking ways to increase its support for privately developed standards.

The commission decided in the spring not to officially endorse privately established standards, but has scheduled hearings this fall in Washington and Los Angeles to look at other ways of backing voluntary standards efforts.

Business and industry were relatively unregulated during the heyday of the industrial revolution, allowing innovators freedom to grow but also spurring problems with safety and quality of products.

Americans flocked to the great Columbian Exposition in Chicago in 1893 to see the fruits of American inventiveness on display, but the show was arred by fires that plagued the electrical devices.

The result was the birth of perhaps the best known private regulatory agency, when insurance investigators looking into the fires esablished Underwriters Laboratories, now headquartered in Northbrook, Ill.

Its symbol is widely known on electrical appliances and other goods, and it has become the world's largest non-profit independent safety testing organization. Besides electrical appliances, UL sets standards for fire and casualty hazards, burglary resistance devices and other products.

THE DEFENSE Department alone has adopted more than 20 UL safety standards. They form guidelines for many other government agency standards, including those of the General Services Administration and Coast Guard.

The development of voluntary product standards is coordinated by ANSI, the American National Standards Institute of New York, founded in 1918 by a group of professional societies and government officials.

ANSI helps the hundreds of specialized standards groups work together to avoid duplication, and coordinates U.S. and foreign industrial and technical standards through the government's National Bureau of Standards and the International Standards Organization.

Nearly as old as the UL, is the ASTM, the American Society for Testing and Materials, founded in 1898 and headquartered in Philadelphia.

The ASTM develops quality standards for such things as stainless steel, copper alloys, cement, paint, robots, textiles, security systems, sports equipment and medical devices, as well as developing test methods and ways of analyzing products.

ASTM currently has more than 7,218 standards in force and operates 139 technical committees to update them and develop new ones. Its Annual Book of ASTM Standards comprises 66 volumes.

Recently published ASTM standards have covered specifications for titanium stabilized carbon steel, standard terminology for burning textiles, specifications for portable gasoline containers for consumer use and performance limits for strollers and carriages.

EVEN OLDER than the venerable UL is the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers, which traces its history to attempts in 1884 to standardize the operations of electrical equipment.

While the IEEE also deals in safety standards, it concentrates on measuring and testing the performance of devices or systems, and works to apply up to date engineering to technology within its scope.

Based in New York, IEEE currently has 500 electrical and electronics standards in force and another 800 projects underway. Its National Electrical Safety Code has been adopted by ANSI and many government and regulatory agencies.

Auto mechanics, and homeowners who change their own oil in automobiles or lawnmowers, are likely familier with the letters SAE on cans of motor oil.

The Society of Automotive Engineers, based on Warrendale, Pa., has been operating since 1902 and currently has standards covering motor vehicles, aircraft, space vehicles, farm tractors, earthmoving and roadbuilding machines and aerospace prducts. Some 600 SAE standards have been adopted by the Defense Department.

Another major player in America, though little noted, is the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, which sets standards for the nuts and bolts of the nation — literally.

IT'S BEST known standard, though, is probably the Boiler Code, the definitive compendium of safety and performance requirements for pressure and heating boilers.

The Atlanta-based group was founded in 1894, although it began developing standards in 1959. Currently ASHRAE has 60 active standards covering uniform ratings and safe practices rules for designing and installing heating and cooling equipment, as well as energy conservation standards.

Wash one hand with the other

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Letting the water run across your fingers for a second or two before leaving the rest room is not handwashing. Rubbing your hands together under running water is not handwashing. Thinking about washing your hands after leaving the rest room is not handwashing.

The following is handwashing, as explained by registered nurse Diane Hays:

1. Use the warmest water you can, since dirt is dissolved better at higher temperatures. Use running water, whenever possible, not water standing in a basin.

2. Leave rings on fingers. Their crevices may hide some bacteria, but you will put them on after you wash anyway, so best to give them a token bath.

3. Lather up with the soap of your choice. The liquid soaps in a pump container have the advantage of not leaving residual goop, in which bacteria can grow. (Some bacteria can thrive on a bar of soap.)

4. Wash one hand with the other, then scrub each finger individually with the other hand. A fingernail brush is nice, but awkward to carry around. Instead, use the "grip scrub," where you cup the fingers of one hand into the cupped fingers of the other and massage them together, cleaning the nails against the looser skin on the inside of the knuckles.

5. Scrub for 30 seconds, rinse thoroughly, dry well and, if desired, apply the hand cream of your choice. One is as good as the next, the professionals say.

Cheerleader back on squad after failing grade changed

AP Laserphoto

Laurie Schellstede of Fort Worth is one of the students across the state who has been affected by the no-pass, no play rule. Ms. Schellstede was suspended from the freshman cheerleading squad for flunking typing, but her grade was changed on a "technicality."

FORT WORTH (AP) — A high school freshman is back on the cheerleading squad after the failing grade in typing that benched her was changed to passing.

Laurie Schellstede had been booted out of the six-member cheerleading squad under the state's no pass, no play rule, which mandates that students must pass all their courses to participate in extracurricular activities.

After making 97 on her typing test and averaging 96 on her classroom work, Miss Schellstede was shocked to get a failing grade of 48 on Friday because of her typing "technique."

So the 14-year-old appealed her case to the Southwest High School school board.

Principal Glenn Mandeville said Wednesday that her grade was raised — on a technicality. He said her teacher failed to warn her parents that she was failing, as is required by law.

Miss Schellstede said her teacher "checked our posture and how we curved our fingers and said that was half our grade."

As for her teacher, J.V. Meek, he said he feels misunderstood.

"Only a typing teacher understands technique," he said.

Annice Elliott, the district's director of vocational office education, said that the school district's curriculum guide for beginning typing says technique accounts for half the typing grade.

Shamburger

HOUSTON (AP) — Friday nights in Marathon aren't the same now that the football season has ended prematurely, not at the hands of opponents but of teachers who issued report cards.

Half the members of the football team in the West Texas town of 800 failed at least one class, making them ineligible to play for the next six weeks under the state's no pass, no play rule.

The statute, which runs counter to Texans' obsession with high school football, ultimately will face scrutiny by the U.S. Supreme Court.

"It really hurts this town," Marathon football coach Gary Lamar told one reporter. "This is a football town. That's all they have here."

The rule, passed during a special legislative session last summer, bars students failing any course during a six-week grading period from participating in extracurricular activities for the next six weeks.

The activities aren't limited to the playing field. In Dallas, the H. Grady Spruce High School Marching Apache Band abandoned all plans of marching during halftime after 26 of the 48 band members failed at least one class.

"I had eight trumpet players before," band director Don Patmon said. "I have one now."

The remaining 22 members, dubbed the "The A Team," now assemble in front of the drill team each game and play a single tune.

Statewide, the rule benched 15 percent of high school varsity football players, according to the Texas High School Coaches Association, the only group that monitors the failing rates of football players.

Failure rates among sub-varsity players were higher, about 25 percent in the junior varsity and 38 percent for younger players, the coaches' group says.

Earlier this summer, State District Judge Marsha Anthony of Houston threw out the no pass, no play provisions, but her decision was overturned by the Texas Supreme Court. An appeal of the state high court ruling now is pending before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Ms. Anthony refused to grant an injunction Wednesday requested by attorney Anthony Sheppard that would have barred schools from enforcing the rule until the federal court decides its constitutionality.

The judge set a Nov. 18 trial date, however, to hear testimony on the merits of the case, which now is a class action suit involving Texas' 1,100 school districts.

Sheppard contends the rule "impinges on the fundamental rights of students."

"It affects more than sports," he says. "We do not think regulation of extracurricular activities is a compelling state interest."

But Gov. Mark White, who appointed the panel that suggested the rule, disagrees, saying Texans should put academics before athletics.

"There is more at stake here...than a district football championship," White says. "What is at stake are jobs for those young men and women when they get out of school. The real issue is going to be no learn, no earn."

Within the Houston Independent School District, Texas' largest, 637 of 2,771 athletes were removed from the rosters, including 416 of 1,371 sub-varsity football players. Already, four Houston schools have scrapped freshman football schedules.

In the San Antonio area, 790 athletes cannot play ball because they failed at least one class.

John Kincaide, athletic director for the Dallas Independent School District, said 123 of 765 varsity football players were declared ineligible.

Schools in Texas' Panhandle fared better, with 40 of 101 schools not losing a varsity football player and 30 losing only one, officials said.

Some students now are taking easier courses to guarantee passing and circumvent the rule.

"They have figured the game out," says Jack Green, an assistant band director at Spring Woods High School in Houston.

Laura Shamburger, a senior trombone player, was one of eight Spring Woods band members removed because of poor grades. Now she watches football games from the stands, sidelined by her failing algebra mark.

"I had a hard time with the class," says Ms. Shamburger, 18. "I always did the homework, but I had problems on the tests."

She says she'll work harder, but also will drop algebra.

Most educators agree the rule encouraging academics over extracurricular activities is necessary, but some prefer a three-week penalty period to six.

"Six weeks is a long time. The life of a high school kid is a tightrope as it is," Green says.

"Just because of one grade, a lot of these kids are being punished," says Lyman Davis, coach at San Antonio Wheatley High School, where the junior varsity schedule has been canceled. "There has to be a better way to handle this."

Ex-prison guard convicted for taking gratuities

Roybal

ABILENE (AP) — Jurors deliberated about three hours before convicting former Big Spring federal prison guard Eddie Joe Roybal of accepting a gratuity from convicted drug kingpin Rex Cauble.

Roybal, 33, also was found guilty Wednesday of two counts of accepting gratuities from other inmates, one count of smuggling a controlled substance into the prison camp and one count of smuggling contraband into the facility.

U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward will sentence Roybal at a later date. Meanwhile, Roybal, who now lives in Weatherford, remains free on a personal recognizance bond.

On Tuesday, Roybal denied doing any favors for Cauble in exchange for a $11,550 loan from Cauble's sister, Thelda Cauble Harris of Denton. The defendant also denied doing any special favors for inmate Gary Marcus Gunter in return for money.

FBI agents testified that Gunter was cooperating with prison officials and FBI agents when he arranged $1,000 in marked bills to be mailed to Roybal.

Roybal said he thought the money was part of $10,000 that some friends of Gunter's in Dallas were going to loan him. He said he expected to repay the loan to Cauble's sister, the loan from Gunter's friends, and several thousand dollars in other debts.

Roybal said that he didn't do anything special for Cauble when he arranged for a hospital bed in Cauble's cell.

"Did you at any time do anything for Mr. Cauble that you had not done for other inmates?" Tallant asked him.

"No, I didn't," Roybal responded.

But the jury heard a tape-recording in which Roybal is heard boasting about persuading another corrections officer to bring Cauble a hospital bed.

Gunter, 31, who admitted to a lengthy criminal record, said he was present during conversations between Cauble and Roybal that led to the $11,550 loan from Mrs. Harris.

Witnesses testified that Roybal made installment payments, paid some debts and bought a $2,100 boat with the money from Mrs. Harris.

Mrs. Harris testified Tuesday morning that she made the May 28 loan at her brother's request and that she expected to be repaid.

She said Cauble told her the loan was to cover Roybal's living expenses during what Roybal had hoped would be 10 months of training to become a deputy U.S. marshal.

Roybal admitted Tuesday he provided a controlled substance — two Darvocet capsules — to Gunter after the inmate repeatedly asked him for something to relieve back pain.

FBI Special Agent Thomas Clark testified that a vial containing 65 pills and $1,000 in 10 marked $100 bills were mailed to Roybal's home in the same package.

But Roybal denied on the witness stand that he had ever seen the capsules until they were shown to him in the courtroom. The pills were actually sugar pills prepared by the FBI.

Cauble, a former Denton rancher who is serving a five-year sentence for a marijuana smuggling conviction, was transferred to the La Tuna Correctional Institute at El Paso after Roybal's arrest, Tallant said.

Gunter has been released and is working as a self-employed car salesman, Tallant said.

Austin woman finds pigeons shot with steel darts

More than 30 pigeons near the University of Texas campus have been wounded with steel darts, which officials believe were fired from blowguns. Sara Rao, who regularly feeds the pigeons, saw this one and called Austin police and the humane society.

AUSTIN (AP) — A woman who has been feeding pigeons around her apartment near the University of Texas for several years says more than 30 birds have been wounded in recent days with steel darts fired from a blowgun.

"It is cruel, it is sick. For any person to enjoy inflicting pain on another living thing is not normal," said Sara Rao.

"To me, they have as much right to live as anything else. I love all animals — especially those that are helpless. This is a torture. It is a sin."

Since Friday, Ms. Rao said, 37 birds have been wounded with four-inch darts that humane society officials say are being fired from blowguns.

Sales of blowguns have increased in recent months as a result of the movie Rambo and "ninja" films, officials said. Ninja movies are martial arts films that feature exotic weaponry and violence.

Ms. Rao noticed several wounded birds last week when she fed them after she got home from work — something she has done every day for seven years.

The next day, she noticed nine birds with darts in their bodies. By Monday, 15 more birds had been wounded. She said she believes many of the wounded birds died.

Ms. Rao, who holds a doctorate in education and has raised birds all her life, said she contacted Austin police and the Austin-Travis County Humane Society, which sent two persons to investigate Tuesday.

Humane society officials tried to net one bird — which had a dart through its eye — but each attempt failed when the bird flew away.

That bird was one of three wounded pigeons that appeared Tuesday afternoon. The others had been wounded through the wings. All the birds could fly, and they ate when Ms. Rao fed them.

Doyle Nordyke, director of the humane society, said officials haven't determined who shot the birds. An Austin city ordinance makes it illegal to hunt or kill wild animals within city limits.

"It's very cruel and inhumane," Nordyke said. "I wouldn't want to walk around with a dart through my head. What scares me is that anyone could hit a child just as easily. This shouldn't exist, but it does."

Ms. Rao said she justs wants to see the person responsible caught and treated.

"When I first saw the darts, I felt the pain the birds felt," said Ms. Rao, who once spent three months nursing a pigeon with a broken wing back to health. "Then I broke down and cried."

PUC wants more information before acting on AT&T's request

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission's decision to seek more information about AT&T Communications' $114.5 million rate hike request is "unreasonable," says a company official.

"We provided as much information as any utility has ever provided," said AT&T Vice President Tom Jones.

But Commissioners Peggy Rosson and Dennis Thomas, who disagreed on whether AT&T is entitled to any more money, agreed that the company's rate hike package left unanswered questions.

In a meeting Wednesday, Ms. Rosson said AT&T should get no hike. Thomas favored a $50 million hike. Jones said the company will lose about $30 million in Texas this year. He said the $50 million hike "would not get us out of the red."

The three-member commission is down to two because Gov. Mark White has not appointed a replacement for Phil Ricketts, whose term expired in August.

Unable to work out a compromise, the commissioners sent the case back to a hearing examiner for scrutiny of AT&T transactions with its affiliates. Specifically, the commission wants to know if Texans are being billed for expenses that don't benefit them.

The case now will continue until at least January.

"I think they're being unreasonable," Jones said.

Ms. Rosson said AT&T's request, originally filed in January, did not prove its case. She also said intervenors' requests for information from AT&T were met with "repeated refusals" from the company.

It all added up to zero, according to Ms. Rosson.

"Even though we are in a changing regulatory environment, we cannot abandon our responsibility to insure that a utility has met its statutory obligations. We cannot simply give money away," she said.

Ms. Rosson and Thomas said the lack of a third commissioner had no impact on their deliberations. Even if White had selected a commissioner within the past few days, the new member probably would not have had time to study the AT&T case, they said.

Thomas agreed that AT&T's case was inadequate. But he said there was enough evidence to justify a rate hike. AT&T will lose about $30 million in Texas this year, according to vice president Jones.

For Thomas, the key issue was balancing the state's need for top-notch telecommunications and "affordable service."

"At $50 million, we would be $30 million below the (PUC) staff recommendation. I am concerned we are not doing very much at $50 million to get the state of the art telecommunications system we need," he said, adding that a $50 million hike might not be sufficient to prevent a "degradation" in service.

The PUC staff called for an $81 million hike. After the hearing, Examiner Charmaine Rhodes recommended a $35.8 million hike, with no increase in the cost of basic, intrastate long distance service.

AT&T's proposal on basic long distance tolls varied, but wound up as a request for a slight decrease for most calls. Thomas called for a two-cent per minute cut in the cost of long distance calls of over 106 miles.

The increases proposed by the examiner and Thomas would have been covered by hikes in the cost of business services, such as outgoing WATS and private line.

When the PUC impasse was evident, the commissioners asked AT&T if it would agree to reopen the case to allow a closer look at the company's corporate structure and whether Texas ratepayers are being asked to pay for expenses that do not benefit them.

Thomas said AT&T's structure "looks more like a model of DNA with its interrelationships and feedback loops."

The alternative to reopening the case was unclear. There are no rules or laws concerning a tie vote at the PUC.

STATE IN BRIEF

New milk metering system could save 'millions of dollars' annually

STEPHENVILLE (AP) — Texas has become the first state to approve an on-truck milk metering system that could save milk producers and cooperatives millions of dollars a year, according to State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower.

Hightower, who was in Stephenville for a demonstration, said Wednesday the system more accurately measures milk when it is picked up by a tanker truck at a local dairy.

"One milk industry official believes this new metering system is the biggest technological breakthrough for the dairy industry since 10-gallon cans were replaced by thousand-gallon storage tanks," Hightower said. "If the current 'dipstick' or 'sight glass' methods of measuring milk in the on-farm storage tanks are off by just 1 percent, that's an error of 4.5 million gallons of milk," Hightower added in a statement.

"Based upon the prices farmers were paid for their milk last year, that translates into roughly $5.5 million that either milk producers or the milk cooperatives lost because of a very small inaccuracy in our current measuring system. In truth, we don't know how accurate or inaccurate the current measurements are."

He said the new milk metering pump has proven 100 percent accurate in trial tests and in on-truck use.

Seventh Houston cabbie killed

HOUSTON (AP) — A widowed taxi driver with three children who was robbed and fatally shot has become the seventh Houston driver slain during the past 13 months, authorities said.

Cecilia N. LaTray, 39, died Wednesday morning, one week after she received a city permit to drive a taxi for Yellow Cab Co., authorities said.

Yellow Cab Co. president Joe Chernow said Ms. LaTray was almost "penniless" when she took the cab driving job and had three children — the youngest of whom was 8 and the oldest a teen-ager.

Chernow said the cab company was offering a $5,000 reward for information leading to the killer's arrest.

A witness, the Rev. Henry Idlebird, said he saw a cab drive by his home about 9:45 a.m. with a passenger in the front seat next to the driver. The minister said he then heard a gunshot and the sound of a car speeding off.

Idlebird called for an ambulance, but Ms. LaTray died before help arrived, he said.

Fire forces evacuation of home

CARROLLTON (AP) — A fire at a nursing home Wednesday night forced the evaucation of the home's residents for more than an hour, authorities said.

No injuries had been reported in the fire, which started about 10:15 p.m. at the Northwood Manor Nursing Home, said Carrollton firefighter Mike Johnson. The blaze took about 45 minutes to extinguish, he said.

The cause of the fire was under investigation and officials were trying to determine if anyone had suffered any injuries in the blaze, Johnson said.

The nursing home has four wings, but he said he did not know how many people were in the home when the fire started. Officials had not allowed the nursing home residents back inside as of 11 p.m. Wednesday.

Taxpayers group honors Brown

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown said Wednesday he has been honored by the Texas Association of Concerned Taxpayers, Inc., for his efforts to limit the growth of state government.

Brown, R-Lake Jackson, sponsored a bill in the 1985 Legislature to reduce the number of state employees. He said the measure cleared the House but was held up in a Senate committee.

He received the Red Ribbon Award from the taxpayer organization.
