Hitching a ride

With the 7-inch snowfall of last weekend only a memory, these Midlanders found a way to enjoy the warm, sunny Thursday by trying out a Suzuki 4-by-6 on a gravel pile at Dallas and Tennessee streets. President 'restrained' on budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Republican leaders attending White House budget meetings say President Reagan seems to have more restrained expectations of the budget victories he can win in Congress this year.

The president is "in some degree tempering his enthusiasms," Rep. Barber B. Conable Jr., R-N.Y., said Thursday evening after the latest in a series of budget meetings Reagan has conducted with GOP members of Congress.

"He has had a tough couple of years and (now) tends to be more realistic in his relations with congressmen," Conable said. "He's a more complex man than he was."

The Republicans, who have been earnestly lobbying Reagan to moderate his budget course, say the president still has not made any final decisions on the fiscal 1984 spending blueprint he will send to Capitol Hill at the end of the month.

"They (the White House) still obviously don't have things in any concrete form yet," House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois said following the session.

At the White House today, spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan was attending a 90-minute session on the budget before flying to the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md., for the weekend.

Beyond that, Speakes said, he would have no further comments on budget decisions.

"We are now at a point where there are decisions being made and it would probably be better that I don't talk about it in any fashion," he told reporters.

House Republicans were able to deliver major budget victories for the president over the last two years by holding their ranks and attracting dozens of conservative Democrats.

Over the objections of House Democratic leaders, supporters of Reagan's economic plan passed a three-year personal income tax cut, reduced domestic programs by tens of billions of dollars and increased defense spending.

But Democrats picked up 26 seats in the fall elections and they have demonstrated in the early days of the 98th Congress that they will exert firmer control over the chamber.

In light of the changed political atmosphere in Congress and projections of budget deficits ballooning from more than $185 billion this fiscal year to nearly $300 billion by 1988, GOP legislators have been vigorously urging the president to soften his stance on economic issues.

Some Senate Republican leaders, along with some administration officials, have been pressing Reagan to seek tax increases and defense spending cuts to trim deficits.

The president, while not ruling out tax increases, said repeatedly Wednesday night in a nationally broadcast news conference that it would be a mistake to raise taxes when the nation is coming out of a recession.

Michel said that among House GOP leaders, "You don't find any tax increase advocates."

In addition, Michel said that if Reagan remains firm in his refusal to trim military spending, he should more clearly "spell out for the American people what our overall military strategy is.... It would help if the president himself would spell that out" in a speech.

Michel also said he has told the president that Democratic leaders are likely to respond to his proposed budget with an alternative that will include further aid for the unemployed and jobs programs as well as housing aid and monetary reform.

151 absentee bingo ballots cast

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Absentee voting in the Jan. 15 bingo election had attracted 151 voters, including four who voted by mail, through Thursday, according to Janeice Builta, Midland County elections administrator.

If approved by the electorate under the Bingo Enabling Act, bingo would be allowed only for charitable purposes and net proceeds from bingo games would go to charity.

Of the remainding funds paid by the players, no more than $2,500 in total prizes would be authorized under the act in any "one bingo occasion" and a single prize would be limited to $500, according to the Bingo Enabling Act.

After investigating non-profit organizations seeking license to hold bingo, the state comptroller would issue licenses and monitor funds from the games.

Absentee balloting on the issue will continue through Tuesday at the Elections Administrators' Office at 709 W. Washington Ave. Voting on Jan. 15, a Saturday, will be at 13 voting places in the city and county. All told, more than 42,000 registered voters reside in the county.

Opposition to the bingo issue in Midland seems minimal, while bingo proponents, such as the Veterans of Foreign Wars and American Legion posts and other fraternal organizations, are campaigning for passage of the issue.

"People who do not want it (bingo) are afraid horse racing will come through," speculated Ms. Builta. But she said that wasn't the case.

Pari-mutuel betting might be considered by the Texas Legislature and submitted to a vote by the people of Texas. But its local option, similar to elections authorizing bingo and selling alcoholic beverages, would have to be approved by voters in each county, city or pre-

Wrong man — with 'right' name, age — in jail 31 days

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — An innocent man spent 31 days in jail — including Christmas — because he had the same name and age as the suspect in four hit-and-run deaths. Now police in two states are being blamed for the mistake.

Gregorio Sanchez, 28, was mistaken in Carlsbad, N.M., for a 28-year-old San Antonio man accused of twice ramming his pickup truck into a crowd, killing four people and injuring two others July 17.

A month after Sanchez' Nov. 28 arrest, Carlsbad police obtained a photo of the genuine suspect and realized their error. They released Sanchez on Dec. 27.

"Every one of those days, he was treated as the worst criminal in the Southwest," said Mike Carrasco, the attorney for Sanchez, blaming careless police work for his client's arrest.

Meanwhile, the real suspect remains at large, wanted on four murder warrants, officials said.

Sanchez' problems in Carlsbad began when he wandered near a used car lot that had been the target of recent burglaries. Officers spotted him and stopped him briefly for questioning.

He was arrested two days later after a check of computerized national crime records showed a Gregorio Sanchez was wanted in Texas on four murder warrants in the hit-and-run killings in San Antonio.

The driver of that car plowed into the crowd, tires squealing, then circled around and drove through the crowd again, police said. A warrant was issued based on the pickup truck's license number.

The Sanchez men were born in the same year and had the same height. But Carrasco blamed Texas police for not sending more information about their suspect to New Mexico authorities sooner.

He also said New Mexico police should have found more evidence than a "computer blip" before locking up his client.

"That's all the police needed to bust this innocent guy," Carrasco said. "They didn't even bother to double-check everything. They simply saw the warrants and got excited they had captured a real bad guy and that's all they cared about."

Sanchez did not have a listed telephone number in Carlsbad and authorities said they could provide no information on where he could be reached for comment.

"Carlsbad police were at fault...because they told us they had the man we wanted here," Talbert said Thursday. "We simply proceeded to bring him at all costs to face charges."

But Carlsbad Police Chief Charles Galloway disagreed.

His officers had "minimal" information from the national crime computer, and the mistake was not discovered until San Antonio authorities sent photos that confirmed the wrong man had been arrested, he said.

"I'm not going to try to place the blame on anybody," Galloway said. "Officers here acted in good faith based on the information they had and detained the man in cooperation with another agency.

"We tried to help," he said. "If the sheriff or whoever down there (in Texas) wants to say we were wrong, I'm sorry to see him take that approach when we were trying to help."

U.S. TEL has good share of West Texas market

By JIM PRESNELL
Energy-Business Writer

Demonstrating how fast a company can profitably enter the long-distance industry is the 1-year-old Dallas company U.S. TEL, which took in $90 million in 1982 revenues.

"AT&T has 96 percent of the long-distance market nationally and we have 5 percent of the West Texas long-distance market," said Cherie Slate, U.S. TEL's Midland representative.

That's a pretty big slice of the enormous long-distance bills West Texans receive — and it is a bigger local market share than most of AT&T's competitors in toll calling claim to have.

Figures for specific cities' use of U.S. TEL were unavailable. For security reasons, the company keeps business and residential customers secret.

Bell System Breakup

Sixth in a Series

The company said it serves 60,000 business and residence customers nationwide.

U.S. TEL IS MAINLY shooting for a business clientele as well as hitting Bell on the home front. For business callers, they market a sophisticated cost-accounting Service Access Module (SAM) — allowing highly detailed call monitoring — to U.S. TEL clients. SAM connects to trunk line telephone wiring, allowing the customer to dial cut-rate calls with the same AT&T "one-plus" code.

SAM finds the cheapest way to send a call by connecting the caller to U.S. TEL's "All America" network.

A customer won't know what kind of line is being used, whether with or without the SAM business unit, since the network itself chooses instantaneously how it will put through the call.

"ALL AMERICA" SERVICE may put a call through via satellite or may use a terrestrial microwave network U.S. TEL is constructing. Or you may talk via AT&T.

"All America" frequently has customers talking on AT&T Long Lines. U.S. TEL buys the surplus long lines from Ma Bell when usage is down, then resells these lines to its customers. Making the call through the cut-rate service "...saves 15 to 50 percent over Bell long-distance," Ms. Slate stated.

Ms. Slate also asserted that U.S. TEL "All America" is a much cheaper all-city, all-state calling service than MCI "Omnicall."

THE SERVICE IS marketed through direct mail for residential, and through Ms. Slate and a commercial sales group for business customers. The service takes lots of explaining to wary consumers, who seem to be afraid "Ma Bell" will get mad at them.

Midland's Sakowitz store offers the service to charge account customers, and the bill arrives on the Sakowitz monthly statement with a call detailing sheet mailed separately by the U.S. TEL Dallas consumer center.

U.S.TEL

VISA and MasterCard accounts can also be used to charge U.S. TEL services.

The growth of U.S. TEL is astounding. Since July, its customer base has grown from 30,000 to its present 60,000. These customers get discounts when calling any point in the continental U.S. — "All America" service — as well as on calls to Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Points already in service — Midland, Amarillo, Lubbock, Odessa and San Angelo — are part of a nationwide microwave network expected to stretch from New York to Los Angeles by 1984.

THIS WILL COME JUST in time for increased volume calling at U.S. TEL, while AT&T is trying to dispel confusion and lower rates to keep their Long Lines Division a viable moneymaker.

To market its services more effectively, U.S. TEL managers decided to change some products and services for lower prices and better comprehension, refer customers to other services if necessary, start more retail credit plans (like at Sakowitz) and consolidate all customer-related activities to the Dallas U.S. TEL National Information Center.

The plan appears well-founded, and with technology and a lot more venture capital, U.S. TEL, MCI, SPRINT, and other long-distance discounters may start to slice thin layers off Bell Long Lines' long-distance call business.

WEATHER SUMMARY

AP Laserphoto Map

Clear skies are forecast for most of the nation Saturday, according to the National Weather Service. Scattered snow flurries are expected for New England.

Mild, warmer temperatures forecast

Mild and warmer temperatures should continue through the weekend.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, tonight should be fair and cooler with the mercury dropping into the low 30s.

But the mercury is expected to creep up into the low 60s Saturday while northwesterly winds breeze through at 5-10 mph.

Thursday's high of 64 fell short of the record high of 75 set in 1935, and the overnight low of 29 was warmer than the record low of 11 set in 1970.

Mammoth Lakes area still shaking

MAMMOTH LAKES, Calif. (AP) — The ground still trembled under this mountain resort today after two sharp quakes caused power outages and "semi-panic" in a region where residents had been warned of a possible volcanic eruption.

Hundreds of quakes, felt across a wide area of central California, began at 4:26 p.m. Thursday with two sharp tremors and aftershocks continuing at a rate of at least 50 an hour.

They continued early today, but slackened "in frequency and magnitude," to a rate of 15 to 20 an hour after 1 a.m., said Don Finley, spokesman for the U.S. Geological Survey National Earthquake Information Center at Golden, Colo.

No injuries were reported from the quakes, but they triggered alarm in a restaurant and prompted some resort guests to leave the area 200 miles east of San Francisco, officials said.

Sheriff's Deputy John Rutkowski at the Mammoth Lakes substation said slight to moderate damage to dishes and glassware was reported. An aluminum airport hangar collapsed on top of a twin-engine, private plane, he said.

Preliminary measurements of the largest quakes ranged from 5 to 5.6 on the Richter scale of ground motion as recorded on seismographs, but by 1 a.m., most were below 2.0 on that scale, Finley said.

"Last night, they were occurring so frequently, it's just one big jumble on the seismograph," he said today.

"Earthquake swarms are not common by any means, but they are certainly not unprecedented. This one has gone on an unusually long time," he said.

The strongest quakes could be felt 100 miles to the west in the San Joaquin Valley cities of Fresno and Merced and 150 miles southwest in Bakersfield, authorities said. Tremors were also felt at Yosemite National Park headquarters to the north of Mammoth Lakes.

Mammoth Lakes Inn desk clerk Renee Xavier said Thursday's quakes were "very sharp. People are scared. We even had a couple of check-outs."

"We had a couple of pretty good jolts," said Don Austin, manager of the Gateway Market. "Things are off in the aisle ... Maybe a couple hundred dollars worth of damage, broken bottles and cans in the aisle, but nothing major."

"People are shaken up really badly," January Silverstom, an employee at the Chart House restaurant in Mammoth Lakes, said after the quakes rocked the restaurant and its 50 customers. "There's a feeling of semi-panic in the room, but people are fighting it."

Southern California Edison reported that about 1,000 customers in the area lost power with the initial tremors but most had power back within several hours. Crews were sent into the Crowley Lake area to hook up about 100 customers still without power late Thursday evening, said spokeswoman Becky Sordelet.

Absentee balloting on bingo continues

cinct. Since last January, 306 Texas counties, cities and justice of the peace precincts have approved bingo, while at least 18 have rejected it.

Ms. Builta noted that many people who do play bingo "make a circuit of it...it's addictive" or can be, she said. "You can do the same with food, movies, liquor, exercise, coffee. They all can be addictive."

Ms. Builta, who was not endorsing bingo, acknowledged that a segment of the elderly population enjoy the game at the VFW halls, Catholic churches, and fraternal organizations.

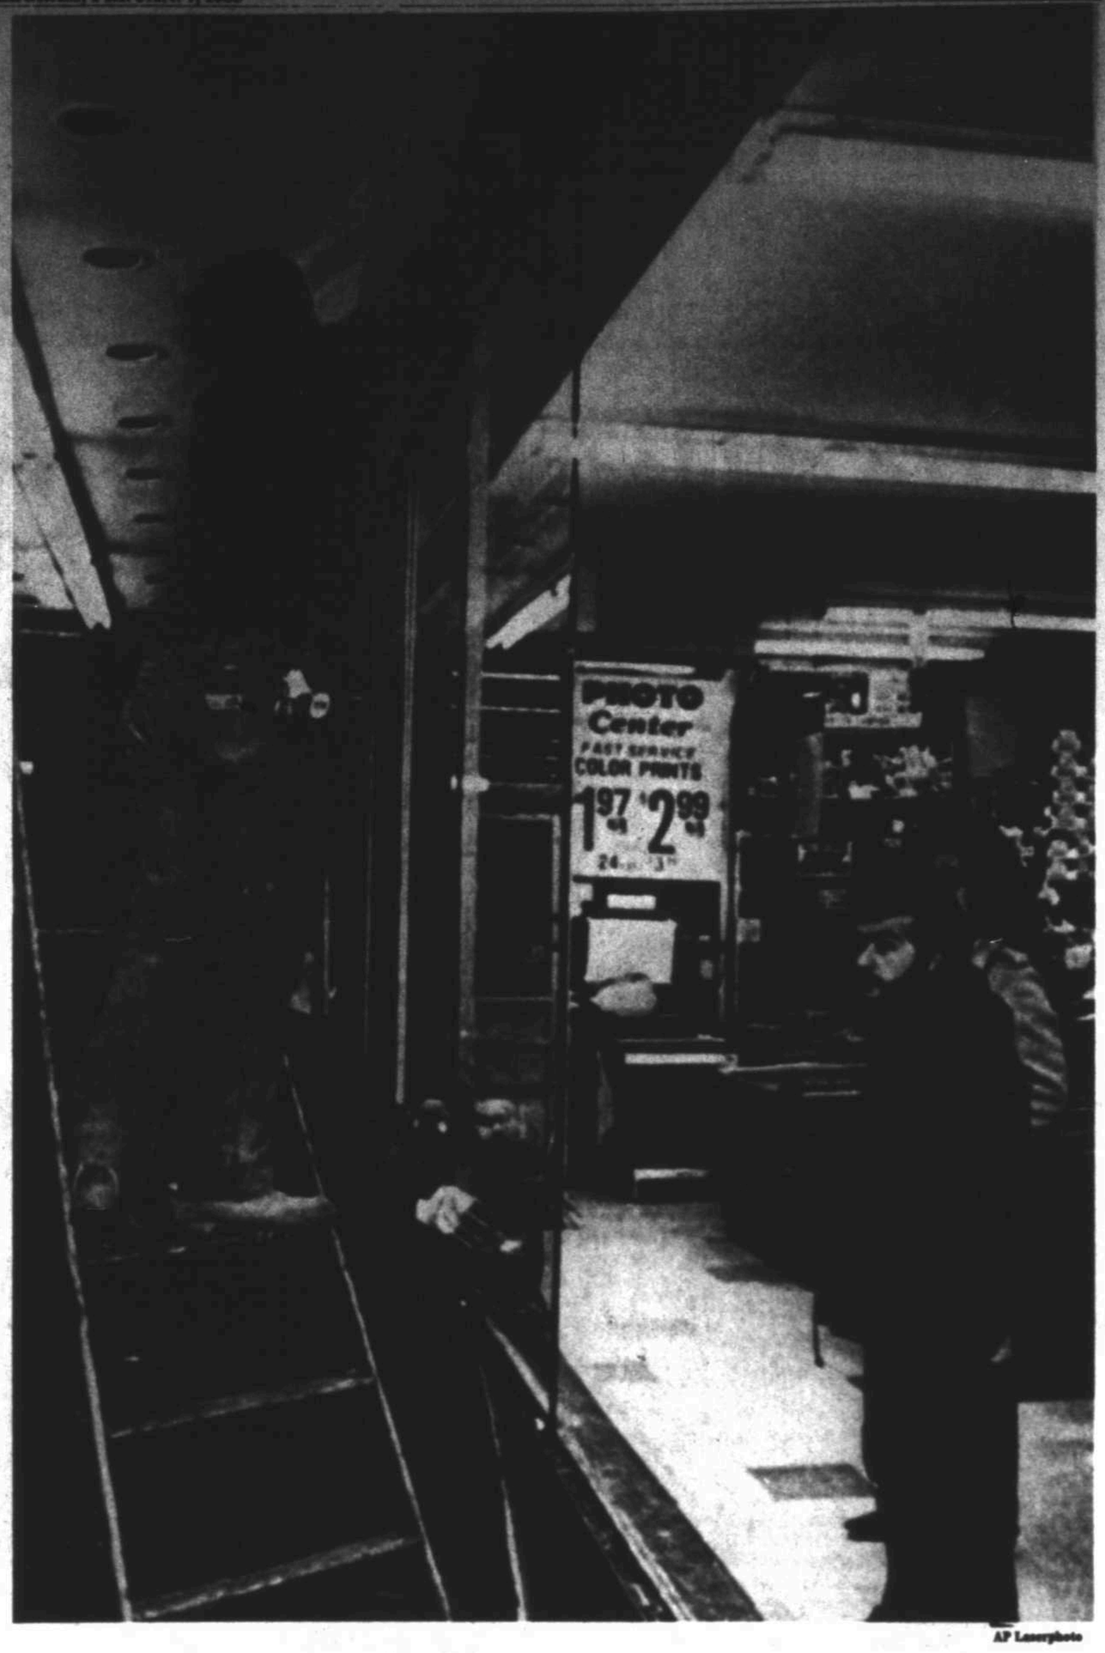

"If they won $10, they would think they owned the world with a fence around it. They enjoy it."

But she conceded that some people could become obsessed with the game and play it as a means to win money to solve their financial problems.

But she noted that "there's always pros and cons on everything. Anything can be addictive."

For example, Ms. Stovall said that she is an avid fan of the Dallas Cowboys professional football team. "I have my own little addiction — Dallas Cowboys. I do it (follow the Cowboys) win, lose or draw."

Glaziers replace broken glass at a Jersey City, N.J., supermarket early today after a massive explosion involving several fuel tanks in Newark, N.J., shattered window glass for several miles around the scene. This Jersey City store is located six miles from the explosion site.

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Gasoline from a ruptured storage tank gushed "like Niagara Falls" before erupting early today in a window-shattering explosion that killed one man, injured at least 23 others and sent flames hundreds of feet into the sky.

The 12:15 a.m. blast was reported felt 130 miles away. The flames reached 1,000 feet into the air and the fire was so intense that firefighters were forced back from the burning tanks and were waiting today for the fire burn itself out.

As the sun rose, winds that had been blowing the thick, black smoke northeast toward New York City shifted to the west, sending billowing clouds over New Jersey. The flames were visible miles away.

There were reports of looting in nearby Jersey City after the explosion blew out windows downtown.

Top Ingraham, a spokesman for the northeast division of Texaco USA, which owned the tank, said the company had no indication what caused the rupture or the blast. City officials said the fire did not appear to be suspicious.

The fuel "went through the holes ... it was spilling out like Niagara Falls," said George Gray, describing the scene just before the explosion. "We all saw the gas. That's when we decided to run."

Newark Fire Director John Caufield said the three gasoline tanks which caught fire held a total of 19 million gallons of the fuel.

Caufield said the dead man, 40-year-old William Vanzile of North Arlington, was found lying on his back several hundred feet from the burning 10-story tanks. Charles Sands, assistant manager of the terminal, said Vanzile was a Texaco truck operator.

Authorities said they believe one man is missing, but they would release no details. Sands said all Texaco employees were accounted for.

"It looks like devastation. There's many buildings in there that have been very heavily damaged, some automobiles that are completely demolished," Caufield said. "Of course the tanks themselves, two of them are collapsed and the third one looks like it's melting down."

Arrest made in jewelry theft

ODESSA — Last month's armed robbery of an Odessa jewelry store may have been solved with the arrest of a McCamey man in El Paso earlier this week, according to police.

Juan Jesus Valenzuela, 28, of McCamey, was in Ector County jail this morning under $10,000 bond set by Municipal Court Judge Otis Moore after being transferred from El Paso Thursday.

El Paso authorities said $40,000 worth of jewelry was found in Valenzuela's car when he was stopped on traffic charges there Wednesday. Serial numbers on the jewelry led to his being charged with the Dec. 15 holdup of the Gold Pan Jewelry Store at Parkway and University Avenue.

Jewelry and watches worth an estimated $75,000 were taken in the robbery, according to police.

Two stabbed in traffic altercation

ODESSA — Two Midland men were released following treatment for stab wounds they suffered in a traffic-related altercation here Thursday night, according to police.

Kevin L. Reeves, 20, of 3610 W. Louisiana Ave., and 24-year-old Royce G. Ellis of 211 Holly told officers they were punched and stabbed after getting into a fight with two unidentified men following a minor traffic accident near the intersection of Parkway Boulevard and 42nd Street about 10:45 p.m. Thursday.

They suffered leg and arm injuries and reportedly were treated at Medical Center Hospital.

Pizza restaurant in Odessa robbed

ODESSA — Two armed men held up the Pizza Hut Restaurant at 2131 E. 8th St. Thursday night, according to police, who said the men may be the same ones wanted in connection with the armed robbery of Godfather's Pizza last week.

A cashier at the Pizza Hut said two men wearing ski masks and armed with handguns entered the restaurant about 10:15 p.m. Thursday and escaped after taking an undisclosed amount of cash.

One of the men fled out the front door and was chased by a customer who stopped after being told he'd be killed if he didn't. The other man fled out a rear door. Both men wore ski masks over their faces, police said.

Odessa man, 20, jailed in robbery of market

ODESSA — An Odessa man who allegedly returned to the scene of his crime was in jail today under $100,000 bond set by Municipal Court Judge Larry McMillion.

Police said employees of the Bill Sears Super Market at 707 S. Grant recognized 20-year-old Jimmy Morales Martinez as one of three armed men who took an undisclosed amount of money in a holdup at the store Dec. 3.

They held him for police after he came into the store Thursday night. Other arrests may be forthcoming, according to police.

Slight increase in unemployment noted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate climbed to 10.8 percent of the labor force in December, a slight rise from the previous month's revised 10.7 percent, as the number of Americans giving up the search for jobs reached an all-time high, the government reported today.

The Labor Department said the ranks of "discouraged workers" — those no longer counted as unemployed because they have left the labor force — swelled by more than 200,000, to 1.8 million, the highest since the government began keeping this statistic in 1970.

While the unemployment rolls swelled by 130,000 last month, to well above the 12 million of November, only 87,000 people entered the labor force in search of work.

The department's Bureau of Labor Statistics initially had reported that November's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate was a post-Depression high of 10.8 percent. But in today's announcement, which took into account annual, end-of-the-year revisions in labor-force statistics, the agency lowered the November rate to 10.7 percent.

The increase, however, was well below the three-tenths percentage point rise from October to November.

John Bregger, head of the bureau's Division of Employment and Unemployment Analysis, cautioned against intrepreting December's moderate rise as indicating that unemployment overall has peaked.

He added, however, that "there are definitely indications of a flattening out here. There have been some positive developments in the manufacturing sector, for instance, which had been declining sharply in recent months."

In a statement prepared for delivery at a news conference, Janet L. Norwood, commissioner of labor statistics, said the latest figures "show some leveling off from the steady deterioration in the labor market that has occurred over the past year and a half. Factory job losses slowed, factory hours held steady and the overall unemployment rate in December was about the same as in November."

At the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes called the December rate a "technical adjustment."

He said the jobless rate was "still too high," but added the administration believes "it will come down in the next year." A new, unreleased administration economic forecast, however, envisions unemployment of at least 10 percent by the end of the year.

Speakes said that there still are no plans to propose a public service jobs program. "The first thing we are going to do," he told reporters, "is try to get the economy to continue on its recovery."

The Labor Department also reported that the number of long-term unemployed Americans, those out of work for at least six months, rose to a post-World War II record 2.6 million. The average duration of unemployment for such workers reached 18 weeks, up from 17.2 weeks in November.

Total employment was virtually unchanged last month at 99.1 million. While non-farm employment, measured by a survey of business payrolls, fell by 165,000, the bureau noted that the decline was "the smallest in more than a year."

The report said that an increase in retail-sales employment during the holiday shopping season "was less than expected."

U.S. rejects Soviet bloc proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has dismissed a Soviet bloc proposal for a non-aggression pact, but officials say they would give it serious thought if it was part of an arms control package.

Keeping a promise with the NATO allies, the administration intends to take up the proposal with them. But officials here detect no shift in Soviet policy.

"The Soviets are obligated under the U.N. charter not to attack people," said one official. "To reaffirm that while they are occupying Afghanistan and doing other bad things won't assure anyone except those already willing to look at their activities benignly."

However, he and other officials, who asked not to be identified, said a mutual renunciation of aggression by the Warsaw Pact and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization could reduce tensions if it were part of a larger agreement to reduce nuclear weapons.

"It would be seen as an atmospheric improvement," an official said.

The proposal was adopted this week by the Soviet Union and its six East European allies at a summit meeting in Prague, Czechoslovakia.

It urged NATO to join in renouncing the use of military force and to outlaw or limit arms ranging from neutron weapons to lethal chemicals.

President Reagan said at a news conference Wednesday night the proposal deserved consideration and that it would be taken up with all the West European allies.

But the State Department on Thursday said it "does not seem to represent anything new." Spokesman John Hughes said if the Soviets wanted to convince the West of peaceful intentions, they could "react very swiftly" to existing U.S. proposals.

Privately, officials called the move by the Warsaw Pact propaganda that could actually harm Western interests if it were given serious consideration.

"If we actually sat down and negotiated the document we would be suggesting there is some utility in having such an agreement," said an official.

He said the U.N. charter prohibits aggression, while the NATO countries pledged last year in Bonn, West Germany, that it would never use weapons except in response to aggression.

The Soviets first proposed a non-aggression agreement in 1958. Last year, they also promised not to use nuclear weapons first and invited the United States to join in the renunciation.

While brushing aside the non-aggression proposal, the administration is intentionally keeping open the possibility of a summit meeting between Reagan and Yuri Andropov, the Soviet leader.

Grigorenko makes predictions

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Former Soviet general Pyotr G. Grigorenko, whose book "Memoirs" offers a rare glimpse at generations of Kremlin leaders, says new Soviet chief Yuri V. Andropov probably will free some jailed dissidents soon as a gesture to the West.

Grigorenko

"But there is no doubt the repression then will be stepped up," he said. "You must understand: the new head of the government is a cop."

He has been here since 1977, when he left Moscow for medical treatment in the United States and the Soviet government stripped him of his citizenship.

"Memoirs," just published by W.W. Norton & Co., details a life crowded with history — a childhood amid the fury of revolution, a fervently communist young manhood, combat commands in World War II, post-war disillusionment, a daring personal campaign for democracy, and finally suppression.

In the early 1970s, Grigorenko was put in psychiatric prison for four years because of his protest activities. He was diagnosed as suffering from paranoia "with the presence of reformist ideas." Three American psychiatrists later found him to be mentally sound.

Grigorenko never met Andropov, who headed the KGB secret police in the 1970s. But Grigorenko's wife, Zinaida, once tangled with Andropov for an hour.

In 1972, she asked for an appointment with the KGB chief to appeal for her husband's release. When she arrived at KGB offices, she was met by a man she recognized as Andropov but who identified himself as "Yuri Andreivich Yuriev."

"He said, 'Why come to us? The doctors should handle the general's case,' " she now recalls.

"I told him, 'Both you and I know my husband is normal.' And he said, 'OK, let's talk about his future.' "

Andropov wanted to know what her husband would do if he were released, Mrs. Grigorenko said. "I told him he would probably write a history of the Second World War," a project suggested to him by author Alexander I. Solzhenitsyn.

"Oh, no, he won't!" Andropov replied, according to Mrs. Grigorenko. "History is also a kind of politics."

She described the future Communist Party general secretary as "very sly, very smooth. He tried to be nice." But her husband was not freed for another two years.

Grigorenko said he expects Andropov, who succeeded the late Leonid I. Brezhnev as party leader, to "make a show for the West" and allow prominent dissident Andrei A. Sakharov to return to Moscow from his banishment in the city of Gorky, or to free some seriously ill dissidents from prison.

"But then he will return to the old line he followed at the KGB — suppressing dissent," he said.

The exile acknowledged that the dissident movement has been hard hit by a crackdown on the "Helsinki Watch" human rights groups in Moscow and other Soviet cities.

"But the movement is changing its form," Grigorenko said. "There is now a Soviet pacifist movement, there are growing nationalist movements among minorities, and the dissident religious movements are very widespread."

His 6-foot-3 frame is now bent with age, and he trembles from Parkinson's disease, a nerve disorder. But the bald, good-humored Grigorenko remains alert, speaking in a forceful baritone.

He was interviewed through an interpreter in his simply furnished fifth-floor apartment, in a living room full of books and memorabilia, Russian icons and Tchaikovsky records. He and Zinaida, his second wife, care for his eldest son, Oleg, an invalid. Another son lives with his family nearby.

Grigorenko's "Memoirs" seeks to puncture some official myths about Kremlin leaders:

—Although Brezhnev was adulated as a World War II hero, Grigorenko, who served with him, writes that Brezhnev avoided the battlefront. "But they still depict things as if Brezhnev had himself led an attack."

—Marshal Georgi Zhukov, renowned World War II general, was poorly educated in military science, made "childish" mistakes, and was "cruel and vengeful."

Salvadoran army rounds up reinforcements

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Army patrols rounded up about 700 young men, most of them teen-agers, in a drive to reinforce armed forces that lost more than 1,000 troops in the last year of warfare against leftist guerrillas, military sources said.

The mass recruitment Thursday came as the government announced it had arrested two wealthy teen-age sisters as suspected guerrilla collaborators. Their family had claimed earlier the girls were kidnapped Wednesday by a dozen men dressed in civilian clothes and armed with M-16 rifles.

Beatriz Alcaine Herrera, 17, and her sister, Christina, 15, were arrested Wednesday "because of strong suspicions that they work as messengers" for the guerrillas, according to a Treasury Police communique.

The communique claimed the girls carried messages between Mexico City, where they live with their mother, Margarita Herrera, to leftists in El Salvador, where their grandmother lives.

According to the police, Mrs. Herrera heads a rebel political information bureau in Mexico City. She also is known to be a close friend of Salvador Samayoa, a former education minister who joined the leftist bid to topple the U.S.-backed rightist government.

The police communique gave no further information about the arrests. Under emergency regulations in force since 1981, people can be arrested without warrant and held indefinitely without trial.

Many of the youths taken in by the army in the mass drive Thursday ranged in age from 14 to 17 and came from poor rural villages and shantytowns around San Salvador and other big cities, military sources said.

The drive aims to increase government troop strength from the current 33,000 to around 43,000 to try to break the stalemate in the 3-year-old war, the sources said. The government has said 1,040 soldiers were killed in the first 10 months of 1982.

Last month, the rebels' clandestine Radio Venceremos called 1983 the year of "massive recruitment" and said the rebels also pledged to increase their numbers. The guerrillas' strength is estimated at 6,000 to 8,000 men and women.

By law, all men over 18 must serve for two years with the military, but there was no immediate explanation why boys were being taken into service.

The youths were taken to the capital's San Carlos barracks, where there were large crowds of relatives hoping to talk to military officials and plead for an exemption for their sons. Several were mothers whose sons are their only means of support.

Group suggests gallantry award

BLACKPOOL, England (AP) — Animal lovers want to give a gallantry award to a man who died trying to save his drowning dog — an attempt that claimed the lives of three police officers and nearly killed two others.

Alistair Anthony and Henry

The loss of life left police officer Brian Horsfall bitter as he carried the body of the tiny terrier named Henry from the frigid sea where it was recovered Thursday, one day after the drownings.

"This thing should be put in a bloody museum for all the damage and death it's caused," said Horsfall. The bodies of two police officers still are missing.

Henry's owner, Alistair Anthony, jumped into the water and drowned in a bid to save the animal after it was swept off Blackpool promenade in a gale.

Five officers, including a policewoman, plunged into the 20-foot waves to aid Anthony. The woman and two other officers died. One of the survivors' heart stopped and he remains gravely ill. The other was kept under sedation at a hospital for 24 hours.

U.S. probes Soviet missile reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. intelligence specialists are studying reports suggesting that Soviet troops may operate long-range SAM-5 anti-aircraft missiles likely to be installed soon in Syria.

This could create a new and dangerous crisis if the Israelis should kill Soviet soldiers in air strikes at such missile sites, the specialists believe.

The intelligence analysts, who refuse to be identified, say it does not appear likely that the Israeli air force will attempt to knock out the missile sites before they become operational.

Guatemala may get copter parts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department is ready to announce its approval of Guatemala's long-standing request for the purchase of $4 million worth of helicopter spare parts, U.S. officials say.

The announcement was expected today.

The officials, who asked not to be identified, said the administration had concluded there has been sufficient improvement in Guatemala's human rights situation to warrant approval of the transaction.

Guatemala says it needs the equipment for helicopters being used to combat leftist guerrillas.

Battle for Lebanese city continues

TRIPOLI, Lebanon (AP) — Shielded by massive artillery and rocket barrages, rival Moslem militiamen battled hand-to-hand in the seaside slums of Tripoli. The fighting exploded overnight and ran into today, claiming 16 more lives, police said.

A total of 182 people have been killed in the sporadic seven-week-old war for control of this port city, by police count. But authorities said this was the first time the fighting had been hand-to-hand.

Surinam drifting leftward

WASHINGTON (AP) — Surinam's expulsion of two American diplomats is being viewed by U.S. officials as a sign of the accelerating leftward drift of the 3-year-old military government.

The officials said the Cuban government appears to see the recent developments in Surinam as an opportunity to gain a political foothold in South America for the first time since 1973 when Chile's Marxist President, Salvador Allende, was ousted.

On Monday, Surinam ordered the expulsion of two American diplomats, Richard LaRoche and Edward Donovan, on charges of meddling in Surinam's internal affairs.

The United States rejected the charges on Wednesday as groundless and retaliated by expelling Surinamese diplomat Rudy E. Van Bochove. Like the two Americans, Von Bochove was given 14 days to return home.

Both LaRoche and Donovan had been accused by the Surinamese government last fall of instigating labor unrest in the country. The government resurrected the charges Monday when the U.S. embassy was informed of their expulsion.

Three weeks earlier, the United States had suspended a $1.5 million economic aid program for Surinam after at least 15 opponents of the Surinamese government were executed. They were accused of plotting a Christmas Day overthrow of the government.

At the time, the State Department said, "We are shocked by this brutality, and we deplore the lack of due process and violation of basic human and civil rights."

U.S. officials, asking not to be identified, said the executions wiped out much of Surinam's civilian elite, adding that the actual death toll may have exceeded 30.

Surinam, with a population estimated at between 300,000 and 350,000, is headed by Lt. Col. Desi Bouterse, who led a coup against a democratically-elected government in February 1980.

Officials speak disparagingly of Bouterse, claiming his eighth grade education has left him ill-prepared for a leadership role and that his heavy-handed rule has forced tens of thousands to flee to exile in the Netherlands, the former colonial power.

Cuba has a different view of the Surinamese revolution. A recent Radio Havana commentary cited the "growing popular support" for Bouterse's government and said the 15 anti-government "conspirators" who were executed had sought to "deliver the small country again into the hands of imperialism, the transnationals."

Three weeks ago, Cuba dispatched two high-ranking foreign ministry officials to the Surinamese capital of Paramaribo.

One official said the Cubans are assessing "what the possibilities are for coming up with a new ally. The Cubans are always looking for new allies."

However, Surinam is not regarded as a geostrategic prize. It is relatively isolated geographically and does not have close historic ties with any of its three neighbors — Brazil, Guyana and French Guiana.

Braniff workers receive no help

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Employees who worked for Braniff in Mexico say they have received no help from the government and little from their union since the airline went out of business eight months ago.

Two of the 84 employees, Carlos Garcia and Esteban Moreno, said "no one has helped us, not the union or the foreign ministry or any government office in charge of making sure these transnational companies fulfill their promises and especially, safeguard the rights of Mexican workers."

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Plastic surgeon can minimize acne scars

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have already passed my fiftieth birthday and I am still menstruating regularly. Is this true of other women? — Mrs. D.S., Washington, D.C.

Dear Mrs. S.: Dr. Lise Fortier, medical director of Planned Parenthood of Los Angeles, says that many women in their mid-50s continue to menstruate regularly.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My son has bad acne and wants to see a plastic surgeon as a skin specialist. Is this the right type of doctor to see? — Mr. A.P., Trenton

Dear Mr. A.P.: Although the primary interest of the skin specialist, called a dermatologist, is in the diagnosis and treatment of diseases of the skin, the plastic surgeon has an equally important role in the treatment of benign and malignant tumors of the skin. His skills are especially needed where large areas of skin must be removed and replaced; and where disfigurement may result from treatment of a tumor. Injuries to the skin whether thermal (burns), or from radiation, or mechanical trauma, are usually managed by the plastic surgeon. A plastic surgeon does not treat active cases of acne but may use scraping, planing, sandpapering or chemical peeling to minimize the pits and scarring in the last phases of acne. However, there are limits to the improvement that can be expected.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My mother is 82 years old, and she has arthritis and high blood pressure. She takes five pills a day. Most of the time she does okay but I'm sure there are times when she forgets to take her medicine. She lives alone but I visit her almost every day. Do you have any ideas about how I can make sure that she takes her medicine the way the doctor recommends? — Anna, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Dear Anna: The issue you raise is an important one that keeps cropping up, probably because there is no way to guarantee absolute compliance in taking medication. However, that does not mean that nothing can be done.

You might first want to talk with your mother's physician about the possibility of scheduling the medication to make it as simple as possible to take. For example, it is easier to remember to take a pill once a day than three times a day. It may also be easier to remember taking medication around specific daily events such as at mealtime.

You might also try to put a daily supply of your mother's medication in a separate container, and to prepare enough of these containers to last a week or even longer. This does away with much of the need to remember whether or not a specific pill was taken. If it is still in the container at the end of the day, obviously it was not taken.

Drug compliance can be a problem, but I've had many patients your mother's age with no problem in this area.

For Estelle, St. Petersburg, Fla.: One of the best yardsticks for the study of dependence in elderly women is their ability to use their hands. This is important since a awareness of an elderly woman's manual ability may permit intervention at an early enough stage to pevent increasing dependence and, possibly, institutionalization.

Glenn gears up for campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, has raised $200,000 and is preparing to set up a presidential campaign committee — two steps toward getting federal matching funds to run for president.

The former astronaut has not formally announced his candidacy, but Louise Swartzwalder, a Glenn press assistant, said an exploratory committee formed by the senator raised $200,000 between September and Dec. 31.

To get Federal Election Commission recognition, candidates must set up such a committee and show contributions of at least $5,000 from at least 20 states.

State police to probe shredding of papers

BOSTON (AP) — State police will investigate the shredding of papers in the patronage office of former Gov. Edward J. King's administration, according to a senior aide to the new governor.

The aide, William Geary, discovered the 2-foot-high mound of shredded documents shortly after Gov. Michael S. Dukakis succeeded King as governor Thursday.

Geary said the pile apparently included personnel records that should have gone to the state archives, King's campaign papers and blank election return sheets.

King and Dukakis, both Democrats, are long-time political rivals. Dukakis beat King in the primary election on his way to winning back the governorship. He lost the office four years ago, after being beaten by King in a primary.

It is a violation of state law to destroy original government documents without the approval of the state records conservation board, said Ann McCaughey, a spokesman for Secretary of State Michael J. Connolly's office.

Peter Agnes, head of the Office of Investigation under Dukakis, was notified and will investigate the shredding, Geary said. Agnes could not be reached for comment Thursday; telephone calls to his home were unanswered.

Most of the documents were reduced to quarter-inch strips of paper that were indecipherable. One packet of blank legislative election records remained with only shredded edges, while the red-white-and-blue letterhead of of King's re-election committee could be seen on other papers.

Also found were several pieces of paper with a state letterhead, Geary said.

Surrounding the pile were 24 boxes of intact personnel folders, covering King appointments to government boards and commissions and full-time posts in his administration.

A Capitol police guard was posted outside the office door when an argument broke out over whether King or Dukakis controlled the unshredded documents.

On a desk in the appointment office was a note from King appointments chief Phil Aube to Nick Metropolis, who will head the office for Dukakis.

"Sorry for the mess. We have been very busy. Good luck, have a lot of fun," the note said.

Aube could not be reached for comment Thursday; telephone calls to his home were unanswered.

King left Thursday for a vacation in Bal Harbor, Fla., Lyons said.

Attempts to reach King for comment were unsuccessful. The phone number for Richard Theissen, a friend King was to visit, was not listed in the Bal Harbor directory.

Elizabeth Dole wants to see more women in Cabinet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Elizabeth Dole, expected to become the Reagan administration's first woman to head a Cabinet agency, says she would like to see the president appoint another woman to the Cabinet if an opening occurs.

"I would hope that we have another woman in the cabinet soon and certainly I would be urging that," she remarked during a conversation with a small group of reporters Thursday in her White House office.

The office was bedecked with flowers and a large balloon with a miniature gondola containing a bottle of champagne. The gifts were sent from well-wishers congratulating her on her nomination as the first woman to head the Transportation Department.

President Reagan on Wednesday named Mrs. Dole, who is a presidential assistant, as his choice to replace Drew Lewis as transportation secretary next month.

Mrs. Dole emphasized she knew of no plans by the president to make another Cabinet change, but said her views that she would like to see another woman Cabinet officer reflect a belief that more women should be working at all levels of government.

U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick has Cabinet rank, but her base is in New York and has little visibility in Washington.

Mrs. Dole declined to answer questions about transportation issues, saying she first wanted to present her views to the Senate in confirmation hearings.

Mrs. Dole said she knew for some time she was among the front-runners to replace Lewis, who announced last week he would leave the administration to head a major cable television company. But she said she was informed of her selection during a meeting with Reagan only Wednesday.

"It was not a long conversation," she said, explaining that she immediately accepted.

No date has been set for the confirmation hearing, but Mrs. Dole, wife of Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., is expected to gain easy approval.

'Juan' placed in county's custody

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A mute boy who lived at Los Angeles International Airport has been placed in the custody of county welfare officials who will try to find him a home, police say.

The teen-ager, dubbed Juan by a custodian who befriended and looked after him at the airport, supported himself through the kindness of strangers and the 25-cent deposits he could get by returning baggage carts.

The boy's real name and origins are not known. He is about 16, authorities estimate.

Police, who have seen him intermittently at the airport for two years, picked up Juan earlier this week at the request of the county Department of Public Social Services and placed him in a home for neglected children.

"What we arrested him for is to take him into custody for his benefit to try to help him find a home and food and shelter," Detective David Bennett said.

County welfare spokeswoman Mary Hayes said the youth was taken into protective custody under juvenile code regulations. She said he might have some family that will come forward.

Last year, Wally Recio, a San Diego jail chaplain, took Juan home with him for several months after finding him on a San Diego street.

Recio has said he would like custody of Juan but said he would not force the boy because he might keep returning to the airport.

"He is fascinated by the airplanes," Recio said.

The chaplain flew to Los Angeles on Wednesday to see Juan after hearing about him on the news, but police got there first.

The boy had been with Recio for about six months before he disappeared in August. Recio's formal guardian status ended when San Diego authorities dropped Juan's case after he disappeared.

He says Juan attended a special school for the learning disabled in San Diego and was just beginning to learn speech when he disappeared.

Recio said he was able to communicate with Juan briefly earlier this week.

"We have our own way of talking," he said.

"I felt bad because he was so skinny," Recio said. "He looks so weak. We have pictures of how nice he was before."

He said he did not know what the boy would want to do.

State Highway Department workers delicately dig around the remains of a human skeleton believed to be 9,000 years old. If confirmed by carbon-14 dating, it would be one of the oldest skeletons ever unearthed in North America. The burial site was unearthed recently near Austin.

Highway workers unearth skeleton which may be 9,000 years old

AUSTIN (AP) — Highway construction crews have stumbled across a human skeleton at least 9,000 years old, one of the oldest ever found in North America, the state archeologist says.

The discovery of the ancient burial site, 18 miles north of the capital, halted construction of a new freeway to give experts time to excavate. Besides the skeleton, which has not been completely dug up, workers have found more than 100 arrowheads.

Workers at the site, near Leander, Texas, jokingly dubbed the skeleton the "Leanderthal Man." It was not known immediately whether the remains were of a man or woman.

State archeologist Robert Mallouf called the excavation "one of the three or four oldest intact grave sites in North America." He said the oldest find was a skeleton dug up in Washington state and said to be 13,000 years old. Some experts have disputed its age.

"One reason this site is so important is it has so much cultural information about some of the least known prehistoric periods in North American archeology," Mallouf said Wednesday.

The skeleton was found at a depth of 12 feet, lying on its side in a typical ancient grave posture, said James McCarver of the state highway department.

The department has its own archeology section to handle such finds, and director Dr. Frank Weir said he is certain the skeletal remains are older than 9,000 years, dating back to 7000 B.C.

A more exact date is expected after radiocarbon tests, which should take about a month.

Dr. Dave Dibble, director of the Texas Archeological Survey at the University of Texas at Austin, has called the site "the best Plainview site in the Western Hemisphere." Plainview is the term archeologists give to prehistoric artifacts of a certain type, generally among the oldest in North America.

McCarver, a graduate student in anthropology, said it was during the period when man changed from a hunter to a vegetable-gatherer.

"This site is very important. Most sites give you a fragment of information — a page out of a novel. This one has the whole novel," he said.

Workers were able to unearth most of the skull Wednesday and hoped to complete the dig before the weekend, when rain that could flood the site is forecast, McCarver said.

No other skeletons have been found nearby. The burial could have been the result of a death during a migration, and if so, it could be the only one at the site, McCarver said.

Navy personnel have bad voting record

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Navy men and women have an "atrocious" voting record and should make their views known at the polls if they are concerned about pay and benefits, says the Navy's top enlisted man.

Master Chief of the Navy Billy C. Sanders, visiting southeast Virginia military installations, estimated that no more than 20 percent of the Navy's 540,000 members vote in elections.

"And that may be a high estimate," he said. "Our voting record is atrocious."

In contrast, 53.9 percent of voting-age adults cast ballots in the 1980 presidential election.

Sanders said earlier this week he was emphasizing voting because there have been "some big cuts in Navy military personnel money."

"We didn't take any cuts in ships, airplanes or typewriters. We took it right in personnel money," he said.

About $145 million was sliced from the Navy's personnel portion of the defense budget, he said. As a result, thousands of Navy promotions will be delayed.

Doctors successfully rebuild hearts of two newborns

BOSTON (AP) — Doctors have rebuilt the hearts of two babies born without a left ventricle, the main pumping chamber, and say the technique can save the lives of other newborns with the until-now fatal birth defect.

The condition is the fourth most common cardiac defect and afflicts about 8 percent of all children born with malformed hearts. During a recent 10-year period in New England alone, 223 babies had the condition, which usually leads to death within weeks.

"The death of such a neonate (newborn) is particularly poignant since most are well-developed babies with normal birth weights," and they rarely have other birth defects, the doctors wrote.

The surgery was conducted at Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston by Dr. William I. Norwood. The operation has been done twice, and both patients are doing well.

Norwood and Drs. Peter Lang, a cardiologist, and Dolly D. Hansen, an anesthesiologist, reported on their first attempt at the new surgery in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

"I doubt that he's going to become an Olympic sprinting champion," Norwood said of the first child, a boy, now 2 years old. "On the other hand, to be able to live an active healthy life — running around in the backyard, going to school and becoming a lawyer or physician or whatever — is distinctly possible."

The normal human heart has four chambers. Blood flows from the body into the right atrium and then into the right ventricle, where it is pumped to the lungs. The blood receives oxygen in the lungs and flows back to the left atrium. Finally it moves into the left ventricle, and this powerful, muscular chamber pushes the blood into the aorta, the main artery that sends it on to the rest of the body.

Financially secure woman living with welfare mother

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (AP) — A financially comfortable woman moving into a low-income housing project says she's not "kooky" or "exploitive" — she's just looking for a master's thesis topic.

Sylvia Kay Ambaruch, 47, of Owego, N.Y., on Thursday night began a "pay to be poor" visit to the Florence Heights housing project.

She is paying $250 to stay a week with Ramona Diaz, a 42-year-old welfare mother who lives with her seven children in a four-bedroom apartment in the 50-unit complex, according to Bennie Johnson, who organized the house-guest program. Mrs. Ambaruch is the program's first participant.

"Reporters are asking me if I'm some kind of kooky, rich housewife or someone just trying to cash in on poverty. I'm just searching for a topic for my master's thesis," Mrs. Ambaruch said. She is seeking a master's degree in sociology from the state University of New York at Binghamton.

While she was getting ready to move in Thursday, 15 Florence Heights residents called a news conference to accuse Johnson of "commercializing poverty."

"No one says anything when the rich get richer — why should they complain when the people who really need it get a share," responded Johnson, who moved here five months ago from New York City.

George O'Brien, director of the Northampton Housing Authority, which runs the 30-year-old apartment complex, said he was awaiting word from federal authorities on whether the house guest plan violated the tenants' leases.

Otherwise, the Housing Authority has not interfered, and O'Brien has steadfastly offered "no comment" on the program.

"I've become the story, and I can't understand why," said Mrs. Ambaruch before leaving home.

'Showboat' launched without star O'Connor who's landed in hospital

CHICAGO (AP) — When "Showboat" launched a three-week run here this week, star Donald O'Connor wasn't aboard.

As the curtain went up Tuesday at the Arie Crown Theatre, O'Connor, 57, was in Michael Reese Hospital recovering from an emergency appendectomy with complications. He was listed in fair condition Thursday, but no release date had been set.

O'Connor, a Chicago native, starred in "Singing in the Rain," the 1952 musical featuring Gene Kelly and Debbie Reynolds. He made his Broadway debut in 1980 in "Bring Back Birdie," and came back the next season in "Say Hello to Harvey."

Understudy Richard Dix, who had a major role in the movie "Black Marble," is substituting for O'Connor until his return.

BANDON, Ireland (AP) — Actress Maureen O'Hara, who has been living in scenic West Cork for the last three years, has settled a property dispute with a local farmer.

Miss O'Hara, 61, received 750 Irish pounds ($975) for costs but got no damages in the out-of-court agreement, according to Cornelius O'Donoghue, the farmer.

O'Donoghue said Miss O'Hara's company, Atlas Trading of Dublin, agreed to erect a fence which he claimed had been knocked down.

Miss O'Hara, who was born in Ireland, claimed O'Donoghue had broken terms of a lease by cutting down some trees and excavating the side of a road leading to a house on her property in Glengarriff, a scenic area in the remote, lake-studded county.

Doctor says poor day-care hygiene spreads illness to children, parents

CHICAGO (AP) — Sloppy hygiene in day-care centers is spreading intestinal diseases to children and their parents, and demonstrates a need "to go back to the basics of sanitation," a doctor says.

Dr. Stanley H. Schuman, whose findings appear in an article in today's edition of the Journal of the American Medical Association, said day-care attendance is a common thread to an outbreak of intestinal infections "reminiscent of the presanitation days of the 17th century."

"We are entering an era of unexplained diarrhea and dysentery in many children and their parents in the United States," Schuman said in a telephone interview, adding that the problem is too widespread to be solved by case-by-case treatment and diagnosis.

"We don't have enough vaccine to prevent the spread of infections in day-care facilities," he said. "That requires a re-awakening of the consciousness of sanitation in day-care centers ... We have to go back to the basics of sanitation."

Schuman, a professor at the Medical University of South Carolina in Charleston, S.C., cited several factors believed to contribute to the problem:

—Day-care workers "develop a casual, tolerant attitude toward frequent lapses in sanitary routines," even those as simple as washing hands.

—Public health officials "tend to accept little clear-cut responsibility for day-care operations," with regulations varying among states or inadequate money for enforcement of the rules.

—Day-care proprietors sometimes lack training in food-handling.

—Children enter and leave the centers in an erratic pattern, "ensuring maximum mixing of infected and susceptible" children.

—Children under 6 sometimes carry infections that they transmit to their parents without showing any symptoms themselves.

According to figures released by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, 7 million children were in day-care centers outside of their home in 1981.

Burglars ram through doors

HOUSTON (AP) — Burglars rammed through the back doors of a jewelry store with a heavy-duty pickup, then stole between $300,000 and $700,000 in loose stones, the shop's owner says.

Paul Nacol said Southwestern Securities Systems employees told him silent alarms were triggered shortly after 2 a.m. Thursday and Houston police were notified.

Lesson from the past

There is a need for deregulation of natural gas prices, but that deregulation may not come during the current session of Congress. It didn't come last session and more than a few local industry representatives are thankful of that fact.

If the deregulation issue is raised this session, a lot of industry representatives will be expecting the worst — a "worst" that could mean enactment of a windfall profits-style tax on natural gas. That's a likely response because a number of congressmen from northern states have been receiving plenty of "free heat" from their constituents via the U.S. Postal Service.

There is not total agreement within the industry that deregulation would be best. Some feel deregulation would bring about a better balance in the pricing of natural gas; others feel deregulation would hurt the industry.

"I don't think this Congress is going to deregulate unless they put some additional taxes on the industry," says Ed Thompson, executive vice-president of Midland's Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

Thompson's probably right. There is a mood in the Congress to bottle up the natural gas industry just as the government did the oil industry several years back. But we have now seen deregulation has helped — not hurt — the domestic oil industry and consumers.

Deregulation also would benefit consumers of natural gas in the long run. Contrary to what anti-business advocates believe, regulation of natural gas prices does not make prices go down; it just keeps them down artificially and stifles production, thus pushing prices upward.

Let's apply what we've learned in the oil business to the natural gas situation: A free market benefits both industry and consumers. The members of Congress should think long and hard about the detrimental effects to the already hard-pressed economy before enacting another production-stifling tax. In the final analysis, the consumers would be the losers.

Korean human rights

The Reagan administration's policy of exerting quiet pressure for human rights has paid off in at least one case. Kim Dae-jung, a Korean dissident politician sentenced to death in 1980, has been permitted to leave prison and come to the United States.

Kim was convicted of sedition by a military tribunal following demonstrations protesting the dictatorship of President Chun Doo Hwan. Behind-the-scenes lobbying from the United States was believed responsible first for the commutation of his death sentence to 20 years imprisonment and then for Kim's release.

The U.S. effort did not stop Kim from criticizing America's role in South Korea. In Washington, Kim said: "America has helped dictatorial regimes in the name of anti-communism, security and economic rehabilitation. But in so many of these countries, like South Korea, democratic forces are still of minority weight and are pressed from both sides, by the communists on one side and on the other by the fascist power elites supported by the United States. We feel sad and betrayed by this."

That sadness and betrayal should be diminished by Kim's release and by his outspoken comments here. In exile, Kim can speak out in safety and give South Korea a much-needed opposition perspective.

America is caught in a dilemma with its Korean ally. Communist troops are poised on the border, ready to exploit any internal strife as an excuse for invasion. But Korean dictatorship, while preserving military strength, is eroding the support of the people. A financial scandal involving members of the president's family has rocked the country. The Christian church is in opposition to the dictatorship. Dissident forces will build up in the pressure cooker of Korean society unless democracy is allowed to harness these energies for the good of all.

Kim's release is a small but significant step in that direction.

Another View:

Washington's advice

All the loudly and often bitterly criticized federal "spending cuts" of recent months are not pruning deficits, leading toward a balanced budget or cutting the national debt.

Projected deficits are in the $200 billion to $300 billion range for the next few fiscal years. The debt exceeds $1 trillion and is rising. Yearly interest on the debt is more than $100 billion — which is more than the entire federal budget for 1961.

George Washington warned against excessive public debt in his much-neglected Farewell Address. The first president's admonition, as summarized by Professor John Bowling of Troy State University:

"There is no excuse for going into debt in peacetime; wartime debts may be unavoidable, but must be paid off as quickly as possible.

"Timely disbursements to prepare for a danger may avoid the much greater expense for repelling an attack.

"Carefully avoid, however, all unnecessary government expenditures. You can do this much more easily if you bear in mind that for every expenditure there must be an equivalent tax, and if you approve the necessary taxes at the same time that you approve the expenditure of the policy, then it follows that you should pay consequent taxes willingly and honestly."

Red-ink spending is a shift that only postpones the day of reckoning. Americans are paying for it with inflation, stagnation, unemployment and consequent social and psychological pressures that produce large scale mental illness, crime, violence, suicide, corruption and other evils.

These are among the ills that multiply under a reign of fiscal irresponsibility, observed the economist Wilhelm von Roepke, one of the architects of West Germany's post-World War II "economic miracle."

What can be done to trim the federal budget, whose mushrooming growth is the source of these troubles?

Government must be made cost-effective by pruning all federal programs to eliminate the unessential and redundant, including those in the defense department.

Congress must reduce the growth of "entitlements" — the income redistributing programs which compromise most of the federal budget. This does not mean that aid and pension programs should stop. It means they should be administered with fair play and better sense.

Citizens can spur the needed congressional impulse by putting heat on representatives and senators through telephone calls and letters.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Rostenkowski facing SocSec skirmishes

WASHINGTON — Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., wears power like the infantry helmet he wore in Korea — and he's soon going to need all the protection he can get.

Jack Anderson

As chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, the big man from Chicago is responsible for legislation to keep Social Security solvent. He'll be the target of potshots from all sides — congressional colleagues, the White House and the public. Even a Solomon couldn't please everybody on this one, and nobody has ever accused Rostenkowski of being a Solomon.

If the prospect of impending battle daunts him, he didn't show it during a recent meeting with aides in his office a few steps from the House floor. Knowing that many, perhaps most, of his colleagues consider it the better part of political valor to avoid either tax hikes or benefit cuts, Rostenkowski realizes he's not going to be popular when he proposes one solution or the other — perhaps both. But he also recognizes necessity when it confronts him.

"I'm going to deal with this even if it means standing alone and being an S.O.B.," he said, jabbing a finger in the air for emphasis.

He is now in demand for political appearances. But he observed that once he tackles the Social Security mess, he'll be about as popular as Typhoid Mary.

Rostenkowski has already had a brief skirmish with the White House. On a reconnaissance mission down Pennsylvania Avenue a few weeks ago, he had breakfast with James Baker, the president's chief of staff.

Baker, still smarting from the November election results, accused the Democrats of irresponsibly politicizing Social Security during the campaign. Baloney, Rostenkowski responded (or something to that effect). The painful truth was that President Reagan's vaunted safety net had developed gaping holes — and the voters had simply caught onto it, he said.

Rostenkowski will also have to deal with another powerful committee chairman, Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla. The 82-year-old Rules Committee boss is the foremost congressional champion of the elderly, and can be expected to bottle up any Social Security reform bill that tampers with their benefits.

The gravity of the problem is emphasized in a report prepared for the Senate Budget Committee by the Congressional Research Service. My associate Michael Binstein has seen a draft of the report.

"The public ... seems to have lost a significant degree of confidence that the system will survive over the long haul," the report warns, "and it is not likely that recurring 'minimal measures' to restore financial soundness will remove these doubts."

With startling frankness, the report suggests that if the public really understood how Social Security is funded, it might well consider it "as a sort of 'Ponzi game' in which the cost of meeting today's benefit obligations is borne not by the recipients of those benefits but by today's workers — a sort of passing the buck to future generations."

The unflattering reference, of course, is to Charlie Ponzi, a con man who, in 1920, paid "dividends" to investors out of money he got from new investors instead of earnings — precisely the way Social Security operates, as the Senate report admits.

PENTAGON PIPELINE: One reason the Air Force keeps throwing billions into its much-criticized Maverick anti-tank missile may be that old Pentagon institution — the "revolving door" that leads former Defense Department employees to lucrative jobs with contractors whose weapons they worked on for the government. Hughes Aircraft of Tucson, Ariz., which makes the Maverick, has hired three ex-Air Force employees who dealt with the controversial missile at the Pentagon: Ronald Decosmo, now a project engineer at Hughes, Wayne Mattson, a senior staff engineer, and Lochlan Macleay, assistant manager of programs.

— The Armed Forces Professional Entertainment Program, which arranges performances for American troops overseas, has been caught with its male chauvinism showing. A new brochure contains several pictures of pretty women, and demands: "Touring groups must include at least one female." The brochure explains that servicemen "welcome the opportunity to talk with young people their own age (especially the girls!) ..." A Pentagon official confessed that the brochure was "embarrassing." The people who edited it have been reassigned to Korea.

ISRAELI MISCHIEF: In a cocky bit of bear-baiting, the Israelis deliberately bombed the Soviet Embassy compound in West Beirut at least twice during the siege and raided the place when they took over the city, according to intelligence sources.

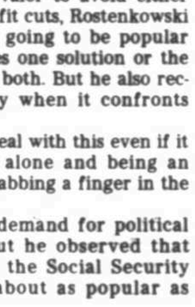

Israeli officers secretly boasted of their feat to U.S. liaison officers. The Israelis explained that they knew the Soviets were powerless to intervene in Lebanon, and figured a good way to demonstrate this to the world was to deliver a calculated military insult. Sure enough, all the Soviets did was splutter at the "outrages," showing friend and foe alike just how helpless they were.

INSIDE REPORT:

Hussein racked by Middle East nightmare

WASHINGTON — When King Hussein's top diplomats handed Secretary of State George Shultz a multi-colored map depicting Israel's absorption of the West Bank by 1985 with 70 new settlements, the king's unspoken message was clear: today Lebanon, tomorrow the West Bank, and then Jordan.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

So apocalyptic a view of an Israelized Middle East has no standing in the office of George Shultz, the well-intentioned agent of Ronald Reagan's laudable Sept. 1 peace plan. To the contrary, the trusting secretary of state says privately that Israel would never continue its rejection of Reagan's plan or its takeover of the West Bank if Jordan accepted the plan as a negotiating formula.

Whether the map with the 70 new settlements announced, or said to be planned since Sept. 1, ever got to Reagan (as Hussein hoped) is not known, but this much is certain one week after the king's indecisive visit here: He will not be enticed into peace talks with Israel by soothing words. It will take hard evidence that the U.S. will not leave him swinging in the wind, scorned by Arab neighbors and deserted by the U.S., in fruitless talks with Israel.

Too little was said to the king in his two Oval Office visits to bring much comfort on that score. To the contrary, Hussein left Washington struck by the administration's naivete in its dealings with Israel and the contrast between that naivete and the cold realism that motivates Hussein and other Arabs in their attempts to deal with Israeli statecraft.

Hussein remains convinced that just as the good intentions of George Shultz were unable to bring about the removal of Israeli troops from Lebanon by the end of 1982, as Shultz proclaimed, so will they fall short of ending Israeli colonization of the West Bank without direct American pressure.

But realist Hussein glimpses darker nightmares. If he is induced to talk directly with Israel and Israel thereby ends its rejection of the Reagan peace plan, Hussein's subsequent failure to end the West Bank takeover would doom him in Jordan. That's because about one-half of the population of Jordan is Palestinian, highly susceptible to what happens in the Palestinian homeland.

Hussein believes that this is precisely what Israel has in store for him: Annex the West Bank; use the threats of guerrilla actions against Israel by Palestinians living in Jordan as a pretext for Israeli "peace-keeping" missions into Jordan; topple Hussein and create a "Palestinian state" in his kingdom.

Beyond that alleged Israeli objective, Hussein and most of his fellow leaders in the pro-American Arab camp see another target, explained to us by a high Arab official as the "destabilization" of Saudi Arabia, Jordan's neighbor. Israel regularly overflies Saudi Arabia (a hostile act never complained of because the Saudis cannot stop it). But there is no common Israeli-Saudi border. Hussein believes Israel covets an unofficial "border" with the Saudis. Converting Jordan into a "Palestinian state" under indirect Israeli control would effectively move Israeli military power into the present Jordanian-Saudi border area.

How much of his nightmare Hussein actually spelled out for Ronald Reagan is a secret between the two. The nightmare, however, is not in the king's imagination but a product of his acute observation of Israeli statecraft for a third of a century. Hussein wants to negotiate West Bank peace with Israel on the basis of Reagan's plan, but not until he sees what high cards the U.S. will play against Israel's rush to annex — if, indeed, Uncle Sam has any high cards to play.

CHARLEY REESE

Friendly nations have same enemies

When I was of an age to be called a "snot-nosed kid" by grumpy detectives on the cop beat, it chanced that I interviewed a visiting Turkish colonel on one of those State Department sponsored junkets.

Charley Reese

With all the naivete of a veteran foreign service officer, I asked the colonel if Turkey and America would always be friends. The colonel, who looked as villainous as any Hollywood stereotype of a Terrible Turk, nailed me to the chair with a cold stare.

"Turkey and the United States are not friends," he said without a smile. "We have the same enemy."

Unlike most of our presidents who continue to prattle on about friendship between nations, I have never forgotten the lesson of the Turkish colonel. After all, he was only saying what George Washington said when he was president. The sage of the Potomac said that you can trust another nation no farther than its own selfish interests.

Washington and the Turk are right. Nations are not friends; they sometimes have the same enemy. We had no sooner finished alienating all of Latin America by supporting the British in the Falklands War before the British were raising the roof and villifying us for President Reagan's short-lived sanctions on the gas pipeline deal. The British have a long history of manipulating us one minute and ridiculing us the next.

Our dear NATO allies spent most of the Vietnam War sheltering draft dodgers and condemning us. In 1973 when we decided to re-supply the Israeli army, the Europeans would not let us fly over their airspace, much less use an airport for refueling. Chances are we built the airports.

While the Japanese have learned to build durable cars and to smile on television, they remain a xenophobic race and would switch sides in the East-West conflict in two seconds if seemed expedient. As much as I love Israel, I'm the first to tell you don't get between an Israeli and Israel's security or you'll get run over.

I don't have any problem with any nation looking out for its own interests. It seems logical to do that. What I don't understand is why so many of our politicians think it is an absolute sin to worry about the United States.

We have become Uncle Sucker instead of Uncle Sam. We pay for European and Japanese defense and they use the savings to wage economic war against us. When they get in trouble, we help; when we get in trouble, they laugh.

I'm not voting for anybody, regardless of party or alleged philosophy, who is more interested in not starting a trade war than in protecting American workers. I'm not voting for anybody who is in favor of internationalism, globalism, interdependence, or any of the other code-words for political altruism. If I can't find an American politician interested in America, I'll just stay home and clean my rifle.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Jan. 7, the seventh day of 1983. There are 358 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 7, 1953, President Harry Truman announced that the United States had developed a hydrogen bomb.

On this date:

In 1789, the first U.S. presidential election was held.

In 1927, radio-telephone service was opened between New York and London.

In 1979, the Cambodian government of Pol Pot fell to Vietnamese-backed rebels.

Ten years ago: Police killed a sniper atop a New Orleans motor lodge after the killing of six people and wounding of 12.

Five years ago: Returning from a trip to Europe, the Middle East and India, President Jimmy Carter said he favored a referendum on the future for Palestinians living in the Israeli-occupied Gaza strip and West Bank — a referendum that did not include the choice of independence.

One year ago: President Reagan announced he had decided to continue registration of young men for a possible military draft.

Today's birthday: Cartoonist Charles Addams is 71.

Thought for today: "People generally quarrel because they can not argue." — Gilbert Chesterton, British writer (1874-1936).

With lunar eclipse Nature provides 'really big show'

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — The best things in life are free...or so the songsmiths assure us. And sometimes they're right.

The total eclipse of the moon in the last week of the old year was more stunning and satisfying than any movie I have seen in the past five years. Nature managed to pull off her brilliant dramatics without resorting to gutter language or full frontal nudity.

It was worth getting up at 4:30 in the frosty predawn to watch. Under a full moon, which is required for a total lunar eclipse, the lawn glowed as brightly as Abou Ben Adhem's bedroom just before the Recording Angel made his appearance. The skeleton tree branches in the windless night took on the appearance of an old Japanese print. Nature imitating art again. Diamond flecks of frost glittered in the stubble of the decadent garden.

The temperature hovered in the low 20s. For the moon watch I had set up my Ice Station Zebra with a wooden rocking chair, a mohair blanket, a thermos of steaming coffee, a rug for my feet and a notebook and ballpoint pen (which soon coagulated and refused to record the phenomenon) at a picnic table on the porch, or the deck as it is called here in Connecticut.

None of my neighbors seemed aware of the big show about to begin in that star-studded sky. There were no lights on in any of the houses for as far as I could see in any direction along our road, which suddenly seemed to have been paved with old pewter. A fat skunk carrying his own highway stripe padded softly across the lawn and disappeared in the hedges behind the woodpile, leaving the world to eerie brightness and to me. Not that the brightness lasted long.

AT 4:48 A.M., the Earth's shadow nibbled a tiny cookie bite out of that luminous orb hanging halfway down the sky on the western horizon. Far overhead in the clear, cloudless night a passing jet winked back at the stars, and a distant dog began to whimper. No early birds twittered or stirred. In my limited experience in exurbia, the early bird is a greatly overrated incentive to character building. The earliest any of them seem to be up and doing around here is somewhere around 8 a.m., with the rapacious bluejay first on line for breakfast at our bird feeder. Sometimes our wily squirrel family, born thieves all, empties the larder an hour before the first feathered freeloader gets off his roost or perch or wherever they spend the night. Unless, of course, the raccoons have pulled off another night heist and beaten the squirrels to the booty.

The next gala moon show won't take place until 1989, so I didn't want to miss a minute of this one.

A few more dogs down the road somewhere commenced to whine, not really howl, but more like a banshee wail, as the disc of Earth's shadow moved from left to right across the face of that wonderfully bright moon. It was as if someone was drawing a Mardi Gras mask across the man in the moon's face, producing the half black and white harlequin effect so popular in theatrical dance masks and ceramic wall ornaments.

According to my frozen notes, which are mere indented lines in a yellow legal pad from that inkless pen, it took about 28 minutes for the Earth to block out half of the moon's face.

By now, if we were in Vietnam back in the old days, ARVN troops would be firing tracer rounds into the increasingly darkening sky, trying to keep the sun dragon from swallowing the moon. I remember one full lunar eclipse over Saigon in the middle '60s late in January or early February during the weeklong celebration of Tet, the Vietnamese new year. Vietnamese infantry units on perimeter guard around Ton San Nhut airport hemstitched the night with an incredible display of neon embroidery from automatic weapons loaded with tracer rounds. The Air Force joined the show, dropping million candle power flares and trying to assault the sun dragon with sorties from "Puff the Magic Dragon," a lumbering cargo plane fitted out with a rotating barrel Gatling-type gun that fired rockets. If that many rounds had been expended in the vicinity of the airport a few years later, Saigon might not have fallen to the North Vietnamese.

EVEN IN THE last fraction of an arc from the disappearing full moon, the Earth and my acre of it reflected the sheen of old Victorian silver.

On such a night as this, you expect E.T. to come strolling across the lawn, moonstruck for the old neighborhood.

On such a night as this, Lorenzo speaks of love and harmony to his beloved Jessica in Shakespeare's "The Merchant of Venice":

"How sweet the moonlight sleeps upon this bank!

Here will we sit and let the sounds of music

Creep in our ears: soft stillness and the night

Become the touches of sweet harmony."

ON SUCH A night as this scientists with their telescopes and light refraction devices are probing the darkening sky for further evidence of the sweet harmony of creation. It was during a solar eclipse that Albert Einstein tested and proved an important theory about the effect of gravitation on light. It was during an eclipse of one of Jupiter's moons that the Danish astronomer Olaus Roemer discovered the approximate speed of light.

Some observers next morning professed to be disappointed because the moon did not turn blood red or the color of burnished copper before doing her final copout. I was not disappointed, because I believe such special effects belong more to Hollywood than our planetary system. Many times, while crossing the ocean on ships, I have stood at the rail at sunset watching for the sun to set off those promised green gases just before it plunges into the ocean, but have rarely been rewarded with even a faint flush of turquoise.

The flash of emerald happened only once when I was around, which doesn't keep me from returning to the sun deck evening after evening. Like a recalcitrant circus animal, nature might not always perform as expected, but her free shows never fail to satisfy and I'm making my reservations now for the next sky watch biggie in 1989.

Here's looking at you, Mr. Moon.

Wild party costs drunk fisherman $12,000

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Fisherman Henry Matson had a wild night on the town, buying drinks for the house and giving $100 bills to dancing ladies. But the morning after was a sobering experience, when he learned the bash cost him more than $12,000.

The Great Alaskan Bush Co., the party's host, says Matson ran up and paid a $12,000 tab. Matson says he doesn't remember spending that kind of money — or much else about the evening.

So the Port Heiden fisherman sued the Bush Company to get his money back. A judge ruled in his favor, but the order was overturned.

As Matson remembers that eventful night in July 1981, he asked owner Edna Cox to cash a $12,579.64 check made out to him.

Ms. Cox agreed, Matson said, and offered to let him run up a tab against the check until the banks opened in the morning.

The next day, Matson said, he woke up in a hotel, his pockets empty and his head aching, but his room paid for. He says he called the Bush Co. and was told he didn't have any money coming, that he had spent it all.

"It didn't seem reasonable," said Matson.

But Ms. Cox disagreed. She said Matson cashed the check to pay his tab, and took the balance in $100 bills.

Ms. Cox said Matson spent the money "buying all the patrons in the club drinks, paying numerous girls for table dances, handing girls in the club $100 bills, insisting on having seven to nine girls sitting at the table with him."

In November, the Anchorage Superior Court ordered Ms. Cox to pay Matson the face amount of the check minus $500, plus interest and attorney's fees. It was a default judgment, issued because Ms. Cox failed to show up for the hearing.

But earlier this week, Presiding Judge Mark Rowland overturned the order, saying court papers hadn't been properly served on Ms. Cox. He gave her 10 days to respond.

Late retirees live longer, study says

WASHINGTON (AP) — According to a Social Security study, men who continue to work after reaching age 62 tend to live longer than those who take early retirement.

Analysts said their study was based on records of 64,382 non-disabled workers who became eligible for Social Security between 1962 and 1972.

Among men who filed for early retirement benefits when they turned 62 in 1962, 81 percent were alive six years later, compared with 86 percent of their peers who did not retire early.

Iditarod race sparks Alaskans sense of adventure

EDITOR'S NOTE: It's not much of a spectator sport except for uncommonly hardy souls, but for Alaskans the annual Iditarod dog sled race is like the Super Bowl or the World Series. What's behind the spell? Here's a report on a new book that probes the mystique of challenging the elements.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — For three weeks each winter, Alaska's populace seems divided into two kinds of people: Dog mushers and those who wish they were.

In the small group of mushers, a few dozen of the finest captivate the entire state as they race more than 1,000 miles over some of Alaska's most forbidding terrain and through some of its worst weather.

It's the annual Iditarod Sled Dog Race from Anchorage to Nome, coming up again in March. What's the secret of Iditarod's grip on the 49th state?

WRITER TOM Jones in a recent book explains the allure and traces Iditarod's history.

"Memories of the frontier period in the rest of the country have faded into books and museums and park dedications," he writes in his "The Last Great Race." But in Alaska, he says, "some of the people who pushed to the edge of that frontier still live.

"The Iditarod rekindles the light of adventure that's in all Alaskans while keeping us in touch with history. And the men and women who run it are some of the modern heroes of Alaska."

One of the most knowledgeable Iditarod writers around, Jones weaves much of that history into his narrative of the 1979 race, describes virtually every foot of the trail and captures the character and culture of the various checkpoints along the way.

With a reporter's eye for detail (he worked on newspapers and magazines), he conveys the stark splendor of the country and the competition, without falling into lyrical excess as others writing about the Iditarod have been known to do. The adjective "grueling," more overworked than mushers or dogs, doesn't once occur in his book.

The mushers' own chronic reticence discourages superlatives.

"FOR THE MOST part, mushers are solitary persons more at home on the lonely trail than they can ever be even in small groups of strangers, and the crowds make many of them at least as nervous as they make the dogs," Jones notes.

But he offers insights into what makes a musher.

"I just wanted to go somewhere, move to Alaska," May recalls. "There's always a reason why you can't. All of a sudden one day the reasons went away. Took me about two weeks to get rid of everything I owned. I either gave it away, sold it or burned it."

The sport and the race naturally attract people like that, as they attract trappers, bush pilots, miners and other rugged residents who use dogs for work as well as play. But as Jones notes, the Iditarod field also includes lawyers, real estate developers, and electronics technicians, with a millionaire or two thrown in.

"AS FAR AS food and health care go, the dogs fare much better than the mushers," Jones says, and his book provides ample documentation.

In the early races, as many as 30 dogs died, but in recent years, through careful medical checkups, the mortality has dropped to less than 1 percent.

"In any population of 800 dogs, whether they're running the Iditarod Trail or chained to a dog lot or living in an apartment in New York, five or so could be expected to die during a given month, and that's all that would die by the end of this race," Jones writes.

"The dogs are tougher than the men," says Dick Mackey, who edged Rick Swenson by the length of a dog's muzzle to win the 1978 race. "You can't drive a dog to death; it'll quit first. And the man will probably quit before the dog."

Jones' book includes a primer on terminology, team compositions, dog genealogy, and diets as well as a detailed description of the sleds. It enhances appreciation for how difficult the whole endeavor is.

AMAZINGLY ENOUGH, there hasn't been a musher fatality yet during the race, although there have been numerous injuries and some close calls. Most racers and observers think someone will die on the trail sooner or later, and reading one of Jones' accounts of a musher's problems it's easy to see why.

"Gloves and mittens had to come on and off, fingers stiffened and became inoperative...snaps and zippers froze and turned unworkable in those stiffened fingers, and big chunks of frozen dog food had to be cut apart, sometimes with an ax...

"An inexperienced man frustrated by the cold, reluctant gear could lose patience easily, but for the people in the race each chore had become part of a way of life."

Recounting a harrowing whiteout endured by Don Honea, Jones explains: "A man doesn't go against the elements in the Arctic. He reads them and goes with them. To fight the elements leads to greater complications. The true test of the survivor is to know when to go and when to hole up and wait out the weather."

The dominating figure of Iditarod has been Swenson, winner of the 1979 race that Jones chronicles, and winner of three other races as well, including 1982. No other musher has won more than one of the 10 Iditarods.

SWENSON, A gold miner who can sound cocky, is apparently giving the rest of the field a break this year. After the last year's race, he said he thought he'd skip the '83 Iditarod and run instead in the All-Alaska Sweepstakes, the leading event in dog mushing around the turn of the century that organizers are trying to revive.

But 41 mushers already have signed up for the 1983 Iditarod, including last year's runnerup, Susan Butcher of Eureka. Other perennial contenders back for another try include Sonny Lindner of Johnson River, Larry "Cowboy" Smith of Dawson in Canada's Yukon Territory and Herbie Nayokpuk of Shishmaref.

The race will begin March 5 and the mushers will be shooting for the record set by Swenson in 1981 of 12 days, 8 hours, 45 minutes and 2 seconds. The top 20 teams will split a $100,000 purse, with the winner getting $24,000.

Aficionados have often debated whether the dogs should be the real heroes, and whether the race subjects them to cruel stress.

Maybe the men and women of the Iditarod don't fight the elements, but they challenge them in ways even winter-hardened Alaskans marvel at. The contest, coming as the end of the long months of cold and darkness approaches, lifts the spirits of racers and followers alike. That's probably why these mushers are Alaska's contemporary heroes.

Teachers seek collective bargaining

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas State Teachers Association will renew its push for a collective bargaining law and will be seeking teacher pay hikes of up to 43 percent during the 1983 session of the Texas Legislature, according to a TSTA representative.

The association also is seeking establishment of a $300 million-a-year group health insurance program for teachers, said Bob Barker, a member of the TSTA executive committee and president of the Classroom Teachers of Dallas.

Baker said that Gov.-elect Mark White favors the health insurance proposal, but has told TSTA officials that he will remain neutral on the collective bargaining bill.

"Mark White has never been a big supporter of collective bargaining for teachers, but at least he won't be actively fighting it like (Gov. Bill) Clements did," Baker said.

White's neutrality, along with the "less conservative" Legislature, should enhance changes for passage of a collective bargaining bill this session, Baker said.

Several previous attempts by the TSTA to pass a collective bargaining bill have failed.

The proposed measure will not include a right-to-strike option that initially was part of the 1981 TSTA-sponsored collective bargaining bill, but it does contain a provision for binding arbitration.

The TSTA salary proposal calls for beginning teachers with a bachelor's degree to receive $15,000 a year, 35 percent more than they now earn. Beginning teachers with a master's degree would earn $17,000, a 43 percent hike over their current salary, according to the proposal.

Raises for veteran teachers would range from 11 percent to just under 31 percent on the bachelor's scale and from 11 percent to 38 percent on the master's scale, according to the TSTA proposal.

The plan also would reduce the number of years it takes a teacher to reach the top of the pay scale.

The proposal also calls for the state to allocate about $300 million a year to furnish health insurance for teachers, the only state-paid employees who are not offered such protection.

Japan's Fujimura swimming team visits Midland

Everybody has chance to study contrasting styles

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

The visit of the Fujimura swim team to Midland this week has been a study in contrasting styles for all the participants.

There are the training styles of American versus Japanese swimmers, the landscape of Midland and West Texas as opposed to Tokyo and Japan and finally there is the the educational system, a contrast exemplified by who asks the questions.

For 34 swimmers and four coaches, the trip to Midland started in September at the American Swimming Coaches convention in Dallas.

"It was there that the Japanese coaches let it be known they were interested in training with an American swim team," COM coach Paul Bridges said.

"We contacted them and they came here after the convention before returning to Japan," Bridges said. "The coaches liked the area because of the open spaces and they were impressed with our pool facilities. It's unfortunate it (the pool) isn't ready."

THE COM pool has just undergone a major remodling but a leak was found just as the water was being pumped in for the visit by the Fujimura team. The repairs could not be made fast enough and training was switched to the Lee pool.

Fujimura's head coach Tunehisa Takano finds the American training style of fast laps followed by slower paced laps very casual.

"Here they rotate. They go hard then easy. It's a nice combination but in Japan we go hard all the time," he said.

"Coaches here say one thing and let the swimmers go," Mariko Shimazu added. "Our coaches are always talking to you."

THAT SIMPLE statement may be the explanation for what Bridges interprets as discipline.

"These kids (the Japanese) are incredibly disciplined," he said. "They just keep going, they are incredible to watch.

"They have to be told when to stop," he said. Clearly drawing a distinction between his students who have to be told when to get going."

One could almost see the envy in Bridges eyes as he told some of his "resting" swimmers to watch the Japanese students. "Look how they just keep going," he said.

"If there is one thing our kids can learn from them it is discipline," Bridges said. "But don't get me wrong, these kids aren't robots. Out of the water they are just like any other kid, they laugh, run and play around like any normal kid. But get them in the water and they are serious."

BUT THE Fujimura swimmers haven't been in the water all the time they've been here. Tuesday most of their time was taken up with a tour of the local high schools. It was a time that pointed out the differences in the culture of the two countries.

"In Japan the teachers ask the questions and expect the students to have the answers," Shimazu said. "Here the students are always raising there hands and they ask the questions."

"Students here are very free," Itoyama said. "They have boyfriends, wear make-up and style their hair. We're not allowed these things at school."

Interpreter Yutaka Shinozaki was quick to add that most of the girls in the Fujimura swim club attend an all-girl school, accounting for the lack of boyfriends at school.

WEDNESDAY PROVIDED the most spectacular part of the trip for most of the visitors, a trip to Carlsbad Caverns.

Eyes widened as Itoyama and Shimazu talked about the big hole in the ground.

It even brought Shimazu to the point where she could skip the interpreter and made her only attempt at English during the interview; "Beautiful," she said.

Itoyama struggled to find the right suprelatives. "Big, grand, great," she said, "Yes, it was beautiful."

Thursday the group explored the petroleum museum.

One of the most striking contrasts to the oriental visitors is the landscape. To many, "Midland" will always be the English word for "flatland".

In her simple style Itoyama summed

Victory moves Midland Lee into four-way tie for 4-5A first place

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

The Ladies of Lee had one more hot streak than San Angelo Thursday night as the Rebels beat the Bobcats 55-51 to avenge last year's district playoff loss.

"Our kids are so depressed you would think they lost," coach Shirley Stephenson said. "They're unhappy with their performance but I don't think they played that bad.

"I thoyght they were pretty poised out there. There were times we could have cratered out. I didn't want to remind the girls, but we haven't beaten San Angelo in a while."

The victory combined with Big Springs' upset over Midland High put the Rebels in a four-way tie for the District 4-5A lead with MHS, Odessa Permian and Big Spring at 3-1. Lee improved to 14-5 overall.

AS THE score indicates, it wasn't an easy victory for Lee as two starters, Queen Snaders and Yshun King, spent a lot of time on the bench due to foul problems. Sanders fouled out in the third period with five minutes left and King hit the bench with almost the same amount of time left in the game.

"I'm glad we have a good bench," Stephenson said. "It seems we have to eek them all out."

The game started like it was going to be a blowout as Lee took an 8-2 lead in the first three minutes. Then a series of six fouls, two on San Angelo and four on Lee, were called, during which time neither team scored a point.

That seemed to change the tempo of the game as the Bobcats fought back to tie the score at the end of the period 8-8.

BETWEEN PERIODS Stephenson stressed the importance of utilizing the full-court press. The stategy session worked, for awhile.

The Rebels went on another surge, jumping to an 11-point lead, 23-12. Defense was the key as the Rebels came up with six consecutive steals, three by Faye Oudems, which led to baskets.

But just as suddenly, Lee would play the perfect host and it was San Angelo's turn to run up the points. The Bobcats outscored the Rebels 12-5 in the closing minutes and shortened the gap to four points by the half.

"I told them they better get after it and win this ball game," Stephenson said of her halftime conversation.

But the Rebels couldn't be too aggresive due to the foul situation and when Sanders got her fourth foul Stephenson dropped the pressing defense in favor of the safer 2-3 zone.

"That didn't do us much good," she said, "Queen fouled out pretty quick anyway."

WHEN THE foul was called Val Schlaudt went to the line for a one-and-one bonus situation. Coach Stephenson couldn't believe her Rebel troops had committed five fouls less than three minutes into the third period.

She jumped from the bench to check with the official scorer. Not only did she find that Lee had been called for five violations but San Angelo hadn't committed a foul yet.

San Angelo took the lead, 31-30, for the first time when Schlaudt hit the pair of free throws.

Sanders' exit from the game combined with the lack of turnovers the press usually yeilds, caused Lee to lose another point to San Angelo in the third period as the Bobcats pulled within three, 38-35.

The Bobcats showed a better ability to work against the press and closed the gap to one, 40-39, early in the final period.

THEN IT was streak time again.

For the next four minutes the Rebels outscored the Bobcats 11-2, effectively taking the game out of reach.

The fourth quarter surge was led by Chris Bigler who came off the bench to score eight of her 10 points. Yshun King was the high scorer for Lee with 11. She also led all rebounders hauling in eight.

The Rebels were plagued by poor shooting as witnessed by their 38 percent from the floor. However the Lady Rebs did hit on 15 of 23 from the charity stripe for a respectible 65 per cent.

Bambi Lopez canned 14 points for the Bobcats, including a six-for-six performance from the line in the second period.

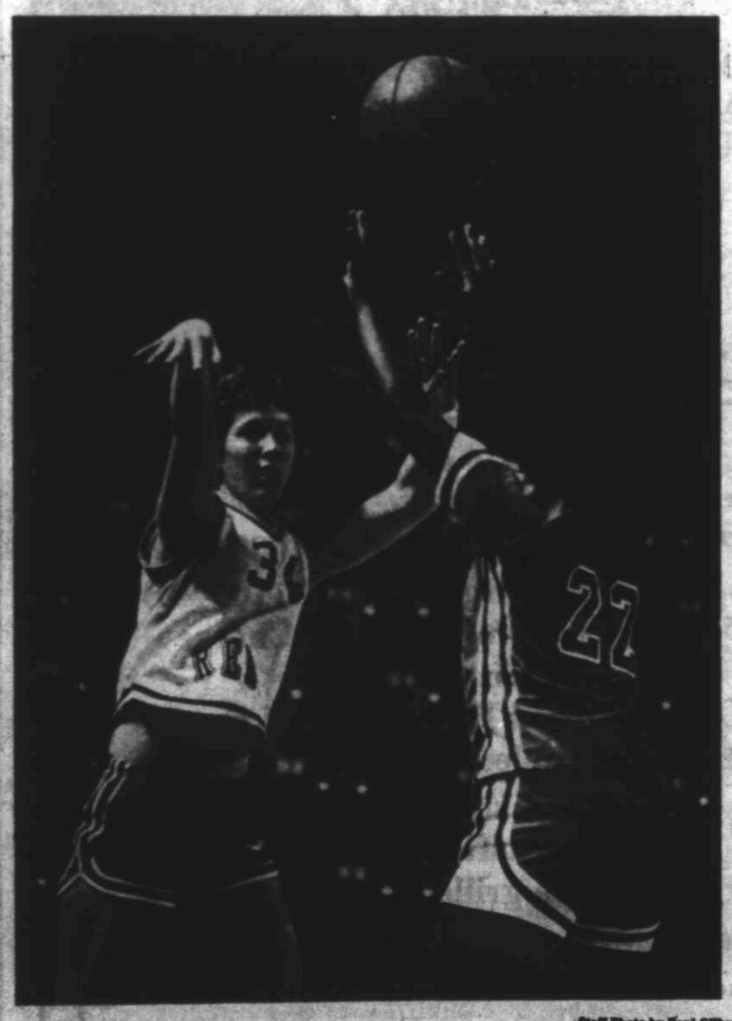

Despite a 23-point performance by Brenda Haven the Lee junior varsity lost to San Angelo 59-47. The Rebel sophomores rolled by Trinity 51-20.

The Rebels will travel to Abilene Monday to take take on the Eagles in another district clash.

Stephenson's prophecy may come true

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Since the first non-district basketball game was played way back when, Midland High coach Jack Stephenson has been saying that no District 4-5A team would go undefeated in conference play. Even though the league teams have played only one game, it looks like he might be right.

Tuesday night was a disaster for prognosticators around the district (coaches and sports writers) as both of their top two teams in a pre-district poll suffered opening-night losses.

The top choice of the year, San Angelo, fell to Abilene Cooper — picked seventh — by a 59-52 count while the second place pick and defending conference champion, Abilene High, was bombarded by No. 3 Big Spring, 75-61. A third mild upset, if anything this year can be called such, occured when No. 5 Midland High fell to No. 6 Odessa Permian, 61-56.

The only teams to perform as expected were Odessa High and Midland Lee. The Bronchos, a 12-6 team overall and tied with Big Spring in the 4-5A poll, knocked off the young, inexperienced and picked-for-last Lee Rebels, 56-47.

And that leaves only wonder for tonight's 4-5A schedule which has Big Spring against Midland High at Chaparral Center; Midland Lee at San Angelo, Abilene High hosting Odessa Permian and Abilene Cooper at Odessa High. Wonder who's going to win; wonder if upsets will rule again, wonder if...

FOR THE Midland High Bulldogs, it will be the second meeting of the year against the Gerald Wrightsil-led Big Spring Steers. The first meeting of the two teams came in the Tall City Tournament in November and Big Spring was an easy winner that night.

Tuesday, Wrightsil and teammate Tony Randle powered the Steers past Abilene High, scoring 20 and 17 points respectively. Wrightsil will be the key player the Bulldogs have to stop in their meeting tonight.

Midland High can counter with some scoring threats of their own. Three Bulldogs are averaging in double figures led by the long-range shooting of Johnny Pannell with 13.2 points per game and the inside abilities of Doug Hixon, 12.6 and David McFarland, 11.4.

SO FAR this season hasn't been good to Midland Lee. With a 2-15 record, 0-1 in 4-5A play, the Rebels are finding it difficult to overcome two areas where they are lacking: size and experience.

With only three seniors back from last year, two of which saw limited action and one promoted from junior varsity status, Lee is relying heavily on junior and sophomore talent. In fact, junior forward Alvin Henry is the only double figure scorer with a 10.2 average.

The two seniors from last year's team, Tod Brown and Sylvester Johnson, aren't far behind Henry in the scoring department with 9.6 and 8.1 averages respectively. A fourth Rebel, sophomore Derek Westbrook, is also proving a threat at 7.8.

As to the Rebels' problem with size, Coach Paul Stueckler keeps things in perspective when he says "We're not going to be taller than anybody this year."

That's easy to understand since starters Brown, Johnson and Henry are the only regulars with any altitude, coming in at 6-foot-2, 6-foot-2 and 6-foot-0.

In their loss to Cooper, San Angelo's Bobcats had two players dominate the scoring led by Mike Pfluger with 21 and Lorand White with 13.

Midland High suffers first 4-5A defeat

Midland High was knocked off its lofty perch atop the District 4-5A girl's basketball standings Thursday night when the Big Spring Steers upset the Lady Bulldogs 45-37.

The loss left four teams (MHS, Lee, Big Spring and Odessa Permian) tied for the district lead with 3-1 records.

The home court advantage was true to form as all the visiting teams lost.

Big Spring played an almost flawless first half then held on for the win.

It was as though the Steers remembered their first encounter with Midland on Dec. 13, when Big Spring jumped to an early 12-point lead only to lose the game by 10, 64-54.

This time Big Spring built a 17-point halftime lead, 36-19, and despite a two-point final period, held on.

Shell Rutledge was the leading scorer for Big Spring with 14 points. Rebecca Caton and Sheila Christian had 10 each for the Bulldogs.

The second quarter was the dedciding period as the Steers rolled up 21 points to Midland's nine.

The Midland press was ineffective and Big Spring was hitting every variety of shot while playing excellent defense.

The second half was a different story but the score wasn't lopsided enough for the Bulldogs.

Midland came out of the locker room and canned six unanswered points to draw within 11.

Big Spring almost lost the game in the final period as the Steers missed on all six of their free throws and scored only two points. Monette Wise hit a short jump shot with 3:48 left for Big Springs' only score.

At one point in the fourth period there were eight turnovers, four by each team, before anyone scored. All total the two teams divided evenly 24 turnovers between them in the final stanza.

With that kind of ineffeciancy Midland could manage only eight points, which was too little too late.

The Bulldogs will return home for a district clash against Abilene Cooper Monday at Chaps Center.

ABILENE COOPER, paced by Angela Riggins' and Rhonda Hays' 14 points, survived a second half Bronco rally.

Cooper held a 14-point halftime lead but Odessa fought back only to fall one basket short. At 2-2 Cooper is tied with San Angelo behind the four fronmt runners.

Permian had an easy time with Abilene High as the Panthers crushed the Eagles.

The Midland junior varsity beat Big Spring 59-36.

JIM MURRAY

It was 50 years ago that Colgate-SC didn't play

The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

A letter at hand from a reader reminds us that this would have been the 50th anniversary of the great Colgate-SC Rose Bowl game of 1933.

What's that you say? Colgate and SC never met in the Rose Bowl? Colgate never played in it?

Exactly. That's just the trouble.

To explain, you'll have to come back with me to the Great Depression year, 1932. College football, while not in its infancy, had not reached full flower yet. The East still counted for something. The polls were haphazard. The Big 10 wouldn't come to a Bowl. The Ivy League had to be coaxed.

But, for any era, the Colgate football team was quite a sight. You remember the famous Cal-Stanford play where the Cal Bears lateraled the ball clear through walls of people including the Stanford band and halfway across the field for a winning touchdown?

Well, every play was like that for Colgate. The ball went through more hands than a plate of boardinghouse hash on every snap. The attack was so bewildering opposing players would end up indeed tackling the band.

THE RED Raiders of the Chenango, they called this outfit, its attack modeled on the guy who hides the pea under the walnut in the carnival. They were coached by a canny little Scotch-Irishman, Andy Kerr, who had coached at Stanford, and who had refined the idea of scouting reports in that pre-computer era, and his teams were swift, hard-hitting, cerebral and well-prepared.

His team never even allowed a point in 1932 and it scored 264 of them in nine games. It would have been more fun to watch in the Rose Bowl than a streamful of otters.

It thought it was coming to the Rose Bowl. Only one team in history had gone undefeated, untied and unscored-upon in history, a 1919 Texas A&M squad. No team has done it since.

In those days, a Rose Bowl invite was like a nationwide hunt for the actress to play Scarlett O'Hara, a national guessing game. Fun for the whole family. A call from the Tournament of Roses was like a call from the White House, or an announcement you had just won the Irish Sweepstakes.

COLGATE NEVER got that call. When it defeated Brown University in its last game, 21-0, the giants of journalism were in the stands at Providence that day, Grantland Rice, himself, Paul Gallico, Westbrook Pegler, Runyon. Graham McNamee, no less, was on the mike. So it was a pressure game, all right. Brown was undefeated. It thought it was going to the Rose Bowl, too.

There are catch phrases in football. Teams get to be known as the Vow Boys, the Aerial Circus, the Monsters of the Midway and so on. Colgate's 1932 team was the Unteam. You see, the Rose Bowl bid was not forthcoming. The tournament committee, in its wisdom, invited twice-tied University of Pittsburgh's team, a lackluster outfit, which had stunk out the Rose Bowl in its last previous trip three years before, losing to SC, 47-14. It hadn't improved any. They lost in '33, too, 35-0. Colgate certainly could have done that well.

But when the Red Raiders were snubbed, a rueful Andy Kerr was to scribble on a blackboard the immortal identification which would follow his team throughout history, "Undefeated, Untied, Unscored-upon – and Uninvited." History was ill-served.

WHAT BRINGS this to mind this year is the dismal pattern the Rose Bowl has fallen upon in recent years. Fourteen times in the past 15 years, either Ohio State or Michigan has been in Pasadena. Its become the Monotony Bowl.

The Big 10 Pact was viable in the days when the Big 10 went to no Bowls and the Pacific Coast went only to the Rose. There is a more natural community identification with a visitor from the Midwest where eight out of 10 Southern Californians come from.

The Big 10 deal assures you a quality opponent year after year, but not necessarily an exciting one. And rarely an historic one. Midwest teams are like the Midwest, stolid, dependable, disciplined, the salt-of-the-earth. But not exactly romantic.

The pressure of other bowls make the search for a Cinderella to put the slipper on more chancy of late. Prospects are you will find your fair princess already shod. Colgate would be long gone today, maybe inked in for a bowl even before the Brown game.

Still, it may be time to shop around for a more glamorous opponent on the Pasadena dance card. Maybe it would be fun to see if Joe Paterno could handle the prom. Wouldn't Notre Dame be fun for a change? Texas?

Now we're even getting rematches in the Rose Bowl.

BUT WITH all the distractions of being in a new country, swimming still takes top priority and today the Fujimura swim team, COM and the Odessa Aquatic Club will hold a triangluar swim meet at Permian High beginning at 5 p.m.

Shimazu is politely confident about her team's chances in the meet. "We should beat the American swimmers," she said.

Dan Fouts earns offensive honor

NEW YORK (AP) — Quarterback Dan Fouts of the San Diego Chargers, who continued his assault on the National Football League record book, was named Offensive Player of the Year Thursday by The Associated Press.

Fouts was the runaway winner in balloting by a nationwide panel of 84 sports writers and broadcasters, receiving 43 votes. Marcus Allen, the Los Angeles Raiders' running back and unanimous choice as Offensive Rookie of the Year, was second to Fouts with 18 votes.

Mark Moseley, the record-setting place-kicker for the Washington Redskins and a narrow winner over Fouts in the balloting for Most Valuable Player, was third in the Offensive Player voting with 11.

Others receiving more than one vote were San Diego wide receiver Wes Chandler and Dallas quarterback Danny White with three apiece and Chargers tight end Kellen Winslow with two.

FOUTS, THE pilot for Air Coryell — the awesome aerial game of Coach Don Coryell — in his 10th NFL season, passed for 2,889 yards in nine games to extend his own record to four seasons leading the league in yardage.

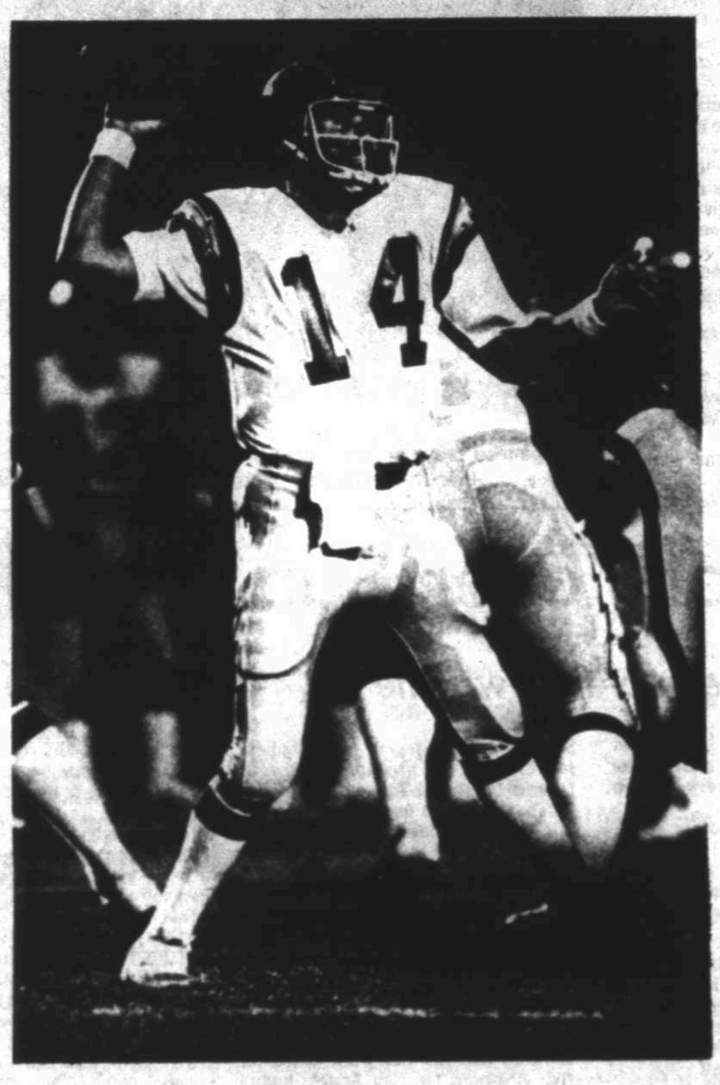

In five of those games he threw for at least 300 yards and now has 30 games of 300 or more yards. Going into the 1982 season, Johnny Unitas had held the record with 26 such games.

"There's no question he's the catalyst," said Coryell. "He's the sparkplug of this team. He's perfect for our offense. He's so intelligent, he sees the field and he's very tough, both mentally and physically."

Fouts also became the first passer in NFL history to throw for 400 or more yards in consecutive games, teaming with last year's two Super Bowl quarterbacks — San Francisco's Joe Montana and Cincinnati's Ken Anderson — in a pair of extraordinary games which toppled still more NFL records.

On Dec. 11, in a 41-37 victory in San Francisco, Fouts completed 33 of 48 passes for a career-high 450 yards and five touchdowns. He and Montana (and, briefly, 49ers reserve quarterback Guy Benjamin) teamed for a record 65 completions.

And on Dec. 20, in a 50-34 shelling of Anderson and the Bengals in San Diego, Fouts completed 33 of 48 passes for 435 yards and a TD, the teams combined for 66 completions to break the 9-day-old record and also combined for 851 yards passing, surpassing the mark of 834 by Philadelphia and St. Louis in 1962. The two teams' total offense for the game, 1,102 yards, fell 31 yards short of yet another record.

San Diego quarterback Dan Fouts, passing and tying a record for 300-yard consecutive games against the Los Angeles Raiders on Nov. 22, was named the Associated Press' NFL Offensive Player of the Year Thursday. Fouts tied Johnny Unitas' record when he passed for 300-plus yards in 25 consecutive games.

Taylor named defensive player

NEW YORK (AP) — Lawrence Taylor of the New York Giants, who has become the prototype outside linebacker in the National Football League after just two seasons, was named Defensive Player of the Year today by The Associated Press.

Taylor, who was both the Defensive Rookie and Defensive Player of the Year following the 1981 season, received 34 of the 84 votes cast by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters, three from each NFL city.

Linebacker Ted Hendricks of the Los Angeles Raiders and defensive tackle Randy White of the Dallas Cowboys each received eight votes and linebacker Joel Williams of the Atlanta Falcons received six.

Other players receiving more than one vote were New York Jets defensive end Mark Gastineau and Dallas cornerback Everson Walls (5 apiece), Pittsburgh Steelers linebacker Jack Lambert (4), safety Neal Colzie of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers (3) and Cowboys defensive end Harvey Martin (2).

Taylor, a 6-foot-3, 237-pounder out of North Carolina, was the league's leading linebacker in sacks with 7½ in 1982, throwing opposition quarterbacks for a combined 80 yards in losses — this despite playing most of the season with a damanged right ankle. He also had 55 tackles (32 solos, 23 assists), one blocked conversion, two forced fumbles and one interception.

"A lot of things came easier last year," Taylor said. "Nobody knew a whole lot about Lawrence Taylor. I got to go against a lot of backs and single blockers on blitzes (when he finished with 133 tackles and 10½ sacks). It got harder.

"I've gotten to make other teams change their offensive plans. I consider that to be effective."

His interception came at a most opportune time — on Thanksgiving Day in Detroit and on national television. He picked off a Gary Danielson pass at the Giants' 3-yard line and sprinted 97 yards — the longest interception return of the season — to beat the Lions 13-6.

He didn't start that game. He wasn't even supposed to play. He had a sprained right knee and a sprained right ankle. But he outraced the Lions' speedy backs and receivers the length of the field for the game's only touchdown.

Because of his speed as well as his strength, NFL observers have said Taylor could fit in just as well at defensive end. Some have even suggested he could make it as a tight end. The Giants are happy he's theirs, no matter what the position.

Purdue doesn't need three-pointer when Cross can slam 'em

By The Associated Press

The Big Ten features the three-point goal for the first time this basketball season. The way Russell Cross is playing, however, it's a cinch Purdue won't have to use the long shot too often.

One of the league's most dominating inside players, the 6-foot-10 junior hit 12 slam-dunks Thursday night and scored 31 points to help the 20th-ranked Boilermakers rout the Wisconsin Badgers 80-64.

"You talk about blue-chip players," said Wisconsin Coach Steve Yoder. "He just dominated us."

Cross, averaging 17 points a game coming into the contest, also collected 12 rebounds, blocked five shots and intercepted several passes in his fine all-around performance.

"Russell Cross is a good player, probably the most intense I have played against," said Wisconsin's 6-foot-11 Brad Sellers, who scored 24 points and grabbed 10 rebounds in his battle with the huskier Cross.

The victory was Purdue's 11th straight over Wisconsin, dating back to February 1977, and improved the Boilermakers' record to 10-1.

The lead changed hands nine times in the first seven minutes of the game before two baskets by Cross gave the Boilermakers a 21-17 lead.Purdue pulled to a 40-35 advantage at halftime, and the Boilermakers moved steadily ahead of the youthful Badgers after intermission.They took a commanding 73-60 lead on a stuff shot by Cross with 2:30 to go.

In the only other action Thursday night involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 2 Memphis State whipped St. Louis University 78-64 and No. 11 Nevada-Las Vegas stopped Utah State 89-77 in overtime.

Top Twenty

Andre Turner scored 19 points to lead Memphis State over St. Louis. Turner, a 5-foot-10, 150-pound point guard, also finished with two steals and two turnovers as the Tigers improved their record to 11-0.

Andre Craig, St. Louis' 6-foot-10 junior center, was the game's high scorer with 21 points and high rebounder with 15. Memphis State's Keith Lee had 16 points and 14 rebounds.

"That little guy Turner was the difference in the game," St. Louis Coach Rich Grawer said after his 3-10 Billikins had lost to the Tigers for the second time this season. "He's really improved a lot since the first game."

"Andre is getting into what we're doing a lot better," said Memphis State Coach Dana Kirk. "He got us into our running game — he really took the ball to the basket."

Danny Tarkanian made eight straight free throws in overtime to boost Nevada-Las Vegas over Utah State.It was the Rebels' 11th victory without a loss.

With nine seconds left in regulation, UNLV had two chances for field goals, but couldn't convert, and the game went into overtime. But the Rebels took charge right from the start of the extra period, as Jeff Collins hit a free throw and Sidney Green a field goal with four minutes left in overtime to give UNLV a 77-74 lead. Tarkanian then hit his eight straight free throws to seal the Rebel victory.

Others

In other action, Joe McGuiness hit both ends of a 1-and-1 with 14 seconds left to give Manhattan a 52-51 victory over Connecticut; Jim McLoughlin scored a career-high 32 points, including six three-point goals, as Temple defeated Rhode Island 103-94; Terry Youngbauer scored 24 points and sparked a second-half rally that carried Drake to a 67-63 victory over Southern Illinois; Minnesota center Randy Breuer and guard Tommy Davis scored 19 points each to lead the Gophers' 75-49 runaway victory over Illinois and Dan Ruland scored 16 points as James Madison turned back North Carolina-Wilmington 61-56.

Also, Terry Catledge scored 26 points and grabbed 15 rebounds to lead South Alabama to an 84-72 victory over North Carolina-Charlotte; Shelton Gibbs scored 18 points to lead St. Peter's to a 69-53 victory over Siena; Texas A&M forward Claude Riley scored 21 points to lead the Aggies to a 97-62 drubbing of Angelo State; Mark Acres' layup with one second left in overtime broke a tie and led Oral Roberts to a 73-71 victory over Kansas; Xavier McDaniel scored a game-high 29 points and pulled down 13 rebounds as Wichita State nipped West Texas State 89-88 and Wayman Tisdale scored 19 points and Calvin Pierce added 17 as Oklahoma ran past Baptist College 78-56.

Steve Harris scored 29 points and Ricky Ross added 20 as Tulsa charged back from a 15-point second-half deficit to edge Indiana State 96-91 in overtime; Gaddis Rathel's 19 points paced Northwestern's 69-64 victory over Michigan; Anthony Webster scored 12 points and shut down Creighton's heralded freshman center Benoit Benjamin to lead Bradley to a 74-65 win over the Bluejays; Michael McKenny's 18 points led a balanced Illinois State attack that carried the Redbirds to a 72-62 win over New Mexico State; James McDonald scored six of his 14 points in a 19-4 spurt that opened the second half and sparked Southern Cal to a 74-67 victory over Arizona and Michael Cage scored 19 points and grabbed 19 rebounds as San Diego State rolled to an 80-55 victory over St. Mary's College.

Padres say Garvey's boosting ticket sales

BASEBALL — Ever since the San Diego Padres signed first baseman Steve Garvey, the phones in the club's ticket office have been ringing off the hook. As of Thursday, the Padres have sold more than 1,000 season tickets since the Dec. 21 signing of the former free agent slugger...

Clyde King says he's willing to return as manager of the New York Yankees this season, but says he doesn't plan on fighting to keep his job. King talked Yankee owner George Steinbrenner out of the job once last season, with Steinbrenner opting to replace Bob Lemon with Gene Michael. However, on Aug. 5, Steinbrenner sent King from his job as an aide to that of manager.

This time, King says he won't attempt to dissuade Steinbrenner, and plans to let his boss make the first move.

John Hart, who guided the Bluefield Orioles to the 1982 Appalachian League pennant, has been appointed manager of the Hagerstown Suns for the 1983 season, the Baltimore Orioles have announced. Hart, 35, will replace Grady Little as manager of the Orioles's farm team in the Carolina League. Little will manage the Charlotte O's, the Baltimore organization's class AA team in the Southern League...

FOOTBALL — Television coverage of the Dallas Cowboys' playoff battle with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers will be blacked out in the Dallas area because the Sunday game did not sell out, a team official said. The game may mark the first time a Dallas playoff game did not sell out since the blackout rule went into effect in 1972, Cowboys spokesman Greg Aiello said Thursday. Before that, games could not be aired locally even if they had sold out more than 72 hours in advance...

Three top choices in the USFL draft are in the lineup for the 34th annual Senior Bowl on Jan. 22. Announcing the North squad Thursday, Senior Bowl general manager Bailey Slaton said this year's game features "more of the 'name' players than at anytime in recent years."

Quarterbacks for the North team are Dan Marino of Pittsburgh and UCLA's Tom Ramsey. The previously announced South roster included such standouts as Southern Miwsissippi quarterback Reggie Collier. Among the running backs for the North is Ohio State's Tim Spencer. Marino, Spencer and Collier were the first three players chosen in the USFL draft earlier this week...

BASKETBALL — Reserve sophomore guard Robert Hughes Jr. has been dismissed from the University of Texas basketball team for undisclosed reasons, head coach Bob Weltlich said Thursday. "I think it is in the best interest of Robert and the University of Texas basketball program that he no longer be a part of this team," Weltlich said. "It serves no useful purpose to discuss details of this dismissal and therefore I will have no further comment."

Hughes has played in 11 games this season, averaging 5.9 points and 1.5 rebounds in his substitute guard role. In his top game this season, against Missouri Western State, Hughes scored 14 points...

Miller not happy with his Tucson Open round

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Johnny Miller had just finished off a 4-under-par 66 — a single stroke back of Gil Morgan's lead — and was mentally kicking himself for the round that got away.

"After the way I hit the ball, to shoot 66 is a crime. I should be locked up, jailed, for the night," Miller said Thursday after the opening round of the $300,000 Joe Garagiola-Tucson Open, the inaugural event on the 10-month PGA Tour.

The day's play was delayed an hour by frozen greens and eventually was halted by darkness with 17 men stranded on the 6,830-yard Randolph Park Municipal Course. They were scheduled to complete the round at daylight today.

Miller, a four-time winner of this event, built his reputation as golf's Golden Boy on his domination of the desert events. In this one, he said he had a chance to shoot 59, the Tour's all-time record, "but just threw away a lot of shots."

"I was hitting my irons right on the sticks. I hit some flags and lipped out some and I shoot 66. At the very worst it should have been 63. In '74 or '75 it would have been a 61. No question. Absolutely no question about it. And it may have been a 59," Miller said.

He sighed.

"It's like throwing a no-hitter for eight innings then letting in three runs and losing 3-2," said Miller.

He birdied his first five holes, missed four other times from less than six feet, hit the stick and failed to birdie on another, got his approach within six inches of the cup on still another and, after the ball spun back, ended up with a 3-putt bogey.

"I don't know," he said. "I just can't do it any more.

"It's a matter of motivation. If I had the motivation of Tom Watson, there's no telling what I could have accomplished on the Tour. It's not bad, what I've done, but, like Chi Chi Rodriguez said, I'm kind of doing it in my spare time.

"It's nice, though, to be hitting the irons so good, getting the ball so close to the hole. I don't know how long it will last, but it's fun while it does. And I've still got a chance to win the tournament, if I can slop in some putts."

Morgan, a non-winner since 1979, said he benefitted from a recent session with his long-time teacher Ernie Vossler, a session that put Morgan's game "in the best shape it's been in a long time, a good or better than it's been in the last two or three years," he said.

He did not make a bogey and took sole control of the top spot with a 15-foot birdie putt on his final hole, which completed a 65.

"I'm kind of surprised," he said. "I'm usually rather a slow starter."

Miller was tied for second with Fred Couples, Mark Hayes, Jay Haas, Clarence Rose, Scott Simpson and David Graham, who once was informed he had been disqualified and was reinstated only by a ruling by Commissioner Deane Beman.

Graham, a former U.S. Open and PGA champion, said he was unaware of a new rule which required players to register at the tournament site by 6 p.m. Tuesday. He did not arrive in Tucson until Wednesday morning. When he attempted to register, he was told of the new regulation and, he said, was told he was disqualified.

About one-half hour later, Graham said, Stadler also arrived in "exactly the same situation I was in."

Stadler is the defending champion in this tournament, the Masters titleholder and 1982 leading money-winner. Beman was contacted by telephone and, Graham said, "made an exception in our cases. He didn't want to do that (eliminate two of the tournament's top gate attractions) to the sponsors."

Both Graham and Stadler were permitted to play. Stadler shot a 68, two under par, as did Cal Peete, a four-time winner last season.

WSU president wondering if school should drop athletics

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — The president of probation-plagued Wichita State University says he wonders if the school should drop its athletic program if it can't abide by NCAA rules.

"Some people may ask why we don't get out of athletics," WSU President Clark Ahlberg said Thursday. "If we can't run a program without violations, maybe we ought to get out of it."

Wichita State has been stung for a record seventh time for violating NCAA rules. The school's football program received a two-year probation Wednesday for recruiting violations. Its basketball program was cited last year and placed on a three-year probation.

"I consider it a defeat to me personally. I don't like to admit we made these errors," said Ahlberg.

The university president said part of the answer to the problem could be to "create an environment in which people are conscious of the fact this institution is in trouble."

The NCAA issued sanctions against WSU for five violations of its rules by the head football coach, an assistant coach and a graduate assistant. Three of the five violations the recruiting effort aimed at Dennis "Tex" Allen, a Dallas-area junior college athlete who now attends Kansas State University.

Ahlberg on Thursday said he froze the salaries of football coach Willie Jeffries and assistant coach Floyd Henson at their 1982 levels. They also were prohibited from recruiting off campus until May 1.

Acting Athletic Director Dr. C. Russell Wentworth said the rest of the coaching staff got pay raises of about 5 percent on Jan. 1. Records show Jeffries' salary is $50,300 a year with an additional $17,000 in income from radio and television shows. Henson makes about $28,500.

Jeffries denied NCAA allegations he had told an athlete and his family to lie to investigators. He also denied giving a football player cash during WSU's recruiting effort.

"Those allegations were brought forward by the student-athlete and (were) totally untrue," he said.

The NCAA barred the Shockers from bowl games following the 1983 and 1984 seasons and from appearing in televised games during those years. The Missouri Valley Conference school will be allowed only 25 football scholarships in each of those years instead of the normal 30.

Charles Alan Wright, chairman of the NCAA Infractions Committee, said the penalty against the school would have been more severe if Ahlberg had not already taken disciplinary action against the coaches.

McEnroe could have played better

ROSEMONT, Ill. (AP) - John McEnroe said he could have played better but he defeated Eliot Teltscher to advance to the semifinals of the $250,000 Lite Challenge of Champions tournament.

McEnroe, ranked No. 1 by the Association of Tennis Professionals computer, defeated Teltscher 7-6, 6-4 Thursday night. In other matches, Jimmy Connors defeated Vitas Gerulaitis 6-1, 6-4 and Bjorn Borg downed Henry Leconte 6-2, 6-7, 6-1.

"I didn't hit as deep as I wanted to, but then, neither did Eliot and so I came out ahead," McEnroe said.

Teltscher's ground strokes were well placed, but lack of a good net game cost him crucial points.

"I never felt I was really into the match, nor did I think that it was great tennis," Teltscher said. "I could have served much better."

Browns' Modell returns to normal work schedule

ONTARIO, Calif. (AP) — The owner of the Cleveland Browns, Art Modell, has returned to his normal schedule after recovering from a fainting spell, according to a spokesman for the National Football League team.

Publicity director Kevin Byrne said the 57-year-old Modell was released Thursday from Ontario Community Hospital and attended his team's practice for its playoff game Saturday against the Los Angeles Raiders.

"He said he felt very fine, but was frightened by the experience," Byrne said of Modell.

The team owner passed out as the Browns' chartered jet was approaching Ontario International Airport Tuesday.

Maple Leafs end road slump

Toronto moves out of last place

By The Associated Press

On the last day of January, 1982, the Toronto Maple Leafs beat the Black Hawks 5-2 in Chicago. Since then, in trips across the continent, in National Hockey League cities from Quebec to Los Angeles, the Maple Leafs have not won a game.

Until Thursday night.

Toronto, which suddenly has begun to resemble anything but the worst team in the league, ended its string on the road with a 3-1 victory against Washington at the Capital Centre. The Leafs moved out of last place in the overall standings and stretched their unbeaten streak to six games, 4-0-2.

Elsewhere, it was Montreal 11, Los Angeles 3; Calgary 5, Winnipeg 1, and Vancouver 6, Hartford 4.

"That was easily the best checking game we've had," said Leafs goalie Mike Palmateer. "Our guys were fabulous all the way through. We stood them up, and made them dump it in, and then one of our guys would take off with the puck."

Palmateer, who spent the past two years with the Capitals — though he was injured for most of last season — after four campaigns with Toronto, made 23 saves as Toronto ended the 0-24-6 streak in impressive style.

"Toronto played awfully well in the middle of the rink," said Washington Coach Bryan Murray. "They forced us in that area, and didn't allow us to get anything going.

"Palmateer handled the puck well when we did drop it in. He continually moved it."

As for the difference in the Caps from when he tended goal for them, Palmateer said:

"It's the difference between night and day. They are now one of the best seven or eight teams in the league. They made a lot of personnel changes, a lot of right moves. Now they get a defense after I get out of here."

Rick Vaive scored on a second-period power play to snap a 1-1 deadlock and Jim Korn's shorthanded goal with 6:17 left iced the game. Terry Martin also scored for the Leafs, who now have 26 points, two more than New Jersey.

Canadiens 11, Kings 3

Montreal tore open the game with a seven-goal third period. The Canadiens were led by Guy Carbonneau's three goals, two by Keith Acton and three assists from Guy Lafleur. It was the second time in a month the Canadiens scored 11 times in a game — on Dec. 6, they scored seven times in final period in beating Hartford 11-2.

"It's about time," said Carbonneau, a rookie center who has been in a scoring slump. "I wasn't worried but I was starting to get a little frustrated. I was getting chances but I just couldn't score. A game like this will go a long way toward solving the team's problems."

Canucks 6, Whalers 4

Darcy Rota scored three goals and Gary Lupul got his first two of the season to pace the Canucks, who had been winless in their last seven games. Ken Ellacott stopped 44 shots in his most impressive outing of the season. Hartford hasn't won in nine games.

"They could have had a lot more," said Rota, who scored once in each period. "Ken was the difference."

"This is the first time we've been able to use him for any stretch of time," said Canucks Coach Roger Neilson, who has gone with first-stringer Richard Brodeur in all but seven of 41 contests but has started Ellacott the last three games since Brodeur was bombed in an 8-1 defeat against Edmonton. "He faced a lot of difficult shots and played well."

Flames 5, Jets 1

Calgary moved within a point of second-place Winnipeg in the Smythe Division as Lanny McDonald scored his league-leading 36th goal and added two assists. Guy Chouinard had two goals and an assist for the Flames.

Soviets finish NHL series with 5-1 win over Flyers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Before the game, the Philadelphia Flyers and the Soviet Union all-stars tried to play down their matchup. Both teams said it was an exhibition game, a chance to learn from each other.

That lasted about one minute into Thursday night's pregame warmup.

Meanwhile, Soviet goalie Vladislav Tretiak, the only remaining member of those past confrontations, skated onto the ice — in the words of Flyers assistant coach Joe Watson — "like a raging bull, like someone who had something to prove."

As it turned out — again in Watson's words — "the Soviets had something to prove, and I guess they proved it."

THE SOVEITS combined superb passing, a swarming defense and poise in easily beating the Flyers 5-1 to finish their series against National Hockey League teams with four victories and two losses.

"We really wanted to beat them. This was an important game," said Philadelphia goalie Pelle Lindbergh, who has been in the nets as the Flyers have won their last seven games. "I think maybe it's too much to expect to win against them."

Tretiak, in his usual cool, calm style, allowed only Mark Howe's power play goal in the second period, which cut the Soviet margin to 3-1. Less than two minutes later, however, a tricky hop off the end boards escaped Lindbergh and Mikhail Varnakov rammed it home to put the Soviets securely back on top.

"I think you'll agree, the Flyers played well, but we played our best game tonight," Tretiak said through an interpreter.

The Soviets dominated the Flyers, who did everything they could and even resorted to a few tricks.

Bill Barber, who had missed 14 games with a knee injury, returned to action for the first time. Philadelphia banged the Soviets around. And the Flyers even called for two stick measurements, which resulted in the Soviets being penalized for using blades that were excessively curved.

STILL, IT was not enough.

"They tried to impress us with their physical game, but we were stable," said Igor Larinov, whose second-period power play goal gave the Soviets a 3-0 lead and was so well set up that even Flyers fans applauded.

Mikhail Vasiliev and Vladimir Krutov scored goals 2½ minutes apart late in the first period to break open a scoreless game. Anatoli Semenov added a third-period goal to complete the rout.

"We've got to be tired of being embarrassed by the Russians," said Flyers Coach Bob McCammon. "If they want to play NHL teams, they should bring club teams. If they want to bring all-Stars, we should play all-Stars."

Nets rally to beat Suns, keep winning streak alive

By The Associated Press

"When we were down by four points (in the final 1:19) I looked at the guys on the bench and they believed we'd win," said New Jersey Nets Coach Larry Brown.

Although the game and the winning streak, the longest in franchise history, were in danger, the Nets scored the last five points, three of them on free throws by forward Mickey Johnson, to beat the Phoenix Suns 94-93, their seventh straight triumph.

After the Suns went ahead 93-89, Buck Williams, who had 15 points and 17 rebounds for the Nets, made it 93-91 with a layup. Johnson then hit a free throw with 34 seconds to go and made two more foul shots with just seven seconds on the clock.

"I'm a pressure man," Johnson said. "There's always pressure to win. But I'd rather have pressure to win when we're winning than be losing and have the pressure."

In other National Basketball Association action, Atlanta edged New York 99-98, Los Angeles bombed Cleveland 125-107 in the only game decided by more than two points, Golden State trimmed Portland 94-93 and Houston defeated San Diego 109-107.

After Johnson's free throws, the Suns still had a chance to win until Dennis Johnson missed a 13-foot jump shot from the right corner at the buzzer.

Mickey Johnson, who has started the last two games for the Nets because Albert King has strained ligaments in his right knee, finished with 21 points and a career-high 12 assists, the most by any New Jersey player this season.

Darwin Cook scored 20 points and Otis Birdsong added 17 for the Nets.

Phoenix scored eight straight points late in the third quarter to tie the score 70-70 on Larry Nance's dunk shot. Walter Davis had scored 12 points in the second quarter to help Phoenix overcome a 22-6 spurt by the Nets that gave them a 32-22 lead in the second quarter.

Lakers 125, Cavaliers 107

Norm Nixon hit 10 his his team-high 20 points in the second quarter to help Los Angeles build a 23-point halftime lead against Cleveland.

The Lakers had eight players in double figures and never led by less than 17 points in the fourth quarter.

Hawks 99, Knicks 98

The Knicks had gone ahead seven seconds earlier on a three-point basket by Ed Sherod, but Johnson, who led the Hawks with 26 points, dribbled furiously into the corner before launching his game-winner.

Rockets 109, Clippers 107

Houston scored the last 14 points of the game and broke an eight-game losing streak as Alan Leavell hit a 20-foot jumper with one second remaining, thwarting San Diego's attempt to win two games in a row for the first time since last January.

Major Jones scored a career-high 21 points, all in the second half, for the Rockets, who trailed 107-95 with 2:30 left. Terry Cummings led the Clippers with 21 points and 13 rebounds.

Warriors 94, Blazers 93

Joe Barry Carroll, who was 4-for-19 from the field two nights earlier when Golden State lost to Utah, came back with 29 points against Portland, including a game-winning hook shot with six seconds remaining.

Calvin Natt, who led Portland with 20 points, put the Trail Blazers ahead with a layup with 16 seconds left, drove for another shot after Carroll's final basket, but his attempt was blocked by the Warriors' Sam Williams.

Return to prosperity jeopardized by international strains

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy seems to be stirring at last from its long, deep recession but a return to prosperity at home is in jeopardy because of strains building beyond America's shores.

The world is mired in its worst economic slump since World War II. International trade is on the decline. The global lending system is under enormous pressures from heavily indebted developing countries unable to pay their creditors.

These troubling developments may prevent a lasting American recovery from unfolding or — in the worst case scenario — trigger a global depression, economists and government officials fear.

"The world faces extremely difficult economic and financial problems, essentially without precedent in the postwar period," Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan has warned. "Mismanagement of these problems would have serious adverse effects on the United States economy — on our recovery and on our ability to create needed new jobs."

The health of the American economy is tied closely to the world economy. Fully one-fourth of all the goods made in the United States are exported. When sales overseas are poor, Americans hurt.

And when other countries flood the United States with their goods in efforts to revive their flagging economies, more American jobs and wealth are lost.

Today, every corner of the globe is experiencing a slump, the first time that has happened since the Great Depression of the 1930s. That slump is creating an onerous drag on forces of economic expansion in America, where prospects for recovery have grown because of declines in interest rates and inflation, and improvements in car sales, the housing industry and stock prices.

The slump in world trade could deepen if countries follow through on threats to limit the sale of foreign goods to cure unemployment and economic stagnation at home. Such protectionst steps preceded the Great Depression and economists worry that history might repeat itself.

Moreover, bankers in the United States and other industrial countries are wringing their hands over the growing list of developing countries unable to repay billions of dollars in loans.

American banks alone are vulnerable to more than $100 billion in loans to developing nations, including troubled debtors such as Mexico, Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Venezuela, Bolivia, Poland, Romania, Yugoslavia and Zaire. A default by a major borrower could trigger bank failures, a worldwide credit crunch and soaring interest rates.

"Clearly, the weakness of the international economy is having an adverse effect on the ability of the U.S. economy to recover," says Robert Hormats, a former assistant secretary of state for international ecnomic affairs.

"A healthy world economy is important for U.S. prosperity. The linkage between economic systems has never been more apparent," said Hormats, who left the Reagan administration in 1982 to become a vice president for the investment firm Goldman, Sachs & Co.

The United States, with the strongest economy on earth, has been viewed for years as the world's locomotive of growth — capable of pulling a train of other nations up the hill toward global prosperity.

Today, economists concede, America accounts for a much smaller share of world economic activity and its engine is no longer strong enough to pull the train by itself. The danger is that the train will roll backwards unless Japan and Western Europe recover from their slumps so they can help pull the rest of the world out of recession.

Yet, the 1983 outlook for the world economy, which just completed three straight years of stagnation, is more of the same — or worse.

The Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, a group of leading industrial powers, predicted last month that the global recession will worsen and unemployment among its 24 member nations will approach a record 35 million in 1983.

The Paris-based organization based its forecast in part on a significant decline in world trade and the austerity measures adopted by all major economic powers in their struggle to combat inflation.

Lawrence Krause, an international economist with the Brookings Institution, expects the United States to turn the corner in 1983 and begin an economic recovery "that eventually will be dragged down" if conditions in the rest of the world continue to deteriorate.

Krause's greater fear is that the United States will be unable to mount any recovery this year. "If that happens, we will have a worldwide depression," he said. "The system is so brittle."

The problems stem from simultaneous decisions by the biggest economies — the United States, Japan and Western Europe — to bridle economic growth and tolerate high unemployment to drive down inflation. Their policies have affected the rest of the world like a contagious disease.

The United States' problems have been compounded by the strength of the dollar relative to other currencies. Worldwide demand for dollars has been strong because of high U.S. interest rates — which economists blame on the record federal budget deficits — and the belief that the U.S. economy is the last safe investment haven in a world beset by turmoil.

Because a dollar fetches more German marks, French francs or Japanese yen, foreign imports are cheaper for American consumers but American exports are more expensive for foreign consumers.

The result is a U.S. trade deficit growing to unprecedented levels. When all the figures are in, the 1982 deficit is expected to set a record at more than $42 billion — money that flows out of American pockets and into foreign purses.

This year, experts fear the trade deficit will soar to $70 billion or more because an expected American recovery will increase consumer demand for imports while a continued recession in the rest of the world will keep demand for U.S. exports down.

The way out for the United States and the rest of the world, many economists contend, is for the major powers to move from fighting inflation to encouraging economic growth through easier credit policies at home and free trade abroad.

At the same time, budget deficits need to be reduced to keep interest rates down. Such a course slowly would nurse every troubled nation back to health, economists say.

In the eyes of many experts, 1983 is the critical year for nations to resolve their problems. If they fail, 1984 could be the year the world depression started.

WPT changes worth $650 million to stripper operators

By JIM PRESNELL
Energy-Business Writer

"J.R. Ewing doesn't make his money in stripper wells," Clyde LaMotta, vice president of the National Stripper Well Association, said Thursday.

However, Texas oilmen who do will be pocketing $225 million this year that would have gone to the Federal government in Windfall Profits Taxes, according to the Tulsa-based association.

LaMotta said nationally, owners with production interests in these slow-to-trickling wells will keep $650 million in WPT.

Jim Stafford, representing the National Association of Royalty Owners, said Thursday "The tax exemption stimulates workovers, which is great for the royalty owners. These wells were marginal because of high production costs, like pumping, treating, and other recovery measures."

"The main impact on the Permian Basin will be keeping these wells onstream. We can save a billion barrels in reserves by continuing to produce from stripper wells," said Ed Thompson, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

"Our company (Hendon Exploration) has quite a few stripper wells," Don McClure said, "and they do require pumping. The action (taken by the 97th Congress) allows investors to keep money that they really need. This preserves the economics of these wells for a longer period." McClure is executive vice president at Hendon.

Stripper wells make up the majority of oil wells in this country. Because of their low production rate, they supply only 12.6 percent of the United States' total annual oil production.

NARO's Stafford said the stripper exemption will add about $3.40 to the effective wellhead price of this oil.

LaMotta said, "A stripper well operator has to have a whole bunch of wells producing oil to make a decent living. He has to add more stripper wells to replace older wells that'll eventually run dry.

"Most of this tax money will be reinvested in the oil patch. The wells have to be serviced. Most producers have a variety of oil wells — and all these wells," LaMotta said, "will eventually become strippers as reserves run out."

The oil production is reclassified as exempt through forms filed with the oil buyer and the IRS.

The lease or the property should not be reclassified — just the production. And stripper oil remains Tier 3 oil.

Investors and operators, as well as anyone else with a working interest in production, will have to file a master form — new form 6458 — with the Internal Revenue Service, as well as file similar forms with the oil purchaser, telling the buyer how much exempt stripper well oil they are getting.

WPT made producing from stripper wells unprofitable, Ed Thompson said, noting the wells had been prematurely plugged and abandoned under the heavy burden of WPT and high production costs.

Thompson believes it's important to keep the strippers online and save the oil in reserves that would be used if strippers were not producing.

"The majors don't get this exemption, and a stripper well can't have been owned by a major within six months of its designation," Thompson said.

Dispute threatens US-Chinese relations

By the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

PEKING — Last-ditch efforts to defuse a potentially explosive trade dispute began Thursday with U.S. and Chinese officials resuming negotiations on China's textile exports to the United States.

At issue is a U.S. attempt to restrict mushrooming Chinese exports of textile products at a time of deepening recession in the American textile industry.

After three earlier negotiating sessions collapsed in acrimony, the Reagan administration announced last month that it would unilaterally curb certain Chinese textiles Jan. 15 if the two sides fail to reach accord.

China, which asserts the right to sell goods to help offset a hefty U.S. surplus in overall bilateral trade, has warned it would retaliate economically.

U.S. textile negotiator Peter Murphy met throughout the day with his Chinese counterpart in what was described as "informal discussions" to set an agenda for the talks. Neither side chose to characterize the first day's meeting.

What the U.S. side now wants is to extend quotas to another 26 items ranging from gloves to brassieres. This would limit the growth rate of China's most important export to the sale level set for the three largest textile suppliers — Hong Kong, Taiwan and South Korea.

Although China now ranks behind those three, its textile exports have risen so fast — 41 percent in 1980, 73 percent in 1981 and 32 percent in the first 10 months of 1982 — that American industry officials began viewing it as the most serious competitive threat.

The proposed curbs would restrain growth to no more than 2 percent annually for each of the controlled items. But another 75 categories of textile exports would be able to grow without ceilings.

Chinese officials oppose any restriction, claiming the growth rates are misleading because their textile goods are inexpensive. Since they only compete in the low price market, officials demand the right to sell larger quantities so as to harvest their share of foreign exchange.

Chinese officials argue, furthermore, that Peking's large imports of U.S. cotton and synthetic fibers — in 1981 China actually suffered a $450 million "textile trade deficit" — entitles it to special treatment.

But trade statistics for the first 10 months of 1982 seem to dilute China's thrusts. Although it absorbed a trade deficit of $655.6 million, the imbalance was less than half of last year's for the same period.

Money market fund industry limping

By Arelo Sederberg
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — It's a little strong to state that money market mutual funds are yesterday's investments, but it's certainly defensible to say that the industry limped into the new year on wobbly crutches.

Money funds have been the hottest investment craze of the past four years, rising from nothing to assets of over $230 billion. In the competition for savings, they wiped out banks and savings and loan associations with the efficiency of Indians circling the doomed wagon train.

After all, if you got up to 17 percent interest, relative safety, checking account privileges and a small minimum investment, why open a bank or S&L account with a 5.5 percent passbook rate or even higher-rated "T-Bill" offerings that stipulated six-months' duration and a $10,000 minimum?

The banks, shouting for a "level playing field," struck back on Dec. 14, offering high-yielding Money Market Deposit Accounts (MMDAs) with limited check-writing provisions, a $2,500 minimum deposit, and immediate liquidity, as long as the account stays at $2,500 or above. The plan offers over 11 percent interest.

And effective Jan. 4, banks and S&Ls began offering new "Super NOW" accounts with unlimited checking transactions. Interest on such accounts is expected to range up to 9 percent — undoubtedly reduced by fees — compared with 5.25 percent on current NOW checking accounts.

Money funds already are feeling the heat from the new bank accounts, which attracted an astonishing $52 billion in their first seven days of operation. Some of it came from passbook savings, but some most certainly came at the expense of money funds, which saw assets drop more than $20 billion in December. MMDA interest rates of over 11 percent most certainly beat the 8.2 percent of the average money fund today.

Los Angeles, the nation's S&L center, apparently is offering the best bets in the country right now on the new money accounts, although rates have yet to be posted on Super NOWS (Negotiated Order of Withdrawal). According to Miami's Bank Rate Monitor, which keeps track of such matters, local banks and thrifts are paying 11.1 percent, the highest of the top five markets surveyed. Philadelphia, at 9.66 percent, is the lowest.

Saving money these days can be as confusing, so let's back up a notch. Money funds buy bank certificate of deposits, corporate paper and government bonds at yields previously available only to large investors and in turn sell shares in themselves to the public at small mimimum deposits. They're investment companies registered with the Securities & Exchange Commission, and therefore are subject to full disclosure laws, but the accounts are not insured. Bank and thrift accounts are insured by an agency of the federal government up to $100,000 each.

What should you do now? Well, William C. Donoghue, who writes a money fund letter and is a ranking expert on the funds, has some ideas:

— If you have money in a passbook account, move it immediately into the new MMDA (remember: the minimum is $2,500).

— If you have a maturing six-month money market account, consider rolling it into a MMDA. You might shop around and see if you can get a variable rate account, which will protect you if rates in general go up.

— For small businesses, consider putting all your savings into a MMDA. You will get a relatively high yield and unlimited transfers to cover checks.

— Unless you find a spectacular deal, you might want to stay with your money funds and adopt a "wait and see" attitude about interest rates on MMDAs, which most likely will come down.

Donoghue, admittedly pro money funds, adds: "Right now, we prefer money funds because their rates are determined by the market, not by bankers' whims. MMDAs offering high money market yields and convenience that matches money funds will be a pleasant surprise indeed."

He has put his finger on one key to the two investments. MMDAs are flexible, with rates that can be changed, although regulated to some degree by competition. And in their initial rush, at least, they could hurt banks that are essentially consumer oriented, points out a report by Goldman Sachs, the big investment banking firm. The new accounts may cause major shifts in the liability (savings) structure of banks, the report says, bringing about an imbalance beneficial in periods of declining rates, but chaotic with rising rates. Goldman Sachs believes a new round of bank and savings and loan mergers may result.

Meanwhile, you — the saver turned investor – have a new high yield instrument to help fatten your 1983 pocketbook.

Donoghue's Money Fund Average (Averages for all 226 taxable funds)		36	8.3	8.3

Yields represent annualized total return to shareholders for past seven- and thirty-day period. Past returns are not necessarily indicative of future yields. Investment quality and maturity may vary among funds. z - average term to next rate adjustment date. Reprinted in condensed form with permission from Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT of Holliston, MA.

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 226 money funds declined $4.3 billion to $208.9 billion for the week ending January 5, 1983.

The funds' 7-day average yield increased to 8.34% from 8.09%. The funds' 30-day average yield remained at 8.22% for the second week.

Publisher William E. Donoghue says, "Money fund yields jump this week as funds pay year-end capital gains, money funds sell off portfolio securities at a profit in order to facilitate liquidations and as some funds invest in the higher-yielding new bank money market deposit account. Assets of money funds have declined $22.4 billion since the introduction of the bank money market deposit account and the funds have been able to handle these liquidations without a hitch. No other financial institution could sustain a decline of this magnitude without outside help. The amount of money fund asset outflows is actually larger than the total insurance pool for banks and thrifts."

Tipperary to exchange common stock

Tipperary Corporation announced Wednesday its intention to offer up to 507,747 shares of its common stock in exchange for all the common stock of Pearsall Petroleum, N.V., a Netherlands Antilles company.

Tipperary Chairman Deane H. Stoltz estimated the transaction would involve up to $3 million. It is scheduled to be consummated Jan. 24, 1983.

Pearsall, through a wholly owned subsidiary, owns the sole limited partnership interest in Pearsall Ltd., a Texas limited partnership of which Tipperary is the general partner.

Pearsall Ltd. engages is oil and gas exploration and development primarily in Texas and Louisiana. The shares of Pearsall Petroleum, N.V., are listed on the Luxembourg Stock Exchange.

If Tipperary receives at least 75 percent of the Pearsall shares in the exchange offer, it intends to sell Pearsall's assets and its wholly owned subsidiary to Tipperary and thereafter, to liquidate Pearsall.

Through these transactions, Tipperary will acquire Pearsall's assets, which include 100,000 barrels of oil and gas equivalents reserves and approximately $1,750,000 in cash.

Ruling favors ex-controller

HOUSTON (AP) — A hearing officer who has heard testimony from about 300 former air traffic controllers fired for striking illegally in 1981 has ruled for the first time in favor of an ex-controller.

Mark Kelleher, the judge for the federal Merit System Protection Board, said Thursday he supported Tom Wyka's appeal because the former controller had made an effort to return to work before a deadline passed by President Reagan.

Officials said Wyka was notified of Kelleher's decision earlier this week.

Wyka's appeal is the first Kelleher upheld of almost 300 filed with him last fall. Decisions on three remaining cases should be returned before the end of the month, officials said.

The ruling has been forwarded to FAA officials in Washington, D.C. The agency has 30 days to either appeal the decision or to take steps to reinstate Wyka.

At his October hearing, Wyka testified that assistant Houston Air Route Traffic Control Center chief Jim Lewis called him at home on the evening of Aug. 5, 1981, and told him if he reported to work early the next morning he would be deemed to have met his established deadline in accordance with President Reagan's call for a return to work.

When Wyka called the center the next morning to say he would be in to work, his supervisor told him it was too late.

Kelleher found that Wyka had reported "ready, willing and able to work on his next scheduled shift." He said the agency was to blame for any missed deadline.

Wyka is currently employed by NL Industries, Inc. He could not be reached for comment.

Stock market gains

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gained more ground in heavy trading today, continuing the rally that carried it to record highs on Thursday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 26.03 on Thursday, rose another 4.87 to 1,075.79 by noontime today.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 5 to 2 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Volume on the Big Board reached 61.30 million shares by noontime, heading for its second day in a row of more than 100 million shares.

Amax led the active list, down ⅛ at 24¾. A 1.07 million-share block traded at 24¼.

Teledyne fell 4¼ to 127. The company took a writedown of $49.1 million on its investment in International Harvester Co., lowering its earnings for the fourth quarter and all of 1982.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The gasoline tax-hike bill approved last month by the lame-duck Congress also would resolve a serious tax controversy that could have complicated the pending breakup of the Bell System.

The bill, which President Reagan was scheduled to sign today, calls for a five-cent increase in the federal gasoline tax to fund highway repairs. But an amendment attached to the measure at the last minute also will eliminate most of a potential $1.5 billion tax bill now facing Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co., reducing it to $321 million.

Pacific Telephone is the largest of the 22 Bell System companies that must be given up by American Telephone & Telegraph Co. next year under an antitrust settlement reached with the Justice Department.

Pacific Telephone Chairman Donald E. Guinn complained last month in a written affidavit that he could not support AT&T's reorganization plan as long as his company would be left to face that potential tax liability on its own.

Guinn's affidavit was filed with U.S. District Judge Harold H. Greene.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I have $13,578 in a money market mutual fund and $10,000 in a 182-day bank savings certificate. I'm 72 and don't care to invest for the long term. Two men from the mutual fund organization called on me and want to put my money in their company's "investment certificates" when my bank savings certificate matures.

The literature they left says, "No sales charge...no surrender charge." The two men say this investment is "no-load." What should I do?

A. If those two try to come calling again, bolt the door before they get inside the house. "Load" is a short word for "commission." It's clear those two are salesmen, who would collect a commission from anything they sell you. Commissions come in many different forms — some spelled out, some hidden. Those salesmen are fracturing the facts, by claiming the certificates they are peddling are "no load."

To keep the salesmen of America off my back, I want to stress there is nothing basically wrong with commissions. Without commissions, many products and services would never be sold. But when you can avoid commissions, it's usually smart to do so.

And, you can avoid commissions by staying with the market mutual fund and bank savings certificates. Almost all money market mutual funds are no-load funds — meaning there is no commission charge.

However, some financial organizations manage one or more no-load funds, as well as load funds. They use the no-load funds to provide "leads" and send their salesmen out to sell load funds and other investment products on which commissions are charged.

But, that doesn't mean you have to buy from everyone who comes calling, especially when the salesmen are less than truthful about "load" and "no-load."

Q. At 62, my wife and I are retired on disability and the dividends from eight stocks and four mutual funds. Not knowing that brokers came to the house, I was surprised when one did and advised me to invest in an "income mutual fund," which invests in bonds.

He says the income from that fund won't go below 12 percent. He wants us to sell all the stocks and mutual funds we now own and put the money in his mutual fund. Should we do what his advises, or just put some spare money we have in his fund?

A. I'd advise against doing either. No mutual fund can promise what income it will pay in the future. You'll find that financial fact of life spelled out in the prospectus the salesman was required to give you when he made his sales pitch. If he didn't give you a prospectus he violated the rules.

The stocks and mutual funds you listed in your letter are sensible investments for people in your circumstances. It's doubtful you will improve your financial situation by doing what that salesman suggests.

If you sell everything you now have and put the money in that salesman's bond fund, you might even be at a disadvantage — because there would be a big commission charged on your new investment. You could redeem your present mutual funds without charge. But you would have to pay a commission on the sale of each of your eight stocks.

Income mutual funds can be good investments. But if that's the kind of investment you want, my advice is to put your spare cash in a "no-load" income mutual fund, thereby saving a commission bite of up to 8.5 percent.

Consumer Price Index explained

By JANET SUTTER
Copley News Service

Good news from the Consumer Price Index. According to CPI, consumer prices rose only slightly in November, compared with this time last year.

Terrific.

We groan when it goes up, we're a little relieved when it goes down. But what does it mean?

The bureau began gathering statistics on a regular basis in 1913. The Consumer Price Index, which was first called the cost-of-living index, grew from a desire of the Shipbuilding Labor Adjustment Board during World War I that wages in the shipbuilding yards should be adjusted when the cost of living increased. So by 1919, the bureau began to publish the "cost of living" indexes semiannually for 32 large shipbuilding and industrial centers.

Later, the name of the index was changed following a controversy during World War II about its validity as a measure of cost of living. "It has always been merely a measure of changes in prices for goods and services purchased for family living," said a bureau report.

The basis for the measurement is the amount of goods and services that could be purchased for $100 in the base year of 1967. (The base year is now due to be changed in 1987. It was meant to be changed as of January of 1982, but wasn't because of federal budget restrictions, according to Heinemann.) In November 1982, nationally, $288 would purchase what $100 did in 1967. Inflation has been running at a rate of about 4.8 percent for the first 11 months of this year.

"There is one fixed market basket (the actual list of goods and services upon which prices are regularly checked to determine the CPI) and that is the same for all the 28 major metropolitan areas we do. However, items are weighted according to a particular area and to a particular population group," Heinemann said. (As well as doing a national CPI, the bureau does indexes for 28 cities.)

Two separate indexes are published. One is all urban consumers, the CPI-U; that is the one usually covered by the media and represents an 80 percent population coverage. (The other 20 percent is represented by the military, farm workers, those in institutions, such as prisoners, the mentally ill, etc.)

RRC seeks comment on new run ticket system

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission has approved for public comment a proposed rule that would give law enforcement officials a way to track oil carried by truck in the state.

The proposed rule would require each transporter to prepare a separate run ticket each time oil is trucked from a lease or other facility.

One copy must be left at the site the oil was removed from, another must remain in the transporting vehicle, and a third copy must be given to the receiver of the oil when it is delivered.

If the rule is adopted, failure of a transporter to carry a run ticket for oil being carried will provide law enforcement agencies a basis for detaining transporters suspected of oil theft.

FIRST CITY MONEY MARKET CHECKING.

At last there's a way to combine money market yields with the convenience and safety of a true checking account. Money Market Checking from First City.

HIGH YIELDS PLUS LIQUIDITY.

Recently, you've probably heard a great deal about the money market accounts introduced by banks and savings and loans. But they are basically savings accounts with minimal checking privileges.

Likewise, you're probably familiar with N.O.W. accounts that pay 5¼% interest on checking balances. First City Money Market Checking combines the best features of both. Money market yields. Plus the full checking privileges of N.O.W. accounts.

UNLIMITED CHECKING PRIVILEGES.

With a minimum opening deposit of $2,500, your money will start earning money market rates. Should your average balance drop below $2,500, you'll still earn 5¼% interest. Service fees are based on your average monthly balance; the higher your balance, the lower the service fee (if any).

But no matter what your balance is, you'll have the privilege of writing however many checks you want, in whatever amounts you want, to whomever you want.

You'll also have the convenience of the statewide Teller 2®/PULSE℠ network, which allows you to make cash withdrawals 24 hours a day all over Texas.

And all the while, your money will be insured up to $100,000 by the FDIC.

NO STRINGS ATTACHED.

Talk to a First City New Accounts Representative about opening a Money Market Checking account. You'll find it offers the benefits associated with money market savings accounts. Without the complicated restrictions.

Combine it with your existing money market investments. Or use it alone. Either way, First City Money Market Checking will put money market yields where they can do you the most good. Right in your checkbook.

Midland students critique their films

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Most students living in a city that provides a minimum amount of entertainment often depend on movie theaters for evening activities.

However, several students in Midland recently have found sitting through movies an uncomfortable situation.

The class, offered at both high schools, teaches students basic film techniques and vocabulary. Students study major directors and critique films before shooting and editing their own.

"WE LIVE IN a visual society which can be manipulative," Ms. Windsor said.

"I can see the little hidden messages that you might not catch," Brian Pilgreen, 17, agreed. "Sometimes they are trying to get me to feel this way when I don't."

"At first, you tend to analyze (movies) and not enjoy them," he continued. "But then you start getting a lot more out of them."

Pilgreen, who is one of three MHS students receiving English credit instead of elective credit, said he had no idea what was involved in film making until he enrolled in the class.

"I was always interested in how films were made but I didn't know anything about it," he explained. "We started with the really basic things, like learning to recognize different techniques. Then we did compositions and analyses of major themes. Then, during the last stage, we film and produce our own films."

With the semester ending next week, the 11 students, all seniors, had shot their 3-minute films and sent them off to be developed before Christmas. Thursday, they were busy splicing, editing and adding audio.

"This is where I messed up," Pilgreen laughed as he bent over his documentary on pouring marble sinks in bathrooms. "I made the shots too quick and I'm going to have to talk real fast."

One group had sent away its film on oil production to be developed before Christmas and it was finally returned Thursday. With groans and grimaces, the students realized the camera's shutter had not operated correctly so they began scrambling to write another film.

"THEY ARE ALL very sensitive about their films," Ms. Windsor said. "If they make mistakes, they write a critique on their film. If they can explain to me what was wrong, they can receive a good grade.

"That takes the threat away because I know this is their first effort," she added. "Those students don't have to make another film but they want to see what they can do. If the film comes in late (after the semester ends), they'll take an incomplete and I'll grade them on it when it comes in."

According to Ms. Windsor, Film Composition, revised from the Film Study course offered during the last 10 years, complements English courses.

"Writing scares off a lot of people," she said, "but these students write major critiques. The visual metaphors, figures and imagery on the screen that they begin to recognize carries over so that they become even more aware of them in reading. It goes hand in hand — visual with writing."

At one point in the course, students read a short story and then viewed the film. "They could see the difference between the written piece and the visual one. They realize that there are certain things you can do in writing but not in film. But there are so many things that film can do that no other medium can."

For examples, she used perceptions and reactions. "They can make you be low on the ground and in the next scene on top of the tallest building."

ALTHOUGH REACTION can be witnessed in stage productions, play directors cannot be sure if the audience is focusing on the character they want them to see, she pointed out. By using techniques such as close-ups and zooms, "a director of film can force you and make you see exactly what he wants you to see," she said. "He can be as subtle or as obvious as he wants."

"We do have to write a lot of critical analyses," Latiefa Savahl, 17, agreed. "But we learn to pick out things people don't see in films. It makes you really think about life and what's going on."

Ms. Savahl said she enrolled in the class by mistake, but remained in it for elective credit. "I got into it because the computer kind of messed up my schedule," she said, smiling. "But then when I was listening to Ms. Windsor talk about it, I got into it."

"It's something that you really do appreciate when you see a really good film," Pilgreen said. "But other things can disappoint you because you know it could have been done better."

According to Ms. Savahl, several movies with special effects often overwhelm her. "We just made a three-minute film and they're making two-hour ones and I think that we went through a lot of problems."

But some of the special techniques that overwhelm the public don't have as much impact on the students.

"When you know how they did it, it kind of spoils it for you," she admitted.

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

A tender, loving pat on the head and a couple of Band-aids can make all the difference to a child who has had a tumble on the playground.

Bruises, cuts and scrapes resulting from falls are frequent injuries seen by the school nurse, said June Heinemann, a Midland Independent School District nurse.

"It (Band-aid) does wonders," Mrs. Heinemann said. "Our ice (for a bump on the head) works like a kiss to make it better, and we give them a little something to do at home — like applying more ice."

Garbed in navy blue and white street clothes, Mrs. Heinemann said school nurses don't wear white because of all the ink and school supplies. They usually don't have a lot of room to work in — sometimes a bookroom or closet — but, Mrs. Heinemann said, the job is worth it.

Mrs. Heinemann, along with eight other registered nurses, make up the MISD school nurse force. Mrs. Heinemann serves three elementary schools — Emerson, Anson Jones and David Crockett.

Some days as many as 25 to 30 students may plod through the door of the nurse's office.

"If it's a sick day — colds or stomach virus — we're pretty busy," Mrs. Heinemann said. "We help the child as much as possible, and we call the parents. We work real close with the parents.

"If the child should have a fever, we send him home," she added.

Sometimes, a child may frequent the nurse's office two or three times a week. If there is no apparent illness, Mrs. Heinemann said she'll check with the teacher and parents for any type of problem the child has.

"When a child comes in and says 'I don't feel well,' I ask him where he feels bad," she said. "If he says his throat, then I take his temperature and look at the throat. I'll usually keep the child here for 15 minutes or so and then make a decision (whether or not to send him home)."

Mrs. Heinemann began working for MISD as a school nurse in 1955. She's seen a lot of bumps and bruises in her time, but the most rewarding part of her job has been detecting a hearing or vision problem early enough to be corrected.

"I get a big charge when we can help a little kid who has a hearing or vision problem," she said. "One time out of 60 you'll catch a 5-year-old (with a vision or hearing problem) where correction is made early enough, and sometimes we may detect anemia or a heart problem."

These nurses' responsibilities include:

—Maintaining current immunization records on each student and reminding parents when additional shots are required by state law.

—Completing vision and hearing screenings of all students as required by state law and as outlined in local policy.

—Keeping student health records current to show results of vision and hearing screening done by the school nurse.

—Informing the campus principal concerning the status of communicable diseases and childhood illnesses in the community wich may affect the health of children or have direct impact on school attendance.

"I get a big charge when we can help a little kid who has a hearing or vision problem," she said. "One time out of 60 you'll catch a 5-year-old (with a vision or hearing problem) where correction is made early enough, and sometimes we may detect anemia or a heart problem."

—Making effective use of health service resources in the community, including physicians, the city-county health department, the dental clinic and service organizations.

—Conducting head lice checks as requested by the prinipal and doing follow-ups with parents of infested children to ensure maximum control of head lice.

—Attending in-service education classes throughout the year.

Mrs. Heinemann said another reward of her job is "seeing children growing up and going through school.

"I've seen some students who have come back (to Midland) and are now doctors," she said.

By WILLIAM GARLAND

From Our Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — If there were a penalty in politics for piling on, congressional Democrats might lose 15 yards in the political melee that followed the resignation of Democratic Rep. Phil Gramm of College Station.

But in Gramm's case, they seem to think it's worth it.

In one of the best-publicized political gambits in recent congressional history, Gramm announced his resignation from the Demoratic Party Wednesday to run in a special election as a Republican after being evicted from the House Budget Committee.

It was an act that chilled some already cool Democratic hearts, and loosened some bitter tongues.

"Here's a man who absolutely and categorically lied to me, and I'm sure to others, and got one of the golden treasures (a Democratic seat on the Budget Committee) as a result of lying to people," said Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., chairman of the Congressional Campaign Committee.

COELHO AND OTHER Demoratic leaders say that Gramm promised to support the Democratic Party on the House Budget Committee when he was assigned the seat in 1981, but then reneged on that promise and led the push for the Republican budget that eventually carried his name.

On Thursday, Gramm disputed that he promised his backing for the eventual Democratic budget and said he only promised his support for the final budget package that passed the House.

"Since the action I have taken will no doubt be viewed by the liberal leadership as a threat to their political dominance, I expect them to make an all-out effort to defeat me," said Gramm from his former congressional office in Bryan.

Coelho confirmed Gramm's prediction.

He said the Congressional Campaign Committee would give as much funding as it could under law to the Gramm Democratic challenger.

"We have the Democratic National Committee's authority on that (and) we intend to go to the max (in providing funds)," said Coelho.

The maximum will amount to $5,000 from the congressional committee, $5,000 from the national committee and another $5,000 from the state Democratic Party. The Democratic candidate also will receive some $18,000 under a law permitting contributions for "coordinated expenditures."

THUS FAR, TWO Democratic candidates have filed for the election scheduled for Feb. 12. They are Bill Powers, 53, a businessman from Navasota, and Joe Agris, 42, a Houston plastic surgeon. A spokesman for the congressional campaign committee said he did not know whether funding would go to all or one of the candidates.

Former state Rep. Dan Kubiak of Rockdale is expected to announce Friday he will join the race.

The spokesman for the Congressional Campaign committee said Coelho would go to Texas in about a week and probably would be involved in the Democratic campaign.

Coelho also said that Gramm "is trying to take his constituents for a ride and it's all for self-purpose. He believes only in Phil Gramm and he just doesn't care."

Gramm responded: "I've always found in my experience that people resort to personal attacks when they have no case based on issues, and I suspect the name-calling will be less effective (than facts)."

He said he would begin an eight-day "shoe-leather campaign" beginning Monday, visiting 45 towns in his district. "I'm going to take them by the hand and look them in the eye and say, 'I need your help,'" said Gramm.

AT A PRESS conference hosted Thursday in Washington by House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Fort Worth, Wright said he did not know if Texas congressional Democrats would go to Texas to campaign for the Gramm challenger.

"Our guys are going to be pretty doggone busy up here," said Wright.

Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Lufkin, who unsuccessfully nominated Gramm for his reappointment to the House Budget Committee Monday, said he believed the Texas Democratic delegation would be "strengthened by events in College Station (Gramm's resignation)."

Wilson said he had "to make a lot of excuses" for Gramm before the Democratic Steering and Policy Committee, on which he and Wright are the only Texas members.

Gramm said the office would continue to operate with the current staff. "The same people will be doing the same job as always," he said.

GRAMM'S FORMER staff became employees under the supervision of the clerk of the House beginning Thursday.

Clements thinks canals will bring water

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas Gov. William Clements says he can envision canals running from as far as Canada and bringing water to replace the dwindling supplies of the Southwest's high plains region, a major supplier of the nation's agricultural products.

"We build pipelines. Why can't we build canals?" Clements said Thursday after he presented a study detailing the area's water problems to Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige.

"If we can bring oil and gas through pipelines, why can't we bring water from them?" Clements said.

Clements is chairman of the High Plains Study Council, which spent four years and $6 million studying the depletion of natural resources in the high plains region of Texas, Colorado, Kansas, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Nebraska.

Intensively irrigated, the area produces 38 percent of the value of the nation's livestock and 15 percent of the value of its wheat, corn, sorghum and cotton.

But the study said if water is not eventually imported from other states, large portions of the high plains "will ultimately be without sufficient quantities of water to continue irrigation."

Clements said he had asked Baldrige to support federal funding to help conduct a detailed investigation of the most cost effective ways of bringing water into the region. He said Baldrige indicated he would consider the request.

The study said such an investigation should be "international as well as national in scope."

Clements said this was a reference to the possibility of obtaining water from Canada, a subject he said was raised when he met with Baldrige.

"Any kind of program that would include the kind of solutions that have been suggested in this report, where we are moving huge volumes of water, is very expensive," Clements said.

Arizona man remains in jail

An Arizona man arrested here in connection with the death of his mother-in-law and the wounding of his wife remained in City Jail today after being denied bond.

Jerome John Noleen, 41, of Phoenix, Ariz., was arrested at a local motel about 3:35 p.m. Wednesday after detectives received information he might be on his way to the Midland area to harm his ex-wife and her daughter by a previous marriage, according to police.

Officers said they began watching the Midland woman's house and place of employment and arrested Noleen at a Bankhead Highway motel after she began receiving phone calls at work. The motel is located across the street from where she's employed.

Noleen was arrested on warrants issued in Arizona and is alleged to have murdered his mother-in-law and wounded his current wife by shooting her in the face with a .38-caliber handgun during a family disturbance in Phoenix Sunday night.

Police said Noleen is fighting extradition and it may take up to a month to clear the paperwork and return him to Arizona.

Travel trailer theft reported to police

In burglary and theft complaints to city police, an employee of the Ramcon Cement Co. in Irving told officers a $12,000 travel trailer was stolen from the parking lot of the Continental Inn, 2500 Commerce, sometime Thursday.

Assorted household goods valued at $3,910 were taken from an unoccupied house at 4901 Timber Court, according to a complaint filed by Foremost Builders of Midland.

And an undetermined amount of crated and boxed furniture was reported missing in a Thursday night break-in at the Carter Furniture Co. warehouse, 203 S. Fort Worth Ave. Police said a door on the east side of the building had been kicked in to gain entry.

The club will be organized at 8 p.m. Saturday at the Eagles Club, 4300 W. Wall St.

"The members that can donate blood will sign cards and we'll put them in our files," explained Browne. "In case of a community disaster we'll pull our blood donor cards out and start giving blood for the public."

TDH approves Odessa waste permit

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Department of Health has aproved an application by the city of Odessa for a solid waste permit for a 68.7-acre site in Ector County.

The disposal site is located northwest of Odessa, on the west side of FM 1936, 1.25 miles north of the intersection of FM 1936 and SH 302.

A hearing on the application was held in Odessa Nov. 30.

House OKs Loeffler's committee membership

WASHINGTON — Selection of Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt, to the House Budget Committee was confirmed Thursday in a resolution passed by the House of Representatives. It also reaffirmed Loeffler's membership on the House Appropriations Committee.

Service on both committees will enable Loeffler to participate actively on two of the three major economic policy arms of the House, according to a news release. The third is the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee.

Service on the Budget Committee is limited to six years, but a Budget Reform Tax Force appointed by the speaker, of which Loeffler is a member, is considering changes in the entire congressional budget process. These procedural and rules changes are expected to be considered early in the 98th Congress.

Loeffler indicated he will appoint Mary Sophos, who recently worked for Budget Director David Stockman, to handle Budget Committee matters for him. Working with Sophos will be Alan Kranowitz, Loeffler's chief of staff, who previously held a top position in the Office of Management and Budget under James Lynn, President Ford's budget director.

Sophos and Kranowitz have first-hand experience with the mechanics of the annual federal budget and both are known on Capitol Hill as budget experts, according to the release from Loeffler's office.

Oilman with Midland holdings sued by IRS

DALLAS (AP) — An oilman with holdings in Dallas, Tarrant and Midland counties has been sued by the Internal Revenue Service for at least $174.5 million in back taxes and penalties.

Officials of the Dallas IRS office said the case may be the largest ever brought against an individual.

The suit, filed in federal court in Dallas, contends that William R. Doyle of Joshua, Texas, understated his taxes by about $100 million between 1970 and 1981. The suit also seeks $74 million in fraud penalties, assessed interest and collection fees.

Sources close to the investigation said Doyle was involved in the oil industry and owned land in three counties, the Dallas Times Herald reported today.

The suit might be "the largest case ever filed against an individual" by the IRS, according to Robert D. Martinez an attorney with the IRS Tax Division.

Martinez said suits of this nature are "extremely rare," but he refused futher comment.

'Ungame' starts stalled communication

By LAURE WEGNER
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

The game looks like plain fun. It includes a brightly colored board, plastic tokens, a die and a pile of cards. But to its inventor, Rhea Zakich of Garden Grove, Calif., it is a way to help people stop playing games with their feelings.

Pick a card and you're confronted with questions like these:

* What do you think your friends say about you when you're not around?
* What is the worst thing parents can do to children?
* What would you do if you found $1,000 in a vacant lot?

The questions may seem mundane, but when Zakich wrote them, she did so to help herself express feelings that she had kept silent about since childhood. "I grew up in a family that said, 'You never cry,' 'You're not supposed to be afraid,' " she said.

ZAKICH'S STRONG FACADE held up until 10 years ago, when she lost her voice. She'd had some tumorous growths removed from her vocal cords, and her doctor told her that she might never speak again. Her friends seemed to assume that, because she couldn't talk, she couldn't hear. They'd wave hello to her, ask her how she was and walk away. She tried writing notes, but few people stopped to read them. Her two young sons, freed from their mother's "nagging," ignored her.

"I was devastated," said Zakich, who has since regained her voice. "I was lonely and I was heartsick and fearful. It never occurred to anyone who had known me before that I might be going through those feelings. . . I had built a wall around myself so that nobody would know how I felt all those years. It's like I had built a prison and I was sitting in it, wondering why I didn't have any visitors. And nobody would have known how to get in."

AFTER WEEKS of isolation and depression, Zakich figured out a way to make her family and friends sit down, say what was on their minds and read the notes that told what was on hers. She invented The Ungame.

She sat at her kitchen table and drew the board with markers and crayons. She painted empty thread spools for the tokens, and she never thought it would go beyond her home. But friends who played said that, although many of the questions seemed fairly ordinary, answering them had a curious effect.

"People started talking about things they usually didn't talk about with each other," she said. "I think in every case, whoever sat down and played it would say, 'Can we borrow this? We have teen-agers and we never hear them talk. We have kids who will never sit down with us.' Or they would say, 'I want to learn more about my wife. I've learned more in 15 minutes than I learned in 12 years of being married to her.' "

Zakich began making copies of The Ungame for friends and eventually had it produced commercially. Now, more than 1 million games have been sold, and some psychiatrists prescribe The Ungame for their patients. The game has been used as a tool in prisons and alcohol rehabilitation programs, and Zakich is invited to speak to groups of professional counselors.

"THE GAME is like a counselor in that it poses questions that nobody else could get away with, without people saying, 'Why do you want to know? What are you going to do with what I tell you?' It listens," Zakich said. "I think that in a game, people will stay, and that's why it encouraged me to put it in a game form. I thought that, in my family, that's the only time we sit down and face each other, when we get out the Monopoly or something. And that's the only time we commit to a certain amount of time."

When Zakich made that first game at her kitchen table, however, the idea of sitting down to talk about feelings was completely foreign to her. She said that she had invented the game out of her need, which she discovered one night halfway through her six months of silence.

Infuriated at her inability to communicate, Zakich had spent weeks holed up in her house.

"There was this night when it just seemed over-whelming," she said. "I was pacing the floor, unable to sleep, and I felt literally as though I was drowning in something. I think it was probably years of unexpressed feeling. I felt like I was going to cry, and I hadn't cried for, I'll bet, thirty years. I don't think I had shed a tear. I was a steel person, and I had prided myself for that. I thought it was the epitome of being mature and successful. Now I'm convinced that it's sick, sick, sick."

WHEN THE FEELINGS came, they came in a tidal wave.

"I crumpled," she said. "I remember lying on the living room floor in total darkness. It was sort of like by the moonlight and I was beginning to cry the kind of sobs that come up from the bottoms of your feet. It was like labor pains to me. I cried about everything, I think, that had ever happened to me that I had never honestly responded to. I saw these images of times when my feelings were hurt and times when I was frustrated or angry. As the scenes would come to me, I would wail and cry. There was a time after several hours of sobbing when I was done."

Zakich said that she believes that she was born again during the catharsis of that night.. She said she felt "an awareness that there wasn't any separation between who I was or what was left to me and who had created me."

SHE INVENTED the game a few days later. While The Ungame encourages people to talk about their feelings, she said, it allows them to say as little or as much as they want. The game includes two decks of cards, one "lighthearted" and the other for "deep understanding," but the responses people give seem to depend more on what they're comfortable saying in a particular group.

One woman, Zakich said, began crying when she answered the question, "What's your favorite color?" The woman said it was blue, because her grandmother had worn blue, and she had loved her grandmother. Another time, a young man in prison picked a card that said, "Say something about love." He said, "It's spelled L-O-V-E."

That was all that young man had to say, and, Zakich said, it was a satisfactory answer for him. There are no losers in the game, and the only rule is that no one speaks when it's another person's turn.

When Zakich found a way to make people listen, even without talking, she decided that even if she never spoke again, her life could be worthwhile. She described the day that the doctor told her it was all right for her to speak again.

"WHEN I GOT my voice back, it was almost a non-event," she said. "The doctor said I could start talking anytime. I had nothing to say. I walked out of the office, got into my car and my head was sort of spinning. I started to lapse into, 'Why did I have to go through all this?' But then it hit me that I had learned some things that I know I never would have learned. And by the time I got home from the doctor, which is about a 45-minute ride, I was actually saying to myself, 'I hope to God I never go back to the person I was before.' "

When she stopped at a traffic light on the way home from the doctor, she looked ahead, into her rear-view mirror at her own reflection and whispered, "Hello."

Magazine designed for latino women

By JUANA E. DUTY
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — If Grace Soto and Virginia Maese had really known what they were getting into, chances are reason or some sense of self-preservation would have prevailed.

But they didn't. So they decided to start a magazine, an undertaking that has been known to grind even the experienced, moneyed and well connected down to exhausted, dispirited and broke. For each new magazine that makes it, nine others fold, sometimes even before they're off the drawing boards, according to those in the trade.

Soto and Maese, both 32, have not much experience, less money and few connections, although they're working hard to acquire more of all three.

What they do have is an idea for a monthly, national magazine aimed at the English-speaking female Latino population in the United States, a vast, extremely lucrative market that is expanding fast. One issue of the magazine has already been published.

THEY CALL IT Latina! and it is aimed at Latinos 18 to 35, a group that spends about $18 billion a year in the United States, and a lot of those dollars are spent by women, according to Leo Estrada, a demographer with the University of Ccalifornia, Los Angeles, Urban Planning Department. Maese and Soto went to Estrada for help with their market research when their idea was still in the planning stages.

Based on 1980 census figures of 14.6 million Latinos in the United States, Estrada estimates that there are now 15.8 million. And roughly half of the billions spent come from English-speaking Latinos.

The women have been working almost non-stop since they undertook the project in earnest about a year ago. They had no idea how hard it would be.

"We started it out of ignorance," Maese said. "We didn't know any better."

"The magazine grew out of frustration and anger at the lack of positive images for Latina women," Soto said. Speaking over lunch in a coffee shop near their office, Soto was interrupted when a tall, blond woman who had been seated nearby came over to the table.

"If it's so awful here," she snarled at the women, "why don't they go back where they came from or at least learn how to speak English?"

BOTH SOTO AND MAESE were born in California. Their families have been in the United States for at least five generations. Both speak English fluently. "We go through this all the time," Maese said, unfazed, and resumed her lunch as if nothing had happened.

"We're doing what Ebony and Essence did," Soto continued, referring to two successful black magazines. "We're creating a vehicle for visibility.

"We started off with zilch. We made a dummy (a crude prototype) of what we wanted in the magazine and took it around to advertisers. We sold $10,000 worth of advertising that way."

An aspiring actress, Soto has a liberal arts degree from California State University, San Jose, and does commercials. The big sell is a skill she has transferred to magazine publishing. A talker, whose conversation is tinged with bits of bravado, she seems to be the pitchman of the twosome.

Maese, quieter, very direct and easier to pin down, has a degree in secondary education from California State University, Northridge. She is married to a writer for a trade publication and has two children, 5 and 7. Divorced, Soto also has two children, 3 and 4. The women and their families share a house in the Los Angeles suburb of Studio City.

THEY MET WHILE working for Lowrider, a magazine devoted to the car culture of the barrio. Soto was managing editor and Maese handled advertising. Both had been there about a year when they decided to quit.

"We were trying to think of something to do and we thought 'why not a magazine?'" Soto said. "When we first started meeting and conceptualizing, we had our offices in our purse." Since then, they managed to drum up enough cash by throwing in their savings and rounding up a few advertisers and small investors for their venture to make its debut.

The premiere issue of Latina!, billed as "the bilingual bicultural magazine for the changing American woman," came out this fall with a lot of close calls along the way.

Priced at $2.25, it was a thin — in both content and advertising — 64 pages of short articles on health, fashion, astrology, a celebrity interview with a male actor in a fully clothed centerfold pose, recipes and other standard traditional women's magazine fare.

THE DUO SAY their publication is aimed at Latino women "with a growing awareness of (their) role as important, talented, contributing (members) of this society. Whether wife, mother, secretary, actress, doctor or lawyer."

But because the first issue, which had a print run of 25,000 copies, was done on a shoestring budget of $20,000, once past the slick cover, the content was not the sort likely to draw the more sophisticated, middle-class market these editor-publishers are aiming for.

"We were not pleased with the way it looked," Maese admitted, "but we were limited by our resources."

"The first issue was very amateurish," Soto added. "We realize that. The second issue will be much better."

The second issue, with a redesigned logo for the cover and a supposedly meatier content, is due out in mid-January. It will be the February issue, which will include an interview with actor Robert Beltran, star of the film "Eating Raoul," and an article on who will make money from the Olympics. The January issue apparently was scrapped for lack of funds.

The magazine is headquartered in two small offices, where Soto and Maese work with a small staff to put out their dream. The space is donated by the building's owner, who is Hispanic. He is one of several people who have been supportive of what they are trying to do, the women said.

THE PREMIERE ISSUE of Latina! was distributed only in California, primarily in East Los Angeles, where its publishers said response was "very positive." The next issue is slated to go national, appearing in six Southwestern states plus New York, Chicago, Florida and other areas with large Latino populations.

Are 'unisex' fashion designs wave of future in clothing?

By GWEN JONES
Hearst Feature Service

In the late 1960s, designer Rudi Gernreich predicted that men and women would one day sport identical bald heads and "unisex" caftans. Two years ago, Van-Martin divined that his "ambisexual" collection — sportswear without any designated sexuality — was the wave of the future. Many other fashion forecasters envision men and women wearing the exact same uniform by the year 2000.

So you'd better make the most of those pin-stripe suits and pencil-slim skirts while you can, because there are signs that the fashion industry is heading inexorably toward a his/her look. Consider the following portents pointing toward the arrival of no-genderwear:

* Adri, the 1982 Coty Award winner, has designed her "Body 'Rappin" separates large enough so that they fit men as well as women.
* Willi Smith's spring '83 collection features the same bold plaids, checks and stripes for his male and female devotees.
* Trend-setting Japanese designers have expanded on the traditional unisex kimono by coming up with no-gender sportswear.
* Perry Ellis does boxy jackets and cropped pants for all his customers.
* The lines on Calvin Klein's sportswear are so simple that the shirts and pants appear neither masculine nor feminine.
* Women continue to flock to stores like Brooks Brothers, and it's not for sexy lingerie either.
* Gernreich's fashion prophesy has been realized in matching loungewear sets for men and women. But so far, his predicted rage for bald heads hasn't happened.
* And although Van-Martin is no longer marketing a menswear line, men are still buying his women's styles.

All these developments are offshoots of both the women's movement and raised fashion-consciousness among men. As Van-Martin observes, "The roles of men and women in society are reflected in the clothes they wear. As their roles become similar, so will their clothes."

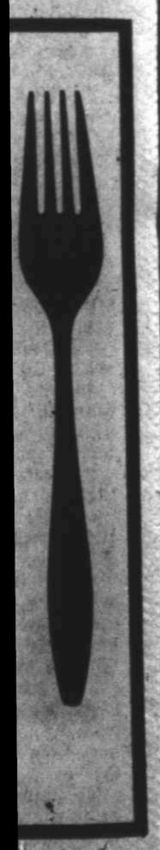

In "Fashion 2001" by Lucille Khornak, Kansai Yamamoto is quoted as observing, "In the past, women instinctively dressed to please men. This attitude will practically disappear in the future. Women can look very sensual in men's attire. People do not have to show off their sex through the clothing they wear."

Designers see sportswear as the most propitious area for the no-gender look to take hold. Explains Adri, "Sportswear is easier to produce economically and easier to fit both sexes. Sportswear isn't pretentious. It's my intention to design casual clothes that women and men will wear equally well. That means knits, easy-fitting tops and loose-fitting pants in sizes small, medium and large — typically, men wear the large size."

It's a different story, however, with eveningwear. Larry Le Gaspi voices the consenus among fashion designers when he says, "We'll always have a divergence from the uniform look for evening." In addition, Le Gaspi expects that years from now "men will still be wearing three-piece suits. They're just too traditional to die."

No matter — the no-genderwear trend is under way. The luckiest beneficiaries are going to be couples, for what could be more practical than one basic wardrobe that both partners can share?

More women owning businesses

AUSTIN — More and more women are taking the risk to own their own business, says a University of Texas graduate business student who has completed a professional report on female entrepreneurs.

Margaret R. Langford found that in the last decade (1972-82) "the percentage of women who are self-employed has risen from one-fifth of all self-employed to one-fourth, a sizable gain."

She says one of the most surprising findings was that between the years 1971 and 1977 the number of self-employed women increased by almost 25 percent, three times the rate of self-employed men.

Ms. Langford reports that when the U.S. Bureau of the Census made a study of female entrepreneurs in 1972 it found that the 404,024 women-owned businesses of that time represented only 4.6 percent of all U.S. firms and grossed only 0.3 percent of all U.S. business firms' receipts.

By 1978, she notes, more than 700,000 women-owned firms accounted for seven percent of all small business receipts.

It is predicted that at least 1,000,000 females will be self-employed in 1982, she says.

Ms. Langford based her report on demographic studies made of female entrepreneurs by the U.S. Bureau of the Census (1972 and 1977), President Carter's Task Force on Women Business Owners (1978) and other later investigations.

In an abstract prepared from her report, Ms. Langford notes that in the first Census study "women-owned firms tended to cluster in service-related industries (such as beauty shops) requiring low capitalization."

"Of the 50 states, California and New York had the most women-owned businesses," she reports. "Eighty-seven percent of women-owned firms had no paid employees. Of those that did, over 70 percent had fewer than five. Ninety-eight percent of the women were sole proprietors. The typical female business owner was most likely in her mid-forties and white."

By the time of the second Census study, she notes, the women-owned firms were still mostly service-related, achieving an average net income of about $6,500. Almost 50 percent of the businesses were located in the owner's residence. The median age of the women was 52, and 90 percent were white and non-Hispanic.

Similar trends were noted by the Carter Task Force, Ms. Langford states in her abstract. That inquiry found that 43 percent of women-owned businesses were in service industries. About 50 percent had gross receipts of less than $50,000, and 85 percent had fewer than nine employees. Forty percent of the women were between the ages of 36 and 50.

According to Ms. Langford, a personal profile of a woman entrepreneur would find she "has many traits in common with her male counterpart."

"She is self-confident and active," she says. "She appreciates her achievements and attributes success to her abilities, not to luck. She sets priorities, plans ahead, and takes risks."

Ms. Langford also found that the female entrepreneur is likely to be the eldest or only child, and from a close family.

In fact, she observes that a woman entrepreneur's traditional upbringing may give her unique abilities to help her succeed. For example, she tends to be excellent in customer relations and paying attention to detail.

"She is not threatened by having to ask for advice from an expert or through extra education," she adds.

Ms. Langford states that women are becoming more educated about business all the time.

The writer also expects to see women in the future moving away from service-related industries to more non-traditional fields.

Butz by any other name...

By JULIE SMITH
Hearst Feature Service

SEATTLE — Roger Butz, M.D. and Boston marathon runner, has been the butt of so many jokes that it was almost inevitable that he should collect funny names.

In the third grade, they called Butz cigarette. Before his first child was born, his medical school friends said he should name a boy Harry or Seymour, or a girl Rosy or Ophelia. If he specialized, he'd have to be a proctologist and hang out a shingle, "R. Butz. I Fix 'Em." And after a science-class field trip, the Northwestern University newspaper punned in a headline, "R. Butz Tired After Trip to Chicago."

"Heavens no," he says when asked if he ever considered changing his name. Butz, who is medical director and assesses risks for Safeco Insurance Co., has a sense of humor, but he knows a few people who couldn't cope as Butz and Butts. A Dave Butts became Dave Steed and has since left Safeco. "A fellow in Seattle married a model named Patricia who refused to be known as Pat Butz," he says. And a television announcer in Denver demands that his name be pronounced "Boots."

Butz's odd names number in the hundreds; he particularly enjoys a name that puns a person's profession, and shows a letterhead from Little Rock listing a urologist named James W. Headstream. "There was a life insurance company whose two claims managers were Joe Dodge and Herb Puthoff," he says.

According to Butz, a firm of certified public accountants is named Hunt and Steele, and a law firm exists by the name of Trickey and Trickey. Butz also knows of a Dr. Bonecutter, a Dr. Safety First, a surgeon named Dr. R. B. Clutz, a psychiarist named Dr. James Looney, an ophthalmologist named Dr. C. Good and a gynecologist named Zoltan Ovalry. Then there's Seattle's own Dr. Jack M. Docter, chief of staff at Children's Orthopedic Hospital.

Butz swears his names are real, can document most of them and trusts his sources for the others. He has a great sense of propriety, and gingerly tells some of his name stories. "A pediatrician and fellow alumnus had a child come in with Bright's disease, a kidney infection where the blood leaks through the kidney and into the urine, which makes it red. The child's name was Rusty Sprinkle."

But others aren't too bad: Pearly Frizzle, Olivia Boloney, Forest Bush, Beverly Hilton, Virgin Mary Christian, Orange Peel, Lemon Peel, Easton West, Minnie Mounce, Benny Boozer and Icy Monda. Bill Lear of Lear Jet fame named his daughter Shanda and his son King.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem that is eating my insides out. I started writing to a TV evangelist because I have multiple sclerosis. I know he is well-respected, in touch with God and does many good things. The problem is that he always wants more money. I sent him $100. Then he wrote to me personally and told me that something great was going to happen to me, but I had to send him another $100 first — even if I had to save my pennies and get the money any way I could!

I believe in God with all my heart and strive to be a good person, but, Abby, I can't take food from my children's mouths because this man says God will do something good for me if I do. That comes very close to saying that God can be bought.

My husband is very angry with me because I sent as much as I did. I would like to be free of my disease, but I will not deny my family the necessities in order to send this man money.

Please tell me something positive about these TV evangelists. I'm beginning to believe that all they want is my money — money that I don't have.

God understands. Why can't they? — GOT TO KNOW

DEAR GOT TO KNOW: It's unfair to tar all evangelists with the same brush. Many inspire their followers to be better people — to be kinder to their fellow men and have faith in the Lord.

God cannot be bought, nor does he reserve his blessings for those who send money to a TV evangelist.

DEAR ABBY: I am being married in the near future. My father is living, but my mother is deceased. However, my mother is with me in spirit all the time.

Is there any way I can tactfully acknowlege my mother on my wedding invitations? — REMEMBERING MAMA

DEAR REMEMBERING: You might identify yourself as the daughter of "Mr. ( ) and the late Mrs. ( )."

It is not usually done, but it if will give you pleasure, I see no reason why you shouldn't do it.

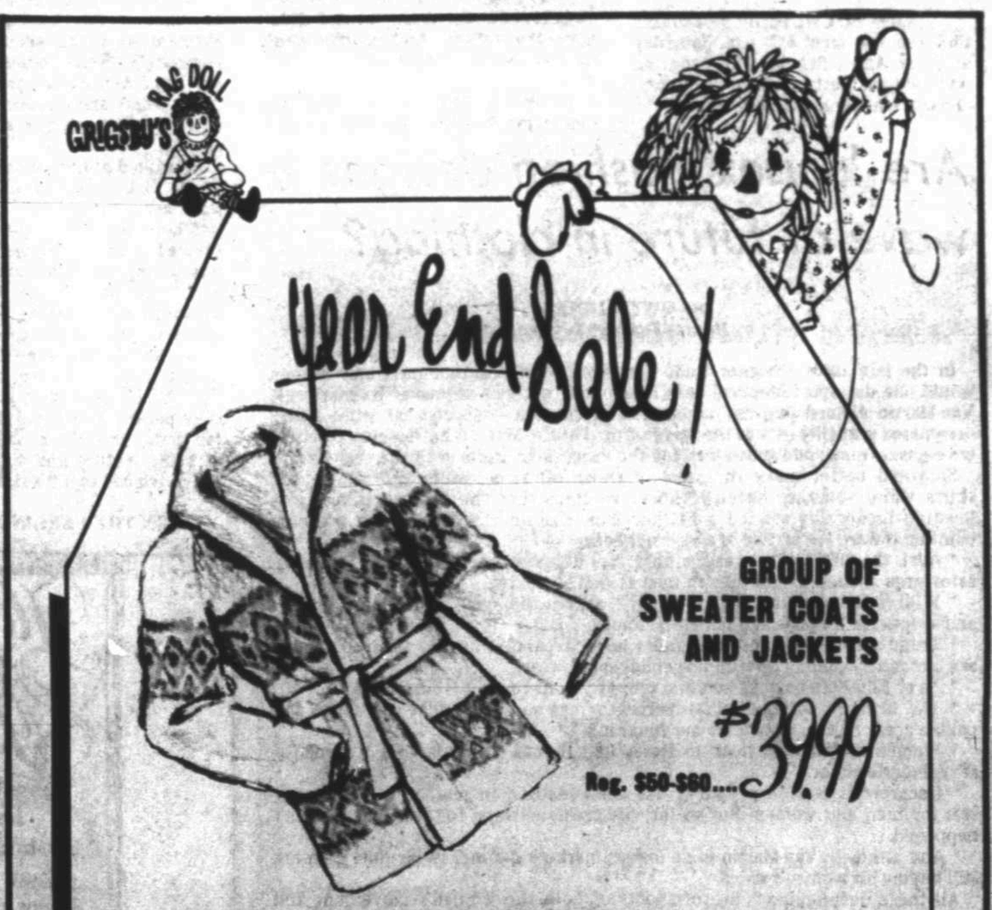

DEAR ABBY: About the business of writing a thank-you note on the reverse of a cancelled check: What is this world coming to? Anyone who can't find the time to write a decent thank-you note for a check doesn't deserve the gift. If it's just an added gesture while endorsing the check, I take it back, but to dash off a "thanks" on the back of the check and consider that adequate thanks is the pits.

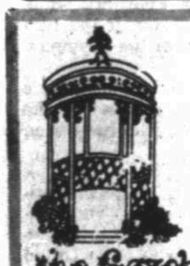

In my case, I don't even receive cancelled checks. All I get is a statement from the credit union, and I imagine that the day is coming when all checks will be handled in that fashion.

Thanks for letting me have my say. — CHECK-WRITING GRANDMA

Self-improvement books can be helpful

By JOANN RODGERS, Science Writer
Hearst Feature Service

The arrival of the New Year for medical and science reporters is frequently marked by the appearance of an editor with an armload of recently published "self-improvement" books and a "great idea." The books, enthuses the editor, are to serve as the basis of a self-betterment guide for New Year's resolution makers.

The assignment has already fulfilled the editor's New Year's resolution to rid his shelves of last year's books. He has stacked them on mine.

But I digress. The job at hand is to ease a population given to wretched excess and terminal laziness into self-inflicted behavior changes. It is a job that would cross the collective eyes of the American Psychological Association. But reporters deliver.

After 15 years of this, the first step is familiar: a thoughtful, critical selection of books that will make the grand list. This process is punctuated by loud thunks — the sound of volumes off-loaded to the plastic-lined circular file at my feet. Out go "Thirty Seconds to Slat-Like Thighs," "You CAN Do Housework with Inch-Long Fingernails," "The Executive's Guide to Belly-Breathing for Longer Life," "Exercises You Can Do on Your Coffeebreak," "Perfect Parenting on $20 a Day" and 11 "can't miss" diet books. If the Great Editor in the Sky had meant diet books to succeed, we would all look like Twiggy and Ichabod Crane.

After reading what's left, the final choices are made. This year's fall into five categories of human product improvement: Psychological, Sexual, Social, Intellectual and Physical. The books range in price from $3.95 paperbacks to $25 doorstoppers. There was no effort to be comprehensive; the selections were subjective. All, however, have the potential of triggering your resolve to do something in the next 12 months that will make you feel better at least for having tried.

PSYCHOLOGICAL

"Fathers and Sons," Lewis Yablonsky, Ph.D., Simon and Schuster. Like Nancy Friday's "My Mother, My Self," sociologist Yablonsky's book examines the shifts occuring in father-son relationships. Any father or son concerned about masculine role models, delinquency, fatherhood in divorce, homosexuality and expressions of love can find at least a year's worth of good ideas in this one.

Dr. David Reuben's "Mental First-Aid Manual," Macmillian. This book resembles nothing so much as a printed soap-opera, a veritable litany of woes. The cover promises "Instant Relief from 25 of Life's Worst Problems." The real value of this book is that your own problems may pale in comparison. Unintentionally, but as always, the author of "Everything You Always Wanted to Know About Sex But Were Afraid to Ask," is good for many laughs.

SEXUAL

"Mating," by Drs. M. Ronald Minge, George A. Giuliani and Thomas F. Bowman, Red Lion Books. This is one for inveterate test-takers and self-appraisers who like to tote up scores. The book is full of questionnaires and rating games and is designed to offer insight into your particular and peculiar preferences in a mate. It's fun and guaranteed to keep you out of singles bars for a couple of weeks.

"Talking with Your Child About Sex," by Drs. Mary S. Calderone and James W. Ramey, Random House. A question-and-answer format in no-nonsense language, this book should aid and abet good sex education for kids under 12 — and for some grown-ups, too. Invaluable for anyone who works with children — teachers, physicians, nurses and grandparents, as well as moms and dads.

SOCIAL

"Building for Tomorrow," Martin Pawley, Sierra Club Books. An architect and editor of Building Design magazine, Pawley treats the unlikely subject of garbage as an issue at least as trendy as the anti-nuclear movement. And he makes his provocative case for treating waste as a vast and rich natural resource. For all those environmentalists tired of kicking James Watt around, here is a blueprint for 21st century conservation. With photographs, drawings and instructions for such waste-users as solar panels built of aluminum beer cans. A real winner.

"What Color is Your Parachute," Richard Nelson Bolles. A 1982 revised version is still the most popular job-hunting guide in print. An appendix lists 30 job counseling centers.

INTELLECTUAL

"Science: Good, Bad and Bogus," Martin Gardner, Avon. Gardner, the well-read math columnist for the Scientific American, has gathered an entertaining, important collection of his many articles on the subject of pseudo-science. From faith healing, psychic surgery and ESP to the Bermuda Triangle and Uri Geller's "spoon bending" claims, he uncovers the shame in the sham. What makes the book a joy are the angry responses he publishes from those he exposes. This is one to read aloud.

"The Electronic Cottage," Joseph Deken, Bantam New Age. Tracy Kidder's Pulitzer-prize winning "Soul of a New Machine" chronicles the creation of the computer age. Deken's "Electronic Cottage" is where most of us will finally get in touch with that creation. In lively language, he tells us how to live well with personal computers. He provides checklists for computer shopping, what you need and don't need, easy definitions of computer jargon and metaphors that may make microprocessors as familiar as the corner post office.

"Subtle Is the Lord: The Science and the Life of Albert Einstein," Abraham Pais, Oxford. For all who have promised "someday" to try and understand the work of the 20th century's greatest mind, this is the book to make it happen. Pais has written the book so that the non-scientific reader can still grasp the meaning and significance of the man and his work — he even tells such readers which chapters to skip. But I have it on good authority from a physicist that most readers with a year of college physics and calculus can get through the rest of it.

PHYSICAL

"Just What the Doctor Ordered," Harriet Goodman and Barbara Morse, Holt, Rinehart, Winston. This is not, repeat NOT, a diet book, but a book of gourmet recipes designed for all whose health problems require special meal preparation. The diabetic, hypertensive, kidney patient and heart patient can look forward to orange cheesecake, eggplant manicotti, crabmeat amandine and brandied steak. All recipes are adapted to bland, high-fiber, low salt, diabetic and other special diets. They show calories per serving, nutrient values and diabetic exchanges. (Try the eggs benedict first!)

"Jane Brody's The New York Times Guide to Personal Health," New York Times Books. This collection — with revisions — of Miss Brody's popular personal health column is an up-to-date, sensible guide to any resolutions adults are likely to make about their health and their illnesses. Trust this one.

Making cider family business for this Pennsylvania farmer

BELLEVILLE, Pa. (AP) — On a busy day at Ben Zook's farm, in Mifflin County, his cider press extracts 3,000 gallons of the amber liquid from bushels and bushels of apples.

Zook, an old order Mennonite (also known as Amish), operates his press hydraulically with a series of belts and pulleys powered by a tractor.

The large press exerts 1¼ tons of pressure onto the shredded apples, releasing the juice, pectins and whatever pulp is not filtered out of the nylon cloths that enfold the apples. But there are human hands that see to the order of things.

The human hands are those of Ben Zook; his recently married daughter, Lois Peachey, a helper in the cider press since, as she indicates with her hand, she was about 3 feet tall; and Zook's 16-year-old son, Wilmer.

While Mrs. Zook waits for a large copper kettle of bubbling cider to cook down enough to add the "snitz" (cored, peeled and thin-sliced apples) she sells basketed apples to an occasional customer.

Apples that ripen in fall are best for cider because they've received more of the sun's sweetening rays and their wide variety when pressed together produces a beverage of superb flavor.

Pears, yielding more gallons per bushel (four instead of the usual three to 3½ from apples) because they are juicier, can also be pressed but Ben Zook says the drink tastes better if mixed with apples.

The combination of apples that produces the best tasting cider in Zook's estimation is Red Delicious, Winesap, Jonathan and Grimes Golden. He should know. He has been pressing apples since he bought the handmade cider press second-hand in 1959.

Yearly 'predictions' are specialty of tabloids

By CAROL A. CROTTA
Hearst Feature Service

Throw away that newspaper! Turn off that television!

Leading economic indicators? Presidential prognostications? Who needs them? For the price of a can of soda, you can get the experts: the National Enquirer's 10 Leading Psychics, the Weekly World News' World's Top Psychics, the Globe's 365 (Count 'Em) Predictions for 1983.

Newspapers can give you the stock prices and television news can give you instant weather, but are they going to tell you — as the Globe does — that the strange happenings on the shores of a Pacific island will be linked to an underseas monster?

Will they give you rock-'em- sock-'em headlines like these?:

Assassination for Fidel Castro, Yassar Arafat, Margaret Thatcher, Ayatollah Khomeini, Liberace! Marriage for Richard Burton and Liz Taylor, Ted Kennedy and Angie Dickinson, Rock Hudson and Doris Day! Beyond-the-grave messages from William Holden, Bing Crosby, Princess Grace, Marilyn Monroe! Aliens, all over!!!

I KNOW what you're thinking: "But are these people reliable? Can I really count on UFOs buzzing Camp David while President Reagan is in weekend retreat there?"

What questions. If you have to ask, suffice it to say that you just don't have the inquiring kind of mind this heady stuff takes. Real newshounds don't need truth. Besides, when you read that the Soviets will activate a vast network of women spies they've been marrying off for years to Western businessmen, do you really care whether it happens or not?

After a stroll down prediction lane this year, I must admit that the fare is a trifle tepid, and that worries me. All those libel lawsuits seemed to have punched the stuffing out of the tabloids. There's a lot of mealy-mouthing going on, and that's not a positive sign. Where's the old boldness to go where no news organization has ever gone before?

FAMED SEER Jeane Dixon — she who foresaw and nearly prevented the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, but didn't — has fled from the covers of the Star at no great loss, since one of her best from last year was, "Look for some late winter crop losses in the South." The problem is, no one has replaced her. The best the Star can do is "Month-By-Month Horoscope for 1983" and "10 Ways to Make Your Man Feel More Loved in '83." Sissy stuff.

The grist is no better at the Weekly World News, which seems more concerned with "I Was Held Captive by a Tribe of Prehistoric Cavemen!" than with 1983. It announces chirpily on the cover, "It's Going To Be The Best Year Ever!" and the pickings go straight downhill from there. WWN offers one measly page of never-ending optimism: Inflation will fall, spirits will rise, Russia will end the nuclear arms race, Soviet leader Yuri Andropov will kick up his heels at a White House barbecue, a completely safe yet satisfying cigarette will be invented.

Gag me with a spoon. Oh sure, an earthquake in South America will result in a terrible loss of lives and destruction of property, but that hardly makes up for gold being discovered on the East Coast.

WHERE ARE the really great predictions of yesteryear? Things like, "Rosalynn Carter will flaunt a red-hot romance with a novelist" and "Pam Dawber will swim the English Channel in record time"? The best the tabloids can come up with is, "Tom Selleck will break a world record in international athletic competition." In what event, turkey? And how will that affect his love life? Specifics never used to stop the tabs before.

The National Enquirer sports its usual Gang of 10 seers, and they do a bit better. Two full color pages and a few nifty items like, "Tatum O'Neal will quit show business and become a nun," and "'Hart to Hart' beauty Stefanie Powers will receive a message from the spirit of late boyfriend William Holden asking her to continue his fight to save Africa's wildlife, and she'll move to Africa and take up the battle full time."

But the Enquirer clearly doesn't have its heart in it this year. Talk about dull: "Elvis Presley's daughter will launch a new career as a teen fashion model," "Carroll O'Connor will lose 60 pounds," "Burt Reynolds will make a cameo appearance on a soap opera."

Zzzzzzzzzz.

No, for the really great stuff, you've got to buy the Globe. It offers 365 predictions, one for every day of the year, from 18 of the best psychics the world has to offer. This marshaling of forces clearly paid off — gems, every one:

Researchers will discover perspiration is a powerful aphrodisiac. Americans will buy and sell perspiration in "sweat donation centers." Scientists will learn how to control insects psychically. A real-life ET will be discovered. Princess Grace's ghost will be seen stalking the Monaco hospital that bears her name. Billy Graham will change his religious position and gain weight. Rip Torn will make a fool of himself.

THE TERRIFIC part about the Globe's smorgasbord is comparing the predictions for certain individuals from psychic to psychic. For example, Prince Charles and Princess Diana will, depending on whom you read:

1. Have a terrible row in public. Their hugs and kisses reconciliation will result in another pregnancy for Di. 2. Separate briefly in June. 3. Divorce.

Sandwiched in with the above, Di will be hospitalized for her weight problem (too much? too little?), will argue with Queen Elizabeth in public and will suffer a problem pregnancy, but ultimately will have five children. Charles, meanwhile, will become king.

Tom Selleck, the "Magnum P.I." heartthrob, is another favorite this year. The Globe's crystal ball really blabbed about him. From various sources, he will:

1. Be surrounded by danger on the set of "Magnum, P.I." Personal and professional problems will plague him all year. 2. Land a role in a major movie — but voice lessons will be necessary to lower the pitch of his high, squeaky voice. 3. Become sexually impotent and suffer terrible result.

THE GLOBE'S only problem, as far as I can see, is that it indulges a bit too freely in wishful predicting ("Richard Simmons will be shot," "Yuri Andropov will call on psychics to help shape Soviet policy"). And there's too much recycling of old material for my taste. Michael Landon was supposed to become a rabbi back in 1980.

Tarantula is frat mascot

FOREST GROVE, Ore. (AP) — The Alpha Zeta fraternity at Pacific University does not have a fraternity house, so for individuality the members decided on a tarantula for a mascot, appropriately named Zeta.

The fraternity is reactivating after many years of inactivity, and until the members get a house and more of the usual trappings of a fraternity, they will go with Zeta for their identification.

Zeta lives in an aquarium in the residence hall room of two of the frat members. She goes to Alpha Zeta meetings and parties.

She eats crickets and small bugs, but for a special treat the fraternity men give her a small mouse. Her food is purchased at the pet shop where Zeta previously lived.

About as large as an average man's open hand, she has six eyes, which indicate that she is female.

Tom Covington of Wasilla, Alaska, and Robert Neary of Winnemucca, Nev., are her chief caretakers. Covington used to live in Texas, and tarantulas are common there and in Nevada. The two thought they would introduce Zeta to Pacific, where large spiders are uncommon.

The fraternity members also realized that a dog or any large mascot would be difficult to keep in the dorm. The tarantula stays in her aquarium and causes no trouble, but she does attract many visitors and attention to the fledgling fraternity.

The men are deciding who will take Zeta, who travels in a regular small pet traveling box, home on vacations and for the summer. The big question is, "Will my mother understand about Zeta?"

British prime minister replaces man who led Falklands victory

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has replaced John Nott, the defense minister who supervised Britain's Falkland Islands victory, with a self-made millionaire and strong advocate of plans for bolstering Western nuclear forces in Europe.

Heseltine, 49, is expected to launch a hard-hitting campaign to counter growing public sympathy for the opposition Labor Party's pledge to ban all nuclear weapons from British soil.

Mrs. Thatcher is a firm supporter of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's plan to start deploying 572 U.S.-built cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Western Europe, including Britain, by the end of this year to counter a Soviet build-up of SS-20 rockets targeted on the West.

She also is pledged to buy America's Trident II nuclear missile system to replace Britain's aging Polaris system.

Nott announced two months ago that he would quit politics for personal business reasons. His spell as Defense Secretary included Britain's 74-day Falklands war against Argentina. He will become a rank-and-file legislator and was given a knighthood for his service.

Politically to the left of Mrs. Thatcher, Heseltine earned himself the nickname "Tarzan" in the British press when he grabbed the speaker's mace in a stormy session of the House of Commons in 1976 and wielded it in angry reaction when Laborites began singing their party anthem "The Red Flag."

Press reports said some military chiefs feared his appointment because of his reputation as a cost cutter. But The Times of London said that during his term as environment minister, Heseltine failed in his long-running battle with local authorities to get them to cut spending.

Gunman who held family hostage surrenders for in exchange for a kiss

MONTREAL (AP) — A gunman who held a suburban Montreal family hostage for nine hours surrendered peacefully in exchange for a kiss from his common-law wife, who was brought to the scene by police.

The gunmen broke into the St. Hubert home of Marcel Poitras early Thursday while the trucker and his family slept. Nine hours later, he released his last hostage, Poitras' wife Pierrette, 35.

Police Inspector Jacques Brunelle said the suspect, who identified himself as Serge Beaulieu, 23, of Montreal, is expected to appear in court today. He was charged Thursday night with kidnapping, forcible detention, breaking and entering, and illegal possession of a firearm.

The 1st year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 8 3/8% loan to value.Interest will be charged at a rate of 12 3/8% for the 1st 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months the interest will be charged at the most recent 6 months Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payment 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period the graduation in payment will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7 1/2% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principle exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATELY 13.875%. *Principle and Interest only is calculated in monthly payment.
