Crusade launched against rising prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — A nationwide citizens' crusade against rising prices got under way Monday with President Carter's chief inflation fighter saying if voluntary anti-inflation efforts fail, it could lead to mandatory controls or a recession.

But White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said Carter would not consider imposing mandatory controls.

Alfred E. Kahn told some 250 labor leaders the alternatives to Carter's voluntary wage and price guidelines "are unthinkably worse."

Kahn told the group: "There are a couple of commonly proposed alternatives that the president and I both feel are not acceptable."

But, he added, "An honest person has to admit that if this (voluntary) program doesn't work, we may get one or another of those alternatives, whether we like it or not.

"We may get the one that some of you say you want — mandatory controls. With the mood of the country the way it is today, however, and the way it is likely to be if this inflation continues unabated, we may get the one that neither you nor I wants.

"I refer, of course, to the option of clamping down on the economy so severely that we bring on a serious recession and throw millions of people out of work — your people — in a repeat of 1974-75. The president is determined not to use recession as a tool to cure inflation...

"The president is equally determined not to resort to the second method of restraining those excessive demands — mandatory wage and price controls."

Despite Kahn's comments, Powell said "absolutely not" when asked if Carter was thinking of asking Congress for authority to impose mandatory controls.

Powell said Kahn "in no way meant to imply that this president would under any circumstances impose wage and price controls."

Kahn's earlier statement came as the AFL-CIO kicked off its Operation Price Watch. The opening rally was held beneath a large red, white and blue banner reading "Bring down prices!!! An AFL-CIO community service."

Lawmakers break filibuster

Senate OKs bill allowing $35 auto fee

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate tentatively approved a bill Monday night to allow auto dealers to tack on a $35 charge for their paperwork in selling a car, then quit until Tuesday. The vote was 18-10.

The sudden adjournment broke up a 9 hour and 15 minute filibuster.

A final vote is still needed on the fee bill to send it to the House.

The filibuster was also pointed at another controversial proposal that some claim would weaken the 1973 Consumer Protection Act. Senators agreed to end their delaying tactics after Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby assured them there would be no immediate vote on the second proposal.

The Senate last week tentatively approved changes to the consumer protection act, but another vote also is needed to send that measure to the House.

Sen. Lloyd Doggett, the leader in the filibuster effort, said senators were prepared to talk extensively against the proposed changes to the consumer protection act, but they would not try to delay a vote past midnight Tuesday.

He said he did not think anything was accomplish in day-long behind-the-scenes negotiations on Sen. Bill Meier's bill to remove provisions from the consumer protection act that enable customers to collect triple damages, in most cases, against deceitful businessmen.

Meier's bill also would require customers to prove they were intentionally misled, require suits to be filed within two years of an alleged deceptive trade practice and prohibit class action suits by consumers.

Hobby claimed credit for starting off-the-floor negotiations.

Doggett said the paperwork is worth only 65 cents, and he offered an amendment to set the fee at that sum.

Schwartz later offered a $5 amendment,

Doggett, 32, tied on his now-familiar white tennis shoes for his second filibuster in two weeks. He wore the same shoes last week in a 15-hour filibuster against the bill by Meier, D-Euless.

He described Creighton's bill as a "deceptive sales gimmick" and "the first tax bill to reach the floor this session."

"The difference in this and other tax bills," said Doggett, "is that all the money will go in the pockets of members of the Texas Automobile Dealers Association.

He said Creighton had admitted his bill was prepared by Gene Fondren, the silver-haired lobbyist of the association. Doggett referred to "Clean Gene ... and the other used car dealers."

"It is a good example of the lobby legislation we are being asked to approve this session," said Doggett.

Gresham resigns post, Nix may seek job

By BRUCE FISHER

Wichita County Commissioner Clark Gresham of Burkburnett said Monday he is resigning, and one of his former opponents said he may seek the appointment to serve out Gresham's unexpired term.

In his 23 years in office, Gresham was opposed at the polls only twice. Weldon Nix, a Burkburnett businessman and civic leader, ran against him in 1974.

Gad Garland ran against Gresham in the 1978 race for Precinct 2 commissioner. Garland is a lifelong Burkburnett resident, a businessman and a farmer.

Garland said he does not plan actively to seek the appointment to serve out Gresham's term, but Nix said he may seek an interview with County Judge Tom Bacus Saturday in an effort to gain the appointment.

Bacus, by state law, has the authority to appoint a replacement for Gresham to serve until the 1980 general election.

Salary for the post is $22,167 annually with a $1,500 annual car allowance.

Gresham, 68, said he resigned due to health problems.

Nix, 58, said, "I feel I am well qualified for the county commissioner's post due to my experience in construction, maintenance and purchasing. I would very much appreciate an opportunity to serve Precinct 2."

Gresham's precinct includes Burkburnett, Sheppard Air Force Base and a large portion of Wichita Falls.

Nix was a member of the Burkburnett Volunteer Fire Department for 15 years. He served as fire chief for two years and was president of the school board for three years in his 15 years of service as a member of that board. He is chairman of the board of Burkburnett Bank.

Garland said he does not plan to seek the appointment but would be willing to serve if it were offered.

"I'm surprised at the sudden resignation of Commissioner Clark Gresham so soon after the election. I would be willing to serve out the unexpired term if that be the pleasure of those who make the appointment. I could offer to do no less in consideration of those citizens who supported me in the race," Garland said.

Burkburnett City Manager Gary Bean praised Gresham's conduct as commissioner.

"During the 12 years I have been city manager, Burkburnett has had nothing but the greatest cooperation from Mr. Gresham. This office could not ask for anyone better to work with and cooperate in areas of common interest," Bean said.

Bacus said Monday afternoon he had received two calls from persons interested in Gresham's job.

The judge said one of the callers made an appointment for Saturday to discuss the job. Bacus said he will make appointments for all day Saturday if necessary to interview candidates.

Other commissioners to remain in office

By RECORD NEWS STAFF

Wichita County Commissioner Clark Gresham's fellow commissioners offered reassurance Monday night that they are not ready to retire from office as the 68-year-old Gresham did Monday afternoon.

Gresham, of Burkburnett, announced his resignation at the end of the commissioners' meeting Monday, ending 23 years of service to the county as Precinct 2 commissioner. He cited health problems as his reason.

Asked if he has any plans to resign in the near future, Commissioner D.W. "Dod" Wiley of Wichita Falls laughed and said, "No, I wouldn't do that, especially right now."

Wiley is 74. Not far behind in age is Iowa Park's E.E. "Buck" Voyles, who is 67. Commissioner H.C. "Bud" Greer of Electra is 58.

Voyles said he has no retirement plans now, but he added that if he did, he would not comment.

Both Wiley and Voyles said they have not yet been contacted by anyone interested in the appointment to serve out Gresham's unexpired term.

According to state law, County Judge Tom Bacus has the authority to appoint a sucessor to serve until the 1980 general elections.

Voyles said although the law doesn't require it, in most past cases the county judge has conferred with remaining commissioners about the appointment of successors to fill unexpired terms.

Aiding poor called no easy task

By CINDY RUGELEY

Helping poor people and complying with anti-inflation standards can be likened to a dog chasing its tail, Ben Haney, exective director of Region VI Community Services Administration, said Monday.

Haney addressed the Community Action Corp. Board banquet Monday night and conducted a press conference Monday afternoon.

At the banquet, Haney gave an overview of community action agencies' activities since 1964 and discussed issues facing poor people.

In the three county area served by the local CAC, Haney said, more than 18,000 persons are below povery level.

While CAC across the nation should be concerned with providing assistance to the poor, Haney said it should try to discover why people are poor and find ways to help people overcome poverty.

This, he said, would involve a community effort by those persons affected.

"The whole inflation issue affects poor people more significantly than others," he said.

"I am very concerned about inflation and what we can do to help poor people fight it," Haney said.

At the same time, though, federal agencies must consider poor people in light of the federal budget itself, he added.

"I am concerned that those of us responsible for spending, do so in a responsible manner. Spending on programs for the poor can have a significant impact on the budget itself," he commented.

Currently, Haney said, CSA is trying to find an answer to help poor people. "It's not going to be easy, we will have to work on it," he said.

Another problem facing the poor, he said, is rising energy costs which falls heavily on the poor and the elderly on fixed incomes.

Haney said, though, that he did not have answers to the problem.

CSA, a federal agency, funds several programs administered by the local CAC. Included in those are the food and nutrition program, weatherization program, citizen participaton program and emergency energy program.

To oversee the administration of these programs, CSA maintains a division of operations

Crash kills Bridgeport woman

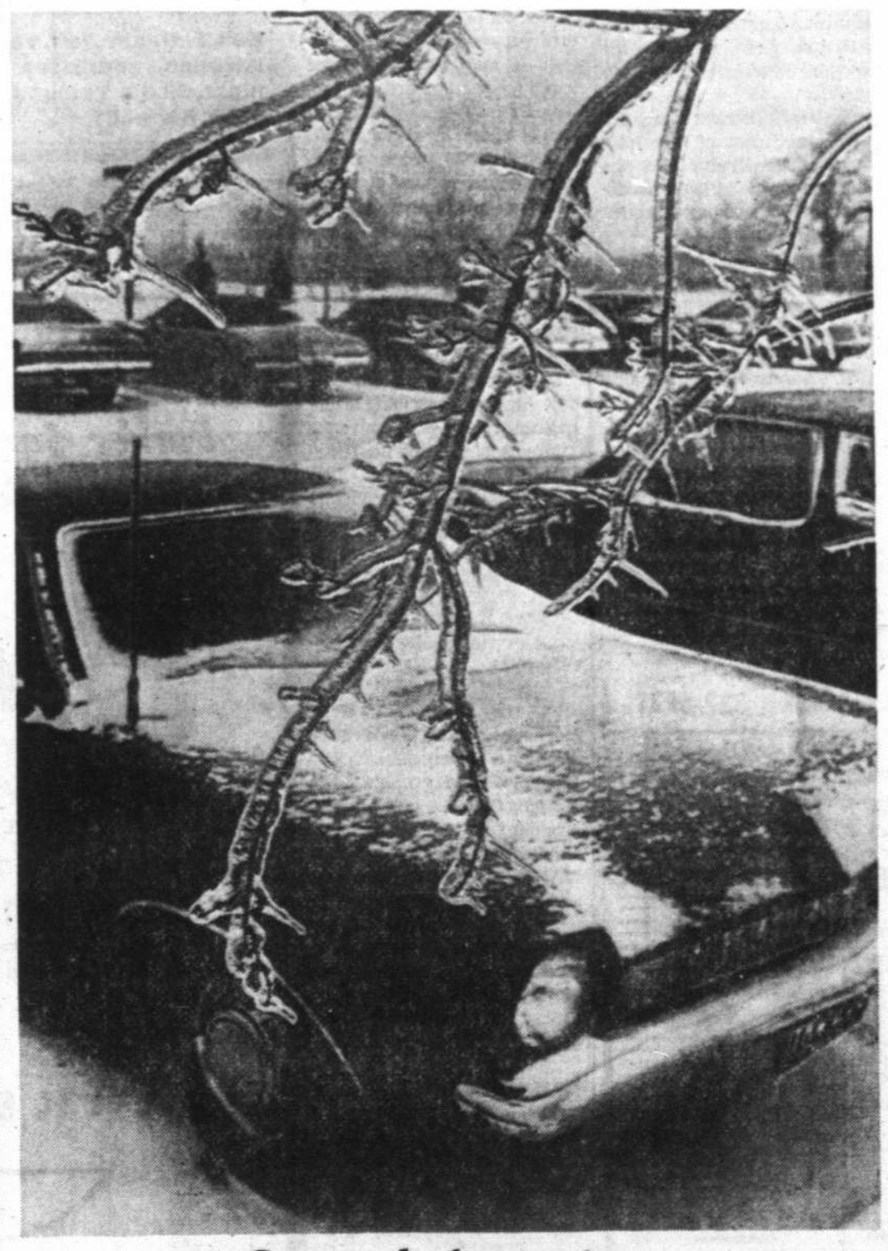

Mable Rigg, 54, of Bridgeport, Texas, was killed Monday afternoon in a head-on car-truck accident in Boyd, Texas.

She was dead at the scene, Department of Public Safety officials said.

Demon Breeland, also of Bridgeport, driver of the truck, was taken to Bridgeport Hospital.

The accident occurred at 3:45 p.m. just east of FM 730 on Texas 114.

DPS officials said the Rigg car was traveling east on Texas 114 when it was in collision with the truck.

Man arrested in Montague murder case

By REGIONAL STAFF

Carl Truman Clark remained in Montague County, Texas, Jail Monday night with bond set at $100,000 after his arrest in Oklahoma earlier Monday on a murder charge.

Clark, about 46, has been charged with murder in the death of his wife, Lea Clark, whose head was found in a dump ground March 31.

The suspect was arrested by Jefferson County sheriff's deputies off Oklahoma 70 near a cemetery, Montague County Sheriff W.F. Conway said.

Conway said Clark waived extradition late Monday and Conway took him to Montague County where Justice of the Peace Robert Fenoglio set bond.

Mrs. Clark's head was found near Stoneburg and was identified by pathologists at the Institute of Forensic Sciences in Dallas. Her body has not been found.

Clark and his wife lived in Bellevue, Texas. He reported her missing March 24, Conway said.

The warrant for Clark's arrest was issued by Fenoglio about a week ago. Clark eluded law officers who found his pick-up Friday near the Red River, Conway said.

Good Morning!

Shopping center smashed

The tornado that roared through Camden, Ark.'s south side Sunday struck first at this shopping center, destroying half the shops and heavily damaging others. Authorities established their command post nearby. Some looting was reported at the shopping center immediately after the twister struck, but authorities quickly moved into the area. (AP Photo)

Storms ravage South, Northeast

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Devastating tornadoes skipped across the South Monday while unrelenting frigid weather shrouded parts of New England with a half foot of snow and glazed much of Michigan with heavy ice that snapped power lines and darkened 230,000 homes.

At least five persons were killed on icy highways in Michigan, and police said downed power lines were sparking numerous fires in homes and garages.

One twister skipped through the outskirts of coastal Savannah, Ga., destroying several buildings — including a fire station and a feed and seed store — and injuring nine persons, none seriously.

"We had trees down and mobile homes toppled over, blocking major highways," said Joe Blessinger, a Civil Defense spokesman.

Charles Keller was inside his feed and seed store when the tornado zig-zagged through Chatham County southwest of Savannah.

"Before I could get out of the office, it was on top of us — a whole wall," he said. Two persons suffered cuts and scratches when the wall fell.

Police and National Guardsmen cordoned off the south Arkansas town of Camden to keep out looters and sightseers where a Sunday night twister cut a five-mile swath, wrecking 75 homes, an elementary school and a shopping center and injuring 27 persons, one critically.

"The damage is tremendous," said Jerry Bradshaw of the Arkansas State Police. "The estimate this morning was running about $10 million to $15 million.

Many Florida residents return home

CRESTVIEW, Fla. (AP) — Thousands of Florida Panhandle residents returned home Monday, but hundreds remained in shelters as toxic chemical vapors continued to leak from ruptured railroad tank cars.

Meanwhile, Gov. Bob Graham inspected the site of Sunday's derailment by helicopter. And Secretary of Transportation Brock Adams said he had ordered the head of the Federal Railroad Administration to the scene of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad's latest accident involving hazardous cargo.

About 4,500 people were driven from an 80-square mile area surrounding the pileup Sunday and spent the night in temporary shelters, including schools and National Guard armories.

An estimated 1,500 remained away from their homes late Monday after the danger zone was reduced to a 20-square mile area, said Tom Nichols, director of the Okaloosa County Civil Defense team.

Graham said he would investigate the possibility of stricter regulations for railroads hauling hazardous cargo in Florida. "We want to reverse the history of the past few months of this unacceptable number of accidents," he said.

However, Kenneth Dufford, L&N's operations vice president, defended the railroad, saying a report to be issued in a few weeks will support his claim that its safety record has improved.

"This track is some of the best track that's in the country," Dufford told the governor and Okaloosa County commissioners.

Meanwhile, winds pushed hazardous anhydrous ammonia vapors across parts of a 10-mile stretch of Interstate 10. The highway remained open but an environmental expert was on duty to monitor the area, authorities said.

In another development, a spokeswoman for the House Transportation and Commerce subcommittee chaired by U.S. Rep. James J. Florio, D-N.J., said the committee will deal with the L&N accident at hearings set for 10 a.m. Tuesday.

The evacuation came after 28 cars of an L&N freight train, almost all carrying toxic chemicals, tumbled off the rails Sunday in a wooded, swampy area west of Crestview. The train was enroute from New Orleans to Jacksonville.

There was at least one explosion — which left one car peeled open and flattened — and various gases began spewing from the three or four cars that ruptured.

There was only one minor injury.

Among the chemicals spilled, burned and spewed into the air were acetone, carbolic acid, ammonia and small amounts of chlorine, officials said. By midday Monday, however, most of the gas that had been in the damaged tanker cars was expended.

Charles Hickman, a 60-year-old Civil Service worker from nearby Eglin Air Force Base, was strolling along the Yellow River when he saw the train rumbling across a trestle.

"The cars just started piling off the track," Hickman said Monday from a hospital bed where he was treated for inhaling fumes. "I just can't explain it. You ever had the idea of two or three trains running into each other? That's what it sounded like."

Last May, a derailment on the other side of Crestview prompted a smaller evacuation. Last year in Youngstown, about 75 miles away, eight people died in a derailment of an Atlanta & St. Andrews Bay Railroad chemical train.

The latest wreck came just two days after the Federal Railroad Adminstration lifted a 30-mph speed limit along the section of track near Crestview.

Federal officials, citing 121 L&N wrecks as of last July, said the railroad had the worst record of any in the country for handling hazardous materials.

Railroad spokesman Kenneth Dufford said the tracks in question had been inspected by the L&N on Friday. Asked if he were satisfied with the firm's safety record, he said: "Yes sir."

A team of hazardous-material experts examined the wreckage Monday and about a dozen workers — equipped with oxygen masks — sprayed water around one leaking tanker that was leaning slightly over a damaged trestle.

Other officials plan to stay on in office

transpired more as a courtesy to remaining commissioners, Voyles said, although straw votes have been taken among remaining commissioners at the request of the county judge.

Wiley said he could recall only once in the past when a commissioner was appointed to fill an unexpired term without the remaining commissioners ever having been apprised of the appointment before the announcement.

He said Bob Holmes of Electra had been appointed to finish the unexpired term of "Uncle" Henry Haynes of Electra, who had died while in office.

Greer was Haynes' foreman when Haynes died.

At the next regular election, Wiley said Greer defeated Holmes for the post. Greer retains his commissioner's seat today.

Voyles jokingly referred to Greer as the "baby" commissioner of those currently in office because Greer has served fewer terms than his fellow commissioners. Greer, however, has worked for the county a total 37 years, beginning about age 20, he said.

One of the straw ballots cast in the past led to Gresham's appointment to office in 1956.

Gresham's political career began with a stint as Burkburnett city councilman, but the late Guy McNeely, Wichita County judge, appointed Gresham on March 5, 1956, to serve out the unexpired term of former Commissioner W.T. Holman, who died in January of that year.

McNeely selected Gresham after Gresham defeated 13 candidates in an unofficial preference election, and also won a second runoff straw vote.

Gresham will receive some retirement benefits. County Auditor Francis Stover said the county is a member of the Texas County and District Retirement Fund. Each county official can contribute up to seven percent of his annual salary toward a retirement fund and the county matches those contributions up to seven percent.

Hospital costs rose 14.4% in January

WASHINGTON (AP) — Inflation and increased patient admissions pushed hospital costs up 14.4 percent the first month of this year compared to the previous January, a spokesman for the hospital industry announced Monday.

Alex McMahon, president of the American Hospital Association, in making public the statistics, conceded that the increase will make it more difficult for the industry to meet its voluntary target of holding hospital cost increases to 11.6 percent this year.

"But it's still our goal and we are going to try to meet it," McMahon told the House Commerce Committee's health subcommittee.

The overall rise in hospital costs in 1978 was 12.8 percent.

McMahon also renewed the medical industry's opposition to President Carter's proposal to place standby controls on hospital spending in an effort to control inflation in the industry.

In detailing the reason for the newest rise in hospital costs, McMahon said two-thirds of the hike was caused by inflation in goods and services hospitals must buy, such as food and fuel.

One-third was due to a signficant increase in the volume of hospital services rendered last January, said McMahon.

Paul W. Earle, executive director of the hospital industry's voluntary effort to hold down its costs, said in a statement from Chicago that the increase in both births and surgical procedures was the biggest for any January in 16 years. He said the average length of stay for a patient decreased in January, but the increase in admissions was the second largest for any January since 1963.

"The January results are an interruption of the general deceleration, or slowing of hospital expenses," said Earle. "Clearly, hospitals are doing a good job controlling the expenditures they can, but they can't control the cost of food and fuel, nor the number of people who get sick or the number of births."

Earle said the voluntary goal of keeping the inflation rate in hospital expenses to 11.6 percent this year was based on the assumption that the overall inflation rate would be 6.5 percent.

"With inflation at a double-digit rate," he said, "it will be difficult to meet our voluntary goal.... Nonetheless, we will continue to do everything we can to meet our goal."

The hospitals are opposing Carter's hospital cost containment bill, which would impose mandatory controls on Jan. 1, 1980, on hospitals that fail to keep their costs from rising about 9.7 percent this year.

McMahon reiterated the industry view that the administration bill would cause a dilemma for hospitals "because it would limit hospital spending while ignoring the causes of increasing costs."

Also testifying was Donald I. Gent, chairman-elect of the American Protestant Hospital Association's board of trustees. Gent said imposing federal controls on church-run hospitals would be an infringement on the constitutional right to keep church and state separate.

Storms move across region

Thunderstorms and showers moved across North Texas and Southern Oklahoma Monday afternoon quickly changing skies from blue and sunny to cloudy and gray and bringing .2 inch of rain to the Wichita Falls area.

Total rainfall for the year is 6.42 inches.

Some small hail was reported late Monday.

Probability of rain for Tuesday is to decrease to 20 percent, but skies will remain partly cloudy through Wednesday, according to National Weather Service. High Tuesday is expected in the upper 50s, with the low Tuesday night in the upper 40s. High Wednesday should be in the upper 70s.

Winds Tuesday are forecast to be northwesterly 15-20 mph.

Customs law allows benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Recent changes in the law give greater benefits to U.S. residents who frequently cross the border into Canada or Mexico for business or pleasure, says the U.S. Customs Service.

U.S. residents who visit Canada or Mexico can bring $300 worth of goods home duty free under certain conditions once every 30 days. They qualify for this exemption if the goods accompany them on their return, are for personal or household use and are declared to Customs.

Machinery costs affecting farmers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Costs of machinery continue to be one of the most important factors affecting farmers, according to recent surveys by the Agriculture Department.

As of mid-March, the price index for tractors and self-propelled machinery was 280 percent of what it averaged in 1967, a year used as a base to compare how prices have changed. Prices of other machinery averaged 284 percent on the same index scale.

with 26 field representatives responsible for monitoring region VI.

Field representatives, Haney said, visit local agencies to get an overview of local programs. Each year, the representative makes one major "pre-review visit" to look at programs prior to the date when applications are made for the following year's appropriation.

In addition, agencies submit program progress reviews. The review outlines how the agency is meeting its goals for particular programs, problems the agency is facing and what technical assitance may be necessary.

CSA requires an annual audit of its programs.

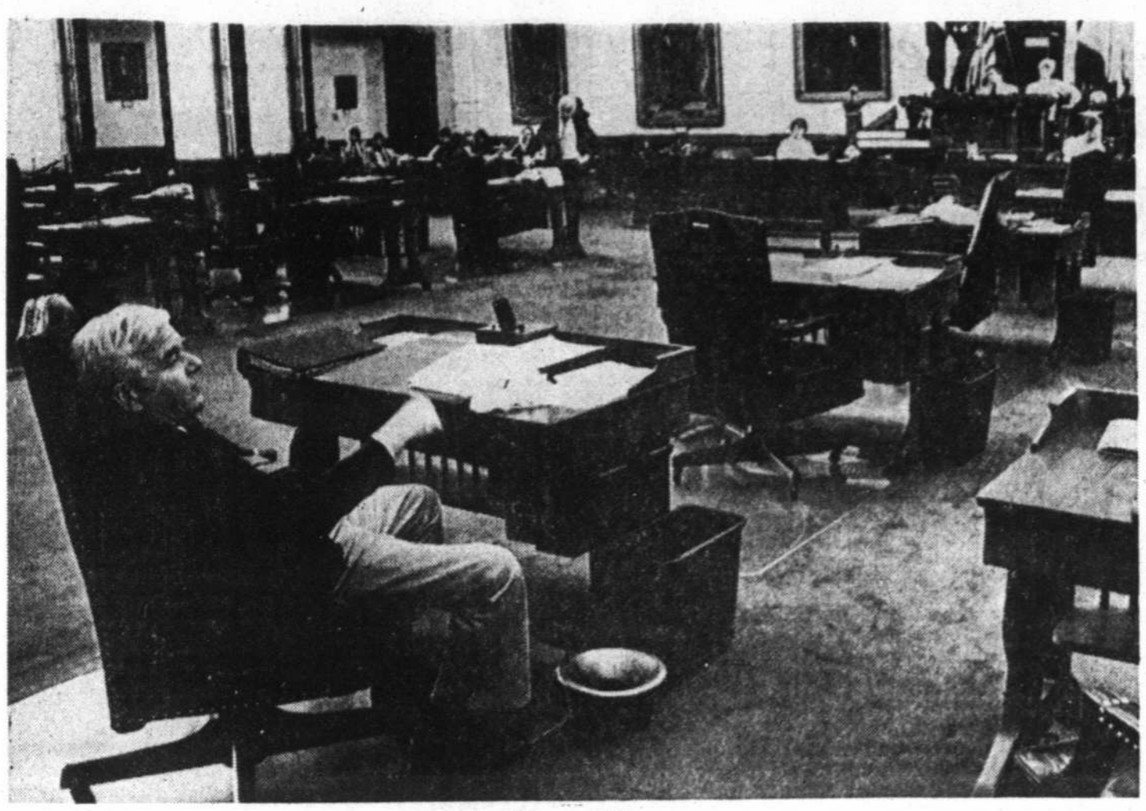

"The audit should outline the programs' impact on the community and how the funds were spent compared to how they were to have been spent," Haney said.

House committee OKs $20 billion budget bill

AUSTIN (AP) — The House Appropriations Committee voted 16-2 Monday for a $20 billion state budget bill that leaves about $365 million for tax cuts or other spending.

Speaker Bill Clayton said the House would begin floor action on the 1980-81 general appropriation bill the Tuesday or Wednesday after Easter.

While leaving millions of dollars "on the table," the committee's bill falls far short of Gov. Bill Clements' recommended $1 billion for property tax reductions.

Voting against the bill were the two Republicans on the committee, Reps. Milton Fox of Houston and Fred Agnich of Dallas.

Fox said he would fight on the House floor to reduce the size of the bill but said he did not think a $1 billion for tax cuts was a possibility. He said Clements "now recognizes that" as well but predicted the governor would veto the state budget if it passes in the form approved by the committee.

"If this is the kind of product we come out with, there is a pretty good chance we will be back working on budget matters next summer (in a special session)," Fox said.

Fox said he was "thoroughly disgusted with our approach to funding," which he said was typified by "log rolling" and unjustified increases, such as 15 percent raises for district judges.

Before ending their work, committee members took shots at University of Texas faculty members and lobbying state employees but also granted government workers more realistic travel allowances.

Senate Finance Committee members have been marking up their version of the bill for several weeks.

Some $200 million of the tax money left over by the appropriations committee's bill results from a rider, inserted at the insistence of Speaker Bill Clayton, cutting most general revenue items by 2 percent.

Not touched by the across-the-board cut were 5.1 percent cost-of-living pay raises for school teachers and state employees, the Foundation School Program and highway spending.

The $314 million in cost-of-living raises for teachers comes on top of automatic raises of as much as 4 percent for teachers in the first 16 years of their careers.

Presnal said with the automatic raises — which Clements opposes — teachers' salaries would rise by an average of 7.1 percent. This, he said, was about the same as state employees when fringe benefits are considered.

Roberts gets Swanson award

Capt. Gregory Roberts, graduating student pilot from Sheppard Air Force Base's 80th Flying Training Wing, was recently presented the Robert C. Swanson Memorial Award.

The award is given for exceptional performance and leadership by a student pilot. It is in remembrance of Swanson, an instructor pilot who died in a T-38 Talon aircraft crash last August near Woodson, Texas.

Swanson was a member of the fixed wing conversion staff which trains helicopter pilots to fly conventional aircraft.

Roberts was cited for his "superior airmanship and dedicated military professionalism."

Mary Swanson, widow of the pilot, was presented a Meritorious Service Medal, which was awarded posthumously to Capt. Swanson.

Fixed wing conversion training has been in operation at Sheppard for 20 months. Students are taught to fly Cessna T-37 and T-38 Talon aircraft during the eight-month course.

Ford trial move granted

ELKHART, Ind. (AP) — An Indiana judge agreed Monday to move the trial of Ford Motor Co., which faces reckless homicide charges stemming from a fatal Ford Pinto automobile accident.

Ford was indicted last September on charges that the automaker recklessly designed the Pinto's fuel tanks. It was the first time an automaker had been indicted on criminal charges in an auto defects case.

The charges stemmed from the Aug. 10, 1978, deaths of three young women when their 1973 Pinto sedan exploded in flames after being struck from behind by a vehicle traveling 50 mph.

The car was among 1.5 million Pinto and Mercury Bobcat sedans made between 1971 and 1976 that Ford announced last June were being recalled because of government tests showing the cars' fuel tanks leaked large amounts of fuel in moderate-speed crashes.

Burk speaker urges cleanup

By DOROTHY CROWDER
Correspondent

BURKBURNETT — Max Odle, chairman of the Burkburnett community improvement program, told the Chamber of Commerce luncheon crowd Monday that the city needs to improve first impressions of the community.

Odle is spearheading a drive to improve the city with a cleanup campaign followed by permanent improvements of businesses and neighborhoods.

He said he believes Burkburnett can be more than just a "bedroom community" of Wichita Falls. Odle told the group about success stories of Lancaster and other Texas cities that brought new life with self-improvement programs.

"Previous cleanup campaigns have not lasted because we did not educate ourselves and did not learn that all of us must work to achieve a cleaner community," Odle said.

"The solution is awareness of the problem, re-education and coordinated planning," he said.

Residents and business owners and operators who want trash and rubbish picked up should call Mrs. Lahoma Wood, city secretary. The city charges $7.50 per load.

Commissioners increase tax exemption

Wichita County commissioners Monday increased the homestead property tax exemption for persons over 65 from $4,000 to $5,000 in keeping with a promise to give a tax break to the elderly.

The increase amounts to a $9.50 savings based on the 95-cent tax rate.

Commissioners first granted a $3,000 exemption in 1975 but raised it to $4,000 last year and unofficially promised spokesmen for Wichita Falls chapter of American Association of Retired Persons that they would raise it to $5,000 this year.

Commissioners unanimously approved the item with little discussion.

In other business, commissioners postponed action on a contract by the federal government for modifications to the restroom at the county agricultural building in Iowa Park to accommodate persons confined to wheelchairs.

"I've never seen one (person in a wheelchair) up there for nearly 30 years," said Commissioner E.E. "Buck" Voyles, in whose precinct the building is located.

Voyles estimated cost of the modification would be $7,000 to $8,000.

In retaliation, he said, the county should raise the $50 a month rent to the federal agency that uses part of the building to $200 a month to pay for the modifications.

Arson suspected in carrier fires

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — A civilian engineer was killed and 34 crewmen injured in a series of 11 fires Monday aboard the USS John Kennedy, and the aircraft carrier's commanding officer said arson was suspected.

Capt. Lowell Myers said there was "very strong evidence of arson in seven of the 11 fires" that broke out between 11:30 a.m. and 5 p.m. The fires were extinquished quickly.

Myers said an initial inspection showed damage was superficial and would not extend the 10-month, $79 million overhaul the Kennedy has been undergoing at the Norfolk Naval Shipyard since March 8.

The dead man was a shipyard worker who died in a compartment adjacent to a storeroom in which the major fire of the day occurred, said Chief M.T. Walsh, spokesman for Naval Air Force Atlantic.

A shipyard spokesman identified the victim as William Lane Seward, 25, of Warsaw, Va., a civilian mechanical engineer who was doing design work aboard the carrier.

Spokesman Joe Law said the cause of death was believed to be smoke inhalation. He said Seward's body was discovered about 5 p.m. after all the fires had been extinguished.

Six of the 34 injured crewmen were taken to the Naval Regional Medical Center in Portsmouth, where they were treated and released, Walsh said. All the injured suffered minor burns or smoke inhalation.

Burk classes to get cool

BURKBURNETT (Special) — If possible, all classrooms in the Burkburnett school system will be air conditioned by the end of the summer.

Following a closed-door session of the Burkburnett School Boardd Monday night, building committee chairman Bill Pittard reported the board's recommendation that the air conditiong program be stepped up to insure completion before the next school year.

Pittard said window units will be installed in the sixth-grade building this week. Plans are to let bids for the eighth-grade building this summer, he said.

The committee also recommended that the 45 high school classrooms that remain unairconditioned also receive window units.

During the closed session, the board also discussed possible candidates for the seat vacated by C.L. Pruett.

In other business, the board reelected to a second term all officers presently serving with the board.

Named were: Stan DeGreve, president; Pittard, vice-president, and Carl Law, secretary. The election followed the canvassing of the April 7 election results which named Jerry Baber to Place 6 and Tommy Antwine to Place 7.

Committee chairmen will be Pittard, building committee; Baber, athletics; Don McKinnis, insurance, and Law, personnel.

The board voted unanimously to take no action regarding House Bill 663 which would allow a senior student to be named to the board.

Postal Service sets new size standards

Size standards for envelopes, cards and other pieces of mail will become effective July 15, the U.S. Postal Service said recently.

A seven-cent surcharge will be applied to oversized and odd-shaped pieces of mail after that time.

After July 15, pieces will be non-mailable if they are less than 3½ inches high, 5 inches long or seven thousandths (.007) of an inch thick.

Subject to the seven-cent surcharge will be first-class mail weighing one ounce or less and single piece third-class mail of two ounces or less that are bigger than 6⅛ inches high; 11½ inches long or ¼ inch thick.

The new standards were set because there are extra costs in handling oversized and odd-shaped pieces of mail. Because of their dimensions, they usually cannot be put through letter-sorting machines. Smaller mailing pieces and flimsy cards become trapped in other mail and tear and jam mail processing machinery.

Exceptions to the minimum size standards are film mailers (which can be mechanically culled from the rest of the mail), keys, identification cards and tags. Film cartridge envelopes, if lightweight, will be subject to the surcharge.

If a piece is more than one-fourth of an inch thick, it does not have to measure at least 3½ inches high or 5 inches long.

Seven more killed before Iran firing squads, 16 others released

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Seven more "enemies of the revolution" fell before firing squads Monday and Tuesday, but the strict Islamic courts showed their first sign of leniency in other cases — issuing a one-year sentence to an alleged secret-police torturer and freeing 16 other members of the old regime.

It was the first time since the courts began functioning in February that punishments less than the death sentence were announced against defendants.

Besides the seven executed, unconfirmed reports said four policemen were put to death in the southwestern city of Behbahan.

The 11 new deaths would bring to 87 the number of men shot by firing squads since the mass movement led by Moslem spiritual leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini toppled the monarchy of the now-exiled Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi in mid-February.

The official Pars news agency identified the last person executed, early Tuesday, as army Col. Houshang Tavana, a former official in Tehran's martial law adminstration.

Mohammad Ilkhain, an accused torturer of SAVAK, the shah's secret police force, was sentenced to only three years in prison, with the term reduced further to one year because the courts said he had shown repentance.

Nuclear evacuees can return

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (AP) — The first nuclear evacuees in the country's history heard the welcome news Monday that it is safe to go home.

"It's like breathing a giant sigh of relief," said Mrs. Yvonne Black, back in her Middletown home with her 18-month-old daughter after 11 days away.

"I never thought something like this could happen. It was a heck of a way to get put on the map," said the 30-year-old housewife, who found shelter with her parents outside a five-mile radius from the crippled Three Mile Island reactor.

Like hundreds of others, Mrs. Black did a hurried packing job when Gov. Dick Thornburgh advised preschool children and pregnant women to leave if they lived within five miles of the leaking plant.

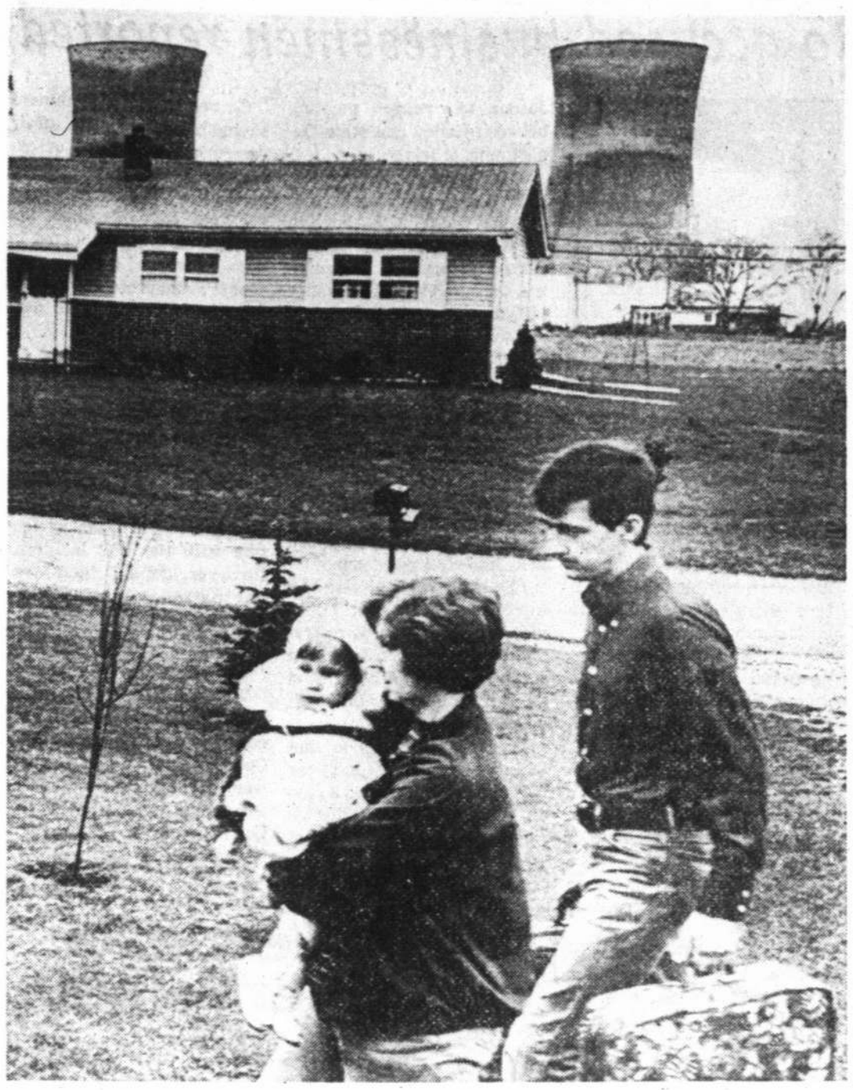

The advisory was lifted at 3 p.m. Monday and Mrs. Black was home an hour later, the call to evacuate still fresh in her mind.

"At the time, I was babysitting my niece. I was just terrified for the lives of the children. I picked them up, grabbed my two dogs and we went," she said. "I was afraid it was going to blow up. The fear is still there, but life has to go on."

Others who had their lives disrupted by the worst accident in America's licensed nuclear program wandered to homes of friends or relatives, slept on cots in mass care centers, checked into motels or even went to campgrounds.

"It's been two homesteads more or less," said Martin Pickle of Middletown, who fled with his wife and two-year-old daughter in a camper before winding up in a Hershey motel.

"My daughter has been crying just about every night. She wants her own bed. She's been wondering what's wrong with the her house that she can't go home," he said from his motel room.

HEW birthday party proving to be costly

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare is withholding documents that show it spent more than $100,000 — at least six times more than the $15,000 it admitted — in celebrating the department's 25th birthday last year, government sources say.

One source, who asked not to be identified, said: "Any comprehensive accounting of the staff time that went into it, the money spent on exhibits, printing, expenses and everything, would put it well over $100,000."

The official cost estimate made by HEW's Office of Public Affairs at the time of the two-day celebration of the agency's 25th anniversary a year ago was $15,000.

The celebration took place May 23-24, 1978. HEW's actual anniversary was April 11.

The birthday party featured an outdoor celebration starring Big Bird of the HEW-financed "Sesame Street" television show and HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr.. There were concerts, and booths and exhibits showing some of the work performed by the department. There also was a $10-per-ticket "hoedown" in HEW's penthouse cafeteria, an evening gala with square dancing and ranch-style food. Officials said the ticketed events would be self-supporting.

Many of the same persons who worked on the birthday celebration are now planning a "health fair" to be held next month in tents on the Mall across from HEW headquarters.

Last June, The Associated Press filed a request under the Freedom of Information Act for "all documents relating to the cost of the department's recent 25th birthday celebration and any other records that might help explain the total expenses incurred by the government in connection with the celebration."

The department, which by law must respond to such requests in 10 days, replied that "the records you seek are public information and would, of course, be available upon request."

But none of the materials has ever been released.

HEW spokesman John Blamphin, who had been designated to collect the materials, was asked on several occasions what had become of the request. He said the materials still were being compiled from various agencies, some of which had been slow to respond.

Asked about the request, Eileen Shanahan, assistant secretary for public affairs whose office sponsored the event, replied: "Oh, my God ... I had no idea that was not fulfilled." She promised to check it out.

Blamphin said late Monday he had discussed the matter with Ms. Shanahan following publication of the news report and she had instructed him to go through the material and release it on Tuesday.

Department sources said the materials that have been assembled showed the expenditures "substantially surpassed the $15,000 figure." But they said many of the funds were spent from accounts that would not be likely to turn up in a routine records search.

"There were work crews working practically around the clock for days," one source said. "But those costs and the overtime they ran up were apparently charged to 'facilities management'."

Conservatives win Japanese elections

TOKYO (AP) — Candidates from Japan's governing Liberal Democratic Party made a clean sweep in local elections tabulated Monday, winning all 15 gubernatorial posts put to the voters.

Most significantly, candidates backed by the Liberal Democrats, Japan's conservative party, captured the posts in Tokyo and Osaka, the two largest cities.

The victories prompted speculation that Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira might cash in on his party's rising fortunes by calling new parliamentary elections this summer.

Ohira's party now holds only 251 seats in the 511-seat lower house, but retains a slim majority because of 16 vacancies.

The election of Liberal Democrat Shunichi Suzuki to the governorship in Tokyo appeared to herald better relations between the city and the central government. Tokyo had to be rescued by the central government when it accumulated nearly $1 billion in debts last year.

Ohira praised Suzuki at a press conference, saying, "the money for Tokyo and for the rest of the nation comes from the same pockets. Mr. Suzuki is a specialist and I know he will revamp the Tokyo budget along more realistic lines."

Outgoing governor Ryokichi Minobe, who had won three four-year terms with socialist and communist backing, was accused by his critics of squandering Tokyo's meager tax base and leading the city to the verge of bankruptcy by emphasizing social welfare programs.

The socialist-backed labor leader Kaoru Ota, who ran second, blamed Minobe for the left's defeat in Tokyo.

In Osaka, Liberal Democrat Sakae Kishi unseated the communist-backed Ryoichi Kuroda. Kishi was supported by both the socialists and the Liberal Democrats.

In Fukui and Shimane prefectures, local Liberal Democrat chapters split and joined forces with socialists to push through their candidates against rightist candidates.

The socialists appeared the losers in the voting, the first of three local elections to be held this month in the nation's 47 prefectures. The elections for the remaining 32 governors will be held in 1981.

Of 2,645 seats in local assemblies contested Sunday, the Liberal Democrats captured 1,405 compared to 1,391 in 1975.

Youths arrested in Lawton vandalism

LAWTON, Okla. (AP) — Three youths, two of them 15 and one 16, were arrested Monday in connection with the early Sunday window damage to about 200 cars with high-velocity air pistols.

Police Detective Jack Shotts said two of the youths were picked up at a city high school and the third was arrested by a patrolman. He said two had given statements admitting their involvement.

Shotts said that while a complete accounting of cars damaged by the pellets had not been completed, about 200 cars had been hit.

The youths apparently were driving around and just shot out the car windows at random, using three air guns, he said.

Shotts said police decided to investigate the youths because they had been suspected in a December incident in which some store windows were damaged by pellet shots.

Lance ties to accused businessmen reported

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former budget director Bert Lance called the White House after he had left the Carter administration on behalf of two businessmen who were trying to arrange a bribe for oil drilling rights in the Middle East, the Justice Department said Monday.

However, federal investigators said they have no evidence that Lance knew of the alleged bribery attempts or received anything in return for interceding at the White House.

And White House spokesman Jody Powell said he saw nothing improper in Lance's call to the White House. Powell said the White House handling of the matter was routine.

Lance has been under federal investigation for a year and a half in unrelated matters concerning his banking practices.

The Justice Department filed a civil suit in Miami Monday seeking a court order to block any future payoff attempts by the two defendants in the Mideast case, R. Eugene Holley of Augusta, Ga., and Roy J. Carver of Miami and Muscatine, Iowa.

The defendants consented to the court order without admitting any past wrongdoing, and U.S. District Judge Jose A. Gonzales issued a permanent injunction prohibiting Carver and Holley from violating the federal Foreign Corrupt Practices Act.

The complaint alleged that the business partners paid $1.5 million through a Swiss bank account in 1976 to Ali Jaidah, then director of petroleum affairs in the Middle Eastern nation of Qatar, in return for oil rights.

They had set up a company called the Holcar Oil Corp. in the Cayman Islands in the Caribbean to develop oilfields.

According to the federal suit, they already had invested $17 million in the company and were having trouble getting additional financing to continue the project in Qatar.

BERT LANCE

As a result, the Justice Department said, they were in danger of losing their oil exploration rights in 1978 when they turned to Lance for help.

The suit said Jaidah was no longer the oil minister then and the business partners, who were behind schedule in developing the oil field, were looking for another official to bribe to renew their drilling concessions.

The National Bank of Georgia had loaned the business partners $200,000 in 1976 when Lance was bank president and Holcar's stock was put up as collateral.

The suit said that in February 1978, Lance called Eleanor Connors, an aide to Carter assistant Hamilton Jordan, to arrange a meeting between Holley and State Department officials.

Subsequently, on March 7, 1978, Holley and Carver met in Doha, Qatar, with Abdullah Sallat, the director of petroleum affairs for the country, and the U.S. ambassador to Qatar, Andrew Killgore.

The suit said Sallat indicated the Holcar drilling rights would soon be canceled.

Later the same day, the suit said, Carver told Killgore and another State Department official about the payoff to Jaidah two years earlier and then said, "Who do I go see now, how do I get it done?"

The suit said Killgore understood the remark to mean the two men were trying to offer another bribe to a receptive Qatar official, and the U.S. ambassador broke off discussions.

There is no evidence that Sallat or anyone else in Qatar was offered or received a payoff as a result of the discussions, the Justice Department said.

Carver issued a statement saying his actions in the affair "were on the advice of experienced engineers, oilmen and other professionals who are knowledgeable about the way business is conducted in Qatar. I entered into this consent to avoid protracted litigation over a regrettable personal investment."

Department officials said they could not bring criminal charges against Carver and Holley because payoffs to foreign officials were not outlawed until 1977, and the department did not have a strong enough case in connection with the 1978 incident. However, the suit filed Monday marked the first civil proceeding brought by the Justice Department under the 1977 law.

White House spokesman Powell said that when Lance called in February 1978, Miss Connors set up a meeting between Holley and a State Department desk officer for Qatar "as a matter of routine."

Proposal OK'd by Senate backing school prayer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate endorsed a proposal Monday that would strip the Supreme Court of its jurisdiction over state laws involving voluntary school prayer.

The 51-40 vote affirmed a position the Senate took last Thursday and created the possibility of a constitutional battle on the question.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., proposed the amendment, which would restrict the review powers of the Supreme Court and other federal courts. The Helms amendment was adopted 47-37 last week as an amendment to a bill to create a new Education Department.

But backers of the Education Department, fearing that so controversial a provision would diminish chances of the bill passing the Senate, arranged for reconsideration of the amendment Monday as part of a routine measure involving court jurisdiction.

This bill was passed and sent to the House.

The school prayer amendment was later removed from the Education Department bill, but only after a protracted debate.

Majority Leader Robert Byrd argued that since the idea had been accepted as part of another piece of legislation there was no need for it to remain on the Education Department bill.

But Helms warned senators that they would have to answer to their constituents if they let pass this opportunity to restate their support for the school prayer amendment.

Helms warned that he "intends to put this amendment on every available piece of legislation until both the House and the Senate get a chance to vote on it."

Don't settle for words-per-minute alone.

Remember the old typing speed tests? The more words-per-minute, the better.

That isn't always true in the real world. Because speed alone doesn't assure better performance.

That's why we developed Typing Plus, a professionally designed typing test for our office temporaries. It's not a speed test. And it's not easy. Typing Plus is a hand-written letter with 42 mistakes. How well an applicant does on it indicates her ability to format a business letter, spell and punctuate, and follow copy change directions—all without constant supervision.

Typing Plus, and other tests in our Predictable Performance System, enable us to predict which temporary is best suited for which assignment. The result: greater job satisfaction for her, better performance for you.

Next time you have more typing than typists, call us. Don't settle for a fast typist when you also need a fast thinker.

African gangs killing thousands

PARIS (AP) — Marauding tribal gangs in southern Chad, aided in some cases by mutinous troops and police, have killed at least 10,000 persons in the last month — mostly Moslem shopkeepers and their families — according to reports reaching here Monday from missionaries in the capital of N'Djamena.

Detailed reports from Jesuit mission stations said 4,000 to 5,000 persons were murdered in Moyen-Chari province and 5,000 to 6,000 in West-Logone province in the first two weeks of March.

If the missionary reports are correct, it would be the worst tribal slaughter in Africa since 100,000 members of Burundi's Hutu tribe were massacred in 1972 by the Tutsi tribe, their traditional rivals.

Sources at the missionary headquarters in N'Djamena said the tribal and religious slaughter resumed in the southern provinces on Friday, following several weeks of calm. There was no exact count of how many more were murdered in the latest outbreaks of violence.

The religious violence follows civil war in Chad between forces loyal to former President Felix Malloum and various Moslem factions. Malloum,a southern Christian, was replaced by Goukouni Oueddei, tribal chief of the strict Islamic Toubou tribe of northern Chad, as part of a peace plan negotiated last month in Kano, Nigeria.

It was the first time since the end of French colonial rule in 1960 that there has been a non-Christian head of state in Chad, a landlocked Sahara nation of 4.2 million in north-central Africa, nearly twice the size of Texas.

Following appointment of Oueddei as interim president, the sources said there was panic and anarchy among the Christians and animist worshipers in the south, amid rumors that the new regime in N'Djamena would force their conversion to Islam. Gangs of aroused southerners turned against the local Moslem minority, many of whom are merchants or moneylenders, looting their shops after killing the owners and their families.

The Moslem minority living among the estimated two million southerners has a virtual monopoly on trading, shopkeeping and moneylending in the area.

The missionary sources said particular violence was directed toward the moneylenders.

Aussie exports off

AMARILLO, Texas — The Texas Cattle Feeders Association, headquartered in Amarillo, reported Australian meat processors have begun cutting work hours and several will close in the next few months as supplies of high priced livestock dry up.

The Australian Meat and Allied Trade Federation is quoted as saying, "At least 50 meat export companies have been financially hurt after forward selling beef and then seeing live cattle double in price before they could buy them."

At the same time Mexico may not resume beef exports into the U.S.

Mexico wants to provide for its own people first. That country was to ship 76.6 million pounds of beef in 1979, but only 5.3 million pounds have been exported to the U.S. so far.

Tuesday night the classroom instruction will demonstrate the procedures and reasons for them in pecan propagation.

Instructions will be given by Virgil Woodfin, retired superintendent of the Iowa Park station. He is also chairman of the county's pecan and fruit committee.

The actual field work will be Thursday and at this time each person attending will be given an opportunity to graft or bud a pecan tree.

Participants are encouraged to bring a sharp knife, small hand saw, aluminum foil, one quart plastic bags, and horticulture or electrical tape.

Anyone who attends both sessions should have no trouble in grafting their own pecan trees.

Market 'systems' fail

Promising new systems designed to buy stocks low and sell high, in the view of most market experts, are so much hogwash. But these same experts aren't doing so hot on their own account.

Mutual funds are lagging seriously behind performance of the market as a whole, possibly because only conservative portfolios attract buyers. In an "up" or bullish market, almost anyone can become an expert. It's when the market is mixed or "bearish" that skill becomes valuable.

The artillery slogan that "Skill is better than luck" fails when consistently lucky buyers surpass market analysts. As a matter of fact, an excellent case can be made for the skirt length theory, which holds that market cycles are tied to the length of women's skirts. If skirts begin climbing above the knee, the market climbs; if they begin dropping, so will the market. Proponents can make a case for historical accuracy of the theory.

We find skirt-watching more appealing than analyzing stock market performance graphs regardless of its accuracy.

Declaring war on arson

Law Enforcement Assistance Administration and U.S. Fire Administration have announced a coordinated federal effort to reduce the incidence of arson.

Arson is an economically important crime, since a high percentage of arson fires may not be detected as crimes. If you destroy the evidence against you, as arsonists sometimes do, chances of escaping detection improve over other crimes.

As difficult as identifying and prosecuting arsonists is, a coordinated effort is our principal opportunity of preventing or controlling arson. Thus the agreement to attack arson on a coordinated national scale means more effective aid to state and local governments in their fight against arson.

U.S. Fire Administration has the primary role of providing technical assistance in fire investigation and fire training, while LEAA will provide assistance for criminal investigation and prosecution. The two agencies will work toward coordinating, with state and local fire and law enforcement agencies, joint fire-police arson detection and prosecution efforts.

A model arson "early warning system" and task force concept are being developed, and programs to encourage use of the concept will be pushed under the agreement. It's a difficult job, but coordination is bound to intensify and make more effective efforts to fight this insidious crime.

For better enforcement

Editor:

I have followed the recent columns and letters pertaining to gun control. Let's use some common sense on the matter.

Item 1: The Supreme Court in 1969 ruled that a criminal could refuse to register his gun under protection of the Fifth Amendment. Therefore, any registration or licensing law would apply only to law abiding citizens.

Item 2: Under the present system of "justice" in America, 90 percent of the people who commit crimes don't go to prison. These odds aren't much of a deterrent to a criminal. I think it's time we started punishing the lawbreaker rather than the law-abider!

I own guns. To me they are tools I use in my leisure time to pursue my hobbies. They are used for hunting and in friendly competition at the rifle range. If the need ever arises, they can be used in defense of my home. Otherwise, I threaten no one with my guns. Therefore, I object to someone, who does not like guns, wanting me to lose mine. If I break the law, I'll expect to be punished. Until then, leave me in peace to pursue my hobbies.

I think motorcycles are dangerous and I don't want one. However, many people like to ride them. If a few cycle owners misuse theirs, I don't think all the other owners should give theirs up.

Let's start punishing the criminal rather than the tool he uses. Then all crime, including murder, will go down.

Safe nukes

Editor:

I am a retired Navy hospital corpsman with a working knowledge of nuclear power. I take exception to TV and newspapers using only one side of the Three Mile Island incident. Are you publishing the whole truth or just enough to scare the general public?

The Three Mile Island incident is a typical example of operator error. Either the operator was not properly trained for the job, or panicked. Whatever the case, accidents don't happen, they are caused. The coverup job done by our government and the power company will prevent the public from ever knowing the truth.

The U.S. Navy has used nuclear power for its submarines, aircraft carriers and other surface ships since the late 1950s without a single reported incident.

I joined the Navy in 1960 and after boot camp went to hospital corps school, where we learned about all types of medicine, including nuclear medicine. We attended the same school the other crewmen did, so everyone knew the dangers and how to handle nuclear power safely. These nuclear-powered ships tie up at piers all over the world without a single nuclear accident or incident (having been) reported anywhere.

The Navy remains accident-free because of a vigorous and thorough training program that includes awareness and maintaining the attitude that only qualified personnel are given responsible positions.

Our government needs to take drastic steps to insure that nuclear power plants are operated by people who are physically and mentally fit.

I am not saying nuclear power is the total answer to our energy problem, but if used properly under the right safeguards, it can play a vital part in helping us cope with our energy problem.

Another charter looming?

By GARRY WILLS

Grant a wildly improbable hypothesis. Suppose a new constitutional convention meets, and construes its mandate loosely, as did the Philadelphia convention in 1787. Madison, in Federalist 40, explained why such a convention must look to the nature of the crisis that occasioned it, not the technicalities of its call. After all, if the calling states do not want to ratify the convention's proposal, no harm is done.

But suppose, as well, that a new convention proposed a basically new scheme of government, again, as did the Philadelphia convention. The Constitution was not what the Philadelphia meeting was supposed to come up with, mere amendment of the Articles of Confederation. And it is not inconceivable that a new convention might consider some basic aspect of our constitutional arrangement obsolete and try to replace it.

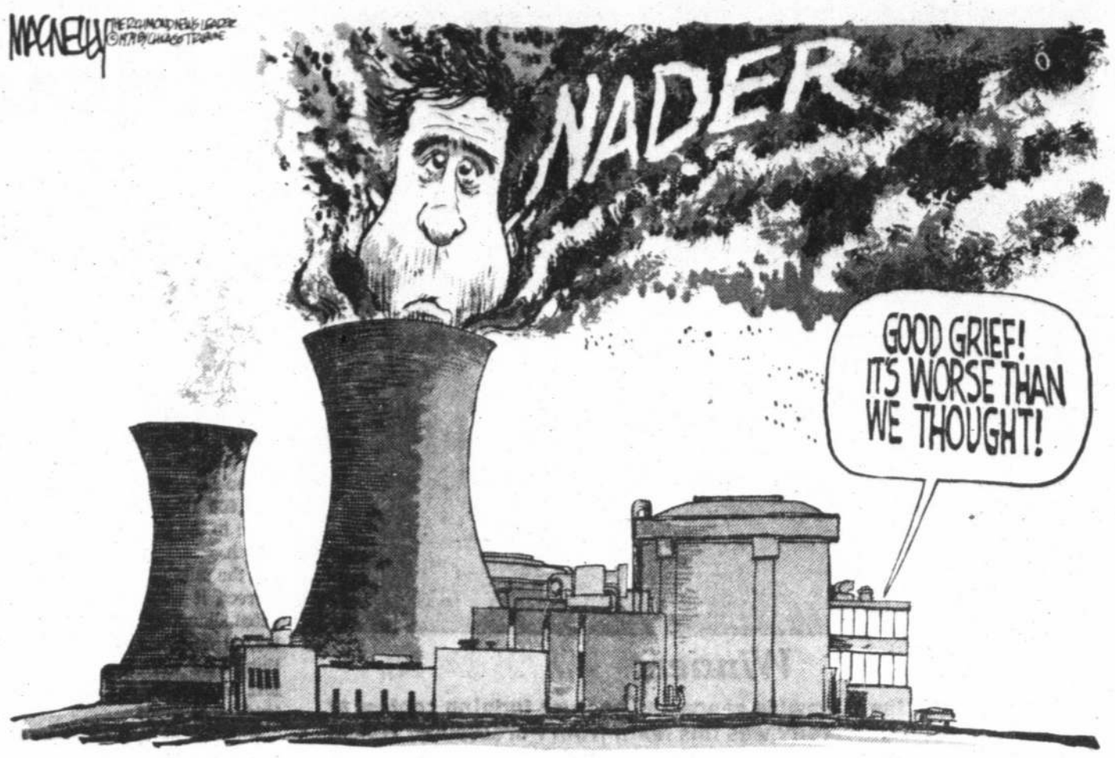

For example, suppose the states were to be superseded as administrative units by regional components of the union proportionately represented in a unicameral Congress.

No harm done. The plan will not pass unless the states ratify it, right? Right. But suppose three-fourths of the states, but only three-fourths, ratify this scheme. Would the other one-fourth of the states have to submit to it? Nonratifying states must accept a constitutional amendment passed by a necessary majority. But would this be an amendment under the old scheme, or a replacement of it by a new one?

If it is the latter, the states would be in the same situation as in 1787. Members of the Articles of Confederation, they were asked to accept a new constitutional arrangement. Madison said adoption of fundamental law cannot be settled by a majority of the states. The decision must be unanimous (Federalist 39, page 254 of the Cooke edition). All the states entering into the agreement must agree as a condition of entry. That makes sense. The states did not surrender their original sovereignty to any old scheme of government, but to a specific one. If the people reassemble by states to ratify a basically new scheme, they are returned, according to constitutional expert Edwin Corey, to a "revolutionary" situation. In that case, 40 or so states do not have the right to foist a whole new government on the others, especially since the plan I suggested would dissolve the states as a result of the state ratification (as, in the Constitution, they surrendered sovereignty by a sovereign act).

None of this is going to happen, and I do not indulge it as scare talk. But it does indicate how carefully we should think about any constitutional convention. Madison, who had the best experience of them, feared them because he saw how powerful their impact could be. That is why, in Federalist 49, he said no people should be encouraged to tinker much with its basic governmental structure.

Inside Report

Followup failure in oil crisis

By ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — The failure of a secret U.S. warning just before Saudi Arabia imposed its 1973 oil embargo has led President Carter, more than five years later, to take a low-key approach in seeking support for the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty from the Saudis, now more aware than ever of their international leverage.

The warning was a sharp note from then-Secretary of State Henry Kissinger to the Saudi government. It was pointedly recalled by the ruling royal family in confidential talks with U.S. Ambassador John West shortly before national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski's treaty-selling mission to Jordan and Saudi Arabia.

Kissinger warned that if the oil weapon was used, the U.S. would not be "responsible" for the security of the oil fields and would consider all obligations for the defense of Saudi Arabia against outside attack terminated. But the oil weapon was used with a vengeance, and without U.S. reprisal. When it was sheathed, U.S.-Saudi relations immediately returned to their former intimacy.

The Saudis' clever use of that Kissinger warning tells a good deal today about the upward shift in Saudi self-confidence. Fully aware of the crisis atmosphere in the U.S. and the industrialized world caused by the revolution in oil-rich Iran, the always-subtle, always-indirect Saudis are sending a message to Jimmy Carter: If you turn the screws on us, you are the one who will be squeezed.

The Saudi princes don't have to stress the obvious. In about two years the Soviet Union will be in the world oil market in a big way for the first time, as their own production slows and Soviet-bloc demands grow.

That Carter understood is a conclusion inescapable from the shrewd, careful way in which Brzezinski handled his delicate mission just before the treaty was signed. Brzezinski told Prince Fahd, the top man here, first that the Africa-Mideast Soviet strategic threat is too ominous to permit a serious split between the U.S. and Saudi Arabia; and second, that Carter's intention to bring Israel around to a solution of the Palestinian problem is a personal "commitment."

The Saudis accepted that low-key presidential promise from Brzezinski, delivered without hint of pressure from Washington. That leaves the mood here toward the U.S. as one of watch and wait, with no disposition either to increase oil production because the U.S. wants it or to use oil as an anti-U.S. weapon.

"We are not going to start a crusade to undermine Jimmy Carter's hope for a comprehensive Arab-Israeli peace," one of the handful of top princely policymakers said. Asking not to be quoted by name, this official ruled out any chance that Congress would undo the result of the battle last year that finally authorized the sale of F-15 aircraft to Saudi Arabia.

The realistic suspicion is high here, just as it was found in Baghdad, that the principal object of Israeli policy now is to create "confrontation" between the U.S. and the Arabs, particularly Saudi Arabia. It is known here, for example, that the American-Israel Public Affairs Committee, a registered lobby for Israel in Washington, possesses the most extensive files on the royal family ever collected, ready for use against Saudi Arabia if and when needed.

The ruling princes credit Carter with having moved Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin a good distance in two years, recalling Begin's boast not to return "one grain of sand" to Egypt. They think Carter can do a lot more and they believe his "commitment" to try.

But they don't intend to wait forever. Despite indications in Yemen that Carter finally may be moving the U.S. out of dangerous acceptance of the Soviet strategic drive, the Saudis are not sure. They carefully watch the world balance of power, and they have not been embarrassed by recent displays of Soviet affection, no matter what they say publicly.

If Israel can continue to resist American pressure for a comprehensive Mideast settlement, Saudi Arabia will mark it down as a failure of will and power, another downward notch in the shifting balance of power. Given the Saudis' new sense of their own world influence, that could and probably would mean an unpleasant change in one of the most fruitful relationships Washington still has going for it.

Hiroshima: peace at last

By GEORGIE ANNE GEYER

HIROSHIMA, Japan — There is an eerie, unreal quality about visiting Hiroshima just at the moment when a nuclear catastrophe threatened on the U.S. scene. You see, there is such a strange peace here today.

This was to have been a simple pause for history's sake, a day's voyage to a world of long ago. Instead, it became something else.

It is all so quiet here, unlike Harrisburg, Pa., where Americans were being initiated into the atomic age.

The peace monument here is simple, almost rough-hewn. The flame of peace burns beside it, to be extinguished only when nuclear weapons disappear from the earth.

I was unprepared for the simple human shock, even today, of the films of the survivors with their skin peeling off, with their weird and uncurable radiation diseases. But perhaps the eeriest parts are the human shadows still remaining on various stone buildings. These are darkened parts of the stone, where human beings literally evaporated in the shock and heat.

When I sat with Hiroshima Mayor Takeshi Araki, one of the 170,000 survivors still living in this city of 867,000 today, he took an absolutist stand. "I understand the problems of development," he said, "but also the horror of the weapons. Nuclear power could become converted to weaponry any time."

Yet even this message, like the strange time capsule of the moment of Hiroshima, seems to stop halfway through, hesitant and uncertain. This charming, dedicated man also said, with some trepidation, "Yet, even here in Hiroshima, most people are not against nuclear power."

Perhaps the conundrum is most extravagantly posited here. On the one hand, virtually nobody wants atomic or nuclear war. Yet most analysts would say we have avoided it since Hiroshima not because of any ban on nuclear weapons but because of nuclear parity.

And on the other hand, in contrast to the 135,000 Americans belonging to anti-nuclear groups, and those active in other countries, it is increasingly clear that most countries will not give up nuclear energy as a source of power. This applies particularly to the developing countries, and Japan's Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira said clearly, even after the first few days of Harrisburg, that Japan, with Hiroshima in its past, definitely would go ahead with building nuclear reactors.

What perhaps is most moving about visiting Hiroshima is that I felt horrified but not particularly guilty and the Japanese in no way attempt to make you feel guilty, because they are a realistic, relativistic people who understand violence and war.

The inscription, still a mystery to many, also is moving. Written by Japanese professor Saika Todajioshi, it reads: "Rest in peace, for the error shall not be repeated."

Originally there was a great tempest about the inscription, and scholars and journalists and just plain people still argue about it. What does it mean? What is not to be repeated? The war? The Japanese aggression? The American bomb? To this day the oracular inscription is mum.

Nuclear publicity

By DON GRAFF

With millions of words already devoted to the Three Mile Island crisis, the final ones may still be a long time in coming.

But the absence of such crucial answers at this point raises the question: What if this brush with catastrophe had occurred not in central Pennsylvania but in a closed society?

We may never have an answer unless the result of a similar incident should be catastrophe. But we can be certain it would not be publicized as Three Mile Island has been, or have similar public consequences.

If there is a real complaint about information concerning Three Mile Island, it is not in a shortage but an overabundance of details. The public has been inundated with fact, often variously interpreted, and speculation.

And if there has been confusion, much of it may be traced to the complexity of the nuclear generating process itself, plus the numerous levels of not always fully coordinated authority, state, federal, scientific, dealing with and issuing statements on the situation.

Three Mile Island has been no coverup. What it will be is open to debate.

Proponents of nuclear power see it as vindication. Safety procedures worked, justifying their faith in nuclear energy.

Opponents also see it as vindication, a near miss with disaster that should be taken as a warning that from the standpoint of safety, nuclear power is inherently unreliable.

It is neither at the moment. What it is will be determined after the incident in all its complexity and the lessons learned from it have been thoroughly aired, a word that in this context has a double meaning.

And in our open society they surely will be.

39 congressmen open attack on peacetime draft proposal

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bipartisan group of 39 congressmen Monday opened the first major congressional attack on proposals to bring back peacetime military registration and the draft.

In a letter to President Carter, the congressmen argued that compulsory service in the military or in a national service program during peacetime violates constitutional prohibitions against involuntary servitude.

Bringing back the draft "cannot fail to raise grave doubts and create new divisions and alienation among our people," the congressmen said.

The letter represents the first coordinated congressional offensive against a growing number of proposals to bring back registration, a limited draft or a non-military service program in which youths would work in hospitals, parks and other public service programs. Legislation for each type of program is pending in Congress.

The congressmen said a registration system — believed to have the best chance for congressional action this year — will be widely seen as the first step in a return to the draft.

They urged the president to openly oppose registration, the draft or compulsory national service. The letter was signed by 34 Democrats and five Republicans.

Rep. John Seiberling, D-Ohio, told a news conference that the campaign for registration and the draft seems to be developing its own momentum and is moving ahead largely unnoticed.

"This thing has come on little cats' feet," said Seiberling, originator of the letter. "Some of us were convinced they were trying to slip one over on us before anyone knows what happened."

Rep. Robert Carr, D-Mich., a member of the House Armed Services Committee, said the Pentagon has not demonstrated a need for registration and the draft.

"They never wanted to get rid of the draft in the first place," said Carr. "Any little crack in the dike they seize on as a major flaw" in the all-volunteer service.

The letter acknowledged that the Pentagon is having trouble meeting recruiting goals. Seiberling suggested the Defense Department has not tried enough incentive programs to strengthen the reserves, where the shortages are the most severe.

There are conflicting views at the Pentagon over whether the nation needs to renew registration or go another step and bring back the draft, which ended in 1973.

In general, the argument divides civilian and uniformed military leaders.

The nation's top generals — the Joint Chiefs of Staff — are calling for a registration program as the minimum necessary to improve mobilization ability.

Gen. Bernard Rogers, chief of staff of the Army, has proposed a limited draft beginning this year to reduce shortages of more than 500,000 persons in the reserves.

The uniformed leaders of the Navy, Air Force and Marines say a draft is likely if not inevitable.

Army Secretary Clifford Alexander, while advocating registration, says the draft is not needed. Defense Secretary Harold Brown has not made up his mind whether registration is needed, but has opposed going back to a draft.

New York officials to test nuclear evacuation plan

By RUTH LANDA
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — One day next year there will be an imaginary accident at a Long Island nuclear plant.

Children at schools within one mile of the facility will be sent home. Speaker-equipped helicopters and automobiles will instruct residents to evacuate the area. Roads will be blocked.

For several hours, police, firemen, hospital and school personnel and local residents will be made acutely aware of the presence of the Long Island Lighting Co.'s Shoreham plant as Suffolk County officials test a mass evacuation plan.

A similar test was conducted in 1977 in Oregon, where agencies in the vicinity of the Trojan nuclear plant in Rainier were alerted, some residents evacuated and several workers symbolically exposed to radiation and "treated" at local hospitals.

Norman Kelly, director of the Suffolk County Department of Emergency Preparedness and Civil Defense, said Monday that the accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant near Harrisburg, Pa., has sparked a reevaluation of an evacuation plan approved last year.

Kelly, who will direct the simulated emergency on Long Island, said the existing four-mile evacuation radius has been extended to 10 miles from the $1.2 billion plant, which is scheduled to open in September 1980. About 100,000 persons live within the 10-mile area.

The test, affecting approximately 5,000 residents living within a mile of Shoreham, will be conducted about six months before the plant becomes operational, Kelly said.

"It's going to be an educational process for the people in that area," he said. "We're going to get all the agencies involved that would normally be involved should the real thing happen."

The dry run of the three-stage alert will begin with the plant informing police that "We have an accident," Kelly explained.

In simulated Alert A, agencies will be put on the alert but with the idea that effects of the "accident" are confined to the plant.

In Alert B, the situation will become more serious, and "people would be told to stay indoors, close their windows ... and children would be sent home to be with their parents," Kelly said.

In Alert C, he added, "people would be notified through the news media where to go."

It has not yet been determined how many residents will be evacuated to a temporary "staging point," where they would congregate before going to emergency shelters if a real accident were to occur — but it could be several hundred, Kelly said.

"I'm confident of their cooperation," he said. "I'm confident that the people would welcome the fact that we do have a plan for their protection, to give them peace of mind. We hope we never have to exercise it."

Connally contributions reach $1.27 million

AUSTIN (AP) — Former Texas Gov. John Connally has received more than $1.27 million in contributions in his drive for the Republican presidential nomination, his Austin office said Monday.

National Campaign Chairman Winton Blount said that the Connally for President Committee report to be filed this week in Washington will show financial contributions of $1,277,000 for the period ended March 31.

The 600-page report includes 10,000 individual contributions from 49 states, Blount said.

Blount noted that much of the report came from Connally's campaign tour of Texas in late February that started his campaign drive.

O'Neill supports pay parking plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said Monday that Congress probably will follow President Carter's example and require members and their employees to pay for their parking places.

"I think they should pay like everyone else," said the Massachusetts Democrat. He said reporters who can now park for free on the Capitol grounds also should be forced to pay for their places.

O'Neill said, "it's a matter of fairness. We should be treated alike."

President Carter announced in his energy speech last week that federal employees around the country who now park free or at reduced rates will have to begin paying commercial-type rates for their spaces.

His announcement did not include congressional employees.

A bill or resolution would have to be passed to begin charging for congressional parking places. Such legislation was introduced in the House on Monday by Rep. Bob Whitaker, R-Kan., who said Carter's energy plan "requires sacrifices of all of us."

Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., introduced a similar bill in the Senate. "The free ride is over," Percy said. "All federal employees, including members of Congress and their staffs, should pay for parking just like every other citizen."

Percy's previous attempts to get such a bill approved attracted few supporters.

State employees reject offer

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A union of 1,100 Rhode Island state employees unanimously rejected on Monday a contract offer with a 5.5 percent pay raise.

Michael Bernstein, president of Local 580 of the Alliance of Social Service Employees, said the state's latest offer was unacceptable. He said the union will set up picket lines Tuesday if a better proposal is not made by then.

Tipton seeking sewer grant

FREDERICK, Okla. (Special) — Tipton city officials have discussed acquiring a $200,000 Environmental Protection Agency grant for a sewer project.

Mayor Mike Gray said he and a board member, Clyde Pratt, attended a pre-application hearing and completed the first step.

Funding will not be received before Oct. 15 and City of Tipton will pay 15 percent of the cost.

Ann Landers Says

Deaf people need special attention

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: Many deaf people work or come in contact with people who have had little or no previous contact with deafness. Here are eight excellent suggestions for "hearing" people from Dr. Leo E. Connor, executive director of the Lexington School for the Deaf, Queens, N.Y. Please print them, Ann.

1. It is important to have the deaf person's attention before speaking. He may need a tap on the shoulder, a wave of the hand or another signal that you wish to communicate.

2. Speak slowly and clearly, but don't exaggerate and overemphasize. This distorts lip movements and makes speech reading more difficult.

3. Try to show facial and body expression when you speak. You don't have to be a pantomime expert to do this.

4. Not all deaf people can read lips, and even the best speech readers miss many words. Therefore, if the deaf person does not reply or seems to be having difficulty in comprehending, rephrase the thought rather than repeat it exactly.

5. Look directly at the person while speaking. Even a slight turn of the head can obscure the deaf person's vision. Other distracting factors include beards and mustaches. Remember this.

6. Don't be embarrassed about communicating with paper and pencil. Getting the message across is more important than the medium used.

7. Establish eye contact. It helps convey the feeling of direct communication.

8. Don't restrict conversation to business matters. Deaf people have feelings and opinions. Humor, gossip and small talk help everyone relax.

Many deaf children attend regular schools where teachers and hearing students have to learn communication techniques. This mainstreaming is much easier with deaf students who have learned to speak, rather than relying solely on sign language. The most important advice for those who hear is to remember that deaf people CAN speak. Deafness is not muteness.

Information about communicating with deaf people, as well as speech and hearing instruction for deaf people, can be obtained at the Lexington School for the Deaf, 30th Ave. and 75th St., Queens, N.Y. 11370, phone (212) 899-8800. — Steady Reader

Dear Reader: Many thanks for passing on some extremely useful information.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm 14 and can't understand why my parents don't sleep together. Last night I woke up and heard Mom and Dad arguing about where she should sleep. He wants to sleep in the spare bedroom and she wants to sleep with him.

Dad complains about Mom's snoring but I've gone on trips with Mom and had to sleep with her and I never heard any snoring. What's wrong here? Please print this. They never miss your column. — Asking In Anaheim

Dear Ana: I don't know what's wrong, but I know where your parents can get some information on the subject as well as a list of possible solutions. It's all in the Landers Encyclopedia under Snoring. (The piece was done by an authority, Marcus H. Boulware.)

It is not necessary to buy the book. The public library has it. It would be awfully nice if you got the Encyclopedia for them. While they have it, they just might read a few other chapters that could help — such as "How to Deal With Problems in Marriage."

Do you feel awkward, self-conscious — lonely? Welcome to the club. There's help for you in Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key to Popularity." Send 50 cents with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Your Health

Initial periods often irregular

By DR. LAWRENCE LAMB
NEA Writer

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have a problem that I'd like some help with. I've been on a diet and lost about 20 pounds in a year. I'm happy about that but when I lost weight, I also lost my menstrual period. At first I didn't worry and kept right on with the diet and taking water pills. Then I started to worry. I'm only 16 and I've had a period regularly for about a year. Could I still get pregnant?

I've been to doctors and they all say that it will come back soon if I stop worrying about it. I really can't stop worrying. I'm still trying to lose weight, but I did quit taking the pills for a month already. In January, it showed a little but then after that it mysteriously disappeared again. I hope you will give me an honest opinion.

DEAR READER — Your doctors have given you the correct answer. When a girl first starts having menstrual periods, they are often irregular and may disappear for a time. Later on, when she becomes fully matured, they are more apt to be regular. This could happen to you whether or not you had been on a diet. It's just part of the developmental process.

It is true that severe dieting or fad diets which don't give you a balanced diet can cause you to have such a problem. Years ago a study in men at the University of Minnesota showed that when they were on a 1600-calorie balanced diet and lost a lot of weight, they lost their normal interest in sex as well as undergoing a lot of other changes. If you abuse your body, you should not expect it to function normally.

I am all for losing weight, if you need to, but I like to see people do this in a sensible way that's not dangerous to their health. I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet, because it is a balanced diet plan that you could rely on. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of Wichita Falls Record News, P.O. Four want firm declared public utility

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Attorney General Jan Eric Cartwright and the three members of the Oklahoma Corporation Commission filed applications Monday to declare Mustang Fuel Co. a public utility and bring it under the commission's regulation.

The two filings were separate, but both made the same general allegations, including claims Mustang is engaging in the sale and distribution of natural gas in Oklahoma, and, therefore, is subject to regulation as a public utility.

They also questioned Mustang's close relationship with Oklahoma Gas & Electic Co.

The commission has scheduled a 9 a.m. preliminary hearing Tuesday on an earlier Cartwright request that OG&E be required to refund more than $30 million in alleged overcharges to its customers because of the nature of its business dealings with Mustang.

Commission Vice Chairman Bill Dawson said Cartwright's overcharging allegation and the twin moves to bring Mustang under the commission's regulation probably will be handled separately.

"They are somewhat related," he said, "but it would be difficult to combine them into one case."

Dawson also said the Mustang applications filed Monday by the commission and Cartwright probably will be combined, since both make the same allegations.

Cartwright said his filing on Mustang was made as part of his claim that Mustang, a gas gathering and transmission company, and OG&E have "a sweetheart deal at the expense of Oklahoma utility ratepayers."

He said OG&E, as a public utility which is regulated by the commission, "in effect guarantees the profits and debts of Mustang, which is not currently regarded as a public utility and is not subject to any regulation.

Official says liquor ban not working

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — "I cannot enforce the open saloon prohibition" with current manpower, Alcoholic Beverage Control Board Director Richard Crisp said Monday, adding the state ban on liquor by the drink "has very little effect."

Crisp said it would be "a more realistic approach" to let counties decide if they want to allow sales of liquor by the drink.

Such sales are "occurring in most of the counties anyway," Crisp said.

Enforcing the current law "is a very frustrating situation," Crisp said. He said his agents sometimes "go into one club one night an an hour later go back" and find liquor by the drink is being sold again.

Crisp said his agents have staged raids on about 490 clubs in the past 12 months and confiscated 21,405 bottle of liquor.

But despite their efforts, "to think that liquor by the drink is not prevalent in Oklahoma is hypocrisy," Crisp said.

Crisp said he is not optimistic about getting changes in state liquor laws.

Witness disputes radiation dangers

Oklahoma

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A "smashed thumb injury" is more serious than over-exposure to radiation, a Kerr-McGee Corp. official testified Monday in the $11.5 million Silkwood plutonium contamination trial.

Wayne Norwood, 51, of Oklahoma City said Kerr-McGee nuclear fuel plant workers who received exposures to radiation exceeding weekly standards were restricted to non-radiation areas. The transfer of the employees did not affect the plant's lost time accident safety record, he said.

"If you smashed your thumb and it hurt so bad you couldn't work, then that's a lost-time accident, isn't that true?" Silkwood lawyer Gerry Spence asked.

"Yes, the injury would be more severe (than being overexposed to radiation)," Norwood said.

"And that's what you told workers out at the plant?" Spence asked.

"I don't believe we discussed it in those terms, but basically, yes," Norwood said.

Spence asked Norwood to read from reports showing there were 25 workers involved in single-exposure incidents that gave them more than one week's maximum permissible dose of radiation in the five-year period ending in 1974.

Most of the 25 workers received more than two times the limit and one got 38½ times the maximum weekly dose, the reports said.

The dose rate, Norwood said, is calculated to allow nuclear workers who do not exceed it to work 50 weeks a year for 50 years before receiving a full lung burden of radiation.

Norwood was health and safety manager for the nuclear plant at the time of Miss Silkwood's death in a 1974 auto crash. Her estate is suing Kerr-McGee alleging negligence in her plutonium contamination, an allegation the firm denies. She was a Kerr-McGee lab technician.

Norwood testified the DPTA treatment he offered Miss Silkwood after her contamination doesn't remove insoluable plutonium from the lungs or bloodstream. He said she was exposed to that type of plutonium.

Spence said DPTA has never been licensed by the U.S Food and Drug Administration, and Norwood agreed, but said the then-Atomic Energy Commission permitted the use of the chemical compound to remove internal plutonium contamination from workers.

Norwood testified earlier he has been eligible to become a certified health physicist since 1960, but he testified on cross-examination he has never applied to the board that determines whether individuals will be permitted to take certification tests.

He said although there are more than 600 certified health physicists in the U.S., the majority of health technicians working in the nuclear industry are not certified.

Casino issues jump ahead, DJI off 1.99

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Gambling stocks jumped ahead while the rest of the market drifted lower in slackened trading Monday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had climbed almost 60 points over the past five weeks, slipped 1.99 to 873.70.

New York Stock Exchange volume dropped off to 27.23 million shares from Friday's total of 34.71 million.

Analysts said many investors seemed to have taken a cautious position on the belief that the market was due for a pause after its recent rise.

With the rest of the market quieting down, most of the action reverted to the oftenvolatile gambling group.

Among the Big Board volume leaders, Caesars World climbed 4½ to 67⅛; Hilton Hotels added 2⅜ to 33¼; Bally Manufacturing 3 to 69½, and Holiday Inns 1¾ to 18⅜.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer gained 1⅜ to 24; Harrah's 1⅜ to 25½, and Ramada Inns ⅝ to 11.

Resorts International class A shares, up 1¾ at 49⅞, topped the active list at the American Stock Exchange.

Elsewhere in the market, F.W. Woolworth did not trade on the NYSE following the announcement that Brascan Ltd., a Canadian company, planned a $35-a-share offer for Woolworth.

The Pacific Stock Exchange reported a single 200-share transaction in the stock at 25⅝, down ⅜.

The Justice Department said its antitrust division or the Federal Trade Commission would look into the Brascan bid, as they normally do on all large acquisition proposals.

Brascan's class A stock did not trade during the day at the Amex.

Pan American World Airways rose ⅛ to 6. The company reached a tentative agreement with flight attendants over the weekend, averting a strike.

Monogram Industries, which estimated substantially higher quarterly earnings from continuing operations, picked up 2⅛ to 38.

Mandatory celibacy upheld by Pope for Catholic priests

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Calling celibacy a "gift," Pope John Paul II on Monday upheld mandatory celibacy for Roman Catholic priests and took a tough stance against those seeking dispensation from their vows.

The pope issued a strong reaffirmation of the 1,500-year-old ban on priestly marriage in a 35-page pastoral letter to all priests of the church and in a separate eight-page letter to the church's bishops.

"Since the priesthood is given to us so that we can unceasingly serve others after the example of Christ the Lord, the priesthood cannot be renounced because of the difficulties that we meet and the sacrifices asked of us," the pope wrote.

The priest has imprinted upon his soul "the mark of an indelible character," that makes a priest unique.

"The people ... want above all to see in us such a sign," the pontiff told his fellow priests. "It may sometimes seem to us that they do not want this, or that they wish us to be in every way 'like them.'"

But to believe that is "to be guided by appearances and fall victim to a fundamental illusion," the pope advised.

The pope issued the letters for the Holy Thursday celebration this week, and called on all priests in Rome to join him at Mass in St. Peter's Basilica.

Priests in the Eastern rite of the Roman Catholic Church and ministers in most non-Catholic Christian churches may marry. And the celibacy rule is believed to be a major reason behind the startling jump in the defections of Roman Catholic priests in recent years.

Garwood says he lives in fear similar to that in Vietnam

GREENSBURG, Ind. (AP) — Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood, charged with desertion in time of war, said Monday he risked his life to return to the United States only to "live in almost the same fear" he knew as a prisoner of war in Vietnam.

Garwood said he first learned he faced charges that could lead to his execution when he stepped off a plane in Bangkok, Thailand, during a stop on his way home after almost 14 years in Southeast Asia.

"I was a POW coming home. It was a blow. I didn't believe it. I thought it was some kind of farce," he said of the charges.

"This was not the America that I knew, the one that I went to fight for. I can't believe that," said Garwood. "I've returned to my own country and live in almost the same fear."

Garwood said he asked about his family during the same stopover.

"They said my mother had passed away. That really tore me up. She died without ever knowing if I was alive or dead," he said.

The 33-year-old Marine is on 30-day convalescent leave from the Great Lakes Naval Training Center and is visiting his family in the southeastern Indiana hamlet of Adams where he grew up.

In an interview Monday in a car outside the print shop where his father works, he related the adjustments he's had to make since he returned to the United States — not as a hero but as an alleged deserter.

There are other American prisoners of war who have said that Garwood collaborated with the Vietnamese. The military is investigating those charges now.

"This thing," Garwood said of the charges, "I just leave up to the judgment of the American people. I don't worry about it. If anything happens, it can't be worse than what I've been through."

Bad judges

Bill considers how to get rid of them

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — As more and more political and social issues evolve into legal questions, a group of some 600 men and women plays a growing role in American life.

It is left to federal judges to pronounce the final word in fundamental debates and resolve seemingly intractable problems:

Should a convicted murderer live or die?

Should a pregnant woman have the alternative of abortion?

Should a race of people oppressed for so long be given special preference as compensation?

The answers, often unpopular with huge segments of society, carry force only as long as Americans remain confident in the judges who provide them.

Then what about a judge who deserves no confidence?

Congress has been wrestling with that question for years without result, but in one bill before it this year the issue is being given serious connsideration.

The Constitution's Article 3 states that all federal judges "shall hold their offices during good behavior." Article 3 allows a judge's removal by impeachment "for and conviction of treason, bribery and other high crimes and misdemeanors."

As in the impeachment of a president, the House of Representatives is granted sole power to impeach a judge. Impeachment actually is an indictment, requiring a majority vote in the House.

Then it is up to the Senate to try the judge. Conviction requires a two-thirds vote.

Impeachment of judges, however, remains little more than political theory. Only nine judges have been impeached in the nation's 203-year history. Four were convicted, four acquitted and one resigned during the process.

As early as 1809, President Thomas Jefferson complained about the impeachment process as "a bungling way of removing judges ... an impracticable thing."

Not since 1936 has a judge been removed from office by the political process.

In 1972, Judge Otto Kerner of the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, was convicted after standing trial for conspiracy, bribery, income tax evasion, mail fraud and perjury.

He stepped down from his duties but refused to resign until the day after his final appeal failed — five days before he went to prison.

During the 14-month interval between his conviction and resignation, Kerner collected $50,000 in federal pay.

The Constitution, what's more, mentions nothing about judges who, although not dishonest, are physically or mentally impaired or who abuse their powers.

The problem is conceded. As a little-known federal appeals judge more than a decade ago, Warren E. Burger, voiced concern.

"I would not presume to say how many U.S. judges now in active service are not physically able to perform their work adequately, but every observer knows that there are more than a few," said the future chief justice.

SAM NUNN

WARREN BURGER

As Congress considered early legislation to supplement the impeachment process, then-Sen. Joseph Tydings said, "It is uncertain whether senility, insanity, physical disability, alcoholism or laziness — all of which are forms of unfitness that require remedial action — are covered by the impeachment process."

Congress resisted Tydings' attempt and subsequent ones, but now is considering a proposed law that would allow the judicial branch to police its own ranks. The proposed Judicial Tenure Act — often called the "Nunn bill" for its sponsor Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga. — would make the a judge's removal possible short of impeachment.

The bill would set up a council of federal judges to consider firing judges for "willful misconduct in office, willful and persistent failure to perform duties of the office, habitual intemperance or other conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice that brings the judicial office into disrepute."

Passed by the Senate on a 43-31 vote last year but not acted on by the House, the bill is once again before Congress. It has won the support, in general, of the American Bar Association, and the enthusiastic backing of the American Judicature Society.

A 1978 editorial in a society publication, said, "If the competence and integrity of the judiciary is to be maintained ... Congress must confront the infrequent but nevertheless troublesome problem of the corrupt or disabled federal judge."

The Nunn bill has a host of critics, however.

In a New York speech last year, Judge Irving Kaufman, who heads the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, called it "fatally misguided and ... an ominous threat to the republic and the judicial branch."

Others say the bill would crush individuality on the bench and strip judges of the independence a lifetime job is supposed to foster.

The example most often cited by backers of Nunn's bill is the late U.S. District Judge Willis Ritter of Salt Lake City, who died in office last year at age 78. He had been a federal judge since 1949.

Lawyers for the federal government and state government in Utah had asked the federal judiciary to remove Ritter from any case involving the government.

Ritter's exploits are well-known by lawyers: how he once ordered marshals to jail noisy courthouse workmen; how he had a reporter jailed for several hours without explanation but reportedly after seeing the journalist pick his nose in court; how Ritter bullied lawyers and witnesses.

Kaufman called Ritter's case "an aberration" and warned: "Do not tamper with the judge's tenure. Do not undermine judicial independence."

Bodies of 5 crewmen found in wreckage

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The bodies of five Navy crewmen from San Diego were found Monday in the mountainside wreckage of a helicopter that went down on a flight from the West Coast to El Paso, Texas, the Civil Air Patrol reported.

The HD-3 helicopter, from North Island Naval Air Station in San Diego, crashed Sunday afternoon on 6,700-foot Johnson Peak in the Dragoon Mountains about 50 miles east of Tucson, CAP spokesman John English said. The cause of the crash was not known, he said.

The wreckage was spotted Monday morning by a CAP search pilot, English said.

Nuggets hope to snap NBA playoff slump

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

The Denver Nuggets are out to erase their reputation as pro basketball's answer to the quarterhorse: great speed from the starting gate but no staying power.

"We're playing our best basketball of the year going into the playoffs," says Dan Issel, the center of the Nuggets, who open their best-of-three first-round National Basketball Association playoff series against the Los Angeles Lakers Tuesday night. "This hasn't always been true of Denver."

No, it hasn't. In their first two years in the NBA the Nuggets started fast, faded a bit as the regular season wore on and then were eliminated in the playoffs without getting past the conference finals.

This year they are hopeful of reversing that trend. They started slowly and stumbled along under .500 for much of the year. Finally, on Feb. 1, a nerve-wracked Larry Brown resigned as coach and was replaced by Donnie Walsh.

Suddenly the Nuggets turned things around, winning 19 of 29 games since the All-Star break and 10 of their last 12. Although they failed to win their division for the first time since soming into the NBA, losing out to Kansas City on the final day of the season, they definitely are heading into the playoffs on the upswing — despite the absence of all-star forward George McGinnis, who suffered torn ligaments in his left ankle on March 30.

NBA PLAYOFFS
TUESDAY
Portland at Phoenix, 8:30 p.m.
Los Angeles at Denver, 8:30 p.m.
WEDNESDAY
New Jersey at Philadelphia, 7:05 p.m.
Atlanta at Houston, 8:05 p.m.

"George's injury has turned out to be a motivating factor," observed Walsh. "We have experience, good experience. These guys know what to do at the end of a game. They know what you have to do to win and they have taken up the slack."

In Tuesday night's other NBA playoff game, the Portland Trail Blazers — another team that closed with a rush — are at the Phoenix Suns. On Wednesday night, New Jersey is at Philadelphia and Atlanta at Houston.

Walsh knows winning in the playoffs without McGinnis won't be easy.

"We'd have to play pretty perfect basketball to go all the way," he conceded. "But up until Feb. 1, I didn't think — based on injuries and the number of new players we had — that we would even reach this point.

"Since Feb. 1, they all have played great basketball," added Walsh. "They have made a believer out of me. Nobody thought we would make the playoffs, especially when George got hurt. But this team is ready for the playoffs."

So are the Lakers, who were blown out by Seattle 113-93 Friday night but bounced back to close their season by beating Portland 99-98 and Phoenix 111-103.

"Those were two fine defensive games," said Los Angeles Coach Jerry West, "and that's very encouraging going into the playoffs."

West said he would start Don Ford at forward alongside Jamaal Wilkes, benching Adrian Dantley, a regular forward most of the season. Dantley missed three games recently because of a sprained left ankle and played poorly over the weekend, finishing up with 2-for-9 and 2-for-10 shooting efforts.

Meanwhile, Phoenix Coach John McLeod is wary of Portland, calling the Blazers "a tremendous team. They made a great surge to get into the playoffs. Since the All-Star break, Portland and Seattle have been the two best teams in the Western Conference by far."

The Suns have been using veteran Gar Heard at power forward while Truck Robinson recovers from the mysterious virus that kept him out of the lineup for a month. Robinson gradually is playing his way back into shape and McLeod gave him a long workout in Sunday's loss to Los Angeles, keeping Heard out of the game entirely.

Portland, plagued by injuries for most of the year and laboring below the .500 mark, closed fast to make the playoffs, getting much mileage from rookies Ron Brewer and Mychal Thompson. Brewer has provided scoring punch at guard while the 6-foot-10 Thompson has exceled since Coach Jack Ramsay inserted him into the starting lineup at the "small" forward position.

"Mychal has helped us at both ends of the court," said Ramsay. "He is quick enough to handle any of the league's small forwards defensively, and offensively his size gives them problems."

Overall, Ramsay said, "I feel the players should feel good about this season. We never really got back to full health during the season, but I think this is a team that never gives up."

Rockets' surge assures home court advantage

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Rockets defeated division winners San Antonio and Washington in their final two regular season games to earn the home court advantage against Atlanta in the National Basketball Association playoffs beginning Wednesday.

And Calvin Murphy, the littlest Rocket, figures the home court advantage could be pivotal for the Rockets.

"It is a must to have the home court advantage in a mini-series," said Murphy. "Anything can happen in a mini-series. The way Atlanta played us this year, if they had the home court, let's face it, it was almost summertime for us."

But the Rockets, who blew big leads in several key games that could have given them the Central Division title over San Antonio, apparently weren't ready to plan their summer vacations.

"The key is that we are playing together now, everyone is playing within his limitations," Murphy said. "Everyone is contributing from his strength. I'm shooting from outside, Mike Newlin is driving inside, Rick (Barry) is doing the great passing, Slick (Watts) is coming off the bench to keep us in a great tempo, Moses (Malone) is gobbling up every rebound that comes anywhere near him."

The best of three game series begins in the Summit Wednesday night and moves to Atlanta Friday night. A third game, if necessary, would return to Houston Sunday. The series winner advances to the second round against the defending NBA champion Washington Bullets.

"We've been tough when it counted," Newlin said of the Rockets' season ending surge. "The past three days, we were faced with the absolute necessity of winning three games in three days. We did it and we finished it by winning on the home court of the winningest team in basketball.

"What we've accomplished has been nothing short of amazing."

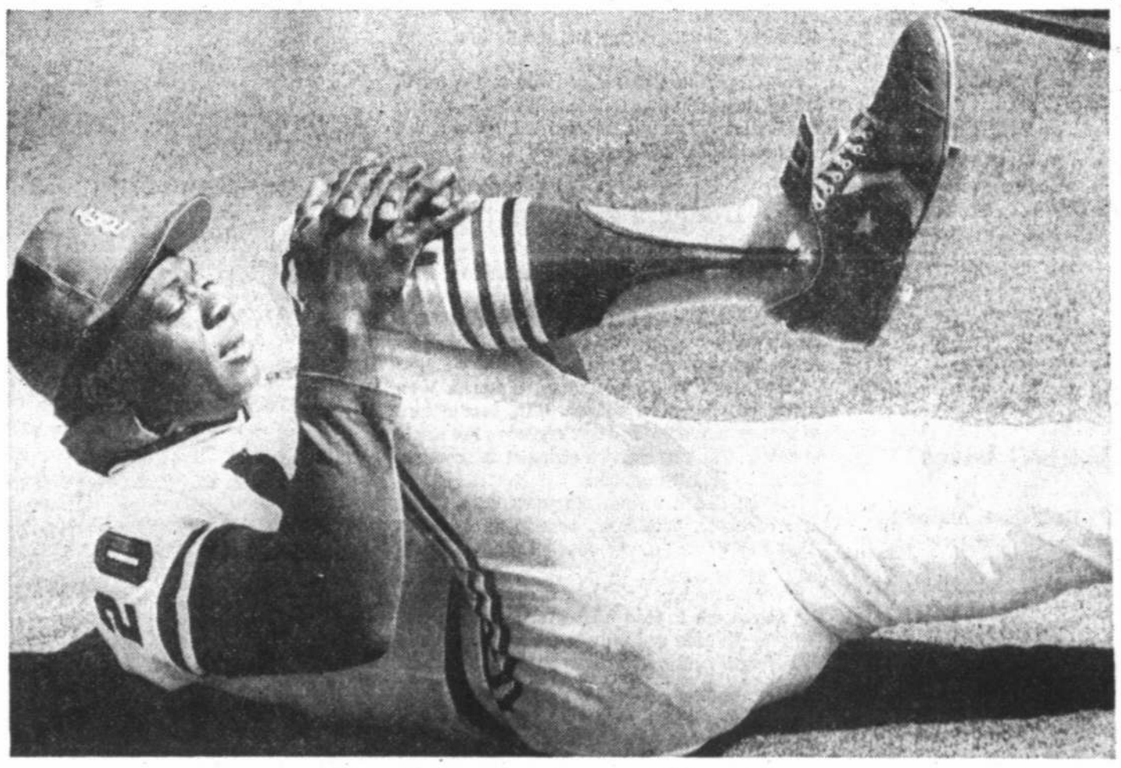

Gaining the home court advantage against the Hawks may have been the most amazing. The Hawks own a 34-7 home court record, second best in the NBA, while compiling a less than impressive 12-29 record on the road.

Houston defeated Cleveland, San Antonio and Washington on successive nights to end the season.

Their victory over San Antonio in the Summit Saturday night kept them alive in the Central Division race against the Spurs. The Spurs clinched the crown with a win over Cleveland Sunday.

Rockets Coach Tom Nissalke, looked back on the roller coaster regular season with satisfaction.

"This is the season that means more to me than any one I have ever coached," Nissalke said. "We had to completly redo our team with all the new guys coming in, and believe me that takes a lot of work."

Brock says he will retire

St. Louis Cardinals' Lou Brock, holder of the major league record for career stolen bases, announced Monday that he will retire after this season. Brock has stolen 918 bases in his career. (AP Photo)

Stolen base king will retire

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Cardinals speedster Lou Brock, holder of the single-season and all-time major league stolen base records, will retire at the end of the current season, it was announced Monday.

Cardinals President August A. Busch Jr. told a news conference Brock's No. 20 uniform would be retired. Only three other Cardinals uniforms have been retired, those of Dizzie Dean, Stan Musial and Bob Gibson.

Busch said, "I will be talking to Lou in he future about the possibility of his continual association with the St. Louis Cardinals and Anheuser-Busch."

Brock set the single-season stolen base record in 1974 with 118 bases, topping Maury Wills' previous high by 14. He broke Ty Cobb's all-time stolen base record of 892 in 1977 when Brock ended the season with 900 stolen bases.

Brock, 39, now has a total of 918 stolen bases.

The speedster also has 17-season career batting average of .292 and a World Series batting average of .391.

A native of El Dorado, Ark., Brock began his major league career with the Chicago Cubs in 1961. He was traded to the Cardinals in 1964.

"I've had to approach this decision to retire the same way I approach the game," he said. "It was a tough decision. It was not one made overnight.

"I wanted to retire at a time that I can still make a contribution to the team. It's a source of pride to me to have played during the championship years of the '60s, the challenging years of the early '70s and with this young club that is bouncing back now."

Brock played in the 1964, 1967 and 1968 World Series, which he named as his great thrills in baseball.

He said "nothing has been firmed up" about any future association with the Cardinals.

Brock said he arrived at the decision around Christmas but delayed making the announcement. "We wanted to come back to St. Louis to make the announcement instead of doing it in spring training. St. Louis fans deserve to be in on it."

Manager Ken Boyer said he expects Brock, who currently has 2,900 career hits, to reach the coveted plateau of 3,000 hits by season's end. "The way he's playing now, I can't imagine him not achieving that," Boyer said.

Busch noted Brock's sterling accomplishme ts and said, "It 2ould be my fondest wish to have added to this list the reality of Lou joining the very elite few in baseball to reach the milestone of 3,000 hits. While records are important, they never have been the prime objective of Lou Brock. This type of unselfish dedication is what Lou Brock is all about."

The Cardinals have set aside Sunday, Sept. 9, as Lou Brock Day, which Busch promised "Lou and his family will always remember."

"While the chant of Lou, Lou Lou may not be heard in Busch Stadium after this year, it will never be forgotten," the club president said.

Rangers debut on home field against Indians

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Righthander Doyle Alexander, who had a 9-10 record last year and a 3.86 earned run average, was named the starter Monday for the Texas Rangers' American League home opener against the Cleveland Indians Tuesday night.

Game time is at 7:35 p.m. CST.

DOYLE ALEXANDER

Cleveland has already picked righthander Rick Wise for the game which was expected to draw less than capacity at Arlington Stadium which seats 41,000.

The 28-year-old Alexander allowed only three earned runs in 19 innings in spring training. He was listed as a backup starter when spring training began but solid performances and an arm injury to Jon Matlack gave him a chance at the Ranger starting rotation.

"Doyle is a veteran who has a tremendous amount of pride," said Ranger Manager Pat Corrales. "He had a challenge and he responded to it.

"And it's really not a surprise it worked out like this because above else Doyle is a battler."

Former Rangers third baseman Toby Harrah and outfielder Bobby Bonds will be going against their old teammates. The Rangers feature former Indians Buddy Bell at third base and Jim Kern in the bullpen.

Forch named NL player of week

NEW YORK (AP) — Ken Forsch of the Houston Astros, the first major leaguer to pitch a no-hitter this season, was named National League Player of the Week Monday.

Forsch hurled his no-hitter Saturday night, pitching Houston to a 6-0 victory over Atlanta, walking two and striking out three.

Runner-up for the NL honor was Ken Reitz of the St. Louis Cardinals, who stroked six hits in nine at bats last week, including four doubles.

Malone, Hayes are top MVP candidates

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Moses Malone of the Houston Rockets and Elvin Hayes of the Washington Bullets , two of the National Basketball Association's most tireless workers, are in a neck-and-neck duel for most valuable player honors with neither giving any ground.

The edge, however, seems to be in favor of Malone because the NBA players name the award winner and Hayes never has been very popular with his peers during his 11 seasons in the league.

Nevertheless, each is getting his share of kudos from his coach.

"Moses is going to be the MVP," said Houston Coach Tom Nissalke after Sunday's final regular season game. "If he doesn't, it is a steal. Anybody who doesn't vote for him is stupid.

On the other hand, Washington Coach Dick Motta says, "He (Hayes) is doing things that people thought he would never try. Look at all the years he was doubleteamed and wouldn't pass off. Now he'll do it and the team usually benefits.

"When he gets into one of his shooting streaks ... it's got to demoralize the other team. I mean, he is tossing them in from everywhere."

Nissalke: "One reason that Moses is a great player is that he just charges ... keeps going. If Kareem (Abdul-Jabbar of Los Angeles) played every night like Moses, they would erect a statue to him.

"No way Elvin can compare to Moses," Nissalke continued. "Moses is the glue of our team. They're (Bullets) so deep they can win some days without him. Elvin is a great player, but they're a deep team."

As for the players themselves, each has indicated he would like to take the coveted award, but neither would come right out and say he deserved it more than any other player in the league.

"I feel the best man should get it and there are a lot of great ballplayers in the league," said Malone, a four-year man who had the kind of dream season that dominates headlines and impresses the voters. "You never can tell who is going to win but right now I think I stand the best chance."

In the 1903 World Series, Jimmy Collins of the Boston Red Sox went to bat a record 36 times.

Tribe sweeps ACU

MSU hurler just misses perfect game

ABILENE, Texas — There have been no perfect games pitched in college baseball this year, according to MSU Coach Mark Benedetto, but young Rick Roberson came to within three outs of pitching a perfect game here Monday as he helped the Indians sweep a double-header from Abilene Christian University, 5-1 and 5-3.

It was Roberson's first collegiate appearance ever, and the young hurler pitched six innings in the nightcap without giving up a hit or allowing any base runners. His bid for a perfect game was lost in the seventh inning as the gave up a walk and his bid for a no-hitter was broken up as the next batter singled.

Roberson played high school baseball at Everman.

The non-conference sweep upped the 19th-ranked Indians to a 20-10-1 record going into another double-header here Tuesday against Hardin-Simmons University.

Midwestern struck for some early runs in both games, then held on for the wins. In the first inning of the first game left fielder Rick Loesch knocked in a pair of runs to spark the three-run inning which was all the Indians actually needed as Doug Lee and Garry Holub combined for a three-hitter.

Right fielder Don Reed singled and Dave Connacher walked ahead of Loesch's triple and first baseman Danny Hagen singled home Loesch to account for the three runs.

In the second inning, the Tribe struck for two more as catcher Will Kelly reached base on catcher's interferance, designated hitter Daryl Frazier was hit by a pitch and both came home on second baseman Steve Newell's single.

The Wildcats scored as catcher J. Bullock homered off Lee in the sixth inning.

Roberson started the second game and got some offensive help as Loesch homered and Connacher tripled and Newell and first baseman Brett Patty doubled in the contest.

The Indians scored two in the first, one in the third and the winning runs in the seventh inning.

LeFlore's single scored Mankowski and Lance Parrish and the Tigers added runs on pitcher Steve Mingori's throwing error and a sacrifice fly by Jerry Morales.

Mankowski, who drove in a run in the fourth inning, singled off Rich Gale leading off the seventh. One out later, Trammell singled and LeFlore lined an opposite-field double to right.

HOUSTON (AP) — Joe Ferguson's run-scoring single and Bill Russell's solo home run powered the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 2-1 victory over Houston Monday night, ending the Astros' three-game season-opening winning streak.

Dusty Baker doubled off Houston starter Vern Ruhle, 0-1, to open the Dodgers' fifth, went to third on a grounder and scored on Ferguson's line single to center. The run ended a string of 26 scoreless innings by Houston pitchers.

Houston tied it in the fifth when Enos Cabell reached on an infield hit, went to third on Art Howe's single and scored on Alan Ashby's grounder.

Baker clubbed the first home run of the season in the Astrodome to lead off the sixth to give the Dodgers the lead and provide the winning run in their fourth consecutive triumph after a season-opening defeat.

Reds 9, Braves 4

ATLANTA (AP) — Pitcher Tom Seaver and catcher Johnny Bench belted home runs Monday night as the Cincinnati Reds smashed Atlanta 9-4 in the Braves' home opener.

Seaver got his 10th career home run in the fourth inning, a solo shot over the left field fence off reliever Frank LaCorte. Bench's homer, his first of the season, sailed over the center field fence in the sixth inning, also with the bases empty.

Seaver, 1-1, allowed seven hits and struck out 10 in eight innings as he stretched his career record against the Braves to 27-8. The hard-throwing right-hander was knocked out in the second inning on opening day last week in a loss to the San Francisco Giants.

The Braves' four runs came as a result of homers, a three-run blast by Gary Matthews in the third inning and a bases-empty shot by Barry Bonnell in the seventh.

680 games later: 12 teams left

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

It took 180 days and 680 games to eliminate five of the 17 National Hockey League clubs from Stanley Cup playoff contention. Now, with up to 12 games to be played over the next four days, four more clubs will meet their fate.

The NHL's best-of-three preliminary round playoffs begin Tuesday night with the Atlanta Flames testing their postseason jinx against the Toronto Maple Leafs, the Buffalo Sabres battling to break their string of frustration against the Pittsburgh Penguins, the surging Philadelphia Flyers hosting the Vancouver Canucks and the Los Angeles Kings visiting the struggling New York Rangers.

The Flames, who started the season by going unbeaten in their first 12 games, labor to snap a string of playoff futility which has seen them lose 10 of the 11 games in their playoff history. They finished third in the Patrick Division three consecutive years, and lost the preliminary round each time.

After their super start this year, they dropped to the division cellar. And they'll bring a stretch of consistent inconsistency into their opener against the Maple Leafs.

"We better play better than this in the playoffs or we'll be watching pretty soon," said Coach Fred Creighton's after Atlanta dropped its regular-season finale 4-2 to the Flyers Sunday night.

The Flames will be meeting a club sparked by the goaltending of Mike Palmateer and the playmaking of center Darryl Sittler. Sittler missed 10 midseason games with a knee injury but finished strongly, collecting a goal and 13 assists in his last six games.

Atlanta, which won three of the four games between the teams in the regular season, boasts a 50-goal scorer in center Guy Chouinard and the consistently excellent goaltending of Dan Bouchard. But they'll have to surmount the devastating specter of past playoff performance.

"I think we might be a little more uptight going into the playoffs than most teams, because we've lost three of these best-of-three series in succession," said Flames General Manager Cliff Fletcher.

The Sabres have a similar string of trouble with the Penguins, who visit Buffalo's Memorial Auditorium for Tuesday night's opener. Pittsburgh hasn't lost in the last 14 meetings of the clubs, having recorded six victories to go with eight ties.

"When I first came here (in 1971-72), we beat Pittsburgh all the time," said Sabres left wing Craig Ramsay. "I don't think they are a better club than we are, and the playoffs are a whole new game.

"We don't believe in jinxes. There's no reason why we can't beat them," said Ramsay.

The preliminary rounds switch venues for Game Two Thursday night, with a third game — if it is needed — scheduled Saturday. Meanwhile, the New York Islanders, Montreal Canadiens, Boston Bruins and Chicago Black Hawks — each of whom earned first-round byes by winning divisional titles — await the outcome of the preliminary round.

The Flyers got off to a very shaky start, but have flourished since Pat Quinn took over as coach. They lost only three of their last 15 games in a surge which carried them past the Rangers and earned Philadelphia second place in the Patrick Division.

The Flyers won two and tied one of their four games with the Canucks this season. Both victories were shutouts, one by Bernie Parent on Nov. 12, the other by rookie Robbie Moore on March 29.

GOLFER TOM WATSON AND HIS WIFE, LINDA

Watson is cutting back on his playing schedule

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Tom Watson, whose dedicated quest for perfection has made him the outstanding player in golf for the last two years, will be cutting back on his playing schedule in the very near future.

It may be a severe reduction.

The effect — if any — on Watson's career remains to be seen. That, too, could be severe.

"For the last several years," said Watson, "I have had two things in my life — my wife and golf. Now there is an added dimension."

Wife Linda is expecting their first child in September.

And Watson, who has a degree in psychology from Stanford, knows that added dimension will make a great change in his life. If that change exerts a great influence on his golf, so be it.

He has, in recent years, enjoyed enormous success: consecutive seasons in which he swept Player of the Year honors, won the Vardon Trophy and led the tour's money-winners.

In 1977 he won both the Masters and collected his second British Open title. In 1978 he set a single-season money-winning record with $362,429. He's established himself as the best of his generation, the logical successor to the mighty Jack Nicklaus as the king of world golf.

He's at the top of his profession.

But it didn't come easily.

His success is a tribute to the positive aspects of plain hard work and gritty determination and the courage to beat the insidious, persistent whispers of "choker."

That term was in some considerable use a couple of years ago when he lost some tournaments he seemed to have in his grasp.

He silenced them, however, with those dramatic, successful head-to-head confrontations with Nicklaus in the Masters and the British Open.

But the schedule which enabled him to achieve those successes now may be disrupted. He is, without question, one of the hardest workers on the tour. His success was built on countless solitary hours on the practice tee in Missouri snow and Hawaiian rain and Florida wind. In the past, he's played 25-30 tournaments a year — a very high number for a performer in his category.

"Very soon now," he said before a practice session for the Masters this week, "I will have to be spending more time at home.

"It is very important to be with the child in its early years. The first two or three years of a child's life are extremely important in the development of its character. It is during that time that traits of character are instilled in the child, that the character is developed.

"It is at that time that the child needs the discipline, love and affection of the parents. You can't give it if you aren't there.

"I will be there. It is important that I be there. My life can no longer be devoted entirely to golf. The family is extremely important."

Celt change makes Red boss

BOSTON (AP) — Full ownership of the Boston Celtics means leaving operations of the National Basketball Association club to General Manager Red Auerbach, says the team's latest moneyman, quiet-but-prosperous Harry Mangurian.

The Fort Lauderdale, Fla., businessman flew to Louisville on Monday to complete a transaction that results in the franchise's seventh ownership change since 1968.

Mangurian, originally from Rochester, N.Y., will pay a reported $4 million for John Y. Brown's 50 percent share of the team. The new magnate already owned the other half, but because Brown was "managing partner," Mangurian said Monday, "I might as well have owned 1 percent.

"I'm not as visible as some of the people I see in pro sports," Mangurian said in a telephone interview. "I look at sports as a long-range investment and an opportunity to have fun.

"Red is the dean of general managers. He keeps me informed. I don't see myself getting involved in trades or anything like that."

Brown, seeking the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in Kentucky, is divesting himself of a variety of business interests. As boss of the Celtics, the former fast-food franchise king liked to make deals himself and tell Auerbach later.

Mangurian, 51, will be different. He's given Auerbach full authority to negotiate with Indiana State star Larry Bird and a free hand in rebuilding the team that finished the NBA season with a 29-53 record, missing the playoffs for the second straight year.

It will be the first time that Auerbach is fully in charge since Brown and Mangurian took over last summer in a stunningly sudden franchise swap with former Celtics owner Irving Levin.

Levin moved the Buffalo franchise owned by Brown and Mangurian to San Diego. In fact, the old Celtics corporation currently operates in that California city as the Clippers, while the Buffalo corporation is in Boston.

Mangurian downplayed that complication, along with the Celtics' financial commitments to long-term deferred payments owed a variety of currently inactive players, including some from the Buffalo days.

"The Celtics have no debts other than some deferred payments," Mangurian said. "And it's not even that much when you cost it out."

The Celtics, meanwhile, are preparing for what Vice President Jeff Cohen called the team's busiest off-season in history.

Negotiations between Auerbach and Boston-based agent Bob Woolf for Bird's services began Tuesday. Then comes selection of a new coach to replace Dave Cowens, the pivotman who took over as player-coach last November when Tom "Satch" Sanders was fired.

Cowens said Sunday he'll return as a player but won't coach.

Spurs' Gervin wins scoring title again

NEW YORK (AP) — San Antonio's George Gervin led the National Basketball Association in scoring for the second straight year, finishing with a 29.6 average according to figures released Monday.

Gervin beat San Diego's Lloyd Free, who averaged 28.8 for the scoring title and became the sixth player in NBA history to win consecutive championships. The others were George Mikan, Neil Johnston, Wilt Chamberlain, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Bob McAdoo.

A year ago, Gervin had an average of 27.22 for the scoring title, winning it on the final day of the season when he hit 63 points to shade Denver's David Thompson. Thompson had 73 points in the final game and finished with a 27.15 average.

This season, Thompson finished sixth with a 24.0 average behind Gervin, Free, Milwaukee's Marques Johnson (25.6), Boston's Bob McAdoo (24.8), and Moses Malone of Houston (24.8).

Kevin Porter of Detroit led the league in assists with an average of 13.4 per game and became the first player in league history to surpass 1,000 assists when he finished with 1,099. The old mark was 910 by Nate Archibald set in 1972-73.

Malone led the league in rebounds with 17.6 per game, almost five per game more than the runners-up, Rich Kelley.

Foyt enters four cars in Indy 500

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Four-time Indianapolis 500 winner A.J. Foyt has entered four cars for the May 27 race, the Indianapolis Motor Speedway announced Monday.

Foyt again will drive for the Gilmore Racing Team and will pilot a V-8 turbocharged Parnelli-Cosworth racer. The other Foyt entries, with no drivers listed, were another Parnelli-Cosworth and two Coyote-Foyts.

Foyt, who won the U.S. Auto Club's 200-miler at College Station, Texas, on Sunday, is the only driver in history to win four Indy races. He finished seventh last year after losing more than two minutes when his engine stalled on a pit stop.

The Speedway also received two entries by Rolla Vollstedt, one of which will be driven by veteran Dick Simon of San Juan Capistrano, Calif.

Vollstedt will serve as crew chief and will rely again on four-cylinder turbocharged Drake engines.

The six entries on Monday boosted the total to 28, with more than 50 others expected before the midnight April 15 deadline, Speedway President Joe Cloutier said.

Practice for the 63rd running of the Indy 500 will begin May 5, and the two weekends of time trials will be held May 12-13 and May 19-20.

Foyt, who won here in 1961-64-67-77, holds other Speedway records for most prize winnings, $1,210,891; most races, 21, and most miles in competition, 7,635.

Simon has driven in the past nine Indy races. He dropped out after 138 laps last year because of a faulty wheel bearing.

Waltrip adds to NASCAR lead

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip's victory in the Rebel 500 has helped him to an 81-point lead over Bobby Allison in NASCAR standings released Monday.

Waltrip nipped Richard Petty and Donnie Allison at the finish line Sunday for his second victory of the 1979 National Association of Stock Car Auto Racers circuit. Waltrip has 1,317 points after eight events on the 31-race circuit.

Allison, who finished 26th in the Rebel 500 after an engine failure on the 246th lap, has 1,236 points. Third is Cale Yarborough with 1,176, fourth is Donnie Allison with 1,142, fifth is Benny Parsons with 1,138, sixth is Petty with 1,114, and seventh is Joe Millikan with 1,087 points.

Rounding out the top 10 are Dale Earnhardt with 1,074 points, D.K. Ulrich with 1,013 and Richard Childress with 969.

Waltrip extended his earnings to $144,670, with Petty second at $124,215, Bobby Allison third with $117,505, Yarborough fourth with $101,615, followed by Buddy Baker with $91,105, Donnie Allison with $83,485, Earnhardt with $64,850, Millikan with $56,660, Parsons with $39,435, and Ulrich with $35,100.

The circuit competitors have a week off before they head to the Martinsville Speedway for the 24th annual Virginia 500 April 22.

Lawmaker asks different name for Pacific hake

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Don H. Clausen, R-Calif., wants the Food and Drug Administration to establish whiting as the common name for Pacific hake.

Hake is marketed on the East Coast as whiting, Clausen's staff says, and most American seafood fanciers refuse to eat fish labeled hake. The creation of a 200-mile American fishing zone two years ago left most of the hake along the northern California coast in U.S. waters.

If the Pacific hake is found to differ substantially from its Atlantic relative, Clausen suggested, the Pacific hake could be called Pacific whiting.

Terence Reese has written a new book with the delightful title "Puzzling Situations in Bridge Play."

The book is well worth the time of anyone who wants to see the logical bridge mind at work.

Here is problem one from his book. South is in a comfortable four spades. In the ordinary game East takes his ace of diamonds at trick one and collects two trump tricks later.

Expert East sees a chance to beat the contract if partner led from 10-9-x or 10-9 of diamonds. East plays his jack at trick one and South is in with the king.

Now if South starts on trumps, East wins and leads his singleton heart. Later on East takes his second trump, puts his partner in with the nine of diamonds and ruffs a heart.

South complains of a ruff beating him, but Expert South would not have to. He would have led back a diamond at trick two to kill off that entry to the West hand. Expert South would make the same four spades against Expert East that the ordinary South would against the ordinary East.

Bergman writing book

"People are bored with bad news. They don't want to read that the world is falling apart every day. They want to read about other things," says a character in the George F. Walker play "Gossip."

BERGMAN

The reason you didn't see Ingrid Bergman at the Academy Awards Monday night was because she is busy writing her autobiography in Europe. Ingrid asked her actress daughter, Isabella Rossellini, to step up and accept should she win a fourth Oscar for "Autumn Sonata." (Ingrid won best actress for "Gaslight" and "Anastasia" and best supporting actress for "Murder on the Orient Express.")

WHEN YOU'RE HOT, you're hot! Producer Peter ("The Deep") Guber has nabbed another hot number, Brad Davis, for a three-picture deal. Brad's performance in "Midnight Express" is is what got him started, and, incidentally, one of his films for Guber will be a version of the new book by "Ex-Press" author Billy Hayes, about his rehabilitation. So Brad gets to play Billy a second time.

STRANGER THAN FICTION: There are two characters in the new Jonathan Schwartz novel "Distant Stations" that strongly resemble Candy Bergen and Margo Kidder. And the not-so-strange thing is that Schwartz used to date both of these ladies. One of the characters even has a father who is a famous ventriloquist. But that scene between the women in a swimming pool! Naughty, naughty, Jonathan — that doesn't sound like the Candy and Margot the rest of us know. . .Dyan Cannon's little darling, Armand Assante, just nosed out Beau Bridges for the male lead in "Little Darlings," which begins shooting in Georgia any moment. Tatum O'Neal and Kristy McNichol are starring. Armand has also finished "Prophecy" with Talia Shire and has signed for another untitled movie with United Artists. . .Peter Frampton is forgetting his lawsuit problems with that ex-girlfriend by dating Anne Lockhart, who is Sheba on "Battlestar Galactica." By the way, Anne may be the only fourth generation actress working in Hollywood. Her mother was June, her grandpa was Gene, and her great-grandpa was the Canadian actor John Coates Lockhart. . .Glamorous foursome at the Czech Pavilion in New York the other eve — Milos Forman, the "Hair" director, with his big vocal find Cheryl Barnes, Mikhail Baryshnikov and Jessica ("King Kong") Lange.

THE FILLY'S MOUTH: Here it is from the lady herself: Barbara Walters says she and Columbia movie exec Sy Weintraub have NO PLANS at present to be married and she is NOT moving to California. Furthermore, there is NO TRUTH to the rumor that she is writing a "Roots"-type book researching her family background.

(See what happens when you check items? Then you don't get to print that Barbara is getting married. . .moving to California. . .writing a memoir.)

HELP! That's what Andy Warhol needs. He has a new book of text and photos coming out by Grosset & Dunlap next fall. It will show Andy's world of Beautiful People.

Andy wanted to call it "Social Disease," because he says that's what all famous people are afflicted with — an insatiable desire to go out every night and see and be seen. But the title might be considered offensive, so the publisher suggested "Andy Warhol's Zoo." Andy nixed this, saying that his friends aren't animals. He also discarded "My 869 Best Friends" as too limiting. "Andy Warhol's Look. . .Life. . .Bazaar. . .Bizarre Look at Life" as well as "Socialitis" were all abandoned.

The tentative title is "S.D."

PLUS & MINUS: Mrs. David Bowie just added herself to the stable of attorney Marvin Mitchelson. She's in the stable of attorney Marvin Mitchelson. She's in the company of Mrs. Bob Dylan, Mrs. Mick Jagger and Cindy Lang (suing Alice Cooper), along with Michelle Triola Marvin. . .Bob Hope lunched last Sunday at Windsor Castle with the Queen Mother, and coincidentally, one of the segments from his TV special taped at the Palladium is called "Backstairs at Buckingham Palace."

Nashville going pop

Entertainment

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Nashville country music industry has announced the birth of a child — pop music.

The date of birth is uncertain, but it's been within the last 15 years or so. It was born in the recording studios best known for country music and is an offspring of the famous family "The Nashville Sound."

The parents and child are doing fine.

The Country Music Association hasn't really sent out a birth announcement, and record company officials aren't passing out cigars.

But Nashville is turning out an increasing amount of pop music. The youngster, nourished by parents like Chet Atkins and Ray Stevens, is growing and maturing.

A survey by the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences shows that 32 percent of all recording sessions here last year were for pop, rock, rhythm and blues or disco. Forty-four percent were country, with 16 percent gospel and 8 percent jingles.

Non-country singers who have recorded here include Julie Andrews, Perry Como, Paul Williams, Michael Johnson, Grand Funk, Dr. Hook, England Dan and John Ford Coley, Dave Loggins, Steve Lawrence and Eydie Gorme, Dan Fogelberg, Dobie Gray, Joe Tex, Lee Hazelwood, Burl Ives, Neil Young, Millie Jackson, Foghat, Dave Brubeck, Bob Dylan, Paul McCartney and Joan Baez.

And the Rolling Stones — certainly no kissin' cousins to Loretta Lynn — are considering recording an album at a live concert at the Grand Ole Opry house.

"There have been a lot of songs made here but no one knows it," said Atkins, the famed guitarist who pioneered pop recording here as an executive for RCA Records in the 1960s. "It's been going on a long time. We've just kept it a secret."

About 15 percent more pop was recorded here last year than in 1977.

Additionally, rock groups like Dr. Hook, the Charlie Daniels Band and Gray live here. And RCA Records recently established a subsidiary label here, Free Flight Records, to put out pop music.

A new organization, Progressive Music Association, has been formed to promote Nashville's potential as a pop music recording center. It's comparable to the 5,000-member Country Music Association which was formed in 1958.

"Rock music can flourish here," said Phil Sigel, a co-founder of the Progressive Music Association. "The business community here has to want it. It would mean a lot more dollars for the city, from the studios and hotels right down to the taxi drivers."

"We're trying to get pop groups like the Rod Stewart organization and KISS to endorse what we're doing and maybe record here," he said. "Nashville can become a mega-center for recording. It's like Hollywood was 20 or 30 years ago."

Officials say it's cheaper to record here than in Los Angeles. Additionally, other benefits include an abundance of top songwriters and improved studio facilities.

"Nashville is the best place to do it," Atkins said. "We have the best musicians and the best backup singers. The attitude is different here.

National Gallery gets presidential portraits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Gallery of Art announced Monday it will receive the only surviving set of five portraits of the first five U.S. presidents by the renowned painter Gilbert Stuart.

They come as gifts by Thomas Jefferson Coolidge IV and purchases by the Ailsa Bruce Mellon fund, set up by the daughter of the gallery's founder, Andrew W. Mellon.

The acquisition has no relationship to the effort by the National Portrait Gallery to purchase for $5 million Stuart portraits of George and Martha Washington now owned by the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston.

The set acquired by the National Gallery will go on view April 27 in the gallery's west building as the core of a new installation of American paintings.

All five portraits were painted by Stuart between 1810 and 1825. Known as the Gibbs-Coolidge set, the paintings were commissioned by Col. George Gibbs of Rhode Island and subsequently acquired by Thomas Jefferson Coolidge of Boston, a great-grandson of the nation's third president.

The Gibbs-Coolidge set represents some of Stuart's finest male portraits. He rendered each president with unusual individuality and warmth. His skillful use of translucent glazes on hard-wood panels has resulted in luminous surfaces, generating a natural glow to flesh tones, the gallery announcement said.

Unlike many of his British and American contemporaries, who often assigned studio assistants to paint copies of their original portraits of distinguished sitters, Stuart usually executed his works by himself.

Boston protests sale of portraits

BOSTON (AP) — City lawyers went to court Monday to try to prevent a private library from selling the famous Gilbert Stuart portraits of George and Martha Washington to the National Portrait Gallery in Washington.

"We view selling 200-year-old paintings of the nation's first president and first lady with the same reluctance that the ancient Athenians would have shown in auctioning off the Acropolis," said Mayor Kevin H. White.

The city asked the state Supreme Court to issue a temporary restraining order to block the sale by the Boston Athenaeum.

Brown, Ronstadt arrive

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Gov. Jerry Brown of California arrived in Nairobi at midnight Monday with rock star Linda Ronstadt for a "private visit with friends."

RONSTADT

Brown, 41, said he had "just come to look around" and appeared surprised at the number of reporters and photographers who awaited him at the airport.

He asked the journalists, "What are you guys doing here?" They asked whether he and Miss Ronstadt, whom he has dated off and on since the early 1970s, intended to be married in Kenya. He replied, "I prefer not to speculate on matters of my personal life. Most of the rumors you have heard are not true."

Brown, considered a contender for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1980, left the Nigerian Airways plane first. Miss Ronstadt was last off the jet, avoiding reporters. She was driven to the Norfolk Hotel where she joined musician friends in their rooms.

Brown was greeted by the American Ambassador to Kenya, Wilbert le Melle.

Brown and Miss Ronstadt are expected to stay in Kenya for at least five days. Their plans include a safari, which in Kenya usually involves a stay at a luxury resort with sightseing — not shooting — and sallies into wildlife parks. Although the couple's specific plans are still unknown, speculation is they plan to visit a resort in the foothills of Mt. Kilimanjaro.

Brown came to Kenya from Monrovia, Liberia, with a stopover in Lagos, Nigeria. While in Monrovia, the goveror celebrated his 41st birthday, held talks with President William Tolbert and was made an honorary tribal chief.

In Liberia Brown's two-day stop had all the trappings of an official visit. But in Kenya — the African country most popular with tourists — he is not expected to have official talks.

"The (California) legislature is in recess," he explained. "I thought it was a good time for a visit. I'm not here to do anything significant."

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter plans a nationally broadcast news conference at 3 p.m. CST Tuesday at the White House.

Security tight for British elections

LONDON (AP) — The March 30 car-bomb murder of a Conservative Party leader had British security agents swarming around other leading politicians in unprecedented numbers Monday as they opened their campaigns for the May 3 parliamentary elections.

Scotland Yard, headquarters of the London metropolitan police, confirmed the guards were armed but not openly displaying weapons.

Airey Neave, the Conservative murdered two days after Parliament was dissolved and new elections were announced, was the opposition spokesman on Northern Ireland. He advocated tougher measures against the outlawed Irish Republican Army, which is trying to drive the British from the province.

Authorities fear Neave's murder was a sign the IRA intends to try to disrupt the campaign in its struggle to force a British withdrawal. More than 2,000 persons have been killed in violence directed against British troops in Northern Ireland since 1969.

In Glasgow Monday, uniformed police ringed a hotel where Labor Prime Minister James Callaghan made his first public speech. Armed detectives sat or stood close to him.

Political reporters who have covered elections back to the early 1930s said they had never seen so many plain clothesmen and uniformed police at the heels of politicians.

The police carry walkie-talkies, have dogs trained to sniff out explosives and stand on rooftops to watch for snipers.

In the past, only the prime minister, home secretary and foreign secretary were accompanied by a detective, who may or may not have been armed — it was never definitely stated. During election campaigns the opposition leader, who could be the next prime minister, also would have a single detective assigned.

Callaghan lost a confidence test in the House of Commons on March 28 by a one vote margin and was forced to call elections. The no-confidence measure, stemming from failure of his plan for limited autonomy in Scotland and Wales, was introduced by Conservative Party Leader Margaret Thatcher. Polls show her party well ahead the Laborites.

Liberal Party leader David Steel had armed plain clothesmen at his side Monday and his bus was searched for explosives, before he left for Newbury, a market town 53 miles northwest of London. A squad of police awaited him there.

Mrs. Thatcher will have similar guards when she starts campaigning Wednesday.

Callaghan told a news conference he intends to enjoy the campaign and said, "I don't intend to be put off by public opinion polls."

Despite Mrs. Thatcher's lead in the polls, a fact laid to British disenchantment with Labor's handling of labor disputes, burgeoning union muscle and high taxes, students of past polls think she may end up — like the Laborites did last time — with a tiny majority in the 635-member House of Commons.

Ex-KGB assassin says defector poisoned

LONDON (AP) — Bulgarian defector Georgi Markov, victim of a deadly poison injection from a James Bond-style "umbrella gun," was killed on orders of the Soviet KGB secret police and the Bulgarian government, a one-time KGB assassin claimed Monday night.

Nicolai Khoklov, former head of a KGB assassination squad who defected in 1954, said in a British Broadcasting Corp. interview that the Markov killing in London last September "would require the highest approval" from the Kremlin.

He said the Bulgarian secret service is trained, supervised, monitored and guided entirely by Soviet intelligence officers. While the Russians would not kill Alexander Solzhenitsyn and other well-known defectors, he said, Markov's murder was designed to undermine the morale of emigres "to show they can get them any time."

Markov, a noted 49-year-old playwright who defected to Britain in 1970, died of blood poisoning Sept.7, four days after he said a man carrying an umbrella jabbed him in the thigh with it.

Scotland Yard says Markov was killed by a pinhead-size pellet containing a tiny dose of ricin, a castor-bean derivative that is one of the world's deadliest poisons.

Detectives still are investigating. British authorities believe Markov was slain because of his weekly broadcasts for Radio Free Europe, which beams propaganda into the Soviet bloc. He had charged the Bulgarian Communist Party elite with corruption.

The Bulgarian government denied involvement in the slaying.

BBC reporter Michael Cockrell noted that at least half a dozen anti-Communist Bulgarian emigres had been killed in recent years in Western Europe or had vanished, presumed kidnapped by Bulgarian agents and returned to their homeland.

Markov's English widow, Annabel, said during the interview that Markov was told months before he died that Bulgarian government agents planned to kill him with "some kind of poison."

"He was told that the decision had been taken at the very highest level," she said, without elaboration.

Khoklov, interviewed in West Germany, said the sophisticated poisoned-pellet technique "tells me that the officers who were planning that operation tried to please someone in the highest level."

35 EPA ESTIMATED MPG / 47 EPA ESTIMATED HIGHWAY MPG

Remember: Compare these estimates to the "estimated mpg" of other cars. You may get a different mileage, depending on how fast you drive, weather conditions and trip length. Also remember that your actual mileage will probably be less than the EPA estimated highway fuel economy. California EPA estimated mpg lower.

Municipal league cites 'All-America Cities'

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Municipal League announced Monday its designation of 11 communities as "All-America Cities" because of their "continuing concern about community issues, not achievement of perfection."

The league said its All-America Cities program cites communities throughout the nation whose citizens actively work to "help solve significant community problems."

It noted that "typical" activities in Charlottesville, Va., one of the 1978-1979 All-America Cities, were "establishment of a comprehensive system of child care, downtown residential and commercial revitalization and creation of a cooperative, self-help housing corporation."

"Economic revival" in Haverhill, Mass., created 1,200 new jobs. There were improved health care services and creation of an economic develpment program for the town center in LaMoure, North Dakota.

Another All-America City, Roanoake Valley, Va., "improved social and health care programming for the ill, aged, handicapped and children."

Rockville, Md., established a "goals-setting process" and launched a community arts program, while in Roswell, N.M., a former air base was developed for "multi-purpose" community use.

The league said residents of Southbridge, Mass., focused on "downtown revitalization with an eye to historical preservation, and sustaining local government reform."

Southfield, Mich., concentrated on housing for low- and moderate-income families; Vincennes, Ind., created a national park and visitor center and Winona, Minn., developed a "new urban renewal concept based on small-scale development."

Also cited was Mesa, Ariz., for its development of a comprehensive social center, waterway cleanup and creation of educational programs for disadvantaged people.

The league said the designation is "... for the struggle with tough issues, not for "pretty faces"; it is to signal the presence of effective citizenship, not to laud local officials."

Teamster strike talks hit 'critical point'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiators for striking Teamsters and idled trucking firms returned to the bargaining table Monday for a critical round of talks aimed at halting a nine-day nationwide work stoppage.

"I think we really are at a critical point," one source close to the talks said as the two sides prepared to meet with federal mediators for the first time since bargaining broke down Friday.

The talks "could really deteriorate" if the union and industry refuse to budge from their positions and allow the industry shutdown to continue much longer, said the source, who asked not to be named.

Neither the union nor the industry was expected to bring any new proposals to the table Monday, but the mediators were searching for ways of providing a basis for compromise.

Mediators spent all Monday afternoon and evening meeting with union bargainers while industry negotiators waited in a separate room at the headquarters of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

D.J. Yount, a spokeswoman for the service, said the mediators planned to keep meeting with the parties into the night.

Bargainers conceded they were not very far apart when the strike and subsequent lockout began on April 1 — the economic differences equaled about 25-cents-an-hour over three years.

But neither side has moved any closer since then, and sources say they fear a hardening of positions threatens to prolong what already has become the longest trucking industry shutdown in U.S. history.

Republicans gain one House seat

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House became one vote more Republican Monday as two new GOP members were sworn in to fill the vacancies created by the deaths of Rep, Leo Ryan of California and William Steiger of Wisconsin.

Sworn in for terms that expire in Jan. 1981 were Reps. Bill Royer of California and Thomas E. Petri of Wisconsin.

Although the Wisconsin seat remains Republican, the seat formally occupied by Democrat Ryan, killed last fall in the Peoples's Temple massacre in Guyana, now goes into the GOP column.

That gives the House a margin of 276 Democrats to 159 Republicans.

At a joint news conference after swearing in ceremonies on the House floor, both freshmen congressmen pledged to work for a balanced federal budget and said that inflation had been a key issue in their special election campaigns.

Both Petri and Royer also disputed an accusation leveled last week by House Speaker Thomas O'Neill that they had won their races by heavily outspending their opponents.

Petri said about $240,000 went into his campaign and Royer put the cost of both his primary and the general election at about $300,000. Both said these figures were on a par with what was spent on their Democratic opponents' campaigns.

Petri, 38, said that as a member of the Wisconin legislature, he had favored public financing of congressional elections — but he said now that he's in Washington, he doesn't think any major new spending programs like public campaign financing should be passed until a balanced budget is achieved.

Royer, 59, said he hopes to bring his experience as a San Mateo, Calif., county supervisor to bear in his new job as a congressman.
