Guatemalan troops crush attempted coup

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — The civilian government of President Vinicio Cerezo said it thwarted a coup attempt today by air force officers and soldiers.

Government spokesman Carlos Alleu said troops loyal to Cerezo arrested an undetermined number of air force personnel who participated in the coup attempt, which lasted about two hours.

"Everything is under control," Alleu said.

The attempt was led by retired air force officers, Alleu said. He did not identify them. The coup attempt was crushed when soldiers loyal to the government entered the city in tanks and helicopters, the spokesman said.

About 6:30 a.m. troops and soldiers, many wearing the blue handerkerchiefs that are a sign of loyalists, surrounded the home of the defense minister, Gen. Alejandro Gramajo. Military planes and helicopters flew overhead and tanks were parked strategically nearby. There were no sounds of shooting.

In May 1988, a military coup attempt failed when Gramajo refused to join it and backed the civilian government.

By 8:30 a.m., most of the troops had returned to their barracks and the aircraft returned to their bases. Morning rush-hour activity had returned to normal in the capital. Radio stations played military music during the attempt, then returned to normal programming.

In Washington, a State Department official said reports from the U.S. Embassy and from Guatemalans also indicated the coup attempt was unsuccessful. The official said the coup attempt may have been aimed not at Cerezo, whose whereabouts were unknown, but at Granajo or other cabinet ministers.

Commissioners to put wagering issue to vote

■ Four design and build teams are in the running for the $1 million law enforcement office construction project, but bids more than county can afford.

The prospect of horse racing in Midland County is back in the starting gate.

At their court meeting Monday Midland County Commissioners unanimously approved a service station owner's request to place the pari-mutuel wagering issue on the November election ballot.

"I'm for anything that's going to bring outside money into this county," said Ada Thorne, owner of Thorne Service Center, who has collected more than 500 petition signatures since last December when the issue failed to make it on the presidential election ballot.

Commissioners could have called for a special election. However, since there likely will be a constitutional amendment election, the court opted to wait until November.

"I have no problem letting the voters decide," Commissioner Durward Wright said in presenting the motion to the court for approval.

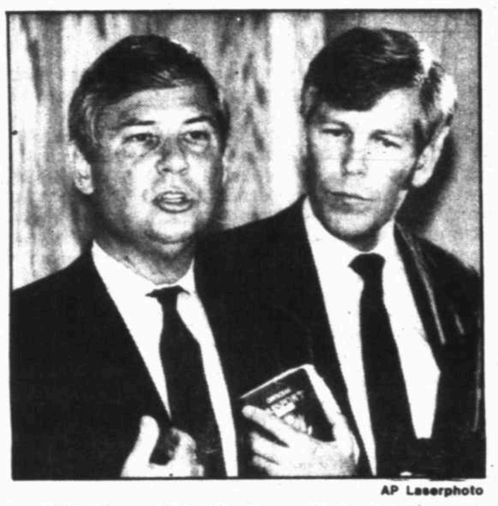

Had commissioners refused her request, Mrs. Thorne said she would have started a new petition for a vote on the issue.

To petition for a vote, Mrs. Thorne would need to garner 5 percent of the 24,611 Midland voters who cast ballots in the 1986 gubernatorial election. At last count, 52,385 Midland County residents are registered to vote.

More than 50 percent of voting Midlanders — 8,075 to 7,193 — approved a 1987 referendum on legalized horse racing in Texas.

Should Midlanders vote for horse racing here, the Texas Horse Racing Commission will have to act on competition applications for a Class B race track.

The racing commission already has given approval for a Class B track in Lubbock, located about 100 miles north of Midland.

U.S. leaders studying Panamanian vote with 'a sense of urgency'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush is looking at Panama with a "sense of urgency" and ruling out no options on his response to what U.S. officials dubbed an election rigged by Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, said observers today who represented Bush at the Sunday election.

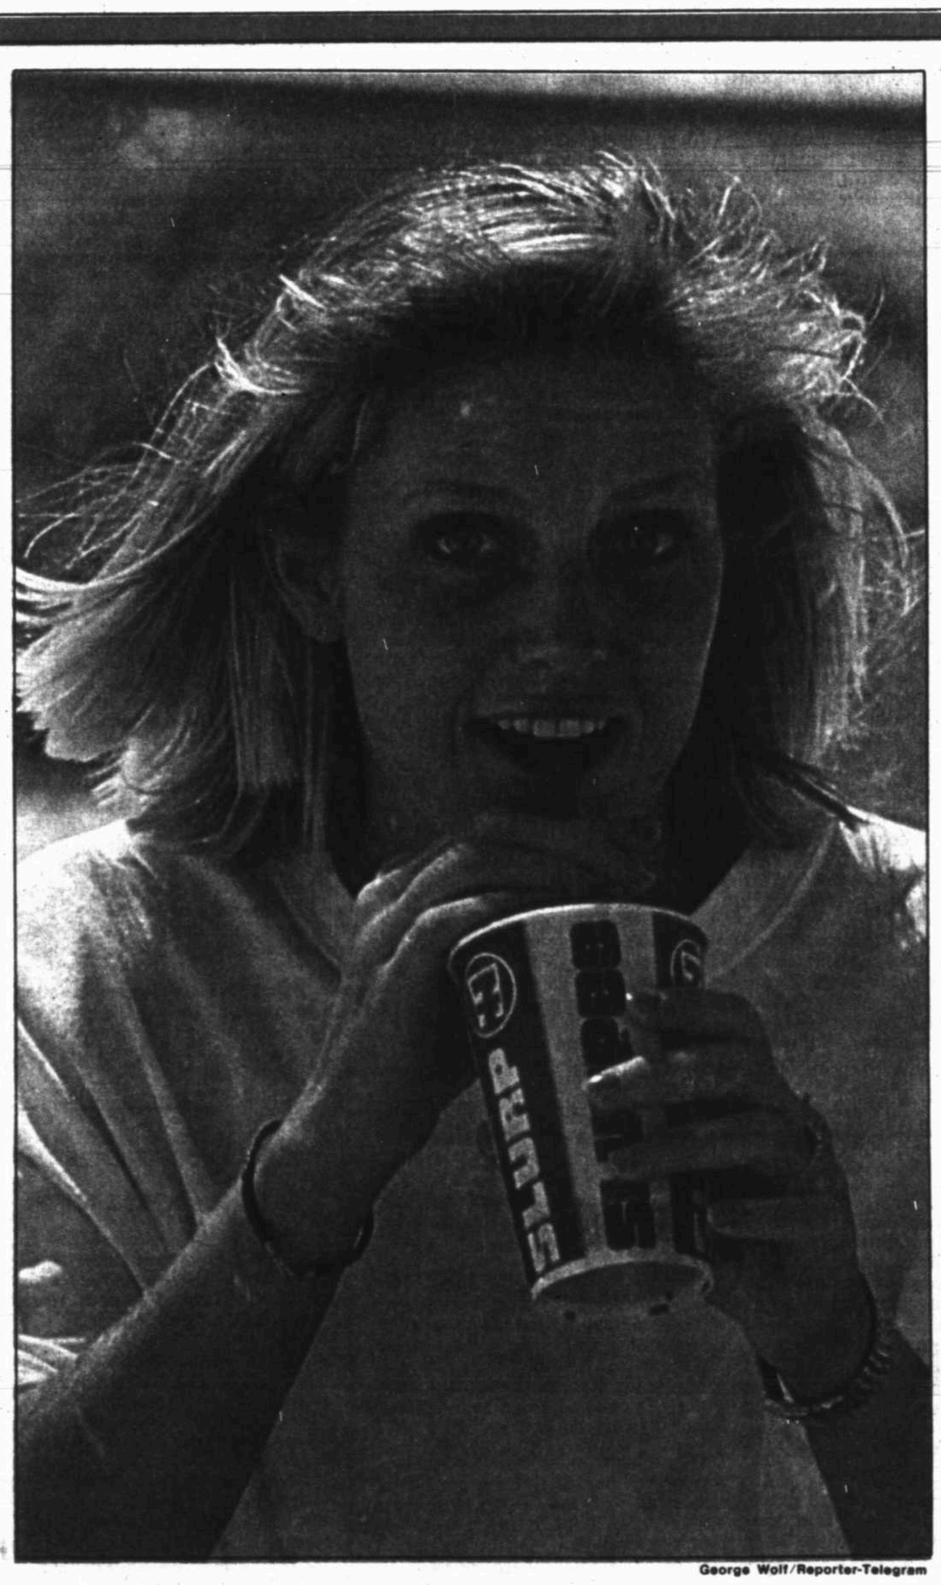

"He didn't leave anything out of the discussion. Every conceivable range of options was discussed," said Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa., who headed a delegation of official observers named by Bush. The observer team met with the president this morning at the White House to offer recommendations and report widespread fraud in the balloting.

The advice of the observers included the possibility of military action in the Latin American nation, where the United States has military bases and a hefty troop presence.

"There's a lot more support for that option today than there was say six months or a year ago," said Sen. Connie Mack, R-Fla., another member of the observer team.

The observer team members also said much would depend on the Panamanian people and how they react to the official election results.

Midland High junior Susan Johnson, 17, slurps a cool drink for relief from the recent heat wave. Monday's high reached a record 106 degrees.

Cooler days on their way

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

The dry, hot conditions baking the Permian Basin like a dust cake in a kiln should subside for about a week as a cold front moves through today, a National Weather Service spokesman said.

After two straight days of record-breaking heat — and a possible third today — high temperatures should drop into the mid-80s after the front arrives this afternoon, the spokesman said.

Monday's high reached 106, beating the record of 103 set in 1947, while the 101 temperature Sunday topped the 1947 record by a degree.

John Lowe, City of Midland director of utilities, said the seething weather conditions since Saturday haven't caused alarming water consumption.

Lowe said Monday's water usage was high. "That's the best day we've had so far this year."

Midlanders slurped up 30.2 million gallons of water Monday and 26.8 million on Sunday, Lowe said.

"We're in pretty good shape right now," he said. "I don't think we're going to have any shortages, but we could sure use some rain."

Lowe said that during peak water usage season, between about June 20 and July 15, Midlanders use as much as 40 million gallons of water a day.

"We've got a lot of dry, warm air pushing across from the desert southwest of us," the NWS spokesman said. "But that won't be holding on too long because of the cold front. It won't drop the temperatures. It will just keep them from getting up so high."

The spokesman said the temperatures will likely resume topping the 100-degree mark again in about a week.

Monday night's low of 64 was 22 degrees warmer than the record low of 42 set for this date in 1969.

Texas Court of Criminal Appeals stays execution of Michael Sharp

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals has granted a stay of execution for Michael Eugene Sharp, who was convicted and sentenced to die in the 1983 slaying of a West Texas woman and her daughter.

The court granted the stay of execution Monday. Sharp was scheduled to die by lethal injection at or before sunrise Wednesday.

Sharp was accused of abducting a woman and her two daughters from a car wash in Kermit and taking them to a remote Ector County area and stabbing them. The second daughter, also stabbed, walked five miles for help and survived.

Sharp was found guilty of capital murder by a Crockett County district court and sentenced to die. The ruling was upheld by the Court of Criminal Appeals.

On May 3, Sharp filed an appeal challenging his conviction and sentence.

In granting the stay of execution order, the Criminal Appeals Court said the state had not answered any of his challenges.

Anderson, Palmer to ask for recounts

From Staff Reports

Midland school board candidate Dianne Anderson and City Council hopeful the Rev. Bill Palmer have indicated they will file for recounts in their respective races, each decided by less than 13 votes.

In Saturday election, Mrs. Anderson lost by a mere seven votes, 489 to 482, to Dr. Larry Rusk; while Jose Cuevas Jr. defeated Palmer by only 12 votes, 397 to 385.

Mrs. Anderson's husband, Ed, said Saturday that his wife intended to file for a recount.

Don Furgeson, Midland Independent School District business manager, said he hasn't seen a recount of school board votes since he became involved in the elections in 1972.

He also said the vote was the closest he has seen in his 30 years as an MISD employee.

Joan Love, a representative of the Palmer campaign, said her candidate will file for a recount sometime today.

"There's so many discrepancies in the news media on how many he lost by," Ms. Love said. "We want to make sure what the exact count was."

Six killed, five injured in fire on U.S. Navy ship

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six sailors were killed and five were injured today when fire broke out aboard a U.S. Navy supply ship in the South China Sea, a Navy spokeswoman said.

"It appeared to be a fuel leak," the spokeswoman said, declining to be further identified. The ship was identified as the USS White Plains, which normally carries a crew of about 403 enlisted men and 25 officers.

The White Plains is a food stores ship and is part of the battle group assigned to the aircraft carrier Constellation. That group is sailing home after duty in the northern Arabian Sea supporting the naval task force in the Persian Gulf.

According to a Navy source who asked not to be named, the White Plains and other ships of the battle group left Hong Kong on Monday after a port call. The ship was only about 100 miles off the coast when the fire broke out, the source said.

The spokeswoman said the fire broke out at 2 a.m. EDT in the main engine spaces "while conducting operations" in the South China Sea. She said the five injured, who suffered burns and smoke inhalation, were evacuated by helicopter to the USS Sacramento, a combat supply ship.

In the Philippines, U.S. Air Force Capt. Donna Eggleston said the injured then were flown to a hospital at Clark Air Base 50 miles northwest of Manila. "My latest information is that all five are in stable condition," she said in a telephone interview.

"The fire is out and the ship is under tow by the ... Sioux," the Navy said in a written statement. The Constellation, the cruiser Fox and the frigate Ouellet all assisted in the firefighting effort, it said.

"An investigation will be conducted to determine the cause of the fire. Identifications of those killed is being withheld pending notification of next-of-kin," the statement added.

A Navy official who asked not to be identified said preliminary information suggested the fire involved "a fuel leak in the boiler manifold intake on the No. 3 boiler."

The source said it was unclear at this point whether the failure involved human error or an equipment failure but added the resulting fuel fire was so hot that sailors were limited to just five-minute stints in fighting the blaze.

The source said it took the crew about an hour to knock down the fire.

Navy sources said the Sioux, a fleet ocean tugboat, had been ordered to tow the White Plains to the Subic Bay Naval Base in the Philippines for repairs.

Was Panamanian election 'stolen?'

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Foreign observers accused Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega's men of stealing the presidential election and more than 15,000 protesters took to the streets in a demonstration broken up by gunfire.

"I hope there will be a worldwide outcry against this dictator stealing the election from his own people," said former President Jimmy Carter, an invited observer.

He said voting records stolen Sunday night and early Monday by forces loyal to Noriega were substituted with bogus replacements not signed by opposition party members. Official results had yet to be released.

Sunday's vote was considered a referendum on Noriega, Panama's de facto leader and chief of the 15,000-strong Defense Forces. The United States has been trying to oust him for more than a year.

In Washington, President Bush and top advisors met Monday and discussed further steps. An administration official said options included more economic sanctions and sending additional troops to reinforce the 10,000 U.S. service personnel based in the Canal Zone.

Panamanian Defense Forces troops and armed men in civilian clothing broke up Monday's opposition march, which was called to protest the alleged fraud. Three people including two journalists were wounded, one seriously.

The shootings occurred around the Atlapa convention center, where the votes were being counted and the marchers had been heading when they were dispersed.

Groups of armed men, mostly in civilian clothes, roamed the capital Monday night. Others in cars dripping with flags of pro-government parties raced through neighborhoods near the center, firing a variety of weapons at random.

Carter had to use a hotel lobby for a news conference because he had been denied the use of the government-run press center. He said Panamanian cooperation with his mission ended as soon as he raised the fraud issue.

Carter met with opposition presidential candidate Guillermo Endara on Monday and said he congratulated Endara on his victory.

Both Endara and Noriega's handpicked candidate, Carlos Duque, had claimed victories by wide margins before any official results were released.

Exit polls by the opposition and the Roman Catholic Church gave Endara about 70 percent of the vote. A similar poll by pro-government parties gave their candidate the victory.

Panamanian law requires election results to be made public within 24 hours after polls close. In 1984, in results widely believed to be fraudulent, the government waited three days before declaring itself the winner.

As of Monday night elections officials said they had received tallies from three of Panama's 40 regional vote collection centers. Carter branded the results from all three as bogus.

"This election was a terrible fraud on the Panamanian people," said Rep. Larry Smith, R-Fla., a member of an uninvited observer delegation sent by Bush. "Polls opened late, peoples' names were not on lists, dead peoples' names were on lists after years of not appearing on lists."

There were widespread reports of soldiers entering regional vote-counting centers and taking official vote tabulations from area precincts. Tallies left behind indicated massive margins in favor of Endara.

Duque denounced what he said was "obvious American intervention in affairs that concern only Panama and said the claims of stolen tallies were the stuff of a soap opera plot."

U.S.-Panama relations have been poor since February 1988, when Noriega orchestrated the ouster of President Eric Arturo Delvalle, and the CIA reportedly contributed $10 million to the opposition campaign.

Delvalle had tried to fire the general after he was indicted in Florida on drug-smuggling and money-laundering charges. Noriega claims the U.S. charges are a smokescreen to avoid ceding control of the Panama Canal in 1999 under a 1977 treaty.

On Monday, troops fired 50 to 100 rounds of shotgun, pistol and carbine fire, mostly into the air, to break up the protest march.

The shooting started as a car bearing large Duque posters drove into the crowd. Demonstators threw stones at it but scattered when men in civilian clothes inside the car opened fire.

Troops in riot gear began firing into the air and the men leaped from the car firing AK-47 assault rifles, carbines and shotguns into the air.

They identified themselves only as being "of the people."

Those hit by gunfire were a Panamanian television cameraman, seriously wounded in the chest, a reporter for the Paris newspaper Le Monde and a marcher.

The circumstances surrounding the shootings were not immediately clear.

In Miami on Monday, Sens. Connie Mack, R-Fla., and Bob Graham, D-Fla., said the United States should consider armed intervention and abrogation of the Panama Canal treaty if Noriega holds on to power.

The two were among the election observers sent by Bush.

OBSERVERS

Murtha said the president listened intently but gave no indication as to what he might do.

"It seemed a sense of urgency in the room. I felt that the president feels that this is something he can't let sit ... There's a real sense of urgency that something has to be done," said Murtha.

Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., said he was recommending a three-part course of action: "internationalize" the issue by getting Latin American allies to join in denunciations of Noriega; develop a bipartisan consense on U.S. action; and prepare the "stricter options" the United States might take.

"Time is of the essence. There's a very brief period in which world opinion will give us the environment in which we can take the kind of action necessary to remove Noriega," said Graham.

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., suggested beefing up the U.S. bases in Panama with more combatants, and not ruling out any military action. He said military dependents should be moved out of the area, and U.S. citizens there shoudl be warned there could be problems for them.

Earlier, administration officials talked about the possibility of economic and military action as viable options, as Bush huddled with top advisers Monday night to weigh the options.

"We are deeply concerned by evidence pouring in of electoral fraud on the part of the pro-Noriega forces," the State Department said Monday night, joining members of Congress in criticizing the elections.

Bush brushed aside reporters' questions today as he sat down with his observer team to get a firsthand report on what they saw during and after Sunday's ballotting.

Some 10,000 U.S. military personnel are based in Panama at military installations which remain under U.S. control despite the decade-old treaty that cedes control of the Panama Canal to that Central American country at the end of the century.

Also under consideration, in addition to beefing up the U.S. military presence, are further economic sanctions, the official said.

The president met Monday with Vice President Dan Quayle; Defense Secretary Dick Cheney; White House Chief of Staff John Sununu; Director of Central Intelligence William Webster and other aides to weigh U.S. options.

The State Department quoted Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa., head of the U.S. election observer delegation in Panama, that he saw Panamanian authorities resort to "fraud and manipulation" to ensure victory for the pro-Noriega presidential candidate, Carlos Duque.

The official statement, issued 24 hours after the polls closed in Panama, appeared to lay the groundwork for an official announcement that the United States was not prepared to recognize the outcome of the election if the process was perceived to be rigged in Duque's favor.

President Bush indicated last week he would pursue that policy rather than move toward a more normal relationship with the Panamanian regime.

U.S. officials expected that Panamanian authorities at some point will declare Duque the winner but some wondered whether Noriega will be able to survive what they regard as an obvious embarrassment for him.

In addition to the allegations of fraud, the election day scenes indicated strong backing for the opposition slate.

Murtha's charges were backed up by Sen. Connie Mack, R-Fla., who said he witnessed "overwhelming support for the opposition" during his weekend visit to Panama as an election observer.

He said members of the Noriega-led Defense Forces were allowed to vote multiple times because, unlike other Panamanians, they were not assigned to a specific voting station.

"People who were dead (were) all of a sudden reappearing on rolls, when they had been dropped off," said Rep. Larry Smith, D-Fla. "So dead people could vote, but live people couldn't."

Sen. Richard Lugar, ranking minority member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said the opposition appeared to be winning a huge majority even though many of Noriega's supporters voted more than once.

Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., said the United States should join with other hemispheric countries in applying diplomatic pressure on Panama.

U.S. officials saw the election as perhaps the best opportunity in almost a year to achieve its goal of removing Noriega from Panama's political life.

An effort by the Reagan administration to negotiate Noriega from power in May 1988 collapsed, leaving the United States with few options until the election process began.

Officials had hoped that the elections would become an event around which Noriega's opponents could rally.

In that sense, officials interviewed Monday seemed pleased with Sunday's balloting which, they said, may have left him far weaker than at any time since assuming control of the Defense Forces almost six years ago.

COUP

Cerezo took office in January 1986, heading the first elected civilian administration in 16 years. He had been under attack from the right wing for opening talks with the leftist insurgency, the Revolutionary Union, which has been conducting a guerrilla war for 30 years.

During the attempted coup by army officers on May 11, 1988, two columns of troops marched on the capital to seize power. But their attempt was quashed without a shot being fired. Six officers were arrested.

On April 16, Cerezo blamed rightist paramilitary groups for a growing wave of violence and said they threatened the nation's democracy. "Democracy is being put in danger by the recklessness of some groups and people who constantly violate the law," he said in a nationally broadcast address.

The president blamed the right-wing groups for the death of Irma Esquivel de Lara, 37, a criminal court judge who was gunned down on a street in the capital earlier in April.

"There exist some groups traditionally of the extreme right that aren't happy with democracy. They don't like it that we are satisfied with a democratic government," Cerezo said at the time.

Cerezo, 46, a Christian Democrat, is due to leave office in 1991.

The Central American nation of 8.5 million people, about the size of Tennessee, is bounded on the north and west by Mexico, the south by the Pacific Ocean and the east by El Salvador, Honduras and Belize.

Committee makes no recommendation on regent

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas State University System regent George W. Worth will face confirmation before the Senate without any recommendation from the Senate Nominations Committee, the panel decided today.

Nominations Chairman Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville, said he would try to have Worth's nomination rejected.

Worth, of San Antonio, was appointed by Gov. Bill Clements to the Texas State University System Board of Regents in May, 1988.

Three hours after being sworn in, Worth cast the pivotal vote in a 5-4 decision to fire Southwest Texas State University President Robert Hardesty.

Democrats said the firing was part of a political vendetta by Clements because Hardesty was active in Democratic Party politics and had written speeches for former Gov. Mark White, who faced Clements twice in election campaigns.

Clements and Worth have denied that charge.

Nominations members, including Edwards, voted 4-0 to send Worth's confirmation to the full Senate without any recommendation.

SHIP

According to one source, the fire occurred while the ship was steaming at about 21 degrees, 58 minutes north latitude and 115 degrees, 37 minutes east longitude.

The White Plains is based at the Pacific island of Guam. According to the Navy, the vessel is 581 feet long, 79 feet wide and displaces 16,000 tons when fully loaded.

The ship is said to be capable of steaming at 20 knots and is powered by three boilers which drive steam turbines. The power plant, which turns a single propeller, is said to be capable of developing 22,000 shaft horsepower.

The ship was constructed by the National Steel and Shipbuilding Co. of San Diego, Calif., and commissioned into active service on Dec. 23, 1968.

Today's fire comes three weeks after an explosion in a gun turret on the battleship USS Iowa killed 47 sailors during an exercise near Puerto Rico.

Skydiver drops in on college exam

ORONO, Maine (AP) — The final exam was scheduled well in advance, but as far as Professor Sandra Caron's students were concerned, it still was from out of the blue.

Caron, who teaches human sexuality to 500 students at the University of Maine, hired a sky diver to deliver her exam to students waiting on the mall in front of the library.

"We wanted to be creative," Caron said. "Here it is, finals week. This is a great way to destress, have some fun and get them to relax before the exam."

Caron said students were told only to gather on the mall shortly after 6 p.m. to pick up their exams before taking them into Hauck Auditorium.

Skydiver Scott Delong, a member of the university's parachute club, descended under a green and white chute carrying the exams.

"He was amazingly accurate. He landed right where we wanted," said Caron.

Shuttle appears not to have sustained much damage

Atlantis Commander David M. Walker is greeted by his wife Stacy Monday night at Houston's Ellington Field following the shuttle astronauts' return to Earth.

AP Laserphoto

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — A robot probe was flying right on target to Venus and Atlantis' astronauts landed here after a successful four-day space shuttle mission that put U.S. planetary exploration back on track.

At Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., initial inspections of the shuttle showed little damage to the thermal tiles, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said.

"The vehicle looks as clean as any one that I've ever seen," said Navy Rear Adm. Richard Truly, NASA's acting associate administrator for space flight.

Commander David Walker, pilot Ronald Grabe, and mission specialists Mary Cleave, Mark Lee and Norman Thagard were greeted at Ellington Field late Monday by 200 relatives, friends, co-workers and even a few of the family dogs.

"It's really nice to have the mission finished and we couldn't have done it without you," said Ms. Cleave, who helped deploy the Magellan probe.

She said the astronauts had a great time and it was good to be back knowing that there's a spacecraft en route to Venus and "we were all a part of it."

After returning to work today, the crew planned to view photographs taken during their 1.68-million-mile journey, Johnson Space Center officials said.

On Wednesday, the astronauts will begin briefing officials.

The 97-ton Atlantis glided to a smooth landing as scheduled at 3:43 p.m. EDT Monday afternoon.

Twelve minutes before touchdown, the crew was ordered to land on a concrete runway rather than a hard-packed clay runway because crosswinds on the runway were too high.

"Obviously this mission was an outstanding success," NASA science chief Lennard Fisk told reporters at Edwards Air Force Base.

"Magellan is on its way to Venus. The deployment was very successful. The trajectory is about as accurate as you can get. The spacecraft is working without any difficulties whatsoever."

Truly praised the performances of the crew, the shuttle and the Magellan.

"With all these things coming together, it's really hard not to have a big grin on your face and be proud of what we're doing," Truly said.

About 27,500 spectators, the smallest crowd ever to attend a shuttle landing, withstood the 90-degree heat to watch. The smallest previous crowd was 35,000, in 1985. An estimated 460,000 were here for Discovery's landing March 18.

Thursday's deployment of Magellan was the mission's primary goal.

The $550-million Magellan mission is the first U.S. planetary probe launched in 11 years and the first ever from a shuttle. In October, another Atlantis crew is to start the Galileo on its way to Jupiter.

Early today, Magellan was more than 676,000 miles from Earth and was zipping along at a rate of nearly 6,000 mph. It will travel 806 million miles and loop 1½ times around the sun before reaching Venus in August 1990.

Once in orbit above the cloud-shrouded planet, the probe will use its high resolution radar to map up to 90 percent of the Venusian surface.

The radar images to be collected by Magellan are expected to show features as small as a football field and be 10 times clearer than pictures obtained by earlier spacecraft. The pictures should provide an avalanche of data that could help scientists discover how Venus evolved so differently from Earth.

The weight of the probe and its rocket booster — 45,000 pounds — restricted the number of experiments the shuttle could carry.

The crew did work on an experiment involving crystallizing a metal sample in a furnace and photo-

STATE

AUSTIN (AP) — Law enforcement agencies could not require a lie-detector examination before pursuing a sexual assault complaint under a bill tentatively approved by the House.

The House also gave preliminary approval Monday to a measure designed to strengthen the teacher career ladder.

The lie-detector bill, as amended, would allow a law enforcement agency to request such a test of someone bringing a sexual assault complaint only if the suspect passed a polygraph test and there was no physical evidence of an attack.

"It's a big step forward, because the surveys that we ran during the interim showed that there were many law enforcement agencies that required a polygraph examination of a sexual assault victim," said Rep. Juan Hinojosa, bill sponsor.

The bill would prevent such victims from undergoing the "traumatic experience" of a polygraph exam, he said.

Hinojosa, D-McAllen, added that some studies showed 50 of 100 innocent people would flunk such tests because they register a person's physical reaction to questions.

"They're unreliable and unscientific," he told reporters.

The career-ladder bill would make the top two levels of the four-step ladder more prestigious, said Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, head of the House Public Education Committee.

The third and fourth levels "ought to mean that you're doing an excellent job teaching, and that you are accepting additional responsibilities," said Ms. Glossbrenner, D-Alice, after her bill was tentatively passed.

A teacher who was doing a good job but did not want the added tasks — such as serving as a mentor — could choose to stay on the second level, she said.

The career ladder system includes teacher appraisals, along with annual salary supplements of $2,000 for the second level, $4,000 for the third and $6,000 for the fourth. Those amounts can be reduced if the ladder is not fully funded by the state.

Under the bill, a teacher could receive the supplement the same year the appraisal was made, instead of waiting as long as a year and a half.

The bill would delay implementation of the ladder's fourth level until 1991 to allow a required examination to be developed, Ms. Glossbrenner said. It also would not allow districts to renew a teacher's contract if the teacher failed to reach the ladder's second step in three years.

"I think that it's far better both for the teacher and for the children, if teaching is not the thing you're going to be able to do, for you to face up to that fact early on," Ms. Glossbrenner said.

Both measures require another House vote before being sent to the Senate.

In other action, the House adopted a proposed constitutional amendment with a 117-17 vote that would create a Fire Department Emergency Fund to provide loans and grants to local fire departments and other public fire-fighting organizations.

The House also tentatively approved bills that would:

- Make the theft of a firearm that is worth at least $400 a third-degree felony. Currently, if the value of stolen property is less than $750, the theft charge is a misdemeanor.
- Require the Texas Water Commission to quantify and publish the public costs and benefits associated with any changes in water quality standards before adopting them.
- Remove all exemptions from the hotel occupancy tax, except for state and federal employees.
- Continue the Texas Guaranteed Student Loan Corporation, which has been under sunset review, until 2001. The corporation administers the federal guaranteed student loan program.

Slashing of AIDS budget shows lawmakers' bigotry, lobbyist says

AUSTIN (AP) — The slashing of AIDS funding by House and Senate budget negotiators shows their "base instincts and bigotry," says a lobbyist for the Lesbian-Gay Political Caucus.

"In an effort to not be seen as doing anything to help people with AIDS, they have gutted the whole public health response," said Glen Maxey about the House-Senate budget conference committee's AIDS funding.

The committee on Monday slashed spending proposals for AIDS services to $18 million, less than either house had recommended.

The Senate had approved $30.6 million, and the House, $20.5 million. The committee adopted the House figure but cut it by $2.5 million.

The panel left pending a move to specify $3 million for services to children with AIDS, which would leave $15 million for adult services — less than half the Senate's original proposal.

"We've got a small group of legislators casting all the public health and rational thinking on this issue aside in order to protect their collective political butts," Maxey said.

The committee must work out conflicts between the House and Senate proposals on spending more than $46 billion for state government during 1990-91.

Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, committee chairman, said the panel's action reflected "lack of resources" and efforts "to make ends meet."

"I wish there was more money," Caperton said, but added that he thought the allocation — for education, counseling, medication and study programs — was a good amount.

"We're spending significant new dollars," Caperton said.

"I wish we had more to spend on public education, on higher education, on prisons, but those are the tough choices we have to make. We're trying to get out of here without raising taxes and that's going to continue to be our goal," Caperton said.

House Speaker Gib Lewis and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby have urged more money for AIDS programs.

One budget committee member said the AIDS funding could change.

"I think the House (members of the committee) probably made this move just to see ... if it works or what kind of a response it gets," said Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, committee member.

U.S. transporting nuclear weapons in Japanese waters, researcher says

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. naval vessels are transporting nuclear weapons across Japanese territorial waters even though Japan forbids "introduction" of such loads, a researcher says.

Arkin

"There is no doubt in my mind that U.S. ships still transit Japan with nuclear weapons aboard," researcher William Arkin of the liberal Institute for Policy Studies said Monday in an interview.

Arkin made the comment after releasing evidence about a 1965 accident in which the Navy lost a bomb-bearing aircraft and its pilot 80 miles off Japan's Okinawa island chain.

Japan on Monday formally requested an explanation from Washington about the 1965 accident.

"This happened in international waters so we have no right to make a loud demand," said a senior Foreign Ministry official who declined to be named. "We are just asking the United States to give us an explanation."

The research Arkin did with the environmentalist Greenpeace group concluded that the United States and Soviet Union have littered the ocean floor with at least 48 nuclear weapons and 11 nuclear reactors.

Two days after the airplane fell off the elevator of the USS Ticonderoga, the aircraft carrier docked at the Japanese port of Yokosuka, Arkin said.

Arkin asserted Monday the United States sidesteps the Japanese ban by arguing a temporary transit or port call by a ship does not amount to the "introduction" of nuclear weapons.

A Japanese Embassy official in Washington said Monday on condition of anonymity: "It is our understanding that we would receive prior consultation with the United States before U.S. forces bring nuclear weapons to Japan. So if there has been no consultation, we assume there has been no introduction of nuclear weapons."

The Navy declined comment on the findings, saying it refuses to confirm or deny the presence of nuclear weapons in specific locations.

Arkin and Joshua Handler, a Greenpeace member who helped prepare the report, said their research showed a different version of events from the one given by the Navy in 1981 when it disclosed the incident.

The Navy said in a statement then that the incident took place "more than 500 miles from land...at sea in the Pacific."

Arkin and Handler said log books kept by deck officers showed that the accident occurred in international waters about 80 miles from the closest point of the Okinawa island chain and only about 200 miles east of the heavily populated island of Okinawa.

The accident is considered by the Navy to be one of its two most severe mishaps involving nuclear devices. The second such "Broken Arrow," as the incidents are called, was the 1968 loss of the submarine Scorpion in the Atlantic.

Japan asks for explanation of 1965 lost bomb incident

TOKYO (AP) — Japan has formally asked the United States to explain a 1965 accident in which a U.S. carrier lost a hydrogen bomb in the Pacific near a Japanese island while bound for a Japanese port, officials said today.

"This happened in international waters so we have no right to make a loud demand," said a senior Foreign Ministry official who declined to be named. "We are just asking the United States to give us an explanation."

Japanese opposition politicians and citizens' groups claim the U.S. government covered up the accident. Japan is the only country ever attacked with nuclear weapons, and popular sentiment is strongly against nuclear arms.

The bomb was aboard an A-4 Skyhawk jet that fell off the carrier Ticonderoga about 80 miles from a small island in Japan's Ryukyu chain and 200 miles east of the heavily populated island of Okinawa, a U.S. military spokesman in Japan said.

The carrier was on its way from Vietnam to the Japanese port of Yokosuka and the plane's pilot was killed in the accident.

After a report in the current issue of Newsweek magazine raised the issue, Japan asked Monday for a U.S. explanation.

"We are interested and concerned (about the details)," the Foreign Ministry official said.

Other officials said Japan's government does not know the location and condition of the B-43 bomb, and there had been no discussions with the United States about how to deal with it.

The magazine report, quoting nuclear expert William Arkin of the Washington-based Institute for Policy Studies, said the U.S. Navy kept the incident secret until a 1981 Pentagon report that listed accidents involving nuclear weapons.

Arkin said there was scant danger the bomb would detonate, although the 33 pounds of plutonium in the bomb could threaten the environment as it deteriorates.

This proposed application will affect approximately 2,487 residence customers who presently subscribe to toll restriction. It is estimated that the proposed rate schedule will reduce the Company's annual revenues from this service by approximately $298,000, which is less than one percent of the Company's total intrastate revenues. If the application is approved, the effective date of the rate reduction will be set according to the Commission's Order.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A deadline to file motions to intervene has been set for May 30, 1989. Judge reopens Agent Orange health claims, strikes VA rules

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A judge ordered the U.S. government to reconsider the Agent Orange health claims of more than 31,000 veterans because existing rules "sharply tipped the scales" against those exposed to the toxic defoliant.

U.S. District Judge Thelton Henderson struck down the Department of Veterans Affairs' regulations that denied Agent Orange service-related benefits for cancers and all other diseases except one non-fatal skin condition.

In a ruling on a nationwide lawsuit brought on behalf of Agent Orange claimants, Henderson said the department was wrong to require direct proof that the dioxin-containing herbicide caused various diseases.

The department, formerly known as the Veterans Administration, should give claimants the benefit of the doubt, he said.

Veterans' advocates praised the decision, which was made public Monday.

"This is a major victory with far-reaching implications," said Mary Sout, president of Vietnam Veterans of America.

"The ruling validates what Vietnam veterans have been saying for years, that the VA has failed to give Agent Orange victims a fair hearing...I am optimistic that Congress will now act quickly to resolve this most painful legacy of the Vietnam War."

Vietnam Veterans of America again will sponsor legislation to require Agent Orange benefits for two types of cancer — soft-tissue sarcoma and non-Hodgkins lymphoma — and establish a new, independent scientific panel to study the herbicide's health effects, said Barry Kasinitz, spokesman for the 35,000-member group.

A similar bill was passed by the Senate last year but died in the House, Kasinitz said.

The veterans department was represented by the Justice Department. Justice spokeswoman Amy Brown declined to comment on the ruling, saying department lawyers had not seen it.

The United States used Agent Orange to defoliate forests in Vietnam. Its health effects are sharply disputed.

In 1985, the VA ruled that only a non-fatal skin malady, chloracne, could be considered an effect of exposure to the herbicide. The agency based its ruling on a review of studies of Agent Orange's effects by an 11-member scientific committee.

Henderson rejected an attempt by the veterans' group to challenge the scientific panel's review. But he said the standards the VA used in making its rules violated a 1984 federal law designed to help Vietnam veterans get health benefits.

The VA improperly required proof of a cause-and-effect relationship between the herbicide and a disease for which benefits were sought, the judge said. Instead, the agency should have required only that statistics show a significant correlation between dioxin exposure and a disease, or an "increased risk of incidence," he said.

Fighter jets collide over Sierra Nevada

INDEPENDENCE, Calif. (AP) — Two Navy jet fighters collided in flight Monday over the Sierra Nevada, killing one pilot who went down with his aircraft and injuring the other, officials said.

The FA-18 Hornets, based at Point Mugu Naval Air Station, collided around 11 a.m.

The single-seat jets went down about 45 miles apart — one into the remote foothills of the Inyo National Forest, the other into sand dunes to the south.

Witnesses reported seeing one parachute and a Navy spokesman said the dead pilot did not eject from his aircraft.

"We have one confirmed fatality and one injured," Navy Lt. Cmdr. Gene Okamoto said from Point Mugu. "The pilot who was found dead was found in his aircraft."

The pilots' names were withheld until relatives could be notified, Okamoto said. The surviving aviator's condition wasn't immediately available, but a Navy spokeswoman said his injuries weren't serious.

Vicki Wood, owner of a gas station, heard an explosion and looked up to see the aftermath of one jet's plunge onto the desert floor.

"It was like a big sonic boom," Ms. Wood said. "It went down in the sand dunes and this big mushroom cloud came up. There was one big orange parachute."

The injured pilot was taken to Lone Pine Hospital for treatment. "He felt good enough (that) he felt he didn't need to go," said Loretta King, spokeswoman for nearby China Lake Naval Weapons Center.

One of the planes went down in the foothills of the Inyo Mountains, 10 miles northeast of Independence, about 175 miles north of Los Angeles. The other crashed in sand dunes 4½ miles east of Olancha, said Cynthia Krell, spokeswoman for the Inyo National Forest.

Smoke was seen pouring from the aircraft that crashed in the forest and there was no sign of the pilot, Ms. Krell said.

The $23 million FA-18 Hornet is a single-seat, twin-engine jet fighter that can be used for either air-to-air combat or air-to-ground attack.

The plane, the Navy's most modern jet fighter, is built by McDonnell Douglas Corp. The aircraft flies more than 1.7 times the speed of sound and can be fitted with a variety of air-to-air and air-to-ground missiles and bombs.

Defense cutting painful, prudent

Having vowed not to raise taxes, President Bush had little choice but to cut the defense budget. The spending cuts proposed by Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney will be painful to the Pentagon, but the reductions proceed from a reasonable strategy.

While the cuts enjoy some support on both sides of the aisle, controversy has erupted in Congress since Cheney announced that the administration wants to postpone building the stealth bomber while deploying 50 existing MX missiles on rail cars and building an unspecified number of truck-mobile Midgetman missiles.

That mix of land-based missiles respects the conclusions of the 1983 Scowcroft Commission, increases the chances of survival of our land-based missile force, lessens the temptation for a Soviet first strike and leaves the United States with plenty of leverage for strategic arms reduction negotiations.

During the campaign, Bush said he was ready to make the hard choices forced upon him by the huge federal deficits, and Cheney's testimony before the House Armed Services Committee outlined more than a few of those hard choices. The Army will have fewer helicopters and troops, the Navy will have fewer ships and sailors and the Air Force will have fewer planes than the Pentagon had been planning on. The Marines would not lose in numbers but will have to do without the experimental Osprey plane being developed outside Dallas.

Previously, Cheney had announced that the Strategic Defense Initiative would be held to $4.6 billion, with the emphasis properly placed on research into new technologies rather than a race for early deployment. That is less than President Reagan had asked, but SDI spending over the next five years will total some 33 billion of the taxpayers' dollars — a large piece of change even in defense budget terms.

The proposed cuts represent a radical but necessary departure from the Reagan administration's refusal to choose between numerous weapons systems desired by the military. However painful the cuts may be to the Pentagon and particular defense contractors, the Bush administration strategy prudently sacrifices future, largely untested weapon systems for current and very necessary combat readiness.

Assessing progress

The big medical stories are, more often than not, tales of progress: drugs developed to cure diseases, techniques pioneered to lengthen and improve lives. But the medical news recently has been about progress that apparently wasn't: two heart drugs that have been shown to increase patients' risks; a common prostate operation that may be more risky and less effective than the procedure it replaced. It serves as another reminder that the United States has yet to match its genius for developing treatments with equally good programs to assess whether those technologies are safe and effective in wide use.

Tambocor and Enkaid are drugs originally used to control severely irregular heart rhythms in emergencies, as in cases following heart attacks. Recently, however, they have come to be prescribed most often to treat moderate irregularities, and now a major clinical trial begun in 1987 to test whether controlling moderate arrhythmias with drugs is an effective treatment has come to a startling conclusion: Patients receiving Tambocor and Enkaid for such conditions are at greater risk of heart attacks and death than those who receive a placebo.

Equally surprising is a study published in April about prostate surgery. Since the 1950s, transurethral prostatectomy has gradually replaced an older and more invasive procedure, open prostatectomy, as the standard treatment in the United States for benign enlargement of the prostate, a common condition in older men. But studying records from several countries, researchers found that patients undergoing the newer procedure were more likely to have had complications and required subsequent surgery. They also died more often within five years of the operation.

These findings underline one of the conclusions earlier this year of the National Leadership Commission on Health Care, a blue-ribbon panel of business, medical and civic leaders, which found that the United States has "woefully underfunded" research on the appropriateness and effectiveness of medical technologies. Like transurethral prostatectomy, there are dozens of other common technologies in use that have never been subjected to thorough clinical trials or outcome studies, and many more that are dangerously overused.

Spending more federal research money to assess existing technologies and improve quality — the commission recommended a tenfold increase to $500 million a year — will never have the political sex appeal of spending to develop, say, artificial hearts. But the information such research yields is vital for doctors, patients and health insurers. In a $500 billion health economy, it has the potential to save billions now wasted. And as the news shows, it can also improve care and save lives.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, May 9, the 129th day of 1989. There are 236 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On May 9, 1754, the first newspaper cartoon appeared in America. The illustration in Benjamin Franklin's Pennsylvania Gazette depicted a divided snake, each part representing an American colony. The caption read: "Join or die."

On this date:

In 1913, the 17th Amendment to the Constitution, providing for the election of senators by popular vote rather than selection by state legislatures, was ratified.

In 1926, Americans Richard Byrd and Floyd Bennett became the first men to make an airplane flight over the North Pole.

In 1936, Italy annexed Ethiopia as Benito Mussolini celebrated in Rome.

In 1961, in a speech to the National Association of Broadcasters, Federal Communications Commission chairman Newton N. Minow condemned television programming as a "vast wasteland."

In 1974, the House Judiciary Committee began its hearings on whether to recommend the impeachment of President Nixon.

In 1978, the bullet-riddled body of former Italian prime minister Aldo Moro, who had been abducted by the Red Brigades, was found in an automobile in the center of Rome.

In 1980, 35 people were killed when a Liberian freighter rammed the Sunshine Skyway Bridge in Florida, causing a 1,400-foot section to collapse.

In 1983, Philippe Jeantot of France arrived in Newport, R.I., to win the BOC Challenge, after sailing alone around the world in 159 days in a 56-foot cutter.

One year ago: Education Secretary William J. Bennett announced he would leave his position in mid-September.

JACK ANDERSON

Iraqi president benefits from bad rep

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Here in the cradle of civilization, it doesn't seem out of the ordinary that the head of state fell for a married woman and dispatched her husband to parts unknown. After all, it's an old biblical story.

Jack Anderson

When David got an eyeful of Bathsheba, he shipped her husband, Uriah, off to the front to be killed. Iraqi President Saddam Hussein took a more humane approach. A high-level official of a friendly neighboring country confirmed this account:

Last August after Iraq and Iran reached a truce in their eight-year war, Hussein had time for his fancy to turn to a second wife. (Under some circumstances, Islam allows a man to marry up to four wives.) He saw a woman he had to have, but, like Bathsheba, she was married. The husband was a loyal Iraqi air force officer.

There was no war on, so Hussein did not have the option of sending his rival to the front. Instead, he offered the man his pick of jobs and salaries, anywhere in the world except Iraq. The only condition was that the officer must divorce his wife. The officer chose divorce instead of offending Hussein.

Hussein is a man who gets what he wants. He is considered ruthless when it comes to punishing naysayers. His iron rule is maintained in large part because of the stories that circulate through Baghdad about what happens to people who cross him.

The story most often repeated here is of a cabinet minister who, several years ago, naively suggested that Hussein step down to facilitate a peace with Iran. The unfortunate fellow reportedly was asked to step outside of the cabinet meeting with Hussein, who dispatched him with a pistol to the next life and returned to resume the meeting.

Another Hussein tale involves a top health official who was reportedly executed when Hussein found that the medical supplies he had ordered arrived with old expiration dates. In another story, the president suspected that some military officers had burned down a building to cover up the fact that they were stealing supplies. He reportedly issued an execution order for everyone connected with the incident.

One knowledgeable observer told us that it matters little here whether such stories are true. Iraqis believe their president does such things and they are cowed.

As a young man, Hussein joined the Arab Baath Socialist Party and was part of a failed coup attempt to bring down King Faisal II in 1956. In 1958, Faisal was murdered, but his replacement, Abdel Karim Kassem, was not a Baathist. Hussein was one of 10 people chosen to assassinate Kassem. The other nine assassins were killed and Kassem was not. Finally a bloodless coup brought the Baath party to power and Hussein has been head of state since 1979.

The paranoia of those early days lives on. Hussein, fearing his handwriting could be traced, used typewriters to write revolutionary leaflets. Today typewriters are still a threat. It is illegal to import them here. Iraqis must be licensed to own them. On our recent visit, our modern hotel with many other amenities for the business traveler would not let guests use typewriters unless they made carbon copies for Hussein. We declined.

Against this backdrop, our intelligence sources say it is unlikely that anyone will topple President Hussein in the near future. His only real threat is from an Iraqi army with time on its hands. Some U.S. intelligence reports suggest that one faction of the military may have tried to unseat Hussein last October and that more than 100 of the upstarts were executed.

That, like so many other stories here, is hard to confirm, but Hussein benefits from the publicity.

HITCHED TO HOOKERS — Federal investigators are tracking down a Korean prostitution ring operating in the United States and U.S. soldiers may be implicated. Immigration and Naturalization Service officials have documented marriages in Korea where GIs have married prostitutes for a fee. The women then immigrate to the United States as spouses and set up shop. Immigration officials have been frustrated by the lack of cooperation from the Army in the investigation. Meanwhile, the prostitution scam is growing, as evidenced by the rising number of Korean prostitutes arrested recently in California, Texas and Washington.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Talk about taking your work home with you. An Iowa company has introduced the perfect vehicle for "Type A" personalities — a Chevy van that is customized as a mobile office. Luxury limos have carried all the office amenities for years, but the van is designed for a workaholic on a budget. At this rate, genuine recreational vehicles will soon be a vanishing curiosity from a more tranquil age.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Communists fighting battle of false security

WASHINGTON — The 20th century has taught the world this lesson: You cannot have freedom without some insecurity; you cannot have security without giving up some freedom.

William Safire

Communism professed to offer security, stability, the elimination of risk: the state will make certain you have a job, will insure that your money will buy the necessities at a stable price, and will provide for you in ill health and old age.

Capitalism, at first, offered mainly risk: the rewards of success and the pain of failure, the good life for the talented and tough-minded, and the devil take the hindmost.

However, it turned out that too many were hindmost. A third of the way into the century, as Communism's security was made more appealing by the Great Depression, capitalism began stealing a march on its opposing ideology.

Some social security was offered, along with unemployment insurance and a safety net for the helpless and handicapped. The cost in economic freedom was higher taxation, but capitalism gained strength from its ability to adapt. The system discovered that a shot of security could stimulate rather than sedate free enterprise.

Communism, to the contrary, did not adapt. In the second half of the century, its anti-risk system grew ever more rigid. Its leaders in Moscow and Beijing, successful in building military strength, saw freedom only as a threat.

Then, during the Reagan-Thatcher decade, it dawned on collectivists that capitalism's profit motive was delivering prosperity while Communism's security motive was failing to put food on the table or cope with the competition.

Belatedly, Communism on both sides of the world examined the capitalist cake and tried to pick the most delicious raisins out of it.

Communism in China tried to take "the capitalist road" in business — exploiting a natural Chinese trait — without permitting capitalism's political freedom. Result: today's turmoil among students and workers, which is likely to worsen. (China has had an upheaval in every postwar decade; there's still time in the 80s.)

Soviet Communism, on the other hand, tried to use a limited freedom of speech to jump-start its economic engine, without turning to private property as an incentive. Result: dissatisfaction in the open, resistance to reform underground.

The reader, having dutifully waded through this history, is entitled to a few nice paradoxes.

The peoples of China and the Soviet Union have been forced to accept some economic or political freedom at the price of some of what they thought was their security. Many find this unfamiliar risk-taking painful, some even unbearable.

Chinese youths are upset with unemployment after decades of make-work. Elderly Chinese and Soviet citizens, who were accustomed to a lifetime of shortages, thought they could at least count on security — but find their declining years betrayed by Western-style inflation.

These people are angry at their Communist governments not for the right reason — because Communism failed to provide the promised security — but for the wrong reasons: because the capitalist cure contains the pain that goes with economic freedom. That includes inflation, unemployment, labor-management strife.

In capitalist countries, we're accustomed to those agonies: we tolerate the business cycle because we know that the downs are followed by ups, that recession will bring inflation down, that the blessings of freedom far outweigh the curses of inequality.

People living under Communism do not have our inoculation of experience. Many see their leaders flirting with "new thinking," and "the capitalist road," and they wait in lengthening lines for food or work and wonder who stole their security.

They now feel they have less than ever before: not security, and not real freedom either. In Moscow, it's O.K. to criticize the past, but not the new general secretary; in Beijing, it's O.K. to start a business, but not to put up a poster.

Communism is now desperately imitating aspects of capitalism but does not have the hang of it. This causes people in Communist countries, denied old opiates, to blame their pain on the experiment in partial reform rather than on the failure of their old system. These ordinary people and out-of-favor soldiers are the natural allies of disgruntled Maoists and Stalinists.

A severe reaction to reform is the ghost at next week's Chinese-Soviet summit in Beijing. We can hope the turmoil ahead in the Communist world will be in the direction of more freedom, but logic suggests that it will come from those who lust for a return to Communism's false security.

CHARLEY REESE

Musician brings Civil War emotions to life

There's no explaining people. When I heard Bobby Horton singing songs of the Civil War era on a tape accompanied by the banjo, trumpet, penny whistle, and violin, I figured him a country music singer.

Charley Reese

When I tracked him down in Birmingham, Ala., where he has lived all of his life, I discovered he had been an accountant for 11 years with a large insurance company. I also discovered an articulate and nice man who easily qualifies for my VIP award — a very interesting person.

Horton is now a full-time musician, but he plays with a convention band, a group that provides conventioneers with music and comedy skits. He began his career at age 7 with the trumpet and is primarily a trumpet player and percussionist. He has played just about everything BUT country and western — pop, classical, and rock and roll.

For a long time, Horton said, he stayed away from banjo, even though his grandfather had taught him how to play it, because he felt it was redneck. It may come as a surprise to non-Southerners but in the South, redneck is a term one Southerner uses to describe another who is generally unkempt, loud, loutish, and prone to bigotry and violence.

But what brought Horton to the banjo was the memory of his grandfather, one of the greatest people I ever knew. I finally realized that if a man like him could play the banjo and enjoy that style of music, it could not be bad.

The music of the Civil War — Horton has recorded songs of both the Confederate soldiers and the Union soldiers — came about as an accidental conjunction of Horton's two loves, after his family — music and Civil War history.

A family trip to the Chicamauga Battle site, when he was 10 years old, recruited him into the army of millions who have made the American Civil War the most written about and studied event in our history — as is proper, since it was easily the most traumatic. It was a war that took more American lives than any other war before or since and ushered in the 20th century form of warfare — though too many generals didn't learn its lessons until AFTER World War I.

A friend asked him to play two or three Confederate songs at a meeting of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, a social organization that studies the war and often participates in re-enactments. At the Birmingham Public Library, Horton discovered the Tutwiler collection — thousands of volumes on the war donated by a prominent family.

Intrigued because, of course, no one knows for sure how the music actually sounded, Horton studied recordings of early Southern and Irish music, delved into the lyrics, and studied photographs to identify instruments carried by soldiers in that era.

From that, in his own home, he has re-created as authentically as anyone can, the music that was the primary form of entertainment for Americans North and South in the 1800s. Although some of the numbers sound like there is a whole band, there is only Horton. He plays all the instruments, re-recording until he has a finished product.

To hear these songs — sweet ballads, brassy marches, fierce war songs, and humorous parodies — is to experience what the real people, as opposed to the Hollywood caricatures, felt and thought. Horton's recordings are now sold in all the Civil War battle site National Parks.

Horton has developed a great affection for the common soldiers of the war — on both sides.

What they had in common was that they truly believed in the justice of their cause, that they were fighting for something worth dying for, he said. As he has discovered on college campuses, where, dressed in a Confederate uniform, he plays the music and talks about the war, the universal themes of that era can still reach us today.

Scientist: OMB forced him to alter testimony

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration faces "the congressional equivalent of World War III" if it retaliates against a top NASA scientist who said the Office of Management and Budget doctored his testimony on global warming, a Senate panel chairman says.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, meantime, called the practice of alterations routine and said changes were made by a budget official "four or five levels down from the top."

Dr. James Hansen on Monday told senators that OMB forced him to contradict within his own prepared statement his finding that a buildup of "greenhouse effect" gases would increase the likelihood of drought.

Sen. Albert Gore Jr. praised Hansen for speaking out at the Senate hearing and warned that if administration officials "attempt any kind of retribution in return for candor, they will have on their hands the congressional equivalent of World War III."

But Fitzwater said the National Aeronautics and Space Administration scientist was free to express his own views in answering committee questions.

"He's never been muzzled," the spokesman insisted. "He's free to say whatever he wants."

In testimony before Gore's science subcommittee of the Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee, Hansen said he wouldn't object to a policy review by OMB. But he added: "I don't believe the scientific aspects in testimony should be altered. I did try to get them to compromise...I was not successful."

Fitzwater said scientists inside and outside the government disagree on the global warming issue. He complained that Hansen's original testimony gave the appearance that "there was unanimity within the government on this matter. We simply wanted to point out that there wasn't.

"We thought we were commenting on policy, not scientific evidence," Fitzwater said.

Hansen complained about the alterations during his response to Gore's questions about the changes following submission of the toned-down written statement.

In the document, Hansen said it was unlikely scientists would alter the conclusions of computer models that greenhouse gases would increase drought in low and middle latitudes. But the statement also contradicted the conclusion by saying — in language inserted by OMB — that the computer models were not reliable.

Hansen said officials also added a sentence that said it was unknown whether the buildup of greenhouse gases was from natural forces or from human activities. Hansen and others at the hearing said humans were primarily responsible by burning fossil fuel, cutting down tropical rain forests and other actions.

"Every scientist that testified here today...and every reputable scientist in the field supports your conclusion this is primarily a human cause. It's not an act of God. OMB forced you to say it may...be just the forces of nature," Gore said.

"They're acting as if they're scared of the truth," the senator added. "It's a form of scientific fraud by them...The administration does not want to act. It wants to sit still and do nothing."

Exxon spends $95 million for cleanup

VALDEZ, Alaska (AP) — Exxon says it has spent more than $95 million to clean up the Alaska oil spill and could have contained much of the crude if authorities hadn't blocked the early use of chemical dispersants.

A top state official, however, accused Exxon of spreading a "fabrication," and said the oil giant had not sought to employ dispersants.

Also Monday, Gov. Steve Cowper signed a bill raising state taxes on the nation's two largest oil fields, both on Alaska's North Slope. He said the spill had helped make the hike possible.

Exxon executives disclosed their cleanup costs at the end of a stormy two-day congressional subcommittee hearing in Valdez. The $95 million figure doesn't include the cost of government operations or fishermen's losses.

The executives told the five-member subcommittee of the House Interior Committee that they could have contained perhaps half of the spill had they been allowed to use powerful chemical dispersants soon after the accident.

They said the Coast Guard and the state's Department of Environmental Conservation rejected their requests to use the chemicals widely.

"We came to Alaska to use dispersants," Exxon Shipping Co. President Frank Iarossi said. "I was pleading on my part to begin dispersal use...we were very aggressive."

"We're confident that had we obtained prompt permission to use the dispersant, the environmental damage would have been mitigated," Exxon USA President Bill Stevens said.

Dennis Kelso, commissioner of the Alaska Department of Environmental Conservation, called Exxon's account a "fabrication." He said the state had pre-approved the use of dispersants in parts of Prince William Sound before the March 24 spill.

"Dispersants were not used extensively in the three days following the tanker accident because the winds and seas were too calm to provide the turbulence necessary to mix them with oil," Kelso said in a statement.

The day before, Kelso told the subcommittee that Exxon and Alyeska, which operates the trans-Alaska pipeline, spread "disinformation" by contending they sought to use dispersants. Kelso testified that Exxon did not request permission to use the chemicals.

Vice Adm. Clyde Robbins, the Coast Guard's No. 2 man in the spill zone, said Exxon and Alyeska did not urge the use of dispersants. Small-scale tests of the chemicals proved inconclusive.

"Neither of them had the equipment on site to deal with it, either through mechanical means or chemical means," he added.

He also said a contingency plan at Alyeska was inadequate to deal with a major spill, but Stevens said the state earlier had endorsed the plan.

The former captain of the vessel, Joseph Hazelwood, 42, is accused of operating the ship while intoxicated and faces trial June 20 in Valdez.

Cowper signed the new tax bill after the Senate approved it by 11-9. The bill will bring in $235 million in revenue next year and more than $2 billion during the next two decades based on current oil prices.

Oil industry officials had argued that changing the tax formula ultimately will cost the state jobs and oil revenue.

"There's no doubt about the fact that the spill made the political atmosphere different from what it was before," Cowper said. "It became a matter of competing credibility: the credibility of the state versus the credibility of the industry."

Three-year-old Carmina Salcido climbs through a children's tunnel at a park in Petaluma, Calif., recently. She is recovering from a slashed thoat, allegedly inflicted by her father.

Girl recovering after throat slashed

PETALUMA, Calif. (AP) — The little girl who survived a killing spree that claimed her mother and two sisters is behaving like any 3-year-old, pouting and playing with lots of donated toys, her doctor says.

Dr. Ralph Keill said Carmina Salcido is recovering very well from the slash in her throat, allegedly inflicted by her own father. She should be discharged from Petaluma Valley Hospital within two weeks, he said.

"She plays. She pouts. She has temper tantrums," Keill said Monday at a news conference outside the hospital about 30 miles north of San Francisco.

Ramon Salcido, 28, entered innocent pleas to seven counts of murder and three charges of attempted murder last Friday. He is accused of killing his wife, two daughters, his mother-in-law and her two daughters and a co-worker at the winery where he worked.

Salcido allegedly slit Carmina's throat and left her for dead alongside the bodies of her two sisters, Sofia, 4, and Teresa, 1, at a trash dump in Sonoma County last month.

Carmina, now listed in good condition, has been talking in a whisper.

Dr. Ralph Keill said Carmina Salcido is recovering very well from the slash in her throat, allegedly inflicted by her own father.

"It sounds pretty good to us," said hospital spokeswoman Mary Frost.

Carmina has been allowed outside the hospital for walks and rides on her new tricycle and went on an outing with her grandfather, Robert Richards.

Richards has petitioned the court for custody of Carmina.

"Carmina loves stickers," Frost said. "She puts them up on the walls of her hospital room, on her nurse's lapels, wherever she wants to stick one."

Salcido was captured in Mexico on April 19, five days after the rampage, and deported to California. He remains in solitary confinement in the Sonoma County Jail.

Borden removes milk from Louisiana shelves

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Although Borden Inc. removed milk and other dairy products from stores in Louisiana and Mississippi for fear they might be contaminated, officials in both states said they believe there was no health threat.

Borden, the world's largest dairy company, pulled the products off store shelves Monday in north Louisiana and throughout Mississippi after learning that milk from 32 northwest Louisiana and east Texas dairies might contain traces of a barium substance used in rat poison.

However, Gwen Stewart, a spokeswoman for the Louisiana Department of Health and Hospitals, said officials believed no milk containing dangerous amounts of barium carbonate got as far as store shelves.

"The bottom line is, there is not and has not been any contaminated milk on the market," she said.

Dr. Ed Thompson of the Mississippi Department of Health said the traces of barium carbonate found in Mississippi were too small to be dangerous.

"The amount you can drink is far less than the amount that would be dangerous," Thompson said in Jackson, Miss. "There's just not a significant health risk involved."

Ms. Stewart said some milk with trace levels of barium was allowed on the market. However, she said, it was considered an acceptable level — less than half that allowed in drinking water that meets government health standards.

There were no reports of anyone suffering any ill effects from drinking contaminated milk.

Bakker ministry finds home

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Television evangelist Jim Bakker's efforts to rebuild his ministry will be centered in a nearly deserted shopping center where he has moved his headquarters.

Bakker and his wife, Tammy, broadcast their show live Monday from their new studio in a boarded-up department store. During the show, Bakker stepped over shards of glass and wire hung loose overhead.

Outside, a protester carried a sign that read "Just Say No. Keep Our City Clean" and said he didn't want the Bakkers in Orlando.

"I think it's so wrong," said Frankie Skinner, 23, of Orlando. "They shouldn't get another chance."

Local officials raised another possible objection Monday, announcing that the Bakkers had not applied for an occupational license to operate their headquarters from the shopping center, and ordering building inspectors to visit the shopping center today.

Yet Bakker said before the program that he was satisfied with the move to the Shoppers World mall, which is located outside Orlando.

Manslaughter charges filed

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP) — A mother whose infant daughter died after being born with cocaine in her system has been charged with involuntary manslaughter and delivery of a controlled substance to a minor, authorities said.

Melanie Green, 24, was arrested Monday at her home and freed from jail on $3,500 bail.

Her daughter, Bianca, died Feb. 4, two days after birth. An autopsy showed she died of being deprived of oxygen before birth because of cocaine use by her mother, authorities said. The drug was in the child's urine, police said.

It may be the first manslaughter case of its kind in Illinois, said Winnebago County State's Attorney Paul Logli. "I think we're cutting new ground here," he said.

"What we're saying is this was an unintentional act, but an unintentional act without lawful justification," Logli said. "We believe the medical cause of death of the child is related to the mom's use of cocaine."

2 summoned in HUD case

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House panel is calling on two Reagan Cabinet members to address an official's claim that he was unfairly singled out in a probe of favoritism in a $225 million federal housing program.

A House Government Operations subcommittee Monday said it would seek the testimony of former Housing and Urban Development Secretary Samuel Pierce and former Interior Secretary James Watt to help evaluate former federal housing commissioner Thomas Demery's claims.

Demery was targeted in a HUD inspector general's report two weeks ago that alleged "a perception of favoritism" in awarding money to renovate housing for the poor.

Police officers' shifts won't be rotating

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

After May 22, residents who meet Midland city patrol officers may notice the men in blue appear happier and healthier.

On that day, officers will be assigned to non-rotating patrol shifts, abandoning the department's longtime policy of shifting schedules every 28 days.

"The current policy has been stressful to the officers," said Cpl. Jim White, police spokesman. "The officers couldn't adjust to a new schedule in just 28 days. It was hard on them, and hard on family life."

Under the new system, officers work one of the three shifts, 7 a.m. to 3 p.m., 3 p.m. to 11 p.m., or 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. They will be assigned shifts according to officer requests and seniority.

"The men with the least amount of seniority will be placed where they are needed," White said, but he dismissed any concern about inexperienced officers concentrated on an unpopular shift.

"All of our officers are very highly trained, and very professional," he noted.

At the end of the year, officers will be able to "bid" to be placed on another shift for the next year, White said.

The new policy has been talked about for some time among the officers, then finally made it through departmental committees and to Chief Richard Czech, who approved the change.

"I think it is going to assist us in scheduling and deployment matters. But most of all it will help the health and well-being of the officers. We're excited about it... The goal there is for the public to get to know their cops," Morris said. "And we want our cops to know the people of Midland, hopefully even on a first-name basis."

— Lt. Jerry Morris

"I think it is going to assist us in scheduling and deployment matters," said Special Services Lt. Jerry Morris. "But most of all it will help the health and well-being of the officers. We're excited about it."

Officers who wanted to attend college classes often were frustrated by a schedule that changed dramatically every month, Morris said.

"Education is stressed in this department, and we wanted them to be able to attend school if they wanted to," Morris said.

The new schedules come a month after the department adopted non-rotating assignments to the four sectors the officers work daily.

Under the old system, officers worked different parts of town every week.

"The goal there is for the public to get to know their cops," Morris said. "And we want our cops to know the people of Midland, hopefully even on a first-name basis."

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said his officers have been working non-rotating shifts "for quite a while," but previously also rotated schedules.

"It takes the body 28 to 30 days to become accustomed to a new shift," Painter said. Under the old system, "just when you got used to it, you had to change, and kept the body in turmoil."

Sheriff's deputies are not assigned to a specific part of the county, Painter said.

"We maintain the flexibility of changing them around," he said. "We try to move them around so they get to know the entire county."

VAN volunteers, clients honored at get-together

A woman called "Mayme" is the sort of a person who turns a problem into a challenge and helps others by helping herself.

Martin

"I have never cared how old I was," said 80-year-old Mayme Kroenlein Martin, a Midland "mover and shaker," though she has been twice widowed and is legally blind.

Mrs. Martin was bustling around Monday at a party — not for herself but for volunteers and people served by VAN, the Midland-based Visual Aids Newsmobile, which lends aids and materials to handicapped people.

"We lend anything at no charge," she said. And "anything" includes wheelchairs, walkers, electric-powered beds, musical tapes, books and magazines on tape, enlarged-print reading material and magnifying glasses.

Mrs. Martin founded the Midland Tape-Lending Library for the Blind, now known as the Recording Library for the Blind & Physically Handicapped, in 1963 after she had become legally blind, and got VAN running and going in 1973.

VAN lends aids to the infirm and handicapped rather than outright giving the aids to them, since gifts might cause them "to feel like it was charity."

As aids are loaned out and returned after they have fulfilled their purposes, the aids are re-cycled, noted Mrs. Martin, who was honored in 1985 as a Midland Centennial Citizen and holds the Exchange Club's Golden Deed Award.

In 1940, after she was first widowed, Mrs. Martin started Kroenlein's Geological Records Service to support her two daughters, Virginia and Sylvia.

"I learned geology from my husband (George)," who was a geologist, said Mrs. Martin, who also has background in legal, engineering, and land work.

Her second husband, C.A. "Stoney" Martin, a drilling contractor whom she married in 1955, died in 1962.

More than 100 people, including VAN volunteer workers and VAN clients in wheelchairs and others walking with aids, attended the noon gathering at the VAN Building near Trinity Towers retirement center.

Among the volunteers was Dr. Gregory Bartha, VAN board president. He presented a medallion to VAN worker Mary McAlpine, who has been a "driving force behind the organization."

"I enjoy all of you so much," Mrs. McAlpine said to the VAN clients and volunteers, "and look forward to seeing you for another 10 years, at least."

VAN reaped appreciation.

"They are wonderful — just great," said 78-year-old Mildred Green, a retired writer from New York. "They do a lot to help people."

Thelma Kelly, an 83-year-old VAN volunteer, and her daughter Donna Repman, agreed that VAN is a "wonderful" organization.

Fena Berry, VAN's volunteer coordinator, said that volunteer work is "so inspiring. It makes you feel good," such as those times in nursing homes "when you hold their hands, and they don't want you to leave."

The uplifting mood of the party was enhanced by tap-dancers from Midland Community Theatre and by the playing and singing of gospel and country 'n' western songs.

The Sand & Sage Band played away, while Cleo Wolfe, activities director for Terrace West Nursing Home, rousingly sang "I'll Fly Away, O Glory," "One Day At A Time, Sweet Jesus," and "Love Lifted Me."

Members of the string Sand & Sage Band were Joel Chappell, 62, steel guitarist; Roy Jobe, 59, rhythm guitarist; Doyce Penney, 63, fiddler, and Reed Johnson, 70, bass guitarist.

They played Bob Wills' "Take Me Back To Tulsa," "San Antonio Rose," "The Kind of Love I Can't Forget, Dear," "Deep Water," "Westphalia Waltz," "Waltz Across Texas," and "Your Cheating Heart."

VAN kitchen chairman Charlotte Louderback, who engineered the noon meal, said working with VAN is "kind of fun. You meet tons of people — all kinds of people."

Another VAN volunteer, 77-year-old Howard McKoy, said he got into VAN work after his wife, Cona, died in 1987.

"The young Dr. Bartha got me into it," McKoy said. "He was my wife's doctor before she died, and he thought I needed something to do." McKoy is VAN's transportation director. "I'm really enjoying it."

Darlene Brazil, who is blind, is impressed with VAN: "The volunteers really care what happens" to their clients.

Midland firefighter Jim McCoul sips a soft drink while pouring water on a stubborn fire that broke out in record-setting heat Monday. Expert discusses production of lean meat

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Genetics is a key in producing the lean meat demanded by today's consumers, a livestock expert told local 4-H Club boys and girls Monday night.

"You can talk about feed until the cows come home," said Glasscock County Agricultural Agent Norman Kohls. Though diet is crucial, he noted that leanness should be taken care of "with genetics and not with the feed bucket."

About the "only thing that's different" from one hog, lamb or steer to the next is that "we put a different skin on them," he observed of raising livestock for show and profit.

In the production of livestock, the main quality to watch for is lean muscling — meat — from back to front, he told the crowd on hand to observe the 75th anniversary of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Kohls, who accented his talk with three Rambouillet rams, talked of the necessity for a "nice expression of muscle in the butt and a clean front-end — squareness of hip and that elegance of up here."

Stanton swine producer Johnny Peugh told the youths that hogs are "playful and very intelligent animals," which are fond of being "petted, loved and adorned."

And pigs, contrary to popular notions, "are naturally neat," he said. "They will put manure at one end" of the pig pen and, when allowed by the design of the pen, are clean animals.

Peugh recommended that their bedding be made of wood shavings, wheat straw or Coastal Bermuda grass, which won't stain the pigs' coats.

He noted the importance of high-protein feed for hogs. "We want to build muscle. We do not want any fat."

Livestock judges, Peugh said, "are looking for a lot of muscle in hogs."

"We want them to walk correctly," he said. "Yet, we want them to be a little flashy."

Stanton rancher Tommy Newman noted the importance of "squareness of the rump" in the show steer.

"You want him to look like an athlete," he said, and to have a "big butt" of lean, red meat. "You want muscle."

Greg Jones, the Martin County agricultural agent, offered an update on 1990 fat-stock shows — from Houston to El Paso.

Earnest Kiker, the Midland County agricultural agent, gave a brief run-down on the early history of 4-H clubs, which date back to 1908. 4-H started in Texas as the Boys' Corn Club and as the Girls' Tomato Club.

Greg Gruben, Midland County agricultural agent, emceed the event in which boys and girls tendered opinions of their own on livestock.

2 Midlanders arrested for alleged drug dealing

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Two Midlanders suspected of narcotics dealing were arrested Monday at the Lakewood Apartments, the latest apprehensions following a month-long investigation into possible crimes at the complex.

Albert Roy, Route 9, Box 9007, was charged Monday with delivery of marijuana and delivery of cocaine, police spokesman Cpl. Jim White said. Bond was set at $25,000 on each charge, according to White.

James Michael Lee, 4410 Lanham St., was charged with delivery of cocaine. Bond was set at $25,000, White said.

The two were arrested on warrants issued last week by Midland County Justice of the Peace Robert Pine, the spokesman said.

The investigation began a month ago, when members of the Midland police Narcotics unit started receiving complaints from employees at the apartment complex.

Friday night officers raided two apartments at the complex, arrested 11 persons and confiscated property believed taken in recent residential burglaries.

"Tenants at that location were selling drugs and having parties where narcotics were being used on a regular basis," White said.

Undercover officers began working in the area, and made several purchases from tenants, police said.

Arrested Friday were Michael Anthony Fennell, 18, 3609 Caldera Blvd., and Michael Anthony Evans, 23, 2600 N. Loop 250. Both were charged with delivery of cocaine, and each was being held in lieu of $25,000 bond, according to White.

McAlbert Brodnex, 37, was arrested Friday and charged with possession of cocaine. His bond was set at $25,000, according to police.

Five other persons were arrested Friday, and charges filed against them included possession of stolen property, possession of marijuana, public intoxication, and traffic warrants, according to officers.

Two 15-year-old girls and a 16-year-old boy were taken into custody, and later released to the custody of their parents, police said.

Office project bids higher than expected

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Four design and build teams are in the running for the $1 million law enforcement office construction project, but so far their cost estimates are more than Midland County can afford.

At Monday's Commissioner's Court meeting, base bids on the 28,000-square-foot building came in from $100,000 to $300,000 higher than expected.

A committee of experts will review each of the four proposals and determine which of the bids is likely to meet the county's needs, according to architect Walter Pate, coordinator of the construction project.

"There's very little difference in the design proposals," Pate said.

N.C. Sturgeon Inc. of Midland submitted the lowest base bid of $1.17 million, followed by Campbell Construction Co. Inc., $1.2 million; A&S Steel Buildings, $1.33 million; and Dave Leonard Construction Co. Inc., $1.335 million.

The two-story office building plan encompasses 28,000 square feet of office space and will be built adjacent to the county jail, which is currently under construction at the corner of Industrial Avenue and Main Street.

It will house employees of the Midland County Sheriff's Department, constable and justices of the peace.

The county had ear-marked about $1 million in sales tax money for use in constructing the new law enforcement center.

Another $300,000 will be spent to enclose the outer deck of the courthouse to relieve congestion in the county clerk's office and computer department.

Teen expected to be charged in man's death

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A 17-year-old Midland man likely will be charged with involuntary manslaughter in connection with a weekend accident that killed a 19-year-old man, authorities said today.

"We haven't filed charges as of yet," said Detective Sgt. B.G. Johnson. "We're still interviewing people and trying to get to the bottom line. But probably we are going to file it as an involuntary manslaughter."

Sergio Nunez, 303 Stokes Ave., was pronounced dead at the scene of the accident at 3:22 a.m. Saturday by Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe. He was found under a car by police called to the 1800 block of East Maple Avenue to check on a reported accident.

"It was a family disturbance, and he (the suspect) had been threatened," District Attorney Al Schorre said. "He ran to the car, jumped in and was trying to get away at the time. In the course of backing up, he at some point ran over him."

Schorre said he recommended the involuntary manslaughter charge, and he said the case would be presented to a grand jury for review.

Under Texas law, a person commits involuntary manslaughter if he "recklessly causes the death of an individual," or "by accident or mistake when operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated, and, by reason of such intoxication causes the death of an individual."

According to police, witnesses at the scene said the suspect had been drinking and may have been intoxicated at the time of the incident.

Monica Nunez, 24, the wife of Sergio Nunez, was injured in the accident according to police, but Midland Memorial Hospital showed no record of her treatment.

Mark Villa, 19, of Odessa suffered a leg injury and was treated at MMH and released, hospital spokeswoman Sue Ristom said. Corina Villa, 24, also of Odessa was also treated at MMH and released, Ms. Ristom said.

The suspect has given a written statement to investigators, police Cpl. Jim White said.

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

Teen remains hospitalized

A 16-year-old Midland youth remained in very critical condition today at Midland Memorial Hospital following a one-car accident late Sunday, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Abel Aleman, 207 E. Longview, suffered head injuries in the 9:45 p.m. accident and was being treated in the hospital's critical care unit, according to Sue Ristom of MMH.

Aleman was driving a 1972 Ford Mustang two-door eastbound in the 600 block of West Cuthbert Ave. when he lost control of the vehicle, according to police spokesman Cpl. Jim White. The car struck a curb, slid into a tree at 608 W. Cuthbert and hit a parked car, according to police.

Accident investigators found 250 feet of skid marks, and said Aleman was speeding at the time of the accident.

"Speed was a definite factor," White said.

Magdelina Cardenas, 17, 1003 W. Lousiana Ave., and 16-year-old Robin Arredondo, 1106 E. Hickory Ave., suffered minor injuries in the accident and were treated and released, Ms. Ristom said.

Accident victim identified

The Department of Public Safety today released the name of a 28-year-old Midland man who was killed late Sunday when he lost control of his motorcycle on Interstate 20 west of Odessa.

Lawrence J. Shelkey of Midland was pronounced dead at 12:38 a.m. Monday at the scene of the accident, nearly three miles west of Odessa on I-20, the DPS report said.

Shelkey was driving his 1986 Kawasaki motorcycle eastbound "at a high rate of speed" when a gust of wind blew him from the road. The motorcycle struck a guardrail and chain link fence in the median, according to reports.

The accident occurred about 11:15 p.m., according to the DPS.

Stamps, coins stolen

A stamp and coin collection valued at $20,000 was among the items reported stolen in the burglary of a home in rural Midland, according to Sheriff's Department reports.

The collection, which was not described in the report, was in three ring binders. Also reported stolen were a 12-gauge shotgun valued at $300, a .32-caliber lever-action rifle valued at $200, and a nine-millimeter rifle valued at $100.

The burglary occurred at a residence in the 100 block of Cheryl Lane, near County Road 127 East, on Monday between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m., according to reports.

UW participants honored

The first participants in the Midland United Way's minority involvement program "Project Blueprint," graduated Monday night.

Ceremonies were held for the 20 black and Hispanic honorees who completed six hours of leadership development training to become proficient in the areas of United Way agency board membership.

Featured speakers were Tracye McDaniel, executive director of Captial Cities Chamber of Commerce and president of the Texas Association of Black Chambers of Commerce; and Nelson Rodriguez, the founder and first president of the U.S. Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

FARM

Vicki Franklin, 13, favors Hereford steers for her 4-H projects "because they raise more money. And they don't stink, and they are not fat."

But 12-year-old Chris Crawford leans toward hogs.

"They are pretty smart," he said, "and they are sometimes gentle."

His 9-year-old brother, Mike Crawford too, likes hogs "because they are easier to work."

But neither Chris nor Vicki seemed to be fond of sheep.

"They die easier because of worms," Chris said.

"Sometimes they jump up on a fence and break a leg, and then you can't work with them," Vicki said.

Her younger brother, J.C. "Dot-Dot" Franklin, 9, said he prefers to work with steers.

"I like 4-H best," J.C. said, "because it's No. 1. And I hope other kids can join" the organization which helps boys and girls learn how to handle responsibilities and how to mature in leadership qualities.

"They don't know sheep," ranch Clark Franklin said of his son and daughter, "because they are an accident waiting to happen."

Cody Duer, 11, said she enjoys working with rabbits. "I like their ears. They are soft."

Her friend, Shellie Ross, 11, likes dogs, especially the Chihuahua breed. "They are fun to play with," she said. "When you are sick, they make you better."

Kallie Kohls, Kohls' 13-year-old daughter, is a lamb fancier.

"They are easier to take care of — to work with," said Kallie, who has been successful in her sheep-raising. "They bring you more money because of the wool and the meat."

But sheep must the watched over carefully.

And in watching over lambs and other livestock, youngsters in the 4-H Club projects learn "to make a little money, to travel, and to win ribbons and belt-buckles," Peugh had noted earlier in his talk in the Midland County Texas Agricultural Extension Service Building.

And of paramount importance, Peugh said, the youngsters learn "self-confidence and become the leaders of tomorrow."

OFFICE

Commissioners Monday gave the go-ahead to begin contract negotiations with N.C. Sturgeon Inc. on that project.

In other business, the court:

- Voted 3-1 to offer payroll deduction on a supplemental insurance policy for county employees. Commissioner Durward Wright voted against the measure.
- Approved the 10-day trial use of a new photocopier in the library.
- Authorized the Midland County Judicial District to apply for a $159,000 drug testing grant. The Substance Abuse Identification Project would enable probation department officials identify substance abusers at the outset of probation and refer them to drug treatment programs.
- Discussed a mapping contract for Midland County.
- Authorized amendments on a lease agreement with the Museum of the Southwest.
- Unanimously approved a Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation order to designate Faudree Road, from U.S. Highway 80 to State Highway 191 in the Mission Dorado neighborhood, a state spur.
- Authorized the transfer of funds for use in the purchase of a new sheriff's department computer system.

Odessa junior high student contracts TB

From Staff Reports

Ector County health officials will descend on an Odessa junior high school following the diagnosis that a pupil there contracted tuberculosis.

A Hood Junior High School girl was removed from classes last week after being diagnosed with the disease, Ector County Health Authority C.S. Patterson announced this morning.

All Hood staff and pupils, except those who have tested positive for the illness in the past, must receive TB testing, Patterson said in a prepared statement.

The Ector County Health Department, in cooperation with Ector County Independent School District, will give the first skin test Friday at 9 a.m. at the 601 E. 38th St. school, the doctor said. The pupils must be retested in three months, he said, adding that the second test date has yet to be set.

Students who have had TB in the past must supply health officials with health records and a chest x-ray taken within the past year, Patterson said. Children of parents who refuse testing will be excluded from school, he said. Parents of those tested must complete and sign a consent form.

The test is performed by injecting a small amount of antigen under the skin on the inside of the forearm. It is read by measuring the size of the reaction, if any, Patterson said.

Those testing positive will be given a chest X-ray provided by the health department and medication if necessary for six months to prevent the development of of the disease, the doctor said.

The disease commonly affects the lungs but also can affect other body parts such as the liver, bones and joints, lymph systems and skin, the doctor said.

The disease is spread by airborne droplets, Patterson said. It's possible but highly unusual for TB to spread by indirect contact with a contaminated object or dust. Incubation period is from four- to 12-weeks, with initial symptoms of fatigue, fever and weight loss, he said.

Chest abnormalities discovered through X-rays often occur before clinical symptoms, the doctor said.

Once TB is diagnosed, the patient is given anti-microbial and becomes non-infectious in a short time. The patient could be kept on medication for nine months and possibly longer, he said.

Midlander retiring as TU Electric executive

From Staff Reports

H. Jarrell Gibbs has been named executive vice president and general manager of the Texas Electric Service Division, replacing a Midland man, TU Electric Chairman Erle Nye recently announced.

Gibbs Scarth

Gibbs also will serve as a member of the TU Electric board of directors. He has been vice president of operations for the Texas Electric Service Division. In his new position, he will succeed Dale Scarth, formerly of Midland, who is retiring as head of the division. The appointment is effective May 25.

Texas Electric Service Division, headquartered in Fort Worth, provides electric service to about 700,000 customers in 48 counties of north central and west Texas. As a division of TU Electric, it is part of the Texas Utilities Company System.

Gibbs holds a bachelor's and master's degrees in Business Administration from Texas A&M University, joined the Texas Utilities System in 1980 as administrative assistant in the office of the corporate secretary. He was named director of finance in 1983 and treasurer and assistant secretary in 1986.

Before transferring to the Texas Electric Service Division, Gibbs was TU Electric vice president in charge of marketing, which included economic development, development of load management and conservation programs and wholesale power.

Gibbs had a career in the U.S. Army before joining the TU System. He held various command and staff positions, including a tour with the Army Staff in Washington, D.C., as a liaison officer from the Army to the U.S. Congress.

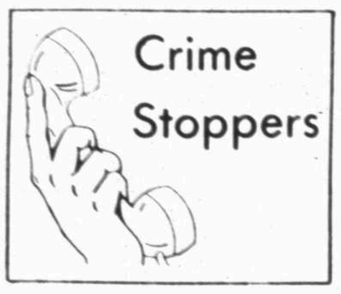

Scarth, who in the past was Western Division manager in Midland, has been with Texas Electric Service since 1949. He held a number of positions in the Division's West Texas Regions before transferring to Fort Worth in 1966. He served as vice president of engineering and of operations before being named to head the division in 1986.

Scarth was the prime innovator of the hand-held meter reading computer now used throughout the electric utility industry. He was named the 1988 Engineer of the Year by the Fort Worth chapter of the Texas Society of Professional Engineers.

Alaska Eskimos fly to U.S.S.R.

In June 1988, during a thaw in the political "ice curtain" between the Soviet Union and the United States, some Eskimos flew from Alaska to Siberia to visit their ancestral homeland and friends and relatives they hadn't seen in 40 years.

Crime Stoppers seeks help in attempted murdercase

Midland Crime Stoppers is asking for the public's help in locating a suspect in an attempted murder.

Just before 8 a.m. on Dec. 9, Lola Jones of Midland left her home to go to work. As she reached the intersection of County Road 1140 and the north service road of Interstate 20, a blue Dodge Ram Charger pulled in front of her pickup truck and forced her to stop.

A man got out of the vehicle and walked to Ms. Jones' vehicle, according to investigators. The two argued for a short time, then the man pulled out a .25-caliber pistol, shot Ms. Jones in the head and walked away.

She was able to get out of the pickup truck, and went to a neighbor's house for help.

The suspect was identified by Ms. Jones as 46-year-old Gary Fay Allison. He was described as 5 feet 11 inches tall, weighing 180 pounds with brown hair and blue eyes. Allison had a full beard at the time of the attack and wears glasses.

A warrant has been issued for Allison's arrest but investigators have not been able to locate him.

Any person who knows where the suspect can be found is asked to call Crime Stoppers. If the information leads to his arrest it could mean up to a $1,000 cash reward.

In Midland, Crime Stoppers can be reached at 694-TIPS, and in Odessa at 333- TIPS.

All callers can remain anonymous.

Tully monster named state's fossil

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — A little critter that's been dead for 300 million years is being given new life in the Illinois General Assembly.

Lawmakers this session are pondering a measure to designate the prehistoric animal called the Tullimonstrom gregarium — known unofficially as the Tully monster — as the state's official fossil.

"The thing that's significant about the Tully monster is that it's indigenous to Illinois," said Rep. Larry Wennlund.

"If you look at the other state symbols — the cardinal, violets, even the monarch butterfly — they can be found all over the country," he said.

Athletic park gets healthy foods

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Hey, yogurt here. Get yer yogurt here.

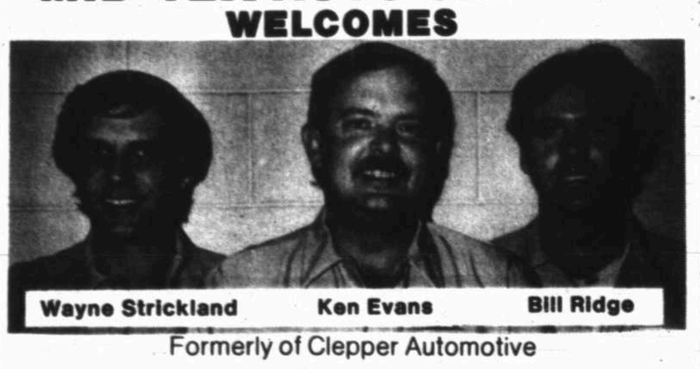

Fans who attend San Francisco Giants ballgames at Candlestick Park this season may be shocked to discover their stadium has gone yuppie.

Concession choices will no longer be limited to standard ballpark fast-food fare, such as fat-filled hot dogs, salty peanuts and beer.

Instead, Giants' fans can now choose among the following healthy foods: meatless hot dogs, yogurt, salads and all the mineral water you can drink.

The team is attempting to change Candlestick Park's image as a crummy place to watch a game.

Construction holds good prospects

By CHET CURRIER

Seventh in a series

Let's build something.

That is a quintessential part of the American dream and of American history.

Since the early days of the U.S. economy, builders, architects, and construction workers have fulfilled a compelling need providing homes, commercial properties for production and trade, and important other facilities such as roads, bridges and hospitals.

Fortunes have been made in real estate investing and development. At the same time, skilled construction trades provide many jobs for people who don't thrive in school, and who may well shudder at the thought of an office job.

More than most other fields of work, construction or contracting work on existing properties hold out good prospects for people who want to be self-employed.

The field has its drawbacks. At the low point of the economic cycle, nationwide or in a local area, the construction industry often suffers badly. Competition can be stiff for small independent contractors, and many of them fail.

The appeal of working outdoors diminishes in rain or cold weather. Winter jobs for some construction occupations may be scarce.

The construction business will face an additional challenge in the 1990s arising from shifting population trends. The low birth rates of the 1960s and 1970s mean that fewer people will be reaching the traditional age of family formation than at any time in recent history.

This suggests a lessening demand for housing intended for first-time buyers, and also a reduced need for rental apartments aimed at young couples, said Lomas Mortgage USA, a large mortgage and financial company, in a recent study.

Hot markets will still exist, given the mobility of our society, said James Wooten, Lomas' chairman.

But the tide of young Americans flowing into adulthood will ebb. It will remain a substantial pool of demand, but will in no way resemble the flood we've experienced in the last 20 years.

This development may be offset somewhat by increased commercial construction. Demand may also rise for repair, remodeling and expansion of existing homes.

Also, the shortage of young adults probably will mean fewer competitors for the construction jobs that draw on the pool of young people.

Formal apprenticeship programs provide a good way to prepare for a career in construction work. It may be beneficial if you graduate beforehand from high school or vocational school.

The typical construction business is relatively small, although there are a few companies that develop property on a wide scale. The government also employs many construction workers for projects such as highway building.

Some construction occupations offer good opportunities for part-time and seasonal work. Many students, for example, take summer jobs painting houses, cleaning windows or cutting lawns.

Architects and surveyors: These professions require more education and training than most other jobs in the building and design of properties.

Competition is likely to remain tough for jobs with prominent architectural firms and in the bidding to work on major design projects.

Construction trades: In carpentry, the biggest construction trade, about one-third of the workers are self-employed.

This is theoretically an easy field to get into, but to make a good living you need to develop a reputation for dependability as well as for skill and the ability to learn new techniques with new tools.

Plumbers and electricians, many of whom are also self-employed, enjoy a special advantage. In today's specialized society, many homemakers no longer can compete with them as do-it-yourselfers.

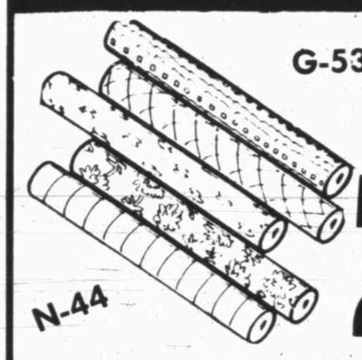

Plumbers and electricians also get many indoorjobs that are not subject to the vicissitudes of the season or the weather. That goes, too, for specialists such as insulation installers and carpet cutters.

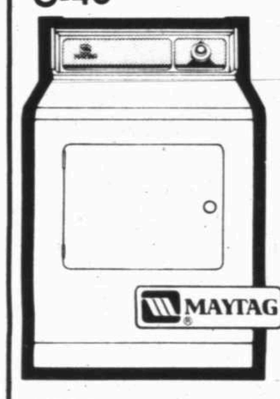

The demand will still also be strong for skilled roofers, bricklayers, stone-masons, and structural workers, among others, who often brave the elements, since Americans have so much invested in the residential and commercial real estate they own.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Beneficial changes are about to take place in a close relationship. Be careful not to injure someone's pride. Review your debts and assets in September and act on your findings. You will need the good will and support of someone from your past if you are to enjoy a prosperous future. Good luck makes an "impossible" dream come true.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: the man who made movie musicals so special: superstar Fred Astaire, actor Taurean Blacque, country star Mother Maybelle Carter, radio star Gary Owens, "Gone With the Wind" producer David O. Selznick, sportscaster Pat Summerall, movie musicman Dimitri Tiomkin, comic actress Nancy Walker.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A family member will have a positive influence on your career and finances. You will not gain your objective without taking some calculated risks. Strike while the iron is hot.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Keep your faith strong. Love relationships take on added color and joy. A change of scenery would do wonders for your disposition. A financial situation turns around in your favor. Reward your friends.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A heart-to-heart talk will bring peace of mind. Solutions come with better communication. Keep in touch with family members and business associates at a distance. You need their input.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Check with your doctor before starting a strenuous exercise program or special diet. You need to do everything you can to strengthen a relationship. Changes at work prove beneficial for you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may soon get the good fortune you have been waiting for. Ask loved ones to be less selfish and think about what is best for you for a change. You need to alter your course.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Use the phone instead of traveling and you will be cheered by the results. Be more gracious with your co-workers. Show special tact with peers of the opposite sex. Avoid flippant comments.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): What is done is done. Stop dwelling on a mistake and move on! Do not decline an offer without first exploring what it could mean to you both emotionally and financially.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Stop worrying about what others think and follow your best instincts. Do everything you can to stabilize a work or financial situation. It is not a crime to change your mind. Heed your conscience.

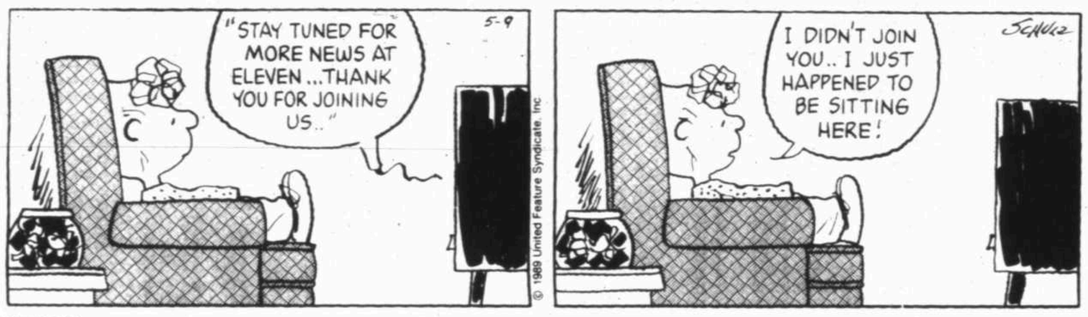

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stop fault-finding and search for ways to turn negatives into positives. Clear up a misunderstanding before real harm is done. A great day for negotiating business deals. Put your best foot forward.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan 19): Recent events make it possible for you to pursue a lifelong dream. You need someone new to help you run a business. Bring in a partner you can trust to protect your interests.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Although your honesty improves your chances for success, you may be too outspoken for your own good. Listen to a friend's advice, but make your own decisions. Your determination will be rewarded.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Advise a friend who you know is too insecure to move forward. Be upbeat and positive! Magnificent trends bring new romantic, domestic and financial solutions. Patch up a quarrel without further delay.

Opening lead: Ace of ♣

In 1988 the U.S. won the only world title that had so far eluded it—the World Team Olympiad. In the final, played after two weeks of grueling preliminary rounds, the U.S defeated Austria in a match that produced less than error-free bridge.

Austria reached the terrible contract of six spades after the above auction. West was informed that the sequence showed six spades and five clubs. Since North surely had at least two clubs for his no trump opening bid, that meant that East could not have more than one club.

West, therefore, led the ace of clubs and another, expecting his partner to ruff. When declarer won that trick with the jack, the contract could now have been made. Since West will show out on the second heart, the ruffing finesse against East becomes marked and declarer can dispose of his diamond loser.

Declarer started off well enough with a heart to the ace and a heart back, but with a 5–to–1 shot of ruffing with the right card, he selected the three of trumps! That was just low enough for West to be able to overruff with the four for down one.

In the other room, the Americans were less aggressive. They played quietly in four spades, a contract that needed no special skill to be brought home. As a result, the U.S. gained substantially on this board.

'Jerome Robbins' Broadway,' 'Black and Blue' hog nominations for Tony awards

NEW YORK (AP) — Two musical revues — "Jerome Robbins' Broadway" and "Black and Blue" — dominated the 1989 Tony nominations even though musical categories for book and score were eliminated this year.

Each show received 10 nominations Monday, including nods for best musical. They will compete against "Starmites," a campy space-age musical that received six nominations.

The 1988-89 Broadway season was the poorest in terms of quantity and quality for musicals in several years. Only seven new musicals opened, compared with 14 a year ago. And several of this season's shows, particularly "Carrie" and "Legs Diamond," were well-publicized flops.

The decision by the nominating committee to eliminate the two categories was unusual but not unprecedented. In 1985, nominations for actor and actress in a musical and for choreography were dropped. "Black and Blue" and "Jerome Robbins' Broadway" use old songs and have no book.

"Lend Me a Tenor," a farce by Ken Ludwig about an indisposed opera star and the nebbish who replaces him, garnered seven nominations, including for best play. Its best-play competition includes Wendy Wasserstein's "The Heidi Chronicles," winner of the 1989 Pulitzer Prize; "Shirley Valentine," Willy Russell's comedy about an unfulfilled English housewife, and "Largely New York," Bill Irwin's play without dialogue that picked up four other nominations.

Irwin also was nominated for best acting in the play, for direction and for choreography, which he did with Kimi Okada.

Other best actor nominations went to dance superstar Mikhail Baryshnikov for his portrayal of man who turns into a dung beetle in "Metamorphosis," and to Philip Bosco and Victor Garber for "Lend Me a Tenor."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The sizzle in "Moonlighting" has fizzled, forcing ABC to cancel its once popular hit after the tongue-in-cheek detective series landed in the ratings basement.

"Moonlighting," an instant hit for ABC when it debuted four years ago with the zany antics of detectives David Addison and Maddie Hayes, will have its last original episode broadcast this Sunday, the network said Monday.

Shepherd

The show made a star of Bruce Willis, who played the free-spirited David, and was the comeback vehicle for Cybill Shepherd as the straight-laced Maddie. The bickering romance between the mismatched couple sparked sexual electricity.

"TV, by its very nature, is cyclical and it would be foolish to expect 'Moonlighting' to continue indefinitely," Willis said Monday.

"When the show was at its height, it was very much like playing a brand new song that had never been played before," he said. "Some people might not have liked the song, we may not have always played it exactly to fit people's taste, but when we were 'on,' we hit some notes that will never be played again."

Producer-creator Glenn Caron's witty dialogue and sometimes daring stories also were credited with wooing the audience. He left the show after a creative dispute with Miss Shepherd.

In recent years, the show also suffered production problems. It began as one of the brightest spots on Tuesday night, but this season was pulled from the schedule and returned on Sunday nights. It was the seventh lowest-rated show in last week's A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings.

"We feel the show has reached a creative conclusion and that this is the appropriate time to end the series," ABC's statement said. "We are quite proud of the innovation which 'Moonlighting' brought to television during the past four years."

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Bluesman B.B. King, who has traveled the world with his guitar "Lucille," is looking for a home in Memphis and plans to open a club in the Beale Street entertainment district next year, his manager says.

King

King got his professional start and his stage name in Memphis in the late 1940s.

"After all, he is named B.B. King, which is 'Beale Street Blues Boy,' and that goes back to the basic roots," manager Sid Sidenberg said Monday by telephone from New York.

From the late 1800s through the 1950s, Beale Street was a bustling entertainment and commercial district for blacks. Recent efforts to develop it into a major tourist center have been disappointing.

Sidenberg said the district is coming along, however, and the time is right for the blues guitarist and singer to give it a try.

"We decided to open up a club so we can use it as sort of a sounding board for new talent as well as B.B. himself coming down and having fun playing in his hometown," Sidenberg said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Thousands of Lucille Ball's fans shed tears for the woman who made them laugh, as three cities held memorial services in which the redheaded comedian was remembered with prayers and applause.

"She was a whole package. There never will be another one like her. I love her," said a tearful Carol Burnett following a memorial Mass in suburban Santa Monica.

More than a thousand people who packed the St. Monica's Catholic Church rose to their feet and clapped for several minutes after television minister the Rev. Robert Schuller asked them to "applaud the Lord for Lucille Ball."

About 1,000 people also crowded a church in New York and 200 gathered in a Chicago church. All three memorial Masses began at 8 p.m. Monday, the time Miss Ball's three most popular programs were often broadcast.

The 77-year-old comedian who starred in one of television's biggest all-time hits, "I Love Lucy," died here April 26 of a ruptured aorta, a major blood vessel, eight days after emergency open-heart surgery.

"She showed her love in the only way she knew how, by making you laugh," the Rev. James Fox told those gathered for the Roman Catholic Mass at St. Ignatius Loyola in New York.

Broadcaster Diane Sawyer told the crowd that the death of Miss Ball may have settled a longstanding theological debate over whether there is laughter in heaven.

"A God who would have created her would never let her laughter be far from him," said Ms. Sawyer.

In Chicago, the Rev. Jack Wall told people at Old St. Patrick Church that God gave the world talents like Miss Ball "to show us life is not a tragedy, but a comedy with a happy ending."

"She taught us that if we could love Lucy, we could love ourselves," Wall said.

Baker to ask Gorbachev for help in Middle East

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — Secretary of State James A. Baker III will ask Mikhail S. Gorbachev for help in forging peace in the Middle East if the Soviet leader proves to be sincere about global cooperation, a senior official says.

En route Monday to Moscow to meet with the general secretary, Baker said his goal is "to make it clear to the Soviets that we are seeking an active, constructive, positive and expanding relationship."

"If we find that the Soviet Union is serious about new global behavior, then we will seek diplomatic engagement in an effort to reach mutually beneficial results," Baker said.

A senior official expanded on those remarks, telling reporters on Baker's flight from Washington that the Bush administration would welcome Moscow's help promoting Arab-Israeli negotiations and was not trying to exclude the Soviets from those peace efforts.

"We ought not to somehow be worried about the Soviet Union being a participant in trying to enhance the prospects for peace in the Middle East," the official said. "The problems there are extraordinarily intractable. We welcome all the help we can get."

But the official, who responded to questions only on condition of anonymity, ruled out U.S. concessions in Afghanistan or negotiations to remove short-range nuclear missiles from Europe.

He insisted the Soviets should suspend their military aid to the Marxist government of Nicaragua, estimated at $500 million a year, and show interest in a peaceful solution in the Middle East by resuming diplomatic relations with Israel and exerting influence on Syria.

The official said the United States would not stop aiding the Afghan rebels in their war with the Kabul government, which was supplied with Soviet arms and equipment before the Red Army left the country in February.

Baker, who has never been to the Soviet Union before, is due in Moscow on Wednesday morning for talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze. They plan to meet again Thursday morning, and Baker will see Gorbachev for two hours in the afternoon.

The U.S. entourage, including State Department, Pentagon and National Security Council officials, stopped first in Helsinki to rest, confer and meet with Finnish officials.

Baker met with Shevardnadze in Vienna in March before the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the Warsaw Pact opened negotiations to reduce non-nuclear armor and artillery in Europe.

Cult's 'godmother' says she was held against her will

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The woman police call the "godmother" of a drug smuggling cult that killed 15 people said she was held hostage by group members after the ritual slayings were discovered.

Sara Aldrete Villarreal Monday said she belonged to the cult and described its leader as "enigmatic and mysterious." But she again denied any role in the mutilation slayings at a ranch in Matamoros near the U.S. border.

"I have never in my life participated in a human sacrifice," the 24-year-old woman said at a news conference. "I am sorry because of all the things that happened, I'm sorry because of all the killing."

"I don't know how I got into this without knowing what it was," she said.

Mexican authorities said Adolfo de Jesus Constanzo and Ms. Aldrete, a former honor student at Texas Southmost College in Brownsville, directed the human sacrifices and other rituals, including mutilations and boiling of brains and organs.

Authorities said the rituals were meant to bring occult protection to the drug ring, which allegedly trafficked in marijuana to the United States.

Ms. Aldrete and four others were arrested at a Mexico City apartment Saturday after a gunfight with police.

Constanzo, 26, and his right-hand man, Martin Quintana Rodriguez, were killed. Alvaro de Leon Valdez, 22, one of those arrested, said he shot the two to death on Constanzo's orders.

Ms. Aldrete said Monday she was watching television with Constanzo, known as the cult's "godfather," at a Mexico City apartment on April 12 when she learned of the killings.

"He said, 'They've found the bodies, we have to leave,'" Ms. Aldrete said. "I said, 'What are you talking about?' And he said, 'OK, you want to know, I'll tell you.' And he told me how he did it and why."

De Leon Valdez told reporters Monday that Ms. Aldrete was not involved in the killings, discovered April 11.

At a news conference Sunday he discussed the slayings and said he watched earlier this year as Mark Kilroy, 21, a University of Texas premedical student, was killed with a machete chop to the head and his spinal column removed for a necklace.

Ms. Aldrete said she, Constanzo and other cult members fled briefly to Brownsville, just north of Matamoros, after police began digging up the bodies of victims.

"Living in Brownsville, it was like hell," she said. "They treated me like a prisoner. I was scared."

Ms. Aldrete said the group returned to Mexico City a few days later and stayed in small towns near the capital.

Aldrete said that several weeks ago the group moved into the apartment in a quiet middle-class Mexico City neighborhood where police closed in Saturday.

She did not describe how group members kept her from escaping or from contacting authorities.

Ms. Aldrete said she was fascinated with Constanzo ever since she met him in June 1987.

Bush said to lack 'gut commitment' to destroy Sandinistas

LONDON (AP) — Nicaragua's foreign minister said Monday that President Bush doesn't have Ronald Reagan's "gut commitment" to destroy the Sandinista government and there are hopes for better relations with the United States.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Miguel d'Escoto said he felt Bush is more pragmatic than former President Reagan.

"(With) Bush at least I don't think there's the degree of gut commitment to the destruction of the (Sandinista) revolution," d'Escoto said, speaking in English.

He said he also was "led to have some optimism on the fact that (Secretary of State) James A. Baker III I think is a pragmatic man." He said Baker does not differ ideologically from Reagan's secretary of state, George P. Shultz, but he believed Baker is in the presidential "inner circle" and Shultz was not.

D'Escoto, who is accompanying Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega on a 10-nation Western European tour, said Reagan "was a man with a pathological obsession about Nicaragua. I really think it can only be described as that.

"Then he (Reagan) got himself into this so much that there was no coming back because of a fear to lose credibility."

Ortega conferred with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher Monday, and a British source said Mrs. Thatcher told him she was disappointed by his government's lack of progress toward democracy.

Ortega said Mrs. Thatcher did not promise any financial aid for Nicaragua and he said, "We didn't have much hope for that."

Later, at a rally in the Central Hall Westminster, Ortega told a rally attended by about 2,500 cheering supporters that he was "not asking favors of anyone."

"If I were to draw up the balance sheet of the sum of all the wealth that market-oriented, developed countries have extracted from all third countries of the world, all of our foreign debt would be paid off and they would still owe us," he said.

Ortega was introduced by novelist Graham Greene who said, "Let's look at the darkness in our own country and not an imaginary darkness in your own republic."

About 50 opponents of the left-wing Sandinistas gathered outside the building and engaged in a shouting exchange with Ortega's backers. Police kept the two groups apart but reported three arrests.

D'Escoto said the United States, which recently extended its trade embargo against Nicaragua, "is not really helping" relations.

He said the only positive sign was the U.S. decision to allow Nicaragua to replace seven of its diplomats kicked out by the Reagan administration in retaliation for the ouster of seven U.S. diplomats 10 months ago. The Sandinistas accused the American envoys of fomenting unrest.

Nicaragua insists on respect from the United States, the foreign minister said.

Egyptian Nobel winner not upset by cleric's threats

By NEJLA SAMMAKIA

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Naguib Mahfouz, winner of the 1988 Nobel Prize in literature, is as unruffled by death threats from Moslem fundamentalists as he is by his new wealth and international acclaim.

"At my age, there's no fear about being killed," said the frail 77-year-old writer as he sat at his usual table by the picture window of Ali Baba, a cafe overlooking downtown Cairo's busy Tahrir Square. "I refused police protection because this would tie down my freedom of movement."

As he spoke, he slowly sipped Turkish coffee, without sugar because he's diabetic.

Mahfouz, the first author who writes in Arabic to receive the Nobel literary prize, is a man of routine, and his routine has not changed in the month since an Egyptian fundamentalist sheik declared him an apostate, a rebel against his religion.

Islam decrees that he must repent or die, said Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman, who had been acquitted of charges he instigated the 1981 assassination of President Anwar Sadat with a similar proclamation.

"Security authorities say there are some young extremists who might act on Abdel-Rahman's words," Mahfouz said. "They advised me to accept protection."

Abdel-Rahman's declaration did not arouse the reaction among many Moslems abroad as did condemnation of Moslem-born British writer Salman Rushdie.

Rushdie has been in hiding since Feb. 14, when Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini said his novel "The Satanic Verses" blasphemes Islam and ordered the author's death. The book has been banned in predominantly Moslem countries, including Egypt.

On this day, as always, Mahfouz walked alone to the Ali Baba cafe, about a half-hour from his home, where he lives with his wife, Atyatallah, and two grown daughters. He travels the same route every day and said he has no intention of changing it, despite the anxiety of family and security authorities.

The author of works including 40 novels still goes to his Friday literary meetings at a Nile riverside restaurant and to Thursday get-togethers with a poet, an actor and three other close friends.

"Nothing has changed for me," Mahfouz said about the impact of the Nobel Prize money, a $390,000 award that his daughters traveled to Sweden in December to receive. Mahfouz's delicate health, including impaired eyesight and hearing, kept him at home.

He said he divided the money equally among himself, his wife and his two daughters. Mahfouz donated his quarter to a charity organization at Al-Ahram, a state-run newspaper and Mahfouz's long-time employer.

Al-Ahram was at the center of a controversy 30 years ago that led to Mahfouz's current friction with fundamentalists. In 1959, the newspaper's serialization of Mahfouz's "Children of Gebelawi" drew the attention of the sheiks at Al-Azhar, the Cairo institution that is Islam's center of theology.

They immediately banned it as blasphemous and spoke of trying Mahfouz for apostasy because the book wrongly depicted biblical figures.

The ban never was lifted, but Mahfouz was left in peace. After his Nobel triumph, Al-Azhar leaders received Mahfouz warmly at the venerated institute.

A new threat arose in early April with Sheik Abdel-Rahman's "fatwa" or religious opinion that the book proved Mahfouz had abandoned Islam and unless he repented must be killed under Islamic law.

Nobody outside Fayoum, Abdel-Rahman's hometown southwest of Cairo, knew of the proclamation until the blind cleric repeated the opinion in an interview published on April 13 with the Kuwaiti newspaper Al-Anbaa.

Hopefuls couldn't back Palestinian state, Shamir says

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said in an interview published today that Palestinians who run in his proposed elections must agree that the occupied lands will not become an independent Palestinian nation.

Shamir told the Jerusalem Post the agreement would apply to an interim period of autonomy in the West Bank and Gaza Strip and to negotiations on the final status of the territories, seized by Israel in 1967.

"Agreement has to be for the whole process," he said.

Shamir has suggested previously that he might ask for such an agreement before elections can be held. But his interview with the Post is his most wide-ranging statement on his plan.

Leading Palestinians in the occupied lands and the Palestine Liberation Organization have said any elections must be part of a plan leading to Palestinian independence.

They have turned down Shamir's proposal, but he has said he does not consider the rejection final.

Under his proposal, Palestinians in the occupied lands would elect people to negotiate with Israel on a five-year autonomy plan. Talks on the final status of the territories would begin in the third year.

Shamir said he wanted agreement with a "Palestinian body" before the balloting to ensure that those elected would not "proclaim themselves the government of Palestine, or something like that."

He did not make clear what "body" he had in mind but repeated his government's refusal to negotiate with the PLO, which Israel considers a terrorist organization.

"It will have to be a Palestinian body. Perhaps if Egypt and Jordan will want to join, we will welcome them," Shamir said. The West Bank was captured from Jordan, the Gaza Strip from Egypt.

Today is Memorial Day in honor of Israel's war dead. In a speech in observance of the day, Shamir said the creation of a Palestinian state was out of the question because it would bring a "Beirut-like situation in the very midst of our country."

"First strength, then peace," Shamir said.

The uprising, in which 465 Palestinians and 21 Israelis have been killed, is seen in the occupied lands as the reason why sympathy with the Palestinian cause has grown around the world.

Car bomb kills two Spanish policemen

ALCALA DE HENARES, Spain (AP) — A car bomb explosion believed triggered by Basque separatists killed two policemen and injured three after a shooting incident apparently aimed at luring police, authorities said today.

In a statement, the ministry said the blast occurred Monday night outside a maximum security prison in this city just east of Madrid about 10 minutes after gunmen shot a prison employee as he drove away from the facility.

No group claimed responsibility for the attack, but police said it appeared to have been carried out by the Basque separatist organization ETA.

At least 40 ETA members convicted of terrorist-related crimes are serving sentences at the prison, known as Alcala-Meco.

ETA seeks independence from Spain for the three-province northern Basque region. During its 21-year campaign of violence, the group has claimed responsibility for killing more than 600 people, mainly police and paramilitary Civil Guard officers.

Lebanese hospitals shelled

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A Christian hospital and a Moslem hospital were shelled in fierce fighting across this divided city, and four people were killed, including two patients, police said today.

Police said 20 people also were wounded in the shelling barrages, which subsided into sporadic exchanges at daybreak today and intensified again later.

Since March 8, when the current round of fighting broke out between Gen. Michel Aoun's Christian army units and an alliance of Syrian and Druse forces, 320 people have been killed and 1,204 wounded.

A police spokesman said at least 12 howitzer and mortar rounds hit the Barbir Hospital in Moslem west Beirut and its surroundings late Monday.

He said one shell slammed into the hospital's lobby as patients were being moved to an underground shelter. The attack killed Mohammed Mosallam, an administrator, and Bilal Daher, a reporter who was hospitalized with leg fractures suffered in a car accident.

Whites convicted of murder

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Two young white men have been convicted of murdering an 8-year-old black boy who was struck in the skull by a paving stone hurled from the back of a four-wheel-drive vehicle.

According to testimony, the young men were part of a group of high school students who skipped classes on Oct. 12, 1987, and who decided to throw stones at pedestrians while on their way back from a picnic grounds where they had been drinking.

Ronnie Pitso, 8, died of brain injuries after he was struck by a paving stone hurled by Shane Mitchell, now 18, according to Monday's judgment in Johannesburg Supreme Court.

Timothy Beddingfield, now 20, also was convicted of murder on the grounds that he knew the stone was about to be thrown and did nothing to stop Mitchell.

Sentencing was scheduled for May 22.

Court releases commander

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Retired Air Force commander Brig. Orlando Agosti, convicted in December 1985 of human rights abuses during the military's "dirty war" against subversion, was ordered released from prison Monday.

Orlandi, 64, left the Justice Palace with his lawyers after the decision was handed down in federal court.

Orlandi's sentence of three years and nine months was the lightest passed on the five former commanders of the regimes that ruled between the March 1976 coup against President Isabel Peron and the election in October 1983 of President Raul Alfonsin.

The other four, including ex-presidents Jorge Videla and Roberto Viola, remain at Magdalena military prison, 60 miles southeast of the capital, Buenos Aires.

At least 8,961 Argentines were arrested and presumedly killed by the security forces between 1976 and 1983, according to a commission appointed by Alfonsin. Human rights groups say the total could be twice as high.

Agosti still faces separate charges stemming from his participation in the 1976 coup.

Midland Angel baserunner Reed Peters can't quite make it to second in time to break up a relay throw by Tulsa's Monty Fariss.

Late Halo rally can't stop slide

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

The learning process in the minor leagues, as Midland pitcher Roberto Hernandez discovered Monday night, can be a painful experience.

In the third inning, Hernandez and the Angels trailed Tulsa 8-1 and it looked like it would get a lot worse before it got better.

That's when Manager Max Oliveras went out to the mound to talk with the young righthander from New York.

"You are too nice," Oliveras scolded. "If you want to pitch in the big leagues, you are going to have to learn to come inside."

What followed were two shutout innings before Hernandez retired, not because he had given up 11 hits and eight runs, but because he had logged 92 pitches and it was time.

IN THE meantime, despite a limp flag in center, a pitcher's flag, the Angels were far from dead.

Midland had gotten two runs back on Chris Cron's two-run double in the third; two more on Everett Graham's two-run homer in the fifth and two more on Jeff Barns' clutch pinch hit two-run triple in the seventh.

But when it was all over Tony Scruggs' three-run homer in the third was the blow that gave Tulsa the winning edge in a 9-7 victory in the opener of a five-game series between the Texas League divisional winners.

In tonight's 7 p.m. second game, Kevin Trudeau, 3-0 and 1.59 ERA, will go against Tulsa's Felipe Castillo, 0-4, with a 7.06 ERA.

Perhaps, the game's key play came after Barns' tripled off the right field wall in the seventh, scoring Gary DiSarcina, who had walked, and Reed Peters, who had singled. That left Midland behind 8-7, a man on third and only one out.

"I blame myself," Oliveras said of what happened next. "Tulsa had the infield in and then they dropped back and I told Barns he would have to be his own coach."

Bulls seek to conquer Apple; Suns host Warriors

Associated Press

The opponent has changed. The approach remains the same.

The Chicago Bulls, fresh from upsetting Cleveland in the first round of the NBA playoffs, are in New York tonight to open a best-of-7 series with the Knicks. New team, old challenge.

"Against the Knicks, we have to be very enthused and motivated, like we were for Cleveland," said Michael Jordan, who averaged 39.8 points against the Cavaliers.

"I think the playoffs have brought a different atmosphere to this team. I don't think we were as prepared as we should have been throughout the season. We didn't believe in ourselves."

But Jordan believed and even predicted the Bulls — 0-6 against Cleveland during the season — would win the opening round in four games. It took five, partly because Jordan missed a key free throw late in Game 4 and Cleveland came back to win in overtime.

"I knew that prediction would get back to Cleveland," he said. "But I wanted to instill belief in my teammates that we could beat this team. You have to believe it before you do it."

As for the Knicks, Jordan said he is "retiring as a predictor. I did that to get my teammates involved. But I might do it again if I see there's a need to inspire them."

The other NBA playoff game tonight has Phoenix at home against Golden State and holding a 1-0 lead in the series.

Wednesday night, it will be Milwaukee at Detroit in Game 1 and the Los Angeles Lakers playing host to Seattle, whom they beat Sunday in their opening game.

Stopping Jordan might be impossible, but beating the Bulls isn't.

"If he gets his and we hold everyone else down," Knicks guard Gerald Wilkins said, "we'll be OK. If Michael gets his and everyone else gets theirs, we'll be in trouble."

The Knicks had trouble in their first-round series, even though they swept the 76ers. All three games were tight to the finish.

If the games with Chicago are that close, the Knicks know what Chicago will be trying.

"Magic Johnson is a great basketball player," Knicks coach Rick Pitino said. "Larry Bird is outstanding. You have Dominique Wilkins and all the rest. But Jordan is just something else in those last seconds."

Warriors-Suns

Golden State might try something old and new after being routed by Phoenix in the series opener. The old is former starting and star center, 7-foot-4 Ralph Sampson. The new is teaming him with 7-7 Manute Bol to form the "Thin Towers."

Sampson has been buried on the Warriors' bench and didn't play at all in the first-round sweep of Utah. He got onto the court in Phoenix's 130-103 victory, scoring six points, grabbing two rebounds and making one steal in 10 minutes. But the Suns were way ahead when he got in.

"I tried to be an inspiration or boost for the guys," Sampson said. "I have no control over when I play. I have no idea what's going on."

Coach Don Nelson does, but isn't saying.

"I'm not going to go over strategies," he said. "I don't discuss changes in theory or practicality. What coaches are supposed to do is give your team the best shot at winning. Whatever I decide to do, it will be toward that goal."

SuperSonics-Lakers

Maybe the Lakers should practice with tackling dummies for the rest of this series.

"We've got to flip the switch from a finesse team to one that's going to be playing in the trenches," Coach Pat Riley said after the two-time defending champions won the opener 113-102. "They are one of the most aggressive teams in the league. They fight and compete for everything."

The Sonics committed 31 fouls to only 16 for the Lakers in Game 1. Los Angeles made 37 of 46 free throws, while Seattle was 18-for-25. The Sonics actually had more field goals, 41-38.

Bucks-Pistons

Milwaukee is banged-up physically but riding an emotional high after beating Atlanta in five games. Detroit will have an eight-day layoff between games.

The Bucks eliminated the Hawks at Atlanta without leading scorer Terry Cummings.

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball's investigation of Cincinnati Reds manager Pete Rose appears to be coming to an end.

John M. Dowd, the lawyer heading the inquiry, said Monday that his work will be all but finished when he presents his report later this week to Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti.

"It's a substantial report that the commissioner can read and study," Dowd said Monday in a telephone interview from his Washington office.

Dowd did not know when this week he would turn in the report and a spokesman for the commissioner's office confirmed it had not yet been received.

Three of Rose's lawyers released a statement last week that questioned whether Dowd's investigation was, in fact, complete.

Dowd, hired by the commissioner's office to investigate charges that Rose bet on baseball, said he did not think there would be further reports after he submits his.

"I don't think so, but I can't predict," he said.

Dowd would not say how many people worked on the investigation or how much time had been spent on it.

If Giamatti determines Rose has bet on baseball, the Cincinnati manager would be suspended for one year. If he finds he had bet on the Reds, Rose would be banned for life.

Ranger reserve missing

NEW YORK (AP) — Officials and players on the Texas Rangers say they are very concerned about the whereabouts of Rick Leach.

Leach did not show up for Monday night's game against New York at Yankee Stadium, and the Rangers still did not know where he was after the game.

Texas general manager Tom Grieve said the club had notified authorities that Leach was missing.

Abbott returns to boyhood haunts

DETROIT (AP) — Jim Abbott tried to answer the barrage of questions with the poise of a veteran, but the sparkle in his eyes told the reporters surrounding him that he was elated to be home.

Monday night's game between the California Angels and Detroit Tigers marked the first time Abbott had visited his home state since the one-handed pitcher made the Angels' this spring.

"It's the first time I haven't been a paying customer at Tiger Stadium," Abbott said as he stepped out of the dugout and surveyed the field. "It's different looking at it (the stadium) from this perspective ... It's a place I've always loved to come to and I kind of hoped that I'd someday play here."

This time around, Abbott will have to be content with being a spectator. The Flint native originally was scheduled to pitch Wednesday night, but a rainout Sunday in Toronto will cause him to miss starting in Tiger Stadium. Now, he is scheduled to pitch Thursday in Anaheim, Calif., against the New York Yankees.

"I wanted to throw here. It's been a lifelong dream of mine, but I have no control over the weather," he said. "I'm disappointed ... but this way I can visit my family and friends and still do what I have to do and not have to worry about pitching a game on Wednesday night."

Adjusting to the major leagues just one year after graduating from the University of Michigan was tough at first for the left-hander, but he has settled down nicely.

Abbott lost in his first two starts, but has come back to win his last two decisions, compiling a respectable 3.48 ERA.

"I've felt much more relaxed lately," Abbott said. "The first couple of times out were kind of nerve-wracking. But once you get used to it and into a routine, it's easier to pitch."

Dealing with the media attention surrounding his disability also has been difficult.

"It's (the attention) not as bad as it was at first in California," he said. "I've been trying not to read the papers and have not really paid attention to what was being said.

"I felt in my own mind that I made the team out of spring training for legitimate reasons and I felt the California Angels were sincere in saying the same thing."

While the media and the fans still may treat Abbott as a sort of baseball oddity, he's just another rookie to his teammates. Veteran California pitcher Bert Blyleven played a practical joke by setting Abbott's shoelaces on fire as he talked with reporters.

Ex-Wrangler Ehlo excels for Cavs

Battles

Craig Ehlo, the former Odessa College basketball player, not only has finally made it in the NBA, he was almost the hero of Sunday's Cleveland Cavalier-Chicago Bulls playoff decider.

Ehlo drove in for a layup to give the Cavaliers a one-point lead with three seconds to go. Only trouble, Michael Jordan was still roaming around the court and three seconds was all he needed.

Nevertheless, Ehlo has come a long way since his OC days, when he is best remembered, not so much for his ability, but for how hard he played, although he was about all the Wranglers had in those days.

Word came back to West Texas that he was doing well at Washington State, but that's a long way from the NBA.

Still, he wound up with the Houston Rockets where he was seen in cameo roles in the NBA finals against the Boston Celtics a few years back.

With the Rockets, Ehlo was the relief pitcher brought in from the bullpen to face one batter and then dispatched to the shower before he could embarrass the team, a little bit like the way the Chicago Cubs used Craig Lefferts a few years ago. This is the same Craig Lefferts who pitched the equivalent of a perfect game for the San Francisco Giants this spring in relief appearances.

Perhaps, at that stage of their careers, that was the proper role for Ehlo and Lefferts.

However, Ehlo's progress was emphasized Sunday when, despite a sore ankle, he was assigned the job of guarding Jordan, probably the game's most talented player and might be so recognized with a better supporting cast.

And, but for the fact that Jordan is Jordan and there's not much anybody can do about it, Ehlo would have been the toast of the basketball world Monday, instead he's just a guy who came close, but not quite close enough...

Nine-run 4th spurs Angels

Associated Press

How hot are the California Angels?

So hot that they failed to get a hit for three innings, then scored nine runs in the fourth en route to a 9-2 victory Monday night over the Detroit Tigers.

So hot that their dugout became uncomfortable.

"You know, they had the heater on in the dugout and all the guys were moving out to the dugout step because we were getting too hot," said Wally Joyner, who had a double and triple in the big inning. "I guess that shows were in a pretty good streak."

The Angels have a five-game winning streak and are 20-11 on the season. Last year, they didn't win their 20th game until June 5.

Despite's California's big inning, Manager Doug Rader said he is "still waiting for our offense to come around. We were opportunistic and things just worked out well.

"Don't get me wrong, I'm glad to see nine runs. But whatever I say about this game is going to sound greedy and I want this to be in context."

Detroit's Doyle Alexander didn't allow a hit through the first three innings, but Joyner started the fourth with a double and scored on a one-out single by Devon White.

Chili Davis singled and Lance Parrish walked to load the bases. Dante Bichette grounded to third, but Al Pedrique's throw home hit White in the back for an error, allowing White and Davis to score.

Jack Howell was intentionally walked to load the bases and Dick Schofield walked to force Parrish home. Brian Downing's triple cleared the bases and made it 7-0. Ramon Pena relieved and the Angels scored their final two runs on Joyner's triple and Johnny Ray's single.

Meanwhile, Chuck Finley scattered seven hits. California starters have pitched into the seventh inning or later in 23 of 30 games.

"Our pitching staff has been outstanding," Joyner said. "I talked to (Detroit's) Dave Bergman after he got his hit. He turned and said, 'Man, you guys are hot.' I said, 'It's not us so much; it's our pitching.'"

Rangers 13, Yankees 2

Jeff Stone, a late replacement for the missing Rick Leach, drove in four runs and Kevin Brown beat New York for the second time in a week.

Stone keyed a seven-run fifth inning with a three-run triple and added an RBI double in a four-run sixth. Stone was not in the original lineup but was inserted as the designated hitter when Leach did not show up at Yankee Stadium.

Twins 4, Red Sox 2

Kirby Puckett ended an 0-for-15 slump with a run-scoring double and Shane Rawley scattered eight hits in 7 2-3 innings. Rawley ended a personal four-game losing streak with his first victory since his Minnesota debut April 6.

Athletics 6, Orioles 1

Mike Moore allowed four hits in seven innings and Terry Steinbach extended his hitting streak to 15 games, longest in the majors this season, as Oakland handed Baltimore its fifth straight loss. Craig Worthington spoiled Moore's shutout bid with a home run in the seventh inning, his second of the season.

Steinbach and Walt Weiss had three hits each, with Weiss driving in two of Oakland's four runs in the eighth inning with a single following Stan Javier's two-run double.

Blue Jays 10, Mariners 1

Dave Stieb scattered six hits over eight innings and Tony Fernandez, Fred McGriff and Junior Felix drove in three runs apiece as Toronto snapped a three-game losing streak and ended Seattle's six-game winning streak. Loser Mike Dunne yielded six runs and six hits in 3 1-3 innings while walking six.

Fernandez started the scoring with a single in the first inning and McGriff's RBI grounder made it 2-0 in the third.

Rijo takes charge for Reds

CINCINNATI (AP) — Jose Rijo is pitching more like a Hall of Famer, and it's not just coincidence.

Rijo, an erratic thrower for years in the Oakland organization, has been taking lessons on the art of pitching from his father-in-law, Hall of Famer Juan Marichal. The Cincinnati Reds are enjoying the spectacular results.

Rijo, 3-0, allowed just two hits over seven innings Monday night to help the Reds blank the struggling New York Mets 3-0 on a combined four-hitter. He struck out nine batters — the most by a Cincinnati pitcher this season — and walked three as he sent the Mets to their second consecutive shutout.

The right-hander has won his last three starts after four no-decisions, has lowered his earned run average to 1.43, and improved his career statistics against the Mets to 4-0 in seven starts with a 1.84 earned run average since he came to Cincinnati before the 1988 season.

"He's got nasty stuff," Manager Pete Rose said. "He's got some of the best heat in the league when he wants to reach back. He blew (Howard) Johnson and (Darryl) Strawberry away in that one inning."

Rose attributes the turnaround to Rijo's pitching lessons from Marichal the last two years.

"He (Marichal) is the best pitcher I ever faced," said Rose, baseball's all-time hits leader with 4,256. "He has listened to him. I'd listen to him, too, if he was talking about pitching.

"Marichal didn't throw as hard as Rijo, but he knew how to pitch. He's gotten Rijo turned around mentally."

In the only other National League game, Kevin Gross pitched a five-hitter and Tim Raines hit a two-run homer as the Montreal Expos snapped a four-game losing streak by defeating the Houston Astros 4-1.

The Reds got themselves turned around Monday with a little patience. After wasting eight singles in a 5-0 loss Sunday to Philadelphia, Rose criticized his team for swinging at bad pitches and failing to take walks.

They got another chance Monday against Bob Ojeda, 1-4, who allowed just three hits in seven innings but walked six. His deliberate motion to the plate also allowed the Reds to steal a season-high five bases, one day after Houston's Kevin Bass stole four on the Mets.

Expos 4, Astros 1

Gross pitched Montreal's first complete game of the season as the Expos became the last team in the majors to have a pitcher go the route. Loser Bob Knepper gave up four runs and five hits in 3 2-3 innings.

Montreal took a 2-0 lead in the first on Raines' first home run of the season following Otis Nixon's one-out single.

The Expos made it 4-0 in the fourth after loading the bases on a two-out walk to Wallace Johnson, Spike Owen's double and a walk to Gross. Johnson scored on Knepper's wild pitch and Rex Hudler's infield hit brought Owen home.

TORONTO (AP) — International hockey figure Alan Eagleson doesn't believe relations between the Soviet Union and the NHL will be damaged by Alexander Mogilny's defection.

If the Soviet Union does break off relations, it will be the big loser, Eagleson, the chief international hockey negotiator for Canada and the NHL, warned Monday.

"I assume the Soviets will understand and appreciate that neither (NHL president) John Ziegler nor I had anything to do with it," Eagleson, who also is executive director of the NHL Players' Association, said during an interview in London .

Mogilny, who arrived in Buffalo last Friday after defecting from the Soviet national team at the world championships in Stockholm, has signed a contract with the Buffalo Sabres. Mogilny was considered a future star of the Soviet hockey program.

Eagleson said the Soviets would lose hundreds of thousands of dollars in revenue if they were to cancel the 21 games with NHL teams scheduled for next year.

OT goal helps Flames burn Hawks

CHICAGO (AP) — Coach Terry Crisp of the Calgary Flames is happy, of course. Satisfield? Not yet.

Crisp was doubly pleased with a 2-1 overtime victory against the Chicago Blackhawks on Monday night. First, he was happy the winning goal was scored by defenseman Al MacInnis, whom he is constantly berating to "shoot more often."

Secondly, "It's always better to go back home with a 3-to-1 lead than being tied 2-to-2, but it isn't over yet," Crisp said.

The victory gave the Flames a 3-1 edge in the best-of-7 Stanley Cup semifinal. The Flames can finish off the upstart Blackhawks in Calgary on Wednesday night. If not, a sixth game will be played in Chicago on Friday.

MacInnis scored at 15:05 of overtime with a blistering slap shot from the right point on a power play as a saddened Trent Yawney sat in the penalty box.

Yawney was handed a rare delay-of-game penalty at 13:57. He had lost his stick and when he caught a loose puck in his left glove, he flung the puck 75 feet down ice.

"I don't really remember if I closed my hand," Yawney said. "But he (Referee Andy vanHellemond) called it and that's the bottom line. I had two guys around me and I had to get rid of the puck. What would you do with two guys around you? You can't let them go in and score."

Chicago coach Mike Keenan didn't want to talk about the penalty or the officiating.

"It was a tough loss," Keenan said. "But if you look at it objectively, they deserved to win because they were able to score on the power play and we weren't."

Out-of-state bidders look at MCorp

New York Times News Service

DALLAS — Two prospering regional banking companies, the Banc One Corp. and Barnett Banks Inc., are considering making offers for 20 banks formerly owned by Mcorp that are now controlled by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., a Texas banking consultant said on Monday.

The banking network, with most of its assets concentrated in Dallas and Houston, was renamed the Deposit Insurance Bridge Bank when the 20 insolvent units were seized from Mcorp in March. With $13.1 billion in assets, it is the third-largest banking company in Texas.

Analysts said Banc One, of Columbus, Ohio, and Barnett, based in Jacksonville, Fla., grew in part through acquisitions of nearby financial institutions in the 1980s and might want to ollow the lead into Texas taken last summer by the NCNB Corp., a regional bank similar in size and profitability to Barnett and Banc One. NCNB, based in Charlotte, N.C. reported a $58.1 million profit in the first quarter for the Texas operation, formerly owned by the First Republicbank Corp. NCNB jointly owns the Texas operation, called NCNB Texas, with the FDIC.

Dennis F. Shea, a regional bank analyst with Morgan Stanley & Co., said that the 50 percent rise in the value of NCNB's shares since it entered Texas has "certainly heightened the interest in Texas" among many reginal bankers.

Russell Hoadley, a spokesman for Barnett Banks, declined to say whether Barnett had an interest in bidding for the former Mcorp units, now commonly called Bridge Bank. An assistant to Banc One's chairman, John B. McCoy, said he was unavailable to comment.

In a statement, Bridge Bank confirmed that three prospective bidders "are reviewing" its books and meeting with its executives, but declined to identify the banks.

In addition to Banc One and Barnett, a group headed by Kohlberg, Kravis, Roberts & Co., the New York leveraged-buyout firm, also recently reviewed Bridge Bank's records in Dallas, the Texas bank consultant, who asked not to be identified, said.

Analysts said as many as 15 banking organizations were said to be seeking permission from the FDIC to review Bridge Bank's records. Banks within Texas considering bids for some or all of the 20 banks include NCNB Texas, First City National Bancorp. of Texas, and Texas Commerce Bancshares.

Barnett Banks, with $27.1 billion in assets at the end of March, is the largest banking organization in Florida. It has $1.4 billion in assets in Georgia. It earned 95 cents for every $100 of assets last year.

Banc One, with $25.2 billion in assets, is considered one of the most profitable "super-regional" banks in the nation and is the largest in Ohio and Indiana. It earned $1.45 for every $100 of assets last year and its chairman, McCoy, raised the profitability of several other banks in the Midwest that it acquired.

Shea of Morgan Stanley said Banc One and Barnett were both adept in handling retail customers and small businesses, segments of the Texas banking market that had been courted more by the savings industry than commercial banks before both sectors of Texas financial institutions were crippled by losses since 1986.

The FDIC follows rules that require it to seek the bid that will require the least amount of aid from the bank-insurance fund. Robert Rieke, an analyst with Rauscher Pierce Refsnes, in Dallas, said instate bidders could probably offer bigger savings because of opportunities to pare operating costs.

Larger, out-of-state banks, however, that have been consistently profitable could also make competitive bids, Rieke said. Those banks have had higher earnings than the Texas banks in recent years, giving them much larger potential tax savings that could be gained by using large tax-loss carry-forwards accumulated by the former Mcorp banks.

Analysts estimate that as part of a deal, the FDIC will contribute as much as $2 billion to cover existing losses at the Bridge Bank. The agency has already advanced $300 million to the units.

Southland puts Citgo on block

DALLAS (AP) — Southland Corp. on Monday announced losses of $169.4 million for the first quarter of 1989, and the convenience chain giant also said will seek a purchaser for its 50 percent stake in Citgo Petroleum Corp. and may consider offers for its distribution and processing centers.

Southland President Jer W. Thompson attributed the loss, which included $56 million from a one-time debt exchange offer in January, to the high interest and non-cash charges brought about its 1987 leveraged buyout.

The loss was about $98 million more than the $71.4 million recorded for the first quarter of 1988.

The costly after-effects of the LBO, which Southland officials expect to continue until 1992, obliterated a successful three-month merchandising period, company officials said. Revenues were pegged at $1.90 billion, an increase of 6.1 percent over the $1.79 billion for the same period in 1988.

Thompson said Southland must continue to "aggressively seek ways to reduce the size and cost of our LBO-related debt."

He said alternatives to reduce the company's debt include selling its share in Citgo and seeking a way to generate cash from the distribution and processing centers.

Halliburton revenue takes a nose dive

DALLAS (AP) — Halliburton Company, saying it hopes oilfield markets to strengthen later in the year, reported it had a net income of $13.7 million for the first quarter of 1989, only 43 percent of the $31.8 million reported for the same period last year.

The company posted earnings of 13 cents per share, compared with the 30 centers per share earnings during the first quarter of 1988.

But excluding benefits from accounting changes in 1989 and 1988, the first quarter net income was 12 cents and 22 cents per share, respectively.

Halliburton officials said lower worldwide oil field activity has intensified competition for the oil field services that Halliburton offers.

In the first three months of 1989, there were about 15 percent fewer rotary rigs working worldwide than there had been a year earlier.

"We expect our oil field markets to strengthen in the second half of 1989 as our customers increase spending, particularly for natural gas development in the United States," said Halliburton President Thomas H. Cruikshank.

Futures trader mulls Eastern bid

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Joseph Ritchie, a leading futures trader in Chicago, has asked Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc. to advise him on the possibility of making a bid for Eastern Airlines, the investment firm said Monday.

Michael O'Neil, a spokesman for Shearson, said the firm had been asked to act as a financial adviser to Ritchie, confirming a report Monday in The Wall Street Journal.

Frank C. Carlucci, the former defense secretary, was said to be advising Ritchie, who is chairman of CRT Group, a leading options and futures trading firm.

Separately, the Federal Aviation Administration said in Washington that it had sent inspectors to Eastern Airlines' main base in Miami to see if there were violations of maintenance record-keeping rules like those found in New York last week.

The air carrier announced Thursday that it had temporarily surrendered its repair station certificate at New York's John F. Kennedy Airport after the FAA determined that Eastern had failed to follow its system for recording and inspecting maintenance performed.

The New York suspension was for actions that predated the start of the strike by Eastern's unions on March 4.

IBM debuts new software packet

New YorkY. Times News Service

In its most significant software introduction in years, the International Business Machines Corp. will announce next Tuesday a collection of software programs that will provide the same "look and feel" to users of most of its machines, from personal computers to mainframes.

In trying to draw together many systems that are not now compatible, IBM is acknowledging the growing impact of desktop computers that are linked in networks performing complex tasks.

The software required for those networks is becoming considerably more sophisticated, industry executives say. That trend may give large companies like IBM that have extensive service and support networks an advantage in selling the next generation of desktop computers.

IBM, the major producer of mainframes, also hopes its new software will make its most powerful machines more accessible to a broader market of computer users. The mainframe market has been stagnant in recent years.

By settling on a single method for controlling its large and small computers, IBM is effectively imitating Apple Computer Inc.'s greatest strength. Apple's Macintosh computer has achieved popularity not only because of its ease of use but also because once users have mastered one program they can easily learn others.

IBM's programs will be marketed under the label Officevision Family and will perform common office functions like word processing, data base management, and communications. The new software will be the clearest expression yet of IBM's concept of the way advanced computing environments will function.

Basin facility will hire 160

Smithers Transportation Test Center, an automotive testing center will add 160 new jobs to its Pecos test facility, according to a spokesman.

Len Smallwood, manager of the facility, says that test drivers and support personnel will be added to fulfill a contract to test current model-year passenger cars and mini-vans for durability under certain weather conditions.

"We will be conducting tests on the climate control units for a specified number of hours and miles under extremely warm driving conditions available here in Pecos," said Smallwood.

Work on the contract is expected to get underway June 1 and take nine to twelve months to complete. Smallwood said he hoped this would be the first of a multi-year climate control test program at the facility.

Oil prices recoup Monday loss

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil prices continue their seesaw action, rising sharply after Monday's loss.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, June contracts for West Texas Intermediate gained 31 cents to stand at $19.75 at midmorning.

WTI fell 58 cents to close at $19.44 a barrel Monday, depressed by reports of overproduction by OPEC member nations. The close was the lowest for a near-month contract since April contracts closed at $19.29 on March 14.

Members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries boosted their production last month to 20.9 million barrels a day, the authoritative Petroleum Intelligence Weekly reported Monday.

OPEC's self-imposed quota is 18.5 million barrels a day.

The oil futures market was hit by the overproduction report and by technicians who concluded from price charts that the market was in a downtrend, said Mary Haskins of Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.

Traders who bought contracts in hopes of a price rise sold them, while others sold borrowed contracts in the expectation of a fresh decline, she said.

The selling in the crude market spread to the market for refined products.

The June contract for unleaded gasoline dropped 2.52 cents to 64.98 cents a gallon, a decline of close to 4 percent, even steeper than the less than 3 percent drop in crude oil.

Heavy selling of unleaded gasoline futures had taken hold Friday, when the June contract had fallen 2.12 cents. Ms. Haskins said technical traders led the charge. "The bloom is off the rose for gasoline," she said.

Market take breather, falls 5 points

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices fell in slow uneventful trading Monday, as the market took a breather to await fresh news on the economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 5.49 points to end the day at 2,376.47, its seventh consecutive decline. The blue chip indicator has lost 42.52 points since April 28.

The market opened lower on a carryover from Friday's last-minute selloff and in response to a weaker bond market ahead of this week's three-day Treasury borrowing.

Prices drifted lower during the session as many big participants withdrew to await fresh news on the economy.

U.S. oil firms look east for business opportunities

By ANNE PEARSON
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Opportunities for Western companies to do business in the massive Soviet oil patch are growing, and the Soviets are actively looking west for joint venture partners, according to Soviet officials and U.S. executives who do business there.

For the first time, a delegation of about a dozen officials of the Soviet energy ministry attended the Offshore Technology Conference, which was held here last week. The 21st annual conference attracted 26,450 people.

During a stroll around the trade show floor, V.A. Reznichenko, the Soviet Union's deputy minister for chemical and petroleum machine building, said his country is anxious to form ventures with American companies in many energy sectors — from exploration and production of oil and gas to equipment building and service technology.

The Soviet Union recently formed an engineering partnership with Dresser Industries, the deputy minister said through an interpreter.

That Moscow-based partnership, called Dresser Soviet Engineering Co., will concentrate on engineering and technology used primarily in "downstream" enterprises such as refining and chemical manufacturing, said a Dresser spokesman in Dallas.

Another Soviet official in the delegation said his country signed a letter of understanding with Chevron Corp. in December proposing joint exploration of the Korolevskoye field on the northeast side of the Caspian Sea.

Chevron says it is still studying the venture and has not yet fully committed to a partnership.

GED to vote on United Meridian merger

HOUSTON (SWN) — General Energy Development, Ltd. has called a special meeting of the limited partners for May 26, 1989 to consider the proposed merger of GED and a partnership owned by United Meridian Corp. As previously announced, GED entered into a merger agreement with UMC on February 9, 1989, under which the public unitholders would receive $3.25 in cash for each GED partnership unit. A merger is conditioned upon receiving the favorable vote of a majority of the units voted by public unitholders at the meeting as well as other conditions as set forth in the merger agreement.

Wall Street sees no housing slump

NEW YORK (AP) — Like a good many other American industries, housing and real estate have lately felt the pinch of high interest rates.

But some Wall Street analysts maintain that the homebuilding business is going through nothing much worse than a moderate down cycle that won't have dire or far-reaching consequences for the economy.

In fact, a few observers argue that stocks of homebuilding companies, which generally have turned in an uninspired showing over the past year or two, could soon start to revive if interest rates are ready to come down.

Figures published by the Value Line Investment survey show that housing starts, the historical gauge of the homebuilding industry's health, have been declining steadily from a peak they reached more than three years ago.

In the first quarter of 1986, work was started on new private dwelling units at the rate of 1.94 million a year.

In the second quarter of this year, by contrast, Value Line estimates the total will come in at an annual rate of 1.40 million.

Still, the investment advisory firm says it believes housing starts will bottom out toward the end of this year not far below current levels.

"That would be the culmination of a historically mild decline that has developed gradually from the 1986 peak," says analyst Stephen Grant in Value Line's recently published quarterly appraisal of the industry outlook.

"Most of this decline has occurred in multi-family housing, due to previous overbuilding stimulated by tax laws that have since been changed.

"Single-family housing starts have a good shot at topping the 1 million level in 1989 for an unprecedented seventh consecutive year, after troughing at 660,000 in 1982."

Even if housing is in for a more extended period of weakness than analysts now expect, some observers contend that it need not drag the rest of the economy down with it.

In the past, weakness in housing traditionally ushered in recessions in the overall economy. When tight money sent home buying and home-building into a slump, demand dropped off for building materials, home furnishings, appliances — and a ripple effect occurred.

In the 1980s, however, past patterns haven't held, says Robert Barbera, economist at Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc.

Eastern strike hikes fares

By ERIC WEINER
New York Times News Service

The strike at Eastern Airlines has provided a textbook example of how adept the airline industry has become at using sophisticated computer programs to sell seats at the highest possible price without appearing to have raised prices and risking public ire.

Airline industry analysts say that Eastern's competitors have used a pricing technique known as yield management to reduce the number of discount fares available on routes served by Eastern, thus raising the effective overall price for the seats.

"We're not seeing the bargains that we used to," said Grace Stoever, an agent with New Departures in Travel, in Old Greenwich, Conn.

Phil Davidoff, president-elect of the American Society of Travel Agents, agreed. "Airlines still have discount fares, but there are proportionately fewer seats available," he said.

Since Eastern's machinists, with the support of the pilots, struck the airline on March 4, Eastern has been able to get only a fraction of its scheduled flights off the ground.

Currently, the airline is operating about 110 daily flights, said Robin Matell, an Eastern spokesman. Before the strike, Eastern had 1,040 daily flights.

As a result, demand for seats has increased at Eastern's competitors.

Using computer yield management programs, airlines can alter the number of discount fare seats available many times each day, providing more seats if business is expected to be slow for a particular flight or making them scarce if demand for the seats is strong and travelers are willing to pay higher fares.

"The Eastern strike is an ideal situation for yield management systems to take advantage of the shortage of seats," said Lee Howard, executive vice president of Airline Economics, a Washington consulting firm.

At Delta, reservations agents have been particularly busy since the strike began because Delta has the most to gain from Eastern's difficulties. Delta is the biggest competitor in eight of Eastern's top 12 markets, according to Airline Economics.

In Atlanta, Eastern had controlled 35 percent of the traffic — second only to Delta. In Miami, Eastern had been the dominant carrier, with 45 percent of the market share, Airline Economics said.

Delta filled 8 percent more seats in March than it did in the same month last year, said James Lundy, a Delta spokesman. Its revenue passenger miles were up 18 percent.

"A big chunk of that is because of the Eastern strike," said Edward Starkman, an analyst with Paine Webber Inc.

Airlines that compete less directly with Eastern reported more modest increases in business since the strike.

Piedmont Airlines, a subsidiary of USAir Group Inc., said its load factors — the percentage of filled seats on planes — increased only 1.5 percent in March, compared with a year earlier.

Pan American World Airways' domestic load factors were up 2 percent, although traffic on the carrier's Florida routes "has been significantly higher than the domestic average," a spokeswoman, Elizabeth Manners, said.

And the domestic figures exclude the Pan Am shuttle, which has been attracting a record number of passengers for its flights between Boston, New York and Washington.

Since the Eastern strike, some airlines have deployed additional flights on the routes that Eastern can no longer service. Delta has added about 45 supplemental flights a week. American Airlines is adding 11 daily flights to its Miami operation.

American is also moving aggressively into the Caribbean and Latin America. Since the Eastern strike began, American has sought approval to fly to Venezuela, Colombia, Costa Rica and the Cayman Islands.

"We've accelerated some of our expansion plans because there's a void in the market," said Al Becker, an American spokesman.

Eastern, which is owned by the Texas Air Corp., has vigorously opposed American's international route requests. The airline has called American's incursion "an act of opportunistic duplicity."

"It's no conicidence that American has filed for these Miami applications at a time of extreme adversity for Eastern," said Robert N. Duggan, a lawyer for Eastern, in the airline's petition to the Department of Transportation opposing American's international route requests.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Treasury bills are always higher rate

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I am a retired New York City police officer, living in New Zealand as a U.S. citizen with permanent residency status. I fly the American flag every day. A friend clips your column and sends it to me. I discovered New Zealand during World War II when I was hospitalized here after my ship, the USS Atlanta, was sunk off Guadacanal.

My money is in U.S. Treasury bills, which I renew as they mature. Will this setup always provide higher interest than paid by the average U.S.A. bank?

Doyle

A. "Always" is far too broad a word. A lot depends on what type of bank account you stack up against Treasury bills. Also, interest rates often change.

As a general rule, T bills do pay higher interest than bank savings accounts, interest-paying checking accounts and certificates of deposits with comparable maturities. As I pound this through the word processor, the yield on the most recent issue of 26-week T bills is slightly higher than the yield on six-month CDs, as reported by the Bank Rate Monitor's national index.

T bills, which come with maturities of 13, 26 and 52 weeks are sensible investments for you, even from far-off New Zealand or any other place on this globe.

Finding your retirement haven clearly turned out to be the only worthwhile result of your cruiser going down in "The Slot," where so many ships were sunk it was called "Ironbottom Sound."

Q. I am considering putting money in the American Legion & Auxiliary Money Market Account? Is it a good deal?

A. It's an interest-paying checking account at Indiana National Bank and is similar to the "super-Now" accounts introduced nationwide six years ago.

Each bank and savings and loan association sets its own interest rate formula. The account you're considering pegs interest to the discount rate on 91-day Treasury Bills. On deposits up to $2,500, it's that T bill rate minus one-half of 1 percent. On deposits from $2,500 to $10,000, it is that T bill rate. On deposits over $10,000, it's that T bill rate plus one-quarter of 1 percent. Interest is compounded daily, raising the effective annual yield.

These rates, which are recalculated monthly, are competitive with similar accounts at other banks and S&Ls. That plus check-writing privileges and Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. coverage up to $100,000 makes the American Legion-sponsored account a good deal.

Q. You have written about what you call the "rock-solid" safety of bank and savings and loan association accounts up to the FDIC and Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp. limit of $100,000 per depositor.

Elsewhere, I read that "some" banks and S&Ls insure only the principal — not the interest. All my money is in CDs at banks and S&Ls. I don't want to lose the accumulated interest if those institutions go under.

How can I find out if the interest on my CDs is insured?

A. Just look for the sign "FDIC" or "FSLIC" at the institutions where you have your CDs. Assuming you spot that sign, as you are virtually certain to do, your principal and interest are covered by federal deposit insurance.

Both FDIC and FSLIC rules state that interest accumulated right up to the day a bank or S&L goes bust is insured. If your bank or S&L goes belly up today, all interest accumulated on your account through yesterday is safe.

That item you read elsewhere, stating that "some" banks and S&Ls insure only the principal of depositors accounts just doesn't hold water. Individual institutions do not determine their own insurance rules. FDIC sets blanket rules for banks; FSLIC does the same thing for thrifts.

Former Midlander trains marine mammals at Sea World

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Former Midlander Mark McHugh has an unusual occupation, for someone who when growing up, "had to drive 30 miles to find a stock tank to swim in," as he put it. McHugh is supervisor of animal training for Sea World of Texas in San Antonio.

McHugh was back in his hometown this week, talking about the San Antonio park's newest star, Baby Shamu, the baby killer whale born at the park Nov. 26, 1988. She is the fourth killer whale born in captivity at a Sea World park. The first was born Sept. 26, 1985, in Orlando, Fla., McHugh said.

The almost 6-months-old killer whale is not old enough to begin her formal training, McHugh said, but she is "out there every show with her mother. She looks at the audience through the glass ... Actually, her mother is doing the training now. She (Baby Shamu) has learned how to squirt water, wave her tail — she learns by mimicing adults. That's the way little whales and dolphins learn over the first year to year and a half."

KILLER WHALES grow until they are about 20 to 25 years old, McHugh said. Namu, Baby Shamu's mother, is still growing. "She's about 17 feel long, 6,000 pounds. She's about 14 (years old). When she's full grown, her length might be 21 to 23 feet, and she might weigh 10,000 pounds." Full-grown male killer whales can weigh as much as 18,000 pounds, he added.

Currently, Baby Shamu has more than tripled her 300-pound birth weight to 950 pounds, and is more than 9 feet long.

Since the first killer whale born in captivity is only 3½ years old, experts are still concerned about the animals' survival rate. "We had three born last year in Sea World parks," McHugh said. "In other marine life parks, they had a difficult time with nursing behavior. I fully believe parental care is learned behavior, and sometimes animals in zoological environments have not fully developed their parenting skills. All female animals at Sea World are trained in mammary presentation — we bump on the mother's body, and she is trained to roll and present her mammaries to that object (that is bumping her)." In this way, the mothers will roll when their babies bump them, allowing the babies to nurse.

"We have been very successful," he said. "Our mothers have not failed to allow their babies to nurse. We do it (the training) with dolphins and ... small whales."

ALTHOUGH THE killer whales are the most famous attraction at Sea World, they are by no means the only one. McHugh said the park also is the home of many other marine animals, including about 35 performing ones. "We have four killer whales, four bottlenose dolphins, a pair of Pacific black whales, two Pacific white-sided dolphins, six Beluga whales — they are white and soft ... the cutest little animals I've ever met — 12 to 14 sea lions, three otters and three walruses."

For the survival of these ocean-dwelling creatures, the park maintains tanks of chilled, man-made salt water.

But McHugh's heart belongs to the killer whales, "simply because of their size, their intelligence. They learn quicker than other marine mammals and their memory retention is better."

McHugh performs in the shows along with the whales he has trained. Some of the stunts they do are quite mind-boggling, especially one in which the whale scoops the man out of the water on its nose. "It's a very humbling experience," McHugh said. "I have a tremendous amount of respect for these animals. When you are 20 feet underwater and have a 16,000-pound animal coming at you, it is a little scary. But I trust the animals." Man and animal have learned to adjust their body positions to accommodate each other, he added.

"It's really fascinating to see how a man and an animal can work so smoothly together."

However, Sea World is not just devoted to fun. When the Valdez, Alaska, oil spill happened a few weeks ago, the staff at Sea World was called in "to help de-oil the population of sea otters," McHugh said. "Sea World researchers came up with a technique to remove oil from sea otters in 1985." He added that the technique might be useful in removing oil from other fur-bearing mammals, also.

OTHER RESEARCH projects at Sea World include an underwater tone system.

"We have a computer system that transmits high frequency sounds into the water. We teach the animals to respond with specific behaviors to certain sounds that are put into the water. An underwater microphone leads back into the computer, that listens to vocalizations killer whales make and records them," McHugh said. "Killer whales have been found to produce over 30 different sounds. Sea World researchers compared the sounds and found that each whale makes its own type of sound; it's called signature vocalization. We can identify whales by sound."

The park system has a "strong breeding program with the non-endangered species that we have," McHugh said, adding that none of the exhibits at the parks are from endangered species. "The California seal lion is a self-sustaining population, we've had over 40 bottlenosed dolphins born over the years, (as well as) 140 seals and sea lions. We are very proud of our breeding program. It's a sign that the animals are comfortable with their environment."

McHugh graduated from Lee High School in 1978, and earned a bachelor of science degree in biology from Southwest Texas State University. He said he began scuba diving when he was in college, and turned his natural love of animals — specifically mammals — to the study of marine mammals. This month, he will receive his master's degree in biological science from the University of Texas, and is considering the possibility of earning his doctorate.

The days of driving 30 miles to find a place to swim are far behind him.

Designer, store enter agreement

Ne York Times News Service

Alan Flusser and Bergdorf Goodman have entered into an agreement to open a Flusser shop in the new Bergdorf's men's store in New York, currently being renovated across the street from the mother store at Fifth Avenue and 58th Street.

Ira Neimark, Bergdorf's chairman, said the designer would have a separate shop on the second floor. Flusser will produce a special line for the store, including suits, sport jackets, trousers, dress shirts, ties, socks and suspenders.

Meanwhile, if you're wondering what, if anything, is selling strongly in the apparel area, Flusser recently said that his custom suits in the English tradition, which are sold out of a 16th-floor retail showroom at 16 East 52d Street, brought in more than $100,000 for that week.

The Flusser shop rang up sales of more than $329,572 for March.

Fragrances of 1980s introduced in record numbers

New York Times News Service

Have you lost track of the new fragrances introduced in the '80s? Given the barrage of scents that have been foisted on consumers, it is no wonder.

Forty fragrances were launched for women in 1988 and 20 for men in the same year, according to statistics from the Fragrance Foundation published recently in Women's Wear Daily.

DEAR ABBY

Rock fans' frenzy literally takes breath away from spectators

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: "Help!" "God, I can't breathe!" "Get them to stop pushing!" "This is insane!" were the cries heard in Sheffield, England, on Saturday, April 15, when 93 people were killed and more than 200 injured by an unruly mob at a soccer game. These were also the cries heard by me at a rock concert at the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium that same day when hundreds of unruly fans rushed the stage. One story made headlines, but the other easily could have.

The auditorium was overflowing with what must have been a double-capacity crowd. Some fans were seated comfortably at the rear of the hall, but hundreds were pressed forward against the stage by throngs of enthusiastic fans in the back, hell-bent on getting closer to the performers. Speaking as an unfortunate member of that audience, I can tell you that it was an unnerving ordeal. Bodies were pressed so tightly together that breathing was difficult and it was stiflingly hot. Crazed kids (either stoned or high) began pushing others around them, thus sparking off a potentially lethal chain reaction — not unlike the one in Sheffield. Only when you have been caught in such a churning riptide of humanity can you understand it.

Appeals to security personnel at the auditorium to do something about the situation produced no results; neither did a call to the fire department. There should have been far fewer tickets sold, and far more security people present to control the crowd. It is true that no one died in Santa Monica that night. The floodgates may have held this time, but they may not always. And while the concert promoters in Santa Monica count their dollars, in Sheffield they count their dead. — TYLER FOSHE, SHERMAN OAKS, CALIF.

DEAR TYLER: Thanks for your letter. It answered the questions that occurred to many: How could this bizarre tragedy have occurred? And what can we do to prevent it from happening again?

DEAR ABBY: I'm a different drummer, marching to the same beat as "Losing Patience," who resented questions from strangers wanting to know why her infant daughter was wearing eyeglasses. Strangers noticed my baby, too. But I felt blessed.

My son was born with club feet. We were living in Brazil, but were told that a doctor in New York was "the best" in this field, so I took my baby to New York. For nine months we rode the commuter train from Chappaqua to New York City twice a week for treatments.

I had heard how "cold" New Yorkers were, but no one had better say that around me. Abby, in the nine months I was there, not once did I have to open a door when I had my baby in my arms. Total strangers gave up their cabs for me during the rush hour; businessmen I had never seen before juggled their briefcases to carry my baby up a flight of stairs. Those small favors and words of encouragement to a stranger alone gave me beautiful memories of a trying time.

To all who patted his curly blond hair: He's 31 now, and a remarkable athlete. So, to all you warmhearted New Yorkers, thanks for caring! — JANE WALLER, CONROE, TEXAS

DEAR JANE: Thanks for sharing your positive experience in New York City. If you can make it there, you can make it anywhere. Congratulations.

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Losing Patience": When my son was 2 1/2 years old, he had to wear a patch over one eye temporarily to strengthen the other eye. One day while pushing him in a cart through a grocery store, a man with a bushy moustache stopped us and asked, "What's wrong with that boy's eye?" I explained, and we went our separate ways.

When we were out of earshot of the man, my son asked, "Mama, what's wrong with that man's mouth?" (He had never seen a moustache before.) — BEEN THERE

DEAR ABBY: I have been a faithful reader of your column for many years and I trust your judgment. I am a 38-year-old single parent of an 11-year-old daughter. I am presently planning to be married in the not-too-distant future. I am not planning to have a large wedding, but I do want to be married in a church with my family and close friends present.

My mother has stated that because I am a single parent, I cannot, in the eyes of God, walk down the aisle of a church.

I will not wear a white wedding gown — I've selected an ivory-colored gown with a matching shoulder-length veil.

My mother is presently giving me a very hard time about my "right" to walk down the aisle. Please print your answer. — CONFUSED AT 38

DEAR CONFUSED: Never have I heard (or read) that a single parent may not walk down the aisle of a church to be married. Your clergyperson is better qualified than your mother to tell you what is (and what is not) appropriate "in the eyes of God." Consult the clergyperson of the church in which you plan to be married.

Sun Horticultural: Expert service to improve your landscaping

Now is the time to deep root feed your shrubs and trees with expert, professional help from Sun Horticultural Services. Sun offers a wide array of services for landscapes and their care from landscape design and installation to turn key maintenance programs, and everything in between.

Native Midlander Joe P. McEwen brings his skills as a degreed horticulturist from Texas Tech University to his business, which he opened in 1986.

He and his wife, Nickey, have one child, Rebecca, and are expecting another child immediately.

With ten years in the horticultural services industry, McEwen is a specialist in ornamental horticulture. He and his staff of seven professionals know what it takes to produce a healthy, green landscape.

Perhaps the biggest reason for McEwen's success in the industry is his Texas Tech B.S. degree, combined with his experience. "I knew I wanted to develop my horticultural career in West Texas, primarily Midland," he said, "so I chose to learn about West Texas plants in West Texas."

"West Texas is one of the most difficult areas in the world to grow landscape plants," added McEwen. "With high alkaline soils and poor water quality, coupled with harsh weather, it is a challenge to keep our landscapes healthy and growing. However, when this is home, the difficulties seem minimal. It's easier to work in a place you call home."

Sun Horticultural Services tree and shrub care services include:

- Tree pruning
- Cabling and bracing
- Lightning protection installation
- Shrub trimming
- Insect control
- Deep root fertilization

Lawn care services include:

- Scheduled mowing

Linden Boch is operations manager for residential services. He has been in the industry for 10 years. He can diagnose problems and look at a job to see what needs to be done.

Harold Stephens is an expert arborist, whose specialty is pruning trees, especially large ones. He has nine years experience in tree work, and is the only arborist in town that uses a security rope and saddle when in tall trees. No tree is to big for Stephens.

"We do anything that can be done," said McEwen, so please give Sun Horticultural a call at 699-5908. Your landscape will appreciate it!

Quatro Paint offers quality paint, advice

Stop by Quatro Paint Products today and let Kenny Thayer and his staff help you select paint products to enhance your home interior and exterior. Quatro Products, your Pittsburgh Paints dealer, is located at 2507 W. Illinois. Now is the time to begin your painting before the weather turns too hot.

Thayer, manager of Quatro Paint Products, can offer you tips and guidance for painting around the house. He will be happy to help you select what you need and give you advice.

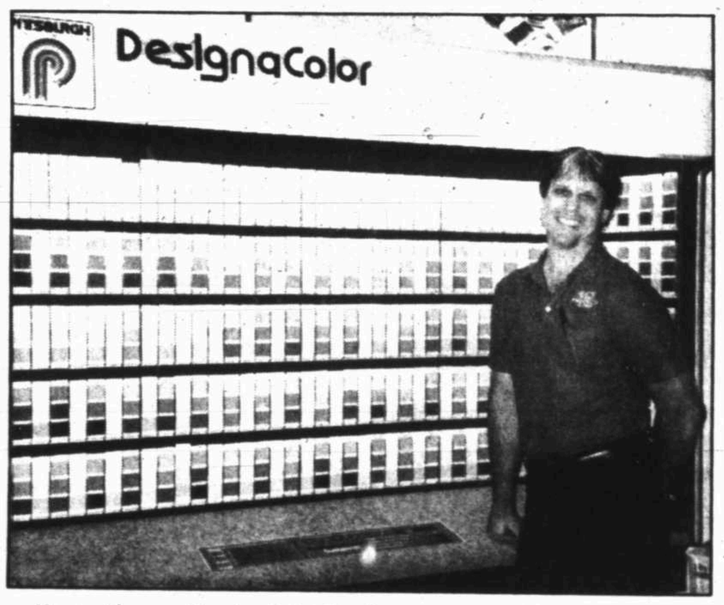

Paint is an exciting interior design material that creates sweeping but affordable visual change. And it can be easy and satisfying to use when the painting job is properly done and when a homeowner uses colors and paints that make a noticeable decorative difference.

Pittsburgh Paints make a difference in tow important ways. First, they go on better. Pittsburgh Paints flow smoothly and uniformly onto virtually all surfaces. They cover exceptionally well-even most bright colors cover in a single coat.

Second, Pittsburgh Paints stay on better. They are durable, retaining a "Just painted" look for a long time–even after repeated washings.

The DesignaColor® System custom palette from Pittsburgh Paints is extraordinary in its versatility and the easy coordination it allows with other home furnishings. Its 1200 different colors range from rich, historic colors that capture the look and feel of America's design past to fashion colors that are as sophisticated as today's styles, and from neutrals in shades of white, beige and tan to bright, elegant accent hues that enliven muted tones.

When you're choosing your colors, select as many color stripe cards as you need to find the tint, tone or shade that's just right for your living scheme. Or take home one of the jumbo-sized color cards from your Pittsburgh Paints Distributor. These provide a selection of ready-mixed and custom colors in historic, interior fashion and design and enamel colors.

Kenny Thayer, Quatro Paint Products store manager, is pictured in front of the Pittsburgh Paints DesignaColor® custom pain matching palette. Quatro Paint Products is located at 2507 W. Illinois.

When you've chosen your colors, you need the right type of paint for the specific job at hand.

A quality latex paint like Wallhide® Latex Flat by Pittsburgh Paints is easy to apply, dries quickly and can be cleaned up with soap and water. Once dry, latex paint is scrubbable, durable and odorless.

Alkyd paints provide excellent adhesion and color retention. Alkyds are more suitable than latex for bathroom, kitchen and hallway walls, and for any other areas where moisture or marring might be a problem. They are recommended for problem walls in older homes and apartments where calcimine traces may still be present.

Enamels come in both latex and alkyd-oil forms. They dry to a harder, smoother finish than flat paints. Enamels resist fingerprints and other marring and are recommended for kitchen walls, doors, hallways and hard use areas that require frequent washing.

Sheens are flat, eggshell, semi-gloss or Lo-lustre and high gloss.

Flat sheens are recommended for livingroom, dining room, bedroom or den. They provide the highest degree of surface uniformity, giving walls a rich, smooth look.

Semi-gloss or Lo-lustre sheens are ideal for kitchens, bathrooms and high-traffic areas. They add a decorator look to doors, windows and trim.

High gloss finishes provide maximum durability. The "wet look" achieved by a high gloss wall paint, however, tends to magnify wall imperfections.

When you are ready to paint, don't hesitate to contact the Pittsburgh Paints professionals at Quatro Products, 2507 W. Illinois. Store hours are 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and 7 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Saturdays. Call 687-3326 for more information.

Sierra Spring Water meets all home, business needs

Bottled water food products are a way of life here in the Permian Basin. Just as you are proud of the quality of life you enjoy here, the new Sierra Spring Water Company is proud of its ability to serve all your home and business needs. Located at 605 S. Marienfeld St. in Midland, Sierra is very pleased to announce that 1989 promises to be its best year ever.

Why? Because Sierra is under new management, and that management is committed to providing the best service, products and customer relations available anywhere in West Texas.

So who is the new Sierra, really? Well, you may know them by any one of their older names: Airis, Ampure or Sierra Water Company. But, regardless of which name comes to mind, the new Sierra Spring Water Company, based in Houston, is truly different.

"How different are we, really?" asked Jim Lucas, general manager for West Texas. "To be perfectly honest, just about everything we are doing today is different from the old company."

"We've successfully introduced a completely new bottled drinking water in West Texas; we've refurbished our offices and upgraded our bottling facility in accordance with the very strict National Sanitation Foundation standards; we've brought back radio dispatched delivery trucks into this area so that we can give our customers the absolute fastest response time to meet their needs; and we are doing something that this market hasn't seen in years: we are growing our business."

Apparently, the new management team is succeeding. As Lucas explained, the Midland office has seen a dramatic increase in the number of new customers it is serving. "Our customers understand and appreciate the quality of service we provide. We value every single customer."

But the new management apparently has a few very important obstacles to overcome. "In recent years, the old Airis/Ampure/Sierra companies seemed to have lost contact with the consumer. And I'm not at all bashful about saying that the customers suffered because delivery service, billing, and customer relations all failed to meet their needs," continued Lucas. "But I have two top notch supervisors, Charles Mason and Pat Groom, who have really worked wonders in getting all our route sales organization up to the company's tough standards."

In order to better serve those needs the company has made some major changes. Customer relations and billing calls are now being handled at the local office. "We've introduced another truly revolutionary idea to the Midland/Odessa area, and that's computerized billing tickets.

Every customer has or will soon receive a computer generated bill with each delivery. This gives them all the important information right in their hand. "And if they need to call about a question on their bill, they have the same information that our customer service people do," said Lucas. "Nelda Cline, our billing supervisor, knows this system like nobody else, and she can usually resolve the problem right then. Nobody else can serve the customer like that, and our customers are really going to win because of it."

Lucas believes that the new Sierra corporate strategy is really very simple: be the best. He explained, "Because you, the customer, demand the best, we would really miss the boat if we just went about our business in the old way. Now, I know that the other water producers will have a tough time beating us, but even if they try, all of our consumers will benefit. Sierra's going to set all the quality standards, and they have to follow our lead."

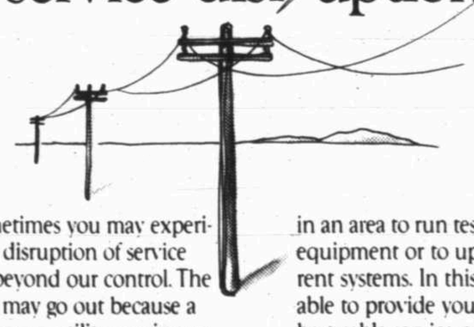

Sierra has invested thousands of dollars into the local economy as a part of its corporate improvements. DIMENSION CABLE INFORMATION SERIES

Dimension Cable clears up the picture on service disruptions.

Sometimes you may experience a disruption of service that's beyond our control. The power may go out because a road crew, a utility repairman or a landscaper has cut a line. A power amplifier may fail. Or a storm may literally knock us out of commission.

When these uncontrollable disruptions do occur, our professional crew works to restore service as quickly as possible.

We're also always working to improve your service. This may mean that sometimes we'll interrupt service in an area to run tests, to replace equipment or to upgrade current systems. In this way, we're able to provide you with the best cable service possible. And to limit your inconvenience, we'll conduct these activities at a time when you'll be least affected.

Whenever you experience an outage, call our service department, and report the problem. A Customer Service Representative will be happy to assist you. And remember, home service calls are always free.

STATE in brief

Backers say official English would provide harmony

AUSTIN (AP) — Supporters of "official English" legislation told state lawmakers that making English the official language in Texas would promote harmony, not division.

"We emphasize that English is not somehow morally superior to any other language. Rather, it is simply the most widely spoken language of Texas and seems a matter of common sense to make English official," said P. George Tryfiates, director of governmental affairs for the Virginia-based group English First.

Tryfiates also said Monday that designating English as the official language "gives a level playing field for all — not just some — non-English speaking immigrants."

'Unclaimed Fortunes' to air

AUSTIN (AP) — Texans owed millions of dollars in lost or forgotten property will be featured on "Unclaimed Fortunes," an ABC television show, state Treasurer Ann Richards' office announced.

The one-hour program, billed as a cross between "Unsolved Mysteries" and "Ripley's Believe It Or Not," will air at 7 p.m. CDT on Thursday.

The television show will inform viewers on how to prevent their possessions from becoming unclaimed property, and how they can reclaim abandoned property.

Texas' unclaimed property program will be one of those featured during the show, the treasurer's office said. Last year, about $22 million was returned under Texas' unclaimed property program.

The state treasury also announced it will hold an auction Sunday at the Austin Opera House of more than 30,000 items from unclaimed safe deposit boxes.

The last auction in 1987 added more than $200,000 in non-tax revenue to the state's coffers, the treasury office said.

Ticket scalping bill OK'd

AUSTIN (AP) — Selling tickets for certain events at more than face value would be outlawed under a bill in a House committee, which also left pending a measure to license those who make such sales.

The bill making ticket scalping to public entertainment or amusement events a crime — punishable by up to 180 days in jail and a $1,000 fine — has been approved by the Senate.

Rep. Betty Denton, D-Waco, proposed a substitute to the House State Affairs Committee that would provide for state licensing.

With licensing, said Ms. Denton, "If there are abuses along the way, we could clear those up."

Bentsen argues for continuing weather reconnaissance flights

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon's plans to abandon weather reconnaissance flights during hurricane season could deprive coastal areas of vital hurricane warnings, warns Sen. Lloyd Bentsen.

Bentsen says intentions to halt the Air Force flights by Oct. 1, when the new fiscal year begins, "would leave our coastal areas dangerously exposed and without the last-minute warning needed to protect lives and property."

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney contends the flights, which help forecasters predict the intensity and position of an approaching hurricane, are not an Air Force mission.

As a budget-cutting move expected to save $14 million, Cheney wants to deactivate the weather reconnaissance units at Keesler Air Force Base in Mississippi. Bentsen, a Texas Democrat, contends the total annual cost is closer to $25 million.

Bentsen on Monday asked Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, chairman of the Senate defense appropriations subcommittee, to continue funding the Air Force flights to approaching hurricanes.

The chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, Bentsen contends the cost is a mere fraction of the destruction that could occur if forecasters can't provide coastal residents with "last-minute" warnings based on information from the reconnaissance flights.

In the House, Rep. Tom Lewis, R-Fla., is sponsoring a resolution calling on the Air Force to maintain the reconnaissance planes.

Sen. Phil Gramm, a Texas Republican and member of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said he is "skeptical that weather satellites will be able to adequately compensate for manned reconnaissance flights" as the Air Force has proposed.

"Since Texas is a big beneficiary during hurricane season of our weather reconnaissance program, the heavy burden of proof is on anybody who tells me we don't have to continue the reconnaissance program," Gramm said.

In testimony before a House committee last week, National Hurricane Center Director Robert C. Sheets said the aircraft "are the only means of making direct measurements of location, strength and windfield distributions critical to the hurricane forecast and warning process."

An active duty and a reserve unit at Keesler have a combined fleet of 12 weather reconnaissance aircraft used for monitoring hurricanes in the Gulf and Atlantic oceans, as well as typhoons in the Pacific, a Bentsen aide said. It is the only such operation in the U.S. military.
