

INSULL WILL GIVE WANTED TESTIMONY

UTILITY MAN AVAILS SELF OF OPPORTUNITY TO AVOID CONTEMPT CHARGES

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21—Only one of the four recalcitrant witnesses in the Illinois and Pennsylvania primary investigations availed himself today of the opportunity given by the senate committee to escape prosecution for contempt.

Samuel Insull, multi-millionaire public utilities operator of Chicago, who testified to local contributions of $287,925 to about all the factions in the Illinois contest, and his personal counsel, Daniel J. Schuyler, will have another chance next Saturday to avoid proceedings because of a refusal to answer questions.

Thomas W. Cunningham, of Philadelphia, treasurer of the Pennsylvania republican state committee, placed himself beyond the committee pale and either will be sentenced by the senate or prosecuted under an indictment in the District of Columbia courts.

Insull and Schuyler went much further than they did upon their first appearance at Chicago, disclosing an additional $15,000 gift from Insull to the Cook county "jackpot" as Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri, the committee chairman had described it.

Refuse Names
However, they persistently refused to disclose the names of the four men to whom two cash payments of $25,000 each were made. Insull explaining that if he did so he would violate a confidence which his conscience would not permit him to do.

The utilities operator left tonight for Chicago to obtain for the committee a check for $150,000 and other memoranda and he was advised by Chairman Reed that while away he should make every effort to have the four men to whom he gave the $100,000 release him from his pledge of secrecy.

Cunningham who appeared with his attorney, Representative Golder, republican, Pennsylvania, stood alongside ground against the committee, refusing point blank to answer any questions as to the source of the $25,000 which he contributed to the primary campaign.

Insull's refusal to answer questions during a recess between his two sessions the committee through Senator Reed asked the senate to continue its life through the coming recess of congress and also to authorize it to open the ballot boxes brought here from Philadelphia and Pittsburgh as a result of the request for votes' seat brought by his opponent, William B. Wilson, democrat, 1924, regulation giving this grant of power went over under the rules of objection by Senator Reed, republican, Pennsylvania.

BURY HOFFMAN AT SLATON THURSDAY

SLATON BANKER FOUND DEAD IN HIS OFFICE MONDAY MORNING

SLATON, Feb. 21—Funeral services for C. C. Hoffman, 59, pioneer Slaton banker and capitalist, who took his own life this morning, will not be held until 3 o'clock Thursday at the First Methodist church, pending the arrival of a son, Howard, from Austin and a brother from Salt Lake City, Utah, members of the family will tonight, Rev. W. M. Jann, pastor in charge, will conduct the services, burial to follow in the Slaton cemetery.

Mr. Hoffman in a note to his family gave his reason for his suicide as his health, he had been sick for the past several months. A bullet from a 45 caliber revolver entered the center of his forehead and he was found dead in his office in the rear of the Slaton State bank.

He is survived by his widow, who is in very poor health, two sons, C. C. Jr. of Slaton; Howard, a student in the University of Texas at Austin; and a daughter, Mrs. Richard L. Douglas of Lubbock, and a brother who lives in Salt Lake City.

Was Prominent
Mr. Hoffman has been prominent in business and civic affairs of Slaton since 1911, coming here from Coffeyville, Kansas, when the Santa Fe railroad built through the section. He has been a large stockholder in the Slaton State bank up to several years ago and has served the institution as vice-president and director. He has had no connections with the bank since last year, having sold his stock, but maintained a private business in the building. His business interests are all in sound condition.

Provides for Family
In his note to the family, he pointed out that adequate financial provisions had been made for such.

The point shot was heard by W. R. Oatis, vice-president of the bank, shortly after 9 o'clock this morning. Mr. Hoffman was dead before Dr. W. E. Payne, summoned from his office on the second floor of the building, could aid him. J. J. Ross, justice of the peace and coroner, was called and pronounced a verdict after a short inquest.

Hoffman has many many friends both in Slaton and Lubbock, and over this section following his long and successful business career. He visited in Lubbock Sunday with members of his family.

Threatened to destroy the entire building, the firemen being forced to fight in the face of molten lead solder from the metal ceiling.

Pat Hood, member of the department received a severe cut on the hand when a skylight fell in and others of the department suffered burns from the lead dripping on their heads and backs. The damage of the fire was estimated yesterday at approximately $1,000.

The department made another call to the building early yesterday morning and extinguished smoldering cotton.

Your Teeth Missing? False Molars Found

The age-old question of "any ice today, lady?" was turned into "any teeth today, lady?" late Monday when an Avalanche reporter, in search for news, literally stumbled over a set of false molars on the corner of Broadway and Texas Avenue. The "chawmpers" were of the "upper" variety.

As all good newshounds should the reporter immediately brought his find to the Avalanche-Journal office where they will be held for thirty days, pending the arrival of their owner.

After the thirty day interim, however, they will be sold for cash or else revamped to fit the editor should he need them after any alteration with an enraged reader.

Motley Road Bonds for $250,000 Pass

A bond election calling for $250,000 of highway improvement, was passed by the citizens of Motley county Saturday, information from the office of Geo. A. Field, division engineer of the state highway department revealed yesterday. Motley is one of the nine counties affected by the far-reaching improvement program, recently launched on the Lee highway from Vernon to Farwell. An election for $200,000 was defeated in Motley county several weeks ago, but renewed efforts succeeded in passing it Saturday.

Hale and Floyd counties, included in the program, both of whom voted recently in defeat of the election, are planning for new elections. Cottle county, also in the improvement program, voted a $500,000 issue.

BUFFALO BASKETEERS BANISH TECH, 40-18

MATADORS PUT UP STUBBORN BATTLE BUT VETERAN TEACHERS ARE NOT TO BE DENIED, ANOTHER GAME TONIGHT

Captain Sam Burton's highly heralded Buffalo basketball team from the West Texas State Teachers college in Canyon, Tex., gave the largest crowd of Tech history an exhibition of basketball deluge here last night on the assembly hall court and when the dust of battle settled with the bang of the basketball, the pieces of the victory were in their possession.

Sideline Chatter

Again the Buffaloes from up the Falls River romped through a victory to trample the Scarlet and Black with their mighty stampede, downing the Matadors with a score of 40 to 18. Hand it to the Burton system; they have it more stuff than any other outfit that has graced the Tech assembly floor this season—chances are for seasons to come.

The Matadors jumped into the lead and registered on four points before the Buffs got hot; then the Teachers sunk five loopers before the Tech engers were able to chalk up additional counters.

Speaking of form, the West Texas Teachers have it—high arching floor work, passing, dribbling—matter of fact the Buffs, although highly touted, have everything in the line of basketball in stock. Another thing, they are not bashful in displaying their wares.

As the Matadors entered the court last evening it was found that the "Big Bertha" was missing Leslie "Al" Jennings. Al was in and was on the bench but not dressed out in uniform.

Alex Hale, leader of the Buff herd and a former Canyon high school Eagle, is sure to land a berth on all-T. A. A. pick; if he doesn't the man that is placed before the Tech-teaching is certainly a whiz. Hale not only leads his club in the offense but has a habit of sinking the sphere through the iron hoop frequently. He is an all-around player on the floor, passes well, has excellent floor work, and is "Dead-eye Dick" on his looper attempts.

Stringer, husky Buff guard, came all the way from Grand Saline to the farthest state institution to show the world that he had a chance at fame in the indoor sports. Stringer's play suits him well on the floor and he strung up almost enough counters to even the count with the Matador's total score. The big lad tallied six points during the contest, seven field counters and two free chances.

Percy "Hardhome" Ransome, Walker and Dennis Vincent, captain of the Tech basketball team, were the only Tech players that showed any competition for the Buffaloes. Walker's defensive work was the Matador flash and Captain Vincent's ability to carry on the offense drive made the two warriors of the Scarlet and Black stand out among the stellar performers of the evening.

"Preacher" Fuller, lengthy pivot man for the Buffaloes, was the only player on the floor to be ruled from the floor for excessive personal fouls. Fuller's ambition to possess the ball led the husky Buff to foul.

George "Duck" Weaver, center for the Buffaloes, was the only substitution made by Coach Grady Higginbotham during the game. Weaver replaced Kenneth "Andy" Hemphill a few moments prior to the final blast from "Dad" Nole's pistol.

Pearson, wirey Buffalo guard, was a bear on defense. Pearson covered his man and fought frantically in the smoothest and cleanest manner. He repeatedly checked probable counters attempted by the flaming joried quintet.

They were a small group but loud in appearance, the Buffalo top squad. These enthusiastic presences of the Teachers College were seated in the heart of the Matador fans and spurred their favorite cagers on to victory.

The Matador basket ball season closed this evening with the last game of the two games card with the Buffs. A record smashing attendance is expected to flock to the Matador assembly hall to witness the clash of a Buffalo and a Buff-fighter.

One of the greatest faults of the Matador's playing last evening was the way it was in their handling of the ball. Frequently the Scarlet joried would lose the ball by fumbling, which meant a score for the visiting aggregation. Another thing, too many crisp shots were missed. All of these things count in basket ball.

Referee L. J. Von Tungen, West-Texas coach, ruled the court in a most commendable manner. The former Boomer performer paced the court with both teams and had his eye fixed on every play—but very seldom did the floor arbitrator make foul playing. Coach Samuel D. Burton stated that the work of Referee Von Tungen was as good as he has had for the season.

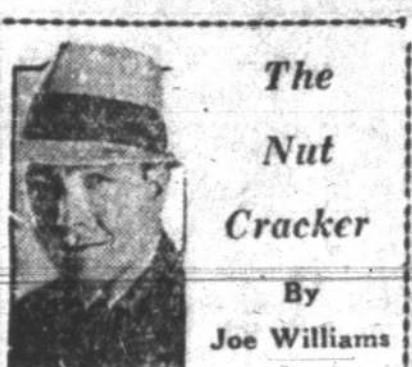

Some place, some faces, this evening—the closing card.

Sherwood Wins Cage Title at San Angelo

SAN ANGELO, Texas, Feb. 21 (AP)—Sherwood, Iron county, defeated Drasco, Runnels county, here Saturday in the finals for the basketball championship of district 18 of the amateur intercollegiate league. The score was 22 to 7. Sherwood and Carlton, Hamilton county, district 13 winner, play next Saturday in a bi-district meet, probably at Brownwood.

Drasco was required to competition Friday by the disqualification of San Angelo and four games in two days proved too strenuous for its players. Drasco late Friday defeated Lakewood Green county, eliminated Bronte this morning, and after Sherwood had beaten Sterling City, Drasco won over Sonora. The four teams in the district competition represented fifteen counties.

Not until 1922, after trying for 25 years, did Brady succeed in winning a major championship. He annexed the Western open that year, since then he has won the Metropolitan open, but those two accomplishments are his only outstanding wins.

Despite his bad luck, Brady is conceded to be one of the greatest stylists in the game, a golfer with every shot in his kit, the master of every club.

Fifteen years back things began to break badly for Brady. That season he made his first real bid for his honors. In the National open, staged at Wheat-

Texas Conference Cage Games Start

ABILENE, Feb. 21 (AP)—St. Edwards university, Howard-Payne college, and Austin college grabbed the inside track of the Texas conference basketball race here today, crowding out for the time being at least, Trinity university, Simmons university and Southwestern university.

With four days to go, however, the race is young, and today's results of the round robin tournament being held on the floor of the Simmons gymnasium lacked much of seeing the championship up for any of the three winners, nor yet of eliminating any of the losers, though Trinity university has only a slim chance of going far in the campaign.

Results of games played this afternoon and night: Howard-Payne 28; Trinity 14. Austin-Willow 24; Southwestern 14. St. Edwards 27; Simmons 21.

The schedule for Tuesday: St. Edwards vs. Southwestern. Trinity vs. Austin. Howard-Payne vs. Simmons.

Hull Whips Latzo in Bout at Dallas

DALLAS, Feb. 21 (AP)—Clyde Hull, Dallas wrestler, won a newspaper decision over Paul Latzo, world's champion in the welter division in a 16 round go here tonight. Hull had the champion on the ropes with a series of right uppercuts in the ninth, and but for interferences of the referee likely would have downed him for the count.

The only knock down came in the seventh, when Hull caught Latzo off balance and launched one to the jaw, but the champion was up before the referee could start counting.

The decision was highly popular with the crowd of 2,000.

ARE YOU GOING TO LET THE "BIG GUNS" GET THIS?

One thing the little investor or speculator should keep in mind about the Yellowhouse No. 1 oil test near PEP and that is: if it was ABSOLUTELY a cinch that oil would be struck in paying quantities—the little man wouldn't have a CHANCE IN THE WORLD to buy leases near it! The ONLY reason YOU can buy leases now at a very reasonable figure is because of the element of chance involved. Mr. Little Man, read that over!

Why are the "Big Guns" Turning their Attention to this Test?

Isn't it logical to believe the more interest shown by the MOST successful oil operators in a well is indicative of the lessening of that element of chance? Doesn't it indicate their belief in the well's success?

Making Known the Mysteries!

Drilling now at a depth of over 3,600 feet in hard lime, the bit biting farther down—down into the mysterious unknown bowels of the earth—doubt will soon be removed by this pioneer South Plains' test—the Yellowhouse No. 1, near PEP.

No one can tell for sure—for no one has ever done so—just what minute the drill bit of this test will strike liquid gold. No one can tell if EVER this shall be done. For one thing sure, though, the man who gave orders for the drilling to continue knows the opportunity is great in this test—for he is one of the most successful deep well operators in the Southwest! Mention his name among the "Big Guns" of the oil fraternity and you get their attention. He's spending his money on this test—money that he has made by other like tests. The mysteries of the South Plains' geology are fast becoming known and this test will remove the element of chance to an extent that if the well is a producer the little man is out—gone for! Too late, will be his wail!

LEASE OPPORTUNITIES

We sincerely believe that the average man of this section can well afford to buy leases near this Yellowhouse test. Around the thriving, growing community of PEP—just four miles from the test—we have lease opportunities to offer that we believe are unusual. The prices are so reasonable—the conditions under which they may be bought so attractive, that we feel you are certainly losing out if you don't at least come in and talk with us about them. Won't you do that? Tomorrow—next day or soon? You'll never get rich holding your own.

Shattered Hopes

In every section of the great southwest you see living evidence of people who were afraid to take a chance. One of the most pitiful sights on earth are those people living in sections where oil has been found, who by their fear, failed to enjoy the bounteous rewards of these finds—and let the big oil companies grow richer right at their doors, under their "nose". Will this be another such spectacle?

The minute the drill bit strikes paying oil in the Yellowhouse test—just that minute will be another story of shattered hopes—of opportunities lost! "It's better to have tried and failed than to never have tried"—a saying as true today as ever.

HOLDING YOUR OWN

There's little consolation for the ambitious man with a few hundred dollars in "holding his own." Lots of people, by not taking chances, seem to hold their own and remain in poverty throughout a life-time. The man who accumulates great wealth takes chances! You can ask your banker or any other successful student of acquiring great wealth and they will tell you this is so.

Why not give this most important South Plains' oil test a genuine investigation? Why not invest a small amount in the opportunity that it presents?

REMEMBER HENSHAW! HE TOOK A CHANCE—AND THE TEXAS COMPANY PAID HIM TWO MILLION DOLLARS FOR IT.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE
Death strikes GARRETT FOL-SOM while swimming with a party of friends at Ocean Town, N. J.
At the HOTEL MAJUSAGA, where they all had been feasting, an inquiry is begun, after a doctor, perfunctorily examining him on the beach, pronounces him dead.
Folsom's companions had been ROGER NEVILLE, MRS. HELEN
BARNARD, and CARMELITA
VALDON. It is established that Folsom, just before a death, had been standing next to NED BAR-RON, who was one of a party including his wife, MADELINE,
ANGELICA FAIR and her fiancé,
ROBIN SEARS, and his father,
CROYDON SEARS.
It is decided to telegraph Folsom's sister, ANASTASIA, in New York.

Carmelita Valdon sneaks in Folsom's room but is surprised by a chambermaid. Then the startling announcement is made that Folsom had died by a stab wound—
had been murdered.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER VIII
STILL no word was spoken by the silent hearers.

Dixon, his eyes glued to the faces of the pair who listened, and Tuttle, who was standing by, watching also, said afterward that both Mr. Neville and Mrs. Valdon seemed almost and undoubtedly beyond all power of speech.
"Naturally. I did not know of this when I looked at the dead man down on the beach," the doctor went on,

"because the man's form was covered with a blanket, and I saw only his head and shoulders. But on examination just now, I find that he was stabbed with a long, sharp knife or dagger,
and that the blade pierced the abdominal aorta, causing instant death."
"Why was this discovered until your return?" asked Neville, his attention suddenly broken. "Has the blanket not been moved?"
"Probably not," said Doctor Manning, "and too it would have been possible for it to have been moved and yet the fact of the stab wound not have been discovered."
"Why not?"
"Because, you see, the stroke was delivered swiftly and straight—from all appearances. Then, it seems, the instrument of death was immediately withdrawn, and as a result the water of the ocean washed away all stain of blood from the garment Mr. Folsom wore and away, there was very little blood outside."

"The hemorrhage was entirely internal, and though death was instantaneous there was no evidence of it on the body save for a small clean incision, that in the absence of any blood stains was almost indiscernible
even to my practiced eye."
"How extraordinary!" exclaimed
Neville.

"That is the word, sir," declared the doctor. "Extraordinary, indeed! Not the fact of the inconspicuous wound, that is accounted for by the water of the ocean, which precluded any criminal stain. But the extraordinary thing is the possibility of an assassin finding opportunity and time to deliver that blow unseen and unnoticed by the scores of people crowding about him!"
"An assassin?" cried Roger Neville. "You mean he was murdered?"
"Of course, my dear sir, I thought you realized that. It would be a sheer hypothesis for a man to kill himself in that manner. So as there is no doubt as to the fatal wound, what other theory can you suggest?"
"An accident," stammered Neville, frowning in his speech.

"Scarcely imaginable," the doctor shook his head. "Ocean bathers do not go in for a dip carrying sharp pointed instruments which accidentally kill their neighbors. No, there is no room for doubt. Mr. Folsom was stabbed by some one who went into the ocean armed with the knife and who had premeditated the murder."
"It is too incredible!" Neville sighed deeply. "What can we do?"
"It isn't what can we do, but what must we do? The inevitable procedure is to communicate with the police at once. But Mr. Pelham requested me to tell you about it first, as the nearest friend of the victim present."

"Yes," Neville spoke heavily, and as one agreed under protest. "I know enough of these things to realize that it must be so. Go ahead, then; so far as I have any reason to sanction your procedure, I do so. But I claim no real responsibility in Mr. Folsom's affairs. I am only doing what I can,
in the interests of friendship, and also to be able to report to Miss Folsom,
when she arrives, what has been done
in the matter."

"Yes," said Dixon, nodding his head.
"That is all we want of you, Mr. Neville. And Mrs. Valdon, also a friend of Mr. Folsom's sister, will tell her that we—the management—have done all we can to obey the law, and also keep the matter as—private as possible."
Carmelita Valdon smiled a little.
"Personally, I should thank you, Mr.
Dixon," she said, "for keeping things quiet. But I may as well tell you that Miss Folsom is not like that. She is —how shall I put it?—rather given to publicly, rather fond of—er—notedly. I do not mean that she would make capital of her brother's death to bring herself into the limelight, but she is not at all averse to prominence

in print."
"You amaze me, Mrs. Valdon," Dixon said. "I had pictured the sister as a shrinking, retiring sort."
Dixon hadn't pictured the lady at all,
but he was cleverly getting all the sidelights he could on this darkly mysterious affair.

"Oh, no," Carmelita exclaimed.
"Anastasia Folsom is one of the most decided characters I have ever known.
She is fearless and outspoken to a degree. And you can count on her for help, if needed, in solving the mystery of her brother's death. I suppose is a mystery?"

"The most mysterious case I have ever heard of," Dixon assured her.
"Too big for me to tackle, but it may be the police will make short work of it."
"How can they?" asked Neville.
"Granted that Folsom was stabbed in the ocean that gives about a thousand possible suspects to choose from?"
"Oh, come now, Mr. Neville, we can't consider those who were too far away from the spot. But even taking the nearby ones, there may well be a hundred or more who can be said to have had opportunity."

"Surely. Then, you have to look for motive. Now, there's the trouble.
The man who had motive is an unknown quantity and will, of course, remain so. I don't see where your police are going to make a start."

"I confess I don't see clearly myself," Dixon agreed. "But that's up to them. Now, Mr. Neville, since things are as they are, the matter passes out of your hands—at least to this extent.
I'll ask you to hand over to me the key of Mr. Folsom's room. I might give it to the police and, of course, no one will be allowed access to the suite."
"What about Ross, the valet?"
"I've sent for him, and shall, of course, take the key he has also. The passkeys of the service will be attached to it."

The hotel detective dismissed them
just as Ross appeared, led by the reputable Tabbs.
The valet, his face drawn with emotion, but otherwise calm, came into the room, and Dixon closed the door.
"You have heard, Dixon said,
watching him closely, "that your manner did not die of any natural cause?"
"Not quite that, sir, but the hellyo
was so excited and queer, that I quizzed
him a bit on the way down here,
and I couldn't help thinking there was something to be told more than I had already heard. Then I learned that the doctor was here, and I was sure that there was more to be told than had yet been made known."
Dixon looked at him curiously.
"You're a strange man, Ross.
Where were you educated?"

"At public schools, sir. I've no store of book learning, but I've knocked around a bit with Mr. Folsom, and I've picked up some wisdom here and there."
"Knocked round with him—where?"
"Traveling about. For three years I've been with him out of America. In England, mostly, but sometimes on trips to Egypt and the Orient, sir."

"I see. You're a traveled man, then."
"As Mr. Folsom's servant, sir. But he was a kind master, and he gave me many advantages. Will you tell me what killed him, sir?"
"Yes, it's your job, Mr. Folsom was murdered."
"What?" Ross was startled out of his conventional manner as well as out of his usual calm.

"Yes. He was stabbed while in bathing."
"Stabbed? I don't understand."
Doctor Manning then took up the tail and told the astounded looking valet what had happened to Garrett Folsom.

"But—but who could have done it,
sir?" the man asked, as the tale came to its close. "Almost nobody down here knew Mr. Folsom at all, and those who did were his friends."
"Was Roger Neville his friend?"
"Though said in a quiet voice, the query was flung out suddenly, and purposefully, with an intent to take Ross
off his guard."

Let Us Sell You The Good Will Idea!

IT is said that good will is more valuable to a merchant
than his store itself—or money in the bank.
In other words, if some catastrophe should destroy your store, established through quality merchandise,
moderate prices—and good will, that store could resume business the next day. But if the good name of that store were erased that business would be gone.
And therein lies the great security of many an institution. Good will is beyond the reach of fire, flood, or naid or earthquake. Only through slow process of neglect may it be lost.
Let us show you through our advertising department
how an institution will endure—just as long as good will is a part of advertising.
