Blizzard Scottie Rodriguez, number 21, carries the ball for a gain against Goldthwaite.

Eagles fly over Blizzards 19-0

In weather more fit for ducks than humans, the Goldthwaite Eagles took command and flew away from the Winters Blizzards last Friday night. The rain which began Friday afternoon, continued through the first half of the ball game, but seemed to be more of a problem to fans than the players. Each team lost only one fumble during the game.

The game began with Winters receiving the kickoff and giving up the ball on a punt in four plays. Goldthwaite began driving and got well into the Winters end of the field before being stopped by the Blizzard defense. The Eagles' James Lee Freeman put Goldthwaite ahead with a touchdown later in the first quarter and the extra point was good to make the score 7-0.

The Blizzards and Eagles made it a defensive battle for the rest of the first half, neither team scoring. Going into the locker room at the half the Blizzards were still within reach of winning the game if they could just get some offense going. The defense was doing a good job holding the Eagles, but had been on the field a lot of the first half.

The third quarter continued to be a see-saw battle until Freeman completed a 17-yard touchdown pass to J. J. Miller with 15 seconds to play in the quarter. The extra point attempt was missed and the Eagles led by a score of 13-0.

The fourth quarter was another futile one for the Blizzards as the offense could not get across the Goldthwaite goal line. Goldthwaite made its final score in the fourth quarter, missing the extra point to make the final 19-0.

Statistics tell the story of the game with the Blizzards mustering only 8 first downs to Goldthwaite's 18; rushing for 91 yards compared to Goldthwaite's 228; passing for 15 yards to Goldthwaite's 99. Top ground gainer for the Blizzards was Jody Guy with 62 yards followed by Timothy Torres with 18 yards. Winters' Scottie Rodriguez punted 9 times for 173 yards, averaging 30.3 yards per punt.

Defensively, the Blizzards were led by Timothy Torres with 9 solo tackles, 6 assists and one interception, Billy Wallar followed with 7 solo tackles, 5 assists and 1 quarterback sack.

Facing their first District 7-2A opponent, Haskell, this Friday night in Haskell, the Blizzards are looking to even the tally of wins and losses. Preseason record for the Blizzards is 1 win and 2 losses, with the 2 losses to highly favored teams. The Harris Rating System picks the Blizzards to be a 6 point favorite over Haskell.

The Indians returned seven offensive and five defensive starters from the 1989 team. They have good backfield speed and strength. The Blizzards have some walking wounded and with not a lot of reserve troops, will have to play to their fullest capabilities this week.

The game will begin at 7:30 p.m. this Friday night in Haskell. Attend and back the Blizzards as they teepee the Indians!

Hospital Board authorizes creation of emergency service

In a called meeting of the Board of Directors of the North Runnels Hospital District Thursday, September 20, the Board voted to authorize the creation of an emergency ambulance service and to seek bids on the purchase of ambulances and related equipment.

Bids for the service in both north and south Runnels County are to be submitted by November 13 to the Runnels County Commissioners Court. The contract for north Runnels County is currently held by North Runnels Emergency Service, owned by Randy Nolte of Winters.

Several interested persons attended the special meeting and asked questions of the Board and North Runnels Hospital administrator Bob Prewit as to the reasoning behind the formation of the emergency service and the cost to taxpayers. According to Prewit, the authorization from the Board is necessary before the Hospital District can proceed with looking at costs and operations of such an emergency service. He told Mrs. Leona Chapman, who asked if it would increase taxes, that it would not increase taxes through the Hospital District and that the District had what it felt is sufficient money to buy and equip ambulances if it seemed feasible and the District was successful in receiving the contract for the area.

Following several minutes of questions and comments from the audience, the Board voted to create the emergency ambulance service. Board President Ronnie Poehls explained to those present that the vote did not mean that the hospital was going out to buy ambulances, but could now legally study the situation in north Runnels County, call for bids on equipment and supplies to find out the real costs involved, then if the Board saw fit, proceed with a bid to the County for the emergency service in north Runnels County.

The motion to authorize the call for bids was then made and carried unanimously.

In discussions concerning the need for the hospital district to begin to look at the possibility of a hospital-run emergency service, Prewit told those attending that there have been no complaints filed with the Texas Department of Health concerning North Runnels Emergency Service. This was confirmed to The Enterprise by Andy Cargile of the Regional Office in Abilene. Prewit said he feels the hospital can provide a quality service through the hospital with local people operating the emergency service. He said a hospital run ambulance service must meet Medicare standards and would be double checked on their standards. A hospital service would be regulated more stringently than a privately owned service because the Hospital District is a public entity. A District run ambulance service would have to be licensed and surveyed by the Texas Department of Health, just as any privately run service.

The hospital run emergency service, if successful in receiving the contract from the County, would receive the same subsidy as a privately run service. The contract is a three year contract. The present contract pays a monthly subsidy of $4750 to North Runnels Emergency Service.

Bids for the emergency service are based on the amount of subsidy which would be paid by the County. For instance, if the ambulance service would need $100,000 to operate for a year and estimates that income from all sources other than the county would be $60,000, then the bid for the County subsidy would amount to $40,000.

Some concern has been voiced as to the status of North Runnels Emergency Service should the owner Randy Nolte be convicted on felony charges under which he is now indicted. Mr. Cargile, with the Texas Department of Health, told The Enterprise that should Nolte be convicted, he would be required to note that fact on his next application for license. The Department of Health would consider that fact in renewal of his personal Emergency Medical Service license and depending on the nature of the crime, could revoke his personal license. He also said he was not sure as to the effect that might have on the renewal of the provider license for North Runnels Ambulance Service.

Prewit told The Enterprise that emergency service is a top priority for a rural community. He said that as a rural hospital, North Runnels must create a diversified health system and must be able to do many things with the hospital staff. The Texas Hospital Association has reported that in rural Texas the local hospital is the last safety net available to many residents. Fifty-three of the two hundred fifty four Texas counties have no hospital. North Runnels Hospital District is looking at the emergency service as an extension of their other services and making sure that emergency service is continued to be offered in North Runnels County.

City Council accepts sculpture

The Winters City Council met for its regular meeting Monday night at the Winters Housing Authority meeting room with a short agenda. The Council voted to accept a metal sculpture for the City Hall which is being built by Dewey Chestnut of Winters.

Aldermen Sandy Griffin and Steve Byrne reported to the Council on their visit to see the sculpture. The council then voted to accept the sculpture which will be of no cost to the city except the concrete pad on which the sculpture will be mounted. A tentative dedication is planned for early November. The sculpture has been a project of the Beautification Committee appointed by Mayor Randy Springer.

The Council also voted acceptance of an ordinance rescheduling the City Council meeting location and dates to the 2nd and 4th Mondays at 6 p.m. at the Winters Housing Authority meeting room through December. The change in place is hoped to provide a more accessible place for the elderly and handicapped to attend the meeting.

OIL BIDNESS . . .

By Reg Boles

It is time for our regular review of oilpatch basics, and this is an excellent opportunity to see how far we have come. We have progressed from the basic geological origin of petroleum (Jan.) through lease acquisition, drilling of a well, completion, daily operations, well servicing, government regulation, reserves estimation (Aug.), and, this month, special recovery techniques.

What, you may ask, are "special recovery techniques?" Before I confuse you too badly, let me back up a little and lead you into these special techniques.

Upon discovery, a reservoir will produce under some energy that has origins in the reservoir. It may not get it to surface, but it will get fluid into the wellbore. This energy mechanism is called a primary recovery mechanism, and it can be a pressure drop due to one or more of several physical situations. Such as, gas under pressure, gravity, water drive from downdip, or just fluid and rock expansion. When this energy is depleted (water drive is an exception—it hardly ever depletes its energy because it usually depeletes the oil or gas available, first), the end of the primary recovery cycle is over. When this milestone is reached, a secondary or even tertiary (Latin or Greek for 'third') energy mechanism can be introduced to extend the reservoir's life. The choice to add these second and third mechanisms to recover additional oil and gas is determined by the economics associated with such an undertaking.

The special recovery techniques referred to earlier are secondary and tertiary energy mechanisms implemented by an operator to increase oil and gas production from particular reservoirs.

The most common special recovery technique is a secondary energy mechanism called waterflooding. Very simply, this process involves pumping water into injection wells to push oil to producing wells. It accomplishes this by displacing oil in front of the water being injected but is not always as efficient as the operator would prefer, at least on the first pass. In those situations, continued injection over long periods of time can increase efficiency by re-sweeping areas over and over until an absolute limit of moveable oil is removed.

There are a multitude of variations in injection well spacing, injection rates, production well completion techniques, and in implementation timing that can be designed for a waterflood. In any case, the idea is to increase oil recovery by sweeping oil, but there is additional benefit in certain reservoirs that require higher pressures for maximum recovery. This type of waterflood is considered to be a "pressure maintenance" operation. In these reservoirs, the chemical properties of the crude oil enable more oil to be recovered if the reservoir pressure stays above a certain threshold. (It can get a lot more complicated, but let's move on while we are ahead.)

The same type of secondary recovery energy can be provided by natural gas injection or by some types of inert (non-active) gas injection, but waterflooding is the most common.

Tertiary recovery techniques include carbon dioxide flooding, nitrogen injection, steam injection, and many others. They all have one thing in common—they are extremely expensive to install, operate, and maintain. Also, the reservoir must be very well suited to a particular type of tertiary recovery or it may be totally ineffective. The expected incremental reserves and the resulting revenue must be substantial enough to justify the costs, so, oil prices are critical as are proper evaluation techniques.

The idea behind tertiary recovery is to sweep oil that was left behind by primary AND secondary methods. So, a paradox, of sorts, looms. The oil left behind must be of a large enough volume to justify implementation, yet very often a large volume of remaining oil can indicate that the reservoir is poor to begin with. So, the ideal candidate reservoir should be one that had poor recovery due to the primary and secondary recovery mechanisms, not due to the poor quality of reservoir rock. If this hurdle can be overcome, then the correctly diagnosed problem can be cured by a particular tertiary energy mechanism.

If the oil is heavy and thick, steam flooding can work where original gas pressure and subsequent cold water injection failed. If a reservoir has mediocre results from waterflooding due to poor displacement of oil by the water, carbon dioxide or nitrogen may greatly increase the sweep of remaining oil (both of these gasses have different reasons for increasing sweep, but we don't have the space to discuss that here.) These three tertiary drive mechanisms are part of the real-life oil business in locations throughout the oil patch.

Other, more exotic, recovery mechanisms are always being studied, but most require $40 or $50 oil to be commercial until someone makes a breakthrough on their application. This subject is really quite interesting and several books have been penned on the subjects of secondary and tertiary recovery. What a deal, you got it all for 25 cents!!

$500 awards offered young wheat farmers

Young Texas wheat farmers are eligible to enter an essay contest to compete for four (4) $500 leadership development awards of which 60 will be awarded nationally. The program of the Texas Wheat Producers Association and National Association of Wheat Growers is sponsored by Monsanto Agricultural Products Company. The awards are designed to acquaint young wheat farmers with the wheat association organizational structure, leadership development, policy development and the education aspects of attending wheat organizational meetings, according to Cagle Kendrick, President of the Texas Wheat Producers Association.

The $500 awards are to defray the cost for the winners to participate in their choice of either the National Association of Wheat Growers 1991 Annual Convention January 16-19, 1991, Innisbrook, Tarpon Springs, Florida, or the NAWG Summer Leadership Conference July 8-11, 1991, Vail, Colorado. Any Texas wheat farmer between the age of 20 and 35 years, who has not previously participated in either of the NAWG meetings mentioned above is eligible to enter. The winners are based upon the content of their brief 50 word essay, explaining why they would like to participate in a NAWG meeting.

Entry forms may be obtained by either writing or calling Rodney Mosier, of the Texas Wheat Producers Association office (803 Texas Commerce Bank Bldg., 2201 Civic Circle, Amarillo, TX 79109, telephone # 806/352-2282). The deadline for entering the contest is November 1, 1990.

RRC levies fines

The Railroad Commission assessed a total of $20,000 in administrative penalties last week to four oil and gas operators for problems under Commission well plugging rules.

C. D. Allen of Beaumont was ordered to pay a total of $13,500 in penalties for seven inactive and unplugged wells on the Elodie Langham, Roberts B, and Carpenter Production Co. A leases in Hardin County. Americana Petroleum Corp. of Waco was assessed a $3,000 penalty for one well on the Mrs. F. A. Cox Estate lease, Leon County.

The Commission assessed a $6,000 penalty to Graycort, Inc. of Grand Prairie for one unplugged well on the company's Warford lease in Eastland County. The order indicated that L. Pat Anglin, president and CEO of the company, would be individually responsible for 65 percent of the penalty.

B. G. Martin of Richardson agreed to a $500 penalty for an inactive and unplugged well on the George Sealy Estate C lease in Winkler County, without admitting to any violation of Commission rules.

To date in 1990, the Commission has levied more than $596,000 in pollution and well plugging penalties. Last year, the Commission assessed a total of more than $1.12 million in such penalties.

Philately (stamp collecting) is a hobby that can be enjoyed year round by any age, regardless of your interests. It does not have to be expensive. It can be collecting stamps with horses, birds, flowers, or trains on them. Do you enjoy history? Stamps, envelopes, or postmarks can be of interest to help you study towns that no longer exist or have a post office.

The New Mexico Philtelic Association will have their annual meeting in San Angelo rather than El Paso, Albuquerque or Sante Fe, New Mexico in conjunction with the show.

The Concho Valley Stamp Club meets at 7 p.m. the second Tuesday of each month at the Main Post Office and the fourth Thursday at the Central National Bank in San Angelo. Visitors are welcome.

Club programs are varied to help the novice learn more about collecting or the more experienced ones to improve their knowledge and have fellowship with one another. Some meetings include an auction when members can buy and sell items they need or duplicates they no longer need.

October 2, will begin the four week fall attendance accounting period. It will end on October 26. The school would like to encourage all students to attend school each day during this time. If you have to make doctor or dentist appointments, please try to make them in the afternoon. School funding is determined by the number of students in attendance during these four weeks.

Mrs. Baize tested eyes and hearing this week. If you child has a problem with either, you will be receiving notification soon.

In P. E., kindergarten, first and second grades have been working on learning the parts of the body and being able to point them out quickly. They played "Simon Says" and had to use or point to parts of their bodies such as calves, forearms, thighs and shins. It is very interesting to see where they think these parts are located.

Mrs. Sneed's class made individual cactus gardens this week. Alice Matthews provided several different kinds of cactus. The students went outside where they gathered rocks and dug dirt to fill their cups. They carefully planted their cactus in the cups and decorated the tops with sea shells furnished by Mrs. Sneed.

Students in grades 3-6 will be doing a lesson on longitude and latitude. To help understand this concept more easily, and make it more fun to learn about, each student will have a balloon to draw lines of longitude and latitude on.

The school is stressing reading in the school again this year. The children will be participating in the "Book It" program sponsored by Pizza Hut.

Literary Club held meeting

The Literary and Service Club held its initial meeting of the year in the Fellowship Hall of the First United Methodist Church September 19, 1990, with members of the yearbook committee, Theresa Patterson, Gwen Andrae and Mary Margaret Leathers as hostesses. A covered dish supper preceded the meeting.

Included in the program were the invocation, led by Mary Stanfield; the flag pledges, led by Mary Margaret Leathers; and the distribution of yearbooks by Theresa Patterson, yearbook chairman. Each member answered roll call with a sentence or phrase relating to a topic assigned to her.

Betty Wessels, president, welcomed the members and presided for the business session. Four former presidents of the club were introduced and presented with carnation corsages. These included Billie Middlebrook, Darlene Sims, Lela Thormeyer and Eula Mae Kruse.

Estella Bredemeyer, projects chairman, discussed plans for the turkey dinner to be served October 19 in the school cafeteria during homecoming activities.

Sue Prewit, a club member and an emplcyee of the Texas Department of Health, presented a program on breast cancer screening. An American Cancer Society film, which demonstrated how to conduct a breast self examination, was shown to the group. Following the film presentation, Mrs. Prewit gave a most informative discussion about the importance of early detection of breast cancer, which includes monthly breast self examination, mammography, and routine examination by a health professional.

MSR Exploration, Ltd., has just completed the acquisition of a 100% working interest in the 46-well Winters (Capps) Field located in Runnels County, Texas. The company has drilled three wells in Runnels County and plans to drill four more in the next few weeks, with a possibility of drilling a total of ten wells.

MSR Exploration, Ltd. is an independent oil and gas exploration and production company, incorporated under the laws of Alberta, Canada. The company was formed in 1981, and purchased the Winters business (formerly Omni Petroleum) in February, 1990, and began local operations in May.

FROM A GOLDFISH BOWL

BY PASTOR STEVE BYRNE

I watched Field of Dreams on TV the other night. It is one of my all time favorite movies. One that all middle aged, aspiring major leaguers who never made it past American Legion ball can identify with.

But, in this movie there was a man, Dr. Archibald Graham. In his younger days, he was Archie "Moonlight" Graham. He always wanted to make it as a Major League ball player. He never quite made it. Through the magic of motion pictures, he is resurrected, and lives out his dreams. As do others in Field of Dreams.

His character reminded me of my friend, Gil. Gil had been a Colonel in the army. He was retired when I knew him on my internship year in Dallas.

We celebrated his 82nd birthday in 1975. He told us that his worst birthday ever was his 80th. On that day, he gave up hope that he would ever play third-base for his home-town team, the Brooklyn Dodgers. It was on that day that he knew they would never call him up.

Of course, it had been almost 20 years since the Dodgers had been in Brooklyn. But, for dyed in the wool baseball fans, there will always be a Brooklyn Dodgers.

We used to spend hours together. Gil and I were political opposites. Separated by 6 decades, according to the "generation gap." Yet we loved being with each other.

I loved listening to his stories. He had been a quarterback in high school. I could hardly fathom that he played in the years before the "forward pass" had been invented. Can you imagine a football game where there is not even an option to pass the ball?

He never lived out his fantasy. Instead, Gil Ackerman was a colonel in the United States Army.

During World War I and World War II. In that second World War, he was the Presiding Judge at the Dachau War Trials. He had lots of stories to tell about his experiences as an eye-witness to history.

He never lived out his dream, his fantasy, of being the Brooklyn Dodgers third-baseman. But, today, Colonel Gilbert A. Ackerman has a corner of a public museum dedicated to him and his military career in his home-town, Brooklyn, New York.

Sometimes God doesn't let us live out our dreams and aspirations. Because He has other plans for us.

The Bible is full of stories of people who never got to do the things they dreamed of. Instead, they made a difference. The way God planned for them.

Maybe my dreams will never be fulfilled. I only hope that my life will make a difference. The way Gil's did. For me. And for history.

Darlene Sims was in charge of the program and presented Lillian Eubanks as one of the hungry people who had been helped by others.

Sara Beth Heidenheimer discussed "donor burnout" as one problem brought on by gloomy economic forecasts that can take the joy out of giving, but we must continue to show compassion.

Lillian Roberson spoke on hopeful signs in America and Charlsie Poe gave examples of people helping feed hungry people in soup kitchens and chapels. Alice Traylor discussed progress in Maili, West Africa where the government is beginning to help.

Go Blizzards

A Bootleg play by 7th grade quarterback John Paul Belew results in an 18 yard run for a touchdown to aid in the Breezes 14-6 victory over Goldthwaite.

Winters Breezes blow past Goldthwaite

The 7th grade Winters Breezes blew past the Goldthwaite Eagles with a 14-6 victory last Thursday.

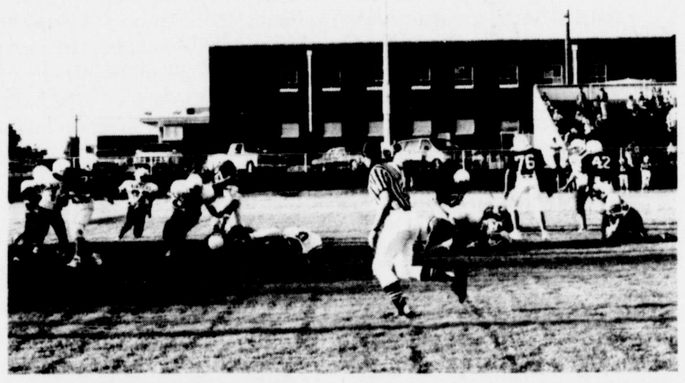

On offense the Breezes moved the ball well, thanks to the blocking of Michael Luna, Michael Mostad, Kevin Briley, Presiliano Sanchez, Richard Cortez and Kevin Conner. In the backfield John Paul Belew executed and threw the ball well. Backs Jerry Esquivel, Stephen Herrington and Mark Deike ran with authority. Receiver Joe Reyna, Jr. caught two passes, one being good for a 60 yard touchdown. The other score came on a bootleg by Belew.

Jason Carrillo lead the defense, which gave up only one score.

"I feel we played a great game, considering it was the first outing ever for these guys," stated Coach Lipsey.

Everyone contributed to the victory in one way or another. "I am looking forward to an exciting and successful season," Lipsey said.

Stephen Herrington fractured his wrist and will probably be out the rest of the season.

8th Grade Breezes: Mike Hernandez #8 (on ground) makes the tackle against Goldthwaite, with Lupe Roman #21 closing in. Coming to assist are #22 Kelly Thompson and #12 Jason Garcia. The Breezes lost 20-0 to Goldthwaite on their first game of the season.

8th Breezes go down 20-0

The Winters 8th grade Breezes traveled to Goldthwaite and came out on the short end of a 20-0 score.

The Breezes were only down 8-0 at the half but fell victim to a kickoff return touchdown and a touchdown drive in the 3rd quarter.

The 4th quarter was scoreless. The Breezes played fairly well defensively, but failed to move the ball consistently offensively.

The Breezes entertain Haskell Thursday, September 27.

Goldthwaite soars over Winters J.V.

The Goldthwaite Eagles defeated the Blizzard J.V. last Thursday in Goldthwaite 20-0.

The Eagles took control of the game in the first quarter, when they sacked Winters punter, Ron Jones, on the Blizzard 10 yard line. They later scored and made the 2 point conversion to make the score 8-0 in favor of Goldthwaite. Goldthwaite then scored again and the score at the half was 14-0.

In the third quarter Goldthwaite scored again making the score 20-0 in favor of the Eagles. "The offense played much better this week," stated Coach Chuck Cathey. "Our kids really worked much harder."

The next action for the Winters J.V. will be Thursday, September 27 at home against Haskell. Kickoff is immediately after the 8th grade game.

Don't Sweat the Small Stuff

Ever get in a really bad mood? And for no reason at all? I sometimes think that people get in tacky moods so the rest of us can appreciate their good days.

I try not to get huffy too often but, like everybody else, I have my share of bad days - those days when just the slightest little thing will make me get out of sorts.

I don't know. Maybe I'm just too sensitive. I've tried to make note of some things that tend to make me clench my teeth and make that purple vein in my forehead bulge. Stuff like -

Putting chili powder on my cinnamon toast.

Using the wrong toothbrush.

Using the wrong toothbrush and discovering it's the one used to clean the bathroom grout.

Finding a grassbur in my bed.

"Washing" my hair with cream rinse conditioner and wondering why it never bubbles.

Spraying hairspray instead of deodorant under arms.

Finding a tack in the carpet with my bare foot.

Having a bug fly up my nose.

Burning my head with the curling iron.

Washing a tube of lipstick in a load of white laundry.

Chipping my front tooth on a popcorn kernal.

Being the lucky one to discover there's no more toilet tissue at a most crucial time.

Speeding past a highway patrolman driving in the same lane.

Putting both contact lenses on the same eye and wondering where the other lens is.

Having cola go up my nose and making me choke.

Dipping the sash of my nice party dress in the commode.

Locking my keys in the car with the motor running.

Sitting on a wasp nest located under the bicycle seat.

Finding a foreign object in my food anywhere, any time.

I once read, "In life, pain is inevitable but misery is optional." Guess maybe we should take a second look at what's really significant enough to warrant true "huffiness" and the rest of the time we need to go with the flow, bite the bullet, carry on, don't worry - be happy.

I just hope that all this effort of being a good sport doesn't affect me like it has some folks. They've been keeping a stiff upper lip for so long that they look like a snarling pit bull.

Have a nice day.

Local people have best ideas for Economic Development

So says economist with Extension Service

An economist with experience working in community economic development says "I'm convinced that local people have better ideas than outside experts about what economic development projects are acceptable and most likely to work."

Dr. Don Stebbins, an economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service made the comment when explaining a strategic planning for local economic development procedure that he will use during the economic development program that is scheduled Wednesday, October 10 and Thursday, October 11.

According to Stebbins the strategic planning procedure requires two meetings. The first meeting uses a nominal group process to list participants' ideas about improving the economy and selects top ranked ideas for further consideration. The audience is divided into two small discussion groups for this purpose.

"Everyone seems to enjoy the group discussion. It's a very democratic way to give everyone an equal chance to have their ideas considered and an equal vote when ranking the ideas," says Stebbins.

The purpose of the second meeting is to allow people to select which economic development projects they want to work on, convert their ideas to workable goals and write an action plan to accomplish their goals.

Dr. Stebbins has conducted strategic planning with people in a large number of communities. He feels the main ingredient that has made the procedure so effective is that every community has had some very excellent people who really want to work on economic development. He said, "my main role has been to create an environment that helps these people get organized and then get out of the way so they can go to work."

Everyone, not just business people, but those from all walks, is encouraged to attend these two meetings to be held Wednesday, October 10 and Thursday, October 11 at 7 p.m. at the Community Center. Anyone who is interested in the future and progress in Winters is encouraged to attend.

WITCHING FOR OIL . . .
The oil business was in its infancy in 1866. That year B.T. Kavanaugh, a medical doctor and preacher, was looking for oil, with a divining rod, in southeastern Texas. Kavanaugh took a short-term lease on a piece of land near present-day Beaumont. He never hit oil, but on Jan. 10, 1901, the Spindletop gusher blew-in on that same piece of land.

Historical Commission has meeting at Buffalo Gap

Historical Commission members visit Historic Village at Buffalo Gap

Buffalo Gap Historic Village revisited

Following their bi-monthly business meeting, members of the Runnels County Historical Commission enjoyed a catfish dinner at the Deutschlander Garten in Buffalo Gap.

The main purpose of the trip was for a return to the Buffalo Gap Historic Village, which had been visited the first time in September of 1984 for a similiar meeting.

Entrance to the Historic Village is through an early day country store where many antiques and souvenirs can be bought. It was here that tickets were purchased for the rest of the tour. Senior adults and groups of ten are given a discount.

When the village was first built it had nine original buildings in the complex (except for the wagon barn). Most buildings are over one hundred years old. These include a log cabin, the oldest structure in the county.

The Knight-Sales cabin was erected about 1875 near Lake Abilene. Knight built the cabin and raised a large family in it. He later sold it to Sales, and it was moved in from the Sales Ranch.

Also, the first courthouse and jail are a chief attraction, which contains many, many Indian artifacts and history of the area. The two story building houses the old courthouse and jail. It was built with gun ports due to the Indian threats. Civil War cannonballs were placed between the large stones for stability.

Buffalo Gap was the only town in a county of 300 people. When Taylor County was organized July 3, 1878, it was selected the county seat. In 1879-1880, law and order were badly needed; thus the combination courthouse and jail was erected.

Located on the grounds is a train station, a typical doctor's office, a dentist office a cabinet mill and blacksmith shop. One would be lucky not to be electrocuted by the old x-ray machine seen in the dentist office.

The Bradshaw Post Office has been moved to the grounds. Jo Olive Hancock was reared in Bradshaw and was delighted to find her family box, "No. 5", in the office. She was able to open it, but alas! she had no mail.

We were amazed that the village had grown from nine to 20 exhibits since our last visit and the most unusual was the Buffalo Sculpture by Glenn Thomas. The Gap in the mountain can be seen behind the buffalo.

Perhaps our greatest interest was the one lately added of Bourn Texaco Station (1926). Built in Winters when gas was 9 cents a gallon.

Information about the building is as follows:

The Bourn Texaco Station

For 32 years the little Texaco Service Station held a place of prominence fronting on Main Street in Winters.

It was built in 1926 by R. P. Fishel and wife, Ella, and originally was the front part of a 24 x 60 foot building.

Inside the little station was office space with shelves for a small stock of groceries and living quarters in the back. This part was torn off leaving only the little station which is 8 x 24 feet.

It was first an independent station and now a prosperous business in the late 1920's. Gas sold for 9 cents gallon during the late 20's and 30's.

The station had several owners before it was bought by J. S. (Slats) Bourn in December, 1943.

Soon after purchasing, Bourn acquired the consigneeship from the Texaco Company and the station became a Texaco Station. In the mid 40's, Bourn relinquished the ownership and used the little station as an office for a used car lot. Later, Bourn again acquired the consigneeship and again sold Texaco gas.

In 1958, a new Texaco Station was built and the little station was retired to the back of the lot.

It has been used also as a weighing station for a gin, as an office for Johnson Well Testing Service and finally for storage.

The well known banjo Texaco sign first became a trademark with Texaco in 1836. In 1965 the company began phasing them out.

The L. R. Franklins owned the property 13 years, having acquired it in 1930, and Mrs. Franklin sold to Bourn in 1943.

J. S. Bourn kept it until his death in 1968, having owned it 26 years. His son, Jimmy, became the owner after the death of his father. He sold the station to Bagwell Enterprises in 1988. It was sold to Buffalo Gap Historical Village in 1989, and moved to the village where it was restored.

Commission members taking the tour were: Neuman and Barbara Smith, Jo Olive Hancock, Nina Hale, M. Margaret Leathers, Charlsie Poe, Hallie Sims, John Hancock and Alton O'Neal.

Sew and Sew met

The Sew and Sew Club of Wingate met September 18, 1990 with 10 members present. Those present were: Pauline Huckaby, Lorene Kinard, Annie Faye King, Martha O'Dell, Oma Lee Overman, Mildred Patton, Lucille Pritchard, Ethel Polk, Lessie Robinson and Gace Smith.

A quilt was finished for Mildred Patton. One put in and partially done for Oma Lee Overman, and will be finished at the next meeting on October 2. Annie Faye King will be the hostess for the next meeting, hers will be a make-up time.

Refreshments were enjoyed by all.

Winters woman discovers body on bus route

A Winters woman discovered the body of a man on her bus route recently. Mrs. Mary Slimp, who is from Winters and teaches in the Panther Creek Schools, found the body as she drove her morning bus route to school and called authorities.

The body was found on a county road south of U.S. 67 near Valera on September 7. The body was later identified as William Snyder of Dallas, age 32. Death was determined to have been caused by a small caliber gunshot wound to the chest and an autopsy was ordered by Justice of the Peace Emory Rider.

The body was transported to the Southwest Institute of Forensic Science in Dallas for the autopsy. Information received from the Institute on September 17 by Wade Turner, Coleman County Sheriff, revealed a residue composed of trace elements on the victim's right hand which indicated the gunshot wound was self-inflicted. An official ruling is still pending.

Desert Shield Postal and Military Regulations

DYESS AFB, Texas — The Military Postal Service Agency has announced that mail service is operating for U. S. military personnel currently deployed to Saudi Arabia as part of Operation Desert Shield.

Currently, first class mail is taking about 10 days to reach Saudi Arabia. Due to the current deployed situation, personal mail service is limited to first class mail of less than 12 oz, this includes audio tapes. This restriction applies to all APO mail and some Marine FPO mail going to U. S. service people in Saudi Arabia.

In addition, normal Saudi Arabian customs restrictions must be adhered to. Information on these customs restrictions is available at U. S. post offices.

Those wishing to send mail to deployed servicemembers should use the provided APO/FPO number, if one has been assigned. If the APO/FPO number is not known, or if one has yet to be assigned, the mail should be sent to the servicemember's address prior to the deployment. It will be forwarded as quickly as possible.

Should individuals or organizations desire to send "any servicemember" mail to servicemembers serving the region, the Department of Defense and the U. S. Postal Service have established the following addresses for the general public to send mail not addressed to a specific servicemember. For the Army, Air Force and Marine Corps in Saudi Arabia:

Any Servicemember
Operation Desert Shield
APO New York 09848-0006

For the Navy and Marine Corps onboard ships in the Saudi Region:

Any Servicemember
Operation Desert Shield
FPO New York 09866-0006

"Any servicemember" mail is subject to the 12 ounce first class mail and Saudi Customs restrictions. "Any servicemember" mail sent to any other addresses may encounter significant delays and may be returned.

Contact Social Security before retiring

If you're planning to retire around the first of the year, here's some advice from Social Security. Don't wait until you retire to contact Social Security. It's a good idea to apply about 3 months before you stop work.

Applying ahead of time will give you time to resolve any problems that crop up. Such problems may range from a discrepancy in the available proofs of age to inability to establish the relationship of your spouse or children.

When you apply, you'll have to establish that you will be at least 62 years old when benefits are to start. If your spouse and children are also involved, you'll need a marriage certificate and birth certificates to establish the relationships. Other proofs may be needed if there have been previous marriages, or if there are minor children outside the present marriage.

The preferred proof of age is an official birth certificate issued before age 5. If this is not available, other evidence, such as a baptismal certificate issued early in life or a combination of other documents may be acceptable. The Social Security office will help you find any necessary proofs not immediately available.

You can apply for retirement benefits at any Social Security Office. You can also apply by phone or mail. Just call Social Security's toll-free telephone number to start the process or to make an appointment. The number is 1-800-234-5SSA (1-800-234-5772). You can speak to a representative 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. weekdays.

VETERINARY UPDATE

by Jimmy Smith, DVM

Lyme Disease

Its victims number in the thousands, while its carrier is no larger than a comma. It has been diagnosed as everything from the flu to arthritis, with no effective prevention available to forestall it.

In an era racked by the fear of AIDS, Lyme Disease has also made its presence known, becoming the most common tick-borne illness in the country.

First diagnosed in 1975 in Old Lyme, Connecticut, Lyme Disease has rapidly spread across America, affecting more human and animal victims every year. The illness has been indentified in 44 of the 50 states, with 5,000 human cases tallied last year.

But medical researchers estimate the actual number of cases to be six to ten times that number, since physicians are rarely required to report the disease.

For its animal hosts, Lyme Disease can be an even larger threat. East Coast researchers estimate the incidence of Lyme Disease at ten times that in humans. Moreover, animals with the disease often fail to show outward skin lesions of the disease, while human victims often produce a characteristic rash. Other factors, such as the amount of time animals spend outdoors, increase the risk.

Lyme Disease is caused by the spiral-shaped bacteria, Borrelia burgdorferi. The organism is primarily carried by a tick. The deer tick is a common vector, although other ticks have been known to carry the organism.

Common hosts for infected ticks include birds, lizards, deer, mice, skunk, raccoons, rabbits, and many other species of wild and domestic animals. The disease can also be transmitted to humans, dogs, cats, cattle and horses.

Though not often fatal, Lyme Disease can severely debilitate its human victims. Symptoms range from sore throats and headaches to lethargy, inability to concentrate, fever, anorexia, stiffness in the joints, and arthritis.

If left untreated, these symptoms can become permanent. On the other hand, if Lyme Disease is detected early, the illness can be treated with antibiotics such as penicillin and tetracycline. However, many victims of Lyme Disease never exhibit any of its symptoms until the disease has reached its advanced stages.

Environmental measures designed to combat the tick population have proven to be of limited success. Reducing the deer population, for instance, has caused infected ticks to find other hosts.

Researchers have now developed a vaccine to prevent Lyme Disease in dogs. This vaccine has been shown to produce high levels of neutralizing antibodies in dogs, which has resulted in a 100 percent reduction of infection in experimental challenge studies.

In addition, the vaccine virtually prevented all symptoms of Lyme Disease in vaccinated dogs in challenge studies with live disease organisms. The vaccine has also proven to be extremely safe in field tests with no adverse reactions reported in 99.34% of the vaccinated dogs.

This vaccine has been conditionally licensed by the United States Department of Agriculture and is available from your veterinarian now. The vaccine provides effective protection for your dog against Lyme Disease.

For more information on Lyme Disease or other questions, please contact The Winters Enterprise and I will be happy to reply.

Directors Election and Field Day-October 15

by Don D. Haley, SWCD Technician and Runnels Soil and Water Conservation District

An election to select District Directors to serve Zones 1 and 2 of the Runnels Soil and Water Conservation District (RS&WCD) is scheduled for Monday, October 15, at 7:30 a.m. The election location is the Otto Gottschalk Ranch, northeast of Ballinger, at the junction of Highway 83 and the Crews Highway (382). Breakfast will be served at 7 a.m.

In conjunction with the Directors Election, a Brush Management Field Day will begin at approximately 8 a.m. Several manufacturers of brush control equipment will be on hand for on-site demonstrations. Something new to look for at the Field Day will be two models of brush pullers; The Shark and the Brush Boss. These unique machines, with tractor 3-pt. attachment, brings hydraulic power to grubbing and pulls mesquite and other undersirable species of brush and trees up by their roots by fulcram action.

Other features of interest will include thin-line and stream-line basal application of different herbicides for effective brush control, a carpet-roller demonstration, and several other interesting and informative ideas on range and brush management. SCS range management personnel as well as other professionals will be on hand for advice and answers to range management questions.

State law decrees that, to be eligible to vote in a soil and water conservation district director's election, a person must be 18 years of age and be a resident of the county, all or a part of which is in the District. Also, a voter must own agricultural land within the district where the election is being held.

Legal qualifications state that a candidate for the office of a soil and water conservation District Director must be 18 years of age and a resident of the county, all or a part of which is in the District. In addition, candidates must own agricultural land in the zone he or she represents and be actively engaged in the business of farming or ranching. Soil and water conservation District Directors serve a four-year term office.

Zone 1 of the RS&WCD includes the area south and west of the Junction of Highway 67 and Highway 83 at Ballinger to the Coleman County line. Zone 2 of the RS&WCD includes the area south and east of the junction of the Colorado River and Highway 83 at Ballinger to the Coke, Tom Green, and Concho County lines.

Current members of the Board of Directors of the RS&WCD are David Ocker, Chairman, Zone 2; Otto Gottschalk, Zone 1; C. J. Robinson, Jr., Zone 3; Edward Bredemeyer, Zone 4; and W. C. "Bud" Davis, Zone 5.

The District's Board of Directors coordinate the conservation efforts of various local, state, and federal agencies and other organizations. The RS&WCD has legal authority to enter into voluntary working agreements with governmental agencies and private landowners/operators to carry out soil and water conservation management objectives. The purpose of the RS&WCD is to promote sound soil and water conservation programs on farm and ranch lands with the District and to serve as a voice for farmers and ranchers on resource conservation matters.

The RS&WCD would like to invite all eligible and interested parties to participate and attend the Directors Election and Brush Management Field Day. There will be many items and thoughts of interest in the area of resource conservation management. See you there!

Winters and

How long are you going to allow the wool to be pulled over your eyes?! I am sure all of you are aware of the travesty and tragedy that this area is embroiled in and I know most of you have heard some of the vicious and disgusting rumors and so called "facts." Greed is a great motivater and the Devil's own handtool, but unfortunately most of you are about to become victims also in this circle of greed and deception.

How many of you were aware of the "Public" meeting of the Hospital Board this past week? You should have been, because it was posted on a small piece of paper on the hospital door, the city hall, and the courthouse—places we all go everyday. Some of us did find out and went and taped it. Did you also know that your Board of Directors have given the go-ahead to Mr. Pruitt to obtain bids on ambulances and that they intend to bid for the County Ambulance Service? Guess whose dollars are going to pay for those ambulances—and why? We already have the best, most Hi-tech Ambulance service in the surrounding counties. North Runnels Emergency Service has served this community for years and has built a solid reputation of excellence in Emergency care, so much so that other communities have studied and copied it, using it as an example of how an Ambulance Service should be.

The hospital states that they have some "endowments" they could use. Well I personally know the people that these "endowments" came from and I feel sure they wouldn't want their money being spent for ambulances when the county already has three fully equipped state-of-the-art ambulances and a trained and dedicated staff.

They say the ambulance would make money for the hospital—how?—they are not making money now with what they already do..and if by chance the "hospital makes money" do you think Mr. Pruitt and the directors will lower your taxes? Fat chance!

All I am saying, Winters, is that people had better get off their seats and speak out and do something or you're going to have just one more senseless item railroaded over you and you're fixing to pay a very high price for it.

Thomas P. O'Mara

Letter to the Editor

I am appalled at what is happening...what this community is allowing to happen! When I received the news that a meeting was being held at the hospital concerning buying ambulances for the hospital I was shocked! Finding out only minutes before the meeting was held, I was unable to attend...however those that did go informed me that the hospital was going to use funds left to them by my family! Mrs. Reynold Johnson and Mrs. Willie Belle Coronet were my aunts! Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Virden were my grandparents, they all have left large sums of money/land to this hospital and I feel they would all turn over in their graves if they knew how their gifts were being applied. That money was given to enable the hospital to provide services and facilities that were NEEDED in the community, not to be spent senselessly to satisfy anyones desire to control, gain power, manipulate, or destroy anyone else's well being.

This county already has two well established ambulance services and I resent the fact that the Hospital Board and administration have not made public the total amounts of these endowments and a complete financial breakdown of how these monies are being spent. We should cherish and hold with great and solemn responsibility such endowments as these and be absolutely sure...beyond a shadow of doubt that any decision made to spend these precious gifts is done fully with the communities blessings and totally to bring better care to the patients.

Such care could be an enlarged emergency room, currently our facility has a one bed emergency room and sometimes patients have to lay out in the hall, or perhaps an enlarged lab with updated equipment instead of the "closet" space that is used now, enabling lab services to be done "in-house" instead of sending out lab work to other entities. This would help to generate revenue as well as keep costs down for our patients.

Our hospital is vital to our community and every possible effort to obtain what is needed should be the priority of every elected official and any administration whose salary is paid by you and me - the taxpayer.

Winters Oil Industry Can Be Restored

Not everybody is fortunate enough to have property where oil or natural gas is located.

Winters, Texas could certainly benefit from a SLOW GROWTH industry albeit oppossite of the BOOM TOWN atmosphere. Oil and the jobs it provides and the added income ain't worth a damn if it causes financial ruin of the Banking industry as the last "Boom Town" Fiasco Texans indulged themselves in.

I'm all for an improved oil industry and the job opportunities and I'm all for seeing the farmers get an even break.

And I'm even convinced you know a little history, and—I'm also conviced that there is more than a few way's to help and strengthen the local economy, using all the available resources.

SUCH AS See the enclosed copy of a letter I received! Give you fella's any ideas.

G. Snuffer

Editor's Note: Included with this letter was one written to Warner Bros. concerning story ideas. The reply from a Mr. Milton Segal informed Mr. Snuffer that Warner Bros. Television considers only literary material submitted by duly licensed literary agents.

Letter to the Editor

I'm a taxpayer. I would like to know why our hospital (NRH) needs to take on the job of running an ambulance service?

The way I see it, the hospital has a full time job of running the hospital and keeping it fully qualified with the State.

As a taxpayer I see the need to pay taxes on the hospital. But I see NO need to pay taxes for an ambulance service.

Our hospital (NRH) has said that there will be no new taxes for this service. If the hospital (NRH) District has this kind of money why isn't it used to upgrade our office space, add new x-ray rooms, send hospital personel to special schools; things that we need to keep our hospital in good standing with the State??

Having an ambulance service does not have anything to do with being qualified with the State.

A hospital has only one way to get money—charge more for services or higher taxes.

Texas Teachers want career ladder fixed

Approximately four out of five Texas teachers are unhappy with the state's teacher career ladder, a merit bonus program established in 1984 to identify and reward quality teachers, according to a survey conducted by the 50,750-member Association of Texas Professional Educators.

The association survey revealed that 79 percent of the respondents were displeased with the current career ladder situation. The teacher career ladder was established through House Bill 72, the education reform package passed in 1984.

Since its adoption, Texas teachers have complained about inconsistent applications of appraisals and career ladder standards, and lack of adequate funding of the program by the Legislature.

"This system was designed to identify and reward the best teachers of Texas, and all we've done is frustrate them," said ATPE State President, Jed Reed, a classroom teacher from Garland. "And although only ATPE members were surveyed, I believe the results can be interpreted as the feelings of Texas' 200,000-plus teachers.

"I think it's equally important to note that despite the negatives, Texas teachers have not given up on the career ladder," Reed said, adding that a resolution proposed at the ATPE state convention last March calling for the elimination of the teacher career ladder was soundly defeated.

"I believe that action indicates that the teachers of Texas aren't happy with the career ladder, but they also aren't yet willing to give up the fight to improve it," Reed said.

Reed added that now is the time for teachers to accept that the career ladder isn't perfect, and begin working toward positive and professional change.

"As we begin a new school year, I encourage all Texas teachers to decide right now that the 1990-91 school year will be the year they become involved in determining education policy," Reed said.

"There are so many vehicles that they can use to make their voices heard — letters to state appointed committees, input through professional associations, contact with individual legislators, and of course, the ballot box in November. "An ideal place to start is with the teacher career ladder issue," Reed added. "Right now the education groups are meeting with the chairperson of the House Public Education Committee to discuss possible improvements to the career ladder, and the Legislative Education Board is also considering some potential changes to the ladder.

"It is an excellent opportunity for concerned educators to be heard."

The ATPE survey of 1,600 randomly-selected ATPE members conducted last spring also revealed the following: 80 percent of respondents indicated that their paperwork burden has not diminished since the passage of the Paperwork Reduction Act in 1986; 79 percent said that the Texas Teacher Appraisal System (TTAS) consumes too much administrative time; and 29 percent said that they spend over $200 of their own money each year on supplies and materials for their classrooms. The ATPE survey had a margin of error of plus or minus 4 percent.

"It's clear that the teachers of Texas are dedicated to the children, especially if they're willing to spend their own money for supplies," Reed said. "It's also clear that there are problems with our public education system that need attention, and the only way this profession is going to improve is if the professionals themselves work to improve it."

ATPE, the largest independent, nonunion educators' association in the state and nation, has a statewide membership of 50,750, which consists of mostly classroom teachers but includes administrators, paraprofessionals, retired educators, education students and public members.
