Court slows down presidential tally

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press

On a topsy-turvy day of law and politics, the Florida Supreme Court froze the state's presidential tally on Friday, forbidding the secretary of state from certifying results of the marathon vote count just as Republican George W. Bush was advancing his minuscule lead over Al Gore.

With the presidential race in the balance, a federal appeals court refused to block recounts underway in two heavily Democratic counties while a third county — Miami-Dade, the state's largest — reversed field and announced it too would begin a recount.

The dual rulings were a major blow to Bush, his hopes of a quick certification dashed as Gore's recount campaign grinds away.

The count of absentee votes from overseas was the final installment in Florida's routine vote-counting process. With returns from 65 of 67 counties, Bush picked up 1,057 votes and Gore 597, giving the Republican a 760-vote statewide lead — up from 300 when the day began.

Cries of foul came from both camps as the overseas ballots were counted. More than a thousand votes were thrown out as officials from both parties analyzed registrations, postmarks and other details.

"One of the problems with those ballots is it is so difficult under Florida and federal law that you almost have to be a rocket scientist to comply," said Thomas Spencer, a Miami attorney working for Bush.

In separate manual recount activities — the subject of frantic court activity — Gore picked up a a net of 48 votes in Broward County while

Republicans here predict subdued victory for Bush

By Timothy V. Kreitz

Florida's presidential election debacle was thrown another curve on Friday as the state Supreme Court forbade Secretary of State Katherine Harris from certifying a winner today.

For a short time on Friday, it appeared Ms. Harris would soon be delivering the note of finality George W. Bush and the Republican party had been hoping for. But two court rulings later, any hopes the Bush camp had for resolving the election this weekend were put on hold.

Despite continued election controversy, prominent members of the local Republican Party remain hopeful of an eventual Bush victory, which they feel will be celebrated without great fanfare, especially when compared to giant parties that had been planned for Election Night.

Instead, they believe Bush will appear more presidential by putting the chaos behind and moving forward.

MISD students express concern over possible school calendar change

By Mike Yager and Jonathon Carrasco
MRT Correspondents

While legislators in Austin and school boards across the state deliberate the possible change in school calendars, one that would initiate a statewide starting date after Labor Day and a likely end of the school year before June, local students and teachers alike have their own opinions on the matter.

This past week, a forum was held dealing with the issue, in which parents voiced their opinions. Some believe this change will allow a longer and therefore, more enjoyable, summer break, while others maintained it is in the students' best interests to hold examinations before the winter break to keep the information fresh in their minds.

"The most important thing is the final exams," said Heather Hughes, a Midland High junior who is against any sort of calendar reconfiguration. "If we waited, then most would forget or just not study during the break." She also believes the break helps to relieve stress, creating a better atmosphere to the start of a new semester.

When asked their opinions, most students had similar concerns with the proposal. They felt the final exams were best held before the winter break.

"There'd be no closure if exams were postponed," said Cody Oldham, also a junior at Midland High, "With things the way they are, you can spend time with family during Christmas instead of studying."

Chris Fuselier, a Lee High School junior, also takes the "if it ain't broke, don't fix it" approach. "There are going to be 180 days of school regardless," he said. "Why change anything that really doesn't matter that much in the end?"

Another point that has been put forth by many is the fact that non-traditional or blended families have problems adjusting to a bulk vacation time. Some students use the break time during the holiday season to visit relatives, or even parents, as the case may be. Some, however, are worried that the probable loss of a spring break may increase the stress on a student already gearing up for the end of the school year. Many students see Spring Break as a veritable "oasis," the only noticeable leisure time of any length throughout the semester.

There are also those who see both the pros and the cons of the proposal, although most are still leaning toward the current situation.

"It's hard to say how it would be with a new schedule," said Matt Wal-

Result of CAF vote to be revealed today

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Whether or not the Confederate Air Force (CAF) voting membership has opted for a name-change to replace its 1957-designation will be revealed at 11 a.m. today at CAF headquarters at Midland International Air Force.

A 75 percent majority vote of the CAF's voting members is required to effect a name-change as required by the CAF's constitution, said Tina Corbett, the CAF's director of marketing and communications.

"It has been a membership issue all along," Ms. Corbett said on Friday.

An undisclosed number of the CAF's 7,300 regular member-colonels and life members cast ballots solely on the issue of retaining or abandoning the CAF moniker. The CAF name coincides with the founding of the outfit 43 years ago by a band of South Texas farmers and crop-dusters who included the late Lloyd Nolen, a World War II United States Army Air Forces (USAAF) flight instructor.

The name-change voting was at the CAF's annual membership meeting on Oct. 6 at AirSho 2000

Marathon restructuring costs a handful of Midland jobs

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Marathon Oil has completed its $75 million cost reduction program, resulting in the reduction of its Midland workforce by an undetermined number of employees, believed to be less than 20 employees.

The reductions were part of a worldwide process, emphasized Steve Hinchman, former regional manager, who has been promoted to vice president and is relocating to Houston.

"Worldwide, Marathon had 460 employees take early retirement and 160 severances," he said

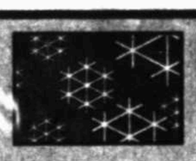

"Keep in mind this is a worldwide process. We are consolidating Tyler into Midland and will be expanding the workforce here in Midland."

He said that many of the severances were due to position eliminations as the company consolidates to a size needed to be competitive.

As part of that consolidation, Marathon announced in mid-Sep-

Swallow named top fundraising executive of year

By Judy Serbantez
MRT Correspondent

Longtime Midland civic leader Jack Swallow, who serves as executive director of the Permian Basin Area Foundation, was named the "Outstanding Fundraising Executive" at the National Philanthropy Day's 2000 Awards Luncheon on Friday.

Swallow was one of several area residents recognized at the ceremony "for helping to raise funds for non-profit organizations."

Swallow spent 15 years in the oil and gas industry before accepting his current position with the Permian Basin Area Foundation of Midland, which awards grants to charitable organizations.

The foundation funds innovative and special projects of organizations that assist the needs of families and individuals. During Swallow's time with the foundation, it has grown from the initial $300,000 in seed money to assets of nearly $12 million.

'In my case, credit goes to the board of directors, including my staff. I attribute it to them.'

— Jack Swallow,
philanthropy award recipient

"I look at people who are members of organizations helping to raise money for worthwhile causes, and this award could have gone to any number of people," Swallow said. "In my case, credit goes to the board of directors, including my staff. I attribute it to them."

Susan G. Rutherford, immediate past president of the 2000 National Society of Fund Raising Executives, said Swallow was being humble and that "he worked real-

BUSH: Gore says he won't concede

(From 1A)

Bush picked up a net of four votes in the closely watched tally in Palm Beach County. All this out of six million votes cast across the state.

The winner of Florida's 25 electoral votes will win the White House. In New Mexico, late tallies gave the state and its 5 electoral votes to Gore. He holds a 200,155 vote lead out of the 103 million ballots cast nationwide, and a slender lead in the electoral votes.

On a day pitted with emotional highs and lows for both campaigns, the 11th Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta rejected Bush's request to halt the recounts, returning the matter to Florida courts.

As aides watched glumly from Texas, Bush adviser James A. Baker III said neither court has yet to address the core of the Bush's case — that hand counts from selected counties are unfair and expose the election to mistakes and political mischief. "We remain confident ... the supreme court will find the secretary of state properly exercised her discretion" in barring manual recounts, he said.

Republican operatives were in each of Florida's 67 counties in case a statewide manual recount was ordered either by the courts or — as a last resort — by Bush himself.

Bush aides had been working behind the scenes to set up a "victory" statement today, followed by a news conference Sunday — plans that were put on hold by the court setbacks.

"As we say around the office, the worm turns," said Gore spokesman Mark Fabiani. "And now the worm is getting dizzy."

Florida's high court stopped Secretary of State Katherine Harris from certifying the results of the state's election today at the end of absentee balloting. She planned instead to release an updated count without comment.

The one-paragraph supreme court ruling blunted a morning order from a trial court judge who upheld Harris' right to seal the results.

In its unanimous order, the high court said they wanted to "maintain the status quo" while lawyers made their challenges in the state that will settle the race for the presidency. Harris was told not to act "until further order."

In its order denying Bush's request to halt the county recounts, the circuit court in Atlanta said, "States have the primary authority to determine the manner of appointing presidential electors and to resolve most controversies concerning the appointment of electors."

There was no end to the wrangling.

"There are more attorneys than there are ballots," said Bob Edwards, chairman of the Republican Executive Committee for Walton County, where five absentee votes were tossed out, including those of four people who had already voted. In Orange County, officials discarded 117 of 147 votes received.

Democrats protested a number of ballots, saying they were not postmarked as required. A GOP official said Republicans might challenge the discarding of hundreds of ballots, many from military personnel.

Gore's presidential dreams rested with the courts and in the ballot-counting rooms of Palm Beach and Broward counties, and now Miami-Dade. Local Democratic allies lobbied county board members to reverse course and approve the recounts in Broward and Palm Beach counties.

"I want to be clear neither Governor Bush, nor the Florida secretary of state, nor I will be the arbiter of this election," Gore said shortly after the high court ruling. "This election is a matter that must be decided by the will of the people as expressed under the rule of law."

The seven high court justices set a 1 p.m. Monday hearing to consider the validity of ongoing recounts in several counties. The timetable effectively permits manual recounts to continue in the three Democratic-leaning jurisdictions where about 1.5 million ballots of the states 6 million ballots were cast.

It was another day of tumult and tension for the candidates and their weary workers: a trial court ruling, high-fives in Bush's camp; a high court ruling, cheers from Gore's camp; absentee ballots counted, Election Day ballots recounted; a new controversy regarding missing postmarks and a federal court ruling.

The deep partisan divide, certain to shadow the winner to the White House, was evident in the political makeup of Friday's key players: Harris is a Republican who campaigned for Bush, and all seven state Supreme Court justices are appointees of Democratic governors.

"It's very bitter and highly partisan, and it's really a tragedy," said former President Carter, a Democrat who has overseen numerous elections in fledging democracies since leaving the White House.

Another former president seemed equally philosophical.

"There is a lesson in this and I would simply say that I think this country is totally resilient, totally strong," said George Bush, father of the GOP candidate. "Leaving out who wins or loses, this country will be just fine."

Harris certified the bulk of Florida's votes Tuesday, showing Bush with an agonizingly narrow 300-vote lead. That total did not include some 2,500 overseas absentee ballots, which had to be delivered to counties by midnight Friday and their totals reported to Harris by noon today.

Bush was in Texas, the vice president in Washington as they and their aides rode an emotional rollercoaster.

Midway through the day, with a favorable lower court ruling in their pocket, the Bush team mulled whether to declare an outright victory today, something it hasn't been shy about asserting it deserved with every legal or political twist since Election Day.

"We now look forward to the prompt counting and reporting of the limited number of uncounted overseas absentee ballots so that the process of achieving a final result to the election in Florida is not subject to further delays," said Baker III, hours before the high court ruling.

Gore's team was on the defensive then, with top Gore lawyer Warren Christopher issuing "the plea that I have:" Don't declare the race over yet.

"We don't want to have it come to an end with a rush for judgment that would leave many questions out there," Christopher said.

Meeting in Wesley Chapel, Fla., GOP governors offered a standing ovation when they heard of the decision.

Gore advisers held out hope that the election spectacle could take yet another unpredictable turn in the vice president's favor. It did. Pennsylvania's Tom Ridge said the room darkened when GOP governors got the news. "They feel a sense of helplessness," said Ridge. "I want to be hopeful, I want to be optimistic."

Advisers said that, with the favorable turn of events, Gore was not considering conceding to Bush.

They say he is aware, however, that the public's patience can run out without little warning. Some advisers, though still eager to fight Bush, have told Gore he would be a front-runner in 2004 if he is bows out gracefully.

Not counting Florida, Gore won 20 states plus the District of Columbia for 267 electoral votes — three shy of the number needed to win the White House. Bush won 29 states for 246 electoral votes, and Florida would put him just over the top.

GOP: Local Republicans believe Gore should concede

(From 1A)

Republican businessman Ernest Angelo said. "Getting the election over with and moving on in a concise manner will probably be the main objective of the Bush camp."

Angelo, who will be casting an electoral vote for Bush on Dec. 18, said a concession on Gore's part would be the best thing for America, if Bush is eventually certified the victor.

"If Bush is named the winner and Gore fails to concede, we'll be presented with a very clear picture of what kind of man the vice president really is," Angelo said. "If the Gore campaign tries to drag the election out past that point, it will be proof-positive that he cares more about his own party and personal power than for what is in the best interests of the United States as a whole."

Angelo added that he believes the Republicans would have already conceded for the good of the country if put in the Democrats' current situation. "There is a lot of historical evidence to support this assertion," Angelo explained. "Nixon conceded the 1960 election, even though he had really won it."

Angelo went on to say that U.S. Sen. John Ashcroft, R-Mo., could have also contested his recent loss against Democrat Mel Carnahan, who was deceased at the time of the election, but conceded out of respect for the process.

"Clinton has poisoned the political waters by being able to get away with so much illegal activity over the last eight years," Angelo remarked. "My fear is that now, as a result of president Clinton's untouchability, the Gore camp also feels as though they are above the law. It will take a long time to reverse the cultural damage President Clinton has done."

Midland County Republican Party chairperson Sue Brannon agreed. "Bush has acted with honor throughout this process," she said. "After he is elected, I believe you'll see him continue to display humility and honesty in the office of president."

Ms. Brannon said in her eyes, Bush is already the president-elect. "It is despicable what Al Gore trying to do in this election," she said. "I've even had members of the Democrat party calling to express their disdain with the Gore campaign.

'Getting the election over with and moving on in a concise manner will probably be the main objective of the Bush camp.'

— Ernest Angelo, former Midland mayor

He should do the right thing and concede."

But with the latest court rulings coming down in Gore's favor, that is highly unlikely. Even many Bush supporters admit that much.

"It is, of course, a wait-and-see situation, but I feel confident that Mr. Bush will come out on top," said Midland County sheriff Gary Painter.

Bush's slim lead over Gore was widening as of Friday, as absentee votes from overseas were being added to the tallies, although those gains were not as large as some had predicted.

As a result, Gore remains within striking distance.

Bush aides had been working behind the scenes to set up a possible victory statement for later today, to be followed by a Sunday news conference. Friday's court setbacks, however, put those plans on hold.

Gore campaign officials said that with Friday's court rulings, which gave a strong boost to the Democratic ticket, the vice president was not considering immediate plans for conceding the election. They said he is aware, however, that the public is growing weary of the situation, and that their patience could run out at any time.

However, Gore would have one last resort if he chooses not to concede: Filing a lawsuit challenging the Florida election based on the nullification of over 19,000 so called "butterfly ballots" because voters had picked more than one candidate when casting. Many of the voters later came forward, saying they had been confused by the ballots.

Others in the Gore camp feel that if the vice president were to bow out gracefully, he could return as a prime contender in 2004.

Still others believe if the hand-counted votes eventually become official, Gore, not Bush, will be the next president.

MISD: Students have mixed reactions

(From 1A)

lace, a junior at Midland High School, "because I'm really used to the way that things are now."

Although he isn't sure about all the logistics of the change, Wallace thinks the current calendar is fine as is.

Kate Massie, a Midland High School junior, said she sees both sides. "Personally, I like getting exams over with before Christmas," she said, "but I can see the up side of a longer summer as well."

Although the majority has stood by the current schedule, some think there needs to be a new uniformed system.

Cole White, a sophomore at Midland High, thinks the calendar is outdated and needs to be changed. "I'd rather have three full months of rest during the summer," White said, who isn't bothered by the possibility of losing other breaks. When asked about the exam situation, he said, "It would be better to have two extra weeks of study time. Some people might not study, but if you worked for just 15 minutes a day, a few weeks could make a difference."

Others noted that some parents who work don't get as many days off during the school year as their kids. That creates a problem for some parents when they have to find someone to watch their younger children over the short breaks. The proposed start and end dates would likely cut out the "little" holidays that come along in order to fit in the required number of days for the school year, so it could mean less hassle for those parents trying to find someone to babysit their children during the short break.

Mike Landrum, a Midland High School teacher and educator for 27 years, believes that a change is in order as well. Landrum, who has taught under many different schedules, believes any change in the current schedules would be, "Not only a beginning, but an end."

He says a change would be preferable, especially for teachers. When he and his wife, also a Midland High School teacher, attempt to plan any sort of holiday festivities, they earmark plenty of time for grading semester exams.

Landrum added that pushing the review week back as well would solve any concerns about the postponement of the tests. "Short-term memory loss is just that," Landrum said. "Short term."

Despite the difference of opinion locally, the final decision will be made by the Texas Legislature when it convenes. But the bottom line remains constant: 180 days of school no matter where you put them.

CAF: Some members do not approve

(From 1A)

in Midland and by absentee balloting that ended on Nov. 5.

Should at least a 75 percent majority vote for changing the name, then the membership in October 2001 would vote on adopting a new name, Ms. Corbett said.

A seven-member committee appointed by the CAF's 11-member General Staff (board of directors) would select four proposed alternative names among proposals submitted by the membership. And the General Staff, currently headed by Col. Joe Cowan of Wichita, Kan., would place four proposed names on the October 2001 ballot. If approved by the membership, the new name would become effective on Jan. 1, 2002.

So far, suggested names, Ms. Corbett said, include Ghost Squadron, Colonels Air Force, Commemorative Air Force and Heritage Air Force.

Within the CAF ranks for years has been a movement to change the name since "some members think that name (CAF) does not accurately reflect what the mission of the organization is," Ms. Corbett said. Further, she noted there is a tendency among some people to associate the name with the Confederacy of America's Civil War in the 1860s.

"There is confusion brought up" in that association, said Ms. Corbett, who also noted that some corporations are reluctant to financially support the CAF due to its name and the stereotype conjured up by the word Confederate.

"Our organization has no ties whatsoever to that (the old Confederacy)," she said.

W.F. "Bill" Stepp, a CAF colonel and a World War II USAAF Eighth Air Force P-51 Mustang pilot over Europe, said he "voted against the amendment" to the CAF constitution.

"I'm strictly against it," he said of a name-change. "You can't change history.

"It's nice to keep the airplanes. But if they feel like they have to change the name to something (else) to get more money, I just don't see it."

The CAF mission includes the restoration of rare World War II aircraft, to keep them airworthy, to maintain a museum, to pay tribute to the thousands of men and women who built, service, and flew the airplanes, and "to perpetuate in the memory and the hearts of all Americans the spirit" in which the aircraft were flown for freedom's cause.

All told, 141 aircraft, including trainers, fighters, bombers, and transports, are assigned to the CAF Midland headquarters and to CAF squadrons and wings in America and in foreign lands.

CAF units are in 27 states and four foreign countries — Australia, New Zealand, Switzerland, and France.

Bob Rice, the CAF's executive director, has noted that "the name (Confederate Air Force) is not reflective of what the organization does and accomplishes. We are a World War II aviation organization with the mission of restoring, maintaining, and flying airplanes from that era.

"This organization," Rice said, "was founded to help all Americans understand and appreciate the important role that airplanes played in the preservation of freedoms that we enjoy today."

It is not yet known how many of Marathon's 240 Southern Region employees will be moving to Midland, but local Realtors say they are already working with Marathon employees.

Under that program, Marathon is also closing its Petroleum Technology Center in Littleton, Colo. and moving those employees and merging its Rocky Mountain and Central Regions into a single unit in Oklahoma City.

Hinchman is being succeeded as regional manager by Jim Bowzer.

Marathon's Mid-Continent Region employs 371, with 200 of those employees working out of the Midland office.

Indiana provides model for power sharing

By Frederic J. Frommer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, still pushing his idea of sharing power with Republicans next session, is pointing to Indiana, where the parties worked under such an agreement a decade ago.

Daschle, D-S.D., has been talking with fellow Democratic Sen. Evan Bayh, who was Indiana's governor when the state's evenly divided House decided to alternate speakers.

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., has not responded directly to Daschle's proposal, and has given no indication he would go along with it. However, he has said Republicans will need to work more closely with Democrats next session.

Bayh said many people were surprised at how well the power-sharing arrangement worked in the Indiana House.

"There's a plaque on the wall of the General Assembly commemorating the historic, divided legislative session that was so much more productive and amicable than anyone predicted at the time," he said in an interview. "These dire warnings about gridlock and partisanship and fighting are not inevitable; there's another model out there that we could choose to adopt."

It's been a different story in Washington state, where the House was deadlocked 49-49 after the 1998 election and co-speakers were elected. They told their members to remember the "three C's" — civility, cooperation and creativity. But it hasn't quite worked out that way.

The tie has frustrated both parties. Bills need bipartisan approval just to get a committee hearing. The Democrat-controlled state Senate seethed as it passed dozens of bills, only to watch them die in the House. On the last day of the 1999 session, the atmosphere was so tense the House Republican co-speaker was briefly hospitalized with chest pains brought on by stress.

Daschle is not pushing for co-majority leaders. But he would like Republican and Democratic co-chairmen on committees that are divided equally between the parties. He argues that far from producing gridlock, a power-sharing arrangement would actually make the Senate more productive.

Daschle is floating the power-sharing idea only if the Senate ends up 50-50, which would happen if Democrat Maria Cantwell defeats Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash. Gorton had a slight lead with absentee ballots still being counted Friday, but a recount is expected.

Even if Cantwell wins, the GOP would still control the Senate because the vice president breaks ties. If Republican Dick Cheney becomes vice president, he would provide the GOP with a tie-breaking vote. If Democrat Joe Lieberman becomes vice president, his vacant Senate seat would be filled through an appointment by Connecticut's Republican governor, giving the GOP a 51-49 edge.

The Indiana power-sharing model is not remembered fondly by all involved.

"It was not productive," said Paul Mannweiler, the Republican co-speaker in the 1989-90 session. "It made the House second fiddle to the Senate."

The Indiana Legislature eventually passed a law providing that if the House were ever evenly divided again, the party winning the state's highest statewide office that year would appoint the House speaker. In 1996, the two parties tied again, and the Democrats ran the House because Democrat Frank O'Bannon was elected governor.

Helmets recalled because they failed impact test

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three companies are recalling about 243,000 bicycle helmets because they failed government impact testing and don't provide adequate protection from falls.

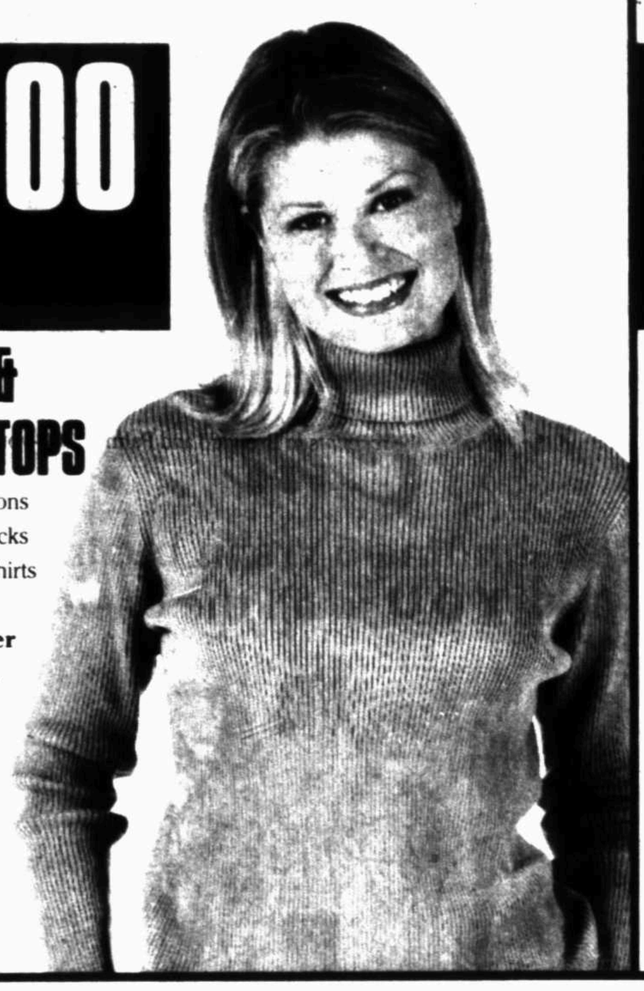

The companies — Variflex, of Moorpark, Calif.; NHS, of Santa Cruz, Calif.; and First Team Sports, of Anoka, Minn. — have not received reports of injuries, but are recalling the helmets as a precaution, the Consumer Product Safety Commission said Friday.

Most of the recall concerns Variflex's "X-Games Aggressive" bicycle helmets, which are either black, white or chrome. Each of the about 240,000 recalled helmets has a red "X- Games" insignia on the front and "X-Games" written on the back. A large label inside these helmets reads "SGS CPSC CY50159."

NHS is recalling about 1,100 "TSG Metallic Gold," 1,000 "TSG Gloss Black" and 500 "TSG Foundation Blue" helmets. The Metallic Gold and Gloss Black helmets have "TSG" written on the front and rear. The Foundation Blue helmets have the word "Foundation" across the front and a star and moon on the side. They have serial numbers beginning SN: 00170 or SN: 00171, and a date code of January, February and April 2000 written on the white label inside the helmet.

For more information, consumers can call First Team Sports at 1-800-528-5872 between 8:30 a.m. and 6 p.m. EST Monday through Friday.

FBI says progress in Cole probe allows more agents to come home

By Michael J. Sniffen
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With their dispute over investigative procedures receding, Yemenis and the FBI have made so much progress probing the attack on the USS Cole that the bureau is bringing home more agents and its on-scene commander, a senior FBI official said Friday.

The announcement by Assistant FBI Director Dale Watson, head of the bureau's counterterrorism division, did not detail that progress. However, Yemeni Prime Minister Abdul-Karim al-Iryani said in an interview that the two men who carried out the suicide bombing last month have been identified as Yemeni veterans of the U.S.-backed guerrilla war to drive Soviet forces from Afghanistan.

Al-Iryani also told The Washington Post that one of the men who steered the small boat carrying plastic explosives into the U.S. ship was a Yemeni born in the eastern province of Hadramaut.

Although U.S. officials declined to comment on the Yemeni official's remarks, Watson said, "Investigation by Yemeni authorities and sustained cooperation with U.S. efforts continue to result in more than satisfactory progress."

"The pace of progress has enabled the FBI to further reduce in-country presence, having completed many aspects of the investigation," Watson added in a statement released here. "Because of the investigative achievements to date, the FBI will soon be able to bring home the FBI's senior onsite commander, John O'Neill."

O'Neill is chief of the national security division of the FBI's New York office, which is in charge of the Cole investigation.

The FBI presence in Yemen, which once involved more than 150 agents and evidence technicians, had dropped by late October to fewer than 40. The previous withdrawals came after most of the physical evidence was retrieved from the ship and from several houses in the port of Aden where the attackers apparently prepared their boat.

FBI officials said some agents would remain in Yemen after O'Neill returns but they would not predict how many.

U.S. officials said Friday they are near signing an agreement with the Yemenis on a resolution of the dispute between the FBI and Yemeni investigators over whether U.S. agents could interview witnesses and suspects in custody there. A formal written agreement has not yet been signed, but it appeared FBI agents would be able to observe interviews and submit questions, while not participating directly in questioning, they said.

That resolution would preserve Yemeni sovereignty while letting the FBI gather evidence that could be admitted to U.S. courts.

If FBI agents observe the questioning, they would be able to testify in any U.S. court that torture was not employed to obtain statements from defendants and witnesses. The FBI's goal throughout has been to charge the culprits in U.S. courts.

The Yemeni prime minister would not discuss other details learned in the investigation of the Oct. 12 attack that killed 17 U.S. sailors as the ship refueled in Aden. But he told the Post that authorities have solid leads to the identity of the second man, also thought to have been a native of Yemen.

Al-Iryani said the identity of the first man was established by false identification discovered in one of the rented houses around Aden, where the attack was planned. The name on the ID forms, which included a boating license, was false, but the photo to was genuine.

The prime minister also told the Post that Yemeni investigators have learned a lot from the man's relatives.

"The picture inside the country should be very clear very soon. The question is outside. Who was involved outside the country?" he said.

Investigators have focused on Muslim extremists angered by the U.S. military presence in the Arabian Peninsula, especially Saudi Arabia.

U.S. investigators have said the attack bears the earmarks of followers of Osama bin Laden, the exiled Saudi millionaire and Afghanistan veteran who officials say ordered the 1998 bombing of U.S. embassies in Nairobi, Kenya, and Dar es Salaam, Tanzania.

The prime minister said Yemeni investigators have not linked the Aden bombing to bin Laden, who has Yemeni citizenship by his father's birth in the Hadramaut region. But al-Iryani said a wider conspiracy seems obvious to Yemeni officials, who believe the Cole attack displayed technical savvy unknown in their country.

Clinton has yet to visit Nebraska

By Scott Bauer
Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. — With just two months left in his term, President Clinton has yet to step foot in Nebraska — the only state he has not visited during his eight years in office.

He turned down two invitations to visit after his press secretary announced in June that Clinton would make a stop before leaving the White House in January.

So will he or won't he?

The official word from the White House is that Clinton still plans a trip to Nebraska, probably sometime in late December or early January. But nothing has been set.

The Republican Party in heavily Republican Nebraska relishes the fact that this is the only state that Clinton hasn't been to. Republican Gov. Mike Johanns even bragged about it during the roll call at the GOP National Convention over the summer.

Democrats — yes, there are some in Nebraska — are hoping against hope that Clinton will find the time to make a trip to the state.

"Every indication that we've had always is that he intends to be here before he leaves the White House," Nebraska Democratic Party chairwoman Anne Boyle said. "He's saving the best for last."

Nebraskans wonder why they are being passed over.

"It makes me disappointed. It doesn't make me mad," said Bob Schubach, a political independent from Lincoln. "It's like we don't matter to him."

Clinton was invited to the July 15 dedication of the Great Platte River Road Archway Monument, a museum-like tourist attraction spanning Interstate 80 near Kearney that chronicles the nation's historic trails. The president declined the invitation.

Clinton also was asked to help celebrate Scottsbluff's centennial on Sept. 2. He didn't make that one either.

Boyle said there are standing invitations from several organizations, including the state Democratic Party.

What, if anything, will draw the president to Nebraska?

It surely won't be to tour the state with its prominent Democrats.

Of the state's five senators and representatives, only one — retiring Sen. Bob Kerrey — is a Democrat. And he is no favorite of Clinton's, having once called the president "an unusually good liar."

All of the state's top officials from governor on down to state auditor are Republicans.

Sixty-three percent of Nebraskans voted for George W. Bush last week — a higher percentage than in the Texas governor's own state. Only Idaho, Utah and Wyoming had a higher percentage of votes cast for the GOP candidate.

During the 1992 and 1996 presidential elections, Clinton lost badly in Nebraska by a combined 37 percentage points. Nebraska tied with Utah for giving him his worst defeat on a state level.

An exit poll of Nebraska voters conducted during the Nov. 7 election found that nearly seven out 10 of voters surveyed viewed Clinton unfavorably as a person.

If Clinton turns his back on Nebraska, he will join James Garfield and Warren G. Harding as the only presidents not to have visited the state since Nebraska's admission to the union in 1867. Garfield and Harding died before completing their terms.

Group: Price of Thanksgiving dinner down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here's something to be thankful for: A traditional Thanksgiving Day dinner will cost less this year than last, a farm group says.

A dinner for 10 people this year will cost $32.37, down $1.46 from 1999, according to an annual survey by the American Farm Bureau Federation. It is the first time the Thanksgiving dinner price has dropped since 1991, the group said.

The drop reflects a decline in the cost of a wide range of food items, including milk, sweet potatoes, the turkey itself.

Since the group started tracking Thanksgiving dinner costs in 1986, the price has risen $3.63.

This year's survey was based on visits to supermarkets by 121 shoppers in 30 states.

Here's the breakdown for this year's dinner bill:

- A 16-pound turkey, $12.52, down an average of $1.71 from last year.
- Three-pound bag of sweet potatoes, $1.94, down 23 cents.
- Package of cubed stuffing, $2.14, down 16 cents.
- Package of fresh cranberries, $1.54, down 16 cents.
- Can of pumpkin pie mix, $1.54, down 7 cents.
- Frozen green peas, $1.06, down 7 cents.
- Half-pint of whipping cream, $1.11, down 4 cents.
- Package of brown-and-serve rolls, $1.36, down a penny.
- Pound of celery and carrots for relish tray, 75 cents, down 5 cents.

One item to increase in price this year is a package of pie shells, up 12 cents to $1.54.

Jury misconduct claim threatens L.A. police corruption verdicts

By Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The convictions of three officers in the biggest corruption scandal to rock the police department were thrown into jeopardy Friday when an alternate juror came forward to accuse the foreman of deciding the defendants were guilty before testimony even began.

The alternate also alleged that the jurors often discussed the case among themselves outside of court before deliberations began — a violation of the judge's instructions.

Superior Court Judge Jacqueline Connor ordered more testimony on the matter later this month.

Defense attorneys said the allegations are sufficient to warrant a new trial.

The district attorney's office refused to comment.

The allegations came three days after the verdict in the first trial to come out of the scandal.

Sgt. Brian Liddy, Sgt. Edward Ortiz and Officer Michael Buchanan were convicted of conspiracy and other crimes Wednesday involving the framing of gang members four years ago. A fourth defendant, Officer Paul Harper, was acquitted of all charges.

Alternate juror Wendy Christiansen, 30, who did not participate in deliberations, told the judge that on the day the jurors were selected, she had lunch with an alternate and jury foreman Victor Flores. "A comment was made that he believed the defendants were guilty," she said.

A telephone listing for Flores could not immediately be found.

Christiansen also alleged that throughout the trial other jurors openly said they thought the prosecution's police witnesses were lying when they claimed they didn't remember things. And jurors often expressed their dislike for three of the defense attorneys, she said.

"Every time we'd come back from being out here (in the courtroom), there were a lot of comments being made about the defense attorneys. They didn't like the defense attorneys. The person they did like was (Joel) Isaacson," she said.

Isaacson's client was the officer who was cleared.

"Whether they like me or not I could care less," said Barry Levin, Ortiz's lawyer. "But whether you like an attorney or not, you can't take it out on the client. The crux of the judicial system is you're entitled to 12 unbiased jurors."

The scandal involving an anti-gang unit at the police department's Rampart station began when former Officer Rafael Perez got caught stealing cocaine from an evidence locker and agreed to become a government witness. Perez told investigators that officers framed people, planted evidence, committed perjury, even shot innocent victims.

More than 100 convictions have been thrown out because of the scandal.

Jurors were questioned at length during jury selection and on written questionnaires about whether they had preconceived views, and all said they were unbiased.

Each day, the judge instructed them not to discuss the case with each other until deliberations and then only in their deliberation room.

Defense attorney Harland Braun said that if the three convicted officers win a new trial, he will seek to have it moved out of central Los Angeles.

"I question whether as an LAPD officer you can get a fair trial in Los Angeles," he said. "The jurors come in with an agenda."

The judge ordered the foreman and the other alternate identified by Christiansen to testify Nov. 22.

Book creates stir at anthropologists' convention

By Karen Gaudette
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — "Darkness in El Dorado" earned investigative journalist Patrick Tierney a National Book Award nomination — and bitter criticism from some scientists.

The book alleges that revered geneticist James V. Neel committed acts of ethical misconduct, including starting a deadly epidemic among South America's Yanomami Indians in 1968 by inoculating villagers with a dangerous measles vaccine.

On Thursday, Tierney's appearance at the American Anthropological Association's annual meeting drew hundreds of anthropologists. Many clutched copies of "Darkness in El Dorado."

"I understand the anger, and I do understand the grief people have," Tierney told the crowd. "They feel I have destroyed the reputations of great scientists."

Epidemiologists, a Venezuelan Indian and colleagues of Neel and other men Tierney has criticized were on hand to challenge his research.

"Tierney says he spent 11 years researching his book, and it took a matter of days to prove some of his claims were not true," said William Irons, an anthropologist who represented famed Yanomami ethnographer Napoleon Chagnon, whom Tierney also accuses of misconduct.

Susan Lindee, who wrote a study of Neel's field research with atomic bomb survivors, said, "If you know anything about epidemiology, you know these things are hard to track."

Neel, a University of Michigan professor who died in February, was not "warm and fuzzy," Lindee said. "But he had integrity, and he was a fair person."

Yvonne Maldonado, who has worked as an epidemiologist with the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, said no proof exists that the vaccine Neel used could sicken anyone.

While Tierney isn't the first to accuse those anthropologists of misconduct in their research and relationships with the Yanomami, Tierney's work was given credibility when it was published by respected publishing house W.W. Norton and landed a finalist slot in the nonfiction category for a National Book Award, Irons said.

During its annual meeting, the association is devoting four sessions to issues related to the book. The group also is proposing that its committees investigate the claims, consider new ethical guidelines for anthropologists and propose ways to preserve native cultures in South America.

Tierney held firm to his claims throughout what became a four-hour marathon debate Thursday. He did admit his concern that the controversy his book has generated among foreign governments may hamper efforts to help the very indigenous cultures he sought to preserve.

"And I wonder, why do they want our saliva, why do they want our skin when they don't want us?" asked Noeli Pocaterra, a member of the Wayuu tribe of Venezuela.

Lindee agreed.

"The real issues are how have indigenous people been treated, and how can we gather technological knowledge in a way that does not exploit them," Lindee said.

The National Academy of Sciences, the University of Michigan and the University of California, Santa Barbara all oppose the book. They say it lacks scientific proof to back its claims — something they say Tierney could not adequately provide as a journalist despite his many pages of references.

Arizona elector says he will stick with Bush

PHOENIX (AP) — A Republican county sheriff who is one of Arizona's eight Electoral College voters refuted reports on Friday suggesting his support for George W. Bush might not be firm.

"Once and for all it better be clarified, I'm voting for Bush," Maricopa County Sheriff Joe Arpaio told reporters.

Arpaio's office said the sheriff was being bombarded with calls asking for a response to media reports that said Arpaio equivocated or was coy when asked about his support for Bush, who carried Arizona.

The mindset of Electoral College voters has been of particular interest because of the tumult surrounding the presidential race. Electors are generally expected to vote for whoever won their state, but they are not committed to a particular candidate.

"It's a controversy around the nation whether the Electoral College is binding or not," Arpaio said. "It doesn't affect me either way because I plan to vote for Bush. And I urge all those Republican electors out there to vote for Bush."

Arizona's other seven electors have also said they will vote for Bush.

Bridgestone/Firestone announces layoffs

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Bridgestone/Firestone Inc. announced Friday it will lay off 1,100 workers at two plants and curtail production at a third because of sluggish tire sales.

Workers at plants in Oklahoma City and LaVergne, Tenn., will be notified in the next couple of weeks of layoffs that will take effect Jan. 21, the company said in a statement.

Meanwhile, the embattled tiremaker's chief financial officer announced his retirement, and the company said it will replace him with the treasurer of its Tokyo-based parent company, Bridgestone Corp.

The 700 workers being laid off in Oklahoma City represent 37 percent of the plant's work force. Another 400 workers are being laid off in LaVergne, or 27 percent of that plant's work force.

Also, a plant in Warren County, Tenn., will shut down for two weeks beginning Jan. 14, but no one will be laid off there, the company said.

Bridgestone/Firestone president and chief executive officer John T. Lampe said he is optimistic sales will pick up next year, enabling the company to bring back laid off employees.

"We are in a situation where sales of replacement tires have declined for several reasons," he said. "Obviously concerns surrounding the recall of certain Firestone tires is a contributor to this decline. ... However, the entire industry is experiencing a slowdown in sales."

The company said it had already bolstered its tire inventory in anticipation of a strike earlier this year when it began experiencing decreases in sales. The strike was averted when union workers accepted a three-year contract Sept. 16 after difficult negotiations.

It is the second round of layoffs since Nashville-based Bridgestone/Firestone announced in August a recall of 6.5 million tires. The ATX, ATX II and Wilderness AT tires, most of them on Ford Explorers, have been linked to 119 deaths and 500 injuries in the United States.

The company announced Oct. 17 plans to lay off 450, or 25 percent, of its 1,950 workers in Decatur, Ill. In addition, it slowed production at its LaVergne plant, with a full shutdown scheduled for Dec. 14 to Jan. 1. The Oklahoma City plant will follow a similar slowdown schedule.

The retirement announcement by Tetsuo Ando, 59, comes after 40 years with the company and seven years as CFO. He will be replaced by Akira Nozawa, 51, treasurer of Bridgestone Corp.

Bridgestone/Firestone spokeswoman Christine Karbowiak said Ando's retirement is not linked to the tire recall.

The company said Friday's developments will not affect its ability to replace recalled tires. Lampe said about 80 percent, or 5 million, recalled tires have been replaced, and he expects all waiting lists to be eliminated by the end of November.

The company has appointed an investigation team to determine what caused the tires to fail.

A federal judge on Friday also ordered Bridgestone/Firestone to stop destroying its recalled tires until some can be preserved for use as evidence in lawsuits against the company.

General Dynamics, GM to build tank replacements

WASHINGTON (AP) — General Dynamics Corp. and General Motors Corp. have been awarded a $4 billion Army contract to build a wheeled armored vehicle as a first step toward replacing heavy, Cold War-era tanks with a lighter, more transportable vehicle.

The contract, announced Friday, calls for 2,131 of the eight-wheeled vehicles to be built by 2008.

The new vehicle, which the Army calls an interim armored vehicle, is supposed to be the forerunner of a futurist combat vehicle that incorporates a wide variety of new technologies.

Counterfeiter operation cranks out millions

VERSAILLES, Colombia (AP) — Its entrance hidden in a thick grove of banana trees, criminals in an underground room cranked out millions of counterfeit U.S. dollars — possibly more than $1 billion — before police cracked the biggest-ever counterfeiting operation in Colombia.

Displaying ingenuity and daring, the counterfeiters dug out the room in a mountainside of the verdant Andes of western Colombia, lined its walls with cinderblock and brought in fluorescent lighting and a printing press.

The enterprise ended Thursday with a bust that highlights a problem in a country better known for drug trafficking. According to the U.S. Embassy, one-third of counterfeit money circulating in the United States is made in Colombia. Some $22 million in Colombian-made counterfeit dollars have been seized in the United States since 1985.

"This, unfortunately, is a national talent, because these are self-trained counterfeiters who produce (money) with a great degree of perfection," national police Gen. Alfonso Arrellano said.

Anyone passing within a few feet of the banana trees in the isolated farming and coffee-growing region would have no way of knowing that a multi-million-dollar cottage industry — and a subterranean one at that — was in operation.

Journalists flown to the site aboard police helicopters late Thursday, within hours of the room's discovery, saw $3 million in bogus bills lying in stacks on tables and hanging by clips from string stretched across the 15-by-20-foot room. Cans of ink and dye stood on shelves mounted on the walls. Metal plates from which the bills were imprinted were scattered on tables.

A policeman turned on the black printing press, which clanked into life and began spitting out sheets of $100 bills.

"Everything you need to make dollars is here," said Arrellano, the police general. "And this room, which is like a bunker, was built with sophisticated engineering techniques."

A task force of 100 Colombian police, assisted by U.S. Secret Service agents, spent a year and a half trying to find the money-making factory and finally discovered it with the help of "intelligence operations," Arrellano said Friday. He did not divulge their sources.

When heavily armed police swooped in on Thursday, they found one man, Gerardo Ardila, in the underground room and arrested him, Arrellano said. Ardila was believed to be a lower-level worker.

Authorities were searching for the alleged mastermind, Ramiro Sepulveda, who previously served a two-year prison sentence for counterfeiting, police said. The Secret Service has been looking for Sepulveda for years, according to Arrellano.

The Secret Service in Washington and the U.S. Embassy in Bogota did not immediately return phone calls seeking comment.

The underground operation was capable of printing $3 million per week and had probably been doing so for about 10 years — producing more than 1 billion bogus dollars, Arrellano said. That could make it among the biggest operations for counterfeiting illicit greenbacks ever uncovered in the world.

Quality is another matter.

The bills, in denominations of 100s, 50s and 20s, look genuine at first glance. But anyone familiar with U.S. currency can see on closer inspection that something is wrong. The texture of the paper doesn't feel right — it's slightly glossy — and the printing looks fake.

Police said much of the bogus money was probably destined for neighboring Ecuador, which officially switched to the dollar in September as the country's official currency. Ecuadorean officials had predicted counterfeit dollars from Colombia would flood Ecuador because many locals would not be able to recognize fake bills.

War on pirates grows fiercer

ABOARD THE SHIKISHIMA (AP) — In the waters off west Malaysia, four marine police commandos take three minutes to drop from their helicopter by ropes and disarm dagger-wielding men aboard this Japanese coast guard vessel.

"Mission accomplished," a voice crackles over a walkie-talkie in the simulated exercise. "We have apprehended seven pirates. There are no casualties."

It was the first-ever joint sea drill by Japan and Malaysia in the Malacca Strait — the world's most pirate-plagued waterway separating Malaysia from Indonesia's Sumatra island — and marked the climax of a regional meeting on how to control soaring sea piracy. It was the third anti-piracy conference in Asia this year.

But despite several suggestions, no consensus was reached on how to deal with the problem among the 40 security experts from 13 Asian countries who gathered in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, for the two-day conference that started Tuesday.

In an effort to address the problem, Malaysia proposed placing police on ships plying specific stretches of the Malacca Strait. But foreign officials declined the overture, saying this might lead pirates to use deadlier weapons and measures.

Japan, in turn, proposed dispatching its coast guard vessels to Southeast Asia as part of multinational anti-piracy patrols. Malaysia and Indonesia both said no thanks, they can handle their problems on their own.

Malaysian authorities plan to purchase more advanced equipment, including satellite telephones and night-vision binoculars, and their police air forces are slated to begin surveillance over pirate-prone areas and share intelligence with their marine police counterparts.

Officials from Cambodia, China, Hong Kong, India, Indonesia, Japan, Malaysia, Myanmar, the Philippines, South Korea, Singapore, Thailand and Vietnam attended the anti-piracy conference.

A's trade Velarde to Texas

By Jay Peden
Sports Writer

As a 14-year veteran of Major League Baseball who had already been traded once during his career, Randy Velarde knew he could be traded again at any time.

But it was still a surprise to the Midland native when it was announced on Friday that he had been dealt from the American League West champion Oakland Athletics to the Texas Rangers.

"I was shocked," Velarde said from his Midland home. "I still had two years left on my contract, and we had just come off a championship season. I had no thought of being traded."

After speaking with the general managers of both clubs — the Rangers' Doug Melvin and the Athletics' Billy Beane — Velarde at least said he understands why the trade was made.

Essentially Velarde was squeezed out by two Most Valuable Players. His position, second base, will go to Pacific Coast League MVP Jose Ortiz, and his salary will go to American League MVP Jason Giambi.

"I spoke to Billy Beane, and his hands are tied," Velarde said. "He didn't want to send a young kid (Ortiz) back down (to the minors) after he had an MVP season at Triple-A. And (the trade) also frees up money for them to sign Jason Giambi."

Giambi, who hit .333 with 43 homers and 137 RBIs last season and led the Athletics to the division title with a red-hot September, will be eligible for free agency after the 2001 season. Beane has built the Athletics into a winner on a tight budget, but he will have to pay Giambi well to keep him in Oakland.

Ortiz, who was also named the Triple-A Player of the Year by Baseball America magazine, is a shortstop/second baseman. But the Athletics have Miguel Tejada entrenched at short, and after hitting 30 homers and driving in 115 runs, Tejada is beginning to get mentioned in the same sentence as Alex Rodriguez, Derek Jeter and Nomar Garciaparra.

Tejada is 24 years old. Ortiz is 23. Velarde will turn 38 next week.

Velarde's career is hardly over, though. He's optimistic about the trade — he said he's glad it happened during the off-season instead of during the season, like when he was traded in July of 1999 from the Anaheim Angels to Oakland.

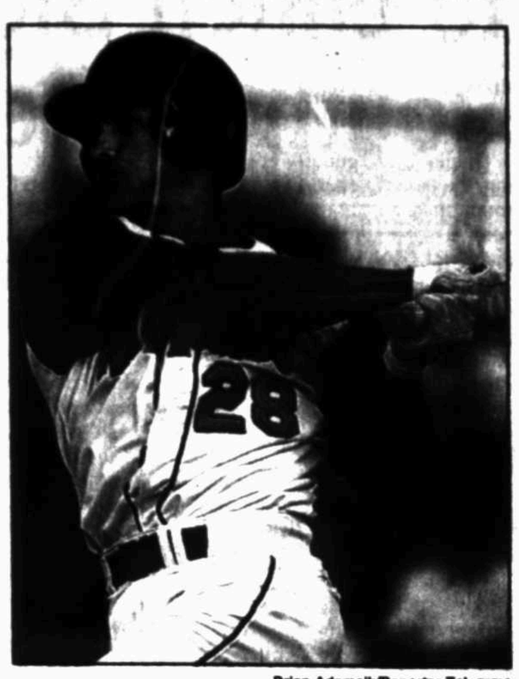

"There are more pros than cons," he said. "(The Rangers) are close to home, and they are a contending team. All I have to do is fit in, and if I have a typical year, I'll be all right."

Velarde is a .277 career hitter in his 14-year career with Oakland, Anaheim and the New York Yankees. Last season, he hit .278 with 12 home runs, and he went 5-for-20 with a double and three RBI against the Yankees in the divisional playoff series, which Oakland lost in five games. In 1999, Velarde batted .317 with 16 homers and became the sixth player in history to collect 200 hits while playing with two different teams.

He's also got a good glove. On May 29, he completed only the 10th regular-season unassisted triple play in major league history.

"He is one of the top defensive second baseman in the game and brings an experienced veteran to our club," said Melvin, the Rangers' GM.

HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL PLAYOFFS

Lee Rebels Blitz Bobcats

Defense earns third shutout in four games as Lee advances

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

SAN ANGELO — When Midland Lee steps into the football playoff polling booth there are no hanging or swinging chads, no pregnant dimples. And certainly no recounts. This was a landslide.

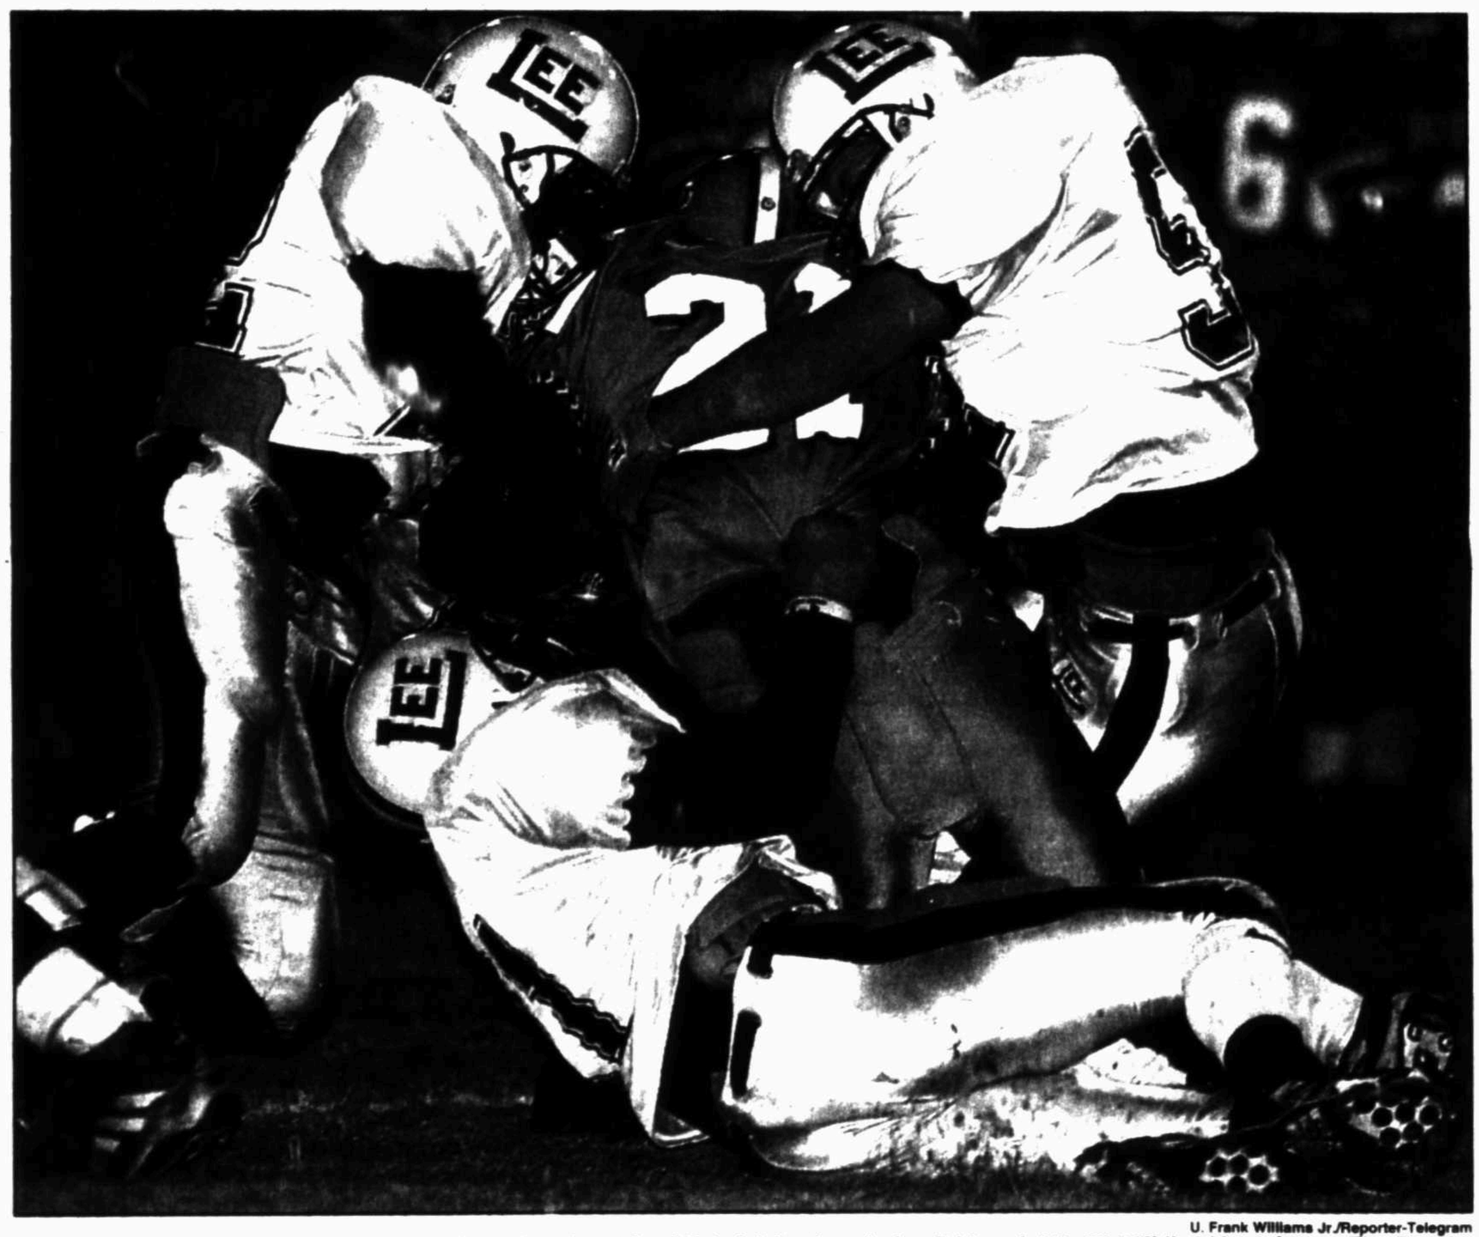

The Rebels crushed the San Angelo Central Bobcats, 38-0, at San Angelo Stadium Friday night in this Class 5A Big School bi-district game. It was the second year in a row that the Bobcats have fallen to Lee in the bi-district round.

And this one wasn't even a contest as Lee scored on five of six first-half possessions for a 35-0 lead and then turned the game over to some deserving bench players, who got one full half of playoff exposure.

And then, of course, there was that head-rocking defense, which hurled its third shutout in the last four games, allowing the Bobcats just 10 yards of total offense in the first half when the game was decided and just 65 total yards for the game. The Lee defense didn't allow 1,000-yard passer Sol Southall to complete a pass in seven tries before he re-injured a nagging shoulder. Lee also held 1,500-yard rusher Roy Bishop to just 22 yards on 13 carries.

And even the offense did it a little differently. Oh, Cedric Benson got 143 yards rushing moving up to seventh place on the Texas all-time rushing list, but never stepped onto the field in the second half. But Nick Hand had 120 yards passing, all in the first half, and he hit Benson with a 41-yard scoring strike in the second period when Lee lit up the board for 28 points. Lee rushed for 366 yards as fullback Jacoby Kendrick scored twice and Freddie Jones came off the bench for 68 yards rushing.

"We're getting better and we wanted to get more people involved into the offense to keep the pressure off of No. 32 (Benson)," Parchman said. "We've got to loosen it up and I really think if we can continue to improve, we can make a run (at third consecutive state title) at it. You have to feel good about tonight."

San Angelo Central's Roy Bishop gets swallowed up by a trio of Rebel defenders during Friday night's 38-0 Midland Lee victory. The Rebels, 9-2 overall, held Central to negative-13 yards on the ground en route to their third shutout in four games.

Some of the Rebels were asked if it was in the game plan to throw the ball more.

"I don't know if that was the plan or not, but I guess they (the coaches) had confidence in me this week because I threw pretty well in practice this week," quarterback Hand said. "I do know that when we are able to throw, it makes us pretty tough out there."

Tight end Eric Winston, who caught two passes for 36 yards, said, "Little Nicky (Hand) is stepping up at quarterback. I don't call the plays, but I'm glad we threw it more. We got more people in the mix and we keep people off balance that way."

Rangers survive solid Kermit test

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

Greenwood coach Bob Purser had been telling his players and anyone else who would listen not to pay attention to the less than stellar regular season record of Kermit, the team the Rangers faced Friday night in their Class 3A Division II bi-district playoff game at Memorial Stadium.

The game proved Purser right, at least insofar as how wise it is to ignore records.

Greenwood didn't treat Kermit like a team which finished with a 2-8 record in the regular season, and the Yellow Jackets didn't play like it. The Rangers had to fight to advance to the next round, grinding out a 28-20 victory which was every bit as close as the score indicated.

"I was pretty sure it could be like this," said a relieved Purser of the close final result. "(The Yellow Jackets) haven't given up many points and nobody beat them worse than we did (in September)."

In that first meeting, Greenwood (8-3) crushed Kermit 35-0, so the numbers figured to add up to a Rangers rout. While Greenwood did manage to go up by 16 points in the fourth quarter, the Rangers never appeared to get too comfortable with an advantage.

With less than five minutes left, Kermit's Jason Jones threw

Buffaloes run over Sundown

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

SEMINOLE — Sundown's revered defense probably never saw a rushing attack like the one Stanton brought Friday night.

Behind Jeremy Hull's 238 yards rushing and three touchdowns, the Buffaloes pounded out a 27-6 victory over the Roughnecks in a Class 2A Small School bi-district playoff game. Stanton moves on to the area round where they will play the winner of today's Mason-Ozona game. The area round game is tentatively set for next Friday night in San Angelo.

Sundown (8-3) had come into the contest only having allowed a little more than 400 yards rushing for the entire season. The Buffs (9-2) cranked out 281 yards on the ground against the Roughnecks.

"I guess I'm hard-headed. I was determined to run the football on them," said Stanton coach Mark Cotton. "We probably could've lined up and thrown our quick passing stuff on them. I just felt we could run the football. And we broke a couple of big plays. I knew if we gave Jeremy and Clay (White) a chance to break a play or two, we'd have a chance."

"After watching film, we figured we could run on them and that's what we did," Hull said. "We were just look-

Oklahoma looks to clinch Big 12 South vs. Tech

By Owen Canfield
AP Sports Writer

NORMAN, Okla. — The excitement building in Oklahoma about the prospect of the top-ranked Sooners playing for a national championship is not the work of coach Bob Stoops.

It's true that in only two years Stoops has returned the Sooners to national prominence. But it's also true that he refuses to talk about any game except the next one on the schedule, which this week is Texas Tech.

"We're not looking ahead," Stoops said. "We don't want to talk about what the possibilities are. Mathematically, everyone will agree we still need to win another game to lock up the (Big 12) South, which we've said all along is one of our goals."

A victory Saturday would ensure that the Sooners (9-0, 6-0 Big 12) will play in the Big 12 championship game Dec. 2. If they win their final two regular-season games — against Tech and Oklahoma State — then win the conference title game, they would go to the Orange Bowl to play for the national championship.

But that, in Stoops' view, is looking too far ahead. His players feel the same way.

"We have to wrap up the Big 12 South before we get to the Big 12 game and we have to win the Big 12 game before we have the opportunity to be in the national championship," center Bubba Burcham said. "You can't overlook any of those."

Oklahoma has several reasons to be ready for Tech (7-4, 3-4):

The stakes. A loss would cripple the Sooners' national championship hopes. They would still be able to win the South Division by beating Oklahoma State Nov. 25, but a loss Saturday would send them tumbling in the polls and the BCS ratings.

Senior day. The 22 players suiting up at home for the final time will want to close their careers by extending Oklahoma's 12-game home winning streak.

The opponent. Texas Tech beat the Sooners 38-28 last year at Lubbock.

Those reasons render meaningless any talk of a possible letdown following last week's emotional 35-31 victory at Texas A&M, quarterback Josh Heupel said.

"We will be focused," he said. "We have a goal in mind. We have an end objective. We're not looking to the end objective. We're taking it week by week to make sure we stay on task to reach that."

Many of the seniors have endured some dark seasons. The Sooners were 12-22 in the three years before Stoops arrived last year, and he applauded their dedication.

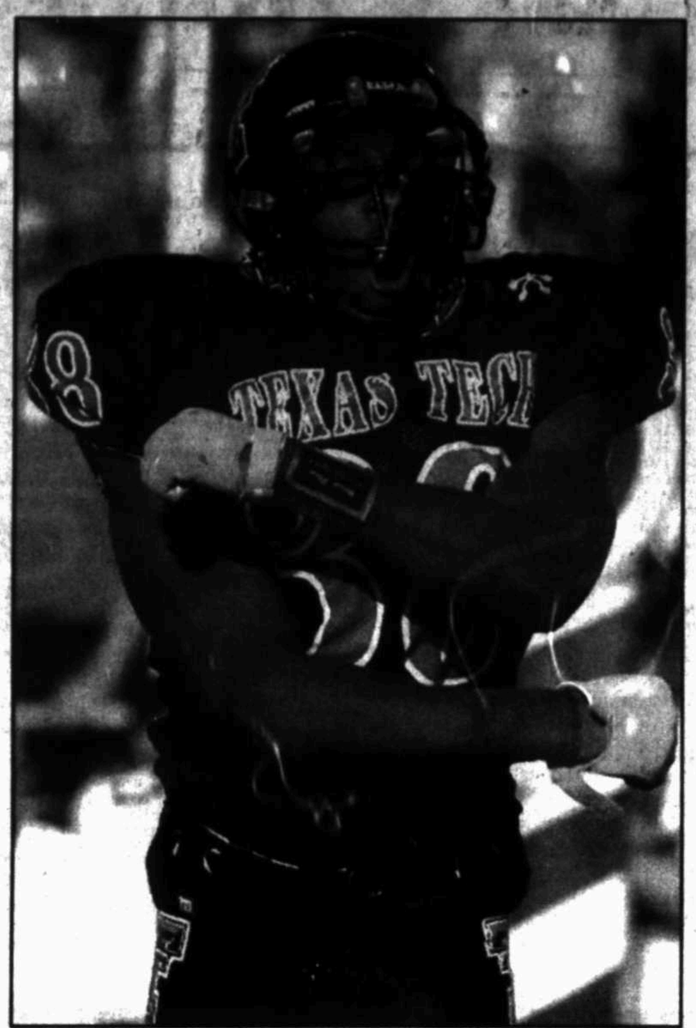

"This program and being back in this position means a great deal to them," Stoops said. "They've got a lot of pride in what they're doing and want to see it through.

"I think what's great about the seniors and this team is they understand everything to this point is still very much incomplete."

There's one other sidebar to Saturday's game. It marks the return to Norman of Tech coach Mike Leach, who last year was Oklahoma's offensive coordinator.

Leach installed the wide-open passing game under which Heupel and the Sooners have flourished. He's using the same system with the Red Raiders, who rank second to Oklahoma in the Big 12 in passing offense.

"We've got great respect for Mike and his offensive philosophy and system," Stoops said. "We need to be ready to play."

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Bowie's last second shot beats Bulldogs

Staff Report

EL PASO — The Midland High boys basketball team got victimized by a last second shot in losing its season opener Friday night, 53-52 to El Paso Bowie.

"We made a layup with nine seconds on the clock to go ahead," MHS coach Jack Stephenson said. "But we didn't cover deep. We blew an assignment, and they layed it in with three seconds left, and won by one.

"For the first game, we played well, and we'll get better," Stephenson said.

The Bulldogs will start trying to get better this afternoon, when they play El Paso Jefferson at 1 p.m. (MST).

"We're not used to losing," Stephenson said. "I don't know the last time we lost a season opener. A lot of these kids didn't play last year. They're young, but we'll get better."

Lady Chaps rebound with 83-point victory

Staff Report

On Thursday night, the No. 1 ranked Midland College Lady Chaparrals suffered their first loss of the season, opening the Lady Chap Classic with a 78-73 loss to Angelina College.

On Friday night, Jacksonville College paid for the Lady Chaps loss.

Midland College destroyed Jacksonville, 114-31. A big part of the destruction came from bombs by Courtney Feagler, who shot 9-of-17 from behind the three-point line. Both of those numbers are new school records.

Feagler led MC with 31 points, and three other Lady Chaps scored in double figures: Sylvia Butler had 23, Veronique Aless'e had 17, and Amisha Carter had 10. Chemaiah Carter grabbed 11 rebounds, leading MC's 50-26 advantage in that category.

Chaps survive frightening end, beat Weatherford

Staff Report

WEATHERFORD — The fourth-ranked Midland College Chaparrals got a precious road win Friday night, but they had to survive a harrowing final four seconds to do it.

The Chaps defeated Weatherford College, 70-69, but only after dodging several last second bullets. MC held a 70-68 lead when a Weatherford player was sent to the free-throw line with 3.98 seconds left, MC coach Junsie Cotten said. The player made the first shot, but missed the second, Cotten said. Weatherford had two tip-in chances miss before MC's Adrian Martin finally grabbed the rebound to seal the win.

Rebounds were a big key for the Chaps, Cotten said. He praised big men C.J. Young, Jason Williams, Jerome Beasley, Hamilton Rucker and Martin for their play Friday.

"They played a huge part in the victory," Cotten said. "We rebounded the ball very well. We played physically, blocking out and doing the little things to help us win. That's a new feature with our team this year — we've got the quality big men help out the perimeter players. For us to win, we need that type of play every night."

The Chaps will stay in Weatherford and play Cisco College at 4 p.m. today.

Pirates reach $60 million deal with Jason Kendall

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Pittsburgh Pirates fans wondered much of the summer how catcher Jason Kendall could possibly turn down a $60 million, six-year contract.

As it turns out, he didn't.

On Friday, Kendall signed a $60 million contract much like that he previously rejected last summer. The deal was completed after the Pirates backed off their demands that more than one-third of the money be deferred; instead, only about $3 million will be deferred.

Despite legal troubles, Jose Mesa signs with Phillies

PHILADELPHIA — The Phillies wanted someone to shore up a bullpen that had just 34 saves last season.

With Friday's signing of Jose Mesa, they got that — and a man with a trial pending on weapons charges.

Mesa, acquitted several years ago of rape and theft, agreed Friday to a $6.8 million, two-year contract.

Stars shut out Red Wings

DETROIT (AP) — Brenden Morrow scored with 3:57 left and Ed Belfour turned away 33 shots for his fourth shutout of the season as the Dallas Stars beat the Detroit Red Wings 1-0 Friday night.

The win extended the Stars' unbeaten streak at Joe Louis Arena to six games over the last three seasons, including winning the last five.

Morrow's fifth goal was set up by a pass from Jamie Langenbrunner.

TRADE: Velarde gets dealt to AL West rival

(From 1B)

After his conversation with Melvin, Velarde said that Friday's deal may not be the only big off-season transaction for the Rangers. Owner Tom Hicks seems willing to spend the money to go after some of baseball's top free agents.

"(Melvin) said they weren't through," Velarde said. "We'll know by this weekend if Ellis Burks will sign (to be Texas' designated hitter), and we may know by next week if (superstar free agent Alex) Rodriguez will sign. And (Melvin) is talking about (free agent pitchers Mike) Mussina or (Mike) Hampton. Mr. Hicks gave the go-ahead to make the moves to get back to championship-caliber play in Arlington."

If the Rangers were able to lure Rodriguez to play shortstop that would make a full middle infield with Rodriguez, Velarde and incumbent shortstop Royce Clayton. That brings some more uncertainty into Velarde's life.

"It's not 100 percent that I'm a Texas Ranger," Velarde said. "They may end up keeping Clayton and trading me."

Velarde said that would bother him if "they deal me off to a noncontending team," or if they traded him during the season. But now that he is a Texas Ranger, he like to stay a Texas Ranger.

And he wants a World Series ring.

"People have been telling me, 'You're going to be playing close to home,'" Velarde said, "But I put more weight on the team contending. This is the best of both worlds, that I'm playing for Texas. Yeah, it's close to home, but we also have the chance to do something special."

Even though Velarde was part of the team that won the division last year, and thereby kept Texas from winning it, he said that the Rangers were beaten as much by injuries as by other teams. Catcher Ivan Rodriguez, the MVP of the American League in 1999, missed half the season with a broken hand, and that was only one of the injuries that hurt the Rangers.

"They were hit with the injury bug last year, and it decimated the team," Velarde said. "It was no mistake that they won the division title three of the last four years. There's no reason we can't get back to that if everybody stays healthy. It wasn't a case of the Rangers being dethroned. They were playing undermanned, and when you do that, it's difficult to win."

At nearly 38, winning is what Velarde wants to do before he retires.

"I evaluate myself year-to-year," he said. "I see how my body feels — or, more than anything, it's my desire. If I get traded to a team, and I think I don't have chance to go to the World Series, I'll be perfectly satisfied with my career (and retire)."

Then Velarde retracts the word, "perfectly."

"I'd be satisfied with where I'm at," he said, "but I certainly would love to end it on a good note."

And Velarde, a Midland Lee product, certainly hasn't failed to notice that two Midland High products have won World Series in recent years: Mike Timlin with the Toronto Blue Jays and Mike Stanton with the Yankees.

"Two other Midlanders have won the World Series," he said. "Maybe I can make it a trifecta."

RANGER TRANSACTIONS: The Rangers gave up a pair of minor league pitchers to get Velarde: left-hander Ryan Cullen and right-hander Aaron Harang.

Harang, 22, was 13-5 with a 3.32 ERA in 28 games at Charlotte this year. He led the Florida State League in wins. Cullen, 20, was 6-6 with a 3.04 ERA and nine saves in 48 appearances with Savannah of the South Atlantic League.

Three other players — right-hander Danny Kolb, left-hander Justin Thompson, and outfielder Ruben Mateo — were activated from the 60-day disabled list.

Mustangs go for first 11-man TAPPS title game appearance

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

Midland Christian's season, so far, has been about breaking barriers. No longer are the Mustangs satisfied with just making an appearance in the playoffs. They want a state championship ring.

The 8-3 Mustangs hope to get one step closer to that state championship ring when they make their first Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools Class 4A semifinals appearance since 1996 when they face 9-2 Houston Second Baptist at 12:30 p.m. today in Groesbeck.

In order for the Mustangs to reach the Nov. 25 state championship game in Waco they are going to have to knock off the defending state champs.

"They're big, they're fast, and for the last four weeks I can't remember the last time we played a team with a line that was our size," said Midland Christian coach Greg McClendon about facing the Eagles. "We like our chances going in, but we're going to have to play good defense and we're going to have move the football against this bunch.

"I look at this game as another Stanton or (Denton) Liberty Christian game. This is a game where we're going to have to go execute and not turn the ball over like we did last week (in a 41-6 win over Dallas Bishop Dunne in the bi-district round). We're going to have to play better than the last couple of weeks."

Aside from the six turnovers against Bishop Dunne, it was a dominating performance from the Mustangs considering McClendon felt his team just, "did what we had to do to win."

"We had kind of lull in the second and third quarters and we played well in the first and fourth quarters," McClendon said. "Our defense played well for four quarters. (Bishop Dunne) was a very talented football team, and they were a lot bigger and faster than we were, so I give my football team a lot of credit."

The Eagles, which defeated Austin St. Michael's 38-7 in the bi-district round, are coached by Lawrence "Rock" Hutson, a coach who has spent time in West Texas. From 1965-74 he coached in the Odessa Permian system. A graduate from Littlefield High School, Hutson also has coached in the Panhandle and El Paso. With Hutson's background, he knows better than to discount West Texas kids.

"They are very, very talented," said Hutson about the Mustangs. "They really get after it good on defense. Offensively, they've got lots of weapons. Their running backs are outstanding, they have several good receivers, and we all know about their quarterback Jamie Beeghley and how good he is."

The Eagles are a run-oriented team with as many as five or six different backs getting carries. Hutson said he doesn't have any big "stat guys" but if there was one to watch for it would be running back Allen Page, who has more than 500 yards rushing for the season.

McClendon said his team's running game may also play a big role in today's contest.

"If we have to throw 26 times to win, we'll do that, but I would like to see us run the ball 35-40 times instead of 25 or 30," McClendon said. "So I think it's going to be key for (fullback) T.J. Midkiff and (tailback) Josh Gunter to have a big game this week."

Midkiff may not get many carries in a game but his blocks have been key for Gunter to rush for more than 1,000 yards this season. Last week, Gunter rushed for 116 yards and three touchdowns in the win over Bishop Dunne.

"We just have to play the way we know how to play," Gunter said. "(This week) I just have to do the best I know how to do and just hit the holes as fast as I can and run with a vengeance."

"This is going to be a tough game but if we stay focused and play for four quarters, we shouldn't have a problem," Midkiff said. "We feel like we're going all the way. If we don't, it won't be because we don't have the talent."

It won't be easy for the Mustangs against the defending state champs, but then nothing has been easy for a team which continues to defy the odds.

"This team has been all about breaking barriers this season," McClendon said. "This is just another barrier in front of us."

Correction: In last week's game story, Coy Riley should've been credited for the blocked punt against Bishop Dunne and not Jack Grist.

RANGERS: Greenwood advances

(From 1B)

his second touchdown pass of the night to Manny Munoz from four yards out, then hit Brandon Combs for a two-point conversion to cut Greenwood's lead to 28-20.

Kermit then attempted an onside kick which the Rangers recovered at their own 49-yard line. Greenwood made sure the Yellow Jackets didn't get a chance to tie it up, as they ran out the clock on the ground, getting down to Kermit's 1 before time expired.

"I'm proud of our kids," said Purser. "People might say we didn't play very well because of Kermit's record. But we won and this was a hard-fought game."

It was also a contrast in offensive styles from the start. Greenwood stuck to its tried and true path on the ground, running for 397 yards and completing only one pass for 11 yards, although it was a touchdown throw from Brandon Smith to Kevin Thornton in the fourth quarter which proved to be the difference.

By contrast, Kermit rode the arm of Jones, who was nearly perfect for a good portion of the game. Jones completed 19-of-25 passes for 278 yards and three touchdowns, and at times seemed to be playing a game of pitch and catch with his receivers.

"They did a lot of things we had no idea about," said Purser of Kermit's offense. "They threw us off-kilter on defense with the screen passes they threw."

But there wasn't a lot of surprise in what Greenwood did. After recovering a fumble at the Kermit 45 on the game's first possession, the Rangers took it in on four running plays, as Thornton scored the first of his three touchdowns from 10 yards out to make it 7-0.

Kermit cut it to 7-6 later in the quarter when on a fourth-and-13, Jones hit Munoz (who had 10 catches for 111 yards) for a score. But the game's biggest play perhaps came midway through the second quarter after the Rangers took over on their own 20 following a Kermit punt.

On the first play, Brandon Audas took a handoff, found a hole in the right side and cut back outside to sprint up the right sideline for an 80-yard score which gave the Rangers a 14-6 lead.

"We needed a big play real quick," said Audas, who led Greenwood's ground onslaught with 244 yards on 24 carries. "My line did a great job getting out there and sealing it off for me on the corner."

While that play might have given the Rangers a boost, Kermit remained resilient. The 2-9 record might not appear so great, but the Yellow Jackets established some pride.

"We turned over the ball 27 times in the first seven ball games and when we recovered from that we started playing well," said Kermit first year coach Glen Jones. "There's not many people who've stopped (Greenwood's running attack) all year and we really didn't do it."

Greenwood will play Sanford-Fritch either next Friday or Saturday, most likely in Lubbock.

Andrews beats Borger, 10-3

■ Bueno helps the Mustangs advance to the area round with late touchdown run.

By Lance Lahnert
MRT Correspondent

PLAINVIEW — Borger star senior running back Eron Haynes scooted 24 yards for a first down on the Bulldogs' first offensive play Friday night.

Haynes' run was the first of two first downs the Bulldogs would manage against an Andrews defense that played stingier than the Grinch before growing his new heart.

In a classic defensive war, Andrews shifty running back Jamie Bueno made a pair of key plays in the fourth period providing the punch for the Mustangs victory. Bueno scored the only touchdown of the night from one yard out giving Andrews a hard-fought 10-3 Class 4A Division II bi-district playoff win over gutsy Borger before 2,000 fans at Bulldog Stadium.

Borger (6-5) led 3-0 early in the game but never clicked on offense finishing with 61 total yards and the two first downs. Andrews, with eight players attacking the line of scrimmage, allowed Borger 53 rushing yards and one pass completion for eight yards.

"We knew they had a great defense," said Borger coach Craig Shores. "They showed it all year long. And we played a great defensive game."

Andrews won by managing just eight first downs and driving inside the Borger 20-yard line once. But that one time proved the difference in which team would advance to the area round next week against El Paso Parkland or Pecos.

In the fourth quarter, Andrews workhorse Bueno found a lane outside and returned a punt 23 yards to Borger's 17-yard line.

On first down, Bueno carried 16 yards to the one, just falling short of the goal-line. On the next play, Bueno scored standing off right tackle with 7:10 remaining.

Bueno's touchdown erased a 3-3 tie that had lasted for two quarters.

"You have to give all the credit to our defense," Bueno said. "They stopped them every time. I just tried to get as many yards as I could on the punt return."

Borger had three more possessions after Andrews' touchdown, but was stopped for minus seven yards because of two sacks.

Borger played much of the game without Haynes, who hurt an ankle in the Pampa game last week. Haynes ran eight times for 31 yards.

Borger's lone spark after Haynes' first run was a 47-yarder up the gut by junior Chad Holland. But the run was on the last play of the first half and reached just past midfield.

Borger's deepest penetration in the second half was the Andrews 42-yard line.

"Our kids fought hard and got after it," Shores said. "You hate to see a team lose after they played a great ballgame."

The first half ended 3-3 and set the tone for the run-oriented, defense-dominated game that 14 passes and two completions.

Andrews' offensive plan was simple. Give the ball to senior tailback Bueno over and over.

Bueno, owner of a speed burst capable of going the distance on any play, carried 35 times for 136 yards, getting them in a variety ways, mostly on stretch plays off tackle.

Bueno had 18 carries by halftime, only one of the runs more than six yards. The one run he got away on was a 23 yards and set up a Joe Barnes 37-yard field goal with 7:32 to play in the first half.

Borger's defense held Andrews in check for 185 offensive yards.

"Borger's defense was awesome," Bueno said. "They have two great linebackers. That defense was great and was tough to run against."

Haynes' 24-yard run on the first offensive play set up the Bulldogs at the Andrews 22-yard line for his team's lone score as Tim Hutton booted a 46-yard field goal less than five minutes into the game.

"It was a great defensive battle," Shores said. "We couldn't get things going and the punt return was critical. Hats off to Andrews."

Andrews will next play El Paso Parkland, who beat Pecos 31-23.

BUFFS: Stanton rushes for 281 yards

ing for holes and they were open for us."

It didn't take long for the Buffs to get started on offense. After Hull intercepted a pass from Sundown quarterback Marc Dupler on the Roughnecks' first drive of the game, the Buffs decided to give the Roughnecks a heavy dose of Hull. On a six-play drive, Hull carried the ball four times and scored on a 30-yard scamper.

In the second quarter, it was White's turn to score. But he didn't do it on offense, he did it on defense as he picked up a fumble by Dupler and returned it five yards for a TD and a 14-0 lead at the half for Stanton.

"That was just a good job by the pass rush, and I was just at the right place at the right time," said White, who also had 56 yards rushing, surpassing the 1,000 yard mark for the season along with Hull, who has more than 1,700 yards this season.

It really could've been much worse for Sundown at the break, but Stanton had a fumble of its own inside the Roughnecks' 20 and also missed a field goal attempt from 34 yards.

Stanton put the game away early in the second half on the first play from scrimmage. In what appeared to be a busted play, Hull took a pitch from quarterback Keith Cook, broke a few tackles at the line of scrimmage, then ran to his right, broke some more tackles at the Sundown 40 and scored after an electrifying 70-yard run.

"The way it started and where we pitched (the ball), it wasn't a busted play, but him coming back was," said Cotton about Hull's run. "That was a great running back making a great play."

"They (Roughnecks) played it well, and it was just an option play," said a winded Hull describing the 70-yard run that almost wasn't. "I took the pitch, and what can I say, I had some great blocking."

The only score the Stanton defense allowed was in the fourth quarter when Willis Hogan scored on a 1-yard plunge into the end zone. Other than that, the Stanton defense was solid on the night as it held the Roughnecks to just 161 total yards.

"Our defense was unbelievable tonight," Cotton said. "We really rose to the top and played well."

"The defense just stepped it up tonight and I was real proud of all of them," White said.

Hull added a 56-yard touchdown run in the fourth quarter to seal the victory for the Buffs.

LEE: Hand has solid night for Rebs

(From 1B)

Center Brad Stovall, who made a major block on Benson's TD off of a screen pass from Hand, said, "We knew San Angelo had played some teams in our district tough and we wanted to get on top of them in a hurry. We want to score every time we have the ball, and if we do that, we're going to win the game.

"San Angelo wanted to stop Cedric (Benson), but we threw some other things at them and had them off balance."

But it was the defense that had San Angelo's Southall and Stanley running for their very lives. Lee defensive end Dwight Washington was especially a major thorn for the Bobcats.

"We didn't have one single shutout last year and now we have three," Washington said. "You always want the shutout, but the major thing is to get the job done. We did that tonight."

For linebacker J.R. Brown, the shutout was just a reward for doing things right.

"We feel blessed with the shutout, but we had the mindset of taking care of responsibilities and things like a shutout came out of that."

Lee now moves to the area playoffs against El Paso Franklin, a 31-13 winner over El Paso Montwood. That game will be played Friday night at Memorial Stadium in Midland. Lee already owns a 44-7 win over Franklin in Midland this year and beat the Cougars in the state playoffs last year on the way to a Big School championship. The first two rounds, at least, are showing some familiar bricks in the road. Who knows what is in store over the course of the next few weeks? So far, the Rebels have punched out that voting card. They don't even know what a chad is.

TCU readies new deal for Franchione

FORT WORTH — A deal that would make Texas Christian's Dennis Franchione one of the highest-paid coaches in college football is being assembled by boosters and school officials.

Friday's editions of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, citing anonymous sources, reported that a seven-year deal paying $1 million per season could be presented to Franchione as early as next week.

The offer allegedly includes incentives and pay raises for his assistants and improvements to Amon Carter Stadium including luxury suites, a new press box, and the construction of an indoor practice facility.

"Certainly that means a lot to me that they are doing all they can," Franchione told the newspaper. "We all love to be wanted."

Franchione has refused to discuss speculation that he may be a top candidate to replace fired Arizona State coach Bruce Snyder. According to The Arizona Republic, former Dallas Cowboys and ASU quarterback Danny White are among the other candidates for the job.

Franchione, 136-65-2 overall, is under contract through 2005 and has a base salary in the $700,000-$900,000 range, the Star-Telegram reported. Incentives can push the annual value to about $1 million.

Tomlinson doesn't expect record day vs. UTEP

By Stephen Hawkins
AP Sports Writer

FORT WORTH — Texas Christian running back LaDainian Tomlinson doesn't even consider the possibility of another record 406-yard rushing game against Texas-El Paso.

"Nah, won't happen," Tomlinson says matter-of-factly.

Tomlinson knows that record game last year was one of those once-in-a-lifetime performances. And this is a different, much-motivated UTEP team the No. 15 Horned Frogs (8-1, 5-1 WAC) are playing Saturday.

"I'm pretty sure they have '406' in their locker room, in their meeting rooms. I expect them to play their best game, their hardest game on defense," he said. "There's really no telling what they'll do. They will be pumped up."

UTEP (8-2, 7-0) is ready to try to erase the humiliation of Tomlinson's record romp in a 52-24 loss in its season finale last year.

"It was the worst day of my life," said UTEP linebacker Trey Merkens. "If somebody does that to you, they're going to keep pounding you with it. But now we finally have a chance to shut everybody up."

The Miners also have a chance to win the outright Western Athletic Conference title that had seemed destined for the Frogs until their 27-24 loss at San Jose State two weeks ago.

TCU, which has already accepted a bid to play in the Mobile Alabama Bowl, must win its last two games to earn a share of the WAC. UTEP avoids sharing its first title by winning.

"We have accomplished two of our goals . . . won all of our home games and qualified for a bowl," said UTEP coach Gary Nord. "We have got half of the other one. We got the championship, but we have that 'co-' word. We are not real interested in that."

The Miners, despite a seven-game winning streak, are nearly two-touchdown underdogs. TCU has won 10 straight home games, and 13 of 14 games overall. The Frogs had the nation's longest winning streak at 12 before losing to San Jose.

While TCU is out of contention for a BCS bowl, Tomlinson still remains a strong candidate for the Heisman Trophy. He was first mentioned for college football's highest individual award after his record game against UTEP last year.

Trinity's Matt Midkiff (20) hands the ball off to Nathan Pirtle during the Chargers' bi-district playoff game against Watauga Harvest. Today, the Chargers play in the state semifinals in Junction.

Trinity tries to lock up third consecutive title game spot

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

For the last three years, it just wouldn't be right to mention the state semifinals without mentioning the Trinity Chargers.

During the previous two years, the Chargers made runs at the Texas Christian Athletic League six-man title, winning the crown in 1999. Now in 2000, the Chargers play 11-man football and again have a shot at reaching their third state championship game in a row if they can get past Katy Faith West Academy in the Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools Class 3A semifinal game being played at 2 p.m. today in Junction.

This may be the Chargers' toughest test to date as the 8-3 Eagles are loaded with talent led by three Division I prospects in quarterback Daniel Forrest (6-foot-3, 200 pounds), wide receiver Brandon Rice (6-3, 190) and tailback Taillevent Arceneaux (5-10, 185).

"We know it's going to be a tough game and we know that we have to play the best game we could possibly play," said Trinity senior quarterback Matt Midkiff, who threw for two touchdowns in last week's 20-6 win over Giddings State School in the quarterfinal round. "Our coaches have been doing a great job preparing us."

"They're the real thing," said Trinity coach John Wilkins about the Eagles. "But you should expect that once you get to the final four in any classification to come up against a pretty good team. They're the best team we'll play this year, definitely. Offensively, they're are the best team. Whether they're as strong defensively as Lee JV or Garden City, I don't know."

With the talent the Eagles possess, they will mix it up on offense. From the game films that Wilkins and his coaching staff have seen, the Eagles, who played as an independent last year, have run the ball 50 percent of the time and passed it 50 percent of the time behind an offensive line which averages 250 pounds per man. The Eagles are also on a seven-game win streak and have outscored their opponents by an average of 56-6.

"They've got some big old kids in there, so it's going to be hard to pressure on their quarterback," Wilkins said.

On defense, the Eagles will bring a 4-4 alignment, and they dare opponents to throw the football with their man-to-man coverage.

"We need to definitely control the clock and the ball, and we need to keep their offense off the field," Midkiff said.

Sounds like a lot to take in for the 9-2 Chargers but with a veteran like Wilkins at the helm and some battle-tested players, they don't feel at all intimidated about the task at hand.

"We feel good about our chances," Wilkins said. "I don't want to downplay our kids. We've got to play really well. We can't turn the ball over, we've got to win the kicking game, we've got to hopefully stop them and have some big plays offensively. If we can do that, then we'll be in the ballgame.

"We don't match up with them athlete-wise. We've got some good kids, but they've got some really great skill kids. But I'm not selling my kids short. If we just take advantage of the opportunities we get, then we'll have a chance."

"I feel good about it," said senior lineman Jeesoung Yi. "We've been working hard all week and this has been one of our best weeks in practice. Everyone has their mind set and they know that this is the semi-finals. The coaches have us well prepared. All we have to do is execute."

What may lie in Chargers' favor is the playoff experience a lot of these players have. Most of this year's team were a part of 1999 TCAL state championship.

"Coming off a state championship win gave us momentum this year," Yi said. "One of our goals is to win state this year, and in order to do that, we have to beat this team."

"We're excited about playing," Wilkins said. "We've taken some great leaps this year and this is just another challenge in front of us. I think our players are looking forward to this challenge."

Big Spring begins playoff march against 6-4 Canyon

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

Big Spring could be entering the playoffs on a stronger note than it is this weekend, but the Steers can't be blamed for seeing things through rose-colored glasses if they choose.

Despite coming off two straight losses to close out the regular season, Big Spring is still a bona fide playoff team, and it will have a chance to prove it today at 1 p.m. when it faces Canyon in a Class 4A Small School bi-district game at Lubbock's Lowrey Field.

In last week's final District 4-4A game, the Steers could have won a share of the district title, but they fell behind 25-0 against No. 9 Wolfforth Frenship. Still, Big Spring (6-4) battled back by dominating the second half only to lose 25-23.

"I think we played a good enough game against the No. 9 team in the state of Texas that we have some pride back," said Big Spring coach Dwight Butler. "We shut them out in the second half and that's big. It was a hard fought game and that's the type of game you have to have in the playoffs."

For five weeks, it had been easy sailing for the Steers in 4-4A, as they cruised to a 5-0 record and clinched a playoff spot with two weeks to go in the regular season. But things haven't gone so well the last two weeks, as Big Spring fell to Snyder 35-21 two weeks ago and got off to a bad start against Frenship.

Nonetheless, the grind of such a competitive district could pay dividends during the playoffs.

"There's been a lot of close games and we've played all sorts of teams," said Butler of his team's 4-4A experience. "The district schedule definitely helped us. We've seen it all."

Today, the Steers figure to see a team which looks a lot like them. Canyon prefers to move the ball on the ground, led by the pounding running of fullback Clete Andrews, who has run for 1,158 yards and 18 touchdowns.

"Their offensive line is bigger than our defensive line," said Butler. "That happens a lot with us, though, and it's not going to change the way we prepare."

Big Spring has also been an effective running team. Jason Woodruff, who moved from tailback to fullback, has run for 912 yards and 13 touchdowns even though he was hobbled for a couple of games with a bad knee. Jaroe Parnell has taken over at tailback and run for 646 yards and eight touchdowns

Woodruff is back at full strength, as are most of the other Steers, whom Butler says are about as healthy as they've been in a month. That could be as big a factor as any for Big Spring.

"Between the health and the mentality of these guys, we're in pretty good shape," said Butler of his team. "It makes for a potentially great game."

Both of these teams have gotten used to success over the last two seasons. This is the fourth straight playoff appearance for Big Spring, while Canyon (6-4) went 11-3 last season.

Blake Bryant is in his first year as head coach at Canyon after being an assistant at Temple. Bryant took over for Bill Patterson.

"They've got a good tradition and are really well-coached," said Bryant of Big Spring. "I think they take a lot of pride in the run defense. I think the key for us is to go right at them and stay patient."

Butler compares Canyon to Andrews and Plainview, a pair of 4-4A opponents whom the Steers have beaten this season. In the last two weeks, the Steers haven't been as successful in large part because Butler feels some of their wounds have been self-inflicted.

Against Frenship, Big Spring committed nine penalties, including several offensive false starts which stalled potential drives.

"We can't have the penalties we had last week," said Butler. "The discipline is definitely a factor. You've got to be smart and not make stupid mistakes."

What the Steers did against Frenship that they had done in several games which they won was play well in the second half. Big Spring has been an especially strong defensive team in the fourth quarter of games this season.

While that's definitely a positive, Butler knows that a strong second half alone isn't going to get his team far in the playoffs.

"We keep trying to preach to (the players) we have to play two halves and not just one," said Butler.

Nicaraguan says conversion led him to U.S.

■ Hispanic missioner to serve Spanish-speaking Episcopalians in Midland.

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

Spanish is the native language of the fastest growing segment of Texas' population these days, and the churches of Midland/Odessa are listening.

Already, there are services in Spanish for Hispanics whose denominational preferences include Catholic, Baptist, Church of Christ, United Methodist and Seventh Day Adventist. And as of last Sunday, the Episcopalians have joined the trend.

The Rev. Bernardo Martinez, Hispanic missioner for the Diocese of Northwest Texas, said Episcopal services in Spanish are planned for 6:30 p.m.Sundays at the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity in Midland until arrangements for a separate church can be finalized.

Martinez, who came from Nicaragua in 1990, said his own conversion experience was what led him eventually to come to the United States. He had been raised a Roman Catholic, but had been outside the church for two years. While walking the streets of a town in Nicaragua, he saw a small Anglican church and on a whim he went inside.

"I believe this is how God leads people to where they need to be," he said.

"That morning I was walking alone and I saw the church and I went in, not knowing what church it was. The name of the church was The Church of the Holy Trinity.

"The priest was so friendly, and after church, the (congregants) invited me to have coffee. They said 'We are Anglican,' and they explained that to me. At that time, there were only two (Episcopal) churches in Nicaragua."

Martinez, who had been a public school teacher and later taught adult education classes, said he became active with the church there, and later received an invitation from The Rt. Rev. Sam Hulsey, then bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Northwest Texas, to come to the United States and work. He could speak only minimal English.

"I worked in Abilene in 1990 and 1991, and in 1992, I went to Austin to study English," he said. "They have a wonderful program called 'Texas Intensive English' at the Seminary of the Southwest, and that's where I studied."

Martinez said the classes at Austin were a continuation of his seminary training which he had started in Honduras. He finished seminary in 1994, and was ordained

In thanksgiving

Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram
Ralph Gates, former pulpit minister at Fairmont Park Church of Christ, recently returned from Houstonwhere he was teated at M.D. Anderson for multiple myeloma. He will continue serving the church in other capacities.

Gates: 'I thank God everyday ... for the people of Midland'

Local minister is recovering from cancer

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

Fairmont Park Church of Christ evangelist Ralph Gates and his wife, Deana, were on their way home home from Houston's M.D. Anderson Hospital Sept. 23 and about 10 miles outside of town they began to notice yellow ribbons, hundreds of them, tied to the fence posts.

As they drove down Highway 158 into town, the ribbons continued, bright markers leading the way down Fairgrounds Road, marching across town to Midland Drive, Greenbrier Drive, Hyde Park and right down the street to end at the house where they live.

While Gates was undergoing treatment at M.D. Anderson, the oncologist caring for him received e-mail messages daily — despite having an e-mail address that is not published and is not identifiable — from people who had somehow learned that he would be caring for Ralph Gates. The messages were from people who said that they were praying for the patient and the caregivers.

During the year and a half that the Gateses have been dealing with cancer, they have received more than 7,000 cards, in addition to e-mails and phone calls, and the Gates family has been on the prayer lists of churches and houses of worship throughout Midland and the world, including Muslim and other non-Christian houses.

Yet, for Ralph and Deana Gates, this story is not about numbers, nor about cancer, nor even about the wonders of medical technology through which miracles are effected daily to give cancer survivors days and years of good living that would not have been possible years ago.

While they acknowledge the importance of numbers and cancer and technology in their ongoing story, they say that the real message they want to convey is thanksgiving. They agreed to an interview solely as a means to express their gratitude.

"We want to say thank you to the people of Midland," said Gates. "I can't say this without tears. I thank God every day, not only for my life, but for the people of Midland who have just been incredible — from the church to downtown to the Allison Cancer Center."

Gates, 52, Mrs. Gates, and their three children, Krista, Kevin and Kimberly, came to Midland in 1985 in answer to a call from the fledgling Fairmont Park Church of Christ. At that time the congregation was about 180 people.

He said his call to the ministry had come, not by means of an audible voice of God, but through Scripture and reason.

"I became a Christian in 1966. I was 18 years old, attending Pepperdine University," he explained. "I had studied with some people for a period of time, and I feel the Gospels have an invitation, as well as the Book of Acts, to people who respond to what God has provided.

"I had a desire to reach out to people,

Teen-agers to affirm their faith

■ Graduating members of the Young Women of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints to celebrate this evening.

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

ODESSA — Young women from Midland, Odessa, Alpine, Andrews, Big Lake, Big Spring, Fort Stockton, Monahans and Pecos will gather today at the Odessa Stake Center of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints to celebrate the life and ministry of Jesus Christ.

The area celebration is part of a world-wide event, in which Young Women of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints groups around the world stand before their families and affirm their common faith and values.

In most stakes the event will occur on Nov. 28, a date that the Odessa Stake Center could not accommodate.

The celebration will be the culmination of this year's program, built around the theme "Stand as a Witness."

The Young Women program operates as a sister program to the LDS Boy Scouts, according to Young Women stake president, Nicole Sturges, who explained that the LDS Church does not sponsor a Girl Scout troop.

"Young Women is spiritually based and teaches seven values, which are faith, divine nature, individual worth, knowledge, choice and accountability, good works and integrity," she said.

"One of the goals of each unit this year has been to consider how each of the Young Women values relates to Christ-like attributes."

Ms. Sturges said that throughout the year 2000, members of the Young Women have worked on individual projects they selected that would further their common goal to "Stand as a Witness."

LDS girls become eligible to join the Young Women at age 12, and usually complete the program at age 18, or whenever they graduate from high school.

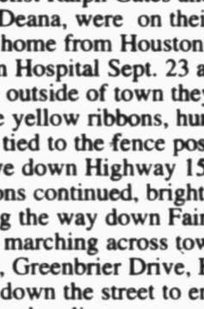

Upon leaving the Young Women, they may join the Relief Society, which is the LDS organization open to women. According to information published on the official LDS Web site, women do not figure in the church's priestly hierarchy. Ms. Sturges stated, however, that the structure of the Young Women follows the model of the church's organization. Young Women is headed by a "general presidency," which consists of a general president assisted by two counselors. They in turn preside over regional stake presidents, who each have two counselors.

Two Midlanders who will be celebrating tonight are Melanie Bushman, 16, a junior at Lee High School, and Sandy Snow, 16, a junior at Midland

LESLIE WILLIAMS

There's nothing like disaster to change the way people pray

Williams

Halloween night, my husband nearly fried. In the middle of arranging carpool for an oversized bunny and his friends, trying to feed three Cleopatras and one movie star something nutritious before they dined on candy corn and Snickers, and handing out fistfuls of pure glucose to all manner of creatures at the door, Stockton reached up to turn on the light in the den.

Not to mix metaphors here, but we had fireworks like the Fourth of July as sparks scattered on the rug, on the couch, and on Stockton's head and shoulders. To complete the chaos, in trying to find a candle for the clown pumpkin, my daughter discovered that we had our very own "Hot Springs" trickling from the hot water heater.

Have you ever noticed that life's disasters tend to cluster and clump? — for example, "When it rains, it pours," or "If it's not one thing, it's two," as Stockton's grandmother used to say. Personally, I think someone should impose order on the randomness and unpredictability of life. Here's a plan: We'll declare every first Monday of the month as house casualty day — for broken water hoses on the washing machine, blown fuses and the like. The second Tuesday will be reserved for body ailments, when that tickle in the throat blooms into strep or when football practice yields a broken finger. The third Wednesday will be saved for car repairs — transmission glitches, broken air conditioners, flat tires, and engine troubles. Every household would rotate so that there would be a steady stream of customers for doctors, electricians, plumbers and mechanics. That way we could all make plans accordingly and nobody would schedule a dinner party the same day that the disposal breaks and the kids throw up.

Wishful thinking.

Back to Halloween. Within an hour, we got the Cleopatras fed, the bunny escorted to a friend's house, the door answered, the light desparked, and the water heater turned off. I collapsed at the kitchen table with a friend. Musing on the $600 we would soon be spending on repairs, I tried to look on the bright side. "You know, after our car problems last June, we haven't had a single disaster until tonight. I've been approaching this wrong. I should have been more grateful than I was over the last several months."

My friend sighed, "Uh-oh."

"What?" I asked.

"I feel a column coming on."

What can I say? The more I thought about it, the more my friend was right. Once again, God had provided me with column material, just when I thought I'd run out of things to say. There's nothing like a disaster to upgrade the old attitude of gratitude — thanking God for all the things that didn't happen. When we pray this way, the list is endless. "Thank you that Stockton wasn't electrocuted. Thank you that nobody is bombing our city today. Thank you that my car didn't blow up. Thank you that the plumbing system didn't go kaplooey. Thank you that my body parts didn't completely deteriorate over night. Thank you that I woke up."

It's a whole new way of looking at unceasing prayer!

GATES: Minister thinks good will come from cancer and to meet not only their spiritual needs, but their social needs and their emotional needs as well. I evaluated all of that, and decided that God had given me the ability to communicate. I think that this is what he wants me to do."

Gates said it wasn't until 1976 that he decided to go to the School of Biblical Studies, taking a two-year sabbatical from Superior Farming, then a subsidiary of Superior Oil Co., in Bakersfield, Calif.

"I had always enjoyed being with people and I felt that there was a message to be shared through the Scripture.

"I had always wanted to go to a school where I could gain a greater knowledge of the Scripture."

At the end of the two-year period he went back into business, but in 1981, he accepted the invitation of the Church of Christ in Farwell to be their preacher. The next move was to Midland.

The Gates family and the Fairmont Park congregation found that they worked well together. By 1999, the congregation had grown to more than 1,100.

Gates said the church dealt with its burgeoning growth by thinking creatively.

"There are dynamics associated with large congregations that you do not experience with small congregations, and one of them is the tendency at times to not want to think small.

"But our philosophy is, the bigger you grow, the smaller you should get. We do this through Tender Loving Care (TLC) groups. We have literally divided the congregation up into bite-size chunks — manageable segments whereby people can meet in a home once a month, at times other than the regular services at the church building.

"Functionally speaking, if there is a death in the congregation, whatever TLC group they were in automatically mobilizes the congregation to assist the family financially, socially, emotionally. If Hospice is called in, we work with Hospice. It's not just dinner on the grounds, but working in a way that assists the family."

'I've said the most useful people in the kingdom of God are those who are teachable. God is teaching me through this episode.'
— Ralph Gates, evangelist at Fairmont Park Church of Christ, who has had a bone marrow transplant to treat multiple myeloma

Aside from the functioning of the TLC groups, Gates said the church is involved in an assortment of ministries. They do an extensive prison ministry at the county detention center and operate a food bank, and for the past seven years have been actively involved in a Romanian mission headquartered in the city of Ploiesti, where Gates has visited extensively.

It was while in Ploiesti about a year and a half ago that he experienced the back pain that signaled a major disruption in his life, and in the life of the Fairmont Park congregation.

"I'd finished a day's work and had gone back to my apartment there and had some supper and lay down on the couch, when I had an incredible pain in my lower back."

Gates said he at first thought it must be a gall bladder problem, since before leaving Midland he had consulted his doctor about some discomfort and the doctor had said it might be gall bladder. But when the pain lasted for 2 1/2 days, Gates caught the first available flight back home. Back in Midland, a month of testing revealed nothing definitive. Gates' doctor sent him to Scott and White in Temple, where he was diagnosed with multiple myeloma, a cancerous condition in which the plasma cells that aid the body in fighting infection go into an abnormal growth pattern.

After coming back to Midland and undergoing months of chemotherapy, Gates was told that his only option was to have a bone marrow transplant.

Gates said it was the beginning of an extremely trying time, not only for him and his family, but also for the Fairmont Park congregation.

"When any pastor or evangelist or minister has an illness of this type, it has an emotional impact on the congregation," he said. "What made this doubly difficult was that I was not the only one. We had five other people at the same time who had associative cancers. Only two have survived.

"Before going to Houston for the transplant, I went before the congregation and told them that there was too much uncertainty with my future, and that I thought the best thing I could do was to resign as pulpit minister, and let the Lord direct someone else to come.

"The elders have been very gracious to Deana and me. They said, 'We can use you in a variety of other ministries.' And their support and love and prayers have just been incredible throughout this entire year and a half."

Gates' transplant was autologous, meaning that his own bone marrow was harvested when he was as disease free as possible, and then re-injected to reproduce a new population of healthy blood cells.

Until the new marrow is established, however, the transplant recipient is extremely vulnerable to infection. Visitors must wear masks and sterile clothing, and even after being released from the hospital, the patient must continue to exercise caution.

It was October before he was able to go back to church.

Upon his return, the people of the congregation clapped, and the new pulpit minister, Steve Bailey, asked him to do "tag team preaching," and preach for 10 minutes.

Gates stepped up and immediately lightened the emotion-packed moment.

"I said, 'Can you imagine asking me to preach for 10 minutes?'" he said.

He is careful to stress that at present there is no cure for multiple myeloma, just suppression, and that at some point he will have more rough days ahead, but he thinks God is using the cancer for good.

"God did not cause this cancer. Satan caused it," he said. "There would be no illness if Satan had not been a part of original problems, and I'm not talking about original sin. But God can take those events and direct us in such a way that we have a positive impact on the lives of other individuals, including cancer patients.

"I look at Scripture, and I see the chief word is overcoming. We can look at it in the physical realm, or we can look at it in the spiritual realm. I don't overcome my spiritual problems in my strength, I overcome my spiritual problems in Christ's strength.

"Paul has said, 'It is no long I that live, but Christ Jesus that liveth in me, and that is where my strength comes from.' So I've got to believe that, but I also have to live it. I have to be an example of that lifestyle.

"I'm probably more a people person than a public speaker anyway, and I'm moving in a direction that I think I'm going to really enjoy. Now we see ourselves in evangelization, community outreach and fellowship groups within the congregation. Maybe we'll refine the TLC groups, and have more involvement with the families in the congregation.

"I've said the most useful people in the kingdom of God are those who are teachable. God is teaching me through this episode."

SERVE: Midland mission to emphasize baptism, communion

a deacon. Six months later, he was ordained a priest.

He started a Hispanic mission in Odessa, gathering converts among the unchurched by visiting house to house. At St. John's Episcopal Church in west Odessa he would conduct Masses in Spanish in between the 8 a.m. and the 11 a.m. English services. Soon the services in Spanish had begun to impact the parish in unexpected ways.

St. John's has been a racially and ethnically diverse parish for more than 35 years, and there were several lay readers who were fluent or conversant in Spanish.

After the addition of liturgy in Spanish, the 9 a.m. coffee hour began to take on a decidedly Latin flavor, and as time wore on, with growing numbers of congregants participating in the Spanish liturgy, it was obvious that the time had come to move.

They left St. John's and went to old downtown Odessa two blocks from the Salvation Army.

The church, named San Miguel Arcangel, is now the fastest growing parish in the Episcopal Diocese of Northwest Texas. Martinez said the congregation has grown from fewer than 40 when they started at St. John's to more than 200. But he was careful to point out that the growth seems explosive only in comparison to the relative growth of other established parishes.

"There are much larger churches in the diocese, but their congregations are already large, so the percentage (of growth) is smaller."

There were about 20 at the first service at Holy Trinity. Martinez said he plans to expand the Midland congregation in the same way that San Miguel Arcangel grew.

"We will develop a Bible study at the home of one of our families and that is the way we will begin to make changes in our lives.

"The people like the beautiful liturgy, and they like the friendship. We keep the apostolic tradition, and we keep the old sacraments. There is always the friendship. Friendship is what makes the men and women work together and they become like real brothers and sisters because they work together and help each other."

Martinez added that the Midland mission, which has not as yet been named, will emphasize baptism and communion.

"If you've been baptized, you can have the rest of the sacraments, the weddings, the communion. Baptism and communion are the most important. They make everything else available."

The Episcopal liturgy in Spanish is at the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, 1412 W. Illinois Ave. 6:30 p.m. Sundays. For more information, or for information about San Miguel Arcangel, call the Rev. Bernardo Martinez at 362-7519.

Mark Spellman, Pastor
...that the grace...may cause the giving of thanks to abound to the glory of God.
2 Cor. 4:15
Thanksgiving has come to mean a vacation from work or school. To the merchants, Thanksgiving signals the official beginning of the Christmas season. It's a time we gather around a table laden with turkey and dressing and all the trimmings. Some might briefly remember a day in 1623 when only 52 of the original 102 settlers we call "Pilgrims" gathered together on that rocky New England coast and with approximately 90 Indians prepared their meager harvest.
Have we come so far in 400 years that we have forgotten the real reason we gather together this coming Thursday?
God's generosity toward us should reproduce in us a generosity toward others. As the farmer must throw away his seed in order to reap a harvest, so we must give in order to receive. We can't experience the abundance of God's blessing by holding on to worldly things. Our hands must be empty as we approach God's throne of grace. Acknowledging that every good and perfect gift comes from above ought to bring us a new sense of sharing.
As we approach Him who gives abundantly, experiencing His abundant blessing our eyes must be on the one who abundantly gave of Himself ... God's indescribable gift, Jesus Christ.
It is through faith and trust in God's gift to us, that we are able to enjoy wonderful spiritual blessings that far outweigh any of the material possessions we might have. As we turn our eyes away from ourselves and to the Cross of Christ everything is put into perspective. Others become more important and opportunities to share God's goodness in us pour through us.
Thanksgiving ought to be a reminder to us all that we are citizens of a country founded by people of great courage and faith in the One True God. But as believers, trusting in Jesus Christ, we have an even greater citizenship - a heavenly one - which is founded on the eternal promises of a gracious God.
May our motivation for 'giving - thanks' be based on how God has given to us - abundantly and freely. May our focus this Thanksgiving be upon the one who is the reason we are so abundantly blessed. May our lives overflow with 'Thanks-Giving' as we share God's grace with others. To God be the glory!
We invite you to come worship with us each Lord's Day at 10:50 a.m. where we celebrate God's graciously giving to us through Jesus Christ His Son.

Arafat calls for halt to gunfire from Palestinian areas

By Dina Kraft
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Yasser Arafat ordered Palestinian gunmen to stop shooting at Israelis from areas under his control Friday in what appeared to be an effort to halt return fire that could hurt Palestinian civilians.

It was not clear whether Arafat's call also was a step toward a full-fledged truce that would bring an end to nearly two months of violence. In new confrontations Friday, six Palestinians were killed by gunfire.

Responding to Arafat's call, Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak said, "words are not enough."

Arafat's appeal Friday was his first public statement of the need to end the shooting. Israel and the United States have demanded that Arafat make a clear statement to his people to halt the fire. Israel has made cessation of the violence a condition for returning to peace talks.

The appeal comes amid growing complaints by Palestinians living in areas caught in the cross fire that more must be done to halt the shooting. A number of Palestinian bystanders have been wounded in gunbattles; on Wednesday a resident of the West Bank town of Beit Jalla was killed by Israeli return fire.

In a statement that was aired on Palestinian television and radio stations, Arafat said the Palestinian Authority was doing all it could to put an end to the gunfire.

Palestinians take cover as they try to protect themselves from tear gas during clashes with Israeli soldiers guarding the Gush Katif settlements near Khan Yunis in the southern part of the Gaza Strip, Friday.

"We are trying our best to get our people to stop shooting" from Palestinian-controlled areas, Arafat said. "There are orders from the Palestinian security council to stop shooting."

Under the peace agreements, the West Bank and Gaza Strip were broken into three areas that gave the Palestinians varying degrees of control. The Palestinians control the Palestinian police and have full authority in Area A but have to share security control in Area B. Israel maintains full control in Area C.

Most of the shooting has come from Area A districts, which cover 18 percent of the West Bank and Gaza. The majority of Palestinians live in places under Area A status.

Israeli army officials said Arafat's statement falls short because it does not direct Palestinians to end the gunfire everywhere. This week, four Israelis were killed in shooting ambushes in areas where Israel is in charge of security. Such ambushes would not be banned under Arafat's decree.

The weeks of violence have left 230 people dead, the vast majority of them Palestinians. Fighting continued throughout the region Friday.

Barak said Friday that he plans to continue what he terms a policy of restraint in dealing with the crisis, saying the chance to resume peace talks will only come if the country "does not lose its cool."

"On the one hand we won't be dragged into adventures, but on other hand we won't let it appear that we are surrendering," Barak said in an interview with Israel Television.

Shortly after Arafat's call to halt the shooting, gunfire came from the Palestinian-controlled town of Ramallah in the West Bank, directed at nearby Israeli positions. An Israeli tank shelled an empty building. The Voice of Palestine radio said there were no injuries.

Among the deaths Friday was a Palestinian killed in a clash near the West Bank city of Qalqilya. Hospital doctors said he was hit by live ammunition. The Israeli military said soldiers did not fire live bullets in the clashes.

Elsewhere in the West Bank, two Palestinian teen-agers were killed during clashes. In Hebron, a 14-year-old was shot in the head by a live bullet and south of Hebron in Halul village, a 16-year-old was shot in the chest by live fire, hospital officials said.

In Karni, in the southern Gaza Strip, a 17-year-old was shot to death during clashes, according to hospital officials there.

Also Friday, near the West Bank town of Jericho, Israeli commandos opened fire on Palestinian policemen, killing two. The army said their forces were responding to Palestinian fire. However, the Palestinian police said the Israeli shooting was unprovoked.

Crown prince says kingdom ready to supply oil markets as needed

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Saudi Arabia is ready to supply oil markets when needed, the kingdom's crown prince said Friday at the opening of an energy summit in which oil producers and consumers will discuss ways of ensuring market stability.

OPEC oil ministers, representatives from nearly 50 countries and officials from the European Union, the World Bank and other international institutions are attending the seventh International Energy Forum, which lasts until Sunday.

Saudi officials have said the aim of the three-day forum is to establish communication channels and prevent any disagreements between exporting and consuming countries.

In his opening speech, Saudi Crown Prince Abdullah said his country acknowledges the responsibility it holds as the world's largest oil producer and wants to do all it can to establish stability for both producers and consumers. The kingdom is the only OPEC producer with excess capacity of about 1.5 million barrels a day.

Earlier this week, OPEC declined to rise oil production levels, though it has initiated hikes four other times this year.

Abdullah reiterated Saudi Arabia's readiness to "ensure the continuity of oil supplies required for world economic growth and to increase its production levels if needed by the market."

But the crown prince added that producers alone are not responsible for what happens to prices in the market and that consumers should also play their part.

"We are concerned as more calls are made to discriminate against oil, or when doubt is cast on the continuity of its supply," said the prince. "It is worrying to us when we are blamed for the rise of oil prices to the final consumers."

Oil prices that have soared to over $30 a barrel have sparked protests in consumer countries, most notably in Europe.

In trading Friday, spot month crude prices on the New York Mercantile Exchange rose 33 cents to $35.45. In London, Brent crude rose 31 cents to $33.08.

O'Donnell to launch new magazine next spring: Rosie's McCall's

NEW YORK (AP) — In the beginning, there was Martha. Then came Oprah, and now Rosie.

Rosie O'Donnell became the latest star to expand her media reach with a deal to relaunch the 125-year-old women's magazine McCall's. O'Donnell will become editorial director of Rosie's McCall's, to hit newsstands next spring.

The boisterous talk show host announced the joint venture between her production company, KidRo Productions, and McCall's publisher Gruner and Jahr on Thursday. Financial terms were not disclosed.

O'Donnell said the new McCall's would be "less spiritual than Oprah's magazine, more pragmatic than Martha Stewart's, and with my annoying, Democratic political agenda somewhere in the middle."

O: The Oprah Magazine has become a hit since being launched this summer, while Stewart has built a thriving media portfolio with magazines, TV shows, books, radio programs and a Web site.

O'Donnell has the advantage of joining an already successful magazine with a circulation of 4.2 million.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Former White House press secretary Mike McCurry is joining the Internet gold rush.

McCurry, 46, will become chief executive of Grassroots.com, a Web site that provides services for political activists.

"I'm a big believer that the Internet is going to reinvent politics," McCurry said. "Instead of citizens screaming at their television, they can do something online."

McCurry joined the San Francisco-based company's board of directors in July. He replaces interim chief executive and cofounder Craig Johnson.

McCurry left President Clinton's press office in 1998 and became president of Public Strategies Group, a communications consulting firm.

NEW YORK (AP) — Attorney General Janet Reno said she is still not sure if she did the right thing in the 1993 siege at Waco.

"Harry Truman said that doing the right thing is a lot easier than knowing what it is," she said in Sunday's Parade magazine. "And I've tried to prepare myself to do the right things. I will let others judge as to whether I have succeeded as time goes by and there's a more objective view."

Reno, who has Parkinson's disease and is the first female attorney general, said she will probably write a book when she leaves office.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dennis Hopper will lead a star-studded procession as grand marshal of this month's Hollywood Christmas Parade.

"It's an honor to be grand marshal and to share this wonderful opportunity with my 10-year-old son Henry. This is a great time of year to give thanks and look forward to Christmas and Hanukkah," the "Easy Rider" star said.

For only the second time in its 69 years, the parade will feature a junior grand marshal, teen-age "Malcolm in the Middle" star Frankie Muniz. The Olsen twins, Mary Kate and Ashley, were the only other junior marshals.

The Nov. 26 parade down Hollywood and Sunset boulevards and Vine Street will also give Legends of Hollywood Awards to Mickey Rooney, Sid Caesar and Casey Kasem.

MACON, Ga. (AP) — "Leave It to Beaver" star Jerry Mathers says doctors offered him a stark choice when he was diagnosed with diabetes — control his eating habits or die of poor health in only a few years.

"I had been living the good life," said the 52-year-old Mathers, known to millions as Beaver Cleaver from the 1950s TV series. "I was going out to eat all the time and was up to about 225 pounds."

Five years later, Mathers said his blood sugar and blood pressure readings are near normal and he has slimmed down to 168 pounds.

Now he hopes to help others and will speak at a Macon health festival.

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Dick Clark's got something new planned for New Year's.

For a 29th consecutive year, Clark will be in New York's Times Square hosting "Dick Clark's Rockin' Eve." But this time, ABC has added two hours to the countdown-to-midnight broadcast.

Instead of the usual 90 minutes, the show will run 3 1/2 hours and creep into prime time.

"It gives us the opportunity to present many more musical performances and to bring some elements to the show that we have never featured," Clark said Thursday. Clark is the show's executive producer.

During the special's prime-time hour, Clark will be at his usual Times Square post, but for the first time will be joined by correspondents covering activities on the streets of New York. There will also be performances from Walt Disney World.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Nov. 18, 2000:

Take a hard look at your long-term goals. As a result, how you handle your hassles will change. Friendship plays a significant role in your life. You will network and spread your wings. You also might get behind an important cause. Often, you don't see limits but a partner or associate does. Understand that everyone has different perceptions. If you are single, your budding social life offers opportunities to meet new people. Network. If you are attached, it is OK that you both don't always see eye to eye. VIRGO remains a steady friend.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Another might challenge your ideas while not intending to upset you. You have wildness in your core right now, but finances could crimp your style. You might want to re-evaluate your decisions. Talk about ideas to alleviate a problem. Tonight: Not everything needs to be expensive.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Move past an immediate problem involving others and your domestic life. You know how to seesaw. You'll opt to take a solid action when you feel more assured. Allow more creativity and imagination into your interactions with a loved one. You don't always have to be responsible. Tonight: Lighten up the mood.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ A conversation points to change and perhaps loosening up some. You might want to think about your choices in a domestic matter. Whether someone agrees with you might not be important. Anchor on priorities, no matter what goes on. Family first. Tonight: Out and about.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Expenses could go overboard, and you might have a difficult time pleasing a family member. Discuss with someone what he expects and wants. Join friends. A serious talk might not lighten the mood, but it will set the record straight. Tonight: Dinner out.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Your personality draws someone out. This person might be unusually touchy or difficult. Consider spending, and don't do anything you might regret. Others see a financial issue differently than you. You might want to discuss limits with another. If tired, cancel plans. Tonight: Do what feels right.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ Though you might want to lie back in the morning, take a strong action in the afternoon. A change might be suitable and appropriate. Do what you want on this day off. Reach out for someone at a distance. This person appreciates your good news. Tonight: Do your thing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Use the morning to pursue a long-term goal. Make a must appearance. Get together with a special relative. Use the afternoon to unwind. You might be happiest with one special friend or loved one. Tonight: Vanish while you can.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Others depend on you. Consider yourself fortunate to be able to meet another's request. Get together with others and socialize in the afternoon. A loved one might not be up for visiting. That's OK, as everyone has different energy levels. Tonight: Where your friends are.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Others contact you. Reach out for another and touch base with loved ones. Tension builds. Find a good outlet for mental and physical stress. You might want to invite a friend to take a drive, but be willing to say no to a request. Tonight: Others look to you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ One-on-one relating with a loved one is highlighted. Suggest a drive to the country or another favorite type of getaway, but realize that this person might be difficult and not interested in what you think is fun. Tonight: Opt for different.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ You find that others might be testy at best or downright difficult. You could get caught up in a domestic disagreement. Let go of the issue and remember how much you value this person. Tonight: Let good feelings flow.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ Understand that you could be unusually negative. Relax about what is happening. You also might be tired of all work and no play. Lighten up and allow a loved one to lure you into fun. You don't need to be somber, even though a serious item might be on the table for discussion. Tonight: Accept an invitation.

Clinton tells Vietnam that old enemies are bound by 'shared suffering'

By Terence Hunt
Associated Press

HANOI, Vietnam — Moving beyond a painful past, President Clinton encouraged Vietnam to become a more open society Friday and said of the two nations' warring history: "We must not forget it but we must not be controlled by it."

In a city rebuilt after American bombing, Vietnamese President Tran Duc Luong welcomed the prospect of "immense" cooperation between the old enemies, and thousands greeted Clinton with great curiosity and some excitement.

Clinton visits a rice paddy Saturday where searchers are looking for remains from the downing of a U.S. warplane 33 years ago.

Vietnamese leaders welcomed the prospects for greater cooperation between the two nations but were cool to his measured call for greater freedoms.

Clinton said that guaranteeing the right to religious worship and political dissent builds confidence in the fairness of institutions. Vietnamese officials did not agree, saying that they have different interpretations of human rights, according to Clinton's national security adviser, Sandy Berger.

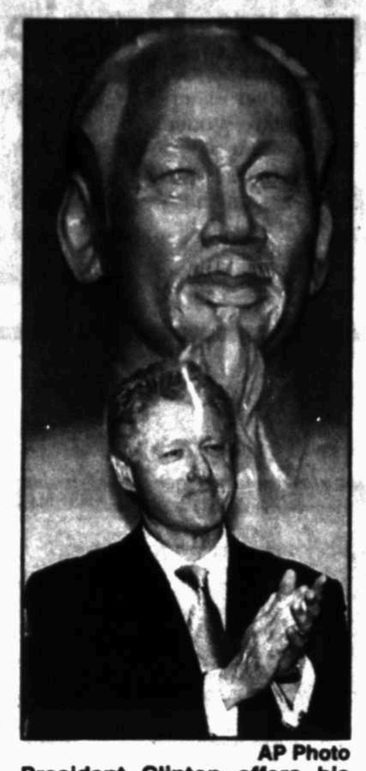

Clinton was the first American president to visit Hanoi, an enemy capital during the Vietnam War, which ended 25 years ago with a communist victory over U.S.-backed forces.

Earlier he presented 350,000 pages of documents about battle dates and locations, along with medical records, to help Hanoi determine the fate of 300,000 missing Vietnamese.

The president promised a million more pages of documents by the end of the year. Clinton praised Vietnam for its help in trying to account for 1,498 missing Americans.

"No two nations have ever before done the things we are doing together to find the missing from the Vietnam conflict," Clinton said.

Thousands of curious onlookers watched and occasionally waved as Clinton's motorcade rode along streets usually teeming with motorcycles and bikes. There was an embarrassing glitch when the president spoke at Vietnam National University to urge a more open society and economy, along with greater freedom and human rights.

President Clinton offers his applause during a signing ceremony while standing under a bust of former revolutionary leader Ho Chi Minh during official welcoming ceremonies at the Presidential Palace Friday in Hanoi. Clinton's visit marks the first time a U. S. president has visited Vietnam since 1969.

Students stirred restlessly during his remarks, broadcast on live television, and some removed their translation headsets. White House officials said later that the translator assigned by the U.S. Embassy spoke in a southern dialect that was hard to understand in the north.

"In our experience, guaranteeing the right to religious worship and the right to political dissent does not threaten the stability of a society," Clinton said, picking his words carefully.

"In our experience, young people are much more likely to have confidence in their future if they have a say in shaping it, in choosing their governmental leaders and having a government that is accountable to those it serves."

But he said: "Only you can decide how to weave individual liberties and human rights into the rich and strong fabric of Vietnamese national identity."

At the MIA recovery mission that Clinton was visiting Saturday, Vietnamese workers haul bucket after bucket of mud from a suspected crash crater and force it through mesh screens. American experts are combing the debris for any particle of human remains.

The site is where Air Force Capt. Lawrence G. Evert, of Cody, Wyo., is believed to have crashed in an F-105 fighter-bomber on Nov. 8, 1967. He was flying one of four planes in a bombing raid on a railroad bridge 17 miles northwest of Hanoi.

"I'm hit hard," Evert exclaimed in his last radio transmission. Witnesses said his plane was downed by anti-aircraft fire. Wreckage is buried deep in thick clay, complicating the recovery. It is one of six sites currently being excavated in Vietnam.

Clinton's visit was meant to underscore the administration's commitment to accounting for as many war dead as possible and to thank the communist government for its cooperation. During Clinton's presidency, 283 missing servicemen have been accounted for — nearly half the total accounted for since 1973, when U.S. troops completed their withdrawal and the last known POWs were sent home.

The president said Vietnam's cooperation on the MIA issue was essential. "Vietnam's willingness to help us return the remains of our fallen servicemen to their families has been the biggest boost to improve ties," he said.

Clinton said that as a result of the MIA efforts, the United States decided to support international lending to Vietnam, resume trade, establish diplomatic relations and reach a pivotal trade agreement.

The president met separately with Luong and Prime Minister Phan Van Khai. They spoke about the painful legacy of the war, such as missing servicemen, unexploded ordnance and the use of the toxic defoliant Agent Orange, Berger said.

Clinton pledged to give Vietnam a computer system with information on where Agent Orange "may have been stored or present during the war," Berger said.

In his address to students, Clinton did not mention his youthful protests against the war or efforts to avoid the draft. The war claimed 3 million Vietnamese and 58,000 American lives, and Clinton praised the "brave soldiers and civilians" on both sides.

"This shared suffering has given our countries a relationship unlike any other," the president said.

He said it links the 1 million Americans of Vietnamese ancestry, the 3 million U.S. veterans and others who served during the conflict, and "are forever connected to your country."

Clinton said Vietnamese cooperation in tracing missing Americans made possible the resumption of trade in 1994, of diplomatic relations in 1995, and a new trade agreement in 2000.

Clinton said, "Let us acknowledge our importance to one another. Let us continue to help each other heal the wounds of war" by embracing a spirit of reconciliation.

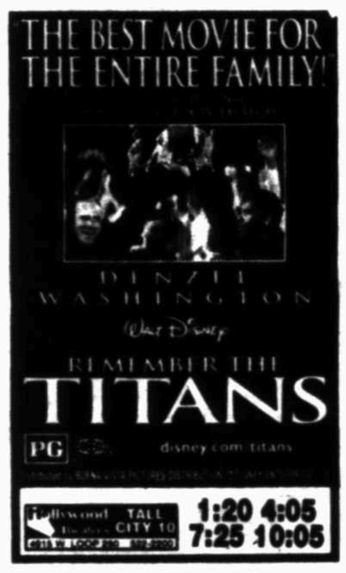

Late Saturday, Clinton will fly to Ho Chi Minh City, known as Saigon until the communist takeover. He will speak Sunday to Vietnamese in their 20s and 30s working in business, government, academia, the media and the arts.

Kimono industry struggles to keep cultural icon alive

By Ginny Parker
Associated Press

TOKYO — For everyone, it's a struggle. The women twist and strain, wrestling with pieces of folded fabric and lengths of cord. "Ouch!" says one. "It's hot in here," complains another.

Beautiful but expensive, charming but impractical. The kimono may be a symbol of Japanese culture, but it is far from the foundation of the nation's wardrobe. A dwindling number of people even own one. Fewer still know the proper way to put one on.

"My mother could do this in 30 minutes," said a frustrated Kaoru Nagami, 43. It took her kimono class three times that long, even with a teacher's gentle prodding and diagrams on a dry-erase board.

A kimono is more than just a robe cinched at the waist. It typically has over a dozen parts — from layers of undergarments to a stiff sash over three yards long — and putting it all together is a feat that requires physical dexterity and hours of practice.

Most Japanese women don't even try.

A slumping economy and fewer occasions to wear the kimono have relegated it to a role something like that of the tuxedo or evening gown in the West. And young Japanese lean toward English lessons or hip-hop dance rather than kimono instruction that once was considered de rigueur.

Japan's Ministry of International Trade and Industry calls the kimono business "seriously depressed." Between 1990 and 1998, it says, sales of the garment fell nearly 60 percent.

Manufacturers are responding with various schemes — kimono parties, kimono vacations, kimono classes. Retailers are dispatching professionals to homes to help people don their purchase. New designs feature modern touches like zippers, velcro or wash-and-wear polyester.

"We have to make the kimono fit today's lifestyle," said Eiji Ohashi, who runs Shinso Ohashi, a company specializing in easy to wear, affordable kimonos. "People have to break some of the old rules."

Those rules are numerous, as students of the kimono soon discover.

Certain seasons call for certain colors, and certain occasions for certain fabrics. There are certain ways to walk, sit, bow, and a properly worn kimono has no wrinkles, perfectly straight seams and an elaborately knotted sash — with certain shapes for certain ages, of course.

The price of a custom-made silk kimono comes close to that of a small car, in the thousands of dollars. A good sash, or "obi," can cost just as much or more.

The kimono wasn't always so inaccessible. Before World War II, it was an integral part of the day-to-day wardrobe of the average Japanese. People wore it as they wanted, Ohashi says, without worrying about being an "expert."

But when Western clothing became the norm in the postwar era, the garment turned into formal wear, worn mainly at weddings, graduations and other special occasions.

"The number of people who wear the kimono is dropping, and one reason is because there's no place to wear it," said Fumikazu Morimoto, a spokesman for mail-order firm Nissen, which has opened a Japanese-style salon where kimono-clad customers can study traditional arts and sip tea.

Another problem with the kimono is that it is still typically tailor-made, although most Japanese are used to buying clothes off-the-rack. To attract young customers, manufacturers are beginning to sell the garment ready-to-wear, and they're using materials and accessories that would raise eyebrows among purists.

Shinso Ohashi, for instance, makes an obi in a fluffy, parka-like material with a zipper pocket. The company also makes a sash that snaps easily around the waist — the Japanese equivalent of the clip-on tie — and a polyester kimono in traditional patterns that look just like the real thing.

Olive, a fashion magazine for teen-agers, recently featured models in the "yukata" — an inexpensive, cotton version of the traditional silk kimono, popular with young people — adorned with unorthodox accessories like cameo brooches, studded belts and high-heeled shoes.

On the annual Coming of Age Day — which is devoted to all Japanese turning 20 and one of the few chances students get to wear the kimono — trendsetting women attracted media attention for brazenly shortening its long skirt or pairing it with platform boots.

Takashi Kataoka, one of several Japanese fashion designers making kimono-inspired clothing, launched a collection last year that included skirts made from kimono fabric and dresses bound with an obi-like sash.

"Clothing is becoming so futuristic," he said. "I wanted to bring back a sense of old-style warmth."

Still, purists insist there's no substitute for the real thing. Each garment, they say, is a work of art, an heirloom that can be passed down from one generation to the next.

"Some businessmen try to sell the kimono cheaply and in bulk,' said Teiyu Ogura, who dyes kimono silk in Tokyo using a centuries-old technique. "In 10 years you'll be using it as a dust cloth.'

❹ Keyword Your Ad - Begin each ad with the name of the item, such as "Stove" or "Guitar" rather than "Kenmore" or "Gibson", "Ford 1997" instead of "1997 Ford", or by its key reference point, such as location or area in real estate ads.

Solid performer:

2001 Saturn SL2 Sedan

RoadWorthy!

By: Ken Chester, Jr.

It has been some ten years of the Saturn "experiment" that was originally launched by General Motors to prove that it could develop and market small cars profitably in the United States. Billing its self as a "different kind of car company," the nameplate won thousands of converts over the years – drawn to its low pressure, no hassle marketing policies and "customer first" ways of conducting business.

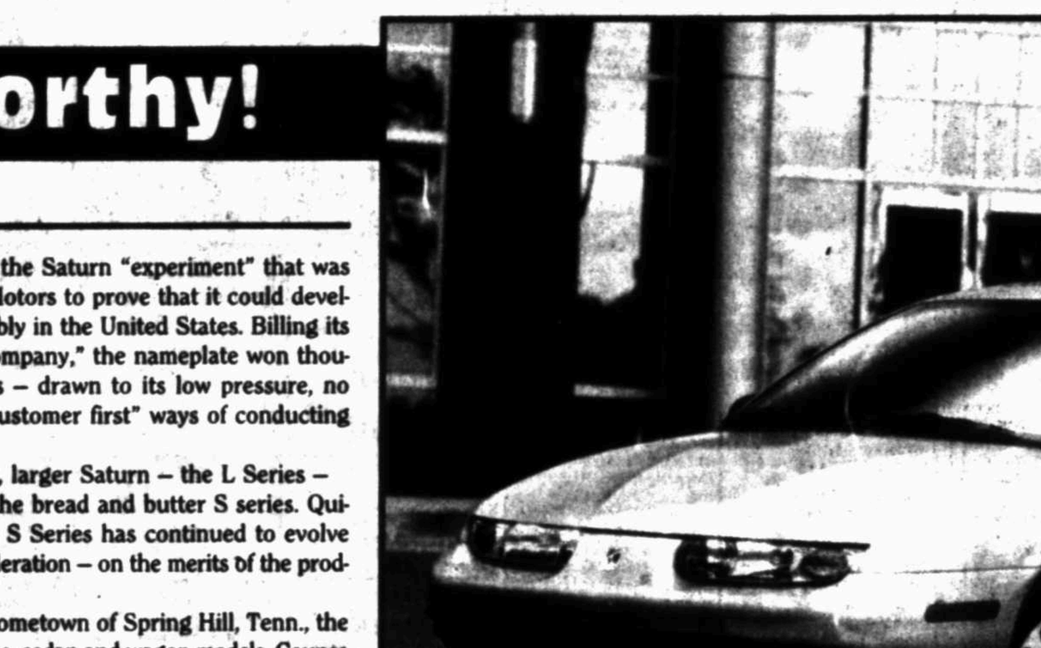

The recent launch of a second, larger Saturn – the L Series – has stolen the spotlight from the bread and butter S series. Quietly, consistently and totally, the S Series has continued to evolve into a competitor worthy of consideration – on the merits of the product alone.

Still built in the automaker's hometown of Spring Hill, Tenn., the Saturn S Series is available in coupe, sedan and wagon models. Coupes are marketed in SC1 and SC2 trim levels; sedans in SL, SL1 and SL2 trim levels and the wagon in just the SW2 trim.

Engine choices are two versions of the nameplate's mainstay 1.9L four-cylinder engine: the SOHC base motor for SL, SL1 and SC1 models and the spicy 16-valve DOHC version for SL2, SC2 and SW2 models. Buyers can choose either a smooth shifting five-speed manual or upgrade to the ($860) four-speed automatic (NA SL sedan).

On the road with the upscale SL2 sedan, the years of constant improvement seem to have paid off. The sedan feels "just right" – very comfortable at speed, with a good feel and balance I found to be very reassuring. Quiet, solid and predictable, the SL2 is a tower of calm at speed. Braking from speed is excellent – short and straight without ABS!

A four-wheel independent suspension featuring MacPherson struts and a stabilizer bar in the front are joined with a tri-link rear suspension layout with two unequal-length links to minimize lateral movement and a single longitudinal link that helps maintain proper fore/aft control.

Last year's redesign of the dashboard has cleaned up the interior layout of the cabin. Displays and controls are improved, with switches more convenient to use and locate. The driver enjoys very good outward visibility. The center console features an armrest that doubles as a deep storage area. Seating is firm and comfortable throughout the cabin. The rear seat will carry two adults. The rear 60/40 split seat back increases the utility of the trunk's 12.1 cubic feet of cargo area.

By the numbers

Engine performance numbers are as follow: SOHC engine – 100 hp at 5,000 rpm and 114 lb/ft of torque at 2,400 rpm; DOHC engine – 124 hp at 5,600 rpm and 122 lb/ft of torque at 4,800 rpm. Both versions of the 1.9L four-cylinder engine use regular unleaded gasoline. Underhood fluids are clearly marked and easily accessible.

Standard security/safety equipment includes: dual front airbag and daytime running lights. SC adds: alarm system with engine immobilizer. SC2 adds power door locks and remote keyless entry. Optional safety equipment includes: four-wheel anti-lock brakes with traction control ($495, fog lights ($170)(Std. SC2) and front head curtain airbags ($325).

The base Manufacturers Suggested Retail Price (MSRP) for the Saturn S Series starts from $10,570 for the SL sedan up to $15,150 for the SW2 wagon. Destination charge adds $465.
