Baseball great Mickey Mantle speaks to the media for the first time since his liver transplant.

The Mick's show

DALLAS — Looking thin and admitting he's weak, Mickey Mantle still put on a show Tuesday as he joked through most of his first public appearance since a liver transplant just over a month ago. Mantle, whose fling and watch hung loosely, turned serious several times during his half-hour news conference, almost always to give the warning that people shouldn't live the lifestyle he did and expect to get away with it. MOSCOW — Aides rush Boris Yeltsin to the hospital with "acute" heart trouble, renewing doubts about the 64-year-old president's health despite assurances that he remained active and in control. Yeltsin, the most powerful politician in Russia's young post-Soviet government, was taken to the Central Clinical Hospital with chest pains. Presidential spokesman Sergei Medvedev said doctors planned to keep him under observation for "the next several days." Page 2A

Council weighs expansion of city's recycling program

An expansion of the local recycling program — which could become a joint effort between the public and the private sector — was discussed by the City Council on Tuesday.

While current recycling efforts are slated to grow — with the help of a state grant — to include certain plastics and corrugated cardboard, a group of private investors have approached the city about an even greater expansion.

The private investors have proposed to collect all recyclable material except glass. Currently, through a self-sufficient program operated with the help of the city and Keep Midland Beautiful, about 200 tons of

Serbs overrun U.N. 'safe area,' shrug off airstrikes

Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Shredding the West's ragged lines of peacekeeping, Bosnian Serb rebels overran a U.N.-designated "safe area" Tuesday. They shrugged off a desperate NATO attempt to stop them with airstrikes and sent peacekeepers and thousands of refugees fleeing.

The capture of the eastern town of Srebrenica represented a direct assault on a cornerstone of the United Nations' tottering peace efforts. Preserving the safe areas, which include Sarajevo, has been U.N. peacekeepers' principal mission since they were established in 1993 as enclaves where civilians were to be spared from attack.

As Serb forces rolled in, Dutch peacekeepers abandoned a defensive line on the mostly Muslim city's southern limits and were trying to take up a

'Time to heal': Clinton offers Hanoi full ties

- President turns a once-reviled wartime foe into diplomatic partner despite criticism about accountability of POW/MIAs.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Two decades after the war that bitterly divided Americans and left 58,000 U.S. servicemen dead, President Clinton normalized relations with communist Vietnam Tuesday. He called it "a time to heal and a time to build."

Clinton's historic White House announcement was boycotted by the American Legion, the nation's largest veterans group, and the leading POW-MIA organization. They disputed Clinton's argument that Hanoi has made major strides toward a full accounting of missing Americans.

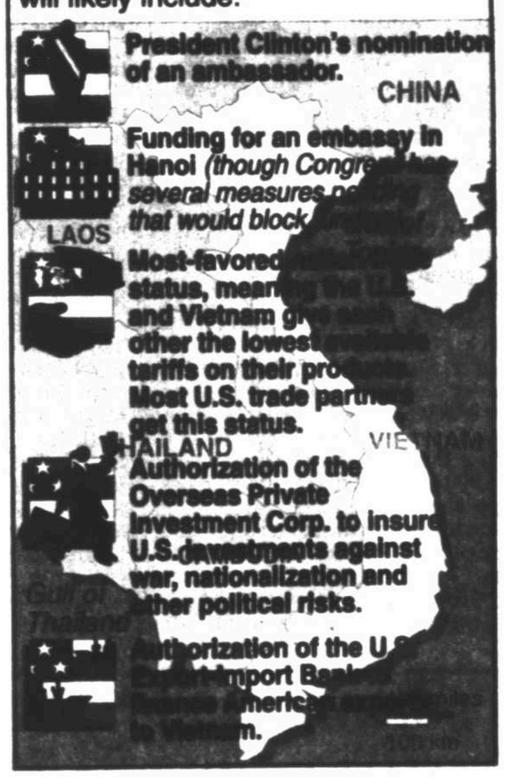

Key Republican leaders — including most contenders for the presidential nomination — also opposed the decision. "All signs point to Vietnam willfully withholding information which could resolve the fate of many Americans lost in the war," Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole said.

Clinton, however, argued that Hanoi "has taken important steps to help us resolve many cases" of the more than 2,200 Americans still listed as missing from the Indochi-

Poll unfurls 4-to-1 edge: It's a crime to harm flag

Cityline Community Pulse

From Staff Reports

By a margin of almost 4-1, Midlanders participating in this week's Community Pulse Poll think that desecrating the American flag should be a crime.

Last month, the House of Representatives approved a constitutional amendment that would allow states to make flag desecration a crime. The Senate is also expected to approve the same legislation.

Of the 169 callers, 124 felt burning, or otherwise destroying the flag, should be considered a criminal act.

"The flag is a symbol of Americans' faith and hope and glory," one caller said. "To see them burn flags and to see bathing suits and things made from flags, it's terrible. What is our country coming to? I'm a veteran. I honored the flag and others should honor it, too. It's a symbol of America's greatness. You don't see other countries desecrating their flags. Why should we be able to?"

"A true dedicated American would never consider burning the flag," another caller said. "I get perturbed, angry, upset about certain events or people in our country, yes; but burn our flag, never. Unless our country gets its

Simpson's defense testimony questions timeline of murders

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES – No dog wailed and nothing seemed wrong when a couple on a date strolled past Nicole Brown Simpson's condominium minutes after the time prosecutors believe Ms. Simpson was slain there, the pair testified Tuesday.

The two, who were on a blind date that night, were among a series of witnesses whose testimony Tuesday for O.J. Simpson raised questions about the prosecution's timeline for the killings of Ms. Simpson and Ronald Goldman.

Danny Mandel and Ellen Aaronson told jurors they didn't see any blood or bodies, nor did they see any sign of mayhem when they walked past Ms. Simpson's condominium at about 10:25 p.m., roughly 10 minutes after prosecution witnesses heard the telltale cries of a dog.

Waste-site protest hits hot trail

Following what could become "a radioactive waste trail," the Earth and Sky Women's Peace Caravan stopped in Midland Tuesday to protest nuclear waste and a proposed nuclear-waste dump near Sierra Blanca.

"We want to stop the production of radioactive waste in the United States," said Susan Lee, caravan organizer. "There is no known safe way of disposing radioactive waste and 70-85 percent of Texans are opposed to having a waste dump in Texas."

Ms. Lee said she began her caravan to protest the building of a proposed nuclear waste dump near Sierra Blanca, about 17 miles north of the Rio Grande River. The site would be a waste dump for Texas, Maine and Vermont.

"From the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant, which is south of Fort Worth, to this proposed site, would become a radioactive waste trail," Ms. Lee said. "Trucks car-

■ U.N. declines to lift sanctions on Iraq

UNITED NATIONS — Expressing unanimous doubt that Iraq has come clean about its program to develop biological weapons, the Security Council declined Tuesday to lift the economic sanctions it imposed after Iraq invaded Kuwait nearly five years ago.

Gerardo Martinez Blanco of Honduras, chairman of the Security Council this month, said there have been "no changes" in the sanctions imposed on Iraq in August 1990. Some other members of the Security Council expressed skepticism that Iraq would clear up enough questions to justify lifting sanctions when the next review comes due in September.

"Even with four years to think up a story, it has not yet told a story that is internally consistent," said Madeleine K. Albright, chief U.S. delegate to the United Nations.

When the gulf war ended, the Security Council cease-fire resolution of April 3, 1991 kept in place the trade embargo imposed on Iraq and imposed reviews of the embargo every 60 days and of Iraq's compliance with its obligations every 120 days. The reviews coincided Tuesday.

■ China claims Wu stole state secrets

BEIJING — American human rights activist Harry Wu illegally entered China and stole state secrets for use by foreign organizations, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said Tuesday.

Authorities will conduct more investigations to determine what state secrets he stole, and their findings will determine whether Wu's trial is public or secret, spokesman Shen Guofang said.

In China's judicial system, suspects are first detained, then formally arrested when evidence is deemed sufficient to support a criminal charge.

Prosecutors draw up an indictment after police conduct more investigations, a process that can take months.

Wu, who was born in China and served 19 years in prison camps before emigrating to the United States, was arrested June 19 trying to enter northwest China's Xinjiang region from Kazakhstan.

Wu has visited China several times to gather evidence on abuses committed in its vast network of forced labor farms and factories. His work helped the U.S. Customs Service identify Chinese goods made with forced labor.

Last year, Wu investigated the use of organs taken from executed prisoners for transplant operations.

On Saturday, he was formally arrested and accused of spying, a crime punishable by death.

■ Bombing kills 13 babies, agency says

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — The fiercest fighting in eight years raged for the third day Tuesday in northern Sri Lanka. The Red Cross said the fighting had killed 120 civilians, including 13 babies who died when the government bombed a church.

Some 10,000 government troops beat back an attack by the Tamil rebels, then resumed their offensive on the Jaffna Peninsula, a rebel stronghold. War planes bombed two rebel positions, but the military had no details.

Seven soldiers were killed and 36 wounded in Tuesday's fighting, said an army spokesman, Brig. Sarath Munasinghe. He said intercepted radio transmissions indicated the rebels had suffered heavy casualties.

The government offensive began Sunday. Munasinghe said 14 soldiers had died and 101 had been wounded since then. The military has said at least 11 rebels have been killed.

'Acute' heart trouble sends Yeltsin to hospital

■ Doctors plan to keep him under observation but he 'continues to fulfill his duties,' spokesman says.

Associated Press

MOSCOW — Boris Yeltsin was rushed to the Kremlin hospital with "acute" heart trouble Tuesday, renewing doubts about the 64-year-old president's health despite assurances that he remained active and in control.

Yeltsin, who alone has wielded immense power throughout Russia's chaotic post-Soviet period, was taken to the Central Clinical Hospital on Moscow's western outskirts early Tuesday with chest pains.

Presidential spokesman Sergei Medvedev said doctors planned to keep him under observation in the hospital, used by top government officials, for "the next several days."

Yeltsin "continues to fulfill his duties and does not think his schedule for next week will be changed," Medvedev said.

Medvedev issued frequent updates on Yeltsin's health. However, many Russians view such reports skeptically, given the Soviet legacy of hiding the obviously failing health of aged leaders. Critics seized on news of Yeltsin's illness as confirmation that his health problems are more serious than the Kremlin has let on.

"Our president doesn't govern Russia," said opposition lawmaker Viktor Ilyukhin, a Communist. He doubted the official diagnosis of heart disease, and alluded to rumors that Yeltsin is alcoholic: "My sources speak of an old illness that destroys the liver and kidneys."

Although Yeltsin's behavior has grown more erratic in recent years, the Kremlin has maintained that he is fit, while acknowledging that he suffers from back and heart trouble and takes medication for blood pressure.

Yeltsin continues to play tennis, but moves more stiffly and awkwardly these days. As late as 1993, he frequently waded into crowds to shake hands; now his public appearances are rare and formal.

His popularity has plummeted, especially since the outbreak of war seven months ago in Chechnya. But he remains a tough politician, who in recent weeks outmaneuvered lawmakers who wanted to oust his Cabinet.

At the same time, Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin, who would replace Yeltsin if the president were unable to serve, has risen in stature. Chernomyrdin's spokesman said he did not see any reason to take temporary power.

Early in the day, the Kremlin issued a two-sentence announcement saying Yeltsin had been hospitalized "in connection with acute ischemic heart disease."

Presidential spokesman Sergei Sidorov said Yeltsin was at home when he was stricken. The president is believed to spend most nights at his country dacha outside Moscow and travel to the Kremlin by motorcade on weekday mornings.

Medvedev later said in a statement that Yeltsin's initial examination showed "nothing serious has happened to him."

The chest pains subsided, Medvedev said, and "the patient is active. He gets up out of bed. There have been no recurrences of pain in recent hours."

Hospital officials refused comment.

American heart experts said the symptoms described in Medvedev's reports backed up the doctors' diagnosis. They said it was most likely a form of ischemic heart disease called unstable angina, a common affliction in which narrowing of arteries diminishes the blood supply to the heart.

American doctors said their Russian counterparts would probably treat it in the same way as in the United States — with drugs or with procedures that widen narrowed passages in arteries. In severe cases, bypass surgery is used to install new blood vessels.

"The problem can be caused by stress, high cholesterol, age or chronic high blood pressure," said Guram Arabidze of Moscow's Experimental Cardiology Institute.

Yeltsin told Time magazine in April that he was suffering from fluctuations in blood pressure, but said: "In general, I feel fine."

He was last seen in public at a soccer match Sunday, when he smiled and waved to the crowd.

Russia's first popularly elected president, Yeltsin has not said whether he will seek reelection when his five-year term expires next summer.

President Clinton, asked about Yeltsin's health by reporters in Washington, said "our latest report is that he seems to be resting well and feeling pretty good, and making some decisions from the hospital."

Deputy Prime Minister Sergei Shakhrai said he spoke to Yeltsin by phone Tuesday and "nothing threatens Boris Yeltsin's health." Shakhrai told the Interfax news agency, "The president is not turning over the reins of power to anyone."

Freed opposition leader in Burma urges compromise in her first public appearance

RANGOON, Burma (NYT) — Speaking to hundreds of rapturous supporters who had waited nearly six years for this moment, Aung San Suu Kyi called Tuesday for a new spirit of compromise between the democracy movement and the junta leaders who released her from house arrest this week.

Suu Kyi

Mrs. Suu Kyi, 50, the opposition leader and Nobel Peace Prize winner who was freed from confinement Monday, appeared before the public for the first time since July 1989.

She told the crowd gathered outside the gates of her dilapidated lakeside home that she would continue to fight for democracy in Burma.

"We will produce the form of government that the people want," she said to cheers from supporters who had been gathered here since dawn, at times choking off traffic on the busy road outside her home.

"But at the same time, we must not be reckless," she cautioned. "We will surely get to our destination if we join hands. We will not bear grudges against anybody else. We have to try to understand each other."

While the conciliatory tone of her remarks should delight the leaders of the Burmese junta, Mrs. Suu Kyi spent much of her first full day of freedom trying to revive the democracy movement that the generals had once sought to crush.

She met throughout the day and into the night with former colleagues from her political party, the National League for Democracy. Despite her detention, the party won a landslide victory in national elections in 1990, results that were later nullified by the military.

Mrs. Suu Kyi — the Oxford-educated daughter of Gen. Aung San, the assassinated soldier who is considered the father of modern Burma — was placed under house arrest on July 20, 1989, in the midst of a year-long crackdown on the democracy movement in which thousands of her supporters were killed.

Hundreds of her political allies remain in prison.

While Mrs. Suu Kyi repeatedly expressed gratitude Tuesday to the military for her release, she asked that foreign governments not rush to restore full diplomatic and trade ties with the junta.

The release of Mrs. Suu Kyi, which she described Tuesday as "completely unconditional," continued to draw praise from around the world.

Japan and several other countries suggested that they would quickly upgrade relations with Burma, which for years has been treated as an international pariah.

Rescue workers pull another survivor from rubble of collapsed store

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — For the two shopping mall saleswomen, the difference between life and death was just a few feet.

When the 500-store complex collapsed in a huge heap June 29, Yoo Ji-hwan dashed toward an exit. The next thing she knew, she awakened in the dark to find herself trapped in a pocket not even big enough to sit in and hemmed in by broken blocks of dangerously unstable concrete.

Twelve days later, she was found alive and surprisingly healthy, having survived on the drippings of rainwater. Just three feet away, the mangled body of her 20-year-old co-worker, Lee Suk-yong, was discovered in the rubble. The two were not close friends but knew each other.

"Another Miracle!" the national newspaper Chosun Ilbo blared in a banner headline trumpeting Tuesday's rescue.

"This proves that God exists," said one rescue worker.

To the delight of her mother, Yoo was dragged from her darkened tomb near where a 21-year-old man was pulled out alive Sunday. Her mother screamed deliriously from the rescue site, "She is alive! She is alive!" and then broke down in tears.

Yoo's father, sick and bedridden for three years, watched the rescue live on television.

The dramatic discovery of Yoo, a 19-year-old sales clerk at the Sampoong Department Store, transfixed the nation. She was the 26th person pulled alive from the debris since the June 29 collapse, one of Korea's worst peacetime disasters.

The death toll rose to 219 Tuesday with the discovery of 12 more bodies. About 220 remain missing and feared dead. Nine hundred people in the complex were hurt but survived.

Yoo said thoughts of her mother and rainwater that trickled into a blanket nearby was her salvation.

"I thought that I would be squeezed to death," Yoo told reporters of the concrete slabs that settled on top of her. "But I thought about my mother and didn't lose courage. Now, I want to go home and drink a glass of coffee with ice cubes in it."

Officials marveled at Yoo's good spirits. Trapped, she joked with rescuers about staying there a few more days and politely declined an offer to go out on a date, saying she is too young.

She even corrected one rescuer when he pronounced her name wrong.

Doctors said she was surprisingly fit.

"She is dehydrated and has a minor kidney problem and a scratch on her leg. Other than that, she is OK," said Kim In-chul, a doctor at St. Mary's Hospital.

Speaking to reporters from her hospital bed, Yoo said the scariest moment was when concrete slabs above slowly caved in, almost touching her face.

She said her courage was boosted by the noise of rescuers and their equipment that she began hearing a few days ago. Yoo said people nearby cried for help soon after the collapse, but the cries eventually died out.

After being pulled out, Yoo was carried away on a stretcher with her body wrapped in a pink blanket and her face covered with a yellow towel. She lightly lifted the towel to see her first daylight in 286 hours.

Yoo prior to her rescue handed up her sales uniform name plate through a hole. Television footage showed one of Yoo's feet, with manicured toenails, through the hole.

The disaster prompted President Kim Young-sam to declare a new war against corruption, calling it the root cause of the collapse.

Since Kim took office in 1993, more than 3,000 government officials, generals, educators and politicians have been arrested or reprimanded for corruption.

His government, however, has been criticized for failing to do enough to prevent a series of public works accidents. A major bridge in Seoul collapsed last October, killing 32 people. Two gas explosions this year killed 140.

Protestant, Catholic talks break down

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Talks between Protestants and Catholics on trying to keep the peace in Belfast on Northern Ireland's most divisive holiday broke down Tuesday.

The failure to come to an agreement about how to avoid violence on the Twelfth of July in Belfast set up a possible confrontation today between Protestant marchers and Catholic protesters.

At issue is the right of the Protestant Orangemen to lead a march celebrating British rule over the province through areas populated by Catholics — many of whom oppose British rule.

Despite the breakdown, the talks had been seen as a sign that times are slowly changing and that compromise should be favored over confrontation. Never before have the Orangemen negotiated with Catholics about their British flag-waving summer marches.

A minor success came Tuesday in Portadown, a pro-British Protestant town, when both sides permitted a quiet Orange Order march through a Catholic neighborhood.

WEATHER WATCH

Basin to simmer under searing sun

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the upper 90s and southeast winds 10-15 mph, according to a forecaster at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight should be clear with a low in the mid-60s.

Thursday should be mostly sunny with a high in the mid-90s.

After an overnight low of 65, Tuesday's high reached 98, compared to the record high for that date of 106 set in 1964. The record low was 42 set in 1947.

NATION

Thunderstorms spread along the East Coast on Tuesday with wind and locally heavy rain, and a heat wave continued over the center of the nation with readings topping the century mark.

Locally heavy thunderstorms drifted across southeastern Virginia and coastal North Carolina during the morning, with scattered cases of stiff wind breaking tree branches and power lines.

Three to 4 inches of rain fell at Wilson, N.C.

During the afternoon, thunderstorms moved quickly across the Florida Panhandle, giving much of the state heavy rain, and up the East Coast into Georgia and South Carolina.

Wind gusted to 85 mph at Bartow, Fla. The wind damaged 10 small planes at airports in Fort Lauderdale and Bartow. No injuries or deaths were reported.

A waterspout was reported five miles west of Longboat Key off the Sarasota-Bradenton, Fla., area.

Farther north, thunderstorms moved through part of Pennsylvania earlier in the day, with almost 3 inches of rain in Philadelphia.

Thunderstorms and showers were scattered through the Northeast during the early morning.

The heat wave over the middle of the country forced temperatures to 100 degrees and higher from Texas to the Dakotas.

By early afternoon, the hottest spot in the Lower 48 states was Kansas with readings of 102 at Hays and Hutchinson. One day earlier, Omaha, Neb., reached 100 for the first time in five years.

Ahead of the heat wave, a bubble of cool air slid to the southeast and Hollywood, Fla., cooled to a record low for the date of 69.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

City proposal would lower property taxes a tad

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A proposed city budget would lower the property tax rate a half-cent, while allowing for an increase in public safety service and park workers.

"It's not a big tax cut but it's a tax cut," Mayor Bobby Burns said. "We're in awfully good shape financially."

The proposed 1996 fiscal year budget will be filed in the City Secretary's Office for public review Aug. 10 through Sept. 12.

The City Council will hold a public hearing and conduct the first of two required readings for the budget on Aug. 22. The second and final vote to adopt the budget will be on Sept. 12.

"What we're proposing is to lower the ad valorem tax rate by a half-cent," Assistant City Manager Rick Menchaca said. "Right now it's 67.93 cents per $100 valuation. The proposed rate would be 67.4 cents."

Officials were able to lower the property tax rate as a result of an increase in overall property valuations, an increase in sales tax revenues and an increase in some user fees that went into effect Jan. 1.

Property valuations have jumped about 4.5 percent. Overall property valuation subject to taxation increased to $2.639 billion from $2.526 billion.

Tax valuations had been on the decline since the bust in the mid-1980s, dropping about 25 percent. "This is the first significant increase that we've seen since then," Menchaca said.

Sales-tax revenues have also been going up. City officials estimate almost $10.74 million in revenues to be available for the 1996 fiscal year. That's 5.5 percent more estimated sales-tax revenue than was budgeted for the 1995 fiscal year.

And some user fees that went into effect Jan. 1 are expected to add about $110,000 to funds available in fiscal year 1996.

The additional revenues will allow for a 2 percent, or $800,000, increase in general fund expenditures. The general fund expenditures — which pay for public safety, streets and traffic, animal control, and health — total about $39 million.

The additional expenditures will help fund four more police officers, three more firefighters, three more park maintenance workers and a mobile police substation. The added expenses also include inflationary increases in general fund services.

The overall operating budget — which includes the general fund — has been proposed at $84.6 million, about 2.9 percent up from last year.

The increased expenditures include the general fund expenditures, an increase in debt payment, and increases in water and sewer, and sanitation expenses.

The increase in the overall operating budget is compensated in part by the additional property and sales tax revenues coupled with more income from more users of water, sewer and sanitation services. There has also been a decrease in debt payment incurred by the airport.

The budget will be in effect for the 1996 fiscal year: Oct. 1, 1995 to Sept. 30, 1996.

WEIGHS: City mulls more recycling

paper, cardboard, aluminum cans and other metals are recycled monthly.

"We believe there's probably another 800 tons a month that could be recycled," one of the investors, Bill Mathis, told the council.

City officials appeared receptive to the possibility of such a venture.

"I think the timing is right and we're ready to look at expansion," Mayor Bobby Burns said.

Under a private-public venture, a private company would be largely responsible for the physical work, while the city would be involved in education and publicity, Assistant City Manager Glen Hackler said.

To make an expansion of recycling efforts work, Hackler said, two driving forces must be present: markets and volume. "That's why you see less recycling in Midland than in New Jersey," he said.

There was some discussion of creating an ordinance mandating recycling to insure volume; Hackler said council members appeared to prefer voluntary participation.

To increase community participation, "we've got to make recycling convenient ... and we need to recycle more than one or two items," Hackler said.

Another possibility to increase volume might be to join recycling forces with Odessa, Hackler said.

Midland fares better in collections than Odessa in the recycling game.

"We're probably way ahead of anyone in the Permian Basin with what we're doing," said Jack Burns, assistant director of utilities.

And with an expanded program to be funded with a recently approved $33,000 grant from the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission, Burns said, the current program should increase its collection rate 50 percent.

TIES: U.S. offers diplomatic relationship to Hanoi

na war.

Over the past three years, 167 sets of remains have been returned to the United States from Vietnam, along with hundreds of pages of documents that may help solve cases.

"We will keep working until we get all the answers we can," Clinton pledged. "With this new relationship, we will be able to make more progress."

The decision came 20 years after the United States left Vietnam in humiliation after the only war it ever lost.

In a demonstration of bipartisan support for his move, Clinton was flanked in the East Room by a handful of lawmakers who fought in the war, including Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., who spent 5 1/2 years in Vietnamese prisons.

"This would not be an easy decision for any president to make," McCain said. "President Clinton has shown courage and honor in his resolve to do so."

Clinton's action drew particular attention because of his college-age opposition to the war and efforts to avoid the draft.

He said his move was intended "to move beyond the haunting and painful past toward finding common ground for the future." It will lead to a number of important steps:

■ The United States and Vietnam will negotiate trade, investment and tax treaties in order to expand commerce. By some estimates, Vietnam will spend $7 billion over the next seven years on roads, ports and a modern telecommunications system, and U.S. companies are clamoring for the business. Before trade is normalized, Clinton must grant Vietnam an annual waiver under the 1974 Jackson-Vanik law, just as he does for China, to allow low tariffs on its exports to the United States.

■ The United States will upgrade its diplomatic liaison office in Hanoi to a full embassy, with an ambassador to be named later. Secretary of State Warren Christopher will go to Vietnam next month as the highest ranking American official in two decades for talks on human rights, democracy and economic reform.

■ A presidential delegation will go to Vietnam before year's end to press for more progress on missing Americans. Clinton will invite representatives of veterans and family organizations to take part.

Clinton briefed leaders of those organizations before going to the East Room to make his announcement.

"He said he genuinely believes this is the best way to pursue the fullest possible accounting," said Ann Mills Griffith, executive director of the National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia. "We disagree with the step. He knows that."

In boycotting the ceremony, she said, "It would have been somewhat hypocritical to lend physical support to an action that we feel is a mistake and unwarranted."

Clinton spoke of Vietnam as a painful chapter in America's history.

"This moment offers us the opportunity to bind up our own wounds," he said. "They have resisted time for too long.

"We can now move on to common ground," Clinton said. "Whatever divided us before let us consign to the past. Let this moment, in the words of the Scripture, be a time to heal and a time to build."

TIMELINE: Defense keeps fast clip of witnesses

(From 1A)

tion by Marcia Clark, both witnesses acknowledged they never made a conscious effort to look up the walkway outside the condominium, where the bodies were found.

Coincidentally, they said, they were on their way back from Mezzaluna, the restaurant where Ms. Simpson dined and Goldman worked that night.

"Nothing attracted my attention at all," said Aaronson, a toy company production director who testified it was her first and last date with Mandel.

How did they remember the time? Aaronson said she checked her watch when a waitress asked them to close out their dinner bill because she was ending her shift. It was just before 10 p.m.

Mandel paid the bill, they chatted for about 15 minutes and left, strolling the few blocks to her apartment on the warm summer night of June 12, 1994, Aaronson recalled. She remembered Mandel batting the leaves on trees with his hand as they walked.

At one point, about five minutes after they passed Ms. Simpson's condominium, Mandel said he checked his watch and it was about 10:30 p.m.

Jurors took extensive notes as both witnesses traced on a large diagram the route they took to and from the restaurant.

Clark suggested to Mandel, a movie studio finance department worker, he might be mistaken about the route. But Aaronson, who lived in the neighborhood, said she led the way and was certain they passed Ms. Simpson's address.

The testimony was important for the defense because it raises questions about the prosecution's time of death theory, which hinges on the howl of a dog at about 10:15 p.m. There were no eyewitnesses to the killings.

"It still doesn't really sew up the case for the defense because it doesn't account for the time between 10:30 p.m. and 11 p.m. during which O.J. still isn't accounted for," Loyola University law professor Laurie Levenson said.

Clark tried to point out inconsistencies in the couple's recollections. For example, Mandel said there was only one table seated when they left Mezzaluna; Aaronson said there were people at several tables. Also, he said he had to quickly go back and get his keys after they left; Aaronson said she didn't recall whether that happened.

Clark also produced police reports on Aaronson's first interviews in which she originally spoke of passing the condominium after 11 p.m. She said she changed the times after reconstructing the evening by checking with Mandel and the restaurant manager.

Mandel and Aaronson said they had never met Simpson and weren't trying to help either side. Aaronson said they called police because they thought it was weird that they were in the area so close to the time of the murders and thought their recollections might be of help.

Another witness, Francesca Harman, said she was attending a dinner party near the condominium that night, got in her car at 10:20 p.m. and drove past Ms. Simpson's address but also noticed nothing awry and didn't hear a dog barking.

With the defense keeping up a fast clip of witnesses, Mandel and Aaronson were preceded to the stand by a Simpson golfing partner and Simpson's eldest sister, Shirley Baker, who corroborated other family members' accounts of a grief-stricken Simpson the day after the killings.

The entire family was in a state of shock, Mrs. Baker said.

"Nicole had been a part of our family for 17 years," she said.

rying radioactive waste will be traveling along Interstate 20 without anyone knowing about it. What happens if there is an accident?"

Ms. Lee said a photographer who took one of the pictures that hangs in the van's museum was traveling along I-20 and her Geiger counter went off as a truck transporting radioactive material passed her.

"Residents traveling along this highway will be exposed to small doses of radiation without their knowledge," she said.

The caravan includes a mobile home that houses a museum of the history of radioactive materials in the United States — from Marie Curie to current nuclear power plants and waste sites.

"Our whole focus is to stop the production of nuclear power, unless it is short-lived for essential medical purposes," she said.

Ms. Lee, who lives in Austin, has been joined in her caravan by Marcus Saenz, 25, and Courtney James, 21, both of Corpus Christi. The two joined because of their interest in the way their lives were impacted by uranium mines near the Corpus Christi drinking water source.

Tashubi, 17, of Austin said she also joined the caravan because of a growing interest in environmental issues.

"It started off with smaller issues, such as what to do with waste products, and grew into the area of nuclear energy and its effects," she said. "This issue is a whole lot bigger than just your backyard."

The caravan, which already has been through southern Texas and Oklahoma, will continue through West Texas this week, with stops in Odessa, Pecos and Sierra Blanca.

FLAG: Don't mess with Old Glory, callers say sense of morality and acceptance of responsibility back, we'll go right down the path of collapse as other strong countries have done in the past."

Added Bob Wacker: "The flag is a symbol of our country not our government. I certainly don't like a lot of things about our government, but I do love our country, and desecrating the flag is wrong."

The opposition on the matter took an entirely different road to reason.

"If I purchase a flag and it's my property, then I can do what I want to with it, destroy it, whatever," David Roberts said. "Only if the government pays for all the flags can they say someone can't do it. Otherwise, they've violated my right to property and to do what I want to with it, which is guaranteed by God to me through the Constitution."

An anonymous caller said, "Even though I do not like to see the flag burned, I still think we live in a free country and that means we can't say it can't be burned. What's next? They'll burn books we don't agree with. We should allow maximum freedoms for the maximum number of people."

A man identifying himself as a veteran of both World War II and Korea said, "It is not the flag as a piece of cloth that is being burned. That is not the significance of this symbol. It is the anger that is within the person who burns the flag, who wants to destroy what we fought for. Anyone who has this kind of anger inside them should not have the right to enjoy the freedoms we fought and died for."

OVERRUN: Bosnian Serbs shred ragged lines of West

blocking position at Potocari, about two miles north of Srebrenica. Potocari is the main base for the area's 400 peacekeepers.

U.N. officials estimated 27,000 of the town's 30,000 inhabitants fled north with the Dutch soldiers. They said they were trying to make emergency preparations for the refugees in Tuzla, another "safe area" to the northwest.

"The Bosnian Serb army is now in control of Srebrenica," said Alexander Ivanko, a U.N. spokesman in Sarajevo, the capital.

"What we are seeing now is the most unfortunate scenario; massive, uncontrolled exodus of people of Srebrenica," said U.N. aid spokesman Kris Janowski.

Thousands surrounded the Potocari camp. "They are not hostile," Janowski said. "They are just desperate people fleeing."

A U.N. official in Sarajevo, speaking on condition of anonymity, told The Associated Press that the Serbs threatened to shell the compound if NATO warplanes didn't leave the area.

Dutch and American jets had struck at least two Bosnian Serb tanks south of the town Tuesday in an attempt to protect the Dutch U.N. troops and the town's civilians, Ivanko said.

Dutch Defense Minister Joris Voorhoeve said he had asked the United Nations to call off a planned third NATO airstrike "due to the terroristic threats" from Bosnian Serb rebels to kill 30 Dutch peacekeepers they had seized in their six-day advance on the town.

The NATO planes were prepared to carry out several waves of strikes, but didn't do so "because the situation fell apart so quickly," a senior defense official said in Washington on condition of anonymity.

"I think this is too little and too late," Haris Silajdzic, the premier of Bosnia's Muslim-led government, said of the air attacks. "They (the United Nations) waited actually until the Serb terrorists started entering the town. I don't know what is the use of it now."

The efficacy of the U.N. mission has been in question for some time.

"When they are attacked by military forces it obviously prejudices their ability to perform their mission," U.S. Defense Secretary William Perry said in an interview on CNN.

In Pale, the Bosnian Serb rebel headquarters east of Sarajevo, Jovan Zametica, an adviser to Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic, said that the "international community seems to have learned nothing from its past mistakes, the more they bomb us the more entrenched we shall become.

"The Muslims have abused the status of Srebrenica's 'safe area' in order to launch terrorist raids against the Serb civilian population," he said.

■ U.S. to seek death penalty for McVeigh

WASHINGTON — Federal prosecutors in Oklahoma City formally notified lawyers for Timothy McVeigh on Tuesday that they had invoked a procedure to seek the death penalty against the former Army sergeant accused of blowing up the federal building in Oklahoma City.

In a letter Tuesday to McVeigh's lawyer, Stephen Jones, federal prosecutors advised the defendant that he would be indicted before Aug. 11 with "one or more crimes potentially punishable by death." The letter was signed by Patrick Ryan, the U.S. attorney in Oklahoma City.

The letter is the first official notification that government is taking the legal steps, under a policy signed into effect by Attorney General Janet Reno in January, to execute McVeigh if he is convicted of bombing the office building.

The government's intention to ask for the death penalty was first expressed on April 19, the day of the bombing, when Ms. Reno said that the government would seek the death penalty under a law that made it a capital offense to take a life in connection with destruction of government property. Her comments were quickly echoed by President Clinton.

■ Packwood hearings needed, Dem says

WASHINGTON — Trying to step up pressure on colleagues, the Senate Ethics Committee's ranking Democrat insisted Tuesday that public hearings be held on sexual and official misconduct charges against Sen. Bob Packwood.

Speaking out as the committee began closed discussions on whether to conduct hearings, Sen. Richard Bryan of Nevada said the panel had held public hearings "in every other major investigation."

"I know of no reason to make an exception in this case," said Bryan, who headed the committee of three Democrats and three Republicans when Democrats controlled the Senate.

Another committee Democrat, Sen. Barbara Mikulski of Maryland, also has called for public hearings. So have several of the women who triggered the probe in late 1992, with allegations that Packwood made unwanted sexual advances, including grabbing and kissing them.

■ Lawmaker urges breast implant probe

WASHINGTON — Rep. James Traficant, D-Ohio, said Tuesday that he will ask Attorney General Janet Reno to investigate whether officials for Dow Corning lied to Congress in 1990 about the danger posed by breast implants.

The company, which is based in Midland, Mich., made hundreds of thousands of silicone breast implants even though it has known for 40 years that silicone poses a significant health hazard to humans, Traficant said.

Traficant disclosed his request to Reno in a statement released Tuesday.

The lawmaker is challenging the veracity of testimony from company officials of nearly five years ago.

After increasing numbers of women fitted with the implants complained of health problems, Congress conducted an investigation in 1990. Dow Corning officials told the House Government Operations Committee that the silicone implants posed no health hazard, but declined to provide the committee with its own silicone research, Traficant said.

■ Aide testifies before Whitewater grand jury

WASHINGTON — White House aide Patsy Thomasson, who says she went into Vincent Foster's office the night of his death to look for a suicide note, testified for an hour Tuesday before the Whitewater grand jury.

Thomasson was subpoenaed for questioning about the handling of Foster's papers and she provided full cooperation to prosecutors, said her attorney, David Williams, who accompanied her to the U.S. Courthouse.

Thomasson is expected to be called as a witness in next week's Senate Whitewater hearings, which will highlight inconsistencies in witnesses' accounts of what went on at the White House after Foster's death. Foster was deputy White House counsel.

Thomasson, then-White House counsel Bernard Nussbaum and Hillary Rodham Clinton's chief of staff, Margaret Williams, say they removed nothing during their brief nighttime search of Foster's office on July 20, 1993.

Judge finds Smith competent to stand trial

■ One woman, man survive questioning to be selected as jurors.

Associated Press

UNION, S.C. (AP) — Susan Smith was ruled competent to stand trial Tuesday for drowning her two young sons despite warnings from a psychiatrist that she is suicidal and might try to sabotage her own defense.

Jury selection, which began Monday and could take up to two weeks, proceeded slowly, with a woman and a man surviving individual questioning of the first 13 panelists.

The second day of the trial began with Circuit Judge William Howard asking Ms. Smith a series of questions.

Did she understand the charges against her? "Murder," she said in a quiet but clear voice.

And the possible punishment? "The death penalty," she replied.

"Is there any time that you have not been able to understand your attorneys and they to understand you as a result of your mental condition?" Howard asked. "No, your honor," she answered.

Defense lawyers David Bruck and Judy Clarke said Ms. Smith had cooperated with them. But they told the judge they shared the concerns of the state's chief psychiatrist, Dr. Donald Morgan, who testified Monday that Ms. Smith is sane but suicidal and capable of sabotaging her defense.

The judge said the anti-depressant medication Ms. Smith takes seems to be helping her.

"In that sense, Ms. Smith is rendered more rational and better able to understand these proceedings," he said. "I find that Ms. Smith is competent to stand trial and can proceed with this matter."

Ms. Smith, 23, could get the death penalty if convicted of the two murder charges in the deaths last fall of sons Michael, 3, and Alex, 14 months.

She claimed a black carjacker took them but later confessed to letting her car roll into a lake with the boys inside. Prosecutors plan to argue she used murder to get rid of her sons when they got in the way of a love affair.

Ms. Smith has a history of mental problems, first surfacing when she was 13. She underwent counseling for molestation by her stepfather, her father committed suicide when she was 6, and she has attempted to kill herself.

Howard summoned 105 potential jurors for questioning and has kept their names secret, identifying them in court by number only.

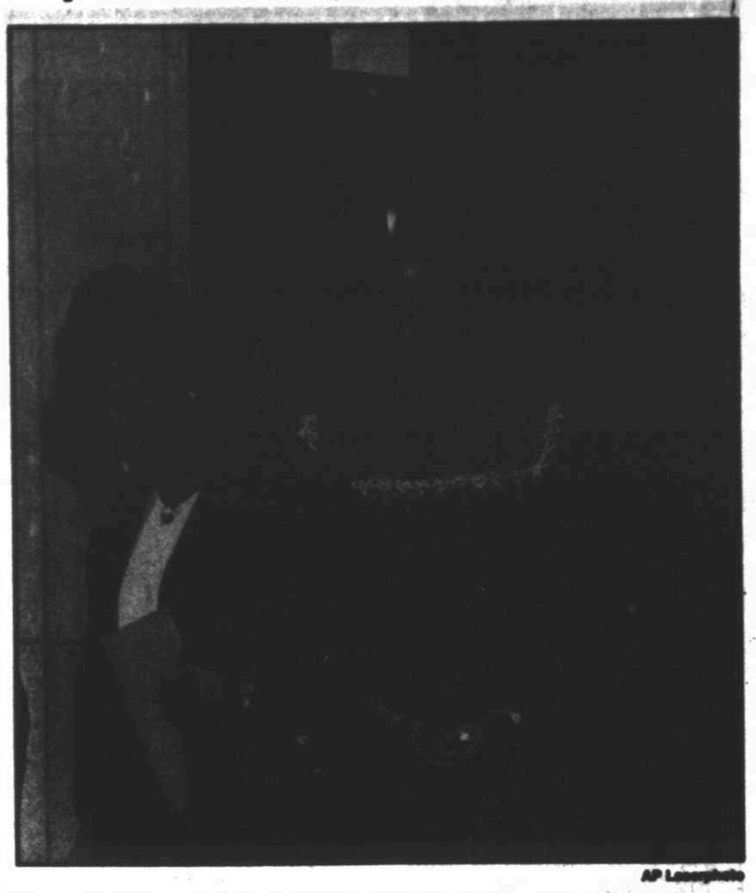

The first person selected for the 12-member jury was a divorced white woman in her 40s who said she has two sons and two daughters ranging in age from 8 to 15. She said one of her daughters was 12 years old when the girl was sexually assaulted by a 19-year-old man.

The second panelist chosen was a black man, who said he had refused to talk to friends about Ms. Smith's case because he didn't think it was fair that they already had convicted her before trial.

Bruck requested the dismissal of two of the panelists. One was a man who began crying when asked whether he had seen a re-enactment of the car rolling into the lake. He said it brought back memories of his 4-year-old brother drowning in a pond when he was 14.

The other was a woman who said she first believed Ms. Smith should be executed, but now has no opinion. Bruck didn't say why he asked for the dismissals.

Three potential jurors were excused because they refused to consider the death penalty.

Officials charge man in bus theft, woman's assault

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — A woman who got on a Greyhound bus for a trip to Georgia was kidnapped and raped by a man who had stolen the vehicle, police said.

No one even realized the bus had been taken from a depot at Charlotte, N.C., until 22-year-old Samuel Rodriguez was arrested behind the wheel on Sunday.

The Charlotte man was jailed on multiple charges, and police said he also was wanted in New York for another bus theft.

At a bail hearing on Monday, Rodriquez said: "I apologize."

Investigators said Rodriquez stole the bus early Sunday and drove it to Georgetown, S.C., about 175 miles southeast of Charlotte.

In Georgetown, a 20-year-old woman waiting at a Greyhound station asked the driver if he was headed to Charleston, a stop on her trip to Georgia.

"The bus pulled in and the driver told her to get in," sheriff's Lt. Eddie Driggers said.

There was no one else on the bus, police said. The station at Georgetown is closed on Sundays; passengers can buy tickets when the bus stops at a terminal that is open.

Police said that Rodriquez took the woman on a 50-mile trip to North Charleston, where the woman said she was raped on the bus. She then was dropped off at a North Charleston bus station, where a manager helped her call police.

The bus had not been expected there, but terminal employees were not alarmed, Greyhound spokesman Chuck Sweet said. Buses sometimes arrive unexpectedly and extra buses often are put into service at this time of year.

After the woman's call, Highway Patrol officers arrested Rodriquez 22 miles away along Interstate 26.

Authorities weren't sure how Rodriquez knew how to start the bus. Sweet said starting Greyhound buses requires knowledge of a sequence of switches instead of a key.

A search of the company's files back to 1989 found no record of anyone with Rodriquez's name or Social Security number, said Marty Heires, a Greyhound spokesman in Dallas.

Sheriff must get budget in line

That was an important message Midland County commissioners sent to Sheriff Gary Painter Monday when the Commissioners' Court voted against $2,000 in additional funding to operate eight Sheriff's Department vehicles until Painter can raise money from the sale of surplus cars to fuel the vehicles.

Painter has had difficulty living within the budget approved for the Sheriff's Department for years, and the message from commissioners — on a three-to-two vote — was that the sheriff had better learn to live within that budget. Regardless of his department's law-enforcement mandate, there comes a point at which the sheriff must be financially responsible. Painter must balance the two.

It would be easier to forgive the sheriff's budget-trampling excesses if his department were underfunded, but with a budget of $6.4 million Painter really cannot make that claim. And although most Midland taxpayers probably are extraordinarily lenient with Painter because of his department's critical law-enforcement and crime-fighting responsibilities, there comes a point at which all taxpayers must look at the bottom line. We think Painter is almost at that point now.

County department heads operate essentially as independent authorities — until it comes to the overall county budget. Then they become subject to the Commissioners' Court, whose members are directly responsible to the taxpayers. There's a reason for that; while department heads are given ultimate authority for daily operation of their departments, the ultimate authority of purse strings is given to commissioners who can see the "big picture" for county taxpayers.

Of course, each department head is also essentially responsible to the taxpayers and, thus, must attempt to stay within the parameters of the county budget. So far Painter has had difficulty doing that.

Commissioners nudged Painter and told him he needs to get tougher about how he handles his department's money affairs. He does.

Base-closing plan should be fair to all

It is good to see both the Republicans and Democrats denouncing a Pentagon proposal to make adjustments to an independent panel's base-closing recommendations.

The reason the Pentagon wants to get into the act is to soften the economic blow to California.

While we can understand the hardships being imposed on California because of the proposals, Texas isn't that far behind in economic hardships.

It wasn't an easy decision the commission had to make. In their hands were the livelihoods of thousands of people and cities.

A decision has been made. It is to be hoped the decision was fair to all states concerned in the process.

If there is going to be a review and tinkering with the commissioner's recommendations, it needs to be with the idea that all recommendations will be reconsidered, not just the recommendations affecting one state.

Entering a time of peace will not be easy. As Americans, we need to make the shift from defense to peacetime jobs.

Economically, that is sound business.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, July 12, the 193rd day of 1995. There are 172 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On July 12, 1984, Democratic presidential candidate Walter F. Mondale announced he'd chosen U.S. Rep. Geraldine A. Ferraro of New York to be his running mate. Ferraro was the first woman to run for the vice presidency of the United States on a major-party ticket.

On this date:

In 100 B.C., the Roman Emperor Julius Caesar was born.

In 1543, England's King Henry VIII married his sixth and last wife, Catherine Parr, who outlived him.

In 1690, Protestant forces led by William of Orange defeated the Roman Catholic army of James II at the Battle of the Boyne in Ireland.

In 1812, United States forces led by Gen. William Hull entered Canada during the War of 1812 against Britain. (However, Hull, retreated shortly thereafter to Detroit.)

In 1817, naturalist-author Henry David Thoreau was born in Concord, Mass.

In 1854, George Eastman, inventor of the Kodak camera, was born in Waterville, N.Y.

In 1862, Congress authorized the Medal of Honor.

In 1933, the U.S. government set the minimum wage at 40 cents an hour.

In 1974, John Ehrlichman, a former aide to President Nixon, and three others were convicted of conspiring to violate the civil rights of Daniel Ellsberg's former psychiatrist.

In 1977, President Carter defended Supreme Court decisions limiting government payments for poor women's abortions, saying, "There are many things in life that are not fair."

Ten years ago: Doctors discovered what turned out to be a cancerous growth in President Reagan's large intestine, prompting surgery the following day.

Five years ago: Russian republic president Boris N. Yeltsin shocked the 28th congress of the Soviet Communist Party by announcing he was resigning his party membership.

One year ago: Germany's highest court ruled the country's combat troops could be sent on U.N. missions abroad with parliamentary approval. President Clinton, visiting Germany, went to the eastern sector of Berlin, the first president to do so since Harry Truman. Confirmation hearings began for Supreme Court nominee Stephen G. Breyer. The National League won the All-Star Game, defeating the American League 8-7.

Chapter finally closes on Chilean drama

WASHINGTON — The final paragraph can now be written in a compelling human drama that this column first began reporting 23 years ago.

In 1972, we wrote a series of exposes that embarrassed the Chilean military. Its shadowy secret police, known by the acronym DINA, blamed Chile's ambassador to Washington, Orlando Letelier, for slipping us the secret documents that led to the articles.

Anderson

The following year, his wife smuggled us a message that Letelier had been imprisoned following a bloody military coup that led to the ouster of Marxist President Salvador Allende. But Letelier denied giving us the documents, and Chilean authorities eventually released him for lack of proof. After his release from prison, Letelier went into exile in the United States, where he became one of the most prominent critics of the military regime headed by Gen. Augusto Pinochet.

Back in Washington, on Sept. 21, 1976, Letelier's blue Chevrolet was blown up by a terrorist bomb. The blast killed Letelier and an American friend, Ronni Moffitt, who worked for a local think tank. But her husband, Mike Moffitt, was miraculously spared.

Moffitt's first stop after his release from the hospital was our office, to ask us to investigate the assassination. More than a year later, we were able to spell out the details of the plot.

In September 1977, we became the first to report that Letelier's assassination had been ordered by Manuel Contreras, who was the head of DINA. We reported that he recruited Cuban veterans from the failed Bay of Pigs invasion to do his dirty work — mercenaries who had been trained by the Central Intelligence Agency in the art of assassination.

At the time of our original reports, U.S. Justice Department officials called our allegations "totally incorrect," and stated we had no evidence to back up our claim that Contreras was the man responsible. But after their own exhaustive probe, U.S. officials reached the same conclusion.

Contreras vowed at the time that he'd never spend a day in jail — and his prediction almost came true. For 19 years, Chilean authorities rejected intense American pressure to prosecute the powerful Contreras. But last winter, authorities finally nailed him. He was quickly found guilty, and his conviction was later upheld by the Chilean supreme court.

But convicting Contreras proved easier than actually sending him to jail. Instead of going to prison, Contreras holed up in his ranch in southern Chile. This outraged the Chilean public, which has waited a long time for justice to be carried out against the military thugs who ran the country from 1973 to 1990.

When Chilean authorities seemed to be closing Contreras was moved to a Naval hospital, where he was supposedly receiving treatment for a variety of ailments. Military officials, who are still autonomous from the elected government, protested that their comrade was too sick to go to prison.

But last week, a panel of civilian doctors who examined Contreras ruled that he is fit enough to serve a prison term. And with that, the man responsible for the murder of Orlando Letelier and Ronni Moffitt finally received his just reward.

GOLF GRUMBLING — President Clinton is privately fuming about something. But this time his anger has absolutely nothing to do with Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole or House Speaker Newt Gingrich.

Bill Clinton is peeved about his golf game.

Sources say the President was moping around the White House last week with a painful-looking sunburn on his face. When solicitous aides asked Clinton about it, the President explained that he's been spending a lot of time on the golf course recently.

"How's your golf game?" one aide asked Clinton.

"Terrible," Clinton replied. "It gets harder when you grow older and more tired."

But don't shed too many tears for Clinton. He loves to sneak away from the White House to play golf on the two swank courses at Andrews Air Force Base in nearby Maryland. As we recently reported, Andrews is in the process of building a third golf course — at a time when dozens of military bases across the country are on the verge of being closed. The new course is going to cost $5 million at a time of fiscal austerity.

Clinton, the golf putter-in-chief, will now have another course to practice on in order to improve his game.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

College to honor alumni known for repression

WASHINGTON — At a convocation this fall, Williams College in Massachusetts will confer full academic honors on its alumnus Goh Chok Tong, prime minister of Singapore.

In that dictatorship (where chewing gum gets you a $1,000 fine and sharing a marijuana cigarette invites the death penalty) students are prohibited from waving political banners.

Safire

"If you allow students to do so," Goh has said, "then workers will begin to do so over the slightest grievance, and if you have several such demonstrations, right away the impression is created the government is not in control of the situation — that the place may become unstable, and that will have an impact on foreign investors."

Some Williams faculty, sensitive to what philosophy professor Sam Fleischacker calls "the irony of offering the leader of the world's foremost opponent of academic freedom an academic honor," protested to the college's president, Harry C. Payne.

Payne replied that Goh — who seized a three-year-old invitation — "embodies the mission and hope" of Singapore, adding lamely "the tendering of a degree is not intended to honor every aspect of a person, a government, or a set of ideas."

"The event will be used as a powerful symbolic tool in Singapore," responded Fleischacker, "to show that no matter how flagrantly Singapore's government violates basic political rights, its 'success' will still win it acceptance and indeed honor with the Western nations. Williams' action will help vindicate the International Herald Tribune's regular caving-in to Singapore's judicial blackmail. . . ."

Now there's a comment that tromps on journalism's tenderest corns. When an American academic, Christopher Lingle, dared to suggest in an IHT article that "dynastic politics" played a part in governing some Asian nations, Singapore's dictator, Lee Kuan Yew, assumed that the shoe fit him. He brought a libel suit before his hand-picked judges to humiliate the American newspaper.

On the advice of local counsel all too cozy with the ruling party, The Trib apologized. This only whetted the appetite of the dictator and his front man, Goh, who is warming the prime minister's seat until Lee's son, the dauphin, can take over.

In a Singapore courtroom two weeks ago, Goh denied being "a stooge for Prime Minister Lee" but then let the cat out of the dynastic bag: Such press criticism, said Goh, "simply destroys what we have set out to do, and that is to have a smooth transfer of power to the next generation."

Dictator Lee's testimony, though sometimes Queeg-like in his fear of criticism, was shrewder than his front man's. The dictator tried to drive a wedge between The Trib's owners: "There are two parties in The IHT; one is The Washington Post and the other is The New York Times. My relations with The Washington Post have always been more equable. They are less of aggressive crusaders against me . . . so there are two parts to this and one is The New York Times that William Safire is on."

Thanks, but The Post is not the pushover the dictator suggests. Nor did Dow Jones, when its Far East Economic Review was "bleeding" because of Lee's advertising and circulation restrictions, fire an editor to placate the regime, as Lee intimated. (The dictator concluded by praising The Trib's counsel, "who knows me very well," and who did not presume to cross-examine.)

Despite oleaginous pretensions about a new Asian culture that transcends human rights, Lee, Goh and the dauphin represent old-fashioned European totalitarianism.

Should Williams College rescind its invitation, as "No Goh" faculty urge? Quite the contrary; let's hear his anti-freedom pitch. But a Williams political scientist is organizing a serious, educational counter-award ceremony.

Christopher Lingle, out of reach of corrupt judges' crippling fines and canes, has agreed to come; so has Francis Seow, former solicitor general who was imprisoned for his dissent, "softly tortured" by Lee's thugs and exiled to Harvard.

The college president is resisting the simultaneous appearance of the opposition; perhaps Williams alumni and trustees will reason with him.

If Goh has guts, he'll agree to a panel debate. And if The Singapore Straits wants to run today's essay under "Safire Snipes Again," as the lap-dog sheet has done before — it's free.

ART BUCHWALD

Appointments are great disappointments for many

Dear Diary,

I have just been nominated for Secretary of Jogging in the Clinton Administration. This is one of the most important positions, as everyone in the government who jogs — including the President — has to report to me.

Buchwald

The President had me and my family over to the White House for the announcement, where we took pictures and my children got to meet Chelsea and Socks and Barbra Streisand, which they told me was the thrill of their lives.

To prove that my position really was important, the President and I jogged around the East Room while the photographers took photos.

Dear Diary,

There seem to be few glitches in my confirmation. Rush Limbaugh found out that I burned a flag in 1978 to protest the slow delivery of my mail. I denied it and received a call from the President, who said he supported me 110 percent, which was even more than he supported Henry Foster for Surgeon General.

To make matters even worse, Bob Dole said on the floor of the Senate that he had it on authority that I had attended an R-rated film at a shopping mall in my youth, and I refused to say whether I would ever go to another Sharon Stone movie.

Dear Diary,

Sen. Jesse Helms is on my case because I wrote an article advocating that runners give up tobacco as it would adversely affect their breathing. Helms said I was no more than a yellow, dirty, filthy dog who was interfering in the lives of those who wanted to smoke and jog at the same time.

Dear Diary,

They're really after me now. I said in a question-and-answer period at an Elks luncheon that Newt Gingrich's book was an abortion, and I didn't understand why anybody would buy it.

The Rupert Murdoch people, the book's publishers, are now attacking me in every one of Rupert's papers, saying that if I were made Secretary of Jogging, I would push for AIDS research and forbid runners to carry hidden handguns under their T-shirts. I never said this — but go fight Rupert Murdoch.

I called the White House to find out if the President still supported me. Hillary said he was in the shower, but the President still was behind me, and he never reneges on a promise.

Dear Diary,

Bad news from the FBI. A report leaked to Robert Novak said that two students I went to public school with said I never prayed in class.

The White House is furious I never told them and said it's things like this that make their job so much harder. I asked if I still had the blessing of the big guy — and they assured me that I did, unless it turns out that I gave money to my local PBS station.

Dear Diary,

The filibuster still continues as I write this. The Republicans have decided to use my nomination as a means to destroy all the environmental laws passed in the last 20 years. I intend to call the President tomorrow to find out why Chelsea won't take my kids' calls.

Dear Diary,

The President invited me to his Oval Office to announce that I was withdrawing my name as secretary. This came as a surprise to me, as I had made no mention of pulling out and was prepared to fight. The President spoke with regret and emotion, saying he had never been so disappointed in his life and Congress better not try to block his next choice. Next to my being nominated as secretary, this was the most memorable moment of my life.

Republicans draft cuts, spark threat of veto from president

■ One of largest reductions — $1.2 billion — would fall on Head Start program.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Sparking an instant veto threat from President Clinton, Republicans outlined sweeping cuts Tuesday in Head Start and dozens of social programs, including elimination of a $1 billion account that helps the poor pay their utility bills.

"The president won't allow Congress to make our children, our schools, our workers and environment suffer in order to fund tax cuts for the wealthy," White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta said in issuing the latest in a string of threats against GOP bills designed to balance the budget by 2002.

Panetta spoke to reporters at the White House before House budget cutters formally convened a drafting session on their latest bill, a measure to cut $9.3 billion from programs run by the departments of labor, health and human services and education.

One of the largest cutbacks — $1.2 billion — would fall on a program designed to help disadvantaged public school students. Head Start funds would be reduced by $200 million and money for the Corporation for Public Broadcasting would be cut by nearly 8 percent. Goals 2000, a program to strengthen school standards, would be abolished.

The National Institutes of Health, the nation's pre-eminent facility for disease research, received a rare reprieve from GOP budget cutters. It is in line for an increase of 5.7 percent, or $200 million more than Clinton proposed, and funding for breast and cervical cancer screening would go up by 25 percent.

But NIH was the exception rather than the rule as Republicans pressed their goal of balancing the budget in seven years while financing a $240 billion tax cut. Precise details of the tax measure remain to be worked out, but are certain to include a variety of business breaks and cuts for families with up to $200,000 in income.

Clinton favors a 10-year plan to balance the budget, with a far smaller tax cut to be targeted at the middle class. His different blueprint increasingly has drawn him into conflict with Republicans.

On Monday, for example, House Republicans advanced legislation to cut billions of dollars in federal spending on environmental protection, housing and space programs. The measure, in addition to raising the cost of public housing to the people who live in it, would kill the president's cherished national voluntary service program — Americorps.

That bill, too, showed on Clinton's veto list, as relayed by Panetta.

Panetta spoke with reporters only a few hours after Clinton sat down with congressional leaders at the White House and said all sides should work on a compromise budget to stave off a "crisis in government."

The government's fiscal year ends Sept. 30. Without spending bills signed into law by then, many agencies would be unable to function. In addition, the government's ability to borrow money is expected to lapse later in the fall, a potentially more serious event that — without congressional action — would leave the Treasury unable to meet its obligations.

Jury selection starts in trial for Polly Klaas' death

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (AP) — The first of up to 8,500 potential jurors were called Tuesday for the trial of the man accused of killing Polly Klaas, the 12-year-old whose abduction from a slumber party spurred passage of "three strikes" laws around the country.

Prosecutors said the painstaking arrangements, which include four months set aside for selecting jurors from a pool eight times the size of that in the O.J. Simpson trial, were to be expected in a death penalty case that has been publicized across the nation.

Polly was taken at knifepoint on Oct. 1, 1993, from her home in Petaluma, touching off a huge search that ended after Richard Allen Davis' arrest two months later. He gave police information that led them to her body.

The 41-year-old career criminal told police he kidnapped Polly for no particular reason and strangled her to cover his tracks.

Of 183 potential jurors brought in Tuesday, about 101 were kept to fill out questionnaires. The rest were released when they offered reasons why jury duty would be a hardship. The trial is expected to last four to six months.

Officials had expected only 10 to 20 people would have reached the questionnaire stage on the first day. Prosecutor Greg Jacobs said the rate indicated the jury could be picked much sooner than in four months.

But defense attorney Barry Collins said the number of prospective jurors who appeared willing to serve isn't a clear indication the trial is ahead of schedule. He said only the questionnaires will show whether they are true prospects.

It might not be necessary to call all 8,500 potential jurors. Superior Court Judge Lawrence Antolini plans to call about 150 people per day until he obtains a pool of 360 potential jurors. From that, 12 jurors and nine alternates will be selected.

By contrast, about 1,000 potential jurors were initially summoned last year for the Simpson trial.

Antolini has said he doesn't want to sequester the jury but wants to avoid problems plaguing the Simpson case, such as the danger of running out of jurors.

He has banned news cameras for all but five minutes each morning.

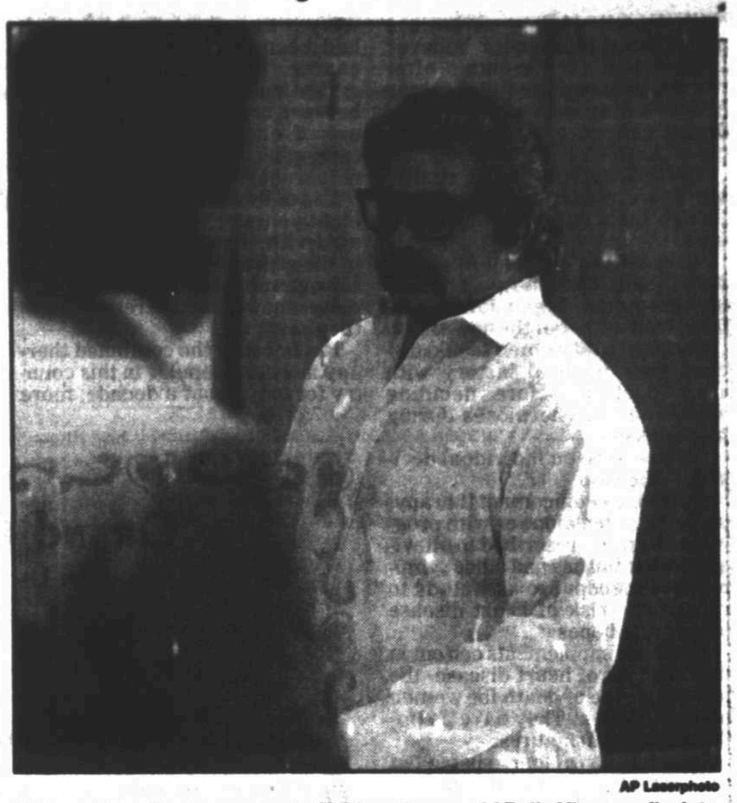

"Nothing like the O.J. Simpson case is going to happen in my courtroom," Antolini said Monday.

Terry Diggs, a defense lawyer and part-time professor at Hastings School of Law, said it will be difficult, if not impossible, to find fair jurors.

"If you prosecute somebody who is perceived publicly as the devil incarnate, getting a jury capable of open-mindedness is going to be the challenge of the Western world," Diggs said.

Davis' long criminal record includes armed kidnapping and sexual assault charges involving at least four women.

One attack occurred when he was on probation for burglary; after his arrest in that assault, he was sent to a mental hospital for testing, walked away, and attacked another woman in her home, beating her with a fireplace poker.

New study disputes reported link between breast cancer, estrogen

CHICAGO (AP) — What's a menopausal woman to believe? Less than a month after researchers reported that taking estrogen may increase the risk of breast cancer, a new study indicates there's no such danger.

The lead authors of both studies say more research is needed — though both stand by their findings.

"I know there's a lot of confusion," said University of Washington epidemiologist Janet Stanford, lead author of the new study.

Stanford said women should discuss their medical history with their doctors before deciding whether to use hormones during menopause.

"It has to be an individual decision," she said.

Hormone replacement therapy, using estrogen alone or with progestin, is often prescribed to alleviate the hot flashes and other symptoms of menopause as well as to reduce the risk of heart disease and brittle bones.

Hormone supplements can cut in half the risk of heart disease, the leading cause of death for women as well as men. They have a similar effect on fractures.

Doctors have long suspected that estrogen, a female sex hormone, may play a role in the development of breast cancer. Women with longtime exposure to increased estrogen levels — those who begin menstruating early or go through menopause late — face a higher breast cancer risk.

But doctors have debated for decades whether there is a similar link involving hormones given to women when their natural estrogen production slows down.

Stanford's study, published in today's Journal of the American Medical Association, found that menopausal women who take estrogen alone or with progestin face no increased risk of breast cancer.

The results are based on medical histories of 1,029 Seattle-area women ages 50 to 64. About half had been diagnosed with breast cancer.

"We found no overall association between breast cancer risk and the use of either estrogen alone or estrogen with progestin," the researchers wrote.

Use of the combined therapy for eight years or more "was associated with, if anything, a reduction in the risk of breast cancer," and estrogen alone used for 20 years or more showed no increased risk, they said.

But because the combined therapy has been popular in this country for only about a decade, more research is needed to determine whether longer-term use poses any breast cancer risk, Stanford said.

A study published June 15 in the New England Journal of Medicine found that women on hormones for more than five years had a 46 percent higher risk of breast cancer than those who never used such supplements. The risk dropped to normal within two years of stopping hormone therapy.

The lead author of that study, Dr. Graham Colditz of Boston's Brigham and Women's Hospital, said Stanford's research was flawed because it was limited to women under 65.

"When we looked at the longer-term users and older ages we saw stronger increases in risk," Colditz said.

Dr. Melody Cobleigh, director of the Comprehensive Breast Center at Chicago's Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center, said earlier research tends to support Stanford's findings.

"The preponderance of the evidence is that there is not an association" between breast cancer and hormone supplements, Cobleigh said.

Dr. William Andrews, an executive board member of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, said Stanford's results should reassure menopausal women who take estrogen.

"On balance the benefits outweigh the risk when you realize that 10 times as many women die of cardiovascular disease than die of breast cancer," Andrews said.

National panel asks incentives in protection from lead paint

WASHINGTON (AP) — Economic incentives, not costly regulations, are the key to protecting children from poisoning caused by lead-based paint in their homes, a divided national task force said Tuesday.

The panel created by Congress recommended that states and cities set basic safety standards for rental housing with lead-based paint, which lingers on walls though its use was banned almost two decades ago. Financial incentives, including offering some protection from lawsuits, should be used to encourage landlords to comply, the report said.

But four members of the 39-member panel disagreed. They said the group had bowed to the interests of landlords, lenders and insurance companies.

"The report's many tradeoffs are morally repugnant," wrote the dissenting members — a parent, an environmental health scientist, a legal services attorney and a toxicology professor.

Other tenants' advocates on the panel, which also included members from business and government, endorsed the compromise. They said the dissenters set unrealistic goals for removal of all lead-based paint.

Safety standards must not be so burdensome that they force owners of needed low-income housing — where lead hazards are greatest — to raise the rent or board up their properties, the task force found.

"I wish I had the luxury of supporting the point of view of the dissenters," said Chairwoman Cushing Dolbeare. "I don't see where that kind of money is coming from for low-income housing."

The task force submitted its recommendations to Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros and Carol Browner, administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, who accepted them with praise.

"Inevitably a report such as this one has to strike the balance between the ideal ... and what is possible within the market system," Cisneros said.

The report recommends a national plan for dealing with the paint that may be found in more than half of U.S. residences. Breathing or swallowing paint chips or dust from the paint can damage the nervous systems of children under 6, often causing mental impairment.

In well-maintained buildings, the paint may pose no hazard. Dangers include peeling paint, repair work that spreads dust from the paint into the air, or lead-based paint on window frames or other things children might chew on.

The report recommends basic standards for rental property built before the 1978 ban on lead-based paint. They include checking at least once a year for deteriorated paint, and doing prompt repairs; warning tenants about the dangers of lead-based paint; specialized cleaning when lead paint is disturbed during maintenance; and safety training for maintenance workers.

Council revises fire substation plans

■ Revision cuts plans for 1,700 square-foot community room withing the new station, which will reduce cost by $136,000.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Revising plans for a replacement fire substation in southeast Midland to save money was among the decisions made by the City Council on Tuesday.

The council agreed to forego plans for a 1,700-square-foot community room within the station because of budget considerations. The decision will reduce the cost of the new station by $136,000.

As a result, the planned station will cost about $648,000 for property, architectural work and construction.

The 7,040-square-foot station — with three fire engine bays, six dorm rooms and captain quarters — is expected to be built and in operation by February.

The facility will be located on a one-half block property east of Mineola Street bounded by Florida and California avenues. The land was recently purchased for $48,000.

The planned substation will replace the city's oldest fire station structure at 200 E. New Jersey Ave.

The station is being built to accommodate growth and will be more centrally located to access main roadways, officials said.

Substation No. 2 basically serves the city and county from the railroad tracks south and east, officials said.

Other business conducted at Tuesday's council meeting included:

■ The council passed a resolution authorizing a $65,000 settlement to James G. Loika, an Ector County School District police officer injured in a September 1993 explosives demonstration in Ector County.

Loika was injured by a flying fragment during an explosive demonstration by the PetroPlex Bomb Squad, which included the Midland Police Department. The city of Midland's settlement was contingent on a $75,000 payment by the city of Odessa and a $55,000 payment by Ector County.

■ In a 6-1 vote, with representative Claudia Egan dissenting, the council revoked a temporary use permit for three outdoor events at The Bar, 606 W. Missouri Ave.

The council pulled the plug on the events — scheduled for this month, August and September — after The Bar knowingly held an outdoor high school reunion party on June 24 without the required permit.

■ Final approval was given for an ordinance granting a specific use permit for a veterinary clinic — part

DAY WATCH

Traffic Interruptions

Midland motorists who regularly use the Wadley and Loop 250 intersection should be aware that their regular travel route may be changed during the next few days, according to Texas Department of Public Safety officials. Construction workers will be placing bridge beams for the overpass at Wadley and Loop 250. Beginning today, there will be intermittent interruptions to the flow of traffic as the intersection is closed to allow the contractor to set the beams in place. The work will be done between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m., and will take four to five days to complete. During the work, traffic will be rerouted to Treemont/Holiday Hill or Andrews Highway.

Camp buddies keep friendship alive across ocean

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

Their friendship crosses both ethnic borders and the ocean. It's the kind of friendship that endures.

At the age of 12, Coley Gevecker and Evan Swain, have already developed a friendship that has lasted for five years.

The pair met at Camp Longhorn, near Burnet, five years ago and since then have exchanged simple boyhood pastimes while learning about each other's culture.

Coley lives in Midland; Evan lives in Japan. They have became fast friends.

Evan, whose father is American and mother is Japanese, lives in Japan and attends Japanese school. His father teaches him an American curriculum at home, so he speaks both English and Japanese fluently.

"It just comes natural," the boy said of speaking both languages. He grew up speaking Japanese to his mother and English to his father.

The friends don't think much about their differences, but mostly about the things they both like — sports and just enjoying each other's company.

Evan and Coley couldn't really remember when they met, but they were both in the same cabin.

"We just started hanging around together," Coley said.

Evan said they both play team sports together at camp and stay in the same cabin each year.

The boys usually see each other only at camp and correspond the rest of the time. But, this past year, Coley traveled to Japan for a visit during the winter and after camp ended recently Evan came to visit Coley.

Coley said he liked Japan a lot and noticed it was "safer and cleaner" there than in the United States. He said the area wasn't as cramped as he thought it would be.

But, Evan said his home is near the ocean so the space is more open.

What did Evan notice about Midland that he compared to his homeland?

"When you're driving down the road and there is this open space you don't see there," he said.

"Midland's great because you can ride bikes around and rollerblade," Evan said.

He said there isn't as much room to do those sorts of activities at home, or even at his grandparents' home in New Jersey.

Evan said his school experience is a little different since

Attorneys take break for judge to rule on motions by defense

BIG SPRING — Attorneys in the capital murder trial of Levy Lee Edmondson, 17, have whittled the original pool of more than 400 potential jurors down to less than 100, but took a break from jury selection Tuesday to deal with legal matters.

Edmondson is charged with capital murder in the shooting death of Big Spring Department of Public Safety Trooper Troy Hogue. Edmondson could face the death penalty if convicted.

Potential jurors were dismissed Tuesday so 118th District Judge Bob Moore could deal with several motions filed by the defense.

Among these was a motion to omit testimony from a witness who said that Edmondson had robbed him years before the slaying. The motion was denied.

This incident is part of the material the state intends to enter in the punishment phase of the trial if Edmondson is convicted. Previous charges against the then-juvenile defendant include aggravated robbery, discharging a firearm

UTPB inches closer to its $1 million goal

Staff Writer

ODESSA — The University of Texas of the Permian Basin is inching up on its first million-dollar mark in its scholarship fund.

A year-long fund-raising campaign wrapped up in June. The campaign, which raised $700,000, was topped off by a $90,000 grant from Dallas-based Meadows Foundation.

Fueled by a challenge grant for matching funds from Houston Endowment Inc., the university collected a total of $600,000 in endowed scholarships and $100,000 in annual scholarship funds.

"With the annual scholarships, once it's spent, it's gone," said Mike Barker, UTPB director of instructional advancement. "But with the $600,000, we will keep the corpus, or principal, and only use the interest."

UTPB President Charles Sorber said, "The response to the drive has been tremendous. We have seen strong support from our friends in the community, as well as from many foundations. They understand that the majority of our students rely on some form of financial

Pecan-growers put 'preferred nut' on display at conference

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The pecan is being hailed this week during the 74th annual Texas Pecan Growers Association's Conference & Trade Show at the Holiday Inn Centre.

"It's the largest pecan conference in the world," said Cindy Wise, executive vice president of the Bryan-College Station-based association.

The conference — which attracted more than 600 pecan-growers from Texas and neighboring states, Mexico and Australia — included the judging of championship-quality pecan varieties, updates on the latest research and development and growing methods, Ms. Wise said.

Pecan judging included a contest of both traditional and non-traditional pecan-laden fudge.

"It was scrumptious," said Midlander Marian Farr, who was a judge. Other judges were Odessans Carol Arndt and Pat Owsley.

"In consumer taste tests, (pecans) have been consistently voted the preferred nut," Ms. Wise said.

The pecan tree — a type of hickory — primarily is grown in the South, and while pecans are popular in the South, they are not intensely marketed elsewhere.

"I know that almonds are ahead of us," Ms. Wise said. "They (almond growers) have very sophisticated marketing. Unfortunately for our industry, we don't have any type of marketing program in effect.

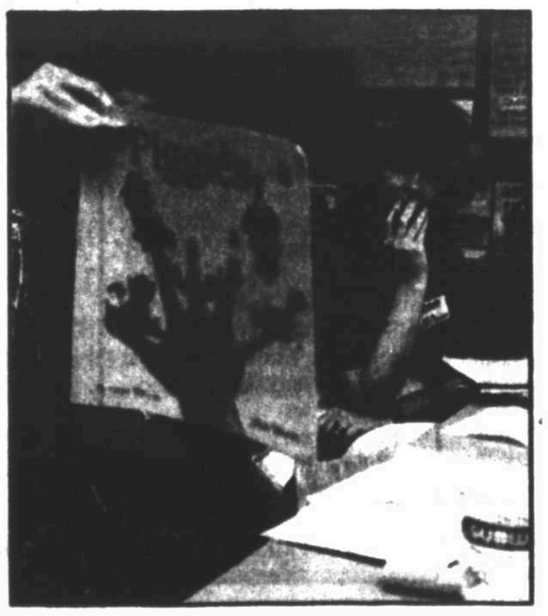

"Unfortunately, pecans are not familiar to many of the people in our Northern states, and we consider that one of our potential markets."

Walnuts are "probably ... much better known than pecans" up North, she said.

The peanut, or goober pea, is a legume that competes with nuts such as pecans, almonds and walnuts.

"Peanuts are not a nut, but they certainly get put in that category," Ms. Wise said. "And pecans ... have to compete with (the peanut) as a snack food."

The four-day pecan conference, which closes today, has been successful from the standpoint of the pecan growers and commercial exhibitors of pecan-related equipment and products, she said.

Teachers give up part of break to learn how to motivate children to read, write

By Myra Lee Salcedo

Learning facts about the Hudson River Valley could result in students nodding off. But learning about those facts through the device of a stone — with the drawing of an owl etched upon it — being picked up by different generations of youngsters through the ages, is much more of an attention-getter.

"The story is generated through the stone. It keeps children curious so they will want to learn the facts. It changes the way we teach children," said Karen Swisher, reading coordinator for Midland Independent School District.

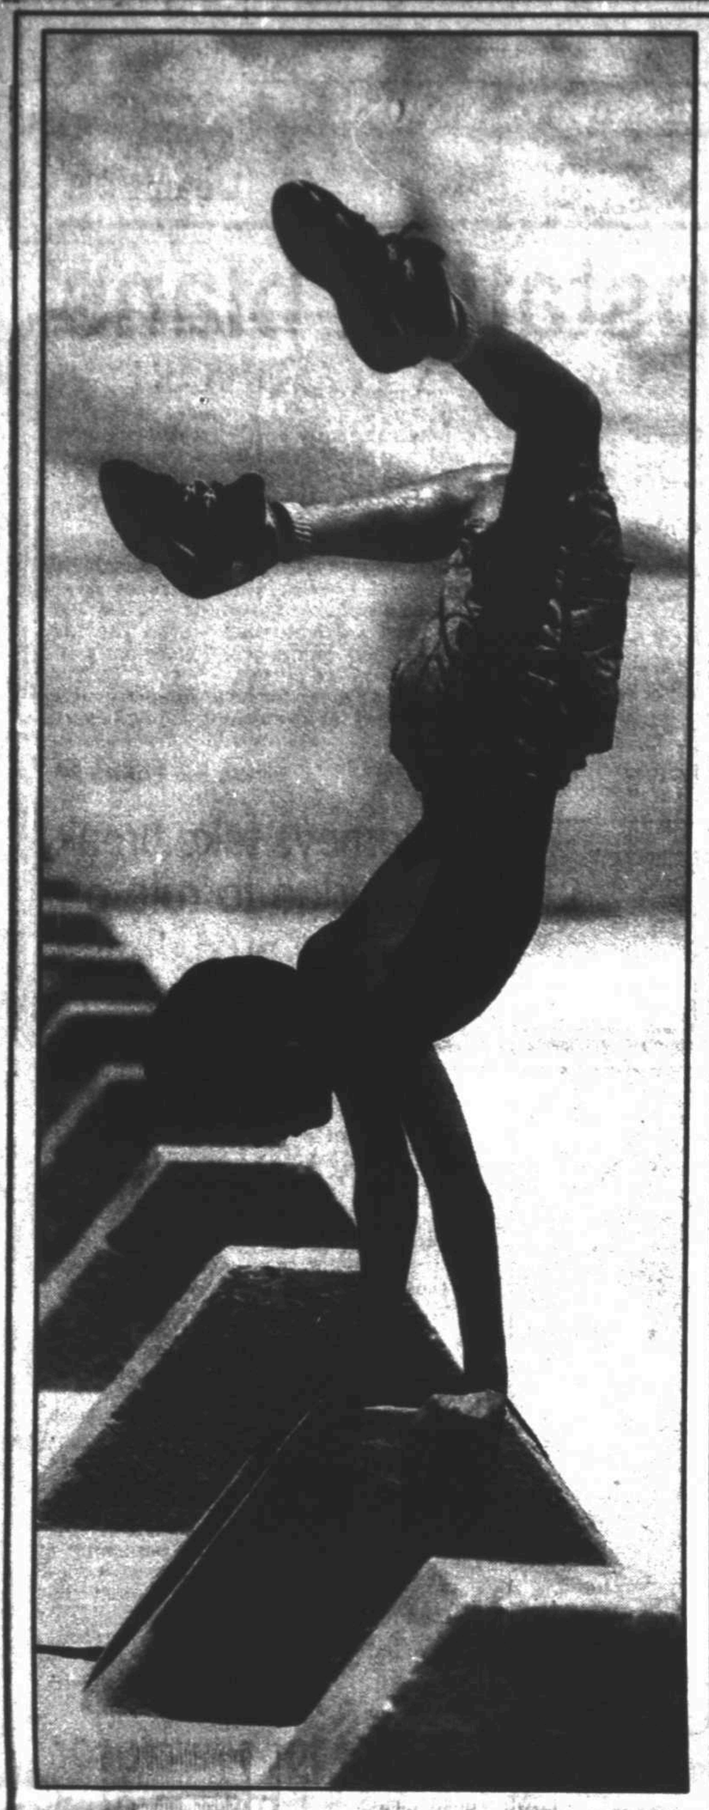

And how important is it to keep youngsters motivated to read and write? It's important enough for 15 teachers to give up two weeks of their summer vacation in order to learn skills to encourage their students to become lifelong learners.

Teachers — 13 from Midland public schools and two from New York who flew to the Tall City just to take the course — gathered in the MISD downtown administration building amid dozens of books to learn about reading and writing strategies in two courses.

Led by Jeanne Clidas of Connecticut, teachers participated in the ELIC — Early Literature Inservice Course — for kindergarten through third grade, and the program LIFE — Literacy and Learning Inservice Four through Eighth grades.

Summer accident changes West Texas family's life

By Becky Camp
The Hereford Brand

HEREFORD — The original reports said that Ronnie Jo and Jimmy Owens were in critical condition, but alive after a traffic accident.

No one said that the wreck on June 28, 1993, was the end — not of their lives, but of the previous way of life, not only for Ronni Jo and Jimmy, but for the entire Owens family.

"We still live with the accident every day," said Susan Owens, mother of the victims. "It is never behind us. The injuries were so predominant that we are still dealing with them."

It happened at about 7:23 p.m. on the Monday before the Fourth of July. Ronni Jo had driven Jimmy to get fireworks for the holiday and they were on their way home when the pickup truck struck a manure truck in the northbound lanes of U.S. 385 just south of U.S. 60.

Ronni Jo, now 20, suffered a broken leg, a head injury and a broken vertebra that did not cause any spinal column or nerve damage.

The injuries did not seem to be too severe. But the simplicity of the words was deceiving.

"I told myself that in two or three weeks the kids would be home and everything would be OK," Susan Owens says. "Life would be normal again.

"Then Ronni Jo had to have therapy for her leg and I told myself that in two or three months, after the rehab, that everything would be OK. It's been two years — and things will never be OK again."

Ronni Jo was back in the hospital recently. Therapy and rehabilitation efforts on her right leg were not totally successful. She could walk with a cane, but was not able to put her right heel down.

Her orthopedic specialist performed surgery on June 7 that it was hoped would allow her to walk with her foot flat on the floor. Although there were some complications, Ronni Jo went home a couple of weeks later.

But on June 25, she developed a high fever and returned to the hospital.

Doctors discovered that an infection had set in after the surgery and had become gangrenous. Apparently a germ that had been dormant in the wound since the accident and original surgery had caused the infection.

In an attempt to stop the infection, a section of Ronni Jo's foot, between her ankle and heel, was removed.

She remains in a skilled nursing care unit, and will require antibiotic therapy, physical therapy and whirlpool therapy, which could continue for three or four months on a daily basis.

"We live by faith," Susan Owens said. "We just cope."

Jimmy, now 14, suffered facial injuries and a broken arm. He underwent facial reconstruction surgery that lasted 8-1/2 hours immediately after the accident.

"He broke every bone in his face," Mrs. Owens said. "His last surgery was in July 1994, to repair his nose. The doctor told him it would take 'a month of Sundays' for the swelling to go down. It has just started to go down and that was a year ago.

"Jimmy's response to this was, 'I hope no doctor ever tells me anything will take a month of Sundays again,' " his mother said.

Such serious facial injuries, even when healed, can be cause for alarm. Last summer, when Jimmy was at camp, he was hit in the face with a basketball. When his mother received the call from the camp director, she called Jimmy's doctor, who reassured her that he probably was not seriously hurt, something that was confirmed by the camp's doctor.

The extent of their injuries has changed all aspects of life for Ronni Jo and Jimmy.

Ronni Jo had just finished high school and was planning to go to college. She has not yet been able to pursue that dream. She has done volunteer work for the Hereford EMS, which she has been involved with for seven years. She is on her way to being an adviser for the Medical Explorers Post and she does volunteer work at the Hereford Care Center.

Jimmy has been on the Children's Miracle Network Telethon for the past two years.

"Going before the camera and telling his story has had a very positive effect on him," Mrs. Owens said.

Jimmy has been able to continue his regular school work and will be in the eighth grade this fall.

There will be one more surgery before his facial reconstruction is complete but it will not be performed until he has stopped growing. Then surgeons will use a bone to form the bridge of his nose.

Although they live with the results of the accident daily, neither of the siblings blames the other for what happened that day. They share the guilt and are supportive of each other, their mother says.

The Owens' oldest daughter, Carolan Garza, has suffered her own trauma through the ordeal, Mrs. Owens said, providing emotional support to the rest of the family.

Mrs. Owens said the family's friends also have sustained them. "We would have been devastated without the support from friends and the community," she said. "There may have been as many as 50 to 80 people at the hospital the night of the accident. And they have continued to show their concern."

And she has hopes for the future.

"We have a 14-year-old son with scars and a 20-year-old daughter who is crippled, but this story is going to have a good ending. God has something magnanimous planned for both our kids."

Officials consider going easy on student loan agency

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Top officials of the U.S. Department of Education are considering how to water down their auditors' recommendation to recover millions of dollars from the Texas Guaranteed Student Loan Corporation for failure to vigorously pursue some deadbeats.

The officials said they are concerned that they don't cripple the Texas corporation, which generates loans to more than a quarter million students at colleges and for-profit schools each year.

"If there is a misuse of federal funds, it is our obligation to get it back," said Leo Kornfeld, a senior advisor to Education Secretary Richard Riley. "But it is important to ensure that all students continue to have access to student loans."

At the same time, any penalty also could irritate the Texas congressional delegation as Congress is deciding whether to abolish the Education Department and whether to let the department try to save money by phasing out the role of guarantee agencies and private lenders in the student loan program.

The education officials are trying to get approval of their soft-line approach from the department's independent Office of Inspector General, which issued the audit in January.

The auditors said the Texas corporation didn't try hard enough to collect $178 million in loans, and blamed the corporation's lawyers, the Austin firm of Ray, Wood and Fine, for being lax in its collection of the bad debt. In some years, the firm's fees were more than $1 million.

The corporation maintains that it mishandled at most $27 million in loans, with the federal government's share of the loss no more than $4 million to $8.6 million. The lawyers denied the auditor's findings that they were lax or had any conflicts of interest.

When a borrower defaults, the state guarantee agency reimburses claims by lenders or investors who have purchased the loans. It then is repaid by the Education Department, which requires guarantee agencies to continue vigorous efforts to collect on the dud loans.

The federal government gets 70 cents of every dollar recovered, and the guarantee agency keeps the rest.

"The corporation's collection efforts (between 1987 and 1991) were deficient and its overall collection rate was much lower than most other guarantee agencies," according to the audit.

It said that through September 1991, the Texas corporation collected only $103 million of $677 million in defaulted loans — less than half the average state's collection rate.

Any problems were temporary, said T. Neal Combs, the Texas corporation's senior counsel, who is not an employee of the law firm.

He blamed the problems on a flood of dud loans from for-profit schools, the economic downturn that made it hard for graduates to find jobs in Texas in the late 1980s, and state laws that until 1991 made it illegal in Texas to garnish wages as a collection technique.

But the auditors said that "one reason for this poor showing" was that "due diligence" was not shown on $178 million of the $258 million in loans referred for collection to the Austin law firm.

While the law firm was serving as the corporation's general counsel, it also was selected without competition in 1982 to pursue litigation against defaulting borrowers. The one-page contract drawn up on the firm's letterhead was renegotiated and updated twice in later years.

"In our opinion, the law firm's dual role as general counsel and litigation contractor may have contributed to reduced oversight, resulting in the lack of due diligence compliance and related low collection rate," the auditors said.

within city limits, stalking, burglary of a vehicle and multiple counts of criminal mischief.

Defense lawyers also filed a motion stating that the death penalty should not be implemented because the practice of capital punishment in Texas violates the U.S. Constitution. An attorney for the state said this is a common practice in case the defense later appeals on constitutional grounds.

The third motion filed by the defense was one seeking additional funds for expert witnesses. The defense team has so far enlisted the help of private investigators and a jury-selection specialist. Moore deferred a ruling on this motion for a later date.

The Office of the Texas Attorney General has provided two attorneys to prosecute the case since prosecutors with the 118th District will not be handling the trial.

The remainder of Tuesday was spent reviewing written questionnaires presented by prospective jurors.

These documents included questions about the potential jurors' personal beliefs on capital punishment and their ability to sentence a defendant to death, according to a prospective juror who asked not to be identified and who said he was released from the case on Monday.

The questionnaire asked if they believed in capital punishment in capital murder cases and if capital punishment should be applicable to all crimes.

"That was the question you could answer 'yes' to and be thrown off the jury," the prospective juror said.

Other questions regarded level of education, occupation, spouse's name and occupation, parents' marital status, church affiliation, whether the prospective juror rents or owns a home, the source for the prospective juror's news, whether they watch talk shows such as "Oprah" and "Sally Jesse-Raphel" and their thoughts and outlook toward law-enforcement personnel.

The jury-selection process continues today; court officials expect it to continue through next week.

to watch and respond to the students," Ms. Clidas said.

All 15 teachers will become facilitators this fall and will teach other instructors the skills they learned.

"It's been really nice to have everyone sharing their information. Everything fits together like a puzzle," said Terri Rimer, a kindergarten teacher from Long Elementary School.

"The LIFE Program gives teachers the reasons for what they are doing," said San Jacinto Junior High School eighth-grade teacher K.K. Kinder. "We know exactly what outcomes and goals we will have for the classroom."

The course instructs educators on how to tailor reading and writing strategies to specific students' needs. "They can make decisions about teaching phonics or spelling. They can pick what they need in each class," Ms. Swisher said.

Since last year, 97 MISD teachers have been trained in the courses and an additional 96 will be trained this school year.

"These teachers will go on to demonstrate their techniques in classrooms of their peers," Ms. Swisher said.

Robyn Platt, a national consultant on the courses, said the material gives teachers the tools to "be responsible and ask: 'How can I best meet the needs of my students?'"

Ms. Platt said the reading courses were developed in Australia. "It's been in the United States since 1988. It teaches students to be life-long learners. It refines the skills teachers need to learn how theory and practice work together."

Carrie Salazar, a first-grade bilingual teacher at Milam Elementary School, said the course has given her new materials to use that she will translate into Spanish.

Virginia Cox, a sixth-grade language arts teacher at Pease Elementary School, said she liked the idea of using literature to promote reading and writing. "I've learned new strategies for teaching reading, spelling and language arts — strategies I will share as a facilitator.

The staff development courses concludes Friday. Participating teachers will instruct their peers (in the fall) for two hours an evening in a 12-week course on the subject.

assistance for their education. Now, more of them can attend school without increasing their debt burden through student loans."

Barker said more than 90 individuals, businesses, foundations and non-profit organizations donated to the scholarship drive. The drive began in May 1994 when Houston Endowment Inc. pledged to match $1 for every $2 raised for scholarship endowments through June 30.

During that time, UTPB raised $600,000 to leverage the maximum amount under the matching grant, bringing the endowment total to $900,000. In addition, a match by Houston Endowment Inc. doubled the $50,000 raised by the university in annual scholarships, resulting in a total of $100,000.

"We have had some endowed scholarships before, but this is the most money we have had for endowments. It's a good start for us," Barker said, noting that the university has set its sights on earning the next $1 million.

"We really need another $1 million," he said. "These scholarships serve the whole spectrum of students, from those with financial need to academic or presidential scholarships. It's hard for our students to start out in a new career with the pressure of a college loan to pay off. We want to give them a better start in life (after college graduation)."

BUDDIES: Boys keep friendship alive

(From 1B)

He goes year-round from April to April. Because of that he is still in the sixth grade in Japanese schools, while Coley will begin the seventh grade next month.

Each morning during his stay with Coley, Evan has to get up and do his school work before enjoying recreation.

Evan was treated to a Midland Angels game Tuesday and visited the Confederate Air Force-American Air Power Heritage Museum. Still to come during his stay are a visit to an Indian reservation in New Mexico and fishing and "looking for little critters or bears."

The pair plan on continuing their annual summer rendezvous.

Camp Longhorn is just for children ages 7-15. So what do the boys plan to do each summer after 15?

"We'll be counselors," Coley said matter-of-factly.

Commission: Female Ranger wasn't victim of harassment

By Mike Cochran and Chip Brown
Associated Press

AUSTIN — The state's top-ranking Texas Ranger and nine officers convinced a board of inquiry Tuesday that ex-Ranger Cheryl Steadman was not mistreated before, during or after a controversial overnight outing in March 1994.

"Sgt. Cheryl Steadman was not the victim of harassment, discrimination or hostile environment which prevented her from succeeding as a Texas Ranger," the three-member Public Safety Commission ruled.

The policy-making commission issued its statement late Tuesday after the Rangers testified under oath that no one was drunk or rowdy at the meeting and Ms. Steadman's allegations of sexual harassment were without merit.

Ten Rangers, including the elite crime-fighting agency's only two women officers, portrayed Ms. Steadman as insecure, incompetent and "overwhelmed" by the pressures of the job.

Appearing at the unusual board of inquiry, the Rangers told the commission they wanted Ms. Steadman to succeed but that she lost interest in the job and turned on them in despair.

Ms. Steadman sat stoically through only one witness and then strode from the hearing in silence.

Ms. Steadman had told The Associated Press on Monday night that she saw "no point to the hearing" because she believed the commissioners had already reached a decision.

She repeated her claim that the inquiry was a "no-win situation" for her and said the matter eventually would be resolved in a "real court."

The commission said in effect that Ms. Steadman was not treated inappropriately at any point in her brief Ranger career and that she simply was "incompatible" with the service.

"The commission finds that a female law enforcement officer of ordinary sensitivities should have been able to successfully cope with the treatment she received as a female Ranger," according to the statement.

The commission, which oversees the Department of Public Safety, said it will evaluate its findings over the next several months and "consider whether or not changes in policy are necessary."

Ms. Steadman declined to testify on the advice of her attorney, Edward Tuddenham.

"It's not the kind of hearing designed or likely to get to the truth of the matter," Tuddenham said.

He pointed out that the case is pending before the Texas Commission on Human Rights, "the body authorized by law to investigate charges of sexual discrimination."

Ms. Steadman, who was one of the first two women inducted into the Rangers in 1993, asked for and received reassignment to a DPS unit in Houston last year.

Lt. Robert Madeira, who served as Ms. Steadman's direct supervisor in Houston, said he and others went to extremes to make Ms. Steadman feel comfortable. He said he personally provided his study materials for tests, washed and repaired her agency car and even helped her select her Ranger uniform.

"I thought we were being sensitive to Cheryl," Madeira said. "I thought she would fit in, that we could train her and make her a good Ranger."

But Madeira said she demonstrated her insecurity time and again, including at the company meeting in southeast Texas when she became offended when asked to help prepare the dinner.

"Everybody had to do their share because they don't have waitresses and maids there," Madeira said.

Ms. Steadman cited a pattern of harassment during her year as a Ranger but said it was after the Houston headquarters company meeting near Spurger that her career "went to hell in a handbasket."

She said most of the Rangers were drinking and some were using offensive language.

Ranger David Maxwell defended the recitation of a crude poem touting the sexual exploits of a legendary retired Ranger by saying it was read 30 to 40 feet away from Ms. Steadman.

"I had trouble hearing all of it and I was sitting right there," Maxwell said.

Ranger Chief Maurice Cook said no one was drunk at the meeting and that he personally would not tolerate behavior such as that described by Ms. Steadman.

Furthermore, he said, "I was the last one who wanted to see her fail."

Three Rangers who described themselves as friends of Ms. Steadman's each criticized her work with the force.

"I think she was overwhelmed by the job and this is her way of explaining why it didn't work out," said Ranger Tony Leal of Liberty. "You have to tear down where you didn't make it."

Ranger Israel Pacheco said Ms. Steadman told him she once wore a dress instead of customary pants to a Ranger function to annoy her supervisors.

Several witnesses testified that Ms. Steadman seemed more preoccupied with the Rangers' purported dress code than by their investigative duties.

Sgts. Marrie Garcia of San Antonio and Christine Nix of Waco said the dress code, which includes a hat, boots and trousers, was never an issue with them.

"Every woman jokes that a man designed their uniform because it's so uncomfortable," Ms. Nix said. "I'm a black woman wearing western wear for the first time. But I've been in the military, so uniforms are not a problem."

The women said they encountered no hostility or harassment and that they knew of no changes necessary to accommodate women in the Rangers.

Attorney Tuddenham said the investigators should have looked into the matter when the charges first surfaced a year ago.

"The DPS had ample opportunity to conduct an inquiry at that time but failed to do so," he said. "Having failed to do so, the proper authority to investigate this matter is now the Human Rights Commission."

Ms. Steadman was accompanied to the hearing by DPS Sgt. Lisa Sheppard, a Corpus Christi criminal investigator who turned down a Ranger commission last year and also filed a human rights complaint against the Ranger leadership.

MAJORITY TO MINORITY TRANSFER

The majority-to-minority pupil transfer policy provision is an important part of the desegregation plan of Midland elementary schools. This transfer policy allows eligible young children to attend the same school as older brothers and sisters in grades 4,5, and 6. The majority-to-minority transfer policy states:

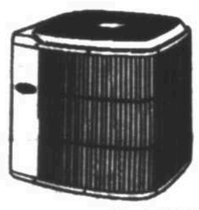

A primary-level pupil (grades 1,2, or 3) may transfer from a school in which the pupil's race or ethnic background is the majority to another school in the assigned elementary school cluster, serving the residence, in which the pupil's race is the minority. Transportation is provided by regularly scheduled bus routes which transport intermediate level pupils (grades 4, 5, and 6) within the elementary cluster.

Pupils in grades 1,2, and 3 may transfer to another school in the elementary cluster when their race or ethnic background is a majority in the home school. Also, the race or ethnic background must be in a minority in the receiving school. Transportation is provided by regularly scheduled bus routes within the elementary cluster. You may receive more information by contacting the principal of any elementary school or Jimmie Kelly at the Office of Compliance at 689-1098.

For summer grilling: Chicken and Potato Fiesta Grill. For this dish, potatoes, peppers, zucchini and mushrooms are grilled on skewers. The grilled chicken and vegetables are served with salsa.

Here's a grilling summer menu

Associated Press

For a backyard barbecue, serve grilled chicken, potatoes and other fresh vegetables. The chicken is marinated for flavor, then grilled with red pepper, zucchini, potatoes and mushrooms. Serve with flour or corn tortillas.

CHICKEN AND POTATO FIESTA GRILL

1½ pounds (4 medium) potatoes, cut into 1½ inch cubes
¼ cup fresh lime juice
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
2 cloves garlic, chopped
1 teaspoon chili powder
1 teaspoon dried oregano leaves
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon ground cumin
¼ teaspoon ground red pepper flakes
4 whole chicken legs with thighs
1 small red pepper, seeded and cut into 1½ inch squares
2 medium (6-inch) zucchini, cut into ¾ inch slices
½ pound button mushrooms
4 to 8 warm flour or corn tortillas
Prepared salsa

Combine potato cubes and 2 tablespoons water in a microwave-safe dish. Cover, cook on high (100 percent power) about 10 minutes, until potatoes are just tender; cool.

For the marinade: In a small bowl, whisk lime juice, oil, garlic, chili powder, oregano, salt, cumin and pepper flakes. Pour ¼ cup marinade over chicken in reseal-able plastic bag; turn to coat chicken. Set aside 30 minutes, or refrigerate up to two hours.

Meanwhile, thread potato cubes, bell pepper squares, zucchini slices and mushrooms alternately onto 8-to 12-inch bamboo skewers. Place on baking pan; brush with remaining marinade to coat.

Remove chicken from plastic bag; reserve marinade. Grill chicken over glowing coals 30 to 40 minutes, basting with its marinade. Be sure to discard any uncooked marinade. Turn chicken as needed, until juices run clear.

About 10 minutes before chicken is done, place skewers on grill. Cook, turning and basting occasionally with vegetable marinade until hot through and lightly browned. Potato skewers and chicken can be cooked under a broiler rather than on a grill, if you choose. Potatoes and vegetables can be wrapped in tortillas or eaten as desired. Serve salsa on the side. Makes 4 servings.

Strawberry surprise

Associated Press

Strawberry soup is a light, refreshing dessert for summertime and early fall entertaining. The recipe was chosen as the grand-prize winner of the California Strawberry and Cooking Light magazine Recipe Contest. Julie deMatteo of Clementon, N.J., won the $1,000 cash prize.

STRAWBERRY SOUP

2 10-ounce packages frozen sliced strawberries in syrup, thawed
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup lemon juice
8-ounce carton strawberry low-fat yogurt
¼ cup sugar
1½ cups sliced strawberries
1 cup chopped, peeled mango
½ cup chopped pineapple
Three 8-ounce cartons strawberry low-fat yogurt
1 cup (½ inch) cubes low-fat pound cake
1 cup sliced strawberries
Mint sprigs (optional)

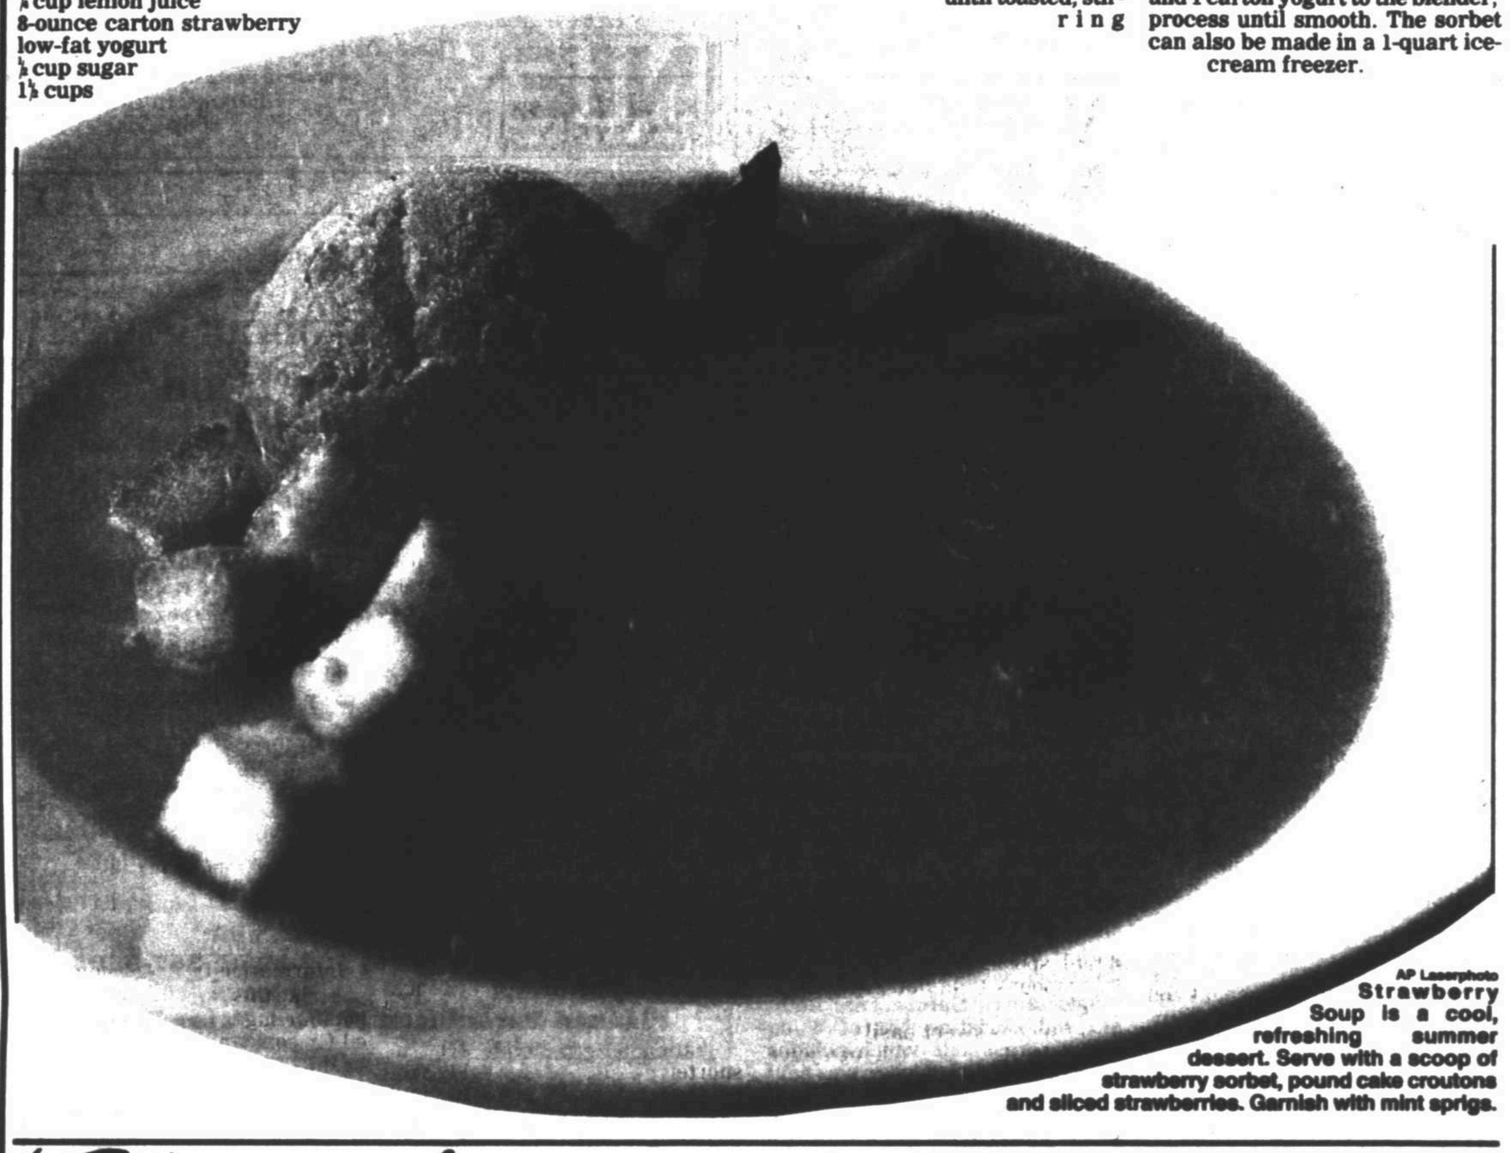

Drain strawberries, reserving 1 cup juice. Combine drained strawberries, the ¼ cup sugar, lemon juice and 1 carton yogurt in a blender; process until smooth. Pour mixture into an 8-inch square baking dish; cover and freeze until firm, stirring occasionally.

Combine reserved strawberry juice and the ¼ cup sugar in a small saucepan. Cook over medium-high heat 2 minutes or until sugar is dissolved, stirring constantly. Let cool slightly. Combine juice mixture, the 1½ cups sliced strawberries, mango, pineapple and three cartons yogurt in a blender; process until smooth. Pour into a bowl; cover and chill.

Place pound cake cubes on a baking sheet; broil 1 minute or until toasted, stirring halfway through cooking time.

To serve, spoon ¾ cup soup in each of 8 small bowls; top each with ½ cup sorbet, 2 tablespoons cake cubes and 2 tablespoons sliced strawberries. Garnish with mint, if desired. Makes 8 servings.

NOTE: Substitute 2 cups sliced fresh strawberries for the two 10-ounce packages of frozen strawberries and ¼ cup sugar, if desired. Combine strawberries and ¼ cup sugar; stir well. Let stand 1 hour; drain, reserving juice. Add drained strawberries, lemon juice and 1 carton yogurt to the blender; process until smooth. The sorbet can also be made in a 1-quart ice-cream freezer.

'Skins-on'

With just a toss, potato salad recipe offers easy way to a creative dish

Associated Press

In the following recipe for chunky cheese and potato salad, "skins-on" red potatoes are used to save preparation time — and to add color. Tossing the salad with bottled Italian dressing also helps keep it simple. The recipe was created by Mr. Food, a TV chef. It can be served with burgers or fried chicken, or any summer fare.

CHUNKY CHEESE AND POTATO SALAD

2 pounds small red potatoes, quartered (about 6 cups)
8-ounce package shredded cheddar cheese (2 cups)
1½ cups sliced celery
1 cup sweet red bell pepper, cut into 1-inch chunks
½ cup sliced green onions (scallions)
¾ cup bottled Italian salad dressing

In a large saucepan, place potatoes with enough water to cover. Bring to a boil; reduce heat and cook until tender, about 10 minutes. Drain potatoes; cool to room temperature.

Meanwhile, in a large bowl, combine cheese, celery, bell pepper and green onions; stir in potatoes. Toss with salad dressing to coat. Serve immediately or cover and refrigerate until ready to serve. Makes 6 servings.

To save time — and add color — skins-on red potatoes are used in Chunky Cheese and Potato Salad. Bottled dressing makes this salad quick and easy to prepare.

WHAT'S COOKING?

At home or work, food is part of man's life

Jerry Kruger, manager of Luby's cafeteria, checks the pies that will be served for dessert.

By Linda Anderson
Staff Writer

Jerry Krueger, general manager of Luby's Cafeteria in Midland, works around food for about 15 hours a day. So what does he do when he gets home at night? Sometimes, he said, he cooks.

Although he doesn't have time to cook very often, "when I cook at home on my days off we do something simple, because with the boys and all their activities," it's better to keep the family menu simple.

Krueger and his wife have three sons — aged 16, 14 and 12 — who are into football, baseball, track, soccer and guitar lessons in various combinations.

And besides all the sons' activities and Krueger's career, "my wife is a pastor at First United Methodist," he said. "She does hospital visits, funerals, weddings, so we have a goofy schedule."

With each member of the family having his or her own busy agenda, easy-to-prepare meals are a must. And now that the boys are getting older, they are taking some of the responsibility for family meals.

"We have tried to teach the boys how to do fundamental cooking-type stuff," Krueger said. Now the boys help out in the kitchen at home and "this (simple recipes) is stuff even they can do."

Krueger himself has been in the restaurant business for about 20 years now, and has been cooking at home for just about that long. But cooking in a restaurant and cooking for your family are two different things, he said. Not only does he have a team assisting him with the cooking at the restaurant, but he has to be more careful with recipes.

"I can afford to be a lot more creative (with recipes) at home," he said. "If you make a mistake at home, you can always go out to eat. If I make a mistake here (at work) and try to serve it, we may lose a customer."

These are two of the recipes that the Krueger family enjoys:

2 medium white onions, chopped

DEAR ABBY

Suburban couple disappointed with 'city friends'

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Several years ago, we moved to the suburbs — a two-hour drive from the city. Wanting to maintain our friendship with city friends, we often make the drive to see them. We always take a bottle of wine, and gifts for the children. Now for the problem:

Van Buren

For all of our efforts, they have come to visit us only twice. Lately, they don't even acknowledge our birthday cards or gifts with so much as a thank-you. We have dropped hints and come right out and expressed our disappointment and hurt — to no avail.

We still talk on the phone occasionally (when we call them), but we've finally come to the end of our rope. Abby, how do we make it clear, without issuing an ultimatum, that our friendship will be limited to telephone conversations unless they visit us in our home? — FED UP WITH OLD FRIENDS

DEAR FED UP: Some friendships fade with time. Distance and inconvenience can also play a large part in their demise. Perhaps you should let this old friendship die a natural death and concentrate on making friends in your new community so you will not be entirely dependent on those from your former neighborhood.

DEAR ABBY: After reading your answer to the 68-year-old widow in Portland, Maine, who wished that her grown children would respect her privacy and telephone before dropping in unexpectedly, I had to write.

You advised: "When you desire privacy for any reason, pull down your shades, lock the doors, and don't answer your doorbell."

Abby, I am a 71-year-old woman who has a husband, for which I am grateful. We also have married children, and we don't care whether they call or not before visiting us. They are welcome to drop by any time. In fact, they don't visit often enough to suit us.

A visit from our kids means more to us than a TV show or a book that can be put aside and picked up at a later date. Our children know what we look like most of the time, so what difference does it make if my hair is in rollers and we're not dressed up? — BERNELE HALE, BOUNTIFUL, UTAH

DEAR BERNELE HALE: It will probably please you to know that I received an avalanche of letters from readers who agree with you.

However, the widow from Portland, Maine, wrote that she had asked her family to please phone her before dropping in, as there are days when she doesn't feel like getting dressed or making her bed. And sometimes there are dishes in the sink, her hair is a mess, or she could be entertaining her "significant other," who lives across town.

You may welcome drop-in visitors, but they could be embarrassing to the Portland widow. Everyone has a right to privacy.

DEAR ABBY: Rick and I have been married less than three weeks, and we've already had a serious fight. Here's what happened:

Rick picked up the proofs of our wedding pictures, and there were only two pictures that were any good. There was one in which I looked good but Rick looked terrible. In the other one, he looked good, but I looked terrible.

The photographer said if he took them over, we would have to pay for another sitting, and that was out of the question.

We decided to put the pictures away and think it over. A couple of days later, Rick called the photographer and ordered the one in which he looked good and I looked terrible.

Do I have the right to be mad? — BRIDE OF THREE WEEKS

DEAR BRIDE: Yes. Tell your husband that fair's fair, then call the photographer to order a copy of the picture YOU liked. That way, each of you will have a picture you look good in.

(When you look at the pictures in 25 years, you'll probably agree that BOTH of you looked terrible!)

Sugar free gum has good taste

By Linda Anderson

This column is going to be a little different because I don't think we've ever tested gum before.

Anderson

But three boxes of XyliFresh 100 sugar-free gum came in the mail the other day, followed by several days of media blitz-type television commercials gushing about how refreshing and good-for-your-teeth this new kind of gum is, so we just couldn't resist checking it out.

The three flavors sent to us by the company were spearmint, peppermint and cherry. Nothing too unusual there.

The gum comes 12 rectangular pieces per box, kind of like Chiclets do. And suggested retail price per box is 89 cents (remember when gum was only a nickel? The times, they are a'changing).

Information from the company goes like this: "XyliFresh 100, the popular sugar free gum formulated for consumers who care about healthy teeth and fresh breath, has added a delicious new cherry flavor." (How many of you had ever heard of their old flavors before?) "The brand is currently sold in Peppermint and Spearmint flavors and is now available in grocery, mass merchandise and convenience stores nationwide.

"Fruit flavors are trending very well in the U.S. We expect the expanded flavor range will attract younger consumers as well as adults who want an alternative to mint flavors. And of course all users of XyliFresh 100 gum can experience the superior dental health benefits and refreshing cool taste.

"XyliFresh 100 sugar free gum contains xylitol as the only bulk sweetener. Xylitol is a sweetener found in nature; most commonly in fruits and vegetables. Xylitol's chemical structure inhibits bacteria from producing harmful plaque acids that cause cavities. Dramatic results of a recent 28 month study involving 1,200 school children proved that gum sweetened with xylitol helps prevent tooth decay. Some children actually experienced the remineralization of tooth decay in early stages of caries formation.

"... XyliFresh 100 with xylitol has also been recommended by the dental organizations of Finland, Sweden, Norway, Iceland, Ireland and Great Britain."

I don't know about you, but I tend to take all these fantastic dental claims with a grain of salt (maybe sugar?) (Ever notice how all those tabloid "newspaper" stories about alien babies and toasters that sing Elvis songs come from places like Norway and Finland too?) I need to ask my favorite dentist about all that next time I go see him...

But the taste test proved that sugar free gum can taste just as good as sugar-rich gum. Everybody seemed to approve, to the point that one or two of them were sneaking pieces of gum off my desk when I wasn't looking.

Maybe I'll look for XyliFresh 100 next time I'm in the market for gum. I just am not sure where to look — I've never noticed it in any of the local stores before.

Nudists protest under 18 age limit at Hippie Hollow

AUSTIN (AP) — After nearly 30 years of nude sunbathing and swimming by sun worshippers of all ages, Austin's Hippie Hollow was voted off limits Tuesday to people under the age of 18.

The Travis County Commissioners' Court voted unanimously to prohibit children and young adults from the county-owned park on the north shore of Lake Travis.

The decision came after 2 1/2 hours in closed session with County Attorney Ken Oden and after an hourlong public hearing attended by about 20 supporters of nudity at the park.

Oden spearheaded the effort to prohibit children at the park, saying exposing children to nudity with or without their parents' permission is illegal and that he would prosecute violators.

Oden's stance became known recently when Liberty Action International, a pro-nudism group, announced plans to hold a children's poster contest celebrating last week's National Nude Week.

Under the impression that the posters may include photographs of nude children, Oden wrote to the organizers, telling them the contest "may violate several criminal laws."

He said he would prosecute if possible.

The Hippie Hollow area has attracted nude sunbathers at least since the 1960s and has been a focus of controversy.

In the 1970s, a lawsuit filed by nearby property owners sought to force the Lower Colorado River Authority, which then owned the park, to close it to the public until LCRA could regulate conduct there.

The request was denied but not before residents of the area testified to their concerns about sanitations, litter, noise and open sexual activity in and near the hollow.

Travis County took over Hippie Hollow in 1983.

Oden also told Gene Stevens, Liberty Action's director, that such "tolerant" attitudes that have prevailed concerning Hippie Hollow have "never extended to the involvement or exploitation of children."

County Judge Bill Aleshire agreed that children were never intended to be present at the park when the county allowed nude sunbathing.

He and other commissioners said they would not challenge Oden's legal authority to interpret what was illegal.

Unbridled Broncos

DENVER — The Denver Broncos have terminated the contract of safety Dennis Smith and placed linebacker Karl Mecklenburg on the reserve-retired list.

Mecklenburg, 34, said after 12 years in the NFL, he was ready to leave.

However, Smith recently asked the Broncos to release him from the four-year $1.12 million contract he signed in September so he could try to sign with another team. At 36, he would be the oldest defensive back in the league.

Together, Smith and Mecklenburg appeared in 12 Pro Bowls and 384 games and made 1,683 tackles.

In 1989, Smith was former coach Dan Reeves' first-round choice. Smith later teamed with Steve Atwater to give the Broncos one of the NFL's more dominant safety duos.

Last season, Smith tied Tom Jackson's longevity record by playing 14 consecutive seasons with the Broncos.

Is she fit to stand?

TORONTO — The woman charged with threatening to kill Toronto Blue Jays second baseman Roberto Alomar will undergo further psychiatric assessment to determine whether she is fit to stand trial.

Judge Gord Hachborn of Ontario Court's provincial division ordered a 30-day assessment for Tricia Miller, 31, at a brief hearing Tuesday. She already has undergone a three-day assessment.

Police said a woman carrying a bag with a handgun inside told staff at the SkyDome Hotel July 2 that she wanted to kill Alomar, 27. Police seized a loaded .32-caliber revolver.

Miller, a factory worker from Port Hope, Ontario, is charged with threatening death, carrying a concealed weapon, possession of a dangerous weapon, possession of a restricted weapon and possession of stolen property.

Miller will return to court Aug. 9, when a judge will decide whether she is fit to stand trial or if further assessment is needed.

Alomar has hired a bodyguard since the incident.

Austin not united

AUSTIN — Thousands of Austin residents are trying to force a vote or referendum on whether the city should fund part of a $32 million minor-league baseball stadium.

City leaders have already decided to pay $10 million for the stadium, but as of Monday about 5,000 area residents had signed a petition to take the issue before voters.

A group called Save Austin From Extravagance must collect about 15,000 voter signatures by Sept. 1 to block the city's plans to issue bonds for stadium's construction. A vote could then come as early as Nov. 7, city officials say.

"Conservatives who sign the petition are saying that the city shouldn't spend that money on a baseball stadium, and the liberals are telling us that the city should spend it on something different like health and human services," said Bob Larson, a SAFE founder who served on the Austin City Council from 1990 to 1993.

Angels win one, lose two

Midland beats Shreveport in 12 innings, loses Greene, Carvajal

By Mike Butts
Sports Writer

A win is a win. But in this case a win was more of a loss for the Midland Angels.

The Angels scored a run in the bottom of the 12th inning Tuesday to beat Shreveport 7-6. But the announcement came during the game that Midland will lose the Texas League's top home run hitter, catcher Todd Greene, to Triple A Vancouver.

And that's not all. The Angels will also loss their leadoff hitter and the league's leading base stealer, rightfielder Jovino Carvajal, to Triple A Vancouver. Both moves are affective today.

Greene leaves the club having hit 24 home runs and driven in 61 runs. Carvajal has scored 58 runs, fourth in the league, and stolen 39 batters, 10 more than the second best total coming into Tuesday's game.

There was no word on who would replace Greene at catcher or Carvajal in the outfield, but the Angels' offensive potency will probably fall with the loss. Greene's 61 RBIs and Carvajal's 58 runs scored account for almost 25 percent of Midland's 485 runs scored this season.

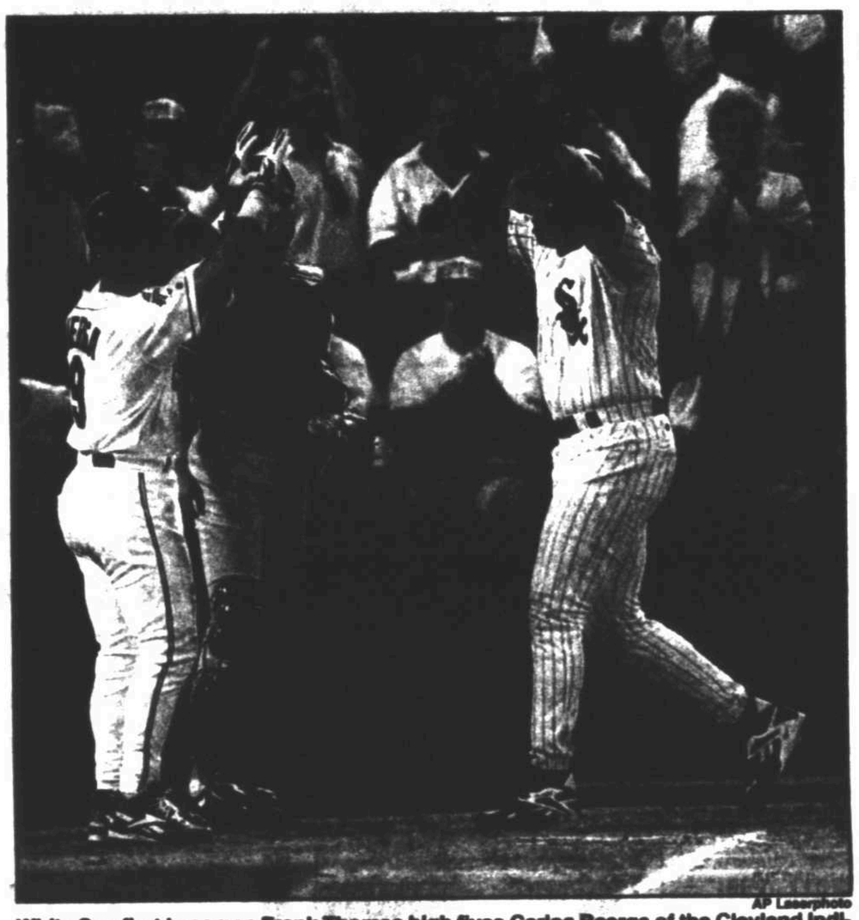

The Angels won the first half of the Texas League Western Division to assure a playoff spot. And they lead the West now with a 11-8 record. But they'll probably play the final 49 games without two of their best offensive players.

Tuesday at Christensen Stadium the team opened a five-game set with Shreveport, the first-half Eastern Division winner, without either Greene or George Arias, the league-leader in RBIs, in the lineup. Both played in Monday night's Double A All-Star game and were probably given a rest because of it. The Angels managed the win without, for the most part, help from either. Although Arias singled in the bottom of the 12th after coming into the game in the sixth, a hit that was followed by the winning score. Midland will have to win many more games this season without Greene at all.

Korey Keling got the win in relief of Steve Renko. He gave up a solo home run to Tim Flores, the first man he faced, that tied the game at 6-6 in the seventh inning. But he went on to throw five innings of shutout on three more hits getting eight strikeouts.

Michael Wolff ledoff the Angels' 12th with a single to left that was followed by Arias' hit. With Tim Harkrider at the plate, Shreveport catcher Doug Mirabelli took a pitchout and threw wide of first base trying to get White Sox first baseman Frank Thomas high fives Carlos Baerga of the Cleviland Indians in the fourth inning of Tuesday's All-Star game. Thomas' 418-foot home run wound up in the hands of 9-year-old Alex Fehr, the nephew of union head Donald Fehr.

ARLINGTON, Texas ` — Hideo Nomo began the game with a poignant bow, to his teammates and to the troubled national pastime. Jeff Conine, Mike Piazza and Craig Biggio won it with pure power.

What started as a strikeout duel between Nomo and Randy Johnson turned into home-run derby, with Conine's solo shot in the eighth inning Tuesday night giving the National League a 3-2 victory in the All-Star game.

And, maybe a reason for fans to come back to baseball.

"There was a lot of enthusiasm. We had a good game tonight," Conine said. "So hopefully, this will carry over into the second half."

All of the runs scored on homers, highlighted by Frank Thomas' monster drive for the Americans in the fourth, and all of the Nationals' hits were home runs.

Nomo and Johnson, leading their leagues in strikeouts, each fanned three in two scoreless innings, perhaps leaving fans wishing they could have stayed longer. But Nomo was satisified.

"No, this was just fine, thank you," he said through a translator.

Yet even this relatively entertaining game was touched by reminders of the strike that soured its fans last season.

Thomas' home run landed in a luxury box in left field that was rented for the day by, of all organizations, the Players Association. The ball eventually came to rest in the hands of union head Donald Fehr's 9-year-old nephew, Alex.

And, right after Thomas — the home-run derby champion in Monday's workouts and a fan favorite — homered, he exited the game. He had to leave because his Chicago White Sox play Wednesday, part of the rejiggered schedule that cut short the All-Star break.

"We've got a 3:15 workout tomorrow that I want to be at," he said. "We need to make something happen in the second half."

Still, the crowd of 50,920, the largest in the two-year history of The Ballpark in Arlington, seemed to enjoy the show. About 110 spectators, however, had to

Mickey Mantle explains liver condition was no joke

■ "The Mick" says that his off-the-field behavior should not be copied by those looking for a role model.

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — Looking thin and admitting he's weak, Mickey Mantle still put on a show Tuesday as he joked through most of his first public appearance since a liver transplant just over a month ago.

Mantle, whose ring and watch hung loosely, turned serious several times during his half-hour news conference, almost always to give the warning that people shouldn't live the lifestyle he did and expect to get away with it.

"You talk about a role model, this is a role model: Don't be like me," said Mantle, whose 40 years of hard drinking in part led to his being near death and needing a new liver June 8.

"God gave me the ability to play baseball and I wasted it. I'm going to spend the rest of my life trying to make up. I want to start giving something back."

Mantle wore a light black jacket, black pants, a white T-shirt and a baseball cap bearing the insignia of the All-Star Game, which was scheduled Tuesday night at The Ballpark at Arlington. His outfit was no disguise for his 40-pound weight loss.

Mantle said he was serious about making a difference in helping promote organ donations. He's vowed to do whatever he can to help the program at Baylor University Medical Center, site of Tuesday's news conference and the hospital that treated him from May 28 to June 28.

Organ banks around the country say Mantle's case has already made a difference. The Southwest Organ Bank,

WACO, Texas — Past Baylor assistant coaches say former men's basketball coach Darrel Johnson was involved in a recruiting scandal at the school, even though a jury acquitted him of the charges.

Former Johnson assistants Kevin Gray and Gary Thomas, who were sentenced last week for their part in the scandal, say Johnson condoned the cheating.

In a deposition recently given to Baylor officials, Gray recalls a statement he made to Johnson and Thomas about the cheating.

"I'm telling you guys something," Gray says. "If anybody ever looks at this stuff, they are going to throw us underneath the jail."

Last week, U.S. District Judge Walter Smith, Jr., placed Gray and Thomas and former Baylor assistant Troy Drummond on three years of probation for their part in giving five junior college recruits term papers and changing the players' test scores in 1993.

The same jury that convicted them of conspiracy, wire fraud and mail fraud acquitted Johnson.

But a different picture emerges in depositions given by Gray and Thomas as part of an ongoing NCAA investigation of the scandal.

Thomas says the cheating "was always discussed in meetings" with Johnson.

"We always reported back to him," he said. "He was my boss and he was telling me what to do."

Thomas said that Johnson once ordered him to check the answers that recruit Tyrone Davis had given on correspondence test from Southeastern College of the Assemblies of God in Lakeland, Fla.

"He missed half the answers," Thomas said. "So basically what I did was went in and just wrote down the correct answers" on a blank answer sheet to mail in for grading.

"He (Johnson) just said 'You know, that's probably the right thing to do,' " Thomas said.

Johnson was unavailable for comment. His lawyer, Jim Darnell, said it's important to note that the depositions were given before the men were sentenced. None of the men took the stand during the trial.

Darnell said Baylor officials made a deal with the men to implicate Johnson in turn for the school writing Judge Smith a letter supporting probation.

"Here were three decent, regular human beings who had never been faced with anything like this and who were scared to death of going to prison," he said. "Baylor went to them and said ... 'You help us and we'll help you.' If you were Baylor, would you be afraid ... of a wrongful dismissal lawsuit" by Johnson?

Baylor officials have repeatedly declined to discuss the case.

But even Smith has hinted that Johnson might have known more than was revealed at trial.

In addressing a prosecution request for a longer sentence than called for under federal sentencing guidelines for Thomas last week, Smith said: "If any person would be entitled to an enhancement ... that person's not here."

Was he referring to Johnson?

"I guess," said Assistant U.S. Attorney John Phinizy, who prosecuted the case. "The evidence at trial showed that he was involved. The other coaches clearly implicate him (in their depositions) as participating knowingly and orchestrating the entire scheme."

Robert Swanton, Thomas' lawyer, agreed, adding that he thought Johnson was "absolutely" guilty.

Smith was unavailable for comment. His secretary said the judge does not speak publicly about his cases.

Watzl named to 3A all-state team

■ Ranger closes out his high school career as Class 3A's top first baseman.

Staff and Wire

Former Midland Greenwood first baseman Andy Watzl had quite a senior year at Midland Greenwood.

Tuesday, that was recognized by the Texas Sports Writers Association when Watzl was named as a first-team member of the Class 3A All-State baseball team.

"I'm flabbergasted," Watzl said upon hearing the news. "It's a great honor. There are a lot of great players out there. I was lucky enough to be chosen as one of them."

Watzl was four-year letterman at the Midland Greenwood program which went all the way to the Region I finals and compiled a 19-11-1 record his senior year. Watzl was quick to mention his team as being equally responsible for what he did.

"It says a lot for our program," Watzl said. "We wanted to set the standard that others would reach for. I'm proud that we went as far as we did."

Zulle wins ninth stage, Indurain widens lead

LA PLAGNE, France (AP) — Alex Zulle of Switzerland won Tuesday's stage of the Tour de France, while four-time defending champion Miguel Indurain widened his overall lead.

Indurain finished second, a little more than two minutes behind Zulle, in the ninth stage. But Indurain picked up time on his major rivals.

Zulle is second overall, more than two minutes behind. Indurain's other rivals, including Tony Rominger and Laurent Jalabert, were far behind.

Entering the stage, Indurain had a 23-second lead over Bjarne Riis, who was only 12 seconds behind the Spanaird in Sunday's time trial. Riis is now nearly six minutes behind in third. Rominger is fourth, 6:35 back.

The race began the first of three days in the Alps after an off day. The stage from Le Grand Barnand to La Plagne was 99 miles. It was highlighted by six climbs, each higher than the previous, ending with the slope to La Plagne, 6,475 feet.

Zulle broke away midway through the stage and built a five-minute advantage entering the final climb.

"When I attacked, I was surprised to find myself all alone so soon," he said.

With less than nine miles to go, Indurain started to close the gap on Zulle.

By six miles, the margin was down to 3 1/2 minutes. At three miles, it was three minutes. But Zulle held on to win.

"Second place in the Tour de France is good for the morale," Zulle said. "But there's a long way to go."

Wednesday's stage has three major climbs, all more than 5,886 feet, ending with l'Alpe d'Huez and its 21 hairpin curves.

Indurain is seeking a record fifth straight Tour de France victory.

Belgian Eddy Merckx and Frenchmen Jacques Anquetil and Bernard Hinault are the only other five-time winners, but none did it consecutively.

BAYLOR: NCAA is investigating 70 athletes who went to JC's

(From 1C)

When the alleged recruiting violations were first reported, Baylor suspended Davis, Jason Ervin, Marcus Thompson, Shannon Brantley. The fifth recruit, Jerome Lambert, was allowed to play in 1993-94 before transferring to Oklahoma State.

The NCAA Committee on Infractions is to meet Aug. 11-13 with Baylor officials to discuss its investigation.

Thomas said that he heard of using Southeastern College correspondence courses from Denny Downing, former head coach at Ranger Junior College in Texas.

As a result of the Baylor probe, the NCAA is investigating more than 70 former junior college athletes who went on to play at more than 40 NCAA schools.

WATZL: RC's Ramirez also picked all-state

(From 1C)

Watzl, who played in the Texas High School Coaches Association's All-Star Game this summer in College Station, hit .562 in the playoffs during that playoff run. That included two doubles, one triple and three RBIs.

During the regular season, Watzl was just as strong. He hit .505 with two home runs, three triples, 10 doubles and 30 RBIs. Watzl, also, was 8-4 with one save as a pitcher for the Rangers.

Watzl, a two-time District 8-3A first team player his junior and senior years, is leaning towards playing at Lubbock Christian University this fall.

Joe Ramirez of Reagan County was also named to the first team as the third baseman.

The all-state team also included two members from Class 3A state champion Halletsville, including Player of the Year Jeff Appelt.

Appelt struck out 129 batters en route to a 14-0 record and an 0.95 earned run average while hitting .468 with two home runs, 11 doubles and 23 runs batted in.

His battery-mate, catcher Mike Benewald, also made the first team. Brahmas skipper Jim Appelt was Coach of the Year thanks to Halletsville's 29-1 record and subsequent title.

MANTLE: Mickey's received 20,000 letters which found the liver for Mantle, has seen requests for donor cards go from 10-12 per week to more than 700.

(From 1C)

Mantle did turn testy twice Tuesday, both times when asked whether his celebrity status helped him get an organ quicker.

The first time he pointed to doctors and harshly said "they're going to answer that for you," he later said "you want that thing stuck in your face?" when a microphone-wielding reporter asked the question again.

But the overall mood was cheerful as Mantle displayed the swashbuckling style that made him a household name since his days as "The Mick" for the New York Yankees.

Mantle often pointed to friends in the crowd and smiled at them. When he spotted ultra-collector Barry Halper, who owns Ty Cobb's dentures, Mantle asked, "Barry, did you buy my liver?"

His best line was when Mantle was asked about whether he'd heard from any former teammates. After listing several, he mentioned a conversation with Yogi Berra.

Mantle had an aw-shucks attitude about the outpouring of concern toward him. He was surrounded by eight get-well cards each about 5-feet high and 3-feet wide and all completely signed. He said he's received 20,000 letters.

Doctors say Mantle's recovery is going smoothly and they're still confident about the 60 percent chance they've given him to live five more years.

Doctors said they removed all the cancer they saw, although they fear it could return. Goldstein said Mantle will remain on a low dose of chemotherapy for four to six months.

U.S. drops one to Bolivia 1-0

PAYSANDU, Uruguay (AP) — The United States lost 1-0 to Bolivia on Tuesday night, endangering the Americans' chances of advancing to the second round of the America Cup.

Marco Etcheverry scored in the 24th minute and the Bolivians held on in a second half dominated by the United States.

The United States (1-1-0) beat Chile in the opener of the South American championship and likely must tie or defeat Argentina in its final first-round game Friday night if it is to move on.

Bolivia, which made a strong run in qualifying for last summer's World Cup, is now in position to advance after losing its opener to Argentina. The Bolivians (1-1-0) face Chile in their last game of the first round.

In a later game Tuesday night, Argentina played Chile.

The United States and Mexico were the only countries outside South America invited to the 12-nation tournament. Eight teams qualify for the second round.

Bolivia produced the only goal when Etcheverry took a pass from Luis Cristaldo at the top of the box and faked a shot. He then dribbled past defender Alexi Lalas and beat goalkeeper Brad Friedel.

The Americans' best chance in the first half came in the 37th minute when Lalas received a long free kick and headed the ball wide.

The United States played an excellent second half. The Americans outshot Bolivia 11-2 and nearly scored in the 60th minute when Ernie Stewart missed a header after a pass from Cobi Jones.

Nomo's stature brings pressure to home media

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — For Japanese reporters, Tuesday night's All-Star game brought new pressure.

With Hideo Nomo on the mound, they faced tight deadlines for Wednesday afternoon's newspapers.

The game was to start at 7:29 p.m. CDT, 9:29 a.m. Wednesday in Japan. His first-edition deadline was 8:30 p.m. in Dallas, the second at 9:30 p.m. and the final at 11:30 p.m.

In recent years, about 50 All-Star game credentials have been issued to Japanese media. For Tuesday night's game, the number doubled.

Forty-one reporters and cameramen have traveled from Japan for the game. The rest of the credentialed Japanese are based in the United States.

"We've been here for two weeks," said Yuka Tsuchikawa, a reporter for TV Tokyo.

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
2NT	Pass	6NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♡

If you were to look up the North-South diamond combination in a textbook, you would be told that correct technique is to cash the two high honors in the South hand to find out whether West started with four headed by the jack, in which case you can bring in the suit without loss. But if you know that distribution cannot exist, it would be the height of folly to pursue the same course.

In the modern style, South's opening bid showed 21-22 points. With a combined count of 33-34, North had an easy raise to slam.

West led a heart, and the mirror-image hands and duplicated values were something of a concern for South. With only six tricks in the black suits, South needed to find the ace of hearts with East to collect two tricks in the suit, and four tricks from diamonds.

One problem was solved at trick one when East rose with the ace of hearts on the opening lead of the jack and returned a heart. Declarer won and cashed the king and queen of diamonds, and West's failure to follow suit was fatal — down one.

Once the ace of hearts had been taken, there was no hurry to tackle the diamonds. Let's suppose that declarer first cashes out the remaining four major-suit winners. When East discards a club on each major suit, West is marked with 10 cards in spades and hearts. The ace of clubs and a club to the queen reveals two more of West's cards, marking that defender with no more than one diamond.

Next, declarer cashes the ace of diamonds. When West follows low, East is known to have both the jack and nine of the suit. Declarer continues with the ten, forcing East to cover, and captures the trick with the queen. Declarer is now poised with the K 8 of diamonds over East's 9 7. A club to the king serves as an entry for South to take the proven finesse for the nine, and 12 tricks are in the bag.

Actor Hugh Grant pleads no contest to lewd conduct, gets fine, probation

LOS ANGELES — Hugh Grant pleaded no contest Tuesday to lewd conduct in a public place and was fined, placed on probation and ordered to participate in an AIDS education program.

The suave English actor, who was arrested with a prostitute last month, was not in court. He waived his right to appear before Municipal Court Commissioner Robert Sandoval, and defense attorney Howard Weitzman entered the plea for him, said city attorney spokesman Mike Qualls.

He was scheduled to attend the premiere of his new movie "Nine Months," in Century City on Tuesday night.

Grant was ordered to pay $1,180 in fines and costs, was placed on two years unsupervised probation and, as a condition of his probation, must complete an AIDS education program by Nov. 13, Qualls said.

Grant, 34, could have been sentenced to six months in jail, although jail time is rare for first-time offenders.

Arrested with Grant was Stella Marie Thompson, who police say also uses the alias Divine Brown and Estelle Thompson. Thompson, 23, who has two 1993 prostitution convictions, faces arraignment July 19.

Grant, who is best known for his role in the comedy "Four Weddings and a Funeral," was arrested June 27 as he sat in his parked white BMW with Thompson.

NEW YORK — "Sisters" co-star Sela Ward will take on the rise and fall of TV newswoman Jessica Savitch in a movie on cable.

"Almost Golden: The Jessica Savitch Story" won't sugarcoat Savitch's life, said Judy Girard, Lifetime vice president for programming.

Sela Ward to take on the risek, fall of TV newswoman Savitch.

Savitch drowned in 1983 at age 36 when the car in which she was a passenger backed into a canal outside Philadelphia. Her path to stardom at NBC included cocaine abuse, the suicide of her second husband five months after their wedding and a near breakdown on the air the year she died.

Ward, whose hair is blond for the part, dwelled on the positive in an interview in Tuesday's Daily News.

Savitch was "this wonderful woman, so full of life and playfulness. And she seemed like a really neat lady," said Ward, who plays Teddy on "Sisters."

The movie will air Sept. 4.

Lindbaugh's ex-interior decorator has beef about Rush's wife.

NEW YORK — Rush Limbaugh's former interior decorator says he's out of a job because Limbaugh's wife has expensive tastes.

Ken Jennings sued Monday for breach of contract, saying he is owed about $100,000.

He claims Limbaugh and his wife, Marta Fitzgerald, spent millions on the 12-room New York City apartment under his direction. But after working on it for a year, Jennings said he was suddenly barred from the building in April.

"I think she was having a hard time with Rush because of the money she was spending, and I think I became the fall guy," Jennings said.

The condo has a walk-in humidor for Limbaugh's cigars and solid gold fixtures.

MINNEAPOLIS — Kirk Douglas's son Eric was found innocent of disorderly conduct and obstruction charges over his eviction from a motel room.

Douglas, 36, was charged in November when police told him to leave the room where he had been staying while performing at a comedy club.

Motel employees said Douglas had been abusive, but his attorney, Barry Voss, said that no one told Douglas he had been evicted and that police overreacted.

DENVER — Princess Diana breezed through Denver and apparently headed for the hills.

The princess, her two sons and her entourage arrived from San Francisco on Monday. It wasn't clear where she was headed during her private trip, but British tabloids reported she went to the home of millionaire publisher Michael Flannery near Vail Mountain.

"Someone asked her where she was headed," flight attendant Kelly Schay said. "She said, 'Wouldn't you like to know?'"

Dollar rebounds

NEW YORK — The dollar advanced sharply Tuesday, buoyed by fears of Boris Yeltsin's failing health and speculation of a looming interest rate cut in Germany.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 87.58 yen, up from 86.93 late Monday. The dollar also was changing hands at 1.4080 German marks, up from 1.3963.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Friday: 1.1700 Swiss francs, up from 1.1575; 4.8920 French francs, up from 4.8510; 1,624 Italian lire, up from 1,613, and 1.3638 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3522.

The British pound was quoted at $1.5980, down from $1.5936.

Stocks retreat

NEW YORK — Stock prices pulled back Tuesday as profit-taking knocked the market off its lofty perch.

Weakness in the bond market, reflecting economic uncertainties, gave investors an excuse to sell stocks and collect profits from the recent record-breaking run-up while they reviewed corporate earnings reports and braced for possible disappointments.

The Dow Jones Industrial average fell 21.79 points to 4,650.60.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about 13 to 10 on the New York Stock Exchange. Volume on the NYSE floor amounted to 378.45 million shares.

Almost all broad gauges lost ground. The NYSE composite index fell 0.84 to 297.19 and Standard & Poor's 500 stock index dropped 2.41 to 564.78. The Nasdaq Stock Market composite retreated 6.41 to 970.22.

Only the American Stock Exchange managed to buck the trend. Its market value index established a record for the fourth straight session by rising 2.88 to 569.05.

Exxon lawsuit may have broad impact

■ Suit over substance abuse policy could affect thousands.

By Associated Press

DALLAS — A substance abuse lawsuit against Exxon Corp. could affect thousands of workers and explore untested provisions of the Americans With Disabilities Act, legal experts say.

The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission sued the oil giant June 28 on behalf of two demoted Exxon employees.

At issue is a company policy that prohibits employees who have been treated for drug or alcohol abuse from ever holding safety-sensitive jobs.

Exxon, based in Irving, Texas, said the policy is a "critical component" of its commitment to safety, covering about 12 percent of its 31,000 U.S. workers.

Jane Dolkart, professor at Southern Methodist University's Law School and a specialist in employment law, said the case will help distinguish between controlling safety risks and discriminating against an employee who has been treated for alcohol or drug abuse.

"It's an issue which has not been at all looked at under ADA," a 1991 law protecting employees with present or past disabilities from job discrimination, she told The Dallas Morning News in Tuesday's editions.

Other companies will be watching closely, said Mark deBernardo, a Washington, D.C., attorney who heads a business coalition called Employers for a Drug-Free Workplace, which includes Exxon as a corporate member.

"If Exxon were to prevail, there's no doubt that many, many employers will follow suit," deBernardo said. "There is very keen interest in Exxon's policy by other petrochemical companies and the business community at large."

Worker Glenn Hale said that is one reason he decided to file discrimination charges against his employer. Hale, a flight engineer since 1988 on Exxon's corporate jets, said in the lawsuit that he was demoted to mechanic last year because of the company's policy.

"If I don't stand up and say something, who's going to? This year it's Exxon; next year it's IBM," Hale told the newspaper.

Hale said he voluntarily went through six weeks of counseling for alcohol abuse 10 years ago and hasn't taken a drink since.

The EEOC sued Exxon on behalf of Hale, 36, and co-worker Salvatore Filippone, 43, who was treated for drug abuse 25 years ago when he was 18.

The agency said Exxon's policy violates the disability law because it unfairly stereotypes workers for their pasts. The law requires that each individual be judged on his or her fitness to do the job, the agency said.

Exxon said the 1989 policy doesn't violate the ADA and that the company will "vigorously defend" it in court. The company said it is caught in a legal dilemma between discrimination claims or possible punitive damages if there's an accident after a rehabilitated alcohol or drug abuser is returned to a safety-sensitive job.

Exxon has declined to comment further.

The genesis of the company's policy is the March 1989 Exxon Valdez oil spill. The tanker Valdez ran aground in Alaska's Prince William Sound and spilled 11 million gallons of crude oil.

Capt. Joseph Hazelwood had been treated for alcohol abuse in 1985 and was reinstated to his command under Exxon's policy at the time. He admitted he had been drinking the evening of the accident, but said he wasn't impaired or at fault.

Hazelwood was acquitted of criminal charges. But last fall, a civil jury hit Exxon with $5 billion in punitive damages. Exxon is contesting the damages.

After the spill, Exxon asked all U.S. employees to disclose any past treatment for alcohol or drug abuse, according to Hale and court papers. Those with a past treatment record would be taken off designated safety-sensitive jobs and assigned other work.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

Borger's development plan lures firm

■ Economic development agency provides low-interest loan to bring aircraft maker to Borger.

By Eric Vaughan

BORGER, Texas (AP) — H.B. Wise pulls back on the control stick of his "Streak Shadow" experimental aircraft and the small plane climbs into the sky over Borger.

From the air, the Hutchinson County airport is a grid of runways and buildings, one of which houses Laron Aviation Technologies.

The company, which has been in Borger since January, left Portales, N.M., for bluer skies. And the Borger Economic Development Corp. provided just the right hue.

"We weren't able to raise the working capital we needed in Portales, and Borger offered that," said Wise, co-owner and director of sales and marketing.

Laron Aviation, which now employs 10, received a $290,000 low-interest loan with the help of the city's economic development agency. The company builds light airplanes in varying stages of completion, which are then sold to customers who assemble the aircraft.

"Things are starting to pick up," Wise said recently from a hangar where the company builds its planes. "The unusual thing about the airplane business, and especially the kit airplane business, is you have to be around a while before people start trusting you with their money."

About 30 to 50 people trust the company with their money each year, and Wise said he hopes that number will continue to grow.

"Our long-term goal is to be about a $20 million-a-year company with about 50 employees," he said. "That's where we see ourselves in five years."

David Owen founded the company about six years ago. Wise joined him a short time later while both were still in the Air Force at Cannon Air Force Base.

The company now produces three lines of light aircraft — the Shadow series, the Wizard and the Tundra. The "Streak Shadow" has a maximum speed of 141 mph and has a range of 363 miles.

Prices for the airplane kits range from about $9,600 to about $23,000.

Wise said hundreds of companies produce experimental aircraft, but that only about 20 of those are major manufacturers. He said Laron Aviation hopes to be included in those ranks someday.

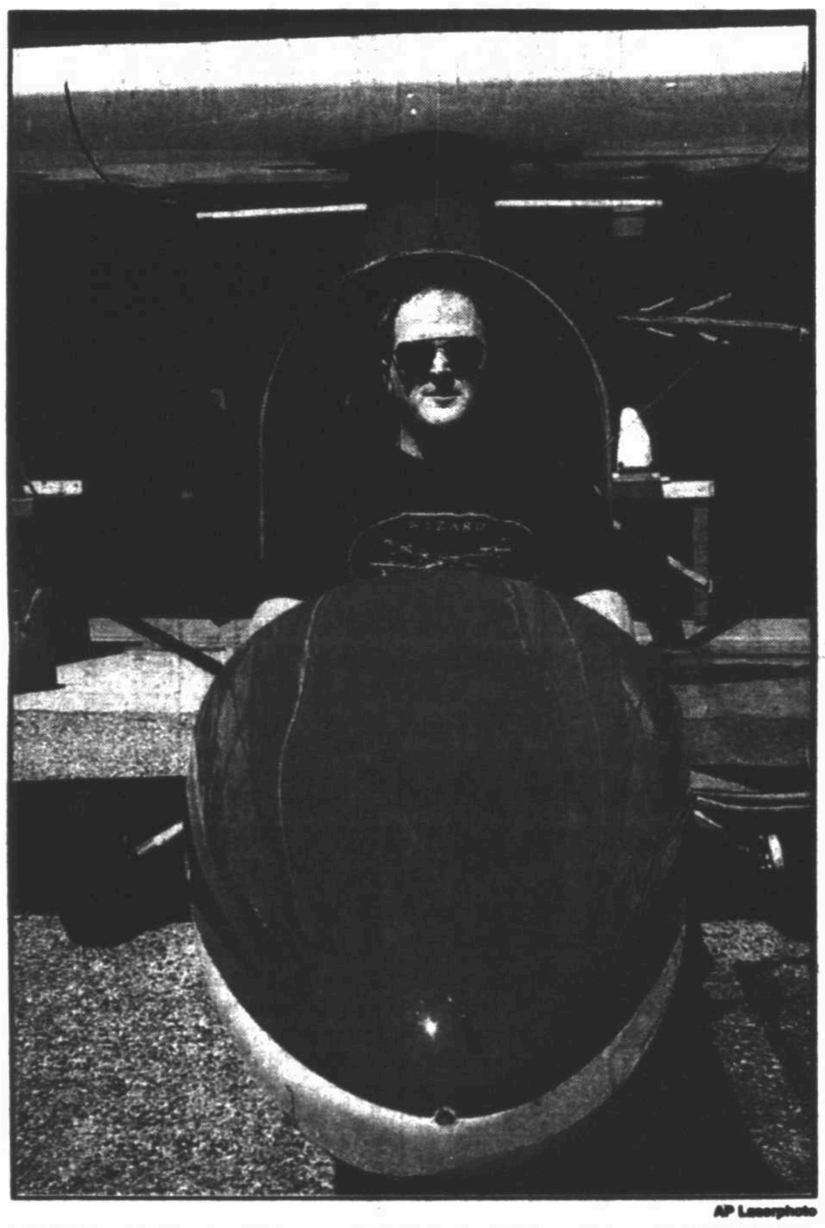

"We've got unique enough designs in all three of our lines that people are going to start coming around," he said.

For fliers who may consider assembling an airplane a daunting task, Wise said it's no so difficult.

"Basically, you need to be able to change the oil in your car or rotate your tires," he said.

As a testimony to the dependability of its aircraft, Laron Aviation has many stories about its planes being flown thousands of miles. Eve Jackson bought one of the company's planes, built it in 300 hours and flew from London to Australia. The journey took the woman about six months to complete, Wise said.

"Those are the kind of people who build and fly our airplanes," he said.

Consumer borrowing balloons

By N.Y. Times News Service

Washington — Consumer borrowing rose for the 24th consecutive month in May, led by strong credit card use, Federal Reserve figures showed.

Consumer installment credit rose $11.508 billion for the month, exceeding analysts' expectations. In April, borrowing rose a revised $11.598 billion. A month earlier, the Fed initially estimated April consumer credit rose $11.039 billion.

Analysts are divided about the meaning of the prolonged surge in borrowing. Some say it could be a sign of distress if consumers borrow more to meet routine expenses. Others, though, say it may simply be signalling a shift in habits, as people find it more convenient to charge daily purchases like groceries on credit cards.

If the trend of strong consumer borrowing and spending continues, the Fed could refrain from further lowering interest rates to fuel economic growth, said Astrid Adolfson, an economist at MCM MoneyWatch in New York.

"Consumers are still confident enough to use their credit cards fairly generously," Adolfson said. People who think otherwise "have their heads under a rock," she said.

Still, other analysts said the borrowing spree may not go on forever. "This credit trend should prove unsustainable . . . prolonging the consumers' soft spending spell right on through the summer," said a research report by Gary Ciminero, chief economist at Fleet Financial Group in Providence, Rhode Island.

Statistics in the latest Fed report were revised back to January 1992. Without those revisions, May's gain would have been the 30th consecutive monthly increase.

Analysts pay particular attention to the Fed's credit statistics because consumer spending accounts for two-thirds of U.S. economic activity. In May, spending rose 0.7 percent, according to Commerce Department figures published last week.

However, the consumer credit numbers tend to be erratic on a month-to-month basis, and analysts said the statistics should be viewed cautiously over the short haul.

Before Tuesday's report, analysts anticipated a $9.0 billion increase in consumer credit for May, according to a survey conducted by Bloomberg Business News.

The Fed also said that consumer installment credit was rising at a 14.6 percent annual rate in May following a 14.9 percent gain during April.

In Tuesday's report, the Fed said installment credit totaled $956.822 billion in May.

McDonald's under construction on Rankin Highway

By Mella McEwen

Ground has been broken at 2307 Rankin Highway for a new McDONALD'S RESTAURANT. Completion is expected in mid to late September.

McEwen

The restaurant is owned by Gerald and Donna Kubicki, who own the McDonald's restaurant at 1111 Andrews Highway.

"We've been here 15 years and for 15 years have been looking forward to a new store," said Donna Kubicki.

She said the timing was right to build a new store, and the location just north of Interstate 20 was chosen because the city had just installed a new sewer line and is interested in further developing and expanding the area.

The restaurant is expected to draw customers from southeast Midland, travelers on Highway 349 coming from Rankin and Midkiff and travelers on Interstate 20.

It will be a full-service McDonald's complete with drive-through window and a children's play place.

The new menu also lists Denny's value meals which feature the $1.99 Original Grand Slam Breakfast and the $5.99 Prime Rib Dinner.

The new menu, which is a full transcription of Denny's regular menu, includes product descriptions and pricing information for blind or visually impaired readers.
