McLaren may be 'willing to die'

■ Texas Rangers captain has been negotiating with Rick McLaren for a peaceful settlement.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

FORT DAVIS — Republic of Texas separatist leader Richard "Rick" McLaren, who is holed up with 12 cohorts in his Davis Mountains Resort "embassy" during negotiations, may be "willing to die" for his stand on Texas's independence from the United States.

"You have to expect they are willing to die," McLaren's Houston attorney, Terry O'Rouke, said on Tuesday while scores of armed county, state, and federal lawmen had positioned themselves at command headquarters and about McLaren's "embassy."

Even so, O'Rouke said, "My job is to get him out of here alive."

State officials are attempting to serve felony arrest warrants on McLaren and five of his compatriots. McLaren, along with Robert Otto, Richard Keyes, Robert Scheidt, Karen Paulson, and G. Paulson, are charged with "engaging in organized crime."

Charged with aggravated kidnapping of a Davis Mountains Resort couple on Sunday are Paulson, Keyes, and Ms. Paulson. The trio charged with kidnapping allegedly assaulted the home of Joe and M.A. Rowe, who were later released in exchange for Scheidt. Scheidt had been arrested earlier for trespassing and carrying unlawful weapons into the resort, including an assault rifle.

McLaren, who has talked with his attorney by telephone here, has been negotiating for a peaceful settlement through Texas Rangers Capt. Barry Caver. As the Republic of Texas "ambassador," McLaren all along has claimed diplomatic immunity.

McLaren's site gets 100-200 hits an hour

Radical frontier vigilantism and new technology would seem to make for strange companions. But with the Republic of Texas standoff, nothing seems to be fitting the norm.

And nowhere is that more apparent than in Fort Davis this week where, even though "dug in" at his "embassy," self-proclaimed Republic of Texas ambassador/consul general Richard McLaren has at least found enough time to update his web page and issue statements via the Internet. The provisional Republic of Texas, the non-aggressive, peace-seeking faction of the group, has also communicated via its Internet site, its message being the group's desire to distance itself from McLaren's rival faction.

For continuing updates on the Republic of Texas standoff, visit the Midland Reporter-Telegram @ home "www.mrt.com"

McLaren's home page (http://www.The-republic-of-Texas.org/) was last updated Monday, according to Todd Jagger, who runs Overland Network, the Internet Service Provider (ISP) in Fort Davis that serves McLaren's home page onto the Internet.

McLaren's site informs visitors, "All Home pages in this Web site will have black backgrounds until Texas is a Captive Nation No Longer!!"

Jagger said McLaren's site has been receiving 100-200 hits (public viewings) per hour in the days since the standoff began Sunday.

Government professor: Texas wanted to be in union from time it became republic

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

In the 1960s and '70s, as tensions between the United States and the Soviet Union increased, the survivalist movement grew, with members sharpening their survival skills and planning for World War III.

Sean Kelleher, political science professor at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, said he believes that the militias such as the Republic of Texas are a continuation of that survivalist movement.

Watching as approximately 13 members of the Republic of Texas are engaged in a standoff with state and federal law enforcement officials in Fort Davis, Kelleher said, "My impression is this is a lot of those same people and groups. Here they are all dressed up for a party and it's not going to happen. They have their fatigues on and their AK-47s, but there's no Soviet paratroopers because there is no Soviet Union. There has to be a bogeyman so they've turned inward on the government."

Jerry Franks, a teacher of government and philosophy at Midland College, said that the militia movements appear sporadically across the country and are populated "for the most part with people who are not adjusting well to modernity, to change, to modern society, to the changing racial balance in the country, the new roles of women."

1997 Community Spirit Award

For the first time, Midland's citizens in general will select this year's Community Spirit Award winner from a field of three finalists.

To place YOUR vote via the Reporter-Telegram's Community Pulse Poll, simply dial 560-2400 through Thursday and enter the corresponding category number below:

■ To vote for Tri-Cities, Wash., where some 3,000 volunteers worked 24,000 hours to build a $1.2 million mortgage-free Hospice House and Counseling Center — Enter Category 3031.

■ To vote for Forsyth, Ga., whose citizens met the challenge when hundreds of teen-agers were stranded after coming to nearby Atlanta to work in the Olympics — Enter Category 3032.

■ To vote for Glenwood Springs, Colo., where residents vowed "We will never forget" when a raging forest fire left 14 firefighters, 11 men and three women, dead — Enter Category 3033.

The community and project receiving the most votes will be the recipient of the 1997 Midland Community Spirit Award.

Royko dies

CHICAGO — Mike Royko, the Pulitzer Prize-winning newspaper columnist whose biting sarcasm and empathy for the common man captured the gritty essence of Chicago for more than three decades, died Tuesday. He was 65. The Chicago Tribune announced Royko's death on its World Wide Web site. Royko, whose Chicago Tribune column was syndicated to more than 200 newspapers nationwide, underwent surgery last week for an aneurysm, a rupture or weakening of a blood vessel.

STANDOFF: DPS spokesman Mike Cox says communication is 'frequent, positive and open'

spokesman Mike Cox at a press conference at Point of Rocks park outside the resort, said that "negotiations are at a sensitive stage right now, but they are progressing very well."

However, the situation is "still very serious but we do remain very hopeful."

Cox said that the DPS has "enjoyed good communication" with the people involved in the crisis. "The communications remain frequent, positive and open." Cox said that the DPS is "not operating within any set time frame" for serving the arrest warrants to McLaren and the group in his "embassy."

Throughout the day, law enforcement reinforcements and replacements passed the barricade at the Point of Rocks to join other lawmen, who include the FBI, West Texas sheriffs and deputies, U.S. Secret Service agents, and a DPS SWAT (Special Weapons Assault Team) unit. Two armored personnel carriers (APC) from the Smith County Sheriff's Office in Tyler were carried by flatbed truck into the resort to protect SWAT agents who would be near the "embassy." Jeff Davis County Sheriff Steve Bailey requested the SWAT team arrive at the Department of Public Safety command post outside of Fort Davis by 4 p.m. today.

AMONG THOSE sheriff's offices represented is the Midland County Sheriff's Office. The Midland SWAT team arrived in Fort Davis Tuesday afternoon after Bailey called about 11:30 p.m. Monday night, according to Lt. Ed Krevit with the Sheriff's Department Criminal Investigation Division.

"We are dealing with very complex issues that simply take time and people working together to solve," Cox said.

McLaren is the leader of at least one of three Republic of Texas movements, which jointly claim that Texas, when it was a Republic after winning independence from Mexico in 1836, did not legally enter statehood into the United States in the mid-1840s.

As a result, McLaren, who hails from Missouri and is an organic farmer, claims that the Republic of Texas is independent of the United States and has sought mediation with the United Nations. As a self-proclaimed ambassador for the Republic of Texas, McLaren has caused distress within the resort community by filing liens against property owners.

AT THE Point of Rocks where scores of news media reporters, photographers, and cameramen gather along with more than a dozen television satellite trucks to feed national and international news services, Cox said, "I do guarantee you that nothing is going to happen tonight."

He told the news media "So if you want to go on to Alpine (tonight) or whatever or go see the Marfa ghost lights" go ahead.

There was some stirring among the news reporters, who were not allowed to question Cox or O'Rouke at the conference, but most of the news people did not leave.

Early Tuesday afternoon at a press conference, Cox said that the DPS is simply "trying to enforce state law" by serving the arrest warrants. In response to questions, Cox said that 13 people, including McLaren, are in McLaren's "embassy." "We know of no children at all," Cox said. "They are all adults."

He said that DPS, which at the request of Bailey had taken charge of the crisis and negotiations, did not know the extent of their firepower.

During the ongoing negotiations, Cox said that "no wild or outlandish threats were made ... we are optimistic about the discussion that is taking place — good dialogue."

ON SUNDAY and Monday, Bailey and the DPS officers asked the resort's residents, who are mostly retired couples, to leave the resort for their own safety.

Cox said that McLaren, who has a penchant for drafting what some call "bogus" liens and other Republic of Texas court documents in state and federal courts, had prepared a package of documents to be delivered to his attorney on Tuesday.

Cox said that a SWAT unit in the APC (armored personnel carriers) was "going to pick up the package" near McLaren's "embassy" and deliver the documents to O'Rouke.

O'Rouke has been talking with McLaren by way of telephone and for his own safety was not permitted by lawmen to enter the resort and meet personally with McLaren. Likewise, Caver had been talking with McLaren by telephone to prevent a possible "hostage situation."

At that time, Cox said that "things at this point are looking very positive" toward a "peaceful outcome."

O'ROUKE, WHO has been dealing with McLaren for four years on issues that include environmental matters, said that McLaren called him in Houston from his "embassy" on Sunday night to retain his services in the current crisis.

O'Rouke is concerned about McLaren's safety and said earlier that McLaren has a "better opportunity to handle these (Republic of Texas and other) issues in court than with guns in the mountains."

Bailey, and later the DPS, close to midnight on Monday and early Tuesday morning denied O'Rouke's request to personally meet with McLaren in the "embassy."

"It is just too dangerous to go in there at night ... in darkness," said O'Rouke.

O'Rouke said that McLaren had called him Sunday night and asked him to talk to the Texas Attorney General's Office, which he did.

"If this can be handled with dignity and courtesy," O'Rouke said, "It can be handled" and resolved peaceably.

Later, at one of three Tuesday afternoon press conferences, O'Rouke said that his dialogue with McLaren is "significant and hopeful."

O'ROUKE ACKNOWLEDGED the contradiction, noted by reporters, that McLaren "is willing to dig in and die" for his cause while O'Rouke is seeking a safe and peaceful settlement.

"I hope that he has retained me because I am a great lawyer," O'Rouke explained in response to the contradiction.

O'Rouke said that he has a background as a environmental prosecutor and that his initial dealings with McLaren were in that respect. McLaren is concerned about preserving habitats to protect endangered species of flora and fauna, he said.

McLaren had proposed "to protect habitats without using federal regulations and (instead) use common law," O'Rouke said. "He has a vision how to protect habitats.

"That is where I began to respect his views," O'Rouke said. "I see a part of Rick McLaren that is different from what is sometimes portrayed."

McLaren in the Davis Mountains and in court has been accused of harassing people and raising a "ruckus" and of being a "free-loader" who wants to avoid paying taxes.

Later Tuesday afternoon, before the sunset press conference, O'Rouke said that "you have to expect that they are willing to die."

O'ROUKE SAID that he is negotiating with the government to get McLaren out alive.

"He does not have a death wish," O'Rouke said. "He does not wish to be martyred."

McLaren and the others are "very aware that they could be killed at any moment," O'Rouke said. Even so, O'Rouke said, "Rick has humor."

Texas secessionists vow not to surrender

Richard McLaren, the "ambassador" of one faction of the Republic of Texas secessionist group and about 10 followers are still entrenched in the 6,000-acre Davis Mountains Resort community. A 15-member state SWAT team joined at least 75 state and federal law-enforcement agents for the third day of the standoff.

The Republic of Texas

The group contends that the annexation of Texas as a state in 1845 was illegal, that Texas should be an independent nation. It has split into at least three factions, two of which now disavow McLaren.

Attorney General Morales calls on separatists to give up

Hearst News Service

AUSTIN — Texas Attorney General Dan Morales said Tuesday members of the Texas separatist group, who were once considered mere irritants, are now bona-fide terrorists and should be "punished severely" for taking two people hostage and launching an armed standoff with authorities.

"These are criminals. They need to be treated as such," Morales said of Republic of Texas members who are holed up in a rugged encampment in the Davis Mountains in West Texas.

"I would offer some advice to Mr. (Richard) McLaren and his followers to surrender and surrender quickly," he said, referring to the group's self-styled "ambassador."

"I think that they need to recognize that the manner by which they are viewed has changed dramatically over the course of the last 24 to 48 hours," he said.

"They are no longer seen as an irritation or annoyance. They are now seen as bona-fide criminals, as terrorists, and they will be treated as such," the attorney general said. "I think Mr. McLaren and the others would be fooling themselves to think otherwise."

McLaren and his followers have been holed up in the mountain community since Sunday, when they took two neighbors hostage in retaliation for the arrest of two followers. They released both hostages Monday in exchange for one of the jailed comrades, who had been arrested on weapons charges.

McLaren sent word Tuesday morning that he has no plans to give up.

Following McLaren's announcement, Morales urged the group to surrender immediately and peacefully.

"Once they are brought to justice, it would be my hope that they will be punished severely, that they will be punished as the criminals they are," Morales said. "Now, you have first-degree criminal felonies. It doesn't get any more serious than that."

But noting the bloodshed at the 1993 Waco siege, Morales balked at suggestions that authorities could have prevented the standoff by taking more forceful action regarding civil warrants against some Republic of Texas members.

"I know there must be great frustration on the part of citizens who have to live as neighbors of these Republic of Texas members, but I think, ultimately, even they will come to understand that it doesn't well serve our state or our nation to go in guns-a-blazing in order to serve civil warrants because we are irritated or annoyed about what this organization, or any organization, is doing," Morales said. "I think all law enforcement has acted prudently."

In 1993, government agents were locked in a 51-day standoff with the Branch Davidians cult near Waco, Texas, before launching an assault that ended in a fire. Cult leader David Koresh and about 80 followers died.

"These types of groups are very difficult for law enforcement to deal with," Morales said. "While certainly no one is above the law and has the right to violate the law, lessons learned at Ruby Ridge (Idaho) and Waco and elsewhere around the country need to teach us something about the manner by which we respond to these types of situations."

Authorities believe as few as six members of the Republic of Texas may be involved in the current standoff.

Republic members contend that Texas, which was briefly an independent republic, was illegally annexed as a state in 1845 and that they are its legitimate government.

They also have filed millions of dollars in bogus liens against Texans and public officials, clogging up the courts. The group, founded in 1995, has split into at least three factions, two of which now disavow McLaren.

Zairian president Mobutu and rebel leader Kabila agree to meet

LUBUMBASHI, Zaire (AP) — Rebel leader Laurent Kabila and President Mobutu Sese Seko agree they will meet one another, but the rebels said Tuesday there is only one thing to discuss: Mobutu's departure from power.

U.S. envoy Bill Richardson talked with Kabila for three hours Tuesday night in this southeastern city. Both parties have agreed to meet, he said, but details about the venue and date remain unresolved.

"As you heard Kabila say, he's agreed to face-to-face talks. Mobutu has agreed to face-to-face talks. They are ready to proceed as soon as possible, this weekend or earlier," Richardson said.

South Africa has offered to have the talks held on one of its naval supply ships, which would be anchored in international waters off the coast of Zaire and Angola.

Richardson appeared tired as he spoke with reporters on the steps of the Karavia Hotel, on the outskirts of Lubumbashi. Earlier in the day, he had been in the capital, Kinshasa, in western Zaire, to talk with Mobutu.

The blunt-talking ambassador to the United Nations pressed Mobutu to accept that he cannot stop the rebels and urged him to agree to immediate peace talks.

"There can be no military solution to this crisis," Richardson said.

The ambassador was to return to Kinshasa on Wednesday for further talks with Mobutu.

'We are going ... to discuss the end of the war ... And a complete end of the war can only come about when the man who brought the war is no longer there. ... The next stop is Kinshasa.'

— Bizima Karaha, rebel foreign affairs minister

Before meeting with Richardson, Kabila's foreign affairs minister said there would be one chance at talks — and that they would be brief because the only topic would be the end of Mobutu's 32-year dictatorship.

"We are not going there to discuss a cease-fire," Bizima Karaha told reporters. "We are going there to discuss the end of the war, a complete end of the war. And a complete end of the war can only come about when the man who brought the war is no longer there."

Furthermore, the rebels — who have seized more than half of Africa's third-largest nation in seven months — will not stop their offensive while waiting for a settlement, he said.

Tuesday morning, the rebels easily captured Kikwit, a city on a major highway only 250 miles east of the capital, Karaha said.

"The next stop is Kinshasa," he said.

The United States is pushing strongly for a cease-fire and negotiations leading to an inclusive transitional government, Richardson said. Then, the United States would like to see Zairians hold elections, he said.

During the talks in Lumbumbashi, Richardson sat next to Kabila at a large circular table, flanked by Karaha; the U.S. ambassador to Zaire, Daniel Simpson; and other Washington delegates. About eight reporters waited outside the talks, held in a back room of the rebel leader's Spanish colonial-style villa.

Kabila declined to speak with reporters after the session.

Mobutu, 66, has insisted he would never bow to Kabila's demand he resign, but he is under increasing pressure. He is ill with prostate cancer, Western powers have urged him to give up, and the political opposition within Zaire is gaining momentum with each rebel victory.

In Kinshasa, Mobutu appeared briefly with Richardson on the veranda of his residence and shook the U.S. envoy's hand but made no statement.

Richardson refused to discuss his conversation with Mobutu, saying only: "We were both very frank. I carried a strong message."

Business soars, sinks as media, law invade tiny town

By Barry Shlachter
N.Y. Times News Service

FORT DAVIS — There's no disputing the situation, said Barrick Watts, a 65-year-old grocer, itemizing the cases of bottled water, soft drinks and snack food that have gone out the door since the Republic of Texas standoff triggered what, in more ways than one, is a media feeding frenzy.

"It's a bonanza, decidedly," Watts, less apologetic than others in this tiny West Texas town, said of the sudden retail windfall.

Business is up 25 percent at Watts' Stone Village Grocery and at Baeza's, his competitor down the road. Pop's Grill, Fort Davis' answer to fast food, has seen a 50 percent jump in javelina wings, fried okra, hamburgers and jalapeno-jack cheeseburgers, said co-owner Elizabeth McMillen.

But not everyone is comfortable with the upsurge in this tourism-dependent community of 1,200. And some have been left out in the cold.

Police roadblocks cut access to Davis Mountains Horseback Tours, on the highway that goes past the rugged subdivision where separatist Rick McLaren's followers are holed up.

"I've lost 40 bookings this week," complained Ron Beame, 45, the company's rustic-looking owner, who heatedly confronted troopers after being briefly prevented from returning to his property.

'I would actually prefer not to have this business and have Fort Davis back to normal. Nobody likes to make money at the expense of people who are out of their homes.'

— Elizabeth McMillen
co-owner of Pop's Grill

Beame asserted that his support for the Republic of Texas movement, which does not extend to McLaren's most recent action, was the reason troopers momentarily blocked his path.

But Fort Davis hotels, convenience stores, gas stations and restaurants are hopping, serving the needs of scores of journalists and hundreds of law enforcement personnel who have converged on the town since the standoff began Sunday.

"We had 102 percent occupancy last night," said Joe Duncan, 38, owner of the historic Limpia Hotel. "All 38 of our rooms were filled and a reporter slept on the lobby couch." Occupancy is usually about 70 percent this time of year, he said.

But Duncan, who is also the chamber of commerce president, was not altogether happy about the situation.

"My feeling is that it will balance out with the loss of reservations we've had so far and for the rest of the year," he said.

A three-day event of the Nature Conservancy of Texas, which would have brought more than 100 people to Fort Davis this weekend, was canceled because of McLaren's standoff, said Duncan's wife, Lana.

At Prude Ranch, a dude ranch just north of town, there have been no cancellations.

But the 200 state troopers put up at its bunkhouses will have to leave by Thursday "because we have school groups coming in and we don't think they want to sleep with the policemen," said a ranch employee, Sonnie Tobias.

At Pop's Grill, which was doing fire-sale business, McMillen sees every indication that it will get even busier. But that doesn't please her so much.

"I would actually prefer not to have this business and have Fort Davis back to normal," she said.

"Nobody likes to make money at the expense of people who are out of their homes," McMillen said, referring to the 100 or so residents who left their canyon houses near the standoff.

WEB: ISP operator isn't surprised ROT chose 'Net

(From 1A)

Republic of Texas (http://www.flash.net/~robertk/whatsnew.htm) issued an "urgent notice" Sunday: "It is with great regret and sadness that the following information is posted: It appears that Richard McLaren and those acting with him have gone completely off the deep end, disregarding the very laws he claims to uphold. According to reports by witnesses in the Davis Mountain Resort (including Mr. McLaren's wife), and further confirmed by our contacts in law enforcement, both state and federal, there have been shots fired between Mr. McLaren's supporters and law enforcement officials."

Jagger said that as an ISP operator he provides a service to the Republic of Texas much the same way the electric company provides utilities or the phone company provides phone service. He said that the standoff has put him in a difficult position.

"It's very unfortunate," Jagger said, "because I do not support the Republic of Texas or what they're doing or how they're doing it. In the past I have treated them just like any other customer. If they have a question I try to answer it; if they've got a (computer) problem, I try to solve it. They've been regular customers."

Jagger said he has never spoken to or dealt with McLaren but has communicated only with White Eagle, the Republic's "computer dude."

"They called and asked for a dial-up account and I actually had to think about it for a little while. I decided I wasn't going to be the one person who decided who did or didn't get Internet service in our area. Basically, as long as they are using their site for legal purposes I wasn't going to deny access to them. At this point, the question would be whether they are using it for legal purposes. At any point should they do anything that constitutes a criminal act, I would have to take another look at what's going on."

Jagger said he is concerned about the future of his ISP business for several reasons. "As I said, I'm not supporting them nor do I agree with them. I'm just providing a service."

From a technical standpoint, Jagger said the increased hits to the site are putting a strain on his Internet pipeline, a small 64K (roughly 6,400 transmitted text characters per second) hookup. Primarily, he said, the site has been looked at by media seeking information on the group.

"From a public relations standpoint, it's difficult for me because the Republic and Rick have caused a lot of problems for many years with people that are good friends of mine, and it's important for me as a resident and business owner here that I don't get aligned with them."

Still, Jagger said, "until I get word I should pull the plug on them, I don't see that I have any choice other than to leave the site up."

That word would apparently come from the state's attorney general's office, which has requested documents pertaining to the workings of the McLarens' Internet account.

Jagger said it's not a matter of not being ready to give the state the information.

"We have been more than happy to give (the attorney general's office) what they want," Jagger said. "The problem is the subpoena they gave our ISP and Internet Texoma ISP does not meet the requirements of the Federal Electronic Communications Privacy Act, which is very specific in what we as Internet providers can and cannot release.

"In order for us to release information requested in their subpoena, they must have a court order, a warrant or consent from the parties.

"Basically, they are asking for things like e-mail names, passwords log-ins, any e-mail currently residing on our server; any e-mail accounts records, addresses, who pays the bills and how much they pay."

Jagger said that W. Scott McCullough, the attorney for the ISP Association of Texas, told him that Overland Network could cooperate with the attorney general "as long as we are not breaking federal law or as long as we don't subject ourselves to civil litigation."

Jagger said he sees nothing odd at all that McLaren and his group would be technologically savvy enough to choose the new form of technology to spread their message.

"The Internet is totally changing the way that information is presented and received and disseminated throughout our country and the world."

Jagger said despite the Internet's recent negative publicity surrounding aspects of the Internet such as the Heaven's Gate cult, pornography, online hate groups and the controversy surrounding the Communications Decency Act, the form of communication will continue to thrive because, "The good of the Internet far, far outweighs the bad. The bad things just seem to get all the publicity. We don't hear the stories of how children use the Internet to research — cattle for instance — for their term papers."

The tiny town of Fort Davis, hurt by the negative publicity, might be another story.

"I think it's a shame that Fort Davis will be mentioned in same sentence as places like Ruby Ridge and Waco," Jagger said. "Robert Halpurn, a friend of mine who is the publisher of the Marfa newspaper said '(Fort Davis) is a nice, quiet, pretty little town, and the last thing we need is all this media attention.' "

HISTORY: 'We can be Texans and Americans at the same time'

(From 1A)

He predicted that problems with militias would appear sporadically across the country, primarily across the Rocky Mountains and parts of the South and Southwest.

Franks doesn't see the groups gaining much credibility among the population at large.

"They're not threatening to national stability, but I see them as threatening to law and order, and sporadically, peace and quiet one area at a time," he said. "They will be a problem for law enforcement for some time to come. I hope law officials aren't too cautious and keep an eye on these people and anticipate problems. We've been relatively safe in our country from terrorism, but these people are capable of terrorism and we've seen the results of that in Oklahoma City."

Of the militias' view of big government oppressing its citizens, Franks said, "We need to be a little more discreet when we talk about THE government. There are several levels of government and any level of government has a number of departments. It's many things responding to many pressures. Sometimes it gets things right and sometimes it gets things wrong. Usually the government gets caught when it does things wrong and we don't have to wait for long to find out when it's done something wrong."

Kelleher said he admired the restraint law enforcement officials have been using with the Republic of Texas.

"On the other hand, if you and I did what they did, break into someone's house, hurt them and hold them hostage, the FBI wouldn't hesitate for a minute. In that sense, these folks want to play by different rules, whether it's paying taxes or following rules involving safety and privacy."

More than playing by different rules, the Republic of Texas wants to live in its own nation, insisting that the state of Texas was never legally annexed by the United States and has thus been "held hostage" for more than 150 years.

"It's junk history," responds Roger Olien, professor of history and J. Conrad Dunagan Chair in regional and business history at UTPB.

"The key date is October 13, 1845, when referenda — two referendums — were held. The voters were asked to vote yes or no on two things: annexation and a new state constitution. More than 95 percent of the people voted yes on both. I've never seen another referendum pass in Texas by 95 percent."

He added that there was an earlier referendum, in 1836, when voters clearly expressed their preference to being in the union over being a republic.

"The roadblock was Congress," he explained. "They couldn't get enough votes to admit another slave-owning state so Texas was put on the back burner for a decade. But voters twice expressed their support for [illegible] in the union."

Even when Texas seceded from the union in 1861, Olien said, "The secession convention assumed that Texas had been in the union legally. Really, the southerners who took Texas into the Confederacy assumed Texas had legally been a state."

Kelleher added that the Republic of Texas' claims were a moot point.

"It was established through the Civil War that you can't leave the country."

Franks agreed, saying, "The history books from every authoritative historian who knows anything about that chapter in our history show clearly that Texas wanted to be in the union from the time it became a republic."

He noted that the people who settled Texas were primarily Americans who wanted in the union and petitioned several times for admittance.

"My view is the very most valuable thing any Texan owns is his American citizenship. We can be Texans and Americans at the same time with no conflict that I can see."

Fort Davis rancher sells anti-ROT T-shirts

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

FORT DAVIS — Innovative Fort Davis rancher Joe Williams came upon a novel way to capitalize on the Republic-of-Texas incident here by selling "Don't Mess With Texas" T-shirts.

He sold out his stock of embossed T-shirts mostly to media people who are gathered at the Point of Rocks park near the entrance to the Davis Mountains Resort where armed law enforcement people are gathered to confront Republic of Texas militia leader Richard McLaren.

"I've sold the one off of my back," Williams noted. "I had to put my regular shirt back on."

The "Don't Mess With Texas" logo on each T-shirt has an image of the Texas flag and the large letters R.O.T. (Republic of Texas) bordered by a red circle and crossed out with a bold red diagonal line.

"They are nice looking shirts and people have a lot of fun with them, of all things," said Williams, 45. "They are tasteful without being disrespectful."

He sold his stock of 24 T-shirts at $17.50 each in short order. He has a new stock of shirts coming in Thursday.

As a novelty amid the Republic-of-Texas controversy, a friend of Williams, who owns a T-shirt company in Des Moines, Iowa, a month ago volunteered to design a T-shirt that addressed the issue.

"He sent them to me, oddly enough, yesterday (Monday)," Williams said.

Of the current crisis involving McLaren's Republic of Texas movement that questions the validity of Texas' statehood, "It is an embarrassment to everybody ... who thinks twice," Williams said. "It is an unfortunate situation."

Williams said that he has known McLaren "for years — not well, of course. But he is just a man who wants a bit of attention.

"The joke around town is that the best thing that has happened to him, he is dressing a lot better."

Williams alluded to the hard times that ranchers, particularly those in Fort Davis country, are having nowadays.

"If you have an outside job, ranching works real well. I sell cattle (for an auction company). That's my main income. We sell thousands and thousands of cattle every year through Superior Livestock Auction in Fort Worth.

"That's how I make my living. Ranching ain't paying me very well. You just do what you can. You sell a few T-shirts. Anyway, we are survivors."

Astronauts make first U.S.-Russia spacewalk

KOROLYOV, Russia (AP) — An astronaut and a cosmonaut took the first U.S.-Russian walk in space Tuesday, a problem-free excursion that was a welcome bright spot in a troubled relationship between NASA and its Russian partners.

The men, in white Russian space suits, spent five hours outside Mir, gathering space dust catchers and checking experiments along the sprawling station. "Everything is sailing away from me," astronaut Jerry Linenger said, his equipment floating around during his first spacewalk.

The successful walk followed a string of problems on the aging Russian space station, including a small fire in February. Last month, coolant began to leak and the main oxygen-generating system failed.

Russian space officials say none of the malfunctions endangered the crew and insist the 11-year-old space outpost designed to last five years is safe.

NASA, however, has expressed concern, heightening tension between American and Russian space agencies already at odds over progress toward building an international space station.

During Tuesday's spacewalk, Linenger and Russian cosmonaut Vasily Tsibliyev attached a monitor to the station's outer surface to watch how various materials withstand the harsh conditions of space flight. They also installed a device to measure space radiation and removed packages containing cosmic dust and micrometeorites.

A giant screen at the Mission Control Center in Korolyov, just outside Moscow, showed the two men using a crane to move along the station, spiked with solar battery panels. It took Linenger and Tsibliyev 4 hours and 58 minutes to finish their tasks — a half-hour less than planned.

The two spoke Russian while they worked, asking each other to pass tools or operate controls.

During most of the spacewalk, the station was out of contact with Russia. Mir takes about 1½ hours to circle the Earth, and Russia only has tracking stations in Ukraine and Russia. Therefore, Russian ground controllers can communicate with the Mir only for about 20 minutes each orbit, when the station passes over its territory.

Yuri Koptev, the Russian Space Agency chief, said Tuesday that most of the Mir's recent breakdowns have been fixed — most antifreeze fumes have been removed and the station's temperature has returned to normal.

Blagov, the deputy mission control chief, predicted the Mir will remain in service through 1999. "We're now using it as a test-platform for a new international space station," he said at a news conference.

Mir is to be replaced with an international station built by several countries, including Russia and the United States.

To the dismay of NASA and Congress, the cash-strapped Russian space industry has been behind schedule building a key module for the new station. Koptev pledged Tuesday that Russia would meet the December 1998 deadline for launching the service module.

Americans are scheduled to be aboard Mir continuously until mid-1998 to gain expertise needed for the international space station. Linenger, who has been on Mir since January, is to return home in late May on the space shuttle Atlantis.

When Atlantis docks with Mir, it will bring Linenger's replacement, Michael Foale, who is to spend 4½ months on the station. It also will deliver a new oxygen-generating unit and equipment to repair a small remaining coolant leak.

Global weather getting wetter

GENEVA (AP) — For some parts of the world, 1996 was one of the coldest years in recent decades, the U.N. weather agency said Tuesday in its annual report. Overall, however, it was the eighth-warmest on record since 1860.

It was also the second consecutive year with above-normal hurricane activity, making a near record two-year total.

"The extent and the magnitude of heavy precipitation that affected many parts of the world" resulted in part from the continuation of the so-called "La Nina" effect.

This refers to colder-than-normal water in the Pacific Ocean west of Peru and Ecuador that began in 1995. La Nina caused the above-normal rainfall in the Indian and Australian monsoons, the report said.

La Nina is the opposite of the better known "El Nino" effect, which features warmer-than-usual conditions in the eastern Pacific. Both phenomena are believed to cause changes in rain and drought patterns around the world.

While 1996 was an extremely dry year from Britain across central Europe to Russia, large amounts of rain fell in northwestern Africa, Spain and Portugal, the U.N. agency said.

The rainfall brought much needed relief to southwestern Europe and northwestern Africa after six years of extreme dryness, but "also resulted in some deaths and dislocations due to local flooding," the agency said.

Benefits of Postemergence vs. Preemergence Herbicides

Jim Hall
Zeneca Ag Products

Many growers here may begin their grass control program with a preemergence herbicide and these producers might only use a postemergence herbicide to control escapes later in the season.

Treating grass after crop emergence is becoming more common because postemergence treatment is a logical part of an integrated pest management program. Using a postemergence herbicide application allows growers to determine grass problems before treatment and select a specific treatment for the problem. And, post herbicides are more available and effective than in the past.

Plus, postemergence herbicide applications offer the best control of annual and perennial grasses, such as rhizome johnsongrass, bermudagrass, foxtails and crabgrass.

There are several postemergence herbicides available. Growers can select the herbicide tailored to their individual problem. Two of the best are FUSION® and FUSILADE® DX® herbicides.

Fusion is a broad-spectrum herbicide that offers total annual grass control in cotton and soybeans. To provide additional control of broadleaf weeds, Fusion can easily be tank mixed with a variety of broadleaf herbicides.

Even though Fusion gets tough on grass, it's gentle on the crop. The herbicide won't stress the crop and has no carryover.

Fusilade DX has a double-strength formulation for excellent control of problem perennial and annual grasses in soybeans and cotton. Research indicates Fusilade DX controls 90 percent or more of rhizome johnsongrass when applied within two to three weeks of crop emergence.

In addition, Fusilade DX works quickly. The herbicide is rainfast in an hour and stops plant growth in as little as two days.

Prosecutors introduce most important evidence in McVeigh trial

The explosion threw the 7-foot truck axle 575 feet from the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building, an FBI agent said. Prosecutors say a vehicle identification number ties it to McVeigh.

DENVER (AP) — Prosecutors undraped their largest and most important piece of evidence in the Oklahoma City bombing trial on Tuesday: a mangled, 250-pound axle they say links Timothy McVeigh to the bomb-carrying truck.

The 7-foot-tall mass of jagged and twisted black metal, draped in a black cloth, was wheeled in front of the jury box on a red hand cart and then uncovered.

The explosion threw it 575 feet from the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building, FBI agent James Elliott testified.

A vehicle identification number was stamped into the metal of the axle, which was found the day of the bombing. The truck's ignition key and its blackened, damaged rear license plate, issued in Florida, were also discovered in the wreckage strewn across downtown Oklahoma City, Elliott said.

Ryder truck executive Clark Anderson said that on a FBI request hours after the attack, the axle number was easily traced by computer to a 20-foot Ryder truck that had been rented on April 17, 1995 — two days before the bombing — from Elliott's Body Shop in Junction City, Kan.

The customer gave the name Bob Kling, which prosecutors say is an alias used by McVeigh. Prosecutors said they will call the body shop's owner to identify McVeigh as the man who rented the truck. Body shop employees provided the sketch later used to identify McVeigh.

Prosecutors allege McVeigh packed the truck with barrels of fertilizer and fuel oil and drove it up to the federal building, where it exploded in a thunderous blast that killed 168 people and injured hundreds.

The 29-year-old Gulf War veteran could get the death penalty if convicted of murder and conspiracy in the deadliest act of terror on U.S. soil.

Looking at still photographs from a security camera, Anderson said a vehicle shown parked outside the building on April 19, 1995, at 8:56 a.m. — six minutes before the bombing — was a 20-foot Ryder truck.

Those stills were not shown to the jury, and another witness is to be called to authenticate the photos.

Prosecutors contend McVeigh bombed the federal building out of general hatred for the U.S. government and to avenge the government's deadly raid on the Branch Davidian compound near Waco, Texas.

Louis Hupp, an FBI fingerprint specialist, testified earlier Tuesday that anti-government writings were found in McVeigh's car after the bombing.

He said the documents included a scathing attack on the government for the FBI's Waco raid exactly two years before the Oklahoma City attack.

The documents were in a thick, sealed envelope in McVeigh's 1977 Mercury Marquis.

Hupp said McVeigh's prints were on anti-government writings and on a crumpled business card from Paulsen's Military Supply in Wisconsin that bore a handwritten notation: "TNT at $5 a stick. Need more."

That card was found on the floor of the Oklahoma Highway Patrol car used to take McVeigh to jail after he was arrested on an unrelated gun charge about 75 minutes after the bombing.

Army sergeant convicted of raping six trainees

ABERDEEN PROVING GROUND, Md. (AP) — A drill instructor was convicted Tuesday of raping six women trainees in the most serious case yet to come out of the sex scandal that has rocked the Army.

Staff Sgt. Delmar G. Simpson, 32, could get life in prison for his conviction on 18 of 19 rape counts.

The 6-foot-4 soldier stood at attention, unflinching, as the verdicts were read in rapid-fire succession by the head of the military jury. Simpson, who has been behind bars since his arrest in September, left the courtroom holding hands with his wife, who is stationed at an Army post in Virginia.

Prosecutors said Simpson raped the women at Aberdeen in 1995 and 1996, mostly by intimidating them with his size, his superior rank and implied threats of harm or punishment. One trainee said Simpson threatened to kill her if she told about having sex with him.

Women's advocates — who considered the court-martial a test of how serious the Army is about sexual misconduct — said the case underscores the need for an independent investigation of how the military handles such complaints.

"The military chain of command is broken, and until that is fixed they are nothing more than accessories to the fact," said Karen Johnson, a retired Air Force lieutenant colonel and vice president of the National Organization for Women.

An NAACP leader charged that the prosecution was racially motivated. Simpson is black; four of the rape victims are white.

The jury of three white men, two black men and one white woman, all of superior rank, will decide Simpson's sentence after hearing additional testimony, beginning on Monday.

Simpson already has pleaded guilty to having consensual sex with 11 trainees, including five of the rape victims. He could get up to 32 years in prison on those charges and five sexual-harassment offenses he admitted.

"We are all satisfied that due process is continuing along. We are hoping for a speedy conclusion to all this," said Lt. Col. Gabriel Riesco, chief of staff at Aberdeen's Ordnance Center and School, where Simpson worked.

The judge ordered lawyers on both sides not to talk about the case before the sentencing.

Twelve soldiers have been charged at Aberdeen Proving Ground, where the investigation revealed a breakdown in discipline that led to regular sex between instructors and trainees.

Defense lawyers contended the women willingly had sex with Simpson — some in hopes of getting favorable treatment — then lied to avoid prosecution for having sex with their commander or because investigators, bullied them.

Defense witnesses from the same company as Simpson's accusers said two of the women were habitual liars who had confided a desire to have sex with him. They said one of the women paraded by his office in shorts and a bikini top "to see if he could be broken," and the other admired his "sexy bald head."

All of the victims said they feared reporting Simpson because they felt no one would believe them. One described Simpson as a "demigod" at Aberdeen. Another said she felt like a puppet as Simpson ordered her to have sex nine times in his office, empty barrack rooms and his on-post apartment.

Tobacco lobby takes another hit

In another blow to tobacco interests, a federal district judge in North Carolina has upheld the Federal Drug Administration's power to regulate tobacco as a drug.

The Friday ruling was hailed by William D. Novelli, president of the National Center for Tobacco-Free Kids, as "the greatest victory ever against tobacco," even though in the same ruling Judge William L. Osteen Sr. noted that the FDA lacks the authority to control advertising by tobacco companies aimed at youths.

The ruling came less than a month after acknowledgement by Liggett in an Arizona case that the tobacco industry knew of nicotine's "severe toxicity" in the 1960s, yet targeted potential smokers as young as 16 and actually marketed brands for black, Hispanic and Jewish smokers.

Liggett's disclosure came after the company's admission on March 20 that smoking is addictive, despite tobacco industry claims to the contrary.

Although Friday's court ruling is called a mixed decision because of Osteen's assertion that the FDA lacks the authority to control advertising aimed at youths, the ruling is viewed as a major victory against tobacco since it appears to weaken the industry's hand in continuing negotiations with states and other plaintiffs to reach a comprehensive settlement of tobacco litigation in state courts.

While the fight against tobacco may still be far from over, without question Friday's ruling will give those leading the battle renewed vigor.

Critics should focus on what feeds crime

This week, the city of Buffalo and the law enforcement community are mourning the loss of Officer Charles "Skip" McDougald, gunned down as he investigated a car theft in a rough neighborhood. ...

Officer McDougald leaves behind a widow, four young children, his law enforcement comrades and students at the Buffalo high school where he was a substitute teacher.

...It is certainly more painful yet for Officer McDougald's family and colleagues that the suspect charged in his shooting is a 19-year-old man who was out on bail awaiting trial on weapons charges.

Unfortunately, some state politicians are taking advantage of this painful, frightening situation and preying on public confusion and frustration with the criminal justice system. ...

They would be much better advised to attack the conditions that lead to violent crime — working to improve schools and provide jobs to give inner-city young people hope and opportunity. That would be a far more fitting memorial for Officer McDougald.

Today in History

Today is Wednesday, April 30, the 120th day of 1997. There are 245 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On April 30, 1945, as Russian troops approached his Berlin bunker, Adolf Hitler committed suicide along with his wife of one day, Eva Braun.

On this date:

In 1789, George Washington took office in New York as the first president of the United States.

Ten years ago: Pope John Paul II began a five-day visit to West Germany. President Reagan welcomed Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone to the White House.

Five years ago: As rioting in Los Angeles entered its second day, President Bush condemned the violence and said the Justice Department would intensify its investigation of police conduct in the beating of Rodney King.

Nauruans have bought themselves a mess

NAURU — This equatorial island, which is the setting for our sad ecological tale, is merely a dot on the world map, found only with a magnifying glass. On most globes and maps, the line that denotes the equator, 26 miles north of here, is bigger than the island.

Anderson

A little over 8 square miles, and located about halfway between Australia and Hawaii, Nauru is smaller than most airports. Yet this speck of an island nation actually features its own "international" airport (it's too small to have a domestic service). A single road circles the island, and a good jogger can tour the entire country on foot before breakfast.

The population is 7,000 Nauruan natives — who are a blend of Polynesian, Micronesian and Melanesian peoples — and another 3,000 guest workers from neighboring Pacific islands.

Outside its Pacific neighborhood, few have heard of Nauru. If they have, it's likely either that they are stamp collectors, and have purchased dozens of distinctive Nauru issues; or they are wealthy golf enthusiasts who try Nauru's nine-hole golf course, where putting is done on crushed coral.

Geologists call the island a coral uplift, an above-the-sea rarity. Unlike other islands, it is not the top of some great undersea mountain or volcano. It is simply a tall coral reef, a raised atoll, the edge of which drops off hundreds of feet to the ocean bottom. Nauru has sunk beneath the sea and risen several times over the eons.

During all that time, this island was the beneficiary of a unique gift from the gods — or the birds, to be specific. They found this isolated island to be the greatest breeding season destination in the ocean. And over the millennia, they dumped so much guano on the island that, when mixed with marine debris, the droppings became the richest phosphate reserve on the planet.

As a base for fertilizer, phosphate was worth fighting over. The Germans first annexed this guano-laden island in 1888, and began to mine phosphate here in 1907, along with the Australians. Mixed with sulphuric acid back in Australia, the result, "superphosphate," became just the tonic the continent needed to make the outback blossom as a rose.

Following World War I, President Woodrow Wilson helped broker an agreement under which the island was consigned to a tripartite administration of Great Britain, New Zealand and Australia, which was dominated by the latter.

Nauruans were given a nominal royalty in return for their phosphate, which didn't become an issue until after the Second World War. That war — during which 1,200 islanders were detained by the Japanese as forced laborers — cost Nauru one-third of its population.

Those who survived were a different sort, hardy and determined. Answering to Australian administrators was no longer acceptable, and a political movement started by Sir Hammer DeRoburt, the late, revered "father of the country," finally achieved independence for the new republic in 1968. By that time, Nauru was exporting about 2 million tons of phosphate a year. Under the terms of their independence, they were required to continue at that rate for several years more.

But Nauru was so anxious for extra income that the islanders mined voraciously — far more than their minimum allotment. Prior to independence, the colonial powers had mined about one-third of the island's phosphate deposits, and in the 30 years since, the remaining two-thirds have been mined and shipped out of the country.

While the phosphate lasted, it provided a comfortable life for the Nauruans. For many years, the natives of this tiny island enjoyed the highest, per-capita income in the world.

What's left today, however, is an eerie ecological disaster, as observed by our associate Dale Van Atta. It conjures images of a science fiction apocalypse — a deforested lunar landscape spiked with hundreds of tall coral pinnacles up to 80 feet tall. Only the rim of the island is still habitable. Flying overhead, Nauru has the appearance of an overturned white dinner plate on a green doily.

Phosphate mining has even cost this island its rain. The coral pinnacles, exposed to the sun after the phosphate between them was picked clean, pick up so much heat during the day that they never cool down through the night. The "oven effect" tends to disperse thunderclouds coming overhead before their precious water is dropped.

Most of the blame for the phosphate frenzy, Nauruan leaders privately recognize, rests with the islanders themselves who wanted to spend the money on Western goods and luxuries. Like the comic strip character Pogo, they have seen the enemy "and it is us."

Linebarger will stand up for what's right

A few comments in response to letters from Donna Johnson and Mary Barnett about the MISD District 3 race between Karen Linebarger and Glen Bufler:

First, those who believe that Ms. Linebarger would be a "rubber stamp" for anyone don't know Ms. Linebarger. She is a strongly independent thinker who will stand up for what she believes is right for the children of Midland.

Second, the omission of the "verbiage" on four of Ms. Linebarger's 29 signs was the result of an oversight by a volunteer. Ms. Linebarger is well-educated about the laws involved in running for the school board, and is making every effort to comply with them. The problem with the signs has been corrected.

Third, and most important, if Bufler feels allegiance with the children and the taxpayers, why didn't he vote in the March 1 school bond election?

Ms. Linebarger's commitment to MISD began years ago when she volunteered in her son's school and has continued through the years. She has the time and dedication required of a school board member, and would be an excel-

This year's award is a community effort

A great big thank you to the Midland Reporter-Telegram, in particular Charles Spence and Jim Servatius; also to Albertson's and Diane Anderson for the assistance both organizations have given to support the Leadership Midland Alumni sponsored Community Spirit Award. Albertson's financial grant and MRT's donation of publicity and personnel are greatly appreciated.

This year's Community Spirit Award is truly a community effort. The Leadership Midland Alumni Community Spirit Award Committee is expertly chaired by Leadership Midland alumna Alice Friedline and composed of a cross section of community volunteers. Selection of this year's recipient will be made by our community at large voting via the Reporter-Telegram Community Pulse Poll.

Leadership Midland Alumni wants all of Midland to feel that this is their award to honor another community who came together much the way our citizens did 10 years ago to rescue a small child from what could have become a tragedy.

Personally, and as Leadership Midland Alumni chairwoman, I again offer my appreciation to Albertson's, the Midland Reporter-Telegram, committee members and the citizens of Midland for making the 1997 Community Spirit Award a very special national honor.

L nn Mashburn, Chairwoman Leadership Midland Alumni

Linebarger could make contribution

As a businessman and Midland resident for many years, I am interested in the quality of education in our public schools. I have heard major employers and companies considering moving to Midland express negative opinions about our schools. These may be accurate or not. I only know this is the perception of these company representatives and, incidentally, some parents and ex-students.

Midland deserves a premier public school system. At least one impediment to achieving it is a unified school board that is focused on educating children to the exclusion of other goals. The development of well-conceived policies and efficient meetings in a business-like atmosphere should be a starting point.

Because of my interest I have discussed my views with Karen Linebarger and other school board candidates. Ms. Linebarger has the education, interest, energy and vision to make a positive contribution to the MISD school board. She will work to improve our public schools and enable the faculty and administration to better educate our children.

Garcia would be best choice

I have had the privilege of knowing David Garcia on both a personal and professional level. I cannot imagine parents, our children and teachers being better represented than by Garcia. His personal interest and involvement in our community is unsurpassed. He has demonstrated his honesty and integrity in every aspect of his life and career.

I urge the voters in District 5 to elect this candidate, David Garcia, who believes in the citizens and children of Midland, and who can hold an objective opinion, with no association with the school administration or special interest groups. His dedication to us is his top priority; voting for him should be ours.

CFR agenda is no secret: better schools

We were gratified that Midland Independent School District (MISD) administrators acknowledged CFR's newspaper insert, "Spotlight on MISD," to be accurate. Their other comments, however, were misleading.

The superintendent suggested that we seek to "manage, if not control, the tax rate." But our report did not mention taxes at all. We do value efficiency. That's why last month we asked the school board for higher taxes, in order to pay off the big, new bond more quickly and prudently than the administration's back-loaded repayment schedule proposed. On the other hand, we don't believe that higher spending is the answer to any of MISD's problems.

The purpose of "Spotlight on MISD" ' s educational. How many people knew, for example, that almost two-thirds (62 percent) of all grades given in MISD elementary schools last fall were 90 or above, lulling parents into complacency? Or that enrollment has been virtually flat for four years?

Ms. Viveiros' "Speaking Out" column raised a number of questions about our motives and actions, then concluded that she "only can assume" that we "deliberately intended to misinform the public." If she had any interest in the truth about CFR, she would have at least asked us to answer her questions before making such serious, public charges. I'm in the phone book.

We didn't point fingers; we said "it's no one's fault." Yet the administration and its apologists, unable to refute the facts we presented, resorted to speculation about a "secret agenda." CFR has an agenda, all right, but it isn't secret: academically superior, fiscally efficient, parent-centered schools.

MISD's mediocre test scores, high dropout rate, and high teacher turnover indicate systemic problems. Too many parents and teachers are filled with frustration. Something must be done

We won't be deterred, because children are worth fighting for. We look forward to the day when the school board and administration will begin to welcome reasonable, well-informed, heartfelt, respectful suggestions from parents, teachers, and citizens.

Richard D. Bowdon,
CFR Chairman

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The briefer the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis. Letters which are difficult to reduce in length will be returned to the writer to be edited before being re-submitted.
- We do not publish 'open' letters, copies of letters sent to others or multiple signatures.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, TX 79702 or you may fax to 682-3793.

They can also be faxed to 682-3793 or sent via e-mail to Letters@basinlink.com - Letters faxed or sent by e-mail should indicate they are for publication.

Pulitzer Prize-winning columnist Mike Royko dies at age 64

CHICAGO (AP) — Mike Royko, the Pulitzer Prize-winning newspaper columnist whose biting sarcasm and empathy for the common man captured the gritty essence of Chicago for more than three decades, died Tuesday. He was 64.

The Chicago Tribune announced Royko's death on its World Wide Web site.

Royko, whose Chicago Tribune column was syndicated to more than 200 newspapers nationwide, underwent surgery last week for an aneurysm, a rupture or weakening of a blood vessel.

He had suffered a stroke in early April while vacationing in Florida and had been hospitalized there.

Royko's column was a cornerstone of the daily newspaper for generations of Chicago readers, first in the now-defunct Chicago Daily News, later with the Chicago Sun-Times and since 1984 with the Tribune. For most of his career he wrote five days a week.

"I think Mike Royko brought a great deal to his readers, both in humor and in skepticism and in spotting phonies," said longtime Chicago columnist Irv Kupcinet of the Sun-Times. "He expressed his mind without fear and did so no matter who he crossed and who he hurt."

He gained stature as a critic of the late Mayor Richard J. Daley at a time when most prominent Chicagoans treated Daley with cautious respect. Royko's 1971 biography, "Boss: Richard J. Daley of Chicago," portrayed Daley as a shrewd, autocratic politician who tolerated racism and corruption.

In typical tongue-in-cheek fashion, Royko suggested the city's motto of "Urbs In Horto" — city in a garden — should be changed to "Ubi Est Mea" — where's mine?

The book so infuriated the Daley family that the mayor's wife persuaded a grocery-store chain to remove the book from its stores.

On Tuesday, Mayor Richard M. Daley, Richard J. Daley's son, said: "Through the years my family filled many of his columns, some critical and some supportive, but whether you agreed with him or not, you had to respect his honesty and his love for the city."

Royko tempered his political commentary with wry observations on news, social trends, his beloved Chicago Cubs and the foibles of everyday life. Many were presented in imagined conversations with Slats Grobnik, Royko's fictitious blue-collar alter ego from the Polish neighborhood where Royko grew up.

Known for his gruff, often sarcastic tone, Royko's scorn could be withering.

In 1992, a woman called him to complain. She had found a 2,000-year-old Roman coin on the floor in her bank and returned it. To her dismay, she was not offered a reward.

"If you don't at least try to return it, you're a thief," Royko wrote. "So should we hold parades for people because they aren't thieves?"

He had no use for yuppies, as a column on buying practical gifts for spouses made clear:

"Many men love tools. Even those who don't know how to use them. I know one yuppie male who was thrilled when he got a set of screwdrivers. He said: 'Oh, these will be perfect for prying open shellfish.'"

When Tampa, Fla., tried to lure the White Sox away from Chicago in 1988, he urged city baseball fans to send their dirty socks to Florida officials. In return, Royko received citrus seeds from Florida fans.

But others didn't take the jibes so lightly, and in later years some readers wondered whether Royko was going too far. Where once his venom was reserved for politicians, he had begun to write more about ethnic minorities and gays, to the pleasure of neither.

Twice in March 1996, Hispanic protesters gathered at the Tribune Tower to demand an apology for remarks in his columns. Royko had written that tequila is the best thing Mexico has offered this century. Another column took a jaundiced view of anti-Castro Cubans. The protesters said Royko perpetuated stereotypes.

Royko himself got into legal trouble because of alcohol.

In 1995, Royko pleaded guilty to drunken driving and resisting arrest after a traffic accident near his Winnetka home. According to court testimony, Royko had begun treatment for alcoholism a month before the accident and had enrolled in an after-care addiction program.

Royko joined the Daily News in 1959 and won the Pulitzer for commentary in 1972. He moved to the Sun-Times in 1978 when the Daily News folded, then jumped to the rival Tribune in 1984, citing Rupert Murdoch's acquisition of the Sun-Times.

In October 1995, Royko received the Damon Runyon Award, given annually to the journalist who best exemplifies the style that made Runyon one of the best columnists of his day.

In his acceptance speech, Royko reflected on how the newsroom had changed during his years in journalism.

"Forty years ago, we were on the tail of the Front Page era," Royko said. "There was a different point of view. Reporters and editors were more forgiving of public people. They didn't think they had to stick someone in jail to make a career."

Royko is survived by his wife, Judy, a 9-year-old son, Sam, and 4-year-old daughter, Kate, as well as two sons from his first marriage, David and Robert, and four grandchildren. His first wife, childhood sweetheart Carol Duckman, died in 1979. Funeral arrangements were incomplete.

Talk is over, work begins after summit

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — With marching orders from Gen. Colin Powell and first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton, Gary St. Peter and thousands of others left the volunteer summit Tuesday with plans to stop talking and start doing.

"The hard work begins tomorrow morning," said St. Peter, 47, an attorney from Providence, R.I., who plans to set up safe havens for children to spend their after-school hours.

With Independence Hall as a backdrop, Mrs. Clinton, former President Bush and Powell, general chairman of the Presidents' Summit for America's Future, lauded the delegates in a sun-drenched sendoff.

"You are the real troops," said Powell. "It was the work that you did yesterday and this morning that is giving life, that is giving a pulse to this effort of ours that will make it successful."

Powell assured the skeptics that "we're going to glue this together and make reality" out of the hundreds of pledges that have been made to improve the lives of 2 million of the nation's 15 million disadvantaged children by 2000.

Mrs. Clinton told the delegates that government leaders will do what they can to encourage and motivate but everyone must do the real work.

"This summit, these commitments, they are about the habits of the heart that make us Americans. Let us go show the world and our children that we are prepared to live up to them," she said.

Bush, the only president to stay for all three days, said the star-studded summit was "fine, a lot of glitz ... but what matters is what you all do."

Even though their plans need refining, some delegates were ready to begin work and others were planning local versions of the national summit.

"One of the challenges is taking this back to our community ... and making it as exciting as everything that they saw from here," said Vanessa Smith of Syracuse, N.Y.

An ABC News-Washington Post poll released Monday indicated the importance of asking for volunteers. Three in four Americans said most people they know would volunteer if someone asked them. Of the 55 percent who said they've done some kind of volunteer work in the last year, 42 percent said they got involved because someone invited them.

The telephone survey of 1,013 adults was taken April 21-24. Results have a margin of sampling error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

Our People Make It Your Store.

Dear Albertson's – One day at work I was asked to organize a last minute luncheon. Luckily, I remembered the delicious food that you prepare in the deli. I called Albertson's, and Lupe Ramirez and her team came to my rescue. All I had to do was go in and pick up my order. At work I was the hero, but in reality the ones who deserve all the praise are you. It's people like Lupe that make Albertson's my store.

Titanium-mining project near Okefenokee Swamp draws criticism

FOLKSTON, Ga. (AP) — Amid the rustle of a gentle breeze and the sounds of pig frogs and yellow-rumped warblers, a 13-foot alligator suns itself on the banks of a lagoon in the Okefenokee Swamp, oblivious to the great blue heron dancing coyly around it.

The outside world rarely encroaches on this wildlife refuge made famous by Pogo, the comic strip possum.

And defenders of the swamp want it to stay that way.

They are trying to stop industrial giant DuPont Co. from expanding its titanium mining to the eastern edge of the Okefenokee in Georgia.

"It's too much of a risk and a very inappropriate neighbor for the Okefenokee," said Judy Jennings of the Georgia Sierra Club.

Titanium is a lightweight metal used in golf clubs, jet engines and bone replacements. Its biggest use is as a white pigment in paper, paint and plastics.

Critics fear the round-the-clock mining would foul the Okefenokee's waters and destroy wildlife habitat. Also, the dredging machinery and floodlights at night would ruin the back-to-nature experience for the swamp's 400,000 annual visitors, they say.

Although DuPont has been buying up or leasing a tract near the swamp for three years, the $150 million mining project didn't begin drawing opposition until last fall from Georgia and federal officials, including Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt.

Earlier this month, DuPont made a retreat while it further studies the effects of mining near the Okefenokee. It also said it would hire an outsider to mediate talks between the company and its critics.

"Clearly, mining in the vicinity of the Okefenokee brings its special concerns, as it should," said Jon Samborski, DuPont's environmental chief for the proposed mining project. But the company points to its 40 years of experience mining titanium 40 miles away in Florida.

The Okefenokee, an Indian word that means "trembling earth," is a protected wetland covering 438,000 acres in southeastern Georgia and northern Florida. Its tea-colored waterways are lined with cypress trees dripping with Spanish moss, and it is teeming with alligators, black bears, birds and reptiles.

It was made famous by Walt Kelly's comic strip "Pogo," which used the playful possum and other animals to poke fun at politics. In one of Kelly's best-known cartoons, Pogo peered over a polluted, trash-strewn swamp in 1971 and declared: "We have met the enemy and he is us."

The federal government bought the swamp for $1.50 an acre and turned it into the Okefenokee National Wildlife Refuge in 1937. Today, 90 percent of the swamp is federally protected.

DuPont has bought or leased a 38,000-acre tract of piney woods next to the swamp. The company said there will be a buffer between the swamp and the mining operation, which involves scooping up sand and separating out the grainy titanium.

The area under discusion is part of the sandy Trail Ridge, which runs from southern Georgia into northern Florida. DuPont has mined a section of the Trail Ridge in Florida for 40 years, and it is the only place in the United States where titanium is mined full time.

"It is not an issue of simply going somewhere else," Samborski said.

DuPont plants in the United States and elsewhere turn titanium ore into the white pigment called titanium dioxide. It's a $7-billion-a-year industry worldwide, and DuPont has about a quarter of that market.

DuPont now mines an estimated 200,000 tons of titanium annually from the Florida mine, and expected the same from the Georgia site.

Florida has fined DuPont three times since 1990 for wastewater violations at its Starke mining operation, which is adjacent to a few small wetlands.

"When there's been a problem, they seem to correct it fairly quickly," said Kathalyn Gaither, spokeswoman for the Florida Department of Environmental Protection.

The chemical giant won't be able to proceed in Georgia without permits from several state and federal agencies. Babbitt flew to the swamp to announce his opposition. Georgia's governor and the state environmental board are against it, as are several environmental groups.

Some recent visitors to the Okefenokee saw it as a bad idea, too.

"I think it's insanity to even think of doing that," said Doug Hart of Toronto, who paddled a canoe through the swamp with his wife and 2-year-old daughter. "Why can't they leave a little part of nature alone?"

Ban goes into effect without Russia, Iraq

WASHINGTON (AP) — A global ban on chemical weapons took effect Tuesday with several key nations absent from the list of more than 80 that have ratified it — notably Russia and Iraq, the only two besides the United States to admit having chemical arms.

The ban, hailed by arms-control advocates as a step toward a safer world, does not eliminate the threat posed by poison gas and other chemical agents. Indeed, some fear these will increasingly be a weapon of choice for terrorists.

In a well-publicized drill that underscored this concern, a specially assembled Marine Corps unit demonstrated in Washington on Tuesday how it would respond to a chemical or biological weapon attack by terrorists on a city.

It is the threat of terrorist attack — not a deliberate chemical assault by the forces of a foreign government — that most concerns the Clinton administration. The treaty, known as the Chemical Weapons Convention, outlaws the development, production, possession, transfer or use of chemical weapons.

Russia has signed the treaty but its parliament has not ratified it. A Pentagon report three months ago said Russian pesticide processing plants offer "easy potential" for secret production of a new generation of chemical weapons.

The United States and Russia both have pledged to destroy their entire stocks of chemical weapons, but that task is proving more difficult and costly than either had anticipated. The United States expects to spend at least $12.4 billion to get rid of its chemical weapons by the end of 2004.

The Senate ratified the treaty last Thursday, more than four years after former President Bush signed it, but doubts remain that Russia will follow suit. All NATO countries, plus Japan and China, have ratified the treaty, but several countries perceived as hostile to the United States have not even signed it. These include Iraq, Syria, Libya and North Korea, which has large numbers of chemical weapons stored near the Demilitarized Zone that divides it from South Korea.

In all, more than 160 countries have signed the treaty and more than 80 have ratified it.

The latest to act was Kuwait, whose parliament ratified it Tuesday. Kuwait sees itself as especially vulnerable. Iraq, which invaded Kuwait in 1990, had a large clandestine chemical weapons program, and it remains unclear whether the Iraqis actually used some of those weapons during the Persian Gulf War in 1991.

If it had not ratified the treaty before it took effect Tuesday, the United States would not have been allowed to participate directly in verifying compliance. Treaty opponents argued that the ban is unenforceable and that it would create the impression that there no longer is a chemical arms threat.

A bronze statue of firefighters, crosses marking where the 14 lost their lives and memorial quilts for families of the victims were among ways residents proved they would not forget.

GLENWOOD SPRINGS, COLORADO

It began as only a single lightning bolt hitting a single tree on July 2, 1994. but before it was over 14 brave firefighters — 11 men and three women — were dead in a blazing inferno that lasted nine days and was one of the deadliest forest fires in history.

"A nation reveals itself not only by the men it produces but also by the men it honors, the men it remembers," President John F. Kennedy once said.

The story of the residents of Glenwood Springs, Colo., is a story of people honoring people and living the pledge they made: "We will never forget!"

Forget they did not. Immediately after the tragedy they set out to remember the firefighters from as far away as Oregon, Idaho and Montana who had come to their aid and, in doing so, had lost their lives.

Through raffles, bake sales, donation jars and dozens of other fund-raising projects a total of $140,000 had been raised and a year later, on July 6, 1995, the results of their efforts were unveiled.

An impressive bronze monument and sculpture of three firefighters were erected to honor those who lost their lives as well as other firefighters everywhere. A memorial trail was opened along the path where the men and women had died, each location marked by a granite cross. In another area, residents developed a new park featuring 14 large boulders, each bearing a bronze plaque with a firefighter's name. Others in the community created individual quilts to be presented to representatives of each of the 14 families who were flown to Glenwood Springs for the dedications, with lodging and meals provided.

Volunteers had built trails, an observation point, monuments, educational dioramas and provided food, paving labor, landscaping and materials. They were then on hand to honor the relatives who had lost loved ones and who were recognized through the day at a series of receptions, presentations and ceremonies.

In every possible way, the residents of Glenwood Springs and the surrounding area had lived up to their pledge and proved that they truly "would never forget."

FORSYTH, GEORGIA

What do you do when hundreds of teen-agers, between 500 and 600 of them, are literally dumped in your small community with no provisions for food, shelter or transportation? And the buses that left them drive off?

If you're a citizen of Forsyth, Ga., 50 miles south of Atlanta, you deal with it. You meet the challenge.

That's just what residents did when they noticed something was wrong early on July 25, 1996, when chartered buses began dumping young people in their community. Just a few at first, then about 50 at a time. Investigation quickly revealed that the teen-agers were from throughout the U.S. A private company had contracted with the Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games to provide employees for concession stands, souvenir booths and other outlets at each Olympic event site. The youngsters had responded to ads promising jobs, game tickets, food, housing and transportation.

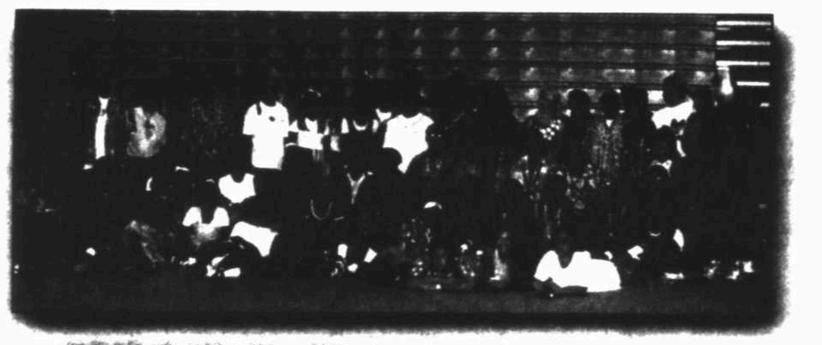
But something went wrong and when they arrived in Atlanta they found the promised facilities not available. There were no rooms in Atlanta; other workers had been put to work; buses to return them to their homes did not exist.

No one knew just why the first ones were dumped out at Forsyth but the word must have spread and soon hundreds were there.

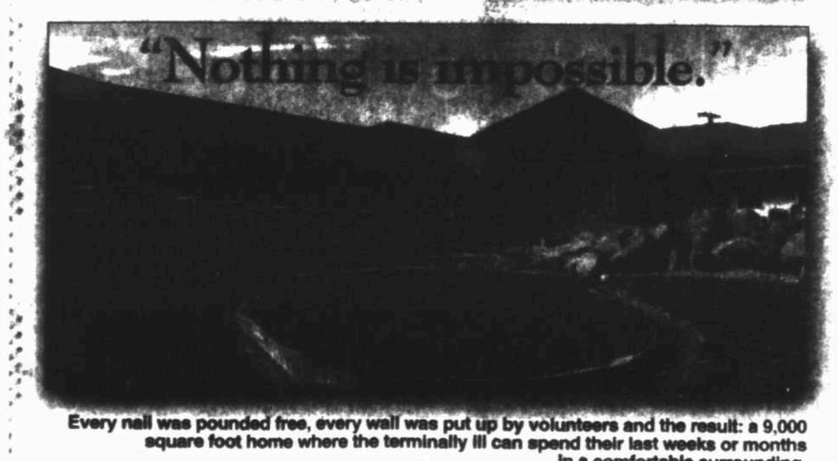
Residents immediately showed up to help. Feed 600 teen-agers on the spur of the moment? With the help of volunteers, food and outdoor cookers were rounded up. The local hotel-motel owner came to the rescue and an available school building was opened while a church offered space for the overflow. Other residents took kids into their homes, taking care of all their needs.

Volunteers showed up as cooks, servers and cleanup help. Television connections enabled the youngsters to watch the games; a phone bank was set up so they could call worried parents. Individuals and business owners continued to contribute food and then made donations to a fund to help cover expenses and aid parents, many of them needy, in providing transportation home. Slowly over the next six days the teen-agers left Forsyth with memories they probably will keep for a lifetime.

Why did the folks of Forsyth rally to provide so much help to so many no one even knew? As one volunteer put it: "It was simple. It was just the right thing to do."



True southern hospitality is what stranded teen-agers found awaiting them in Forsyth, Ga., whose residents opened their doors to the youngsters from around the country. One family hosted this group (above) while a local school was home for several days for young people from Hawaii (top).



Every nail was pounded free, every wall was put up by volunteers and the result: a 9,000 square foot home where the terminally ill can spend their last weeks or months in a comfortable surrounding.

TRI-CITIES, WASHINGTON

Someone once said that the opportunities in America are so great that the motto for this country could well be "Nothing Is Impossible."

It was that kind of irrepressible spirit and we-can-do-it attitude that several thousand residents of Tri-Cities, Wash., demonstrated when they pulled together to build the first Hospice House in eastern Washington.

And the attitude and actions of those who made the beautiful facility a reality was the same as that exhibited by Hospice volunteers themselves — quiet, humble and loving without any regard for praise or recognition.

The idea was born when it was realized many people could not afford to take the time off from their work to care for a terminally ill family member. And although Hospice volunteers fill a big part of the void, there needed to be a place where patients could live during their final days in an environment as close to home as possible, staffed by those who know how to make death easier both for the dying and for the living.

The result of more than 24,000 hours of work by 3,000 volunteers was unveiled Nov. 17, 1996, when Tri-Cities' beautiful new 9,000-square-foot facility was opened.

Built solely by donations and with all volunteer labor, Tri-Cities Hospice House is a $1.2 million mortgage-free facility built on land donated by a church. Area businesses donated materials or offered hefty discounts; architects, engineers and landscape designers donated their services while others cooked and baked for work crews. And when the structure was finished, others took over, painting walls and laying carpet. Finally came the needed homey furnishings and special medical equipment — all donated.

Based on the belief that those who have benefited from Hospice will tell you it's "the work of angels," on Aug. 16, 1996, community residents came together at "An Evening for the Angels," a musical tribute to the new Hospice House and Counseling Center and to the compassionate and caring people who would operate it.

Criteria established for judging nominations for past Spirit Award winners and which the award committee has asked voters to keep in mind when voting are:

- The community effort was beyond the ordinary with a large cross-section of volunteers participating.
- It was an unselfish response to a human need.
- What was done brought people together and inspires others to do their best.
- Overall, the award honors a community "whose people selflessly worked together to accomplish a goal." While it may have been response to a tragedy, it also may have been in response to a community need or circumstance.

For the first time, Midland's citizens in general will select this year's Community Spirit Award winner from a field of three finalists.

To place your vote via the Reporter-Telegram's Community Pulse Poll, simply dial 500-2400 today and Thursday and enter the corresponding category number below:

- To vote for Tri-Cities, Wash., where some 3,000 volunteers worked 24,000 hours to build a $1.2 million mortgage-free Hospice House and Counseling Center — Enter Category 3031.
- To vote for Forsyth, Ga., whose citizens met the challenge when hundreds of teenagers were stranded after coming to nearby Atlanta to work in the Olympics — Enter Category 3032.
- To vote for Glenwood Springs, Colo., where residents vowed "We will never forget" when a raging forest fire left 14 firefighters, 11 men and three women, dead — Enter Category 3033.

The 1997 Midland Community Spirit Award, a project of Leadership Midland Alumni Association, is sponsored by Albertson's.

POLICE REPORTS

Theft

A former Midland teacher is free on a $5,000 bond after being arrested Monday on theft charges.

Margaret Denise Bess Smith, a former special education teacher assistant at Washington Elementary School and co-treasurer of the Midland Educators Association (MEA) in 1994-95, was arrested in connection with $48,000 missing funds from the organization.

She was charged with theft over $20,000 and under $100,000.

The MEA, a bonded organization, has recovered all funds and the loss has not harmed the operations, according to Teresa Marmolejo, Midland teacher and MEA president.

A child was taken from his mother
A precious child insensely murdered
Precious child so far away
Where I ask did you stray?
A heart so shattered and so broken
As many precious words left unspoken
A life so beautiful was destroyed
It makes no sense to disregard
Where is my child I loved so much
My child loved more than life itself
Sweet child of mine where have you gone?

Plane location: Calcutta, India
Latitude: 22 degrees 40.55 minutes N
Longitude: 88 degrees 27 minutes E
Destination: Chiang Mai, Thailand
Trip miles: 634 nautical miles
Estimated flight time: 6.7 hours

Early Sunday morning, Linda Finch and navigator, Peter Cousins completed a 1,176 miles trip from Karachi, Pakistan, to Calcutta. That flight marked the second longest leg of the journey so far. Before departing Karachi, she had trouble with the Electra's landing gear and had to replace the fuse. The trip across India took just eight hours with her Electra traveling at a swift clip of 145 nautical mph.

On Monday, Ms. Finch visited children at a home and students at two local schools. She finalized flight plans on Tuesday for her trip today.

Amended report shows tax plan would balance

AUSTIN (AP) — A House plan overhauling the way Texas funds its schools would not be in the red as first reported by official fiscal analysts.

The Legislative Budget Board on Tuesday caused a stir in the Capitol after releasing a required report showing that if adopted, the House plan would cause a $2.6 billion deficit in 1999-2000.

The LBB late Tuesday amended its report showing that the plan would be short about $740 million in that two-year budget. That shortfall is expected. Lawmakers expect to use $1 billion in additional state funds to cover that deficit.

In the first two-year budget, starting Sept. 1, the plan would create a $107 million surplus if the additional $1 billion in state funds is counted.

"The bill was in balance when it left the House and still is," said Rep. Paul Sadler, D-Henderson, chairman of the committee that wrote the plan. "We were a little ahead."

The House plan, approved Saturday, would lower local school property taxes by $5 billion by reducing the amount of taxes collected for school operation and maintenance. It also would encourage cuts to the property tax used to pay off school debt.

To offset the cuts, the proposal would raise about $4 billion by expanding the state business tax, increasing the number of goods and services subject to the state sales tax and hiking some other taxes.

A separate proposal would dedicate $1.3 billion in additional state funds for education.

A Senate rewrite of the plan is expected to cut the proposal in half. Senate hearings were expected to begin Wednesday but have been delayed.

"We want to do this, but we want to be fiscally responsible," Sen. Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, head of the Senate Education Committee, said of the tax plan.

Bivins added that senators already are concerned that they face a tight deadline on the complicated plan. The legislative session ends on June 2.

Morales says state more willing to settle with tobacco industry

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Attorney General Dan Morales said Tuesday that the state would be more willing to settle with the tobacco industry now that attorneys general from 24 states have agreed not to grant immunity to tobacco companies for future liability.

"The issue of future immunity is no longer on the table," Morales said, one day after meeting with counterparts from across the country in Chicago to discuss tobacco litigation.

Texas is one of 24 states suing the industry, seeking to recover money spent on health care for tobacco-related illnesses. Morales said the number of states suing would likely "grow into the 30s."

There have been reports that the industry offered to settle all of the litigation by paying $300 billion and accepting restrictions on advertising, in exchange for immunity from future liability.

Morales said the tobacco industry would have to come up with "something well in excess of $300 billion for the state of Texas" to agree to a settlement.

"Three hundred billion is close, but it won't get us to a point where we would bypass going to trial," Morales said.

Lance Morgan, a spokesman for the tobacco companies involved in the settlement talks, declined to comment on Morales' statements.

Morales said he won't hold up the state's trial — scheduled to begin in September — to negotiate. The state is suing for $14 billion in health-related costs.

"If the tobacco industry wants to resolve this, they will have to do that before September, when we are planning on picking a jury in Texarkana," Morales said.

However, Morales said that companies genuinely are interested in settling the case. In the past, tobacco companies would engage in settlement talks and then deny that they were doing so, Morales said.

"I have been skeptical in the past, but I have changed my mind about that," Morales said. "I believe now that there is a very real prospect for settlement.

"I think they (tobacco companies) perceive that they have few options left, that the alternative to a settlement would be far worse to them," he said.

Marijuana use on rise among elementary students

AUSTIN (AP) — Marijuana use among elementary school students in Texas has more than doubled in the last four years, with sixth-graders comprising the largest group of young pot smokers, according to a survey released Tuesday.

The survey, conducted by the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse and the Texas A&M Public Policy Research Institute, shows that while fewer elementary students are smoking cigarettes and drinking alcohol, more are experimenting with marijuana.

A similar study released last fall showed marijuana use among Texas high school students also had risen in the last four years, from 20 percent to 31 percent.

"It's depressing news," said Texas Education Agency spokeswoman Debbie Graves Ratcliffe. "The survey does make it seem that drug experimentation is occurring at younger and younger ages. It's definitely a concern to educators."

The survey is based on the responses of 68,239 students in fourth through sixth grade in 70 school districts across the state. In all, there are about 887,000 fourth, fifth and sixth-graders in Texas, Mrs. Ratcliffe said.

According to the study, the percentage of elementary students who have smoked marijuana at least once increased from 1.7 percent in 1992 to 4 percent in 1996. In 1994, 5.6 percent of the students said they had used marijuana.

The percentage of students who said they had used marijuana during the immediate past school year rose from 1 percent in 1992 to 2.7 percent in 1996. In 1994, 1.9 percent said they had smoked pot in the previous school year.

Marijuana use was highest among sixth-graders, with 7.3 percent saying they had smoked pot at least once, an increase from 3.4 percent in 1992. That compares with 2.9 percent of fifth-graders, up from 0.9 percent in 1992, and 1.7 percent of fourth-graders, up from 0.8 percent in 1992.

"These findings clearly show that the risk of trying and using illegal drugs begins to escalate as early as the sixth grade," said Richard Spence, assistant deputy of the measurements division at TCADA.

"While some younger students try drugs and alcohol, the sixth grade is a real turning point. We must redouble our prevention efforts among younger students to interrupt this cycle."

Despite the findings, marijuana was the least used substance by elementary students in 1996. Alcohol was most popular, with 30 percent of students saying they had consumed alcohol at least once. Seventeen percent of students said they had smoked cigarettes, while 9.8 percent said they had used inhalants.

Several new projects that aim to prevent drug and alcohol abuse among young people are under way across the state, officials said.

At the governor's request, a coalition of education, health and criminal justice experts has been created to develop a statewide initiative to keep children from experimenting with illegal drugs.

In addition, TCADA this year is implementing test projects in 11 Texas communities that target youth drug use through life-skills training and family intervention.

Women's Care Update
by Michael S. Phillips, M.D.
Diplomate, American Board Obstetrics & Gynecology
EPIDURAL UPDATE
The traditional epidural provides pain relief to women in the throes of labor with an injection of analgesic into the outer layer of their spinal columns. Painkillers administered in this fashion take about 20 minutes to work and, because they affect the motor and sensory nerves, leave women confined to their hospital beds. There is also the combined spinal-epidural (CSE), nicknamed the "walking epidural." A CSE is administered deeper into the spinal column to provide relief within 2 minutes. Because it does not block motor nerves, it enables mothers-to-be to walk around during the early stages of labor. These advantages over the traditional epidural provide a more positive experience during labor and delivery.
Some women, who have never given birth, assume labor is like what they see on tv. The mother-to-be experiences her first contraction, lies contorted and shrieking in pain, and is quickly rushed to the hospital to deliver. That is dramatic license! Most women are comfortable during the early stages of labor and choose to stay at home (unless they live a great distance away from medical help). With the many options now available for mitigating pain, most patients who wish relief may keep pain to a minimum-- even in the late stages of labor and through delivery! To schedule an appointment, call 522-2222. My office is located at the Primary Medical Clinic - Westwood, 4214 Andrews Highway, Suite 100, Midland.

Lunch 'hour' getting shorter

By Donna St. George
N.Y. Times News Service

Once there was the lunch hour. Now there is the lunch squeeze: the midday mealtime interlude that has been rushed, scaled down and even eliminated as workers like Susan Julbe juggle the demands of office and home.

Mrs. Julbe, a business manager for National Public Radio in Washington, clocks her lunch break at "about seven minutes" — the time it takes to microwave a frozen entree in the office kitchen and bring it back to her desk.

She eats while she works, she said, having just finished a lunch of Healthy Choice chicken cacciatore, because "it gives me that extra hour in my day."

Though Mrs. Julbe may sound extreme, she is part of a trend that has changed restaurant menus, inspired a successful line of convenience foods and helped create a boom in takeout eating and corporate catering.

A GROWING NUMBER of Americans view the lunch hour of old as a luxury that no longer fits into a world of downsized businesses, heavier workloads and time-pressed families with two working parents.

When the National Restaurant Association polled workers in late 1996, for example, nearly 40 percent reported that they did not take a real lunch break. Forty-five percent said they had less time for lunch than before.

And in two other recent surveys, the American lunch "hour" measured up to about half its billing: 29 minutes in one survey and 36 minutes in the other.

"Lunch is not the big thing that it once was," said Mildred Culp, a Seattle workplace consultant. "People, if not overwhelmed, are at least swamped, so they are looking to use their time more efficiently."

Dr. Culp added that the social aspects of lunch have changed for many workers. "People are now communicating by e-mail," she said. "They don't have to get together to chitchat and be friendly."

UNDERLYING THE squeeze on lunch are a string of other 1990s realities.

For Rich Bentley, the lunch hour fell apart after the birth of his son, Kyle, eight months ago. Both Bentley and his wife work full time. And once their son was in day care, their schedules had to be arranged around Kyle's.

"The old days of leisurely lunches and workouts are gone," said Bentley, an administrator at the State University Health Science Center at Brooklyn, who organizes his workday so that he can leave by 5 p.m. and pick up his son from day care on time.

Now, lunch has shrunk from a 60-minute break to a fast bite at a hospital cafeteria or neighborhood takeout counter. "I call it a 15-minute wolfing session," Bentley said.

Many lunchers, feeling such pressures, skip the noon meal altogether.

Lunch is, in fact, the most missed meal — not breakfast, as many people believe, said Harry Balzer, a vice president of the NPD Group, a consumer research organization in Rosemont, Ill., that tracks eating trends. Last year, the average American skipped lunch 66 times compared with 56 times in 1984, the first year for which it has data.

But to Balzer, that fact is not nearly so striking as this one: more and more Americans are joining the brown-bag brigade. Some 43 percent of men and 34 percent of women brought lunch from home at least once every two weeks in 1996, up about a third since 1987.

"It's a trend, there is no question about that," Balzer said. "In my way of thinking, it's because there is no easier or cheaper meal you can have than the meal you have carried from your house and that is sitting 10 feet away from you whenever you want."

The brown-bag trend is well known to food manufacturers, who have created shelves of new products for packing in paper bags and briefcases: items likes Oscar Mayer Lunchables and Starkist Charlie's Lunch Kit.

THE LUNCH CRUNCH of the 90s, which is especially evident among office workers, is well recognized by restaurateurs, who have expanded takeout operations and stepped up corporate catering — so that workers will not have to be away from their offices long, if at all.

In the 1980s, "people were willing and able to wait half an hour for a seat," said Peter Wyss of Restaurant Associates, which owns Tropica, Cafe Centro and Naples in the MetLife Building in midtown Manhattan, as well as takeout restaurants. "You don't see this anymore anywhere in midtown Manhattan," he added.

In Chicago, Karen Ryan may typify the worker who once went out to lunch but now eats takeout at her desk. Just five years ago, she and colleagues felt relaxed enough about their jobs to lunch regularly at sitdown restaurants.

"Now, people catch it when they can — and there's no such thing as a lunch hour," said Ms. Ryan, an account representative at J. Walter Thompson, the advertising agency. "There are never enough hours in the day to get things done."

THE DWINDLING lunch hour, however, is not only a result of schedule overload. For some, skimping on lunch is a way of expanding time for personal activities. For example, Wyss said lunch hours in his restaurants had slowed down on Fridays as customers tried to wrap up their workweeks in four and a half days.

Dennis Riese, head of the Riese Organization, which owns 150 New York restaurants, observed: "We're not a society of workaholics like we used to be. People are interested in devoting more of their time to play and to family."

For all of these reasons, takeout eating has developed into a way of life — and a new generation of restaurants has embraced it.

"There's just a ton of business out there in people who can't get away from their offices and yet want restaurant-quality food," said Peter Godoff, co-owner of Paradise and Lunch in Manhattan, whose services include delivery of lunch to workers at their desks.

To accommodate the time-conscious, even Le Bernardin, the elegant French restaurant on the West Side, started a 30-minute "timely lunch" menu in late February. "We had four or five tables every day that said, 'Rush, rush, super-rush,' " the owner, Maguy LeCoze, said.

But for business professionals, the most striking trend at lunch may be their companies' inclination to play host.

Companies of the 90s often bring work and lunch together — feeding workers, but keeping their attention straight through lunch.

"The mind-set is that you can't take the lunch hour out of the workday, so you have to incorporate work into it," said Ricky Eisen, owner of Between the Bread, a corporate caterer that brings lunch to 100 offices a day in New York.

With 2,000 businesses as clients, Ms. Eisen's catering operations have often reflected changes in corporate America. In 1991, she said, her business "took a dive" as companies downsized, restructured and cut back on expenses.

That year, several major corporations served sandwiches at their annual Christmas parties. "It was to me a horror," she said. "It broke my heart."

Since then, corporate catering has rebounded — but lunch has been reconfigured. "Primarily, I see that lunch has changed in its purpose," Ms. Eisen said. "It used to be a rest from the workday. Now it's part of the workday."

This new approach has changed menus, she added. In the 1980s, lunch was more elaborate, with new foods and flavorings. At one lunch in five, alcohol was served. "It was more dining than eating," she said. "Now it's eating."

In the 90s, alcohol is gone. Few are the meals that require multiple forks and knives. Now, companies want easily handled sandwiches and finger foods, with less sauce and mayonnaise.

"They want people to be able to hold lunch in one hand and keep working with the other hand," Ms. Eisen said.

AT A.T. KEARNEY, management consultants in New York, such catered lunches are a mainstay, said Fredda Paul, who oversees them. But no matter what is on the menu, business comes first and guides the agenda, she said.

"I'm here two years, and I have never seen anyone just sit back and enjoy the food," she said.

All of this lunch cutting is not necessarily healthy, experts say.

"People think they are increasing their productivity by eating while they're working at their desks, but what we find is that they need to take that break to refocus," said Neil Schmottlach, director of the Fisher Institute for Wellness at Ball State University in Muncie, Ind.

Melanie Young, a public relations executive in New York, whose company does special events in the food industry, confided that she has eaten too many lunches "over my keyboard," hoping to cram more work into her day.

Not only has she gummed up her computer by spilling her food while working, Ms. Young said, but she has also come down with indigestion.

"You're torn between taking this call — and talking to this person who you know you're never going to reach again — and eating your lunch," she said.

THE GREAT EXCEPTION to the lunchless trend may be among those who regularly do business over restaurant lunches — and who find the noon meal a perfect moment for building good will with clients and partners.

Nationally, lunch traffic at restaurants has grown 6 percent from 1993 to 1995, good news for an industry that suffered a lengthy slump after the 1990 recession, and after tax laws limited deductions for business meals. In New York, many restaurants report a bigger increase in the last year or so: more than 10 percent.

"Lunch took a real serious hit in the early 1990s," said David Ruggerio, the owner and executive chef at Le Chantilly in Manhattan, who also manages Maxim's. But in the last 18 months, he said, quoting sales jumps of 40 percent to 50 percent, "people are going back to lunch."

Still, the restaurant lunch of 1997 is a different world from its 1980s counterpart. It's not a two-hour affair, with two or three martinis, restaurateurs say. Now, many lunchers want to fold their linen napkins and pay their tabs only 45 minutes after they sit down.

"Today, it's like they're on a dead run," Ruggerio said. "They run through the door, they drop their coats, they get a menu, and they're ready to order. It's definitely not a casual situation."

In 1997, lunch customers order very fine wine — but by the glass, not the bottle. They heed price. Gone are the days when it seemed that almost every business lunch was added on to a house account, with the careless wave of a hand.

The way Clark Wolf, a New York-based food and restaurant consultant, sees it, people are of two minds about lunch. Most days, they are time-pressed and looking for takeout. But once or twice a month, they go all out.

"You have the tiny, tight lunch and the 'the heck with it, let's do dinner at 1 o'clock,' lunch," he said. "It's like hemlines, all the way up and all the way down."

AMONG DAYTIME diners, Wolf noted several trends. One is a tendency toward two-appetizer, no-entree lunches. Another is a hankering for comfort foods: macaroni and cheese, chicken pot pie, meatloaf.

"Macaroni and cheese is major — but haute macaroni and cheese," he said, recalling a dish at the Regency that features penne pasta, with three different cheeses and crabmeat.

"Macaroni and cheese for grownups," he said.

The trend is comfort food "not as retro, but to replace home," Wolf said. "People don't cook anymore."

As for whether or not America has grown more nutritionally conscious about lunch, there is evidence both ways.

Restaurateurs tell of more people ordering vegetables and fish. "Beef for lunch? It's nonexistent," said Julian Niccolini, a managing partner at the Four Seasons restaurant in Manhattan.

At Le Chantilly, Ruggerio said his three-course vegetable lunch menu is embraced by 25 percent to 30 percent of the lunch crowd. "Even these guys who are 250 pounds are eating vegetables," he said.

And Mrs. Julbe, the brown-bagger at National Public Radio, said nutrition is definitely in her mind when she packs a low-fat frozen meal for lunch each day.

But there are skeptics. After all, America has grown more obese in recent years.

And Balzer's research organization has found that hamburgers, French fries and chicken nuggets are among the fastest-growing foods in America.

"It seems quite unlikely that people are eating more nutritiously at lunch," said Dr. Marion Nestle, chairwoman of the department of nutrition and food studies at New York University. But she added, "Some probably are, and some are not."

Is 'fizzy water' at heart of corporate problems?

By Louise Lague
N.Y. Times News Service

Crabby bosses, stupid rules, labyrinthine office politics: the corporate world is not for sissies anymore. Why? The conventional wisdom blames downsizing. But maybe, just maybe, the problems of the corporate world were caused by a single pernicious custom: the consumption of fizzy water at lunch.

It was about 1980 when people in their 20s and 30s, suddenly realizing that they might not be immortal after all, began to stimulate their endorphins at the gym instead of with gin. Then in 1986, the Internal Revenue Service decided it would no longer allow midday martini swilling as a deductible business expense. By May 4, 1987, Industry Week magazine was reporting that the number of executives who regularly drank alcohol at lunch had plunged from 56 percent to 26 percent.

They substituted designer water (no ice, it bruises the bubbles).

Taken in moderation, such water is undeniably potable. But the cumulative effect has been not only a work force that is far too alert for its own good, but also managers with mineral deposits where their hearts used to be.

It is little wonder that the murder rate in the workplace has increased tenfold in the last decade, or that Scott Adams's "Dilbert" is one of the most popular comic strips of the 1990s, with its portrayals of innocent employees caught between dimwitted superiors and malicious human-resources managers.

It used to be, as the advertising-executive-turned-restaurateur Jerry Della Femina once put it, that "this big alcoholic fog rolled in all over New York City every day after lunch." In other words, the day was divided into two balanced parts. Bosses and workers were awake, efficient, businesslike and fully functioning before lunch. After lunch, they apologized for any fits (or sharp objects) that they might have thrown that morning. Whatever tensions built up were worked out (or off) by the end of the day, and nobody expected anybody to work into the night.

But now, under the influence of fizzy water, people remain alert, anxious and functional all day long. This has created a world of too much thinking, too many projects, too many expectations.

Prohibition lasted only 13 years, which means that the end of neo-Prohibition — the Age of Fizzy Water in American history — is just about due. Cultural historians note that Prohibition ended in 1933 because people became fed up with the rigidity of temperance advocates and couldn't remember what the initial fuss had been all about.

So now, one hopes, the end of the no-fun 90s is drawing near. Maybe by the time the year 2000 rolls around, some new Carrie Nation will have broken up any restaurants still serving fizzy water and taken an axe to whatever you call those newfangled office coolers that dispense brand-name designer water.

Dietary supplement's possible side effects concern scientists

By Marian Burros
N.Y. Times News Service

The fallout from the 1994 Dietary Supplement and Health Education Act continues. That law, passed despite objections from the Food and Drug Administration, gave dietary supplement manufacturers carte blanche to make claims that would once have brought the products under the agency's supervision — as drugs. Now, as long as the manufacturer adds a disclaimer that the products "have not been evaluated by the Food and Drug Administration," just about anything goes.

That is a major reason for the success of dietary supplements like chromium picolinate, melatonin and ephedra (sometimes known as Herbal Extacy or ma huang). When people die from using them, as in the case of ephedra, or manufacturers are fined by the Federal Trade Commission for making false advertising claims, as in the case of chromium picolinate, the discredited supplements fall to earth. But others are waiting to take their place.

The result is that many products that perform the same functions as drugs have metamorphosed into dietary supplements, with nothing to regulate their safety or efficacy. While some dietary supplements may be relatively harmless, large doses of DHEA can produce potentially dangerous side effects ...

And so DHEA, or dehydroepiandrosterone, has become the darling of the supplement industry, with its promise to slow aging, burn fat, build muscles, improve one's mood, stimulate the libido, strengthen the immune system and prevent heart disease, cancer, diabetes, Alzheimer's, Parkinson's and osteoporosis.

DHEA IS A HORMONE that occurs naturally in the body and is converted into small amounts of the hormones testosterone and estrogen. As people age, their DHEA levels decline. So, some scientists, retailers and manufacturers have reasoned, the loss of DHEA causes aging, sickness and eventually death. By increasing DHEA levels, this line of thinking goes, it may be possible to ward off aging and sickness.

The FDA banned over-the-counter sales of DHEA supplements in 1985, but now that DHEA is sold as a "dietary supplement" it does not need FDA approval. Any company that markets a dietary supplement, however, is supposed to be able to substantiate its claims for the product if the FDA asks for such substantiation.

The result is that many products that perform the same functions as drugs have metamorphosed into dietary supplements, with nothing to regulate their safety or efficacy. While some dietary supplements may be relatively harmless, large doses of DHEA can produce potentially dangerous side effects, including promotion of prostate cancer in men, and in women endometrial cancer as well as menstrual irregularities, hair growth on face and body and deepened voices.

Much of the hyperbole over DHEA — there are more than 100 DHEA sites on the Internet, most selling the hormone — is based on animal studies and a few short-term human studies. At least three monthly health letters have warned their readers to stay away from the supplement. The March 1997 issue of Nutrition Action, a publication of the Center for Science in the Public Interest, has a point-by-point rebuttal of the evidence for the claims.

For example, a World Wide Web site, Natureplus, which sells DHEA, reported that in a large study, women who had DHEA blood levels of "less than 10 percent of the normally expected amount for their age group all developed breast cancer and died of the disease."

Dennis Wang, who helped direct the study for the Imperial Cancer Research Fund in London, told Nutrition Action he was amazed at the statement. "I can't think of anything we did that would lead someone to that conclusion," the article quoted him as saying.

Amy's Health and Nutrition Store on the Internet maintains that "No matter what you eat, DHEA still provides benefits of weight loss."

"That's totally false," the researcher Arthur Schwartz told Nutrition Action. Schwartz, who is professor of microbiology at the Fels Research Institute of the Temple University Medical School in Philadelphia, is often cited by DHEA enthusiasts. "No human data exist whatsoever that show that DHEA can help a person lose weight," Schwartz added. "I wish they wouldn't use my name."

FOR ONE CONDITION, DHEA may provide some relief. According to Nutrition Action, DHEA could be useful in reducing the symptoms of lupus, an autoimmune disease, but final results of a study on that are not expected until later this year.

Even Natural Foods Merchandiser, a magazine of the natural-food industry, suggests a certain amount of caution about DHEA in its April 1997 issue. "Industry experts agree that separating fact from hype and educating consumers on the proper use of this powerful product are crucial for maintaining industry integrity," the magazine stated.

The magazine noted that it may not be a good idea for prostate or breast cancer patients to use DHEA, because it might "exacerbate the conditions." Interspersed among the magazine's articles are three advertisements — two of them full-page ads — for DHEA, repeating all of the unproven claims.

DEAR ABBY

Keeping ashes of loved ones in homes is not uncommon practice

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: When I recently asked to hear from people who kept the ashes of their loved ones, I had no inkling of the blizzard of letters that would hit my desk. It seems I was right when I said the practice was not all that unusual. Read on for a sample:

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband was a wonderful man. When he died, I was too old to drive to the cemetery, and I knew I couldn't care for his grave, so I had him cremated and kept the ashes. However, I do not keep them displayed. They are kept in my bedroom, and every time I dust, I tell him how much I miss him. I am alone now, but happy at 77 years old. — MARIA IN RENO, NEV.

DEAR ABBY: My mother died this past June. My father, brother and I had her cremated. Her ashes are in a nice wooden box with a gold plaque stating her date of birth, etc. My grandmother (Mom's mother) was upset because she wanted Mom to be buried in New Jersey with the family. My father suggested that my mother's ashes be buried with my grandmother when her time comes. She loved the idea. For now, though, Mom is on the mantel, and no, we don't think it's strange at all. — SUSAN IN PRINCE GEORGE, VA.

DEAR ABBY: My son died in 1993. He wanted to be cremated. I have his ashes in a nice urn in a private corner of my house. When the time comes, my husband will have this urn placed in my coffin with me. It will be done at the last closing, so the public will not see. — ASHES IN SOUTH CAROLINA

DEAR ABBY: I displayed the ashes of my late husband in a beautiful Chinese urn on the coffee table. Only a select few knew the contents of the urn, among them a man I had begun to seriously date. Rather than being bothered by it, he said he loved anyone who had loved me. And in keeping with that generosity of spirit, when he asked me to marry him, he toasted me by first clinking my wine glass, and then leaning forward to clink the urn. When it comes to love, I am twice blessed. — J.R. IN BEVERLY HILLS, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: I have had my lovely wife's ashes in my home for two years and 10 months. I'm proud to have them with me. I talk to her ashes and say good morning and good night to them each day. I also kiss her picture when I get up and when I go to bed. I see nothing wrong with this. I miss her so much, and sometimes this helps. We were married 47 years. Anyone who tells me to get rid of the ashes can take a hike! — ASHES IN BATH, PA.

DEAR ABBY: We are a military family and don't plan to stay in this area. Four months ago, our 2 1/2-year-old son died after a 19-month battle with kidney tumors. The idea of burying him and later leaving him here was unthinkable, so we chose to have him cremated. Because we wanted to make his urn personal, but didn't have much money, we used a bronze box urn and placed it inside a large Winnie-the-Pooh, Joshua's favorite cartoon character, that now sits on Joshua's bed.

Keeping our son's ashes in the house doesn't mean we can't love our other children (No. 2 is due in four months). Likewise, the widow probably still loves her late husband, but that doesn't mean she can't also love the man who wrote to you. He should respect the relationship she once had and not be so threatened. — ERIN IN TUSTIN, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: When my husband balks at doing his household chores, I threaten to put his ashes in an hourglass and keep him working for eternity. I might very well do it, too! —ELSE MILLER, WILMINGTON, DEL.

Low-cal, good taste come together

By Linda Anderson

Just when you think you've seen everything, something new comes along that catches your eye.

Anderson

I came across a line of frozen casseroles that my former neighbor had talked to me about before, but that I had never found myself. Barbara & Virginia's Country Kitchen cuisine is available is such flavors as chicken and dumplings, chicken spaghetti, broccoli with rice and cheese, and King Ranch chicken.

All of them come in single-serving sizes and all are surprising low in calories. None of the four had more than about 340 calories.

I bought one of each of the four above-listed flavors — they cost $2.19 each, which isn't bad — but the first one I tried was Chicken & Dumplings ("Boneless Cooked Chicken and Dumplings in a Perfectly Seasoned Sauce" it says on the box). Seemed like the perfect what-to-eat-when-all-you-want-to-do-is-veg-in-front-of-the-TV dinner.

Label advertising on the front of the box said that the Barbara & Virginia's line is "Convenience That Tastes Homemade."

On the back is a red rectangle that has a lot of teeny, tiny print in it that starts off: "Greetings from Barbara & Virginia!" The rest of the greeting goes like this: "Thank you for choosing our casseroles. They really are a convenience that tastes homemade! We first served our Chicken Spaghetti Casserole at a church social in 1984. Now wherever folks gather — at family reunions, meetings, birthdays or family meals — you'll find Barbara & Virginia's Country Kitchen casseroles being served. We take pride in how we make our casseroles. We use only the finest ingredients like choice meats, real vegetables and cheeses combined with wonderfully flavorful Southwestern spices to give our casseroles the zesty taste our customers love. We invite you to try all our home-style casseroles.

"We appreciate your business."

That's so you won't have to strain your eyes trying to read it — the type really is small.

Nutrition information shows that one 11-ounce chicken and dumplings casserole contains 280 calories with 90 of them from fat. That is within the American Heart Association's recommendation that no more than 30 percent of daily calories be from fat. That's not bad for chicken and dumplings.

The taste test proved to be very pleasant. I enjoyed every bite while I sat on the living room floor and watched an old musical on AMC.

I have to tell you, for that stage of vegging out, you really can't beat chicken and dumplings. Especially if you didn't have to actually cook it yourself.

I can't wait to try the other three. Maybe first I'll see what old movies are on the schedule...

over fish, cover and bake at 400 degrees for 30 minutes. Makes four servings.

COTTAGE DILL BREAD

5 cups white flour
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
2 teaspoons salt
2 packages yeast
3 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons butter
1/2 cup warm water
3 to 4 tablespoons chopped onion
2 cups cottage cheese
2 large eggs
3 tablespoons dill weed
1 egg, beaten
1 tablespoon milk
Kosher salt
Softened butter

Saute onions in butter and set aside. In food processor with plastic blade in place, add 4 cups flour, baking soda, salt, yeast and sugar; pulse 1 to 2 seconds. Add onions, cottage cheese, eggs, dill and warm water through feed tube with motor running. Run to form ball of dough. Add flour if necessary until dough is smooth and elastic. Knead dough 40 to 50 seconds.

Place dough in greased bowl. Cover and let rise in warm place for 1 hour or until doubled. Punch down, shape into 2 loaves. Place into greased loaf pans. Cover and let rise 45 minutes.

Brush with egg-milk mixture. Bake at 375 degrees for 30 to 35 minutes. Brush top with soft butter and coarse salt and let cool.

NUTTY BAKLAVA

1 (16 ounce) thawed phyllo pastry
1-1/4 cup melted butter
1-1/4 cup toasted coconut flakes
1/2 cup chopped and toasted macadamia nuts
1/2 cup chopped pecans
1/2 cup firmly packed brown sugar
1 teaspoon ground allspice
1 cup sugar
1/2 cup water
1/4 cup honey

Butter 13x9x2-inch baking pan. Cut phyllo in half crosswise, and cut each half to fit pan. Discard trimmings. Cover phyllo with slightly damp towel for 15 minutes. Layer 10 sheets of phyllo in pan, brushing each sheet with butter.

Combine coconut, macadamia nuts, pecans, brown sugar and allspice; stir well. Sprinkle one-third of the nut mixture over phyllo in pan. Top with 10 sheets of phyllo, brushing each with butter. Repeat procedure twice with remaining nut mixture, phyllo and butter, ending with phyllo. Cut into squares. Bake at 350 degrees (or 300 degrees in convection oven) for 45 minutes or until golden brown. Let cool completely.

Combine 1 cup sugar, water and honey in medium saucepan. Bring to boil; reduce heat and simmer 5 minutes. Remove from heat. Drizzle syrup over baklava. Cover and let stand at room temperature for 24 hours.

(From 8B)

1 tablespoon vegetable oil
2 medium green or red peppers, cut into strips (about 3 cups)
1 medium red onion, sliced (about 1/2 cup)
1 tablespoon chopped fresh cilantro
8 flour tortillas (6-inch)
1 cup shredded Cheddar cheese (4 ounces)

Place steak on rack in broiler pan. Broil 4 inches from heat to desired doneness (allow 15 minutes for medium), turning once and brushing often with 1/3 cup of the picante sauce.

In medium skillet over medium heat, heat oil. Add peppers and onions; cook until tender-crisp. Add remaining picante sauce and cilantro; heat through.

Warm tortillas according to package directions. Slice each steak into thin strips and place down center of each tortilla. Top with pepper mixture and cheese. Roll up. Serve with additional picante sauce. Makes 4 servings.

FOR GRILLED STEAK AND PEPPER FAJITAS: Grill steak on lightly oiled grill rack over medium-hot coals to desired doneness (allow 15 minutes for medium), turning once and brushing often with 1/3 cup picante sauce. Proceed as directed above.

CHICKEN TOMATILLO ENCHILADAS

Preparation time: 25 minutes
Cooking time: 40 minutes
8-ounce package cream cheese, softened
1-3/4 cups bottled picante sauce
2 cups chopped cooked chicken
2 cups shredded Monterey Jack cheese (8 ounces)
12 corn tortillas (6-inch)
1 cup tomato puree
2 tablespoons chopped fresh cilantro
1/8 tablespoon garlic powder or 1 clove garlic, minced
11-ounce can tomatillos, drained and chopped
Fresh cilantro, for garnish

Stir cream cheese until smooth. Stir in 3/4 cup of the picante sauce, the chicken and 1 cup of the Monterey Jack cheese.

Warm tortillas according to package directions. Spoon about 1/4 cup chicken mixture down center of each tortilla. Roll up and place seam side down in 3-quart shallow baking dish.

Mix remaining picante sauce, tomato puree, chopped cilantro, garlic powder and tomatillos. Pour over enchiladas. Cover and bake at 350 degrees for 35 minutes or until hot. Uncover. Top with remaining Monterey Jack cheese. Bake 5 minutes more or until cheese is melted. Garnish with cilantro. Makes 6 servings.

Worcestershire sauce. Return to heat. Bring to boil, stirring constantly. Boil and stir 1 minute. Stir in turkey and parsley. Heat through. Serve over Lacy Batty Cakes. Makes 6 servings.

LACY BATTY CAKES

3/4 cup white cornmeal
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup buttermilk
1 egg, slightly beaten
1/4 cup (1/2 stick) butter

Combine cornmeal, baking powder, baking soda and salt.

Combine buttermilk and egg. Stir in cornmeal mixture until cornmeal absorbs liquid.

Preheat griddle to 400 degrees. Lightly butter griddle. Use 1 tablespoon batter for each cake. Bake four at a time. Bake 2 to 3 minutes, until cakes begin to bubble and bottoms are golden. Turn and bake 2 to 3 minutes longer. Serve with Kentucky Derby Hash. Makes 24 cakes.

TEA: May Day is perfect time for a tea party

(From 8B)

powder
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
3/4 teaspoon salt
3/4 cup butter
1 cup buttermilk
1 cup chopped dates
1 teaspoon grated orange peel
1 tablespoon heavy cream
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon

Heat oven to 400 degrees.

Combine the flour, 1/3 cup of the sugar, the baking powder, baking soda and salt in a large bowl. Cut the butter into the flour mixture, using a pastry blender or two knives, until crumbly.

Stir in buttermilk, chopped dates and orange peel. Mix just until the dry ingredients are moistened. Gather the dough into a ball. On a lightly floured surface, knead lightly 12 times. Divide the dough in half and put each half into a 7-inch round.

In a small bowl, combine cream, cinnamon and remaining 2 tablespoons sugar; brush on dough. Cut each round into 8 wedges. Place the scones slightly apart on an ungreased baking sheet. Bake on upper rack of oven for 12 to 18 minutes, or until tops are golden brown. Makes 16 scones.

For a May Day Tea Party: Date Scones, which go well with a variety of teas. The scones are flavored with buttermilk, chopped dates and grated orange peel.

Celebrate May Day with a Tea Party

Associated Press

Observed on the first day of the month, May Day is celebrated by many cultures. It symbolizes the beginning of the spring planting season, renewal, fertility and life.

In Italy, young men serenade their sweethearts on May Day. In Switzerland and Germany, they plant a tree under a girl's window at night. And in the Balkans, they place a Maypole in their sweetheart's window. In the United States, many gather flowers for their handmade paper May baskets and attend May Day tea parties with friends.

If you're planning a May Day tea party, the following recipe for date scones goes with a variety of teas, including Earl Grey, Lapsang Suchong, Jasmine and Orange Pekoe.

Quick Mexican Skillet takes less than 30 minutes to prepare and cook. All you need is pasta, lean ground beef, canned chili beans, canned stewed tomatoes and some sour cream.

Still pressed for time? Chili Pasta Salad is ready to serve in less than 20 minutes. For this recipe, chili and pasta are served warm over shredded lettuce for an easy main dish meal.

QUICK MEXICAN SKILLET

Preparation time: 12 minutes
Cooking time: 13 minutes
8 ounces (4 cups) uncooked dried fusilli or spiral pasta
1 pound lean ground beef or Italian turkey sausage
16-ounce can chili beans
14-1/2-ounce can Mexican-style stewed tomatoes
3/4 cup sour cream (regular, light or no-fat)

Cook pasta according to package directions. Rinse with hot water; drain.

Meanwhile, in a 12-inch deep skillet, cook ground beef or sausage over medium heat, stirring occasionally, until no longer pink (10 to 12 minutes). Drain off fat. Add chili beans, tomatoes and pasta; continue cooking until heated through, 2 to 3 minutes. Stir in sour cream, continue cooking until heated through, about 1 minute. Makes 8 servings.

NOTE: If desired, sour cream can be used as a topping rather than being stirred into the chili.

CHILI PASTA SALAD

Preparation time: 15 minutes
Cooking time: 2 minutes
2 ounces (1/2 cup) uncooked medium dried pasta shells
15-ounce can vegetarian or turkey chili with beans
11-ounce can whole kernel corn with red and green peppers, drained
4 cups shredded romaine lettuce
1/4 cup shredded Cheddar cheese
1/4 cup sliced green onions
Sour cream
Corn chips

Cook pasta according to package directions; drain.

In same pan, combine pasta, chili and corn. Cook over medium heat until heated through, 2 to 3 minutes.

For each salad, place 1 cup lettuce on salad plate, top with 1 cup chili mixture, 1 tablespoon cheese and 1 tablespoon green onion. Top with sour cream and corn chips.

Makes 4 servings.

WHAT'S COOKING?

Childhood fascination becomes adult profession

By Linda Anderson
Staff Writer

James Price has always been fascinated by culinary expertise. "I've always liked to cook," he said. "My mom used to cook all the time, and when I was a kid, she used to let me play in the pots and pans."

That fascination with cooking as a child led him into the profession as an adult, and now he is chef with Main Events and Catering in Midland. Price and the company will participate in this year's Celebration of the Arts Culinary Arts event, planned for 6:30 p.m. May 16 at Midland Center.

Although Price said he really has no specialities as such — "We basically do the whole spectrum," he said — Main Event's Sonny Buck said, "His specialty probably is pastries and cakes. If I give him a recipe or he finds a recipe, he can do it. He was pastry chef for Ranchland (Hills Country Club)."

AND IN FACT, Price himself credits Ranchland's Executive Chef Ernest Brown with teaching him a lot of what he knows about cooking. "For 10 years I was out there," he said. "That's basically where I got most of my training. ... He (Brown) pretty much taught me everything."

"I taught him the rest!" Buck laughed.

When Price was a child, his father was in the U.S. Army, so the family traveled to a lot of different places and learned about a lot of different cultures.

When his father retired from the military, the family settled in Louisiana, where Price learned a lot about Cajun cooking. In Louisiana, he laughed, "you had to learn how to cook Cajun food! That's where you can get everything fresh."

Cajun food is one of Price's favorites, and is one of the things he likes to cook when he is at home. "I like to cook the basic stuff" at home, he said, which includes (besides Cajun), "barbecue, chicken and rice and mushroom casserole, lasagna. But every now and then I like to cook a lobster or roast pork" or something else a little on the fancy side.

At the last two Culinary Arts events, Price prepared baklava (a sweet dessert with pecans and macadamia nuts in phyllo dough) one year and Shrimp Croustade (a kind of shrimp mousse in a bread crust) the next.

Although he wasn't yet sure what he would be prepare for this year's event, Price provided recipes for these favorites:

CAJUN BAKED FISH

4 fillets (6 ounces each) cod or any other white fish
1/4 cup butter
1 clove garlic, chopped
1/2 cup onion, chopped
3/4 cup fresh mushrooms
2 tablespoons flour
1 medium can green beans
1 can (20 ounces) tomato
1/4 teaspoon thyme
1 bay leaf
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
2 tablespoons vinegar
1/4 teaspoon Tabasco sauce

In skillet, fry onions, garlic and mushrooms in butter over low heat for 5 minutes. Add flour; stir until blended. Add last six ingredients and bring just to boil. Add beans and heat through.

Place fish in baking dish. Pour mixture

AHS earns top seed

ABILENE — In the battle for the top seed from District 4-5A, the Abilene High baseball team had the last laugh over its crosstown rival.

After losing two district games to Abilene Cooper earlier in the season, the Eagles defeated Cooper, 4-1, in a one-game playoff Tuesday afternoon. The win earns Abilene High (22-4) a first-round bye.

Cooper (22-7) scored the game's first run in the top of the third inning, but Abilene High responded with two runs apiece in the third and fourth. AHS left-hander Josh Duwe gave up six hits in throwing a complete game. Abilene High managed 10 hits off Cooper ace Kevin DePauw.

Both teams finished the season 10-2 in district.

Nolan Ryan statue

ARLINGTON — A life-size bronze statue of all-time strikeout king Nolan Ryan is destined for the ballpark where he didn't have a chance to play.

The Texas Rangers will unveil Ryan's statue before Friday's Boston Red Sox-Texas game at the Ballpark in Arlington. It will stand in the middle of Vandergriff Plaza behind center field.

Ryan's number 34 was retired last September. He pitched for Texas from 1989 to 1993. The $195 million Ballpark opened in spring 1994.

The statue was sculpted by Toby Mendez of Washington County, Md.

The unveiling will coincide with Arlington Appreciation Night. That event also took place on May 1, 1991, when Ryan pitched his seventh and final no-hitter.

Met player's lung

NEW YORK — New York Mets pitcher Jason Isringhausen underwent additional medical tests Tuesday after chest X-rays found something unusual on his lung.

Head trainer Fred Hina said before Tuesday night's game in Cincinnati that the team doesn't know what is wrong with Isringhausen, who complained of flu-like symptoms in Florida ove. the weekend. He was flown to New York for further tests under t e direction of team internist Dr. John Olichney.

"He's being examined for an irregularity found on a chest X-ray that was taken as part of a diagnostic workup for flu-like symptoms while he was in Florida," Hina said. "He's undergoing a battery of tests to determine what that irregularity is.

"At this point, we don't have any definitive information on that. And until we do, it would be unfair for anyone to speculate as to what's going on."

The 24-year-old right-hander began feeling chest pain last weekend in Florida, where he was rehabilitating a broken right wrist. After experiencing nausea and breathing difficulty, the pitcher went to an emergency room Saturday night.

He returned to New York on Sunday for further examination.

Primeaux ignites Lady Rebs' win

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

EL PASO — For the first eight batters here Tuesday in this Class 5A state quarterfinal softball matchup against previously undefeated El Paso Hanks pitcher Monica Almanza, Midland Lee couldn't find a hole in the wind. Then Michelle Primeaux switched sides of the plate.

Primeaux, trying to lay down a two-out slap-hit from the left side, switched to the right side after two strikes and laced an ignition-starting triple down the left field line. She gave the Lady Rebels a 1-0 lead when she scored on a two-out single by Adrian Nobles.

It turned out that was all Lee needed to win the game, but the Lady Rebels came up with two insurance runs in the fifth for a 3-0 victory. They advanced to the region semifinals, where they will face L.D. Bell, a 6-5 winner Tuesday over Richland, probably Friday in Abilene.

Lee pitcher Chrystal Smith needed only one run, hurling a brillant two-hitter and allowed only one runner as far as third base.

Hanks' Almanza was untouchable for 2 2/3 innings, striking out the first six Lady Rebels she faced. That brought about the ire of Lee coach Perry Young.

"Almanza is a great pitcher, but we weren't competing at the plate," Young said. "She isn't the type of pitcher who should be striking out six Lady Rebels in a row. That had to change."

Primeaux got the message even though she was through a couple of scary strikes before turning to the right side and delivering what was considered the key hit of the game.

"I admit I was scared up there," Primeaux said. "It was a close game and I knew I had to get on base somehow. I didn't want Coach (Young) getting in my face after all those other strikeouts.

"I never thought about hitting a triple. I just wanted on base. I was halfway to second base when I saw Coach (Young) waving to go to third. I thought he had to be kidding.

"I got to third, looked up and saw Adrian at the plate.

There's a little smoke coming from Christensen Stadium these days. No, it's not the press box that's burning or the outfield grass. It is instead the Midland Angels that are hot with their fifth win in a row.

The Angels held off the Wichita Wranglers Tuesday with a 5-3 victory thanks to a strong pitching performance by right-handed starter Rob Bonanno and some clutch hitting late in the game. That hitting has become rather contagious for the Angels, whose lumber has been scorching lately.

Clutch hitting was in order in the seventh inning for the Halos. After taking a 3-0 lead, the Wranglers tried to rally in the top of the seventh with two runs off a Steve Sisco double to right field. Wichita had a chance to tie it later in the inning but Matt Smith flied to Angels' right fielder Jason Herrick, who then made a spectacular bullet throw to nail Sisco at the plate and help get the Angels out of the inning.

That's when Midland went to work as Herrick came right back to lead off the Angels' half of the inning with a double to left field. Herrick later scored on a Keith Luuloa double. Tim Harkrider, who reached on with a single, later scored an insurance run when Wrangler's reliever Steve Prihoda threw a wild pitch.

"It was good to come back like that," said Angels Manager Mitch Seoane. "They had the momentum there with those two runs and I was happy to see our team respond and take that momentum back. It's always nice to see when the other team scores that you can come back and score."

This win just continues to add confidence for the Angels, who improve to 13-12 on the year and have won seven out of the last nine ball games.

"We've been able to get some clutch hitting when we needed it and some decent pitching when we had to," Seoane said.

Bonanno got the Angels going in the right direction by retiring the first eight batters he faced. Bonanno went a little more than six innings and had four strikeouts to improve to 2-1 on the year.

"He pitched a six-and-a-third and I think he got a little tired. He hasn't really been stretched out a whole lot," Seoane said about Bonanno. "He got tired in that one inning but he threw a lot of strikes and made those guys swing the bats, and didn't walk anybody."

The Angels' offense continued to put up numbers that any starting pitcher would be glad to see. First baseman Danny Buxbaum continued on his roll, going 2-for-3, including a towering home run over dead-center field in the fourth inning. Aaron Guiel also added a solo blast in the sixth inning. Tim Harkrider, who's been rather quiet lately, went 2-for-3 Tuesday night. And Keith Luuloa has also started to sparkle, going 2-for-3 with a triple, a double and two RBIs.

"I finally got of a slump that I've been in," Luuloa said. "I got a couple of base hits and a couple of RBIs, so I guess it was a good night."

Luuloa is one of those players who is in a groove at this point of the season and is hoping it continues for a while.

"We're on a hot streak right now and I think it's just a matter of keeping everything together," Luuloa said.

Mike Bovee is expected to start tonight in the second game of the five-game home series against the Wranglers. Bovee comes in from the bullpen at the

Goodwyn showed character during career as Chaparral

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

Adversity is something that everyone faces. Those, who work hardest to make the best of a bad situation, are usually rewarded.

Midland College basketball player Ceedric Goodwyn is one of those.

The sophomore recently signed a letter-of-intent to continue his basketball career at Colorado State University, but he leaves Midland College with much more than that.

"Coming out of high school, you change as a person," Goodwyn said. "I went through adversity, and I had to grow a lot."

Goodwyn's arrival in 1995 on the MC campus came with great expectations.

Fifteen games into that season, things looked good for Goodwyn and the Chaps. Midland College had a 12-5 record going into its first WJCAC game in Roswell, N.M. versus New Mexico Military Institute. Goodwyn had scored in double figures 13 times and was averaging 16.1 points and 61 percent shooting from the field.

Goodwyn was an all-state talent as a senior at Lubbock Coronado. He was the low-post gem, expected complement a trio of guards which ranked as a high as any in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference and maybe in the country.

Against NMMI, Goodwyn went down the court for an offensive possession. He was making cut to get open. It was the wrong cut. His knee cap came out of socket, and his first WJCAC game became his last as a freshman. He missed the rest of the sea-

Magic staves off elimination

ORLANDO, Fla. — Just when it looked like the Orlando Magic were going to be blown out in a third straight game and swept out of the playoffs for a fourth straight year, Penny Hardaway imposed his will.

Rockets sweep/4C

Hardaway scored a career postseason-high 42 points and Orlando rallied from a 20-point first half deficit for an 88-75 victory over the Miami Heat on Tuesday night to cut the Magic's deficit to 2-1 in the best-of-5 series.

"I knew I had to take responsibility for this team. I knew I had to score for us to win," said Hardaway, who was 16-for-30 from the field and grabbed eight rebounds in 47 minutes.

"The more shots I hit, the more confidence I had, and that got us back into the game."

Darrell Armstrong, Orlando's No. 3 point guard, was an unlikely catalyst for the comeback and had a career-high 21

Oilers send Stars home with victory in overtime

By Denne H. Freeman

DALLAS — Edmonton's Todd Marchant scored the game-winning goal. Goalie Curtis Joseph played just as big a part in the victory.

Marchant beat Dallas defenseman Grant Ledyard on a breakaway and snapped one past Andy Moog with 7:34 left in overtime Tuesday night to give the Oilers a 4-3 victory over the Stars in Game 7 of the Western Conference quarterfinals.

The Oilers will play Western top seed Colorado in the second round.

Joseph made several big saves to keep the Oilers in the game. Then Marchant struck as the teams played 4-on-4. Ledyard slipped as he tried to stop Marchant, who beat Moog to his stick side.

"Todd Marchant caught the defense flatfooted," Oilers coach Ron Low said. "It was an unbelievable goal."

But Low knows without Joseph's stops, there would have been no overtime.

"This was incredible goaltending," Low said. "We said before the series we had to have great goaltending and we got it. That's why we pay him $3 million."

Marchant said he had to move quickly.

"I saw Ledyard fall out of the corner of my eye," he said. "If he hadn't fallen, he might have been able to get a stick on me but he fell and you have to be able to take advantage of that."

Joseph made a great stop in the third period on Mike Modano to help send the game into overtime. Modano, who had two game-winning goals in the playoffs, batted down the puck and had a clear breakaway to the net only to be met by Joseph, who knocked the

LUBBOCK — The Andrews softball team defeated Snyder 10-2 Tuesday in Region I-4A quarterfinal action of the UIL softball playoffs played at the Berl Huffman Complex.

Andrews, 18-4 for the season, made their playoff debut a successful one, riding the arm of Jackie Ortega (14-4). The Andrews senior threw a three-hitter to carry the Mustangs to the regional semifinals.

At the plate, Andrews attacked Snyder for 13 hits, including four doubles. Ali Bane had two two-baggers while Ortega and Holly Fields added one each. It was the second-straight year that Andrews, the co-District 4-4A champs, defeated Snyder in the regional quarterfinals. Andrews will play Graham, who defeated Arlington Heights, 8-2. Graham is 23-5 overall.

Abilene romps over Eastwood

Abilene High had two big innings Tuesday afternoon to advance to the Region I-5A semfinals with a 10-0 win over El Paso Eastwood at the Bill Williams Complex. The Lady Eagles (26-3) will join District 4-5A rival Midland Lee in the semis.

Kelly Armbruster pitched a one-hitter for Abilene High, striking out 12 and walking none in six innings. The Eagles scored three runs in the third and seven in the sixth to invoke the 10-run rule. Brandy Rice, Caroline Morton and Laura Martinez each drove in two runs in the sixth for the Eagles.

Two Midlanders picked for U-16

A pair of players from Midland have been selected for the Under-16 State Olympic Development Soccer team. Daniel George and Stephen Sanders have both been picked for the team, marking the second straight year Sanders was selected.

George and Sanders, who play for the Black Magic Soccer Club and are freshmen at Midland Lee, will continue in ODP competition by attending a sub-regional camp in Houston in June. Selected players from this group will attend the Region III camp at the University of Alabama in July.

The program identifies and develops outstanding soccer players in Texas for state select teams and advancement to the Regional Olympic Development Program and the Olympic and national teams.

Greenwood routs Sonora

GREENWOOD — The Greenwood High baseball team used a productive hitting attack to defeat Sonora 7-2 Tuesday in a District 4-3A game. Monty McGee and Jason Brooks each drove in two runs for Greenwood while Andrew Wootan tripled.

Frankie Keller was the winning pitcher for the Rangers, throwing a complete game while striking out 10.

Greenwood, now 8-16 overall and 2-5 in district, hosts Big Lake Friday at 5 p.m.

Sabres oust Senators in double OT

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Derek Plante scored 5:24 into overtime to lift the Buffalo Sabres to a 3-2 victory over the Ottawa Senators on Tuesday night in Game 7 of the Eastern Conference playoffs.

Plante, who was also credited with the tying goal, won the game on a hard slap shot from the right faceoff circle. The drive bounced off Ottawa goalie Ron Tugnutt's glove and trickled into the net.

After the puck went in, Tugnutt stayed flat on his back on the ice, his hands over his face.

It was the first time in four chances the Sabres had won a Game 7 in franchise history.

The Sabres, who won their first playoff series since 1993, will play the Philadelphia Flyers in the second round. Philadelphia beat Buffalo in five games in 1995.

The New York Rangers will play New Jersey in the other Eastern semifinal.

Donald Audette also scored for Buffalo, which was without injured goalie Dominik Hasek. Hasek, considered a favorite to win the MVP and Vezina trophies, has not played since he sustained a knee injury in Game 3. Backup Steve Shields, who shutout the Senators on Sunday to force the deciding game, made 25 saves for his first home win. He was 0-5-1 at Marine Midland Arena coming into the game.

Wade Redden and Shawn McEachern scored for the Senators, who were making their first playoff appearance since entering the league in 1992-93.

Both goalies made mistakes in the first 6 1/2 minutes of the third period to keep the game tied, 2-2, before Plante put the game away off an Ottawa turnover.

Redden gave the Senators a 2-1 lead 45 seconds into the third when he sent a soft wrist shot toward the Buffalo net that fooled Shields, who waved at the puck as it went over his glove.

Plante tied the score on an odd play at 6:29. He appeared to lose a faceoff when Alexei Yashin pulled the puck toward the Ottawa goal, but it sailed over Tugnutt's glove and floated into the net.

Coming into the game, the team that scored first wound up winning, before Plante changed everything.

McEachern gave Ottawa a 1-0 lead midway through the opening period on the power play, but the Senators could not sustain their suffocating neutral-zone trap the final two periods.

McEachern scored when he sent a cross-ice pass to Steve Duchesne near the blue line. Duchesne put a hard shot on Shields, and McEachern poked the puck from under the sprawled goaltender and into the net.

McEachern's goal quieted a Sabres' crowd that was booing its team for much of the first 20 minutes.

Buffalo was 1-for-25 on the power play in the series before Audette tied the game 1-1 when he scored with 3:57 left in the second period, giving the Sabres temporary momentum.

Buffalo had been outshot 17-9 and was severely outplayed before Audette scored his second of the series.

The Sabres had just two shots on Tugnutt in the opening period — an all-time team low for the playoffs — and spent most of the first 36 minutes in their own end.

"I still say we had a talented team and had the chance to win it all," Goodwyn said. "It was bad luck and a part of life."

In retrospect, the unfortunate circumstances made him a better player and person.

One season later, Goodwyn, a 6-foot-7-inch forward, leaves Midland College as one of the top big men to ever come through the Chaparral program.

"Ceedric had the talent (when he arrived at Midland College), we didn't know of his substance," MC basketball coach Pat Rafferty said. "His injury and work to recover and his growth as a man were the character substance. The knee taught him an appreciation for the game. It caused him to grow up."

Goodwyn's life became improving himself, and in a way, proving himself. He focused days, weeks and months in order to get his knee back in shape — basketball shape.

"If a regular guy has a knee injury, that is traumatic," Rafferty said. "When it is a major college athlete, people can't imagine."

People didn't have to imagine the results. Goodwyn returned for the 1996-97 season up to a solid 235 pounds, an increase from his freshman weight of 195. He averaged 18.6 points and six rebounds a game. His all-region and all-conference honors from a 15-14 team were indicative of how good he was this past season.

"I felt I owed people something," Goodwyn said.

Goodwyn's success also may have put to rest any question that he couldn't play in pain. He led the team in scoring in nine of the team's 12 WJCAC games and scored 20-plus points in the Chaps' final five games. That came when everyone knew who was getting the ball and when the knee could have been doing better.

"Last year, people were critical of him, saying he didn't play hurt and through an injury," Rafferty said. "They were saying he wasn't tough enough. Before the last game at OC (Odessa College), he had swelling in his knee, and after the OC game, there was more swelling. We sat him out that Tuesday and Wednesday and had 90 ccs. (cubic centimeters) of fluid drained out of knee. Then, he gets 28 against SPC."

Goodwyn will graduate from Midland College this spring. Rafferty expects that the bond between he and his pupil will not die with his move to Fort Collins, Colo. They relationship has been a good one. Jokingly, teammates call Goodwyn, "Rafferty's Boy." For obvious reasons, the coach could live with that.

"You go through experiences, and it helps build relationships," Rafferty said. "I will miss him as a player and from a personal standpoint. He is like (Former MC standouts) D'Juan (Baker), Kevin (Rice) and Milton (Palacio). It doesn't mean the relationship is over. It just takes on a different meaning."

Goodwyn was contacted about his services by over 20 schools, including Kentucky, UCLA and Indiana. However, he decided to join Palacio when he signed with the Western Athletic Conference school. That decision didn't involve a big press conference or any hoop-la. The admittedly shy Goodwyn said he just didn't want people making a big fuss about things. He just wanted to do things his way.

After all he has been through, that is the least anyone could do for him.

Chang falls at AT&T tourney

DULUTH, Ga. (AP) — Top-seeded and defending champion Michael Chang fell victim to the slashing lefty style of Brazilian Fernando Meligeni in the first round of the $328,000 AT&T Challenge Tuesday night.

The crowd-pleasing Meligeni, retrieving like mad and nailing big forehand winners, upended Chang in a two hour thriller, 2-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Fourth-seeded Andre Agassi posted a quick 6-3, 6-2 victory over Jamie Oncins, also of Brazil.

In an afternoon upset, qualifier Steve Campbell ousted fourth-seeded Jim Courier 2-6, 6-4, 6-3.

Chang, winner on clay last week in Orlando, Fla., and ranked second in the world, played adequately but was unable to make a lasting impact on Meligeni.

point-blank shot away.

"We have a great young team," Joseph said. "They had the experience but we had speed and youth on our side."

Dallas coach Ken Hitchcock bemoaned the Stars' lost chances particularly in the overtime when they outshot the Oilers 12-to-4.

"Then won because they had a great goaltender like Joseph who kept it together," Hitchcock said. "Our inability to finish came back to haunt us. His timely and key saves were the difference in the series."

Modano said "It's tough to swallow. It's devastating. In the playoffs everything is magnified. I had some chances and couldn't take advantage."

Dallas entered the game as the second seed while the Oilers were the seventh seed.

Andrei Kovalenko's goal on a 2-on-1 with 19.8 seconds left in the second tied the game 3-3 for the Oilers.

Both Dallas and Edmonton scored power-play goals to start the second period. Boris Mironov's 40-foot slap shot gave the Oilers a 2-1 edge but Pat Verbeek tied it with a tip-in off Sergie Zubov's shot. It was the first power-play goal for the Stars in 21 attempts on home ice, and just the third goal with a man advantage in 39 chances in the series.

Bob Bassen scored on a wrist shot at 13:27 of the third to give the Stars a 3-2 lead.

The Stars and Oilers each connected on their first shots of the game.

Benoit Hogue ended Joseph's Reunion Arena shutout streak just 1:38 in by scoring off a pass by Joe Nieuwendyk. Joseph had blanked Dallas 4-0 in Game 2 and 1-0 in double overtime in game 5.

The Oilers responded just seven seconds later as Rem Murray followed a rebound shot off the post by Joe Hulbig to tie the game.

I knew I was about to score. She's the one you want up there in that situation."

Nobles said, "I knew I had to hit the ball. I was out on strikes the first time and there were two outs. You don't want to leave a runner stranded at third."

Young added, "Primeaux's triple eased the pressure on us and put the pressure on their pitcher. (Almanza) couldn't throw that rise ball with a runner on third for fear she would throw a wild pitch and let the runner score. Adrian then got the hit.

"We got a couple of runs we didn't deserve in the fifth. We made some base running errors, and we will have to deal with that."

In that fifth, Smith led off with a double and Jessica Welborn came in as a courtesy runner. Gracie Villa was safe on an error as Welborn moved to third. Welborn was then caught off third base, but Almanza threw the ball away and Welborn scored, while courtesy runner Yvette Bass, running for Villa, moved to third. Primeaux then slapped a grounder to score Bass.

But all the errors were on the Hanks side, and with Smith cranking out zeroes, it didn't take too many mistakes to chalk up a loss.

Smith only allowed a two-out single to Lori Pollard in the second and a leadoff single to Sonia Contreras in the fourth. Contreras got to third, but Smith KOed Dani Martinez on strikes to end the brief threat.

"When the other pitcher is throwing a good game, it makes me want to go out there and try to do even better," Smith said. "When you get to this level, you expect a close game. There aren't going to be any 10-run rule games from here on out. I go into each game expecting it to be close."

The games are getting tighter, but the Lady Rebels are still playing.

Harrick visits Rhode Island

SOUTH KINGSTOWN, R.I. (AP) — Former UCLA basketball coach Jim Harrick, fired just a year after the Bruins won the national championship, visited the Rhode Island campus Tuesday and appeared ready to become the next Rams coach.

Harrick met with Rhode Island president Robert Carothers, athletic director Ron Petro, and Rhode Island team members and boosters. He also met Gov. Lincoln Almond — a Rhode Island alumnus — at the Statehouse, and dined at one of Providence's best Italian restaurants.

Harrick seemed impressed. He said southern Rhode Island "is a great area to live," the talent returning from last year's NCAA tournament team is "above average" and the Atlantic 10 is a "great conference."

A decision on whether Harrick would be offered the job could come Wednesday, said Petro, who appeared to already have decided on Harrick.

"The overall package that he brings to the University of Rhode Island — being a national champion — is outstanding," Petro said.

Rockets polish off T-wolves

By Ron Lesko
AP Sports Writer

MINNEAPOLIS — The Houston Rockets swept Minnesota out of its first playoff appearance in franchise history, but the young Timberwolves didn't go down without showing plenty of promise Tuesday night.

Rookie Matt Maloney hit six 3-pointers and scored a career-high 26 points to lead a superb long-range shooting display that gave the Rockets a 125-120 victory and a sweep of the best-of-5 series.

Houston shot 15-for-28 from 3-point range, and it needed all of them against a young Minnesota team energized by the first home playoff game in the franchise's eight-year history.

Maloney was 9-for-11 from the field, including 6-for-8 from 3-point range, Charles Barkley scored 20 and Hakeem Olajuwon had 19 points and 11 rebounds to help Houston into the second round, where it will face either Seattle or Phoenix.

Tom Gugliotta led the Wolves with 27 points and 10 rebounds, while Dean Garrett added 26 points and 15 rebounds.

All 10 starters scored in double figures. Although Minnesota outrebounded the Rockets for the first time in the series (41-33), the Rockets shot 60 percent for the sweep.

With the sellout Target Center crowd of 19,006 waving white "Howl Towels" handed out especially for the historic game, the Wolves were unfazed by Houston's first 13 3-pointers and led 98-96 with 10:11 remaining on a basket by Gugliotta.

Mario Elie hit the Rockets' 14th long-range shot for a 100-98 lead, but Kevin Garnett followed with a basket to tie it. That's when Eddie Johnson hit Houston's final 3-pointer to start a 9-0 run that included consecutive baskets by Olajuwon for a 109-100 lead with six minutes left.

Minnesota closed to 119-116 on a 3-pointer by James Robinson with 1:13 left, but Charles Barkley answered with a 15-foot fadeaway jumper to make it 121-116 with 53 seconds remaining.

MAGIC: Miami Heat can't sweep Orlando

points with eight assists and four steals.

The injury-riddled Magic played without forward Horace Grant and lost center Rony Seikaly to a foot sprain in the second quarter. Dennis Scott, a starter during the regular season, played only nine minutes because of sore knees.

Miami, which won Game 1 by 35 and Game 2 by 17, led 35-15 before stumbling. The Heat finished with 20 turnovers after having only 21 combined in the first two games.

"The playoffs will humble you," Miami coach Pat Riley said. "If you are really not focusing on staying in the game, and you're thinking that it's over, a team will come back and get you. We'll just have to come back more disciplined."

The Magic finally shook the stigma of never having won a game after losing the opener of a series. Game 4 is Thursday night with Orlando needing a victory to send the series back to Miami for a decisive fifth game on Sunday.

"I think it's a series again. I think the pressure's back on them, the way we played tonight," Hardaway said. "He definitely gives us a lot of confidence to come into Game 4 and try to win that one."

The winner of the series will face New York in the Eastern Conference semifinals. The Heat denied they were looking ahead to the Knicks after getting off to the fast start.

"We didn't look past them. We came out with the intention to blow them out like we did the previous two games," Alonzo Mourning said. "No team is perfect. But I'm not worried. We know what it's going to take to win the next game and we are going to do it."

Injuries benefitted Lakers

By Jon Wilner
N.Y. Times News Service

PORTLAND, Ore. — At the time, the February knee injuries that sidelined Robert Horry for 21 games and Shaquille O'Neal for 31 appeared devastating to the Los Angeles Lakers' NBA-title aspirations. But after two convincing first-round victories over Portland, the injuries now seem the best thing that could have happened.

"We would have liked to have had Shaq and Robert the whole time. I'm sure we would have won the division going away," coach Del Harris said.

"But looking back, we played 15 road games (in that span) and won nine of them. I think winning nine of 15 on the road helped our overall team spirit. Now we have the closest team spirit of any team I've been associated with. The injury process helped with that."

The hyperextended knee gave O'Neal two months to rest his weary legs; now he's fresher than at any time in his postseason career. It also allowed him to improve his free-throw shooting, thanks to Magic Johnson's tutelage. In the seven games since his return, O'Neal is shooting 63 percent from the line — a significant improvement from his pre-injury days (46.6 percent).

O'Neal's absence jump-started Elden Campbell's season, as well. The quiet power forward averaged 12.2 points prior to Shaq's injury, 19.2 during O'Neal's absence and 21.4 since the return. Now the Lakers have the league's most formidable frontcourt duo.

Pistons take 2-1 lead over Hawks

By Harry Atkins
AP Sports Writer

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Lindsey Hunter scored 26 points and again kept Mookie Blaylock out of the flow as the Detroit Pistons defeated the Atlanta Hawks 99-91 Tuesday night to take a 2-1 lead in their best-of-5 series.

Game 4 in the series will be played Friday night at The Palace. The fifth game, if needed, would be Sunday at Atlanta.

This game came down to Atlanta's towering frontcourt against Detroit's perimeter shooting. And while the Hawks had a 41-21 edge in rebounding, the Pistons shot 53 percent from the field and 8-of-14 from 3-point range. Atlanta, by comparison, was 5-for-23 on 3-pointers.

Grant Hill scored 24 for Detroit with eight assists and four rebounds. Hunter shot 11-of-17, including 4-for-5 on 3-pointers, Terry Mills had 17 points and Otis Thorpe 16.

Dikembe Mutombo had 15 points and a playoff career-high 21 boards, Christian Laettner scored 25 points and Steve Smith 21 for the Hawks.

Blaylock, who averaged 17.4 points during the regular season, finished with 16 points, but nine came in the fourth quarter when the Hawks were trying to play catchup.

The Pistons, aided by 10 Atlanta turnovers and the hot hand of Hunter, led 56-40 at halftime. But the Hawks, behind 10 points from Laettner, closed to 72-66 by the end of the third quarter.

Blaylock's four-point play — a 3-pointer and a free-throw — closed the gap to 76-75 with 8:25 left in the fourth quarter.

But Hunter and Mills each hit 3-pointers and Thorpe had a three-point play to give Detroit an 85-79 edge with 5:51 remaining. Hunter's layup off a steal put the Pistons up 89-79 with 4:16 left, and that was all the breathing room Detroit would need.

Atlanta, getting six points from Laettner, opened the third with a 10-1 burst. Detroit rebuild a 68-55 lead after a technical foul on Hawks coach Lenny Wilkens midway through the period. But Laettner had a basket and Mutombo hit two hooks as the Hawks made it a six-point game.

Thorpe had six points in a 10-2 run that gave Detroit a 34-25 lead early in the second quarter. But two skyhooks by Mutombo and a layup by Alan Henderson enabled the Hawks to close to 34-31.

Then Hunter caught fire, scoring 11 points — including three 3-pointers — as the Pistons closed the first half with a 20-9 run.

Wall comes up from AAA, pitches Astros past Rockies

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Donne Wall, who hardly impressed anyone in his first major league start of the season, pitched well enough to win in the Astros' 3-1 victory over Colorado on Tuesday.

"He's not going to win any Cy Young Awards or be anybody's No. 1 starter," Houston manager Larry Dierker said. "But he doesn't make a lot of mistakes, and if you play good defense behind him, he'll give you seven innings and give you a chance to win."

Wall, called up from Triple-A New Orleans last week, combined with Russ Springer, Tom Martin and John Hudek to limit the Rockies to seven hits, one more than their season-low.

Sean Berry and Jeff Bagwell homered for the Astros, who ended a three-game losing streak.

"Donne is a good pitcher," Berry said. "He doesn't overpower anybody, and if he gets the ball up he gets hurt, but he's got good control, and when he keeps the ball down, he's effective. He did a great job against one of the better offenses in baseball."

Wall (1-0) was sailing along with a 2-1 lead in the seventh, when he had to leave the game because of groin tightness after allowing five hits and striking out four. John Hudek pitched the ninth for his fourth save.

"It was tight, so we didn't want to risk getting hurt worse," Wall said.

The Astros' Donne Wall got his first start Tuesday since returning from Triple-A New Orleans and picked up a 3-1 victory over Colorado.

"I know what I can do and I want to be a part of this team. The guys really played great defense behind me and came up with the clutch hits. This was a team effort. Hopefully, there'll be more to come."

Roger Bailey (3-1) went seven innings, gave up five hits, walked one and hit three batters to take his first loss of the year.

"Their pitcher is similar to ours," Rockies manager Don Baylor said. "They're not overpowering, but they have good control with good breaking balls. Their guy had our hitters out on their front foot a lot. You have to give credit to him. He pitched a good game."

Andres Galarraga doubled to the left-field corner to lead off the second inning against Wall. He went to third on Dante Bichette's single to right and scored when Vinny Castilla bounced into a double play.

■ NL Roundup

Cubs 14, Expos 8

CHICAGO — Rookie Brooks Kieschnick, devastated when he was cut in March, drove in six runs with two homers and a single as the Chicago Cubs survived five Montreal homers.

Steve Trachsel (1-3) got his first victory despite allowing seven runs in five innings, including two homers by Henry Rodriguez and one each by Darrin Fletcher and Mike Lansing. Shane Andrews also homered for the Expos, who have a three-game losing streak.

Cardinals 9, Giants 7

ST. LOUIS — Ron Gant hit a three-run homer in the bottom of the ninth inning off Giants closer Rod Beck and the St. Louis Cardinals overcame a six-run deficit to beat San Francisco.

Beck (0-1) had been 11-for-11 on save chances and was trying to match Lee Smith's major league record for saves in April. But Dmitri Young led off the ninth with an infield hit and Delino DeShields singled him to second.

Dodgers 6, Braves 2

ATLANTA — Greg Gagne homered and singled twice as the Los Angeles Dodgers slowed down the Atlanta Braves.

Atlanta, which set an NL record for April victories on Monday by winning its 18th game, had a chance to establish a major league mark for wins in the first month of the season.

Marlins 2, Padres 1

MIAMI — Bobby Bonilla hit a two-out, two-run triple in the eighth inning as the Florida Marlins sent San Diego to its seventh consecutive loss.

Edgar Renteria began the rally with a two-out walk against Doug Bochtler. Trevor Hoffman (0-2) relieved and walked Gary Sheffield.

Mets 3, Reds 1

CINCINNATI — Mark Clark pitched seven shutout innings and John Olerud hit a pair of RBI singles as the New York Mets beat the slumping Cincinnati Reds for their first three-game winning streak of the season.

Phillies 8, Pirates 2

PHILADELPHIA — Mike Lieberthal hit a three-run homer and Calvin Maduro pitched seven effective innings as the Philadelphia Phillies beat Pittsburgh.

Belle's sac fly beats Rangers

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Albert Belle's sacrifice fly with one out in the ninth inning Tuesday night lifted the Chicago White Sox to a 2-1 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Ray Durham singled with one out in the ninth off Andy Patterson (2-2), and Frank Thomas followed with a single, sending Durham to third.

Belle, who was 0-for-4, hit a fly down the right-field line that Warren Newson caught while going away from the plate and had no chance to get Durham.

Jaime Navarro (2-1) earned his first win since April 6 with a six-hitter. It was Navarro's 30th career complete game and his first since July 11, 1996, against St. Louis.

Texas starter Roger Pavlik, who walked six and struck out two, left after walking Ron Karkovice with two outs in the eighth. He allowed six hits over 7 2-3 innings.

Rangers catcher Ivan Rodriguez had his hitting streak stopped at 14 games — longest in the AL this season — after going 0-for-4.

Karkovice doubled in Dave Martinez, who had singled, as the White Sox took a 1-0 lead in the second. Harold Baines walked and Lyle Mouton doubled in the third, but Baines was thrown out at the plate when he tried to score as a pitch got by Rodriguez.

■ AL Roundup

Indians 10, Athletics 4

CLEVELAND — Matt Williams' three-run homer, his seventh of the year and sixth in four games, snapped a seventh-inning tie Tuesday night and led the Cleveland Indians to a win over Oakland.

Williams, who hit three homers against Milwaukee Friday and two more Saturday, hit a line drive over the left-field fence off Ariel Prieto (2-1) to break a 4-4 tie. Williams got a standing ovation and took a curtain call after his first home run at Jacobs Field.

Brewers 2, Tigers 1

DETROIT — Jeff Cirillo hit a tie-breaking RBI single and Milwaukee won its fourth straight after six straight losses.

Detroit lost for the fifth time in six games.

Cal Eldred (3-2) gave up one run and five hits in six innings for his second win of the year over Detroit.

Angels 5, Red Sox 4

BOSTON — Garrett Anderson singled home the go-ahead run in the ninth inning for Anaheim, which had blown three leads.

Anderson's hit off Butch Henry (1-1) drove in Jim Leyritz, who had doubled with two outs.

Mariners 7, Yankees 5

NEW YORK — Russ Davis matched his career-high with four RBIs as Seattle rallied to prevent New York manager Joe Torre from getting his 1,000th win as a manager.

New York's Tino Martinez set a major league record with 33 RBIs in April. His two-run single in the ninth for the Yankees broke the mark of 32 set by Barry Bonds last year.

Royals 6, Blue Jays 5, 10 innings

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Chili Davis hit his 300th career home run leading off the bottom of the 10th.

Davis connected on a 3-2 pitch from Paul Quantrill (3-2) for his second homer of the season. Quantrill got two outs in the ninth.

At Last! How to buy a new Central Air System for less than $18/week with lower electric bills ... and best of all, you choose no payment, no interest for one full year or 9.9% interest or $500 rebate.

But you must act now while the special circumstances that created this unique offer are still available.

CLAIRE'S
Air Conditioning, Refrigeration & Plumbing
7900 WEST HIGHWAY 80 • MIDLAND, TEXAS 79706-2825 • (915) 561-9440

Dear Friend,

Right now I have created a new program that will allow homeowners to buy a new central air system with no money down and less than $18 per week. Actually with this program, homeowners will probably be able to buy a new system without taking any money out of their pocket. I'll explain later. You may be thinking ...

"Why Would He Make This Incredible Offer?"

The answer is simple. Summer is almost here. At this time of year, my calls start to slow down because it is so early in the season. Most people, whether they are having problems with their air conditioner, or it's just an old inefficient unit, are not thinking of replacement. They would be miserable now and wait until next year to change out their system. And right now it is still too cool out for them to think about replacement of their system. This creates a problem for me and ...

My Problem Is Your Opportunity

Every year I have to guess how many air conditioners and furnaces to buy to meet the "Emergency Demand". Of course I'm never exactly right. These systems are brand new 1997 models. They are NOT seconds, or "blems" or standard "builder" models. They are factory fresh Amana air conditioners and furnaces and have a full factory warranty.

Here's How You Benefit From My Problem

In order to create a demand for these systems, I negotiated a plan to give me a financial program with a low interest rate and low monthly payments that would be irresistible to those who would normally wait until next year to install a new system. Right now, you can buy a new central air conditioner and furnace with NO money down and less that $18 a week.

No other company in the Permian Basin is willing to give you such an incredible offer and ...

There Is Another Remarkable Advantage.

If your central system is over 10 years old, the money you save on utility costs could be enough to offset the monthly payment on your new system. Image that ... "buy a new central heating and cooling system without taking any money out of your pocket! It's like having the electric company buy you a new air conditioner and furnace. Here's the best part ...

Ironclad Guarantee

I'm so confident that you will save at least 25% off your utility bills (I'm projecting more like 30% to 50%) that I will pay you Double the Difference if you don't the first year. There is no way you can lose. If these Amana systems were not among the best on the market, I couldn't afford to make such a promise.

Here's How

Just call Carol at 561-9440 anytime and she will set up an appointment for your FREE survey. A design consultant will come and measure your home (and determine the availability of the proper size) and explain this new fantastic financing plan that I have created. Don't forget, I only have match systems. When they are gone this remarkable offer ends.

No obligation

Even after we come out and explain the installation and the finance plan, there is no obligation. If you decide you don't want to take advantage of the spectacular offer - that's okay. I will give you a surprise gift worth $50 because you are kind enough to read this letter and give me a chance to solve my problem. I want you to think good of Claire's Services even if you don't buy.

Please call us now at 561-9440. Thank you for reading this rather long letter. I hope you will profit greatly because of it.

For Greater Comfort,

Tim Claire, President

Call 561-9440

PS. Six months from now, this will probably be the most appreciated opportunity ever extended to homeowners in the Permian Basin. Every one of the proud owners will have an unfair advantage over the utility company.

PPS. Don't forget ... if your air conditioner and furnace is over 10 years old, a rewarding $50 surprise gift awaits you. And there is no obligation.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 30, 1997

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, April 30, 1997:
Stick to the goals you set this year, especially in business. The image you present to the world is important to current and future career success. Many vocational offers appear. You feel negative about a key issue in your life. It is important to clear up what is happening. You will gain professionally because of your clarity and hard-working ways. If you are single, romance happens through work, and could change the nature of your life. If attached, a relationship builds if you are willing to bring your feelings home from the office. Share that part of your life with your mate. AQUARIUS offers you a special opportunity.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★★ Overindulgence marks the day. Opportunities are varied; you have several choices. Meet with associates, to harvest ideas. Imagination is high. You seem to pile one interesting project on top of another. Tonight: You are the party.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Keep a stoic face while others carry on. Be direct with a boss, in order to make your point. Good ideas will flow as a result. More than one solution is available. Be willing to put in the hours to make an impression. Tonight: Work overtime.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ Good news is overwhelming, and makes it difficult to concentrate. A loved one expresses how much he cares about you. You are touched by what is happening. Keep discussions private. You get what you want. Tonight: Celebrate.
CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ Financial and emotional rewards are yours. Someone wants to handle a job differently. Ask questions, and accept responsibilities. A friend helps you focus. Do not settle for anything less than what you want. You hit the bull's-eye. Tonight: Make time for a special relationship.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ Listen to others' opinions. Take a stand with a boss; he will respond directly. Be more in touch with your options. Popularity is high. Stop being negative about an offer that involves travel and education. Tonight: Go where your friends are.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ A partner rains on your parade. Think through what you want, before initiating talks. A loving, yet detached attitude brings the results you desire. Work and personal responsibilities are overwhelming. Fortunately, you have plenty of energy. Tonight: Get physical.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★★ Popularity is high, even if an associate seems a bit hard on you. Be loving with others. Allow your enthusiasm and fun-loving nature to come out. You are full of energy and unusual ideas. Follow-through counts in a financial partnership. Tonight: Go for fun.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ Much is happening around your home that involves a domestic decision. You'll want to think through a work-related issue that could affect your home life. A conservative course is crucial. A friend adores you, and makes it clear. Get feedback. Tonight: Follow your heart.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★★ Reach out for others. Sort through information. Gather all the opinions you can. Stabilize a situation, and don't take a risk. Put in extra time with a loved one. A coworker has strong, positive feelings about how things need to be done. Tonight: Cut the flirtation.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ You overindulge financially. You feel you have a lot to offer. Think through a decision with care. A flirtation, or new relationship could be tender and sweet. Make plenty of time for this person. Don't think negatively. Tonight: Indulge your paramour.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ Handle a boss gently. The old adage that you get more with sugar than vinegar applies. Discussions with an opinionated person may be difficult. You have the energy and zest to make what you want happen. Others gravitate toward you. Tonight: Just ask.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ Much is going on in your mind. You are undecided about how to handle a change. Discuss ideas with a trusted confidant. The feedback you get is important. You might feel as if you don't have much to offer. Stop putting yourself down. Tonight: It's your night off.

GOREN BRIDGE

With Omar Sharif and Tannah Hirsch

HANDLE WITH CARE

Both vulnerable. South deals.

	NORTH ♠K 10 9 7 2 ♡6 ◇7 6 4 2 ♣7 5 4
WEST ♠J ♡A Q J 5 4 ◇Q J 10 5 ♣K J 8		EAST ♠6 3 ♡10 9 7 3 2 ◇K 8 3 ♣6 3 2
	SOUTH ♠A Q 8 5 4 ♡K 8 ◇A 9 ♣A Q 10 9

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1♠	Dbl	4♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ◇

Bridge is a thinking game. Analyze the bidding and play and you should come up with the right line on this hand.

The Law of Total Tricks says that, since the combined spade holding in the North-South hands is ten, that pair should contract for the same number of tricks. So rather than allow the opponents to get together, North jumped all the way to four spades, effectively shutting East out of the bidding.

The opening lead marked East with the king of diamonds so declarer realized that crossing to dummy with a trump to lead a heart to the king would be futile. At best, declarer could hope to find East with the jack of clubs, but there was also the possibility of an endplay.

To prevent East from gaining the lead for a club shift, declarer held up the ace of diamonds as East signaled with the eight. West continued with a low diamond to East's king and the ace. Declarer now made the winning play of the king of hearts from hand!

West won and shifted to a trump, but declarer was in control. Dummy's king won as South unblocked the queen, and a diamond was ruffed in the closed hand. A trump to the ten provided the entry for another diamond ruff, and a heart ruff on the table completed a strip of the red suits from declarer's combined holding.

A club from dummy to the ten completed West's discomfiture. A red-suit return would permit declarer to discard dummy's remaining club while ruffing in hand, while a club return would be into declarer's major tenace. Four spades bid and made!

Oprah drops Rodman from show because of obscenities in his book

CHICAGO — Oprah Winfrey is less than wild about the raunch in Dennis Rodman's latest book.

Basketball's bad boy was dropped from Winfrey's show because she objected to his obscenity- and sex-filled "Walk on the Wild Side." A taping planned for last week was canceled.

"After reviewing Dennis Rodman's new book, we decided it would be inappropriate to promote it to our viewers," show officials said in a statement.

The book, Rodman's second, crossed the line of acceptability, a Winfrey spokesman said Tuesday.

The Chicago Bull wrote about his affair with a transsexual, said he dates mostly white women because black women ignored him before he became a star and plans to legally change his name to "Orgasm."

The book "isn't for everyone, but Rodman fans will love it," said Carole Baron, the president of publisher Dell.

BAKU, Azerbaijan — Mstislav Rostropovich showed off his Baku roots to his grandchildren Tuesday and promised to come home to Azerbaijan to teach master classes every year.

The conductor-cellist met with Azerbaijani President Geidar Aliev, who presented him with his homeland's highest honor, the Order of Glory, the Azerbaijani Turan news agency reported.

Rostropovich, 70, was accompanied by his wife, Galina Pavlovna Vishnevskaya, two daughters and grandchildren.

"I want my grandchildren to know that their roots are from Baku," he said. He was born in Baku, the capital of Azerbaijan, and called it a "mystical city."

Rostropovich said he will cancel some concerts to make room for annual 10-day master classes in Baku, starting in 1998, Turan reported.

NEW YORK — Sitar virtuoso Ravi Shankar was introduced to a new world in the '60s and found some of it dismaying.

His first encounter with Jimi Hendrix at the Monterey Pop Festival, for example.

"Making love to the guitar. And then, as if that was not enough, he burned the guitar," Shankar told Rolling Stone magazine in the May 15 issue. "That was too much for me. In our culture, we have respect for musical instruments. They are like part of God."

Shankar also wasn't impressed by the Beatles song "Norwegian Wood," on which George Harrison plays the sitar.

"To tell you the truth, I had to keep my mouth shut," he confesses. "I couldn't believe it, because to me it sounded so terrible."

He's now close to Harrison, who produced his new album, "Chants of India."

"We are such good friends and, at the same time, he is like my son, so it's a beautiful, mixed feeling," Shankar said.

ARKADELPHIA, Ark. — Whitewater convict James McDougal is a hero to some of his neighbors.

On a recent Sunday morning, McDougal looked out the window of his trailer to see 18-month-old Nate Wallace run by, wearing only one shoe.

"I saw this kid run by at a good pace, and I expected to see some adults behind him," McDougal said.

No adults materialized, so McDougal got dressed, hopped into his car and followed the boy. He caught up with him two blocks away at the ticket booth of the Ouachita Baptist University's football stadium.

McDougal went door to door with the boy in search of his parents and found them. Molly and Brent Wallace had already reported Nate missing.

Ann Vining, the wife of the boy's grandfather, Bill Vining, said the family was "beginning to really worry." She said McDougal "might not look so good to others, but he looked like he had angel's wings on that day to us."

McDougal is supposed to begin a three-year federal prison term June 16 for fraud and conspiracy in the Whitewater scandal.

LONDON — The Scottish National Party has Sean Connery. The governing Conservatives have Andrew Lloyd Webber.

But for Jeremy Irons, Richard Attenborough and Emma Thompson, it's Labor they love.

Comedians Stephen Fry and Hugh Laurie, "Secrets and Lies" director Mike Leigh and Patrick Stewart from "Star Trek: The Next Generation" have openly backed Labor, earning them the nickname "Labor's luvvies" from the media.

Andew Lloyd Webber's endorsement of the Tories might be a mixed blessing as well. When he said he'd leave the country if Labor wins, Labor MPs said it was one more reason to vote for them.

The award for campaigning-in-absentia goes to Connery. He wrote half a million Scottish voters from his home in Marbella, Spain, asking them to vote for the Scottish National Party, which supports full independence from London.

HOW TO READ THE MARKET IN REVIEW

Here are the 1,675 most active stocks on the New York Stock Exchange, 925 most active on the Nasdaq National Market and 405 most active on the American Stock Exchange. Stocks in bold are worth at least $5 and changed 5 percent or more in price. Underlining for 50 most active on NYSE and Nasdaq and 25 most active on Amex. Tables show name, price and net change, and one to two additional fields rotated through the week, as follows:

Name: Stocks appear alphabetically by the company's full name (not its abbreviation). Names consisting of initials appear at the beginning of each letter's list.

Last: Price stock was trading at when exchange closed for the day.

PE: Price-earnings ratio. Derived by dividing closing price by company's earnings per share for the most recent four quarters.

PPE: Projected price-earnings ratio. Derived by dividing closing price by company's projected earnings per share for upcoming 12 months. PPE supplied by I/B/E/S, Institutional Brokers' Estimate System. Is a consensus forecast of all analysts following the company. Only companies with three or more analysts following them have a PPE.

How to use: In general, if PPE is lower than PE, analysts believe earnings will be going up. If PPE is higher, they expect earnings to fall. The numbers can be helpful in following stocks but as with all financial data are only one of many factors to judge a company by. Consult your financial advisor before making any investment decision.

Stock Footnotes: cc – PE exceeds 99. dd – Loss in last 12 months. d – New 52-wk low during trading day. g – Dividend in Canadian $. Stock price in U.S. $. n – New issue in past 52 weeks. q – Closed end mutual fund; no PE calculated. s – Split or stock dividend of 25 percent or more in last 52 weeks. Dividend begins with date of split or stock dividend. u – New 52-wk high during trading day. v – Trading halted on primary market. Unless noted, dividend rates are annual disbursements based on last declaration. pf – Preferred. pp – Holder owes installment(s) of purchase price. rt – Rights. un – Units. wd – When distributed. wi – When issued. wt – Warrants. ww – With warrants. xw – Without warrants.

Prices climb

NEW YORK — Heating oil futures prices rose sharply Tuesday on concern about tight supplies. Crude oil and other energy products also moved higher.

The reason behind the problem of tight supplies of heating oil is that refineries have shifted from producing that product to making gasoline, said analyst James Fiedler at E.D. & F. Man International.

Crude oil for delivery in June settled at $20.44 per barrel, up 53 cents. Unleaded gasoline for delivery in May settled at 63.36 cents a gallon, up 1.02 cents.

Natural gas prices were higher, with contracts for delivery in June settling at $2.142 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 6.1 cents.

After the Nymex closed Tuesday, the American Petroleum Institute reported its weekly inventory figures. Crude oil stocks rose 1.9 million barrels to 314.7 million last week. Gasoline supplies fell 408,000 barrels to 194.2 million, while stocks of distillates, including heating oil, fell 1.4 million barrels to 94.9 million.

Refineries were operating at 93.5 percent of capacity, unchanged.

Dollar retreats

NEW YORK — The dollar fell Tuesday for the first time in nearly a week after new economic data suggested an unexpected slowdown, reducing prospects the Federal Reserve will raise interest rates at its May meeting.

The dollar settled at 1.7243 marks, down from 1.7330 Monday. The dollar cost 126.87 yen, down from 126.98. The pound cost $1.6316, up from $1.6247.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with Monday: 5.8120 French francs, down from 5.8385; 1.4675 Swiss francs, down from 1.4740; 1,707.00 Italian lire, down from 1,718.00; 1.3977 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3998.

Boeing contract

SEATTLE — Boeing Co. agreed to invest $100 million and won the contract to be the prime contractor in Bill Gates and Craig McCaw's plan to blanket the globe with communications satellites.

Boeing will own 10 percent of Teledesic Corp., which plans to spend $9 billion to put 840 satellites in low-Earth orbit by 2002 to allow wireless access to the Internet and other telecommunications services. The deal was announced Tuesday.

The system would be capable of high-speed data transmission, allowing Internet users, for example, to download pages 60 times faster than today's fastest modems. The system also would allow global video teleconferencing, paging, faxing and voice communications.

MCI bills

WASHINGTON — MCI Communications Corp. can continue its practice of not disclosing on monthly bills that it charges customers in full-minute increments, a federal appeals court ruled.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia on Tuesday upheld a lower court's dismissal of a class-action suit brought against MCI.

Customer Harriet Alicke of Florida brought the action against the nation's second-largest long-distance company last year, alleging the company was deceiving customers by not divulging the rounding-up policy on monthly bills.

Wages post modest increase

■ Modest rise in wages and salaries not cheery news for employees.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Though hardly cheery news for America's employees, a report of a smallish increase in wages and benefits sent financial markets soaring Tuesday. The Dow Jones average of industrial stocks surged 179.01 points, the second-biggest point gain ever.

Other reports showing a sag in consumer confidence and a sharp drop in factory orders underscored the message that accelerating inflation may not be such an imminent threat.

That means the Federal Reserve may be able to avoid ratcheting up interest rates as much as investors had feared during the past month and a half of turmoil on Wall Street.

Wages and benefits rose a modest 0.6 percent in the January-March quarter, the Labor Department said. That was in the low end of the range for gains in the Employment Cost Index over the past two years and only two-thirds of the 0.9 percent predicted by economists.

"There are just no labor cost pressures visible in the economy even though the unemployment rate is so low," said economist Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch in New York. "Companies can't easily raise prices without losing market share. That makes them wary about handing out big pay packages."

Economists predicted the modest advance in labor costs wouldn't deter Federal Reserve policy-makers from raising short-term interest rates a second time when they meet in three weeks.

"But it argues rates shouldn't go up more than a quarter-point at a shot and perhaps ... the Fed can move a bit more slowly," said economist Mark Zandi of Regional Financial Associates in West Chester, Pa.

The first increase in more than a year, a quarter of a percentage point, came on March 25.

Meanwhile, the Commerce Department said orders to factories for big-ticket durable goods unexpectedly plunged 3 percent in March, the biggest decline in seven months. February orders were weaker than initially reported.

And the backlog of unfilled orders recorded the first decrease since August. That suggests any threat of inflationary bottlenecks developing in the manufacturing pipeline is receding.

Also, consumer confidence dropped for the second straight month in April, falling more than anticipated, said the New York-based Conference Board, a business group.

That's a hint that consumers, whose spending fueled strong economic growth in the first quarter, may pull back somewhat as the year progresses.

Nevertheless, Zandi said, a pickup in inflation late in the year still is quite possible. From that standpoint, the compensation report wasn't wholly benign.

Traders on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange conduct business as the market closes up 179.01 at 6,962.03 Tuesday. It was the third Tuesday in a row that the Dow broke the record for the second biggest point gain.

Dow Jones index soars 179 points

■ Broader market keeps pace with rally in Dow Jones Industrial Average.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The stock market soared back toward record levels Tuesday, with the Dow Jones industrial average nearly scoring its biggest point gain ever, as investors celebrated a tame inflation reading on a key inflationary force.

The Dow rose 179.01 to 6,962.03, moving within striking distance of 7,000 for the first time since the start of a nearly 700-point retreat from its March 11 high of 7,085.16.

And in stark contrast with other, seemingly half-hearted efforts to rebound from its recent slide, the broad market kept pace with the blue-chip sector this time.

"It's a very high-quality rally today. I'm impressed," said A. Marshall Acuff Jr., a market strategist at Smith Barney, noting that four issues rose for every one that fell on the New York Stock Exchange. "We have great breadth. No one can complain about that today."

Stocks were catapulted at the open by the bond market, where interest rates plunged below a psychologically important barrier after the Labor Department reported that Americans' wages and benefits rose a modest 0.6 percent in the first quarter. Investors were also cheered by two separate reports suggesting that other inflationary pressures may be easing.

The markets have been pressured by worries that demand is too strong and jobs are too plentiful, forcing manufacturers to raise wages as they compete for employees to meet the heavy workload.

However, the resulting increase in employment costs — which typically constitute two-thirds of a product's price — has yet to trigger an inflationary spurt. Determined to keep it that way, the Federal Reserve raised one of its key short-term lending rates late last month.

Investors have been worried that without signs of economic moderation, the Fed will raise rates repeatedly, slowing spending and borrowing to a point where corporate profits will suffer.

Although encouraging, Tuesday's reports are no guarantee that the central bank will stand pat at its next strategy meeting on May 20, particularly with Friday's monthly report on payroll and wage levels looming, analysts said.

"I don't think the number today is necessarily the final resolution about the worry about increased inflation," said Acuff, noting that the more crucial concern is the reaction of Fed chairman Alan Greenspan, who is scheduled to make several public appearances this week. "The bond market celebrated the prospect of short rates not going up in the near future. I don't want to be overly skeptical, but as always, we need more information."

As bond prices rose Tuesday, the yield on the 30-year Treasury plunged below 7 percent for the first time since late March, settling at 6.98 percent.

The long-bond yield — a key influence on business and consumer borrowing costs — started the year closer to 6.5 percent, climbing steadily as bond prices fell on mounting concerns about rising inflation and interest rates, which make fixed-income investments like bonds less enticing.

Volume on the NYSE totaled 547.66 million shares.

The Standard & Poor's 500-stock list rose 21.09 to 794.05, and the NYSE's composite index rose 9.93 to 413.62.

The Nasdaq composite index rose 25.60 to 1,242.63, and the American Stock Exchange composite index rose 6.83 to 548.03.

At one point Tuesday, the Dow was up nearly 188 points, which would have been enough to beat its one-day point record of 186.84, which was set two days after the Black Monday crash of 1987. Instead, it was the third Tuesday in a row that the Dow broke the record for its second-biggest point gain.

Investors like IBM plan to boost stock

Associated Press

DALLAS — International Business Machines Corp. on Tuesday took a combination of actions to bolster its stock price, and investors lost little time snapping up shares of the world's largest computer company.

IBM stock jumped more than 5 percent, rising $8 to $158.37 1/2 on the New York Stock Exchange. IBM was the biggest gainer in the Dow Jones industrial average, accounting for 25 of the Dow's 179-point gain in a market rally, sparked by economic news.

IBM's board agreed to buy back an additional $3.5 billion in common stock, matching its repurchase of last fall and bringing total stock buybacks to nearly $17 billion over the past three years.

IBM also boosted its quarterly dividend by 14 percent. And shareholders at the company's annual meeting in Dallas gave IBM approval to split its stock for the first time in 17 years.

The actions came as chief executive Louis V. Gerstner gave an upbeat assessment of future results, saying that new endeavors should keep profits climbing in the near term.

IBM, based in Armonk, N.Y., said it would raise its quarterly payout to stockholders to 40 cents per common share from 35 cents. After the stock split, the new dividend is 20 cents a share. But the split will double the number of IBM shares outstanding, with new shares distributed June 10 to shareholders of record May 9.

IBM's dividend increase was less than last year's 40 percent rise, and suggests that IBM will continue to use its free cash to buy back shares, according to John Jones, an analyst with Salomon Brothers Inc. in San Francisco.

In his address to stockholders at the Dallas Convention Center, Gerstner emphasized the company's "revitalization" from its financial slump of four years ago, when revenues were slumping and losses piling up. He said a strategic refocus on linking together disparate computers has helped rejuvenate demand for its mainstay product — mainframes with the power to run networks of smaller machines.

"We believe the shift to a networked world plays very much to IBM's strengths," Gerstner said.

Gerstner also tied IBM's recovery to its services division, which grew more than 25 percent last year, the fourth consecutive year it grew 20 percent or more. Computer services includes consulting, running data centers and developing new systems for large customers.

Gerstner told stockholders that its products and services geared to the Internet continue to give IBM diversity.

"I hope you don't think we're on a Tarzan strategy — swinging from one vine and grabbing another," he said. "Our strength is the breadth and depth of all of our businesses."

But Marcus Linden, a stockholder in Irving, Texas, said he was skeptical of the company's new Internet products.

"I'm not sure about Internet strategy," Linden said. "No one knows for sure that it's going to take off they way we think it will. It's a little risky."

Concerto considered contender for Derby

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
AP Racing Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Concerto is George Steinbrenner's designated hitter for the Kentucky Derby — and the colt has earned his way into the lineup.

Despite being unbeaten in four starts this year and the winner of seven of 10 races, Concerto's Derby status was still in doubt even after he won the Jim Beam on March 29 at Turfway Park.

Now he is considered a leading contender for the 1 1/4-mile Derby, which is expected to have 12 starters Saturday at Churchill Downs. Pulpit, the Blue Grass winner, was the 5-2 favorite, followed at 3-1 by Captain Bodgit, winner of the Florida Derby and Wood Memorial.

The big Derby hope for Steinbrenner, owner of the New York Yankees, was Acceptable, who was beaten by a short neck by 2-year-old champion Boston Harbor in the Breeders' Cup Juvenile on Oct. 26 at Woodbine.

"After the Jim Beam we were pointing toward the Derby, but it was still possible we weren't going to come," trainer John Tammaro said. "If Acceptable had won the Blue Grass, we might have gone to the Tesio and then to the Illinois Derby."

Acceptable finished second in the Blue Grass on April 12 at Keeneland, staying in the Derby picture, but then on the morning of April 19, he broke a bone in his left foreleg during a workout at Keeneland. That afternoon, Concerto won the Federico Tesio at Pimlico for his fifth straight win dating to a second-place finish to Captain Bodgit in the Laurel Futurity on Nov. 2.

Concerto started his winning streak in the Kentucky Jockey Club on Nov. 30 at Churchill Downs. The only Derby horse to have raced at Churchill Downs is Celtic Warrior, winner of an allowance race Nov. 1 and second in the Jockey Club.

"He hasn't gotten the attention all along that he deserves," Tammaro said. "But in all fairness we didn't take the traditional route with him."

While Acceptable, trained by Nick Zito, was sent to Florida for the Fountain of Youth and the Florida Derby, Concerto opened his 3-year-old campaign by winning the Whirlaway at Aqueduct, then went to Turfway Park for the Battaglia and the Jim Beam.

"We weren't going to go head-to-head with Acceptable," Tammaro said. "If you're an owner you don't want to run against yourself." Actually, Acceptable also is owned by Robert Clay, who bought a 35 percent interest from Steinbrenner earlier this year.

Tammaro said the Boss of the Yankees keeps informed about his horses, but that is son Hank Steinbrenner, who runs the breeding and racing operation.

When someone joked that if Concerto wins Saturday, Tammaro might be managing the struggling Yankees by Saturday, the trainer said, "I might have some input."

Concerto, Captain Bodgit and Silver Charm, runner-up in the Santa Anita Derby on May 5, all worked Tuesday.

Regular rider Carlos Marquez Jr. was up when Concerto worked seven-eighths of a mile in 1:33 1-5.

"He went real easy," Marquez said. "He came back playing and feeling real good. The way he did it, he was really relaxed."

"I wanted a slow easy work like that," Tammaro said.

Captain Bodgit went a half mile in 48 2-5 and galloped out five-eighths in 1:01 4-5.

"It can't get much better than this," trainer Gary Capuano said. "We're just coasting now."

Silver Charm worked five-eighths in 1:00 3-5, a move that trainer Bob Baffert called "just perfect. He looked like he was just galloping. I'm confident the horse is going to run the race of his life. That's what I'm looking for."

Baffert saddled Cavonnier to finish second in last year's Derby, a nose behind Grindstone.

D. Wayne Lukas confirmed on Tuesday that the filly Sharp Cat would not start, making it the first time since 1980 the trainer has not had a starter. He won the last two Derbies with Thunder Gulch and Grindstone.
